Churches Ask Japanese Bill Be Altered

CONGRESS GOES AT MATTERS IN INCORRECT WAY

Federal Council Sends Letter to Solons Asking Revision

"SAVE SELF-RESPECT"

Immigration Law Menaces Good Will of Countries, Is Claim Made

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The Federal Council of Churches today asked the senate and house to reconsider the Japanese exclusion clause of the immigration bill and to join the executive department of the government in solving the problem "in a more satisfactory way."

"To sum up their opinion," said a statement issued by the council, "the churches believe that congress is meeting the situation in a wrong way and that the same result may be obtained in a friendly way that would not hurt the self-respect of Japan or interfere with the friendship that has long existed between the two nations."

Letter to Congressmen

In a letter sent every mmeber of congress, the council said, "The commission on international justice and good will of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America regards the proposed immigration law which threatens to strain the relations between the United States and Japan as unnecessary and as calculated to place our country in a false relation to a great and friendly neighbor.

"The Japanese government," it is said, "recognizes the problems which the United States faces in connection with the question of assimilation and economic competition of Japanese immigrants. But it asks that in place of legislation which if regards as aimed at Japan; a new arrangement be made through a conference wherein due consideration can be given to her national self-respect."

DIRECTOIRE GOWN APPEARS IN PARIS

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, April 20.—Easter Sunday racing at St. Cloud was marked by the reappearance of the directoire gown, by the initial success of Ogden Mills as an owner on the French turf and by the first winning mount in France in 1924 of Steve Donoghue, the English jockey who rode Papyrus in the United States in the race in which Papyrus was defeated by Zev. Donoghue is under contract to ride every Sunday in France during the season, and will commute from England by the aerial route.

The directoire model is along straight silhouette lines and probably will not prove popular with women who admit they are plump. The gown keeps the full pleated skirt down to the smallest proportions in order to harmonize with the straight blouse that accompanies it.

SHERIFF'S DEPUTIES MAKE BOOZE SEIZURE

One man was arrested and a gallon and a half of corn liquor seized late Saturday night when Deputy Sheriffs W. P. Belcher, Hawkins and McDonald and State Ranger W. W. Belcher found the man with the whiskey in his possession on Fillmore street. It was declared by the officers that he was making a delivery of liquor when he was arrested.

No charges have been filed as yet but he is being held in the county jail awaiting the filing of a formal complaint.

Gotham's Style Parade Ruined By Unkind Rain

One Eye on Sky and Other On Taxi Is Rule Along 5th Avenue Sunday

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 20.—A drizzle, a downpour of rain, a peek at the sun now and then, more rain and general indications of still more rain—that was Easter Sunday in New York.

Fifth avenue's fashion parade, an annual event, suffered accordingly. A few, whose optimism would not be daunted, sauntered forth in brilliant head-pieces and other what-nots of feminine apparel, while now and then a silk topper atop a gallant escort could be glimpsed through the misty air.

Eyrs On Taxi.

That ease and grace of manner supposed to accompany those who join in this annual promenade noticeably was lacking however. Rather the promenaders kept one eye on the ever changing skies and the other on the nearest taxi-cab. The crowds, that on Sunny Easter-fill the top decks of Fifth avenue busses, stuck to their apartments and those who did parade had few to watch them.

Despite the weather churches were well attended. At 7 o'clock this morning 7,000 persons crowded the campus of Columbia university for out door service held by the New York Federation of churches. When rain began to fall many went into St. Paul chapel for the remainder of the services, though many stayed on until Dr. M. L. Robinson, executive secretary of the New York Methodist society had finished his Easter message.

TERRITORY WOOLS ACTIVE IN WEEK

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, April 20.—Territorial wools were more active during the past week and the sale of a quarter of a million pounds of fine Montana wools was recorded at $1.40 per scoured pound on the Boston market, according to the co-operative state-federal market news service in its weekly wool summary. It continues:

"The wool market in general remained somewhat slow, but showed a development of a little more business in the closing days of the week. Prices seemed to be firming with the activity of manufacturers increasing and a fair clearance of both foreign and domestic lines.

"A draggy tone predominated in the goods market, and but slight tone improvement was registered with the progress of the week. An unusual feature of the trade was the activity of piece goods buyers who were in the market for spot merchandise. This is considered unusual at the present season and is due to some extent to curtailment of production by the manufacturers of men's wear.

CAROLINA ESTATE BECOMES SOCIAL CENTER AS VANDERBILT HEIRESS WEDS BRITISHER

The manor house on the Vanderbilt estate in North Carolina, and the bride and bridegroom, Cornelia Vanderbilt and the Hon. John F. A. Cecil.

The magnificent estate of the late George Washington Vanderbilt at Baltimore, in North Carolina, becomes the social center of the United States for the time being for the marriage of Miss Cornelia Vanderbilt, heiress to sixty millions of her father's estate, and the Hon. John F. A. Cecil, first secretary of the British embassy in Washington. This estate will be the future home of the couple. Cecil will quit the diplomatic service, and may become an American citizen.

ENGINE RUNS WILD; 4 DIE

B. & O. Locomotive At Chicago Goes On Wild Flight

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 20.—Four persons were killed, one seriously injured and one escaped unhurt early today when a Baltimore and Ohio railroad engine ran wild from the round house and crashed into an automobile more than a mile away. Railroad authorities could not give any reason for the sudden start of the engine. Police were told that two small boys were seen running away from the engine as it started to move.

Otto Bowlmark and wife, Olga, and their son, Irving, 10, and William Lindberg.

Enginemen said it was possible that escaping steam and vibration might have caused the throttle to jar open, and with the aid of a slight downgrade, to cause the engine to run wild.

AUTO BLOCKADE IN ARIZONA IS PUT ON AGAIN

By The Associated Press.

YUMA, Ariz., April 20.—The Arizona foot and mouth disease blockade on the Arizona-California state line was established again today. This disinfecting station was shut and on orders from the state quarantine office, automobile travelers are barred from entering this state from the west.

The situation here is as it was a week ago when eastbound automobiles began to pile up behind the blockade although reports from Knob Siding, fourteen miles west of the Colorado river, said no new arrivals had registered there.

Disinfecting and fumigating went on all day at Knob Siding.

GOTTON QUIET IN PAST WEEK

Shorts and Longs Content With Evening Up All Commitments

By The Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, April 20.—The cotton market was comparatively quiet during the last week although there were occasional spurts of activity and fairly wide fluctuations. For the most part both shorts and longs contented themselves with evening up commitments in advance of the rather protracted Easter holiday. Longs took advantage of ah bulges to liquidate, preferring to leave as few accounts open over the holidays as possible, while shorts covered for the same general reason.

No Speculation.

Although there existed no pressure to speculation in the market the trend was slowly downward, prices at the close showing a net loss of about eight five points for the week and a decline from the highest reached a little more than a week ago of nearly 200 points. The principal depressing influence was dullness in the cotton goods trade, buyers having been discouraged from continuing the show of activity noted a week ago by the reactionary tendency of the raw cotton market. There also was renewed talk of mill curtailment.

PINCHOT RILED AT CHARGES OF VARE

By The Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 20.—Governor Pinchot in a statement tonight declared the liquor question was the issue which prompted the announcement yesterday of Representative William S. Vare, Philadelphia political leader, that he would not support the governor for delegate-at-large to the republican convention.

The governor expressed resentment at what he termed Representative Vare's effort to drag in and hide behind President Coolidge whose nomination he said "nobody questions", at the same time, he added, "nobody questions that I was a loyal republican, will support him in the campaign."

CLAIM COOLIDGE VICTORY SURE

563 Delegates Already Elected For President Is Butler Claim

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Accomplished victory for President Coolidge in the campaign for the republican presidential nomination was claimed today by William M. Butler, the Coolidge manager, in a formal statement in which he said 563 delegates instructed or favorable to the president had already been elected, eight more than necessary for a choice.

In the list furnished by Mr. Butler as favorable to the Coolidge "either by instruction, by endorsement or by personal preference," were the New York delegations of 91 and others not bound down by mandatory orders but which he said preferred the nomination of the president.

According to Mr. Butler the "Coolidge delegates thus far chosen" are:

Colorado 15; Connecticutt 17; Florida 10; Idaho 11; Illinois 50; Iowa 29; Kansas 21 (two to be elected); Kentucky 26; Louisiana 13; Maine 15; Michigan 33; Minnesota 27; Mississippi 12; Missouri 12 (13 to be elected); Nebraska 19; New Hampshire 11; New Mexico 9; New York 91; North Carolina 19 (three to be elected); North Dakota 13; Oklahoma 18 (11 to be elected); Rhode Island 13; South Carolina 11; Tennessee 12 (15 to be elected); Virginia 17; Washington 17; Wisconsin 1; Hawaii 2; Philippines 2.

Coolidge Pleads For Forest Protection

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The hope that the American people will come to abhor fire in their woods just as much as they now abhor fire in their homes, was expressed by President Coolidge in a statement issued tonight on the eve of the beginning of forest protection week.

Tomorrow marks the beginning of forest protection week for 1924, the fourth annual observance of the national movement to stamp out forest fires in the United States," the president said. In the proclamation I issued designating April 21-27, inclusive as forest protection week, I stated that the most formidable agency of forest destruction is fire, and that of all forest fires reported each year, 80 per cent are the result of human carelessness.

SENATE DEMOS FAVORING CASH SOLDIER BONUS

Minority Report Differs From Plan Put Through By Republicans

CLAIM LESS COSTS

Way Now Clear for Passage Of Insurance Measure, Repubs Believe

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Senate democrats went on record for a cash and insurance bonus bill in a minority report of the finance committee made public by Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, although it was indicated on the floor yesterday the party would support the pending insurance bill "to insure enactment into law of a bonus measure."

The report declared such a plan would cost the government about one billion dollars less than the pending bill but if it failed to command support the minority members would vote for the committee measures. Six of the seven democrats of the committee signed it, Senator King, Utah, refusing because he is opposed to any bonus bill.

Way Is Cleared

Republican leaders today considered the way clear for passage early in the week of a straight insurance bill. Their assurance was based on statements of Senator Robinson, Arkansas, democratic leader, that the democrats feared the republicans would vote to sustain a veto by President Coolidge of a cash and insurance measure. Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, and other republican leaders said they would vote to override a presidential veto of the straight insurance plan.

The democratic plan would allow a choice of full cash payment of a 20 year endowment insurance policy whereas the committee measure would provide for the insurance policies with cash payments only to those veterans not entitled to more than fifty dollars in adjusted service compensation. Both measures would allow compensation on the same basis, $1 a day for home service and $1.25 a day for overseas service exclusive of the first sixty days.

Issue More Bonds

Funds for payments under the democratic proposal would be obtained the report explained, through issuance of $1,500,000,000 additional bonds under the Second Liberty Loan act. Support of the American Legion was given yesterday to the straight insurance proposition. Commander Quinn declaring in a message to senators to the democratic substitute would endanger enactment of any bills since it would not be passed over a presidential veto. The declaration was based on a careful poll of the senate, Commander Quinn said.

6,000 Turn Out Here Sunday For Easter Services

Churches Enjoy Big Day With Special Programs, Music

Special Easter services and ideal weather conditions combined Sunday to break all attendance records at Wichita Falls Sunday school sessions.

Various pastors who were questioned last night as to their attendance figures stated that there was little doubt as to yesterday being a banner day in this respect; figures compiled from reports of the larger churches showed that nearly 6,000 were at Sunday school classes and this total would probably be swelled considerably if accurate records from the smaller outlying churches could be obtained.

Church services, too, also drew capacity crowds both morning and afternoon.

1,838 at M. E.

All past attendance records were shattered for the second time in two weeks when 1,838 gathered at the First Methodist church for the special Easter program there. This number is 106 in excess of the church's own record of two weeks ago when 1,706 were present.

Both figures are said to represent the largest number ever attending Sunday school services in a Wichita Falls church.

The First Baptist church came second in yesterday's attendance reports, 1,360 being tallied there. The Floral Heights Methodist church showed 760 present, the First Christian church, 701; the First Presbyterian church 543; the Lamar Avenue Baptist church, 350 and the Grace Methodist church, 300.

These figures represent record attendances in almost every instance, the unusually fine weather and the special Easter programs combining to bring out the unusual numbers. Figures for the Church of the Good Shepherd (Episcopal) were not available last night, the Lenten offering, however, being $704 for approximately 100 members of the Sunday school according to Rev. F. T. Dalton, rector.

MAKING REPAIRS ON ARMY PLANES

By The Associated Press.

DUTCH HARBOR, Unalaska Island, April 20.—Minor repairs were being made here today to the United States army airplanes, Chicago, New Orleans and Boston which arrived at 5:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Chignik, Alaska, on their flight around the world. The air cruisers will remain here several days, awaiting the arrival of Major Frederick L. Martin, flight commander, who was forced down at Cape Igvak Tuesday. Major Martin is installing a new engine in his plane, the Seattle, at Kanatak, Portage Bay.

CONGRESS FACES BUSY WEEK WITH VARIED PROGRAM

Bonus, Tax Cut, Prohibition And Appropriations Up For Consideration

INVESTIGATIONS LAG

Senate Oil Committee To Be Idle Until Middle Of Week; Others Go

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20. Congress this week, aside from the multiplicity of investigations, which have engaged its attention, faces the question of a soldier's bonus, the tax reduction bill, prohibition, Muscle Shoals and a varity of appropriation and miscellaneous measures.

The senate's oil committee will be in recess until Wednesday but the Daugherty and Wheeler investigators have bearings scheduled for Monday and the house shipping board inquiry will go ahead. It is probable that if Chairman Borah decides to resume bearings in the investigation of the indictment of Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, the Daugherty committee will mark time, owing to the fact that the Montana senator, who has been acting as its prosecuter, will find it necessary to attend the meetings of the committee looking into his own case.

Will Push Bonus.

It is expected that the senate will push the bonus bill through in time. Democrats who have expressed a preference for a cash option in the measure, also have announced that they would not court a presidential veto by insisting on their plan. When this measure is out of the way the tax bill must be acted on, and a number of appropriation bills, including that of the navy, are due for consideration.

Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, has pending his move to discharge the committee which has been investigating the internal revenue bureau. Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, chairman of the committee who was to have paid the retainer of Francis J. Heney, of California, as committee counsel, is ill in a Baltimore hospital and Senator Watson so far has refrained from pressing his motion.

Muscle Shoals Up.

Muscle Shoals will occupy the senate agricultural committee which has before it a number of bids for the property, including that of Henry Ford, which has been approved by the house. Senators favoring the Ford bill have demanded action by the committee on the threat of moving that the question be brought to the open floor.

If the Daugherty committee goes ahead it probably will take up the long-heralded inquiry into anti-trust law prosecutions. Another problem with which its membership has been struggling in preparation of its contemplation against M. S. Daugherty, brother of the former attorney general, action on which has been deferred several times. Difficulty has been encountered by the committee in making its presentation because the vote called for a direct use by the senate of power to punish recalcitrant witnesses and not for a submission of the case to the criminal courts as was done by the oil committee in its controversy with Harry F. Sinclair.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 21.—A woman believed to be Brooklyn's bobbed haired bandit, and a man who said he was her husband, were arrested here at 1 o'clock this morning by New York detectives. The woman gave her name as Cecilia Cooney, aged 21, and the man was booked as Edward Cooney, 25.

The officers, F. C. Gray, and William G. Casey, said they were confronted by an automatic pistol in the hands of the woman and two revolvers held by the man when they broke down the door in a rooming house in which the couple was staying.

Neff Still On Firing Line and Fighting For Free-Rein Delegates

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

"What has Neff up his sleeve?" his critics ask. It is a question also asked by the politicians who believe in the old system of doing things. His answer is direct. In all his speeches he tells the people that he is not a candidate for office or an applicant for any position in the gift of the people of Texas. He tells them that it is a greater honor to be governor of Texas, his native state, the second highest office in the world, and because he owes the people a debt of gratitude he is asking them to vote down instructions for all candidates mentioned in connection with the democratic presidential nomination.

First, he declares, Underwood never has been in accord with the democrats of Texas on prohibition and voted against both the Eighteenth and Nineteenth amendments. He does not assail the personal integrity of Underwood.

Second, because McAdoo as a lawyer involved himself in the oil scandal by admitting that he had been an attorney for Doheny and before this had been an attorney for an Ohio steel company in 1919 and had received a fee of $150,000 in an income tax reduction case.

Governor Neff says as a lawyer McAdoo was within his rights, perhaps, when he accepted these rich fees but their acceptance in view of present conditions made him unavailable as the democratic standard bearer. He regards the second count as the most damaging to McAdoo for the reason that the treasury employees who lopped off $2,000,000 for the steel company were former associates of McAdoo while he was holding the office of secretary of the treasury.

Neff has pounded this into his audiences wherever he has appeared and he says that he is going to pound it into the people until the night of May 2. His friends, the enemy, the campaign leaders for McAdoo, are not asleep. Tom Love is directing the campaign and he is admittedly one of the best gumshoe politicians that ever came from Missouri. Cato Sells is another gumshoe politician of renown who received his training in Missouri.

Love never hunts ducks with a brass band. He uses the phone. He knows the game of practical politics. He held office in Missouri before he came to Texas. Sells held office in Missouri before he came to Texas. Marshall Hicks is on the job. He is as keen as any. He broke with Neff because Neff would not give his support to McAdoo after the fee disclosures were make.

Cleburne was the former home of Sells. Neff opened his campaign there. A state committeeman and a mayor-elect, all the local newspaper men and many leading democrats of Johnson county welcomed Neff and applauded him. This, after a salute of 17 guns had been fired. This powder salute is the new thing in Texas. At Weatherford, the soldier boys fired a salute in honor of Neff and then the local bands played.

Young Men Out.

It was at Weatherford that a mayor-elect, an ambitious young democrat, introduced Neff. It is remarkable the number of young men who are attending the Neff meetings. It is remarkable the number of women who are attending the meetings. Neff and his friends say this means the gouz out of the old system and the old politicians in Texas and the coming of men and who more clearly represent the democratic ideals of Texas and the new civilization which came in when the old one was shot to pieces on Flander's field.

Leading democrats of Fort Worth attended the Weatherford meeting and

Expect to Sell Clay County Road Bonds Tuesday; Work to Be Started

Special to The Record News.

HENRIETTA, April 20.—Having gone through all the formality of advertising for bids, the Clay county commissioners' court is expected to effect a sale tomorrow of the $375,000 issue of road improvement bonds voted by Road District No. 2 more than a year ago; everything is in readiness to immediately begin the job of actually constructing the 34-mile ribbon of concrete through Clay county along the Fort Worth and Denver railroad from the Montague county line on the east to connect with the concrete highway of Wichita county on the west.

The main highway to be built with the money obtained from the sale of the bonds, which will be augmented by allotments of state and federal aid, is a part of the Colorado-Gulf and Meridian highways; this improvement will bridge one of the last gaps in a connected system of hard surfaced roads which will soon extend from Colorado to Galveston.

J. M. Isbell, who was in charge of the engineering work on the Wichita county concrete road work has been employed as engineer on the Clay county road work and some preliminary work has already been done, it is understood.

In addition to the concrete road, lateral roads surfaced with gravel will be built north and south from Henrietta, Bellevue and Jolly.

Coolidge Address Before A. P. Is Eagerly Awaited

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—President Coolidge enjoyed an Easter Sunday of complete rest, having finished late yesterday the task which has occupied him for several days—the preparation of the address he will deliver Tuesday in New York at the annual luncheon of The Associated Press.

The chief executive and Mrs. Coolidge attended Easter services at their regular place of worship, the First Congregational church. In the course of the services, the secretary of the navy and Mrs. Wilbur were admitted to membership by letter from their former church in California and announcement was made that Secretary Wilbur had been elected a deacon.

Instead of joining in the usual Easter afternoon parade the president and Mrs. Coolidge took another Sunday afternoon cruise on the Mayflower, accompanied by a small party of friends including Frank W. Stearns and the White House Easter guests, Mrs. William M. Butler and daughters, the Misses Mary and Beatrice of Boston.

Advisers of the president regarded his forthcoming New York address as one of his most important, comparable with his annual message to congress and his Lincoln Day speech before the National Republican club. He spent considerable time in writing it and conferred several times with Secretary Hughes.

The president will be accompanied to New York by Mrs. Coolidge, Frank W. Stearns, F. Bascom Slemp, his secretary; Edward T. Clark, his personal secretary, and Lieutenant Commander Joel T. Boone, his physician. The party will leave the capital late tomorrow night and the chief executive will spend Tuesday afternoon at his hotel. After speaking at the Associated Press luncheon at 1 o'clock he will leave for Washington.

HOYT DELIVERS EASTER SERMON

Speaks On Resurrection At Sunday Morning Service

The story of the resurrection and of Christ's promise of everlasting life to the world was told Sunday by Rev. Hoyt, pastor of the Sacred Heart church in his Easter sermon to a large congregation. His talk was as follows:

Brethren we are standing before the empty grave of our Savior. The grave where they laid Jesus after they had slain Him was sealed with the seal of the king and before it was placed a guard of Roman soldiers to make sure that the friends of Jesus might not come and carry Him away and report that He had risen.

All the devices of the enemies of Jesus merely help to advertise the great works of Jesus and to remove all possible doubt of His divinity and His bodily resurrection. The enemies of Jesus were jubilant when they had Him on the cross but their joys soon turned into worries when they see the signs and wonders that accompanied the death of Jesus, and while they remember none of the sayings of Jesus for their salvation, they well recall that He foretold that like Jonas He would come forth out of the grave after three days, and in order to forestall this they fall on the idea of frustrating this by the seal and the guard. Now they once more breath freely and rejoice, but again their joy soon turns into sorrow, when these guards report to them what had taken place at the grave early Sunday morning, and a third time they hit on a plan how to triumph over the hated one. They bribe the guards so the evangelists tell us, they bribe the guards to say that while they were asleep "His disciples came and carried Him away." This wise plan gives them peace of mind for a few moments when they once more realize how silly is their argument. How can Roman soldiers admit that they slept on the job and how can they testify what was done while they were asleep?

Folly To Oppose Him.

It is folly, my dear friends, to strive against God. For "there is no wisdom, nor understanding, nor counsel, against the Lord." Prov. 21, 30. And as little as the sons of unbelief could hinder Jesus our model from coming forth out of the grave so little can they by their arguments keep us from rising again from the dead, for "we shall all, indeed, rise again." 1 Cor. 15, 51.

As soon as we die, our soul stands before God and is judged. And this judgment is irrevocable; it decides the fate of the soul for all eternity, the body, the house of the soul, has become cold and useless, it is reverently laid beneath the sod to crumble into dust and mingle with the earth which sustained it during life and from which it was originally taken. But body shall not always remain in the grave. The earth which after all is nothing but a huge cemetery, must give back its dead.

After the total destruction of earth and sky, at the end of time and the universal conflagration, "The hour will come wherein all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that have done good things shall come forth unto the resurrection of life; but they that have done evil unto the resurrection of judgment." John 5, 28-29. The trumpet of the angel of the Lord shall ring out in shrillest tones over the land and sea to announce the day of resurrection. Then, as St. Paul assures us, "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet, the dead shall rise again." 1 Cor. 15, 52. They shall rise from every country and nation, from beds of rivers and depths of oceans, from marble tombs and neglected graves, from sandy deserts and everglades, from battlefields and cathedral vaults, and they all shall hasten to the valley of Josephat to stand in judgment.

Shall All Rise.

"We shall all, indeed, rise again, but we shall not all me changed." St. Paul 1, Cor. 15, 51. That is to say our bodies will not all be transfigured and glorious. There will be a vast difference in appearance between those that come back to life. The good will rise in glorified bodies, without a trace of sickness, deformity or decrepitude; like unto the risen body of Christ, shining as the sun, swift as thought, beautiful beyond human expression. The wicked souls on the other hand shall be forced to enter their hideous and deformed bodies, black as night, ugly as demons and terrible as hell.

We shall rise in our own bodies not in those of others, nor in bodies different in substance from those we have now during our mortal lives. Wherefore the prophet of old said: "I know that my redeemer liveth, and in the last day I shall rise out of the earth, and I shall be clothed again with my skin, and in my flesh I shall see my God, whom I myself shall see, and in my eyes shall behold, and not another." Jos. 19, 25 27.

How is it possible, infidels ask, to rejoin the scattered elements and to collect the ashes of our bodies? Do you ask how God can find the different parts of which the bodies were composed after they have been scattered to the wind and carried to the ends of the world in the rivers and waters? Then tell me how God made these bodies and I will tell you how He will collect the parts at the end of the world. Almighty God, who made all things out of nothing, knows where the different parts of our corrupted bodies are, and it will be just as easy for Him to reconstruct them as it was for Him to create them. The holy spirit seems to answer all the objections of those who doubt the divine power in the book of Ezechiel, chapter 37. The prophet was carried in spirit on a boundless plain, which he saw covered with innumerable and exceedingly dry bones. The Lord asked him to command these bones to arise. Ezechiel spoke in the name of God when a marvelous sight presented itself. The dead bones began to move with a horrible clatter; they came together each one to his joint; the sinews and nerves grew on them; the flesh and skin were stretched over them, and now the spirit breathed on them; they sprang up making a great noise, and in a moment the vast plain was swarming with living bodies, an exceedingly great army. "Thus the Almighty will bring back to life all the bodies that ever lived and died upon the earth."

Doctrine Essential.

The doctrine of the resurrection of the body is an essential part of Christianity. "If there be no resurrection of the dead then Christ is not and your faith is also vain," 1 Cor. risen again, and if Christ is not risen, then our preaching is vain, 15, 13. But now we know that Christ is risen, therefore there is a resurrection of the dead.

The justice of God demands that the body rise again. The body has been a faithful instrument of the soul in praising and serving God, and therefore it would be unjust if it were deprived of its share of the reward and glory. "Future reward is the cause of future resurrection," says Tertullian. On the other hand the body that has led the soul into sin and for whose sake the soul departed from the narrow path, deserves to rise again to help the soul expiate in the dungeon of hell or at least in purgatory. The body that has dragged the soul into the mire of sin, and has thus disfigured and besmeared the image of God, should share the soul's punishment. The eyes that gloated on sinful objects; the ears that were open to uncharitable and Godless words; the tongue that abused God's holy name; the hands that worked iniquity; the feet that walked on sinful paths, the heart that loved unholy things; all the members of the body wherewith the soul has sinned must have their just and due punishment on the day of retribution. We must rise in our bodies, as the apostle declares, "that every one may receive the proper things of the body, according as he has done, whether it be good or evil," 11 Cor. 5, 10.

The fact that my body will not remain in the grave, but will rise again to share the life of my soul gives me a greater respect for my body and teaches me how to use my body so that both body and soul may live happily together in the land of promise. It teaches me that my superior self, my soul, must not be the slave of the lowly inclinations of this house of clay, but that my soul must bring my body into subjection for its and my own good when it wants to enslave my spirit. I must not do like the worldlings who make an idol of their body to the neglect of their souls. I must be to my body what a loving father is to his children; when he punishes them for their own good.

Body Will Rise.

Your body will rise out of the earth on the last day. This truth should show you how to live and how to use your body. "If you live according to the flesh, you shall die, but if by the spirit of you mortify the deeds of the flesh you shall live." Rom. 8, 13. If you live according to the sinful inclinations of the body, you shall be dead to grace and eternal happiness and your body will be the evil companion of a cursed soul on the last day and forever afterwards; but if your soul, in the light and strength of God, now rules your body, keeps it in subjection, and suppresses its vicious tendencies, then your body will rise to glorious and never fading life. Therefore treat your body as the temple of the Holy Ghost; keep it pure and undefiled. Its present actions decide its future condition. "For what things a man shall sow those also shall he reap. For he that soweth in his flesh, of the flesh also shall reap corruption. But he that soweth in the spirit, of the spirit shall reap life everlasting. And in doing good let us not fail. For in due time we shall reap, not failing. Therefore whilst we have time, let us work good to all men." Gal. 6, 8-10.

Everything In Readiness For Burnett Rodeo

Out on the bald prairie where there are 27,000 acres over which the cowboys and wild stock may romp, Tom L. Burnett, wealthy rancher, has built a mammoth arena with a seating capacity of 10,000 people and has announced that his second annual Triangle ranch rodeo is ready for the opening with the big free barbecue Thursday noon. It will continue each afternoon, closing with grand finale of the various contests Sunday afternoon, at which time will be announced the winners of the $6,000 in cash prizes which he has hung up for the best riders, ropers, bulldoggers and other participants and events.

From the ranges of the west cowboys and cowgirls are trooping in. Those who have enough confidence in their ability to beat others in a grueling contest have paid their own expenses and an entrance fee for a chance at the big purses.

The vendors of pink lemonade, hamburgers and soda pop have staked their claims and have erected their stands and are ready for business. The dance hall is being finished, great corrals of wild stock are ready to test the mettle of the best riders and fastest bulldoggers, while here and there ride this or that cowboy or cowgirl, getting their trick riding mounts or their roping ponies accustomed to the arena and preparing for the speedy action that they must have in order to win.

A carnival company is also erecting its tents and riding devices. The great stadium, erected seven miles from the nearest city and which would with all the well laid plans of the producer, fall dismally were it not for the excellent roads of this section and the fact that the populace of the southwest knows and likes the class of rodeo performance which Tom L. Burnett always produces, is ready and waiting.

Lays Blame For Stolen Affections on Lack of Effort

Poor, Thoughtful, Unselfish Mary Means to Be a Blessing, but She Is Really a Bad Influence on the Neighborhood Spongers—She Is an Easy Mark for Them.

Next to being a perfect devil, the greatest mistake you can make is to be a perfect angel, especially if you happen to belong to the female sex.

You know what I mean—the kind of a woman whom we all hold up as an ideal, and trample on as if she was a doormat. The sweet, amiable, kindly, generous woman, who is the goat of all her trafting family.

I know one of these angel women and I never know whether to go down on my knees before her and do reverence to her superhuman unselfishness and patience, or to bat her over the head for being such a fool as to let a lot of selfish relatives and friends work her to death.

Mary is married to a poor man, and she has to do all of her housework and make her own and her children's clothes. Plenty of work for one woman, Heaven knows; but because she is clever with her needle she has to run a free millinery and dressmaking parlor for all the women she knows, who are too lazy to do their own sewing and too stingy to hire it done.

"O Mary, you make such beautiful children's clothes, I wonder if you wouldn't make little Janie's dress for her birthday party." "O Mary, you do such exquisite embroidery, won't you do a little hand work on my new blue crepe, just on the sleeves and the neck, and the ends of the sash, and a nice large motif on the front panel, and perhaps a little on the hem." "O Mary, they wanted to charge me $25 for a hat down town, so I just bought the materials and thought I would get you to trim one for me," etc., etc.

And poor, silly, Angel Mary sits up until 12 o'clock at night making her neighbors' dresses and trimming their hats, and wears herself to skin and bones toiling for people who have a secret contempt for her because she hasn't enough sense to look out for herself.

Mary has a houseful of little children of her own. You would think that anybody would appreciate that she had her hands full keeping her own healthy, restless youngsters amused and out of mischief, and full of bread and jam, and from fighting among themselves.

As a matter of fact, Mary's nerves get just as much frazzled with childish shrieks and yells as any other woman's, and she gets just as tired of cutting bread and butter, and cleaning up after children as any one else does; but nevertheless, she runs a free day nursery for the community in which she lives.

Every mother who wants to go on a shopping orgy, or to go to a bridge game, or the matinee, or to a party at night, comes and dumps her children down on Mary. Whenever Sister Sue or Cousin Janie or Sister-in-law Maud want to go off on a nice trip with their husbands, they just bring their offspring and leave them with dear Mary for two or three weeks, or a month or so, while they are off enjoying themselves.

And they feel they have made ample return when they bring Mary a pocket handkerchief or a celluloid Souvenir de Paris, and Mary, poor simp, permits herself to be martyrized instead of telling them to stay at home and take care of their own brats, and that she has enough troubles of her own.

Mary and her husband are working and saving trying to get a head a little, but they don't make as much headway as they should because their hungry relatives descend upon them like a flock of locusts and literally eat them out of house and home. All of their friends and family who wish to take a cheap vacation, or want to have an operation performed, or go to the dentist's, or to come to town and study something, just invite themselves to pay dear Mary a nice long visit. Mary is so hospitable, and it costs so much less to sponge than it does to pay a board bill.

So Mary runs a free hotel, and does without a new dress because the grocery bill is so high when you have company, and works herself to death cooking and waiting on people who are ten times more able to support themselves than she is to support them.

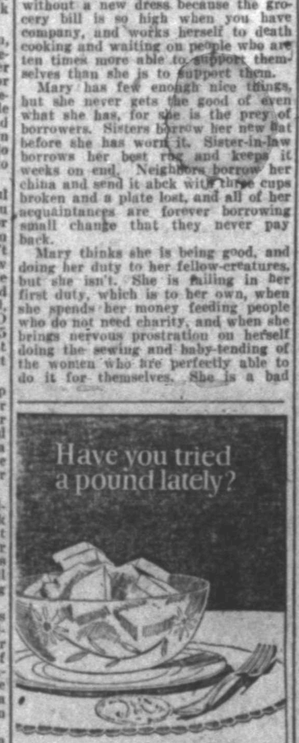

Mary has few enough nice things, but she never gets the good of even what she has, for she is the prey of borrowers. Sisters borrow her new hat before she has worn it. Sister-in-law borrows her best rug and keeps it weeks on end. Neighbors borrow her china and send it back with three cups broken and a plate lost, and all of her acquaintances are forever borrowing small change that they never pay back.

Mary thinks she is being good, and doing her duty to her fellow-creatures, but she isn't. She is failing in her first duty, which is to her own, when she spends her money feeding people who do not need charity, and when she brings nervous prostration on herself doing the sewing and baby-tending of the women who are perfectly able to do it for themselves. She is a bad influence, a demoralizing influence, because she encourages dishonesty and grafting in others instead of making them self-respecting, independent individuals who stand on their own feet.

Mary should reform. She should cease being an easy mark. She should serve notice on all, and sundry, that henceforth she is going to be a hard-boiled egg instead of a nanny, and she will be surprised to find how much more people will respect her and how much more they appreciate what she does for them. M. E. CHURCHES CLOSE REVIVAL

First and Floral Heights Enjoy Most Successful Campaign Here

The two weeks evangelistic campaign which has been under way at the First Methodist church and the Floral Heights Methodist church since April 6 was brought to a close at both churches last night when Bishop Hiram A. Boaz and Dr. Charles C. Selecman preached to two of the largest crowds of the meetings. The services Sunday, according to pastors of the two churches, drew some of the largest crowds the buildings have ever been called upon to take care of; a great many were turned away from both the noon and the evening meetings.

The campaign has been one of the most successful in the history of Methodism in Wichita Falls it is said, approximately 325 additions to the two churches directly resulting from the services.

200 New Members.

Reverend C. N. Simpson, pastor of the First Methodist church, stated last night that he had received approximately 200 new members into his church yesterday, 80 of that number being baptized. This will bring the total additions for the past six months of the church to nearly 400, approximately a hundred in excess of the goal set by the conference at the beginning of the year.

Reverend S. A. Barnes, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church declared following the services last night that the campaign had been most successful, 125 new members having been received into the church.

The regular quarterly conference of the First Methodist church will be held this evening, it is announced, and a formal report of the results of the campaign will be made there.

Color Cut-Outs

Henry, the Spy.

When Henry Robinson was a very tiny boy, people used to tell all sorts of secrets in front of him, because, as they'd say, "Henry is too little to know what we're talking about." When Henry got bigger, he learned that if you don't pay any attention to people when they talk, they just think you don't know what it's all about.

One day Betty Cut-out and Alice Cut-up and some other girls were whispering in a corner. "Say, Henry," said Billy, "you go over there and find out what the secret is."

Henry wandered over and when Alice cried, "Make Henry go away!" Betty replied, "Oh, he's too little to know what we're talking about!" Then after Henry had listened with both his ears awhile, he ran back to Billy and repeated the words he had heard: "May Fete, costumes, May Queen!"

Sly little Henry has red hair. Color his sweater blue.

Creators of THE NEBBS Offer $150 Watch for Best Name for Comic Water

Sol Hess and C. Carlson, the creators of "The Nebbs," the popular comic strip now appearing in this paper, announce that they will give away a $150 watch to the man, woman or child who submits the best name for the strange, healing water that Rudy Nebb found on his "estate."

The contest is open to anyone that cares to enter, and Messrs. Hess and Carlson positively guarantee that they will personally inspect every suggestion, and announce the name of the winner as soon after May 1st, when the contest closes, as they are able. One person may send in as many names, as he or she wants, but none received after May first, will be considered.

This is not a contest to establish a name for any particular brand of water on the market, neither is it an advertising scheme for any tangible product—it is simply an idea of the artists' to obtain a crackerjack cognomen for Rudy Nebb's and Otis Slider's pet financial idea.

Just send in your name to Rudy Nebb, in care of this paper—and we'll see that it reaches either Hess or Carlson. For your vencenience it might be a good idea to fill out the enclosed blank or one like it.

Abstract of Title

A Very Much Misunderstood Document.

Many purchasers of real estate are under the impression that when they receive a deed with the abstract of title that the title to the property is perfectly established, and that having an abstract makes the title good. This is a mistake. An abstract of title is nothing more nor less than a copy of, or an extract from the records, showing the history such real estate. By this is meant the various transactions in which this particular piece of real estate has figured. It may show a perfectly good title or it may show, on the other hand, that the title is not good, and its purpose therefore, is to secure the record or history of said real estate in a short and concise form for the purpose of examination.

General Appearance

One common form starts with the heading describing the land abstracted. Then, beginning with the grant from the United States which includes the premises abstracted, sections follow which show in chronological order each transfer of said property from one person to another, or by deed, will, court procedure or other mode of conveyance. Each section is devoted to one particular transfer an sets out the important and essential points of the deed or other instrument or instruments by which the property is conveyed.

If any defects in the instrument of conveyance exist or any such instruments are missing, such facts must be clearly set forth in the abstract.

Following the deeds and other instruments of conveyance are usually sections devoted to recorded mortgages that have been placed against said property and reciting whether such mortgages have been satisfied and canceled.

Leases are next covered—showing whether they have expired, been canceled or are still in force and effect, or if there have been no leases, a recitation to that effect.

Sections are then devoted to showing the mechanic's liens, pending suits, living judgments and foreign executions, if any, giving details in each case which would enable a person examining the abstract to determine whether they are now, or may become at a later date, liens on the premises or property.

Taxes and such assessments then are shown, followed by the certificate of the abstracter that he has examined the official records in the county and that the abstract shows every instrument of record affecting the title to said premises or property as shown in the indexes in the various county offices. It does not show instruments not of record, nor is it, on the other hand, an opinion of the title.

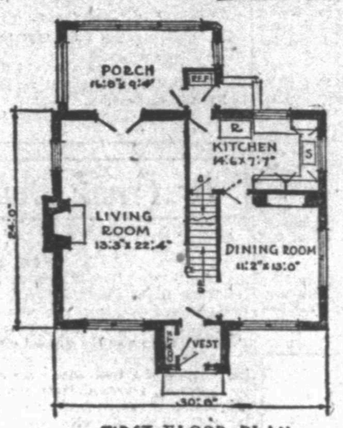

From the foregoing short description of an abstrac and its purpose, it will be readily seen that in all cases an abstract should be made by someone who is thoroughly familiar with the laws of conveyancing and the transferring the title and real estate. He should also be familiar with the methods of recording and indexing the various instruments of conveyance, etc., in order that all instruments may be readily found, if on record, and any defects of the instruments properly noted.

It will be readily understood that it is of exertme importance that all conveyances or other instruments pertaining to real estate are properly drawn and recorded, and that finally it is of absolute necessity to have your abstract thoroughly examined to make sure that your title is clear so that you will have no trouble in case you wish to sell.

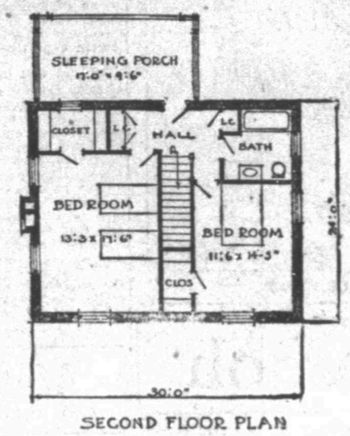

THE SHALFORD

Colonial House With Large, Comfortable Rooms,

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

Colonial style houses, such as the one shown here, because of their classic character and historic association, call for as much air space about them as possible. The width of this house is 31 feet and could be placed on a 40-foot lot although a wider lot is preferable. As designed, it should face south or east.

To provide generous space in all rooms has been the main idea of the architect of the Shalford. Even the vestibule is roomy and has a good coat closet. It serves also in keeping the open arrangement of the front rooms well protected from draughts. An open hall with wide stairway is practically a part of the unusually large living room, well lighted and with a charming designed fireplace.

Double French doors give access to the sun porch, from which there is an exit through the rear entry. The entry accommodates the refrigerator and easy passage to the kitchen allows using the sun porch for breakfast or tea. Considerable thought has been given toward making the kitchen a pleasant place for work the year around. A builtin buffet is a feature of the dining room.

On the second floor one can judge that the sleeping quarters are of ample size by the fact that but two bedrooms are provided. Closets are equally spacious. There are two linen closets in the hall where a door opens onto the sleeping porch. The plan of the bath is all that could be desired. Where an additional bedroom is wanted, the larger of the two rooms could easily be divided.

Colonial details can be most successfully executed in the modern type of concrete block construction. Good texture and warm bufftinted Portland cement stucco harmonize well with either red or green concrete-tile roof. Such construction reduces insurance and exterior upkeep costs and makes the home entirely fire-safe.

The Value Of Paint

Citing Some of the Reasons Why Paint Increases the Value of Your Property

It is surprising how prevalent the idea is that paint is merely applied for the sake of looks. Therefore, many persons have come to regard paint as more or less of a matter of artistic expression and have relegated it to the realm of luxury.

Exposed wood quickly deteriorates. Prolonged neglect will mean a repair bill. Paint is by far cheaper than repairs.

Paint has a curious effect. Many an architectural eyesore has been entirely changed within the space of a few days and has become an asset instead of a liability to the community and its owner. On the other hand many an architectural masterpiece has been ruined beyond hope of repair by the lack of paint used at the right time.

Painting serves three very fundamental purposes. It protects the woodwork, it adds cash value to the home and lot, making the home an asset to the community, and it establishes a firmer credit rating for your home.

Any banker will tell you that well-painted buildings are an indication of thrift. Appearances in many cases may make or break the business transaction.

Selecting the Paint

This is a point to which you should give careful consideration. The paint should not crack, blister or peel. If, after painting the surface is not in good condition for repainting, then you can rest assured that good paint was not used and was possibly incorrectly applied. It is much cheaper to paint well-cured, dry lumber than it is to paint weather-beaten, exposed lumber. In painting your home be sure that the painter covers up all knots with a coat of shellac, applied immediately before painting. Do not allow painting to be done in damp, cold weather. The wood surfaces should all be cleaned and thoroughly dry. Do not allow the exterior painting to be applied until after the plastering on the inside walls has had ample time to dry.

Bath Insurance

Of the many forms of insurance, Bath-a-Day Insurance is, perhaps as valuable as any.

The person who gets the daily bath habit is insuring himself in favor of his most priceless possession—his health.

What good is accident insurance if you are always feeling like "the morning after?"

What good is fire insurance if you have no pep and don't care what happens?

What good is theft insurance if you are robbing yourself of life and the joy of being alive and well?

Bath insurance is cheap. It costs but little in time and effort. The premium is not high—merely a determination to make yourself feel better and better day by day.

A bathtub, a shower warm and cold water, a rough towel, that's all bath insurance costs.

Bathing is a habit, just like exercise is a habit.

The man who bathes daily is exercising the pores of his body. Keeping the pores open helps to keep the brain alert.

If you haven't a good bathroom you are missing something. You are missing the returns which come to you through bath insurance.

You appreciate the beauty of the open fields, the dark forests the sunset, the still night. Why not appreciate the wonder of running water on the body? It is nature's tonic—nature's insurance against ill health.

No one can sell you bath insurance but yourself.

You are your own agent. The sooner you give yourself sound sales argument, the better. If you are hard to convince, take a trial bit of insurance. Take a daily shower for a period of two weeks. If not satisfied, give the idea up.

But, it is safe to say, that once tried, the bath insurance will become one of the most important policies in your home. Try it and see.

THAT TRADE TRIP.

Preparations for the first spring trade trip are now complete, according to an announcement by the chamber of commerce. The special train, which will carry the boosters into a territory which has never been visited by trade trippers before now, will leave Wichita Falls early Tuesday morning and will return to this city Wednesday night.

The towns to be visited are: Chillicothe, Margaret, Crowell, Truscott, Benjamin, Knox City, Rochester, Rule, Sagerton, Stamford, Haskell, Weinert, Munday, Goree, Bomarton, Megargel, Olney, Archer City, and return to Wichita Falls.

The total mileage covered will be 310 miles.

The particular good which will come from this trip, is not so much in the amount of business that will come to Wichita Falls as a result of it, but the friendly relations which will spring up because of the personal contact between the business men of this city and the people of the towns which will be visited. Wichita Falls never has taken a money-grabbing viewpoint from its trade trips, but has operated more on the theory that what is most needed is a friendly relation between the towns in our surrounding territory and Wichita Falls. And it is pleasing to note that these relations are improving with each passing year.

As a result of such trips, the many conventions which have been held here within the past two years, and the Texas-Oklahoma Fair, Wichita Falls is gaining an enviable reputation and standing among her neighbors.

Wichita Falls realizes that it can not become a great city without the co-operation and help of the towns in its territory; that cities do not just grow, but must have a reason for development, and that the prime reason is the territory which surrounds the community which is chosen as a leader in the march of progress.

It is with this in mind that the business men of Wichita Falls are going forth to extend the glad hand to their neighbors.

STORY OF SOL BLOOM.

Congressman Sol Bloom of New York is a democrat and a Jew. Walter M. Chandler, republican, contested the election of Bloom and the republican committee on election contests reported recommending the unseating of Bloom. The New York delegation has twenty-one democrats and twenty-one republicans. If Bloom had been unseated the republicans would be in control of the New York delegation if the selection of a president should be thrown into the house.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette is a republican and the Wisconsin delegation is made up of republicans. Representative John M. Nelson is their leader. Led by Nelson, eight progressive republicans and one farmer-laborer member voted to retain the democrat in his seat. Mrs. Mae Nolan of California, the only woman member of the house, elected as a republican laborite, followed the lead of Nelson of Wisconsin.

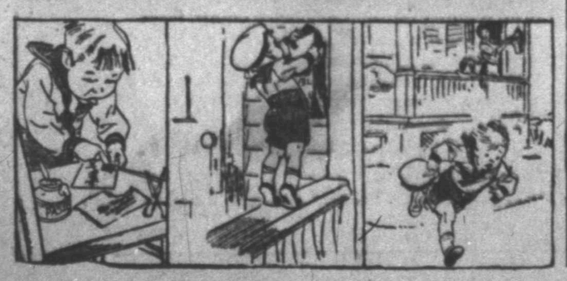

Senator LaFollette is responsible for the victory for the democrat. There are twenty state delegations controlled by the republicans and five delegations which are tied when it comes to control. If the election should be thrown into the house it would take a majority of the delegations to elect a president of the United States.

LaFollette's Wisconsin representatives saw to it that Walter M. Chandler was kept on the outside. Chandler is a former Texan. He came to Texas from Virginia. He was a fire eating democrat while here. He moved to New York and became a republican politician. He served in congress two terms. Then he tackled Sol Bloom and the Tammany Indian put him away.

Chandler refused to stay put. He demanded the seat and the republican organization was willing to give it to him. But LaFollette, speaking through Nelson, countermanded the order of the republican politician and Chandler lost where he thought he had won.

The Kiss of Pharaoh

"What meanest thou? Hath one of these two escaped?"

"They . . . they have both escaped," Hiljah began with an effort but Pharaoh would hear him no further.

Trembling with rage, he thrust the counsellor aside, and, turning toward the assembled multitude, he raised his hand for silence.

"Stay," he thundered, "and hear me further! News hath come, my people, and those who brought it shall know the meaning of the wrath of Pharaoh against those who fail in his work. Rah Neb and this youth have escaped! Once again our captives have eluded us. Once again the desert hath cloaked them from the stern cause of justice! Hear me, O my people, and obey! All who are assembled in this temple shall bow the knee at this moment before the effigy of Aton!"

Slowly the multitude sank upon their knees as Pharaoh commanded. Herotah's features were blanched, and it seemed as if she would refuse; but, as Pharaoh's burning gaze lighted upon her, she gave a little groan and prostrated herself before the altar.

Then the eyes of the king surveyed the assembled multitude. Every head was bowed, every one had knelt.

He turned and surveyed the chosen few who had been standing around the throne.

There was one who had refused to kneel!

Standing erect, a defiant light in her eyes, Rana had remained inert. Her gaze met that of her father with dignified refusal. Her cheeks were deathly pale and her lips trembled, but she did not hesitate. With a queer smile, she spoke, evenly and without a trace of fear.

"This thing I will not do, O my father. My god is Amon, the god of Egypt. To his and him alone, will I bow in adoration."

Pharaoh had stared as if fascinated by the daring of the girl, and his anger slowly turned into a cold sarcasm that suggested a rage to great for expression.

"So," he sneered, "one of my daughters dares to disobey? Think well, my child, ere thou art so sure of thy belief. The penalty of disobedience . . . is death!"

Rana nodded quietly.

"This thing is known to me, O Father!"

"And thou boldest fast to thy god, knowing this thing?"

"Amon is my god. Him only will I worship."

"Even if such be death, my daughter?"

"Even unto death, my father! Not all the power in Egypt can tear his image from my heart."

Pharaoh gazed a moment longer and then, his features contorted, he turned to the grinning Hiljah.

"It shall be death, then, counsellor. My daughter shall be burned alive!"

CHAPTER XVI.

Some little distance from the majestic temple of Karnak at Thebes there was a tavern of modest exterior which, however, represented the sole means by which the traveler could obtain temporary accommodation in the town.

Truly a rendezvous of reputation was the Tavern of Sampi, named after the mysterious leader of the Necromancers with whose character and residence the reader is already familiar.

It was perhaps significant that two mysterious figures should one day come in from the desert—an old man and his son, who assisted his father in carpentry—and take up their residence at this tavern to the rear of the Karnak pile. Significant because the old man was none other than the venerable Rah Neb and the boy none other than the youth whom Rah Neb aspired to place upon the throne of Egypt.

The proprietor of the tavern hastened forward to greet the pair, the prospect of additional guests, bringing the light of greed into his crafty old eyes. Gabinius was a stooping, soft-spoken man whose nature only asserted itself when any of his patrons failed to meet their financial obligattions. Otherwise—if one paid for what one received—there was none more courteous more considerate and more considerately blind than he.

He saw, with a feeling akin to disappointment, that the newcomers were by no means well clad. The old man's robes, indeed, were obviously the worse for wear. As for the youth, his soiled shirt displayed his strong figure to advantage, but it was a very dilapidated shirt, nevertheless, and torn in many places.

Therefore, Gabinius was not overcourteous. With a grudging bow he approached the old man and asked what were his requirements.

"A room," Rah Neb answered, in a reflective tone. "Two modest couches where we may pass the night, when our business in this place is done for the day, and a good meal for us both with haste."

"Wilt thou follow me?" Gabinius requested, as he led the way through a curtained archway at the rear of the room, and into an apartment which was clearly his own.

Motioning his companions to stools, he seated himself before them and coughed delicately, his eyes never leaving the features of the old man.

"Ye are welcome, strangers, to this humble tavern. We can offer only the humblest fare, but our hearts are good. At thy word, friend, the best chambers of this house shall be placed at thy disposal.

"'Tis good of thee, Gabinius; yet our needs are few."

The little proprietor frowned, genuinely puzzled.

"Hast thou honored my tavern before this day, O stranger, that thou knowest the humble name of Gabinius?"

"Yea," Rah Neb nodded, speaking in a firm but low voice. "Thou art well known to me. Dost thou remember the day of evil when Pharaoh Akhnaton did depose the only true god of Egypt for a deity, so-called, that . . ."

Gabinius started, his eyes bulging and fear in his heart.

"Thou . . . thou speakest strange and daring words. What emotion inspireth thee to mention that which Pharaoh decreed shall linger upon the lips of no man? Art thou sent hither to discover the honest Gabinius harbors a love for Amon in his heart? If 'tis so, then I would . . ."

Rah Neb smiled again and raised a quiet, forbidding hand.

"Gabinius, thou talkest needlessly. Thou fearest foolishly. Rest thy heart in peace. I am no spy of the king. I come hither to abide within thy walls and to meet those whose faces I have not seen for many days. But first, I would have words with thee. How do the people of Thebes take, then, to this new worship? Tell me, and I will tell thee many things, too."

"Thou askest much, O stranger, and I feel not the inspiration to treason against our king. Who are thou who comest thus to entrap the feet of Gabinius? What dost thou need? Tell me what thou knowest, and thou shalt shelter in this house with ease, and thy fare shall cost thee nothing. That will show . . ."

But again the old Rah Neb shook his head.

"Nay, my friend, thou art far from the truth, even yet. Thou, whose eyes were reputed the keenest, whose judgment was reckoned beyond reproach . . . what hast thou come to, then, that thou knowest me not?"

He came closer to the proprietor and met his gaze evenly, placing his hands upon the other's shoulders, yet saying nothing. The two men regarded each other for a long time and gradually the light of recognition crept into the eyes of Gabinius.

"Knowest thou me?" the high priest inquired again, with great solemnity in his manner. He might have been standing at the foot of the altar of Amon, blessing one newly brought to the faith. "Knowest thou me?"

Childlike simplicity had grown into the features of the proprietor. His lips parted, and when he spoke his voice was an awed, reverent whisper.

"Father, in god, though the sun fadeth and the light of the day be as the darkness of night, though the warmth of the sun passeth into the chill of winter . . . even to thee will Egypt bow, to thee to whom the people of this country are looking for their salvation. The hearts of our people burn with the fire of hate for Pharaoh and his Aton whom he setteth upon the sacred throne of Amon. Yet who, reverend father, is this youth whom thou has brought unto this house?"

Rah Neb swept back and regarded the lad who stood, wonderingly, behind.

"Gabinius," he commanded, sternly, "bow thy knees. This youth whom thou seest shall ere tomorrow's sun hath set, be thy king!"

CHAPTER XVII.

The Grim Reaper.

Rah Neb and the youth were there, and at their side sat El Caleb, a devout worshipper of Amon and one-time famous warrior and statesman. There were others, too, who had once held positions of high authority in Egypt, though now they passed their days in secret places of the city, venturing out only at night when the spies of Pharaoh could not see their features plainly and when most men were upon their couches and asleep.

Most of them had been officials in the temple of Karnak but some were merchants who had refused, under penalty of death, to bow the knee to the god of their king.

They were seated afound the three leaders, Rah Neb, El Caleb and the youth, with Gabinius on guard at the door and a dozen watchful eyes in the tavern room above, waiting patiently for Rah Neb to speak. The old high priest seemed deep in thought.

But at last his train of thought seemed to reach an end. He conversed with El Caleb in low tones, scrutinized each of the assembled men before him, and, raising his right hand aloft to command—though it was needless to command—attention he rose.

So Goes It

By BURNS HEGLER

We thought the nation had been "rocked" sufficiently of late, but it seems this is not the case. About the time the rocking had apparently gone its limit, along comes one Manuel Herrick of Oklahoma, and proceeds to rock it again.

In an attack on Washington society and politics, Mr. Herrick asks that he be sent to congress to represent the state of Oklahoma in the house of representatives. He admits that the man who goes to congress "enters an environment of graft and corruption," but seems to be honing for that sort of associations.

Now, everyone knows that there is graft in Washington. From a purely mathematical standpoint, it should easily be the center of graft and corruption, for it is where all things of that nature center, because it is the capital of the nation. Much of this graft has been uncovered, and there is much left to uncover. But we just can't get excited over a man who says (at a rather late day) that he himself refused a $40,000 bribe while in congress.

What we can not help wondering is why he waited until he was ready to run for congress before he told any one about it. Perhaps it was because he wanted to rock the nation.

Al Jennings, Frank Vanderlip and Roxie Stinson were among our nation rockers. Al Jennings took a ride across the continent and government expense to admit he didn't know anything when he arrived. Roxie Stinson admitted that all she had to tell was based on hearsay. Vanderlip blew up as an informant, and our honest guess is that if Mr. Herrick is given an opportunity to testify he will follow in their tracks.

It also will be recalled that a lot of folks made it rather interesting for Mr. Herrick when he was in Washington. He says he was trying to get a half-Nelson on the "predatory interests" and that for this reason he was "harassed, libeled and hounded by the metropolitan press." Our recollection of the incident is that Herrick took advantage of the opportunity most men have to make fools of themselves, and that the press had a lot of fun with him because of it.

Be that as it may, we seem to have the impression that the nation, generally speaking, is getting all-fired tired of being "rocked."

Dan Cupid No Respector Of Lodge Meeting

The inner sanctum of the local Rebekah lodge was violated by philandering hands at their meeting Saturday night. With a ruthlessness that surprised the veterans of the lodge Dan Cupid broke through the barricaded door and, bringing with him a bashful male, forced his way through the seething mass of Rebekahs to the spot where stood one Juanita Hammersley, complaisant victim of matrimony's bonds. Charming young Cupid, with a delightful smile at the astonished spectators, joined the hands of the blushing pair, and bade them adieu, saying, "My work is done."

From somewhere near, Rev. Simpson of the First Methodist church made his appearance and read the marriage ceremony, the thing being finished before it was well begun. It was a new angle to the Rebekah degree meeting and one that was enjoyed by all.

The bride is the daughter of R. J. Hammersley of this city, while the groom, J. G. Pack, is of Tucumcari, New Mexico, being manager of the Pack Wholesale Grocery company at that point. They left immediately after the ceremony for a fortnight's honeymoon in El Paso and Old Mexico. They will be at home in two weeks at Tucumcari.

More Truth Than Poetry

SYMPATHY

They have settled their troubles in London,
The strike was brought up with a jerk,
And all of the boys who were making the noise,
Are now on the job at work.
The cabinet claims all the credit—
Its members are laborers, too—
But the public will pay in the same jolly way,
That we blighted Americans do.

We've had 'em, these strikes, by the hundred;
And as soon as they fracture the peace,
Officials step in with a calm, easy grin,
And order the rough-stuff to cease.
And then when the loafing is over,
And everything's pleasant and nice,
The people of means must dig into their jeans,
And dig up whatever's the price.

It may be one side or the other—
More often it's neither—that wins.
They both are in luck, when a truce has been struck,
To escape from the mess with their skins.
But one thing we know will be certain:
We are always prepared for the news,
When the bickerings end, that our fatuous friend,
The helpless old public, will lose!

Just now we are free from dissension
And trouble on this side the sea,
But we're saving our cash for another hard smash,
When it drops on the land of the free.
If we're patient and saving and frugal,
And pile up our bank accounts high,
We'll be able to pay, in the same jolly way,
For the strike that is due by and by.

Scandal

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The heaviest item of news for some time past has consisted of scandal.

There is the Teapot Dome scandal. It war charged that lands belonging to the government, lands containing petroleum supplies, had been sold to private parties and that the transaction had been tainted with fraud.

Then there was the scandal connected with the veterans bureau.

Invertigating committees of the United States senate have been unearthing all sorts of transactions more or less crooked.

Senators, representatives, prominent business men, members of the cabinet, president and ex-presidents have been more or less spattered by the flying mud. The national nominating conventions of the two parties are approaching, and unfortunately scandal-monging is not without its uses in those bitterly partisan bodies. It is time for sober citizens to keep their heads and to seek to do justice in a way that will not produce more injustice as a by-product.

If any man has been guilty of wrong doing he should be punished, so long as we are operating under the law of rewards and punishments.

It might be well, however, to bear in mind that there is a great deal of difference between charging one with a crime and proving it.

Senators and representatives are privileged to say things that no outside citizen would dare to say. The temptation is very great to make reckless statements. Unfortunately, there are plenty of blatherskites in both the senate and the house of representatives.

For this reason the public should suspend judgment until the facts have been proved.

Only too many people are anxious and willing to believe any sort of evil of prominent persons.

I have been in Washington, I have attended the sessions of the senate and the house and also those of the investigating committees. My own judgment is that the majority of public men are honest. It is difficult for a dishonest man to remain very long in public life on account of the blaze of publicity under which he constantly acts and also on account of the vigor with which his record is scrutinized by the opposing party.

I think the people of the country should be assured that the majority of their public servants are conscientious and trustworthy. If occasionally a rascal gets into high office, he does not last long.

Partisanship tends to inflame passions and puts a premium upon reckless and startling charges.

After all this tumult has died down, I think it will be found that, far from being widespread, crookedness and graft among high officials of the government have been confined to very few.

We should not minimize the turpitude of the betrayal of a public trust, but on the other hand we should remember that starting a scandal is very easy and news of scandal is very interesting; and the public will do well to suspend judgment on scandalous charges until proof is forthcoming.

Also, that the atmosphere of the national legislature where senators and representatives can indulge in all sorts of wild talk and not be in danger of being sued for libel, is very favorable to the spread of scandal.

WRITTEN BY REX BEACH DURING HIS STAY IN WICHITA FALLS

DURING THE BOOM

Do you folks remember during the boom days when I had the little jewelry store on Ohio street?

Most of you do, because as you know, that was the "Main Drag" then. One day a fine looking fellow, dressed in the typical oil field toggery walked into my store and stood watching the crowds pass in and out. After several minutes of close observation I walked up to him and asked what I might interest him in.

He said that he might buy a watch if I had anything that he liked. I sold him the watch and a chain also. He then started asking questions about hold-ups, high jackers and the chances jewelers stood of being robbed. Such talk as this aroused my suspicions and I asked him his name. His reply was,

REX BEACH

Then I learned that he was in the city getting the "atmosphere" for his famous story,

"FLOWING GOLD."

That all happened many years ago and the chances are that Rex Beach has never had to spend a cent on watch repairs.

Gasser Or Gusher

In the development of the oil fields during those hectic days of discovery and wildcatting the foremost thought in the minds of everyone was to "get a gusher."

They thought only of the riches it would bring them and not of the industry itself. Penniless farmers became millionaires—promoters became immensely wealthy—every one went in quest of the "Flowing Gold."

In the development of the different fields there were discovered gigantic gas wells yielding millions of feet of gas a day. Some of them were almost uncontrollable, it taking thousands of dollars and the labor of many men to harness them. Finally they were put to work for commercial purposes and the result is that with the turn of a handle a constant flow of gas is at your command to cook, to heat, to manufacture, or do what you wish with.

Has this not been worth as much to your convenience as "FLOWING GOLD?"

Spudders Score

...a tallies for the home club were ... result of four innings' endeavor. ...ese markers were chalked up in ...ubers, 2, 3 1, and 4. In the first ...ining, Coombs began what looked like a good day, again, with a two-bagger to left field. Tanner singled to left, scoring Coombs. Weiss doubled, Tanner going home. Fitzgerald, Turgeon, and Callaghan went out in order.

Three more in the third put Wichita again on top. Weiss, first up, tripled to the centerfield green boards. Fitzgerald promptly bounced one off the right field bars, scoring Weiss. Turgeon hit safely down first base line, scoring Fitzgerald. Schuman went in for Reiger and struck out the next two batters. Jonnard singled to center, scoring Turgeon, with Adams' error. Wetzel flied out.

For four frames six hits failed to produce scores. Then, the one was chalked in the eighth, on Coombs' single and Tanner's double. The next three men up went out, one-two-three.

Big Ninth

A ninth inning revival of proportions placed the Spudders up to within respectable shooting distance. Callaghan, first to bat, was safe at first on a base-hit to short. White doubled to right field, sending Callaghan to third. Callaghan went home on Jonnard's grounder to short. Zeke Smith batting for Freeman, drove out a single past third, on which White tallied. Coombs popped out to Rader. Tanner hit past second, and Smith took third. Weiss drove out his third safe one of the day, a line drive off third, and Tanner scored. Fitzgerald flied out to Lovelace, ending the game.

Beginning in the second, two runs behind, Morris' Steers were from that time ...in the scoring limelight. Walks for Lovelace and Adams, Rader's single to left and Weiss' error on the grounder went for the two first runs. This grew rapidly to nineteen.

Griffin's homer in the third was the only marker for that time. It broke the two to two tie.

Ice was showered round on Dallas game, in the fourth. Two walks, four singles in a row, and an error were the makings of the five tallies. Five more in the sixth were garnered as the Steers stopped not for break and stayed not for stone. With one down, Rader, Donohue and Connolly were safe on base hits, followed by Vache's single and Griffin's double. Turgeon's throw to first on Segrist's grounder was low, and Lovelace's single completed the run. Five Steers scored in rapid order.

Four more poured in, in the next go. Schuman, again first up, was again out, but Rader's double, Donohue's triple, Connolly's base hit, Vache's double, Griffin's single and Turgeon's error, all in a row, did the trick.

Only two trickled across in the eighth. Lovelace got to first on a base hit. Schuman's double and Donohue's single, with a wild pitch, made the two. A double by Chatham in the ninth fell flat as the next three men went out in a row.

Again Today

The two tangle horns again today to complete the two-day's series. Today's contest will have quite a bit to do with the early standing of the two, or as to which will occupy the second place in the race.

BEAUMONT, April 20.—Keenan pitched the San Antonio Bears to their fifth consecutive victory today, beating the Exporters 6 to 2. SQUEEZE PLAY WINS FOR SOX

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 20.—A successfully executed squeeze play by Ray Schalk and Bill Barrett pushed over the deciding run which gave Chicago a 5 to 2 victory over Cleveland today before a crowd of more than 32,000. Joe Shaute weakened in the eighth and was replaced by Smith. In this inning Speaker was guilty of a two-base error when he dropped Kamm's fly.

Sports of 1924

On your mark! Get set! Fore!

Here comes our old friend Earl Thomson, breaking the course record for the high hurdles over bunkers and traps. Earl is quite a versatile athlete, holding the world's record for the 120-yard high hurdles, being an "80-or-thereabouts" golfer, and the father of twins. While at Dartmouth in 1920 he ran the 120-yard high hurdles in 14 2-5 seconds for an all-time record which still stands. At present Earl is track coach at Yale and has shot 18 holes in 86, which goes to show that as a golfer he is a darned good hurdler. He writes: "My golf game is yet in its infancy. I like it better than anything else except money. Was low handicap man at Morgantown Country club last summer, but left there before the championships were played. The queerest shot I ever made was on a short water hole. I topped my mashie shot but the ball hit the water, skipped across the pond, and stopped dead to the pin, leaving me a short putt for a birdie two."

Today's Iron

Well, that's all right.

Had to lose one to keep these Spudders from getting the over-confidence blues.

Today's game is all cut and precared to be close.

Now that San Antonio is leading and Wichita Falls and Dallas are fighting it out for second place, affairs assume something of a natural status. The race is now, of course, on.

Shreveport fought a game battle against the Cats, and lead the champs a good part of the way. Their time will come, and Fort Worth presents an opportunity, for all concerned.

San Antonio's winning streak is now just one jump ahead of that of the Spudders. Let 'em ride.

The two clouts, by Messrs. Weiss and Fitzgerald, in Sunday's game, were some well smacked apples. Bracers for the fence are requested.

In the way of well soaked agates, what of the Bambino's home run clout, yesterday. At that, the Babe is behind Harry Heilman, not to mention others. Which may be an explanation for the Yank's poor luck to date.

Three mighty good pitchers were forced to bow to the lucky run of the Dallas Steers in the last affair. Having beat Fort Worth and Wichita Falls, Dallas will only have to take town San Antonio to make a complete job of this Sunday was a ragged day for baseball, taken all way round. First, there was the high wind. And, secondly, we had the dry dust. And, thirdly, on top of it all, there was the spectacle of the Spudders getting strewn under for the first time this season.

With a brisk breeze behind every crack of the bat, the modern lively ball was bounding and gamboling.

Not to forget an important matter, Isingglass City took the lead in the league for the protection of dumb animals, yesterday, by an overwhelming defeat of the crack Eighdrophers, and thereby broke a record.

NEFF STILL

urged the governor to make at least one speech in Tarrant county. They told him that the people were ripe for it. He promised to make it. Leading citizens of Dallas county, a day later, urged him to make a speech in that city before the passing of the month of April. They said that an uninstructed delegation would appeal to the majority of the democrats of Dallas county if they could be inspired to attend the precinct convention.

These invitations came from democrats who represent both factions in the cities of Fort Worth and Dallas. To be more explicit, democrats who are klansmen and democrats who are anti-klansmen. All insist that a democratic president should be elected this year but all admitted that it would be impossible to elect a democrat who is unavailable for the reason that Coolidge would have him on the defensive from the beginning until the end of the campaign.

Soldier Support.

Now Ellis and Hill, like Collin and Grayson counties, are democratic strongholds. Representative Homer Hendricks introduced Neff at Waxahachie and his remarks were significant. Hendricks is a young man, he was a soldier. He is a leader of the young element and he declared that the people of Ellis county were with Neff on the great constitutional principles of the hour. On the same day at Hillsboro, Col. E. W. Jackson, a former soldier, declared that Neff was a statesman to whom the eyes of the nation were turning, a governor who was and is keeping the faith.

In all his speeches Neff is telling the people that he is representing a great cause, the cause of an untarnished and undefiled democracy and that no advocate of a righteous cause has ever been known to fail. No governor who wasn't a crusader would have gone to Somervall and addressed the people of Glenrose as Neff addressed them. He ventured, they all turned out, the school children attended in a body, the American flag was displayed everywhere and yet this community had been ranger ruled until the law had been vindicated and its violators broken upon the wheel of justice.

Thus far Neff has never lost his poise, his tongue has not betrayed him, his temper has remained unruffled and win or lose he is going down the line.

Tom Love said to the writer, "Texas will instruct for McAdoo. It is all one way." Captain Billy Lea said to the writer, "Underwood will capture the delegation."

Governor Neff believes the people are for an uninstructed delegation and that the 40 delegates from Texas will be sent to New York to vote for an available man who will not be compelled to defend his record either as a democrat or as a citizen.

LONGHORNS ON EASY AVENUE

Undisputed Leader of Southwestern B. B. Conference

Special to The Record News.

DALLAS, April 20.—Coach Billy Disch and his Texas Longhorns are romping away with the Southwestern conference baseball championship this spring in the same "let's make it unanimous" manner that has characterized Longhorn victories in every other major sport this year. Texas has played eight games to date and has not lost one. This dose is to be taken consecutively, however, if one is to reckon the power of the yellow aggregation from past performances, for four of the Texas nine's victories were in games with the lamentably weak Rice team, two against the S. M. U. bunch and two against their Texas Aggie friends. In their two games with T. C. U. Monday and Tuesday they meet stuff of a little tougher fiber. These two games will tell the real strength of the Texas team, and a better lineup on the conference outcome will be available after they have been played.

Baylor should help its percentage column in its two openers this week, Rice bobbing up for two more scheduled defeats, the Waco school going to Houston to turn the trick.

Wednesday and Thursday see S. M. U. vs. Texas Aggies at Dallas, while A. & M. is scheduled to tackle Baylor in Waco for two games the last of the week, with T. C. U. striving to keep Oklahoma A. & M. from spoiling her look-in at Southwestern honors in two games at Stillwater.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Texas University	8	0	1.000
T. C. U.	4	2	.666
Baylor	4	2	.666
Texas A. & M.	4	6	.400
S. M. U.	3	5	.375
Rice	0	8	.000

Oklahoma A. & M. and Arkansas university are not in the race this season on account of their not having sufficient conference games scheduled.

Little Lessons In Big Sports

How should a base runner touch first base when he intends to go on for extra bases?

Answered by FRANK FRISCH
Second Baseman, New York Giants; His timely hitting has made him known as "the game wrecker." Best second sacker in the National League.

It stands to reason that in such a case the runner should use up the least possible time. For that reason a special way of touching the base to save time has been worked out. The diagram shows this effectively. This is probably the fastest way of getting around first base that a ball player can use. There is no lost motion in it and there is nothing difficult about its execution.

LOCAL P-T CLUB LEADING STATE

Alamo Organization Is Commended by Head Of Associations

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, April 20.—An increase of 33 1-3 per cent in both number of clubs and membership is the year's record of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations from April 1, 1923 to April 1, 1924, according to the annual report of Mrs. James M. Loving, state treasurer of the organization.

In April, 1923, there were 716 affiliated clubs with 24,000 members. In 1924, 305 new clubs were added and about 8,000 new members, making the total number of clubs, 1,021 with 32,000 members, the report indicates.

"This is a splendid showing," Mrs. Loving said. "Of course we may not rank as Texas should when the reports are read at the national convention in May, as other state branches have been growing too. However, if all Texas clubs had made the effort that the Alamo Home and School club, Wichita Falls, made, we would be first in point of membership. This club has 1,122 affiliated members, and is the largest clug in the history of the Texas Congress of Mothers.

"The 1924 record in life membership is splendid too, with 121 state life members and five national. A life membership in the state is $25 and in the national is $50."

The birthday of the national congress, February 17, was celebrated in Texas this year by a gift of $235 to that organization raised by local clubs over the state at special celebrations of the day, according to Mrs. Loving.

GRACE M. E. HAS SUCCESSFUL DAY

Easter Services Sunday Exceed Expectations Of Church Leaders

The Rev. Leslie Miller, pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church, reports the Easter services throughout the day as being successful beyond expectations.

In the Sunday school, which assembled at 9:45 a. m. for a short session, there were 300 present, which represents a 100 per cent increase since the beginning of the year. The Sunday school came together in the auditorium for the delightful literary and musical program which had been arranged by the committee.

After the dismissal of the Sunday school, the auditorium refilled to the doors with the morning congregation.

Before the pastor preached he baptized a number of babies. After the sermon, the call was given out for those who were to be baptized to come forward. The altar immediately filled with the adults and young people who were baptised and received into full connection into the church. The pastor accounts this as one of the most victorious and successful services he has ever seen.

In the evening, the chorus choir of the church rendered to a great crowd, the beautiful cantata, "The Cross and Crown" by Ashford. Judging from the enthusiasm of the congregation, the singing of the beautiful "Life of Christ" was more than enjoyed.

Alamo School Notes

Sarah Creath, Reporter.
High Seventh.

Review in Arithmetic difficult for some of our room but the majority are easily conquering the hardest problems.

We had a spelling test Tuesday and our average was 98.

We have begun our exam papers in writing for an efficiency diploma.

On taking our test over the Spanish-American war last Monday we found that some of us did not know it very thoroughly.

Several boys from our room played in the game against Austin school Tuesday in which we defeated them 8 to 5.

Miss Barrier, our art teacher, does not believe in wasting time consequently our art work is advancing rapidly.

Miss Cook's Room.

Maurice Allred made the highest grade in both of the high seventh rooms on the history test over the Spanish-American war. He made 95.

We have just finished a crayola scene in art.

In arithmetic we are still reviewing.

In English we have almost finished infinitives.

On the Alamo baseball team, five are from our room. They are. Maurice Allred, catcher; Maurice Bullard, shortstop; Mark Carey, third base; Leroy Scott, left field, and Hugh Hanon, right field. They are all good players.

High Sixth.

Some high grades were made on a test in geography. Nathaline Lebenson and Camille Avis making 97, and one pupil making 90.

We have started making pages for exhibit in writing. Many are hoping to get a certificate.

Several pupils have not been absent or tardy all year and it is to be hoped that they will receive a reward.

ENGAGEMENT OF LOCAL COUPLE IS ANNOUNCED

Announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Maurine Smith to Robert F. Cook of Lubbock was made Sunday morning at an Easter breakfast, at which time Misses Helen Leech and Louise Kelly were hostesses.

Places were laid for ten. The table was most attractive in its Easter decorations, a color scheme of yellow and white predominating. The centerpiece was a large nest which contained ten eggs, watched over by a big white rabbit. Yellow streamers fell from the chandelier to the corners of the table.

At the conclusion of a three-course breakfast each guest drew a ribbon fastened to an egg and when the egg was opened a tiny chick appeared with the announcement card: "Just Out—Maurine and Robert—May 11."

The guests, besides the honorees, were Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Johnson, Mrs. Lillian E. Burks, Misses Luella Faust, Ida Lee Falls of Electra and Dorothy Burks.

Let Your Mirror Tell the Truth

"Oh wad some power the giftie gi'e us
To see oursel's as ithers see us."
—Robert Burns.

Any man with eyesight and a mirror can see himself as others see him. For nowadays men are first judged by the clothes they wear.

Clothes play an important part in creating that favorable first impression so essential to a man's success. Regardless of a man's sterling character, generous heart and sparkling personality, he'll stand only half a chance if he doesn't dress well.

Many men are being held back—men of ability—because they haven't come to a full realization of that well established fact. Meanwhile men of lesser abilities are stepping up into the worth while positions that spell success. These men are wise enough to know that looking successful puts them well on the way to being successful.

Take enough time tonight to let your mirror give you a few friendly tips.

"Shall We Live Again," Is Kay's Theme In Easter Sermon to Bible Class Sunday Morning

728 TURN OUT FOR SERVICES

Resurrection and Life Of Christ Touched On In Lecture

With the resurrection as his theme, Judge John C. Kay delivered his regular weekly Bible class lecture to any other record-breaking crowd at the Strand theatre Sunday morning. A total of 728 men turned out to listen to the Easter sermon, which was as follows:

My friends we are glad to have you here this morning. We are always glad to see you.

The lesson is about the resurrection. In old Athens, in Greece, on a summer evening, there sat under the shade of a great mulberry tree the wise men of Athens. And, one there, the wisest in Greece, with his bent shoulders and his snowy beard, sat quietly through the summer evening. He watched the storm breaking out upon the mountains of Hellas and he watched the glow of the sunset, lighting up with amethyst, and purple, and gold, the mountains where dwelt the Greek gods. He watched the long blue swell of the Mediterranean, and still he sat in silence; and his followers, and his lesser lights, could hear the hissing fuse burning toward the dynamite of his great thought, and still he sat in silence, until by-and-by he saw the blue and white stars coming out in the glow of the evening, and the mantle of night descending over the country, and he suddenly turned to his followers, and said: "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Doctrines Ridiculed

I have, sometimes, in my weakness here, poked a little fun at some of the doctrines of the churches that men go to war about; little doctrines like whether we shall call the preacher or whether we shall have him sent to us; arguments over the mode of baptism and over the method, manner and form of taking the sacrament; and all such questions. And, I have said to you I say to you now, that "The man of independent mind," he looks and he laughs at all that." But, the church has, and must have, some doctrines, sifted out by the wisdom of the ages. We find that they are great doctrines. A man must not want to have a little idea. Do never go out here and have a small, narrow idea. Let your thoughts be broad, and high, and great.

Let me give you an illustration of what I mean by that. We will take these moving pictures, for example. Now, the astronomers tells us, and we know it to be true, that these stars that we look out and see at night are so far off that from many of them, and from most of them, it has taken age after age for the light to reach us from the stars, and that we never see the stars at all, but only the gleam of light that comes from it, that started from and before the time of Adam.

God Sees Everything

Now, the book teaches us that God is everywhere, and that He sees all things. Ah, He can place His eye somewhere along that line of light this morning, as it comes from this earth, and look back and see Jacob burying Rachel by the roadside. He can look back and see Joseph, like a moving picture, as he was sold into Egypt. He can look back along these lines of light and see Simon as he comes to the crucifixion, and takes up the cross of his broken Lord. These are great ideas. They are well worth thinking about.

Now, we go back to this question that this great Greek asks, "If a man die, shall he live again?" Ah, there is a doctrine. It is a principle in philosophy, and a very high principle in philosophy, that, when we come in sight of a great truth, most men are agreed upon it, so, when we come in sight of the doctrine of the resurrection, we find that it is the doctrine of all the churches. And, what a wonderful doctrine it is. We come here, then, in sight of the one great doctrine of the church. We come in sight of an answer to the great question that the Greeks made no answer to, when we come to the resurrection. That is the thing that keeps the church alive. That is the thing that we believe and must believe, or perish—that, there is a hereafter; that—somewhere, somehow, there is promised to man a brighter and better life, beyond the curtain of this world.

Doctrine Still Hazy

To some of you, to many of you, perhaps, this great fundamental doctrine of the church has never been brought home.

But, to many others, before whose doors the black camel has knelt to take away your loved ones, and to such of you as have had to walk in the Garden of Gethsemane in the bitterness of your sorrow—I say—such as these know that all of your religion, and all of your Bible, and all of the teachings of the Master, at such a time, are squeezed right down into this one question, "Shall we live again?"

Shall we live again? We ask that question because death comes to every home. There is a story in India that a woman had a baby bitten by a cobra, the most terrible of all serpents. She carried it before their great man Guntama in order that he might heal it, but he saw already that it was dead, and she said: "Guntama, can you, will you, heal the baby?" "Yes," he said, "go out here to some of your neighbors, and bring to me a handful of black mustard, but, when you go to get this black mustard, see that you get it from no home where anyone has ever died." She was gone a long time, and came back, and he said: "Bringeth thou to me the black mustard?" And, she said: "Nay, my lord, they all had black mustard, but in one house the father had died, and in one, the mother had died, and, on last week, in another, the infant died, I came to no home where I could get the mustard seed where none had died." And, he said: "Thy fate is the common fate of all. See that thou go and bury the babe."

Doctrine Lifts Us Up

It is the doctrine that lifts us up. Belief in Christianity would not be worth while if there was no world except this world. But, there is! And, even in the Old Testament, when the great prophet Ezekiel saw his vision of the dry bones, there came one who prayed and said: "Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain that they may live." And, in the New Testament, the Savior said: "In My Father's house are many mansions, and I go to prepare a place for you." That is the belief that is worth while. That is the fundamental doctrine of the church; that a man live righteously and soberly, that he believes in Christianity, and lives up to its taechings, in order that he may not be rewarded here, but hereafter, and any less doctrine than that is no doctrine at all.

Now, do men live like they believed that? This old Greek that I have just told you about was honest. He was known throughout the world then as a seeker for the truth, but his Greek gods up on Olympus furnished him no answer. But, to you and to me, there has been opened a way through the cross, filled with the blood of the Master, but bloodless and bright to you and to me, whereby men can so perfect themselves that they shall be saved in the resurrection. It is a beautiful story—the story of the resurrection of the Savior, but, there is something more to it than the resurrection of the Master, great as that story is. It is not only His resurrection, but we also are promised it in the future. So, I say, if men will go out with ideas like this, it has a tendency to lift men up, and up, and up; not only to make his life brighter and better, but to fill his life with service toward other men, because—the hereafter is, after all, the reward; the reward of the Christian is not here, but hereafter.

Shakespeare's Dirge

We can hear Shakespeare's mighty words, in his dirge to Imogene, when he said: "Home art gone and taken thy wages." These things are worth struggling for and striving for. If there was no death, there was no grave, there would be no mourners. And if there was no hereafter, there could be no religion. But, to those men, and to those women who believe in Christ, and who believe in His teachings, there is—and there must be—a glorious hereafter; that far off high Jerusalem, about which the poet sings:

Jerusalem, the golden, I languish for one gleam
Of all thy glory folden in distance and in dream.
Jerusalem, the golden, when the sun sets in the west
It seems the gate of glory, thou city of the blest.
Jerusalem the golden, there our birds that flew,
Our flowers but half unfolden, our pearls that turned to dew.
Jerusalem, the golden, I toil on day by day
Heartsore each night with longing, I grasp my hands and pray
That midst thy leaves of healing, my soul shall find her rest,
Where the wicked cease from troubling, where the weary be at rest.

Visitors' Viewpoints

"I should say, judging by Saturday night's crowded traffic conditions here, that there are fully as many cars in Wichita Falls as in Dallas or Fort Worth. That remark would be a slight exaggeration but I can say without any hesitancy that Saturday night gave Wichita Falls the appearance of a real city. Such traffic conditions may reflect on some departments of the city but they surely make a good impression on the traveling salesman," declared E. C. Brown, shoe salesman of St. Louis, last night.

"One of the greatest of Wichita Falls assets, in my opinion, is the new Junior college. Of all the institutions in the city that reflect credit to the courage and the enterprise of its populace the Junior college is to me the greatest accomplishment and has the greatest power for good." This was the remark yesterday of Miss Mamie Lee Hayden of College Station, member of the extension bureau of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college there.

"Things look good for Wichita Falls," stated Edward F. Boyd, accountant of Rochester, New York, yesterday. "The irrigation project I am told of and the oil fields hereabout make the place one of the best business bets I have run across in some time."

CLAY COUNTY BOYS TO RETURN MONDAY FROM JUDGING TRIP

Special to The Record News.

HENRIETTA, April 20.—County Agent G. R. McNiel and the judging team composed of members of the boys agricultural clubs in Clay county are expected to return today from Mineral Wells where they took part in a bi-district judging contest for club members.

Arthur Greet of Bellevue, Ray Adams of Joy, Oliver Thompson of Blue Grove, Roy Green of Bellevue, Floy Nates of Henrietta and Fred Adams of Joy composed the judging team from this county. At the meet there was competition with other teams in judging dairy and beef cattle, hogs and sheep, and corn, milo, kaffir and feterita.

Another contest of judging teams will be held at Arlington late in June, according to Mr. McNeil, and from those showing up best at the Arlington meet, three from each county will be chosen to compete in the state contest at the A. and M. college in July. Clay county boys will compete in both contests.

DRAWINGS FOR TRADE TRIP RESERVATIONS TO BE MADE MONDAY

A reminder that drawings for Pullman car reservations would be made today was issued Sunday by chamber of commerce officials to local business men who are to go on the trade trip Tuesday. Space will be drawn for at a meeting to be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the chamber of commerce rooms and it is urgently requested that all those signed for the trip be on hand to secure room on the train.

Plans are practically complete for the trip, it was announced, and nothing now remains but to attend to details of assigning compartment space on the cars.

"Power of Endless Life" Is Theme Of Grafton At Presbyterian Church

Taking as his text Hebrews 7:16, "After the Power of an Endless Life," Rev. N. F. Grafton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, preached Sunday morning on a special Easter theme. His sermon was as follows:

Immortality is not a dead creed, not an empty speculation, not an interesting question for intellectual curiosity; it is far more than any of these. Immortality is a power, a force, a dynamic that lifts man's life from the lower levels to a higher level and drives him to the greatest achievement.

"After the power." The word power is a New Testament word. It defies definition. There are some words in God's Book that never have been defined and never can be. One of them is life. You cannot define life; you see the demonstration of life, you see the evidence of life around you; you know there is a little germ that we call life and that that germ develops and grows until it has reached its zenith, but no man has ever been able to define life, to tell us what it is. We know that it comes from God and that God is life.

Another of these great words is light. We see the manifestation of it every day and even at night when the moon and stars are shining, but we have never been told what it is. We have some sort of scientific definition telling about certain wave lengths and their movements, but to tell us exactly what light is, man has found to be impossible.

Love Is a Great Word.

Then there is love. We know love, we have felt it in our own hearts, we have demonstrations of it in the lives of our loved ones and friends, and the greatest demonstration of it in the life of Jesus Christ, but can you give a definition of love? No. It is too great to be comprehended, the most wonderful of all wonderful things is "God is love."

Then here is this other word defying definition, the word power. It comes from the Greek word that has given us several words; the word dynamic, dynamo. And it is dynamic. It is that thing that was inherent in the life of Christ; it is that dynamic in Him that unstopped deaf ears, that opened blind eyes, that strengthened the weakened ankles, that cooled hot fevers, that called back from the dead two men and a girl in the long ago. It was that dynamic that enabled Him to dominate a Roman seal and a Roman watch and defy grave bars and walk forth on that glad Easter morning to illumine the faith of the disciples.

The power of an endless life—this power on Easter morning is supreme in its demonstration for Easter morning is the revelation of this power. They laid Jesus in Joseph's rock-hewn tomb, they rolled a stone to the door of this tomb and sealed it with the king's seal and set soldiers to watch. But they might as well have tried to chain the glory of the morning sunlight or to encompass Niagara Falls with a rope of sand as to confine Jesus, who had this inherent power that enabled him to break the bands of the tomb on that beautiful Easter morning and come forth not a dead Savior, but a risen Lord and Master. On that Easter morning he underscored the power of an endless life for "Christ brought life and immortality to light."

I read the story of a river that had its beginning at the foot of the mountain. Into the channel of this stream there was poured the melted snow and ice and as it went singing on toward the sea it blessed humanity; on either bank cities were built, trees were there, birds were there, flowers were there. Suddenly that stream sunk into the sand and for hundreds of miles it ran beneath the soil and devastation was there and dead things were there for there was a mighty desert of sand that billowed and waved in the bright sunlight. Then all at once there appeared a stream which flowed on calmly toward the sea and on either bank was life, joy and happiness. After a while it was found that it was the same stream that had its beginning in the mountains and was sunk in the desert.

Immortality Lost.

So there was a mighty doctrine that had its beginning in God as God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, but in the past that mighty stream of immortality was lost in the sands of old traditions and for thousands of years it ran beneath the sands and man knew little of the immortality of the soul; just here and there we get a glimpse of this doctrine, but one day down there at the tomb of Jesus Christ the mighty stream breaks forth and it has been flowing through the centuries making glad the hearts of men and women.

Out yonder was a great city, beautiful as to buildings, wonderful as to streets, magnificent with its teeming life. Suddenly one day there came a shower that turned into a torrent. It was not the benefacient shower from the skirts, but it was a shower of ashes. Gently they fell until layer after layer had fallen upon the city and it was buried with its teeming thousands of men, women and children. It lay there for centuries and one day the archeologist came and lifted the layers and revealed this magnificent city of the long ago and men have been rejoicing in the story of the past as it was revealed by the archeologist.

But there was an archeologist more wonderful than that. The Lord lifted the sands of past generations from this mighty, this beautiful, this wonderful doctrine of the resurrection and we have come to know that the Lord Jesus Christ is responsible for "bringing life and immortality to light."

The scientist announces one day a marvelous discovery, one that is going to bless humanity, the papers call it a new discovery. By and by men began to search the archives, to go into the past and someone finds that the new discovery was known two hundred, three hundred, five hundred years ago and instead of being a new discovery, it is a rediscovery of an art lost to humanity. This great thought of immortality is not a new discovery on this Easter morning but it is a truth as old as man is old, that which God started when he breathed the breath of life into the nostrils of man, a re-discovery by the Lord Jesus Christ when He came forth from the tomb.

Nothing is more common than decay. Ours is a dying world. All things reach a summit and then begins the decay. The grass as are green today and tomorrow they are brown; the birds sing today and tomorrow they are silent; the forests grow from the tiny shoot into that magnificent assembly of giant trees and then there begins decay and death and the forest ceases to be. There is the little baby lying in the mother's arms with the smile on its face. That is the morning of life; at noon time it is weary and at the evening hour there are wrinkles that say decay has set in and at night there is death.

We are living in a world of decay and death. Such is the dirge of humanity. Existence is a ceaseless funeral. In the morning we are here; at noon time we are weary with the burdens of life and in the evening we are gone.

But Easter was that dynamic, that power that killed death and decay. On that glad Easter morning there was a turn in the tide; there was a change in the battle front; there was a new and triumphant note in the song of life; there was a new hope bringing in the breast of man and that was the hope of a resurrection in the after while.

A German princess, knowing that she was about to die made provision and wrote it down as her instructions that when death should come she was to be sealed in a coffin and the coffin was to be encased in granite. Around this was to be placed iron bands, three of them, and the blacksmith of the kingdom was to come and weld those bands hard and tight. This was to be placed in the grave and the emperor was to stand and see that the grave was covered. On top of it was to be placed a granite slab on which were chisled these words: "This burial place purchased to all eternity must never be opened." She thought she would sleep a deathless sleep throughout all eternity in that grave in German soil.

Granite Tomb Opened.

But as the sexton was covering that sarcophagus with the soil he had digged from that clay, it was found that he had picked up an acorn on his spade. He dropped it alongside that granite and somehow it got under the edge of it. After awhile that little germ of life developed and by and by tiny shoots began to take hold on the soil and then the stem began to push itself to the surface of the earth. Then one of those little shoots slipped in between the pieces of granite where they joined together. The roots began to swell and grow, the granite was pushed asunder, the iron bands were broken and that burial place that had the seal of the emperor upon it was opened by a tiny germ of life locked up in the dull casing we call an acorn.

The great eternal God has planted within every man and woman a tiny thing, a germ of life, and as it grows and develops it defies death, who has decreed that we shall slumber in the tomb for centuries, through a ceaseless eternity. Grim death was defeated by a tiny germ of life and Christ "brought that life and immortality to light."

The power of an endless life—not endless in duration alone but endless in progressive development. I would not care very much about heaven if it was just duration, if we were just going to exist somehow in that other life. But I believe with all my heart that the power of an endless life is the power of progressive growth. This spiritual life here is only in its seed time; it contains dormant qualities and possibilities of growth and development and in the eternity of God it means progressive life, not simply an endless duration but an endless life of progression.

Franklin said: "Life is rather a state of embryo, a preparation for life. A man is not completely born until he passes through death." Victor Hugo said: "When I go down to the grave I must say like so many others, 'I have finished my day's work.' But I cannot say, 'I have finished my life.' My day's work will begin the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley. It is a thoroughfare. It closes in the twilight to open in the dawn."

Time is entirely too short for any sort of a comprehensive program. Have you not heard more than one many say: "If I live, I will do this thing or that thing." What does it mean? It means that that man perhaps unconsciously has expressed the thought that this life is too short for any comprehensive program. He hopes that perhaps in the course of events his life will be extended long enough to let him carry out this or that part of his program.

I want to say to you, my friends, this Easter morning declares to us that this life of ours does not stop with our last breath but out yonder somewhere our program will be carried out.

The power of an endless life dignifies life. I think on this Easter morning we should read again the story of the creation as it is told in the first chapter of Genesis. Did you notice how that story runs? In making the world, God used power: in the making of man, God used Himself. I want you to get the distinction. "And God said, let there be light and there was light." and God made the firmament. And God said, "let the waters be gathered together and the waters were gathered together." And God said, "let the earth bring forth her fruit, and the earth brought forth." But there came a lull in creation and God stood there with the thought of man in His mind and God did not say "Let there be a man," but God said, "Let us make man in our likeness and after our own image." God did something for man that he did not do for anyone else in creation. He breathed Himself out and into man; He breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul.

And this provokes the very Divinity in man. Man himself is the high and commanding proof of his own immortality. He is the conspicuous evidence of an endless life in a permanent and abiding world. Man alone has the need, man alone has the capacity, man alone has the desire for immortality. Endless life affords victory of love over loss. Dunton said: "Should you ever come to love as I have loved, you will find that materialism is intolerable. It is hell itself to a heart that has had a passion like mine. You will find it madness to believe in the word never. You will find that you dare not leave untried any creed, howsoever wild, that affords the heart a ray of hope." There is a man crying out of the passion of his love for a life beyond the grave through which he might express in all of its fullness the love of his heart. And so immortality gives love a victory over death.

Out there is a man who has swung loose from his moorings; there is a question in his mind and that question is: "If a man die shall he live again?" Job asked it in the long ago; it was asked before him and has been asked through all the generations since. Hobbs said: "It is a leap in the dark." Ingersoll said at the grave of his brother: "We can only hope. Listening Love hears the rustling of wings." But that is too much like a bubble; that is too much like the morning mist. If a man die shall he live again? A man, who through the resurrection of Jesus Christ fixed and planted his feet upon the solid rock, cried out in the ecstacy of his joy one day: "We know that if this earthly house, this house of our tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal and in the heavens." Yes, if a man die he shall live again. Christ on that Sabbath morning brought life and immortality to light and demonstrated the power of an endless life.

KING SPEAKER AT BIBLE CLASS

"Invisible Things" Is Subject of Baptist Lesson Sunday

Taking his text from second Corinthians, fourth chapter, "While we look not at the things which are seen but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, while the things which are not seen are eternal," Bert King spoke to a large crowd of men at the Men's Bible class, First Baptist church, on the "Invisible Things."

"The success is the man who can look on the things that his neighbors do not see, with the power to look into the invisible," Mr. King told his class. He gave as examples, John Burroughs, the great naturalist who could see things in a piece of nature that the ordinary man could never look for, and Robert Burns, the great Scotch poet, who saw through the little things in life.

Burns Lacked Faith.

"But Burns lacked that faith that reaches out and clasps the unseen things. The great forces of the earth are the unseen things. Great scientists can tell you the uses to which electricity can be put, but the ever perplexing question that no one can answer is where electricity came from and where it goes. The power that holds us to the earth, that holds this earth and all planets together, that is such an important part of our lives that we think nothing of it, is gravity; yet no man can tell what gravity is.

"But far above that is the reaching of the soul to spiritual things. You don't know about it but you know that it is calling. The human soul says that the soul must exist beyond these few short hours on earth. It is this thing that kept Abraham and Moses going ever forward against the hardships they were confronted by. They had the faith to see the invisible.

Hearts Lifted Up.

"No matter if many consider the Christian religion as merely a legend. Those hearts that have felt it have been lifted up out of the mud and mire. It is the one thing that lifts up the human race. It is the one thing that lifts a man out of himself and sets him on a plane above and beyond."

Louis Courcil, head of the voice faculty at Baylor college, Belton, who sang the tenor part in the presentation of Stainer's "Crucifixion" Friday night, sang as a vocal solo, "The Holy City" at the beginning of the services, and again rendered a vocal number following Mr. King's talk. Mr. Courcil sang at the morning and evening services at the First Baptist church Sunday.

An attendance of 213 men was recorded by the secretary Sunday morning. This included a number of visitors, and several new members who were taken into the class. Members were given tags with the words "I am going," as a publicity act to advertise the class.

HENRIETTA MAY RUN SPECIAL PULLMAN TO WEST TEXAS MEETING

Special to The Record News.

HENRIETTA, April 20. — So many citizens of Henrietta and Clay county have expressed their intention to attend the sixth annual convention of the West Texas chamber of commerce at Brownwood next month that the suggestion that a special Pullman car be chartered for the accommodation of this county's delegation is considered. Indications are that a great many more will go to Brownwood this year than attended the San Angelo convention.

Judge J. S. Dickey of Henrietta has been selected to make the response to the address of welcome at the Brownwood meeting.
