Eight-Point Plan Sent Washington

PANMUNJOM, Korea, May 7.—UP—The Communists dropped their demand for removal of war prisoners to a neutral country Thursday and offered a plan to end the Korean truce deadlock that was considered so "important" it was sent to Washington for study.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il, head of the Communist truce delegation, submitted an eight-point proposal at a 26-minute meeting the 11th since the talks reopened last month.

Nam's proposal, which bowed to two major United Nations demands on disposition of 46,000 anti-Communist prisoners held by the Allies, practically accepted the old plan adopted by the UN's General Assembly in New York last Dec. 3 and then rejected by Russia and four of her satellites.

Li, Gen. William K. Harrison, chief UN negotiator, called a one-day recess until 11 a.m. Saturday (8 p.m. est Friday) in order to forward the proposition to Washington through Gen. Mark W. Clark, supreme United Nations commander in the Far East.

Harrison said Nam's suggestions were "so important any major decision must be made by the governments themselves."

He said the proposal "merits consideration, careful thought."

Only one of Nam's points, No. 5, might erect a stumbling block. It would permit a political conclave to determine the fate of prisoners who, after a specified length of time, still do not want to go home.

This could eventually lead to forcing the prisoners to return to North Korea or Communist China, an issue which the UN has refused to accept and which led to the breakdown of truce talks last Oct. 8.

Nam's new plan, which backed down on the prisoner transportation issue, included the following points:

1. Prisoners insisting on repatriation must be returned to their own flags immediately after an armistice, with the remainder staying in Korea under a five-nation neutral commission for four months while "explanations are made to assure them of 'peaceful life in their own country.'"
2. The armistice group would consist of Sweden, Switzerland, Poland, Czechoslovakia and India, the latter serving as neutral custodian of prisoners unwilling to return to communism.
3. The commission shall take custody of prisoners "at the original places of detention in Korea" with the member-nations each providing an equal number of armed troops to take custody.
4. Within a limit of four months, the Reds will be allowed to send personnel to the "original places of detention" to "explain to all prisoners in order to eliminate their fears and inform them of all matters relating to their return."
5. The disposition of any prisoners who still refuse repatriation after months of explanations shall be turned over to a high-level political conference.
6. Prisoners still in custody of the commission shall be disposed of through consultation by the political conference in accordance with Paragraph 60, Article IV of the armistice agreement.
7. "Nations to which they belong shall pay custody and traveling expenses of the prisoners."
8. The prisoners shall be told of the terms of the proposal and arrangements arising from it.

CELANESE OFFICIALS AND WIVES — Arriving yesterday afternoon by company plane to participate in the dedication of the new Pampa Celanese plant were, left to right: Richard K. Miller, general manager, chemicals division, and Mrs. K. Miller; Harold Blanche, president of the Celanese Corporation of America, and Mrs. Blanche; and John D. Fennebresque, vice president, and Mrs. Fennebresque. The group is shown at Perry LeFors Field.

Mysterious Withdrawal ... Vietminh Troops Backtrack To Spur Outlook For Peace

HANOI, Indo-China, May 7.—UP—Communist Vietminh troops backtracked northward through Laos Thursday in a mysterious withdrawal and a French spokesman said the Reds may be abandoning their invasion of the ancient Indo-Chinese kingdom.

French reconnaissance pilots reported Communist spearheads were retreating over mountain trails, abandoning the positions from which they had menaced the royal capital of Luang Prabang and the French defense bastion on the Plain Des Jarres to the southeast.

A French high command spokesman said the surprise Vietminh move appeared to indicate the Communists were giving up their invasion and pulling back north before the rainy season — due to begin May 15 — bows down operations.

May Withdraw Completely

The spokesman said the Communists might back clear out of Laos to the bases north of the state.

from which they started their invasion.

He said the Red command probably had decided the barren mountain regions would prove untenable once the monsoon starts. Moreover, he said, they may consider the political objectives of their invasion already attained.

Pilots reported footsore Communist columns were withdrawing along the same mountain trails they had used to drive southward after the fall of Sam Neua in the first stages of the invasion.

The air reports backed the findings of long-range French liaison patrols. The patrols probed out of Luang Prabang and the Jarres Plain defenses for 25 miles during the past two days without making contact with the enemy.

The high command spokesman claimed the Red withdrawal was a justification for the French policy of retreating before the enemy for many miles to central strong points to combat the invasion.

French Build Strength

The French, meanwhile, continued to build up their air strength to enable them to parachute men and supplies into their Laotian defense strongholds.

Six American C-119 "Flying Boxcars" arrived at Hanoi airport Wednesday and there were indications the French would use them to drop paratroopers into Laos as well as to supply far-flung French and Laotian garrisons.

Comrades Stand Guard ... Flag Flying At Half Mast Over Bodies In Air Crash

LOGAN, Utah, May 7.—UP—An American flag fluttered at half mast Thursday over the honored dead of the Wasatch Mountains, and two armed guards watched over the snow-covered bodies of their comrades in arms.

For almost four months the guard detachment has stood its lonely vigil over the bodies of 37 home-bound Korean veterans and three fliers killed in the crash of a C-47 on a lofty peak near here, waiting for spring to thaw the mountain snows.

Monday the vigil ends and the 40 bodies will be carried from their winter resting place high above timberline.

The task of an elderly widow, who upon herself to complete the relative of the dead men, will also be ended.

Crashed Four Months Ago

The Air Force chartered transport, carrying the Korean veterans from Seattle to South Carolina, crashed into the mountain north-east of here just four months ago Thursday.

The ill-fated plane's wreckage was found five days later. The commando had disintegrated upon impact. Mutilated bodies were strewn over the hillside and covered by two feet of snow that fell after the crash.

Investigating officers, balked by foul weather, ordered the wreckage and bodies left at the scene until the snow melted. An armed guard was posted.

The guard that has protected the wreckage from souvenir hunters and prevented desecration of the bodies by animals was furnished by the Utah General Depot of the Quartermaster Corps at Ogden, Utah.

Each Saturday, a contingent of two officers and 11 men went to a base camp at the road head, west of Bear Lake to relieve the previous detail. Most of the guards stayed at the camp. But each day, two men hiked or skied — snow reached a depth of more than six feet — the seven miles to the actual crash site.

There the two men remained 24 hours, on steady guard and flying a flag at half-mast.

Dinner Sated Tonight ... Company Heads, Legislators Here For Celanese Opening

Activities marking the formal opening of the Pampa Celanese Plant get in full swing today with the conclusion of flights bringing top officials of the Celanese Corporation of America and two Texas legislators to Pampa for a three-day program of special events.

Approximately 25 company executives and out-of-town guests are to be in Pampa for the opening which begins at 7 p.m. today with a dinner in the Country Club, for community leaders and Celanese representatives, according to John H. Fick, Pampa manager.

Among those who have already arrived in Pampa are Harold Blanche, president, Celanese Corporation of America, and Mrs. Blanche; John Fennebresque, vice president, and Mrs. Fennebresque; and R. W. K. Miller, general manager of Celanese Chemicals Division, and Mrs. K. Miller, all of New York.

To be featured speakers at the kick-off dinner tonight, these three top officials are accompanied by a group of company vice-presidents including Emory N. Reeves, Charles F. Betan, Peter D. Cooper and E. R. Allen, also of the New York office.

Others were expected to arrive today from the Celanese chemical plant in Bishop, the company's petrochemical research laboratory in Clarkwood, and the New York office.

State Senator Grady Hazlewood, Amarillo, and State Rep. Grady McElhenny, Wheeler, were also expected here today. The two legislators were to come from Austin where the Texas Legislature is in session, with a Celanese attorney Hayden Head of Austin.

Opening activities continue tomorrow with open house at the local plant for members of P. A. M. service clubs and the chamber of commerce. Blanket invitations have been sent to the local groups from Celanese for a first-hand inspection of the area's newest big industry.

A barbecue luncheon will be served on plant grounds for members of the local organizations and guided tours through the plant will be the order of the day.

Choral Festival Scheduled Tonight

The voices of 500 Pampa youths will be presented in the annual Choral Festival at 8 p.m. today in the Pampa High School field house, according to K. W. Baumgardner, choral supervisor.

"Theme of the 1953 program is 'Singing Through the Years,'" he said, and choral numbers will be presented from the 1800-1950 era.

Music is free.

The young singers have been drawn from the four Pampa elementary schools, Junior High School and Pampa High School music training classes.

Sixty-four grade school students are slated to dance the "Minuet," taught by Mrs. John Branham. And junior high school and high school dancers have scheduled numbers to musical backgrounds by the choruses.

The evening's entertainment is to be presented by 10 separate choral organizations. They are four elementary school choruses, Pampa High School mixed choruses, Glee Club and A Cappella Choir.

Deputies Probing McLean Break-Ins

McLEAN (Special) — Gray County sheriff's deputies today were still investigating the break-ins of two McLean schools from which money and milk were taken.

Missing from high school Tuesday night were $7.48 from the coke machine, 60 cents from the library fund and $8.30 from the principal's office; from the grade school, $7.88 from the principal's office and two bottles of milk from the cafeteria.

A record cabinet, too, in the high school was found ransacked.

Deputy Sheriff Buck Haggard and Jimmy Shelton spent all Wednesday chasing down clues and came to the conclusion that it was probably a "local" job. Only new clue was a set of automobile tire tracks.

Following the discovery of the burglary at 7 a.m. Wednesday by Jim Wheeler, bus driver, the school closed down for the day and classes were dismissed. With Wheeler on the discovery was the grade school principal.

Says Reds Are In Clergy Jobs

NEW YORK, May 7.—UP—Rep. Harold H. Velde (R-Ill.), chairman of the House Un-American Activities committee, said Thursday he is convinced "hardened and well-trained Communists" have been planted in the American clergy.

He renewed his intention of investigating Communists whether they are "in overalls or in sanctified cloth."

Velde made his remarks in a speech prepared for delivery before the American Jewish League Against Communism, Inc.

"I say to you here today that if I find a Communist, whether he be in overalls or in sanctified cloth, I will see that he is investigated," Velde said.

"I sincerely believe that there are individuals who have been hardened and well-trained as Communists who have been planted in the clergy," he declared, "and I regret that I believe there are teachers who have embraced this concrete, new stretch in being made of asphalt because of soil conditions underneath the base."

But, that will not be the end of paving in Gray County on U.S. Highway 66.

Another stretch of 15.4 miles is to be paved and made into a four-lane, separated highway, if the rights-of-way are ever secured by Gray and Donley Counties.

This sector cuts in and out of both counties at various points. Although the state has long since laid aside $325,000 for dirt work on the job, only one right-of-way easement has been secured out of 16 in Gray County.

Ike To Speak At GOP Dinner; Plates Going At $100 Each

NEW YORK, May 7.—UP—President Eisenhower comes here Thursday night for this state's biggest Republican dinner of record, at which more than 3,500 persons will pay $100 a plate for a total of $350,000, less expenses, to the party's campaign fund.

The reservations were so numerous the committee took over the main ballrooms of two of the city's largest hotels, the Waldorf-Astoria and the Astor.

The President will speak at both gatherings and to a nationwide television and radio audience.

Such a setting, political circles suggested, may be chosen for an open announcement or at least a guarded hint as to the honor the new administration may be planning to bestow on one of Mr. Eisenhower's earliest supporters, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, who so far has disclaimed any aspiration other than to serve out his term.

Dewey will be present, as will leaders of the organization he has built in the 11 years he has been governor.

Mr. Eisenhower indicated at Augusta, Ga., shortly after the election last November that he wanted Dewey on his "team."

The Astor and Waldorf addresses — both informal, to be made from notes and without prepared text — will be the President's third and fourth outright political talks since taking office. He spoke previously at a Republican women's conference here, and to the GOP National Committee.

On both earlier occasions, the President emphasized the necessity for closing Republican ranks to increase the narrow GOP congressional majority in the 1954 voting. He was expected to concentrate on this theme again Thursday night.

Uses Commercial Plane

Mr. Eisenhower will be the first President to travel aboard a commercial airplane.

Navy Announces Communists Have Hit Three U. S. Vessels

SEOUL, May 7.—UP—The Navy disclosed Thursday that Communist shore batteries have hit and damaged three U. S. warships since Saturday while the vessels were bombarding Wonsan on the Korean east coast.

Ships including the battleship New Jersey blasted the port again Thursday, using radio-controlled aiming devices to pump shell after shell into the battered city.

The navy said the cruiser Bremerton was hit during the daylong attack on Wonsan Tuesday. Damage apparently was slight, as the Bremerton was in the attacking force again Thursday.

Two destroyers were damaged Saturday.

Radio Pyongyang, voice of North Korea, said coastal guns sank an American destroyer Wednesday off Sonjin on the northeast coast. The Navy said it had no such report.

The Bremerton and the destroyer Twining opened up shortly after dawn Thursday and were joined an hour later by the New Jersey. The Bremerton reported setting off at least one big secondary explosion in the target area.

Weather closed in shortly before noon, forcing the ship to fire at radar-selected targets. The bombardment was halted shortly after noon.

Air and ground action remained light.

Clouds hampered Fifth Air Force operations, although F-86 Sabres destroyed an estimated 26 buildings at a troop center at Singye. Other Sabres patrolled the southern fringe of MIG Alley without sighting an enemy plane.

Mining Corps set off five fires in a troop and supply area 10 miles northeast of Chungghwa and four Sabres dropped bombs on two railroad bridges southeast of Samdong without observing results.

During the night B-29 Superforts bombed a 130-acre troop and supply area at Tokchon, 28 miles northeast of Sinanju without meeting enemy opposition in the air or from the ground.

Only 13 brief contacts with the enemy reported in ground fighting along the 155-mile front.

Radio Program Set By Education Panel

A 13-week series of radio programs, "Our Jeffersonian Heritage," beginning Altruism Club sponsored Adult Education Program 1, Sunday over KPDM, according to Coy Palmer, station co-owner.

The 30-minute programs will be aired every Sunday thereafter at that time until the series is completed, Palmer said.

"It is a distinguished series of programs starring Claude Rains as Jefferson," Palmer said. "Any one concerned with the politics, philosophy, education, liberty, revolution and other issue and realistic, which have helped make our nation great."

The programs are in accordance with the Ford Foundation Adult Education Program, being brought into Pampa by the Altruism Club. Groups have been formed to study diversified issues, with subject matter drawn from the series.

No classrooms, no grades, tests or lectures will be conducted but informal discussions will be held led by a local moderator. It is aimed at getting more adults better acquainted with various subjects of their own choosing, an Altruism representative said.

Teacher Pay Raise Sponsors Seek To End Legal Deadlock

AUSTIN, May 7.—UP—The first break in a session-long effort to gain 5000-a-year pay raises for Texas teachers appeared Thursday as Senate and House sponsors sought to end the legislative deadlock with a compromise plan.

A meeting with Gov. Allan Shivers Friday was planned to determine whether the administration would support a compromise plan. Rep. Lamar Zivley of Temple, House sponsor of the 5000-a-year plan, expressed willingness to compromise. He said he would agree to a plan calling for a $300-a-year teacher pay raise now — paid by a tax bill — plus another $204 if the state's natural gas gathering tax law is upheld as constitutional.

The state Supreme Court upheld legality Wednesday of the $14 million annual tax on gas pipeline companies. But Attorney General John Ben Shepperd said he expected the gas companies to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The compromise teacher pay proposal was based on a financing plan that would call for a revision of the natural gas tax. Changes would make the tax apply to all gas pipelines, removing any question of the tax legality. The exemption would go back into effect should the case now be carried to the U. S. Supreme Court and be upheld.

In other legislative action, Wednesday, a measure was approved and sent to the governor, removing Texas radio and television stations from liability for statements made over the air by political speakers.

House Passes 14 Bills

During an afternoon session, the House passed 14 bills, including tentative approval to a measure by Sen. Carlos Ashley of Llano that would provide a mandatory three-day jail sentence for persons convicted of driving while intoxicated.

Anti-Red Thailand Thought To Be In Danger Of Invasion

By Phil Newson
United Press Foreign Analyst
Of all the Southeast Asia nations, Thailand is the most outspokenly anti-Communist.
She has troops fighting alongside those of other United Nations in Korea. Her premier and minister of defense, Field Marshal Pibul Songgram refers contemptuously to the official Communist publication Pravda as "Blutida."
But recent events have shown that despite her brave stand, Thailand, like the remainder of Southeast Asia, is in peril.

In a matter of two weeks, Communist invaders of the little Indo-Chinese kingdom of Laos overran a third of the country and pushed to within 25 miles of the Thai frontier on the Mekong-River.
Fidil Defense.
It illustrated the pitiful state of Southeast Asia defenses.
Now if, as the French say, the Communist invaders of Laos and the retreat, it must be due to the imminence of the rainy season rather than to any opposition the Reds met.

Nor will it be any permanent salvation.
Like some other Communist actions in the past, the invasion of Laos seemed contradictory.
It began in the midst of the Russian "peace offensive," and at a time when Chinese and North Korean Communists and the United Nations truce talks after an eight-months' delay.

Too Many Morals
WATERLOO, Iowa, May 7—UP—Mrs. Dora Maifield asked for a divorce Thursday because her husband refused to let her do things he considered "too worldly."
She testified that his list of prohibited "wordly" deeds included voting, cutting her hair, use of make-up, smoking, drinking, going to the movies, owning a Christmas tree, going to ball games, allowing their son to join the Boy Scouts, and having a doctor in attendance when her son was born.

They Don't Mix

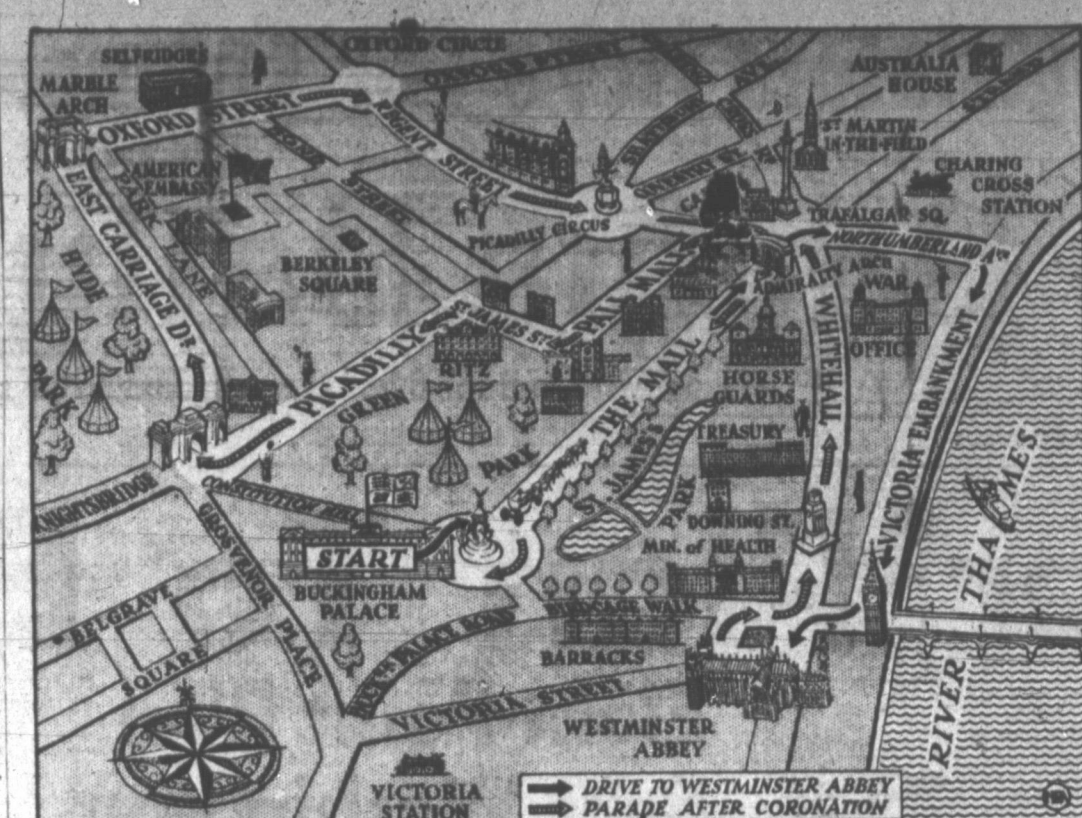

DETROIT, May 7—UP—Circuit Judge Thomas F. Maher granted a divorce to Floyd J. Long, 52, after he testified he and his wife, Minnie, 48, were "incompatible."
"She likes to go to nightclubs," he explained. "I like to roller skate."

CHICAGO, May 7—UP—The best thing about the new roof on Carl Knibusch's house is that it didn't cost him anything.
A crew of workmen with orders to install a new roof at 1514 N. Paulina got mixed up and slapped the green roofing on Knibusch's house at 1415 N. Paulina.

PASADENA, Calif., May 7—UP—Troy S. Puckett hopes he won't be mistaken for a bandit the next time he wins a horse race.
Puckett was charged with trying to stage a holdup at the Santa Anita race track after he thrust his hand in a pocket and told a pari-mutuel clerk "I want the money." The clerk thought he was reaching for a gun.

Television Show Loaded With Trivial Matters Of Marriage

NEW YORK, May 6—UP—Any one who has ever been married—or has been raised by married folk—which, fortunately, includes most everyone—is familiar with something of this nature:

"Well, dear, I don't see it."

"Are you looking on the top shelf?"

"Yes—top shelf, right hand side. My fishing hat isn't there."

"Have you got your glasses on?"

"I don't need glasses to see there's no hat."

"Well, if you don't know what you did with your glasses, I'm sure I don't."

"I didn't do anything with my glasses. I said I."

From Radio Show

Et cetera. The pay-off, of course, being that the wife forgot she gave the treasured felt relic to the Salvation Army.

So it goes, about a thousand and one trivial matters, far into the golden wedding anniversary—the homey, familiar stuff of which "Ethel and Albert" is made.

The program, first radio, then television, is in its ninth network year. As in the beginning, it is still the creation of Peg Lynch, who not only writes it but also plays Ethel.

Miss Lynch (Mrs. O. M. Ronning since 1948) didn't come to New York to be an actress, radio or otherwise, although she had played the role of Ethel in her sketches when they led rather uncertain existence while she did various chores at radio stations in Albert Lea, Minn., Charlottesville, Va., and Cumberland, Md.

Radio Writer

"I came to New York as a radio writer on a daytime serial," she said. "But I talked about Ethel and Albert" showed some of my material around and the first thing I knew I had sold the program.

"I still didn't plan to be in it, but after scores of auditions the network said I did it better than anyone they had heard. So I've been doing it ever since."

The first Albert in New York was Richard Widmark, who later became a sinister figure in the movies and then was reformed into a leading man. He had the job for six months before the movies got him, then Alan Bunce took over. Bunce still has the role.

Kansas Authorities Fight Polio Siege

PRAIRIE VILLAGE, Kan., May 6—(AP)—Authorities hoped Wednesday they may have curbed an outbreak of polio, after giving gamma globulin, a scarce human blood derivative, to more than 100 children and expectant mothers Tuesday.

Eight persons have been hit by polio here this year, half of the total cases in the state.

Dr. James Mott, Kansas state epidemiologist, said the Office of Defense Mobilization sent 1,000 cc's of Gamma Globulin, enough to inoculate about 111 persons. The blood derivative, which has proven effective in some cases of polio, is in critically short supply.

Mott said it was his opinion that "there has been too much publicity about polio" and refused to permit pictures of children being inoculated, even with parents' consent.

Constitution Drawn For Mexican State

MEXICALI, Mex., May 6—UP—Delegates to a Mexican constitutional convention here whipped into shape Wednesday a constitution for the new state in Mexico Baja California.

The constitutional convention has six months in which to draft a constitution for Mexico's newest state, the 29th, which was admitted last November.

The convention opened Tuesday, coinciding with the Cinco De Mayo celebration which honors the defeat of the French troops in Mexico in 1862.

Alfonso Gonzalez, Baja California's provisional governor, said he would run for governor of the new state when elections are held.

Ike Is Changed Man When He Steps Out On Golf Course

BLASTING OUT of a trap at Augusta National golf club, Gopher Eisenhower sprays the air with sand. The club pro, who is also his teacher, says Ike has shot as low as 84.

"MAMIE'S CABIN" is the name they've given the house that will rise on the site at the National golf club. It will house the President and his wife during visits to Augusta.

Baptist Convention Selects Officers

HOUSTON, May 7.—UP—The Southern Baptist Convention Thursday moved into its second full-scale session day on a call for "irrepressible individualism" to answer the threat of "enslaving totalitarianism."

A highlight of the morning session was to be the election of officers for the coming term. Dr. J. D. Grey of New Orleans is current president.

Dr. W. R. White, president of Baylor University at Waco, issued the call for continued individualism among the more than seven million members of the Southern Baptist organization.

"In this hour of enslaving totalitarianism we will nourish the very roots of freedom," he said. "Baptists should be humble but courageous. We are needed in this day. In this time of regimentation, the irrepressible individual is the answer."

"In this day of lifeless formalism and modernism, we will present a dynamic revivalism and Biblical essentialism," he declared.

Worship Individualism Asked
Dr. White also called for individualism in Christian worship, and said "the state cannot make Christians."

The convention also heard a report from its relief and annuity board, its historical commission and its committee on scouting.

Most of the Thursday night session will be devoted to the missionary programs, domestic and foreign, with Dr. M. Theron Rankin, executive secretary of the foreign mission board, and J. B. Lawrence, executive secretary of the home mission board, delivering their annual reports.

Walter R. Alexander, executive secretary of the annuity board, reported his group had total assets of $26,478,390.96 currently, a growth of $26,371,962.43 since the board was founded 35 years ago.

Robert E. Naylor, chairman of the committee on boy movement and scouting, said his committee recommended establishment of the conventions own set of principles and program on which is based the "God and country" award in the scouting program.

At present, the requirements used are those set up by the Protestant committee on scouting of the National Council of Churches.

Nearly 20,000 "messengers," pastors and visitors have turned out for the 1953 convention, and unlike some former years, there has been no lack of harmony.

In fact, the frequently explosive convention has been so smooth this year one spokesman was moved to say the 1953 meeting probably will be remembered as "the one of great harmony." The convention ends Sunday.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Here's the second of two dispatches that take you on a visit to President Eisenhower's golfing retreat.

By WADE JONES
NEA Staff Correspondent

AUGUSTA, Ga. — (NEA) — The Georgia city which has become President Eisenhower's golfing retreat, is also noted as the brick and tile manufacturing center of the Southeast. In its back yard it has what is probably the world's mightiest arsenal of war—the giant hydrogen bomb plant 10 miles across the Savannah River in South Carolina.

But the most notable landmark in Augusta is the one which attracts the President—the famed golf course which people here refer to simply as "the National" and which has enjoyed world fame for many years as the home of the Masters tournament.

Its wealthy membership was so secret that few townspeople knew who belonged—until the names were published recently in a magazine. They include John Hay Whitney; Eugene Grace of Bethlehem Steel; Phil Reed of General Electric; and Gene Tunney.

Fees and dues are reported to be only a few hundred dollars a year—but each member is responsible for a pro-rated share of debt if the club goes into the red.

Club president is Atlanta's

Bobby Jones, who retired from tournament play in the early 1930's as possibly the greatest golfer the game had ever known. It was a sad sight the other day to watch Jones, now severely crippled by a spinal ailment, sit in a motorized cart he uses and watch his good friend Ike set out with a foursome over the course. Jones helped design and where he won much of his fame.

"Where's Bobby, where's Bobby?" the President asked several times as he and Sen. Robert Taft were lining up for the photographers before they teed off.

Anyone who might be critical of President Eisenhower for the love he lavishes on the game of golf should see the change that comes over the man when he steps out onto the course. It's particularly noticeable to the White House correspondents who see him regularly in Washington and who accompany him on his out-of-town trips.

They know him as a pretty distant sort of fellow. He doesn't call them by their first names. It's always "Mister."

"We're about as close to him as we are to the North Pole," says one. "He is still strictly a five-star general," says another.

"And don't you forget it." They all knew the strain he had been under recently in connection with formulating the new government peace policy, and they were pleasantly surprised to see him gay and buoyant when he invited them out to the "National" the other day.

He still didn't first name anybody but he gave the group a casual wave and a grin and said, "Bye," when he passed them on the way to pose for some pictures.

He was wearing a bright red golf jacket, gray flannel trousers and a gray plaid cap, and tan spiked golf shoes of a heeled "wedgie" design.

For the benefit of cameramen both the President and Senator Taft hit a couple of tee shots on the sharply downhill 10th hole. Both hit good balls, even discussing the pressure of performing before cameras. Their four drives landed pretty close together, about 230-yards out.

It can be said that Senator Taft has a wider, easier swing than the President, but the latter was revealed to have beaten the Senator the day before by shooting either an 86 or 87. Bobby Jones said it was 86 and Ed Dudley, pro at the National and the President's teacher, said 87. Dudley added that the President shot an 84 at the National in November.

The President's backswing seems a little cramped and restricted and he seems to have a tendency to get a little too much right-hand into his shots.

But one of the caddies who was in the foursome the day before when the President had an 88—or an 87—said he "was putting mighty sweet."

"He'd hop and jump on the green when he'd miss even a seven-foot putt," the caddy said. The National is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful golf courses in the world. It lies on the site of what was once a great nursery, and in addition to the native magnolias, woodbine, juniper, camellias, dogwood, azaleas, firethorn and holly, there is a wide assortment of trees and shrubs from other countries.

There is also a pond stocked with bream and bass, where the President can practice his second hobby, fishing, and beside which he often practices his third, painting.

The new $40,000 cottage being built for the Eisenhowers will be located in a setting of holly trees and evergreen Nandina bushes.

While the President is enjoying himself in this sportsman's heaven, the 30-odd reporters and cameramen who cover him can do their golfing free as guests of the Augusta Country Club, one of the three premier courses in town besides the National.

After covering the non-golfing President Truman, the game is coming hard to many who never tried it before, but most are giving it a determined whirl. "What else am I going to do around

Methodist Superintendent Speaks At Rotary Luncheon

The family unit and its importance to the overall strength of a nation was discussed Wednesday afternoon by Dr. J. E. Kirby, Methodist Church superintendent for the Pampa district before the Pampa Rotary Club.

His talk was made in connection with National Family Week being stressed this week which is designed to strengthen the American family unit.

Dr. Kirby related the report of a French emissary to this country made to his government following a visit to the newly born United States. The emissary reported the strength of the new country lay not in its natural resources, its good government, or its churches, but here for the next four years if I don't learn to play golf?" one southerner. The landmark had been vacant for 13 years.

The Final Blow

BRISTOL, R.I. — The 150-year-old brick Colonial house built by Zebedee Paul that had withstood two hurricanes and immovable storms collapsed recently under the force of a relatively mild southeaster. The landmark had been vacant for 13 years.

SHE "SEES" A BUNNY—Cuddling with a furry rabbit at the Wonderland Farm Zoo in New York, Linda Foster, 8, one of a group of 60 blind children to visit the zoo, makes friends with a live cousin of Bugs Bunny. Linda and the other children spent the day "seeing," feeding and playing with animals they had never really known before.

The RECORD SHOP

By RICHARD KLEINER
NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (NEA)—Brunhilde and Wolfgang, two long-haired dachshunds, looked admiringly at their mistress. Which goes to show they're pretty intelligent beasts, because their mistress is worth looking admiringly at. She's Gisele MacKenzie, the tall, dark and talented Capitol songstress.

Miss MacKenzie (front name pronounced Juh-zell) was talking about her start, with an occasional time out to throw the dogs some leftover breakfast bacon.

"I think my parents are still a little disappointed that I didn't become a concert violinist," she said, daintily unwrapping some more bacon. It turns out this Canadian gal has many talents, besides singing and unwrapping bacon. She started to be a "fiddler"—her own word—and was pretty good.

She got to the point where she had to choose—fiddling or singing. Then along came a bad man and stole her $2000 fiddle, and that was that. Even she was not talented enough to fiddle without a fiddle, so she became a singer. The decision has given many people pleasure—including her manager, who would like to find the thief to thank him.

Gisele—a name that has been mispronounced every way from chisel to seashell—has some hit records to her credit. She did a 500,000-copy job on "Don't Let the Stars Get in Your Eyes" and has good ones going now in "Gone" and "Let Me Know." Her duets with Helen O'Connell are delights.

And the future? She'd like to do a musical comedy, make a million-copy record, and bring home more bacon.

THE POPULAR SIDE: Record companies are latching on to the growing trend toward strict instrumentalists. Latest to click is Mercury's Richard Hayman, who fronts a big orchestra with his new sound harmonica... Walley Cox, TV's "Mr. Peepers," will do some of his monologues on RCA-Victor records... Eddie Fisher, just discharged from the Army, promises he'll write to every one of 5000 home-folk whose addresses he was given by servicemen when he sang in Korea.

ON THE CLASSICS: RCA's Victor's limited special-edition collection of the nine Beethoven symphonies, played by Toscanini, is

International Piano Recording Festival

Winners Announced; Recitals Planned

Miss June Gull, who will be presented in her graduation piano recital in the Central Baptist Church Friday at 8 p.m., has been notified by the National Guild of Piano Teachers she will receive between $100 and $250 for her participation in the International Piano Recording Festival.

Miss Gull placed in three events according to word received here from the Austin headquarters of the Guild. She has studied with Mrs. H. A. Yoder for the past nine years. Mrs. Yoder entered five students in the contest and four students were winners of cash awards.

Johnlyn Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell, will receive $500 and a gold medal. She will be presented in recital Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Central Baptist Church. She was chosen alternate in the recent contest for soloist with the Amarillo Symphony orchestra.

John Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Campbell, placed in two events and will receive a total of $150.

Armed Forces Lure Recruits With New, Snappy Uniforms

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
NEW YORK, May 7 (UP)—Snappy uniforms and calorie-conscious mess sergeants have failed to solve the shortage of girls in the Armed Forces.

Since the Korean war began there has been an almost constant drive to get enough girls to fill quotas in the Waves, WAC, WAF and women Marines.

Besides the military minds who have worked on the problem, civilian women advisers have puzzled over a solution. Some of these women, members of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Service, got together this week at a tea honoring women in uniform.

OPEN TO SUGGESTIONS
"We're certainly open to suggestions," said Mary Gibbons, one of the committee appointed by former Defense Secretary Gen. George C. Marshall. "We meet four times a year for three days. We don't do any actual recruiting, but we do make suggestions for making life in uniform more attractive to girls."

The committee members suggested salad bars after one of their first inspection trips of various Armed Forces bases. They felt regular service menus were too starchy for slim figures.

Now they're working with the cosmetic industry to see if a movie on proper makeup and grooming could be made and distributed to women's training centers.

"This is my special project," said committee member Mrs. John Hay Whitney. "We haven't worked out all the details. But it seems that something like this would be a booster, to morale as well as appearance."

DISPLAY UNIFORMS
The tea the committee members attended marked the official opening of a display of women's uniforms in windows of the East River Savings Bank in Rockefeller Center. Top designers have worked on these uniforms in the last few years to make them as flattering as possible.

"We emphasized the high heels and the feminine touches as much as possible in the display," explained a pretty Marine lieutenant.

Approximately 24 attended the affair.

"I think the reason we don't get enough girls is because they're marrying younger now. They'd rather stay home and try to get a husband than to sign up to go away from home for two or three years."

NOW HE KNOWS—Blind since birth, Michael Goldstein, 5, of Brooklyn, "sees" a lamb for the first time in his life. Before his trip to the Wonderland Farm Zoo in New York with a group of 60 other blind children, the only lamb Michael knew was in a poem "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

cialists went to Rio to check up. There they discovered that what the Brazilians needed to set their financial house in order was more in the nature of $400 million. At the start of the Korean war, Brazilians had ordered a lot more U.S. products than were actually needed, fearing shortages. On top of that the Argentine wheat crop had failed and Brazil had to buy $120 million worth of American wheat. Brazil's normal shipments of coffee and other exports to the U. S. give her an annual dollar-earning capacity of around $800 million a year. But Brazil has an expanding economy, an appetite for over a billion dollars' worth of American goods a year. Last year, however, Brazilians may have ordered as much as a billion-and-a-quarter dollars' worth of American goods. Not having earned that many dollars, Brazil couldn't pay for these imports. A loan therefore became necessary. Somehow, it is figured that the Brazilians will be able to earn enough more dollars to get their accounts current by July 1. They will then be able to order more goods, and under new, free-exchange regulations, it is hoped that everything will be dandy.

Bank Bail Out

When it comes to finding out which American firms will wind up with the American dollars which the Ex-Im bank is lending the Brazilians, there is only the sketchiest information. Roughly, it is supposed to cover $350 million worth of first preference, or high-priority items like farm machinery, fertilizers, drugs and chemicals. Next, about $50 million worth of second-preference items like heavy machinery for long-range industrial expansion. Then, $30 million worth of petroleum products. And finally, $20 million worth of financial arrangements on agreed-on dollar-profit payments to U.S. investors.

There was a grand row in the U.S. Treasury and State Departments over whether it was any business of the U.S. government to save this situation. Leaders of the Eisenhower administration were at first of the opinion that here was a good place to save money.

But having accused the Truman administration of neglecting Latin America for so many years, Secretary of State Dulles could not with good grace have now turned his back on America's best friend in Latin America. Curiously enough, it was the holdovers from the Truman administration who finally persuaded the new team that this was a good loan, and they'd better make it.

Democrats Work Out Plans For Proposed '54 Conclave

WASHINGTON (NEA)—The big deal whereby U.S. Export-Import Bank lends Brazil $300 million, is apparently going to be completed in the immediate future, but there's still some mystery about who will get this money, eventually, and what for.

The vagueness of detailed accounting on these multimillion-dollar international loans is always a source of wonder to any little guy who ever went to a local bank and tried to borrow a thousand bucks to modernize the plumbing.

In the case of the little guy, the banker will examine everything from his charge accounts to his mother-in-law's false teeth. And not one dime more than what's necessary to pay for the modernization will be advanced. But in governmental high finance, they don't seem to do things that way. Brazilian Ambassador Walthier Moreira Salles has now returned to Washington with his government's apparent approval for the terms of the Ex-Im Bank loan to Banco do Brazil. There may be some minor changes made in the bulky document that is the loan contract. But the expectation is that the deal will soon be buttoned up.

This will end some six months of talking about it. At no time, it is understood, did the Brazilians come in and tear their hair demanding a loan. But in September they let it be known that they could use the money, to pay off American firms from whom they had bought more goods than they could pay for, in dollars. And since the Argentines got a loan like this, why not Brazil?

Ex-Im Officials Upped Estimate

Last December a delegation from Banco do Brazil, which is 52 percent government owned, came to Washington to discuss its country's strained finances. At that time it looked as though a mere $100 million would tide the Brazilians over.

In the first two weeks of January two U.S. Ex-Im Bank offi-

CELANESE INVITES ITS NEIGHBORS TO "OPEN HOUSE"

SATURDAY MAY 9

From 8:30 A.M. to 7:00 P.M.

About 24 months ago "Tournapulls" were ripping up Panhandle rangeland six miles from Pampa. Today, on that 630-acre site stands the newest chemical plant of Celanese Corporation of America . . . a steel forest of soaring towers and spheroid tanks, turning out vital petrochemicals that go into many of the products you wear, use, and live with . . . textiles, plastics, pharmaceuticals, rubber, paints and hundreds more.

Celanese has found its new Panhandle neighbors, good neighbors. Many are now part of our Pampa family. And even though construction work on our newest production units isn't quite finished, and we haven't had time to do all of our landscaping, we'd like to have you and your family come and help dedicate our new plant at our first Open House.

You are also cordially invited to attend a Fashion Show featuring many garments that contain Celanese acetate yarns. Our models will be girls from our office staff and wives of our employees. Admission is free.

PLACE: Pampa Senior High School Field House.

DATE: Friday & Saturday Nights, May 8th & 9th.

East Texas Ready For Chick Contest

CENTER, Tex., May 7 —UP—A record-breaking 4,600 broilers and fryers will compete in this year's "Chicken of Tomorrow" show in Center next week.

A total of 310 individual entries have been made in the contest, one of the top poultry events of the year. Well-known poultry breeders and hatcherymen from as far away as Vermont and California will attend.

Center, a booming East Texas town which calls itself the "Broiler Capital of the Southwest," expects thousands of visitors for this year's show.

The show is sponsored by the Texas Poultry Improvement Association, Texas Seed Manufacturers Association and the Texas Poultry and Egg Association.

The highlight of the show comes on the last day, May 15, when the winning broilers in the junior and senior divisions are auctioned off by Col. Walter Britten, a well-known College Station poultry auctioneer, on the Center court house square.

Sometimes a prize winning pen of 15 broilers will bring $500. Show officials believe the hope of sharing in the thousands of dollars that will be paid in the auction is largely accountable for the record number of birds entered this year.

The show starts with arrival of entries and caging of birds at the EastTex poultry building, one of the South's largest and most modern processing plants, at 6 a.m. Monday, according to John Mooseberg, program chairman.

Judging of live birds will begin Monday and visitors will be conducted on tours of the broiler-growing area.

Tuesday's program includes coronation of the queen of the Shelby County Broiler Growers Association at 7:30 p.m. A full round of events is scheduled Wednesday and Thursday, with a square dance featuring Thursday night's program.

The finals of the show will be held in the EastTex poultry building, 7-8 p.m. Banquets—poultry marketing specialist for Texas A&M College, said. Birds will be judged as live chickens and classified into three groups. The blue ribbon winners will be all Utopias, it never quite comes off, and the frustration of those who are led to believe that here of tax monies and we are back on track here because of two headline stories within few days — one dealing with frauds against employment insurance fund and the other with the "aid to needy children" fund.

is evidence to indicate in these two cases that the loss of about $200,000,000 in the last fiscal year has been stolen what may amount to some $200,000,000. It was stolen in dribs and drabs but is a lot of money even in this day of the inflated dollar whether the money comes from Washington, Austin, it was originally provided from the state is a levy upon their production.

ere is little excitement in the streets over the unemployment insurance frauds under study or the relief funds disclosed and decry by the general.

just can't or won't realize that the money lift the government till is something that is coming out of your pockets. You can't pound it into their heads that weren't for governmental waste and thievery that 15 to 20 years, a family that has paid taxes for period would have anywhere from $1,000 to $2,000 extra in their personal bank accounts.

he reason for this attitude is not difficult to find. It lies in a little rationalization that most of us have and in which we refuse to classify under the law of theft that which you can cheat the government out of.

he trouble with morals in the human beast is when they crumble in one department they are crumble totally.

people fall under the influence of the incoherence of government; when they decide their depends less on their own productive efforts, the decisions and handouts of bureaus, their of action shrinks and their sense of responsibility doesn't ever think of.

hopes center more and more on the possibility of something for nothing. The idea of receiving for services rendered tends to give way to the of simply getting payment.

question is not one of legality but rather of ethics, a running short of them in this day and age.

The Golden Rule—A Requirement Of Jewish And Christian Living

I have recently come in contact with laymen holding responsible positions and local preachers who caused me to realize how much confusion there is about the necessity of obeying the Golden Rule.

The usual answer when it is contended that the Golden Rule is a necessary standard of ethics is, as one layman has said: "The Golden Rule, by itself, is not an adequate point of reference in judging right and wrong, at least as I see it" or as a preacher contends "The Golden Rule is not the whole of Christian living."

I know of no one who contends that the Golden Rule is the whole of Christian living. It is very difficult to define what a Christian is. There are about as many ideas of Christianity as there are different churches. The same thing applies to the Jews. There are about as many different ideas of Judaism as there are men who think they are Jews. There may be different beliefs or rituals that a Jew or a Christian believes necessary. However, it certainly is a fact that no man can be a real Jew or a real Christian, or even a real American, who does not believe that practicing the Golden Rule is a necessary essential to being a good Jew, a good Christian or a good American. In other words, a man might practice the Golden Rule and not be an orthodox Jew or an orthodox Christian, but he certainly cannot disobey the Golden Rule and be a Jew, Christian, or an American.

The Golden Rule is a mathematical, moral law that is essential in every religion. To omit it is to make a mockery and delusion out of the ethics of the Jewish and Christian religions.

This fact that a violation of the Golden Rule disbars a man from being a Christian is little understood. This is evidenced by the fact that most Protestant denominations are perfectly willing to do collectively what they know is immoral for an individual to do. I have never heard a self-professed Christian contend that he as an individual would have a moral right to use compulsion to get control of another man's children and train them in a different manner than what the parent wanted them trained and then make the parent help pay for this training. They will invariably admit that this kind of act would be a violation of the Golden Rule. Yet many of these preachers or laymen who profess to be Christians believe that if enough people do a thing that is a violation of the Golden Rule for an individual to do that it is Christian and good Americanism.

Violating The Golden Rule Produces Bad Results

It seems to be an axiom that we cannot reap good results from any act that violates the Golden Rule. It would not be a golden rule if good results could be secured from disobeying it. The Founder of Christianity had this in mind when He said:

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things will be added unto you." He who takes up the sword (initiates force) will perish by the sword.

He also had this in mind when He said:

"You cannot pick figs from thistles or grapes from thorns."

If it is a violation of the Golden Rule for one person, it is a violation of the Golden Rule for many people or what government performs the act.

It is no wonder that we are confused and have had long periods of unemployment, high taxes, money that buys less and less, one war after another when so many of our preachers who profess to represent Christianity are acting and talking as if a man could violate the Golden Rule and still be a Christian.

Every confused or pink preacher who wants to justify his statism or collectivism or his socialistic ideas invariably tries to discredit the Golden Rule as being one of the essential guides of Jewish and Christian living.

So the next time you hear a preacher taking a negative attitude toward the Golden Rule, simply ask him if a man can be a Christian if he violates the Golden Rule. If he can then Jesus was mistaken when he advised people to live by it.

National Whirligig.. Brownell Will Try To Prove Reds Have 'Government' Here

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — In prosecuting several front organizations as alleged revolutionaries, Attorney General Brownell, Jr., will submit evidence to show that they amount to a Russian government-in-exile in our midst. He will try to prove that these various agencies operate as diplomatic, financial, legal and educational departments which serve the interests of the Soviet regime.

Brownell will present his proof to the Subversive Activities Control Agency, which is a semi-judicial body. It already has held that Communists here are controlled by the Kremlin, and, therefore, must file periodic reports on their membership finances, activities, etc. Now, he will attempt to convince SACB that the 74 shadow groups are similarly dominated.

The next step is for SACB to set a date for hearings at which Brownell will try to support his original indictment with specific evidence, and at which the defendants will be given an opportunity to refute his accusations.

Data now on file in the Justice Department indicates that it has carefully documented its charges through secret investigations that penetrated the inner circle of the Red network.

SOVIET OCTOPUS — The organization which operates as Moscow's State Department, according to the pattern drawn by federal operators, is known as the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Inc. This outfit was established to support Russia's foreign policy and the world Communist movement, and to weaken all American attempts to checkmate this aggression.

It has propagandized against our intervention in Korea, against our proposal for international control of atomic weapons, against congressional inquiries into Red activities, and on behalf of a seat in the United Nations for Red China. According to Brownell, it gets its directions straight from Moscow.

Like our own State Department, it has its various geographical subdivisions, neatly compartmentalized and directed by experts.

DECEPTIVE TITLES — This diplomatic corps works through such auxiliary organizations as the Council on African Affairs, the America Slav Congress, the Committee for a Democratic Far Eastern Policy. All their titles suggest they seek to advance Moscow's propaganda and to discredit American policies in those respective areas. Here is the alleged objective of the Council on African Affairs:

"To create and further hostility among Negroes in this country toward the United States" so as to make them susceptible to Communist indoctrination. Brownell further charges that the African Council depicts Russia as the only pro-Negro and anti-imperialist regime to which colored people of all races can look for protection.

The Slav Congress concentrates on poisoning minds from the Balkans and Eastern Europe, while the Far Eastern Committee seeks to create unrest among Chinese, Japanese, Koreans and Filipinos here and abroad.

RED SUB-TREASURY — The International Workers' Order, Inc., is regarded by Brownell as the Communists' Department of the Treasury, which funnels funds from Moscow to finance all Red undertakings in the country. It maintains schools, magazines, summer camps, a speakers' bureau, a legislative lobby, youth organizations.

It operates under the guise of a "fraternal benefit society" incorporated in New York. It claims to have 162,000 policy holders, to have written insurance totaling $7,536,000 and to have written insurance totaling $78,805,000.

The New York superintendent of insurance has brought court action for dissolution of this organization and his complaint was recently upheld by the New York Court of Appeals, whose rulings are rarely reversed by the Supreme Court.

Thus, if Brownell can make his charges stick before SACB, he will smash a Russian satellite, whose existence is unknown to the American people.

He's Also Confused... Hank Goes Out On A Limb For Section Of Southern California

By HENRY McEMORE

APPLE VALLEY, Calif. — Being the proud possessor of one of the most penetrating and precise minds in these United States, I am reluctant to admit that this particular section of southern California has me confused.

I'll admit that it is a pleasant confusion. The air is like champagne (if that hasn't been used before), the sun is so warm and caressing that a beaten-out fellow like myself can actually feel the red corpuscles bustin' out all over, the moon is bigger than a pair of hugging dishpans, the mountains change from one lovely color to another like a chameleon running the 100-yard dash over a Scotsman's kilts, and the food is so good that when you register at the Apple Valley Inn you get an ice-cream to punch an extra hole in your belt when you get your room key.

By now I am quite sure you are saying that ol' McEmore must be in Apple Valley on the cuff, riding for free, and using up nothing but pencil lead signing checks. Perish the thought, boys, because it isn't so. I am paying like all the other patrons, and while it may mean I'll have to spend the summer turning the collars and cuffs on my old shirts, and re-sooling my own shoes, it is worth it.

But to get back to my confusion:

Since the fourth grade, at least, I have been a sucker for a thing, below the level of the sea. A Beau Geste place, where a man had to wear a ventilated cap, or put leaves on his head to keep from sizzling to death. But Apple Valley is 3,000 feet high. That's pretty high, for a desert resort, when you think that Denver, under the shadow of Pike's Peak, is less than half a mile higher.

Until I got here, I always thought of deserts as being dryer than a powder house rat. I don't think I am unique in that feeling. Just look at the cartoons in magazines and papers. Show a desert and there is always a man staggering in the hope of finding a drop of water.

This place floats on water. It sits right on top of an underground lake. Millions and millions of gallons of water are used every day for green, green golf courses, scrubby juniper neck, washing dishes, feeding thirsty fields of lettuce, onions, corn, alfalfa, beets, and fruit orchards.

Don't ask me where this water comes from. The Mojave River flows by, but it's strictly a crazy river. It flows north, for one thing; its bed is dry as a bone here, turbulent a few miles further along, and then it disappears underground to reach an outlet that still makes a for geyser.

The pioneers of old weren't so smart. They gave their lives looking for gold in Apple Valley when just beneath their feet flowed water, the most precious stuff of all. If you don't think water is more precious than gold or diamonds, then don't ever try to win a thirsty gol with a diamond ring when you have a canteen of water to offer her.

More confusion. Right down the road, no more than two lengths of a covered wagon, is a rainbow trout farm and it runs first or second with the biggest commercial hatcheries in the world.

Now a trout has no business of a desert. A trout is not familiar with a sunburn lotion, he wouldn't know an oasis if an oasis is introduced into, but there are hundreds of thousands here. Do you blame me for being confused?

LOOKING SIDWAYS

By WHITNEY BOLTON

I don't get around to weighing up Miss Edna Ferber often, not being a major admirer of her works, but this time I think Miss Ferber ought to be tossed up on the scales to see if she isn't getting a little tight in the skull. Returning from Europe, which never seemed to me to be a collective place exactly shining with soap and water, Miss Ferber informed the press that New York is a disgraceful, filthy, scabrous, garbage-strewn town. She added a few other lacy phrases making New York seem like a combustion trash dump and shanty town.

No one can look around New York for long and call it a polished village, gleaming in the sun like a Rajah's jewel. But as one who has been in and around it for a good many years I deny forthwith that its streets are filled with garbage. I can't deny that during and since the war the burning of soft coal has not been helpful to the atmosphere, but I do deny that when you walk along you walk along in rubbish. There are certain streets on the far West and East Sides where the kids tumble over a trash can every now and then, giving the sidewalk a lush patina of banana peels and old lettuce, but mainly the 10,000-odd street cleaners do a valiant job of picking up after the 10,000,000 citizens of our town. This means that each street cleaner is responsible for the litter of about 1,000 persons, which means that he has a tough, unending job on his hands as any housekeeper picking up after two children and a husband can testify.

The last I heard, Miss Ferber was a lady who had earned a fat series of handsome bucks in her life and it would be fair to assume that she is loaded in the money department. Novels and royalties from plays have alike given her a nice bundle of cash and, in addition, she is sufficiently well along in her writing career not to have to come to town and haunt the offices of literary agents and magazine editors. I think they would accept a Ferber manuscript if she mailed it in from a nomadic tent in the Sahara. That being true, why does Miss Ferber continue to live and hold dwelling in a town so noisome to her? Most other writers earning enough to buy tickets elsewhere manage to keep away from New York most of the time, even though they have no inhibitions about sighting an occasional grapefruit rind on the sidewalk. John O'Hara lives in Princeton, N. Y., and Hemingway lives in Cuba. A lot of writers live in Bucks County, Pa., and another clutch have homes in New England.

I have never seen anyone point a gun or a folded fist at Miss Ferber and growl: "You'll live in New York and like it!" She could live in Capri or Cannes or Kalamazoo and as far as I can deduce her typewriter would still work and her brains would be nimble.

Just about the only place in the world Miss Ferber ought sensibly to keep away from for a few more months would be Texas, which she recently wounded with a novel called "Giant." She made it plain in this thick book that she had little patience with a place called Texas and now she has little patience with a place called New York. Both spreads of land and people got along without her guidance in the past and, I imagine, will in the future.

Maybe Miss Ferber is feeling a little grumpy these days and is irritated about a lot of things which she has magnified into major complaints. She has been in the past a bright and witty woman, a gracious person, a fine intellect, a talented author and a desirable citizen.

I can't, for the life of me, think why she has abandoned all of these to become a scold.

Nurse — I'm afraid I have had news for you. You have hydrophobia, the disease one gets when bitten by a mad dog.

Patient — Quick, give me my address book!

Nurse — You want to write to your friends before the end?

Patient — No, I want to set up a list of people I want to bite!

A lady novelist thinks that thirty is a nice age for a woman. It is, especially if she happens to be forty.

Autopsy Ordered In Child's Death

MIAMI, May 7—UP—Five-year-old Kathy Tongay who swam five miles in the muddy Mississippi River at the age of 23 months died Wednesday night and police said Thursday they would make public an autopsy report on the cause of death.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tongay, refused to comment on the tiny swimmer's death but requested the autopsy.

The little "aquatic" became the second of three Tongay children to die. After the death of Russell Tongay Jr., in 1945 at the age of 18 months, an autopsy disclosed he died of a cerebral hemorrhage and chronic pancreatitis after similar convulsions.

Tongay was questioned by police but a coroner's jury held there was not sufficient evidence to place charges against the father.

Several years later, he was acquitted on a charge of cruelty after a woman complained she saw him strike Kathy.

Another brother, also named Russell, joined Kathy in a one-hour-and-35-minute swim in the Mississippi at St. Louis in August, 1949, paddling five miles with their father.

The swim brought the aquatic tots world-wide attention but strong criticism followed two years later when Tongay announced Kathy and Russell would attempt to swim the English Channel.

British officials refused to permit the long and dangerous swim when Tongay took the youngsters to London in 1951, and the French government followed suit when he sought permission there.

Climaxing the three-day ceremonies will be open-house for the public Saturday when Celanese employees will play hosts to residents from all over the Panhandle.

Plant tours will be made from 8:30 a. m. to 7 p. m., refreshments are to be served, and movies will be shown to children under 10.

The public is invited to visit the plant that day and get an inside view of how Celanese processes petrochemicals that go into such consumer products as textiles and plastics and are used in major industries.

Flights bringing special guests are being made by the company's plane, "Loadstar," and a DC-3 made available by the Brown and Root Construction Company, contractors for the local plant. Planes are being piloted by Donald Bond and William Paul.

Funds to finish the Evangelistic Tabernacle and aid in the church program to help needy families in the local area was requested today by Rev. R. F. Miller, pastor of the partially completed Evangelistic Tabernacle, 324 S. Starkweather.

The church program, according to Miller, consist of collecting clothes and shoes for needy families.

He said Mrs. James A. Burgess has assumed responsibility of contact officers for collections and has requested cooperation of all other churches, Chamber of Commerce, lodges and citizens.

The items are to be distributed every Wednesday afternoon, he said, and asked that persons contact either himself at 2648 or Mrs. Burgess at 1671-J.

Hart Wins C-C Drive

The team captained by Leslie Hart was named high out of six in the Chamber of Commerce membership round robin campaign contest at a coffee at 10 a. m. today in the Palm Room.

His team, consisting of only one member, Aubrey Steele, brought in 22 new members and added $364.50 to Chamber of Commerce coffers to finance operations in 1953.

The two were awarded straw hats. Individual pair winners were Joe Fischer and Fred Thompson with a total of 11 new members. They, too, were given hats.

The six teams enlisted 104 new Chamber members and collected dues totalling $1522.

Team placings, after Hart, determined on amount of money brought in, were Ed Cleveland, second; Warren Hulse, third; Dr. Joe Davidson, fourth; Paul Brown, fifth; and Joe Fischer, sixth.

Crime Clean-Up Continues Here
And still the cleaning-up of recent petty Pampa crime continues.

On the books today were the arraignment and setting of bond for five persons — three charged with burglary, one with forgery and one with automobile theft.

Justice of the Peace D.R. Henry set bond at $2,500 in all five cases. Arraigned for burglary were Robert McCormick, 20, of Skellytown; David H. Sutton, 19, of 702 S. Gray; and Darwyn C. Malone, 18, of 1428 Francis. Guy W. Roberts, 38, of Longview, was formally charged with forgery; and Hubert Adkison, 810 S. Somerville, with auto theft.

The five now await the upcoming session of the district court's jury panel.

According to police and sheriff records, McCormick took $77 in change April 28 from the Smoke House and the Belvedere Club; Sutton and Malone stole $154.42 Wednesday morning from the Cornelia Parts Department; Roberts forged a check Saturday night for $59.25 on the Ozark Liquor Store; and Adkison stole a cap Monday night on Clark and drove it into a ditch.

Questioning of a 15-year-old involved with Sutton and Malone was underway this morning by Juvenile Judge J. M. Maguire. Adkison has already been fined on a charge of driving while intoxicated, part of the same escape.

Oilers Drop Hub Opener; Molberg On Mound Tonight

LUBBOCK, May 7.—Max Molberg, untested in three starts this season, will attempt to even the current 2-game series with the Lubbock Oilers for the Pampa Oilers here tonight when he makes his fourth mound start of the season.

The Oilers combined a 5-hit six-inning relief stint by Jerry Gleason and a triple play to top the opener of the series last night, 5-1.

It gave the league leading Oilers a 2-1 edge in the series with the Oilers that began Tuesday night at Pampa.

Gleason came on in the fourth inning to relieve starting pitcher Rene Vega and stopped the Oilers cold rest of the way. Gleason, on option from the Denver Bears of the Class A Western Association, dished out only two hits, struck out three and walked three during his fourth, hit a hot liner that appeared to be going through for a base hit but shortstop Joe Valdiereiso snared the ball on the dead run.

The Oilers were the victim of a triple play for the second time this season in last night's tilt. The TP came in the fourth inning and it was Gleason who tossed the ball that resulted in the 3-play killing.

Manager Ted Pawelek of the Oilers, the first batsman to face Gleason who relieved Vega in the double, took third on Doug Lewis single and scored on another single by Manny Tomas. Lewis, taking second on the play, then Vega retired in favor of Gleason and got Pawelek to hit into the triple play.

Bob Featherstone featured the Huber attack with a homerun and a double.

Eddie Hughes went the route for the Oilers, giving up two runs in the third, one in the sixth and two in the seventh.

Molberg, tonight's starting Oiler hurler, already holds route-giving wins over Borger, Amarillo and Clovis.

Rookie Roger Aldridge started in left field for the Oilers in last night's game, replacing George Albrecht who was handed his outright release after Tuesday night's doubleheader at Pampa.

After tonight's game, the Oilers will move over to Plainview for two games and then to Abilene for two more to complete the current road trip.

Ponies Climb With 13-1 Win Over Blue Sox

By UNITED PRESS
Plainview's steady climb into second place and Amarillo's descent into the cellar, all within a week's time, marked the West Texas-New Mexico League standings Thursday.

The Ponies were only one-half game from first place after Wednesday night's 13 to 1 win over Abilene, their third straight win over the Blue Sox. Abilene dropped a 13 to 10 decision to Borger which dropped the Gold Sox into the basement, four games from first place.

In other games, Clovis turned the tables on Albuquerque, 10 to 4, and Lubbock pounded Pampa 5 to 1.

Rene Vega and Jerry Gleason teamed to turn in a five-hit pitching job for the Hubbers against Pampa, and Plainview's Lee Gatewood gave Abilene only four hits in the Ponies romp.

Thursday's schedule remains the same. Albuquerque at Clovis, Amarillo at Borger, Pampa at Lubbock and Plainview at Abilene.

Walter Wolfner, managing director of the Cardinals, said the addition of Yulka and Brown brings the total number of players signed to 22.

Coleman Blucats the past five years, has been hired to replace Bentley. Gleason's salary was set at $4,500.

Bentley leaves the Abilene school system after 19 years. It was reported that he won 2-3 of his games while coaching the Eagle basketballers.

The Eagles finished fourth in the District 1-AA race last season with a 7-7 record.

Local Lady Golfers Take Tourney Lead

The Pampa Women's Golf Association took the lead in the Panhandle Women's Golf Association play yesterday at the Pampa Country Club when they took top honors in the first of a series of five tournaments to be held this summer.

The Pampa ladies, led by Lila Austin who was the top lady of the day with a low net of 55, totaled 261 for the day's top team score. Others on the Pampa team and their scores were Opal Samples, 62; Beth Heiskell, 69; and Marge Austin, 75.

Ross Rogers of Amarillo was second with 263; Phillips Country Club third with 264; Huber Country Club fourth with 277; and Amarillo Country Club fifth with 280.

Members of the four visiting teams and their scores were:

Ross Rogers — Jane Farquhar, 55; Nell Sloan, 68; Lila Turner, 69; and Kay Robinson, 71.

Phillips — Mae Browning, 65; Lee Rucker, 65; Helen McCarthy, 67; and Bea Burrows, 67.

Huber — Grace Houck, 67; Robby Moss, 69; Louise Neely, 70; and Dortha Morrison, 71.

Lila Austin of Pampa had the low gross of the day with 82 but shared the low net of 55 with Jane Farquhar of Amarillo.

The low net for each player determined the team winners.

The second of the series of the tournaments will be held at the Amarillo Country Club, June 2.

down Sunday afternoon, nearly everyone of the 105 professionals in the 140-player field will pick up some nice wads of cash whether he finishes among the low scorers or not.

The official prize pot for the four-day affair was upped only this week from $15,000 to $21,400 by the sponsors, the oil-rich Waco Turners, but there's many another greenback lurking on almost every hole of the 6,483-yard, par 36-39 Dornick Hills Country Club layout.

Birdies Worth $15
Every birdie—and there should be plenty of them—will be worth an added $15. An eagle will net $500, as will the day's low round. If Dame Fortune smiles on a golfer and lets him sink a chip shot from off the green it'll be worth $25. For that rare hole-in-one, the Turners will shell out $2,500 in side money.

Although the Turners paid out around $12,000 in such bonus cash in the inaugural tourney here a year ago, Dave Douglas' winning score was only 279—one under par.

The course has been improved since then, but the consensus of the veterans on hand was that a 277 would be good enough to haul down top money this year—a prize that will be worth $10,400 by the time the Turners tack on a $4,000 bonus.

Many Lures Top Field
The lure of so much extra cash floating around has kept Ardmore's field of the top grade despite competition this week and with the famed Greenbrier tournament at White Sulphur Springs.

In addition to defending champion Douglas and runner-up Dutch Harrison, who is the home pro here, the field has such big-time names as Lloyd Mangrum, Cary Middlecoff, Julius Boros, Porky Oliver, Al Beaslink, Tommy Bolt, Jerry Barber, Chandler Harper, Jim Turney, Skeet Riegel, Ted Kroil, Bill Nery, Marty Furgol and scores of others.

Harrison, who came within two strokes of winning last year, could shoot into the top ranks of the year's money winners if he should come out on top on his home course. The Turners have promised him an extra bonus of $5,000.

Gil Hodges Slams First 1953 Homer
BROOKLYN, May 7.—UP.—The long home run famine is over for big Gil Hodges of the Dodgers, and his reward is a new team record.

The brassy first baseman, in the worst hitting slump of his career since he went hitless in the World Series last year, finally smashed his first homer, at the 1953 season Wednesday night—a towering, two-run blast into the upper left field stands in the sixth inning of a 7 to 3 win over the Cardinals.

It was Hodges' 140th home run as a Dodger—breaking the old team record of 139 set by Dolph Camilli.

Bomber Louis Packs 'Em In As An Actor

NEW YORK, May 7.—UP—There was a knock on Joe Louis' dressing room door and from outside someone said, "Ten more minutes, champ!"

Joe got off the bed and looked around for his stage costume. The master of ceremonies at Harlem's Apollo theater was starting the introduction. Joe buttoned his jacket and walked out toward the wings.

A burst of applause greeted the Brown Bomber as he shuffled onto the stage. He seemed self-conscious a little bored and somewhat weary of the routine.

But he valiantly went through with his light comic patter and when the MC asked, "why did you ever get into show business?" Joe came in on cue and deadpanned: "For money, what else?"

The audience out front howled and ate it up. It gave him a big hand when Joe, all 230 pounds of him, went into what passed for a soft shoe dance routine.

Back in the dressing room, Louis turned on the TV set again but did not bother to watch it.

"Did you mean that, back there on the stage, when you said you're in this business only for the money?" someone asked him.

"Aw, that's just one of the gags," Joe explained. "Show business is a lotta fun but, of course, the money you get counts, too."

"Now," he said in answer to a question, "I never think about retiring. I'll be 39 next week and I just wanna live comfortably and easy from now on."

Outside the theater, it looked like fight night at one of Joe's bouts. People milled around the box office and on the marquee, in foot-high letters, it said: "Joe Louis."

Just like the old days—he was the headline attraction.

Brawl Could Be Costly To Yankees

ST. LOUIS, May 7.—UP—The New York Yankees storming after their fifth straight American League pennant, may find that last week's free-for-all fight with the St. Louis Browns will put a road-block in their path to the flag.

The rights and wrongs of that extra-inning donnybrook, touched off by Clint Courtney's slide into Phil Rizzuto, are unimportant. The interesting feature of the fracas is that other members of the Browns, who had only a casual concern for Courtney's feud with the Yankees, were drawn into the act.

Fellow slugger Viv Wertz, for instance, was charged with Wertz restricts the use of his blacksmith arms to powdering baseballs and is a peaceful citizen. When he took the field, it was to help restore order by prying a couple of combatants apart. But he was immediately belted by an embattled Yankee and suffered from a stiff neck for several days afterward.

A Team Affair

Other Browns feel resentful in varying degrees, but Courtney's quarrel has now become a team affair.

Baseball history shows many examples of disasters to pennant contenders from such rows with tail-enders.

Best known, perhaps, is Bill Terry's famous and costly wobble of 1934. His New York Giants appeared to be home free as they enjoyed a big lead over the field. A writer inquired about Memphis Bill's opinion of the Brooklyn Dodgers, then an inept second division club.

"What league are they in?" Terry asked scornfully.

The Browns showed him by taking three out of four games in a September series, permitting the St. Louis Cardinals to carry off top honors.

Much later, in 1950, Lou Boudreau ran into the same trouble with his Cleveland Indians.

"The way to win a pennant," he said in a widely-quoted interview, "is to break even with the contenders and clobber the second-division clubs."

Got Fired

That is certainly true enough, but Boudreau must have had his regrets when the lowly Browns of that year took four straight games from Cleveland at home.

"It's a disgrace to lose four straight to a club like the Browns," raved General Manager Hank Greenberg as Cleveland's pennant hopes dissolved.

Boudreau, incidentally, was fired.

Last year the Browns won eight and lost 14 to the Yankees as New York won the pennant by two games over Cleveland. If the steam-up Browns could reverse that outcome this year, they could give the Yanks a rough time.

First Of '53 Season . . . Brownie Hurler Tosses No-Hitter

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 7.—UP—Bobo Holloman, a no-hit, 6 to 0 winner over the Philadelphia Athletics Wednesday night, wore a happy grin Thursday.

And he will have a $100 suit to wear with it in a few days—the gift of beaming Bill Veeck, owner of the St. Louis Browns.

It was the first time in modern baseball history that a rookie had pitched a no-hitter in his first big league starting assignment. The only other time the feat was performed, according to the official encyclopedia of baseball, was on Oct. 15, 1892, when Charles L. (Bumpus) Jones of the Cincinnati Reds hurled a 7 to 1 no-hitter against Pittsburgh in his first major league game.

Holloman, a 27-year-old right hander, had a miserable Brownie record going into his brilliant game Wednesday night. Used only in relief, he had an earned run average of 9.00, yielding 10 hits and five runs in five and one-third innings. He was charged with one defeat in that brief span.

Rain No Jinx

Rain had denied the sinker ball expert his chance on two other occasions when Manager Marty Marion had planned to use him and it appeared that the weather was again against him Wednesday night.

A fine drizzle was falling before the game and during most of the early innings, but Holloman, who once quit a minor league club rather than pitch in wet weather, didn't let it bother him.

"I'm a starting pitcher," he had insisted to Marion in explaining his bad luck in relief.

He proved it to a meager crowd of 2,473 fans who saw baseball history made free of charge as Veeck announced in the middle of the game that the faithful few in attendance could use their rain checks for any other Brownie home game.

Colts Knock Tribe Off Top In Longhorn

By UNITED PRESS

Midland dropped out of a tie for the Longhorn League lead Wednesday night as San Angelo clubbed five Indians pitchers for 14 hits and a 12 to 4 victory in the final game of a three-game series.

The Colts, who clinched into a third-place tie with Artesia, blasted three homers and four doubles. Midland Manager Jay Haney used 16 players trying to halt the slaughter.

Carlsbad took over undisputed possession of the lead by slugging Roswell 15 to 7. The Potashers used three home runs in beating the Rockets. A six-run spree in the fifth, including a three run double by Goldy Gholson and homers by Pedro and Elias Ocasio, did the damage. Merv Connors homered.

Dallas Takes Over Lead In Texas Loop

By UNITED PRESS

The Dallas Eagles, getting excellent and somewhat unexpected mound performances to go with a powerful hitting attack, replaced Shreveport as the top team in the Texas League Thursday.

The Eagles, with nine wins out of their last 13 games starting with a southern road trip April 25, clipped Shreveport Wednesday night 5 to 1 on the pitching of big Howard Anderson.

Anderson, a 23-year-old 6 foot 2 inch, 190 pounder, dropped the Sports a half game back in second place by turning in a three-hitter as Dallas broke through Bud Lively's tight pitching for runs in the second and seventh innings. The former Southern Association pitcher had a one-hitter going into the ninth inning when two scratch hits and a walk produced the only Sport run.

In Two Other Games, Fort Worth

shoved Beaumont deeper into the cellar 12 to 3 as Bill (Toy) Glane gave the Exporters only seven hits. Houston's Fred Martin blanked Oklahoma City with only five safeties as the Buffs won 6 to 0. The San Antonio at Tulsa game was rained out and a doubleheader is scheduled between the two teams Thursday night.

Dallas has been playing at a .692 clip the past 11 days and Wednesday's victory over the Sports evened the count between the two teams this season at two games each.

Fort Worth centerfielder Vic Marasco was the hero in the Cats win over Beaumont. Marasco hit two home runs, in the second and

For Carlsbad for Roswell in the first.

At Lamesa, John Miesculin won his first game in six starts, pitching a six-hitter to nip Artesia 4 to 2.

Big Spring dropped a 12 to 0 game to Odesa, which moved into fifth place. The Broncs, who have not won a home night game this season, got eight hits but failed to tally. The Oilers got three home runs by Bobby and Floyd Martin and Felix Castro.

In 1952, over 5,000,000 persons fifth innings, driving in four of Zillan, who lasted less than two innings, was the losing pitcher. The losing pitcher was George Eyrich, the first of three Exporter hurlers. Oklahoma City used four pitchers in its losing cause against the fast-improving Houston team. All

ELIZABETH

Former Governess to Her Majesty

the Queen

II.

DO people ever ask themselves, on seeing Queen Elizabeth going smoothly and gracefully about her duties at a public function, whether she has ever overcome the handicap of shyness which so often afflicts Royalty as well as ordinary folk?

Does Royalty long for the privacy that others have?

She was not a shy child, but was always ready to stand up and meet people. In fact, Queen Elizabeth is deeply interested in people.

I remember the King saying to me once, as we watched her strut on the stage (built in Queen Victoria's time and still hung with the dark purple gold-bordered heavy curtains that had screened the Victorian tableaux of so many years ago) at Windsor Castle for one of our pantomimes: "Where does she get her poise? I was always terrified of getting up in public."

However much she may like people there are times when any woman desires privacy. But for a Royal Princess, there is no such thing. Soon the world knew that a Royal Heir was to be born.

There was a new shine in her eyes, a radiance from within, which all of us in the household were conscious of.

Soon others were to notice it. Indeed the radiance became so unmistakable that the newspapers took it almost as an unofficial announcement.

I CAN reveal now that there was some annoyance among members of the household over these premature revelations. Some journalists abroad even went so far as to forecast, by "scientific" means, whether the child would be a boy or a girl. Some of these learned prognosticators pointed one way, and some the other, but one thing was certain: Princess Elizabeth was going to have a baby.

"Why can't they let her have her baby in peace?" growled members of the household. As if that could be possible in a world filled with curiosity!

But it was not idle curiosity. The eagerness of everyone to know everything about Princess Elizabeth, to wish her well, to pray for her health and happiness, was a sign of their high regard for her. It must have been some recompense for the invasion of her privacy to realize that millions were praying for her.

The pram Princess Elizabeth had mentioned was a stately affair which should really have been called a perambulator, if not a carriage.

It was the one in which both she and Princess Margaret had been wheeled when children, and for which they hold a deep affection. After speaking to me about it, someone was sent down to Windsor—that storehouse of Royal relics, from priceless dresses and jewels to baby shoes and christening robes—to dig it out. It was overhauled from top to bottom and was solemnly brought up to the Palace.

The first time that we tested it, in Princess Elizabeth's rooms, was an hilarious occasion. I was sent for, and as I came near I heard shrieks of laughter. Then I opened the door and saw Bobo, the Princess's personal maid, marching behind the empty pram with a look of pride.

THE upright, old-fashioned vehicle was paraded up and down before us. Bobo's pride was unmistakable but understandable. It was like old times to her to be wheeling the pram in which she had taken Princess Elizabeth and then Princess Margaret for their airings from 145 Piccadilly.

While we were enjoying the spectacle Princess Margaret came in. When she saw what was happening she said delightedly, "Oh, the pram!"

She rushed forward, took it from Bobo and began wheeling it about herself, smiling happily.

Such pictures as those, coming into my mind today, seem to take away nothing of the Royal grandeur that surrounds Princess Elizabeth in her public life, but rather throw it into sharper relief.

All of us in the Palace were naturally concerned for the Princess as the time for the birth of her baby approached. But none of us had any fear that she would not come through her ordeal safely and happily. She is the sort of person who goes competently about any business that engages her, and she faced motherhood calmly.

One of the first things she did was to call in Sir William Gilliatt, her doctor, to explain everything to her. He told her what she ought to do, and she carefully followed the routine he set.

There were few extravagant or faddish preparations. She got up at her usual time and took her usual meals supplemented by plenty of green food and orange juice. She took no alcoholic drink of any sort.

That abstinence was easy for her, because she had never used liquor herself. At a cocktail party I have seen her nursing one drink through a long session, and leave it three parts untouched at the end. Smoking did not come into the matter, as she has never smoked. Prince Philip is equally abstemious.

All evening engagements were cut out; the Princess arranged to be in bed by 10 o'clock every night.

Princess Margaret's reaction to all this was amusing—and charming. Normally she is more high-spirited than thoughtful, although she has moments of great kindness and perception.

But suddenly she seemed to realize what motherhood meant to a woman, and became tender and protective toward her sister, bringing cushions for her back and seeing that she was comfortably seated long before such care became necessary. Such solicitude, from one normally so self-reliant, was touching.

Princess Elizabeth, of course, went her own way. She would have nothing of the old superstitious attitude which made an illness of pregnancy.

"It should be a natural process," she would say. "After all, it's what we are made for."

How different this attitude was from that which prevailed in Queen Victoria's time! Then, Princess would have disappeared entirely from public view, to spend much of her time in bed. But Princess Elizabeth had many public duties she continued to perform—most important of which was a tour of France with Prince Philip in May, 1948.

She refused to listen to any suggestion that the tour should be canceled. "They have made the arrangements," she said, "and I cannot let them down."

PARIS gave them a tumultuous reception. Parisians in the crowds lined the streets, hailed her as "La Belle Princess" and declared that she was the best ambassador Britain had ever sent to France. They were particularly delighted to hear her speak excellent French, fluently, clearly, with hardly a trace of English accent.

Princess Elizabeth was as happy as the crowds and much flattered by their ovation. Nevertheless, it was an exhausting round of appearances for her at such a time.

Pomp and ceremony in a Princess's own country are familiar ground to her; but abroad there are certain strangenesses. In Paris the people wanted to see the Royal couple everywhere, against every background of the city.

JOHNSON ★ IN HOLLYWOOD ★

By ERSKINE
JOHNSON
NEA Staff
Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Exclusively Yours: Fred MacMurray has sprouted a beard to play "a bit of a heavy" opposite Barbara Stanwyck in a 3-D western, Joseph Bernhart's "The Moonlighters," and he's the happiest guy in Hollywood.

"Hollywood has always thought of me as a smoothie with a fast quip," Fred tells it. "I was a real heel in 'Double Indemnity' but even that didn't help. Yes, sir, bring out the heavies — I'm ready for 'em. After all, Hollywood just doesn't make light comedies any more."

A studio's current efforts to hypo the box office of a real stinker reminds me of the time Kate Smith made a movie, titled, "Hello, Everybody." Business was so bad that one theater owner changed his marquee to read:

"Hello, Anybody."

Billy Halop and his sister, Florence, may be the first on TV with a brother — and — sister show. The scrip is in the works now that Billy, the movies' former Dead End Kid star, is making an acting comeback.

Florence, who was Ed Gardner's last Miss Duffy on Duffy's Tavern before he left Hollywood, now plays Elena Verdugo's mother on TV's "Meet Millie." But zippy Florence has to peddle and wrinkle by the make-up department for the role and she is chuckling:

"Elena and I are both married and mothers. But her daughter is older than mine."

OH, NO! dept.: A photo magazine just came out with a big layout "revealing" Clark Gable's favorite Saturday night pastime — shining all his shoes! Maybe that's another reason why he wants to leave MGM.

On Wings of France
Paramount's 3-D musical western without conventional sets, "Red Garters" the sets are only suggested — will be "excitingly different." That's the word from Producer Pat Duggan, who isn't worried about moviegoers' reactions.

"Everyone knows what western sets look like, he told me. 'They even know all the plots. With a stylized production people can visualize that what they're seeing and have a flight of imagination."

Shelley Winters and Vittorio Gassman are doing some fast talking to arrange it and "it looks like a co-starring stint for them in Europe this summer in 'Beachhead.' The picture is hired by Shelley for daughter Vittoria, by the way, is the same one who raised the kiddies of Jennifer Jones and Margaret Sullivan.

It's a full-scale return to emoting for Bonita Granville — The Brat of prewar movies who blossomed out of the awkward age to marry a Texas millionaire, Jack Wrather, and become the mother of two children.

"I'm back working," she said on the set of "The Antique Shop," for Bing Crosby Enterprises. Her career blueprint calls for half a dozen 30-minute telefilms a year and live TV emoting. "The confusion and the split-second timing doesn't bother me a bit."

Bonita was working at the Hal Roach lot and her memories were a flood tide. She was working on the same stage where she starred as a moppet 15 years ago in "Merrily We Live," now playing the old movie TV circuit.

Treasure Chest
U-T's "All-American" should be called "All-American Beefcake," Tony Curtis' muscular chest is exposed in almost every other scene with a studio official explaining: "Tony's pictures make more money when he's undressed."

Lana Turner's ex, Steve Crane, and Mona Knox have patched it up now that French movie queen Martine Carol has instructed her lawyers to get a default divorce. Mona has assured her parents that there will be a marriage.

Ingrid Bergman and Zsa Zsa Gabor failed to hit it off in Ravello, Italy. No feud — just no great affection for each other.

Palmer Lee, who is to be given the stardom treatment at U-T, is overboard on the subject of Ann Sheridan's pretty secretary, Gloria Murphy.

Ken Murray's not blushing about the nepotism label, but the east of his first full-length feature, "The Marshal's Daughter" includes: His wife, their new baby, and the husband of his star, Laurie Anders.

Tony Dexter will be kept in the Valentino groove in a remake of "The Shiek" but Tony's pleading: "I want a chance at other roles, too. I wasn't a Valentino type of actor on Broadway. I think I can beat the jinx that hangs over actors who play the life stories of other actors within public memory."

Fresh in Tony's mind: "The fate of Larry Parks after he played Johnson and the career slump of Robert Alda after he played Gershwin."

More Nubleg Babies
HARTFORD, Conn. — The stark kept a busy schedule in Connecticut last year. The health department reported that 45,412 babies were delivered breaking the state's former high of 44,618 in 1947.

The waterway as Route 66
Marie carries more traffic than the Suez and Panama canals put together.
