Rwandan exodus overwhelms Zaire

■ As many as 1 million Hutus flee nation's civil war.

Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — Zairean soldiers confiscated machetes and knives, but otherwise could do little more than watch the tidal wave of Hutu refugees flooding across the border Thursday in full flight from Rwanda's civil war.

An estimated 200,000 to 250,000 people poured past three overwhelmed checkpoints along the border by late afternoon.

Relief organizations and Zairean authorities were swamped by the exodus, one of the greatest in history.

Apocalypse now

When Harold Camping says the world is going to end in September, people listen. For thousands of years, prophets have tried to predict the end of the world. What distinguishes Camping is the media forum offered by the 40 radio stations owned by his company, Family Radio. As the time for his prophecy to unfold nears and his influence grows, even evangelical scholars who have dismissed Camping's claims as "screwball" have taken him seriously enough to publicly rebut him in debates and a new book./7A

Jackpot rolls over

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. A winning ticket would have been worth $3 million. The jackpot for Saturday night's drawing rises to an estimated $10 million. The numbers drawn Wednesday night from a field of 50 were 1, 17, 24, 25, 34 and 35.

Bat-attack teen draws six-year prison sentence

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

It took the jury only about 90 minutes to decide that Mark W. Mitchell Jr. would be sentenced to six years in prison for his "heinous" baseball-bat attack on a convenience-store clerk last year.

Mitchell, 17, was convicted Wednesday afternoon of attempted capital murder for the April 2, 1993, attack on Kay Balog while she was working at the Town and Country Food Store, 7100 W. Highway 80.

Mitchell showed no emotion while the sentence was read. However, he and his family waited until the jury had left before retiring to the rear of the courtroom to hug and cry.

Mitchell could have received probation or five to 99 years in prison.

Defense attorney Glen Aaron had numerous people testify that Mitchell is an alcoholic and that this contributed to his problems and was a factor in the attack on Ms. Balog.

Aaron said he was pleased with the jury's decision; however, he said he doesn't believe prison time will cure Mitchell's alcohol addiction.

Midland County Assistant District Attorney Teresa Clingman said she

Videotape of prosecutor raises new questions about O.J.'s estate search

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A videotape purportedly showing prosecutor Marcia Clark at O.J. Simpson's estate before police had a warrant raised new questions Thursday about whether the search by homicide investigators was legal.

The district attorney's office disputed KCBS-TV's report that the station's time-marked videotape showed the prosecutor on Simpson's property at least 17 minutes before the warrant was signed.

A source close to the investigation told The Associated Press that by the time Clark got to the Simpson residence the search warrant had already been served by police officers.

Prosecutors, meanwhile, said they were still investigating the role of Simpson friend Al "A.C." Cowlings in helping the football legend flee arrest on June 17 and would ask for a delay in a hearing for Cowlings that had been scheduled for today.

New guidelines: Less is more in children's ear-infection care

WASHINGTON (AP) — New federal guidelines recommend a less aggressive treatment for fluid in the inner ears of young children since the condition often clears itself without treatment.

The directive "should be good news to parents," said Dr. Philip R. Lee, director of the U.S. Public Health Service, since the condition leads between 6 million and 8 million children to visit doctors' offices annually.

In the past, the condition initially was treated with antibiotics and, in prolonged cases, with surgery that involved implanting plastic drains.

But Lee said Thursday that health officials now believe doctors and parents should first give nature a chance.

The guidelines recommend treatment for otitis media with effusion, a condition in children ages 1 to 3 in which fluid accumulates inside the ear drum, muffling hearing. The condition, sometimes called "glue

White House builds its case for potential invasion of Haiti

By Rita Beamish
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Wary of public opposition, the Clinton administration is carefully making a case for a potential invasion of Haiti, citing political killings and kidnappings and U.S. regional interests as justification.

Aides to President Clinton insist he has not made a decision whether to launch a military operation to topple coup leaders in Port-au-Prince. But the president, on more than one occasion, has cited a laundry list of American interests in Haiti when asked about an invasion. By extension, those interests would become the underpinning for a decision to use force.

An invasion would meet an uphill battle in public opinion.

In recent polls, two thirds of Americans surveyed opposed sending U.S. troops to oust military leaders who seized power nearly three years ago from

■ Apartment complex in Gaza kicks off $500 million promised by U.S. over next five years.

Associated Press

JEBALIYA REFUGEE CAMP, Gaza Strip — Yasser Arafat and a top U.S. official cut a green ribbon together Thursday to symbolize the start of a $6.9 million apartment complex — and the start of international aid.

The 169-apartment complex called the Karama Towers will house about 1,000 people — only a fraction of what is needed to alleviate overcrowding in the refugee camps where 20 people often live jammed into one stone hut.

Still, the complex — named for a 1968 battle between Arafat's guerrillas and the Israeli army — is a solid sign that foreign donor nations are making good on pledges of $2.4 billion in assistance over the next five years to the new autonomy government in the Gaza Strip and West Bank town of Jericho.

"We are going to work to create houses. We are going to create jobs," vowed J. Brian Atwood, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development. "We want to create hope, and this is just the beginning."

Atwood also toured a U.S.-funded sewage treatment plant and urban renewal project in nearby Gaza City. The United States has $60 million in programs under way and is committed to providing $500 million over the next five years.

Atwood's words were music to the ears of Palestinians who have been waiting with skepticism as foreign aid failed to materialize.

"It's the first time the Americans have done anything for us, so we're happy," said Gamal Bakri, a 32-year-old Jebaliya truck driver. "But we don't know if it is also the last time. One building is not enough."

Other visible signs of aid include a newly opened juice plant built with Italian funds and a program to train people to care for the handicapped sponsored by Calgary University in Canada. Norway and European countries provided equipment for the Palestinian police.

But the donor countries have not released the bulk of the funds, saying the PLO — with a history of corruption and secrecy — must first establish proper accounting procedures.

Arafat has resisted close international supervision of how to spend the money, not wanting to appear under the control of foreign donors.

He has complained bitterly about World Bank restrictions and the slow influx of foreign aid and urged Palestinians to rely on themselves in building the impoverished Gaza Strip.

Unrest continues to plague oil-rich Nigeria

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The man apparently cheated out of the presidency last year was ordered to stay in jail on treason charges Thursday in a ruling certain to outrage pro-democracy forces that have paralyzed the country.

A strike begun by oil workers on July 4 has spread to other sectors of the economy in an effort to force the military to step down and install businessman Moshood K.O. Abiola as president.

Abiola was the apparent winner of Nigeria's June 12, 1993, election, but the military nullified the ballot and reneged on its pledge to yield power to a civilian government.

Abiola was arrested and charged with treason after declaring himself president on the first anniversary of the election. A treason conviction carries a penalty of life in prison.

The ruling junta, pressured by increasing damage to the oil industry that drives the economy, said Wednesday that it would not block Abiola's release if the court decided to grant him bail.

The courts are firmly in the grip of the military, and some Nigerians expected the rulers to give in to public pressure and free Abiola.

But Judge Ibrahim Mustapha struck down Abiola's bail application on a technicality and said the businessman must remain behind bars until the start of his trial on July 28.

Abiola was returned to his jail cell in the isolated northwestern desert town of Wuse.

"To send me back to the police detention cell in Wuse is like sending me to an early death," he told the judge.

In Lagos, the commercial capital, police whipped dozens of activists trying to get to a meeting of a new pro-democracy organization called the Group of Concerned Professionals.

Police cordoned off St. Peter's Church Hall, where the group was to meet in downtown Lagos, then whipped some of the 500 lawyers, architects, advertising and banking managers and others who tried to force their way past the barricade.

Sale of pope's book to coincide with U.S. visit

ROME (AP) — A book by Pope John Paul II about the global role of the Roman Catholic Church will go on sale around the world this fall, coinciding with his visit to the United States, publishers said Thursday.

As many as 10 million copies in 20 languages will be published, with all royalties going to charity, said Giulia Cogoli, spokeswoman for the pope's Italian publisher, Mondadori.

"Crossing the Threshold of Hope" is considered unusual because it was written while John Paul was pope and targets a general-interest audience.

The 74-year-old pontiff was inspired to write the book after an Italian journalist preparing for an interview submitted a list of 35 questions in advance. The interview was later canceled, but the pope liked the questions so much he expanded them, then answered them in narrative form.

Cogoli said the contract was signed June 30 with Joaquin Navarro, the pope's chief spokesman. Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, will publish the book in the United States, where it will sell for about $20 a copy.

Mondadori sold English language rights to Random House for an estimated $6 million, The International Herald Tribune reported Thursday.

Sonny Mehta, president and editor-in-chief of Knopf, said in a statement in New York that the book's publication would coincide with John Paul's scheduled visit in October to New York, Newark, N.J., and Baltimore.

"This marks the first time that he has written at great length in a book intended for all the people of the world," he said.

Anti-military protest in Indonesia turns violent

DILI, Indonesia (AP) — Police broke up a protest by about 500 students against Indonesia's military Thursday and reported 15 people injured. A human rights activist reported three students killed and dozens injured.

The military and police denied any deaths.

Fourteen people were being interrogated regarding the violent protest at East Timor University in Dili, Police Chief Lt. Col. Sugianto Andreas said.

University rector S.P. Brotosudarma said seven students were reported missing after the melee.

In November 1991, soldiers killed dozens of pro-independence protesters in Dili, capital of East Timor, drawing strong protests from the West. Indonesia annexed the Portuguese colony in 1976 after intervening in its civil war.

The students Thursday, led by university vice president Armindo Mayo, were demanding firm action against two soldiers accused of trampling on holy wafers during Mass at a Roman Catholic church near Dili.

East Timor military commander Col. Johny Lumintang promised Wednesday that a military tribunal would try the two.

German armored vehicles of the 10th Panzer Division parade down the Champs Elysees in Paris Thursday for Bastille Day. About 200 Germans took part in the historic symbol of post World War II reconciliation. German columns paraded down the same avenue for Hitler to celebrate the capture of the city during the war. Unlike then, however, most French people approved Thursday's spectacle.

German panzers parade through Paris

PARIS (AP) — German soldiers paraded down France's grandest avenue Thursday for the first time since World War II. To some it brought eerie memories of Nazi occupation, but to most it signified a milestone in Europe's unification.

Invited to France's traditional Bastille Day military parade, the 200 Germans joined troops of France, Belgium, Spain and Luxembourg in an 800-member procession by the Eurocorps, Europe's new army.

As armored personnel carriers rolled down the Champs-Elysees, Beethoven's 9th Symphony, the European Union's hymn, played over the public address system. Applause broke out among many of the tens of thousands of onlookers lining the avenue.

"I think you must move beyond the memories, even if you lived them like me," said Bernard Heslot, 67.

"I feel good for Europe and I think it's normal to see German troops," said Fred Coustenoble, 23. "In fact they're not really German troops. That's why it doesn't matter to me, because they're here with the Eurocorps."

But others, seeing black-and-white German military crosses on two dozen armored vehicles, couldn't forgive Germany for the daily goose stepping by Nazi occupation troops down the same boulevard for four long years.

There were some scattered whistles of disapproval. One group of protesters dressed in concentration camp uniforms and one couple wore the yellow star of David the Nazis forced the Jews to wear.

"My father was deported" to a death camp, said the woman, Annette Salomon, 60. "To see them march then and to see them again today is very difficult."

Still, the memory of a German prison camp, where he lost two friends, doesn't stop Maurice Picault, 91, "from being for the Germans in the parade."

"It's better to be friends than enemies," he said.

The 7,000-member Eurocorps, to grow to 40,000 next year, was created by France and Germany. The two former enemies are now the two main forces behind plans to turn the EU into a political and economic power with a common currency and army.

TEEN: Jury issues 6-year prison sentence to baseball-bat attacker wasn't surprised by the sentence, but felt the prosecution accomplished its two goals of getting Mitchell convicted of attempted capital murder and getting him sentenced to prison time.

"The amount of time he does is out of our hands," Ms. Clingman said.

The victim's family declined to comment on the sentence, according to a witness coordinator with the district attorney's office.

Ms. Balog had to catch her breath as she left the courtroom. She was surrounded by family members as she retired to the district attorney's office.

The jury took more than five hours Wednesday evening to decide Mitchell's guilt in the assault, but only an 1½ hours to decide his sentence.

The jury didn't get the case until 4:45 p.m. Thursday after a full day of testimony in the case.

Ms. Balog's mother, Gwen Woody, testified that her daughter has been "unstable" since the attack. She said Ms. Balog lacks some decision-making skills and judgment, loses her self-confidence and suffers from mood swings.

She was in rehabilitation facilities in Dallas for several months and continued her rehabilitation in Midland as an out-patient for several months. Ms. Woody said her daughter is now prone to fits of anger that have caused her difficulties in relationships with her children and husband and create problems for her at work.

Ms. Woody also said Ms. Balog will "babble" at times about remote memories from her childhood and forgets things like putting her clothes in the dryer when she is getting ready to go somewhere.

A friend of Mitchell's also testified for the state. She said she was with Mitchell the night following the attack on Ms. Balog. She indicated Mitchell didn't appear to act any differently that night from any other.

The state rested its case after the two witnesses.

The defense then asked the judge to allow testimony regarding a "vigilante" beating Mitchell received in July 1993, allegedly in retribution for his assault on Ms. Balog.

Judge John Hyde didn't allow the testimony to be heard by the jury because it was an incident beyond the control of Mitchell and was not pertinent to the sentencing.

However, he allowed Aaron to get the testimony on a "bill of exception" record without the jury present.

Both Mitchell and his mother testified for the record, but without the jury being present, regarding the attack.

Ms. Stroud said her son was beaten severely by a group of people. She said this changed his demeanor. Following his arrest he stopped drinking, but after the assault on him he began drinking again, she said.

Mitchell took the stand and told Hyde he was jumped when he thought he was going to a party. He said about nine people beat him with a cane and kicked and punched him. He said he managed to get away to a nearby house where a woman called police.

He said after the attack he had nightmares and was looking over his shoulder all the time and "to this day it's hard to trust people."

Ms. Stroud testified she tried to get charges filed in the assault, but no one would help her because of the charges pending against her son.

Following their testimony for the record, the defense called a number of friends and relatives to testify about Mitchell.

A former Lee High School football coach testified Mitchell wasn't a very good player during his 10th-grade year. He said the pressure was to perform well and quitters were looked down on.

Ms. Stroud again took the stand and testified her son was always small compared to his friends, but was well-liked and made good grades. She said he always wanted to play football for Lee High, but quit when he wasn't treated well by the coaches.

She said after he quit football he began drinking alcohol. She said he was depressed and began drinking heavily. He was enrolled in a rehabilitation hospital for alcohol dependency earlier this year, she said.

Two of his aunts testified he was always small for his age and he wanted to play football for Lee, but wasn't able to. They also testified that he tries to hide his emotions.

Mitchell's stepfather testified similarly to Ms. Stroud. He said Mitchell became belligerent after he drank. He recounted one argument the two had in which Mitchell used profane language. He blamed the baseball-bat assault on the liquor Mitchell drank.

Also testifying in Mitchell's behalf was his grandmother, who described Mitchell as the "Pampers baby," noting what a good boy he had always been. She, too, said he wanted to play football for Lee High. She called his arrest a "complete shock."

The final witness for the defense was psychologist Jarvis Wright who testified Mitchell had a "very serious drinking problem."

He said Mitchell was depressed because of the "dumb" things he did while he was drinking and said that on several occasions Mitchell became so intoxicated he would defecate in his pants and continue to drink.

Wright said Mitchell's participation in football was one way to seek the approval of grown men, since his own father had abandoned him when he was an infant.

He said quitting football left Mitchell feeling rejected by his peers, the coaches and other men and was a factor that led to his drinking. This in turn led to the assault on Ms. Balog.

He said the drinking problems complicated the worthless feelings Mitchell had following his dropping out of football.

In closing arguments, Midland County Assistant District Attorney Brian Carney called the attack on Ms. Balog "heinous and despicable" and called Mitchell a "dangerous person when he snaps."

Aaron said Mitchell's actions were driven by his desire for acceptance. He said being a team player and looking for the approval of the football coaches was important to Mitchell.

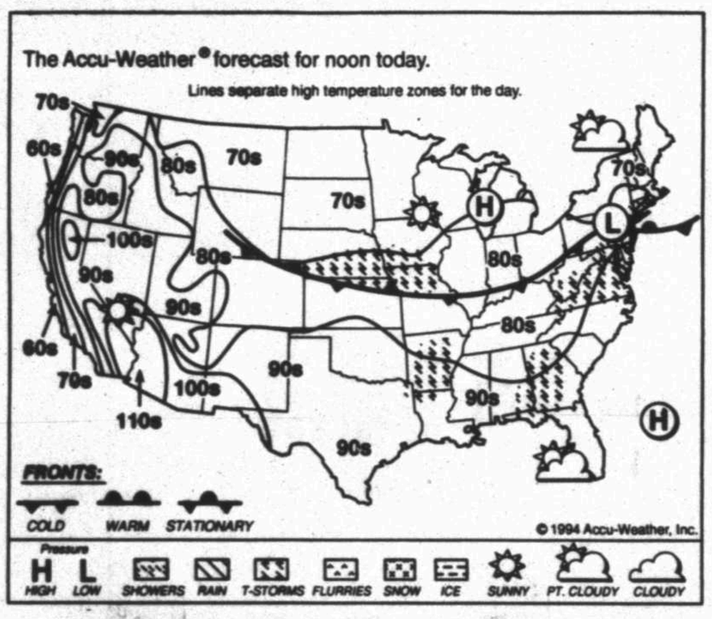
He agreed with Carney that the attack was heinous, but added that punishing Mitchell with prison time wouldn't restore Ms. Balog to her original self. He encouraged the jury to give Mitchell probation so he could continue to receive alcohol-abuse treatment.

Carney called probation for Mitchell a "farce . . . Mr. Mitchell should have to pay for what he did . . . and I'm talking about going to the penitentiary and staying there."

He said everyone is dejected or rejected at some time, but "does that mean we all get one free lick at somebody's head because life doesn't work out?"

Mitchell remains free on bond pending his formal sentencing at 1:30 p.m. today by Hyde in 238th District Court.

WEATHER WATCH



Cooling trend caps highs in 90s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the mid-90s and southeast winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 62, Thursday's high reached 91, compared to the record high for that date of 107 set in 1933. The record low was 60 set in 1987.

STATE

Up to seven inches of rain fell in South Texas Thursday as a persistent upper-level low pressure system continued to generate showers and thunderstorms across the state.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch for North Central and Northeast Texas until this morning after some storm cells produced strong winds, torrential rains and some small hail.

More rain fell in the Hill Country and Edwards Plateau. Runoff from a 5- to 7-inch downpour in the Leakey area and other storms will pose a threat to Real and Uvalde Counties, including Frio River and Garner State Parks, the weather service said.

Forecasters said campers should watch for rapidly rising water and motorists should avoid flooded low-water crossings.

Scattered thunderstorms developed over Southeast Texas, in the southwest and along the lower gulf coast and lower Rio Grande Valley.

Highs ranged from the high 60s and lower 70s in rain-cooled areas to 97 degrees at Laredo and McAllen and 100 at El Paso.

Winds in northern and southern parts of the state were generally southerly and southwesterly from 10 to 30 mph, and variable and gusty near the thunderstorms. Winds in West Texas were southerly to southeasterly wind at 10 to 15 mph.

NATION

Scattered thunderstorms and showers stretched from Colorado to Pennsylvania on Thursday, while moisture from the Gulf Coast produced hot, rainy weather over much of the South.

Thunderstorms with torrential rains and winds up to 85 mph swept across parts of Oklahoma, flooding streets in Tulsa and damaging buildings. Some downtown Tulsa streets were waist-deep in water after the storms. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Chain files civil lawsuit in beating victim's behalf

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

San Angelo-based Town & Country Food Stores has filed a civil lawsuit in 142nd District Court on behalf of the woman who was beaten in the head with a baseball bat while on the job last year.

Kay Balog suffered head injuries requiring the removal of two blood clots in her skull, as well as the removal of some brain tissue.

The lawsuit was filed against Mark W. Mitchell Jr., 17, of Midland who was found guilty Wednesday of attempted capital murder in the April 2, 1993, attack on Ms. Balog while she was working at the Town & Country Food Store, 7100 W. Highway 80. He was sentenced to six years in prison.

The lawsuit requests more than $100,000 to cover expenses incurred by Ms. Balog.

Following months of rehabilitation, Ms. Balog returned to work for the convenience store.

"We are pursuing this civil action because of the senseless nature of this vicious attack on one of our employees. As a company, we simply will not rest until Kay's assailant has compensated her for the physical and emotional damage he has caused. Frankly, there's no amount of money that can undo what she has been through," said Town & Country Food Stores' President Don Allison.

"We were firmly convinced all along that Mitchell was the perpetrator and Town & Country will see this through to the end. Criminals — particularly this type of criminal — who senselessly attack and injure innocent victims, need to get the message that even after the criminal courts have dealt with them, they will still be required to compensate their victims."

Glen Aaron, Mitchell's defense attorney in his criminal case, will also represent him in the civil action.

"Consider the source of those statements. Town and Country realizes, and Kay Balog obviously doesn't, that they're sitting on a million dollar lawsuit for having a broken video camera and no security to protect their minimum wage employees," Aaron said in response to the company statements.

friend, said he no longer had Simpson's suitcase, which a KCOP-TV videotape showed him carrying away that same morning. Kardashian said the bag contained Simpson's clothes and nothing incriminating, and that the police wouldn't let him return it to the mansion and made no effort then to recover it from him.

■ DNA specialist Barry Scheck of the Cardozo Law School in New York City told the AP on Thursday that he had joined Simpson's defense team. Scheck heads a group of Cardozo law students called the Innocence Project that reviews convictions based on DNA fingerprinting for possible appeal. So far, the group has been responsible for overturning eight such convictions, he said.

The videotape raised new questions about the search of Simpson's estate the day after his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman, were stabbed to death outside Ms. Simpson's condo.

The AP's source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Clark got to the mansion at 12:30 p.m., stayed there for about an hour to observe the search and returned to the district attorney's office at about 2 p.m.

ear", has no symptoms other than the fluid collection. There is no ache or fever as with acute otitis media, the ear infection that can cause severe pain.

Otitis media with effusion, or OME, if allowed to continue for many months, can reducing hearing acuity during at a time when children are learning to speak. For this reason, the condition has often been treated aggressively.

But Dr. Alfred Berg, a co-chair of a federal panel of experts and a professor at the University of Washington, said that in most cases, the condition disappears within three to six months without medical treatment.

"This fact . . . gives weight to the use of observation or watchful waiting as an acceptable way to manage (the disorder) within the first three months," he said.

Berg said antibiotics, frequently used in the past, are of very limited value in treating the condition. He said there are few long-term comparative studies, but from this sketchy data the panel concluded that antibiotics, at best, conferred only a 14 percent advantage over doing nothing. Also, said Berg, antibiotics can cause side effects and lead to the development of drug resistant bacteria that can cause a more serious disease.

"Antibiotics are a valid option for treating OME, but they are not ... the preferred option in early stages of the condition," Berg said.

EXODUS: Flood of refugees swamps Zaire trying to attack them. But Hutu radio stations were warning of Tutsi attacks and many refugees apparently believed they were in imminent danger.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali appealed for an immediate ceasefire in Rwanda, saying: "Unless this exodus . . . ceases, the stability of the whole region will be endangered." The Security Council also demanded a halt to fighting, and asked U.N. members for troops, equipment and financing for an expanded U.N. peacekeeping force to replace France's mercy mission in Rwanda.

In Zaire, there was fear of trouble with Goma residents, members of a Bantu group, who lined streets to watch the procession. Some shouted obscenities at the newcomers. Goma is also home to a Tutsi refugee camp of about 8,500 people.

The Hutus balanced bundles of possessions and mattresses on their heads, carried babies on their backs and herded along reluctant goats and cattle.

The refugees filled four fields and a soccer stadium set aside for them, then started laying down mattresses, mats and tattered blankets anywhere they could find space. Smoke from cooking fires obscured the sky. A U.N. jeep led a column of refugees north toward open fields near the airport 2½ miles outside town.

The refugees had to fend for themselves in the open, with not even tents to shield them from Thursday's light drizzle.

Up to 1 million Hutus have been reported on the road to Zaire. They fear the rebels want to avenge widespread massacres of minority Tutsis by extremist supporters of Rwanda's Hutu-dominated government, blamed for most of the estimated 200,000 to 500,000 deaths in the past three months.

No evidence of reprisals has surfaced.

Goma was a dusty city of 20,000 people before Rwanda's war resumed in April, but now is home to more than 150,000 with scant water supplies despite being on the shore of Lake Kivu. Sanitation has become a problem.

At the peak of the flood Thursday, 600 refugees crossed into Goma each minute, relief officials said. In the next few days, the number of refugees around Goma alone could reach 900,000, they said.

Officials are considering vaccinating all refugees against major diseases.

An estimated 3 million people, out of a prewar population of about 7.5 million, have fled their homes in Rwanda, a mountainous Central African nation about twice the size of Connecticut.

U.N. officials estimate 1.5 million to 2 million refugees are in western Rwanda alone.

FIRE: Oil tank continues to burn

(From 1A)

While accomplishing this, firefighters witnessed lightning strike a second tank just before midnight, said Ray Sprague, assistant fire chief with the Midland Fire Department.

The tank immediately ignited and has continued to thwart firefighters' efforts. This tank, owed by Chevron, contains about 16,000 gallons of sour crude oil, said Neal Miller, public affairs manager for the Chevron companies. Heavy rains hampered firefighters' efforts, making it difficult to move heavy equipment through the tank farm.

Although unsuccessful in extinguishing the tank fire, Miller praised the Fire Department's efforts.

"The Midland department has done a fantastic job," he said.

Advisors associated with the Boots & Coots oil-well firefighting company flew into Midland to advise firefighters.

"We're letting it burn with an abundance of caution because the tank has been too hot for anyone to approach it," Miller said.

Advisors from Williams Fire and Hazard Control of Mauriceville have decided to bring in additional equipment from Beaumont and the Fina refinery in Big Spring.

While the equipment is being transported, firefighters — who worked all through the night — will be allowed to rest before again attacking the tank fire early this morning.

"We're going to get some rest and come back with a vengeance in the morning," Miller said.

He emphasized that there was no danger from the fire because a safety zone of 500 feet has been secured around the burning tank.

The nearest residences are estimated to be a quarter-mile away and are in no danger, Miller said.

Firefighters have managed to isolate and contain the fire and have kept it from spreading to nearby tanks.

The problem in extinguishing the fire is the floating ceiling over the oil contents, he said. "The hot oil keeps bubbling up through the seal. It's stubborn. It's very stubborn," he said.

The new equipment will allow firefighters to greatly increase the volume of foam applied to the tank. "We're going to overwhelm it with volume," Miller said.

Once the special equipment is in place, Miller believes firefighters can extinguish the blaze without a great deal of trouble.

Mexico's Salinas OKs broad review of candidate's assassination

TIJUANA, Mexico (NYT) — Hoping to silence widespread criticism of the investigation into the assassination of the governing party's presidential candidate, President Carlos Salinas de Gortari agreed Thursday to a sweeping review of the case.

Aides to Salinas said he had ordered that some parts of the inquiry into the killing of Luis Donaldo Colosio by a special prosecutor be redone and that the entire file be made public. The president also appointed a panel of criminologists and lawyers to analyze the special prosecutor's work.

"The case is practically going to be reopened," one official said, without specifying who might take over the investigation. "They are going to do new research. They are going to take new testimony. And they are going to explore all the hypotheses and circumstances of the case."

The special prosecutor, Miguel Montes Garcia, submitted his resignation Thursday. In a final report to Salinas, he insisted again that the 23-year-old factory worker who shot Colosio at point-blank range as he left a campaign rally here four months ago had acted entirely on his own.

After what has been the single biggest criminal investigation in Mexican history, Montes left volumes of contradictory evidence, scores of unanswered questions and three men he now describes as innocent still behind the doors of the federal government's maximum-security prison near Mexico City.

A criminal lawyer hired by Colosio's widow to represent her in the case after she lost confidence in Montes was unequivocal. The lawyer, Juan Gonzalez, described the prosecutor's conclusions as "ridiculous, period."

According to a draft copy of the special prosecutor's final report, Montes asserts that under former Attorney General Diego Valades, investigators had embraced the idea of wider involvement in the case before he took it over on March 28, five days after Colosio's death.

Montes bases the assertion on the arrest that day of Tranquilino Sanchez Venegas, a former city policeman and store security guard who was part of the crowd-control team organized for Colosio's visit to Tijuana state by the local branch of his Institutional Revolutionary Party.

Privately, Valades had in fact been a leading critic of Montes's investigation until he was removed from his post six weeks ago; in particular, officials say he questioned the special prosecutor's reliance on what turned out to be inconclusive videotapes.

Luxembourg leader may head European Union

■ Premier Jacques Santer, a Christian Democrat, emerges as front-runner to become next president of EU executive agency.

Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — After failing once to select a new chief executive, European Union leaders appear ready to give the coveted post to the prime minister of Luxembourg.

Leaders of the dozen nations of the trading bloc were scheduled to meet today at EU headquarters to end a stalemate over what has become one of Europe's political plums.

Luxembourg Premier Jacques Santer has emerged as the front-runner to replace Jacques Delors as president of the EU executive agency, the European Commission. Delors' term expires in January.

An official at the Dutch Foreign Ministry in The Hague said there seemed to be a consensus in favor of Santer. In Paris, a French official, also demanding anonymity, said there appeared to be agreement on Santer.

Santer, 57, would be a compromise candidate after British Prime Minister John Major blocked the nomination of the Belgian Premier Jean-Luc Dehaene at a summit last month on the Greek island of Corfu.

Major's unexpected veto threw the group into turmoil. The 11 other nations endorsed Dehaene's candidacy, but a unanimous decision is required.

The London newspaper The Daily Telegraph quoted Major as saying, "We can live with Mr. Santer."

Greece also backed his candidacy.

"I would expect Santer to be the next president of the European Commission," said Jan Rood of the Clingendael Institute for International Affairs in The Hague. "I don't see any other candidate who is acceptable to all the countries."

The man to succeed Delors — no woman has apparently been considered — must lead the 12-nation EU as it strives to become a more influential player on the world stage. Its new Treaty on European Union calls for a common foreign policy and a single currency by 1999.

Santer, despite being in office for a decade, is considered a political lightweight. His country is the EU's smallest, with a mere 400,000 residents. Its main industry is banking and financial services.

But he does fit some criteria set out for a new chief executive: He is a Christian Democrat from a small country. Delors, a Socialist, is from a big country, France. The EU tends to rotate jobs among the nations.

If named, Santer would present a sharp contrast to Delors.

Probe: Mafia bombed church, cultural sites

ROME (NYT) — Italian investigators said Thursday that the Mafia was behind a series of bomb attacks last year against cultural and church targets in Italy partly to destabilize the Italian government, but also because the Mafia felt that the Roman Catholic Church had abrogated an unwritten hands-off policy toward organized crime.

The investigators, who are probing the bombings of targets that included the Uffizi gallery in Florence, said they had issued arrest warrants for eight suspects, all with Mafia associations, and had made two arrests.

None of the suspects have been linked directly to the Uffizi bombing, though the investigators said evidence suggested that all the groups that exploded the bombs worked in close contact. They said further warrants and arrests were forthcoming.

From May to August 1993, five car bomb attacks in Rome, Florence and Milan left 10 people dead and dozens wounded. In addition to the Uffizi, the targets were two venerable Roman churches, San Giovanni in Laterano and San Giorgio in Velabro, and a modern-art gallery in Milan.

A powerful bomb also exploded near the home of a television talk-show host, Maurizio Costanzo, a vocal Mafia opponent. Costanzo escaped unharmed.

The bombings outraged Italians. They prompted the head of the civilian intelligence agency to resign and led to shake-ups in the national police organization.

The prime minister at the time, Carlo Azeglio Ciampi, blamed a "turbid alliance of forces" that he said pursued "both political destabilization and criminal goals." But in their presentation Thursday, the investigators focused solely on the Mafia.

Of the eight against whom arrest warrants were issued, four were already in jail, including Salvatore Riina, the reputed "boss of all bosses" of the Sicilian mob.

Serbs reject peace plan as renewed fighting tatters cease-fire

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serbs held firm in rejecting a peace plan Thursday amid resurgent fighting that further tattered a widely ignored cease-fire agreement.

Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd of Britain and his French counterpart, Alain Juppe, told the warring sides Wednesday that rejecting the deal when the deadline for their response arrives in five days would lead to a wider war.

Bosnia's Serbs, who now hold 70 percent of Bosnia, would receive 49 percent of the republic under the plan drawn up by negotiators from Western Europe, the United States and Russia. The rest would go to a Bosnian Croat-Muslim federation.

The sponsors adopted a carrot-and-stick approach with the latest plan. It offers to lift sanctions on Serbian-dominated Yugoslavia, a chief tomenter of the war, if the Bosnian Serbs accept the plan. If they do not, Bosnia's Muslim-led government could be exempted from a U.N. arms embargo on Yugoslavia and its former republics.

Despite unhappiness with parts of the plan, the Bosnian government has tentatively accepted it, subject to parliamentary approval.

But the Serbs, who want their own republic and eventual union with Serbia proper, repeated their main objection Thursday: The plan maintains Bosnia's borders and its status as an internationally recognized country.

Speaking on Bosnian Serb television, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said it was "astonishing" that "the international community should want people who hate each other to the point of extermination to live together again."

France opened an embassy in Sarajevo on Thursday.

By Sang-Hun Choe
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — It has all the ingredients of a good thriller: a secret weapons program, dark clouds of war, a dictator's sudden demise.

It's a novel — but fact and fiction are tough to distinguish these days on the Korean peninsula.

The sudden death last week of North Korea's longtime leader, Kim Il Sung, is creating a rash of best sellers in a loose genre known as nuclear fiction, or "Kim Il Sung novels."

Customers are snapping up books with plots that turn on diplomatic double-crossing and hard-line coups in a place that sounds a lot like North Korea.

"These books offer wild imaginings about how Kim died and what would happen after his death," said Ka Ji-hyon of Seoul's large Kyobo Bookstore. "We sell hundreds of copies a day."

Bookstores are opening special corners for North-related works, and newspaper ads tout titles such as, "The Ultimate Prophesy on the Korean Peninsula" and "Korea Unifies!"

The award-winning "Sea of Fire" leaped onto the best-seller list the day after Kim's death was announced. In it, a fictional leader is terminally ill, and his son and the defense minister plan a surprise attack on the South.

On the eve of the attack, the plot goes, the leader dies, the defense minister is assassinated, and a power struggle ensues.

A power struggle in the North was one of the real-life fears of Southern officials, but those fears have eased with the apparent ascension of Kim's son and handpicked heir Kim Jong Il.

"Sea of Fire" ends on a grimmer note: with the new leader launching nuclear missiles at U.S. military facilities in Seoul, and a U.S. aircraft carrier responding in kind.

"The Site," a non-fiction book, also became an instant best seller because it predicted Kim's death would occur on Sept. 14 of this year. Off by two months — but that's still pretty close.

Author Sohn Sok-woo, a famous geomancer who practices the ancient tradition of making predictions by studying the elements and random numbers, made the prediction after examining what was said to be the tomb site of Kim's ancestor. Sohn also thinks Kim was assassinated — and predicts the younger Kim's leadership will be short-lived and he will end up seeking political asylum in the United States.

While Kim's death has caused a spate of interest in fiction relating to the North, such novels are not new in South Korean literature.

Bad pipes leak dangerous gas under Tijuana

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — After a newspaper made the problem public, Mexican officials rushed this week to reassure Tijuana residents that explosive levels of propane gas underneath downtown are being cleaned up.

Officials from three levels of government, including Mexico's cabinet, showed up in Tijuana after the report in the daily El Mexicano.

The newspaper's story cited a study done this spring by a United States firm, which found unsafe clusters of propane gas had formed beneath eleven city blocks downtown. The gas had leaked from bad pipes.

The Mexican government had known about the problems — and the report — for some time but apparently had hoped to address them quietly and out of the spotlight.

"There is very little possibility of explosion now," said Antonio Rosquillas Navarro, the city's chief of operations for civil protection. "In May, the problem was much more critical."

The study by New Mexico-based Advanced Sciences Inc. found about 350,000 cubic meters of propane, at levels exceeding the "lower explosive limit."

Technicians also ran into "combustible concentrations of oxygen in the soil" in many areas where propane was present.

"Any ignition source in this area may cause a fire or explosion," the report concluded.

After the report was completed, an affiliate of Tijuana Gas Co. began working with city and state officials to rid downtown of the underground vapors.

So far, about 143,000 cubic meters of the gas have been released from the soil through a special ventilating device. And about 70 percent of the 124-mile underground gas piping has been replaced.

Plastic tubing has been installed in place of the aging metal, according to city and federal officials.

Those steps have reduced the danger significantly but not totally, the officials said.

Homes and businesses throughout Mexico have long relied on propane gas as their source of fuel. Tapia said the obvious long-range solution is to switch over to natural gas.

The government will try to lead that effort, he said.

In the past, underground methane gas buildups have also plagued the city. The fumes have come from the rotting of garbage and also organic substances tossed into the city's antiquated sewer system.

World will end in September, religious broadcaster warns

By David Briggs
AP religion writer

When Harold Camping says the world is going to end in September, people listen.

In two books and a nightly national radio talk show, Camping has convinced thousands that on one day this September, the "saved" will be raised up and the "unsaved" living and dead condemned to everlasting damnation.

"The judgment throne is coming. In a few days it will be here," Camping said in a telephone interview from his office in Oakland, Calif.

For thousands of years, prophets have tried to predict the end of the world. What distinguishes Camping is the media forum offered by the 40 radio stations owned by his company, Family Radio.

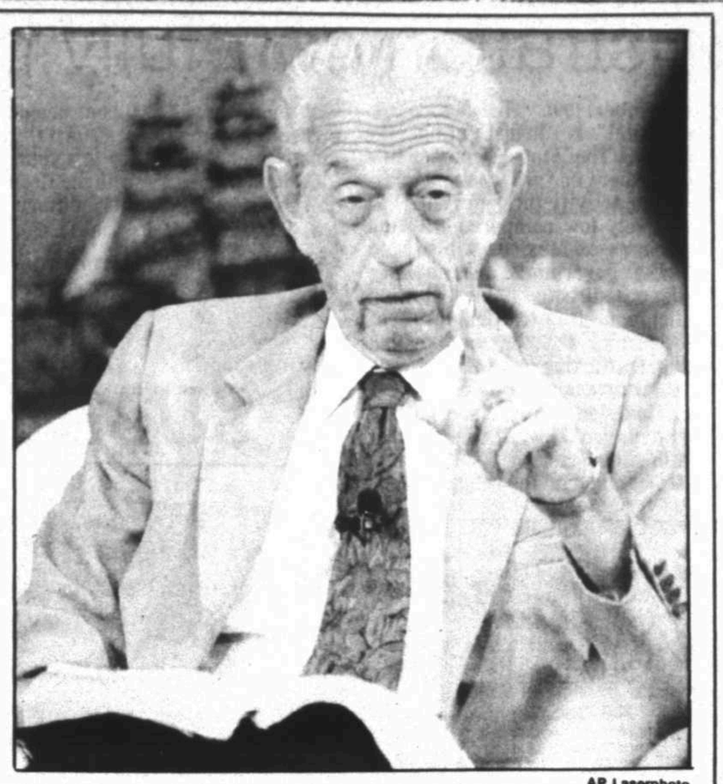
As the time for his prophecy to unfold nears and his influence grows, even evangelical scholars who have dismissed Camping's claims as "screwball" have taken him seriously enough to publicly rebut him in debates and a new book.

When September comes and goes with no apocalyptic event there will be a lot of disillusioned Christians, these scholars say.

Camping, whose background is in engineering, has devised his own system for dating biblical events that fits into a plan of salvation history in which key events occur in 1,000-year periods.

For example, he says Jesus Christ was born 2,000 years ago and David ascended the throne of Israel 3,000 years ago, two events that point to this year as the time for another major event along the millennial time line.

According to Camping's dateline, the period of tribulation forecast in biblical books as leading up to the end began in May 1988, 13,000 years after the world was created in 11,013 B.C. It was in 1988 that Satan was turned loose on the Earth.



AP Laserphoto

Harold Camping gestures during a broadcast from his San Leandro, Calif. studio this week. Camping tells listeners on 40 radio stations across country that world will end in September. He promotes the same message in his books '1994' and 'Are You Ready?' Bible, however, says only the Son, (Christ) knows when world will end.

Government report: Economy will not improve anytime soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration patted itself on the back Thursday for the economy's healthy growth and modest inflation this year but said this is as good as it gets.

The administration projected an unemployment rate stuck at its current level for the rest of the decade, economic growth trending slightly lower, inflation getting a bit worse and interest rates edging higher.

Private economists praised the administration for its realistic assessment, but noted a political irony for President Clinton.

"The best news is coming too soon for Clinton. It can't get any better than this . . . and there has to be some concern about that in the White House," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. "The really good news is now instead of in '96."

In its midterm economic forecast, issued at a White House news conference with Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen and other senior officials, the administration predicted the unemployment rate will average 6.2 percent this year and next, then hold at 6.1 percent through 1999.

The rate fell from 6.7 percent in January to 6 percent in June and the forecast implies that improvement will stop.

The forecast shows economic growth, as measured by the gross domestic product, the sum of all goods and services produced within U.S. borders, running at a healthy 3 percent rate this year and then declining to 2.7 percent next year, 2.6 percent in 1996 and 2.5 percent thereafter.

Inflation should be 2.9 percent this year, 3.2 percent next year, 3.3 percent during the election year and 3.4 percent after that.

"By any standard, this economy is doing well," Bentsen said

Although administration officials sang the economy's praises, analysts said more crucial for Clinton is whether the economy improves or deteriorates in the year before the election.

Economist Robert G. Dederick of Northern Trust Corp. in Chicago said he suspected the economy's course would prove more rocky than the administration is hoping.

"Their forecast basically outlaws the business cycle," he said.

Breyer faces tougher questioning

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Judge Stephen G. Breyer completed his testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee on Thursday but not before a sharp confrontation over whether he acted improperly in deciding pollution cases while investing in an insurance syndicate facing substantial losses over pollution lawsuits.

Breyer, President Clinton's second nominee to the Supreme Court, found himself facing pointed criticism from Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, over his participation as a judge in eight pollution cases while he was a member of a Lloyd's of London insurance syndicate.

For the first time in his three days in the witness chair, Breyer seemed impatient as he tried to explain why he was confident that he had done nothing wrong.

The discussion grew so heated at one point that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Breyer's principal political patron, rose to his defense. Kennedy became embroiled in an argument with Metzenbaum, and Sen. Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, the panel's ranking Republican, joined Senator Kennedy in defending Judge Breyer.

The discussion of Breyer's investment in a Lloyd's syndicate has been the only point of controversy in his confirmation hearings, and he is expected to be confirmed easily as the nation's 108th justice of the Supreme Court. Even Metzenbaum, the most critical voice on the committee so far, said he would vote to confirm Breyer.

The discussion of Breyer's insurance investment accounted for only a small part of Thursday's session, most of which was filled with compliments for his intellect, probity and character. Breyer also spoke at length about his views on government regulation, the subject for which he is best known.

CASE: Clinton administration carefully builds its justification democratically elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Congressional opposition also is strong, despite efforts by some Congressional Black Caucus members to drum up support.

Pressure from caucus members, along with a high-profile hunger strike by TransAfrica leader Randall Robinson, prodded Clinton to change his approach to the refugee issue. He subsequently reversed the practice of automatically repatriating Haitian boat people.

The resulting flood of refugees now may be driving U.S. policy as much as any other factor.

The refugee issue is "the bottom line of U.S. interests there, when you strip away the platitudes and rhetoric. We have to do something about it," said Donald Schulz, a Haiti expert at the U.S. Army War College in Carlisle, Pa.

Clinton this week called the refugee situation "a significant problem," but said, "We have very clear and significant interests in addition to the massive outflow of people seeking refugee status in our country."

■ Protection of some 3,500 Americans living in Haiti.

So far there has been no evidence that they are in danger. Haiti's de facto rulers have carefully avoided harassing American business people, religious workers and others living there. Any violence against them would almost surely be answered by U.S. military action.

■ Reports that Haitian rulers are cooperating in illegal drug smuggling.

Aristide said last month that 46 to 48 tons of cocaine have passed through Haiti annually to the United States since he was deposed in September 1991. The Justice Department is investigating the charge. The State Department's assessment in April was that drug-related activity through Haiti was relatively low compared with the Bahamas or Mexico. It also said the U.S. government does not have evidence directly linking Haitian officials to drug trafficking.

A former U.S. diplomat called drug trafficking a poor justification for invasion, wryly noting, "If you invaded every drug transit country, you'd invade them all" in Latin America.

■ Dealing with the refugee flood, with more than 15,000 boat people picked up by the Coast Guard this month, and 23,000 so far this year.

Clinton blames the refugee flood on repression by Haiti's military. He has decreed, in the face of American resistance to absorbing the Haitians, that the boat people can no longer come to the United States for asylum. With U.S. ships and the military base at Guantanamo Bay swamped, the administration has been scrambling to get other countries to provide temporary safe haven. Three Caribbean islands have agreed and Panama's incoming president said he would help after taking office Sept. 1.

Senate committees approve $2.1 billion for space station

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate appropriators agreed Thursday to set aside $2.1 billion for the space station next year, providing the full amount sought by the Clinton administration.

Both the Senate Appropriations Committee and its subcommittee that allocates money for veterans, housing and space programs signed off Thursday on the full funding for the orbiting laboratory.

The two panels' actions cement what has become an increasingly smooth march through Congress for a program that came within one vote of termination last year.

The House last month issued a hearty endorsement of the $30 billion program, rejecting an attempt to terminate the program on a 278-155 vote.

"The Senate Appropriations Committee has given NASA and the space station program a vote of confidence today, propelling America forward on a quest to remain on the cutting edge in the development of science and technology," said Sen. Phil Gramm, who sits on the committee.

Said fellow Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison: "I am thrilled that we are going to get the full amount that we need to move this project forward."

The Appropriations Committee set aside $14.4 billion next year to fund NASA — slightly higher than the $14.1 billion approved last month by the House.

Girl sues school system over sexual harassment

Eve, 12, seeks unspecified damages, plus sensitivity training for teachers, administrators.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Like countless other 12-year-old girls, Eve Bruneau says she has endured taunts, bra-snapping and otherwise obnoxious behavior from boys in the throes of puberty. She's decided to make a federal case out of it.

Eve sued in federal court Wednesday, charging that a sexually hostile environment in her sixth-grade class at the South Kortright Central School hurt her grades and forced her to switch schools.

"I expected it to be fun and it was awful because the boys in my class were calling us names," Eve said from her home in South Kortright, 50 miles southwest of Albany. "I couldn't concentrate on my work, so my grades went down."

Eve is seeking unspecified damages, plus sensitivity training for teachers and administrators.

"We're hoping that this will send out a clear message to other schools that this is not appropriate behavior," said Eve's mother, Pat Schofield.

The school board, teacher William Parker Jr., the school superintendent and the assistant superintendent are named as defendants.

Parker called the charges "very exaggerated." Asked if he tolerated harassment in his classroom, he said, "Never." He declined further comment.

The school system's lawyer, Benjamin Ferrara, said school officials tried to correct any problems in Eve's class after her parents complained.

"It may not have been to the satisfaction of the parents, but they did respond," Ferrara said. "We believe the allegations to be untrue."

Ms. Schofield said her daughter started coming home crying in October. "She asked me if I thought she was ugly because this boy was calling her 'ugly dog-faced bitch' in the classroom," she said.

Ms. Schofield said she and her husband complained to Parker. His response, she said: "Don't worry, the guys will be all over her in a couple years. Eve is always going to be called names in her life and she just has to deal with it."

Eve said the boys later spat on her and snapped her bra. She transferred in March to a school near the family's second home in nearby Stamford.

Sexual harassment affects four out of five teen-agers, and just 7 percent of the victims reported it, according to a national survey.

Caution may reduce summertime pain

Summertime and kids go together like hot days and ice cream. Days spent free of the rigors of education give young people the time to indulge themselves in swimming, sports, bicycling, skating and numerous other fun activities.

That's as it should be. Young people need a "vacation" from their schoolwork as much as their parents need a vacation from their jobs.

All those youthful activities, however, can result in potentially serious accidents that can injure and even kill youngsters if proper safety steps are not observed, such as using the equipment as the manufacturer recommends and wearing the proper clothing and protective gear.

Every year, literally thousands of accidents occur that cause injury or death and in many instances they could be avoided if the youthful participants would observe basic rules of safety.

As one example, the Consumer Product Safety Commission says that 83,000 in-line skaters will suffer injury this year. Yet the injuries would probably be less severe if the skaters involved wore helmets, knee pads and other protective equipment.

Thousands of young bicyclists will be injured or killed this year when they are accidentally struck by motor vehicles or when they ride out in front of cars. Most of those accidents could be avoided if both the bicyclists and the motorists were more observant and cautious.

Summer is definitely the time for young people to be in the great outdoors, enjoying recreational pursuits and having a good time. They've worked for that time; they deserve it. They should not subject themselves to unnecessary risks.

A little extra care and preparation this summer can help avoid a lot of pain and grief.

Disabled firefighter now battles red tape

WASHINGTON — As the final stretch begins for the 103rd Congress, the crush of unfinished business includes health care, crime, welfare reform and Wade Bomar.

Wade Bomar?

Anders on

Bomar was a 26-year-old father of three children and an eight-time Montana state arm wrestling champion when he volunteered to help the Bureau of Indian Affairs extinguish a forest fire that threatened a nearby reservation in 1989. As he cranked up his chain saw to level a tree, a 100-year-old pine crashed down on Bomar, leaving him paralyzed from the waist down, incontinent and unable to work again.

Had he been injured just 15 months later, Bomar would have qualified for a $100,000 payment under the Public Safety Officers' Benefits Act, which was moving through Congress when the accident occurred. Bomar took his case for retroactive relief to Congress, which routinely grants tax breaks and subsidies to the well-connected. But this could hardly describe Bomar.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., who led the lobbying battles for NAFTA and Most Favored Nation status for China, is now twisting arms on Bomar's behalf. Baucus has fired off letters to the Clinton cabinet, engineered a "chance" meeting between Bomar and Attorney General Janet Reno, bird-dogged bureaucrats and even introduced a private relief bill — a last-resort gambit to help one person.

In a letter to Reno, Baucus argued: "Wade Bomar is precisely the sort of person the PSOBA was amended to help: a public safety officer permanently injured in the line of duty.... It was the clear intent of Congress to avoid a situation where these public servants are forced to live hand-to-mouth — exactly the situation Wade is in today. Frankly, the system has failed this man."

Baucus' private relief bill must be approved by the Justice Department and the Office of Management and Budget, passed by Congress and signed by the president. Justice and OMB are currently reviewing the price and precedent of Baucus' bill. Since only six people have qualified for the PSOBA benefits in the four years since it took effect, it's unlikely many share Bomar's misfortune of having been maimed within 15 months of the enactment date.

Only one of the 226 private relief bills introduced during this Congress has reached the president: Sen. Bill Cohen, R-Maine, introduced a bill to waive citizenship requirements for a Russian woman who had been diagnosed with terminal cancer. The bill passed in less than six weeks and the woman was sworn in as a U.S. citizen three days before dying.

Private relief bills got a black eye during the Abscam scandal of the early 1980s, when six members of Congress were accused of accepting — or agreeing to accept — as much as $50,000 to introduce a bill that would allow an imaginary sheik to immigrate to the United States. Baucus underscored to Reno that he opted for the bill only as a way to break down a bureaucratic brick wall. And he's promising not to make it a habit.

"I have not made it a practice of introducing private relief legislation during my years of service in Congress," he wrote Reno. "I believe private relief bills should only be used as a last resort.... That is exactly the case with Wade Bomar."

For his part, Bomar's only special interest is his family. Since the accident, his family has lost its primary source of income, and his children no longer have health insurance. "I'm praying this bill will get passed," Bomar told our associate Andrew Conte. "If not, I'm just going to keep getting deeper in debt."

CHARLEY REESE

Some count on economic, scientific myths

Ayn Rand, the late novelist and libertarian, once wrote a column she called "Check Your Premises."

By that, she meant re-examine the beliefs you assume to be true and upon which you base your thinking. It's good advice. Since these basic beliefs are assumed to be true, we often forget that changing situations can render them obsolete.

Reese

One such basic assumption I think is no longer valid is the belief that economic growth can be perpetually sustained and essentially unlimited. This is the hidden premise behind those who say don't worry about population growth or immigration or deficits — the growth of the economy can fix them all.

Well, we only have to look at the Reagan-Bush years to know that economic growth, fueled by debt, cannot eliminate a deficit. When you use a deficit (debt) to fuel growth, you cannot possibly outgrow the debt unless the return on the expenditure will exceed both principal and interest.

With so much of government spending going into nonproductive consumption, there's no hope for such a solution to government debt. Even in private enterprise, where investments are made with borrowed money, it is by no means a sure thing. A lot of bankruptcies and foreclosures are testimonials to that.

When Jack Kemp and the other neo-conservatives tell you we can grow our way out of debt, be warned they are offering you the modern equivalent of Dr. Seneca Bill's miraculous cure-all snake oil.

But why can't economic growth be perpetually sustained? Well, the short answer is: too many people, too few resources and too much debt and mal-distribution of wealth. Birthrates are outrunning economic growth rates. Surplus population drives down the price of labor. Cheap labor shrinks the market for goods and services, since workers can only consume what they can afford.

The more existing wealth is concentrating in few hands, the less capital there is available for people to improve themselves materially. The more debt, which is a claim against future income, the more labor is required to pay for past consumption, leaving nothing for savings and investment.

There is no history of sustained, perpetual economic growth. Historically economies grow, regress, collapse and so on. But straight lines leading ever upward exist only on graph paper and computer screens, not in the flesh and blood world of human beings. Don't confuse math projections with reality, for math projections are no better at seeing into the future than gypsies with crystal balls.

An attendant false assumption is that technology or science can save us. So we overpopulate, pollute and erode. Science will rescue us. Dearly beloved, don't you realize that science, despite billions of dollars and mega-computers, cannot even cure the common cold. Such blind faith in technology and science tends to run in inverse proportion to one's knowledge of science and technology.

Despite modern conceit, many a high-tech society has collapsed. Technology can be destructive as well as productive, and even today ignorance far exceeds knowledge in every field of science. People who look for a political savior on a white horse and those who look for a scientific savior in a white coat would do just as well to spit on a horseshoe and toss it over their left shoulder.

In the meantime, Americans need to face up to the responsibility of living within the limits imposed on us by nature, to look reality squarely in the eye and to make our decisions on the basis of facts instead of desires or fantasies.

"We can evade reality," Rand once said, "but we cannot escape the consequences of evading reality."

Amen to that, Oh Mother of All Libertarians.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, July 15, the 196th day of 1994. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 15th, 1870, Georgia became the last of the Confederate states to be readmitted to the Union.

On this date:

In 1606, the Dutch painter Rembrandt was born in Leiden, Netherlands.

In 1916, Boeing Company, originally known as Pacific Aero Products, was founded in Seattle by William Boeing.

In 1958, President Eisenhower ordered U.S. Marines to Lebanon, at the request of that country's president, Camille Chamoun, in the face of a perceived threat by Muslim rebels.

In 1964, Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona was nominated for president by the Republican National Convention, meeting in San Francisco.

In 1971, President Nixon announced he would visit the People's Republic of China to seek a "normalization of relations."

In 1975, three American astronauts blasted off aboard an Apollo spaceship hours after two Soviet cosmonauts were launched aboard a Soyuz spacecraft for a mission that included a linkup of the two ships in orbit.

In 1976, a 36-hour kidnap ordeal began for 26 schoolchildren and their bus driver as they were abducted near Chowchilla, Calif., by three gunmen and imprisoned in an underground cell. (The captives escaped unharmed.)

In 1979, President Carter delivered his "malaise" speech in which he lamented what he called a "crisis of confidence" in America.

Ten years ago: In the face of in-party protests, Democratic nominee-apparent Walter F. Mondale reinstated Charles T. Manatt as the party's national chairman, after trying to oust him in favor of President Carter's old confidant, Bert Lance.

Five years ago: Leaders of the seven major industrial democracies, meeting in Paris, voiced support for democracy behind the Iron Curtain and condemned repression in China.

One year ago: Authorities in Los Angeles announced eight arrests in connection with an alleged plot by white supremacists to ignite a race war by bombing a black church and killing prominent black Americans.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Man begins to question system

On May 23, shortly after I had bought a pickup to use on my job, I was struck on West Wadley and Dentcrest by an 18-year-old who had in-house arrest and was wearing a monitoring device on his leg. Even though this young man was a felon, with a monitoring device on his leg, failed to yield at a stop sign and had no insurance, the officer dispatched to the scene failed to test him for alcohol or drugs or to notify the probation department of the wreck.

Also, after many calls and trips trying to get my truck fixed and my hospital bills paid, it seemed everyone was giving me the run around and didn't seem to be aware of everything going on. Why was a felon with a monitoring device on his leg allowed to drive, even to a job, without insurance? Why can't anyone ever give me a straight answer? I'm still riding a bike to my job, trying to make a living without my truck, for even my insurance agency is giving me the run around. In the meantime, the 18-year-old is out, probably on the streets to possibly kill or injure again. The system sure hasn't been much help to me, and no one has any truthful answers.

Where's Western society going?

With post-modern day Western society the way it is, a person wonders where we are going from here. I think society in general has too much of an appetite for violence and destruction. Violence takes on all forms of being in our culture. From violence on TV to the movies we see. The magazines we read to the newspaper that comes each day. Society has a hunger for violence. Even in our comic books there is a lot of violence. Society wonders why we have so much violence. Just look around, it's hitting us on all sides. We are fed what seems like an inexhaustible supply of this type of garbage. Violence only breeds more violence. I only hope that maybe someday we can live in a more peaceful society.

Reader blasts reverend's letter

Your letters section carries many interesting views on many subjects. Some of these are so wrongheaded that they must be answered. One such is the letter in the Sunday, July 3, issue from the Rev. Michael D. Pfeifer. With all due respect, may I point out some of the errors in his comments.

Rev. Pfeifer would make health care a matter of theology. While care in the sense of love of man for his neighbor is Biblical, health care in the sense of doctors, nurses, hospitals and all the related infrastructure of our health-care system is a secular matter. To expect that all of the things involved in the care of the sick should or could be done just for the reward one receives from the knowledge of having been a Good Samaritan is so naive as to be ludicrous. As for all care being equal in order to achieve justice, one can only say that life is never fair. And as a matter of fact, I know of no place in the Bible where Christ promised that life on this earth would be fair.

Rev. Pfeifer makes one statement which must be examined and refuted. He says: "The basic principle should be that we receive according to our need, and pay according to our ability." Karl Marx put it thus: "From each according to his ability, to each according to his need." This is the basic creed of Socialism and Communism. It is tragic to hear this motto repeated at a time when the rest of the world is abandoning the concept. The system just does not work. If you want a brilliant satire on the concept, read Ayn Rand's "Atlas Shrugged."

I think that Rev. Pfeifer is best described as an idealist who has not faced reality. Richard Nixon in his last book, "Beyond Peace," put it very well. "Idealism without realism is naive and dangerous. Realism without idealism is cynical and meaningless."

Americans on move make their way through Texas

By Elaine Wikstrom
Beaumont Enterprise

ORANGE — Anyone who doubts that America is on the move should spend a little time with the staff at the Texas Travel Information Center on Interstate 10.

Flags are hanging limply on their flag poles this particular morning, stark against a darkening sky that at least means rain, if not lightening and thunder.

Undeterred, people are waiting when the doors open at 8 a.m. Travelers will continue to flow through all day, a few squeaking through just before 6 p.m., which is summer closing time for the center.

A man from Gonzales, headed east. Two visitors from Vermont, others from Connecticut and Arkansas. Hordes of people from Baton Rouge and New Orleans, so many that they give the impression that the populace is evacuating the state.

The children seem first to be drawn to the brightly colored pamphlets filling the wall racks, and the adults usually cruise along in the same direction, often stopping to sign the center's guest book. Eventually they make their way to the counter, if one of the staff hasn't already invited them over.

Lisa Metcalf, a student who was graduated from Orangefield High this spring and is here only for the summer, automatically reaches for a Texas map and a 272-page, brilliantly colored Texas State Travel Guide. Both are free, and although visitors ask first about the map, they appear pleased with the travel guide as well.

She slips both into a plastic "Don't Mess With Texas" bag and slides it across the counter toward the traveler. It's an action she, fellow graduate and summer employee Steve-Ann Moore, 8-year veteran Dan Perrine, part-timer Sonda Landry and full-time counselors Becky Wilson, Staci Powers and Christine Jones will repeat untold times throughout the day.

Sometimes it seems they barely have time to give away one bag before they are filling another. One out-of-stater deliberately stops to get another travel guide, explaining to the staff that a friend back home had requested one.

Pam Crew is the chief of this little band of direction-givers, and her contagious laugh bounces off the walls of the modernesque 1961 structure as she manages whatever crisis might be occurring at the moment. Also bouncing off the walls are the endless questions the visitors have.

One of the many people on the way to AstroWorld asks for directions, then adds hopefully, "About an hour?" "More like two," Metcalf replies, offering a coupon for reduced admission prices and a brochure about the park.

Some of the visitors receiving coupons hesitate, then ask, "These are free?"

Someone else wants to know the best way to Corpus Christi, preferably without going through Houston. Others want Houston city maps, so that when they get there they won't be completely confused.

A traveler from Opelousas, La., wants to know "How long will it take to get to San Antonio?," and when he finds out, he sighs. "So we're barely started."

While many of the questions are the same, others come from left field. One woman wanted to know about the Texas law governing the carrying of weapons. But perhaps most unusual of all is the question Landry fielded a while back.

"What will the weather be like in Kerrville next Thursday from 1 to 3?," a caller wanted to know.

Landry shakes her head, then says, "Unfortunately, they do get upset when you don't know." The center gets daily weather forecasts through a computer system, but the state apparently didn't find it necessary to supply a crystal ball, too.

"It's always been the busiest borderline station in the state," Crew says, adding that in addition to handling the people who stream through the door, the staff has specific times when they are responsible for answering calls to the Department of Transportation's 800 number.

The 12 information centers around the state all participate in that program. "Most of our calls are either tourism, road conditions or weather reports," Crew says, but they do get calls that aren't travel related at all. The staff at least tries to look up a telephone number for those people so they can direct their questions to the proper people.

As if that weren't enough to keep busy, the center also is authorized to issue the necessary permits for trucks carrying oversize loads or trailers or houses on the state's highways.

College student makes living off Texas lottery's jackpot numbers

By Kelli Walker
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN — University of Texas student David Briggs will buy a few lottery tickets now and then, if the jackpot is high enough.

Like most Texans, he loses.

But, unlike most Texans, he can't get up the next day and forget about it.

Every morning after numbers have been drawn, Briggs gets up at 4, or earlier, and heads out to climb 80 feet to change the jackpot amount on two billboards along Interstate 35.

"I'd like to win it just like everyone else, but putting the sign up is just a job," Briggs said.

After the lotto drawing at 9:59 p.m. on Saturdays and Wednesdays, the Texas Lottery Commission computer searches to see if there are any winning tickets. Within an hour, lottery employees know whether there is a winner, and they have a general location. By 4 a.m., they know exactly where the winning ticket was sold.

Then they fax the information about the size of the next drawing's jackpot to Austin Outdoor Advertising, Briggs' employer, so he can change the giant billboards. His deadline on Thursday mornings is 6. On Sundays, it's 8 a.m.

"We will pick up the message about 5 and be out to the first billboards by 5:15," Briggs said.

He said the signs take about 10 to 20 minutes to change.

This same procedure takes place in Dallas, Houston and San Antonio after every drawing, said Gwen David, with GSD&M Advertising Agency, the firm that handles publicity for the lottery.

There are two signs in Austin — one is permanent, on the upper deck of Interstate 35, and the second moves every 60 days.

Briggs and co-worker Timm Dunn climb 80 feet to the billboard — rain or shine. There they pull the 9-foot-tall numbers printed on plywood from their storage area behind the billboard and put them in place on the sign. They haul the plywood with the next drawing date up the pole with them.

House OKs budget cutting plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House dealt a defeat to its Democratic leaders on Thursday, voting overwhelmingly to bolster the president's ability to kill individual pork barrel projects and tax breaks buried in huge bills.

Lawmakers ignored top Democrats' pleas that the measure would tip too much power toward the executive branch and chose it over a weaker Democratic version by a 298-121 roll call.

The vote was probably symbolic because opponents in the Senate, led by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., have been able to keep similar legislation from coming to a vote.

Nonetheless, the tally represented an unusual election-year victory for House deficit hawks of both parties just as the chamber begins a month-long series of votes on budget issues.

It also put President Clinton in an embarrassing position. He supported a tough version of the measure during last year's campaign called a line-item veto, but has since backed a weaker version by congressional Democrats.

"We want to end the spending bias and put the bias in favor of reducing the deficit," said Rep. Tim Penny, D-Minn., who sponsored the successful measure with Reps. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, and John Kasich, R-Ohio.

"I know of no single process reform measure enacted in recent years that has as much potential to allow us to cut spending and save taxpayers money," said Kasich.

Voting to replace the Democrats' measure with the conservatives' stronger plan were 128 Democrats and 170 Republicans; voting no were 120 Democrats, no Republicans and one independent. The bill then gained final approval, 342-69.

The measure would require Congress to vote on presidents' proposals for canceling individual spending items, called rescissions. Currently, lawmakers can kill such proposals by simply not voting on them.

It also would let the president propose eliminating narrow tax breaks for specific people or businesses included in revenue bills. The president cannot now try to kill individual items in tax legislation.

Democratic leaders had offered a weaker alternative, but it died when lawmakers approved the stronger measure. Under it, for the rest of this year only, Congress would have voted on the president's proposal to cut an individual spending item if he issued his proposal within three days of signing the overall measure into law.

"We must not give to any president even more power than he already has to shove his priorities down Congress' throats," said Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., in defense of the weaker Democratic plan.

Currently, presidents must either sign or veto entire spending bills and cannot eliminate individual items in them. They can propose to cancel individual spending projects, but their proposals do not take effect unless the House and Senate approve them within 45 days.

The roll call marked the beginning of a month-long series of budget-cutting votes that Democratic leaders hope will douse support for another conservative effort to slash federal spending.

Democratic leaders have promised conservative members of their party that they will hold the votes.

Train kills 4 apparent thrill seekers

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — Four friends apparently capped a nightlong party by scaling a fence and laying on railroad tracks in a deserted area to experience the rush of an approaching locomotive.

The four young men were ripped apart by a 144-car Norfolk Southern freight train Wednesday. Searchers found beer cans and drug paraphernalia as they toiled for three hours to find the head of one victim, police said.

"No one knows why they were out there and we may never know," Prince William County Commonwealth's Attorney Paul B. Ebert said Thursday.

"But it appears they were either playing 'chicken' or they may have thought the train was high enough to pass over them," Ebert said.

Police said there was no evidence of a suicide pact, but suggested the four may have been drunk and passed out.

"It was something of a party spot," Detective Richard Cantarella said of the fenced-off section of tracks near a commuter rail station.

Friends of the four told police the group liked to go to the spot to drink and hang out late at night.

Police said the four were lying in a line, end to end, when the train hit them about 4:35 a.m.

Anne Bennof of the Association of American Railroads in Washington said the men were wrong if they thought the train would pass over them.

The clearance between the underside of a locomotive and the crossties between the rails ranges from 8½ inches to 10½ inches, but is often less.

Friends who identified the victims said the men were graduates of two high schools in nearby Fairfax County; police have not confirmed identities.

Chad Rochette, 18, and David Blalock graduated last month from Chantilly High School.

Rochette was a cross country star and was elected last year to the homecoming court, Chantilly principal Stephen Wareham said.

"They were not troublemakers at all. They were well-known and well-liked," Wareham said.

A third victim, Don Hunsinger, 20, graduated from the same high school two years ago.

The fourth victim, 21-year-old David Sculley, was a 1992 graduate of Centreville High School, Wareham said.

Results of tests to determine the content of drugs and alcohol in the victims' bodies were not expected to be complete for several days.

City schedules curfew hearings

■ Four forums, hosted by various council representatives, will be held in August, September.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Four public hearings have been scheduled to solicit feedback on a proposed juvenile curfew.

The first three hearings are set for 7 p.m. on Aug. 9 and 7 p.m. on Aug. 23 at Midland Center, Room 5, and 7 p.m. on Sept. 13 at City Council chambers at City Hall. Those meetings will be hosted by District 4 City Council representative Claudia Egan, District 2 City Council representative Juluis Brooks and City Attorney Keith Stretcher.

The fourth hearing is set for 7 p.m. on Aug. 25 at a not-yet-decided location. That meeting will be hosted by District 1 representative Pat Schneider and District 3 representative Ed Vogler.

"We want input from educators, teen-agers, parents, everybody — the whole citizenry," Ms. Egan said. Judges and law-enforcement officials have been invited to attend, she said.

City officials will seek opinions on whether there should be a curfew, and if so, how the curfew should be structured.

The proposed curfew is the result of a February 1993 recommendation by a special Midland County grand jury following a nine-month investigation into juvenile crime.

Juvenile curfews are under consideration in several Texas cities and already in place in others. Although Midland may not have as great a juvenile crime problem as other cities, Texas ranks second among states in juvenile crime, and teen-agers are the fastest-growing segment of people committing crimes, according to Ms. Egan.

A Dallas juvenile curfew — upheld by an appeals court — opened the legal gates for other municipalities. A proposed preliminary curfew for Midland has been fashioned after the Dallas curfew.

Last month, Gov. Ann Richards encouraged local communities to implement juvenile curfews. If need be, Ms. Richards said, she would support legislation to mandate a curfew statewide.

"We'd rather have one designed specifically for Midland" rather than a state-mandated curfew, Ms. Egan said.

And "if one is adopted, (we want) to make it fair and make it work and where it doesn't punish good kids," she said.

Other considerations will also be discussed at the public hearings.

Ms. Schneider said she's considering asking businesses in her district — which may be affected by a curfew — to attend the Aug. 25 hearing. Under a curfew ordinance, businesses may be required to turn in youngsters during curfew hours.

The first draft of a curfew, if one goes forward, may be presented at the Sept. 27 City Council meeting. In such a case, a possible grace period — such as 30 days — may be stipulated to allow youngsters to adjust to the curfew.

The council will also consider implementing a curfew on a one-year trial basis, after which the ordinance could be kept, revised or repealed.

FRIDAY DAY WATCH

Teen re-indicted

A Midland teen was re-indicted by a Midland County grand jury this week and given additional charges in the murder of James Zachery. Duann Dewayne Stewart, 17, was originally indicted for murder in the Jan. 25 beating death of Zachery, a local Midland Community Theatre performer and former professional football player. The grand jury added to the indictment charges of manslaughter, delivery of cocaine and possession of cocaine. He is to be arraigned this afternoon. Stewart remains in the custody of the Midland County Detention Center in lieu of a $50,000 bond.

Parking-lot jam

D.A.R.E. and D-FY-IT are to hold a parking-lot jam from 9 p.m. until midnight today at the Town and Country Shopping Center, 1000 N. Midkiff Road. Basketball goals will be set up for games, and free pizza and soft drinks will be provided. A drawing will be held every 10-15 minutes for free prizes — including movie, bowling and miniature golf passes and food certificates.

Book signing

Midland author Patrick Dearen is to sign copies of his new novel, "When Cowboys Die," from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday at Waldenbooks at Midland Park Mall. "When Cowboys Die," set in West Texas, is the story of a modern ranch hand's horseback search for the lost Old West and an ensuing manhunt.

Mike Loftis of Lee High School delivers one of the soliliquies from "Spoon River Anthology." The show marks the first time both Midland and Lee high schools have combined drama departments to offer a summer production.

Schools combine talents for summer production

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Some local students got a taste of "summer stock" for the first time as Midland and Lee high school drama students combined forces to produce "Spoon River Anthology."

"We (Midland and Lee high schools) have worked together with costumes and things throughout the year," said LHS drama teacher Horace Griffin. "But this is the first time we have worked together to do a summer production. We thought it would be fun."

Griffin said he also thought it would add to the production to feature a former LHS student. That student is Melissa May, who portrayed Laurie in the school's production of "Oklahoma."

Ms. May, a vocal performance major at Texas Christian University, will sing "Spoon River's" musical numbers.

"We are delighted to have her," Griffin said.

He said "Spoon River" has a little of everything. "It is a drama, but it has its light moments."

Conceived, adapted and arranged by Charles Aidman, Griffin said the series of vignettes result in a "remarkably poignant revelation of small-town life as seen in poetic epitaphs at the turn of the century."

"It involved four or five authors and is like a reader's theater production without the books," Griffin said. "There are some wonderful stories, sad and funny. For example, there is the story of a Jewish haberdasher who dies in a train wreck. His body is sent to a Jewish cemetery in Chicago, but gets switched and ends up in Spoon River."

LHS student Mindi Helvie's characters include a German peasant girl and a hat maker.

"Spoon River has a lot of variety," Mindi said. "It has comedy and tragedy in the life stories."

A fourth-year drama student, Mindi said the production marks the first time both high schools have performed on stage together in a drama.

"It's worked out really well," she said. Students talked about doing a summer production during the school year, she said.

Contacted on Thursday, Mindi said, "I'm not nervous right now. That could change ... when we get ready to perform for the kids in summer school during the day. After that, I won't be nervous (before the evening performance), I'll just be excited."

U.S. magistrate hears testimony in cocaine bust

Associated Press

EL PASO — A plot to distribute several tons of cocaine was meticulously hatched over six months by a group of conspirators, who were unwittingly being watched by a DEA informant, an agent testified Thursday.

Members of the group met in El Paso, Ciudad Juarez and Tijuana, Mexico, as they detailed plans to bring nearly 6 tons of cocaine across the border, then transport it to Chicago and New York, said DEA Special Agent Monica Harvey.

Ms. Harvey detailed the alleged plot during a federal court hearing for five people arrested last week in the trafficking scheme.

The five, Alberto Ochoa Soto, Alfredo Correa Heredia, Khaled Alsawas — the driver who was arrested in Pecos — Leticia Ann Orozco Duran and Ernesto Caravejo, are charged with conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute the cocaine.

Authorities are searching for four others who are considered fugitives, including the accused mastermind of the smuggling operation.

Ms. Harvey said the Drug Enforcement Administration began investigating the group in January, when an informant told authorities Caravejo had spoken to him about bringing several tons of cocaine into the country.

Speaker shares motivational words

All too often "good enough"

Today's high school student faces a world of technological change, and the best way to face that change is with a positive attitude, according to Mike Smith.

Smith, a motivational speaker with ProActive of Albuquerque, N.M., used his skills to capture the attention of students Thursday morning at Midland Community Theatre.

Smith's talk concluded weeks of work for more than 200 students who participated in the Job Training Partnership Act youth program.

The speaker ran out into the center of the MCT's smaller theater and immediately began talking rapid-fire, "400 words a minute."

"Most people speak 100 words a minute. And you will only remember 20 percent, or 20, of those words. So, I'm going to give you much more to remember. You deserve that," Smith said, mugging and drawing laughter.

"Lean forward in your seats," he told the audience. "Now lean back.

West Texan hopes to help MC upgrade computer systems

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Longtime West Texan Odis M. Holiman has become a serious computer student at 77. A farmer, rancher and self-made businessman, Holiman is ready to upgrade his technical skills and wants to learn on nothing-but-the-best computer equipment.

"That's why I'm out raising funds for Midland College. I'm going to college and enjoying every minute of it. I came from hard times and I appreciate a good education," Holiman said.

Holiman has arranged to collect funds in order to upgrade computer systems and software programs.

"Right now the computers have four megabytes, and you need eight to operate some of the most popular Word Perfect 6.0 programs," he said.

Holiman said his appreciation of MC staff and teachers inspired him to help them upgrade their equipment.

"I'm taking courses in Word Perfect applications," he said. "The teachers need to be able to teach computer programs that are on the market today for business and personal computers. A lot of people would take these classes if they were available."

Any businesses or individuals interested in donating checks (payable to Midland College), may send them to Odis M. Holiman, H.C. 34, Box 119-H, Midkiff, Texas 79755.

COCAINE: DEA agent testifies

(From 1B)

The informant was offered $150 a kilogram for the job and more to drive it to Chicago, she said. A total of about 5,400 kilograms of cocaine were transported into the country by the group.

Several meetings followed, during which the informant met others now accused in the conspiracy, including reputed mastermind Raul Orozco.

Arrangements were made for the informant and others to bring the drugs into El Paso, where they were stored in a warehouse — which was secretly owned by the DEA — until they were ready to be shipped out.

The drugs were moved out on July 7, with the informant driving a truck loaded down with more than 2 tons of cocaine that was supposed to be bound for Chicago. Those drugs remain in the possession of federal authorities.

Alsawas was driving a truck carrying about 3½ tons of cocaine bound for New York. Authorities stopped that truck in Pecos, confiscated the drugs and arrested Alsawas.

Ochoa Soto, Correa Heredia, Duran and Caravejo were subsequently arrested last weekend.

The five, who are being held in the El Paso County Jail, appeared before U.S. Magistrate Philip Cole on Thursday for a detention hearing. Correa and Ochoa were ordered held without bond.

Duran, Caravejo and Alsawas had their detention hearings postponed until July 21.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Sam Ponder said the case will be presented soon to a grand jury and that other charges could be handed down by the panel.

Two die in crash of private plane

GREENVILLE (AP) — Two occupants of a private plane died Thursday evening when their craft crashed at a Northeast Texas airport, authorities said.

Witnesses told police that the twin-engine Cessna went down about 7:30 p.m. just east of the runway at Majors Field Airport, said dispatcher Jim Moore.

"There has been an accident involving a civilian aircraft," said Jimmy Adams, a dispatcher for E-Systems. "It was trying to land at the time."

The airport on Greenville's south side is owned by the city. But the Dallas-based defense contractor leases some area property.

Adams referred further questions to spokesman John Sutton, who did not immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

Witnesses said the plane crashed nose-first about 300 feet from a taxiway after circling the airport.

"We see planes take off all the time. And this one acted more unnatural than any I've ever seen," Amos Lowry, one witness, told WFAA-TV. "When it turned left, the RPM slowed down and that drew my attention to it. And it kind of did an unnormal move."

Officials say the plane may have been on a training flight with a 33-year-old instructor and 29-year-old student.

POLICE REPORTS

Attempted escape

REEVES COUNTY — Three Reeves County Law Enforcement Center (RCLEC) inmates were charged Thursday with trying to escape the facility by attempting to bribe a guard.

According to a complaint filed by the FBI in Midland, the inmates conspired to bribe a guard at the RCLEC in order to escape. An investigation by the Midland FBI, the U.S. Marshals office in Pecos, the Reeves County Sheriff's office and the Pecos Police Department was initiated after the guard informed his superiors of the attempted bribe.

Charges of conspiring to escape from federal custody were filed against 34-year-old Francisco Lopez-Escobar, 31-year-old Juan Estrada-Sillas and 24-year-old Jesus Alvarez-Espinoza.

Escobar is currently serving a 24-month sentence for returning to the United States as a deported alien. Sillas is serving a 33-month sentence for possession of cocaine. Espinoza is serving a 35-month sentence for conspiracy to possess a controlled substance.

In addition, Antonio Sosa-Chavez, a former RCLEC inmate, was charged as a result of the investigation. Chavez was charged with misprison of a felony because it is believed he was aware of the escape conspiracy and failed to report it.

Chavez was arrested by FBI agents Thursday at the U.S. Border Patrol detention facility in El Paso, where he was serving an 18-month sentence for possession of marijuana.

The conspiracy charges carry a maximum sentence of six years in prison and a $5,000 fine. The misprison charge carries a maximum sentence of three years in prison and a $500 fine.

SPEAKER: Smith captures attention of JTPA students

(From 1B)

Ah, peer pressure. Did you notice how many of you looked down the row before you leaned forward?" Smith said. He worked his audience with more participatory antics that employed humor to point out peer pressure.

Before he asked the audience to clap their hands, Smith said, "turn to the person to the left and the right of you and say: 'You have my permission to clap.' We have to do this because of peer pressure."

He asked his audience to vow to smile for 21 days. "That's all the amount of time you need to make or break a habit," he said.

On a more serious note, Smith said he graduated in the lowest one-third of his class. "We made the other two-thirds look good," he said. "I had a 1.9 average in high school on a good day. I belonged to the 'C' peer group. Anytime I got an 'A,' I had to quickly get a 'D' or 'F' to balance it out to be cool."

After he graduated in 1964, the Vietnam conflict began to escalate. "And calling it the Vietnam conflict is like calling a bank robbery a financial transaction," Smith said.

"Suddenly, going to college became a priority."

Interviewing at universities, Smith found himself in the dilemma of competing with hundreds of students for a limited number of spots.

He said he had to reply "no" to every question about his participation in school clubs or activities. One counselor asked him, "what did you do for four years?"

"I was cool," Smith said, eliciting gales of laughter and knowing nods from the theater filled with teen-agers.

"If you wanted me to be involved in anything, you had to come get me. And, it's a funny thing. Nobody came."

When he realized there was no hope of getting a scholarship based on his academic or extracurricular record, Smith told his father, "We are going to college."

"We?" his father said.

"Yes, my mind and your money," Smith replied. "Then my dad said, 'You will appreciate it more if you pay for it.' How many of us have heard that before? I said, 'Dad, I don't want to appreciate it. I just want to go.'"

By dedicating himself to his studies, "showing up on time and doing the assignments," Smith achieved a 3.6 grade-point average. "And I'm no smarter than any of you."

Smith was student-body president at Fort Lewis College in Durango, Colo., and served with distinction as a U.S. Army helicopter pilot in Vietnam.

He performed a comedy routine about the shock of a 1960s student finding out a slide rule "did not hold all of the secrets of the universe" and his pride of spending a mere $100 on a pocket calculator that "actually would add and subtract (only).

"When I was growing up it took 45 minutes to bake a potato. You had to really want a baked potato. If you had told me when I was in high school that we would someday put a potato in a box for seven minutes and zap it with microwaves, I wouldn't have believed you," he said.

Smith told students to take advantage of the JTPA programs and Tech Prep (Technical Preparation), which encourage them to take math, science and more technical courses.

Cheri Hensley, Permian Basin Tech Prep curriculum specialist, said Tech Prep sponsored Smith's visit in partnership with JTPA.

"Mike Smith was great. He got the students moving and participating, and he delivered a good message," she said.

Ms. Hensley said the program was repeated for 300 students in Odessa Thursday afternoon.

She said the Tech Prep organization will mail letters out to students before school starts to remind them of the types of courses they need to take to be prepared for the work force.

"Working at the work sites is a big part of the program," Ms. Hensley said. "The students experience the real world. You can teach all day long and not give them that."

Tech Prep curriculum combines two or more years of high school studies with at least two years of college and leads to an associate degree.

"The job market doesn't demand a great number of four-year college graduates. It does, however, demand employees who can solve technical problems and share ideas with others," according to information from the Permian Basin Tech-Prep Consortium.

Several students received awards for outstanding participation and their performance at work sites in the community.

Latrika Lee and Juan Porras won awards for their essays to government leaders about the need to stem violence and racism, about the dropout rate in the schools and about upgrading school classroom equipment.

Porras called for metal detectors and security guards in the schools. "Racism must be abolished," he said. "Without an education you're a deadbeat. If something isn't done, this could be like a Third World country."

Student Samatha Corrales wrote in a journal every day she was on the job with the United Way.

Kriss Cowles, 15, was so dedicated to participating in the JTPA program that he rode a bicycle from Midland to the airport — and back — many times over the past six weeks.

"I mostly worked on computers. I like fixing them," Cowles said. "I told them (JTPA members) what I wanted to do and asked for the job. I just didn't have any other transportation."

Cowles said he was participating in the program for his second year. "It's pretty good. I would recommend it," he said.

While Cowles made light of his extra effort, he exemplified the "can do" spirit Smith spoke of, right before donning a bicycle helmut and getting ready to hit the road again, making sure he got where he needed to go entirely by his own effort.

CHARGES: Three men await preliminary hearing Monday

eral and state agents in an undercover operation last weekend at a local hotel.

Agents with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, U.S. Customs Service and the Texas Department of Public Safety seized about 20 ounces — or half a kilogram — of the drug. A kilogram is equivalent to 2.2 pounds.

"It's a serious amount of heroin," Beery said. "We don't know the purity yet."

For street sales, heroin is cut to 5 to 8 percent of purity, Beery said. Higher purity levels could be lethal, he said.

"It's the most addictive of all hard narcotics, no question about it," Beery said.

The use of heroin unfortunately is on the increase, he said.

The underlying motive for preparing and marketing the illegal drug is profit, Beery said. "That's the usual motive: fun and profit."

Authorities make two arrests in Mexico in quadruple slaying

HOUSTON (AP) — A man and woman charged in the execution-style slayings of four people were arrested Thursday in Matamoros, Mexico, authorities said.

The pair was arrested 3:30 p.m. outside a hotel in Matamoros, a Mexican town across the border from Brownsville, said Harris County Sheriff's Lt. Bert Diaz.

They were identified as Jonathan Lee Wingate, 22, and Idolina Corkill Escamilla, 25, both of Houston.

The cousins are charged with capital murder in connection with the shooting deaths last Sunday of four people at a northeast Houston home.

Authorities said two were shot with a high-caliber rifle and two others with a small-caliber handgun and that the slayings had all the markings of execution-type murders.

Jewelry, money and several guns were taken from the home, Diaz said.

Wingate, an ex-convict, and Ms. Escamilla knew the victims, he said.

Wingate sometimes worked for one of the victims, who was an electrical contractor.

Wingate, interviewed by the San Antonio Express-News in his jail cell, calmly recounted to the paper how he shot the four in self-defense, in what he was quoted as saying was a "drug deal that went sour."

"I feared for my life," he said. "I did the only thing I could do to get out of there alive."

He said he worked for Rebecca "Dusky" Shepherd for about two months, and had made a deal to sell her a pound of marijuana.

When he and Ms. Escamilla drove to the house Sunday, he said, Ms. Escamilla went inside to make the delivery while he waited outside.

One of the three men who was killed came up to the car, Wingate said, and reached for a gun he was carrying. The two struggled for it.

"I got it first," Wingate said.

After shooting the first man, Wingate said, he went after his cousin.

The two will remain in the custody of Mexican authorities at least until Friday, when a hearing is scheduled to prove they are U.S. citizens, Diaz said.

Alamo Heights to host drama workshop

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Alamo Heights Baptist Church, 1305 N. Midland Drive, is to host a weekend workshop by The Company, which teaches the basics of acting, staging, stage management and script writing.

The group traces its beginning to 1985, when members of an acting class at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary reached out for places to try out their material.

"They performed in local churches here in the Fort Worth area," said Leighanne Parrish, wife of director Dennis Parrish, and the group's office manager.

"It was so successful they started getting invitations, and the baby was born."

Parrish was a member of that class. After graduating from the seminary, he became a professor at his alma mater and then director of the performing troupe.

The Company is made up of "seminary students or seminary people just recently graduated," Mrs. Parrish said. "And they audition for Mr. Parrish and then sign up for the class called The Company.

"They're in an apprenticeship program for one semester and then become full-fledged company members."

Although The Company is affiliated with Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, it is not funded by the school. The Company, which performs more than 200 times a year, survives through "love offerings" or honorariums from the churches or organizations that ask the group to perform.

Cost of the Midland workshop — which is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday — is $10. Participants will be offered the opportunity to perform with The Company during the worship at 7 p.m. Saturday.

For more information, or to sign up, call the church at 697-3101.

Those attending the workshop will "learn more about the creative arts and what they can do on their own," Mrs. Parrish said. "They will learn how to be more creative, how to stir the creative emotions inside and express that through a Christian mode."

The Company also will perform at the 11 a.m. service Sunday at Alamo Heights Baptist Church.

"I've seen about a dozen Christian theater performance groups, but none has had a better balance of talent and commitment to Christ than The Company," said Ben Condray, the church's pastor.

"We hope that this workshop will provide a spark to churches with a working drama ministry in our community and will give other churches an incentive to start one," he said.

"Reaching people for Christ through the arts has been an effective means for centuries."

Mrs. Parrish considers The Company a ministry.

"It gives another creative outlet for worship," she said. "It's a different way to minister to other Christians, other lost people. It provides an outlet for Christian actors to use their talents."

Bush proposes welfare applicants be fingerprinted

■ Plan is aimed at stopping double-dippers, but state investigators say it would cost more than it would save.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Republican gubernatorial candidate George W. Bush Thursday proposed fingerprinting welfare applicants in an effort to flush out cheats and double-dippers.

Fingerprinting is a requirement for state welfare in a few counties in New York and California, and Bush said the idea could save Texans millions of dollars in welfare fraud.

"The state of Texas has an obligation to taxpayers to make sure there's not a duplication of services," Bush said at a news conference after touring the Bill J. Priest Institute for Economic Development.

But state fraud investigators said such a program could cost more than it would save because fingerprinting does not prevent the more likely fraud of illegal work under the table.

"The overwhelming majority (of fraud cases) involve people who either underreport income or don't correctly report their household situation to falsely get benefits," said Claude E. Hill, deputy inspector general for investigations at the Texas Department of Human Services.

Hill said underreporting of income constitutes about 90 percent of all fraud cases.

Bush said start-up costs for the fingerprinting system would be $25 million and estimated the program would pay off in two years.

He did not estimate savings beyond that, but said: "Regardless of the size of the savings, why not do it? If there's fraud today there's clearly going to be fraud tomorrow."

Under his proposal, applicants' fingerprints would be scanned electronically. A computer then would compare the prints with those of people already receiving benefits. Applicants refusing to cooperate would be denied aid.

Veronica Jefferson, president of the Houston Welfare Rights Organization, said fingerprinting would violate the rights of welfare applicants.

"Why embarrass them by having to be fingerprinted? That is a violation of a person's rights," she said. "Where's the guarantee that unauthorized persons wouldn't get access to the information?"

Bush said prints would not be shared with others, such as police or tax collectors.

The state would need a federal waiver to fingerprint people receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children because it adds a requirement not in federal rules.

The proposal is the second part of a plan Bush announced in March to reform the state's welfare program. Earlier proposals included a two-year limit on welfare for the able-bodied and a prohibition on additional benefits for people who have children while on welfare.

Dispute develops over $84 million in funds for Texas bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dispute is brewing over $84 million in military construction funds for Texas included in a bill approved by the House, but missing from the Senate's version.

Texas Democratic Senate hopeful Richard Fisher is accusing his Republican opponent, Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, of dropping the ball by not seeking to insert the funds in the Senate bill.

Mrs. Hutchison, who sits on the Senate Armed Services Committee, retorts that Fisher doesn't understand the Senate's procedures. She says its practice is to omit the House-passed military construction funds in favor of its own projects. The two bills then are then reconciled in conference committee.

Texas GOP Sen. Phil Gramm, who sits on the defense appropriations subcommittee, appears to rely on the same principle.

"If the process works this year as it has worked in previous years, the conference committee will meet, hear the arguments for all the projects and approve funding for the vast majority whether they are contained in the House bill or the Senate bill," said Gramm press secretary Larry Neal.

Texas House members, while carefully avoiding publicly criticizing Texas' two senators, are pleading for closer cooperation.

At issue is some $84 million for Texas above and beyond the funding being sought by the Defense Department for military installations next year. The $84 million, known as add-on money, was inserted by nine House members.

None of the $560 million in add-ons contained in the Senate bill is earmarked for Texas.

In an interview Thursday, Mrs. Hutchison expressed confidence the $84 million would emerge unscathed once House and Senate negotiators hammer out their differences. The same scenario, she said, took place last year.

"They will all be funded," she said. "That's always the way it operates."

Asked why she didn't include add-ons of her own, the senator said: "I got no requests because (military officials in Texas) go through the congressmen . . . Had we had one, of course I would have put one in."

Fisher accused his rival of hypocrisy.

FRIDAY, JULY 15, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New alliances and partnerships are vital to your happiness and professional success. Plant the seeds for future business success. Public acclaim comes in August. Share the spotlight with loyal supporters. Career advancement and fresh financial gains will get 1995 off to a flying start. Romance looks especially blissful next March. Plan a wedding or family celebration for June.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Linda Ronstadt, author Iris Murdoch, cover girl Kim Alexis, Dutch artist Rembrandt, English musician Julian Bream.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Size up your financial situation before making any new commitments. Change may hold some of the answers you have been looking for. Check the status of your credit before making a major purchase. Write overdue letters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can take a big step today towards solving a financial problem or arranging retirement finances. Turn a meeting with a friend or employer into more than just a polite lunch. Make key phone calls.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emotional stability is vital now. Turn over a new leaf in business and social affairs. When opportunity knocks, answer! Mate or partner is in your corner. Do not be afraid to take risks.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Invest in yourself by attending vocational seminars or returning to school. Your intuition is razor-sharp where business is concerned. Partners may not agree with your plans. Financial matters go your way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Ingenuity helps you overcome any obstacles at work. You jump-start a stalled project and win new admirers! Step on the gas in a large-scale business venture. Invite friends over for a festive dinner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Key people are likely to approve your ideas today. The public's response to your personality or talents is positive. Put your best foot forward. Add some artistic touches to your home or office.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A transition involving your work or domestic situation could cause some confusion for the next few days. Remain calm. Important contractual agreements are in the spotlight. Refuse to engage in petty squabbles with a co-worker.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romance is favored all weekend. Make socializing and entertaining part of your agenda during this pleasant period. Emphasize quality, not quantity, when buying clothes or home furnishings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be trying to push an issue too hard and too fast. Relax and let things take their own course. A compassionate attitude will lead to greater rapport with your loved ones. Be forgiving.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Two heads are better than one now. Offer encouragement to someone who feels pressured or uncertain. Sharing a secret with your loved ones will lighten your burden. Follow your conscience where romance is concerned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Other people, some of them very influential, stand ready to help you achieve your goals. You make real headway in career pursuits. Leave the big financial decisions for next week. Relax at home this weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may be tempted to be a bit brusque with a customer or co-worker. Be sensitive to this person's feelings. There could be a sudden need to change certain work procedures. Show your adaptability.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♠	1 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

North and South had an arrangement. If either player made a palpable error, the offender had to pay partner one dollar. You be the judge: Should South be penalized for the play of this hand?

North-South were playing five-card majors and weak no trumps, which accounts for the one diamond opening bid. East seized the opportunity to overcall one spade. South's one no trump cannot be faulted and North jumped to game, since the queen of spades was now known to have some value, even if only to bolster partner's stopper.

West led the king of spades, taken by the ace. The ten of hearts lost to West's ace and the remaining spade stopper was removed. Since declarer could not come to nine tricks without at least one diamond, East grabbed the first lead of the suit and cashed four spade tricks for a two-trick set.

North claimed a dollar. South pleaded that this was a case of simple bad luck—a diamond at trick two would have landed the contract, but how could anyone know which red ace East held?

That's true enough—but the contract is laydown as the cards lie. All declarer has to do is hold up on the first spade.

When West continues spades at trick two, dummy wins and let's suppose declarer guesses wrong by leading a heart to West's ace. The best West can do is shift to a club. Declarer rises with the table's ace and forces out the ace of diamonds and the defenders are helpless.

One dollar, please.

Cybill Shepherd opens a three-week singing gig at a New York cabaret.

Actress Cybill Shepherd laughs at idea, but moonlights as singer

NEW YORK — Cybill Shepherd a singer? Even she has to laugh at the notion.

"I've had three record companies go bankrupt after I did albums with them," Shepherd said in Thursday's New York Times. "I guess it's really a tribute to psychotherapy that I'm still singing."

And: "Frank Sinatra heard one of my albums and sent a telegram to the producers saying, 'What some guys will do for a broad!' "

Shepherd is persevering, though, opening a three-week gig Tuesday at a cabaret in New York after a July Fourth show in Atlantic City, N.J.

"I have a talent for singing, and I love to do it," said the 44-year-old former "Moonlighting" star.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Artist Jacob Lawrence says he had no idea museums would be interested in his work. Not that it would have made a difference.

At age 14 or 15, "I made the decision that regardless of what else I had to do, I would always paint," the 76-year-old Lawrence said.

His 60-painting "Migration Series" is on display this week at the Birmingham Museum of Art.

The paintings, first exhibited in 1941, tell the story of rural Southern blacks who began streaming into urban centers of the North toward the end of World War I in search of a better life.

"I was part of that migration, but I didn't realize it at the time," Lawrence said. "It's a very exciting history, not for just black people, but for this country as a whole."

DENVER — At least part of the Who is going symphonic.

Roger Daltrey and a backup group will kick off a tour July 30 when they perform Who hits with the Colorado Symphony Orchestra.

Pete Townshend, the Who's lead guitarist and chief songwriter, isn't participating but has given his blessing, Daltrey said Wednesday.

"Many of Pete's countermelodies lend themselves to orchestration," he said. "In the past, we used synthesizers, but they can't replace the orchestra."

Daltrey's band includes Who bassist John Entwistle, drummer Zak Starkey and Simon Townshend, Pete's brother.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Bill Cosby's former housekeeper says he wrongly fired her after she got hurt on the job, and she wants $500,000.

Susan Isles, who worked for the Cosby family for 10 months, sued the comedian and his wife, Camille, on Wednesday.

The lawsuit said Ms. Isles was dismissed Dec. 16 when she asked about workers' compensation for an injury she suffered when she hit her head on a pipe at the Cosby home in Shelburne.

She said she suffers from depression, neck pain, headaches, dizziness and nausea.

Chemicals used in lawn care should be handled with caution

By Dr. Robert Hoffman
Associated Press

A green, grassy lawn may be one of summer's joys for homeowners. But keeping the lawn green and pest-free may require using potentially toxic chemicals that must be handled carefully to prevent accidental poisonings.

The most common chemicals used to kill unwanted pests are known as organophosphates, which can be toxic if used carelessly.

It's possible to buy organophosphates in such familiar settings as a hardware, supermarket or plant store. But that doesn't mean that these chemicals are safe.

Following these few simple rules can help prevent accidental contact or ingestion:

■ Before beginning use of any lawn chemical, read the label completely, and if you have any questions about its proper use, contact the manufacturer, a nearby poison control center, or a local nursery.

■ Be aware that many chemicals are packaged in concentrates that are meant to be diluted before being used in sprayers.

■ Avoid contact of these chemicals with the skin. When spraying, wear protective clothing such as long pants, long-sleeved shirts, closed shoes, a hat, gloves and eyeglasses. If the chemicals accidentally come in contact with the skin, stop spraying immediately, wash the area thoroughly with soap and water, and change your clothing.

■ Consider weather conditions before using these chemicals. For example, do not spray on a windy day, because a gust of wind can blow spray back into the face and the chemical can be inhaled. Also, avoid spraying on a hot day because high temperatures can cause chemicals to vaporize into the air.

■ Do not spray around small children or pregnant women — or even family pets. The risks of exposing a developing baby to insecticides far outweigh any possible benefits to a healthy lawn. And pregnant women, people with underlying respiratory or heart conditions, or on medications should not spray or use these chemicals.

■ Pyrethrins, natural or synthetic compounds derived from chrysanthemums, are another option. These chemicals have a low toxicity in humans, but should still be used with caution. Pyrethrins may provoke symptoms in people with asthma, hay fever or other underlying respiratory disorders.

■ Never smoke, eat, or drink while these chemicals are being applied. The chemicals can get into the air, where they can land on a drink, sandwich, or cigarette and be ingested or inhaled.

■ Keep chemicals in their original container, well out of reach of children. A child may mistake chemicals stored in another bottle as a drink — and the consequences can be serious or fatal. But in the event that an accidental ingestion does occur, having the original container will enable the poison control center to issue proper instructions.

FAMILY MATTERS

Communication part of health plan

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: It is getting where we elderly are afraid to go to a hospital or clinic. Last fall I fell and injured my back. Paramedics came and took me to the Emergency Room. I had back X-rays and the doctor came in for about two minutes, looked at the X-rays, wrote out a prescription and dismissed me. I went home in my grandson's truck. I took the medicine for two weeks, but it did no good. I suffered pain non-stop day and night.

May

I took the medicine to another doctor and he said it was a muscle relaxer and too much of it was bad for the kidneys and stomach. I was already on another muscle relaxer. The doctor at the hospital did not ask if I was on any kind of medicine. We had all of my medicines in my grandson's truck. I take three kinds of heart medicine, one for seizures and one for sleep. I do not sleep much.

I developed a kidney infection which was cured by a urologist in two weeks. Another doctor gave me medicine for arthritis, which caused me to not remember to buckle my seat belt, so I quit taking it.

In January I took a fever. Since it was on a Saturday, I went to a walk-in clinic. My daughter took the prescriptions the doctor there gave me to the pharmacy as I was running a fever. That doctor had given me five prescriptions, one of which was cough syrup with codeine. The total was $139, and I couldn't take at least two of them. When I went in I told them that I was allergic to all narcotics and pain medications. I didn't even have a cough.

It has been seven and one-half months since I fell. I've seen five medical doctors one chiropractor and two physical therapists in that time. In spite of what some folks think, Medicare does not pay all of our bills and my medicine is paid by me. If we do finally have socialized medicine, it will be because of mistakes made by a lot of people who should know better.

This doesn't all just happen in our town. I was stung by a bee in a park near Abilene. When the doctor got to me, he picked up a syringe to give me a shot. I asked if he had seen my chart. He said later, "It was a good thing I saw your chart because your blood pressure is real high and the shot would have made it worse!" The nurse said it was very high too.

I am writing this to advise folks who have elderly who can't take care of themselves to be sure and ask questions for them. I am 82 years old but I still do my own thinking. It's also a good idea to ask your pharmacist when you get a prescription to tell you what is in it.

I mailed an article to the White House about socialized medicine in Canada, stating that Canadians came to the United States for treatment. I got a letter back, but whoever answered the article either didn't understand it or chose to ignore the facts. KEEPING MY EYES OPEN

DEAR KEEPING: You offer some very good advice based on your experiences. I agree that having someone accompany the elderly on visits to health care providers is very important. Usually, the patient does not feel well or she would not be here to begin with. Very few people can communicate or listen well when they are ill.

I also agree with your advice concerning medications. In the interest of efficiency and for self-protection, everyone on multiple medications should keep a current list of all of those medications on his or her person to give to health care providers if the need arises. I also strongly encourage anyone who is allergic to certain medications to wear a medical alert bracelet so stating. Thank you for writing and I hope you do keep caring.

THE FOLLOWING "SAFETY TIPS FOR PARENTS" ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

■ Know everything you can about your children's activities and friends. Monitor children's activities and participate with them. Don't allow children to play alone in fields, on playgrounds or in other dangerous or isolated areas.

■ Teach your children about strangers.

■ Teach your child to refuse anything from strangers, including money, gifts or rides. Know where all new items came from.

■ Teach your children how to safely enter home alone. Teach them to pretend you are home and how to answer the telephone if they are alone.

■ Teach your children to keep a safe distance from strangers and not to give strangers directions or help. Adults need to help other adults. (From: Project SAFE, HISD, Houston).

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My children (ages 5, 3 and 2) cannot read chemical formulas or lengthy warning labels — but they all know that a skull and crossbones means "poison."

Van Buren

I collect old patent medicine bottles, and I recently brought one home that had the skull and crossbones. My 3-year-old took one look and said, "Oh ... poison?"

Now, I know we all do our best to keep such nasties out of the reach of children, but I think a return to a nice, old-fashioned picture of the skull and crossbones would be a great idea. Marketers should take note! — PRAGMATIC PARENT, MICKLETON, N.J.

DEAR PRAGMATIC PARENT: The best insurance agaist small children ingesting anything that could be hazardous to their health is placing sturdy locks on medicine cabinets and cupboards where dangerous products are stored.

The Poison Control Center of Los Angeles and Orange County (California) advises that even if a regulation were passed stating that the trusty old skull and crossbones be dragged out of retirement, there is no regulatory agency to decide which products should carry the label, nor is there one to enforce it. Any number of products can be hazardous if ingested or used for a purpose other than their intended one.

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen the following poem in your column, but I think it's worth printing. The title is "Myself," but I do not know the name of the author. I'm enclosing the original — which, as you can see, is yellowed with age. — A FAITHFUL PHOENIX READER

DEAR FAITHFUL: That poem has been in my personal collection of favorite poems since 1936 B.C. (Before Column).

MYSELF
by Edgar Albert Guest

I have to live with myself, and so,
I want to be fit for myself to know;
I want to be able as days go by
Always to look myself straight in the eye;
I don't want to stand with the setting sun

I don't want to keep on a closet shelf
A lot of secrets about myself,
And fool myself as I come and go
Into thinking that nobody else will know
The kind of a man I really am;
I don't want to dress myself up in sham.

I want to go out with my head erect,
I want to deserve all men's respect;
But here in the struggle for fame and pelf,
I want to be able to like myself.
I don't want to think as I come and go
That I'm bluster and bluff and empty show.

I never can hide myself from me,
I see what others may never see,
I know what others may never know,
I never can fool myself — and so,
Whatever happens, I want to be Self-respecting and conscience free.

In-line skating moves into mainstream lane

By Greg Johnston
N.Y. Times News Service

The image of an in-line roller skater used to be that of a shaggy-haired, nose-ringed teenage renegade in baggy shorts who terrorized innocent pedestrians on city sidewalks by buzzing past them in a blur.

No more. Your mom is as likely to do it these days as the young rebel next door. In-line skating has gone mainstream in a major way.

The sport grew more than any other in America last year with at least 8 million participants, an increase of 27.4 percent over 1992, according to a National Sporting Goods Association survey. In-line skating was second overall in growth only to snowboarding.

"It's become very establishment," says David McCreary, author of a new in-line skating guidebook, "Rolling Around Puget Sound."

According to the survey, more than 12.4 million Americans are in-line skating, mostly just for fun and exercise but also in a variety of spinoffs: roller hockey, roller hoops, in-line racing, in-line slalom racing.

Even roller romance.

"What I enjoy about it is, being single, it's a great ice-breaker," says Lorin Guenette of Seattle, a marketing employee for Starbucks coffee. "It's a nice way to meet people. I go on skate dates."

THE SPORT got rolling in 1980 when two brothers in Minnesota began manufacturing wheels arranged in a single row that could be attached to ice skates, so hockey players could train during the off-season. In 1987, their company, Rollerblade, began marketing in-line skates as a fitness product.

Rollerblade and other manufacturers — ski-maker K2 entered the market last year — now are finding a ready-to-roll population.

Why have in-line skates become so popular when regular roller skates have been around for years? In-line skates work better outside than regular roller skates, proponents say, and are faster. A strong skater can reach speeds of 30 mph on a level surface.

And, as this reporter's 14-year-old son, a veteran in-line skater, adds: "It's neat to feel the wind in your face."

It's a sensory experience not limited to those who roll on youthful legs.

"Once you learn to do it effortlessly, you get the illusion of floating or something," says McCreary, 51. "I don't know how to describe it. It's just fun."

But not without its dangers.

The problem with in-line skating is that when you fall, you land on pavement. And as any action sports participant knows, human momentum plus pavement equals multiple contusions.

Or worse.

A study last year by two New York surgeons, reported in the medical periodical Journal of Trauma, revealed "a surprisingly large number" of deaths — seven — among in-line skaters in the year studied, 1991. Based on a national survey of hand surgeons and emergency room physicians, as well as data from the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the study also found a fairly high rate of injuries, with most occurring to the wrist, often as fractures.

MOST OF those injured or killed were novice skaters who did not know how to stop properly. The padded brake behind the wheels, usually on just one skate, is tricky at first. Most skaters who died were traveling in traffic and collided with vehicles.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission warned recently that 80,000 in-line skaters would be injured this year. Manufacturers, in response, said that the sport is no more dangerous than skiing or cycling. Last year, for example, 730 people were killed in bicycling accidents.

Lisa Rogers of the Harborview Injury Prevention Center in Seattle said the frightening statistics does not mean people should not use in-line skates.

"What it means is that you need to have some training," she said. "People, and kids in particular, they get in-line skates and off they go. They don't have any idea how to stop and often wear no protective gear."

The authors of the study concluded that protective wrist splints and elbow pads should be considered mandatory gear and that the use of gloves, knee pads and helmets should be strongly encouraged. They also recommended that novice skaters first learn basic stopping and controlled skating techniques in a supervised setting.

Maria Carilao, an in-line instructor who witnessed a fatal skating accident, won't let any of her students on skates without protective gear, especially a helmet.

"Accidents can and do happen," she says. "I have my share of bumps and bruises. You should always wear protective gear."

COMMON SENSE also dictates that a novice should never, ever skate near traffic.

Finding solid instruction can be difficult. In 1991, five in-line skate manufacturers organized a campaign called SkateSmart, and their instructive brochures are often sold with new skates.

However, personal instruction is only now becoming available.

Despite the potential hazards, many maintain that once learned, in-line skating allows one to glide toward a sound mind and body.

"I'm at a point in life where I don't care to jog," says Ellie Austin, a retired physical education teacher who teaches in-line skating. "It's too hard on the knees. So for aerobic benefit, I have to do something else. In-line skating is user-friendly and great for the mature body."

A study by University of Massachusetts researchers, conducted for Rollerblade, found that in-line skating was aerobically comparable to running, with those skating at moderate to fast speeds burning 14.1 calories per minute, compared to 14.9 for running.

Carilao says in-line skating also improves coordination and balance and is "the only sport that evenly develops your muscles from the upper body down."

Add hockey to the equation, and you can build some stick-swinging arms. There are two organizations nationally, the professional World Roller Hockey League and the National In-Line Hockey Association.

WHILE IN-LINE skating is as popular here as anywhere, organized roller hockey is basically limited to a lot of kids playing cul-de-sac hockey. Some groups of adult skaters have regular, semi-organized roller hockey games, however, and Carilao says she is trying to organize a local roller hockey league.

Sometimes parents miss children's special events

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — There are moments in a child's life when a parent can't attend a special event.

On these occasions, parents should be honest and find alternative ways to show they care, says Gregory Smith, associate professor of psychology and child development specialist at Dickinson College.

"A straightforward, honest explanation is required," Smith says. But if it's business that prevents a parent from being in attendance, "don't act like the job is more important by saying things like 'This is very important to Mommy.' That's the worst thing a child could hear at this time."

To help alleviate the disappointment of a parent missing a recital or play, Smith suggests arranging a special "command performance" of the event at home, or calling before or after the performance. Such actions help communicate the parent's pride and interest in the child's accomplishments, satisfying the child's need for parental approval, he said.

Smith cautions parents not to go overboard. Hasty promises to attend the child's next event or gifts to soothe a child's hurt feelings often do more harm than good, he says.

"Don't promise to be at the 'next one' if you can't," he says. "The child won't care about the next one right now and reneging on the promise will make the situation even worse."

"Also, avoid bribing the child with large gifts or money spent when you return. This sends a message that gifts can replace your presence and that devalues your child's sense of self-worth."

RSVP

The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) has opportunities for volunteers 55 years and older. RSVP will match volunteers' skills and interests to community agencies' needs. The program operates from Community and Senior Services, 3301 Sinclair. For more information, call 689-6103. A sample of current opportunities include:

■ Activities assistant needed for nursing home residents. Flexible time, six and eights hours per week. Assist activities director with patient participation, group activities and individuals.

■ Set construction to costume design, office assistants to bartenders; a local theater needs volunteers to help with the many duties of producing live performances. There are a great number of opportunities, many of which are short-term commitments.

■ Disabled seniors need wheelchair ramps built for their homes. Carpentry skills and tools are required, but supplies are available.

Never too late for romance

By Barbara Mayer
Associated Press

Just as the bride and groom were about to cut the wedding cake, 16 members of the University Glee Club of New York, clad in white tie and tails, serenaded them in perfect harmony.

The song, "Love Me and The World Is Mine," was a romantic reprise. It was the tune the groom, Barry Phelps, was singing two years earlier on the night he spotted his future bride, Audrey Wertheim, in the audience.

Their eyes had locked during a performance by the Metronomes, a small group made up of members of the glee club, including Phelps.

"I saw those big blue eyes in the back of the room and I sang directly to her, recalls Phelps. "As soon as we finished the set, I went over and introduced myself."

Wertheim, 60, is the owner of a public relations and party planning firm in New York. Phelps, 62, is a venture capitalist in Greenwich, Conn. Their May, 1993, wedding — a tea dance in a private New York City club — was her first and his third.

"One does not usually get married at 60 for the first time," says Wertheim. "It was the last thing in the world that I expected, but it was magic."

The couple decided last winter to wed. About two and a half months before the May date, they selected the site at a club to which both belong. A ceremony with about 75 guests followed by a tea dance for about 125 was their choice.

They wanted to carry the romance of their meeting and courtship into their wedding. These touches of sentiment included the glee club serenade, departure in a horse-drawn carriage festooned with flowers, a booklet of love poems as favors, and a whirlwind honeymoon at a cottage in England and a chateau in France.

In fairy tales, there is a godmother to take care of the details. In reality, magic moments take a great deal of planning.

Wertheim expected to plan her own wedding with no more difficulty than any other party. After all, she has been a special events planner for decades. After going it alone for about six weeks, she hired a florist-party planner to order and arrange the flowers and to set up the bar and tea table. She also asked a friend who is a special events planner to help with some last-minute party details.

"I had never done a wedding and had no idea that it was so time-consuming. The cake people said, 'You should have ordered your cake months ago.'"

Four weeks before the wedding she went to order engraved invitations and discovered it normally takes at least three weeks for the work to be done. She ended by having a printer she knew rush a single invitation as a favor to her. This was reproduced photographically at a fast copy place instead of being engraved.

Audrey Wertheim and Barry Phelps are all smiles after their wedding ceremony in a New York City club. Wertheim is 60; her bridegroom is 62. "One does not usually get married at 60 for the first time," she said. "It was the last thing in the world that I expected, but it was magic."

There was no question who would provide the music. The couple hired the well-known bandleader, Lester Lanin, whom both have known for many years. He not only agreed to do the wedding, despite the short three weeks notice, but led the band himself.

"He had a booking at 8 p.m., but luckily our wedding was from 4 to 8, so he sandwiched us in," says Wertheim.

Months are normally required to select a dress and have it made. Gene London, an acquaintance who specializes in theatrical design, agreed to create dresses for the bride and her two attendants in record time.

The ceremony took place in a garden-like room with arched windows, a brick floor and floral wallpaper. Then guests moved into a reception room for hors d'oeuvres and dancing from 5 to 8 p.m., with the cake cutting at 7:30 p.m.

> — Audrey Wertheim, bride

What's a wedding without at least one or two last-minute snafus? The several that occurred only made the day more special to the bride and groom. The minister, a personal friend, became indisposed and was unable to attend. In his absence, another minister read the Episcopalian service as well as a moving personal message from the minister to the couple.

Earlier, at the last fitting for her cream-colored, long satin dress, Wertheim and London had decided it needed something. So, a few days before the wedding, London took the dress back to the drawing boards to add a cowl collar.

The finished dress arrived with London at 3:55 p.m. for the scheduled 4 p.m. ceremony. Her attendants were pacing the floor, but Wertheim remained serene.

The ceremony got under way at 4:30 p.m. The bride was escorted down the aisle by two close friends, as the band struck up the tune to "Get Me To The Church On Time."

'Nest egg' distribution explained

DENVER (AP) — Over the years, you have built up a nest egg in a company pension and-or a profit-sharing plan, and the time has come to retire. The money is earmarked for a comfortable retirement now and also to provide an income stream to a spouse or other beneficiary following your death.

To ensure this scenario is carried out, federal law requires that the payout from a qualified plan to a married couple at retirement be an annuity (stream of annual payments) for the life of the participant in the plan.

In addition, the law calls for a survivor annuity of at least half this size payable to the participant's spouse if he or she lives longer than the participant. This arrangment is known as a Qualified and Joint Survivor Annuity.

However, this doesn't mean that couples must take distribution of the funds in this manner, says Kathryn Ioannides, assistant director of academic programs and courses at the National Endowment for Financial Education.

"In fact, if you don't want to, there's no reason you have to keep your retirement dollars in the company pension plan, if the plan offers alternatives. There are couples for whom the QJSA is clearly the most appropriate choice, but this isn't true for everyone," she said.

However, to alter the joint annuity distribution of funds from the plan, your spouse must waive his or her right to a QJSA. This waiver must be made in writing, signed before a witness and given to the plan administrator. Once this is done, the recipient has available all the other options offered by the plan.

One option could be to continue receiving distributions from the pension fund based only on the life expectancy of the retiree. This leads to larger payments during the retiree's life, because the annuity is paying out on the basis of one lifetime instead of two.

By electing this option, however, the couple also forfeits any continued benefits to the surviving spouse should the recipient die first. "And these benefits often include more than just a series of payments but extend to health and other benefits accruable to the recipient or beneficiary of a company pension," Ioannides said.

"The retiree could also take a lump sum distribution of all the funds accumulated in the pension fund, and have the fund's trustee roll these over directly into an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). This preserves the tax-free status of the principal and allows the couple greater control over investment of their retirement money."

"However, should you decide to roll over funds from a qualified plan to an IRA, make sure you understand the tax implications and procedural requirements," Ioannides said.

The greater control and flexibility available through an IRA is particularly appealing to couples with ample resources and more aggressive investment styles than the typical pension fund.

"In contrast, couples who might opt for the QJSA are those who are concerned about safety of some minimum cash flow during the time both spouses are alive and during the survivor's life.

"Also, if there are other benefits tied to being a participant in the qualified plan, it might be a good idea to remain in the plan rather than taking a lump sum distribution and opening an IRA account."

Mine sweeper to aid search for helicopter, three missing

GALVESTON (AP) — The USS Dextrous, a Navy mine sweeper, was on its way to Galveston on Thursday to aid in the search for a helicopter and three people still missing in the Gulf of Mexico.

The helicopter was carrying five people when it crashed Wednesday in the Gulf, killing one person and injuring the pilot. The three missing passengers included two U.S. Coast Guard inspectors from the Marine Safety Office in Galveston.

Divers and other rescuers Thursday continued to search the crash site, about eight miles southeast of Galveston's Scholes Field.

"We've found nothing. We're continuing the search," Coast Guard Ensign Rusty Sloane said late Thursday afternoon. "We're going to continue through the night."

The Dextrous, based at Ingleside in the Corpus Christi area, was scheduled to arrive early Friday and will be used to try and detect the submerged helicopter, Sloane said.

Sloane said although the Coast Guard had found no signs of the missing three, they were not presumed dead.

The six-person Aerospatiale 350B-1, belonging to Houston-based Sea Link Helicopters Inc., was taking the Coast Guard inspectors to an offshore tanker when it went down at 9:10 a.m. CDT Wednesday.

Two men were taken to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston from the crash.

Richard Gould, 33, of Webster was pronounced dead of injuries, said hospital spokesman Mary Powledge. Gould's body was recovered by a fishing boat.

Trionics Inc. President Ken D'Ancicco said Gould was on his way to service the satellite navigation system on the supertanker Settebello.

The helicopter's civilian pilot, 46-year-old Tony Loague of Houston, was hospitalized in stable condition, said a University of Texas Medical Branch official.

A fisherman who helped rescue the pilot said crew members on at least 15 shrimp boats ignored victims as they worked nearby.

A shrimp boat passed within 30 feet of the pilot as he clung to an overturned life raft, said sport fisherman Philip Nunn of La Marque.

"They had to see it," said the 42-year-old Nunn, a demolition company owner. "They passed him up."

Police arrest couple on abuse charge, remove 4 children

MARSHALL (AP) — A Harrison County couple has been charged with injury to a child, and officials removed four of six children from their home, including one child whom authorities say was found in a weed-choked pen.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Detective Mike Alexander of the Harrison County sheriff's department.

"When I saw the child in that pen, clutching the fence and looking out at us ... it looked like something picked out of a World War II concentration camp scene. The child was skin on bones and he was penned up in those weeds with a couple of dirty toys. ... I couldn't believe it."

Gary Bourgeault, 38, and his wife, Sally, 37, were arrested for injury to a child in connection with their 9-year-old adopted son. They were released a few hours later on $5,000 personal recognizance bonds set by Justice of the Peace Sadie Clay.

The four children, two adopted children and twin foster children ranging in age from 6 to 9, were removed from the home last week. One child had a black eye and bruises, and all four of the children appeared severely malnourished, law officials said.

The Bourgeaults' two teen-age children were allowed to remain in the home.

The two foster children were under the care of Gregg County Child Protective Services.

Officials were alerted to the children after the Bourgeaults called to report their 9-year-old had run away July 3.

"Our department along with a number of volunteer firemen combed the area for hours looking for the boy," said Harrison County Sheriff Bob Green. "I found it rather strange that some 30 people were out looking for this boy and the parents stayed at home to sleep. The father didn't even come out of the house to talk to us."

The couple told Harrison County Sheriff Bob Green the boy had been sent to sit in a shed behind the house as punishment.

It turned into a chase and shootout with police that left convicted felon J.L. Quincy dead shortly after midnight Thursday.

Then, inside the car Quincy was driving, came a gruesome discovery: The bullet-riddled body of an elderly good Samaritan.

Police believe Quincy knew what time 67-year-old Elmer Rinehart would be getting off work and heading home to Ralls with a wallet full of cash. Rinehart was robbed and shot four times in the head and once in the neck when he stopped to help Quincy on the side of the road, police say.

Quincy pocketed Rinehart's wallet — containing $2,718 in cash — and drove off in the elderly man's car, said police spokesman Bill Morgan.

The officer who spotted the speeding vehicle had no idea Rinehart's body was slumped upside-down in the front passenger seat, Morgan said.

"A chance encounter resulted in the discovery of a homicide," he said. "This aptly illustrates what an unpredictable, dangerous job these officers face every day."

Texas Department of Criminal Justice records show Quincy, 47, was paroled three years ago from prison, where Dallas County sent him in 1973 for aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. He went back to prison in 1980 for violating parole in Randall County.

Morgan said Quincy wrecked Rinehart's car into a ditch during pursuit by police. He then got out and ran across a field, Morgan said.

The suspect fired at one officer and threatened another with a .22-caliber revolver, he said. Officer Billy Koontz shot Quincy in the head when he refused to drop the weapon, Morgan said.

No officers were wounded.

Morgan described Rinehart as a good Samaritan who apparently stopped to help Quincy, who used to live in Ralls, about 30 miles east of Lubbock. Police found a large pool of blood near Quincy's abandoned truck on the side of a road east of Lubbock, he said.

Police found jumper cables inside the car and blood-splattered pliers nearby, as if the men were trying to charge a battery, Morgan said.

Rinehart and Quincy were Lubbock County's fourth and fifth homicides since July 7.

The news shocked employees at Plains Co-op Oil Mill in Lubbock. Rinehart had worked there since 1978 and planned to retire this year, lead supervisor James Tinsley said.

"He was a real good employee," Tinsley said. "He always seemed happy, always laughing."

Watson, Daly near lead

■ Tom Watson and John Daly play "different" courses Thursday on their way to a tie for fourth in the British Open's first round.

By Ron Sirak
AP Sports Writer

TURNBERRY, Scotland — Tom Watson and John Daly, two very different golfers, played two very different golf courses in Thursday's first round of the British Open. And it came out the same for them.

■ British Open

Both played the Ailsa Course at Turnberry and both shot 2-under-par 68s, three strokes behind leader Gregory Turner of New Zealand.

But Watson, precise and methodical, was among those lucky enough to play early in the day, getting some sun, little wind — by Scottish standards — and no rain.

By afternoon, when the free-swinging Daly teed of, all 1,100 feet of the Ailsa Craig was lost in the clouds and a cold rain was carried on biting gusts off the Firth of Clyde.

It was truly a round of almost two completely different courses — with the wind and against it — and almost two completely different days — before the wind and rain rolled in and after. That combination conspired to produce a bizarre leaderboard.

One stroke behind Turner was Jonathan Lomas of England with a 66 and two back was Andrew Magee at 67.

Don King charged

NEW YORK — Don King, the flamboyant promoter and one of the most powerful men in boxing, was charged Thursday with filing a false insurance claim for $350,000 with Lloyds of London.

King

King, the president of Don King Productions Inc., allegedly sought the money after 1991 fight between Julio Cesar Chavez and Harold Brazier was canceled because Chavez had cut his nose.

"I am completely innocent," King said in a written statement. "I have done nothing to warrant this action. I believe in the American system of justice. ... I will be cleared."

King allegedly tried to get money from Lloyd's by filing a contract with the London-based insurer that was not the contract actually signed between King and Chavez.

Cowboys sign Bates

IRVING — Safety Bill Bates, a fixture on the Dallas Cowboys for the past 12 seasons, and long snapper Dale Hellestrae were signed to one-year contracts Thursday.

The Cowboys have 69 players under contract with training camp set to open Friday. Drills start Saturday in Austin.

"Bill Bates represents the best in all of us," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said. "He's talented enough and qualified enough to make a great contribution around here for years to come."

No other terms of the contracts were announced.

"I've devoted the last decade to the Cowboys," Bates told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "I'd be just as devoted even after I retire."

Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple said the team hopes to reach an agreement with remaining unsigned veteran Tommie Agee by Friday.

No NBA decision

NEW YORK — There was no decision Thursday on the court case between the NBA and its Players Association.

Both sides are awaiting a decision from U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy on their dispute over the salary cap, the college draft and free agency.

Angels collar Shreveport

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland Angels used blue collar and white collar magic at Christensen Stadium Thursday night to forge a 5-2 victory over the Shreveport Captains in the first game of a five-game Texas League series.

Starting pitcher Dom Johnson (5-5) did the dirty work for 7⅓ innings while clean-up batter Chris Pritchett provided the dramatics with a three-run double in the fifth inning to decide the game.

It may not have been Johnson's best outing of the year, but he gave up only two runs, one unearned, to stake the Angels to a win in the season's first meeting between these two teams.

"I didn't have my split finger or curve working for me, but I used the sinker to get out of some trouble," Johnson said. "I hope we can just carry this out the rest of the series."

Johnson walked four batters and faced enough "trouble," but he was up to the task in a gutty performance for a reliever turned starter.

"As a starting pitcher, I figure you are going to face three jams in a game," Johnson said. "It's how you do in those three jams that determines how you come out.

"I had the bases loaded in the fourth, had runners at first and third with no outs in the sixth and runners at first and third with two outs in the seventh and gave up only one run. That was key in the game against a good hitting team like Shreveport. I know those guys. They can hit."

As far as the four walks — and a near hit batsman — were concerned, Johnson felt that was almost to his advantage.

"In my last start against Tulsa, I wasn't aggressive inside and I got hurt," Johnson said. "You have to establish both sides of the plate or you won't win at this level. I, at least, felt I did that tonight."

Pritchett's bases clearing double off Cap starter Chris Hancock (5-5) in the fifth turned out to be the big hit of the night, but he didn't feel like it would be at the time. That's where Pritchett tipped his hat to

AUSTIN (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys open their 35th training camp on Friday with only the third coach in their history. Welcome to "Switzerland."

And more than just the near-100 degree Texas heat will be on former Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer.

Tom Landry and Jimmy Johnson each won two Super Bowls with the Cowboys. Switzer, who won three national championships for the Sooners, will be considered nothing less than a failure if he doesn't produce a Super Bowl victory.

He knows it. And he's ready.

"No coach in the NFL will have more focus on them than I will this year," Switzer said. "That's OK. I can handle it."

Title game won't feature 'prevent' defense

Brazilian fans raise a banner at their World Cup semifinal against Sweden Wednesday. Brazil plays Italy Sunday in the Rose Bowl in the tournament final.

■ Sunday's World Cup final has two teams, Italy and Brazil, not afraid to play offense.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Brazil is looking forward to an opponent willing to play soccer. Italy is thrilled to be that opponent.

After a frustrating semifinal victory over Sweden, which went into the prevent defense at the outset and only came out of it when it fell behind with nine minutes left, the Brazilians will welcome just about anyone ready to provide a challenge.

On Sunday, the Italians should give them the kind of challenge the Swedes didn't.

"We want to play the game to win, and have the other team play to win," said midfielder Jorginho, whose crossing pass found the head of Romario for the goal in Brazil's 1-0 victory over the reluctant Swedes. "Against Sweden, I was not frustrated, but I was becoming impatient. When you attack and attack and don't score, you press more. Then you leave your end of the field open and that is very dangerous."

Not against the ultraconservative Swedes. But certainly against the Italians, who once embraced the layback style, then made a turnaround to a more balanced manner under coach Arrigo Sacchi.

"The most difficult time for us is just starting," said star striker Roberto Baggio, whose two goals led Italy past Bulgaria 2-1 in the other semifinal. Baggio has a hamstring injury that could prevent him from playing on Sunday, or at least limit his effectiveness if he does play. Top defender Alessandro Costacurta was suspended after getting his second yellow card against Bulgaria.

"At the moment his chances to play are 50 percent," Italian team doctor Andrea Ferretti said Thursday of Baggio, who has a light or first degree right leg strain.

Palmer doubles, homers to lead Rangers

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Dean Palmer doubled in a run and Manuel Lee brought in two with a double in a four-run second inning Thursday night that sent the Texas Rangers past the Toronto Blue Jays 7-3.

Palmer, who also hit his 18th homer, is 24-for-64 (.375) in his last 17 games, with 10 homers and 20 RBIs.

The first-place Rangers have won eight of their last 12.

Hector Fajardo (5-5) gave the Rangers an effective start, allowing three runs and four hits in six innings.

Juan Gonzalez started the second-inning rally with a one-out single off Todd Stottlemyre (5-7), who has dropped his last four decisions. Gonzalez went to third on Palmer's double before Stottlemyre hit Rusty Greer to load the bases.

Ivan Rodriguez's sacrifice fly brought in the first run, and Lee drove in two more with a double off the glove of left fielder Mike Huff. Jeff Frye's RBI double gave the Rangers a 4-0 lead.

Palmer's two-out homer in the third gave Texas a 5-0 advantage before the Blue Jays scored three in the fifth on Pat Borders' RBI single and Devon White's two-run triple past diving center fielder David Hulse.

AL Roundup

Texas added a pair of insurance runs in the sixth off reliever Danny Cox. Rodriguez and Lee hit singles and advanced on Bill Ripken's sacrifice. Rodriguez scored on Hulse's sacrifice fly, with Ripken advancing to third, and scoring on Cox's wild pitch.

Red Sox 2, Athletics 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Roger Clemens threw his 12th career two-hitter, leading Boston to a victory over Oakland.

Clemens (8-4), who has won three Cy Youngs and an MVP award but never pitched a no-hitter, didn't allow the A's a hit until Ruben Sierra led off the seventh by grounding a single through the hole into right.

Clemens was within two outs of his second career one-hitter when Troy Neel his his 11th homer. He struck out seven and walked four in his third complete game.

Boston scored in the fifth and again in the seventh, and that was more than enough run support for Clemens, who has thrown three two-hitters this season.

Oakland starter Todd Van Poppel (5-8), who is a career 0-4 with a 9.35 ERA against the Red Sox, pitched four scoreless innings. But in the fifth, he loaded the bases after giving up a leadoff single to Scott Cooper and walking Berryhill and Tim Naehring.

He then struck John Valentin in the hip to force in a run. The rookie right-hander got out of the jam by getting Mo Vaughn to hit into a fielder's choice and retiring Andre Dawson on a deep fly ball.

White Sox 6, Indians 3

CHICAGO — Robin Ventura's RBI single capped a two-run rally in the seventh inning as Chicago moved back into first in the AL Central for the first time in a month, beating Cleveland.

The White Sox were last in first when tied for the top with Cleveland on June 13. They now lead the Indians by one game, and the teams will meet seven more times in the next 10 days and then not again in the regular season. Chicago is 4-1 against Cleveland this year.

Alex Fernandez (8-7), who gave up three runs in the first two innings, settled down and retired 13 straight at one point before Carlos Baerga singled in the eighth. Fernandez finished with a seven-hitter, walked one and a career-high 12 strikeouts. It was his fourth complete game.

Ventura's third hit on his 27th birthday was a blooper over short off reliever Derek Lilliquist as the Sox rallied from a 3-0 deficit for their seventh straight victory.

Trailing 3-2 in the seventh against Charles Nagy (7-6), the White Sox loaded the bases on singles by Norberto Martin and Tim Raines and a walk to Frank Thomas. Julio Franco then hit a tying sacrifice fly to finish Nagy, and Ventura punched an 0-2 pitch over short to score Raines.

Ron Karkovice hit his 11th homer in the eighth off Eric Plunk for a two-run cushion. Raines, who had three hits, added an RBI single in the inning.

Albert Belle hit his 25th homer, a 427-foot, two-out, two-run shot in the first following a single by Baerga.

The Indians got another run in the second as Sandy Alomar singled with one away and Wayne Kirby and Kenny Lofton had two-out singles.

Nagy lost his control in the fifth, throwing 11 straight balls and walking two batters before Raines hit an RBI single on a 3-2 pitch. With runners at first and third, Lofton then made a nice running catch at the center field fence to rob Thomas of extra bases, but the sacrifice fly made it 3-2.

Royals 5, Tigers 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kevin Appier allowed two hits in the first inning and nothing else through eight, leading Kansas City to a victory over Detroit.

Appier (6-6) allowed a leadoff single by Tony Phillips and a two-run home run by Travis Fryman in the first, but did not give up another hit. He walked three and struck out eight in eight innings to improve his career mark against the Tigers to 9-1. He also snapped a career-long five-start winless stretch.

Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth for his 15th save.

Wally Joyner, who missed 16 games with a sore shoulder, went 3-for-4 with two doubles and two RBIs in his first game since coming off the disabled list.

Tim Belcher (8-9), who had won seven of his last nine decisions, fell to 0-4 in his career against Kansas City. Belcher, a 13-4 loser to Appier in April, gave up nine hits, walked four and struck out five in his third complete game.

Fryman's 14th homer gave the Tigers a 2-0 lead, but the Royals came back with two in the bottom of the first on Felix Jose's bases-loaded double.

Brewers 6, Twins 4

"When you play here you might as well expect something weird," Brewers manager Phil Garner said after Milwaukee's victory over the Twins. "I can't really remember ever having an ordinary game here."

A sampling of Thursday's oddities:

— Kent Hrbek drove in two runs with a double that got lost in the Metrodome ceiling.

— Pedro Munoz sent a pop fly toward the first base seats, only to have it hit the roof and fall into the glove of Brewers first baseman Kevin Seitzer.

— The Twins were 2-for-18 with runners in scoring position.

— Milwaukee rookie catcher Mike Matheny picked off pinch runner Alex Cole from third base to end the eighth with the score tied at 4-4.

—Kirby Puckett's fly left with two on and two out in the ninth was dropped just foul by Brewers right-fielder Matt Mieske.

— And Milwaukee rookie Jeff Cirillo won the game with a pinch-hit ninth-inning two-run double that gave him three major league RBIs.

Turner Ward and Matt Mieske both hit one-out singles off Carl Willis (1-4) before Cirillo greeted reliever Mark Guthrie with a double to left-center.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Houston pitchers threw two run-scoring wild pitches and the Astros' usually reliable defense broke down in a five-run Pittsburgh fifth inning as the Pirates won 8-2 Thursday night behind rookie Jon Lieber.

Lieber (5-4) bounced back after a pair of rough starts against NL Central Division-leading Cincinnati to pitch his first major league complete game, strike out a career-high eight and walk nobody.

Lieber, a rookie right-hander who had allowed 10 runs over 10 innings in a pair of losses to the Reds, spaced eight hits, including solo homers by Kevin Bass and Ken Caminiti.

The Pirates had only four RBIs while scoring eight runs, with the other four runs coming on the two wild pitches, shortstop Andujar Cedeno's error — only the 53rd in 89 games by the NL's second-best defense — and a double-play bases. Andy Van Slyke narrowly grounder.

NL Roundup

With the score 2-2 in the fifth, Don Slaught singled for his 11th hit in 13 at-bats and Lieber, only 2-for-24 in the majors, punched a single into left field past third baseman Caminiti, who was in expecting a bunt.

After Orlando Merced was intentionally walked, Cedeno couldn't field Jeff King's high-hop grounder up the middle that was ruled a single, scoring Garcia and chasing Houston starter Darryl Kile (6-4).

Bell scored on Dave Clark's force-play grounder and Merced made it 7-2 by scoring on Tom Edens' wild pitch. Kile, charged with only four earned runs among the seven he allowed, also threw a run-scoring wild pitch in the second.

Marlins 5, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Florida got to Steve Avery for four runs in the first inning and held off slumping Atlanta for its fourth consecutive victory.

The Braves, meanwhile, lost their second straight, fifth in seven games and 10th in 16 games and fell to 2-5 on their current 10-game homestand.

Jerry Browne keyed Florida's first inning with his first home run of the season and Benito Santiago capped it with a two-run single off Avery (6-3).

Mark Gardner (3-2) earned the win for the Marlins. The right-hander gave up six hits, three runs, walked two and struck out two in 5 2-3 innings.

After Browne hit his solo homer in the first, Gary Sheffield extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a double and Jeff Conine walked. Greg Colbrunn then singled in Sheffield and Santiago followed with a two-run single.

Rockies 8, Cardinals 1

DENVER — Andres Galarraga hit a two-run homer after a rain delay, helping David Nied earn his ninth victory as Colorado beat St. Louis.

Galarraga's 26th homer — which set a Colorado team record, eclipsing the 25 homers hit by Charlie Hayes last season — came off reliever Mike Perez in the sixth inning and broke a 1-1 tie.

Perez (2-3) had replaced starter Vicente Palacios to start the sixth, after play had been interrupted for 1 hour and 19 minutes because of rain. With one out, Dante Bichette collected his third of four singles, and Galarraga followed with his homer to left field.

Cubs 4, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Mark Parent's two-run homer in the seventh inning gave the Chicago Cubs the lead and they held on for a victory over Cincinnati.

Parent's third homer of the season came after John Smiley (9-9) had walked Steve Buechele. Todd Haney went in to run for Buechele, and Parent hit Smiley's first pitch over the left-field wall for a 3-2 Cubs lead.

Steve Trachsel (8-6) scattered five hits over six innings, walked five and struck out four. He is unbeaten on the road, where he improved to 7-0. Randy Myers got the final four outs for his 18th save.

The Reds got a run in the second on a single by Bret Boone and a double by Thomas Howard, who was starting in left field in place of Kevin Mitchell.

Mitchell missed a flight from his home in San Diego, where he spent the All-Star break, and was not in uniform when the game started. He arrived in the middle of the game, pinch-hit in the eighth and drew a walk.

Chicago tied the game at 1-1 in the third on a groundout by Rey Sanchez after Smiley had walked the first two batters and misplayed a sacrifice bunt.

Hal Morris gave Cincinnati a 2-1 lead with a solo homer in the fifth. It was the eighth homer this year for Morris, who leads the National League in hits with 121, and Reds in RBIs with 68.

After taking the lead on Parent's homer, Chicago added a run in the eighth on consecutive singles by Sanchez, Mark Grace and Sammy Sosa.

Giants 8, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Darryl Strawberry hit his first homer in over a year, a grand slam, and drove in five runs as San Francisco won its fifth straight game.

LOCAL SPORTS

Clark leads Mid-City to win

Sean Clark got a win in relief as Midland Mid-City beat Midland Northern 2-1 Thursday at Bluebird Park. The loser's bracket win puts Mid-City in the championship round of the District 3 Little League Tournament against Midland Tower at 7 p.m. today.

Clark relieved Matt Fielder. Collin Gilliam got the loss for Northern despite giving up only four hits. Northern's Joe Frazier had a double and Mid-City's Jeff Brock hit a first-inning home run in the errorless game.

Eastern, Western to fight for finals

After the dust cleared in Thursday's Senior League District 3 Tournament at Simon Field, either Midland Western or Midland Eastern are left with having to win three consecutive games to keep the title in Midland.

Thursday, Midland Western stayed alive with a 4-3 win over Odessa Jim Parker behind the pitching of Aaron Erdwurm. Jumbo Valdez and Matt Whitaker each doubled in the game and Blake Moravick had a triple.

Eastern lost a tough 1-0 decision to Odessa Sherwood in 10 innings, putting Sherwood in the championship round at 8 p.m. today. Eastern will have to play Western at 5:30 p.m. for the right to be Sherwood's opponent. If Sherwood loses the 8 p.m. game, the two teams will have to play again Saturday at 8 p.m. in the tournament's deciding game.

Sherwood won the extra inning contest with a run in the 10th on a bases loaded grounder and Eastern couldn't make a play at the plate. The game featured a pitching duel between Heath moody of Sherwood and Michael Carrasco of Eastern.

American gains Junior finals

Midland American will face Odessa Sherwood in the championship round of the Junior League District 3 Tournament at 5:30 p.m. today at Redfern Field.

Should American beat Sherwood in that game a second game will follow to decide the championship.

Sherwood remained unbeaten in the tournament Thursday with a 10-8 win over Odessa Floyd Gwynn with Mark Varela and Quantrell Pride hitting doubles and Chris Castillo hitting a triple in the game that went 12 innings.

Midland American then eliminated Floyd Gwynn late Thursday, 14-3, with Tony Zarate picking up the win. Scott Worley and Matt Winston each had doubles. That put the Midland team in the finals against Sherwood today.

Jacobs wins sudden death

Josh Jacobs won a sudden-death playoff over Jeremiah Luttrell Thursday to take the day's North Texas PGA West Texas Junior Golf Tour boys 16-18 division. Jacobs and Luttrell were tied at 74 after regulation play at the Midland Country Club.

Michael Pruitt won the boys 14-15 division shooting a 75. Devin Day took the girls 12-14 group win.

Results Thursday from the NTPGA West Texas Junior Tour:
Boys 16-18: 1. Josh Jacobs 74, 2. Jeremiah Luttrell 74, 3. Carey Gentry 76 (won playoff). Boys 14-15: 1. Michael Pruitt 75, 2. Austin Burk 80 (won playoff). 3. Ben Gulley 80. Boys 11-12: 1. Cody Loverin 74, 2. Kyle Davis 76, 3. Sean O'Hair 80. Boys 10-11: (nine holes) 1. Jarryd Foreman 41, 2. Jack Drennan 44, 3. David Campbell 46. Girls 10-11: 1. Betsy Franklin 90. Girls 12-14: 1, Devin Day 110, 2. Amy Roach 112, 3. Liz Wardlaw 115.

The Midland Blue Diamonds placed third recently in the Texas State ASA Division I softball tournament in Lake Jackson.

The Blue Diamonds started the double elimination tournament with a 7-1 win over Wichita Falls Lightning, but fell to the loser's bracket in a 2-1 loss to China Springs Unique Machine.

The Midland team then won consecutive 1-0 shutouts to gain the finals of the loser's bracket where they were eliminated by the Galveston Tropics 2-1.

The third place finish earned the Blue Diamonds a berth in the ASA Regional Tournament, which will be held July 22-24 in Temple.

Teasley aces

Mary Ann Teasley hit a hole-in-one on the No. 8, West course at Green Tree Country Club Thursday. Teasley used a 3-wood on the 136-yard, par-3 with Jan Tomor, Sara McDonald and Flossy Larsh witnessing.

PGA rookie Brisky leads Deposit

Associated Press

MADISON, Miss. — PGA Tour rookie Mike Brisky rolled in a 30-foot putt on his first hole and went on to shoot a 6-under-par 66 Thursday, joining Mike Sullivan and Brandel Chamblee atop the leaderboard of the Deposit Guaranty Golf Classic.

First-round play was suspended because of rain, leaving 56 players on the course. They will return Friday morning to complete their rounds.

Brisky, playing the back nine first, was 2-under after three holes, hitting 5-irons to the green on the 407-yard, par-4 10th and the 171-yard, par-3 12th. After the 30-foot putt to open the round, he made a 25-footer at 12.

Brisky, a two-time winner on the T.C. Jordan Tour last year, had his best PGA Tour round. He has made just one cut in seven previous PGA tournaments and that was after an opening-round 68 at the Shell Houston Open in May.

Brisky had just one bogey, at the 465-yard, par-4 4th after hitting his driver twice and missing the green. He rebounded with a two-putt par at the 522-yard, par-4 5th.

Sullivan, a two-time PGA Tour winner, had three putts of 30-35 feet, a 20-foot chip-in and a 20-foot fringe putt in his seven-birdie, one-bogey round, his best in 41 rounds this year.

Chamblee birdied the 409-yard, par-4 17th and the 532-yard, par-5 18th just before the rain began.

Sean Murphy, Brian Hennicker and Stan Utley were one stroke back with 5-under rounds on the 7,157-yard Annandale Golf Club course, where the tournament is being played for the first time after 26 years in Hattiesburg.

John Elliott was at 6-under through 13 holes, but bogeyed the par-4 14th just as play was suspended.

Murphy was a four-time winner on the Nike Tour last year, and Hennicker won four times on the same tour in 1992, when it was known as the Ben Hogan Tour.

Murphy had birdies on five of his first seven holes before a double-bogey at the 409-yard, par-4 17th. Murphy went for an island landing area off the 17th tee, instead of a safer shot to the left of a creek. It cost him two shots after he hit a 3-wood into the water and then three-putted.

John Flannery birdied 16 through 18 to go four under for his first nine. He then had nine straight pars after making the turn to join a group of four players at 68.

The start of the first round was delayed two hours as the grounds crew worked to make the course playable after two inches of rain fell Wednesday following periods of rain earlier in the week.

The "lift, clean and place" rule is in effect for the first two rounds.

Archer rallies Sacramento to CFL win

HAMILTON, Ontario (AP) — David Archer passed for 374 yards and three touchdowns to rally Sacramento to a 25-22 victory over Hamilton in the annual CFL Hall of Fame game Thursday night.

Archer hit Troy Mills with a 59-yard scoring pass to overcome a 22-17 deficit with 5:01 to play in the fourth quarter.

Punter Mark Gardere rounded out the scoring for the Gold Miners (1-1) with a 56-yard single with 2:14 left.

The Tiger-Cats' second loss in as many games tarnished a fine effort by kicker Paul Osbaldiston, who kicked five field goals, and the Hamilton defense, which intercepted two passes and recovered two fumbles. Defensive tackle Reggie Rogers also had three sacks.

Rod Harris and James Pruitt had the other touchdowns for Sacramento and Anderson added a field goal and three conversions.

Sacramento opened the scoring with 6:47 left in the first quarter on Archer's 29-yard pass to Harris. Hamilton got on the scoreboard with 2:10 left in the period on Osbaldiston's 32-yard field goal.

POST

Summer's end is just around the corner and it's time to start making arrangements for education and care of Midland's children. To assist you with information on where education and care is available, the Midland Reporter-Telegram is publishing it's annual Children's Education and Child Care Directory on Sunday, August 7th.

This Directory is a vehicle used to reach parents with information about the services that are available in the Midland area and who provides them. The parents of children in the Midland area have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality education and care. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality education and care in our area.

As a provider of these services in the Midland area, you will want your facility represented in this special Directory with an ad, as well as a story, photo and a dot on the map showing where you are located.

Special ad packages ranging from 8" to 65" are available, as well as rates for ads running without a story, photo, etc.

Deadline for Children's Education and Child Care Directory is Thursday, July 28th. To reserve your ad space, please call

Baseball strike not discussed

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball players and owners spent three hours Thursday talking about issues such as split doubleheaders, not the possibility of a strike or a salary cap.

Union head Donald Fehr said players will make their first contract proposal Monday, although he admitted it's not likely to solve the major dispute about a salary cap.

"Hopefully, we'll have a lot to talk about," Fehr said. "But we haven't said we'll re-invent the wheel, so people shouldn't expect that."

The union's executive board said during the All-Star break that it expected to set a strike deadline within two weeks. But Fehr said he did not mention a walkout during his three-hour discussion with owners' negotiator Richard Ravitch.

"Not when I was in the room," Fehr said.

The second half of the season began Thursday, and Bip Roberts and Craig Shipley of the San Diego Padres were among a few players who attended the bargaining session. The Padres played in New York at night.

The sides spent the afternoon talking about lesser issues — should there be day-night doubleheaders, do suspended players get credit for time on the roster, how much housing help do players called up from the minors get — and made some progress, Fehr said.

Ravitch presented the salary cap plan June 14, and has waited a month for a response. Players have publicly rejected the idea of a cap, but have not made a formal presentation.

"They said they didn't like what we proposed," he said. "Maybe they'll come up with a better idea.

"We have not gotten their proposal so it's hard to have a meaningful discussion on gut issues," he said. "The guts of this issue is an economic issue."

Among the other lesser matters to discuss, all of them contained in the owners' proposal, are:

— a requirement that traded players report to their new teams within 48 hours.

— the elimination of the off-day for travel after a day game in the Pacific time zone is followed by a night game in the Eastern time zone.

— the elimination of the requirement that players must consent to a rehabilitation assignment in the minors.

Earlier this week, the union said it might be able to make its proposal on Thursday. But Fehr's schedule pushed that back, and he said the owners were not available to meet Friday.

Monday is Fehr's birthday, incidentally. He said the meeting's time would be set to help accomodate any of the Los Angeles Dodgers who might want to attend. The Dodgers begin a series in New York on Monday.

DALLAS: Switzer in Texas country

(From 1C)

Switzer has already been involved in long-range sniping with his predecessor, Johnson, who said Switzer "will be alright as long as he doesn't make any suggestions."

Switzer, who used to coach with Johnson, replied that he didn't appreciate Johnson being in "the catbird's seat" making catty remarks.

"It's uncalled for," Switzer said. "I understand I'll be second-guessed on how the season goes."

Johnson will serve as an analyst for Fox Television this fall on NFC games.

There won't be the adoration for Switzer in Austin that there was for Johnson.

Switzer's feud with former Texas coach Darrell Royal didn't make very many friends in Travis County.

"That was a long time ago," Switzer said. "We're all working for the same thing now."

The defending world champions, who have defeated Buffalo in the last two Super Bowls, report to St. Edward's University and have their first workouts on Saturday. Dallas plays its first exhibition game on July 31, hosting the Minnesota Vikings at Texas Stadium.

It won't take long for a scrimmage. The annual "Blue-White" game will be played on Sunday.

However, don't look for Switzer to use many veterans.

"Training camp is a time for looking at your younger players," Switzer said. "I know what Emmitt Smith can do."

Switzer also will be looking at replacements for eight Cowboys who took a ride down the lucrative free agent highway.

Such starters as placekicker Eddie Murray, linebacker Kenny Norton, defensive tackles Jimmie Jones and Tony Casillas, safety Thomas Everett, and offensive linemen John Gesek, Kevin Gogan, and Frank Cornish, must be replaced.

"We've got a big job to do there but I think we can do it," Switzer said. "Because of free agency this team won't be as deep as it was the last two years.

"But we have good young players coming up like Chad Hennings at tackle. I think he can become a premier player and he'll get a lot of snaps."

Fullback Daryl Johnston, special teams star Kenny Gant, and wide receiver Michael Irvin will miss work early in camp. Johnson has a cut right foot and Gant had knee and shoulder operations in the off-season.

Race looks to be over

LOURDES, France (AP) — With 10 days still to go in the Tour de France, the race for the title appears to be over. Miguel Indurain has a lead of nearly five minutes and his chief rival has all but conceded.

The 175 remaining riders in the Tour enjoyed their only off-day of this year's race. They were gathering their strength for Friday's

■ Tour de France

12th stage of 127 miles, with two more major climbs, the famous Tourmalet (6,937 feet) and Luz Ardidan (5,625 feet).

Most of the riders could probably use the rest day to recover from the first mountain stage that ended with Indurain leaving a lot of damage in his trail. Among them was Tony Rominger, who was expected to be the only real challenger for this year's race.

Between the individual time trial on Monday and Wednesday's mountain, Rominger lost more than four minutes and declared the race is probably over.

"It's finished for me," Rominger told the French sports daily L'Equipe. "Of course. I am going to continue ... but I can't compete with him."

Rominger struggled up the final climb Wednesday feeling a little sick and called it "one of the blackest days of my life," according to L'Equipe.

Another rider who had a bad day was Italian Claudio Chiappucci, who spat blood on the road and barely finished. At the end of the stage he was surrounded by his Carrera teammates so he was not officially last.

But the six Carrera riders — including Chiappucci — took the last six places of the stage and Chiappucci is now 135th in the overall standings.

He had finished in the top six annually since 1990.

Former Aggie Glenn signs

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Cornerback Aaron Glenn, the New York Jets' first-round draft pick this year, agreed Thursday to a four-year contract reportedly worth more than $4 million.

Glenn, expected to sign next week, will reportedly receive $4.04 million, including a $2.1 million signing bonus.

Glenn, a 5-foot-9, All-American cornerback from Texas A&M, led the nation in punt returns with 339 yards on 17 carries for a 19.2-yard average and two touchdowns.

Glenn also set school records for most passes defensed in a season (13), punt return average for a season (19.2) and most punt return yards in a game (3-131-1 TD).

The Jets said Glenn will join the rest of the rookies and veterans at the start of training camp on July 23 at the team's training complex at Hofstra University.

ANGELS: Johnson, Pritchett lead way in win

(From 1C)

Johnson and relievers John Pricher and Ron Watson, who each pitched one inning of shutout ball down the stretch.

"I was certianly glad to come through in a situation where the bases were loaded, but in this park, you never know if that hit will hold up that early in the game," Pritchett said. "Tonight, you have to give the credit to our pitching staff. They did a great job for us out there. Runs were hard to come by."

But Johnson was pointing fingers back at Pritchett.

"Chris Pritchett's hit was big," Johnson said. "That double lifted the whole dugout. I can't say how much that really lifted the team."

Midland's other two runs came in the third on RBI doubles by J.D. Ramirez and Marquis Riley, who had three hits in the game to go with two stolen bases, his 19th and 20th of an injury riddled season.

Shreveport scored in the third on Marvin Benard's RBI single and again in the sixth when Derek Reid reached on an error and eventually scored on a grounder by Chris Wimmer.

ANGEL DUST: Midland had nine hits, five of which were doubles ... Luis Raven, who hasn't played for Midland since May 26 when he was promoted to Vancouver, finally doesn't lead the Texas League in any category. He was finally passed in home runs on July 12, 47 days after his departure, when El Paso's Scott Talanoa hit his 19th homer. After leaving Midland, Raven led or shared the league in RBIs with 57 for 39 days

Favre inks five-year deal

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Brett Favre signed a five-year contract with the Green Bay Packers Thursday worth a reported $19 million to $20 million.

"I'm very excited to know I'm going to be here for five more years," said Favre, who led the Packers to two straight winning seasons and their first playoff appearance in a decade. "I really feel like this is the team to beat in the next few years."

Named to the Pro Bowl in 1992, the 24-year-old quarterback put up respectable numbers last season but threw 24 interceptions in addition to his 19 touchdown passes.

Neither Favre nor the team disclosed the salary. The Green Bay Press-Gazette said the deal includes a $3 million signing bonus, $500,000 reporting bonus and $1.6 million base salary this season.

The newspaper said $2.1 million of that counts against the Packers' $34.6 million salary cap.

The continuing strike by oil workers in Nigeria sent most energy futures higher on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The strike that began July 4 has spread to other sectors of the economy and efforts to end the walkout have been unsuccessful.

Further, a businessman apparently cheated out of the presidency last year was ordered to stay in jail on treason charges Thursday. The ruling appeared certain to outrage pro-democracy forces that have been behind the strike.

West Texas Intermediate for August delivery was 3 cents higher at $20.18 a barrel.

August natural gas was 2.3 cents lower at $1.977 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Chrysler profits

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. — Chrysler Corp. reported record earnings for the second consecutive quarter, posting a $956 million profit for April through June, 39.6 percent higher than a year ago.

Sales of Chrysler cars and trucks in the United States and Canada were up 5.5 percent from the 1993 quarter. Company officials said Thursday that profit per vehicle was nearly $500 higher.

Dollar advances

NEW YORK — The dollar advanced broadly Thursday for a second-consecutive day, benefiting from strong rallies in the stock and bond markets and supportive comments from high-ranking Clinton administration officials.

On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery rose 50 cents to $383.80 per troy ounce.

The dollar was quoted in late New York trading at 1.5550 marks, up from 1.5405 late Wednesday.

The U.S. currency also advanced in New York to 98.60 yen from 98.30.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared with late Wednesday: 1.3110 Swiss francs, up from 1.2980; 5.3323 French francs, up from 5.2720; 1,547 Italian lire, up from 1,521; and 1.3821 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3808.

The British pound dropped to $1.5595 from $1.5660.

On New York's Comex, silver for current delivery rose 4.7 cents to $5.169 per troy ounce.

Stocks surge

NEW YORK — Stocks staged a powerful rally on Thursday after sluggish economic data sparked a huge runup in bond prices and sent interest rates sharply lower.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 34.97 to 3,739.25, just under its best closing level since June 20.

Retail sales stage June recovery

First-time unemployment claims show larger-than-expected one-week increase

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Retail sales staged a recovery in June, after dropping for two months, and analysts said the economy is continuing to expand at a healthy pace.

The Commerce Department said Thursday that sales climbed 0.6 percent in June, about what most economists predicted but still heartening to those worried that rising interest rates could stall the recovery.

The Labor Department, meanwhile, reported that the number of first-time claims for state unemployment benefits jumped a larger-than-expected 19,000 last week, the biggest increase in two months. Initial claims totaled a seasonally adjusted 363,000 in the week ended July 9.

The sobering claims figures might have a silver lining. They could help calm fears that lower unemployment and larger payrolls will mean inflation-causing labor shortages.

The turnaround in sales was led by durable goods, particularly cars and building materials.

"There's no doubt consumers are still spending. As long as the economy generates jobs and paychecks, nothing will stand in their way," said economist Sandra Shaber of the WEFA Group forecasting service in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

"It's really an encouraging report," said Kermit Baker of the Newton, Mass., forecasting firm, Cahners Economics. "It's an indication higher interest rates won't stall the expansion as much as some feared."

The Federal Reserve has boosted short-term interest rates four times since February, and many analysts expect a fifth increase no later than Aug. 16 when the central bank's policymakers hold their next meeting.

The Clinton administration revised its interest rate forecast Thursday, predicting rates will rise more sharply this year and next. But, said Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, "By any standard, this economy is doing well. And we're doing it with inflation under control."

The Consumer Price Index was up a moderate 0.3 percent in June. But Federal Reserve officials worry that shortages of commodities and workers, and factories nearing capacity, could drive up prices and wages.

Retail sales had dropped a revised 0.4 percent in May — double a month-old 0.2 percent estimate — and 1 percent in April. Those figures were taken as evidence the consumer-led rapid economic growth the nation experienced in the closing months of 1993 had slowed to a more moderate pace.

Retail sales, representing about one-third of the nation's economic activity, totaled $183.8 billion in June, up from $182.7 billion. For the second quarter of this year, sales were 6.8 percent higher than the same three-month period a year ago and have risen in three of the first six months this year.

Sales of durable goods, interest-sensitive big-ticket items, rose 0.8 percent in June after a 1.1 percent decline in May.

Macy ends holdout, OKs Federated merger

NEW YORK (AP) — R.H. Macy & Co. Inc. relinquished its hopes of remaining independent Thursday, agreeing to merge with Federated Department Stores Inc. and form the nation's biggest department store company.

After a definitive merger agreement is reached and Macy emerges from bankruptcy court protection, its Macy's and Bullock's branches will join Bloomingdale's, Burdine's, Lazarus and other big department stores in Federated's portfolio.

Macy, which had hoped to return to public ownership under its current management, ended six months of opposition to Cincinnati-based Federated after weeks of negotiations between Macy and Federated executives and meetings by the Macy board last Friday and Thursday.

All of Macy's creditor groups support the plan. Macy bondholders reached agreement with Federated Wednesday night after the company increased the money they will receive to $500 million, said Robert Miller, a bondholder representative.

The companies said they expect to file a joint reorganization plan with U.S. Bankruptcy Court by Aug. 1. The plan calls for creditors to be repaid with $4.1 billion in cash, debt and stock in the combined company, and for Macy to emerge from bankruptcy court next January after three years under Chapter 11 protection.

Macy owes nearly $6 billion in bankruptcy debt. It was not immediately known how much of their claims each creditor class will receive, but many creditors were left with debts Macy won't be able to pay.

Thursday's announcement bore out the predictions of many analysts, who last January forecast victory for Federated chairman Allen Questrom. The company began its quest for Macy at the beginning of the year, buying a large bankruptcy claim against Macy.

Macy chairman Myron E. Ullman III, who has streamlined and reinvigorated the company over the past two years, wanted the company to be free-standing and publicly-owned after its bankruptcy case ended. In the end, he won a degree of independence for Macy when it becomes a division of Federated.

Ullman will become the merged company's deputy chairman, and join Questrom and Federated president James Zimmerman in a three-member Office of the Chairman.

The job returns Ullman to Federated employment. In the early 1980s he was executive vice president of Sanger Harris, then a Federated division.

Signs indicate cattle country might rebound

Associated Press

OLNEY — Donnell Ag Products has more agriculture products than it knows what to do with, a sign of continuing uneasiness in stocker cattle country.

But other signs — mainly about a $7 one-week increase in what slaughter cattle were selling for in the Texas Panhandle — indicate that the worst is over for a market that crashed farther and faster this spring than ever before.

Slaughter cattle plunged from a high in the mid-$70s to $60 per hundred pounds in Texas and $58.50 in the Midwest, the bulk of the loss coming in May and June. The crash sent gloom throughout the cattle industry.

John Haggart, Donnell's buyer, told the Wichita Falls Times Record News in Thursday's editions that by this time of year, Donnell's five Texas retail outlets normally are starting to sell medicine and other supplies used to process calves and get them ready for fall and winter grazing. Donnell has headquarters in Graham and stores in Wichita Falls, Bowie, Abilene, Marlin and Hereford.

But business is slow this year, especially at the Hereford store, in the heart of cattle-feeding country in the Panhandle, Haggart said. That's where the market crash is most keenly felt.

"People are kind of leery of the market. They're not buying many calves," Haggart said.

In the past week, August live cattle futures on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange have traded up the limit of $1.50 three times.

Aldus, Altsys settle lawsuit on licensing

SEATTLE (AP) — Aldus Corp. and Altsys Corp. said Thursday they have settled a civil lawsuit over the licensing of a computer graphics program, resolving an obstacle in the pending merger of Aldus and Adobe Systems Inc.

Altsys filed suit in Texas shortly after the merger was announced, saying the deal would breach its licensing agreement for Aldus FreeHand, software used by graphics designers and artists.

Under the settlement, Aldus will turn FreeHand over to Altsys next July, when the current license expires.

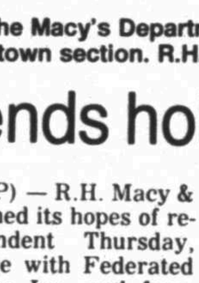
Until that time, Aldus has agreed it will abide by certain rules and procedures intended to assure Altsys that the marketing of Aldus FreeHand will remain separate from, and competitive with, a similar product by Adobe called Illustrator.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Prospectus must warn investor of potential risk

By Bill Doyle

Q: You wrote that money market mutual funds "use accounting practices to keep fund share values constant at $1." I enclose a photocopy of the first page from a money market mutual fund's prospectus. It states, "There is no assurance that the fund will be able to maintain a stable net asset value of $1.00 per share." That statement in the prospectus is certainly different from what you wrote. What gives?



Doyle

A: As has often been noted in this space, a prospectus is a "disclosure document," in which all pertinent facts are required to be revealed. To do that and warn investors of potential risk, the prospectus must present the worst-case scenario.

The Securities and Exchange Commission would never allow publication of a prospectus telling only the good things about mutual fund shares, or any other investment.

This results in just about every prospectus carrying all sorts of ominous-sounding sentences. But those warning words should be balanced against good news you find in the same document. Granted, because of SEC rules, it often is difficult to locate much good news in a mutual fund prospectus.

The line you quote from a money market mutual fund prospectus is a case in point. A prospectus can make no promises — about a fund's share value, or anything else. "Just the facts, ma'am!"

Q: I know you are not a fan of load mutual funds, on which sales commissions can take as much as 9.3 percent of investors' money. Neither am I. But how do you feel about mutual funds with surrender charges?

A: There are two kinds of mutual fund surrender charges.

One is a "redemption fee" levied on any shareholder who cashes in his or her shares, no matter how long the shares were owned. Redemption fees vary in size, but usually run about 1 or 2 percent.

The other is called a "contingent deferred sales charge." It starts high — at 5 percent or 6 percent and declines by one percentage point annually until it disappears.

Because so many true no-load funds with excellent investment performance records are available, there is no good reason to put your money into any mutual fund that hits you with a fat charge either going in or getting out.

CUP: Brazil wants to win beautifully

(From 1C)

Baggio is not hedging about his plans.

"To play in the final is a dream," he said. "To play Brazil for the World Cup is the appropriate ending."

As long as both teams come to play. And there is little question of that on such a global stage.

The Brazilians don't simply want to win, they want to win beautifully. They want to thrill the fans — and each other. They want everything about their games, from the first round to the final, to be memorable.

That's what made the demeanor of the semifinal — if not the result, of course — so disappointing to them.

"It is very difficult to face a team that seems to want a draw and then a shootout," said Bebeto, Romario's partner up front for Brazil.

Italy won't be that type of opposition. In fact, the Italians' scoring is more balanced than Brazil's.

Just as Romario and Baggio are the centerpieces of their teams, both countries have strong, creative midfields willing to venture into the attack. But Italy has more finishers in its midfield, particularly Dino Baggio and Nicola Berti, and more depth on the bench.

Unlike Brazil, which has looked like a favorite throughout the monthlong tournament, Italy struggled early. If not for the heroics of the Baggios — Dino in the first round, Roberto ever since — Italy's run would have ended against Norway or Mexico or Nigeria or Spain.

"A week ago, or two weeks ago, it did not look good for Italy," captain Paolo Maldini said. "But we have had perseverance and we have had dedication, and now we are through to the final."

Having struggled to get so far, is it likely the Italians will back off, turn conservative and emulate the ugly soccer Sweden presented on Wednesday?

The Brazilians don't think so.

"These are two great soccer powers seeking to be the first four-time World Cup champion," said Pele, who led Brazil to all three of its championships, the last in 1970. "This is the best of all possible finals."

Dolphin kicker charged with drunken driving

PLANTATION, Fla. (AP) — Miami Dolphins kicker Pete Stoyanovich was arrested outside a restaurant early Thursday when he disregarded a highway patrolman who said he was too drunk to drive and should ride with a friend, police said.

Stoyanovich was charged with drunken driving. He posted $500 bond and was released from jail after spending eight hours in custody.

Stoyanovich, the Dolphins' leading scorer last season, appeared to be under the influence of alcohol while dining with friends at an International House of Pancakes about 5:15 a.m., according to a Florida Highway Patrol report.

Three troopers were on a break at the same restaurant, and one of them stopped Stoyanovich as the player was getting into his car. Stoyanovich confirmed that he had been drinking, and a friend agreed to drive after the trooper suggested it.

About five minutes later, Stoyanovich, 27, drove back into the restaurant parking lot. He identified himself as the kicker for the Miami Dolphins and asked troopers why he was not allowed to drive his car.

BRITISH: Watson's round flashback

(From 1C)

For the 44-year-old Watson, who teed off at 7:30 a.m., it was a flashback to 1977 when he won at Turnberry in a classic duel with Jack Nicklaus.

"That's the same score I shot in '77 in the first round," said Watson, whose only bogey was a three-putt on No. 6. "I'm having fun playing golf right now. Sixty-eight is right on track to win the tournament."

If he does, it would be his sixth British Open championship but his first major title since winning the British Open in 1983 and his first victory of any kind since 1987.

"I'm not giving up hope, that's for sure," Watson said.

Daly, who had a 1 p.m. tee time, saw the weather at its worst, but just overpowered it.

"The wind favors the long hitters," he said. "I don't even have to think twice. I just hit my driver."

On the 528-yard 7th, Daly hit the green with a drive and an 8-iron. In practice, without the wind, he needed a 2-iron.

As the weather worsened, play slowed to a crawl and scores soared as players puzzled over club selection and pondered the wind-blown fate of their shots.

One of the few late starters to conquer the elements was Turner, a 10-year pro with just two victories on the European Tour.

He moved into a tie for the lead with an eagle on the par-4 16th when his 178-yard 2-iron second shot cut through the bitter wind and found the hole on the second bounce.

"I read it quite well," joked Turner, who also eagled the par-5 7th.

He followed the eagle at 16 with a birdie on the par-5 17th to move into first by himself, finishing at 5-under 65.

Daly's 8-iron on No. 7 and Turner's 2-iron on No. 16 best showed the difference between playing this course in the wind. On a calm day those club selections would be exactly reversed.

Lomas, winless in five years as a pro, was another early starter and made four birdies for a 66.

"I'm delighted," he said. "I struggled a bit towards the end. It was because of being up there. I was nervous a little bit."

And Magee, who earned his third victory in nine years as a pro in the Northern Telecom Open in January, got to three under with an eagle on the par-5 17th and finished at 67.

Loren Roberts, who last month had the U.S. Open in his grasp when he missed a 4½-foot putt on the 72nd hole then lost a playoff to Ernie Els the next day, three-putted 17 from 10 feet and also finished at 68.

"That was my only mental error of the day," he said.

Joining Watson, Roberts and Daly at 68 were Jean Van de Velde of France, Peter Senior of Australia, Jesper Parnevik of Sweden, Wayne Grady of Australia, David Feherty of Northern Ireland, Brian Watts of Canada, Ross McFarlane of England and American David Edwards.

In all, five Americans were among the top 14.

Els, of South Africa, Nick Price of Zimbabwe and Jeff Maggert were in a group of 16 at 69.

Ben Crenshaw and Seve Ballesteros of Spain were in a group of eight at 70 and defending champion Greg Norman of Australia, Tom Kite, Mark Calcavecchia, Davis Love, Craig Stadler and Howard Twitty were in a massive group of 28 at 71.

Masters champion Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain shot 72, along with Nicklaus and Bernhard Langer of Germany.

Nick Faldo of England was in danger of missing the cut for the second major championship in a row after shooting a 75, hurt by a two-stroke penalty when he hit the wrong ball on No. 17.

"It's not very clever, is it," Faldo said afterward.

310 General Help Wanted

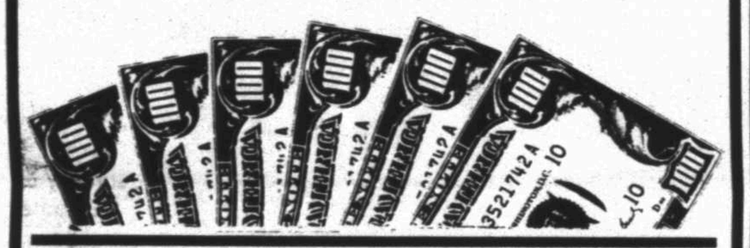
Distributorships Now Available



PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
