Bulletin

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Ashley Bailey, the 14-month-old Texas baby girl who received President Reagan's help in a six-month search for a liver transplant, died today, officials at Cooke Children's Hospital said.

Lucas gets maximum sentence

SENTENCED TO LIFE — Henry Lee Lucas, shown leaving the Denton County Courthouse Wednesday after his conviction for murdering his 15-year-old wife, was sentenced to life in prison Thursday.

From staff and wire reports

DENTON — Henry Lee Lucas, sentenced to life in prison for fatally stabbing his teen-age traveling companion with a butcher knife, says he will "probably" plead guilty to other murders and wants the death penalty so he can "be with" the girl he killed.

Lucas was given the maximum sentence Thursday in the first trial arising from his claim that he killed 165 people while hitch-hiking back and forth across the country.

Lucas has been charged with capital murder in the April 25, 1982 death of Happy Howry, 66, who was found in Big Spring.

While leaving the courthouse, the 47-year-old Lucas said he "expected life all along" for his conviction of the stabbing death of 15-year-old Frieda "Becky" Powell.

A note Lucas wrote to Tom Whitlock, his court-appointed attorney, said, "I will get either 75 years or life, which I don't care because I have already gave myself death. God can give a person like me a pardon of sin and He has promised to do so. I know I will be with Becky."

As he was escorted out of the courthouse, he said, "Death — that's what I've asked for. I'm going to get it."

Asked if that meant he planned to plead guilty to some of the other murders with which he is charged, Lucas said "probably."

Lucas has been charged in seven other Texas slayings, including four capital murder charges that carry a possible penalty of death by injection. His next trial will be in Georgetown, near Austin, either in December or October, prosecutors said.

Lucas is charged there with the strangling death of a young, unidentified woman whose body was found near Interstate 35 in 1979. He was taken to Georgetown soon after his sentencing here.

Earlier this year Lucas pleaded guilty to the 1982 slaying 80-year-old Kate Rich in Ringgold. Ms. Rich's bones were found in Lucas' wood-burning stove. He was sentenced to 75 years in prison, but has since requested a new trial.

The Denton County jury deliberated nearly three hours before announcing its sentence. Lucas shook hands with prosecutor Jerry Cobb and told the Denton County district attorney he had "done a good job."

In a handwritten statement addressed to "members of the press" Lucas said, "I have not tried to win. If I See Lucas page 2-A

For Army veteran Mike Sanchez, his tour of duty in Vietnam in 1968-69 brings back memories of razor sharp grass, booby-trapped paths and sweltering hot days.

Sanchez was a member of the 196th Infantry and can recall "search and destroy" missions which led him into the battle-scarred interior of Vietnam.

Sanchez was 20 when he was drafted into the Army. He left Big Spring for the Abilene induction center and was flown from there to Fort Polk, La., where he underwent basic training. He was then assigned to an infantry training program.

"Infantry training was for those who would go to 'Nam,'" Sanchez recalls. "We knew right off who was going and who wasn't."

But as Sanchez took a 20-day leave after his basic training, peace talks began and "I felt at ease. I thought by the time I got there it'd all be over with. It didn't turn out that way."

On his return from leave, Sanchez was put on a plane and flown to Chu-li.

"Everyone was pretty scared. We didn't know what was going on. We spent about a week to a week and a half there, getting used to the climate."

In Vietnam, "there was no front line. We were assigned to units." From these units, bands of men would fan out into the countryside on patrols, combing the hills. Sanchez was stationed in an area near D'Nang.

He remembers a typical day would begin before sunup. Officers would distribute assignments for patrols and the men would spend the day "seeking Vietcong," Sanchez explained.

To do this, infantrymen would carry their food and water on their backs and would sometimes be out for days. "We had to go out in the jungle and cut our way through," Sanchez said. "We had to make paths. The elephant grass was as sharp as a razor blade. And the easy paths were booby-trapped. You had to be alert all the time."

Americans were "at a disadvantage, because we were playing in their backyard."

Soldiers had to sleep on the ground while out on "combat assaults." "You took care of yourself out there, and you depended on your buddy (partners within the squad). You had to take care of your feet, your rifle and take your malaria pills. A lot of men had heat strokes."

Sanchez can remember many times when he felt he might not make it out of the jungle. "I would do a lot of praying," he says. He saw many horrible things while on patrols but "you just had to keep on going."

On "search and destroy" missions, Sanchez and his squad would go into villages to seek out and kill Viet Cong guerrilla soldiers and destroy supplies. When they found barrels of hidden rice they knew Viet Cong would be nearby because "they cherish their rice. We would always come into a lot of fire." He pauses and says "I lost some friends" on

Haynes' Menagerie a solid performance

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Armed with the words of playwright Tennessee Williams, the Howard College drama department staged a solid performance of The Glass Menagerie last night under the direction of Timothy Haynes.

The play will run Friday and Saturday at the HC auditorium at 8 p.m. with tonight's performance interpreted for the hearing impaired.

The play, staged as a memory about the discontented boredom and erosion of a family, was ably carried by the cast which included energetic performances by Mary Owens as Amanda Wingfield, the nagging mother, and Chris Smith, as the beleaguered son Tom Wingfield.

The play concerns Amanda, long since abandoned by her husband, and her attempts to make life better for her two children, Tom and Laura. However, her good intentions simply grate on Tom and Laura, forcing Tom to drink and pushing Laura farther into loneliness and her glass animal collection.

Amanda's passion is to see Laura

Ship's crew possibly in Vietnam

Two lifeboats and at least one life raft are missing from a U.S. drilling ship which sank in the South China Sea, and officials of the vessel's owner say they believe crew members were likely blown ashore in Vietnam.

One of the crew members, John Lawrence Jr., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence of Big Spring. Divers found no bodies during a 9½-hour exploration of the wrecked Glomar Java Sea, Gary Kott, president of the Houston-based Global Marine Drilling Co., said Thursday. He said evidence that the boats and raft were launched "in a proper fashion" gives officials reason to hope for the 80 crew members.

"We're considerably optimistic now," Kott said. "We're really encouraged with what we've found."

Kott said bad weather had prevented divers from exploring the wreck previously. The ship, which sank during Typhoon Lex Oct. 25, is resting nearly upside down, he said. Kott said divers were unable to reach the heliport or the pilot house, but they did enter two compartments and found no bodies.

Dick Vermeer, vice president of Global Marine Inc., the drilling firm's parent company, said company officials hope survivors made it to Vietnam about 200 miles away, but have been unable to reach government officials yet.

"Communications aren't all that great in Vietnam," he said. "I guess that's what keeping our hope up."

Kott said experts have analyzed the winds and currents at the time the Java Sea sank and concluded that Vietnam was where boats leaving the ship would most likely have landed.

Kott said the U.S. State Department is attempting to arrange permission from the Vietnamese for a search of the Vietnam coastline. The Vietnamese have refused permission for a search of their waters by outside ships or planes. Kott said Global Marine was informed that the Vietnamese promised to search the area and to return any crewmen found there.

The crew of the Java Sea included 42 Americans.

Bentsen: drought relief on way

Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Spokesmen for two leading Texas Democrats expressed strong optimism on Thursday that Congress next week will pass a dairy-tobacco bill that will include an emergency feed assistance program for drought-stricken ranchers and farmers.

A House-Senate conference committee is scheduled to meet Monday to vote on the dairy-tobacco bill and other farm-related legislation.

The Senate dairy bill, which was passed last month, includes an amendment by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, that would force the U.S.

Department of Agriculture to sell its grain surplus to drought-plagued ranchers and farmers.

The House bill, which passed on Wednesday, does not include a drought assistance section.

However, spokesmen for Bentsen and House Agriculture Committee Chairman Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Mission, said they expect the conferees to approve the grain amendment.

"It's just a question of what form it is in," said Bernie Brenner, a de la Garza's spokesman on the committee. "It shouldn't be awfully difficult."

Jack Devore, Bentsen's spokesman, said "our best hope is the dairy bill. We're optimistic. It shouldn't be difficult."

Devore and Brenner said the conferees should complete work on the dairy bill early next week. That would give Congress enough time to approve it before next Friday when the members are expected to recess until February.

"I don't anticipate a long delay," Brenner said, referring to the conference committee.

For the record

A paternity suit tried Nov. 2 in 118th District Court established John Thomas Smith, a Big Spring native who now plays for the Kansas City Chiefs, as the biological father of Jeremy Tramont Johnson, born Oct. 8, 1978 to Reta Diane Johnson of Dallas.

However, because the jury decided that Mrs. Johnson's husband Cedric, had access to her, Johnson was declared the legal father.

As a result of the jury's finding, Smith cannot be required to pay child support nor can he sue for custody.

BAGEL QUEEN — Renee Kimmel, owner of the Bagel Deli, is engulfed by her creations, which have become a hit with Alaskans in the three years she has been selling them. Ms. Kimmel figures she has sold more than 14 million of the doughnut-shaped breads since 1980.

Bagel queen makes big bucks

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Sunday mornings just wouldn't be the same without a bagel, a smear of cream cheese, a little lox and a fresh newspaper — even in this burgeoning city, where deli food is gaining ground as the reigning local specialty.

"This town has really caught on to bagels," says Renee Kimmel, a 37-year-old rookie restaurateur whose bagel factory turns out more than 10,000 bagels in 13 varieties six nights a week.

"And it's so funny working behind the counter. Everybody has a little bagel story they tell me, about when they tasted their first bagel," she says.

At her Bagel Deli in south Anchorage, she sells 400 to 500 bagels a day and more on weekends, especially Sunday. Other restaurateurs, leading members of the art and literary communities and tourists crowd the delicatessen for brunch and snap up same-day copies of the Sunday New York Times, Ms. Kimmel says.

"It's just a nice laid-back place," she says. "We've got the best bagels in the world."

For folks who don't care to venture out on cold, dark winter mornings, the Bagel Deli delivers a brunch platter, complete with a copy of the Times. Besides bagels, roast beef, corned beef, cream cheese, lox and numerous other deli staples are included in the delivery, designed to feed four.

"It's supposed to be bringing a little bit of Lindy's to your front door," says Ms. Kimmel, referring to a New York deli.

The delivery service started about 2½ years ago, and there usually are 12 to 15 orders every Sunday, says Ms. Kimmel, who was raised in Chicago's northern suburbs and moved to Alaska three years ago.

A teacher and free-lance writer before getting into the bagel business, Ms. Kimmel claims to make the only sourdough bagels in the world. She also turns out traditional favorites like onion, garlic, sesame and poppy.

In Anchorage, almost everyone is from someplace else so the love of bagels already existed and needed only to be nurtured. But Ms. Kimmel says many local residents delight in bringing guests who are visiting from Outside — the Alaska term for everywhere other than Alaska.

"They tell their company, 'Hey, you gotta see this,'" she laughs.

In addition to the deli, Ms. Kimmel says her bagels are sold in Anchorage grocery stores and restaurants and shipped to Fairbanks, Barrow, Kodiak and the Aleutian Islands.

ever desire to win. I can." The note was written Wednesday night in the Denton County Jail.

Lucas said the trial and the attention it gathered enabled him to "to gain peace of mind."

Whitlock said Lucas did not tell him that he planned to seek the death penalty in future cases. He was asked after the sentencing if he believed Lucas could be the largest mass murderer in U.S. history, as he claims, and said he did not know.

"That's a very difficult question and I say that based on the many hours I've spent with Henry. I always found Henry basically easy to talk to and a very congenial person. I never even heard him say a cuss word."

Cobb agreed with Whitlock that he could not explain the dichotomy between Lucas' apparent gentle manners and his claims of mass murder.

"I could not tell you that ... all I know is he's charged with a lot of crimes."

Cobb also said the chances of Lucas being tried in all the cases with which he is charged diminished with the life sentence.

"You need to try him several times because you've got to have a bankruptcy to make sure a person like this goes to the penitentiary," Cobb said. "But ultimately I believe he will not be tried in all other cases."

have "gentlemen callers" and subsequently marry. But when Tom brings a friend home to satisfy his mother's desire, the result is disastrous.

Mrs. Owens does justice to the role of Amanda and is able to conjure up the image of a fading Southern matron nearing the end of her troubled life. Life has dealt her such harsh blows she prefers to live in the past rather than exist in the cold reality of the present.

Smith performs the role of young Tom Wingfield with verve. He runs a gamut of well-placed emotions throughout the show. He has a particularly bright scene in act one when his mother accuses him of spending too much time at the movies.

Teresa Webb portrays Laura Wingfield, the crippled and lonely girl haunted by her mother's fantasies. Miss Webb gives us a good look at the hollow and tragic figure that Laura is.

Others in the cast include James Bristo as narrator and Tom Wingfield of the present, and Scott Savell as Jim O'Connor the gentleman caller.

Bristo is able to give us a smooth transition into scenes with his competent acting, and Savell is a bright spot as he shoots needed life into the Wingfield household.

Other bright points included a stage engineered to resemble a dream or memory. The set really takes us into the haunted mind of a troubled man.

Check out Menagerie, it's more worthwhile entertainment than Dallas — and the acting is much better.

Although the days he spent on missions were brutal, Sanchez says he learned some valuable lessons. "I never take anything for granted, not even water," he says. "And I learned the value of life. It's precious."

Men who were drafted were required to spend 365 days in Vietnam, and soldiers kept a close count of their time. As Sanchez neared discharge, he was injured in an attack.

"It was the 13th of May, around noon," Sanchez and his squad were teamed with an Armored Division attempting to make "a big sweep" when they encountered soldiers from the North Vietnamese Army, trained soldiers with AK-47 rifles.

The NVA soldiers ambushed the American troops. Sanchez was carrying radio equipment and the antennae was visible to the NVA.

He was hit with debris from a rocket propelled grenade.

"A chopper came in and picked up the wounded. That was the last I heard of my unit. I heard they had some heavy fighting later. I don't know what happened to some of the guys."

Although Sanchez spent some harrowing times in the military, he says he is proud to have served. "I was out of school and going nowhere." His father, brother and uncles had served in the military, and he wanted to serve, too.

When he was discharged, "I felt good. It was an honor, a privilege to serve. I was called to do my duty and I did what I was supposed to do."

While Viet Nam is sometimes considered an American defeat and to some a war of disgrace, Sanchez has other ideas.

"People say that is the first war that we lost, but that's not true. We were given objectives and we'd go out and do our objectives. The politicians lost the war, but not us. We accomplished our objective."

Sanchez is dismayed by the attitude which has greeted many Vietnam veterans. "Vietnam has always been hush-hush," he says. "People say that all Vietnam veterans are a bunch of potheads. That's not true."

"There hasn't been much recognition for the Vietnam veterans, but I feel proud. (Serving in the military) made a better man out of me. I realize the values of life."

After returning to Big Spring, Sanchez took several courses at Howard College, then entered X-ray technology school at Malone-Hogan Hospital. He works as an X-ray technician at the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

He lives in Big Spring with his wife, Josie, and daughters Jessica, 6, and Jennifer, 3. His mother, Ida Sanchez, sister Diana and brother Manuel also live here.

Nuclear-free zone backers defeated

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Although ballots were still being counted supporters of a referendum that would have made it a crime to work on nuclear weapons within the city limits have conceded defeat but vowed to try again.

With nearly two-thirds of more than 29,000 paper ballots tallied, election officials said Thursday night, the count was 10,380 against the ban and 7,276 for it. A final tabulation was expected today.

"It's pretty clear that we're not going to win," said Richard Schreuer, spokesman for Mobilization for Survival, the local peace group that sponsored the referendum. He said the group plans to try again in two years.

The "Nuclear Free Cambridge Act" was submitted to Cambridge voters Tuesday.

Patterned after similar initiatives approved in hundreds of European cities and dozens of small U.S. communities, the referendum would have outlawed the research, design, production, testing, storage or transportation of nuclear warheads and their components in Cambridge after October 1985.

The city, home to Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is a center of high technology and higher learning.

Schreuer said he considered the number of votes cast for the ban to be a victory.

"A significant number of people want to outlaw nuclear weapons," he said. "We're satisfied with the message we sent."

The Mobilization group began gathering support for the measure more than a year ago, arguing that declaring Cambridge a "nuclear-free zone" would be a practical way to help reverse the global arms race.

Recently, an opposition group known as Citizens Against Research Bans was formed to fight the referendum. Made up of professors, businessmen and others, the group argued that the proposed law would stifle research, including efforts to end the arms race.

Through radio and television advertising, financed by more than $100,000 in corporate contributions, the opponents also claimed that the referendum would harm the local economy.

Supporters pointed out that basic research was specifically exempted and that Harvard and MIT do not accept any classified research projects. They also said the referendum would only affect the Draper Laboratory, which designs strategic and intermediate-range nuclear weapons. The firm's lawyers called the proposal a violation of Draper's First Amendment right.

Since Wednesday morning, more than 100 temporary workers, most of them elderly women, have hunched over folding tables and sorted the colored ballot slips at the Longfellow Elementary School.

Texas Main Street projects announced

AUSTIN (AP) — Belton, Goliad, Brownwood, Paris and Ennis, have been designated as "Texas Main Street Cities" for 1984, the governor's office announced today.

Each city named will hire a full-time Main Street project manager to coordinate the project.

Next year will be the fourth year of the program. Texas cities designated previously are Eagle Pass, Hillsboro, Navasota, Plainview, Seguin, Gainesville, Georgetown, Kingsville, McKinney, Marshall, Stamford, Waxahachie, Harlingen, Brenham and Lufkin.

She won't run for governor

CHARLESTON — Sharon Percy Rockefeller says she's encouraged by the election of Kentucky's first woman governor, but that doesn't mean she'll go after the seat her husband, Jay, is vacating after the next election.

There was talk last year that Mrs. Rockefeller, 38, might try to succeed her husband. But she removed herself from consideration in part because of speculation that he would seek the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by retiring Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va.

Although she stands by her decision, she sounded wistful. "I wish I could reconsider," West Virginia's first lady said in an interview after Tuesday's election of Martha Layne Collins to the Kentucky governor's mansion.

Disco champ selected

LONDON — Sporting a long ponytail and a black and white leather outfit, a 19-year-old male model from Rome, Jay Janini, has been declared world disco champ.

At the fifth World Disco Dancing Championships on Thursday, Janini, who had been the favorite, performed a routine complete with somersaults and pirouettes to outdance 35 other contestants — including an Indian woman gently gyrating in her sari and a 20-year-old Arab construction worker from Bahrain.

The competitors, aged 17 to 29, were given 30 seconds to strut their stuff in front of a panel of judges at the Empire Ballroom in London's central Leicester Square.

Along with publicity, Janini won a new car. He said he'd spend the night celebrating quietly with friends, "but I don't think I will be doing any disco dancing."

Col. Klink gets dignified

TOLEDO — Werner Klemperer, the bumbling Col. Klink in television's "Hogan's Heroes," has a more dignified role these days — as a guest narrator for symphony orchestras.

"I made no switch in my career at all," says the 63-year-old Klemperer, appearing this weekend with the Toledo Symphony. He said it's just another form of acting.

Klemperer, who played the commandant of a prison camp in Nazi Germany that was virtually run by the prisoners, also has appeared as narrator with the Boston Symphony, the Chicago Symphony and the New York Philharmonic. And he performed in a speaking role last year with New York's Metropolitan Opera.

"The musical phase is merely a new dimension," said Klemperer, whose father, Otto, was a famous conductor and whose mother was an opera singer. "To narrate with an orchestra is standing on a platform on a stage and you're performing it."

Cousteau praises new boat

NEW YORK — Jacques Cousteau, the sea explorer and inventor, had high praise for his "sailboat without sails" even though high winds and seas ended his attempt to reach New York a few days before Thanksgiving.

He set out from Morocco in the 65-foot "Moulin a Vent" on Oct. 12.

The venture ended in the Atlantic last week after the boat, the 73-year-old Cousteau and a crew of five were bombarded for more than two days by winds of up to 50 knots and waves 15 to 20 feet high. Cousteau said the storm only confirmed his belief in the boat's innovative wind propulsion system, which "had a great time" before faulty weldings gave way.

Heineken ransom demanded

AMSTERDAM — Holland's largest newspaper reported today that a ransom of more than $8 million has been demanded for the release of kidnapped multimillionaire brewer Alfred Heineken and his chauffeur.

The unattributed report was carried in morning editions of the Amsterdam daily De Telegraaf. It was not confirmed by Dutch officials.

At Amsterdam police headquarters, a spokesman said: "I have no comment on the story. At the demand of the abductors, we don't give any information to the press."

Robert Elfrink, spokesman for Heineken Breweries, also told a reporter: "No comment. There is a media blackout on this affair."

De Telegraaf based its story on a message relayed to the brewery Thursday by the kidnap gang. Three men armed with automatic weapons seized Heineken and his driver, Ab Doderer, outside the Amsterdam headquarters of the breweries Wednesday evening.

Although officials have refused to disclose the full contents of the message, the De Telegraaf account said it stipulated a 25 million guilder ransom — equivalent to $8.1 million.

De Telegraaf said the message called on the brewery to signify agreement to the demand via an advertisement placed in the newspaper and said that the kidnapers would make further contact with the brewery management.

A ransom of 25 million guilders would be the largest ever sought in a Dutch abduction. Last December, 12.5 million guilders — more than $4 million — was sought and received for the release of Mrs. Anthonia van der Valk, wife of a Dutch motel chain owner.

Mrs. van der Valk spent nearly three weeks in captivity. In August, two Italians arrested in the kidnapping were jailed for 12 years by a Dutch court.

Heineken, 60, is one of a circle of influential people close to the Dutch royal house. Amsterdam newspapers said the royal family was shocked and concerned by his abduction.

Textbook hearing ends

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education has watched what could be a preview of a year-long controversy over teaching evolution in public school classrooms.

Science and biology textbooks are up for adoption next November, and witnesses testified Thursday on a proclamation setting out guidelines for publishers who want to submit books to the board for adoption.

Mike Hudson, Texas-coordinator for People for the American Way, said the proclamation omits any reference to evolutionary theory.

"The board rule which limits the teaching of evolution and Proclamation 60 which emerges from it remain concessions to a small, extremist group that is outside the mainstream of scientific thought and outside the mainstream of American religion," Hudson said.

SUICIDE ATTEMPT — Cincinnati disc-jockey, Bob Trumpey crosses his fingers as police and station personnel try to trace a woman who called into his radio show threatening suicide. The woman was finally tracked down after Trumpey talked to her for more than two hours.

The 27-member board devoted the afternoon to hearing comments on the proclamation, after taking final testimony on $36.3 million in proposed textbooks scheduled for adoption Saturday. Total textbook costs, including replacement of current books, are expected to reach $65.5 million this year.

Galman buried today

MANILA — Rolando Galman, who police say killed opposition leader Benigno Aquino, was buried today in the Philippines in the same cemetery as Aquino after a noisy funeral march attended by thousands of government opponents proclaiming his innocence.

Galman, 33, was gunned down moments after Aquino, the chief political rival of President Ferdinand E. Marcos, was shot and killed at Manila's airport on Aug. 21. Military authorities at first said Galman was a hoodlum hired by communist subversives to kill Aquino, but they now say he was himself a communist guerrilla.

Aquino followers accuse the government of President Ferdinand E. Marcos of complicity in the killing — a charge Marcos repeatedly has denied.

A green pickup truck served as a hearse as Galman's body was transported from a working-class funeral parlor, through the downtown Makati business district and out to the cemetery.

More than 5,000 people poured into the streets from offices and shops to watch the funeral procession pass through Makati, where banners hung from high-rise windows proclaimed Galman's innocence.

Confetti rained from windows, and firecrackers and small rockets exploded in the street. A police car led the procession and police directed traffic at intersections.

The Makati crowds did not follow the funeral procession to the cemetery. At the burial were about 200 people, including relatives, some Aquino followers and many reporters.

Hillside jury deadlocked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors who have convicted Angelo Buono Jr. of eight "Hillside Strangler" slayings were ordered to resume deliberations today even though they say they are "hopelessly deadlocked" on a final murder count.

After delivering three more guilty verdicts Thursday in the longest trial in California history, foreman Edward McKay sent Superior Court Judge Ronald M. George a note that the jury was deadlocked "by a vote of 11-1" on the last case — the death of college student Cindy Lee Hudspeth, 20.

George decided the jurors, who have also returned an innocent verdict on one count, should continue deliberating today, although state courts are closed for Veterans Day. It was not announced whether the holdout favored conviction or acquittal.

Buono, 50, a Glendale auto upholsterer, was charged with 10 counts of murder in the slayings that terrified Los Angeles women in late 1977 and early 1978. Nearly all the victims' bodies were found nude along hillsides in the Los Angeles area. Most had been strangled after being raped or sexually assaulted.

The latest verdicts in the trial, which began Nov. 16, 1981, came when the jury found Buono guilty of murdering Elissa "Lisa" Teresa Kastin, 21; Jane Evelyn King, 28; and Kristina Weckler, 20.

Warm weekend predicted

By The Associated Press

Clear skies and crisp temperatures greeted Texans today as forecasters expected sunny skies and slightly warmer conditions to kick off the weekend. Frost warnings were posted before dawn over much of North Central Texas, the Concho Valley and Hill Country, and across portions of South Central and Southeast Texas. However, readings did not reach expected lows over much of the warning area.

Temperatures dipped into the 30s in the northern Panhandle and in North Central and East Texas, while readings in the 40s dominated the rest of the state. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 34 at Amarillo to 51 at McAllen.

Light winds were flowing in a clockwise motion over the state, resulting in northerly winds over the eastern half and southerly winds over the western half.

The forecast called for sunny skies and fair nights through Saturday. Lows were expected to dip around 40 in North Central Texas, while readings in the 40s to near 50 were forecast for other areas of the state.

Along the Texas coast, gusty northerly winds were expected to give way to southerly breezes, accompanied by fair to partly cloudy skies through Saturday.

West Texas — Mostly fair through Saturday. Highs 65 Panhandle to near 80 Big Bend valleys. Lows 35 Panhandle to near 50 extreme south. Highs Saturday 68 Panhandle to 82 Big Bend valleys.

IRS launches master spy plan

In its continuing battle against tax cheats, the Internal Revenue Service wants to match its own records of incomes reported to the government against commercially prepared lists of estimated household incomes. Significant discrepancies between the government's computerized list of reported incomes and the computer lists of estimated household incomes would be grounds for a tax fraud investigation.

The IRS refuses to discuss the status of its plan. But news reports disclose that the agency had hoped to implement the list-matching on a trial basis early next year in six cities. It now appears unlikely that the program will begin on schedule. The three firms that compile computerized lists of the estimated incomes of nearly all American households have refused to give the IRS access to their data.

Under the IRS plan, anyone earning and reporting an income of $20,000 a year probably would be suspect, if comparable households are estimated to earn $30,000 year. Such a procedure would unfairly place thousands of Americans under suspicion. The firms acknowledge their lists may have an individual error rate of 25 percent.

An error rate of that magnitude may be acceptable to a company wanting to target households with certain incomes for a sales pitch. But it is clearly unacceptable in the targeting of citizens for investigation and possible prosecution.

The IRS should abandon its ill-conceived plan that could subject numerous honest tax-payers to government harassment.

Around the Rim

By RICK BROWN

Marvin's a Mensch

I caught up with Marvin last Monday night at the Municipal Auditorium — that big Moroccan structure behind city hall — where he and some friends were rehearsing a production of Peter and the Wolf.

I don't mean to imply that Marvin is actually in the show, because he's not. Or at least all of him isn't. Well, to be more specific, his body isn't, but his insides are.

What I'm trying to say is that Marvin is a puppet. While the hands that control his bright orange body also control Peter and other characters in the story, Marvin makes no actual appearance himself.

So you can see my confusion: part of Marvin is in Peter and the Wolf and part of him is not.

In any case, I talked with Marvin face-to-face (or face-to-hand, as it were) after his friends had been put away that night, and here is what I learned:

Life as a puppet is a much different existence than life as a human, Marvin admitted with just a touch of embarrassment. For one thing, he has no legs. This is not his fault, Marvin insisted, and neither is it his fault that he has no last name and can't eat.

I felt this was a touchy subject for the puppet and pressed on to happier things, like what his job was. This, I learned, was simply to be cute.

Marvin said with pride that he is always a star, even though he isn't always on stage. I thought in one sense he is always on stage — at least his insides are. But this is a confusion we have discussed before and I can't blame the little fellow for being a bit confused himself.

Marvin said he has played — body and hand — before over 20,000 people at hospitals, birthday parties, and as "a sort of master of ceremonies" for the Peter and the Wolf production which has played with symphonies in Midland-Odessa, East Texas and on tour in Mexico.

It seems one of Marvin's specialties is putting down orchestra conductors; though he says he likes them — "especially when they have a personality."

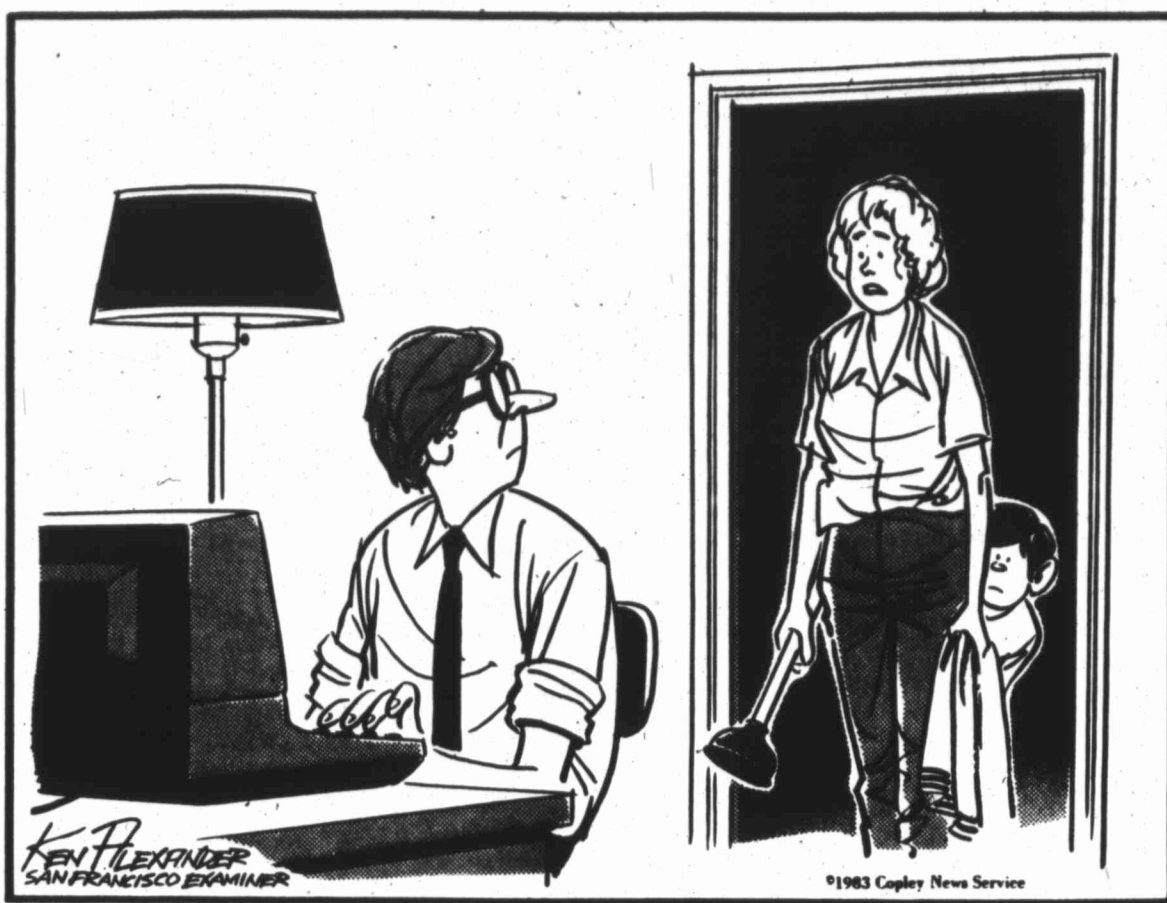

Marvin says he likes entertaining children most of all. "Kids have better imaginations and they tell the truth," he says.

I asked the puppet how old he is and he said he's "as old as the memory of whoever sees me," and I thought that was the mark of a true entertainer.

What is Marvin's happiest memory? He says it is singing "New York, New York" with the "Mexican Barry Manilow" on tour in a small Mexican town.

What does he want for Christmas? He wants all kids who are sick to get well, because "they kinda hurt."

"Then there's the trip to Acapulco."

"I'm afraid this is a low-tech problem, dear... Peter flushed a tennis ball down the toilet."

Argentina's Coca-Cola Cowboy

WASHINGTON — Intelligence sources raise two equally alarming possibilities in the wake of the election of moderate Radical Party leader Paul Alfonsín as president of Argentina: a military coup to prevent his scheduled December inauguration or renewed leftist terrorism if he makes it into office.

I sent my associate Dale Van Atta to Buenos Aires to look behind the scenes of Argentina's first election in 10 years. He spoke to both Argentine and American sources and found they shared the same concerns over the country's future.

Heading the secret agenda of a recent meeting of the U.S. Embassy's "Intelligence Group" — senior Central Intelligence Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency and Foreign Service officers — was this ominous item: "Possibility of military intervention prior to inauguration."

The sources would not estimate the likelihood of a military coup but they agreed that Alfonsín's landslide victory over Peronist candidate Italo Luder was probably the best deterrent to the generals and admirals. His clear popular mandate is in sharp contrast to the public's contempt for the top military brass, which capped years of misrule with a humiliating defeat in the Falklands war.

The chief cause of apprehension is Alfonsín's emphatic pledge to bring the top brass to book for the disappearance of perhaps 20,000 Argentines during the anti-leftist "dirty war" of the 1970s. If he persists in this determination, the military may move in to save their own skins. The armed services are still controlled by men with plenty to hide. It seems improbable that they'll hold still for open public disgrace.

That's why many military leaders quietly backed the Peronist candidate. Luder indicated he might be willing to make a deal with the generals, in the tradition of Peronist-military back-scratching that has endured through four decades of seesaw power.

Alfonsín dropped no such comforting hints. But he will undoubtedly have to compromise, probably by prosecuting enough of the responsible military leaders to set an example, but not so many that the entire officer corps feels threatened.

The second item on the Intelligence Group's agenda was "Terrorism potential after inauguration." In the worst of the "dirty war," leftist terrorists murdered 800 Argentine officials and family members.

The biggest terrorist group was the Montoneros. They were originally Peronist-backed and, in fact, dozens of them marched in hoods at a pre-election party rally. Though some in the crowd gave them the Argentine equivalent of a Bronx cheer, the Montoneros still have Peronist supporters who may turn to terrorism to avenge the party's election defeat.

The election and its immediate aftermath were surprisingly non-violent, considering the bitterness manifest in the campaign. Peronist posters depicted Alfonsín as the "Coca-Cola candidate" — a puppet of Ronald Reagan, multinational corporations and Jews. The Star of David over his head was a clear appeal for the anti-Semitic vote.

The wealthy aristocrats backed Alfonsín, whose left-of-center views suited them better than the radical populist rhetoric of his opponent. In conversations with my associate at an exclusive club, several members of the upper crust referred to the Peronist party as "a zoo," and its supporters as "animals let out of their cages."

Terminal race

The first Airport Terminal Marathon was held last week at O'Hare Field in Chicago. The idea for the marathon came from Fred Tatashore, a young lawyer who had watched the entire New York Marathon on television a couple of Sundays ago.

He said, "I've been racing through airports all my life and it suddenly occurred to me that most terminals are now 26 miles long. Since people have to run to catch their planes, there was no reason not to have an airport marathon."

"I am amazed how many have shown up for it. We have competitors from terminals in Atlanta, Miami, San Francisco, London, and Paris and one team came all the way over from the Tokyo airport."

"How does a terminal airport marathon differ from the New York and Boston Marathons?" I asked.

"Ours is much more difficult because we require the contestants to run the 26 miles fully clothed, carrying either an overnight case or a garment bag. The course is laid out as follows: Everyone starts from the curb. When the gun goes off they race up to the ticket counter, check in, and then they go to the gate where their plane is leaving from."

"Won't some contestants have shorter distances to run than others?"

"No, that's the beauty of O'Hare airport. Every plane gate is exactly 26 miles from a ticket counter."

I talked to several of the contestants who were warming up in the parking lot. Husbands were rubbing wives' shoulders and wives were putting Ben Gay on their spouses' legs. I was surprised to find a lady who said she was 68 years old, putting resin on her shoes. "My children live all over the country so I've been in training for a year. I once ran from one end of the Detroit airport to the other in 7 minutes and 14 seconds."

The youngest runner was Tommy Styson, who was 8 years old. He said he got interested in air terminal marathon running because his mother was always late for their plane.

Before I could interview anyone else, the gun went off and the First Airport Terminal Marathon was on. The field was jammed as it began, but once people went through the X-ray machines, it started thinning out. One FBI man got cramps in his legs and fell in front of Gate E-1, several got as far as the cocktail lounge before they began retching. Pilots, baggage handlers, and porters cheered them on, and airline stewardesses provided Gatorade for those who looked like they were about to drop. Every wheelchair at O'Hare was put in service to take off those who dropped from exhaustion.

The winner turned out to be a traveling salesman, Jimmy Diamond, from Roslyn, New York, who got to his gate in 2 hours, 12 minutes, and 4 seconds, beating out the Atlantic favorite, Jeff Harrington, who works for Federal Express. Harrington might have won, but he claimed the woman at his ticket counter had sent him to the wrong gate.

Billy Graham

Is it unmanly to be religious?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why do you think men seem to be less interested in religion than women? Or do you think that is really true? — G.D.

DEAR G.D.: It is certainly not always true, of course, and many men are deeply committed to Christ and serve him without reserve. But at the same time, it is true that many men think it is somehow unmanly to be interested in God. This is very unfortunate, because a man only begins to be the full man God intends him to be when he discovers the purpose of life in Christ.

One reason may be that men often pride themselves in their independence and their strength and ability to do things on their own. They may even think — falsely — that it is a sign of weakness to admit that they need help from anyone else — especially God. They take pride in their own ability to solve their problems and get through any situation.

But pride can destroy us, because it deceives us into thinking that we do not need God and are sufficient on our own. A person who is blinded by pride often refuses to face reality. A man who says he does not need God because God is only for weak people only shows that he does not realize how limited he really is. This is true in life, and it also is true for death. Even the strongest man will die some day, and without Christ he has no hope of eternal life.

No matter how successful a man may be in his business or profession, if he leaves God out of his life, he is building his life on a false and insecure foundation. When the storms of life come — as they do — all of us — he will have nothing to turn to and his foundation will crumble. Jesus said, "Everyone who hears these words of mine and does not put them into practice is like a foolish man who built his house on sand. The rain came down ... and it fell with a great crash." (Matthew 7:26-27).

We all need to see our need of God, and face honestly the fact that we need his forgiveness and salvation. And when we open our hearts to Christ we will begin to discover that being a Christian is the greatest challenge any man — or woman — can accept.

The media censor all but themselves

Editor:

Regarding the editorial recently appearing in your paper criticizing parental censorship, as a journalism instructor, I never cease to be amazed at how simplistic, yet dogmatic many Media people are. For individuals who are supposed to be trained to be objective and factual, many reporters use their positions to advance their own self-serving interests while pretending to serve others. While I do not criticize your right to hold the position that all censorship is bad, your condemnation of parents who happen to be concerned about the material their own children are expected to read is exemplary of your lack of thought and consistency.

The fact is, that whether it is recognized or not, all people who are the least bit discerning exercise some form of censorship. But if parents make negative choices about what their children will experience in the educational process, it is bad, you say. Any time any authority figure makes a choice regarding what others will experience is censorship. Censorship, simply stated, encourages certain things while condemning others as bad. All laws are a form of censorship. The prohibition of illegal drug use is such an example. Laws forbidding the publishing of slanderous material is another. Just because the subject at hand happens to be philosophical does not exempt it from censorship.

The Publisher and Editor of every newspaper or magazine exercises a certain censorship (regardless of whether it is stated or not) that condemns certain ideas while it encourages others. The Big Spring Herald is certainly such an example. Since this fact is undeniable, why are you so critical of parents who want to exercise this same freedom when it involves the education of their own children?

Stop and think, if you hold an anti-censorship position, you must condemn as fanatical any parent's objection to his children's being encouraged to "experience" the supposed freedom of drug use, free love, foul speech or anarchy. It is immaterial whether that encouragement comes from the school or the media.

But the real question regarding censorship is: WHO HAS THE RIGHT OF RESPONSIBILITY TO DECIDE WHAT OTHERS WILL EXPERIENCE? TO BE SURE, SOMEONE DOES! The media believes it has the responsibility of deciding what philosophy will be fed to the public. The psychologist believes he has the right to decide what philosophy of life will be taught to students. The socialist believes the state holds that right, and the Christian parent believes the Bible, as God's Word, must be recognized as the judge.

But regardless of who is recognized, someone will hold that position, and the effects are always far-reaching. So, in discussing censorship, let us be honest enough to deal with the issue: Who has that responsibility, rather than pretending that no one has the right.

If you believe that you are more qualified than the Bible, state your case. If not, then please be silent.

Anybody out there in the market for a railroad station? If so, there's one for sale, we've learned, in little Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwillantysiliogogogoch, which is in Wales. No kidding.

For a mere $225,000, you get not only the station, but also a sign bearing the town's name and a lesson, no less, in how to pronounce it. It may be the only town in the world that's smaller than its name.

In Welsh, the name means, "St. Mary's Church in the hollow of the white hazel near a rapid whirlpool and the church of St. Tysilio near a red cave."

We do not know the Welsh translation of "All aboard." We're afraid to ask.

Graham sentenced to 30 years

Big Spring (Texas) Herald, Fri., Nov. 11, 1983 5-A

GRAHAM LED AWAY — Thomas Graham (center) was sentenced to 30 years yesterday for the murder of an Upton County Sheriff's deputy. Graham who was blinded by a shotgun blast in the shooting is assisted by his sister (left) and mother.

SAN ANGELO, Texas (A) — Thomas Graham, blinded in a shootout after his father gunned down a sheriff's deputy, wept as a jury sentenced him to spend 30 years in prison for his part in the deputy's death.

Richard Graham, 40, died in the shooting by a supervisor at an oil pipeline company Graham and his 18-year-old son tried to rob the day after Upton County Sheriff's Deputy Charles A. Renfro was shot to death. Before the jury returned its verdict Thursday, the younger Graham had asked for probation, saying he had changed his life.

"I gave my life over to the Lord," Graham, from McCamey, about 50 miles south of Odessa, told the jury shortly before they adjourned to consider his sentence. Graham said that when he was shot he "asked the Lord to forgive me. He did."

Renfro was gunned down when he responded to an alarm at a McCamey hardware store. Graham testified he was on the roof acting as lookout while his father robbed the store of guns.

Graham's attorney, Lawrence Barber Jr. of Odessa, said his client would not appeal. Graham could have been sentenced to life.

Prosecutors had argued that Graham conspired with his father, Richard, to burglarize the hardware store on July 15, and therefore was just as responsible for the death of the 45-year-old Renfro.

Jurors deliberated 1½ hours Wednesday before returning the guilty verdict.

Graham testified that his father planned the burglary. Barber argued his client was influenced by his father.

"What I did wasn't from God. It was my own choice. I'd been saved earlier in life, but I kind of got away from it," Graham told jurors during the punishment phase of his trial.

Odessa mayor called to federal grand jury

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant and 14 other "upstanding citizens" have been subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury investigating a suspicious 1981 fire at an Odessa office building, federal agents told the Odessa American.

"I absolutely intend to testify," Bryant told the newspaper. He said if he had any information on who was responsible for the fire, "I'm certainly not aware of it."

Bryant was a part owner of the building when the fire occurred, but FBI agents said he was not considered a suspect in the arson that investigators said caused the $90,000 in damages, the newspaper reported in a copyright story Thursday.

Bill Kirkwood, the FBI agent in charge of the investigation, said 15 "upstanding citizens," including Mayor Bob Bryant, "a couple" of members of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce and "certain county commissioners" were subpoenaed this week, the newspaper said.

Kirkwood said the subpoenas were issued by the U.S. Attorney's office in San Antonio. He said some of the subpoenas had not yet been served but would be by Tuesday, when the grand jury is scheduled to convene in Midland for a two-day session.

According to Bryant's subpoena, he grand jury is investigating "violations of certain federal laws, including mail fraud, interstate transportation in aid of racketeering, and explosive material violations," the Odessa American reported.

But Kirkwood said, "The whole thing has got to do with the O'Michael Building."

Bryant said he was surprised when he received a subpoena Tuesday because he thought the investigation was dropped last year.

"If it is ready to come to a head, I'd like to see it happen, and I think it's long overdue," Bryant said.

Second-degree felony arson charges were filed against John Thomas Peterson, 43, and his brother, Lawrence Earl "Cotton" Peterson, age unknown, but were dropped in July 1982 because, prosecutors said, they "didn't have a case" against the two.

Suit filed over school discipline

HOUSTON (AP) — A teen-age graffiti painting prank has been turned into a federal case by parents who filed suit in U.S. District Court here over punishment imposed on their children by a school district.

Six Westchester High School students were arrested Oct. 10 for painting graffiti on the gym walls of archival Memorial High. After an investigation, Spring Branch Independent School District officials said that 35 Westchester High students were involved and placed the whole group into discipline facilities.

Parents of two of the students filed suit this week in U.S. District court, claiming a violation of the students' civil rights. The suit names the district and 11 of its officials, and seeks more than $1 million in damages.

The lawsuit charged that the school district had no right to discipline the students for an incident that happened after school was out. It also charged that the punishment, which included six weeks in a special assignment center for "severe discipline problems," was excessive.

Such centers, said the suit, "affects the students' reputation and interferes with later opportunities for higher education and employment."

The suit also charged that the punishment was meted out without allowing the students or parents to answer the vandalism accusation.

The suit was filed on behalf of Cynthia Ellen Scott and Donald Gregory Abbott, both students who were given six weeks of punishment at the disciplinary center.

"We're mainly concerned that the kids are getting their education and we don't feel that that's being accomplished at the centers," said John A. Pizzitola, a lawyer representing the students.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda issued a temporary restraining order against the school district and ordered a hearing for next Thursday.

Students in the suit were instructed by Pizzitola not to comment until the hearing.

School board president Jack Christie said the vandalism caused about $500 in damage, but the district was not pressing police charges.

He did say, however, that the district has a "strict policy" about punishing student vandals.

"Three or four years ago," he said, "we were losing thousands of dollars from buildings being painted and windows being broken."

Christie said the district has punished students for after school activity "if it involves a school function."

Singer wants to apologize

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Joe Elliott, a singer with the rock group Def Leppard, wants to apologize to city officials here for calling El Paso "that place with all the greasy Mexicans," but his offer of atonement has been rejected.

"I wish he would just catch the message and stay away and leave us alone," said Joe Loya, district director of the League of Latin American Citizens, after hearing of Elliott's desire to apologize.

A boycott of Def Leppard was begun by LULAC after Elliott made his El Paso remark at a concert in Tucson, Ariz. Sept. 7.

El Paso Mayor Jonathan Rogers, who in October labeled Elliott's remark "disgusting," said Wednesday he agrees with Loya. The mayor said he wouldn't meet with Elliott if he came to El Paso to apologize.

Elliott's assistant manager, George Knemeyer, said Wednesday from New York Elliott wants to fly to El Paso Nov. 21 "to get this behind him. He's not a prejudiced guy. I'm sure he didn't mean it."

But Loya said Elliott is offering an apology only because "we're hurting him where it hurts the most — in the pocketbook."

Loya said Elliott's slur "reopened old wounds" among Mexican-Americans that would "take a long time to heal."

FIGURE DRAWING — Becky Smiley, Howard College art instructor, draws Jackie McElroy. Mrs. Smiley will demonstrate figure drawing at a Big Spring Art Association meeting 7:30 p.m. Nov. 15 at Kentwood Center. The public is invited to the free demonstration. She will draw from a live model, emphasizing form, proportion and composition. An art instructor for five years, Mrs. Smiley holds a master's of education degree in art from Sul Ross State University in Alpine and a bachelor of fine arts degree in art education from North Texas State University in Denton. She will teach a 16-week figure drawing course at the college in January.

Dear Abby

Neighbor calls a foul on games

DEAR ABBY: Something is going on in my neighborhood that has me on edge. A divorced woman with a 10-year-old daughter has her boyfriend living with them. The three of them are together, laughing, playing games and so on. This woman thinks she is a great mother because she has a "happy" child. The fact that this mother is living in adultery and committing fornication right before her daughter's eyes does not seem to bother her.

Now I saw something indecent take place between that 10-year-old and her mother's boyfriend. I called two priests and a minister. One priest said, "Don't say a word," the other priest said, "Tell the mother," and the minister said, "Write the mother a letter."

I went over there and spoke to the mother, and all she said was, "Oh, they are very close. They love each other!" This woman sometimes leaves her daughter in the house alone with her boyfriend. If she isn't an unfit mother, I don't know what "unfit" is.

What should I do?
A CONCERNED NEIGHBOR
DEAR CONCERNED: You did not disclose what you "saw" that you perceived as "indecent." I appreciate your good intentions, but every community has some kind of child-protection agency, so if you saw something "indecent" going on, go to the authorities and make an official complaint. But be prepared to back up your suspicions with some hard facts. A person is still presumed innocent until proven guilty.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was given a baby shower that was attended mainly by my mother-in-law's friends. I promptly wrote my thank-you notes for each gift, and in so doing I addressed each woman as "Ms." (Most were married, a few widowed and several were unmarried.)

A few days later, my mother-in-law called to say that one of her friends was offended by being addressed as "Ms." Then my father-in-law got on the phone and told me I was never to address any of their friends or relatives as "Ms."

I tried to explain that I meant no offense — that this was a new trend so that all women, regardless of their marital status, would feel equal, but he insisted he liked the old way better and in the future I should forget the "Ms."

Did I make a "Ms"-take?
MS-UNDERSTOOD
DEAR MS-UNDERSTOOD: You made no "Ms"-take." Your father-in-law ms'd the point.

Dr. Donohue

Artery blockage

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a woman of 76 and have been having pain in my legs when I walk. I have a blockage in my right leg. Could this be the same as hardening of the arteries? — M.S.S.

This, I take it from your letter, is pain after walking a given distance. It means that your leg muscles, while getting sufficient blood at rest, don't get enough when they are exercised. The cause is blockage of one kind or another. And what is done depends on the cause and how complete the blockage is.

Strangely enough, for mild to moderate cases, exercise to the point of pain is sometimes recommended because this actually enhances the growth of small arteries serving the muscles. I don't know if you smoke. But if you do, quit. That narrows vessels.

If your leg and foot circulation is seriously compromised by flow blockage, then you have to be especially careful about cuts there. A slight scratch on a person whose blood supply is poor can turn into a major infection. And that precaution extends to simple things like trimming toenails and shoe selection.

Aspirin is being studied as a way to enhance circulation in people with artery blockage. And, of course, for more serious problems the surgeon can remove the blocked portion of the artery and replace it with a graft.

As you can see, the paucity of information in your letter has left me floundering. It is really helpful when readers are a bit more specific about their symptoms, etc. Diagnosis is always impossible, but answers can be a bit more helpful.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I felt your answer to Mrs. A.B. about kidney stones was good as far as it went. However, there is more. The last stone I had was calcium oxalate. I have heard that megadoses of vitamin C form oxalate stones and that certain foods — like cocoa, spinach and rhubarb — are high in creation of oxalate stones. Is this conclusion credible? — R.P.B.

Kidney stones have two ingredients. The most common stones are a combination of calcium and oxalate. However, treatment is aimed at the calcium content because that is where the most likely body chemistry problem lies.

Rarely does oxalate become a major factor in stone formation. When that happens, the fact can be demonstrated with a urine test. If that shows too high a level, the person does have to watch food sources of oxalate — spinach, rhubarb, beans, parsley, cocoa, instant coffee and tea.

There are a few people in whom oxalate is a definite factor, I have to grant that. For instance, people with Crohn's disease tend to absorb too much oxalate from their digestive tract and that can be a factor in their stone formation. But under ordinary circumstances one would have to be an oxalate food glutton for that to be a significant factor in kidney stone formation.

Now, the vitamin C connection, about which much has been written in the past several years: Vitamin C is ascorbic acid, which is turned into oxalate by the body. Huge doses of the vitamin may influence stone formation and that is frequently cited as a possible side effect of overdosing with the vitamin.

The theoretical possibility exists, but I don't know if the idea has ever been proven. You only need a certain amount of vitamin C daily, anyway. It isn't stored in the body like some other vitamins, but is spilled out in urine when it is in excess.

Shelly Massey's work makes life easier for the deaf

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

Shelly Massey scanned the want ads almost daily thinking how she would like to work part-time. With two pre-school children, she didn't believe it would be worth her while to work and send her children to day care. But she continued to read the ads.

One day an ad seemed to jump out at her. It was for a service provider position for Highland Council for the Deaf — a job where she could work out of her home.

"The work sounded so interesting," she said. The service provider provides the Council's services to deaf individuals. The service provider relays messages from deaf people to hearing people and vice versa by telephone and TTY. The person also provides an information referral for the hearing or deaf to get information about deafness, and she assigns interpreters as needed for medical, governmental, legal and educational reasons.

The Council preferred to hire someone knowledgeable in sign language, but the skill was not as important as other qualifications. The Council wanted someone professional, respectful of individuals and their confidentiality, reliable and willing to learn sign language.

MRS. MASSEY CALLED about the position Friday. She sent in her resume and two reference letters Monday. A person was to be hired Tuesday. During this time she was moving and left a friend's telephone number on the resume for the board to contact her by. The board called her old number and was unable to contact her for an interview Tuesday.

"I thought they had hired someone because I never received a message," she said. The board was impressed enough with her credentials that they kept trying to contact her. Finally they noticed the other number and left a message for her.

"I went for the interview on Thursday. They were supposed to have hired someone by Tuesday," she said. "They had to hire someone by Thursday because that person had to be at a workshop in Austin Friday." She got the job and left the next morning for the workshop.

At the Texas Commission for the Deaf workshop, Mrs. Massey learned all services the Council provides for the deaf. The Commission is a state agency that contracts services to area councils, such as Highland Council, to provide services to deaf people in the area.

By attending the workshop, Mrs. Massey found out fast what it was like being deaf. "She learned her first sign language sign on the airplane from me," said Angel Ramos, her supervisor. Ramos is a math teacher at SWCID and president of Highland Council for the Deaf.

"It just seems like a whole new world," Mrs. Massey said. "I know exactly how a deaf person feels in a hearing world. Unless someone's interpreting you don't know what they're saying." She was one of few hearing people in a workshop full of deaf and hearing-impaired people.

"There were many deaf people. I followed Angel around like a puppy. When he would remember I was there he would interpret (sign language) to me," she said.

"She was deaf for the weekend," Ramos said.

MRS. MASSEY'S FIRST two weeks as service provider were spent with the past provider in on-the-job training. She's worked for more than a month at the position. When relaying messages, Mrs. Massey types what a hearing person is saying on the TTY. The TTY transmits the signals by telephone and modem to the deaf person's TTY, which writes out the message. The deaf person replies in the same manner. Mrs. Massey receives the message and tells the hearing person what the deaf person is saying.

"It wasn't hard work, but it was all new and I was frightened about that," she said. At first, she feared handling an emergency situation and didn't feel confident she could handle such. Today, she is confident in handling any situation. "At first when the phone rang, I thought 'Oh no!' But now it's an everyday thing."

"Working at home is a little extra bonus," Mrs. Massey said. "I really enjoy the work and made a lot of new friends."

Mrs. Massey is the only service provider in an area that includes Howard County, Midland and Odessa. Big Spring alone has at least 175 deaf people.

"Everyone has been real patient with me," Mrs. Massey said. "They are teaching me to sign a few signs all along." She doesn't know sign language but plans to learn soon. Since she began her job, her family has become interested in sign language and the deaf world.

House prices rise in spite of declining interest rates

NEW YORK (AP) — If you are inclined to believe that inflation has had the stuffing beaten out of it, which would automatically grant you minority-group membership, you probably haven't been looking for a house.

Had you been out there in the marketplace you might have noted a familiar phenomenon: Higher prices. True, interest rates are lower than they were two years ago, and more people can afford houses. But prices are higher.

As estimated by the National Association of Home Builders, the typical new, single-family house will finish the year with a price tag of about $76,000, or $6,700 more than the house of a year ago. This year's house is smaller too.

Based on previous year-to-year changes, the gain is a substantial one, the second largest in more than a decade. Last year, for example, the median price of $69,300 represented an increase of only $400 over the year before.

Meanwhile, the prices of existing homes seem to have risen at a much slower pace, with the National Association of Realtors reporting a September median of $70,400, only $3,100 over the September 1982 median.

The big increase in new-home prices has gone relatively unnoticed because, all things considered, it has been easier to buy and sell houses this year than last, a consequence of higher personal income and lower interest rates.

But why the big difference between the gains in new and existing houses?

Pent-up demand might explain some of the difference. When interest rates began falling late last year many thousands of young families, some of whom had almost given up any idea of owning, suddenly descended on the marketplace.

In effect, the supply-demand balance was upset. In October 1981, when mortgages cost around 17.5 percent, less than 8 percent of families were able to buy. By May, rates were 11.5 percent, and 19 percent could afford to do so.

Higher land prices had a lot to do with it. The NAHB cites figures showing that despite smaller-size lots, about 25 cents of every construction dollar went for land in 1983, compared with just 11 cents in 1949.

The new houses also are equipped with attractive features that some older houses lack. Many existing houses, for example, were built when energy costs weren't a major consideration. Newer homes, in contrast, are energy efficient.

In 1974, for example, three-quarters of windows in new homes were single-glazed. Triple-glazing was negligible. The preponderance of houses built recently have at least double glazing, and triple-glazing has become common.

Wage increases have added their bit to price tags, and so have the amount and variety of materials used in construction, which the NAHB estimates at 9,726 board feet of lumber, 90 linear feet of ducting, 55 gallons of paint, 302 pounds of nails, 750 feet of copper wiring, 100 plumbing fittings...

But at the same time, builders today use techniques they claim lower their costs: Factory-built units, some of them the size of entire apartments; fewer fireplaces; more sophisticated financing techniques.

Columnist blames Howdy Doody for social upheaval

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Social unrest in the late '60s and early '70s has been blamed on many factors, but a columnist is now suggesting the greatest "subversive" influence may have been the children's TV show,

"Howdy Doody."

The 1950s program featuring a smiling, respectful puppet taught an entire generation "never to trust anyone over 30," wrote columnist Jeff Greenfield in the current issue of TV

Guide.

"Howdy Doody represents one of the most authentically subversive TV shows in American history," Greenfield wrote. Although Howdy Doody told children to mind their parents, the characters sent out another message — grown-ups are bad guys, Greenfield wrote.

"The only more-or-less normal adult who was in any way admirable was 'Buffalo Bob,' and he was often the butt of practical jokes."

Clarabell the Clown, a character with a penchant for throwing pies and squirting seltzer water at authority figures, was the first Yippee, Greenfield said, recalling the '60s anarchist group.

Elvis' ex-wife makes TV debut

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — To Priscilla Presley, Friday is a day that holds both promise and threat. That's when she makes her debut as a character in the ever-popular CBS series "Dallas."

The promise is a big step forward in an acting career she has been carefully preparing for five years. The threat?

"I'm just afraid I'll become another product in the rumor mill," explains the one-time wife of Elvis Presley. "I'm sure they'll have me feuding with Linda Gray and Victoria Principal. 'Dallas' is such a tremendously popular show that it attracts a lot of sensational publicity."

"They've already reported that I've been feuding with Linda," she says. "How could anyone have a feud with Linda? She's one of the finest persons I've ever known."

In the sixth season of "Dallas" she plays Jenna Wade, a former girlfriend who re-enters the life of Bobby Ewing.

"Jenna is her own woman," the actress says. "She's extremely self-reliant, she has lived in Europe, and she has a child. Just like me. Except that she's a bit more sophisticated than I am.

"She has a lot of integrity, she's totally honest. I like her. How could I help but identify with her?"

Priscilla Presley 36, came to a breakfast interview at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel prior to a late-morning call for "Dallas." She has a natural, unglamorized beauty and an easy manner. She talks frankly but not exploitatively about her life as guardian of the Presley legend.

Born in Brooklyn to a career Air Force office, she says she met Elvis in Germany when he was doing his military service. They married in Memphis, had a daughter, Lisa Marie, and divorced in 1973.

Priscilla says that she started acting by accident. Chosen as spokeswoman for a hair shampoo, she found herself "uneasy and shy around crowds." She decided to study with the noted drama coach, Milton Katselas, found she enjoyed performing roles and began taking small parts in TV films.

At one point in her early acting career, she considered dropping Presley's name. She says she changed her mind when Lisa asked, "Why are you dropping my father's name?"

"Am I exploiting the name of Presley?" she says. "The name has hurt me more than it has helped."

Asner re-elected SAG president

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Ed Asner was overwhelmingly re-elected to a second term Wednesday as president of the Screen Actors' Guild after conservative union members failed to run a candidate against him.

Of 13,648 votes cast, Asner received 9,997 or 73 percent of the total, union spokesman Mark Locher said Wednesday night.

Asner had only two opponents in his bid for a second two-year term. J.D. Hall, a member of the SAG board who currently stars as a union organizer in the play "The Cradle Will Fall," received 2,787 votes, and stunt driver Charles Holden received 864 votes, Locher said.

Ballots were mailed last month to 55,000 members of the union and were counted Wednesday, Locher said. The vote total represented a turnout of almost 25 percent.

The liberal Asner, who played the title role in TV's canceled "Lou Grant" series, has frequently angered a conservative SAG faction led by Charlton Heston, who called the victory an "empty mandate."

The faction, Actors Working for an Actors' Guild, did not field a candidate for the guild presidency but urged members to boycott the election.

"I would be very surprised if there was much of a voter turnout," Heston said Wednesday, conceding that Asner would win. "He in effect is running unopposed."

Heston and other actors founded AWAG to protest such actions as SAG's donation of $5,000 to help striking air traffic controllers two years ago. The group has also objected to such remarks as Asner's outspoken criticism of President Reagan's Central American policy.

"We don't think the guild should be involved in politics on either side," said Morgan Paul, AWAG founding chairman. "We have members like the late John Wayne and Jane Fonda. How can the guild speak for either side?"

Asner has contended that he is entitled to express his personal opinions. He does not claim to represent the views of all the members of the union.

El Paso mail carrier under investigation

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An El Paso postal carrier who allegedly dumped mail he was supposed to deliver could face federal charges, but that decision will be up to the U.S. attorney, postal inspector Dave Rivera said Thursday.

"We're conducting an investigation on it and I will give my report to him (the U.S. attorney) for him to decide," Rivera said. "The postmaster also will have a say."

Rivera said postman Ricardo Torres has been suspended pending the outcome of the internal investigation, which the inspector said he hoped to complete by Monday.

Torres was suspended Tuesday after an El Paso businessman said he witnessed a postman throwing away mail.

Leonard Hall, owner of an El Paso apartments investments company, said he watched a postman take bundles of mail from his truck and toss them into a large trash dumpster in Central El Paso.

Hall said he waited until the postman had left the area and then checked the trash bin to see what had been chucked.

Kennedy realized TV's value

NEW YORK (AP) — John F. Kennedy was the first American president to fully recognize the value of television and to learn to manipulate it for his advantage.

"Kennedy ... made government a form of home entertainment," Barbara Matusow writes in "The Evening Stars," her recently published history of TV news. Two current productions, composed largely of television film shot before and during Kennedy's presidency, illustrate the point most effectively.

"JFK," a two-hour "ABC News Special" to be broadcast Friday evening, and "Being With John F. Kennedy," a cinema-verite style documentary of the same length now in syndication, were produced to mark the 20th anniversary of Kennedy's death in Dallas, Nov. 22, 1963.

The two films, stylish and frequently dramatic, complement one another in recalling the personalities and events that helped etch the Kennedy image indelibly in the minds of millions in this country and abroad.

"There has not been a day in 20 years when somebody has not talked to me about John Kennedy, not a day, no matter where I am in the world," Pierre Salinger, an ABC News correspondent who was Kennedy's press secretary, says in "JFK."

Kennedy's term in office, shortened to less than three years by an assassin's bullet, was full of dramatic occurrences: the Bay of Pigs invasion, confrontation with the Soviet Union over Berlin, violence in the name of civil rights, the Cuban missile crisis, expansion of the country's commitment in Vietnam.

JOHN KENNEDY
...built TV image

In retrospect, most seem to have been made to order — sometimes almost scripted — for television, including those events not particularly flattering to Kennedy.

Much of the footage used here is historic, but the significance of the two productions, especially for those who lived through the period, may best be described in more subjective terms. Kennedy, says Nancy Dickerson, the former network-news correspondent who narrates "Being With John F. Kennedy," brought "wit, purpose, humanity" to the presidency.

And the evidence is on film.

The ABC documentary, anchored by Peter Jennings, is largely chronological and includes interviews with many of those who worked with Kennedy, along with historians and journalists who covered the period in Washington.

"Being With John F. Kennedy," assembled by Robert L. Drew, an independent filmmaker who produced several documentaries on Kennedy as a candidate and as president in the early '60s, is more personal in approach. Intimate, close-up footage sometimes suggests a well-made home movie.

In fact, it was Kennedy's own idea to record on film events — activity as well as mood — as they developed.

In a lengthy and particularly dramatic segment, for instance, Kennedy, his brother Robert, then the attorney general, and other government officials, discuss how to deal with Gov. George C. Wallace, who had refused to allow two black students to enter the University of Alabama.

Later, in that same sequence, Robert Kennedy is shown on the telephone with Nicholas Katzenbach, an assistant who is in Tuscaloosa, Ala., preparing for the showdown with Wallace. Robert Kennedy's tiny daughter, Kerry, enters the room, and the attorney general puts her on the phone with Katzenbach. "Hi, Nick," she says, and they chat for a few moments before the two officials return to the business at hand.

Kennedy defined the term "charisma," and television was his primary vehicle for spreading the word.

Man gets maximum for actress' murder

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — John Sweeney was sentenced to the maximum 6½ years in prison Thursday for strangling actress Dominique Dunne, and the judge said he should have been convicted of murder rather than voluntary manslaughter.

"You hung on to this fragile and vulnerable woman and squeezed and squeezed and squeezed the oxygen from her while she flailed for her life," Santa Monica Superior Court Judge Burton Katz said. "This is an act that is qualitatively not of manslaughter, but of murder."

The powerfully built former Beverly Hills chef, who had lived with Miss Dunne, spent most of the two-hour hearing with his head buried in his hands.

A jury convicted him Sept. 21 of strangling Miss Dunne, 22, on Oct. 30, 1982, after she told him she wanted to break off their relationship.

Katz used the hearing to answer criticism that he had favored Sweeney, 27, during the trial and to express "dismay" at the jury's verdict of voluntary manslaughter and misdemeanor assault.

Miss Dunne's father, Dominick, told of sitting by his dying daughter's hospital bed and described how she looked: "On her neck, visibly visible, were the marks of John Sweeney's hands and fingers."

Miss Dunne's parents both took the stand Thursday to ask for the maximum sentence. Sweeney's mother and two sisters testified in his behalf.

"In my memory, in my heart and in my soul, for the rest of my life, I have that to remember," said Dunne, a novelist and film producer.

Pompeii exhibit set for HC campus

The presentation is supported by the Texas Committee for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The program features a photographic exhibit of artifacts, art work, and buildings from the ancient Italian city, free reading materials and a 20-minute slide-tape show, "Pompeii Lives."

Regular showings of the slide-tape presentation must be scheduled through the Community Relations office at Howard College. Special film showings are available for schools and organizations by special request.

People interested in the program or in arranging group visits may contact Linda Woodley at Howard College, 267-6311, ext. 229.

Fast start, fast finish carries Barton past HC

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

MIDLAND — Barton Co. College (Kan.) may not be the best team Howard College plays this season, but they provided the first serious competition for the Hawks in four games.

Too serious, in fact. Cougar Steve Stokes picked off a Michael Porter pass and turned the steal into a layup with 26 seconds to play, insuring Barton's 83-79 victory over the Hawks in a first round game at the Chaparral Classic here Thursday evening.

In other first round action, host Midland College ripped St. Philip's 102-68, Odessa College held off McLennan 96-93 and Garden City (Kan.) tripped Ranger 82-74.

Howard drops into the consolation bracket with the loss, meeting McLennan at 3 p.m. this afternoon.

The game was four minutes old before the Hawks scored and it was an uphill struggle the rest of the way. HC drew within a field goal on two occasions in the second half but each time Barton fended off the rally. Finally, with 6:37 to go in the game, a pair of free throws by Dwight Harris pushed the Hawks into a 67-66 lead.

The one-point advantage was the first and last lead of the game for Howard. The best HC could do was tie the game 77-77 with 1:56 left on Harris' layup. Barton grabbed two offensive rebounds on its next trip downcourt, scoring on Tommy Johnson's six-footer to take the lead for good.

Howard had a chance to tie again in the final minute but Stokes anticipated Porter's bounce pass and raced the other direction with the insurance basket.

"They were by far the first good team we've played," said HC Hawks coach Mike Mitchell. Howard cruised to wins over a trio of junior varsity teams in Big Spring but found itself in different circumstances against the Cougars. "In the last two minutes of the game, we didn't make the key plays we needed to win," Mitchell said.

The Hawks were able to rally on Barton thanks only to turnovers. The Cougars, pressured by Howard's mixture of man and zone defense, committed 27 mistakes. But that was all BCC would allow; the Cougs hit 63 per cent (39-62 shots) for the game and outscored the Hawks, especially on the offensive boards.

Barton led 9-0 before Jerry Stroman connected on HC's first field goal at 15:51 after six misses by his teammates. The Cougars applied full-court man pressure, something the Hawks haven't seen in the early season and the defense forced three timeline violations.

Howard cut its deficit to five points, 28-23, on a free throw by Joe Johnson late in the half but Barton surged back into a 10-point lead, 38-28, with 1:34 to play. A steal by James Johnson and feed to Stroman, resulting in his second stuff of the half, cut the score to 40-34 at the half.

The Cougars hit 67 per cent (18-27) in the first half to just 43 per cent for Howard.

"Early in the game," Mitchell said, "we let them build that 10-point lead on our poor play. Both teams made a lot of errors. Give our guys some credit, though, they played hard and came back. They gave a good physical effort."

Howard cut the score to 44-42 early in the second half on a bank shot by Stroman but Barton maintained six-point leads for the majority of the half. After falling behind 64-56, Howard cut the score to 64-62 as Al Holland slammed, Harris turned a steal into a layup and Porter scored on an assist from Porter with 7:55 to go.

James Johnson converted a three-point play with 6:42 left to drop Barton's lead to 66-65 before Harris hit the free throws that gave Howard its only lead of the game.

Mitchell was about to call a time-out prior to Porter's turnover but backed off his plans.

"I started to call a time-out," he said, "but they were in the defense we wanted them in. We had been scoring against the zone and I felt sure they would have changed defenses on a time-out."

Harris, who missed his first three shots, sank 17 field goals on his way to a game and season high 36 points. Stroman added 26 points, giving the Howard wings 62 of the team's 79 points. Wayne Montgomery missed only one shot on his way to 25 points for the Cougars. Johnson, Andre Harris and Leon White added 14 each.

Joe Johnson led the Hawks on the boards with seven rebounds while Porter and Harris had five each.

After its poor shooting performance in the first half, Howard warmed to a 58 per cent (19-33) mark in the last half. Barton still outshot the Hawks, dropping in 21 of 35 attempts for 60 per cent.

Three main Cougars — Johnson, Montgomery and Harris — were in foul trouble throughout the second half but all three finished the game at four fouls.

Howard (79) — Maurice Hoskin 0 1 2 1; Michael Porter 1 0 0 2; Dwight Harris 17 2 2 3 6; Joe Johnson 2 3 5 7; James Johnson 2 1 2 5; Jerry Stroman 12 2 3 2 6; Al Holland 1 0 0 2; Totals 35 9 14 7 9.

Balanced scoring zips Queens by Barton Co.

ODESSA — Four Howard College players scored in double figures as the Hawk Queens drummed Barton Co. College (Kan.) 75-59 in a first round game at the Odessa Optimist Classic here Thursday afternoon.

In other tournaments games played Thursday, host Odessa College swamped Kilgore 79-51, Ranger surprised Amarillo 55-41 and Panola drilled Frank Phillips 76-40.

The Queens utilized a 2-3 zone in the second half and forced the Lady Cougars to shoot from the outside. Barton was not able to do that and Howard turned a four-point halftime lead into a 20-point advantage.

Barton put on a full-court press late in the game and closed a 64-42 Howard lead to 12 points.

The Cougars led 9-2 early in the game but Howard took its first lead a 13-11. "Both teams played man-to-man defense in the first half and it was nip and tuck all the way," coach Don Stevens explained. "We changed to a 2-3 in the second half and I told them to just let it real aggressive. We hit a big surge and that's when we put the game away."

Pat Carter scored 14 points, Molly Early 13 and Alex Provincio and Janene Berry 12 each to pace the Hawk Queens. Sheila Hubert (23) and Monica Gilbert (14) combined for 37 of their team's 59 points.

The Queens, now 3-2 on the season, play Kilgore at 4 p.m. this afternoon.

Klondike sends stout defense against potent G'wood offense

By STEVEN BELVIN
Sports Writer

STANTON — Big Spring area powers Greenwood and Klondike will hook up here tonight at 7:30 p.m. to decide which team will advance to the next round of post-season play.

The Rangers, under the direction of fourth-year coach Joe Longley, breezed through District 7-A South Zone play with an 8-0 record, while coach Mickey Virdell's Cougars finished second in 7-A North Zone competition with an 4-1 slate. Their only loss came at the hands of top 20 ranked Roscoe by a 34-7 count.

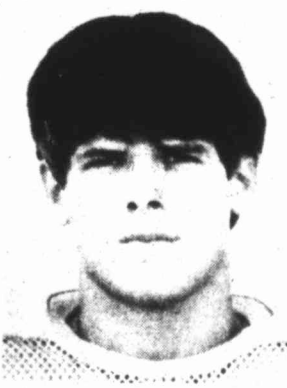

For the season the Rangers are 8-2 while the Cougars are 5-5.

Both teams have had one common opponent — Jal, N.M. — during the season. The New Mexico school defeated the Rangers 27-21 in the season-opener in a game played in New Mexico and downed the Cougars 21-20 during the fifth week of the season in West Texas.

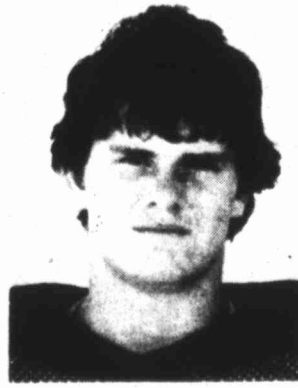

There is one sure thing about tonight's encounter: both defenses are familiar with their opponent's offense set since both squads run from the wing-T formation.

Junior tailback Roger Smith, a transfer from Ballinger, paces the Ranger attack with 1,200 yards on 200 carries. Fullback Todd Foris has complemented his backfield mate well, gaining over 600 yards.

Sophomore quarterback

Chad Longley is a double threat having rushed for over 200 yards and scoring nine touchdowns. He's not completed 43 of 88 passes for 600 yards and seven touchdowns.

"We are pleased with the way our offense has been going," said coach Longley. "We have a balanced attack and that way a team can't concentrate on stopping one thing."

The Ranger defense will be counting on linebackers Joey Branch and John Gilliam to help stop Cougars running back Rolando Juntos who has rushed for 1,012 yards on 189 carries and 10 touchdowns. "We must stop Juntos," Longley emphasizes. "He is one of the better backs we have faced this year. This is our first year in the playoffs and the kids are real excited and ready to play."

After a slow start the Cougars have bounced back to win four of their last five games including three shutouts. Although his defense has been playing well, Virdell credits much of the team's success to junior quarterback Scott Runge.

"We inserted Scott into the starting position during the sixth week of the season," Virdell explains, "and he has done a great job. He has good speed and can throw on the run but his greatest asset is his leadership."

When the Cougars go to the air, they look for wingback Brent Airhart who leads the team in receptions. Fullbacks Tim Cope and Ray Arismendez have combined for over 1,000 yards on the ground.

Linebackers Juntos and Mitch Mitchell led the Cougars defensive charge, averaging 15 tackles each.

"To be successful against Greenwood," Virdell said, "we can't make mistakes, we have to stay away from third and long situations and control the football."

Lamesa, Grady close seasons on the road

The post-season playoffs have begun for many Texas football teams but two Big Spring area teams are closing their regular seasons this evening.

The Lamesa Golden Tornadoes, 2-7 on the year, travel to Andrews to battle the 7-2 Mustangs in a District 2-AAAA game. Andrews sports a 4-2 district record but is out of the race. Monahans and San Angelo Lake View have already clinched playoff berths.

Quarterback Bill Morrison is the key man in the Mustangs' offense. Andrews upset Midland High earlier in the season.

Grady ends its six-man slate on a high note, taking on undefeated and No. 1 state-ranked Highland. The Wildcats are 4-5 and are playing a team that is unbeaten in 22 straight games and won the state championship last season.

Harold Light and Duane Hyde are the top Highland players.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's influences can be harsh and frustrating unless you make a special point to refuse to try to force issues and observe what is going on about you. Patience is a must.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Some friend you can usually rely on is in trouble with a financier, so go elsewhere for data or backing your need.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't enter into an argument between a partner and a bigwig otherwise you could be the proverbial goat.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Listen to the advice of a new contact concerning your job and then persevere in your own plodding, sure way.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Use good sense and don't overspend for amusement. Seek out amusements which are both fun and practical.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) A family tie and a partner are at odds, so keep them apart and avoid trouble at home and at business.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have work to do so don't run off on any tangents, otherwise you could get into trouble. Try to concentrate more.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Look for some recreation that will relieve financial tensions you are under, and later you can handle these much better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't try to force kin to do things as you wish now, but await a better time when they are more flexible.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A private worry could deter you from making headway in the outside world, if you permit.

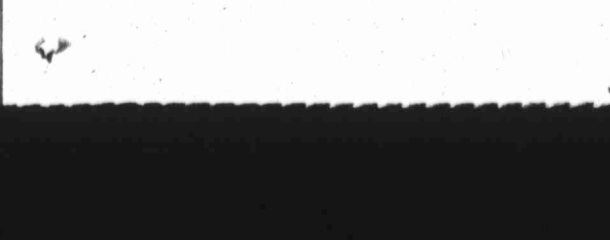

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be more concerned with a good pal than with monetary affairs today, and later you still have time for practical matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Avoid a higher-up in civic affairs and be sure to meet every rule and regulation that applies to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Go to advisors who are very talented instead of listening to what new contacts have to say who do not understand your position.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those clever children who will require a good education since there may be problematical matters occurring during the lifetime and he, or she, will then be well equipped to handle them.

Minister serves two churches

By RHONDA WITT
Church Editor

Loren Gardner serves as pastor of two community churches, Coahoma United Methodist Church and North Birdwell Lane United Methodist Church.

With two churches Gardner must be careful in managing time. Each Sunday morning, he preaches a sermon at both churches: North Birdwell Lane at 9:30 and Coahoma Methodist at 11 a.m.

"When I first came here it was frustrating, now I've become accustomed to it (his schedule). I'm learning to live with my schedule," he said.

Sunday evening services are split between the churches. The evenings he is not at the church in Coahoma, certified lay speakers substitutes for him. "With two churches you just have to have some cooperation."

Gardner began his ministry career 14 years ago. "I just felt the call of God in my life that I was to be in the pulpit preaching the ministry," he said. "I really fought with the struggle because of my age. But once I went with it, I never had any doubt where I was suppose to be," he said.

Gardner has several goals for

THE REV. LOREN GARDNER
...Methodist pastor

both churches. "Of course, we always want to increase our attendance. But my first goal is to lead my people into a deeper walk of spirituality," he said. "My second goal is to say to the people of the community that the church is here for them, regardless, of what they have done. The church is a hospital. "I'm basically interested in evangelism in that the church is here as a hospital. My job is to convey in some way that Jesus Christ is the answer to their problems."

"If we can maintain those two goals, we will have accomplished several little goals. We won't have to worry about financial goals."

Gardner's goal is to be a "more spiritual leader and person with study," he says. "All this is a growing aspect for me, because I can't always depend on the fellowship of other ministers because of their schedule."

"My second goal is to help my people to grow. I want to better myself to help my people better."

Gardner has a bachelor of arts degree in religion from McMurray College in Abilene. He also graduated from Perkins School of Technology in Dallas. Gardner likes to hunt and fish.

Gardner pastored in Euda$ Hermleigh, St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Colorado City and Dorn Chapel on Colorado City Lake, and the First United Church in Roby.

Gardner and wife Karen have three children, Chad, 20, Dawn, 18, and Trey, 13.

FRESH WATER FROM AN OLD WELL

"TAKE ME TO THE CROSS"

Officer Peter O'Hanlon was patrolling on night duty in northern England some years ago when he heard a quivering sob. Turning in the direction that it came from, he saw in the shadows a little boy sitting on a doorstep. With tears rolling down his cheeks, the child whimpered, "I'm lost. Take me home." The policeman began naming street after street, trying to help him remember where he lived. When that failed, he repeated names of the shops and hotels in the area, but all without success. Then he remembered that in the center of the city was a well-known church with a large white cross towering high above the surrounding landscape. He pointed to it and said, "Do you live anywhere near that?" The boy's face immediately brightened. "Yes, take me to the cross. I can find my way home from there!"

Like that familiar landmark, the cross of Christ directs lost souls to their eternal home in Glory. By taking Christ's avenue of grace, we find safety, and eternal shelter through faith in His name (John 3:15). The only way Home is to come to the cross! The cross is God's compass pointing the lost to heaven.

American Communists hold 23rd convention

Reagan blasted for press censorship

CLEVELAND (AP) — Communist Party USA leader Gus Hall criticized the Reagan administration Thursday for refusing to let reporters and guests from Soviet-bloc nations travel here for the party's 23rd convention.

"This is part of the Reagan administration policy and — for whatever reason in their mind — they didn't want the proceedings of our convention to be reported, especially in socialist countries," Hall said as the convention opened here Thursday.

The State Department, reacting to restrictions on U.S. journalists in the Soviet Union, refused permission for Soviet reporters based in New York to travel to Cleveland for the convention.

"It's not limited to Soviet reporters," Hall said. "There are other reporters, other delegations that the State Department just wouldn't give visas."

Members of the Communist Party of Palestine, Vietnam and Cuba were denied visas, the party general secretary said.

Mass media reporters and photographers covering the four-day convention faced some restrictions by the party. They were not permitted to cover a half-hour "executive session" at the start of the convention, and photographers were warned not to take pictures of the 500 delegates.

Standing before a banner with the message, "Build a mass party of action," Hall read a lengthy report outlining the party's philosophy and plans.

"Our party conventions are different in every way from the Democratic and Republican party conventions," Hall said. "The parties of monopoly capital come together at convention time to take care of the dirty business of big business."

"The party of the working class, the Communist Party, comes together every four years to take care of the business of the class struggle."

Hall criticized the U.S. military action in Grenada, calling it "cold-blooded and naked military aggression by U.S. imperialism."

"Because of this open, blatant aggression against Grenada, and Reagan's revealing admission that the United States reserves the right to invade militarily any country, any time it sees fit, there is no country in the world — but especially the smaller nations — who can any longer feel safe with the Reagan administration in the White House," the longtime Communist leader said.

The party will field a presidential ticket next year, he said.

Hall indicated that he and Angela Davis, a member of the party's Central Committee, would be willing to run as the party's presidential and vice presidential candidates, as they did in 1980.

Moscow gives warning over U.S. missile plan

MOSCOW (AP) — Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov issued a new warning to the United States today about deploying nuclear missiles in Western Europe and said the program "will lead to a very dangerous development" in international tensions.

Speaking at a gathering of generals and lower-ranking officers in Moscow, Ustinov insisted the Soviet Union has exhibited "consistent adherence to the cause of peace and the security of the peoples."

But, according to a summary of his remarks by the Tass news agency, Ustinov stressed the Kremlin's warning that the planned deployment of 572 U.S.-built Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe will prompt "countermeasures."

The Kremlin has said those measures will include installation of Soviet medium-range rockets in East Germany and Czechoslovakia as well as other, unspecified responses.

"The Soviet Union has warned the United States and its NATO allies on more than one occasion that the escalation of war preparations by them, particularly the deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, will lead to a very dangerous development of the situation," Ustinov said.

"The U.S.S.R. and other countries of the socialist community will be able adequately to counter any attempt to upset the existing military strategic balance, and its words will be matched by its deeds," he said.

Aussies march against U.S.

ALICE SPRINGS, Australia (AP) — More than 500 women and children, including several dozen aborigines, marched to a top secret U.S. reconnaissance base today to begin a two-week demonstration for nuclear disarmament.

The protesters, with banners with slogans such as "U.S. Bases-Out" and "Close the Gap," set up camp at the entrance to the base at Pine Gap, about 15 miles outside Alice Springs in the center of the country.

The government sent scores of police officers to Pine Gap to guard against any breach of security at the base, although there were just six police officers in sight when the protesters arrived.

Pine Gap is a communications and surveillance base under joint U.S.-Australian control. The protesters want all American bases in Australia closed.

"We do know it is a CIA installation," said protester Nancy Shelley. "That means it stands for surveillance, for spying and for distrust."

Aborigine leader Shirley Smith urged the protesters to remain peaceful. She said the march also was to back claims that the base is on land belonging to aborigines.
