Mobil begins C02 injection at Salt Creek

After years of planning and construction, and at a cost of more than $90 million, Mobil Oil Company officially began injecting carbon dioxide into oil wells this month at its Salt Creek Field Unit.

To commemorate the start-up, Mobil is hosting a reception from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday. The field is located along Highway 380 west of Clairemont, some 40 miles north of Snyder.

Up to 150 million cubic feet of C02 is being injected into 50 wells to bring crude oil daily production up from 20,000 barrels of oil to 28,000 barrels, Mobil officials said.

The C02 is delivered to Salt Creek from Denver City through a 128-mile Este pipeline, which also supplies the gas to Welch and Huntly oil fields.

Construction of the C02 distribution system, and a new gas plant, called for 225 contract employees, who have completed more than 14,500 manhours of work.

Mobil said that by injecting C02 into existing wells, the life of the field will be extended into the 21st Century and "ensure its continued contribution to the economy of Permian Basin communities."

The field was discovered in 1950, and has since become one of the most prolific oil-producing units in the U.S., pumping almost 300 million barrels, according to Mobil.

In 1972, the field, under the direction of General Crude, reached its peak production rate of 40,000 barrels of oil a day.

Mobil aquired General Crude in 1979 and began drilling additional wells, adding more than 150, and converting others to water injection to increase production.

Currently, Salt Creek Field has 178 active wells and 131 active water injecting wells. In addition to oil, the unit produces natural gas at a rate of 3.8 million cubic feet per day.

At a cost of about $90 million, Mobil invested in the C02 injection program to further increase production at Salt Creek Field.

The first phase of the program began this month in a large central portion of the field. Second and third phases will be implemented over the next few years to include the entire field.

Only 291 voters take advantage of early period

Only three percent of Scurry County's 9,084 registered voters took time to cast a ballot before 5 p.m. Friday — the deadline for early voting in the Nov. 2 proposed amendments election.

According to the county clerk's office, 291 voters cast ballots during the "no-excuse" period. One mail ballot was still out by the deadline.

Interest locally actually is higher, percentage-wise, than what officials are reporting statewide. An average of only 1.22 percent of the state's 8.5 million voters cast early ballots.

Voter apathy in a constitutional amendments election is not uncommon, but voters need to be aware that there are issues on the ballot that can have a great impact on Texas, officials said.

Among those is Proposition 4, which would prohibit a personal income tax without voter approval. Further, if voters were to approve a personal income tax, the amendment requires that the revenue be dedicated to education and limiting the rate of local school taxes.

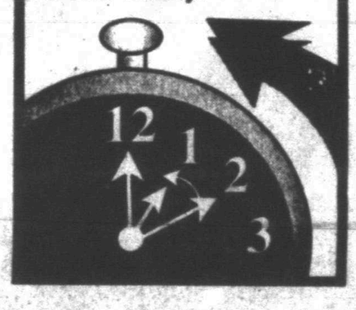

Supporters of Proposition 4 say passage of the amendment would give control to the people and ensure tight control of the revenues. Opponents argue that although the measure implies a ban on income tax, it may actually hasten its implementation.

Proposition 14 would authorize $1 billion in bonds to acquire, construct or equip new corrections fa-

What should students be learning?

Citizens getting chance to tell the state what they think

The store manager was shaking his head as the new employee walked off. "What are they teaching these kids today?" he emplored, to no one in particular.

If you've ever expressed that frustration, you'll have an opportunity to tell the state what students should be learning in a meeting set for Nov. 8 in the Snyder Junior High School cafeteria.

Raising Expectations for Students to Meet Real World Needs is a program initiated by Dr. Skip Meno, Texas commissioner of education. It is designed to let people tell the state what it should be teaching to enable them to succeed "in the real world."

People in each community are asked to come together for a two-hour session to trade their thoughts and ideas. Their suggestions will be sent to the Texas Education Agency, which will summarize the findings and present them to two panels. Those two groups will then make recommendations to the State Board of Education, to implement new curriculum.

Anyone can participate.

"We'd like to invite as many as would like to come and participate and give us their ideas and viewpoints," said Dr. Tom Scannicchio, Snyder ISD assistant superintendent.

The ideas could range from "need to be taught more responsibility" to "learn to balance a checkbook" — anything that is perceived as something students need to learn, and may not be learning now.

Participants from all facets of the workplace are encouraged to

Grand jury will meet on Monday

The Scurry County grand jury convenes at 9 a.m. Monday for its November session. Some nine cases are expected to be presented.

County to consider sanitarian

Hiring a sanitarian, re-bidding a vehicle for the sheriff's department and line item transfers are on the agenda for Scurry County Commissioners Court at 10 a.m. Monday.

Commissioners will possibly go into closed session to discuss the hiring of a replacement for longtime sanitarian Louie Vaughan, who retired recently.

The job description calls for advanced inspection work in the environmental health field, and may involve work in water, wastewater, and food and drug sanitation.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Ralph Trevey said one person meeting qualifications for the job has contacted the court showing interest.

Trevey also said that applicants must be certified, and carry a license for the position.

Commissioners will again advertise for bids on a new sheriff's vehicle since no response was heard from a previous request.

The first bid was a police package vehicle without a trade-in. The new bid will include the option of a trade-in.

Two county departments are requesting approval of commissioners for line item transfers.

The county extension agent plans to move $400 into travel expenses, taking the money in equal amounts from telephone and equipment.

The county welfare department plans to move $50 from indigent transportation to cover travel expenses.

In other business, commissioners will discuss selling surplus office and hospital equipment.

Error on tax bills impacts about 600

Corrected tax notices have been sent out to about 600 senior citizens, notifying them that they'll have to pay more than originally billed, Ray Peveler, Scurry County Appraisal District chief appraiser said.

The notices affect only those citizens who have filed for age 65 and over homestead exemptions — about 600 of the 11,000-plus people billed.

In explanation, the year after an applicable home owner reaches 65, his or her school taxes are frozen. A "ceiling" is placed on the taxes and they can go down, but not up.

Prior to 1991, citizens paid one school tax bill. When the County Education Districts were formed for 1991 and 1992, citizens paid two school-related tax bills — the local district tax plus the CED tax. The age 65 and over citizen's tax ceiling was also split between the two jurisdictions.

When the CEDs were abolished by the state this year, the CED and school taxes were combined, and the tax ceilings were also recombined.

However, because of an oversight, appraisal district officials calculated only the school district tax ceiling to give to the county for billing, and did not include the CED ceiling. Therefore, some citizens were not billed enough.

Put another way, a citizen eligible for the 65-and-over exemption may have had school taxes totaling $400 in 1990. When the CEDs were formed in 1991, that tax bill was split, with $300 applied to the CED and $100 to the school district. Those bills should have been recombined for 1993, but the CED taxes were accidentally omitted by the appraisal district.

"I wish the mistake had not been made, but unfortunately it was," said Peveler.

If you deal with computers, you have to believe in ghosts. There has to be some explanation for some of the weird things that happen.

There's no simple explanation for some things. On any number of occasions, we've been at the computer terminal only to have our material zapped and replaced by a wire story.

Sometimes a story that appears letter perfect on the screen comes out of computer looking like a foreign language. What locks down a system is being researched. The answer will become the world's 8th wonder.

The newer model computers have a program called dictionary. It works — most of the time. But for unexplained logic, the dictionary can give you an incorrect spelling for the accurate one.

One of the strangest computer tales had to do with the sanitation department in Fayetteville, N.C.

The department head arrived one morning to discover that switchboard computer records showed hundreds of telephone calls had been placed overnight from two extension phones, most within seconds of each other.

An investigation showed a gobblin' of sorts. A soft drink vending machine had been equipped with a computer to let the local distributor know when it was time for a refill.

The vending machine was calling the soft drink company, but there was no answer overnight. Therefore the untiring computer continued to dial.

In messing with hi-tech, a gremlin is often our only logical explanation.

And speaking of hi-tech, one recent morning we were unable to get a long-distance call to go through. After repeated attempts, we called the telephone company trying to determine the source of the problem.

We were told: "There's a heavy fog this morning. As soon as the sun comes out and burns it away, the phone lines will clear up."

Morales may get challenger

FORT WORTH (AP) — Attorney General Dan Morales may find another Democratic hat thrown into the ring for his job next year.

Morales, a first-term Democrat seeking re-election next year, may have a challenger from his own party, U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reports in Saturday's editions.

Gay Erwin, Morales' campaign manager, said the attorney general has not been informed of Chapman's intentions, but knows that Chapman has contacted potential supporters.

Ms. Erwin said Morales is confident he will be re-elected despite several GOP challengers.

Chapman, an attorney, had been considered a likely Democratic contender for a U.S. Senate race in 1994. But in recent weeks he has made key contacts about the attorney general's office, sources told the Star-Telegram.

Bill Mashek, a Chapman aide in Washington, D.C., declined to comment on reports that Chapman disclosed his intentions to challenge Morales to some key Democrats this week. He will announce his decision next week, Mashek said.

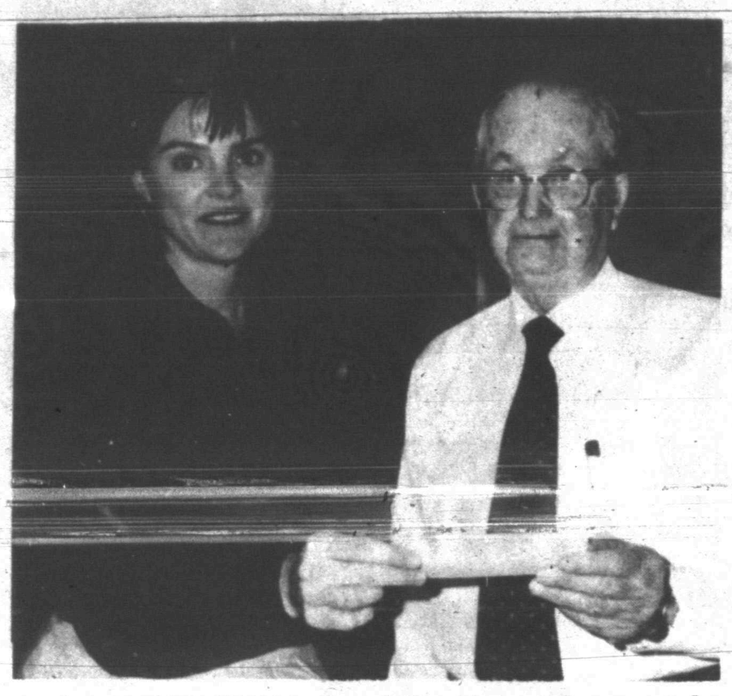

Both parties' primary elections are March 8. Candidates must state their intentions to run by Jan. 3.

AFL-CIO President Joe Gunn confirmed that Chapman had solicited support from his group.

Memorial golf tourney gets more than $3,000

Brenda Burney recently presented American Cancer Society treasurer, H.W. Cargile, with a $3,520.55 check, raised at the annual Steve Burney Memorial Golf Tournament held in honor of Brenda's late husband.

The Oct. 2 event had 33 tee-box sponsors and 96 golfers participated in the 18-hole match.

Mrs. Burney organized the first event last year, and with the help of several friends, established this year's successful golf tournament.

Special events may be accomplished in two ways for ACS — an event such as this requiring no participation of the local ACS board other than as recipient of proceeds or an event sanctioned by the organization which both meets the guidelines set up by the Texas Division of the ACS and utilizes the efforts of the board members.

Both types of special events support the Cancer Society's goal, "to conquer cancer through balanced programs of research, education, patient service and rehabilitation.

Bill killing collider signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — With regrets, President Clinton signed a bill Friday killing the $11 billion superconducting super collider project in Texas, lamenting its death as "a serious loss" to science.

Clinton was forced to accept the termination of the project when a budget-conscious House voted overwhelmingly to abandon the program, which is one-fifth complete with a 14-mile-long underground tunnel and complex of laboratory buildings.

Some $640 million for the project had been included in an energy and water spending bill. Now, that money will be spent to dismantle the massive project.

"This project was an important element of our nation's science program, and its termination is a serious loss for the field of high energy physics," the president said in a written statement. He signed the bill in Boston, where he was campaigning for approval of the North American Free Trade Agreement.

He said he was glad the bill directed the money "for orderly termination so that we can assist the affected workers and communities in Texas and elsewhere."

The project had been a target of congressional budget-cutters for two years. Its estimated price had nearly doubled since 1989.

The program had envisioned a 54-mile oval atomic particle smasher, a high-energy physics project to study subatomic matter.

Bright Spots In Our Hometown!
The Anastacio Alvarez Family

HONORED FAMILY — Members of the Anastacio Alvarez Jr. family are Anthony (in back); Eric Pesina, Alice and Anastacio; and adopted daughter, Jacque (in front.) The family has lived in Snyder for the past 24 years. Not pictured is a married daughter, Anna Marie Molina, who lives in Richardson.

Snyder National Bank's Hometown Spirit Award this month takes a unique twist. Rather than honoring one individual, an entire family is recognized.

"The Amazing Alvarezes" appeared in the November issue of Reader's Digest, one of the publication's regular features entitled "Heroes For Today."

It told about the Anastacio Alvarez family from Loraine. The cotton farmers had the last of their 18 children graduate last May from Loraine High School. When youngest son, Fabian, graduated, he presented his parents 18 roses representing their children. The school principal in turn honored the parents, Anastacio and Lyndia, with honorary degrees from the school.

The oldest child, Anastacio Jr., was the first to graduate. He lives with his own family in Snyder and has carried on the Alvarez tradition of hard work, family values, education, and giving back to the community.

Anastacio Jr. and his wife, Alice, have been married for 25 years and have lived in Snyder 24 years. He is a process operator for the Diamond M Gas Plant, having worked there for 18 years.

Their daughter, Anna Marie Molina, is a graduate of SHS and Texas Tech and works as a bank loan officer in Richardson. A son, Anthony, is also an SHS graduate and is a freshman at Western Texas College. Eric Pesina, who has lived with the Alvarez family since his mother died, is a high school freshman.

Anastacio Jr. and his wife are members of the Oil Patch Foster Parents Association. One foster child, Jacque, now nine, was adopted by the Alvarez family. Currently living with the family are two more children. They have been foster parents for 11 years.

Anastacio Jr. also coaches a soccer team and teaches religious classes at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church where they are members.

As Reader's Digest says, "Every town and city in America has its own examples of courage, kindness and decency."

The Alvarez family members are examples of what makes America great. Snyder is pleased that the Anastacio Alvarez Jr. family has made Snyder their home. By doing so, they have made our community a better place. We salute you!

THE A B C'S OF SALVATION
By Homer Anderson

A) THE GOSPEL IS GOD'S POWER UNTO SALVATION
"For I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God for salvation to every one who believes..." (Romans 1:16). The gospel means "good news" and the three facts of good news for us about our salvation are Christ's death, burial and resurrection (1 Corinthians 15:1-4).
B) TO BE SAVED ONE MUST OBEY THE GOSPEL
"...In flaming fire, rendering vengence to them that know not God, and to them that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus..." (2 Thessalonians 1:7-9).
C) TO OBEY THE GOSPEL IS TO OBEY THE COMMANDS OF THE GOSPEL
•Believe in Jesus as the Son of God (Mark 16:16; John 8:24).
•Repent of sins (Luke 13:3; Acts 2:38; 3:19; 17:30).
•Confess faith in Christ (Matthew 10:32-33; Romans 10:9-10).
•Be united with Christ in baptism for forgiveness of sins in the likeness of His death, burial and resurrection (Acts 2:38; 22:16; Romans 6:3-5; Galations 3:26-27; Col. 2:12; 1 Peter 3:21).

Two WTC organizations set benefit trick-or-treat

Two Western Texas College organizations will join forces Sunday in a special Halloween project slated to benefit Gentle Dove Ministries.

Phi Theta Kappa honor fraternity and members of the Student Senate will trick-or-treat Snyder residents from 5-6:30 p.m. Sunday. But, instead of candy or other sweets they will be accepting canned goods for the local food bank.

All college students participating in this joint venture will wear WTC ID badges. Their cars will be marked as well.

All canned goods collected Sunday will be immediately turned over to Gentle Dove Ministries. Anyone who will not be home Sunday or who is missed during the 90 minute drive is encouraged to take their canned goods directly to Gentle Dove Ministries. A Gentle Dove Ministries representative will be at the building around 6:40 p.m. Sunday to accept canned goods collected by WTC students.

Anyone who is missed Sunday, but unable to bring their canned goods to the local food bank may call the following numbers and request that their canned goods be picked up: 573-4294; 573-4071; 573-5089; or 573-1265.

This WTC food collection drive is a regional project for Phi Theta Kappa.

Board endorses higher standards

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials have agreed to toughen a test that public college students must pass before taking upper-division courses.

The Texas Academic Skills Program exam has been revised to require an academically-oriented essay, rather than a personal narrative.

The math section includes more items, easier addition and subtraction problems have been replaced with those that deal more with algebra.

The state also is phasing in a higher passing standard on the reading and math sections of the test, with the better score required in September 1995.

Between now and then, students who score above the current passing standard but below the higher one will pass but must take remedial courses to improve their skills.

The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board in July gave Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth authority to raise the minimum passing score because of concerns that the test was too easy. The board gave final approval to the changes Friday.

2nd term feared

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russians expect more bloodshed and are deeply pessimistic about prospects for economic reform and democracy, according to a poll made public Friday. A solid majority say they don't think Boris Yeltsin deserves another term as president.

Still, the survey found people backing Yeltsin's decision to dissolve parliament and saying they are more likely to vote for pro-Yeltsin candidates in the December parliamentary elections.

Mikhail Gorbachev, who is talking about challenging Yeltsin in the presidential election next year, remains the most unpopular major politician in Russia. The former Soviet president gets a negative rating from more Russians than the late Soviet dictator Josef Stalin.

Commissioned by U.S. News & World Report, the survey found 50 percent of Russians said they approved of the way Yeltsin was handling his job, and 34 percent said they disapproved.

But when asked whether Yeltsin deserves another term, 61 percent said it was time to give a new person a chance. Twenty-nine percent said he deserves re-election.

The survey was conducted by American pollsters Celinda Lake and Ed Goeas who worked with Vladimir Andreenkov, director of the Institute for Comparative Social Research in Moscow.

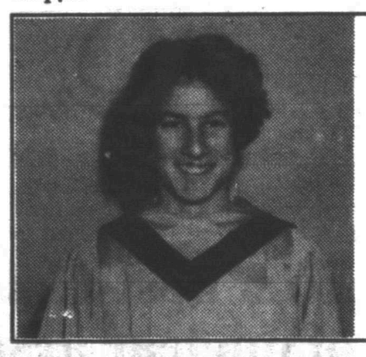

They interviewed 1,000 people 18 years old and older in their homes between Oct. 15 and 21. The survey has a margin of potential error of 3 percent, meaning the figures could be off by that much in either direction.

Fifty percent of the people said Yeltsin did the right thing when he dissolved parliament, while 33 percent said he should not have done it. When asked whom they blamed for the ensuing violence, 50 percent said both sides, 31 percent named the opposition leaders, and only 12 percent blamed Yeltsin.

Sixty-three percent said they think it is very likely or somewhat likely that "other conflicts, bloodshed, and anti-government actions will occur in Moscow or other regions."

The same percentage said they thought such events would affect their lives.

Marshal quits; blames stress

FORT WORTH (AP) — A deputy marshal admits he was rude, but says he was under tremendous stress because of his son's impending execution.

Deputy City Marshal Frank McFarland resigned under pressure Thursday, two days after a loud encounter with residents outside a City Council meeting. He said he was told he'd be fired if he didn't resign.

"I'm not mad at my boss," McFarland said. "I know he didn't have a choice. The decision to put me out was from the highest level of city government."

McFarland said he was under "tremendous stress" Tuesday because his son, death row inmate Frank Basil McFarland, was scheduled to be executed that night.

"My wife and I left (for Huntsville) that night to go witness," he said.

An appeals court issued a stay for the younger McFarland just five minutes before his scheduled lethal injection Wednesday morning. He was sentenced to die for the February 1988 killing of Terri Lynn Hokanson, who was raped, stabbed 43 times and dumped outside a Hurst Church.

The elder McFarland, a six-year veteran of the marshall's office, was one of two security officers on duty for Tuesday's meeting, where a group of residents from the Stop Six neighborhood in east Fort Worth came to press an earlier request for a civilian review of a September police shooting.

McFarland said one of the residents cursed him as he left, so he followed him outside.

"I wanted to get his name. He wouldn't tell me his name. I told him I guess I would see him in Stop Six. That's it."

USDA drops appeal, will issue new meal label requirements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department will issue new regulations requiring safe handling labels for raw meat and poultry rather than appeal a court ruling striking down the old set.

Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy said Friday that pursuing a [illegible] the goal of providing safety information to consumers quickly.

The new regulations will be published next week and consumers could see the mandatory labels by February or March, according to a department official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The scope of the new regulation could not immediately be learned. A federal judge had ruled the earlier requirements were applied too quickly and too broadly.

All uncooked ground or chopped meat sold at supermarkets and other outlets was to have the labels starting Oct. 15. But the day before, U.S. District Judge James Nowlin in Austin, blocked the requirements.

Judge Nowlin agreed with food industry groups that the department had failed to show enough of a food-safety emergency to require labels with just two months' notice.

The department had announced the labeling requirement in mid-August as one of several measures to combat serious and sometimes fatal illnesses linked to pathogens found in uncooked meat.

The labels include pictures and instructions on how to handle, cook, refrigerate and thaw raw meat.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans on Oct. 19 refused to lift Nowlin's injunction. The court scheduled a hearing on the Agriculture Department's appeal for Jan. 3, 1994.

"It's clear that waiting until January to have our case heard and then possibly having to wait several additional months for a final decision is not wise if the ultimate goal is to get safe handling information to consumers as soon as possible," Espy said.

By starting anew, the department will have to publish proposed regulations and allow interested groups from 30 to 90 days to comment. The department would then publish final rules with a deadline for enforcement.

On Aug. 16, the department published an "interim final rule" to be enforced by Oct. 15, although it did technically squeeze in a 30-day comment period.

Judge Nowlin said a January outbreak of food poisoning in the Pacific Northwest that had prompted the safety measures was limited and did not justify a blanket rule for all meat sold to supermarket and restaurant customers.

In that incident, three children died and 500 people became ill after illnesses that were linked to E. coli O157:H7 bacteria. The outbreak was traced to hamburgers served by the Jack in the Box chain.

The Agriculture Department argued that food contamination is more widespread. It cited the death of a Michigan child in the summer from eating an undercooked hamburger at a picnic and of a child in New York who had eaten an undercooked meatball.

Many stores and food processors have begun adding the labels voluntarily.

N. Korea, IAEA agree

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea has notified the International Atomic Energy Agency that inspectors will be allowed to change film and batteries in surveillance cameras at its nuclear facilities, a newspaper said Saturday.

The national Saegye Ilbo newspaper said North Korea notified the Vienna-based IAEA of its decision and that inspectors could begin their week within a week.

The newspaper, which is generally regarded as reliable in matters concerning North Korea, cited an unidentified North Korean official in Vienna. The report could not immediately be independently confirmed.

Hans Blix, director-general of the U.N. watchdog agency, has said unless the film and batteries are replaced promptly, North Korea will have evaded minimal compliance with international nuclear safeguards.

The film and batteries in the surveillance cameras were expected to run out by the end of October. Experts have said a blackout would allow North Korea to remove some of its nuclear wastes from the sensitive facilities.

Despite its denials, communist North Korea is suspected of developing a nuclear arsenal. Intelligence reports claimed the North may have enough weapons-grade plutonium to make at least one nuclear bomb.

EMBLEM OF SACRIFICE — Because the poppy is the emblem of sacrifice by veterans, Mayor Paul Zeck has proclaimed Poppy Day on Nov. 11 and memorial poppies will be distributed for contribution beginning Friday. Poppy Day observerance set

In the spring of 1919, amidst complete devastation, poppies bloomed in abundance on the battlefields of France, where so many men had fallen in battle and thence the poppy was to become the Memorial Flower of the American Legion and its auxiliary.

This became official when the American Legion Auxiliary adopted the red flower as its flower at the organizing convention held in Kansas City, Kan., in October of 1921.

They pledged the profits from the poppy sales to welfare relief for servicemen and women and their families. This fulfilled the true meaning of the poppy, "an emblem of faith, faith which is being kept with all who died through service to the living."

The poppies, made by disabled veterans, are distributed on the streets under the supervision of the American Legion Auxiliary and they ask that the poppies be worn to pay tribute to the men and women who have served their country and their families.

The poppy funds are also used for rehabilitation of veterans, honorably discharged, welfare of families of veterans' families, and to help defray the expenses for administrative costs, provided they are approved by the two organizations.

Local poppy girls are Amanda Bayer, Jessica Stansell and Kimberly Adams.

First post-Cold War review of nuclear arsenal ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Les Aspin ordered the first post-Cold War review of the nation's nuclear weapons arsenal Friday and warned that renegade states or terrorists could threaten America with weapons of mass destruction.

"It is a new nuclear threat we face," Aspin said at a Pentagon press conference.

"The old nuclear danger was thousands of warheads from the Soviet Union. That threat has subsided but the arsenal still exists," Aspin said. "The new nuclear danger stems from the possibility of a handful of weapons in less reliable hands."

The secretary said the goal of the review is to help design a long-term strategy and structure for the nation's nuclear force, and help shape thinking for events that could occur decades from now.

Aspin said, no terrorist groups are known to have nuclear weapons in their possession at this time, but such a development shouldn't be ruled out.

"This is a different animal," Aspin said of the potential for the proliferation of nuclear weaponry.

Aspin said the review should be completed in the spring and that it would take a fresh look at every aspect of nuclear policy.

Financial Focus

"We're spending our children's inheritance!" We've all seen these tongue-in-cheek bumper stickers on the back of Winnebagos headed for exotic destinations. The truth is, however, most parents wish to leave their children something, whether it be money, real estate or even a family business.

If you plan to leave some type of assets to your children or to any other heirs, you might want to consider a trust. Unlike a will, a trust can take effect while you are still living. Simply put, a trust is a form of legal ownership. If you decide to establish a trust, legal title of assets must be transferred from your name to the name of the trust.

Throughout your lifetime, the trust is managed by a trustee. This trustee is anyone you deem appropriate--yourself, your spouse, a close friend, a trusted attorney or a corporate trustee, for example.

Assets that can be placed in a trust include checking and savings accounts, money-market funds, certificates of deposit, stocks, bonds, life insurance, real estate and even private businesses. Depending on the terms of the trust document, these assets can be bought, sold, borrowed against or transferred while in a trust.

Upon your death, legal title of the assets is transferred to your beneficiaries.

The major advantage of a trust over a will is that the trust allows you to avoid the expense, publicity and delay of probate. Probate is the formal, court-supervised distribution of assets to heirs. This process can tie up your estate for six or more months.

A trust with re-registered assets should be used in tandem with a pour-over will to transfer all assets left outside the trust. These two instruments protect and preserve your estate while ensuring that your assets will be distributed exactly as you wish.

There are many types of trusts. Each offers different options and advantages for estate-planning.

One of the most popular types of trusts is the revocable living trust. With a revocable living trust, you retain control of the assets in the trust. Because the trust is revocable, the terms of the trust (beneficiaries, trustee, etc.) can be changed as you desire.

An irrevocable trust, on the other hand, requires that all assets transferred to the trust are for the benefit of another, that is the beneficiary. Once the trust is established, you relinquish all rights to revoke or reclaim assets within the trust.

Trusts are very flexible, offer a variety of options, and can be used in many combinations. Through a trust, you can:

- dictate how the proceeds of your estate will be used (for a grandchild's education, for example);

-ensure that your spouse is provided for but that your children from a previous marriage receive the remaining assets; and

-skip a generaton so that you will not add to the estate burden of your own children.

With all these options, how can you determine which trust is best for you, and, more important, if any trust is well-suited for you?

If your net worth is more than $600,000, you may be a definite trust candidate. (If that sounds like a lot, when figuring your net worth, remember to include the full market value of all your assets, including any investments, the value of your home, insurance policy payouts and retirement or pension plans. You may have a greater net worth than you think.) You should consult with your attorney to discuss the suitability of a trust for you.

Your investment representative can assist your attorney in identifying estate-planning needs that may be met with a trust.

Chief: correct suspect caught

BEAUMONT (AP) — Police Chief Thomas Scofield said Friday investigators believe they have the right suspect in the Sept. 1 slaying of Vidor's last black public housing resident even though no indictment has been filed.

Scofield complained that the investigation into the shooting of Bill Simpson has been waylaid by constant media scrutiny. He also said there are other witnesses to interview before the probe is completed and an indictment is sought.

Simpson, 37, was shot in Beaumont about 12 hours after he moved from a now all-white public housing project in nearby Vidor.

"I think we have the right man in jail and so do the investigators," Scofield said. "We have not filed formal charges because of (assistant attorney general Gary) Bledsoe's interference, the media. It's just caused a lot of problems."

Bledsoe, who is also director of the Texas NAACP, is on paid leave from his state job as investigators try to determine whether he conducted non-government work on state time.

Bledsoe, who had no comment Friday, made several statements shortly after Simpson's death that the shooting may not have been random.

Although Scofield believes police have the right suspect, the case appears to have been hurt by an eyewitness who has recanted her testimony.

Lydia Washington, who was injured in the shooting, had said the shooter was Michael Wayne Victor, 19, who has remained in jail on a separate shooting that occurred hours before Simpson were attacked.

Vampire-killing ritual proof found in early New England

WASHINGTON (AP) — Panicked New Englanders, desperate to end attacks from beyond the grave, once unearthed corpses and performed vampire-killing rituals in a war against the undead. It's a century-old tale of Halloween horror, now confirmed by scientists.

Dr. Paul Sledzik of the National Museum of Health and Medicine said Friday that bodies from 18th and 19th century graves in several locations in New England show evidence that they had been disinterred within a few months or years of death, and then mutilated or disrupted in some way.

Journalists' accounts published as recently as 1893 support the belief that this ghoulish tampering with corpses was prompted by the idea of "killing" the undead to stop them from sucking the life force from the living.

Sledzik participated in analyzing corpses from a cemetery near Griswold, Conn. and found one that clearly bore the sign of vampire killing.

The corpse, found in a coffin bearing the initials "JB," was found in the Walton family cemetery of Griswold, a burial place that had been accidentally violated by a construction project.

Sledzik said when he examined JB, it was clear the remains had been disturbed sometime after the body had turned to a skeleton.

The long bones of the upper leg had been placed on the chest as an 'X' and the skull had been removed and placed on the leg bones.

The effect was to form a skull and crossbones.

In the laboratory, Sledzik determined that the bones bore lesions from tuberculosis. JB also had a hunched and crooked shoulder, from an improperly healed collar bone break, a crippled leg and probably what was an open and festering wound on his foot. The man also had missing front teeth.

"In life, JB could have been a frightening figure," said Sledzik. Memory of this scary appearance could have prompted some to dig him up and to make sure he was dead by removing the skull.

Sledzik said his research shows such beliefs were common in New England as late 1892.

"Published vampire accounts places the folklore within the same time frame and location as JB," said Sledzik. He said other researchers have also reported finding bodies from the era that were mutilated.

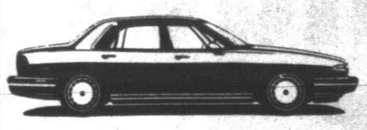

"When someone died of consumption, it was believed they could come back from the dead and drain the life of their living relative," said Sledzik. "In order to stop this, family members would go into the grave and somehow attempt to kill the person again. If there was still flesh, they would remove it and burn it. Or they would remove the head. In the American tradition, just causing some disruption to the body was the way to kill a vampire."

The crude stake-through-the-heart approach, he said, was an archaic European tradition not practiced by the Americans.

Tigers roll past Lamesa, 21-7

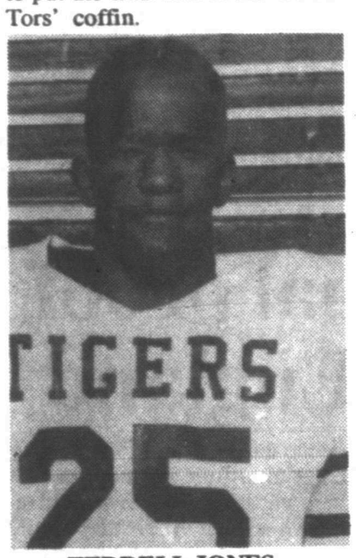

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

LAMESA — One of the biggest plays of the game in Snyder's 21-7 District 2-4A football victory over Lamesa Friday was one that both teams would have liked to have changed.

With Snyder holding a 14-7 lead and just two minutes remaining in the game, Lamesa quarterback Cole Adams one-hopped a fourth-and-two pass to a wide open James Steuart nine yards downfield.

"That was a real big play in the game," said Snyder coach David Baugh. "We gambled on that play and sent a lot of people. If he had completed the pass, he was wide open, he'd have scored. They could have gone ahead of us with a two-point conversion."

As it was, the Tigers used the momentum swing to add a 56-yard touchdown gallop by Terrell Jones to put the final nail in the Golden Tors' coffin.

TERRELL JONES

"I think you've got to give Lamesa a lot of credit," Baugh said after the game. "There are not very many 0-8 teams that would have come out as fired up as they did and play as hard and not give up.

"That's a real credit to coach Yoder and his staff and to his kids."

Friday's game was played in temperatures near the freezing mark and high winds that kept the wind chill factor near zero.

"I don't think the cold bothered us too much," Baugh reported, "but the wind kind of held up a couple of passes we tried to throw."

The Tigers opened the game with an impressive five-play, 47-yard drive, highlighted by a 26-yard pass completion from Matthew Cave to Larry Thompson, and 21 yards on the ground by tailback Jones, including the last five for the score.

The Tornadoes took the ensuing kickoff and kept the ball for almost 10 minutes, but came up empty-handed when Adams missed a 43-yard field goal attempt.

The score stayed at 7-0 until the third frame when Adams broke around the right end and went 27 yards untouched for a game-tying TD.

Snyder regained the lead in the fourth when Cave slipped over from the one, one play after a 63-yard burst by Chris Mitchell on a second-and-13 play.

"That was a big play for us," Baugh said. "We'd lost three yards on first down and Lamesa was getting a little defensive momentum and their offense was ready to get back on the field. That touchdown kind of gave us a little lift."

The Tors next possession started on their own 20 and ended four minutes later with Adams' short toss in the direction of Steuart.

After Jones' long TD dash, Lamesa took one more shot at the end zone, only to have the ball picked off by Thompson.

Jones led the Tiger offense Friday. The senior tailback gathered 110 yards and a pair of TDs on 14 carries. Mitchell added 62 yards on three tries.

Cave completed six of his 14 pass attempts for 74 yards. The senior signal-caller now has 975 yards on the season.

Thompson snagged three tosses for 65 yards.

Lamesa played offense by committee, using six ball carriers against the Tigers.

The Tors' top ground gainer was Ralph Uresti who picked up 62 of Lamesa's 182 rushing yards on 15 carries.

Adams, who started the game at halfback, then went in at QB after starter Robby Trevino hurt an ankle in the second period, completed four of six passes for 99 yards and an interception.

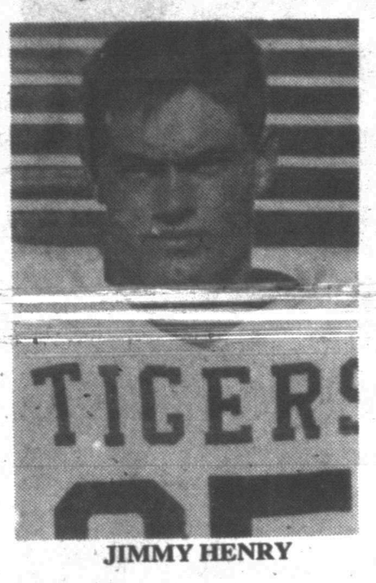

Ray Garcia collected two catches totalling 70 yards for LHS, including a fluke 39-yarder that bounced off a Snyder defender to end the first half.

The game took a scary turn in the second quarter when SHS senior tight end Jimmy Henry went down with a neck injury. Henry was taken from the field on a stretcher and examined at Medical Arts Hospital in Lamesa before being transferred to Methodist Hospital in Lubbock.

A magnetic resonance imaging test revealed a strained neck and he was released.

Friday's win makes Snyder's game against Frenship on Nov. 5 a battle for the loop's remaining playoff slot.

Frenship, a 28-0 winner over Levelland Friday, carries a 3-1 dsstict mark into its showdown at Tiger Stadium. Snyder, after Friday's win, is 5-4 on the season and

JIMMY HENRY

2-2 in 2-4A encounters.

A Snyder win by six points or more puts the Tigers into the playoffs. A loss, or a win by fewer than six points, and Frenship is the runner-up entry in post-season play.

"It's a heck of a tribute to these guys playing that we're in the hunt for a playoff spot," Baugh said. "After all the injuries we've had, sending out patchwork lineups and people doing a lot of things during a game, it really says something about these guys."

Blocked PAT kick lifts Ira past Trent

TRENT — Cole Sterling rushed for 51 yards, including a 35-yard touchdown, and collected a pair of TD pass receptions, but his biggest play of the game may have been his block of a fourth-quarter Trent PAT kick as Ira held off the Gorillas, 27-26, in a District 6 six-man football matchup Friday.

Trent scored 20 points in the final period, including a 30-yard scoring pass from Mark Payne to David Sanford with no time remaining on the clock, before Sterling's block sealed the win for the Bulldogs.

Scott Strong hit Sterling with a 24-yard toss for a touchdown in the first period and Sterling made it 12-0 at halftime with a 35-yard run on an end-around in the second quarter.

The Bulldogs moved to an 18-0 lead when Strong and Sterling combined on a 13-yard connection, capping a 76-yard drive.

COLE STERLING

Payne threw for three more TDs before Ira's Coy Henderson threw an option pass to Strong for 20 yards and Ira's final TD. Center Lee Haddox caught the one-point conversion pass from Strong that made the difference in the final tally.

The Bulldogs are now 2-7 on the year and 2-2 in District 6 games. Trent is winless in nine starts.

Ira will host Loraine, which claimed the loop title with Friday's 66-36 win over Borden County, in the Nov. 5 season finale.

HERMLEIGH — Toby Harbuck rushed for three touchdowns and added an interception return for a score as Highland dropped Hermleigh, 46-0, in District 6 six-man football action Friday.

Derek Malone chipped in a Hornet touchdown on a 43-yard run. The game was called at halftime on the 45-point rule.

The win lifts Highland to 7-2 on the season and 3-1 in district play.

The Cardinals fall to 1-8 overall and 0-4 against loop foes.

Hermleigh will host Trent in the season's final game Friday, while Highland visits Borden County with the runner-up spot in the district on the line.

Loraine grabs title with 66-36 victory

LORAINE — The Loraine Bulldogs claimed the 1993 District 6 six-man football title Friday with a convincing 66-36 win over Borden County.

Loraine's offensive eruption was led by Cory Woeddell, who scored eight times, including runs of 2, 21, 27 and 40 yards, and recovered a BCHS fumble in the end zone.

Borden County's Cody Cox gave the Coyotes a short-lived 8-0 advantage in the first with a 4-yard rush. He added scoring jaunts of 4, 3 and 3 yards, and teammate Kurt Hess raced 57 yards for a touchdown.

The loss drops Borden County to 4-5 on the year and 3-1 in loop games. The Coyotes must beat Highland, a 46-0 winner over Hermleigh on Friday, in the season finale to make the playoffs as the district runner-up.

Loraine, which visits Ira on Nov. 5, boasts a 6-3 overall mark and a 4-0 record within the league.

O'Brien to lead Eagles against 'Pokes Sunday

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ken O'Brien hasn't been around long enough to get caught up in the heated rivalry between the Philadelphia Eagles and the Dallas Cowboys.

O'Brien joined the Eagles on Oct. 5, just two days after quarterback Randall Cunningham went down with a broken leg. He was signed as a free agent to back up Bubby Brister, the backup to Cunningham.

Then Brister severely twisted an ankle and presto — O'Brien, who had been sitting by the telephone waiting for an NFL team to call, was the Eagles' starting quarterback.

He said playing Dallas was just another football game.

"But considering what's on the line, if you can't get fired up for the Cowboys or anybody, you're not worth your salt," O'Brien said.

"They are playing real well and everybody expects them to go back to the Super Bowl. We'll let it all hang out and see what happens.

"We'll come out ready to play. It's a big game," said O'Brien, even though the Cowboys are double digit favorites over the injury-riddled Eagles.

"I couldn't care less what anybody thinks," O'Brien said when told the Eagles were 11-point underdogs. "It's what I think that's important. I don't put any credence in that stuff (point spread)."

O'Brien said he wasn't thinking in terms of showing people that he's still good enough to be a starting quarterback in the NFL.

"My approach is to show the guys on this team that I can play and help them out. That's the bottom line. I know that I can play. I know what I can do. It's great to get the opportunity."

Shula seeks record against Chiefs

by The Associated Press

Joe Montana professes to have a great deal of respect for Don Shula, whose special day he hopes to ruin.

"If there's a greater coach in the NFL, it's hard to find," Montana said of Shula. "Somebody would have to pull him out of the grave and bring him back."

Admiration aside, Montana and the Kansas City Chiefs will try Sunday to prevent Shula from matching the late George Halas' league record of 324 victories. But even more important is the position the Chiefs would put themselves in with a victory over Shula's Miami Dolphins.

At 5-1, the two teams are among the elite in the AFC, and could wind up as playoff opponents. If so, the winner of the game at Joe Robbie Stadium would have a better chance of hosting a postseason meeting with the loser.

"This game means a lot because we're at a pretty pivotal point in the season," Dolphins defensive end Jeff Cross said. "They're probably the toughest team we have on our schedule."

Of interest is the Dolphins' standing as the only team never to experience a regular-season defeat at the hands of Montana. He did beat them in the 1985 Super Bowl, however.

Elsewhere Sunday, it will be Chicago at Green Bay, New England at Indianapolis, Tampa Bay at Atlanta, the New York Jets at the New York Giants, Dallas at Philadelphia, New Orleans at Phoenix, San Diego at the Los Angeles Raiders, the Los Angeles Rams at San Francisco, Seattle at Denver and Detroit at Minnesota. Washington visits Buffalo on Monday night.

Cincinnati, Cleveland, Houston and Pittsburgh have the week off.

The Chiefs have a four-game winning streak and are off to their best start since 1971, when they last won the AFC West. Their defense has allowed only seven touchdowns in six games.

How they'll fare against the unknown — in this case backup quarterback Scott Mitchell — remains to be seen. Shula has a history of winning even without the likes of Dan Marino.

Shula is 26-7 at Miami when he starts a backup quarterback. Mitchell produced a six-year high in points for the Dolphins in a 41-27 victory last Sunday over Indianapolis.

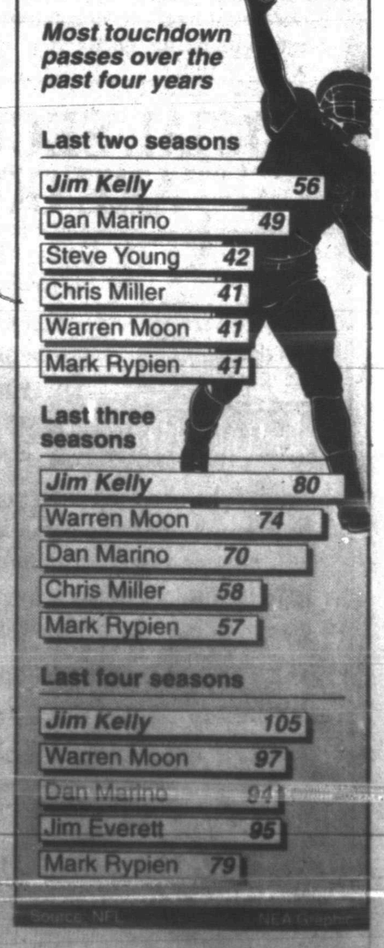

"I was watching the film, and I thought it was Marino left-handed," Montana said. "I thought the film was in backwards. He has the same drop and antics and throws the ball almost like him."

In the other key game Sunday, Minnesota will try to wrest the NFC Central lead from Detroit. Considering the presence of NFL rushing leader Barry Sanders in the Lions' backfield, the Vikings probably aren't thinking about winning the game on the ground.

But rookie Robert Smith has given Minnesota hope of doing just that. A week ago, he gained 80 yards on 14 carries — one of them a dazzling 26-yard touchdown run — in a 19-12 victory over Chicago.

The Lions enter the game at Minnesota with a 5-2 record. The Vikings are 4-2.

WTC to challenge Huntsville course in SHSU tourney

Coach Milton Ham knows his Western Texas College golf team will get some good experience at this weekend's Sam Houston State University Invitational tournament.

For one thing, they'll be playing one of the most challenging courses in this part of the country — Water Woods Resort and Country Club in Huntsville.

"It's a real tough golf course. It would be like playing Midland College's home course. It's a hard one to play. It could be the hardest course we play this season."

Ham's Westerners, along with the rest of the tournament field, will shoot a practice round Sunday, then will play 36 holes Monday before winding up the tourney with a final round Tuesday.

Western Texas is coming off a third-place finish at the 36-hole Midland College Invitational a week ago.

WTC shot a 295 in the opening round, then trimmed six shots for a 289 in the second trip around the Green Tree Country Club course for a 584 total.

"We did pretty well," reported Ham. "We shot better the second round than we did in the first round, and that's a first for us this year, so that's promising.

"Six shots may not sound like a big improvement, but we jumped over a lot of teams to finish third.

"We're improving every time out," Ham said. "I'm trying to play a lot of people, get them used to competing, so we can really be a good experienced golf team during the spring when we play our conference matches."

Chris Rogers, Jimmy Flores and Cory Stone each turned in 146s to lead Western Texas in Midland.

Rogers, a sophomore from Sweetwater, registered a pair of 73s, while Flores, a Sanderson sophomore, and Pampa's Cory Stone each contributed a 74 and a 72.

The Westerners will wind up their fall slate with an appearance at the Nov. 7-9 New Mexico Junior College Invitational at Hobbs Country Club.

Season starts Thursday...

Jones, Dusters set for season

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

Coach Ron Jones feels like his second season at the helm of the Western Texas College Lady Dusters' basketball program will be better because of what he learned during the rookie campaign in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

"I learned a lot last year," Jones, whose squad opens its season Thursday with a 7:30 p.m. home tilt against Ranger JC, said. "The biggest thing I learned was about the type of defense it takes to play in this conference.

"When I coached in high school, my teams never got people in foul trouble. We played solid defense and as aggressive as high school rules would allow.

"College is a different game.

"We're working to pick up the tempo, to increase the intensity and aggressiveness of our defense."

The Lady Dusters finished sixth in the WJCAC last year with a 15-15 record.

They are picked fifth in the coaches' preseason poll, a prediction that Jones does not share.

"I really think we have the potential to win the conference," he said. "Somewhere along the way we have to figure out we can do it.

"A lot of your success depends on how the season starts. If you lose a few games early that you shouldn't, then your confidence suffers. But, if you play well and win some of those early close games, then your confidence is going to grow.

"There's no comparison between this year's team and last year's team," the coach said. "That's not a slight toward the players from last season. I think we're working really hard and I feel like we're going to accomplish a lot.

"I'm really happy with the girls' intensity, their attitudes and the team's work ethic. I don't know that I've ever had a team that worked this hard.

"We're bigger, we're faster, we have better athletes, better shooters, we're just a better team."

Jones says that his optimism springs from an improved defense.

"That's always the key to being a good team and contending," Jones said. "You're not going to be good offensively every night, but if you're good defensively every night, you have a chance to win.

"We'll be doing some things defensively that we couldn't do last year," the coach continued. "we'll be doing more traps, putting more pressure on the ball, we'll be doing, basically, the same things, but we'll be doing them better.

"That type of defense should set up our offensive break."

Returning sophomore Karyn Gabriel of Houston and Lampasas freshman Tammy Wilson are tabbed as the early favorites for the point guard position, while Carri Moss, who can also fill in at the point, Plainview standout Ericka Thompson and Kasey Bowers of Pampa will play at the off guard.

Forwards for the 1993-94 Lady Dusters include Shrae Johnson, a sophomore transfer student from Guthrie, Okla., returning sophomore LaMeshia Roland of Enid, Okla., and Christy Cates from Mesquite.

WESTERN TEXAS COLLEGE

The Dusters will boast their best depth in several seasons at the post spot with 5-11 Windthorst star Stephanie Veitenheimer, 6-1 Leigh Ann Riley, a freshman from Mart, Austin freshman Kim Keepers, a 6-3 talent, and returnee Paulita Murrell, a 6-0 center from Oklahoma City.

"We'll have a lot of people competing for playing time because we're so deep," Jones said. "The talent level of the whole team is up a lot from last year. Paulita (Murrell) is back from last year's team, and she's improved a lot, but she might be the only one from that team that could start on this team.

"We're that much improved, and there's not that much difference in our second-line players."

Jones' first impressions of the upcoming WJCAC race see it as a close one.

"There's no dominating team," he said. "Last year Howard dominated everybody, but I don't see a team doing that this year.

"I really believe that if we stay healthy and continue to develop, we've got a chance to compete for the conference title.

"Howard is a little bigger than we are, but not much. I think their strength will be inside. New Mexico looks real similar to their team from last year. Odessa is smaller, maybe quicker, but not as strong in their fundamentals.

"South Plains has a couple of big girls," the coach said. "But it's hard to tell where they are.

"Howard lost two great guards, and that's going to be something they have to overcome.

"It should be a good conference race."

The preseason poll picks SPC to claim the crown, followed by Howard, Odessa, NMJC, WTC and Frank Phillips College.

Jones hopes his Dusters can get off to a quick start this season.

"I think that'll have a big bearing on our season," he said. "If we play well in the first semester, I think we'll finish higher in the conference.

"We should do well," he reiterated. "We have better people doing the shooting, better people getting down the floor faster, and more talent.

"I'm excited about it. It's going to be fun."

Oilers try to put controversy behind them during off week

HOUSTON (AP) — No one can be certain, but the disaster-prone Houston Oilers may be running low on controversy.

Warren Moon is back at quarterback, although still uncertain of his status; the offense and defense have stopped fighting each other and David Williams is trying to become known as a football player again instead of the nation's best-known father.

After a preseason of bitter contract wars, a three-game losing streak, divisiveness between Buddy Ryan's defense and Kevin Gilbride's offense, the Oilers spent their off-week promoting the healing process.

Togetherness is making a stand.

"I'm seeing a lot more guys trying to pull together," defensive end William Fuller said. "We started this year more divided than in the past. We had the situation with Buddy coming in and defending the defense.

"There were a lot of sparring sessions in training camp. We knew we were a team but we just had problems when one side or the other didn't pull its load."

Fuller and running back Spencer Tillman helped start the healing at half time of last Sunday's game against Cincinnati. The Oilers trailed 9-7 at the half against the winless Bengals who had led at the half in only one other game all season.

"I went over to the offensive side of the lockerroom and said 'hey, let's all get it going,'" Fuller said. "Spencer came over to the defensive side and did the same thing. It was just a good feeling.

"How much effect it will have the rest of the season remains to be seen but it's a start."

The string of controversy started in preseason.

Defensive tackle Ray Childress, wide receiver Ernest Givins and running back Lorenzo White had contract disputes. Ryan's well-publicized disdain of the run-and-shoot brought on enmity between offensive and defensive players.

More recently, the three-game losing streak brought coach Jack Pardee's job into jeopardy; Moon was benched for part of one game because of ineffectiveness and wide receiver Haywood Jeffires got into a sidelines shouting matchwith Gilbride at New England.

Williams created a national furor by skipping the Oilers' Oct. 17 game against New England to remain in Houston with his wife and newborn son.

The Oilers withheld Williams' $111,111 weekly paycheck. They said he could have made it to the game after his son was born.

Despite a Thursday night taped appearance on Eye to Eye with Connie Chung, Williams wants to be anonymous again.

"I think we've turned the corner but we can continue to grow," Gilbride said. "We aren't where we needed to be offensively. We just needed to win to prove we still could. I think that will lead to more wins down the road."

Moon, replaced by Cody Carlson prior to the New England game, returned to lead the Oilers to victory against the Patriots and was named AFC player of the week following the Oilers 28-12 victory over Cincinnati on Oct. 24.

Still, he feels insecure.

"I know I'm the starting quarterback now, but what happens when Cody (Carlson) is ready to play," Moon said. "I just don't know where I stand."

Pardee says he'll put out that fire too. "He completed 70 percent of his passes last week, that should be a pretty good indication," Pardee said. "I guess I'll talk to him. I didn't know it was that big a deal."

The flames of controversy have dimmed and that is a concern to defensive end Sean Jones.

"If we think we've turned the corner just because we won two games, we're in trouble," Jones said. "Every time we say that we fall apart."

Houston, Dallas notch NBA exhibition wins

DALLAS (AP) — Houston Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon and Dallas Mavericks guard Jim Jackson appeared in mid-season form Friday night, leading their teams to exhibition victories.

Jackson scored 22 points as the Mavericks earned their first preseason victory, 91-75, over the Los Angeles Clippers in Dallas.

And Olajuwon scored four of his 29 points in the final two minutes of overtime, and finished with 17 rebounds to lead the Rockets to a 117-116 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Jackson scored 10 points to help Dallas to a 30-14 lead after one quarter.

Dallas (1-4) got 15 points and nine rebounds from rookie center Darren Morningstar, who took another step in his longshot bid to survive the final cut.

Rookie Harold Ellis led the Clippers (5-2) with 11 points.

Lafayette Lever and rookie Jamal Mashburn added 11 points each for Dallas.

Dallas led 50-37 at halftime behind Morningstar's 13 points.

Los Angeles cut the deficit to 58-54 on Ellis' 14-foot jumper late in the third quarter. But the Mavericks built the lead back to 74-61 early in the fourth quarter on consecutive baskets by Mashburn.

Detroit scored five of the first six points in overtime, but Olajuwon led the Rockets' resurgence. His jumper gave them a 115-113 lead with 1:38 left.

Kenny Smith added two free throws before a 3-pointer by Detroit's Joe Dumars — who scored 27 of his 35 points after the start of the fourth period — accounted for the final points.

Houston (4-3) led 55-50 at halftime, but Isiah Thomas led a comeback that gave Detroit (1-7) a 69-68 lead with 4:05 left in the third quarter. A 9-3 spurt put Houston back in front.

The score was 79-75 after three periods, but Dumars was seven for seven in the first seven minutes of the fourth.

Dumars finally missed a shot, then hit two more in a row to give Detroit a 104-101 lead with 1:45 left. He sent the game to overtime with an off-balance jumper in the final seconds after Mario Elie — who had 18 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter and the overtime — put the Rockets back in the lead.

Vernon Maxwell added 22 points for Houston.

Pete Maravich made 1,387 field goals during his basketball career at LSU, setting an NCAA record.

Doug Grayson of Kent State made 16 consecutive field goals in a 1967 basketball game against North Carolina, a record.

EL PASO (AP) — The Chamber of Horrors haunted house has a purpose beyond the obvious when it puts its visitors through hell.

"We really want people to be scared. We want them to see hell," said Frank Luna, associate pastor for The Door Christian Fellowship Church, which operates the haunted house where patrons see morality plays and are urged to become born-again Christians.

Inside the house — located at the same place where the group holds services — an 11-foot black-hooded figure representing death guides people through several rooms, where volunteers put on short skits focusing on transgressions that could land a sinner in hell, church members say.

The skits, most of which are dominated by bloody body parts, include "Lester the Molester," who commits suicide because he sexually abused his nephew.

There's also an unborn baby who comes to life to kill the mother who aborted her, and a boy who returns from the dead to kill a friend who caused his death while driving drunk.

"We're the best haunted house because we're not just a bunch of pumpkins and goblins and ghosts. We show you the reality of life and the consequences of it," said church member Angel Ortiz.

The last scene depicts hell, complete with loud screams and corpses grabbing at visitors.

The tour ends with a church member meeting visitors in a well-lighted room and telling them to repent and join the Lord.

Director of collider asks to be replaced

DALLAS (AP) — The director of the super collider laboratory asked to be replaced Friday, two days after Congress officially killed the embattled program.

"I came to ... Texas to build the super collider and that is no longer possible," Roy F. Schwitters wrote in a letter to Universities Research Association, the nonprofit consortium of universities building the giant atom smasher.

Also Friday, President Clinton signed into law the $22 billion energy and water development appropriations bill that spells out the collider's termination plan.

Psychiatry convention eyes plight of Holocaust survivors

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — They were the hidden children, a small number who survived the Holocaust often living as Christians while families who sheltered them as Jews were being killed.

Today, many continue to struggle with anger, confusion and self-loathing as they try to come to terms with their experiences, said speakers at the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry annual meeting.

The convention is being held in San Antonio through Sunday.

"Liberation for children was not liberating," said Dr. Robert Krell, professor of child psychiatry at the University of British Columbia. "Parents did not return for them. Some waited for years until hope, too, had died. The youngest children did not know their names, country of origin, or even their first language. The older ones faced untold hardships."

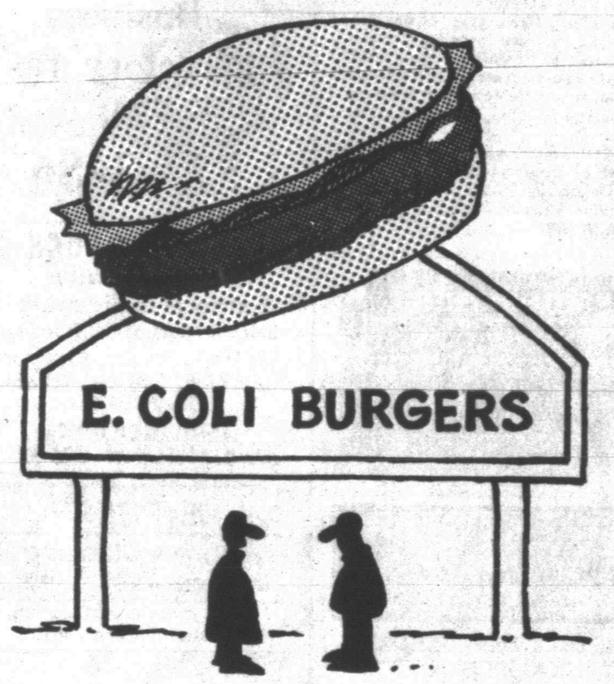

Krell, himself a Holocaust survivor who now works with other survivors, was part of a panel discussion on the subject Thursday.

"Most children who survived emerged from hiding places — attics and cellars, caves and forests, convents and monasteries, and homes ranging from huts to castles," said Krell.

Krell said the psychiatric profession has yet to fully explore the trauma suffered by Holocaust survivors. In addition, he said, the profession shoulders some of the blame for the wholesale destruction.

In 1939, psychiatrists in Germany planned and then helped carry out the systematic extermination of the mentally ill, including children, he said.

010 LEGAL NOTICES

CONSTRUCTION PERMIT
EXAMPLE A

TO ALL interested persons and parties: You are hereby notified that REEF CHEMICAL CO., INC. has applied for Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC) Permit No. 22778. This permit, if approved, will authorize operation of an Oil Field Chemicals Blending Facility in Snyder, Scurry County, Texas. The location of the existing facility is 1600 Ave. Q. This facility will emit the following air contaminants: chemicals from the handling of surfactants, corrosion inhibitors, biocides, inorganic salts, water treatment agents, solvents, acids and bases. Examples include methanol, isopropanol, toluene, xylenes and acetic acid.

A copy of all materials in the public file is available for inspection and reproduction at the TNRCC Abilene Regional Office located in the Commerce Plaza Office Building, 1290 South Willis, Suite 205, Abilene, Texas 79605, telephone (915) 698-9674, and at the TNRCC Central Office, 12124 Park 35 Circle, Austin, Texas 78753, telephone (512) 908-1000. The facility's compliance file, if any exists, is available for public review in the regional office of the TNRCC. Inquiries about the permit application should be directed to the TNRCC Office of Air Quality Permits Section in Austin or the TNRCC Abilene Regional Office.

You may submit written comments concerning the permit application to the TNRCC Executive Director in Austin. All written comments received within 30 days after the second publication of this notice shall be considered by the Executive Director in determining whether to issue or not issue the permit. All written comments will be made available for public inspection at the TNRCC Central Office in Austin. This notice is to be published on Friday October 29, and Sunday October 31, 1993.

Any person who may be affected by emissions of air contaminants from the proposed facility may request the Commission to hold an informal public meeting and/or contested case hearing on the permit application pursuant to Section 382.056 (d) of the Texas Health and Safety Code. The Commission is not required to hold a contested case hearing if the basis of a request is determined to be unreasonable. All requests for a contested case hearing must be received in writing within the 30-day comment period regardless of whether an informal public meeting has been held or scheduled on this matter.

Before a permit can be issued for this facility, the applicant must demonstrate that all emission sources are in compliance with all TNRCC air quality Rules and Regulations and all applicable Federal Regulations. This includes the application of "best available control technology" to each new or modified emission source and compliance with all ambient air quality standards.

Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted. These sweet and encouraging words from Jesus were manifested to us through all the beautiful flowers, cards, prayers and kind words we received during the home going celebration of our mother. We believe that those who died in Christ will forever be with the Lord. From the bottom of our hearts we thank you. We will forever keep you in our prayers.
God Bless You,

Supreme Court opens way for Pentagon policy on gays

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is allowing the Pentagon to remove open homosexuals from active duty while appealing a court's ban on discrimination against homosexuals.

On Friday, the justices granted the Clinton administration's emergency request to temporarily [illegible] judge's order barring military discrimination against homosexuals.

For now, the judge's order will apply only to a sailor who challenged the Pentagon policy. The government's appeal of the order will go forward.

"I'm very pleased that the Supreme Court has stayed the ruling ... and limited its effect to a single individual," Defense Secretary Les Aspin said in a statement. "We hope to have in place soon the new U.S. policy on homosexuality in the military, which focuses on conduct rather than status."

Government lawyers argued that U.S. District Judge Terry Hatter Jr. of Los Angeles lacked the authority to issue a nationwide ban.

In response to Hatter's order on Sept. 30, the Pentagon instructed units to stop barring homosexuals.

Friday's Supreme Court order, issued without comment or dissent, means the Pentagon can return to an interim policy in which recruits are not asked about the subject but military personnel who declare their homosexuality are transferred to reserve status.

President Clinton's similar "don't ask, don't tell" policy is awaiting action in Congress. House and Senate versions say recruits and active duty service members would no longer be asked about their orientation, but the legislation leaves open the possibility that a future defense secretary could reinstate the question.

Congressional negotiators are expected to complete a final version of the defense budget containing the provision next week, with a vote by the House and Senate no later than Thanksgiving.

Clinton said during his presidential campaign that he wanted to lift the military's ban on homosexuals, but he backed off in January in the face of strong opposition from military leaders and lawmakers.

The Pentagon will wait until Congress acts before sending commanders in the field instructions about how the new policy should be implemented.

Hatter had declared in an earlier decision that the Pentagon's longtime ban on homosexuals in the military was unconstitutional. In broadening that ruling in September, the judge barred the Pentagon from denying enlistment or promotion, or changing someone's enlistment status or duty assignment because of sexual orientation.

Hatter's rulings were in response to a lawsuit filed by Navy Petty Officer Keith Meinhold, who was discharged in August 1992 after disclosing his homosexuality on national television. Hatter ordered him reinstated.

The government appealed, but the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco refused to delay the ruling's enforcement during the appeal. The appellate court is to hear arguments in the case in December.

In seeking the emergency order, the Justice Department said Hatter "seriously erred" in his analysis of Meinhold's challenge.

Solicitor General Drew Days also contended that because Meinhold did not file the lawsuit as a class action, Hatter did not have the authority to issue an order affecting anyone else.

The Pentagon filed its request with Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who handles emergency matters from the 9th Circuit court. She referred the matter to the full Supreme Court.

The case is Department of Defense vs. Meinhold, A-373.

Japanese rethinking ban on rice imports

KAWAGUCHI, Japan (AP) — The conventional wisdom holds that any Japanese prime minister who lifts the taboo against rice imports will soon find himself out of a job.

For housewife Yasuyo Horiuchi and many other Japanese, it's no longer important if rice is grown at home or abroad.

"It's simply a question of taste. If rice tastes good, then there's no problem," said the thirtyish Horiuchi on a recent trip to a supermarket in this suburb just north of Tokyo.

"We're selling cars and electronic products to other countries, so it seems natural for them to sell us rice if that's something they can make well."

That kind of thinking used to be considered radical, if not downright unpatriotic.

Now the mighty farm lobby is losing its campaign to keep Japan self-sufficient in the crop that has been its staple for 2,000 years.

And depending on quality, Japanese rice costs between $1.75 to $2.60 per pound. The same variety of short-grained, sticky rice costs between 48 cents and 95 cents per pound in the United States.

After the worst harvest since World War II, Japan has decided on emergency imports of 200,000 tons of rice and experts say it will have to import at least 1 million tons more.

Japanese officials insist that the special arrangement is a one-time measure, despite heavy international pressure on Tokyo to lift its rice import ban. The officials also deny widespread reports, confirmed by U.S. officials, that the government is ready to gradually replace the ban with hefty tariffs.

Regardless of efforts to keep Japan's public posture unchanged, a change is under way in the countryside, the legislative chambers and the kitchens.

The conservative Liberal Democrats have been ousted by a coalition of parties, several of which claim strong backing from urban voters.

In July's parliamentary election, Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa's Japan New Party swept to easy victory in crowded Tokyo suburbs like Kawaguchi, while losing badly in rural districts.

Hosokawa's political fortunes today hang almost entirely on urban voters, who make up around 65 percent of the population.

The average Japanese family of four pays an extra $650 a year to support a system in which the government guarantees to buy rice from farmers at a price far above world levels. That high price is passed on to consumers.

"People who say rice is too expensive are worshippers of money who measure a thing's value only by what it can be exchanged for. They suffer from a kind of sickness," wrote author Hisashi Inoue in a recent newspaper editorial.

Demographic changes are further accelerating the long-term trend toward opening the rice market. Japan today has fewer than one-fourth the full-time farmers it did in 1960, and the population of big-city suburbs continues to rise rapidly while population elsewhere stagnates or declines.

Museum dedication held

BOSTON (AP) — The "young man from Hope," whose life changed after shaking President Kennedy's hand in the Rose Garden, helped dedicate a remodeled museum at the JFK Library aimed at inspiring another generation of young people.

"What we owe John Kennedy today at this museum is to make the museum come alive not only in our memories but in our actions," President Clinton said Friday, flanked by Kennedy relatives including Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, daughter Caroline, 35, and John Jr., 32.

The museum is aimed at those too young to remember JFK, assassinated 30 years ago on Nov. 22.

cilities, youth corrections facilities, and mental health and mental retardation institutions.

This, proponents say, would give non-violent offenders a greater chance for rehabilitation and keep more violent offenders off the streets. Opponents argue that too much money has already been spent building prison facilities when state officials should be targeting the root causes of crime.

Proposition 12 would authorize a judge to deny bail to a person on probation who is accused of certain violent or sexual offenses.

Two other propositions are seen by supporters as being good for overall Texas economic growth. They are Propostion 2, property tax exemption for certain pollution control devices, and Proposition 16, $75 million in additional bonds for agricultural business loans.

Voting will be held from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Tuesday at four locations in the county. Registered voters residing in Precinct 1 will vote on the north side of the county coliseum; those residing in Precinct 2 will vote at Scurry County Library; those residing in Precinct 3 will vote at Towle Park Barn; and those residing in Precinct 4 will vote at the south side of the coliseum.

The participants will view a short video, then break up into groups of eight to 10 to make suggestions. Those suggestions will then be discussed by the group. These will then be compiled and sent to the Texas Education Agency.

TEA will review and analyze the comments and prepare a summary for the State Panel on Student and Skills and Knowledge and the Committee on Student Learning. The panel and committee will then review the information and make recommendations to the State Board of Education in the spring of 1994.

Anyone interested in participating in the program is asked to call the Snyder ISD Business Administration Building at 573-5401.

Violence against abortion clinics to be investigated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration, while affirming the right of anti-abortion activists to protest, says it is giving serious attention to complaints that abortion clinics are the target of violence.

Attorney General Janet Reno met with women's rights groups Friday to assure them their allegations will be investigated thoroughly, said the groups and Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern.

Stern also said Reno later told some abortion foes — at a separate meeting — that their legitimate right to protest publicly would not be jeopardized.

But Reno refused to meet with other anti-abortion activists because they have violated court orders or are involved in legal matters in which the government is an adversary, said Stern. They had wanted to attend the second session.

The women's rights groups told reporters they were reassured by their meeting with Reno and also heartened that she declined to meet with what they called extremist anti-abortion forces.

"It's a step in the right direction," said Pamela Maraldo of Planned Parenthood. "We're going to monitor the situation very closely."

Maraldo said Reno "was visibly upset" when participants in the first meeting described attacks on abortion clinics and doctors. As a sign of good faith, Maraldo said, Reno gave the groups her home phone number and told them they could call her there to check on the progress of the investigation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Agreements won't stand the test of time if they are not negotiated fairly today. Make sure you don't give up more than you should nor take advantage of the other guy. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to be helpful to others today, but don't take on more responsibilities than you can manage. If you get overloaded, it won't be good for them or you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone you recently treated quite generously might not treat you in the same manner today. There's justification for your ire, but don't make it a big deal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There is an easy way to do things and there is a hard way to do things. Unfortunately today you might use procedures and methods that are the most difficult while overlooking the expeditious.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There's a possibility you might reject some valuable information today just because you do not like the source. This could be a situation where you cut off your nose to spite your face.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Whether doing business on a minor or major scale today, be more cautious and watchful than usual. What is spoken could be as important as what is put in writing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your mate's ideas might be more numerous than yours today, but this does not necessarily make them more superior. Analyze them individually, not as a group.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be very careful today you do not furnish others with instructions on how to do things about which you know little or nothing. If you do, you could make trouble for them and yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be optimistic regarding today's developments, but don't be unrealistic. Disappointment is possible if your evaluations are based on wishful thinking instead of facts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Wanting things can provide the motivation necessary to acquire them. Today, however, there's a chance you may want something for the wrong reasons and not be happy if you succeed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you are unduly critical of others today don't be surprised if they start pointing out your flaws. You won't be happy with what they say and they won't be happy with you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Personal funds should not be mixed with other funds today, especially if you're involved in a joint venture. It could create serious bookkeeping problems.

Your Birthday

Monday, Nov. 1, 1993

Your entrepreneural inclinations could be very strong in the year ahead and your chart indicates you might take a flyer on an enterprise you originate. Its possibilities for success look good.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're likely to do better today transforming your original ideas than you will do by taking the ideas of others and trying to revise them. Major changes are ahead for Scorpio in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph. c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163 Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to stay in control of things today, but do so without focusing attention on yourself. You'll function best as the power behind the throne.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Several friends who haven't been too friendly or cooperative lately could undergo a complete revision of their attitude beginning today. This may occur unbeknownst to one another.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This could be a day of rather outstanding achievements for you, yet your route to success might not follow the course you originally outline for yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone has recently given you some very valuable information, yet you might not know its true worth. Today its value might begin to dawn on you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A joint venture in which you're presently involved is feasible, but it will require bold measures from both parties in order to succeed. Neither should turn back once committed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you feel your work performance warrants it, this is a good day to talk with an authority figure about additional benefits. Base your presentation on your record.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're both resourceful and practical today where your work or career is concerned. This is a winning combination and it will arouse enthusiasm in co-workers to also do their best.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do not underestimate yourself today regarding what you have to offer. If you have to take a gamble on your talents and abilities, do so.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's important today that you and your mate are in accord where critical issues are concerned. Where harmony prevails, successful results are likely.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Courage on your behalf will be required in order for you to succeed at this time. You may have to completely revise some of your methods and procedures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You continue to be in a rather promising cycle regarding situations that could spell personal gain. Your probabilities for being able to add to your resources are quite high.

Dr. Gott By Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 24-year-old female with moderate acne. I've tried all oral and topical antibiotics possible, and the ninth dermatologist in line wants to use Accutane treatment. I'm reluctant to go ahead this time and would like your comments.

DEAR READER: Acne can be a challenging problem for dermatologists, as well as a real source of embarrassment and frustration for patients. From your description, I'd say that Accutane is the appropriate next step in controlling your skin condition.

Accutane (isotretinoin) is related to vitamin A. It is very effective therapy for acne. There are, of course, some potential side effects, including increased pressure in the brain, abdominal pain and diarrhea, decreased night vision, cataracts, elevated blood fats, liver damage, and fetal harm in pregnant women. Thus, if you choose to take Accutane, you must have periodic blood tests and examinations, and not get pregnant.

Nonetheless, the risks are small, compared to the potential benefits. You must consider all these risks and benefits in the process of coming to a conclusion about the drug. This is the sort of analysis every patient should undertake before deciding to take any medicine. I'm sure your dermatologist will provide additional information and will support you in choosing how to proceed.

To give you more information on medications in general, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Consumer Tips on Medicines." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from hydranitis, and my most recent bout has put my patience at an all-time low. The infection appears to tunnel under my skin and before one completely heals, another appears near it. Surgeons have lanced the mounds when the pain and pressure is so severe I can no longer tolerate it. I've received numerous antibiotics for control, but my doctors can't give me any answers as to why the condition won't clear completely.

DEAR READER: You appear to be suffering from periodic, deep infections of the sweat glands. The reason for this is not known, but some people are especially susceptible to the effects of bacteria that work their way from the skin into the pores, causing painful abscesses that usually require antibiotic therapy and/or surgical drainage.

You may be able to reduce the severity and frequency of these infections by using a soap (such as Dial or phiso-Hex) that kills germs on the skin. Ask your doctor about this and, if necessary, see a dermatologist.

I don't envy the positions enjoyed by pharmaceutical company representatives. In general, they are young, well-educated, dedicated, and enthusiastic purveyors of information. Their job is to travel to practitioners' offices and encourage physicians to prescribe certain drugs that are made by individual manufacturers. They also hand out gifts, provide free samples and generally try to stroke the doctors who practice in their territories. They work hard and live by demanding schedules.

Physicians hate them.

More precisely, doctors have a love/hate relation with them. You see, practitioners adore the perquisites: ball-point pens, sticky pads, little gizmos, and the occasional free meal that is part of a seminar. On the other hand, doctors despise being bothered by a sales pitch.

Health practitioners pride themselves on being busy. When the office becomes hectic, they get crazy. When the office isn't busy — and the receptionist does her nails while the doctor thumbs through outdated issues of People magazine — they get crazier. And they whine in either case. For political reasons (to avoid going home an hour early and facing the kids), doctors have adopted the posture that they are ALWAYS busy, whether they are or not. This gives them the excuse to 1) complain constantly about being overworked and 2) do what they darn well please when they want to, as, for example, catching a much-needed set of tennis or just hanging around dreaming of that new divorcee with the great legs.

Thus, when the physician scans his empty parking lot and glimpses the telltale metallic turquoise Pontiac of the manufacturer's rep, he goes ballistic and screams to his secretary that he is too tied up filling out Medicare forms to be bothered meeting with another of those hateful detail men (or women), as they are familiarly known in the business.

Consequently, the poor rep — who has had a gruesome day merely trying to gain admittance to doctors' consulting rooms and has already logged 800 miles on the leased car this week — must deal with yet another officious secretary, leave the prerequisite $120 worth of antibiotic pills and tranquilizers, and escape in the car without so much as a thank you.

Because doctors have become so adept at avoiding manufacturers' reps, the drug companies have set their teeth and become just as creative by hiring gorgeous beauty queens as detail women. I'll tell you, these women would brighten up any office — and they're smart, too. What doctor would refuse a five-minute spiel from a sweet-smelling knockout who fawns all over him? Nonetheless, a surprising number do rebuff these creatures. This is where a sense of humor is so necessary.

Manufacturers' reps seldom have the opportunity to even the score. Therefore, it was with great delight that I learned of the following true transaction, which recently occurred between a rep and one of my colleagues, a doctor who rarely sat still while spelling job.

On this particular day, the detail woman had miraculously gained entrance to the doctor's inner sanctum. She was explaining the usefulness of a nose spray that contained cortisone. "The product is excellent for allergic symptoms," she said. "Oh," he responded, half-listening. "And what's more," she coolly continued, "it's great for hemorrhoids, too." He sat up, suddenly interested and inquisitive. "Yep,", she insisted, "you simply insert it and give a couple of squirts." This made perfect sense to him: Cortisone is good for hemorrhoids; what a breakthrough. "Well," he brightened," leave me some samples and I'll try it out."

He'd been had. The product was not appropriate for this use and she knew it. But she wanted to tweak him good. She almost exploded with laughter as she left the office. Other doctors soon informed him of his error later, but he has been good-natured about the kidding from the rest of us. For my part, I'm ecstatic to learn of another example of divine justice. Manufacturers' reps take heart.

Woman seeks to protect possible diaries' mention

WASHINGTON (AP) — A woman who says she may be mentioned in Sen. Bob Packwood's diaries wants the Senate Ethics Committee to back off its subpoena for the journals until her privacy can be assured, her lawyer said Friday.

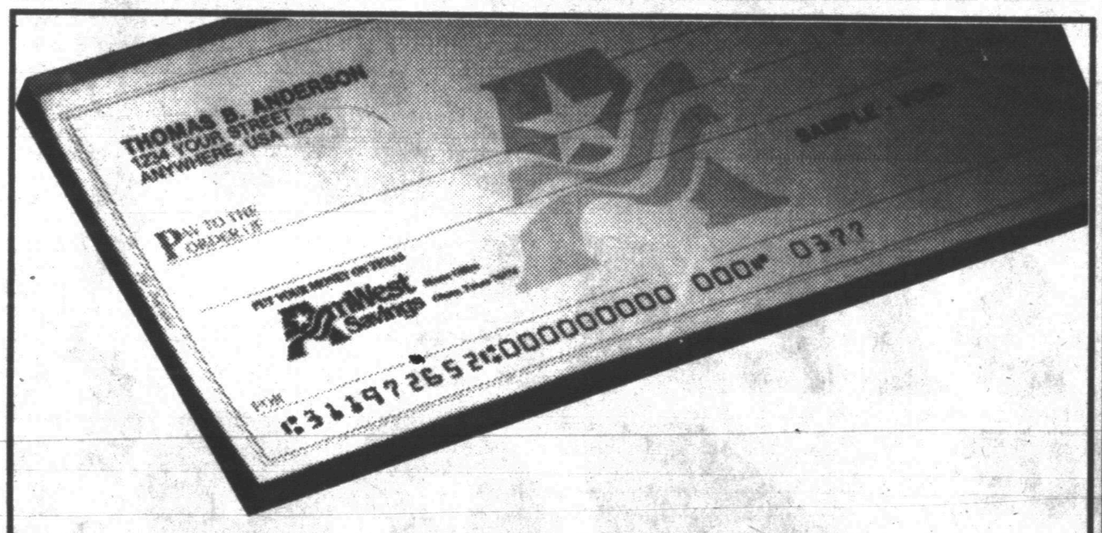

"Production of these personal diaries and the material both private and irrelevant might cause irreparable damage to the reputation of my client and others similarly situated," Mark B. Sandground, an attorney in Vienna, Va., said in a letter to the panel.

The woman, identified only as "Mrs. Jane Doe," wants the Senate to postpone Monday's scheduled vote on whether to seek a court order forcing Packwood to turn over the diaries.

She has nothing to do with sexual misconduct charges leveled against the Oregon Republican senator, "but has reason to believe she will be named in the diaries if they are ever made public," Sandground said in an interview.

Colonial Hill, Brazil churches work together

Canadas together in Brazil

Britt, Shannon share experience

A Snyder teen-ager took a cultural step backwards but a giant step forward in perception, understanding and compassion last summer when she shared her personal evangelism with people living in the slums of Brazil.

Shannon Canada's two weeks as a missionary is one she says she will never forget. She, her father, Britt Canada, and eight other people from Colonial Hill Baptist Church were in Brazil from July 22 through Aug. 4. Their missionary evangelism work was arranged through the church's Partnership Missions program.

Shannon, a senior at Snyder High School, was the only youth to participate. Britt said they were told that she is also the youngest to participate in this missionary program.

All together, there were 16 people in their group, including other Baptist volunteers. They broke up into five teams and worked in five different areas, sharing their personal testimony with the people who lived in the Barra Monsa slums where the group spent most of its time.

Since neither the Canadas nor other members of their group speak Portuguese, they had to work with their interpreters on a one-on-one basis.

It took a while for them to become accustomed to this method of communicating, but after a few days, Britt said they each developed a "rhythm for working together."

In fact, they got so used to speaking and then pausing for the interpreter that Shannon said she caught herself doing that at church after they returned home.

They preached at services at Baptist churches in Brazil where Shannon delivered her first message. They also visited people in their homes.

One of the missions they worked at was a former Somba House or dance hall. Whenever they invited anyone to the services, they all knew where it was, Canada said.

Britt said they tried to conduct two visitations in the morning, three in the afternoon and two at night, sharing messages from the Gospel and Tracts.

En route to Rio de Janeiro during the latter part of their stay, Britt said they stopped in Valencia where he had been stationed the previous summer. "I enjoyed being able to visit with some of the

McCathern leads 4th mission trip

Glenn McCathern, minister of education at Colonial Hill Baptist Church, lives in Snyder, but his heart is in Brazil.

No stranger to missionary work in the South American country, he coordinated his fourth mission group, which was in Brazil from the third week in July to the first week in August. His wife, Jan, was also a member of the Colonial Hill mission group.

Previously, he had participated in missionary trips to Brazil — each two weeks in length — in April of 1991, October of 1991, and July of 1992.

Colonial Hill Baptist Church plans a special 15th anniversary service Sunday evening to honor Glenn and his family. It begins at 7 p.m. during the regular worship service. Fellowship will follow. Special presentations will include a scrapbook, containing notes from Colonial Hill members.

He hopes to return next summer and "every chance I can get," he said.

Working with an interpreter, Glenn goes door to door, sharing his personal testimony. It has been a fullfilling and heart warming experience for the longtime Baptist, who has worked at Colonial Hill for 15 years. Prior to that, he held the same job at First Baptist Church for four years.

The benefits that Glenn gets from working so closely with the people in Brazil are many. Besides "helping bring people to the Lord," he has also acquired four Brazilian "daughters" who have become very close to him and his family — his wife, Jan, and sons Levi and Kurtis.

When his "daughters" write to him, he said, they address him as "daddy" in Portuguese. These girls all have fathers, but have become acquainted with Glenn through his missionary work. He said he had "the privilege of leading one to Christ and was in her home the day she accepted Christ." Since then, Anna has coordinated Colonial Hill's missionary work in Brazil for the past two years. Return trips to Brazil give him a chance to visit these four young women who are a special part of his ministry.

During four trips to Brazil, Glenn has worked with three different churches in that country. Last summer's group worked with 12 churches in the area.

Glenn said a training session with the Brazilians who will accompany them on their visits always begins each summer's session.

people I met then," he said.

This was Britt's second missionary trip to Brazil. Shannon's dad's experience is why she wanted to participate. Their time together in Brazil has drawn them closer together. Father and daughter are both eager to return next summer.

Though the Canadas don't speak Portuguese fluently, they [illegible] some Portuguese with a Texas accent," they said.

They also learned a few Brazilian customs. For instance, a "thumbs up" means everything is okay, the same as it does in the U.S.

In the Barra Monsa slums where they did most of their evangelism, Britt said cars were a rarity. No telephones or other modern conveniences could be found. These Brazilians live in "shelter-like" homes — often with dirt floors. Yet, Shannon said she was deeply moved by the Brazilians who "welcomed us with open arms and open hearts, sharing what they had with us."

The experience has prompted the local teen-ager to reconsider the things "we think we need to be happy, but really don't."

Her first experience with personal evangelism was difficult, but she definitely wants to continue what she started.

She describes her experience as "eye opening." She was completely won over by the Brazilians she worked with. To them, church is not a "social thing."

"They go because they want to be with God," she said.

The Brazilians have a very high rate of inflation, Britt said. In Rio de Janeiro, some 3 million children live on the streets. Roads are so bad where they were that shocks and brakes wear out continually and motorists rely on honking. Pedestrians do not have the right-of-way, even on the sidewalks.

The group's lodgings in Volta Redonda were located across from [illegible] duced 11 tons of pollution a day, Britt said. The country is virtually without any environmental protection.

The Colonial Hill group's missionary trip was coordinated by Glenn McCathern, education minister.

Others from Colonial Hill were Jene Steakley, Jan McCathern, Bill Harris, Alliebeth Beauchamp, Nova Greenlee, Jim Palmer and Evelyn Fletcher.

Their missionary work was arranged through the partnership agreement which the local church has with the Baptist Convention in Brazil. The partnership began nearly three years ago and will ex- [illegible] arranged through the Baptist General Convention of Texas Partnership Mission Office. Bryant host to Penwomen

Scurry County Penwomen met recently in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Bryant in Ira to hear Janelle Burk's program and announce achievements.

In Burk's program on Imagery, she said imagery is a figurative language and the poet expresses her thoughts and feelings in a vivid or graphic representation or description. "Something to represent something else that strikingly resembles or suggests," she said. The similies as and like are a form of imagery," she said.

Personification is a form of imagery by giving objects the trait of a person. An example, she said, is "Let's get out of this raging storm.

In the reading session, members read their own work which was critiqued. Bryant began with "Little Fiddler;" and Bertha Warren read "The Wall," and a poem found in her mother's Bible entitled "The Tiny Rose God Picked to Blossom in Heaven," by Jean Davidson.

Next Burk read her poems, "Images of War," and "Alone." Garnet Quiett read a short religious item and her poem, "Mockingbird in October."

Christine Killgo read "Do Not Judge," and "Be Strong and Prevail," from a devotional book by Leroy Brownlow.

Burk presided over the meeting and Killgo gave the invocation. Warren gave the words of encouragement and Quiett won the hostess gift.

Warren will host the Nov. 17 meeting with the place to be announced later.

Lace socks soften the gray flannels

By The Associated Press

There's more than one way to dress a leg. Now that pants are so popular, trouser socks are an expressive alternative to knee-highs and pantyhose.

They come in a variety of styles, from delicate lace to hefty argyles, and a variety of prices in the $5 to $10 range. And while they don't take kindly to harsh detergents and hot water, they don't run.

"Trouser socks are the fastest-trending category," says Howard Hyde, vice president of worldwide marketing and sales at Pennaco Hosiery. Hughes says the company, which makes legwear for Givenchy and Anne Klein, has seen socks sales double in the past year.

"With all the menswear-looking shoes, there's tremendous interest in trouser socks, especially in menswear-inspired glen plaid, herringbone, ribbing and cable," says Kathryn Cordes, speaking for Hanes. Hanes makes its own line of hosiery as well those licensed by Donna Karan, DKNY and Liz Claiborne.

Barbara Guzy has a similar notion.

"Trouser socks are one of the most important stories in legwear this season," says Guzy, spokesman for Anne Klein hosiery. "It's no longer like five years ago, when many women wouldn't be caught dead at work in pants."

She suggests softening a pants suit with socks made of lace.

"They have a gutsiness to them," she says.

Anne Klein's lace socks come in 10 colors and retail for about $6.50 per pair.

Sam Houston was elected president of the Republic of Texas in 1836.

When the visits begin, he said, they try to make as many as eight a day.

To the Snyder man, developing a personal relationship with the Brazilian people is "the most exciting work I have ever done." Getting involved with the lives of the people he visits "is the greatest work of all."

Glenn has visited Brazilian homes with a single occupant or as many as 25. Each home is different. He enjoys his evangelistic work so much because it gives him the opportunity to relate to the people of Brazil on a "one to one" basis.

He not only likes the people, but he enjoys learning about their historical background. He said he loves interpersonal relationship and is "fascinated by the Portuguese language."

Glenn said, "As Americans we were always treated with the utmost of respect. In fact, most of the Brazilians want to come to the U.S.

"They are a very warm and friendly people. I haven't met anyone in Brazil who was not open and friendly," he said.

Missionary work in Brazil has reinforced Glenn's belief that "God can accomplish whatever he desires." He has been overwhelmed at times "when impossible things happen."

For each visit, Glenn shares his personal evangelism. If the person accepts Christ, he always goes back a second time to ask if they have any questions.

This past trip, one of his visits was to a woman named Carla. On his last day there he returned and she had a touching question to ask him, "What is this peace I have in my heart?"

Besides Brazil, Glenn has also taken part in missionary work in the Philippines and Hong Kong. He has also visited Tokyo, but not as a missionary.

In 1983, he was also a member of the annual archeological excavation of the ancient biblical city of Timnah in Israel. This opportunity was arranged through the Southwest Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth.

He attended evening lectures given by Israeli archeologists who explained how Timnah fits into the historical times of the land. The site is located halfway between Jerusalem and Televiv.

He also worked at the excavation site, using tiny ice picks and brushes to uncover delicate bits of archeological evidence. This ongoing excavation is conducted for a month each summer, Glenn said.

While there they found pottery, a spear point and some domestic tools.

So far, Israel is Glenn's first and only archeological experience. He joined that project in 1983 because he was and still is very interested in archeology.

In 1985, he and Jan traveled to the Philippines where he taught classes at the Baptist seminary in Davoa City for two weeks.

A native of Pampa, Glenn earned a bachelor of science in biology from Stephen F. Austin University. He later obtained his master's from the Southwestern Seminary in Fort Worth.

The McCathern's son, Levi, is a lawyer in Dallas and Kurtis is a senior at Snyder High School. They moved to Snyder from Arkansas in 1974.

IN ISRAEL — Glenn McCathern participated in an archeological dig in Israel during the summer of 1983. He helped with the ongoing excavation of Timnah. (Contributed Photo)

Pasta, sauce guide

By MARY MacVEAN
AP Food Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If Giuliano Hazan eats pasta with a sauce that doesn't fit, "it jars right away."

For most of us, getting any dinner at all on the table is the goal, and we might not be tasting our food with such a critical palate. And Hazan has an advantage most of us can never hope to match: He grew up in the kitchen of Marcella Hazan, perhaps the most respected of Italian cookbook writers and cooking teachers.

Even so, he says, we can teach ourselves the ways of pasta.

At the age of 3, Hazan ate his first "adult" pasta, handmade tortellini stuffed with ricotta cheese and Swiss chard. "Without ever coming up for air, he put away a portion that might have strained the capacity of a full-grown man, and as he finished, he fell instantly asleep," Marcella Hazan writes in the foreword to her son's book, "The Classic Pasta Cookbook" (Dorling Kindersley, $24.95).

He was hooked, and still eats pasta three or four times a week. By the age of 17, he was assisting his mother at her School of Classic Italian Cooking in Bologna, Italy. And food has become his profession, as well.

In "The Classic Pasta Cookbook," Hazan provides a textbook of pasta shapes and uses, along with 100 recipes for authentic Italian pasta dishes, from spaghetti with seafood to the more daring fettuccine with dried figs.

Particularly useful is the catalog of pastas, with color photographs and descriptions and the step-by-step instructions for making pasta at home.

It may seem that there are too many choices, but, says Hazan, once the home cook has grown accustomed to the proper matching of pasta and sauce, the choices will be obvious.

"Certain pastas cling to certain sauces," Hazan said from his home in Portland, Ore. Use the wrong pasta, "and you end up eating pasta and then you have to take a forkful of sauce. It doesn't work."

But this matchmaking is tough to explain, he writes. "It is not a question of mere authenticity, but of attaining the best complement of flavor and texture."

One question a cook can ask when considering pasta shapes, he says, is "will it grab the sauce?"

Pasta has been sold as an ideal fast food, and, more recently, as a healthy, high-carbohydrate one.

Geography contest

ATLANTA (AP) — American Express has announced its fifth annual geography contest. The contest is divided into two categories, for students in grades 6 to 8 and for students in grades 9 to 12. Deadline for entries is Feb. 28, 1994.

Two first-place teams in each category will receive $7,500 in American Express travelers checks each. Two second-place winning teams in each category will receive $5,000 each; two third-place winning teams in each category will receive $2,500 each; and the teacher-sponsor of each winning team will receive $1,000.

Student entrants pose a question related to the environment, trade and travel or cultural diversity, and then examine and draw a conclusion in a written project report. The contest has been developed in conjunction with and endorsed by the Association of American Geographers.

All secondary school students nationwide enrolled in an accredited public, private, parochial or home school may enter as individuals or as a team of any size, according to American Express.

For information, write to: American Express Geography Competition, Box 672227, Marietta, Ga. 30067-0038.

Booklet highlights black history, guide

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A booklet that highlights black historical sites in Tennessee is giving people new lessons in black history, said the guide's creator.

"We felt if they (tourists) came to see the National Civil Rights Museum ... people would want to see things that laid the foundation for the museum," said Marshall L. Johnson.

The advertising executive suggested the idea for "The Roots of Tennessee: An African-American Guide" to the Tennessee Department of Tourist Development, where a similar project was being planned.

Tourist officials turned their information over to his company, which then compiled the 31-page booklet. "This was not a winning (moneymaking) effort for us. But it filled a need and educated people in my office who worked on it, including me," said Johnson.

The brochure features the late author Alex Haley on the cover.

The brochure also lists state parks and welcome centers, famous blacks from Tennessee and special events and celebrations throughout the state.

Free brochures may be obtained from the Tennessee Dept. of Tourist Development, 615-741-2158.

Are six trumps better than eight?

Here is another deal from the 1963 European Championships in Baden-Baden, West Germany. This time the opposing forces were from Belgium and the Netherlands.

The Dutch had a sensible auction to the reasonable contract of six hearts. However, the declarer, sitting North, misplayed the hand. He won the first trick with the spade ace over West's king. Now he cashed the heart king and led a heart to dummy's ace. He couldn't recover. But if he had started with the K-Q of hearts from hand, he would have been all right. I must leave the analysis to the reader.

When the Belgians were North-South, the auction was bizarre — to put it mildly. Opposite a passed partner, East decided to psych one heart. Then South made an unbelievable five-diamond bid. Maybe he meant to say two diamonds, but five slipped out.

West attacked with the heart jack, of course. South won in hand and led his diamond three.

To West, this was a very strange play. Why didn't South lead a high trump? Or cross to the spade ace and discard losers on the top hearts? Not working out the answers to these questions, West went in with the diamond 10 and switched to a sneaky spade eight.

Having little option, declarer finessed dummy's queen, played a trump to his ace and cashed the king. When the queen and jack dropped, declarer drew West's final trump, the six, with his eight and claimed 11 tricks: two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and three clubs.

As declarer probably said, "Incroyable."

Dotts, McNew marry

Cathy Ann Dotts of Lubbock and Jerry Carl McNew Jr. of Snyder were married at 3 p.m. on Aug. 14 in the chapel of the First Baptist Church. The Rev. Steve Highfield, associate pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are William and Mary Dotts of Marshalltown, Iowa, and parents of the bridegroom are Jerry and Johnnie McNew of Snyder.

Background for the wedding party was a pair of [illegible] brass candelabra, holding votive cups and tapers, flanking the couple's unity candle on a table covered with a lace cloth.

White bows, with pearls and teal and fuchsia roses entwined in them, decorated the church pews.

Lea Ann Bell and Stephanie Highfield were candlelighters.

Barbara Hefernan of Baytown sang "Love Can Build a Bridge," and Bill Hodges sang "If Tomorrow Never Comes." Karomy Drum was pianist.

The bride, wearing a traditional white satin gown by Bonny, was presented in marriage by her father. Her jeweled neckline, accented with scrolled appliques and large teardrop shaped pearls, complemented the fitted bodice of appliqued lace decorated with pearls and iridescent sequins.

Her basque waistline was also adorned with sequins and pearls. The bodice back was adorned with a long row of satin covered buttons. Her full, peek-a-boo sleeves of pillowed satin with sheer inserts and lace appliques, extended to the wrists.

Her full skirt had a large floral applique. A candy box bow attached the back waistline above rows of pillowed ruffles, ruching and lace cut-out appliques, falling to the end of the cathedral train.

The bridal bouquet of silk cascading white and teal roses contained fuchsia and teal delphenium lilies. It was adorned with fuchsia and green statice, pearls, sequins, baby's breath and lace, all tied with teal and white streamers.

In keeping with tradition, the bride wore a gold and diamond ring belonging to the groom's great-grandmother; something borrowed was the groom's mother's gold bracelet; something new was the bride's dress; and something blue was her garter.

Maid of honor was Kim Talley of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Bridesmaids were Lisa McNew of Lubbock and Kammie McNew of Dallas, sisters of the groom, and Kim Davidson of Hobbs, N.M.

Flower girl was Kelby Drum of Fluvanna and ring bearer was Wayne Thamez, carrying a satin heart-trimmed pillow in fuchsia and teal.

Bridesmaids' fuchsia dresses with short, puffed peek-a-boo sleeves, were accented by a candy box bow. They wore matching shoes and carried short cascading bouquets, matching the bride's.

Best man was Jerry McNew Sr., father of the groom, and groomsmen were Craig Watkins of Lubbock, Max Drum of Fluvanna and Mike Kirby of Snyder.

The groom wore a twilight Christian Dior Parisian fulldress gray tuxedo, and a gray vest and tie. A white wing collar and pleated shirt completed his attire.

Male attendants wore matching tuxedoes and shirts and their accessories were fuchsia, diagonal cummerbunds and matching ties.

As the couple exited the church, the bride presented the mother of the groom with a red rose.

A reception was held at Reta's Cake Shop following the ceremony. Appointments of silver and crystal were used on the large serpentine table draped with white satin, floor-length cloth. An overlay, scalloped every 14 inches, was accented with a large fuchsia bow with long streamers.

The bridal bouquet, placed in a white satin vase with a base of pearls and sequins, was the centerpiece on the table that held a silver champagne fountain filled with pink citrus fruit punch. Mixed nuts and mints were served from crystal containers. The couple's names and wedding date were monogrammed on the napkins.

The bride's five-tiered, heart-shaped cakes, were separated with Grecian pillars tied with white satin ribbon and embedded with a white satin rose. Between each layer, a large cascade of fuchsia roses and teal leaves filled the five-inch space. A satellite heart-shaped cake was connected by filigree, 12-inch stairs. Roses and greenery of teal trailed each step. A fountain of teal water, under the base of the center cakes, was encircled with silk greenery.

The groom's table, draped to coordinate with the bride's, was round and held a double-heart shaped carrot cake, completed with a cream cheese frosting decorated with fuchsia roses and pearls. This cake was a gift to the couple from lifelong friends, the Graham family.

Coffee was served from an eight-piece sterling silver service. Nuts, mints and trail mix were served from American Fostoria crystal. A silver candelabrum centered the table.

The bride and groom, along with the wedding party, were seated at a decorated, rectangular table following their receiving guests at the door. The bridesmaids bouquets were placed on this table.

The reception was catered by Reta's Cake Shop.

Amy Hodges attended the registry. Guests signed the book with a teal feathered pin. A picture of the couple, in a heart-shaped frame, centered the table covered with a lace cloth.

Serving at the bride's table were Amy Hodges, Karomy Drum and Valerie Drum. Serving at the groom's table were Lisa McNew, Kammie McNew and Kim Talley of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

The couple were honored with a rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents, at Reta's Cake Shop.

Guests attended from Lubbock, New Deal, Sterling City, Robert Lee, Dallas, Hobbs, N.M, and Cedar Rapids and Marshalltown, Iowa.

This season's leggy look starts with opaque, patterned hosiery

By FRANCINE PARNES
For AP Special Features

Well-dressed legs are getting a kick out of textured, patterned and plush hosiery this fall.

Textures include ribbing, basketweave, mesh, crochet, lace and cable stitching. Patterns range from large florals and paisleys to [illegible] inspired

For a touch of the dandy, there are leggings in jewel-tone velvet. For a weekend in the woods, layer thick socks with rugged tights, thermal leggings or cozy leg warmers. Environmentalists might enjoy vivid foliage colors or earthy naturals with names such as dune, oat and bark.

So take your pick. Just make sure it's opaque.

"I think sheers are predominantly an evening look this season," says Jennifer George, a Seventh Avenue designer. "At night, when you want to be noticed in your short, sexy black dress, there's nothing more attractive than sheer black pantyhose."

Opaque legwear, on the other hand, becomes a legging.

"It makes a tunic into a dress," she says. "It does a lot of camouflaging, and it takes a short skirt or shorts into winter."

All of which means that opaques not only provide a finished look, they add a layer of warmth.

"Based on all the skirt lengths, from the very short to the very long, tights make sense," says Carol Hochman, president of Liz Claiborne accessories.

And Barbara Guzy, fashion merchandising director at Pennaco Hosiery, says women are making sense of tights.

"Women have short skirts in their wardrobes and long skirts in their wardrobes," she says, "and they must think about what they put between their shoes and their hemline."

Pennaco, which owns Round the Clock and makes hosiery under license from Givenchy and [illegible], says you can't go

"Whether you wear your skirts short or long, we're finding texture has a place," she says. "As granny boots and hiking boots tend to be bottom-heavy, you need an added dimension to balance them. You need some interesting surface texture for your leg, or it'll disappear."

That's where Anne Klein's honeycomb crochet tights come in. In microfiber and Lycra, they're $12 in pearl, chocolate, charcoal, navy and black.

At Hue, "For the first time, we're doing heavier gage tights, nubby tights and beefy cable tights that are more rugged, more like a sweater," says Kathy Moskal, co-president.

At about $20, the sweater nub and cable styles come in a series of neutrals.

"The tights reflect all the interest in sweater dressing and layering," Moskal says. "Those are the two key elements."

One modern way to do the look, she says, is to scrunch a bulky sock or leg warmers over tights with hiking boots, a bulky, wooly sweater, a mini skirt and a scarf.

Hue's leg warmers, a.k.a. footless sweater thights, come in natural and black of 100 percent recycled cotton, about $15.

Hanes, too, celebrates the great outdoors, warming up to the idea of thermals.

Ask Anne & Nan

By Anne B. Adams and Nancy Nash-Cummings

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Years ago I had a recipe for a beer batter that I used for deep-fried fish and also for onion rings. I lost it. I wonder if anyone can help. —MARIAN SHOEMAKER, Somonouk, Ill.

DEAR MARIAN: This is our favorite beer batter, and it's great on everything from fish to zucchini blossoms. It's enough to coat about 2 cups of food.

BEER BATTER

Put in a bowl and mix well:
1-1/3 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon melted butter or cooking oil
2 beaten egg yolks

Add gradually and stir: 3/4 cup flat beer.

Let the batter rest covered in the fridge for 3 to 12 hours. Just before using you can add 2 stiffly beaten egg yokes.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I have a very old velvet-like postcard album with brass-like decorated corners and a goldish bell on the cover. The bell has printing on it, and there is a mirror in the middle of the bell. Inside the front cover is a photo of the Alexander III Bridge, Exposition Universelle de 1900. It has 15 photos inside. There are 18 pages of white heavy cardboard to hold two to three photos. The book is 11-1/2 x 9 x 3 inches thick. Whom could I contact as to its value? —NO NAME, Jamestown, N.D.

DEAR NO NAME: We spoke with a man who specializes in paper ephemera. He said the album, if it's in very good shape, is worth $25 to $50. If the photos are of just folks, they aren't worth much. But if they are of dogs, cats or people doing things, they could be worth quite a bit. He said a photo of a person riding a high-wheel bicycle could be worth $50 to $100.

We think your best bet is to write to the Ephemera Society of America at P.O. Box 37, Schoharie, NY 12157, and ask them who in North Dakota could appraise your album.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: As the owner of a very old duck decoy, I hope you can be of assistance. Do you know of anyone who could establish the correct age, value and origin of my decoy? I am not interested in selling it; however, I want to give it to my grandson and would love to know some history. — GENE BENJAMIN, Baton Rouge, La.

DEAR GENE: You could start your research by going to the library and looking for a book that identifies decoys. Ask the reference librarian to help you. One book that we have read about is the "Collector's Guide to Decoys," by Bob and Sharon Huxford (1990, Collector Books).

Another resource is the National Directory of Decoy Collectors, 1990, Pilgrim Group, P.O. Box 609, Painesville, OH 44077.

STUMPED: BEAN BAG CHAIR PATTERN —Mary Ellen Badeau of Kersy, Pa., is looking for this.

FEEDBACK: ANTIQUE STOVE PARTS — Paul Beam of San Antonio, Texas, kindly sent along another source for these: Macy's Texas Stove Works, 5515 Alameda Road, Houston, TX 77004.

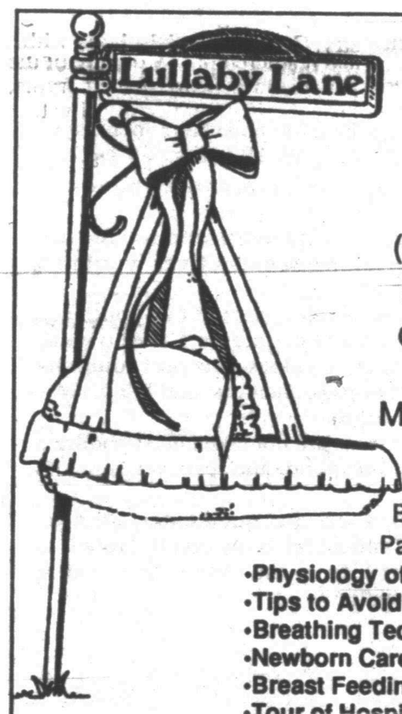

He writes, "You wouldn't believe the prices — they sell these old stoves for $1,500 and up! They even have a reprint of the original use manuals that came with the stoves. They will completely restore the stoves. Most parts are available for a price, and not cheap either."

GETTING BLOOD OUT OF WHITES — Marie Traficanto of Mount Prospect, Ill., writes, "As a nurse of 28 years, I can offer another solution to you for getting blood stains out of clothing and that is the use of hydrogen peroxide."

Letters to the Editor

CROP Walk

Dear Editor:

I wish to thank the Snyder Daily News, and especially Shirley Gorman, for supporting our sixth annual CROP Walk, sponsored by the Scurry County Ministerial Alliance. The walk this past Sunday saw 67 walkers from seven Snyder congregations walk for world hunger.

I thank also all our walkers and those who pledged money for the walk. It's a thrilling sight to see the whole Christian community rise up and support a project that does so much good locally and around the world.

Sincerely,
Tim Griffin,
Pastor,
First Christian Church

Park Village

Dear Editor:

A lot of people in Snyder do not know me. My name is Charles Hill and I own the Park Village Apartments here in Snyder.

Lately it seems that Park Village is in the newspaper a lot due to some problems that some of the tenants are having, but we really appreciate our Snyder Police Department and the prompt responses they make when called to the apartments.

What I am really trying to say is that there is a good side to Park Village Apartments also.

We are here so that good people can have a decent place to live and raise their children and not have to worry about having a roof over their heads.

We also have a lot of senior citizens that have made Park Village their home, and I would not ever want them to be afraid to live in their home. I want to keep this a decent place for everyone to live, old and young.

The majority of our tenants treat this place with respect, and to them I say thank you.

For those who don't treat it with respect we have no choice but to evict! We want this to remain a respectable place to live and cannot allow one bad tenant to ruin it for everyone.

Once again I would like to say thank you to the Snyder Police Department and I and my staff are here to help in anyway that we can.

Thank you,
Charles Hill
Oakland, CA.

Stop means STOP

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in hopes of getting the attention of some local automobile drivers.

The wreck that occurred on Monday, Oct. 25, at the intersection of County Road 466 and FM 465 is one of several wrecks that have occurred at that intersection in the past few years.

County Road 466 runs east and west from the Colorado City highway to Hermleigh and FM 465 travels north and south from U.S. 84 to China Grove. I live one mile south of this intersection and go through it sometimes twice a day. I try to watch for traffic crossing through as I approach the intersection, but the view is obstructed by trees and houses. I would like to ask the people who drive through this intersecton to please, please, STOP at the stop signs.

My neighbors, my family and myself have seen people repeatedly deliberately run these stop signs! I fear for the lives of my family, myself, and those who live in this area and travel these roads.

I have seen the effects of an accident caused by someone running a stop sign and it will be with me and my family for the rest of our lives. As I sat watching the ambulances and emergency vehicles go by I worried if it was a family member or neighbor. Seeing two wrecked automobiles and injured people is a sickening sight, something you don't easily forget.

I realize people occasionally miss a stop sign if they are unaware of it, but to deliberately run a stop sign endangers other people's lives.

Are you willing to be responsible for taking another human being's life? Please think about this each time you come to a stop sign. It only takes a few seconds to stop and look, a few seconds might save a life or a lifetime of grief for some family, possibly your own.

Utility bills

Dear Editor:

Dear City of Snyder Utility Department:

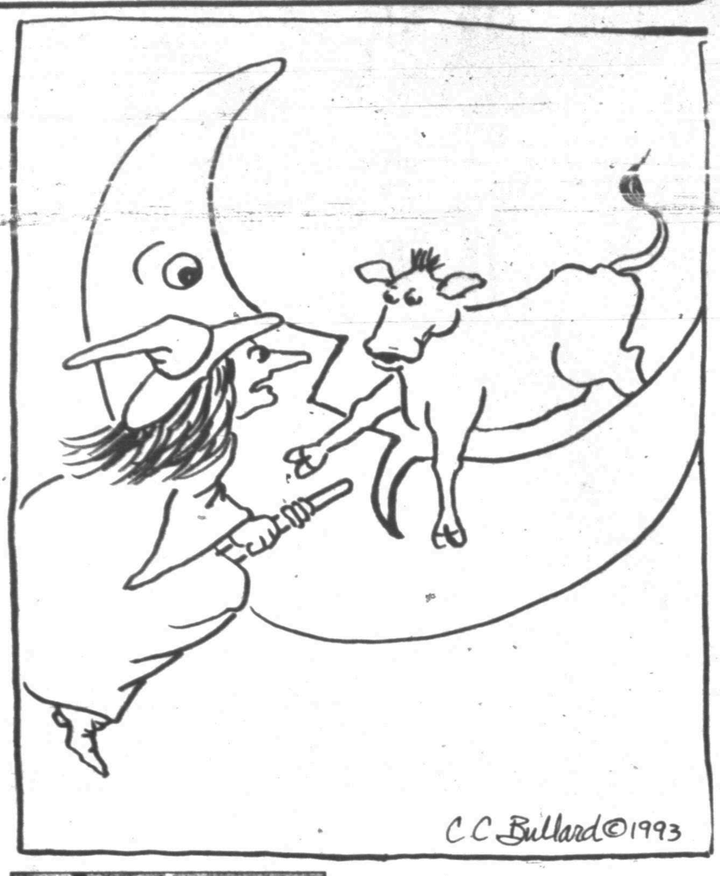

This is to notify all city employees of their choice to request that their names not be passed along to any other municipalities, consumer reporting agencies, or radio talk show hosts, as they join the ranks of the unemployed.

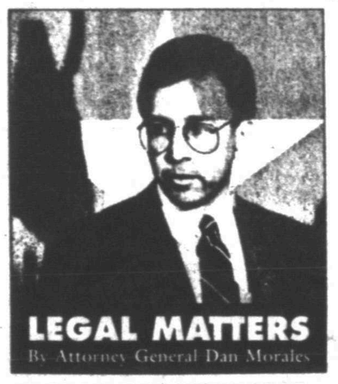

As one of your employers, I am hereby giving notice that unless something is done about the current trippling of utility bills, we will be forced to release all of the names of the city employees to all consumer reporting agencies.

Of course, according to law, you can pay your way out of this reporting process. We are even going to be nice about it and not charge you a penny to keep your names off this list. Isn't that fantastic!

To make sure we do not pass your names along to these agencies, listen to your employers and stop the nonsense now!

Lonnie J. Russell
Snyder, TX

CREDIT REPORTING

Few things are as important to an individual's well-being as a good credit rating. A person's ability to buy a home or car, obtain a loan, or qualify for credit cards usually depends upon a credit check supplied by a consumer reporting agency.

These agencies maintain computerized files on millions of consumers. Although federal law requires that their records be complete and accurate, there is always a chance that error or mistaken identity could mar your record.

AG's office takes action:

The number of complaints pouring into my office in recent years made it clear that some credit reporting agencies were not only failing to provide accurate information, but were slow to investigate and correct errors reported to them. To make sure Texans were not denied credit they deserved, I ordered the Consumer Protection Division to take action.

The Attorney General's office filed lawsuits against three of the nation's largest consumer credit bureaus. Settlements were obtained requiring the companies to make major changes in the way they gather, maintain and report credit information in Texas.

Know your rights:

While we've made significant progress, it's still important that consumers know their rights and protections regarding credit reports. Make it a habit to review your credit report once a year to check for mistakes or data that is more than seven years old (or 10 years if you have declared bankruptcy).

If you've been denied credit:

When a business denies you credit because of your credit report, it must identify the bureau that provided the report. The bureau is then required to tell you about every piece of information they have in your file, and to disclose the name of anyone who has received your credit report in the last six months. If you have been denied credit within the last 30 days, the bureau must provide you with a copy of your credit report free of charge upon request.

If you find a mistake:

Once you've notified the credit bureau of a mistake, they must — at no charge to you — reinvestigate, correct inaccuracies and delete information that is outdated or cannot be verified.

Editorial Roundup

SA Express-News on Yeltsin and press censorship

Russian President Boris Yeltsin apparently has decided that freedom of the press is a luxury his nation cannot now afford.

This is a grave error that could slow Russia's tortured transition to democracy. ...

Yeltsin's heavy-handed censorial actions, so like those of his Communist predecessors, increasingly define his government as despotic.

His failure to recognize the necessary link between a free press and democracy raises serious questions about his commitment to political reform. It also undermines Russia's hope for the future.

Victoria Advocate on government spending

When Vice President Al Gore presented his blueprint for "reinventing government," he received rhetorical support from many members of Congress. But now that the fanfare has faded, it is increasingly likely that little of substance will come from it.

The simple reason for this is heavy resistance in Congress to the proposed reforms. Scores of powerful subcommittee chairmen have a vested interest in business as usual. They have accumulated political capital by creating their own fiefdoms and they aren't about to dismantle now. ...

Congress currently micro-manages federal spending through very detailed line items in the budget. Consequently, government agencies generally have little control over their own expenditures. Which explains why so few of them worry about wasting money — andy why 10 previous reports in this century to streamline government have done little more than gather dust.

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on TV violence

Hollywood right now gets the rap for violence on television — from American homes all the way to Congress — and among the remedies being discussed in Washington are a dose of something akin to censorship.

This would be strong medicine — perhaps too strong. But the TV moguls have only themselves to blame if government places restrictions on the violence level of their shows. ...

It should be obvious by now that Hollywood, which prospers from pandering to the lowest level of television viewers' tastes, cannot truthfully claim that it has no influence whatever on the behavior of TV's "customers." The old argument that media images are not harmful no longer holds up to scrutiny.

If the TV moguls fail to comprehend by now that many Americans are disturbed by society's moral deterioration and the role that films and TV programs may play in that deterioration, then they run the risk that Washington will simply step in and take charge.

That might not be good as far as freedom of expression is concerned. But on TV, that freedom — insofar as it involves the showing of mindless violence — has been abused. The TV people had best tune in to the signals now emanating out of Washington via the public.

El Paso Times on television violence

Complaints about violence on television have been increasing for a generation. And for at least the past 18 years, TV executives have been promising codes or other reforms to do something about it.

Now U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno has entered the debate with a warning that entertainment executives would be foolish to ignore.

"Television violence and the development of our youth are not just another set of public policy problems," Reno said. "They go to the heart of our society's values. The best solutions lie with industry officials, parents and educators, and I don't relish the prospect of government action.

"But if immediate voluntary steps are not taken and deadlines established, government should respond, and respond immediately." ...

People have been saying for years that good entertainment does not require flying bullets and a high body count. Now it is time for the television industry, from the networks to cable broadcasters, to take them seriously.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

I was a Charm School reject.

It's not that my sainted mother didn't try to turn me into a lady. "For God's sake, put your legs together," she'd say upon entering a room where I sprawled, "I don't want to see you sitting spraddle-legged like that again." Or, "If I hear you crack that gum one more time I'll slap you silly."

Finally, in desperation, she entered me in Charm School. (No, I'm not making this up.)

Jackie Kennedy was First Lady then, and everybody (except me, it seems), wanted to be like her. She was the epitome of the true lady, with her soft, cultured voice, her tasteful clothes, her shining hair, here demure, refined ways.

So the Charm School ladies really had their work cut out for them.

The first thing they tried to teach us was how to sit. A lady never, EVER crossed her legs. When seated properly, a real lady sat erect on the edge of the seat, knees together, ankles angled slightly to the side. It was okay, apparently, to cross the ankles, but NEVER the legs. Her hands were supposed to rest quietly in her lap, one hand cupped in the other.

Well, I tried it. Once or twice. You have no idea how uncomfortable it is to sit like that for any length of time. I am in awe of the campaign-trail ladies who sit adoringly for hours in the shadows of their speech-giving spouses, knees together, ankles to the side. Obviously those ladies didn't flunk out of Charm School.

(The thing those teachers — and my mother — never quite figured out is that the difference between me and those campaign ladies was that I wanted to be the one making the speeches.)

Anyway. They tried to teach us how to walk. Again and again we strolled across the room with a book balanced on our heads. The idea, I guess, was that we were supposed to glide, not clump along. I never made it. The book always clunked off about halfway across the floor. The truth is, I felt like a dadgummed Barbie doll. (Not unlike my teachers.)

We learned all kinds of useful information in Charm School. Like, a real lady NEVER smokes or chews gum in public. And if she should be heathen enough to chew gum, she must NEVER crack or smack it loudly. (Which meant, I suppose, that blowing bubbles was out.)

A real lady's laugh should be soft and refined — she must never hoot like a horse. (I threw back my head and guffawed at that.)

A real lady must never wear too much make up or hair spray. "Make-up must enhance your natural beauty, not cover it up," they would say. (Of course, that's assuming that you've actually GOT that natural beauty in the first place.)

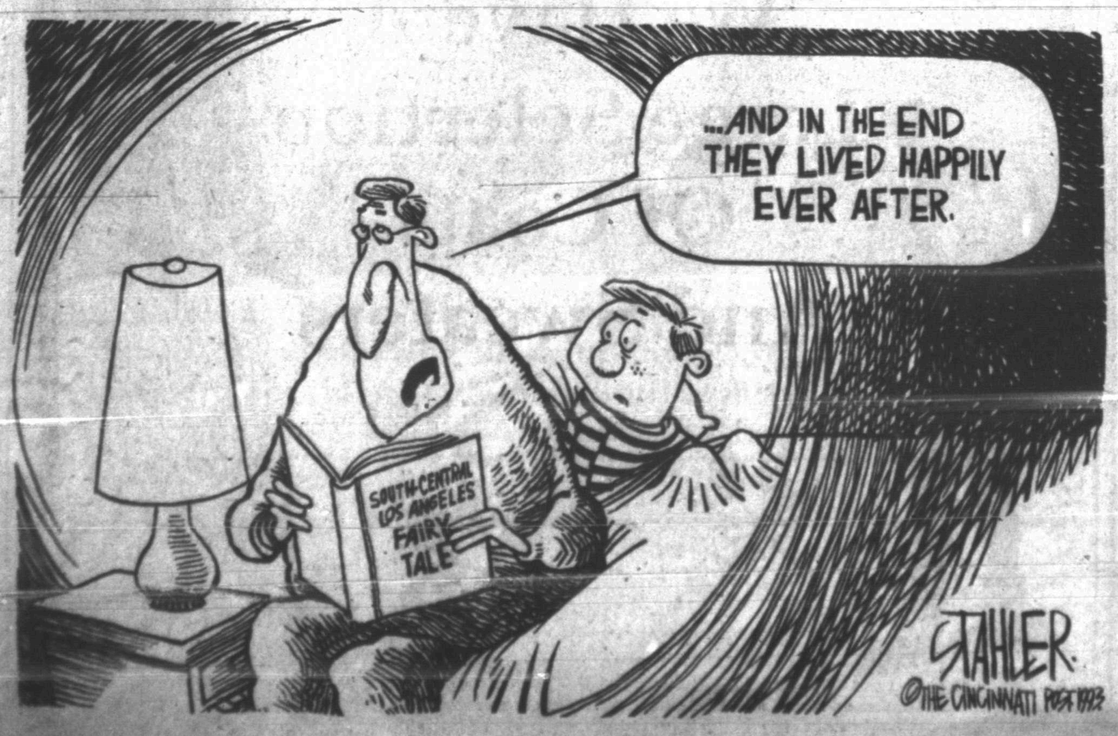

They wanted us to learn to be demure, submissive, quiet ... in short ... unthreatening to men.

Well, I tried. I wanted to make my mother happy. But we both knew it was a hopeless case. I guess those gals who didn't flunk out went on to pledge sororities and become campaign wives.

Me, I threw out every skirt, pair of high heels, and slip I ever owned; bought jeans, slacks and comfortable shoes, and taught myself a few REALLY useful skills, like, how to give a firm handshake like a man. How, in short, to fight my way through a man's world without getting smushed like a demure little bug.

I married a man who had enough strength of character and self-confidence to stand back and give me all the room I needed. And I never looked back.

But Mom — I never, EVER crack my gum in public, honest.

Adopted Child Can't Shake Feeling of Being Rejected

DEAR ABBY: I keep reading letters in your column from natural mothers who don't want to be found by the children they gave up for adoption.

Every time I read one of those letters, I feel both angry and hurt. Angry because of the selfishness of these women, and hurt because I am adopted and it hurts to think that my natural mother doesn't even want to know me. No matter what the reason for giving us up for adoption, the bottom line is that we live our lives feeling rejected by our "real" mothers — the women who gave birth to us.

These women are more concerned about the questions that might be raised and the problems it would cause than they are about knowing the kind of people we turned out to be. Don't we have a right to know who we really are? Is it fair for us to grow up feeling that we never quite belonged and were never really wanted in the first place?

Being adopted isn't easy — always wondering if I look like my mother, wondering if she remembers me on my birthday, or if she ever regrets having given me up. Maybe she's dead, or maybe she's the lady who was standing next to me in the grocery store last week.

I love my adoptive parents and I owe them more than I can ever repay. They gave me the best life they could, and they'll always be my "real" parents. But there's someone missing, someone I'm afraid to look for, because if I find her, she may reject me again.

JUST ANOTHER ADOPTED KID

DEAR JUST: Not all adopted children were "rejected" for the convenience of their mothers. Many (and probably most) were put up for adoption because their birth mothers wanted them to have better lives than they could have given them at the time.

DEAR ABBY: I recently leased a studio apartment in a small complex — it's just the right size for me. When I first moved in, it was filthy, but I cleaned it up and now it's immaculate.

To my horror, I discovered that the neighbor woman with whom I share a wall is a prostitute and drug addict. People come and go at all hours of the night, and the television is on 24 hours a day. It stops for maybe three or four hours, then it starts all over again for another three-day orgy.

Her customers stand in the common patio and make a mess of it with cigarette butts and empty liquor bottles.

What should I do? Should I get a lawyer? Or are things so bad these days that the cops would be indifferent?

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Your neighbor is about "[illegible]" your peace. First, send written letters of complaint to this neighbor and to the building manager (keep copies for yourself). If the disturbance continues, call the police. And see a lawyer about getting out of your lease.

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point — I am gay, but I don't like being gay. I want a wife and children. I also have a career in which further advancement would be very difficult if it becomes known that I am gay. Psychiatrists and other therapists I have consulted have tried to help me adjust to my homosexuality rather than help me to change.

Abby, adjusting to homosexuality is fine for those who have accepted their homosexuality, but I have not. I know I'd be happier straight. Please help me.

UNHAPPY

DEAR UNHAPPY: Did you choose to be homosexual? If so, you could choose to be "straight." But if you have always had erotic feelings for men instead of women, then face it, you are homosexual — and even though you may be able to change your behavior, you will not be able to change your feelings.

Some therapists insist that if a homosexual is sufficiently motivated, he or she can become "straight." Maybe so, but the chances are slim. Marrying and having children may make you happier, but what about the other people you involve?

To thine own self be true. Only then will you find true happiness.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I read the piece in your colum about slamming doors and had to share my experience.

When I was young, I got mad, went to my room and slammed the door so hard the whole house shook.

My father promptly came to my bedroom and, without a word, he removed the door from its hinges.

In two weeks, without my door — and my privacy — I learned that door slamming was not a very good idea.

CYNTHIA IN KANSAS

DEAR CYNTHIA: Your father was a very wise man. Actions speak louder than words — and can be much more effective.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have family members who come to [illegible] often, but they never call us. They are not just shirttail relatives — we are very closely related.

We know of nothing we did that may have caused hard feelings. We heard they are in town now and we know where they are staying. Should we call them?

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: No. Why put them on the spot? Drop these relatives a note and say that you are sorry to have missed them when they were last in town. Ask them to please let you know next time they plan to come because you would love to see them. If that doesn't get results, give up and assume that they don't feel as close to you as you feel to them.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My mother was a fun-loving person who kept everyone laughing. Her name was [illegible] "Josie."

It was Mom's wish that when she died, she did not want to go to a funeral parlor — she wanted to be laid out at her own home.

Her wish was granted. One of my uncles, who was a professional photographer, was asked to take Mom's last picture. He came to her house with all his equipment; then he cleared everyone out of the room, and we heard him say, "Don't move, Josie — just stay real still, please!"

Some of us laughed so hard, we had to go outside.

Judge won't move trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A state district judge has rejected a request to move the trial of a gang leader, suspected of raping and strangling two girls, out of Harris County.

State District Judge Bill Harmon denied the motion Thursday filed by attorneys for Peter Anthony Cantu.

The judge based his decision on the outcome of an opinion-sampling session with 35 juror prospects.

Cantu, is the first of the five 18-year-olds charged in the June 24 murders of Elizabeth Pena, 16, and Jennifer Ertman, 14, to have their venue motions decided by a judge. State District Judge Doug Shaver will hear similar motions for the other defendants Nov. 22.
