Ribit! Ribit! It's time for Bull Frog Chili and Barbecue Cookoff at Lake Thomas

By SARA SOLIS
Staff Writer

Barbecue and chili cooks will be putting their ribs, chicken, chili and brisket recipes on the line Saturday at the Second Annual Bull Frog Chili and Barbecue Cookoff. The cookoff will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday at Lake Thomas' Bull Creek Park.

Bettie Wilcox, a member of the Crossroads Chili Cookers and resident at Lake Thomas, said the cook off will benefit the Fluvanna Volunteer Fire Department. "We're trying to raise money for the volunteer fire department because everybody's trying to fight fires ... There's little fire departments all around and they all need money," she said.

Wilcox anticipates there will be 35 to 40 food entries in the cook off. She said those chili cooks who participate will earn four points towards qualifying to compete at the World Championships in Terlingua the first weekend in November. Cookers who finish first will qualify to participate in the Meridian (Texas) cook off, she said. The Meridian cook-off is one of the best-known in the state.

In order to qualify to attend the Terlingua cookoff, chili cooks must earn 10 points in one cooking year, Oct. 1 to Sept. 30. Wilcox said. Barbecue cooks must earn one first place at any barbecue cook off during the year in order to attend the contest in Meridian.

Wilcox, herself a cooker, said it is very difficult to advance past the Meridian contest.

"You have to win real big in barbecue to go to Jack Daniels or the Kansas City American Royal Barbecue cook off," she said only 35 cooks are invited to the Jack Daniels cook off.

Wilcox said the Crossroads Chili Cookers group comprises 49 members. "We have one member that lives in El Paso, one in Shreveport, La., ... they just live everywhere," she said she and her husband, Wayne, started the organization five years ago. The organization sponsors as many as six fund raisers a year to benefit charitable organizations, she said.

Wilcox said the bulk of their funds are raised from cooker entry fees and raffle tickets. Several items will be raffled at the cookoff, she said. "So far we have two meals from a cafe in Ira and chances on $50." She said she anticipates there will be many more items to raffle by Saturday.

Once the turn-in time has passed on a particular food entry, cookoff attendees are welcome to sample the entries, Wilcox said. "You may spend $5 on raffle tickets, but you get more than that to eat. Very few people leave a cook off hungry," she said.

Wilcox said the Colorado River Municipal Water District, which owns Lake Thomas, is waiving the regular $2 entry fee into the park for the event.

High-speed chase, manhunt result in capture of 5 in Sand Springs

By SARA SOLIS
Staff Writer

Five Odessa men were captured following a 25-mile chase along Interstate 20 that reached speeds of 115 miles per hour Wednesday afternoon. The men were in a pickup they had stolen near Brownwood.

The five suspects, one of whom is a juvenile, are being held at the Howard County Sheriff's Department. They are being held on tentative charges from Brown County for unlawful use of a motor vehicle and fleeing to elude. They are: Lacey Oshay Hawkins, 17; James Iry Williams, 17; Nicklas Motano, 21; and Camer Jackson, 17, the driver.

Four of the men were captured in a field where they wrecked the truck just south of the interstate on Moss Lake Road, while the fifth, the driver, was captured some two hours later after an extensive manhunt.

Approximately 40 law enforcement officers, utilizing a pack of eight bloodhounds from the Wallace Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections in Colorado City and a Department of Public Safety helicopter from Midland, participated in the search for the fugitive.

DPS Trooper Mark Negri, of Mitchell County, said the chase began around 1:30 p.m. on Interstate 20 at Westbrook. They were westbound on the interstate, "I clocked them on the radar at 95 mph at the middle of Westbrook," he said.

Negri said when the suspects spotted him, they took the next exit off the interstate. "He (the driver) was on the north service road and pulled over about a half-mile west of Westbrook." He said there were two men in the bed of the truck and three in the cab.

Negri later discovered the pickup was stolen. "They stole the pickup in Brownwood this morning, it wasn't even in the computer yet," he said.

Negri said the suspects pulled over to the side of the road and the driver told him he had insurance but no driver's license. When Negri stepped away from the vehicle and asked the driver to get out, the driver stepped on the gas and left the area.

He said he pursued the vehicle west bound on Interstate 20 at speeds ranging from 115 mph to 75 mph.

"It appeared that something was wrong with the truck because he (the driver) kept messing with something under the dash, like the gears were stuck," Negri said.

He said the vehicle exited the interstate at Moss Lake Road and slowed to 10 mph. They headed south on Moss Creek Road and just south of the south service road the driver threw open the door as if he was preparing to jump out. The pickup then turned off the road to the right, plowed through a six-foot high chain link fence, crossed an open field and eventually came to rest against a fence bordering the west side of the field. He said the driver exited the vehicle, jumped over the west fence and took off running.

Negri, aided by Cpl. Jimmy Mayes of the Big Spring Police Department, approached the vehicle and apprehended the other four occupants.

"Me and Jimmy ran over there with our shotguns" and got the four suspects on the ground, Negri said.

Cpl. Mayes said after hearing the chase on the radio, he had positioned himself at mile marker 184 on Interstate 20. Mayes, who works drug interdiction along the interstate, said he suspected there might be some narcotics in the truck, but, upon inspection, that was ruled out.

"We didn't find anything" in the vehicle, he said. They probably fled Trooper Negri "because they stole that vehicle and they didn't want to go to jail," Mayes said.

Although dogs and a helicopter were brought in to find the driver, later identified as Jackson, it was human ingenuity that led to his apprehension and arrest.

Howard County Sheriff's

Deputy Ed Covington located and arrested Jackson in an abandoned storage shed about a block and a half west of Moss Lake Road.

"I was driving down the south service road, just west of Midway Grocery. There's this old trailer house there, occupied by an older woman, and a couple of storage sheds ... I thought to myself, 'There's a good place, it's got a lot of trees and a lot of little nooks and crannies where he could have hid.'"

Covington said he searched one of the storage sheds, and "there he (Jackson) was."

Consultant advises mixed-used outlet facility

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The proposed factory outlet mall that was to begin construction sometime this year should not be pursued according to consultant Jerry Rheams, who was hired by Moore Development For Big Spring Inc. to study the feasibility of an outlet mall in Big Spring.

Rheams is president and CEO of JWR Associates Inc. in Harbor Springs, Mich., and met with the Big Spring's Outlet Mall Task Force in late April to evaluate the demographics of the area.

He told the task force the factory outlet market is very soft at the present time and he did not feel that Big Spring adequately meets all of the criteria needed to place a factory outlet mall here.

A true factory outlet mall is not recommended for Big Spring by Rheams because of

According to Rheams, Big Spring probably could support a development of no more than 75,000 square feet to 85,000 square feet.

Rheams' 60-mile radius demographics evaluation says the 60-mile area would provide a population of 285,000 with a median age of 32.4 and an average household income of $38,000.

soft conditions in existing outlet development; lack of base population of 500,000 within 30-40 miles, which is needed to satisfy most retailers in the industry; upscale fashions apparel tenants would not be interested in the area; and most outlet development are at least 125,000 square feet, with many exceeding 300,000 square feet to 400,000 square feet.

According to Rheams, Big Spring probably could support a development of no more than 75,000 square feet to 85,000 square feet.

Rheams 60-mile radius demographics evaluation says the 60-mile area would provide a population of 285,000 with a median age of 32.4 and an average household income of $38,000.

He added the demographics indicate a "value" retail development might well succeed in Big Spring if such a project can provide certain ingredients, including an anchor type store; a blend of outlet, off-price and unique stores; and an aggressive marketing campaign, which is imperative before opening, during grand opening and should continue afterwards.

Having advised Moore Development and the task force against pursuing a full scale outlet mall development in Big Spring he added he does believe a "mixed-use" project of about 75,000 square feet could succeed if certain steps are followed.

Those steps include the task force and the community supporting a new direction; retaining a developer experienced in mixed-use developments; hiring a leasing company with mixed use development experience; having financing needs in place or committed prior to construction or leasing; having a strong marketing plan implemented by the developer, the city and investors; and making sure that unique stores are attracted for the development.

Early fire sends two to hospital

By SARA SOLIS
Staff Writer

A fire that ignited at 2 a.m. today at a residence in the 2100 block of Main Street, sent an older couple to the hospital with injuries from smoke and heat inhalation.

Burr Lea Settles, Big Spring fire marshal, said the residence belonged to Matt and Armilda Caperton.

According to Settles, the fire originated in Mr. Caperton's bedroom. He said, Mr. Caperton said his bed caught on fire. "Quite possibly it was a cigarette" that had smoldered and ignited after he fell asleep, he said.

Settles said Mrs. Caperton was sleeping in another bedroom. When her husband awakened her, she attempted to exit the house and wound up in the bathroom, he said. Settles said when the fire department arrived on the scene, Mrs. Caperton was still in the house. "She was rescued by our first responding fire units ... She's in pretty serious condition," he said.

OUR VIEWS

'Hooray for Hollywood' & Big Spring Symphony

The Big Spring Symphony brings its 17th season to a close Saturday night at 8 in the Big Spring City Auditorium — and we think the house should be packed.

The Symphony, one of the Herald's "101 Reasons to Live in the Crossroads Country," is a benefit to us all, whether we take advantage of it or not. And quite frankly, very few of us have been taking advantage of the opportunity afforded us.

Big Spring is the smallest community in the state with its own symphony orchestra.

Because we have a symphony, we have one more amenity to offer prospective businesses looking for a new home ... we have one more attraction to tell that prospective employee about.

It's a sad fact that in many areas, symphonies are misunderstood ... after all, many people wonder, don't symphony orchestras only play classical music?

In a word, no.

And Saturday's season-ending performance will be proof of that when the Big Spring Symphony, under the baton of Gene Chartier Smith, joins with a chorus of local and area singers to present "Hooray for Hollywood."

It will be a night of music most, if not all of us, know. It will be a night of toe-tapping and turning to the person in the seat next to you and asking if they remember a particular song.

Those are the things we know it will be.

What it can be is a night when the community turns out to support their symphony and to truly discover that the symphony really is for everyone.

There is concern about the future of our symphony because, quite honestly, attendance this season has been disappointing.

It's time for the community to rise in support of something we have that many other cities — San Diego, Calif., for example — don't.

Take the time to discover the Big Spring Symphony this Saturday and we think you'll shout "Hooray!"

OTHER VIEWS

Hey, git along, you little voters

The day after President Clinton announced he was selling off 12 million gallons of government gasoline to drive down gas prices, the president announces the government will buy $50 million worth of beef to prop up cattle prices.

His spokesman, Mike McCurry, insisted with a straight face that the White House has "no intent and no interest in intervening in commodity markets." If that were so, why bother?

Moreover, said McCurry, the two actions were absolutely unrelated. We suggest there is a connection: Politics. And the president has shown once again that he is a brilliant political tactician.

President Bush lost in 1992 because he appeared not to care; in 1996 President Clinton is exuding care on a daily basis.

The beef producers are in a genuine bind. The price of cattle is going down because there are too many, while due to droughts and floods in corn and wheat states the cost of feeding the animals is soaring.

As with his gas sale, the beef buy will have little impact on the larger market, but it does show a concern that will not be lost on the farm states. Dare we mention that presidential rival Bob Dole is from Kansas?

Opening up to cattle ranchers 35 million acres of public land that had been closed to grazing pleased the Westerners but outraged the environmentalists, but politically where are the environmentalists going to go? Certainly not to the Republicans; they must perforce stick with Clinton.

And, as with the White House gasoline price initiatives, the congressional Republicans were once again on the defensive, scrambling to make me-too pronouncements of their own.

It may be making too much of Clinton's political skills to see in all of this a masterful wooing of electorally essential California, where with its high incidence of auto-dependent vegetarian voters, gas prices are important but beef prices are not.

But maybe it wouldn't.

Christopher Robin is dead ... silence is deafening

By FREDRIC KOEPEL
Scripps Howard News Service

So Christopher Robin is dead. There must be a deep silence in the Hundred Acre Wood and unaccountable moisture on the fuzzy cheeks of the world's stuffed bears.

He spent his adult life trying to pass himself off as C.R. Milne, a mild-mannered book dealer and sometime author instead of who the world knew he was and wouldn't let him forget: the son of A.A. Milne, author of "Winnie-the-Pooh" and "The House at Pooh Corner," the model for the human character in those books, young Christopher Robin of the Dutch boy haircut and gingham smock, leader and playmate of Winnie-the-Pooh, Piglet, Eeyore, Owl, Tigger, Kanga and Roo.

Milne died April 20 at 75, a man who felt that his childhood had been shanghaied and sold for all the world and its generations to see. His death marks the end of an era, or rather, the last gasp of an era's gradual wane, the age of romantic childhood.

In the strange way the world works, with its lush farrago of implausibilities and coincidences, Milne died nine days after the death of Jessica Dubroff, the 7-year-old pilot whose single-engine airplane crashed on takeoff from Cheyenne, Wyo., ending her effort to set a cross-country record (and ending the lives of her father and flight instructor). In a sense, Jessica and C.R. Milne suffered the same fate; each was robbed of childhood by parents who seemed to have no perception of harm. Ironically, Jessica wasn't allowed to play with stuffed animals or read children's books.

An early and powerful assertion about the notion of romantic childhood is Wordsworth's "Intimations Ode" (the short title, written 1802-1804, in which the English poet supposes that children are spiritually closer to nature than adults are. "Heaven lies about us in our infancy," Wordsworth writes. We are born "trailing clouds of glory." Childhood expresses "the glory and the dream" of our lives, fading as we become adults to a "visionary gleam." So European and American culture in the late 18th and early 19th centuries turned childhood into something different from adulthood. Children began to wear clothes that expressed this difference (instead of miniature adult clothes), and they began to be cherished for what was seen as their special qualities of insight and innocence. Notions of education changed, as did ideas about what literature was appropriate for children. Labor laws were passed to prevent children from being exploited by the capitalist system, though they didn't always work.

This special quality of childhood was codified in such classic books for children as "Alice's Adventures Underground" and "Through the Looking Glass," by Lewis Carroll; "A Child's Garden of Verses" by Robert Louis Stevenson; "Puck of Pook's Hill" by Rudyard Kipling; "Peter Pan" and "Peter Pan in Kensington Garden" by J.M. Barrie; and of course in Milne's Pooh books and poetry collections.

These books, stories and poems are inhabited by brave, intelligent, curious children whose very childishness lends them the ability to transcend the boredom and threats of the adult world. They overcome the dangers they encounter not because they act like adults but because they are indubitably children; that is their armor and their grace. Through the freshness of their imaginations and their lack of guile, they dissolve the barriers that separate adults from the natural world and the realm of feelings. Instead, they invite to liveliness and articulation the objects and creatures that surround them, giving the world an irresistible sentience, the essence of Wordsworth's glory and dream.

So in the Pooh books there is no transition between the "real" world and the "imaginary" Hundred Acre Wood. Christopher Robin and Winnie-the-Pooh's kingdom is the world, and within it they exercise the deliberation, the courage and the gaiety that are childhood's heritage.

But that's fiction, you say. What about life?

Life is not a children's book, but then life is nothing without the transfiguring power of the imagination and its ability to witness past, present and future simultaneously, nor is life worth much if we have not learned that words and feelings so closely adhere that they are like the skins and bodies of each other. "We don't use an emotion-thinking language," said Jessica's mother, Lisa Hathaway, after her daughter's death, "so we don't use words like 'scared,' 'fear,' 'sadness,' 'happy.'"

Too bad.

In a sense, the New Age attitudes of Jessica's parents represent the final decadence of the Romantic Child. Asked if she worried about bad weather that might lie across Jessica's path, Hathaway said, "The weather will move for her. ... It is the power of her being. There is something about Jessica that things move for her." This is the sort of preposterous mysticism that brought about the deaths of Jessica and her father.

At the same time, Jessica represents a logical extension of American culture's latter-day tendency to get childhood over with as quickly as possible, to turn children into adults before they can revel in being children.

American parents push their children into beauty pageants and athletic competitions at ever earlier ages. Children engage in sex and crime and drugs with thoughtless abandon, and they are constantly bombarded by adult images of sex and violence on television, in movies and in magazines. The hysteria that surrounds mass accusations of childhood sexual abuse and of individual suppressed memory syndrome painfully reflects this country's ambiguous feelings about children and childhood. We seem to fear children for being children as much as we love them for being child-like, and we seem to believe that if somehow we could drain childhood out of American society, we will make it safe for the adults at last. We could all — kids and grownups alike — dress and talk, act and dream the same.

It sounds like the plot of a pretty scary children's book.

One cannot help but be sorry that C.R. Milne's life was mortally wounded by his father's appropriation of its most innocent aspects for the world's entertainment. Can it possibly help that Christopher Robin and Winnie-the-Pooh and their cohorts taught many of us about fairness and loyalty, tolerance and love, courage and prudence and pride, about the necessities of art and the imagination and the pleasures taken in life's small objects and occurrences, in, as a matter of fact, the essential virtue of Smallness itself?

If only Jessica had been given that chance.

Police report $50,000 in drug money missing
DALLAS — The FBI has been asked to investigate the disappearance of $50,000 in cash from a police narcotics division safe, Dallas Police Chief Ben Click says.

Police officials said Wednesday that money was discovered missing Monday and is assumed for now to have been stolen by one or more of the seven narcotics unit supervisors who had access to the safe.

The money could have been stolen by someone other than an officer or lost while it was in the field for an undercover operation, but the investigation is focusing on officers, Click said.

The cash was routinely used by undercover officers in "buy-bust" operations to help lure high-volume drug dealers targeted for arrest.

Report: Records detail suspects' movements

DALLAS — Phone calling card records linked to the Oklahoma City bombing case show the two suspects apparently stayed in close touch in the days before the deadly explosion, a newspaper reports.

The Dallas Morning News reported in a copy-right story today that records, from a prepaid phone calling card discovered in suspect Terry Nichols' house, also suggest he had much closer ties to the bombing plan than previously known.

Seven months before the blast, records obtained by the Morning News show, there were more than two dozen calls to suppliers of bomb components — including racing fuel, plastic barrels and chemicals.

And just before the April 19, 1995, attack, records show, there was a call to the Ryder agency that rented the truck used in the blast, and to a cab company whose driver says he dropped co-defendant Timothy McVeigh off near the rental shop in Junction City, Kan.

Hodgkin's patients sue Anderson, FDA director

HOUSTON — Eight people stricken with advanced Hodgkin's disease have filed a federal lawsuit to force M.D. Anderson Cancer Center and federal authorities to resume an experimental and unapproved treatment.

The plaintiffs, who say radiolabeled immunoglobulin therapy is their only hope for surviving the fatal disease, accuse the hospital and the Food and Drug Administration of putting process over people, according to the lawsuit filed Wednesday.

Attorney Richard Jaffe said his clients were among 79 people who received the experimental drug at M.D. Anderson until last December, when the Food and Drug Administration placed a clinical hold on the treatment program.

When the FDA lifted its hold, M.D. Anderson stopped the program itself to evaluate the drug's effectiveness and toxicity.

Civil rights groups blast Morales

AUSTIN — Gov. George W. Bush says if the state loses its appeal of an anti-affirmative action on university admissions to the U.S. Supreme Court, he believes it will find new ways to design "inclusive" programs.

He said such factors as income level and a person's background could be considered, adding:

"I believe we ought to do everything in our power to make sure that our university systems are not exclusive, but I think there's a positive way that we can react ... in a way that does not have any kind of discrimination."

Meanwhile, infuriated civil rights advocates blasted Attorney General Dan. Morales over remarks they say hurt the battle for equal rights by mischaracterizing affirmative action as unfair discrimination.

School food often found with cafeteria workers'

HOUSTON — Food destined for the mouths of Houston's 204,000 schoolchildren often slips out the back door, in the arms of school cafeteria workers, KTRK-TV reports.

Hidden cameras aimed on six school cafeteria doors showed several workers leaving for the day, armed with shopping bags full of food. Taxpayers spend $28 million annually on food for Houston schoolchildren.

Many workers shrugged their shoulders or ignored a reporter's questions about why they were taking food.

Others like Antone Punch, food services manager for Welch Middle School, seemed to think nothing was wrong with the practice.

"Why should we give that to the kids?" she said during Wednesday's broadcast.

Bush latest Texan with national role

AUSTIN — Gov. George W. Bush, who was picked Wednesday to be temporary co-chairman of this year's Republican National Convention, is the latest Texan to win a high-profile convention role.

Bush will share the post with New Jersey Gov. Christine Todd Whitman.

In 1988, then-state treasurer Ann Richards was the keynote speaker at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta, while then-Sen. Lloyd Bentsen was the party's vice presidential nominee. That also was the year Bush's father won his first GOP presidential nomination.

Cars, oil-filled barrels found buried in park near Galveston

HITCHCOCK (AP) — Two oil-filled barrels and three cars have been unearthed during excavation of a park in Galveston County, and county commissioners ordered digging at another park.

Digging in Jack Brooks Park at Hitchcock and at Caribide Park at La Marque was ordered after county employees told the Galveston County Beach Parks Board last month about waste buried at the two sites.

County commissioner Wayne Johnson, who is also a member of the beach parks board, said employees said metal would be found in two locations in Jack Brooks Park.

"We found a car hood at one site and three cars in a different site" on Wednesday, Johnson said.

Excavation was expected to occur at Caribide Park today.

An engineering firm was hired to help locate metal at the two parks.

County employees told the parks board they had seen barrels of chemicals and at least one car buried in a pit near the maintenance barn at Brooks Park.

A pit in a wetlands area uncovered two barrels filled with oil, a refrigerator, roof shingles and a mimeograph machine.

"Employees have said we'd find metal drums filled with oil, metal drums filled with transmission fluid, car parts, tires and all kinds of stuff,"

Pat Hallisey, who was executive director of the parks board when the burying purportedly took place, said he did not know of any items being buried during his tenure with the board.

Open Letter to the Voters of District 3, City of Big Spring

For the past three years, I have had the honor and privilege of serving as your City Council person - two years as Mayor Pro Tem. We have had many major accomplishments in the last three years. I initiated a program to obtain the inmates. They have done an excellent job of cleaning out city, including parks, roadways and waterways.

We have the best drinking water we have had in years. Streets are in better shape due to a joint effort between City and County. We have an emergency medical system unequalled by any City our size. We have brought in new industry, such as the expansion of Western Container, one new correctional center, Super Wal-Mart and several more due to the expansion of our tax base. We have given our employees two pay raises (much needed), no new taxes, although we passed two bond issues - Beals Creek and street repairs.

We have several issues still ahead of us such as Long Range Plan, and the Beals Creek Project (starts in two months). We are working to implement the street repair this summer, including repairing Dixon Street.

It is important to obtain every dollar we can from the sale of the Correctional Centers. I have not been able to contact each voter individually but would appreciate your vote. I serve you the tax payer.

USA Today says Ford's recall of 8.7 million vehicles leaves out many that may be even more fire-prone ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s recall of 8.7 million cars and trucks in the United States and Canada last week leaves out tens of thousands of vehicles that may be even more fire-prone, USA Today reported today.

The paper cited a draft of a Jan. 20, 1993, internal Ford memo that it said lists "known incidents which are attributed to the ignition switch."

It said the list includes 1986 Econoline full-size vans and Aerostar mini-vans, neither of which was included in the recall.

USA Today quoted Ford spokeswoman — Francine Romaine as saying late Wednesday that the 1993 memo

"is a preliminary draft ... not presented to the recall committee."

She said there was no way to determine immediately whether it represented Ford's final thinking on the switches, the paper said.

It said National Highway

Traffic Safety Administration documents show the Aerostar has the second highest rate of ignition switch fires of any Ford truck and is more likely to catch fire than any recalled truck except the 1988 Bronco.

The government documents show the 1986 and 1987 Econoline have ignition fires at about twice the rate of some recalled pickups, the paper said.

Ford dealers are replacing ignition switches, free of charge, to 7.9 million 1988-93 Ford, Mercury and Lincoln cars in trucks in the United States and 859,000 in Canada.

Secondhand smoke can cause problems in children

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Imagine taking your child to visit your parents only to have him or her wind up in the hospital with pneumonia.

A frightening scenario, but that's exactly what happened to a 19-month-old infant according to the Houston-based Methodist Hospital System.

The cause - environmental smoke also referred to as involuntary smoking, passive smoking and secondhand smoke.

The infant was released from the hospital five days later, but was still weak. Little Johnny, as he is referred to, initially had a cold and his parents were puzzled as to how it turned into pneumonia so quickly.

A few questions from the doctor and the case was pinpointed. Johnny recovered in two weeks.

The problem was Johnny's grandfather was a cigarette smoker.

Guns, poisons, too many sweets and dozens of other items that can be potentially harmful to children are put away in many households, but children are in just as much danger, if not more, when they breathe cigarette smoke.

Each year, exposure to secondhand smoke causes up to 300,000 cases of lower respiratory tract infections such as bronchitis and pneumonia in infants and young children.

According to the American Cancer Society such infections cause nearly 15,000 hospitalizations annually.

Tobacco smoke contains about 300 dangerous chemicals with the most damaging being tar, nicotine and carbon monoxide.

Dr. William Eschenbacher, a pulmonary specialist at The Methodist Hospital in Houston said, "Filters on cigarettes reduce the tars and other bad chemicals that smokers inhale. However, children who breathe secondhand smoke do not have the advantage of a filter, they're getting whatever comes out of the burning tip of the cigarette."

These chemicals could gradually destroy some of the cilia, the tiny hairs that line the airways and continuously sweep particles away from the lungs.

According to Eschenbacher, as cilia is destroyed, the lungs become chronically inflamed.

"Secondhand cigarette smoke may contribute to several lung diseases that can be just as dangerous as lung cancer," Eschenbacher said.

Children who live in a smoker's household also have an increased chance of developing asthma. The symptoms of asthmatic children as intensified by secondhand smoke.

Cigarette smoke is also referred to as "environmental tobacco smoke (ETS)."

ETS is the combination of two forms of smoke from burning tobacco products:

• Sidestream smoke, or smoke that comes from a burning cigarette, pipe or cigar between puffs.

• Mainstream smoke, or the smoke that is exhaled by the smoker.

The American Cancer Society says when a cigarette is smoked, about one-half of the smoke generated is sidestream smoke emitted from the burning cigarette between puffs.

This smoke contains essentially all of the same carcinogenic (cancer-causing) and toxic agents that have been identified in the mainstream smoke inhaled by the smoker, but at greater levels.

ETS exposure is associated with increased respiratory irritation (cough, phlegm production and wheezing) and middle ear infections, as well as upper respiratory tract symptoms (sore throats and colds) in infants and children.

In the U.S., sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) is the major cause of death in infants between the ages of one month and one year, and the linkage with maternal smoking is well established.

Following the release of the Surgeon General's report and the National Academy of Sciences and National Research Council's review, many new laws, regulations and ordinances were enacted to severely restrict or ban public smoking.

Rudeness shouldn't play role in rule enforcement

Scripps Howard News Service

Q: I am a very upset and offended student. My complaint is about the security guards at my high school. They treat students with no respect.

but there is no reason for the world and your surroundings to turn you into a negative, unhappy person. You must mean more to yourself than that.

If you smile at others, you'll be amazed at how often they

School administrators can help the relationship between those in positions of authority by providing guidelines and training as to the best and most positive methods of handling student situations.

In my school, we have "lock outs" when the bell rings and we are in the hallway instead of class, we know we have to follow a certain procedure. However, when this happens the security guards also yell and scream at us, like we're some sort of animals.

The rules are that if we are late, we will have to serve some sort of detention. I know that there are some students who pay no attention to the rules, but that's only a few. Why can't the guards at least treat us respectfully, like human beings? I hope my letter helps some students.

A: We commend you for taking the time and courage to write this letter. Something that will help both students and security guards is a positive, open attitude. Many times, people simply forget to be nice to each other.

You might begin something more positive if you take the time to perform small kindnesses. This is contagious and can cause others to feel and be more at ease.

In turn, they will do something positive and kind. You have the power to make your own day pleasant, despite how others behave.

You have been experiencing negative thoughts and feelings as a result of the guards' behavior. And it's easy to hold on to those instead of letting them go in order to begin new and happier experiences.

This is important: You might not be able to change others, will begin to smile back at you. It's natural for people to be nice, but today most of us are too cautious to smile. We are afraid to get to know each other. Maybe this is what the security staff is feeling.

It's possible for the security staff to have a good relationship with the student body. Perhaps they sometimes are under a lot of pressure to "round up" the students and clear the hallways as soon as possible. They yell at the students to get those who drag their feet to move on quickly.

However, the guards end up offending students such as yourself who already realize they have broken the rules and are prepared for the consequences.

School administrators can help the relationship between those in positions of authority by providing guidelines and training as to the best and most positive methods of handling student situations.

In the process, it's also important the school personnel feel good about themselves, their environment and the students they teach.

The bottom line is that everyone is responsible and we all have the ability to make life more pleasant for ourselves and for others.

HOW TO KEEP C.O.O.L. WITH YOUR KIDS, by Lou Makarowski. Perigee Books, $12.

Therapist Lou Makarowski had a simple but important idea: write a parenting book focused mainly on improving the behavior of parents.

In "How to Keep Your C.O.O.L. With Your Kids," Makarowski aims to teach parents how to control their own lives - particularly their anger - as a way of bettering their family life.

Increasing numbers of horror stories about child abuse committed by parents also indicate the need for a book showing adults how to better handle their anger against their children.

"This is a book about how to deal with losing your temper when your children have pushed you to the limit," said Makarowski.

Any parent can recite numerous instances when they lost their tempers and said or did things to their children they later regretted. There's no question that children can bring out the worst in parents; what Makarowski wants is to teach parents how to bring the best out in their children by first learning to control their own behavior in difficult situations.

Of course, many parents grow weary of trying to follow various kinds of trendy discipline methods promoted by the dozens of child-care books published each year.

Such people might be tempted to toss out Makarowski's book, particularly since his writing is awfully dense at points and too heavily laden with jargon.

But he has hit on something that can carry over to all aspects of adult life, making this much more than a simple parenting book. It's something you can do for yourself, and that's one of the major points Makarowski makes: that parents don't do enough to nurture themselves, thus making them feel deprived and vulnerable to anger that just suddenly boils over.

As he explains it in his book, Makarowski's method involves a variety of aspects, including using deep breathing, imagery, rehearsals of difficult situations and keeping an "Anger Journal."

Makarowski, a psychologist whose syndicated weekly column "Tips for Success in Sports and Life" runs on Scripps Howard News Service, sums up his method with the acronym "C.O.O.L." which stands for:

- C: Consider the context and consequence of your reactions to provocative situations that trigger your anger.
- O: Observe your breathing, body tension and communication objectively.
- O: Organize options for successful problem solving when provoked.
- L: Look to the future, learn from the past and live in the present.

The book is divided into two parts, with the first, longer part targeting parents, and the second aimed at dealing with children themselves. Makarowski gives particular attention to parents of children who are hyperactive or have an attention deficit, since these children are the most challenging for parents to deal with.

Like anything worthwhile, Makarowski's method takes time, patience and practice to master. To help motivate readers, Makarowski has scattered dozens of anecdotes throughout the book, showing how the method works in practical situations.

READ ALL ABOUT IT

Test your reading comprehension by reading the story below and answering the questions that follow.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The recording of Thelious Monk's tinkling piano music ends, and trumpeter Wynton Marsalis — a jazz genius of another generation — turns to his rapt audience of elementary school pupils. How did the music sound? he asks.

"It sounded happy," a boy shouted out.

"There's something about high notes that sounds happy," Marsalis agreed. Then he played the music again, asking the children of Northwest Washington's Oyster Elementary School to listen for the "constant rhythm" of the piece.

The vignette illustrated Tuesday the message that superstar Marsalis is trying to get across in the interactive music appreciation course he is carrying to elementary schools in four cities.

In Tuesday's class, Marsalis, 34, stressed the importance of developing listening skills to enjoy and understand music better. During the lesson, he performed with his usual musical exuberance for the children and explained to them the elements of melody, rhythm and meter.

Teachers and students tapped their feet, bobbed their heads and hummed to the recorded music of Monk, Ludwig van Beethoven and Duke Ellington as Marsalis explained about the texture of sound.

"I never had an interest in jazz," said 12-year-old Jhonathan Polanco. "He made it sound fun."

"You don't have to make it painful," Marsalis said after the lesson. "My philosophy on that: you just present it, you know. Sometimes the kids follow it, and sometimes they don't. But it's good for them just to be there in the ambience of it and hear the music."

Marsalis won over a number of his listeners.

"First I thought it was going to be boring, because it's all sleepy and all," Lani Bardaje, 13, said. "But I learned the rhythm of the jazz and how fun it is to listen and how the number goes with the rhythm."

Washington was the second stop for Marsalis' teaching tour after Chicago. He plans similar sessions in Detroit and San Francisco.

Use information from the story to answer the following true and false questions.

- 1) Why did Wynton Marsalis visit Washington's Oyster Elementary School?
- 2) Where did the jazz genius begin his musical tour?
- 3) What did Marsalis want the children to listen for when he played a piece of music on his trumpet?
- 4) Why does the superstar think it so important for people to know how to listen to music?
- 5) Do you think it was a good idea for Marsalis to play recordings of famous musicians during his lesson? Why?
- 6) Why do you think that the students and teachers tapped their feet while listening to the recordings?
- 7) Name the three musical elements that Marsalis talked about during the music session?

- Answer Key (Wording may vary):
- 1) Wynton Marsalis visited Oyster Elementary School to teach a music appreciation course.
 - 2) The first stop of the tour was in Chicago.
 - 3) When Marsalis played his trumpet, he asked the students to listen for the constant rhythm of the piece.
 - 4) The famous musician thinks that listening skills are important because they help people to enjoy and understand music.
 - 5) Answers will vary.

 - 7) Three musical elements discussed during the music class were melody, rhythm and meter.

Saluting Our Great American Guide

The U.S. Constitution

The Constitution is a plan for governing our country. It has a preamble (introduction) and seven articles, or sections. The Constitution covers these subjects:

We the People of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Kids of today take a look at the original U.S. Constitution on display at the National Archives in Washington, D.C.

Each year we celebrate Law Day on May 1. This special day calls attention to our laws, rights and responsibilities. All of these can be traced back to our Constitution, written more than 200 years ago.

Amendments to the Constitution

Twenty-seven amendments have been added. Our Powerful Constitution

We the People

Did you ever stop to think:

- Why our country does not have a king or queen?
- Who makes our money?
- Who set up our post offices?

The U.S. Constitution can answer these questions and many more.

- The Constitution says we can't give anyone a royal title. We can't make anyone a king or queen. We elect our president.
- The Constitution says that only the U.S. government can make our money.
- The Constitution says the government can set up post offices so the mail can be delivered near and far.

The U.S. Constitution is one of the most important documents ever written. Even though it was written more than 200 years ago, it is still powerful today.

George Washington presided at the meeting that wrote the Constitution in 1787. Ben Franklin was also at this meeting.

We often see these words written in an old-timey way because the original Constitution was written using a quill.

The Constitution begins with the words "We the People."

WE THE PEOPLE

These three words mean that the power of the Constitution comes from the people — from you and me.

As good citizens, when we know about, obey and respect the Constitution, we give it power.

The amendments

The original Constitution was written in 1787. It was divided into parts called "articles."

Thomas Jefferson

BILL OF RIGHTS

The first 10 amendments are called the Bill of Rights. They were added in 1791. A total of 27 amendments have been added. Many protect our rights. The other amendments set up new rules for running our government.

I Spy in the Constitution

The original Constitution has 4,543 words, including the names of the signers. We have given you an outline of it and the amendments. Good citizens know a lot about their Constitution. They can trace many of the rights we treasure back to it.

McWherter jumping way to state meet

By RODERICK RICHARDSON
Herald Sportswriter

This year, Krissi McWherter has jumped to new heights. That is why she is heading to Austin.

McWherter cleared 5-4 in the high jump to win second place at last weekend's Region I-4A track meet. The jump qualified her for state competition next weekend.

McWherter cleared the height on her first try, which only added to her amazement.

"I was saying to myself, 'I can do it, I've done it before,'" said McWherter. "But I didn't think I could make it on the first jump."

Last year, McWherter finished fourth in district, clearing 4-10. During this season, her best jump on record was 5-2. McWherter believed her efforts would only take her as far as regionals.

"After placing first and second in other meets, I thought I could at least participate in the regional meet," said McWherter. "But I didn't think I'd make it to state."

There was some suspense as to whether McWherter would qualify. Though she cleared the height on her first jump,

If you put her in any event, she'll do her best. She'll fight you until the end.

Tiffany Meek

McWherter missed the rest of her attempts. An athlete from Dumas cleared 5-4 on her second attempt.

McWherter says because she cleared the height on her first try, that qualified her for state, but it took some effort to convince her.

"The winner was jumping 5-6, and I was trying that height," said McWherter. "When another person jumped 5-4; I said 'Well, I least I got a medal,' but Coach (Jay) Kennedy was telling me, 'No, you're going to state.'"

Track coach Tiffany Meek says McWherter's achievements is due to hard work.

"It has been an outstanding year for her," said Meek. "She's a very talented girl, and she came out and used all her abilities. She is such a competitor. If you put her in any event, she'll do her best. She'll fight you until the end."

Krissi McWherter, shown practicing on the hurdles earlier this season, qualified for the state track meet in the high jump.

Hurdle champ realizes her goal

The Big Spring Lady Steer track team won first place in all three relays at last weekend's regional track meet, but Dee Hill can keep her medal all to herself.

Hill is Region I-4A's champion in the 100-meter hurdles. Hill finished with a time of 15.41, improving her previous best time of 15.97.

"I was expecting (the win)," said Hill. "I just gave it all I had. I had encouragement from the team. They were saying that I could do it."

Last year, Hill finished her season early, placing third at the district meet. This season, she expected to make it this

From 'Luv Ya Blue' to 'Tennessee Tigers?'

In two years, Houston will be without a NFL football team.

I bet many of you are saying "Who cares?" I guess that's why the Oilers are leaving.

After several years of playing in front of thousands of empty seats, the Houston Oilers will relocate to Nashville. They may even change their name to the Tennessee Tigers.

Baby blue and white tigers? I think they should change their colors, too.

If there are any Oiler fans in this area, don't worry. You still have two years to enjoy the fact that they are still stuck in Texas.

But it may not be what you want. First, the Oilers are not exactly the best team in the NFL, and they probably won't play with much enthusiasm now they are moving.

Can you blame them? For years, the Oilers were the kings of Houston professional sports. They were the chosen ones to bring home a championship.

Bum Phillips, Earl Campbell, Warren Moon and several others have delighted us with play after fantastic play (with Phillips, it was coaching).

But that was the past. Now the Oilers are the black sheep of Houston. The Rockets brought two championships home, and are now in the playoffs. The Astros are on top of the NL Central division, but are anything but first in bringing in fans.

And here you have the Oilers. Playing there hearts out for a few loyal fans who are thinking, "Gee, it would be nice if the Cowboys play here. Then we'll have a real Texas team on the field."

In contrast to Cleveland's valiant effort to keep the Browns from moving to Baltimore, Houston sort of helped the Oilers pack.

It looks as though I'm on the Oilers' side on this matter. To tell the truth, I don't care either. I'm just trying to see things through the team's eyes.

Once again, it all boils down to money. Losing brings little revenue. Unfortunately, pro teams depend on fairweather fans for the big bucks.

In Nashville, the Oilers can continue losing and more than likely still have sold-out attendance, because Nashville is just happy to have a team. It's a great opportunity to stay - at their best - mediocre.

Don't get me wrong. I know that no team likes to be the doormat of the league, but it is nice to have a big check to use as padding.

Rangers temporarily solve M's mystery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Will Clark's seventh-inning homer powered Texas over Seattle 5-4 as Mariners starter Randy Johnson had his shortest outing since 1993.

Bothered by tightness in his right calf, Johnson lasted only two innings, allowing six hits and four runs. Johnson, who complained of lower back problems in his last start at Milwaukee, planned to be examined today when the team returns to Seattle.

Jeff Russell (1-0), signed to a major league contract by the Rangers earlier in the day, picked up the win with two innings of two-hit relief, while Mike Jackson (1-1), the third of six Seattle pitchers, (1-1) gave up Clark's homer and was charged with the loss. Yankees 11, Orioles 6

Tino Martinez finally came up with an ending.

One day after New York and Baltimore played the longest nine-inning game in major league history, the two teams battled for another 5 hours, 34 minutes before Martinez hit a grand slam in the 15th inning, giving the Yankees an 11-6 victory and a sweep of the Orioles.

"I've never seen anything like it," Baltimore catcher Gregg Zaun said. "I've played in long games before, some that went a lot of innings, but never two like this back-to-back."

Tuesday night, the teams battled for 4 hours, 21 minutes before the Yankees pulled out a 13-10 victory.

Martinez hit the first pitch from Jimmy Myers into the left-field seats.

"I just wanted to get the sacrifice fly. I was disappointed that I didn't get it done earlier," Martinez said. "We had so many chances, but I was too tired to be mad."

In other AL games, Cleveland downed Chicago 9-5, Boston stopped Detroit 5-1, Toronto defeated Milwaukee 9-3, Texas nipped Seattle 5-4, California defeated Oakland 6-4 and Minnesota edged Kansas City 5-4 in 10 innings.

Angels 6, Athletics 4
Visiting California got two-run homers by Rex Hudler and J.T. Snow, and a solo shot by Jim Edwards as the Angels withstood Mark McGwire's grand slam.

Edwards also pulled off a fielding gem, robbing Geronimo Berroa extra bases with a leaping catch against the center field wall in the eighth inning.

The Angels won consecutive road games for the first time this season.

Twins 6, Royals 5, 10 innings
At Minneapolis, Kansas City reliever Jeff Montgomery (1-0) hit Paul Molitor with a pitch with the bases loaded in the 10th inning to give Minnesota its third straight victory.

The victory gave the Twins a sweep of the Royals at the Metrodome for the first time since June 8-10, 1987.

Home sweet home helps Suns crawl back into series

PHOENIX (AP) — Game 3 of the San Antonio-Phoenix playoff series turned the Suns' way.

Maybe it was the America West Arena, where the Spurs have a way of playing like a lottery team, with a 1-13 record to show for their visits there.

"We obviously dodged a bullet, so we can live another day," coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said Wednesday night after the Suns went the final 1:48 without a point and survived two last-gasp San Antonio misses to beat the Spurs 94-93.

The Spurs, up 2-1, can still close out the best-of-5 series with a win in Game 4 on Friday night in Phoenix.

The Spurs, who have never beaten Phoenix in a playoff series, are 0-4 in the playoffs at America West. The Spurs went the final 1:30 without scoring, and coach Bob Hill was at a loss to explain.

"We were impatient, we didn't keep our composure, we didn't rebound, we didn't drive the ball," he said. "It was just a very poor performance on our part."

After Kevin Johnson drove the lane for a layup and a 94-91 lead with 1:48 left, the Suns hung in with defense and luck.

John Williams keyed the defense, battling a rebound to Wesley Person with 45 seconds left and tying up David Robinson for a jump ball with 12.7 seconds to go.

NBA

The tip went to the Spurs' Sean Elliott, and, after a timeout, Williams fouled Robinson with 8.8 seconds left. The Suns weren't over the foul limit, so the Spurs got the ball out of bounds again.

That's where luck came in — Charles Barkley batted the rebound of Vinny Del Negro's jumper to Elliott, who missed a 17-footer.

"Well, I couldn't get it, and if I can't get it, I'm going to hit it," said Barkley, who had 25 points and 13 rebounds.

Barkley said Williams' work on Robinson and Danny Manning's eight points in the last quarter were the key.

"I play my role good, and I know my role on this team," Williams said. "Most of the offense goes through three guys — Barkley, Kevin Johnson and Manning — but role players are what take you through the playoffs."

Del Negro, a San Antonio role player who scored a playoff career-high 29 points in the Spurs' first-game victory, hit only three of 12 shots this time. He said he wouldn't have passed up his last shot, despite the miss.

"I had a good look at it, and unfortunately it didn't go down. I'll take that shot all day," Del Negro said.

Johnson's driving layup gave the Suns a 94-91 lead.

Robinson, who scored 13 of his 22 points in the last quarter, made a layup with 1:30 remaining to pull the Spurs within one. There was no more scoring.

Wesley Person added 23 points for the Suns, while Johnson had 22.

Elliott scored 20 for San Antonio. Avery Johnson had 19 and Chuck Person 18 for the Spurs.

Mavs' sale complete

DALLAS (AP) — Just as they planned, Dallas Mavericks coach Dick Motta and owner Donald Carter are leaving the team together.

Sixteen years to the day after a franchise agreement was signed that brought the Mavericks and the NBA to Dallas, a group of investors led by land developer Ross Perot Jr. and auto dealer David McDavid bought the team.

Dallas billionaire Ross Perot's son and McDavid, now the franchise front man, purchased a 67 percent interest in the team from Carter on Wednesday.

"Coach Motta and I talked about this a long time, about whether or not when this day came, we might have a couple of horses up here, and we'd ride off into the sunset together," Carter said.

"He's going to be part of the organization in a consulting role and help them give them the basketball knowledge that he's got a lot of."

Mavericks guard Jason Kidd, who wanted the NBA franchise's new owners to retain Motta as coach, was to meet with Perot and McDavid today on the team's direction, potential free-agent acquisitions and other matters.

But McDavid, who urged the 64-year-old Motta to become a consultant, said the coach would have a role in choosing his successor from among a list of candidates now being compiled.

"I met with coach Motta, had several meetings with him, and I don't know if it was a pre-arranged agreement or not, but he has opted to exit with Don," he said.

Following coach Quinn Buckner's 1994 firing, Carter coaxed Motta out of retirement to teach Kidd, Jamal Mashburn and Jim Jackson how to win in the NBA.

The Mavericks went from a 36-46 record last year and tremendous promise to a 26-56 ledger this season. Before that, the team was coming off the worst two-year stretch in NBA history, with 24 wins and 140 losses.

Motta, who will be 65 on Sept. 3, has the third most victories in NBA history with a career record of 918-965 — including 329-409 in nine seasons with Dallas.

Becker homered for Minnesota, while Bob Hamelin and Tom Goodwin hit home runs for the Royals.

Blue Jays 9, Brewers 3

At Toronto, Juan Guzman (4-1) pitched four-hit ball for eight innings and didn't allow a Milwaukee runner past first base until the sixth inning, when Jeff Cirillo hit a two-run homer. Guzman struck out eight and walked four before Bill Risley pitched the ninth.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 1

At Boston, Roger Clemens (1-4) struck out 13 and the Red Sox handed Detroit its 12th loss in 13 games. It was his 62nd game with 10 or more strikeouts and second in a row.

Clemens gave up six hits and walked none in pitching his first complete game since July 14, 1994. He lost his shutout with two outs in the ninth inning on Bobby Higginson's RBI double.

Scott Aldridge (0-3) took the loss.

Indians 9, White Sox 5

Albert Belle and Omar Vizquel homered to back Jack McDowell's pitching as Cleveland downed Chicago. Sandy Alomar had two hits, extending his hitting streak to a career-high 15 games, and two RBIs for the Indians.

McDowell (3-1) was facing his former White Sox teammates for the first time since they beat him and New York Yankees 11-4 last July 18.

Jacobs Field was sold out for the 64th straight time, one away from matching the major league record set by Baltimore in 1992-93.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR FRIDAY, MAY 3:

Use your creative thinking to your advantage. You will be challenged by alliances and ventures that involve finances. Back off from risks if possible. Trust your fine mind and keen nature to determine solutions. Decide how much to give to loved ones and what your limits are. If you are single, you meet people easily, though this may not be the year to tie the knot. If attached, your relationship will be transformed, but it will be positive if you get past petty troubles and tune in to your spirituality. SCORPIO lays it on the line.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Count on handling many different ideas, plans and personalities. Reiterate what you want, not once but several times. Confusion surrounds communications and joint matters. Use your high profile and make what you need happen. Tonight: Be with a favorite person. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Defer to another in a dubious situation or if seeking solutions. You realize once you gain perspective that there is more than one way to understand a problem. Use extreme caution with funds and a loved one. Avoid taking risks! Tonight: Accept an invitation. *****

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Dig into your resources, and follow through with what is important. Work is demanding, but spend time with one particular associate. Your sense of discrimination counts. You feel out of sorts with your ruling planet, Mercury, going into retrograde. Tonight: Get extra sleep. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Communications are off regarding an important matter. This may be an indicator of the near future. Work on your clarity, and be careful to confirm all appointments for the next few weeks. Listen to a partner who provides excellent feedback. Tonight: Be a wild thing. ****

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be more instinctive with family, and you will get positive results. Confusion surrounds money and friendship. By all means, don't mix the two. Think through a change with care. Avoid committing to any one course, if possible. Tonight: Buy flowers on the way home. ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might be distinctly out of sorts as you deal with changes and a misunderstanding. Determine where all parties are coming from, then brainstorm to find solutions. Explore all possibilities. Your negotiating skills need to come into play quickly. Tonight: TGIF. ****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your more positive side comes out when dealing with family. Confusion surrounds plans, and you might need to think through a change in the next few weeks. Consider a financial matter with care. Do not commit before you are sure of what is happening. Tonight: Indulge. ***

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You are personality-plus. Events unfold that cause you to think through a friendship. It's necessary to evaluate funds and a partnership. Communication opens doors. Return calls, and catch up on another's news. Tonight: Ask with a smile. *****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Instincts are correct regarding a friend or boss, though you might not have the full story for several weeks. Finances are enhanced, but so is your desire to spend. Take time off to visit a friend who may have a case of the blues. Your concern is appreciated. Tonight: Take a night off. **

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Aim for what you want, and don't let complications affect you. Be more direct with others. Someone doesn't understand you. Be prepared to communicate in a new way. Take a health break, and get some exercise. Tonight: Go where the party is. *****

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Accept responsibility with directness, and be creative with partners and a family member. Your sense of humor plays into your ability to discern what is happening with a special friend. Use caution with financial matters. Tonight: Go out on the town. ****

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) An associate or friend goes "poof" into smoke. Try to understand what is happening with this person. Make phone calls, reach out for another and gain perspective as to what is going on. An offer that may involve travel is most enticing; go for it. Tonight: Take off early. *****

For America's best extended horoscope, recorded by Jacqueline Bigar, call (900) 000-0000, 99 cents per minute. Also featured are The Spoken Tarot and The Runes, which answer your yes-or-no questions. Callers must be 18 or older. A service of InterMedia Inc., Jenkintown, Pa.

Scheme to get rid of junk mail runs into dead end

DEAR ABBY: After reading the comments in your column about junk mail, I had to share my experience with you. It all started in Vancouver, where my wife ordered a sweater for me from the landlady who ran the bed and breakfast inn where we were staying. The landlady wanted to be paid only for the yarn, not her time. She suggested we give what we felt it was worth to our favorite charity.

Abigail Van Buren
Columnist

When we received the sweater at home in Pennsylvania two months later, my wife sent a check to the landlady and asked her to put her favorite charity on the check. Soon my wife was getting pelted with financial support letters from Jimmy Swaggart's ministry. Finally, I wrote "DECEASED" on one of the solicitations and returned it. Presto! She no longer got mail from Jimmy Swaggart.

My brother-in-law, a doctor in Miami, heard how I got rid of my "junk mail" and put "deceased" on all of his junk mail and returned it to sender. A few weeks later, he realized that he was not receiving important mail that he was expecting. He then found out that his postman had seen "deceased" on his mail and, assuming that he was indeed dead, had put "deceased" on his first-class mail and sent it back, too. My brother-in-law then discovered that he Kinney Marlow Dupree, Big Spring, was among 121 high school seniors who attended the second of five freshmen orientation clinics on April 17 at Southwestern Oklahoma State University in Weatherford.

A total of 331 high school seniors has enrolled at Southwestern for the 1996 fall semester with three more clinics coming up on April 24, June 7 and August 16.

At the clinics, students spend the day on the SWOSU campus, meet individually with academic advisors and enroll in classes for the 1996 fall semester. The students, along with parents, hear presentations about services and activities at Southwestern Oklahoma State University.

Claire Miller, daughter of Big Spring resident Robert Miller, will graduate next month from the St. Mary's Hall Preparatory/Boarding School in San Angelo with honors as Cum Laude.

She has been accepted into the University of Pennsylvania Wharton School of Finance, an Ivy League university, and her father's alma mater. She was chosen among 2,769 applicants for a freshman class of 400.

On the road again with Tumbleweed

SIX DAYS ON THE ROAD

I headed east on Sunday to get a few interviews.

In Fort Worth I met Jack Grigsby, who raises rabbits. "My back yard used to be real pretty before I got these rabbits," says Jack. "But they're kind of interesting." Jack designed airplanes for more than 30 years before he got involved with rabbits.

I went over to Dallas and met Bill Signs, who became the first pilot to land a single engine plane on all seven continents in a 50-day trip around the world.

On Monday I interviewed Tommy Joe Mills in Killeen. He has had an appliance store in downtown Killeen for the past 50 years and knows about everything and everybody in Killeen.

Then I visited with Clem Nadeau, and ex-Army man who has the AMORE (American Museum of Real Estate). He took me over to Fort Hood where I interviewed the curator of the 4th Infantry Division Museum.

Monday afternoon in Austin, I visited Leann Phenix, a literary publicist. She talked about Austin having more bookstores per capita than any other American city.

Tuesday morning, I visited with artist Teri Boeker in Brenham, then talked with a couple who bought a city block in downtown Brenham and transformed it into a unique bed and breakfast. Next I visited a tiny place called Longpoint and heard about the community's history.

That same day I visited an organic farm and a nudist colony. I actually saw folks walking around stark naked. They said it relieves stress and gives them a sense of freedom.

Recipe corner information

We are currently seeking input from our readers to begin a recipe page to run on the second Wednesday of each month beginning in April.

The recipes can be ones you created or ones passed down from generation to generation.

If you have any recipes you would like to see published,

I went to Navasota and learned about the city's French influence.

Wednesday morning I got material on the Fanthorp Inn at Anderson. It's an old stage coach stop that is now part of the state park at Washington.

Some people don't know that Texas has a Washington. They should. It is the place where Texas started. The Texas Declaration of Independence, was signed at Washington on March 2, 1836. Washington was the capital of Texas from 1842 until 1845.

Near Independence, I visited a man who owns several Hudson cars. We took a ride around the birthplace of Baylor University.

Wednesday afternoon I visited with Bud Royer, who owns the Round Top Cafe in Round Top. I also interviewed newspaper publisher Chris Travis there. At West Point, I interviewed Ken Brothers, the world champion yodeler.

Thursday at Bastrop I visited with a couple who transformed 3 acres of riverfront property into a popular shopping and eating place call The Crossing. I also heard about Bastrop's famous jug band.

In Austin, Pat Beckham told me how he and other plastic surgeons repair cleft palates in Central and South America on a volunteer basis. Also in Austin I interviewed my uncle, Estes Lewis, who told about selling meat from a wagon in Athens when he was a boy. I drove to Mason where I recorded the courthouse clock and talked to the man who keeps it running.

Friday morning I heard about a cowboy church and visited legendary rodeo announcer Tom Hadley. Then I drove down to Streeter and met sculptor Garland Weeks, whose studio is in the old Streeter post office. At Brady I visited with the producer of a local radio program called Hillbilly Hits that is attracting nationwide attention.

Then I headed home. It was a good week.

Electric cars available in West Texas

Special to the Herald

The world of electric cars has arrived and a local dealer has been selected to be the first retailer in West Texas.

Wheeler Motor Company in Stanton has been appointed as a dealer for the electric personal community vehicle (PCV) from trans2 Corporation in Livonia, Mich.

"With the introduction of the trans2 PCV, traveling around city streets, resort, golf and retirement communities has just become safer, more comfortable and friendlier to the environment than ever," says James E. Wheeler, president of Wheeler Motor Company.

He adds, "trans2 is the fresh approach to electric vehicle transportation for city streets as well as golf courses."

The PCV by trans2 fits into the modal mix by satisfying the need for personal transportation that is inexpensive, non-polluting and stylish.

Engineered by trans2 Corporation with automotive type components and from the ground up, the trans2 PCV is safer and a better handling alternative to golf carts.

Jim Thomas, vice president of Marketing for trans2 Corporation, said, "We incorporated into the design, advanced engineering features normally found on today's small cars."

According to trans2 Corporation, the cruising range of the PCV is more than 30 miles, for about a penny a mile, with a speed of 20 miles per hour (maximum speeds vary depending on local ordinances). trans2 has an onboard charger that jets the driver fuel up from any standard 110 volt house current outlet.

The company adds, this fun neighborhood vehicle is as tall as a minivan for increased visibility and includes many automotive-type safety features such as full front lighting, high mounted tail lights, seat belts, laminated safety glass windshield with wiper and four-wheel hydraulic brakes.

The unique design of the PCV quickly accommodates the occasional rain shower with the use of optional "weather wing" foul weather enclosures. Cargo hauling flexibility is achieved with the SwaPAK modular cargo system. In just seconds, consumers can exchange the lightweight SwivelPAK (great for hauling groceries and gardening supplies) to the GolfPAK, SportPAK and more.

Many cities, urban areas, resort and retirement communities are now encouraging the use of alternative vehicles such as golf carts and the trans2 PCV, by creating ordinances for their use. These ordinances are designed to reduce speed, congestion, parking space and emissions. The trans2 is now available from Wheeler Motor Company at 104 N. Lamesa Highway in Stanton.

Nevada mummy may be oldest in North America

Scripps Howard News Service

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Using modern testing techniques, Nevada anthropologists now lay claim to the oldest mummy in North America.

"The results are astonishing," said Amy Dansie of the Nevada State Museum. Radiocarbon testing indicates the remains are about 9,415 years old, about the time of the end of the Ice Age.

In 1940, archaeologists S.M. Wheeler and his wife, Georgia, uncovered a human body wrapped in two tule mats in Spirit Cave southeast of Fallon. There was mummified skin on the head and part of the right shoulder.

The Wheelers were careful in removing the remains but they didn't know what they had found. "Nobody knew the significance," Dansie said at a news conference Wednesday.

The remains were stored in mothballs, sealed in a wooden box and sat in the museum for more than 50 years. But then Dr. Erv Taylor of the University of California, Riverside, using the new testing methods, pinpointed the age of the mummy. And a second test on the tule mats confirmed the date.

The remains are kept at a secret location in Carson City for security reasons. Museum officials allowed reporters to view the mummy on the condition the site would not be disclosed. Reporters also had to wear dust masks. Museum Director Scott Miller said, "We want to make sure nobody is exposed" to possible danger. Photographs were not permitted because of the sensitive nature of the remains.
