Happy Father's Day!

Golfing buddies

Playing a round of golf together -- or just spending time on the driving range -- is something many men plan to do with their dads to celebrate Father's Day today. Father's Day has been established as a way for children of all ages to express appreciation to their dad's for blessings and help in the past and for the times yet to come. Here, Hereford's Steve Stevens, center gets in some golf work with his son, Jerry, right, and grandson Jay.

FBI says White House got reports improperly

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - As President Clinton's aides sought to play down their chagrin over improperly obtained FBI background files, Republican challenger Bob Dole asked campaign audiences, "How far will this White House go?" A Republican congressman called for an investigation.

"I continue to be skeptical that the White House has told the whole story," said Rep. William F. Clinger, R-Pa., a persistent Clinton critic who chairs the House Government Operations Committee.

In a stinging report Friday, the FBI said 481 White House requests for background information in 1993 and 1994 "were without justification and served no official purpose."

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the president accepted responsibility for "management inadequacies" in the matter and concurred in both the FBI findings and new procedures to prevent a recurrence.

White House counsel Jack Quinn said FBI background check forms will no longer be obtained without the consent of the subject unless the White House counsel and the attorney general or deputy attorney general approve in writing. The FBI will review the requests at a higher level than before.

The official responsible for the controversial background checks, White House security chief Craig Livingstone, made a sworn statement at the administration's urging that "I was never asked to obtain, I never instructed anyone to obtain ... I never disseminated" information for any improper purpose.

McCurry was asked whether Livingstone would keep his job. The spokesman replied there was no reason to think he lied.

"But if he's not responsible for what are called egregious violations of privacy, then who is?" McCurry was asked.

"The president," he replied. "The president took responsibility for the management inadequacies that exist and he's apologized."

FBI Director Louis J. Freeh, a Clinton appointee, did not spare the administration as he released a 31-page report from FBI general counsel Howard Shapiro, who

Tanya Reid to go on trial for second time Monday

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

A new trial will begin in Lubbock Monday in the 1984 death of an eight-month-old baby, allegedly at the hands of her mother.

The trial is the second for Tanya Thaxton Reid, 38, who was convicted by a 222nd District Court jury of causing the death. That trial was conducted in December 1993.

The guilty verdict, 62-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine were overturned by the Seventh Court of Appeals and sent back for retrial. The appellate decision was entered in February 1995.

A jury panel of 100 persons will report for the trial in Lubbock County, on a change of venue.

The 1993 verdict was reversed, in part, according to the appellate court, because the district court did not conduct a hearing on a last-minute motion by the defense to move the trial to another city.

Judge David Wesley Gulley ruled at the time the motion was presented that it was not "timely presented."

The Court of Appeals also ruled that the prosecution could not claim the defendant's hands were a deadly weapon in commission of the crime.

In the 1993 trial, the Deaf Smith County Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul alleged that Morgan Reid was the victim of Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy, a disorder in which a care-giver allegedly causes harm for personal attention.

In pre-trial hearings last week, the defense sought to have testimony about Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy excluded in the new trial.

Judge Gulley, of 222nd District Court, who will preside in the trial in Lubbock, denied the defense motion.

Arguments on more than 40 motions, filed by defense and prosecution, were heard by Judge Gulley in pre-trial hearings in recent weeks.

Medical records of the baby were entered in evidence in the 1993 trial, showing she was treated in hospitals on several occasions after her mother reported she stopped breathing. The mother said she resuscitated the baby before emergency personnel arrived.

The family was living in Hereford in 1984 when the mother called for emergency help after Morgan stopped breathing. She was at Deaf Smith General Hospital, then transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where she died.

Reid, her husband and an older daughter moved several times, living in the Chicago area and in Iowa. She was tried for endangerment of a child in Iowa in connection with incidents involving a son, born after the death of Morgan.

A jury in Iowa convicted her in 1989 on the endangerment charge and sentenced her to 10 years in prison. She was being held in an Iowa prison at the time she was indicted and brought here for the 1993 trial.

The defendant completed her Iowa sentence while in custody in Texas.

After the appellate ruling in the 1993 trial, she was eligible for bond. She was brought to Hereford from the Neal unit of Texas Department of Criminal Justice and after a hearing, she posted $25,000 bond in October 1995. She has been free since that time.

Court observers believe the trial in Lubbock will be one of the most expensive in Deaf Smith County history.

Two attorneys were appointed by Judge Gulley to represent Reid after she filed an affidavit of indigency in the court. In the 1993 trial, Charles Rittenberry of Amarillo and Esther Eggleston Hayward of Dallas were retained by defendant for her defense.

Counsel for the defense in Lubbock will be Dean Roper and Gene Fristoe, both of Amarillo.

Initial payments of $10,000 for each lawyer, toward total fees, have been made.

In addition, Deaf Smith County will be responsible for expenses of court staff and criminal district attorney staff personnel during the trial.

The 1993 trial was two weeks long. Observers believe the new trial may extend over same amount of time.

Defense counsel and the criminal district attorney will observe a gag agreement and will not discuss the case outside the courtroom.

Freebies a thing of the past for lawmakers

One Texas congressman reported receiving free gift

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Freebies are rapidly becoming a relic of the past for members of Congress, a review of members' annual personal financial disclosure forms shows.

After a sustained barrage of criticism over free travel and gratuities such as Super Bowl tickets or crystal mementoes, lawmakers seem increasingly gun-shy about accepting special interests' favors.

Only one of Texas' 32 members of Congress reported accepting a gift, according to an Associated Press review of forms released Friday, covering all of 1995. New, tighter gift rules took effect this year.

House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, a Republican from Sugar Land, reported receiving a whip, framed with a plaque, from a friend who is a lobbyist for the National Association of Beer Wholesalers. DeLay returned the whip last week after learning that its $480.73 value exceeded the House's $250 limit.

"I was unaware that I was prohibited from receiving this gift as it was provided to me on the basis of personal friendship and was commemorative in nature," DeLay wrote the Clerk of the House. He is seeking a waiver from the House ethics committee that would allow him to get the plaque back.

While DeLay was the only admitted gift recipient, others took great pains to explain that their travel on a special interests' dime was appropriate - and instructive.

In his financial form disclosing a 17-day jaunt to Israel, 13-day trip to Germany and three-day visit to Guatemala, Democratic Rep. Lloyd Doggett of Austin wrote: "No public funds were used for the above educational travel, all of which complied with the terms of the subsequently enacted rule limiting receipt of gifts."

Rep. Gene Green, a Houston Democrat, provided a little explanation for his tours of Israel, Venezuela and Alaska.

"Purpose of trip: Meet with government officials and participate in discussions pertaining to national security," he wrote of his 10-day trip to Israel, courtesy of the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee.

Beyond travel and gifts, lawmakers are required annually to disclose in broad ranges of value their investments, financial holdings and debts.

The forms are far from complete; members aren't required to detail the value of their homes, automobiles, furniture, art, spouse's salary or assets, Social Security or federal pension benefits.

Several Texans, most notably House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer, a Houston Republican, go well beyond the reporting requirements. Some, such as Democrat Charles Stenholm of Stamford and Republican Henry Bonilla of San Antonio, list their children's and wives' assets as well.

Alone in the Texas delegation, Archer supplements his disclosure form with a one-page summary that lists the value of his assets to the dollar, including his 1987 Dodge truck and coin collection.

"Members of Congress have a responsibility to their constituents to fully reveal their assets," Archer said. "Since I was first sent to Congress by the 7th District of Texas, the requirements for disclosure have greatly improved."

However, Archer added, the current disclosure law still falls short of what he considers appropriate. "I urge all members of Congress to release as detailed financial statements as I have done," he said.

Property tax committee holds first public meet

By EDUARDO MONTES
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Since 1983, Socorro Ramos has been watching her carpenter husband labor to build a modest home for their family, but never finish.

Rising property taxes eats up construction funds, she said.

So she came Friday to plead for relief as a state school property tax study committee began a series of hearings to gauge public concern about growing tax burdens and take suggestions for funding alternatives for Texas schools.

The hearing was the first of 14 to be conducted statewide by the Citizens' Committee on Property Tax Relief, which Gov. George Bush has directed to report to him and the Legislature in September. Lawmakers return to session in 1997, and any changes could be made then.

She hopes committee members were listening.

"I certainly pray that they did," Mrs. Ramos said. "It is what they take back to Gov. Bush that will make a difference to us. I'm so glad that somebody has taken this up."

State Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer, who heads the committee, said the panel will listen to all suggestions for replacing the school property tax.

The school levy now raises about $10 billion a year, and the latest round of tax appraisals indicates the total is going up.

"It's a crisis," said Bomer. "State property taxes are a crisis."

The committee seems to be focusing on three alternatives devised by a working group picked by Bush, who has ruled out a personal state income tax, and legislative leaders:

- Creating a new business activity tax. Business activity is "the sum of all its internal costs, including profit," and would be about 40 percent of a company's gross receipts.

- Imposing a gross receipts tax on all business and investment income.

- Making changes in the current 6.25 percent state sales tax, such as expanding it to items not now taxed.

The committee will not discuss property taxes levied by cities and counties, nor will it make any recommendations. It is more geared toward learning the public's mood.

Many of the roughly 100 speakers who addressed the committee's first-ever meeting found fault with at least one of the ideas.

Mrs. Ramos, a resident of Socorro, a small town just outside El Paso, said her family's economy, based on a $2,000 monthly income, is already very tight. She would be worse off if the state expanded or increased the sales tax, she said.

Kaczynski to face Unabomber charges

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - An indictment charging Theodore Kaczynski with Unabomber-related crimes is expected Tuesday in Sacramento, Calif., where two people were killed by package bombs blamed on the elusive serial bomber, a federal source says.

Federal authorities have discussed bringing charges in New Jersey and other locations, but the Sacramento indictment is the only one immediately planned, the source told The Associated Press Friday.

Kaczynski, 54, could be transferred from his Montana jail cell to California by the end of next week, said the source, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

Kaczynski has been jailed in Helena, Mont., without bond since his arrest April 3 at the remote mountain cabin where he spent most of his time since quitting his job at the University of California in 1969. He currently faces only a federal charge of possessing bomb-making materials.

Attorney General Janet Reno, who was in San Francisco on Friday for a speech, refused to comment.

Three deaths and 23 injuries have been blamed on the Unabomber in an 18-year bombing spree that began in 1978.

Two of the deaths were in Sacramento.

City posts agenda

A lengthy agenda has been posted for the regular meeting of the Hereford City Commission, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Monday. During a work session at 5 p.m., the commission will hear a report on status of solid waste disposal regulations from Austin Attorney Crockett Camp. During the regular meeting, a petition related to operation of the city-owned golf course will be received and the commission will discuss several other items of business. A resolution about the rate increase proposed by Energas will be considered.

School board sets workshop

The Hereford ISD board of trustees will meet in special session on Tuesday to take part in a workshop on technology and the budget. The session will be at 6 p.m. in the board room, 601 N. 25 Mile Avenue. Included will be a presentation by Technology Director Dianna Drew on technology needs of the district and preliminary information on the 1996-97 fiscal year budget. The meeting is open to the public and no board votes are scheduled.

Hospital board meets Tuesday

A regular monthly meeting of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District board of directors is scheduled Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the board room at Hereford Regional Medical Center. Items on the agenda include a discussion of board committees to be appointed by president Mal Manchee; a discussion of the Texas County and District Retirement System, reports on the rural health clinic, and regular medical staff, operations and financial reports. A closed meeting has been announced for a conference with an employee.

Safety seat training set

The Texas Department of Transportation, along with SafeRiders, a division of the Texas Department of Health, will host a child safety seat training class at 1 p.m. June 19 in the HISD administration building, room 112. The training is for child safety seat advocates such as police, fire department officials, hospital employees, emergency medical technicians and others. It shows the proper installation of many types of child safety seats in a variety of vehicles. In addition, information will be provided on what common mistakes to avoid and what types of seats are appropriate for different age groups. To register for the course, call (806) 356-3295. Registration deadline is June 17.

Make-A-Wish fund established

A local bank account has been established for the Make-A-Wish Foundation at FirstBank Southwest here. The fund will be used to accept local gifts to the group, which helps fulfill wishes for seriously ill young people. The announcement was made by Paul Hamilton.

More rain possible for area

Hereford recorded .07 of an inch of rain on Friday, according to KPAN Radio. The city's high was 82 degrees and the overnight low Saturday was 62 degrees. The forecast for Sunday calls for partly cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. High will be 85-90 degrees, with south to southwest winds of 5-15 mph.

Silly Hat Day

Hereford Care Center residents put on silly hats in celebration of National Silly Week on Friday. While some residents wore traditional hats, others created their own hats with paper plates, flowers and bows. Then they all gathered for a silly group picture.

Fire-scorched NM helped by rain

By The Associated Press

Rains blessed high country on the New Mexico-Colorado border and the mountains of southwestern New Mexico on Friday, helping firefighters battle large fires that have blackened thousands of acres in the past few days.

New Mexico - from its deserts to its mountains - has been in the throes of drought for months, leaving trees, brush and grass primed for fire.

A lightning-caused fire on the New Mexico-Colorado border has charred 13,538 acres, most of it Indian land.

The fire had burned about 6,000 acres of Jicarilla Apache land in New Mexico, about 5,000 acres of Southern Ute land in Colorado and more than 3,000 acres of land in a checkerboard of ownership on the border.

Monica Lujan, a Southern Ute fire information officer in Ignacio, Colo., said the fire was 50 percent contained, thanks to Friday's high humidity and afternoon showers.

"It definitely has helped crews' efforts but there are safety concerns about sending crews on the muddy, slick roads," Lujan said.

Some 840 firefighters - aided by 10 engines, two air tankers and helicopters - were assigned to the blaze. Lujan said about 1,000 people, including volunteers, were working on the fire late Friday.

Crews set back fires Friday to burn fuel between the front line and the outer perimeters of the fire.

The fire started Monday about 10 miles north of Dulce on the Jicarilla Apache Reservation, then flared north to Southern Ute land in Colorado.

Meanwhile, the L.L. Complex Fire in the Gila National Forest has burned at least 7,100 acres, while another Gila fire, the Hells Fire, has charred at least 2,200 acres, said Mary Bowman, a U.S. Forest Service fire information officer at the Southwest Interagency Coordination Center in Albuquerque.

The two fires, burning in ponderosa pine and mixed conifers, grew despite rain Thursday, Bowman said.

She said four Type 1 crews - the best of the fire suppression overhead teams - have been ordered to the L.L. Complex Fire, which began Sunday as separate fires.

Crews on Thursday rescued 30 endangered Gila trout from Sacaton Creek in the Gila, fearing flames upstream could produce ash that might wash into the stream and choke off oxygen.

The recovered fish were being taken to the Mescalero fish hatchery.

Crews had hoped to remove 75 to 100 fish, but could recover only 30 because the team had to search for a television reporter who became lost while covering the recovery efforts, said Delbert Griego, a Gila spokesman.

Ground searchers found Walter Ratliff, Silver City-area correspondent for KOAT-TV in Albuquerque, early Friday, 17 hours after he became separated from the recovery crew.

Ratliff was tired and hungry, but otherwise OK.

Bowman said no firefighters have been assigned to the low-intensity Hells Fire, which began June 7.

"It's in a really bad, bad steep area," she said.

Lightning on Thursday triggered another Gila blaze - dubbed the Brother Fire, but a Type 1 team contained it at 50 acres, Bowman said.

Rain helped minimize numerous other small fires scattered throughout the Gila. Griego said about 20 small blazes, ranging from under an acre to 20 acres, were burning, compared with 59 on Wednesday.

"The weather just stopped the fire movement and firefighters were able to get on them," he said.

Bowman said lightning caused five fires Thursday in the Lincoln National Forest in southern New Mexico, but they all were quickly doused.

"They've had a lot of people that can just jump right on it. They've been really lucky," she said. "It looks like they're all in pretty good shape."

Bug importers baffled by federal raid

FORT DAVIS, Texas (AP) - Folks here are having trouble figuring out why federal agents raided the Davis Mountains Resort home of a couple who imports and exports dead bugs.

"It was like they were descending on the Freemen," said attorney Tom Hirsch, who is representing Terry and Diana Taylor. "Obviously, it's over some dead bugs - they're not even alive. It is kind of crazy."

Officials from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which enforces the Endangered Species Act, aren't commenting.

"It's still under investigation. It's a complicated case," special agent Robert Lee told The Odessa American. "We're not trying to be evasive, but it wouldn't be fair to the subject because we haven't talked to him either."

Terry Taylor is a widely known entomologist and the owner of Combined Scientific, Hirsch said. Taylor and his wife import dead insects, which they then send to scientists, universities and bug collectors all over the world.

"It's kind of a dead-bug clearing-house," Hirsch explained, adding that the couple have been selling insects since the early 1970s.

On June 3, while the Taylors were attending a funeral in California, agents searched their home, seizing business records and bugs, Hirsch said.

"They took every piece of paper they found. They even took the computer."

All documents pertaining to the case - including the search warrant and probable-cause affidavit - have been sealed by court order, U.S. Attorney Denise Williams said.

She declined to comment further.

Hirsch is still trying to find out what sort of alleged violations U.S. Fish and Wildlife agents are investigating. It's possible the agency believes the couple possesses or once possessed bugs that are on the endangered-species lists in other countries, Hirsch said.

"That's the only thing I can figure out. (The Taylors) didn't kill the bugs - they were already dead. I really don't know what (the agents) are looking for."

Terry and Diana Taylor have owned some of their insects for a long period of time. So it may be that a species has become endangered since the Taylors imported the bugs from another country, Hirsch speculated.

"Some could have gone on a list somewhere after they were obtained. That's the only thing (the Taylors) can think of," he said. "They work pretty closely with Fish & Wildlife for this reason."

The Taylors are not commenting on the case on the advice of their attorney.

Hirsch isn't sure why agents in Lubbock - which is part of the northern district - are in charge of the case. It's possible that a transaction was made in their jurisdiction, Hirsch said.

"(The Taylors) ship by mail all over the world. They could have shipped something somewhere in the Northern District."

Despite the case's bizarre twists and rather odd subject matter, the Taylors don't find the investigation amusing, Hirsch said.

"They're really nice people, very interesting people, well-educated. This is nothing to laugh at or take lightly."

FBI

reviewed the affair that has become a presidential campaign issue.

"The inquiry shows the FBI gave inadequate protection to the privacy interests of persons in FBI files," Freeh said. "The prior system of providing files to the White House relied on good faith and honor. Unfortunately, the FBI and I were victimized."

McCurry questioned the "victimized" comment. "I do not understand that statement," he said.

The White House acknowledged earlier this week that it had sought and obtained 341 background reports.

At Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr's request, Shapiro did not interview White House officials. The report was sent to Starr, who is investigating the firing of White House travel office employees.

Dole, the presumptive GOP presidential nominee, told supporters in Savannah, Ga., on Friday that "today, Freeh reported an egregious violation of policy. How far will this White House go? We need an investigation ... to find out the truth."

Shapiro called the requests unjustified and an invasion of privacy, but said, "I have not reached any conclusions about the motivations of any White House employee."

On June 6, the White House voluntarily surrendered 333 of the summaries, which had been shipped to White House archives because an employee had "determined over time that these materials had been inappropriately gathered," Shapiro wrote.

Another was returned last Monday, one was forwarded to Starr at his request and two others are being kept by the White House because they have since become relevant to present needs, the report said.

But the report disclosed that, following a further inquiry from the FBI, 71 more improperly sought summaries were returned Thursday.

Government shuts down Panhandle bank

PANHANDLE, Texas (AP) - A federal agency on Friday closed First National Bank of the Panhandle, citing insufficient capital.

The Office of the Comptroller of Currency closed the bank's branches in Panhandle and Amarillo and named the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. receiver.

The FDIC in turn approved the takeover of the banks deposits by Sun Bank, in Sunray; and The Plains National Bank of West Texas, in Lubbock. Depositors will be assigned to the two banks based on which branch they opened their account.

The Panhandle branch will reopen will reopen Monday as Sun Bank. The Amarillo branch will reopen Monday as The Plains National Bank of West Texas.

First National has assets of $78.7 million and total deposits of $76.1 million as of February. It received a national bank charter in 1927.

The OCC said the bank's financial problems were caused mainly by alleged fraudulent loans that went unpaid.

Sun Bank will assume about $40 million in 4,900 deposit accounts and will pay the FDIC $1.7 million for the right to assume the failed bank's Panhandle insured deposits and to purchase $10.7 million in assets.

Plains National will assume about $36 million in 2,500 deposit accounts and will pay the FDIC $1.8 million to assume the failed bank's Amarillo insured deposits and to purchase $12.6 million in assets.

On Friday, about $752,000 in 102 accounts exceeded the federal insurance limit of $100,000 and will not be assumed by either bank.

Other assets will be kept by the FDIC or sold to other banks.

Editor's Note: Depositors who believe they have uninsured deposits should make an appointment with FDIC claims agents. Uninsured depositors at the Panhandle office should call (806) 537-3351. Uninsured depositors at the Amarillo office should call (806) 355-9927.

Bataan prisoner created US flag to remember those who died on march

By SUE MAJOR HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) - Joseph Quintero stole a white sheet from his Japanese captors, made deals for red and blue material from fellow POWs and smuggled scraps of food to a Canadian tailor to make an American flag.

As World War II was drawing to an end, he waved that flag atop a hut in a Japanese mainland prisoner of war camp.

The flag, made in secret over the course of more than a year, is now displayed in National Guard headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Quintero, now 78 and living in Albuquerque, said he wanted the flag to honor those who died on the infamous Bataan Death March and in the brutal Japanese prisoner-of-war camps.

"It just came to my mind that I could create a flag in their memory," he said. "Something to remember them ... the ones who stayed back there."

Quintero, an Army corporal from Texas, was among the U.S. and Filipino forces who surrendered to the Japanese on the Bataan Peninsula on April 9, 1942.

The Japanese marched their prisoners, already starving and diseased, on a brutal 65-mile trek. Eventually, many survivors were sent to POW camps in Japan, and Quintero ended up at Niigata, considered one of the worst.

Thanks to an Irish doctor, Quintero was assigned to clean vegetables and take care of prisoners. He couldn't unload ships with other prisoners because of an infection he contracted after a crude appendectomy done with bent spoon handles, a razor blade and inadequate anesthesia aboard a Japanese prison ship on his 25th birthday, Sept. 19, 1943.

His kitchen job gave him access to scraps of food, a luxury to starving POWs.

When he conceived the idea of a flag, he traded those scraps to a New Mexico National Guardsman for a red blanket and to a Filipino prisoner for blue dungarees.

He gave bits of food to the Canadian tailor, an amputee who had a sewing machine in his job taking care of Japanese soldiers' uniforms.

"I had to negotiate for a long time," Quintana recalled Friday, the day the nation celebrated as Flag Day.

The tailor finished the flag sometime in 1944, he said.

"The thing about it, it was sewed so perfect, it was unbelievable he did such a beautiful job," Quintero said.

Quintero hid the flag under his hut, where it remained until August or September of 1945, when the POWs heard an airplane.

"Before we knew it, here come this huge plane in the vicinity of the camp," he said. "We couldn't believe it. It was the first plane we seen in years. Everybody came out, and it came around. The second time was when I went out and waved the flag. The plane started tipping its wings; we found out it was a sign of recognition that we were there."

He later had the thought, "the whole camp is in jeopardy because of some stupid American who wanted a flag," he said.

The Japanese did nothing, but Quintero said that at the time prisoners didn't know the war was ending and he didn't know there would be no repercussions.

U.S. Marines soon liberated the camp.

Quintero arrived in Fort Worth in November 1945, weighing 80-some pounds on his 5-foot-7 frame.

Years later, he rediscovered the Irish doctor, Dr. William Stewart, and still keeps in touch. He doesn't recall the name of the Canadian tailor.

Quintero didn't talk much about his flag for decades, but the story began to get publicity about five years ago when the New Mexico National Guard's historian, Col. Esquibel "Zeke" Ortiz, interviewed him.

"I hadn't let anybody know about the story before because they don't understand," Quintero said.

Lt. Gen. Edward Baca, then adjutant general of the New Mexico Guard, surprised Quintero a few years ago by telling his story in an after-dinner speech.

After the crowd left, Quintero gave Baca the flag. Baca took it to Washington when he became chief of the National Guard Bureau in October 1994.

Quintero said that eventually, he'd like to see the flag placed in the Bataan Memorial Military Museum which opened in August 1994 in Santa Fe.

He said he meant it to preserve the memory of all those on Bataan, not just the Americans.

"It belongs to the ones that died," he said. "That's why I gave it to General Baca, so he could keep their memory going."

Morales says parents can teach kids to drive

By JUAN B. ELIZONDO JR.
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Nearly all Texas parents can teach their teen-agers how to drive in order to get a license before they turn 18, Attorney General Dan Morales said in an opinion released Friday.

James Wilson, director of the Department of Public Safety, asked Morales whether a recent change to the driver's education law allowing parents to teach approved driver's education course applies only to those teaching their children at home.

Morales said nothing in the new law limits the provision to home-school parents.

Laureen Chernow, a spokeswoman for the DPS, said the department had not reviewed Morales' opinion. But she said it will take some time for the department to develop rules and training packages for the new program.

"This is not something that is going to happen tomorrow," she said.

Under the changes approved last year, parents can teach their children how to drive in courses approved by the DPS. Those teen-agers then could get a driver's license if they are at least 16-years-old; complete the training; have a high school diploma, a general education degree or are enrolled in a public, private or home school; and pass required DPS tests.

The parents' courses would have to meet several requirements set by the DPS but would not have to meet all the requirements expected of commercial driving schools.

Ms. Chernow said Wilson asked for the opinion because it was unclear whether the new law applied to all parents.

The DPS will determine the number of hours required and the course material that must be taught.

Morales said the rules cannot include particular requirements for the "classroom."

Lopez tabbed for Selena role

LOS ANGELES (AP) - "Money Train" star Jennifer Lopez has reportedly won the part of Selena in a movie about the slain singer's life, beating out thousands of other actresses.

Lopez, who also appeared in "Mi Familia," will earn $1 million for the movie about Selena's rise to fame, Daily Variety reported this week.

Lopez, once a dancer on the TV show "In Living Color," co-stars in the Robin Williams movie "Jack," which is due out in August.

The rest of the cast in the Selena movie - including an actress to play her as a child - will be announced next Tuesday in Los Angeles. Call-back auditions for the part of the younger Selena were held Thursday in San Antonio.

Production on the film will begin in Texas in late August.

An estimated 19,000 aspiring actresses auditioned for the starring role at casting calls in San Antonio, Los Angeles, Miami and Chicago.

Selena was shot to death in March 1995 by the one-time president of her fan club, Yolanda Saldivar, who was convicted of murder and sentenced to life in prison.

It's routine in every business for workers to call in sick. Now, with the Lottery making instant millionaires, there are some rare Texans who call in rich.

What happens if you're a business owner and your entire staff strikes it rich?

That's what happened down in Snyder last week when 19 employees of BJ Services had a "pool" ticket with the winning numbers. They won half of the $35 million jackpot.

Each one in the office pool will wind up with about $795,000--except for two workers, one who paid for two shares and another for three. That adds up to about $40,000 a year for each share.

Roy McQueen, publisher of the Snyder paper, noted that several things were certain with all the excitement.

1. Productivity wasn't high at BJ Services Thursday morning.

2. The 19 employees now have a lot more friends and relatives.

3. The regular office pool participants who forgot to get in on the pool are now ready to jump off the curb.

4. The telephone calls picked up at BJ Services.

McQueen even wrote a short letter to Leon Crenshaw, the BJ Services employee who made the quick pick purchase on behalf of the crew.

"Dear Cousin Crenshaw:

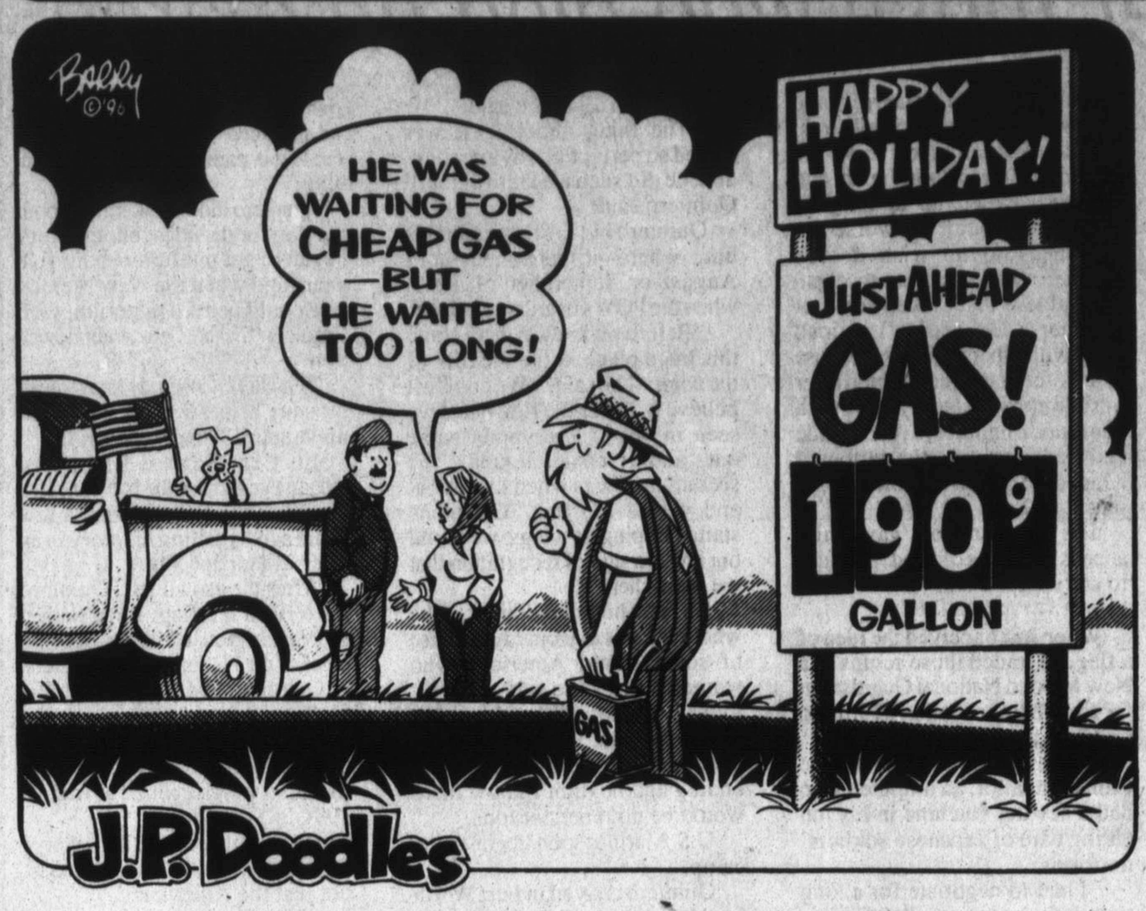

Just yesterday, I learned that my grandmother's maiden name was Crenshaw...Bennie Lou Crenshaw.

I am sure that I am the long-lost relative you have been seeking. Since we are in such a tight-knit family, I feel confident that you will want to share your good fortune.

Incidentally, I have some IRS loss carry forward that we can use. I certainly want to do my part. Thanks,

The Deep Creek Cousin."

Standoff's over, but at what cost?

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

As you probably know by now, the group known as the Freemen in Montana were arrested peacefully the other day, ending an 81-day siege outside their compound.

Agents from the FBI stood armed watch over the place for 81 days, trying to arrest several members of the anti-government group on a variety of charges.

The Associated Press reported that some 633 federal agents were on duty there at some time or another, with up to 150 per day in the area of the Freemen compound.

Parallels were found between the Freemen standoff and similar actions against other extremist groups at Ruby Ridge and in Waco, both of which ended in gunfire and death.

In this case, the men were wanted for a variety of crimes, including passing millions of dollars in phony checks and for threatening to kill a federal judge.

So now it's all over. The malefactors have been arrested and hauled off to jail, where they will be tried and, more than likely, convicted and sentenced.

But I just have to wonder, at what cost was all this accomplished?

Now please don't think that I in any way condone the criminal actions of this organization.

It doesn't matter to me if they think the U.S. government is illegitimate, or whatever, but that doesn't give them the right to violate those laws, just as I don't have the right to drive 100 mph on the highway just because I don't believe the speed limit should be 70.

But the fact of the matter is, the federal government spent thousands upon thousands of dollars to resolve this situation at gunpoint when it could have been handled much better and more effectively at a lower cost.

I did a little math here to get a general idea of the costs involved. Now realize, these figures are VERY conservative (just so I wouldn't be accused of inflating figures to make the government look bad!).

The AP reported as many as 150 agents were on site every day of the siege.

Just supposing those agents are paid a flat rate of $10 per hour to stand guard on the Freemen (actual is probably closer to $20 per hour).

Based on 150 per day, this would be $972,000 (which doesn't include costs of employees involved at other locations).

Those people also needed to eat.

Based on that same 150 people per day, I figured how much it would cost for food if the federal government was able to feed these men and women for $2 a meal -- $72,900 for 81 days.

Obviously, lower costs would be possible with a mass kitchen. Triple (or even quadruple) those figures if employees had to eat in restaurants.

Finally, transportation was needed from the siege location to the nearest city, Billings, which is 3-1/2 hours away.

Based on a figure of 27 cents per mile for vehicle usage (again, very conservative), the cost would be $7,654.50, plus another $157,200 for gas (provided they could buy it for $1.10 a gallon and got 20 mpg on their vehicles).

More likely would be costs at least double that, since I expect gas costs more in Montana and there were probably several trips to Billings each day. Also, 20 mpg is only a dream on many cars today.

All told, my figures show more than $1 million for the operation -- and I'm sure the actual cost was probably along the lines of $5 million or even higher.

And that doesn't include specialized equipment, telephones, electricity, wear-and-tear, uniforms, shelters from the weather, airplane and helicopter usage and the like.

So what we've got is a few bad check passers arrested at a cost of tens of thousands of dollars apiece.

Seems to me the FBI could have made sure it had an agent or two in the area, then picked off the Freemen one or two at a time as they left the compound for different reasons.

The warrants would have been good, even if all 14 men were not arrested at the same time.

I think this is another example of the government going overboard on something that needed to be done, but could have been done much better by someone (anyone!) else.

I'm afraid such high-handed tactics by the FBI will eventually be found to have engendered more support for movements such as the Freemen than would have been done under more reasonable, even-handed methods.

Editorials from around the State

Austin American Statesman on school vouchers:

Results of a 1995 Texas Poll which found that many Texans - minority parents, in particular - support school vouchers are no surprise.

Vouchers are viewed as a way to have a greater say over one's children's education, and public school systems, especially in inner cities, have notable problems.

Nonetheless, the public policy solution is not to divert dollars from public education to private schools, but to continue to champion more money for public education and utilize existing education reforms to improve the system.

Efforts to move toward a voucher system in the next session should be opposed. There are many arguments by voucher proponents that sidestep the larger social consequences of such a system.

One of the more specious arguments is that vouchers would allow competition. However, how can one improve public education without adequate funding for buildings, computers and teachers? Keeping motivated teachers and innovative administrators is the key component of any reform plan.

The Dallas Morning News on church fires:

A late Sunday-night fire gutted the attic and darkened the sanctuary of the New Light House of Prayer in Greenville. The suspicious blaze was No. 31 in a series of fires at African-American churches throughout the South. The Greenville Fire Department considers the New Light House blaze, and another church fire early Monday, to be "acts of local vandalism."

That they may be, but they point to a highly troubling national problem. Some subset of Americans apparently believes it is acceptable to burn down African-American churches. Formal conspiracy or no, dozens of black houses of worship are being torched while churches with predominately white congregations go unscathed. Some sort of social poison is at work.

Black clergy and multiracial religious groups want federal authorities to aggressively investigate the fires. President Clinton and top U.S. law enforcement officials have finally acknowledged the seriousness of these arson attacks. The increased attention is well-warranted.

Fighting the poison of violent racism will be as difficult as catching the criminals. Generalized social outrage at the arsons probably won't deter the type of criminals who gloat over such anonymous attacks. A few perpetrators may be teen-agers craving attention. Others likely live on the margins of society - underemployed or undereducated, clinging to some supremacist ideology that makes them feel powerful. From such a distorted perspective, the bombings look heroic. Whatever their motivations, the arsonists must be caught and punished.

With racist beliefs shared by so many fringe groups today, from the Freemen in Montana to white separatist Christian Identity faithful, the federal government must regard violent racist cults as a top domestic security threat.

In the meantime, members of nonblack churches can use this time to cross the racial divide. Local councils of churches can help devise security plans for members. Sympathetic, mostly white congregations could take a special collection to help churches that must rebuild.

An attack on any group's sanctuary is an attack on religious freedom. And that must not stand.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Foreign aid is being debated in the U.S. Congress. Our nation is broke and it is well known that our true debt is over $17 trillion. Yet the politicians in Washington, D.C. are borrowing money to give to 103 nations.

Here at Wimberley we need, among other things, a sewer system. Wimberley taxpayers are building a sewer system for the nation of Egypt, which I believe is on the continent of Africa, not the USA.

On C-SPAN, Sen. Sarbanes(D-Md.) remarked, "We want to raise the standard of living for people of other countries so they can buy things from us." Sounds exactly like that work-free, happy place!

Another protest brought this comment from Sen. Zach Wamp(R-Tn.): "Foreign aid is only one percent of the federal budget." Wimberley could build more than a sewer system with one-tenth of that one percent, and young Wamp did not think of the following:

1. A large amount of the U.S. defense budget is foreign aid. We continue defending the world, and no politician has ever thought to ask the world to help pay for this huge expenditure.

2. An active Navy is foreign aid.

3. The military missions to Haiti, Somalia and Bosnia are foreign aid. The Congress has the power to stop funding any and everything. Plans call for the U.S. to help rebuild Bosnia, provide money for small businesses and, no doubt, build them a sewer system--all foreign aid.

4. Millions of illegal and legal immigrants continue flowing into the U.S. Taxpayers pay for welfare, food stamps, Medicaid and education for most of these people. According to the GAO, 800,000 immigrants this year alone will get $3.6 billion under the SSI program. These are the disabled, elderly and blind--not coming here to work but for handouts. All of this is foreign aid.

5. Expenses for NATO...foreign aid.

6. America is the world's largest donor of food and other charitable items to the poor through Food for Peace, CARE, UNICEF and other international groups...our tax dollars and foreign aid.

7. The billions of dollars that flow annually to the UN, International Monetary Fund, World Bank, and other organizations--all foreign aid.

8. Each member of Congress costs taxpayers one million dollars a year. I somehow do not feel those people believe they are our servants. This is foreign aid as far as taxpayers are concerned.

There is one bright spot: According to Time magazine, Japan and Germany have also begun to give nations foreign aid. If we appeal to the Japanese and German governments, maybe they would build a sewer system for Wimberley, Texas.

I wish we could close the UN and send Boutros-Ghali, secretary-general, back home to Egypt to enjoy our American plumbing.

Wimberley

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

School class reunions can be devastating to the ego. Seeing friends again after many years always sends me to the nearest mirror.

Am I really that wrinkled? I ask. Is my hair as gray as hers? Are those extra pounds noticeable?

Renewing acquaintance with classmates isn't all it's cracked up to be, in my humble opinion. On the other hand, I know some folks who just kind of live from one reunion to the next.

Eight years ago, my class joined with the one after it, for a reunion. There was a good turnout so they decided that another should be staged five years later. The attendance was noticeably lower, I'm told. I chose not to attend.

For some reason lost to me, there was another gathering after only three years. This time I looked in and my opinion of class reunions was substantiated.

At the risk of being unkind, let me make a couple observations:

By this time in our lives, many of my classmates are retired and looking for something to do. A class reunion seems to answer that need, to a degree.

There's very little we have in common because we've scattered to the four winds and about all we can talk about is where we've been and how many grandchildren we have.

Since many of us were together from elementary school through high school, it's easy to remember each other as children, rather than the aging adults we've become.

In a small West Texas town during the Dust Bowl-Depression years, nearly everyone knew everyone else. There were few secrets. As children, we played baseball together and as teens we paired off.

And, some of those pairs exist to this day.

One of the first persons I saw on entering the banquet room was a woman who was a year behind me in school. We grew up together. Our fathers used to play poker with each other.

When I saw her, there was no doubt in my mind who she was. Only a few pounds heavier now than in our school days, her skin is relatively unlined. She was a natural blonde in those days and if she gets a little help on hair color now, it's beside the point.

Her husband was in her class and, as I recall, no one gave much chance to the marriage lasting a year, much less more than 40 years.

In the group were some whose marriages had fallen apart, some whose spouses had died. Some married persons from other towns and we found they fit in with the rest of us very nicely.

There were some whose faces just would not jibe with what we remembered. I must get my annual and check out some names.

Introducing ourselves to each other became a real fun thing to do. We laughed and hugged, then wondered why we didn't know each other immediately.

At least one person who supposedly was in my class but left town the year before we graduated, was gracious enough to say she remembered me. But for the life of me, there was nothing, not her face nor her name, that rang a bell. Trying to cover up that kind of embarrassment is stressful.

Now, back to my opinion of class reunions . . .

There seems to be a basic insincerity in such events. We ooh and aah and, in some cases, pretend, we know our classmates. After a few minutes, we find there's little to talk about without trying to re-hash old times. Of course, nostalgia can close the gap in conversation.

What really bothered me, though, is that my ideas of how some people would turn out were way off base.

Fellows we never thought would amount to a hill of beans have prospered in the world. Many of them are more handsome than they were in the olden days.

Women tended to be a tad heavier than we were as young folks. And, vanity will out in many of us. A little hair color does wonders.

Talking about the next reunion, some of us decided there should be no stairs to climb.

Then, next reunion was set for 1999, a date I find daunting, if not scary.

I think I'll stay home.

Ghosts of the past speaking through excavation

Houston anthropologist examining slave homes on Brazoria plantation

By PHILLIP VANDERSLICE
The Brazosport Facts

BRAZORIA, Texas - The ghosts of former slaves are whispering of an injustice done more than 100 years ago on a plantation near Brazoria.

Dr. Kenneth Brown, a University of Houston anthropology professor who is excavating the homes of more than 100 slaves who subsequently became tenant farmers south of Brazoria, has been listening to the ghosts tell their story for the past 11 summers. Each year, Brown has brought his students to work at the dig, which finished last week.

The story begins before the Civil War on perhaps the most prosperous plantation in the county. It follows with a tale of grudging injustice in the declining south, intermingled with a family feud that lasted until just a few years ago.

Levi Jordan came to Brazoria County in 1848, where he bought a 2,000-acre plantation. With sugar cane and slave labor, the plantation prospered. A sugar mill further added to Jordan's fortune.

Then came emancipation of the slaves, and Jordan's documented experiment with paid labor.

It seems most of the slaves stayed on the plantation, perhaps bound by a sharecropping system that kept them tied to the plantation, suggested Brown. The plantation owners would allow the former slaves to sharecrop, then periodically forbid it and hire the slaves for wages, thus keeping the plantation staffed but the former slaves still in virtual servitude.

After Jordan died in 1873 the land was eventually divided between Jordan's two grandsons and a great-grandson.

His great-grandson, Martin, eventually owned the plantation house and some land, while Jordan's will had promised him $5,000. Martin went to Jordan's two grandsons, James Calvin McNeill and Charles McNeill, to collect the money in 1890. They didn't have it.

So Martin took out a loan against the inheritance and the person issuing the loan then sued McNeill brothers for payment.

In the trial, two of the 100 tenant farmers testified for the McNeills against Martin, one of the men who testified was "the Politician," a name Dr. Brown gave to a leader in the tenant farmer community and his testimony most likely prompted Martin's angry response.

Though the McNeills lost, Martin was still angry. Some time between March 3 and March 16, 1893, every one of the 100 tenants were tossed off of the plantation without notice or a chance to collect their belongings.

In the ruins, Brown has found eyeglasses sitting on tables. Cooking pots still wait near the fireplace. Clothes, lanterns, forks, knives, spoons, everything, left as if someone would be returning, not as if someone had packed to leave for good.

"They threw the people out of the slave quarters without anything," said Brown.

Ginny Raska, a descendant of the plantation owner, said the history of the plantation should include the slave houses as well as the plantation mansions. "We want to talk about all of the people on a plantation," said Raska. She said the McNeill and the Martin descendants have just recently begun having reunions again, 100 years after the trial.

If anything good could come out of such a situation, it might be that Brown has learned much about the life of the tenant farmer and slave because their homes were left quite complete - as if time stopped.

Meanwhile, Brown has named many of the ghosts he studies. Besides the Politician, there's the Carver, the Munitions maker, the Seamstress, the Curer, among others.

In many dogtrot cabins, Brown has found unique artifacts that lets him know a little bit more about the inhabitants.

Under the Curer - or Midwife's - cabin, Brown found a cosmogram, an item of African origin, an oval with a cross in the center. The item is symbolic of power, life and death.

A slave cemetery exists on the plantation as well. Each plot includes a hollow pipe leading down to the coffin. Brown said this was done so the spirits can fly out and enter the nearby bayou and eventually flow back to Africa.

The Lawton Constitution

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) - It bothered Jack Vance when he visited a Lubbock, Texas, home in 1995 and saw human remains and a few Native American artifacts displayed under glass.

Vance, an official with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Pueblo, Colo., shared his misgivings with his friends. A few days later, he received a telephone call from his friends, who said they'd thought things over and wanted to do what was right.

But they were unsure how to proceed. Would Vance help them return the bodies to the appropriate tribe?

Because Lubbock is in the heartland of what was once Comanche territory, Vance contacted Comanches in this area.

His call was the beginning of the end of a centuries-old journey. And on a recent May morning, some 200 years after they lived and died on the plains, the two unknown American Indians were interred in a common grave at Otipoby Comanche Cemetery on Fort Sill.

As they were laid to rest, Melvin Kerchee Jr. performed a traditional cedar smoke ceremony, and then recited the Lord's Prayer and read from the Bible.

The blend of traditional and Christian blessings is "kind of like praying for us all," Kerchee said.

The tribe received the remains and artifacts in July, and turned to the staff at Fort Sill Museum for help in identifying them. Based on those artifacts - a few arrowheads, bits of leather, pipestems, and pendants made of bone - the two are believed to have been Comanche, Kerchee said. It wasn't possible, however, to determine their band.

The artifacts were buried with the bodies.

Kerchee said one of the skeletons was that of a young girl, about 10 years old.

"From the remains, she must have been beautiful, very statuesque," he added.

The other was a man, believed to have been between 30 and 40 when he died. His skeleton showed signs of nutritional deficiencies - evidence of a hard life on the plains.

Identifying many human remains in museum collections as Comanche creates a dilemma for the tribe because of the lack of burial space, Kerchee said.

Bob Otipoby, chairman of the Otipoby Cemetery committee, is aware of the problem that Comanches have when ancestral remains are returned to the tribe.

"The Comanches do not have the burial space for the thousands of remains still possessed by institutions or, as was in this matter, in the hands of private individuals," he said. "For our cemetery, the moral issue is not whether we know, but that God knows.

"It is only proper that they receive their last rites here at Otipoby."

The cemetery on a windswept hill dates back to 1888, though the first burial occurred two years earlier. An unknown cowboy, killed in a fall from his horse, rests in an unmarked grave at Otipoby, Kerchee said.

The cowboy and the two bodies interred recently aren't the only unknowns in the cemetery. Next to the man and the girl rests another young Comanche girl, whose skeleton was discovered a few years ago by a hunter. On a whitewashed stoned marker is recorded the date she was interred. In Comanche, she is "Flower Girl," renamed "Young Girl."

Kerchee said a similar marker will be erected at the grave shared by the two Lubbock bodies. The cemetery committee will give them names in death, probably something to associate them with buffalo since buffalo bones were found with them.

Officially though, they'll remain unknown. Still, recorded in the cemetery register will be the facts that lend meaning to life and death. Facts like where they came from and when they were buried.

"Anyone should have a proper burial," Kerchee said.

Local boys lead Trojans to AAU nationals

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Last summer the Texas Trojans went to a national AAU basketball tournament and finished eighth. This week they go to another one hoping to do even better than that.

The 13-and-under boys' team includes three Hereford boys - Chayse Rives and twin brothers Slade and Cody Hodges - and five boys from Amarillo. Together, they'll try to conquer the field at the National 13-under AAU Tournament, which starts June 23 in Memphis, Tenn.

This is getting to be an annual event for the Hereford trio. The Hodges are making their fourth trip to AAU nationals, while Rives is going for the third time.

"We shouldn't be as nervous as we have been in the past," Cody Hodges said.

"(Now) it's just another tournament," Slade Hodges said.

The Trojans are back nearly intact from last year's team, which took eighth at the 12-under tournament in Salt Lake City. Coming back for another try are Amarilloans Bobby Nickum, Derek Whitney, Graham Bowmer and 6-foot-4-inch Dominique Perkins.

Jimmy Woodring is the only addition. He's making his third nationals trip, having made it twice before with Amarillo teams.

"Experience is always a key," said Steve Hodges, the father of Cody and Slade and coach of the team (assisted by Ron Nickum). "This is the second year in a row that seven of eight of these boys have played together.

"Experience helps you - knowing the caliber of play, and the type of refereeing you get," he said. "At nationals, they let you play. They do not call it tight."

A year has made the boys older and wiser. And...

"Our big men have gotten bigger," Cody said.

"They've gotter better," Slade added.

The Hodges aren't big men - theyr'r ballhandlers and shooters - but Rives, at 6-foot-1, is pretty big for a 13-yaar-old. He's the second tallest on the team behind Perkins at 6-4.

Rives' experience at nationals the last two years has taught him he's not as tall as he thought.

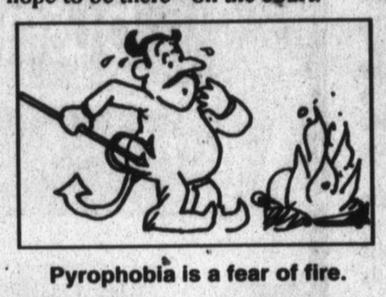

"Our team is big in the Panhandle, but when we go to nationals, we're one of the littlest teams," Rives said.

The tallest boy at the 12-under tournament the Trojans went to last year was 6-5, Rives said. That's nothing: the boys heard that the tallest player at last year's 13-under tourney was 6-11 - just like your average NBA power forward.

"You just have to play smart," Rives said. "When they out-height you, you can't try to block everything, because you'll foul."

The tournament starts officially with opening ceremonies on June 23. The Trojans play the first of three pool games on June 24. The top two teams in each pool advance to the championship bracket, while the other teams get to play in a consolation bracket.

The championship game will be played June 30. Naturally, the boys hope to be there - on the court.

Pyrophobia is a fear of fire.

The Trojans have won just about every tournament they've entered this year, including the Cuby Kitchens Classic in Hereford. They won the regional tournament - the West Texas AAU Championship Basketball Tournament, played in May in Amarillo - sending them back to nationals.

One tournament they didn't win was a 14-under tournament last weekend in Amarillo. They won two games, then quickly lost two games and were eliminated. It reminded the boys that they aren't invincible, and that reminder came just in time.

"It seems like this year we weren't taking it as serious as we needed to be - like we were last year," Slade said. "We got an eye-opener last weekend."

The practices have gotten intense this week, Cody said, and the boys seem to be in the right frame of mind to succeed in Memphis.

"We want to get better than eighth," Cody said.

Teamwork is important for any team, and the Trojans realize this.

"Each of us has a role," Rives said. "If (opponents) key on one player, they're dead."

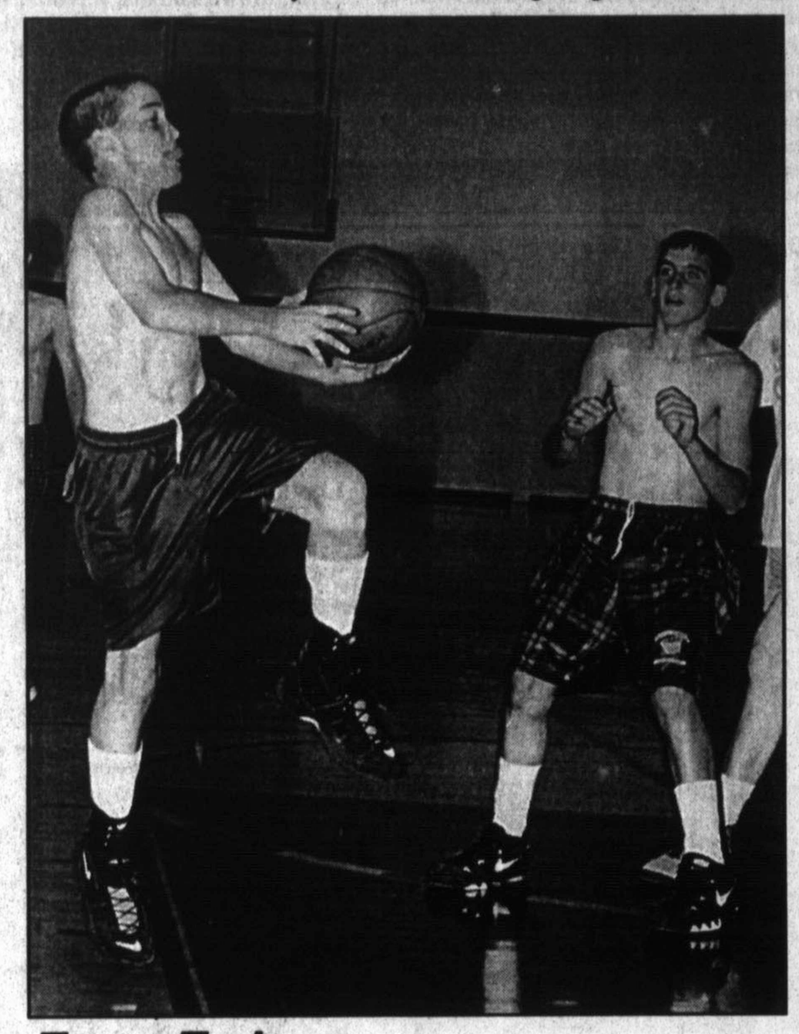

Slade Hodges explained one of his father's favorite coaching sayings. The wheel on a bicycle is held together by many spokes, but if just a few spokes don't work, the entire wheel is useless.

"Each of us is like a bicycle spoke," Slade said. "When we play together as a team, the wheels go 'vroooooom.'"

*

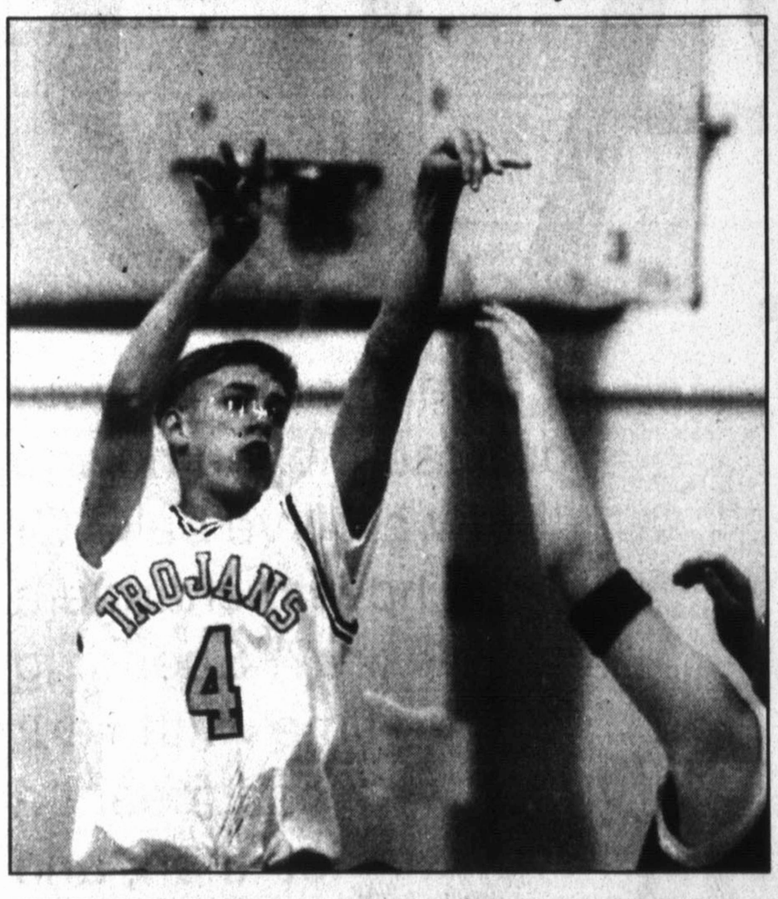

It costs quite a bit of money to send eight boys halfway across the country and keep them in hotels and fed for a week. The Hereford boys have gotten much financial help from the community, Steve Hodges said.

"From a parent and coaching standpoint, I want to thank the Hereford community and the Hereford individuals who have supported us," he said. "The whole community has given us tremendous support over the last four years, and the parents, as well as these athletes, certainly appreciate what they've done."

Slade Hodges (at left in above photo) goes up for a layup as twin brother Cody Hodges waits for a possible pass. The Hodges are two of three boys from Hereford who are part of the Texas Trojans, a team that will compete this week in the National AAU Basketball Tournament in Memphis, Tenn. The other local boy is Chayse Rives (below), shown shooting in the Cuby Kitchens Classic in Hereford, which the Trojans won.

Sonics stun Bulls in Seattle, send NBA finals to Chicago for Game 6

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) - In the shadow of the Space Needle, a remarkable transformation took place.

No more talk about the Chicago Bulls being the best NBA team of all time. A couple of more losses and they won't even be the best team of 1996.

The Seattle SuperSonics, with their home crowd whipped into a deafening frenzy, have sent the NBA Finals back to Chicago.

"Well, we got a series now," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said after the Sonics beat his Bulls for the second time in a row.

On Friday night, with the game on the line in the fourth quarter, it was the Sonics, not the touted Bulls, who clamped on the defense en route to a 89-78 victory.

At a time when Michael Jordan usually takes over, the Sonics were able to deny him the ball. And Jordan's teammates let him down.

"I had to move the ball around and trust my teammates to make the shot," Jordan said, "and they had a tough time shooting the ball today."

Now the series shifts to Chicago for Game 6. The Bulls, who were thinking sweep and had the champagne ready on Wednesday and again on Friday, now must win Sunday or the series will go to a winner-take-all Game 7.

The Bulls haven't lost three games in a row all season, but the Sonics are heading east with confidence.

"Two or three days ago, nobody thought this series would still be going on," Seattle's Shawn Kemp said. "We're having fun."

Chicago was down 71-69 with eight minutes left. The stage seemed set for another Jordan masterpiece. He had been hounded by Gary Payton, the NBA's defensive player of the year, most of the night. But Seattle coach George Karl switched Hersey Hawkins onto the Bulls' superstar.

"I thought Gary had run out of gas, so I decided to play Hawk on Jordan the fourth quarter," Karl said. "He was having a great game."

After a subpar Game 4, when the Bulls were blown out 108-87, Jordan predicted a big performance on Friday. But he struggled against the scrambling Sonics' defense all night.

He wound up with 26 points, sinking 11 of 22 hard-earned shots, but was scoreless those last crucial nine minutes.

The rest of the Bulls were mostly awful. Scottie Pippen continued his series-long slump, going 5-for-20 from the field. Steve Kerr, the No. 2 3-point shooter in the NBA in the regular season, was 1-for-7 from 3-point range. So far in the series, he's 3-for-20.

The Bulls were 3-for-26 from 3-point range Friday and at one point missed 20 in a row.

"I don't know why their 3-point shooting isn't going in," Hawkins said. "Ours didn't go in the first three games, so maybe it's their turn. I think they're a team that plays in rhythm. I think if you, in some kind of way, take them out of that rhythm, their shots don't come as easily to them."

Dennis Rodman, the master of mind games through the first three games, had a quiet 12 rebounds to go with his six points.

Ripken plays in 2,216th game as O's win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Wherever he goes, no matter what he does, the crowds turn out to cheer Cal Ripken.

Ripken earned his latest standing ovation Friday night in Kansas City when he played his 2,216th consecutive game, passing Sachio Kinugasa of Japan for the longest streak in baseball history.

The game was delayed for nearly 3-1/2 minutes when the 28,502 fans at Kauffman Stadium saluted Ripken. As always, Ripken remained humble, going over to the stands and shaking hands with Kinugasa.

"Unless you've been lucky enough to go through it, you can never understand the embarrassment all that attention causes," Ripken said after Baltimore beat the Royals 6-1. "It stops the flow of the game, and the game of baseball is what everyone comes out to see."

Albert Belle, meanwhile, seems to rub people the other way.

Booed at most ballparks, Belle became the target of a small, souvenir bat and baseballs thrown in his direction by rowdy fans at Yankee Stadium.

The game between Cleveland and New York was twice delayed by the crowd's action toward the controversial left fielder. The Indians reacted by briefly leaving the field in the seventh inning, and there was an announcement on the public address system about a possible forfeit.

"I don't know why they have chosen to react as viciously as they have. I don't understand behavior like that," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said.

In other AL games, California defeated Toronto 7-4, Chicago stopped Seattle 4-1, Boston beat Texas 4-3, Milwaukee downed Oakland 6-2 and Detroit defeated Minnesota 5-4.

Braves' sizzling Smoltz shuts down Dodgers

By The Associated Press

John Smoltz's start this season has led to comparisons with some of the great pitchers in Braves history - Warren Spahn, Greg Maddux and Tom Glavine among them. Only now, though, is Smoltz in Charlie Buffinton's league.

Smoltz ran his winning streak to 13 games with eight shutout innings and Ryan Klesko homered Friday night as the Braves beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1.

Smoltz (13-1) allowed five hits, didn't allow a walk and struck out eight before leaving for a pinch-hitter. His 13 consecutive wins equals the club record first set by Buffinton in 1894 and most recently by Glavine in 1992.

Smoltz raised his major league-leading strikeout total to 125 and lowered his ERA to 2.36.

"John threw great again," Klesko said. "His fastball was exploding and his slider was working. It's just great to have him out there."

Smoltz, whose only loss this year came in his first start, got equal praise from the Dodgers.

"He's probably the toughest pitcher to hit on their club, especially for right-handers," Eric Karros said. "I don't care who he's facing, he makes any lineup look like they're struggling."

Mark Wohlers gave up Raul Mondesi's 14th home run in the ninth, but finished for his 12th save.

Klesko ended a 1-for-17 drought by hitting his 21st homer, over the center-field fence in the second inning, off Pedro Astacio (3-5), who fell to 0-8 in his career against Atlanta.

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Chicago 5, San Diego 1; Pittsburgh 5, Florida 4; St. Louis 13, New York 4; Montreal 6, Cincinnati 1; Colorado 10, Philadelphia 6; and Houston 9, San Francisco 1.

Irvin indicted a second time

DALLAS (AP) - Michael Irvin's legal troubles from a motel drug bust are far from over.

The Dallas Cowboys' wide receiver was indicted again Friday on the same drug-possession charges that a judge threw out earlier this week on a technicality.

A Dallas County grand jury indicted Irvin and two topless dancers Friday, two days after the charges against them were dismissed because a member of the grand jury that indicted them April 1 lived outside the county.

Irvin, charged with cocaine and marijuana possession, could face as much as 20 years in prison, if convicted.

No trial date has been set. Lawyers have scheduled a Monday meeting to discuss a timetable for the case, said a spokesman for state district judge Manny Alvarez, who is presiding.

On Wednesday, Alvarez threw out the charges against Irvin, 30, Angela Renee Beck and Jasmine Jennipher Nabwangu, both 22.

However, prosecutors vowed to quickly seek new indictments. They also said they didn't expect a new grand jury would need much time to decide whether to hand up fresh charges.

In the initial case, grand jurors met for several days before issuing indictments. This time, they needed only a day to charge all three with misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

Irvin and Beck also are charged with felony possession of at least 4 grams of cocaine. Nabwangu is charged with having less than a gram of cocaine, also a felony.

Salaries vary widely for big-time coaches

Some industry experts wonder if coaching makes any difference

By MIKE FISHER
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas - A few summers ago, Jimmy Johnson hunkered in his training camp dorm room in Austin, surrounded by a stack of Styrofoam boxes loaded with Mexican food, a sack of barbecued ribs, a six-pack of Heineken and "Monday Night Football" on TV. Coming off a Cowboys exhibition victory the previous night, Johnson had everything a coach could desire.

"What a great day it is!" Johnson chirped.

For virtually every coach, the game - along with fajitas, ribs and beer - is indeed the thing. Well, that and a shot at becoming a millionaire.

For some, $25 million and almost total control of the organization simply isn't enough. For others, being paid a fraction of what their No. 5 starter earns is a fact of sporting life.

But how can pitcher Kevin Gross ($3.3 million) be worth almost 10 times what Rangers manager Johnny Oates is? How can Chicago Bulls coach Phil Jackson, with the best winning percentage in NBA history, be just the 16th-highest-paid coach in pro basketball? Should teams pay for what a coach has done for an organization - which is why in 1995, the Miami Dolphins' Don Shula was the NFL's top-paid coach at $2 million a year - or for what he might do in the future, which is why Johnson now makes the same wage Shula did?

In short, what is a coach or manager worth?

"There is no pay scale," Dolphins executive Bob Ackles said. "But if you find one who wins championships, isn't that worth almost any price? The most important person in the organization is your head coach."

Nonsense, countered Cowboys coach Barry Switzer, who pulls down an average of $1 million a year in a five-year rollover contract: "There is no such thing as a difference-maker at coach. Players are difference-makers. Guys in the media are molecules in the universe. Coaches are ranked just above being molecules in the universe."

That would be the opinion of New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, who has made 21 managerial changes in 23 seasons. It would not be the opinion of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who have been managed by the same man, Tommy Lasorda, since 1976.

And then there is Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, who agrees with both sides. How else could he view Johnson both as "worth five Heisman Trophy winners, five first-round draft picks" (Jones in 1989) and as "one of 500 men who could coach this team to a Super Bowl" (Jones in 1994)?

The Nets thought Kentucky coach Rick Pitino was so valuable they were willing to attempt to restructure their entire ownership around his desires. Sources said Pitino wanted the seven-man Nets ownership group whittled to three, with him choosing which of the owners would be his boss. Pitino talked of remaining at the University of Kentucky because "I listened to my heart," but in fact what he listened to were Nets owners unable to make the necessary changes in time.

Instead, the Nets hired University of Massachusetts coach John Calipari for five years at $15 million.

Said Mavericks executive Frank Zaccanelli, who at one time desired to interview Pitino: "When we learned he wanted $30 million and 10 percent of the team, we also learned he'd priced himself out of our market."

Is a coach worth so much that an owner should make that coach his business partner? The Miami Heat believed so when they lured Pat Riley with a contract that pays him $3 million a year to serve as coach and general manager and $25 million worth of interest in the franchise. That contract, along with the Nets' failed attempt to steal Pitino, has set the parameters for the NBA coaching elite.

The Bulls' Jackson ranks ahead of Riley in terms of all-time percentage. But Jackson's $850,000 salary ranks only 16th among wages being paid 32 current and former coaches. Jackson, whose contract is up, cites the Pitino and Riley cases as the basis for what he's looking for in his next contract, but some sports executives believe that there must be a ceiling of some sort.

"I've always believed in that old wives' tale about the great coach who can take yours and beat his, or take his and beat yours," said Lamar Hunt, owner of the Kansas City Chiefs. "Now, it's nothing new to have a coach have a piece of ownership. I believe Tom Landry had that in Dallas and Don Shula in Miami. But every situation is different. What might have made sense for the Nets with Pitino certainly wasn't sensible with the Mavericks, who don't need a $30 million coach to make the sport succeed in Dallas. That would have been a poor investment."

But, Hunt added, "You find somebody you believe to be that special, the free market system should reward him. The only ceiling is common sense."

When it comes to compensating coaches, though, common sense is in as short supply as long-term security. Little-used Mavericks point guard Scott Brooks has virtually no responsibility but in '95 was paid $750,000. That's the same salary paid Cotton Fitzsimmons, and all he's responsible for is the supervision of the entire Phoenix Suns basketball team.

The Rangers' Oates, meanwhile, is credited with bringing a winning, bonded attitude to the clubhouse.

"Don't even make the comparison between coaches and players," argued Minnesota Vikings coach Dennis Green. "No. 1, an owner is never going to change 53 players when there's a problem. It's not practical. And No. 2, let's be honest. All humility aside, who do you think is the more valuable commodity: a quarterback like Warren Moon or a coach like Denny Green? There's other Denny Greens being developed out there. Where do we find another Warren Moon or Cris Carter or John Randle?"

Or, as Baltimore Orioles manager Davey Johnson remarked after it was learned that he is considering shifting legendary shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. to third base: "I'll have to clear this with the president of the United States first."

When it comes to coaches' value, it's difficult to determine who's worth what when it's such a challenge to learn who makes what. All four of the major pro sports lean toward public disclosure of players' salaries. There is no hiding the sale prices of franchises. But coaches' salaries are often kept secret.

And, while longevity and championships and relationships mean plenty as to what a coach is worth, reputation might be the overriding factor. The New York Knicks began the '95 NBA season with a new coach, Don Nelson, universally praised as a basketball genius despite the fact that his teams had never won an NBA title and despite the fact that he was emerging from a messy players' revolt with the Golden State Warriors.

The Knicks gave him a guaranteed $1.8 million salary. His reward to them would be some sort of Nellie-style stamp on the team. By midseason, Nelson had been fired. The guaranteed cash has helped fund Nelson's ability to rest on his laurels, not to mention his recently built estate in Maui.

A low-profile Knicks assistant, Jeff Van Gundy, took over. Van Gundy, a bland, balding "interim coach," did put a stamp on the Knicks, pushing them to a playoff berth and earning the endorsement of star center Patrick Ewing, all for the price of $250,000.

Oh, by the way: Van Gundy's salary for the next two years is $2 million, guaranteed.

Every coach desires that sort of financial cushion. If things go poorly, they'll get no slack from their fans, little from their owners and none from their players.

Nevertheless, it is considered bad form for those in the coaching world to do anything but downplay the lure of cash. Early in his Dolphins term, Johnson was asked about the new contract.

Johnson managed a look of sincerity and vowed, "It was not about money."

New Mavericks coach Jim Cleamons' wife was asked why he turned down a two-year offer to coach Toronto last year but accepted a four-year deal to coach the Mavericks this year.

"It was not about money," Cheryl Cleamons said.

It rarely is, well before negotiations open. It rarely is, after negotiations have been completed. Otherwise, a coach's mind seems occupied equally by X's, O's and $'s.

Consider the unlikely reversal of Dave Cowens, who spent decades building a reputation as someone who spends nothing. Cowens, the former Boston Celtics great, is as an earthy, frugal Everyman. He drives a school-bus yellow Suburban, favors flannel shirts and faded jeans and as an injured Celtics player in 1980 quit the team rather than take $500,000 in guaranteed salary. While in Boston, Cowens once drove a taxi just to soak in the experience.

But before the late-May interview that would win him the Charlotte Hornets head coaching job, Cowens apparently felt obligated to let it be known that 25 professional years of being unmotivated by finance wouldn't be used against him in contract negotiations.

"Hey," Cowens announced to reporters, "there's nothing wrong with money!"

Father and sons

Longtime Hereford resident is recognized by son as 'good dad'

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

For a father to say that he had four of the "best boys anybody ever had" is probably a comment on his abilities as a father.

According to Bartley Dowell, eldest son of R.L. Dowell, his father was a "good dad" even if he was "tough" at times.

R.L. Dowell raised his four children, all boys, in Hereford during the Depression.

"Dad worked hard to raise four boys. He even worked in Borger during the later part of the Depression. It was pretty nip and tuck for awhile," said Bartley Dowell.

R.L. Dowell was born in Red River County on Sept. 4, 1897, the third child in a family of 10. His siblings included five sisters and four brothers.

He began his lifelong career as a carpenter in Slaton.

"Things got dull there and work was slow so we moved to Hereford in 1926," he said.

The older Dowell felt that "Hereford was a good place to raise sons."

All four boys attended elementary school in the old Central School and graduated from Hereford High School.

The two older boys still live near. Bartley, 75, resides in Hereford and R.L. Jr., 73, makes his home in Amarillo.

Bartley Dowell, a retired accountant, was employed by Brown, Graham and Co. He is a former city commissioner and mayor.

The younger sons, John David, 68, and Eugene, 64, both chose to make Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, their home.

"I thought a lot of my boys," said their father. "They never gave me any trouble, and they've never been in trouble -- at least, not that I knew about."

Before his retirement in 1980, "I worked on pretty near every church here," said R. L. Dowell.

"And he built lots of houses in Hereford through the years, including several cottages at King's Manor," added his son.

R.L. Dowell and his wife lived in one of the cottages at King's Manor from 1984 until her death in 1986, then he moved into a room in the Manor, where he still lives.

The 98-year-old Dowell is alert and active.

"He takes care of himself. He even does his own laundry and ironing," said Bartley Dowell.

"Well, I press the collars on my shirts," said the impeccably dressed father.

Longevity seems to run in the Dowell family. R.L. Dowell has a 102-year-old sister in Dallas, a 90-year-old brother in California and an 85-year-old sister in Levelland.

His extended family currently includes four grandsons and three granddaughters, 17 great-grandchildren and two great-great grandchildren, both boys.

But, sadly, there is only one great-grandson left to carry on the Dowell family name.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: The column you did on Father's Day last year moved me to tears. My beloved dad passed away just one week after that column appeared. He was the most wonderful man in the world, and I will miss him every day of my life. Will you please run that column again as a tribute to my father? Thank you, Ann. -- D.R.

Dear D.R.: I am happy to repeat that column for all the wonderful fathers out there. Here it is. Thank you for asking.

Dear Ann Landers: A great man died today. He wasn't a world leader or a famous doctor or a war hero or a sports figure. He was no business tycoon, and you would never see his name in the financial pages. But he was one of the greatest men who ever lived. He was my father.

I guess you might say he was a person who was never interested in getting credit or receiving honors. He did corny things like pay his bills on time, go to church on Sunday and serve as an officer in the PTA. He helped his kids with their homework and drove his wife to do the grocery shopping on Thursday nights. He got a great kick out of hauling his teen-agers and their friends around to and from football games.

Dad enjoyed simple pastimes like picnics in the park and pitching horseshoes. Opera wasn't exactly his thing. He liked country music, mowing the grass and running with the dog. He didn't own a tuxedo, and I'm sure he never tasted smoked salmon or caviar.

Tonight is my first night without him. I don't know what to do with myself, so I am writing to you, Ann. I am sorry now for the times I didn't show him the proper respect. But I am grateful for a lot of other things. I am thankful that God let me have my father for 15 years. And I am happy that I was able to let him know how much I loved him.

That wonderful man died with a smile on his face and fulfillment in his heart. He knew that he was a great success as a husband and a father, a brother, a son and a friend. I wonder how many millionaires can say that. -- His Daughter

Dear Daughter: What a beautiful tribute.

And now here's one more from last year:

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this memorial my sister wrote for our dad. It might help other stepchildren and stepparents understand each other. -- Betty in Decatur, Ill.

Dear Betty: With pleasure. Don must have been a marvelous person. It's apparent that he was appreciated. To Don With Love

This man who was a son, a father, a husband and a friend had one more role to play in life. A stepfather.

When Don married our mom, he inherited us -- not only six children but six children who didn't want a stepfather.

We gave him an uphill climb that he conquered with love and patience. Through both good times and bad, he was always there. Never in the light but in the shadows. Waiting to be needed and included.

After all the years of trying to be our stepfather, Don became our dad.

We hope he knows how very much we needed him.

We'll miss you forever, Dad. We all love you very much. -- Bill, George, Betty, Regina, Chuck and Laura Gem of the Day: The most valuable "inheritance" a father can give his children is a little bit of time -- just with him -- every day.

Red Cross Update

A water safety instructor class will be held in August at the Aquatic Center. Those persons interested in taking this class should begin to work on their strokes. A water safety instructor is expected to be able to do each of the basic strokes perfectly in order to teach others. Call Sandra or Robin at the Aquatic Center for assistance with these strokes.

The swimming and diving book is available at the Red Cross office. This is the book used in teaching swimmimg and water safety. The book covers the history of swimming, safety in and around water, strokes, diving, fitness and many other things.

Special thanks to board of directors for their work in the search for a new chapter manager. Applications are being taken through June 17 and are available at the Red Cross office. Special thanks to Sally Walker, Dale Henson, Doris Johnson, Rick Whitehorn, Sandra and Danny Kilañowski and Robyn Watts for their help with chapter activities.

Couple repeats vows in evening ceremony in First Presbyterian Church of Hereford

Terri Lee DeBord of Hereford and William Robert Jennings Jr. of Pflugerville were united in marriage Saturday evening in First Presbyterian Church of Hereford.

Parents of the bride are Martha DeBord of Hereford and Claude DeBord of Clarendon. The groom is the son of William Robert Jennings of Pflugerville.

MRS. WILLIAM ROBERT JENNINGS JR.
...nee Terri Lee DeBord

Rev. Jeremy Grant of the church officiated at the ceremony.

The church was decorated with two large spiral candelabra and two multi-colored floral baskets flanked by greenery. The pews were marked with bows of satin and tulle accented with English ivy.

Maid of honor was Kerri Dawn DeBord, sister of the bride. Best man was the father of the groom.

Darcey Clark of Amarillo and Jill Brown of Skellytown were bridal attendants.

Groomsmen included Russell Jennings, brother of the groom, of Bryan and Ken Schneider of Dallas.

Guests were seated by Scott DeBord, brother of the groom, of Lubbock, Tim Shipman, Rusty Galbraith, cousin of the groom, and Brent Milsow.

Flower girl and ring bearer were Tiffany Marie and William Scott DeBord II, respectively, children of William Scott DeBord, brother of the bride.

Mattie Jo and Henry Clinton Wilkinson, cousins of the bride, served as candle lighters.

Dwight Joiner was organist and Kay Jenkins was violinist. Vocal selections were performed by Jill Brown, Jeremy Martin, Jane Gulley and Lynn Kriegshauser.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a gown of white satin designed with a portrait, off-the-shoulder neckline, fitted and beaded bodice with elongated waist and featured a full skirt and a large back bow.

Her waist length veil of illusion was secured by a rose covered comb and designed by her mother.

The bridal bouquet was a cascade of vibrantly colored mixed spring flowers and ivy.

Bridal attendants wore floor length gowns of white chiffon and carried hand tied bouquets of mixed spring flowers.

A reception followed the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church and in the garden area of the Ambassador Hotel in Amarillo.

Jennifer Singletary and Jennifer Jennings registered guests and Andy Lucero greeted guests.

The bridal cake was attended by Rebecca Soloman, DeeAnn Hill and Patricia Martinez. The groom's cake was attended by Amy Kriegshauser and Emily Kriegshauser. Guests helped themselves to punch from a three tiered cascading fountain.

The five tiered bridal cake was surrounded by single heart-shaped cakes. The butter cake had French vanilla icing decorated with fresh spring flowers, tree fern and baby's breath.

The groom's two layer chocolate cake in the shape of a tooth was iced with porcelain frosting and set off with selected dental tools.

Following a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will be at home in Waxahachie.

The bride is a 1991 graduate of Hereford High School and a 1995 graduate of West Texas A&M University with a BS in elementary education. She is currently employed as a staff instructor by the National Cheerleading Association. She will join the staff of Waxahachie ISD this fall as a cheerleading coach.

The groom is a 1988 Pflugerville High School graduate and a 1992 WTAMU graduate with a BS in pre-med. He is a fourth year dental student at Baylor College of Dentistry in Dallas.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

You may be disappointed if you fail, but you are doomed if you don't try. --Beverly Sills

HJH math teachers met this past week to review student scores and achievements in order to prepare schedules for the new year.

Dona Hendrickson and Royce Spies left today for Hondo for a science conference. They will be preparing units of study that will involve students in each area of the curriculum.

The following seems appropriate, especially if you know a child!

You Make A Difference

You make a difference in the life of a child
By giving him a kind word or just a smile.
You make a difference by helping him understand
Just by being there and lending a supportive hand.
You make a difference by laboring long hours to meet his need
By developing self-esteem so that he will not follow-but lead.
You make a difference by being a FRIEND
You have given hope and encouragement to life's dead end.
You make a difference by letting him know
There are people who CARE wherever he may go.
You make a difference by providing ENRICHMENT to his day
You are teaching him patience when he doesn't get his way.
You make a difference when you reach out to a child who stumbles in the midst of strife
And convince him to be on the TRACK TEAM and jump the hurdles of life.
You make a difference by changing his small steps into a giant LEAP
You are there to remind him that an education is his to keep.

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

I tend to think of myself as one who is not a collector. And I don't consciously collect things, like salt and pepper shakers, match books or unicorns, but I do have a collection -- of recipes.

Last weekend in an attempt to find a particular recipe, I started browsing through cookbooks, a recipe file box and even one old handwritten spiral notebook.

Many of the recipes in the file box are from my days of homemaking when I was in high school. As I flipped through the index cards, memories of times connected with preparing almost every recipe came to mind.

The cookbooks also brought back memories. A great number of them were gifts from friends and family members who know that I enjoy "reading" cookbooks, even though I seldom prepare any of the recipes. I get engrossed with reading the ingredients and methods of preparation.

Maybe this accumulation of recipes is where I often get ideas for "new" dishes when I'm cooking. It's easy to take an ingredient from this recipe, one from that, a preparation idea from another and combine them to create something that is uniquely "Becky." (It may not always be good, but it is always unique!)

The handwritten spiral book is virtually timeless. The handwriting is, for the most part, my mother's. She started the book when she and my daddy married (in 1945) as a written record of favorite recipes from her mother and grandmother who both did most of their cooking from recipes in their heads.

Some of the recipes have changes made in the amount of certain ingredients, apparently a result of trial and error, trying to convert measurements, like a "pinch" or a "handful" to teaspoons and tablespoons.

Interestingly enough, some of these recipes are still favorites at my house.

So I guess I am a collector, even if I never consciously worked at creating a collection or even if my collection has little or no monetary value. Maybe I am just discovering the value of any collection -- the memories.

The club year has come to an end for most of the FCE clubs, sororities, study clubs, 4-H clubs, etc. who submit club reports for publication after each meeting.

I would like to express my appreciation to the reporters and secretaries who performed this task so diligently throughout the club year.

Local news is one main objective in the Lifestyles section. And these timely reports are a great source of local news and activities of local citizens.

Thank you for helping fulfill our objective and making my job easier.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I, too, share your compassion for animals. Over the years I've taken in many strays and out of about 20, I only found one owner.

Not all stray animals are abandoned. Some just wander off or escape their confinement and for whatever reason have no tag or ID. Most were wearing collars.

Please at least write your phone number or address on the collar (flea collar also) with a permanent marker. This makes it easy to get in touch with the owner. It should not replace licensing but should be done in addition to licensing.

Also, please use a circle key ring to attach any tags because the S hook can catch on wire fences and may choke the animal. — Linda Arman, Massillon, Ohio

You said it better than I could. It's very important to have some sort of identification on your pet.

They depend on us and when we decide to own a pet we have to be responsible owners and do everything possible to keep them safe. — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: One day, while following a recipe, I discovered I was out of thyme, so I ran next door to a young neighbor woman's home and asked, "Do you have any thyme?"

She said yes and proceeded to invite me to sit down. After about 15 minutes of chitchat I said I had to leave to finish my cooking, so if she had the thyme I'd better get going.

With a puzzled look on her face I think we both realized at the same time that she was spelling thyme, t-i-m-e. — Mary Walleman, Imperial, Mo.

I can just imagine how puzzled your neighbor looked after spending time with her then asking for thyme again.

Please write when you have time again. — Heloise

Emmons, Albert wed in Baton Rouge

MR. AND MRS. KYLE W. ALBERT
...exchange wedding vows

Susan L. Emmons and Kyle W. Albert were united in marriage May 18 in St. Thomas More Church in Baton Rouge, La.

Father John Carville of the church officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Bill and Phung Emmons of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of John Albert and Susan Dupuy-Starling of Baton Rouge.

The church was decorated with an array of palms and two fresh arrangements of assorted pink, purple and navy flowers.

Trisha Teel of Hereford was maid of honor. The groom's father served as his best man.

Bridesmaids were Amanda Albert of Baton Rouge, sister of the groom, Lana Warkocz of Colorado Springs, Stacey Sprague of Kaufman and Linda Wagner of Dallas.

Serving as groomsmen were Steve Brooks of Katy, John Campbell of Granite Shoals, Jason Smith of Midland and Sam Lock of Marble Falls.

Katie Janise, daughter of Tracie and David Janise, was flower girl. Ring bearer was Austin Reavis, son of Clay Reavis.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin with an off-the-shoulder sweetheart neckline. The sleeves were ornamented with Greek cross bows and the dress was accentuated with iridescent bugle beads that scrolled from the bodice to mid-hem.

She carried a cascading bouquet of ivory, blue and purple flowers interwoven with pearl falls and navy and gold ribbon.

Jewelry included a gold bracelet which the bride's mother wore in her wedding and a triple strand pearl drop choker.

Bridal attendants wore dresses of navy linen and carried long-stemmed bouquets of assorted ivory, blue and purple flowers.

All flowers were made by Linda Emmons, sister of the bride.

The couple was honored with a reception at Crockett's following the ceremony.

Mike Cluff of Dallas presided at the guest registry.

The three-tiered ivory wedding cake was decorated with a spiraling vine of magnolias and pearls.

The bride is a 1991 graduate of Hereford High School and a 1995 graduate of Texas A&M University. She is employed as a defense analyst for DFI International in Washington, D.C.

The groom graduated from Belaire High School in Baton Rouge in 1991 and from Texas A&M in 1995. He interned at the State Department in Washington, D.C. and will be commissioned in the United States Air Force in September.

Today in History

Today is Sunday, June 16, the 168th day of 1996. There are 198 days left in the year. This is Father's Day.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 16, 1963, the world's first female space traveler, Valentina Tereshkova, was launched into orbit by the Soviet Union aboard "Vostok 6."

On this date:

In 1567, Mary, Queen of Scots, was imprisoned in Lochleven Castle in Scotland.

In 1858, in a speech in Springfield, Ill., U.S. Senate candidate Abraham Lincoln said the slavery issue had to be resolved, declaring, "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

In 1896, 100 years ago, the Republican national convention opened in St. Louis.

In 1903, Ford Motor Co. was incorporated.

In 1933, the National Industrial Recovery Act became law. (It was later struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court.)

In 1955, Pope Pius XII excommunicated Argentine President Juan Domingo Peron - a ban that was lifted eight years later.

In 1961, Soviet ballet dancer Rudolf Nureyev defected to the West while his troupe was in Paris.

In 1970, Kenneth A. Gibson of Newark, N.J., became the first black to win a mayoral election in a major Northeast city.

In 1976, riots broke out in the black South African township of Soweto.

In 1978, President Carter and Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos exchanged the instruments of ratification for the Panama Canal treaties.

Ten years ago: Millions of blacks in South Africa marked the 10th anniversary of the Soweto uprising by staying away from work for the day.

Five years ago: The seventh International Conference on AIDS opened in Florence, Italy. The conference was marked by pleas from African and Asian countries for more help and criticism directed at the United States for its refusal to allow visits by foreigners infected with the AIDS virus.

One year ago: Bosnian government forces aided by Bosnian Croats unleashed a major offensive in hopes of breaking the Serb stranglehold on Sarajevo. Salt Lake City was awarded the 2002 Winter Olympic Games. On Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average closed above 4,500 for the first time, ending the day at 4,510.79.

Today's Birthdays: Former Washington Post Co. Chairman Katharine Graham is 79. Author Erich Segal is 59. Author Joyce Carol Oates is 58. Country singer Billy "Crash" Craddock is 57. Songwriter Lamont Dozier is 55. Rhythm-and-blues singer Eddie Levert is 54. Actress Joan Van Ark is 53. Boxer Roberto Duran is 45. Pop singer Gino Vannelli is 44. Actress Laurie Metcalf is 41. Rapper-actor Tupac Shakur is 25.

Thought for Today: "We fear something before we hate it. A child who fears noises becomes a man who hates noise." - Cyril Connolly, British critic (1903-1974).

Children have never been very good at listening to their elders, but they have never failed to imitate them.

Help Your Heart Recipes

This recipe is intended to be part of an overall healthful eating plan. Total fat intake should be less than 30 percent of your total calories for a day — not for each food or recipe.

Fresh Tomato Pizza

- Vegetable oil spray
- 1 10-ounce package refrigerated pizza dough
- 3 or 4 medium Italian plum tomatoes, thinly sliced
- ¼ cup snipped fresh basil or parsley
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1 cup shredded part-skim mozzarella cheese

Preheat oven to 425° F.

Spray a 12-inch pizza pan with vegetable oil. Press dough evenly into prepared pan. Arrange tomato slices on top. Sprinkle with basil and season with pepper. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake 15 to 20 minutes or according to package directions. Cut into 8 wedges.

KRISTIN WALTERSCHEID, DAVID WILL

Couple will say vows in Amarillo ceremony

Kristin Suzanne Walterscheid and David Kevin Will, both of Amarillo, announce their engagement and approaching marriage.

The ceremony is planned for Aug. 24 in the St. Thomas Catholic Church in Amarillo.

Parents of the bride-elect are Larry Walterscheid of Canyon and Lani Long of Hereford.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Richard and Marjorie Will of Port St. Lucie, Fla., and Santa Fe, N.M.

The bride-elect is a graduate of West Texas State University with a bachelor of science degree in nursing. She is employed at High Plains Baptist Hospital.

Will is a graduate of Florida International University with a bachelor of science in engineering and applied sciences. He is a lieutenant in the United States Naval Reserves and a firefighter and EMT with Potter County Fire Rescue. He is employed at Pantex in risk management.

Baca, Nava announce plans for Aug. wedding

Elias and Maria Luz Baca of Hereford are pleased to announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Patricia, to John David Nava.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Guillermo and Josie Nava, also of Hereford.

The couple plans to be married Aug. 3 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The bride-elect attended Hereford schools and is employed by Frisbie Janitorial Service.

Nava graduated from Hereford High School in 1993 and attended South Plains College and Amarillo College. He is employed by Bar-G Feedyard.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I used to swear by Tylenol for relief of my back pain. I recently read of side effects that can come from it. If what I read is true, why have they not removed it from the market? My doctor says they're talking about high doses. What is high? I and some friends are a bit confused. — Mrs. W.J.

ANSWER: Tylenol — acetaminophen — has been around for almost a half-century. First marketed as a prescription drug in 1950, it was approved in 1960 for over-the-counter sale, and has earned excellent marks for safety and effectiveness.

What understandably concerns you are reports of a few dire reactions in patients who took high dosages. Some patients who took 15-gram dosages experienced liver damage. You'd have to ingest 45 regular-strength Tylenol pills to get a 15-gram dose.

The recommended Tylenol dosage is four grams a day, 12 of the regular-strength tablets. Those who exceed that level of use or who have existing liver or kidney insufficiency would fall into the potential risk category. Such people need to discuss things with a doctor.

Alcoholics should realize that they might get into trouble with Tylenol. And people should not take Tylenol on an empty stomach — after an overnight fast, for example.

Only in the few rare instances noted above or in others stipulated by the individual physician need anyone discontinue or adjust Tylenol use.

Labels carry definitive use and dosage data and should be consulted in cases of doubt.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Years ago, I had intestinal surgery for ileum removal. My new doctor tested me recently and found my vitamin B-12 level was very low. She began B-12 shots, and my level got up again. I am told I cannot absorb oral B-12 the way others can. I need injections to get the vitamin shots, since my intestines no longer absorb the vitamin. Problem is my insurance company won't pay for shots. They say I can take B-12 pills and don't need injections. How come? — Mrs. J.V.

ANSWER: Most B-12 absorption takes place from the ileum section of the small intestine. Without an ileum, a person will not get enough vitamin B-12 absorption. That person develops B-12 deficiency and nerve symptoms. It's called "pernicious anemia."

I can't understand your insurance company's stance, which doesn't square with medical reality. I doubt that oral B-12 would work for you. Have your doctor call the insurance company.

For more information on anemias, see the report I'm sending you. Other readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — SR152, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

* * *

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

Extension News

By Beverly Harder
County Extension Agent - FCS

Building strong bones, especially before the age of 35, can be the best defense against developing the osteoporosis, and a healthy lifestyle can be critically important for keeping bones strong. Factors that can help in the prevention of osteoporosis include estrogen replacement, diet and exercise.

In national, and international research conferences sponsored by the National Osteoporosis Foundation and the National Institutes of Health, experts recommended estrogen replacement therapy (ERT) for women at high risk for osteoporosis.

ERT is especially recommended for women whose ovaries were removed before age 50. ERT should also be considered by women who have experienced natural menopause and have multiple osteoporosis risk factors, such as an early menopause, a blood relative with osteoporosis, or below normal bone mass for her age.

There are risks as well as benefits associated with estrogen use, including risk of uterine and breast cancer. The risk of cancer of the uterus can be offset by the addition of another hormone, progesterone, to the estrogen therapy.

With long-term use of estrogen (more than 10 years), there may be an increased risk of developing breast cancer. As with all drugs, the decision to use estrogen should be made after discussing the benefits and risks and your own situation with your physician.

Making sure you get an adequate amount of calcium may help in protecting you against osteoporosis. Recent studies indicate that many adults get only half or less of their daily calcium requirement. An 8-ounce glass of whole or skim milk, 1 1/2 ounces of cheddar cheese, 2 cups of cottage cheese, and 1 cup of yogurt contain an estimated 300 milligrams of calcium -- nearly one-third of the recommended daily allowance before menopause.

As you increase your calcium intake, try to eat foods that are low in fat. Keep track of your daily calcium intake for a week and discuss this record with your doctor.

If your diet does not contain enough of this vital nutrient, supplement your intake with calcium tablets. Ask your doctor or pharmacist to recommend a supplement that is well absorbed by your body. if your ill or if you've had kidney stones, talk to your doctor before taking any supplements.

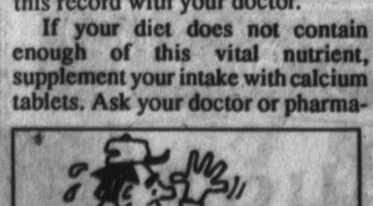

Individuals need normal levels of vitamin D to absorb calcium. The body manufactures this vitamin as a result of exposure to sunlight, and it is also available in vitamin-enriched milk products. Too much vitamin D is harmful, so do not decide to take supplements without first consulting your doctor. However you can safely take 400 units (the recommended daily allowance) in a multivitamin.

Exercise can also be helpful in building and maintaining strong bones. Exercise that forces you to work against gravity -- so called weight-bearing exercises such as walking or jogging -- are beneficial.

Other weight-bearing exercises include racquet sports, hiking, aerobic dance and stair climbing. The benefits of exercise last only as long as you maintain the program. If you are at risk for osteoporosis, your doctor will most likely include exercise as part of your overall treatment program.

If you have osteoporosis, you might be wondering if you should exercise at all. The answer, for most people, is yes. You should speak with your doctor or ask for referral to a specialist in physical medicine to learn what type of exercises you can do safely not only to preserve bone, but also to strengthen your back and hips and maintain flexibility.

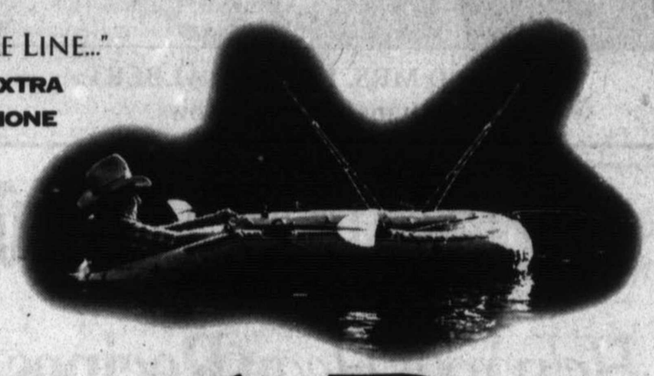

Your doctor will be able to help you design an appropriate exercise regimen. Keep in mind, however, that exercise alone cannot prevent or cure osteoporosis.

Triple ring ceremony includes daughter

Lisa Ann Connally and Mark Christopher Keller of Kerrville were married in an evening ceremony on April 27, at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Mason. Father Michael Boulette of Notre Dame Catholic Church of Kerrville officiated at the triple ring ceremony. The altar was decorated with bouquets of bright spring flowers.

MR. AND MRS. MARK CHRISTOPHER KELLER
...with Lauren Connally, daughter of the bride

The bride and groom were presented in marriage by their parents, Butch and Betty Connally of Kerrville, formerly of Hereford, and George and Jan Keller of Mason.

The bride's white satin gown featured a beaded bodice, complimented by a sweetheart neckline. Beaded lace trimmed the hemline of the fitted skirt and the cathedral length train, A tiara of satin roses and pearls held her waist-length veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of white bridal roses, white tulips, Casablanca lilies and miniature orchids.

Michelle Waldrop of Carrollton and Wendy Connally of Fredericksburg served their sister as matron and maid of honor respectively. They wore fitted emerald green gowns and carried bouquets of spring flowers.

John Keller served his brother as best man. The groom along with his brothers, Michael Keller of Dallas and John Keller of Lubbock, ushered guests.

Lauren Connally, daughter of the bride, and Lauren Keith, niece of the groom, were the flower girls. Cameron Keith, nephew of the groom, was the ring bearer. Laura and Shane Keith, sister and brother-in-law of the groom, were candle lighters.

Brian Grothues, provided wedding music on the piano and accompanied the vocalists Wendy Connally, Michael Keller and Dorothy Cass, who also served as cantor. A special presentation of "The Lord's Prayer" was sung acupella by the groom, his father and brothers.

Kathryn Keller, the groom's sister served as liturgist. The gift bearers were Chris and Deborah Connally, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, and Bill and Yolanda Pickard.

The double ring ceremony was highlighted by a third ring, accompanied with vows, presented to Lauren Connally by both the bride and groom.

An outdoor reception was held at the Carriage House Bed and Breakfast. The bride's cake was decorated with fresh spring flowers on top and grape clusters made from buttercream icing decorated the sides. The bottom tier held the couple's champagne glasses and Roman columns entwined with ivy. Dancing cherubs separated the top two layers. The groom's cake, German chocolate, was decorated with fresh strawberries partially dipped in chocolate.

Hundreds of tiny lights decorated the trees, tables and landscaping. Guests mingled around the wishing well and on the bridge crossing over the goldfish pond before they served themselves from a buffet table. Dancing and karoke were the entertainment for the evening. The groom acted as master of ceremonies.

After the couple's honeymoon to various points in Texas, the family is at home in Kerrville.

NORTH EAST, Md. (AP) - So you want to see Clint Eastwood at the set of his latest film.

Feel lucky?

Mel Adam, a ranger at Elk Neck State Park, said he turned away as many as 100 people a day who wanted to see Eastwood at work in this rural community. Among those denied entry, at least temporarily, was film publicist Marco Barla, who forgot his pass.

Eastwood spent three days last week filming scenes from "Absolute Power," about a burglar who witnesses a murder in Washington. The movie comes out next year.

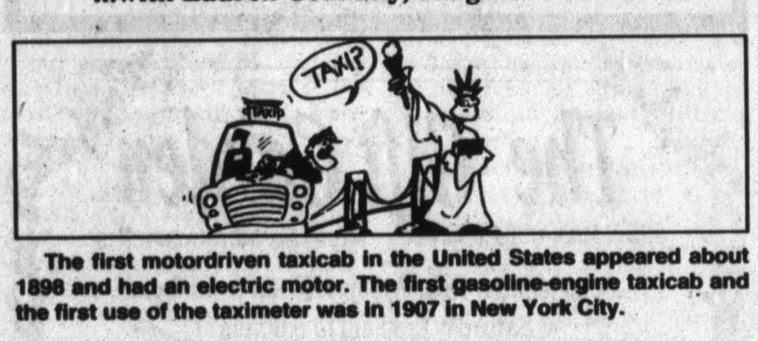

Rangers also patrolled the Chesapeake Bay, turning away boaters who came too close to where the crew planned to film a car being pushed off the 50- to 100-foot cliffs.

So what was the Oscar-winning actor and director like?

"You can only look at him so many times," Adam said.

Patience is a bitter plant but it has a sweet fruit.

The first motordriven taxicab in the United States appeared about 1898 and had an electric motor. The first gasoline-engine taxicab and the first use of the taximeter was in 1907 in New York City.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED GAS RATE CHANGE

On May 31, 1996, Energas Company filed Statements of Intent to change its gas rates with each incorporated city listed below. The proposed changes will take effect no sooner than 35 days after filing. Each city may suspend the proposed effective date for an additional 90 days.

The company proposes to increase rates to General Service (residential and commercial), Small Industrial Service, Large Gas Air Conditioning and/or Electric Generating Gas Service, and the Air Conditioning Rate Rider. Additionally, the company is proposing to offer a new service, General Service-State Institutions, to state agencies. The company may implement a different rate design than proposed provided the increased revenue does not exceed that specified herein.

The proposed changes are expected to increase the company's annual revenues by approximately 7.6 percent or $7.7 million. The proposed changes could affect approximately 200,000 gas consumers in the following communities:

Abernathy	Lake Tanglewood	Post
Amherst	Lamesa*	Quitaque

MR. AND MRS. OSCAR Z. GOLDEN
...celebrate 50th anniversary

Former residents are honored on anniversary

Oscar Z. and Joy Golden will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary June 18 at a family gathering in Del Norte, Colo., hosted by their children, Gordon and Mary Golden of Sisters, Ore., Mark and Judy Golden of Fort Worth, and Katie and Tom Baker of Capitola, Calif.

The Goldens have nine grandchildren.

Oscar Golden and Joy Hitzfeld were married June 16, 1946, in Ballinger. The Goldens resided in Hereford from 1950 until 1974.

Golden was a medical laboratory and x-ray technician at the Deaf Smith County Hospital and then director of the Deaf Smith Research Foundation. Mrs. Golden was an elementary school teacher from 1964 through 1974.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

It isn't too late! Bring your children in this week and get them signed up for the Summer Reading Club. We still have many prizes and activities for them to do.

Are the grandchildren here for a visit and you are running out of ideas to keep them entertained? Bring them in and sign up. Reading can be a great source of entertainment and it won't cost a dime.

Every Tuesday morning at 10 the library will have a special activity for the children signed up. June 18 at 10 a.m. we will make the "Hot Shot Basketball Goals." Come in and join the fun!!!

The Family Film, "The Sandlot," will be show June 20 at 7 p.m. in the Heritage Room. Everyone is invited to attend free of charge.

Fifth grader Scotty Smalls has just moved to a new town. Scott, small for his age with glasses, is called a dork by the other kids because "he can't even throw a baseball." It isn't long before Scotty is recruited by the neighborhood boys to play baseball on the nearby sandlot field.

Soon nine boys are the best of friends, Scotty is playing like a pro and they have all had to face the fearsome beast (the dog) who lives behind the left field fence. Don't miss this warmhearted comedy. 101 min. Popcorn is 25 cents.

The new book list this week begins with Timepiece by Richard Paul Evans, the author of The Christmas Box. In the previous book Mary Anne, a loving widow, taught the importance of time spent with loved one.

In Timepiece, the lives of David and Mary Anne Parkin are traced from their discovery of love, through the development of loyalty and the experiences of forgiveness.

Mary Anne and David come to know that the deepest sense of hope often comes from the hardest lessons of life, and that within the darkest moments mankind is capable of revealing the greatest light of what is best with humanity.

Mary Anne gives Richard an antique timepiece to pass on to his own daughter and each subsequent generation, something to say "we existed," we are real, you have a solid beginning.

Threshold is Ben Bezrich's debut novel, a "harrowing tale of enlightened science run amok."

Jeremy Ross, a medical student, agrees to help an old girlfriend investigate her father's death. Following his only lead, Jeremy is taken to Tucsome, a large research center in South Carolina, where he discovers Tuxeome receives billions more in government funding than anyone suspects.

The chief scientist of the facility has discovered a way to break the genetic code. Jeremy begins to realize the horrifying implications of what will take place in 72 hours if something isn't done.

Jeremy must confront the most elite government agents, natures most formidable obstacles, and the most daunting mysteries of science. The only person Jeremy can trust and count on is the beautiful young woman who has reentered his life.

The Father's Club by Jon Katz is a club for men of the 90s caught in a world of pressure, difficult choices and the struggle to build and maintain friendships.

Kit Delecuw, feeling a bit embattled in his dual roll of family man and suburban detective, decides to join the men's club. Dale Lewis belonged too. Linda Lewis, Dale's ex-wife, wants Kit to investigate her ex-husband.

Since the divorce Dale has been a dutiful father, sending the child support check on time, calling the children regularly, but lately he has fallen behind in his payments and failed to respond to Linda's messages. Dale is found dead in his office.

Joining the Father's Club will give a Kit a chance to talk to men acquainted with Dale, hopefully gaining some clue to Dale's demise. Discovering the need men have to talk to one another it isn't long before Kit finds himself involved with mobsters, federal investigators and Dale's infidelity.

When it is all said and done Kit has become wiser about his own relationship with his son and how he fits within the community.

In Robert B. Parker's Chance, Spenser is employed by Julius Ventura to find his missing son-in-law.

One of Boston's big time hoodlums, Ventura may not be telling the whole truth, in fact he may be lying. But there is something about the missing link that appeals to Spenser.

All too soon it becomes clear that the control of gangland Boston is what is at stake, and not young love. Spenser and his unlikely sidekick Hawk find themselves dead-center in a violent war.

The Fourth Estate by Jeffrey Archer is the tale of two men striving to be the first to create a global media empire thus becoming the most powerful man on earth.

Lubji Hoch rises above his humble beginnings as an illiterate Jewish peasant, escapes the Nazis, changes his name to Richard Armstrong, becomes a decorated British Army officer and ultimately the head of a floundering newspaper in Berlin.

Keith Townsend resides in Australia. The son of a millionaire, educated in the best schools, works for a London newspaper until his father's death, when he takes over the family business making him the leading newspaper publisher in Australia.

Armstrong and Townsend collide on a global scale and in the end one flies away in his private jet while the other prepares a press release to announce bankruptcy.

Types of chocolate run gamut from light to dark

Chocolate is a natural product treated in a time-honored tradition. The chocolate pods from tropical cacao trees are harvested and broken open to extract the beans, which ar then dried, roasted, and ground to create chocolate liquor, which is non-alcoholic. This is baking chocolate, which -- after the cocoa butter content has been pressed out -- becomes cocoa powder.

This is only the beginning, since today chocolate forms run the gamut from light milk chocolate to deep bittersweet, and much of the enjoyment of chocolate depends on personal preference. Here are the types available:

*Milk chocolate: Chocolate liquor with cocoa butter, milk, sweeteners and flavoring added. All milk chocolate made in the U.S. must also contain at least 10 percent chocolate liquor and 12 percent whole milk.

*Semi-sweet or bittersweet chocolate: Chocolate liquor that contains varying amounts of sugar, vanilla and emulsifiers. By government standard it must contain at least 35 percent chocolate liquor.

*Sweet chocolate: Used mostly for garnishing and decorating, it is similar to semi-sweet, but contains more sweeteners.

*White chocolate: The term is really a misnomer since white chocolate does not contain any chocolate liquor, but is made up of cocoa butter, sugar, milk solids and flavorings.

All chocolate should be stored in the same way -- in a cool, dry place (not the refrigerator or freezer) and kept tightly wrapped.

Everything for fun days at the pool, or in your own backyard!

Baby boomers, megachurch can help solve direst problems, says millionaire Christian

By CHRISTINE WICKER
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS -- Bob Buford is betting his life and a goodly amount of his multimillion-dollar fortune on the idea that America's direst problems are going to be solved by two agents: middle-aged baby boomers and the megachurch.

He could hardly have picked two more reviled entities. The boomers have been castigated as the most self-indulgent, navel-gazing generation in history. The megachurch has been dismissed as all sizzle and no steak, religion-lite and just the kind of high-glitz, high-dollar worship that a bunch of boomers would come up with.

But the critics are wrong, says Buford, who made much of his own fortune by having the prescience to realize in the mid-1980s that Buford Television Inc. ought to embrace cable and move away from owning individual stations.

Now the 56-year-old Christian from Tyler is betting that boomers, who spent their youth believing they could save the world, are going to take another shot at it in middle age. Only this time, their social reform will be more practical, more skilled and, he believes, more likely to be motivated by faith in Jesus Christ.

And the megachurch? His mentor, management guru Peter Drucker, calls it the most significant social event in America today. Buford agrees.

"For the first time, we have a large enough organization to attack large issues," Buford said.

He and Leadership Network, the Tyler organization he founded 12 years ago, are major forces in helping shape and encourage some of the most important trends taking place among religious institutions and religious people today.

Sometimes he gives money to projects, and his Leadership Network puts on three major gatherings each year as a way of fostering Christianity as a force in the world. The group also publishes updates that keep leaders aware of what's going on in churches today.

His central goal -- or, as he likes to say, his T-shirt message -- is to turn the latent energy of American Christians into an active force. To do that, he looks for ideas that work and people who can make those ideas reality.

Among the first pastors who gathered to share ideas in a Leadership Network forum was a young man named Bill Hybels. Today, the congregation he brought together is the country's most famous and best attended megachurch. His Willow Creek Community Church, near Chicago, has a weekly attendance of 15,000.

Buford recently published his first book, "Half Time: Changing Your Game Plan from Success to Significance."

The foreword was written by Drucker, who predicted the book "will have meaning and message for all those who open its pages."

It has sold 50,000 copies, mostly from word of mouth, and Buford is working on a sequel.

Now the businessman is turning his attention to encouraging "social entrepreneurs," people who he says will solve the country's social ills by using the tactics of business entrepreneurs.

"This is a thrilling time to be alive," said Buford.

His optimistic view is of long-standing and, at least partly, sacred origin.

"I was given the gift of faith as a child," he said, likening it to having simply opened his hands for a gift that fell from heaven. "I never wrestled with what I believed. Christ made sense to me. God made sense to me. Things that plagued people for centuries didn't bother me. ... The central question of my life was, 'What am I going to do about what I believe?' "

His faith is simple, but he is not. One longtime observer of Buford calls him a "complicated man." Another talks about his unyielding focus.

He is a lover of art, a world traveler, a reader who most likes quoting his Bible but will also throw in observations from Feodor Dostoevski or Vaclav Havel or Soren Kierkegaard.

His father died when he was barely 11. To support the family his mother got into the television business. When other parents were reading bedtime stories, she was sharing business theories with her children.

In his early 20s, Buford married, had a son and began doing exactly what his fellow boomers were doing: making money and chasing success with an unrelenting passion.

They were behaving exactly as people in their 20s and 30s must, Buford believes.

"In our 20s, we're not supposed to be balanced," he said. The choices young people make to enter careers, to marry and to have children generally demand that they work as long and hard as they can, he says.

Now in their 40s and 50s, however, boomers are the first generation in history with the longevity and freedom to get off the merry-go-round before they die, Buford says.

"They have a good 30 years left of their lives," he said.

"It's as if an angel had dropped down and given them a second chance or a whole new lifetime that their grandparents didn't have."

How will they use it? Like no one else in history ever has, he believes.

In calling his book Half Time, Buford refers to his belief that many baby boomers are now resting, analyzing how the game has gone so far and trying to figure out what their moves ought to be in the second half. Their definition of winning is about to change, he believes.

Fostering and empowering them as they become social entrepreneurs is Buford's newest project. As with Leadership Network, his goal is to "put the best and brightest together in a room and let them teach each other."

"What I would like to see in the social entrepreneur initiative is a great number of Bill Gateses in the social sector instead of in the commercial sector," he said. He believes this trend, which some people call the Third Wave, has already begun.

He can rattle off a long list of social entrepreneurs:

Don Williams, chairman of Trammell Crow Co., who is helping rejuvenate neighborhoods around Fair Park, is an example. Tom Luce, who formed Just for the Kids last fall, is another example. Habitat for Humanities founder Millard Fuller; Charles Colson, founder of Prison Fellowship; and James Dobson, founder of Focus on the Family, are others.

Such private efforts are flourishing at a particularly opportune time for social change, he said.

"People are open ... for the first time in 200 or 300 years to the idea that there's another way to fix problems than through government," he said.

The story of how Buford became a social entrepreneur himself is told in his book.

Fourteen years ago, he was a man who had realized his highest goals. His company was growing at a rate of 25 percent a year. His marriage was happy. His only son was confident and successful.

At 42, Buford realized that he could spend the rest of his life accumulating great riches. But he didn't want to.

"To spend what you have little of, which is your time and your life, for that which you have plenty of, which is money, seems silly to me," he said during an interview in the book-lined library of his Turtle Creek penthouse.

He cut back is work role until now he devotes only 20 percent of his time to his business. He set up a fund that would give him and his family twice the money they would ever need for the lavish lifestyle he and his wife, Linda, are accustomed to enjoying.

And then he looked for the biggest lever he could to make a difference in society.

In the megachurch, he thinks he's found it.

Part of the reason is money.

Eighty-seven percent of money given to charity comes from individuals, he said, and 50 percent of the money those individuals give goes to a religious organization.

Where do those people go to church?

Fifty percent of churchgoers attend one-seventh of the churches, said Buford. In other words, they go to megachurches, which are usually defined as churches with more 2,000 members.

Buford often cautions would-be social entrepreneurs of money's deceit -- that it promises happiness and safety, which it cannot deliver. In 1987, he and Linda found that out.

Their 24-year-old son, Ross, was a successful Denver investment banker when he and two friends decided to find out what it was like to swim the Rio Grande. Only one friend made it across.

Buford hired helicopters, airplanes, boats and trackers with search dogs to comb the river. "By 3 o'clock in the afternoon, I looked into the eyes of one of the trackers and knew that I would never see Ross again in this life," Buford wrote in Half Time.

Four months later, his son's body washed up 10 miles down river.

Through it all, the Bufords' faith was unshaken. "As horrifying and sad as it was, and is, to have lost him, Ross' disappearance and death also provided the greatest moments of rare insight and grandest gestures of immeasurable grace and joy that I ever hope to experience," he wrote in his book.

Buford enjoys what God has given him and has no guilt about having so much money. In his book, he tells people who are considering a greater commitment to Christ that they shouldn't fear that Jesus will demand they become radically different people.

Bible-based wellness program expands rapidly

By KAREN HILL
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - It may be near-heresy in the Bible Belt to eat grits without butter, but a growing number of church members say God has told them to lay off the fat.

They're part of a Bible-based wellness program that is expanding even faster than baby boomers' waistlines. Since beginning at First Baptist Church of Houston in 1981, the First Place program now operates in about 10,000 churches in all 50 states and 12 foreign countries.

The program is similar to other established programs that emphasize slow weight loss, a well-balanced diet and moderate exercise.

It's the Bible verses that add a twist.

A focus on the Almighty helps during that stressful step on the scales, said Irene Bonner, who has led First Place classes for five years as director of Dunwoody Baptist Church's Wellness Center north of Atlanta.

"We memorize a Scripture verse and recite it when we stand on the scales," Ms. Bonner said. "This puts your mind to reflecting more on being God's creation than whether or not you've lost weight."

Weight loss is a popular side effect the 13-week program. Weekly meetings consist of a wellness lesson, Scripture study, and scrutiny of what dieters have eaten. Weigh-ins are optional.

The program uses the American Diabetes Association's low-fat, high-fiber diet.

"Many times, the Bible talks about not eating fat. It's amazing at how we've come back to the fact that the diet that Daniel ate was very healthy," said Carole Lewis, national director of First Place.

Daniel, an Old Testament prophet, ate only fruits and vegetables.

Materials include a cookbook and a notebook with instructions, general tips on good health, and space for diary entries.

"The nutrition itself is very sound. You get all 45 nutrients in the proper amounts," said Dr. Richard Couey of Baylor University, a professor of anatomy, physiology and nutrition who has gone through the program.

Twelve church members, none of whom were fitness or nutrition experts, devised the program after finding no religion-based wellness program to offer First Baptist of Houston's 20,000 members.

"God would want us to live as long as we can, to have a quality life, so we can serve Him," Ms. Lewis said.

"The people who started it said we are created as four-sided beings: emotional, spiritual, physical and mental," said Ms. Lewis. "This is designed to bring a balance among the four. We have people who know Christ, so spiritually, they're OK, but the other three areas are out of balance and they have no joy, no happiness. There are a lot of Christians who are extremely overweight."

By 1992, 1,500 churches were offering the program. That year, the Southern Baptist Sunday school board in Nashville, Tenn., paid for the right to sell the First Place literature in 68 Baptist bookstores and advertise the program.

It probably is a focus on the positive that makes the program successful, said Dr. J.T. Cooper, an Atlanta-based weight loss specialist and former president of the American Society of Bariatric Physicians, an organization of doctors that specialize in weight control.

"God, King Kong and the meanest doctor in the world could be lurking in the background, but if someone wants to eat, they're going to," said Cooper, who has kept off 67 pounds he lost 29 years ago. "The nice thing about the Christian religion is its element of forgiveness."

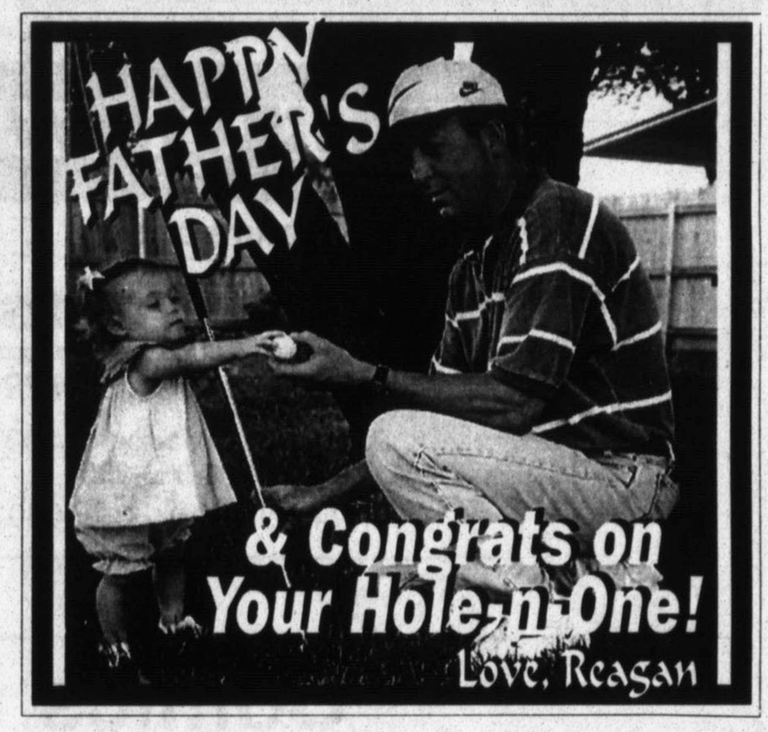

First Baptist of Houston charges about $75 for the materials. The church gets about $400,000 of its $8 million annual budget from First Place. The money is used only for missions and building maintenance.

YOUR EYES

Glaucoma and Genetics

Does someone in your family have glaucoma? There is a strong genetic component to the disease, so regular examinations are especially important for those at high risk. Where glaucoma runs in the family, its onset may be earlier--as young as 25--and more severe. In some cases, blood tests can isolate the abnormal gene.

Among the general population, African-Americans are four to six times more likely to get glaucoma. Other risk factors are myopia, diabetes, migraine and age; glaucoma rises sharply after age 40.

This relatively common disease is the third most common cause to blindness in the United States. It damages the eye's drainage system, resulting in excess pressure in the eye. For most people, there are no symptoms at all, no pain nor discomfort. That's why it is so important to schedule regular optometric examinations. These generally include a simple glaucoma test for everyone over 40--and even for those at extra risk.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

THE GROWING CHALLENGE

(Second of three parts)

Growing a small business into a highly successful and profitable venture is the dream most entrepreneurs. What many fail to realize is that growth and success are not synonymous. In my opinion, a successful business is one that generates a good profit, is fun to manage and delivers quality products and services that delight customers.

Many small business owners believe they must get bigger to become successful. However, you should focus on getting better first. When you focus on improving your business, you often find that growth follows naturally. Here are some tips for getting better, then bigger.

Laying the Foundation

• Know what you do well. The first step in meeting the growing challenge is to understand your current success. Begin by listing the products or services that you deliver better than anyone else. You will find it easier to grow your business by capitalizing on your strengths.

• Know exactly where you are. The second step in laying a solid foundation for growth is to determine your current business condition.

Key factors in your assessment should include your financial condition, your market position and a thorough evaluation of both tangible and intangible assets. Let's look at each of these areas separately.

In evaluating your financial position there are three prerequisites to growth. These are: Profit, cash flow and equity. Use your current financials as a basis for financial projections. You will need to create both income statements and cash flow statements. You can grow with profit and still run out of cash on a short-term basis. Your business equity then becomes your financial safety net. You may borrow against your equity to support your short-term capita needs.

The second part of your assessment is to determine your market position. This step includes making a thorough analysis of the competition, and then assessing your own strengths and weaknesses.

You must base your assumptions for growth on the matchless benefits and unique advantages you offer your target customers. The stronger your market position, the more likely you are to achieve rapid growth. If you have no advantages and benefits that others aren't offering, you must compete on price alone. This usually diminishes your opportunities for profit.

The third portion of your "know-where-you-are" assessment, is evaluating your assets. Begin with your tangible assets. Are your buildings, facilities, equipment, technology and production capabilities sufficient for sustaining growth? How much growth?

Next, look at your intangible assets. Do you currently have the personnel to cover all aspects of growth? Growth will always require change. Is everyone on the team committed to your ideas for change? Have you provided incentives to keep them motivated?

• Know where you want to go. In this step, you must decide how you wish to grow. Will you grow by introducing new products or services? Or, will you grow by increasing volume existing customers? Or, will you attract new customers from other industries or geographic areas? Or, will you steal customers from your competitors?

• Put your plan in writing. The final step in creating your foundation is to put your plans, goals and strategies in writing. You must not ignore this step or take it lightly. Once you begin to experience growth, you may lose sight of your goals and objectives. Sometimes when you're up to your elbows in alligators it's hard to remember that you objective was the drain the swamp.

Once you have your foundation in place you're ready to grow. Next week we'll share some proven strategies for accelerating the pace. Don't miss "The Growing Challenge" Part Three.

Farm and Ranch

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent - AG

The first week in June I had the privilege to take twelve of our finest Deaf Smith County 4-H members to Texas 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M University in College Station.

The 4-Hers were members of the livestock, horse and dairy judging teams. In addition to competing at Roundup, these young people had the opportunity to visit several ranches and farms as we practiced on our way to College Station.

The first day, we had the opportunity to visit the Stewman Ranch near Maryneal where we judged Limousin heifers, bulls and steers. We also visited the Price Ranch near Sweetwater where we judged lambs. We finished off the day by spending the first night in Stephenville.

On the second day, we worked out at the Tarleton State University Swine Center and Dairy Farm. We visited the Sam Upshaw Horse Farm and saw some excellent mares and colts. We also saw the 1994 AQHA Stallion of the Year at this facility.

We judged Hereford bulls and heifers at the Lee Campbell Ranch between Dublin and Comanche. This was a beautiful ranch with excellent cattle. We finished the day at the Gail Christian Farm near Stephenville, where we judged medium wool sheep, before traveling to College Station to spend the night.

On the third day of the trip, we visited the 11,000 acre Camp Cooley Brangus Ranch near Franklin. At this location, the 4-Hers had the opportunity to tour the Ranch Headquarters offices and judge an excellent set of brangus heifers.

The trip was enjoyable and very educational for all of the youngsters involved. The 4-H members represented Deaf Smith County, placing well in horse, livestock and dairy judging during 4-H Roundup. No matter what the placing, all came back with a greater knowledge of the vast livestock industry in Texas.

Many of you producers that have waited late to plant your grain sorghum because of lack of rainfall, have probably seen advertisements for Peak, a new Ciba herbicide product. Peak has the same active ingredient that can be found premixed with the herbicide Beacon to make up Exceed herbicide, which is used on corn. Peak is strictly a broadleaf herbicide and will have no activity on grass.

Dr. Brent Bean, Area Extension Agronomist, recently told us that his experience with Peak over the last couple of years has shown control to be somewhat inconsistent. He stated that his experience has shown Peak to provide less than desirable control of pigweed (careless weed) in sorghum. Tank mixes using Peak in conjunction with atrazine and dicamba (Banvel) have worked very well. Peak is labeled for over-the-top applications on sorghum up to 30 inches tall.

He expressed concern that producers using Peak alone, might not get the control that they desire. He further stated that he believes Peak to be a good product that we can and should use on sorghum, but that he believed that we need more data on its use in our area before he could make recommendations for its wide spread usage as a stand alone product.

He reiterated that he thought the best use for the product was in a tank mix with atrazine or dicamba (Banvel) for broadleaf weed control in sorghum. Dr. Bean said that additional data will be gathered on the product used in our area this summer, and that next season recommendations can be updated. In the mean time, he suggested the cautious approach.

Speaking of grain sorghum, we planted an irrigated grain sorghum variety demonstration on June 13 on the Joe and Chris Grotegut farm located northwest of Dawn. The varieties included in the demonstration are Warner 816E, Garrison SG822 and SGX95271, DeKalb DK46 and DK41Y, NC+ 7R37E and 7R83, Golden Harvest EX512 and EX495, Pioneer 8446, AgriPro 9210 and Northrup King KS714Y.

Producers and Agribusiness owners might want to mark their calendars for June 27-28 for a meeting at the Holiday Inn Civic Center in Lubbock entitled "The Farm Bill and Beyond." The meeting will feature experts from throughout the nation discussing the implications of the 1996 legislation on producers and rural communities.

United States Secretary of Agriculture, Dan Glickman, has been invited to speak at the event. There is a registration fee for the event of $60. I have registration forms and a complete program available in the county extension office. Please call if you are interested in this program.

The Deaf Smith County Marketing Club will begin meeting soon. If you would like to participate, please call the extension office. Copies of the 1995 Result Demonstration Summary containing information and results from all of the tests conducted by the Deaf Smith County Agricultural Staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service are available in the county extension office. Please call or drop by for your copy. Think rain. See you next week.

SHELIA TEEL

Deaf Smith County Extension Office has announced Shelia Teel, former Deaf Smith County 4-Her, as the summer assistant. Shelia was a ten year 4-H member, assuming major leadership and participation roles in clothing, sheep, beef, public speaking, consumer decision making, food and nutrition and breads. Shelia is currently a junior at Texas A&M University, majoring in Agribusiness Ag Economics Association. Shelia will be directing projects in consumer education, food and nutrition, clothing and textiles and horticulture as well as leadership training seminars for 4-H youth during the summer months.

Cotton farmers oppose boll weevil eradication

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer

HALE CENTER, Texas (AP)--The state preaches to Texas cotton growers it can deliver them from weevils. Trouble is, many farmers are balking at the collection plate.

The movement to eradicate the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Program is becoming as fierce as the program's battle against the cotton-gorging critters themselves.

"We're going to work within the (eradication) law as it stands, even though we feel like it's unconstitutional," said farmer Chip Lowry of the High Plains Weevil Recall Organization.

Many of the very farmers irate about the Abilene-based eradication program voted for it last year when five straight mild winters allowed the pests to move further north.

But, harsh freezes this past winter did help take a toll on High Plains weevils, and some growers have renewed their efforts to stop the program before spraying begins again in 1998.

"I hope cooler heads will prevail," said grower Wayne Huffaker, who encountered his first boll weevil last year and firmly believes that this year's freeze amounted to a speed bump for the weevils' migration.

"They're been moving north and west and have been for several years now," said Huffaker. "I had never seen a weevil until last year."

Weevils became a problem for American cotton farmers a century ago in the Deep South, nearly wiping King Cotton out of parts of the region. In the past two decades, eradication is being credited for cotton's success in Georgia and other states.

Last year however, detractors in Mississippi blamed the spraying for an outbreak of the tobacco budworm last year and canceled the program, and South Carolina's crop had its worst weevil infestation in 12 years.

Every cotton state from Virginia westward either has an eradication program or has tried to install one.

Farmers in the Rio Grande and Concho valleys of Texas blamed the malathion spraying last year on an unusual spread of beet armyworms, which growers and some scientists said thrived once the chemical wiped out natural predators.

So, Rio Grande growers eradicated their eradication program in a recall vote.

Hale County grower Don Lyles and Lowry are leading an effort to gather petitions for a recall election among High Plains growers, similar to the one successfully organized in the Lower Rio Grande Valley earlier this year. Ten other Hale County farmers have filed a lawsuit asking that the program be revoked statewide.

Growers opposing eradication spraying say they support the elimination of the boll weevil as an economic threat. They simply believe they have no obligation to pay for the problems of others.

"It is not an assessment," Lyles said of the payment he'll owe the foundation on July 15. "It is an occupational tax on farmers."

The state constitution mandates that agricultural assessments be made at the point of sale, but the foundation asks for payment about two months before harvest time.

"We rely on the best (legal) advice we have," said Frank Myers, president of the foundation. "That comes from a Legislative analysis. They reviewed it two or three times, and our attorneys and Texas Agriculture Commission attorneys all have reviewed it."

Many farmers in southern Texas have chosen this season to raise sorghum instead of cotton. That way they can avoid paying their assessments, which are based are cotton acreage.

The foundation and the U.S. Department of Agriculture say there's no proof the malathion sprayed to kill the boll weevils had anything to do with the worm problems in Texas and Mississippi.

"This year we're tracking beet armyworms," foundation spokesman Tim Leifeste said of the Concho Valley and South Texas areas. Those are the two areas in which the foundation is actively working this summer. "Since there is no scientific evidence linking the effects of different chemicals on beneficial insects, we're going to be running tests."

Lyles said the armyworm outbreak was proof enough.

Despite the exit from the Rio Grande and resistance in the High Plains and Childress area, where growers have yet to vote on the program, Myers remains confident weevils will be nothing more than a pesky memory by the first part of the next decade.

Myers believes growers in the region surrounding San Angelo will be weevil-free after this year.

Meanwhile, even as weevils prepare to eat their share of cotton bolls across the nation's southern tier this summer, the infighting rages. Arkansas and Louisiana farmers have declined to initiate programs, and northern Alabama growers are engaged in a battle similar to those in Texas.

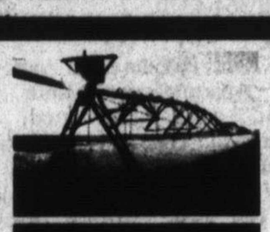

"It's divisive out here on the plains," Huffaker said. "I hope growers in Texas understand it's something for the future of themselves, their children and the industry."

Lyles says the foundation isn't out to help growers harvest cotton but help themselves to millions of dollars, including $12 million from the High Plains.

"They know they can't eradicate them," Lyles said.

If you don't want to work you have to work to earn enough money so that you won't have to work.

Modern Floor Plan Combines With Country Charm

TWIN DORMERS, a retreating roofline and a railed porch provide curb appeal. Shuttered windows and classic exterior lighting lend a touch of country charm.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

This attractive home, Plan G-10, by HomeStyles Designers Network, combines country-style charm with a modern floor plan. The one-story design delivers many nice touches within its 2,069 square feet.

The central foyer ushers guests past a study and twin closets, and into the huge living room, which is enhanced by an 11-foot flat ceiling, a corner fireplace and access to a sprawling, covered backyard porch. Windows flank the porch door, admitting light into the space.

An angled snack bar joins the living room to a bayed nook and an efficient, galley-style kitchen. The formal dining room is easily reached from the kitchen and the foyer. A utility room and a half-bath are just off the garage entrance.

The master suite — isolated for privacy — has plenty of room in the sleeping chamber, and a ceiling fan. A garden tub and a separate shower are found in the private bath. Double vanities and walk-in closets ensure an extra measure of personal space.

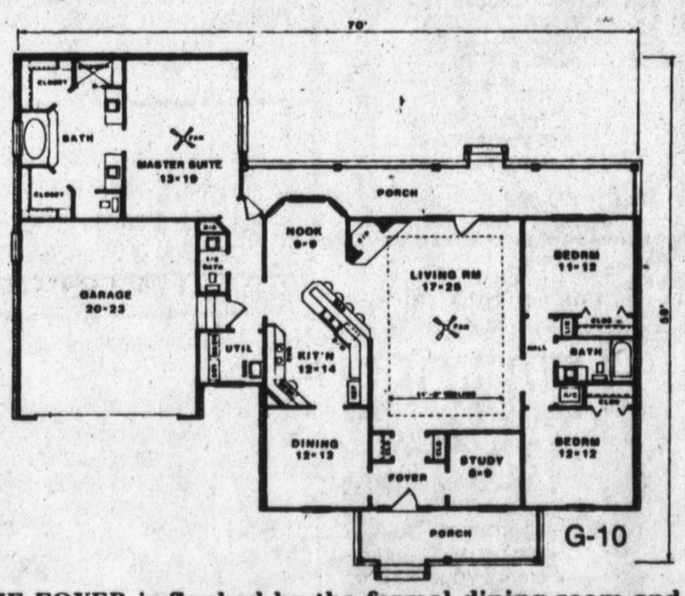

Two more bedrooms are located on the opposite side of the home and are separated by a hall bath. They have ample closet space and attractive windows.

Ceilings in all rooms are at least 9 feet high.

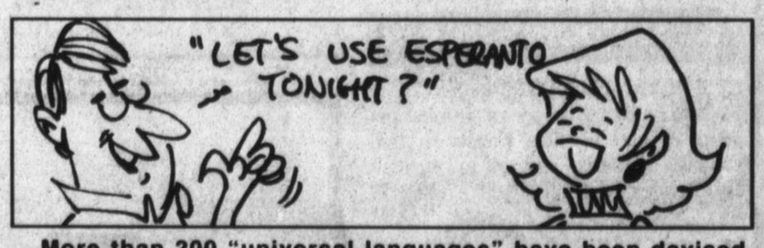

G-10 STATISTICS

Design G-10 has a foyer, living room, dining room, study, galley-style kitchen, breakfast nook, utility room, three bedrooms, two full baths and one half-bath, totaling 2,069 square feet of living space. The plan is available with 2x4 exterior wall framing, and a crawlspace or slab foundation. A two-car garage provides 460 square feet of space.

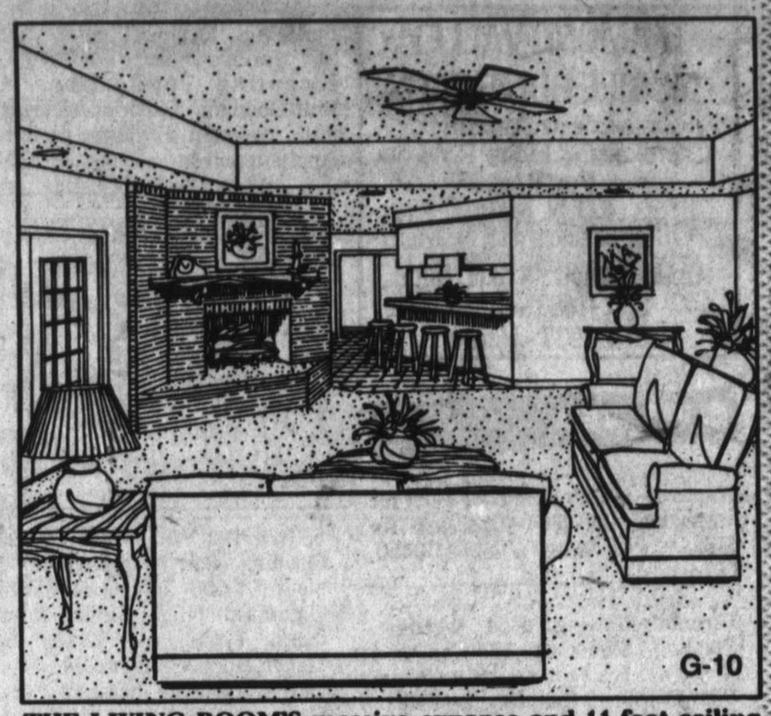

(For a more detailed, scaled plan of this house, including guides to estimating costs and financing, send $4 to House of the Week, P.O. Box 1562, New York, N.Y. 10116-1562. Be sure to include the plan number.)

THE FOYER is flanked by the formal dining room and a study. Past flanking closets, the long living room unfolds, offering access to the rear porch. A four-person eating bar connects the living room to the walk-through kitchen and nearby breakfast nook. A utility room and half-bath are around the corner, as is access to the two-car garage. The master suite is secluded in the rear and has a grand private bath. Across the home, two more bedrooms are served by a full bath between them.

More than 200 "universal languages" have been devised. Esperanto is the most widely used.

THE LIVING ROOM'S massive expanse and 11-foot ceiling provide an inviting gathering space. The fireplace and window wall overlooking the back porch provide warm touches. The kitchen's eating bar is a good place for hurried meals and snacks.

Olympic track and field trials bring out veteran competitors

ESPN, ESPN2 and NBC are sharing coverage of the 10-day Olympic track and field trials, taking place in Atlanta June 14-23. Carl Lewis, who already holds eight Olympic gold medals, is among the many hopefuls looking to land a spot on the U.S. team going to the Summer Games.

"The thirtysomething generation, as I call it, is really starring for the United States," says Larry Rawson, ESPN's senior track analyst.

Rawson, a standout miler in his Boston College days, announces for most of the nation's major marathons. He earned a Sports Emmy while reporting on ESPN's Outside the Lines, and he will be on hand for ESPN's coverage of the U.S. Olympic track and field trials from Atlanta, Monday, June 17, and Friday, June 21.

Monday's expected competitors include veteran Olympic distance runners Joetta Clark and Mary Slaney, women's long-jump recordholder Sheila Hudson and men's 5,000-meter champ Bob Kennedy. Friday coverage brings the return of decathlete Dan O'Brien and hurdles champs Roger Kingdom and Gail Devers, plus hot young steeplechaser Mark Croghan.

But the trials, which last 10 days, with additional coverage on NBC and ESPN2, are studded with veterans.

"Let's touch on a few ages here," Rawson suggests. "Gwen Torrence is 30. Carl Lewis is 35. Jackie Joyner-Kersee is at least 32, if not 33. Clark is 33. Two-time Olympic champ Kingdom is, like, 33, trying to make the team again. Johnny Gray, America's best 800-meter runner, is 36 and running brilliantly. And Ruth Wysocki is 39 years of age. It's incredible.

"So the nice story is these athletes are showing the rest of society that, through good nutrition and staying with your sport, the human body is capable, well into the 30s and sometimes into the low 40s, of performing almost as well as we ever have in our lives."

Money, in the form of sponsorships and appearance fees, has made the difference, Rawson believes.

"It allows an athlete to stay with a sport after he's perfected his abilities."

Rawson calls the old rules prohibiting amateurs from earning an income in their sport "nonsensical. It had its roots in English society, which was trying to keep people who worked in blue-collar jobs from competing against them in sport. If you go back into the 1920s and so forth, it's largely the privileged athletes who competed on these (Olympic) teams."

Another barrier dating from the '20s dies this summer: The Atlanta Games mark the inaugural Olympic women's 5,000-meter race, giving women a race in every distance category.

"The story goes back to the 1928 Olympics, when women for the first time were allowed to run any great distance ... but not all of them had been given training. So they were exhausted at the finish line. Six fell on the field during the 800. And it kind of seared in people's minds, 'Look at this. Women were not built for distance running.' Which is crazy."

It took until 1960 to reinstate the 800. A women's marathon was finally run in 1984, and 1988 saw the first 10,000-meter race for women.

Rawson says the benefit of getting used to the Olympic track and field venue is not the greatest advantage for athletes.

"We are one of the few countries, perhaps the only country, that conducts our Olympic trials the way the Olympics are done. Namely, it's stretched out over a week and a half. So in the 800 meters, you have to run four races spread out over six days.

"The point is that you bring to the (Olympic) table the people who have stamina and who are used to the heat conditions in Atlanta and can run four rounds just like you do in the Olympics."

HOROSCOPES

June 16-22

ARIES – March 21/April 20
Take some time to figure out the pattern of someone's behavior and you'll be better equipped to deal with it in the future. Careful observation is key. Someone who you thought was nice will do something to alter your opinion. Change in the workplace will only mean advancement for you.

TAURUS – April 21/May 21
Single Taureans will be in for a romantic rollercoaster ride this week. Although you may enjoy the excitement, it also may prove to be emotionally draining. It's not the time to wear your heart on your sleeve. Being a team player is the key to success at work this week.

GEMINI – May 22/June 21
A small change will make a big difference at home. You'll wonder why you hadn't thought of it sooner. Keep your spontaneous side at bay when it comes to shopping. There may be a reason to delay big purchases. A friend from your past will resurface. Your social life is on a rise.

CANCER – June 22/July 22
Minor health problems could keep you from doing what you want this week. Ride it out and you'll be back to your old self in no time. If you're hosting a party in the near future, now is the time to think up a creative menu. Find a way to "wow" your guests. Give an old friend a call.

LEO – July 23/August 23
If a new love interest has done something to disappoint you, don't be so quick to push him/her out the door. A bit of forgiveness on your part does not have to mean playing the fool. At work, a crisis situation will present a challenge. Keep your cool and you'll be able to handle anything.

VIRGO – Aug 24/Sept 22
Time spent with loved ones will ease the pressures of daily life. On Tuesday, you'll have the opportunity to turn a bad situation into something positive. Just call upon your creative side. Later in the week, avoid starting something you can't finish. A Cancer offers good advice.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23
Early in the week, follow the motto "haste makes waste." Put quality above quantity when it comes to work projects. A pleasant surprise midweek will help you forget about the tensions of the day. If you're a parent, learn to be firm when disciplining children. A visit with family gives the weekend a pleasant note.

SCORPIO – Oct 24/Nov 22
If you're looking for a new job, this could be your lucky week. Being in the right place at the right time could lead to success. In matters of love, honesty is the best policy. Even little white lies could get you into trouble! When dealing with family, a little kindness will go a long way.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov 23/Dec 21
A chance meeting with a long-lost friend could lead to a rekindled friendship. Make the effort to keep in touch. An uncooperative work associate could bring out your ugly side if you're not careful. Keeping cool and standing tall is the best revenge. A dream proves revealing.

CAPRICORN – Dec 22/Jan 20
An energetic mood will get you through your busy workload this week. You'll feel more productive than you have for some time. A surprise visit from an old friend will brighten the later part of the week. Romance highlights the weekend. Scorpio plays a large role.

AQUARIUS – Jan 21/Feb 18
What came easily at one time may give you trouble this week. Instead of fighting it, recognize your low and focus on something else. A difference of opinion with a loved one could cause trouble in paradise. Be fair but stand your ground. A tough decision will make Friday memorable.

PISCES – Feb 19/March 20
Cooperation is key to success at work this week. Don't be afraid to share your knowledge. You'll have more to gain than you realize. A family gathering later in the week will shine the light on a troubling situation. A mature way of looking at things is the best way.

HIGHLIGHTS

Overland to America*, airing Wednesday on PBS (check local listings), follows a trip from London to New York City – via the Channel Tunnel and over the snowy landscape of northern Russia, Alaska and Canada.

PBS film follows road trip from London to NYC

When the Channel Tunnel opened in 1994, Richard Creasey dreamed of a driving expedition.

He dreamed of starting a road trip in London and driving to New York City via northern Russia and Canada.

Overland to America, a two-hour documentary that follows the 17-member expedition, airs Wednesday, June 19, on PBS (check local listings).

Creasey, a television producer, undertook the expedition for the universal reason such trips are made: No one had done it before.

"I was also looking for a new way to do television," he says. "The idea was we would have an expedition that aired as we went across the world."

The program originally aired over seven weeks in the United Kingdom.

Transmitted by satellite, some segments of the trip aired as they happened. Other segments were filmed, then couriered by plane to be broadcast within days of the actual events.

The risky business of editing was left to those back home. "I had no idea what would be shown," Creasey says.

It was a risky trip in more ways than one.

Overland to America recounts the group's encounters with blinding snowstorms, hungry polar bears, roadside bandits and roads made hazardous by snow or slippery ice.

The isolation, extreme cold and cramped living conditions take their toll on team members.

After weeks of traveling through the bleak, frigid wilderness of Siberia, some team members develop haunting physical manifestations of depression, such as dark circles under their eyes.

But those gloomy times are more than offset by moments of sheer elation and joy, such as the times when vehicles are successfully extricated from snowbanks or the group is warmly welcomed at stops along the way.

The group shares a poignant moment when it visits the gulags where millions of Russians perished.

The trip ends in New York City, where the team tells puzzled onlookers: "We just drove here – from London!"

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels

Dean Cain

Q: I'm a die-hard fan of Lois & Clark, but recently it looked as if this were the end. Will it be back next season? Did Superman go back to Krypton? I thought it was destroyed. –J.P., Green Bay, Wis.

A: Relax – that was just a cliffhanger (yes, L&C fans, another one). The show definitely will be back for its fourth season next fall, when it will face dangerous aliens of a different kind: the cast of 3rd Rock From the Sun, which NBC is moving to Sundays.

The L&C season finale explained that Superman (Dean Cain) was going not to Krypton, but to a rocky planet where other refugees were sent before Krypton blew up.

By the way, Jon Tenney, who played the alien Ching in the last two episodes, is the husband of Teri Hatcher (Lois).

Q: What happened to Ned and Stacey? It was funny, sexy and witty. –Blair in Hillsborough, Calif.

A: Ned and Stacey simply ended its run of new episodes, although Fox has been airing repeats in a different time slot during recent weeks.

This fall, Ned and Stacey will air on Sundays between The Simpsons and The X-Files.

Q: I recently caught a repeat of Northern Exposure in which Maggie danced in a cave with a tall blond man named Arthur (we later discovered he was a bear). The music to that scene was lovely. Can you identify it? –Margie K., Tallahassee, Fla.

A: Yes. That was "Bailero" ("Shepherd's Song") from Volume 1 of Canteloube's Chants d'Avergne.

Q: As the parents of four adopted children, we have been glued to Second Noah. What does the future hold for this wonderful family show? –Carol in Pulaski, Wis.

A: Despite disappointing ratings, ABC has renewed Noah for the fall, when it will air on Saturdays. Do what you can to drum up support: If the audience doesn't grow, the show's doomed.

Q: Will Hudson Street return? Tony Danza is one of my favorites, although I thought this show was poorly written. –No name, please, in Erie, Ohio.

A: So did a lot of other people. Hudson is history.

Q: Everyone thinks I've gone bonkers. About 25 years ago, I watched a short-lived sitcom starring Paul Sorvino as a St. Bernard. Your help with the title would restore my dignity as well as my sanity. –Ellen Romano, Cape Cod, Mass.

A: Or not. Neither Total TV nor The Complete Directory to Prime Time Network TV Shows has any record of Sorvino appearing in any such show. Does anyone out there remember?

SOAP TALK

West leaves As The World Turns to be mother

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Dear Candace: My question is about Carly (Maura West) on As the World Turns. Is she married? To whom is she married, and is she really pregnant? –A fan on the Internet

Dear Reader: West is married to Jonathan Knight, a writer-director who produces CD-ROM video games.

She is pregnant and expecting her first child any day now. When Carly left to further her career in Hong Kong, it was to let West go, too. The actress has decided to give up her role in daytime TV to pursue motherhood full time.

Dear Candace: I'm really upset at the way Brooke (Katherine Kelly Lang) is treated by that no-good Stephanie on The Bold and the Beautiful. The thing about Brooke is she has done nothing wrong. Brooke has been a good mother, and her time with Ridge (Ronn Moss) is due.

I just hope Sheila (Kimberlin Brown) continues to give Stephanie a dose of her own medicine. –Patrick Hirang, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Reader: It's pretty bad when fans are hoping Sheila gets the best of someone. She is one of the most wicked women on daytime.

Sheila is certainly setting a trap for Stephanie, and it could be a very dangerous one.

Dear Candace: Could you tell us where Bill Bell got the woman who plays Ashley (Shari Shattuck) on The Young and the Restless? We don't think she can act the part. We just don't like her. –Loyal Fans in Fredericton, N.B., Canada.

Dear Reader: Fans seldom like it when a longtime favorite leaves a role. When Brenda Epperson took over Ashley after Eileen Davidson's exit, fans weren't upset because they looked so much alike.

The casting for Y&R is done very carefully, and they seldom make mistakes.

Shattuck is talented, and it won't be long before fans forget that she doesn't look like the Ashleys from the past.

James Stewart sent his Oscar for The Philadelphia Story home to his father, who put it on display at the family hardware store.

Actor Danny Thomas founded St. Jude's Children's Hospital over 40 years ago. His son, producer Tony Thomas, is now one of its boosters.

During his promotional tour for the film Jezebel, reporters found actor Henry Fonda talked of little else but his 8-month-old daughter, Jane.

Harpo Marx's eldest son, Bill, grew up to be a composer of harp music. His father considered it better than anything he played in the movies.

LUCKENBACH, Texas (AP) - Willie Nelson's somewhat annual Fourth of July bash in Luckenbach will benefit drought-stricken farmers in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

The daylong Farm Aid concert will feature such stars as Waylon Jennings, Leon Russell, Robert Earl Keen, Billy Joe Shaver and Asleep at the Wheel.

"We're looking at the drought as the largest natural disaster this year," Farm Aid program director Harry Smith said.

Farm Aid has distributed more than $12 million to farmers - most of it raised from concerts - since the first event was held in 1985.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ted Koppel says he's happy at ABC and doesn't plan to bolt the network when his contract runs out in September. But that doesn't mean he won't.

The longtime "Nightline" anchorman said, if other networks want to talk, he's listening.

"I've had a lot of people call me to say they want to talk to me," Koppel said in Tuesday's Los Angeles Times. "I'm going to say to them, 'Dazzle me with your creativity.'

Koppel, 56, said he loves a challenge and thinks it would be foolish not to listen to new proposals.

"I'm not sending any signal at all," he said. "I'm going to tell (ABC News President) Roone (Arledge) the same thing."

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) - Kelley Deal writes songs and plays much better when she's sober.

That's what she says she discovered while beating a heroin addiction at a halfway house in St. Paul, Minn.

Deal was a guitarist with her identical twin, Kim, in the alternative band The Breeders when she was arrested in 1994 on heroin charges.

A judge allowed her to seek treatment instead of jail time.

"I'm glad that my creativity really came out when I was sober," said Deal, whose new band, The Kelley Deal 6000, is touring the East Coast and the Midwest.

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) - Princess Margaret, the oldest daughter of exiled King Michael of Romania, is engaged to marry a Romanian actor, the family announced Monday.

Since the 1989 overthrow of communism, Swiss-born Margaret, 46, has been a regular visitor to Romania, becoming a patron of the arts and learning Romanian. Her fiance is 36-year-old Radu Duda, who has acted in TV dramas.

The wedding will take place Sept. 21 in Switzerland, where the exiled 74-year-old king lives.

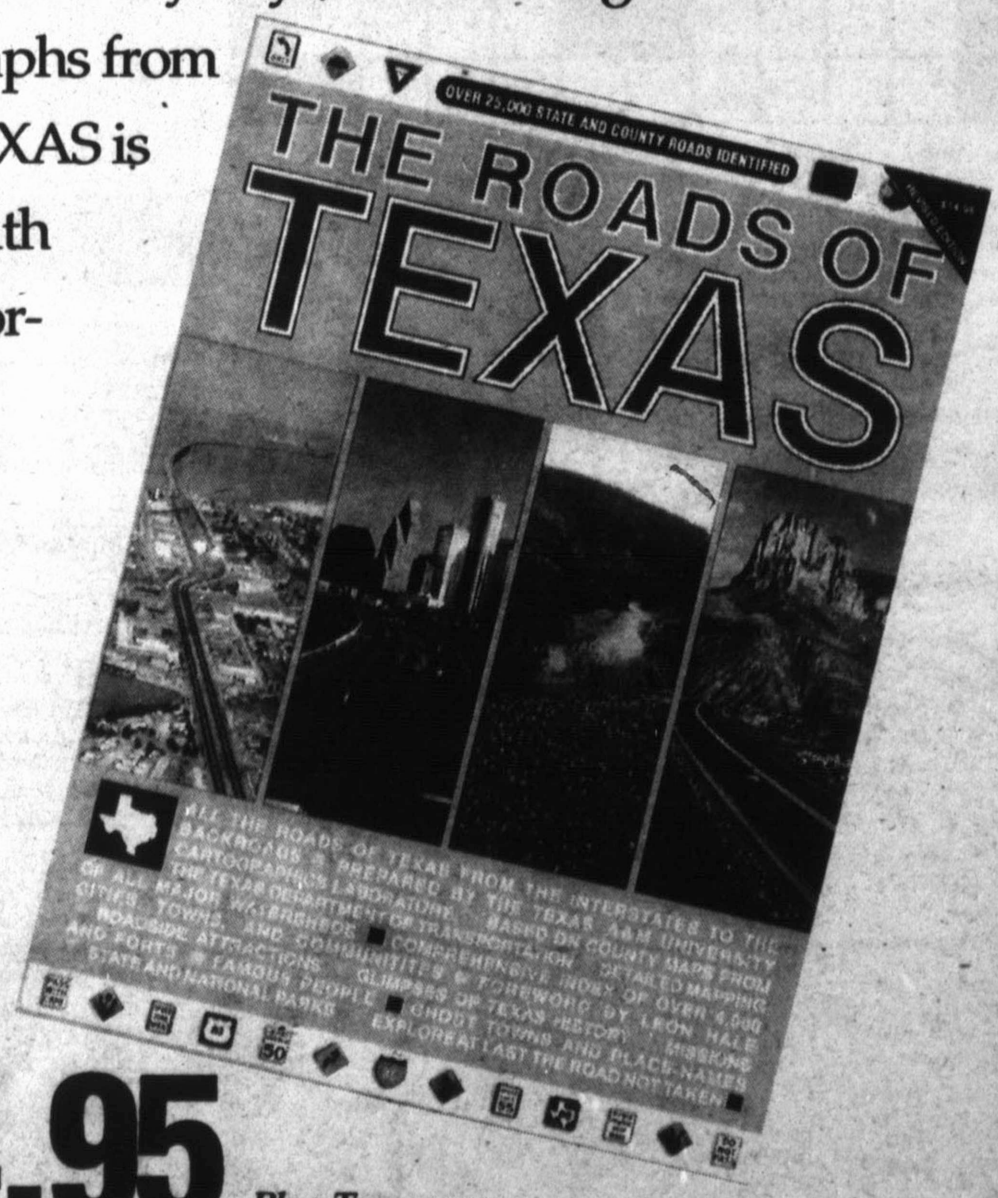

In the old West, unbranded cattle were called mavericks, the story goes, because Samuel Augustus Maverick of Texas accepted a herd of cattle in payment of a debt in 1845 and neglected to brand them.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Now newly revised and better than ever!

Shearer Publishing is pleased to announce its new edition of THE ROADS OF TEXAS. We have added dozens of country roads, lanes, cowtrails, and put new names or numbers on hundreds of others, names like Good Luck Road (Guadalupe County), Seven Sisters Drive (Kendall County), and Lone Star Alley (Menard County). Altogether, the new edition identifies more than 25,000 state and county highways and byways, and the bright new cover features current scenic photographs from around the state. THE ROADS OF TEXAS is different from any other road atlas, with more detail, more historical travel information, more heart. It has proven especially popular with the curious traveler inclined toward a little adventure, who doesn't mind getting to Aunt Martha's house just a bit late.
