Small child among Brazilian hijackers

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A band of hijackers, including a woman with a small child, commandeered a Brazilian airliner on a domestic flight Saturday and forced the pilot to fly to Cuba after releasing all 158 passengers at a refueling stop in Surinam. Passengers said some of the hijackers had pistols.

Cuban authorities took the hijackers into custody when the plane landed at Camaguey, 300 miles southeast of Havana, and granted permission for the 14-member crew to take the Cruzeiro Airlines Airbus back to Brazil, according to government and airline officials. They said no one was hurt in the incident.

The hijackers — at least two men and the woman with a child — were believed to be Brazilians with no known connection to a political group. One passenger said there were at least seven hijackers.

Flight 302 took off from Rio de Janeiro, headed for Manaus, on the Amazon River in Brazil, with several scheduled stops en route. The plane left one of those stops, the northern city of San Luis, late Friday and before it reached the Amazon port city of Belem Saturday morning, some of the hijackers entered the cockpit and diverted the flight, a Varig-Cruzeiro Airlines spokesman said.

It flew first to Zanderij Airport at Paramaribo, Surinam, on South America's northern coast, where the hijackers negotiated with Brazil's Ambassador Luis Felipe Lambreia. They agreed to release the 158 passengers in return for maps and additional fuel, Brazil's Foreign Ministry said.

Officials in Surinam said Lambreia rejected the hijackers' offer to release only women and children passengers. There was no breakdown on passengers' nationalities, according to airline spokesmen, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

A passenger, Argemiro Figueiredo, said in a radio interview later that the passengers were never informed of the hijack and at first thought bad weather had caused cancellation of the Belem landing. "By the time we landed, we knew we had been hijacked," he said, "but we didn't know where we were."

He said he and others on the flight counted "seven or eight hijackers, including several women," one of whom was carrying a child about one year old. He said they boarded the plane during a stop at Fortaleza.

A dispatch from the official Cuban news agency Prensa Latina, monitored in Mexico City, said that "three of them (the hijackers) were armed," but did not give the type of weapons. It said the hijackers "apparently were more than five, none of them Cubans, and including at least two women and a year-old baby boy."

Foreign Ministry spokesman Bernando Pericas had said earlier in Brasilia, the capital, "We believe the hijackers were a couple, a young child and another man."

Takeover bid not blocked

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A federal judge refused Saturday night a Pennzoil Co. request that he block Texaco Inc.'s proposed $10.1 billion takeover of Getty Oil Co. — the largest such attempt in U.S. corporate history.

U.S. District Judge James Ellison said Pennzoil had "failed to show" that it would be damaged by the successful merger of Getty and Texaco.

Pennzoil attorneys said they would appeal the judge's ruling to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver on Monday.

In closing arguments in the six-day hearing, Pennzoil attorney Ted Weiss argued that the company would suffer "immediate and irreparable" damage if the merger were consummated.

Texaco attorney Stephen Axinn called the Pennzoil case "speculative, theoretical and weak."

Pennzoil, an unsuccessful Getty suitor, claimed that the Texaco-Getty deal was anticompetitive and would serve to drive middle-sized companies like Pennzoil out of business. Pennzoil claimed the merger violates antitrust laws.

"We lost what we asked for, but we got great encouragement for what we're trying to do," Perry Barber, Pennzoil general counsel from Houston, said of the outcome.

Ellison's ruling "made it quite clear" that his decision was based not upon his failure to find any antitrust violation, but upon his finding no evidence that Pennzoil would be harmed by the merger, Barber said.

Pennzoil also is awaiting a ruling by a state judge in Delaware on its breach-of-contract lawsuit filed against Getty in Pennzoil's unsuccessful attempt to take over the firm.

Getty Oil's public affairs manager in Tulsa, Charles Smith, released a statement soon after the ruling, saying the company "is delighted with the court's decision. When appropriate government reviews are completed, we would hope that the merger would be consummated quickly."

John K. McKinley, chairman and chief executive officer of Texaco Inc., said in a statement Saturday night that Texaco "continues to believe that the proposed acquisition of Getty Oil fits well within federal antitrust guidelines, and that there is no antitrust barrier to the acquisition."

"Early completion of the acquisition is in the interests of stockholders and employees of both companies," as well as the general public, he added.

PWP questions candidates

If Parents Without Partners get its way in court, Texas will no longer be a "haven" for parents who fail to make child-support payments.

"Texas is a haven for child-support non-payers," said Regina Holmes, who then invited county attorney candidates Michael Williams, 30, and Mark Dettman, 31, to explain why and why not to 10 members, including two men.

They did so and in amazing harmony for political candidates vying for the Republican Party's nomination in the May 5 primary.

"The courts are stumbling blocks, the county attorneys are stumbling blocks and the laws are stumbling blocks," Ms. Holmes said.

Williams, prosecutor in District Attorney Vern Martin's Office, noted there is a "necessity" for a diverse range of tools to enforce court orders mandating payments.

Mark Dettman

Michael Williams

Garnishment of wages is "only one tool," Williams said. "It will not be a panacea. It's not going to solve all sorts of problems."

Texas law now makes non-payment of court-ordered child support a criminal offense, Williams noted.

"THE PEOPLE who need it (the money) are those who will file contempt action" to compel payment.

In noting the numbers of divorces granted — about 1,800 in Midland County each of the last two years — Williams suggested that child-support cases will be on the increase.

But if criminal charges are filed against the non-custodial parent, then the complaining parent must be ready to prove her or his case just as if it were theft.

The offending parent, he noted, could be placed in jail as punishment for non-payment and as incentive to pay once the parent in arrears is out of confinement.

"If he is in jail," Williams said, "he can't pay because he can't work."

However, the jailing of a parent in arrears and in defiance of court orders will send out a "signal, a message" to others who fail to make timely payments or payments at all."

An additional tool of enforcement of payment, he said, will be the county attorney's role in setting "the tone and tempo" on priorities of child-support cases.

Park anything but 'menacing'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

It's a tribute to the lasting appeal of a comic strip character.

Dennis the Menace Park is its name, and like Alley Oop Park in Iraan it exemplifies the mood and vigor of its namesake.

Situated at the intersection of Indiana and Garfield streets in Midland, the park is one of only eight such Dennis the Menace recreation sites in the nation and is designed to appeal to youngsters up to about 12 years of age.

The story of the Midland facility began back in 1952 when Dennis' creator, Hank Ketcham, designed the original park in Monterey, Calif. His desire, he said, was to establish a playground that would encourage youngsters to exercise and be motivated. That park opened in 1956, and shortly thereafter a Midland couple happened upon it and found their own motivation.

They returned to the Tall City and anonymously donated $25,000 to City Parks and Recreation Department for purchase of materials to construct a similar facility. The couple said they wanted to ensure that their own grandchildren and other children of Midland would be able to enjoy the same type of atmosphere as existed at the Monterey park.

Hand-fashioned yacht sails at last

Texan's boat hoisted over garage for journey to ocean

HIGHLAND PARK, Texas (AP) — Bob Stephens had worried and waited for three years to get his yacht off the ground before seeing the weight of his dreams — all 24,000 pounds — sail over the garage, bound for Seattle.

The 39-foot sailboat, which Stephens built in the back yard of his home in the fashionable Dallas suburb, was hoisted by crane Friday onto a truck that will take the craft to the sea.

"It's been skillfully hidden in the back yard since 1981," Stephens said. "We just figured it was time to get the ball rolling and see if my baby would sink or swim."

Crane operator Lonnie Williams, who supervised the boat's first voyage, said the 67-degree weather was perfect for "sailing" it over the garage.

"It's a beautiful day for a residential lift like this," Williams said. "Every once in a while, we get a strange call to lift a boat or something. I've never turned one over yet."

But the move could have been a little tense for Stephens and his wife, Elaine Tanner.

Although the $100,000 boat is insured for the trip to Seattle, it could not be covered for any damage sustained in the move over the house and garage, Mrs. Tanner said.

"We try not to think those kind of thoughts," she said, "because it weighs more than it did when it was hoisted in."

Stephens, 42, and Ms. Tanner, 38, built the boat from a yacht kit acquired from a Canadian manufacturer.

Now more than 90 percent completed, the yacht needs only some exterior work, installation of the mast and some final touchups.

The couple started their boat-building project as a sideline to their homebuilding and real estate business, Tanner-Stephens Intown Homes, Inc.

"We planned to sail away to Australia or some exotic spot and spend our summer vacations on the high seas," Ms. Tanner said. "We bought a (summer) home in Seattle and decided to move the boat there to complete the work. But now we both have our own babies to deal with."

Stephens calls the yacht his "baby." Ms. Tanner has been caring for her 1-year-old son, Tanner Stephens.

The couple plans to christen the craft "Prime Interest" or "Floating Prime" in the spirit of their business.

More than 25 people watched the boat's move from its back yard berth.

"We've been wondering for years how they would get that boat out of here," said a neighbor.

Two families seek refuge in midst of Beirut battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Less than 150 yards from the pitched battle for a key gateway to Beirut, two families have sought refuge in the basement of a shell-battered apartment building.

"What can we do? Is there anything we can do?" Selma Khoury asked Saturday as artillery and tank shells crashed into the building above the families.

Mrs. Khoury, 56, her husband, Fuad, 72, and their two grown children moved into the building 14 months ago after being driven from their Chouf Mountain home by Druse-Christian fighting.

Huddled with them in the basement is a widow, who gave her name as Mrs. Lawrence Mehrej-Babiuk, 48, and her three daughters, who sought refuge from the shelling of their home nearby.

The families look out on the fighting from the basement of a building that is used as a firing post by the Lebanese army and rightist Christian Phalange Party fighters.

To the west is St. Michael's Church, the focal point of fighting since Thursday, and the adjacent positions of the Shiite Moslem Amal militia.

"The local militias are not our enemies, even those who are now shelling us," said Emil Khoury, 33. "They are puppets in the hands of other nations."

Shiite militia repels army from city's entrance

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite militiamen pushed army troops back from a fiercely contested entrance to Beirut on Saturday. The militia commander called on Moslem Cabinet ministers to resign and urged Moslems in the Lebanese army to lay down their arms.

Police said 58 people were killed and 154 wounded in ground fighting and three days of shelling attacks on Christian, Shiite and Druse areas since fighting broke out Thursday at the Galerie Semaan highway entrance. Fires burned out of control in many areas Saturday and police said thousands of people hid in basements and bomb shelters.

Nabih Berri's call raised fears the 37,000-man army, trained and equipped by the United States, might disintegrate along sectarian lines. Shiites are the largest single religious group in the army's enlisted ranks.

Berri claimed that one brigade of soldiers in west Beirut and another in the Bekaa Valley of east Lebanon had refused to take part in the fighting. The government made no comment on the claims. There are about 2,200 men in a Lebanese brigade.

Berri heads Amal, the dominant paramilitary group among the 1 million Shiite Moslems who make up the largest single religious sect in Lebanon.

The army has failed in three days of bitter fighting to win back a key position at the Galerie Semaan from Amal militiamen.

An Associated Press reporter and photographer saw army troops, fighting with U.S.-made tanks, driven back by Amal troops backed by mortars and anti-aircraft guns.

Amal militiamen pushed army units about 150 to 200 yards east from the embattled St. Michael's Church.

The army used U.S.-made M-48 tanks to pound sandbagged Amal positions at the church entrance and adjacent smoke-blackened buildings.

Shiites hammered army tank lines with mortar and anti-aircraft fire, shielding the ground push toward an abandoned school the army had turned into a sniper post. As the Shiites fired, army troops retreated from around the building.

A Lebanese soundman for CBS news suffered shrapnel wounds in one shoulder on Saturday when his crew tried to film the fighting.

Berri, speaking at a news conference in mostly Moslem west Beirut, called on "all Moslem and nationalist Cabinet ministers" to resign.

"Army officers, noncommissioned officers and soldiers are called upon to take no part in any operation against their own people," Berri said, referring to Moslem military men. He urged them to "join neutral barracks in northern, eastern or central Lebanon if the need arises."

Rebels dynamite major power lines

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels attacked military patrols and dynamited four power lines, blacking out electrical service to about 250,000 people in northern El Salvador, military sources said Saturday.

A military spokesman, who asked that his name not be used for security reasons, said a guerrilla group sabotaged the nation's power grid at a point 18 miles north of the capital early Saturday.

The blackout left dozens of communities in Chalatenango province and part of San Salvador province without electricity, running water and other power-driven services, but did not affect San Salvador, the capital.

Power lines and other electrical installations have been favorite targets of the guerrillas since they launched a civil war in October 1979.

Venezuela no longer center of anti-American fervor

By GEORGE GEDDA

An Analysis

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The fierce anti-Americanism that saw crowds of Yankee-haters mob the motorcade of Vice President Richard Nixon 26 years ago has clearly gone out of fashion in Venezuela.

Witness the visit last week of Secretary of State George P. Shultz, which came off with nary a ripple of protest.

To Venezuelans, Shultz was just another of the hundreds of dignitaries who came to this once-volatile capital to attend the inauguration Thursday of another democratically elected president, Jaime Lusinchi, the sixth since 1959.

There were no cheers for Shultz, but neither was there the intense hostility that threatened Nixon, who barely escaped with his life when a mob surrounded his limousine during a visit in 1958.

Eleven years later, fearful of a repeat performance, the Venezuelan government canceled a scheduled visit by Nelson A. Rockfeller, who was on a fact-finding tour of the region on behalf of Nixon, who was president.

More than any other single action, Venezuela's nationalization of U.S. oil company interests a decade ago defused anti-Americanism.

With that act, no longer were profits from Venezuela's most valuable resource enriching American capitalists.

For the majority of Venezuelans, the Cuban model has less appeal than it once did. Leftist forces have the allegiance of about 10 percent of the electorate, but they operate peacefully within the democratic system.

The Marxist guerrilla movement faded out a decade ago.

What the Reagan administration hopes is that democracy can take root in Central America much as it has in Venezuela.

Sandinista leader blames U.S. for air raids

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Sandinista leader Daniel Ortega on Saturday blamed the United States for two air raids that killed five soldiers and seriously wounded 10 at military installations in northwestern Nicaragua.

Speaking at a news conference, Ortega also indicated preparations for scheduled 1985 national elections would continue, and said rebel attacks were the main hindrance to the process.

He was asked if the attacks could delay the elections and replied, "We have said the problem of aggression is the principal one, but this does not prevent for the time being that we continue institutionalizing the revolution." He did not elaborate.

Ortega, coordinator of the ruling three-man junta, repeated the Sandinista government's promise that all political parties will be given access to all news media for campaigning, and that the government will finance 5 percent of the parties' campaign costs. He said parties also will be allowed to receive donations from outside Nicaragua.

State denies ambassador's allegations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is denying as "simply not true" allegations by a former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador that it ignored evidence that Salvadoran exiles in Miami directed death squads in their home country.

Robert E. White, who was ambassador to El Salvador under Carter, alleged Thursday that the department ignored information about the activities of six named exiles allegedly linked to the death squads.

"That is simply not true," said Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Snow stretching from the Canadian border through New England and to parts of Kentucky, western Virginia and Pennsylvania is forecast for today by the National Weather Service.

'Gusty' winds forecast today for Midland area

It might be a good idea to seal the windows and doors today, as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is forecasting northerly winds of up to 20 mph "and gusty."

It will also be colder today, with a high in the mid-50s and a low tonight in the mid-20s, under partly cloudy skies. The high Monday, again under partly skies, will be in the mid-50s.

Friday's high of 57 was far from the record of 78, set in 1962. And Saturday's low of 28 came no where near the record low of 11, which was established in 1982.

No precipitation has been recorded this month.

STATE

A weak cold front moved quickly through Texas early Saturday with minimal effect, but a companion cold front is due to arrive at mid-day Sunday and could be severe, the National Weather Service said.

"This front will not sneak through. It comes from the northwest territories of Canada, where cold means cold," a meteorologist for the weather station in San Antonio said Saturday night.

Temperatures were in the uppers 60s and lower 70s across Texas on Saturday, despite the weak front that moved through. Those mild conditions should continue through Sunday morning before the mercury begins dropping rapidly, weather observers said.

NATION

Strong, gusty wind whipped light snow over eastern North Dakota on Saturday while a winter storm watch was issued for Upper Michigan.

In addition to blowing, drifting snow in North Dakota, the wind was expected to drop the wind chill factor to near 50 degrees below zero during the night.

Snow showers were reported Saturday over the Great Lakes, the upper Mississippi Valle and from Illinois through Indiana.

Upper Michigan was warned of possibly locally heavy snow and cold temperatures Sunday, with the heaviest snow expected near Lake Superior.

Snow flurries were widely scattered over western Missouri and Kansas and from southeastern Washington into northwestern Utah.

Rain was scattered over New England and from eastern Virginia across eastern North Carolina.

FORECAST

Today should be fair and colder. High in low 50s. Northerly winds at 10 to 20 mph and gusty. Partly cloudy tonight. Low in the mid-20s. Monday, partly cloudy. High in mid-50s.

Satellite could have exploded

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An official raised the possibility Saturday that the $75 million Westar VI communications satellite exploded after it was launched from the space shuttle Challenger and is now merely chunks of junk orbiting the Earth.

Bill Ziegler, mission director for Western Union, which owns the satellite, also said later that a faint signal heard by a California ground station may indicate the satellite wasn't destroyed. But he said it was useless anyway because there was no fuel left to send it up to its 22,300-mile-high orbit.

Meanwhile, a second shuttle customer — the government of Indonesia — had NASA postpone Saturday's shuttle launching of Palapa-B, an electronic twin to the Westar VI. When the astronauts went to bed, they were told that no decision had been reached whether to release it on Sunday or Monday, or bring it back home.

Another decision hinged on the second launching: whether the Challenger should stay up an extra day to accommodate the delay. On Tuesday and Thursday, mission specialists Robert Stewart and Bruce McCandless are to don back packs and perform the first space walk without a lifeline.

The North American Aerospace Defense Command said its huge radars in California and Florida determined that "two of the objects are large enough to be the satellite" and said the pieces are in the same general orbit as Challenger.

That would indicate the rocket firing that was to take Westar VI from the Challenger's 190-mile orbit to one 22,300 miles high may have spun the satellite in place like a pinwheel. The solid state fuel used in Westar's rocket stage burns until it is exhausted; there is no way the engine shuts down once the fuel is ignited.

AP Laserphoto

The Westar VI satellite, lost in space Friday, is show before its installation in Challenger's cargo bay.

With no fuel, "there is virtually no chance of it being useful ... we could never get it up to geosynchronous orbit," Ziegler said.

A tracking station operated by Hughes Aircraft Co., in Fillmore, Calif., "received two minutes of signal from an object trailing the orbiter" about 1 p.m. EST, but it was so weak that antennas could not lock on it, Ziegler said.

"It was a signal of the type we would expect," he said.

Asked whether he thinks the satellite has been found, Ziegler replied: "Probably."

NORAD said the largest piece it tracked is at least 690 miles behind Challenger and poses no danger to the ship and its five-man crew "at present," and that the closest approach for 24 hours is greater than 31 miles.

"Based on the number of pieces that have been detected, it appears the Westar VI satellite did not have a successful transfer to synchronous orbit after departing the payload bay of the orbiter," NORAD said.

"At the present time we have no way of determining the actual condition of the satellite or what caused this situation to occur." The shuttle, minus its booster rockets and fuel tank, is referred to as an orbiter.

A synchronous, or stationary, orbit means that a satellite is at 22,300 miles altitude over the equator. There, its speed matches that of Earth, making it appear stationary over one point.

The military trackers, who catalogue all manmade objects in near space, said the largest piece is between 9 and 12 square feet. Westar VI was 9 feet 3 inches high and 7 feet in diameter when it left the Challenger cargo bay. Extended, it is 21 feet, 8 inches high.

"We attempted to communicate with some of those objects without any success today," Ziegler said. "We are not at all certain these objects are Westar VI or PAM," — the Payload Assist Module, which is pushed out of the cargo bay by powerful springs.

Shuttle astronauts have launched five satellites previously, using the same system.

The shuttle moves eight miles away and turns its underside to the PAM to avoid damage from the rocket blast that comes automatically 45 minutes later. Since the astronauts can't see the firing, the only indication that it is moving as planned comes from telemetry.

On Friday, a ground station thought it had received a signal, but that proved to be false.

Flight controller Randy Stone said NASA checked and rechecked its data and confirmed that the Challenger astronauts were not at fault in the failure of the satellite to move toward an orbit 22,300 miles high.

Rocket pack wasn't really 'new' idea

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The Buck Rogers-like rocket pack that astronauts test this week in space began as idea in the mind of a young engineer more than two decades ago.

In 1961, three years before an American had taken the first hesitant steps outside of an orbiting spacecraft, Charles E. Whitsett Jr. already was thinking of how man could one day fly in limitless space without wings or tethers.

Whitsett, then a young officer at the Air Force Institute of Technology at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio, researched the idea for his master's degree and that started him on a two-decade project of testing and design.

"It looked like it could be done," he said. "We just had to figure out how."

By 1971, he had designed a device called the M509, a backpack that used nitrogen gas jets to move astronauts in weightlessness.

NASA placed the device aboard Skylab and during the course of those three long term flights in 1973 and 1974 the flight pack was tested by five astronauts inside the pressurized cabin of the Skylab. Each astronaut reported the device took little effort to learn and that it could be precisely controlled.

Whitsett left the Air Force in 1977 and NASA hired him to further develop the rocket belt for use by Space Shuttle astronauts.

The result is a backboard-like contraption with arms called the Manned Manuevering Unit. A space-suited astronaut in orbit has but to attach his suit to locking points on the MMU to be able to precisely glide around space with no connection to the space shuttle.

Nitrogen gas fired through 24 jet thrusters provide the propulsion. The jets are controlled with levers on each of the two arms of the MMU.

A minicomputer teamed with a gyroscope on the backpack can automatically fire the jets to hold the astronaut in one position. This will enable an astronaut to do work in space with both hands free while being held relatively motionless.

Whitsett said the automatic hold is essential for the first major job of the MMU. Next April, an astronaut in the device will fly from the space shuttle to the broken Solar Maximum Satellite that is gently rolling in orbit. The astronaut will manuever beside the satellite and fire jets to match the rotation. He'll then attach a grappling handle on the satellite and use the MMU jets to stop the rotation.

The space shuttle's robot arm then can grasp the grapple handle and haul the satellite into the shuttle cargo bay for repairs. Later, the Solar Max will be returned to orbit.

Whitsett is confident his MMU will get the job done.

"It's very easy to fly," he said. "Astronauts can learn to fly it in five minutes. Some of the Skylab astronauts said it became as natural as walking. They didn't have to think about how to get to where they wanted to go — it just became automatic."

The 47-year-old engineer may be the toughest critic of the device. He spent more than 100 hours flying an MMU simulator at the Denver research lab of Martin Marietta Aerospace, the prime contractor who manufactured the back pack.

He learned that astronauts in the MMU free flight will not be zipping around with great speed. The natural, instinctive pace is more like a slow ballet than a breakneck charge, he said.

"You tend to fly at a rate equal to about 1 percent of the distance to the your destination," said Whitsett.

This means, he said, that when astronaut Bruce McCandless cruises out to about 300 feet, he'll be traveling at only about two miles per hour, which is slower than the average walk.

The MMU, by firing all of its gas over a four-minute period, could achieve a maximum speed, said Whitsett, of only about 45 miles an hours.

Dennis the Menace offers young a park full of fun

The couple did more than donate funds — they sent then-Parks and Recreation director Charles Campbell to Monterey for a two-week stay so he could research and obtain permission of the Monterey Jaycees, who sponsored the original park, and Ketcham, to re-create their brainchild.

Ketchum and the Jaycees made only one stipulation: The park must always be free of charge.

For the site already owned by the city of Midland, parks department officials re-designed the original concept to fit the property and West Texas locale. The city appropriated $6,500 additional funds for a fence and parking lot, and another $4,000 for curb and gutter improvements on bordering streets. Playground equipment both similar to and different from the Monterey facility was purchased, and by the fall of 1958 construction had begun.

It reached fruition at 4 p.m. on July 11, 1959, when the park opened to the youngsters of Midland.

Today, the park sports hobby horses, swings with and without safety bars, sand terraces, an airplane slide, tricycle trail, series of climbing bars, wading pool for summertime use, and perhaps its best-known feature — a replica of an open-mouthed lion in which youngsters can sit.

Plans are in the making to renovate the wading area and bathhouse.

It's a site conducive to child-child interaction and one exemplified emotion fills the air — happiness. It's revealed in the laughter of children and in the smiles of their parents — results that doubtless would warm the hearts of Ketcham and the loveable Menace he spawned.

Developer to 'open' his condos

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — The developer of a proposed retirement community for born-again Christians has yeilded to pressure from a Jewish orgnaization and says he will open the suburban Dallas condominiums to people of all faiths.

The proposed development, called Trinity Place, was originally planned to be restricted to people at least 55 years old who were non-smokers, non-drinkers and born-again Christians.

But the Anti-Defamation League accused developer David Termohlen of violating federal housing laws and threatened to oppose his zoning application.

Termohlen will go before the Mesquite City Council on Monday.

County attorney hopefuls address parents' group

"TEXAS IS A HAVEN for debtors — people who want to avoid child-support payments," said Dettman, first assistant to Midland County Attorney Scott Henderson, who is not seeking re-election.

Dettman said that in Texas only 20 percent of parents make timely child-support payments. What's left is 80 percent who either make no payments at all or are late and behind in payments.

"Non-payment of child-support is a criminal offense," he said. Within Texas, the first failure to pay is a misdemeansor offense, which can net jail time for the offenders. If that same person again comes into comtempt, he or she could go to the state penitentiary or be placed on felony probation. If the offending parent lives in another state and fails to pay Texas court-ordered child-support payments, then that parent could be convicted of a felony.

"Garnishment has been a no-no...in Texas from the beginning," said Dettman, who noted that is changing. A Texas Constitutional Amendment last year provided for garnishment of wages once the offending parent gets two months behind in payments.

DETTMAN SAID that parents in contempt of court "miraculously come up with the money" when they suddenly become aware they could be cast into jail for non-payment of child-support. He facetiously, but not altogether, noted that Dallas County has its "magic tunnel" trailing from the district family court to jail and Midland County has its "magic elevator" which goes from court to jail. The court's explanation of how quickly a person can be transported to jail seems to prompt quick payments, he said.

Often the parent in arrears cannot be located by the parent with whom the children are living. Bdt Dettman noted that Midland County has a "tool" to locate parents who are shucking their responsibilities.

The prosecutor, he said, can call on an investigator, in an apparent reference to County Attorney Investigator Charlies Jones, "who can find anybody in Midland."

Once the case becomes criminal, prosecutors have access to the National and Texas Crime Information Centers' computers to locate people by criminal records, hot checks or driver's license.

"They are irresponsible," Dettman said, toward their children and possibly may be in trouble elsewhere.

"WE KNOW WHAT we're looking for," Williams said in making the NCIC and TCIC computer checks, "and we pull him in."

Divorce and child-support cases in Midland are handled by Judge Barbara Culver of the 318th State District Court.

"I think we have the cooperation of Judge Culver," Dettman said. "She's ready to go to work on the garnishment prodecures."

Williams said he and Dettman are concerned about child-support payments and prosecutions.

"I think we probably both do (care)," he said. In their prosecution of family-related cases such as failure to pay child support, a degree of "sensitivity has been acquired."

Family mopping up newspaper reading

By PAMELA BROWNSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. — Louis Kessler and his family are on a crusade to wipe the dirt out of the newspaper business.

Fed up with the grime left on their hands and everything their fingers touched after reading newspapers, the Kessler family has manufactured reading gloves to be worn while flipping the pages.

"The News Stays With You, Not On You," reads the package for the white, cotton, one-size-fits-all gloves made by the family's company, Gloves for the Times Inc.

The Kesslers said they came upon the idea while reading The New York Times, which has no connection to the Kessler company. But Kessler said he hopes the product will serve newspaper readers across the country.

At least 27 newspapers from Los Angeles to El Paso, Texas, to New York are known as the Times. And there is always the Times of London, Kessler notes.

The firm has sold 10,000 to 12,000 pairs since September to stores such as Bloomingdale's, Macy's, Bamberger's and the Broadway department stores in California.

The company sells the gloves to the stores for about $3.50, with retail about $7 to $10. The family spent $10,000 to start the company and expects sales to hit $100,000 in the first year, but have not figured out their profits.

Word of the gloves even reached Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, chairman of The New York Times Co. and the newspaper's publisher. Harris said that after hearing the gloves were a bigger hit in Los Angeles than in New York, Sulzberger sent a note to that effect to a friend at the Los Angeles Times, adding that he had "no comment."

Administration: Haiti improving human rights record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has certified to Congress that the government of Haiti, long regarded as one of the most oppressive regimes in the Western Hemisphere, is improving its human rights record and may receive U.S. aid, officials confirmed Saturday.

The administration is asking Congress to approve $54 million in aid for fiscal 1985, up from $44.7 million in fiscal 1984. The 1985 total includes $750,000 in military assistance.

A statement issued Saturday by the State Department said: "We recognize that serious human rights abuses continue to exist in Haiti. However, on balance, the government of Haiti is making a concerted effort to improve the human rights situation in that country."

BUT A human rights group, the Lawyers Committee for International Human Rights, insisted the Haitian government "has not met standards set forth by Congress as a prerequisite" for aid, particularly in the establishment of political parties, free elections and freedom of the press.

It said the certification for Haiti "makes a mockery" of the legislative requirement.

Michael Posner, executive director of the group, wrote Secretary of State George P. Shultz asking him to withhold certification, but was unsuccessful. The group, which is privately financed, has a long-standing interest in human rights in Haiti and has sent several delegations there, most recently last June.

Shultz declared in a statement sent to Congress last Tuesday but not previously made public that Haiti "is making a concerted and significant effort to improve the human rights situation in Haiti by implementing the political reforms which are essential to the development of democracy in Haiti."

HAITI is the poorest nation in the Western Hemisphere with 77 percent of its more than 5 million people living below an absolute poverty level of $150 per year, according to State Department figures. Per capita income is less than $300.

CONGRESS last year stipulated that the administration must certify Haiti was making progress in several areas, not just in human rights but also toward halting illegal emigration to the United States and cooperating in the implementation of U.S. aid programs.

Thatcher debunks differences

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Saturday she hoped the Soviets would return to the Geneva arms talks soon, but said NATO would not reverse its missile deployment program as an inducement.

At a news conference that ended her first official visit to a Soviet bloc country, she also said President Reagan was "absolutely sincere" in his disarmament efforts and dismissed speculation about differences between the United States and Britain on the arms issue.

"I hope we get them (the Soviets) back to the nuclear disarmament talks," Mrs. Thatcher said, mentioning as a positive sign the March 16 resumption date of the Vienna talks on reducing conventional forces and armaments in Central Europe.

But she said, "I do not yet know the circumstances under which they will come back."

Moscow pulled out of the Geneva talks on reducing nuclear medium-range missiles, after NATO began deploying new U.S. missiles in the first of five West European nations destined to get the weapons.

Asked if the Western Alliance might consider a change in this program to woo the Soviets back, the prime minister replied, "I do not believe we are able to reverse the decision...We cannot reverse the actual deployment of cruise and Pershing missiles (in Western Europe.)"

She reaffirmed the Western view that the deployment came in response to the Soviets' stationing of SS-20 rockets, adding, "We are evening up."

She denied that there are "any differences between the United States and the United Kingdom. We are loyal and devoted members of the Western Alliance."

"Mr. Reagan is absolutely sincere in his desire to see disarmament agreements as long as they are achieved in a balanced and verifiable way," she stressed.

Regarding the chances of improved East-West relations, she cautioned "the process will be inevitably slow..."

Disarmament and East-West relations were the main topics of her talks with Hungarian Premier Gyoergy Lazar and Communist Party chief Janos Kadar on Friday.

Mrs. Thatcher said Saturday it was too early for a U.S.-Soviet top-level meeting — "a lot of groundwork needs to be done before one approaches such a summit meeting."

While expressing her satisfaction over her Hungarian trip, she indicated that no further trips to Soviet bloc countries were in immediate prospect.

Before meeting the press, Mrs. Thatcher toured a market in Budapest and went on a sightseeing tour north of the Hungarian capital.

Private sector aids firm in embryo transfer

CHICAGO (AP) — When Richard Seed mused about transferring a human embryo from a fertile woman to an infertile one 10 years ago, he frightened enough of his employees that some begged his brother to make him stop thinking out loud.

The failing business, Embryo Transfer Corp., already was doing exactly that with cattle, but many of his associates couldn't make the ethical leap to humans.

"Like many things 10 years ago, that was unacceptable to discuss," said Randolph Seed, Richard's brother. He was one of the three men who founded Fertility & Genetics Research Inc., based in Chicago. The company funded research that has resulted in the world's first baby born from an egg fertilized in one woman and donated to another woman for a normal pregnancy.

The brothers designed and conducted many of the pilot studies involved in the project, although most of the practical work was done at Harbor-UCLA Medical School, to which FGR provided about $3 million for the 1½ years of work.

When Richard Seed, 55, a nuclear physicist, and Randolph, 50, a general surgeon, began Embryo Transfer Corp., the procedure for transferring embyros required two major operations — one to extract the fertilized eggs from cows, another to implant them.

THE IDEA WAS THAT several cows could carry offspring from one genetically superior cow, producing more valuable calves than if the one cow had to do all the work.

But even though the two Harvard-educated scientists had no shortage of customers, their effort failed "for lack of business acumen."

"Financially, it was unsuccessful, but technologically it was a success," recalled Randolph. "We weren't too sharp, business-wise. I remember one time when we extracted about 40 fertilized eggs from one cow that resulted in about 12 pregnancies.

"A month after that the farmer who owned the cow hired away some of our people and went into business for himself. The whole business was like that. We were being taken right and left."

Despite the failure, the brothers were encouraged that they were facing the right direction, and began eyeing the application of the procedure to humans.

"But the first thing we learned was that there was a moratorium on federal funding on infertility. My guess is that the opposition stemmed from religious or moral feelings," said Randolph.

"IT'S BEEN SAID THAT nobody dies from infertility and that was the sentiment of lawmakers. Congress is basically a bunch of elderly men and so they were funding things that affect elderly men — cancer and the like."

The two turned to the private sector and found a willing listener in Lawrence Sucsy. What the brothers lacked in business sense, Sucsy, 47, head of a Chicago investment firm specializing in medicine, high technology and computers, more than made up for.

Although the birth of a healthy baby boy to a woman who became the first successful embryo-transfer patient was announced just Friday, the genetics research firm already is gearing up for an estimated 50,000 such procedures to be performed annually at clinics in Long Beach, Calif., Texas, New York and Chicago, said Sucsy.

He estimated an embryo transfer now would cost a couple $4,000 to $7,000 a try. But as the program grows and more clinics are established, he predicts the method will become less expensive.

FGR has applied for patents on its procedure and special tools "much like Polaroid would patent a new process or camera," he said.

THE COMPANY'S 1983 revenues of $500,000, which stemmed from research income, made it "marginally profitable," said Sucsy, FGR's chairman and chief executive officer.

But the Seed brothers say the future holds nearly unlimited promise.

"So far, we've only put money out and never saw it come back," said Randolph Seed. "If it does make us rich, that would be pleasant. Neither my brother nor I ever conceived it as a way to get rich, but we certainly wouldn't object to it."

Agents to begin joint inspections

SAN DIEGO (AP) — To speed the flow of traffic, U.S. and Mexican customs agents will begin joint inspections of commercial vehicles crossing the international border, officials say.

The estimated 1,900 trucks that cross the border each day will stop at checkpoints on both sides of the border under the plan, scheduled to begin this year, Alan J. Rappoport, district director of the U.S. Customs Service, said Friday.

Each truck traveling between California and Baja California will be inspected in Mexico and the United States by officials of both countries. Rappoport said the joint inspections could slash from 30 minutes to a full day from the time it takes to carry commodities across the border.

Teamster official faces prison

CLEVELAND (AP) — An administrator of the Teamsters Union Local 436 faces up to 26 years in prison and $80,000 in fines after pleading guilty to taking kickbacks.

U.S. District Judge George W. White set no date for sentencing David E. Kerr Jr., 40, who pleaded guilty Friday to eight counts of taking kickbacks.

Court testimony indicated that Kerr solicited kickbacks from employers who used Local 436 truck drivers. The drivers would then underreport the number of hours worked or drivers used, and employers could avoid required contributions to the union's pension and welfare fund.

Fire kills four family members

GREEN SPRINGS, Ohio (AP) — Four family members died early Saturday when fire struck their farm home in northern Seneca County, fire officials said.

Old Fort Volunteer Fire Chief Ralph Joseph identified the victims as James Lynch, 43; his wife, Judy, 38; and their children, 12-year-old Jennifer and 11-year-old Jeffrey.

Joseph said a passer-by spotted the blaze and called the fire department at 3:07 a.m. He said paramedics administered first aid to the victims, but he didn't know whether any were alive by the time help arrived.

Subaru recalls cars, trucks

DETROIT (AP) — Subaru of America Inc. has recalled 78,000 cars and trucks from the 1979 model year to fix a problem with pollution-control systems.

The recall, involving exhaust hoses that can clog, affects mostly cars and some light pickups, Subaru said in a statement Friday. It did not have a breakdown of the figures.

The Japanese company said the recall involves all the vehicles it sold in the United States that model year, except those sold in California, Arizona, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Four children killed in fire

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — An early morning house fire Saturday claimed the lives of four children left unattended in their east Albany home, authorities said.

Albany Fire Capt. D.D. Ruffin identified the four as 6-month-old Contessa Randell, 2-year-old Dehaver Randell, 3-year-old Bobby Randell and 8-year-old Kimora Randell.

Ruffin said there were no adults at home when the fire broke out about 12:45 a.m. Two other children managed to escape, but the four siblings were found dead in a front bedroom after firefighters extinguished the blaze. The cause of the fire was being investigated.

Installation of detectors delayed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Installation of new wind shear detectors is being delayed three months while the company building them works out bugs in the system, according to the Federal Aviation Administration coordinator for the New Orleans area.

Five sensors to detect low-level wind shear were to be added this month to the six now at the airport, but Dan C. Gardner said the installation date has been pushed back to early May.

Wind shear is a sudden change in wind speed and direction — usually occurring during sudden, violent thunderstorms. It can rob an airplane's wings of lift, sometimes causing it to stall and crash.

Nine children found dead in house fire

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Nine children ranging in age from 14 months to 10 years were killed early today when fire raging through their home trapped them on the second floor, said fire Capt. Lloyd Hanson.

A man and seven other youngsters who had been in the house when the fire broke out managed to escape, Hanson said. The unidentified man "was walking around the neighborhood in a daze," he said.

A neighbor reported the fire at 7:45 a.m. and when firemen arrived "there was smoke coming out of all the windows, cracks and crevices" of the two-story, wooden home, said fire Lt. Arnie Johnson.

Initial reports indicated the victims were members of two families, Hanson said. They may have died of smoke inhalation, he said.

"We had a report there were kids in the building. We saw smoke coming out of the upstairs windows and flames coming out of one window," said paramedic Scott Whiting, 26, who suffered burned ears. "There was heavy smoke inside and we couldn't see. Flames were halfway down the stairwell."

Paramedic Brett Heisler said he and Whiting, breathing from air tanks, doused the stairwell fire and felt their way to the charred second story, where he found the body of an infant girl on a bedroom floor.

"It's tragic. She was about a year old and I've got a little girl who's not much older than that," Heisler said in an interview.

He rushed the child outside but could not revive her. By then, other fireman were carrying bodies out "one after another," Heisler said.

"Three kids were burned enough so there was no way they could be alive. I checked all nine. I'd say they all died of smoke inhalation," he said.

The cause of the blaze was not immediately known but preliminary indications were that it started accidentally, Hanson said.

The home, in a residential area on Tacoma's south side, was built entirely of wood without fire retardant materials, said Hanson, who called it "a place waiting for a fire to happen."

The identities of the victims were not immediately released.

1983 highway fatalities lowest in two decades

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traffic deaths fell to their lowest level in two decades last year, but highway safety experts disagree over how much of the decline should be attributed to campaigns against drunken driving.

The Transportation Department said 43,028 people died on the nation's highways during 1983, a 2.1 percent drop from the year before, when the number of traffic deaths plummeted by 10 percent.

Last year's drop in traffic deaths came as driving increased, resulting in a decline in the traffic fatality rate to 2.6 fatalities for every 100,000 vehicle miles driven — the lowest rate ever recorded.

"These statistics show clearly that you can save lives by focusing sharply on improved highway safety," Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said in a statement. She concluded that "a national resolve to put a halt to drunken driving" played a major role in the decline.

But other safety officials said that while stronger laws against drunken driving and stricter enforcement resulted in reductions in traffic fatalities in some areas, there is no evidence that they are having a nationwide impact.

"There have been large decreases (in traffic fatalities) in states that did not wage such campaigns, and even in some areas where there have been tough crackdowns the death tolls are going back up again," said William Haddon, president of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

A sharp drop in traffic deaths in 1982 was widely attributed to the recession, which held down the number of miles driven. Haddon believes some of that extended over to 1983.

"Our analysis of fatality figures shows the downward trend has reversed in recent months, and we believe the bulk of the change during the last two years has resulted from the recession," Haddon said in a telephone interview.

Figures from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration show that on a year-by-year comparison monthly highway fatalities dropped or remained essentially the same from January through August, 1983.

They increased 2.7 percent in September, stayed essential constant in October and increased again in November. A drop of nearly 4 percent was recorded in December.

Deficits too much for comfort

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan unveiled his deficit-swollen blueprint for the 1985 budget last week, but in no time at all some of his key advisers made it clear the Reagan team didn't have its heart in it.

Even the president seemed to be shying away from the budget and its enormous deficits projected years into the future. He described the red ink as "totally unacceptable" but said he wouldn't offer a solution until next year — after the election.

And, a long-simmering feud between presidential economist Martin Feldstein and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan boiled over, with Regan contending, "I support this budget; apparently he doesn't."

The result is a sense of confusion — within the administration and in Congress, on Wall Street and on Main Street — over the newly released budget document and whether it is even meant to be taken seriously.

The problem is seen as stemming from the administration's growing frustration with the troublesome deficits and, perhaps more important, its distaste for politically risky steps to tackle the deficit problem in an election year.

"There is disarray in the administration," said Thomas Thomson, chief economist for San Francisco's Crocker National Bank.

"No one — in the administration or in Congress — can afford to make the tough decisions this year" to reduce the deficits, he added.

Indeed, Reagan acknowledged in the White House's economic report to Congress that political considerations played a part in the fresh budget plan for the fiscal year that starts on Oct. 1.

He noted Congress' unwillingness to accept his previous fiscal guides and said it was "clear to me that we must wait until after this year's election to enact spending reductions coupled with tax simplification that will eventually eliminate our budget deficit."

Even before the unveiling of the budget plan, the president called on Congress to join the administration in bipartisan negotiations to try to fashion a $100 billion "downpayment" over three years to wash away some of the red ink. The deficit hit a record $195.4 billion in 1983 and it's projected at $180.4 billion in the 1985 budget plan.

Both current and former government officials agreed it was unusual for a president to call — in advance of the release of his budget proposal — for negotiations with congressional leaders.

"In the Carter administration, we waited at least two months before we jumped our own budget," said Charles Schultze, who was chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers in the previous administration.

PEOPLE BREATHE BETTER IN A CLEAN HOME

Manuel Ribera

As owner of Handy Man Company and King's Castle, it has been a great pleasure working with the community of Midland. When I started Handy Man Company in January of 1981, my goal was to meet the needs of working people, knowing that they had no time to work in their own houses because of the time spent in the office and other activities. Since then, we have done room additions, concrete slabs, storage rooms, and many installations. This Spring and Summer we will be building Gazebos and orders are now being taken.

With the economy as it is many construction companies and remodeler have moved to other locations. As a native, I'm here to stay and Handy man will always be here to help with special building needs.

Many women who have full time jobs outside their home find it very depressing to return each day to a messy house. This is where King's Castle, complete maid service, comes in. Connie, my sister, is in charge of that department and customers have been completely satisfied with her service. We have never lost a customer since the business was stated in November 1983. King's Castle offers one time, weekly or bi-weekly maid service. With this I close: Husbands, Love your wives and remember to call Handy Man Company and King's Castle.

Reagan visit helping hometown

DIXON, Ill. (AP) — You don't need to know that Ronald Reagan spent a dozen years growing to manhood here to realize that Dixon sees itself as a bit distinct from the rest of small-town America.

The clue is a white, metal arch that spans Galena Avenue, rising to 20 feet at its apex. The 2-foot-tall, neon letters say: D-I-X-O-N.

It dominates. It symbolizes Dixon's pride.

Until three years ago, the arch, built in 1919 to honor World War I veterans, was the trademark of this city of 15,800 residents. But in January 1981, the town gained a new identity.

Ronald Reagan, who moved to Dixon in 1920 at the age of 9, had become the 40th president of the United States.

On Monday, 63 years and two months after John and Nelle Reagan and their sons, Neil and Ron, moved here from Tampico, 25 miles away, the Republican president returns to celebrate his 73rd birthday.

It'll be a $60,000 party folks here won't soon forget, and one they hope will put Dixon solidly into the national consciousness as the boyhood home of President Reagan.

Reagan's effect on Dixon and its way of life gets mixed reviews.

The mayor said it's been minimal. Only 10,000 people signed the register in 1981 at the newly restored home at 816 S. Hennepin St., where Reagan lived from 1920-1924, he said.

Mae McClerndon, owner of the town's "official" Reagan souvenir shop — a few yards from the arch — sees it differently.

"We have had tourists from all over the world come in here in the last three years," she said. "Locally, I would say most of the residents probably haven't noticed the number of tourists, but I have because I see them. They all come here."

To help those visitors get a glimpse of the town's hero, Mrs. McClerndon commissioned drawings from local schoolchildren — to be taped to the shop's restroom walls.

"Don't laugh," she said. "The bathroom here is probably the most visited place in town by tourists. And the tourists get a big kick out of the posters."

Curator Lynn Knights stands outside the home where Reagan lived between 1920 and 1924 in Dixon, Ill.

One poster of Reagan, drawn two years ago by Nathan Burrs, now a fifth grader, reads: "He saved my grandma. I like you."

Reagan is credited with saving 77 lives while working as a lifeguard on the Rock River.

Mayor Dixon, Mrs. McClerndon and others are convinced Reagan's four-hour visit, besides causing a surge in the local economy from the thousands of visitors, also will prompt a long-lasting increase in tourism.

"First of all, if it's done well and the president is pleased with his reception, then he will retain a good memory of his hometown and talk about it.

School sells South African stock

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Wesleyan University will sell all of its stock in a mining company because of the firm's role in the racially divided nation of South Africa, the school's board of trustees decided unanimously Saturday.

Wesleyan's 12,000 shares in the New York-based Newmont Mining Corp. are valued at $580,500, Associate Treasurer Robert Taylor said.

The 29-member board noted the economic support that mining companies give to the white supremacist political and economical systems in South Africa.

They also cited Newmont's failure to "pursue a sufficiently active role in working to remove the walls of discrimination and to provide significant opportunities for its black workers."

It is only the second time the small, liberal-arts school has gotten rid of a company's stock because of involvement in South Africa. The first was in 1980, when the trustees voted to sell off the school's stock in Standard Oil of California.

CLOSING DOCUMENTS

After all the house buying details have been taken care of, you will finally come to the closing of the transaction. There will be two very important documents given to you, the buyer- the mortgage and the deed.

The buyer will be signing two papers for the mortgage. One is the note, which is a personal promise to pay back the debt. The other is the mortgage itself, which gives the lender a claim against your house if you do not pay back as agreed. Then the lender will give you a check (probably the largest you'll ever see.) You get to hold it just long enough to endorse it and turn it over to the seller.

Actual transfer of the property takes place when the seller signs the deed and hands it over to the buyer. After the closing, someone will have the deed copied into the public records. It will probably be sent to you later. If no is available to record the deed, talk to the county clerk end do it yourself - immediately. Recording the deed promptly is of utmost importance.

Prosecutors focusing on possible motives in case against nurse Jones

GEORGETOWN (AP) — After three weeks of often tedious technical testimony, the case against nurse Genene Jones will tighten this week, prosecutors say, as a motive emerges.

Officials have remained tight-lipped throughout the case about their theories of possible motives. But at week's end, the story they plan to tell was slowly emerging.

Based on courtroom hints and hallway chats, the story that will be played out before a jury Monday and Tuesday will apparently go something like this:

Ms. Jones injected a powerful muscle relaxant into high-risk infants to temporarily halt their breathing and muscle tension. She would then try to revive the infants in hopes of appearing a "hero" to doctors and other nurses.

"We've gotten some tidbits into the record that, on their own, don't mean anything and probably passed right over the jury, but it will all make sense when we tie everything together," said Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton, the lead prosecutor.

Sutton forecast "some suprises" yet to come, and acknowledged the "hero" theory is their best guess as to a motive.

"We think we can go beyond that, too," he said.

Ms. Jones, 33, is being tried in the Sept. 17, 1982, death of Chelsea McClellan, a 15-month-old girl who died after two injections from the vocational nurse.

Prosecutors say she injected succinylcholine, a powerful muscle relaxant that they believe killed Chelsea.

"Just stick it out until the end (of prosecution witnesses). You'll see," said Nick Rothe, Bexer County assistant district attorney.

On Thursday, Sutton filled in a calendar of Ms. Jones' employment at the office of Kerrville pediatrician Dr. Kathleen Holland. The calendar showed the days Chelsea visited the office, the days five other children were stricken while under the nurse's care, the days the office was closed and even five days of hospitalization for Ms. Jones.

"That's what this is — filling in the calendar," said Rothe when asked if prosecutors were beginning to focus on motive.

The state's case aginst Ms. Jones should be completed Monday or Tuesday, Rothe and Sutton said. Defense attorneys will tlen begin presenting their version of Chelsea's death.

Sutton took the calendar one dramatic step further when he, with Ms. Holland's testimony and medical records, produced a chart illustrating Ms. Jones' suspicious record at Ms. Holland's office.

The chart showed that, during Ms. Jones' employment in Ms. Holland's office, all five infants younger than 2-years who had a history of illness and who were subjected to intraveneous solutions or injections prepared by Ms. Jones inexplicably went limp and stopped breathing.

Chelsea was the only one who died.

Defense attorney Burt Carnes objected to the chart. But Sutton, in one of the few courtroom hints to prosecutors intentions, angrily responded, "This goes to show the motive and the intent of Genene Jones."

Sutton explained: "Every time she got the opportunity on a child with the right symptomology, that child was down."

Defense attorneys have maintained that Ms. Jones did not inject infants with dangerous drugs, and further that succinylcholine was not the cause of Chelsea's death.

A gag order issued by state district Judge John Carter has tempered attorney's comments. Both sides have kept their cards close to the vest.

Earlier in the week, Sutton and Rothe won the judge's permission to introduce evidence about six children whose episodes of limpness and loss of breathing resulted in injury-to-a-child indictments against Ms. Jones.

Again, prosecutors argued the evidence was important to their efforts at establishing a motive.

Publisher writes movies, not books

AUSTIN (AP) — A spiritless landscape of junk yards, truck stops and fast-food joints flies past the car window, and the interstate stretches out in a no-nonsense line up the middle of Texas, 200 miles between Austin and Dallas.

Bill Witliff is making the drive for the dozenth time. He is shuttling back and forth on business for his publishing firm in Austin.

But Witliff isn't thinking about business, or the highway.

He is watching a movie — the one that is playing in his mind.

"I was driving back and forth, back and forth to Dallas. The seed of a story my grandfather told me came up in my mind and I started playing with it. Because I was driving and not writing, I would be seeing it.

"I don't know how many trips I made to Dallas, and every time I got in the car, it would start again. By the time I finished with all that, I had seen the whole thing, so I sat down and it was very natural to write it as a screenplay."

Ten years later Witliff, 42, is seated in an office in the big, old house that is home for Encino Press. Lining the walls are books, of course, but also posters for movies that Witliff wrote — "The Black Stallion," "Raggedy Man," and the one based on the tale his grandfather told him — "Barbarosa."

"I tried all the various things and never had anything work for me. No form really worked for me until I hit the screenplay."

—Bill Witliff
Publisher

WITLIFF SAID HE HAD wanted to write from "early, early on." A love of books led Witliff and his wife, Sally, to start their own publishing company when the two were just out of college.

But as the little company grew, publishing works of other Texas authors, Witliff's own attempts to write short stories and novels led only to frustration.

"I tried all the various things and never had anything work for me," he says in his soft-spoken, direct way. "No form really worked for me until I hit the screenplay."

He had never even seen a screenplay, but sat down and wrote "Barbarosa" from the story his grandfather had told about an old man who wore his hair long to cover ears that had been cut off for stealing horses.

The work was "primitive," he said, but his friend, screenwriter Bud Shrake, picked it up and read it. Shrake sent it to his agent. Witliff had found his medium and his screenplays began to sell.

Though he optioned several scripts, the first to be produced was "Thaddeus Rose and Eddie," a 1978 made-for-television movie about two aging Texas good ol' boys. It featured the acting debut of Johnny and June Carter Cash.

Admirers of that script asked Witliff to write the screenplay for a film they were producing, "The Black Stallion."

The picture, Witliff said, was "probably fashioned more in the editing room than it was on paper." But Witliff was responsible for some of the movie's notable departures from the Walter Farley book it was based on, such as the mystical opening scenes of the boy and his father on a ship in the Mediterranean, and the father's tale to his son about the legend of Alexander the Great and his horse, Bucephalus.

Witliff said he wanted the boy and the father alone in a remote place so that when the father died, the bond between the boy and the horse that saved him would be even stronger.

WITH THE SUCCESS of "The Black Stallion" behind him, Witliff saw two more of his scripts go into production.

Willie Nelson read "Barbarosa," the story of a border bandit enshrined in legend as a sort of god, but who in reality was only a two-bit thief, and according to Witliff, read a couple of pages and announced, "I want to be that guy."

While "Barbarosa" was being shot in West Texas, another Witliff screenplay was filming in Maxwell, Texas.

"Raggedy Man" was about Witliff's mother. A divorcee with two young sons, she was the sole telephone operator in Gregory, Texas, during World War II.

Sissy Spacek starred as the strong but lonely woman, stranded in a dead-end job in a small town. Sam Shepard played the Raggedy Man, a mysterious rag-picker who wanders in the background until the end of the movie, when he appears in the middle of the night to save the family from two hoodlums.

The Raggedy Man, it turns out, is the boys' missing father.

"My fantasy was that my father wanted to be with us but couldn't because of whatever reason," Witliff said. "I suppose what 'Raggedy Man' was to me was a way of trying to say thank you to my mother, because until I was older I didn't know what a rough time it was for her, and from a personal standpoint it was probably an effort to exorcise whatever feelings I had for my father."

Former stepson charged in newstand bombing death

DALLAS (AP) — A 35-year-old man has been charged with the murder of his former stepfather who was killed instantly when a booby-trapped newspaper vending machine exploded as he opened it.

Billy Jeff Cornett, 35, was arraigned at midnight Friday before Criminal District Court Magistrate Charles McClure who set bail at $200,000.

Ward S. Keeton, 60, was killed early on the morning of Jan. 26 as he tried to buy a copy of the Dallas Morning News near his north Dallas apartment, investigators said. Police had at first said he was the victim of a random attack.

But early Thursday, Keeton's former stepson and Cornett's nephew, Marshall Dewayne Williams, 21, turned himself in to police, said Dallas police spokesman Bob Shaw. Shaw said information given by Williams led to Cornett's arrest.

Police say physical evidence links Cornett and Williams, a security guard from Mesquite, to the killing, but say they have established no motive.

Cornett, of League City, was taken into custody in LaMarque later Thursday and was returned to Dallas Friday. He was questioned until 9 p.m. Friday.

Williams, who was being held on a charge of investigation of murder under $50,000, was questioned until early in the morning Saturday but not formally charged.

"At this point we have not filed a case (on Williams) and have not made a final determination if a case will be filed," said police homicide Lt. Ron Waldrop. "Our investigation is continuing."

Neighbors said Keeton went to the Dallas Morning News vending box at about the same time every morning. He was killed at 5:15 a.m., less than half an hour after the box had been filled with papers.

Former community college classmates of Keeton said he had told them two years ago that he worked undercover for the government, infiltrating the Ku Klux Klan and the American Nazi Party.

A spokesman for the FBI said Keeton was "known to" the agency but would not elaborate.

Investors contributed to legislator

DALLAS (AP) — State Sen. Ted B. Lyon Jr., whose law firm handled dozens of incorporations for investors in controversial condominium projects, received more than $30,000 in contributions from the investors in 1983, campaign records show.

Contributions from investors in condominium projects along Interstate 30 represented more than one-fourth of the total contributions to the Friends of Senator Lyon Committee, according to the committee's report filed with the Texas Secretary of State in Austin.

The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday that some of Lyon's campaign contributors were among investors whose companies were incorporated by Lyon's firm, and at least three of them donated $1,000 or more.

State and federal authorities are investigating financing arrangements for the condominium projects in the Dallas suburb of Mesquite. The real estate transactions and loans led to a gult of condominiums in the area.

Lyon's campaign report shows a total of $120,312.75 raised by the committee in 1983 — a non-election year. About 28 percent of the total, or $33,750, was contributed by 16 investors and developers in the I-30 corridor east of Dallas, according to the report filed Jan. 19.

Lyon has filed for re-election in the state Senate district that stretches from eastern Dallas County to Tyler. He said Friday that the campaign contributions were unrelated to his law firm's work for Kitco and the condominium investors.

"Those people (who made contributions) are all involved in businesses that have a lot of other things to do other than investments in the I-30 corridor," Lyon said.

Ex-mental patient jailed in shooting

HOUSTON (AP) — A 28-year-old former mental patient remained in jail without bond Saturday on charges he killed a customer at a gasoline station who refused to surrender his car keys, police said.

Anthony Lowe, of Cleburne, was charged late Friday with capital murder in the death of Dick Yee Chin, 64, said the Harris County district attorney's office.

Homicide Detective Carl Kent said Chin died because "he was in the wrong place at the wrong time."

Lowe, who told witnesses he was a policeman and a CIA agent, went to an Exxon station on Houston's eastside Friday morning and asked for a job, Kent said.

A few moments later, Chin, owner of Nee Hao Restaurant, stopped at the station on his way to work, Kent said. As he was paying for the gasoline, Lowe grabbed pulled a .38-caliber pistol and grabbed Chin's arm, he said.

Lucky Ward, a 19-year-old station employee, told police Lowe accused Chin of stealing his car.

"He (Chin) was scared just like the rest of us. He didn't know what was going on," Ward said.

Lowe, Chin, Ward and two other station employees went into the station office. Chin was screaming, "Help me. Help me. I didn't steal no car. This man's crazy," Ward said.

Ward said he managed to slip out of the office and get to a phone booth to call police. He said as he walked back to the office, he heard a gunshot and saw Chin collapse.

Two other employees wrestled the pistol from Lowe, threw him to the ground and held him until officers arrived, Kent said.

Lowe's mother told investigators her son was released a week ago from an Austin psychiatric ward where he had been examined in connection with another charge against him in Harris County.

"His mother said he had been in and out of mental institutions the last eight years," Kent said.

Lowe was arrested in 1982 on a tresspassing charge, Kent said. As he was being booked, Lowe jumped a police officer and was charged with aggravated assualt. The case was delayed until psychiatric tests were done, he said.

River Walk wins national award

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio's downtown River Walk has won the American Institute of Architects' 1984 Institute Honor, which recognizes distinguished achievements that enhance or influence the environment and the architectural profession.

The San Antonio River, which winds through the city's center, "demonstrates to the world how a modest natural feature can be made the focus of public activity and affection," according to the AIA Jury on Institute Honors.

Meeting set for March

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara will join Texas Gov. Mark White at a March 22 conference on public policy.

Policymakers will exchange views on three policy issues — nuclear arms and national security, education and the federal budget — with citizens from communities across the country at the Second Presidential Library Conference.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Candidate wants court system to function more smoothly

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Normally, judicial races, even statewide ones, aren't exactly stirring events which have voters rushing to the polls.

Although, it might be noted, roughly half of Texas voters don't seem to be able to work up the enthusiasm to rush to the polls for any reason.

Be that as it may, campaigns for the Texas Supreme Court and Court of Criminal Appeals generally don't draw much attention or usually many candidates.

There is an exception this year, of course, in the case of the race for the post of chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court.

Former Attorney General John Hill didn't have any surprises when he made it official last month that he's running for that position.

And, he insists, that's the only thing he's running for.

Not everyone appears to believe that, however.

Supreme Court Justice Sears McGee told reporters he thinks Hill really is running for governor, as Hill did in 1978, when he narrowly lost to Republican Bill Clements.

And McGee said he thought he'd run against Hill for the chief justice spot.

Hill firmly denies any plans to use the court as a launching pad for another office, paraphrasing William Tecumseh Sherman's intention to not run if nominated, and to not serve if elected as far as his gubernatorial ambitions are concerned.

But Hill is planning to run hard for the chief justice's post, and is organizing his campaign staff.

That is a familiar task for Hill, with his experience of statewide races, and he reports "we're doing those things that you always do for a statewide effort."

Among those things is fundraising, with Hill having already received some contributions as a result of a letter sent to past supporters (although Hill says the fund-raising effort hasn't really started yet).

Hill has said he intends to limit the amount of money he received from any source, noting that "we've had a lot of attention drawn during this past campaign season to what the public regards as excessive contributions from single sources."

Heavy dependence by a candidate — and candidate — on a contributor is harmful, Hill feels, "if for no other reason that the impression it may give the public."

Hill has been looking at a $5,000 contribution limit, saying that's "a lot of money" but "I don't think it's considered by the public to be excessive."

Hill says he plans to campaign on the theme of making the court system function more smoothly, stressing "a cooperative effort among lawyers, and the public, and the judiciary, to unclog out dockets. "That's the most pressing issue we have."

"When I was attorney general," Hill adds, "you had a priority position on the docket. I was not as conscious of the delays as I have been since I have been in private practice for five years."

"Dockets are increasing every year, and we need to modernize our abilities to deal with that. It's going to take a lot of work on all our parts."

One way to do that, Hill believes, is through the Supreme Court's rule-making and procedural powers. The Supreme Court, he comments, has the authority to impose sanctions for unnecessary delays.

Pre-judgment interest, to take the financial incentive out of delaying a settlement, is another approach, he says.

And another area is use of "supplemental dispute resolution procedures," providing alternatives for settling disagreements outside of a courtroom.

"I think there are areas where we can use supplemental procedures effectively, with the agreement of the parties," he says. "We don't want to give up the right to a trial...to have a jury...I do think there are procedures which will be helpful."

Another way to ease the crowded dockets could be through shifting judges among courts to deal with backlogs.

"I think we can find some of our judges who would not mind, for a month or two a year, from areas where they are not so clogged, coming into assist in areas where dockets are more clogged."

Hill says he'll discuss those matters "more fully" as his campaign progresses.

"We all know," he comments, "that 'Justice delayed is justice denied.'"

"It benefits everybody for the process to work in an expeditious and efficient way. After all, the courts belong to the public, and we should always keep that in mind," he said.

Services set for minister

FORT WORTH (AP) — Former Disciples of Christ minister G. Nimmo Goldston, who served churches from San Angelo to East Texas, will be buried in Dallas Monday after a Fort Worth funeral.

Goldston, 68, died Thursday. He was a minister in the Christian Church for 54 years, and most recently was pastor of Magnolia Avenue Christian Church in Fort Worth.

He also was pastor of the First Christian Church of San Angelo and minister of pastoral services for the East Dallas Christian Church. Other pastorates were in Troy, Kaufman, Athens, Handley, Center and Greenville. He was an Air Force chaplain during World War II and served nine months in the Pacific.

Goldston was the first director of Men's Work for Texas Christian Churches and also had staff responsibilities in the Division of Outreach of the Texas Board of Christian Churches.

Barber sees history through shop

TERRELL, Texas (AP) — D.C. Carpenter saw lots of history from the front door of his barber shop here during 53 years.

But he recently retired after the shop he had rented for 40 years was sold to settle an estate.

Carpenter, 74, commuted from his home in Forney, then from Dallas, for 43 of the 53 years he barbered here six days a week.

"I didn't get Monday off like other barbers," he says.

"I haven't missed many days — more this year than before," Carpenter says. He "almost choked on a piece of meat," which kept him away for about a week last year. Then during the summer he had to have surgery, which grounded him about five weeks.

With Carpenter's retirement, the last of Terrell's "old-time" barbers has put away his scissors and clippers for the last time. Henry Swords, with whom Carpenter first worked in Terrell, is now 93 and has been retired from more than 60 years as a barber.

EVER SINCE HIS LANDLORD, Morris Brin, died early this year, Carpenter has been saying he might have to retire at any time. The Brin estate decided to sell the building and Carpenter said he did not think he could relocate and continue barbering. At least, he did not think it would be worth the effort — since he was about ready to retire, anyway.

When Carpenter learned the building with 20-foot ceilings had been sold, he began preparing for retirement.

A few days before retiring, he said he had hoped to work until 1985.

"I hate to leave Terrell and leave my customers but there's nothing I can do because they sold the building out from under me," Carpenter said.

He got his start as a barber in his hometown of Quanah at the age of 17 after completing barber college at Wichita Falls.

Carpenter moved to Terrell in 1931 and began cutting hair with Swords, whom he paid $3 a week for room and board.

In the 1930s, the United States was struggling through the Great Depression. Prices were lower — and so were wages.

CARPENTER AND SWORDS were charging 10 cents for a haircut and 15 cents for a shave then.

"Old man Greeby had a hamburger joint on the corner and you could get a nickel hamburger, chili for a dime," Carpenter said. That was in 1932.

He told of once counting 40 wagons near his barber shop, and they were selling "anything you wanted." Many were farmers selling directly to consumers glad to buy fresh fruits, vegetables and meat and perhaps save some money at the same time.

Twelve years after moving to Terrell, Carpenter began working for the late A.A. Marsee in June 1943. Like Swords, Marsee worked as a barber more than 60 years before retiring.

"When we started barbering in Terrell," Carpenter says, "we had 30 barbers and I was the youngest one and the only one that was single."

Carpenter said he has seen a lot of changes in Terrell besides changes in the barber business.

"When I bought the shop (from Marsee), it had four chairs. I sold three. I had no use for three and would have had to pay tax on them. I offered to sell one to the school district for what it was taxed," Carpenter says with a smile, but his offer was not accepted.

He used the same chair for the entire time he owned the barber shop — and it probably already had been broken in pretty well before that.

HE SOLD THE BARBER chair to a barber supply house, which already had a buyer.

Carpenter has his own opinions, and can be quick to express them.

When anyone went into his shop for the first time, he asked the customer how he wanted his hair cut — then quickly added that he did not do any long hair cuts.

Carpenter could not be accused of discriminating against women, for he had some women among his customers throughout his 53½-year stint in Terrell. "I used to cut 15 to 20 on Saturday, but now I get one or two a week," he said before retiring.

He estimated that six customers had been faithful to him throughout his years of barbering here. Carpenter estimated he lost 70 customers "due to dying or going to rest homes" and lost a lot while out for surgery.

He charged less, even at retirement, than other barbers in Terrell. From the 10 cents for a haircut and 15 cents for a shave in 1932, his prices gradually rose. In more recent times, when other barbers were charging $3.50 or more for a regular haircut, Carpenter was doing it for $1.75, then $2. After his surgery, he raised the price to $2.50.

But he cut his overhead, also. The "functional" furnishings included five chairs for customers — including an old dining chair and a wicker one. They were lined up along a wall opposite the barber chair, behind which were the usual assortment of tonics — including the long-time favorite, Lucky Tiger — talcum, and other necessities of a barber shop.

A flourescent light atop the large wall mirrors helped supplement light from the front window. The string on the light bore silent witness that Carpenter had supported the Veterans of Foreign Wars "Buddy Poppy" campaign for at least 15 years, perhaps 20. Ends of the wire stems for the traditional red poppies were twisted around the string.

Carpenter's customers sometimes had to look for him — or wait for him to return. He often got restless and went walking in the downtown area. You might find him next door drinking coffee or chatting with a passerby on the sidewalk.

Normally, the only time Carpenter would close his shop early was on Wednesdays — so he could get home in time for mid-week church services.

Chopped cash used by student company

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Three hundred pounds of money can stretch a long, long way. Or, you can shred it into millions of tiny green slivers, fill glass jars with it and start a business.

That, as several youths in Junior Achievement Inc. will tell you, is how Money Works.

While Money Works, a JA company that sells jars filled with shredded money, isn't exactly bursting with profit, its 14 board members boast hearty hands-on experience.

Half a million high school students participate in JA every year — about 260 of them in Grayson County, said JA director Jay Watkins. Here, JA has grown from four businesses in 1979 to 10 companies.

Although 2,100 students turned in JA applications this year, sponsors pared the list down to 1,250 applicants. About 20 percent joined the program.

"Our area has progressed much better than most," said Watkins, "Most small areas generally fold after two or three years."

The mock companies work just like bonafide companies. During their 15-week timetables, employees sign a charter, elect officers, sell stock, secure loans, purchase raw materials and pay rent, taxes and insurance.

They create a marketing strategy, sell products, keep weekly inventories and sales reports, liquidate inventory, pay salaries and stock dividends and write annual reports. But unlike most companies, they rely heavily on door-to-door sales.

Formed in 1960, JA promotes all-American free enterprise. Idealistic participants strive for professionalism. As assistant JA director Pat Gammon said, "You've got everything to gain and nothing to lose."

"What we try to do as closely as possible is duplicate a real business," said Watkins. "People associate business with successs. We give the kids a chance to fail. One company did fail; the kids learn it's not as easy as it looks."

Products this year range from pine-framed bulletin boards to wooden gumball machines and Texas weather plaques. Other products include a $2 fireplace starter and a $14 automobile trouble light.

The money jars cost $1.44 each to make and are sold for $3.50, said Chris Peterson of Sherman, vice president of finance for Money Works. Each jar holds shredded bills, once worth about $600, which were contributed by the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas.

Wife sentenced to life

RICHMOND (AP) — A former hairdresser convicted of arranging her husband's stabbing murder so she could collect $400,000 in insurance was sentenced Saturday to life in prison.

Frances Turner was convicted of capital murder in the March 18, 1982, slaying of her husband Robert, 46, an oil company consultant.

The jury deliberated 15 hours over two days before returning its guilty verdict Friday, but took only 40 minutes to decide she deserved a life sentence instead of death by injection.

Mrs. Turner, 40, of Bay City, will be eligible for parole in 20 years.

Prosecutor Don Bankston told jurors that Turner's death was "a crime of unspeakable violence, motivated by greed and explained by deceit."

He said Turner was stabbed 66 times by Michael Hunter, 25, who was hired by Mrs. Turner, Bankston said.

Hunter, sentenced to 30 years as part of a plea bargain, testified that he took synthetic heroin and tranquilizers, then hid in a roadside park west of Houston.

When the Turners stopped at the park, as Mrs. Turner had planned, Hunter said he attacked Turner with a knife.

"Evidence clearly shows Frances was willing to shop this killing around until she found someone who was willing to kill her husband," Bankston said.

Defense attorney Martin E. McVey said the initial investigation was botched by the Fort Bend County sheriff's office.

He said there was no effort to lift fingerprints from a hammer found near Turner's body.

Doll adoption official?

SAN ANTONIO, (AP) — Initially, Bexar County District Attorney Sam Millsap didn't know why Mandy Keen's letter ended up on his desk, so he almost routinely passed it on to the district records office.

The letter, dated Dec. 25, simply asked Millsap to "record in city and county records that I have this day ... adopted Sarah Ann as my first child."

"At first," he said, "I thought it was real."

But when Millsap found out that Mandy is 6 years old — and that Sarah Ann is a Cabbage Patch doll — he said he wanted to play along.

Using his official stationery and official stamp, Millsap wrote Mandy that, "I am forwarding a copy of your letter to the Cabbage Patch Home so they will know that Sarah Ann has been adopted and is in a good home."

"Adoption" is part of the Cabbage Patch doll marketing strategy.

Millsap also told Mandy that he had "formally received" her request and would keep it on file.

The district attorney said he was happy to fulfill the child's wish, the first such request that his office has received.

"Most people blow that kind of stuff off," he told a reporter.

Olympics come to Sarajevo

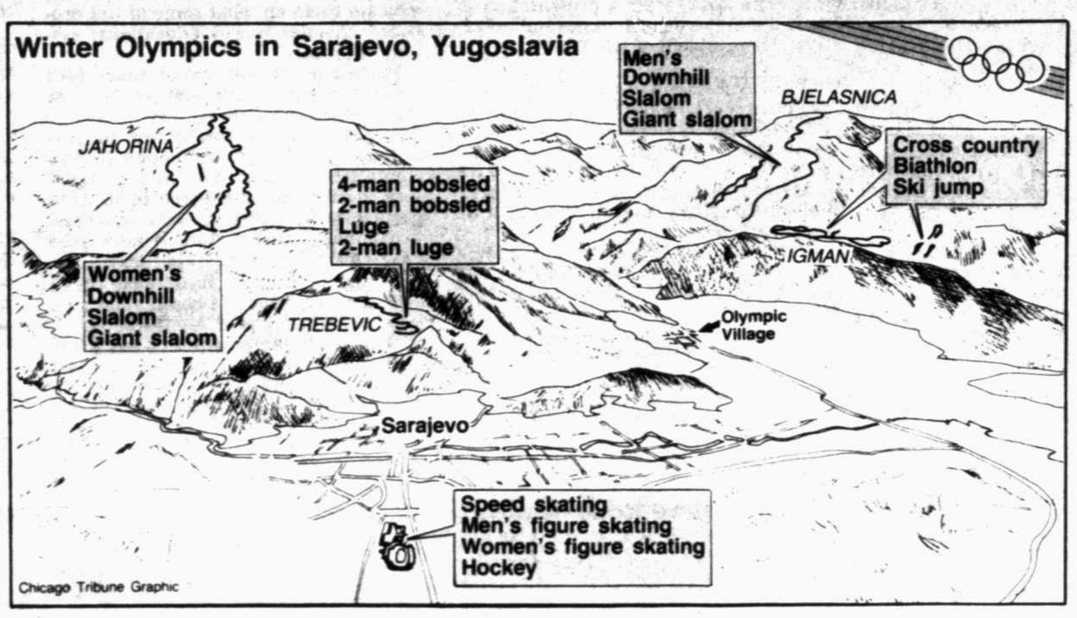

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The morning fog will be cut this week by the pendulum-like motion of cross-country skiers on the flats of Igman.

The noon sun will yield to the speed of downhill and slalom skiers on the mountainsides of Jahorina and Bjelasnica

As evening dark grips this capital city of Bosnia-Herzegovina, inside, under arena lights at Skenderija and Zetra, hockey teams will grapple and figure skaters will dazzle with dancing and triple jumps.

In the stands, people will sit beside people whose language they will not understand, whose thoughts about economy and politics and wars they may not be able perceive.

But they will communicate. They will communicate with their shrugs, their smiles, their cheers, their boos. There will be understanding, for sure.

THIS IS the Winter Olympics — robed as always in richness, tedium, sadness, joy.

Sarajevo is waiting. It will be staging its biggest and costliest event ever during a time when Yugoslavia's economy is fraught with an inflation rate of almost 60 percent.

Most of the 1,600 athletes from 49 countries have arrived, and all but a few of the 4,000 media personnel are here. It is unseasonably mild and snow-free in the middle of Sarajevo, but snow on the mountains surrounding this city is plentiful — almost too plentiful — and machinery is standing by to scrape off the Alpine trails if it gets too deep.

There was little snow, however, on Igman, where the Nordic events are to be held, and by weekend, soldiers were moving snow down from the higher mountains.

About the only thing left to to do before the Opening Ceremonies on Wednesday is to light the torch that officially starts these Olympic Games, the 14th in winter.

SIX HOCKEY games will be played on Tuesday, and on Thursday, the first medals will be contested — in the danger of the Cold War heating up

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — It's been four years since a shaken Soviet hockey team left Lake Placid, N.Y., to return home in disgrace. They arrived here Saturday, swearing they will erase the memory of the 1980 upset.

"We'll get the gold and there is no doubt about it, we'll be first," said Vladislav Tretiak, the Soviets' star goaltender, who is playing in his fourth Olympics. "We came here to take the gold medal. We don't want any other medal this time."

Soviet Coach Viktor Tikhonov has said his team will not take anyone lightly, including the Americans who stunned his squad in the 1980 Olympics and took the gold medal the Soviets had owned since 1964. And Team USA Coach Lou Vairo readily admits that he will be happy just to get to play the Soviet Union.

"If we get to meet the Soviets, it would mean we were in the medals round, which is where we want to be," Vairo said. "We know they'll be there; you're talking about the strongest team in the world.

"We took something they wanted in 1980 and they have won everything since. Their national team won the Canada Cup and the World Championship. Now they want the Olympic gold.

"For them, nothing but the gold will be good enough. For us, it would be a major achievement to win a medal, considering this kind of competition. But we don't count out anything and we're in good shape and confident of playing well."

THE ARRIVAL of the Soviet and U.S. hockey teams at Sarajevo for the the XIV Olympic Winter Games brought back memories of one of the sports finest moments.

But still in the background here are disputes over eligibility of key players, with the United States in the middle.

The Americans say they will protest the eligibility of four Canadian hockey players if they are included on the roster.

And Saturday, the head of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, Murray Costello, said Canada might witrhdraw from the Olympic hockey tournament if such a protest is upheld.

"We'll have a hard decision to make. That's a possibility," Costello replied when asked if a pullout was might occur.

He also said that — if a protest is upheld — Canada in turn would challenge the eligibility of players on eight or nine of the 12 teams in the field, including four U.S. players.

The head of the Eligibility Committee for the International Olympic Committee is questioning the status of Finland's goaltender. The Finns, in turn, are planning to challenge the eligibility of nine players from six nations, including one each from the United States and Canada.

JUSTICE W.Z. Estey, chairman of Hockey Canada, fired the strongest salvo in the verbal battle.

Irwin seizes Crosby lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Hale Irwin contrived a hard-won 68 despite the distractions of a merry-making group he called "Dirty Harry's crowd," and moved into a two-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the 43rd Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

"That's the most people I've ever seen on this golf course. It had to be a record," said Irwin, a two-time U.S. Open champion who seemed little short of amazed at the size of the gallery that scurried through the pines and cypress, and romped along the cliffs and crags overlooking Carmel Bay.

THEY WERE lured by the third consecutive day of what Irwin called "fantastic weather" that graced the spectacular beauty of the picturesque Monterey Peninsula and the chance to see major show-business celebrities in something other than their natural habitat.

Actor Clint Eastwood, who has portrayed the character "Dirty Harry" in several films, played in the same foursome with Irwin at Pebble Beach.

"The gallery could be a little boisterous," Irwin said. "It can be disconcerting. The difficult thing was keeping your concentration and getting through Dirty Harry's crowd."

When he eventually worked his way through the party-time atmosphere around the 18th green, Irwin had completed one round on each of three courses in 206 — 10 shots under par and firmly in command going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

AND, IN THAT final round, he won't have to worry about Tom Watson, a two-time Crosby champion and the winner of the first event this season. Watson, suddenly unable to find his game, shot a 73 at Pebble Beach, and, with a 221 total, missed the cut for the second week in a row. It was the first time since the spring of 1978 that the four-time Player of the Year had missed two consecutive cuts.

David Edwards, who led through three rounds of this event in 1980 but has yet to take his first individual title, came out of the pack at Cypress Point with a 69, despite a double-bogey, and was second alone at 208.

Hal Sutton, the 1983 PGA champion and Player of the Year, birdied his last four holes at Pebble Beach — with Jack Nicklaus and former President Gerald Ford in his foursome — for a 71 that put him in a tie for third at 210 — four shots behind O'Meara had a 68 at Spyglass Hill, Couples 69 and Nelford 70 at Cypress Point.

Nicklaus, playing in his first tournament of the year, recorded his first sub-par round, a 71, and was at level par, 216.

THE FORMER President, who sent a female spectator to the hospital for stitches after he'd sliced a shot into the crowd on Friday, scattered the gallery a couple of times Saturday, but no damage was reported. Ford, with a 17-handicap, helped Nicklaus four strokes, but their team total of 207 was not good enough to make the cut for the final round.

Rookie Willie Wood and John Adams, who shared the second-round lead, encountered various difficulties at tough Spyglass and drifted back. Wood had a 74 and was at 211. Adams shot 76-213.

Irwin, winner of 15 tour titles, moved into a share of the lead with a couple of birdies on the front side, then pulled away from the pack with 15-footers for birdies on the two back-nine par-5 holes, the 15th and 18th.

Oilers land Moon for record NFL sum

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler General Manager Ladd Herzeg closed one touchy issue by making quarterback Warren Moon the highest paid player in the National Football League Saturday but now must turn to another explosive problem–unhappy running back Earl Campbell.

Warren Moon

Moon will sign a five year contract for an estimated $6 million in March, giving the former Canadian Football League most valuable player a higher salary than Denver quarterback John Elway.

Herzeg made it clear, however, that there would be no renegotiation for Campbell, who has two years remaining on a contract that pays him $500,000 annually if he fullfills all bonus clauses.

"At the time we renegotiated Earl's contract we put a non-renegotiation clause in it," Herzeg said. "We feel we lived up to our part of the contract and we feel Earl should live up to his part. We will not renegotiate Earl's contract."

Campbell and his agent, Mike Trope, have been talking with the United States Football League San Antonio Gunslingers owner Clinton Manges and may go to court to get the running back released from his contract.

"Anything is possible, including playing in both leagues at the same time," Trope said. "From here on out, it's going to be up to me to work out all the little details with Manges and his people."

Herzeg said he risked upsetting the Oiler player salary structure when Campbell's contract was renegotiated after the 1978 season and felt that the signing of Moon was a similar situation.

"Earl had been the league MVP for two years and led the league in rushing for two straight years," Herzeg said.

Ron Brown defeats Carl Lewis

DALLAS (AP) - Ron Brown, who decided to shoot at the Olympics instead of playing in the NFL after beating Carl Lewis in the 100 meters a year ago, defeated him in the 60-yard dash Saturday night at the Dallas Times Herald Invitational Track Meet.

Brown, a wide receiver at Arizona State and the No. 1 draft pick of the Browns in 1983, clocked a time of 6.06 seconds.

"I have never felt Lewis was unbeateable," Brown said. "If I had felt that way then I would be playing football.

"Carl is a great athlete but he is human and I think he can be beat."

Brown was suffering from the flu but said "It was still my best 60 and I didn't get a great start. I can do better. I think I can break six seconds."

Lewis owns the world indoor best, set at Dallas a year ago, at 6.02.

However, there was some consolation for the Lewis family as sister Carol broke her American long jump record twice in six attempts.

Carol Lewis jumped 21-feet, 11-inches to break her old mark of 21-6 1/2 then uncorked an effort of 22-2 1/4.

Carl Lewis said "I made a mistake on my start but I was not disappointed. I ran fast."

Usually festive meeting grim

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The annual Region IV meeting of the Texas High School Coaches Association, which was held at Midland Lee Saturday, is usually a festive occasion for renewed friendships and a few lectures on X's and O's.

This meeting, however, turned smiles into grim stares after a presentation of Austin's Eddie Joseph, assistant executive vice-president of the THSCA.

TWO WEEKS ago Joseph met with Govenor Mark White's Select Committee on Public Education and told more than 250 West Texas coaches that the meeting was "totally fruitless." He described that meeting as, "a business-suited wrestling match that left its share of bruises."

Gov. White's select committee is headed by H. Ross Perot and he has attacked Texas education for its liberal use of extracurricular activities. According to Joseph, Perot thinks "athletics in particular is to blame for our education problems."

Joseph told the coaches, "It is no longer important to fight Perot. His mind is made up and he doesn't want to be confused with facts or rationale. He wants to legislate athletics in Texas to a state of medocrity. Our meeting with him was not pleasant. It could be described as volatile."

JOSEPH URGED coaches to take their battle against the select committee to the state agencies involved and to the legislature. "We are going to have to go to the pasters, bank presidents and people in our communities and educate them on what some of the proposed changes in our educational system will mean."

Joseph described six of the select committee's proposals that worry most coaches and the THSCA.

Joseph said that one of the proposals that will be recommended by the committee is that each student must pass five core (solid) subjects in order to participate in extracurricular activities. "That means that a student must pass every subject in order to participate in athletics. A student must pass three now and we have proposed four subjects to start next year," said Joseph.

"You can blame athletics for a lot of things, but why a kid can't read isn't one of them. You can make a kid study 20 hours a day and it won't do any good if he can't read the material."

THE COMMITTEE will also propose, according to Joseph, that restrictions on the number of coaches in each school and for each sport be set statewide. "This is alarming enough to communities who set their own standards, but I'm sure they will also question coaching salaries. I'm sure they will want a state-wide salary ceiling for coaches."

Related proposals that Joseph and the THSCA fear are school doors should be locked by 6 p.m. daily, all athletic and extracurricular activities must take place after school hours and before the 6 p.m. lockout and no athletic contests on school nights, which would stop the missing of classes for some sporting events.

"They (the committee) will propose that all athletic contests take place on Friday nights, Saturdays and Sunday afternoons," said Joseph. "Sports that now play round robbin district play, like baseball, volleyball and baseball, will have to play two games on weekend dates. I think we are going to get some help from family members on this."

Joseph also said that the committee "would like to see school extended to a nine-hour day.

Rowinski led Purdue with 11 points and James Bullock had eight. Reserve Andre Banks topped Iowa with 16 points, Steve Carfino scored 12 and Stokes added 11.

Duke 67, Virginia 64

DURHAM, N.C. — Johnny Dawkins scored 19 points, including 5 at the free-throw line in the last five minutes, as Duke (17-5, 4-4) defeated Virginia, 67-64.

But Virginia began fouling almost immediately after Duke brought the ball in bounds, and the Blue Devils could often convert only one of two opportunities.

Mark Alarie scored 17 points for Duke and Henderson and Dan Meagher contributed 11 each.

Arkansas wins, 63-44

From Wire Reports

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Reserve Darryl Bedford led a second-half explosion as Arkansas (16-4, 7-1) snapped a two-game losing streak with a 63-44 win over Baylor (5-15, 1-8).

Bedford scored seven consecutive points in less than aminute as Arkansas pulled away to a 21-point lead, 53-32, late in the game.

Senior Ricky Norton led Arkansas with 16 points and handed out seven assists. Charles Balentine added 12 points for the Razorbacks. Baylor freshman DeWayne Brown scored 17 and Russ Capps 10.

Joe Kleine, Arkansas' 6-11 center, had 12 rebounds. Kleine opened the game with a three-point play but was held scoreless for the next 25 minutes, finishing with six points.

The Razorbacks forced Baylor into 27 turnovers, 17 in the first half. Guard Dave Reichert of the Bears had 12 of those.

Bedford said he is playing better than he did earlier in the season. "People don't really think I can score," he said, "but when Joe leads the game, I have to be able to come in and put points on the board."

Raiders over TCU, 47-45

FORT WORTH (AP) — David Reynolds, 6-8 senior from Perryton, hit a jump shot with 5 seconds left to give Texas Tech a 47-45 victory over Texas Christian.

The victory raised Tech's record to 6-3 in SWC play and 12-8 for the season. TCU, which hasn't won a game in Daniel Meyer Coliseum all season, fell to 9-11 and 2-6.

Tony Benford's goal from the left corner gave Texas Tech a 45-45 tie with just under five minutes remaining. The last of 14 TCU turnovers gave Tech possession again, and the Red Raiders stalled until Reynolds' game-winner.

With 10 seconds left, Reynolds took a pass inside the free circle from Benford. Reynolds, who led Tech with 14, faked to his left before putting up the winning basket from 15 feet.

DePaul goes overtime to save 17-0 record

From Wire Reports

CHICAGO — Kenny Patterson's 10-foot jump shot with three seconds remaining in overtime to lift 17-0 and No. 2 DePaul to a 59-57 victory over the 12-7 St. John's.

Patterson had put DePaul ahead 57-55 with a pair of clutch free throws with 17 seconds left, but Chris Mullin, who led all scorers with 21 points, tied it for St. John's on a pair of free throws with nine seconds to go.

Regulation play ended at 51-51 and St. John's playing for a final shot, which the Redmen missed.

Patterson finished with 10 points, while Kevin Holmes had 11 for DePaul and Dallas Comegys added 10. Jeff Allen chipped in 15 for St. John's.

DePaul couldn't get untracked in the first half, although the Blue Demons held several leads — including an 8-5 advantage in the early going.

Tyrone Corbin, the team's leading scorer, managed only two free throws in the early going and, with DePaul leading 16-15, Mullin connected for a 17-16 St. John's lead.

With Mullin, Mark Jackson and Allen leading the way, the Redmen opened up a 27-20 halftime lead as DePaul was guilty of 11 turnovers to only two for St. John's.

DePaul came out in the second half and outscored the Redmen 9-2 to climb into a 31-30 lead. But St. John's retaliated with an 11-2 spree, which included seven points by Mullin, to again pull ahead.

With Patterson and Tony Jackson hitting, the Blue Demons finally tied it up 51-51 on a 20-footer by Patterson with 1:28 left in the game.

St. John's played for a final shot and Bill Wennington attempted a layup at the buzzer only to have it blocked by Corbin to force the overtime.

Rice nips Ags in final seconds

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Tony Barnett, who had a game-high 12 points, hit two free throws in the final six seconds to give the Rice Owls a 43-42 SWC win over Texas A&M.

Rice had lost eight-straight to A&M. The Owls are 7-12 over all and 4-5 in SWC while A&M is 11-10 and 4-6.

Rice Tyrone Washington with 11 points was the only other player in double figures. Kenny Brown and Todd Holloway each scored nine for the Aggies.

The Owls hit just 39 percent of their shots from the field, 16 of 41, and the Aggies made only 32 percent of their shots from the field, 16 of 50. Rice made 11 of 16 free throws, while A&M made only 10 of 16.

NE Louisiana wins, 71-64

MONROE, La. (AP) — Layups by Gerald Morris and Bobby Joe Douglas in the final seconds helped Northeast Louisiana squelch North Texas State's late rally for a 71-64 Southland Conferece win.

NEL's fourth straight lifted the Indians to 9-8 overall and 4-2 in the SLC, while NTSU fell to 8-12 and 2-4 with its fourth straight loss.

Mahre carries U.S. hopes

The U.S. team, 120 strong, is expected to do quite well here. It is filled with champions and deep in experience and talent.

It would be difficult to bank on another ice hockey miracle for the USA, simply because the competition is so good and the U.S. team is so young. Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Canada and West Germany stand in the way to a golden repeat for the Americans. That is formidable opposition, and the Soviets are favored.

Scott Hamilton, a mighty-mite world champion from Bowling Green, Ohio, is by far the class of the men's figure skating field. A U.S. woman is world champ, too. But Rosalynn Sumners of Spokane, Wash., faces stiff Olympic challenges from East Germany's Katarina Witt and her two American teammates, Elaine Zayak and 16-year-old Tiffany Chin.

In ice dancing, England's Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean, world champions for the past three years, are the heavy favorites, with the U.S. team of Judy Blumberg and Michael Seibert given a good shot for a silver or bonze. The pairs' field is more open, and the brother-sister team of Kitty and Peter Carruthers could take a medal back home to Haverford, Pa.

In the Alpine events, America's Phil Mahre and Tamara McKinney are expected to do well — perhaps win gold. Both are defending World Cup overall chamnpions, but both have suffered disappointing seasons so far this year. Switzerland's Pirmin Zurbiggen is the men's World Cup leader this season, and considered the best skier on hand. Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden, a doubel-gold winner in Lake Placid, has been declared ineligible for the Olympics because of endorsement payments.

Kerry Lynch is the best cross-country skier the United States has and a good bet to medal, and 1976 silver medalist Bill Koch could come back from a disappointing performance at Lake Placid four years ago. But Norway's Gunde Svan is best in the world and a threat at all distances.

SINCE THE Winter Olympics began 60 years ago in Chamonix, France, the United States has won 106 medals — 36 gold, 40 silver and 30 bronze.

In 1980, the team won 12 medals, including six gold, four silver and two bronze, and tying their previous high of 12 medals in 1932.

If predictions by the experts hold, this team should surpass that mark.

The U.S. team has won 40 speed skating medals over the years, including an unprecedented five gold medals by Eric Heiden.

Heiden is back, but not as a competitor. He will be one of 30 commentators on ABC, which has 900 support personnel to broadcast 63½ hours of Winter Olympic coverage back to the United States.

Before he even arrived, Heiden was at the center of the first controversy. Erik Henriksen, his teammate in 1980, criticized Heiden for but returning little to the sport since then.

Heiden, however, got support from U.S. speedskater Kent Thometz, who said, "He won everything there was to win. There is really no point in skating anymorewhen you do that."

THE EAST Germans will be strong in the bobsled and speed skating, and the Soviets will be strong in just about everything else.

Vuchko, the wolf, is the mascot for these Games, and his face with a long nose is everywhere — in novelty shops, on posters and on billboards.

"I like him," said Dalia Derzic, a Yugoslav 5-year-old. "He eats carrots."

The Yugoslavs like Americans, too. The hosts are warm, friendly and have tried to please. They have foiled the early critics who believed they were incapable of putting on these Games efficiently.

Curry retains welter crown

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Don Curry, mixing punches to the head and body and staying on top of Marlon Starling, pounded out a 15-round unanimous decision Saturday to retain the World Boxng Association welterweight championship.

The victory at Bally's Park Place and on national television kept the unbeaten 22-year-old Curry's hopes alive for a rich title defense against Sugar Ray Leonard, possibly this year.

It was Starling's second loss compared to 31 victories and both have been to Curry. Curry scored a 12-round split decision over Starling here Oct. 23, 1982 in the fight before Curry won the championship.

Starling said he thought he lost the first fight because 'the judges thought I was clowning around. I was fighting for my fans. I was showing off."

Starling did no clowning in the rematch but it did him no good. Curry was much sharper this time and also stronger.

Huskers' recruiting hurt by disclosures

OMAHA, , Neb. (AP) — Negative national publicity has hurt Nebraska's football recruiting in the last days before the signing date for national letters of intent, Coach Tom Osborne said.

The Cornhusker program has been in the news since former Nebraska running back Mike Rozier said in an interview earlier this week that, " I had people sending me money. Alumni helped me out."

It's a violation of NCAA rules for college athletes to receive money from athletic department representatives, boosters or alumni.

Rozier later denied accepting money and gifts from alumni as a Cornhusker player.

"I'm very confident there's no problem here, but it's been very damaging," Osborne said.

He said he doesn't think the members of the Nebraska athletic department have been involved in arranging extra benefits for players.

"Certainly, first and foremost, it must be made very clear that the althletic department or represenatives of the athletic department in no way arranged for or provided anything that was illegal," Osborne said.

Osborne had said in a statement Thursday that he will resign immediately if it's proved that he or a member of his coaching staff arranged benefits for Rozier or any Cornhusker player.

"If we get involved in something serious, that's it," Osborne said Friday. "I think that's the way it ought to be in coaching. I think anybody involved in coaching who gets his program in that kind of shape ought to be gone."

On the Road Again
with Allen and Jackie Cason

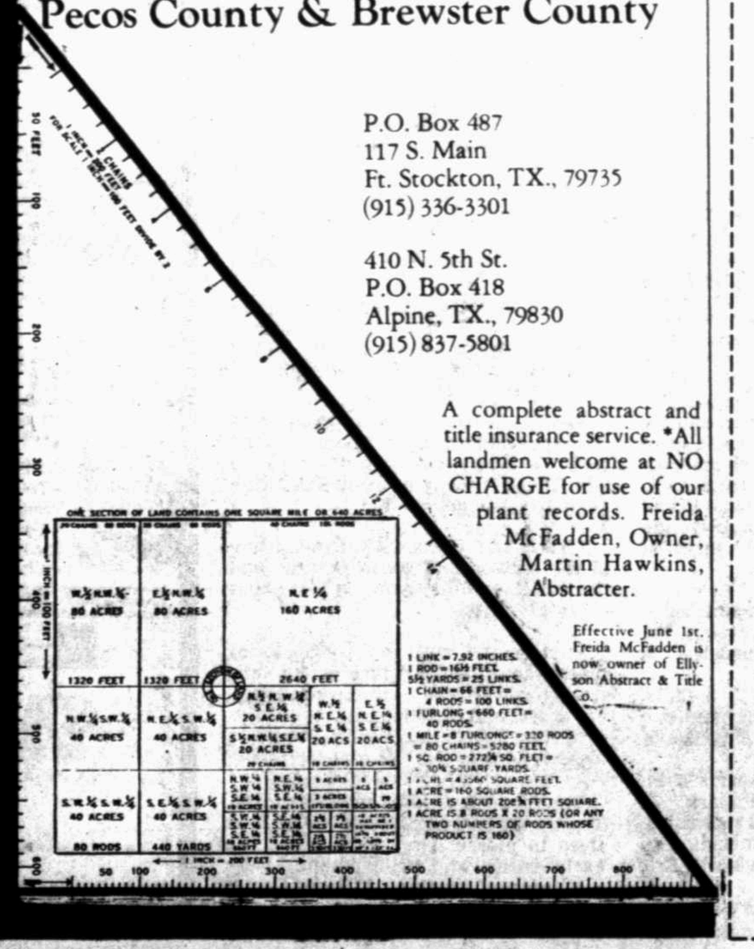

In cold weather, particulary when camping in winter, late fall or early spring, you may lose your LP-gas supply because of a regulator freeze-up due to moisture in the gas. This occurs when condensation collects and freezes in the regulator and freezes in the regulator and gas cannot pass through. Check this before leaving home and if you suspect the regulator is frozen wrap a hot towel around it or pour boiling water over it to thaw it. Once thawed, keep the regulator covered. While still at home or after reaching the campground a drop light may be used as a source of heat around the regulator. NEVER TRY TO THAW IT WITH A MATCH OR FLAME. Other malfunctions of gas regulators are rare, but if you should have a problem, have them replaced.

We invite you to come in our complete parts and accessory store not only for needed LP-gas parts, but to brouse through the many R.V. speciality items we stock. Mark your calendars for Feb. 17-19th for the 4th Annual Family Recreational Vehicle Show. INSIDE Ector Co. Coliseum.

Hint: An inexpensive plastic regulator cover is available for some brands of LP-gas regulators.

Sheehan forges lead in Arden

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Patty Sheehan birdied the final two holes for a 3-under-par 69 Saturday and a two-shot lead after three rounds of the $175,000 Elizabeth Arden Classic at the Turnberry Isle Country Club.

Sheehan, who with Sally Little of South Africa shared the second-round lead in the Ladies Professional Golf event, had a three-round total 8-under-par 208.

Anne-Marie Palli of France entered Saturday's play three shots off the pace, but carded a 4-under-par 68 for a 210 total and sole possession of second place.

Rookie Sherri Turner — who set a course record on the front nine with a 31 — was in third place after firing a 5-under 67 for 211.

Cathy Mant and Pat Bradley were tied at 212 for fourth, while six players — including JoAnne Carner and Beth Daniel — were deadlocked for fifth at 213.

Sheehan, the 1983 Player of the Year, birdied the first two holes of the day and at times was tied for the lead by Palli and Turner.

"The wind was a little stronger today," said Sheehan of the 18-22 mph gusts. "When you know how strong the wind is, you just step up and hit the ball.

"A lot of times, though, you have to guess. But this week I've been under control," said Sheehan, 27.

The leader remained confident going into Sunday's deciding round over the par-72, 6,092-yard course.

"I usually handle it well with a good final round. But I really don't know what to think. I'm playing so well now so early. I don't usually start playing well until May," said Sheehan, who had five birdies and two bogeys Saturday.

Palli, who credits new contact lenses purchased Friday with improving her putting game, had five birdies — including one of 35 feet on the second hole — to go with one bogey.

"I'm half surprised with my round," said Palli. "But I played pretty well last year and won one tourney."

Palli's victory came in the Samaritan Turquoise Classic in Phoenix, Ariz.

Turner, who needed seven tries before earning her tour card this year, birdied the first three holes.

City Doubles to end today with 1:30 finals

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The small field of entries in the Midland City Doubles tennis tournament at Midland College this weekend forced a rearrangement in most of the divisions from a draw bracket format to a round robin style of play.

Among the divisions to change formats was the womens' championship where players from Midland College are setting the pace.

Valerie Michelon, a Chaparral player from France, and Liz Burris, last year's 4A Texas singles champion from Houston, are tied for first place with 3-0 records with MC teammates Therese Devine, from Canada, and Jill Wertenberger, a state 5A finalist two years ago.

The two teams are ahead of MC's Kim Gidley-Donna Van Auken, in third at 2-1. Six teams round out the womens' championship field with each playing five matches.

ONE OF the mens' championship matches — playing the draw format — will be between two Western Junior College Conference teams: Midland College and Odessa College.

Chaps Sean Strickling and Robert Vrij, Midlanders who were state finalists in the 1982 UIL championships, will face OC's David Leatherwood and Kevin Duke at 10:30 a.m., today. The winners will advance to the finals where they will meet the winners of the other semi-final match between Kirk Farquar-Jeff Bramlett and Derek Edmonds-Jim Ward.

Farquar and Bramlett are fromer college players for Ole Miss and Southwest Texas State respectively while Edmonds and Ward are club pros at Green Tree Country Club and Midland Country Club. Edmonds is also a fromer Chaparral, playing for the 1976 National Championship team.

The finals are scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

TWO OTHER divisions with the draw format were concluded Saturday. In womens' A division, Mary Jane Beldon-Cindy Williams defeated Janie Pollard-Blythe Thomas, 6-3, 6-3.

In high school girls' it was a Midland Lee one-two finish withLisa Fierro-Debbie Belden defeating Crista Harvey-Michele DeFrance, 6-4, 6-1.

The high school boys' division, which was also open to the Odessa schools, was won by Odessa Permian though the final results are yet in. The team of Guy Nicolette-Mark Ashley will play their finals match against Permian mates Mike Hernandez-Adam Huff in Odessa. They've already collected their trophies and will hand them out accordingly.

IN ROUND-ROBIN play, Jim Hill-Joe Gifford won the mens' A title with a 2-0 record while Raymond Yell-Mike Bustilloz finished second at 1-1. Don Oettinger-Terry Akin won mens' B with a 3-0 mark while the father-son team of ray Unterbrink-Kyle Unterbrink finished second at 2-1.

Joy Anderson-Melanie Crosier won womens' B with a 2-0 record while Noella Hagar-Prisilla Huppler finished in second at 1-1.

The Lee boys finished eighth with 81 points and did not win an event.

Monahans won the girls division with 306 while Seminole placed second with 230. Lee's 162 was third. Pecos won the boys competition with 273 points while Monahans was second with 251 and Andrews third with 214.

Lee's Caroline Reed set two pool records by winning the 100 butterfly in 1:07.44 and the 500 freestyle in 5:48. Jana Houseman set a pool mark in the 200 freestyle with a 2:10.86 and the other pool record came from Kelly Simmons in the 200 individual medley with a 2:40.20.

Cold War heating up

"All we're saying is if somebody challenges our team, there'll be a lot of information put before the Olympic Committee. It will be up to them to decide what to do with it. The blood will be on their hands.

"We're the only good friends the Americans have on the face of the earth. They lose us, they won't have any friends left."

Those remarks angered U.S. Coach Lou Vairo, who said the dispute had "degenerated ... into a name-calling, mudslinging international disagreement between two friendly nations."

"I haven't read anything where we have said anything anti-Canadian, and that piece I read this judge guy said Canada is the only good friends the United States has on the face of the earth. You better believe that that bothers me," the coach said.

"We have nothing to hide and no guilty consciences. We play by the rules."

Canada and the United State are set to take their dispute to a private meeting on Monday and then on Tuesday the two teams face off on the ice as the Games of winter get underway here.

While the United States might not be able to pull off another Lake Placid coup, "It is a good team," Tikhonov said. But he rated his own team, Czechoslovakia and Sweden as medal favorites.

"We think we are the favorites but everyone has a chance. Sport is sport," he said. "Everyone will be playing their best game against us and each team will try to beat us.

"Our first goal is to end atop our group. Then we'll worry about the finals. Most of these teams are very good. I think Sweden, Czechoslovakia and West Germany also have a chance for one of the medals."

VAIRO AMERICAN team group is faster than the '80 team and is well-schooled in European style play. It is strong in goaltending with Marc Behrend — who will start in Tuesday's opener against Canada — and Bob Mason, though both would have to be sensational to surpass the work of Jim Craig at Lake Ply,Y—C!HH!ut neither netminder is in Tretiak's class. The veteran goalie is acknowledged as one of the greatest players at the position in history.

NFL-USFL hot topic

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — One of the hottest topics of conversation among many of the nation's top college football players is the growing antagonism between the National Football League and its scrappy new rival, the United States Football League.

More than 20 players, many of whom will be playing for one league or the other by the end of the year, gathered Saturday night for the Walter Camp Foundation awards banquet.

The annual ceremony honors the oldest All-America team in the nation and four other shapers of the game of football.

With the battle between the two leagues escalating, such a congregation was bound to be a likely place for executives of pro teams to informally rub elbows with a few potential recruits. And among the early arrivals for the three days of hoopla surrounding the event was Gil Brandt, vice president of the Dallas Cowboys.

Brandt spent much of Friday in idle banter with Dean Steinkuhler, a senior guard from Nebraska, junior kicker Luis Zendejas of Arizona State and linebacker Ricky Hunley, a senior from Arizona State.

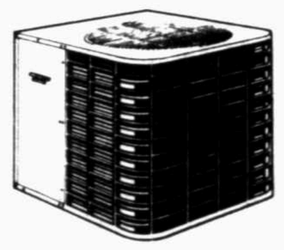

Kings top Nuggets

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Guard Billy Knight scored 30 points to lead the Kansas City Kings to a 107-100 victory over the Denver Nuggets in NBA action.

Also in double figures for the Kings were Eddie Johnson with 18, LaSalle Thompson with 14 and Larry Drew with 13.

Denver's Kiki Vandeweghe tied Knight for scoring honors with 30 points. Alex English added 22 and Dan Issel had 20 for the Nuggets.

Changing the rules

Before the State Board of Education enacts a controversial proposal intended to standardize curriculum requirements in Texas, there are a couple of young people the board members really ought to consider.

One is 21-year-old Texas Tech University student Eddie Pleasant. The other is 10-year-old Gabriel Lewis, a student at Fannin Elementary School in Midland. Both of them will be involved in Midland's Celebration of the Arts this summer, sponsored by the Midland Arts Assembly, and each has a story to tell about the disastrous effects the curriculum change could bring.

Pleasant received a musical education in Midland's public schools, where he was encouraged by his teachers to take electives in band and choir. He did exactly that and he progressed, graduating from Lee High School in 1980.

Now Pleasant's a senior voice major at Texas Tech and expects to go on in the field of music. "The musical education I got in Midland was one of great value," he says. "Many people are not cut out for English and mathematics and courses like that."

The singer is in disagreement with the proposal before the State Board of Education, which school officials in Midland and the surrounding area fear will restrict educational options in Texas' public schools to the point that many students will lose the benefit of their electives.

What is that benefit? For Eddie Pleasant it is the opportunity for a career in the field of music. And if the State Board argues that the intent of its proposed change is to "upgrade" the quality of public education, it has to be noted that when Pleasant graduated from Lee he was in the top 20 percent of his class. It might also help board members to know that Pleasant's secondary field of study at Texas Tech is computer science — just in case he doesn't make it as a singer.

While Pleasant is a perfect example of what the public schools' program of electives provides for society, little Gabriel Lewis is a better example of the students who potentially would be hurt by the change. The elementary school student is a talented artist, evidenced by the fact that recently national-level judges chose his work for inclusion in Midland's upcoming Celebration of the Arts.

There's one catch, Gabriel's work was entered in an adult category.

Gabriel's mother, Mrs. Tommy Lewis, says her son is "very talented and really needs the electives so he can carry on." Gabriel wants to grow up to be an illustrator, she says, and right now the public schools' program of electives allows him that option. But it might not, if the proposal before the State Board is enacted carelessly when it's considered on second reading Thursday. It was approved on first reading recently.

That's not to say the proposal is all bad. Most everyone — ourselves included —is in favor of raising educational standards. The State Board of Education should be able to revise its proposal in order to achieve its goal without sacrificing optional educational programs the schools have now.

Changing the rules can be expensive sometimes. Eddie Pleasant, Gabriel Lewis and thousands of other talented Texas students are living proof that such a move is not worth the cost this time.

Another View:

Soured technology

The public prosecutor in Pasadena, Calif., has decided to take two California Institute of Technology students to court for what they did to the Rose Bowl scoreboard during the game on Jan. 2, a decision that may say more about the city's sense of humor than about its concept of law and order.

Police said that they were obligated to investigate even if the manipulation of the scoreboard was perceived as a prank, because there was evidence that the law was violated when the students broke into the stadium. And the police say that there was a potential for worse had the equipment installed by the students been mistaken for a terrorist bomb and panic had ensued.

We are not persuaded. But, then, we have no notion of the workload of either the Pasadena prosecutor or the police. Crime enforcement is a highly selective business in which deterrence is the ruling factor. Not every car exceeding the 55-m.p.h. speed limit is pursued. We have a feeling that the genius behind this exercise in good-natured, harmless computer electronics skulduggery should be encouraged, not deterred. It was about the most exciting thing that happened in the stadium that afternoon.

One of the conspirators acknowledged that they may have themselves to blame for the pickle that the prospector has put them in. "After trespassing on somebody's property, don't go on television and talk about it," he said.

Lift lid on Alaskan crude

Though unusually bitter weather has had much of America in a deep freeze since Thanksgiving, heating fuel continues to be plentiful. It's not as inexpensive as we would like; but it never will be again. That's wishful thinking. The best we can hope for is price stability and plenty, both of which seem assured for the immediate future.

Edwin Feulner

That doesn't mean the U.S. should become complacent. At their most recent meeting, the OPEC oil ministers elected again not to raise prices. But that's not because they're less greedy than a few years ago; it's because there's a lot of excess oil in the world marketplace.

And if the U.S. is smart, it will add to OPEC's problems by putting Alaskan crude oil back on the energy market, lessening the world's dependence on Persian Gulf oil even further.

But this is not easily done. Federal legislation has been blocking the free commercial export of Alaskan oil and natural gas for the past decade.

Blocking the overseas sale of Alaskan crude oil has resulted in an oil glut in that state. Because of that, half of Alaska's oil is being shipped to the East and Gulf coasts at considerable cost (ultimately paid by us, the consumers). The East and Gulf coasts can purchase oil more economically, however, from other sources. Moreover, the glut has discouraged additional domestic oil exploration.

A recent study by energy experts Milton Copulos and S. Fred Singer shows that by lifting the restrictions on the export of Alaskan oil and gas, Congress could slice $1.5 billion from the budget deficit, improve America's balance of trade with Japan — which would be a prime market — and make it unnecessary to build the proposed $2-billion pipeline from Alaskan oil fields to the Midwest.

By putting more oil and gas on the world market, the analysts say, Alaskan exports "would reduce the need for OPEC oil, and apply downward pressure on the world oil price — to the benefit of the industrialized countries and oil-importing developing nations alike."

Noting that Alaskan oil and gas reserve estimates have grown over the past several years, Singer and Copulos say those who oppose the export of Alaskan gas and oil are at worst bull-headed and at best inconsistent. For example, there are no such prohibitions on the export of refined oil products, such as gasoline and fuel oil. "It seems strange, therefore, that there should be a prohibition against exporting crude oil."

In the event of an oil embargo, even an embargo coupled with production cutbacks, "the market could take over and adjust the available supply ... to the demand," they say. A production cutback would result in higher prices for all oil. "This redistribution of oil would be entirely automatic, acting in response to the normal market forces, not goverment policies," Singer and Copulos say.

Let's hope Congress learned something when President Reagan lifted oil price controls: That without government interference the energy market works more efficiently and benefits American consumers more than when government bureaucrats try to manage the world's energy supplies from their grey-hole offices in Washington. If they did, they will give OPEC another well-deserved nudge by lifting the lid on Alaskan oil.

GEORGE F. WILL

America's up to its neck in ties!

WASHINGTON — America is back and standing tall and has a nice sharp crease in its trousers. Perhaps America is back because its pants are pressed. Or vice versa. Hang on, campers, sociology is never smooth sledding and (mix that metaphor!) today we are venturing into deep water.

George F. Will

Proof of the fact that not everything incredible is untrue is this bulletin: Last week, the student government at Washington and Lee University asked the faculty to get the undergraduates into more presentable dress. "We don't want to be weird," said the student body president but, braving the charge of weirdness, the student executive committee asked professors to require that neckties be worn in their classes.

That should silence cynics who say it matters not who wins elections. Three years of Reagan and T-shirt chic has been routed. First Grenada, now this. Five more years and college students will be wearing madras jackets during spring vacation in liberated Havana.

There are always a few faculty members who do not mind being weird, and some at Washington and Lee saw the student government's request (subsequently softened to a general exhortation to the student body to dress better) as the thin end of the wedge of fascism. Others saw it as a sign of the "return to the '50s." but, then, some professors probably think that in the '50s America was fascist. One professor called the necktie idea "medieval." Fortunately, he is not a professor of medieval history. He is a professor of journalism.

You may be thinking: A dress code is to be expected from a school in Virginia named, in part, for Robert E. Lee, who went through West Point without a demerit and who, although he was a crackerjack soldier, was not, let's face it, a lot of laughs. True, Washington and Lee may not be a fair sample on which to base a continental conclusion. But if people start insisting on fair samples, what will happen to punditry.

Besides, I herewith report a second instance of cultural renaissance. A friend of mine, whose politics place him somewhere between Walter Mondale and Che Guevara, notes with distress that young ladies on campuses are again using makeup. My friend is demented, but not dishonest, so I believe him. I am eager to do so because in 1970, when I fled in horror from academic life, young ladies seemed to take as their model a singer, Janis Joplin, whose hair looked as though she had just stepped on a high-voltage cable. She was not a bit like Charlie.

The restoration of the ancien regime — neckties, the nuclear family and all that — was under way by Christmas, 1982, when Charlie, the thoroughly modern woman who is the protagonist in Revlon commercials, seriously considered marriage. She did not take the plunge, but probably will if Reagan is re-elected and "traditional values" get another four-year dose of his attention. (Remember when President Carter told bureaucrats to quit living in sin and get married? They, like the Russians in Afghanistan, paid no attention to him.)

In the current issue of Public Opinion magazine, Daniel Yankelovich sorts all this out. He explains that commercials such as Charlie's (and the Coke commercials, which are almost oppressively full of jolly groups) are part of "the struggle with narcissism." When did narcissism creep in, bringing hedonism with it? In the '60s and '70s, when there was a rebellion against "the 1950's pattern of obligations, rigid roles, and duties."

In the '60s, the man in the gray flannel suit slipped his leash and slipped into a T-shirt bearing a rude comment about foreign policy. Nothing — not the dollar nor NATO nor the family farm — has been up to snuff since then. In the 1960s there was, Yankelovich says, "a desire to break out of the 1950s."

Today, correct thinkers are trying to break back into them. In the '60s and '70s, "self-fulfillment" was all the rage, but "self-fulfillment" involves a heap of wear and tear and has bred a desire for tranquillity and social bonds, not to mention neckties.

A spokesman for the necktie folks says their industry is back and standing tall — Reaganomics works! — and is doing a land-office business in skinny ties and square-bottom ties, which the spokesman calls "a '50s look."

But recession also works for the necktie industry. There is, the spokesman says, a correlation between hard times and grim thoughts and the wearing of neckties. Furthermore, in the 1960s, when unemployment was low, men could dress like lunatics (remember the plum-colored dress shirts?) and still get hired.

This necktie theory of history has taken us a long way from Washington and Lee, but I warned you to buckle up because sociology is a winding road.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

U.S. facing Soviet 'problem'

WASHINGTON — Some of President Reagan's foreign policy critics agree with him that Central America is a U.S. security problem.

William Giandoni

They recognize that Nicaragua has become a Soviet-Cuban foothold in Central America.

They admit that leftist-led groups, influenced by the Soviets and Cubans, have been taking advantage of popular discontent there.

They realize that the Sandinistas sought Soviet penetration of Nicaragua and that the Sandinistas welshed on their pledge to bring democracy to their country once the Somoza-Debayle dynasty was toppled.

Robert S. Leiken, senior associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, summed it up in a few lines in the recently published book, "Central America: Anatomy of Conflict."

"Long-range Soviet efforts in the region, the legacy of anti-Yankeeism, the current Soviet presence in Nicaragua and the ongoing nature of the Central American crisis lead to the conclusion that the Soviet problem in Central America is long term and historical," Leiken wrote.

He and 15 other area specialists each contributed essays to the book which was published in cooperation with the Carnegie Endowment.

Most of the 16 authors, all men with impressive academic or diplomatic credentials, tend to support the thesis that the Reagan administration should reverse its policy, stop supporting those who are fighting the spread of Marxism-Leninism and accept "revolutionary change" in Central America.

"U.S. security interests in Central America are jeopardized by strategic alignment with the Soviet Union, but not by leftist power, or power-sharing, as such," Leiken wrote.

He acknowledged "the pro-Soviet bias of much of the Sandinista leadership, and of some of the Salvadoran left." But, nevertheless, Leiken affirmed that "from the point of view of short-term U.S. security interests, the United States can and should coexist peaceably with Sandinista Nicaragua."

"Central America: Anatomy of Conflict," like the earlier report of the Bipartisan National Commission on Central America that former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger chaired, punctures some of the myths that have been created about the region.

For instance, the Carnegie Endowment study notes that Guatemala and El Salvador have achieved a higher level of modernization than other Third World countries. In Central America, between 1950 and 1980, there emerged "a middle class, an urban working class, rural landless laborers and masses of impoverished peasants." That is in contrast with the widely held impression that only wealthy landowners and landless farmers populate the region.

"Since the early 1970s, Soviet strategy" has been to seek "footholds in the political, military, intelligence and security spheres." That is nearly a decade before the triumph of the Sandinistas in Nicaragua and the military coup in El Salvador, both in 1979, made Marxist subversion in Central America front-page news.

The Carnegie book, which Leiken edited, also underscores the resistance of the Central American military to pressures from the United States. Yet other, less-informed critics of U.S. policy insist that the Latin American military regimes not only enjoy enthusiastic U.S. support but do Washington's bidding without question.

Most of the contributors to "Central America: Anatomy of Conflict" explicitly or implicitly condemn the covert assistance that the United States has been providing the "contras," the anti-Sandinista forces in Nicaragua.

But Tom J. Farer, a Rutgers University law professor and harsh critic of Reagan administration policy, suggested that the United States should negotiate a compromise with the Sandinistas.

"Managua would agree to neutralize itself; no military relations with Cuba or the Soviet Union; no assistance to Central American rebels; no army out of proportion in size or quality of weapons greater than its neighbors," Farer wrote.

If Nicaragua failed to abide by the neutralization pact and in event "of a serious deterioration of human rights, the United States could renew aid to the rebels who then would inevitably re-emerge" in Nicaragua, Farer said.

SPEAKING OUT

Tax rollback designed to control government

By BILL NORTON

A resident of Odessa since 1948, Bill Norton recently headed a loosely knit group of taxpayers who successfully staged a rollback of that city's taxes. He is executive vice president and general manager of an oilfield specialty firm.

We in the Permian Basin are living in an oil economy and what affects oil affects our businesses in general.

We have enjoyed steady growth for several years, pushing ahead until 1981. Then the demand for oil and gas started easing off, slowing down the need for drilling new wells, and affecting the economy to the point of oversupply at all levels. Drilling rig manufacturers are off 90%, tank manufacturing and accessories are off 60%, and supply companies in general are off over 35%.

Since these businesses were in a booming operation and delivery to them was from three months to a year, this started a chain reaction of canceling orders. The equipment that could not be canceled or shipped created an overstock at all levels which had to be sold off and paid for. This resulted in layoffs, bankruptcy, and indebtedness that will take years to pay off.

Every business in the Permian Basin was affected, but our local governing agencies, not wanting to interrupt their future dreams, kept spending and adding like nothing was happening.

Since Texas legislation asked for a 100% property evaluation for tax purposes, Odessa revalued all property at the most inflated time of its history. When there were no houses or apartments to be rented, they evaluated homes at replacement value regardless of age, and took lots that are registered by lot number, block number and the addition which they are in, dividing them into square footage for their taxing base.

The law states that a homestead can be up to 20 acres. But tax officials took one acre that the house was on and called it the homestead. If a person had three lots in town, one was the homestead. The reason for this is that the school is giving a 40% homestead exemption, the city a 20% exemption and the county $5,000 as in the past. One man, 74 years of age, said he had a four acre homestead. This year he had to pay more taxes on the three other acres that he did on his home.

I know that the oil companies have been paying more than their fair share of taxes and have been revalued every year. We have seen oil go from $2.75 per barrel to $40 per barrel in a very short time, and our governing bodies have taken advantage of it. Our taxes have not been lowered by the increase received but have been increased with them.

This year taxing officials are trying to divide the taxing among all concerned and I commend them for it, but when they revalued our houses and businesses two to three times as much and our taxes more than doubled in most cases, then some action had to be taken. According to law, if local taxing agencies go over 8%, then a rollback election can be held with a petition of 10% of the registered voters.

The way state law requires figuring the 8% is that our city has over $2 billion of taxable property and the county over $5 billion. They take last year's income and divide it into the whole evaluation and come up with a percentage factor. Officials take the increase wanted and divide that into the same whole evaluation. The percentage increase must go over 8% before a rollback petition can be called. In our case, it was over 12%.

Knowing that taxpayers would have to make up the difference of less evaluation for oil and gas, and the confusion of revaluation, they pushed us over our limit. It has been hard for elected officials to understand, with unemployment up and business down, why they shouldn't be allowed to continue spending at the same pace as before and why they should cut back just because everyone else has. They still have 8% more than last year because the law allows them that much and we couldn't do anything about that.

I feel as though our governing management is like an ostrich with its head in the sand and knows nothing about what is going on around it. It's time the people demand good management just like in business. We pay their salaries and we expect them to look after our welfare with the best management available. We won the election and they still don't understand why we yell "stop spending!"

The economy is still down and people have had cuts in salary or lost their jobs and, still, they more than doubled our taxes. Everyone has tightened their belts except government. I believe every business would be happy with an 8% increase in gross profits — don't you?

Generous gift

To the Editor:

Every day there are generous donations made within the City of Midland. While most go without receiving public attention, there was one made on Jan. 14, 1984, of which the public should be aware.

The Big Brothers-Big Sisters organization had its monthly activity that day and it consisted of the volunteers and their matches going to the movie and having pizza afterwards. While this may not sound unusual, the activity would not have included the pizza if it wasn't for the generous donation received from Pizza Hut. They donated 300 free pizzas to the organization and because of their generosity everyone was able to enjoy free pizza after the movie.

Also because of the kindness of the owners of Club Granada, the Trevino family, the group was able to use their place of business to enjoy the pizza. There was a large turnout of everyone, with Big 2 news on location filming the whole event.

The people of Midland should be proud to have such a great business in the city that is able to help others who aren't so lucky. It was a great afternoon and without the generosity of Pizza Hut it wuld not have taken place.

Flying high?

To the Editor:

In your front page article of Jan. 17, T.J. Wageman announced that 20 employees of Republic Bank First National Midland were laid off because there was no work for them. The majority of these 20 were "seasoned" bankers, four I know very well totaled 76 years of service at FNB. The one I know best had over 27 years and only needed about 8 more years to retire.

The statement has been made that more employees will be laid off before the end of the first quarter. That really gives employees a secure feeling.

On Oct. 14, 1983, Wageman announced that the "Eagle had flown to the stars." Who would have thought the star would fall on so many "seasoned" bankers with so much to lose. That's what I call a bank with a heart!

Women honored

To the Editor:

A young women's leadership training organization is being officially recognized during the week of Feb. 12-18. The organization, United States Jaycee Women, is currently the fastest growing women's organization in America.

The Midland Jaycee Women are members of the U.S. Jaycee Women and have been active in the community for 35 years. They support such programs as Muscular Dystrophy, Rocky Mountain Multiple Sclerosis Center, Cystic Fibrosis, St. Jude's Children's Hospital, Teen Challenge and much more. This year the Midland Jaycee Women have been involved in various community projects. They contributed food baskets to needy families, provided new dresses for girls at Christmas, and entertained the elderly at local nursing homes.

On behalf of the Midland Jaycee Women, I would like to thank the citizens and merchants of Midland for their continued help and support.

Patriotic stance

To the Editor:

I would like to relate an incident which occurred recently at the Midland Regional Airport. It happened to be the afternoon of the Superbowl, and several football fans were catching the beginnings of the game on the coin-operated televisions before departure.

As customary, our national anthem was played before kickoff. Upon the first strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," my mother immediately stood up, urging the rest of the family to do the same. I must admit I was somewhat reluctant at first, noting that we were the only ones "standing at attention," but I finally did assume an upright position, influenced mainly, I believe, by my mother's earnest, honest patriotism.

Unfortunately this patriotism did not seem to spread beyond our family boundaries; why, I don't exactly know. I am sure many full-blooded Americans were present, but the only slightest indication was one gentleman's removing his hat towards the very end of the song.

Has peer pressure become so strong as to overpower our show of patriotism? Are we so vain and concerned about what others will think than we cannot acknowledge our national anthem in public? I hope not. I pray not. Do not get me wrong, though; there is much more to patriotism than a mere public show. But if we are too ashamed to display our fidelity to our country among our own countrymen, how can we when we must face the world?

I have always been taught that the United States of America was founded by the courage and patriotism of our forefathers. It is my sincere wish that this great land will follow in that tradition and continue to exist by the same virtues.

'Can system'

To the Editor:

Is it possible that Andy and Cliff know what they are talking about? is "Ole Reliable" really reliable? Are some people "just playing phone?" Or are we all just "reliably playing dumb?"

Article after article has been produced to explain how simple the entire "Can system" really can be. "Simple" is just a bit simply understated. The beginning of a long-term adjustment, with certain complications and required numerous second opinions, has been diagnosed.

"Hello, Andy. This is Cliff."

"Hi Cliff. Pull the string tighter and it will work better."

"Can't do that, Andy. You have to call someone to pull the string, but I am not sure who you call. It's an 800 can, I think, or maybe a 900 can, but I am not real sure, but don't worry."

"Hey Cliff, did you get your new bill for your can?"

"Yes, Andy, I did receive my bill for my can and one for my string and another one for when I called another can and also I received a bill for another can I bought so I would have an extension can in the can. Andy, are you still there?"

"Yes I am here, Cliff. My bills do not seem to be like your bills, although I did receive a bill for a partial can and a note I don't understand."

"What was the note, Andy?"

"Well, Cliff, it was a note saying I was behind on paying for something and if I don't pay they are going to cut something off, but I don't know which can I didn't pay for or which string they are going to cut."

"You probably should call someone, Andy."

"Well, I did, Cliff, and they told me that they did not handle that particular string and then told me who to call on the can, who in turn told me to call another can and then they told me that the button had probably come loose. Cliff, that took all day and in the process I let the time get away from me and I missed my job by the fireplace and in the kitchen."

"Well, Andy, that is what I like about working outdoors. Why don't you do what I did, Andy?"

"What's that, Cliff?"

"I just called the main can office and told them to draw a draft on my account for my can."

"How did that work, Cliff?"

"Well, Andy, I had an overdraft the first day on the charges for my can."

"What did you do then, Cliff, call them on your can?"

"No, Andy, they cut my string."

Midland's finest

To the Editor:

I just read the article concerning Capt. Kuykendall and Sgt. Roberts retiring from the Midland Police Department. I felt like the article really did them justice; however the people need to also hear comments from some of the privileged people that got to work with these men.

The City of Midland will be losing two of the finest police officers this city has ever seen. Capt. Kuykendall was and has always been a man I could look up to and depend on to advise me when necessary. He has been highly respected by all of the men and women who served under him. He is a friend and a leader.

Sgt. "Preacher" Roberts has been a part of my life since I was in school at Midland High. Even my in-laws remember him around the school when they attended Midland High. He always has a kind word or a big hug and kiss for all the girls. He was the kind of police officer all the kids wanted for friend. Midland High won't be the same without him.

I had the privilege of working with these men for nearly five years and am proud of it. All of us, the City of Midland, should be proud of them and wish them the very best in the years to come.

Our hats off to Capt. Kirk and "Preacher". Thanks guys.

Convictions

To the Editor:

I would like to commend Mary Knoll for her excellent article in the Sunday, Jan. 15, paper. And also the great news report on ABC at 10:30 p.m.

At first I thought I was watching a communist country dragging Christians out of a worship service, for teaching their own children. The issue was not quality education, as these children tested, exceeded the public education. It was because the state humanistic materials were not being used for certification.

May God help us if we do not stand up as a nation against such evil even if it means persecution. And pray for, and support these beautiful people for their strong convictions.

State control

To the Editor:

Do your children belong to you or to the state? As one man on ABC News pointed out, "Render unto Caeser what is Caeser's," but our children don't belong to Caeser.

We have 42 states that don't require certification, therefore a certified teacher doesn't mean one can teach. Certification is only a license of the state like all those teachers in Russia that have lost their religious freedoms.

Janice Stockton

God's children

To the Editor:

In regard to Martin Neill's letter concerning the Nebraska school issue, there are several points he apparently does not understand. First of all his definition of religion and religious freedom does not apply to all of us as there are several thousand parents and pastors across this nation who are in total agreement with the Christian schools in Nebraska. If he and his Southern Baptist committee have no problem with licensure, accreditation or certification, then let them get all they can — Jim Jones did! I will not be so brash as to condemn them for it. I, and a few thousand like me, have some problem with it, however, and we would appreciate the same religious freedom that he enjoys.

The statement that all the Nebraska school needs to do is "meet or exceed" the minimum requirements is naive. In the first place Faith Baptist does meet the standards that are relevant to quality education as evidenced by the standarized testing showing their students one and one-half to two years ahead of the local public schools. Obviously more than "minimum education" is resulting. If the intent of the law is to provide "quality education" then what is the problem?

Secondly, the teacher in this small school has a bachelor's degree in secondary education and is working toward her master in the same field. Quality education is not the issue — it is control.

Thirdly, there are no health or fire violations cited against the school which would endanger the safety of the students.

Fourthly, every student is in the school at the direction of his or her parents, who should have some say in this matter. The issue again is control — control over a school in which the government has invested no money.

Incidentally, some of the requirements that Mr. Neill recommends they "meet or exceed" include a library that must be maintained with no less than 1,200 volumes, with an additional 150 volumes being added annually of which only 2% of the books are religious in nature. Really now, can it honestly be called a Christian school when only 2 percent of the books are Christian?

Mr. Neill's last statement was the most confusing of all when quoting "render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's." Of which were you referring Mr. Neill? Should Faith Baptist Church render the church unto Caesar or the children unto Caesar? Herein is the problem. Neither the church, school, or the children belong to the state. They belong to God! It is inconceivable to expect us to render these to Caesar.

As for the Christians violating a "Johnny come lately" law, you will find the precedent was set by Moses and his parents; Daniel; Shadrach; Meshach and Abednego; Peter and John. They are heroes in the Bible for standing up against the laws that violated Christian principle.

Join us sir in our stand!

How far have we come since 'giant leap for mankind?'

Bill Modisett

Back on July 16, 1969, I was doing exactly what millions of others the world over were doing: Sitting around a television watching an unbelievable sight.

That was the date when Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin Aldrin did what men had longed to do for centuries. They reduced the space between the moon and the Earth to a mere space flight and gave Armstrong the opportunity to take that "one giant leap for mankind."

Since that day almost 15 years ago there have been numerous giant leaps for mankind. Satellites have reduced the size of the globe drastically. One can climb aboard a modern jetliner, have lunch in London and dinner back in New York. Communications advances allow a virtual instantaneous flow of news and information the world over. Medical technology has made a longer lifespan achievable if not necessarily desirable. But I can't help wondering, have we really come so far?

When space travel gave man the opportunity to break free of his earthly home there was a rush of excitement generated, not unexpectedly, by the anticipation that here also was the opportunity to escape from man's seemier side: His preoccupation with war, killing his neighbor, lusting after his neighbor's wife — or husband, falling from grace, if you will.

Space travel seemed to offer earthbound man the opportunity to rise above the rubble and to throw himself into the skies in pursuit of all the wondrous aspects of life he never found on Earth.

In 15 years, the luster faded. Dreams of space stations, colonies on the Moon or Mars, extended space flights slipped away as the old realities crashed home. Concerns about the millions of dollars spent on space exploration loomed. Wouldn't that money have been better spent relieving hunger and hatred at home?

Of course, if money ever does relieve hunger or hatred. More often than not that isn't the case.

But now there is renewed interest in space again, this time in the form of the shuttle flights. Challenger's in space in the first shuttle flight of 10 scheduled for this year.

There's reason for all us dreamers to hope that the shuttle program offers mankind even more than the early space program offered. That isn't to imply the early program didn't make life better here on Earth. It did.

There are any number of goals a space program can not and, thus, never will accomplish. For example, a space program can't make earthlings live more peacefully. It can help us learn that we possess the capability of killing each other on Earth or in space and that we are the only ones who can choose our course.

Neither can a space program solve the problems or hunger or poverty on Earth. It feasibly can provide us with the means to grow more food or create more wealth, but the decision of how that food and wealth will be distributed rests with us alone.

Yes, we're still reaching for the stars. But our "giant leap" was such a short step.

Beatles took America 20 years ago

By DOLORES BARCLAY

NEW YORK (AP) — "Shindig," the pop music show, was on television. "Goldfinger" was in the movie theaters. Women, a few, tried topless swimsuits and teens skimmed sidewalks on the first skateboards.

It was 1964 — the year the Beatles took America.

Twenty years ago on Feb. 9, the four mopheads from Liverpool made their American debut on "The Ed Sullivan Show." It was one of the most watched TV programs in the nation — in New York City alone, 72 percent of all viewers tuned in that Sunday night.

In the studio audience, there were girls, girls, girls — screaming, screeching, squirming adolescent girls.

The girls — 3,000 screamers — were at Kennedy Airport when Paul McCartney, 21, Ringo Starr, 23, George Harrison, 20, and John Lennon, 23, arrived Feb. 7, 1964.

Fred Martin, now an advertising consultant in Newport Beach, Calif., was the record company's publicist then. "They were surprised as we drove in from the airport that there were minute-by-minute broadcasts on them, on where the car was. That astounded them," he said in a telephone interview.

"The Sullivan show was not the biggest thing they were doing," he said. "The biggest thing was coming to the States...Playing Carnegie Hall really intrigued them the most. It appealed to their sense of the ridiculous — the Beatles playing Carnegie Hall."

THE CBS PRESS release heralding the Beatles' debut had said merely that the British singing group would appear on the Sullivan show with "Mitzi McCall and Charlie Brill, comedy team...the four Fays, tumbling act" and 37 members of the cast from the Broadway musical, "Oliver."

But America was getting ready. The national merchandising manager of Capitol Records said in a staff memo: "Shortly after the first, you'll have bulk quantities of a Beatle hairdo wig. As soon as they arrive — and until further notice — you and each of your sales and promotion staff are to wear the wig during the business day."

For the Beatles, those 15 days were a lark. They entertained the press at news conferences with jaunty quips to inane questions.

Starr was asked what he thought of Beethoven. His reply: "Great. 'Specially his poems."

When a reporter asked what they owed their success to, Lennon said: "Good press agent."

Lennon is dead now, shot outside his Manhattan apartment building Dec. 8, 1980. McCartney, Harrison and Starr live in England where they pursue careers in music and film.

But in 1964, the Beatles had scarcely begun.

WILDLY POPULAR in England and on the continent, the Beatles and their records did not catch on in the United States until Jan. 17, when "I Want to Hold Your Hand" hit No. 1 on the Cashbox chart.

After Ed Sullivan, the Beatles sold 2.5 million records here in less than a month. Later that year, they grossed $1.6 million in the first week's showing of their movie, "A Hard Day's Night," and Lennon's kooky book, "In His Own Write," climbed best seller lists overnight.

The Beatles made six albums that year and were immortalized in wax at Madam Tussaud's. Ringo's tonsillectomy in December 1964 inspired an international vigil.

It had taken less than a year to infect the nation with Beatlemania.

Songwriter Christopher Cross, who won four Grammy Awards in 1981 for his song and album, "Sailing," was 12 when he saw the Beatles on "Ed Sullivan."

"To me, the Beatles created an excitement about being in the business itself," said Cross in an interview last week. "They stick out to me as the greatest thing in pop music. Paul McCartney has always been, and remains, my biggest influence of all time because of song structure. He and John taught me how to write songs."

Grammy Award-winning vocalist Roberta Flack was teaching grade school in Arlington, Va., in 1964. "I was impressed," she said. "The Beatles represent historical change. They made a difference. They tapped not only the imagination, but the pulse of people all over the world."

THE USUALLY granite-faced Sullivan was animated that night. He gently shushed the squealing audience and made the girls promise to remain seated.

There was Paul, wide-eyed and boyish, feverishly working the bass guitar singing "All My Loving" at one microphone, while George, on lead guitar, and John, on rhythm guitar, harmonized at another. Ringo sat high above them on a platform, playing drums.

Paul soloed on "Til There Was You" from Broadway's "The Music Man." Later, after a magician did card tricks and Georgia Brown sang songs from "Oliver," the Beatles returned with the Lennon-McCartney song, "She Loves You."

Their hair, considered outrageously long then, fell in agreeable bangs across their foreheads and stopped somewhere mid-neck. The Beatle hair style eventually became as conservative as a crewcut, but in 1964, it was a novelty. The late oil billionaire John Paul Getty posed in a Beatle wig, as did Ed Sullivan.

After the Sullivan show, the Beatles played the Washington Coliseum in Washington, D.C. On Feb. 12, they played Carnegie Hall, where fans drowned their music in screams.

Sometimes, fans went overboard, said Martin.

"THEY WENT to a party at the British Embassy in Washington and a woman came up to one of them, it was either Paul or John, with a pair of scissors. She was going to whack off a hunk of hair," Martin recalled. "She came within an inch of his eye. He turned to me and said, 'Get me out of here.' "

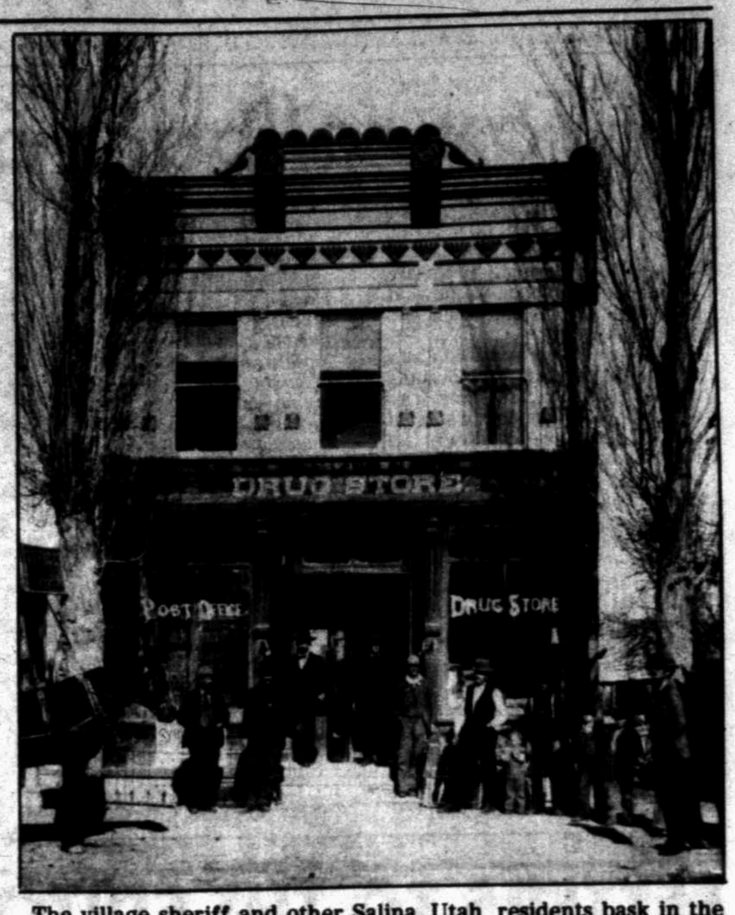

Bob Bonis, the Beatles' tour manager that summer, recalled last week the hazards of Beatle travel.

"There was no going back to the dressing room after a concert — it was straight to the limousine, and sometimes an armored car," he said.

Anderson spent more than 40 years photographing the history of Mormonism and Utah. An exhibition of 150 photographs is on display through February at the Allison Fine Arts Building, Midland College. This show, the first retrospective of Anderson's work, was possible because another resident of Springville, Reil G. Francis, saved Anderson's glass plate negatives from destruction. The Midland show marks the first showing of the exhibit outside the Amon Carter Museum, Fort Worth.

ENTERTAINMENT

The two acts billed for Chaparral Center's Feb. 18 concert are related in more ways than their music. Known for performing bluegrass and pure country, The Whites, Buck, Sharon, Jerry and Cheryl, will be opening for country performer Ricky Skaggs, Sharon White's husband. Tickets, priced at $10, may be purchased at Chaparral Center, Endless Horizons, Midland and Odessa, Record Bar, Odessa, and KBYG Radio, Big Spring. All seats are reserved for the 8 p.m. show.

Explosions probably contributed to crash

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A lack of caution by a special effects technician who detonated explosions beneath a helicopter probably helped cause a fatal crash during filming of the "Twilight Zone," a newspaper quoted a U.S. air safety expert as saying.

National Transportation Safety Board investigator Don Llorente also cited the failures of numerous filmmakers as "contributing to the accident," which killed actor Vic Morrow and two children, the entertainment newspaper Daily Variety said Thursday.

Reached by telephone Saturday, Llorente declined to comment on the newspaper story, saying, "That (NTSB) report is confidential. It should not have gotten out."

He also noted that any comments he made in his report "were just recommendations to the NTSB. It is up to the board to determine the probable cause."

He added that the report had been subpoenaed by the Los Angeles County district attorney's office for its criminal investigation and the prosecutor had turned over copies to defense attorneys.

The crashing helicopter killed Morrow, 53, Renee Chen, 6, and Myca Le, 7, as they fled a mock attack on a Vietnamese village on July 23, 1982, at Indian Dunes Park near Los Angeles.

A Municipal Court preliminary hearing enters its fifth week Monday to determine whether five filmmakers charged with involuntary manslaughter should stand trial.

Llorente's report also said director John Landis joked that "we'll probably lose the helicopter" when a cameraman asked about the number of explosions to be set off underneath the craft, the newspaper said.

The larger report detailed his conclusions, which the newspaper said, among other things, cited:

— "The director's failure to assure that all parties involved in the accident filming segment were advised as to the sequence and timing of the planned explosions and his failure to hold any preproduction meetings regarding the accident filming sequence as dictated by the motion picture industry standards."

— "The pilot's failure to ascertain the sequence and timing of the planned explosions and his reliance on other personnel to assure the safety of the helicopter."

'Art of Chivalry' comes to UTPB Student Lounge

ODESSA — A photographic exhibit to be displayed at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Student Lounge Saturday through March 4 will illustrate "The Art of Chivalry."

"The Art of Chivalry" is an exhibit created through a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to demonstrate the idea that chivalry is not dead. The photographic images of knights in armor and the equipment used by them recall a time long ago when knights sat around a table, swore their allegiance to their monarch and boasted of a willingness to fight to the death.

The exhibit includes photographs of a collection in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City. It is the first such major exhibit in over 30 years.

Accompanying the exhibit is a 15-minute audio and slide program on the age of chivalry, created by the Texas Humanities Resource Center. The audio-visual show can be seen by groups on request.

The exhibit will culminate with a showing of the feature length film, "The Lion in Winter," at 7:30 p.m. March 2 in the Student Lounge cinema area. The show stars Katherine Hepburn as Eleanor of Aquitaine and Peter O'Toole as King Henry II of England.

The program, presented by the UTPB Office of Student Life, is open to the public at no charge. The exhibit may be seen between the hours of 8 a.m. and 10 p.m.

For more information contact Woody Kupper at the Office of Student Life, 1-367-2136.

Fire officials may review explosive regulations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fire officials say stronger regulations on the movie industry's use of explosives may be needed in the wake of the "Twilight Zone" deaths and burns suffered by singer Michael Jackson.

"We might have to spell them out a little clearer," says city Fire Inspector Harry Morck.

Jackson's hair was ignited by special-effects fireworks during the filming of a Pepsi commercial. He suffered second and third degree burns on the back of his head.

Veteran actor Vic Morrow and two child actors died when a helicopter crashed on them during a series of special effects explosions in the filming of "Twilight Zone."

And last week a truck loaded with cameras and explosives belonging to "The A-Team" production company was stolen from a city street where it was parked overnight.

"I imagine that after the 'Twilight Zone' trial, a committee will be formed to review some of the regulations," Morck said.

The "Twilight Zone" production company had all required permits to set off explosives when the helicopter crashed on the three actors, said county Fire Inspector Reggie Lee.

"At the time, we obviously thought it was going to be all right," Lee said. "But we're human. We're going to use 'Twilight Zone' as a learning experience. We're being more specific about things now."

In the "Twilight Zone" and "A-Team" incidents, rules may have been broken or not enforced, the inspectors said. They would not discuss Jackson's accident, which was being privately investigated.

Morck said current rules prohibit a truck containing special effects explosives from being parked on city streets.

"They can't drive it around, they have to transport it to and from the studio, where it is stored in a standardized magazine. They're not supposed to leave the vehicle unguarded in city streets," he said.

The truck's driver said he parked it because stormy weather made it dangerous to try to return to the studio.

Movie-makers must obtain special-effects permits from such agencies as the National Transportation Safety Board, the Department of Transportation, California's Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the Federal Aviation Administration, Morck said.

But the bulk of the special-effects permits are granted by the state fire marshal through city and county fire departments, with the ultimate decision resting with the fire captain in the district where the special effect will be carried out, he said.

Even such minor effects as campfires or bullets hitting balsa-wood walls are regulated.

Officials ban flying over highly populated areas, disallow any distractions near freeways, refuse special-effects permits for windy days and often try out a stunt first to check its safety, Morck said.

The restrictions have created conflict with the movie industry.

"They feel that the fire department and other agences are driving the industry out of Southern California," Lee said. "Each stunt is different, so what we try to do is be the devil's advocate and think of the worst possibility."

Despite the "Twilight Zone," Jackson and "A-Team" incidents, Morck said, "I wrote 111 permits last month and haven't had any incidents."

One of his toughest assignments, said Morck, a 15-year veteran of the department, was the hit movie "Blue Thunder," which featured dogfighting helicopters roaring over Los Angeles at low altitudes.

Roomful of Blues to perform on Valentine's in Paragon Atrium

Roomful of Blues will perform in the Paragon Atrium Valentine's Day.

Nominated for a 1983 Grammy Award in the classical rhythm and blues category for its album (Muse label) with Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson, Roomful has once again been nominated in that Grammy category for its summer release with Big Joe Turner. Others nominated in this category include Stevie Ray Vaughn, B.B. King, Albert King and "Gatemouth" Brown. The Grammy Awards will be televised Feb. 28.

Based in Providence, R.I., Roomful is not a new group. It was founded in 1968 by Al Copley and Duke Robillard, and the horns were added in 1970.

Original members of Roomful include Greg Piccolo, vocals and tenor sax; Copley, piano; Doug James, baritone sax; Rich Lataille, alto and tenor sax; and John Rossi, drums. The newer members are Bob Enos, trumpet; Ronnie Earl, guitar; and Porky Cohen (who used to play with Glenn Miller), trombone.

Basically a jump R&B (rhythm and blues) band, Roomful's repertoire includes works by B.B. King, Johnny "Guitar" Watson, Gatemouth Brown, T-Bone Walker, Albert Collins and Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson.

'The Lonely Guy' maps out survival for unlucky singles

A Review

"The Lonely Guy," starring Steve Martin and written by Neil Simon, is a survival manual for the single guy unlucky in love. An amusing how-to of apartment hunting, eating in restaurants alone, and meeting and dating, "The Lonely Guy" is crammed full of vital information on getting by in the wilderness of loneliness.

Just who are these lonely guys? Well, they can be spotted almost anywhere. In a plant store buying a fern for company, jogging in a suit doused with "artificial sweat" (since they don't really jog and don't get worked up enough to sweat), walking the dog ("It's their instinct to like people," so rejection is out of the question), or giving blood as a way of meeting healthy, caring, eligible women.

Steve Martin as greeting-card writer Larry Hubbard is a lonely guy. Recently ditched by his promiscuous girlfriend (Robyn Douglass), he ends up on a park bench with another lonely guy played with pallid dejection by Charles Grodin. Together they make a pathetic pair, with slumped shoulders, monotone voices and sweater vests buttoned all the way up. But misery loves company, and they are the best they can do.

It is Grodin's lonely guy who sinks the lowest, though, when he gives a party, and the only other guests (besides Larry) are cardboard figures of Hollywood stars strategically placed around the room.

Rescue from this road of ruination comes in the form of six-time divorcee, Iris (Judith Ivey). She's a veteran of several marriages to "lonely guys" and can spot them right away. But when she and Larry finally get together, the fear of being hurt again drives them apart, and he ends up lonely once more.

As a cure, Larry writes a guide for lonely guys and becomes famous, making all the TV talk shows. But he finds that suddenly being in demand by Merv Griffin (who does a lousy impression of himself), Dr. Joyce Brothers, and a host of beautiful girls, is no substitute for real love and has its own strange kind of loneliness.

"The Lonely Guy" is a bittersweet comedy, because it is hard to laugh at people when they are down. But Martin is at his most endearing, and though there are asides to the camera and some narration in the beginning, we forgive the intrusion and settle into the story, finding his dilemma believable and, in spite of ourselves, laughable.

Rated R, "The Lonely Guy" does take some jibes at female sexuality — Iris' thinking she can have an orgasm when Larry sneezes — that is not really funny in itself, unless we realize we are the supposedly sexually hip generation. But all in all, "The Lonely Guy" suffers from the old problem Martin's movies have — sustaining the joke for the length of a feature film.

"Reckless," starring the fresh and provocative talent of Aidan Quinn (doing the best amalgam of Marlon Brando, James Dean and Montgomery Cliff ever) takes the same basic plot of the recent Tom Cruise movie, "All The Right Moves" and fills in the blank spaces.

That is not to say "Reckless" is the definitive "teen" movie about alienation and frustration, but we do get inside the head of Johnny Rourke (Quinn) in a way that helps us to understand his seemingly erratic behavior. What looks like defiance and indifference by the leather-jacketed motorcycle-riding youth, is really the working out of the limited choices his scenario of life offers.

An only child, son of an alcoholic father, Rourke starts to go "bad" when his mother abandons them. And when the future looms before him as bleak as the blackened smoke-filled sky of his steeltown home (photographed with breath-taking close-up surrealism by Michael Ballhaus), his resistance to the tick of the clock breaks down. He drinks too much, plays "chicken" with himself, charging on his bike at beer cans on a high observation platform overlooking the steel mill and alienates what friends he has.

So when Rourke falls for a cheerleader (Daryl Hannah) unhappy with her "perfection," their pent-up emotion explodes, giving off a smoldering heat. Miss Hannah is not up to the intensity Quinn can generate and her dissatisfaction with her ideal existence does not play on our sympathies as does his. But there is something in their ill-fated love that keeps "Reckless" on the edge.

Rated R, "Reckless" does a fade to black on most of the sex scenes, but the message is to throw caution to the wind and live in the fast lane — not a favorite parental theme. And there is music by INXS that promotes the idea and gives Rourke a style of dancing that comes through in a memorable and amusing up-dated version of the sock hop. Nevertheless, for Quinn's innate tension and purity of character that defines this movie, "Reckless" is worth seeing.

Pinkerton, in Texas Opera Theatre's production of Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," set for Feb. 28 at Midland High School Auditorium at 8 p.m. The work will be sung in English. "Madame Butterfly" is the fourth opera production sponsored by Midland Opera Theatre since its formation in 1982. Tickets are priced at $8 and $12. For more information call 682-7500.

Actress goes from playing mother on sitcom to 'whore cat' on Broadway

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Everyone thought Betty Buckley was doomed to playing mothers for the rest of her career.

But they were wrong about the actress who played the memorable Abby Bradford on the TV family sitcom, "Eight Is Enough."

Since the series perished after four network seasons, she has played two wildly divergent roles: a hard-driving country music star in "Tender Mercies," and Grizabella, the forlorn prostitute cat and singer of the hit song, "Memories," in the Broadway smash musical, "Cats."

"After the series ended, a lot of producers and directors didn't want to meet with me because of the character I played," she said. "But there are those of us who learn to do our craft and hang in there until the right thing comes along. Who would have guessed that after 'Eight Is Enough' I would wind up playing outrageous women and whore cats?"

Miss Buckley was here on a two-week sabbatical for business matters and to help call the attention of Academy Award voters to the varied qualities of "Tender Mercies." The film is a gentle tale concerning a country music star (Robert Duvall) whose career has been destroyed by drinking, his young wife (Tess Harper) who helps rebuild his life and his unforgiving ex-wife (Betty Buckley).

"All of us who were connected with 'Tender Mercies' knew that we had quite an art piece that would have a life of its own," she said. "We knew that Universal wouldn't be enthusiastic at first, but our attitude was, 'Wait and see, gentlemen.'

"I can understand their thinking. 'Tender Mercies' doesn't have glitz and glamor and sex and violence — the things that are easy to sell. Why pour money into a campaign for a film with none of the obvious attributes?"

Still, she said, the film turned out to be a movie that wouldn't die.

"Tender Mercies" has appeared on many critics' lists of 10 best movies, and Duvall has been named best actor of 1983 by the Los Angeles Film Critics Association and the New York Film Critics Circle. Miss Buckley hopes Academy Award voters will recognize not only Duvall, but the film's director, Australian Bruce Beresford, and supporting players Tess Harper, Wilford Brimley, Ellen Barkin and herself.

'Poland' won't be read in Polish

LOS ANGELES (AP) — American author James Michener's involvement with Radio Free Europe has scotched plans by Polish government officials to have his epic "Poland" translated into their language.

Michener was recently named to the Board for International Broadcasting, which oversees Radio Free Europe. Soviet bloc countries consider the radio network a tool of U.S. propaganda intent on subverting communist governments in Eastern Europe.

"Because of that (Michener's appointment), it is quite clear we could not now publish (his) book in Poland," an official told the Los Angeles Times in today's editions.

The Times did not identify the official, but said he had been involved in discussions of translation rights.

"Poland" traces the fortunes of three families through nearly 800 years of Polish history.

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — John H. Lawrence, widely regarded as the founding father of nuclear medicine, is the winner of the 1983 Enrico Fermi Award, the U.S. Department of Energy's highest scientific honor.

Lawrence, 80, regent of the University of California and founder of Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory's biology and medicine research program, was cited Friday for "pioneering work and continuing leadership in nuclear medicine."

The Fermi Award, given annually since 1954, was named for Enrico Fermi, who achieved the first self-sustained, controlled nuclear reaction. Along with a gold medal, winners receive $25,000 and a presidential citation.

Joining the University of California's Berkeley campus in 1937, John Lawrence became the world's first expert on the biological effects of high-energy radiation emitted by particle accelerators and the radioactive material the accelerators produced.

PARIS (AP) — The international love affair between a French diplomat and a Chinese artist, the makings of headlines and troubled relations between Paris and Peking for two years, was capped by a marriage Saturday in a small civil ceremony.

"He who fights for love, wins," said Jean Tiberi, Mayor of Paris' 5th district, quoting a Chinese philosopher during the wedding of Emmanuel Bellefroid and Li Shuang.

Bellefroid was on post at the French Embassy in Peking in 1981 when he met and fell in love with Li Shuang, a Chinese painter. The two became engaged.

But the romance apparently displeased Chinese authorities, who condemned Li Shuang to a re-education camp for her "abnormal" relations with Bellefroid.

'How Movies Move' explained

"How Movies Move," from the New England Foundation for the Arts, is the Petroleum Museum's first temporary exhibit in 1984.

"This is an exhibit which explains, in non-technical terms, how people have employed an optical illusion to produce the appearance of continued motion in films and in various mechanical toys which preceded present day motion pictures," says Roger Godin, assistant director.

Developed by the Children's Museum of Boston, the exhibit consists of three interrelated activity centers featuring updated versions of 19th century animation toys — thaumatropes, phenakistascopes and zeotropes. Adjacent panels explain the principle at work. The self-contained exhibit can accommodate 12 to 15 participants plus observers at one time.

The exhibit will be at the Petroleum Museum, Interstate 20 East, through March 27. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

'Thriller' stops the presses

NEW YORK (AP) — Award-winning pop superstar Michael Jackson has set another record.

For the first time in its publishing history, Bantam Books has stopped the press run of the paperback edition of "The Guinness Book of World Records" so it could include the fact that Jackson's "Thriller" is the biggest selling solo album ever.

POSITIVE THINKING

Getting rid of ill will may get rid of ill health

A woman who had been having a bad time with arthritis startled me by asserting that she had heard a mystical voice. She had been alone in her house when this strange occurence happened. She was positive it was not a dream. She had distinctly heard the voice saying, "Love is the only way. Stop hating and your arthritis will be better."

"What do you make of that?" she asked me.

I told her about a book by Dr. Loring T. Swaim, a former president of the American Medical Association entitled Arthritis, Medicine and the Spiritual Laws. From long observation Dr. Swaim became convinced that arthritis often stems from chronic resentment or hate. He gives examples of arthritis being cured once the sufferer becomes rid of hostility feelings.

"Do you hate someone?" I asked.

The lady admitted "There is somebody I hate — very much." The object of her animosity was a man who had done things detrimental, as she saw it, to her interests and those of some other people.

"Is your hate hurting him any?" I asked.

"No, I don't suppose it is."

"And what is it doing to you?"

Reluctantly she replied, "I guess maybe it could be harming me."

"Look, I said, "you are entitled to your own opinion of a man's conduct. But it is dangerous to harbor hatred even so. You have the power to stop that hating. Love is the way. Start counteracting hate with positive good will and perhaps your arthritic condition will improve."

She knew this made sense so she went for the idea. She practiced sending out good will thoughts toward this man. It made her feel so good that she kept at it until she no longer felt hatred. She reports that the acute pain lessened.

Don't knock yourself out hating. Perhaps it isn't easy to shift from the hate habit to the love habit. But the person who does it is in for a lot of happiness and who knows, maybe better health also.

Boston mayor recycles gift to save city money

BOSTON (AP) — Mayor Raymond L. Flynn figures a gift worth receiving is a gift worth giving, so he modified a present from a business group and plans to give it to an organization in Ireland.

After his inauguration, the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce Executives Club gave Flynn a bone china bowl mounted on a block of walnut. On the front of the base was a brass plate engraved with a message wishing Flynn success as mayor.

A handsome present, Flynn thought. So handsome, in fact, he'd like to share it.

He had the plate removed, reversed, and engraved with the words, "To the Boys' and Girls' Club of Limerick, from Raymond L. Flynn, Mayor of Boston."

New diabetes treatments include spray, capsules

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read with a great deal of interest your column on pancreas transplants for patients with diabetes. Are there any other new developments in the treatment of diabetes that patients can look forward to some time in the future? — Mrs. J.R., Indianapolis, Ind.

Dear Mrs. R.: Among the treatments described at the annual meeting of the American Diabetes Association was an insulin nasal spray and sustained release insulin capsules that would be implanted under the skin.

It is speculated that the insulin spray might be able to take the place of insulin injections at mealtimes; however, it would probably not be sufficient to maintain adequated insulin levels during sleep because of its brief duration of action. The insulin capsules are designed to release insulin at a low dose over a period of several months. So far they have only been tested in rats.

UTPB 'gets physical' in wellness-minded program

Variety of services focus in on individual's exercise needs

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Warm-up suits are favored attire in many places other than the gym and tennis court. Entire families jog regularly, subscribing to the saying "The family that plays together, stays together."

Physical fitness — always a serious business for the vigorous segment of the country — has broadened its appeal.

In keeping with this trend, the University of Texas of the Permian Basin is offering a wellness program that includes such services as:

— A complete series of tests measuring physical fitness,
— Coronary heart disease risk tests,
— Individualized prescriptions and counseling based on results of the two tests;
— Counseling on cancer risk reduction,
— Seminars and follow-up testing to measure progress,
— Recommendations for establishing corporate fitness programs.

Each participant's risk of coronary heart disease is evaluated on:

— Health history questionnaires,
— Oxygen intake and capacity,
— Electrocardiograms taken while resting and riding a stationary bicycle,
— Blood pressure taken resting and on the bicycle,
— Blood tests,
— Percentage of body fat,
— Stress and tension levels, and the person's history of smoking and family background of heart disease.

Participants learn just how in or out of shape they are in tests of:

— Cardiovascular fitness: determined by equipment monitoring the participant's reaction to the stress of powering the bike, including the EKG and blood pressure test,
— Strength and flexibility of the body,
— Reaction and movement time,
— Posture.

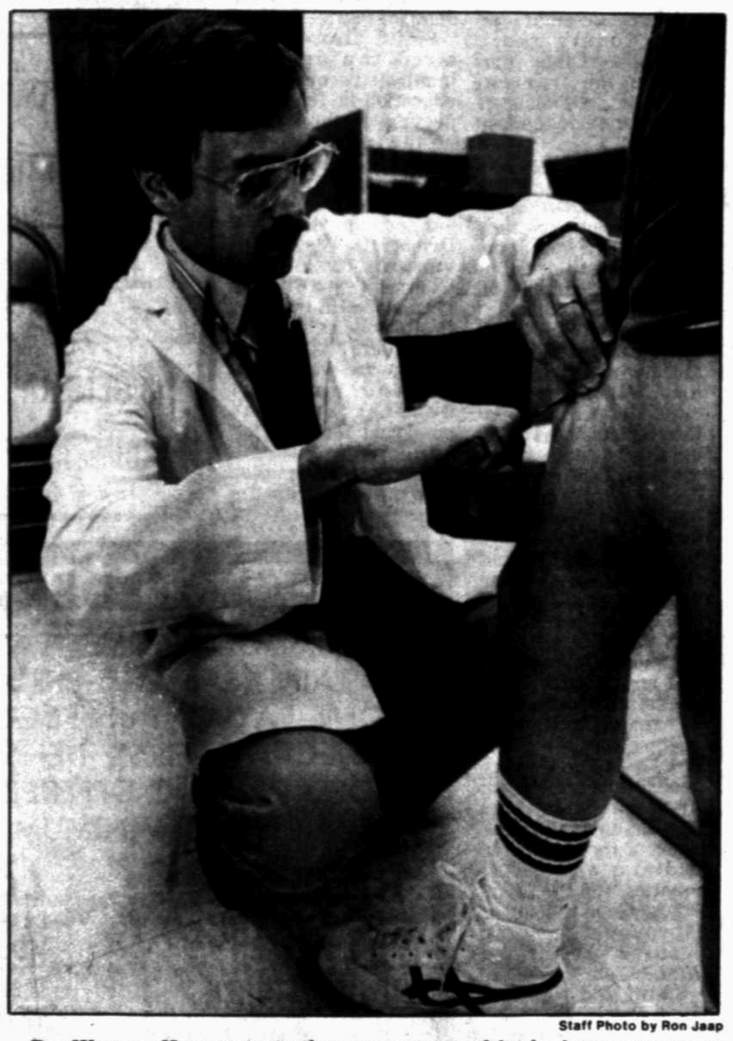

Once these results have been tabulated on a computer and compared to the norms for people of the same age and size, each participant receives an individualized cardiovascular exercise prescription which details the length, frequency and type of aerobic activity the person needs to become physically fit and less susceptible to coronary heart disease.

The equipment and data is in place at UTPB. Only some final preparations remain before the program will begin for individuals and corporations.

Body fat is tested by a special device which squeezes together fatty parts of the body to measure the percentage present.

Body strength is checked through exercises and weight lifting. Lung capacity and expiration is monitored on the latest pulmonary function equipment.

Fitness much more than matter of life as 'weekend warrior'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Staff Writer Lawrence Budd sampled the testing program only to discover he wasn't in the perfect shape he thought he was.

ODESSA — Getting in shape has much of America out of breath.

But how many of those avid exercisers know just how healthy they are?

I thought I was a physically fit specimen. Along with my tri-weekly runs with the Reporter-Telegram basketball team, I occasionally do calisthenics and often ride my 10-speed on weekends. Last summer, I managed to finish the Triathlon Dallas with little advanced conditioning.

Many would consider the triathlon a test of my endurance. But until Thursday my fitness had never been put to the technical test.

Dr. Werner Hoeger and his assistant, Midlander Blain Huddleston, put me through a detailed physical and cardiovascular fitness exam. The tests ranged from pinching my tissues to test their percentage of body fat to urging me though a session on an exercise bike with EKG apparatus hanging from my chest hairs and a sphygmomanometer (blood-pressure cuff) wrapped around one forearm.

I WAS ALARMED immediately when my blood pressure going into the ordeal was above normal. My anxiety increased when my old nemesis, the bench press, foiled me again.

Success at sit-ups and leg-lifts raised my spirits, but the gauntlet had just begun.

At one point, with my back to Hoeger and Huddleston, I listened pensively as the doctor showed his apprentice the places my posture was flawed. I could almost hear my grandmother piping in "I told you so" and my first reaction was to abort the adventure.

(There's something about doctors standing behind you interpreting black felt-pen marks on your spine that's more than slightly unnerving.)

My flexibility test results were inspiring, although I could feel some muscles questioning my sense, even if it was for a story.

The emotional roller coaster continued as I failed miserably at reaction and movement trials, recalling earlier days when I could never put the pegs in the holes as deftly as the girls. Apparently I'd fooled myself all my life into believing I was quick (little guys have to be quick or they're just little).

TOPPING OFF the physical exam was an extended ride on a stationary bicycle with no back wheel. I'd never been much for pedaling without getting anywhere, so simply powering the contraption was slightly unsettling and totally unfamiliar.

There's a lot to learn in company's break room

Perhaps no area of an office building is more important or more beloved than the break room.

It is there that large amounts of food, coffee and soft drinks are consumed. Some employees may feel a tinge of guilt for inhaling that third candy bar of the morning, but you'd never know it from the speed in which the chocolate disappears. Others are sneakier. They hide their food and munch on it only when others are not looking, or so they think. Actually, they are fooling no one, least of all me. I make it my business to expose these frauds.

Still, it is lunchtime when the break room takes on the appearance (and smell) of a short-order diner. Food is everywhere. There are tacos and burritoes. Hamburgers and fries. Chilidogs and chips. Enter around noon and you'll get the distinct impression you've just wandered into a New York deli, Tex-Mex style.

Having said that, however, probably the biggest misconception associated with the break room is that it is used exclusively for eating and drinking. That's simply not true.

Indeed, those functions are often secondary. Its real purpose is to serve as a place where employees can conduct (shall we say) bizarre conversations. Mosey in sometime and you will be exposed to a wealth of tid-bits, none of which are particularly earth-shattering. Interesting? Yes. Earth-shattering? No.

The range of topics is unlimited. There's politics (especially when a liberal is present), finances, the most recent family crisis, sports (after the Cowboys lose a game on a controversial call), Lebanon, new styles of music, grouchy bosses, ingrown-toenails, pets and best cures for a hangover.

Being an avid coffee drinker, I spend an inordinant amount of my time in the break room. As a result, I have become something of an expert on trivia. For example, just in the past 10 days I have learned:

— Most women find Michael Jackson terribly sexy while men consider him to be several other things, most of which cannot be printed in a family newspaper.

— Some people, mostly under the age of 25, actually believe there is redeeming social value to punk rock.

— However, those same people absolutely refuse to wear safety pins in their ears or dye their hair orange, despite any redeeming social value the music might have.

— A cheeseburger, with lots of onions, is the best cure for a hangover.

— No one has anything nice to say about Midland's streets.

— A survey taken several years ago showed that most Americans (at least at that point in history) considered people who smoke cigarettes to be more interesting than those who do not.

— A surprisingly large number of men see nothing wrong with wearing socks that don't quite match.

— More and more people see isolationism as a valid form of foreign policy.

— Most people still don't like spinach.

— Some things never change.

A final note: If you find these bits of information stimulating, you should hear the conversations that place in the restroom. Mind-boggling, indeed.

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Refinery explodes

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A worker was reported missing Saturday after an explosion and fire at a refinery storage tank near the Corpus Christi ship channel.

The explosion sent thick, black smoke at least 300 feet high, authorities said. The smoke covered the north side of the city, and residents reported feeling tremors from the blast about 2 p.m.

"We believe there was one man in the area, and he is missing," plant manager Bill Mueller said at an impromptu 3 p.m. news conference.

Staff Photo by Ron Jaap

Dr. Werner Hoeger, head of the new wellness program at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, measure the effect of strain on a subject's cardiovascular system during a stress EKG. A 12-point EKG and blood-pressure cuff monitor the individual's reaction, and the results of this and other tests are used to develop an exercise prescription for the participant.

Exercises prescribed by program

The danger of cardiovascular disease is reflected in 1982 statistics that show more than 41 million people have some type of related disease, more than 35 million suffer from high blood pressure and more than 500,000 die from heart attacks.

The need for attention to this disease is illustrated by research estimating that 50 percent of the time the heart attack is the first symptom of heart problems and that 40 percent of those who suffer their first heart attack die within 24 hours after the attack.

Businesses reportedly save $70-$300 per year when employees participate in wellness programs. The New York Telephone Co. spent $2.84 million in 1980 on a program for its 80,000 employees, but estimated that they saved $5.54 million.

"We know what causes heart disease," said Dr. Werner Hoeger, a Ph.D. in exercise physiology heading up the UTPB program. "We know the primary risk factors and we can do something about it."

The UTPB program focuses on aerobic exercise (continuous activity), prescribed for each individual case. Once the person has attained the desired level, periodic exercise should keep them physically fit.

"The crucial thing when you exercise is that you maintain that range," explained Hoeger. Sports such as baseball and football, when the athletes stop and start continuously, are not suitable. Nor is a sport that could qualify, such as basketball, when the participant fails to keep a steady pace.

"It's not like putting it in the bank," explained Hoeger.

Crash diets can be short-term successes, but Hoeger suggested that the temporary gains are lost when the dieter slips back into old habits. "Of 100 people that go on a diet, only three are able to keep down their weight."

Participants in the UTPB wellness program receive a balance of dietary counseling along with their exercise prescription to stay fit.

Odessa attorney seeking right to challenge Craddick

ODESSA — Attorney David Smith has filed to seek the Democratic nomination as state representative from the 76th District. He has no opposition yet in that race, but will face Republican incumbent Tom Craddick of Midland in the November general election.

The 76th District encompasses all of Midland County and a horseshoe-shaped portion of the area surrounding Odessa. It doesn't include the central city.

"I have decided to run to give the people of the Permian Basin the representation they deserve," he said, concentrating the rest of his announcement on criticizing Craddick.

"The people of Midland recently were faced with a water rate hike. Was it because of close ties with special interests that Craddick opposed a state water plan and single-handedly kept enabling legislation from passing.?

Not only do Midland citizens deserve a break but what is happening is self-defeating. Industrial diversity is one of our most urgent needs and ample water supplies are a deciding factor among businesses looking for new sites. The local economy needs close attention. At this moment, the FDIC is liquidating the assets of three banks in Midland and Ector counties, and the financial lifeblood is being of the people is being drained off toward Washington."

Smith said what the area needs now is cooperation and productivity among workers, employers, financial institutions and elected officials all committed to the same goals.

"What has Tom Craddick done to help? Not a thing," said Smith. "He's done well for himself in office, but exactly what has he done for you?"

Smith also emphasized the need to improve the quality of education in Texas and beefing up the powers of law enforcement agencies.

A Permian Basin resident since 1976, Smith served on the 1978 Democratic State Convention Resolution Committee and has been active in Permian Basin politics for several years. At Odessa College he was a top-ranked national debater and was employed for a period as a debating coach. He received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and his law degree from Texas Tech University. For two years he worked as an investigator for the attorney general's office.

He currently practices law in Odessa with his wife, Barbara, as office manager. They reside in West Odessa. Campaign treasurer is Norton Teutsch.

Fitness put to the test

Hoeger had stuck those round EKG-related buttons all over my torso. What looked like tiny battery cables connected me to an elaborate machine that continuously monitored my pulse and heart rate. Feeling slightly foolish with the complicated wiring hanging from me as I pedaled this bike to nowhere, I sympathized with the $6 Million Dollar Man's self consciousness at his electrical innards.

Just when the perspiration began to flow freely, the doctor allowed me to stop — ending what they call a stress EKG.

Before getting physical, I filled out a probing questionnaire. No sooner had I noted never having had high blood pressure than I had it.

It seemed routine through the disease sections, which I proudly checked "no" in each instance. I denied any dependency on coffee, drugs or alcohol.

BUT SOME of the questions just weren't fair:

No reporter eats three regular meals a day (What is a regular meal, anyway?). Recollection of my weekly menu was beyond my abilities.

I'd never considered any difference between hard and soft-shelled seafood or poultry with or without skin, and defensively guessed on the low side on alcohol consumption.

While realizing I was violating general rules of health, I proudly marked down my heavy salt intake and affection for fried foods.

As a bachelor, reporter and weekend warrior, I routinely eat out and dutifully recorded this fact.

I was glad I'd bought those multivitamins and was surprised to learn I was into aerobics. (Until this test, I'd associated aerobics with middle-aged women dancing to jazz records. Hoeger explained them as any activity calling for continuous motion).

I flunked the tension section, then tapped my foot impatiently over this setback. Totaling my responses to the cardiac arrest portion, I was confronted with the fact that I might suffer a heart attack if I wasn't careful.

Several times along the way I was forced to admit things that I had been avoiding. Rushing through life with a family history of heart failure can be hazardous to your health.

But for every exam, there is a prescription. Based on the results of my coronary heart and fitness profiles, Hoeger assured me I was relatively safe from heart problems, provided I followed his directions and fought my obsession for sodium.

My cardiovascular exercise prescription outlined a graduated program which would leave me wonderfully healthy as long as I never slipped back to my naughty habits.

The computer print-out gave me a choice of activities, 12 weeks and sent me off to get in real shape with the encouragement — "BEST OF LUCK BUDD."

Planning deductions

This is the ninth in a series of "tax tip" articles provided by The Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. I have some land that I would like to sell to a friend and receive the proceeds over a several-year period. Can I make such a sale and not charge any interest?

A. No, there are rules that require interest to be charged on a deferred payment sale. To qualify as a deferred payment sale, there must be at least one payment received after the close of the taxable year in which the sale occurs.

If a deferred payment sale specifies either no interest or an unrealisitically low rate of interest, a portion of the deferred payments is required to be treated as interest income by the seller and interest expense by the buyer. The unstated interest element is called "imputed interest."

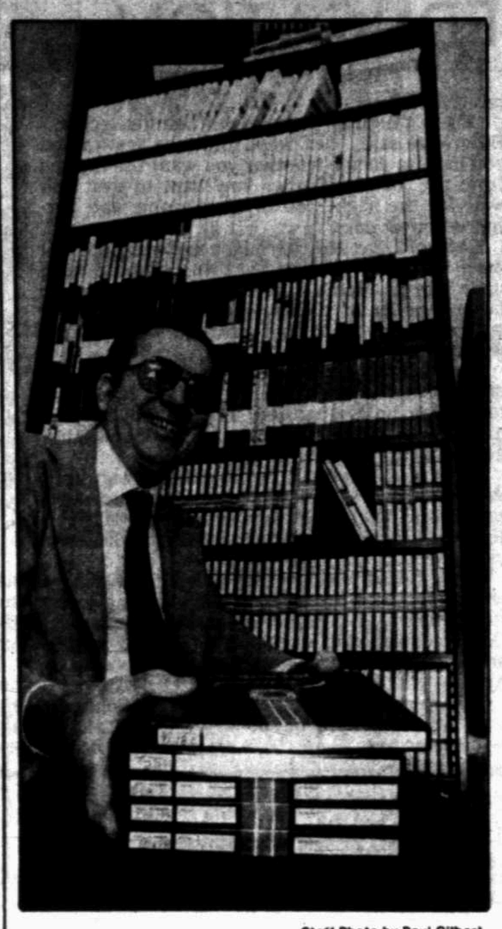

Sales made after June 30, 1981, must carry at least a nine percent rate of interest. If there is no interest being charged or the rate is below nine percent, the Internal Revenue Service will require a 10 percent rate to apply. The rates for sales prior to July 1, 1981, require a minimum of six percent or the Internal Revenue Service will impute a seven percent rate. However, on an installment sale of land between family members, the Internal Revenue Service cannot impute an interest rate of more than seven percent on the first $500,000 of sales price.

These and other tax questions will be answered during the Taxpayer Education Program to be held at 9 a.m. Saturday at Midland College in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Members of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants will help individuals who plan to complete their own tax return for 1983. Program content will concentrate on questions relating to the 1040 and 1040A tax returns. To register for the course, send $1 with your name and address to Permian Basin Taxpayer Education, %Donald S. Johnson and Co., Inc., 215 Midland Tower Building, Midland, Texas 79701.

Pre-registration is preferred, but walk-in registration will be accepted.

City secretary makes notes on retirement

He's taped more than 149 miles of council meetings

Holding a few feet of the 149 miles of taped city council meetings, James McCullough reflects on his years as city secretary. He's retiring at the end of February.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midlander in Profile

If it weren't for James McCullough, the Midland City Council would never know in which direction it was headed.

As city secretary and keeper of records, McCullough has kept the ever-changing council straightened out on its constantly-switching mind for more than 20 years. But at the end of this month, McCullough leaves those twice-a-month marathon council meetings for an early retirement.

He has no regrets about his decision. In fact, he's counting down by the number of council meetings left until the end of February — two.

"A quarter of a century is enough to spend at one place," said the 55-year-old McCullough. "There are other things I want to pursue."

McCullough started with the city in 1951, worked 2½ years, quit and then came back for another 27 years of continuous service.

The Colorado City native visited a former co-worker whom he had befriended when they both were employed at Parkhill, Smith & Cooper. By then a city employee, the friend introduced McCullough to the engineering group and he decided to apply for a job. He began as instrument man on the surveying party and was made chief.

BUT MCCULLOUGH quit to return to Colorado City and hammer a living out of the homebuilding industry with his father.

When business slumped, McCullough wandered back to Midland and into City Hall, this time starting with the planning department.

"I thought it would be temporary," until the homebuilding industry bounced back, he said. But he soon found he was contented with the job and added secretary to the Planning and Zoning Commission to his duties.

When the then-city secretary decided to retire after 35 years, McCullough got the job in 1962 as his replacement. By then, McCullough had familiarized himself with the entire city operation.

McCullough already practiced speedwriting, but after sitting through several council sessions, he looked for another method of taking notes. He decided on a steno machine, found one at an office supply and taught himself with the accompanying books.

Now he's been taking the machine to council meetings for years, punching out odd-looking symbols on narrow reams of paper, translating it into "motions made" and "votes for" for the council's records.

LOOKING AT Midland's last 30 years, McCullough described the most frustrating as that of the 1980-81 boom. Although population from 1951-60 tripled, the city seemed capable of handling its problems. But during the last boom, even McCullough couldn't keep up with all that needed to be done.

In the early days, he used to enjoy handling city elections. But as the federal government kept intervening with more regulations, McCullough was glad to turn it over two years ago to a county-wide elections administrator.

Just prior to relinquishing those duties, McCullough went through one of the closest races in Midland's history. That was the 1980 collision between G. Thane Akins and Martin Allday when eight votes of the 10,000 cast separated the two.

"I always dreaded when that would happen," he said. "You can't have that many people voting and that many people working on the election to not have a mistake."

But the subsequent recount showed the final tally correct.

The office has been service-oriented, both to the council and to the public. McCullough has kept track of all records, changes to the ordinances, tapes of the public meetings, minutes and listens to complaints. Although he keeps the council straight on how it voted on issues in previous meetings, the last duty may be the most important.

"WE GET A LOT of complaints. I've suspected for a long time the telephone operators referred calls to us that they didn't know what else to do with. Sure enough, the other day I heard an operator say that was exactly what she did."

A lot of these callers are angry about something by the time they reach McCullough. But he's had a policy of listening to them, not arguing. "They'll simmer down and become reasonable about what their complaint is."

Looking at the 7 foot-plus bookshelf with tapes of council meetings jammed into all but one of the 10 shelves, McCullough finally sat down and figured how many miles of tape the council's words consume. It's 149.65 miles, "halfway to Fort Worth."

Of all the aspects of his office, the one he dreaded the most was the length of the council meetings. "Council meetings have always been long. They go into the wee hours of the night and sometimes the wee hours of the morning," said McCullough with a soft laugh.

"I'd come in after one of those long meetings and complain to my wife. She'd say, 'You only have so many council meetings alloted in your life and that's one gone.' "

Unlike the council which sometimes reverses a decision, McCullough is determined to stick with his. "It's been a rewarding experience but I have no regrets about my choice."

Fireman's daughter injured in collision

From Staff Reports

The teen-age daughter of a city fireman remained hospitalized Saturday after a two-car accident that also injured two other persons in the 1100 block of North Midkiff Road late Friday night.

In serious condition in the intensive care unit of Midland Memorial Hospital Saturday afternoon was 16-year-old Angela Denise Haberman of 3903 Roosevelt, daughter of fireman Roy Haberman of the same address.

According to city police, she was driving a 1980 model car that pulled out of the Furr's parking lot. It collided with a car driven by 17-year-old Dana Lee Duboise of 810 Elk. Duboise was released following emergency treatment.

A passenger in the Haberman vehicle, 15-year-old Raquelle Walker of 3919 Roosevelt, suffered minor injuries in the crash, which occurred shortly after 11 p.m. Friday.

Contributions are being solicited for the fund. Anyone having information about the killing of endangered species or wishing to make a contribution to the fund should contact the National Audubon Society, Southwest Regional Office, 2525 Wallingwood, Suite 1505, Austin, Tx., 78746.

Student jobs may again be scarce

EDUCATION

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Even though the holiday season is barely over and spring break seems an interminably long time off, students interested in summer employment may want to start looking for jobs now.

Like last year, jobs are expected to be scarce this summer, said employment supervisors at the Texas Employment Commission. But there should be no scarcity of people seeking temporary positions.

Last summer the commission, which matches positions with job-seekers free of charge, placed 275 high school and college students. However, 729 registered for employment.

But for students who have specific skills and who aren't too selective, there is money to be made, insisted Rick Etheredge. For the past six years Etheredge has served as summer placement officer for the TEC.

Most summer jobs are in the areas of office work, service and general labor. They generally pay near minimum wage.

Employment supervisor Charmian Carl said many unskilled high school students have unrealistic expectations. "What they want and what they get are two different things." Pay, hours and duties usually are not glamorous.

Typical summer positions include maintenance, some construction, yardwork, manual labor, fast food and restaurant help, clerical and office assistance, field work, some oil-related work, cleaning and day care.

Yardwork is one area in which there is plenty of work to do and a lot of money to be made, Etheredge said, but students generally aren't interested.

"There's nothing wrong with being selective," Etheredge said, "but when the jobs are limited you have to decide whether you want the income from the job or whether you want to wait and wait for the 'right' job to come along, and perhaps it never does."

Not only has the job market dwindled, but many teen-agers now have to compete with unemployed adults. Etheredge said there was a large number of college graduates last summr who were unable to find jobs and were looking for temporary work.

How a student goes about landing a job depends on the type of employment he wants and for which he is qualified. TEC employees said high school students looking for unskilled labor need not apply early.

"Most of the time it's just as good to wait until they're out of school to register," employment supervisor Elsie Callaway explained. "There's really not much we can do with the applications until then."

"With fewer jobs the employers can be more selective. If jobs are limited...start looking early. Don't wait until May," Etheredge suggested. "Most college kids start looking during spring break. Many of them have sewed these jobs up by April."

College students have an advantage over their high school counterparts. Age and additional skills may help them find employment. Many college students seek internships or career-related jobs to gain experience and get a foot in the door.

Students usually have to find such jobs on their own, although college placement services or departmental internship programs may be available. Teena Hughes at Midland College, director of student activities, matches students with positions. Most employers who contact her are looking for part-time employees who have some experience in the areas of sales, computers or office skills. The program is a free service available to MC students and graduates.

Because competition for internships and career-related jobs is fierce and opportunities scarce, students are advised to secure a position in early spring. Spring break may be best spent sending out resumes, pounding doors and setting up interviews.

Whether in high school or college, advice to job-seekers is the same. TEC employees recommended registering with their agency and any other available services, advertising, using word-of-mouth and going through the classified advertisements. Some students may want to consider going into business for themselves. Many return to jobs they held the previous summer.

"If they show eagerness and sincerity" students stand a better chance of being hired, Ms. Callaway said. "Dress is important, they need to be clean and neat. The main thing is to get out there and look."

"Before he applies somewhere, a student really needs to be familiar with interview skills and be able to make a good impression," Etheredge agreed. "How you look, how you dress and how you come across at the interview is important."

Gramm seeks support at Midland gathering

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The smell of beef cooking over a hot fire wafted into the back room. Republicans — some eating the broiled hamburgers and salads while being eyed hungrily by those not yet served — filled the tables and lined the wall to hear U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm make his pass for their support in his bid for the U.S. Senate seat.

The hastily scheduled Saturday meeting had been set for Bonanza and more Republicans showed up than were expected. Gramm, meanwhile, sacrificed his hamburger for time to speak.

He explained his race for the Republican nomination to a seat being vacated by another Republican — John Tower. And he listed the quality he thinks Texans want in a senator: Someone who puts the people of Texas first.

Aides passed out bumper stickers while holding bags of cooked hamburgers for devouring later. Gramm was patted on the back as he left, stopping once at a booth to shake hands and chat with a family on their Saturday afternoon outing.

"We had a really good turnout," said the Democrat-turned-Republican candidate as he headed for the car that would drop him at the airport.

Gramm had summed up the race against two other Republicans for the nomination when he told the group, "It's the end of the first quarter and we're ahead.... But it will be a hard-fought race. It will be decided by a few votes."

In the car Gramm elaborated on points he had made at the luncheon: deficit spending, budget balancing, welfare, defense money and criticism by Republican opponent Ron Paul.

Charges by Paul — also a congressman — in his television commercials that Gramm sent the Marines to Lebanon puzzle Gramm and other Republicans, he said. "I didn't send the Marines to Lebanon. I voted to set a time limit on their involvement. While Ron Paul is shooting at me, he's really hitting the president. I expect Walter Mondale (Democratic presidential frontrunner) to be trying to score political points at Reagan's expense but I don't expect a Republican congressman to do it."

Concentrating on the budget and President Reagan's State of the Union address, Gramm said he is intent on getting the rest of Congress to adopt the idea of a bi-partisan committee to work out an agreeable budget. "It will be hard, but I think the American people expect us to do it."

The former economy professor at Texas A&M University contended that Congress can't afford to operate this year on the theory that nothing will be accomplished while waiting for the outcome of November's presidential election.

Those results, he said, should answer the question for Congress of "do you want to stay with the Reagan program, a program that is working, or do you agree with Tip O'Neill (Democratic Speaker of the House) and Walter Mondale that people are willing to pay more taxes to get more government?"

Gramm contended that government spending can be cut. If it were frozen at its current level while revenues increased over the next three years, the country would be out of debt and have a surplus of $22 billion.

But, he cautioned, spending can't be frozen. Instead, he suggested coming up with savings in others areas that would offset the increased spending for other programs. For example, he cited allowing more competitive bidding for the defense department and consolidating some military functions. "We need to take politics out of the defense procurement."

Nor does he expect to eliminate welfare. Gramm said, "We have an obligation to help people — the old, the disabled, or those who simply can't take care of themselves. But the taxpayers pulling the wagon shouldn't provide a seat for those capable of working."

President Reagan's budget proposed beefing up the Border Patrol and building a manned space station, both of which Gramm supported. Again, though, he said the additional monies for those ideas will have to come from cutting back in other areas.

"The manned space station makes sense to do repair work on various communications, weather and military satellites. The proposal has commercial, scientific and military value."

The car pulled up to the light aircraft. Gramm and his two aides, one toting the cooling bags of sandwiches, stepped aboard for the next stop on the candidate's weekend campaign swing.

TAHC quarantines about 3,800 horses

MARLIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Animal Health Commission officials have quarantined nearly 3,800 horses in Falls County while they determine if the animals are diseased.

The agency has come under fire from humane groups for allegedly letting ranchers transport horses with equine infectious anemia, or swamp fever, out of the county.

Last week three TAHC agents — a veterinarian and two regulation compliance officers — looked at more than 5,000 horses and have placed 3,779 of them under quarantine until they can be given a blood test for swamp fever or issued a permit to be slaughtered. The disease does not affect the meat.

But a regulation compliance officer for the agency, Buddy Henderson, told the Marlin Democrat that only 29 of the 30,000 horses transported through the county this year had been infected with swamp fever and all but 19 had been accounted for.

The Fund for Animals of New York and American Horse Protection Association of Washington, D.C., has asked a federal judge to stop shipment of horses to and from the county until tests prove they are healthy.

Groups angered by the deaths of starving and diseased horses in Falls County said more than 1,200 horses have died because of the harsh winter and the collapse of Horses Unlimited, which left ranchers with between $2 million and $5 million worth of horses the company could not buy back.

Horses Unlimited, which brought about 14,000 horses into Falls County during the past nine months, sold horses to ranchers and promised to buy them back later, officials said.

Jerry Owens, executive vice president of the Fund for Animals, accused the Texas Animal Health Commission of failing to stop the shipment of diseased horses into and out of the county, saying many horses have been stricken with swamp fever.

But Henderson said that allegation was exagerrated.

He said that of the "thousands of horses that have moved through Falls County as part of the Horses Unlimited operation in approximately a year, a total of 29 animals have shown up as positive reactors to the Coggins test for swamp fever.

"Records have accounted for 10 of these horse. They were shipped to slaughter houses. The present quarantine is a precaution to determine if any of the remaining 19 are still in the county," he said.

Mark Range, a Mart veterinarian who worked for Horses Unlimited has volunteered to let the state agents look through his records of Coggins tests on the horses.

Black History Observance set

From Staff Reports

Kicking off with a nationally-recognized black politician on Feb. 17, the Negro Business & Professional Women's Club has a series of events slated to celebrate Black History Observance.

"Black Americans: Mission for the '80s" is the theme of the two-day celebration which will conclude the evening of Feb. 18.

Julian Bond, state senator from Georgia, will be guest speaker at the Feb. 17 banquet in The Midland Hilton. The dinner starts at 8 p.m. and cost is $15 per person. The event is open to the public. Reservations may be made by calling Doris Richardson, 687-3042.

Bond, who will focus his talk on the "Mission" theme, has been one of the leaders in the battle for civil and human rights and continues to fight for his ideals.

He is a native of Nashville, Tenn., and a graduate of Morehouse College. Recently he was named to Time magazine's "200 Leaders" list. His speeches and poems have appeared in Life magazine, Negro Digest, Ramparts and Rights and Reviews.

Bond was elected to the Georgia House in 1965 and seated in 1967. He served four terms. In November 1974 he was elected to the Georgia Senate, where he now serves.

On Saturday, the celebration will begin at 11 a.m. with a soul food tasting. Cost is $2 per person and will take place at the Federated Women's Clubhouse.

The evening event starts at 6 o'clock at Carver Auditorium with the theme of "Young Black Americans/Keeping a Dream Alive." Performing will be a youth choir consisting of singers from elementary through junior high school age. Speeches will be made by selected persons and exhibits will be available for viewing.

Prison guards fired

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — An undisclosed number of high-ranking Texas prison guards have been fired following investigations into the beating of inmates, officials said Saturday.

Rick Hartley of the Texas Department of Corrections said details of the firings would not be discussed until Monday.

Prison Board Chairman Robert D. Gunn said the dismissals stemmed from allegations of bruality outlined in a report to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler.

Honor Roll Report

MIDLAND IS NOW 99 YEARS OLD. Historians tell us that a few years prior to 1880, Lum Medlin, a lone hunter, made what was later to become Midland his home. Researchers studying this area tell us that Lum was one of the first white men to settle in this area. Early in 1880, R. N. Garrett arrived here with a flock of sheep being driven to market. Like many of those who followed, Garrett took an immediate liking to the surroundings and settled here permanently. Shortly thereafter, his California family joined him.

In those early days the railroad people dropped off a box car to service the growing community as depot, post office and general store. On February 2, 1885 Midland County was established; 26 days later Midland was designated a city.

The old, middle-aged and young enterprises of Midland have contributed immeasurably to the progress, pride and prosperity of our city. You will be interested in reading this list of leading firms and organizations whose names have been arranged by the number of years they have served Midlanders and other West Texas residents.

"I'VE SEEN EVERY APARTMENT COMMUNITY IN MIDLAND."

"My feet hurt and my patience was wearing thin. I'd seen every apartment community in Midland, and none met my standards... until I discovered Oakridge Apartments. Just a little off the beaten trail, Oakridge has the quiet, private location I'd been looking for. Plus all the other extras I'd just about given up on. Like new construction, nice, friendly neighborhood appeal and superior amenities—indoor spa and sauna, clubhouse and pool, to name just a few—Oakridge is the greatest. I should know, I've seen them all."

1- and 2-bedroom and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

GAME OF THE NAME

Text by Lisa Gerlock

Married Hollywood celebrities have done it for years. And now Midlanders are doing it, too.

Though traditionally most common for women whose names appear publicly, women of other professions are also keeping their maiden names. Betsy Triplett, news broadcaster, Linda Bond, media consultant, Beulah Casey, movie critic, Sam Guyton, family counselor and Carole Townsley, librarian, are some Midlanders who established themselves in their professions. Then they were married.

Many women who retain their own names in marriage say their decisions are based on professional and personal reasons. "Identity" is their primary motive. Most of them say upfront "it's not a women's-lib gesture."

Women recently have solved potential identity problems by taking the husband's name, and either hyphenate the maiden name with the married name, or more simply, to use the maiden name as a middle name, and assume the husband's surname.

BUT SOME WOMEN are simply keeping their names — and letting their husbands keep theirs.

Linda Thorsen Bond, owner of The Producers, explained "it's no one's business, as long as the wife and husband work it out. I don't think anyone else really cares."

One of her reasons for keeping it, she said, "I made a lot of friends when I lived in New York. I met a lot of people I really cared about. And some editors, too. I didn't want to disappear into someone else's name and move away so no one would be able to find me."

THOUGH THE TOPIC has cooled and her husband, Bruce Partain, has learned to accept her decision, it wasn't a comfortable subject in its early stages.

"At first, it was hard for him to get used to the idea."

She said her in-laws never mention their approval or disapproval. "We tell our relatives "to address us as: Linda Bond and Bruce Partain — and they send things like 'To our relatives in Texas.'

"My father thinks it's terrible. But he's a much more traditional man. I think men who work with professional women are more understanding of it.

"PERSONALLY I CAN'T imagine why anyone would want to change their name."

Though Ms. Bond has been married before, she said, "I was so naive. I gave my name up and never thought about it."

She has two sons, Shelby, by her first marriage, whose name is Shelby Bond, and Danny Partain, who is 2 years old.

Legally, a name is a name is a name

What's in a name? Conventionally, perhaps, it revealed much about a person's personal life, such as heritage, social status, a woman's marital status or a level of professional achievement.

But, today, pre-judgments may not always be accurate if they are based on namesake. For example, a "Ms." can be married, single, divorced or widowed. A surname may be her maiden name, even though she's married, but no one would ever know she's the daughter-in-law of the president of the United States. She may even be a doctor. To a less popular degree, her surname may have even been taken by her husband.

It is customary, in this country, for a woman to assume her huband's surname. It is not required by law.

Legally, a woman has a choice to keep her maiden name or to assume her husband's name when she is married.

According to the Texas Attorney General Opinion H432, if a woman who marries in Texas wishes to use only her maiden name and not her husband's, she may keep her name if she continues to use it thereafter. To avoid ever having to go by the husband's name, the opinion suggests not to use it at the time of marriage. The opinion, however, only speaks to state agencies, such as the Department of Public Safety and not private entities, such as banks or savings and loan institutions.

To allow a name change, legally, according to Section 32.21 of the Attorney General Opinion Family Code, a person may petition the court and state present name, requested name and reason for the desired change.

For any person to change a name, they must go through the prodcedure.

If a woman marries and chooses to assume her husband's name, the state recognizes the change simply by her using it upon marriage.

The Attorney General Opinion MW225 is that a married woman may register her maiden name and hyphenate it with her husband's surname.

"We have had some requests by women who want to keep their maiden name in marriage, but we advise them to see the county attorney or a private attorney for legal details."

But, said County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry, the requests they have had have not come in an increasing rate.

"However," she added, "we did have one man who applied for a marriage licsense who wanted to assume his wife's name."

And, according to the Attorney General Opinion, he is permitted to do so by petitioning the court.

Once Ms. Bond registered for a loan in her own name and was told by the loan officer because of the nature of her business, (much free-lance work, not a routine income) that it would help for someone to co-sign who had a weekly income.

"I told him I was married and gave him my husband's name. He couldn't understand how we could be married and have different names. 'No one does that,' he said. I took my business elswewhere."

WHEN IT COMES TO everyday encounters, such as applying for a loan or a bank account, there are problems.

"It's insulting," said Beulah Casey, "when you are introduced as a Mrs. something and your name is something else.

Sam Guyton, Midland family counselor, married Frank Brownson one month ago. Since that time, she said, she has kept her own name "on everything.

"Guyton has been my name for 20-some years now," she explained.

"I have tried hard to have a professional reputation, and it was built under that name.

"It's not a women's lib issue, it's just how I want to be known," she said. "I have been in business for a year and a half. That's how people know me."

MS. GUYTON SAID she hasn't encountered any problems with her name during her marriage. "He (her husband) has no objections to me keeping my name. I think he's proud of my reputation.

"To some people I guess it's a big deal, but I think most of the confusion is that most people assume I've changed my name. Now they walk up and say Mrs. — what do we call you now?

"There's still that assumption that married women give up their name."

Although Ms. Guyton said professional women have kept their names for years, in bigger cities it caught on about 10-15 years ago. In Midland, however, it's been only recently.

"Five or six years ago I think some women started keeping their names. Most of them hyphenated their name with their maiden name. But it's still relatively new."

BETSY TRIPLETT, FORMER news director of KTPX, recently married Odessa rancher and independent oilman James R. "Buzz" Hurt. Though Ms. Triplett no longer broadcasts the television news, she chose to keep the name by which she was known professionally for 10 years.

Hurt, 20 years Ms. Triplett's senior, "thought it was neat," that she wanted to keep her identity, she said.

"He likes to introduce me by my own name 'so people will think we're living in sin,' he says. He has a great sense of humor." They usually laugh off problems stemming from the name-game, she said.

"People would ask me why I didn't change my name, and I told them jokingly, 'If Buzz would change his name to Triplett, I might consider changing mine, but he won't, so why should I?' " Some people, she admitted, didn't realize she said it in jest.

"IT'S NOT A WOMEN'S lib thing, it's just because of the business I have been in."

Her mother-in-law, an octegenarian, "doesn't understand it, but she loves me anyway."

Even though she is often referred to as Mrs. Hurt, Ms. Triplett said she isn't adamant about it. "It's really very flattering if you're 33 years old and you've never been married before."

Carole Townsley, married five years, is the department head of the cataloging department at the Midland County Library.

The 28-year-old said her first consideration for keeping her name was because she was married after she had already been accepted to graduate school at the University of Arizona at Tucson. "They had already accepted me by one name."

SHE RECALLS A FEW rocky roads with her retained name in the early years of their marriage. "When we lived in Roswell, New Mexico, I went to have our phone changed. I told the lady at the phone company my name, but it was under my husband's name, Stephen Johnson. She told me 'Well then you're Mrs. Stephen Johnson.' When I told her that wasn't my name, she said 'You are Mrs. Stephen Johnson and I will call you that.'

"Most people take it more calmly than that. When I told another woman about the phone company incident, she replied 'Well, you really are Mrs. Johnson.'

"They don't understand."

Ms. Townsley said her own family and in-laws do not accept her name and still address their mail "Mr. and Mrs."

THE CONFUSION OF an unconventional surname is inherent, she added. She often receives mail addressed to Mr. Townsley. Recently some of her friends, however, address their letters "Carole and Stephen," and just leave out a surname altogether.

She said she could have hyphenated her name, but it still would have changed it. "I just couldn't do it. It would've been Townsley-Johnson. It gets awfully long when you start signing checks."

She admitted she's even tried replacing the hyphen with a slash. But still wasn't satisfied.

Her husband, though reticent about the idea of her retaining her maiden name at first, seems to accept it better "because of my position in the library. I think he realizes I need my name for my profession.

"FROM A LIBRARIAN'S point of view, a woman who has authored books under three different names is really hard to trace."

Some women choose to keep it, some choose to add to it, some choose to change it. Legally, whatever their decision is, the women say it's their right and it's acknowledged. It's just the game of "The Name."

Robot, dog, 'archangel' among 170 candidates for U.S. president

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Bored with 1984's presidential candidates? You shouldn't be. Though most of the attention is focused on Reagan and Mondale, there are at least 168 more choices.

A 4-foot robot from Baltimore named Rebecca has announced her candidacy for president of the United States. So has a Wyoming dog named Woofer D. Coyote — he made an X on the Federal Election Commission form.

There's Gabriel the Archangel, a New Jersey trucker who wants to raise the speed limit; Elijah the Prophet, an Oklahoman who campaigns on "politics, religion and sex," an airline hijacker now in prison, and a man whose campaign committee is named "Dinners and Cocktails Party Fund Raise Committee."

ALL HAVE FILED papers with the Federal Election Commission here, and are legitimately seeking the office of president, for which the only legal requirements are that candidates must be at least 35 years old and have been born in the United States.

"I don't ask, I don't even shake my head," said a clerk at the election commission. "I just take the forms and file them."

It costs nothing to run. You don't even have to go to Washington; filing can be done by mail. If a candidate raises more than $5,000, he has to fill in financial disclosure forms, but most candidates don't raise a tenth of that amount.

So if you haven't found a candidate to your liking, or if you would like to contribute to a group called the "Committee to Make El Salvador the 51st State," here's a rundown of some who want the president's job.

"Woofer D. Coyote," a dog that is part coyote, is running as an independent. Al Hamburg of Torrington, Wyo., who owns the dog, filed his papers. Of Woofer D., Hamburg said: "Of course I had to help him hold the pen in his mouth to sign his X on the Federal Election Commission forms."

HAMBURG HIMSELF IS a candidate. He is running for president as a Democrat on the War Veterans Against Nuclear Weapons ticket. A housepainter, veteran of the Korean and Vietnam wars and a six-time loser for a congressional seat, Hamburg said his campaign is based on military spending. Most elected officials, he said, don't "know beans about military waste because they were draft dodgers."

Ray "The Lion" Rollinson of Columbia, N.J., is counting on his fellow truckers with CB radios to pass the word about his candidacy. His campaign is simple: "Get on your CB radio network and bring this good news to every honest American." The good news is Ray Rollinson for president. Rollinson vows that if elected he will roll the price of gas back to 80 cents a gallon and will raise the speed limit to 65 mph.

Dale Harper Kyle, who lives on a monthly supplemental Social Security check in Chino, Calif., wants everyone to know that when he's elected the books "Alcoholic Anonymous" and "The 12 Steps and 12 Traditions" will be named as Books of the Year. He will issue a pardon for all homosexuals kicked out of the military and institute the death penalty for members of the mob.

Candidate William Joseph Wulforst plans to skip the Democratic convention. "I will not attend the 1984 Democratic National Convention in San Francisco because of AIDS contamination from carrying politicians of the ultra left," he says. Instead, he'll stay home, which he lists as off Interstate 95 in Portsmouth, N.H.

ONE REASON HE'S running for president is that he's worried about former presidential adviser Henry Kissinger. Wulforst explains: "It would not surprise me if Mr. Henry Kissinger was part of New Nation Productions located in Britain, which uses hypnosis and subliminal suggestion subversive techniques in connection with the actions of hostile red agents in the British Parliament."

There are all sorts of political parties and committees this year.

Commodore William James Barton of Alton, Ill., is with the Irish Revolutionary. He is a sub commander. Susanna Dakin is the candidate of the An Artist For President committee. She's from Venice, Calif., and reportedly said that as president she would encourage world leaders, including herself, to be wired to a bomb to blow themselves up just before nuclear weapons are fired.

BUT ONE PARTY won't be fielding a candidate this year. Ruth Rogers of Sacramento, Calif., wrote to the Federal Election Commission announcing: "The American Mugwump Party is no longer in existence, as the founder, Mr. W.H. Rogers, has died."

Matalik-emil, who lists his address as a post office in Miami, is hoping for things bigger than president of the United States. Matalik-emil filed not only for that job, but also for president of the world.

Elijah the Prophet is running for president. He's from New York, and sent the Federal Election Commission a copy of his book "The Time of the End," published by Vantage Press in 1983.

Elijah might have some competition from another religious figure. From Mira Loma, Calif., Gabriel the Archangel is considering a run for the presidency, according to his campaign treasurer, Arthur L. Swartz III.

Gary Trapnell, an airline hijacker who lives in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta, said he's running because America likes an underdog. As an inmate, he can't vote — but he can run.

Richard Grayson of Davie, Fla., is deeply involved in presidential politics. So far, he has set up 25 campaign committees with the Federal Election Commission, all at no cost.

There's the Meryl Streep for Veep committee, and Grayson, who lists his committee job on financial disclosure reports as "FAN" of the well-known actress, says the committee won't raise money. "We don't need funds — WE HAVE TALENT!!!"

AFTER THE ATTEMPT to get Streep a White House job, Grayson set up the Committee for Immediate Nuclear War and then set up the Anybody but Askew Committee, followed by the Millionaires for Reagan committee. He created the Committee to Make El Salvador the 51th State, and the Committee for the U.S. to Annex Canada.

He also filed his own presidential papers.

Scholarship offers have long history

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Maura Nolan will get free tuition when she attends Dartmouth College next fall, thanks to a 156-year-old offer the Ivy League school made to residents of her hometown of Wheelock, Vt.

Ms. Nolan, 16, was admitted to the college as an early-decision student.

She is the first female and only the seventh resident of the northern Vermont town of 400 to take advantage of Dartmouth's offer, which will be worth more than $40,000 in tuition fees over four years.

The arrangement stems from rentals Dartmouth collected from school-owned acreage that eventually became the town of Wheelock.

During a visit to the town to collect the rents in 1828, Dartmouth's sixth president, the Rev. Dr. Nathan Lord, reportedly declared, "Whenever any Wheelock boys are ready for college, send them along and there will be free tuition."

Originally an all-male institution, Dartmouth began admitting women as candidates for the A.B. degree in 1972.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Two weeks after the event Laura and Clyde Aylesworth are still receiving daily cards, telegrams and phone calls from longtime friends congratulating them on their golden wedding anniversary.

The couple renewed their marriage vows on January 21 (the anniversary date of the wedding 50 years ago in Mission, Texas) in a beautiful ceremony which touched all those who witnessed it and caused many of their friends to remark that it was one of the loveliest affairs they have ever been privileged to attend.

The reaffirmation of vows took place at 8 p.m. in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. The impressive liturgy was conducted by the Rev. Allen Whitman, rector of Holy Trinity. He was assisted by associate rector the Rev. Ralph Richmond in administering the Sacrament to the family. The beautiful music, furnished by Darrell Knapp, organist, and soloist Janice (Mrs. Rado) Archer, was climaxed by the congretation singing the stirring "Joyful Joyful."

Attendants were the Aylesworths' daughter Ann and her husband Dennis Norton of Weatherford; granddaughter Ann and husband Richard Stone of Ruidoso, New Mexico, and grandchilddren Laura Queen and Nolan Queen III, both of Weatherford. Nolan escorted his grandmother to the altar. Serving as ushers were Wilbur Rocchio, Dr. Henry Tillett and John and Bill Bergman.

For the celebration Mrs. Aylesworth chose a Halston gown of red and gold. For "something old" she wore a diamond lavaliere inherited from her mother and a gold wedding band worn by her maternal grandmother 100 years ago.

A reception in the Aylesworths' lovely townhouse on Western Drive followed the ceremony. Heart-shaped arrangements of red and white flowers decorated the party rooms.

It was a memorable evening, marred only by the fact that several of their out-of-town guests were unable to attend because of inclement weather. But those who did manage to arrive were Mr. Aylesworth's business partner Ivens V. Stanton and his wife Joyce (she's layout editor for "W" magazine) of New York City; Irma and Paul Nash of Hot Springs Village, Arkansas; Shirley (Mrs. T.O.) Townsend of Bloomfield Village, Michigan, and Anne and R.D. Bergman of Weatherford.

MEMBERS OF THE TRINITY School faculty and guests enjoyed a delightful trip to Ruidoso last weekend. Beautiful blue skies, sweater weather and excellent snow made for perfect skiing.

The trip's organizers were Andy Prokopeak and Richard Catania. Also going were Richard's wife Andrea; Kathy and Trent Timberlake, Mary and David Dennis, Carol and Jim Hartman, Cindy and Greg Midkiff, Sally (Mrs. Martin) Mogford, Cathy Johnson, Pat Shaw, Vickie Davis, Lars Erlandson and Brian Stone.

The group was joined by Midlanders Marjorie and Dan Kozak, whom they encounterd on the slopes, for Saturday night dinner. A friend of Trinity School donated the use of her mountain home for the weekend.

Despite the usual bruises, aches and pains, all reported to school on Monday, and Trent was the only casualty, returning with a minor knee injury.

WHEN FAY AND RAY GWYN closed the doors on their office supply and printing business January 31, it brought to an end nearly 48 years of printing. Although the presses are silent now, the Gwyns, long active in the civic and church life of Midland, will continue with those endeavors and soon will be engaged full time in the real estate profession.

A native Midlander, Ray brought his bride here from the Texas Panhandle in 1936. That also was the year he bought his first printing press. The Gwyns describe Midland at that time as "a small friendly town of about 6,000 people, with almost everyone knowing everyone else and for the most part, on a first name basis." The Petroleum Building was the pride of Midlanders, rising high on the horizon as one approached what was later to be known as the Tall City. They have watched the town grow to nearly 95,000, and they still think it's a city of friendly people and definitely a cultural center equal to any.

Their business has been housed in a half dozen locations over the years, but most recently at the corner of Dodson and Illinois Streets in the Village.

Although modest about their accomplishments, this highly respected couple has received numerous awards for their efforts to better the community. Among them, Ray received the Lion of the Year Award in 1980-81 from the Midland Downtown Lions Club and an honorary life membership in the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce for his work in the Jaycees during his early adult life. Fay was presented the Midland Exchange Club's Golden Deeds Award in 1955 for her many civic contributions, which included her part in organizing the Golden Agers Club.

A member of the Downtown Lions Club since 1941, Ray was president in 1979-80. The Fire Truck Museum, located east of the present fire station, was one of the products of his administration. The Gwyns are pillars of First United Methodist Church, where they have worked over the years with all age groups.

Although their lives are taking a different turn, the Gwyns have no regrets about their decision to change professions and are looking forward to the future with great anticipation.

OUR FOND FAREWELLS go with Judy and the Rev. Fred Tinsley and their daughters Stephanie and Amanda, who moved to the North Texas city of Vernon recently. Curate at Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity since June of 1982, Fred will be the priest in charge of the missions at Vernon, Quanah and Childress.

Judy was secretary to the Rev. Doug Peterson, headmaster of Trinity School, here.

DeLorean compared to Cabbage Patch dolls

Copley News Service

Better step on it if you want one of those stainless-steel-skinned sports cars that bear the storied name of automaker and cocaine-case defendant John Z. DeLorean.

An Ohio company liquidating the assets of DeLorean's defunct enterprise says it has 350 unsold DeLoreans left. In the last few weeks, the Ohio company, Consolidated International Inc. of Columbus, has been advertising "the last of the DeLoreans" in national publications.

General manager Don Bowman said the liquidating business bought 1,750 DeLorean cars and $40 million in parts a year ago, when the DeLorean Motor Co. was in receivership. About 1,400 have been sold, and the rest, he predicted, will be gone in 60 days.

"They're turning into Cabbage Patch dolls," he said, recalling a craze of last Christmas.

Bowman said sales recently have turned brisk as car buffs realize that the DeLorean will soon go the route of such nameplates as Packard and Cord. Many DeLorean buyers, he said, have investment in mind.

DeLorean produced 9,700 of the cars between 1980 and 1982 at his plant in Northern Ireland.

Consolidated International is advertising the car at $21,000, but Bowman said the price would rise as the supply dwindled. About half of its cars are in Columbus, and the other half in the hands of dealerships.

Some dealers, however, are more effusive. George Lamb, general manager of a car dealership, had good words for the car.

"It had all the characteristics (stainless-steel body and gull-wing doors, for example), and now it has the most outrageous story behind it," he said.

Author takes advantage of 'men' market

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A woman who found hundreds of books on the adjustment of women to the feminist movement has written a book about the role of men because she couldn't find any like it.

Lucille Lavender of Bakersfield concluded that changing sex roles left men confused and without guidance, so she wrote "Husbands: An Endangered Species" to help men cope.

She acknowledges the title is more of a sales device than a valid conclusion. The book, written for husbands from a wife's perspective, leads readers from traditional gender roles to the revised ones seen today.

Mrs. Lavender, author of three other books and the wife of a Baptist minister, found that women tend to choose between traditional and liberated roles, but they often mix a bit of each, depending on circumstances, to the confusion of men.

"Men seemed happy about the gains women have made. They didn't like the clinging-vine wife," she concluded. "But basically it's been very, very difficult for them."

She calls the split image adopted by women "selective liberation," a situation in which they want to be treated like both a "lady" and an equal.

Volunteers adopt elderly

NEW YORK (AP) — Two groups whose numbers are increasing and whose personal and emotional needs often are neglected by society are at both ends of the age scale — handicapped institutionalized children and the institutionalized elderly, according to Dr. Morris Kleinfeld, director of Long Term Care Medicine at the Kingsbrook Jewish Medical Center in Brooklyn.

"Individuals in both of these groups often lose contact with their families and friends following admission to a long term care facility," he says.

Ten years ago, under the auspices of New York City's Office for the Aging, Kingsbrook instituted a Foster Grandparent Program for the benefit of its pediatric long-term patients. The volunteers who serve as foster grandparents provide the warmth, friendship, interest and individualized attention needed by the young patients at the Medical Center, Kleinfeld explains.

Now, Kingsbrook has instituted a program for the benefit of its elderly long-term patients. The Adopt an Elder Program, developed by Gwen Bradham, a registered nurse and a geriatric clinician at Kingsbrook, is believed to be the first of its kind in the country.

The program pairs elderly residents of Kingsbrook's nursing facility, the David Minkin Rehabilitation Institute, with senior citizens from the community in order to provide the residents with friendship and emotional support.

An initial group of 13 volunteers, 12 of whom are women, all over 60 years of age, offered to participate in the program. Funding for the project was provided under a grant from the Neighbor to Neighbor program sponsored by the Citizens Committee for New York City Inc. This grant program was instituted to promote greater community participation in projects serving or involving older adults in New York City.

The volunteers attended six weeks of training sessions conducted by Ms. Bradham and Kathleen Douris, also a registered nurse and co-director of the project, who is a student in the Geriatric Nurse Practitioner Program at Hunter College.

The training covered such areas as communicating with an elderly resident, chronic diseases of the elderly, the psychology of aging, normal aging changes, feeding an elderly resident, sensory changes in the elderly and the effects of institutionalization. Orientation at Kingsbrook followed.

Residents, ranging in age from 65 to 100, were selected for participation in the program based on their need for emotional support and socialization. Volunteers then were matched with the residents based on personality, background, interest and abilities. The volunteers visit their selected residents for a four-hour period on a regular weekly basis.

"The results of the program have been most encouraging," Ms. Bradham says. "Both the residents and volunteers have expressed great satisfaction with the visits."

Improvements have been noted, she said, both in the residents' physical condition and emotional outlook. They are less depressed and are communicating more freely with the staff and volunteers.

She cites the case of Edward F., a 62-year-old man with multiple sclerosis, who has been a resident in the Rehabilitation Institute for the past year. Prior to his illness, he had been in the insurance business.

After his admission, he became extremely depressed and cried frequently. He had a private duty nurse for a brief period. However, when her services no longer could be afforded, she was taken off the case. He then became increasingly despondent and his physical health declined as well.

Dorothy Deas, the volunteer who visits Edward, was chosen to work with him because she has also worked in the insurance field and is a very outgoing, engaging person.

"I felt that because of these qualities, Mrs. Deas would be able to draw him out of his depression, give him the encouragement and support he needs and also provide him with an opportunity to express any fears or concerns he might have," said Ms. Bradham.

Athletes looking for super diets

Copley News Service

If a person really is what he eats, as the saying goes, then athletes, with all their record-breaking and gold-medal performances, must be the healthiest eaters of all. Or so it was assumed.

Now, with the growing interest in sports medicine, specialists are finding that the adage isn't holding up. And, they say, some common practices among competitors, coaches, trainers and weekend athletes either aren't necessary or aren't healthy.

"Athletes are the biggest prey to food fadism, probably even bigger than the general public," says Patty Beckwith, a hospital dietitian and former consultant to Olympic teams.

"They hunger for success. They are looking for that elixir to give them that gold medal. Athletes are convinced that certain foods are going to make them win and other foods aren't."

Dr. Nathan Smith of the University of Washington says: "The world of athletes is a fabulous world of myths and superstitions. If one vitamin tablet is good, they think 14 will be fabulous."

However, the two specialists say there is no magic food or diet behind athletic prowess and stamina.

Santa Rita program planned

The Santa Rita PTA will meet 7—8:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Santa Rita Cafetorium for a parent education program.

Linda George, MSW, ACSW, will speak on "The Faster I Go the Further Behind I Get."

Dr. H. Paul Varley, professor of Japanese history at Columbia and author of "Japanese Culture" and "The Samurai," will lead the tour, which begins May 17 and ends June 2.

Cheeses differ greatly

Copley News Service

Fromage, queso, cheese — whatever you call it, this ubiquitous milk product is a favorite all over the world. We Americans love the stuff and eat an average of about 12 pounds a year.

If you ever wonder at the cost of some cheeses, remember that it can take 11 pounds of milk to make 1 pound of cheese. The whey (the liquid part of milk) is separated from the solid curd. The latter is then pressed, molded, aged, etc., until it is transformed into that glorious substance, cheese.

Processed cheese (also called American cheese) is popular in the United States. To make it, chunks of natural cheese are blended and cooked with preservatives and an emulsifier. This process pasteurizes the cheese, killing any bacteria and arresting ripening; hence, the mild flavor of American cheese. Cheddar and Monterey jack are also big sellers.

France is the major exporter of cheeses to the United States and many of these have become American favorites. Roquefort and bleu (made from sheep's and goat's milk, respectively) have always been popular salad toppers here. But recently, the growing interest in French cuisine has brought other French cheeses into the American diet. Creamy Brie and Camembert, and Muenster (from the Alsace region) are among the most widely used.

Swiss, Danish and English cheeses are used in a variety of ways, while Italy's mozarella, ricotta, Romano, Provolone and Parmesan are indispensable when preparing a Mediterranean meal. And Greek feta, a salty white cheese made from ewe's milk, is delicious crumbled into a salad or served with eggs and fresh fruit.

Spring designs for sheets debut

By The Associated Press

The sheet industry shows new spring lines to retailers in November. But Ralph Lauren's second collection for J. P. Stevens was introduced to the trade in January.

The motto for the industry often appears to be "off with the old and on with the new" as many of last season's domestics are discontinued to make room for a new set of designs. But the new Lauren domestics and related products build on themes introduced in his first collection, on sale since late fall.

The industry generally waits to see if a designer collection is going to be a success before investing in it. But Stevens set up a special marketing subsidiary with its own staff and quarters to handle the Lauren collection before the first washcloth was ready for production.

If you get the idea that the Lauren collection breaks new ground in the planning and marketing of home furnishings, you are right. The gamble has paid off, according to Dan Finley, general manager of the Lauren Home Furnishings subsidiary of Stevens. The first collection is in 30 of the nation's top department stores, and selling well at retail, he said.

One of the more unusual aspects of the first Lauren collection was the large number of separate items in it — 2,500 stock-keeping units, or SKU's in industry jargon.

"We expect to have 2,500 SKU's all the time," said Finley. The new collection, however, will not entirely supplant the old. Instead, many of the more wintry items will be out of production, so spring and summer designs being introduced now can be made.

Then as fall succeeds summer, the winter things will come back into production, Finley said.

The home furnishings designed by Lauren encompass everything for the home except furniture. Originally, Lauren was planning to include furniture, but none has been produced and it may never be, he said.

Besides bedding, towels and bath accessories, there are fabrics by the yard, wallpaper, dinnerware, flatware, glasses, kitchenware and a variety of home accessories. Many of the products are made by manufacturers other than Stevens, under license.

The designer has applied the same philosophy to home furnishings that has served him in apparel. He prefers to design classic clothes firmly based on traditional themes.

For example, he says he virtually reinvented the American West with rough outerwear, jeans and country plaids. Other themes he has made use of include small town 19th-century life on the eastern seaboard — or our idea of it — as well as Victorian opulence and English gentility.

The same themes are evident in his five new home furnishings collections. Each one has a full complement of home products — enough to create a special ambience in the home, according to Lauren.

LOSE WEIGHT EVEN AS YOU SLEEP

THE 24 HOUR DIET PLAN PACK

Losing weight has never been easier, faster, more healthful, or more certain.

The GNC Research Staff had a difficult assignment...to develop a weight loss program that puts its demands on science rather than human will power. They screened all the most effective plans and aids now known, and combined the best of the best. Although nobody expected a miracle, a lot of people are describing this three-part program as just that.

1. Glucomannan helps you shed an average one-half to one pound a day. Two Glucomannan capsules taken ½ hour before meals with an 8 oz. glass of water form a natural high fiber gel that reduces amounts of food you need to feel full, and also provides the bulk your system needs for passing more calories undigested out of the body.

2. Amino FB burns away fat while you sleep. These amino acid tablets taken before bedtime have been known to stimulate the production of growth hormones which direct your system to burn fat for energy instead of protein or carbohydrates—a reversal of the usual process. This action is continuously effective, even during sleep.

3. Preventron assures healthful nutritional balance. This high potency vitamin and mineral supplement delivers the all important nutritional requirements your body needs to look your best, feel your best and work your best.

Absolute Guarantee We unconditionally guarantee that the 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack will help you lose 5 pounds in ten days or your full purchase price will be refunded.

The 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack contains directions and a 2 week supply of products that together make weight control a physical science, not a challenge for your willpower.

Fashion school exhibiting dolls

NEW YORK (AP) — Dolls depicting famous actresses dressed in the fashions of their day and covering a period from 1865 to 1932 are featured in an exhibition at the Traphagen School of Fashion through March 31.

Among the actresses depicted by the 24 dolls are Katherine Cornell, Ina Claire, Ethel Barrymore and Mme. Modjeska. Ethel Traphagen, founder of the trade school, commissioned the dolls to be made by L&R Baitz of Berlin in 1937.

The exhibition includes engravings of theaters, and color lithographs of costumes of Commedia dell'Arte, Italian popular comedy developed chiefly during the 16th-18th centuries. Also on show is a collection of books about dolls.

Boys, girls differ on computers

NEW YORK (AP) — Boys and girls as young as 3 play with computers in different ways, and expect different results from computer activities, according to researchers at the Children's Television Workshop, producers of Sesame Street.

During the testing of the company's new computer software, researchers found that boys like to play at the computer by themselves, while girls are more apt to play with a friend, take turns at the game, and then discuss the outcome. The boys, for instance, tend to be more interested in games where they can conquer, zap or chase something or someone.

Sexism at the computer? Not at all, says Leona Schauble, director of educational development for the CTW Software Group. Some of the difference may be due to the attitudes of parents and teachers.

"But it does mean that those of us who create games for children must be aware," she says. "If we want to present girls with equal opportunities to become familiar and comfortable with the new technologies, we have to take the different interests of the sexes into consideration."

AT WORK

Advantages of age can be stressed

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D

Katherine, widowed at 50, needed a job. Try as she would, she simply couldn't get one, not at any level.

It was hard to believe. She was attractive, college-educated with early work experience as a hostess in a restaurant. But that was then. No one wanted her because she was too old, she had reason to believe. Yet no prospective employer ever asked her how old she was. "They got me not by fact," she said, "but by innuendo!"

In a youth-oriented culture, all of us suffer. Just look at the stories of baby moguls in Hollywood acing out experienced middle-aged managers. Although we have anti-discrimination laws on the books, we know how hard they are to enforce.

All that aside, Katherine's dilemma goes beyond her 50 years of living. Her being out of the work force for so long shows. Not in her slightly wrinkled skin or gray hair, but in her desperate eyes and set mouth that screams so silently that she has no confidence in herself. It turns out that it is she who discriminates against herself even before her interviewer can.

Consider what she could say in her own behalf. With no apology at all but with pride, she can prove that her age means she is more mature, can handle conflict, indecision or delay more adroitly than anyone younger, less experienced. She must say she is wiser, better read, even calmer, with better skills at coping with the toughest problem, or working with difficult people.

After all, she ran a household for 30 years, raised three children, put a husband through college by working in a restaurant, encouraged his career, entertained his associates, coordinated vacations, medical appointments, school schedules, car pools, and even was president of the PTA for a few of those years.

How is she going to get from feeling sorry for herself to making a place for herself, a leap that transcends diplomas or status? By recognizing the quicksand of self-pity. She must go for help. Not psychotherapy as much as joining any one of the countless support groups sponsored through colleges, Y's, or centers for older women who want second (or third or fourth) chances at a career.

In those sessions, she'll find she is not alone. Through others' stories and attempts, she'll grow bolder. She will specifically learn how to talk to an interviewer. It sounds life-threatening to someone who hasn't ever done that in her life. After all, her old restaurant job was handed to her by a cousin who needed help one week in 1953.

So, she'll have to think about her skills and put labels on ordinary tasks she has taken for granted. On a videotape, she will watch herself try to persuade the employer to help her, using her age to advantage. One or two months of sessions like these and she won't recognize herself.

That's exactly her goal: to live out her strong side that can talk of competence and opportunity and not heed that other one that we all give in to too often — the helpless, hopeless victim's whine that ruins us. She will learn what most of us who are out there have learned; that in a certain sense, we don't change by ourselves. Sure we act alone but in fact, we need each other for ideas and cheers when we are successful and kind but forceful encouragement when we are down.

Volunteers 'hit the trail'

BOSTON (AP) — How much does it cost to manage a hiking trail?

The Appalachian Mountain Club says that if Uncle Sam does it the cost is $51,000 per mile of trail, but volunteers can do it for less.

The club, which operates 1,000 miles of trail in the Northeastern United States, estimates it costs it $150 to maintain each mile of trail because of volunteers who are willing to work in exchange for food, lodging, shelter, tools and training.

DEAR ABBY

Freeloading neighbor burdens woman with 'paperwork'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. The woman across the hall from me asked (a couple of years ago) if she could have my daily newspaper when I was finished with it. I've always obliged. The Sunday paper is too enormous to read in one day, so I've often kept it until Monday or sometimes Tuesday. Every Monday morning my neighbor asks me if I've finished the Sunday paper yet, which gives me the feeling that I am being rushed.

Also, occasionally I will come across an article or an ad that I want to save, so I clip it out. Yesterday this lady asked if I would give her the newspaper intact, and after she reads it she will return it to me — and then I can clip out whatever I want. How is that for nerve? It's much more convenient to clip something when I first come across it; it would be too time-consuming to go through the newspaper a second time.

If you were in my place, how would you handle this? I don't want her for an enemy. Oh, another thing, she doesn't subscribe to any newspaper and she's in better shape financially than I am. — IRRITATED APARTMENT DWELLER

DEAR DWELLER: Tell her it's too time-consuming to go through the newspaper twice, so if she wants it, she will have to put up with an occasional gap. And when she asks for the Sunday newspaper, tell her you will give it to her after you've read it, and you'd appreciate it if she wouldn't ask for it because you feel guilty keeping it an extra day or two.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of grandchildren, ages 13 and 15, who received some very nice Christmas gifts, and had their mother write their thank-you notes? ("The kids are so busy with hockey and schoolwork that I was elected to thank you for the terrific gifts you sent them," etc.) — JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: I think the kids are the losers for having a mother (and/or father) who do for the children what they should do for themselves.

A child who is old enough to print should write his own thank-you notes. It matters not that the printing is barely legible and the spelling is atrocious; the note will be considered a treasure.

Some teen-agers require more prodding than others, but it's the responsibility of the parents to stand over them with an iron hand until the deed is done!

(If you're single and want to know how to meet someone decent, see page 20 of Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular." Send $2, plus a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

SNACK·SENSE

A variety of foods is readily available to most Americans. And this variety makes snacking more fun than ever. No need to settle for boring, repetitious foods that often fail to satisfy and, as a result, stimulate nonstop, inappropriate nibbling.

SNACKING

When the subject is snacking, we pay attention. Why? Because most of us enjoy a snack or two every day—sometimes planned, at other times almost without thinking. These mini-meals are definitely an important part of eating in the 80s. Just how important? Well, let's take a snacking survey—your own personal inventory.

Next time you're waiting in the grocery store check-out line, look over the items you're about to purchase. Surprised at how many of them will be used by you and your family for snacking?

Or glance into your kitchen cupboards and the refrigerator. How many foods do you keep on hand, perishable and nonperishable, which have become snacking staples? Probably many more than you realized.

SNACKING SENSIBLY

Just as we dress differently now than we did a decade ago, we eat differently as well.

No longer do we feel that the three-meals-a-day regimen is essential to a healthful way of life.

In fact, updated research shows that for many, particularly the young and the elderly, small portions of carefully selected foods eaten more often are more practical and appealing.

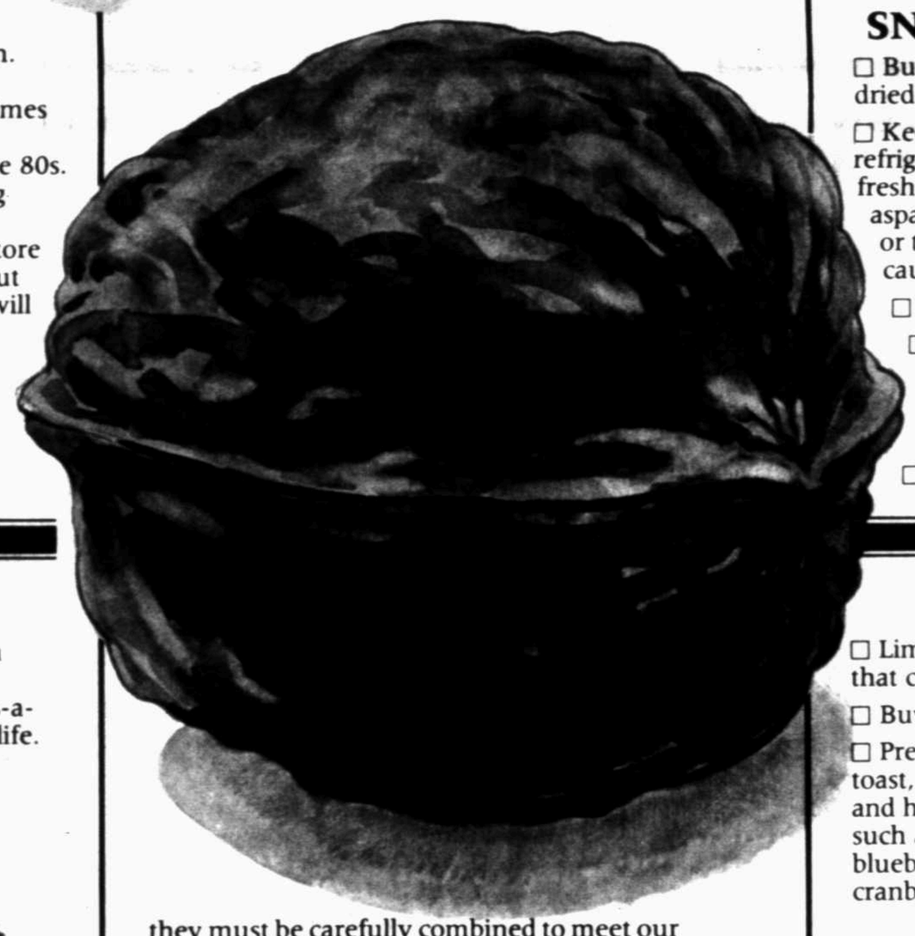

Even those who have strict dietary needs find their prescribed meal plans enhanced by between-meal options. Sensible snacking now has the approval of physicians and nutritionists, as long as the body's daily caloric and nutritional requirements are met.

SNACKING TIPS

Today, quality snack foods are available in most stores and vending machines to suit every age, appetite, meal plan, budget and preference. Quality, of course, is the key word.

Periodically take stock of your snacking habits. Keeping quality and variety in mind, how well do your between-meal treats complement the other foods you consume each day? Fueling our bodies properly is like putting together a puzzle. Different nutrients have different functions, so they must be carefully combined to meet our needs for energy, growth, maintenance, repair and replacement of body tissues, and regulation of body processes. Following is the Daily Food Guide which will help you review your eating and snacking pattern.

DAILY FOOD GUIDE

Food Group	Recommended Servings per Day
Vegetable and Fruit	4 or more (1 piece or ½ cup cooked per serving)
Bread, Cereal, Pasta and Rice	4 or more (1 slice bread, 1 cup dry cereal, ½ cup cooked cereal, rice or pasta per serving)
Milk, Cheese and Yogurt	2 to 3 cups milk—adults and children under 9 years 3 or more cups milk—pregnant women and children 9 to 12 years 4 or more cups milk—nursing mothers and teenagers (1 cup yogurt = 1 cup milk, 1 ounce cheese = ¾ cup milk)
Meat, Poultry, Fish, Eggs, Nuts and Beans	2 (2 to 3 ounces meat, 2 eggs, 1 cup cooked dried beans, 4 tablespoons peanut butter, ½ to 1 cup nuts per serving)
Fats, Sweets and Alcohol	variable (dependent on caloric needs)

SNACKING CONVENIENTLY

☐ Buy easy-to-carry foods, such as granola bars, dried fruits, meat jerky and nuts.

☐ Keep snacking items front and center in the refrigerator: pitcher of fruit juice, yogurt or custard, fresh vegetable nibbles such as thin, young asparagus spears, green pepper strips, rutabaga or turnip slices, raw peas in the pod, raw cauliflower or broccoli flowerets.

☐ Preslice cheese.

☐ Keep hard-cooked or deviled eggs handy.

☐ Freeze an assortment of half sandwiches and individual servings of main dishes, ice cream and sherbet.

☐ Serve ready-to-eat cereal plus milk.

SNACKING THRIFTILY

☐ Limit purchases of perishable foods to amounts that can be used while fresh.

☐ Buy fresh fruits and vegetables in season.

☐ Prepare low-cost snacks like popcorn, cinnamon toast, homemade soup and home-baked goods, such as muffins with blueberries or cranberries.

For kids as well as adults, snacking is a way of life. So learning to snack sensibly, keeping in mind the five basic food groups and using snacks to complement foods eaten at regular meals, is important for young children, too. Children just learning about nutrition will delight in choosing and helping prepare wholesome snacks. With guidance, they will develop food preferences that will set the pace for a lifetime of healthful eating at mealtime and at snacktime.

Gift-giving traditional for Japanese

TOKYO (AP) — The giving of favors and fulfilling of obligations is such a strong part of Japanese culture that department stores have set aside special departments to make it easier for customers — and of course more profitable for themselves.

In the special "gift center," occupying most of the 500 square yards of a floor in a typical Tokyo department store, sample gift packages are displayed.

Battalions of uniformed clerks advise customers in choosing just the right gift and deftly wrap even the most oddly shaped items in fancy wrapping paper decorated with sprigs of pine or other special accents.

During the semiannual gift-giving season — one in the summer months and again at year's end, when most workers receive hefty bonuses — the Japanese send gifts to business associates, teachers and landlords, to thank them for their help and courtesy.

In return, the donor does not expect a similar gift, but good business relations, guidance or just a stable friendship.

Department store gift centers appeal more to older Japanese than to the younger generation who do not place as much importance on cultural traditions as do their elders, some department store officials say.

"Everybody has their first time," said Junji Tanaka of Mitsukoshi Department Store in Tokyo's main Ginza shopping area. "Even if you grow up thinking that gift-giving is a wasteful idea, once you reach a certain age level, you start sending them."

Although Christmas is observed as a religious holiday by only a few Japanese, it neatly dovetails with the time for giving "oseibo," or end-of-the-year gifts, and thus is a major event for merchants.

Even if the gift is fairly ordinary, the wrapping paper is important because it carries a store's distinctive motif or colors, showing that the item has been purchased at a prestigious place rather than a neighborhood supermarket.

An official of a major trading house said her company does not send gifts to clients during the gift-giving seasons. She said a memo is circulated every year saying, "Let's not follow meaningless customs," to discourage the practice.

Nevertheless, Tanaka said, many companies are major spenders, some investing several million yen for gifts every December. One million yen equals about $425 U.S.

He also said a single company might buy gifts at different department stores, depending on the business affiliations of the recipients.

At Mitsukoshi's Ginza store, December 1982 sales were more than double that of an average month, and 20 percent came from gift items, Tanaka said.

He estimated that the average individual spent about 20,000 yen ($85) to follow the gift-giving tradition this December.

Popular items have not changed for the past five years, he said, with the best selling oseibo items in 1983 being imported liquors, cooking oil and sheets of seaweed.

Size of U.S. merchant marine fleet shrinking

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has slipped to 11th place in the size of its privately-owned merchant marine fleet and has less than a fourth as many ships as the Soviet fleet, according to the Transportation Institute.

The institute, a non-profit maritime research and educational organization, says the steady erosion of the U.S. flag fleet jeopardizes the nation's national security. It says the U.S. merchant marine had 574 privately-owned ships in 1982, the latest year for which figures are available, compared to the Soviet Union's 2,449 merchant vessels.

Rolls Royce chauffeur enjoys work

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — When Samantha Weaver thinks back on all her passengers with whom she has shared a Rolls Royce ride over the past two years, the stories she remembers most fondly are those of bringing a new baby home from the hospital and whisking a newly married couple from party to party on their wedding day.

"I think that couple took more pictures of the car than they did of the wedding," Ms. Weaver said. "And taking that baby home, that was another super job. They just looked so happy in the back seat, smiling and looking out the windows."

The car they were looking out the windows of was a 1976 Rolls Royce Silver Shadow, one of three luxury vehicles available for hire through Salem Hall Livery, a luxury limousine service, owned and operated by June and Bob Lettieri.

Ms. Weaver, of Clark's Summit, works as a full-time guidance counselor, but on weekends, nights and during the summer, she can often be found in her formal chauffeur's uniform (pin-striped slacks, formal jacket, ruffled white blouse, tie and hat) behind the wheel of the 1976 silver Silver Shadow, a 1971 black Silver Shadow, or a nine-passenger, designer-inspired, fully equipped (with television, bar, refrigerator) van.

Ms. Weaver has been at the wheel and opening doors of the Rolls Royce to give Michael Metrinko a ride home after his release from Iran. And she drove Broderick Crawford to the opening of "That Championship Season" in Scranton.

"We had a police escort from Clark's Summit down through Jackson Street and up to the front of the theater," Ms. Weaver said. "I've driven in two other police escorts. They were both interesting jobs on separate Armed Forces days. The best was driving Lt. Gen. Harry Griffith, director of the Department of Defense's Nuclear Agency.

"He asked all kinds of questions, was extremely well-prepared with information about the Scranton area, and was very personable. It was an enjoyable ride," she said.

Although Ms. Weaver enjoys driving and meeting famous people who come to town, she says, "A major part of the fun of driving the car comes from the reaction of people who don't expect to see it driving up to the door, as well as from the people on the street we drive by who are straining to try and see the 'celebrity' in the back seat."

The Lettieris founded Salem Hall Livery two years ago. And while Bob Lettieri may have had thoughts of using the cars for everyday personal use when he first purchased them, he has found that just isn't practical.

"It's too much of a worry about where you park. Everyone wants to see the car. Using these cars for everyday use is like wearing a tuxedo to work," he said.

In the time she has been driving, Ms. Weaver has taken a 16-year-old to a pizza parlor, another group of teen-agers to a Japanese restaurant and has picked up David Lettieri, the Lettieris' youngest son, from his last day at high school. David, a world-class bicyclist, was due at a competition when his class graduated.

"He was going to miss his graduation. So we had the limousine meet him at school. He was given a bouquet of balloons and had the car and driver to use for a few hours. His friends loved it," Mrs. Lettieri said.

"There absolutely is something special about riding in that car," Ms. Weaver said. "First of all, everything looks smaller from in that car. And I was very surprised to find that the car itself gets an awful lot of respect. People get out of the way for you.

Spring-summer haircuts feature variety

From Staff Reports

The scissors, razor and electric clippers are all important to the creation of shortly-sheared spring-summer haircuts, titled "Newbreak," according to HairAmerica, the fashion group of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association. Filled with variety, the styling body's brief precision cuts feature versatile styling length at the front of the head to accent and frame a multitude of facial shapes.

Altering the current emphasis on bobbed hair with the sizzle of new details, Newbreak employs salon artisanship at its zenith, according to Chuck Wilcox, treasurer of Texas Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association and president of the Midland affiliate of TCHA.

"Newbreak hairfashions combine the finest in razor sculpting for shingled napes and edged bangs, the control of clippers for fashionably buzzed-down sides and precision scissor tailoring for dashing, overlapping lines," Wilcox explained.

All three tools — the scissors, razor and clippers — are employed in the creation of the Newbreak look.

A powerful variation in the spring-summer style is the diagonal look, which draws hair length to one side of the face, either with equal length on both sides of the head or with a closely-cropped side to contrast longer length. Other styles include edged bangs with equal length on both sides or full throughout the front.

Sculpturing techniques make use of new salon products such as styling gels, foams, lotions and mousses. The haircut collection utilizes perm-swept body for luxurious hair movement and deep style control.

Style variations include symmetrical shapes with edged bangs and a convertible cut on the sides. Bobbed hair hides subtly cropped-out ears in this design.

"This hidden cut allows the total look to be instantly changed by pulling back the hair. Newbreak breaks away from the old familiar one-dimensional bob," Wilcox said, "and away from the traditional attitude of haircutting toward a new direction of creating design forms. It's really several cuts in one," Wilcox added.

Spring-summer haircoloring springs forth deep and lavish highlights and presents sharp, clean lines along with healthy sheen. Color by-words are color-zoning and color-surfacing for spring-summer.

In color-zoning stronger and darker tones are located at the back of the head with gradual lightening towards the crown and around the face. This halo effect is subtly blended.

Color-surfacing adds an extra layer of accent around the bangs and the sides of the top layer of hair to create vibrancy and softness around the face.

New perming techniques include the crinoline perm which adds extra texture and volume to underlying hair; ruffle surfacing which creates hair lift and texture; and chemical reformation which improves hair direction and thickness.

The masculine look for spring-summer is the Male Dash which features cropped-out ears, closely trimmed sides and extra, fully-permed volume at the front and top of the head. Summer dimensional blonding is a look becoming increasingly popular.

The Texas Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association trend release, "Puttin' On The Ritz," will be an evening presentation in April at the Yucca Theatre.

Cabbage Patch doll baby boom not over

By ERMA BOMBECK

You probably thought you had heard the last of the Cabbage Patch dolls, but a nation doesn't go through a 2.5 million baby boom without some fallout.

Since Christmas, there are 2.5 million single parents under the age of 12 out there floundering under a sea of diapers and feeding schedules who are asking themselves, "Is that all there is?"

They are too young to drink and too young to chuck it all and run away from home.

To the rescue comes Edward J. Zumach, a communications consultant from Phoenix, Ariz., who realizes the importance of a good old Mom's Network. He calls his support group the International Association of Dollbaby Parents.

Every month there will be a Newsletter, "The Dollbaby News," to "entertain and inform the millions of newly-blessed parents."

There will be a special feature called "Dollbaby Firsts," featuring news about unusual activities like taking a hot-air balloon ride or riding in a sailboat or helicopter.

In addition to contests and personal mothers' stories, little mothers will have a horoscope prepared for their dollbabies by a leading astrologer.

Imagine the thrill of knowing that if your child is a Libra, she "seeks beauty, peace and harmony but can be extremely ambitious and can burn the midnight oil, then collapse into complete laziness."

The Association is open not only to Cabbage Patch mothers, but those who are raising Strawberry Shortcake, Blueberry Muffin and Barbie and Ken children. (Tell me there will be an article on what age Ken can drive a cardboard car.)

We've come a long way since we slung a Christmas doll under the bed in February where it remained naked, unkempt, uncombed and rejected until our mothers stuffed it into a trunk to save for our children to throw under the bed.

Frankly, I think it's a great idea. I foresee doll pediatricians, psychiatrists, day nurseries when the miniature mothers go to work, babysitters and beauty pageants. Not only will they open up a new range for the economy, they will instill responsibility in a child at an early age.

But more important, it will be the greatest boon to birth control since garlic!

Peking celebrates new year

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

PEKING — Chinese communities all over the world started celebrating Thursday what is known under the old Chinese lunar calendar as "the year of the rat."

The rat zodiac sign is said to signify war, catastrophes and political disturbances. The Peking press has started a campaign against this superstition and stressed that these ideas have no scientific basis.

According to popular belief, people born in the year of the rat are said to be friendly, honest, thrifty and sentimental, but also greedy and domineering. To mark the start of the new year, a massive firework display was staged in Peking, with more than 600 million fireworks reportedly being ignited.

Although the lunar calendar has long since ceased to be officially embraced, it has retained its significance for Chinese customs and habits.

New sealants being used on children's teeth

Hearst Feature Service

SAN ANTONIO — Dentists and dental hygienists don't claim to have eliminated tooth decay, but they are hopeful that new products such as sealants may help prevent a majority of the caries in children.

Dental hygienist Shelley L. Flanagan, who works at Dentistry for Children, feels that in cities where there is no fluoridation of drinking water, the new sealant will do very well among youngsters.

"The emphasis is on preventive dentistry instead of restorative dentistry," emphasized Flanagan, who noted that children in cities where there is no fluoridation in water have more cavities.

Flanagan explained that sealants have been used by dentists for about five or six years but were unpopular. The sealant had to be treated with ultraviolet light; it was difficult to use. Now, the ingredients are easily mixed by hand by the hygienist or dentist.

The liquid sealant is applied to the top of the tooth, where it filters into the grooves and pits, where "80 percent of tooth decay starts," because that is where food is chewed. The sealant then hardens into a hard enamel-like covering which is bonded to the tooth.

"It's a resin (in the sealant) that bonds with the enamel to provide protection," said Flanagan. "First we isolate the tooth (with cotton) and prepare the tooth with an acid solution. This makes the tooth porous and more receptive to the sealant. There is no anesthetic necessary. No shots. The liquid just pours into the crevices."

Flanagan pointed out that the cost factor is also something to consider. Sealant costs from $18 to $35 a tooth. Fillings begin at $25 and involve a certain amount of drilling.

"There is a misconception that sealants are a 100 percent method of curing caries" she said. "They're not."

New York stay can be bargain

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Whenever a certain Hollywood filmmaker slips into town, rather than registering at one of those slick Manhattan hotels, he checks in with a company called Urban Ventures.

He contacts Urban Ventures for a couple of valid reasons. First because it saves him money; second because it offers the bonus of sweet privacy. No crowded lobbies, no maid sweeping in unannounced, no noisy bars.

Urban Ventures is a lively company that obtains private apartment rentals at a fraction of the cost one would pay for an ordinary room in a deluxe hotel. And quite often there is an extra: a spectacular view, as with the following:

"For rent, two-bedroom, two-bath apartment on the 34th floor of Manhattan small tower. Smashing view of the East River, Central Park. Sleeps five. Rate: $160 a day."

"Breathtaking" is how one renter described the experience.

Or there's the three-bedroom suite in a brownstone on 74th Street off Central Park West that would fetch $300 a night, easily, at the Regency but is available for only $175 instead.

Urban Ventures lists more than 400 properties in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens. Not only apartments but B&Bs, some for as little as $23 a night.

But it's the private apartment rental that's caught on with New York's astute visitor. Like the brownstone near Grammercy Park ($75) that's "full of old-fashioned charm, planters and original paintings" by its owner. Or the one-bedroom apartment 32 stories up near the World Trade Center in Lower Manhattan ($85) whose windows focus on the Statue of Liberty and ships entering New York Harbor.

Besides a breathtaking view, this rental is in the neighborhood of a number of excellent restaurants: Harry's American Bar, Capsuoto Freres (reservations a must!), Windows on the World, and Fraunces Tavern along Pearl Street where Gen. George Washington bade farewell to his officers following the American Revolution.

ANOTHER URBAN Ventures listing offers windows that frame the Empire State Building and features a queen-size bed, kitchen and bath for $65 a night. Or for the guest who isn't in a mood for whipping up dinner, a restaurant close by called Sumptuary turns out meals that are described as "tops."

Up near the Museum of Natural History and the Hayden Planetarium Urban Ventures steers visitors to an apartment that gives the impression the guest is "miles out in the country," this due to a charming garden behind the building. Its owner-chef — he displays a collection of antique copper cookware — asks $60 a night for two persons. In the same neighborhood a couple of restaurants come highly recommended: The Oeneophilia and another called the Front Porch.

On 72nd Street an apartment that's furnished by a model contains antiques she collected on trips around the world. Near Gracie Mansion, this rental features a 28-foot living room and views of rooftop gardens clear across Manhattan. The rate for two comes to $90 a day.

Or there's a loft apartment in Lower Manhattan that contains two bedrooms, a 40-foot-long living room, a dining room, kitchen and bath and sleeps four persons. Near Greenwich Village, it rents for $90 a night.

FOR THE BUDGET traveler, Urban Ventures is also into the bed-and-breakfast game. For $35 single $40 double there is the artist who is willing to share her loft apartment with its pots of geraniums as well as good cheer. Or there's the nightclub singer who picks up an extra buck welcoming guests to his pad on 73rd Street near Columbus ($45 single $50 double) with its queen-size bed, ceiling fan and Oriental rugs.

In the financial district, a computer technician does the honors in a loft apartment containing furnishings of the '30s and '40s. Guests take in South Street Seaport, Fulton Fish Market and Sloppy Joe's fish restaurant with its long, picnic-like tables. One of this rental's primary attractions, however, involves its proximity to the Brooklyn Bridge with its 360-degree view: Brooklyn to the east, Manhattan to the west, the Statue of Liberty and the graceful spans of the East River.

Urban Ventures goes as far as Brooklyn Heights and a 19th-century, five-story brownstone that features a splendid room at the top for only $27.

"One of New York's biggest unknown bargains," is how it's described by Frances Dworan, who founded Urban Ventures with a friend, Mary McAulay. Both ex-schoolteachers, they'd gone into education "starry-eyed" only to discover it was a "bureaucratic nightmare." That's when they decided to seek a new challenge.

Before launching Urban Ventures, the ladies wrote a guide to Brooklyn, which was where they'd taught school. Because the chapter on hotels was so thin, they decided to recruit families to take in guests. After this they expanded their operation to Manhattan and the success of Urban Ventures was guaranteed.

WHEN THEY LEARNED that so many guests know almost nothing about New York, the two put together another operation involving tours, taking visitors to the major attractions of Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens: Lincoln Center, Columbia University, the theater district, Washington Square, SoHo, Greenwich Village, Carnegie Hall, museums and churches.

Operating out of Mary McAulay's Upper West Side apartment, the ladies are booking accommodations and tours at a record pace.

'Learn-to-Ski' packages offered

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

An expanded winter schedule including one-day "Learn-to-Ski" trips has been announced by Black International Leisure, a New York tour operator that has directed its programs primarily — but not exclusively — to black travelers for 12 years.

Among upcoming packages are skiing weekends in Massachusetts, Vermont and Maine, and the third Eastern Black Skiers Jamboree in Canada.

The Jamboree, at Mt. Ste. Anne, 25 miles east of Quebec City, is designed for "skiers and non-skiers of all colors and creed."

It runs March 1-4, and the $275 price ($295 for non-members) covers roundtrip motorcoach, three nights' accommodation, a three-day lift ticket, mountain tours, ski races, sleigh rides, entertainment, tips and taxes.

For the first time in the show's history there will be exhibitors from abroad — masters of Ikebana, the Japanese art of flower-arranging — plus 54 exhibitors from the Philadelphia area who will reflect the oriental theme. Tickets at the door will cost $6 for adults, $3 for children under 12, but adult admission is $5.25 if 10 tickets are purchased in advance.

For ticket information, phone 215-625-8253. Information on exhibiting is available from the horticultural society, 215-625-8250.

Buenos Aires looks forward to new, more free era

Copley News Service

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — This capital owes as much to events as it does to those who shaped its graceful body and embued it with a captivating soul.

A then-expanding Spanish empire accounts for the city's birth in the 1500s and for its predominantly Latin roots.

Later — as was to be the case in New York — political, social and religious conflicts in Europe brought waves of immigrants. This port on the western banks of the broad River Plate estuary became their new home. And they, especially those who came at the turn of the century, gave Buenos Aires its distinctly continental appearance.

Built mostly by men and women who were either from, educated in, or inspired by the Old World, Buenos Aires today strikes visitors with a pleasant sense of familiarity: broad and tree-lined boulevards reminiscent of those in Paris; myriad fountains and churches that would be at home in Rome; magnificent monuments and a wealth of parks to rival London's; baronial homes seemingly lifted from Florence; shops as chic as those found in Berlin and Zurich; grand government buildings Madrid would call its own, and modern business and housing towers Scandinavian designers would approve.

THE CITY'S personality, however, is quintessentially Argentine.

Above all, both town and residents are elegant, yet tempered by a touch of conservatism; adventurous, though discreet; dignified, but with a sense of humor; cultured without appearing obnoxious; willing to adopt worthwhile foreign ideas and styles, yet proud of native accomplishments and traditions.

In short, a town as fascinating and attractive as the majority of its 3 million denizens.

Incidentally, that's the number of people within the municipality. Greater Buenos Aires now has more than 9 million inhabitants, or almost one-third of the country's total population.

Most Portenos, or people of the port, as city residents call themselves, can best be described with a composite: Italians who speak Spanish harbor many British attitudes and practice savoir faire better than the French.

CNS Photo

The new political situation in Argentina, with its first freely elected democratic government in a decade, is epitomized by this smiling grenadier guarding the Casa Rosada, the presidential palace.

SOPHISTICATED AND urbane, they relish good conversation. Get two locals talking, the saying in Buenos Aires goes, and you'll get three opinions. Exchanges usually are heated, often emotional and always eloquent. And as a rule, debaters previously unknown to each other wind up their chat over a cup of coffee at one of the countless cafes by arguing over who will have the honor of paying the bill.

They also thoroughly enjoy good food and wine. As important, to them hospitality and good manners rank highest among social virtues.

The official city guidebook suggests visitors "ask anybody" if information they need is not found within its covers.

In Buenos Aires that's no public relations hyperbole. It's a fact.

I found cordiality toward guests more evident this time than in previous visits. Immediately on arrival I noticed an abundance of smiles, and was quickly caught up in the upbeat mood of people quite apparently happy with their lot despite pressing economic problems.

Subsequent conversations with scores of Argentines from various walks of life revealed that there indeed was a reason for the sunnier attitude — the exciting prospect of a freer and financially healthier country under its first freely elected democratic government in a decade.

Safe at any time and very easy to negotiate on foot or via its numerous and reasonable cabs, the bustling shopping, business and entertainment hub of this sprawling town also houses most of the key visitor sights.

ANCHORING ONE end of this 40-odd-square-block area, manicured Plaza de Mayo serves as a flowery platform from which to view several of Argentina's historic structures.

Facing the eastern end of the two-block-long and one-block-wide square, huge Casa Rosada was a fortress in colonial times. Named for its rose color, it is now the presidential palace.

It was here that on my first day in town I got a measure of the delight with which most Argentines view their new political situation: The poster-handsome grenadier in bright-red and dark-blue dress uniform, feathered hat and sword guarding one of the entrances to the palace gave me a gracious go-ahead when I asked if I could take his picture. But he added, "Make sure you catch my smile. Now we have democracy, and that's great news."

To the right of the Casa Rosada, the Metropolitan Cathedral catches the eye with the 12 columns of its Grecian facade crowned by an elaborately decorated triangular fronts piece. Inside this church with five naves lie the remains of Jose de San Martin, the Argentine general who along with his Venezuelan colleague, Simon Bolivar, liberated most of South America from Spanish rule in the 19th century.

ANOTHER HISTORIC structure stands opposite Plaza de Mayo's western end — the early colonial two-story Cabildo, the former Council House where independence from Spain was declared. It now serves as an interesting museum where artifacts, paintings and weapons depict Argentina's struggle for freedom from Madrid's rule.

The stark little pyramid in the center of the square honors the nation's birth and bears the date of the event — May 25, 1810.

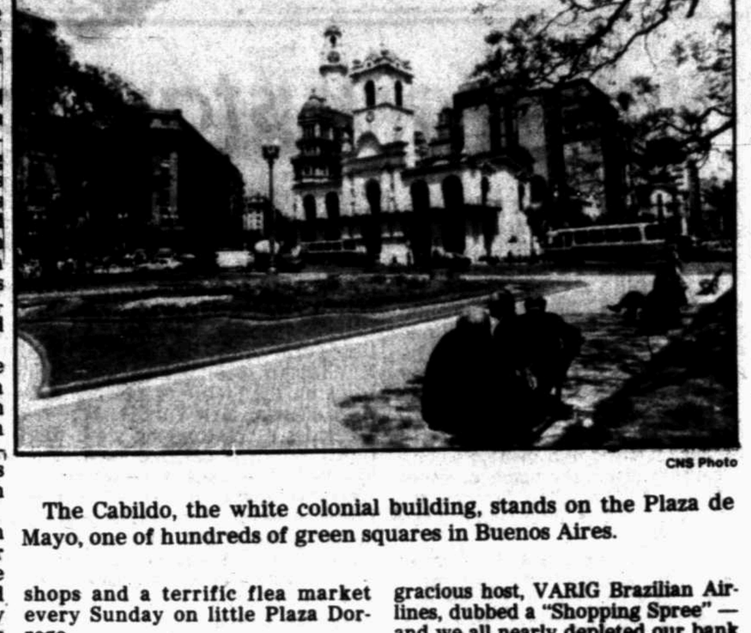

About a half-mile away — and large enough to be seen from Plaza de Mayo — the majestic Greco-Roman national Congress building bears a striking similarity to its counterpart by the Potomac. Its ornate debating chambers silenced in recent years by a series of civilian and military dictatorships, it again serves as the seat of the country's bicameral Legislature — the brand-new body which Argentines elected this past October.

Other worthwhile sights include the stately Teatro Colon, which experts usually rank along with Milan's La Scala and the Opera in Paris. More than 200 concerts, ballets, operas and other performances are staged there from March through November each year.

Also worth seeing is Plaza San Martin, a popular gathering spot for downtown residents. My favorite hotel in town, the venerable and gracious Plaza, faces this leafy square. The two central arteries with the largest variety of quality shops — pedestrian-only Florida Street, which runs for nine blocks, and miles-long, traffic-crowded Avenida Santa Fe — start here.

LA BOCA, Buenos Aires' very Italian harbor-side section, mixes gaudy nightclubs, bars of every stripe, brightly painted houses, exuberant musicians and mostly good and boisterous restaurants to give both Portenos and visitors one of the city's most vibrant and colorful neighborhoods. Suggestion: though group movements are not within my list of travel pleasures, I'd recommend visiting this quarter on a tour, which your hotel concierge can arrange. Thus, you'll avoid the entrepreneurs, said to be few but savvy, who overcharge solo tourists.

San Telmo, a colonial neighborhood downtown where Argentina's ubiquitous tangos fill the air seemingly around the clock, also draws locals and their guests. Don't miss it, even if you cannot tell a tango from a waltz. The sensuous atmosphere of its mostly ancient cafes and restaurants will delight you, especially if you speak enough Spanish to understand lyrics and engage in conversation. There's another reason for a visit here — numerous antique shops and a terrific flea market every Sunday on little Plaza Dorrego.

CNS Photo

The Cabildo, the white colonial building, stands on the Plaza de Mayo, one of hundreds of green squares in Buenos Aires.

ON AT least two counts, the world's widest avenue, 425-foot-wide 9 de Julio, is worth more than a look. One, to cast eyes and camera on the 70-foot-tall obelisk which marks the central city's geographical heart at the intersection with Corrientes Street; also to people-watch from one of the numerous sidewalk confiterias (teahouses), bars and cafes along the nearly three-mile-long avenue.

Other popular sights would include Recoleta, a one-of-a-kind cemetery with fantastic mausoleums in every architectural style known, where only the rich and the famous are allowed; the Museo de Bellas Artes, Argentina's finest and most important art gallery; the splendid Jardin Botanico, the botanical gardens in suburban Palermo, and the Hipodromo, the country's most famous racetrack, also in this area.

Shopping remains a treat, but the great bargains of yore seem to have gone the way of the military — in other words, not so frequently found as was the case in years past. However, there are good buys — especially in leather goods and furs. Along with me for part of this visit were several other American travel writers. We were on what our very gracious host, VARIG Brazilian Airlines, dubbed a "Shopping Spree" — and we all nearly depleted our bank accounts while picking up coats, jackets, shoes, shirts and other mostly reasonable and very well-crafted Argentine products. Too, several of us invested in samples of the renowned local wines.

OUR STAY was highlighted by several of the great meals for which Buenos Aires is noted. Most memorable were the multi-course beef barbecue at No. 55 Happening, one of a string of almost identical eateries that line one stretch of the riverside Costanera Avenue, a sumptuous French dinner at the regal Au Bec Fin and an evening at a branch of the Los Inmortales chain for a variety of delectable pizzas and empanadas (meat-filled pies) and delicious local beer.

To maximize your investment, consider time here as part of an air package around South America. In my view, the most experienced company to handle ground arrangements is Rio-based Abreu Tours, which you or your travel agent can contact at 60 East 42nd St., Suite 3108, New York, N.Y. 10165, toll-free phone 1-800-223-1580.

And remember, a whole country lies beyond.

Oregon town has Shakespearean interests

By EVELYN KIERAN
Copley News Service

The first winter storm from the Pacific dumped just enough snow on the Ashland hills in Oregon to make a snowman, and the kids ran laughing all over the yard, rolling the snow to create their first "King of the Hill."

King he surely was as he surveyed the scene along Interstate 5, which, starting at the Mexican border, cuts through California on the eastern scarp of the coastal range, then crosses into Oregon just north of Shasta and continues west through Medford and the Valley of the Rogue before it turns north, rambling on to Canada.

It's a sizable kingdom, and one of the prettiest and richest agricultural areas in the West. Great orchards blossom and bear in the valley, great forests on the hills feed the local mills and, not too long ago, deep mines near Jacksonville gave up their gold.

Nowadays, more gold comes from the tourists who come to share the pleasant environment, visit the historic places, raft and fish on the Rogue, camp in the woods and by the lakes and enjoy the performances of the notable Shakespeare company which calls Ashland home.

The snow that dusted the hills recently faded in the winter sun, but enough fell on Mount Ashland to lift the hearts of local skiers and lure them up the mountain for a few hours' fun on the steep downhill slopes or across country along the Pacific Crest Trail. Snowmobiling, ski touring and winter hiking in the Cascade foothills draw a fair share of hardy winter sports enthusiasts, as well.

Ashland's big draw starts in late February with the opening of the Shakespearean Festival. The 1984 season lists 11 productions in three theaters. Two of these are indoors and suitably small for the kind of plays they showcase: The Angus Bowmer and The Black Swan. The beautiful Elizabethan Theater which seats the playgoers outdoors also is the oldest authentic reproduction of the Old Globe in the West.

For schedules and reservations, write Shakespeare, P.O. Box 158, Ashland, Ore.97520.

Main Street is lined with colorful banners proclaiming Ashland as the Center of the great Shakespearean Festival. It's a spirit-lifting sight accented by local shopkeepers who participate enthusiastically in support of the ongoing programs. The whole town joins in the fun generated by such a cosmopolitan theater group, and even the casual visitor gets caught up in the lively air.

It's easy to spend several hours enjoying the ancillary aspects to the theater. The Tudor Gift Shop and Brass Rubbing Center features costumes from festival plays as well as books, gifts and delicacies related to Shakespeare. At the Fantasy Gallery, you can try on costumes, pose for pictures and strut on the stage. Backstage tours of the theaters are conducted by knowledgeable members of the company who give an excellent idea of what goes into each production.

Summer brings the Tudor Fair and a Renaissance Feast as well as a lively program of concerts, lectures and round-table discussions. In fact, for a comparatively small town, there's an awful lot going on in Ashland and its surrounding areas all year long.

So much activity generates a need for excellent lodging and dining facilities for visitors. Ashland has filled the need with some extraordinarily fine bed-and-breakfast places and a few outstanding restaurants.

We checked out several of them on a recent visit, found one more charming than the next, with universally affable owners, all anxious to please. We were particularly impressed with the number of bright young people we met — all willing to work hard to make a living in this place which is so pleasant to live in.

Joe and Phyliss Morical have lovingly restored an 1880s Victorian at 668 N.Main (503) 482-2254, and furnished each of five bedrooms with baths with excellent antiques and warm color schemes. The dining room, where full breakfasts are served, has a sweeping view of the Cascades to the east and there's an old oak organ in the sitting room for guests to enjoy. Open year-around, $38 to $55.

Jim and Nancy Beaver offer evening sherry in their cheery sitting room at The Chanticleer, 120 Gresham St. (503) 482-1919, and a goodly supply of board games for guests to enjoy. Full breakfast is included — if you can bear to crawl out from under the down covers on the queen-size beds. $48-$59.

Carolyn Morris, whose fascination with the early mining days of the area has carried over to her decor at The Miner's Addition, 737 Siskiyou Blvd., offers full breakfast to guests in the two rooms available in her pleasant home (503) 482-0562, $40 a night.

The Winchester Inn is the only B&B with a full — and excellent — restaurant. Two brothers, Pat and Michael Gibbs and their wives, Coleen and Laurie, have taken over this outstanding old Victorian, completely restored and refurnished seven huge bedrooms, built a gazebo in the garden and settled two fine chefs in the kitchen to provide a varied and delectable menu. The two young couples, both with a successful track record in the hospitality industry, opened the doors of this charmer on July 1, 1982, and have been happily busy ever since. (503)488-2302, $48-$60. We should note that this is one of the few inns which can accommodate wheelchair guests.

A few miles out of town, alongside a sparkling creek, lies the Neil Creek Inn, complete with pool, pond, rowboat and ducks. Tom and Edith Heumann manage this distinctive five-acre, somewhat European menage where guests have their own living room with a huge stone fireplace. Each room and bath has a view across country — some have private patios, and full breakfast is served with eggs and jam from local farmers. This would be a lovely place to spend some get-away-from-it-all time, yet it's only minutes to downtown Ashland. The address is 341 Mowetza Drive (503) 482-1334, and reservations go for $50 to $65.

There are several motels, a few good hotels — notably, The Mark Anthony and the Ashland Hills Inn — and The Ashland Chamber of Commerce will gladly send you a brochure full of hotels, motels, country inns and restaurants in the area. write them at Box 606, Ashland, Ore. 97520.

We dined, and very well, too, at the Jacksonville Inn one evening, thoroughly enjoying both the cuisine and the atmosphere of this most affable inn in the historic town of Jacksonville, about 30 minutes drive from Ashland.

The Change of Heart, a restaurant at 139 E. Main St. also won our hearts another evening for its romantic setting and fine food and, with the Winchester Inn, joined a select list in the area.

There's a lot more to the area than Shakespeare — rafting and fishing on the wild and scenic Rogue River, camping at Howard Prairie and Hyatt Lakes and visits to Crater Lake and Emigrant Lake could easily fill a whole vacation. Walking, hiking, fishing and just sitting in the sun in clear mountain air work their own magic, too.

FOUR SEASONS TRAVEL INSTITUTE

ASK THE FDIC

FDIC liquidator says only a few banks not insured

By THOMAS R. PROCOPIO

Banks and savings and loan associations advertise that they are members of either the FDIC or the FSLIC. How is an investor to know that this statement is truthful?

After an investor has placed his or her money with one of these insured institutions what would prevent the institution from withdrawing from the FDIC or FSLIC? This would leave the money uninsured.

I cannot speak for the FSLIC but I can speak for the FDIC. To receive a national charter, banks must be insured by the FDIC. However, state charters can be obtained without FDIC insurance. For all practical purposes though, who is going to invest in a bank which is not insured by the FDIC?

I can't ever conceive of a bank withdrawing involuntarily from the FDIC's insurance coverage. And FDIC membership is something that can't be faked. The state and federal regulatory agencies, I would think, would find out and move quickly to shut the institution down.

By percent, there are not a lot of banks — about 200 out of more than 14,000 — which are not insured by the FDIC. These are private institutions that have been around for ages. I do not believe there are any in Midland, however, if you are curious about what institutions are not insured, you can write to the FDIC offices in Washington and ask for a list of uninsured banks.

The FDIC can, however, involuntarily take away a bank's insurance if they are engaged in unprudent banking practices. It is called a "Section 8 - involuntary termination." This situation can be caused by any number of reason including violating laws or federal regulations or even for poor management.

Should this occur, the FDIC notifies the institution that it intends to to cancel the bank's insurance. After notification, the bank then has a certain amount of time in which to answer the charges and allegations. If the FDIC's board of directors rules infavor of the region which initiated the involuntary action, then the bank is put on notce that it has lost FDIC insurance.

The bank is then required to give notice to its depositors and the general public that it has lost its insurance. Any new deposits put into the bank will not be insured but existing deposits will stay insured for approximately two years, I believe. So, a depositor would have ample time to move his or her funds if their bank was to lose its insurance. However, this is a very, very unusual situation.

•••

Will the FDIC release the papers on property titles when the obligation is paid off as a bank does?

We will check to see if the person who paid off the obligation does not have any other debts with the FDIC. If they do not and the check is good we will release the collateral and/or the title to the property.

For example, if an individual has several loans and pays off one which is secured by a house and his or her other loans are current, well collateralized, we will release the house.

However, if the individual has another loan with us and does not have it adequately secured and especially if it is delinquent then we probably won't release the collateral and/or the title if we can do it legally.

We have what is called a "dragnet clause" which means, basically, if a person pledges security for one loan, it's security for all loans at that bank.

This is something we will probably be challenged on, if we haven't already. However, we haven't been challenged on it yet, that I'm aware of, in any recent bank failures.We've had a lot of problems with participant banks as to how we will share the collateral.

As far as the dragnet clause is concerned we haven't had, to my knowledge, any specific law suits over it. However, I have a feeling we are going to have it here because there are some major credits which we share with other banks where there is some dispute over the collateral position as to who is entitled to what. Therefore, I believe we are probably going to have to get a court to decide the issue.

However, if our lawyers look a document and tell us we have to release the collateral regardless, obviously, we will do what ever our attorneys tell us to do. This happens a lot. And as a result, we do not have any choice — the documents speak for themselves — when it is stated that the collateral is only held for that specific debt not for others.

•••

I have heard the FDIC intends to fully guarantee (100 percent) the creditworthiness of the loan packages from FNB it plans to sell in this area, could this possibly be true?

Absolutely not! This is not true. The bid packages which will go out to area financial institutions will allow any bank or savings and loan association, purchasing loans totaling under $50 million, to put back (the option to give back to the FDIC a non-performing loan within a specified time) 80 percent of the loan, less any payments that have been made.

However, if a financial institution purchases $50 million or more we will offer them essentially the same deal we offered RepublicBank First National Midland — 100 percent put back of 25 percent of the total loans purchased. In other words, if an institution purchases $50 million or more they can put back up to $12.5 million worth of loans with 100 percent reimbursement of the book value of the loan, less any payments they have recieved.

Some people may believe this arrangement is not that significant, however, if a loan is bad, it's probably not going to pay any more and receiving 80 percent of that loan is better than receiving nothing, especially for a bank.

We are planning to mail bid packages out to about 100 financial institutions which will cover just about every bank and savings and loan association in West Texas.

For institutions, not on our bid list and are interested in receiving copies of these lists, can write to Brad Scott, bulk sales section chief, FDIC, P.O. Box 1599, Midland, Texas, 79702. If an institution has specific lending policies they can inform us of them and we will only mail out the type of loan packages which fit their requests.

For individuals who are interested in obtaining a list of other items and properties the FDIC has, Robert Estrada, at 658-2293, is the person to contact.

Acid rain an emotional issue in southeastern Ohio

NEW LEXINGTON, Ohio (AP) — In this southeastern Ohio coal town, the acid rain issue has hit like a sudden downpour.

Environmentalists say that factories burning Ohio's high-sulfur coal cause increased acidity in rain and surface water, damaging plants and killing fish in other parts of North America.

Community leaders here say national efforts to control the problem threaten jobs and, perhaps, a way of life in these coal-rich hills.

"We all want clean air," said H.R. Hall, president of United Mine Workers Local 1340. "But we want to be able to live, too."

Hall's union represents miners in this town of 5,000, 45 miles southeast of Columbus and home of the Peabody Coal Co.'s Sunnyhill Mine.

For years, coal has meant a livelihood, a regular paycheck. But the coal's sulfur content suddenly has become a liability.

Sunnyhill's biggest customer, Consumers Power Co. of Jackson, Mich., has served notice that it won't buy coal from the mine after its current contract expires at the end of the year.

The power company's decision follows a Michigan environmental board ruling that the utility's smokestack emissions — from the burning of high-sulfur Sunnyhill coal — exceed state standards.

Hall said the average UMW member at Sunnyhill earns $113 a day, a good living by most standards. But the mine, which operated six days a week until last year, is now down to four days.

The effects, Hall says, are subtle: fewer cars on the streets, empty grocery carts, empty stores.

"You know, you used to be able to walk in a bar and see a couple guys you knew and see money lying around on the tables," Hall said.

"Somebody'd see you and say, 'Hey, buy him a beer.' Not any more. You go in, you buy your own beer."

Hall said Consumers Power buys 90 percent of the coal mined at Sunnyhill, meaning that 400 UMW members and another 100 mine employees could lose their jobs unless a new buyer is found. Community business leaders predict the ripple effects of the mine's closing would be devastating.

"We have a lot of things that scare us," said grocer Mike Heavener.

Heavener, a member of the New Lexington Chamber of Commerce, says Perry County's already staggering unemployment — currently estimated at 25 percent — would soar if the Sunnyhill Mine closes. Besides the 500 mine employees out of jobs, business leaders estimate another 300 people would be laid off public and private payrolls.

Their figures indicate that area schools would lose about 1,000 students as laid-off miners moved away, resulting in a loss of more than $2 million in state school aid and local tax dollars. Businesses estimate retail sales would plunge $7 million. Non-school tax collections in Perry County would fall by more than $500,000.

Heavener says he would have to close one of his two stores and estimates a a 30 percent drop in business at the remaining one. Despite the nation's economic recovery, his business already is down 14 percent from last year.

People also are worried about the local housing market.

Hall described the $50,000 to $60,000 homes dotting the hills in a corner of New Lexington — many of them, he said, owned by mine employees.

"Who's going to buy those houses?" he asked.

The unanswered questions already are affecting families, says James Wright, minister of New Lexington's Cornerstone Baptist Church.

"I'm working now with a case of child abuse and wife abuse, and that's unheard of in a town like this," said Wright. "And that's what scares me."

At the mine, workers are scared. Reassurances are few.

"(Acid rain) is a problem. But I'd like to see them keep us working," said miner Bobby Vann.

Like many Sunnyhill miners, Vann came to New Lexington in the early 1960s after Peabody closed a mine at Harlan, Ky. His roots are here now.

"We just don't know what's going to happen," said Vann, 31. "But I wouldn't go in debt for nothing."

Like Vann, 30-year-old miner Tony Martin "moved here with the coal boom." He's prepared to move again.

"I probably wouldn't go back to Harlan, but I might be forced to move on," he said. "I'm young; I can pick up and go on."

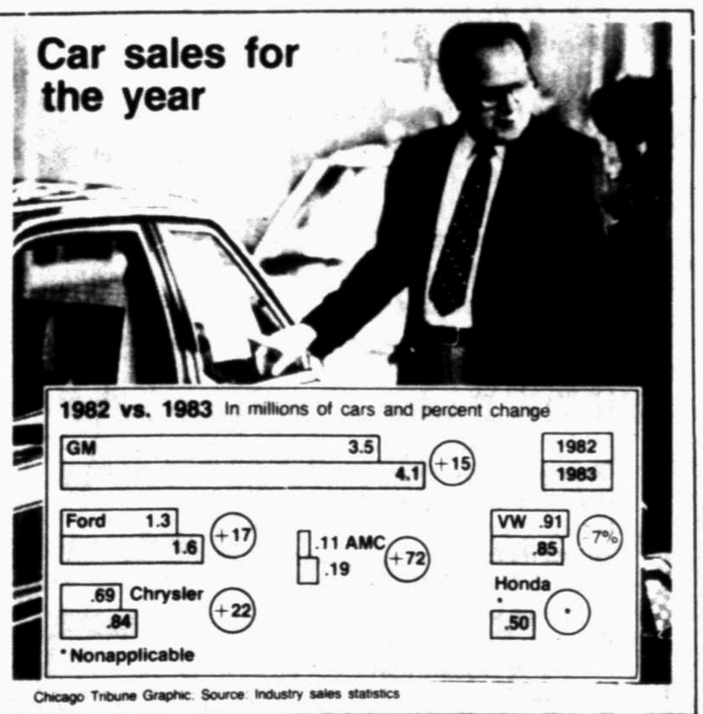

But some people are encouraged by renewed state interest in the local economy. State officials have promised to help market Sunnyhill's coal while at the same time aiding development of an industrial park on land donated by Peabody Coal.

The idea is to diversify New Lexington's economy. But Hall feels it already may be too late.

Miners from the day shift at Peabody Coal Co.'s Sunnyhill Mine emerge from the main shaft at the end of the day. They face an uncertain future at the mine, which is in danger of being closed because of declining markets for its high-sulfur coal.

Car dealers optimistic about 1984 sales

Cash in hand; Dealers ready to spend

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — A record number of auto dealers opened a four-day convention Saturday with an optimistic outlook for 1984 car sales and cash to spend on new business equipment, the outgoing president of the National Automobile Dealers Association said.

Convention officials expect 15,000 people to attend the group's 67th annual convention. Advance registrations were up 14 percent, and a record number of exhibitors — 210 — will be offering automobile and dealership products.

"The dealers have had four to five years that have not been so good," said NADA President William Turnbull.

"Those that normally come to the convention will be buying this year and those that couldn't afford to come in the past will be able to come, and probably be able to buy."

Turnbull said dealerships steered through the recession by cutting their costs and learning to use their money more efficiently.

This year should be the year of the payoff, he said.

"If the industry turns up or even stays the same, they (dealers) will make a profit, and if car sales go way up, they obviously will do very well," said Turnbull, a GMC-International Harvester dealer from Huntington, W.Va.

"Dealers have repositioned themselves over the last two to three years through better management of money and better management of people," he said. "They've gotten rid of their people who didn't produce, or at least sent them to schools so they would learn how to be more productive."

Industry sources say General Motors dealers will be eager to learn more about the company's internal reorganization that will group divisions into either the large-car unit or the small-car unit.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole will addressed the convention Saturday, and Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca is expected but will not deliver a prepared speech, convention officials said.

Turnbull said dealers are looking to replace computer systems purchased five or six years ago with state-of-the-art systems. He said dealers now have the fiscal confidence to begin replacing aging equipment such as hydrolic lifts and heating and cooling systems, and are eager to get into the expanding market of van conversions.

"Recreational vehicles will be very big this year — the conversion of vans with all the thick upholstery and all," he said. "It's not really a new thing, but there's been an upturn in that and dealers want to get in on it."

Turnbull said dealers are anxious to reduce their costs through technology in order to position themselves for the next downturn in the auto industry.

"The dealers I have talked with are very optimistic right now," he said. "They have learned to operate and make a profit on less volume of vehicles. ... And they've done it themselves. Now they want to enjoy things."

Turnbull will be replaced as president by James P. Jennings, a Glenview, Ill., Chevrolet dealer.

Five lenders approved

AUSTIN — Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro recently announced five Midland County lending institutions have been approved by the Veterans Land Board as participating lenders for the Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program.

The lending institutions approved in Midland County are include Jackie Johnson Mortgage Co., Mortgage and Trust Inc., Home Savings Association, Pioneer Mortgage Co., and Investors Inc.

A total of 95 Texas lenders and 127 branch offices across the state have been approved as lenders for the newly-created program.

"This is an exciting day for all of us who have been involved in shaping this outstanding program," Mauro said. "The action by the board clears the way for the final step in a process that began over two years ago when I began my campaign for Land Commissioner.

"The financial communities' acceptance of this program is proof that if you do your homework, and make sure you've crossed all the t's and dotted all the i's, you can create legislation that has a significant impact on the quality of people's lives. Now it's time to start making loans," he said.

The Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Programs offers $20,000 loans to eligible Texas veterans to apply toward the purchase of a home. The program is intended to be used in conjunction with a loan from a private lending institution at conventional rates. The current interest rate for the $20,000 Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program loan is set at 9.97 percent on a 30-year term. If the loan is used in conjunction with a VA loan from a private lender, no down payment is required.

DALLAS — Apache Corp., Minneapolis, Minn., and Diamond Shamrock Corp., Dallas, have jointly announced they have signed an agreement in principle calling for Apache Petroleum Co., a partnership for which Apache Corp. is general partner, to purchase for $160 million cash all the producing and non-producing properties in the continental United States, excluding federal offshore leases, of Natomas North America, a Diamond Shamrock subsidiary.

The transaction is subject to normal government review and approval by the boards of directors of the two companies.

Board studying insurance charges

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

State Board of Insurance is considering proposed changes in calculation of worker's compensation premiums, which could result in redistrubution of charges among employers.

National Council on Compensation Insurance is seeking to eliminate the $300 weekly payroll limitation now in effect — a change NCCI has sought for 10 years or more.

Associated General Contractors of Texas has proposed an alternative program.

NCCI contends Texas is the only state which doesn't use total payroll in calculating worker's compensation premiums, but SBI chairman Lyndon Olson commented at a hearing on the request that that doesn't mean Texas is wrong.

NCCI representative Roy Kallop said the change would not reproduce any overall change in premium, but some employers would pay more — and others less.

AGCT representative Norman McLeod said the contractors desagree with NCCI regarding proposed 'offsets' for employers during a phase-in period, arguing there is a 15 prcent error in the proposed offsets.

NCCI proposes restricting any increases to five percent for the first year, 10 percent for the second year and 15 percent for the third, when it is expected that all adjustments would have been made.

AGCT is seeking a four-year phase-in — and argues against making any adjustment in rates before Sept. 1.

Water Development Board members adopted amendments to rules relating to industrial solid waste and consolidated permit requirements, with the changes described as needed to assure delegation to Texas of final authorization for hazardous waste management under the Federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

One change requires owners or operators of new hazardous waste facilities to obtain permits prior to any phsical construction of those facilities, and to submit permit applications as least 180 days before construction is to commence.

Other changes relate to clarifying requirements relating to shipment of wastes and regulation of hazardous wate residues in containers, and requireing that all permit conditions be incorporated either expressly or by reference.

Delegation of the program to Texas will result in elimination of dual hazardous waste programs in texas after Jan. 16, 1985, the Department of Water Resources reports.

State Preperty Tax Board reports 114 county appraisal districts have assigned values to bank stock within their counties, while another 64 have plans to do so.

STPB Deputy diretor Jim Robinson says a survey of county appraisal districts shows 216 of the 254 counties have indicated actions to the agency regarding their bank stock.

Of those, 68 places values on their original appraisal records, and 46 on supplemental rolls.

Another 38 districts either haven't decided what they will do, or don't have banks, Robinson says.

Some districts which have assigned values have done so in consultation iwht banks arriving at an agreed value, "Based on the comments we have picked up," he reports.

Some have used the so-called Texas Association of Appraisal Districts method, or the "new Dallas method, or a variation thereof," to comply with the U.S. Supreme Court decision against using the value of government securities in assessing the value of bank shares, he explains.

Both those methods, Robinson comments, are based "on an income approach, rather than a book value approach."

STPB still takes the position that bank stock remains taxable, he explains, but that the question is "how to arrive at its value."

Also approved were rate modifications for apartments and condominiums, intended to make the credits under the new program comparable with those under the commercial multi-peril policy.

TEC offering readjustment assistance

Certain workers totally or partially separated from their jobs at the Ft. Worth Pipe and Supply in Midland, may be eligible for trade readjustment assistance, according to the Texas Employment commission.

A petition requesting assistance under the Trade Act of 1974 has been certified for workers whose jobs were affected from June 23, 1982 through Jan. 17, 1986, said Ed Miller, manager of the Midland TEC office.

Trade readjustment assistance is for workers who were laid off or had hours or wages reduced due to declining sales resulting from foreign competition. Assistance is available during training, job search and relocation. Eligible workers may qualify for weekly income for living expenses while jobless or on a reduced work schedule, and help is provided in finding new employment.

Workers who believe they are eligible should contact Ms. C.R. Carl, 682-9421, to arrange an appointment.

American securities now open to Japanese

Tokyo — A new source of mortgage financing with a potential for adding billions of dollars to get the American housing market was announced recently by Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr.

The HUD Secretary is in the Japanese capital for a series of discussions with potential investors to formally open the sale of Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) securities in Asia.

"With the recent ruling by the Minister of Finance recognizing GNMA's as securities, the GNMA market — a market of over $150 billion and one of the chief sources of housing finance in America — is now open to investors in Japan," Secretary Pierce said.

"The fact that the second largest capital market in the world can now invest freely in our mortgage securities may help to lower mortgage interest rates and so make housing more affordable for all American," he added.

During the series of mettings here, Pierce announced that a large block of newly issued GNMA securities financing new construction is now being offered for sale to Japanese investors. "With the sale of these securities, for the first time, Japanese capital will finance homes in America," Pierce said.

GNMA, which is a part of HUD, guarantees the securities which are backed by pools of U.S. government-insured residential mortgages. The securities themselves are backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government.

The idea of opening the Asian market to American mortgage-backed securities was first broached by the Secretary on a trip to Asia in 1982. During that visit Secretary Pierce met with a number of Japanese businessmen and discussed the possibility of offering Asian investors U.S. mortgage-backed securities.

"The seeds we planted in 1982", said Pierce, "have blossomed, and today's ceremonies mark the debut of a brand new relationship between our nations' financial communities. If we can nurture this relationship, our efforts will bear fruit."

RIBBON CUTTING

Mass production and advanced technology have made satellite television systems affordable to almost everyone said Mike Massey, who is part-owner and operator of Satellite City in Odessa.

The store, which recently opened, offers satellite systems for homes, restaurants, bars, motels and small complexes.

"Owning your own satellite system enables you to pick up broadcasts directly off satellites which are 22,300 miles away," Massey said.

Currently, there are 16 satellites orbiting the earth in the Clark Belt. Each satellite is capable of transmitting up to 24 channels of programming, however, Massey said, only one satellite has all 24 channels operating.

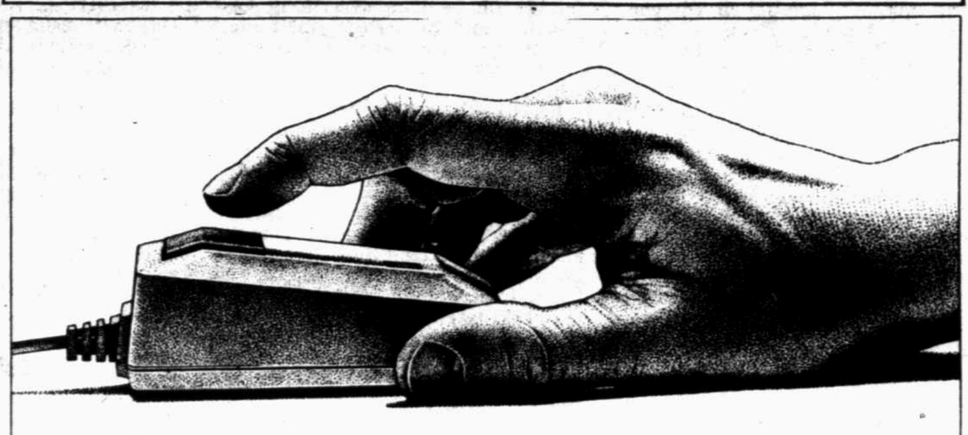

Most home systems, he said, enable the user to track all of the satellites thus providing 60 to 150 different broadcasts at one time. These include all major American broadcasts and some mexican and canadian programing.

Massey said truly high quality home systems range in price from $2,000-5,000 and most, he added, are financed with monthly payments averaging about $50-80.

"After examining the movies, sports, adult, children and educational programing, the $50-80 monthly expense begins to look more like a necessity than a luxury item."

Located at 2717 E. Highway 80 in Odessa, Satellite City has a sister store in Hobbs, N.M. which has been in operation for two years.

Oil show already 'sold out'

The "sold out" sign has already gone up for the Permian Basin Oil Show, scheduled for Oct. 17-20 at the Ector County Coliseum complex in Odessa.

Jay Alvey, a retired Odessa banking official and executive director of the Odessa-Midland oil show for the past 24 years, told a recent meeting of the board of directors the 912 exhibit spaces were snapped up before the end of the year and the oil show's business office has been receiving an average of five calls each business day from companies across the nation wanting space in the biennial oil exposition which is held on even-numbered years in Odessa.

Frank Ratcliff, 1984 Permian Basin Oil Show president, said the show's executive committee and board of directors will be doing everything possible to make this year's Permian Basin Oil Show the most successful on record as far as the exhibitors and prospective buyers were concerned.

"The past two years have been rough on the petroleum industry, but we want our exhibitors, and those companies who want to become exhibitors to know that we will be doing everything possible to bring the sellers and buyers together at the Permian Basin Oil Show," Ratcliff said.

RATCLIFF, A RETIRED vice president account executive for Hughes Tool Co., succeeded E.G. "Eddie" Durrett, president of D&R Drilling Co. in Odessa, as oil show president.

The Permian Basin Oil Show is known as "the working man's oil show" and Ratcliff exemplifies that slogan. During his 36 years with Hughes Tool Co., Ratcliff worked on the Gulf Coast until 1957 when he was named district and later division manager for Hughes Tool at Houma, La. He became regional manager for Hughes in Midland in 1960 with his territory covering the Permian Basin of West Texas and New Mexico, as well as Central Texas. He was later named Western U.S. sales manager, and was elevated to vice president account executive for the United States in 1980.

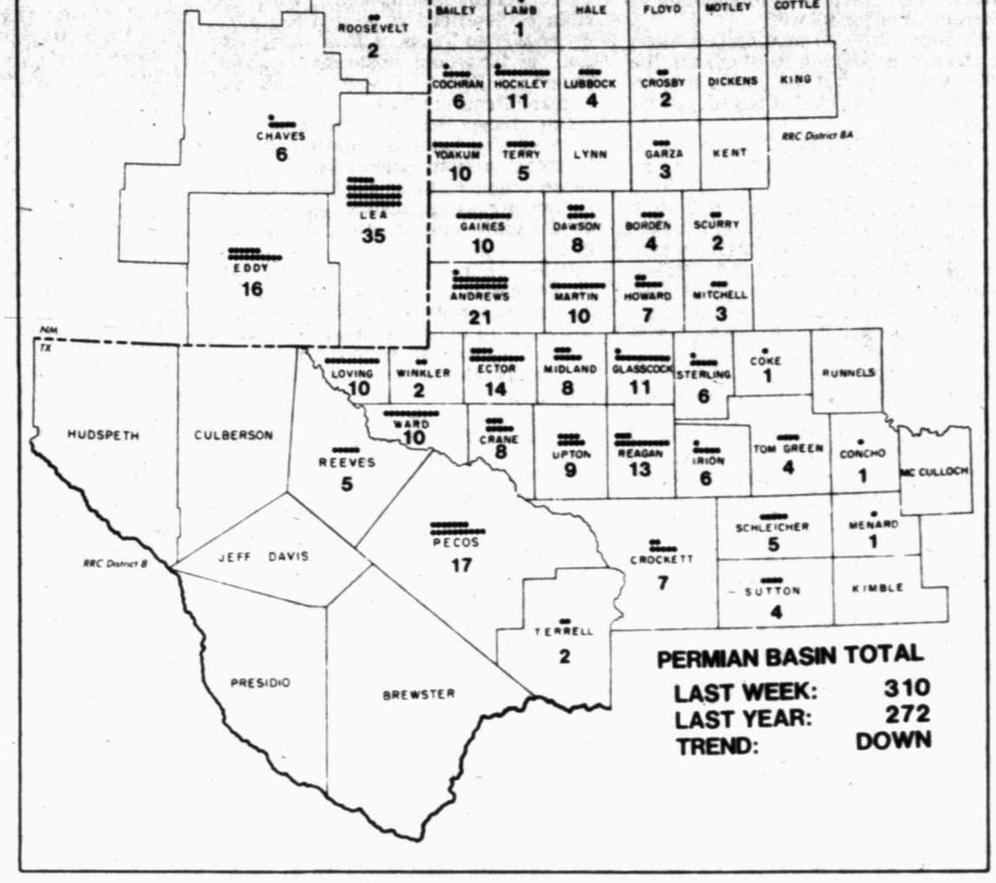

Ratcliff retired from Hughes Tool Co. Sept. 31, 1982, just in time to begin his work as 1984 Permian Basin Oil Show president.

Ratcliff is no stranger to the Odessa/Midland oil show. He has been a PBOS director since 1962, and was involved as an exhibitor before that.

THE PBOS IS organized, planned, and staged by its 150-plus members of the board of directors and Ratcliff is no stranger to the amount of work it takes to stage the biennial show. In his 24 years as a member of the board of directors, Ratcliff has woked on virtually every one of the show's 13 committees, as well as serving as a member of the executive committee for several years before becomming president.

The Permian Basin Oil Show ranks second, only to Houston's Offshore Technology Conference, in size and importance to the oil industry when it comes to oil shows. The first oil show was staged in Odessa in 1940.

Alvey, as the show's executive director, said companies wanting to exhibit in the PBOS in some future show should contact the oil show office and request an application for space so the company's name could be put on waiting list.

Bullock trims down monthly reports

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock has trimmed a dozen monthly reports for Texas oil producers down to a single yearly report, cutting tax red tape for more than 6,000 producers and saving about $17,000 a year in printing and mailing costs for the state.

Those producers will use a new, simplified short report form and send it to the state only once a year instead of every month.

"The biggest major oil company and the smallest barrel-a-day producer both pay the same tax rate for oil produced in our state," Bullock said, "but there is no reason they should both fill out the same paperwork."

Bullock explained state production taxes are paid by the first purchaser of crude oil but producers have also been required to file monthly reports showing how much oil they sold, the price they got and the county of production. The last of these monthly reports were filed in January. Under the new procedure, producers will report the amount produced and the price paid yearly.

"This change won't have any effect on the amount of money we collect or when we get it," Bullock said. "The purchasers of this oil will keep on sending their reports and their taxes in every month. It will simply relieve a paperwork burden for the producers, especially smaller producers.

"Those large producers who operate refineries and pay taxes on their own production will also continue to file monthly reports," Bullock said.

Bullock's new procedure continues the paper work reduction policies of the State Comptroller's Office that have so far eliminated 38 percent of the forms Texas taxpayers once were required to complete and return to the state.

Winter property damage can mean income tax deductions

By ROBERT C. SNEERING

The extreme cold weather we experienced recently during the Christmas holiday season caused many water pipes to freeze and burst. Damage to your property because of the frozen pipe or pipes that were broken could give rise to an income tax deduction on your 1983 federal income tax return. However, before becoming ecstatic with the thought that you have an extra income tax deduction for 1983, a review of the casualty loss deduction rules and the changes to the amount of casualty loss that is deductible for federal income tax purposes beginning in 1983 may be in order.

Generally, a casualty loss deduction is allowed for any loss sustained during the taxable year or compensated for by insurance or otherwise. Individuals are allowed a deduction for losses incurred in a trade or business, losses incurred in a transaction entered into for profit and losses of property not connected with a trade or business if such losses arise from fire, storm, shipwreck or other casualty, or from theft. Because of the rare extreme cold weather that the Permian Basin experienced over the holidays, the damage incurred from frozen pipes or water damages from broken pipes qualifies as a casualty loss.

The amount of loss allowable is computed based on three factors. The decrease in the fair market value of the property as a result of the casualty, the adjusted basis of the property, and the amount of insurance or other compensation received or expected to be received. The decrease in fair market value is the difference between the value of the property immediately before and after the casualty and is not necessarily the cost of repairing or replacing the property. The adjusted basis of the property is usually its cost to the taxpayer but should be reduced if the property is subject to depreciation.

The cost of repairs to the property damaged is acceptable as evidence of the loss of value if the taxpayer shows that, first, the repairs are necessary to restore the property to its condition immediately before the casualty., Second, the amount spent for such repairs is not excessive. Third, the repairs do not restore more than the damage suffered and fourth, the value of the property after the repairs does not, as a result of the repairs, exceed the value of the property immediately before the casualty.

After the factors are determined, the nonbusiness casualty loss deduction is computed on item-by-item basis with the exception of a personal residence, land and landscaping which are treated as one loss as the lesser of (1) the decrease in fair market value of the property, or (2) the adjusted basis of the property. In either case, the nonbusiness deduction is reduced by any insurance recoveries and a $100 per casualty exclusion.

Now that we have gathered the infomation and calculated what our unreimbursed losses are from the casualty, we must look to see what is deductible on our federal income tax return for 1983. The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibliity Act of 1982 drastically changed the nonbusiness casualty loss deduction for individuals. For years beginning after 1982, nonbusiness casualty losses are deductible only to the extent that the total amount of the computed losses exceed 10 percent of an individual's adjusted gross income. The rules for computing losses on business property remain the same except that when businss property is completely destroyed the measure of loss is always the adjusted basis. The $100 per casualty exclusion and the 10 percent of adjusted gross income limit do not apply to business losses.

The 10 percent of adjusted gross income limitation will probably eliminate the casualty loss deduction for many taxpayers who suffered losses resulting from the recent extreme cold weather. The new rules will aslo tend to eliminate in the future the deduction that most every taxpayer has experienced at one time — the out of pocket cost of repairing your car from an automobile accident.

Chem-Guard has a new location to serve you better

Theft, especially oilfield theft, has become big business. The selling of stolen goods has become almost commonplace.You may be shaking your head in agreement with these statements while wondering what can be done. Precautions can be taken as many companies are being forced to learn. The problem is that many companies are learning their lesson the hard way.

Marking property for identification has become the forerunner in precautions.But the decision to mark the property brings up many more questions. Questions such as how do we mark things, can the mark be easily removed, what do we mark and where do we locate the marking.

Chem-Guard,Inc. has the solution to your problem. That solution is the use of Ion- Guard.

In an article taken from Security Management (May 1983) entitled "Shedding Light on Marking Technics" by Marilyn E. Walsh, Ion-Guard was discribed as a free ion based painted developed by Earl C. Martin. Martin explains the unique way the paint identifies property by saying, "In formulating the paints, we blend in different combinations and concentrations of chemical ions, such as gallium, strontium, holmium, ytterbium and other rare earths. Even gold, silver and platinum ions may be used." Martin estimates that 70 million possible combinations could be blended.

Each possible paint mixture becomes a chemical "finger print". A spec of original paint, when subjected to spectrographic analysis, will positively identify the owner.

Because the ions are so minute, paint containing the mixture can by applied to objects by spray, brush or dipping. While ions can be mixed with other forms of paint, using an epoxy-base makes the markings permanent. Once the elements of the epoxy paint are mixed, applied and allowed to dry, the paint adheres in a manner that makes chemcal identifers and pigments appear to bond to objects made of metal, wood, rubber; canvas, fabric or ceramic.

Martin explains, however, that the paint doesn't really "bond". Instead, when allowed to dry fully, it penetrates the pores and minor imperfections of an item's surface. Even if the usual evidence of the paint is removed, the permanently embedded ions and pigments continue to show under ultra-violet inspection. Thus, scrubbing with solvents, scraping with a knife, sanding with sandpaper or heating to extreme temperatures will all fail to remove evidence of the markings.

The article continues by saying, for property that would be defaced by obvious markings, an invisible paint may serve as a better base for the chemical ions. Art objects and jewelry are examples of items that would benefit from the invisible markings. For these applications, a second property of free ion based paint allows identification through ultra-violet light. The rare earth pigments fluoresce under the light, even though it remains invisible to the eye under natural light.

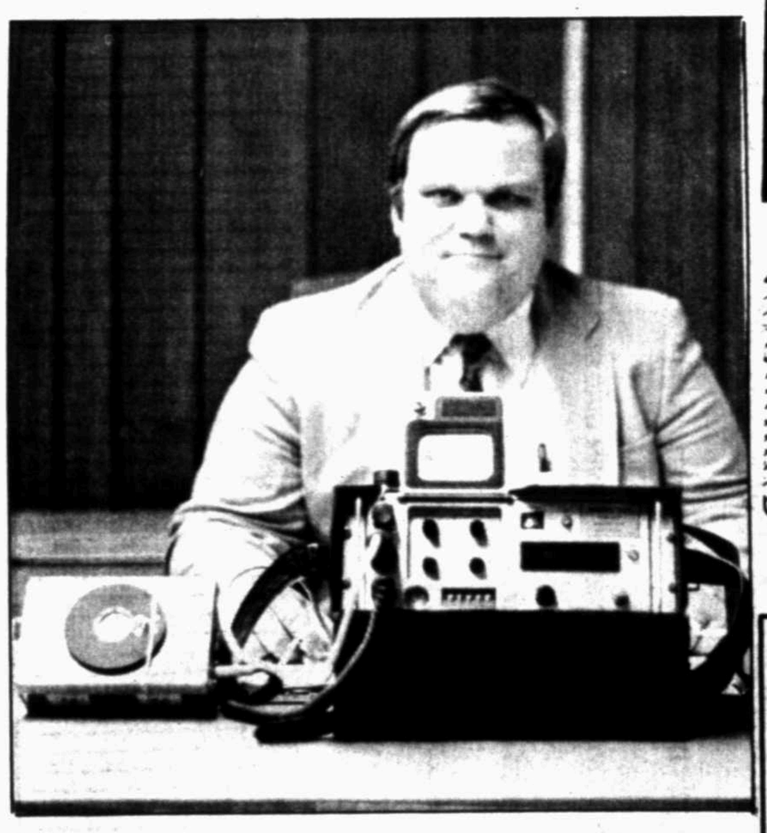

Property marked with the special paint can be positively identified in still a third way, through spctrographic analysis. Using X-ray fluorecence by itself or with a scanning electron microscope, the exact combination and concentration of the chemical ions incorporated in the paint can be determined. This method is especially significant where authentication is important.

Ion-Guard began as a mail order product. It was sold as a small kit for personal identification. Ion-Guard was purchased from Ventec Corporation by Chem-Guard, a Midland based company, recently. Now it has expanded to a large company scale.

Production of Ion-Guard has moved to Midland.

If you have items you would like protected by Ion-Guard, whether it be household items or a complete company inventory, Chem-Guard can handle the job. Contact Al Dickey, President of Chem-Guard, at his office located at 3000 N. Garfield,Suite 170, or give him a call at 689-0731. For those of you who live outside of Midland but would still like to be protected by Chem-Guard, they have a Texas Wats line for your convenience. The number is 1-800-592-4773.

Fence Craft will repair your fence now before the Spring winds begin to blow

It is almost time for the famous West Texas winds to begin to blow. Fence Craft is available to repair your fences before the winds arrive. A broken fence is likely to continue to deteriorate until it is repaired so it is best, not to mention less expensive, to repair it now.

If you have a gate that is loose or that won't latch you should have it repaired so that the winds will not blow the gate off. When this happens you run the risk of two problems surfacing. One problem is the chance of splitting the gate post when the hinges are pulled. The other chance you take is the risk of a flying or falling gate causing damage as it comes loose.

Also when you have a broken gate it usually is not a major enough expense to be covered by your insurance so it it best to get it fixed as soon as it is noticed so as not to allow it to turn into a larger expense.

A benefit of having Fence Craft repair your gate is that while they are there they will check the rest of your fence for potential problems. If they find something you can have it fixed before it begins to deteriorate.

Another potential problem that can cause trouble is a low spot by your fence where water can collect. The water will rot the fence if the problem is not corrected.This is a special problem usually associated with flower beds. The easiest solution is to put in a curbing to protect the fence.

Fence Craft has been in business since 1977 and has over 25 years of experience behind them. They take pride in their work and treat every job like professionals.

Universal Metals & Machinery moved to new location

Universal Metals & Machinery has moved from their previous location at 7400 E. Highway 80, Odessa, to a new location at 722 S Grandview, Odessa. According to Jim Cameron of Universal Metals, it took careful consideration but the decision was made to stay in the Permian Basin. The only thing that will be changing will be the location.

To expedite this move, Universal Metals is having a close out sale on their used machine tools. The inventory reduction sale includes boring mills, milling machines, radial drills, grinders, lathes, band saws and many other machine tools.

Prices are lower than ever and the terms could be right for you. Stop in and check out the inventory that Universal Metals and Machinery has marked down.

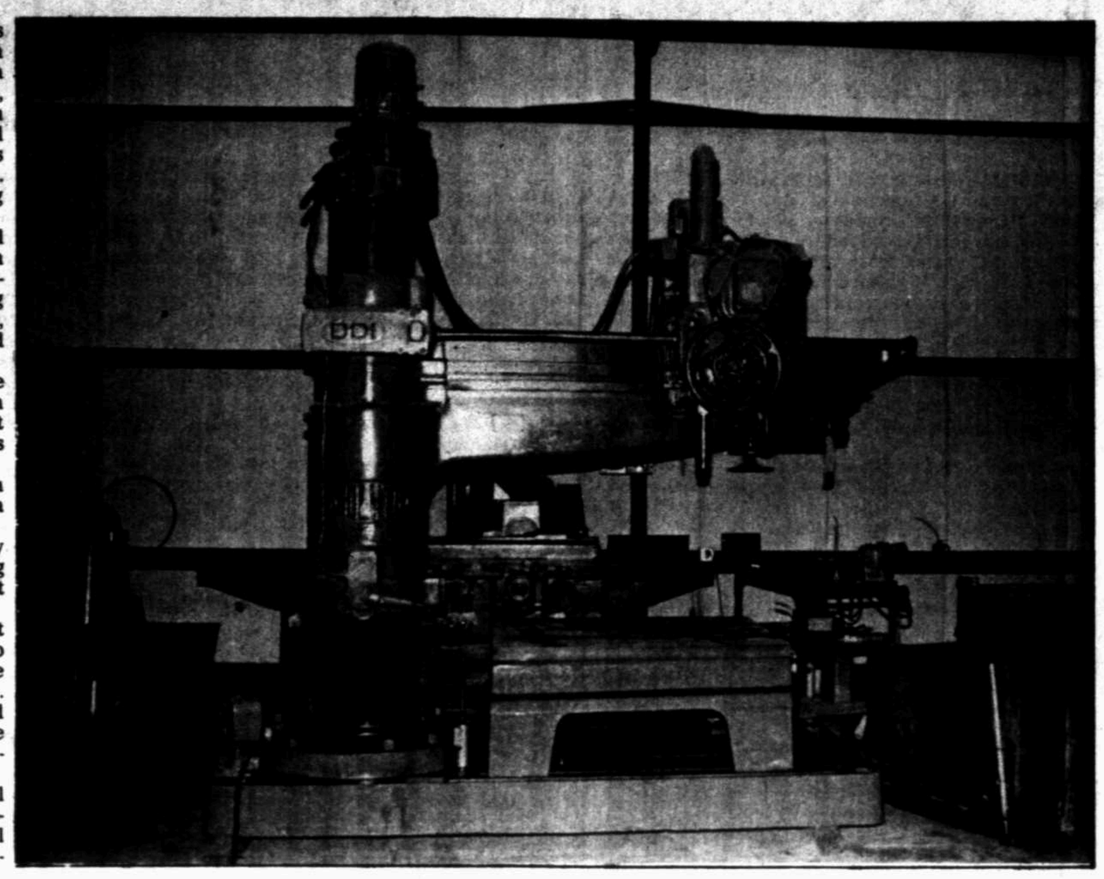

The 6 foot, 15" column Asquith radial arm drill pictured here has a 2½" drill ccapacity with mild steel.

Universal Metals & Machinery serves the Permian Basin by making sure they stock the machines that are needed in the area.

One thing the move has not effected is the service extended to their customers. Machines can be demonstrated at the warehouse. They also will still be cleaning and doing any necessary work on the equipment to be sure it is in top running order.

Universal Metals & Machinery will also continue to service the equipment they sell. Their staff is well trained in all aspects including electrical work.

Universal Metals & Machinery has moved so stop by 722 S Grandview,Odessa, instead of 7400 E. Highway 80, Odessa, for the service and quality you have come to expect.

Universal Metals & Machinery has moved to 722 S Grandview, Odessa. Stop by and check out the new location as well as the inventory reduction sale that is now going on. The prices are lower than ever so advantage of the savings.

Chem-Guard has a new location to serve you better

Theft, especially oilfield theft, has become big business. The selling of stolen goods has become almost commonplace.You may be shaking your head in agreement with these statements while wondering what can be done. Precautions can be taken as many companies are being forced to learn. The problem is that many companies are learning their lesson the hard way.

Marking property for identification has become the forerunner in precautions.But the decision to mark the property brings up many more questions. Questions such as how do we mark things, can the mark be easily removed, what do we mark and where do we locate the marking.

Chem-Guard,Inc. has the solution to your problem. That solution is the use of Ion- Guard.

In an article taken from Security Management (May 1983) entitled "Shedding Light on Marking Technics" by Marilyn E. Walsh, Ion-Guard was discribed as a free ion based painted developed by Earl C. Martin. Martin explains the unique way the paint identifies property by saying, "In formulating the paints, we blend in different combinations and concentrations of chemical ions, such as gallium, strontium, holmium, ytterbium and other rare earths. Even gold, silver and platinum ions may be used." Martin estimates that 70 million possible combinations could be blended.

Each possible paint mixture becomes a chemical "finger print". A spec of original paint, when subjected to spectrographic analysis, will positively identify the owner.

Because the ions are so minute, paint containing the mixture can by applied to objects by spray, brush or dipping. While ions can be mixed with other forms of paint, using an epoxy-base makes the markings permanent. Once the elements of the epoxy paint are mixed, applied and allowed to dry, the paint adheres in a manner that makes chemcal identifers and pigments appear to bond to objects made of metal, wood, rubber; canvas, fabric or ceramic.

Martin explains, however, that the paint doesn't really "bond". Instead, when allowed to dry fully, it penetrates the pores and minor imperfections of an item's surface. Even if the usual evidence of the paint is removed, the permanently embedded ions and pigments continue to show under ultra-violet inspection. Thus, scrubbing with solvents, scraping with a knife, sanding with sandpaper or heating to extreme temperatures will all fail to remove evidence of the markings.

The article continues by saying, for property that would be defaced by obvious markings, an invisible paint may serve as a better base for the chemical ions. Art objects and jewelry are examples of items that would benefit from the invisible markings. For these applications, a second property of free ion based paint allows identification through ultra-violet light. The rare earth pigments fluoresce under the light, even though it remains invisible to the eye under natural light.

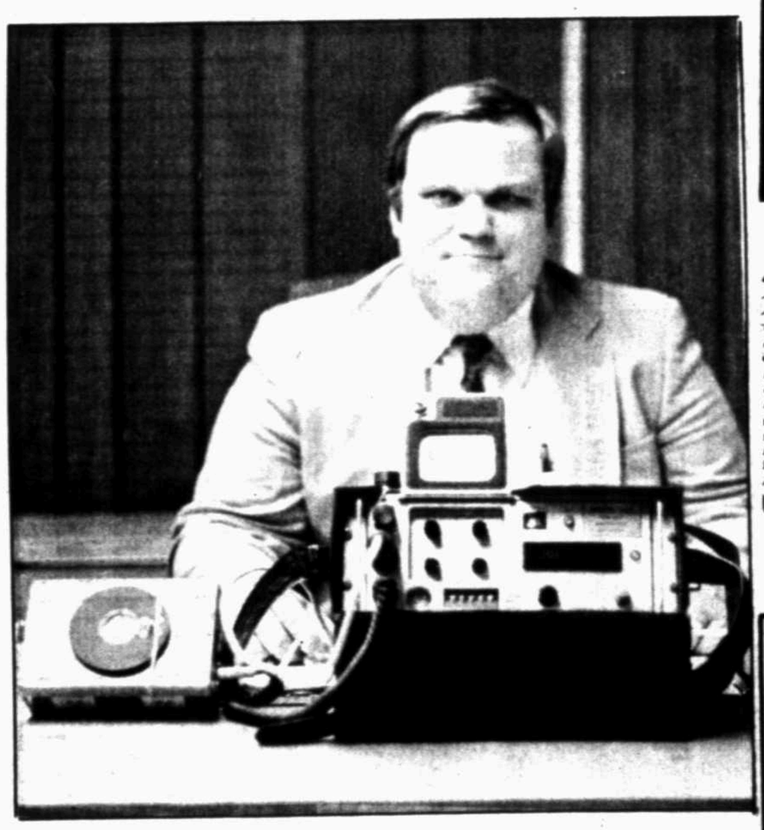

Property marked with the special paint can be positively identified in still a third way, through spctrographic analysis. Using X-ray fluorecence by itself or with a scanning electron microscope, the exact combination and concentration of the chemical ions incorporated in the paint can be determined. This method is especially significant where authentication is important.

Ion-Guard began as a mail order product. It was sold as a small kit for personal identification. Ion-Guard was purchased from Ventec Corporation by Chem-Guard, a Midland based company, recently. Now it has expanded to a large company scale.

Production of Ion-Guard has moved to Midland.

If you have items you would like protected by Ion-Guard, whether it be household items or a complete company inventory, Chem-Guard can handle the job. Contact Al Dickey, President of Chem-Guard, at his office located at 3000 N. Garfield,Suite 170, or give him a call at 689-0731. For those of you who live outside of Midland but would still like to be protected by Chem-Guard, they have a Texas Wats line for your convenience. The number is 1-800-592-4773.

Fence Craft will repair your fence now before the Spring winds begin to blow

It is almost time for the famous West Texas winds to begin to blow. Fence Craft is available to repair your fences before the winds arrive. A broken fence is likely to continue to deteriorate until it is repaired so it is best, not to mention less expensive, to repair it now.

If you have a gate that is loose or that won't latch you should have it repaired so that the winds will not blow the gate off. When this happens you run the risk of two problems surfacing. One problem is the chance of splitting the gate post when the hinges are pulled. The other chance you take is the risk of a flying or falling gate causing damage as it comes loose.

Also when you have a broken gate it usually is not a major enough expense to be covered by your insurance so it it best to get it fixed as soon as it is noticed so as not to allow it to turn into a larger expense.

A benefit of having Fence Craft repair your gate is that while they are there they will check the rest of your fence for potential problems. If they find something you can have it fixed before it begins to deteriorate.

Another potential problem that can cause trouble is a low spot by your fence where water can collect. The water will rot the fence if the problem is not corrected.This is a special problem usually associated with flower beds. The easiest solution is to put in a curbing to protect the fence.

Fence Craft has been in business since 1977 and has over 25 years of experience behind them. They take pride in their work and treat every job like professionals.

Universal Metals & Machinery moved to new location

Universal Metals & Machinery has moved from their previous location at 7400 E. Highway 80, Odessa, to a new location at 722 S Grandview, Odessa. According to Jim Cameron of Universal Metals, it took careful consideration but the decision was made to stay in the Permian Basin. The only thing that will be changing will be the location.

To expedite this move, Universal Metals is having a close out sale on their used machine tools. The inventory reduction sale includes boring mills, milling machines, radial drills, grinders, lathes, band saws and many other machine tools.

Prices are lower than ever and the terms could be right for you. Stop in and check out the inventory that Universal Metals and Machinery has marked down.

Universal Metals & Machinery serves the Permian Basin by making sure they stock the machines that are needed in the area.

One thing the move has not effected is the service extended to their customers. Machines can be demonstrated at the warehouse. They also will still be cleaning and doing any necessary work on the equipment to be sure it is in top running order.

Universal Metals & Machinery will also continue to service the equipment they sell. Their staff is well trained in all aspects including electrical work.

Universal Metals & Machinery has moved so stop by 722 S Grandview,Odessa, instead of 7400 E. Highway 80, Odessa, for the service and quality you have come to expect.

Universal Metals & Machinery has moved to 722 S Grandview, Odessa. Stop by and check out the new location as well as the inventory reduction sale that is now going on. The prices are lower than ever so advantage of the savings.

UTPB, SBA seeking clients

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin-based Small Business Institute is currently selecting client businesses for its spring program.

Thomas E. Schaefer, UTPB professor of management and coordinator of the Small Business Institute at UTPB, said the program is sponsored by the Small Business Administration.

"The Small Busisness Administration assigns teams of senior or graduate students to provide research, case analysis, counseling and consulting services to businesses, without charge to the business," Schaefer said.

"In addition to being helpful to approximately 25 area businesses each year, the UTPB Small Business Institute program provides graduating students with a practical, real world, experience and an ideal opportunity to apply the skills they have been learning in the classroom to a live business environment," he said.

In past years, UTPB student teams have performed such efforts as market research projects, advertising studies, recordkeeping and paperwork analyses,

Since businesses are chosen on a first-come, first-served basis, interested business owners should contact Schaefer at 367—2156 or the SBA office in Lubbock at 806-743-7481 as soon as possible.
