When you're hot...

Humans aren't the only ones who have to escape from the West Texas heat every now and then. Recent rains provided the perfect swimming pool for this dripping wet sparrow.

Mexican turnout fairly heavy

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Voters turned out in steady numbers for Mexico's national elections Sunday, with government presidential candidate Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado virtually assured of winning.

The Federal Electoral Commission said official results will not be announced until counting is completed in several days, although early returns were expected Sunday night.

Isolated incidents were reported in generally quiet elections as some 100,000 armed troops stood guard around the nation's 52,000 polling stations. Another 400,000 police and security agents were deployed nationwide since Saturday night to guarantee order.

The communist-led United Socialist Party coalition claimed four of its election observers were kidnapped in Hidalgo state and that another was shot and wounded in the state of Puebla.

There was no confirmation from government election officials. They said the balloting had taken place throughout the country "in an atmosphere of great tranquility."

The United Socialists also charged several ballot boxes had been stuffed in favor of the government party in Puebla. In the city of Villahermosa, 530 miles southeast of the capital, the Socialist Workers Party claimed some of its election observers were barred from several polling places.

The voting was officially over at 9 p.m. EDT, but individual polling sites in some cities remained open to accommodate late voters. Authorities had feared a high rate of absenteeism as in earlier years.

Interior Ministry spokesman Alberto Peniche Blanco said in a telephone interview that the turnout by late afternoon was "fairly good, with a good flow" of voters. He said figures would not be made public before all polls closed. The Interior Ministry is in charge of monitoring the election.

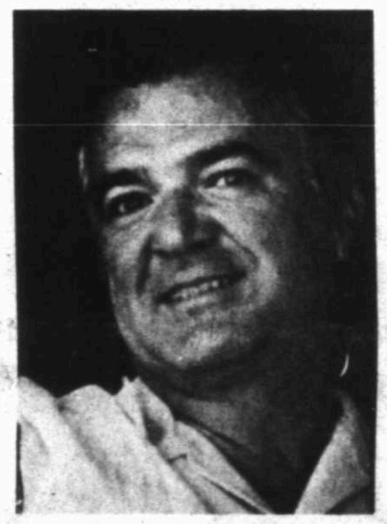

The new president replaces President Jose Lopez Portillo for a single six-year term Dec. 1. Mexican law prohibits a second term. Mexicans also voted for a new Senate and House of Representatives.

Liquor sales were banned from midnight Friday until midnight Sunday. Most restaurants, and all bars, movie theaters and other entertainment spots remained closed.

National television delayed the broadcast of Sunday's Poland-Soviet Union and France-Northern Ireland World Cup soccer matches until the evening, when polls were about to close.

De la Madrid, 47, an economist and Harvard graduate, ran against six opposition candidates who had little chance of winning.

His aides said they hoped for a 75 percent voter turnout, but in some states, turnout was as low as 10 percent in elections for governor a year ago.

Town's head, towers above Dallas County

CEDAR HILL, Texas (AP) — Cedar Hill likes being able to look down at the rest of Dallas County.

The city is 870 feet above sea level, making it the highest point on a line from the Gulf of Mexico to Oklahoma City and an attractive home for television and radio towers.

The seven huge antennas in Cedar Hill guarantee millions of dollars in tax revenues. They account for 10 percent of the city's total property tax valuation of $144,841,102.

"It wouldn't bother me if we had two or three more," said City Council member Gail Douglas. "We get to tax them, but you don't have to protect them with police."

And, from Turk Cannady, the mayor pro tem of this city of 7,500 people — "It's the only thing we've got.

"It gives us a certain amount of recognition," he explained. "When the power goes off, they have to say the power is off in Cedar Hill. It puts us in the spotlight."

He said that otherwise "we're an unknown. We've got some of the best scenery in Dallas County, but no one knows we exist."

The antennas carry signals for the major television stations in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and for most of the radio stations. Five of the antennas are 1,550 feet tall.

President's death apparent suicide

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — President Antonio Guzman, due to leave office next month, died Sunday after his pistol accidentally discharged, the government announced. In Washington, a State Department official said the 71-year-old president apparently committed suicide.

Vice President Jacobo Majluta was sworn in as president at 6:15 a.m. in a brief ceremony before the president of the supreme court, other high civilian officials and the top commanders of the armed forces.

Majluta, 48, said in a nationwide radio and television broadcast that Guzman had died accidentally and that "all the armed forces of the nation support without reservations the continuation of the constitutional order."

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said, "It appears to have been a personal suicide." The spokesman declined to give his name, saying, "It's not normal to talk about a presidential suicide."

Sources in the presidential palace said there had been no indication that Guzman had been despondent.

Guzman had been working in his office in the national palace shortly before midnight with his son-in-law, Jose Maria Hernandez, who holds the post of administrative secretary to the president, when he went into the bathroom and a shot was heard, Majluta told The Associated Press.

Majluta said the revolver that Guzman usually carried with him apparently had fallen to the floor and gone off by accident, a bullet fatally injuring him in the head.

Guzman was rushed to Santo Domingo's military hospital, where he died early Sunday morning, authorities said.

The new president promised to uphold the constitutional transfer of power scheduled for Aug. 16, when President-elect Salvador Jorge Blanco is to assume office. Jorge Blanco, the candidate of Guzman's Dominican Revolutionary Party, scored a strong win in elections May 16 over former President Joaquin Balaguer.

Shuttle ends trip right on time

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Spaceship Columbia staged a brilliant return from its fourth and final test Sunday, a pulse-stirring spectacular for the nation's 206th birthday. "Unbelievable...just magnificent," said President Reagan as the shuttle glided to its first landing on a concrete strip.

It was a pinpoint, centerline touchdown.

Reagan told astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield, "You've just given the American people a Fourth of July present to remember," and he led thousands in singing "God Bless America."

HALF A MILLION people gathered in the Antelope Valley to watch the shuttle cap a successful seven-day, 112-orbit mission. Mission Control had a single word as Columbia's wheels touched down: "Outstanding."

There were smiles all around, for the shuttle proved itself ready to go operational in October or November on its first for-hire mission when four men will place two communications satellites into orbit. That flight may end where it begins — at Cape Canaveral in Florida, because of Sunday's hard-runway experience.

Landing was within seconds of predictions, at 9:09 a.m. Pacific time. Columbia, its odometer reading about 8 million miles total, looked to be in good condition.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration had its entire three-ship space fleet on display. Columbia was coming, Challenger was going, and Enterprise, the nonorbiting test ship, made a pretty backdrop.

Challenger, the brand new shuttle, was waiting piggyback atop a 747 jumbo jet when Reagan gave the word: "You are free to take off now." A few minutes later the mated ships swooped over the crowd, en route to Cape Canaveral, Fla., via Houston.

The president said: "This has got to beat firecrackers." At a brief welcoming ceremony for Mattingly and Hartsfield, he reaffirmed America's commitment to military and commercial exploitation of space.

Later, the astronauts flew with their families to Houston in a convoy of three NASA planes, and 50,000 people cheered them as they arrived at Ellington Air Force Base. Challenger, also freshly arrived from Edwards, provided a backdrop for the day's second ceremony.

Related stories, 5B

"IT WAS A hard choice to make this morning about whether to come home," Mattingly said. "That's a great place."

Hartsfield, who spent 16 years in the astronaut program before getting a chance to fly in space, said, "The question everybody wants to know is, 'Was it worth the wait?' and it was."

Mattingly and Hartsfield then were driven to their homes for the night. On Monday, they will report to work to start reviewing the mission.

Columbia's astronauts got up early Sunday to prepare for their return.

From 203 miles high, halfway around the globe over the Indian Ocean, Mattingly fired twin deorbit engines to start Columbia on its hell-fire plunge through Earth atmosphere to a 15,000-foot slice of California concrete.

"Welcome back to Earth; that was beautiful," Mission Control told the astronauts.

"That's quite a ride," said Mattingly, the Navy captain who landed the ship after automatic controls brought it to 2,500 feet.

In a speech, the president honored Mattingly and Hartsfield as pathfinders who "reaffirmed to all of us that as long as there are frontiers to be explored and conquered, Americans will lead the way."

Now, he said, "the test flights are over. The groundwork has been laid; now we will move forward to capitalize upon the tremendous potential offered by the ultimate frontier of space."

REAGAN TOOK the occasion to announce his space policy, one that calls for "strengthening our own security by exploring new methods of using space as a means of maintaining the peace."

But while he said America will continue to remain the world's leader in space technology, he stopped short of endorsing the $9 billion manned space station and the fifth space shuttle sought by NASA and the Air Force.

"We're hopeful," said Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, head of NASA's shuttle program.

Abrahamson reported the ship appeared to be in excellent shape and that its heat-resistant tiles "fared much, much better than on the earlier flights."

Reagan, one arm around his wife, said "ooh," as whisps of smoke indicated the shuttle's wheels had hit the runway surface. And then he joined Mrs. Reagan in applauding, smiling broadly.

"It was unbelievable," Reagan said. "There are no words to describe it." Behind them, a dozen American flags flapped in the breeze.

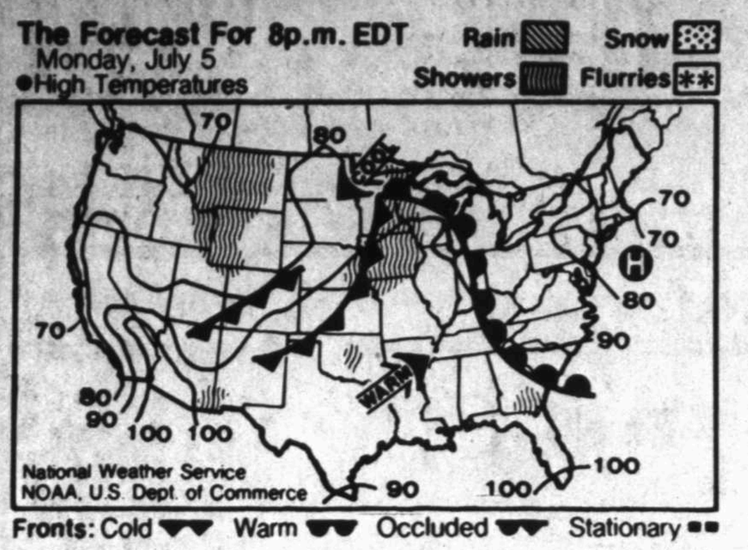

Twelve minutes before it landed — 353 miles away — a tracking camera on Santa Ynez Mountain picked up the first shadowy image of the stub-winged spaceplane, the sun outlining its shape in silver.

Gracefully the ship hove ever closer, the astronauts rolling it left and right to dispel some of its tremendous speed.

More than 500,000 people first heard two sharp sonic booms. The crowd turned to the east until vapor trails appeared and then the glints of two little chase planes.

An hour later, Columbia was declared safe and sound and the Reagans walked hand-in-hand onto the runway to greet the astronauts. Mattingly gave Reagan a NASA cap with the flight's emblem.

America enjoys 4th all kinds of ways

By The Associated Press

Armed with flags, hotdogs and anything in red, white and blue, Americans celebrated the Fourth of July with outdoor concerts, backyard cookouts and off-beat fun including sun-tanning contests, turtle races and a parade with a lawn-mower brigade.

About 500,000 people, including President and Nancy Reagan, gathered to watch the space shuttle Columbia touch down on an airstrip in the California desert on the nation's 206th birthday Sunday.

Spectators oohed and aahed as fireworks displays were held throughout the weekend, including shows planned for Sunday night on New York Harbor and on the Mississippi River in New Orleans.

More fireworks were planned today, including the Boston Harborfest extravaganza, expected to draw 200,000 people.

Outdoor concerts and music festivals were held in parks and cities nationwide, with bluegrass at Liberty State Park in New Jersey, jazz in Lower Manhattan, the classics in Chicago, and rock in Buffalo, N.Y.

In the Dallas suburb of Plano, Texas, the Fourth of July Parade included a lawn-mower brigade — about 25 resident pushing or riding their mowers with motors roaring full blast.

In Hannibal, Mo., the finale of the 26th annual Tom Sawyer Days attracted about 40,000 people to the Mississippi River's banks on Sunday. Highlights included the National Fence Painting Contest for boys aged 10 to 13.

In Atlantic City, N.J., chefs from nine casinos helped bake a cake almost the size of a football field and decorated to look like Old Glory. About 9,000 sheet cakes were used to make the 220-by-180-foot cake. Officials from the Guinness Book of World Records planned to be on hand for cutting of the edible tribute Sunday night.

In Chicago, half a million people celebrated Independence Day at a 12-hour lakefront party that included singing along with Mitch Miller, munching goodies from 73 restaurants in a foodfest called "Taste of Chicago" and watching fireworks Saturday night.

Miller, conducting the traditional symphony concert, shouted to the crowd: "Welcome to the biggest sing-along in the history of the world." He led them in singing "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag."

In New York City, cannons roared in a 50-gun salute Sunday morning in Battery Park, where festivities included lifeboat races, a Salute to the Far East Parade and a police department Air-Sea Rescue demonstration with frogmen, helicopters and boats.

In Boston, thousands of people gathered Sunday on the Charles River to listen to the Boston Pops and watch a fireworks display.

Much of the nation's weather Sunday was sunny or partly sunny with scattered showers and thundershowers. Traffic on the nation's highways led to more than 240 deaths by Sunday night.

At a popular beach 15 miles north of San Francisco, sightings of great white sharks kept swimmers on the sand. Few of the 3,000 people at Stinson Beach on Saturday went beyond ankle-deep water, and the shark warnings were repeated Sunday.

Ocean City, N.J., planned "The First Annual Absolutely Pointless Balloon Race" for unmanned balloons on Sunday.

"Nobody knows who wins this race because the balloons will probably be blown out to sea and never recovered," said Mark Soifer, a city spokesman.

About 600 turtles were entered in the Eighth Annual Turtle Races in Chester, N.J. Near Baltimore, the Amateur Jousting Club of Maryland was sponsoring a jousting tournament, complete with what was billed as a "medieval duel."

Miami Beach sponsored a four-day All-American Weekend on public beaches with a sun-tanning competition, jet-ski exhibition and sand sculpting championship at the North Shore Open Space Park.

In Omaha, the Nebraska Independence Day Alternate Fuels Classic Auto Rally started in Lincoln to demonstrate the use of non-petroleum fuels. Thirty people from 18 states were entered.

'Americana' celebrates 4th differently

AMERICANA, Brazil (AP) — The conversations often are in English — and with a Southern accent — but on the Fourth of July in this little bit of Dixie in Brazil there aren't any fireworks or picnics.

"We keep our values and traditions but July 4 isn't a holiday in Brazil," said Judith MacKnight Jones, a descendant of an Alabaman who fled the South in the aftermath of the American Civil War and settled here 116 years ago.

Others like him came from Georgia, Mississippi, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Texas and settled Americana to grow cotton and watermelons.

Mrs. Jones, 66, speaks with a dulcet drawl, but it is tinged with a Brazilian accent. And her husband Jim symbolizes the way the South has blended into Brazil: His family came to grow cotton but he now raises water buffalo.

"We speak English at home but we're Brazilian. My mother country is Brazil. My grandmother country is the United States," said Mrs. Jones in an interview the other day.

She is the historian of the immigration from America. An English translation of her book, "Soldier Rest — A North American Epic Under Brazilian Skies," is being prepared.

After a lunch topped with Brazilian papaya and a specialty of the Deep South, sweet potato pudding, the Joneses sat in the living room of their brick bungalow, with Azaleas blooming outside the windows and a well-cut lawn.

They talked about their Confederate forefathers:

In the 1860s the emperor of Brazil, Dom Pedro II, cultivated dreams of Brazil as the world's cotton country. He invited the Americans who made cotton king in the South to come to Brazil where slavery was still legal. Several thousand decided to try.

Records are imprecise but Mrs. Jones said at least 3,500 made the trip.

"They were disgusted with the outcome of the war and they wanted to start anew...They were lawyers and doctors and professional people, many of those immigrants, but they were destitute. They came here and picked up an ax and started clearing land," Mrs. Jones said.

Some tried the Amazon jungle but after six months they begged the U.S. consul to take them home.

Another settlement fell to malaria and a third failed because the land was unsuited to cotton.

About 80 percent returned to the United States, and the only successful settlement was Americana, in southeastern Brazil 75 miles north of the city of Sao Paulo.

In 1866, Col. William Hutchinson Norris, Jim Jones' great-grandfather, came to this partially settled region because its rolling hills and soil were similar to his home in Selma, Ala. He stayed and sent for his family.

They were joined both by settlers who had failed in other parts of Brazil and by more U.S. emigrants. Mrs. Jones estimates a permanent community of 100 families flourished.

The Confederates taught the Brazilians how to cultivate cotton and today the country is a major world producer.

Americana, now with a population of 122,000, is the heart of the country's textile industry, producing a major part of the $1 billion worth of cloth exported each year.

President's election impressive

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Sharply divided delegates to the League of United Latin American Citizens convention Sunday re-elected Tony Bonilla by acclamation, but shouted down two proposals the national president said were needed to give the Hispanic group political clout.

In a tumultuous final session of the four-day convention, "old guard" delegates defeated in a close voice vote a Bonilla-backed resolution to create the first national Hispanic political action committee.

Then the convention — described as the most divided in decades — loudly voted to table all constitutional amendments, including one that would have increased the LULAC president's term from one to two years.

Bonilla, a Corpus Christi attorney, made an impassioned plea for LULAC, the nation's oldest and largest Hispanic organization, to create the political action committee to endorse candidates and make political contributions.

"It's time we lead the parade instead of standing on the side and watching it," he said before the measure's defeat.

Bonilla said later he and his brothers — Ruben and William, both former national presidents of the organization — would begin a national Hispanic PAC independent of LULAC, which claims 100,000 members in 43 states.

Delegates all approve resolution

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The 534 voting delegates to the League of United Latin American Citizens convention Sunday unanimously approved a resolution opposing the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill now pending before Congress.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., and Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., had appeared at the convention last week seeking support.

The legislation sponsored by the two congressmen would grant amnesty to many immigrants who illegally entered the country, and institute a national identification card and employer sanctions in an effort to curtail illegal entries.

The resolution was approved without discussion.

Other resolutions condemned the "Operation Jobs" roundup of illegal aliens carried out by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, asked removal of Federal Reserve chairman Paul Volcker, asked President Reagan to allocate enough money to control narcotics smuggling, and asked the media to employ more Hispanics and provide more coverage of the ethnic group.

The voting delegates also authorized national counsel Ruben Bonilla to file a lawsuit against the INS in the Northwest, called for peace in the Mideast, and urged the granting of resident status to illegal aliens whose children were born in the United States.

Total lunar eclipse expected Tuesday

By The Associated Press

The longest total eclipse of the moon since 1859 will take place early Tuesday morning, a celestial finale to the Fourth of July weekend.

The eclipse, visible anywhere it is night, will occur when the Earth's orbit takes it between the moon and the sun, whose reflected light causes the moon to "shine."

The moon will move into the Earth's penumbra, or lighter area of shadow, at 12:22 a.m. Earth will begin to cast its darker shadow, or umbra, on the moon at 1:33 a.m. and will totally eclipse the moon for an hour and 46 minutes, from 2:38 a.m. to 4:24 a.m.

Scientists say the eclipse will be so long because the moon is at the most distant point it ever reaches in its orbit around the Earth. The farther the moon is from the Earth, the longer it takes to pass through the Earth's shadow.

The long duration of the eclipse also is due to the fact that the moon will pass through the center of the Earth's shadow. Usually, it passes through the smaller areas of shadow above or below the center.

Larry Ciupik, associate astronomer at the Adler Planetarium of Chicago, said the moon will not be totally invisible during the eclipse. He said the moon "could appear copper-colored, or orange, or even brick-red."

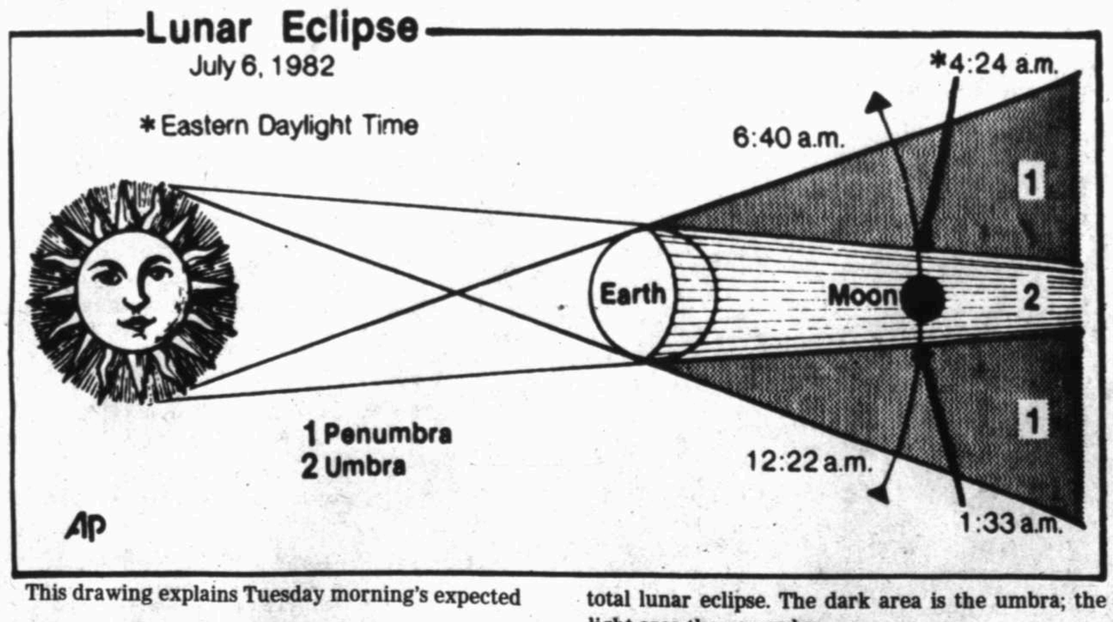

As the total eclipse phase nears its end, the eastern edge will brighten first. By 5:29 a.m. the moon will appear "normal," even though the final phase of the eclipse will not end until about 6:40 a.m., when the moon moves out of the penumbra.

Unlike a solar eclipse, the lunar eclipse can be viewed safely with the naked eye, although binoculars are recommended for a better view. For photographers, at least a 200mm telephoto lens is recommended.

For a total eclipse to occur, the Earth must be between the moon and the sun, with all three bodies in a straight line. A lunar eclipse can occur only when the moon is full, because that is the only time the moon is in a position opposite the sun.

Lunar eclipses occur only occasionally because the moon's orbit is on an angle of about five degrees to that of the Earth. The moon intersects the Earth's plane of orbit twice a month, at points called "nodes."

For an eclipse to occur, the moon must be near enough to a node that it passes through the Earth's shadow while the two bodies are "lined up" with the sun. If the moon isn't near one of the nodes, it will pass above or below the Earth's shadow and there will be no eclipse.

This drawing explains Tuesday morning's expected total lunar eclipse. The dark area is the umbra; the light area the penumbra.

Warmth expected

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting a pleasant ending for the holiday weekend, with temperatures in the low 90s today and only a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms through tonight.

Tonight's low is expected to be about 70 degrees. Winds will be southerly at 10 to 15 mph.

The high Tuesday will again be in the 90s with only a slight chance of thunderstorms.

Sunday's high of 94 didn't theaten the record high for the Fourth of July — 103 in 1961. The record low for today's date was 60 in 1972.

DPS reports holiday traffic death toll of over 30

By The Associated Press

The Texas Department of Public Safety, which had estimated that 47 people would die in traffic accidents in the state this Fourth of July holiday weekend, reported Sunday night that the death toll had reached 33.

Over 240 people were reported killed in traffic accidents nationwide as of Sunday night.

"We are not optimistic that we will be under the estimate," DPS spokesman Larry Todd said.

The counting period began at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight Monday.

Last year, 54 people died in traffic accidents during the holiday weekend and the death toll reached 63 later when more people died as a result of injuries suffered in accidents during that weekend.

The deaths reported by the DPS this weekend include:

—Rodney Garrit Vugteveen, 23, of El Paso, who was killed when the motorcycle he was riding hit a car head-on at 8:15 p.m. Saturday three miles east of El Paso on U.S. 62-180.

—Leroy Woodson O'Neal, 53, of Tyler, who was killed in a two-vehicle accident at 9:45 p.m. Saturday at Loop 323 and American Legion Road in Smith County.

—Agustin Bermea, 24, of Uvalde, who was killed at 10:45 p.m. Saturday while walking about 1 mile south of the intersection of U.S. 57 and F.M. 117 in Batesville in Zavala County.

—Gary Lee Tracey, 33, of Houston, who was killed when hit by a car in Houston at 9:55 p.m. Friday.

Hatch tries to keep up with Kennedy

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Orrin Hatch could scarcely wait to show a reporter his reading material for the flight from Utah to Washington. Gleefully, he thrust forward his hardcover copy of Garry Wills' book, The Kennedy Mystique.

"I have to keep up with everything about him!" the Utah Republican exclaimed about Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., whom he tries to best on three different committee assignments.

On that flight, Hatch didn't spend much time reading. Instead, he talked to civil rights activist Jesse Jackson, the founder of PUSH, who got on in Chicago. A Hatch aide swapped seats so the senator and Jackson could talk about such common concerns as affirmative action.

A casual assessment of their hour-long lively exchange was that they found each other compatible. Jackson denied later that he shared Hatch's opposition to affirmative action. He said they "agreed to disagree — but I'm not afraid to talk."

"White and black Americans grew up in very different cultures. Sometimes, what is seen as racism is sometimes simply ignorance," he said, especially when blacks have to confront what he called the "double yoke" of poverty and race.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., may want to confer with Rep. Ed Markey, D-Mass., on how to prevent an issue raid by Kennedy. On the other hand, it's probably already too late. At the Philadelphia Democratic conference, Kennedy made it abundantly clear that — despite Tsongas' intentions — he would lead the renewed fight for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, elevating this into a key 1984 presidential issue. Last spring, Kennedy had accomplished a similar coup in snatching the nuclear freeze issue from under the nose of longtime freeze advocate-architect Markey.

Tsongas says the reintroduction of the ERA will be one of two major issues occupying his office this year. The other: the threat from Japanese high technology innovations on New England business.

"I decided on the first one and my staff suggested the ERA, since I had not been directly involved, except in a supportive sense, of leading any social issues," Tsongas said. Kennedy wasn't the only one caught by surprise. So were the House ERA prime sponsors and so were the women's groups, when Tsongas revealed his ERA-reintroduction effort early last spring.

• • •

President Reagan's pollster Richard Wirthlin is among those handful of GOP insiders who take the Democratic Party's united stance on the ERA very seriously, despite Phyllis Schlafly's claim that last week's demise of the ERA is a victory for Reagan.

Democratic National Committee political director Ann Lewis says the GOP pollster is on target: "It's a hemorrhaging for them."

She said Wirthlin may persaude Reagan he has a "woman's problem" but she doubts that this will help because "Reagan doesn't know how to fix the problem. He has a different agenda. His idea of fixing a problem is going to a black high school. He may be willing to go to a women's college. But he isn't willing to use the power of government to overcome discrimination."

Minnesotans capitalize on catfish

FLOODWOOD, Minn. (AP) — It's not easy being the Catfish Capital of Minnesota, especially when your claim to fame is bigger than your water tower.

Residents here yearned to have "Catfish Capital" painted atop the water tank so travelers approaching on U.S. 2 and Minnesota 73 could see the full title without having to drive in a circle around it.

Individuals and businesses went for the project hook, line and sinker. About 35 of them contributed $616 — enough money to put the 14-letter title on both sides of the tower where it could lure traffic from the highways that intersect in the city of 648 people.

It seemed like a good idea. The 30-inch letters could be read from a distance and the price of $28 per letter was within budget, said Nancy Raihala, who with husband Henry publishes The Floodwood Forum weekly newspaper.

But the sign painter figured out "Catfish Capital" just wouldn't fit twice on the tower unless all 28 letters were reduced in size, which would make "Catfish" look like a minnow from afar.

And building a bigger water tower was out of the question.

With no time to waste — the Floodwood Catfish Festival is scheduled the weekend of July 23 — the City Council debated only 90 minutes before concluding there's more than one way to skin a catfish.

They voted to shorten the tower title by three letters — to "Catfish City."

Bids due on road projects

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation will take bids July 22 on nearly $400,000 in highway construction projects in the Midland area.

Many reasons exist for amenorrhea

Dear Dr. Solomon: I haven't had a menstrual period in over six months. I went to my doctor, and he diagnosed me as having amenorrhea. I'm so upset. It sounds so awful. What is it? — Denise, Midland, Texas

Dear Denise: Amenorrhea is the absence of three menstrual cycles. There can be many reasons for missing your menstrual period, the most common being pregnancy. Have your doctor explain what it means specifically as far as you are concerned.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recently saw a documentary on television about life in a large state prison. Although I was watching in my living room, by the time the program was over I actually felt all tensed up. If all the yelling and crowding had that effect on me in my living room, what does it do to the prisoners? — Greg, Trenton, N.J.

Dear Greg: Prison life, as you indicate, is a very stress-provoking situation. For example, both logic and scientific studies suggest it can significantly increase blood pressure among the inmates. One study by Dr. David D'atri and his colleagues at Yale University showed that prisoners in single-occupancy cells do much better in regard to maintaining baseline blood pressure levels than do those forced to live in multiple-occupancy dormitories. However, the very nature of prison life cannot help but create some of the tension that you experienced in your own living room.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I saw an old movie about an alcoholic who got the DT's. I've heard a lot of jokes about the DT's, but at least in the movie they were very serious. I'd like to know more about it. — Chester, Chicago

Dear Chester: The fact that 15 percent of patients who get DT's (delirium tremens) die as a result of some seizure-related activity should be sufficient proof that there's nothing funny about them. They are prone to occur in patients being withdrawn from alcohol, but can be controlled through medication.

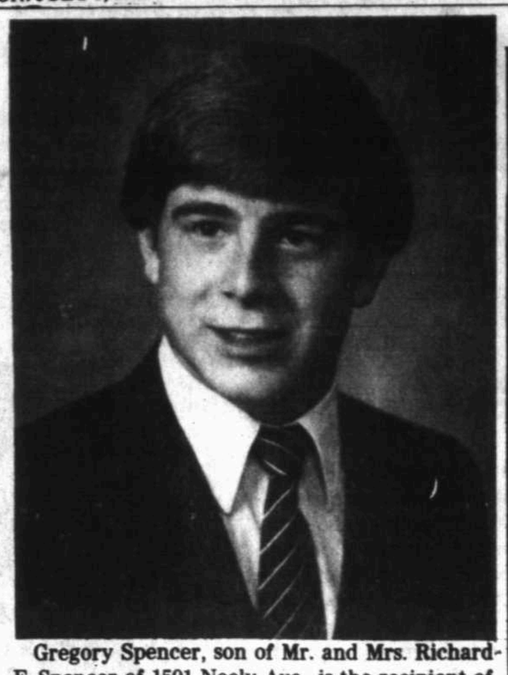

Dr Arthur T. Daus Jr., of Pleasant Grove Hospital in Louisville, reports that benzodiazepines and high doses of magneium sulfate help reduce the incidence of DT's. The patients are also given high-calorie balanced meals, vitamins, and mineral supplements, and encouraged to consume lots of fluids.

Once a person has had the DT's, he or she is more likely to have them again. But whether or not it is the first time, DT's are no laughing matter.

Dear Dr Solomon: My son still wets the bed at night even though he is eight years old. My sister tells me there's a gadget that can be used to break the habit. Can you tell me anything about this and whether you think it is a good idea to use it? — Mrs. V.A., Denver

Dear Mrs. A.: There are devices on the market that are designed to detect the first drops of urine and wake the child by ringing a bell or through some similar method. The idea is that eventually the child will become conditioned to get up by himself when he feels the need to urinate.

The device apparently has proven effective for many children. However, I would hesitate to recommend it without first-hand knowledge of the particular child; it may be good for some but not for others. I would therefore suggest that you discuss is use with your family doctor or pediatrician who knows your child, and who would be in the best position to judge whether use of the device would be advisable.

A faltering process?

There's only one conclusion you can draw from Secretary of State David Dean's voter survery. It's the same conclusion Dean arrived at following the May primary: Texas voters are suffering from "voter fatigue" — too many elections held too close together in too many places.

The result: declining interest in elections and low voter turnout at the polls. There's no way to argue with that fact. The May primary attracted only 24 percent of Texas' registered voters — an alltime record low in recent state history for a gubernatorial primary election, according to Dean.

But the June runoff election was even worse, attracting only 9.3 percent voter turnout statewide. In Midland County the June runoff turnout was stronger than elsewhere in the state due to the local interest in State Sen. Pete Snelson's bid for the General Land Office position, but still only 1,300 voters turned out at the polls.

Other than the desire to have a majority of people take part in the electoral process, the expense of elections — and political campaigns — is a justifiable concern for Dean and other state officials. The Texas primary and primary runoff elections cost more than $7.2 million, including $1.7 million in candidates' filing fees and more than $29,000 in private contributions. But it seems evident that the primaries hold importance for fewer and fewer voters, despite the primaries indisputable structural importance in the state's electoral process.

Dean's poll confirms that fact. The secretary notes in his report that "the registered voter in Texas is receptive to the proposal of a state sponsored election bureau within the Secretary of State's office; favors a change in primary election dates closer to the November general election; supports holding statewide elections on the same day as the presidential election; strongly favors the election of state judges without regard to political party affiliation or on a non-partisan basis; overwhelmingly supports legal penalties for candidates making misrepresentations in the course of their campaign; agrees that current officeholders with more than one year remaining in their current term of office be required to resign their current office when seeking election to a different statewide office; strongly supports consolidation of state, local and school board elections on the same day at the same polling place with votes cast in a single ballot; and supports the establishment of a unitary primary system in Texas.

Dean is recommending that the legislature take "serious note" of both the low voter turnout trend he says is evident in recent elections and that it examine in detail the citizen preferences indicated in the poll. That's a good starting point.

Streamlining the state's electoral system and increasing voter interest is never and easy task by any means. That often means overcoming apathy and, in some cases at least, it seems voters will only go to the polls when they want to vote "against" some particular issue.

But restructuring the system appears to be the only way to keep it from becoming an extremely expensive social power club. That, of course, is not the purpose of an electoral system.

Some of Dean's findings will be of value in reshaping the process; some likely will not. But if his report stimulates Texas legislators to action on the voting problem, Dean will have served the people of Texas well.

Another View:

Hard times for housing

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that some homeowners with low-interest mortgages cannot sign those bargain rates over to people who buy their homes. The decision is sound law, but will make hard times harder in housing.

The court overturned a 1978 ruling by the California Supreme Court, the Wellenkamp decision, that said federal savings-and-loan institutions could not call in low-interest mortgages when a home changed hands. The state court had said the practice violated a state law prohibiting unreasonable restrictions on transfers of property.

The federal court based its ruling on the narrow point that state law cannot supersede the federal regulations under which federal savings associations operate.

In a broader sense, the court was saying that a contract is a contract, and that the savings industry lends money to people, not to the homes that they live in. Virtually all the mortgages in question say explicitly that the balance is due when the house is sold. Mortgages are contracts.

The ruling means more grief for homeowners and the real-estate industry. At least half of all recent sales in the depressed housing market have been possible only because financing packages have allowed buyers to assume old mortgages at low interest rates.

From the homeowner's point of view, there is worse to come. The federal ruling applies only to federal institutions, but state-chartered companies will argue for equal treatment.

But if the U.S. Supreme Court has taken the savings industry off the hook, it has also put it on the spot.

Savings officials complained that the Wellenkamp decision froze interest rates on many of their mortgages at levels far below the rates that they paid depositors and thus led to massive operating losses.

It also seems clear that holders of new mortgages were, in effect, subsidizing the lucky holders of old mortgages by paying rates that the savings industry set artificially high to offset its losses. In the wake of the ruling, some savings officials guessed that they could now shave the going rate of interest on mortgages by 2 percent or 3 percent. That could pull rates down to a range of 13 percent to 15 percent. Some bank economists think that this range would be low enough to stimulate housing sales.

Savings institutions also should be encouraged to return to fixed-rate mortgages. It was, after all, the Wellenkamp decision that prompted savings institutions to write variable-rate mortgages to avoid getting stuck with low interest rates in a time of heavy inflation.

When they talk of lower interest, savings officials are just commenting, not promising. So it is now up to the public, and particularly the housing industry with its substantial influence, to get those comments in writing. And in contracts.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Unsettled Iran-Iraq war threatens Gulf

WASHINGTON — The continuing crisis in Lebanon has diverted the attention of world leaders from an explosive situation a few hundred miles eastward: the still unsettled war between Iraq and Iran.

Jack Anderson

But U.S. intelligence sources tell me this conflict could go up in flames, with consequences more dangerous than the chaos in Lebanon. The conflict threatens the stability of the entire Persian Gulf region, on which the Western world depends for much of its oil.

Here's the story:

The Ayatollah Khomeini, never known for moderation, appears to have been carried to new heights of unreasonableness by the military victory his army achieved over the Iraqi invaders.

Intelligence sources say Khomeini has made impossible demands on the government of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. The only reasonable demand was for withdrawal from Iranian territory of all Iraqi troops — which the humiliated Hussein had already offered to do.

But Khomeini has also demanded staggering reparations from Iraq. The estimates run anywhere from $20 billion to $150 billion — obviously more than Iraq can hope to pay.

State Department experts believe Iraq's Arab neighbors may put up the reparations money rather than give Khomeini an excuse for carrying the war into Iraq itself. The Persian Gulf sheiks are reportedly terrified by the threat that the Moslem fanaticism of Khomeini presents to their autocratic regimes.

But will this be enough to satisfy Khomeini? The State Department analysts are afraid not. For Khomeini's third major demand is apparently etched in stone: He is adamant in his insistence that Hussein be replaced.

The Iraqi dictator was obviously hurt politically by the failure of his half-baked military adventure. But the fact that he was not immediately overthrown is testimony to his staying power. "Hussein is a survivor," an intelligence source told my associate Lucette Lagnado.

The big question is how far Khomeini will go to get revenge on Hussein. Shiite Moslems — Khomeini's coreligionists — make up an overwhelming majority of the Iraqi population. The possibility of subversion is an ever-present threat despite the traditional ethnic hostility between Arabs and Persians.

Even more ominous are the reports our intelligence analysts have been getting in recent weeks from Iran. The reports suggest that there are factions in Iran that want to mount a military invasion to punish the Iraqis for the devastation they wrought in Iran.

Fortunately, there are countervailing forces urging restraint. These voices of relative moderation are mainly in the military; they point out that the Iranian army suffered heavy losses in the months of fighting, and needs time to reconstitute itself.

U.S. allies in the Persian Gulf, particularly the Saudis, have been lobbying earnestly for a Reagan administration "tilt" toward Iraq. Hussein has been forsaken by his onetime supporters in the Kremlin, and badly needs military aid from somewhere to rebuild his shattered forces — and keep control of his bewildered, restive population.

If Hussein falls, the Saudis argue, instability or even revolution could spread to the neighboring Arab states. The whole Persian Gulf could erupt.

And some of the intelligence analysts have concluded that sooner or later Hussein will indeed fall.

PENTAGON LIARS: Deliberate misstatements to Congress by high officials have become commonplace. It's time to call this practice by its true name — perjury — and to prosecute the willful prevaricators.

In terms of dollars, Pentagon brass hats regularly trudge up to Capitol Hill and tell blatant lies in defense of their multibillion-dollar budgets. A disgraceful example is the $10.4 billion allocated for military maintenance facilities.

A Pentagon budget justification document sent to Congress earlier this year claimed the $10.4 billion would achieve "total elimination of backlogs" in the endless struggle to make damaged planes, ships and other weapons ready for combat.

This is a crock, and the military brass know it. A March 17 memo to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger from Lawrence Korb, assistant secretary for logistics, warns bluntly that "Navy depot maintenance backlogs ... are at variance with ... Navy congressional testimony."

Instead of "total elimination" of the maintenance backlogs, the internal Pentagon documents predict that the three services will have close to $3 billion in backlogs by 1988 at the rate they're going.

The Pentagon's lies have enraged Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee. He abruptly canceled a hearing on the maintenance mess, he explained in an acerbic note to Weinberger, because "certain personnel within the Department have been misleading you and the Congress, and had planned to continue this deception at today's hearing."

The irate congressman said that prepared statements submitted to the committee "were known by certain DOD personnel to be at variance with the facts at the time they were made." Addabbo called the situation a "charade." He was being charitable.

INSIDE REPORT:

Egypt holding anger over Israeli action

CAIRO, Egypt — Demands from some political leaders here that President Hosni Mubarak recall his ambassador from Tel Aviv to show Egyptian anger at Israel's occupation of Lebanon never got to first base and won't if Mubarak can prevent it — at least as far ahead as he can see.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Mubarak does not dare risk any action that pro-Israeli politicians in the U.S. could exploit as a departure from what Egyptians wryly call "the spirit of Camp David." His fear of plunging Egypt back into the old vicious cycle of U.S.-Egyptian animosity far exceeds any gain that might come from Egypt giving full vent to its anger at Israel. Mubarak knows how desperately Egypt needs the U.S.

The low-key Egyptian reaction to Lebanon, undoubtedly taken into account by the shrewd men in Israel, was predictable. But that leaves the successor of Anwar Sadat on a hot spot.

Israel's occupation of Lebanon is promoting pan-Arab nationalism here, held in check since Sadat's assassination last October. Several days ago the respected leader of one of Egypt's few legal non-government parties asked for a permit to conduct a mass march. He did not get what he wanted, but a small demonstration was dispersed after minor violence. The tone was virulently anti-American.

With few outlets for expressing anger at Israel's slaughter of Palestinian and Lebanese Arabs and rising dismay over the restrained American reaction, political currents could become hard to contain. They run from Islamic fundamentalism on the right, the phenomenon that toppled the shah of Iran and now creeps south into moderate Arab regimes, to secretive Marxist cells on the left.

Mubarak also wants to bring Egypt back into the Arab world after its post-Camp David freeze. But the "no- separate-peace" pledge of Sadat, now proven so wrong by Israel's stealthy takeover of the West Bank, has given Mubarak a lot of explaining to do to Saudi Arabia, Jordan and other moderate Arab countries who ridiculed Sadat's promise.

Soft-spoken and methodical, Mubarak is moving quietly to reduce joint ventures with Israel in the wake of Lebanon. These are so far peripheral, involving youth exchanges, cultural products and trade missions. But the longer Israel remains in Lebanon, the more explosive will grow the pressures against Mubarak's business-almost-as-usual policy. That raises the spectre of an ugly change in Egyptian-Israeli relations, the first major step of which would be the withdrawal of the ambassador to Israel.

Mubarak's economic recovery plan and his country's need for capital investment can only be met today by the U.S. Arab investment money from Persian Gulf states is starting to come in, but lack of world demand for crude oil has reduced cash flows.

The deeper reason for Egypt's relatively mild public reaction is lack of power, pure and simple: Egypt is restoring its military machine, but it's a long, slow process tied to good relations with the U.S. If he displeased pro-Israeli politicians in Washington by seeming to undermine his treaty with Israel, he knows Congress can abruptly stop the flow of weapons. Mubarak aides fear that Israel works behind the scenes for just such a slowdown as added insurance for keeping Egypt impotent.

So the more-in-sorrow-than-anger official reaction here over Lebanon is a concession to the reality of Egypt's uncertain future. A display of the real emotion engendered by Lebanon was a crude cartoon prominently displayed in a Cairo newspaper after the press was unleashed during bloody Lebanon. It showed Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin disguised as Adolf Hitler with the caption: "The New Fuehrer Practices Genocide."

CHARLEY REESE

Legal maze begging for honest reform

I wouldn't go as far as Henry Hull in the old movie about Jesse James. Hull fumed, "We ought to take all the lawyers out in the street and shoot them down like dogs." But I'd go almost that far.

Charley Reese

Not that the law is not an honorable calling and not that there aren't some darn fine human beings practicing it. The problem is that law and lawyering have gotten out of hand.

In 1980, the U.S. Department of Justice became involved in 97,205 court cases, less than a third of which were criminal. In more than half of them, the federal government was suing individuals and companies and in the rest, individuals and companies were suing the federal government. In every case, the only sure winners were the lawyers.

Robert Reich, the Federal Trade Commission's policy planning director, said in Atlantic Monthly, "There are 35,000 lawyers involved in regulation, most of them here in D.C. They have an economic stake in prolonging conflict between business and government."

Walter B. Wriston, chairman of Citicorp, revealed that Citibank of New York's domestic legal bill exceeds the total earnings of most banks in the United States.

In my own hometown, I checked with the county government and found its annual legal bill to be in excess of $1 million a year and that's excluding the legal bills of all the municipalities within the county.

Paul Hasse, head of HALT (Help Abolish Legal Tyranny), who supplied the above figures and quotes, says, "The incomes of literally hundreds of thousands of attorneys depend upon their participation on both sides of government-related lawsuits, and on writing and decoding the regulations issued by the host of federal agencies."

"The cycle is maddening," he said. "Taxpayers are subsidizing lawyers in the bureaucracy to formulate and administer often contradictory and overlapping rules that result in high legal fees for private attorneys and compliance costs to businesses that are passed on to their customers — the taxpayers. For the average taxpayer, it is a case of quadruple jeopardy."

Most people are aware of the problem, especially those who've had the misfortune to come in close contact with the machinery of justice — machinery which is as efficient as a junked, 50-year-old Model T and as expensive as a Rolls Royce.

Question is what to do about it? Well, let's think positively. One suggestion is don't elect lawyers to any public office. Another is join HALT, 201 Mass. Ave., N.E. Suite 319, Washington, D.C., 20002. For $15 bucks, you can join and they will send you five legal manuals plus a newspaper keeping you up to date on their efforts to do such things as reform probate law, simplify legal language, and drive down the costs of justice.

This is a legitimate outfit, not some group of kooks, though I'm sure the lawyers among them are very lonely at gatherings of legal eagles.

We live in a nation of laws and we want to, but law should serve and protect society, not disrupt and bankrupt it. No one should have a greater interest in reforming the situation than honest lawyers, for if we don't reform it, respect for the law and for the legal profession will disappear.

The situation is going to be changed. The only question is how radical the change.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, July 5, the 186th day of 1982. There are 179 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 5, 1978, a truce in Lebanon collapsed amid urgent negotiations to end fighting between Syrian peacekeeping soldiers and the Lebanese Christian militia.

Also on this date:

In 1811, Venezuela became the first South American country to declare its independence from Spain.

In 1940, the Vichy government in France broke off relations with Britain in World War II.

In 1963, high level Chinese and Soviet officials met in Moscow to discuss differences over communist ideology.

In 1974, relations between the United States and Turkey became strained because of Turkey's decision to resume growing opium poppies.

Ten years ago: the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington ruled that the Democratic credentials committee violated the Constitution when it stripped Sen. George McGovern of 151 California delegates to the national convention.

Five years ago: Pakistan's army seized power in a bloodless coup, imposed martial law and promised new elections in October.

Today's birthdays: Former U.N. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge is 80. Julie Nixon Eisenhower is 34.

Many Chinese marriages still arranged

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bride for sale. By the pound. In China, that's no joke. In many parts of that huge nation, women are still bought and sold — if the bridegroom can afford it. Says one, "It's like a padlock on the wings of love."

By LIU HEUNG SHING

FUZHOU, China (AP) — Thirty-three years after the Communist revolution, feudalism still flourishes in the Chinese countryside. Marriages are arranged, brides are bought and sold like chattel property, and some are kidnapped and auctioned off.

Eight hundred million Chinese live in the countryside, and while many feudal practices have been stamped out, many persist and even have been revived in the most remote and backward areas.

Press reports of abducted, bartered and beaten brides are not uncommon, nor are stories of mercenary marriages and suicidal, star-crossed lovers.

There is a saying among young people, reflecting not only the past but the present: "Marriage is the tomb of love."

In some places, brides still are purchased by weight — the heavier the bride, the better field hand she makes. Parents force their daughters to marry strangers in a "double swap," so their sons can find cheap brides.

Peasant women illicitly sleeping with their fiances may even have to seek abortions if the bridegroom's family cannot come up with the bride price.

MANY PEASANT men cannot afford to buy wives, so they are forced into city labor to earn their bride price. In some backwaters, the men still listen at the bridal chamber and throngs of boys must first sleep in the conjugal bed, in the theory that it will help the couple produce sons.

"The old principles of marriage remain sacred in the countryside," writes researcher Li Yinghe of the Academy of Social Sciences. "Buying and selling marriages is like a padlock on the wings of love."

A typical case in this southern coastal region concerns Wei Huamu, a 24-year-old rice-paddy peasant whose parents were approached by the familiar, indispensable figure — the grinning matchmaker-crone.

Wei says she promised his parents to find a good "work horse" for a bride. The bride's family demanded a deposit of $110 for the engagement and $550 in wedding gifts.

In return for her machinations, the matchmaker herself would get a "machine gun," a "cartridge" and a couple of "hand grenades" — cynical but widespread Chinese synonyms for a whole ham, a carton of cigarettes and bottles of fiery white liquor.

After months of scurrying between households on the lush rice paddies, the matchmaker's scheme fell through. Wei's parents couldn't come up with enough cash to buy gifts like a sewing machine and a bicycle and still have enough left over for the mandatory lavish wedding feast.

Wei himself was earning less than $110 a year, plus grain.

THE BRIDE already had been chosen, pretty 20-year-old Li Ding, but the bridegroom's family couldn't afford her. Her parents would take no less and she would have to be auctioned off, in effect, to a better-off family.

"We knew our parents were talking about the marriage," the passed-over bridegroom says matter-of-factly. "We avoided each other and wouldn't even make eye contact. Of course, we didn't date," he says.

"Too bad; she was quite pretty."

Everything from the deposit to the number of banquet tables is negotiable, he says. So is the bride. "I was not rejected for myself, but because our house didn't have a tile rooftop" — a sign of wealth, he says.

In some backwaters, the men still listen at the bridal chamber and throngs of boys must first sleep in the conjugal bed, in the theory that it will help the couple produce sons.

Wei's case is not singular. It is reinforced by the family-based rural economy that wants sons for inheritance and brides to work in the fields and bear sons. Such practices are largely untouched by Communist Party exhortations against arranged marriages.

The Chinese press gives many such glimpses of feudal wedding practices. Last January, five men were sentenced to prison for kidnapping and selling 115 peasant women into forced marriages. The women were each sold for the equivalent of $133 to $300.

Last May Day, three teen-aged girls from Sichuan Province went on a picnic. They were lured off for sightseeing, abducted to another province and sold as brides. Sympathetic neighbors had to put up $500 to buy one girl back from the family that bought her and beat her when she tried to escape.

THE GIRL'S PROSPECTS for a good marriage now are ruined, since she is no longer considered pure.

Some young men grumble that they have been cheated because they have paid for kidnapped brides, but the women never were delivered.

Chinese authorities are concerned and are studying the situation. The problem has been exacerbated, some say, since the breakdown of authority in the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution. Furthermore, inflation, China's new economic policies and the call to get-rich-quick in the countryside all have raised the price of brides and the demands for consumer goods by her parents.

"Girls frequently sacrifice their feelings and have to marry strangers — and tragedy often results," writes Li. The media has reported suicides by star-crossed couples who were promised to other mates.

Li's paper appeared in a book entitled "Ponderings on History," by young progressive social scientists. It was banned for being too candid in print.

A doctor in sophisticated, coastal Amoy says bride price and parental arrangements are tragically pervasive. A women went to him for an abortion, he says, because her fiance's family could not meet her own family's demands for cash and wedding gifts.

Despite the embarrassing pregnancy and loss of purity, the marriage was off because the financial deal could not be struck. The doctor performed the abortion, but later he said:

"If the feudal customs were changed, this couple in love could have gotten married and kept the baby."

Chinese study old octopus

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — What is the difference between a 600-million-year-old octopus and a 500-million-year-old octopus?

University of Rochester geologist Curt Teichert and Chen Jun-Yuan, a colleague from the People's Republic of China, have been learning the difference, as they seek clues to the evolution of cephalopods, the class of shelled animals that includes the octopus, the nautilus, and the squid.

Salvadorans flee war for Canada

By SUSAN STOLER

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Salvadorans by the hundreds continue entering the United States illegally through the Rio Grande Valley and some are seeking political asylum in Canada where immigration policies are more relaxed.

U.S. immigration officials say they have not seen a slowdown in the numbers fleeing war-torn El Salvador since the March national elections there.

"We've noticed no significant change one way or another," said Chief Agent Larry Richardson of the Border Patrol's six-county McAllen sector.

"It seems to bear out our feelings that we're looking at an economic situation (rather than a political one)," he said.

In 1981, 2,830 Salvadorans were apprehended in the McAllen sector, many of whom had paid between $200 to $2,000 to smugglers who brought them all or part of the way to Texas.

Houston, Chicago, New York and other large cities with growing Salvadoran communities are their usual destinations.

So far this year, 1,210 Salvadorans have been arrested in the 100-mile-long stretch along the Rio Grande from Brownsville to Rio Grande City. The sector goes north to Falfurrias.

THE STATE Department has decided that Salvadorans as a nationality do no qualify as political refugees under the United Nations convention. Most asylum requests are denied unless a person can show special circumstances, such as membership in a banned political organization.

However, the Canadian government in March 1981 relaxed its refugee policy and suspended deportation procedures against Salvadoran aliens, said Kevin Burke, immigration consul at the Canadian consulate in Dallas.

"We're responding simply on a case-by-case basis," Burke said in a telephone interview. "If a person may meet the (U.N.) Geneva Convention definition of refugee, at least the way we interpret it, they can apply."

Burke interviews Salvadoran applicants in person and has traveled to South Texas several times to talk to aliens being held at the Immigration and Naturalization Service detention center near Los Fresnos.

The asylum applicants usually have contacted the consulate through a local attorney or an informal network of volunteers who assist refugees, he said.

"We've only had a small number of people come forward to this office. Mexico City has been involved in this quite a lot," he added.

As many as 240,000 Salvadoran refugees are estimated to be living in Mexico, according to the United Nations.

There were more than 60 asylum requests pending in the Dallas office from Salvadoran individuals or families when the last count was made in May.

"IT'S BEEN mushrooming since then. They walk in and we get calls," said Lou Quinn, Burke's assistant. "Somebody tells his buddies and the word gets around."

She said about 10 people applying through the Dallas office have re-settled in Canada.

The Canadian government pays their transportation, arranges housing and offers English classes. Refugees are expected to repay the relocation program once they are settled and find jobs.

Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver and Calgary have small Salvadoran refugee communities, Burke said.

The Canadian official said it sometimes is difficult to distinguish those who would be in jeopardy back in El Salvador and others trying merely to improve their financial condition.

"Economics is tied up with it," he said.

Canada, with its colder climate and lower immigrant population, clearly is their second choice to the United States, he said.

"Canada is another universe to them," said the Rev. Larry Jackson, a Presbyterian minister in Edinburg. "That's a long, long way from home. They know no one there."

Jackson is one of the founders of the Border Association for Refugees from Central America. The group tries to arrange housing, clothing and other needs for refugees who have come through the Valley "undetected" or for others caught by the Border Patrol.

HE ESTIMATED a less than a dozen Salvadorans in the Valley have applied for Canadian asylum.

Most Salvadorans flee to the United States with little understanding of the political complexities involved, he said.

"All they know is there are a lot of people shooting at a lot of other people and they're caught in the middle and they want out of it," Jackson said.

Canada is not the answer to the continuing problem of refugees streaming to the United States, he said.

Lisa Brodyaga, a Harlingen lawyer who handles many asylum requests for Salvadoran aliens, agreed.

"It's nice to go where people want you," she said of the Canadian's relocation program. "But I'd like to see this country treat them as political refugees, just like every other country in the Western Hemisphere."

If that is not done, she said the Salvadorans should be granted "extended voluntary departure," which would allow them to remain in the United States indefinitely until it is safe to return to their country.

"That, in a sense, is better. It's not good to drain a country of all its people," she added.

SOME ILLEGAL aliens captured in the Valley are released on their own recognizance when the Los Fresnos detention center and local jails are full, said John Luvender, INS assistant district director.

They are assigned a hearing date but half do not show up, he estimated.

Men are taken to the Los Fresnos facility while women are housed at jails in Edinburg and Brownsville for a cost to the federal government of $18.75 a day.

The detention center is undergoing a $5.5 million expansion to increase its capacity from 225 to 550 sometime this year.

Luvender said the average detention time is 12 to 15 days. A person can remain in the country as long as a asylum application is pending.

Some who have trouble being released on bond would rather return to El Salvador and take their chances rather than remain in custody, Ms. Brodyaga said.

The U.S. government flies them from Harlingen to Mexico City and on to San Salvador, the country's capital.

Brochures focus on health awareness

HOUSTON — Protecting life's most valuable possession — health — is the focus of a series of brochures, the first of which is now being mailed by Baylor College of Medicine to Midland-Odessa residents.

The brochures, "Life Cycles," are part of a health awareness program being conducted by the Houston college, which is the state's only private medical school. The program is funded by a $128,000 grant from the Atlantic Richfield Foundation. The foundation is the philanthropic arm of ARCO represented in Midland-Odessa by ARCO Oil and Gas Co. and ARCO Exploration Co.

"Atlantic Richfield Foundation is very happy to fund such a valuable program as Life Cycles, because we feel the greatest gift anyone can enjoy is the gift of good health," said Clarence Cardwell, vice president of ARCO Oil and Gas Co. in Midland. "In addition to being known as an energy company, ARCO can also be known as a company helping to preserve and maintain good health in the Midland-Odessa area."

The goal of the program is to provide information to more than 38,000 women between the ages of 18 and 65 in Midland-Odessa to promote preventive health lifestyles within the family. A similar project will be conducted in McAllen.

The brochure series will begin with one on maintaining good health in the family. This brochure emphasizes the need to prevent health problems, such as being aware of inherited tendencies to develp diabetes or heart disease, having regular checkups and following immunization schedules.

The other brochures will deal with nutrition, physical fitness and accident prevention.

Each brochure will be arranged according to age groups: infants and children, adolescents and young adults, adults and older adults.

"More and more Americans are dedicated to living healthy, long lives, but some do not have adequate information on how to meet this goal," said Amelie G. Ramirez, director of the Health promotion division of the Baylor office of public affairs.

"We hope that the Life Cycles series will give them the information, in an easy-to-use manner, that they can follow with their physician's guidance, to maintain their good health," she added.

The women in the area who will receive the brochures were selected from Texas driver's license lists. Women were chosen because research has shown them to be the family member most responsible for health and medical care in the family.

The first brochure is being accompanied by a letter describing the program and future brochures, explaining that they are free and that an enclosed self-adressed postcard must be returned if the women want to continue receiving the brochures.

Six weeks after each brochure is mailed, a small number of the women will be surveyed to determine how they used the brochures, what knowledge they gained from the material, and how their habits changed after reading the material.

Officials must check for 'friable materials'

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Officials of the Texas Education Agency and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency are alerting school officials in Texas that they are required to check their buildings to identify any "friable materials" containing asbestos.

"The key word is friable," explains T.R. Jones of the TEA. "Friable," he notes, means "something that can be crushed in the hand."

"If school districts find no such materials," Jones says, "they're not required to take any further action."

Use of asbestos in construction in forms which could result in airborne fibers — which can cause cancer — was banned in 1968, Jones says.

Schools constructed during the 1950s and 1960s may contain friable materials with asbestos, Jones says. Samples may be submitted to the Texas Department of Health for analysis (without charge).

EPA Region 6 Administrator Dick Whittington, Dallas, says public and private elementary and secondary schools must comply with the new requirements by May 27, 1983.

Jones says that over a year ago, Texas and the U.S. Department of Education entered into a voluntary agreement to determining what schools might contain asbestos materials, in order to locate the materials.

Some 200 of the 1,100 independent school districts in Texas have reported under the voluntary program, Jones says, with "approximately 60 percent of those having some form or other of asbestos."

At that time, Jones notes, the program was a voluntary one — but "in the last couple of weeks, EPA has indicated in some hearings that the program isn't working as well as they would like" — so the regulations have been made mandatory.

The regulation requires that school officials maintain records of their findings, notify employees, provide employees with instructions on reducing exposure to asbestos and notify the school's parent-teacher association if friable asbestos is found.

Jones says a memorandum from TEA will be sent to school districts — and reports that "a little flurry of activity" already has occurred as school districts have been notified by EPA.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Restore that sheer beauty

DEAR HELOISE:

Would you please tell me how to wash very dirty white synthetic fabric sheers without setting the dirt in the curtains. — Helen

+++

Here's what a reader who signed herself a "penny pincher" had to say on the subject. Thought you might be interested in trying her method:

"I filled my washing machine with hot water, a cup of automatic dishwashing detergent, and one-fourth cup bleach and let it agitate a few minutes to mix. I added the sheers and let them soak two hours, swishing them around once or twice during that time.

"At the end of the two hours, the water had turned absolutely black and my sheers a beautiful shade of white.

"I drained the water from the washer, refilled it and washed the curtains on a delicate cycle, adding more detergent.

"I dried them for a few minutes on 'delicate' and rehung them while they were still damp. The results were amazing! The sheers look almost new and are dazzling white."

Simple enough, isn't it, and best of all it works! If your sheers are fragile, be careful in handling and be sure the wash and dry cycles are set for delicate material.

Good luck! — Heloise

DO NOT DISTURB

Dear Heloise: When our children come inside to eat after they have been playing outdoors with the neighborhood children, they hook a sign fashioned after a hotel-motel sign on the doorknob.

We made ours from cardboard and covered it with bright red construction paper. On it we wrote, "Come back later, please."

Even the children who can't read, know the red sign means "eating," or "busy." — Bonnie Maple

PLANT SAVER

Dear Heloise: Here is a strawberry plant saver — just cover it with a piece of nylon net, held down at the sides of the bed with rocks or boards.

The birds cannot eat the berries through the net and the strawberries are intact when they are ready to pick. — Rolita Burrows

ENERGY CONSERVATION

Dear Heloise: I was quite interested in the column about a cold oven cake. Some years ago, I read that bread baked with a cold oven start actually continues to rise as the oven heats and makes for a lighter loaf. I was very skeptical but decided to give it a try.

It worked beautifully and for some reason, still a mystery to me, it took no longer to bake starting with the cold oven than in a preheated one.

I have always used a cold oven start since that time and now use it for all my baking — cookies and cakes as well.

Never have I had any problems and certainly this seems to be an energy saver as well. Try it, I think you will like it, too. — Mrs. Leroy Wallen

+++

I'm no expert on baking, but my things turn out just the same, also. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: I have found that using a sifter on boxed mixes (such as cakes, brownies, muffins, etc) will ease the problem of having the dreaded "powder bombs" ruining the finished product.

This is especially helpful when using older mixes which have been sitting on a shelf for a while. — Brian Hatch

NIFTY HANGERS

Dear Heloise: Use two curved wooden shirt hangers (no pants bar attached) to hang dresses or garments with narrow straps that won't stay on regular hangers.

Turn one hanger upside down, then put a rubber band on each end to hold the two together.

Belts or matching necklaces can be hung on the hook of the upside-down hanger. — Jean Crayton

+++

Got a good wardrobe storage hint? Don't keep it in the closet. To let other readers in on your secret, write Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216. She's grateful for the huge volume of mail she gets but can't send you a personal thank you. However, she'll use the best hints in her column whenever she can.

DEAR ABBY

Woman says son's wife is no daughter of hers

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We are still having an argument that began on Mother's Day. Perhaps you can help us settle it.

On Mother's Day I received flowers with a card that read, "To Mother on her special day." It was signed by both my son and his wife, whose mother is still living. I later learned that my daughter-in-law's mother also received flowers with a card signed by both my son and his wife.

I say that the card that came with my flowers should have been signed by my son ONLY. After all, I carried him under my heart for nine months, gave him life and raised him to manhood. I am his mother — and not the mother of the stranger he married.

My son's wife has her own mother, but she is NOT the mother of my son!

I know if you print this, you will receive many letters from mothers saying, "As long as I am remembered on Mother's Day, I don't care who signs the card." However, that is not the point. The point is that being called "Mother" is a sacred privilege that belongs only to the woman who has earned it. A person can have many wives — or husbands — during a lifetime, but only one mother. What do you say? — MOTHER OF ONE

DEAR MOTHER: Obviously, a person can have only one mother, but when people marry, they create a new "family," and their spouse's relatives become their relatives, traditionally as well as by law. Don't split hairs, Mother, lest you split families.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old and just finished 11th grade. I flunked one semester of social studies, so now my dad has to pay $80 for me to go to night school to make it up. I didn't want to go to night school in the first place, but he says if I don't go, I can't drive, and you know how important driving is to a kid my age.

Anyway, get this, Abby, my dad is making me pay back the $80. Do you think he is being fair? — MAD

DEAR MAD: Yes. And wise, too.

DEAR ABBY: This is concerning the 13-year-old girl who thinks she's a "freak" because she has two different-colored eyes. I'd like to help her by telling her that I, too, was born with two different-colored eyes, and I was always extremely proud of them. One was green like my father's, and the other was brown like my mother's.

Many famous people had eyes of different colors. The beautiful Kay Francis, the late Gracie Allen, who was married to Geroge Burns, Lionel Stander, the houseman on the TV series "Hart to Hart," and many others.

Never mind getting contact lenses to look like everyone else. My husband said he fell in love with my unusual eyes. — ANNA C. IN SANTA MONICA

DEAR ANNA: Since that letter appeared in my column, a surprising number of readers wrote to say that they, too, were born with two different-colored eyes. In any case, I agree, it's nothing to be embarrassed about. (We see eye to eye.)

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's new booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letters Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Inventor also marketing expert for new products

By SALLY KORIS
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — "Sweater Fresh," a product designed to cut dry cleaning bills, debuted in local supermarkets just three weeks ago.

It was a rather routine debut — no klieg lights, no major advertising — but it wasn't routine for household products inventor James McLaughlin, because Sweater Fresh is his brainchild.

After five years of work, McLaughlin — one of the few successful self-employed household products inventors — came up with a product which, when sprayed onto clothing, removes surface soil, stale odors and wrinkles during a two-minute tumble in the dryer.

"My daughter asked me to come up with a cheaper way of cleaning clothes, because she was spending a lot of money on dry cleaning," says McLaughlin, who, before striking out on his own some 10 years ago, had worked his way up to head of the New Product Development Group at Lever Bros.

So McLaughlin worked for three years, part-time, and spent $250,000 of his own money to develop the product. Two years ago, he put it in a test market situation. It did so well that he and two friends formed a company, Cono-Tec, to raise capital for futher market testing. They went to Wall Street for capital, but when bankers demanded a major share of the company, they turned to family and friends for the $1 million needed to further promote the product.

McLaughlin is an inventor extraordinare of new household products, with credits including Rise Baby Face Shaving Cream and Carpet Fresh. He's also an authority on methods of inventing and marketing new products.

"I was caught up in the idea of being an inventor for a long time," says the voluble McLaughlin. "But I decided to be an opportunist instead, because an opportunity is always on time with a new product, whereas an inventor can be way behind or way ahead of his time."

McLaughlin has learned the hard way. He once spent three years developing a product to deodorize and speed up decomposition of dog wastes — designed to take care of the terrible problems New York was having — only to have the city pass a law requiring dog owners to pick up after their dogs when the product was ready to be marketed.

McLaughlin has a simple formula for developing new products:

* Take the idea and put it in paragraph form of 25 words or less.
* Find 10 strangers and ask them to read the paragraph. Ask them if they understand it and if they'd be willing to buy it. If you get four out of 10 who say they'll buy it, you've got a winner on your hands.
* Make the prototype product.

"A lot of people tell me that they've had good ideas and don't know what to do with them," says Mclaughlin. "This method helps them figure out the value of their idea. And it doesn't take any money to find out if a product will sell."

Developing a product does take money, however. McLaughlin estimates that during the early stages of developing an idea, costs run between $50,000 and $100,000. As product and concept get refined during the second year, costs are between $100,000 and $200,000. If everything falls into place and the product can be control-market tested during the third year, costs run up to $250,000.

Finally, if one decides to go into national distribution, costs — including manufacturing and advertising — escalate to between $3 million and $20 million.

"The risks are enormous," he says. "So that's where big companies come in — they buy lots of ideas from the outside. You have to be an individual to invent things."

Because McLaughlin is a known quantity in the household products area, he often takes his ideas — complete with a proposed ad, package design, patent position and market research — to a big company. If the company says yes to a product, McLaughlin is paid a monthly fee ranging between $1,000 and $20,000 as long as the company holds the rights to the product. If a product gets into distribution, he collects a royalty fee of between 1 and 4 percent of net sales.

"There's no guarantee that you're not going to be ripped off. But the risk is less with a company than with a potential competitor, because you can sign a contract with the company. Patents don't really help, because they're written by lawyers, and other lawyers know how to rewrite them in order to get an entirely new patent on essentially the same product."

Times are still good for 'upscale' magazines

By ED FISHBEIN
Hearst Feature Service

There's not a cloud on the horizon in upscale magazine country. While most of the country has been mired in the recession, Architectural Digest, Town & Country and Vogue have actually thrived.

Although this happy state of affairs has been achieved because these magazines are aimed at the wealthy, their executives say well-off readers aren't the only reason for their current prosperity. But none of the executives denies that they owe much of their current success to the fact that they are delivering the right readers at the right time.

WEALTHY AUDIENCES have grown far more appealing to more advertisers. But in the last decade, the distribution of money has changed, said David McCann, the publisher of Town & Country, which chronicles the rich at work and play. There now is what McCann terms "a whole new class of people with money." Because of this, he said, retailers have broadened their advertising.

This new class seems to be far less susceptible to the recession. Magazine group publisher John Decker of Knapp Communications, which owns Architectural Digest, says the kind of advertising the magazine attracts — luxury cars, jewelery, liquor — is the last to feel the effects of the recession.

THE REST OF THE MAGAZINE industry has taken note of the trend. Last year, semi-funky Apartment Life became slick, upscale Metropolitan Home. Next year, House & Garden will try to drop the middleclass readers that have sustained it for 81 years as it undergoes a radical redesign intended to make it competitive with Architectural Digest. A few months later, House & Garden's owner, Conde Nast Publishing, will revive Vanity Fair — a high-society literary magazine that stopped publishing 46 years ago — in a bid to appeal to the same readers as the highly successful New Yorker.

THE REALLY PROSPEROUS MAGAZINES claim there's more to their success than hiring the best photographers and art directors and printing pictures of beautiful homes, clothes and people on glossy paper. Vogue advertising director David Rubin said Vogue was — and always will be — primarily a fashion and beauty book.

But Vogue also began appealing to what Rubin calls the "educated, managerial female." It started running a regular column on women and cars. It lavished attention on changes that have occurred in family and interpersonal relationships. It even does an occasional piece on current affairs, although Vogue probably is not the first place one should look for insights into the invasion of Lebanon.

The result, Rubin said, is that Vogue is "magnificently positioned for the female marketing scene." Circulation, he said, has increased 73 percent in the last seven years, to 1,250,000. And the new audience apparently hasn't diluted the magazine's demographics — the average household income of readers is $53,000. This has not been lost on advertisers, who bought 14 percent more pages last year.

TOWN & COUNTRY, a Hearst Corporation publication, has been going through a similar editorial and financial change. The editorial transformation began in 1977, when it was decided to make the magazine more than just chronicle of how the social elite entertained, dressed, vacationed and mated.

"Town & Country became relevant," said publisher McCann. That means practical information alongside articles on how sapphires are the hot gem of the year — not exactly relevant for people making less than $105,000 a year, which happens to be the average annual household income of Town & Country readers.

But Town & Country does include articles on money (how to take advantage of corporations that are buying back their own stock) and health (the best of the country's beauty spas). And when it runs a fashion article, McCann says there isn't a single piece of clothing shown that can't be bought in a retail store somewhere in the United States.

THE COMBINATION of editorial change and increased appeal to advertisers has made Town & Country one of the nation's fastest-growing magazines over the last five years. Both circulation — now at 310,000 — and advertising pages have doubled in that period.

ARCHITECTURAL DIGEST has enjoyed even greater success, but it's focus hasn't really changed since publishing magnate Bud Knapp bought it in 1964 and began turning it into a lush celebration of expensive homes. The book's ad pages have tripled in the last five years and the 600,000 circulation is up 100,000 in the last year alone.

Obviously, most of this advertising growth comes from high ticket items that require the $115,000 annual household income that is enjoyed by Architectural Digest's average reader. But surprisingly, the book occasionally runs ads for cars like the Ford Escort.

People who make $115,000 a year do not lie awake at night dreaming of owning Ford Escorts. But Decker says manufacturers will pay Architectural Digest's $15,000 page rate in the hope that the book's readers will consider buying these autos as third cars.

SONORA — Fifty of the top performance-tested Angora billies in Texas will be sold at 1:30 p.m. Thursday at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station's research ranch just off Texas Highway 55 southeast of Sonora, according to Jack Groff, Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) sheep and goat specialist.

Producers and prospective buyers are invited to inspect the goats and review results of performance tests.

The sale will be preceded by a barbecue luncheon at 11:30 a.m. and by a session on controlling internal parasites in Angoras and a report on the International Mohair Association meeting.

Approximately 200 billies were consigned to the test. Prospective buyers may view color slides of the billies in their full fleece.

DIRT, SQUIRT AND QUIRT

Now's time to combat lawns' grub infestations

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

It is just about time to start checking lawns for grub infestations in the Midland area. The first flights of adult beetles (commonly called May or June beetles) were noted around the end of May. After emergence the beetles mate and the females begin to lay eggs in the turf. The egg-laying period averages 30 days.

Heavy grub infestations can destroy grass roots, causing the lawn area to become spongy, allowing the mat of turf to be rolled back like a piece of carpet. To prevent this type of damage, lawns should be checked closely for small white grubs during the critical treatment period, July 15 to August 15.

When more than four grubs per square foot of grass sod are found, lawns should be treated for control of this major pest. Timing of the insecticide treatment — when grubs are less than one-half inch in body length and located near the soil surface — is critical for adequate control. This is because the residual effectiveness of these insecticides is greatly reduced one to three weeks following application. Also, insecticides applied after the critical treatment period often prove ineffective because grubs have become large and very difficult to kill.

Check lawns for white grubs by cutting a one-square foot section of sod and examining the roots and soil to a depth of four inches. Several lawn samples (at least two one-square foot sections per 1,000 square feet of lawn area) should be taken to make certain an infestation justifies treatment. After examination, soil and sod can be replaced, pressed down and watered.

Due to the bunching behavior of adult female beetles at egg laying time, white grub infestations are often clumped in turf grass areas. If the grub worms are definitely clumped in areas of the lawn, direct treatment to infested areas only.

Insecticides suggested for white grub control in home lawns in West Texas are Diazinon and Dursban. Liquid or granular formulations of these insecticides may be utilized to treat lawns for grub control.

Before treating lawns for grub control, the following practices should be done: 1. Mow the lawn and 2. Remove all grass clippings.

Lawns treated with liquid insecticides should be sprayed immediately after the lawn irrigation. Apply the recommended dosage rate of liquid insecticide in 30 to 40 gallons of water per 1,000 square feet of lawn. Irrigate the sprayed lawn immediately after treatment and before the spray dries on the grass with one-half to one inch of water. The high volume of spray water and irrigation after spraying are needed to move the insecticide into the soil where the grubs are feeding.

When using granular insecticides, apply the granules evenly over the entire lawn when the grass is dry. Follow instructions on the label of the insecticide container for treatment rates. Rake the lawn with a grass rake or water hose after application to move the granules down near the soil surface. Then apply at least one and one-half to two inches of irrigation water to dissolve the granules and move the insecticide into the soil. To obtain this amount of water accurately, place an empty coffee can under the spray of the sprinkler. Periodically check the can until one and one-half to two inches of water are in the can.

Diazinon and Dursban are organic phosphate insecticides that will chemically tie up onto thatch — the tightly bound layer of living and dead roots, stems and leaves and stolons of grass that forms under the turf. In lawns with more than one-half inch of thatch, irrigation applications immediately after a spray treatment are essential to move the insecticide through the thatch layer. Grass should be wet prior to treatment.

Diazinon will usually provide control of grubs for about two to three weeks. Dursban may provide control for four to six weeks. This is if both insecticides get into the soil where the grubs are feeding.

Grub treatments applied earlier in the season will be completely ineffectual in controlling the new hatch.

Gulf creates tension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although it is possible that the world will produce another record grain harvest in 1982-83, a huge gulf will remain between countries which have surplus food to export and those whose harvests are too small to feed their own people.

It is this chasm that stirred up an old debate several weeks ago in the posh resort city of Acapulco, Mexico, at a conference of the World Food Council, a United Nations agency.

The council, formed in 1974 to monitor world food supplies and to seek answers to hunger problems, includes rich agricultural countries such as the United States, Canada and France, and poor countries such as Bangladesh and Haiti which are never far from hunger.

One major consideration that has been a topic for years in international groups, including the council, is the subject of a world food reserve and how it should be set up.

Some want an international food bank under UN authority; others, including the United States, opt for each nation holding and managing its own food reserves.

Although food is different things to different people, in the context of global needs and planning it generally refers to grains — rice, wheat and other grains, including corn and sorghum, which serve as food in many countries.

A twisted iron bar is a good enough weapon for this young Beirut resident eager to imitate adults as he plays war games near his home in East Beirut Saturday. Not far away, Israeli troops tightened their hold on Palestinian-controlled West Beirut.

Israelis reject Arafat request

TEL AVIV , Israel (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet, unrelenting in its demand that the Palestine Liberation Organization get out of Lebanon, flatly refused Sunday to let the PLO maintain a token political and military presence there.

The Israeli statement came in response to a reported offer signed by PLO leader Yasser Arafat, whereby the guerrillas would get out of Lebanon but would leave behind a token military, political and social welfare presence.

The Cabinet communique said Israel "unconditionally rejects any proposal for any sort of token political, organizational or military presence of terrorists in Lebanon."

It said Israel continued to insist that "all the terrorists, without exception, must leave the land of Lebanon."

The Cabinet also said there would be no change in the deployment of its forces in Lebanon without prior Israeli agreement, rejecting demands that Israel pull back from its positions on the edge of the Palestinian enclave in west Beirut. But Israeli officials, who asked not to be named, said Israel was continuing to tighten its siege.

Israeli armor has moved up to the Green Line separating the Christian sector of Beirut from the western half, refusing to let food or fuel supplies go in.

Cabinet secretary Dan Meridor also told reporters that Prime Minister Menachem Begin had informed the ministers he would ignore the peace demonstration involving 50,000 to 70,000 Israelis in Tel Aviv Saturday night.

Along with the hard rhetoric, though, there were indications of optimism that U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib will come up with a settlement of the crisis.

Israeli defense minister Ariel Sharon, in a speech Sunday, said he preferred a negotiated settlement to a battle in Beirut because of the high casualties likely among Israeli troops and Lebanese civilians.

Shimon Peres, leader of the opposition Labor Party, said after meeting with Begin that he was optimistic, because negotiations were continuing and all the parties involved were approaching agreement on the basic ingredients of a settlement. Peres listed them as the ouster of the PLO, followed by the withdrawal of Syrian and Israeli forces from Lebanon and the establishment of a strong, independent Lebanese government.

"The question is what the PLO will do," Peres said. "Are they playing seriously or are they just fighting to gain time?"

"It looks like the Americans do have something, and if what they have is accurate, then the situation is not bad," said one official.

Meanwhile, a surge of protest against the Lebanon wnvasion led to protests and scattered violence in the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

Six Arabs were injured in a shooting clash between Palestinian nationalists and members of the Israeli-backed village league near the West Bank town of Ramallah, Israel Radio said. The nationalists were trying to stop Arab workers going to jobs in Israel, it said.

PLO guerrillas told to commit suicide

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy said Sunday that Palestinian guerrillas encircled by Israelis in Lebanon should "commit suicide rather than accept shame," the official Libyan news agency JANA said Sunday.

The news agency said the Libyan leader made the statement in a message to leaders of the "heroic Palestinian resistance," in which he also announced that Libya was putting "all its capabilities under Syria's disposal."

It did not explain what that would entail. Syrian troops are in Lebanon, sent in after the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war to enforce a truce. Israel, which invaded Lebanon June 6, is demanding that the Syrians as well as the Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas leave.

Khadafy said it is "both shameful and unbelievable that the enemy should be given the right to negotiate our existence, whether in Beirut or Lebanon as a whole."

In Beirut, Lebanese government sources reported PLO chief Yasser Arafat had signed a detailed blueprint agreeing to evacuate PLO leaders and guerrillas from Israeli-encircled West Beirut under the supervision of an international observation force.

CONSUMER TIPS

When it comes to moving, be prepared

By THE BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU OF THE PERMIAN BASIN, INC.

The growth of the Permian Basin proves that Americans are constantly on the move. Yet, whether it's across town or cross-country, moving can be traumatic. The more consumers know about movers, their industry practices and regulations, the better the chances of minimizing problems and expense.

The most important step in a move is the planning. Being well-organized and understanding the problems related to moving household goods result in a more successful move, according to Rocky Ford with Rocky Ford Moving Vans.

When planning a move, the choice of a mover is a crucial factor. A concerned agent will make sure the process runs as smoothly as possible and problems are handled quickly. If you are unfamiliar with a company ask for references or call your Better Business Bureau for a reliability report. Another source of information might be recommendations from friends or relatives.

Since a license is required from the Texas Railroad Commission and/or the Interstate Commerce Commission to move goods within the state as well as across state lines, ask to see the company's license or proper authority. If the company advertises in the "yellow pages" the ICC license number will be listed on the ad.

Interstate movers are required to furnish copies of their performance record for the previous year. By examining this record, potential customers can learn how punctual the company has been and how accurate with its estimates.

Actual charges for the move are based on three things: the weight of the shipment, the distance to be traveled and any extra services such as packing or additional insurance. Although licensed movers are required to look at your goods and provide you with a written estimate, the final cost cannot be determined until the weight of the load has been checked against a fixed tariff rate. To determine the weight of the load the driver must first weigh the empty van. This weight by law must be noted on the bill of lading before the truck arrives at your doorstep, so ask to see it.

After loading your household goods the driver will again weigh the truck. If you prefer, you have the right to watch your shipment being weighed. The difference between these two weights is the net weight which will be used to figure the cost of the shipment. You must be notified if the cost exceeds the original estimate by 10 percent of $25, whichever is greater.

When preparing to move, seriously decide what is worth moving since the total weight will affect the final cost. State regulations do not allow a mover to handle such items as pets or plants so arrangements should be made to transport those items separately. Also, household cleaning products should be securely packed or separately transported because spillage could cause serious damage to other household goods.

A licensed mover will inventory all of your belongings and provide you with a copy. To minimize future problems make sure all items are listed.

If not explained, ask the mover about liability for loss or damage. State and federal regulations require a company to automatically insure your belongings for 60¢ per pound, but this is generally below the market value of household goods. For very little money, a consumer can purchase added liability coverage.

Unless previous arrangements have been made, the company will expect the bill to be paid before the goods are delivered. Payment must be made by a money order, certified check or cash, not by personal check.

Plan to be on hand for the delivery of your possessions and check each piece of furniture and carton promptly for problems. Don't be rushed into signing a release. If a claim is needed, file it as soon as possible with the company agent in the destination city. It is important to remember that the company is not automatically responsible for any problem that arises. Lack of insurance or poorly kept inventory records may keep you from obtaining a satisfactory adjustment.

Preparation, a concerned agent and cooperation can go a long way to cut down on problems. For more information on this topic write for "Tips on Interstate Moving," BBB/Permian Basin, P.O. Box 6006, Midland, Texas 79701.

Mubarak warns of impending bloodshed

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak called for a "quick solution" to the Lebanese crisis Sunday and warned again that time was running out to avoid a bloody showdown between Palestinians and Israelis in west Beirut.

The government's Middle East News Agency said the plea was made in a message to President Reagan drafted during a morning session of the Egyptian National Security Council and delivered to U.S. Ambassador Alfred Atherton.

No text of the message was made public. But the Egyptian news agency said it learned that the note "affirmed the necessity of lifting the (Israeli) siege on the Lebanese capital and working to reach a quick solution of the Palestinian problem and also impeding the deterioration of the situation."

Mubarak's message, which was in response to a note from Reagan, followed a two-day session of Mubarak's senior foreign policy advisers and came in the wake of a Franco-Egyptian call for another U.N. Security Council debate on the crisis.

Osama el-Baz, an adviser to Mubarak, said Egypt was "keen to exert efforts to reach a solution as fast as possible because time is a very crucial element."

"We should reach an acceptable formula in a day or two," he added.

El-Baz said the Egyptian government believed the main goal of diplomatic efforts should be to lift Israel's siege of west Beirut and prevent more bloodshed.

But he avoided outlining any specific formula for deciding the fate of the thousands of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas if they agreed to lay down their arms and leave Lebanon.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's bid is not forcing, and you, admittedly, do not have much of a hand. Nevertheless, you should go on to four hearts. Partner has contracted for nine tricks opposite what might be a bust. Viewed in that light, your trump honors and doubleton club are adequate to undertake game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K72 ♡AQ10932 ◇AQ5 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Your primary duty is to show your excellent suit and good hand. Jump to three hearts — you can support diamonds later. If you bid only two hearts, it will be impossible to describe your power later in the auction; if you do anything else, you might have a job convincing partner that you have such a good six-card heart suit.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠42 ♡KJ9843 ◇K5 ♣763
Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What do you respond?
A.—With a fair six-card suit and an outside control opposite a 22-24 point two no trump opening bid, you must realize that you are on the verge of slam. The best way to indicate your ambition is by a jump in hearts, but not to four hearts — that bid denies slam interest. You can either bid three hearts now and then, no matter what partner does, bid five hearts at your next turn. Or you can jump immediately to five hearts, which is our preference.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ10 ♡QJ104 ◇A98 ♣A87
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	?

What action do you take?
A.—What can you do? Nothing! Be content to accept a small profit. You have no reason to feel confident that your side can make any contract with this unattractive distribution, and a double by you would obligate partner to bid.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠83 ♡AKJ762 ◇A854 ♣A
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
A.—An overcall of one heart may get passed out, and a jump to two hearts these days is played as preemptive. So double. Regardless of partner's response, you will introduce your heart suit at your next turn. That should describe your hand pretty well.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q1065 ♡83 ◇AK62 ♣762
The bidding has proceeded:

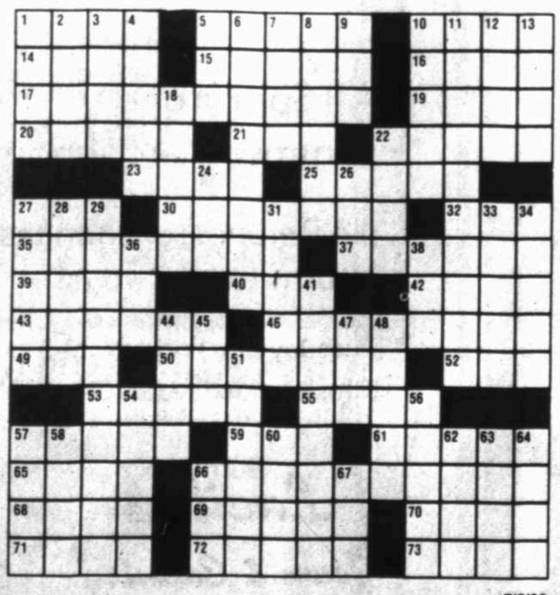

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?
A.—A trump. You must start extracting dummy's fangs immediately to prevent declarer from ruffing spades on the table. When you get in with a diamond, you will lead another trump in an effort to complete your sabotage. The trump lead is preferable to the king of diamonds ("to get a look at dummy, partner"), because that may cost you an entry to lead a second trump.

Largest-ever group sees shuttle land

By STEPHEN FOX

THE ANTELOPE VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A half-million holiday revelers shouted, clapped and waved American flags Sunday as they peered skyward from the Mojave Desert and watched Columbia's triumphant return to Earth. It was by far the biggest crowd to see the space shuttle land.

"There it is! I see it!" cried spectators at the public viewing site, who began craning their necks as soon as they heard the two sharp sonic booms that herald the ship's re-entry into the atmosphere.

First the shuttle's two vapor trails appeared, then the sun glinted off the two chase planes that escort it on either side, and finally the orbiter itself dove into view over the rows upon rows of flag-bedecked motorhomes, vans and cars in the nearby parking area.

"It's the most exciting thing since I had my five kids," said one woman.

"All right, America!" yelled a man, standing amid a forest of upward-pointing arms.

It was a beautiful day, with visibility up to 100 miles, allowing many in the crowd to keep the shuttle in sight until it touched down on a dry lake bed at Edwards Air Force Base, four miles away, at 9:09 a.m. PDT. Temperatures were in the high 70s and reached only into the 80s later, mild for the desert summer.

Many of the estimated 475,000 who packed the public site came as much for the gathering itself as for the shuttle, and turned the stretch of flatland into an instant campground. About 100,000 early arrivals put on a fireworks show after dark Saturday, and campfires glowed throughout the night as people slept in campers, tents, backseats of cars or in the open.

"We're real glad to be here — this is a great way to spend the Fourth," said Ray Olsen, a retiree from Hobart, Ind., who is vacationing in a camper with his wife, Fran.

Many spectators bolted for their cars immediately after the landing and lines quickly formed as thousands tried to reach the two narrow roads that lead back to civilization. Two hours later, the new shuttle, Challenger, flew over atop a 747 and received a volley of applause from those stranded in traffic below.

Across the lake bed, 30,000 invited guests of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration got to watch the landing close up with President Reagan after passing through a series of metal detectors and receiving small American flags to wave. Many sang along as a military band played "God Bless America."

"There are no words to describe it," Reagan said, watching from a flag-bedecked stand as Columbia made its first touchdown on a concrete runway. "When we came up here, they told us it would land in about 20 minutes. I realized that 20 minutes ago, they were over Honolulu.".

"It's beautiful, beautiful," said his wife, Nancy.

Former astronaut Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin watched through binoculars and gave a running play-by-play to his companion, actress Stephanie Powers. "There it is, I see it...he's making a turn," Aldrin said.

"It was terrific," said California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., whose rival in the upcoming Senate election, San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, was also on hand.

Both of the two-lane blacktop roads that lead to the public viewing site, 90 miles north of Los Angeles, had been clogged bumper-to-bumper since Saturday.

Some of the over 400,000 estimated witnesses to the fourth landing of the shuttle Columbia were already in position in the Mojave Desert when this photograph was taken Saturday. Sunday's crowd was the largest ever to witness a shuttle landing.

Challenger meets its sister ship

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Perched piggyback atop a NASA 747 jet, the space shuttle Challenger headed for Cape Canaveral on Sunday following a picturesque "fly by" for the benefit of President Reagan and thousands of desert sightseers.

With Reagan giving the signal — "Challenger, you are free to take off" — the ship began its two-day trip just two hours after the return of its sister ship, Columbia.

The modified jumbo jet did a showcase swing less than 1,000 feet overhead of the crowd, as the president led them in singing "God Bless America."

The ferry plane and its 157,000-pound passenger, escorted by a little T-38 jet, arrived four hours later for an overnight refueling stop at Ellington Air Force Base in Houston. About 50,000 people turned out to see the new spaceship, and to welcome home Columbia's astronauts, who arrived in a convoy of NASA jets at the same time.

Challenger was delivered last Wednesday to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration by its manufacturer, Rockwell International.

Next January, Challenger is to get its first workout, a four-man mission to place a NASA communications satellite into orbit.

Columbia, the first operating shuttle, was the centerpiece of Sunday's holiday festivities at Edwards, but Challenger received great attention as visible proof of America's commitment to an expanding presence in space.

Two other shuttles are under construction. Enterprise, a test ship that will never fly in space, was also on display at Edwards Sunday.

The mated aircraft, flown by NASA test pilot Fitzhugh Fulton, arrive Monday at Kennedy Space Center, Fla. There, three giant rocket engines will be installed and Challenger will be methodically outfitted for space travel.

Except for the name on its nose, Challenger looks exactly like Columbia. But there are several significant differences. Most importantly, Challenger is certified for 100 missions without major overhaul. Columbia will be taken briefly out of service after its next flight in November so its systems can be brought to the same level.

And the new ship is 2,000 pounds lighter than Columbia, which means it can carry an extra ton of payload in its cargo bay .

New director pushing 'men in space' goal

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The man who soon will become the third director of the Johnson Space Center says the space agency's next goal should be to establish a permanently staffed space station.

"Now that we have access to permanent residency in space — and I assume we are smart enough to take advantage of this advantage — then I think use of it will cause an explosion of uses free enterprise will utilize," said Gerald Duane Griffin, 47.

Business already is using the space program, Griffin said. He said two companies invested millions in a payload on board the fourth shuttle, which they hope will be the forerunner of the first orbital drug factory.

Scientists have found several chemical processes which can be conducted only in weightless conditions.

Griffin warns that the United States runs the risk of being the second to set up permanently staffed space stations — four Soviets and a French astronaut completed a mission aboard Salyut orbiters this week.

"We have our chance now," Griffin said in a recent interview. "If we don't (take it) someone else will, you can bank on that."

Griffin will take over from the man he calls his mentor, Dr. Christopher Kraft, who has said he will step down from the director's post in November.

Griffin said another of his goals as director will be to remind the government of the importance of paying for research that may not have an immediate use.

"Basic research has kind of gotten pushed aside," Griffin said. He said he will concentrate on educating Congress and the public on the need for such work.

"It is a political process as much as it is a technical process," he said. "I plan to spend some time on this."

Lack of money for basic research for the last 15 years means the space shuttle program is using technology from the 1960s and 1970s, Griffin said.

"We have eaten up most of the technology we have," he said. "NASA is a reflection of this on a national scale. We don't have the R&D (research and development) base to move on to the next step we must take."

Anti-drink drug often used as last resort

Dear Dr. Solomon: After months of heartache and tears, I finally got my husband to agree to go to a clinic for alcoholics. I've heard of a drug that makes people sick if they drink. But instead of giving him the drug, the people at the clinic referred him to Alcoholics Anonymous. Why mess around with AA when there's a drug that works? — Mrs. C.O., Bellingham, Wash.

Dear Mrs. O.: While some alcohol abuse clinics do prescribe Antabuse at the outset of treatment, others use it as a last resort, after other approaches, such as a referral to Alcoholics Anonymous (AA), have failed.

Dr. Stanley Gitlow of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City says that some patients request Antabuse instead of going to AA because it is easier to take a pill than to relate to other people. However, he adds, the key to recovery in alcoholism is learning to relate to others.

Antabuse can be helpful when other forms of treatment have failed. These include periods of significant stress, such as the death of a loved one or loss of a job. Antabuse can also prepare the patient for psychotherapy. But sometimes the easiest way to treat a problem does not bring about the long-lasting results that everyone wants, and apparently the clinic your husband went to feels that his applies in his case.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A neighbor of mine is going to be operated on for the third time. She tells me that she has some pain in her stomach, but the doctor can't find anything wrong. You have written about all the new equipment that is being used to diagnose different problems, so why can't they find out what's bothering my neighbor? — Mrs. M.E., New York, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. E.: You must realize that a specific answer to your question is not possible. Aside from the fact that you indicate that your neighbor has abdominal pain, I know nothing about her condition or about the type of surgery she has had.

Keeping that in mind, I would add that some patients who complain of abdominal pain for which there is no apparent explanation have been found to be influenced by psychological factors. I want to emphasize that I am not saying that this applies to your neighbor — I simply do not know enough about the situation to make any such statement. But if an apparent physical disorder cannot be explained on physical grounds, the possibility of psychological factors should certainly be considered.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I saw your successful patient on ABC's NIGHTLINE television program. You gave her a shot in the arm and she quit smoking. Did she have to come to your Baltimore office for the shot? — T.J., Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear T.J.: There is more to my one-day stop-smoking program than just getting a shot. Although it is theorized that the shot in the arm releases the "feel good hormone," beta-endorphin, which substitutes for the beta-endorphin released when you smoke, I also give patients my special diet which cleanses the nicotine from their system. In addition, I instruct them in behavioral modification.

Lights went out in Texas during second quarter

By DAN BALZ
(c) 1982, The Washington Post

HOUSTON — Even in an industry used to boom and bust, the swiftness of the decline in the oil industry has been amazing. "This one has literally taken everyone's breath away," said John E. Olson, first vice president of Drexel Burnham Lambert stockbrokers in Houston. "The first quarter of the year was high cotton; in the second quarter, the lights went out."

The number of drilling rigs in operation has fallen from about 4,500 at the end of last year to roughly 2,900 today, according to the Hughes Tool Co. rig count, a barometer of economic well-being in Texas that tracks the number of drilling rigs in operation each week.

Small oilfield operators are filing for bankruptcy on a regular basis. And at least 20 small oilfield servicing companies have gone under since April 1. The various suppliers to the oilfields — pipe and drillbit manufacturers, for example — have found their markets dried up. And even the major oil companies, Exxon among them, are cutting their staffs by forced retirements and incentives to leave.

"The landscape is like south Lebanon," Olson said. "The debris is all over."

The decline in oil and gas-drilling activity is a sign that the period of rapid growth that marked the economy during the last decade here may finally be slowing. The economic outlook remains bright, but a new reality is setting in, and for the first time in many years, unemployment is now a topic of conversation in Houston.

THE STRENGTH of the energy industry, which benefited every time the Organization of Petroleum Exporting States (OPEC) raised the price of oil, created in Texas a sense of immunity to the economic woes of the rest of the country, a perception the current recession has nearly wiped out.

Today, people here acknowledge that the growth rates of recent years — 6 percent annually in the labor force — were too large to be sustained. The local economy still may add 50,000 new jobs in 1982, but that is far below the average of about 85,000 new jobs added each year recently.

In the future, energy will continue to be a vital part of the Sunbelt economy, but energy industry experts and regional economists said there is little on the horizon to suggest another rapid increase in exploration activity of the kind just experienced.

"We must be near the bottom, but we don't see the industry bouncing back to the levels of the fourth quarter of 1981," said J.C. Grindal, coordinator of strategic planning for Exxon.

Joblessness is now a staple in the Houston newspapers. The unemployment rate here rose to 5.6 percent in May and is expected to increase further when the June figures are calculated. Last year the June rate was 6.2 percent, and local labor market analysts believe it could hit 7 percent this year. The statewide rate hit 7 percent in June, believed to be the highest rate since the 1930s.

Houston's 5.6 percent rate in May is still well below the national average of 9.5 percent, but what concerns labor market experts here is that the rate rose sharply at a time of the year when it historically has not.

INITIAL CLAIMS for unemployment compensation jumped from 7,328 in February to 13,420 in May, according to the Texas Employment Commission. Continued claims for unemployment insurance have risen from 44,770 to 73,218 during the same period.

"It's quite significant," said Ron McMonagle, a labor market analyst for the state. "It's larger than any trend that we've seen."

Rising unemployment has afflicted other cities along the Texas gulf coast, which is home to refineries and petrochemical plants that are operating far below capacity. Hardest hit is the industrial triangle in the southeast corner of the state. Unemployment in Orange County was 12.9 percent in May. In Port Arthur, it was 11.4 percent.

In part, Texas is a victim of its own success. Unemployment is rising because the labor market can no longer easily absorb the influx of out-of-state workers, who continue to see Texas as a job mecca and are still pouring in. Also, the national recession has affected manufacturing firms here and throughout the state.

But the decline in the oil-drilling industry was so unforeseen that Texans have concentrated on it. In the past two years, the domestic energy industry, spurred by full decontrol of oil prices and the worldwide price increase that resulted from the Iranian crisis, grew almost giddy with the expectation of continued profitability. Drilling activity grew at a rate of 30 percent a year.

BUT THE DECLINE in world oil prices and other factors have made oil exploration far less attractive this year. Drilling capital has declined by about 50 percent, and the cost of starting new wells has made many operators wary.

The 36 percent drop in drilling activity has brought a wave of bankruptcies among thousands of small oilfield servicing companies, with more expected.

Some energy analysts said they believe the next six months will see a dramatic shakeout of smaller independent oil and oilfield servicing companies. "You haven't seen the impact yet," said Geoff Hertel of the investment firm of Rotan Mosle, Inc. "Most of the companies who are having trouble just now know it. I haven't seen the bloodletting yet."

An official of one company that recently filed for bankruptcy said, "Sales in the oilfield equipment business are nil." Others report equipment selling for 10 cents on the dollar. When business does rebound — and many industry experts believe the decline may be over — it will be at a much slower pace than in the past two years.

NOT EVEN THE LARGEST and strongest oil companies are immune to the problems brought on by the recession, the worldwide excess of crude oil and the accompanying drop in prices.

Exxon, the world's largest oil company, has revised its internal forecasts and recently instituted a program of voluntary retirements and incentives for separation that will pare its 30,000 member staff.

"We, like a lot of other major (oil companies) are undergoing a tightening process," Grindal said. "We don't have the opportunities we had a year ago."

Remarkably, things in Houston are far from gloomy. For one thing, even after the sharp drop in drilling, 1982 could end up as one of the highest years on record.

In addition, energy industry experts, perhaps imbued with an incurable faith in the free enterprise system, said the shakeout is overdue and will result in healthier, more productive companies.

"We grew too fast the last two years," said George P. Mitchell, president of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. "There was some fat in there."

THE FAT INCLUDED inexperienced and unproductive crews in the oilfields and a sharp rise in drilling costs. "It was frightening the incompetency in the oil field the last 12 months," one industry analyst said. "What was going on out there would singe your hair."

Daily rig costs in the Anadarko Basin in Oklahoma rose from $5,500 to $12,000 within three years, and today have fallen back to about $8,000, according to Olson.

Many of the companies that are going bankrupt will not even be noticed, testimony to the fragmented nature of the domestic oil industry. "In Houston, the losers are dots on the landscape," an oil economist said. "They're not a Ford or a Chrysler — the very foundation of Detroit. They're very tiny suppliers."

Perhaps of most significance is the fact that Houston can experience such a dramatic tailoff in the energy industry and remain as healthy as it is. In some ways, the drilling slump has shown that the city's reputation as the energy capital of the world may be misleading.

"If the influence of energy on Houston paralleled the auto industry's influence on Detroit, the decline in oil activity over the last six months would have brought this economy to a standstill," said Francis J. Magrino, vice president and economist at Texas Commerce Bank. "We've slowed down, but we're continuing to gain."

Link board pay to performance, stockholder survey suggests

By NANCY L. Ross
(c) 1982, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — While executives often share in the fortunes — and misfortunes — of their companies, outside directors rarely do.

But a survey of 1,200 members of Stockholders of America, an organization composed mainly of elderly, wealthy men who manage their own portfolios, shows support for the idea of linking the compensation of outside directors to the performance of the companies they serve.

The survey, by the Big Eight accounting firm of Touche Ross & Co. in conjunction with the National Association of Corporate Directors, found that 46 percent of stockholders questioned believe outside directors should share the ups and downs of a corporation's earnings in the same way they do. (Forty-seven percent thought directors' pay should not depend on the bottom line.)

"We were surprised by the large number voting yes," said John Mullarkey, executive director of technical programs at Touche Ross.

A RECENT STUDY showed that the annual fees companies pay their outside directors — those who are not its employees — vary between $2,000 and $30,000, with most paying $5,000 to $10,000. (Inside directors generally are not paid for their service on their companies' boards, although most receive bonuses based on corporate results, according to Hewitt Associates, an Illinois-based consulting firm.)

Some respondents in the stockholder survey offered suggestions on how to tie pay to profits. A few favored stock options, but most said the directors' fees should fluctuate with dividends to shareholders. For example, if dividends were cut 10 percent, so should the directors' compensation.

Mullarkey said some corporate executives dismiss the vote as an oversimplified reaction by disgruntled shareholders to poor financial results. But Robert Cox, head of Arthur Young & Co.'s subsidiary that seeks directors for corporations, finds the concept analogous to that of labor representation on boards: an interesting idea whose time may be coming.

Apart from Chrysler Corp., which put United Auto Workers chief Douglas A. Fraser on its board, few corporations have labor board members. Similarly, only a handful vary outside directors' fees according to earnings, although hard times can bring some cutbacks.

U.S. Steel, for example, cut the fees it pays its outside directors by 10 percent effective July 1. Earlier General Motors asked its outside directors to take a 5 percent reduction in fees for the remainder of this year, joining salaried employees, suppliers and dealers in sacrifices to support a sales incentive program.

THE PRACTICE of basing directors' pay on profitability is not popular with directors, however. In an Arthur Young & Co. survey last year of 200 newly appointed directors of Fortune 500 companies, 85 percent were opposed to the idea of incentive bonuses tied to corporate performances; 15 percent were in favor.

The Washington Post contacted four prominent business executives, each serving on several corporate boards. One favored the concept enthusiastically, and another conditionally, but the other two firmly opposed it.

James J. Needham, former chairman of the New York Stock Exchange and now a consultant, is a director of Caesar's World, Pantry Pride and several savings and loan associations, among others. He has long advocated stock options plans for outside directors as part of a regular company incentive plan for all executives. (He would make an exception when a director goes on the board as a watchdog at the behest of the Securities and Exchange Commission.)

Needham conceded that stock options could present a problem if the income derived from exercising an option were material to a director. But so long as the directors were "people of reasonable means, honest people, they would not succumb to the pressures of a branch manager," he said.

Carla A. Hills, a Washington attorney and a former secretary of Housing and Urban Development, serves on the boards of IBM, Standard Oil of California, American Airlines, Corning Glass, Signal Co., and Federal National Mortgage Association. She believes pay tied to profits might be indicated in some cases, but that it should not become an ironclad rule.

She called it an "interesting concept" that directors of a successful company that had turned sour should share, with employees and stockholders, in its distress. However, she thinks it would be difficult to recruit directors for troubled companies if they were told they were expected to work harder for less money.

FEAR OF LOSING objectivity is the main argument directors advance against a link between fees and profits. William E. Simon, former secretary of the Treasury and currently chairman of Wesray Corp., a New Jersey company specializing in leveraged buyouts, serves on the boards of Citicorp and Citibank, Dart & Kraft, Halliburton, Power Corp. of Canada, United Technologies and Xerox. He feels incentive pay is not a good idea because as directors, "We set policy; we don't monkey in the operating area." He believes the stockholders by their vote are implying directors are overpaid. "We are not overpaid, not at all," said Simon.

John De Butts, former chairman of American Telephone & Telegraph, agreed. His directorships include Hospital Corp., Citicorp, U.S. Steel, Dart & Kraft, General Motors and Duke Endowment. "Compensation is very small in relation to what (directors) do, to the liability they assume. The money isn't worth a hill of beans. If a director does a good job, he shouldn't get anything extra; if it was a bad year he shouldn't get anything less because that's when a director works hardest."

Executive search firms, which recruit about 5 percent of all corporate directors, don't believe compensation is a major consideration of board members. William H. Chisholm, president of Boardroom Consultants in New York, said compensation has no effect on the behavior of conventional directors, but could possibly influence the small percentage who depend on fee income for their livelihood.

Gardner W. Heidrick, vice chairman of Heidrick & Struggles, a Chicago executive recruiter, termed compensation a secondary factor. He cautioned that directors receiving incentive pay "could be so interested in profits that they would be looking for ways to cut corners."

The adverse effect on the corporation is often cited by opponents of any linkage of directors' fees and profits. Harold M. Williams, former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Committee and now chairman of the J. Paul Getty Museum in Los Angeles, said that while he does not support stock options, he can see linking directors' compensation to long-term improvements in shareholder equity, say over a five year period. He opposes tying fees to quarterly earnings per share which can be adjusted.

Critics of the U.S. economy have focused on corporate America's fixation with the bottom line or the maximization of short-term profits at the expense of long term development. Tying outside directors' compensation to corporate profits would only serve to "exacerbate an already critical problem," Williams added.

No bonuses, no pay hikes for big bosses this year

By JAMES L. ROWE
(c) 1982, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — No executives at Crown Zellerbach got a bonus this year. Top executives at Inland Steel took unspecified pay cuts, while middle managers will not get the scheduled cost of living increase Aug. 1.

The top six officers at B.F. Goodrich received a 15 percent cut in pay, and other executives lost 10 percent. Salaried employees had their pay reduced 5 percent. U.S. Steel suspended payouts from its bonus plan and cut executive salaries between 5 and 25 percent.

Even the oil companies like Exxon and Mobil, under the crush of lower demand for their products, are looking for ways to reduce white-collar pay.

The pinch of the recession, which has been felt at the factory level for nearly a year, is working its way into the executive suite. Even if the economy picks up later this summer, as many economists expect, executives likely will continue to feel an income pinch long after laid-off workers begin to be recalled and freezes or squeezes on white-collar salaries are eased.

That is because bonuses, or incentive compensation, are an increasingly important source of income for the highest paid officers of companies, but in most cases are tied closely to the previous year's profit performance.

Even though the economy weakened appreciably in late 1981, the first six to eight months of the year were good enough that many companies recorded respectable profits and paid normal bonuses early this year. But profits in many industries have sagged so sharply this year that the anticipated economic recovery will not generate high enough profits to offset the early year declines.

Thus many corporate executives can look forward to reduced bonuses next year.

"Even in the best of years about 10 percent (of executives) receive no bonuses, another 20 percent get bonuses of about the same size as the year before, and the rest get an increase," according to David J. McLaughlin, national director of the compensation arm of the Hay Group, a management consulting firm.

"But this year the percentage receiving (increased bonuses) will be 40 to 50 percent" rather than 70 percent, McLaughlin said. The rest will get no bonuses or smaller awards, he said.

Furthermore, he said, salary increases for executives are slowing.

Last year, compensation for top officers in U.S. corporations rose about 10 percent. This year it will be in the 5 to 6 percent range, and executive salaries will grow even less next year.

But it is the reduced or eliminated bonuses that will hit executive wallets the hardest. For many corporate executives, the annual bonus, generally paid in January or February, is not a gift from the employer but an essential ingredient in their overall compensation — which also includes salary, benefits, stock options and the like.

"In the past 10 years, bonus payments have risen faster than salaries," according to John Moynahan, vice president of the management consulting firm Towers, Perrin, Forster & Crosby. Bonus payments usually are related not only to a company's profits, but also to individual executive performance. Companies like bonuses because they presumably give executives an incentive to perform better, and because they are, in effect, delayed salaries that permit the firm to hold the cash longer.

But because they depend on profits — usually a company has to earn a minimum level of profits before bonuses are paid — in bad years the bonuses are not tantamount to delayed salaries. They are salary cuts.

Philip Caldwell, chairman of Ford Motor Co., earned nearly $905,000 in 1979, $500,000 of which was a bonus. Last year Caldwell took home $450,000 — about half what he earned in 1979 even though his salary has gone up $70,000. Ford, like the other auto makers, has been hit hard by the recessions of 1980 and 1981 and hasn't paid a bonus to any executives since 1979.

Conrad Greim, director of compensation at Crown Zellerbach, said that in 1981 the company did not make the 6 percent return on equity required to trigger the bonus plan. As a result, 260 executives at the San Francisco-based wood and paper products company did not get their delayed salaries. In normal years, bonuses account for as much as 40 to 50 percent of total compensation for Crown Zellerbach's top executives and 15 percent for its lower level officers.

The steel industry, like the paper industry, has been hard hit by the current recession, but Inland Steel usually has come through recessions better than most of its competitors. This year, however, burdened by the high costs of an expensive, new and lightly used billion-dollar modernization, Inland has been burned by the slowdown in demand for steel. About 350 of its top executives as well as its directors have taken salary cuts, with higher-paid officers taking proportionately bigger trims. Inland will not specify the size of the cuts.

The situation at U.S. Steel is so dire that the company already has announced it is suspending its bonus plan. Most other steel companies — including Bethlehem, Inland and National — aren't expected to do well enough this year to pay bonuses.

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND — Construction has begun on the $28 million Bridgepoint condominium on South Padre Island, slated to be the tallest structure on the Gulf Coast, which stretches from Brownsville, Texas, to Everglade City, Florida. It is part of a multi-phase $100 million development.The 28-story building, scheduled for completion in Aril 1984, will include 112 one-, two-, and three-bedroom units of which six will be penthouses. The units range in price from $250,000 to $750,000.Warner Boone of Boone and Associates, designed the project, assisted locally by Max Burkhart and Associates of Pharr, Texas. Construction is by Valcon, Inc. of Pharr.

National Supply offers free book

HOUSTON — Did you know that it takes an average of 54 tons of tubular goods to complete an oil or gas well, that the "windfall profits tax" added some $13.8 billion to the U. S. treasury last year, or that the success ratio for new field wildcat wells in the U. S. in 1981 was 18 percent?

These are but a few of thousands of facts noted in plain English in the 1982 edition of National Supply Company's free "Oil and Gas Pocket Reference," which is now available.

The 58-page booklet contains almost 70 separate categories of statistical information, covering such areas as drilling and equipment costs and usage, exploration and production activity, reserves, pipelining, refining, consumption, imports and economics.

Data included in "Oil & Gas Reference" comes from industry associations, trade magazines, governmental agencies and energy companies. Original sources of information are noted with each table.

Free copies of the booklet are available by writing to: Pocket Reference, National Supply Company, 1455 West Loop South, Houston, Texas 77027.

NKK completes large offshore jacket

HOUSTON — NKK has completed construction of one of the world's largest offshore platform jackets and delivered it 3,720 miles by barge.

The NKK $56 million offshore platform jacket for Woodside Offshore Petroleum Pty., Ltd., Australia was installed in the North Rankin gas field off Australia's Northwest Shelf Natural Gas Project.

The "North Rankin A" jacket was towed by a special vessel at a speed of about five knots for about one month over a distance of 3,720 miles (6,000 km) from Tsu Shipyard in Japan to Australia.

Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff is expected to issue an order soon approving the merger of Big Spring Savings and Loan Association into Home Savings and Loan Association of Lufkin.

Hearing on the merger request was held by the Savings and Loan Department Monday, with no opposition.

A department spokesman said an order by Vandygriff approving the merger was expected "soon."

Home is the surviving association in the merger.

(SWN) — Consolidated Petroleum Industries Inc., Midland, recently announced its contract drilling subsidiary is now engaged in active negotiations with its lenders concerning the deferral of upcoming principal payments on borrowings secured by its drilling equipment and the drilling equipment of two limited partnerships for which it serves as general partner. Although the negotiations are progressing satisfactorily at this time, no predictions can be made as to the ultimate outcome of these efforts.

Consolidated Petroleum Industries, Inc., through its subsidiaries, is engaged in the exploration for and production of oil and natural gas, domestic contract drilling, oil field services, gathering and refining crude oil and the generation of hydroelectric power.

Bell expands safety service

(SWN) — Bell Petroleum Services Inc., Midland, recently announced the expansion of its H2S Safety operation into the Gulf Coast Region of the U.S. with the opening of Bell H2S Safety Services in Brookhaven, Mississippi.

H2S safety equipment is required on well sites in fields where the poisonous gas is known to exist or might be encountered.

Dale Torrans, Bell vice President and General Manager for Bell H2S Safety, said Brookhaven was chosen as a central location to serve the Tuscaloosa, Smackover and Cotton Valley trends of the Gulf Coast area.

U.S. Harveston, who has extensive H2S safety experience in the Gulf Coast Region, has joined Bell as Manager of the new operation. Torrans stated that Harveston's extensive H2S safety experience in the area, combined with Bell's expertise and equip-ment, should lead Bell to become a major supplier of H2S safety services in the region.

Bell H2S Safety presently has offices in Midland, Texas, Casper and Evanston, Wyoming, and Williston, North Dakota, in addition to Brookhaven.

Dorchester values natural gas

DALLAS (SWN) — Dorchester Gas Corporation recently it has completed a financial analysis relating to the operating results of the natural gas producing properties which it conveyed to the newly formed Dorchester Hugoton, Ltd. partner-ship. The analysis indicates tht the properties would have provided approximately three percent of the Company's net earnings for the last 12 months, and had the partnership been in existence during such period, the properties would have generated net cash available for distribution of $558,000. Sales volumes and the average price for such period would have been 5,279,000 MCF and $.304/MCF, respectively. Total proved natural gas reserves at August 31, 1981 attributable to the properties conveyed were 129 Billion Cubic Feet constituting approxi-mately six percent of total net present value of the Company's hydro-carbon reserves.

Dorchester also confirmed that the record date for the special property dividend would by July 2, 1982, and that the American Stock Exchange had agreed that Dorchester Common Stock will be quoted "EX" distribution on the opening of business on Wednesday, July 7, 1982.

Pipeliners declare dividends

HOUSTON (SWN) — The Board of Directors of Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line (TGPL), a wholly owned subsidiary of Transco Energy Company, declared regular quarterly dividends on all nine series of its cumulative preferred stock payable August 1, 1982, to stockholders of record July 15, 1982.

TGPL's Board also declared the first dividends on the two newly created series of preferred stock, payable August 1, 1982, to shareholders of record July 15, 1982. The dividends on these shares are the pro rata amounts of regular quarterly dividends payable from June 3, 1982, the date of issue, to August 1, 1982.

Gas purchase agreed to

DALLAS (SWN) — American Pipeline Company, a wholly owned subsidiary of American Well Servicing Corporation (AMEX:AWC), announced today that it has concluded gas purchase agreements covering approximately 18,000 acres in Calhoun County, in south Texas. The gas purchase contracts are with Ladd Petroleum Corporation and General American Oil Company of Texas. The gas will be sold to a major pipeline company, pending execution of a contract. Ladd Petroleum, the operator, has completed two gas wells in the Frio Sand at approximately 8,200 feet. The wells are expected to initially produce a total of about five MMCFPD, with additional development drilling planned after further evaluation. American Pipeline Company is now constructing approximately five miles of pipeline. The wells should go on stream in the next few weeks. Tim Van Ackeren, President of American Pipeline Company, said, "This could develop into an important pipeline system for our company. The 18,000 acre block has the potential to develop major reserves in coming years, and we are especially pleased to be associated with Ladd Petroleum and General American in this project."

Kirby farms out interests

HOUSTON (SWN) — Kirby Exploration Company announced recently it has entered into a farmout agreement with two major corporate investors that covers approximately 21 percent of the company's leasehold interests in 25 of the company's 96 drilling units in the Fletcher Field in Comanche and Caddo Counties, Oklahoma. Forty percent of the working interests farmed out will revert to the company upon payment of cein costs for such wells. The estimated total cost to the participants for drilling, testing, equipping and completing of an initial well on each of the 25 drilling units is $10,500,000. Presently, there are 24 wells drilling.

The company also announced today that it has sold $7,400,000 aggregate principal amount of 10-1/2 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 1992 to Oil and Gas Development Finance Limited, which placed the debentures with non-United States institutional investors. A registration statement covering $10,350,000 aggregate principal amount of such debentures has been declared effective by the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the underwriter may place the registered but unsold debentures with other non-United States institutional investors. The debentures are convertible into common stock of the company at the conversion price of $16.00 per share.

The net proceeds from the sale of the debentures were used to reduce outstanding bank indebtedness under a revolving credit agreement incurred to fund the company's exploration and development activities in the Fletcher Field. Of the $80,000,000 available to the company under the current borrowing base of its revolving facility, the company has borrowed $67,500,000 after reduction for proceeds from the sale of the debentures. The company anticipates that additional reserves from wells being completed in the Fletcher Field and other areas will allow the borrowing base to be increased by the lending banks.

The company is aware that producers in some areas have been informed by certain gas purchasers that they intend to reduce the price they are paying for deep natural gas. Contracts covering the company's sale of natural gas produced from the Fletcher Field provide for firm prices through late 1985 on 68 of the Company's drilling units including all presently producing wells.

Seagull creates partnership

HOUSTON (SWN) — Seagull Pipeline Corporation announced recently the signing of agreements creating the Seagull Shoreline System partnership. The partnership was previously identified as Seagull Offshore System. The partnership project is comprised of Seagull Transmission Company, a subsidiary of Seagull Pipeline Corporation, with 25 percent interest, HNG Offshore Company, a subsidiary of Houston Natural Gas Corporation, with 25 percent interest, and Northern Intrastate Pipeline Company, a subsidiary of InterNorth, Inc., with 50 percent interest.

Seagull, as project operator, anticipates that subject to satisfactory regulatory approval, the initial segment will be in operation in the second quarter of 1983. The initial 50 mile segment will be a 24-inch two phase pipeline beginning in State Tract 624, Matagorda Island Area, going to an onshore connection with Houston Pipe Line near the Seagull operated gas processing plant by Palacios, Texas. Capacity for the initial segment is projected to be 200 million cubic feet of gas per day and cost will be approximately $50 million.

Downhole steamer tested

ARLINGTON (SWN) — A spokesman for Vedar, Inc. a subsidiary of Vapor Energy, Inc. of Arlington, Texas announced a successful field test of their direct injection five million BTU/Hr Downhole Steam Generator was recently completed. The six month test of the 5-9/16 inch diameter, propane fired tool involved extensive surface operation culminated by a one month continuous downhole injection. The program, carried out with Shell Oil Company in the Kern River field, California is the first successful bottom hole test by industry. Some 7600 barrels of high quality steam were injected into the 12 degree API oil bearing reservoir at a depth of 1060 feet during the downhole test. The feasibility of generating steam downhole with favorable results, initially demonstrated by Project Deep Steam, a Department of Energy funded program, was confirmed by this test using a different fuel system, the spokesman stated.

EASY MONEY: Odd jobs

By CHARLES WEBB
Copley News Service
Copyright 1982

Looking for work in the want ads can be depressing. Especially if you can't find anything. Yet there are many unusual jobs one seldom sees advertised. One of these "odd" jobs could be right for you.

Do you like to take long baths? If so you may be able to make money and help the nation's space program at the same time. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) pays people $5 an hour to soak for up to six hours in water. The purpose is to discover how weightlessness affects body fluids.

If you don't mind "working " in a swimsuit, and spending most of the day up to your neck in water, you might enjoy it. It's not exactly steady work and only a limited number of people are needed. But if you live near NASA's Ames Research Center, in Moffett Field, Calif., it might not hurt to check it out.

How would you like to get paid to go on a date? Not one of those burger-and-fries dinners, followed by an evening of dancing to a neighborhood bar's juke box. Rather, you'd eat at the finest restaurants and go to the swankiest night spots.

Paid escorts are in demand. Particularly in large metropolitan areas. A lot of well-to-do people often need a companions for themselves and-or spouse when visiting another city. Their reasons vary. Some just don't like to eat or shop alone. Others need the services of an interpreter or tour guide. Certain people are looking for a tennis, skiing or backgammon partner. And some want a traveling companion.

To stand a chance at landing a job as a paid escort, you should be intelligent, personable, atrractive and a good conversationalist. The ability to speak a foreign language is also a plus. Although both men and women are sought for such positions, there is a greater need for females.

Before you sign up with an escort service, make sure it is legitimate. Unfortunately, some businesses that call themselves escort services are fronts for other activities.

Want a job with a lot of excitement? Perhaps you'ld like to be a spy for Uncle Sam. Not in some exotic corner of the world, but right here in the states. Most law enforcement agencies make use of paid informants. Last year, the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) alone paid over $5 million to such individuals. Some full time DEA informers earn up to $39,000 a year.

The Interanl Revenue Service pays for information that leads to the arrest and conviction of tax cheats. The size of the reward depends on the amount the government was defrauded.

Layoffs, work force resizing and people cutting

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN
and
MARK POTTS
(c) 1982, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — At the Bumble Bee tuna cannery in San Diego, 900 people lost their jobs recently when the parent Castle & Cooke Co. surrendered to plummeting demand for the fish and closed the plant.

In Louisville, 3,900 people have been laid off from G3neral Electric Co.'s major-appliance plant since last summer. The reason: the slumping housing market has reduced demand for the refrigerators, ranges, washers, dryers and dishwashers made at the factory.

More than 1,300 meat packers who worked for the John Morrell divison of United Brands Inc. have been laid off this year as the company closed four plants. Two more plants are to be closed by the end of August, idling another 750 workers.

These may be blips on the nationwide unemployment charts, but they are symptomatic of a pattern that appears to be occurring in many parts of the country and in many different industries: workers for profitable, stable corporations are being laid off like their counterparts in troubled or money-losing industries.

THE MASSIVE LAYOFFS in housing, steel and autos and related industries such as lumber, copper and tires have gained national attention. Yet smaller but rising numbers of workers also are losing jobs in electronics, food processing, textiles, machine tools, petroleum and other industries that still generally are profitable.

In their effort to stay healthy, many companies are cutting back obsolete or marginal operations, dropping unprofitable divisions and reducing production and inventory. Their workers are finding that profitability gives no guarantee of job security.

The pattern of layoffs is erratic. Some corporate giants such as Burlington Industries in textiles and Sherwin-Williams paints have dropped workers in some plants while adding them in others.

But overall, the jobs have been disappearing, a hundred here, a thousand there, even in companies that are on solid economic ground. Many of these jobs have disappeared permanently because they are in plants that are not going to reopen even if the economy recovers.

According to Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, unadjusted for seasonal variation, the number of people working in non-farm jobs in June was 301,000 higher than in May, but 1.3 million below the 92.05 million employeed in June 1981.

At the same time, state and local government payrolls, a traditional employment refuge in hard times, also are declining. Last year, for the first time since World War II, the total number of people holding state and local government jobs dropped — by 276,000 — according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

THE TREND of layoffs by profitable companies has not reached Washington, but federal, state and local government payrolls have been cut by 30,000 workers since 1980 and will fall even more as jobs are eliminated by budget cuts, reductions-in-force and deregulation of business.

Corresponding reductions in jobs by government contractors and consultants have pushed the District of Columbia jobless rate to 10.6 percent — well above the national unemployment rate of 9.5 percent — and have produced a 6 percent jobless rate for the area.

Many of the cutbacks by profitable companies are relatively small when compared with such disasters as the bankruptcy of Braniff International airlines, which threw about 8,000 people out of work overnight. But Braniff had been on the brink of insolvency for months.

Similarly, International Harvester Co. has put 10,000 workers on indefinite layoff and last week said it would furlough 3,200 in Rock Island and East Moline, Ill., for two months this fall — the third time this year many of those employees have found themselves out of work for an extended period.

The company's financial situation has become so precarious that a key portion of its newly negotiated contract with the United Auto Workers requires it to give workers plenty of advance notice before closing plants temporarily or permanently.

SUCH ARE THE RISKS for employees of money-losing companies. But now workers for healthy corporations are following them into unemployment — or into early retirement, which many firms are offering with sweetened benefits to lure senior employees off the payroll.

3M Co., a supplier to the steel, auto and housing industries, has laid off 1,345 hourly production workers scattered among more than 100 plants. To avoid more layoffs, the company is offering 2,300 workers early retirement with six months' extra pay.

Dravo Corp., a Pittsburgh-based engineering and heavy-construction firm, earned $17.3 million on revenues of $1.51 billion last year, but reported a loss in the first quarter, and its workers are feeling the consequences.

Dravo has cut its work force to 7,050 from about 8,500, and "these are not people who are going to be called back," a company spokesman said. Dravo also has frozen salaries and cut capital spending, which in turn will cost somebody else work later in the year.

At that perennial darling of Wall Street, Xerox Corp., whose profits last year topped $598 million, the sagging economy and intensified competition in the copier business have led to what Xerox calls a "work force resizing program."

Since August, Xerox' employment has shrunk by 3,300 workers, including 500 salaried and 100 hourly employees let go in May. Voluntary retirement and the phasing out of some temporary and contracted positions accounted for much of the reduction, but many people were laid off outright. While some of the reductions are attributable to a corporate reorganization, a spoke man says "the people-cutting would be more (the result) of the economy."

COMPETITION FROM ABROAD, identified as the source of problems — and ultimately, unemployment — in the auto and steel industries, also has found victims in other businesses.

Last week SCM Corp. announced that it will close a Smith-Corona factory near Cortland, N.Y., that produces portable electric typewriters because they no longer are competitive with typewriters imported from Japan. Company officials say they have been frustrated in attempts to win government help in a fight against what they say is the dumping of Japanese typewriters on the U.S. market. Four hundred jobs will be lost when production is moved to an SCM plant in Singapore late next year.

Many companies, like 3M, are offering early retirement in an effort to avoid further layoffs, putting people out of work but technically not swelling unemployment rolls.

This technique was used earlier this year by Dow Chemical Co., which reduced its U.S. work force by 1,951 employees to 37,000 when 58 percent of those eligible for early retirement accepted it. "The suggestion there is that, if those 2,000 elected the early-retirement option, they will not be replaced by a commensurate 2,000 new employees," Dow spokesman Rich Long said.

Monsanto Co., where 200 St. Louis employees have taken voluntary retirement, has reduced the number of workers in two plants in another fashion. Three hundred workers in nylon plants in Pensacola, Fla., and Greenwood, S.C., are on "work-sharing" — in effect, splitting a job between two people.

Each affected employee works two weeks, and then has two weeks off while another worker fills the job. "It's to their benefit, because they're working and collecting a salary, and it's to Monsanto's benefit because we don't have to retrain people," said Susan Kelly of Monsanto.

ANOTHER NYLON PLANT, owned by E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. Inc. in Chattanooga, Tenn., is closing completely, however, putting 500 people out of work.

But Faith Wohl, speaking for the company, insists that the closing is not recession-related. "It's a recognition that the equipment we have there is no longer competitive," she says, also remarking on a worldwide glut of capacity for nylon production.

Monsanto, however, acknowledges that the recession has hurt the nylon business. "You sell nylon to people who make carpets, and people who make draperies, and people who make car seats," Kelly says. "The auto and housing industries are not booming places."

The problems in housing also have hurt GE's Louisville appliance operations, although most of the rest of the giant conglomerate's businesses are thriving.

"There ain't no way if appliances are down that GE is going to be up," says Arthur Demaris, a GE spokesman. "When the housing industry is in the shape it's in, there's no way GE cannot be affected. We're hoping that there's a pent-up demand out there for housing, and that, when it turns around, it will turn around good." Demaris says GE hopes eventually to bring all 3,900 employees laid off at Louisville back to work.

NDT optimistic, expanding plant

Belying the recent downturn in the energy industry, NDT Systems Inc., Midland-based manufacturer of oil field tubular inspection equipment, says it has "a note of optimism for the economy" of the oil patch.

So far in 1982, the company has spent $12 million to open new corporate headquarters here and expand its manufacturing and training facilities here and in Houston.

Company officials were in Houston Wednesday and Thursday to celebrate the grand opening of a new $3 million complex on 14 acres there, its second major facility in Houston. The new center is devoted to intensive, hands-on customer training, a service center and a parts sales facility.

"There's nothing like it in the industry," said R.W. "Bob" Leslie, NDT's marketing vice president, of the training portion of the new Houston complex.

A fully operational SPECTALOG 6000 semi-automatic pipe inspection unit has been dedicated to the training center. In an enclosed lab, NDT's customers, the tubular inspection operators, can put the unit through its paces without regard to weather conditions.

Adjoining the lab are classrooms with audio-visual equipment, a lounge and dining area, and offices. In the past, the company had conducted its training sessions in rented hotel rooms. NDT is currently holding two schools a month and is limiting the sessions to no more than 15 students at a time, so that more personal attention can be given.

The company, formed in Odessa in 1975 by Delbert Townsend, maintains electronics manufacturing, engineering and research and development departments in Houston as well.

New corporate headquarters, costing around $9 million, were opened in March on a 25-acre site in the industrial park south of Midland Regional Airport.

The majority of the 417 employees work in the nine shops at the headquarters. Electronic components for inspection units made at the Houston plant are sent here for final assembly.

Manufacturing, administration, inventory control and accounting between the two cities are tied together by an in-house computer system in the home office."We can react immediately to the market, when it turns slow, or we have a rush order," said Herb Norman, sales manager.

While many local manufacturers have had to let some employees go in the last five months, there have been no lay-offs at NDT, he said, although about a month ago the work week was cut back from 50 hours to 40.

Because of what he described as unusually good benefits and pay scale, the company did not lose any employees because of the cut-back, he added.

NDT captures about 80 percent of the world market for nondestructive inspection equipment for all kinds of oilcountry tubulars, Norman estimated. Its sales offices are in Odessa, Houston and San Antonio.

The new Houston center "rounds out NDT's capabilities by filling every need of the pipe inspector," said Leslie.

Besides the training lab, in the new customer service building, mechanical and electronics technicians can perform complete renovations and retrofits to inspection units. Parts from the 5,000-square-foot warehouse are shipped all over the world.

NDT Systems became a subsidiary of Pengo Industries of Fort Worth almost two years ago. Before that, it was a private company.

Connors beats McEnroe to win at Wimbledon

By GEOFFREY MILLER

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors edged John McEnroe 3-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7- 6, 6-4 in a 4¼-hour thriller Sunday and regained the Wimbledon men's single title after an eight-year lapse.

Connors, 29, outlasted the defending champion in an amazing final, full of brilliant but erratic tennis which became one of the most dramatic in Wimbledon's 105-year history.

McEnroe lost his crown only one year after winning it from Sweden's Bjorn Borg, but he ended his quarrel with the All-England Club and regained his pride.

THE CHEERS for Connors had scarcely died down on Center Court when the club announced it was making McEnroe an honorary member. That is an honor normally granted to all champions, but it was withheld from McEnroe last year after stormy disputes with umpires and linesmen.

In winning the title back after an interval of eight years, Connors was just short of a record. Big Bill Tilden won it in 1921 and came back to win it again in 1930, nine years later.

The crowd of 14,000, bubbling with excitement after the all-court duel between the two combatants, gave Connors a standing ovation. He went straight to one end of the court and kissed his wife Patti.

In the final set, Connors danced and shuffled with joy as he hit winners.

"I guess I was keyed up emotionally," he said.

"It was kill or be killed. But after that kind of tennis, after so long on court, it was killing both of us. It wasn't over until he missed the last shot."

BOTH MEN mixed brilliant strokes with errors, especially in the early part of the match.

McEnroe slammed down 19 aces and hit 10 double-faults. Connors did not serve a single ace in the whole match and double-faulted 13 times.

Yet Connors had the better overall success rate on first services — 60 percent against McEnroe's 54 percent. From 5-5 in the third set, McEnroe never broke service once — and that was the key to Connors' triumph.

From one set all, Connors charged forward and got a service break at the start of the third. At 5-4, he was serving for a 2-1 sets lead, but ran into double-faulting trouble. He hit two doubles, one after the other, to lose the game.

McEnroe eventually won it on a 7-2 tiebreaker, and it seemed Connors' big chance might have gone.

The fourth set went with service all the way and the title hung on another tiebreaker. McEnroe led 4-3 on points and needed only three more to retain his crown.

CONNORS HIT a hot streak, won four out of the next five points and finally slammed a mighty service winner to win the set and level at 2-2.

The final set was contested amid a continuous roar of cheering, and umpire Bob Jenkins repeatedly had to call for silence.

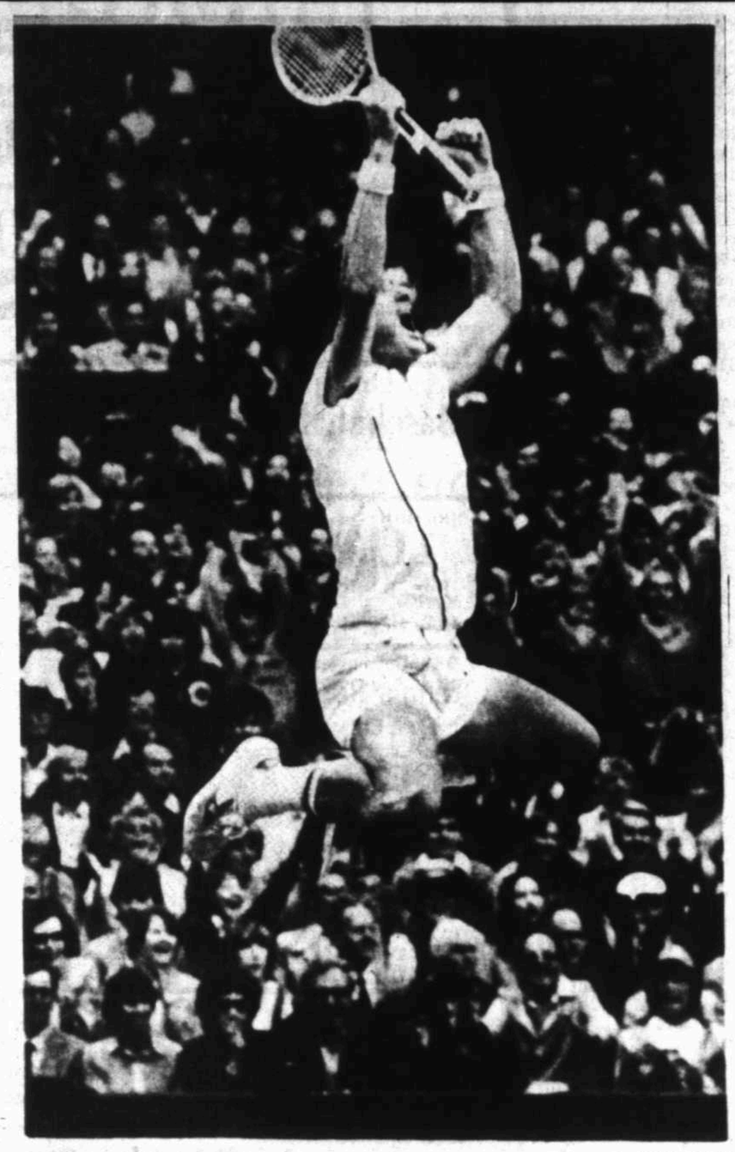

Connors hit two winning backhand returns to break McEnroe's service for a 2-1 lead. The defending champion's crown was wobbling, and to keep it he had to break back.

He could only win two points against service in each of the fourth, sixth and eighth games, and Connors stayed ahead to lead 5-3. McEnroe then held serve at love to make it 4-5.

Connors served for the title and went to 40-love amid pandemonium. Then he made a double fault — his 13th — and McEnroe was still alive, although just barely.

With his next serve, however, Connors wrapped it up. He aimed for McEnroe's forehand, and the return flew over the sideline.

BOTH PLAYERS shouted and yelled throughout the match as they made errors and yielded vital points, and there were a few disputes over line calls. McEnroe appeared unlucky once or twice, but he was evidently on his best behavior after last year's stormy events and held his tongue.

Weiskopf triumphs

Best ever, claims Tom

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf, spurred on by the cheering of a big gallery, called his Western Open golf victory Sunday his best performance ever.

"I think it's the best tournament I've ever played tee to green," he said. "I can't ever remember playing this well."

That statement comes from a man who is one of the game's millionaires and has won 15 times in 19 years, including a British Open championship.

"I had two of my best swings ever in succession," Weiskopf said of his dramatic finish. He needed them.

He boomed a driver 280 yards right to the spot he wanted in the fairway at Butler National Golf Club's 18th hole. Then he drilled a six-iron 170 yards to within seven feet of the cup.

While Larry Nelson was three-putting from the fringe for a fatal bogey, Weiskopf calmly drilled in his winning putt — a swing of two shots on the 72nd hole.

Weiskopf leaped in the air, his arms thrust skyward. The huge gallery roared its approval.

"When I hit the ground," he said, "I said, 'You know, Tom, you're lucky, but you're the winner.'

"It's a game of mistakes and Larry made one there. I felt fortunate he three-putted."

Weiskopf, trying to collect his composure, said: "I'm very excited, as excited as I can remember."

Of the gallery, he said, "When you hear people pulling for you, when you're Peck's Bad Boy, it makes you feel good inside."

Weiskopf closed with a 2-under-par 70 that gave him a Butler National record total of 276, 11 under par.

Matter of Life or death

By WILL GRIMSLEY

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors said all his matches with John McEnroe are "life or death" matters, and Wimbledon's electric, fatiguing 1982 men's final was no exception.

"When we meet, neither one will roll over and play dead," said the 29-year-old reformed bad boy of the game. "It's kill or be killed.

"I knew the match wasn't over until he missed that last ball."

Actually it was a blistering serve to the forehand corner which McEnroe barely touched with his racket, giving the old champion a 3-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4 victory over his 23-year-old opponent and defending titleholder.

WHEN IT finally dawned on him that he had won, Connors leaped high in the air, his arms raised like a conquering hero, while the packed crowd in Wimbledon's Center Court gave him a ringing ovation.

Old-timers said it was the greatest ovation accorded a new champion since 1954, when Jaroslav Drobny of Czechoslovakia won the title at age 32 after years of trying.

The match lasted 4 hours and 14 minutes, marked with highs and lows but never lacking in excitement and raw drama.

Connors, whohhad been an unpopular champion in 1974 when he crushed Australia's popular Ken Rosewall in three quick sets and who offended Wimbledon sensititives by practicing during a Centenary Celebration in 1977, was a heavy sentimental favorite.

After an unsteady start which saw him lose five straight games to drop the first set and blow the third after having a 5-3 lead and serving, Connors showed his fighting instincts by rallying from what seemed insurmountable odds.

"MY SERVE failed me in the third set," he said, referring to his double-faulting three times in an early game and twice in the 10th game in which he could have clinched the lead.

"I was pressing too hard. Being down two sets to one gave me a shot in the arm. I said to myself, "You're out of here if you don't get straight. Cut down on your errors and slow down the pace.

"I did that. Then in the fourth and fifth sets, I regained my rhythm and served much better."

Connors recalled that a double-fault cost him the final match in 1977 when he lost to Bjorn Borg, who cgose not to play Wimbledon this year.

"I had come back that time from love-4 to 4-4 and then I blew it," he said. "I told myself I wasn't going to let that happen again." Borg won that match 6-4 in the fifth set.

Jimmy said he was glad that the match was played without bickering between the two as has so often happened in the past.

"We're not friends," he said. "We have different friends. I'm married with a baby boy. He goes with a different group. But we respect each other. He knows how I play. I know how he plays.

"That's why I always like to play him. I know I have to go all-out to win."

ASKED TO eleborate on his "life or death" theme, Connors said:

"Well, that doesn't mean I'm going to die. It's just that when you play tennis that long and that hard, it's killing on both of us. It's all-out guys play.

"You don't mind collapsing afterward."

The match forced the brilliant, artistic McEnroe to scratch the bottom of his repertoire of shots and it challenged the best of Connors' fighting qualitites.

"He made so many unbelievable shots," Connors said of his younger foe. "He seemed able to pull off the big shot when he needed it. It was a struggle."

McEnroe served 19 aces to none for Connors, but Connors returned service brilliantly, particularly in the final two sets.

Connors was asked if he had any illusions about regaining the No.1 status he held in the mid-1970s.

"That's what I'm aiming for," he said. "I'm playing like it. But you can't tell about these computer systems. Guys like (Ivan) Lendl, (Guillermo) Vilas and (Jose Luis) Clerc gain in the rankings by not playing tournaments.

"That's crazy. I think if you want to be No.1, you have to stay in there and grind it out."

Ryan's 4-hitter blanks Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nolan Ryan fired a four-hitter for his 48th career shutout, pitching the Houston Astros to a 3-0 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers Sunday.

The 35-year-old Ryan, 8-8, fanned 10, the fifth time this season he has struck out 10 or more in a game, to extend his major league record to 140 such performances and marked his first ever in Dodger Stadium. He had lost six previous decisions to the Dodgers in Los Angeles.

Art Howe singled home the Astros' first run in the second inning off loser Jerry Reuss, 9-6, who had won his previous four decisions. Phil Garner singled with one out, took second on a balk and came home on Howe's single to center.

Padres 4, Giants 3

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Terry Kennedy's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth scored Dave Edwards with the winning run to give the San Diego Padres a 4-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants Sunday.

Rookie left-hander Dave Dravecky, 1-1, worked the final 3 2/3 innings to earn his first major-league victory.

The Padres were trailng 3-1 against Hammaker when Flannery led off the seventh inning with a single. Templeton pinch-hit for shortstop Mario Ramirez and belted Hammaker's first pitch deep into the left field pavilion for his fourth homer to tie the game 3-3.

Padre starter John Montefusco had held his former teammates to just three hits and led 1-0 going into the sixth inning when he walked leadoff batter Johnnie LeMaster. Chili Davis, who won Saturday night's game for San Francisco with a 15th-inning homer, belted his 10th of the year one out later for a 2-1 Giant lead. Jack Clark followed with his 16th round-tripper for a 3-1 advantage.

Braves 4, Reds 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Bob Horner hit two home runs to back the five-hit pitching of Bob Walk and Steve Bedrosian as Atlanta defeated the Cincinnati Reds 4-1 Sunday night, extending the Braves' winning streak to five games.

Horner, who now has 16 homers for the season, cracked a two-run shot in the third inning and hit a solo blast in the fifth, giving him five homers in the last four games. With the second homer, Horner moved past Darrell Evans on the all-time Atlanta home run list with 121. Hank Aaron holds the club record with 335.

Walk, 7-6, allowed a first-inning run on two hits and blanked the Reds until he was replaced by Bedrosian with two on and two outs in the eighth inning. Bedrosian retired the final four batters for his fourth save.

Pirates, Expos split

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mike Easler hit a two-run homer, a double and a sacrifice fly as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Montreal Expos 10-4 Sunday for a split of their doubleheader.

The Expos romped to a 16-6 victory in the opener, pounding 21 hits — including a homer, triple, and double by Warren Cromartie, who drove in five runs. The Pirates also made five errors, which halted their six-game winning streak and Montreal's four-game losing streak.

In the second game, Pirate starter Don Robinson improved his record to 9-3 with relief help from Rod Scurry and Kent Tekulve, who posted his 11th save. Robinson allowed four hits and four walks in 61-3 innings.

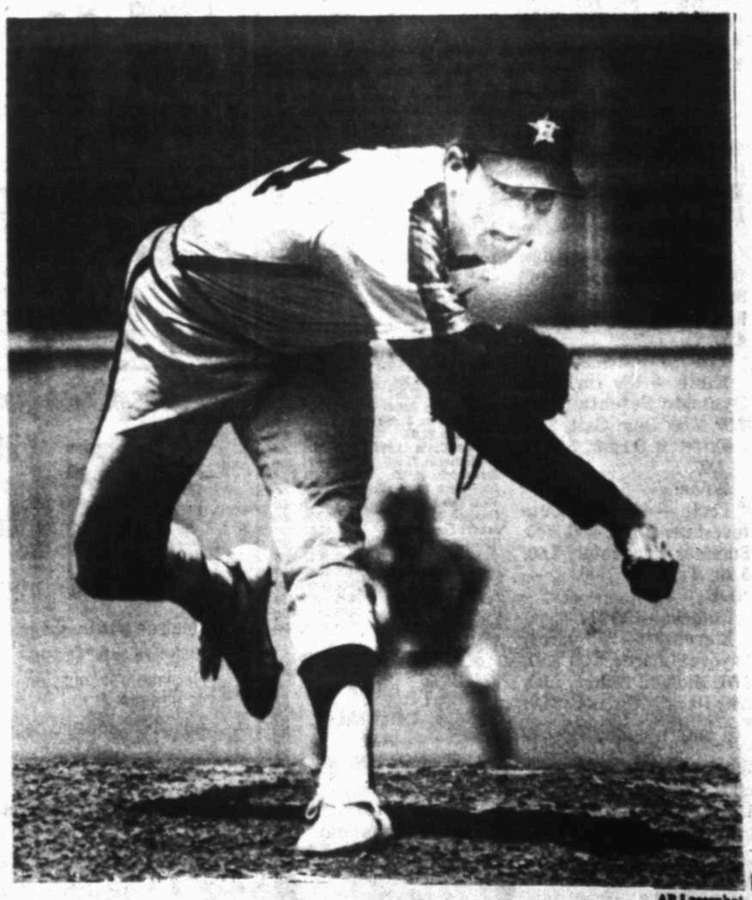

Phils sweep

NEW YORK—Steve Carlton struck out 13 and George Vukovich and Mike Schmidt smacked home runs as Philadelphia beat New York 9-7 in the first game of a doubleheader. Ivan DeJesus drove in three runs with a triple and a single and Mike Krukow scattered nine hits as the Phillies won the nightcap 7-2.

Cards 7, Cubs 2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Keith Hernandez and George Hendrick knocked in two runs apiece and Lonnie Smith scored four times to lead St. Louis to a 7-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs Sunday, snapping the Cardinals' three-game losing streak.

Winner John Stuper, 3-1, scattered six hits before needing Bruce Sutter's last-out relief help in the ninth, when the Cubs scored on a bases-loaded walk to Larry Bowa. Sutter gained his 18th save.

Hadl denies allegations of prepsters

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — John Hadl, former University of Kansas assistant football coach, has denied allegations by two former high school stars that he offered them illegal inducements to play for Kansas.

Jeff Smith, now a sophomore running back at Nebraska, and Iosefatu Faraimo, a sophomore running back at Kansas State, made the charges in a copyright story Sunday in The Kansas City Star.

Smith said Hadl, who now is offensive coordinator for the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League, offered him "$30,000 for four years" to sign a letter of intent with the Jayhawks. Faraimo said he was offered an unspecified sum "in the thousands."

Faraimo, a native of Vista, Calif., described one late-night meeting with Hadl outside the Faraimo home in February, 1981. Faraimo said he had just returned from a movie when he heard the sound of a car horn and recognized Hadl behind the wheel.

"That's when he brought a briefcase," Faraimo told the Star. "And he tapped it. And he said, 'I've got a lot of money in here.'"

Faraimo said Hadl told him all he had to do was sign a football letter of intent with Kansas to receive the money.

Dodgers defeat Cubs, 5-3

SAN ANTONIO—San Antonio's Dodgers squared the series with the Midland Cubs by taking a 3-2 decision here Sunday night. Midland won the opener Saturday night.

The win kept the Dodgers solidly entrenched in first place.

The teams resume the series here tonight and conclude the six-game showdown Friday night. After an off day Saturday, the Cubs will host an invasion by Shreveport and Jackson of the East Division, starting Sunday.

Mike Diaz hit a two-run homer for Midland in the second, his 15th, while Tony Brewer hit a solohomer in the sixth for what proved to be the winning margin. Jon Perlman took the loss.

Red Sox regain top spot in AL East on Eckersley's six-hitter

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dennis Eckersley pitched a six-hitter and Tony Perez rapped a pair of RBI singles Sunday, leading Boston to a 4-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers as the Red Sox regained undisputed possession of first place in the American League East.

Eckersley, 9-6, walked none, struck out six and silenced Milwaukee's home run bats after the Brewers had tied a major league record with 35 homers in their previous 15 games.

The Red Sox, who broke a four-game losing streak, took a 2-0 lead with four successive singles with two out in the third inning. Jerry Remy chopped a grounder off the glove of loser Mike Caldwell, 5-8, and beat it out, then took second on a single by Dwight Evans. Jim Rice and Perez followed with RBI singles.

Yankees 3, Indians 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Butch Wynegar's sacrifice fly capped a two-run eighth inning and reliever George Frazier picked up his second victory in two days Sunday as the New York Yankees came from behind to edge the Cleveland Indians 3-2.

Trailing 2-1 and having managed only one clean single and two scratch hits off Cleveland's John Denny, 5-9, Oscar Gamble drew a leadoff walk in the top of the eighth. Dave Winfield doubled Gamble to third with the Yankees' first hit since the third inning and John Mayberry drew the eighth walk off Denny to load the bases. Graig Nettles lined a single off the right-hander's pitching hand to tie the score. Lou Piniella grounded to short for a force of Winfield at home, but Wynegar hit a sacrifice fly to score Dave Collins.

Royals 6, Angels 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Amos Otis hit two home runs, including an inside-the-park shot, and rookie Bud Black pitched seven innings of two-hit ball Sunday, giving Kansas City a 6-1 victory over California which completed a three-game sweep and lifted the Royals past the Angels into first place in the American League West.

The Angels hit town Friday with a 2½-game lead over the Royals which evaporated as Kansas City outscored California 19-5 in the three games and stretched California's losing streak to five in a row.

Otis led off the second inning with a drive to deep right-center which center fielder Bobby Clark seemed to have trouble finding in the bright, cloudless sky. Clark banged into the wall as the ball fell and Otis easily circled the bases.

Tigers 6, Orioles 1

DETROIT (AP) — Lance Parrish and Mike Ivie homered to back the three-hit pitching of Dan Petry Sunday and lead Detroit to a 6-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles, only the Tigers' fourth triumph in their last 20 games.

After a first inning run, Petry, 8-5, then slammed the door on the Orioles, not allowing another hit until Jim Dwyer singled leading off the eighth.

Detroit tied the score in the fifth when Ivie homered off Baltimore starter Mike Flanagan, 6-7. It was his 10th of the season. An inning later, Whitaker and Lynn Jones singled and Parrish slammed a two-out homer into the upper left field stands on the first pitch from Flanagan. It was Parrish's 11th homer.

Mariners 3, Chisox 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Henderson singled home two runs and Gary Gray doubled home another Sunday to lead Floyd Bannister and the Seattle Mariners to a 3-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

The triumph was the fifth in the last six games for the Mariners, who loaded the bases in the first inning on walks to Manny Castillo and Gray around a single by Richie Zisk before Henderson slapped his two-run single up the middle off Richard Dotson, 3-9. Seattle added another run in the eighth when Zisk walked and pinch runner Bobby Brown scored on Gray's double.

Twins 4, Jays 3

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gary Gaetti led off the bottom of the ninth with his 10th home run of the season Sunday, giving the Minnesota Twins a 4-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Gaetti's homer gave Jeff Little, recently recalled from the minors, his first American League victory. Little, the third Minnesota pitcher, took over in the top of the ninth with one out with runners on first and third and got pinch hitter Pedro Hernandez to hit into a double play.

Gaetti connected on the second pitch in the bottom of the ninth, only the fifth hit off Toronto's Dave Stieb, 6-10.

Randy Johnson walked to lead off the Twins' second and Gary Ward followed with his 12th home run, giving Minnesota a 2-0 lead.

Sandra Haynie scores second straight victory

TORONTO (AP) — Former Midlander Sandra Haynie, who gave up the golf tour for four years, culminated a remarkable comeback with her second straight LPGA victory, capturing the $200,000 Peter Jackson Classic, making her the first winner of all three major events on the tour.

The 22-year tour veteran and one of the pioneers of the organization, added the title in the only Canadian stop on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour to earlier victories in the LPGA and U.S. Open.

"That's something I'll always treasure, believe me," said Haynie, a winner last week at Rochester. She sank an eight-foot putt for par on the final hole to edge Beth Daniel by a stroke.

The win by the 39-year-old Texan was worth $30,000 and moved her into second place in money winnings on the tour.

Haynie couldn't remember when she last put together consecutive victories, but suggested it was probably around 1974 when she was at her best.

"It doesn't happen all that often, I can tell you," she added.

She said the turning point was at the 13th, a 175-yard par-3, where she knocked in a five-foot birdie putt to go 3-up on Daniel.

"This is the sixth week in a row for me," she said. "I know I'm on a roll, but I'll die if I keep going. I'm going home to rest."

Pirates' Parker determined to ignore critical press, fans

'Gotta get healthy...and do it'

AP Laserphoto

Can bat talk as loud as bat?

Dave Parker, a two-time National League batting champion and winner of three Gold Gloves, has something to prove to soured fans.

By HARRY LITMAN
Associated Press Writer

His critics have often wished that Dave Parker talked as loudly with his bat as with his mouth. After two disappointing seasons, Parker thinks he may be ready to grant their request — and make them sorry they ever asked.

"I'm gonna have a productive season," Parker said recently as he celebrated his 31st birthday. "I just gotta get healthy where I can go out there and do it.

"If I can maintain my health, I'm gonna make a lot of the media eat crow."

THE PROSPECT must be inviting to the 6-foot-5, 230-pound Parker, who only three years ago was a nonpareil performer on a championship team — the 1979 Pittsburgh "Family." Now the Pirates are a fifth-place ballclub in the National League East, and Parker's problems with Pittsburgh reporters and fans have been legion.

But he says they are nearly behind him. "The media tried to persecute me," he says, " and I think the fans are starting to look through it.

"They're starting to see that the media is basically all about hype. They (the press) got sympathy for me by bombarding me with all the media coverage."

PARKER SAYS HE has come to accept being "the goat" for a lot of people as part of the price of being eccentric, outspoken and rich. "I've learned to live with it," says the NL Most Valuable Player in 1978, who signed a five-year contract at an estimated $800,000 per year in 1979. "I just try to contribute no matter what they write."

Yet, his stormy relationship with the press has clearly changed Parker's attitude toward his profession. Many people expected him to inherit Willie Stargell's role as team patriarch after Stargell's expected retirement this season, but Parker now is I sure he wants to be the Family Man.

"At one point, I thought that was an important role," he says. "But the way it's been distorted by the media has made me become a player that's more within himself.

"I extend a helping hand to a younger player when I feel they need it, or I say something when I think it's necessary, but other than that I don't go out of my way to spark anyone."

INSTEAD, PARKER is concerned with guarding his own spark as a player against the winds of public opinion. "I'm a team player," he says, "but basically I'm just trying to maintain my peace of mind."

Nothing would maintain it better than a return to the playing form that terrorized the National League in the late 1970s, when Parker won two batting championships and three Gold Gloves.

Compared with that output, 1980 and 1981 were less-than-spectacular seasons for Parker. He was plagued by a series of injuries — to his knees, hamstring, achilles tendon and thumb last season alone. His 1980 average of .295 was his first below .300 since 1974, and he dipped to .258 last year, although he still led the Pirates in runs batted in for the fourth straight season. Both years he was chosen to play in the All-Star Game.

INJURIES LIMITED Parker's playing time early this season, but lately he has been seeing more action. His batting average has hovered around .270, while more than a third of his hits have been for extra bases.

But after the outstanding play which had won for him the biggest contract in Pittsburgh sports history, Steel City fans and writers had come to expect more from Parker.

He feels he was "exposed to all kinds of garbage written in the paper." He also was exposed to some real garbage in Three Rivers Stadium, where spectators pelted him with assorted hardware from the right-field stands.

Still, Parker cautiouly predicts a "turnaround" for himself in Pittsburgh this season.

HIS RETURN to the lineup last month didn't hurt that prediction. In his first two games in two weeks, he banged out four hits, including two infield singles, drove in two runs, stole a base, and made a spectacular running catch which brought ringing cheers from the Three Rivers Stadium fans.

50-homer year an endangered species

The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

Stop three out of three people on the streets and ask them what is the single most-difficult feat in Baseball and the chances are they will all say, hitting safely in 56 straight games the way Joe DiMaggio did. And, there's no aruging with that. That's 12 more games than anyone else has ever hit in consecutively, and that's like Bob Beamon jumping 29 feet in an Olympics where no one had ever even jumped 27 before.

But, a lot of people will also suggest a no-hit game. No way. There have been 195 of those pitched. They're like street cars. Miss one, and they'll be another one along any minute.

Actually, the rare commodity is home runs. Oh, not the quantity per fame, per club, per ball park, per month. You can hardly classify as an endangered species, a specimen in which there were 3,087 sightings in the last full season (1980) in the major leagues. Home runs are as common as starlings, not condors. In fact, there were 1,844 hit in the American League in 1980 and there were 2,006 hit the year before. There were 1,243 hit in the National League in 1980 and 1,427 in 1979. Even in last year's mini-season, the AL whacked 1,062 in the NL, 714.

BUT, WHAT is rapidly disappearing from view is the 50-homer mark by an individual. In 1920, when Babe Ruth first broke the 50-homer barrier, his 54 home runs were more than any club in the league (save his own, of course) hit. You would have thought the dam would break after that. It does in most sports. I mean, Roger Bannister breaks the 4-minute mile and, within a few years, four minutes might not get you through the heats.

Still, it was 10-years before anyone but Ruth (who did it three more times) was to break that 50-homer mark. Then, a stubby, alcoholic Cub right fielder, Hack Wilson, hit 56, still an NL record.

If hitting 50 home runs merits a star in the crwn, doing it twice should mean Instant Hall of Fame. I mean, do not stop at Go. Just send the bat directly to Cooperstown.

The year after Hack Wilson hit his 56, he hit 13, to give you an example. Two years later, he didn't hit any. He was gone.

ONLY FIVE guys in the history of the American League have hit 50 or more home runs in one season. Only five guys in the history of the National League have hit 50 or more in one season.

Only five players in any league have done it more than once. Ruth, of course, did it four times. Only Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle, Jimmy Foxx and Ralph Kiner have done it twice. The all-time home run leader, Henry Aaron, hit 755 home runs, but never 50 in one year, to give you an idea of the degree of the difficulty. In the American League, its been 21-years since anyone hit 50 or more. That year, Roger Maris hit 61. Mickey Mantle hit 54. In the National League, only two players have hit 50 in a season since that time. Willie Mays and George Foster.

Since George Foster is the only active ballplayer who even has a chance to break into this select two-time 50-homer club this season – most of the great sluggers seem to have topped out in the 40s, the Mike Schmidts, Wilver Stargells, Reggie Jacksons, Harmon Killebrews, even the Henry Aarons and the Lou Gehrigs – I thought I might ask George why this feat was becoming so rare.

A deliberate, methodical man, who speaks in the sing-song voice of a Chinese street vendor, George considered the question. "First of all, you make yourself a marked man when you hit 50 home runs," he pointed out. "The pitchers fear you and fear encourages them to build up defenses."

Was he talking about the tactic in which baseball calls "pitching around you"? In other words, never throw you a strike? "Well, that's only possible if there's nobody around you," George noted. Now with the New York Mets, George Foster was with Cincinnati when he hit 52 home runs in 1977 and 40 in 1978 and he had Pete Rose, Joe Morgan, Dan Dressen, Ken Griffey, and Johnny Bench in the surrounding cast of characters. George walked 131 times in those two years, an average of 65 12 a year, but you have to remember Babe Ruth walked 170 times in one season and regularly walked nearly 150 times a year until Lou Gehrig came along to hit behind him. This meant the doomed pitcher had a choice of a one-run homer by Ruth, or a walk to Ruth and a two-run homer by Gehrig.

"YOU NEVER run into a tired pitcher anymore," Foster adds. "You get home runs off tired arms." There is a well-bruited adage in baseball about a player like Foster and it runs, in pure manager-ese, "Don't let George Foster (or George Ruth, for that matter) beat you a ball game." In other words, make him a gift of first base in tight situations. It's called "taking the bat out of his hands."

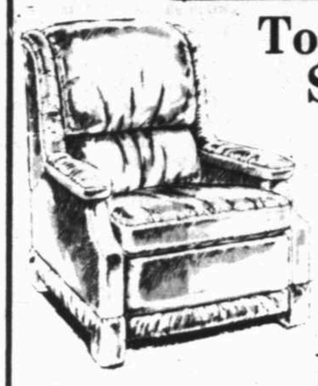

The double-50 club is not apt to be expanded this year. As the season goes into July, George Foster is hitting only eight home runs. The 50-homer mark is becoming as extinct as the wooly mammoth, a far cry from the years when Jimmy Foster and Mickey Mantle both hit over 50 home runs – and didn't even win the home run title!

Sinclair Peachtree winner

(Compiled from R-T wires)

MARATHON—John Sinclair won the 13th annual Peachtree Road Race Sunday, running the 6.2-mile course through downtown Atlanta in a time of just over 28 minutes. Ann Audain won the women's competition in 32½ minutes. Sinclair, 24, of Fort Collins, Colo., pulled away from Michael Musyoki and Adrian Leek in the final quarter-mile of the race to win the $5,000 first prize as more than 25,000 participated. "That scene is enough to make you run with all those people chasing you," said Sinclair. "I said beforehand, if I was going to have any chance of winning this thing, I would wait until the last quarter or so and then try to do it."...

BOXING—Champion Kim Chul-ho of South Korea and Mexican challenger Raul Valdez fought a 15-round draw Sunday as the Korean retained his WBC super flyweight title...

WBA junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor defended his title for the fifth time by stopping challenger Akio Kameda of Japan in the sixth round. Pryor floored Kameda twice in the sixth before it was stopped at 1:44. Pryor, 26, of Cincinnati, is 31-0 with 29 knockouts. It was the first loss in 18 pro bouts for Kameda, 27, a law student from Tokyo...

Top officers of the Federation of International Football Associations (FIFA) have called for "more offensive play" and better stadium conditions to reverse declining attendance at soccer matches. FIFA President Joao Havelange and General Secretary Sepp Blatter also denounced "exorbitant" prices paid for some soccer players. "It has often been said that football is experiencing a crisis now, but this does not seem to be the case, fortunately, if football is considered at the world level," Havelange and Blatter said in a report...

HOCKEY—A Denver group seeking to replace the now-departed Colorado Rockies with a Central Hockey League franchise reached a lease agreement with the city for the use of McNichols Sports Arena. That clears the way for the top farm team of the National Hockey League's Calgary Flames to play there next season. The Flames will play a 40-game 1982-83 home season at McNichols...

AUTO RACING—Bobby Allison held off a challenge from Bill Elliott for his fourth victory of the season after a wild multi-car accident took out four of the top contenders just 25 laps from the end of Sunday's Firecracker 400 Grand National stock car race at Daytona Beach, Fla. Paul blames Mayor for sports conflict

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians President Gabe Paul blamed Mayor George V. Voinovich on Sunday for scheduling a "conflict" by holding two major sporting events in the city on the same day.

As 22,652 fans in Municipal Stadium watched the Cleveland Indians lose to the New York Yankees, thousands of others jammed bleachers less than a mile away for the inaugural running of the Budweiser Cleveland 500 auto race.

U.S. crews win only one major

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP) — American crews had a disappointing end to Henley Royal Regatta Sunday, winning only one major trophy plus one of the women's invitation meets in the worst year for the United States since 1975.

The historic Henley atmosphere, with its Edwardian regalia and champagne, for once failed to bring out the best in the American oarsmen who had to thank Charles River, the young national squad, for the only U.S. victory, winning the Thames Cup for the second successive year.

Charles River's toughest row came not in the final, but in the semifinal when it defeated London Rowing Club — the British national lightweight eight — by 1½ lengths.

After a false start, Charles River, which had expected to fall behind initially, beat London off the line, gained a lead and were far too strong to overhaul.

The final against Goldie, the Cambridge University second boat containing several of the boat race crew, surprisingly proved easier. By the halfway mark, Charles River was a length up, and increased this to two lengths by the finish.

The premier event, the Grand Challenge Cup, was won by Leander and London, the British national eight which had beaten Yale in the semifinal the previous day.

Red Sox have no plans to call up Fidrych

BOSTON (AP) — It's becoming apparent that the Boston Red Sox need help on their starting pitching staff. But don't expect that help to come from Mark Fidrych, at least this season, team officials say.

After a fast start, due in part to some strong pitching the Red Sox have hit the skids, again partly because of some poor performances by the starting pitchers.

The Bird currently is trying to mend his ailing pitching "wing" with the Red Sox's International League farm team in Pawtucket, R.I..

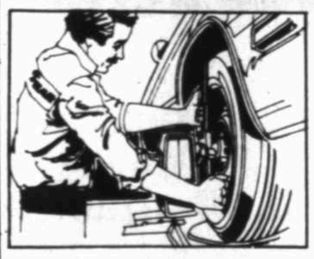

And Fidrych seems to be getting back on the track that brought him American League rookie-of-the-year honors with the Detroit Tigers in 1976. That was very evident last Thursday night, when Fidrych outdueled Dave Righetti, who won AL rookie-of-the-year honors with the New York Yankees last season. Righetti currently is trying to work out some early-season problems with the Columbus Clippers.

But all thoughts of bringing Fidrych up to the big leagues in the near future are being scotched by Red Sox officials.
