Embassy: Body of passenger has bullet wounds

Klinghoffer

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A U.S. Embassy spokesman said today there appeared to be two gunshot wounds in the body of Leon Klinghoffer, the American passenger who died aboard the hijacked Italian cruise liner.

The body that washed ashore in Syria was put aboard a special Alitalia flight for Rome, where U.S. officials and Italian authorities are to conduct an autopsy to determine how Klinghoffer died.

"We have confirmed that the body is that of Leon Klinghoffer," U.S. Embassy spokesman John Burgess told reporters. "There apparently were two gunshot wounds in the corpse."

Syrian pathologists, a medical examiner retained by the embassy and an FBI agent who arrived in Damascus on Tuesday night identified the body "based on dental X-rays, fingerprints and physical characteristics," Burgess said.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Joe Reap said this morning, "We have positive identification." He said the body had "two apparent gunshot wounds," but said he could not elaborate and had no information on a CBS News report that the body had been mutilated.

Klinghoffer apparently received one gunshot wound in the head and one in the back, said Daniel Lawler, another State Department spokesman. The Syrian death certificate will state the cause of death as unknown because no autopsy was performed, he said.

The body arrived at the airport in a wooden coffin draped in the U.S. flag. It was escorted by U.S. Ambassador William Eagleton and Syrian military police. Reporters and photographers were not allowed near the plane.

The four Palestinians who hijacked the Achille Lauro Oct. 7 have been charged by Italian officials with murdering the partially paralyzed 69-year-old man from New York, but judicial sources have quoted them as denying the charge.

Burgess stressed that "there still has been no autopsy to determine the cause of death," noting that Klinghoffer could have died before he was shot.

The Palestine Liberation Front, to which the hijackers claimed to belong, has said Klinghoffer, who was confined to a wheelchair, could have died of a heart attack.

The body was brought to Damascus from Tartus on Tuesday and Western diplomatic sources and a physician said it appeared to have been in the sea for at least a week before washing ashore Monday. They said it had been ravaged by fish and the effects of the Mediterranean salt water.

The Achille Lauro, which was expected to return to Genoa late today, set sail from the Italian port Oct. 3. It was hijacked by four Palestinians who held more than 500 people hostage for two days before surrendering in Egypt Oct.9 to Palestine Liberation Organization officials.

Martin feels 'vindicated' by decision

Martin

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Dr. Jay Dee Martin said he felt "a little bit vindicated" on Tuesday after a six-member federal jury found that his "use of language" — profane or obscene words or phrases — did not interfere or hinder Midland College "in providing the best education possible" for its students.

Martin had filed suit against Midland College officials, including Dr. Jess Parrish, president; Dr. Don Hunt, vice president; Dr. Raymond Yell, dean, and the nine trustees. He claimed his freedom of speech was abridged, that he was singled out and that his reputation assailed.

"The outcome was a real surprise," Parrish said today. "I was a little disillusioned." He noted that the jury found "no violation of civil rights. And he (Martin) got full due process. And suddenly (by the jury's verdict), we weren't treating people equally."

The jurors, which included one Midlander and five Odessans, also determined that his word usage did not "materially or substantially" disrupt the classroom on June 19, 1984, and that his language did not "overbalance" his effectiveness as a instructor.

In addition, the jury awarded the 40-year-old Martin, who was out of work for a year after he was fired in July 1984, $28,000 in damages. The award equaled his base salary at the college, where he had taught for eight years.

"It sure beats the heck out of losing," Martin said.

He currently is an assistant professor of economics at Longwood College, a four-year state-supported college in Farmville, Va.

"I had hoped they (the jurors) would have given me damages for my career loss."

Bank deposits, loans show slight third-quarter increase

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business/Oil Writer

Although Midland banks are still enduring a soft-loan market because of flat economic conditions and uncertainties in the oil industry, officials say they are pleased with the third quarter's slight growth.

Net loans reported for the third quarter, ending Sept. 30, were $892,658,059, an increase of about $49 million over the second quarter, when loans totaled $843,165,278.

Third quarter deposits reached $1,624,165,731, an increase of $9.59 million over the second quarter's $1,614,575,211.

Compared to the third quarter 1984, loans were up $90.99 million. A year ago, loans reached $801,660,857. Deposits were also up $123.6 million from the 1984 third quarter figure of $1,500,492,614.

"The economy is pretty flat right now, and loans are not as high as we would like them to be," said Bob Craig, Western Bank vice president-cashier. "This is typical of all banks right now. Look at the sale of houses. Everything is staying stable."

Western Bank showed an increase in loans from $74,960,168 in the second quarter to $76,141,976 in the third quarter. The bank's deposits held steady at $90,496,188 for the third period, compared to $90,551,027 for the second quarter.

"With the economy the way it is, I'm pleased that we're able to show growth," said Billy Murray, vice president-controller at RepublicBank First National Midland. "With everything we've been through at this bank, for us to start making loans again, we're encouraged."

The bank, then First National Bank, failed in October 1983. Its deposits and loans were taken over by the RepublicBank Corp.

RepublicBank First National deposits rose from $680,449,000 in the second quarter to $693,383,000 in the third quarter. Loans also rose from $265,024,000 to $280,177,000 in the third quarter.

The bank's growth in deposits is largely due to its gain of the Midland Independent School District's depository on Sept. 1 from Texas American Bank and because oilmen are showing some increase in activity.

"People are more apt to spend money now because of uncertainties concerning federal tax laws on the oil industry. They want to get as much done before tax legislation passes," he said.

Steve Landy, president of Texas American Bank, said despite the loss of the school depository, the decline in his bank's deposits is normal for a third quarter. "Deposits tend to fluctuate at this time."

Texas American deposits fell from $140,798,139 in the second quarter to $118,951,852 in the third. Loans dropped from $66,983,690 in the second period to $62,180,712.

ClayDesta National Bank also showed seasonal fluctuation.

"We were down $2 million in our deposits this past quarter, but that is normal. Compared with hundreds of millions of dollars, $2 million is nothing to worry about," said President David Jones.

Midland oilman files two suits in bank lease-back arrangement

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A Midland oilman who joined a group which bought the First National Bank Building for $75 million in a 1982 lease-back arrangement with the former bank is seeking damages totalling $203 million in two lawsuits filed Friday in Midland federal and state district courts.

M.W. "Buddy" Branum filed a $200 million suit in 142nd District Court against the former bank's directors; Texas Commerce Bank and InterFirst Bank, which helped finance the deal; and the accounting firm of Main Hurdman, according to Leo G. Bacher of the San Antonio law firm of Oppenheimer, Rosenberg, Kelleher and Wheatley.

Branum also filed a $3 million suit in federal court against the former bank's directors. Both suits contend Branum was not given complete information about the bank's financial condition or the true value of the building, according to Bacher, whose firm also represents Eagle Properties Ltd., the group of investors that bought the building.

"They are both, in essence, suits for fraud," he said. "We feel Mr. Branum has suffered some serious wrongs."

Eagle has its own suit against the bank directors pending in district court, but Branum is the first of the seven partners to file as an individual, according to Bacher.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton recently ordered Eagle to pay the bank's receiver, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., $32 million, or face foreclosure on the building. Eagle is appealing that decision, Bacher said.

Eagle was formed to buy the building and lease it back to FNB so that the troubled bank could show a profit for 1982. After the bank failed in October 1983, the Eagle partners contended they hadn't been told how precarious the bank's financial position was.

Eagle balked at making a $25 million payment to the FDIC, alleging fraud by the former bank's directors, but Bunton ruled otherwise.

Besides Branum, the Eagle partners included Tom Brown, J.L. Davis, Charles R. Perry, Gene Sledge, Clint Burt and Charles Lawrence.

Sales rebate checks down from year ago

From Staff Reports

Midland's sales tax rebate check for the month of August "was no surprise," according to Troy Gifford, city finance director.

The check, which reflects actual store receipts for August, amounted to $529,730.92, a decrease of $29,073.92 from the same period in 1984, is a continuing reflection of a soft economy, said Gifford.

"We are in a period of adjustment from the economic turndown from a few years back," he said. "I think that we have probably reached a plateau from which we hope to increase."

Gifford added that the finance office has been projecting a 2 to 4 percent increase in sales tax rebates but that it was no surprise when August's check came in.

"It was close to what we expected," he said. He added that the budget is "pretty much on track."

For the calendar year to date, Midland has received $7,327,163.55, a 13.33 percent increase over the $6,465,590.50 a year ago.

Odessa received a smaller check than a year ago, with $477,225.29 compared to $549,078.84 in August 1984. For the calendar year to date, Odessa's sales tax rebate checks total $6,271,065.93, a 3.83 percent increase over last years totals of $6,039,918.15.

The 1 percent city sales tax is collected by the State Comptroller's Office and rebated to the cities two months later.

Gifford has projected a "flat to modest growth in the economy next year." For fiscal year 1985-86, he is expecting $8,750,000 to $9 million in sales tax rebates.

BODY

Klinghoffer was reported killed and his body thrown overboard Oct. 8 when the ship was off Tartus.

Lebanese radio monitors intercepted exchanges between the hijackers and Tartus port authorities at that time in which a hijacker who called himself Omar was heard to say: "We have thrown him in the water. We have shot him once in the head. His wife is wailing." They did not identify the victim.

The Washington Post in today's edition quoted unidentified U.S. officials as saying the body that washed ashore in Syria had a bullet hole in its head and was missing both legs and an arm.

Crowds support Reagan's action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The echo of President Reagan's order last week to capture the fleeing hijackers of an Italian cruise ship continues to ring in his ears and highlighted a cross-country GOP fund-raising trip.

Shouts of support from the crowds and tributes for his action from people he went to help followed Reagan on Tuesday during a 13-hour, 4,200-mile stump for Republican senators in Idaho and Wisconsin.

In Milwaukee, Reagan never mentioned the events of last week involving the Achille Lauro and the apprehension by U.S. Navy jet fighters of four hijackers from a Palestine Liberation Organization faction.

But Sen. Robert Kasten, in introducing the president at a GOP fundraiser, drew cheers from the crowd when he said people everywhere "join you in your praise of the Navy pilots and, most of all, salute you, Mr. President, as commander-in-chief for standing up against worldwide terrorism."

Reagan barely mentioned the incident in the remarks prepared for a similar fund-raising speech earlier in the day on behalf of Sen. Steve Symms in Boise. But from a cheering crowd at the airport in Boise came a shouted, "Way to go with the PLO!"

The body of a 69-year-old American tourist, Leon Klinghoffer, who died aboard the ship during the hijacking was identified today by officials in Syria who were examining a body that washed ashore near the port city of Tartus, the State Department said. Klinghoffer was reported shot on the liner and his body dumped overboard off the Syrian coast. Spokesman Joe Reap said in Washington this morning that the body had two apparent bullet wounds.

During his trip Tuesday, Reagan at first refused to comment on Egyptian President Hosni Mubarek's demand that he apologize for forcing down an Egyptian airliner with the accused hijackers on board. But he relented when a reporter asked if the United States did anything to apologize for.

"Never!" the president replied, disappearing into his limousine.

Symms, a one-term senator expecting stiff Democratic opposition next year, drew his loudest applause praising Reagan's order to force the hijackers' plane to divert to Italy.

Delivering a message he said came from the Sun Valley Veterans of Foreign Wars, Symms told Reagan, "Bring 'em to justice, give 'em a quick and fair trial, and hang 'em."

Although the accused hijackers don't face a death penalty either in Italy or the United States, it was a message that delighted the audience of 1,800 Symms and Reagan supporters.

In contrast to that tough cowboy talk, Reagan, even in elaborating on his text, simply expressed pride in the servicemen who conducted the operation.

"They didn't have more than an hour's notice," Reagan said. "And yet, out there, over the Mediterranean, with all the aerial traffic that was going on in that area, in the dark of night, they were able to pick out the target plane and persuade it to land where they wanted it to land."

He asked members of his audience to take notice of Americans in uniform and go a little out of the way to "say hello and give them a smile and tell them how proud we are."

If the administration's sense of triumph over the capture on Thursday was dampened by the refusal of Italy and Yugoslavia to detain the accused mastermind of the ship hijacking and murder of Klinghoffer, it was hardly apparent on the campaign trail.

Presidential spokesmen told reporters aboard Air Force One that Reagan "is confident he did the right thing" and the administration "will continue to be keenly interested in the apprehension" of Palestine Liberation Front leader Mohammed Abbas.

The 38-year-old Abbas helped get the hijackers off the ship and accompanied them on the intercepted flight. He apparently made his way from Italy to Yugoslavia and back to some receptive nation in the Arab world without being served with an arrest warrant issued by the U.S. District Court in Washington. The warrant charged him with masterminding the hijacking.

One U.S. official said Tuesday that messages between Abbas and the four hijackers were among the evidence offered by the Reagan administration to a U.S. court here to back the claim Abbas planned the ship seizure.

The administration also submitted a history of past terrorist attacks by the Palestine Liberation Front in which captured members stated they got their instructions from Abbas.

The text of the messages was not released to the public on the grounds the evidence was "sealed" in order not to prejudice any future legal proceedings.

HOWEVER, THE CASE is not settled. The presiding judge, U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, is to rule on the constitutionality of key issues, including freedom of speech in the classroom, before rendering a judgment in the case. The judge could uphold or alter the jury's finding.

"He (Bunton) will decide who's entitled to a judgment," said Harrell Feldt, attorney for Midland College.

Those serving on the three-man, three-woman jury included a Midland construction manager and five Odessans, a transport driver, a school custodian, a restaurant waitress-cashier, and a housewife.

In reaching its verdict, which covered nine issues, the jury found that the Midland College officials "failed to treat the plaintiff (Martin) as other instructors similarly situated."

Courtroom testimony indicated that some other instructors had used "foul" language in the classroom but that the administration did not admonish them or fire them.

Martin became the focus of a Midland College administrative investigation after two students, Richard Sexton and Tim Rogers, dispatched letters to the administration complaining of Martin's use of the words "bullshit" and "sucks" in a night class on June 19 of last year and alleged he had belittled the class.

But several other students, including honor students, said they did not find Martin's language objectionable, that it was in context, and characterized him as a high-quality instructor and not a "stiff shirt" as were some other college teachers. Martin indicated that Sexton and Rogers were marginal students, that Sexton earned a low C in the class and Rogers got a D. He said Sexton was argumentative and that Rogers often was absent from class.

THE JURY also found that the Midland College officials did comply with the due-process procedures of Midland College and that Parrish, Hunt and Yell did not act toward Martin with malicious intent.

College officials contended that Martin's language violated the school's policy on "professional spirit," that his word choice was both "inappropriate" and "unacceptable," that he had been placed on a "warning" in 1983 to refrain from using profane or obscene language in the classroom; that he violated his agreement to curb his language and thereby broke the agreement, which some officials viewed as tantamount to probation, and thus subjected himself to disciplinary action, including suspension or termination.

Martin, who was hailed as an outstanding instructor by his students and his administrative supervisor, Dr. Will Morris, chairman of the Cultural Studies Division, had helped draft the college's due-process policy.

"I put in a lot of safe-guards that were taken out — a lot of protection of faculty rights," he said.

The college dean, Yell, had proposed firing Martin for his continued use of profanity, and Hunt agreed, Martin said. Subsequently, in the due-process procedures, a faculty-review committee voted 3 to 2 to retain Martin on the faculty but Parrish was against that and opted to uphold his firing. The trustees in September 1984 upheld the president's decision following a public hearing.

In the faculty-review and trustee hearings, Martin complained that the administration failed to bring forth his accusers, Sexton and Rogers. However, Sexton was among the 12 witnesses who testify in the 1½-day trial; 10 of the 12 were called by Martin's attorney, Crosby County Attorney John Barnhill, and included Parrish, Yell, Hunt, Martin, Morris, and five of Martin's former students, Nancy Smith, Elizabeth Sauer, Lynette Lloyd Maddox, Susie Tucker and Jack McCullagh. The defense put Sexton and Kenneth Peeler, a Midland College trustee, on the stand.

Barnhill's final arguments to the jury were low-key and undramatic, while Feldt's took on a tougher tenor. Feldt exhorted the jury to "use good common, everyday horse sense" in reaching a just verdict, which would say, in effect: "Profanity is not going to be tolerated. It's wrong, wrong. It has no place in our society."

Barnhill said he was "almost moved to tears" by Feldt's arguments. "I'm surprised he didn't mention the flag, apple pie and make a good old Fourth of July speech."

He noted Sexton, a Midland County deputy sheriff and an administrative lieutenant in the County Jail, said he can tolerate a prisoner calling calling him a "son of a bitch," but "this professor (Martin) ought to be terminated" for using profane or obscene language in the classroom.

"Mr. Martin is genuinely interested in education and is genuinely interested in his students," said Barnhill, who asked the jury to vindicate Martin and "to make things right."

Midland College officials quietly filed from the courtroom to consult with their attorneys and, without comment, left the courthouse en route to a board meeting at Midland College.

"It's not fun to lose," Martin said.

THE ECONOMIST said he "didn't expect to get rich over this deal." Still, Martin noted he was disappointed that the jury didn't award him funds for "the damage that was done to my reputation, but the jury didn't see it that way."

"I'm not crusading," Martin said. "I'm not trying to say I stand for profanity in the classroom necessarily. I do occasionally use those words."

He said it "seems unfair to be fired for what the majority of professors do."

Martin said his profanity was used "in context and was 'not offensive' and obviously was not causing a disturbance. I still say 'hell' and 'damn.' I don't see anything wrong with it." By the jury's verdict, Martin said he feels that the Midland College "faculty will be uplifted. I think their morale was beaten down."

Further, he said he hopes the jury's decisions will make the college's administrators "a little less likely to terminate and more likely to do their homework."

Martin speculated that the decision to fire him was done in haste, and "once they made their decision, they felt they couldn't back down."

Parrish said he felt that "it was so obvious that the educational process and the student learning environment was interrupted" by Martin's word usage. And how such language affects students and the college itself is an "intangible," he said. "You never really know," for example, how many students will not take a course because of an instructor's reputation or intimidation.

What Parrish termed as "the big surprise" was the jury's ruling that college officials "failed to treat" Martin as "they do other instructors" similarly situated.

"That was the biggest shock," Parrish said. "That's the part that baffled us." He said that no other faculty member had been similarly warned and that the administration could not act on "hearsay" that other instructors may have used profanity in the classroom.

"Maybe we didn't build a good case."

Divers rescue victims of Marine copter crash

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A team of divers hovering overhead was able to "immediately" reach a helicopter that crashed into the ocean after taking off from a ship, but 15 Marines aboard died in one of the corps' worst aircraft accidents, officials say.

Four others were rescued Tuesday when their their twin-rotor, Marine CH-46D "Sea Knight" helicopter, with 19 people aboard, crashed and sank on takeoff from the USS Guadalcanal.

The helicopter was participating in an exercise with the 26th Marine Amphibious Unit, he said. The CH-46 is the principal assault helicopter of the Marine Corps and also is used extensively by the Navy to carry cargo and passengers between ships and shore.

"It's a very safe aircraft, for us. It's real good. It's been in the inventory since Vietnam," said Gunnery Sgt. John Simmons said, adding he had no details of the crash.

"It left the ship flying over the water and crashed," he said.

Simmons said a search-and-rescue helicopter with divers aboard was in the air over the ship when the helicopter crashed early Tuesday, so divers were able to get to the wreckage "immediately."

Simmons said 12 of the casualties were Marine troops aboard the helicopter and three others were crew members.

Four Marines were pulled from the choppy waters around the Guadalcanal and one body was found. Navy and Marine divers searched for the 14 missing Marines, whose bodies were found Tuesday afternoon, Simmons said. The bodies were taken to the naval hospital at Camp Lejeune.

A memorial service was scheduled for today on the Guadalcanal.

The helicopter wreckage will be removed from the ocean floor and taken to either New River Air Station or Cherry Point Marine Air Station for examination by the Marine Aircraft Mishap Board, he said. "They will dismantle it and look at it with a fine-toothed comb."

"They are looking into all the contributing factors that may have caused the crash," he added. "The structure of the helicopter, if anything fell off, the pilot's condition, the weight, all these things they are looking at."

Early this morning, all the injured were in good condition at a medical-dispensary aboard the Guadalcanal, said Sgt. Pamela Vajner.

The passengers and crew are based at Camp Lejeune and its New River Air Station, said Staff Sgt. Terry Ruggles, also of the Camp Lejeune public affairs office.

The accident occurred not far from the Marine Corps' Onslow Beach, just east of Camps Geiger and Lejeune, where Marines practice beach landings, but the Marines said the ship's exact location wasn't known.

The Guadalcanal carries a crew of 650 and up to 2,000 troops.

The accident came five months after the crash of a CH-53D "Super Sea Stallion" helicopter in sea off southern Japan, in which 17 Marines were killed. Eighteen Marines and 11 South Korean Marines were killed when another Sea Stallion crashed into a South Korean mountain in March 1984.

A CH-53 Super Sea Stallion helicopter crashed 11 months ago at Camp Lejeune, killing six servicemen and injuring 11 others, when the helicopter attempted to lift a 155mm howitzer, caught fire and crashed.

The CH-53, the Marines' newest and largest helicopter, was introduced in 1982.

Another military helicopter crash in North Carolina, at Fort Bragg on March 13, killed 12 Army men aboard a Blackhawk helicopter. That crash was ultimately blamed on a missing bolt that caused flight controls to jam.

BANKS

He said he is trying to increase the bank's loans because presently it is enormously liquid.

"We have a 70 percent loans-to-deposits ratio now, and that's considered good," he said.

ClayDesta's deposits dropped from $122,429,579 in the second quarter to $119,648,262 in the third quarter. This is the first time the bank has shown a decrease in deposits since it was opened in 1983. Loans, however, were up, totaling $85,284,474 for the third quarter, compared to $71,029,040 during the second quarter.

Midland American Bank's loan-to-deposit ratio is 69 percent, said Steve Holt, senior vice president-cashier. "This is a higher percentage than we have had, but we're still not loaning out much."

He said he hopes to end the fourth quarter at $17 million in deposits. The bank reported $13,338,221 for the third quarter and $12,021,000 for the second. Loans were $8,793,065 in the third quarter, down slightly from the second quarter's $8,799,000.

Community National Bank's deposits grew from $23,265,000 in the second quarter to $25,408,765 in the third quarter. Loans also rose from $16,188,000 in the second period to $17,850,306 in the third.

"We've been actively seeking out customers," said Bob Gribble, president. "We don't make exploration loans, but we do loan to energy-service firms. Maybe that's another reason for our growth. We're not as directly affected by the oil situation," he said.

Ed Jones, president of Texas Commerce Bank, said it is normal for his bank to grow because it is a young bank, only having been open a year in Midland.

It showed loans of $28,078,000 in the third quarter, as compared to $20,726,000 in the second quarter. Deposits jumped from $44,488,000 in the second period to $52,743,000 in the third.

First City National Bank's growth is attributed to its active officer-call program this year. "Our increases in loans and deposits this quarter are some of the benefits of our year-long business development campaign," said Jerry King, senior vice president-marketing.

First City's deposits grew from $351,038,696 in the second quarter to $355,915,938 in the third quarter. Loans strengthened from $248,542,649 in the second quarter to $257,416,302 in the third.

United Bank deposits grew to $74,853,505 in the third quarter, compared to $73,843,668 in the second. Loans increased from $50,424,047 in the second quarter to $54,594,224 in the third.

Don Jones, president of United Bank, said the secret to his bank's growth has been caution. "Some of our loans are energy-related, and some of them aren't. We are very cautious with all our loans," he said.

While other banks are aggressively seeking growth, Security National Bank is trying to keep its size down. Patrick McClain, vice president of operations, said the bank doesn't have the capital or staff to carry more loans.

The bank had loans of $8,288,000 in the third quarter and $8,015,684 in the second. Deposits were $12,161,000 in the third period and $12,824,102 in the second.

Republic Bank Midland showed loans of $13,854,000 for the third quarter, compared with $12,473,000 in the second quarter. Third quarter total deposits were $67,266,000, while deposits in the second quarter reached $62,867,000.

Local bankers said they expect to see deposits and loans grow in the fourth quarter. "Typically, there is more growth in the fourth quarter because of Christmas-inventory build-dups," said Landy.

David Jones is also looking for a good fourth quarter, but he said it will be interesting to see the effects of pending tax legislation on the oil industry. "It could keep the usual fourth-quarter jumps smaller than they have been."

Judge declares mistrial in Ruiz case after juror admits drinking alcohol

AUSTIN (AP) — A court bailiff testified he smelled alcohol on a juror's breath, prompting a district judge to declare a mistrial in the aggravated robbery trial of David Ruiz, the inmate whose lawsuit led to sweeping reforms in the Texas prison system.

The juror, who was not identified, admitted to state District Judge C.C. "Kit" Cooke of Cleburne that he had a drink during the lunch break Tuesday.

Cooke said a combination of incidents during Ruiz's trial caused him to declare the mistrial, requested by defense attorney Bob Looney. But the judge added that the juror's drinking was "the straw that broke the camel's back."

Court bailiff Mike Porfirio testified he smelled alcohol on a juror's breath after the jury returned from lunch Tuesday.

The juror was questioned by Cooke privately about the alcohol and admitted having a drink during the lunch break. The judge said the juror also admitted drinking during breaks throughout the trial.

Ruiz was charged with four counts of aggravated robbery and one count of rape stemming from a Sept. 15, 1984, attack at a north Austin apartment. His trial was expected to last at least three weeks.

Ruiz, his nephew John Ruiz, and another man, Joe Picacio, were accused of bursting into the apartment in search of drugs and robbing four occupants. A female victim accused David Ruiz and Picacio of rape.

Steve McCleery, executive assistant district attorney, said Tuesday that it was the first case he can recall in Travis County that ended in a mistrial because a juror had been drinking.

"We wish the trial had continued, but I don't think it will hurt our case," McCleery said.

Looney said he "did not want to have a juror in this case or any other case who has been drinking because a juror is not only supposed to be able to listen but be capable of understanding."

No legal action could be taken against the juror.

Before dismissing the jurors Tuesday, Cooke said, "I apologize for the amount of time you've had to spend up here. I know its been long and hard. It's a decision only I can make."

Looney said he was "very sorry that it happened."

"This is far into the trial. I felt we could probably win the case," he said.

Assistant Travis County District Attorneys Terry Keel and Brian Bishop said outside the courtroom they were "disappointed" with the mistrial but both added they did not see it as an inappropriate measure under the circumstances.

Ruiz's trial was marked with procedural problems and heated exchanges between Looney and prosecutors.

Cooke threatened to hold Looney in contempt of court for repeating questions several times during cross examinations of state witnesses. He also told Looney throughout the trial to stop "badgering" the alleged rape victim.

The mistrial motion from Looney was one of about two dozen the defense attorney had made.

Cooke said he would preside over the next trial, adding he would try to set another date in the case within three weeks. He scheduled a hearing Wednesday to determine if Ruiz is indigent and cannot pay court costs.

Webster: Americans targets of terrorists

HOUSTON (AP) — Terrorism in the United States has steadily declined in recent years, but Americans have become the principal targets of international violence, FBI Director William Webster says.

"Estimates show that over 40 percent of the terrorist acts in the last 10 years have been directed at U.S. citizens, institutions or property," Webster said Tuesday in a speech to the International Association of Chiefs of Police meeting in Houston.

Attorney General Edwin Meese told the conference that federal authority would be used to prevent violence and to bring terrorists to justice.

"Terrorism is a crime and a terrorist is a criminal — just like any murderer, kidnapper or burglar," Meese said.

Statistics show terrorist acts within the United States have steadily dropped since 1977, when 112 incidents were reported, according to Webster. The number fell to 51 in 1982, then to 13 last year, he said.

Only four incidents have been reported this year, although last week's bombing of the Arab Anti-Defamation League in California and the murder of a director "probably will be No. 5," Webster said.

Twenty-three incidents have been prevented this year, he said.

"We've made tremendous progress here at home. Working with law enforcement agencies around the world, we can, we must come to grips with this international crime," the director said.

Webster cited the hijacking of an Italian cruise ship and the murder of Leon Klinghoffer, 69, of New York City, who was killed during the ordeal.

The 5,000 conference delegates adopted a resolution praising the capture of the hijackers of the cruise ship Achille Lauro and urging "swift and sure response to every international criminal...to encourage a return to sanity and a rule of law."

'Professional' set Salt Lake City bombs

NATION

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Dozens of detectives seeking leads on twin bomb explosions that killed two people in "a professional-type hit" focused today on a financially troubled company and its nearly 3,000 investors nationwide.

"These are our suspects," said Salt Lake County sheriff's Capt. Bob Jack, waving an inch-thick computer printout of investors in CFS Financial Corp.

The sophisticated bombs, which exploded Tuesday some 10 miles and three hours apart, instantly killed a former officer and the wife of the company's founder and president.

On Sept. 26, CFS Financial mailed to its clients — mostly wealthy professionals — a letter saying the financial counseling and investment company was $5.4 million in the red and could not pay its obligations unless creditors granted additional time.

In recent months, disgruntled investors have filed a flurry of lawsuits against CFS, which has formed a committee to deal with its financial plight.

Wooden boxes containing the bombs bore the names of Steven F. Christensen, 31, killed outside his sixth-floor office in the downtown Judge Building, and J. Gary Sheets, whose wife, Kathy, a 50-year-old mother of four, died when she picked up a newspaper atop a box outside the couple's suburban home, police said.

Salt Lake County Sheriff Pete Hayward said the bombs, designed to trigger at the slightest touch, were likely crafted by a paid killer.

"This was definitely a professional-type hit against an individual target. It was a very sophisticated-type weapon," Hayward said. "There's no doubt in my mind that the individual layman would not know how to put the device together."

A hastily formed task force of more than 40 city, county and federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms officers also pursued a possible motive stemming from Christensen's involvement with controversial documents relating to the Mormon Church's origin.

"All the players are involved in both," said police Chief Bud Willoughby. "We are leaning toward the business transactions."

Christensen, the father of three, like Sheets was a Mormon bishop and church history buff. That hobby led him in early 1984 to turn over to church leaders the so-called Salamander Letter, believed written by Martin Harris, a close associate of church founder Joseph Smith.

Meanwhile, an investor in CFS, Rock Springs, Wyo., physician Gordon Stoltzner, filed a federal lawsuit earlier this month claiming the company, which dealt primarily in real estate, had violated securities laws when it sold him interests in four real estate partnerships.

"There have been fabulous losses. One man lost $500,000...in one hit. I spoke to another man who lost $50,000 from one investment, $100,000 in another," Stoltzner said Tuesday.

After a bomb exploded in his home, killing his wife, J. Gary Sheets (center), supposed target of the bomb, is consoled.

Mormon letter probed as link to bomb deaths

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A 155-year-old letter known as the "Salamander Letter," challenging the Mormon Church's official account of its orgins, is one of two links between the bombing deaths of two people, investigators say.

A team of more than 40 officers has not ruled out the possibility the two were killed because of the letter, which has renewed claims that Mormon Church founder Joseph Smith was a charlatan obsessed with buried treasure and the occult, police Chief Bud Willoughby said Tuesday.

Financial consultant Steven F. Christensen, 31, and Kathy Sheets, 50, were killed in the explosions Tuesday. Police believe the second bomb was meant for Mrs. Sheets' husband, Gary F. Sheets, a former business associate of Christensen's.

Christensen died when a shrapnel-filled bomb exploded in his downtown Salt Lake City office Tuesday. Mrs. Sheets was killed three hours later when a similar device exploded in her driveway.

Christensen and Sheets, both Mormon bishops, also were involved in efforts to determine whether the letter, written in 1830 by early Smith follower Martin Harris, is authentic.

Willoughby said the investigation was focusing on their business connections with a financially ailing company called CFA Financial Services. But the letter is also part of the probe.

"All the players were involved in both. We are leaning towards the business transactions," Willoughby said. "Somebody is very, very upset."

The letter contradicts the church's official version of how Smith obtained the Book of Mormon, which Mormons consider to be holy scripture. It also gave new ammunition to critics who argue that Smith was a fake.

The Mormon Church teaches that Smith translated the Book of Mormon from gold plates given to him by an angel named Moroni. The Book of Mormon tells of a group of Hebrews who migrated to America around 600 B.C., and who were visited by Jesus Christ after his resurrection.

Official church histories maintain that Smith translated the plates by divine inspiration, and that the book clarifies ambiguities in the Bible.

But in the letter, dated Oct. 23, 1830, Harris contends that Smith found the gold plates by using a "seer stone," a clear stone through which he received divine knowledge.

Harris also wrote that Smith said he initially was prevented from obtaining the plates by an "old spirit" that transformed itself from a white salamander.

Holocaust memorial construction begins

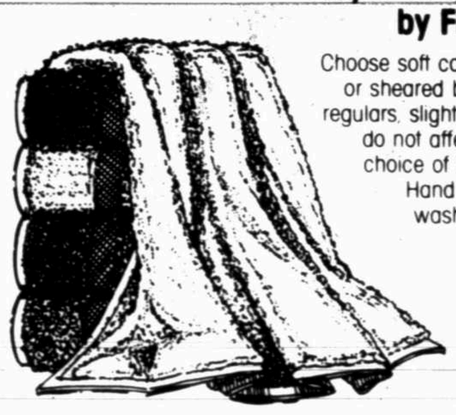

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five years after Congress acted, construction is beginning on a museum "dedicated to the noble and urgent cause of remembrance" of the Nazi Holocaust in which 6 million Jews were annihilated.

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, being built on federal land near the Mall and the Washington Monument, is designed to commemorate holocaust victims programs.

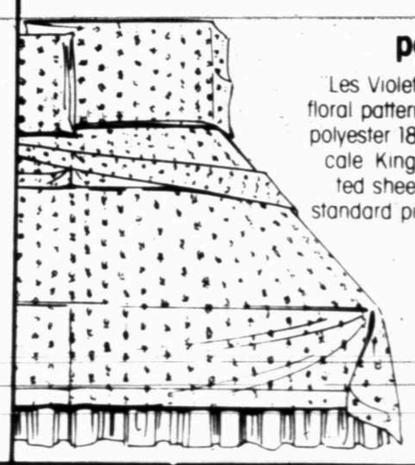

The official ground-breaking ceremony kicking off construction of the 300,000-square-foot building was planned for today. Work at the site began Oct. 4.

Wild Santa Ana winds lash fires across Southern California

In the aftermath of a raging fire pushed on by Santa Ana winds, Janet Schlihs of Malibu, Calif., surveys the burned rubble that was her home.

AP Laserphoto

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The fierce Santa Ana winds today fanned five raging wildfires across Southern California brushland as more than 1,400 firefighters tried to gain an upper hand on blazes that have scorched more than 60,000 acres and burned 22 houses.

The region's biggest fire destroyed 10 homes and burned 35,000 acres by late Tuesday in the Santa Paula area 50 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, fire officials said. So far, the fires have been blamed for one death.

"We have no containment on that fire at all," said Ventura County fire spokeswoman Laurie Nichols. "If the winds start to die, we hope that will help."

The National Weather Service said firefighters would get a break today from the regional Santa Ana winds that swirl down from the interior toward the sea, fanning flames as they roar through the canyons and mountain passes.

More than 1,000 firefighters, aided by aerial tankers, helicopters and bulldozers, worked the fire lines Tuesday across Southern California.

When the series of fires ignited Monday, firefighters worked against flames whipped by 50 mph winds in humidity that dropped to 9 percent.

The humidity dropped again to 9 percent Tuesday, but winds eased to about 30 mph, said National Weather Service forecaster Bill Hoffer. "The wind should drop drastically, maybe to the light and variable level by late afternoon."

Those whose homes were burned watched or began to tally the damage.

"I was born in that house," Gracei Jauregui said as he stood near the burning home in which he had lived for 72 years in the Ojai Valley.

Taylor Uhler surveyed the ruins of his home in the Malibu area that the family had fled Monday.

"The things we got the most emotional about were my daughter's hamster and her little teddy bear," he said.

"Luckily we have each other," said his wife, Paula. "It's brought us a lot closer."

In the Malibu area, firefighters made progress against two big fires, believed caused by arson, that destroyed a dozen homes.

The Piuma fire that burned 3,300 acres and the Decker Canyon blaze that consumed 5,800 acres were 35 percent and 50 percent contained late Tuesday, said Los Angeles County fire spokesman Steve Dochterman.

Classes were canceled Tuesday at Pepperdine University in the Malibu area because Pacific Coast Highway was closed to all but local residents. Students were expected back today. About 2,000 students had evacuated for several hours Monday when fire swept onto university property, but no structures burned.

Other stubborn blazes in Ventura County just north of Los Angeles eluded the control of firefighters.

A blaze in Tapo Canyon in the Simi Valley area, 35 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, burned 10,000 acres and prompted an evacuation of 3,500 students at Moorpark College.

Fire rescuers drive engine 'through hell'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four city firefighters raced their fire engine, "driving through hell" to rescue a pair of trapped comrades who were fighting a blaze on a windy ridge in the Montecito Heights area.

Ronald Carr and Cameron Kennedy were trapped when they drove along the ridge in their four-wheel-drive truck to try to stop the flames from reaching four houses Monday night. The flames jumped a dirt road and surrounded them.

The Montecito Heights fire was relatively small, compared to the blazes sweeping Southern California, but there was excitement enough for Firefighter James Cho, 28, one of those who helped bring Carr and Kennedy out.

"It was like driving through hell," Cho said. "We drove right through a tunnel of fire to get to them."

Cho clung to the engine as it barreled down a dirt road on a ridge that overlooks the Pasadena Freeway and the center of Los Angeles.

"It was a narrow, dirt road, with tall eucalyptus trees," he said. "The wind was blowing hard, the grass and brush were burning and the trees were blazing. Eucalyptus have a lot of oil. They burn hot.

"We were in our fire-resistant uniforms, but we were burning hot and couldn't see too well because of the flames and smoke.

"There was Capt. Carl Gundersen, firefighter Ed Elguea and me, and engineer Kenneth Mulholland was driving.

"Engineer Mulholland was very calm and got us through to where the truck was. They'd used their 200 gallons of water but we used our 400 gallons to damp down the fires around us and to stop the flames spreading to two more houses at the end of the ridge."

Two homes on the ridge were destroyed and .20 acres of grassland blackened but no one was injured, said fire spokesman Jim Wells. Damage was estimated at $162,000.

The fire is believed to have been set by arsonists and two people have been arrested, said fire spokesman Gary Svider, who said he could not identify the people arrested.

NATO officials OK 'Star Wars'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Representatives of 16 NATO countries overwhelmingly endorsed "Star Wars" research after U.S. arms control adviser Paul H. Nitze said "there is no available alternative" to the space-based weapons system.

The North Atlantic Assembly, meeting in its 31st annual session, on Tuesday voted 92-12 for a resolution supporting research into President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, or SDI.

"Today, there is no available alternative to this means of deterrence, and thus it is the necessary and moral course for us to take," Nitze told the representatives before the vote.

The initiative calls for a reduction in nuclear weapons and a transition to non-nuclear defensive weapons, including the Star Wars anti-missile defense system.

In his remarks, Nitze noted that the 1972 anti-ballistic missile treaty bans deployment of defensive space weapons, not research.

The administration has generated some controversy with this stance because it has changed its interpretation of the treaty to permit research along with development and testing of Star Wars weapons.

"SDI is a research program that is investigating the feasibility of new defensive technologies, both Earth- and space-based," Nitze said. "The program is and will continue to be conducted in full conformity with the ABM treaty."

It will take at least 10 years before deployment can even be discussed, he said. "The results of the SDI research program will provide the information and data base necessary for future administrations and Congress to make an informed decision, sometime in the next decade, about whether to begin to shift toward an offense-defense mix placing greater reliance on defense than at present."

Nitze said the initiative must be developed to help avoid the threat of nuclear retalitation and added that SDI will help Europe's defenses.

"Because we are examining systems that could defend both European and U.S. territory, Europe would receive the direct benefits which result from increased uncertainty for potential agressors," he said.

Presidents steering students to community, public service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventy-five college presidents, concerned that students are preoccupied with career goals, today launched a project to steer more of them into community and public service.

They called upon their academic colleagues "to offer a vision and create incentives for public service."

"We are asking them to remove disincentives, such as excessive loan indebtednes that forces many students to f cus solely on their eventual employability," the presidents said in a statement launching the Project for Public and Community Service.

The project, run by the Education Commission of the States, is co-chaired by the presidents of Brown, Georgetown and Stanford universities.

Frank Newman, president of the Education Commission of the States, recently wrote a Carnegie Foundation report complaining that colleges were graduating students with too many debts and too little civic responsibility.

The project, housed on the Brown campus in Providence, R.I., will establish a public service network to match students seeking service with local and regional agencies that need volunteers.

Admissions experts eye extracurricular honors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Admission experts said today new research shows that students who shine at extracurriculars in high school often succeed in college.

Extracurricular achievements are no substitute for good grades, but they are a useful addition for college admission officers trying to predict which students will succeed, the College Board and the Educational Testing Service said today.

The College Board, sponsor of the Scholastic Aptitude Test, and ETS, which makes the entrance exam, jointly sponsored the study of the records of 3,676 students in the Class of 1983 at nine colleges.

ETS research psychologist Warren W. Willingham said high school rank and performance on tests such as the SAT remain the best predictors of academic success.

But Willingham said "productive follow-through," or "persistent and successful extracurricular achievement," also proved to be "a particularly good predictor of leadership and significant independent accomplishments" in college.

George H. Hanford, the president of the College Board, said the findings were significant and intriguing and represented a milestone in the organizations' search for new ways to predict college success.

The students in the study were at Bucknell University; Colgate University; Hartwick College; Kalamazoo College; Kenyon College; Occidental College; Ohio Wesleyan University; University of Richmond, Va., and Williams College.

Willingham found that four types of personal information — productive follow-through in activities; high school honors; students' personal statements, and school references — were useful additions in trying to predict who would succeed in college.

"Productive follow-through was the strongest addition," he said.

ETS said that on the 1-to-5 scale used in the study, a student might have earned a 5 by rising to managing editor after three years on the school paper while also winning distinction in track.

"On the other hand, limited engagement in miscellaneous activities with no evidence of significant accomplishment would earn the lowest rating," it said.

The study seems to confirm the traditional advice of college guidance counselors that it is better for students to excel in one activity than to dabble in several.

Willingham and a colleague, Hunter M. Breland, examined the qualifications of 25,000 students who applied to the nine colleges in 1979. Half were accepted and 4,814 enrolled in September 1979.

They published a study in 1982 on "Personal Qualities and College Admissions."

The new study by Willingham alone is based on his review of the records of 3,676 of those students who were still enrolled as seniors in 1983. Among them, 30 percent had earned honors; 35 perent held a leadership position on campus, and about one in four had registered some significant accomplishment.

Karelis named post-secondary educationhead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett is dispatching a top adviser to run the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education, an independent-minded agency over which Bennett wants more control.

Bennett's department announced Tuesday that Charles H. Karelis is replacing Sven Groennings as director of the fund immediately. Groennings reportedly had resisted Bennett's efforts to exert more influence over how the agency spends its $12.7 million budget.

The fund, created in 1972, has won plaudits from the academic community and outside evaluators for the way it has provided seed money for projects to improve colleges and to broaden access for non-traditional students.

Last week Bennett named five new members of its 15-member national board, whose chairman, Vermont Lt. Gov. Peter B. Smith, has been lobbying to preserve the fund's traditional independence.

The House of Representatives, in a budget report adopted last week, noted the fund's past successes and said, "The secretary is directed to preserve the fund's autonomy."

Karelis, 40, who is on leave as chairman of the philosophy department at Williams College, joined the Education Department in June and has been advising Bennett on efforts to offer vouchers for public or private schools in the $3.6 billion Chapter 1 remedial education program.

FIPSE has helped nurture scores of programs to improve access to higher education for women, minorities, blue-collar workers and nontraditional students. It has sponsored efforts to eliminate gobbledygook in writing and to bring "truth-in-advertising" to college catalogs. Outside evaluators have given the agency high grades as an unbureaucratic, innovative program.

Bennett was on vacation in North Carolina and unavailable for comment Tuesday. But he said in a statement: "I have a high regard for Dr. Karelis, who has been advising me on a wide range of matters related to higher education and has served as my liaison with the higher education community. He will make an excellent director of the fund."

Bennett recently sent the fund's national board a list of priorities for awarding new grants including: strengthening the liberal arts, raising academic standards, improving teacher education, and conducting cost-benefit analyses of higher education.

The board had drawn up its own list of priorities, including broadening access to higher education, training the unemployed and ways to teach difficult subjects.

Bennett, in a letter to a House committee, said that "in terms of legal as well as moral responsibility, the buck stops with the secretary."

Gary L. Bauer, the department's undersecretary, said Tuesday he was "a little surprised at the outrage" some of the fund's supporters have voiced over Bennett's efforts to influence the program's grants. Bauer said it "was not unreasonable for the secretary to want to have his own person there."

He said he has heard charges in the past about "trendiness" in the fund's operations and that "whatever the latest fad was, money was going in that direction.' But he added, "I don't think we're going to see any dramatic night-and-day changes" in its operations.

Stars launch Army's stay-in-school pitch

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army, concerned that a 26 percent nationwide high school dropout rate will make it more difficult to keep a quality force, has enlisted celebrities to make televised stay-in-school pitches.

Ed Marinaro, a featured actor on NBC-TV's "Hill Street Blues" and former Minnesota Vikings and Cornell University football star, will encourage teen-agers to stay in school as he roams the hallways of his old high school in New Milford, N.J.

"If you've been thinking of quitting high school...think of your future instead," Marinaro says in a 60-second spot that will debut later this month. "Don't start your future with a handicap."

Through the first nine months of the 1985 fiscal year, ending June 30, 89 percent of the Army's 74,900 recruits had high school diplomas. For the military as a whole, it was 91 percent; when General Educational Development equivalency certificates were added, it rose to 95 percent.

In 1980, by contrast, little more than half of the recruits entered the Army with a high school diploma.

Trump Coup Tommy was highly satisfied with 1985. Although the year was already in its final quarter, he was winning $9.50 — the first time he had ever been plus at the club so late in the year. As our readers know, Tommy has a penchant for playing well only on those hands where trumps break badly. On the simplest hands he will go down because of stupid gaffes.

Note North's delicate bid of three spades — a dangerous tactic when playing with Tommy. Since North would have shown a spade suit at the one-level if he had one, the bid showed a concentration of strength rather than a real suit, in case his partner wanted to play no trump. Tommy, who had already shown his strength with his cue-bid of the enemy suit, could do no more than rebid his diamonds, and when his partner simply raised, an adventurous auction ended quietly.

West won the ace of hearts and returned the suit. Tommy ruffed and laid down the ace of diamonds. East's heart discard was manna from heaven. To make his contract, Tommy had to strip West of his side-suit cards and reduce the length of his own trump holding.

To the uninitiated, it might seem that, since North-South's combined holding in clubs was longer than spades, it might be right to clear the spades first. As the cards lie, that would have doomed the contract when West ruffed the third spade.

Tommy realized that he could not make the contract unless three rounds of clubs went through. Accordingly, he cashed the ace-queen of clubs, then crossed to the king of clubs. His foresight was rewarded when East did not follow to the third club. Tommy ruffed the table's last club, cashed the ace of spades, crossed to the king and ruffed a heart. Now he was down to the king jack of trumps and a spade, while West held nothing but trumps. Declarer simply led his spade. West was forced to ruff, and then had to present Tommy with his contract by leading a trump into his K J tenace.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

'Miami Vice's' Don Johnson Glamour's 'Man of the Year'

Don Johnson

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Johnson, the co-star of "Miami Vice," is a "pink pants's bad boy" who typifies "postmodern macho," says Glamour magazine, which named the macho star its Man of the Year.

The magazine's November issue describes Johnson as "a vital, primal male with predatory eyes, a warm, seductive smile and a stubborn 'I'll-do-whatever-I-damn-well-please' three-day stubble."

It notes that "his appeal is a complete turnaround from that of Michael Jackson" — the "androgynous thriller" the magazine picked in 1984.

AUSTIN (AP) — Bookstores in Austin, where James Michener wrote his new novel, "Texas," report some customers are buying up to 10 copies of the book, which has soared to the top of best-seller lists.

"In the more than two years I've worked here, it's created the most interest I've seen in one particular book," said Frank Mesko, assistant sales manager for a B. Dalton store in Austin.

The store has received three shipments of the book already and sold about 900 copies in seven working days, Mesko said.

Apparently, booksellers predict, "Texas" is going to be a popular Christmas item.

"A lot of people are buying them for Christmas gifts," said Marilyn Brueck, an employee of Waldenbooks in Austin.

"We think we will be getting some back after Christmas," Mesko added. "We hope there won't be too many."

Michener, who wrote the book at the University of Texas after being invited to Texas by then-Gov. Bill Clements, decided to remain in Austin after finishing the novel.

Two weeks ago, "Texas" wasn't on the New York Times list of best sellers. But Sunday, the book emerged No. 1.

"There was none of this moving up. It just shot to No. 1," said Noel Robertson, manager of a Waldenbooks store.

Mary Ann Rennick, a news assistant for the Times' best-seller staff, said it isn't unique, although it is somewhat unusual for a book to come from nowhere to the top of the list.

The book has a list price of $21.95. But some retailers have been discounting it up to 45 percent.

George Benson

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Jazz musician George Benson says he wants to follow up his guest appearance in the television series "Mike Hammer" with more roles but will not put aside his musical career for acting.

"I always wanted to get into acting but I was involved with my musical career and couldn't convince anyone that I could act," the 42-year-old singer-guitarist said in a recent telephone interview.

"I had this yearning to do a part just to prove to myself that it was something I could do," said Benson, performing here as part of an international tour.

Since appearing on the series in January, Benson has had to turn down offers to do TV roles because of his tour, he said. "I've established the fact that I can act, so we have to put aside part of the year to fit it into."

Yoko Ono

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Yoko Ono's donation of marble slabs, pews and an iron chandelier make up one of the most unusual the Salvation Army has received, but the organization says it is grateful.

Pieces of a marble chapel, removed from St. Joseph Infirmary in 1980, when the hospital was demolished, were donated to the Louisville branch for whatever purpose it chose, said Maj. William Thomas.

"We're glad to have it," Thomas said. The chapel will be auctioned off on Saturday.

A rock group named Rising Sun bought the disassembled chapel and gave it to Beatle John Lennon and his wife, Miss Ono, sometime before Lennon was shot fatally in December 1980, auctioneer Stuart Levy said.

Miss Ono's lawyers notified Salvation Army officials in August that the chapel was theirs.

"We assume she got tired of paying the storage," Levy said.

Queen Elizabeth

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — The hall where officials of England and other Commonwealth countries will face each other this week to discuss political issues got a once-over from Queen Elizabeth II, who heads the organization but will not participate in the conference.

The 59-year-old queen on Tuesday inspected the circular mahogany table where the summit participants will sit starting today and took a half-hour tour of the $150 million, government owned Cable Beach hotel-casino complex.

Although she is head of the 49-member association of England and its former colonies, the queen does not preside over or even attend the political sessions of the biennial summit.

Richard Nixon

TORONTO (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon, chosen as arbitrator in a contract dispute between baseball umpires and the two major leagues, is a friend of the sport trusted by both sides, a union attorney said.

Nixon, 72, is expected to hold a hearing either Friday in New York or Saturday in the American League city where the World Series is scheduled to open that day, presidents Chub Feeney of the National League and Bobby Brown of the American League and umpires union attorney Richie Phillips said Tuesday.

The former president is "a long-time friend of baseball and a man in whom both sides place a great deal of trust," Phillips said.

Nixon, who lives in Upper Saddle River, N.J., has attended many baseball games in New York.

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Everett Taylor, editor-in-chief of the Tyler Morning Telegraph and The Tyler Courier-Times, received the Baptist General Convention of Texas' communications award for his Christian stance on moral issues.

Taylor, also principal editorial writer for the Tyler papers, received the award based on his editorials in both papers, which are published by T.B. Butler Publishing Co. Inc.

West German to get Nobel

Von Klitzing

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Klaus von Klitzing of West Germany's Max Planck Institute for Solid State Research won the 1985 Nobel Prize for Physics today for electronics research described as very important to the development of the semiconductor industry.

Von Klitzing's discovery of the quantized Hall effect "opened up a new research field of great importance and relevance," the Nobel Physics Committee said.

The 42-year-old West German studied at the Technical University of Brunswick. In 1980, he became a professor at the Technical University in Munich, before his association with the Planck Institute in Stuttgart.

Prof. Stig Lundqvist, chairman of the committee, said Von Klitzing's work was "very, very exciting, and all the national laboratories jumped at this."

Lundqvist said the research was very important to the development of the semiconductor industry.

The Hall effect has to do with deflection of electrons in an electrical current passing through a metal strip if a magnetic field is applied.

The effect itself was discovered more than 100 years ago by the American physicist E. H. Hall, Nobel officials said. It is now now well understood in relation to common metals and semiconductors.

However, under extremely low temperatures and extremely strong magnetic influence, electrons can be forced instead into "ordered movement," the Nobel announcement said.

By quantizing the movement, von Klitzing brought it into the realm of quantum physics, a 20th-century theory that amounts of energy change in small, discreet quantities.

The Nobel committee said that for the last decade it had been suspected that so-called "Hall conductivity" could change in steps with changes in the magnetic field, producing quantized conductivity.

"It was not expected, however, that the quantization rule would apply with a high accuracy," the announcement said.

Von Klitzing's experimental demonstration in 1980 that it did as a "great surprise."

South African police kill three

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police opened fire with shotguns from the back of a truck in a mixed-race area near Cape Town, killing three youths and wounding three others who were in a stone-throwing crowd, officials and witnesses said.

"It was like a war out here," said a witness who spoke Tuesday on condition he not be identified. "The firing kept up. Homes were peppered with shotgun blasts."

Police said three people were killed and three were wounded by the police fire in Athlone, a mixed-race area east of Cape Town. A spokesman for the national police department in Pretoria said there had been stone-throwing in the neighborhood throughout the day.

Residents said as many as six youths were wounded, but that could not be verified. One resident said he saw four wounded people hiding in a home, fearing they would be arrested if they sought medical help.

That resident, who also spoke on condition he not be identified, said other wounded residents were driven away from the area in private cars.

Residents said youths began throwing stones at a South African Railways truck driving through the neighborhood when they realized it was a government vehicle.

Residents said men emerged from wooden crates aboard the truck and began firing shotguns at the youths. Some residents claimed the men were soldiers.

The police spokesman, who according to regulations cannot be identified, confirmed that the firing came from the back of a railway truck. But he said the men were policemen, not soldiers, and that they fired birdshot, a lightly packed shotgun charge intended to sting but which can be lethal.

Earlier Tuesday, attorney Priscilla Jana said President P.W. Botha had denied her appeal for a new trial for Ben Moloise, scheduled to hang Friday for the killing of a black policeman in November 1982.

Last year the 1984 U.N. Security Council passed a resolution calling on South Africa not to execute Moloise, a member of the banned African National Congress, South Africa's main black guerrilla organization.

In Washington, State Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman said the United States supports the U.N. Security Council resolution urging that Molise spared.

"Our position is well known to the South African government and has been repeated recently concerning our request for clemency," he said.

The ANC has said it ordered the slaying of warrant officer Philipus Selepe.

NATION IN BRIEF

Fed head Volcker nixes World Bank

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker says the World Bank is an exciting place but he doesn't particularly want to work there.

"I'm here. I'm staying," said the 6-foot-7-inch, cigar-chewing central banker, whose term as Fed chairman runs until August 1987.

"Nothing is forever, but that is the way things stand at the moment," Volcker told a business conference Tuesday, ending weeks of speculation that he might take an early retirement from the Fed to become president of the 149-nation international lending organization.

Malpractice limit set

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court apparently is signaling states they may deal with a spreading insurance "malpractice crisis" by placing limits on amounts victims of medical negligence can recover.

But at least one justice — objecting to the court's silence in a case from California — said the court should review the issue thoroughly and give the states explicit guidance.

By an 8-1 vote Tuesday, the justices let stand a ruling that allows California to continue to place a $250,000 ceiling on the amount medical malpractice victims can receive for non-economic losses, such as pain and suffering.

The court refused to hear an appeal by Lawrence Fein, a lawyer employed by the California Legislature who said his life expectancy was shortened drastically because doctors failed initially to diagnose his heart attack.

Pentagon 'confused'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is riddled with confused organization, poor management and destructive rivalries, claims a Senate staff report that today is recommending the military Joint Chiefs of Staff be abolished and replaced by an advisory council of senior generals.

The 645-page report of the bipartisan staff of the Senate Armed Services Committee, in preparation for more than two years, portrays civilian leaders in the Defense Department as dominated by "the power and the influence" of the separate armed services.

It said the uniformed services are unable to rise to the levels of close cooperation needed to conduct effective joint military operations crucial to success in modern warfare.

Such operations too often are no more than loose confederations of single service forces with different priorities, operating methods and strategies patched together at the last moment, the report said.

In an initial reaction, the Pentagon disparaged the staff study and implied there may be disagreement within the committee on its conclusions. The Pentagon also contended the successful Navy interception last week of an Egyptian airliner with hijackers aboard proves the present system works and needs no repair.

Politics 'needs Christians'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The way to save an America that's "going to hell" is for more Christians to seek and win public office, the Rev. Jerry Falwell said in a new call for candidates and political workers.

"We are winning; it isn't a question of if, only when," he said Tuesday night to a cheering audience of about 200 people, including more than 50 who indicated they were potential political candidates.

The group was in Washington for a three-day "How to Win an Election" conference — sponsored by the American Coalition for Traditional Values — featuring conservative Christian senators, congressmen, preachers and political strategists.

Many, like Falwell, are fundamentalist Protestant pastors, hoping to exert more political influence. When potential candidates in the audience were asked to stand, more than 50 did so.

Public schools undermined

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department investigation into charges that some public school districts may have lowered academic standards to graduate more minorities is a ruse to undermine the public school system, the head of the National Education Assocation says.

"It sounds like they're trying to build a case against public education," NEA president Mary H. Futrell said Tuesday in an interview.

Ah so, Toyota

Now Gov. Mark White may not do things that bring smiles to Texas faces all the time, and he's got a good start on a collection of political boo-boos. Like his claim to no new taxes. But Texans have to give White credit for his willingness to go the extra mile to make the Lone Star State prosperous.

That fact was obvious in White's whirlwind tour of Japan recently, which included the governor's Texas-style invitation for Toyota officials to locate one of their automobile plants in Texas.

'Hold on!' some Texans undoubtedly thought. It might be different if it was a factory making full-sized pickup trucks. But little bitty Japanese cars?

Regardless, White's brainstorm was easier said than done anyway, and the governor acknowledged that fact. Texas doesn't exactly fill the bill where the Japanese automakers are concerned. Said White: "We've got the same problems as before. The cost of transportation weighs very heavily against Texas. We've got to show them how to cut those costs or cut some other costs that will yield the same level of profitability they expect."

We're on the governor's side where attracting a Japanese automobile plant to Texas is concerned and, frankly, we think it would be good for both parties. Texas has a lot to offer such enterprises — a stable, dependable, reliable workforce; great climate; low relative taxation; a lifestyle second to none; and wide, open spaces to boot.

And, of course, the state's residents would benefit tremendously from the location of an automobile plant here. It's not as though such an industry is environmentally damaging or exceedingly dangerous, and it certainly would be a shot in the arm for the state's economy.

For years now, major manufacturing concerns in the United States have been relocating their plants to Texas to take advantage of the exceptional business climate in the state. We think a like decision by Toyota officials would be in the best interests of both Toyota and the state.

Now, granted, there are those Texans who will not give up their full-size luxury cars and pickups for anything, but that should be no stumbling block to a good working relationship between Texas and Toyota.

Who knows? Maybe a Toyota pickup bedecked with a set of steer horns would be the result!

Water package needed

It is my fervent hope that informed voters of Texas will cast a yes vote on proposed constitutional amendments numbers 1 and 2 (the Texas Water Package).

The successful passage of Propositions 1 and 2 on Nov. 5 will ensure a far-sighted awareness into the management of our growing state's future water requirements.

Rep. Tom Craddick's Natural Resources Committee exhibited knowledge and leadership in achieving this well-balanced legislation that provides for environmental protections, sensible conservation measures and the implementation of water facilities on a regional basis.

It is gratifying to witness the program receive the endorsement of many elected officials including Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. Such support should indicate to the electorate the importance and necessity of appropriate stewardship of our water, which is fast becoming Texas' most valuable resource.

Thanks for generous help

I write to express my appreciation for the generous support given by Texans for the Mexican earthquake victims. Contributions for use by Church World Service have been received from churches and individuals from across the state.

It is important to remember that though media attention moves on to highlight other events, the relief needs continue, not to mention the long-term rehabilitation and reconstruction effort ahead. Church World Service is committed to working in Mexico addressing both relief and reconstruction needs.

A toll-free number has been established to update those interested about the work in Mexico and how CWS is responding. All contributors are encouraged to call or hear how their gifts are put into action: 1-800-223-1310.

One more jail cell

The jail situation is unbelievable to me. How can commissioners override the people that they are elected to serve?

To me, we need an extra jail cell for many of our elected officials. The mentality demonstrated here reminds me of that of Hitler in World War II. Many of our "servants" escape legal action. Please join me in helping us get new representatives of the people!

Views on Reagan tax reform plan

ART BUCHWALD

Summit key may hinge on tailors!

The White House has been stewing over the successful public relations campaign of Mikhail Gorbachev.

U.S. Soviet specialists were called in last week to deal with what has become known in diplomatic circles as the "Commie Charm Factor."

"Gentlemen, we're faced with something far more dangerous than Soviet missiles. The Russians are making an all-out effort to win over Europe through charisma."

"You exaggerate."

Art Buchwald

"Then why is Gorbachev getting a better press than Princess Di?"

"Everyone gets a better press than Princess Di."

"Nevertheless, Gorbachev has made a remarkable impression on the media. This proves what Mike Deaver has been saying for some time — all it takes to be the leader of a superpower is a smile on your face, a shine on your shoes and a good tailor to make sure your pants have a crease in them."

"There's more to it than that. The reason Gorbachev has been so successful is that he is a new act, and everyone wants to read about him. And why shouldn't they? He's the only Kremlin boss in twenty years who won't fall over while he's giving a speech. But the thing that makes him dangerous, gentlemen, is that he's the first Soviet head of state who talks to the media, and they believe everything he tells them."

"It can't last. Everyone knows the more you make yourself available to the media the quicker they turn on you. I give him six months before the press starts kicking him around."

"We can't wait. Reagan and Gorbachev are going to meet in November and the big thing people will be watching is their charisma. And once they observe the two side-by-side the world will decide who is really the true Communicator. I don't think I have to tell you, the American President cannot afford to come in second."

"Ronnie had charisma before Mikhail was born."

"Yes, but Gorbachev has iron will behind his charisma."

"I thought Gromyko said he had iron teeth."

"It doesn't matter. Mikhail is a very shifty guy who knows how to make a lot of points with people in Western Europe. He's playing the media like a balalaika."

"Gorbachev may have a certain Bolshie charm but he can't tell stories like the President."

"Don't be too sure. I understand Gorbachev has been collecting Polish stories for the past three months."

"What would be wrong if the President just grabbed a microphone and said, 'It's my mike and I paid for it.'"

"That works in New Hampshire but not in Geneva."

"What about Mrs. Gorbachev?"

"We don't have to worry. Nancy has ordered a whole new outfit for the summit. It's no contest."

"Says you. The reporters have been going ga-ga over Raisa."

"That's because she hasn't had any serious competition. Raisa might win a tea party contest, but when it comes to evening wear Nancy will bury her."

"Mrs. Gorbachev is not our problem. Mikhail is the issue. We've never dealt with a Commie who looks like the chairman of an American oil company."

"What do we do?"

"Let Reagan be Reagan, and Gorbachev be Gorbachev. I'll put my money on the President's tailor any day of the week."

N. Korean 'terror ship' watched

WASHINGTON — While the world was watching the strange saga of the Italian cruise ship pirated by Palestinian terrorists last week, U.S. intelligence was keeping close watch on another ship that has been linked to terrorism.

Jack Anderson

The ship is the Tong Gon Ae Guk Ho, a sometime merchant ship owned by North Korea, which uses it to support terrorist operations in the Far East. According to our intelligence sources, it is the only merchant ship in the world that has been identified as an engine of state-sponsored terrorism. The fact that it masquerades as a freighter only adds to the ship's sinister reputation.

Early this past summer, the Tong Gon Ae Guk Ho visited Japan, much to the alarm of Defense Intelligence Agency personnel in Tokyo. It dropped anchor in Japan a second time on Aug. 14, remaining there three days.

These two visits led military officials in Hawaii to provide us with details of the terrorist ship's known activities in the last couple of years. Here's what they told us:

The Tong Gon Ae Guk Ho made its first blips on intelligence monitors in 1983, when North Korean commandos planted a bomb at the "Martyrs' Mausoleum" in Rangoon, Burma. The bomb was detonated by radio too early to kill visiting South Korean President Chun Doo Hwan, but 17 members of the South Korean delegation and four Burmese were killed in the blast.

One North Korean commando was killed and two others were captured. At least one of them gave the Burmese a detailed confession.

The assassination squad had been brought to Burma on the Tong Gon Ae Guk Ho. A secret U.S. military intelligence report said the ship "was tasked to ... put the terrorists and the equipment ashore and to exfiltrate the terrorists to North Korea on completion of the mission."

The report added that "the capture of the North Korean terrorists aborted the merchant ship's exfiltration mission and the ship returned to North Korea in November 1983."

It "basically remained inactive" in or near its home port of Nampo on the west coast of the peninsula "for long periods of time." During that interlude, the ship was involved in "limited People's Republic of China trade" across the Yellow Sea, the report stated.

The Tong Gon Ae Guk Ho extended its travels this year with the two trips to Japan. What particularly worried U.S. intelligence was that the crew manifest, obtained by U.S. agents, made it clear that "much of the crew of approximately 31 persons — including most of the key officers — is identical to the crew which participated in the terrorist support voyage in late 1983," the secret report stated.

Summing up the evidence on the Tong Gon Ae Guk Ho, the report made these points:

— The ship has a "previous history of involvement in covert transport of terrorist-related personnel and arms."

— It has a "history of involvement in North Korean agent and smuggling activities in Japan and possibly other Asian countries."

— It has been "equipped with sophisticated communications devices, heavy machine guns, small firearms, grenades, a larger than normal crew and special 'training' facilities."

Sino-American relations 'strong,' Bush believes

New York Times News Service

PEKING — Vice President George Bush Tuesday completed three days of talks with Chinese leaders. He said relations between the two countries were "strong, both economically and strategically," and not at risk over the renewed Chinese pressures on the Taiwan issue.

At a news conference, Bush spoke optimistically of the outlook for continued development of economic, cultural and other ties with Peking despite differences over Taiwan. "Sino-American relations have moved beyond the point where any one issue can dominate the relationship," he said.

The vice president broke from his official schedule to play an early morning tennis game with Deputy Premier Wan Li, 69 years old, a Politburo member who is noted for his slices and spins. Partnered in a doubles match with his national security adviser, Donald P. Gregg, Bush won two of three sets and earned the plaudits of the official New China News Agency, which ran an account under the heading, "Bush shows skill at tennis diplomacy."

When the Taiwan issue was discussed shortly afterward at a one-hour meeting between Bush and Deng Xiaoping, China's pre-eminent leader, Deng was reported by the agency to have said that relations between Washington and Peking were "normal on the whole," but that the understanding they had achieved had not solved all problems, the most important of which was "the Taiwan question."

"When this question is settled, Chinese-U.S. relations will flow smoothly in every field," Deng said.

This was a more conciliatory formulation than that used at a banquet speech by Premier Zhao Ziyang after Bush's arrival on Sunday, in which Zhao said "the state of affairs is not satisfactory" because of Taiwan, in particular because of a continuing high level of United States arms sales to the island.

The vice president said that both sides had used his talks here to raise concerns of their own about aspects of the current flow of trade and investment. The Chinese had expressed worries about the protectionist mood in the Congress, and he had reassured them that the Reagan administration would resist it. For his part, Bush said, he had pressed the Peking leaders to create a more "conducive" environment for investment, in particular by negotiating an investment protection treaty and by liberalizing rules on repatriating profits.

U.S. Vice President George Bush, left, and Chinese Vice Premier Wan Li are all grins after their tennis match Tuesday in Peking. Bush, 61, and Wan, 69, split doubles 6-3, 6-7, Bush is on an official visit to China. AP Laserphoto

Sznajder bids for ATP points

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

USTA

Canada's Andrew Sznajder (pronounced Schneider) is the No. 8 seed in this week's stop in the Texas Segment of the United States Tennis Association tournament at Midland Racquet Club. He's also the No. 512 player in the world. However, if he has anything to say about it, that number is going to see a drastic reduction.

Playing in only his second USTA tournament, Sznajder is coming off a fifth place finish in an Alcan Circuit tournament five weeks ago and is already one match to the plus side here with a hard-fought 7-5, 7-5 victory over Mexico's Hector Ortiz in Tuesday's opening-day matches. He's looking for a good finish here to add to the eight ATP points he picked up in Canada last month.

"I came in fifth in the Alcan tournament and got my eight ATP points which also gave me direct entry here (without qualifying) and that can be a big difference," said the 18-year old high schooler from Ottawa, Canada. "What I'm trying to aim for, my main goal right now, is to make it into the Top 200. Then I'll work on after that.

"If I can get into the top four here it will give me around 32 points and that make me around 380 or 390 in the rankings. If I play Hawaii respectable next month, It should get me between 310 to 320, if all goes well."

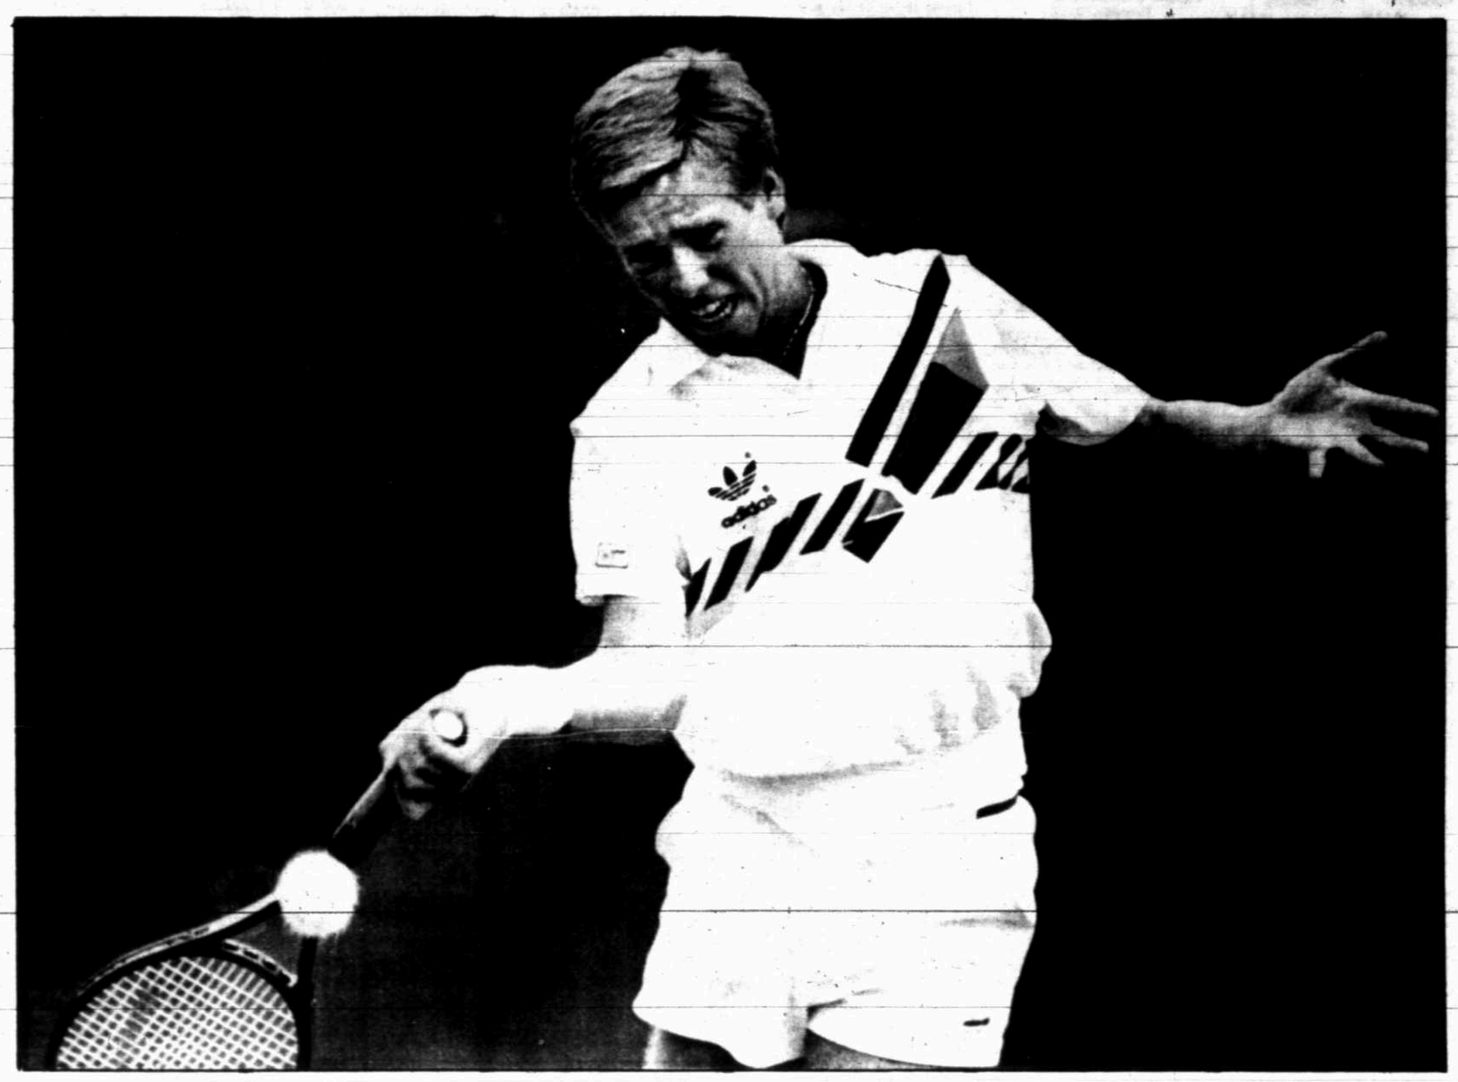

Actually, if Sznajder was living in the United States, he'd be a college student instead of high school. He's currently in the 13th grade and "that's equivalent to the first year in college here," he said.

WHILE HITTING the satellite tour, Sznajder is also receiving instruction from his coach, Dale Power, a man Sznajder calls "an old veteran of the game. He's played a lot of circuits but is taking it easy right now. I went up to him and asked him if he would help me out and he's made a lot of adjustments to my game."

According to Sznajder, Power is a man of many talents in the world of athletics. Not only is he a former player on the circuit, but also a "one-time No. 3 draft choice of the Montreal Canadiens (NHL)," said Sznajder. "In tennis, he was national champion twice and was a six-time member of the Canadian Davis Cup team."

Sznajder says the best part to his own game is "ground strokes. I usually play the base line a lot but in the last couple of months I've been coming in more and serving and volleying. I've been working on it with my coach. He's a finesse player and everyone likes to watch him play. He uses touch shots, places the ball. He doesn't hit heavy top spin but slice and flat, angles the ball."

No Pass, No Play rule casualties are light in 4-5A

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

District 4-5A football teams appear to have escaped the head chopping ax of the state's new and controversial No Pass, No Play reform, but a few chinks were put in the district's armor.

Midland Lee, Odessa Permian, Big Spring and San Angelo suffered no athletic losses on the varsity levels due to grades after the first six-week period of the school year. Only a total of seven varsity players from Midland High, Odessa High, Abilene High and Abilene Cooper combined were thought to be ineligible for Friday night's 4-5A schedule.

Under the No Pass, No Play rule, athletes failing any subject with a grade of below 70 will be ineligible for the next six weeks. Those falling in that category will not be able to participate in any extra-curricular activity at school, including practice.

Under last year's University Interscholastic League rule, athletes had to pass four solids instead of the full five and grades were on a week-to-week basis. In other words, a student could be failing two subjects at the end of one week, but would be able to play the next week if grades were upgraded. Now the student is ineligible for a full six week period after failing any subject.

Midland High is thought to have lost one varsity player to grades, but MHS head football coach Doug McCutchen said, "I don't want to release the name because the kid has asked to take another test and that will be up to his teacher. I will say that he isn't a starter. Grades are changed all the time in situations like this, but it's out of our hands right now."

Odessa High seems to have been hardest hit by the new rule as OHS coach Jerry Millsapps has lost two starters to grades.

"We lost two starters at linebacker and offensive guard and one of them may still be eligible before Friday for reasons I don't want to get into," said Millsapps. "It looks like we got hit harder than anyone. I don't like the rule and I don't know anyone who does. It could have been much worse."

Abilene High coach Don Cumpton said, "We lost only two players and both were non-starters. We lost a defensive back and a lineman. I feel sorry for the two youngsters, but I'm glad we got out as light as we did. We were a little apprehensive even though we kept a close check on everyone through the season. You never know what is going to happen at the last of the six weeks period."

Mike Garrison, head coach at Abilene Cooper, said, "We lost two non-starters on the varsity. It's been tough on us because we haven't been allowed to check student's grades each week in Abilene. It's been hard keeping tabs. That's not fair to us or the kids."

Student athletes, who are failing one or more subjects, actually become ineligible at 3 p.m. Friday. This week is known as "Grace Week" among coaches. That means that failing students on the junior varsity and sophomore levels can play in this week's Thursday games, but can't play or practice after 3 p.m. Friday for the next six weeks. Of course, football is then over.

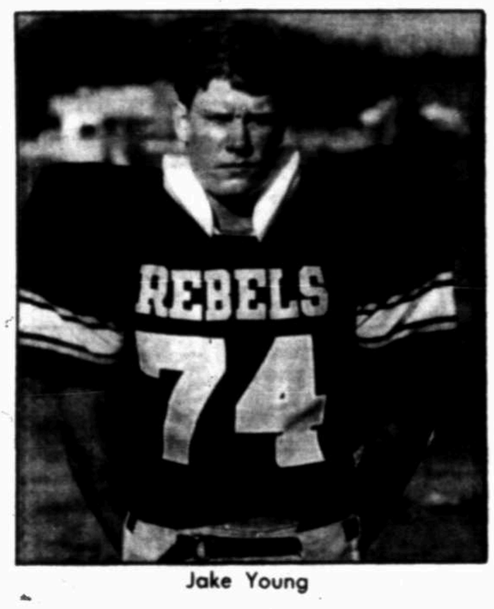

Midland Lee head coach Jack Tayrien said that Nov. 22 would be the earliest that an athlete could regain his eligiblity, and "that would be around the area playoffs. However, a kid who has missed six weeks of practice isn't going to be any help at that stage."

While the varsity teams seemed to be lightly hit by No Pass, No Play overall, several district teams were hard hit at the JV and sophomore levels.

Tayrien reports that six junior varsity players and nine sophomores have been lost at Lee as of Tuesday. McCutchen says that at least three junior varsity and three or four sophomores have been lost at MHS. Neither had an accurate count since varsity members were the most immediate concern since they can't play Friday while JV and sophomore kids are eligible through Thursday.

"The younger kids seem to have been hit the hardest across the district and you can expect that because they aren't quite as mature as the seniors," said Tayrien. "We're pleased that we didn't have any varsity members lost, but I wish we didn't lose anyone in the program. The ones who fail have only next year to think of because football is over for them. If it happens to a senior, that's really tough because he's through. I'm glad we didn't have that happen."

Dillards' Athletes of Month

From Staff Reports

A new award for Midland High and Midland Lee athletes was inaugurated Tuesday night at the respective booster club meetings at each school. But, this award isn't just for achievements on the field of play, but in the classroom as well.

The honor for athletes is to be year round and is known as the Dillards Athlete of the Month, sponsored by a Dillard's department store in Midland Park Mall, and the first two recipients for the month of September were offensive lineman Jake Young from Lee and running back/defensive back Mark Johnson from MHS.

The athletes were picked by the coaches' at their respective schools.

The idea behind the award is to help give athletes in all sports more incentive to hit the books and improve their grades. It can be awarded to an honor student or to a student who has shown vast improvement in his academic work.

Young is not only a two-year starter for the Rebel front line but is also the school's president of the student council and a member of the National Honor Society.

On the playing field, Young has fought in the trenches to help take Lee to a 12-2 record in 1984, including three playoff victories before losing in the quarterfinals. This year, the Rebels are 4-2 overall, 2-1 in District 4-5A play and are strong favorites to gain a third consecutive playoff berth.

Johnson started for the Bulldogs in the defensive backfield a year ago and saw playing time at halfback. This year, the senior is leading Midland High in scoring with seven touchdowns and a two-point conversion for 44 total points, second in 4-5A. Rushing, Johnson is second on the Bulldogs in total yards. He received the nomination for his vastly improved work in the classroom over last semester.

This year, Midland High is 3-3 overall and 1-2 in district play.

BOB BRUNDAGE

No Pass....compromise proposal

What's in a game? Sometimes I wonder as I'm watching teams go at it in football, basketball, baseball or whatever. The pressure is on winning and sometimes it's at the expense of the athlete. I wonder, where is that same pressure for a kid to make straight A's instead of six points?

In some respects I agree with the controversial 'no pass, no play,' rule that goes into effect this week as the six-week grades are posted and athletes with sub 70 averages suddenly find themselves watching from the stands, the season over, the hard work down the drain.

Though I would have been disappointed if that happened to me during my playing days in high school, I'm viewing the situation from a new outlook, an outlook provided by 10 additional years of post-high school learning.

The education must come first. There are no questions on a job application form that ask: How many touchdowns did you score in high school? Can you shoot the basketball from three-point land? Or Can you hit a curve ball breaking in at the knees?

What is on those forms are quesions about education, some asking for information as far back as elementary school and carrying on through college.

From that point of view I agree with the idea behind 'no pass, no play.' There is only a limited tomorrow without an education.

What I don't agree with is a point many have said before. Six weeks is much too harsh a penalty for the athlete in academic trouble. I am of the opinion that destroying any chance of returning to the playing field isn't going to help that athlete's academic problems in the long run.

At least knowing there is a game to be played, if the grades are kept up, will keep a lot of academically marginal athletes working on their studies. Some still won't pass and, after Friday's 3 p.m. deadline, won't be playing. The athlete's season will be over.

His motivation, too, could be gone. If he didn't study before flunking out of sports, what's to keep him at the books after? If he was only in school to compete in sports, what's to keep him in school after?

At least being in school he'll learn something, if by no other means than osmosis.

My solution to the problem isn't novel, it's been expressed before and I'm just repeating what I've heard and agreed with, along with adding a few of my own suggestions.

The first thing I would propose is that a player who fails a course during a six-week period must be suspended from practice and play, but not for six weeks. A second chance should be given so an athlete can have the opportunity to return to the playing field.

The way this solution works would involve the head coach of the sport and the athlete's teachers. After one week, the athlete's grades should be rechecked and if his work has brought his average above 70, he should be reinstated. If it's still below 70, the suspension continues until it reaches the set standards.

Also, the other side of the story is if the athlete slips again. Like someone out on parole, a second chance should be revoked if he returns to old ways.

A reinstatement would not be for another six-week period of time but also on a week by week basis. If the grade dips below the required 70 average again, this time impose a mandatory six-week suspension.

By missing a week or more, the athlete will likely pay more attention when people spout 'no pass, no play.' He'll know first-hand it's for real and it might just be enough to push him back into the orginal design of school: To educate.

So, what's in a game? To most it's also a learning situation, learning to compete with and against others, learning discipline. Though not on an application form, those attributes are looked upon with favor by employers.

The part of Power's style of play that Sznajder is trying to adapt to his own game is "his volley technique because he is extremely good at volleys. He's changed my grip on serves and volleys and it's making me more solid, crsiper."

SO FAR early in the Midland tournament, Sznajder seems to be in control of his game. At least he wasn't one of the first-round upset victims though he had a tough match with Ortiz.

One seed who wasn't as lucky was No. 6 Rodney Harmon, from Washington, D.C., who, after losing the first set 7-6 to Mike Lee of Tucson, retired from the second leading 1-0. Also, No. 12 seed Kelvin Belcher of Houston went down to defeat against Howard Herr of South Africa, 6-0, 6-4.

Of the 10 opening round matches, Sznajder's victory was the closest of the day while No. 17 seed Jeff Klapard, Los Angeles, was the only player needing three sets to gain victory over Rocky Royer of Houston.

In other matches, No. 5 seed Henri Dewet, South Africa, defeated Peter Kolanic, Wickliffe, Ohio, 6-2, 6-4; No. 7 Set Bowen, Buffalo, N.Y., defeated Lior Rusinek, Columbus, Ohio; No. 10 Jon Sorbo, Bradenton, Fla., defeated Simon Bartram, Canada, 6-0, 6-4; No. 11 John Sevely, Los Angeles, defeated Monto Oppenheim, Morton Grove, Ill., 6-3, 6-3; No. 13 Laird Dunlop, Canada, defeated Mike Smith, Little Rock, Ark, 6-1, 6-4; and No. 14 Charleton Eagle, Australia, defeated Dexter MacBride, San Antonio, 7-6, 6-3.

The survivors of round one, which concludes today, are seeking a share of the $10,000 purse almost as much as the valuable ATP points the top players in the tournament will receive. Play resumes today at 11 a.m. and continues through 4 p.m.

Clubhouse lawyers gone

By DENNE FREEMAN

Cowboys

IRVING (AP) — The biggest difference in the Dallas Cowboys this year is that there are no clubhouse lawyers.

At least that's the way Coach Tom Landry sees his 5-1 team, which has a two-game lead in the National Conference Eastern Division race.

Landry said the Cowboys had Super Bowl potential because of "the way we are playing as a team. We are playing together and helping each other. That's the only time you're ever going to have a good team.

"We'll have our valley before it's all over and how we come out of it will determine what will happen."

In training camp, several Dallas players made the point that the 1984 Cowboys were a selfish bunch.

"There was too much back-biting going on," was the way defensive end Ed (Too Tall) Jones put it.

After a 9-7 record and missing the playoffs, Landry didn't expect a jackrabbit start in 1985.

"We have a lot of things we have to get better at," said Landry, "but if you told me this summer we would be 5-1 right now I'd be very surprised.

"Last year we got down in the gutter with a 9-7 record, including a loss to Buffalo. We were embarrassed by that."

Landry said that although the Cowboys owned a big lead "it's still a five-team race in the NFC East. Philadelphia still believes it has a chance and if you believe it enough you can."

The Cowboys play at Philadelphia on Sunday and were four-point favorites.

Dallas is two games ahead of Washington, St. Louis and the New York Giants and three ahead of the Eagles.

Fullback Timmy Newsome and offensive tackle Phil Pozderac are expected to return to the starting lineup for Dallas against the Eagles. Both have missed the last two games with injuries.

There also will be a change in the Cowboys' punt returner with Bill Bates taking over for rookie Leon Gonzalez who lost the job after fumbling a punt in Sunday's 27-13 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We need somebody in there who can escape the first tackler then run north-south," Landry said Tuesday at his weekly press luncheon.

Bates was knocked out in a game during the preseason returning a punt.

"Bates has learned not to run over people," Landry said. "Gonzalez never returned punts in college. He needs to sit down and think about it."

Landry said the Cowboys can expect a hard fight against the Eagles.

Dallas has won four consecutive games against the Eagles and owns a 33-6 series lead. Marion Campbell is in his third year as Philadelphia's head coach and has yet to defeat Landry.

Bears to curtail sale of beer Monday

CHICAGO (AP) — Beer will not be sold after halftime of next Monday night's National Football League game at Soldier Field between the Chicago Bears and the Green Bay Packers, the Chicago Park District says.

Park District Superintendent Edmund L. Kelly said Monday night he would agree to the second-half ban on beer sales, as suggested by the Bears, but doubted he could go along with another Bears suggestion that would involve giving free coffee or soft drinks to non-drinkers.

The Bears proposed beer sale restrictions last week for the Green Bay game, joining a growing number of NFL teams that have taken steps to ensure the safety of both fans and potential victims of drivers who may have become intoxicated during games.

Citing a fear of increased alcohol consumption due to the 8 p.m. kickoff and increased fan interest in the traditional rivalry, the Bears proposed a three-point plan:

—Shutting off the taps of beer vendors at the start of the third quarter.

—Turning away any fan who "appeared physically intoxicated" while at the same time refunding his ticket price and making sure the fan got home safely.

—Urging fans to pick a "designated driver" among their group. This person would receive a commemorative cup that entitles him to unlimited free coffee or soft drinks during the game.

Kelly had not planned to announce his decision on the beer ban until today, but the Bears announced their tentative plans Monday.

Royals beat Jays, 5-3

By MARTY NOBLE
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

TORONTO — Diplomacy, modesty and a friendship with Bobby Cox prevented Dick Howser from gloating or even acknowledging how well his plan had worked. "Game plans are for football coaches," Howser said. His protestations notwithstanding, Howser did have a plan, and it worked.

Now this increasingly compelling set of American League playoff games between Howser's Royals and Cox' Blue Jays will be a best-of-seven series in more than name. Game 7 lives. That is the most significant consequence of the Royals' 5-3 victory Tuesday night. Indeed, it is the only consequence of any consequence. "It doesn't matter what gets you there," Howser said, still trying to divert attention from his successful strategy. "All that matters is being there. I'll leave the analysis to someone else."

THE ANALYSIS shows the Royals, by revising their pitching alignment, were able to exploit the Blue Jays, use the Jays' platooning against them and take advantage of the Jays' lack of depth. The plan worked so well that the final confrontation of the evening and most of the critical confrontations before that favored the Royals.

Certainly, other factors had impact — another home run by George Brett against Doyle Alexander, a double by Buddy Biancalana, the Royals shortstop who doesn't hit or field as well as Ozzie Smith, and continued lack of hitting by the Jays in critical situations — they had one hit in seven at-bats with runners in scoring position last night and left nine runners on base. They have 12 hits in 51 at-bats in such situations and have left 41 runners on base in the series. But that failure and, moreover, the victory can be attributed mostly to the plan.

Because of the plan, the final at-bat came with one lefthanded batter, rookie Lou Thornton, available to Cox and righthanded batter Garth Iorg batting against righthanded pitcher Dan Quisenberry. For the Royals, it was the right match. With the tying run on first base, Iorg struck out on four pitches.

AL OLIVER, a lefthanded hitter, had delivered the decisive runs in the Blue Jays' victories in Games 2 and 4 with hits against Quisenberry. But Oliver was long gone by the time Howser summoned Quisenberry to succeed lefthanded Bud Black. Oliver and third baseman Rance Mulliniks had been included in the starting lineup against righthanded Mark Gubicza, the eventual winning pitcher. When Black replaced Gubicza in the sixth inning, Cox did what he always does.

Righthanded Cliff Johnson pinch hit for Oliver. And when Johnson drove in Toronto's third run, he supported Cox' move. One inning later, Iorg pinch hit for Mulliniks. And when he didn't deliver against Black wih runners on first and second, Cox hardly could be faulted. "That's the system we've used all year," Cox said. "We got to the playoffs using the platoons and the pinch hitters. I'm not going to change now." Cox was not going to change merely because Quisenberry was behind Black in Howser's revised bullpen.

THE BLUE Jays never questioned Cox' moves. As Black walked to the mound in the sixth, Oliver voluntarily walked from the on-deck circle to the dugout. "He (Cox) didn't have to tell me," Oliver said. "I've been known to get a few one-at-bat games since I got here. I knew history wouldn't be made tonight."

"Dick is a smart manager tonight," Oliver said. "He got what he wanted. The game ended the way he wanted it to with me and Rance Mulliniks, the lefthanded-hitting third baseman on the bench. The game ended the way he wanted ... with them winning."

Game 7 lives, much to the dismay of the Blue Jays, who had anticipated having Wednesday off, and much to the delight of the Royals, who hadn't been overcome with homesickness. "We'll gladly spend another day here," Gubicza said.

The pitchers for the first-ever seventh game of the baseball playoff series are to be Dave Stieb for the Blue Jays and, most likely, another ensemble for the Royals, one that is bound to be similar to what the Jays saw Tuesday night — a righthanded starter, lefthanded reliever, and Quisenberry. The righthanded starter will be Bret Saberhagan, the Royals' premier starter. The lefthanded reliever is likely to be Charlie Leibrandt. Or Danny Jackson. And Howser said Black conceivably could come back again.

"I know what they're planning," Oliver said. "The same thing all over again. The difference is we're going to strike early so it won't make any difference."

THE BLUE Jays appear to have two factors in their favor. They inflicted some heavy damage against Saberhagen — nine hits and five runs in 4 1-3 innings — in Game 3. Also, Stieb has been the most effective starter in the series. He won Game 1 and has a 0.61 earned-run average in 14 2-3 innings in the series.

The Royals say they have their plan and that wonderful intangible athletes invoke in all situations — momentum. "The best way to get to the sixth game of a series," Quisenberry said, "is to lose the first three and win the next three. We've done just about the second-best thing."

"For the last three weeks we've played our best in situations where we can't afford to lose," Biancalana said. "I don't see why that would change when we're down to the last game. Look at tonight. Before the game we knew we had to score early so things could work right. We did. We do what we have to do."

Indeed, the Royals did score early, once in the first with Hal McRae driving in Willie Wilson with a single and again in the third with McRae driving in George Brett from first on a hit-and-run double. But the Blue Jays answered each of those runs in the bottoms of the respective innings. It took Brett, of course, to provide the lead permanently.

He hit his third home run of the series — each against Alexander — with one out in the fifth. It was his ninth playoff home run. No one has more. Biancalana undid Alexander in the sixth, doubling to right-center to drive in the fourth run. After Dennis Lamp replaced Alexander, Lonnie Smith drove in Biancalana with a double, the only hit Lamp allowed in 3 2-3 innings.

The rest went according to plan. "They worked because I had the right people do the job," Howser said, almost acknowledging his plan. "Gubicza won 14 games in the regular season and with him starting, that gave us Black in the pen. That's what we needed."

Dodgers fight for life

NL Playoffs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Soured on St. Louis, the Los Angeles Dodgers were hoping that Dodger Stadium would prove once again to be home sweet home.

"I think we'll win the last two games and go to the World Series," said Los Angeles second baseman Steve Sax.

For the Dodgers to win the National League playoffs in seven games, they first had to win today's sixth game, which matched right-handers Joaquin Andujar of the Cardinals against Orel Hershiser of Los Angeles.

After whipping the Cardinals in the first two games at Dodger Stadium, the Dodgers lost the next three in St. Louis' Busch Stadium.

But although his team was one loss away from elimination, Los Angeles outfielder Pedro Guerrero posed a seemingly logical premise: "If we beat them the first two, why can't we beat them the last two?"

Although the Cardinals appeared to have the momentum after bouncing back to win three straight at home, other factors tended to tip the scale in the Dodgers' favor for Game 6.

One such factor was that the home team had won the last 13 NL playoff games. And Dodger Stadium's grass field is better suited to the power- and pitching-rich Dodgers than to the speed-rich Cardinals, who seem at their best on their own artificial turf.

Another plus for the Dodgers was that they were starting Hershiser, who was 12-0 at home during 1985 and an 8-2 winner over Andujar in Game 2.

"I think it's very fortunate that we're returning home for me to pitch, but I don't think it was entirely by accident. I think it was by plan," Hershiser said.

"I really feel Game 6 will be extra special," said the Dodger pitcher, who was 19-3 during the regular season. "But I also feel like I've got the abilities and the talents to pitch a good game in those circumstances."

St. Louis third baseman Terry Pendleton said he saw no great mystery in the Cardinals' two losses at Dodger Stadium. "We went into LA and they just played better baseball. You have to give them credit. They outplayed us."

As for Hershiser, "He's been tough all year long," Pendleton said. "Their whole pitching staff, you really have to get to them early in the game. They get tougher as they go along."

Gobblers' Goebel has come a long way

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

In Brad Goebel's first game as a quarterback for Cuero last season, the Gobblers lost 31-0.

"But you could see that we had something," Cuero Coach Larry Pullin said.

"We had a running attack but we worked around and built some passing into our offense."

Goebel led the Gobblers to a 10-3 record last season and in last week's 50-7 victory over Goliad, he earned AP Schoolboy Honor Roll selection.

Goebel completed 12 of 20 passes for 244 yards and touchdown passes of 20, 45, 61 and 10 yards. He also ran five yards for another touchdown.

Pullin moved Goebel to quarterback from a wide receiver position when the Gobblers got off to a slow start last season, and hasn't regretted his decision.

Goebel, a 6-3, 185 senior, earned a spot on the Cuero varsity as a sophomore and earned honorable mention all district.

Moody quarterback-defensive back Larry Portis had a busy night in a 43-20 victory over Lorena.

He rushed 81 yards on 11 carries and had touchdown runs of 20 and four yards. Three of his four pass completions went for touchdowns of 13, 32 and 14 yards.

Portis finished off his evening with an 85-yard punt return for a touchdown and added 11 tackles and intercepted one pass.

Bryan backup quarterback Eric Lewis played the final 7:48 of the fourth quarter against state ranked Temple, but he almost pulled off a major upset before his team lost 31-24.

Lewis completed 11 of 17 passes for 194 yards and touchdown strikes of 20 and 59 yards. Lewis was driving the Vikings again late in the game when he threw an interception, ending the comback with 21 seconds left in the game.

Sweeny quarterback Brett Simpson, who missed the first three weeks of the season with an injury, showed last week that he's recovered with a five touchdown performance in a 56-6 victory over Hitchcock.

Simpson completed all five of his passes for 128 yards, including touchdown shots of 28, 16 and 43 yards and he ran for scores of nine and three yards. Sweeny has prospered with Simpson, averaging 43.6 points en route to a 6-0 record.

--Sharyland's Jerry Sanchez rushed 211 yards on 11 carries and had a 62-yard touchdown run in a 16-14 victory over Brownsville St. Joe's.

NO PASS

McCutchen added, "We may have to go to one schedule on the subvarsity level. We haven't made that decision as of yet.

Abilene High reported losses of nine JV and 12 sophomores while Cooper says they lost 14 to 16 kids at those two levels. "That's about 20 percent of our kids and we're definitely going to cancel the rest of our sophomore games for a JV schedule," said Garrison. "We don't have our computer printouts for those kids yet, but I'm even more concerned about our freshmen class because I've heard rumors of possibly losing 34 of 84 freshmen to grades. That will kill us."

Millsapps reports a loss of six JV and eight sophomores in addition to the two varsity players. San Angelo's Jimmie Keeling says he thinks he will lose anywhere from eight to 10 at the lower levels.

"We worked awfully hard in San Angelo to keep the kids on the books," noted Keeling. "We had 7 a.m. study halls and tutoring during the day, but this No Pass, No Play is still a bad deal for the kids. There are still inequities. We lost a varsity manager to grades."

Permian and Big Spring, both of which lost no varsity players, were touched the least by No Pass, No Play. Big Spring lost only two JV players and no sophomores. Permian lost a combined four players at those two levels.

"I'm tickled to death with the results because we worked so hard in this area," said Steer coach Quinn Eudy. "But this is just one hurdle. We have to face it again next year and every year after. It's not a good rule. The teams hurt most will be basketball and the spring sports because it's easier to keep kids eligible before they get tired and start the major subject matter. I think this is going to wipe out some teams later on in sports like basketball and track."

Permian coach John Wilkins said, "We didn't lose anyone on the varsity level, but we had three on the border line. We had great cooperation from the faculty. They kept us informed and worked with us in this area. Still, the punishment doesn't seem to fit the crime and I've said that all along. The kids are through in any given sport if they fail one subject. If the grades are brought up, they should be eligible to play."

Even though Lee coach Tayrien didn't lose a varsity player, he was almost despondent after learning of the possible 15 or 16 losses at the lower levels.

"The thing that concerns me about the new rule is the length of the penalty and the fact that we can't help those kids anymore," said Tayrien. "They take them out of our program. They can't practice. They're on the street again and out of our hands.

"Education is first, there is no question about that, but I don't know if this factor is helping these kids. You take away their motivation and there is no way for us to oversee them once they fail a subject. We're penalizing the kids who are trying to do something extra. If a kid has a job and doesn't make his grades, he doesn't have to quit his job. There is no penalty for a kid who doesn't make his grades and doesn't participate in anything else.

It's not equitable. A lot of our kids are thinking about going out and making some money if they can't play ball. I would much rather the kids be under our supervision. You take away a person's motivation and the tendency is to drift to something else. And that something else isn't always good."

Abilene repels MHS to say in thick of race

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Abilene High survived a scrappy test from Midland High Tuesday night, 14-16, 15-10, 15-12, at the MHS gym to stay in the thick of the girls District 4-5A volleyball race.

The Eagles climbed to 6-3 in district play while Midland High fell to 3-6, but this was one of those matches that left winning coach Anita Corder a bit limp.

"This was a nice one to win," said Corder. "The match was real, real slow with too many delays. I feel like we had to beat a good opponent, the officials and the delays. I mean, the officials stopped the game once for bus fumes. Our girls are used to a fast-paced game."

The Eagle offense had trouble mounting a consistent scoring threat until the third set against the Bulldogs when they rallied from an 0-4 deficit to take the 15-12 final.

It was the power spiking of Lisa Diaz that got the Eagles rolling and the winner came on a serve from Priscilla Rayford off the arms of Midland's LaShawna Bradley, who had played a strong game.

The Bulldogs put AHS on the ropes by winning the first set by a narrow 16-14 margin and the way MHS did it, you thought it might be upset time in 4-5A. The Bulldogs got off to a horrible start as the Eagles ran to 6-0 and 9-2 leads before the Bulldogs rallied to tie the set at 10-10.

MHS went on to post the first set victory when Abilene's Sharon Bowles returned Laura Martin's dink out of bounds.

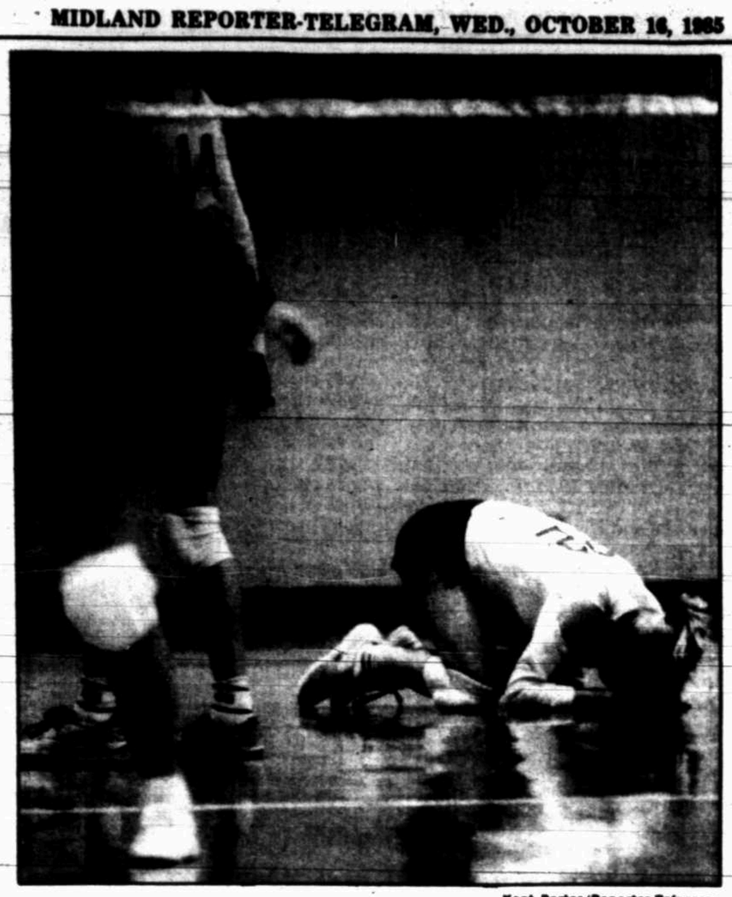

But the Bulldogs dug themselves another 0-6 hole to start the second set and the Eagles went on to even the match at 1-1. MHS tied the set at 8-8, but Rayford's three straight serves gave the Eagles an 11-8 lead, one they never lost. The winner came on a dink by Abilene's Vicki Dean.

MHS coach Sonja Pittman had the same gripe as Abilene's Corder after the loss.

"The game just never got into a flow," said Pittman. "There were a lot of delays from the officials, but we had more unforced errors and missed more serves than they did. Abilene got its offense going in the third game and when a match is that long a scrappy defense can go just so long against a good team and we didn't do it offensively.

"We've had a lot of tough games this year. Abilene High is a good team and they played well."

The Midland High junior varsity won a 15-1, 15-4 win over the Eagles' JV to climb to 7-2 in district play.

Army 11 enlists Nebraska Veer

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Between 1949 and 1950, Coach Earl Blaik's Army teams won 17 consecutive games, a streak that ended with a loss to Navy at the end of the 1950 season. Between 1947 and that loss, Blaik's teams went 28 games without a defeat, being tied twice.

Jim Young was just entering high school in 1950, which was 15 years before the introduction in Texas of the modern wishbone offense. Coach Jim Young's current and revitalized Army team, which executes the wishbone as well as any team other than Oklahoma in recent years, extended the Cadets' winning streak to eight games Saturday night by whipping Boston College, 45-14. That is the longest victory streak on The Plain since that 1949-1950 streak. Army won its last three games of last season, including its first bowl game, 10-6 from Michigan State in the Cherry Bowl. The Black Knights have won five in a row this season.

OKLAHOMA was riding a 31-game winning streak 35 years ago, a string that also ended in 1950. Nebraska had its first winning season in 10 years in 1950. Barry Switzer and Tom Osborne were still in grammar school that year.

Coach Switzer's unbeaten Oklahoma team, the best of the ones currently using the wishbone, resorted to its powerful defense to gain its third victory of the season with an impressive 14-7 triumph over previously undefeated Texas.

Coach Osborne's Nebraska team, which has the best of the veer triple-option I attacks in the nation, had its best game of the season when it beat another previously undefeated team, Oklahoma State, 34-24, at Stillwater, Okla., Saturday night.

Army has borrowed readily from Nebraska's veer this season as Young has incorporated some of Osborne's outside plays in his Army wishbone. And anybody who goes with the wishbone studies Oklahoma's offense since the Sooners have used it longer than any of the other current wishbone teams.

NOW ARMY has a difficult task as it meets Notre Dame on Saturday at South Bend, Ind. The Cadets have not beaten Notre Dame since 1958, the last undefeated season for Army. In eight Notre Dame victories over Army since the Cadets' 14-2 triumph in 1958, Army has scored a total of only 16 points and been shut out five times.

"We have to play with as much intensity against Notre Dame as we did against Boston College and maybe considerably more," Young said. "We just have to be up for the second week in a row."

But Army will face an Irish team that has a 1-3 record, the worst start for Notre Dame in 23 years. Notre Dame's coach, Gerry Faust, is under pressure to step down and the players give indications of being demoralized.

It will be a strong Army team that goes to South Bend this week. Three Army backs gained more than 100 yards apiece on the ground against Boston College. Tory Crawford, a sophomore quarterback from Houston, ran for 131 yards in his first start. Rob Healy, the regular Army quarterback, had to sit out with ribs broken a week ago against Yale. The fullback Doug Black had his best game of the season as he rushed for 158 yards and Clarence Jones gained 103. William Lampley, the fourth starting Army back, ended up with 95 yards.

NEBRASKA which suffered an opening-game loss to Florida State, has won three games since. The Cornhuskers had an impressive quarterback Saturday night as their sophomore, McCathorn Clayton, ran for two touchdowns and passed for another. Clayton has the potential to be the best Nebraska passer and quarterback since David Humm and Vince Ferragamo.

Osborne said: "We always pass about 15 to 20 times and we threw 16 times Saturday. So it's about what we do. But yes, Clayton is good and can do a lot. He's young and getting better."

If Army, using what it has borrowed from Oklahoma and Nebraska, beats Notre Dame before what is expected to be a group of major bowl scouts, could it be that the Orange Bowl would match Army against Oklahoma or Nebraska? Certainly if Army wins to go 6-0, it has to be in the major bowl picture. The Cotton Bowl officials are interested in the Cadets as well as undefeated Penn State.

NFL owners ponder keeping 'eye' on refs

NEW YORK (AP) — National Football League owners, who normally restrict their fall meeting to housekeeping matters, are ready to decide whether to oversee officials electronically by adding an instant replay monitor in time for this season's playoffs.

That proposal, backed by the influential Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys and chairman of the NFL's Competition Committee, was on the agenda for today's second session.

The league experimented with replay during the exhibition season and it was generally considered a success.

Under the proposal, the league would station officials with video cassette recorders in a booth. They would then have the ability to replay the network feed of any controversial plays involving possession or an out-of-bounds call, but not penalties.

TCU's Davis to sue NFL

LOS ANGELES — Former Texas Christian University running back Kenneth Davis is seeking $13 million in damages from the National Football League, which he accuses of unfairly preventing him from earning a living.

Davis, who filed a Superior Court lawsuit Tuesday, wanted to play in the NFL this season after TCU suspended him for accepting money from boosters. But he was barred by a league rule that prevents athletes from playing for both a college team and the NFL in the same season.

Cosell's pats, pans puzzling

NEW YORK — What Howard Cosell has said in private is very different from what he has written in "I Never Played the Game," says baseball announcer Al Michaels, one of his former broadcasting colleagues.

"The compliments he deals out to people like (NBC's) Dick Enberg and (CBS's) Pat Summerall are dealt out in a way as if to further dig at his colleagues at ABC," Michaels told a press luncheon Tuesday as he shared a dais with fellow network announcers Frank Gifford, O.J. Simpson, Jim Palmer and Tim McCarver.

"Privately, we've all heard him knock Pat Summerall, and yet he wrote that Pat is one of the quintessential professional announcers, and all I could gather is that it's another way for him to stick another needle into Frank Gifford," Michaels said.

"There's a lot of what Howard has said privately in that book, and I don't understand the method to that particular madness, of knocking everybody at this conference."

Because of that, Cosell is no longer working the the World Series.

Dons return to court

SAN FRANCISCO — Basketballs bounced again at the University of San Francisco on Tuesday as the former national power left its recruiting and alumni scandals to history and began to get ready for its first season in four years.

Coach Jim Brovelli, who says the school will try to "get back to the top level," had 13 players at his first practice for the return to Division I basketball in the West Coast Athletic Conference.

Bagdastein...Bavarian Alps with a Texas drawl

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Biggest ski story of the season is already that March trip to Bagdastein, Austria.

The Flatlanders Ski Club ran out of slots for the March 8-16 week with more than 100 FSC members signed up. And trip director Bob Haskell reports only 13 slots remain on the second week, March 17-25, arranged to take care of the overflow.

The first week is a Texas Ski Council event and the Bavarian Alps may sound more like home on the range with 1,500 Texans in evidence on the slopes.

Price for the trip is $890, which includes air fare, seven nights lodging, buffet breakfast and four-course dinner each day. Of course the six-day lift ticket will be extra...$54 for six days?...

Sidetrips to Salzburg, Vienna, Innsbruck and Venice will be offered, not to mention the Gluwein or Jagatee parties....

The Texas Ski Cup will be decided on the Keystone-Snowmass-Crested Butte trip Feb. 16-23, one of three U.S. trips planned this season by the Flatlanders.

Since the TSC suffered the embarassment of having the Flatlanders win the 1983 and 1984 ski cup, the FSC will compete in Division II this year. Joining the Midland-Odessa 220-member club in that category will be Beaumont, Coprus Christi, the 298-member Lone Star Club of Dallas, the 298-member Texas Twisters from Lubbock and the 272-member San Antonio club.

The Flatlanders next meeting will be the first Thursday in November at Coors and will be featured by a ski fashion show....

THE BIG ones are back at Lake E.V. Spence. Three striped bass went from 23 to 25 pounds recently.

And over at Lake Thomas, a 24-pound blue catfish and several yellows in the 10 to 15 pound range were reported.

Gene McQueen, Midland, landed 23 1/2 and 13 1/4 yellows and a 6 1/2 pound striped bass out of Spence's Paint Creek Marina. Errol Parr, Midland, pulled in a 23-pound striper, while R.C. Horton, Andrews, took the prize catch, a 25-9 striper on a trot line.

Lamesa's Jimmy Williams took a 15-pound yellow at Thomas, where crappie fishing was described as "fair" and blue and channel cats were hitting various baits on rod and reel....

Outdoors

NOVEMBER and December are excellent months for catching seatrout, says Texas Parks and Wildlife biologist Larry McEachron.

The fish are found near bay oil rigs, in channels and passes and are usually accessible to bank fishermen. McEachron recommends shrimp for bait and fishing it at the bottom.

Since sand seatrout will spoil easily, don't tarry in getting them on ice....

AFTER TWO poor nesting seasons, the Rio Grande turkey are rebounding. Hen-poult counts indicate an increase over last year with about 60 percent of the population in the juvenile range.

"It's fortunate the state got good rains in early 1985," says the TPWD's Don Wilson.

"We had back-to-back poor production years because of the drought. Byh 1984 the drought spread to the entire range and resulted in the lowest production on record."

This year is well above average in South Texas, Edwards Plateaum and the Cross Timbers, which comprise the major portion of the Rio Grande turkey range in Texas. The eastern Trans-Pecos (Pecos and Terrell counties) is slightly above average.

The season runs concurrently with the white-tail deer season in most Texas counties and this year will be from Nov. 9-Jan. 5.

Hunters make take advantage of the swing turkey tag on their hunting license this year. This permits taking one gobbler in the fall and another in the spring plus a third turkey, either in the fall or spring...

THE ALLIGATOR season in southeast Texas exceeded expectations in both tag issuance and use of the tags.

Some 790 tags were issued for the 17-day season and 94.4 per cent of the tags were used.

The season was unique in having a public hunt at the Murphree Wildlife Management Area near Port Arthur. The 72 participating hunters took 44 alligators.

Sighting a rifle helps marksmanship

By NELSON BRYANT

NEW YORK — The seasons for deer hunting with modern firearms are only a few weeks away and this is the time to make sure your rifle shoots where you aim it.

This sighting in procedure should be followed even if you went through it last year, because there is a chance that a scope — or even iron sights — could have been knocked out of line since last fall. This probably has not happened, but the expenditure of a little time and three to six rounds will remove all doubt.

If you are starting with a new rifle or new sights on your old favorite, you might be able to accomplish your mission with a dozen rounds, but more often you will run through a full box of 20 before you are satisfied.

If it is possible, you should sight in your deer rifle at no less than 100 yards. This can be done at 50 yards, but you are handicapping yourself in future hunting situations because any sighting in error at 50 yards will be doubled at 100.

THE FIRST step in the process is to become acquainted with the ballistics of the cartridge you are using. A bullet travels in a parabolic curve after leaving the barrel and crosses the line of sight twice, once on the upward curve, once on the downward. Loaded with a 150-grain bullet and sighted to strike the point of aim at 100 yards, the venerable .30-30 Winchester is one-half inch high at 50 yards, 2.7 inches low at 150 yards and about eight inches low at 200. It is a good idea to limit one's shooting to a range that does not produce more than 4 to 6 inches of drop, so the .30-30's effective range is about 150 yards. Another consideration is the energy the bullet carries at point of impact. For deer-sized animals, this should not drop much below 1,000 foot-pounds. At 200 yards, the aforementioned .30-30 load delivers about 900 foot-pounds. This is not to say that it would not kill a deer at 200, or even 300, yards, but, if the bullet did not strike a vital area, a wounded and lost animal might result.

IN MOST deer-hunting situations in the northeast, a .30-30 is more than adequate, because most shots are taken at less than 100 yards. If you hunt in an area where the woods are open, where you occasionally could have bagged a buck at 200 yards or more if you had the right rifle, you might consider the .243 Winchester caliber. Loaded with a 100-grain bullet, that cartridge is excellent for medium-sized big game, including antelope, deer and black bear. Its muzzle velocity is 2,960 feet a second and at 200 yards is 2,449 feet a second. Sighted in at 150 yards, it is .5 inches high at 50 yards, .9 inches high at 100 yards, 2.2 inches low at 200 yards and 5.8 inches low at 250 yards. Its energy at 300 yards is 1,089 foot-pounds.

Fifteen years ago, I learned that the .243 has at least one weakness. Early one afternoon a small buck appeared below me in an alder swamp. He was less than 60 yards away and walking slowly, but the alders were so thick I could never find an open space through which to shoot. I could see his entire outline and on two occasions I could make out his spike horns. I waited until the obstruction was minimal and touched off a shot. The animal never even quickened its pace. Long before it reached him, the bullet had struck a branch or twig and exploded. I did not bother to try again.

EVEN AT the relatively short ranges most deer hunters shoot, a telescopic sight's advantages over iron sights probably outweigh its shortcomings. On the debit side, scopes make a rifle heavier, slightly more difficult to handle, are a bother when rain or snow blurs the lenses and are more likely to be knocked out of alignment.

Trainland U.S.A. offers whistlestop tour

COLFAX, Iowa (AP) — More than 15,000 people visit Leland "Red" Atwood's basement each year, lured by the lonesome sound of train whistles in the night and the unmistakable odor of hot diesel oil.

Atwood, a farmer and seed salesman, said he got the idea of building "one gigantic train set" in 1976, but his basement was not big enough. So he built a bigger basement, and a new house, and opened Trainland U.S.A. in 1981.

Now, 15,000 to 20,000 people annually from every state and all over the world pay to see the 25 trains in Atwood's basement travel from sea to shining sea — in the space of about 2,600 square feet.

"I knew they'd come. There was never any doubt in my mind," said Atwood, a big, jolly man who enjoys dressing in T-shirts and a conductor's cap.

In the larger of two layouts, electric trains that look like diesels roll from New York to California, passing landmarks or characteristic scenes in each state, some activated by lighted buttons outside the glass-enclosed exhibits.

In the New York area, sights include the Statue of Liberty, a newsstand and a burning house. On a city street, a dog runs around a fire hydrant.

Trains chug through orange groves in Florida, and in Mississippi there is a working 8- by 8-inch drive-in movie screen. The trip to the West Coast ends with television studios and sunbathers in California.

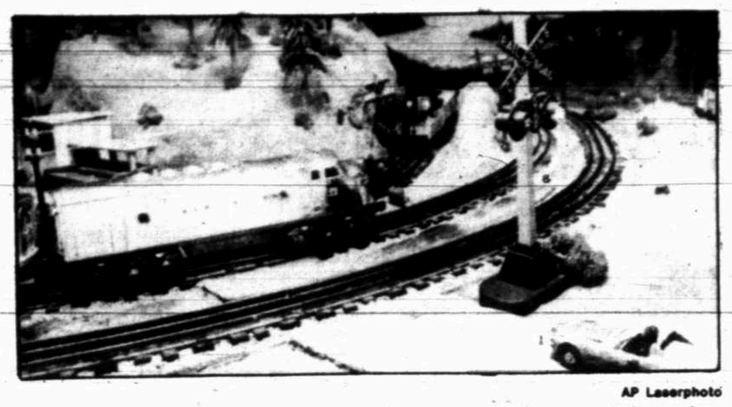

In the second display, old-fashioned steam engines come alive and travel through America's heartland, from a 1940s Iowa farm to a bread truck at a Wyoming cafe.

All along the routes, scenes from growing up in America are played out.

"I love it. It was the best place I've ever been," 7-year-old Heather Owens, of Lawson, Mo., declared on a recent visit. "You could push buttons and see all the different trains moving."

In Arizona a boy is sneaking into a circus tent, in Kansas women are hanging out clothes to dry, in San Francisco a church wedding is taking place, and in Oregon a girl is having car trouble.

Nighttime falls when "engineer" Lloyd Milbourn pulls a switch, dimming overhead lights and bringing to life headlights, houselights, street lights, cabin lights in trains — 600 lights in all.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose on foreign exchange markets early todya against all key currencies except the Canadian dollar, but central banks again intervened to prevent it from gaining momentum. Gold prices fell.

Increasing bullishness toward the American currency sent it higher in New York trading late Tuesday and it reached a peak in Asian markets before the Bank of Japan sold dollars in small amounts to prop up the Japanese yen, dealers said.

In hectic but nervous European trading, the West German Bundesbank also reportedly sold dollars to defend the mark as part of a concerted drive by the big five Western industrialized nations to depress the dollar and reduce the U.S. trade deficit.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 216.20 yen from 215.75 yen at Tuesday's close. Later, in London, it was quoted at 216.37 yen.

In London, the dollar gained marginally against the British pound. It cost $1.413 to buy one pound sterling, cheaper than $1.4135 late Tuesday.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

—2.6715 West German marks, up from 2.6615

—2.19 Swiss francs, up from 2.182

—8.14 French francs, up from 8.1125

—3.0095 Dutch guilders, up from 3.0005

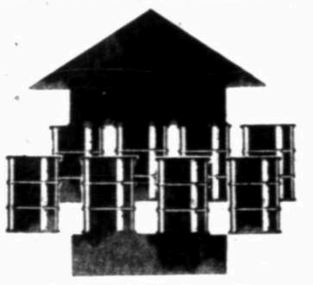

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $325.70 a troy ounce, down from $327.25 bid late Tuesday. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $325.90.

In Zurich, the bid price was $325.75, down from $327.20 bid late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell the equivalent of $1.25 to close at a bid $326.37.

In New York Tuesday, gold fell 50 cents to : late bid price of $326.

Talks collapse, autoworkers strike Chrysler

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Eighty thousand U.S. and Canadian autoworkers went on strike today at Chrysler Corp. plants and parts depots after the collapse of the first labor talks in a decade with a healthy Chrysler.

The separate negotiations ended just before the midnight Tuesday expiration of contracts in both countries and after thousands of workers at three U.S. Chrysler plants already had walked off the job.

The autoworkers, many of whom once granted substantial wage and benefit concessions during Chrysler's stuggle to avoid bankruptcy, prepared for picket duty today against their recovered employer.

Analysts have said a strike could cost Chrysler $15 million a day.

Negotiations were to resume today in Toronto and at Chrysler world headquarters here, and the company and union said they would try to make it a short strike.

United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber, leading the bargaining for 70,000 U.S. workers, said two months of talks failed to produce agreement on major non-economic issues, such as job security and curbs on the subcontracting of work outside the company at the expense of union jobs.

The UAW and the newly formed United Auto Workers of Canada also sought wage and benefit parity with their counterparts at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co.

"The gulf separating us on key issues is simply too great for us to bridge at this point," Bieber told a news conference minutes after the strike officially began at 12:01 a.m.

Thomas Miner, the chief Chrysler negotiator, called it "a strike that should not have happened as we're climbing our way back to prosperity out of where we've been over these tough years."

Five years ago, Chrysler received $1.2 billion in federally guaranteed loans and workers eventually contributed an estimated $1 billion in contract concessions to the rescue effort.

The company lost more than $3 billion from 1979 until its recovery took hold two years ago. It earned a record $701 million profits in 1983 and tripled that to a new record of $2.3 billion in 1984.

In Toronto, Robert White, the militant president of the breakaway 10,000-member Canadian union, said, "We just couldn't do it. I feel troubled by it, but we've been through it before."

The main unresolved Canadian issues were pay and local affairs at the minivan and large-van plants in Windsor, Ontario, according to union officials.

U.S. Chrysler dealers have an estimated 47 days worth of cars on hand, the best inventory level of the Big Three but two weeks short of the 60 days desired in normal times and far short of what dealers would like to have when a strike hits.

Automotive industry analysts estimate that Chrysler will suffer up to $15 million in after-tax losses for each day of the strikes and will be able to make it up only if the strikes ends in a few days.

"The auto business, as capital intensive as it is, we bleed to death when we're on strike," Miner said. "This whole company is paralyzed as of midnight tonight."

"I don't really think it's going to last that long," said Bill King, chairman of UAW Local 1413 at the Chrysler electronics complex in Huntsville, Ala. "There are only one or two issues that are really hanging them up, and job security is the big one. That's what everybody's really concerned about."

A year ago, the UAW and GM agreed to create a $1 billion fund for retraining and relocating workers displaced by automation and subcontracting. Ford, which conformed to the GM pattern, set up a $300 million fund.

Tax reforms retain charity deductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee, overriding objections from its chairman and President Reagan, is sticking with a portion of the special tax write-off allowed for charitable contributions by Americans who do not itemize their deductions.

The benefit would be financed by scaling back the higher standard deductions that the panel voted last week.

The committee, whose efforts to write a major tax overhaul behind closed doors are made harder by other pressing issues and a lack of public enthusiasm for a new tax system, also has gone on record favoring a $1-billion-a-year tax cut for the banking industry.

Changes tentatively approved Tuesday and over the past two weeks would cost the government about $13.6 billion in lost revenues over the next five years. But the chairman, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., has vowed the final bill will bring in no more and no less than current law — a position also favored by Reagan.

Although Reagan and Rostenkowski want a bill passed by Congress this year, there is little chance that will happen. The chance has been made even more remote by a battle between the House and Senate over a budget-balancing amendment. Half the Ways and Means members are negotiating with the Senate on that issue, forcing the committee to delay further tax discussions until next week at the earliest.

A similar stance was taken by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill in a speech to the Philadelphia Stock Exchange. "I believe a high price will be paid if the attempt at reform fails," he said. "I do not believe that it will fail in the House of Representatives."

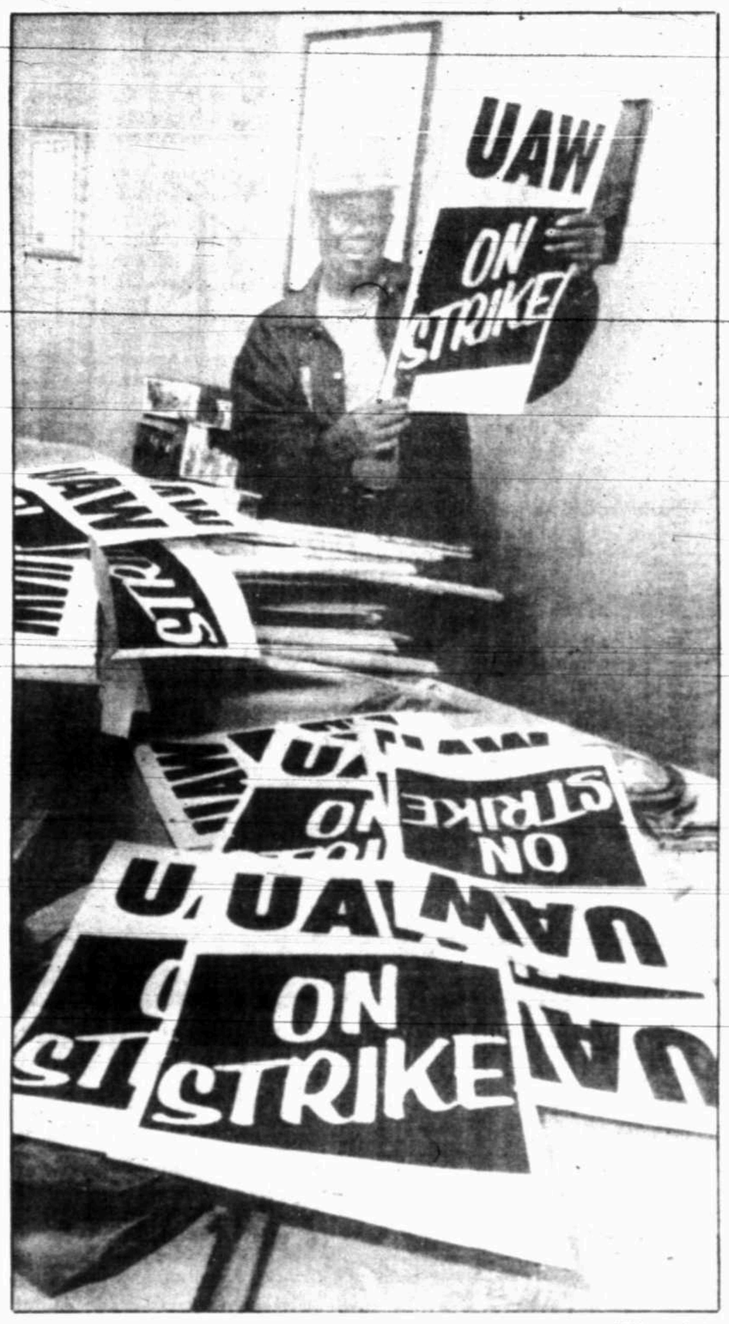

In action Tuesday, the committee voted to:

—Allow taxpayers who do not itemize deductions to continue writing off some contributions to charity. Under present law, those people may deduct half of what they give this year; for 1986, the full donation would be deductible. Under the committee plan, whose key elements were approved on a 22-13 vote, non-itemizers would be allowed to deduct in full their contributions above $100 a year; the deduction would become permanent law.

Reagan and Rostenkowski had recommended repeal of the deduction, although aides said Rostenkowski voted for the final compromise worked out by Reps. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., and Judd Gregg, R-N.H.

—Pay for the charity write-off by allowing most people above low-income levels a standard deduction that is considerably higher than current law but slightly below what the committee adopted last week. The standard deduction is used only by taxpayers who do not itemize.

Couples filing a joint return and with income up to $14,000 would have a standard deduction of $5,950, compared with $3,670 under present law. Those with incomes between $14,000 and $16,000 would get $5,850; those above $16,000, a $5,750 standard deduction. For single people, whose deduction now is $2,480, the new deduction would be $3,525 for those with incomes up to $8,000; $3,475 for those between $8,000 and $9,000, and $3,425 for incomes over $9,000.

Synfuels ready to spend half billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Synthetic Fuels Corp., racing to finance a few alternative fuels technologies before Congress shuts it down, is expected to award another half billion dollars in subsidies to Union Oil Co. for a shale oil plant in Colorado.

If approved by the Synfuels Corp.'s five directors today, the package of new price supports and loan guarantees would raise the government's stake in the so-far unsuccessful Union project at Parachute Creek, Colo., to $900 million.

It also would lift to four the number of projects that the Synfuels Corp. has funded since its creation in 1980 as a lending bank, in what was originally an $88 billion program for weaning the nation from its dependence on imported oil.

With falling oil prices the past three years, that program has since been cut back to about $8 billion, and the the House voted 312-111 in July to end it entirely, except for what would be a token research effort in the Energy Department.

The expected action today follows bitter exchanges the past two weeks between Synfuels Chairman Edward Noble and Energy Secretary John Herrington. "The SFC could not have picked (a) more wrongheaded project," Herrington said of the Union plant in a column he wrote for The Wall Street Journal last week.

A WEEK earlier, in a letter to House leaders, Herrington endorsed abolishing Noble's agency and turning its program back over to his department, which itself has spent about $5 billion on synfuels research and development over the past decade.

Noble, in a letter of his own, called Herrington's column a "diatribe," saying, "Virtually none of his facts are correct."

Secretary Herrington discussed the corporation's pioneer synfuels program purely in economic terms, without considering the nation's existing and growing energy vulnerability," Noble complained. "In virtually every aspect the situation is worse now than in 1973 before the (Arab oil) embargo."

In an earlier and widely distributed letter to Herrington, the Synfuels chairman also attacked the Energy Department's award of $79 million in federal loan guarantees last month for a Louisiana alcohol fuels project being built by a Saudi Arabian billionaire.

"John, it confirms everything I said about the DOE bureaucracy's wanting to build energy empires," Noble said in his letter to Herrington. "I am sorry this family difference has become public but you leave me no alternative but to respond in kind."

THE DISPUTE flared into the open following a series of White House meetings last month over what position President Reagan would take amid the growing congressional sentiment to abolish the program.

Opponents of the synfuels subsidies within the administration — primarily Herrington and some White House and Office of Management and Budget officials — came out of those meetings expressing confidence that an "understanding" with Noble had been reached.

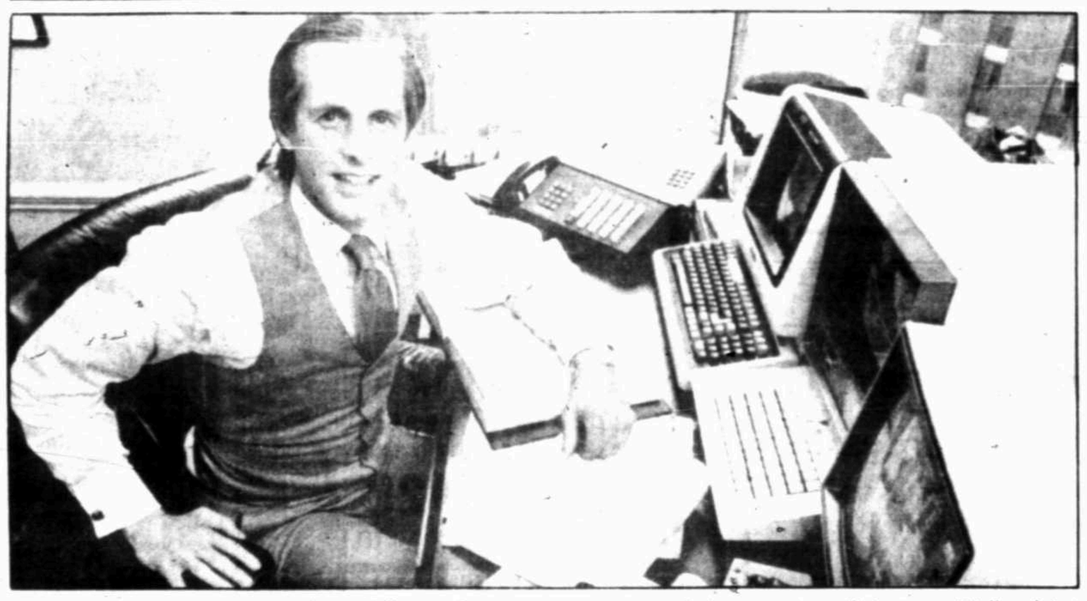

That understanding was to the effect that the agency would not award any more subsidies until Reagan or Congress decided its fate.

Noble and other Synfuels officials, however, maintained that no such commitment was ever made. In the end, the White House opted not to take sides, though Herrington was "freed" to start speaking out against Synfuels.

While the House has voted overwhelmingly to effectively abolish the agency by taking back virtually all of its remaining $7.9 billion, the Senate Appropriations and Energy committees have voted to continue its existence.

The Energy Department, before the Synfuels Corp. was in full operation, approved $400 million in government price supports for Union's shale oil project in 1981.

THOSE SUBSIDIES guaranteed Union a price of $51 per barrel — compared with current spot prices of $25 to $27 — for the 10,000 barrels of oil per day that the plant would squeeze from Colorado's vast shale deposits.

New regulations alters natural gas marketing

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

New federal regulations that change the way natural gas is marketed are posing new opportunities — and risks — for natural gas utilities.

As a result of rules adopted by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission last week, utilities are freer to buy gas directly from producers. A large number of utilities are expected to take advantage of this change and purchase cheap gas on the spot, or non-contract, market.

Such month-to-month gas buys represent a turnabout for an industry that used to negotiate 20-year contracts with pipeline suppliers "and then meet once a year to see how things were going," said William H. Owens, the Southern California Gas vice president who buys the utility's natural gas.

The purchase of large volumes of cheap gas should lower gas rates and help utilities compete with low-priced fuel oil, the alternate fuel for most large manufacturers. But utility executives and energy regulators are quick to acknowledge that spot purchases involve risks, especially if the price rises quickly or if supplies tighten.

In such cases, consumers could pay higher prices for gas, or industrial users could suffer temporary disruptions in service, as they did during the winter of 1976-1977, when factories and schools in the Northeast and Midwest were forced to close. "It's kind of a tightrope we walk," said Ida Goalwin, chief of the advisory branch at the California Public Utilities Commission, which is watching the situation closely. "We want the utilities to purchase the lowest cost gas supplies, but we have to protect long-term solid sources of gas."

ANALYSIS

Right now, there is a glut of natural gas and shortages are not likely anytime soon. The government estimates that there is between 3 trillion and 4 trillion cubic feet of gas available that is not being produced — enough to supply California's needs for the next two to three years.

That glut is forcing gas prices down "and down hard," said Benjamin Schlesinger, a Bethesda, Md., energy consultant. He said spot gas prices have fallen by 20 percent since January. As a result, the spot market now accounts for 20 percent of all gas sales, he said.

The Natural Gas Supply Association estimates, however, that the nation's gas reserves will run out in 10 years. Shortages are difficult to predict "because we don't know what supplies will be available from Canada or Mexico," a spokesman said.

Goalwin said the California commission is reluctant to tell utilities how much spot gas they can buy because it might impair the utilities' ability to bargain with suppliers. This leaves the utilities with "the dilemma of where to draw the line," said Sue Ann Levin Schiff, manager of fuels policy and planning at Pacific Gas & Electric. "We have to balance the cost savings against the possibility of damaging relationships with our long term suppliers."

PG&E has approached the spot market cautiously, buying only around 10 percent of its supplies on the spot market. Schiff said the utility was especially sensitive to possible shortages or price increases since it needs gas to power its electrical generators.

The rush to sign-up expensive long-term gas supplies a decade ago gives California one of the highest industrial gas rates in the nation, according to Geoffrey Meloche, who oversees gas transportation issues for the California Public Utilities Commission fuels branch.

IS AMERICA BANKRUPT?

Massive deficits are now threatening to alter our financial future permanently.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, the deficits for 1984-89 will place the National Debt at $2.6 trillion ($2,600,000,000,000). That's $41,600 for every family of four in America!

How to Sleep at Night After Investing in Insured Gold, Silver or Platinum Accounts

You've invested in precious metals. You've taken the advice of the experts, diversified your portfolios and hedged yourself against inflation. Good move. But now you're worried. Daily fluctuations in the market and stories of fraudulent metal brokers have you gripping the bedpost.

Our advice:

Take two aspirins and call Capital Trust in the morning.

At Capital Trust we've eliminated the cause for worry.

We've set up an insurance program that covers losses resulting from acts of dishonesty, embezzlement and theft (it does not cover market or trading losses).

Secondly, we won't bounce you in and out of the market just to make a commission. Our goal is to get you into position to make the most of low metal prices and prepare for the coming bull market.

Call Capital Trust.
You'll sleep better tomorrow.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Paying agents' don't charge to redeem coupons

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have a number of municipal and corporate bonds in "bearer" form, with semiannual interest coupons attached. As each interest payment comes due, I cut off the appropriate coupon and present it to my bank for deposit in my account. My bank never charged me for this.

Last week, however, the bank teller said there would be a $5 charge for each coupon. When I asked why, she said, "The paying bank now charges us." Didn't I read in your column that the paying bank never charges?

A. You read here that "paying agent banks" do not charge for redeeming bearer bond interest coupons.

Doyle

Every bond issue has a paying agent, whose job is to redeem interest coupons in the case of bearer bonds or send out interest checks in the case of registered bonds.

Paying agents never — repeat, NEVER — charge bond owners for redeeming coupons. The paying agent is paid by the bond issuer for handling that job.

That teller might have misinformed you. Or you might not have understood what she said.

Your bank might not send interest coupons directly to bond paying agents. Instead, it might send those coupons to a large "correspondent" bank, which sends them along to the paying agents. That's a common practice in the banking business, especially if your local bank is a relatively small one. If that's the case, the correspondent bank might have started charging your bank for the time, effort and paperwork of forwarding the coupons to the paying agents, collecting the interest and sending it to your bank.

It's possible that the teller is mixed up. Assuming your interest comes to your bank through its correspondent bank, she might think the correspondent bank is the "paying bank."

In years gone by, there seldom was a charge for redeeming bond interest coupons. These days, such a charge is virtually standard at all banks — sometimes because correspondent banks pass it on, sometimes because local banks levy it themselves.

Count yourself fortunate that you escaped that charge until recently. And take consolation from the fact that some banks charge more than $5 per coupon.

• • •

Q. I am aware that many bearer municipal bonds can be changed to registered bonds by the registrar for each bond issue. The registrar prints the owner's name on the bond and on the record book of the interest paying agent, cuts off the remaining interest coupons and destroys them. The bond certificate is returned to the owner and all future interest checks come through the mail.

That makes registered bonds more sensible to me than bearer bonds. But my broker says I'll get a better price for a bearer bond than a registered bond. Is this true?

A. In most cases, yes. Bearer bonds usually trade at a slightly higher price in the marketplace than registered bonds. Many people prefer bearer bonds over registered bonds.

This situation won't last forever, but it will be with us for a goodly number of years. Because of a change in federal law, no bearer municipal bonds have been issued since June 30, 1983. Before that date, some bearer municipals were issued with maturities of 30 years or more. So, until they reach maturity or are called for early redemption, they will be around until at least the year 2013.

• • •

Q. A broker informed me of municipal bonds paying exceptionally high tax-free interest of more than 13 percent. He insists they are relatively safe. How can I find out how much risk is involved?

A. Ask that broker how those bonds are rated by the major rating agencies, which analyze the credit worthiness of bonds.

My bet is those high-yielding bonds are rated Ba or lower by Moody's Investor Service and BB or lower by Standard & Poor's Corp. and Fitch Investors Service.

Ba and BB ratings mean that bonds are considered speculative and to have a reasonably high risk. Bonds with even lower ratings have to be counted as outright gambles.

WORLD in brief

Ship heading for port

GENOA, Italy (AP) — The cruise liner Achille Lauro steamed toward port today, two weeks after setting sail for a Mediterranean tour that turned into a terrorist hijacking and left an American passenger dead.

Families of crew members, many of whom arrived aboard a special train chartered by the shipping company Flotta Lauro, gathered to greet the ship.

Italian investigators boarded the returning ship late Tuesday as it passed northward through the Strait of Messina, which separates Italy and Sicily. They said they planned to question Capt. Gerardo De Rosa about the Oct. 7 hijacking and crewmembers who may have have witnessed the death of Leon Klinghoffer, 69, of New York.

The four Palestinian hijackers under arrest in Italy have been charged with murdering Klinghoffer, but judicial sources say the four have denied killing the man. Western diplomats in Damascus say a body that washed ashore Monday near a Syrian port is believed to be Klinghoffer's, but that positive identification has not yet been made.

Canal fall threatens jobs

THOROLD, Ontario (AP) — Costs to shippers are mounting and notices of impending layoffs have been sent along the immobilized St. Lawrence Seaway as officials estimate it will be several weeks before a collapsed Welland Canal lock wall is repaired and traffic can resume.

"It's going to mean billions of dollars overall," said Fleet Captain Winfield Longe of ULS International Inc., a Toronto-based shipping company with 21 vessels in operation.

The company issued a 24-hour notice of possible layoffs to its 600 crew members on Tuesday, Longe said.

He estimated that 150 Canadian ships are in the seaway system, of which the canal is a link, at a total operating cost of $20,000 per ship per day.

Uganda almost broke

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The government has almost depleted its foreign exchange reserves, and because rebels have kept much of the nation's coffee crop from market, Uganda may soon be broke, a newspaper said Tuesday.

The independent weekly Focus quoted unidentified officials of the Central Bank of Uganda on as saying Uganda may soon be unable to pay its monthly bill for oil and other imports.

Bank officials have advised Gen. Tito Okello, Uganda's new military head of state, of the problem, the newspaper said.

Neither the government nor the bank commented on the report.

For nearly a month, the rebel National Resistance Army has controlled much of southwestern Uganda, including the third-largest town, Masaka, and the road that is the main route to the fertile farms that help feed Kampala.

Irish suspects arrested

LONDONDERRY, Ireland (AP) — Police have arrested eight men and six women for questioning about "serious terrorist crimes" in Roman Catholic areas of Londonderry, police said.

Londonderry police Inspector William Scott said documents and other unspecified items were seized in predawn raids Tuesday on several houses in the Creggan, Bogside and Shantallow districts.

The 14 suspects were driven under heavy escort to Castlereagh detention center in Belfast, he said. The nature of the crimes was not disclosed.

The predominantly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army has been waging a violent guerrilla war to drive the British out of the province of Northern Ireland and unite it with the mostly Catholic Irish Republic under a leftist administration.

Radical Protestants sometimes retaliate against Catholic neighborhoods.

Iraqi archbishop flees

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The archbishop of the Eastern Assyrian Church of Iraq has fled to Iran and asked for political asylum, according to Iran's official news media.

Tehran Radio said Tuesday that Archbishop Zaid Debatu, the highest ranking Christian clergyman in Iraq, crossed the border into Iran in the northwestern region, arriving in the country "after long hardship."

It gave no further details in the broadcast, which was monitored in Cyprus.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted the 76-year-old archbishop as saying that Christians in Iraq had been ordered to pray for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, a Moslem.

Iran and Iraq have been at war since September, 1980. Iran demands the ouster of Hussein as a condition for ending the war.

Events hampering PLO

CAIRO, Egypt (LAT) — In the wake of the hijacking of the cruise ship Achille Lauro, Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization has suffered from a series of blunders and heavy diplomatic blows that raise questions about its ability — and doubts about its willingness — to participate in the Middle East peace process.

Since the cruise ship drama, which cost the life of an elderly American Jewish invalid, the PLO has found itself the object of a diplomatic full-court press by Israel and the United States.

Storm collapses Dhaka dorm roof

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — The roof of a university dormitory collapsed on about 500 students under torrential rain from a storm roaring inland from the Bay of Bengal. Hospital sources said today at least 71 people died and rescuers expected the toll to increase.

Newspapers reported that the death toll at Dhaka University could be more than 100, with many victims still buried beneath wreckage.

The storm came ashore from the Bay of Bengal this morning, lashing Bangladesh and southeastern India with winds of up to 93 mph. Dhaka is about 150 miles inland.

Thousands of people were evacuated from offshore islands and coastal areas as officials sought to avoid a catastrophe similar to the May 24-25 storm in which an estimated 11,000 people were killed. Most of the dead from that storm were lived on the coastal island of Urichar.

Hundreds of tons of girders and cement crashed down on about 500 Dhaka University students at about 9 p.m. Tuesday as they watched a popular television program inside a dormitory auditorium.

The building was undergoing repairs when the accident occurred. One student said the outer coating of the roof was removed earlier in the day.

"It is impossible to believe that authorities had allowed the use of the auditorium when it was in an abandoned condition," a senior civil engineer told the The Associated Press. He spoke on condition he not be identified.

Hospital sources said today that 71 students died in the tragedy. State-run Radio Bangladesh said at least 31 bodies had been recovered by this morning.

Monaranjan Dhar, a student involved in rescue operations, said more bodies are expected from the debris of the hostel's auditorium roof.

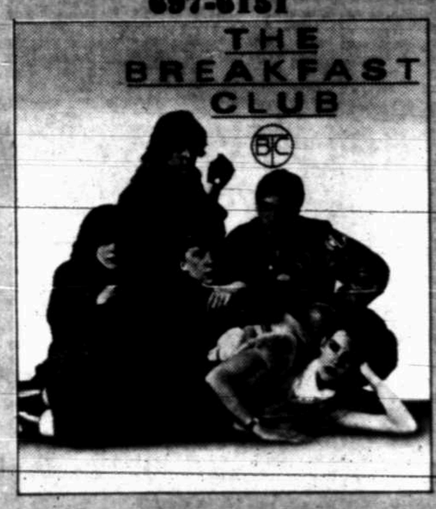

Rescue officials said at least 100 people were injured.

Rice can be nice

Rice adds spice to fit life

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

All too many of us face a weight problem, but in most cases it can be taken care of with dieting and exercise.

If you are over 35 years old and have been leading a sedentary life, consult your doctor about workouts before starting to trim do. Many people are limited to jogging or a daily walk.

As to food, the main target is calories, and there rice plays a beneficial role. It is low in both calories and cholesterol. One half a cup of cooked rice runs 80 calories, the same as a slice of bread, and less than half that of two tablespoons of peanut butter.

One of rice's assets is its versatility. It can even be eaten at breakfast, where rice pudding is becoming popular. For lunch and dinner, of course, rice is featured in countless dishes.

More and more athletes are turning to rice because it is high in energy-sustaining carbohydrates, as are natural sugars like fruit juice. When stored in your muscles, these carbohydrates provide the energy you use during a physical workout.

To keep the pounds in check, a good dinner would be fish, broiled, baked or poached. Accompany this with rice — not, however, slathered in butter — and green vegetables with lemon. Chicken or lean beef are also good with rice in a diet meal. Just be sure you don't fry them in fat.

Many people cook up a big batch of rice each week, then store it in the refrigerator in a covered container. To heat, just add a tablespoon of water for each cup of rice. If you are in a hurry, serve the rice with grated cheese and sliced tomato. Or you can scramble it with eggs or put some in soup.

Here is a recipe for a rice salad that goes well with poultry, pork or ham.

RICE SALAD

3 cups cooked rice, cooled
1 can (16 ounces) mandarin orange segments, drained
1 cups thinly sliced celery
½ cup diced green pepper
¾ cup sour cream
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pepper

Blend all the above ingredients thoroughly. Chill, and serve over salad greens, sprinkled with sliced almonds if desired.

Makes 6 servings.

Duo of rice dishes for dinner

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

The following are two rice recipes suitable for dinner menus:

DINNER FARE
Chicken & Summer Rice
Condiment Tray & Salad
Fresh Fruit Shortcake

SUMMER RICE

1 cup converted-type rice
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 tablespoon butter
2½ cups water
1¼ teaspoon salt
1¼ teaspoons dried basil, crushed
1 small zucchini, cut in thin strips
1 small yellow squash, cut in thin strips
1 small tomato, diced (½ inch)

In a medium saucepan over low heat, cook rice in butter until rice is lightly browned — 5 to 7 minutes. Add water, rice, salt and basil; bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer for 20 minutes. Stir in zucchini, yellow squash and tomato; remove from heat. Let stand, covered, until all water is absorbed — about 5 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

FAMILY DINNER
Minute Steaks & Potatoes
Combination Salad
Coconut Rice & Coffee

COCONUT RICE

1 cup long-grain rice
3 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
¼ cup flaked coconut
1 cup milk
Grated rind of 1 lemon
Ground cinnamon
Half-and-half

Rinse rice several times in hot tap water. In a heavy 2- or 3-quart saucepan bring water and salt to a boil; stir in rice and bring to a boil; boil 15 minutes; drain.

In the clean saucepan stir together rice, sugar, coconut and milk; cover and cook over low heat, stirring often, until milk is absorbed, rice is tender and grains stick together — about 15 minutes. With a fork stir in lemon rind. Turn into dessert dishes; sprinkle with cinnamon.

Serve warm; pass half-and-half. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Microwaves reduce messes

From Staff Reports

Microwaving rice requires approximately the same amount of time as cooking rice conventionally, according to the Rice Council of America. Instead of speed, the advantages of cooking rice in a microwave oven are energy-saving and easier clean up.

Clean up time is kept to a minimum since the same dish can be used for cooking and serving. Also, foods don't stick badly when microwaved, so messy utensils are virtually eliminated, the Council says.

Rice can be prepared in advance — whether using a microwave or conventional oven — and refrigerated for up to a week, if kept well-covered.

To cook rice in a microwave oven, the Rice Council suggests this method:

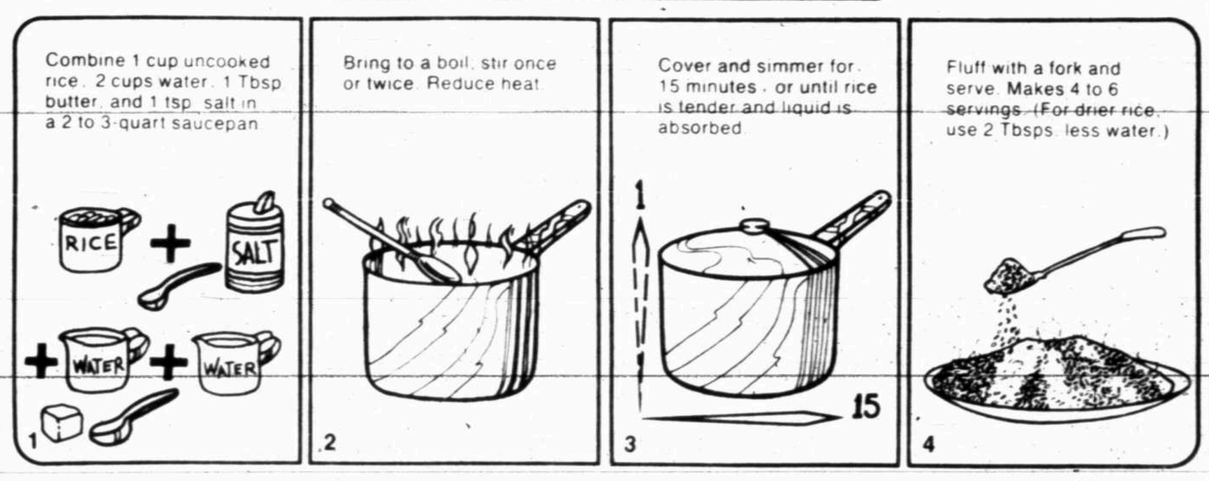

1 cup uncooked rice
2 cups liquid
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Combine all ingredients in a deep 2-quart covered container (if plastic wrap is used, vent slightly). Microwave on High (maximum power) 5 minutes or until boiling. Reduce setting to 50 percent power for regular-milled and parboiled rice (30 percent for brown rice). Microwave for 15 more minutes (45 minutes for brown rice) or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Fluff with a fork.

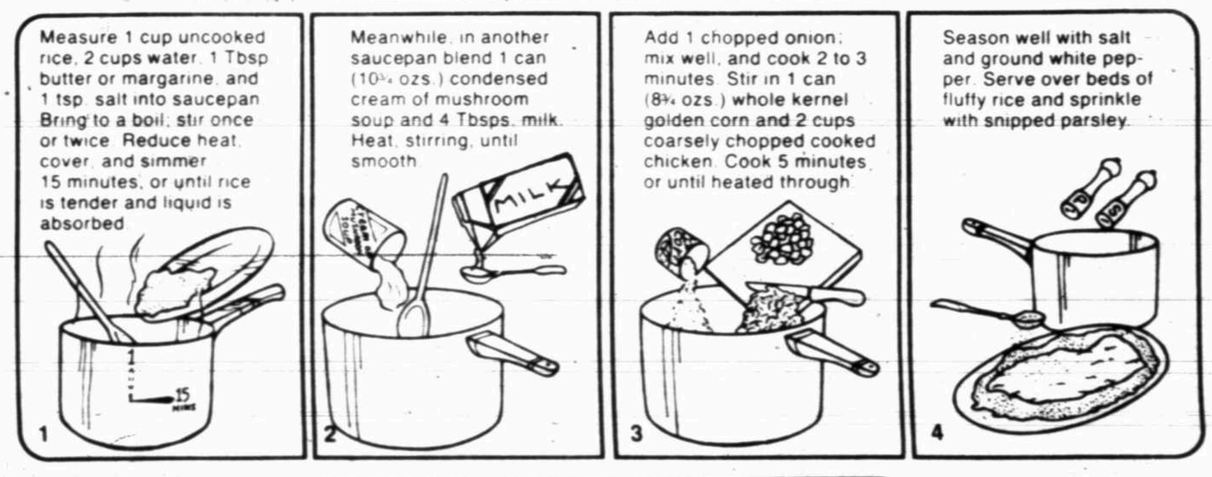

To reheat rice, cover and microwave on High for 1 minute per cup.

The step-by-step illustrated recipes below were designed by the Rice Council of America for ease of preparation. Each of the recipes should yield four servings. For more free rice recipes, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to the Rice Council, Home Economics Department, P.O. Box 740123, Houston, Tex., 77274. The council also has special Braille and large-print recipe booklets available for the visually impaired.

Haute cuisine becomes hi-tech pre-fab food

PARIS (AP) — Get set, diners. Another French gastronomic revolution is under way. This time it's prefab food.

Jean-Pierre Morot-Gaudry, who runs a top restaurant near the Eiffel Tower, and three other well-known chefs — all heaped with stars in the Michelin Guide — are launching their experiment in plastic-packaged food. Some of their standbys include old-fashioned French dishes such as beef stew, or "daube de boeuf."

"But it is really good food," said Morot-Gaudry. "Our dishes with sauce are prepared in advance, but with an artisanal approach — by cooks, not machines.

"The food is neither frozen nor preserved by traditional means. But we're providing up to 25,000 individual dishes a day to furnish 30 restaurants who microwave-heat the food for serving."

They supervise a laboratory of cooks producing dishes that can be saved up to three weeks in plastic boxes, heated quickly by restaurants or home consumers. The chefs contend that their products taste better than most fresh foods found in supermarkets.

The group calls itself "La Nouvelle Gastronomie Francaise" — or N.G.F. for short. It has nothing to do with so-called "nouvelle cuisine" or diet-oriented "cuisine minceur," or fast-food, the current French food fad.

Morot-Gaudry evolved the idea for the prefab food with several friends when they bought a wine bar for storing and selling good wines. The N.G.F. also includes Alain Dutournier, Henri Faugeron and Bernard Fournier, all famous among French food groupies.

It must be noted, however, that though the chefs are fond of their ready-to-eat wares, they don't serve them in their own restaurants.

"We knew a wine bar also had to serve good food, with little available space and service," said Morot-Gaudry. "So we set up our factory near Paris to provide the prepared food."

The dishes have been rigorously tested and approved by the French Service Veterinaire, or food inspectors, for refrigerated storage up to three weeks. No freezing is involved, and the food is only partially vacuum-packed.

It sounds less than appealing. But a recent tasting at the group's main wine bar on rue d'Armaille was surprisingly pleasant. With a view of the Arch of Triumph, the jam-packed wine bar was noisy with yuppie-style people tucking in a fast lunch with their wine.

The tricolored vegetable pate in spicy vinegar-tomato sauce tasted market-fresh, but was probably made 10 days previously, according to Morot-Gaudry.

An unconventional hot pate of calf's head was of a perfect texture, interesting flavor, and was surrounded with a creamy herbal sauce based on the tart taste of what French call "gribiche" sauce.

The customers looked happy and had hearty appetites.

"But they'd faint if they knew we were serving prepared food from a microwave oven," said Morot-Gaudry, savoring a good hot apple dessert. "It would be a mental shock, especially for the French."

The Nouvelle Gastronomie people feel that the future of cuisine is in three main lines: haute cuisine in top restaurants, preprepared food for medium-priced restaurants, and fast food a la McDonald's.

Morot-Gaudry points out that many French restaurants already use preprepared food, saving money on kitchen personnel — a hefty expense in France where social security charges are high.

"This prepackaged food could be dynamite in America," says Morot-Gaudry, "But we're going slowly. We don't want to look like a frog who pretends he's a bull."

Meanwhile, three-star chef Joel Robuchon also is launching into high-tech cooking to put some spice into French railroad dining-car fare — usually high-priced and lamentably bad.

"I'm using vacuum-packed food preparation methods," said Robuchon, who has tasted his thus-prepared gourmet fare many times. "It's absolutely excellent, and approved for use up to three weeks."

Limit alcohol intake

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Drinking alcohol can cause brain shrinkage, according to a recent study.

Researchers at the Queen Elizabeth II Medical Centre say that 85 percent of test subjects who consumed only 2.1 ounces of alcohol a day suffered brain damage.

Researches say that the brain can repair itself if alcohol intake has not been too severe. Alcohol intake up to about 1.35 ounces a day causes no brain damage.

Children can help in kitchen making Peanut Brittle

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If your young children take lunch to school, chances are they'll enjoy helping you prepare goodies for it. "The Mother Goose Cookie-Candy Book" by Anne Rockwell (Random House) — with colorful step-by-step illustrations for each recipe — was written for just such collaboration.

Its large pages offer directions for making Gingerbread Men; Oatmeal, Chocolate Chip and Sugar Cookies; Brownies and Jam Tarts; Carrot Bars and Cupcakes; Popcorn Balls, Taffy and Peanut Brittle make up the candy section.

HUMPTY DUMPTY'S PEANUT BRITTLE

1 cup sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup salted peanuts
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon baking soda

Grease a large cookie sheet. In a heavy 2-quart suacepan, stir together sugar, corn syrup and water. Stirring constantly, bring to a boil over medium heat; stir in butter.

Without stirring, cook until temperature on a candy thermometer reaches 300 degrees or a small amount of mixture dropped into very cold water separates into hard and brittle threads. Remove from heat.

Quickly stir in peanuts, vanilla and baking soda. Pour onto prepared cookie sheet. Spread as thin as possible with a spatula. Cool 1 to 2 minutes or until mixture can be handled. With a spatula, turn brittle over onto a large wire rack. With hands, pull and stretch as thin as possible. Cool. Break into pieces. Store in a airtight container. Makes about 1½ pounds.

Here's what's cooking in Louisiana

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Overlooking the Bayou Teche in Southern Louisiana's town of New Iberia, stands The Shadows-on-the-Teche, a white-pillared mansion that is one of the museum properties of the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

About seven years ago funds were needed to keep "this significant site in American history and culture" open to the public. As a result, The Shadows Service League was founded — a group of volunteer guides and fund-raisers who decided to compile a cookbook as a permanent fund-raising tool.

Susie Pharr and Virginia Kyle Hine — their families have lived on the banks of La Teche for five generations — were in charge of compiling "The Shadows-on-the-Teche Cookbook."

Because Mrs. Pharr's first love is the preparation of local foods and Mrs. Kyle's hobbies include researching various aspects of Louisiana history, they were ready to put their energies into the work. Along with a group of co-workers, they spent three years gathering recipes from Service League members, their friends and families. A collection of recipes Louisiana cooks have used over the years — from gumbo to grits — with others of more recent origin was published.

This recipe for Lemon Mardi Gras Bars, tried in my kitchen, proved unusually delicious. It was contributed to "The Shadows-on-the-Teche Cookbook" by Mrs. Pharr.

LEMON MARDI GRAS SQUARES

1½ cups stirred all-purpose flour (spoon into measure and level)
¼ teaspoon baking powder
3 large eggs, separated
1 cup confectioners' sugar
½ cup (¼-pound stick) butter
1 cup granulated sugar
Grated rind of 1 lemon (about 1 tablespoon)
⅓ cup lemon juice
Topping, see recipe
Chopped pecans or walnuts

Stir together flour and baking powder. Beat egg whites until soft peaks form; gradually beat in confectioners' sugar until stiff peaks form. Without washing beater, cream butter and granulated sugar. Beat in egg yolks, one at a time and lemon rind. Beat for 1 minute longer. Gently beat in flour mixture alternately with lemon juice until smooth. Fold in egg-white mixture. Pour into a greased and floured 13 by 9 by 2-inch pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 25 to 30 minutes. Frost while warm with Topping. Sprinkle with nuts and cool. Cut into squares and remove from pan.

TOPPING: Beat together until smooth 2 tablespoons soft butter, 1 cup confectioners' sugar and 1 tablespoon heavy cream.

Avocado mixture tops chicken fillets

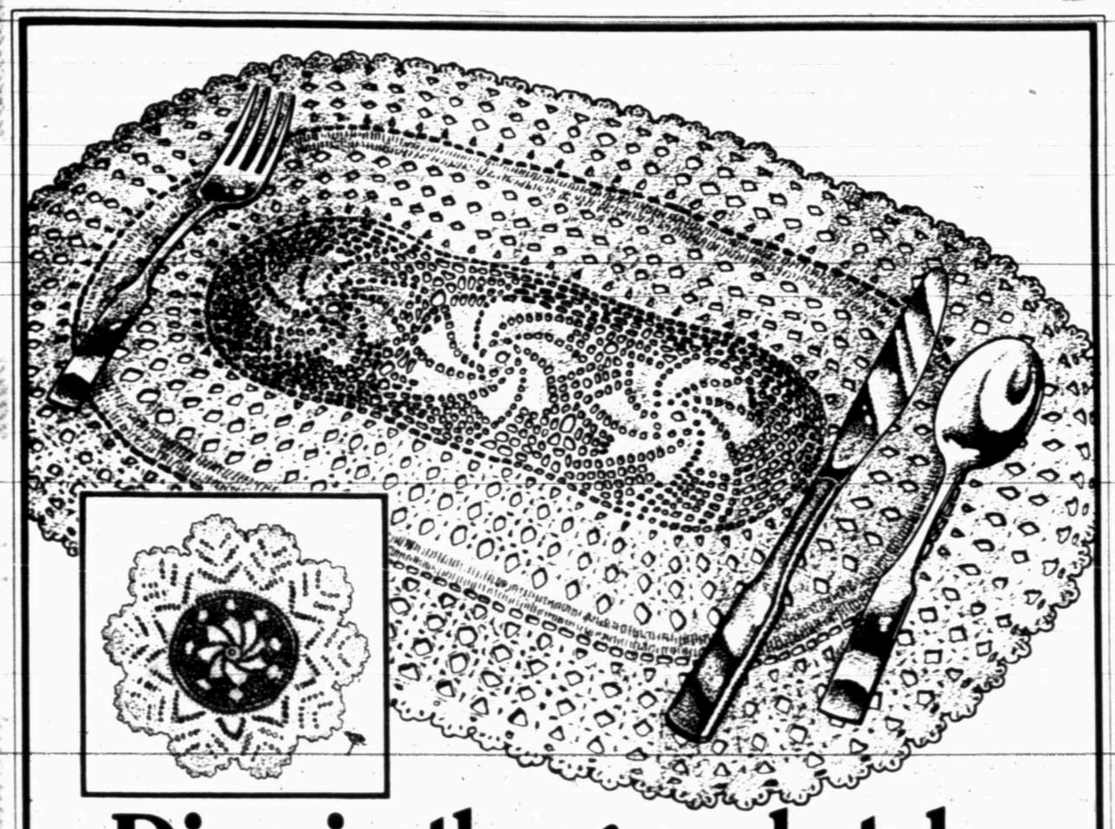

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

DINNER FOR GUESTS
Chicken Avocado & Potatoes
Spinach Puff & Salad
Fruit Sherbet & Coffee

LINDA ECKHARDT'S CHICKEN AVOCADO

4 boneless chicken breast fillets (about 1½ pounds)
Salt and pepper to taste
Melted butter
1 large very ripe avocado
¼ cup dry sherry
¼ cup finely chopped walnuts

Preheat broiler and broiler pan at least 5 minutes. Salt and pepper fillets and brush lightly with melted butter. When pan is hot enough to sizzle if you flick water onto it, place fillets, serve side up, on pan. Broil about 5 inches from heat for about 5 minutes. Turn when light golden brown. Broil on other side about 3 minutes. While chicken is cooking, whip peeled avocado until perfectly pureed; then fold in sherry and walnuts. Place a dollop of this atop each fillet and continue to broil until a lovely golden brown (about 5 minutes). Serves 4. From "The New West Coast Cuisine" by Linda West Eckhardt (Tarcher).

THE BUTCHER

October time for feast, fest

By MERLE ELLIS

Munich and Milwaukee have a couple of things in common at this time of year. Beer is one. It is reported that in excess of four million quarts of beer are served at the annual Oktoberfest in Munich and I'm sure Milwaukee's festival is not far behind.

Another is pork. Nothing goes better with beer, no matter where you are, than pork. Over a million pork sausages are served at Munich's Oktoberfest and in Milwaukee "Brat and Beer" are a year-round favorite.

I don't know how pork prices are in Germany, but fortunately for us, this Oktoberfest time of year, pork is a very good buy. Pork prices in my neighborhood ranged this week from a low of 99 cents a pound for pork butt roast, to a high of $1.88 for pork tenderloin. Those are good prices — take advantage of them. You might even want to put a little pork in the freezer for later in the year, with or without beer.

Here are a few recipes for pork that go particularly well with that traditional Oktoberfest beverage. The first is a recipe for making your own bratwurst — just in case you can't find that sausage speciality in your butcher's meat case.

BRATWURST

3 pounds boneless pork (rib end of loin or butt)
½ pound boneless beef (chuck)
1 tablespoon salt
1½ teaspoons ground coriander
1½ teaspoons white pepper
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon ginger
¼ cup cold water
Hog casings, soaked and rinsed

Cut the meat into 1-inch cubes and grind once through the coarse plate of your meat grinder. Mix the salt and seasonings in 1/4 cup cold water, pour over the ground meat and mix in well. Grind a second time through the medium plate of your grinder, fitted with a stuffing tube, into hog casings. Fill casings loosely, twisting into 5-inch links. If air pockets develop, pierce casings with a needle. Refrigerate immediately. Use within two days or freeze for up to three months.

To cook "brats" the way I've been told they do it in Wisconsin, put the sausage in a pot and cover with your favorite beer. Add 6 or 8 tablespoons of brown horseradish mustard and about 8 tablespoons of ketchup. Peel and thinly slice 3 good sized onions and toss them into the pot. Stir until everything is blended. Bringto a slow simmer over very low heat, then turn the heat down to keep the brats just warm. After about 20 minutes, remove them from their beer bath and broil 3 inches from the heat or grill on a rack over hot coals, turning frequently to brown evenly.

OKTOBERFEST PORK CHOP CASSEROLE

4 or 5 slices bacon
1 16-ounce can sauerkraut
4 to 6 pork chops, cut approximately ¾-inch thick
1 large onion, sliced thin
2 or 3 large potatoes, peeled, sliced thin
1 16-ounce can solid-pack tomatoes, chopped
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon caraway seeds

Cover the bottom of a casserole with slices of bacon. Top the bacon with a layer of sauerkraut. Lay the pork chops on top with a layer of onion rings. Next arrange a layer of thin potato slices. Cover with the tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper and sprinkle on the caraway seeds. Cover and bake at 350-degrees until done, approximately 2 hours.

PORK WITH RED CABBAGE

1 large, tart, green apple, peeled, sliced
1 medium onion, sliced
2 tablespoons bacon fat
2 ½ cups water
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
2 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
1 small head red cabbage, shredded
1 ½ pounds fresh pork, cubed
1 clove garlic, minced
½ cup red wine
2 teaspoons arrowroot (optional)

Saute apples and onion in bacon fat until the onions are just soft. Add water, sugar, salt, pepper, cloves and bay leaf. Bring to a rolling boil and add the cabbage. Reduce heat and simmer gently for 30 minutes, stirring from time to time.

Render a little pork fat in a separate pan, and brown the cubes of meat in it along with the minced garlic. When the meat is nicely browned add the wine and simmer gently while the cabbage cooks. Combinethe cabbage mixture with the meat and thicken (if desired) with arrowroot dissolved in a bit of water. Serves 4.

Mighty squash comes from acorn

Hearst News Service

When the family tires of thin-skinned zucchini, serve the popular hard-shelled acorn squash. It's the small, dark green, acorn-shaped squash with the deep ridges.

Pick a squash that is heavy for its size. Acorn squash should be free of yellow on the shell. One acorn squash will feed two or three. When buying hard-shelled squash by the pound, plan on half the weight being waste.

Acorn squash is popular because its bakes quickly. It is easy to serve; combined with meat, it can become a meal in a shell. Winter squash, or acorn, has more to offer nutritionally than summer squash. A ½-cup serving of winter squash provides 65 calories and is an excellent source of vitamin A.

Acorn squash is often seasoned with sugar, maple syrup, honey, bacon or sausage. To keep calories and salt under control, try a little margarine with a sprinkle of pepper and basil, cinnamon or nutmeg.

ACORN SQUASH WITH HAM AND APPLES

3 acorn squash
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups cooked diced ham
1 cup diced unpeeled tart apples
¼ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons margarine

Wash and cut the squash in halves lengthwise. Remove the seeds. Place the cut side down in pan. Add ¼-inch boiling water. Bake for 30 minutes at 400 degrees.

Remove from the oven and turn the squash halves cut side up. Sprinkle with salt.

Combine the ham, apples, brown sugar, mustard and pepper. Spoon it into the squash cavities. Top with 1 teaspoon of margarine. Return to the oven and bake until the apples are tender, about 20 minutes. Serves 6.

ACORN SQUASH AND GROUND BEEF

2 acorn squash
1 pound ground beef
¼ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon allspice

Wash and cut the squash in halves lengthwise. Remove the seeds. Place the cut side down in a pan. Add ¼ inch boling water. Bake 30 minutes at 400 degrees.

Meanwhile, brown the beef and onion in a small amount of oil. Drain the fat from the meat. Add the seasoning. When the squash is tender, remove it from the oven. Carefully scrape the flesh from the shells; mix it with the meat and return it to the shells. Serves 4.

MICROWAVE COOKED ACORN SQUASH

1 acorn squash (1 to 1½ pounds)
2 tablespoons frozen orange juice concentrate
1 tablespoon margarine
Salt and pepper (optional)

Pierce a whole squash and microwave it on high power 3 to 5 minutes. Remove it from the oven, cut it into serving pieces and remove the seeds. Divide the margarine and juice to season the cut squash. Arrange it in a glass dish and microwave cook, uncovered, on high power 4 to 5½ minutes. Serves 2 to 4.

ACORN SQUASH WITH APPLESAUCE

3 acorn squash
¾ teaspoon salt
2 cups applesauce
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup raisins
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons margarine

Wash and cut the squash halves lengthwise. Remove the seeds. Place the cut side down in a pan. Add ¼-inch boling water. Bake for 30 minutes at 400 degrees.

Meanwhile, combine the applesauce, brown sugar, raisins and lemon juice. When the squash is tender, remove it from the oven. Add salt and divide the applesauce mixture to fill the cavities. Top it with margarine. Return it to the oven and bake for 20 minutes.

Serves 6.

DEAR ABBY

Mom literally sick of her son

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Here's a problem I'm sure you have never had before. I am allergic to my son. Howard is an intelligent, good-looking senior in college. He and I have never had a very good relationship because our philosophies differ. I am an optimist who is willing to take responsibility for my actions. Howard is a pessimist who blames others for his problems. When he is around, his negative gloom-and-doom attitude irritates me and I break out in hives. I know that he is the cause of my hives because they disappear when he goes back to college. (This has been happening for four years.)

He will graduate soon, and plans to come back home to live. The thought of it makes me literally ill.

Don't tell me to see a counselor. I'm a psychologist, and know all the book answers. Howard tried two counselors, but he insisted he didn't have a problem even after both counselors identified the problem, so now what do we do? — MOM

DEAR MOM: You may know all the book answers, but the doctor who treats himself has a fool for a patient.

If you let Howard come home, knowing he makes you sick, you need to see a psychiatrist about your masochistic behavior. Howard also needs help, but not as much as you. He gives hives, you get them. So, I advise you to scratch Howard, not hives.

DEAR ABBY: My wedding plans are all set. The bridesmaids have already bought their dresses and paid for them themselves, but listen to this one: One of my bridesmaids asked me who would reimburse the bridesmaids for the cost of the dresses if I fail to make it to the altar!

Frankly, it never occurred to me that such a thing could happen. It would be a very tragic and traumatic happening, but I suppose each bridesmaid would have to handle the loss herself.

Abby, do you think I should have to pay $114 times five? — ST. PAUL NIGHTMARE

DEAR NIGHTMARE: I usually advise people to be prepared for every eventuality, but in this case I say: Don't get the snowplow out until the blizzard hits.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 36-year-old divorced woman with two children from a previous marriage. For the last nine years, I have been living with a man I love very much. He's 46 and says he loves me. Last year we purchased a beautiful house in both our names.

My problem is that he has asked me not to work for the last nine years because he wants me "at home." He's an excellent provider, and we lack for nothing. He has told me that I am the beneficiary on all his insurance policies, and I am the main beneficiary in his will.

My concern is his 22-year-old daughter from a previous marriage. What are my legal rights if she contests the will? Could I lose my inheritance fighting the daughter for what is rightfully mine? If he left her a token inheritance, could she still protest?

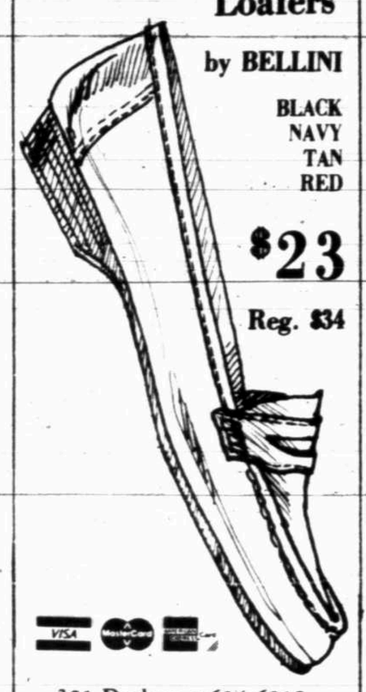

I love him very much and don't want to leave him, but I need to know that my future will be secure. We've been arguing about this lately because he thinks I'm trying to pressure him into marriage. I would love to be married to him, but could continue to live as we are, as long as I knew his daughter wouldn't take from me what he and I have put together.

Please answer in your column, as I'm sure other women have these questions. — NEEDS SECURITY

DEAR NEEDS: Much will depend on whether you are living in a state that recognizes common-law marriage. Please see a lawyer.

If your gentleman friend is on the level, he will not object to showing you the documentation (will and insurance policy) you need to feel secure. You have every right to know.

Salad prepared with sliced zucchini squash

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

ZUCCHINI SALAD
4 zucchini (about 2¼ pounds)
1 cup boiling water
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon sugar
¼ cup olive oil
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
4 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Salad greens

Pare and thinly slice zucchini — there should be 5 generous cupfuls. Boil in the water with ½ teaspoon of the salt, covered, just until tender crisp — a few minutes; drain and cool. Beat together the remaining ½ teaspoon salt, sugar, oil, vinegar, pepper and 2 tablespoons of the Parmesan; mix with zucchini; cover and chill briefly. Serve on salad greens; sprinkle with remaining Parmesan. Makes 6 servings.

Hearing flooded by drainage complaints

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Flooding and poor drainage dominated the many concerns Midlanders voiced at the first public hearing on the city's comprehensive plan Tuesday evening.

Last week's heavy rains and flooding were fresh in the minds of many of the almost 60 residents attending the hearing at Lee High School. Several northwest residents asked the Planning and Zoning Commission what the comprehensive plan was going to do about flooding in their neighborhoods.

The city Planning and Zoning Commission is gathering comment through five public hearings on the preliminary comprehensive plan to guide the city's growth and improve existing neighborhoods.

Carol Quenzer, 3330 Providence, said she was afraid the projected development and growth in the northwest section of the city would exacerbate flooding around Wadley "river."

"The city can't handle what they have right now. What are they going to do with more people?" Mrs. Quenzer asked.

Planning commission chairman Mike McElwrath, said the plan deals with location of services and different land uses — not the delivery of services like drainage. He said such comments need to be addressed to the public works department, which controls the city's drainage process.

"Drainage is a real problem in Midland. In our plan we're discussing tonight, we really don't get into a lot of detail about drainage," he said.

"The developer is responsible for developing a drainage plan to hold water back, when water is high."

However, McElwrath said the plan should alleviate some future flooding, by zoning the land mainly for single family residences. Some flooding is caused by too many residences overloading one area, he said.

McElwrath said the commission was not "brushing off" the comments about flooding.

"We have heard what you said tonight and I appreciate your comments. Maybe there is some likelihood something wasn't addressed that should have been."

Another northwest city resident, Foye Davis, 3212 Durant, wanted to know why Midland had many schools and school zones along major streets.

"This is the only city I've ever been at with school zone upon school zone on major arterials," he said.

Planning Director Richard Hennessy said the comprehensive plan recommends future school sites in the center of neighborhoods, to prevent traffic problems caused by school zones on major streets.

Agnes Fowler, 2806 Exeter, wanted the plan to include buffer zones, such as open spaces, between residences and businesses.

"Do we have to have development on every square inch?," she asked.

"To have Midland Park Mall right up to your back alley is not good planning," she said.

Hennessy said the plan uses apartments as buffers between retail areas and single family residences.

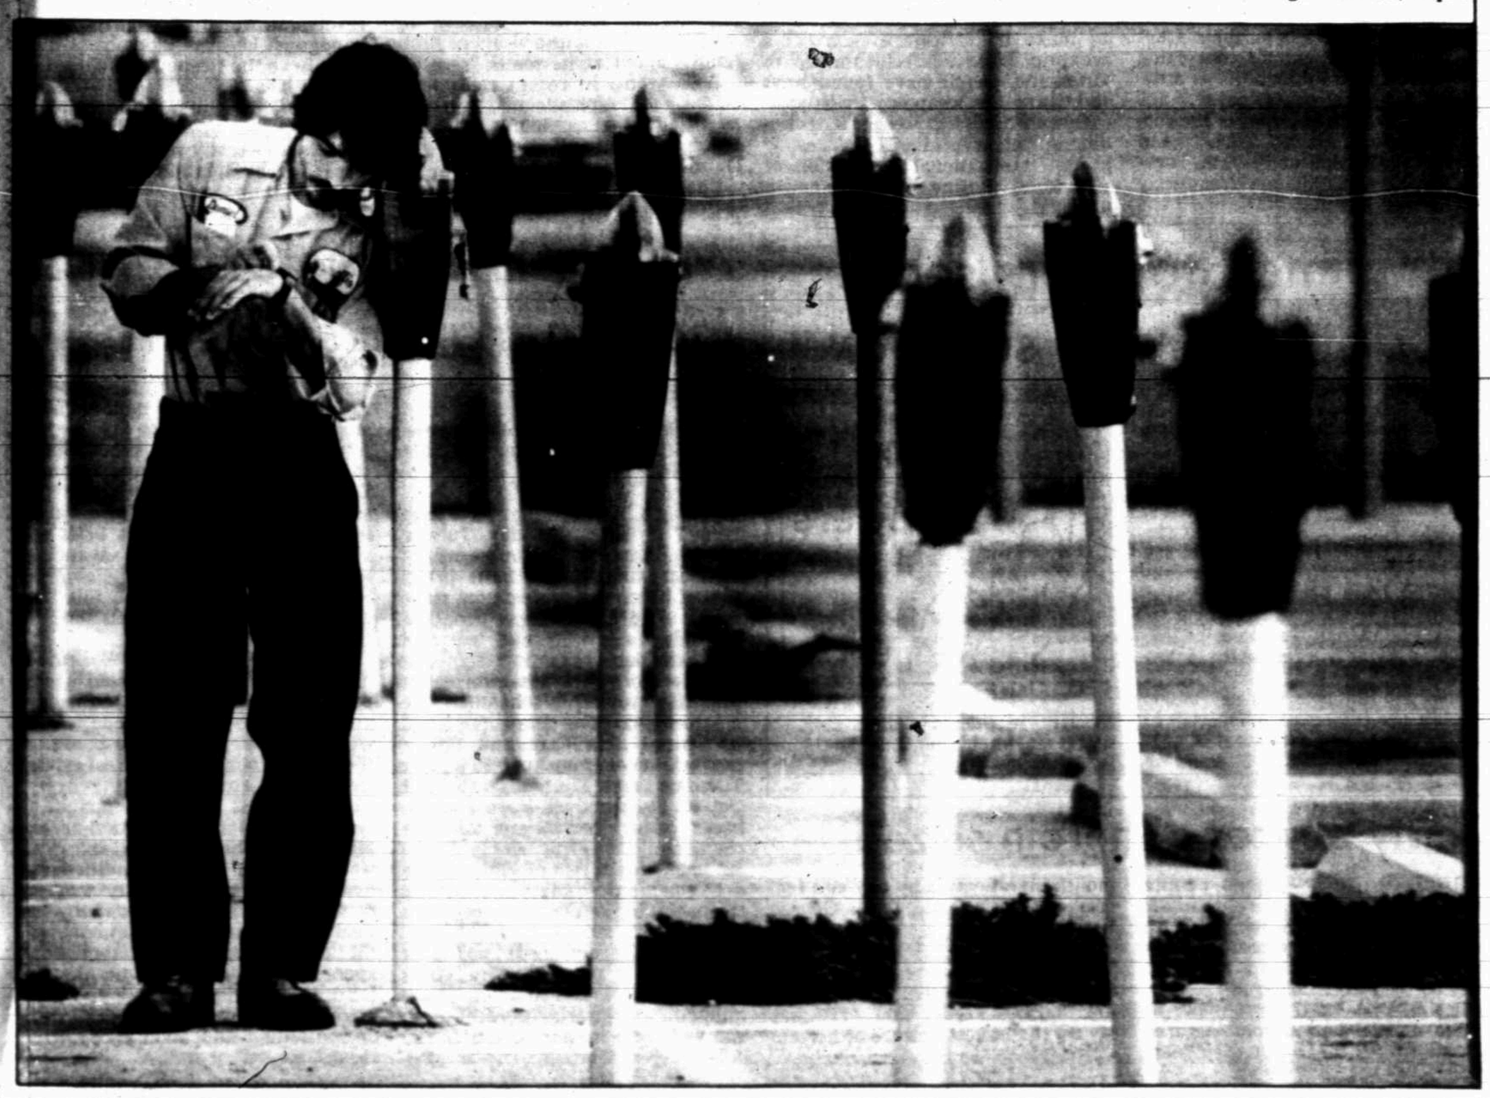

Erle Wright, 1613 North H, warned the city against using major streets as neighborhood boundaries.

"They don't work that way," he said. "I think a square mile is much too big to define as a neighborhood."

After the hearing, Hennessy said he was pleased with the residents' comments, which will be considered in the final draft and revision of the comprehensive plan.

"I think we got some good input. Some was on target, some wasn't, but it's all important," he said.

The second public hearing, from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday at the San Jacinto School Auditorium, will address plans for central Midland. The areas, 2, 6 and 8 to be discussed Thursday, are roughly contained by Loop 250 on the north, Big Spring on the east, U.S. Highway 80 on the south and Midkiff Road on the west.

Justice to launch probe of arson investigation

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A probe into the federal government's handling of the arson investigation involving Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel is to be launched by the U.S. Department of Justice.

And U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton said Tuesday that the handling of the case "does need looking into."

U.S. Attorney Helen Eversberg of San Antonio announced she would request the investigation after Bunton this week was critical of the government's investigation, particularly the Federal Bureau of Investigation's probe into the case.

"I have no comment," said an FBI spokesman in El Paso.

In sentencing Weddel and Hammond Monday, Bunton said "Corners were cut — actions were taken — representations were made or incidents concealed that the court feels were wrong and reprehensible."

Hammond, 44, and Weddel, 53, were convicted of arson-related charges last month in El Paso. Bunton sentenced Hammond to six months in a jail-like facility for perjury. Hammond also was placed on probation for five years on counts of conspiracy to commit arson, arson and another count of perjury, and was fined $10,000.

Weddel, convicted of conspiracy and arson, was placed on probation for five years and was fined $20,000. Both convictions are being appealed. Hammond could have been sentenced up to 25 years in prison and Weddel, up to 15 years.

In an earlier trial in Midland, the jury could not decide on a verdict. Bunton ordered a mistrial and sent the case to El Paso for trial because of intense publicity surrounding the case in the Midland-Odessa area.

Hammond and Weddel were charged with arranging the burning of the downtown Odessa O'Michael Building in which they held ownership interests. The government contended they sought fire insurance money. At sentencing, both maintained their innocence.

However, Bunton said late Tuesday he was unaware of any impending investigation into the government's handling of the Hammond-Weddel case. "I don't know anything about it," he said.

"That does need looking into," the judge said. "I don't think there's anything wrong with that. I would sure welcome somebody, other than the people who are with the situation, looking into it. It suits me fine."

The judge indicated he was disenchanted with the FBI's initial handling of the case and with the performance of a prosecutor, former Assistant U.S. Attorney Ellen Byers, who helped prosecute the trial in Midland.

At the sentencing, Bunton said his complaints were not directed at Assistants U.S. Attorneys Tom McHugh or James "Jim" Blankinship, who prosecuted the case in El Paso. Both "for the most part did a very commendable job."

He called arson a "very despicable offense."

The judge said the case had "political overtones" and "tended to disrupt" the Odessa City Hall, the Odessa Fire Department and the Odessa Police Department.

"There is such a thing as fair play," he said, "and the Court expects both defendants and our government officials to adhere to these rules."

Bunton said the power of the federal prosecutorial offices, the FBI and U.S. Department of Justice "is almost unlimited and indeed awesome." He said those powers should be "used with discretion" and should follow the rules laid down by the U.S. Constitution and laws.

Bunton said he runs court "like I see it."

"I sure don't think I do anything dishonest. If somebody does what I think is wrong, I don't mind speaking up. Right's right, and wrong's wrong."

MC trustees reach out for new phone system

Administration authorized to buy or lease new operation

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees Tuesday voted to lease or purchase outright a new telephone system to relieve switchboard congestion on incoming and outgoing calls. Officials say the new system would eliminate 90 percent of the college's public relations problems and increase employee productivity.

Trustees authorized the administration to either buy a $99,000 Executone Eclipse direct in-dialing system, or lease purchase a $109,783 AT&T Communications System 75 switch, subject to further negotiations with both companies.

Low bidder was Midessa Telephone Systems at $94,978.

MC Business Manager Bob Phillips recommended trustees purchase the Executone system, noting the firm could guarantee installation of the system in eight weeks. Other delivery dates ranged from Southwestern Bell Telecom's six weeks to AT&T's 18 weeks.

"We're patching the system we've got," he said. "We're ready to get a system in that works and we really don't want to have to wait 18 weeks."

Phillips also questioned other bidders' maintenance contracts and service rates for non-contract work. Service rates included maintenance and repair of the college's 200 telephones.

But trustee Ralph Way questioned the recommendation. "We want to do it fast and cheap, but AT&T's been around a long time," he said.

Under the AT&T lease purchase plan, MC would purchase the telephone system over a five-year period at a 7 percent annual interest rate. Monthly payments would be $1,989.

In addition, MC would save $9,576 in interest over the five-year period. The new finance cost would be $109,783, Phillips said.

Phillips told trustees that either system would provide direct inward-dialing to various buildings and departments across campus. Direct inward-dialing would allow persons to dial offices directly without assistance from the college switchboard.

He added that most of "state-of-the-art" equipment currently on the market may be updated in the future with the purchase of software rather than hardware.

In other action, trustees voted to allow an unnamed developer to connect a portion of Siesta Lane with the college's circle drive on the north side of the campus, provided the developer pay all expenses including curb, gutter, paving and connection costs.

The vote also was subject to the developer guaranteeing that the street accomodate four lanes of traffic.

The connection, according to trustee Reagan Legg, would provide additional access to persons entering from the north side of the campus.

Trustees also granted English instructor Larry Griffin a developmental leave of absence in 1986-87 to complete his dissertation and fulfill requirements for a doctorate of philosophy degree from the University of Oklahoma.

CECOS seeks renewed permit at Odessa hearing

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A Texas Water Commission public hearing on the renewal of a five-year permit for hazardous waste disposal by CECOS International in southeast Odessa resumed on the second floor of the Ector County Courthouse this morning.

The hearing began last Wednesday morning and recessed early Friday evening after TWC hearing examiner Doug Roberts had heard some 25 hours of testimony for and against renewal of the CECOS permit.

The expiring TWC permit allows CECOS to inject more than 93.3 million gallons of hazardous wastes. Reportedly, only about 15 million gallons of hazardous industrial chemicals have been injected into the 29-year-old well over the past five years.

CECOS International Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Houston-based Browning Ferris Industries, is located at 2407 E. Murphy on a tract of land in Ector County surrounded by Odessa's city limits but not within the city. The injection well is on the far end of East Murphy near Interstate Highway 20.

The CECOS TWC permit allows the injection of more than a hundred different chemicals including acidic, alkaline and cleaning solutions, chlorinated and non-chlorinated solvents, waste oil, coolants, pesticides and herbicides, brines, plating solutions, ammonia and nitrate solutions and non-biodegradable organics.

The final witness testifying against renewal of the CECOS permit Friday, Odessa pathologist Dr. Robert Bright, said he opposed injections of the hazardous waste so close to a populated area because too many unknowns exist to assume injection of long-lasting chemicals might be safe.

"Anytime you put that many chemicals in a holding tank, which is essentially what injection into a (underground) formation is," Bright said, "it is virtually impossible to tell what the reaction or interaction might be."

Bright said he didn't believe he could design a system to determine what chemicals are being put into the CECOS well.

The CECOS permit requires the company file a report with the TWC executive director detailing the nature and volume of waste received from each company within 30 days after the end of each month.

In testimony last Wednesday, CECOS district manager Ray Sonnenberg was asked by Jim Haley, representing the TWC executive director, how CECOS knows a specific load of waste does not contain a chemical that should not be injected into the well.

"We have to depend on the generators (companies that produce the waste) and what they say the load contains," said Sonnenberg.

According to Sonnenberg, about 40 percent of the hazardous waste received by CECOS comes from Odessa area industries such as El Paso Products, the Shell Oil plant and General Tire plant. About 55 percent of the waste comes from other plants in Texas and five percent is shipped in from other states for disposal, he said.

The protest against renewal of the CECOS permit is primarily being led by Ector County Judge Jan Fisher, Odessa attorney Michael McLeaish and his wife, K.T. McLeaish, who first asked for the public hearing last March, and Mary Lou Parsons. The McLeaishs and Parsons live within about two miles of the CECOS plant. Also admitted as parties in the hearing are B.F. Clark, representing Energas, and Robert Weil, an insurance salesman who lives in east Odessa.

Clark says Energas' concern is the number of false alarms the company has responded to from eastside Odessa residents who have mistaken odors emanating from the CECOS site for leaking gas. Clark expressed concern people could become so used to the odors they might ignore an actual gas leak should one occur.

Andrews hospital to open 15-bed psychiatric care unit

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

ANDREWS — With Clearview still treating their first eight patients and a proposed ground-breaking for a similar facility planned before the end of the year by an Austin firm, Andrews' Permian General Hospital announced its intent to open a 15-bed psychiatric care unit "by the first of the year."

"We've already interviewed two psychiatrists," said administrator Rob Mercker. "We're looking probably at the first of the year as a start-up date, although it all depends on the psychiatrists."

Permian General will be constructing the unit jointly with Mental Health Management Inc., a Virginia-based firm.

"We are engaged in a contract with MHM to develop a 15-bed inpatient unit which will serve mainly patients suffering from depression, nervous disorders and mental breakdowns," said Mercker. " We will not be treating chemically dependent patients for that problem, although there will be cases where their problems are brought on by the drugs or alcohol."

Mercker added that Permian General would not be in competition with Clearview or Glenwood (formerly West Plains), the facility planned by Healthcare International Inc. of Austin.

"We've talked with Clearview because we didn't want to compete with them," he said. "Obviously to open up another drug and alcohol treatment facility wouldn't be wise."

Mercker stated that the two facilities "would probably wind up as good reference buddies," using each others' services.

Clearview's director Phil Lundberg, however, wasn't so sure.

"I think that there is a potential that we can help each other, but I also think that there could be competition depending on what their psychiatrists are going to do," said Lundberg. "One way it could work for both of us is if we get a patient with a drug and alcohol problem who also has a psychiatric problem. If they are from the Andrews area, than we could refer them to Permian General after their treatment is completed at Clearview."

Lundberg also stated that it could work the other way, with Permian General referring patients to Clearview.

Man declared disabled; Wife charged in forgery

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 45-year-old rural Midland man was expected to receive $65,000 after a Midland jury declared him 100 percent permanently disabled Tuesday, but his 51-year-old wife may be facing three years in the Texas Department of Corrections after her Saturday arrest for check forgery.

In June, Paula Lovett had been sentenced to three years in prison by a 238th District jury which suspended the sentence and gave her six years probation instead. She was convicted May 16 of stealing $880 from her employer, the Midland Women's Clinic, 2009 W. Wall, and ordered to pay $3,200 in restitution.

Ms. Lovett was admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital Monday after being freed from county jail on a $10,000 bond. Reportedly, she is suffering from stress stemming from her family's problems.

She was arrested after cashing a forged $1,216 check from her current employer, Jack Brewer and Associates, at Home Savings, according to police. She is suspected of having cashed several other checks on this account for a total of about $11,000.

According to Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors, charges of forgery by passing against Ms. Lovett will be brought before a grand jury, and a hearing to consider revoking her probation will be requested. If her probation is revoked, she must serve her original three-year sentence for theft, he said.

Jerry Lovett won his judgement against Home Insurance Co. of Indiana Tuesday as a result of an April 3, 1984, accident at a drilling site in Ector County, according to his attorney, Jim Osborn of Odessa.

Osborn said Lovett was unhitching a trailer from a truck when the truck fell on his left big toe. Back problems resulted from the toe injury, and a 238th District Court jury ruled Tuesday that Lovett was 100 percent permanently incapacitated, "Which simply means that you cannot do manual labor," Osborn said.

At the time of his injury, Lovett was working for C.A. White Trucking Co., Osborn said.

Chamber coalition endorses water plan

By DAVID ELLIOT
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — For the first time ever, a coalition of Texas business organizations has set aside internal regional differences and endorsed a comprehensive statewide water plan.

The Texas State Chamber of Commerce, which claims a membership of more than 250,000 individuals and businesses, announced Tuesday it will support a pair of constitutional amendments in a special election this November.

"The water plan has often divided us in the past," said Nancy Speck, a Nacogdoches resident and president-elect of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce. "I wish to express the East Texas Chamber of Commerce's full support for passage of the water propositions, which will allow us full development of our water resources."

Texas voters will trek to the polls Nov. 5 to decide whether to authorize the issuance of $980 million in general-obligation bonds to fund state participation in reservoirs, water- and wastewater-treatment plants, flood control and other projects.

Voters also will be asked to approve the issuance of up to $200 million of general-obligation bonds for agricultural conservation projects.

Also on Tuesday, the 700-member Boating Trades Association of Texas threw in its support for the plan. The marine industry group's board of directors unanimously endorsed the package of amendments at its last meeting.

In the past, many East Texans have been unwilling to support water projects which they felt would primarily benefit the residents of arid West Texas.

Speck said East Texans are taking less of a regional attitude toward this year's water package. "A lot of the emotionalism surrounding 'busing water' to West Texas is probably ill-founded and there's been more rational discussion" this time around, she said.

"We have always been concerned about water," said Steve Stephens, a San Angelo resident and president-elect of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. "We rely so much on oil, but we also agree that the problems with oil will look like a cakewalk if we do not solve our problems with water."

E. W. Wehman, a Pleasanton resident and president-elect of the South Texas Chamber of Commerce, said the state's economic future depends upon passage of the water plan. "I would like to think we possibly have gained a little perception and feel the problem is a statewide problem and not a regional problem," he said. "We are trying to solve a statewide problem."

Tom Champion, a Brownsville resident and president-elect of the Rio Grande Valley Chamber of Commerce, said the state chamber would try to have an impact during the remaining three weeks before the election. "We're going to be a big influence to get the chambers throughout the state to go after their membership," he said. "We need their support."

ANDREWS

"I think there is the potential for a two-way street there, but I'm somewhat cautious," he said. "I think that their situation will probably be similar to what West Plains (Glenwood) will be — they will need to fill their beds."

"Quite frankly," he added. "I don't know how they will fill their beds."

Filling beds also was on the minds of the Midland County Hospital District Board of Trustees when they voted down a separate psychiatric unit at their March meeting.

"The project would be risky at this point," said Ray Branson, president of Midland Memorial Hospital, at the time. "With the 15 beds at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, MMH's five beds and the 40 planned beds at the West Plains project, there is a total of 60 beds available in the area. It would be more than enough at the present time and through at least 1990."

A MMH spokeswoman noted today that there had been no change in the hospital's plans.

Still, Mercker insists that there is a need for more psychiatric care in the area, stating that "there is a real void in the Permian Basin with which Permian General hopes to establish a market niche."

Lundberg disagrees.

"Probably at the time that they were making plans for the unit, there was a need," said Lundberg. "In the absence of Clearview and Glenwood, there was a void. But now, there's no void. I think he (Mercker) is going against the grain."

The issue of providing psychiatric care in the Permian Basin has been a hot one over the last few years as area hospitals and outside firms battled over certificates of need under the now-defunct Texas Health Facilities Commission.

Both MMH and Parkview attempted to build a psychiatric or chemically dependent-type facility, with MMH finally constructing Clearview in a joint venture with two Arizona firms. Medical Center Hosital currently has a 15-bed psychiatric unit. The Glenwood project, to be constructed near the airport, would add still more beds. Plans for that facility call for a groundbreaking "sometime before the first of the year," according to a Healthcare spokesman.

Mercker estimates that Permian General will spend "about $100,000" to ready the hospital for the opening of the unit.

"We have a 60- to 90-day renovation plan which involves some work on walls and installation of shatter-proof glass," he said. "But we're about on target as far as our plans are concerned."

Permian General signed the contract with MHM in January, but "waited until the certificate of need issue was cleared up before proceeding," according to Mercker. The contract provides the hospital with the framework for psychiatric treatment, he indicated.

"They (MHM) will provide a psychiatrist, psychologist, two social workers, an occupational therapist and a program manager and Permian General provides the nursing staff," he said.

The facility currently has 114 beds.

Gun silencer kits aid sophisticated criminals

HOUSTON (AP) — Criminals are getting more sophisticated weaponry than law enforcement officers, thanks to special kits on the market for building silencers or converting guns from semi-automatic to automatic, a federal expert says.

Edward Owen Jr., chief of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms' division of firearms technology, said the kits are frequently found at gun shows and flea markets.

Despite efforts by manufacturers to make it difficult to convert a weapon from semi-automatic to automatic, people have found ways to change the weapons, Owen said.

Owen discussed weapons trends among violent criminals on Tuesday at the International Association of Chiefs of Police conference in Houston.

"The scary thing is, police are being outgunned by the criminals," he said. "We think it (the weapons problem) is about at its zenith."

ATF agents in recent raids have seized such sophisticated weapons as machine guns, hand grenades, land mines and anti-aircraft rockets, Owen said.

Charles Simmons, police chief in Palm Bay, Fla., said he has thought about barring his officers from using revolvers instead of semi-automatic handguns because "revolvers just don't have the firepower we need in these times.

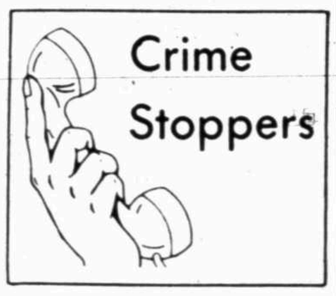

"My officers literally haven't got the firepower to take criminals on unless we're really well prepared for a particular situation in advance," Simmons said.

Inmates' 'bright idea' fires little more than imagination

From Staff Reports

Two Midland County Jail inmates apparently came up with their own solution to the jail's much-publicized problems Tuesday, using a lightbulb to set some paper on fire. Midland firefighters classified the incident as "no fire," but the six units which rushed to the rescue around 12:40 p.m. caused some excitement at the downtown courthouse.

"It seems we had a disgruntled prisoner," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter. Along with another man awaiting trial on felony charges, this prisoner "set some small fires in the tank."

Painter wouldn't name the prisoners involved, but said arson charges may be filed against them.

"If it ain't one thing, it's another," he said, referring to continuing problems with the jail. On Tuesday, at least, the problem was easily solved.

In other fire reports, a gas-pump fire at Crouch Well Service, Rankin Highway and County Road 114, destroyed a 1985 Chevrolet one-ton truck and a 250-gallon storage tank about 7:19 p.m. Tuesday. The fire was extinguished with about 1,800 gallons of water and 10 gallons of chemical foam, reports said. Several nearby vehicles were scorched by the blaze, the cause of which was undetermined.

Thirty ounces of heroin seized

DALLAS (AP) — Three people were arrested and more than 30 ounces of Mexican heroin with an estimated street value of $4 million were seized Tuesday in a major attack on drug trafficking in the city, police said.

The arrests and heroin seizures Tuesday were the result of a four-month investigation by city and federal officials, police Capt. George Parker said.

"We figure they're responsible for 50 percent of the heroin that comes into Dallas," Parker said. "I would say it's the largest (seizure of heroin) we've had."

Others may harvest U.S. profits in space

HOUSTON (AP) — If U.S. industry fails to establish a commercial foothold in space, other nations will harvest profits from technology developed by American tax dollars, a series of speakers said Tuesday at hearings before a presidential commission.

Speakers from the Houston area told the National Commission on Space that economic leadership in the coming decades will go to the nation that holds the technological lead in the commericalization of outer space.

Bill Urban, a Houston developer and a leader of a citizens space group, said that the world's economy "has crossed a threshold into a new era," in which technology from space will become a key element.

He said studies have shown that by the 21st century, the space markets could be worth $50 billion in manufacturing, $30 billion in pharmaceuticals, $10 billion in communications and $15 billion in microelectronics.

Urban said the U.S. has a lead in these areas now, but is facing a dramatic and increasingly tough competition from other nations. He warned "we need to decide if we should be pulled by opportunity or pushed because we fall behind."

Art Dula, a Houston consultant on space technology, said the U.S. is in a dramatic competition now for harvesting commerical profits from near Earth orbit.

"Europeans are beating the pants off of us in commericializing space," Dula said.

He said establishing space manufacturing facilities and experimental laboratories in orbit will require huge amounts of capital investment and risk over the next half century and that the U.S. government must find ways to enourage American companies to make investments in space.

Another speaker, Nathan Goldman, of the University of Houston School of Law, said "near Earth space is going to be populated by most of the countries of the world."

He said Japan, Europe, the Soviet Union and even countries such as Argentina are making plans to establish space colonies for research or for manufacturing in orbit.

Peter Bishop, a professor of studies of the future at the University of Houston, said the nation "needs to go on the offensive" in establishing a program of space commercialization.

He said America is losing markets to nations such as Japan that have learned to manufacture goods more cheaply, often taking advantage of U.S technology.

"The U.S. is in danger of losing a significant share of the world's market and must establish a national plan in strategic economic areas such as space," he said.

Will Davis Mountain water leave Perrier high and dry?

PECOS (AP) — Three brothers from Alpine plan to tap a new market with their Davis Mountain Spring Water, now available in most West Texas stores.

"It's cheaper than Perrier," said Dan Dunnigan, vice president of Big Bend Coca-Cola's production. "Besides that, who wants to drink water from Europe?"

Davis Mountain Spring Water was the brainchild of Dunnigan and his brothers, Big Bend President Rob Dunnigan and Big Bend Vice President of sales Mike Dunnigan. They thought of the idea three years ago, and their bottling plant in Alpine just recently began turning out the product.

"We were just sitting around one day talking about pollution of most water supplies, primarily from pesticides," Dunnigan said. "Davis Mountains has such clean water — we haven't had the mass of people in Europe or the eastern United States to contaminate it."

The carbonated mineral water from Davis Mountains springs has just reached the Big Bend retailers from Van Horn on the west to Big Lake on the east, plus some stores in Lubbock and San Angelo, Dunnigan said.

Dunnigan said sales have "begun slow, but everyone who tries it really likes it."

He said Big Bend decided to carbonate the mountain water because of the water already existing in the marketing of plain bottled water. "And carbonation is a growing segment of bottled water — it grew 17 percent last year," Dunnigan said.

Flavored bottled water sales grew 70 percent last year and studies have determined people prefer flavored over plain, he added. Davis Mountain Spring Water comes in plain, lemon-lime and orange.

Perrier, also available in flavored varieties, last year sold 11.5 million gallons of its product in the United States. That gives Big Bend distributors faith in the future of their own product, priced at about a third of the cost of Perrier.

Some day sales of Davis Mountain Spring Water may also be nationwide. Retailers in Tennessee and Florida already have expressed interest in the product.

But the Dunnigans are not staking Big Bend Bottlers' future on these hopes. They're not even really planning any major advertising campaigns.

"We're just letting the product do its own thing," Dunnigan said.
