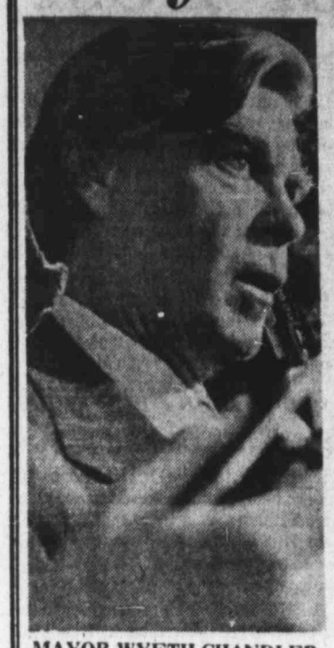
Defiant Memphis Police Continuing Walkout



MAYOR WYETH CHANDLER
Work Or Quit Ultimatum Issued

MEMPHIS (AP) — Snubbing a court order, an ultimatum from the mayor and a plea from their union, Memphis police officers Sunday extended their wildcat strike into a third day.

Non-union policemen, police supervisors and Shelby County sheriff's deputies continued to patrol the city of 650,000 residents, Tennessee's largest. Officials said the city remained calm Saturday night, the second under a dusk-to-dawn curfew.

About 600 Tennessee National Guardsmen who arrived in the city Friday from summer training at Camp Shelby, Miss., remained encamped at the Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium. Guard officials said the men, members of an artillery and a Miltary Police battalion, would not be used to patrol city streets unless city officials called for them.

Guardsmen were forced to fight fires in Memphis in early July when firemen staged a three-day strike that ended under a court order.

The striking patrolmen were ordered by a state judge Saturday to return to their jobs by Sunday morning or face dismissal.

Shortly after midnight, Mayor Wyeth Chandler told a news conference the judge's order had been ignored and the patrolmen would be removed from the city payroll. He gave officers a 24-hour grace period.

At about the same time, the striking patrolmen gathered several hundred yards away from the site of the news conference, shouted down their union president and rallied around a dissident leader.

"I'm sure they are going to play it until the end if they are going to honor it (the order)," said Lt. Jim Myers, a spokesman in the office of the police department's chief of operations.

Chandler said Sunday he was moving an 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew, imposed Friday, back to 10 p.m. so that night church services would not be disrupted.

The strike appeared to be taking its toll on the number of fans in town for the first anniversary of the death of Elvis Presley.

"Regardless of what kind of information comes out — the city saying everything is running normal and there's no problems — people are naturally staying away," said Dick Grob, chief of security at Graceland, Presley's home and the site of his burial.

The city had expected to be swamped with visitors during the weekend leading up to the Aug. 16 anniversary date. But Grob said only 5,000 people passed through Graceland Mansion's gates Saturday

Quake Hits Santa Barbara

Casualties Minor, But Damage Called Heavy

BLAST AFTERMATH — Remnants of a demolished nine-story building cling to neighboring walls Sunday in the wake of a huge explosion attributed to an interfactional dispute among Palestinian liberationist groups. (AP Laserphoto)

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — An earthquake knocked people off their feet in Santa Barbara and triggered fires, gas leaks, rock slides and apparently a railroad derailment Sunday afternoon.

There was at least one injury.

Property damage was labeled "heavy" but was limited to the Santa Barbara area, officials said. The quake was felt in three counties.

The tremor registered 5.1 on the Richter scale at the California Institute of Technology. Officials say a quake of that magnitude can cause considerable damage in the local area.

Authorities in Santa Barbara, 90 miles up the coast from Los Angeles, received calls from people who said the earthquake knocked them down.

A restaurant patron downtown was injured when the quake hit, officials said, but his condition was not known.

Rock slides closed several highways, said California Highway Patrol dispatcher Terrie Tucker. A road leading to the University of California at Santa Barbara broke apart in spots. Several land slides blocked Highway 154, which connects Santa Barbara to Santa Ynez.

Downed power lines sparked several minor brush fires outside the city limits, Mrs. Tucker said. Authorities said one fire broke out in a trailer park but was quickly brought under control.

A house roof collapsed in the Santa Barbara suburb of Isla Vista, Mrs. Tucker said. An auto dealer in Goleta Valley said he lost about one-third of his roof.

At the University of California in Santa Barbara, the jolt opened cases of snakes and they spilled out into a classroom. They were recovered without incident, said spokeswoman Darleen Thompson of the Santa Barbara County sheriff's department. In another building on campus, containers of some noxious chemicals were overturned. The fumes dissipated without harming anyone.

At nearby Ellwood, 20 cars and one diesel locomotive from a freight train went off the tracks, said Tom Buckley, spokesman for Southern Pacific Transportaion Co. Buckley said that there were no injuries and that no dangerous material was involved in the derailment. He said that although the cause of the derailment had not been ascertained, the accident occurred within minutes of the earthquake.

The clock on the Santa Barbara courthouse stopped at 3:55 p.m. Residents swarmed onto State Street, the city's main thoroughfare, and could see broken windows and other damage.

Burglar alarms wailed throughout the area, triggered by the broken windows.

Authorities summoned off-duty police and firemen. Businessmen were advised to check for damage, but to beware of the possibility of gas leaks. Supermarkets and restaurants reportedly were closing.

In the Santa Barbara News-Press building, the quake sent plaster and shelving flying from walls. Doors slammed without a push or pull.

The quake was centered six miles south of Santa Barbara in the Santa Barbara Channel, a spokesman for the Caltech Seismology Lab said. Authorites said shock waves were reported as far north as Palmdale and as far south as Thousand Oaks.

"Things are still swinging," said Jim Hayes of Los Osos shortly after the tremor.

The earthquake was not felt at the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant, 12 miles east of San Luis Obispo, said Don Bashaw, a security worker at the facility. He said the earthquake did not register on the plant's earthquake monitors.

New Mexico Balloonists' Flight On Schedule; Trio Optimistic

BEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — Dining on hot dogs and doughnuts and tossing red chili peppers over the side for good luck, three iron-stomached New Mexicans Sunday floated past the eastern edge of North America and said their helium-filled balloon was on schedule to become the first to cross the Atlantic.

Ben Abruzzo, 48, radioed his ground station at 9:30 a.m. CDT Sunday and said, "If you can get a message to my wife, tell her that everything is fine, we're doing super well, the weather's good, the sightseeing's been fantastic and we miss them all."

Abruzzo, Maxie Anderson, 44, and Larry Newman, 31, and their Double Eagle II were spotted at 11 a.m. directly over St. John's, Nfld., about 780 miles from where they took off Friday night at Presque Island, Maine. They were headed east over the North Atlantic, about one-fourth of the way to what they hope is a Thursday afternoon landing wherever the wind takes them in Europe.

The weather is the controlling factor in the effort. At midday Sunday the Bedford control center reported good, sunny weather with a thin high layer of clouds and a temperature of 45 degrees at the balloon's altitude.

"They're on schedule, doing very well," said Dave McClure, a spokesman for the group monitoring their progress from a National Weather Service station at Bedford.

The Albuquerque trio form the 18th balloonist team to try crossing the Atlantic. All others have failed and six men and one woman have been killed. Anderson and Abruzzo last year reached Iceland but were forced down by bad weather.

The last to try, Don Cameron and Christopher Davey of England, took off from St. John's and almost made it but had to ditch 110 miles west of Brest, France.

The Double Eagle II passed over the British team's launch site Sunday and dropped a chili ristra (string of red peppers), "a little present from the greatest place in the world," they said in a radio message.

The 112-foot-high silver and black balloon was traveling at an average of 20 miles an hour and was clocked at 17 mph over St. John's.

Deaths May Climb In Beirut Blast

By GEORGE A. KRIMSKY

BEIRUT (AP) — Firemen and searchers picked through the rubble of a nine-story building in the Palestinian quarter of West Beirut Sunday after a powerful bomb blasted the structure into a heap of concrete, twisted metal and glass.

At least 98 persons and perhaps as many as 160 were killed in the explosion, attributed to a continuing feud among Palestinians and termed the worst act of sabotage in Lebanese history.

Palestinian officials estimated the bomb contained more than 550 pounds of plastic explosive. The main target appeared to be a radical Palestinian splinter group supported by Iraq — the Palestine Liberation Front. Most of the group's leaders had left the building before the explosion.

"Operatives" Among Dead

The head of the front, 29-year-old Abul Abass, said 98 Palestinians were known dead, including 37 of his "highly trained operatives."

Sixty-three bodies still were buried under the smoking rubble Sunday night, and rescue workers said the death toll could be higher. Residents of nearby buildings also were among the injured, some in serious condition.

Eight residents of the bombed building, on the edge of the Sabra Palestinian refugee camp, survived, Palestinian officials said.

The 12:15 a.m. explosion shattered windows and knocked residents out of bed for a half-mile in all directions.

In Conflict With Arafat

Abass's pro-Iraqi extremists have been locked in a bloody feud with Yasser Arafat's mainstream guerrilla group, Al Fatah, mainly over policy toward Israel.

But Abass told The Associated Press he believed neither Arafat's group nor Israel was responsible for the bombing. He indicated it was the work of a pro-Syria splinter group called The Popular Front

Cleveland's Mayor Holding Slim Edge In Recall Vote

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich fought a nip-and-tuck battle for the right to stay in office Sunday night, clinging to tiny lead in the city's first mayoral recall election.

With all but two of Cleveland's 645 precincts reporting, Kucinich was ahead by 388 votes. There were 60,202 in favor of retaining the mayor and 59,814 for recall.

At one time Kucinich led by 3,500 votes and seemed a sure victor. Veteran Cleveland politicians predicted his margin would continue to grow.

But as the last few precincts were counted, his lead melted away. It was not determined which precincts had narrowed the margin.

Kucinich faced the recall after building a political career in 10 years of confrontation with city government.

One question was asked in the unique Sunday voting: "Shall Dennis J. Kucinich be removed from the office of mayor by recall?"

Voters chose between voting "For the recall of Dennis J. Kucinich," or "Against the recall of Dennis J. Kucinich."

The mayor's two-year term began nine months ago.

Kucinich, his eyes bloodshot, cast his ballot shortly after 9 a.m. at a westside Cleveland school near his modest home. He said he hoped the election would go well.

Councilman William T. Sullivan, a leader of The Recall Committee to Save Cleveland, said the ballot wording might have helped his cause.

"Some people who want to vote for Dennis won't understand the statement 'For ...'" on the recall ballot is a statement in favor of removing the mayor, not retaining him," he said.

The issue that overshadowed the campaign was the ability of Kucinich to govern.

The mayor Cleveland residents call "Dennis" built his political career through confrontation with the politicians he replaced. He won the office last Nov. 14 at the age of 31, to become Cleveland's youngest chief executive.

Once in office, he retained his brash style, as the city faced one crisis after another.

But on March 24 Kucinich set the stage for the recall attempt when he fired Police Chief Richard D. Hongisto during a televised news conference. Within a week, recall petitions were being circulated.

Hongisto, now in charge of the New York State prison system, arrived at recall headquarters on the eve of the election, saying, "I just wanted to see how things come out."

Kucinich had lured Hongisto away from his job as San Francisco sheriff on Dec. 14, hailing him as one of the nation's

Area Forecast Continues Warm, Dry

More very warm, dry days are forecast for the South Plains through Tuesday, as the National Weather Service predicts temperatures to continue to surpass the 90-degree mark.

The fair skies and middle 90-degree readings enjoyed Sunday by picnickers and sunbathers should return today and Monday as highs are predicted near 95.

Nights should be pleasantly cool with lows near 70. Winds should be 15 to 20 mph during the day, gusting from the south and southwest.

Still no precipitation is forecast for the South Plains through Tuesday, although scattered thunderstorms were reported along the Upper Gulf Coast. Relative humidity should range from 30 percent in the afternoon to 80 percent in the early morning hours.

The weather across other parts of Texas Sunday resembled that on the South Plains. Skies were mostly cloudless except in the Trans-Pecos region and the extreme northeastern portion of the state.

Temperatures were generally in the 90s with some 100-degree readings reported in north central and southern Texas.

Thundershowers kept afternoon temperatures along the upper coast in the upper 70s and lower 80s.

At 4 p.m. Sunday the extremes were 101 at Laredo and 77 at Beaumont/Port Arthur.

Wichita Falls recorded an even 100 at 5 p.m. as did Mineral Wells and Waco. Texarkana recorded only 80 degrees at 5 p.m. and Palacios was 89 under partly cloudy skies.

Elsewhere across the nation showers and occasional thunder showers reached from southern Atlantic and Gulf coasts through the Tennessee valley into southern portions of the Ohio valley.

A tornado skipped across Craighead County in northern Arkansas early Sunday, injuring two persons and causing widespread property damage.

Strong thundershowers also were spotted from northern Minnesota into North Dakota and from Idaho and western Montana into Utah and northeastern Nevada.

Temperatures continued to rise over much of the nation during the afternoon toward what is generally expected in mid-August. Portions of Oklahoma and Kansas reached 100 degrees by noon.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from 50 in Butte, Mont., to 105 at Wichita, Kan.

Skies were cloudy along the California coast and Los Angeles recorded a cool 71 degrees. The eastern seaboard also was cloudy and overcast, and Boston had a mild 73 degrees for its afternoon high.

The Southwest, though, was fair and residents of Phoenix sizzled under a 99-degree temperature.

Death Sentence Set For Soviet Plumber

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet plumber described as "a drunkard, a debauchess," has been sentenced to death for fatally shooting one man and wounding a second in an attempted robbery aboard a commuter train in the industrial city of Kuibyshev, a Soviet newspaper reported Sunday.

The newspaper, Sovietskaya Rossiya, said the plumber pulled a pistol on commuters and demanded their money. One man was killed and another wounded when they tried to wrest the gun from the plumber, the report said.

Women Vying For Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — A check of the major women's groups and some high-placed women in government shows there is great interest in the position left by Midge Costanza, special assistant to the president for women's issues.

Dozens of names have been submitted to the White House as possible successors but apparently there are no front runners. Rosalynn Carter and Judy Carter, President Carter's wife and daughter-in-law, are known to be playing a major role in the decision on the choice.

Miss Costanza resigned her $56,000-a-year postion last month, citing differences of style and approach with the Carter administration.

Carol Burris, head of Women's Lobby, a private group that lobbies Congress on women's issues, said she thought the White House probably would choose someone not strongly identified with the over-all women's movement. Some people believe Carter and especially his top aides don't have any interest in choosing a strong feminist who would push for action on most women's issues, Miss Burris said in an interview.

Some women already in the administration have been mentioned for the post, including Margaret McKenna, a White House counsel; Beth Abromawitz, a staffer on the domestic council, and Arvonne Fraser, founder of the Women's Equity Action League who now is a State Department official.

None of the women's groups has backed specific candidates but all are recommending persons they could accept.

Among those often mentioned include Anne Saunier, a Dayton, Ohio, business executive; Alexis Herman, head of the Women's Bureau in the Labor Department; Elizabeth Carpenter, former White House official under President Johnson; Jefflyn Johnson, a management consultant; Jane McMichael and Mildred Jeffrey, leaders of the National Women's Political Caucus; longtime Carter supporter Connie Plunkett of Georgia, and Kathryn Clarenbach, who was director of the staff for the National Women's Conference in Houston last year.

Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., said Miss Carpenter is her choice "because she knows this city backwards and forwards and knows how to make it work. She could move in and take over without any orientation needed — we don't have time for that."

Miss Saunier, who presided at some of the sessions at the Houston conference, is actively campaigning to be considered.

Last spring she was brought to the White House as a possible candidate to head the National Advisory Committee on Women.

After a day-long meeting with Miss Costanza and others, she said she wasn't interested because she didn't sense enough commitment on women's issues by key White House people.

In an interview last week, Miss Saunier said she received calls from across the country after Miss Costanza resigned, urging her to be a candidate for the job.

In a letter to Carter that acknowledged she was an outsider to Washington politics, she said she thought the job should be to "represent women's concerns in the broadest possible sense." That would take the advocacy role beyond the ERA and other issues such as unwanted pregnancies, battered women and rape, she said, to inflation and foreign affairs.

London Rain Ruins Hopes Of English Gambling Set

LONDON (AP) — The hopes of hundreds of gamblers were washed away here Saturday by a light rain. The William Hill bookmaking firm had posted five-to-one odds against London having dry weather for the two days ending at 10 a.m. Saturday. The rain started at 9 a.m.

England is undergoing its chilliest, grayest summer since the early 1960s. The bookmaking firm is now taking the same bet for the two days ending at 10 a.m.

Lobster 'War' For Real

TAKEN INTO CUSTODY — A Cuban-American fisherman, center (with cap), is put into a car by Bahamian police Saturday in Nassau. Bahamian patrol boats started rounding up lobster boats of the Cuban-Americans in waters the Bahamians claim, arresting the fishermen after escorting the boats back to Nassau.(AP Laserphoto)

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — They've been calling it a "war" for years. But not until Bahamian patrol boats with 3-inch guns opened up on Cuban-American fishing boats — seriously injuring a 13-year-old boy — did it seem like much more than a fishing grounds dispute.

"All of a sudden the Bahamian patrol boats started rounding up the lobster boats and shooting everything in sight," said Jim McMillan, a Florida sports-fisherman whose boat was caught up in the Friday-morning operation.

A Bahamian sailor leaped aboard "waving a .45-caliber pistol and shaking like a leaf. I thought they were going to blow our brains out."

round from a gunboat. His father was wounded. Ten boats were captured by the three gunboats and herded into Nassau.

The Bahamas government said the shooting began when "one or more" of the U.S. boats tried to ram the gunboats. It said the 30 fishermen taken in would be held without bail pending a Monday arraignment. At least seven were U.S. citizens, U.S. embassy duty officer Wayne Richmond said on Sunday, and most were believed to be Cuban-Americans from the Miami area.

They probably would be charged with illegal lobster fishing, Richmond said. He said their Miami fishing companies had hired lawyers for the fishermen.

State Department press officer Betty Ann Bader said, "The U.S. government has to make an investigation on exactly where the fishing boats were. If we felt that in some way their rights were violated then some protest could be filed."

McMillian, who lives near Fort Lauderdale, was interviewed by a U.S. embassy official Saturday in a Nassau jail. He and three guests on his 28-foot cabin cruiser, Novation, had planned a week of skin-diving and fishing near Great Isaac.

Great Isaac, site of a lighthouse, is in Northwest Providence Channel, which leads from the Florida Straits off Southwest Florida to Nassau on Providence Island.

The waters around Great Isaac abound in spiny lobster and such food fish as snapper and grouper. American-based commercial boats have been banned from it and all Bahamian-claimed waters for six years.

For the Cuban-Americans who are skilled at such fishing, it means they can fish neither the rich waters of their homeland, now Communist-dominated, nor the Bahamas.

Florida waters are too poor for commercial use, they say — "there are more lobster traps than lobster," says one. Their boats are generally not suitable for the long open-water crossings needed to reach Caribbean fishing grounds.

There have been minor skirmishes in the past, including some shooting by the Cuban-Americans. In late 1972, 20 Miami-based boats were caught on the Great Bahama Bank. A few shots were fired. There were no injuries. The waters were cleared of all but Bahamians.

Recently, some Florida boats again started defying what had been a poorly equipped Bahamian marine patrol. They were unmolested for a while, but the Bahamas government bought five new gunboats — including the 103-foot Flamingo that led Friday's sweep off Great Isaac.

Lazaro Perez saw the patrol boat in the distance and tried to flee. About 20 fishing boats got away, but his old boat was too slow and the faster gunboat drew near.

"The boat Flamingo started attacking me right then with spurts of bullets all at the same time," Perez told a Miami Herald reporter from a jail cell. He was slightly wounded, apparently grazed by heavy machine-gun bullets. His son Vladimir was nearly killed, he said, part of his head blown away.

The boy was in serious but stable condition Sunday in Princess Margaret Hospital in Nassau, Richmond said.

"Those bullets hit my son in the head," said Perez. "The spurt of bullets started again. I picked up my son and held him out in front of me and shouted, 'Look what you've done to my son. You've killed my son.'"

Second Subway Line Opens In Prague

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Only those persons who helped build Prague's second subway line were allowed to ride it on opening day.

Soviet-made trains will transport commuters nearly three miles from the city center into outlying districts for a 10-cent fare. The new line, under construction since 1973, is connected to the city's first subway line, completed in its southern district in 1974. The second subway line opened Saturday.

Abortion Foes Eye Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-abortion activity has increased significantly in Congress during this election year with abortion foes zeroing in on a new target — the middle class.

Anti-abortion groups scored their first victory in 1976 when Congress banned most government-financed abortions for the poor. Now they are trying to eliminate taxpayer-funded abortions currently available to the military and some other goverment employees.

Their long-term goal, they say, is to abolish or severely limit abortion in the United States despite the 1973 Supreme Court decision which declared it legal.

The spate of congressional votes on limiting federal funding of abortions is a sign of the growing strength of anti-abortion groups in the congressional districts, anti-abortion spokesmen say.

In the latest action, the House voted last week for an amendment that would have the federal government pay for abortions for military personnel and their dependents only if the woman's life is in danger. Pentagon officials said that proposal would eliminate virtually all of an estimated 26,000 abortions annually.

Earlier the House voted to cut off abortions for Peace Corps volunteers. The Senate has yet to address either of those issues.

The two House votes were samples of the way opponents of abortion hope to bring what they call "consistency" to federal policy. Both are aimed at non-poor groups who depend on the government for their health care.

Such amendments are "the only way to get the government out of the abortion business," Thea Rossi Barron, legislative director for the National Right to Life Committee, said in an interview.

Cory Richards, a Planned Parenthood policy analyst, said the new direction taken by abortion foes was expected. "The right-to-life groups have said all along that they intended to ban abortion in this country for everybody," she said.

Their campaign began in 1976 when Congress voted to limit Medicaid abortions for the poor to cases where a woman's life was in danger.

Although a less severe limitation was adopted in 1977, the House this year has again embraced the original set of restrictions.

The Senate, which generally takes a more lenient position on this than the House, has not yet voted on the matter although a Senate appropriations subcommittee has voted to allow abortions where medically necessary.

The Senate has refused to go along with the House in letting employers make the final decision about whether abortion should be covered in the health plans a company provides.

The issue, which arose in connection with a bill aimed at adding pregnancy to the list of disabilities for which medical coverage is provided, is dividing House-Senate negotiators who are charged with writing a final bill.

Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., who sponsored the amendment restricting abortions for military personnel, said, "If this is political suicide, it's sure a great feeling because if this (vote) sustains in (a conference) committee, I have saved human lives."

But Richards said the anti-abortion activity may backfire because more vocal and affluent groups will be hurt.

"If nothing else, it is serving as an educational process," he said, noting that Planned Parenthood has already received calls from women connected with the military who are concerned about the new restrictions.

Protests, Taxes And Rights

ISSUES RAISED by the Iranian students claiming and demanding rights to demonstrate in residential Lubbock have to be divided into two parts, one constitutional and one political.

The political aspects involve the use of tax money to pay attorneys representing the foreign dissidents.

The constitutional question involves the rights of those who might be disturbed in their homes by repeated "parades" such as the one staged last month.

It also revolves around the question of whether aliens are entitled to the same rights guaranteed "the people" and "any person" by the 1st, 5th and 14th amendments.

A federal judge gave the students permission to march around the temporary home of Iranian Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi here last month. Now, City officials are defendants in an attempt to make that order cover future demonstrations.

REPRESENTING the foreign students in court is the West Texas Legal Services office, a federal bureaucracy that is part of a nationwide network that few Lubbockites even knew existed.

It was spawned by a political climate under which "the poor," as defined by government decree, get free legal services for anything from divorces to social action.

Under current "guidelines," a member of a family of four making less than $150 a week can qualify for free legal aid and no one seems anxious to volunteer information about how much effort is made to check out an applicant's financial condition.

The Iranian students "qualified in the same manner that anybody coming into our office is qualified," a spokesman for West Texas Legal Services, which has 30 attorneys and a $1.5 million budget in five cities, told The Avalanche-Journal.

ASIDE FROM THE question of why any foreigner should be getting free legal aid at the expense of the American taxpayer, the political considerations go deeper.

How can an alien who can afford to be in this country for an education, and who can meet federal requirements that he show financial ability, qualify for legal aid?

Why should taxpayers be financing legal services for purely personal matters such as a divorce for anyone, even a citizen? Why should they finance suits against themselves on matters of social activism?

Why should the Taxpayer Revolt not rise up to smite Congress unless it wipes such extravagance out of the federal budget?

THOSE ARE JUST a surface scratching of the political issues raised.

The constitutional question cannot stop at the right of "the people" to peaceably assemble. Assuredly, a political subdivision is exercising a legal power if it sets reasonable hours and reasonable locations for such assemblies so that they do not interfere with the rights of other people.

Surely a municipality has a right to protect itself and its citizens from the threat inherent in the marching of masked persons carrying signs and placards which could conceivably be turned into weapons wielded by unidentifiable assailants.

Terrorism and anarchy are only one step removed from unrestricted demonstrations by masked persons.

We think the rights of the people, constitutionally and politically, are in danger of being trampled on by those who would stretch them beyond their true meaning.

JAY HARRIS:

The Vote Game...

ATTY. GEN. John Hill might ought to do more of his campaigning in backyards and on airport aprons.

At least, he seemed most comfortable in those settings during a visit to Lubbock last week.

Of course, the Demo nominee for Governor of Texas got in some licks at other points as part of his swing through Lubbock, at a news conference, an arms-length "debate" with Bill Clements, the GOP candidate who also was in town the same day, and at a session with the editorial board of The Avalanche-Journal.

But, he appeared more relaxed in the informal atmosphere of the Tom Wests' backyard out on west 21st, and later while waiting for a private plane to make it through the weather to take him and his wife, Bitsy, to Amarillo.

WE GOT A good closeup of the man on three of those occasions. The one on the west side of Lubbock's bustling Airport was the most revealing.

We bare no secrets when we say we were in a group shepherded by Lee Stafford, who until the recent primary was a leading drum beater for Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Today, people like Lee Stafford and other Briscoe backers all over the state, are among those the seemingly tireless John Hill is courting.

"Frankly," he told us as airliners roared into the twilight, "I sometimes wonder how we won. Gov. Briscoe had a fantastic organization going for him. His people really got out and worked."

Obviously, they didn't work hard enough. And just as obviously, the Uvalde rancher didn't have some pockets of the population sewed up.

One of those groups, Hill frankly admits, "which worked like the dickens for me" were Texas teachers. "Not because I had promised them anything I haven't been saying ever since I have been in state government," he says. "But because they felt they hadn't gotten a fair deal the past six years..."

THE FIRST time Hill walked into The A-J office, he listed Education as one of his top priorities.

Later, he was to become embroiled in "who said what to whom" in a session with Texas State Teacher Association spokesmen in return for the organization's support. But, it was not the teachers' vote alone which helped the wealthy attorney make it this far.

He had a lot of support from just the plain, ordinary people who had their own reasons for going against an incumbent "who hadn't raised taxes and who hadn't made anybody mad..."

Gov. Briscoe, it will be recalled, had attempted to plaster Hill with a "Briscoe for Texas, Hill for Taxes" slogan, accusing the latter of espousing programs which would necessitate a state income tax.

Hill seethed and reacted. "I knew a television station in San Antonio where the lighting and all was good, and I knew I wanted to write my own answer," he told us. And that he did.

HIS ANSWER, which we at the time thought was effective, directed voters' attention to the fact that Gov. Briscoe was asking for 10 years in office and in effect accusing the governor of trying to camouflage that fact by throwing up the income tax scarecrow.

Despite his frequent jaunts into this neck of the woods, the Attorney General is not exactly the guy next door to many West Texans. Many still perceive him as leaning several degrees left of center, if not the "wild-eyed liberal" some of his more caustic critics paint him, among them the GOP's Bill Clements.

Hill has shifted several of those degrees back toward center, at least in the way he says he sees the job ahead. Of course, he had room to adopt a more moderate mantle. After all, the liberals out there don't have any place else to go anyway.

THERE IS NO question that Hill, as most politicians, has the message from the taxpayers, and is reacting accordingly.

While saying he will keep his pledge to upgrade secondary school teachers salaries, he "will put higher education on hold for a couple of years, then take a look at where we are."

He also says he would look favorably on a proposal we have tossed at most state politicians, that being to fund special training for additional DPS people who would be experts in crime control and who, at the invitation of cities such as Lubbock, could move in and help mobilize an anti-crime program.

The attorney general would also set up one or two special state training programs, similar to the national FBI academy, for officers from over the state. He also has expressed an interest in a nursing school for Tech's Med complex.

WE SAVED the "hot potato" for the last. "What about President Carter?"

After saying he had met with the President and felt he could have effective input with him as regards Texas' eneergy needs, Hill dropped the other shoe.

"However, unless he makes some major changes, starts doing some things differently, I couldn't support him for renomination..." He hastened to add if Carter is the nominee, "That will be a different story. But, he needs to make some changes..."

It's still a long, tiresome road before Nov. 7, for both Hill and Clements. At the moment, Hill has to be the favorite. But, he's taking nothing for granted.

After all, he was something of an underdog himself the last time out.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

The GOP And Blacks

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The chill among members of the Republican National Committee after NAACP executive director Benjamin Hooks finished addressing them in Detroit recently was really aimed at national chairman William Brock.

Hooks told the Republicans what they did not want to hear: the only way they can compete with Democrats for the black vote is to advocate racial quotas and turn against the tax revolt.

For Republican politicians excited over Proposition 13 and Kemp-Roth, Hooks was saying that the price of wooing blacks was to alienate the white, middle-class Republican constituency and abandon traditional Republican principles.

Committee members asked: why did Brock ask Hooks to speak anyway? In broader terms, they wondered whether the national chairman's quest for black votes is not only futile but potentially damaging by inhibiting Republican positions on quotas and school busing.

THIS RAISES A question of overall strategy for reviving the long comatose Republican party: by trying to imitate coalition tactics that have served the Democratic party for two centuries, is the GOP violating its basic nature as a party of American homogeneity just when that characteristic might become politically successful?

Actually, Brock is easily the most popular national chairman since Ray C. Bliss was sacked by President Nixon in 1969. Apart from scattered grumbles about the swelling bureaucracy at national headquarters, his industry gets high marks.

Brock's first, highly publicized quest for black votes also won praise. Committee members envisioned an election day harvest when the Rev. Jesse Jackson addressed them last January, saying what they wanted to hear by extolling self-help and excoriating Democrats.

ONLY GRADUALLY has the cost of Brock's strategy become clear. Seeking black votes, he has carefully avoided any position on the Bakke case or on racial quotas generally.

While engaged in a quest for black votes, he was ignoring potentially more fruitful courtship of whites (including many Democrats) furious that the quota system aimed at helping blacks was discriminating against them.

The high cost was candidly spelled out by Ben Hooks in Detroit.

"You cannot win black votes," he told the Republicans, "unless you are prepared to take black people and their interests seriously. Black America will vote their interests."

That means, he added, "the Republican party will have to change."

HOOKS DID NOT waffle: "It is not sufficient to remove 'roadblocks to equal opportunity.' A map must be drawn. Timetables must be set. Goals must be established for advancing minorities to positions in every profession, every career and every school."

In other words, the Republican party must embrace racial quotas if it wants black votes.

Oppose "the Proposition 13 strategy"; support tax legislation "to close loopholes that advantage the wealthy"; oppose welfare cuts; support the Humphrey-Hawkins bill for full employment; invoke economic sanctions against South Africa; support "freedom for the Wilmington Ten."

AS HAWKS TICKED off these demands, the frown on the face of Mississippi's veteran national committeeman Clarke Reed deepened. To Reed, Hooks was calling for the Republicans to become a Democratic clone.

But apart from Republican difficulty in embracing the NAACP program, Reed worried that the party was heading down the wrong road in Detroit.

The theme was sounded at lunch the next day when columnist Michael Novak, an expert on ethnic politics, addressed the committee. Brock was taking dead aim on the ethnic preserves of the Democrats.

BUT ETHNIC solidarity is declining, especially among young people—with the conspicuous exception of the black and Latin minorities.

Considering this homogenization of American society, a broad Republican approach based on lower taxes, and appealing to blacks and Latins as to all other Americans, looks more profitable than mimicking traditional Democratic ethnic politics.

The Democrats drew even with the once dominant GOP and then passed it by capturing the immigrant vote. Now, as most Americans move toward far more homogeneity, realistic political analysis shows that a new Republican opportunity may be at hand.

ANDREW TULLY:

An Amen Corner

WASHINGTON—A black neighbor who calls himself, accurately, "a working bureaucrat," represents the third side of the controversy over tuition tax credits to aid parents of private and parochial school pupils.

"I'm the relatively poor guy who has never been polled by George Gallup," says Philip. "But I'm sure I represent a good many black parents for whom a tuition tax credit would be a godsend. I've got four kids attending Catholic schools. The tuition is relatively low for such high quality education, but we're struggling to get it up. In fact, I'll have to take out a bank loan this year."

Philip could send his children to Washington public schools, but he won't do so. "They're just not good enough," he says. "And they're dangerous."

AS A MIDDLE-income lawyer with a government agency, Philip feels he should not engage in public debate. Besides, he wouldn't have much clout.

But he argues along the same lines as a man whose words should carry plenty of clout. That man is James Coleman, a sociologist and professor at the University of Chicago, who directed a massive study favoring school desegregation in the mid-1960's.

Speaking at a Washington desegregation forum recently, Coleman said he favors the tax credit —voted by the House but bitterly opposed by the Carter administration—because it would "increase the range of choice of low-income black parents."

Noting that large-scale public school integration is unlikely in big cities, he argues that the tax credit would give black children "the opportunity to escape from schools that hurt them."

Coleman won't buy the argument that the credit would promote segregation by threatening the "quality" of public schools and mainly benefit middle-and upper-income groups.

HE REMINDED HIS audience that "a very large number of black children" already attend low-tuition Catholic schools in big cities such as New York, Chicago, and Washington "with generally positive education results."

Of the charge that the tax credit would be detrimental to public education, he called it "not a valid argument. Anything that allows for an individual to have greater opportunity can't be bad for the country."

This distinguished educator, one of the forefathers of integration legislation, also produced a shocker. He declared that school desegregation overall since 1954 has had "no effect" on educational achievement of black students.

"In the absence of turmoil, there seems to be an achievement increase," he said. "But this has been counterbalanced by reduced black achievement in places where desegregation was accompanied by conflict and fear and distraction from study."

WHERE INTEGRATION has been the most successful, according to Coleman's studies, is in well-disciplined schools headed by strong principals.

He argues that a black pupil didn't have higher achievement in mostly white schools because his classmates were white, but because of the middle-class background and education resources "the white children brought from home."

Finally, Coleman put his finger on one of the big problems so seldom mentioned by the social engineers of school integration. And that, of course, is the personal equation.

"Parents and children," he said, "have a better sense of what's a good school context for them than do the professionals who must deal with a very large number of children. I trust the parents and children more than the professionals."

AN EDITORIAL:

Demo Party Ranks Dwindle

WHETHER THE percentages in one of the latest polls hold or not, the figures pose future problems, not only for the Carter Administration, but Democrats in general.

In a recent nationwide survey, asking persons across the land their party affiliation, only 43 percent identified themselves as Democrats, while in 1976, the last presidential election year, half of the voters wore the symbol.

The other side of the coin is even more impressive.

FIFTY-ONE percent of the voters now consider themselves to be either Republicans or Independents. In 1976, only 46 percent claimed one of these two designations.

And while these are not massive changes in the lineup, nevertheless they are significant because that under President Carter and a heavily controlled Democratic Congress, the party in power has lost millions of loyalists.

But, the change is significant when it is noted that traditionally the Democrats have enjoyed a near two to one edge in party affiliation in recent times.

IRONICALLY, IT is among some key minority or pressure groups that the Democrats have suffered the greatest losses.

Among blacks, Democratic affiliation has now slipped from 80 to 66 percent, a drop of 14 points in two years. Democrats have slipped from a 58 percent rating to 49 percent.

And among women, Democratic Party affiliation has skidded from 54 to 42 percent. To cap it off, in the South, the change has been from 62 to 52 percent.

ACTUALLY, AS has been the case for several years, both of the major parties have been losing converts to the so-called Independent ranks.

This group, made up of a growing middle class, white collar and "blue collar elite" now are more likely to "vote the man" rather than the party.

It is also these groups which feel more threatened by the heavy emphasis on integration, more and more Big Brother type government and heavy spending—all of which many now associate with the Democratic party.

It will be interesting to see if the Democratic defections are translated into opposition votes this Fall and in 1980.

ART BUCHWALD:

Weighty Problems Keep Think Tank On Its Toes

MARTHA'S VINEYARD, Mass.—We have a think tank on Martha's Vineyard.

Because most of the foundation money in the country has dried up we do not have an official building and must hold our meetings on the beach.

But the weighty problems of the world are still discussed in depth.

He said that at the present rate of production there would be 300 billion more test tubes in the world in the year 2000 than there are today.

IF EACH ONE of these test tubes were used to produce one baby there would not be enough food to supply the world's population.

A woman who heads up the Planned Parenthood Society of West Tisbury said her organization was willing to support a program to put a limit on the number of test tubes made in any given year.

This met with an immediate response from the pro-test tube advocates, who asserted that it was a sin to interfere with new test tubes.

"By destroying test tubes," one of them said, "you are impeding the forward march of chemistry. We will not stand idly by and see anyone break a test tube which could someday be used as a means of fertilizing an egg."

A DEAN FROM MIT tried to find a middle ground.

"We should not ban the manufacture of test tubes by law. What we have to do is educate the world's population that it must face the consequences if it uses test tubes indiscriminately.

"We must strive for zero-base test tube manufacturing goal, and only replace those that have been broken or lost in laboratories."

The Planned Parenthood spokeswoman would have none of it.

"In my opinion we should sterilize every test tube that comes off the line. We can't allow them to proliferate and endanger the whole human race."

"Who are you to say what we should or should not do with glass? The test tube is one of the greatest miracles of mankind. By sterilizing test tubes you are interfering with the laws of nature.

"Our organization will fight for the right of any glass company to make as many test tubes as it wants to."

The Harvard professor said, "I believe this is a serious mistake. We know from our research figures that most of the major powers would not take advantage of their test tubes.

"But we must think about the Third World countries, which in many cases cannot feed their populations now. If they can get a large supply of test tubes God knows what they'll do with them.

The meeting broke up in anger. The pro-test tube advocates started making signs for a demonstration in front of the Martha's Vineyard Hospital.

And a chemistry professor from Yale said he and his team were now working on a pill that could be put in a test tube to prevent anything sexual happening.

...Pass It On

WHEN YOU MAKE a circle with your thumb and forefinger, you mean everything's all right. It's different in Japan. The sign means you're talking about money. And when you so signal in France, you're saying something's worthless. Don't even want to talk about what it signifies in Greece. Am too bashful.

Embezzlement is a modern crime. In Olde England, a man who misused his employer's property couldn't be convicted of anything, not if that property had been turned over to his care. The courts had to come up with a law to protect the businessman from his own hired help. So they invented the crime and called it embezzlement.

MOURN POPE'S DEATH — Mourners pray in front of the tomb where Pope Paul VI was buried Saturday. The tomb, located in the grottoes of St. Peter's Basilica, was opened to the public early Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Public Pauses At Crypt

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Thousands of pilgrims filed into the crypt beneath St. Peter's Basilica Sunday, many pausing to pray at the simple stone slab that marks the burial place of Pope Paul VI.

Roman housewives and African diplomats, black-suited seminarians and long-haired youths in blue jeans walked down the two flights of stairs into the Vatican grottos in an unbroken stream that began when the basilica opened at 7 a.m. and ended only when the grotto was closed at 5 p.m.

U.S. first lady Rosalynn Carter, who represented the administration at Saturday's funeral, was among those touring the basilica Sunday before boarding a flight back to Washington.

Mrs. Carter did not visit the crypt, but paused at Bernini's canopy and the Altar of the Confession, marking the site where the Apostle Peter is believed to be buried.

Visitors to the grotto filed past the ornate marble sarcophagi of Popes Pius XII and John XXIII, then reached the arched chapel where Pope Paul VI was buried. Workmen labored through the night to place a layer of bricks on the tomb and then top it with a slab of Roman travertine limestone.

"You note immediately how small and simple it is in comparison with all the papal tombs around the place," said Ines Ricci, a Roman art teacher. "But this makes it even more striking."

Pope Paul had written in his will he wanted to be buried in the "true earth" in a simple tomb with no monument.

"Yes it is. Don't you see it is written on the tombstone," he replied.

"It is so simple, simple as he had been during his life," said a Roman woman.

Many knelt and prayed, others paused in silence. Some carried candles and bunches of flowers.

Many also paused and prayed in front of the tombs of Paul's predecessors, Pius and John. Their sarcophagi are decorated with flowers and burning candles all year round.

Tom Zimmer, 40, a bearded Philadelphian who has been living in Italy for many years, looked on, then said: "Pope Paul was a quieter character than Pope John but I think just as great. It is an excellent tomb for man like him."

Others thought that, despite his wishes, Pope Paul's tomb should have been more elaborate.

"I think they could have decorated it a little more. The others are so lavishly decorated," said Chris Branbent, 20, of Birmingham, England.

At noon sharp, St. Peter's massive bell, the "Campanone," tolled signalling the Vatican had no pope. The bell usually tolls at noon each day except Sunday.

Sunday at 6 p.m. Cardinal Giuseppe Siri, the archbishop of Genoa, presided over another Requiem Mass for Pope Paul in St. Peter's Basilica, the second in a nine-day mourning period that started with Saturday's funeral Mass. Forty cardinals and several thousand people attended Sunday's service.

In the homily, Cardinal Siri told the cardinals that electing a pope is more than a matter of impulse and sentiment.

"There remains human responsibility," he said. "I think it is my duty to turn to the venerable brothers of the Sacred College and remind them that the task we are getting down to would not be decently fulfilled by saying: 'Let the Holy Spirit see to it' and indulge — without work and without sufferance — in the first impulse and in irrational sentiment."

Two more cardinals — Maurice Roy of Quebec, Canada, and Alfredo Vicente Scherer of Porto Alegre, Brazil — arrived to take part in the election of the new pope. A total of 112 cardinals are expected to take part in the secret voting, scheduled to start Aug. 25. Three cardinals, including American John Wright who is currently in a Boston clinic, reportedly will not come to Rome for health reasons.

Mrs. Carter and representatives of 109 other foreign delegations that attended the pope's funeral went to a reception Sunday morning held by the College of Cardinals.

Cardinal Carlo Confalonieri, dean of the Sacred College, thanked them for attending the funeral and "for the loyalty you will sure keep to the successor of Paul VI and to the Catholic church, which will continue to serve men, inspired by gospel."

After expressing the cardinals' "emotion and gratefulness," the reception ended and many of the delegations left Rome.

Bad French Art To Go On Display

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There isn't much praise in art circles for the work turned out in France between 1850 and 1870, but the Philadelphia Museum of Art is going to put it on exhibit anyway.

"This period is regarded by many as the bottoming out of taste," said Joseph Rishel, curator of European painting, who quickly adds that he disagrees.

A silver and enamel encrusted cradle of the Prince Imperial, a jasper, gilded silver and Repusse enamel vase lavished with nymphs and cherubs and an ornate ship-of-state trophy presented by Empress Eugenie to the designer of the Suez Canal are among the offerings.

In an appropriately opulent display, with period music and yards of plush drapery, "The Second Empire: Art in France under Napoleon III" will begin Oct. 1.

Custom, History Responsible For Choosing Italian Popes

NEW YORK (AP) — The question often arises as to why the popes of the world-wide Roman Catholic Church are nearly always Italians. The answer lies in history, geography, politics and just plain adherence to custom.

There are reasons for it, but no rule about it. The office is an international one, open to any man in the church, from anywhere. Circumstances are such this time that it could go to a non-Italian.

Yet the record, and expectations, are against it. Of the 252 popes counted by the church in the last 2,000 years, all but about 40 of them have come from the Italian peninsula.

Furthermore, an exclusive Italian grip on the papacy has prevailed solidly for the last 455 years. Why that long, dominant hold on the office, since it serves a world church?

It's partly "a kind of historical accident," says Catholic historian James F. Hitchcock of St. Louis University. "It got started and seems to have become self-perpetuating."

Yet it also has some intrinsic roots and causes, he and others note, some of its derivations tangible, others more subtle. For one thing, the Pope is the Bishop of Rome, among other titles.

Consequently, it's considered normal for him to come from the region of that city. In the earliest centuries of Christianity, Rome's bishop was elected by the city's people and clergy.

Internationally, Rome for centuries also was the seat of empire, as well as the central see of the church, another factor that led to the tradition of popes being Italians.

This was the case of the last two non-Italian popes, Pope Alexander VI of 1492 to 1503, a Spaniard and member of the machiavellian, powerful Borgia family, and the Dutch Adrian VI of 1523 who died after 20 months in office, resented for his aggressive reform efforts.

Previously, the church had gone through a troubled period when French kings kept the papacy in Avignon, France, for 73 years from 1305 to 1378, identifying it with French interests and leaving a lingering distrust of so-called "Frenchification."

This was followed by 40 chaotic years of schism in which there were two, and sometimes three, rival popes, an upheaval resolved only by the Council of Constance which in 1417 elected Pope Martin V, an Italian. He returned, finally, to Rome.

The church's cardinals have been electing popes since the 11th century, sometimes under domination of emperors.

Generally, the cardinals have been heavily Italian, controlling the Vatican's central administration, its various cabinet offices of the Curia, and, significantly, also electing the popes.

But the Curia has been considerably internationalized recently under Pope Paul VI and the College of Cardinals expanded extensively among other nationalities — a shift heightening the possibility of a non-Italian pope.

Cabinet Group Approves West Bank Settlements

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli Cabinet committee has recommended construction of five new military settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River but the plan has not been approved by the government, officials said Sunday.

Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor said the Ministerial Committee on Settlement "decided to establish" the non-civilian settlements in the Jordan Valley, but Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin, filling in for vacationing Prime Minister Menachem Begin, opposes the plan.

Yadin told Israel state radio he will bring the matter up at next week's Cabinet meeting and if it is approved he will take it to the Knesset's Defense and Foreign Affairs Committee. The Knesset is the Israeli parliament.

Israeli settlements established on Arab territory seized by the Israelis in the 1967 war are a major issue in the deadlocked Israeli-Egyptian peace efforts.

Under the coalition agreement that brought Yadin's Democratic Movement for Social Change into the government, the party can challenge decisions by the cabinet committee.

The Cabinet statement was released following reports on Israel radio and in the Israeli press about the plan for the new settlements.

Begin refused comment on the plan before leaving on vacation except to say "No important decision" had been made on the issue.

Shortly after Begin took office last year he turned over authority on settlements to a committee headed by Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon, who is considered a hawk. The committee quickly approved three settlements that had been built without the previous Labor Party government's approval. After American protests, Begin returned decision-making power to the full Cabinet.

The radio report said three new settlements would be built in the Jericho area and two others to the north, near Mekhola and in the Jiftlik area. No timetable was given for constructing the outposts, the radio said.

According to the reports, the settlements would bolster a string of outposts along the Jordan River designed by the former Labor government as a security belt to stop terrorist infiltration from Jordan. The area is sparsely populated and is part of the West Bank territory the Labor government wanted to keep for security reasons in any peace agreement.

Although Naor stressed that the settlements would be military and not civilian, Israel radio said Sharon met two weeks ago with representatives of Israel's five collective-farm movements to ask their help in recruiting Jewish settlers. Only the left-wing Mapam movement refused his request, the radio said.

The right-wing Gush Emunim movement apparently was not involved. It claims God-given rights to settle anywhere in the West Bank and has pushed for settlements in the central sector that has a large Arab population.

Israel now has about 100 settlements on land captured from Jordan, Egypt and Syria during the Six-Day War of 1967. The United States has calledthe settlements illegal and obstacles to peace, while Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is demanding their removal.

Members of Israel's Peace Now movement wants Begin to make concessions on the issue at next month's U.S.-Israeli-Egyptian summit meeting at Camp David, Md.

In Kuwait, a newspaper reported the Carter administration has asked Begin and Sadat to prepare "security maps" for the Camp David meeting based on their concepts of a Mideast peace. In a report from Washington, the Al-Qabas newspaper said Washington will unveil a plan of its own with provisions for the security of Israel as well as neighboring Arab states.

President Seen As 'Scapegoat'

NEW YORK (AP) — One of President Carter's top advisers said Sunday the American people tend to "make the president the nation's scapegoat for things that go wrong."

"There is a tendency in this country to blame the president for everything, including the rain outside," said Stuart Eizenstat, assistant to the president for domestic affairs.

Interviewed on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program, Eizenstat said Carter's continuing slide in the polls reflects a post-Vietnam, post-Watergate mentality that has led to mistrust of elected officials.

However, he also acknowledged that the administration has been unable to push its domestic program through Congress this year. "We are not satisfied with the pace," Eizenstat said.

He attributed the administration's legislative difficulties to a "marked decline in party loyalty" in Congress and still-evolving relationships between the legislative and executive branches of government.

On other matters, Eizenstat said:

—Carter will wait to see how the Senate treats tax legislation before deciding whether to sign it. He predicted that a House-passed tax bill adopted last week over an administration-backed compromise, will be changed "substantially" before Congress completes action on it.

—There will be a "tailing down" of inflation during the last half of the year.

Paper Benefits From New York Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — A newspaper that credits the Rev. Sun Myung Moon as its "founding inspiration" has skyrocketed from obscurity to the largest in the city because of the strike which has idled New York's better-known dailies.

The News World — a secular paper owned by several businessmen who are members of Moon's Reunification Church — is reaping the benefits of a pressmen's strike against the New York Times, the New York Post and the Daily News. Negotiations to end that strike were scheduled to resume Monday.

"We always said we needed a miracle to get the paper really going," said Larry Moffitt, a News World spokesman. "I guess all three papers being on strike at the same time is a miracle."

Five days ago, before the pressmen struck over publishers' plans to change work rules, 50,000 copies of the News World were circulated daily, Moffitt said. Now, with news-hungry New Yorkers reading anything they can find, Moffitt says the News World's circulation has skyrocketed to 300,000. The paper is printed under contract at a plant outside the city.

Display advertising is up, and classified advertising has jumped 1,000 percent — "faster than we can set type," Moffitt said.

"A lot of people who would get their jobs through the New York Times will be getting their jobs through the News World," he said.

Suburban and out-of-town newspapers have also increased their circulation during the strike. The Philadelphia Inquirer added 60,000 copies to its press run. The Wall Street Journal, which is based in New York but prints its locally distributed edition in South Brunswick, N.J., added 17,000 copies to its usual press run of 76,000.

Several local weeklies have become thrice-weeklies, and an interim daily newspaper, "City News," is scheduled to appear Wednesday.

But the News World is the strike's only real success story. The paper struggled along since it was established in December 1976. According to Moffitt, the newspaper has lost $6 million since its inception.

Part of the reason, staffers agree, was the newspaper's image as a "Moonie paper." The majority of the News World's staffers are young members of the Reunification Church, but the paper has no column or section devoted to religion.

Moon did not want religious matter in the News World — the only editorial suggestion the evangelist has ever made, Moffitt said.

The newspaper costs 10 cents, and has a clean, modern appearance and many color photographs. But Paula Gray, the newspaper's city editor and a member of the Reunification Church, said many news dealers did not want to carry the newspaper because of its link with Moon.

"Even on the ones who did accept us begrudgingly, we'd be stuck between the Racing Form and Hustler magazine," said Gray.

Now, with the strike, "Morale on the staff is very high. At the end of the day the other day, we all sat there completely exhausted ... Just the responsibility of having that many people reading the paper," she said.

The paper's 120 employees have reason to be tired. When the paper was first established, reporters and others hawked it on the streets. That policy was soon abandoned.

Now, Moffitt said, newsroom employees are again peddling the paper. Gray said she believes the new-found prosperity will last.

"Perhaps, because we only cost a dime, we can persuade people to keep us on as a second newspaper after the strike," she said.

NATO Bids To Improve Network

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Ten years after the Soviet invasion that crushed Czechoslovakia's brief experiment in liberalization and took NATO intelligence by surprise, the 15-nation Western defense bloc is finishing an overhaul aimed at making sure it isn't caught napping again.

Improved intelligence and communications, crisis management exercises and better cooperation among member nations are designed to make the alliance more alert than it was just before midnight Aug. 20, 1968 when Warsaw Pact troops rolled into Czechoslovakia.

But NATO still suffers from an assortment of inefficiencies, including its need for 15-way political consultation in an emergency and disparities among its member armed forces. Some of these problems are under study in a "long-term defense program" for the 1980s. But others may never be solved for fear of compromising the independence of member nations.

NATO military men for months had monitored the Soviet and Warsaw Pact maneuvers near Czechoslovakia that underlined Soviet displeasure with the liberal government of Alexander Dubcek. But the military failed to predict when the invasion would come, and some NATO political strategists believed the Soviets would not invade at all.

When it did happen, the Soviets scored what American Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, then commander of NATO forces, admitted was a "tactical surprise."

In many cases, press reports of the invasion moved faster than NATO's own intelligence and communications. Then-U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, testifying at a congressional hearing, apparently first learned of the invasion in a wire-service dispatch rushed to him on Capitol Hill in the late afternoon (Washington time) of Aug. 20. The U.S. ambassador in Paris found out about it only after a delay of several hours because of a communications foul-up. The British government got its first word from the Soviet ambassador in London.

Some key officials working at the NATO headquarters in Brussels were unaware of the invasion until they were awakened by reporters seeking more information.

Once some member countries began receiving information from their own intelligence sources, they did not share it with the alliance for the use of all member countries. As a result, NATO officials say, it took 24 hours — until evening on Aug. 21 — for NATO intelligence experts to assemble a cohesive picture of what was happening.

Meanwhile, NATO did not use the information it finally received on the invasion to make tentative military preparations of its own. As 300,000 Warsaw Pact troops stood in readiness just across borders from NATO countries, there was no immediate move to put the NATO armies on alert.

NATO's consultative North Atlantic Assembly, in a study published last year, said NATO at least could have gone into its "military vigilance" status — a readiness level in which all headquarters are manned 24 hours a day and staffs are recalled from leave. It said warning time must not be wasted in any situation where Warsaw Pact troops are mobilized near NATO frontiers.

The invasion, which impressed NATO officials with the Warsaw Pact's ability to mount a large operation in almost total secrecy, led to a re-thinking of NATO's preparations for a sudden crisis.

NATO's "situation center" in Brussels has been revamped in the past 10 years and is now manned 24 hours a day by professional situation-watchers, as opposed to the less well trained officers who used to rotate through a few days of duty a year. Officials say the amount of intelligence flowing through it has tripled since 1968.

The alliance's communications system has been upgraded sharply and now includes three communications satellites. By 1988, a multi-million-dollar NATO Integrated Communications System should permit instant voice communications with any NATO capital or headquarters, even to low-level field commanders.

NATO also has upgraded its bi-annual exercises, some involving government ministers, designed to practice political and military consultations in an emergency. NATO sources say member countries have begun contributing more key intelligence to NATO's common pool.

NATO has moved to strengthen its military forces against a future crisis, pre-positioning heavy equipment for U.S. troop reinforcements and correcting some of the problems in sharing equipment among different armies. A program is underway to strengthen NATO forces in northern Germany, a likely flashpoint in a NATO-Warsaw Pact conflict.

But NATO's biggest potential problem in a crisis cannot be prevented with communications, exercises or troop buildups. It is the need for consultation and substantial agreement among the 15 member nations for any concerted military action in an emergency.

Each NATO nation still has sovereign control over its armed forces — a far cry from the centralized command of the Warsaw Pact — and this can always slow NATO's responses to a fast-developing situation.

Aid On Way For Texans

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The mayor of this northern Indiana city has asked residents to help flood victims in South Bend, Tex., with donations to the American Red Cross.

Mayor Peter Nemeth called upon city residents to donate funds to help pay for temporary housing for an estimated 200 persons driven from their homes in the North Texas town by the flood-swollen Brazos River last week.

Dick Bowman of the American Red Cross here said Saturday that the local chapter is not seeking food supplies or clothing because of the difficulty in tranporting the items. Contributions will be used to help pay for the cost of housing the residents who have been moved to motels, he said.

Rain, Air Havoc Botch Summer Exits For French

PARIS (AP) — The people of France are lamenting the storm clouds and air traffic slowdowns that have disrupted their almost holy pilgrimage — the August summer vacation.

While a rotten August would be merely an inconvenience in most countries, to Frenchmen it is like canceling Christmas.

CATASTROPHE!, screamed a headline in the French daily France Soir. The more sedate Le Figaro labeled the summer washout. "Rotten."

Not since 1933 has France seen so little sunshine.

Few countries take their summer holidays as seriously as France.

On Aug. 1, traditional starting date of the summer exodus, 14 million cars hit the roads, causing traffic jams up to six miles long. More than one million people out of a population of eight million left Paris, to be replaced by hundreds of thousands of tourists.

"This year things are just terrible," complained the owner of a rain-drenched sidewalk cafe in Paris' Montmartre district, a favorite tourist haunt. He estimated his business was down 35 percent from last summer.

Worst of all is the havoc that has hit airports in France and elsewhere in Europe because of a series of slowdowns by French air traffic controllers. The men who police the air lanes over France are demanding more money, more manpower and more up-to-date equipment.

Two weekends ago, about 500,000 travelers suffered delays of one to 58 hours.

The controllers staged another rulebook slowdown this weekend, but the impact was not as great because airlines rerouted traffic out of the strike zone.

Usually, Paris closes down in August. Government offices work with skeleton staffs, local shops hang out their "closed for vacation" signs, and the usually bustling rush of Paris traffic thins out so that suddenly there are parking places on the Champs Elysees.

But Parisians who headed for the countryside this year might have been better off staying home.

Dozens of campsites have been flooded. In Normandy, three persons drowned. And where it wasn't raining, forest fires raged through thousands of acres. At least 50 homes had to be evacuated in central France. French air force planes were called out to drop water on fires along the northeast coast of the French island of Corsica.

According to meteorologists, Paris had 498.4 hours of sunshine in May, June and July — the least in 45 years. In the first nine days of August, 1.1 inches of rain fell on the capital, which usually sees only 2.1 inches in the entire month.

But not everyone is complaining.

Paris' famed Louvre Art Museum and the Invalides Military Museum each reported a 10 percent increase in visitors and two department stores said they were selling 300 umbrellas a day — up 50 percent from last summer.

Troops Battle Guerrillas

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — South African troops and black nationalist guerrillas fought a running battle in the northern sector of this disputed territory, the military command reported Sunday.

Maj. Gen. Jannie Geldenhuys, commander of South African forces in South-West Africa, said three soldiers and five guerrillas were killed in the clash that occurred "in the past 24 hours."

"The battle broke out after a patrol of the security forces had caught up with a band of terrorists whom they were following," Geldenhuys said. He also reported a civilian was killed earlier by a landmine, but gave no further details.

Guerrillas of the South-West Africa Peoples Organization have been engaged in low-key guerrilla warfare against South Africa for several years seeking independence for the territory, also known as Namibia.

The old League of Nations gave South Africa a mandate in 1920 to administer the territory, a former German colony, but the United Nations terminated that mandate in 1966 and subsequently recognized SWAPO as the sole representative of the area.

Airport Confusion Lessened

By The Associated Press

The chaos caused by a French air traffic controllers' slowdown, which has disrupted European air traffic and inconvenienced travelers for the past several weeks, was minimal this weekend as authorities canceled flights and laid on amenities for stranded vacationers.

Air Inter, the French domestic airline, said it canceled 40 percent of its weekend flights.

The hardest hit of the French airports was Charles de Gaulle in Paris where 44 out of 236 scheduled flights were canceled, 26 of them by Air France.

At Bordeaux, a major crossroads for flights to and from Spain, about 45 percent of Sunday's flights were canceled.

Delays averaged only about 30 minutes at London's Heathrow Airport, Britain's largest. But Britons in other areas, fleeing an unusually bad summer that has had less than two-thirds the normally limited ration of sunshine, were encountering delays of six to 12 hours on Sunday flights to Mediterranean points.

Airport officials said they expected the situation to worsen as late flights to sunny lands were delayed even further on the return trip.

In Spain, aviation officials reported airports were nearly normal after Iberia, the national airline, canceled many flights to Europe. Iberia canceled 42 flights Friday, 38 Saturday and 14 Sunday.

At Majorca, mecca of many holiday travelers, the takeoff rate was one plane every 10 minutes compared to the normal average of every five minutes. Nearly 400 flights were scheduled Saturday and Sunday, most of them charters.

Only three flights were canceled at Orly airport in Paris, and a few minor delays were reported. Part of the reason for the cancellations was a decline in customers.

"We thought we'd make a fortune this weekend, but we've made very little," said a salesperson at a duty-free shop at Orly.

Gilles Rougy, representative of the controllers' union which is demanding better pay and better equipment, said "nothing has changed" in its bargaining with the government. "We are awaiting the resumption of real negotiations."

For those stranded in Britain, at least, authorities were prepared. Besides more places to sit down and rest, there were magicians and movies to take weary minds off the long wait. And for a rare treat Sunday, the sun came out in southern England and stayed most of the day.

Omaha Rec Center Has Short Life

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — About four years after it was constructed at a cost of $271,000, the Martin Luther King Center will be demolished to make way for an extension of a freeway. The center, opened in 1975, was built to provide recreation and day-care facilities for North Side Omaha neighborhoods.

Government officials involved in the decision to build the center say they knew a freeway might someday be built in the area. But they defend the decision, saying it was a gamble that did not pay off and that the center will be replaced with Interstate highway money which is 90 percent federal funding and 10 percent state funds.

Lawyers' Ads Get Paltry Response

BALTIMORE (AP) — Marylanders apparently are not interested in choosing a lawyer through "slick" advertisements, according to a legal firm which says its ads haven't paid off.

"It's not the bonanza that everybody thought it would be, which is a surprise," said William R. Schmidt of Cawley and Schmidt, which operates a group of low-cost legal clinics on the East Coast. After an initial spurt of slick commercials on radio and television last winter and spring, advertising by Maryland lawyers has diminished.

In 1900 when McKinley was President, there were 76 million people, 18 million horses, 4,000 autos and less than 10 miles of concrete highway in the United States.

Ray To Explain Denial Of Involvement

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Earl Ray will be given a chance at the House Assassinations Committee's first public hearings this week to detail his statement that he did not kill Martin Luther King Jr.

Ray, appearing under tight security, will be the star witness as the committee begins hearings on its investigation of the assassinations of King and President John F. Kennedy.

"We'll question him on his story and on what evidence corroborates it or disputes it," said Delegate Walter Fauntroy, D-D.C., chairman of the subcommittee that is conducting the King investigation.

Ray pleaded guilty to killing King in Memphis April 4, 1968, and is now serving a 99-year sentence in Tennessee.

But Ray has publicly recanted his confession and has contended he was set up by a man he knew only as Raoul to take the blame.

Security for Ray's hearing is so tight that only reporters and people already cleared will be allowed in the hearing room.

Reporters have been warned not to move as Ray is being brought into or taken from the hearing room. Metal detectors will be set up at the doors.

"We are custodians of a person on whom no chance will be taken that he will not get back to Tennessee," a committee spokesman said at a briefing.

The first witness Monday was to be the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy who succeeded King as leader of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

He was to set the scene with testimony on why King was in Memphis and events that preceded the assassination.

A pathologist is to give details Tuesday of the shooting that killed King.

Then Ray gets the witness table for the rest of the week and the committee says it does not know itself what to expect.

The spokesman, who does not want to be named, said Ray's testimony is scheduled for the three days if it is relevant to his involvement in the assassination but "may last an hour" if Ray and his lawyer, Mark Lane, try to get off on to other issues.

Ray's story as late as last Thursday afternoon was the same as it has been for years, with one or two details added in recent months.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson said Ray told him and other black leaders at Brushy Mountain State Prison then that Raoul sent him away from the rooming house from which Dr. King was about to be shot to get a tire fixed.

Ray repeated his story that he heard on the radio on the way back that King had been assassinated, Jackson said.

He said Ray claims an unnamed businessman can testify he was at the service station.

Jackson said Ray also says he has a photograph of Raoul and that a woman who was across the street now says Ray was not the man who fled from the rooming house after the murder.

The committee resumes hearings after Labor Day with a month of testimony on the assassination of President Kennedy. Three more weeks of hearings on the King assassination are planned for November.

Computerized X-Ray Overuse Charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Computerized X-ray equipment is going into widespread use without good medical evidence that benefits justify costs, and no government agency has adequate authority to control expensive new medical technology, according to a congressional study.

The Office of Technology Assessment, Congress' scientific advisory arm, said in a study released Sunday that the government would have to develop new regulations and cost-control measures if it didn't want similar situations in the future.

The report concerns the rapid introduction and use of X-ray devices alternately called computed tomography (CT) or computerized axial tomography (CAT) scanners.

CT scanners take X-ray images of thin cross sections of the head or body. These images are reconstructed by computer into three-dimensional slices displayed on a television screen. Medical authorities agree that the images often are superior to conventional X-ray films.

Industry figures indicate that more than 1,000 of these machines, costing about $400,000 each, have been installed in the United States since they were introduced commercially in 1973. The OTA report said the annual expense of operating a scanner ranged from $259,000 to $379,000 in 1976.

Congress asked OTA to look at CT scanners because they have become a symbol of the costly medical technology and tests that can escalate the price of health care, particularly if overused.

Critics, such as Ralph Nader's Health Research Group, have asked the government to place a moratorium on hospitals buying CT scanners until further study shows whether they save money in the long run by cutting hospital stays and replacing more costly procedures, or result in better treatment and improved patient survival.

"As is typical for medical technologies, well-designed, prospective studies of the efficacy of CT scanners were not conducted prior to diffusion," the study said.

The OTA report said that from June, 1973 to October, 1974, less than five scanners per month were installed. But from July, 1975, through the present, the installations jumped to 19 per month.

The report said there is good evidence CT scanners are relatively safe and improving the diagnosis of problems concerning the head, such as tumors and blood vessel disease. Brain scans also are replacing some older, painful and more threatening diagnostic procedures, such as cerebral arteriography, it said.

However, the report continued, many more CT scans are performed than necessary to simply replace other diagnostic procedures.

"CT head scanning has produced a considerable net increase in the total number of procedures performed," the study said.

In 1976, a CT scanner averaged 3,000 examinations a year at an average fee that ranged from $240 to $260 per head scan, it said.

The OTA suggested several policy alternatives Congress might consider to control introduction of new technology and assure prudent use.

Included in these were establishing a formal process for examining the efficacy and safety of medical technology before it gets wide use and seeing that decision makers have this information early.

Congress also might consider giving a regulatory agency the power to narrowly limit the allowed uses of some technology or the lawmakers could expand existing regulations calling for review of anticipated capital expenditures by hospitals.

Other alternatives involved possibly linking Medicare and Medicaid service payments to efficiency or even restructuring the entire federal health payments system to fix a health provider's revenue in advance of giving care.

German Ties Exist Despite Barrier

BERLIN (AP) — Leaders of West Germany and West Berlin, speaking Sunday on the 17th anniversary of the erection of the Berlin Wall, called it a monmument to shame but said human ties are stronger than the heavily guarded barrier.

Communist East Germany built the wall to stop East Germans from fleeing to the West.

"We know we will have to live with the wall for a long time," West Berlin Mayor Dietrich Stoppe said in a nationally televised statement, but the bonds linking East and West Berlin "are much more powerful than the power politics which now divide us."

He said that since 1972, when West and East Germany reached normalization agreements, the Communist regime has permitted 20 million visits by West Berliners to friends and relatives across the wall.

"The wall remains a monument to shame, but the situation has changed" since the cold-war days of 1961, Bonn Minister of State Hans-Juergen Wischnewski said in a television interview.

He said East Germany, now recognized by Western nations that had ignored it until 1972, finds the wall an embarrassment in its international dealings.

West Berlin leaders placed wreaths at several spots along the wall where East German guards have shot persons trying to escape to the West since 1961.

Neo-Nazis, Leftist Opponents Clash

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Police detained about 40 persons Sunday during scuffles between neo-Nazis and left-wingers at a rightist political rally here.

Police said the most serious incident occurred when an afternoon rally in a city square by 300 supporters of the neo-Nazi National Democratic Party was heckled by left-wing opponents who chanted slogans, blew whistles and hurled paint at NPD speakers.

After the meeting, groups of rightists and leftists began fighting and throwing stones in side-streets adjacent to the square. Police arrested four demonstrators involved in the fighting and detained 10 others.

Police also arrested 26 masked and helmeted men who they believed were planning to disrupt the NPD rally.

Supporting Israel May Cost U.S.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The United States risks losing President Anwar Sadat's moderating influence in the Mideast by continuing its unwavering support of Israel, a confidante of the Egyptian leader said Sunday.

Anis Mansour, editor-in-chief of October Magazine, wrote in his weekly editorial that if Arab ranks are reunited "the moderation, wisdom, realism and long-breath diplomacy that President Sadat and other Arab countries in the area have followed will disappear."

This, Mansour wrote, is "a new threat to American interests in the whole region, and Israel is not worth this huge sacrifice..."

Reports of renewed efforts to cement Arab solidarity — shattered by Sadat's trip to Jerusalem last November — followed the surprise visits to Egypt and other Arab countries recently by Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia.

Fahd's travels to Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Iraq generated unconfirmed reports he was trying to set up an Arab summit of reconciliation in Riyadh, the Saudi capital.

Saudi Arabia wields considerable power in the Arab world and is a key bankroller of the Egyptian, Syrian and Jordanian economies and military machines.

Despite the reported reconciliation effort, the Saudis welcomed the forthcoming Camp David summit arranged by President Carter. Both Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin have agreed to attend talks starting Sept. 5 at Carter's Maryland mountain retreat.

Fahd described the summit as "a courageous step and an encouraging indication reflecting the American president's good intentions and the sincere desire of the United States to play a more effective role to reach a just solution that could bring peace to the region."

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, after meeting with Sadat in Alexandria last week, said the United States would be a "full partner" in the upcoming summit.

Fans To Commemorate Elvis' Death

By SUSAN WHITE

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — The sobbing and hysteria of a year ago are gone, but thousands of Elvis Presley fans, still clutching flowers and memories, plan to gather outside the home of their musical king to pay a quieter kind of homage on the first anniversary of his death.

It will be a year Wednesday that the man, adored by millions, was found alone on a bathroom floor of Graceland, his 18-room mansion — the victim of a heart attack.

The death of the 42-year-old Mississippi farm boy — whose legend made him seem bigger than life — stunned a world of Presley fans and touched off a period of mourning almost unrivaled for any entertainer.

Radio Luxembourg canceled all commercials the night of his death and played nothing but Presley albums. In Tokyo, television announcers wept as they read the news of his death. Tributes to the man, who left the United States only when he served in the Army in Germany, were aired frm Tel Aviv to Uruguay. His obituary was run in Moscow.

Because of the outpouring of worldwide grief, Vernon Presley, the 63-year-old father of Elvis, decided that his son should be shared with his public.

The musical note gates of Graceland, that had once guarded the Presley privacy, were thrown open, and the fans — who had tried every imaginable way to enter the grounds during Elvis' lifetime — were allowed to walk up the winding driveway to the white-columned house.

More than 20,000 were taken, four at a time, into the music room of the mansion, where the superstar — dressed in a white suit with a blue shirt and a white cravat — lay in a simple copper coffin.

Another 60,000 mourners — some of them screaming, sobbing and fainting in the 90-degree-plus heat — never made it inside. A police helicopter hovered over the 14-acre estate as officers with bullhorns begged the crowd to stop shoving as the wrought iron gates swung shut, ending the public portion of the funeral.

Hundreds of transistor radios blared the songs that carried Presley's rise to fame during the 1950s, such as "Hound Dog" — which sold 11 million copies — "Don't Be Cruel" and "Heartbreak Hotel."

Some of the fans refused to leave, maintaining an all-night vigil on Elvis Presley Boulevard, a heavily-trafficked street that runs in front of the mansion. The wait cost two young women their lives when they were struck by a car driven by a drunken teenager.

As time for Elvis' funeral grew closer, the crowd of wailing fans grew larger. An estimated 100,000 mourners clogged the four-mile route from Graceland to Forest Hills cemetery where Presley was to be entombed in a mausoleum.

Celebrities like Ann-Margret, Burt Reynolds and George Hamilton, as well as Presley's former wife, Priscilla, and his 9-year-old daughter Lisa Marie, attended a private service in the home.

The rose-covered coffin of Presley was then carried by six pallbearers to a white hearse, which joined a 49-car funeral procession for the drive to the cemetery. After another brief, private service, the coffin was sealed. Later, the body of Presley's mother, Gladys Love Presley, would be moved to the gray marble mausoleum.

Several months later, following an unsuccessful attempt to snach the entertainer's body and hold it for ransom, the bodies of both Elvis and his mother were moved to Graceland on orders from Vernon Presley.

They were buried in a courtyard adjacent to a swimming pool at the side of the house. A small fountain, religious statues and a stone wall containing stained-glass depictions of religious scenes encircle the simple bronze plaques that mark the gravesites.

"He became a living legend in his own time, earning the respect and love of millions," the grave marker says.

A year after his death, the Presley legend is even greater than in his lifetime.

More than half a million fans have walked through the tiny meditation garden to see his grave which is always adorned with flowers from fans across the world.

Another 100,000 Presley followers are expected in Memphis this week. Motels that were filled to overflowing a year ago once again have no rooms. Fan clubs from Belgium, Japan and England booked blocks of rooms for the weekends before and after the Wednesday anniversary.

Florists, who had to use special planes to fly in flowers when a sea of more than 2,500 arrangements were ordered for the Aug. 18, 1977 funeral, anticipate orders of 1,200 or more hound dogs, guitars and teddy bears as tributes to the man who sold more than 600 million single records and made 33 movies grossing $150 million.

Also on hand will be Presley memorabilia hawkers and profiteers, who arrived outside the gates just hours after his death to sell their wares. The offerings this year are unlimited — as are the prices.

"King of rock n' roll" swizzle sticks, and refrigerator magnets, frisbees and alarm clocks — all emblazoned with the sultry Presley profile — cost less than $5. Gold medallions bring $500.

Restaurants, shoe stores and beauty shops, located across the street from the mansion, now all offer Presley memorabilia. Bill Tidwell, owner of the Beef and Liberty, decided to follow suit and convert his restaurant.

"What we want to do is help turn this thing away from a carnival atmosphere," he said. Tidwell thinks he can do this by building a wax museum.

Tributes planned for the week are so numerous, fans could make a full-time career out of their Presley worship. One three-day Elvis Presley Convention will give fans an opportunity to talk with two men who knew their hero on a first-name basis. Dick Grob, who oversees security at Graceland, and Charlie Hodge, who played guitar for Presley for more than 20 years, will be available for questioning at the convention that will feature 65 booths of Elvis memorabilia.

Grob said, however, that nothing special is planned at Graceland for the death anniversary.

"We may close it down for a few minutes to allow the family a few moments of privacy, but that will be it," Grob said. The mansion is open every day, except Monday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Grob, who served for years as a bodyguard on Elvis' tours, knows he will have to answer on the anniversary the same questions that have been asked ever since the day his boss died.

"You have to relive Aug. 16 several times a day," Grob said. "The fans are well-meaning, but they asked the inevitable questions. It's like living Elvis' death minus the hysteria," he said.

"People still find it hard to believe that a man 42 could have a heart attack. Yet they just have to believe he can't be brought back."

Presley was born in Tupelo, Miss., Jan. 8, 1935, one of a pair of twins, to Gladys and Vernon Presley. His mother said: "We matched their names — Jesse Garon and Elvis Aron. Jesse died when he was born. Maybe that is why Elvis is so dear to us."

Presley was introduced early in life to the world of music, appearing along with his parents at church camp meetings, revivals and conventions.

The family moved to Memphis when Elvis was 13. He attended the L.C. Humes High School and worked as an usher in a local movie theater. After graduation, he took a job at $35 a week driving a truck.

His career had a humble beginning when in the summer of 1953, Elvis stopped into the office of Sun Record Co. in Memphis and paid $4 to cut a record. He took the record home and played it over and over again.

A year later another record, "That's All Right, Mama," drew some attention but was not a big hit. His next recorded song, "Blue Moon Of Kentucky," did better. A shrewd promoter named Col. Thomas Parker took over management of Presley and toured him throughout rural areas under the monicker "The Hill Billy Cat."

Elvis' big change of fortune came in the fall of 1954 at the annual convention of the Country and Western Disc Jockeys Association in Nashville. Steve Sholes, head of RCA Victor's specialties division, heard Presley's records at this meeting — and believed he would be a winner. Sholes approached Sam Phillips, chief of Sun Records, who had Elvis under contract. He offered him the then unheard-of sum of $35,000 for the masters of all five of Presley's records for RCA-Victor. What's more, he gave Presley a bonus which permitted the youth to buy the first of a long string of Cadillacs.

Victor broke all previous precedents by releasing the five records simultaneously ... and history was made. Elvis changed the course of popular music with such hits as "Hound Dog," "Don't Be Cruel," "All Shook Up," and "It's Now Or Never." The long-sideburned youth, with undulating lips, snake eyes, demi-sneer, skintight pants, gyrating pelvis and electric guitar made a particular dent in teenage consciousness with the tune, "Heartbreak Hotel."

From the years 1956 through 1958, the American Bandstand poll ranked Presley the nation's most popular male singer. He received $1 million apiece for filming four successful movies: "Love Me Tender," "Loving You," "Jailhouse Rock," and "King Creole." The pictures, combined with his records, made his name a household word.

In 1958 Presley began a two-year hitch in the Army. He served in Bad Nauheim, Germany, where he rose to the rank of sergeant.

New records he had made before his induction were judiciously released while he was abroad, and his popularity still was high upon his return to civilian life and a fresh spate of movies. When those started to lose audience appeal, Parker arranged special TV appearances.

Presley was meantime becoming richer and richer, driving about in a Rolls Royce and five Cadillacs — white, pink, blue, canary yellow and gold. His house in Memphis, and a Grecian palace he purchased in Bel Air, creaked with pinball machines, pool tables, and jukeboxes.

In 1967 he married Priscilla Ann Beaulieu, and they had a daughter the following year. The couple separated in 1972.

Presley went into semi-retirement during the late 1960s, with 400 million records and 31 films to his credit. When he made a brief reappearance in the limelight in 1972, he found his fans still faithful.

The teen-agers of the 1950s had grown up and his career was rejuvenated by sellout performances at posh Las Vegas showrooms and concert appearances across the country.

But health problems began to plague him.

Presley was hospitalized for 16 days in 1973 for "recurrent pneumonia" and hypertension. Two years later he spent 17 days in the hospital for an intestinal blockage caused by a "twisting of the lower colon." Following treatment, Presley returned to hectic concert tour, but later in 1975 he spent another 16 days in the hospital.

His last hospital visit was four months prior to his death for gastroenteritis. After his release on April 6, 1977, his personal physician, Dr. George Nichopoulos, pronounced him in "excellent shape."

He was examined again — less than a week before he died — and was pronounced fit.

But then, after an early-morning game of racquet ball on Aug. 16, 1977, Presley collapsed and died four minutes after being struck by coronary arrhythmia — an irregular beating of his heart.

Mild hypertension, which had plagued the singer along with weight problems for more than four years, contributed to his death, according to Shelby County Medical Examiner Dr. Jerry Francisco.

Doctors said Presley had never shown any signs of heart problems but an autopsy revealed indications of coronary arteriosclerosis, a hardening of the coronary arteries.

Presley's Unexpected Death Boosted Memorabilia Market

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Elvis Presley's sudden death a year ago created a lucrative market for souvenirs of every conceivable shape, size and description.

While much of the mourning for the rock 'n' roll king has subsided, "Elvismania" continues to flourish.

The list of Elvis souvenirs is endless — paintings, bumper stickers, cars, jewelry, records. The late singer's multitude of fans are buying it all.

Presley, who died Aug. 16, 1977, had been dead only hours when profiteers arrived outside his Graceland mansion to hawk bumper stickers to the throngs of disbelieving fans who flocked to Memphis from everywhere.

Those $1 stickers and the flood of other Presley momentoes sold in the months since the superstar's death have — besides lining the pockets of merchants — preserved the legend of the rags-to-riches entertainer.

A Delaware firm, the Presley estate and freelancers are cashing in on the mushrooming demand for Elvis tokens.

Soon after the entertainer's death, Factors Etc. Inc., of Bear, Del., bought exclusive marketing rights to the Presley souvenirs from Vernon Presley, Elvis' father, and Tom Parker, his business manager, for $100,000 plus royalties.

At a memorabilia fair held in January, on what would have been the singer's 43rd birthday, the wares ranged from 25-cent packages of bubble gum containing Elvis pictures to $500 gold medallions emblazoned with the sultry Presley profile.

There were also ceramic decanters that look like hound dogs and play "Love Me Tender," and trash cans with the lament, "The King Lives Forever."

A Memphis liquor stoge turned a sizable profit on an Elvis statue filled with bourbon, selling the last fifth for $129.95 in July. Asked who bought the expensive remembrance, the proprieter said, "I didn't care as long as I got the money."

Newspaper and magazine ads still carry offers of Presley's first records on the Sun label, 1957 Presley charm bracelets and $20 silent, 8 mm movies of the Las Vegas wedding of Elvis and Priscilla Beaulieu (whom he later divorced), and Presley getting a crewcut before he entered the Army.

The incredible demand for Presley memorabilia prompted two Memphis newspapers, The Commercial Appeal and Memphis Press-Scimitar, to print a special 12-page edition of Presley stories and pictures. Almost 1,600,000 of these sold for 50 cents apiece in the first three months after his death.

The copies now bring $2 and $3 at the souvenir shops that have sprung up along Elvis Presley Boulevard with their inexpensive but popular Presley trinkets.

Bill Tidwell, owner of the Beef and Liberty restaurant directly across from Graceland, decided to join his neighbors in their quest for a share of the dollars by converting the restaurant into an Elvis Presley wax museum and souvenir shop.

But outsiders aren't the only ones to capitalize on the Presley mystique. Dee Presley, former wife of the singer's father, hopes to release her story of Elvis by next month and Vester Presley, Elvis' uncle, has already completed his book, "A Presley Speaks."

The first 10,000 copies of the 140-page book, which sells for $10, sold out in three weeks. A second printing is planned.

The most publicized Elvis book, "The Minstrel" by eccentric millionaire Bernard Benson, was delivered to fans in a chauffeur-driven white Cadillac for $125. The book, illustrated with handrawn stick figures, is a child's tale about a man with a golden voice.

Just as popular are the numerous Elvis imitators appearing in nightclubs and concert-halls wherever Presley fans are found. Some, like Bill Haney of West Memphis, Ark., performed their acts before Presley died, but most have taken to the stage since then.

A Honolulu car salesman was so devoted to Presley that he underwent plastic surgery in February to look like the late rock star. Dennis Wise's nostrils don't flare as wide as Elvis' did, but otherwise the resemblance is striking.

Wise says he intends to market his new face in a nightclub act and donate some of the proceeds to a Presley museum.

"A lot of people have been making a lot of money off Elvis Presley since he died," Wise said. "Everybody has been taking and nobody has been giving."

Fans Inundate Home Of Elvis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — He'd chased an obsession across a continent and somewhere along the way he'd fallen 10 minutes behind. At Graceland Mansion's wrought-iron gates, a short march down the winding driveway that leads to Elvis Presley's flower-bedecked, brass-plaqued grave, he'd come up short.

"I've done closed," Vester Presley told him. "We close at 4."

"We've come 4,000 miles," the black-suited pilgrim said. His sun-washed face twisted in an aching expression, the perspiring personification of desparate disappointment.

"We are closed folks," gatekeeper Presley said. "We are open in the morning at 9."

Turning back to a visitor in the air-conditioned, brick blockhouse roost he's ruled for 21 years, the late singer's 63-year-old uncle said, "I'm having hell to keep people from running in on me. It's going to take us until 6 to get them all out of here. I hate to do that but they never stop coming. We'd be here around the clock. I tell you, when I get a break, I'm ready to go home 'cause it's rough here."

Kneading a right arm swollen by hundreds of handshakes, Vester said, "We are running around 10,000 a day. Yesterday we had 11,000 people and we turned 5,000 more away. The 16th is going to be more than we can handle, I'm afraid. We are going to open early and close late. We are going to do everything we can do. We are just going to tour that day and keep it as quiet as we can."

That day is the first anniversary of the king of rock 'n' roll's death by irregular heart beat at age 42. In the memory garden on a knoll behind the white-columned home, under the watch of 24 private police, rest Elvis and his beloved mother, Gladys. Admission is free.

Already, each summer sun rises on a line of anxious fans waiting for admittance. Before it hits its 95-degree-hot zenith, they'll be three and four abreast and the queue will wind a half-mile down Elvis Presley Boulevard. Some of the women hugging the low wall guarding the grounds will faint in the mind-frying heat, some of the men will fight and many will while away the wait thickening the three coats of graffiti on the baking bricks.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK93 ♡7 ◇AK872 ♣KJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a strong hand, but beware of precipitate action. The fact that you have a singleton in partner's suit should make you leery of a possible misfit. A bid of one spade will suffice for the moment—unless partner can take some voluntary action, it's unlikely that your side has the values for game.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K74 ♡QJ8752 ◇KJ103
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Game is a live possibility, so your hand rates a forward-going move. You don't want to raise spades with only three-card support if you can avoid doing so, but neither your hand nor your heart suit is good enough for a jump rebid. The solution is to find another forcing bid, and two diamonds fits the bill perfectly. Since it is a new suit by responder, opener is forced to bid again.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQJ982 ◇AQ83 ♣72
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—You surely want to be in game, and slam if partner has the right cards. Therefore, we suggest a jump shift to two spades. Usually we do not recommend this action when you do not have a fit for partner's suit, but here your spade suit is self-sufficient so you know where you are going to play the hand.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J762 ♡852 ◇A9754 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—At no trump, your hand is unlikely to produce many tricks for partner. Since it's doubtful from the auction, that partner can run nine tricks, we would revert to four spades. At that contract you can at least contribute a couple of ruffs to your side's cause.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ10732 ◇9 ♣AK1093
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. There is nothing about partner's bidding to suggest that you can make a slam. To come to twelve tricks, partner must be able to cover all of your losers in both black suits. He has shown something in hearts, which is useless to you, and he certainly does not have the ace of diamonds. The trouble with making even one move is that the five-level could be too high.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠72 ♡AJ83 ◇K7 ♣AK1094
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Your hand is not strong enough to reverse into two hearts, so it is a question of choosing between two clubs and one no trump. We prefer the former, because it highlights your good five-card suit—a key feature of your hand.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠4 ♡AJ10762 ◇AQ832 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♡	2 ♠	?

What do you bid now?

A.—We would not blame you if you decided to launch straight into Blackwood and then bid slam if partner shows an ace. However, that runs the risk of missing a grand slam, so that would be our second choice. We prefer a quiet bid of two diamonds. One a good day partner will raise to three diamonds, and now, if in response to Blackwood partner shows two aces and two kings, we would venture seven hearts in the hope that the second king was in diamonds. If not, the grand slam would be, at worst, on a finesse.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ10874 ♡6 ◇8652 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Your hand can play in spades, and nothing but spades, so we would rebid three spades. If partner rebids three no trump, we would persist with four spades. At no trump you might not furnish a single trick for partner.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I lost both parents before I was 30 so this letter is not a personal gripe, but I have a wide circle of friends who are carrying a load of guilt laid on by self-centered, demanding elderly parents. My heart goes out to them.

A typical situation is where the mother cannot stay alone after the husband's death, so a member of the family must be enlisted or someone hired to stay with her. She has never worked and has no marketable skills. She doesn't know how to drive and must be chauffeured everywhere on a moment's notice. She feels her errands are more important than the grandchildren's orthodontist appointments and piano lessons, or her daughter's church meetings.

Dad cared enough to make her happy and now she is "in the way" and it is her son's or daughter's fault she feels unwanted and unloved.

The idea of going to a retirement home is out of the question. Mother views this is being dumped in a terrible place to be gotten out of the way.

Some time ago you wrote an article for a national magazine. It was reprinted in condensed form in another national magazine. The title: "What Do Parents Owe Their Children?" It was one of the best pieces I have ever read. Now will you please write another article on the subject: "What Do Children Owe Their Parents?" Believe me, a great many people need help with this problem. — A Pittsburgh Reader

Dear Pitt: I recently wrote the piece you requested because so many people asked for it. The title is, would you believe, "What Do Children Owe Their Parents?"

The magazine is available at your newsstands at this very moment. P.S. Thank you for writing. Your timing was perfect.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: About the married woman who undressed in the closet for 14 years: Your reply, "It's too bad your sex appetite doesn't match his," was terrible. Most men are such animals their sex appetites can't be satisfied, let alone matched.

I'm in the same boat with that woman and let me tell you the boat is very crowded. No wonder there's so much rape around these days. — N.P.T.

Dear N.P.T.: I stand by my answer and I'd like to add something. Your thinking on this subject is cockeyed.

Rape has very little to do with sexual desire. It is the manifestation of hatred for women. Rape is not a crime of lust—but a crime of anger, frustration and revenge.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter signed "Sizzling in Sioux Falls." It was from a woman whose husband gave her a dollar for her anniversary and said, "Here, go buy yourself a nice card." I can top that.

I work in a bookstore that handles all sorts of greeting cards. Last week a man came in with his wife. He smiled at me and said, "Today is my wife's birthday." He browsed a bit, selected a very pretty card, handed it to her and waited for her reaction. "It's lovely," she said.

The man then took the card out of her hand, placed it back on the rack and said, "That was your birthday gift for this year." Again he smiled at me and they both left. — Springfield Mass.

Dear Spring: You topped me all right. I'm speechless.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Just what is hyperactivity in a child? How does one know if a child is hyperactive? About how many are? Can one expect improvement without drugs? What drugs are used? As you can see, we have many questions. We have a boy who is always getting into difficulties at home and we suspect he is hyperactive, and want to help him as much as we can, as difficult as it is for us. — Mr. and Mrs. P.G.

I can't comment specifically on your son. The term "always getting into trouble" is meaningless. There is an unfortunate tendency to lay almost any kind of disturbing behavior to "hyperactivity." The truly hyperkinetic child has an assortment of characteristics — high activity, poor sleeping habits, short attention span, low frustration level, disruptive behavior and poor coordination. Some are of higher than normal intelligence, yet perform poorly in school.

By one estimate, 2 to 5 percent of American youngsters are hyperactive to some degree. I would bet that if you selected 100 youngsters randomly you would find one or more such "hyperkinetic" traits in a higher percentage.

Diagnosis requires a group effort by parents, psychologists and teachers to put a picture together of a truly hyperactive child. In some cases, stimulant drugs are used. We don't know why stimulant drugs help improve hyperactive behavior, but they can. They should be used cautiously, and only if there has been the careful diagnosis of hyperactivity mentioned above.

Some improvement may be noted at puberty, although the added stresses at that time tend to balance it out. Hyperactive youngsters tend to become adults with a great deal of nervous energy.

The essential point is to avoid using hyperactivity as a scapegoat for children whose only fault or "illness" is inquisitiveness or simple rambunctiousness. The line separating that from hyperactivity in the medical sense is often thin.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had my first child by cesarean and I was wondering if there was any way to find out if I have to have all my children this way. — A.G.

The need for a cesarean section usually depends on the size of the baby and the size of the pelvic outlet. Hence, the need is usually determined with each baby unless the pelvic opening is unusually narrow at all times.

You should not let the prospects of a second cesarean deter you from having another baby unless factors other than those mentioned above dictated the need for the first one. Some 200,000 cesareans are performed each year in the U.S. alone, whereas 50 years ago it was done only in direst emergencies. One source indicates that about half of all cesareans are performed on women who have had previous ones. As many as 10 cesareans have been reported involving the same woman. Instances of fourth and fifth cesareans are not uncommon.

All other things being equal (the health of the mother, the development of the fetus, etc.) the risks are minimal, comparable to a normal vaginal delivery.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 70-year-old person who uses oxygen from a tank with a plastic hose (under doctor's orders) for severe emphysema. Will it extend life expectancy? Or is it just for comfort? — R.M.

It is primarily to make breathing easier and the person more comfortable. It won't cure your emphysema. There are exercises one can do to help improve lung function in emphysema patients, however.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have numbness in both arms at night when in the prone position. It is becoming more severe. My doctor had spine X-rays taken, and they were negative. He did nerve tests, etc., and said he didn't think it was a circulation problem. Can you suggest anything? — R.D.O.

I think you have made your own best suggestion — your sleeping position. Try to sleep on your back or on one side. It might relieve any pressure against the nerves. Altering the height of your pillow may have an effect.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "How would you define a practice finesse?"

Alan: "A finesse taken when there is no need to take it. In other words, one taken to see if finesses are working that day."

Oswald: "South was very proud of his play of today's hand. He ruffed the second diamond and led his jack of clubs. West hopped up with the ace and led a third diamond. South ruffed, entered dummy by ruffing a club, took the spade finesse, cashed his ace and king of trumps and showed his hand. He announced that whichever defender held the queen of trumps could take it when he wished."

Alan: "All very neat, but the finesse had been unnecessary, and if lost, could cost the contract. As long as trumps were going to break 3-2 all South needed to do when he ruffed that third diamond was to cash his ace and king of trumps and lead out his good clubs. Four of dummy's spades would be thrown on those nice cards. The ace of spades would be cashed and the jack ruffed. All West could do would be to take his high trump whenever he wished."

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Did you ever notice how in reporting sports no one ever "wins" a game?

They crush, stomp, triumph, trounce, bomb, out-score, out-class, overthrow, run over, edge out, hammer and victimize, but they never use the word "win."

The other night after a sportscast where there were three assaults, four upsets, one humiliation, a squeaker, and a rout, I said to my husband, "These guys must be fed intravenously by a thesaurus each night to come up with all those words that mean 'win.'"

"They have to," he said, "you'd get bored hearing who 'won' all the time."

"But that's not the way people talk," I complained. "Can't you just see some 230-pound guard being interviewed at halftime saying, 'We came to beat Pittsburgh. At this moment, we're not overwhelming by as much as we had hoped, but sooner or later we hope to vanquish. After all, as Vince Lombardi said, 'subduing is everything.'"

"You should talk," he said. "How come a woman on the society page never 'gets married?'"

"What are you talking about?"

"I've read those stories before. They 'exchange vows', 'say nuptials,' or 'pledge I do's', but they never get married!"

"That's different."

"Why different? We're talking about saying what we mean. When we got engaged I suppose you called up your best friend and said, 'Hey, Dottie, guess what, I'm going to plight my troth in August.'"

"I think plighting a troth is rather poetic. It's certainly not like the Dodgers 'smothering' their opponents or the Red Sox 'clobbering theirs.'"

"Hey," he grinned, "it might be fun if society pages showed as much imagination as they do on the sports pages. Can't you just imagine reading where Betty Schmidlapp cruised by four ugly bridesmaids Saturday to overpower her opponent and cap a victory in the Bridegroom Open in the upset of the year?"

"This is a stupid argument," I said. "And I don't want to continue it. Just say I won and we'll forget it."

He sat there thinking.

"See," I continued. "You haven't heard the word win in so long you can't even remember how it goes."

"Let's see," he said, "let's just say in the sports vernacular you 'persuaded your opponent it was in his best interest to lose.'"

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I learned something from my professional carpet installer a few weeks ago.

My carpeting was in good overall condition but the stair areas were worn at the edge of each step.

I called in the man who had been very nice and helpful when he laid the carpet originally. He suggested shifting the carpet up so that the worn areas would be flat against the back of each step.

He re-stretched the carpet, so the worn areas are hardly noticeable and he saved me a lot of money!

While the carpet was up, he suggested that I have it cleaned by a professional firm he recommended. I'm glad he did because now it looks almost new again and I could never have done it without his help.

Oh, and I still love your column! — Nancy Spencer

Orchids to you, Nancy, for sharing this valuable bit of information. Betcha plenty of people never thought of shifting the carpet on the stairs in their homes. — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

While pouring hot water into the teapot I noticed the tea bag string fell into the pot.

I found that by attaching a spring-type clothespin to the tag portion of the strings, the strings stayed anchored outside of the pot.

Now, when pouring tea I never have to worry about fishing out the tea bags with a spoon but simply lift the clothespin and all the tea bags are removed from the water. — Gloria Constantinitis

All these years I've been dipping for that string! — H.

DEAR HELOISE:

We had some 12"x12" vinyl floor tile left over so I had the idea to cut one tile into four squares. I put two squares together, one on top of the other, and covered them with adhesive backed paper.

Now I have two very nice hot pads to set on the table to hold hot dishes. — Elfride Feltman

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever use a walker and try to carry anything?

My sister tied a waist-style cobbler apron with four pockets to my walker so the pockets were facing the inside.

It was so much help to me. I used one pocket for the extension telephone, make-up and comb in one, fruit in one, tissues, etc. in another.

It was so wonderful I thought some shut-in could use this hint. — Graduated to Crutches

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK93 ♡7 ◇AK872 ♣KJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a strong hand, but beware of precipitate action. The fact that you have a singleton in partner's suit should make you leery of a possible misfit. A bid of one spade will suffice for the moment—unless partner can take some voluntary action, it's unlikely that your side has the values for game.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K74 ♡QJ8752 ◇KJ103
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	7

What do you bid now?

A.—Game is a live possibility, so your hand rates a forward-going move. You don't want to raise spades with only three-card support if you can avoid doing so, but neither your hand nor your heart suit is good enough for a jump rebid. The solution is to find another forcing bid, and two diamonds fits the bill perfectly. Since it is a new suit by responder, opener is forced to bid again.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQJ982 ◇AQ83 ♣72
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—You surely want to be in game, and slam if partner has the right cards. Therefore, we suggest a jump shift to two spades. Usually we do not recommend this action when you do not have a fit for partner's suit, but here your spade suit is self-sufficient so you know where you are going to play the hand.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J762 ♡852 ◇A9754 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—At no trump, your hand is unlikely to produce many tricks for partner. Since it's doubtful from the auction, that partner can run nine tricks, we would revert to four spades. At that contract you can at least contribute a couple of ruffs to your side's cause.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ10732 ◇9 ♣AK1093
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. There is nothing about partner's bidding to suggest that you can make a slam. To come to twelve tricks, partner must be able to cover all of your losers in both black suits. He has shown something in hearts, which is useless to you, and he certainly does not have the ace of diamonds. The trouble with making even one move is that the five-level could be too high.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠72 ♡AJ83 ◇K7 ♣AK1094
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Your hand is not strong enough to reverse into two hearts, so it is a question of choosing between two clubs and one no trump. We prefer the former, because it highlights your good five-card suit—a key feature of your hand.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠4 ♡AJ10762 ◇AQ832 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South

What do you bid now?

A.—We would not blame you if you decided to launch straight into Blackwood and then bid slam if partner shows an ace. However, that runs the risk of missing a grand slam, so that would be our second choice. We prefer a quiet bid of two diamonds. One a good day partner will raise to three diamonds, and now, if in response to Blackwood partner shows two aces and two kings, we would venture seven hearts in the hope that the second king was in diamonds. If not, the grand slam would be, at worst, on a finesse.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ10874 ♡6 ◇8652 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Your hand can play in spades, and nothing but spades, so we would rebid three spades. If partner rebids three no trump, we would persist with four spades. At no trump you might not furnish a single trick for partner.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I lost both parents before I was 30 so this letter is not a personal gripe, but I have a wide circle of friends who are carrying a load of guilt laid on by self-centered, demanding elderly parents. My heart goes out to them.

A typical situation is where the mother cannot stay alone after the husband's death, so a member of the family must be enlisted or someone hired to stay with her. She has never worked and has no marketable skills. She doesn't know how to drive and must be chauffeured everywhere on a moment's notice. She feels her errands are more important than the grandchildren's orthodontist appointments and piano lessons, or her daughter's church meetings.

Dad cared enough to make her happy and now she is "in the way" and it is her son's or daughter's fault she feels unwanted and unloved.

The idea of going to a retirement home is out of the question. Mother views this is being dumped in a terrible place to be gotten out of the way.

Some time ago you wrote an article for a national magazine. It was reprinted in condensed form in another national magazine. The title: "What Do Parents Owe Their Children?" It was one of the best pieces I have ever read. Now will you please write another article on the subject: "What Do Children Owe Their Parents?" Believe me, a great many people need help with this problem. — A Pittsburgh Reader

Dear Pitt: I recently wrote the piece you requested because so many people asked for it. The title is, would you believe, "What Do Children Owe Their Parents?"

The magazine is available at your newsstands at this very moment. P.S. Thank you for writing. Your timing was perfect.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: About the married woman who undressed in the closet for 14 years: Your reply, "It's too bad your sex appetite doesn't match his," was terrible. Most men are such animals their sex appetites can't be satisfied, let alone matched.

I'm in the same boat with that woman and let me tell you the boat is very crowded. No wonder there's so much rape around these days. — N.P.T.

Dear N.P.T.: I stand by my answer and I'd like to add something. Your thinking on this subject is cockeyed.

Rape has very little to do with sexual desire. It is the manifestation of hatred for women. Rape is not a crime of lust — but a crime of anger, frustration and revenge.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter signed "Sizzling in Sioux Falls." It was from a woman whose husband gave her a dollar for her anniversary and said, "Here, go buy yourself a nice card." I can top that.

I work in a bookstore that handles all sorts of greeting cards. Last week a man came in with his wife. He smiled at me and said, "Today is my wife's birthday." He browsed a bit, selected a very pretty card, handed it to her and waited for her reaction. "It's lovely," she said.

The man then took the card out of her hand, placed it back on the rack and said, "That was your birthday gift for this year." Again he smiled at me and they both left. — Springfield Mass.

Dear Spring: You topped me all right. I'm speechless.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers' guide to "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Just what is hyperactivity in a child? How does one know if a child is hyperactive? About how many are? Can one expect improvement without drugs? What drugs are used? As you can see, we have many questions. We have a boy who is always getting into difficulties at home and we suspect he is hyperactive, and want to help him as much as we can, as difficult as it is for us. — Mr. and Mrs. P.G.

I can't comment specifically on your son. The term "always getting into trouble" is meaningless. There is an unfortunate tendency to lay almost any kind of disturbing behavior to "hyperactivity." The truly hyperkinetic child has an assortment of characteristics — high activity, poor sleeping habits, short attention span, low frustration level, disruptive behavior and poor coordination. Some are of higher than normal intelligence, yet perform poorly in school.

By one estimate, 2 to 5 percent of American youngsters are hyperactive to some degree. I would bet that if you selected 100 youngsters randomly you would find one or more such "hyperkinetic" traits in a higher percentage.

Diagnosis requires a group effort by parents, psychologists and teachers to put a picture together of a truly hyperactive child. In some cases, stimulant drugs are used. We don't know why stimulant drugs help improve hyperactive behavior, but they can. They should be used cautiously, and only if there has been the careful diagnosis of hyperactivity mentioned above.

Some improvement may be noted at puberty, although the added stresses at that time tend to balance it out. Hyperactive youngsters tend to become adults with a great deal of nervous energy.

The essential point is to avoid using hyperactivity as a scapegoat for children whose only fault or "illness" is inquisitiveness or simple rambunctiousness. The line separating that from hyperactivity in the medical sense is often thin.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had my first child by cesarean and I was wondering if there was any way to find out if I have to have all my children this way. — A.G.

The need for a cesarean section usually depends on the size of the baby and the size of the pelvic outlet. Hence, the need is usually determined with each baby unless the pelvic opening is unusually narrow at all times.

You should not let the prospects of a second cesarean deter you from having another baby unless factors other than those mentioned above dictated the need for the first one. Some 200,000 cesareans are performed each year in the U.S. alone, whereas 50 years ago it was done only in direst emergencies. One source indicates that about half of all cesareans are performed on women who have had previous ones. As many as 10 cesareans have been reported involving the same woman. Instances of fourth and fifth cesareans are not uncommon.

All other things being equal (the health of the mother, the development of the fetus, etc.) the risks are minimal, comparable to a normal vaginal delivery.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 70-year-old person who uses oxygen from a tank with a plastic hose (under doctor's orders) for severe emphysema. Will it extend life expectancy? Or is it just for comfort? — R.M.

It is primarily to make breathing easier and the person more comfortable. It won't cure your emphysema. There are exercises one can do to help improve lung function in emphysema patients, however.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have numbness in both arms at night when in the prone position. It is becoming more severe. My doctor had spine X-rays taken, and they were negative. He did nerve tests, etc., and said he didn't think it was a circulation problem. Can you suggest anything? — R.D.O.

I think you have made your own best suggestion — your sleeping position. Try to sleep on your back or on one side. It might relieve any pressure against the nerves. Altering the height of your pillow may have an effect.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "How would you define a practice finesse?"

Alan: "A finesse taken when there is no need to take it. In other words, one taken to see if finesses are working that day."

Oswald: "South was very proud of his play of today's hand. He ruffed the second diamond and led his jack of clubs. West hopped up with the ace and led a third diamond. South ruffed, entered dummy by ruffing a club, took the spade finesse, cashed his ace and king of trumps and showed his hand. He announced that whichever defender held the queen of trumps could take it when he wished."

Alan: "All very neat, but the finesse had been unnecessary, and if lost, could cost the contract. As long as trumps were going to break 3-2 all South needed to do when he ruffed that third diamond was to cash his ace and king of trumps and lead out his good clubs. Four of dummy's spades would be thrown on those nice cards. The ace of spades would be cashed and the jack ruffed. All West could do would be to take his high trump whenever he wished."

A Vermont reader wants to know if we open one diamond and rebid three clubs if partner responds one spade.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Did you ever notice how in reporting sports no one ever "wins" a game?

They crush, stomp, triumph, trounce, bomb, out-score, out-class, overthrow, run over, edge out, hammer and victimize, but they never use the word "win."

The other night after a sportscast where there were three assaults, four upsets, one humiliation, a squeaker, and a rout, I said to my husband, "These guys must be fed intravenously by a thesaurus each night to come up with all those words that mean 'win.'"

"They have to," he said, "you'd get bored hearing who 'won' all the time."

"But that's not the way people talk," I complained. "Can't you just see some 230-pound guard being interviewed at halftime saying, 'We came to beat Pittsburgh. At this moment, we're not overwhelming by as much as we had hoped, but sooner or later we hope to vanquish. After all, as Vince Lombardi said, 'subduing is everything.'"

"You should talk," he said. "How come a woman on the society page never 'gets married?'"

"What are you talking about?"

"I've read those stories before. They 'exchange vows', 'say nuptials,' or 'pledge I do's', but they never get married!"

"That's different."

"Why different? We're talking about saying what we mean. When we got engaged I suppose you called up your best friend and said, 'Hey, Dottie, guess what, I'm going to plight my troth in August.'"

"I think plighting a troth is rather poetic. It's certainly not like the Dodgers 'smothering' their opponents or the Red Sox 'clobbering theirs.'"

"Hey," he grinned, "it might be fun if society pages showed as much imagination as they do on the sports pages. Can't you just imagine reading where Betty Schmidlapp cruised by four ugly bridesmaids Saturday to overpower her opponent and cap a victory in the Bridegroom Open in the upset of the year?"

"This is a stupid argument," I said. "And I don't want to continue it. Just say I won and we'll forget it."

He sat there thinking.

"See," I continued. "You haven't heard the word win in so long you can't even remember how it goes."

"Let's see," he said, "let's just say in the sports vernacular you 'persuaded your opponent it was in his best interest to lose.'"

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I learned something from my professional carpet installer a few weeks ago.

My carpeting was in good overall condition but the stair areas were worn at the edge of each step.

I called in the man who had been very nice and helpful when he laid the carpet originally. He suggested shifting the carpet up so that the worn areas would be flat against the back of each step.

He re-stretched the carpet, so the worn areas are hardly noticeable and he saved me a lot of money!

While the carpet was up, he suggested that I have it cleaned by a professional firm he recommended. I'm glad he did because now it looks almost new again and I could never have done it without his help.

Oh, and I still love your column! — Nancy Spencer

Orchids to you, Nancy, for sharing this valuable bit of information. Betcha plenty of people never thought of shifting the carpet on the stairs in their homes. — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

While pouring hot water into the teapot I noticed the tea bag string fell into the pot.

I found that by attaching a spring-type clothespin to the tag portion of the strings, the strings stayed anchored outside of the pot.

Now, when pouring tea I never have to worry about fishing out the tea bags with a spoon but simply lift the clothespin and all the tea bags are removed from the water. — Gloria Constantinitis

All these years I've been dipping for that string! — H.

DEAR HELOISE:

We had some 12"x12" vinyl floor tile left over so I had the idea to cut one tile into four squares. I put two squares together, one on top of the other, and covered them with adhesive backed paper.

Now I have two very nice hot pads to set on the table to hold hot dishes. — Elfride Feltman

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever use a walker and try to carry anything?

My sister tied a waist-style cobbler apron with four pockets to my walker so the pockets were facing the inside.

It was so much help to me. I used one pocket for the extension telephone, make-up and comb in one, fruit in one, tissues, etc. in another.

It was so wonderful I thought some shut-in could use this hint. — Graduated to Crutches

Natural Gas Trade To Bolster Soviets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Natural gas exports will soon become the Soviet Union's main trade commodity, replacing even petroleum as a multibillion-dollar source of much-needed capitalist currency, according to a CIA report released Sunday.

Natural gas will not match oil as a hard currency earner by 1980, the CIA said, but it probably will become the leading Soviet trade commodity well before 1985, with hard gross currency receipts of $2 billion likely.

"Soviet natural gas reserves of 28 trillion cubic meters (1 cubic meter equals 35 cubic feet) are possibly the world's largest and would provide more than 80 years output at the 1977 production level of 346 trillion cubic meters annually," said the report, "USSR: Development of the Gas Industry."

11-Year Supply

In contrast, the United States has natural gas reserves estimated at only about 6.2 trillion cubic meters, which would last about 11 more years at the 1977 yearly production rate of of 565 billion cubic meters.

But the CIA said the Soviet Union's natural gas future, though bright, is not a panacea and will ease but not solve Russia's energy problems during the next decade.

For one, the United States and other Western industrial powers have much of the technology needed by the Soviet Union to develop its potentially richest natural gas fields in western Siberia.

Importance Increased

This dependence on Western technology, according to the CIA report, increases the importance of Soviet natural gas wealth even more because it will help cover the rising costs of that technology and equipment, which the Soviet gas industry's expansion in the 1980s will require.

Western Europe has been a Soviet natural gas client since 1968 when a branch of the Bratsvo (Brotherhood) gas trunkline — which feeds Eastern Europe — reached Austria.

Since then, the Soviet Union has also signed export contracts with West Germany, France, Finland and Italy guaranteeing natural gas shipments, which by 1980 may reach 25 trillion cubic meters.

Interestingly enough, the CIA speculated that if demand were higher than available supplies — forcing the Soviets to choose between shipping natural gas to Western Europe (a purely economic operation) or sending it to Eastern Europe (a more political decision) — they would opt for Eastern Europe.

"If Soviet gas supplies cannot meet demand in both Eastern and Western Europe," the CIA said, "the Soviets will give priority to Eastern European customers to forestall political and economic disruptions."

The Soviet Union — whose natural gas fields are widely scattered from the Black Sea in the east to the Kara Sea off western Siberia — already has the second largest gas supply network in the world.

Russia's gas trunkline system of nearly 70,000 miles in length is roughly only about one-fourth of the U.S. system.

"But its construction is nonetheless a major achievement," said the CIA.

Higher Death Toll Seen In Beirut Building Blast

for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command.

Referring to the Popular Front, Abass said: "They wanted to kill me and the movement in order to undermine reconciliation moves that were under way at the time. They wanted to keep the inter-Palestinian rift brewing."

Spokesmen for the front could not be reached for comment.

Abass and the front's chief, Ahmed Gebril, a former Syrian army captain, have been bitter rivals for more than two years after splitting over Syria's intervention in the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war.

Eleven of Arafat's Al Fatah guerrillas also were killed in the blast, lending credence to claims his people were not to blame. Fatah and a third guerrilla faction had branch offices in the building, but Abass's group kept its entire military and operations organization on the top three floors. Guerrillas and their families lived in the 28 apartments in the building.

A three-year-old boy on a fourth-floor balcony of the bombed building was thrown onto a pile of sand at a nearby construction site and escaped with only scratches, witnesses said.

Arafat, who had been conducting reconciliation conferences with the pro-Iraqi dissidents here over the weekend, convened an emergency session of his Palestine Liberation Organization's executive committee and ordered an immediate investigation. He also appointed a committee made up of various guerrilla factions "to take measures to prevent any further bloodshed," a PLO spokesman said.

Fatah's dispute with the pro-Iraqi groups stems from Arafat's accusation that the Baghdad government is supporting renegades in a campaign to assassinate PLO officials and undermine his leadership. The feud spilled into several cities in Europe and Asia this month, leaving at least 25 persons dead in a spate of Palestinian-Iraqi battles in Paris, London, Karachi and Islamabad.

MOURNERS VISIT TOMB

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Less than 12 hours after the burial of Pope Paul VI, faithful and tourists started flowing into the grotto under St. Peter's Basilica to pray at his simple tomb. As soon as the bronze doors of the church were opened at 7 a.m. Sunday, people walked down the narrow staircase near the basilica's main altar to reach the small, arched chapel where the pope was buried in the "true earth," as he requested in his will.

Fugitive's Two Sons Arraigned At Yuma

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Ricky and Raymond Tison and Randy Greenawalt were arraigned Sunday on charges of kidnapping and murdering three persons and kidnapping a fourth in a crime spree that began when the Tison boys broke their father and Greenawalt out of prison.

Justice of the Peace William Steen ordered the three held without bond "of any kind" and scheduled a preliminary hearing for Friday before Quartzite Justice Ruth Howery.

Ricky, 18, and Raymond, 19, smiled at each other during the proceedings. They were in shackles on either side of Greenawalt, all dressed in the standard yellow county jail T-shirts. Steen agreed to their request for a court-provided attorney.

Searchers in three states were looking for their father, Gary Tison, 42, who faces the same charges. Donald Tison, 20, died Friday when he was shot while trying to crash a roadblock near Casa Grande. His brothers and Greenawalt were captured at that time; Tison is believed to have escaped into the desert.

Lawmen at Casa Grande are organizing a massive sweep of the area for Tuesday amid speculation that Tison could not have survived very long without food or water in the rugged desert.

The Yuma County charges stem from the brutal slayings of Marine Sgt. John Lyons, 24, his wife, Donnelda, 24, and their 22-month-old son, Christopher, and the kidnap of Lyons's niece, Teresa Tyson, 15, of Las Vegas, whose body was found Friday.

The four were killed in an isolated area near Quartzite shortly after Tison and Greenawalt, 28, both convicted murderers, escaped with the alleged help of Tison's three sons. The men also were charged with armed robbery and auto theft.

Searchers in Colorado, meanwhile, were attempting to locate James and Margene Judge of Amarillo, whose van was in the possession of the fugitives when they crashed the roadblock.

Abilene's Dry Debate Comes Before Judge

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Charles Mathews hears arguments Monday on whether to continue a ban on state liquor permits in Abilene.

Mathews threw out an election canvass last Tuesday that showed pro-liquor forces won a June 17 local option election. An election contest was filed Wednesday in Abilene challenging an earlier canvass showing "drys" won.

Before his ruling last week, Mathews granted a restraining order against the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission prohibiting the agency from acting on five Abilene liquor license applications.

Monday's hearing will involve whether the judge should issue a temporary injunction to continue indefinitely the liquor permit ban.

Joe Dibrell, assistant attorney general who represents the ABC, said Friday he intends to appeal Mathews' action to the Texas Supreme Court. Dibrell contends the Austin judge had no jurisdiction in the case.

Attorney Buck Wood, who represents Abilene residents opposed to liquor sales, said that state law requires a hearing before a judge can issue a temporary injunction.

Report Gives Tips On Conserving Gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, noting diminishing supplies of natural gas, has some tips on how to reduce wasteful use of gas in the home.

A report prepared for the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission covers use of insulation, furnace modifications, solar-assisted water heating and various inexpensive suggestions.

The report, titled "Efficiency in the Use of Gas," was prepared by a committee of independent experts acting as unpaid advisers. It is available at no cost by writing to the Department of Energy's Technical Information Center, Pulications Request Section, P.O. Box 62, Oak Ridge, Tenn. 37830.

EGYPT BUYS U.S. WHEAT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has authorized Egypt to buy $12.6 million worth of U.S. wheat. The approximately 96,000 metric tons of wheat are to be delivered to vessels carrying the wheat to Egypt by Sept. 30.

Reagan Called Leading GOP Prospect For 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John Rhodes, the House GOP leader, said Sunday that Ronald Reagan is far ahead of other Republicans expected to seek the presidential nomination. And, he observed, any emergence of Richard Nixon as a party adviser would be a risk.

Asked if Reagan, a former governor of California, would be a "shoo-in" as the Republicans' 1980 presidential nominee, Rhodes said:

"I think that Gov. Reagan is far ahead. There's no doubt about it. He's kept his organization intact. He'll be very hard to defeat."

Rhodes, R-Ariz., said former President Ford also is "doing the things which I think a candidate should do at this particular time. He's making speeches. He's quite visible, and certainly helping Republicans also."

Asked if he thought it would be a good idea for Nixon to emerge more during the upcoming presidential election, Rhodes said:

"President Nixon was very capable at foreign policy, there's no doubt about it. And there are people in my party who feel that Mr. Nixon could be very valuable as far as being a sort of a senior statesman to comment on matters of foreign policy."

But, he added, "I think we're getting along very well...and I would just as soon keep the cast we have."

"It's a risk," he said when asked if he thought any involvement by Nixon in GOP affairs would be a political liablity.

Rhodes, responding to a question of whether right-wing Republicans are going to be the new strength of the party, said that there is "a younger strain of Republicans who identify themselves with conservative ideas and they are going to be quite a force in the party." But he said he thinks the party will maintain its balance without moving too far to the left or too far to the right.

Rep. Philip Crane, a conservative Republican from Illinois, so far is the only contender for the 1980 presidential election from either party to announce his candidacy.

"On a normal Saturday we're running 6,000 or 6,300," he said. "I would estimate that it's would probably going to hold at about 5,000, at least for the next couple of days."

Shortly before midnight, some 700 policemen, shouting obscenities and blowing whistles, walked away from their elected union president, David Baker, after he appealed to them to honor the Chancery Court order to return to work.

The officers Thursday had rejected by a 2-to-1 margin a city offer that would have raised the monthly pay of a veteran patrolman from $1,148 to $1,244 immediately, then provided two additional raises in the next 15 months.

Equal Rights Extension Vote Nears

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House appears ready to vote to extend the time for ratifying the Equal Rights Amendment, but is closely divided on whether states that have ratified should be allowed to change their minds.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said the House would take up the ERA extension Monday and probably reach a final vote on Tuesday.

In other congressional action this week, the Senate is expected to approve a tuition tax credit and the House Assassinations Committee will hold its first public hearings.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., a leader of the forces backing the proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit discrimination based on sex, said a comfortable majority of the House appeared to favor allowing an additional 39 months for states to ratify the amendment. The present deadline for ratification is next March 22.

But Edwards said the vote would be "much closer" on a proposal to permit state legislatures that have approved the ERA to withdraw their approval.

He predicted the proposal would be defeated and said that if he didn't believe this "we wouldn't go ahead" with the extension.

A spokesman for Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., sponsor of the disputed proposal, said Railsback was "fairly optimistic" it would pass. Railsback argues it is not fair to allow states additional time to ratify the ERA without also letting those that have ratified reconsider.

The ERA has been ratified by the legislatures of 35 states. Those of Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Tennessee have rescinded their votes, although the action of Kentucky was vetoed. The Justice Department says it will be up to Congress to determine whether the rescissions count.

The ERA needs the approval of 38 states to become part of the Constitution. It was submitted to the states by Congress in 1972.

Baker was drowned out by chants as he tried to read the court order to the policemen gathered on the downtown Mid-America Mall, less than two blocks from central police headquarters.

Saying he had taken control of the union from Baker and had the backing of the rank-and-file, Chris Cothran, a member of the police union's negotiating committee, was greeted with chants of, "We want Chris. We want Chris."

"There's no doubt in anybody's mind who's running this union," Cothran told the cheering policemen. "The men are tired to finding out what the future holds for them in the newspapers and television. I tell you right now, the Memphis Police Association is on strike.

"If we're going to be arrested, we're going to be arrested by Memphis police officers," he said. "We're not going to be arrested by reserves. We're not going to be arrested by deputy sheriffs

"I'm telling you right now if the National Guard wants another war . .."

Mayor Beats Recall Bid In Cleveland

But the romance soured, with Hongisto claiming that the mayor's office tried to pressure him to make unethical decisions and alleging Kucinich was more interested in personal political gain than in serving the people.

Kucinich said Hongisto was fired for challenging the authority of the mayor.

In addition to the Hongisto episode, Cleveland has been plagued with:

—Two brief police strikes, one disrupting virtually all city services.

—A running war between the maverick Democratic mayor and the all-Democratic City Council, including a record 26 vetoes. At one point, Kucinich called council members "lunatics" and "a bunch of buffoons."

Kucinich argued that the recall attempt was unwarranted and unfair, and that he was under attack because he has stepped on the toes of "political bosses and powerful special interests."

He said many of Cleveland's troubles were inherited from previous mayors.

The recall received the support of Cleveland's two daily newspapers, including The Plain Dealer, which had endorsed his election as mayor.

Guerrillas Said Aiding Rhodesian Government

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — The Sunday Mail published a photograph of moderate black leader Bishop Abel Muzorewa, waving a Communist-made rifle and addressing what the newspaper reported was a rally of some 3,000 black guerrillas now backing the transition government.

TALKS TO GUERRILLAS? — Moderate black leader Bishop Abel Muzorewa waves what is described as a communist-made weapon as he reportedly addresses a rally of some 3,000 black guerrillas said to be backing the transition government in Rhodesia. The rally is supposed to have taken place Saturday in the Msana Black Reservation 35 miles northeast of Salisbury. This photo was supplied by the Rhodesian government. (AP Laserphoto)

The story bore no reporter's by-line and quoted "official disclosures" of the reported session.

The report coincided with a weekend meeting here of the executive panel of Muzorewa's United African National Council where dissidents were seeking to oust him from leadership. Muzorewa did not attend.

The government claims the fighters switched sides in response to government offers of amnesty and a cease-fire and that they now control some areas where regular troops withdrew in a peace move.

The report did not say how the Mail obtained coverage of the session or who took the three photographs published.

One showed a heavily armed black described as "Commander Max, leader of the pro-government guerrillas controlling the area in Msana." The third showed two armed blacks said to be female members of the group.

Max was quoted as saying he trained in the Soviet Union and Cuba.

"Those who think the cease-fire is not working, those who think my men and I have been tricked and are being used, are wrong," the newspaper quoted him.

The report said the rally was held in a "jubilant and relaxed atmosphere" attended by only one member of Rhodesia's regular security forces.

It said some guerrillas combed the rally seeking "killer groups" from Robert Mugabe's Mozambique-based Zimbabwe African National Union, to which they reportedly once belonged.

Since the transitional bi-racial government of Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, Chief Jeremiah Chirau and white Prime Minister Ian Smith made a cease-fire call and amnesty offer May 2, the casualty rate in the war has risen markedly.

Patriotic Front leaders Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, who leads the Zimbabwe African Peoples Union, rejected an agreement between Smith and the three moderate blacks that majority rule be established through national elections by the end of the year.

Search In Colorado Mountains For Missing Couple Fruitless

SOUTH FORK, Colo. (AP) — A search of this mountainous area for a honeymooning Texas couple turned up empty-handed Sunday and Colorado authorities say further blind searching is useless.

Rio Grand County officers said Arizona police had asked for the search after the couple's stolen van was recovered in a Friday shootout with four fugitives.

"We've got a lot of mountains and a lot of trees in this area," Sheriff Jerry Wright said Sunday. "And until Arizona authorities give us more information, we're at a standstill."

A 2½-hour air search was conducted and about 50 persons scoured the ground in rugged Rio Grande and Mineral counties Saturday for James Judge Jr., 22, and his wife of less than one week, Jeanette, 24.

A van which officials believe belongs to the Judges and being commandeered by convicted murderer Gary Tison, fellow convict Randy Greenawalt — fugitives from the Arizona State Prison — and Tison's sons crashed Friday after a shootout with police near Casa Grande, Ariz. One of Tison's sons was killed in the shootout. The rest of the group was captured, with the exception of Tison, who is still at large.

"Right now, we're acting on information Mrs. Judge told her mother in a telephone conversation last Tuesday night," Wright said Sunday.

The couple had planned to go fishing Wednesday morning before traveling to Lake City that afternoon, Wright quoted the mother as saying.

The young woman reportedly said she would call her mother Thursday night, but the call was never made, he added.

The couple was to attend Saturday's Denver Broncos-Dallas Cowboys football game. Denver detectives, however, were vague as to whether the Judges' used their 50-yard-line tickets.

Wright said it was hoped the addition of the FBI to the case will turn up additional information. Also searching for the newlyweds were the Rio Grande County Sheriff's Department, the U.S. Forest Service and the San Luis Valley Search and Rescue team.

While on this same crime spree after their escape from prison, Tison and Greenawalt, along with Tison's sons, have been charged with the murders of four members of a family in Quartzite, Ariz. Authorities in Phoenix said Sunday that one of the victims, 15-year-old Teresa Tyson, was shotgunned in the hip and left to bleed to death.

The Las Vegas, Nev., girl apparently crawled one-half mile from the area where it is believed she watched the brutal murders of her relatives before dying in the desert near Quartzite, officials said.

An autopsy completed Saturday night revealed Teresa died from loss of blood. Her body was too decomposed to determine whether she had been sexually assaulted, according to officials of the medical examiner's office.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt has offered a $10,000 reward for the capture of Tison and his cohorts, who are charged with abducting Teresa.

ISLANDERS EVACUATE

AGANA, Guam (AP) — An estimated 500 people were driven from their homes Saturday in the Northern Mariana Islands as heavy rains from tropical storm Carmen triggered extensive flooding. No storm-related injuries were reported. Some residents were forced to use canoes to get to their homes. On the island of Saipan, some homes were filled with up to four feet of water, while damage on Rota, Tinian and other islands was limited to crops.

Letelier-Related Documents Moved

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Brig. Gen. Juan Manuel Contreras, the former Chilean secret police chief under indictment in Washington in the assassination of former Chilean diplomat Orlando Letelier, has reportedly shipped documents related to the case out of Chile.

Officials have not commented on the allegation by the afternoon tabloid La Segunda, but the weekly news magazine Que Pasa, partly owned by Foreign Minister Hernan Cubillos, has urged the government to do so.

Last week, a federal grand jury in Washington indicted eight men, including Contreras, in the assassination of Letelier, killed when a bomb exploded in his car on a Washington street in 1976.

Besides Contreras, five Cuban exiles and two other officials of the now-defunct Chilean intelligence agency DINA were indicted. U.S. officials are seeking extradition of the former DINA agents.

Letelier, Chile's former ambassador to the United States and a cabinet minister under the late Marxist President Salvador Allendé, was an outspoken opponent of Augusto Pinochet, Chile's current military chief.

The indictment alleges Contreras ordered the assassination of Letelier. It says Col. Pedro Espinoza, as DINA chief of operations, passed the order to agents Capt. Armando Fernandez and Michael Townley, an expatriate American who worked for the DINA.

Townley has admitted making and placing the fatal bomb under Letelier's car with the help of the Cubans. He was expelled from Chile in March and has cooperated in the investigation in return for a plea bargain. He pleaded guilty last Friday to a single count of conspiracy to kill a foreign official.

The explosion of the remote-control device on Sept. 21, 1976, also killed Mrs. Ronni Moffit, a co-worker of Letelier's in a Washington study institute.

Contreras currently is under house arrest. Espinoza and Fernandez also are being detained at the request of the U.S. Embassy. The Chilean Supreme Court is to take up the U.S. extradition request and decide whether to send them to Washington or put them on trial here.

La Segunda quoted a "high official" as saying that, in mid-April, Contreras flew to Punta Arenas, a city at the southern tip of the continent on the Straits of Magellan, with 12 to 14 suitcases. The official reportedly said one suitcase contained documents pertaining to the assassination of Letelier.

The newspaper said Contreras had the suitcases placed aboard the West German-registered ship Badenstein that sailed for Europe on April 20.

The magazine Que Pasa said it had tried to check out the La Segunda story but could uncover no record of the shipment in Punta Arenas. It said the only reaction from government officials it contracted was that it was foolish to deny rumors at every step.

It was presumed here that the documents, if they existed, would indicate whether any higher Chilean officials above Contreras knew of the plot against Letelier. Pinochet has publicly denied any involvement in the assassination.

'Overpaid' Housewives Viewed

DENTON (AP) — It comes as no surprise that economics expert Dr. Richard Armey is divorced. His recent research paper concludes flatly that housewives are generally overpaid for their domestic expertise.

Armey, chairman of the economics department at North Texas State University, adamantly denys the title "chauvinist pig." He believes the housewife is only hurting her own cause in divorce court by demanding what he terms "back pay" for services rendered. Instead, he said, the woman should insist on severence pay and retraining benefits to prepare her to compete in the labor market.

"Any argument that a housewife is not compensated for her work is fallacious," he said. "The typical, middle-class housewife is not only compensated, but overcompensated."

No doubt a goodly share of today's homemakers are wondering the whereabouts of all the greenbacks from yesterday's pot roast, the clothes they washed or the floors they scrubbed.

Armey states that a housewife's pay is not monetary but "real income" derived from her output of housework.

"Real income is the value of the goods you consume," he said. "And the total real income of a household is the sum of the goods consumed and the monetary wealth accumulated."

A dollar figure is arrived at using a 1973-74 study by New York's Chase Manhatten Bank. The study lists a monetary and hourly breakdown of a housewife's duties and wages if they were performed by independent specialists.

The study, based on the 1970 New York wage rate, concludes the housewife's services on the open market are valued at $257 weekly, or $13,364, based on a 99-hour work week.

Armey said the housewife contributes about $13,400 of "real income" and the average male over 25 kicks in about the same amount in salary. The economist also figures, admittedly without documentation, the husband for about $3,250 in annual real income — about a fourth as much as his spouse.

Adding the figures together, Armey concludes: "We can have a representative family with a representative real income of $30,500. Of that total, the wife contributes real income of $13,400.

"...In the first place, she has not provided half of the family income," he said. "In the second place, she receives real income of $15,025 (half of the family's total real income) and she contributes only $13,400. She is overpaid by $1,625."

Preferred Papal Qualities Analyzed

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

What the people want in the next pope is "a hopeful, holy man who can smile," says a foremost U.S. researcher on grassroots Catholic viewpoints.

Reporting findings of a special study, the Rev. Andrew M. Greeley of Chicago says that in the contemporary atmosphere "the papacy requires a man of holiness, a man of hope, a man of joy.

"A pope who lacks confidence and hope will be turned off by the world, Catholic and non-Catholic, after his first public statement."

In a report of a "job description" study for the papacy released Sunday in the United States and at a news conference in Rome, Greeley said the pope's "personality and style" are more important in the present situation than background and training.

"As the world's most visible and influential religious leader, the pope must be able to speak not only to Catholics but to the whole world with confidence and clarity," the priest-sociologist said.

Greeley was commissioned to make the study of modern qualities needed in the papacy by the Committee for the Responsible Election of the Pope, a newly formed U.S. group headed by publisher James F. Andrews of Mission, Kan.

Greely said that in compiling the findings he analyzed data from scores of surveys in the United States and other countries including clergy as well as laity.

The analysis said:

"Hope, holiness, joy, self-confidence, maturity, trust, the ability to delegate power and responsioiliity, personal security — these are qualities the new pope must have."

While the man need not "possess the jolly, bouncy good humor" of the late Pope John XXIII, "he certainly must be the kind of man whose faith makes him happy and whose hope makes him joyful," Greeley said.

"A grim, stern, pessimistic, solemn-faced pope will not apppeal to the world as a man who is really possessed by the 'good news' he claims to be teaching. Quite simply, the more the pope laughs, the more effective he will be."

Greeley of the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago and also a prolific author and columnist, said his findings from a sociological perspective directly contradict the characteristics generally reported as necessary to the papacy.

He said it doesn't matter whether the new pope is Italian or not, whether or not he's part of the Vatican's administrative Curia, nor whether he comes from Europe or the third world, nor whether he's intellectual or non-intellectual, diplomat or pastor, progressive or moderate nor whether or not he's an efficient administrator.

Such qualities are available and important among papal assistants, but aren't critical in the top job, Greeley said. His "job description" findings cited six characteristics as essential. Besides the element of joy in the faith, the other qualities were:

— "It is not necessary that the pope be a saint, but he must be a 'holy' man...His goodness must be transparent; that is, it must shine before men...He may have a complex, intricate personality but the dynamics of that personality have to balance in such a way that he seems to be living a life of simple faith in which personal success is a very minor consideration...He must, in short, be the kind of human of whom others will say spontaneously, 'There is a good man'."

— Since the pope can't make all decisions himself and attend to all the church's problems, he "must be shrewd in his selection of subordinates and in his ability to preside over his 'team' of subordinates in such a way as to release, rather than innhibit, the best of their talents."

— The new pope "must trust others, his own staff, his brother bishops throughout the world, Catholic scholars, the ordinary Catholic laity, the leaders of other religious denominations...

"He must have faith in the good sense, the intelligence and the good will of other members of the church." This "requires a high degree of personal maturity. To trust others is risky; only a man who is not easily threatened can take such a risk."

— The new pope "must have an instinct for the strategically important problems that should occupy his time and energy and the ability to focus on those problems," while delegating responsibility for other matters to subordinates. The pope "who permits himself to be overwhelmed by every issue" and "who cannot delegate responsibility will be a pope who has paralyzed himself."

— As the "most important religious leader on earth," the new pope must be able to speak out clearly on important issues, understanding the "aspirations, the needs, the longings of the human race." He must be able too respond "not necessarily with clear and precise answers, but with warm sympathetic hopefulness" and confidence in efforts to find solutions.

Summing up, Greeley's analysis said: "If the man who comes out to bless the city and the world on the balcony of St. Peter's is a hopeful, holy man who can smile — and delegate responsibility and trust other human beings — then the Roman Catholic Church can face the years immediately ahead with confidence."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Q. I have been told that a good way to invest in stocks is to "dollar average." I have no idea what this means. Can you explain? Also, do you agree that it is a good way to buy stocks?

A. Indeed, I do agree. I'll even go a step past "good" and say it is the "best" way to invest in stocks. Dollar averaging has long been my favorite.

It is the process of investing the same amount of money in the same stock at fixed intervals — such as $50 a month, $100 every three months, $500 every six months or whatever other amount at whatever interval you pick.

Because stock prices fluctuate, dollar averaging means that you buy fewer shares when prices are high and more shares when prices are low. And, unless the stock you are buying heads straight down hill, you get a better than average cost on all your shares. Meanwhile, you don't get ulcers from trying to outguess the stock market.

The best advice I ever received came from an old chief bos'n mate who told me, some 35 years ago, "Sailor, it's not what you win in poker. It's what you don't lose." Dollar averaging is the best way I know of to use that advice in the stock market.

It used to be easy to dollar average by using the New York Stock Exchange's Monthly Investment Plan — MIP, for short. But MIP was scrapped a couple of years ago, as further testimony of Wall Street's desertion of the small investor.

Some brokerage firms have arrangements through which their customers can dollar average in individual stocks. Most mutual funds have dollar-averaging plans. And a growing number of companies have set up special arrangements through which stockholders can buy additional shares on either a one-time or a steady investment basis.

• • •

Q. You told a man, 62, on a $1,400 monthly pension to stay with quality stocks as long-term investments and warned aginst playing the market in hopes of making quick profits. Your advice was pure youthful arrogance and downright cloddy.

That man is ideally suited to speculate. He is financially secure for life and has the time for the research necessary to speculate successfully. He has a real opportunity to generate genuine wealth for himself, his family and his children.

A. He could also lose everything he has saved during his working career. Differences of opinion are a healthy thing. But, if you think I am going to advise a retired person to speculate — another word for "gamble" — with his life's savings, you're loose at the hinges.

Q. We own our home free and clear and also own a small apartment building, which we purchased for $40,000 in 1963. The mortgage on the apartment building will be paid off in five years. We wish to reinvest what we have in the apartment building but don't know what to invest in. Can you make some suggestions?

A. Why not buy another apartment building? Unless I'm reading your letter wrong, you've done very well with the one you own. Not everyone has the know-how to manage and maintain that kind of investment. But you clearly do. Do it again.

• • •

Q. I own some stock that keeps going down. Should it be sold and the money reinvested?

A. If you're oonvinced that it's not going to do an about-face and start going up, the answer is "yes." Wall Street is full of adages — some good, some not so good. A pretty good one is, "Let your winners run but cut your losses."

You have a loser. Sell it and put your money to work somewhere else.

U.S. Mourners Return

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — First Lady Rosalynn Carter, Sen. Edward Kennedy and New York Gov. Hugh Carey returned to the United States Sunday after attending the funeral of Pope Paul VI.

The three dignitaries boarded a special U.S. Air Force Boeing 707 plane and left Ciampino airport for Washington about 8:30 a.m. EST.

"I was very happy to have been able to come here," Mrs. Carter said. "I thought the funeral ceremony was lovely and I was happy to be there representing my husband and the people of the United States."

Before flying back, Mrs. Carter entered St. Peter's Basilia accompanied by Cardinal Terence J. Cooke of New York, Carey, Vatican ushers and Secret Service agents.

Cooke took them on a tour of the 16th century basilica, pointing out Michelangelo's Pieta and the Altar of Confession with its towering bronze canopy by Bernini where the pope's body lay in state last week.

They did not join the long line of mourners descending into the Sacred Grotto under the alter to visit the pope's tomb.

Mrs. Carter wore an ankle-length black dress, the same one she wore at Saturday's funeral Mass in St. Peter's Square, and a black lace mantilla over her hair.

Mrs. Carter earlier attended a reception for the foreign delegations to the funeral given by the Sacred College of Cardinals in the Sala Ducale of the Apostolic Palace where popes live.

Sale of sliced bread was prohibited in the United States from 1943 until the end of World War II.

Beetles Threaten Pine Trees, People

DENVER (AP) — From the Black Hills of South Dakota to the rugged Rockies of Colorado and New Mexico, an infestation of pine beetles is threatening businesses and homeowners with financial ruin, and boosting the fire danger in state and national forests.

Colorado is losing about 2 million ponderosa pine trees a year to the beetles. Millions of other trees have met similar fates in South Dakota. In Montana, a Forest Service official estimated 600 million board-feet of lumber have been lost to the bugs annually since 1970.

Chinese Receive Cambodian Gifts

TOKYO (AP) — A baby elephant and two tiger cubs have been flown to Peking as gifts from the central committee of the Cambodian Communist Party to its counterpart in China, the official Hsinhua news agency reported Sunday.

The three animals will be taken to the Peking Zoo, the report said.

Texas Flood Cleanup Continues

MESSY CLEANUP — Willie and Vina Jackson of Graham scattered their belongings in the yard of their home this week to dry them out after last weekend's flooding. The Jacksons returned home from a family reunion to find water waist deep in their home.(AP Laserphoto)

BANDERA (AP) — It's the river — the ice-clear Medina, canopied by ancient cypress trees and gurgling gently through the ruggedly beautiful Hill Country — that pumps millions of tourist dollars into scenic Bandera County each year.

But the river — suddenly transformed before dawn Aug. 2 into a snarling, muddy, 50-foot wall of water — turned on Bandera during the lucrative tourist season, snapping those huge cypress canopies like matchsticks and slicing a deadly, multi-million dollar path.

The frothing Medina, spurred by torrential rains from Tropical Storm Amelia which came ashore between Corpus Christi and Brownsville, rampaged at 4 a.m. through the riverfront Camp Bandina homes, built by those who had retired to the solitude of the river. Eight persons, most of them elderly retirees, died there. More than 100 children escaped injury at the church camp only a few yards away.

It ripped through the Peaceful Valley Dude Ranch, which was filled to a festive summer capacity. Almost everything but the buildings' concrete foundations was washed away. Pieces of the ranch airplane were left twisted in a tree downstream.

B / METRO

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Monday, August 14, 1978

Four sleeping Peaceful Valley guests were killed and three others disappeared beneath the churning water. About 20 staff members and guests survived by clinging to trees or rooftops for a terrifying six hours.

In neighboring Kendall and Kerr counties, the usually placid Guadalupe River, also swelled by the 30-inch rains, came out of the limestone hills and killed 10 other persons in Center Point and Comfort.

The next day, tropical rains from the same storm system bore down on the small West Texas ranching town of Albany, about 30 miles northeast of Abilene. The excessive rainfall and bulging Hubbard Creek caused sudden floods that washed away 10 homes, damaged hundreds of others and killed at least five persons.

To the northeast, one county over, the Brazos rose from its banks and inundated the west side of Graham, a town of 8,000.

By the time the rivers returned to their banks a week later, at least 29 persons had died and another 10 or so were missing.

More than a week later, authorities in Albany still were searching for the bodies of four other victims believed swept away and drowned. Sheriff Ben Jack Riley said they may never be found.

"Sides of the creek caved in in several places. They could be buried under 20 feet," he said.

The flood in Albany hit hardest in the city's poorest residential section, a neighborhood known as the "the Flat." Those living in the run-down frame homes located only a few feet from Hubbard Creek who survived got out early or spent the night in trees, praying and watching boiling flood currents destroy their homes.

Fortunately no one was killed in Graham as residents had time to evacuate with a few belongings. The flood waters inundated the city's water pumping station and sewage treatment plant, making daily living uncomfortable for all residents a week after the flood. The muddy waters rushed into many houses and businesses, severely damaging more than 250 in the city limits alone.

"Terrible, terrible," remarked Gov. Dolph Briscoe as he toured Graham late last week with his wife, Janey.

"It's a shame," Mrs. Briscoe said.

Although Graham and Albany were hard hit, it was Bandera, a one-time Texas Ranger frontier outpost and a picturesque resort and ranching town of 1,100, that bore the brunt of the flooding, the area's most deadly and destructive.

Even a week later, searchers still combed the debris for the bodies of the missing victims. The remains of the once-proud cypress trees were tangled along the water's path, tattered clothing and household goods swaying from their torn limbs. Refrigerators, stoves, bricks and twisted automobiles and trucks littered the flooded areas. In some places, the stench from the rotting carcasses of dead livestock hung in the air like the buzzards circling over them.

"It's a mess, a real mess," said Dave Soltesz of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, who estimates it will take several months to clean up the debris.

But Bandera was attempting last week to return to normal. Road and telephone repair crews dotted the area and restaurants and businesses were re-opened.

More than 300 flood victims had applied for federal disaster relief and the first of more than 200 federally-owned mobile homes began arriving for the homeless. The junior high school cafeteria, used as a morgue after the flood, was a bustling Red Cross emergency center.

The electricity has been restored and the city's water supply was not affected by the filthy, germ-laden flood waters.

And most of the National Guardsmen, forced last weekend to keep out looters and curiosity seekers, had departed by last Wednesday.

All but a few of Bandera's numerous dude ranches escaped serious flood damage and were half-heartedly operating last week, filled with flood-curious tourists or faithful guests who have been coming to this area for several years.

"That river was worth millions of dollars to us. We had a beautiful riverfront. It will take a while to clean it up," said Frank Anderwald, owner of the Twin Elms Guest Ranch.

"It's taken years to build up our businesses, but it'll all be back. It'll be in full swing next year," he predicted.

Tourists who have visited Art Kitzman's Peaceful Valley ranch for more than 25 years have donated money and offered to spend their vacations helping to rebuild the popular dude ranch.

"We just don't know if we can afford to rebuild. I think we'll be back. Our guests have called, asking us to rebuild and some have offered their vacations to help," said Kitzman, who estimates his loss at $250,000. He escaped from Peaceful Valley with only the clothes he was wearing, as did vacationing Kim Tomes of Houston, Miss USA of 1977.

"I know that if I do rebuild, I'll be better prepared for another flood," he added. "We might lose some property next time, but I'm going to make sure there's no loss of life."

Local officials in the eight counties declared disaster areas have estimated flood damage to homes and businesses alone at more than $60 million. Three were in the Hill Country — Bandera, Kerr and Kendall — and five in North Central Texas — Shackelford, Young, Haskell, Stephens and Throckmorton.

Some 700 homes and more than 50 businesses were severely damaged or destroyed. The floods also affected municipal facilities like water and sewage plants, roads and bridges. Equipment belonging to utility companies and oil fields suffered.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety's Emergency Operations Center said damage from the floods throughout the state — including crop damage, drowned animals and other agricultural setbacks — may be about $500 million.

RUINED RIVERFRONT — This picnic area along the once scenic Medina River near Bandera was once shaded by ancient cypress trees, which were snapped by fierce floodwaters Aug. 2. Rise Noted In Homes Headed By Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of American family households headed by a single or divorced woman has increased by 46 percent since 1970, the government reported Sunday. But the majority of households still consists of married couples.

A new Census Bureau report showed that in March, 1978, about 8 million, or 11 percent of the country's 76 million households, were headed by a woman with no husband present. That represents an increase of 2.5 million since 1970.

In contrast, 47.4 million households in 1978, or 62 percent, were maintained by married couples. That represents an increase of 2.6 million or only 6 percent during this decade, the report said.

Also, figures show that the average size of the country's households declined from 3.1 persons in 1970 to 2.8 persons in 1978.

The report said that the number of households has increased by 12.6 million, or almost 20 percent, since 1970 for several reasons. Many young people born during the post-World War II "baby boom" years have postponed marriage and set up housekeeping by themselves.

Also, the rising separation and divorce rates often have resulted in splitting one larger household into two smaller ones, the report said.

The government defines a household as a housing unit occupied by one or more unrelated individuals. A family is defined as a group related by blood, marriage or adoption.

The report showed that 11 percent of households in 1978 are maintained by a single person who has never married, compared to 7 percent in 1970.

"More and more young adults are pursuing alternatives to marriage for longer periods of time," the report said. "The marked increase in young adult singles has been partially responsible for the rapid growth of nonfamily households."

Other highlights of the report showed that in 1978:

— About 83 percent of the country's 57.2 million families were maintained jointly by a husband and wife; 3 percent by a man with no wife present; and 14 percent by a woman with no husband present.

— White families accounted for 88 percent of all families, and 92 percent of married couple families.

— Black families consisted of 10 percent of all families and 7 percent of all married couple families.

— About 10 million or 17 percent of the country's 60 million children under age 18 lived in families which did not include a father, compared with 1.5 percent who lived in families with no mother.

The report said that in 1978, about 66 percent of all families lived in metropolitan areas, with 27 percent living in the inner cities.

Extension of Air Discounts Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Airlines has asked the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to extend its Freedom Fare discount rates and to add on new Freedom Fare discounts for nighttime flights.

The Freedom Fares, available if tickets are purchased at least one week in advance of departure, offer discounts of 20 percent on flights Monday through Thursday and 15 percent on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. On most night-time flights departing between 9 p.m. and 6:59 a.m., discounts would be 30 percent Monday through Thursday and 25 percent on the other three days.

The current Freedom Fare authorization expires September 14, 1978. United wants it extended until May 31, 1979.

Tax On Commuting Workers Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is opposed to initiating a non-resident income tax by the District of Columbia upon people who work in Washington but who live in suburban areas in Virginia and Maryland.

The opposition was outlined by the director of the Office of Management and Budget, James T. McIntyre, in a letter to Rep. Herbert E. Harris, D-Va.

Last week a House subcommittee approved legislation that would give the district's City Council the power to levy such a tax.

Blaze Skirts Forest Town

CAZADERO, Calif. (AP) — The tiny forest town of Cazadero was offically out of danger Sunday when officials announced that the wildfire which had consumed more than 12,000 acres and destroyed dozens of homes was 85 percent contained.

But residents were still on alert, and a spokesman for the California Division of Forestry said total containment probably would not come until Monday.

Shortly before noon Sunday, Cazadero, which at one point was less than a mile from the raging fire, was declared out of harm's way.

The fire was reported touched off last Wednesday by a spark from a power mower. By Saturday night it had consumed 74 million board feet of oak and pine, worth more than $13 million. About 55 structures, many of them homes, were destroyed. Uncounted numbers of small animals, and some horses, died.

More than 1,600 firefighters worked to get a line around the fire. They were heartened Sunday by a drop in the temperature overnight, to 65 degrees. Nine men were treated for minor injuries, including one scorpion bite.

The Cazadero fire was the worst in an outbreak of blazes that occurred during a three-week heat wave in which temperatures of 100 degrees and higher were commonplace.

State forest ranger Wilmer Black said the Whitmore fire that consumed some 7,200 acres 20 miles east of Redding in Shasta County, and the 1,700-acre Cap fire near Downieville have both been contained.

On Friday night, a 1,000-acre fire near the Geysers, the nation's largest thermal power installation, was contained.

ENERGY CONFERENCE

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — More than 350 delegates, scientists and researchers — most of whom oppose nuclear energy — are expected for the first annual International Safe Energy Conference here next week. The Aug. 16 through 20 conference, sponsored by a coalition of national and local organizations, is designed to exchange information on solar, wind, geothermal and similar energy sources.

Mac Austin Firm Emphasizing Stock, Service, Consideration

A heavy hardware business tailored in main for industry and its needs, the Mac Austin, Inc. industrial supply firm in Lubbock is the most complete industrial supply house in the entire area.

(Purchase by its ownership of the Amarillo Supply has enabled expanded service convenient throughout the Panhandle and South Plains and adjacent areas.)

With all its other advantages, the Mac Austin firm likely is best known for its integrity and "service and repair on anything we sell that is serviceable".

Located in Lubbock at 1701 Texas Ave., the Mac Austin firm includes "The Tool House" as a major department, with repairs on air and electric and hydraulic tools and equipment as primary services of that division. Personnel of that department mark 30 years combined experience in the field.

Though likely 75 per cent of its business is in the industrial and contracting trades, anyone can profit from turning to Mac Austin, Inc., for quality tools and "the service to back them".

This devotion to quality and service has resulted in enviable growth of the company under ownership of Luther A. Avitts, Jr., who bought it about nine years ago. (The firm was established back in 1932.)

Avitts has assembled men in the organization who know their business and are vitally concerned with customer satisfaction.

Facts Worth Noting

Some pertinent facts regarding the Mac Austin, Inc. firm (at 1701 Texas Ave., phone 747-4331) worth knowing and understanding include:

Only quality tools are stocked.

The firm is geared for maintenance and repair of all it sells.

West Texas and eastern New Mexico are served by the business that is both wholesale and retail, with representatives on the road.

A large growth has been experienced in jobber business.

Inventory has been tremendously increased under present ownership.

Air Tools

Air tools have been added to the inventory, providing the biggest supply of these and their parts in West Texas.

The staff (20 to 25) works continuously on the lines, inventory and latest advances.

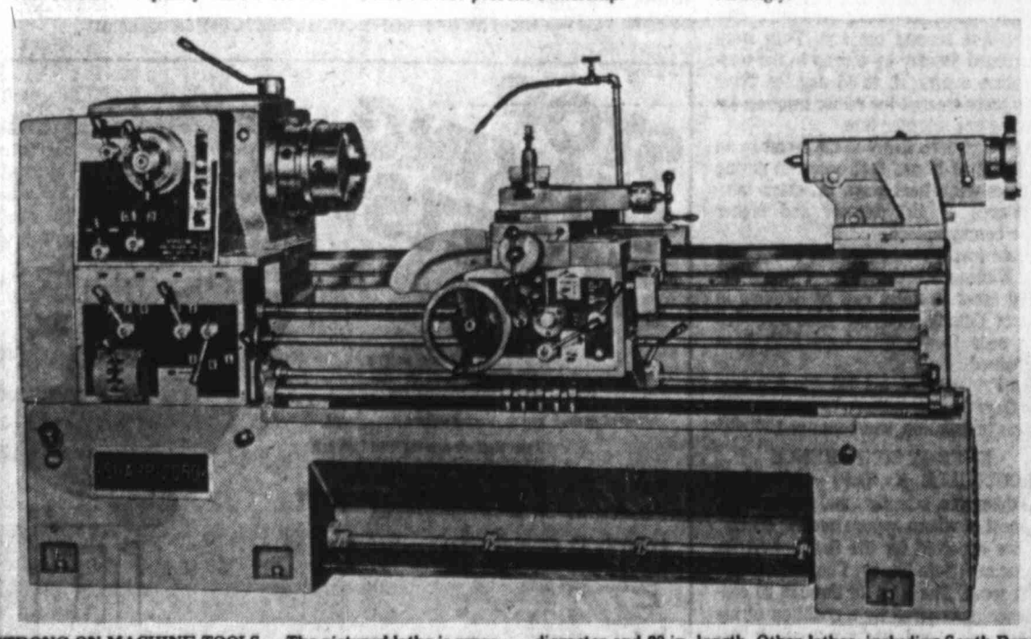
Expanded Service Facilities

The service department space had been quadrupled!

A rental department is maintained for hand and power tools.

And possibly most noticeable, at first glance, is the unique showroom, with the huge tool selection actually on display, where inspection, comparison and selection comes so much easier than through a catalog!

Meet the folks at Mac Austin Inc.; you'll be glad they are in Lubbock; you'll be proud of the inventory and service afforded; and you'll profit by trading with a firm that recognizes its customers as its "bread and butter," and treats them accordingly.



STRONG ON MACHINE TOOLS — The pictured lathe is representative of the modern and 'in-demand' tools for the machine shop stocked at the Mac Austin firm in Lubbock. This particular unit features a 3 1/8 spindle bore and can handle stock of 21-in. diameter and 80-in. length. Other lathes, including South Bend, are stocked together with a wide variety of tools as correctly hinted in the accompanying story.

NEW HOME, NEW CONVENIENCE, STOCK EXPANSION TOLD

Tallman Pools, At New Address, Invites Open House Attendance

Tallman Pools has a new home!

New convenience for the customer is now provided, with Tallman now on Brownfield Highway, west of the Hayloft Dinner Theatre, and one mile east of Wolfforth.

The address: 7909 Brownfield Road; the phone numbers: 866-4882 and 797-6659.

"Now, it can be easier than ever for you to have a Tallman Pool in your future . . . even for enjoyment before this winter, and on through the winter and for seasons to come!"

(Tallman handles the bubble pool enclosures that can make a new pool or one's present facility a pleasure all year long.)

Open House

"To introduce Tallman Pools' new home and the services, chemicals, accessories, types of in-ground pools and all its many services, open house is being conducted throughout this week. Coffee and donuts are being served, and we hope you will visit with us. We want to personally thank you for your trade and confidence that has made this growth possible."

Tallman Pools is open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturdays.

Primarily serving as contractors of in-ground pools, Tallman with opening of its new quarters has expanded its accessory and supply stock.

One is invited to call now, or even better . . . come by during our open house . . . for a free estimate in your own situation.

The Tallman Pools story is quite a success story:

Back in 1962, Al and Jan Tallman, each in their early 20's, wanted a pool of their own . . . so what did they do? They started their own pool construction business, on a small scale, in their home area of Buffalo, N.Y.

Business expanded. Even after going into the Rochester area, they did all their own work, and really kept busy, for some 10 years.

At this time they had increasing difficulty in prompt material delivery from some factories, so what did they do? They began to manufacture the steel panels and vinyl liners, themselves!

The business prospered as the quality and integrity of their work became known.

In 1972 an additional facility was established to serve the south . at Atlanta, Ga. There are now two others, in Dallas and in Florida.

This husband-wife team previously lived in Fort Worth where they were co-owners of the Ft. Worth and Tarrant County franchise for Tallman.

Seeing the opportunities and desirability of Lubbock and area with its well-known business climate, and with the other apparent advantages of living on the South Plains, the Larsons have made Lubbock their home.

"We believe in what we sell," they emphasize, relating that there is a 10-year guarantee on their pool construction, with an even greater 20-year guarantee on materials by Tallman.

Custom designed pools, for the owner's particular need (landscape, budget space, etc.) is a specialty. Some standard sizes also are available.

The pools are not pre-constructed . . . they are built especially for you and for your pleasure.

The quoted prices include everything, a ready-to-swim situation when the job is completed. Plumbing, electric units, even a deck is included in the turnkey operation.

Most usually, construction involves 14 working days or less for this quality construction!

"For qualify, for lasting joy and satisfaction, may we give you the complete Tallman Pools story?

Service Capability, Price, Products, Acclaimed At Highland Beauty Salon

"Hairstyling — an Art"; likely this can best describe the desire and capabilities of the beauticians at Highland Beauty Salon, 4031 34th St. in Lubbock.

Kay Tilley, Helen Ingraham, and Lucy Delgado all are experienced beauticians, and they do not need special praise as their talent speaks for itself! Cathye Davis, graduate of Cinderella's Beauty School, and Brenda Mabry, graduate of Jessie Lee's Hair Design Institute, are the newest additions to the shop and are very capable. Ask about their "Special of the Month", for new clientele!

Shop owners Royce and Barbara Lane are not beauticians themselves, and they firmly believe in letting the beauticians take care of their own clientele, each in her own personal way, creating an atmosphere of friendliness and goodwill.

"We feel the girls are really working for themselves and will do everything for the benefit of their customers. Our main job is to keep the shop clean for a pleasant atmosphere, and we try to buy a variety of products that will suit each individual's needs," Barbara explains, "If we don't have it, we will try and get it. Also, due to our extemely hot summer this year, our landlord has installed refrigerated air conditioning, of which we are extremely proud".

Quality products featured include Zoto's Lanolin Bath, White Velvet; Claimatress, Trichoperms and Creative Curl from Redken; Uniperms, Perfect Touch permanent waves, styling cuts, colortints and rinses, frostings, shampoo and set (with or without back-combing) and blow styling or curling iron styling.

"Our prices are reasonable and the shop specializes in hair care for the entire family."

Special Offer

Royce and Barbara Lane join with the beauticians in inviting you to come in and get acquainted at Highland Beauty Salon.

Mondays, Tuedsays and Wednesdays have been designated as "Senior Citizens Days" by Kay Tilley, Cathye Davis and Brenda Mabry. Ask for one of these beauticians to inquire about this special for clientile of 62 years of age or over.

Highland Beauty Salon is open Monday through Saturday from 8:30 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. each day for calls for appointment. Phone 792-9823. Early or late appointments can be arranged at the convenience of each beautician.

Business & Industrial Review

Steamex, Yates Carpet & Tile Firms Now At 34th And Slide

"A lot of people, not content to be satisfied with anything less, have depended upon the authentic and proven Steamex, a better, quicker way to clean carpets!"

Steamex home-rental steam cleaning machines have been made available by Midwest Texas Steamex, formerly at 5111 34th St., but now further west on the same block, still in the 5-Point Center, but now on the corner at 5127 34th St...at corner of 34th & Slide.

(Of course, the Steamex rental units not only are available at this central location, but still are located throughout the region where a large number of dry cleaning establishments, even hardware and grocery stores in some communities, make them available.)

Of particular significance is that not only has the Lubbock firm moved to new location, but a brand new business, Yates Carpet & Tile, is announced, at the same Slide and 34th Site.

Now, for carpet cleaning units, rentals or sales, and for the finest in carpet and tile, one location does it all!

Bob and Bobby Yates are owners of both Yates Carpet & Tile and the sister Midwest Steamex operation. They are long experienced in the field and can render a vital service.

Quality Carpet Stocked

"Name" lines of carpet are featured, including Williamsburg, Burlington House, Callaway, Brink Crest and Vantage. A good stock is maintained at all times, but in event one's choice is not on the floor, delivery most usually can be made overnight or within two days.

Full rolls, remnants and all are available. There is even the "do-it-yourself" carpet.

The Yates men are understandably enthusiastic about the new carpet firm, the new location and the ever-expanding Steamex services.

(Check with Yates for the Steamex rental units nearest you; they are located throughout the area, with newest location at the Stop & Shop Grocery at 74th Street and Quaker Avenue in Lubbock. They also are available at Albertsons, 50th at Indiana, and numerous other Lubbock and regional points.)

New, Light Model

The new models of Steamex have been introduced, including a light 30-pound unit that is one of the very lightest on the market, yet said to do the same jobs as the larger units.

This would seem to be an extraction carpet cleaner designed especially "for her" with its ease and safety in operation, ease in fitting into any size car for transport, easy to move up, down and around, and easy to get the results hoped for. This model may be rented or purchased at Steamex of Lubbock.

The Pro 12.5, a total carpet cleaning system for professionals, businesses and institutions, is the other new model Yates wants to tell you about! Its features permit cleaning large areas without frequent interruption and allow use in areas where noise is objectionable. It definetly makes less noise.

Aside from the convenience of the Steamex rental units, it is emphasized that steam cleaning is perfectly safe . . . with thousands used in the Lubbock area alone, according to reports of Bob Yates and Bob Yates Jr. They point out that there is no danger of ruining a carpet when the Steamex cleaner is used.

Gray's Boys & Girls Fashions Featuring Back-To-School Wear

For happy, rewarding back-to-school shopping, Gray's Boys & Girls Fashions is the ready answer!

A very good choice in coats is now on the racks, and special orders on coats also are taken.

Sweater vests, sweaters, fall suits for boys and so very many pretty things for girls . . . there's all this and more at Gray's.

Stocked are girls sizes in toddler through juniors (including pre-teens) and boys sizes in toddler through student pant sizes 32 waist, and shirt size 20.

Wouldn't now be the great time to select the entire school wardrobe, while stock is very, very new and complete, even laying away coats if desired?

For Pre-Teens, Too

The pre-teen selection for girls involves the complete wardrobe (with exception of shoes) with choices in tops, pants, long dresses, sleepwear, etc.

There are few stores that carry such a selection in this age range, and Gray's must be commended for its continuing and successful efforts in stocking this appreciated line.

Locally Owned, Operated

Owners and founders Tom Gray and Kay Gray are ever mindful of the reception and growing trade the store has been accorded since its opening in early 1976. Without this patronage, confidence, and host of friends, the present large stock would have been impossible.

Both Tom and Kay are on hand personally to assure customer service.

For those who conceivably may not yet have become acquainted with this distinctive store, the current new-season presentation affords a banner opportunity . . . for one's profit and satisfaction . . . for full readiness for school time ahead.

American Equipment & Trailer Adds Wilson Line Of Stock, Grain Trailers

"For our friends in the Panhandle and South Plains area, there is big news from American Equipment & Trailer, Inc.!"

"We are now the authorized distributor for Wilson livestock and grain trailers, the big name in the industry."

Wilson Trailer Co. has been most prominent in the transportation industry since back in 1890 . . . the year young Frank T. Wilson went into business up in the Dakota Territory, complete with two carloads of carriage and wagon stock!

Today, headquartered in Sioux City, Iowa, Wilson Trailer Co. stands out as the specialist in the manufacturing of livestock and grain trailers, with plants in four locations, and a sales representation unequaled in the country.

Three Locations

For 25 years, American Equipment & Trailer, Inc., located at 3707 Quirt Ave. in Lubbock, has been meeting the equipment and service needs of drivers and haulers in the Panhandle area.

"Today, we're proud to offer customers our modern facilities, innovative equipment, large parts inventory, and large, experienced sales staff — available both in-house and on-the-road.

"We see the addition of the quality Wilson Trailer line as a natural extension of our long-standing service to you, the people of the Panhandle, our customers and friends."

American Equipment & Trailer not only has large facilities in Lubbock, but also at 610 N. Grand in Amarillo, and at 1400 West Overland Trail in Abilene.

Invitation is extended to view and inspect and compare the Wilson trailer models, with numerous ones always in stock. See the steel grain hoppers, the aluminum drop-center livestock trailers, the train trailers and other livestock trailers. Choose from multiple models, sizes and designs.

Wilson . . . and American Equipment & Trailer . . . understand the truckers' needs, serving accordingly. Experienced, qualified people make it so.

Wilson's basic commitment is "to produce what our customers need while maintaining the highest degree of manufacturing excellence".

Many Products

See this better firm for such other products and lines as the Great Dane refrigerated trailers, Clement dump bodies, Bendix-Westinghouse air brake equipment, Tulsa winches and parts, Galion dump bodies and farm hoists, Mid-West grain beds, truck and trailer wheels and wheel parts, brake drums, Holland 5th wheels and parts, Michigan fleet gasoline tanks, tank installation kits, bearings, air horns, complete brake exchange parts, truck-trailer lighting equipment, trailer axles and parts, vacuum brakes and parts, Stemco wheel oilers, Koenig service bodies and tool boxes, R.O. cranes, aerial devices, Henderson bulk bodies and spreaders, and more.

"We are proud of our customer list, appreciating the opportunities of years past to serve the contractor, rancher, farmer, industrialist, trucker and all with quality products from recognized lines. We look forward to continuation of these opportunities and privileges in years to come.

"Come out and visit American Equipment & Trailer, Inc., at its modern facility in Lubbock — eight acres of land and a 12,000 sq. ft. building with multiple double-bay drive-through shop, parts department and spacious showrooms. A genuine welcome awaits."

Dubose Automotive & Machine, at 1520 19th St., phone 765-8429, actually can handle any machine work for auto, truck and irrigation engines, in addition to its full-service garage . . . and all at one convenient location!

Great Products, Fine People Contribute To Rainbo Success

Rainbo Baking Co. of Lubbock, in its series of thumbnail sketches of key personnel, is happy this week to salute Johnnie Askew.

Askew, prominent on the Lubbock bakery scene for more than three decades, exudes a zest in his job, his product, his employer firm and in the community, all easily explaining why he is termed "a person you can count on".

Harry Hoopes, manager of the Lubbock Rainbo Baking Co., is profuse in his recommendation of Johnnie Askew, "literally a jack-of-all-trades who knows a whole lot about Rainbo and its concept of service to the area".

Long With Rainbo

Presently serving as transport and thrift store sales manager for the firm, Johnnie Askew dates his association with the firm back to 1947, and since that time he has served as route salesman, supervisor, public relations man, etc.

In the late 40's, Askew, who then lived in Tennessee and was in a textile mill, visited the South Plains and "fell in love with Lubbock". He went back to his native state, sold out, and he and Mrs. Askew have called the Texas plains their home ever since.

"West Texans are the finest people in the world . . . they sit together and drink coffee, not caring whether the man across the table is worth a million or a hundred!"

The Askews first lived in Littlefield when he joined the baking company then owned by Bill Mead. As a route salesman, he resided in Littlefield 16 years, then to Plainview for a 10-year stint, and then into Lubbock six years ago, but always employed by the bakery firm at the same quarters it now occupies at 1956 Texas Ave. in Lubbock.

"Now, as to Rainbo, I could talk all morning about the company and the people who make it tick. The Rainbo management takes care of the people who take care of Rainbo, and that's the way it should be. Manager Harry Hoopes is the finest manager one could hope to find . . . anywhere," Askew emphasizes.

Appreciates Friendships

Johnnie is a natural for his job . . . seeing it as a challenge in a very competitive situation. He likes people, appreciating them and telling them so; and he enjoys selling. Small wonder he is a valued staffmember.

For hobbies, golfing, bass and trotline fishing take priority.

"My wife, Thelma, also enjoys the outdoors and fishing in particular; we have a travel trailer and thoroughly enjoy going to the lakes. As to retirement . . . I'm in no hurry; I like to work and still find time to fish".

The Askews have two children: a daughter, Rita Ann Houston of Missouri, and a son, Scott Askew of Lubbock. The family attends the Baptist Church.

Rainbo . . . and Johnnie Askew . . . they're your kind of folks!

Doughty Enterprises Affords Wide Range Cleaning Services

Doughty Enterprises, phone 793-2271, located at 3211-A 34th St., offers a variety of cleaning services to Lubbock and the surrounding area.

These services include janitorial service, commercial and residential window washing service, carpet cleaning, upholstery cleaning and floor stripping and waxing.

"In our eight years in business in Lubbock, we have strived to do the best job possible for our customers. Preston Doughty, owner and operator of the business, gives personal attention to each and every detail of the job at hand."

Although janitorial service was the original service offered by Doughty Enterprises, the firm now has expanded into the other areas of the business necessary to provide a full line to the customer.

"A large part of our business is devoted to our window washing service."

Preston Doughty and Simon Rodriquez will be found providing the same personal attention to the window service as to the rest of the services.

Daily work lists are kept on all route work done. Each store owner signs the work list each week after the job is completed. This provides for good customer relations and guarantees the customer that he is getting the full service that he is paying for.

Doughty has extended this same prompt attention to the recently acquired window washing division of Hughes Service Co.

For Carpets, Too

"We at Doughty Enterprises are able to completely clean and deodorize carpets and upholstery, either in the home or at our cleaning shop at 3211-A 34th St. For carpets, we use one of the best and most powerful steam cleaning units available today. We also provide shampooing for the carpets that are cleaned better by this method. We are able to dry clean or steam clean upholstered furniture as needed."

Insured, Bonded

Mobile communication provides fast, prompt service to the customer. Preston will be glad to help you with your cleaning problems when you call 793-2271.

"Our fully insured and bonded personnel will try to provide the best of cleaning services to you, the customer. Please feel free to give us a call at 793-2271 or visit our shop at 3211-A 34th St. Your business is always appreciated."

'We Pay You For Taking Off Pounds' Told In Diet Center Announcement

"Are you taking advantage of the New Quarter Pounder offer?" (It is a program of participating Diet Centers . . . not of a popular hamburger chain!)

More about this unique limited-time offer from the Diet Center at 4902 34th St. (Terrace Center) and at 3417 73rd St. (Summit Place):

"Join the Diet Center program and the participating center will pay you . . . in cash . . . $1 per pound weight lost each week! And . . . for weight loss by any friend you bring into the Diet Center program, you will be given 25 cents per pound per week for that friend's loss of weight!

New Phone Number

Phone numbers for the above-mentioned Diet Centers are easy to remember . . . so don't delay, for a new opportunity in loss of pounds, call the Terrace Diet Center at 799-DIET, or the Summit Place center at 793-DIET! Try it!

Rita Pence and Debra Ridpath are at the Summit Place Diet Center, and Deanie Holland is on hand at the Terrace location. Each is extremely well qualified to assist in sensible weight loss and control.

Meet each of these; they are folks with a message:

Rita, a lifelong Lubbock resident, points out that the Diet Center she first established here opened in early January with purpose of helping people lose weight quickly, stabilize their weight at the desired goal and to teach them how to maintain their weight loss.

Rita is the daughter of Lubbock businessman Jack Ridpath who is associated in the firm. A graduate of Lubbock High School in 1969, she attended college in Rexburg, Idaho, and while there became acquainted with the revolutionary but very practical Diet Center program that actually was initiated in Rexburg.

She took extensive training in the Diet Center home office there before returning to Lubbock to establish her own center and to assist the rapidly expanding clientele list here.

Debra (Mrs. Tim) Ridpath joined the family operation in early summer. The daughter of Weldon and Ellene Butler of Levelland, she is a graduate of Levelland High School and attended South Plains College, receiving an associate degree in elementary education and minor in health sciences including nutrition.

"Rita got me interested in the Diet Center business . . . and I love it. I see how the program makes others so happy, helping them regain self confidence and also becoming actually prettier."

Deanie Holland, newest counselor and who is at the Terrace Diet Center, is the daughter of Billy and Jean Wood of Plainview. A graduate of Plainview High school, she attended Texas A & M for three years, and has been a Lubbock resident well over a year, performing a very commendable service at the Terrace Diet Center.

"I am thoroughly sold on the Diet Center program," she explains, "through personal experience. I enjoy working with people and helping them, so it seems only natural that I am now serving at the Diet Center."

Four Diet Centers now are in Lubbock, including the two mentioned above, and the others at 2321-A 50th St., and at 4708-B 4th St. (in Holiday Center).

For Women and Men

Essentially a diet program, the Diet Center method also advises light exercise. At a very modest cost, one may avail herself or himself of daily counseling during the weight loss period, counseling during stabilization and further aid during later maintenance for a lifetime of weight control.

Varied programs are available, and there is a Diet Center near you!

The most popular Diet Center programs involve two to six weeks, with an expected weight loss of one-half to one pound a day . . . (more for men) with Rita Pence then reporting that "You've won the award for staying on your diet . . . the Nobelly prize!"

HERALDING THE NEW SEASON — Jan Holleman and daughter, Kellie, are shown at Jan's Casual Cottage where newest styles comprise the enticing stock that always is refreshingly new.

Jan's Casual Cottage Presents Fall, Winter Apparel Fashions

"For truly exciting back-to-school preparation, recommendation is in order for a trek to Jan's Casual Cottage for selection of 'wanted' back-to-school fashions."

Select from junior sizes 3 through 13, and missy sizes 6 to 16 at Jan's, 3404 34th St., in Indiana Gardens.

Early-Season Markdowns

Almost-unheard-of announcement here at beginning of the fall purchasing season is revelation from Jan's Casual Cottage that selected back-to-school items are marked 25 per cent off as a special saving!

One can find denims, fashion pants, sweaters, shirts and knit tops, with a good selection in sizes,among groups in this special offer.

Everywhere in the most attractive shop there is evidence of winter and fall readiness, with everything in stock geared to these seasons at this time. There are new skirts, dresses, coordinates, separates, etc., all reflecting discriminating choice and understanding of new-season fashion preferences.

Known Labels

"What better way can you learn all about Jan's, and what the shop can do for you either as a new or long-time customer than by visiting the shop during this back-to-school preparation period?"

All merchandise is casual; all personnel friendly and efficient.

Jan's is one of the more popular stores in its field, and upon a visit there, one readily can discover why this is the situation.

Master Charge, Visa and layaway purchases are welcomed.

Selections are grouped for easy shopping.

"And remember, together with the very fine clothing presentation, that Jan's Casual Cottage is a relaxing and casual place in which to select."

W.M. Smith Electric Business Affording Multiple Services

"Let us explain how we can serve you, as we likely have aided your neighbor, with vertical hollowshaft, v-belt drive, tumble-shaft drive and all the other advantages."

Well electrification by W.M. Smith Electric Co., 1911 Clovis Road, has further advantages, such as rodent protected, all-weather and temperature sensing control panels, flanges for tumble shafts, compact base gearhead mountings, high service factor engineering drives, all name-brand equipment and top resale value.

Free estimates on well electrification are featured, and one can be assured of service around the clock, quality in installation, wiring, material and workmanship, and for correct modifications in well set-ups.

Compressor Values

Sales and service for all makes of hoists, including the Budget line, is another key segment of the business.

Motors

Furthermore, the firm has parts for everything it sells, offering service on everything sold, also.

Jent's House Of Music Tells Readiness For School Demands

Jent's House of Music, 2646 34th St., has a message of interest to the band and/or orchestra parent, and the following key points of that message should be of special significance:

One may rent a new or reconditioned band or orchestra instrument at Jent's, with rentals starting at $10.50 per month.

There is no time limit, with rental payments applying to purchase when desired!

There are music stands, method books, sheet music and just everything for the beginning or advanced student.

"We at Jent's House of Music would like to welcome you . . . whether you have a son or daughter who is just beginning in the music program or if you are involved for the second or third time . . . we hope to make the experience as smooth as possible.

"We feel that we have the best rental-purchase plan there is to offer; it has several options we feel you will like including some that other rental plans do not offer. We invite your inquiry for full details of a program to meet your individual needs and preferences."

Jent's has a complete repair department that is considered to be one of the best in this part of the state. Either minor repairs or complete overhauls are available. Lealon Staley, a veteran repairman of 30 years, is in charge of this department. "If you have any questions regarding our policies, products and services, please feel free to inquire; your Jent's salesman will help in every way possible.

Documentary Scenes Staged, Group Says

NEW YORK (AP) — A muffled cry is heard, a chair tumbles through the air, a youth gang pummels a youngster to the ground. The ABC camera jerks down a broken and forgotten street, recording for a news documentary the seemingly random violence of a slum.

The scene — presented as reality — was viewed in 10.5 million homes across the nation last June 28. But was it reality?

The loose-knit Black Producer's Association has complained to the Federal Communications Commission it was not, that ABC staged this and other scenes in "Youth Terror: The View from Behind the Gun."

ABC says it had arranged with some youths to follow them through a "typical" day and that they were asked to do what they normally do.

While it is generally recognized that the mere presence of a camera can be enough to influence a person's behavior, Hill says the producers went too far by asking the gang members to fight.

Everyone else involved with the program unequivocally denies the charges, which have thrown ABC's News Documentary Unit into turmoil.

ABC news chief Roone Arledge has denounced Hill and has asked a prestigious law firm for an investigation "to satisfy ourselves and our viewing public that they are untrue and without basis in fact."

And the makers of the highly praised documentary lament that the allegations now veil the rewards of nine months' consuming labor.

"I thought it was a beautiful show. I was proud — and I am still proud — of it. I feel lousy and angry and outraged," says Helen Whitney, who produced, wrote and directed the program.

"I believe we're going to be vindicated on this, and I would like to see it over," adds Pamela Hill, executive producer of the unit and no relation of Hugh Hill. "It's exhausting and it's painful. Our very integrity is on the line."

To ABC, Hill is a disgruntled former employee whose hopes for a permanent network job — his second chance — were dashed by acknowledged errors in judgment. He concedes that he did, for instance, get some of the gang members drunk and that, to prove it was possible, he bought some marijuana from an 11-year-old boy.

But the 30-year-old Hill, who earlier had quit NBC after he was denied the kind of network job he sought, says he left ABC to strive for an on-camera position. He is now producing a film about Harlem for unnamed real estate people there, Hill says.

"If I preferred a network job, I would have stayed at NBC," he comments.

While ABC contends that Hill has embarked on an "intensive" and "vindictive" campaign against the program, the Dartmouth College graduate claims the Black Producer's Association started the action.

The group is described as 30 independent producers who organized last April, paying dues but no specified amount. It has no regular office space and its telephone is answered by a nonprofit community organization called the Children's Arts Carnival.

In a July 28 letter to the FCC, the association claimed upwards of $50 was lent to some of the youths and said "Youth Terror" fails to say that many were no longer involved in "criminal behavior."

Among other things, it accused the network of having the youths recreate past exploits and said there is "strong evidence" that events were staged. The letter specifically referred to the gang violence and the firing of a gun from a tenement window.

"The program was an example of sensationalist reporting which does not build bridges through information and understanding," it said.

Saying it was always concerned about deliberate falsification, distortion or staging of news, the FCC asked for documentation. That bundle of tapes and statements was being prepared by the association.

It is not clear, however, whether any investigation can be conclusive. One thug, prominent in the broadcast, for example, has denied that ABC put him up to the violence, then recanted the denial and then — according to ABC — recanted the recantation.

Still, a youth called "Blue," tells Hill on one tape that production associate Richard Kagan and Miss Whitney urged him to "make it look good" while fighting. "I made believe I was punching him hard," Blue recounts, and "Alberto" says he actually volunteered to be the gang's victim: "We were having fun."

A viewer might conclude, from the youths' boasts and apparent self-consciousness on the program, that indeed they were performing for the camera on occasion. But did they fight on their own or not?

Although Hill says in his statement that he heard Miss Whitney ask for "a little action," the producer says she didn't have to.

"I do not remember saying that. I cannot conceive of saying that," she responds. "I remember quite specifically saying, 'Do what you normally do.'"

She says violence "happens all the time, so why bother staging it? But the important point is that we do not do those kinds of things."

Says associate producer Marcia Leslie, "I don't know whether they were performing for us, whether they were performing for themselves, whether it was theater of the street ... It was frightening. It really was."

Reporting it has received a number of letters about the raw language on "Youth Terror," the FCC says it will review the association's documentation "very carefully."

Dog Recommended For Police Award

ELLICOTT CITY, Md. (AP) — Schnapps was injured while on duty, and the fact that he's a dog shouldn't keep him from getting the county police department's "injury ribbon," his handler says.

Schnapps, a 4-year-old German shepherd in the Howard County Police K-9 Corps, suffered a cut leg July 23 when he was hit by a bottle during a disturbance here, said Lt. Maurice M. Miller, commander of the county police's patrol bureau.

"Also I will get him a bone," he said.

BUS CRASH

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A bus plunged into a river in northern Uganda Saturday, killing 40 persons, most of them children, Radio Uganda reported Sunday. In a broadcast monitored here, the radio report said the bus was carrying more than 100 passengers and was traveling between Arua and Moyo.

Heiress Denies Divorce Rumors

ATHENS (AP) — Christina Onassis, whose marriage to former Soviet shipping executive Sergei Kauzov has led to a plethora of rumors in the world press, denied in an interview published Sunday that she has had a change of heart and is considering divorce.

"I tell you that everything that has been written is false," the 27-year-old shipping heiress told the Athens daily Acropolis. "I am not divorcing and I am returning to Moscow."

She also was furious about news reports that her third husband was a Soviet spy.

"Why do the papers write that my husband is a spy?" she asked the newspaper's correspondent. "How do they know it? Can they prove it? Why don't they stop being interested in my private life?"

When told that such was the fate of all famous people, she said: "Fine. But what has my husband got to do with all this? And if I tell you that he's not a spy, who will believe me?"

The interviewer, who said he had the brief talk with her at the Onassis villa in Athens, described Mrs. Kauzov and the Onassis household as "clearly upset" with recent press treatment.

She did not specify when she would return to Moscow, where she was married Aug. 1, but relatives speculated it would be toward the end of this week. She unexpectedly in Greece Aug. 5, interrupting honeymoon plans only four days after the wedding.

She confirmed she planned to go to Scorpios, her private island, but said it was to visit the graves of her father and brother. She denied she was going there for a wedding party as had been previously reported.

Athens press reports had said about 20 members of the Greek and international jet set would be going to Scorpios for a party.

"Scorpios is a place you must all respect," Christina was quoted as saying. "There lie the two persons who were dearest to me in my life — my father and brother. Therefore please respect my desire to go there."

Aristotle Onassis, who died in March 1975, and his only son, Alexander, who died in the crash of a private plane in January 1973, are buried side-by-side in a marble tomb on Scorpios beside the Onassis private chapel.

Kauzov has said he could not join his wife in Greece because it would take him at least two months to obtain a visa from Soviet authorities.

Fancy Restaurants Race To Get Grouse On Table

LONDON (AP) — A wild grouse dined on heather high in the Scottish hills Saturday morning. Seven hours later it was the roasted centerpiece of a $35 dinner in London on "The Glorious 12th," Britain's opening day of grouse season.

Posh restaurants traditionally compete to be the first to have a red grouse from Scotland or northern England on the table and they usher in the early birds on silver trays.

That price provides men hired as "beaters" to stomp through the heather and scare the birds into flight, "loaders" to keep a spare shotgun filled with shells and hand it to the hunter after a miss, dogs to retrieve the fallen prey, whisky to ward off the chill and picnic hampers stuffed with delicacies and fine wines.

Not included is the cost of the shotguns, with a handmade pair fetching up to $23,640 in London. Shells also are extra.

At least four chefs used helicopters to fly from the Gleneagles Hotel in Perthshire to the moors where they bagged their birds and then flew back to their kitchen.

The Cafe Royal in London arranged to have its first 20 grouse delivered from Scotland at 9:40 a.m. by a British Airways plane.

He was greeted at the restaurant's front door by a bagpiper in kilt and knee socks. To the tune of a Scottish reel, head chef Roger Banfield carried the fowl to the kitchen, plucked them himself and "cooked them to perfection."

By 1:30 p.m., the Cafe Royal's first Scottish grouse of the season had been presented in the dining room with a flourish, accompanied by dark gravy, smoked salmon, watercress salad, braised celery, new carrots, bread sauce, fried potatoes, fresh raspberries and heavy cream, coffee and a spot of whisky.

The set-price meal cost $30.65 and did not include the normal service charge of 15 percent or wine.

Endangered Cacti Bring Big Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new book by the Smithsonian Institution on endangered plants in the United States says that in one unnamed Texas town, sheds are filled with as many as 30,000 field-collected small, globular cacti awaiting sale.

Illegal aliens have been paid one penny per plant to harvest all of this type of cacti they can find, with the expectation that the plants can be resold on the market for as much as $1 each, the book says.

Up to $350 is being asked for large Arizona barrel cacti in New York City.

The book, "Endangered and Threatened Plants of the United States," is available from the Smithsonian Institution Press at $17.50.

From the information you have given us, it is highly unlikely that Medicare will cover your purchase of orthopedic shoes. Orthopedic shoes by themselves are not covered by Medicare. The only way that these can be covered by Medicare is if the person needs them and they are attached to leg braces.

Heartline has developed a book covering the entire Medicare program. This is a simplified, easy-to-understand version written in question-and-answer form. HEARTLINE: I started drawing Social Security benefits at age 62. I have been drawing these for five months now. I have an opportunity for a job that would pay me a salary high enough that I could not receive any Social Security benefits. Since I am going to take this job, I am going to have my Social Security benefits stopped. I am planning to work until I turn 65. I know that by taking my Social Security benefits at age 62, I had to take a 20 percent reduction in my benefits. When I start drawing my Social Security at age 65, will I still have to take this full reduction? — R.T.

When you start drawing your Social Security benefits again at age 65, you do not have to take the full 20 percent reduction. However, your benefits will be reduced due to your drawing five months of benefits. A person's Social Security benefits are reduced 5/9 of 1 percent for each month that benefits are collected before the recipient's 65th birthday. Since you collected for five months before you were 65, your Social Security benefit will only be reduced about 3 percent (5/9 of 1 percent times 5 months equals about 3 percent.)

Los Angeles Gives Allen Preseason Exit

THE VICTOR? — By the grimace, it is difficult to tell if Jimmy Connors is winning or losing. But the reaction is his way of showing that he has broken service en route to a win over Spain's Jose Higueras in the National Clay Courts Championship Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George Allen, who coached the Los Angeles Rams for just two preseason games, was fired as coach and replaced by offensive coordinator Ray Malavasi, Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom announced Sunday.

Under Allen, named to replace Chuck Knox at the Rams' helm last Februrary, the team had lost both preseason games, a 14-7 setback to New England in the opener and a 17-0 decision to San Diego on Saturday.

"It is my feeling that I have made a serious error in judgment in believing George Allen could work within our framework," Rosenbloom said in a prepared statement. "It has been extremely difficult for him to adjust to a new situation.

"Unquestionably he is a fine coach and administrator. His record speaks for itself. However, I'm certain it's in the best interest of all concerned to make this change at this time."

Allen, 56, had been the Rams' coach earlier, guiding the team for five seasons from 1966 to 1970. He was fired by the club's president, the late Dan Reeves, and went to the Washington Redskins where he spent the past seven seasons before Rosenbloom hired him to lead Los Angeles once again.

Allen's record with the Rams during that earlier stint was 49-17-4. Then he had a 67-30-1 mark with the Redskins. In both cases, he took over losing teams and turned them into winners.

When Knox announced following last season he was resigning to become head coach of the Buffalo Bills, Rosenbloom interviewed a number of coaches, then finally announced the job was Allen's. In January, Allen was fired by Redskins' owner Bennett Williams, who said he was convinced Allen was negotiating with Los Angeles at that time.

Allen's training methods had drawn scattered criticism from some Rams players in camp recently and the club at one time had five players who walked out for one reason or another. Allen's long workouts seemed to draw particular criticism.

The team's lack of offense in the two preseason games — seven points in eight quarters — had drawn boos from the Ram fans and heat from the media in Los Angeles.

Malavasi, 47, was a holdover from the Knox regime with the Rams, one of the few assistants Allen retained. Malavasi had spent five years under Knox directing the Los Angeles defense, a strong point of the team that won five consecutive division championships.

His other pro coaching experience includes jobs with the Denver Broncos, the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian League, the Buffalo Bills and Oakland Raiders.

Mahaffey Wins Second In Row

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — John Mahaffey, who snapped a long slump with a dramatic victory for the PGA championship a week ago, ran off a string of birdies down the stretch Sunday to win the $225,000 Pleasant Valley Golf Classic by two strokes.

Mahaffey, playing with daredevil confidence, fired a four-under-par 67 for a 72-hole score of 270, smashing the PGA-Pleasant Valley tournament record of 271 set by Ray Floyd last year. After falling two strokes behind Dr. Gil Morgan with a bogey on the 65th hole, Mahaffey put together four consecutive birdies to pull in front. He clenched the victory when Morgan took a double bogey six on the next to last hole.

Playing in the final threesome with Floyd and third round leader Mark Hayes, Mahaffey had a bogey on the 70th hole but hung tough the rest of the way, adding $45,000 to the $50,000 he won for the coveted PGA title.

Morgan and Floyd each birdied the final hole, settling for a tie for second. Morgan had a final round 69 for a 72-hole score of 272. Floyd had to settle for a tie for second despite his his 13th consecutive sub-par round here since his first visit in 1965. He had a four-under-par 67 for his 272.

Mark Hayes, who started the final round with a one stroke lead, slipped to a three-over-par 74 for a total of 276. He was hurt by bogeys on the 67th and 68th holes and a double bogey on the 69th.

Tying Hayes for 4th place at 276 were Bruce Lietzke, who had a 67, Bob Shearer, with a final 68 and Miller Barber, with a closing 69. Three bogeys on the last nine holes were costly to Barber.

"To win two tournaments in a row is just unbelievable," said Mahaffey, who just turned 30. "They said there's a tendency to let down after winning a major tournament, but I didn't want that to happen.

Connors Triumphs

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "He was playing so well, I had no chance to win," said Spain's Jose Higueras, beaten convincingly by top-seeded Jimmy Connors, 7-5, 6-1, for the men's singles championship Sunday in the $210,000 U.S. Open Clay Court tennis tournament.

"He was serving to my forehand all the time. I could only hit my forehand with topspin, so he could attack with the backhand or forehand. Jimmy was hitting the ball so well, I just couldn't get to the balls he was hitting."

Connors, who previously won the Clay Court title in 1974 and 1976 and was runner-up in 1972 and last year, said he just tried to stay with Higueras early in the match.

"He was playing as well as I've ever seen him play," said Connors, who beat Higueras twice earlier this year.

"When I got up 40-love and it was tied at 5-all, there was no way I was going to lose that," he said of the only service break in the first set. "Even then, I had to struggle to hold my serve to win the set."

This week, Connors plans to play in a tournament at Stowe, Vt., and then hopes to take some time off before the U.S. Open at Flushing Meadows in New York.

"I'm very pleased with my conditioning. I'm moving very well. I'm very pleased with the way I'm moving, and even more pleased with what I'm doing when I get there," said Connors.

Then on Sunday, Helena Anliot of Sweden and Helle Sparre-Viragh of Denmark captured the women's doubles crown, defeating Southern Cal teammates Barbara Hallquist and Sheila McInerny 6-3, 6-1.

Earlier Sunday, Connors advanced to the final round of the men's singles for the third consecutive year with a 7-5, 6-1 victory over defending champion Manuel Orantes.

Clark's Single In 11th Lifts Giants Over LA 7-6

By The Associated Press

Jack Clark singled home Larry Herndon in the 11th inning to break a 6-6 tie and give San Francisco a 7-6 victory over host Los Angeles Sunday as the Giants regained first place in the National League West.

Herndon led off the 11th with a double off loser Charlie Hough, 3-3, and Clark followed with a run-scoring single. John Curtis, 4-5, the sixth San Francisco pitcher, needed relief help from Ed Halicki to nail down the victory.

Pinch-hitter Marc Hill's two-run bases-loaded single with two out in the 10th inning put San Francisco ahead 6-4. The Dodgers rallied to tie it in the bottom of the 10th, loading the bases with none out against reliever Randy Minton. Steve Garvey scored as Joe Ferguson hit into a double play and Vic Davalillo tallied the tying run when Davey Lopes hit a bad hop single.

Reggie Smith smacked two home runs, his 24th and 25th, and Lee Lacy added a two-run homer for the Dodgers.

The Giants struck for four runs in the second inning, erasing a 1-0 Dodger lead.

Lacy hit a two-run homer in the fourth to get Los Angeles within a run and Smith's second homer, in the fifth inning, tied the game.

PADRES 3, REDS 2

Dave Winfield and Oscar Gamble each had two hits and drove in a run in San Diego's three-run first inning to lead the Padres to a 3-2 victory over Cincinnati.

Padres starter Eric Rassmussen, gaining his 11th victory in 20 decisions while Bob Shirley, who relieved Rassmussen in the seventh inning after Mike Lum hit a pinch double, was credited with his third save. Shirley has not given up a run in his last seven relief appearances.

Cincinnati starter Fred Norman, 10-7, took the loss.

ASTROS 3, BRAVES 0

Vern Ruhle hurled a five-hitter for his second straight shutout and Bob Watson hit a two-run, first-inning home run as Houston blanked the Atlanta Braves 3-0.

Ruhle, 2-0, allowed only one Brave baserunner to reach third base as he blanked Atlanta for the second time in the last nine days. Preston Hanna, 7-11, gave up all three Houston runs.

CUBS 2, EXPOS 1

The Cubs took the lead with an unearned run in the third inning. Former Expo Jim Blackwell led off with a double, moved to third on a sacrifice bunt by Reuschel and scored when Sanderson threw the ball over the head of third baseman Larry Parrish in an attempt to get the lead runner.

PIRATES 7, PHILLIES 3

Dave Parker's three-run homer in the third inning triggered the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-3 victory over Philadelphia, snapping a four-game Phillies winning streak.

The Pirates, salvaging the final game of the four-game set, took a 1-0 lead in the first off Phillies starter Larry Christenson, 8-12. Omar Moreno single, stole second, took third on an infield out and scored on John Milner's single.

In the third, Frank Taveras doubled, advanced to third on a bunt single by Moreno and Parker blasted his 20th homer of the seaon to make it 4-0. Milner singled, was sacrificed to second amd scored on Rennie Stennett's RBI hit.

CARDINALS 6, METS 1

Pete Vuckovich fired a four-hitter and delivered a run-scoring single during a three-run sixth inning as St. Louis rapped three New York pitchers for 17 hits and defeated Mets 6-1.

RED SOX 4, BREWERS 3

Carlton Fisk's bases-loaded grounder past third base in the 10th inning scored Jerry Remy and gave Boston a 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The loss dropped Milwaukee into a fourth-place tie with Detroit in the American League's East Division, 11 games behind the Red Sox.

Remy opened the bottom of the 10th with a grounder that third baseman Sal Bando couldn't handle. Jim Rice bounced a single again toward Bando and Dwight Evans was walked to fill the bases for Fisk.

Ben Oglivie, who had three hits, gave the Brewers a 3-1 lead in the sixth with a two-run homer into the centerfield bullpen. But Evans, who drove in three Red Sox runs, replied with his 22nd homer, also a two-run shot.

Mike Torrez, 14-6, gave up 10 hits but went the distance.

RANGER SWEEP PAIR

Bobby Bonds tripled home the first run and singled home the game-winner to give the Texas Rangers a 6-5 victory over Cleveland and a sweep of their doubleheader. In the opener, Kurt Bevacqua's seventh-inning homer powered a 3-2 victory.

Texas, which swept the series and has won nine of his last 10 games, scored four runs in the second inning of the nightcap.

Al Oliver walked and scored on Bonds' triple. Juan Beniquez and Mike Hargrove added RBI singles and John Ellis chased home the fourth run with a sacrifice fly.

ORIOLES 3, YANKEES 0

A heavy rainstrom on an already soaked field wiped out a five-run New York rally in the seventh inning and gave Baltmore a 3-0 victory over the Yankees.

Play was stopped with Mare Belanger leading off the Baltimore seventh, then umpires waited 36 minutes before calling the game. As a result, the score reverted to the last completed inning.

There has been rain in the Baltimore area for more than a week, and Friday night's game with the Yankees was called after 5½ innings following a rain delay of 2 hours, 27 minutes. New York won that one.

TWINS WIN TWICE

Butch Wynegar's single scored Mike Cubbage in the eighth inning, helping Minnesota to a 2-1 victory over the Oakland A's and a sweep of their doubleheader. In the first game, Gary Serum scattered seven hits and Cubbage hit three singles in the Twins' 3-1 victory.

MARINERS 4, ANGELS 1

Craig Reynolds' two-run double in the second inning lifted Seattle to a 4-1 victory over the California Angels.

Reynolds, who added a single, backed the pitching of left-hander Rick Honeycutt, 5-7. After giving up three consecutive singles and a run in the first, Honeycutt scattered six hits the rest of the way.

Paul Hartzell, 4-7, had won his past three decisions since returning to the starting rotation July 29.

TIGERS 10, WHITE SOX 2

Lou Whitaker hit a three-run inside-the-park homer, Steve Kemp drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Rusty Staub hit his 19th homer, pacing Detroit's 10-2 rout of the Chicago White Sox.

BLUE JAYS 3, ROYALS 2

Bob Bailor raced home from second base on a forceout in the 10th inning to give Toronto a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Bailor opened the inning with his fourth single of the game and advanced on Rico Carty's hit. With one out, Otto Velez sent a ground ball to third baseman Jamie Quirk, whose threw to second forced Carty.

Pocket Coin Takes Easy 'Grande' Win

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special) — The way the fans at Ruidoso Downs had it figured, all Pocket Coin had to do in the Rio Grande Futurity was show up. The competition would Keel over from fright.

So Pocket Coin was made a crushing 1-5 favorite in the six-furlong fixture for New Mexico-breds, and the scenario played out just as expected.

Pocket Coin dismissed his foes with ridiculous easy and romped under the wire with a 6¼-length margin, as he collected $16,740 out of a gross purse of $33,480.

The paycheck put Pocket Coin's career earnings at $97,500 and beefed up his racing record to a near-perfect seven wins and a second from eight starts. The colt is owned by the father-son combine of Melvin and Ernest Riggs of Fort Stockton.

Swinging out of the first turn, Pocket Coin quickly scooted into the clear. As he coursed over the midway point of the backstretch, the lead had fattened to four lengths.

Happy Irishman looked like a lukewarm menace as he circled the turn for home. But that modest effort was all he could deliver and Happy Irishman had no recourse but to give up the chase. Dandy Binge shifted into high gear in the upper stretch and passed Happy Irishman for second money of $6,696. Mysiswasadancer, a 35-1 longshot, came in third, to earn $3,682.

Pocket Coin covered the distance in 1:14 3/5 and returned $2.60, $2.40, and $2.20. Dandy Binge, owned by V.J. Callaway of Hobbs, paid $3.50 and $2.20, and Mysiswasadancer, owned by John Renner of Friona, returned $2.20.

STINGLEY STUNG — New England Patriots wide receiver Darryl Stingley collides with Oakland's Jack Tatum in the second quarter of Saturday night's game at Oakland. Stingley was removed on a stretcher and taken by ambulance to an Oakland hospital where it was feared he was paralized. However, he was reported improved Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Stingley Said Improved After Game Collision

CASTRO VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Injured New England Patriots' wide receiver Darryl Stingley is in good condition and has some sensation over his entire body, according to a statement issued Sunday by the surgeon who operated on him.

The surgeon said that while Stingley had suffered some paralysis immediately after the injury but was able to move after surgery.

Stingley, 26, was thought to be at least partially paralyzed Saturday night after a head-on collision with Oakland Raiders' defensive back Jack Tatum while trying to catch a pass. The Patriots won 21-7.

The statement from neurologist Dr. Manard Pont said:

"Mr. Stingley last evening sustained a fractured dislocation of his cervical spine. Initially he had no movement or sensation below the neck. . .in an operation that lasted approximately one hour (he) had cervical traction tongs placed with correction of the dislocation. He has been awake and alert since the time of the injury and is fully awake at this time and in otherwise good condition. This morning he has regained some right arm motion and has some sensation over his entire body. He will be hospitalized for at least one week. . . no further procedures are planned at this time. No prognosis at this time."

With 1:26 left in the second quarter of the game, Stingley flew through the air in an attempt to catch a pass in the middle of the field. The ball sailed past him but Stingley collided with Jack Tatum. For 10 minutes Stingley lay motionless as doctors moved him gently to a stretcher and wheeled him away.

New England coach Chuck Fairbanks said in subdued tones outside the locker room Saturday night, "At this time Darryl is totally paralyzed. Everybody is hoping and praying for something good."

Tatum said later, "We just sort of hit head-to-head. When he went down there was no question that it was serious. He never moved. . .never."

Tampa, Seattle Remain Unbeaten In Exhibitions

By The Associated Press

No, the National Football League standings aren't wrong — but they're not for real, either.

Still, seeing unbeaten Tampa Bay, Seattle and Kansas City and twice-beaten Baltimore, Los Angeles and Cincinnati gives one pause, even if the games are only exhibitions.

Preseason games don't count. Winning records don't guarantee success when the games do count. Last year, for example, Kansas City won three of six exhibitions, then won two of 14 regular-season games.

This year, with the regular season expanded to 16 games, the preseason has been trimmed to four. So we're halfway through the roster-cutting, gem-finding process.

Tampa Bay may have found a real gem in Doug Williams, the former star quarterback for Grambling. His 3-yard touchdown toss to runningback Louis Carter in the third quarter vaulted the Bucs into the lead Saturday night and on their way to a 23-12 victory over Baltimore. Jimmy DuBose ran for 80 yards against the Colts, 24 of them in a third-period touchdown sprint.

Seattle, which entered the NFL in 1976 along with Tampa Bay, rode ex-New Mexico quarterback Steve Myer's two touchdown passes (18 yards to Steve Largent and 9 yards to Sam McCullum) and his 1-yard scoring run to a 20-6 victory over winless San Francisco. And Kansas City, whose 2-12 record last year matched Tampa Bay's as the worst in the league, got five field goals from Jan Stenerud (23, 50, 24, 31 and 47 yards) to defeat Minnesota 17-13.

Saturday brought a few other surprises, too. Los Angeles, a powerhouse in the National Conference, got short-circuited by San Diego as the Chargers zapped the Rams 17-0. LA managed just 109 yards (64 rushing, 45 passing). And Detroit, 2-0, scored a 14-10 victory over Cincinnati, 0-2, on TD runs by Lawrence Gaines and Horace King.

A rematch of Super Bowl XII turned out with the Dallas Cowboys beating Denver again, this time 21-14 on Roger Staubach's two TD passes to Tony Hill and linebacker Mike Hegman's 66-yard scoring run with an interception. Norris Weese passed for both Bronco TDs.

The annual Big Apple rivalry was won by the New York Jets, 27-23 over the New York Giants, thanks to Richard Todd's three touchdown passes, two to Jerome Barkum and the winner covering 18 yards to Wesley Walker with 84 seconds to play. In that game, Giant rookie runningbak Billy Taylor of Texas Tech carrie seven times for 19 yards.

Guy Benjamin, Miami's rookie quarterback, tore apart New Orleans' defense with completions on nine straight passes including a 16-yard scoring strike to Terry Anderson as the Dolphins drubbed the Saints 31-17.

New England beat Oakland 21-7 with the help of a 50-yard pass from Steve Grogan to wide receiver Stanley Morgan. Then the Pats got some good news Sunday when they heard that their other wide receiver, Darryl Singley, wasn't as seriously hurt as first thought. Paralysis was feared after Stingley was removed from the field on a stretcher, but he was reported in good condition Sunday and able to move.

In Saturday's other games, St.Louis beat Chicago 26-14, Cleveland topped Buffalo 20-10 and Pittsburgh defeated Atlanta 13-7. In the last game, Pittsburgh quarterback was sidelined with a broken nose, but the Steelers gained 410 yards. Atlanta managed only 125 yards while resting starting quarterback Steve Bartkowski and backup June Jones III.

Rankin Claims First Championship Of Year

MANHASSET, N.Y. (AP) — Judy Rankin, leading money winner on the LPGA tour in 1967 and 1977, returned to the winner's circle Sunday after an absence of more than a year by capturing the $100,000 tournament at the North Hills Country Club.

The 33-year-old Mrs. Rankin, in her 17th campaign on the tour, shot a par 73 in the final round of the 72-hole tourney to finish with a 9-under-par 283 and collect a $15,000 check.

A winner in five tournaments last year but hampered by a lower back injury since last September, Mrs. Rankin never trailed during the final 36 holes and boosted her current earnings to $49,360. In 1976, she won $150,734 and picked up $122,890 last year.

The 5-foot-3, 110-pounder from Midland went into the final round on the par-73, 6,143-yard course 2 strokes ahead of Debbie Massey, who finished in a tie for second with Pam Higgins at 285. Miss Massey also had a par 73, while Miss Higgins finished with a 3-under 70.

Miss Massey, Rookie of the Year in 1977, closed to within 1 stroke after the first nine holes with a par 36. Mrs. Rankin had bogeyed the par-4 eighth for a 1-over 37.

Mrs. Rankin bounced back with a birdie on the par-5 10th to regain her 2-stroke lead. She shot par the rest of the way and closed down by 2-putting from 18 feet on the final green.

Miss Massey matched the par 37 for the back nine and trailed by 1 with 3 holes to go with a birdie on the par-4 14th. The 27 year-old from Bethelem, Pa., bogeyed the next hole, a par 3, ruining any chance of winning her first title this year.

Miss Higgins was 2-under par for the front nine with a 34, as she shot 3 birdies. The 32-year-old blonde from Columbus, Ohio, missed her oppurtunity to catch Mrs. Rankin with bogeys of 4 and 5 on the 12th and 15th holes.

Sally Little of South Africa, third at the start of the day, dropped to fourth despite a 1-under-par 72 for the round that gave her a total of 286.

Swede Claims Rain-Delayed Austrian Race

ZELTWEG, Austria (AP) — Sweden's Ronnie Peterson won an unorthodox Grand Prix race Sunday on the Oesterreich-ring to move closer to the lead in the world championship points, now held by Mario Andretti.

The race was staged in two parts because of hazardous conditions, and Peterson, driving a Lotus, won both. After seven rounds the first time, rain made the track slippery, and several of the top pilots, including Andretti, swerved off and smashed into fences. They were not hurt, though.

The organizers interrupted the race with Peterson in the lead and restarted it one hour later when the rain diminished and finally ceased. The pilots started the second time according to the ranks they held when the race had been broken off.

Peterson collect nine world championship points for a new total of 45. Andretti had 54.

France's Patrick Depailler in a Tyrell finished the race in second place, ahead of Canadian Gilles Villeneuve, who was third in a Ferrari; Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, fourth in his Copersucar; Vittorio Brambilla of Italy, fifth in a Surtees; Jacques Lafitte of France, sixth in a Ligier-Matra, and John Watson of Britain in a Brabham Alfa, seventh.

The rankings of Peterson, Depailler and Villeneuve were made official after results from both parts of the weekend race were calculated together.

Peterson's victory — the 10th in his 121-Grand Prix career — promised an exciting finish between him and fellow Lotus pilot Andretti in the four remaining Grand Prix races of this season.

Andretti had gone into the race with a commanding lead. But in the first round, he swerved off the track and hit a fence, dropping out.

"The man next to me raced like an old woman," Andretti was overheard complaining, apparently meaning Argentina's Carlos Reutemann in a Ferrari, who he had tried to overtake at the time.

As it was, Andretti got on the outside of the track in a turn, slipping off it and smashing into the fence, spinning around several times. He got out of the car unhurt, just in time as South Africa's Jody Scheckter in a Wolf slipped off the track at the same spot and hit Andretti's empty car.

Specualtion has begun regarding whether Peterson will be allowed by Lotus to give battle to leader Andretti. He was believed by some to have been given orders not to endanger Andretti's championship chances.

Walton Considers Two Teams

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bill Walton is eyeing two National Basketball Association teams for his next home, but his agent refused Sunday to reveal which team looks likely to capture the Portland Trail Blazer center.

"It's narrowed down to two of the four teams," Jack Scott, one of Walton's agents, said in an interview. "But it could change."

The four teams courting Walton are the New York Knicks, Golden State Warriors, Philadelphia 76ers and unnamed San Diego team.

"Things can move ahead very quickly," Scott said, indicating there would likely be an announcement by the end of this week. "Bill doesn't plan to get involved in any kind of bidding or auction situation. Once a team that he's interested in makes a sincere offer, that will be it."

In New York, ABC quoted Madison Square Garden president Sonny Werblin as saying: "I don't think any team can match the offer we've made and I think we're forerunners in Bill Walton's mind and I think he will sign with us."

Scott said Werblin's optimism was premature.

"There's no question that the New York Knickerbockers have the money to make a very attractive financial offer," Scott said. "But I just can't emphasize enough that finances are not going to be the primary factor that determines where Bill Walton plays basketball."

Walton's desire to leave the Trail Blazers was announced Aug. 4 and the 6-foot-11 UCLA grad has spent most of his time since then meeting with officials of other NBA teams.

He planned to meet again Sunday with Scott and his other representative, attorney John Bassett, to mull over his choices.

Peace Prevails At Edmonton

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The XI Commonwealth Games produced just one world record, but offered enticing coming attractions for international amateur sport.

African nations, which boycotted the 1976 Olympics in Montreal, officially returned to the world sports fold, with only Nigeria holding out to protest white sports ties to South Africa.

And there was no hint of the violence that rocked the Munich Olympics of 1972 and poisoned the atmosphere of massive international athletic competition.

The final medal tally showed Canada the easy winner for the first time in Games history. England had 88 and Australia 84. New Zealand was a distant fourth with 21.

Host Canada, which fared poorly in the Montreal Olympics, proved that government financial aid for athletics makes a difference, winning 109 medals — including 45 gold. The showing marked an emergence of the sprawling country as a world sports power.

England's track and field squad tallied an impressive total of 16 victories, including some by athletes who have been obscure outside their homeland.

Individually, several athletes issued figurative warnings to the sports world that they will be serious contenders for Olympic gold.

Decathalete Daley Thompson of England rolled up 8,467 points in winning his two-day test. It was the third best performance ever. The 8,618 points scored by American Bruce Jenner in Montreal is the world record.

Fleet Henry Rono of Kenya didn't break his own world marks in the 3,000 steeplechase and 5,000-meter race. But the silent Washington State University student won so easily he reinforced his aura of invincibility.

England's Brendan Foster, the 10,000-meter winner and third in the 5,000, insisted Rono might be beaten "but I don't know how. . .and I don't know when."

Tanzania's Filbert Bayi, the 1,500 world record holder, didn't win — and immediately announced he'll aim for the 5,000 meters in Moscow. His opponent could be Rono.

David Moorcroft of England beat Bayi in Edmonton. And Scotsman Allan Wells, who eschewed starting blocks, won the 200 meters and pressed Olympian Donald Quarrie of Jamaica in the 100.

Gidemas Shahanga of Tanzania, running only his second marathon, covered the 26-mile, 385-yard course in an excellent time of 2 hours, 15 minutes, 39 seconds.

As for Quarrie, the Olympic 200 meter gold medallist, Moscow likely will be his final effort. The smooth Jamaican would have made the Commonwealth Games 200 meters a memorable race with Wells, but he suffered a muscle cramp in a semifinal heat and didn't qualify.

It was business as usual, also, for Mike Boit of Kenya, the former runner at Eastern New Mexico University. The quiet, soft-spoken, gentlemanly Boit won the 800 in indisputable fashion over a mediocre field that, of course, did not include world record holder Alberto Juantorena of Cuba, whom the Kenyan has expressed a desire to meet.

Violent Incidents Keep Local Authorities Busy

An 18-year-old East 10th Street woman told police a former boyfriend lured her into his auto during the weekend, drove her outside the city and then tried to rape her.

The woman told officers the 25-year-old man talked her into leaving her home with him to go to a nearby convenience store about 3:10 p.m. Saturday, but once she was inside the car, he drove past the store. After he had driven to an Idalou Road area, she said she demanded to be taken home, but he only responded, "You're going to give me something."

She tried to escape, she said, but every time she opened the door he would beat her head against the auto. The woman said she eventually got away and ran to a drive-in movie snack bar where attendants called police.

In other violent incidents across Lubbock during the weekend, Gloria Judie of 3601 Zenith Ave. told officers about 4:30 p.m. Saturday another woman started a fight with her at a 3609 Vanda Ave. residence, pulled a knife and then took her purse before driving off in a 1971 Buick. Police still were seeking the robber late Sunday.

Officers investigating a second reported robbery also were seeking suspects and the victim's $10,000 1978 Oldsmobile stolen in the incident.

Raymond H. Armenta of 116 Temple Ave. told police he had just pulled his car up outside a 2017 4th St. store when an 18-to 25-year-old man approached his car and asked for a ride. Armenta told officers the man pulled a pistol from his clothing when he refused and then demanded he drive him toward Reese Air Force Base.

Armenta said the man eventually ordered him out of the vehicle and told him he was going to kill him. Armenta said he ran into a field and fell when he heard a gunshot.

Roger L. Dunger of 1603-D 32nd St. told officers a man hit him over the head with a table lamp at his home about 2 p.m. Sunday. The suspect reportedly told police a knife was pulled on him before the incident.

Arturo Garcia, Jr., reported he was driving on So. Avenue Q about 2:35 a.m. Sunday when a man tried to run him off the road. He said the man struck him when questioned about the incident.

Mattie Frances Criss of 802 34th St. told police a female friend bit her in the eye and on the thumb about 7:30 p.m. Saturday. She was treated at Methodist Hospital and released.

Barbara Jean Lang of 2811 E. 8th St. told police a former acquaintenance came to her home about 6 a.m. Saturday and asked her to go out with him. She said she went, but the man took her to his apartment and struck her with a large stick until about 9 a.m.

Officers arrested a 20-year-old white man about 3:30 a.m. Sunday for unlawfully carrying a weapon after officers investigating a complaint at a 5520 40th St. apartment complex found the man carrying a holster and a loaded pistol.

Car burglars took a citizens band radio and a revolver from an auto owned by Henry Jackson of 1713 E. 28th St. while the vehicle was parked outside a 1307 E. 34th St. trucking firm about 10 p.m. Saturday.

Richard Quintero of Abernathy told officers someone took a purse, a ring and $75 from his car while it was parked outside an Amarillo Highway club between 1 a.m. and 1:30 a.m. Sunday.

Goodner's Family Steak House manager David Heath reported the theft of almost $3,300 in checks and cash from a safe at that firm between 11:35 p.m. Saturday and 12:10 a.m. Sunday.

Officers arrested a 24-year-old black man in connection with a burglary in progress at the Lee E. Towns business at 804 Ave. E about 10:35 p.m. Saturday.

Douglas Lynn Butler of 1918 9th St. No. 10 told officers someone took $120 from his bedroom dresser between 4 p.m. Friday and 5 p.m. Saturday. Virgil Reed Bowman of 3301 Erskine Ave. also reported a burglary of his home.

Matthew Maloue of 3028 68th St. told police someone took a television set, two stereo systems, two shotguns, a rifle and a set of golf clubs valued at $6,000 from his home. Burglaries also were reported by Dela Montez of 1610 18th St. and Martin Rodriquez of 2612 Cornell St.

Tom Wilson, district supervisor of the Alcoholic Beverage Commission, told police someone apparently took 15 cases of liquor valued at about $700 from a warehouse at 4211-A Boston Ave. between 4:30 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday. Officers discovered the theft after a resident said he found two cases of whiskey in his 42nd Street backyard.

Jimmy Chambers, 45, of Mansfield, La., was in serious condition late Sunday in Methodist Hospital with injuries he suffered about 10 a.m. Sunday in an auto accident near Lubbock.

Trailer Fire Kills County Man

Slaton firemen searched the structure's smouldering ruins for more than 90 minutes before locating the charred body of Robert Scott Smith of Rt. 9, Lubbock.

He was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Arvin Stafford of Slaton at the scene of the fire between University Avenue and Avenue P on Lubbock's 114th Street.

A fire department spokesman said Slaton firefighters arrived about 10:40 p.m., but the home already was engulfed with flames. Firemen doused the blaze after about 45 minutes but didn't discover the dwelling was occupied until Smith's wife returned home.

Firemen said the blaze apparently ignited in the east bedroom of the home, but spread rapidly throughout the trailer.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Sanders Funeral Home Memorial Chapel with Hollis Maynard, minister for the deaf at Sunset Church of Christ, officiating.

Graveside services will be at 4 p.m. in the City of Hobbs Cemetery in Hobbs, N.M., under direction of Sanders Funeral Home.

Stalking Ginseng Root Getting More Difficult

OAKLAND, Md. (AP) — Bob Root has been pursuing an elusive quarry through the verdant mountains of Garrett County and adjoining sections of West Virginia for almost 50 years.

He's lost his once avid interest in hunting and fishing. But his passion for "sanging" — as collecting ginseng is called — is more than equal compensation.

"It's just the same as hunting or fishing or golf," the wiry 58-year-old mountaineer said. "It just gets in your blood. You love to go out and hunt it. I just use it as my hobby more than anything else."

Sanging wasn't always just a hobby for Root, a maintenance man at the local post office. In the 1930s and 1940s, "sanging bought me food and clothes." At times, he dug $100 worth of the root in a single day.

Dealers who bought the dried roots from his father paid $15 a pound, Root said. The price rose to $95 a pound here last year before the federal government banned export of the root, which is prized in the Orient as an elixir of life and an aphrodisiac, from most states.

"They think it's a cure for everything," said Root, who's less sure of the dried root's powers.

"I eat some while I'm out sanging. I might eat a few roots," the Horseshoe Run, W. Va., native said. "I can't tell any effect except I don't get as tired and I can walk further. It's nothing like drinking or taking dope."

Some of his neighbors put more store in ginseng's powers. "They claim that if you eat it in the fall and keep eating it all winter, you never catch a cold," Root said. "A lot of folks ask me for roots to put in their liquor bottles."

Ginseng starts as an inch-high sprout with three leaves. As it grows, the plant acquires five leaves on each of up to five prongs — or sprigs — off the trunk. The plant, which grows a foot or two high, blooms in the fall and has bright red berries.

Root prides himself on collecting ginseng only after the berries have ripened and scatters them to start a new generation. Too many sangers, he said, have dug up the roots in the spring, leaving nothing for the future.

Years ago, the rain wouldn't stop him from sanging. "I used to put on my rainsuit and still go but I don't do that anymore," Root said. "You go to a new place and you might sang all day and never see a sang. The patches are all gone."

'Tree Top Airways' Now Soaring High

HOUSTON (AP) — Six years ago Texas International Airlines was nose diving toward bankruptcy, a company detractors called "Tree Top Airways." Today, it's flying high, operating in 50 cities and nine states and trying to absorb much larger National Airlines.

Texas International has rebounded with the help of booming economies in Houston, Dallas and Denver, the government's approval of its discount "peanut fares," a tough stand in labor negotiations and a paring of unprofitable routes.

It now is using its robust health as a regional carrier to try to grab control of National, a move the Miami-based airline is fighting in the courts and before the Civil Aeronautics Board.

National is about five times the size of Texas International. It holds lucrative routes along the East Coast, across the South and between the United States and Europe, Mexico, Pacific islands and South and Central America. The move on National would catapault TIA to the status of a big-league airline.

TIA has has come a long way since Francisco A. Lorenzo and Robert J. Carney, who had been classmates at the Harvard Business School and who were running Jet Capital Corp., took it over in August 1972. Bankruptcy papers had been drafted by TIA's attorneys, but before they were filed, Lorenzo and Carney bought 59 percent of the company for about $1 million.

Since then the number of passengers carried by Texas International, the price of its stock and its profits have soared. Earnings during the second quarter this year were $3 million, up from $1.4 million during the quarter last year. The company earned $8 million in 1977. About one-quarter of that came from the "peanut fares," which offer discounts of up to 50 percent.

TIA has bought 9.2 percent of National's stock, which cost about $14.4 million. It wants 25 percent but needs the CAB's approval to buy more than 10 percent. National contends that TIA's plan would violate federal antitrust laws. The CAB plans to meet Thursday to consider the issue.

Lorenzo, 37, attributes much of TIA's success to lean management and a willingness to take chances. "We can take risks and that's basic to business," he said.

Management held a hard line and risked losing everything TIA had gained when hit with a four-month long strike of ground workers in 1974. It hurt financially, but TIA executives said management won work-rule changes that boosted potential productivity and have been partly responsible for the company's success since the walkout's end.

They took another risk with their "peanuts fares." The cut-rate tickets boosted passenger volume and accounted for about 25 percent of the $6.3 million in profits in the first half of this year.

Lorenzo also said in an interview that his airline is basking in the glow of the Sunbelt's boom.

"We benefit very much from Houston being the explosive city it's been," he said. "The routes between Houston and the Denver and Dallas-Fort Worth areas have helped. We were able to take advantage of the tremendous growth of those three cities."

Lorenzo said the company's marketing approach and cost-to-profit orientation are important to TIA's success. But he also credited the employees with efficiency and spirit in running the company.

"Six years ago one of our basic problems was employees felt the company had not been operated well," he said. "Today it's very good. It's very healthy. And it leads to a much, much more productive enterprise, too."

Lorenzo acknowledged that being outside the airline establishment has made his company hungrier. "One of the strengths we've had is that (TIA) has been an underdog," he said.

Poll Shows Support For Gains Tax Cut

By LOUIS HARRIS

By a thumping 66-28 percent, a solid majority of the American public favors reducing the maximum federal tax on capital gains from 49 to 35 percent. A measure that would accomplish this has been passed by the House Ways and Means Committee as part of the general federal tax cut bill.

The capital gains issue has been a major stumbling block to President Carter in his efforts to obtain a tax cut this year. Rep. William Steiger of Wisconsin has persistently advocated that the maximum capital gains levy be reduced to 25 percent, which was the maximum rate for several years before it was raised to the current 49 percent. The president first announced in a press conference that he would veto any tax cut bill that contained relief for persons paying tax on capital gains. His contention has been that such cuts in the maximum capital gains tax help the rich more than they do middle-income investors. As Mr. Carter put it, the average investor would receive no more than "two bits" from the proposed cuts.

However, the prevailing argument that appears to carry the day for the capital gains tax reduction is that "in order to get the economy going again, it is important to provide incentives for people to want to invest their money through measures such as a captial gains tax reduction." A lopsided 70-19 percent majority agrees with this.

In contrast, a much lower 50-33 percent plurality agrees with President Carter's claim that "the small investor would not get more than two bits from a capital gains tax cut." It is now apparent that the president has underestimated the aspirations of the rank and file of the American people to achieve a financial status in which they could benefit from a reduced capital gains tax.

The current reaction of the public is similar to that in 1972, when Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic candidate for president, favored an income maintenance plan which would tax persons earning over $12,000 in order to help those earning under that amount. The overwhelming reaction against the McGovern plan revealed that a majority of the people who were then making under $12,000 opposed the measure because they could envisage the day when they would be in higher income brackets.

The basic appeal of the proposals put forth by Republican Congressman Steiger stems from the fact that there are many more people who can picture themselves in a situation where they could be eligible for capital gains from investments they might make than those who feel that such financial gain is limited to a relatively few very wealthy individuals. The Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means Committee tried to meet the Republican challenge on cutting the capital gains tax by coming up with a maximum tax of 35 percent. President Carter has threatened to veto that compromise measure as well.

However, any financial capital gains tax reduction that may come out of Congress is certain to be part of a larger tax cut bill. And the chief provision of such a tax cut would be a lowering of federal income taxes on individuals. In this latest Harris survey of 1,238 adults nationwide, an overwhelming 75-17 percent majority favors a $10 billion federal income tax cut for individuals. In addition, the legislation will also contain a cut in business taxes of as much as $5 billion. The public now favors such business tax cuts by 57-32 percent.

The problem which would face President Carter in vetoing the capital gains tax is that, in addition to his making a highly unpopular decision on the capital gains cut, he would also in effect appear to be reneging on his promise to give the people some federal income tax relief this year or no later than early next year. To go back on a pledge to cut taxes in today's climate would be widely viewed as tantamount to political suicide. President Carter appears to have made a serious mistake in opposing the capital gains tax cut. To expect Congress not to override a veto of a general tax cut, including the reduction of the maximum capital gains tax, may well be wishful thinking, especially in an election year.

Black Ex-Businessman To Be Carter Liaison

WASHINGTON (AP) — Louis E. Martin, 65, a black former businessman, will become President Carter's liaison with the black community on Sept. 5, the White House announced Friday.

Martin, special assistant to Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., will earn $51,000 and hold the title of special assistant to the president, according to White House press secretary Jody Powell.

Powell also indicated that the only current black member of Carter's senior staff, Martha "Bunny" Mitchell, would be leaving the White House staff.

He said Carter hoped Mrs. Mitchell, special assistant to the president for special projects, would "continue to serve the administration." But the details haven't been worked out.

MAYOR VETOES CAR BAN

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mayor Ernest Morial says it may be unconstitutional to stop miniature replicas of antique cars from touring about the French quarter, so he has vetoed a law that would have created such a ban.

Dickinson Recalls Life On Prairie—From L.A.

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Fresh from shooting TV projects in the South Pacific and getting ready to make a film in Montreal, Angie Dickinson took a moment recently to chat about her girlhood on the North Dakota prairie.

"I was definitely a tomboy," the energetic star of NBC's "Police Woman" series, which began in 1974 and will not be continued by the network this fall, recalled. "I enjoyed playing football. As I remember, it was mostly with boys," she said in a telephone interview from her Los Angeles home.

She mulled that memory over, then laughed and said kiddingly: "I had an early eye for the male. I think I was a little flirt, even at the age of 8."

Angeline Brown was born "in the 1930s" in Kulm, N.D., a farming town now populated by 625 people. She was 5 or 6 when her family moved to nearby Edgeley, population 888.

Angie was about 9 when the family moved to Burbank, Calif., and she never returned to North Dakota.

She said Edgeley city officials once invited her back for the town's 75th anniversary. "I was pregnant and just didn't feel I could make the trip. Luckily, I didn't try because my daughter was born prematurely by three months.

"But I never can forget those North Dakota winters. There was ice skating, sledding, climbing trees, bicycling, but no such thing as skiing. We slid down snowbanks on shovels.

"All those things are very, very nice memories."

There were four daughters and no sons in the Brown family. "My poor father," she chuckled. "But we did have a male dog in Edgeley. Blacky, a mutt bulldog. I loved him."

She remembered the time in Edgeley "when I was thrown in a gymnasium class and hit my head on a hardwood floor. ... And I remember a baton-twirling class in that gymnasium. I did well enough that when I arrived in California, I was able to teach kids some new moves in twirling."

Her memories of Kulm are few. "I recall our first car and trying to get it to not stop, and getting to ride on the running board if we were very careful."

Angie Dickinson got into the movies "by sheer luck." She said she entered a beauty contest "not thinking I was beautiful, but I had a personality that got me by."

SHE'S NO TOMBOY NOW — Fresh from filming projects in the South Pacific and getting ready to make a film in Montreal, actress Angie Dickinson took a moment recently to chat about he childhood on the North Dakota praire. "I was definitely a tomboy," she said, and recalled enjoying playing football, especially with the boys.(AP Laserphoto)

Counties' Reunion Set

A-J Correspondent

ROARING SPRINGS — The 55th annual reunion of Motley-Dickens Counties Old Settlers Association will be Aug. 24, 25 and 26.

The three-day celebration will start with a parade at 10 a.m. Aug. 24 in downtown Roaring Springs and end at the Old Settlers Pioneer Pavilion for a program honoring the pioneers.

Bands and riding clubs in the area, as well as individual riders, antique and pioneer vehicles, and youngsters with bicycles, may ride in the parade, according to parade chairman Robert Forbis.

B.L. Peacock of Roaring Springs, president of the association, will preside at a memorial service at the pavilion which will begin at 11 a.m. Mrs. Grady Webb, also of Roaring Springs, will read the names of residents and former residents of both Motley and Dickens counties who have died since last year's reunion. A memorial address will be delivered by John K. Green of Bakersfield, Calif., longtime Roaring Springs resident. Mr. Green and Mrs. Webb are a son and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Duff Green, who were pioneers of Dickens and Motley counties.

During the morning program, recognition will go to the oldest person present from each county; the person or persons who traveled the furthest to attend Old Settlers; and the person or persons who have lived in each county the longest.

The Predicta Study Club of Roaring Springs will serve a barbecue lunch at noon at the Depot.

A business meeting at 2 p.m. will be followed by a music program by the Kent Parks family of Dumont and an afternoon of dancing under the pavilion. Free dancing for the pioneers will be in progress each afternoon, while two dances each night (under and outside the pavilion) will require an admission charge.

Rodeo performances during the three days and nights will include bareback riding, bull riding, barrel races, calf roping, old men's roping, team roping, kid's flag race, kid's calf scramble and other events. Saddles, bits, buckles and ribbons are on the list of prizes.

One saddle will be awarded in the Old Men's Roping contest and one will be given away Saturday night to the queen candidate who sells the most tickets for the prize. Seventeen girls have entered the Rodeo Queen Contest.

J.N. Fletcher of Roaring Springs is secretary of the Old Settlers Association. Directors include John Warren, Robert Forbis and Gary Bridge of Dickens County, and Billy Hand, Sam Ross and Don Warren of Motley County. Morris Stephens of Matador is rodeo director and Don Warren, also of Matador, is in charge of the dances.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR AUG. 14, 1978

PHYSICAL

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 2, 16, 30, 44, 58, 72 ... Confusion may prevail
Highs: 1, 17-29, 45-57, 73-85 ... Focus on people activities
Lows: 3-15, 31-43, 59-71 ... Not prime time emotionally

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 2, 18, 35, 51, 68, 84 ... Take extra care
Highs: 3-17, 36-50, 69-83 ... Brain working - use it
Lows: 1, 19-34, 52-67, 85-95 ... Double check everything

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

B	21	14	17	6	17	15	14	20	13	21	22	10	6	25	8	13	27	5

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Salvation Army 'Saves' Swimmers

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A Salvation Army truck driver here says some clothes he collected received emergency use even before he could get them back to the charity organization's office.

Two teen-age boys who had gone skinny dipping in a canal in this central California city had found their clothes had been stolen when they tried to get out of the water, driver Rick Rux reported.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible®

Mark 12:41-44, 13:1-14, The Living Bible

41 Then He went over to the collection boxes in the Temple and sat and watched as the crowds dropped in their money. Some who were rich put in large amounts.

42 Then a poor widow came and dropped in two pennies.

43,44 He called His disciples to Him and remarked, "That poor widow has given more than all those rich men put together! For they gave a little of their extra fat, while she gave up her last penny."

CHAPTER 13

1 As He was leaving the Temple that day, one of His disciples said, "Teacher, what beautiful buildings these are! Look at the decorated stonework on the walls."

2 Jesus replied, "Yes, look! For not one stone will be left upon another, except as ruins."

3,4 And as He sat on the slopes of the Mount of Olives across the valley from Jerusalem, Peter, James, John, and Andrew got alone with Him and asked Him, "Just when is all this going to happen to the Temple? Will there be some warning ahead of time?"

5 So Jesus launched into an extended reply. "Don't let anyone mislead you," He said,

6 "For many will come declaring themselves to be your Messiah, and will lead many astray.

8 For nations and kingdoms will proclaim war against each other, and there will be earthquakes in many lands, and famines. These herald only the early stages of the anguish ahead.

9 But when these things begin to happen, watch out! For you will be in great danger. You will be dragged before the courts, and beaten in the synagogues, and accused before governors and kings of being My followers. This is your opportunity to tell them the Good News.

10 And the Good News must first be made known in every nation before the end-time finally comes.

11 But when you are arrested and stand trial, don't worry about what to say in your defense. Just say what God tells you to. Then you will not be speaking, but the Holy Spirit will.

12 Brothers will betray each other to death, fathers will betray their own children, and children will betray their parents to be killed.

13 And everyone will hate you because you are Mine. But all who endure to the end without renouncing Me shall be saved.
