China trade status

WASHINGTON — President Clinton has decided to renew favorable trade privileges to China for one year on condition the Communist regime improves its record on human rights, trade and weapon sales to radical governments, administration officials said Monday. The president is consulting with congressional leaders on the precise exact wording of conditions that would extend most-favored nation status to China, said the officials, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Koresh tapes

HOUSTON — Branch Davidian leader David Koresh — within hours of the Feb. 28 shootout in Waco — chided federal authorities for using force and indicated he would not have resisted had the ATF agents given him a chance, according to tape recordings obtained by the Houston Chronicle. "It would've been better if you just called me up or talked to me," Koresh told ATF negotiator Jim Cavanaugh. "Then you all could have come in and done your work." The recordings — made in the tense hours after the shootout while ATF agents attempted to negotiate a truce with Koresh./3B

Alberto Perez and his family attended ceremonies honoring the young hero.

Officials, school honor hero, 11

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Fire officials are calling him a hero. His parents credit him with saving their lives. All of this recognition and the recipient is only 11 years old.

Alberto F. Perez is a celebrity to the students at Parker Elementary School. He is credited with saving the lives of his parents, Moises and Elena Perez, and older brother, Cesar, when their home caught fire May 12.

The "hero" was honored in a special assembly at school Monday morning by 911 and fire officials. Assistant Fire Marshal Lon Dominguez related Alberto's experience to the children.

Boy saves family

He said Alberto was awakened about 3:45 a.m. that morning, jumped out of bed, alerted his family of the danger and then called 911.

"Alberto woke to some noise and when he woke up he found his house half-way full of smoke, so he started screaming for his dad and woke his dad up ... (his family) all were asleep in the house that night and with Alberto's shouts he managed to wake everyone up and get them all out," Dominguez said.

Dominguez said the Perez home did have smoke detectors, but they had been taken down while some repairs were being made on the home.

"So, we feel that if Alberto hadn't woke his family up they might not be here today. So, we again feel very strongly that he did a very fantastic

White House hangs tough with Btu tax

■ Fate of Clinton's energy proposal uncertain as House nears vote.

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — The White House Monday rejected any change in President Clinton's controversial energy tax, but House Democrats were skittish about voting for the package of tax increases and spending shifts in the absence of clear signals on what the Senate will do.

House Democrats, who hold a commanding majority, had been expected to pass President Clinton's five-year, $500 billion deficit-reduction plan on Thursday — but that was before a bipartisan group of senators last week proposed a substitute package that scraps the energy tax and replaces it cuts in the entitlement programs.

Acknowledging the turmoil within Democratic ranks, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan held out the possibility for compromise, saying the plan that emerges may not be "precisely the one that's there now."

The rebellion in the Senate "is going to make the vote (in the House) more difficult," acknowledged Rep. Sander Levin of Michigan, a senior Democrat and liberal member of the House Ways and Means Committee, which sent Clinton's economic program to the floor basically intact.

Administration sought FBI help on travel inquiry

By Stewart Powell
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Deepening a public relations disaster, the White House acknowledged on Monday that senior officials asked the FBI to disclose a secret inquiry into alleged financial irregularities at the White House travel office.

The request to the FBI by White House communications director George Stephanopoulos — and the Federal Bureau of Investigation's unusual decision to announce the probe — raises questions about whether the independent agency is being forced to bow to political pressures at a time when FBI Director William Sessions is fighting for his job.

Stephanopoulos and two senior FBI officials denied any linkage.

Stephanopoulos, a 32-year-old confidante of President Clinton's, said administration officials summoned senior FBI official John Collingwood to the White House last Friday to ask him to issue an announcement confirming the FBI inquiry. News of the inquiry had been

Marshall's papers provide rare view of court's history

By Neil A. Lewis

WASHINGTON — When the Supreme Court first considered whether the Constitution should protect private homosexual acts, the justices showed little interest. Only two of the nine voted in 1985 even to hear the case of an Atlanta man arrested for having sex with another man in his own bedroom.

But over the next year and a half, the case known as Bowers vs. Hardwick became a high-stakes poker game among the justices, as conservatives and liberals on the court struggled behind the scenes to make it a definitive constitutional statement on homosexual rights.

Sporadic hail pounds area; city escapes major damage

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Sporadic bouts of marble-to-golf ball-sized hail pounded much of Midland late Sunday, hours after the same storm caused major street flooding in Goldsmith in Ector County.

Despite the hailstorm, local insurance agents reported few property damage claims by Monday afternoon.

"We were expecting perhaps a few calls, we heard it was a pretty powerful storm," said a local Allstate agent. "But surprisingly, we have had nothing."

Many residents who witnessed the brunt of the storm were surprised with the lack of damage.

Planners face problems of rising costs, millions of uninsured

Official: Prescription to broaden coverage

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is committed to a health benefit package that would offer Americans more coverage than most have now, an administration official said Monday.

The package will include coverage for immunizations, mammograms and regular checkups for healthy children that are not usually paid for by health insurance, said the official, who insisted on anonymity.

The administration still has not decided other important features of the plan. How much people would pay out of pocket in copayments and deductibles would vary depending on whether a person chose fee-for-service medicine or a health maintenance organization, the official said.

Meanwhile, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said organized labor remains adamantly opposed to taxing employee health benefits to help pay for health reform.

Clinton health advisers want a package of health benefits so generous that most Americans would not be hit by any benefits tax. The administration is still weighing whether to

TAX: House nears vote on energy proposal

of the administration's proposal — including its divisive Btu tax, the second-biggest revenue raiser after income tax increases on the wealthy.

The tax, to be based on the heat content of most fuels measured in British thermal units, would raise the cost of gasoline by 8 cents, increase and the average monthly electric utility bill by about $2.25, and make virtually all U.S.-made products cost more.

Other Clinton allies, such as Rep. Craig Washington, a liberal Democrat from Houston, acknowledged that many House lawmakers would find it politically difficult to vote for the taxes in the Clinton program if a Senate compromise seems likely.

"Members of the House are not willing to fall on a sword again if there's going to be a deal cut in the Senate," Washington said.

But the White House was sticking to its guns Monday, rebuffing suggestions that Clinton would compromise with Sens. David Boren, D-Okla., and John Danforth, R-Mo., who offered their alternate plan last week. Sens. William Cohen, R-Maine, and Bennett Johnston, D-La., also endorsed the Boren-Danforth plan.

Clinton "is going to press for his plan as it is," White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers told reporters.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, in a Sunday interview on CBS's "Face the Nation," said to eliminate the Btu feature from the tax plan, "then you're into cuts into middle-income people or further taxes on middle-income people. . . . I think we ought to stick with what we have. . . . It gets this deficit down, which is really what we've been trying to do primarily through spending cuts over the next five years."

Budget Director Leon Panetta said on NBC's "Today" show on Monday that the White House would reject a steeper gasoline tax that has been suggested as a replacement for the broader-based energy levy because the administration sees it as unfair to Westerners who must drive long distances.

"I don't think the president is willing to give up on that," Panetta said of the energy tax.

But Clinton may not have much choice. Boren and Danforth were busily courting support for their insurgent proposal on Monday, while Sen. John Breaux — another influential Democrat on the Senate's tax-writing Finance Committee — was crafting yet another proposal that would retain some of Clinton's energy tax but with more modest spending cuts than those recommended by Boren and Danforth.

"We're looking for something that will shoot down the middle between what the president has proposed and what Boren and Danforth want," explained Bette Phelan, a Breaux spokeswoman, adding that the Louisiana Democrat would not vote for either the Boren or Clinton proposals "as is."

The Democrats have a slim 11-9 majority on the Finance panel, so that even a single Democratic defection endangers Clinton's plan.

Meanwhile, the House Democratic leadership is nervously eying the vote on the Clinton blueprint scheduled for Thursday

Even before the bipartisan group of senators offered their alternative plan, conservative House Democrats — led by Charles Stenholm of Texas and David McCurdy of Oklahoma — were also hoping to derail the energy tax.

HAIL: Today to be sunny right through the roof — it was so loud," said Missy Campbell, who lives on Whittle Way in northwest Midland.

Sunday's storm, combined with similar lightning storms on Friday and Saturday, brought the total weekend rainfall amount to 1.14 inches — more than one-quarter of the total for the year.

National Weather Service observers in Midland said residents reported hail as small as peas and as large as golf balls all across town.

"The worst part seemed to hit in the county near the airport and then in northwest Midland," the observer said. "It's been some time since we've seen hail around here with such force."

The hailstorm struck Midland at about 10:30 p.m. and began to dissipate at midnight.

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the upper 80s and southeast winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low near 60, according to the National Weather Service.

Wednesday should be mostly sunny with a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 59, Monday's high reached 83, compared to the record high for that date of 108 set in 1989. The record low was 50 set in 1954.

STATE

Upper-level disturbances got comfortable over Texas Monday, producing showers in parts of the northern and southern areas of the state.

The upper-level disturbance that hit North Texas caused scattered showers and thunderstorms Monday in the eastern part of the region. The clouds and rain kept high in the 70s.

Partly cloudy skies covered the western part of the region, where temperatures reached the 80s.

A chance of thunderstorms continued overnight for the east, with the central west expecting partly cloudy conditions.

Overnight lows were to be between 58 and 64 east and Wednesday's highs were forecast to range from 80 to 85.

The disturbance also brought showers and thunderstorms along the Gulf Coast and deep south.

NATION

Thunderstorms crossed much of the nation's midsection on Monday. Showers dotted the Northeast, the California coast and Florida. Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, with sunny skies west of the Rockies.

Thunderstorms developed ahead of a cold front crossing the central states. Showers were scattered from the western and central Gulf Coast to the lower Great Lakes.

Showers associated with a warm front dotted the northern Atlantic Coast. Rain also fell in parts of the Plains and along the Northern California coast.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

PAPERS: Justice's files provide rare view

(From 1A)

The twists and turns of the Georgia homosexuality case are detailed in the private papers of the late Justice Thurgood Marshall, which were made available to the public recently, only two years after he left the court. The papers portray a group of justices concerned with such minutiae as repairing the court's front steps and conducting intricate negotiations to deal with the greatest moral and legal issues of the day.

The documents provide an extraordinary glimpse of the behind-the-scenes evolution of cases involving abortion, the rights of homosexuals, criminal issues and civil rights. The release of a justice's private papers to the general public so soon after his retirement is rare in modern Supreme Court history because it reveals much about colleagues still on the court and about issues that are still hotly debated.

The Library of Congress said that Marshall, who died at 84 last January, agreed to have his papers made available to the public shortly after his death.

Marshall's longtime personal lawyer and friend, William T. Coleman, complained Monday about the decision of the library to release the documents so soon after his death and while many of those Marshall wrote about remain active on the court. Coleman said in an interview that Marshall initially wanted all his papers destroyed upon his death. But Coleman said he persuaded Marshall to have the papers preserved for history.

Many of the details contained in the 173,700 papers, which take up more than 231 feet of shelf space at the library, were first reported this week in The Washington Post and will provide material for scholars for years to come. The documents cover most of Marshall's government career, including his life as a federal appeals court judge and U.S. solicitor general as well as his 24-year career on the Supreme Court beginning in 1967.

They chronicle how the ideological fulcrum inexorably shifted away from his liberal outlook that fit comfortably when he first joined at the court but by the end of his career often left him in the role of dissenter on the margin.

Although in his later years, Marshall had little influence on the court's majority opinions, the value in his papers is that they include many of the documents that other justices circulated among themselves as they pondered seemingly insignificant administrative matters and also tried to cajole, exhort and plead with their colleagues as they tried to forge majorities in hotly contested cases.

The Marshall files show, for example, how Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the court's first woman, struggled with the early abortion cases, finding it difficult to set a decisive course, sometimes disconcerting her colleagues.

TRAVEL: White House says it asked FBI aid disclosed earlier in the week by White House aides seeking to justify the ouster of seven veteran career employees from the White House travel office.

"We did ask, yes," Stephanopoulos said during a 55-minute White House briefing. "We talked to them about it."

Stephanopoulos said the White House wanted the statement issued "to make sure that the facts were clarified" regarding the inquiry.

He said the response by the FBI will have "no effect whatsoever" on the Clinton administration's final decision on whether to keep or fire the beleaguered FBI director.

In a telephone interview with Hearst Newspapers, Collingwood — the chief of the FBI's public and congressional affairs operation — said Stephanopoulos during the meeting recited a White House description of the FBI's participation in the inquiry.

"I was asked, 'Does the FBI believe there is a sufficient basis to conduct an investigation?' and I said, 'Yes,'" Collingwood recalled.

Collingwood said he returned to the FBI to revise a statement that had been prepared and circulated the day before for use in response to news media inquiries.

"At that point we decided, based on the questions that we were getting, that I would say, 'We did in fact have a basis to conclude that an investigation was warranted,'" Collingwood said.

Collingwood said he was "surprised," however, when the White House subsequently released the FBI statement.

HERO: Fire officials honor 11-year-old boy thing by saving his family's life," Dominguez said.

After the assembly, Alberto's father related his experience of that night.

He said the fire started in the living room and the boys' room was located next to the burning area. Dominguez said the fire started when a candle ignited a curtain.

"Alberto smelled the smoke and crawled into the room and said 'Father, Father, there is a fire in the house.' I noticed my other boy hadn't come in the room, so I went and pulled him out of the smoke. You couldn't seen anything but blue (smoke)," Perez said.

He said Alberto told him to call 911 for help. He said the youngster dialed the number and handed him the receiver.

"Alberto had just gone through a 911 tour so he knew what to do in case of emergencies. He had the presence of mind to calm his dad down a little bit and then help him dial the 911 number to get help for the fire," the fire official said.

"We feel with Alberto's actions he is really responsible for saving his parents' and family's lives in the fire," Dominguez said.

Alberto's parents also credit him with saving their lives.

"He remembered . . . learning about 911 before the fire . . . I have too much thanks for 911, the Fire and Police departments," Perez said.

The pint-sized hero was rather modest about his accomplishment and all the attention he was receiving for it. He said the thing he remembers most about the event was that it was "scary."

Alberto was presented with a plaque with an inscription recognizing that he performed "outstanding actions during a real life emergency when he remembered to utilize . . . 911 and save the lives of his entire family."

Tears overflowed from the youngster's eyes as he was presented the award. He was given another plaque as well as a "Rescue Teddy" bear and a 911 T-shirt. Representatives from 911 and the Fire Department were all on hand for the awards ceremony.

Alberto gave the assistant fire marshal a big hug when the ceremony ended.

Instead of spending his school day in class, the new child celebrity was surrounded by reporters hanging on his every word. As Alberto was leaving the school with his family, on their way to meet more reporters, a classmate walked by and said "Good job, Alberto," and the two boys hugged.

PACKAGE: Labor opposes taxing benefits

tax benefits above certain levels.

Clinton gave his commitment to a broad benefit package at a Thursday night session with his health and economic advisers, the source said. His economic advisers had urged him to offer a more modest, less costly package.

"The scope of services is comprehensive and better than what (most) people have today," the source said. It may offer improvements in mental health coverage as well, although that is not decided, the official added.

Kirkland, in a speech to the Service Employees International Union opposing any tax on benefits, said, "Our people fought hard to win those benefits. They've already paid for them by forgoing higher wages."

"Those benefits are not income. They shouldn't be taxed as income," he said.

He expressed confidence the administration is "moving in the direction of a broadly based, fairly financed package . . . including universal coverage," and applauded the idea of making all employers pay a payroll-based health tax.

"Of all the options on the table that is the one that makes the most sense," said Kirkland.

"Hear this: Our movement is unified and determined in its opposition to the idea of taxing employee health benefits," Kirkland told several hundred Service Employees International activists.

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala told the meeting that it is not right that millions of working Americans have no health insurance, while "others who do not go to work are provided with decent coverage through the Medicaid program."

REFORM: Clinton's challenge on health is mega-fold

(From 1A)

had a hand in helping to create."

Health care in America has been in a crisis for years, experts say, with costs soaring at horrifying rates and more and more people falling into the class of the un- or under-insured.

What's different now is that middle-class America — people who've long taken employer-paid policies for granted and hardly think twice about going to the doctor — suddenly feel at risk.

"People are scared that their insurance is disintegrating," says Robert Blendon, a health policy expert at Harvard University.

One in two workers has seen his benefits cut in the past year, as companies struggling to control costs force their employees either to pay a bigger share of premiums or go into cheaper, "managed care" systems that restrict choices of doctors and hospitals.

Plus, it seems everyone knows someone without insurance. Some 100,000 people a month lose their insurance. In all, 37 million Americans will go without insurance for part of this year, and an additional 20 million have inadequate insurance, according to studies.

That day in Tampa, Fla., Mrs. Clinton heard from a man who had gone into debt to pay for care for a mother with Alzheimer's Disease. She also listened to a cancer doctor who cautioned that health maintenance organizations pressure him to treat patients in a 'substandard way"; an advocate for the disabled who asked for coverage for home health care; the owner of a small business who talked of the burdens a new tax would cause, and a social worker who described how the elderly must choose between paying for food and buying prescription drugs.

And more.

Mrs. Clinton, chairing the president's task force, is fond of saying that people don't go without health care — they just get it when it's the most expensive. For instance, someone without coverage who gets in a car wreck won't get turned away at the emergency room. But big charges on other patients' bills — super-expensive Tylenol for example — make up for it.

The pool of 37 million uninsured is hardly a static group. One in four people will lose their insurance over a two-year period, either through changing jobs or going to part-time work. Insurance isn't transferrable if you change jobs.

Clinton, during last year's presidential campaign, often talked of a woman he'd met who gave up her job and applied for Medicaid, which provides federal assistance for the poor, to make sure a daughter with cerebral palsy could maintain health coverage.

The policy covering her daughter had paid out its limit of $1 million, and no other insurance company would offer coverage.

"I can't work unless something happens to Sarah," she said

The 20 million "under-insured" are often the self-employed, who must hunt for coverage on their own and pay several hundred dollars a month.

Because of the huge cost, many people accept a very high deductible, such as $5,000, which mainly protects them in case of catastrophic illness. The result: These people rarely go to the doctor, since every penny up to $5,000 comes out of their own pockets.

The through-the-roof cost of medical services is another part of the equation. Health-care costs in America total more than $900 billion a year — one-seventh of the gross domestic product. They've risen at more than double the pace of inflation for years, eating into business profits, soaking up workers' wage increases and limiting the government's ability to rein in the federal debt.

Paperwork and waste add to the problem. Complicated insurance forms — there are hundreds of different carriers, all with different forms and requirements — have put a crushing burden on doctors and providers.

So Clinton's challenge is mega-fold: find a way to cover everyone, control costs, maintain quality and cut the red tape.

No final decisions have been made, but the White House plan is shaping up as one that tries to strike a balance between two philosophies — the steering hand of government regulation and the prodding touch of competitive market forces.

■ Police find crack house money orders

DETROIT — A crack house raid uncovered a scheme to launder money orders looted during the 1992 Los Angeles riots.

Stolen money orders worth more than $42,000 were found in a shoe box, said Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano. Identification numbers show they came from a check-cashing store that burned down in Compton, Calif., during the riots.

"They are shipping money to cities across the country, far from Los Angeles, so it can't be traced as easily," Ficano said.

Compton police were surprised by the size of the seizure.

"When other agencies make a confiscation like that, they give us a call. But I haven't heard of anything on this large a scale before," said Compton Lt. Joe Flores.

Six people were arrested in the raid last week that also netted $70,000 in cash, about 2 pounds of cocaine, some marijuana and six firearms.

■ Conservatives receive penalty for ad

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York's Conservative Party was fined $30,000 for miscues in taking out a full-page newspaper ad criticizing the voting record of U.S. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

The ad appeared in The New York Times in 1991 at a cost of $42,412. It attacked Moynihan for voting against President Bush's use of force against Iraq.

"Where Was Pat Moynihan When America Needed Him?" the ad said. It asked for contributions to help battle "Pat Moynihan and the other liberals."

The party failed to note in the advertisement who had paid for it and did not register as a political action committee, a requirement for running such ads.

Party chairman Michael Long said Monday he agreed to the penalty, levied by the Federal Election Commision, because battling the FEC could have cost even more.

The Conservative Party has about 132,000 members in New York.

■ Court delays Farrow's Woody foray

NEW YORK — An appeals court has delayed a trial in which actress Mia Farrow wants to try to nullify Woody Allen's adoption of two of her adopted children, Allen's lawyer said Monday.

Farrow has petitioned Manhattan Surrogate Court to undo the filmmaker's adoption of Moses, 15, and Dylan, 7, the girl he was accused of sexually abusing. Farrow charged that Allen defrauded her and the court by concealing that he was sexually involved with her oldest adopted daughter, Soon-Yi Previn, 22.

Meanwhile, the couple are awaiting Justice Elliott Wilk's decision on what custody or visitation the filmmaker will be allowed with the adopted children and with the couple's only biological son, Satchel, 5.

Three weeks ago, at the conclusion of the six-week custody trial, Wilk said he would issue his decision within a month.

Elkan Abramowitz, Allen's lawyer, said Monday that the state Supreme Court's Appellate Division granted his request two weeks ago to stay the adoption trial until everyone hears from Wilk, which should be "any day now."

■ Judge will decide case against officer

DETROIT — A judge agreed Monday to decide the case of one of three white police officers charged in the beating death of a black motorist.

The trial in the Nov. 5 slaying of 35-year-old Malice Green begins June 2 before Detroit Recorder's Court Judge George Crockett III. At a hearing, Crockett granted a request by Robert Lessnau, 32, that the judge issue a verdict from the bench.

Lessnau is charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm. He faces up to 10 years in prison if convicted.

Two separate juries will determine the fate of Walter Budzyn, 47, and Larry Nevers, 52, who are charged with second-degree murder. They could be sentenced to life in prison.

Malice Green, 35, was bludgeoned to death Nov. 5 with heavy metal flashlights after Nevers and Budzyn confronted him near a suspected crack house.

Witnesses have said Green was beaten when he failed to obey officers' commands.

■ Search dog finds missing child's body

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — A 5-year-old girl abducted from her home last week has been found dead.

The body of Aleszandra "Alie" Berrelez was found Saturday in Deer Creek Canyon southwest of Denver. A tracking dog who helped lead searchers to the girl's body followed a trail Sunday from the canyon more than 10 miles back to where the girl was abducted four days earlier, police said.

An autopsy was inconclusive and more tests are needed, police said Monday.

Ship smuggles Chinese into San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — A nervy attempt to smuggle about 250 Chinese into the United States aboard a freighter early Monday failed when federal agents rounded up at least 170 of the passengers and intercepted the fleeing smugglers' ship 70 miles at sea.

The 300-foot freighter, Pai Chang, loaded with human cargo, slipped into San Francisco Bay shortly after midnight, docked at the former Coast Guard station near the foot of the Golden Gate Bridge, dumped its passengers and then steamed out to sea in the predawn darkness.

"It was beautifully executed," said David Ilchert, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. "They zip into the harbor, do a circle, then they were gone."

He said the whole operation took only 50 minutes after the ship entered the bay.

Despite the smugglers' ingenuity and boldness, however, the outlaw ship had been tracked for hours by Coast Guard radar and the passengers were practically delivered into the arms of federal officers at the Presidio army base.

At 1:30 a.m., military police at The Presidio stopped a pickup truck — with seven Chinese crammed below its camper shell — on Lincoln Boulevard near 25th Avenue. At about the same time, they were notified that a suspicious freighter had docked at Fort Point.

"They put two and two together," said an Army spokeswoman. Everyone in the truck was detained and turned over to federal immigration authorities.

Military Police, Veterans Administration police and U.S. Park Police then moved to the decaying dock near Fort Point, where they spotted a crowd of a Chinese with about a dozen cars ready to take them away, said Park Police Sergeant Smith.

The crowd dispersed when the authorities moved in. Throughout the day, most of them were rounded up. Several small groups were taken into custody on the Golden Gate Bridge.

Others were arrested in the Presidio woods, several were picked up at the Lincoln Park Municipal Golf Course and a few were found in the Marina. Most surrendered willingly.

"We would have a group of 15 to 20, and others would just walk up and join the group," Smith said.

By late afternoon, at least 170 of the passengers had been rounded up by military, U.S. Park Police and agents of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The Coast Guard tracked down the Pai Chang about 70 miles southwest of San Francisco and escorted it back to San Francisco.

Armed Coast Guardsmen boarded the ship around 5 p.m. and took into custody the crew of six Burmese and four Taiwanese sailors. The Coast Guard and the U.S. attorney were determining what charges will be brought against them.

Ilchert, who clearly marveled at the smugglers' daring, said the Pai Chang was spotted on Coast Guard radar late Sunday night.

Even though the smugglers knew they were being tracked by the Coast Guard, Ilchert said, they continued to cruise through the Golden Gat.

Sessions might be given another job, Reno says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration has considered finding another job for FBI Director William Sessions, who has been under a cloud since a January report accused him of ethical lapses.

"People have discussed that," Attorney General Janet Reno said last week, department spokesman Dean St. Dennis confirmed Monday.

Her remarks were published in The Wall Street Journal on Monday. The newspaper also asked whether such a change were likely and quoted her as replying, "I don't know."

Sessions has completed 5½ years of his 10-year term and has remained upbeat about the possibility of keeping his job despite allegations by the Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility.

Now on a two-week European trip for conferences, Sessions has denied any wrongdoing and has taken pride in his oversight of the World Trade Center bombing investigation and the 51-day standoff with the Branch Davidian cult near Waco, Texas.

An administration official said he believed that finding another job for Sessions would mean that he would first have to be given a "clear bill of health" on the allegations, which include misusing government vehicles and employing a "sham" to avoid paying taxes on transportation to and from work.

The reason for providing that other job — possibly as a fulltime consultant — would be to enable him to receive a sufficient pension. Sessions took the FBI in November 1987 after 13 years on the federal bench, thereby relinquishing what would have been a judicial pension at full salary.

Sessions met with Reno last Friday for about a half-hour, and although he was accompanied by his two attorneys and prepared to give his defense against the allegations, such specifics did not come up, according a source close to Sessions.

One of his attorneys, Tom Susman, has pointed to the administration's long delay in acting on Sessions' future as an indication the Clinton administration is not that bothered by the accusations.

"If they didn't think he was an ethical fellow, he wouldn't still be there," Susman said last week.

Clinton appoints woman with sense of humor to economic post

By Jill Lawrence
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Laura D'Andrea Tyson is the kind of person who thinks it's funny that her husband referred to her in print as a babe, and doesn't mind that her office door sign says chairman instead of chairwoman.

She is the first woman to head the president's Council of Economic Advisers, and the first CEA chief of any gender to be married to a Hollywood comedy writer.

"I like to laugh," Tyson explains with disarming simplicity.

She explains everything that way — including a controversial, quasi-protectionist trade philosophy that she expounds in the fiercely entitled book "Who's Bashing Whom?"

Tyson, 45, is decidedly nonfierce, with her elegant silk suits, seed-pearl jewelry, open manner and cheerful disposition. But her bitten nails and tenacity in the face of opposition are hints of the drive that has gotten her where she is: in a key place on President Clinton's economic team.

The former Berkeley professor and her new boss share much in common, including their generation and a penchant for reading mysteries. Like Clinton, Tyson is a pragmatist who'd rather deal in case studies than abstract theories. Her instinct, like his, is to bridge differences and inch forward.

The MIT-trained economist prefers honey to vinegar, but makes sure her voice is heard.

She is the first woman to head the president's Council of Economic Advisors, and the first CEA chief of any gender to be married to a Hollywood comedy writer.

Laura Tyson

"A gentle comment from Laura has to be translated," said John Zysman, a Berkeley economist who has been close to her for years. "She once referred to someone as disingenuous. That meant in my language that he's a ... liar. She confirmed later that's what she meant, but she wouldn't ever say it."

"There's a certain presence. It's quiet," said Sherman Robinson, a Berkeley colleague who has known Tyson for 20 years and written numerous articles with her about Yugoslavia and Hungary.

He said Tyson is not "an orator-lecturer," but won a prestigious teaching prize at Berkeley. "She's incredibly well organized and she just comes across as knowing what she's talking about," said Robinson, who is working for the council this summer.

Tyson is best known for advocating managed trade, a middle ground between protectionism and free trade that involves steering federal money toward certain high-tech sectors and aggressively pressuring trade partners to buy their product. Her views have been reflected in Clinton's tough stances toward Japan and Airbus, the European aerospace consortium.

Her formal job is to advise Clinton on the impact of his economic policies — including his budget and the huge health reform package due next month.

"She's never, ever afraid to speak her mind" at meetings, said White House health spokesman Bob Boorstin. "She's really breaking new ground," he added, by helping make policies rather than merely analyzing their effects.

Warm weather often leads to more social interaction. Even the ancients realized the potential for romance in relation to natural cycles of the sun and moon.

Ancient cycles surround flighty spring fever

By Holly Coryell
Associated Press writer

ALBANY, N.Y. — The snows have melted, temperatures are rising, and that woman you keep running into at the copy machine is looking kind of cute.

It's mating season — and not just for the birds and the bees.

"The sights, sounds and smells of spring ... all probably juice up our primeval mating game and give the sunniness of our personalities what we call spring fever," said Helen Fisher, an anthropologist associated with the American Museum of Natural History in New York City.

Most people begin to feel happier and more energetic in the spring. And those feelings usually translate into more social behavior. Marty Marrazo, a clinical psychologist, calls it "the elation effect."

"Coming out of a long, tough winter ... gives people a lift," he said. "Starting with the weather change, you can see a sequence of behavioral changes from a lighter mood, to seeing more people, to searching out what we're all looking for in life — a special person to fall in love with and have a special relationship with."

In the spring, there are more opportunities for interaction as people emerge from their winter hibernation and shed layers of clothing to enjoy outdoor activities, Marrazo said.

People are usually more open to social contact, too. They tend to be more upbeat and positive, and these are attractive qualities. "When people are feeling happier, they smile more, and smiling is certainly a precursor to feeling giddy, having fun and falling in love," he said.

Spring love is nothing new. Since ancient times, there have been tales of warm weather romance, says Mary Valentis, who teaches a humanities course on romanticism at the State University of New York at Albany.

Senate confirms lesbian for top post

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate brushed aside complaints of conservatives Monday and confirmed an openly gay San Francisco supervisor, Roberta Achtenberg, to be a top federal housing official.

The vote was 58-31 to make Achtenberg, a former law school professor, assistant secretary for fair housing and equal opportunity in the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., led the opposition, portraying her as a "militantly activist lesbian" who "tried to bully the Boy Scouts of America" into permitting homosexual scout leaders.

Other conservatives seized upon the Boy Scout issue, saying they were otherwise willing to vote for a qualified homosexual for high federal office.

Achtenberg supported cutting off United Way funding for the Boy Scouts because the organization would not allow homosexual scoutmasters and refused to strike a reference to God from their oath.

Sen. Jesse Helms calls her a 'militantly activist lesbian' who 'tried to bully the Boy Scouts of America.'

Roberta Achtenberg

The San Francisco area United Way had taken the same position on grounds that the scouts violated an anti-discrimination policy, Achtenberg's supporters said.

Her chief Senate backer, Banking Committee Chairman Donald Riegle, D-Mich., called her "one of the most competent, credible and most articulate nominees we've presented to the Senate."

"The only real challenge ... boils down to her sexual orientation and that has no bearing on her qualifications," Riegle said. "All the other arguments are a smoke screen."

Both California senators, Democrats Barbara Boxer and Dianne Feinstein, spoke in favor of the nomination.

Worldwide research shows women treated far worse than men

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Nations researchers are gathering information about the world's women, and so far they say they haven't found a single country that treats its women as well as its men.

Throughout the world women are the neglected majority, concludes the 1993 U.N. Human Development Report. The study was made available here prior to its formal release at a news conference Tuesday in New Delhi.

Only 33 countries now keep enough gender-based statistics to make comparisons, according to Mahbub ul Haq, head of a U.N. project attempting to chronicle the quality of life everywhere on the planet.

Despite a spreading struggle among women for equality that includes changes in national laws and other efforts to decrease gender bias, "no country treats its women as well as it treats its men," the report said.

Based on a statistical study of the 33 countries, it found that some do much better than others in giving equal opportunities and treatment to women.

Among the worst is Japan. It is ranked No. 17 in the U.N.'s 1993 Human Development index but would be ranked first if gender bias were excluded.

The quality-of-life rankings are based on income, education and life expectancy in 173 countries.

Manic-depression may go undetected for years

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Manic-depression — mood swings of depression and euphoria that afflict more than 3 million Americans — often takes years to diagnose after sufferers first seek help, researchers report.

A sample of 500 patients reported that it took an average of eight years to get the correct diagnosis. One third in the study said it took more than a decade to identify the problem.

On average, participants said they consulted three doctors before getting a correct diagnosis.

"It is a treatable illness, and that's why we're concerned about the delay in diagnosis," said Dr. Peter Whybrow, chairman of the psychiatry department at the University of Pennsylvania, who worked on the study.

Because the disorder begins most commonly between ages 15 to 19, an untreated case disrupts a person's life at a vulnerable time, possibly leading to drug abuse and failure in college and the job, Whybrow said.

The report also found that 36 percent didn't seek professional treatment for more than 10 years after symptoms appeared.

The study, by the Chicago-based National Depressive and Manic-Depressive Association, was presented Monday at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

Michael Strober, psychiatry professor at the University of California, Los Angeles, said the delays in diagnosis wasn't surprising.

"I've seen many patients who have fairly classic illness, who have nevertheless been misdiagnosed," he said in a telephone interview. Lack of awareness by mental health professionals is much of the problem, he said.

The disorder is marked by periods of depression that can bring on disturbances in sleep and eating, and periods of mania, which begin with unusually high energy and euphoria and can proceed to irritability and sometimes delusions about one's abilities.

It can be treated with medications such as lithium. If untreated, the depression may make a person unable to go to work or to function effectively on the job, while the mania can lead to expensive buying sprees and other episodes of poor judgment. Social relationships also can suffer as the mania turns to frustration and anger when a desired partner cannot or will not keep up.

The new study was based on responses to questionnaires by 500 randomly chosen members of the depressive and manic-depressive association.

Adventurous scientists search dark rain forests for possible miracle cures

SAN FRANCISCO — Aided by technology that rapidly determines a plant's curative powers, scientific explorers are scouring the world's darkest jungles in a desperate search to discover new medicines before the rain forest is destroyed.

The quest has recently produced three anti-AIDS compounds from rare plants, intensifying fears that the encroachment of loggers, ranchers and plantations will eradicate a rich cache of scientific opportunity.

"There's not going to be much of it left in the pretty near future," said James Miller, assistant curator of the Missouri Botanical Garden in St. Louis, who has spent years collecting plants from South American rain forests. "There's a sense of urgency — all of a sudden we have the technology and we'd better make use of it."

New technology can quickly screen thousands of natural compounds for medicinal activity or regenerate whole plants from individual cells. These and other advances have made species-rich rain forests a more promising and realistic source for drugs.

The National Cancer Institute has set aside $6.2 million since 1986 to fund 10 years of explorations for AIDS and cancer treatments in Africa, Southeast Asia and South America.

Shaman Pharmaceuticals, a South San Francisco company, is collaborating with native peoples in the same regions to find modern remedies among their ancient medicines.

Merck and Co., the world's largest drug company, is paying a nonprofit organization in Costa Rica $1 million to catalog that country's myriad species.

The cancer institute's search has paid off. Initial tests have determined that three compounds derived from remote rain forest plants block HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, from invading and killing cells. Struck by these extracts' potency, the institute has put them on the fast track for animal and human clinical trials.

Still, researchers remain cautious because many potential AIDS treatments look promising in early studies but later fail. In fact, some AIDS specialists question the wisdom of plant collection.

■ British investigate Falkland war crime

LONDON — A former army officer says he witnessed a British soldier kill an unarmed Argentine prisoner in cold blood after a major battle of the Falkland Islands war.

The claim by Tony Mason, who was a captain in the third battalion of the Parachute Regiment during the 1982 conflict, is the latest in a series of charges that British soldiers committed war crimes against Argentine prisoners.

Scotland Yard has been investigating the allegations since August.

Mason, in Granada Television's "World In Action" program shown Monday night, said he saw the wounded prisoner being dragged out and shot "over an open grave" on June 12, 1982.

The previous day was the battle for Mount Longdon, one of the bloodiest confrontations of the 74-day war in which Britain recaptured the colony from Argentina.

The Argentine prisoner "was unarmed and posed no threat. He should have been treated as a normal prisoner of war," Mason said. He said he asked the soldier "why he did it. I received no real tangible logical answer."

Mason said he made a report to his superiors. The program concluded that this report never reached the Defense Ministry in London and that the soldier, who was not named, is in another battalion and has been promoted.

Police investigators and the Defense Ministry refused to comment on the new claims, saying the inquiry was still going on.

■ Greenpeace activists annoy speaker

OSLO, Norway — Activists angered by Norway's whale hunts disrupted an 80-nation congress on endangered species Monday by drowning out Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland's opening speech.

Brundtland was forced to pause in her appeal to 300 scientists at the U.N. environment congress in Trondheim, when Greenpeace activists blared a recorded message condemning her decision to resume commercial whaling.

Police said they briefly detained three Greenpeace activists.

Norway last Tuesday announced that it would kill 160 minke whales for profit this year in defiance of a global ban imposed by the IWC in 1986 and upheld at the commission's annual meeting this month in Kyoto, Japan.

Brundtland was opening a week-long congress on biological diversity, called by her government and the United Nations to follow up resolutions adopted at last year's Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro.

Brundtland did not refer to commercial whaling in her prepared remarks.

■ Kuwait threatens OPEC withdrawal

MANAMA, Bahrain — Kuwaiti Oil Minister Ali al-Baghli warned Monday that if OPEC did not agree to raise his country's daily production quota by 400,000 barrels, Kuwait might withdraw from the cartel.

He said quitting the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would "not be an easy decision to make."

But if the increase in Kuwiat's output was not sanctioned at an OPEC meeting in Geneva on June 8, "I will be under inevitable and tremendous pressure," he told AP-Dow Jones in a telephone interview from Kuwait.

Kuwait is seeking to increase daily output to 2 million barrels, from 1.6 million, for the third quarter of 1993.

U.S. warning to Iraq: Don't attack Kurds

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Warren Christopher issued a blunt warning to President Saddam Hussein of Iraq Monday not to stage an offensive against Kurds in an autonomous enclave of northern Iraq.

Christopher said the United States would be "watching very carefully" to see if Iraq intended such an attack. Other State Department officials called attention to a U.N. resolution that prohibits Iraq from engaging in repression of its people.

"He knows what he has to do," Christopher said of the Iraqi leader. He said the administration would enforce the U.N. sanctions "with great resoluteness" and would be looking "for any changes in that situation that might call for further action from the United States."

Other government officials said privately, however, that it remained far from clear whether Iraq was planning a new attack. They confirmed that Iraq had assembled a formidable force along the Kurdish-controlled frontier, but said its size had not been increased for the last two months.

A senior State Department official said that the buildup was "obviously not just for fun and games" and that the Iraqi force would have little trouble overrunning Kurdish defenses. But another senior official said Kurdish military leaders, who have warned of an attack in early June, appeared to be "exaggerating the imminence of any action."

Still, the administration was clearly determined to do nothing that might give encouragement to the Iraqi leader. The State Department spokesman, Richard Boucher, reiterated a March 26 warning to Iraq promising "a firm and united response" to any provocative action.

The warning was issued by the U.N. delegates of the United States, Britain, France and Russia, and Boucher declared Monday that it "remains in effect."

Boucher and other refused Monday to specify what measures the United States might take if Iraqi forces tried to recapture the Kurdish-controlled territory. But they indicated that the United States would object to any assault even if it were limited to the area south of the flight-exclusion zone established by coalition forces two years ago.

The nature of an American response would depend on the severity of any Iraqi attack, the officials said. It could range from air strikes against Iraqi forces to more modest efforts to use U.N. guards to provide protection for Kurdish civilians.

The no-flight zone, which is north of the 36th parallel, is patrolled often by coalition aircraft to prevent Iraq from using helicopters and warplanes in attacks against the Kurds. But territory controlled by the Kurds extends well south of that line, and the officials noted that the U.N. prohibition of Iraqi repression covers the entire country.

As part of a new review of U.S. policy toward Iraq, the Clinton administration is considering additional measures intended to protect the Kurdish and Shiite minorities.

Japanese can't fathom U.S. justice system

TOKYO (NYT) — From the moment a Japanese exchange student was shot to death near Baton Rouge, La., last October, the stereotype of the United States that streams across Japan's airwaves seemed amplified night after night: America the nation of gun-wielding paranoids, an out-of-control society where .44-caliber Magnum revolvers are as common as toaster ovens.

On Monday, with the acquittal of Rodney Peairs, a homeowner who shot the 16-year-old Japanese high school student, Yoshihiro Hattori, just outside his door, Japan's anger shifted from America's gun culture to its justice system. Under what logic, television commentators and newspaper editorialists demanded, could the courts turn free a man who, under the Japanese legal system, would almost certainly be facing years in prison?

On Sunday a jury acquitted Peairs of manslaughter, finding that he acted reasonably as a frightened homeowner in firing his .44-caliber Magnum at Hattori when the young man rushed toward him while trying to find a Halloween party. Under Louisiana's so-called "shoot the burglar" law, a person may use deadly force to protect himself from an intruder. Hattori had entered Peairs' carport when he was shot.

Pediatric Dentistry: An Update For The Nineties

Free To The Public

Thursday May 27, 1993 7:30 P.M.

Women's and Children's Hospital Auditorium

Early visits to the dentist will ensure a smooth introduction to dentistry. It is no longer recommended to wait until your child's third birthday before visiting the dentist. The old theories that you should wait until it hurts before seeing a dentist, or that the baby teeth will just fall out anyway are no longer valid.

According to recent recommendations from the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry (AAPD), your child's first dental visit should be around their first birthday. The key to a healthy smile is early intervention and prevention. It is much easier and more cost effective to prevent rather than correct problems.

Dr. Wilkerson will discuss the importance of "baby" teeth, and why you should not just let them fall out! Other topics will include the development of the teeth, teething, eruption, habits, sealants, and how you can help your child adopt good oral hygiene habits. Learn how you can help prepare your child for their first dental visit. The goal of the AAPD is to have a cavity free generation by the year 2000. The results we can only smile about!

An informal discussion will follow a slide and video presentation.

For your convenience, free babysitting is available. Space is limited to this informative, no-cost health lecture.

Cluster System is still best way

When Midland school trustees consider the issue of Controlled Choice at tonight's board meeting, they should take the pragmatic approach and leave the current plan — the court-approved cluster system — in place.

It may not be the perfect arrangement, but it works.

And, while the Controlled Choice concept can certainly function as an effective desegregation tool, as well, it cannot guarantee a better education for all children and it does not reduce the cost of busing students from one location to another. If anything, Controlled Choice, especially if implemented in grades K-6, as recommended by a local group of educators and citizens who recently visited two school districts where Controlled Choice is used, will require more — not less — tax dollars for busing.

Likewise, the need to provide enrichment programs at local schools — as a tool to attract students of all races to parts of town in which they do not reside — will cost even more money than is now being spent by the school district. (For example, MISD officials might choose to place a strong computer program at a school in southeast Midland as an attempt to attract children of Anglos in northwest Midland to that part of town.)

So implementing Controlled Choice will not come cheaply when it comes to tax dollars.

Nor will it come cheaply in terms of emotional dollars.

The biggest controversy surrounding the current debate centers around concerns expressed by Midland's minorities, who fear — justly or not — that Controlled Choice is nothing more than a disguised means of returning to the segregated one-race neighborhood schools of the past.

"The cluster system came about as a response to segregation," said Alma Marshall, a leader in the minority community. "In 1976, people in this community came together to solve the problem, and the cluster system was a compromise.

"Seventeen years later, you want us to compromise again. We have sat, we have talked and we have compromised. We have a consent decree that says we will not raise this issue again."

And that — the consent decree — is an integral part of this controversy.

In the mid 1970s, when Midland was still debating how best to integrate its schools, all parties involved in the lawsuit — the school board, the plaintiffs who filed the suit, the U.S. Justice Department, and the federal courts — agreed that the current cluster system was an acceptable compromise. As a result, the "consent decree" — which basically states that as long as the cluster system remains in place no lawsuit can be filed — went into effect.

But as soon as the cluster system is altered or replaced, the consent decree is no longer in place. The lawsuits can then fly.

And you can be sure they will.

Members of the minority community already have indicated such a lawsuit will be filed if — and when — the Controlled Choice plan is implemented.

And that, of course, means even more tax dollars will have to be spent defending a system we don't believe accomplishes enough to justify the costs.

This is not to say that the board should automatically run and hide from every threat of a lawsuit. But in this case, the fight is not worth the headache. Indeed, we find it difficult to locate the "benefits" Controlled Choice brings to the table.

There is an old saying: "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

While the cluster system may not be the perfect — or ideal — desegregation plan, it has done its job for the past 18 years. It was a compromise agreed upon by all parties at a time of great controversy. And we see no reason why it should be changed at this time.

School trustees should keep the current program in place.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 25, the 145th day of 1993. There are 220 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 25, 1979, 275 people died in America's worst domestic air disaster when an American Airlines DC-10 crashed at Chicago's O'Hare airport.

On this date:

In 1787, the Constitutional Convention was convened in Philadelphia after enough delegates had shown up for a quorum.

In 1793, 200 years ago, Father Stephen Theodore Badin became the first Roman Catholic priest to be ordained in the United States, in a ceremony in Baltimore.

In 1810, Argentina began its revolt against Spain.

In 1946, Transjordan (now Jordan) became a kingdom as it proclaimed its new monarch, King Abdullah Ibn Ul-Hussein.

In 1961, President Kennedy asked the nation to work toward putting a man on the moon by the end of the decade.

In 1963, 30 years ago, the Organization of African Unity was founded, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

In 1968, 25 years ago, the Gateway Arch, part of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial in St. Louis, was dedicated in a rain-soaked ceremony presided over by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

Wife, child are only real treasures

A friend of mine became a father for the first time last week. He's even older than I am.

Grizzard

Yesterday we were sitting on the front porch of the fraternity house drinking beer. Today, he's got a son.

I remember what the old folks used to say: "Lord, where does the time go?"

I didn't understand them then. I do now.

So we talked about his kid.

"He's got more hair now than I do," said my friend, whose bald spot showed up four or five years ago.

"How big was he when he was born?" I asked.

"Eight pounds, 11 ounces. He's going to be a big 'un."

"Did you get to hold him right after he was born?"

"Yeah, I had to scrub up, and then I got to hold him. That's when I really realized I had a son. That's when the bonding really takes place between father and son."

We never talked about it, but I always assumed my friend had his heart set on a boy child.

He's an ex-jock who still is competitive as ever on a tennis court, the golf course or in his den throwing darts.

After school, he flew airplanes, went to a war, went into business and built a home the size of a small town.

A man like that wants a son.

His wife wanted him in the room with her when she bore him his child.

"I guess you were pretty happy when you saw it was a boy," I said to him.

"It wasn't like that," he said. "My thoughts were more with my wife than with anything else. She was a trouper."

"You mean she was in a lot of pain?"

"Let me put it to you this way — if it were up to me and you had to have babies, there wouldn't be very many around."

I was impressed with his concern for his wife taking precedence over anything else. Knowing him, knowing me, knowing how much a son would mean to him, and knowing the general insensitivity of most men, I sensed a friend entering another phase of his life.

One where a man comes to peace with himself, there's the wind to move him an inch, and knows, without doubt, that in wife and child he has the only treasures that really matter anyway.

Lord, where does the time go?

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Take a reality check, baby, and get a life!

"Government by all-nighters is getting tired," Newsweek wrote in its Conventional Wisdom Watch, the sprightliest section of the magazine. It advised the youthful Clinton White House staff, "Go to sleep and get a life."

Safire

An all-nighter, which only a generation ago described a leisurely arrangement with a prostitute, has changed its meaning to "a nightlong session of studying, or cramming, for an examination." More to the newsworthy point, however, is the growing use of the imperative expression Get a life!

"There are those who say that early citations of Get a life! might shed light on its origin," writes Michael J. Keyes of Coram, N.Y., "but I doubt it. Get a life! is a fine example of language as it is reinvented by children. I first heard the expression, spoken quietly but with the force of an expletive, from a teen-ager several years ago."

Teen-agers, unfortunately, rarely publish their comments. The first citations I can find were published in UCLA Slang, edited by Pamela Munro, reporting in 1989 on research going back to 1983. One read: "Geez, Joe, you're a 27-year-old burger fryer at Big Tommy's. Get a life!" The other followed the operative phrase with a series of exclamatory imperatives: "Do something constructive with your time! Stop being such a jerk! . . . Have some ambition!"

An early media usage is found in an Oct. 27, 1989, Chicago Tribune movie review by Caitlin Creevy. In "Fat Man and Little Boy" (nicknames for the first two atomic bombs), a character named Kathleen commented on the connotation of an adjective: "Naked — isn't that a beautiful word? Tonight — I want to make love." In panning the picture, the reviewer wrote: "And she was being totally serious. Kathy, baby, get a life." The use of the phrase without explanation suggests common usage at that time in the teen vernacular.

The phrase was picked up and popularized throughout the culture in the fall of 1990 as the title of a Fox Broadcasting situation comedy starring Chris Elliott as a childlike 30-year-old newspaper boy. About that time, a Los Angeles Times writer, Elliott Almond, covering a widely practiced sport, observed: "David Farmer discovered early that not everyone appreciated his obsession with bicycling. In the fifth grade, he was dropped by a girlfriend who told him to get a life. More than a decade later, Farmer is one of the United States' leading professional riders."

We can speculate that the expression originated as "Get on with your life," influenced by a comment like "You call that a life?" What we know is that the phrase, like reality check, is a young person's way of deriding a preoccupation with superficiality or fixation on fiction. As such, this godsend of a phrase is a with-it way of awakening those who have been too taken with being with-it. It says, "Be sensible; grow up; get real." Underneath that, it says: Stop pretending that imitating the lifestyle of celebrities, or living the life of the dropout, or playing the role of the alienated in a previous generation, or striking the pose of the exhausted savior of political humanity is connected to the need to grow and develop and make plans for the future.

As a vogue phrase, it can be derided, but as a waker-upper, Get a life! is conservative, constructive advice. Don't knock it.

"The Case for 'Compellance' " was the headline over a particularly insightful essay in The New York Times last month, calling on President Clinton to bomb the Serbians in Bosnia into a cease-fire. "Needed also is strategic coercion," wrote the columnist: "compellance is the word now being heard in the Pentagon. It means the use of air power to persuade by punishment. Compellance is not obliteration. . . . Rather, its sudden infliction of national pain . . . is intended to encourage negotiation by leveling more than playing fields."

I spelled it wrong, twice in the copy and once in the headline. A Pentagonian sent me a speech by Les Aspin, then a mere Rep. and now SecDef, on Sept. 21, 1992: "The debate . . . will hinge on two questions — one, something called escalation and, two, something called compellence." After defining escalation, which we all know and I can spell, Congressman Aspin dealt with the new word: "Compellence is the use of military force against an adversary to influence his behavior elsewhere. The issue of compellence is at the heart of the argument made by the limited objectives camp."

Where did he get the word? In came this missive from a Princeton professor, Avinash Dixit: "This is a rare instance where the person who coined the word gave an explanation for his choice." He attached a page from the 1966 book "Arms and Influence," by Thomas C. Schelling.

"There is, then, a difference between deterrence and what we might, for want of a better word, call compellence," Schelling wrote. Searching for a relationship similar to statics and dynamics, Schelling synonymized: "Coercion covers the meaning but unfortunately includes 'deterrent' as well as 'compellent' intentions. Intimidation is insufficiently focused on the particular behavior desired. Compulsion is all right but its adjective is 'compulsive,' and that has come to carry quite a different meaning. Compellence is the best I can do."

Pollsters survey discontented Americans

Every columnist worth his or her salt is obligated to write one open letter to the President telling him what he should do to put the country back on its feet.

Buchwald

I'm offering my advice early on in hopes of getting a tax break.

Dear President Clinton:

As far as I can see you're doing well, despite your job ratings. Keep in mind that pollsters talk only to discontented Americans who have had a humiliating experience with the post office.

So far, I would give you an A-pius, but there's always room for improvement. When things aren't going well in Washington, I am told that one of your major strategies is to zip off on a Greyhound bus and take your case to the American people.

This is not the best way to deal with things. When the going gets tough, the tough stay home. Nobody wants to shake hands with a President who is having trouble with Congress and can't get his act together.

It is only when things are going well that the public is anxious to scream and wave flags.

Taking your story to the heartland is wishful thinking because the same media types who cover you in Washington are also covering you when you go on your trips. Inevitably, they will write that you got a lousy reception when appealing directly to the people.

Mr. President, there is a perception, fostered by cartoonist Garry Trudeau, that your staff is too young and that they run the country by playing Nintendo in the White House.

The way to deal with this is to hire some mature staffers in their early 30s even though they tend to forget things. You also need to announce that every third person you appoint will not be from Little Rock, although you still intend to give the Arkansas seat on the Supreme Court to someone from Hillary's old law firm.

Mr. President, I suggest that you stop explaining your tax plan and budget strategy to high school kids. I know that it's a photo op, but the TV cameras have been zooming in on students who are sleeping while you're talking and this isn't good for your image.

Instead of taking your message to high schools, it might be better to clarify for the voters what you are trying to do to Congress, whose members are torn between supporting you or getting re-elected in 1994.

Eventually you're going to have to choose between Judy Collins and Barbra Streisand. Before you do, make sure that the one you pick has a green card.

You don't have to dump one or the other publicly — you could do it quietly by barring either of them from sleeping in the Lincoln Bedroom.

I could load you down with a lot more advice, but I think that this is all you can handle right now. There's one more thing I want to warn you about. Be sure to keep your eye on Al Gore. I don't like the way he never says anything. He's acting weird for a Vice President, and the public is getting the impression that the longer he stays quiet, the more he knows things that you don't.

We won't let West destroy us, Muslims say

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The Muslim-led government announced Monday that it would actively oppose any action to carry out the joint Western strategy for ending the bloodshed in this former Yugoslav republic.

"We will not accept implementation," said Sulejman Sulic, undersecretary of foreign affairs. He said Bosnia would urge the Security Council to reject the strategy and would continue to press military operations against Serbian nationalist forces.

"We will not allow the United States, Europe and Russia to foist on us a plan that destroys our state," Sulic said. He said the strategy, announced Saturday in Washington, was unacceptable because, among other things, it does not emphasize Bosnia's sovereignty and territorial integrity, nor does it require Serbs to withdraw from areas from which they have driven Muslims and Croats.

Announcement of the strategy has dashed the Bosnians' hope that after months of dangling the prospect of military intervention, the Clinton administration would at least prod the European Community and Russia into lifting a U.N. arms embargo against the Bosnian army.

The arms embargo has effectively maintained the overwhelming firepower of the Serbian nationalists, who initiated the war 13 months ago with weaponry from the Yugoslav army.

(In Belgrade on Monday, President Dobrica Cosic of Yugoslavia gave qualified support to the allied strategy on Bosnia. Cosic told Vitaly I. Churkin, the Russian mediator, that he was relieved that the international community had decided not to intervene militarily in what he called a civil war.)

Under the new Western strategy, the only action to be taken against the Serbs would be stricter enforcement of U.N. economic sanctions. The sanctions imposed last summer on Serbia and Montenegro, the two republics still in the Yugoslav federation, have failed to restrain Serbian military activity in Bosnia, and on Monday Serbs continued to shell parts of Sarajevo, Maglaj and other towns.

After praising the new strategy on Sunday, the Bosnian Serbs' leader, Radovan Karadzic, said Monday that he opposed one facet: the posting of U.N. troops on Serb-held territory to monitor traffic between Serbia and Bosnia. Yugoslavia has maintained that monitors are superfluous because the United States and Russia have satellites to check the traffic.

In conversations this afternoon punctuated by the snap of sniper bullets along Vasa Miskina Street, the main pedestrian mall, Sarajevans expressed frustration and hostility toward the allied strategy and toward the United States. The smooth stone surface of the mall was still smeared with the dried blood of shoppers caught by a Serbian shell two days ago.

"We had faith that the Americans, if nothing else, would behave like gentlemen," said Murat Efendic, a member of the military mission from Srebrenica, a Bosnian town that has been declared a "safe area" by the United Nations. "Clinton talked a lot," he said. "But instead of leading, the Americans followed — of all people — the Russians."

Mustafa Hajrulahovic, the commander of the Sarajevo Army Corps, said in an interview with the newspaper Oslobodjenje: "The demilitarization process will be transformed into the formation of reservations, enclaves in which the most endangered, in this case, the Muslims, will be placed. It is imperative for us to mobilize to our maximum capacity and to oppose it in the only way we can, and that means to fight."

On Sarajevo television this evening, against the backdrop of scenes from Clinton's election campaign and pictures of Secretary of State Warren Christopher, an announcer read a chronology of the Clinton administration's shifting statements.

Navy airman pleads guilty in murder of gay sailor

Case has become a cause celebre for many gay rights activists, coming as Washington is debating lifting a ban on homosexuals in the military.

YOKOSUKA, Japan (AP) — Accepting a sailor's guilty plea in the killing of his homosexual shipmate, a military court opened hearings Monday to determine whether he will spend the rest of his life in prison.

The plea by Navy Airman Apprentice Terry Helvey — part of a plea bargain in the widely watched case — means the eight-member jury of military officers will decide only on the sentence. That may minimize discussion whether the killing of Allen R. Schindler, whom Helvey confessed to beating to death last fall, was related to his homosexuality.

The case has become a cause celebre for many gay rights activists, coming as Washington is debating lifting a ban on homosexuals in the military. Gay rights activists say the killing illustrated a pervasive animosity toward homosexuals in the U.S. military.

"This ban is literally killing gays," said Mike Petrelis, a member of the gay group Queer Nation attending the trial in Yokosuka, a port south of of Tokyo where the U.S. 7th Fleet is headquartered.

No motive for the killing was offered in Monday's opening testimony or in pretrial hearings.

The presiding judge, Cmdr. David P. Holcombe, began the session by accepting Helvey's plea of guilty to murder with intent to commit great bodily harm, for which the maximum sentence is life.

The plea was part of a pretrial agreement under which Helvey would not be tried for premeditated murder, for which he could have faced the death penalty.

Holcombe also accepted Helvey's pleas of guilty to two counts of assault on Navy shore patrolmen and of making false statements and a plea of innocent to a charge of obstructing justice.

Helvey, 21, of Westland Mich., is being tried for killing a shipmate on the USS Belleau Wood, last October in a public restroom in a park near Sasebo Naval Base. The Belleau Wood is based in Sasebo, 610 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Another of Schindler's shipmates on the Belleau Wood, Airman Charles Vins, 21, of Sturgis, Mich., was arrested with Helvey and found guilty of not reporting a crime and resisting arrest. Vins served four months in a military jail under a pretrial agreement to testify against Helvey.

Helvey originally told investigators he beat Schindler after Schindler made sexual advances toward him in the restroom just before midnight last Oct. 27. Helvey has since recanted that claim.

At the time he was killed, Schindler was awaiting discharge from the Navy for acknowledging in September that he was gay.

At a pretrial session earlier this month, Helvey said he was drunk at the time of the attack.

Schindler's mother, Dorothy Hajdys, said she was pleased that Helvey's guilty plea was accepted because if he had pleaded innocent, the trial could have dragged on "for 10 years."

She is expected to testify Tuesday that when she was asked to identify her son's body, his head was caved in, his genitals were mutilated and all but two ribs were broken.

Helvey's mother also is attending the trial.

Helvey appeared relaxed as Holcombe accepted his pleas and explained that both the judge and Helvey had the right to withdraw the pleas at any time during the trial.

Three witnesses were called Monday — two shore patrolmen and the seaman who reported the attack.

Catholic cardinal killed during shootout between rival drug lords in Guadalajara

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Roman Catholic cardinal was killed Monday when his car apparently drove into the middle of a shootout at the international airport in Guadalajara. The cardinal's driver and at least five other people also died.

Cardinal Juan Jesus Posadas Ocampo, 66, and his driver were killed in what appeared to be a shoot-out between drug traffickers. Five other people were also killed, said Dr. Manuel Sanchez, a spokesman for the Guadalajara Red Cross.

The international airport was closed and police surrounded the area, and army helicopters were flying overhead, said Frencelia Jaurejui, a reporter with Siglo 21 newspaper in Guadalajara.

Possession charge

ODESSA — Two Odessa residents were arrested for possession of methamphetamine Friday.

According to a police report, officers of the Ector County District Attorney's office and the Odessa Police Department executed a search warrant at 13090 Citation at 8:20 p.m. Friday. During the search, a quantity of methamphetamine was found with an estimated street value of $50. There was also a total of $1,362 seized from the residence, police said.

Kenneth Galous Sewell, 40, and Dorthy Ann Sewell, 37, were both charged with possession of methamphetamine and bond was set at $5,000 each.

'Canned hunts'

AUSTIN — A bill aimed at outlawing "canned hunts" has apparently died in the House.

Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, said Monday that the measure would not be set for consideration by the full House in time to beat a legislative deadline.

However, he said, he plans to try to attach the bill as an amendment to other legislation.

Under current Texas law, canned hunts — the practice of setting up the killing of wild animals that have been kept in captivity — are legal unless the animal involved is listed as federally endangered or threatened.

Moncrief's measure would restrict the ownership of certain wild animals, strengthen enforcement and regulate licensing and inspection of wild animal facilities.

A similar bill by Moncrief in 1991 died in the crush of bills that failed as the session ended.

This session, the Senate passed the bill April 16.

Gardner leaves rough to write

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

■ From exploding moonshine and rattlers in the rough, writer finds success at local magazine.

Thelma Gardner lived in an oil camp, traveled with a famous semi-pro baseball team and had homemade moonshine explode on her stove — all before she reached the age of 25.

The bride of a Big Lake Oil Co. employee, Mrs. Gardner moved to 50,000 acres known as the Texon oil camp in 1933 from the town of Big Lake. And for the next five years, she and other Texon residents made a close-knit community out of a barren piece of oil land.

"It really wasn't bad," Mrs. Gardner said. "Big Lake was only a little ol' country town at that time, so the change wasn't that big. Besides, I was young, married and madly in love. I was proud of my new home."

She started to that new home with her husband Roy, whom she met while she was a basketball player at the high school in Big Lake. Roy, an oil company employee, came to Big Lake to see a basketball tournament and was introduced to the woman he would later marry.

Having just passed her 20th birthday, Mrs. Gardner moved to Texon in October 1933, a place she calls "a wonderful community."

"We really had it good there, better than most oil camps," she said. "Everything was paid for by the company. We were really pampered."

The community had a post office, a golf course, a church, tennis courts, a hospital, theater, Boy Scout troops and shotgun houses. However, it most famous fixture was its baseball team — the Texon Oilers.

A semi-pro team, the Oilers put Texon on the map when they went to Denver in 1928 and won the national semi-pro title. And, Mrs. Gardner's husband was named the most outstanding player.

"Oh, that was wonderful," Mrs. Garnder said of the victory. "Of course, I already knew Roy was the most out-

Culver Youth Home to receive help

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

■ Midland County officials seek effective ways to deal with and discipline delinquent youths confined to the facility.

While delinquent teen-agers may be becoming more violent, the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday agreed to hire four part-time workers in a plan to make Culver Youth Home more secure and more effective in working with youths confined in the facility.

"Run them around the block a hundred times three times a day," Commissioner Henry Goulet suggested at the Commissioners' Court meeting. "That would slow them down a bit."

But that wouldn't be permitted by law, said County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer.

"We cannot force them to do any (demanding) exercise . . . thanks to legislation and our federal courts," Seltzer said.

Instead, the Commissioners' Court, in a 4-1 vote, agreed to hire four part-time detention workers at $5.50 per hour to complement Culver Youth Home's 10-member full-time staff, a cook and one part-time worker.

Chief Juvenile Probation Officer Adolfo O. Salcido requested the extra help three weeks after eight youths broke out of the home and scaled a fence after staging a "mini-riot" on the night of May 6.

The home, in northeast Midland, maintains bunks for 20 youths.

Seven of the eight boys who escaped were captured on the night of the breakout, and the eighth boy was arrested at his family's house several days later.

Commissioner Louisa Valencia voted against hiring the extra help, and Goulet cast a "reluctant" aye vote.

And while Commissioner Guy McCrary said that he didn't agree that the lack of staff "was the cause of the breakout," McCrary voted for the extra staffing, which could help prevent "another breakout," he said.

Seltzer and Commissioner Win Brown also voted for the extra help for the youth home, which operates on an annual $808,619 budget jointly maintained by Midland County and the state of Texas.

Krueger brings campaign back to Permian Basin

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Less than a week after his last visit to the Permian Basin, interim U.S. Sen. Bob Krueger was back in Midland Monday, denouncing his opponent's health care proposals.

"There is no issue more important to the incoming senator than that of health care," Krueger said at a press conference at the Avion Flight Centre at Midland International Airport. "And, my position couldn't be more different than my opponents."

Krueger is running against Kay Bailey Hutchison to keep the senate seat he was appointed to by Gov. Ann Richards after President Bill Clinton selected then-Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as U.S. Treasury Secretary. The runoff election is scheduled for June 5.

Krueger quoted Ms. Hutchison from an article in the Houston Post as saying that she favors workers buying insurance directly from insurance companies, instead of from the companies they work for.

Defendants plead guilty to offenses

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Before their trials, which were scheduled to begin Monday, four defendants accused of federal offenses entered guilty pleas before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton. In addition, three other defendants entered guilty pleas before Bunton.

Each defendant will be sentenced on July 27 following a presentencing investigation on their backgrounds and prior, if any, criminal offenses.

Charles Homer Cranford entered a guilty plea to misprision of a felony when he did not notify authorities of the knowledge he had about an arson fire set at an Odessa Club.

Fred Scott Barlow plead guilty to conspiracy to commit bank fraud. An undisclosed amount of money from Amoco Credit Union was involved in the case, court officials said.

Ruperto Saenz was convicted of possession with intent to distribute 12.21 grams of heroin. Saenz and three other defendants were arrested after an ongoing DEA sting in Odessa that lasted for several months. The three other defendants entered guilty pleas to the charges on May 17.

Two men were convicted of illegal re-entry to the United States after a felony conviction. Guadalupe Terrazas-Lujan and Bivian Villalobos-Madrid are both subject to up to five years in prison, up to a $250,000 fine and up to three years of supervised release.

Another second misprision of a felony conviction was netted when Joyce Webster pleaded guilty. Ms. Webster was the bookkeeper for a man who was convicted May 17 of defrauding Olney Savings & Loan of $19,000 by "padding" figures he was cha ging the financial Tommy Wayne Aycock was convicted of being a felon in possession of a firearm. He was previously convicted in state court on a charge of aggravated assault on a police officer. He faces up to 10 years in prison, a fine up to $250,000 and up to five years of supervised release.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Home burglarized

Police are looking for a suspect in a home burglary that occurred Sunday.

According to a police report, Jose Quintana, 31, reported to police that while he was out-of-town, his residence, 3213 Mariana Ave., was burglarized. Approximately $2,700 of electronic equipment was taken. Entry was gained by breaking out a back window, police said.

Child suffers injury

ODESSA — An Odessa man was arrested Sunday night on charges of injury to a child.

According to a police report, at approximately 9:30 p.m. Saturday, the Odessa Crimes Against Persons Section of the Criminal Investigation Division were notified of a 23-month-old child, Jessie Edward Bass, who was at Medical Center Hospital in serious condition with injuries to his head. After an investigation into the incident, a warrant was issued for Timothy Wayne Lancaster, 27. He was arrested at approximately 11:40 p.m. Sunday and charged with injury to a child. Bond was set at $7,500.

Robbery charge

A Midland man was in jail Monday after attempting to shoplift items from Mervyn's on Sunday, police reported.

According to a police report, 21-year-old Shawn Cook was attempting to shoplift various items from the store, 3001 W. Loop 250, when the store's loss prevention agent Brady Sowell, 24, attempted to detain him at approximately 5 p.m. A fight ensued and Cook caused bodily injury to Sowell, who was able to hold Cook until police officers arrived.

Sowell was treated by fire and ambulance personnel.

Cook was charged with robbery. Bond had not been set by Monday evening.

Range fires burn over 36,000 acres

VAN HORN, Texas (AP) — Eight major wild range fires and several smaller ones have burned 36,400 acres in far West Texas, with several blazes expected to smoulder for days, the Texas Forest Service says.

A 20,400-acre fire still was burning in a remote area 28 miles northwest of Fort Davis Monday afternoon, officials said.

The other, more minor fires all had been controlled since the Texas Forest Service and Van Horn firefighters were called into action last Wednesday.

Another fire was reported Sunday near Cornudas, about 90 miles east of El Paso, but New Mexico firefighters were working the blaze.

standing player."

The victory in Denver was only part of the fun Mrs. Gardner remembers from her travels with the team. The Oilers always played against the team from Del Rio, but, oddly, only seemed to beat them at home.

"Somehow, Mexican food, margaritas and beer just didn't go well with playing baseball," she said.

Mrs. Gardner took up golf when the course was first built but later switched to tennis.

"All my balls kept landing in the rough, which was largely inhabited by rattlesnakes," she said. "Roy decided that for my own safety, I should switch recreational activities."

The Gardners moved from Texon to Sinton in 1938 and it was there that Mrs. Gardner was able to indulge in her first love — writing. Having been editor for her high school's newspaper, she took extension courses in journalism from the University of Texas. And, while in Sinton, she moved for the weekly newspaper.

"I always wanted to write," she said. "I guess I got the bug when my dad owned a filling station that had an old beat-up typewriter in it that I loved to type on."

After she moved to Midland in 1946, she worked with for several independent oil operators. However, she said the time she loved best was the nine years she spent working with Midlander magazine and two years with M magazine.

"With all that I have done, the Midlander was the best," she said. "It was all local stuff and we did everything."

Although Texon is now a barren patch of land owned by Marathon Oil Co., Mrs. Gardner and the five other remaining first-generation Texon residents keep the community's memory alive with a reunion every year during the first weekend in June. There, Texon residents and their children meet and reminisce over good times.

"The people in Texon bonded together with a closeness not even found in some families," she said. "We were more a family than a community. And, you can't forget that."

"for what the misfits of society are dropping on your doorstep," Seltzer told him.

Rather, said Seltzer, "These folks are getting more violent. These children were problems when we got them.

"I don't think the system is failing as much as the parents are failing," Seltzer said. "We didn't create the problem."

However, Mrs. Valencia doubted the efficacy of the youth home to straighten out delinquent boys and girls.

"It seems the system is not working," Mrs. Valencia said. She said that the father of one of the May 6 escapees was discouraged that his son was not reformed.

"The boy is 6-(foot)-1, and he's afraid of him," Mrs. Valencia said.

The boy just got a "slap on the hand" at Culver Youth Home, Mrs. Valencia said the boy's father told her. "All they have is a country-club atmosphere. They get up (in the morning). They watch TV. They have a few hours of class. They play pool. They exercise," Mrs. Valencia said the boy's father told her.

"Just because they (delinquent youth) come in, we cannot lock them up and forget them," Salcido said.

Seltzer said of one of the juvenile escapees, "He is a problem, and he continues to be a problem," the judge said. The youth and other delinquents "are going down that road less traveled."

Seltzer said that the "only way" that the breakout by that boy could have been prevented would be by holding him in "maximum security."

The cell doors from which the boys escaped could be kicked open, Salcido said, and are being replaced with "heavy-duty steel doors."

Still, Goulet proposed a "real tough work program" similar to what 1990 Texas gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams of Midland had proposed for Texas prisoners.

"I don't think you can put these kids on hard labor," Seltzer said. Teen-agers view themselves as almost invincible.

"When you are kid," Seltzer said, "you are bullet-proof, and you are stupid." Some even imagine that if they cut their toes off, "they will grow back," Seltzer said.

But "not all" of teen-agers' problems are rooted in the home, Mrs. Valencia said.

"It's the environment out there," said Mrs. Valencia, who alluded to the detrimental effect of violence portrayed in television programming.

"Something is wrong with the (criminal-justice) system," said Goulet, who was critical of "all these rulings by these judges where you can't correct your children anymore.

"If a parent tries to correct his child, the first thing, if someone sees it, they are going to file child-abuse charges against" the parent. The school system is not allowed to touch a child anymore," Goulet said. "That's part of your problem."

Salcido noted that the criminal-justice system for adults is "geared more toward punishment: get them out there, work them up, let them bust rock, let up them run until they almost drop."

That discipline-punishment approach is not allowed in the juvenile system, Salcido said.

However, delinquent youth at Culver Youth Home are subjected to school lessons and to limited exercise but not to work or punishment.

"That (aerobic exercise) is good for anybody but not as punishment," Salcido said. "The juvenile system is geared more toward change through rehabilitation."

Salcido did say that many people "fail to recognize that the kids who come into our program have already been into that type of (delinquent) behavior way long before they got to us.

"I think parents have to be more accountable, have to take more responsibility instead of just waiting for probation or the juvenile-justice system to take care of it. Many times, it is difficult to really change them for the time (six months to a year) that we do have them," Salcido said. "You just have to be understanding and have a willingness to commit and try to work with them and try to turn them around."

Conference committee approves penal code bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Members of a House-Senate conference committee on Monday agreed to a compromise bill overhauling the state's criminal justice code that would include keeping homosexual sodomy a crime and add tougher penalties for hate crimes.

The committee, composed of five senators and five House members, unanimously endorsed the bill. It now goes back to the House and Senate for final approval.

Ending a weekend deadlock over the sodomy issue, the panel agreed to keep homosexual sodomy a crime, as in current law. It rejected a House-passed bill that would have made heterosexual sodomy a crime as well.

Sen. John Whitmire, sponsor of the criminal code overhaul, said that while he objected to including the sodomy law, he didn't want to jeopardize passage of the entire bill by continuing to argue over the issue.

"I hate to have my name on a document that has any provision dealing with hate and discrimination. But I truly believe the House conferees and their leadership would allow this outstanding (document) to go down in defeat," said Whitmire, D-Houston.

The Senate voted to repeal the sodomy statute when it passed the penal code overhaul. However, the House tacked an amendment onto the bill to make sodomy a crime for all couples.

A constitutional challenge of the current sodomy law is pending before the Texas Supreme Court.

Whitmire and Sen. Carl Parker blasted Rep. Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, who authored the House amendment, for playing politics with the measure.

"The House, at least some of you, are gross hypocrites," said Parker, D-Port Arthur.

"We've got people being raped, we've got people being murdered . . . and because some man decides he wants a political issue and sticks it in here, we cave in and put junk like this in an otherwise good penal code," Parker said.

Chisum wasn't at the meeting. But Rep. Allen Hightower, D-Huntsville, told Parker: "You can kick on the House all you want to . . . It's not going to change the issue."

Also included in the penal code bill is a provision that would toughen laws for people convicted of crimes motivated by prejudice.

Under the amendment by Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, hate crime offenders would not be eligible for probation and would have to serve at least 10 years in prison. West said the provision is essential to the overall bill.

But House members said the provision had kinks that lawmakers have overlooked because they have been swayed by emotional arguments surrounding the issue.

Other provisions in the penal code measure would create a new "state jail" system for nonviolent first offenders, double prison time for certain criminals, expand the death penalty to other crimes and toughen sentences for offenses committed against children.

Meanwhile, a separate bill regarding hate crimes won preliminary House approval on Monday.

Under that measure, a person convicted of a hate crime could be fined up to $20,000 and be ordered to perform community service. The House version eliminated tougher Senate-endorsed provisions, including a mandatory 10-year prison sentence for murder.

West called the House bill "totally unacceptable," saying its passage places greater importance on the hate crimes provision in the penal code legislation.

"Punishments of community service hours and increased fines simply do not send a very strong message," he said. "I would hope the Legislature does the right thing and adopts this amendment, thereby sending a message to all Texans that crimes motivated by hate will not be tolerated."

Pilot dies when F-16 crashes

MINERAL WELLS, Texas (AP) — A pilot was killed when an F-16 fighter crashed in a rural area at the extreme northwest corner of Parker County, the Department of Public Safety said Monday.

The plane was manufactured by Lockheed Fort Worth Co., and was on an "acceptance flight," prior to delivery to the U.S. Air Force, a Lockheed spokesman said.

"The airplane is taken out four or five times before it's delivered and it's basically put through most of its paces mainly to see that all systems are working properly," said Joe Stout, a spokesman for Lockheed.

"My understanding is that the pilot took off from Lockheed at about 9:15 this morning, flew for approximately an hour and the accident occurred. I have no information right now as to the cause or the circumstances," Stout said. "Our concern right now is for (the pilot) and for his family."

The pilot, Joe Bill Dryden, 53, of Fort Worth, had been with General Dynamics since 1984. Lockheed purchased GD in March.

Before flying as a GD test pilot, Dryden had been an F-16 pilot in the U.S. Air Force since the early 1970s, Stout said. Dryden is survived by a wife and two children.

Lockheed frequently uses a runway that divides the facility from Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth.

The U.S. Air Force, which owned the jet, will search the cause of the accident. The National Transportation and Safety Board will not aid in the investigation since the plane, bearing tail number AF90-832, was not registered as a civilian crash.

He said that Ms. Hutchison's proposal would "send the health care system back to the 1920s."

Krueger spoke out against President Clinton's proposed Btu tax, saying that the oil and gas industry would benefit more with an import fee.

"Nothing is more important to Texas than the oil and gas industry," he said. "One in every seven jobs relies on this industry. I am working hard to get rid of the Btu tax and pushing my bill for an import fee."

Krueger said a Democrat needs to be elected so that Texas would not be represented by two minority senators.

"We would be the only one of the nine largest states in the nation not to have a majority representative if she (Ms. Hutchison) is elected," he said. "It is important that Texas have a representative that can work with the majority party in Washington. Phil Gramm can knock on the front door of the White House and she (Ms. Hutchison) could knock on the back, but they are not going to be let in."

Tape shows Koresh chided authorities for exercising force

HOUSTON (NYT) — Branch Davidian leader David Koresh — within hours of the Feb. 28 shootout in Waco — chided federal authorities for using force and indicated he would not have resisted had the ATF agents given him a chance, according to tape recordings obtained by the Houston Chronicle.

"It would've been better if you just called me up or talked to me," Koresh told ATF negotiator Jim Cavanaugh. "Then you all could have come in and done your work."

The recordings — made in the tense hours after the shootout while ATF agents attempted to negotiate a truce with Koresh — contain dozens of cellular telephone conversations and police radio transmissions.

The recordings also offer further evidence indicating Koresh knew the identity of the undercover agent placed by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in the Mount Carmel compound near Waco, Texas, who was using the name of Robert Gonzalez.

"I was telling Robert, you know, I told him this morning, I said, 'Look, I had this vision' and I told him,' I says,"Robert', I says, "you got to do what you got to do," Koresh said to Cavanaugh.

Koresh repeatedly implied on the recordings that he was the son of God, at one time imploring the negotiator to get the armed agents outside the compound to read a Bible so they would realize what they had done.

"Will you ask them to read Revelation 22 so they can know who they've shot," Koresh said. "Tell them all I wanted to do was show them the seven seals."

He elaborated: "When someone asks me who I am, I say 'Do you remember the cross?' And they go, 'Yeah.' And I say 'Let me show you. For 72 hours I was beaten up, ridiculed, laughed at, flogged.'"

Cavanaugh would not comment on the tapes or on his negotiations with Koresh.

Cavanaugh, the first federal agent to deal with Koresh, negotiated the cease-fire that allowed officials to recover ATF agents who were wounded and killed during the Sunday morning gunbattle.

ATF spokesman Jack Killorin said agents at the Mount Carmel compound gave Koresh an opportunity to surrender but he chose not to do so.

"ATF agents, when they arrived at the premises, called out their identity and their purpose to serve a federal search warrant," Killorin said.

ATF officials have consistently claimed their agents were ambushed by the Branch Davidians.

Killorin said ATF negotiators had a "consistently difficult" time getting Koresh off religious dogma and onto "matters at hand."

Critics have questioned why ATF officials sent more than 100 heavily armed agents clad in combat gear to serve their arrest and search warrants instead of employing more ordinary procedures. The U.S. Treasury Department, which oversees ATF, is investigating whether such a raid should have been staged.

Phillip Chojnacki, the special agent-in-charge of the Houston ATF office who directed the Feb. 28 raid, would not comment on why his agency did not attempt to arrest Koresh while he was away from the Mount Carmel compound.

"Until I am in court and testify in some fashion, I am prohibited from answering those kinds of questions," he said.

In addition to negotiations between Koresh and federal authorities, the recordings contain almost 90 minutes of conversations involving federal, state and local law enforcement officers, various telephone news interviews with Koresh, and numerous private conversations, including many between officers and individuals not connected with the ATF action.

Most of Koresh's comments are contained in one eight-minute segment of the recordings.

Al Yonovitz, a tape analysis expert with the University of Maine, said an analysis confirmed "with a very high degree of certainty" that the voices on the eight-minute tape segment were those of Koresh and Cavanaugh.

Yonovitz also said no evidence was found to indicate that the tape was tampered with. The possibility does exist, he said, that the recording could have been expertly manufactured using sophisticated digital technology. But Yonovitz said he has never encountered a tape fabricated in that manner.

"It would be very costly and you would need extraordinary resources to accomplish it," he said.

Killorin said he had no way of knowing when the tapes were made. Although he confirmed that the ATF taped many of its negotiations with Koresh, he did not know if the newly surfaced tapes overlapped existing ATF tapes, which are now in the hands of federal prosecutors.

Court raises question on election lawsuit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court Monday considered whether the state of Texas can settle a voting rights lawsuit even though its system of electing judges in nine counties has not been ruled illegal.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, with the blessing of the governor and a majority of lawmakers, is pushing the settlement, which would create minority-dominated judicial districts in nine urban counties, thus making it easier for non-whites to be elected state district judges.

But the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals was told that since courts have not issued a final ruling on the legality of the current system, Morales does not have the authority to settle the suit.

"This proposal settlement and its implementation would be illegal under Texas law because it would bypass the voters," said attorney Joe Jamail, representing an intervening judge. "You would allow the attorney general to amend the constitution of the state of Texas."

The Texas Constitution requires that sub-districting systems be submitted to voters in the affected counties, Jamail said. A settlement can be made only if a final federal court ruling says that provision violates the U.S. Voting Rights Act, he said.

The counties involved in the dispute — Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland, Tarrant and Travis — include many of the state's largest cities. In Harris County, often cited as a prime example of the problem, 42 percent of the population is minority, but of the area's 59 state district judges, less than 10 percent are minorities.

Judge Edith Jones asked whether sub-districts are needed. She pointed out that two minority members of the Houston City Council had been elected from at-large districts.

Rolando Rios, an attorney for League of United Latin American Citizens, argued that the settlement should be sent back to a district court for review and possible approval.

"I think everything the state has done through the attorney general, its statewide elected officials and both bodies of the Legislature is sufficient," to justify the settlement, he said.

"The state of Texas is not trying to avoid scrutiny through this process," he said.

The court did not indicate when it would rule.

Renea Hicks, an assistant state attorney general, also asked that a lower court be allowed to review the settlement.

Officials: First year of Texas Lottery a success

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — The Texas Lottery will mark its first anniversary Saturday.

It's been a year in which sales topped all projections, and the state Treasury will reap profits that ran more than 50 percent higher than expectations.

State Comptroller John Sharp, who initially opposed the game's creation, said Monday that he was pleased with the results.

"It's no secret that I didn't vote for the lottery, but if we're going to have one I'm certainly proud it's been the success it has," Sharp said.

Cash-strapped legislators, facing another budget deficit, decided in August 1991 to place a lottery referendum before voters. That November, by nearly a 2-to-1 margin, voters said "yes."

About dawn on May 29, 1992, Gov. Ann Richards bought the first scratch-card ticket from an Austin-area feed story, and lottery sales were under way 47 days earlier than originally scheduled.

Tickets that first day sold at a rate of about $1 million an hour. In the first week, sales totaled a record $102,400,000.

The Lottery has been offering new scratch-off games every six to eight weeks since. A total of 22 people have won $1 million top prizes in drawings from those scratch-card games.

The Lottery also was ahead of schedule — by eight weeks — in starting its "pick six" big-money lotto game.

Since the first drawing at 9:59 p.m. on Nov. 14, lotto games have offered jackpots ranging from about $2 million to $48.6 million, the largest so far, which was split by 14 players.

By this weekend, lottery officials say, Texans will have purchased more than 1.8 billion lottery tickets.

The legalized gambling games were estimated to bring the state $461 million during the two-year budget cycle ending Aug. 31.

They topped that figure earlier this year, hit $580 million in mid-May, and the state's profit now is projected at $731 million, 58 percent more than first estimated.

School finance conference committee ends talks

AUSTIN (AP) — House and Senate school finance negotiators broke up in angry disagreement Monday.

The talks ended after senators refused to discuss putting other education issues — such as relaxing the no pass, no play rule — in a compromise funding bill.

The blowup came one day before lawmakers have said they must complete a school finance compromise in order for it to be considered before a June 1 court deadline for reform.

If lawmakers miss the court's deadline, they face a cutoff of state education aid.

"Every time we hang another piece of junk on it, we're going to lose some (Senate) votes," said Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant. He adjourned the school conference committee until Tuesday over the wishes of some House members.

"We'll let it die here before we'll take it to the Senate in a mess," Ratliff said.

Negotiators already had agreed on a basic school funding structure that would give property-rich school districts several options for sharing their wealth with poorer ones.

Ratliff said other education changes could be addressed in a separate bill that has passed the House and Senate in different versions.

"I believe the agenda is trying to water down House Bill 72 reforms, and using the finance bill as the hostage to do that," Ratliff said.

But Rep. Libby Linebarger, D-Manchaca, disputed that. "It's certainly not the intent of anybody on this conference committee," she said.

The House version of the funding bill included a provision that could ease the no pass, no play rule that bars failing students from participating in extracurricular activities.

That six-week suspension from sports and other activities was a key provision in the landmark 1984 education reforms known as House Bill 72. But the House favored giving campus principals the option of reinstating students after three weeks if they improve their grades.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, said it is crucial to include some education changes in the school funding bill, such as increasing school district accountability and giving schools some relief from state mandates.

Leaving out such provisions "would put the bill in serious jeopardy" in the House, Stiles said.

Stiles said House negotiators wanted to continue working as Ratliff adjourned the meeting. "This is amazing. Take your ballgame and go home," Stiles said.

The House members said they were surprised that senators wouldn't at least agree to include in the school finance bill education provisions that the Senate already had agreed to in separate legislation, such as eliminating the teacher merit pay system.

If the Legislature fails to meet the court deadline for evening out funding available to school districts with different property wealth, state leaders have warned the state aid cutoff will start a process in which schools would close.

Earlier Monday, a group of property-poor school districts raised the prospect of a court challenge to the school funding portion of the bill being worked on.

Craig Foster, executive director of the Equity Center group, said that if the final measure includes provisions he's identified as unfair to poor districts, he would advise them "to pursue it as vigorously as they believe that they can" in court.

Ms. Linebarger, a leader of the conference committee, said Foster's criticism was premature.

"It seems to me that it would be wise to wait until the conference committee actually passed a bill before you go out and criticize," she said.

Police arrest church day care director on second sex charge

DENTON, Texas (AP) — The former director of a Denton church day care center has been accused for the second time of sexually abusing children under his care.

A week after posting bond on a sexual assault charge, Michael Allen Hillard, 28, was back in police custody Monday on a second charge relating to an investigation at Grace Temple Baptist Church Child Development Center.

Hillard resigned May 16 and was arrested May 17 on a single charge of aggravated sexual assault of a child. He was released the same day after posting $20,000 bond.

But Sunday, about 200 people at a church forum were told that a new allegation had been raised and that more cases might be forthcoming.

The day of Hillard's first arrest, detective Jim Brown said allegations concerned an alleged incident involving a 3-year-old boy at the day care center.

Parents of another boy, who is 5, went to the police after reading news accounts of Hillard's arrests, authorities said.

Brown was at Sunday's church forum and answered questions along with Donovan Davidson, pastor of the church, and counselors and day care committee members.

Some parents said they were frustrated by what they perceived as church secrecy surrounding the case.

One man said he was dismayed to get a brief church note Tuesday saying Hillard had resigned and had accepted a job in North Carolina, only to drive home and read of the former director's arrest.

Davidson defended the church's silence before the arrest, saying police requested that he not inform parents or teachers until after the investigation was complete.

TUESDAY, MAY 25, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Enjoy your accomplishments, but do not rest on your laurels. If you seize the moment in September, you can turn an unusual opportunity into the chance of a lifetime. Work to repair a relationship that you know is worth saving. You may have sent signals you did not mean. A last-minute change could turn important negotiations in your favor. Next December, you move up the leadership ladder. Cash flow improves early in 1994.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Connie Sellecca, jazz great Miles Davis, opera singer Beverly Sills, country singer Tom T. Hall.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your generosity to a partner could cost more than anticipated. Be understanding, not gullible. Make certain bills are current. Protect valuable items to prevent losing someone's friendship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be frank in both personal and business discussions. Direct answers will do a lot to improve your position. A member of the opposite sex enters the romantic picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Go all-out to increase your knowledge in areas helpful to career and business. A higher income could bring thoughts of moving. Your imagination may be working overtime in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get your home or office in better order. Family members will be cooperative. Set aside time to revise a budget; you need a clearer picture of your financial situation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A light touch can do wonders today. Your powers of persuasion are at an all-time high! Reach beyond your current expectations. Finish old projects before starting new ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Certain changes are rewarding, both financially and spiritually. Do not try to fight the inevitable. Envious co-workers have a lot to learn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Secret discussions, timely phone calls and quick decisions are all part of today's plan. Look forward to a welcome change of scene. Talk with someone who is restless.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The future takes on a rosy glow when someone shares confidential information, putting you in the know. Be prepared to assume the initiative in romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You take command when a financial, legal or overseas matter requires prompt attention. Use your savvy to influence other people and devise a long-term plan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An offer of publication could be serious. You correctly feel influenced by news from those at a distance. Strike a bargain. Do not be afraid to wear your heart on your sleeve.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You tend to see only what you want to see in people and projects. Be more realistic. Before you sign a contract, examine it closely for limitations and inaccuracies.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Money or relationship upsets could erupt without warning. Your calm handling of a work crisis puts the fire out and sends you home triumphant. Drop negative thought patterns.

TODAY'S CHILDREN need a quiet place to study or work. Otherwise, their natural curiosity may distract them from the job at hand. Developing good work habits at a young age is very important for these bright Geminis. They will want and need guidance in selecting a career. Witty, high-spirited and loving, today's children make wonderful companions.

Opening lead: Nine of ◇

Cover the East-West hands and assume you are declaring seven no trump. How would you go about it?

North might have jump shifted to three hearts, but elected to keep the bidding low in case room was needed to probe for the best spot. When South showed a good hand, North vainly tried to elicit a heart preference from partner. When that was not forthcoming, Blackwood revealed that all the aces were present and North bounced into the no-trump grand slam.

After a safe diamond lead, declarer could count ten fast winners. The other three could come from a winning finesse in either major. Which would you choose?

It is no improvement to cash one high heart before taking a finesse in that suit. If you are going to commit to the heart finesse, it is correct to take it immediately, so you can repeat the finesse successfully to protect against a 4-1 break.

You are on the right track if you have decided to cash the ace-king in one major and, if the queen does not drop, take the finesse in the other. Does it make any difference which major-suit ace and king you cash?

Go to the top of the class if you chose to cash the high hearts, the suit in which you hold eight cards, rather than spades, where you hold the same number of cards, but more flexibility to manipulate your assets. If the heart queen drops, that's that. If not, next cash the king of spades to guard against a singleton queen, then take the finesse. That still enables you to bring in the suit, if East holds four spades headed by the queen.

Clinton's bad hair day makes good target for Johnny Carson

NEW YORK — Johnny Carson was back in front of an audience Monday, hurling a barb at President Clinton's choice of a barber.

Carson, who retired from NBC's "Tonight" show a year ago, made the rare public appearance at a luncheon where he received an award from the non-profit Center for Communication, which stages seminars on media issues for college students.

Referring to Clinton's pricey trim last week by Beverly Hills stylist Cristophe, Carson wondered, "How can a populist go from a barber with three names to a guy with one?"

The luncheon drew top broadcasting, news and advertising figures, as well as former Carson sidekicks Ed McMahon, producer Fred De Cordova, and even Skitch Henderson, who was "Tonight" bandleader in the early 1960s.

Carson spoke warmly of his 30 years in late-night TV and spoke with awe about video technology that might one day transmit TV in three dimensions.

"But I'm not ready for Robin Leach to curl up with me in my living room," he said.

Carson was introduced by "Nightline" anchorman Ted Koppel, who hailed the comic for "giving pleasure to millions, night after night, for 30 years. Some of us have trouble giving pleasure to one person a couple of times a month."

LONDON — Princess Stephanie of Monaco has accepted a settlement of her libel lawsuit against the Daily Mirror for an article suggesting she demanded a large fee to attend a charity event, her attorney said Monday.

Stephanie

The amount of the settlement was not disclosed.

The lawsuit stemmed from a March 1992 report in the mass-circulation tabloid that suggested she had demanded a $100,000 fee to attend a charity event in Dublin, Ireland.

Martin Cruddace, attorney for the publishers, said in court that the report was unfounded. The company apologized and agreed to pay the princess' legal costs as well as the undisclosed damages.

Stephanie, 27, is the daughter of Prince Rainier and the late actress Grace Kelly.

NEW YORK — New CBS co-anchor Connie Chung probably will have better luck with Dan Rather than she did with her husband, Maury Povich. She could hardly get a word in edgewise Monday on Povich's show.

Povich and Mike Buchanan, a Washington TV anchor who had hired Chung as a copy writer fresh out of college in the mid-1960s, did most of the reminiscing as the syndicated show was taped before a studio audience. It is scheduled to be telecast Wednesday.

Chung, whose appointment as new co-anchor of the "CBS Evening News" was announced last week, received videotaped words of encouragement and praise from several female colleagues — among them Barbara Walters, who recalled that her own pioneering stint as an ABC co-anchor "just didn't work out." Another was CBS reporter Lesley Stahl, who asked: "Is it going to be Rather and Chung, or Chung and Rather?"

When Dutch first lady Ria Lubbers found 50 demonstrators picketing her front door, she didn't call the security men.

The wife of Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers brought out three bottles of wine and offered the protesters a drink instead.

Mrs. Lubbers had returned from a Sunday night reception at The Hague for former Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, only to be met by the student demonstrators.

They were protesting planned cuts in government grants to students as well as the planned abolition of unemployment benefits for those under 21.

Mrs. Lubbers stayed to chat two hours with the students over wine.

"It was nice of her to come outside," said Jurriaan de Vries, one of the protesters. "We felt it as support."

The students left after spending the night outside the prime minister's family home.

"We could have chased them away, but it's probably a bit Dutch not to," said Hans Van der Ploeg, the prime minister's chief spokesman.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Jazz legend Cab Calloway, who headlined Harlem's Cotton Club in the 1930s, led the crowd at commencement ceremonies at the University of Rochester in a sing-along of "Minnie the Moocher."

Introduced by university Provost Brian J. Thompson as "The King of Hi-De-Ho," Calloway celebrated his honorary doctorate in fine arts Sunday with a show-stopping rendition of his signature song.

Hands clapping and bodies swaying, an estimated 9,000 sang along as Calloway, clad in the ceremonial cap and gown, belted out the tune in his gravely voice.

Calloway, 85, whose film credits include "Porgy and Bess" and "The Blues Brothers," was born in Rochester and grew up in Baltimore.

DEAR ABBY

Wife raises stink over having houseguests

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have written to you several times to tell you how I feel about houseguests, but none of my letters were printed; however, now that you have asked your readers how they deal with the houseguest problem, I'm writing again.

Van Buren

I cannot stand having houseguests — or being a houseguest! My husband and his relatives are aware of this, but they continue to ignore the fact. This has caused many a rift in our marriage.

I am not a terrible person; I just know my limitations. People underfoot, messing up my house and robbing me of my privacy, is very stressful to me. I have gotten physically sick knowing I had to deal with houseguests.

My husband is welcome to visit his relatives as much as he wants, but I have told him repeatedly, "Leave me out of it!" I have never liked my in-laws or most of my husband's relatives because they never liked me, and they have made no secret of the fact.

I say, the quickest way to lose a friend or make an enemy is to have to live with him. Remember that old saying, "Friends and relatives in your house are like fish: After three days, they stink!" — FED UP IN OHIO

DEAR FED UP: Another reader shares your opinion about houseguests, but he clearly states his rules and regulations. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I live in San Francisco and own a large Victorian house on Guerrero Street, which many relatives and out-of-town friends find irresistible to visit.

After many arguments over who shall be our houseguests and how long they can stay, we finally made some rules. These are our criteria:

1. We insist on advance notice of at least two weeks. No ringing the doorbell with suitcases in hand, saying, "Hello! We wanted to surprise you."

2. We have a limit of three days, and only once a year, please.

3. Two people maximum each stay.

4. Guests must be independent: willing to rent a car, or take a sightseeing bus if they want a tour of the city.

5. Guests must eat what we eat. If they have special needs, they should bring or buy their own food.

6. They must be comfortable with two cockatiel birds in the house and three rabbits in our garden.

7. We have no maid service here. Guests must make their own beds and clean up their own messes.

Abby, these rules have worked fine for us. We have lost no friends, and we got rid of a lot of freeloaders and inconsiderate slobs. You may use my name if you want to. — FRANZ J. SOEHNGEN

DEAR FRANZ J. SOEHNGEN: There's nothing like being up-front and stating one's houseguest rules in advance. Bravo!

DEAR ABBY: In regards to mispronounced names: Our family name is "Venema," and for some reason, very few people get it right; so first, I spell it — then I say, "Venema — it rhymes with enema." It usually gets a chuckle, but they always remember it. — A MINNESOTA VENEMA

AT WIT'S END

If shoe fits, average kid probably won't wear it

By Erma Bombeck

A few months ago I wrote a naive column about how stupid it is to make TV commercials targeting kids when they don't have the spending power.

Bombeck

What I seem to have forgotten is that what they don't have in hard cash they make up for in serious whining.

Let's talk shoes.

The average child will own six pairs of shoes. There's the pair that felt great in the shoestore, but the minute he got them home, his feet had grown right through the ends of them. He will have a pair of "hard" shoes. These are nice, shiny ones that he could wear with a suit — had he not outgrown the suit right after his sister's wedding/brother's bar mitzvah-/communion/grandparents' anniversary.

He will proudly display a pair of cowboy boots that he bought with his own money, which took him three years to amass. They were supposed to make him taller, and then he found that when he was in pain, he lost two inches by crouching.

Sorted in a box on the shelf of the closet is a pair of bedroom slippers that his grandmother bought him to take to camp. They never made it out of the box and will never see daylight again.

Rattling around the closet is a pair of cheap generic tennis shoes. There is no one's name on them. They have not been endorsed by Michael Jordan or Charles Barkley. You can't pump 'em up and they don't glow in the dark. They cost 20 bucks. If the average child were to wear them, everyone would stare. The school paper would use it for a lead story, it would hit the wire services, and Oprah's people would call to see if he could do a show on "Children Who Suffer Shoe Abuse." There would be a movie-of-the-week starring Macaulay Culkin.

The sixth pair is the one he wears. Its appearance was preceded by a million dollars' worth of advertising that promised to make him a 7-foot center, clear up his skin and make him a legend in his own time. The shoes have no shoestrings and cost more than the doctor charged to deliver him.

The latest in the unbelievable world of sneakers is something called Deja Shoes. They are made from recycled tires, seat cushions, disposable diapers, wetsuit materials and assorted trash. Manufacturers will sell them from $40 to $65 a pop.

Parents have to be cool about this. We must band together and make it known that we love this shoe because it is politically correct and is the shoe to wear in the '90s. In fact, we must insist that their old shoes be thrown away and they wear this pair everywhere.

Will reverse psychology work? You're asking the wrong mother. I'm the one who sat up half the night drawing little alligators on the pockets of polo shirts.

Sheriff's wife plugs morale at county jail

By Dan Calderon
Associated Press writer

CORPUS CHRISTI — The sheriff's wife says she doesn't mind that her husband works long hours at the office or spends some nights touring the jail. Usually, she's right there with him.

Since Nueces County Sheriff J.P. Luby took office four months ago, his wife, Meta, has been a fixture at the Sheriff's Department, working alongside her husband as a volunteer public relations spokeswoman and morale booster.

The Lubys say it has been a good way for them to stay close as they enter their third year of marriage.

The 40-year-old Oklahoma native said she views their relationship as a partnership.

When the newly elected sheriff attended a conference for new sheriffs in January, his wife went with him, attending the classes and earning a certificate from the Sheriffs Association of Texas for completing the course.

When they returned, she was spending 40 hours a week on volunteer work at the department, so the sheriff gave her her own office.

It's small compared to the expansive space of the sheriff's office, but it's well-suited to her needs, she said. She invites any employee to talk with her about ways to improve working conditions and morale.

"When we won the election, we came in with the idea, 'Let's make this one big, happy family,' " she said. "The employees are very open with me. At first they were scared of me, but now, they're getting to know that this is how J.P. and I are."

Study finds fish-oil benefits

By Don Finley
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Fish oil, long suspected to have some benefit in preventing heart disease, also may help prevent the formation of kidney stones, a Scottish researcher said Sunday in San Antonio.

Fish oil was first examined by researchers after it was found that Eskimos living in Greenland on a diet of fatty fish had lower levels of heart disease.

"Epidemiological studies have also shown that the Eskimo has a low incidence of urolithiasis," or kidney stones, said Dr. A.C. Buck, a urologist with the Glasgow Royal Infirmary in Glasgow, Scotland.

Buck presented the findings at the American Urological Association's annual meeting.

Mechanical star of 'Urban Cowboy' bucks, spins, rides to comeback

By David E. Benson
Associated Press writer

PASADENA — "Urban Cowboy" isn't showing anywhere except living rooms anymore, but one of the film's stars is making a comeback on the crest of country music's resurging popularity.

Forget John Travolta, and it's not Debra Winger, either. Instead, a contraption known as El Toro is finding new life overseas and in America from would-be cowboys and cowgirls looking for enjoyment on the back of a mechanical bull.

Sherwood Cryer, one-time partner in Pasaden s landmark honkeytonk they called Gilley's Club, owns the patent on the bucking, spinning machinery that pulled lines of people into Gilley's and had country stars offering to play on the condition that the bulls would be shut down so folks would pay attention.

And after a hiatus from public life through the late 1980s and the early part of this decade, the bull is back.

That's according to Cryer, who says orders for the machines, produced in a small metal shop in Pasadena's tired northern section, are picking up.

"That bull was the star of Urban Cowboy. . . . That's what got it all going," Cryer claims, adding that he figures his income off mechanical bull sales at about $3 million in the wake of the film's 1980 release.

Things slowed down for several years after that, though. No longer were people donning hats and packing honkeytonks all over the United States, and no longer was it necessary to keep crews working 24 hours a day producing the bulls.

But then came Randy Travis and Clint Black and a host of their country cohorts, and the craze that's now spawning linedance instructional videotapes is also spurring plenty of interest in old El Toro, who's selling about as fast as he comes off the still-short assembly line.

"It's starting to get that way again. People are starting to get crazy again. . . . The market's starting to pick up," says Tim Crabb, who works with Cryer's son on a two-man crew that now makes the bulls .

Marshall resident recalls ill-fated DC-3 flight, 40 years later

By Derek S. Payne
Associated Press writer

MARSHALL — Delta Air Lines Capt. Douglas Volk lifted his Douglas DC-3 from Dallas Love Field Sunday, May 17, 1953, bound for Shreveport, La.

In just more than an hour Volk, his co-pilot, stewardess and 16 of his 17 passengers would be dead.

Flight 318 crashed about 2:15 p.m. that day in a grove of trees 13 miles east of Marshall. It remains the worst commercial aviation disaster in northeast Texas.

The Delta Air Lines flight left Dallas at 1:10 p.m. as scheduled en route to Atlanta with a planned stop in Shreveport.

At 1:52 p.m., Flight 318 reported to its company station in Longview that it was west of Gladewater. At this time Flight 318 received a weather update for Shreveport.

The weather between Marshall and Shreveport was lousy, with dark scattered clouds at 1,000 feet, ceiling of broken clouds estimated at 4,000 feet, overcast at 20,000 feet, visibility at 10 miles, thunderstorms, light rain showers and wind from the south at 10 mph. Thunderstorms and occasional lightning were seen to the south.

Delta's Longview operator also told the flight crew he had been watching thunderstorms east and southeast of Longview airport and recommended that the flight stay well to the north of the storm. Flight 318 responded "OK," according to the official Civil Aeronautics Board report on the crash, obtained recently by the Marshall News Messenger.

At 2:08 p.m., Flight 318 was in the Marshall area and made radio contact with Delta's Shreveport station. Flight 318 then advised it was switching to the Shreveport control tower frequency. About four minutes later, at 2:12 p.m., Flight 318 contacted Shreveport again. The tower cleared Flight 318 to make a right hand turn for landing approach to Runway 13 and gave the wind as southeast at 10 mph.

Flight 318 also requested Shreveport weather conditions and the tower gave the crew a report similar to what they'd already heard from Delta's Longview dispatcher. The tower also advised of a thunderstorm approximately 15 miles west of Shreveport. Flight 318 acknowledged the transmission.

At 2:16 p.m., Shreveport Control requested a position report from Flight 318. No response was received from Flight 318 despite repeated attempts.

At 2:28 p.m., the tower was notified that an aircraft had crashed near Marshall.

Bat boy fired

SAVANNAH, Ga. — The Georgia labor department ordered the Savannah Cardinals to fire their 14-year-old batboy, saying child labor laws come before baseball tradition.

Tommy McCoy was fired six weeks into his dream job under a state law that forbids children his age from working evenings.

"At least I was batboy for that long," he said. "I just try to forget they had to let me go."

The team did not like the decision anymore than Tommy did.

Hiring young batboys is common in minor league baseball, Savannah Cardinals general manager Ric Sisler said.

"We feel we were singled out. I'm sure if you examine other minor league parks around the nation, you'll find the exact same thing happening," he said.

Conway hired

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bears on Monday signed first-round draft pick Curtis Conway to a 3-year contract.

Conway, the seventh pick overall, converted from quarterback to wide receiver and became a standout punt and kickoff returner for Southern Cal.

A member of the USC track team, Conway caught 49 passes for 764 yards and five touchdowns last season in an offense that did not feature the passing game. He averaged 15.6 yards per catch.

Conway also had 27 kickoff returns for 675 yards and 31 punt returns for 246 yards, including a school-record 96-yarder for a touchdown.

Cincinnati's Tony Perez ...absorbing the axe

Reds' short leash chokes Perez

■ Davey Johnson gets the call after Cincinnati fires its rookie manager.

By Joe Kay
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI — Tony Perez knew he had a short leash when he became manager of the Cincinnati Reds. He never imagined it would be this short.

The Reds fired Perez today, only 44 games into his first season as manager, and replaced him with former New York Mets manager Davey Johnson. The stunning firing came less than seven months after Perez, affectionately known as "Doggie" in Cincinnati, agreed to a one-year contract that left little margin for error.

General manager Jim Bowden awoke Perez today and told him by telephone that he was fired.

"Forty-four games into the season, I don't think it's fair," Perez said. "But it's happened. It's a raw deal, but what are you going to do?

"I'm disappointed. I've never been more disappointed in my life."

The Reds, who have the National League's highest payroll at $42.8 million, are coming off a 1-6 West Coast road trip that left them 20-24, 9½ games behind San Francisco in the NL West.

It's the second major league managerial firing in the past week. The New York Mets fired Jeff Torborg last Wednesday, replacing him with Dallas Green.

It also was the fifth-quickest replacement of a rookie manager in major league history.

There was no indication before today that Bowden was considering a change. Bowden indicated last October, when Perez was hired, that he'd be evaluated after the season.

"The team is not playing well," Bowden told a hastily called news conference shortly after firing Perez. "I'm certainly not putting the blame on Tony Perez. The blame belongs to a lot of people. But in order to turn it around from being 9½ out, we needed to make a change.

"This was the most difficult decision of my life. I hired him. If it didn't work, I failed. But I've got to make decisions with my mind, not my heart."

Johnson was surprised to get Bowden's call Sunday night asking him to manage. He said 40 games is not an adequate

Top French seeds roll on

■ The French Open opens on a rather boring note as top men and women seeds win first round matches.

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

PARIS — Jim Courier picked up where he left off the past two years. Boris Becker and Stefan Edberg renewed their quests to get where they've never been before.

All three won first-round matches Monday at the French Open, with Courier and Becker enjoying straight-set victories while Edberg survived a tough, four-set struggle.

On a relatively uneventful day at Roland Garros, no seeded players — men or women — were eliminated.

Courier, the two-time defending champion and No. 2 seed, outslugged Argentina's Roberto Azar 6-3, 6-3, 6-3 to reinforce his status as the overwhelming favorite.

The fourth-seeded Becker, who has won every Grand Slam tournament except the French, overwhelmed wildcard entry Nicolas Escude 6-0, 6-3, 6-0.

No. 3 Edberg, missing only a French Open title to go with his collection of six Grand Slam victories, needed three hours to overcome clay-court specialist Marcelo Filippini 6-3, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

In the women's field weakened by Monica Seles' absence, No. 1 Steffi Graf got off to a shaky start before beating Cecilia Dahlman of Sweden 7-6 (7-4), 6-1. Second-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario also wavered before finishing off Monique Kiene of the Netherlands 6-3, 7-6 (7-1).

Security was tightened in the wake of Seles' stabbing during a tournament in Hamburg on May 30. Spectators were screened at entry gates and bodyguards — conspicuous in their dark suits — stood behind the players' chairs on center

Top-seeded Steffi Graf of Germany returns the ball to Sweden's Cecilia Dahiman during first round match of the French Open Monday. Graf started slow, but won, 7-6 (7-4), 6-1.

Stabbing of Seles changes Graf's life

By Marilyn August
Associated Press Writer

PARIS — Steffi Graf, shadowed by security guards on court and off, says her life has changed in the wake of the stabbing of Monica Seles.

"It hasn't been easy," a subdued Graf said after her 7-6 (7-4), 6-1 victory Monday over Sweden's Cecilia Dalhman in the first round of the French Open.

As she spoke, a security guard sporting a crew cut and navy blue blazer hovered nearby — one of the visible new measures adopted by organizers of the $8.3 million event.

With Seles absent, Graf is favored to win the women's title for the third time. But she admitted that she has been shaken by the knife attack on Seles during a match in Hamburg

Texas, A&M, Baylor are in; Texas Tech, Rice are out

Associated Press

Texas, Texas A&M and Southwest Conference tournament champion Baylor joined the field for the NCAA national championship playoffs Monday which will lead to the College World Series in Omaha, Neb.

Texas Tech (43-15) and Rice (36-18) also had hoped to be included in the regional playoffs, but were not selected.

The last time the SWC placed four teams in the playoffs was 1987 when Arkansas, Houston, Texas and Texas A&M earned spots in the field.

Baylor was seeded third in the SWC tournament but shocked favored Texas and Texas A&M by capturing the title in last week's championship at Austin's Disch-Falk Field.

Texas and Texas A&M are hosting NCAA regionals for the second time since 1989. Texas has hosted a regional tournament a record 15 times and advanced to the College World Series 10 times.

The Aggies have been runnersup in regional tournaments four of the past six seasons. The Aggies are hoping to make their first visit to Omaha since 1964. Baylor has a chance to make its third trip.

■ Related Story/4C

The SWC had six different teams ranked nationally by Baseball America this season. The Aggies were ranked No. 1 five straight weeks prior to their loss in the SWC tournament.

The Aggies are top-seeded in their tournament and will play Yale (33-9) in the first round. Other teams in the NCAA Central I Regional are North Carolina (40-18), Hawaii (33-23), UCLA (35-21) and Lamar (44-16).

Host Texas (46-14) plays McNeese State (37-21) in its first round game of the Central II Regional. Also in the field are Cal State Fullerton (33-17), Maine (33-25), Kentucky (38-21-1) and Southern California (32-27).

Baylor (40-17) will play Kent (39-13) in its first round game in the South regional at Baton Rouge, La., on Thursday.

Bobby Rahal and wife, Debbie ...final Indy 500 tears

Cheever makes first to last move

By Steve Herman
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Front row to last row in one chaotic year, Eddie Cheever again showed his flair for the dramatic.

Unable to find the speed in his own car and already bumped from the Indianapolis 500 lineup, Cheever survived a potentially disastrous blunder and requalified Sunday in the final 15 minutes of time trials.

He knocked defending Indy-car national champion Bobby Rahal from the 33-car lineup and earned a start from the outside of the 11th and final row for the May 30 race.

"I'm making a big deal out of being last on the grid, but it was a very exciting moment for me. I would say it's even more exciting than being on the front row last year," said Cheever, one of only two qualifiers on Sunday, the last of the four days of time trials.

"Last year, I had a perfect month. I peaked in qualifying. Here, I had a very difficult month, but I'm very proud of what we accomplished."

Cheever started second last year and finished fourth. He was fired by car owner Chip Ganassi at the end of the season, but landed a ride with Turley Motorsports. A last-minute deal with John Menard gave Cheever another car and another chance to qualify, but after three laps fast enough to bump Rahal, he unexpectedly was waved off the track.

"We had it under 218, and we decided if the last lap wasn't a 218 it wasn't quite fast enough, so we pulled the yellow ... to try it again," said Menard, who avoided a lot of second-guessing when Cheever went back out and qualified even faster, at 217.599 mph, in the closing minutes.

Belgian Didier Theys then bumped rookie Mark Smith, leaving Rahal the last driver with a chance to get into the lineup. As the gun ending qualifications went off, Rahal began his final attempt in his backup car, but he managed only 216.342. It wasn't enough.

"It's very embarrassing, because I race to win, not just qualify. It's pretty humbling."

Tulsa drills Angels, 5-1

Staff report

TULSA — Midland solidified its hold on last place in the Texas League's West Division with a 5-1 loss to the Tulsa Drillers Monday evening.

It was a three-run home run by Tulsa's Trey McCoy in third inning that buried the Angels for good. Midland had trailed by only a run, 2-1, before McCoy belted his 10th round-tripper of the year, a shot that ties him for the league lead in that category.

The Angels left the bases loaded in the first inning when Tulsa starting pitcher and winner Steve Rowley (1-2) opened the game by hitting John Jackson, followed the HBP with a walk, a strikeout, a walk, another strikeout and a bounce out to end the inning.

Rowley finished with a six-hitter.

Midland's Chance Gledhill (3-4) allowed all five Tulsa runs in six innings.

Angel second baseman P.J. Forbes saw his 14 game hitting streak come to an end with an 0-for-4 night at the plate.

On the bright side, Midland catcher Jorge Fabregas gunned down three Tulsa base runners attempting to steal second.

The Angels (16-28) have lost nine of their last 12 and are 10 games behind first place El Paso. Three games separate Midland and third-place Wichita.

Burks pays big gamble

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox took a big gamble on Ellis Burks, who had his own doubts about recovering from a back injury. So far, the gamble is paying off.

The injury knocked Burks out of the Boston Red Sox lineup during the second half of the 1992 season and ultimately cost him a place on the team. But with the White Sox, he's had the best start of his career, batting .308 with six home runs and 22 RBIs.

"Our initial reports on his back were not good," Chicago general manager Ron Schueler said. "But we thought if he would make a commitment, it would lessen the risk."

Burks made the commitment, undergoing a long period of rehabilitation, and he still takes therapy for at least an hour before each game.

"It hasn't been easy," he said.

Burks, a highly prized first-round pick in the 1983 draft, had some good years in Boston. He batted .294 with 18 home runs and 92 RBIs in 1988 and .296 with 21 home runs and 89 RBIs in 1990.

But repeated stints on the disabled list left the Red Sox disenchanted and they finally gave up on him after he re-injured his back diving for a ball last June.

The White Sox had him checked out last winter by their doctors and trainer Herm Schneider and decided to take a chance.

"I asked Herm the other day if he thought we'd have this much success and he told me no," Burks said. "Then he asked me if I thought I'd have this much success and I said no."

Last year, Chicago's rotation of right fielders produced only four homers and 47 RBIs for the entire season, a big reason the club took the risk on Burks.

"I didn't know how it would work out considering his health," White Sox manager Gene Lamont said.

Phoenix Suns' Charles Barkley rams one home.

Miller comes to front as Suns sink Sonics

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Oliver Miller, hitting his shots and asserting himself underneath in the fourth quarter, led the Phoenix Suns to a 105-91 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics on Monday night in the opening game of the Western Conference final.

The 6-foot-9 rookie center scored 11 of his 15 points and had seven of his 10 rebounds in the last period, doing most of the damage in the first 3½ minutes while Charles Barkley rested. Miller also blocked five shots.

The Suns sent Seattle to its fourth straight loss on the road in the playoffs. Game 2 of the best-of-7 series is Wednesday night at Phoenix.

Phoenix outrebounded the Sonics 44-40 and executed its own version of pressure defense. The Suns blocked 16 shots, a team playoff record.

The Sonics did not score a field goal in the fourth quarter until Nate McMillan hit a 20-footer with 7:45 left, after the Suns had extended a 76-65 third-quarter score to 88-70.

Cedric Ceballos led Phoenix with 21 points despite playing only 23 minutes after suffering a strained left foot midway through the third quarter. Kevin Johnson had 16 points for the Suns. Barkley scored only 12 points but had 14 rebounds. Derrick McKey scored 17 points and Shawn Kemp had 16 for the Sonics.

■ NBA Playoffs

Ceballos led a third-quarter spree that took the Sonics out of the game. Phoenix led 51-47 at halftime, but Ceballos made two quick field goals. Then, after two baskets by Ricky Pierce and one by McKey cut the margin to 60-59, Ceballos began a 10-0 run with a layup and ended it with another with 3:34 left in the quarter.

Mark West, who finished with four blocks for Phoenix, helped the Suns early on. He broke a 9-9 tie with a jump hook, starting an 8-0 run that gave the Suns their biggest lead of the alf.

The Suns broke from a 24-23 first-quarter lead by scoring seven points in 39 seconds during the first minute of the second period. Tom Chambers capped the surge when he stole an inbounds pass after Danny Ainge's layup and passed to Ainge for a 3-pointer that put Phoenix ahead 31-23.

The Suns attacked the ball on defense in the first half, and the Sonics used the same tactics to get back into the game.

Gary Payton, who had 14 points but got in foul trouble trying to stick with Johnson, scored six straight points in 55 seconds to tie it 42-42.

Kramer one-hits Texas

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Rookie Tom Kramer pitched a one-hitter in only his second major-league start, giving up Julio Franco's fourth-inning home run but nothing else as the Cleveland Indians beat the Texas Rangers 4-1 Monday night.

The 25-year-old Kramer (1-1) earned his first career win, striking out eight and walking none in an impressive audition for a permanent job in the Indians' shaky rotation. He has made 17 appearances this year and 21 in his career, all but two of them in relief.

Kramer faced 28 hitters, one over the minimum and teammate Paul Sorrento backed him with two home runs, his 10th and 11th of the year.

Kramer's one-hitter was the Indians' first since Charles Nagy limited Baltimore to one hit in a 6-0 win last Aug. 8.

In his previous five appearances, all in relief, Kramer gave up no runs in 10 innings. He had made his first career start May 4 against California and allowed three runs and four hits in four innings.

Before Monday, the right-hander from Cincinnati had never pitched longer than four innings in the big leagues. But he shackled a Texas team that entered the game ranked third in the American League in runs scored.

Kramer retired the Rangers' first 10 batters before Franco hit a 412-foot home run to center, his fourth, on a 1-1 pitch in the fourth. His next time up, Franco struck out.

Texas' Dave Hulse hit a ball to the warning track in center in the sixth, but no other Ranger came close to getting a hit.

Blue Jays 4, Brewers 1

TORONTO — Former Midland Angel Devon White hit two home runs, and Dave Stewart gave up two hits over seven innings Monday, leading Toronto to its fifth straight victory.

White hit Mike Boddicker's first pitch of the game over the fence in right for a 1-0 Blue Jays lead. It was the 18th time in his career that White has led off a game with a homer.

After Alfredo Griffin erased Pat Borders' leadoff walk with a fielder's choice, White hit Boddicker's 2-2 pitch to right for his sixth home run of the season and a 4-0 Blue Jays lead in the fourth.

White's two-homer game was the fourth of his career and second since coming to the Blue Jays in 1991. His last two-homer game came in Minnesota on June 1, 1992.

Stewart (1-1), who gave up 10 runs in 1⅓ innings in his last start, allowed one run, struck out three and walked two to improve to 14-6 in his career against the Brewers.

Red Sox 6, Tigers 5

DETROIT — Scott Cooper hit a two-out triple in the 10th inning and scored on Bob Zupcic's double as Boston defeated Detroit.

Cooper was credited with a triple after the ball scooted past center fielder Milt Cuyler's diving attempt at a shoestring catch. He scored when Zupcic doubled off reliever Bob MacDonald (3-2).

Ken Ryan (1-0) pitched the ninth and got credit for the victory. Jeff Russell got the final three outs for his 11th save for the Red Sox.

Orioles 8, Yankees 6

NEW YORK — Cal Ripken Jr., in a slump much of the season, led off the seventh inning with a tie-breaking home run and Baltimore went on to beat New York.

Ripken's homer stalled a Yankees comeback that included a pair of home runs by Kevin Maas, erasing a 6-1 Orioles lead.

Maas' home runs included a three-run shot off Rick Sutcliffe (5-2) that capped a four-run sixth to tie the score 6-all.

Ripken, batting .209 with three homers entering the game, opened the seventh by driving a 2-2 pitch from Andy Cook (0-1) over the left-center field wall to make it 7-6.

Toronto starting pitcher Dave Stewart gave up only one run and two hits to earn a victory over Milwaukee Monday.

Phils' Greene turns on Green

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Tommy Greene — getting a key three-run homer from Dave Hollins to spoil New York manager Dallas Green's return to Philadelphia — remained undefeated as the Phillies beat the Mets 6-3 Monday night.

Hollins' seventh homer, off Frank Tanana in the fifth inning, overcame a 2-1 deficit. Pete Incaviglia had solo homers in the second and sixth innings. He now has eight homers, including five in his last five starts.

Greene (6-0), the National League leader with an earned run average of 2.12, held the Mets hitless until the fourth when they broke through for two runs on three hits. Green allowed five hits, struck out seven and walked three in his third straight complete game.

■ NL Roundup

Green, who managed the Phillies to their only World Series championship in 1980, took over the Mets after Jeff Torborg was fired after Wednesday night's game. The loss left the Mets 1-3 under Green and 14-28 for the season.

Tanana (2-3) allowed eight hits, struck out two and walked two in six innings.

The Mets made it 4-3 in the sixth when with one out Bobby Bonilla hit into a fielder's choice, advanced to second on a walk to Howard Johnson and scored on a single by Tony Fernandez.

New York took a 2-1 lead in the fourth, scoring one run on a wild pitch and the other on an error by catcher Darren Daulton.

Cardinals 4, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Luis Alicea hit a two-run triple off reliever Mel Rojas in the 11th inning, and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Montreal Expos 4-1 Monday night for their fourth victory in five games.

Ray Lankford led off the 11th with a double, Mark Whiten singled and Alicea hit a one-out triple down the first-base line. Erik Pappas doubled off Rojas (1-2) to drive in Alicea.

Reliever Rheal Cormier (2-3) retired the only batter he faced in the 10th inning to get the victory. Lee Smith earned his 13th save with a perfect 11th.

Montreal tied the game in the eighth on Moises Alou's sacrifice fly. Pinch-hitter Lou Frazier singled and pinch-hitter Darrin Fletcher sacrificed. Delino DeShields walked before John Vander Wal hit an infield single to load the bases against Rene Arocha.

St. Louis took a 1-0 lead when Whiten drew a bases-loaded walk from Jeff Shaw in the sixth inning.

Canadiens earn Cup finals

MONTREAL (AP) — Brian Bellows and Vincent Damphousse each had a goal and two assists Monday night as the Montreal Canadiens advanced to the Stanley Cup final for the 33rd time with a 5-2 victory over the New York Islanders.

The Canadiens won the best-of-7 Wales Conference final series four games to one and earned a rest before the championship round. Montreal will seek its 24th Stanley Cup in a series beginning June 1 against the winner of the Campbell Conference final, currently tied 2-2 between the Toronto Maple Leafs and the Los Angeles Kings.

Kirk Muller and Mike Keane scored in the first period for Montreal and Bellows, Damphousse and Jean-Jacques Daigneault added goals in the second.

Steve Thomas scored for the Islanders in the second period and Benoit Hogue got a goal in the third.

A Forum crowd of 17,959 began chanting in the second period after a goal by Bellows made it 5-0.

■ Stanley Cup Playoffs

"It sure feels great," Bellows said. "We had the killer instinct tonight."

It will be the Canadiens first trip to the final since 1989, when they lost in six games to the Calgary Flames. Montreal last won the Cup in 1986.

The Canadiens outshot the Islanders by 33-28.

Muller scored 58 seconds into the game after some aggressive forechecking by linemate John LeClair. Muller skated out of the corner to backhand a shot between goaltender Glenn Healy's pads.

Muller took a hit from Darius Kasparaitis and shoveled the puck to Keane in front for a high shot from close range with LeClair blocking Healy's view at 17:11.

Damphousse was left uncovered on the left side on a rush to take Stephan Lebeau's pass and beat Healy on the stick side with a low wrist shot 1:58 into the second period.

REDS: Bowden takes major gamble by firing one of Schott's favorites measure for a manager.

"I'm sad for Tony and I wish that there was anything I could have done to help him be more successful," Johnson said.

Johnson's contract runs through the 1994 season. The Reds also shuffled their coaching staff, firing third base coach-hitting instructor Dave Bristol and pitching coach Larry Rothschild. First base coach Ron Oester, a friend of Perez, resigned an hour after the firings.

The Reds named bullpen coach Don Gullett as pitching coach and added Ray Knight as hitting instructor and Bobby Valentine as third base coach. Outfield coach Jose Cardenal becomes first base coach.

Although Perez ran the club on the field, Bowden shaped it. Unlike Lou Piniella, his predecessor, Perez had limited input on player moves.

Perez said Bowden never gave any indication he was unhappy with his job managing the team.

"The last time I talked to him, three days ago, he said I'm doing a great job," Perez said.

Bowden and his advisers were unanimous in their praise for Perez last fall. But a week of on-field and front-office blunders led Bowden, known for making quick decisions, to change his mind on one of the most popular Reds ever.

The team looked lethargic during the West Coast trip, which opened with outfielder Cesar Hernandez — a favorite of Bowden's — misjudging another fly ball to cost a game at Los Angeles.

The decision to fire Perez was Bowden's. Controlling partner Marge Schott, one of Perez's biggest boosters, is serving a one-year suspension for using racial slurs, leaving Bowden to run the team. She's not allowed to be involved in the club's operations.

Bowden said today he didn't inform Schott of his decision before the news conference.

Johnson was one of seven candidates interviewed for the managerial job that went to Perez last Oct. 30. Johnson has been a consultant to the Reds.

The 50-year-old Johnson hasn't managed or coached in the major leagues since the Mets fired him during the 1990 season during a series at Riverfront Stadium.

By firing one of Schott's favorites, Bowden is taking a major gamble with his own career. He's taken several already, and they haven't paid off.

MC signs top Monahans golfer

Jason Garduno, one of Texas' most accomplished high school golfers, signed a letter of intent with Midland College Monday afternoon.

Garduno, who will graduate this month from Monahans High School, was seventh medalist at the Class 4A state tournament earlier this month. His list of golf accomplishments is as long as a straight shot off his driver and his signing is a goal completed for the MC golf program.

"We felt like Jason was the best player in West Texas," MC golf coach and athletic director Delnor Poss said. "It's our goal every year to sign the best player in West Texas and we feel like we've done it the last two years."

Garduno joins Andrews High School graduate Chad Campbell to form a strong 1-2 punch of area golfers on next year's MC team.

Just last Sunday, Garduno shot a 65 to go with a Saturday round of 71 to win the Monahans City Tournament. At one point during Sunday's round, Garduno was at 8-under par before finishing at 7-under for the day, and 8-under for the 36-hole tournament.

When he was 14 years old, Garduno set the Monahans Municipal Golf Course record with an amazing 59.

"I was playing with five other people on the front nine," Garduno recalled. "They just let me play by myself and watched on the back nine."

Garduno, who had a 27 on the front nine that day in 1989, considers the 59 to be his greatest golf achievement to date.

His sights are set on a senior college down the road, but is happy to have the opportunity to play with MC next season.

"Midland's got a good program," Garduno said. "They won the national championship last year, and have a good chance of winning it this year and next year.

"I played against Chad all during my high school years. It'll be neat to have him on my team instead of playing against him."

Garduno considers himself a bad weather player and has oftentimes fired lower scores under adverse conditions. At the state tournament this year, he had a 72 during a windy first round, followed by a 78 on the final day, which featured perfectly calm conditions.

Also during his senior year, Garduno, whose scoring average was 72, finished as District 3-4A medalist; was second at the Region I tournament; won top medalist honors in three invitational tournaments and was runner-up in two more. He also set a district course record 67 during the 3-4A tour this year.

As a junior, he was 3-4A's third medalist and was third at regional. He did set a district course record with a 5-under par 66 at Andrews, and a regional course record with a 67.

As a freshman, with a scoring average of 74, he tied for second medalist honors and eventually lost to Campbell on the district tour. Garduno also was top medalist at regional and went on to finish 12th at state.

Records set at PDAP 10K

Two records were broken in the 13th annual Palmer Drug Abuse Program Tall Town 10,000 Saturday.

Lubbock's Marjorie Stewart locked in at 37:22 to set a new standard in the women's 10K, while Doug Stutz, of Rexburg, Idaho, crossed the line at 9:28 to set a new record in the men's two mile.

David Sumrell won the overall men in the 10K event with a time of 33:42 while Stanton's Jeremy Stallings, the Class 2A state champion in the 800 meters, was first in the under-24 division in the two-mile race at 10:04.

Ohio State to appeal Flint ruling

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State admitted Monday that coach Randy Ayers and a former assistant coach broke NCAA rules in recruiting and signing basketball star Damon Flint. But the university still plans to appeal.

"We are embarrassed that this kind of incident would happen here," said Jim Jones, Ohio State' athletic director.

Flint, a 6-foot-5 swingman from Cincinnati Woodward High School, signed a letter of intent with the Buckeyes in November. The NCAA ruled he was ineligible to attend Ohio State, and he reportedly is considering Louisville, Cincinnati, Nevada-Las Vegas, Arkansas and Kentucky.

Jones said Ohio State was appealing because a number of the violations are "unfair charges." The NCAA has not said whether Ohio State will be penalized further.

Jones said former Ohio State assistant coach Paul Brazeau, now the head coach at Hartford, gave money to Flint's high school coach, Jim Leon, to pay for a meal. Jones also said Brazeau gave four nylon training bags to Flint and his teammates.

In all, the NCAA found Ohio State committed 17 violations. Six stemmed from an Oct. 30, 1991, meeting between Flint, then a junior, and Ohio State coaches.

Flint, Leon and three others from Cincinnati visited an Ohio State practice that day. Leon said Monday that he and Ayers agreed to have dinner. He said Ayers and Brazeau suggested Damon's, a sports bar less than a mile from the campus.

NCAA rules state universities may not pay for recruiting visits for high school juniors or arrange to meet them off campus. Leon said he was assured by Ayers and Brazeau that Damon's was on Ohio State's campus.

After dinner, Leon said, Ayers, Flint and the others started to leave the restaurant. Brazeau pulled out three $20 bills and had Leon pay for the bill out of the money.

"It covered the bill," Leon said.

When outside, Brazeau got the four nylon bags from his car and put them in the trunk of car in which Flint was riding.

Ayers said at a news conference Monday he did not know Brazeau paid the money or gave out the bags until this month when he was told by an NCAA investigator. Ayers said he suggested eating dinner at Damon's because he believed it was on campus.

"We hold a lot of activities there," he said. "It's in close proximity to St. John Arena."

The NCAA also found Brazeau had bought a fast-food meal for Flint and Leon while visiting Woodward on Dec. 9, 1991, and that Ayers later had a brief face-to-face meeting with Flint. Both are violations.

The NCAA said Ayers also violated rules two other times: offering condolences over the death of Flint's mother; meting Flint's grandmother at a practice at Woodward before Ohio State's NCAA tournament game in Cincinnati in March 1992.

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Georgia Tech will begin play in the NCAA baseball tournament at home in Atlanta as the top seed in the Atlantic Regional while defending champion Pepperdine was seeded third in the West Regional at Tempe, Ariz. in pairings announced Monday.

Georgia Tech (45-12) drew Liberty (23-23) in a first-round game May 27. Liberty got its first trip to the tournament by winning the Big South tournament.

Also making first appearances are Kansas, an at-large selection after losing the Big Eight tournament championship, and North Carolina-Charlotte, winner of the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference.

Pepperdine, which beat Cal State Fullerton 3-2 in the World Series final last year, was seeded third because the overall power rankings of the West Coast Conference were not as high as some other conferences, said Dave Keilitz of Central Michigan, chairman of the Division I Men's Baseball Committee.

The pairings, made in meetings by the committee Sunday and Monday morning, were based on power rankings, the Rankings Percentage Index, and on recommendations of advisory committees.

The RPI is figured on winning percentage in Division I games, the success of opponents and opponents' strength of schedule.

Teams on the bubble that were left out this year included Florida, Evansville, Georgia Southern, BYU, Memphis State, Stetson, Villanova, Virginia Tech, Texas Tech and LaMoyne, Keilitz said.

"It was more difficult seeding this year than any year since I've been on the committee," Keilitz said. "The last three number ones and the twos, threes and fours were all very difficult. There is so much parity. The seeding of the twos, threes and fours was very difficult and there may not be very much difference between the twos, threes and fours."

Keilitz said the committee will continue to lobby for an expansion of the field from 48 teams to 64. The NCAA Executive Committee must approve the larger field.

"We would very much like to expand to 64," Keilitz said during a national media conference call after the field was announced. "We have proposed that to the executive committee and we will continue to propose it. We feel we can make money doing that. More importantly, we feel very strongly that we have 64 deserving teams out there."

The Southeastern Conference led the way with six teams in the tournament and the Atlantic Coast Conference had five, signaling that the balance of power in college baseball apparently has shifted to the east.

It will be the second straight year that a California school is not host to a regional tournament.

Winners of the eight double-elimination regional tournaments, to be played May 27-30 and May 28-31, advance to the College World Series June 4-12 at Omaha, Neb.

The field includes 24 teams that qualified automatically by winning conference titles.

Top seeds in regionals to be played May 27-30 include Georgia Tech (45-12), Atlantic, at Atlanta; Texas A&M (48-9), Central I, at College Station, Texas; Long Beach State (39-17), East, at Tallahassee, Fla.; Louisiana State (45-15-1), South, at Baton Rouge, La.; and Arizona State (42-18), West, at Tempe, Ariz.

Top seeds in the May 28-31 regionals were Texas (46-14), Central II, at Austin, Texas; Tennessee (44-18), Mideast, at Knoxville, Tenn., and North Carolina State (47-15), Midwest, at Stillwater, Okla.

North Carolina State was given the top seed over Oklahoma State, the host of the Midwest Regional, because the ACC had a higher RPI rating the Big Eight, Keilitz said.

Tennessee made the tournament for the first time since 1951 and Miami was in for the 21st year in a row, the longest consecutive streak.

Minnesota was given the Big Ten's automatic berth although the league championship game was rained out. The Wolverines were undefeated in league postseason games before the championship game.

Simpson is choice of Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Flyers named Terry Simpson head coach on Monday to replace Bill Dineen, who will remain with the club as a scout.

"Terry has been known for his hard-working teams who play sound defense and an aggressive physical style," general manager Russ Farwell said.

Simpson, 49, was an assistant with the Winnipeg Jets the past three seasons and is a former head coach of the New York Islanders.

"He replaces a man who has been an outstanding contributor to the Flyers," Farwell said of Dineen.

Simpson offers a sharp contrast to Dineen, who was the Flyers' coach since December 1991. Dineen was calm and detached, whether Philadelphia won or lost.

Farwell has known Simpson since their days with clubs in the Western Hockey League.

Simpson coached Prince Albert for 14 seasons, leading it to 10 consecutive first-place finishes in the Saskatchewan Junior League.

He succeeded Al Arbour as coach of the Islanders in 1986-87.

Smith watches savers blow past

By R.B. Fallstrom
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS — Baseball's career save leader is hearing footsteps.

"Everybody's sneaking up on me," Lee Smith said.

Earlier this year, the St. Louis Cardinals reliever breezed past the Reds' Jeff Reardon to take over first place on the all-time list with save No. 358. A quick glance in the rear-view mirror figured to be the last he'd see of Reardon, who began the year as the set-up man for Rob Dibble.

Then Dibble broke his arm and the Cardinals went into a long stretch where they barely used Smith. May has been possibly Smith's most unproductive month ever — he has only two saves — and he's struggling to regain his form.

"I was leading the league with 10 saves and man, I had 11 for about a month," Smith said.

Smith, a former pitcher for the Midland Cubs, watched helplessly as former Midland High star Mike Stanton of Atlanta blew past him. Stanton now leads the league with 17 saves.

Bryan Harvey of Florida, Mitch Williams of Philadelphia and Randy Myers soon followed, so now Smith, who led the league in saves each of the last two seasons, is fifth. Reardon has six saves in his stand-in closer role with the Reds, meaning he's only four behind Smith and not ready to concede the saves record just yet. Even teammate Mike Perez is moving faster these days, picking up the saves — his first in three seasons — on both of the Cardinals' weekend victories.

This is how bad it's been: It took Smith so long to nail down the save that tied him for the Cardinals' career save record set by Todd Worrell that he lost track of it.

"Hey, you're supposed to raise both hands above your head," Smith said. "It's been so long, I forgot."

Smith is accustomed to hogging all the ninth-inning glory, especially since the Cardinals acquired him from Boston for outfielder Tom Brunansky in May 1990. Entering the year he had 117 saves in 136 chances for St. Louis, an 86 percent success ratio.

He set a National League record with 47 saves in 1991 and had 43 last year. Suddenly, he's looking very mortal.

The problem began with inactivity. With the Cardinals slumping, he appeared in only three of the first 15 games in May.

Then, it was ineffectiveness. Over the weekend he allowed three home runs in 2⅓ innings and blew two save opportunities against Pittsburgh, against whom he's 3-10 for his career. On Friday, he surrendered a two-run, game-tying home run by Orlando Merced, and then another game-tying shot by Lloyd McClendon.

Kevin Young's ninth-inning solo home run tied Sunday's game, and Smith ended up with the victory on Rod Brewer's sacrifice fly in the 10th, after which he referred to reporters as "buzzards" and refused to talk further.

Smith allowed only four home runs last season. He's blown four save opportunities, half as many as all of last season. He's also 35.

But the Cardinals don't appear concerned. Manager Joe Torre said Smith just can't beat the Pirates.

"That's the problem with being a human being, that sense of insecurity that can develop over something like this," Torre said. "Not that I would keep him from pitching against them the next time."

Prices slump

NEW YORK — Oil futures prices fell Monday as traders began preparing for what could be another skirmish at a meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries next month.

Natural gas prices fell again, this time on indications that utilities are deciding it's cheaper to run generators on oil rather than gas.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $19.72 per barrel, down 16 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Tom Curtis, oil analyst at Pegasus Econometric Group, said lower prices for refined products pulled down the price of crude. Product prices were dampened by news of refineries returning to operation and the apparent end of a shortage of heating oil in Europe.

Kuwait's plan to seek a higher quota at the June 8 OPEC meeting, has led the market to expect weaker crude prices, Curtis said. Kuwait wants to add to its daily production, a move that will likely face opposition from other OPEC members.

SPE meeting

The Production Operations study group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers is scheduled to meet Thursday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Robert Tjon-Joe-Pin, chemist with BJ Services Co., will discuss "Biotechnological Advances for the Oil Industry." Previous advances in biotechnology have provided significant contributions to the oil and gas industry. Recent biotechnical research has led to the identificationof specific enzyme complexes to affect much improved degradationof polysaccharide polymers.

Cost is $8 per person.

Dollar jumps

NEW YORK — The dollar gained against other major currencies Monday as speculation that U.S. interest rates might move higher sparked buying.

The U.S. dollar closed at 110.60 Japanese yen,up from late Friday's 110.60 yen.

In late New York activity, the British pound stood at $1.5360, less than $1.5430 late Friday.

Stocks rise

NEW YORK — Stock prices were narrowly mixed Monday, with blue chip issues boosted by a rise in long-term bond prices and by computerized buy programs.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 14.95 to 3,507.78.

Declining issues were about even with advancers on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume totaled 196.73 million shares, down from 273.28 million on Friday.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.80 to 247.07. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.17 to 431.69. The Nasdaq composite rose 0.40 to 694.69.

Analysts like new airlines' chances

■ Executives of upstarts agree that ego, daring must be held in check of they are going to survive.

By Jane Baird
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — It takes ego and daring to start a new airline, knowing that most have gone down in flames before you.

It takes self-confidence to think you will succeed while the big-name airlines are buffeted and the industry has lost more money over the past three years than its profits in the previous 80.

Of course, there is no shortage of ego in the airline business. More newcomers, undaunted, are rushing into the skies than ever before.

At least six little airlines began scheduled jet passenger service since the beginning of last year, while dozens of hopefuls are putting together business plans and seeking government approval.

But if the executives of these upstarts agree on anything, it's that ego and daring must be held in check if they are going to survive.

In the view of airline analyst Sam Buttrick, with Kidder Peabody & Co. in New York, "Most new entrants will fail, as they do in any industry, let alone the savagely competitive airline industry."

But the chances of success are better today than they were a decade ago, he said.

Stephen Kolski, president of Friendship Airlines, said it doesn't take much to start an airline these days. Lease rates for jet aircraft are at unprecedented lows, and experienced pilots and other airline employees have lost their jobs and are desperate to get back into the industry.

The airlines born in the 1980s, with few exceptions, failed or merged into other airlines, Buttrick said. America West, the only major airline to form after deregulation, is now in Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization.

Buttrick cited three reasons why the upstarts of the 1990s have better prospects for long-term survival:

■ Unionized labor at the major airlines is unwilling to make significant, permanent work-rule concessions, giving smaller, non-unionized competitors a cost advantage.

■ Some of the carriers themselves are "staging a selective retreat" from certain markets. Both American Airlines and United Airlines have said they are looking at having smaller carriers take over their short-haul operations. American has reduced operations at its San Jose, Calif., hub, and has signed an agreement in principle with Reno Air, which will sublease some of its gates and participate in its frequent-flier program beginning in mid-July.

■ The Clinton administration has shown a willingness to enforce antitrust laws and curb predatory practices by the major carriers. In March, the Department of Transportation came to the defense of Reno Air against giant Northwest Airlines. Reno had challenged Northwest by announcing flights from Reno, Nev., to Northwest's Minneapolis hub. Northwest retaliated by announcing new service between Minneapolis and Reno and from Reno to three cities in the West Coast

PBPA lunch offers TRC's Williamson

Staff report

Texas Railroad Commissioner Barry Williamson will speak to the general membership of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association during the group's monthly luncheon Thursday.

Williamson

The luncheon will be held at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Before the luncheon, Williamson will speak to the PBPA Environmental Committee at the Arco building at 9 a.m.

Williamson is one of the youngest to ever be elected to the commission, winning his seat from former commissioner Lena Guerrero. The commission is the nation's oldest regulator of state oil and gas production as well as the intrastate railroad and trucking industries.

Before being elected to the commission, Williamson held posts with the Department of the Interior and Department of Energy. He served both the Reagan and Bush administrations as principal energy advisor to the Secretary of Energy and was responsible for U.S. minerals leasing, one of the largest non-tax sources of income to the federal government.

He began his legal career in Midland with the law office of Turpin, Smith, Dyer and Saxe. He holds undergraduate and law degrees from the University of Arkansas.

Cost of the luncheon is $12 per person and reservations can be made by calling 684-6345.

The Inchworm, an advanced technology tunnel boring machine, was built by the Robbins Company for the Superconducting Super Collider project. Robbins has built a reputation on underground excavation equipment.

IBM plans to roll up billions for cutbacks

(NYT) — IBM announced Monday that it planned to raise up to $3 billion in the financial markets for corporate expenses that could include paying for higher-than-expected cutbacks in its work force.

IBM last year took a big charge against earnings to help pay for reducing its payroll by 25,000 workers this year. Earlier this year, the company acknowledged that the number would exceed 25,000.

Battle brews on use of Compac-Compaq name

By Charles Boisseau
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A computer products distributor in California says it is considering launching a new line of personal computers with a name that sounds familiar: Compac.

The proposed name is similar to that used by Compaq Computer Corp., the Houston-based company and the world's No. 3 maker of personal computers.

Compac Microelectronics, based in Fremont, Calif., revealed the possibility that it will market PCs under the Compac name in a statement announcing its merger with the U.S. arm of MiTAC International, a Taiwan-based maker of PCs that bought controlling interest in Compac last year.

The possibility has raised eyebrows at the better-known Compaq Computer Corp. Company attorney David Cabello said the Houston company would vigorously defend its federally issued trademark, which was granted in the early 1980s.

The issue comes up now because the newly merged Compac is planning to go beyond distribution to sell its own IBM-compatible PCs. The company expects to soon decide on a brand name, said Stella King, a spokeswoman for Compac.

"We've been using the name Compac for 13 years, and we believe we have some equity in it," King said. "We believe we were there first.

Cabello said the Houston company's trademark limits the ability of competing firms — no matter what their trade name — from marketing products using brand names that could cause confusion among customers. He said Compaq has successfully fought off the efforts of other companies to market computers under names such as Kompac and Compeq.

King insisted, however, that Compac, a private company with annual sales of about $250 million, has the right to the name.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor questions treasury notes, CDs advice

By Bill Doyle

Q: I think your advice to an 86-year-old woman to invest most of her $270,000 in U.S. Treasury securities was misleading and a distinct disservice to the reading public.

Doyle

Bank certificates of deposit with Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage consistently pay higher yields than Treasury securities. The give-up in credit quality is hardly worth mentioning.

Why don't you recommend that investors choose the higher yield for the desired term? In your response, you don't even suggest a comparison.

A: On a recent day, the U.S. Treasury note due to mature in May 1994 yielded 3.25 percent; the Treasury bond maturing in November 1995, 3.94 percent; the Treasury note due in May 1998, 5.14 percent.

At the same time, the Bank Rate Monitor newsletter, which tracks CD rates, reported the following average yields on newly issued CDs with similar maturities: one year, 3.17 percent; 30 months, 3.92 percent; five years, 5.58 percent. Of course, those are average CD yields. Some banks pay more, some less.

Yields do change in line with overall interest rate conditions in the marketplace. But the relationship between yields on different types of investments generally remains about the same. Based on the above numbers, only one of the CD classes has a higher average yield than the corresponding Treasury security.

This column has always stressed that CDs and other deposits with FDIC coverage are rock-solid safe. But that coverage stops at $100,000 per depositor per institution. The column you dispute warned that, unless the $270,000 is in at least three banks or three or more accounts at the same bank with different name arrangements, it is not fully insured.

All too many people have lost money due to the failure of the banks or savings and loan associations at which they had deposits in excess of federal insurance coverage.

Not explaining the credit risks of uninsured deposits would be a true disservice.

There is no risk when Treasury securities are held to maturity. Treasuries, in unlimited amounts, are backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. government.

Q: Your column about debit cards was definitely negative. You wrote you do not have one, because the amount of a purchase made with a debit card is deducted from the cardholder's bank account within a day or two, through electronic funds transfer.

You added that purchases made with a charge card are listed on a monthly statement and do not have to be paid until later.

Shouldn't you also have included the negative side of charge cards? A lot of them charge interest from the date of purchase and charge a user fee of $1.50 or more. Entirely too many people do not pay their charge-card balances within the grace period and get into financial trouble, including bankruptcy.

A: It's all too true that some people go deep into hock charging purchases on credit cards. This column frequently has warned against such credit card abuse. Cautions about high interest rates on some charge cards also have been sounded here.

But your statement that "a lot" of credit cards charge immediate interest and levy fees for every use does not hold water. Anyone who would use a card with such provisions has only one oar in the water.

Some credit cards have terribly high interest rates on overdue balances. Solution? Pay your bills on time.

A fairly large number of credit cards have no annual fees. Smart consumers use those cards.

Rivals to develop single standard for HDTV

By Edmund L. Andrews
N.Y. Times News Service

Wide-screen pictures nearly as bright and clear as movies and sound approaching crispness of digital compact disks could be available as early as 1995.

WASHINGTON — The three top rivals for the right to develop the next generation of television technology in the United States agreed Monday to join forces on a single approach, hastening the biggest change in broadcasting since the advent of color in the 1960s.

The agreement to collaborate on high-definition television, a move strongly supported by top federal officials, eliminates the likelihood of protracted disputes and litigation, which could have delayed the introduction of the technology for years.

With Monday's agreement, HDTV — offering wide-screen pictures nearly as bright and clear as movies and sound approaching the crispness of digital compact disks — could be available as early as 1995.

The agreement to collaborate also represents a broad technical consensus that the next generation of television sets will be much more than boxes to amuse couch potatoes. Instead, the industry has paved the way for television's rapid convergence with the interactive world of computers and high-speed two-way communications.

The new HDTV system will be digital, meaning the signals will be transmitted in the ones and zeroes of computer code, instead of the traditional, less precise, technique of transmitting television signals in electromagnetic waves that mimic sound and light waves.

"This is not just about pretty pictures," said Richard E. Wiley, chairman of the federal advisory committee for HDTV. "We are looking for interoperability — not only between broadcasting and cable, but also with computers. This has applications in factory automation, medical imaging and even defense."

The alliance effectively ends a remarkable competition begun nearly five years ago when the Federal Communications Commission announced its intention to choose a standard for advanced television and invited companies from around the world to propose systems.

The three groups that joined forces Monday were the sole survivors of a rigorous testing process that began in 1991 and ended this February. One of the three is a team consisting of General Instrument Corp. and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. A second team is Zenith Electronics and American Telephone & Telegraph Co. The third group is a consortium formed by Philips Electronics of the Netherlands, Thomson Consumer Electronics of France, NBC and the David Sarnoff Research Center in Princeton, N.J.

The new alliance hopes to develop a working model in as few as nine months. The new system would then require testing and approval by the FCC, which hopes to adopt a new standard sometime next year.

Under rules the commission adopted last year, television stations will be given a second channel for HDTV. Each station would be required to begin transmitting HDTV signals within five years of the adoption of the standard.

Television sets capable of receiving HDTV signals could be available as early as 1995. To receive these signals, consumers will need special sets expected to initially cost $1,000 to $2,000 more than today's sets. But broadcasters will also continue to transmit programs in the traditional format into the next century.

When the competition began five years ago, the United States was far behind both Europe and Japan in developing HDTV. But in the past three years, as the race narrowed to three teams, the American contestants have led the way in developing a potentially revolutionary approach to broadcasting entirely in the digital code used by computers.

Indeed, European Community officials announced earlier this year that they would halt financing of their own development effort to wait to see what emerged from the United States.

Each of the three surviving groups in the American competition were ones that had submitted all-digital systems for testing by a special advisory committee to the FCC.

Since then, FCC officials have been prodding the rivals to bury their differences and form an alliance, because the systems were becoming harder to differentiate and because officials feared that any selection could elicit a lengthy series of appeals and even litigation by the losers.

The unified broadcasting system that emerges from the alliance promises to be different from each of the individual approaches. In an attempt to broker the competing demands of broadcasters and computer companies, the alliance has agreed that the system will be capable of transmitting images in a number of different formats.

SMALL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT CENTER

STARTING YOUR BUSINESS WORKSHOP

OBJECTIVES:

- To identify the steps and procedures needed to plan, organize, finance and operate a business.
- To determine the readiness for operation of a business by evaluating personal and business skills.
- To help individuals prepare for opening a business through the development of a business plan.
- To identify resources, agencies and organizations who assist in starting or expanding a business.

WORKSHOP TOPICS:

- Getting Started: Before you invest time and resources in a business, find out if you have the personality to succeed. Review what you need to know to get a business started.
- Developing the Business Plan: Learn how to create a workable business plan to guide you in success.
- Financing: Explore the different types of financing that are available to a new small business.
- Resources: Learn where and how to find assistance.
- Tax Requirements: Learn about the various local, state, and federal taxes that will affect your business.
- Labor and Management Considerations: Discover what it will take to manage your business. Learn the basic records needed for making financial decisions.
- Legal and Risk Management: Explore business structures, registration requirements, zoning restrictions. Know your legal options.
- Everything you Wanted to Know about Business: (but were afraid to ask) This workshop will have an open discussion to answer any questions you might have.

COST: $20.00 ($5.00 Discount for Sponsoring Chamber Members) Pre Registration is Advised

Keeping Midland Watered

"When you turn on a faucet or an irrigation system in Midland the chances are that your water is coming through a BenMark pipe" says Bill Reinert, the owner of BenMark Supply Company.

During a Midland summer, irrigation is a very important subject, and people come from all over the Permian Basin to shop at BenMark Supply because of their huge stock of piping and hardware.

No matter what the project; from homeowners looking to design their own irrigation systems, to oil companies equipping a pipe-line, BenMark can provide not only the hardware, but also the expertise to go with it.

With licensed irrigators such as Dale Seilheimer on staff, BenMark is ideally placed to offer quality advice to homeowners and gardeners on every aspect of irrigation. as well as the materials for any project.

There are many different types of irrigation systems, such as; drip, above ground fittings and automatic systems. The staff at BenMark are fully trained in the different types so that customer can be assured of quality.

Because BenMark has qualified and experienced staff on site, they are now offering a new service. If a home-owner is thinking of designing and building their own irrigation system, then BenMark can help by designing the system for the customer. Providing of course that the hardware comes from BenMark.

This kind of service is an example of the commitment that BenMark has to customer satisfaction.

Being able to cater for so many different applications is easy because of the new computer system which automatically checks stock quantities. Linked to their store in Odessa, which opened in March 1992,the computer helps ensure that BenMark is very rarely out of stock and always able to help with customers requirements.

BenMark specializes in PVC piping, which has a very long life span because it is inert and doesn't rot or react with other chemicals making it ideal for all applications BenMark's number one system is "TORO".

Covering the whole range of sizes to fit every irrigation application, TORO is used all over Midland. From the prestigious Country Clubs and golf courses to the cities parks. TORO is ideal for industrial as well as home usage.

"For home owners looking at starting new landscaping projects this summer, irrigation is very important and requires plenty of thought and planning" said Reinert.

BenMark can help with all current and future irrigation requirements and can be contacted at:

1101 South Garfield, Midland, 682-6584, or in Odessa at 400 Grandview, 337-0455.

Chimney & Airduct Cleaning

Call 267-6504 Today, Breathe Easier Tomorrow

Ferrell's Chimney & Air Duct Cleaning is locally owned and operated.

We are your air duct cleaning specialists having returned from the National Air Duct Cleaning Convention last month, keeping up with the latest in technology and techniques in air duct cleaning.

No matter how clean you keep your house, you have dirty air ducts. We have removed as much as 20 pounds of dirt from just one air duct.

Fifty percent of all sickness is either caused by or irritated by dirty air ducts and that's were Ferrell's can help you. Our unique process removes the dust, bacteria, mold and dust mites.

Spring and summer are the best times to make repairs on your chimney and have them treated with Chimney Saver.

Chimney Saver is a water repellent that has a ten year written warranty and is great for protecting sidewalks, driveways, stucco and all masonry products.

We are your local distributor of the allergy filter, Rainbow vacuum cleaners. We get the dust out and help you maintain a healthier indoor environment. And yes we still do lawns, trees and other home improvements.

For more information call Ferrell's today on 267-6504 and breathe easier tomorrow.

REMEMBER THE LIVES THAT WERE GIVEN FOR OUR FREEDOM

When you think of your freedom, remember the way
It was given to you to enjoy every day.
It has never been free, but exacted the price
Of our heroes who made the supreme sacrifice.
As our history shows us, it's just common sense
To be always alert and maintain our defense,
Against any aggressor who seeks our defeat,
So the concept of war will become obsolete,
But until we abolish the horror of war,
Let's remember the deeds of the ones gone before,
And then pray that our freedom will always remain,
So the lives they have given will not be in vain.

-- Gloria Nowak

On Monday, May 31, 1993 the Midland Reporter-Telegram is going to run a special page in our Classified Section for those of us who wish to pay tribute to or honor, your loved one or friend, whether they be living or not. The cost of the ad is $40. You may include a photograph in your ad. The actual size of the ad is given here for you to plan out how you would like your ad to read. To place your ad, simply print out on an 8 1/2 x 11 sheet of paper what you would like your ad to say, add your photograph (be sure the back of the photo has a name on it so that it can be returned to you), enclose $40 and mail your ad to:

DELIVERY

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

Often Asked ????
Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth.

Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have F/T jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly!
Some make even more!

How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers'papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet waqnt to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

SPECIAL NOTICE TO REAL ESTATE BROKERS

The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) Regional Office in Waco conducts monthly seminars concerning the different facets of the VA Loan Guaranty Program. Topics of discussion include recent legislative changes to the guaranteed home loan program, introduction to the Lender Appraisal Processing Program (LAPP), alternatives to foreclosure and the sale of VA-acquired properties.

The seminars are conducted in the VA Regional Office main training room and last approximately 2 hours. Since seating is limited, reservations should be made by calling 817/757-6869 or by writing VA Regional Office, P.O. Box 7635, Waco, TX 76714. Participants will be contacted one week in advance of the seminar they are scheduled to attend.
