Bush, Gorbachev sign pact

■ Presidents Bush and Gorbachev agree to first cuts in long-range nuclear missiles as U.S. concedes on trade, grain deals.

By Terence Hunt
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev approved the outlines of a landmark treaty Friday for the first-ever cuts in long-range nuclear missiles and signed a pact to slash chemical weapons. "The world has waited long enough, the Cold War must end," Bush said.

In a major concession to Gorbachev, the two leaders signed a trade agreement that is politically important for the Soviet president, who is burdened by deepening economic problems at home. Also sealed was a five-year grain sale anxiously sought by American farmers.

The trade agreement is a step toward granting most-favored-nation status to Moscow, providing the lowest possible tariffs on Soviet goods. U.S. officials said they would not even send the treaty paperwork to the Senate for ratification until the Soviets enact a law protecting Jewish emigration.

The Senate is sure to stall approval of the trade benefits unless Gorbachev eases pressure on Lithuania, struggling to secede from the Soviet Union.

Referring to their storm-tossed meeting in Malta last December and the dramatic changes in Lithuania and across Eastern Europe, Gorbachev said, "The turbulent developments in recent months after Malta have not led us astray from the goals we set together."

Bush said the nuclear-arms agreement was designed to "enhance stability and reduce the risk of war." It will require months of work to put the treaty in final form, but Gorbachev said he shared Bush's goal of signing it by year's end.

The final treaty will force both superpowers to cut their nuclear arsenals by about a third.

Heralding the pact to cut stockpiles of poison gas, Bush said, "Let this landmark agreement quickly lead to a global ban on chemical weapons." Negotations are under way among 40 nations for a worldwide treaty.

"We are making steps toward a new world," Gorbachev said. "The area of disagreement is being narrowed."

Midway through a four-day summit, Bush and Gorbachev sat down at a gleaming mahogany table in the East Room to sign an array of agreements. The two men were flanked by Soviet and American flags.

Barbara Bush and Raisa Gorbachev, who traveled together to Wellesley College earlier in the day, applauded their husbands' achievements from their front-row seats.

Clements agrees on revenue plan

■ Sales tax increase, 'sin' taxes could boost state aid to local schools — if a sixth session of the Legislature approves.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements Friday agreed to a $633 million revenue package that includes a quarter-cent sales tax increase and "sin" taxes on cigarettes and mixed drinks to pay for school equity and to bail out underfunded health and human services agencies.

Clements announced the breakthrough at the Governor's Mansion after two days of talks with legislative leaders who sought to avoid a takeover of public school finances by a state district court.

If the Legislature approves the compromise in a sixth special session to begin Monday, Midland Independent School District could get $2.9 million in additional state aid next year, while Ector County ISD could get $4.7 million extra. Greenwood ISD could get $381,000.

The agreement would put $528 million into public education and $100 million into health and human service agencies who faced service cutbacks without additional money.

Flanked in his driveway by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, D-Houston, House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, and chairmen of affected legislative committees, the Republican governor announced the deal at 3:30 p.m. Friday, shortly after a special court-appointed master unveiled an alternative plan that would take money from rich school districts to close the Rescuers prepare to remove the body of a man killed when his truck was flung from FM 305 near McCamey by a tornado. Reports indicate the storm killed two and seriously injured at least three.

Tornado kills two

McCAMEY — Two people were reported killed and at least 12 were injured Friday afternoon when at least one tornado swept through southeast of here, blowing vehicles off roadways, snapping power poles and leveling buildings.

Names of the dead were being withheld pending notification of relatives. Both people killed apparently were in vehicles on Farm-to-Market Road 305 when the twister struck, Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said.

DPS officials reported three people seriously injured in the storm. A woman identified as 37-year-old Rebecca Dengler was transferred to Odessa's Medical Center Hospital in critical condition. Her son, name and age unknown, was suffering from fractures and being treated in the Medical Center emergency room, late Friday, according to a hospital spokesman.

Three people were admitted to McCamey Hospital and seven others were expected to be treated and released, hospital spokesman Frank Beaman said.

He said he expected more victims to arrive Friday evening.

Beaman said the storm blew out several hospital windows, but no patients were injured.

The storm is blamed for four automobile accidents with minor injuries along FM 190, Cox said.

Several people reportedly lost homes in the storm, and McCamey City Judge Jimmy McClure said the Red Cross and local church groups were assisting with relief efforts.

Upton County Fire Department officials said houses, barns and and the farmers' co-op cotton gin were destroyed. There were reports of hundreds of head of livestock killed in the storm, which produced torrential rain and hail.

DPS and National Weather Service reports indicate the twister touched down around 4:20 p.m. between McCamey

Richards' invitation unanswered

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards thought she'd be friendly and invite Clayton Williams for coffee while she was in his hometown Friday, but her opponent stood her up.

"I was coming to Midland ... to pick up an award, and I thought it was time to talk issues with him," Richards told a small group of supporters and journalists in the Hilton coffee shop.

The Republican candidate was reported to have previously scheduled appearances on Friday.

She said she was tired of Williams canceling appearances whenever he heard that she was also invited to speak.

"He's been avoiding me. I know he said he was uncomfortable running against a woman, but I didn't know he was going to be afraid of me," Richards said. "I think it's important that people see us together and hear us talk about the issues that affect their lives.

Some residents still skeptical of water tests

By David Morris

Some Midland safe-water advocates claim state tests of county groundwater were interpreted inaccurately, but the State Department of Health defended its test procedures Friday.

Jim Pritchard, owner of Caprock Petroleum Lab and a county landowner, said this week that the raw data from health department well analyses do not jibe with results reported to the public.

"What they are doing is misreading the signal that the (testing) instrument is giving them," Pritchard said. "We're finding there are more species of contaminants present than what they claim."

The Texas Water Commission began sampling south county wells in February in response to residents' complaints about water quality. Some 36 wells were tested, and seven showed traces of volatile organic compounds not exceeding standards set by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The TWC samples were tested at the Texas Department of Health lab in Austin.

Pritchard said he acquired raw test results for the seven wells with traces of volatile organics after residents requested them through the governor's office.

and Iraan, and headed southeast along FM 305.

A twister was sighted along FM 1901 near Bakersfield about 5:08 p.m., an Upton County Sheriff's office spokeswoman said. It destroyed several farm buildings in a three-mile swatch in that area, she said.

Cox said damage to area oil wells resulted in leaks of toxic hydrogen sulfide gas. Marathon Oil Co. crews were in the area late Friday repairing the wellheads, he said.

At least seven homes were destroyed along an agricultural cooperative road about 10 miles south of McCamey, Cox said.

McClure said power and phone service to parts of McCamey and surrounding areas had been cut off and that utility crews were working to restore service. Water service to McCamey was also cut off, McClure said, and he urged residents to conserve water.

The city's water production plant was reported heavily damaged by the storm.

Charles Conn of Iraan, who was driving with his family along SH 305 when the storm hit, said the winds rolled his pickup at least four times.

"We stayed upside down for it seemed like 30 or 40 seconds and then we ended up on our wheels," he said. "Everybody's all right. Just a few cuts and bruises, thank God."

Mickie McKenzie said her home was wiped out in the storm while she and her husband Roy Neal McKenzie huddled in an inner hallway.

"We were out on our front porch watching it make," she said. "The whole cloud was whirling."

She said she grabbed her husband and ran inside, and the twister seemed to hover overhead for several minutes, tearing their two-stroy brick home to pieces. She said the storm picked up her 1965 Mercedes and dumped it in a field about 50 yards away.

Two DPS troopers were among the injured Friday, Cox said. He said David Martinez and Jeff Malone were in their cruiser when "they went for a ride on the tornado. Their patrol car was picked up and spun around and hail broke out their windows.

The DPS had no reports of missing people Friday night. Damage was reported in a 20-square-mile area, and the tornado apparently cut a path a mile wide.

National Weather Service officials also reported tornadoes touncing down near Girvin and one mile south of Crane Friday evening. There were no reports of damage or injuries associated with that storm.

Bank officer sentenced to 5 years, $5,000

Staff Report

A Midland man was sentenced to five years in prison in federal court Friday and ordered to pay $5,000 in restitution for making improper bank loans.

Jeffrey Paul Longbotham, 31, pleaded guilty in April to one count of misapplication of funds by a bank officer. His sentence, imposed by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton, was the maximum allowable.

Longbotham, former vice president and commercial loan officer at First City Texas Bank in Midland, apparently made loans to friends who then returned the money to him, court records show.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William W. Torrey said Longbotham apparently used the money to pay off gambling debts.

Longbotham had been free on bond since his April conviction. Judge Bunton gave Longbotham until Aug. 8 to turn himself in to U.S. Marshalls. Torrey said Longbotham must pay the $5,000 to First City Texas.

CLEMENTS: Pact reached late Friday

(From 1A)

gap with poor school districts.

"I can truthfully say I don't know anybody that's happy with this," Clements said of the proposed compromise. "Maybe the judge will be, but as far as we're concerned it's been a very painful process, but we did it."

The revenue package includes $298.9 million from a quarter-cent sales tax increase, $97.7 million in budget cuts, $193.5 million from a 15-cent cigarette tax increase, $25.7 million from a 2-cent increase on the mixed-drink tax. The package also would get $2.8 million from a change in the supercollider debt service, $9.1 million in additional fees on overweight vehicles and $5.6 million on fees for duplicate driver licenses.

Clements insisted for three months that he would veto any sales tax increase, but he finally agreed to the sales tax increase after five and one-half hours of negotiations Friday because Hobby and Lewis persuaded him there was "no other way to do it," he said.

"It was in a true spirit of compromise, and the fact that there isn't anybody happy with the bill would indicate to me that it's probably a pretty good bill," Clements said.

Rep. Tom Craddick said he supports some of the reforms, such as deregulation of exemplary districts and ordering a phase-out of enrichment funds for special funds, but he would not support the tax bill.

"I still don't think we need the tax bill," he said, adding that he has spoken with other Republicans who feel the same way.

Hobby praised Clements and others involved in the negotiations. "I think this will go a long way toward beginning an era of vastly improved public education in Texas," he said.

Lewis said the plan is similar to the bill Clements vetoed a week earlier because it depended upon a half-cent sales tax increase. The new bill includes other key changes Clements insisted upon, Lewis said.

"I think we have a good education plan," Lewis said. "We have a funding mechanism in place that will take care of our human service area that is in dire need and also put in place funding that will ensure quality education for the future of this state."

Clements said he will call the Legislature back into its sixth special session, the fourth to deal with school finances, at 2 p.m. Monday. Lawmakers said they could finish their business in a week.

While the plan aims at providing equal access to funds at the 95th percentile of wealth after five years, Lewis said the $6.2 billion price tag assumes that every district decides to increase its local property taxes to take maximum advantage of the state formula.

"Until this plan is implemented and you have at least 18 months of experience, it's purely speculation," he said.

Clements said the major improvement he pushed for was the right for the governor to appoint the state education commissioner, subject to Senate confirmation, after the State Board of Education nominates candidates.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, Senate Education Committee chairman, saw no problems with allowing the governor to appoint the commissioner. "It puts the onus on the people to be sure that they pick a governor who has the right kind of concerns about education, and I suppose that's as it should be," he said.

Parker also said the plan was to push the bill as a bi-partisan compromise with no further changes. "We're going to be in lock step on this," he said.

But Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, chairman of the House Mexican-American Caucus, said because he was not involved in the negotiations, he was unsure whether he or other minority lawmakers would support the bill.

"We weren't part of the process. They get together and work out deals, but we weren't part of the deal. That makes it tough to sell," Cavazos said.

But Parker said the bill preserves the main points the representatives of poor districts were pushing for, and puts $530 million more into the system.

RICHARDS: Education an issue

her record at the coffee shop and at the opening session of the Texas convention of National Association of Royalty Owners Friday afternoon.

Grier Brunson, chairman of NARO-Texas, said he had invited both candidates to the meeting, but Williams had declined, saying it would be "like preaching to the choir."

NARO honored Richards for her work as state treasurer in locating unclaimed royalty owners and giving them their checks.

"We deserve this award," Richards said in accepting the citation. She said she and her treasury department staff had created many innovative programs, including the lost check owners database, since she took office in 1982. She has also invested state funds in high interest-bearing accounts and raised $1.5 billion in non-tax revenues during her tenure.

"We need someone at the head of the government who knows how to get the job done. The treasury department knows how to get the most out of every tax dollar," Richards said.

"I'd love to be allowed to create in the whole government what I've done in the treasury."

She told the crowd of royalty owners that although Texas needs to have a diversified economy, energy will always be important to the state. She supports incentives for independent drillers, promotion of Texas natural gas and investment into university-based energy research.

"Our state government must create an atmosphere that allows people to suceed. We must keep the tax burden low, promote industry and develop brain power."

"My opponent believes government-funded research is not a sound investment. I'm sure his alma mater and the School of Petroleum Engineering and UTPB would disagree with him. Academic endeavors translate directly into good jobs and a good economy."

She attacked Gov. Bill Clements for "playing politics" with the education special sessions she urged him to call in October.

"I think he wanted the crisis to occur for political reasons," Richards said. "And Clayton Williams said he's cut from the same cloth and agrees with what the governor's doing."

"Regardless of how well-intentioned and what a good old boy Clayton Williams is, he's a better investment for Texas in the oil business than in the government business. I can lead you into better and more prosperous times," Richards said.

KRUEGER: Oil strength 'essential'

(From 1A)

and a healthy economy by reducing crude oil imports.

"Every time we put steel in the ground in Texas, it is money that is not being sent overseas for foreign oil. We are now importing 7-8 million barrels daily and imports account for 40 percent of the trade deficit," said Krueger, who appeared on a panel with gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards.

Beau Boulter, Republican candidate for Railroad Commission did not appear as scheduled for the panel, because his plane was delayed by storms in Dallas. However, he will address today's session.

Former congressman Krueger said capital must be brought back into the industry, to drill the wells that will create the jobs for Texan. He also noted that the only thing that will restore strong capital to the industry is strong incentives.

To attract capital, Krueger has proposed a tax plan that would allow investors to write off dry hole losses against future production income. He says that will keep investors and operators drilling wells.

"If they drill a dry hole and quit, they lose. They have to keep on drilling to win," he said.

In the plan, 35 cents of each dollar lost in a dry hole could be written off at completion of the well, and 65 cents against future production. Krueger said the incentive to continue drilling would create jobs and revitalize oilfield service industries.

He reminded the audience of primarily royalty owners that oil and gas is still the strongest industry in Texas. "A dollar increase in the price of oil means as much to Texas as the super collider," he noted.

Krueger called natural gas regulation a "colonial" policy, in which gas sold in the interstate market was selling for as low as 4 cents while intrastate gas was selling for $2.

City no longer housing prisoners

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The Midland Police Department has quit the jail business.

Friday morning, 21 prisoners incarcerated at the jail were transferred to the $3.9 million Midland County Detention Facility, 101 W. Industrial Ave., which opened May 24.

"Now the arrests we make are automatically taken to the new jail and booked," Midland Police Chief Richard Czech said.

The police jail, which had a capacity of 72, also held federal prisoners which netted the jail $30 per inmate each day. "We were decreasing the population (of federal prisoners) since March," Czech said. The facility also will accept federal inmates.

The police department has contracted to pay $100,000 to house prisoners for the first year, Czech said. After that, the cost will be prorated not to exceed $35 a day per prisoner, he said.

Annual costs to operate the city jail were about $100,000 above the income generated from the federal government, Czech said.

Closing of the police jail, which employed 12 people, will allow the department to put three or four more officers on patrol, Czech said. Seven of the employees are now working for the new jail facility and one will be working as a meter attendant with the police department.

Czech said doing away with the police jail and letting the Midland County Sheriff's Department house all prisoners, as is common practice in Texas, is a move in the right direction.

"We feel they (sheriff's department) are much more professional and can handle it better than we can," Czech said.

"We feel we were making a cost effective move for the citizens of Midland," he said.

Man robbed outside grocery store

Staff Report

A 34-year-old Midland man was robbed at gunpoint Thursday evening in the parking lot of Albertson's grocery store at 3317 N. Midland Drive, Midland police officials reported.

Carlos Lopez said he pulled his vehicle into a parking space on the east side of the store, police reported. When he got out of his vehicle he was confronted by a man and two women who were parked in the vehicle next to his, police said.

The male suspect was reported to have pointed a sawed-off shotgun at Lopez and demanded money, police said. The victim gave his wallet, containing $160 in cash, to one of the women before the three got in their vehicle — described as a light green four-door Plymouth — and drove north on Midland Drive, police said.

The male suspect was described only as a Hispanic male about 5 feet 10 inches tall.

One of the female suspects was described a Hispanic, short, heavy-set and wearing white sandals and a knee-length dress. The second female suspect was also Hispanic with a thin build and wearing a light colored T-shirt and shorts.

Police are investigating the incident.

WATER: Well users rely on 'raw data'

(From 1A)

residents received the raw data about a month ago.

Paul Bronnenberg, a sanitarian in the health department's water hygiene division in Austin, said residents can trust the accuracy of the well tests.

"They are as accurate as anyone can ever get them," he said. He described health department technicians as "highly trained, highly qualified" people who are intimately familiar with water analysis.

Bronnenberg said he was not surprised that test results were being met with skepticism.

"This type of response is typical because the complainant feels like the state agency is not to be trusted," he said. However, he said the health department's analysis of test data was more trustworthy than Pritchard's.

"I would have to question the ability of these people to read these graphs," Bronnenberg said.

Pritchard said he holds a bachelor's degree in chemistry and has been working with gas chromatograph technology — like that used in the tests in question — for 11 years.

Pritchard, who said he does not live in the TWC test area south of Interstate 20, added that he will send a critique of test results to the health department next week.

Bronnenberg, meanwhile, said his department would be willing to review test results with concerned citizens to clear up any confusion.

Hammond sentenced

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Former Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond Jr., 49, was sentenced to two years in federal prison for violation of probation by U.S. District Court Judge Lucius Bunton in Midland Friday morning.

Hammond is in the Midland County jail awaiting transfer to a federal facility.

The former commissioner was accused of violating rules of his probation imposed after a U.S. District Court conviction in 1985 for malicious destruction of a building, an arson-related charge.

"I have real serious problems with the way you conducted yourself recently ... you have thumbed your nose at the probation office," Judge Bunton said at sentencing.

Bunton found Hammond guilty of failing to report to his probation officer, changing his residence without notification and not making payments on a $10,000 fine imposed from his arson conviction.

Susan Rodolf, Hammond's probation officer, testified that Hammond missed reporting to her in February, March and April, and had been late in reporting on various occassions previously.

Hammond testified that he missed reporting in February due to a house fire that forced him to move. He also attributed his failure to notify the probation office of his change of address to the fire. Hammond was living in Austin in January and working in the state comptroller's office since February.

In March and early April, Hammond said he was in Odessa campaigning for a friend who was running for political office and should have reported to Rodolf.

Hammond also said he was not aware that he needed to as soon as he moved.

Other testimony revealed that Hammond neglected to pay $125 dollars a month toward his fine based on an agreement with the probation office in June 1989. Hammond said he was unable to make payments because he was not employed full-time between 1986 and 1989; he also testified that he had other expenses including support of his three children.

Testimony also showed that Hammond and his wife, who resided in Odessa, had a gross combined income of $42,000 for 1989.

Hammond's 1985 conviction was related to a 1981 burning of the O'Michael Building, an Odessa office building

State told to pay for backlogged inmates

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge said Friday that the state must pay a dozen counties for holding prison-bound felons in their local jails — a decision the attorney general's office said could cost $100 million and force a tax increase.

State District Judge Joseph Hart said the state owes the counties for state inmates held in their jails between Sept. 28, 1987, to present.

The state intends to appeal, said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

"There will have to be some type of revenue increase. Everyone, including the smaller counties, would have to be paying for the problem that is isolated in these big counties," Dusek said.

The convicts have been backing up in county jails awaiting transfer to the state prison system, which is under a federal court-ordered ceiling on inmate population.

County officials have said that they are losing money on the extra inmates and want the state to face up to its responsibilities.

The state argued that it was not responsible for the county inmates because the state prison system is under federal court order to hold down its inmate population.

"The system has worked in this instance for us. It's been a total vindication of our position," said Ann Clarke Snell, the lawyer for the 12 counties which challenged the state.

The counties which challenged the state were Nueces, Bexar, Collin, Dallas, El Paso, Galveston, Hidalgo, Hunt, Lubbock, Tarrant, Travis and Victoria. Officials in those counties say they hold 6,000 of the 12,000 inmates statewide awaiting transfers to state prisons.

Although the decision applied to only those 12 counties, Ms. Snell said, "Certainly it seems to me this ruling would be very important to any county that wanted to go to court and seek similar relief."

It was the second court ruling this year involving the state's prison system.

The state is expanding the prison system from 44,000 to 60,000 beds over the next several years to ease overcrowding. That effort could help the state in an appeals proceeding, said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

"The state has tried to build prisons, so it shouldn't be blamed," Caperton said.

Dusek warned that the prospect of a $40-per-day reimbursement would prompt local judges to sentence even non-violent offenders to state prisons because the county's costs per prisoner are more like $12 per day.

"Since they're going to be making a profit, they will be inclined to put more people in jail. They will continue keeping their jails as full as they can," Dusek said.

But county officials said the cost of keeping state inmates was driving up local taxes.

Nueces County attorney Carlos Valdez, who filed the original lawsuit, said, "We're losing money paying for the state's responsibilities. This is not like shifting the responsibility to the state. We're just asking them to take responsibility for what is legally theirs."

Rossanna Salazar, press secretary to Gov. Bill Clements, did not return several calls for comment on the ruling.

STATE in brief

Agency readies service cuts

AUSTIN (AP) — The financially strapped Texas Department of Human Services is readying a list of sharp cuts — including welfare and medical services — it says must be made if lawmakers fail to rescue the agency from its $200 million deficit.

Without additional funds, agency officials have said they must begin dropping programs on Aug. 1.

Among others, the proposed cuts would eliminate state funding for most prescription drugs for more than 400,000 people, the Dallas Times Herald reported Friday.

Other proposed cuts would eliminate home care for 33,076 elderly and disabled, and stop state payments to family violence centers that serve almost 30,000 people. The plan is only an option at this point, and agency officials say current services can be maintained if lawmakers find more money.

Pride visits victims

HARDIN (AP) — Country singer Charley Pride told residents of flooded areas of Liberty County that he can relate to their problems because he remembers when his boyhood home in Mississippi was flooded.

"I can relate to some degree of flooding," Pride said Thursday after his tour. "I remember my dad taking me on his bike and getting us to higher ground. We had floodwater coming up to our house."

Pride surveyed the length of the flooded Trinity River and later visited a family assistance center in Hardin. He helped Red Cross volunteers fill out forms and distribute cleanup kits or provisions to flood victims.

Pride serves as national entertainment chairman for the Red Cross.

The Red Cross has closed two shelters it had set up in Liberty County, but two family assistance centers remain open to help people obtain temporary housing and basic needs such as clothing and shelter. The other center is located at the Kenefick Civic Center. Volunteers also operate mobile kitchens in Hardin and Kenefick.

A&M losing chancellor

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The chancellor of the Texas A&M University System announced Friday he intends to resign and return to his duties as Distinguished Professor of Entomology.

Dr. Perry L. Adkisson joined Texas A&M in 1958 as a member of the entomology faculty.

He said he would resign Jan. 1 or when a successor is named.

Board of Regents chairman William A. McKenzie said a search committee will be appointed soon.

Austin curfew passes

AUSTIN (AP) — Youths under age 17 will be barred from Austin's Sixth Street nightclub district from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. under a curfew ordinance passed by the City Council.

The ordinance, approved Thursday, is aimed at limiting fights and similar problems caused by some teen-agers who frequent the area.

Protesters indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — Two protestors were indicted on state felony charges in connection with an abortion protest at which they anchored themselves with concrete blocks inside a Pasadena clinic.

Mary Ducy, 46, and computer programmer Robert Lessau, 31, both of Houston, are accused of using "criminal instruments," the blocks and bicycle locks that took firemen hours to remove with diamond cutters.

The two could be sentenced to a maximum 10 years imprisonment and a $2,000 fine.

Method improved for dating fossils

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists say they have greatly improved a standard method for estimating ages of fossils by making it accurate for objects as old as 30,000 years, well beyond its usual 9,000-year limit.

The researchers found a way to correct the technique's tendency to underestimate ages by up to 3,500 years, they report.

Experts said if the study is correct, the newfound accuracy should affect research into such topics as ancient climate, which depends on fossils. Revised age estimates have already eliminated one puzzle in climate studies, according to study co-author Alan Zindler.

The technique they sought to improve is called radiocarbon dating. Scientists have long sought a way to make it accurate for older objects, and the new work seems to have succeeded, commented Harry Gove of the University of Rochester, co-inventor of one radiocarbon dating technique.

Eric Delson, an anthropology professor at Lehman College of the City University of New York, said he doubted the development would make much difference in studies of human history.

It would simply adjust dates of many events in the same direction, without affecting the more important issue of the order in which they occurred, he said.

The time period covered by the study included the spread of humans to the New World and cave painting in Europe, he said.

Radiocarbon dating is based on the fact that all living things absorb a type of carbon called carbon-14. At death, the absorption stops, and the amount trapped within the living thing begins to decay at a constant rate.

Scientists can date an object by comparing the amount of carbon-14 in it today to the amount it had presumeably absorbed from the atmosphere while it was alive.

The problem is that concentrations of carbon-14 in the atmosphere vary unpredictably over time.

Scientists have solved the problem for objects newer than about 9,000 years, using calculations based on ancient tree rings of known ages. But no reliable tree ring data is available for objects older than that.

Coastal residents' smugness worries hurricane forecaster

Hearst News Service

NATION

HOUSTON — The 1990 hurricane season began Friday amid warnings that complacency during the dangerous season could spell big trouble for residents along the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean.

The season, which runs through Nov. 30, is when hurricanes and tropical storms are most likely to develop in the Atlantic-Gulf area.

Last year, two hurricanes and one tropical storm struck the Texas Gulf Coast in the Houston area. None of these was a major storm, but they caused loss of life and millions in damage.

No hurricane of maximum force has struck Texas in this century. Even the hurricane that nearly destroyed Galveston in 1900, killing between 6,000 and 8,000 people, probably would rank today as a Category 4 – or very strong – storm in a scale of 1 to 5 in severity.

Hurricane Carla, which came near the Houston area in 1961, was a Category 4 storm. The deadly Hurricane Hugo that struck the Virgin Islands and South Carolina last year was a Category 5 storm at one point in its development, though not when it hit South Carolina.

William Gray, a hurricane expert, said in Galveston Thursday that the lack of an El Nino – warm winds from the eastern, tropical Pacific Ocean that help reduce Atlantic hurricane potential –portends an above-average hurricane season this year.

"I can say ... we'll have a somewhat above-average hurricane season based on the data from the last 40 years," said Gray, a Colorado State University atmospheric scientist who has studied global storm patterns for more than 30 years.

"I would estimate we'll probably have two or three Category 3, 4 or 5 storms this year," he said.

Robert Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Florida, says two consecutive years with major hurricanes may foreshadow a return to pre-1960 weather patterns when destructive tropical storms regularly lashed the East Coast.

"If the long-term trends are any indication of what's to come, we are in for more frequent and stronger hurricanes," Sheets said Thursday.

Sheets said the predictions of increased hurricane activity are based on studies of past decades, atmospheric low-pressure waves and increased rainfall trends in West Africa, near the breeding waters for most hurricanes.

Hurricane activity began to drop after drought conditions began in the early 1960s in Africa's Sahel region, he said.

Between 1940 and 1969, the United States was hit by 22 hurricanes above Category 3. From 1970 to 1989, there were only eight such storms.

North back on stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North testified Friday before a newly empaneled federal grand jury that is continuing the investigation of the Iran-Contra scandal.

The former White House aide was accompanied into the grand jury room by a prosecutor from the office of independent counsel Lawrence Walsh.

North repeatedly left the secret proceedings during nearly three hours of testimony to confer with his attorneys in a courthouse hallway.

Periodic exits from grand jury proceedings enable witnesses to receive legal advice and to keep their lawyers informed about what areas of questioning the government is interested.

Walsh's office is trying to determine the precise roles that then-President Reagan, then-Vice President Bush and others played in the affair, sources familiar with the investigation said in April.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said North and former national security adviser John Poindexter were likely to be subpoenaed and granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their grand jury testimony.

North appeared in federal court a week ago in a closed session for which all records are under seal.

The grand jury delving into the scandal began meeting last month, after Poindexter's April felony convictions.

Walsh's office has repeatedly refused to make any comment on the latest phase of its 3½-year-old investigation.

Iran-Contra prosecutors have had more than a year to pore over about 2,800 pages of notebooks that North kept while he worked at the National Security Council.

The daily notebook entries refer to occasional meetings with Bush and Reagan. They also refer to dozens of contacts with CIA officers such as Alan Fiers and State Department officials such as Elliott Abrams who kept track of the Nicaraguan Contras.

North, 46, was convicted May 4, 1989, of aiding and abetting an obstruction of Congress, altering and destroying National Security Council documents and receiving an illegal gratuity.

An appeal of his convictions is pending before the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Poindexter, convicted in April of conspiracy, obstructing Congress and making false statements in the scandal, is scheduled to be sentenced June 11. The former national security adviser faced up to 25 years in prison and $1.25 million in fines.

Police say student fabricated racial threats

ATLANTA (AP) — A misspelled word led investigators to suspect a black Emory University freshman faked racist threats she said she received, according to a police file released Friday.

Sabrina Collins has a habit of misspelling the word "you're" as "your," the same way it was misspelled in a death threat she said she received through campus mail, according to the file released by the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

The 19-year-old premedical student at the predominantly white school was hospitalized after she collapsed and became mute April 10. Her family said she had lifted a rug in her room and found, she said, an ethnic slur scribbled in nail polish on the floor.

The report ignited a campus controversy at a time of growing reports of racism at colleges around the country.

"Based on the circumstances, chain of events, case facts, evidence in the case and the interview (with Ms. Collins) ..., in all probability Sabrina Collins was responsible for writing these racial remarks and threats herself," said an interview summary in the file.

Ms. Collins' attorney, James Howard, was not immediately available for comment Friday afternoon. He maintained in a statement Thursday that his client was not the source of the racial epithets in her dorm room.

"It is apparent that the person who inflicted this pain and suffering upon her is not only free to do it again but has succeeded in evading the investigation," the statement said.

GBI chief documents examiner Jim Kelly told investigators his analyses indicated Ms. Collins probably addressed the manila envelope that contained the death threat, according to the file.

"The typewriter used to type the letter is the same type as typewriters in the library where Sabrina works," the file said "All identifiable fingerprints on the letter were Sabrina's fingerprints. The fingerprints pattern on the letter indicates Sabrina put the letter in the typewriter and removed it."

The file noted that the letter contained the sentence: "I bet your wondering why I picked you."

Emory police gave GBI investigators a sample of Ms. Collins' handwriting that read, "Tammy, your the best."

In a transcript of a May 9 interview with investigators, Ms. Collins adamantly maintained her innocence and began to cry when agents told her of their evidence, urged her to confess and asked her to write a letter of apology to Emory.

"What you're asking me to do is write them a letter confessing to something I didn't do," she was quoted as saying. "It's going to come out in all the papers and all the news broadcasts and everybody is going to say, 'Oh, she had a problem, poor Sabrina.' "

Emory police first said they couldn't understand how the incidents continued after they installed an alarm in Ms. Collins' room. They later theorized that someone had entered the room only once, concealing some of the vandalism so it would be discovered later.

NATION IN BRIEF

Towns cleaning up after storms

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — Residents of waterlogged Vicksburg, Miss., stacked sodden belongings outside and swept out mud Friday after record flash flooding. And wreckage was cleared from the Texas Panhandle town of Spearman that witnessed swarms of funnel clouds.

Damage in Spearman was estimated at $5.5 million. Estimates were still being collected in Vicksburg.

About 200 Vicksburg residents were forced to higher ground Thursday when thunderstorms dumped as much as 7 inches of rain.

On Friday, officials declared a state of emergency.

Water damage was reported to 187 homes and at least two businesses. Some bridges and roadways in Warren County, on the Mississippi River, also were damaged, said Civil Defense Chief Luther Warnock Jr.

"Any time there is this kind of flood, where people are forced to evacuate their homes, it is a bad situation," said Mayor Robert Walker. "And this time it was very bad."

NASA launches rocket

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With the hobbled space shuttle Columbia standing silent 10 miles away, NASA launched an unmanned rocket Friday with an observatory that will search the heavens for sources of X-rays.

The Delta rocket blasted into a partly cloudy sky at 4:47 p.m. CDT from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station. The $273 million West German observatory, called Rosat, was to be boosted 43 minutes later into an orbit 360 miles high.

"It's the finest X-ray telescope that's ever been flown," NASA program scientist Alan N. Bunner said. "As our instruments improve, it always opens the door to discoveries."

About 1,000 sources of cosmic X-rays are known to exist. Astronomers hope 100,000 sources will be identified by Rosat as it orbits high above Earth's atmosphere, which blocks X-rays and makes them invisible from the ground.

The satellite consists of a powerful X-ray telescope and a wide-field camera capable of detecting extreme ultraviolet light.

Wind shear lab set up

DENVER (AP) — Stapleton International Airport, on Friday began hooking up a newly improved radar system to detect wind shear, which has been blamed for plane crashes that killed more than 650 people since 1972.

John McCarthy, director of research application programs at the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, said a similar device will be tested this year at Orlando International Airport, before Raytheon Corp. delivers it for nationwide use.

The device, called a terminal doppler weather radar, is scheduled for installation at 47 airports nationwide beginning in 1992.

Similar devices have been tested at Stapleton in Denver in the summers of 1988 and 1989, and already are credited with preventing jetliner crashes from microbursts, small storms with wind that can exceed hurricane force.

Research began after wind shear was blamed for the crash of Eastern Flight 66 at New York's Kennedy International Airport in 1975. More than 100 people were killed.

Fergie in Big Apple

NEW YORK (AP) — The Duchess of York, Sarah Ferguson, arrived in New York Friday and barely unpacked her bags before dashing off to the Museum of Modern Art.

She arrived in the morning at the Plaza Athenee hotel and quickly left for the museum, where she toured privately, said Jessica Schwartz, a museum spokeswoman.

Her formal trip begins Monday, when she will be joined by Britain's Prince Andrew, the Duke of York.

Redistribution could mean $1.2 million for MISD

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The "Robin Hood" school finance plan that a state district judge accepted in preliminary form on Friday could prove hard to swallow if top state officials fail to follow through on their compromises.

The alternative plan, developed by former Texas Supreme Court Justice Bill Kilgarlin, would redistribute $540 million in existing state education aid, hurting wealthy school districts and those with low tax rates the worst.

The Midland Independent School District would gain $1.2 million under the master's plan, while the Greenwood ISD would gain $965,891. Ector County schools would gain $3.2 million with Kilgarlin's plan.

In Upton County, McCamey schools would lose $409,000 and Rankin schools would lose $158,000. Elsewhere, The Andrews ISD would lose no money, while the Big Spring ISD would gain $728,000.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said large increases that some districts could realize may seem attractive, but cautioned that Kilgarlin's plan is for one year only.

The five-year plan that top state officials negotiated Friday contains many of the same gains and more, but implemented at a slower pace, he said.

Kilgarlin, who was appointed special master by State District Judge Scott McCown, said Friday he and two associate masters tried to complete the work without regard to political side effects.

"We are merely offering a plan to the court, " he said.

Kilgarlin's plan holds bad news for some of the state's large urban school districts. The Dallas district would lose nearly $99 million next school year, Houston schools would lose nearly $70 million and Austin schools would lose $26.5 million.

He said many of the poorer school districts that would suffer could remedy their situation by approving a few cents' increase in their tax rates.

To receive state aid, Kilgarlin in his plan asks that districts maintain a minimum rate of 75 cents per $100 of property valuation. The maximum amount of state aid would come to districts that have tax rates of $1.25.

Presentation of the Kilgarlin proposal came during a Friday hearing before McCown, who was appointed by the Texas Supreme Court to administer state compliance with the Edgewood v. Kirby lawsuit.

The high court ruled in October that the state's school finance system is unconstitutional because it discriminates against students in poorer districts.

McCown said any plan approved by the Legislature in response to Edgewood v. Kirby before June 21 would essentially put the Kilgarlin plan on hold. A June 25 hearing in his court will determine further courses of action, he said.

Meanwhile, he is asking plaintiffs and defendants in the case to file their own responses to Kilgarlin and that the master hold a public hearing on his proposals.

McCown on Friday also ruled that the Texas Education Agency and Comptroller's Office may make June state aid payments to local school districts.

Without the payments some districts would have had to cancel summer school classes or borrow money to conduct them.

July and August aid payments remained an open question before the judge, but he said if the state has a school finance program in place and ready for implementation by Sept. 1, he will allow the payments.

Despite the positive turn of events, prospects for continued court action remained likely.

The attorney for poorer school districts, Al Kauffman, said any plan like the one top state officials were negotiating on Friday likely would warrant an appeal from his clients. Because it contains no caps on spending in wealthy districts, it will tend toward dis-equalization, he said.

Said Commissioner of Education William Kirby: "The history of this state is that you keep litigating over time. So I think we will stay in action."

Doe tells Liberian rebels he won't seek re-election

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — President Samuel Doe tried to appease advancing rebels Friday by promising not to seek re-election next year, and he pleaded with the United States and other allies to help end the revolt.

A U.S.-based spokesman for the rebels said they had dropped their demand that Doe surrender and stand trial for alleged corruption and atrocities. The spokesman, Tom Woewiyu, said if Doe left Liberia, the insurgents would be willing to work with the existing regime to set up an interim government.

He said his comments were approved by Charles Taylor, leader of the rebel National Patriotic Front of Liberia that was marching toward Monrovia.

Rebel leader Charles Taylor

Doe, threatened by rebels approaching from two fronts, told reporters Friday: "I wish to announce here today my firm decision not to stand for the 1991 general elections."

The 6-month-old incursion had reached within 35 miles of the capital, Monrovia. More than 1,000 people have been killed in the six months of fighting, most of them civilians slain by government troops.

The U.S. Navy stationed ships off the coast to evacuate Americans if necessary. U.S. military officials said 2,100 Marines were aboard the four ships of the 6th Fleet.

U.S. Embassy officials said about 2,000 U.S. citizens, including scores of missionaries and many people of Liberian origin, remain in the country.

Rebel troops already control the country's main port of Buchanan, 95 miles east of the capital, and were advancing on two fronts within 35 miles of Monrovia. Thousands of people have fled the city.

At his news conference Friday, Doe asked for help from other nations.

"Accordingly, I hereby appeal to our traditional friends, the United States government and other friendly counties, to bring to an end this 6-month-old, Libyan-backed incursion in order to pave the way for a peaceful, free and fair election in 1991," he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Israel says U.S. embassy target

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas intended to attack the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv when they were intercepted off the Israeli coast this week, an Israeli official said Friday.

The high-ranking source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said maps seized from the guerrillas indicated they were headed for the densely populated beachfront hotel district of Tel Aviv. The American Embassy is in the district.

"During the debriefing we conducted...it was established that the U.S. Embassy was one of the targets in the vicinity of the hotel district," said the source.

An army spokesman said he was not authorized to comment on the report.

Arafat denounces U.S.

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — PLO leader Yasser Arafat on Friday denounced the United States for its veto of a U.N. resolution urging the deployment of United Nations observers to the Israeli-occupied territories.

"I only ask why the United States keeps protecting and covering the crimes Israel is committing against the Palestinian people," Arafat told a news conference. "Why does the United States champion human rights everywhere but stop doing that when Palestinian human rights are concerned?"

The United States on Thursday vetoed a U.N. Security Council resolution that called for a fact-finding mission to visit the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Of the 15 voting members, only the United States opposed the measure. As a permanent Security Council member, it has veto power over resolutions.

Its veto came a day after Israel foiled an attack on its coastline by Palestinian guerrillas. Four guerrillas were killed and 12 captured. No Israelis were harmed.

A PLO faction, the Palestine Liberation Front, claimed responsibility and said the action was in part to retaliate for the murder last week of seven Palestinian laborers by an Israeli civilian. Arafat has said neither he nor the PLO was involved in Wednesday's incident.

Soviet cable car falls

MOSCOW (AP) — A cable car broke loose Friday from an aerial tramway at a popular tourist site in Soviet Georgia, and passengers were hurled onto the roof of an apartment building. At least 20 people were reported killed.

The Soviet news agency Tass and Soviet TV said another cable car was involved in the accident, but details were unclear.

The gondolas had been climbing along the tramway from downtown to Mount Mtatsminda, a local tourist attraction, Tass said.

Tass gave no specific death toll but witnesses and Iveria, an unofficial Georgian information agency, said at least 20 people were killed and 15 injured.

Soviet TV showed footage of the accident's aftermath, including the blood-splattered interior of one of the red-and-white gondolas. The other gondola dangled from a cable above the apartment building but appeared to have been ripped apart.

France pulls troops

PARIS (AP) — France said Friday it will withdraw the troops it sent to Gabon to protect French civilians during a week of anti-government rioting.

Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said in a radio interview that the situation in the West African country, a former French territory, was now stable enough for French expatriates to return to their homes there. Thousands were evacuated during the unrest.

In Gabon, the president of the National Assembly, Augustin Boumah, announced his resignation Friday, three days after fleeing from his home and disappearing for 24 hours.

Boumah told a news conference he fled because he saw truckloads of soldiers outside his home and thought a coup was in progress. Authorities later said the soldiers were searching for Boumah's nephew, but the assembly president told reporters he felt humiliated by the military's "attack on my dignity."

Rioting broke out in Gabon on May 23 after opposition leader Joseph Rendjambe was found dead in a hotel room. His supporters called it murder, but an autopsy held jointly by Gabonese and French doctors indicated Rendjambe died of natural causes.

The oil center of Port Gentil experienced the worst riots. Dumas said French military aircraft will fly 25 tons of food there as a donation.

Policeman accused

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A court on Friday ordered the arrest of a high-ranking policeman in connection with the abduction and shooting death of a journalist who crusaded against human rights violations in Sri Lanka.

The order came after the mother of journalist Richard de Zoysa claimed Senior Police Superintendent Ronnie Gunasinghe was one of the six men who had kidnapped her son from his home in a Colombo suburb Feb. 18. His body was found two days later on a beach in Moratuwa, 10 miles south of Colombo.

The government has denied any police or military involvement in the incident.

De Zoysa, 33, was a correspondent for the Rome-based Inter Press Service. Colombo newspapers reported Friday that the news agency and the Inter Press Institute will present their 1990 award for outstanding performance to de Zoysa as a "small tribute to the courageous journalistic struggle de Zoysa waged against human rights violations in Sri Lanka."

Airline seeks cause of mystery illness

Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — Alaska Airlines has called in an industrial health specialist to tackle its "mystery illness."

The specialist, Aaron Sussell, will examine an airplane's unique environment — a narrow cylinder in which humans sit tightly packed for hours, hurtling forward at hundreds of miles an hour, tens of thousands of feet above the ground.

Sussell, an industrial hygienist for the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, will have a tough job.

Since July, dozens of flight attendants on nearly 30 flights have complained of health problems they believe are related to air quality in the cabin: dizziness, disorientation, chest pains, nausea, headaches, blurred vision and joint pain. Some of the illnesses lasted for weeks.

While there were ready answers for a few occurrences (a leaky power unit, a smoking oven), the reason for most of the illnesses has eluded the airline, the aircraft manufacturer and the Federal Aviation Administration.

But the airline's chief executive, Bruce Kennedy, said recently his best guess is that the flight attendants are blaming ordinary illnesses on the airplanes.

Some questions Sussell must answer:

Are the flight attendants getting enough oxygen to support their often demanding duties?

Are there traces of toxins in the air?

How communicable are bacteria and viruses in the cabin?

Are air quality standards that are now deemed safe in the industry adequate to protect the employees' health?

What are the long-term health effects of working long hours for many years in a closed environment breathing air with reduced quantities of oxygen?

Most of the incidents have occurred on Alaska Airlines' McDonnell Douglas MD-80s twinjets, which make up roughly one-fourth of the airline's fleet.

The Flight Attendants Association, the group that led the effort to ban smoking on commercial flights, has been urging the FAA to draft stricter rules for controlling cabin air.

African's belief in soccer sorcery bewitches some, bothers others

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Two years ago, Abubakar Sharif Omar offered Bryan Robson, England's soccer team captain, a prescription for victory in this year's World Cup — witchcraft.

Robson apparently rejected the offer because Omar hasn't heard from him.

But Omar insists his magic could have helped the English team in Italy next month. He claims Sir Alfred Ramsey, a former English team manager, rebuffed a similar offer 20 years ago. England lost to Brazil.

"He paid the price for ignoring me," Omar says. "Since then England has not done well."

The English managers, coaches, players, and fans might be content to entrust their fate to the mastery of techniques.

Not so for many of their African counterparts.

Omar is one of thousands of men and women across Africa who provide soccer teams and fans with "technical services," "research" and "logistics" — euphemisms for witchcraft.

"I know a lot of people running around with that kind of stuff," says Jack Johnson, a Danish coach in Kenya for many years.

Faith in victory through witchcraft is strong.

Kenneth Matiba, a former Cabinet minister, managed soccer in Kenya in the 70s. He recalls expelling from a club two players because they consulted a witchdoctor before a match.

"They stared at me as if it was the end of the club."

Omar, a stocky former soccer player, would not disclose his or his counterparts elixers, incantations or methods. Players, team managers, and coaches won't even admit consulting a witchdoctor.

Reason?

"The medicine would be considered to have lost its potency," says Gichinga Njoroge, a sports writer with the Daily Nation newspaper in Nairobi.

The belief that charms, concoctions and instructions from witchdoctors bring fortune is widespread in Africa, even among highly educated people.

Faith in victory through witchcraft is strong.

But it is traditionally shrouded in secrecy.

There is another reason for secrecy in soccer: National soccer administrators don't take kindly to teams consulting witchdoctors.

"We are trying to improve soccer in the continent," says Job Omino, until early this year the chairman of the Kenya Football Federation. "The only way to do so is practice, not consulting witchdoctors."

Bulls say bring on Game 7

■ Chicago's 18 point win on its home court forces series to Michigan for Game 7 of the NBA's Eastern Conference final Sunday.

N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — The home-court advantage, which National Basketball Association teams hold so dearly, worked its magic again Friday night at Chicago Stadium.

Of course, Michael Jordan's magic also helped.

Defeating the Detroit Pistons, 109-91, the Chicago Bulls ran their home playoff winning streak to nine games and tied the four-of-seven-game Eastern Conference championship series at 3-3.

The game was close in the first half, but Jordan broke it open in the third quarter, when he scored 18 points as the Bulls pulled away to an 80-63 lead.

Jordan hit 7 of 12 shots, including a 3-pointer, and 3 free throws, and his total production for the quarter was only 1 point fewer than the entire Piston team.

Jordan finished with 29 points, and left to a raucous ovation with 3 minutes 7 seconds to play.

The deciding game will be played on the Pistons' turf, the Palace at Auburn Hills, Mich., where the defending NBA champions are also unbeaten in the playoffs this year.

If the Bulls succeed in getting to the championship round for the first time in their history, they will be only the fifth team in NBA history to come back from a 2-0 deficit to win a seven-game series.

The 1969 Boston Celtics and the 1977 Portland Trail Blazers went on to win championships.

The Eastern Conference winner will oppose the Trail Blazers, who eliminated the Phoenix Suns on Thursday night to become the Western Conference champions, for the league title.

The four-of-seven-game championship series will start Tuesday night.

In addition to the home-court edge, another pattern held tonight: Each time the Bulls have surpassed 100 points, they have won.

A year ago, on the first Friday night in June, the Pistons eliminated the Bulls from the playoffs here by winning the sixth game of the Eastern Conference final.

Detroit went on to sweep the Los Angeles Lakers for its first NBA title.

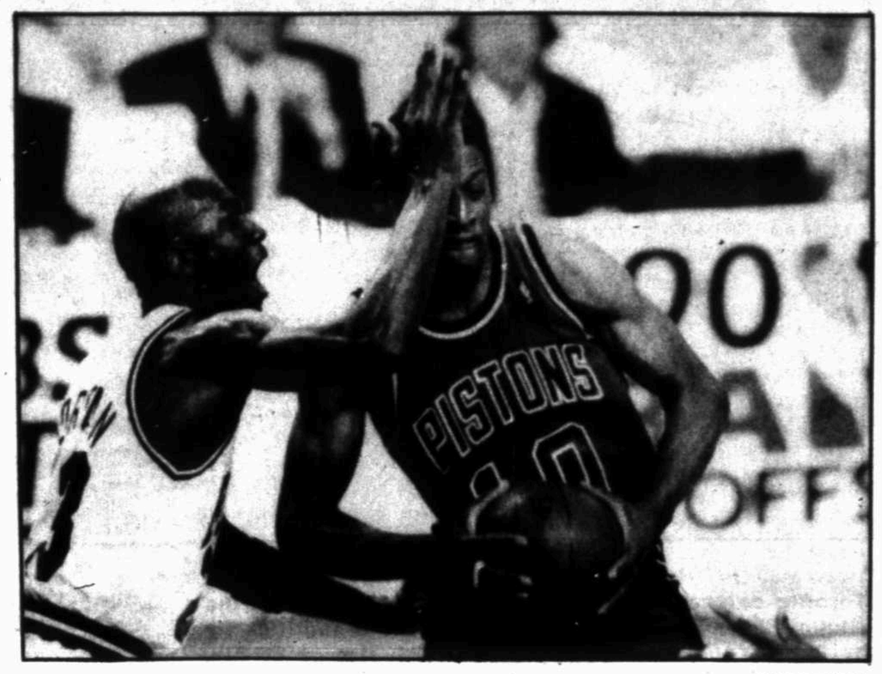
Before the game tonight, reminded of the coincidence, Phil Jackson, now the Bulls' coach and an assistant under Doug Collins a year ago, smiled and said, "This time it's going to come out differently."

Why?

"We're playing with a lot more confidence," he said.

"Our defense is so much better, and so are our players. I'd like to think this is a different team with better ideas."

Also different this year was the presence of Scottie Pippen, who was knocked out in the first minutes of last year's sixth game by one of Bill Laimbeer's elbows.



AP Laserphoto

Detroit's Dennis Rodman, right, gets blocked by Chicago's Michael Jordan during second quarter action in Game 6 of the NBA's Eastern Conference finals.

Pippen was healthy tonight but $2,000 poorer, after Rod Thorn, the NBA's vice president of operations, fined him earlier in the day for throwing a flagrant elbow at Laimbeer with 2 minutes 38 seconds left in the fourth quarter of Game 5.

Fourteen seconds into the game, Jordan hit an 18-foot jumper on a feed from Horace Grant to put his team ahead, 2-0, and he followed with two more outside

Chang hangs on in five sets

N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — Michael Chang, a player whose panic threshold seems nonexistent, is not the sort of person to cry wolf.

On Friday, down by two sets to none as he continued the defense of his French Open title, Chang never flinched and never allowed Christian Bergstrom of Sweden to assume even the illusion that he had control of their match.

Instead, Chang unveiled another of the Houdini-esque maneuvers that made him the French Open's most youthful and improbable champion last year.

Turning a tight place into a showcase, he beat a gritty uphill path through three more sets to defeat Bergstrom, 2-6, 5-7, 6-0, 6-2, 6-4.

The third-round match lasted 3 hours 42 minutes, in perfect keeping with Chang's proclivity for marathon encounters.

"I prepared myself in my mind to know I was going to be out there for quite some time," said Chang, who improved his record in five-set matches to 5-1.

His opponent brought a playbook that contained only two sets of dynamic tennis to center court, hardly sufficient for a date with Chang, and it cost Bergstrom his fifth consecutive loss in a five-set match.

Chang said his resurrection Friday was not so extraordinary as the one he performed here last year against Ivan Lendl in the round of 16, a 4:37 epic that he left in tears despite earning an upset victory.

"Today, I didn't have that fear of being blown off the court after I was down, two to love," said the 18-year-old Chang, who calmly put the missing pieces of his game back together as if he were assembling a crossword puzzle.

Chang likened his approach to erasing a deficit to his tried-and-true tactic for siphoning a stack of homework down to size.

"There would be nights when I'd have homework in all six classes sitting on the table and I'd look at it and think, 'How am I supposed to get it all done?'" he recalled.

Fortunately for Chang, Bergstrom, 22, had no philosophy to fall back on when it came to protecting his two-set advantage.

After breaking Chang in the final game of the second set, using a drop shot to stymie him at set point, Bergstrom proceeded to self-destruct and dropped nine games in a row.

"I felt no one was expecting me to come back and win, and it took the pressure off," said Chang, who will next face Javier Sanchez, who defeated Niclas Kulti of Sweden, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3. "But he let up a whole lot, and it hurt him."

Bergstrom, whose spirited topspin kept Chang on the defensive, sprinted off to a 4-0 first-set lead and, delivering a double dose of drop shots on his second set point, broke Chang a third time in the eighth game to claim the set, 6-2.

"After I got to 4-0 in the first set I played almost perfect tennis," said Bergstrom, who by the end was left staring hopelessly behind him as Chang snapped the final shot of the match, a backhand.

Ed Nixon climbs the final 40 year hurdle — retirement.

Nixon's career comes full circle

■ After 40 years in Midland, from track coach to assistant AD, Ed Nixon says its time to travel and improve the ol' golf game.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Edwin F. Nixon, Midland's assistant athletic director, says that he has taken his last lap with the Midland Independent School District after 40 years.

Nixon, 62, announced his retirement this week and was effective Thursday at the end of the school year. His replacement has not been named.

Nixon drove into Midland in the fall of 1950, liked what he saw and stayed. He was Midland High's head track and cross country coach from 1953 to 1980 when he became assistant athletic director.

And now after 40 years of service, Nixon has memories he cherishes. He has taken his laps.

Over that span of time, Nixon coached one district championship team in 1955, three state pole vault champions, one in the high jump, one in the mile run and one in the mile relay at Midland High. He also produced five state team championships in cross country and won 90 invitational titles.

Nixon was also a member of the United States Track Coaches Associa-

Playoffs preferred, poll says

Associated Press

DALLAS — There's plenty of public support for a championship playoff in college football, according to a Gallup Poll released Friday at the College Football Association's annual meeting.

While 77 percent of the general public said "yes" to an NCAA playoff, the same question put to college football fans drew an 84 percent positive response. And 98 percent of those fans said they would watch the game on television.

Thirty-seven percent of those polled said they didn't think the current weekly poll systems were a fair way to determine a national champion.

The average age of those polled — 52 percent of whom were women — was 46.8 years, with an average household income of $42,070. According to the poll, persons 25 to 34 years old made up the largest group of college football fans — 21 percent.

The Gallup Poll also presented the CFA members with some numbers they weren't too happy about.

For example, it showed that 46 percent of the general public preferred the NFL, while 37 percent liked the college game better.

"That shows we can't afford to stand still," CFA executive director Chuck Neinas said. "The NFL is going for the jugular with its TV packages financially and really has little regard for college football. NFL expansion is a threat. We can't afford to lose our identity or popularity.

"Let's not lose sight of what we have and promote the hell out of it," he said.

The poll was conducted randomly by telephone from last October through January. There were 3,000 respondents. The poll had a sampling error of plus or minus 3.1 percent.

The poll also showed that:

■ Four out of every 10 Americans consider themselves college football fans.

■ The public thought drugs were the top threat to the game.

■ The public (53 percent of those surveyed) believed college football players graduated at a rate lower than the average college student. Only 19 percent believed football players graduate at a higher rate.

The CFA contends college football players graduate at a rate higher than the male student population in general.

The three-day CFA meeting began with an address by Haskell Monroe, chairman of the University of Missouri, who warned that athletic department costs were soaring dramatically.

"I believe the time for action is on us," Monroe said. "If we don't act, someone will because costs are increasing. Spending is bypassing income."

He said if college athletics reaches the point "where we have only the rich and the poor, then we will lose."

Orioles do not get to LaPoint

Associated Press

Dave LaPoint takes pride in snapping his team's losing streaks but he'd rather keep winning streaks going.

"Pitchers do think about those things," LaPoint (4-4) said after pitching 7⅔ strong innings and ending a five-game Yankee losing streak for the third time this season in Friday night's 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles. "You don't like to think you have to do it all that often, but pitchers do took a lot of pride in doing it,"

LaPoint yielded two runs and seven hits before being relieved by Jeff Robinson. Dave Righetti gave up a run in the ninth before nailing down his 10th save.

"I had the best changeup I've had all season and it's funny because the homer (by Randy Milligan in the second inning) came off a fastball, but that's really what set up the changeup," LaPoint said. "Sometimes bad is good."

Steve Balboni homered with one out in the sixth off Jeff Ballard (1-6) to snap a 2-2 tie. It was his fifth of the season, all in his last five games. After Balboni's homer, Jesse Barfield singled and Brian Holton relieved Ballard. Barfield scored what proved to be the decisive run on a single by Rick Cerone and a double by Randy Velarde.

Baltimore took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on Milligan's sixth home run, a tape-measure shot deep into the left-center-field bullpen, and made it 2-0 in the third on Mickey Tettleton's RBI grounder. After being held to one hit for four innings, New York tied the score in the fifth on RBI singles by Deion Sanders and Steve Sax with two out.

Righetti walked Brad Komminsk with one out in the ninth and Phil Bradley tripled one out later. The potential tying run was left at third, however, when Joe Orsulak grounded out.

Angels 4, Rangers 3

California left fielder Max Venable scored one run, drove in another and made a diving catch to save at least one run, leading California over Texas.

Harold Baines' leadoff homer in the Texas sixth cut the Angels' lead to 4-2 and the Rangers then put runners on first and second with two out to chase Angels starter Bert Blyleven (4-3). Venable made a diving catch on Steve Buechele's sinking line drive to bail out reliever Willie Fraser.

California won for the ninth time in its last 11 games while Texas has lost 14 of 18.

The Angels took a 3-1 lead with a two-run fifth against Rangers starter Bobby Witt (2-7). Rick Schu led off with a single and went to third on Devon White's two-out single. Schu scored on Witt's wild pitch and White scored on Wally Joyner's single.

California made it 4-1 in the sixth. Lance Parrish singled with one out, went to third on a two-out single by Schu and scored on a single by Venable, who has 12 hits in his last 24 at-bats.

The Angels got a run in the first inning when Venable led off with a single, stole second, went to third on a groundout and scored on Witt's wild pitch. Texas tied the game with a run in the second on doubles by Ruben Sierra, who was in a 5-for-48 slump, and Pete Incaviglia.

Texas scored its final run in the eighth. Singles by Ruben Sierra and Julio Franco chased reliever Scott Bailes. Mark Eichhorn relieved and Sierra eventually scored on a bases-loaded wild pitch before Gary Pettis struck out.

Eichhorn went on to record his 10th save.

Red Sox 4, Indians 3

Cleveland's Doug Jones, the major-league leader with 17 saves, failed for only the second time this season when Boston scored two runs with two out in the ninth inning.

Jones (0-2) retired the first two batters but Dwight Evans singled and pinch-runner Randy Kutcher scored on Tony Pena's triple. Mike Greenwell, who began the game with an .083 average with runners in scoring position, singled Pena home with a grounder past diving first baseman Brook Jacoby.

White Sox 2, Twins 1

Pinch-hitter Carlos Martinez, batting only .195, singled home the winning run with two out in the ninth inning.

Steve Lyons singled off reliever Terry Leach (2-1) with one out in the ninth and went to second on Ron Karkovice's single. After Scott Fletcher popped up, Martinez batted for Craig Grebeck and delivered his game-winning hit.

It was the 15th win in the last 21 games for Chicago and gave the 29-16 White Sox their best 45-game record since 1964.

Barry Jones (7-0), who relieved starter Melido Perez in the eighth inning, got the win by retiring the last four Minnesota batters.

Perez gave up a run and five hits in 7⅔ innings. Minnesota rookie Kevin Tapani also yielded a run and five hits in eight innings.

Athletics 4, Royals 3

Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire homered on consecutive pitches in the first inning as Oakland continued to thrive on the road with a victory over Kansas City.

The A's have won nine of their last 11 games overall and four straight on the road, where they are 18-6, including 7-1 against the American League West.

After a one-out single by Carney Lansford in the first inning off rookie Kevin Appier (1-1), Canseco hit his 19th homer, a drive that hit halfway up the left-field foul pole and increased his major-league-leading RBI total to 49. He began the evening tied with Detroit's Cecil Fielder for the home run lead.

McGwire hit the next pitch for his 13th homer and a 3-0 lead. McGwire, a career .300 hitter in Kansas City, has hit nine home runs on the road. It was the second time this season Canseco and McGwire hit consecutive home runs.

Brewers 7, Blue Jays 1

Teddy Higuera, who missed his last start after being struck on the knee by a line drive, held Toronto to a run and four hits in six innings and Paul Molitor drove in three runs as Milwaukee regained first place in the American League East.

Higuera (5-1), making his first start since May 21 when he was hit on the right knee by a line drive off the bat of Seattle's Henry Cotto, struck out six and walked one. Chuck Crim went three innings for his third save.

Loser Todd Stottlemyre (4-6) yielded nine hits in eight innings. He gave up three runs in the third as the Blue Jays slipped one-half game behind the Brewers.

Bill Spiers led off the inning with a double and Charlie O'Brien reached on a one-out walk. Mike Felder's single loaded the bases and Robin Yount tied the score with a sacrifice fly.

Stanford casts Ga. Southern into losers' bracket

Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — The home run that wasn't was one of several missed opportunities that hurt Georgia Southern and helped make a winner of top-seeded Stanford in the opening game of the College World Series.

Jeff Hammonds' sacrifice fly in the bottom of the 10th tied it and Troy Paulsen's single won it 5-4 for Stanford, which survived in large part because of six Georgia Southern errors and a key call.

A long drive off the bat of Southern's Rob Fitzpatrick was ruled to have hit off the lower interior fence in left center, and not off a higher exterior fence, negating a two-run homer.

"When the ball was hit, I went out to rule it," third base umpire Randy Christal said. "I followed the trajectory of the ball but then lost it in the white background of the outfield fence signs. Without a good look at the finish, I based part of the call on the reaction of the center fielder."

Hammonds, the Cardinal center fielder, said he didn't see the ball, and neither did Stanford coach Mark Marquess.

"I couldn't tell," Marquess said. "If it did hit the second fence, then it was a home run. But, like I said, I couldn't tell."

"They are all good umpires and they have a job," Southern coach Jack Stallings said. "The people in the dugout have the worst vantage point. The umpires are paid to umpire, the players to play and the coaches try to not get in the way."

Greene, who tagged up on the play and went to third, was out at the plate when Mike Yuro missed a bunt on a squeeze play. Yuro then struck out to end the inning.

Unfortunately, Stallings' players didn't get in the way often, either. Stanford starter Stan Spencer struck out 12 in his nine innings, and the Eagles committed six errors. Stanford was hardly better, committing four errors.

"When vou're in a tight ball game, the difference in winning and losing is who executes," Stallings said. "To be honest, neither club executed well offensively or defensively when it had to. They executed at the end and we didn't."

Paulsen's single that ended it handed a fourth loss to Southern ace Joey Hamilton, whose 18 victories this season lead college baseball. Brian Sackinsky (2-0), who gave up the Southern run in the top of the inning, got the victory.

Stanford (57-10) will play the winner of Friday's Georgia-Mississippi State on Sunday. Earlier Sunday, Georgia Southern (50-18) faces Friday night's second-game loser in an elimination game.

Georgia Southern led 4-3 when Fitzpatrick singled home Doug Eder in the 10th.

Roger Burnett singled tleading off the Stanford 10th, moved to third on Hamilton's wild throw to second on a sacrifice bunt by Troy Tallman, and scored on Hammond's fly to right. Paulsen's single scored Tallman.

Eder singled, stole second and scored on Fitzpatrick's single as Georgia Southern scored in the first.

CWS

The Cardinal tied it in the bottom of the inning when as Paulsen tripled and scored when Hamilton threw wildly to first on David McCarty's comeback grounder.

Stanford, winner of the CWS in 1987 and 1988, went up 3-1 in the second when Burnett tripled to score David Holbrook, who had walked, and scored when the relay from second baseman Eder skipped into the Cardinal dugout.

Georgia Southern, making its second trip to the tournament after qualifying under current Mississippi State coach Ron Polk in 1973, picked up an unearned run in fourth. Chad Sumner was Spencer's fifth straight strikeout, but reached first when the breaking pitch bounded away from Cardinal catcher Tallman. Yuro was hit by a pitch and Mike Miller hit a grounder through the legs of Stanford third baseman Tim Griffin, scoring Sumner.

Southern tied the game in the seventh when Steve Siebert doubled and scored on Chris Abner's two-out single.

Georgia 3, Mississippi St. 0

Dave Fleming allowed four hits in shutting out Mississippi State for the second time this season, this time in an opening-round game of the College World Series.

The shutout, the first in the CWS since Florida State's Chris Pollack beat Arizona State 3-0 in 1987, moved fourth-seeded Georgia (49-18) into a second-round game Sunday against top-seeded Stanford, a 5-4, 10-inning winner over Georgia Southern earlier Friday.

Mississippi State (49-20), like Georgia a member of the Southeastern Conference, faces Georgia Southern in an elimination game on Sunday.

Fleming (12-5) faced one batter over the minumum through seven innings, thanks to three double plays. An error in the eighth and a two-out infield single in the ninth provided Mississippi State's other baserunners, but neither reached second.

Fleming shut out Mississippi State 9-0 during the regular season, the first time in 177 games that State's Bulldogs had been shut out.

Bobby Reed (15-3), winning pitcher in Mississippi State's only regular-season victory over Georgia, took the loss in the World Series opener.

Jeff Cooper gave Fleming a 1-0 lead in the third when he lined a Reed pitch over the 370-foot sign in left. Georgia made it 2-0 in the fifth on Joey Alfonzo's bloop double, a grounder and a wild pitch.

The final Georgia run came in the bottom of the eighth when J.R. Showalter singled and with two out Mississippi State right fielder Tracy Echols ran into his second baseman, Scott Mitchell, on a high pop up floating in the wind. The ball was dropped and Showalter scored all the way from first.

Fleming's performance outshined that of Reed, who allowed five hits, struck out five and gave up two walks.

Viola downs Philly for eighth win

Associated Press

Frank Viola pitched a six-hitter through eight innings and Gregg Jefferies and Mike Marshall hit solo homers as the New York Mets beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-0 Friday night for their first victory under new manager Bud Harrelson.

The loss was the fifth straight for the Phillies, who haven't won since a one-day stand atop the National League East last week.

Viola (8-2) struck out five and walked three before getting relief help in the ninth from John Franco. The win was the first for Harrelson, 1-1 since he succeeded Dave Johnson, who was fired Tuesday in Cincinnati.

Phillies starter Dennis Cook lost for the first time after five victories, giving up eight hits and all four Mets runs. The two Mets home runs boosted to five the number given up by Cook in his last two starts.

Jefferies also singled and doubled in extending his hitting streak through 10 games. The Phillies' Lenny Dykstra singled in the fifth to equal his career-high 14-game string. He finished the night going 2-for-4 to boost his major league-leading average to .396.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead in the first on Jefferies' RBI double.

NL Roundup

Expos 4, Pirates 1

Kevin Gross allowed six hits over seven innings and Montreal manufactured three runs in the fourth inning without a well-hit ball to beat Pittsburgh and end the Pirates' five-game winning streak.

The Expos used Spike Owen's bases-loaded walk, a passed ball, a hit-and-run single and a sacrifice bunt in the fourth to win their fourth in a row and end losing pitcher Doug Drabek's six-game winning streak.

Cardinals 6, Cubs 4

Jose DeLeon gave up four hits in 6⅔ innings and light-hitting Jose Oquendo drove in two runs as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Chicago Cubs in a matchup of slumping National League East teams.

Terry Pendleton also drove in two runs for the Cardinals, who pulled into a fifth-place tie with the Cubs, the defending East champions. The Cardinals have won only two of their last seven and the Cubs have lost eight of 11.

DeLeon (5-3) gave up seven earned runs in only two-thirds of an inning in his previous start and again had trouble in the first against the Cubs.

NIXON: Recapping a memory-filled career

tion Executive Committee from 1970 to 1973 and on the advisory committee of the Texas High School Coaches Association in 1978-79. In 1976, he was nominated as the National Cross Country Coach of the Year from District V, which includes an eight state area.

Still, after all the ups and downs, Nixon doesn't fill things are much different now than when he came riding into town 40 years ago.

"Midland had only 25,000 people when I came here from Howard Payne in 1950, and other than size, I don't think things have changed that much," said Nixon. "I hear that kids have changed, but I don't think so. Kids do exactly what you demand of them.

"If you demand mediocrity, that's what you get. Parents, teachers and the school administration are not demanding enough of students. I think the kids I've had in the past know that I expected a lot of them and a lot of them know it helped them. Jack Hightower, who is successful in the oil business was a good distance runner, but I think some of that carried over into the business world."

Nixon started teaching at West Elementary in 1950 and would go over after school and help Thurman "Tugboat" Jones coach the track team. At that time, Jones was serving as head football and track coach, as well as athletic director.

"Tugboat used to take me with him to all the track meets on the weekends," says Nixon. "In the spring of 1951, we were at a meet in Brownwood and Tugboat asked me, 'Nixon, what is your ambition?' I said I wanted to be the head track coach at Midland High. And he said, 'You've just obtained that ambition.'

"I wasn't officially named as the head track coach until 1953, but Tugboat met me at the first practice in 1952 and I didn't see him again that year, except that he would come to some of the meets and watch."

There were good times and bad times, but the kids made the difference to Nixon.

"Of all the things that happened, the ones you remember come from the kids who did things I didn't expect with the ability they had. Someone would always do more than what you would expect.

"Tevis Herd, who still lives in Midland is a good example. He broke a leg his senior year in January. The only race in track he ran during regular season was the mile in the district meet and he finished second to Phil Barrett. Tevis also finished second to Phil at the region meet, but beat Phil at the state meet to win the state championship in the mile. It's the only time I remember in the large school division that two from the same school finished one and two at state."

Nixon also looks back to 1960 with fond memories.

"That year we broke the national high school mile relay record one night in Andrews with a 3:17.5 and Andrews beat us by more than two seconds," laughs Nixon. "That was the year Andrews had Ted Nelson. We lost to them several times that year and we always led for three laps. Our anchor leg was J.B. Doyle and he ran a good split of 48.3, but Nelson had a 46.2 split.

"I think Max Goldsmith, who was the track coach at Andrews then, and I were the first coaches in the state of Texas to run sprinters on the mile relay."

In 1959, Midland High set a national high school record in the 10-mile relay with a 49:59.5 at Memorial Stadium.

"That was the first high school team ever to average 10 minutes per man on each two-mile leg," said Nixon.

Of course, like all track coaches, Nixon has seen times tumble over the past 40 years in track. Midland High's mile relay time of 3:17.5 is reachable by many schools in the state each year now.

"I was a district champion in high school in Springfield, Ore., and third in the state meet in the pole vault with 11-feet. You don't get out of district with that now," said Nixon, "but we used bamboo poles back then. We didn't have fiber glass.

"I managed a 14-2 in college and won the Lone Star championship two years, placed third in the Texas Relays and competed in the Kansas and Drake Relays and placed. I beat all the Southwest Conference vaulters"

Nixon gave up coaching in January of 1980 to become assistant athletic director under Gil Bartosh.

"I missed the coaching, but I was still associated with the kids by being involved in the athletic end of things," said Nixon.

"I feel like after 40 years of life in athletics, it's time for me to do something else while I can enjoy it. I'm still in good health, so I may look around for something else to do. I also want to improve on my golf game and see some parts of the country I haven't seen. I'm not a couch potato, never have been, and don't plan on starting now."

Trickle takes NASCAR pole position

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Dick Trickle won his first Winston Cup pole position Friday, taking the top spot for the $542,000 NASCAR Budweiser 500 stock car race.

Trickle, a 48-year-old Midwest short-track champion who raced only sparingly on NASCAR's top circuit until he won rookie-of-the-year honors last year, turned a 145.814 mph lap on the high-banked 1-mile oval at Dover Downs International Speedway.

His 24.69-second lap edged Mark Martin's 24.9 lap for the top starting spot Sunday at a track where no pole-sitter has won in 26 races. Trickle said his Pontiac came down from a 24.85-second practice time.

"I talked to the crew and said this ain't a time to be conservative," Trickle said. "Let's keep digging. Pulling back and running conservative just to finish races ain't what it's all about. We want to run up front."

The last pole-sitter to win at Dover was Cale Yarborough, who is Trickle's car owner.

Martin, who started on the pole two of the last three races at Dover, ran a lap at 144.590 mph in a Ford.

Geoff Bodine will start third at 144.370 in a Ford.

Morgan birdies way to PGA lead

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Gil Morgan birdied four of the first eight holes Friday en route to a 4-under-par 67 and a one-shot lead over Scott Hoch after two rounds of the Kemper Open.

Morgan, bidding for his first tournament victory since 1983, completed 36 holes over the TPC at Avenel at 7-under 135.

Spain's Seve Ballesteros shot a 72 and, at 145, missed the cut by one stroke. A double-bogey on No. 8 — his second in two days — contributed to his early exit.

Defending champion Tom Byrum, who had a 71, also was at 145 and wasn't among the 71 who qualified for weekend play.

First-round co-leaders Ted Schulz and Pat McGowan shot 72's and were among five players two strokes behind Morgan. Buddy Gardner and Billy Ray Brown reached the halfway point at 138.

Rhyan ties record to open Seniors

N.Y. Times News Service

SCARBOROUGH, N.Y. — Ideal weather and receptive greens produced low scores Friday in the first round of the NYNEX/Golf Digest Commemorative golf tournament at Sleepy Hollow Country Club.

At the end of a day marked by brilliant sunshine and an absence of wind, the leader of the Senior PGA Tour event was Dick Rhyan.

Rhyan shot a seven-under-par 63 to tie the course record, which was set by Bob Charles when he won here in 1988. Charles matched that record when he won last year, and Lee Trevino shot a 63 Thursday in the pro-am.

Jim Powell, who gained his first victory in his six years on the senior tour three weeks ago at the Southwestern Bell Classic, was alone in second place with a 64. He was followed by Gary Player, who shot 65 despite three bogeys and was alone in third place.

BULLS: Jordan hurting again despite 29 points jumpers as the Bulls built a 12-6 advantage with 7:50 left in the quarter.

From 1B

Later in the period, the Pistons made it tougher for the Bulls to get Jordan the ball by doing a better job of closing the passing lanes.

Still, the Bulls managed to make half of their 20 shots in the quarter.

The Pistons, meanwhile, shooting from the outside and missing badly instead of trying to go inside, shot 39 percent, keeping the game close only by getting to the free-throw line for seven chances.

They made six of the foul shots, while the Bulls, who led, 21-20, after the first quarter, never got to the line.

With Bill Cartwright picking up two fouls before the game was five minutes old, and with Will Perdue, his replacement, not playing especially well, Jackson went to a smaller lineup that included B.J. Armstrong and Stacey King, his rookies, and Craig Hodges, his best 3-point shooter.

The Pistons got back into the game by forcing the Bulls to shoot from the outside.

Laimbeer then controlled the defensive boards.

On the other end, Dennis Rodman did well getting offensive rebounds, and Detroit took advantage of its second and third shots to slice the Chicago lead to 47-44 by halftime.

Jordan didn't take a shot from the field in the second quarter, his additional 3 points coming at the free-throw line.

Meanwhile, Pippen took over the Chicago offense, scoring 15 points in the second quarter. Joe Dumars led Detroit with 11 points in the period.

Blazers run from hard luck to finals

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — From nightmare to dream come true: The transformation from bickering also-ran to championship contender has been swift, surprising and supremely satisfying for the Portland Trail Blazers in a city where pro basketball is the only game in town.

Blazermania, the peculiar madness that last infected this city 13 years ago, is epidemic. Police estimate that 10,000 people showed up for the 1:35 a.m. PDT arrival of the team from Phoenix Friday.

The reason: The Trail Blazers are in The Finals for only the second time in the 20-year history of the franchise. The last time this happened was in 1977, when an enigmatic red-head named Bill Walton led Portland to the NBA title.

"Over the years you sit back and watch the playoffs and you really kind of wonder what it takes to get there," Buck Williams said. "Now we're there and hopefully we can take it all."

The Blazers earned their trip to the finals with a 112-109 victory over the Suns in Phoenix Thursday night, scoring the last six points of the game in the final minute to break a five-game road losing streak in the playoffs.

For the Suns, it was a heartbreaking finish to a season that seemed just two weeks ago to be destined for championship. They came off the ropes to beat Utah, then dethroned the perennial Western Conference champion Los Angeles Lakers in the second round.

In each series, they had to win one on the road. But they couldn't win in Portland.

They lost three cliff-hangers there but won the first two games in Phoenix handily. Thursday night was different. Portland stayed close and the Suns suffered a big blow when playmaker Kevin Johnson went out with a pulled hamstring late in the second half.

With Johnson out, Jeff Hornacek responded with a career-high 36 points. But in the end, the Blazers made the big defensive plays as they have time and time again this season.

Whenever the games have been close in the playoffs, Portland has won. Their last six victories have come in double overtime, overtime, by two points, by one point and by three points.

"It's just typical of our team all year long," Portland Coach Rick Adelman said. "It's the way we've played. People think we can't win but we do it."

A year ago, this was a team in trouble.

Plagued by dissension as well as a lack of communication between some players and Coach Mike Schuler, the Blazers were a passive finesse team that tended to wilt when the going got tough.

Dent seems unscathed by personal attacks

Associated Press

NEW YORK — In the face of unnamed players calling for his firing and the owner not offering any votes of confidence, New York Yankees manager Bucky Dent refuses to act like a man on the way out.

Sitting behind his desk in the manager's office before a game against the Baltimore Orioles Friday night, Dent folded his arms across his chest and said firmly: "I don't care what happens around me. I going to continue to do the best job I can do. I knew there would be times like this when I accepted the job. But I'm not going to quit, and I'm not going to worry. If I spent all my time thinking about being fired, I would never get around to the job of running this team."

Dent's team is coming off a 2-6 roadtrip, having lost five straight and falling into last place in the American League East with the worst record in baseball, 17-27.

And, in a published report Friday, Yankees outfielder-designated hitter Mel Hall shook up the clubhouse by saying: "The intensity here stinks. It's almost as if we have no guts. We have to have more heart."

Another story quoted players as saying Dent was the wrong man to lead the Yankees, and recently owner George Steinbrenner has backed away from his pre-season statement that Dent would manage the whole season.

Dent wouldn't comment on his votes of no-confidence but nevertheless held a half-hour pre-game meeting to "straighten things out" with his players.

"These guys should be worrying about playing baseball, not me," Dent said. "My situation shouldn't affect them."

Still, players sense something is going to happen. And soon.

"I smell a rat on the air," right fielder Jesse Barfield said. "I don't know if it'll be the manager getting fired, or a big trade. But I think people in here think we need something to get us out of our rut."

Mavs' Perkins says he's OK after accident

ADDISON, Texas (AP) — Dallas Mavericks forward Sam Perkins said he felt fine Friday, one day after being injured in a car wreck in the Dallas suburb of Addison.

Perkins' car collided with another car in an intersection as Perkins was attempting to turn left at about 9:32 p.m., said Addison police spokesman Brad Freis. The other car was going straight.

"I'm fine," Perkins said in statement released by the Mavericks. "I have a sprained left hand and that's it. It's like nothing happened."

Both drivers were taken to hospitals. The other driver had a possible broken right wrist or forearm and neck injuries, Freis said.

Janet Alford, emergency room nurse at RHD Memorial Medical Center in Dallas, said Perkins was treated and released at 11:05 p.m. Thursday.

Both drivers said they had a green light, Freis said. The officer at the scene was unable to determine who was a fault. No citations were issued, he said.

Perkins, 28, and the other driver both live in Addison.

Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju said Lee Fentress, the 6-9½ forward's agent, called Friday with details of the accident.

"Both of us are pleased that Sam is OK," Sonju said. "He played an important part in our organization these past six years and we're trusting that he'll be a part of our team for many years to come."

Perkins' 1986 Porsche and the other driver's 1981 Honda both sustained medium to heavy damage and were towed from the intersection, Freis said.

BLAZERS: The only game in town

From 4B

Computer whiz Paul Allen, in his first year as the team's owner, fired Schuler in February of 1989 and replaced him with Adelman, a player on the original Trail Blazer team and an assistant since 1983.

The team struggled to a 14-21 finish to wind up 39-43, Portland's worst record in nine years. The Blazers barely made the playoffs and were swept by the Lakers in the first round.

The team's front office made it plain big changes would be made. The biggest was the trade that brought Williams from New Jersey in exchange for Sam Bowie and a draft choice.

Williams is an aggressive 6-foot-8 power forward with a reputation as a hard worker. His habits have rubbed off on his teammates.

Then, the team signed free agent Wayne Cooper to back up Kevin Duckworth at center.

Drazen Petrovic, a sharpshooting Yugoslavian, was signed to a contract. The Blazers payed big money, reportedly some $2 million a year, to retain playmaker Terry Porter. Rookie Cliff Robinson was a steal in the second round of the draft. It was obvious early to all involved that this would be no ordinary team.

"Once the exhibition games got started, we were very confident we had a very fine team," Williams said, "then it was just a point of going out and getting the job done."

The Blazers won a franchise record 59 games, tying Detroit for the second-best record in the league. But they had to overcome personal hardships off the court.

Porter's mother died of illness. Reserve Mark Bryant's mother and aunt were killed in a car crash.

Bryant's best friend and Blazer teammate, rookie Ramon Ramos, received a severe brain injury in a December car crash and was in a coma for more than two months. He is undergoing rehabilitation and has made tremendous progress recently.

He walked into the team's locker room at a practice session Monday and gave his teammates an immeasurable emotional lift.

The Blazers may have known at the start of the regular season that they were good. The Las Vegas oddsmakers didn't. They made the team a 35-1 shot to win the title.

Portland hadn't advanced past the opening round of the playoffs since 1983, but they swept Dallas this year. It was a costly victory, however.

Duckworth and Cooper both went out with injuries. Duckworth with a broken right hand and Cooper with back spasms. Somehow, the Blazers, with Cliff Robinson at center, managed to beat David Robinson and the San Antonio Spurs in seven games in the second round.

Duckworth and Cooper came back in the seventh game of the series.

The Blazers are 9-0 at home in the playoffs and the fans at Memorial Coliseum, who had been almost eerily quiet in recent seasons, were at least as raucous as they were in that long-ago championship season.

"They've been our sixth man throughout the playoffs," Porter said.

Through it all, the team shot poorly, usually not much better than 40 percent from the field. But defense and rebounding and a penchant for making big plays at the finish pulled them through.

And the players give much of the credit to Adelman, who has been rewarded with a three-year contract extension and big pay raise by Allen.

"He deserves whatever the best coach in the league gets," said Portland's Clyde Drexler, who didn't get along at all with Schuler.

The Blazers played 14 games in 28 days and were admittedly exhausted. They have the day off as they wait to see who they will meet Tuesday in the first game of the finals.

Three-way tie at LPGA Lady Keystone Open

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Stephanie Farwig, Kate Rogerson and Mary Beth Zimmerman shot 5-under-par 67s to share the first-round lead in the LPGA's Lady Keystone Open on Friday.

Diane Heinicke-Rauch, Carolie Pierce and Cathy Marino were tied at 68 on the 6,348-yard West Course of the Hershey County Club.

Betsy King, last year's leading money winner, joined four others — Laurel Kean, Danielle Ammaccapane, Marci Bozarth and Marianne Morris — two shots behind.

Farwig and Rogerson have never won a tour event and Zimmerman hasn't won since 1987.

Farwig birdied six of the last 12 holes to storm into a tie for the lead.

Rogerson started with two birdies and added two more with sensational chip shots at 15 and 16. On the 345-yard 11th, she hooked her drive under the trees but managed to hit a low liner 12 feet from the cup.

Zimmerman could have had the lead to herself, but missed a two-foot putt on the 14th. She made birdie putts of 10 feet at 13 and 17, dropped a 12-footer at 12 and a five-footer at 15 for a 32 on the back nine.

Marino, who started on the back side, was 2-under at the turn. A double-bogey on the par-5 first hole dropped her to even.

Birdies at Nos. 2, 4, 7 and 8 put Marino back into contention.

Heinicke-Rauch had an eagle, four birdies and two bogeys on the back after nine pars on the front. The eagle-3 came on the 451-yard 16th hole when she dropped a 25-foot putt.

Birdies at 15 and 16 moved King into contention after she started the day with seven straight pars.

Dreams of Today . . . ...Realities of Tomorrow

Sunday
James 1:2-8

The crowded school auditorium is hushed as the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" fill the air with excitement and anticipation as each graduating student marches proudly down the aisle in the traditional cap and gown.

Some of these young people are our future doctors, scientists, poets and presidents. Others will operate our factories or farm our land. Whatever the endeavor, each will leave his or her mark upon our world. Through them, the dreams of today shall become the realities of tomorrow.

As we honor our new graduates, let us praise God as He continues to guide them along their chosen paths and strengthens them with His loving touch.

Monday Acts 13:26-41
Tuesday Acts 16:16-34
Wednesday Acts 26:1-18
Thursday Romans 1:8-17
Friday Romans 3:21-31
Saturday Romans 11:13-24

First Assembly greeting pastor

Midland's First Assembly of God, 100 W. Wadley Ave., welcomes its new pastor, the Rev. Sammy Hayes from North Little Rock, Ark., Sunday.

Hayes began his ministry at the age of 16 and was ordained at the age of 24. He has traveled extensively as an evangelist and has pastored churches in Tennessee, Virginia and Mississippi. Methodists to gather the event, an annual meeting of clergy and elected lay delegates from United Methodist congregations, is the official business and policy-making session for the denomination in the Northwest Texas area.

Highlights of the annual conference will include a state of the Church address at 7 p.m. Monday by Bishop Louis W. Schowengerdt, area bishop of the Northwest Texas/New Mexico Area since 1980. The giving and receiving of new pastoral appointments for 1990-91 also will take place during the evening workship service.

A total of 10 men and women - five deacons and five elders - will be ordained during the Service of Ordination at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the church sanctuary.

Featured speaker will be Bishop Ole Borgen former UM bishop of the Northern Europe area - Denmark, Finland, Norway, Sweden and Estonia - and current guest faculty member of Asbury Theological Seminary in Willmore, Ky.

The author of numerous articles, borgen is a noted authority on John Wesley - the founder of Methodism - and Methodist history. He has two books to his credit, "John Wesley on teh Sacrements: A Theological Study" and "John Wesley: An Autobiographical Sketch of the Man and His thought."

A native of Norway, Borgen attended agricultural college in his home country before earning degrees from Greensboro College, Greensboro, N.C., Duke University Divinity School and a doctorate from Drew University Graduate School.

Elected to the episcopacy in 1970 in Copenhagen, Denmark, Borgen served as executive secretary of the World Methodist Council and was president of the Council of Bishops of the UMC from 1985-86.

During the Northwest Texas Annual Conference, Borgen will preach four times: at 8:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and at 8:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

During the conference, members will take action on reports dealing with increased insurance costs, a proposed internal restructuring of the conference organization and receive year-end summaries of the work done through United Methodist-related institutions and work areas.

In addition, a number of resolutions from local churches and conference committees will be considered. Topics range from drug trafficking to the funding of Texas public schools.

The annual conference will begin at 2 p.m. Monday and will conclude with the service of Ordination Wednesday.

The Northwest Texas Annual Conference is composed of 242 local churches, divided geographically into seven districts: Abilene, Amarillo, Big Spring, Lubbock, Pampa, Plainview and Seymour. There are 80,469 members of the denomination within the conference.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, JUNE 2, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Those who are self-employed will make great strides. If your regular job is not emotionally fulfilling, you may want to explore the possibilities of free-lancing on the weekends. It will take a lot of hard work and dedication to achieve the kind of success you envision. You should begin to see results by the winter holidays. Romance will move into high gear in January 1991. An attractive newcomer shares your goals and interests.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Sally Kellerman, composer Marvin Hamlisch, actor Stacy Keach, "Tarzan" star Johnny Weismuller.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A family member will be very cooperative today. If you come under fire at place of employment, keep cool. Young people are willing to perform those tasks you would rather not undertake.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Although today may lack yesterday's fast pace, you can expect good things to happen. A friend offers honest advice. Redouble your efforts to make money. Handle your own financial negotiations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your intuition is right on target where romance is concerned. Heed that strong inner voice! Although a small gamble could pay off, if you wager too much, you are bound to lose.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A domestic problem that occupies your thoughts in early morning should be solved by midday. A face-to-face encounter may be necessary to set the record straight with your boss. Be tactful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The lack of a peaceful atmosphere may make concentration difficult today. Deal with routine matters. Romance needs more time to grow. Events work in your favor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Expect the unexpected today. Your ability to perform when under pressure wins respect. Pace yourself to handle a heavy workload. Make intelligent concessions to your loved ones.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day for travel. Postpone making any new moves concerning a financial agreement. A private matter can now be handled with great success. A one-on-one meeting today will pay off handsomely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make sure you really understand a financial situation before attempting to change it. You will soon get a chance to better your circumstances. It may be possible to consolidate certain bills.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An associate's health could affect your workload. Changing your plans can be upsetting. Staying home is more appealing than going out tonight. Use tact when making suggestions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Put more energy into the work you are doing. Assistance could be available from an unexpected quarter. Try not to bottle up your emotions. Children should be encouraged to become more independent.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Innovative ideas lead you in an exciting new direction. Be sure to keep loved ones informed of your plans. A change in a financial situation helps relieve tension.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your weekend plans have to be revised because of some event affecting your loved ones. Older relatives are inspired to resolve their differences. Family members draw closer together.

TODAY'S CHILDREN tend to use the same words of affection with everyone they love. Others may mistake their approach for a line. However, these Geminis are very sincere. Gadgets and shortcuts will fascinate them. Parental guidance is important when these Geminis select a career. They could decide to be a lawyer today, a doctor tomorrow and an engineer the next day! The ideal profession will allow them to use their ingenuity. Routine and repetition bore these lively souls. In romance, they will have a string of "steadies" before meeting the person they want to marry.

PEOPLE

What besides politics could draw these 'bedfellows?'

NEW YORK (AP) — What could draw the mayor, the governor and a president's son to the same place? A Democratic Party summit? A backroom political sit-down?

Did you say bachelor party?

Mayor David Dinkins, Gov. Mario Cuomo and John F. Kennedy Jr. were expected for the singles-scene farewell of gubernatorial offspring Andrew Cuomo.

JFK Jr. will be representing the bride's side of the family. Cuomo, 32, walks down the aisle June 9 with Kerry Kennedy, daughter of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

The wedding will be held in Washington, but Friday night's bachelor bash was set for midtown Manhattan. Andrew's younger brother, Chris, and Daily News columnist Mike McAlary were hosts.

Reportedly among the invited but unable to attend: Arnold Schwarzenegger, on the road promoting his new flick "Total Recall." The big fella is related to the Kennedys through his marriage to Maria Shriver.

NEW YORK (AP) — Here's a brief history of Errol Morris' new film:

The director of the acclaimed documentary "The Thin Blue Line" wanted to make a film based on the true story of the theft of Albert Einstein's brain and approached Steven Spielberg's production company, Amblin Entertainment.

Also talking to Amblin was producer Gordon Freedman, who acquired the right to physicist Stephen Hawking's best-selling "A Brief History of Time." Spielberg liked the idea and quickly decided on the ideal director: Morris.

Morris had studied history and science at Princeton University, but wasn't interested at first.

He changed his mind after reading the book.

"I thought it was an opportunity to push documentaries — non-fiction film making — even further than I may have pushed in my previous films," Morris said in Friday's editions of The New York Times.

"I was very moved by Hawking as a scientist and as a man," Morris said of the author, who suffers from Lou Gehrig's disease, "He's a truly wonderful man."

Morris said he used more than 30 sets for the film and will begin editing in the fall.

PARIS (AP) — Maria Felix, one of Mexico's greatest film stars, has emptied her Paris apartment of a rare collection of Napoleon III furnishings and knicknacks to be auctioned next week.

An avid art collector who has lived in France for many years, Miss Felix said she decided to clean out her apartment "to make room for something new."

The collection, to be sold Wednesday at the Hotel Georges V, includes furniture in the heavy, ornate Napoleon III style, bibelots in mother-of-pearl and rare chandeliers with floral decorations in colored glass dating from the mid-1800s.

Mario Cuomo — Andrew Cuomo

Miss Felix was known for her striking beauty and strong will. Born in 1919, she made her film debut at age 14

She retired from films in 1969.

AUSTIN (AP) — Guitarist Jimmie Vaughan, who's announced he will leave the band he helped start, the Fabulous Thunderbirds, plans to pursue independent projects.

Vaughan is being replaced in the band by Duke Robillard, best known for his work with Roomful of Blues, the Providence, R.I., band that also supplied the T-Birds with drummer Fran Christina and bassist Preston Hubbard.

The band, one of Austin's best-known through the success of songs such as "Tuff Enuff," performed in Austin for the last time with Vaughan on Sunday.

T-Birds publicist Charles Comer said Vaughan's decision was based on personal preferences rather than any musical differences with the band.

"Jimmie finally got tired of the road. The band has been constantly touring for a decade, playing 300 or so dates a year, and Jimmie wanted to be home more," Comer said.

"He's also interested in becoming involved in outside projects which the band's busy schedule doesn't allow time for."

Vaughan was in Dallas, finishing an album with his brother, Stevie Ray Vaughan, and not immediately available for comment. But Comer said the parting was amicable.

"Jimmie and the band have been through a lot together and they remain on the best of terms. Everyone associated with the band wishes him success in his endeavors and Jimmie remains a big fan of the T-Birds," he said.

California's 4-year drought 'frightening'

Hearst News Service

NAPA, Calif. — While the blooming vines look lustrous as ever, growers in this drought-stricken wine-growing region are anxious.

Grapevines live for many years. No one knows how four consecutive years of drought may harm their development. Vineyard owners point to serious diseases and fungi invading their fields and wonder if the lack of water is the cause.

Throughout the state, the drought has all farmers frightened. They look at drying wells and reservoirs three-quarters full and know something will have to be sacrificed: part of their profit, a tree's or vine's health, or the crop itself.

Rice growers simply won't plant about one-tenth of their acreage; cotton will be cut back, too.

Some dryland wheat and barley farmers already have given up, harvesting only hay. Cattle ranchers and dairy owners will have to butcher their animals if there is not water for them to drink.

"It's very scary," said Vincent Petruchi, viticulturist at California State University, Fresno, as he described the sinking groundwater supply in California.

The Napa Valley has survived three years of drought fairly well, in part because it enjoys cooler weather than most of the state's other agricultural regions. Also, water-hungry vines tend to produce smaller, shriveled grapes – sometimes producing especially flavorful wines. Premium wine grape growers last year reaped a rich, plentiful harvest, despite the drought.

But four years of water-stress carries unknown dangers for these valuable vines, which produce a total crop worth $647 million on land valued at up to $50,000 an acre. Grapes were California's third-most valuable crop in 1988, the latest figures available.

Farmers are especially concerned about disease and parasitic invasions, which they attribute in part to weakened vines.

Some of Beckstoffer Vineyards' 1,000 acres have been attacked by Phylloxera plant lice, sucking insects that feed on plant roots. So far, researchers say the lice have infected about 100 acres in two counties, and they expect the pests to spread rapidly, doubling or quadrupling their territory in the current season.

Infected vines have difficulty taking up water and nutrients. Easily spotted among healthy neighbors, they slowly yellow, grow stunted and die, while the lice spread through the dirt to suck the life out of their next victim. Increased irrigation may help a plant limp along, but the best solution is to pull it out.

This year and next growers also will have fewer grapes to pick, especially in the hotter parts of the Napa area. Now is the time the grapes will take shape out of tiny white clusters of flowers. Next month, microscopic blossoms will form for next year's crop. Water is crucial to their profusion.

First ladies extol women's roles

By Christopher Connell

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Barbara Bush and Raisa Gorbachev gave the graduating women of Wellesley College some first-lady advice Friday and then rejoiced in their newfound friendship.

"I simply feel very at home and comfortable with Mrs. Gorbachev and I have enormous respect for her," Mrs. Bush told reporters as the pair toured Boston after sharing the commencement platform.

Said Mrs. Gorbachev: "I particularly rejoice at the fact that our conversations are extremely open, sincere and friendly. And despite the fact that we might have differences, that does not change the tone."

These were words that had not publicly passed between Mrs. Gorbachev and Nancy Reagan, Mrs. Bush's predecessor.

At Wellesley's graduation ceremonies, Mrs. Bush disarmed critics who had argued that she was not a suitable role model for women in the '90s.

"I never dreamed it would be this much fun," the American first lady said.

The crowd cheered, "Barbara, Barbara, Barbara" as Mrs. Bush spoke unabashedly about her homemaker's life, while urging the graduates to pursue professional careers if that was their goal.

"They were nice," Mrs. Bush said of the students Friday night.

Soviet first lady Raisa Gorbachev and first lady Barbara Bush respond to the graduation crowd at Wellesley College.

The first lady credited Mrs. Gorbachev with the reception the two got, calling her "my secret weapon."

"She's wonderful," Mrs. Bush said as she returned to the White House following a dinner at the Soviet Embassy.

Asked how she and Mrs. Gorbachev hit it off, Mrs. Bush replied "very well."

Sounding some of the themes that Mrs. Bush hit, Mrs. Gorbachev — a professional women herself — spoke of "the values that bring us together," including love of country and children.

Mrs. Bush, who dropped out of college to marry George Bush as World War II raged a continent away, wore a black academic robe with a purple cowl. Mrs. Gorbachev, a philosophy Ph.D and former university lecturer, wore a plaid gray suit and pink blouse.

More conspicuous were the graduates who wore purple armbands, signaling their lingering belief that Mrs. Bush's life has epitomized the victory of fealty to family over feminist emergence.

Mrs. Bush got hearty applause when she said at one point: Somewhere out in this audience may even be someone who will one day follow in my footsteps and preside over the White House as the president's spouse. I wish him well!"

But while urging the graduates to pursue professional careers, if they so choose, Mrs. Bush warned, "At the end of your life, you will never regret not having passed one more test, winning one more verdict, or not closing one more deal. You will regret time not spent with a husband, a child, a friend, or a parent."

Speaking second, Mrs. Gorbachev's gave a serious, but upbeat, talk on the virtues of Soviet perestroika and the economic reforms undertaken by her husband, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"This vast and difficult task is a tough challenge, but we are confident that perestroika will succeed," she said. "... Its goal is to make ideals and values a reality."

Then, sounding some of the themes that Mrs. Bush hit, she spoke of "the values that bring us together," including love of country and children.

"If people in the world today are more confident of a peaceful future, we have to give a good deal of credit for that to women," she said.

Wellesleys' 112th commencement would have been momentous even without the student petition questioning whether Mrs. Bush was a suitable role model for the graduates of this elite Massachusetts college for women.

It was the first time the two first ladies ever shared a public platform, and Wellesley President Nannerl O. Keohane called it "another step in the glasnost that brings a new spirit of cooperation between our two countries."

The two first ladies later toured Boston, twice emerging from their limousine to wade into tumultuous crowds of well-wishers in Wellesley Square and outside Wellesley Middle School. They joined arms and held their hands aloft to the delight of the crowd.

After driving through Cambridge and by the Charles River past Harvard and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, they headed for Boston Public Garden, where children from Mather School, the oldest public elementary school in the United States, gave them copies of a classic children's book, "Make Way for Ducklings."

On the Wellesley campus, some graduating seniors had come up with a fresh protest Friday for Mrs. Bush — a letter urging her to "take a definitive and vocal stand" on abortion rights and other social issues affecting women.

Duck, pig top embassy dinner menu

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and his wife Raisa broke out their country's best wines to compliment a menu of roast duck, suckling pig and apple puff pastry for Friday's dinner honoring President Bush.

The Tsinandali Georgian white dry 1987 and Mookoozani Georgian red dry 1987, renowned in the Soviet union, were joined on the menu by the Soviets' golden champagne Zolotoye.

The Soviet Embassy, hosting the dinner a day after Bush and his wife Barbara hosted a black-tie state dinner for the Gorbachevs at the White House, started off with Russian fish hors d'oeuvre and roast duck stuffed with smoked meat, and consomme with dumplings and mushroom cream.

The Soviet Embassy released the menu Friday evening after tightly holding details in secrecy. The practice was even more restrictive than the White House procedure of holding details of its state dinner until just a few hours before the guests begin arriving.

Superpower arsenals retain overkill ability

By Stewart M. Powell
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Despite ground-breaking agreement to reduce long-range nuclear arsenals, the arms deal endorsed Friday by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev leaves the superpowers with more than enough nuclear overkill to annihilate each other.

The two nations would be allowed to retain well over two-thirds of their existing intercontinental-range nuclear weapons under the terms of the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START) outlined in a joint statement by the two leaders.

What makes the agreement significant, experts say, is that nuclear warheads must be gradually shifted off fueled-and-ready silo-based missiles that can be fired on three minutes notice onto less threatening systems such as submarines that fire missiles on 15 minutes notice and bombers that can be recalled enroute to targets.

The "agreement to agree" signified by a statement issued by the two leaders at the White House sets the stage for a formal treaty signing ceremony at a third Bush-Gorbachev summit in Moscow possibly by the end of the year.

The leaders are "recording major agreed provisions" of the strategic arms accord, Bush said, as well as committing the nations to subsequent negotiations on "nuclear and space arms designed to enhance stability and reduce the risk of war."

Gorbachev said the U.S.-Soviet accords represent "an event of momentous importance" for the world. Progress on arms accords is the "best demonstration" that the two nations are ready to participate in "building a new civilization," Gorbachev added.

Even after the seven-year implementation of reductions under the proposed long-range weapons accord, the two nations retain the leeway to restructure their mix of missiles, bombers and aircraft-launched missiles in a way that will give them the capacity to launch almost as many warheads as before the treaty.

According to estimates by the widely respected, independent U.S. Arms Control Association, the United States currently has 12,424 strategic nuclear warheads and the Soviets have 11,212.

If the nations built every "nuclear delivery vehicle" allowed, restructured U.S. forces could launch 11,636 warheads against Soviet targets and the Soviets could launch 9,658 warheads against U.S. targets, according to Jack Mendelsohn, a former government arms control specialist working for the private arms control organization.

U.S.-Soviet officials expect, however, that the improving East-West climate and deepening budget constraints will prevent each nation from fully exploiting the treaty. The U.S. Congressional Budget Office estimates, for example, that taxpayers could save up to $12 billion a year if the Bush administration scaled back plans to build new bombers, submarines and aircraft-launched missiles.

Behind the summit ceremonies, optimistic exchanges and pageantry, little has changed in the nether world of nuclear warriors where Doomsday preparations are just another day at the office.

A senior military officer trailed the president throughout the summit with the so-called "football" — a menacing black bag with the code cards required for launching a U.S. nuclear attack.

Gorbachev pledges to start Lithuania talks within weeks

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has assured President Bush that he will begin direct negotiations soon with Lithuanian leaders and expects to find a compromise in the standoff with the secessionist republic, officials said Friday.

Fedor Burlatsky, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet parliament, said Gorbachev told Bush during summit talks this week that "we will start negotiations very soon, perhaps not today or tomorrow but very shortly, within weeks. There is no other way to solve this problem."

He said Gorbachev expects to "find a compromise with them," referring to the leaders of the Baltic republic that declared independence in March, prompting Gorbachev to order a partial economic blockade.

A senior National Security Council official said Bush was pleased when Gorbachev volunteered the pledge and responded by telling the Soviet leader that "the important thing is to start the negotiating process."

On other matters, Burlatsky said he believed Bush and Gorbachev were near agreement on a "new model" for European security that would resolve doubts about the role of a united Germany, and predicted Gorbachev would make peace with political rival Boris Yeltsin.

On Lithuania, Burlatsky told The Hearst Newspapers that Gorbachev had stressed the need "to follow constitutional processes (in resolving the crisis) because this is not only the problem of Lithuania — it's the problem of the Baltic republics, of Moldavia and of the whole federation."

Burlatsky said Gorbachev pledged to end economic sanctions against Lithuania as soon as the republic's leadership agreed to begin direct negotiations, accepted the need for a two-year transition to independence and agreed to abide by the Soviet Constitution.

Treaty cuts mostly obsolete arms

By Robert Burns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The superpowers are billing their nearly completed arms treaty as a step toward ending the arms race, but private experts said Friday its value may be mainly symbolic.

The deal as agreed to in outline form by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev carries a potent political punch: It's the first treaty to reduce the number of long-range nuclear arms.

But by the time the pact is fully implemented, probably in 1998, analysts say both the United States and the Soviet Union may be nearly as well stocked with nuclear arms as they are today, unless additional treaties are negotiated before then.

The military significance of the emerging agreement is diluted by decisions to "discount," or exclude, some weapons from the counting rules, and to leave the road clear for both sides to develop newer versions of the arms to be destroyed.

Also, both Moscow and Washington have steadily added to their strategic arsenals throughout the eight years that negotiators have been working on the deal.

Previous strategic arms treaties, including the 1979 SALT II deal, put a cap on future deployments but did not require a cut in the overall numbers of weapons.

Some experts also are calling into question the value of the chemical arms reduction agreed to by Bush and Gorbachev.

Few, if any, doubt the importance of ending production of lethal gases and reducing each side's chemical stockpiles. But they wonder if the U.S.-Soviet deal will work.

The problem comes in destroying the chemical agents. The Soviets don't even have an operational plant that could destroy thousands of tons of poison gas. It's also not clear how the two sides will guard against possible hidden stocks.

The emerging nuclear arms treaty, as envisioned in the ealy stages of the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks during Ronald Reagan's first administration, would have made 50 percent cuts in U.S. and Soviet weapons capable of reaching each other's soil.

Now the best-case estimate is a one-third reduction. Some private analysts say the reductions could be only about 10 percent.

The scaling back of estimated reductions is due in part to decisions to exclude some weapons, such as certain air-to-surface missiles. from the counting rules.

Jack Mendelsohn, a former member of the U.S. delegation to START, estimates that the current U.S. stockpile of 12,400 strategic nuclear warheads could be lowered only to about 11,600 warheads by the late 1990s, based on current Pentagon plans.

The Soviet total would drop from 11,200 currently to about 9,600, he estimates.

In some categories of these weapons, including bombs and cruise missiles delivered by aircraft, both sides are likely to actually increase deployments, Mendelsohn says.

Crowds enjoy Gorbachev's impromptu handshaking stops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev hopped out of his limousine Friday and worked the crowds for a second straight day to the delight of passersby in downtown Washington.

"He was a very warm, very personal type of person," said Keith White, who was among those Gorbachev greeted on busy Connecticut Avenue.

Gorbachev's brief stop came as his entourage was returning to the Soviet Embassy from a summit session at the White House. He also left his limousine on Thursday, to the applause and cheers of a crowd of about 500 onlookers.

On Friday, Gorbachev greeted pedestrians about a half-block from the spot where he had surprised security agents in 1987 by doing the same thing.

Some people who remembered the 1987 incident had gathered there in hopes Gorbachev would repeat the performance.

The Soviet president shook hands with several people, at one point crossing the wide avenue to greet more people.

"As opposed to him being afraid, he initiated all of the conversations and the handshakes." White said.
