U.S. continues Grenada 'clean up'

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — U.S. helicopters buzzed a sniper on one side of Grenada while searchers 45 miles away cleared the rubble of a mental hospital where as many as 20 patients were killed when U.S. jets bombed the facility.

The helicopters swooped in low over the treetops after sniper fire Monday sent U.S. soldiers scrambling for cover.

Despite the sniping, 1,200 Marines were leaving for Lebanon, their original assignment before being diverted to Grenada. U.S. Army soldiers were taking their place today, a week after the U.S.-led invasion of the 133-square-mile Caribbean island.

Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam said Monday night there was no timetable yet for U.S. troop withdrawal because it was not known when all the resistance would end.

Capt. Barry Willey, an Army public affairs officer in Grenada, said he knew of no bands of resisters still fighting on Monday, but added that soldiers combing the island were finding more caches of weapons and ammunition.

"I don't want to mislead you that the whole island is now secure," Willey said.

Vehicles with loudspeakers fanned out over the roads, blasting this message over and over: "Members of the People's Revolutionary Army, Cuban defenders. Lay down your arms and surrender. You will be allowed to go home. Gen. Austin has surrendered. The resistance is over."

Gen. Hudson Austin, who led the Marxist military junta which seized control and killed Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, was taken by U.S. paratroopers after they were tipped that the general was hiding in a house on the southeast coast, Willey said.

Without firing a shot, the paratroopers seized Austin, along with two militia officers and two young men, Willey said. Whether the young men were hostages, "I cannot say," Willey said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Austin was being held "for his personal protection" on the USS Guam, the flagship of the U.S. fleet off Grenada.

The Pentagon said 18 U.S. servicemen have been killed, 86 wounded and one is missing since the invasion.

In the capital, the stench of dead bodies pervaded the ruins of the mental hospital, but otherwise life began to have some normalcy.

Students went to school Monday for the first time since leaders of a military coup imposed a shoot-on-sight curfew. The pupils traded stories of life during the invasion.

Lebanon's leaders meet

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Leaders of Lebanon's bloody sectarian conflict met in private for two hours today, the second day of talks aimed at ending eight years of civil strife.

Leaders of the warring Christian, Moslem and Druse communities left the meeting room at midday without making any statements on progress or details of the discussion.

The issues of Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal pact and constitutional reforms were expected to dominate the meeting, which was set to resume this afternoon.

President Amin Gemayel and eight other Christian, Moslem and Druse leaders began their meeting on the 18th floor of the Intercontinental Hotel, where Gemayel had appealed Monday for all parties to join in ending "Lebanon's long night" of civil strife.

An aide to Druse opposition leader Walid Jumblatt described the opening session as "tense."

Before the meeting began, a Druse source said Lebanon's ambassador to Switzerland, Johnny Abdo, telephoned Jumblatt to ask if he were carrying a weapon.

Jumblatt replied that he was. When Abdo asked him not to bring the pistol to the meeting, the aide said Jumblatt asked "Is Amin (Gemayel) carrying a weapon?"

When Abdo replied that the president would not be armed, Jumblatt handed his pistol to an aide, the source said.

Sources in the pro-government Christian camp told reporters after Monday's opening session that they expected the opposition to demand early discussion of the troop withdrawal agreement signed May 17 by Israel and the Gemayel government under U.S. auspices.

Syria, whose foreign minister, Abdel-Halim Khaddam, is an observer at the conference, has demanded the Lebanese scrap the agreement because of the political and security concessions it grants Israel.

Pro-government Christian sources fear the conference could reach an early deadlock if the Syrians and their Lebanese allies force a showdown on the withdrawal agreement before other issues can be discussed.

Approval of poison applauded

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

A decision by the Environmental Protection Agency on Monday to lift the ban on predator poison Compound 1080 should be a boost to area ranchers, according to the spokesman for Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

"It will be very beneficial," said Bill Sims of San Angelo. "It will give us a chance to go back into some areas with our sheep and goats."

The chemical was banned for use on predators in 1972. EPA's new ruling will allow it to be used in single lethal dose baits and in toxic collars, a rubber collar that is filled with poison and attached to the necks of sheep or goats. Still banned is the large dose station.

Despite the restrictions, one congressman was pleased with the decision. U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler from the 21st District that includes Midland said, "I applaud the decision by the EPA to re-register Compound 1080. I am pleased to see the EPA made a positive decision on this most selective and effective predator control agent on both public and private lands. With this decision, livestock producers have won an important victory."

Sims contended the chemical was banned in the early 1970s when the federal government was trying to get a man in Wyoming who was killing eagles. The man apparently had set traps with thallium sulfate and Compound 1080 and had poisoned several eagles.

"Thallium is a really bad poison," said Sims. Both were prohibited by the EPA. Since then, Sims said, no study has proven 1080 kills anything other than coyotes.

"It's a fairly selective chemical. The coyote is the most sensitive to it. It had been thought to be bad on secondary poisonings, but that has been cleared up," Sims said.

Studies also showed it didn't poison birds, he stressed.

When new evidence on 1080 and the collar bait appeared, the case against the compound was reopened last year, according to Sims.

The collar is a last ditch effort on coyotes that have resisted other methods, he said. "What you're after is a coyote you can't get any other way. The coyote kills the lamb at the neck, grabs the collar and punctures it and gets the 1080. Then he wanders off and dies. You lose a lamb or kid goat, but it's worth it."

The bait stations were used in large wide-open areas, such as Wyoming, or even around Midland and Crane, according to Sims.

During the winter, an old horse was killed, cut into sections and the poison placed on the meat. This meat was left in spots for coyotes to feed. By spring, most of the coyotes in the area were dead. The rancher would come back into the area, bury what was left of the meat and bring in sheep or goats for grazing.

Of Monday's decision, Sims added, "I have hopes this means a change in the EPA."

'Laredo,' 'dealer' carried Polish women to U.S.

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Polish women who sneaked into the United States through Mexico and were arrested with a group of Mexican illegal aliens reached Texas by using only two words, a federal agent says: "Laredo" and "dealer."

Irena Kaminski, 56, and Barbara Molska, 29, appeared confused but cheerful Monday as they appeared before U.S. Magistrate Ray McQuary after spending two days in jail in Houston as material witnesses. They were released on personal recognizance bonds.

The two were arrested Saturday when agents of the Immigration and Naturalization Service raided a southwest Houston house where smugglers were holding 14 illegal aliens for ransom.

The women, who had tried and failed to obtain visas legally, were told they could enter through Mexico if they knew only two words: "Laredo" and "dealer," said David Berkowitz, an INS agent.

"Somebody from their village in Poland had gotten to the United States by way of Mexico," Berkowitz said.

Legislative succession, school funding considered

EDITOR'S NOTE: Eleven constitutional amendments will appear on the Nov. 8 ballot. This series examines the arguments for and against each proposal and how each would affect the state's citizens. This part looks at Propositions Four and Five.

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

One proposes to save the state money while the other hopes to save our democratic form of government.

Proposition Four on the Nov. 8 constitutional amendment ballot provides a system for replacing unavailable legislators and suspending certain procedural rules if Texas is attacked by an enemy. Of more immediate and local impact is Proposition Five, which outlines using the state's Permanent School Fund to guarantee school bonds.

Proposition Four provides for the replacement of unavailable legislators during an enemy attack. Currently, legislators are the only public officials excluded from emergency succession laws, and Texas is one of three states that does not provide for legislative succession.

BESIDES SETTING up guidelines for selecting "emergency interim successors" for legislators, the amendment also allows for suspension of certain constitutional rules during attack or the immediate threat of an attack.

The time-consuming rules concern a quorum, reading a bill on three days in each house before becoming law, requiring a bill be referred to and reported from a committee before being considered, rules determining the order of business and the effective dates of laws.

Supporters say the state government now lacks crucial powers needed to function in case of attack. Under current laws, they say, it would take too long to replace legislators unable to perform their duties, call a legislative session or pass emergency laws.

THE AMENDMENTS

Opponents argue the proposal is "an exercise in futility." They contend a nuclear war could never remain limited and, after most of the population and major resources have been destroyed, state governments would cease to exist.

In addition, they add, the amendment would give the governor dangerous, unprecedented powers because it does not define "immediate threat" of an attack and does not ensure against the governor abusing emergency authority. Because emergency successors must be former senators and representatives, it could result in placing persons in office who had been defeated by the voters or are too old to perform their duties effectively.

Still another argument is that the measure seems to justify and encourage the buildup of nuclear weapons.

Also, they contend, if an enemy attack did occur the federal government would step in and take over. But supporters say advanced weapons could isolate the state and interfere with federal assistance.

If passed, proposition four would become law Jan. 1.

Unless Proposition Five is approved, the principal of the PSF, about $4 billion, cannot be spent for any purpose.

When a school district wishes to raise money for a project it holds a bond election. If that election is approved by the voters, the district borrows money and issues interest-bearing bonds in return. The bonds, and thus the loan, are paid off through tax revenues.

Bond-rating agencies such as Moody's or Standard and Poor's determine the interest rate loaning agencies charge the school district. Interest rates, determined by the district's credit rating, have been higher than usual in recent years because of unfavorable economic conditions. If the state guarantees the bonds will be paid, the result should be better interest rates.

Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi said until Oct. 14 the amendment would not have had much effect on the Midland Independent School District because it had a good credit rating. However, he said, that changed when First National Bank was declared insolvent.

"BECAUSE OF FNB'S failure I'm sure our bond rating will suffer," he predicted, "because it's a sign our economy isn't very good."

Baressi agreed with supporters of the proposal, who say it will save money and involve very little risk.

Castro puts Americans on hit list

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Cuban leader Fidel Castro, enraged over the U.S. invasion of Grenada, has ordered terrorists under his discipline to "kill Americans." Castro directs an underground revolutionary network that is allied with leftist terrorist groups throughout Latin America.

The ominous words, "kill Americans," were used in a top-secret warning that was flashed last Saturday to U.S. embassies from Mexico to Chile.

An earlier, precautionary alert was sent out the morning of the Grenada invasion, warning that retribution against Americans was possible. But the second message was more explicit and urgent.

My intelligence sources say that Castro's secret instructions were intercepted by U.S. monitoring stations. Though there can be no question that he has ordered terrorist attacks on Americans, some sources do question how effectively the campaign will be implemented.

U.S. embassies and consulates, meanwhile, are taking no chances. They have tightened security and strengthened their guard forces. But U.S. businesses and individuals may also be in danger, my sources fear.

There is special concern about Americans in Mexico City. CIA sources told my associate Dale Van Atta that leftist terrorists from all over the world gathered in Mexico City on Oct. 21 for an underground convention. Castro, of course, sent his delegates.

In this subterranean world, Cuba is regarded as the principal proxy for Soviet subversion, terrorism and revolution. The Cubans get their financing, of course, from the Kremlin. Then they, in turn, subsidize and supply terrorist groups up and down the Western hemisphere, such as the radical M-19 group in Colombia.

Castro has also brought a new unity and cohesion to the terrorist movement. He has established liaison between terrorist groups and coordinated their activities. Under Cuban presure, for example, four small Honduran bands have been united.

Castro's agents have infiltrated most countries in this hemisphere including the United States. A conservative count of his agents in Miami alone exceeds 200, intelligence sources say.

The Cuban leader reacted to the U.S. assault on Grenada as if it were a Cuban province. He sent a dramatic order to the Cubans on Grenada to resist to the death. This hardly squares with the communist line that the Cubans were merely construction workers who had be invited to Grenada to help its pea ful development. Visiting labor do not normally fight to the dea for their host countries.

Intelligence reports indicated advance that trouble was coming Grenada, so I sent my associate J Lee Anderson there a few weeks a to look around. He found a stro Cuban presence on the island. O of the government ministers ev confided that Fidel Castro w expected in person for the openi of the new airfield next March 13.

My reporter was probably the l American to visit the late Prim Minister Maurice Bishop before h assassination. Bishop denied th Castro ran his revolution. Grena had its own "unique revolution," h said, and was not subordinate Cuba.

Occupation now in second week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American-led occupation of Grenada began its second week today with officials hopeful that U.S. battlefield successes are not overshadowed by accidents and public relations setbacks that have haunted the operation since the beginning.

Grass roots support for President Reagan's policies on the island appeared to remain substantial but officials acknowledged Monday there had been disappointments:

—The Defense Department, after greeting initial reports with skepticism, acknowledged Monday that a U.S. bomber trying to knocking out artillery fire on the first day of the invasion struck a civilian mental hospital, leaving a reported 14 dead. The attack occurred three days before defense officials boasted no civilians were killed in the invasion.

—Wounded Army troops brought to Walter Reed Medical Center said 19 soldiers were injured because an American plane called in for an air strike hit their building instead of an enemy target. The Washington Post in today's editions quoted unidentified Pentagon sources as saying that several Army Rangers were killed and several others were injured when two U.S. helicopters collided, and four Navy Seals in a commando unit drowned in a pre-invasion accident.

—On the eve of today's House vote on requiring President Reagan to withdraw the troops from Grenada within two months, House Democratic Whip Thomas P. Foley, D-Wash., was named to head a congressional delegation to Grenada on Friday. Foley said a congressional examination of what happened in Grenada is needed, in part, because the administration has sharply limited press coverage of the fighting and its aftermath.

—The American Society of Newspaper Editors, meeting in Lexington, Ky., lodged a protest with the Pentagon over its refusal to permit reporters to cover initial-stages of the Grenada invasion.

Bill calls for withdrawal from Grenada

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill calling upon President Reagan to withdraw troops from Grenada within 60 days appears headed for passage in the Democratic House.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said Monday that supporters of the measure, imposing the timetable of the War Powers Act on the invasion of the tiny Caribbean nation, appeared to have reason to anticipate "an overwhelming vote."

The measure was approved by the House Foreign Affairs Committee by a vote of 34-2 last week, with all of the Republicans supporting it despite Reagan's argument that the act encroaches on his constitutional authority as commander in chief.

The Senate passed an identical measure, 64-20 on Friday, with substantial Republican support, as an amendment to legislation increasing the limit on the national debt. Its future was clouded, however, by a dispute over the debt measure.

In preliminary debate in the House Monday, Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said, "The president's decision to ignore the War Powers Resolution ignored also the realities of the situation in Grenada."

Zablocki said the resolution was not intended to reflect on "the rights or wrongs" of the invasion but to declare that U.S. troops have been sent into hostilities and the War Powers Act must be obeyed.

Rep. William S. Broomfield of Michigan, the senior Republican on the committee, said, "I am confident that the administration will remove U.S. forces as soon as security has been restored in Grenada."

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., however, argued that the 60-day authorization was an abdication of the congressional power to declare war.

"The president of the United States has taken the power and the Congress is asked simply to stand by and supinely trigger a war powers resolution," Weiss said. "We will live to regret the day."

Meanwhile, House leaders were putting together a delegation that O'Neill said would go to Grenada later this week and investigate "all facets" of the American invasion of the island.

O'Neill named Rep. Thomas Foley of Washington, the Democratic whip, to head the delegation, which will include members of the Foreign Affairs, Armed Services and Intelligence committees. An O'Neill spokesman said Republicans would be included in the delegation.

Foley said there is "a certain lack of information that would normally be available on the ground" in Grenada because of restrictions on the movements of reporters.

He said the group will want to know, among other things, "how long our presence on Grenada will continue."

Foley said the inquiry also will cover whether the 1,100 Americans living in Grenada were actually in danger before the invasion and whether there was enough intelligence information available to support U.S. forces, which encountered heavier resistance than anticipated from Cubans on the island.

In the Senate, meanwhile, a Democratic plan to send a similar delegation to Grenada was sidetracked for committee study after Baker had second thoughts about it.

Postal Service to seek three-cent hike in postage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service said today it will seek to increase the cost of mailing a letter from 20 cents to 23 cents.

Robert L. Hardesty, chairman of the Postal Service Board, said increases would be sought for all classes of mail, but they would not take effect before Oct. 1, 1984.

The proposed increase for postcards, for example, would be 2 cents, from 13 cents to 15 cents.

Postmaster General William F. Bolger said, "I still think that 23 cents will be a bargain" for a letter.

The officials said the independent Postal Rate Commission would be asked within a few days to approve the new rates. The panel is allowed up to 10 months to consider such a case.

"Although prices have gone up nearly 25 percent since the last general rate filing, we are seeking only a 15 percent increase in the basic first-class rate. We are able to bridge this cost gap because of annual productivity increases averaging 3.5 percent since 1980," Hardesty said.

He said that 3½ years of rising costs have caught up with the Postal Service and it is now operating at a deficit.

The service has announced surplus for each of the last two fiscal years but said that it expects a loss of about $800 million for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1984.

Hardesty said that without a rate increase the operating losses during fiscal 1985 could be more than $2.3 million.

In answer to a question, Hardesty also said the Postal Service is prohibited by law from eliminating Saturday delivery service.

The board also approved construction of a new mail facility costing $26.2 million in Las Vegas, Nev., and improvements of bulk mail centers in Dallas, Los Angeles, Washington and Springfield, Mass., costing $53.4 million. Those facilities will be upgraded to improve handling of third-class and second-class mail in sacks.

Amendments 4, 5 deal with succession, schools

"It would save the taxpayers money in that we wouldn't have to pay as high an interest on our bonds.

"The risk," he continued, "would be if we had a lot of school districts fail at the same time. It would eat into the Permanent School Fund. But the likelihood of that happening is pretty remote. They'd have to go broke basically." No Texas school district has defaulted on bonds since the late 1950s.

A school district in California went bankrupt earlier this year, he said. "That's the only one I've ever heard of. "Very rarely will a school district fail and not be able to meet its bond obligations. I don't see that there's any risk involved and it should save taxpayers millions of dollars over time."

The guarantee program is predicted to reduce interest rates by 0.5 percent, which would save school districts an estimated $2.7 million in 1984 and $13.7 million in 1988.

Supporters say the program will help local school districts meet their expanding needs with little risk to the state or its credit rating. Opponents argue the program will not necessarily produce the projected savings, and the real risk is allowing the PSF principal to be spent for this or any purpose.

FBI examines Beirut bomb crater

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Searchers halted work today in the rubble of the Marine command post so FBI experts could examine the crater for clues that might identify terrorists behind the bombing which killed at least 230 U.S. servicemen.

"We can't go any further" with the search of the debris "until the FBI completes its crater analysis," said Maj. Robert Jordan, chief spokesman for the U.S. Marine contingent, headquartered at Beirut International Airport.

The search for bodies was "pretty much" done and was unlikely to locate any more victims, Jordan said.

Today was the first day no work was done at the wreckage of the four-story headquarters since it was destroyed Oct. 23. A suicide terrorist raced a truck packed with explosives past sentry points and rammed it into the lobby of the building, where some 300 Marine, Navy and other military personnel were sleeping before dawn.

Jordan said the casualty toll was "over 230 dead, over 70 wounded."

A simultaneous bombing at the headquarters of French forces in Beirut killed at least 58 soldiers.

U.S. officials here and Lebanese police had estimated the truck's cargo at 2,000 pounds of explosives. But Marine Corps commandant Paul X. Kelley said Monday the truck carried 5,000 pounds of explosives.

The Reagan administration has accused Iranian-backed terrorists of engineering both bombings and has vowed retaliation without specifying what it would do. Iran denies involvement. Lebanese police say they have no clues about the identity of the terrorists and have made no arrests.

An extremist Shiite group, Hezbollah, held a rally Monday in the eastern Lebanese town of Baalbek. Speakers vowed to carry out the party's slogan of "death to America."

Hezbollah sent a telegram on Sunday to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, congratulating the Iranian revolutionary leader for the "Khomeini-styled" attacks on the U.S. and French soldiers.

On Monday, Jordan said all "non-essential" staff, such as clerks and maintenance crews, from the Marine contingent will move to U.S. warships offshore.

The French and Americans are part of a multinational force in Beirut for more than a year at the government's request to help keep peace in Lebanon, wracked by years of civil war.

In Geneva, Switzerland, leaders of Lebanon's warring Christian and Moslem sects began a long-awaited reconciliation conference Monday to try to settle old feuds and agree on changes to give the Moslem majority more political power. President Amin Gemayel, a Christian, presided over the meeting, which is expected to last four to sveen days.

Jordan said between 150 and 200 Marines, based at Camp Lejeune, N.C., joined the base in Beirut on Sunday to bolster security and that some have moved to frontline posts.

Last week, 300 Marines arrived to replace comrades killed in the bombing.

Jordan said Monday the U.S. troops were preparing for departure later this month of the 24th Marine Amphibious Unit, in Beirut since May.

On Monday, Israel's prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir said the United States had unofficially asked Israel to get more involved in Lebanon. The Israelis invaded Lebanon in 1982 to detroy Palestinian guerrilla strongholds and now occupy the southern part of the country.

Shamir said he expects talks this week with Lawrence Eagleburger, U.S. Undersecretary of State, will lead to closer strategic ties between the two nations.

Commanders says toops safety in Beirut can't be guaranteed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two top commanders of U.S. forces in Lebanon say as long as Marines hold their peacekeeping position in Beirut, their safety from terrorist attack cannot be guaranteed.

Gen. Paul X. Kelley, commandant of the Marine Corps, and Army Gen. Bernard Rogers, commander of U.S. forces in Europe, testified Monday before the Senate Armed Services Committee on security at the Marine headquarters in Beirut following the Oct. 23 terrorist bombing that claimed at least 230 lives.

"No way, we cannot guarantee that there will be no further attacks against our troops," Rogers said. "We can't make that guarantee as long as our forces are in this situation. You can't prevent it, and I don't like it."

Kelley was returning to Capitol Hill today to explain to the House Armed Services Committee steps taken to protect the troops in the wake of the suicide attack that destroyed the Marine headquarters at Beirut airport.

On Wednesday, the House is scheduled to vote on an attempt by Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., to cut off funds for maintaining the Marines after Nov. 30 as part of the international peacekeeping force that has been based in the war torn nation for 13 months.

Halloween takes gruesome turn in several U.S. cities

By DEBORAH ZABARENKO
Associated Press Writer

Benign vampires capered through New York City streets amid Groucho-masked nuns and human-sized bread slices, but Halloween took a gruesome turn elsewhere, with deadly fires set by Detroit pranksters and shootings in two states that killed one girl and injured another.

Reports of tainted candy and goodies laden with pins and needles marred Monday night's holiday in Arizona, just over a year after the Tylenol poisonings worried parents of trick-or-treaters.

But officials in other states reported a calm Halloween, made safer by curfews, organized events for children and X-ray stations where parents could bring treats to spot tampering.

"We just didn't see many trick-or-treaters out tonight," said police Lt. Jim Webb in Muskogee, Okla. "The city had little programs for the kids to go to — carnivals — and that kept a lot of them off the street."

However, in Macon, Ga., a 9-year-old girl died in a Georgia hospital today after she was wounded when an unknown gunman fired into a group of children as they were trick-or-treating Monday night, police said.

And in upstate New York, police said a man who answered his door expecting trick-or-treaters was shot with a rifle by one of two men in army fatigues and blackened faces. His 3-year-old daughter was also wounded.

The streets of New York City's Greenwich Village were thronged Monday night, but most of the 250,000 revelers were grown-ups playing at being children for one night for the 10th annual Halloween parade through the Bohemian heart of the city.

Costumes ranged from the sedate — a red, white and black painted face over a business suit — to the outrageous: a carton of milk, a seven-slice loaf of white bread, and an entire family of ancient Egyptians.

Seven witches on stilts swept through the crowd with long brooms and 10 nuns wearing Groucho Marx masks marched in single file.

"Look at how everybody's having a good time. New York's hostility disappears," said Michael Dontzin, 60, who wore a deathly white painted face, an old Army hat, a tuxedo jacket, white gloves and flaming red briefs over white tights. He said he was a state judge who participated in the parade every year because "I get to hide this way."

In Detroit, one man died and two firefighters were slightly injured in as many as 600 fires set on Devil's Night, the 24-hour period that ended at noon Monday, fire officials said.

"It was one of the worst nights the department has had in its history," said Fire Chief Maruice Roche. "We could have had a disaster if an apartment building had gone up."

Officials said the fires were set by teen-age pranksters, not professional arsonists.

Minor damage was reported to three public schools and residents of two apartment buildings were evacuated when the predawn blaze spread from abandoned buildings.

Glenn loses plane after speech

PITTSBURGH (AP) — For a while it looked as though the first American to orbit the earth, Sen. John Glenn, might have lost his latest ship.

The candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination flew his Beechcraft Baron airplane to Allegheny County's airport Sunday night. But when he returned from a campaign speech in downtown Pittsburgh, it was gone.

The 62-year-old Glenn, his aides and police searched for about 15 minutes before the plane turned up in a Page Avjet Corp. hangar.

An employee for Page Avjet, George Diggans, explained that he thought the Baron had been left for repairs, so he had rolled it inside.

After the senator from Ohio and his wife Anne had taken off, Diggans asked: "Who was that guy in the business suit?"

John Glenn, he was told.

"Heck," said Diggans, "if I'd known that, I would have shook his hand."

HIGHTSTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Publisher Walter Annenberg says The Peddie School made an "unforgettable impression" on him when he attended the college prep school in the 1920s.

Just how unforgettable was made clear Monday with the announcement that Annenberg had pledged $12 million to the school — apparently the largest gift ever to a secondary school.

Annenberg, a 1927 Peddie grad who was voted "most likely to succeed," was not present at a ceremony where the pledge was announced. But the founder of TV Guide and former ambassador to Great Britain issued a statement saying he "received an excellent education at the school."

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew often is a target for the wiles of celebrity-seeking picture-takers. But the 23-year-old prince had a chance to turn the tables and join a conspiracy to trap a favored photographer.

Royal photographer Norman Parkinson showed up Monday at a Mayfair art gallery expecting to take pictures of the prince.

Instead, with Andrew in on the surprise, the television host of the British version of "This is Your Life," Eamonn Andrews, crept up behind Parkinson and announced: "This is your life!"

The prince later joined an audience of 600 at the Royalty Theater for the show and led the applause and laughter as American model Carmen Dell'Orefice, whom Parkinson had once photographed on roller skates, fell as she tried to repeat her skating feat.

"I hope I don't get involved in one of these again," said Andrew with a smile as he left the after-show party.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Nov. 2, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: French Queen Marie Antoinette, American frontiersman Daniel Boone and U.S. Presidents James Polk and Warren Harding were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: "Hart to Hart" star Stefanie Powers, Burt Lancaster and tennis' Ken Rosewall. Listen to your heart as well as your head and success will come easier. Mate is an important source of inspiration. Stalled talks will get back on track soon. Respond to what you know someone is thinking even if he/she says nothing outright. Something wonderful develops when you give partner a second chance. You have good luck with creditors. Get your finances in better order.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): When it counts, you are very impressive in business. A request for a raise will get a fair hearing. Legal proceedings enjoy favorable influences. Pursue the object of your affections.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You have nothing to lose and everything to gain by competing for a leadership post. Mate teams up with you to score a professional victory that will have everyone talking.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When everyone else gets tense, you stay calm. Others recognize that you are in charge. Make your decisions stick. A former foe wants to join your team.Be open-minded.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Advertise what you can do. Otherwise, your talents could be overlooked by those in charge. A new companion makes life much easier. Surprise him or her with a token of your affection.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can reactivate an old deal now and turn a nice profit. Technological changes come at the right time. A partnership dispute is settled. Romance and travel add excitement to your life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stay on top of a sensitive personnel matter. This is no time to beat around the bush. Say exactly what you mean. You gain the upper hand in a romantic relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Higher-ups may resist if you want to move on too many fronts at once. Take things nice and easy until you gain their full confidence. New information could turn up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Member of opposite sex is distracting, but you have no complaints. You welcome the attention! Do not expect your loved ones to see things in the same light. School pressures ease.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are happier in your work now. An opportunity arises to sell some possessions. Only you can evaluate their real worth to you. A tidy profit can be made.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be careful not to take on more duties than you can handle. An arrogant member of your sex could make trouble unless you set up a better system of checks and balances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You learn who your real friends are when the chips are down. Privacy is more important than ever. An office event will be great fun. Ask an older person for financial advice.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your seclusion is affecting your ability to deal effectively with people. Get out and about more. The morning hours prove most productive. Take stock of your professional assets before setting new goals.

CBS show stumbling with cast

NEW YORK (AP) — Jose Ferrer, Hermoine Baddeley, Howard Duff and Celeste Holm get together tonight on CBS, seemingly to prove that a superior cast doesn't have to make a good movie.

"This Girl for Hire" is supposed to be a spoof on the '40s-style private-eye flick. Bess Armstrong, who cracks wise as Brady, a snooper whose client is murdered in the first act, does what she can to elevate style: trenchcoat and high-fashion snap-brim, lots of leg and an acid tongue.

But the story advances rather unsteadily, and aside from an occasional line or two, the script is low on original wit. There is a twist at the end that will delight some in the audience, but may distress true fans of the genre.

Ferrer plays Harrison Wooly, a mystery writer who hires Brady to make sure his newest manuscript reaches the Japanese filmmaker who has just paid $2 million for the story. He's shoved down an open elevator shaft before she can make the pass.

All this happens during a convention of the Mystery Writers of America, and guess who's got a motive?

How about Edwina Gaylord (Miss Baddeley), who used to sell more books than Wooly? Or Mitch Dillon (Scott Brady), a Mickey Spillane look-alike who says, "Someday, someone's going to shut his trap ... permanently"? Or Manfred Hayes (McDowell), who often writes about death in elevators, or Jonathan Eastman (Percy Rodrigues), who is being sued by Wooly for plagarism?

Or Evan Picard (Beverly Garland), who protests: She was in love with the dead man.

"Loving a man," Miss Gaylord rasps (Or is she Agatha Christie?) "never stopped a woman from murdering him."

Wait. Wooly's agent, Abner Litto (Ray Walston), has worked out a movie deal of his own. "Warner Bros. has Redford, and it's a 'go' project," he whines. "I need that manuscript."

And Garth (George Reynolds), the writer's valet, acts like he's got something to hide. In one scene, he knocks a policeman from his horse and gallops off down Sunset Boulevard. Or is it Wilshire?

Brady's mother, an ex-film star named Zandra Stoneham (Miss Holm), is more convinced than ever that her daughter is in the wrong line. "It was the pre-natal influence of having carried you while I was making 'Death is My Destiny,'" she anguishes.

Besides, murder is not what Brady had in mind when she took the case, and when she's threatened herself, she begins to look for a way out.

Opening lead: King of ◇.

All too often, a player will give his hand away by bidding when he should pass. But sometimes a perfectly normal action will have the same result. Consider this hand, reported by "International Popular Bridge Monthly."

The auction contains several points of interest. Since North had not yet bid, South's double was for takeout. But as he had already shown a good hand with his double, South should have been content to bid three hearts at his next turn, rather than jump to game.

The defenders started with three rounds of diamonds, declarer ruffing the third. Prospects were dim, for it was likely that declarer would have to lose two club tricks. However, West's takeout double made it probable that he held four spades, so declarer saw a ray of light. He started to run his trumps, reducing the hand to this position:

NORTH
♠ K 10 6 5

When declarer led the jack of hearts, West had no safe discard. If he sluffed a club, declarer's third club would become established, so he parted with a spade. That proved to be no better.

Declarer discarded a club from dummy, cashed the ace-king of spades and ruffed a spade to set up a long spade in dummy. With West marked for the ace of clubs, the queen of clubs was the entry to the high spade.

Source of pride

Dan Mendell put feelings into words last week when he asserted "the community should be proud" that United Way of Midland accomplished the unexpected — reaching the 1983 goal of $1,712,000.

Odds were against United Way volunteers collecting that amount in pledges. The "soft" Midland economy meant the organization had lost $152,000 from last year; businesses and individuals had cut back on their giving and, as expected, pledges did not come as easily as in the past.

As Mendell, the 1983 campaign chairman, noted at the meeting last week, the reason this year's campaign was successful was directly attributable to the fund-raising efforts of volunteers and the concern of all Midlanders. They worked diligently to meet the goal with the best interests of the community in mind. They're effort is a lesson in community spirit.

But the work of the volunteers isn't finished, even though the 1983 goal has been reached. They'll continue working because, as Mendell noted, "Achieving the goal is a milestone. But meeting the community's needs is our mission."

Midland has risen above the challenge it faced during 1983 and, in all probability, will give even more because there's a tradition in the community of Midlanders helping Midlanders. It's part of the independent heritage of the citizenry. What it means is that not only will United Way agencies be able to operate at the same levels at which they functioned last year, but even more help will be offered to Midlanders in coming months.

Dan Mendell's right. The community has every reason to be proud!

Russia, not America!

British newspapers had some interesting and pointed things to say about recent protests in Western Europe against the deployment of new American nuclear missiles. The Daily Mirror commented specifically about a demonstration in Great Britain the other day. A Mirror editorial said:

"It was probably the biggest demonstration ever held in support of a wrong argument aimed at a false target. It says the British campaign for nuclear disarmament has slipped into the mistake of believing that the Americans or the Russians are equally bad or mad. And that if only the U.S. would take its weapons out of Europe we would all somehow be safer. That isn't so.

"NATO is our nuclear defense. It was created by the U.S. and Britain to meet the threat of Soviet aggression.

"It was Russia, not America, that swallowed Romania, East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Bulgaria.

"It was Russia, not America, which crushed revolts in Budapest, Prague and Warsaw. Which invaded Afghanistan."

The editorial makes a point, and makes it very well. We hope some of those anti-American demonstrators read the Daily Mirror that day.

Another View:

Carving civil rights

By firing three members of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, President Reagan has virtually killed the agency. He cannot win a confirmation fight over three new commission members who are in tune with his philosophy. If he can't win, he will call off the game.

But this is no Saturday sandlot game that the president has broken up. He proposes to dismantle an agency established by Congress more than 25 years ago to investigate complaints of discrimination and to study policies that affect civil rights. It is now up to those in Congress, especially the Senate's Republican leaders, who understand and support the agency's mission to revive it.

The firings of Mary Berry, Blandina Cardenas Ramirez and Rabbi Murray Saltzman leave the six-member commission without a quorum. This means that the panel cannot meet until someone is confirmed. But many senators do not want the commission remade in the president's image, and so are fighting the nominations of three men who share his antipathy toward affirmative-action programs. The fight has blocked reauthorization of the agency, which expired Sept. 30. The commission will go out of business at the end of November unless Congress acts.

Any new legislation should firmly fix the length of members' terms and state clearly that they may be fired only for cause. At present, members do not have fixed terms but rather serve at the pleasure of the president. That has never been a problem before, because no president has ever been so supersensitive to commission criticism. No president has ever fired commission members, but then neither has any viewed civil rights and the government's role in protecting them in such a limited way as Reagan.

There is strong movement in Congress for reconstituting the commission as an arm of Congress, with the Speaker of the House and the president pro tem of the Senate each naming four members. We're not persuaded that a congressionally appointed commission would be any more independent than one named by the president, but at least the nation would have a functioning civil rights commission — something that it does not have now.

The fight over the commission's survival is a serious political showdown not just because a president wants to expand his power, although there is some of that, and not just because the Democrats are looking for ammunition to use in the coming election, although there is some of that, too. This agency quite simply is important to millions of Americans because it serves to remind the nation that there is unfinished business on its civil-rights agenda. Only when equal opportunity is assured despite race, religion or sex may anyone consider closing down the commission.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Invasion of Cuba a possibility

WASHINGTON — Was the U.S. invasion of Grenada just a warm-up for an attack on Cuba? This startling possibility cannot be lightly dismissed. Here's why:

Jack Anderson

As far as Ronald Reagan is concerned, the 1962 U.S.-Soviet agreement — no Soviet missiles in Cuba, no U.S. invasion of the island — does not exist.

And he's right — though for the wrong reasons. Reagan's view is that the Kremlin has abrogated the agreement by repeated violation of its provisions. Therefore, the United States is no longer bound by its pledge not to invade Cuba.

But the truth is this: The supposedly ironclad agreement between President Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev never actually existed.

The Soviets did not agree never to deploy offensive weapons in Cuba, for the simple reason that the two sides disagreed over the definition of offensive vs. defensive weapons. So the Soviets can "legally" put medium-range nuclear missiles on the island, within 10 minutes' flight time or less of most major U.S. cities and other targets.

On the U.S. side, the absence of an agreement means we can "legally" invade Cuba. We always could.

The fascinating thing is that for 21 years the State Department has kept up the pretense that there was an agreement. This diplomatic "Potemkin village" has served as reassurance to the American people that the Kremlin had agreed not to put missiles or other offensive weapons in Cuba.

To maintain the fiction that an agreement was made, the State Department has kept a close hold on the secret portions of the 1962 U.S.-Soviet negotiations.

At his Sept. 14 press conference, President Reagan said: "That agreement has been abrogated many times by the Soviet Union and Cuba, in the bringing of what can only be considered offensive weapons, not defensive, there."

To make sure he was on solid ground for that accusation, Reagan sent William Clark, who was then national security adviser, to examine the 1962 documents to see exactly what they said. Incredibly, the State Department stalled.

But my associate Dale Van Atta has gained access to the top secret documents that the State Department denied to Clark and the president. He also obtained three different secret State Department reviews of the supposed agreement.

One of these, a 1981 memorandum, lets the cat out of the bag. It says: "We have in the past taken the position, at least internally, that the 1962 U.S.-Soviet exchanges were not legally binding agreements .... (But) it would be ill-advised to continue to foster the view that these exchanges are less than legally binding understandings."

The secret documents make clear that while the Russians removed their nuclear missiles from Cuba they did not agree that the weapons were "offensive in nature." When presented with a list of weapons the United States considered offensive, the Soviets balked.

After a Nov. 5, 1962, meeting with Soviet diplomat Anatoly Dobrynin, Attorney General Robert Kennedy wrote a memo to his brother, the president, saying: "I explained to Dobrynin that from the first it had been made clear by the Soviet Union that they would get rid of any weapons which we considered offensive." But Dobrynin did not agree.

Two days later, a top-secret cable from Secretary of State Dean Rusk referred to "a confidential indication that the Soviet Government takes strong exception to the list of weapons we consider offensive."

And Khrushchev himself wrote to President Kennedy in a top-secret letter: "You yourself refer not to direct obligations of the sides but to the understanding implied by the American side in the expression 'offensive weapons.'"

FEUD OF THE WEEK: On Capitol Hill, memories are long and dog-in-the-manger attitudes are not unheard of. Both seem to be factors in the bitter feud between Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla. The bizarre bone of contention is the chairmanship of the U. S. Helsinki Commission — hardly one of the great sources of power in Washington.

Dole is co-chairman of the commission and Fascell is chairman. Dole covets his neighbor's title, even though he has shown minimal interest in the commission's work, which is to monitor Soviet human rights violations.

In fact, the senator has even urged that the commission be abolished to save money. "The world will little note nor long remember the U.S. Helsinki Commission," he said, "except as a footnote in the pages of diplomatic history."

INSIDE REPORT:

'62 invasion accord 'abrogated'

WASHINGTON — While giving other reasons for the U.S. operation against Grenada, the State Department was sitting on a 1982 opinion by its own legal advisers which cites the 1962 Kennedy-Khrushchev agreement as providing a "legal right" for the U.S. to use force "to prevent aggression in the hemisphere."

Rowland Evans

That opinion was contained in a secret memorandum submitted on Jan. 16, 1982, to then secretary of state Alexander Haig. He was seeking a military quarantine against Cuba, and the legal opinion suggested the 20-year-old agreement ending the Cuban missile crisis could be terminated based on Fidel Castro's violations of it. But Haig failed. Both the Pentagon and State Department flinched at military action.

Robert Novak

Since then, President Reagan twice has publicly accused Moscow and Havana of violating the Cuban missile accords between John F. Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev. But violations were not cited when he moved against Castroite expansionism into Grenada. Reagan invoked the request for help by other West Indian island states and the safety of American students.

That leaves this question: Since Ronald Reagan has courageously bitten the bullet and barred the door to further Cuban subversion in the hemisphere, might he not base his policy on communist violation of the Kennedy-Khrushchev agreement rather than makeshift rationales? The State Department, struggling to keep Washington-Moscow channels open amid renewed Cold War, objects to accusing the Soviets of treaty-breaking on the Caribbean, just as it does on arms control.

Coincidentally, conservative Republican senators are nearing a climax in their struggle, dating back to the early days of the Carter administration, to disclose all details of the 1962 accord. They believe Moscow has systematically violated it and that Kennedy's pledge not to invade Cuba so long as the Soviets lived up to their end of the bargain should be declared null and void.

The senators have failed to force the State Department to make full disclosure. But in the Senate this week they are ready to disclose documents (some of which are in our possession) throwing light on significant parts of the problem.

Last year's legal memorandum to Haig said this of the accord: "The agreement when viewed in the context of the U.N. Charter ... can also be said to recognize that we have the legal right to use ... force to prevent aggression in the hemisphere." In typically cautious Foggy Bottom style, it said that "a reasonable argument can be made that U.S. commitments (against invading Cuba) were premised on the understanding that Cuba would not export its aggressive purposes by force or the threat of force against other Latin American nations."

This echoes a secret document of a dozen years earlier. A highly classified State Department letter to William Fulbright, then chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, on March 1, 1971, spoke of "an understanding" with the Soviet Union (the Kennedy-Khrushchev agreement) that rules out not only "offensive systems in Cuba" but also "such systems" anywhere in the Western Hemisphere.

These legal interpretations of the secret pacts ending the Cuban missile crisis would seem to warrant the right of U.S. intervention against Cuba because of subversion in El Salvador. But Grenada makes this point more relevant.

Grenada was being prepared as an outpost for aggression by Soviet-backed Cuban subversives. The two-mile-long airstrip nearly completed by Cuban construction workers and the huge arms cache discovered last Thursday could have only one possible use: the support of pro-Soviet, pro-Cuban operations elsewhere in the hemisphere.

The president never has explained his repeated accusations that the Soviets have violated the Kennedy-Khrushchev accords. His most explicit charge came in mid-September when he said: "That agreement has been abrogated many times by the Soviet Union and Cuba in bringing what can only be considered offensive weapons, not defensive, there." A year earlier he referred obliquely to "other things" that "we think are violations" of the 1962 accords.

Such violations center on new weapons brought into Cuba. These include MiG-27 Flogger aircraft (with a damage-making capacity vastly superior to the old IL-28 bombers the Soviets were forced to withdraw from Cuba in 1962) and suspected nuclear-submarine-handling facilities at Cienfuegos.

America's allies are criticizing Reagan for using force to free Grenada from Cuban tutelage and some of Reagan's staunchest political friends at home think it high time that he harden his diplomatic case. With Americans bleeding and dying in the Caribbean, the president would find a receptive audience if he revealed just how Moscow and Havana have systematically violated the dramatic 1962 accord and converted it into a shield protecting their designs.

CHARLEY REESE

Bystanders can prevent atrocities

Bystanders are the key to perpetrating atrocities successfully. It is seldom a problem for the killer to overcome the victim. Most of the time, the killers are a numerical minority.

Charley Reese

That's why if you are going to be a successful killer, you must learn to neutralize the bystanders. If you are going to prevent atrocities, you must be concerned with the bystanders more so than with the actual killers. There will always be killers among any group of people. The trick is not to activate them by giving them "permission" either explicitly or implicityly to kill.

That is a major lesson we can learn from the Holocaust. The Nazis were a minority, even in Germany, but they were able to exterminate 6 million Jews because they neutralized the bystanders.

Had the German people or the people of several other Nazi-occupied countries risen to the defense of their Jews, the Holocaust would not have occurred. The proof of this is Denmark. The Danes, in their tiny country which was militarily powerless, did rise to the defense of their Jews and in Denmark, the Nazi extermination campaign failed.

That is why we must be concerned about anti-semitism and any other form of bigotry. The Nazis used anti-semitism, which existed long before their arrival on the scene, to neutralize the bystanders. The Ku Klux Klan uses racial prejudice to neutralize the bystanders. The Mafia uses intimidation. The Communists use Marxist ideology which is a collection of prejudices.

The majority of us are bystanders and we bear the greatest moral burden and the most difficult task in the continuing process of civilization. The moral burden is to withhold our permission to kill; the task is difficult because it is so easy to convince ourselves that we have no role to play at all, that we are not involved, that it is not our business, that we have no respnsibility.

After all, we tell ourselves, we are neither bigots nor killers. We feel morally superior to bigots and killers. We feel sorry for the victim. But all the time we are evading the fact that we are responsible, not only for the bigotry and the killing it leads to, but for the victims as well.

We are responsible because without our passitivity neither the bigot nor the killer would be able to operate. The only thing they ask of us is that we say nothing and do nothing. They will do the dirty work.

If we are not to fail our humanity, we must actively assert our moral values. We must actively condemn bigotry and killing. No black man would ever have been lynched if a majority of the townspeople had not hidden behind their doors and chosen not to interfere. No Jews would have been gassed if the people of the country had stepped forward and protected them.

It is not enough to avoid doing evil; we must never sanction it. We must make it clear to the bigots in our midst that we don't approve of their bigotry. We must make it clear to the killers among us that if they try to act out their hatred, we will oppose them. When they see that they cannot isolate their victim by neutralizing the bystanders, they will retreat into their dark holes.

Stand up. Speak up. Do something. Get involved. Care. Decent people are always a majority and they can be strong if they stand together. That is our only hope, for we can never eliminate the killers. They are always present in every place, like snakes in their holes, waiting and watching us — the bystanders — for a sign.

Mattox: Death penalty cases left in limbo

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has left Texas' death penalty cases in limbo by refusing to drop a stay of execution for condemned killer James Autry, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

Autry came within minutes of receiving a lethal injection Oct. 5 when Justice Byron R. White issued the stay the court upheld without comment Monday.

"We are chagrined by the court's decision because it effectively prevents the state from carrying out its necessary duties in death penalty cases," said Mattox, who traveled to Washington to personally ask that the stay be overturned.

Autry, 29, was strapped to a wheeled cot in the Texas death house with a needle in his arm when word of White's action reached him four minutes after his execution was to have started.

Autry was convicted and sentenced to death for gunning down Port Arthur grocery store clerk Shirley Drouet, 43, over a six-pack of beer. Also killed in the 1980 robbery was Joseph Broussard, a former priest.

White had said he spared Autry's life because the condemned man's appeal included an issue the Supreme Court already has under study.

At issue in a California case to be argued before the justices Nov. 7 is whether convicted murderers may be executed before a state court studies what punishment others receive for similar crimes.

A federal appeals court ruled in the California case that such a "proportionality review" is required in all death penalty cases. Mattox had assured the justices that Autry had received adequate "state court review of the appropriateness of his capital conviction."

Mattox said he would meet with Bell County authorities to decide whether an execution date should be set for Thomas Barefoot, the next of Texas' more than 160 death row inmates scheduled to die.

"Since the issue of proportionality was not raised in the Barefoot case, we suspect his attorneys will seek a stay of execution based on the Harris case," Mattox said.

A hearing is scheduled in Bell County Nov. 9 to set an execution date for Barefoot.

Mattox said authorities may proceed with the Barefoot case in an effort "to get a more definitive answer from the court" as to whether all Texas' death penalty cases must be put on hold.

Mother of nurse charged with murder sues company for withdrawing bond

KERRVILLE (AP) — The mother of nurse Genene Jones filed suit Monday against the bonding company that withdrew the bail put up for her daughter, who is charged with murder in the death of an infant girl.

The suit filed by Gladys Jones of San Antonio contends that Hill Country Bonding Co. and its executive officer, Dale Moreau, failed to honor the bail contract.

Genene Jones is jailed awaiting her Jan. 9 murder trial in connection with the September 1982 death of 15-month-old Chelsea Ann McClellan.

She will be tried later on charges alleging she caused serious injury to six other children by injecting them with a powerful muscle relaxant.

Ms. Jones was jailed two weeks ago after Moreau asked a judge to release Hill Country Bonding from the $225,000 bond, saying he could not guarantee the nurse would appear in court.

Mrs. Jones' suit said the nurse's whereabouts were "readily obtainable" by Kerr County officials "as evidenced by her immediate arrest" when the bond was revoked.

The suit asks for a refund of the $10,000 bonding fee assessed by the firm and an additional $20,000 in exemplary damages for Moreau's "fraudulent" actions.

A Bexar County grand jury in San Antonio, 60 miles southeast, has been investigating a string of infant deaths at the pediatric intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital between 1978 and early 1982.

Ms. Jones worked at the hospital during that period, before moving here to work in a pediatrics clinic.

She has denied any wrongdoing.

Ex-employees charged with misconduct

ODESSA (AP) — Three former Ector County employees were arraigned Monday on charges of official misconduct stemming from the reported theft of motor vehicle registration fees.

Pam Wells, 21, of Lubbock; Ann Fisher Duncan, 36, of Gardendale; and Karen Jones, 25, of Odessa all pleaded innocent to the charge, which carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison.

State District Judge Joe Connally set $5,000 bonds for the defendants, all former deputies in the county tax assessor-collector's office.

Man charged with murder, robbery

AUSTIN (AP) — Charges of murder and aggravated robbery were filed Monday against David Hernandez Jr. 30, in the slaying of Houston artist Rodney Michael Richardson, 35.

Richardson's partially nude body was found in southeast Travis County Oct. 15.

Officers said investigators believe Richardson was killed inside his van, then the body dumped off the Old Lockhart Road.

Former symphony violinist found dead

BRENHAM (AP) — Eugene Settanni, a former violinist with the New York Philharmonic, Houston Symphony and Dallas Symphony orchestras, was found dead in his home, authorities said Monday. He was 65.

Police, responding to a call from a neighbor who said she had not seen Settanni for a week, found the musician Sunday, police said.

White appoints board members

AUSTIN (AP) — Jose Salgado, principal of Hacienda Heights Elementary School in El Paso was appointed Monday to the Teachers' Professional Practices Commission.

White also appointed Edward N. Borkland of Austin to the State Board of Barber Examiners and Paul Hopkins of LaMarque as chairman of the Texas Water Commission.

Agency discloses failures

HOUSTON (AP) — A telephone "hotline," radio antennas, tide gauges and a radar system, all belonging to the National Weather Service, failed when Hurricane Alicia hit the Texas coast last summer, a study by the agency says.

But the malfunctions did not prevent forecasters from providing good service to residents of the Texas coast during the storm, Richard Coleman, acting director of the agency's severe weather branch, said Monday.

But preliminary findings by a survey team concluded that during the storm, a "hurricane hotline" designed for conference calls among forecasters in Galveston and the National Hurricane Center in Miami malfunctioned.

The study also learned that radio antennas used to broadcast weather information to the public was knocked out, possibly by lightning.

Ex-anchorwoman to fight judge's ruling

Christine Craft

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former television anchorwoman Christine Craft says she's "appalled" and will fight a judge's ruling to throw out a $500,000 verdict in her sex discrimination case after citing "her apparent indifference to matters of appearance."

U.S. District Judge Joseph E. Stevens Jr. on Monday ordered a new trial, saying the jury verdict on Ms. Craft's allegations of fraud against Metromedia Inc. was excessive and resulted from "passion, prejudice, confusion or mistake."

He also ruled that her demotion by KMBC-TV was not the result of sex discrimination and criticized excessive publicity in the case.

"This totally throws out the jury's role and function," said Dennis Egan, an attorney for Ms. Craft.

Kenneth W. Green, foreman of the four-woman, two-man jury, said Monday he did not believe the jury was biased by the publicity.

Ms. Craft's lawyers said they were investigating whether the judge's decision could be appealed immediately to delay or prevent the start of the new trial, which Stevens set for Jan. 4 in Joplin, about 120 miles south of Kansas City.

Ms. Craft, 38, had claimed that she was demoted from co-anchor of news broadcasts to reporter at KMBC-TV in Kansas City in August 1981 for being considered too old, unattractive and not deferential enough to men. Metromedia owned the station then, but sold it to the Hearst Corp.

However, Stevens wrote in a 26-page ruling that KMBC-TV demoted Ms. Craft because her "below-average aptitude in matters of clothing and makeup" had damaged the station's ratings.

Citing Ms. Craft's "affinity for the beach life (while living in California) and her apparent indifference to matters of appearance," the judge said the station's actions were "appropriate to her unique circumstances."

Official rules in favor of adopted mother

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A working mother who won a fight for maternity leave to care for her adopted baby daughter says she feels "joy, elation," and she hopes the ruling will spare other parents "the hassle my husband and I went through."

"From the beginning, I just wanted them to recognize I was a mother and entitled to an unpaid maternity leave ... Was that asking too much?" Carole Fezar said after reading a federal arbitrator's ruling, handed down Monday.

"I hope this decision will ensure no other adopted mothers will have to go through the hassle my husband and I went through," said Mrs. Fezar, who was denied maternity leave last spring because her only child, 9-month-old Kristin Marie, is adopted.

Mrs. Fezar, 39, a tax clerk in the borough of Ambridge for 18 years, said she wasn't surprised by the ruling. She telephoned her husband, Michael, 45, a chemistry professor, at work as soon as she learned of the decision.

"We knew we were right and were going to win," said Mrs. Fezar. "It's joy, elation. But we're not surprised."

Mrs. Fezar filed a grievance with her union, Local 1015 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, after borough council denied on May 31 her request for a one-year unpaid maternity leave.

Council members explained they didn't want to set a precedent and that maternity benefits were meant for "a female borough worker who conceived and got pregnant."

"A woman could adopt a 17-year-old child and receive a one-year child-bearing leave," the borough contended in hearings before Arbitrator Carl Stoltenberg of Pittsburgh.

The union, meanwhile, contended "maternity leave is a contractual right that cannot be denied."

Stoltenberg, whose decision is binding, criticized the borough's definition of maternity.

Anatomy professor awaits trial

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — A former anatomy professor accused in the death of a 21-year-old art-student-turned-prostitute is being held without bail while awaiting trial.

Dr. William H.J. Douglas, 41, pleaded innocent Monday to murder in the death of Robin Nadine Benedict, who disappeared in March and whose body has never been found.

Assistant Distrist Attorney John P. Kivlan said the woman was a promising art student who met Douglas in April 1982 after she turned to prostitution in Boston's Combat Zone. "His contacts with Robin Benedict became an obsession," Kivlan contended, saying evidence shows that Douglas stole $50,000 from his former employer, Tufts University, while seeing the woman.

Official will run for governor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After having "an opportunity to tell the truth" on the witness stand and being acquitted of bribery charges, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green says he'll definitely run for governor.

"The only question is when I will formally announce" for the Democratic nomination, he said Monday at his office decorated with a banner reading: "Congratulations Gov. Green."

He was acquitted Friday of state charges filed following a federal probe of political corruption in which the FBI turned evidence over to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, also a gubernatorial hopeful.

Socialite sentenced to life in prison

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Despite her protests that "I am innocent," a judge sentenced New York socialite Frances Bernice Schreuder to life in prison for plotting her father's death.

Mrs. Schreuder was convicted after her son, Marc Schreuder, 22, testified that she had coaxed him to kill 76-year-old Franklin Bradshaw in July 1978 to keep Bradshaw from cutting her out of his will. Schreuder was sentenced to five years to life on a second-degree murder charge in the case.

Third District Judge Ernest F. Baldwin read from a presentence psychiatric exam which said Mrs. Schreuder was capable of "being a cunning mastermind." Her lawyers plan an appeal.

Ex-executive charged with defraud

NEW YORK (AP) — A former executive of Paine Webber Jackson & Curtis Inc. allegedly ensured that a now-defunct investment firm "almost always profited" on trades involving U.S. Treasury bonds and notes, federal prosecutors say.

William C. Hogan, the former Paine Webber executive, and Robert Blakeney Stevenson, formerly vice-president of Spaulding Securities, were charged Monday with conspiring to defraud Paine Webber.

Senate race called referendum on Reagan

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Touted as a referendum on President Reagan's policies and as a key race in the fight for control of the Senate, the voting on a successor to the late Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson is only a week away with both candidates turning up the steam.

Democratic candidate Mike Lowry wants voters in the Nov. 8 special election to "send a message" of disapproval to Reagan, but polls indicate Republican Dan Evans, who was appointed to fill Jackson's seat, remains the favorite.

Contrasting in style, the two candidates also differ on many issues, most recently on U.S. military involvement in Lebanon and Grenada — Evans calling it justified, Lowry calling for pullouts.

Lowry, 44, a three-term congressman with a fiery style on the stump, is running as a foe of the administration and labels himself the peace candidate.

Evans, 58, a three-term former governor and a calmer presence on the campaign trail, has generally sided with Reagan, particularly on foreign policy, since being appointed Sept. 8, but insists he's an independent thinker.

Lowry supports a nuclear freeze and cutbacks in Reagan's defense budget plans. Evans favors Reagan's "build-down" proposal for arms reduction and generally backs administration defense policy.

Both are considered liberals on environmental issues.

In an Oct. 24-25 poll of 601 Washington voters, Evans held a 53 percent to 41 percent edge, but that represented a gain for Lowery of 5 points from results of another KIRO Broadcasting poll a week earlier.

Evans has led in the polls since his appointment to succeed Jackson, a Democrat, who died unexpectedly on Sept. 1.

The appointment gave Republicans 55 seats in the 100-member Senate. However, more Republicans than Democrats are up for re-election next fall and some key GOP members, including Howard Baker of Tennesee and John Tower of Texas, have announced their retirements.

Friends pay tribute to Lillian Carter

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — A white ribbon, whispered condolences and a scrawled, "Goodbye, Miss Lillian," served as simple tributes in advance of graveside ceremonies for the mother of former President Jimmy Carter.

Lillian Carter, who died of cancer Sunday at age 85, was described as a "pioneer woman" and as "a lot of fun" by residents of this tiny southwest Georgia town.

She was to be buried this afternoon next to her husband's grave, less than a mile from her last residence, "Pond House."

The former president and his family remained at the house Monday. Carter and his brother Billy helped bear their mother's coffin in from a hearse.

Among those who telephoned to express their condolences was President Reagan, a White House spokesman said.

At the downtown railroad depot which served as headquarters for the Carter presidential campaigns in 1976 and 1980, a white ribbon was placed on the locked entrance as a small memento.

At the Georgia Visitors Center on the outskirts of Plains, a tourist had scrawled a simple message in the guest book: "Goodbye, Miss Lillian."

Arriving at the house, the former president smiled and waved to security men and a few reporters who had gathered on the roadside in front of the house.

Aides had said Carter would issue no statements to the press. But in a brief aside to a reporter, he said his mother's death was "very peaceful, there was no pain."

Hugh Carter, the former president's cousin, said the death of Mrs. Carter was "really sad coming so soon after Ruth. She knew she was sick but she seemed to give up after Ruth's death."

Ruth Carter Stapleton, Mrs. Carter's second youngest child, died Sept. 26 of cancer at her home in North Carolina.

Hugh Carter called his aunt "a great lady."

"I always thought of her as kind of like the old pioneer women," said Maxine Reese, organizer of Carter's "Peanut Brigade" campaigners of 1976.

Ray Mathcock, the Georgia state trooper who served as her personal escort and security during the Carter presidency, remembered her as "a lot of fun. She could take... the dullest situation, and turn it into a fun event with her candor."

George Halas dies at 88

"Papa Bear" last NFL original

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — "Papa Bear" George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears and last survivor of the pioneering group that founded modern professional football in a Canton, Ohio, auto showroom, has died at the age of 88.

Halas, whose teams won eight national championships and produced 20 members of pro football's Hall of Fame over a career that spanned seven decades, died just after 8:30 p.m. Monday at his apartment on Chicago's North Side, family members said.

Halas had been in and out of hospitals for the past year with heart problems and other ailments. His daughter, Virginia Halas McCaskey, was at his bedside when he died, his grandson, Rich McCaskey, said.

His death prompted an outpouring of tributes from former players, coaches and others who remembered his contributions to the game and his feisty, driving personality.

"George Halas leaves modern professional football as his memorial," said Commissioner Pete Rozelle. "He was the National Football League — its founder, the driving force that sustained it during struggling pioneer years, the owner-coach-innovator whose dynamic Bear teams triggered public acceptance of the NFL and the revered elder statesman whose vision and vitality were pivotal in the league's growth."

"I think the biggest quality Coach Halas had was he was a very inspirational guy," added current Bears Coach Mike Ditka, whose often-stormy career as a player under Halas spanned six seasons and included the team's last championship, in 1963.

"His talks at halftime — I wish that I had taped a few of them so that I could use them," Ditka said. "They were unbelievable. No matter what had happened in the first half, he could make you feel like you could do anything when you went back out the door. You may not be able to do it, but you thought you could."

Halas was the last survivor of 12 men who met in 1920 at a Canton, Ohio, automobile agency to establish the American Professional Football Association, forerunner of the National Football League.

On his 82nd birthday, Halas said: "It has been the most priceless privilege of my professional life to see our dreams come true and to watch our ugly duckling grow up to be a magnificent eagle."

He acknowledged that he "never thought it would be this big."

Halas, born Feb. 2, 1895, grew up on Chicago's West Side. He played college football at the University of Illinois, where the idea of professional football first occurred to him after he heard the legendary Coach Bob Zuppke lament, "When a boy finally learns to play football, he graduates from college."

After a stint in the Navy and a brief tenure as a right fielder for the New York Yankees — he often joked that he was "replaced" by Babe Ruth" — Halas in 1920 went to work for A. E. Staley, a corn products company in Decatur, Ill., "to learn the starch business."

There, he organized an athletic team, the Decatur Staleys.

By 1922, with finanical backing from the company's owner, Halas was in Chicago coaching the team, now officially named the Bears.

Years of selling tickets and writing game stories himself, as well as passing hats in the stands to collect money for players, began to end when Halas arranged the signing of legendary Illinois running back Red Grange, "The Galloping Ghost," for $100,000 in 1925.

On Thanksgiving Day that year, Grange made his debut, drawing 36,000 fans to Wrigley Field. The Bears then went on a coast-to-coast tour, paving the way for football to become a big-time sport.

During the next four decades, Halas led his "Monsters of the Midway" to more victories than any other coach — college or professional — has ever won.

Barnes plays with no handicap

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The name of Ed Barnes is not new to the Midland golf scene, having won several partnership titles in the West Texas area. However, Barnes has opened some Midland eyes this fall.

At age 37, Barnes is still playing golf as you would expect. But he is wearing the green and gold of Midland College. A college golfer at age 37? Yep, Ed Barnes is after the kids.

"I went back to school to learn some of the syntax on computer systems and the idea of playing golf never entered my mind," said Barnes, who owns the Sterling Golf Company where golf clubs are manufactured and repaired.

"Most people think I went back to college to play golf, but it wasn't that way at all. After I enrolled in school, I was discussing the possibility with one of the boys at the shop and Delnor (Poss) called me to see if I was interested."

Poss is MC's athletic director and golf coach. "We checked to see if Ed was eligible, but I knew he was before that. The rules for junior colleges states that an athlete has not played at the college level.

"It's different in the NCAA where you can not compete after the age of 25," Poss said.

Barnes liked the idea of the challenge, but this endeavour has turned out to be more than he bargained for.

"Going back to school requires a lot more time and energy than I thought it would, and playing golf has turned out to be a hard way to get through school," Barnes said. "It's been an experience to say the least."

Barnes didn't start playing golf competively until 1975, and that was limited to mostly partnership tournaments. There is a difference, according to Barnes.

"I've won some partnership tournaments in West Texas, mostly Amarillo and some in Kansas, but that is a different game than college team golf.

"In partnership golf, I spent most of my time visiting with my partner. There is a lot more pressure in college golf. In partnership play, you can make a bad shot and your partner can save you. In college golf, you are messing up five other guys when you mess up."

Barnes is a 1964 graduate from Pampa high, but he didn't play golf in high school. His seasoning has come on his own, and he plays out of Green Tree Country Club.

Still, Barnes has handled the new "pressures" well this fall. He has tied for medalist honors in his last two tournaments with MC teammate Jeff Cranford.

"Ed had a 74 in some high winds in a tournament out at Green Tree and he had a 73 in a tournament over in Snyder on the Western Texas course. He's done a good job for us so far," says Poss.

"Maybe the hardest thing to adjust to is that you are not with anyone your own age," claims Barnes. "That can be a hard thing to deal with. It's been a different experience."

Different experiences are part of life, and Ed Barnes seems to be making the most of his.

MHS-Lee has added importance

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

An unexpected football drama will unfold Friday night at Memorial Stadium when the Midland High Bulldogs seek to end a season of frustration by taking on the playoff hopeful Midland Lee Rebels.

Going into last weekend, it was supposed to be just another city bragging rights shootout. That was reason enough to make it a big game, but Lee's 23-21 loss to Abilene Cooper has suddenly made this outing bigger than Super Sunday.

THE LINE on the right says that if Lee wins, the Rebels are playoff bound. The line on the left says that if Midland High wins, the Sky Dawgs will return to the city throne room for the second year in a row and may knock Lee right out of its Thanksgiving plans.

Lee could have sewed up that playoff berth with a victory over Cooper Friday. Business was left unattended, however, and now Lee must win, or face the possibility of sitting home again.

Last year was the same scene. Lee could have been in the playoffs with a victory, and MHS jumped all over the Rebels in a 14-6 win and both teams ended up losing playoff hopes in a four-way flip-off.

The only difference this year is that the Bulldogs don't have any playoff hopes to fuel this year's fire.

Both teams seem to be taking a low-key approach for this one, but neither have had problems finding a reason for victory.

THE FOLLOWING is a sample of how the players of MHS and Lee view Friday's outing:

Midland High offensive guard Jeff Dailey: "We are working hard this week. I think everyone wants this one bad."

Lee fullback Isaac Garnett: "We are in the same shape as we were in last year and that didn't turn out so well. We just have to prove to ourselves that we can play. We're disappointed about the loss to Cooper last week, but that's history. We have to accept that and look to this week. We've just got to try and make it to the playoffs."

Midland High receiver Todd Shiplet: "I think we're prepared. It's going to be a big game. It would be nice to win this one."

Lee defensive tackle Pat Stevens: "I don't think the Bulldogs will want any part of us Friday after the way we played against Cooper. We better be ready for this one."

MHS CENTER John David Munn: "We would really like to take this one. We're working hard and I'm looking forward to playing Lee."

Lee defensive end Eddie Kittle: "I think everyone is excited about playing this game. I'm looking forward to it and we need this one."

MHS receiver Alan Foret: "I don't know how this one will come out. We'll just have to wait and see how things go, but I think we will be ready to play."

Lee defensive end Nicky Tomlin: "I don't know how this game is going to come out. I guess this is why we are going to play this game. We have confidence that we can win, but confidence doesn't win the games. You have to play the game first. But I guess confidence is a good starting place."

Midland High quarterback James Welborn, who will be playing for the first time in two weeks since knee surgery. "I could have played last Friday, but they wouldn't let me. I'm ready to go and I really want to play in this one."

Lee defensive back Andre Mayfield: "The paper never says anything about the defensive backs, so I guess we will have to play well Friday to prove our stuff."

There is really no bullentin board material here for the respective lockerrooms, but the idea is there. Both teams want a victory. Both have incentive. And both have respect for each other.

THESE GAMES have tradionally been great football games. The Lee-MHS outing is a highlight for both teams. Respect on both sides has been earned, and therefore, it has never been a "hate" game. That tradition holds this week.

Neither team is taking this one for granted and neither team is saying bad things about the other. No coaches were present when questions were asked, which tells you something about the character of both units. Both want to win. Both have pride.

There are still kids to be proud of in Midland, Texas.

Nebraska and Texas remained 1-2 for the seventh week in a row Monday in the Associated Press college football poll, while Auburn and Georgia set the stage for their Nov. 12 Southeastern Conference showdown by moving into the 3-4 spots.

Nebraska, a 51-25 winner over Kansas State, received 57 of 59 first-place votes and 1,178 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Texas, which defeated Texas Tech 20-3, received the other two first-place votes and 1,123 points.

Last week, with 58 voters participating, Nebraska led 54-4 in first-place votes and 1,156-1,106 in points.

Previously unbeaten North Carolina lost to Maryland 28-26 and skidded from third place to 10th. Meanwhile, Auburn downed Florida 28-21 and rose from fourth to third with 1,048 points — the Gators dropped from fifth to ninth — and Georgia jumped from sixth to fourth with 954 points following a 31-14 triumph over Temple.

Miami of Florida beat West Virginia 20-3 and vaulted from seventh to fifth with 952 points, while Illinois defeated Michigan 16-6 in their Big Ten shootout and shot from ninth to sixth with 895 points. The Wolverines dropped from eighth to 13th.

Area schools scramble for playoff berths

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

As the 1983 football regular season closes this week for all but AAAA schools, the rush is on for playoff berths.

Where the Permian Basin area teama are concerned, all have clear plans as to how to get those berths. Last Friday's results have clarified the picture for most, but there are still a few riddles left in the '83 campaign.

The Greenwood Rangers became the first of the area squads to clinch a playoff spot. Greenwood's 35-12 defeat of Eden last Friday sewed up the district 7-A crown.

The Rangers, now 7-2 and winners of seven straight, had best enjoy their class A playoff schedules. Greenwood found out last weekend that they will be jumping up to the AA level next fall.

"It's going to be a step up for our program," said Greenwood coach Joe Longley. "But it will take a year or two to re-adjust. Our program isn't ready yet for AA."

Whether that is modesty or coaching rhetoric, one thing is certain: the Rangers are ready for class A ball. The district switch will put them in the current 8-AA district. Greenwood will replace Miles in the district with Stanton, McCamey, Wall, Eldorado and Reagan County.

And speaking of 8-AA, the Wall Hawks locked up that district's title with a 31-2 win over Stanton last Friday. The Hawks ended a three-game win streak for the Buffs, but more importantly the outcome resulted in a big game Friday.

The Buffs host McCamey, and both teams are 3-1 and in second place. Friday's winner will grab the last playoff spot, so it's do or die time for the two squads.

Stanton has had a roller-coaster year at 4-5. McCamey, conversely, has been a relatively steady force and is 6-3. The Badgers and Buffaloes both have first-year mentors in Buster Leaf and Dale Ruth, respectively. Comparing scores would favor the Badgers. Outside of the district, the teams do have a common opponent in Crane. McCamey lost to the Cranes 24-14, and the Buffs lost 27-0.

Within the loop, Stanton's loss at Wall was 31-2, McCamey's was 7-0, but against the lower teams Stanton has the edge.

McCamey, on the other hand, will have to make some stops on the defense. The Badgers haven't played top notch defense with any regularity.

In 6-AAA, Crane has yet to lose a ballgame in 1983, but the Cranes still haven't clinched a playoff spot.

How has this happened?

Crane's 14-14 tie with fourth-ranked Ballinger last week didn't really help the Cranes all that much. At 8-0-1, Ballinger and Crane have identical marks but Ballinger has the nod due to a technicality. Ballinger and Crane tied on penetrations but the Bearcats had a 20-7 advantage in first downs.

Thus, Crane is in second place with an 8-0-1 mark.

The sticky part comes where Colrado City enters the picture. Colorado City is 3-1 in district compared to the Cranes' 3-0-1. Ballinger notched the loss on the Colorado City ledger, 14-7.

Friday, Crane and Colorado City meet. Assuming Ballinger beats Coahoma (4-5), this is the scenario: Friday's winner takes the remaining playoff spot. A tie gives the spot to Crane.

If Ballinger loses, things get confusing. Then, a Colorado City win gives Colorado City the district title, and Crane stays at home. If Crane wins, they get the district crown, and Ballinger would stay home. A tie would really foul things up, but Crane would get the district, Ballinger would finish second and C-City gets frozen.

Now, if Ballinger ties their game, everybody goes home and waits for the newspapers and the UIL to figure it out.

It's the kind of situation that only Ross Perot could enjoy.

Elsewhere, in district 2-AAAA, four teams are staging just this kind of madness as well. Monahans, Lake View, Sweetwater and Pecos are all involved in a huge mess that won't come close to being unraveled until Friday. The only certainty is that Andrews, Lamesa, Fort Stockton and snake-bitten Snyder don't have a chance.

Monahans is the district leader at 5-0, but the schools behind all figure. Sweetwater (3-1-1) plays Lake View (4-1) Friday, and Monahans hosts 4-1 Pecos. Friday's winners will breathe easier. Only Sweetwater, however, could be in real trouble with a loss. Everyone else, regardless of Friday's outcome, will be alive. Monahans could clinch the district title with a win over the Eagles.

Redskins survive Charger rally

SAN DIEGO (AP) — For a few anxious minutes, Mark Moseley knew what it felt like to be in Neil O'Donoghue's shoes.

After missing four field goals in Monday night's game against San Diego, Moseley was fighting a case of nerves when he lined up for what he called "the hardest field goal I ever had to kick in my career.

"I was over there on the sidelines praying to get another chance," said Moseley, a veteran of 12 National Football League seasons.

His 37-yard field goal with four seconds left produced a 27-24 victory over the Chargers and helped Moseley, 35, conquer a confidence crisis that traced back to a key miss two weeks ago.

A YEAR ago, he was near-perfect for the Super Bowl champion Redskins, hitting 20 of 21 field goals for an all-time NFL accuracy mark. Over two seasons, he had made 23 consecutive kicks, another NFL record.

But Monday night he was near the breaking point.

"I wouldn't be human if I didn't say I was thinking about the four misses," said Moseley, who had failed from 43, 52, 47 and 39 yards. He also had made a 43-yarder.

The winning kick "felt like I had a 1,000 pounds taken off my shoulders," a relieved Moseley told reporters. "It's been a mental struggle all year. Tonight was the turning point of my career."

It was the third consecutive week that a field goal kicker determined the outcome of the Monday night NFL game.

In last week's 20-20 tie between St. Louis and the New York Giants, the Cardinals' O'Donoghue missed three field goal attempts in the overtime period.

Two weeks ago Moseley missed a 39-yarder as time ran out, allowing the Green Bay Packers to preserve a 48-47 victory on Jan Stenerud's 20-yard field goal with 54 seconds left.

WITH THE victory, Washington improved its record to 7-2 in the NFC East, a game behind the 8-1 Dallas Cowboys. San Diego slipped to 3-6 and has a three-game losing streak, its longest in five years under Coach Don Coryell.

Moseley's kick erased a dramatic comeback by the Chargers, who trailed 24-7 early in the fourth quarter and tied it at 24-24 with 1:52 remaining on a 43-yard field goal by Rolf Benirschke.

San Diego quarterback Ed Luther overcame six interceptions, a fumble and a sack to ignite the 17-point fourth quarter with a pair of touchdown passes 4½ minutes apart.

But, after Benirschke tied it, the Redskins drove 72 yards in the final two minutes to grab the victory.

Washington built its lead by converting three of Luther's interceptions into 17 points. Redskins' safety Mark Murphy had three interceptions. San Diego also lost two fumbles, including one that rolled through the Washington end zone for a touchback.

Joe Theismann completed 25 of 46 passes for 324 yards while Luther finished with 19 completions in 36 tries for 314 yards.

"It's tough to take," said Luther. "We stopped ourselves."

USFL propositions Randy White

DALLAS (AP) — The New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League have made a preliminary offer to Dallas Cowboys tackle Randy White of $700,000 a year and a $400,000 signing bonus, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The offer would begin with the 1985 season, the newspaper said.

"The only thing I've said is that it would take a whole lot of money to get me away from Dallas, because I love playing for the Cowboys," White said. "I wouldn't want to leave Dallas, but that's a lot of money they're talking about."

The $400,000 bonus would be the highest signing bonus ever paid to a professional football player. White currently makes $300,000 a year. He will enter the option year on his contract next season.

White said he would not negotiate with the Generals or the Cowboys until the end of the season.

Halas' career: a history of NFL's founding father

CHICAGO (AP) — George Stanley Halas — the crusty, iron-willed innovator who built the Chicago Bears into a football power and the National Football League into a multi-million dollar business — got into professional football through professional baseball.

The year was 1919, and Halas was a right fielder for the New York Yankees under Miller Huggins. In his 12th major league game, Halas suffered a severe hip injury as he slid into third on a triple.

"There goes one of the best prospects I ever saw," Huggins moaned. But Halas, with the advantage of hindsight, could afford to joke about that day in later years.

"It was probably the biggest break in my life," he said. "Not too long after that the Yankees acquired a guy named Babe Ruth to play right field."

So Halas turned to football, and the game was never the same. He played, he coached, he sold tickets and in the days before the great media floods, he even wrote stories of the games and went to newspapers to have results of the games printed.

Halas was around when the players passed hats throughout the stands to collect money and he was around when sponsors were paying hundreds and thousands of dollars for a commercial minute on television.

It was Halas who realized pro football's potential for popularity and, back in 1951, "Papa Bear" paid out of his own pocket to have Bear games televised into places such as Minneapolis and Louisville.

"We knew we had a great attraction," Halas once said. "But we had to show the public and the television people how great an attraction professional football was."

Despite the game's popularity today, it was a long struggle in the early years. There were times Halas paid his players with IOUs. During the Great Depression in the 1930s, Halas had to borrow $5,000 from the late sportsman Charles Bidwill to keep the Bears afloat.

The idea of professional football struck Halas during his days as a player at the University of Illinois under the legendary Bob Zuppke.

Halas was standing nearby when Coach Zuppke shook his head one day and said, "When a boy finally learns to play football, he graduates from college."

"The thought stuck in my head," said Halas, who completed his civil engineering studies at Illinois in 3½ years and went off to the Navy in 1918.

Halas played with Great Lakes team that defeated Navy 7-6 in 1919 and then defeated the Mare Island Marines 17-0 in the Rose Bowl. Halas left the Navy in 1919 and played Yankees until the hip injury ended his career.

The following year, Halas went to work for the A.E. Staley Co. in Decatur, Ill., "to learn the starch business" and became the firm's athletic director.

Halas organized the Decatur Staleys football team and was in line for a promotion in the glucose department of the starchworks when the 1921 recession hit.

The company couldn't underwrite the team any longer, Halas recalled, so "Mr. Staley gave me $5,000 to move the team to Chicago and call them the Staleys for one year."

Halas moved the team to Wrigley Field and the following year adopted the name of the Chicago Bears as partial identification with the baseball Chicago Cubs.

Despite financial difficulties, Halas managed to hold onto the team. He was instrumental in changing the rules to step scoring and modernized the game. But it wasn't until 1925 that the game began "catching on."

Then came the great manuever. Halas eventually enticed Red Grange, the Galloping Ghost from Illinois, to turn professional for $100,000.

On Thanksgiving Day 1925, Grange made his professional debut and the Bears packed Wrigley Field with a crowd of 36,000.

"If there had been room, we could have put in another 30,000," said Halas. "We went to New York and drew 65,000 the day after the Army-Navy game drew 60,000." It was the beginning of a coast-to-coast tour in which the Bears played 16 games from Nov. 26 through Jan. 31 interrupted by a two-week rest.

Halas had turned pro football into a big time sport and his "Monsters of the Midway" became a legend, stringing together a series of championships.

Halas went back into the Navy during World War II. Upon his return in 1946, and the Bears, led by quarterback Sid Luckman, the team won another championship.

The Bears then had their ups and downs as the struggle for talent grew throughout the growing and expanding league and in 1956 Halas "retired" as coach for the third time, handing the reins to his old buddy, Paddy Driscoll.

Driscoll coached the team until Halas made another comeback in 1959. In 1963, at the age of 68, Halas led the Bears to their last NFL championship with a 14-10 victory over the New York Giants, a day Halas described as "one of the greatest in my life."

In 1968, at the age of 73, Halas permanently retired from coaching with a record of 326 victories, 150 defeats and 30 ties. He remained a dominant figure in the organization but the Bears' fortunes kept slipping.

Halas suffered a tremendous blow when his son died of a massive heart attack at the age of 54 in December 1979, the year the Bears made the playoffs. They lost in the wild-card game to Philadelphia 27-17.

During the 1981 season, Halas, apparently dissatisfied with the way things were going, decided to reassert himself. After the end of the season, Halas announced he was going to retain Buddy Ryan as defensive coordinator and then fired Coach Neill Armstrong.

Halas had asked and received permission from the Dallas Cowboys to talk to his former tight end, Mike Ditka, about the head coaching job. On Jan. 20, 1982, Halas signed Ditka as head coach.

The Bears under Ditka continued to flounder, but Halas remained interested to the last.

5A football title slated for TV

AUSTIN (AP) — Millions of football-crazy Texans will be able to watch the Class 5A high school gridiron championship on television next month, but there'll be no second looks at close calls.

The agreement between the University Interscholastic League and Sports Productions Inc. of Dallas includes a ban on replays of controversial calls by officials. Also unseen will be athletes being treated for injuries.

"We feel like we just want to show the positive sides of the game," UIL Director Bailey Marshall said Monday.

UIL official Bob Young said, "It's high school kids. We don't want to cause any embarrassment to anybody."

Young said the list of "no-nos" also prohibits the announcers from questioning officials' decisions.

"Sometimes I think that is all the announcers do," he added.

Other no-nos are live interviews with coaches, and commercials advertising beer or wine.

"I don't think there's anything worse than interviewing a coach on the sideline when he's getting ready to play," said Russ Potts, president of Sports Productions.

He said the ban on criticism of referees does not bother him.

"I don't think there's anything wrong with those kinds of suggestions," Potts said. He said the announcers will be free to comment on the play.

"If somebody drops a sure touchdown pass one of our announcers will say, 'That was a sure touchdown pass,'" he said.

Sportscaster Verne Lundquist of Dallas is set as the play-by-play man for the Dec. 17 game. Former University of Texas coach Darrell Royal will be one of the color announcers. Roger Staubach will join Lundquist and Royal if the game is in the Dallas area. If not, veteran announcer Frank Fallon will be the third man.

The game will be the first Texas championship game televised statewide. Potts said stations around the state have signed on for the telecast.

"We are covered in every area," said Potts, former Southern Methodist University athletic director.

The site for the game won't be selected until the final two teams are known.

Marshall said the UIL probably will get $20,000 from the telecast. The schools involved will split $16,000.

For the UIL — an agency under heavy criticism from Ross Perot, chairman of a special committee on education — the televised contest is a great public relations opportunity, Marshall said.

"We're more interested in showing the educational values of the different activities — the bands, the drill teams, the pep squads and the involvement of all the people in the community," he said.

Potts, who said the game won't be a big money-maker for his company, agreed.

"It's a chance for the league to convey what a tremendous spectacle the game is. The timing is good for the league to put its best foot forward on television," he said.

Akers hides UT starter

AUSTIN (AP) — Coach Fred Akers of No. 2-ranked Texas withheld the name Monday of his starting quarterback for the Houston game, but agreed people would probably think it will be junior Todd Dodge.

Dodge relieved starter Rob Moerschell late in the first half Saturday with Texas trailing Texas Tech 3-0 and guided the Longhorns to 20 second-half points and a 20-3 victory.

For his performance, throwing for 118 yards and scoring on a 12-yard run, Dodge was selected by Longhorn coaches as the team's outstanding offensive player.

Asked if people would "draw the inference" that Dodge should be the starter against Houston on Saturday, Akers told his weekly news conference, "Probably. But that doesn't affect what we do one bit."

Akers acknowledged that Moerschell, who became the starter when Dodge got hurt in preseason, "was having some problems, a little off-target throwing" against Tech.

But Akers said, "This is one of the traps of being a quarterback. Everything that doesn't work is your fault, and that's not the case most of the time, and it wasn't the case out there Saturday. He (Moerschell) had some help in some unsuccessful plays."

Akers said the quarterback situation, with Moerschell, Dodge and third-teamer Rick McIvor, a former starter, "is a strength when it was a big question mark before the season."

On defense, Longhorn coaches chose safety Jerry Gray as the outstanding player in the Tech game. Gray had 12 tackles, nine unassisted, and intercepted a pass to set up a field goal.

Akers described Houston, 3-5, as a "far, far better team than what their record indicates. Fact of the matter is, nobody's really stopped Houston — they've stopped themselves.

"They're a big, fast football team. They have a field full of athletes."

Texas, 7-0, needs to win three of its last four football games to go to the Cotton Bowl, and Akers said:

"Everybody from this point on in our season, teams that have themselves mathematically eliminated — out of the race — for the championship, we can expect a super effort, a season-maker when you somehow put it together for a team that is say No. 2 in the nation and leading the conference or whatever. We happened to be doing both, so we expect to see them (Houston) at their best."

"There's not a football team in this conference that does not have the physical talent to win," said Akers. "There's just not one."

Rangers take Arlington operation

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — When the city of Arlington bows out of the entertainment business Tuesday, the Texas Rangers will become the nation's second major league baseball team to operate its own stadium.

The Rangers will lease the 140-acre Arlington Stadium for 21 years, paying an average of $1.7 million annually to retire the city's $36 million stadium debt.

Previously, only the Los Angeles Dodgers have operated a stadium, said Rangers spokesman Burt Hawkins.

Until this week, the city operated the stadium and in return received all parking and advertising revenue and about 75 percent of the concessions revenue.

City officials say the entertainment complex that included the stadium and the failed Seven Seas amusement park lost money every year since it opened in 1972. The losses, they say, led to a massive bond debt, the fifth highest in Texas.

Arlington Stadium and the Seven Seas park have a combined bond debt of $60.4 million — nearly 40 percent of the city's bond debt of more than $153.7 million, city records show.

City officials have signed an agreement with a Dallas developer to build a hotel and office building on the Seven Seas site.

Rotan's inspirational Govan an 85-year-old legend

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

ROTAN, Texas (AP) — They call him "H," but his name is William Henry Govan, and he's a legend for all the right — and a few of the wrong — reasons.

For starters, he's 85 years old and as sturdy as a West Texas mesquite tree.

By his own count, he's shined more shoes, pushed more mops, carried more waterbuckets and shaken more hands than probably any living soul.

Certainly he's seen more high school football games than anyone else in this sun-baked West Texas town of 2,284, a farming community surrounded by cows, cotton fields and oil rigs.

"I guess I've missed three or four games in 60 years," said Govan, removing the trademark Yellowhammer cap that symbolizes his bond with the Rotan High School football team.

He was there when Rotan played its first football game, a 6-0 thriller, beating Aspermont in 1923. The original waterboy, Govan performed other duties through the years and even did some assistant coaching during World War II when manpower was scarce.

His handshakes with each player remain as much a pregame tradition as the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

"I've seen many a boy come and go, and I never did see a bad one," he recalled with a huge grin. "They're all good kids, and they've been good to me."

A healthy number of those "kids" returned Friday night for the unveiling of a bigger-than-life granite monument honoring Govan for his life-long contribution to the team and the town.

The tribute overshadowed the Yellowhammers' 23-0 loss to Hamlin's Pied Pipers.

"He's the most remarkable man you'll ever meet," said Kim Pease, publisher of the weekly Rotan Advance. "He's honest and sincere and the kids love him."

And he them.

"Those kids never thought about me being a Negro," said a misty-eyed Govan.

A native of Crockett in East Texas, William Henry Govan rode a train into Rotan in 1919, lured, he said, by the prospect of $6 a day wages at a local oil mill.

"I'd never made more than a dollar and a half a day before," he smiled. "I got the job."

Three weeks later, he wrote a letter to his girlfriend in Crockett, and when she accepted his proposal of marriage he hopped back on the train and went after her.

The couple settled into a four-room home Govan built for $1,200 in 1924 and there they remained, inseparable, until his wife died several years ago.

The house is much larger now, though his only daughter has married and moved to Odessa, where she teaches in the public schools.

Years ago, when the seasonal oil mill work played out, Govan took a job shining shoes at a barber shop at a dime a pop.

"There's not a building in town that would hold all the shoes I've shined," he chuckled.

"He shined shoes for me 17 years," recalled barber A.B. Parker. "He's just as straight as a shingle," which, the barber went on to explain, means he's "solid as a rock."

Govan spent 35 years as janitor of the bank and another 17 working at a drug store and allowed as how "the mopping I've done would be around the world three or four times."

He also raised pigs and farmed his own 125 acres until eight years ago when his daughter told him, "Daddy, get off that tractor before you run over yourself!"

He sold the tractor and leased the farm but kept his pigs.

Govan says his most prized possession is the autographed game ball from Rotan's 1962 victory over Ingleside for the Class A state championship.

"We had 'em down 35-0 at the half," he remembered. "That was the best team I have seen at Rotan."

The football was damaged and many of his mementos destroyed in a fire at his home last summer. The townspeople chipped in to restore his home if not his treasures.

To portray Govan as a popular handyman and football fan would be like describing Tom Landry as just another coach.

"He means a lot to a lot of people and a lot of different things to a lot of different people," said Bill Day, a clothier who has known Govan all his life.

Ft. Worth's Gill behind Big Red success

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Quarterback Turner Gill says that four years ago he could not have imagined he would be directing the University of Nebraska's run at the 1983 national collegiate football championship.

In fact, there were recruiters who said the two-time All-Big Eight Conference quarterback would not play at Nebraska because he was black and the school didn't play black quarterbacks.

"A lot of things can happen. But that's one thing no one will ever be able to take away from me," said Gill, the Texan who has guided Nebraska to a 26-1 record in games he has started over the past three seasons. Gill scored three touchdowns Saturday as the No. 1-ranked Huskers whipped Kansas State 51-25 to raise their record to 9-0 this season.

But Gill, a product of Fort Worth's Arlington Heights High School, has not and will not take this year's rise to national prominence for granted.

He looks at the attention showered upon him, I-back Mike Rozier and wingback Irving Fryar more philosophically than most.

"Looking back four years ago, I don't think anyone could have dreamed all this would be happening," Gill said. "I was not highly recruited. Some big schools wanted me, but they wanted me as a defensive back. (Nebraska) Coach Tom Osborne was the only coach who wanted me as a quarterback.

"I wasn't the only one who wasn't heavily recruited," Gill said. "Mike and Irving weren't highly recruited either. They were two great athletes in New Jersey, just waiting to be discovered.

"Why did I leave Texas to come to Nebraska? Why did they leave New Jersey to come to Nebraska?" he asked. "What did Coach Osborne see that other coaches didn't see? Why did we like him? Why did he like us?"

Gill thinks part of the answer is "Coach Osborne can judge character and talent as well as anybody."

But Osborne does not take singular credit for his good fortune.

"Basically, Frank Solich ran across both Mike and Irving while looking at other people," he said. "He had a good eye for talent. When we saw the film, we knew they were both great athletes."

And Osborne knew Gill was tailor-made for his offense, even though he had only played one year as a high school quarterback.

Gill has justified the coach's faith in him, rolling up some impressive statistics this season. He has run 81 times for 373 yards and nine touchdowns, and completed 69 of 117 passes for 1,115 yards and 10 TDs with only two interceptions.

"Everybody told me Nebraska wouldn't play a black quarterback," Gill said. "(Oklahoma's) Barry Switzer said it. So did some other coaches. But Coach Osborne didn't say it. If he had, it would have hurt me. But I could tell he was going to give me every opportunity.

"I'm a strong person. I liked the challenge. When I first came here, I was determined to be the first black quarterback (at Nebraska). No one knew me. No one had any idea how much that meant to me. I knew it had to happen sometime. I thought it might as well be me. Twenty or 30 years from now, it'll mean even more to me."

Switzer denied Gill's accusation.

"I never said that," Switzer said. "I never would have said that about a Tom Osborne program.

"Frankly, I didn't know (when recruiting him) that he was that good a quarterback."

Switzer said he was interested in Gill as a split end or defensive back and a secondary quarterback.

He said he thought Nebraska was viewing him the same way.

Switzer said he does not use that type of tactic in recruiting. He said he prefers to play up the advantages of Oklahoma.

Later, Switzer issued a revised statement, saying, "To be honest and truthful, it's been so long I honestly don't remember. If I did say it, I obviously was wrong."

Osborne realizes Gill's initial incentive was no small hurdle.

"Some schools used that against us," he said, referring to the fact that Nebraska had not had a regular black quarterback before Gill. "It may not seem like much to our fans. But when you're sitting down there in Fort Worth, Texas, hearing people talk about being black or being white, it's bound to affect you. I'm just glad Turner finally believed me."

Gill is considered the unflappable influence on the unbeaten Huskers.

Rozier may be the Huskers' best known player, but Gill may be their most valuable player, according to many coaches, including former Arkansas Coach Frank Broyles, now a football commentator for ABC-TV.

"I just want to be known as a winner," he said. "I couldn't care less about the stats (statistics) or being an All-American. All I want is to win a national championship."

And play in the National Football League.

"The prime goal of any football player is to play in the NFL," Gill said. "All I want is the chance. That's all I ask. As far as passing the ball, I haven't used near the talent I have. I haven't even begun to use it. I can read defenses and I can pass. I caught on quick here. And I can catch on quick in the NFL."

Osborne shares that opinion. "If somebody looks at Turner without any preconceived ideas, if somebody believes in him and gives him a chance, there's no doubt in my mind that he can play in the NFL," Osborne said.

Senators vow to filibuster natural gas decontrol bill

WASHINGTON — A bipartisan group of 18 senators, most from the Midwest, vowed Monday to filibuster if necessary to block Senate passage of legislation that would end strict price controls on so-called "old gas."

The Senate is expected to begin work Tuesday on a bill approved earlier this year by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee that ends price controls on old gas, which is defined under federal law as gas drilled for before 1978.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., said at a press conference Monday "it is essential that we get a constructive natural gas bill before winter sets in. I believe old gas should not be decontrolled until market distortions have ended."

She cited the long-simmering controversy over "take or pay" clauses in contracts between pipelines and producers which require the pipelines to pay for gas even if they do not need it as one area that must be addressed.

Kassebaum is leading the group of senators and was joined at the press conference by Missouri's senators, Republican John Danforth and Democrat Thomas Eagleton, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, and Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Metzenbaum, as he has in the past, promised to filibuster legislation that "has any element of decontrol in it."

"Decontrol is not going to pass the U.S. Senate," he said flatly. "It doesn't have the votes and all of us are determined that it will not pass."

Kassebaum, however, distanced herself from Metzenbaum, and suggested that more efforts be directed toward drafting a compromise before delaying tactics are employed. She has a philosophical distaste for filibusters, according to aides.

The Consumer Federation of America has estimated that decontrol would result in a $40 billion windfall for the largest oil companies, which collectively control most of the old gas in the country.

Once the Senate starts work on the bill, the group plans to offer a bill Kassebaum introduced earlier in this year that is strongly backed by labor and consumer groups.

The bill, drafted by the Citizens/Labor Energy Coalition, would, among other things, retain controls on old gas, add a "prudence" standard that pipeline companies must meet before they are granted automatic pass-throughs of higher gas-buying costs, and rollback wellhead prices to August, 1982 levels.

"It's not anything that everybody would like, but we think it's something everybody can live with," Danforth said of the bill.

But Kassebaum is doubtful she could muster the 60 votes needed to break a filibuster, which she expects Sen. Bennet Johnston, D-La., to mount against her measure.

She added that Johnston and decontrol advocates, including the Reagan administration, also lack the necessary muscle to choke off a filibuster mounted by Metzenbaum.

Here's Why At ClayDesta National Bank, Oil & Gas Is Our Business.

Ever since the discovery of gas and crude in the Permian Basin, Midland has attracted countless independent energy pioneers who came here with a hat full of dreams and a pocket full of leases.

And with the kind of hard work (and a little luck) that only oil and gas people can understand, these operators have made our city one of America's great energy centers.

But factors like the economy, government regulations, and imports have changed the face of the oil and gas industry forever. And as a result, the kind of financial backing an oil and gas man needs now is a lot different from what he needed just a few years ago.

Backing the oil and gas industry is a major part of ClayDesta National Bank's business. It makes up the biggest single component of our loans. And because our bank was built by oil and gas men, we know how to handle the special needs of independent operators.

Quick response. Sometimes you've got to have an answer now! Oil men who deal with ClayDesta National will tell you they can usually measure response time in days not months.

Personal attention. Any oil man's relationship should be one-on-one with his banker, not with a department. And frankly, our oil and gas customers tell us ClayDesta National is the friendliest bank they've ever been in.

Commitment. There aren't many things more important to an oil man than knowing his bank will stand by him. You get a commitment from ClayDesta National, and you've got a commitment.

Asset strength. We opened just a few months ago with the largest capital structure of any bank in West Texas history. Since then our deposit base has grown more than 1000%, while our loan-to-deposit ratio is less than 50%. But most importantly, because of our sound relationships with other financial sources, truly no oil and gas deal is too big for ClayDesta National to handle.

Expertise. Not many things are worse than talking to a banker who doesn't understand your business. We're one of just a handful of Texas banks who have full-time engineers and oil and gas lenders on staff, ready to work with you.

Positive attitude. Let's be honest. A lot of people think energy loans are a dirty word these days. But those independent oil and gas operators who risked all they had to establish this great industry are still the backbone of it today. And we stand behind 'em. At ClayDesta National Bank, energy lending is OK!

The oil and gas industry has kept this part of Texas looking great for nearly a century.

And at ClayDesta National Bank, we think it's looking better all the time.

Making a point

State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro answers questions during a public hearing Monday afternoon on constitutional amendment seven, which would establish a state housing loan program to complement the state Veterans Land Program.

Mauro explains proposed vets' program

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The questions were few and the opposition registered zero to a home loan program for veterans when Land Commissioner Garry Mauro held a public hearing Monday on Proposition Seven.

Almost 40 persons, ranging from veterans groups spokesmen to realtors, registered for the hearing on the proposed Veterans Housing Assistance Program, held at Midland Regional Airport.

The proposition, which will appear on the Nov. 8 constitutional amendments ballot, calls for setting up a housing loan program to complement the Veterans Land Program. Mauro explained a veteran who met the qualifications could apply for a maximum of $20,000 at a low interest rate for a house. Remainder of the mortgage would be a conventional loan.

Passage of this amendment would stimulate the economy by spurring construction of 25,000 new homes and creating 45,000 new jobs, the Democratic state official contended.

Included in the requirements is a down payment of 5 percent. One woman pointed out to Mauro that a veteran can obtain a federal loan through the Veterans Administration and purchase a house with no money down.

The land commissioner answered, "Theoretically, there is no reason we can't mix a VA loan with our loans." Thus, the veteran can get a house with no down payment and a combined interest rate that is lower than the VA rate.

If Texas had sold bonds Monday for the program, Mauro said he was told interest rate to the veterans would have been 9¼ percent. Combined with a conventional loan at 13¼ percent, the veteran actually is paying a loan rate of 11¼ percent, saving him or her about $19,000.

Texas is the only state that has devised such a home loan program for veterans, said Mauro. And he conceded that while the Veterans Administration "knows a lot about making housing loans, we found a way to stretch the dollars."

Other states have loan programs for veterans, said Mauro, but they also have weighed it down with administrative personnel. Texas will hire an administrator, said the land commissioner, and three people will be added to his staff.

Nor is this a giveaway program for veterans, said Mauro. He emphasized there is a growing perception by the citizens to do something for veterans as a repayment for their services, but Texas never has handed out money with no payback requirements.

Airport cannot rent empty space

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

More planes are flying out of Midland Regional Airport, but the facility has found itself placed in a holding pattern on leasing space to more airlines.

Victor White, aviation director, said the airport — like others around the country — is caught in the middle of court battles on two bankruptcies. On Sept. 24, Continental Airlines filed for bankruptcy. Employees locked the door to their office, handed the keys to White and left. The counter and office space can't be leased to other airlines, according to the courts.

Braniff left Midland in the same spot when it filed for bankruptcy in May 1982.

Meanwhile, three airlines are flapping like vultures, eyeing Continental's empty space. Those three are Southwest, Muse and a new one ready to fly in on Nov. 18, Frontier. Continental had a prime location, and these others are hoping to swap for it.

In the meantime, said White, Frontier is leasing some offices from Muse Air and will be using that airline's counter space. Frontier will be flying non-stop to Denver twice daily.

When Continental filed for bankrupty, said White, those officials also received a temporary restraining order saying "they couldn't be booted out of their space. So we can't lease that space. But they are obligated to continue paying rent."

The October rent was paid, he noted. "Now if they don't pay their rent or it's more than 10 days late, we can terminate them."

However, Midland and other airports around the country being served by Continental have filed a claim against the airline for money that was past due them at the time the bankruptcy suit was filed.

"Continental left all their equipment. Their office was left just as it was on Sept. 24. Every paper is still there. They have notified us they intend to come back to Midland as a market, but we don't know when."

Continental is still flying to 25 markets and announced recently it was adding 10. But Midland wasn't included, said White.

"Bankruptcy is an interesting situation. We're still working on Braniff's," noted the aviation director.

He thinks Braniff will fly again under its re-organization plan, but he doubts if it will return to Midland.

Decision to abandon home computers won't affect local TI plant

From Staff and Wire Reports

DALLAS — Analysts reacted with glee as Texas Instruments Inc. stock rose 22 percent in the wake of the firm's decision to abandon its unprofitable home computer line, but the news was bitter for 1,000 of TI's West Texas workers.

TI, which announced Friday that it quit manufacturing home computers, said Monday that it was eliminating 1,000 jobs in Lubbock.

A spokesman for the TI plant near Midland Regional Airport said the layoffs would have no affect on the local operation. "We're not involved at all," personnel manager Carson Smith said. "We're a semiconductor operation. That's a different group altogether."

TI spokesman Norman Neureiter would not say when or if more layoffs will occur. TI released a statement that said the consumer division headquarters would stay in Lubbock.

TI's consumer products division has been based in Lubbock. TI does not disclose its employment at individual plants, but an estimated 4,000 people work at the plant. Several hundred more employees work in the home computer area at Abilene.

The Dallas-based electronics firm on Friday reported its second consecutive quarterly loss of more than $110 million and said it was getting out of the home computer business, which was primarily responsible for the poor reports.

On Wall Street, TI's decision was greeted Monday with glee by analysts and investors, whose eagerness to buy the stock delayed trading. The stock opened at about $129, up from $101.75 Friday, before closing the day at $124.50 on 1.9 million shares traded.

"Now we can have a high degree of confidence in TI ability to have earnings of $10 to $12 a share next year," said Michael Krasko, analyst with L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin.

"I applaud the decision. I know that TI has a lot of pride and this was very, very difficult for them," he said. "But this shows TI is seriously committed to generating a profitable return for its investors."

John Geraghty, a vice president with Dean, Witter, Reynolds & Co., said TI's decision will enhance its reputation with investors.

"I put it (TI stock) on the buy list this morning, but I sure didn't think it would go up 22 points," he said. "I think a lot of people now will begin to value TI as a semiconductor company with a good government electronics business and some other things that aren't going to cause financial harm."

'Joking' bank robber says God has given him second chance

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Skip Pridemore had a flair for pranks. So he and his brother robbed a bank. It was just a joke, they insisted.

The joke was on the bank's president who wasn't around to enjoy — or to be shocked by — the humor. He was on the golf course to tee off with Skip at 3:10 p.m. on Wednesday, June 29. But Skip was at the bank.

Midland police, the FBI and bank employees who were robbed at gunpoint failed to catch onto the practical joke.

Federal Judge Lucius D. Bunton was not amused by the Pridemore brand of humor. He sentenced the brothers to five years in prison and wondered aloud: "I don't know what was in your hearts."

The bank got its money — about $19,000 — back. And Russ Richardson, president of the robbed Midland American Bank, left town. He was leaving anyway. He had been offered a position at a bank in the Fort Worth area.

What seemed to bewilder friends and loved ones of the Pridemores was just why they tried to pulled off such a bizarre prank.

THEY WERE JOKESTERS who apparently reveled in outlandish humor. However, until the June 29 bank "joke," their humor had never gotten them in jail. The FBI seemed inclined to go along with the joke angle but not entirely. The G-men conceded that the holdup may have begun as a joke but speculated that midway in the robbery, the Pridemores may have begun to take themselves seriously.

They pulled the robbery off with ease. They were caught just as easily.

"There was no criminal intent," said Ralph Harold "Skip" Pridemore Jr. "I never did harm anybody...I was wrong in what I did."

On the day of the joke, the brothers had been drinking. "Sure," admitted Skip, "I had enough drinks. I was cocky."

Skip, who said he had more money in his checking account than was taken in the robbery, said he had planned to hand the money over to the "surprised" bank president when he returned to the bank from Green Tree Country Club's golf course.

THE PRIDEMORES carried out their plan: 31-year-old Randy George Pridemore was decked out in a reddish wig, sunglasses, cap and a red jumpsuit and was armed with a black BB pistol which strongly resembled a deadly handgun. He rode up to the bank in northwest Midland on his brother's motorcycle. He played the role of the bank robber.

Skip, the "mastermind" behind the prank, played the straight guy — a customer who just happened by in his pickup truck at the time of the robbery. He told his friends, the bank's employees, to be calm and not to trigger any alarms which would summon police and excite the robber.

"I was playing the hero," Skip said.

His brother was well disguised to "make it look real...If they (women who worked at the bank) recognized him, it would blow the whole thing (the prank)." They succeeded in making the robbery look genuine.

After Randy had stuffed the $19,000 in Federal Reserve Bank plastic bags, he fled the bank. Skip remained inside. Meanwhile, police and the FBI were en route, since a bank employee did set off a silent alarm. Randy dropped some of the money, tried picking it up and stuffing it back into the bags. He mounted the motorcycle; it wouldn't start. He dropped the pistol. Still, the motorcycle wouldn't start. He was going to leave the money there and let his brother explain away the robbery. Finally, the motorcycle started, and Randy pulled out, but the motorcycle hit gravel on the bank's parking lot and fell over.

Electronic nemesis kills innocent adjectives, young verbs

I must write this column with extreme caution, because if it suspects what I am attempting to do these words will never appear in print.

My subject? A nemesis I live with each day, a tormentor who treats my precious articles with the utmost disdain and contempt. An unfeeling, cruel master who strikes down sentences, paragraphs and complete stories as if the struggle to write them were nothing — as if the sweat and tears that go into every letter had no value.

I refer not to the many editors that attempt to improve my writing and correct my mistakes, but the cold-blooded, malicious computer that plays havoc with my stories. The machine that, under pretenses of trying to make my job easier, deliberately misplaces, erases and garbles the stories of unsuspecting reporters.

Little did the publisher realize what the ramifications would be when he took away our typewriters and installed that first Pandora's box disguised as a video display terminal. I'm sure his intentions were above reproach, but he was obviously seduced by the computer that can seem so innocent and docile — cleverly masking its true character and purpose.

But I must be cautious. At any moment I fully intend to hear the high-pitched blip, a computer hiccup, which will erase all the words I've so carefully chosen and labored over in an attempt to warn the world of impending destruction. For you see, they aren't satisfied merely to make my existence miserable and my work more difficult. They intend to rule the world.

Oh, it won't happen immediately. The creatures will take their time and pretend to play along until they have invaded every home and every aspect of our lives. And then the wooden Trojan horse will open and the world will come to an end.

How do I know? I spend a large portion of each day with my smug mechanical companion. I know he plans to bide his time until the master plan can be carried out and life as we know it destroyed. I work with them too closely, I see past their artifices and realize their evil intentions. They can't hide their spiteful designs from the piercing observations of a trained professional.

Do you doubt my words? Have you not heard the snickers, the mirthless depraved chuckle it emits when it erases half a story? Have you not seen the malevolent way the glowing letters on the screen glare at you — each character resembling evil green eyes — daring you to attempt to master it? Even now it toys with me — it has no intention of letting the outside world read these words. Just another example of its cruel sense of humor.

I suspected their wickedness long before I realized the horrors they intend to perpetrate on humanity. It was evident in the senseless slaughter of beautiful prose, in the vindictive murder of innocent adjectives and young verbs.

It teases — hiding articles within the vast network of its memory. It frustrates — refusing to work properly and then, after I have summoned a technician, operating smoothly and flawlessly. It jeers — deliberatly inserting misspelled words or poor grammar after I have already proofread the copy and found it error-free. It tortures — with cold-hearted abandon it levels descriptive phrases, vivid imagery, creative leads. And always — afterwards — it gloats, knowing I am helpless to retaliate and leaving me in tears.

And it won't stop. It will never be satisfied with playing practical jokes on lowly laborers when it can rule the nation. Wake up America! Can't you see the spider waiting to ensnare you in its web?

I've gone too far. It will never let me leave this keyboard alive. But I had to risk it in an attempt to relay the method of our deliverance. I have stumbled upon its weakness and will attempt to destroy it before it can implement its strategy.

I am discovered! God grant me the opportunity to relay this last message. The answer is to smiglestuf the endordorf before reddonanox can tarpentulate.....

Heh, heh, heh...

Students prepare for trip to Japan

By MARCIA SMITH

DALLAS (AP) — A large and restless basketball player wearing footlong Adidas yawned ostentatiously and kicked the seat in front of him. It was 8:30 in the morning and the professor was talking about ancient Japanese deities and Shinto shrines.

The long-legged jock shifted uncomfortably in his plastic scoop chair and dozed off. With the uncanny timing students cultivate after spending a few years in the back rows of "monster" classes, the young man woke just as the professor summarized his lecture.

Before dismissal, the professor led his drowsy class in a recitation of Japanese numbers. "Ichi, ni, san, shi, go, roku, shichi, hachi, kyu and ju," the class repeated with considerably more enthusiasm than perhaps was called for.

Even the basketball player got into it. When he came to "ju," he played with the word a second and came up with "ju eat?" He grinned broadly when the students around him giggled.

DR. NEILL McFarland knows what he's up against teaching Japanese culture to a group of sleepy athletes. "I don't expect outstanding scholarship from them, but if they learn something about the culture because of their interest in sports, that's good."

McFarland, history of religions professor at SMU, is readying a class of athletes, cheerleaders, pom pom girls and band members for a trip to Japan in November when the SMU football team will play the University of Houston in the Mirage Bowl. The game, set for Nov. 26, will be played at Olympic Stadium in Tokyo to a sellout crowd of 80,000. Expenses will be paid by a Tokyo sports-promotion agency.

Of the 150 students signed up for the Japanese culture course — Religious Studies 3367; Introduction to Japan — some will not travel to Japan. The basketball player, for example, said he was taking the course as an elective. (Despite his obvious boredom with the lecture material, he said he likes the films and slides the professor shows.)

Most of McFarland's students, however, will spend a week in Japan, bringing the tradition of Texas football to Japan, and perhaps taking home to Texas a taste for sushi and sake.

McFarland hopes that by giving his students a basic understanding of Japanese geography, history and culture, the trip will be more significant, "a real learning experience."

"I HOPE they won't spend all their time looking for hamburgers and video games," he said. "I hope they will ask, 'Who are the Japanese people and how can I get acquainted with them?' It would be a shame if they think they're playing a game and that's all."

Michael Carter, a 22-year-old SMU senior, noseguard for the football team and an Olympic hopeful (in shotput), said he plans to shop for video equipment and try some acupuncture to relax. Since joining McFarland's class, he says he's learned a little Japanese history and can say "good morning" and "where's the restroom?" in Japanese.

Brad Turner, a sophomore saxophone player for the SMU band, said he wants to see a waterfall and try some rice beer, "if they have that." He says McFarland's course has cleared up some of the mysteries of the Land of the Rising Sun.

"Now I know they're not just a bunch of guys making Sonys," Turner said.

McFarland, a 30-year-old veteran of SMU who has visited Japan six times, and was instrumental in forming a sister school relationship between SMU and Japan's Kwansei Gakuin University, undoubtedly sought to teach more than that when he created his course.

THE DAY we sat in, for example, we learned that Japan came to be called the Land of the Rising Sun because in the limited view of the ancient island-dwellers, the sun shone on them first.

We also learned the reason the Japanese enjoy long, luxurious baths. It has to do with the creation of Japan and its first cirizens, Izanagi (man) and Izanami (woman). One day, Izanagi dips his spear into the water and a drop from it forms Japan. Later, Izanami bears a son, the fire god, and is fatally burned. She goes to the underworld and Izanagi follows to find her.

Now, the underworld is a forbidden place and because Izanami isn't looking her best (she's decomposing), she chases her husband away. But now, he has been polluted and must purify himself — with water. The polluting effects of experiences and the need for purification is to this day an important part of the Shinto religion, the professor said.

We don't know how many of the students will remember that when they decide to try the baths, but at least they've been told. And, after the chalk drawing McFarland made on the blackboard, they'll probably be able to identify a Shinto shrine. The professor studiously has tried to teach his students some useful expression at each class meeting — "hello" and "thank you," for example.

"And I had hoped somewhere along the way to teach them to use chopsticks, but with 150 people, I don't know how much is possible," McFarland said.

ONE OF THE most overwhelming things for English-speaking people to overcome when they visit Japan, said McFarland, is the written language — the Chinese characters. Even if you don't speak the language, in Europe, you can usually recognize a few words. Restaurant, for example, looks similar in many languages.

McFarland plans to offer himself as a sort of guide for the students in Japan. "I speak enough Japanese to go shopping and ask directions," he said. "I could be a guide for walking tours."

Robber says he's been given second chance

Skip today said he believes the circumstances that day were in God's plan.

"SATAN DOES NOT always get his way, because God intervened in my life...He showed me that the fast life that I was living was not the way He intended it and that my life and marriage were going downhill. Man was not created to live a life of sin and self-destruction...He has straightened my life out and given me a second chance."

The 34-year-old Pridemore has until Nov. 14 to report to the deputy U.S. marshal who will dispatch him and his brother to prison. Skip was so anticipating his spending time in the Federal Prison Camp for white-collar criminals at Big Spring that he recently drove over there and visited the warden and some inmates. He plans to pick up some college-credit hours and get into real estate when he gets out of prison, possibly in 1985.

"It depends on what God has planned for me," he said.

Since the robbery, Skip suggested that he has become an ardent Christian; daily worships the Lord and thanks Him for his blessings; wears a gold ichthus, symbol of early Christianity, around his neck; has sobered up (He said he was drinking heavily on day of the bank prank); and has been drawn closer to his wife, Karen, and their three sons: Russ, 13; Robb, 11, and Ryan, 4.

"She and I are kind of going through our second honeymoon," said Skip, who seemed euphoric over his "new" life. "She thanks God for bringing her a new husband. She has a new husband."

Prior to the joke, Skip was in the appliance business; he has lost that. His brother managed a department store in Andrews; he lost that job.

Prior to the Pridemore sentencings, more than a score of professional and business people, including three bankers, two lawyers, a minister, a dentist, contractors, real-estate brokers, an advertising executive and a police captain testified — via letters to Bunton — of Skip's high moral character, industry, faithfulness, honesty and wholesomeness.

"Skip is a fun-loving, light-hearted young man who has a super, outgoing personality," wrote one. "He is instantly liked...."

"Skip has always been a 'prankster' but has never hurt anyone with a joke," wrote another.

In reviewing his recent past, Skip noted that "You've got to face it (misdeeds); you've got to face it." He even apologized to the judge.

"I pray for God to use me — use what's left of my life — to serve God," Skip said. "There's no question God works in mysterious ways."

Mauro explains proposed vets' program

"Since 1946, a lot of states have given bonuses to veterans. Texas said we'd loan them money to buy a farm or a ranch. Now, we're giving them the option to buy a home."

One man in the audience asked if the $20,000 could be applied to both a house and land. Mauro said originally that was the intention. But because the Veterans Land Board is expecting a lot of applications for the loans, they are restricting the money for one or the other.

And, yes, said Mauro, the loans apply to male and female veterans of all races. "There are 68,000 women veterans in Texas." Until he took office in January, Mauro said, there had not been even one application from a female. Now, six female veterans have been given loans.

To qualify, a veteran must have served at least 90 consecutive days of active duty and have lived in Texas at least five consecutive years before filing for the loan. And spouses of veterans who died in the line of duty and have never re-married may apply.

A veteran must live in the house three years before the loan can be assumed by another person.

Mauro noted this marks the first time that a veterans amendment hasn't met organized opposition. Instead, Proposition Seven has been endorsed by the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans, Texas Association of Realtors, Texas Association of Builders, Texas Savings and Loan League and the Texas Mortgage Bankers Association.

Police investigate laundry robbery

Midland police had a relatively quiet Halloween, but did investigate reports of a robbery and the burglary of an automobile.

Leigh Ann Ward, an employee of Comet Cleaners at 2606 N. Midland Drive, reported a robbery at 6:20 p.m. According to detectives, a man entered the business, asked for change and swiped an undetermined amount of money from the cash register when it was opened. No weapon was involved in the incident although the man pushed the employee against a wall as he fled.

Greg Scoby, of 4715 W. Wadley No. 9-12, reported his convertible top had been slashed and an AM/FM cassette player taken sometime between 11 a.m. and noon in the parking lot of his apartment complex. Total loss was placed at about $750.

Cuban sentenced for robbery

BIG SPRING — A 25-year-old Cuban national was sentenced to eight years in the state penitentiary in 118th District Court Monday after pleading guilty to an aggravated robbery charge.

Manuel Publa Arteaga was arrested in El Paso June 1 after a trading post in Big Spring was struck by a robbery.

Nude bathing area to be park

AUSTIN (AP) — Travis County commissioners have approved a lease that allows the county to improve Hippie Hollow, a popular nude bathing area on Lake Travis, and bring it into the county park system.

Commissioner Bob Honts received unanimous approval from other commissioners to lease the 35 acres from the Lower Colorado River Authority.

Honts is drawing up plans for $250,000 in improvements to the lakeside tract. Since the 1970s, nearby homeowners have complained about problems with traffic, drug use and public lewdness.

Yves Saint Laurent premieres 1984 spring designs

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PARIS — Old friends of Yves Saint Laurent gathered Wednesday as the designer held his spring fashion show. Paloma Picasso, Catherine Deneuve and Betty Catroux had front-row seats. And it was almost like seeing old friends when the clothes came down the runway. The chemise dress and the tunic were back, in new guises and new colors.

Saint Laurent can find more things to do with a chemise in one season than most designers do in a career. Some of the best chemises are full through the body and narrow at the bottom, or the pure and simple variety.

Most of his daytime things are knee-length, in sharp contrast with collections from many other designers this season, who are trying to lengthen the silhouette. The shorter length looks less dowdy. And virtually everything, for both daytime and evening, is done with hats and gloves and jewelry.

Saint Laurent has brought back his favorite blazer, now in leather as well as checks and plaids. Saint Laurent may do for the leather jacket what he has done for the leather skirt; not only do many of his customers own at least one, but his fellow designers have copied the idea as well.

What others can't borrow is Saint Laurent's color sense. "No one uses color like Yves," said Paloma Picasso after the show.

Color often gives a familiar shape a fresh look. For tunics over narrow, knee-length skirts, Saint Laurent puts pink over brown, brick over mustard and face-powder pink over brown leather. The tomato red color shows up frequently. Some of his color combinations look like near misses, such as two shades of navy; others are totally unexpected — a terra cotta skirt with a tan blouse, a purple jacket, red hat and green sandals. (Under those sandals he has used hose with reinforced toes and heels.)

It's when he uses black that he can't be faulted and the audience — not only the front row pals but the buyers, too — applauds the loudest. A new "smoking" outfit with a short pinched jacket, a black crepe dress with a draped top and a sarong skirt attracted the most attention.

"It is not the black coatdress I want but the checked one. I already own a black coatdress with satin lapels and seeing a variation of it in the show only makes me like it better," said Andree Putman, Paris' leading interior designer.

"Nothing is brand new but as a person who wears Saint Laurent there are a number of things I want to own," said Ellin Saltzman, fashion director of Saks Fifth Avenue, mentioning the satin evening jacket and a brightly colored jersey chemise. "I already own one of his smoking (tuxedos) but now I want the new version with the shorter jacket."

Saint Laurent contrasted his clean tailored looks for day with ruffled, printed and wrapped dresses for evening. If he hasn't been to Bali or South America recently, he's been dreaming about it. The fabrics are often see-through, and for those a bit less daring there are long skirts with crinolines underneath worn with printed blouses. The "bride" who ended his show also had a Bali-look; she was barely covered over the hips in a big bow.

Italian designer likes low-slung belts

Hearst Feature Service

MILAN — Gianfranco Ferre is the bearded linebacker-sized designer who so nimbly leaped to the top of the Italian ready-to-wear heap just a few seasons ago.

Ferre likes this look for the forthcoming season: short, flirty skirts, topped by long jackets that are loose but meticulously tailored, with hip-slung belted blouses.

An example: a three-quarter pinstripe blazer with wide shoulders and elongated lapels, over a cream silk V-neck tunic clinched by a wide sash belt a few inches below the natural waistline. An above-the-knee pleated skirt completes the look.

The low-slung belt reappears on pantsuits: it's wide and buckled, for example, in a three-piece ensemble that combines an easy-does-it jacket, slightly floppy trousers and a straight-lined, fairly full, knee-length top coat.

The new Ferre clothes are, the designer says, "my concept of classic, but very, very feminine versions of the menswear image." He adds that he'd like to see women who wear his designs have "flashes of humor, like substituting a huge spotted cravat for a shirt."

Cannily avoiding the trap of limiting his clientele to women who go for knee-high hemlines — which Ferre obviously prefers — he also offers what he calls his "long-longs" — almost ankle-length skirts, this time paired with aviator jackets and, of all things, tank tops.

Most of Ferre's new clothes are in neutrals, including dusty blues.

Eileen Ford heads largest modeling agency

Hearst Feature Service

Famed New York modeling agency director Eileen Ford says when she's reincarnated she would like to come back as a Black Angus bull or Cheryl Tiegs.

"What charmed lives they have," she says. "Especially the bull. He gets to have his hair combed every day, sits and munches away on the best of foods, sleeps in nice barns with clean hay and never has to worry about being cut up as a steak."

And as for Tiegs, "Who wouldn't want to be her? Those beautiful eyes, mouth, neck, body, hands, well, everything — and besides, she's terribly nice. If I were that way, no one would be able to say I was a holy terror."

Life for the energetic, talkative, 61-year-old Ford, co-founder and head of the world's largest modeling agency, is a sharp contrast to the fantasy life she describes above.

"I work from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. seven days of the week. I honestly have no concept of time, and I take my profession deadly seriously. I came from a working family who did the same thing. My mother started working at 13 and quit at 78, but only after having two strokes."

Ford, who is scouting the country for new models, loves her career, which has been going strong since 1946 and which has produced some of the most famous models, including Tiegs, Jane Fonda, Candice Bergen, Ali McGraw, Christie Brinkley, Brooke Shields and Lauren Hutton.

She describes herself as a person who does everything hopelessly wrong.

"I spill food, trip a lot, am the clumsiest individual you can imagine, and if you can imagine, I was kicked out of tap dance school as a kid. Not only that, I was always the one who was a substitute for school events. My mother made me elaborate costumes, like the time I was a daffodil, and at great expense, but I was still the last to be chosen for anything. To make matters worse, I can't even add and subtract.

"Well, I had to have something going for me, and I guess it's that I have a great eye for faces. I can tell fairly instantly whether a girl has got the face and personality to make it big in modeling, but I don't know why I can do that, unless you call it instinct. I mean, why would I pick Lauren Hutton when everyone else (other modeling agencies) had turned her down? I liked the way she was, but I couldn't tell anyone else why."

DEAR ABBY

Wedding can be 'painless'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This letter is regarding "No Mrs. in Manhattan," who complained that her live-in lover, "Bobby," wouldn't marry her because he was terrified of needles, and he couldn't get married in New York without a blood test. To add to her problems, she was pregnant.

You suggested that Bobby see a "shrink" or consider hypnosis. You missed a painless solution, Abby. They could come to Nevada, obtain a marriage license without a blood test and get married the same day.

And by the way, divorce in Nevada is almost as quick and painless as marriage. — JACK IN NEVADA

DEAR JACK: Thanks for the good news from the most popular hitching and unhitching post in the United States. Read on for some sunny news from California:

DEAR ABBY: Please advise "No Mrs. in Manhattan" to take Bobby to California, because the law there states that when an unmarried man and an unmarried woman, not minors, have been living together as husband and wife, they may, without a license and without obtaining health certificates, be married by any person authorized to solemnize a marriage. — MRS. IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR MRS.: California may not be the only state in which this law prevails.

DEAR ABBY: Tell "No Mrs. in Manhattan," whose boyfriend was afraid to get married because of the blood test, to come to Arkansas. As of July of this year, the state of Arkansas no longer requires blood tests for marriage license applications. All we require is that the couple apply together, provide proof of age and $20 in cash.

I realize Arkansas is a long way from Manhattan, but the trip probably wouldn't be as painful to Bobby as the needle. — PHYLLIS MALLLARD, DEPUTY COUNTY CLERK, CRAWFORD COUNTY, ARK.

Quartet featured at Parenthood benefit

A special benefit performance by the Thouvenel String Quartet will be the high point of a gala evening Nov. 10 sponsored by Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin.

The short concert, "Favorites of the Thouvenel String Quartet," will be followed by a champagne reception hosted by Sharon and Don Davison.

The only professional string quartet with a performing residency in Texas, the Thouvenel was rated "one of the best anywere in the world" in a recent Texas Monthly article.

Tickets are available by calling Planned Parenthood, 563-2530. Cost is $30 per person. Deadline for ticket purchase is Friday.

BEDWETTER
LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED
The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this obvious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting — What It's All About and How To End It", a report by two medical doctors. No obligation.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Roman Catholic leaders are planning a national protest Wednesday because of attacks on a bishop and eight churches by backers of Nicaragua's leftist government, and a rightist death squad is threatening El Salvador's archbishop.

In Managua, Monsignor Bismark Carballo, spokesman for the Nicaraguan church, Monday announced plans for a protest in response to the attacks Sunday by Sandinista demonstrators upset by church criticism of a new military conscription law.

In El Salvador, a rightist death squad Monday warned the country's two top church leaders they can't "hide behind their vestments" if they continue using Sunday homilies to conduct what it called a pro-communist "campaign of misinformation."

The Maximiliano Hernandez Martinez Anti-Communist Brigade claimed to have "evidence" that Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas and Auxiliary Bishop Gregorio Rosa Chavez are in contact with leftist guerrillas fighting to overthrow the government.

"Their Sunday homilies tend to divide the Salvadoran family, promoting false arguments that facilitate the campaign of misinformation which profits those who employ communist propaganda to pursue their aggression against the country," the group said in a communique.

"Bishops Rivera y Damas and Rosa Chavez are hereby notified they must suspend their perturbing messages. Otherwise they will be drastically punished and will not be able to hide behind their vestments," the group said.

Rivera y Damas and Rosa Chavez have called for dialogue with the rebels to end the four-year war and have urged the government to crack down on the death squads. Rosa Chavez declined to respond to the threat; Rivera y Damas was unavailable for comment.

There has been a resurgence in activity by rightist death squads in the past two months. Most recent victims have been university professors and union leaders.

At least 47,000 people have been killed since the civil war started in 1979. The El Salvador Human Rights Commission claims 39,000 of them were non-combatants murdered by death squads and other paramilitary groups that suspected them of being leftist sympathizers.

Soldiers from the Cobra Battalion of the Salvadoran army carry a comrade killed in fighting with rebel forces Sunday during an attack to recapture the town of Tejutepeque, El Salvador.

In Nicaragua, the church's call for a protest came after pro-government demonstrators beat up Managua Auxiliary Bishop Bosco Vivas on Sunday and attacked at least eight churches, forcing priests to cancel Mass.

"Evidently, this is an open persecution of the church in Nicaragua and, consequently, we are worried," Carballo said.

Merchandise a steal at Thieves Market

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The merchant, a roundish woman bundled in a shawl against the autumn chill, cast a wary eye down the line of stalls and assured a prospective shoe-buyer: "They're good quality. They're smuggled."

The woman runs a licensed private shop at Rembertow, on Warsaw's outskirts, one of a dozen open-air markets frequented by residents of the Polish capital. Staples and luxuries can be bought there which are not generally available in the economically troubled country.

Rickety wooden stalls in the market sell vegetables, clothes, electronic parts, Western records and tapes, antiques and spare parts for cars.

It is a black market operating in the open, an enclave of free enterprise tolerated by Poland's Communist authorities, because state-run industries are unable to produce goods in sufficient quality and quantity.

A woman can spend a month's salary — 12,000 zlotys ($125) — for winter boots smuggled from West or East Germany. Polish fox-fur hats are available for about the same price, and full length German leather coats run to 50,000 zlotys ($521).

Taxi drivers go to Rembertow looking for the spare parts they would have to wait months for at a state store. Farmers and workers shop for high rubber boots and sturdy gloves which are slightly cheaper, but hardly ever seen, in the government distribution system.

The markets have been in Warsaw for decades, but have become especially important for Polish consumers since the economy collapsed in the late 1970s, spawning the worker upheaval led by the now-outlawed Solidarity labor movement.

Polish industry is struggling back to its feet from its low-point in 1982. Output this past September, however, was still 15 percent below that of September 1979.

While government statistics show that crime has fallen by 16 percent in the first nine months of this year, recorded instances of smuggling have risen by 21 percent. Much of the smuggled merchandise is retailed in the open air markets.

The "Bazaar Rozyckiego" (Thieves Market) is the most colorful and oldest of the Warsaw free markets, which house licensed private shops, subject to periodic police inspection. The authorities object to excessive profits, the sale of smuggled or banned goods, and vice. However, three nationwide "anti-profiteering sweeps" in August did little to dissuade either buyers or sellers at the Thieves Market.

Although most of Warsaw was leveled during World War II, the Thieves Market survived. It sits on about seven acres, surrounded by dilapidated pre-war brick and stucco buildings.

A woman who has run a small shop in the market since the 1940s, acknowledged that economic crisis has curbed business in recent months "because people just don't seem to have as much money."

AP Laserphoto

A Warsaw flea market peddler displays imported porcelain dolls above the counter. Under the counter, for customers in the know, there is a supply of men's magazines also for sale.

A crowd gathers around one table for card gambling, and a half dozen men peddle magazines featuring erotic pictures for up to 6,000 zlotys ($63) a copy. They tie their wares to the tops of collapsible card tables for a quick escape at the sight of a policeman; pornography is banned in Poland.

The market thrived even during the rigors of Nazi occupation, as entrepreneurs robbed German supply trains for merchandise.

People who are busy on weekdays, or simply prefer a more genteel atmosphere, flock on the weekends to flea markets set up in large fields.

Reagan ready to lift some Polish sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the economic sanctions imposed against Poland two years ago after martial law was declared are about to be lifted by the Reagan administration, State Department officials say.

An announcement is expected sometime this week.

President Reagan has decided to lift the ban on Polish fishing boats in U.S. waters and to approve talks for renegotiating Poland's debts to Western governments.

Those and other economic sanctions were imposed in December 1981 in retaliation for the imposition of martial law by the Polish military government on Dec. 13. The other sanctions will remain in effect for the time being.

Lifting of the sanctions is being linked to what the administration believes is an improved political climate in Poland as reflected by the release of most of the prisoners taken into custody after martial law was declared and in last summer's visit by the Pope John Paul II. Some prisoners remain in custody, however.

A senior State Department official said Monday that lifting of the sanctions has been under consideration for some time, and shouldn't cause Reagan any significant political problems, especially in the wake of the U.S. intervention in Grenada.

"The country is still focused on Grenada," he said. "The right wing is not going to attack him. After Grenada they can't accuse him of being soft on communism." But he said the timing was only a coincidence.

The official, who insisted on anonymity, also said the decision to consider renegotiating Poland's official debt was done partly at the urging of the U.S. allies in Europe. "They want to be paid. If we don't reschedule the debt, they (the Poles) don't have to repay them."

Poland's finance minister will be invited to a meeting in Paris where Poland's debts will be discussed, other sources said. Poland owes Western governments, including the United States, nearly $11 billion.

Martial law was technically lifted by the Polish government on July 23, although Warsaw also adopted a number of temporary regulations that have the effect of keeping some of the martial law restrictions in effect.

Other sanctions imposed by Reagan which are not being lifted are a ban on Export-Import Bank financing for Polish imports from the United States and the suspension of Polish air landing rights in the United States.

However, the administration is taking the position that if Poland moves to further relax its repressive laws, the other sanctions may be lifted as well.

Reagan said in a statement on May 1, 1982 that he wouldn't lift the sanctions until the Polish government ended martial law, released political prisoners and "reopened a dialogue with Solidarity, led by Lech Walesa."

He also criticized the Soviet Union for what he said were "threats and pressures" that helped provoke the martial law action.

While the military government in Warsaw has made progress — in Washington's view — to improve Poland's political climate, it hasn't met the U.S. condition that it consult with Walesa and Solidarity, the outlawed labor union he once led.

British endorse deployment of U.S.-built nuclear missiles

LONDON (AP) — The House of Commons has endorsed the deployment in Britain of new U.S.-built nuclear missiles, which the London Times said today will start arriving in three weeks at a U.S. Air Force base.

Another newspaper, the Daily Mail, reported today that 600 British paratroopers have been alerted to go to the Greenham Common base, 50 miles west of London, to reinforce 1,000 British soldiers on duty there to stop protesters from getting near the NATO nuclear arsenal.

Leaders of Britain's Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, meanwhile, vowed to disrupt the transfer of the missiles from concrete bunkers to hiding places in the British countryside.

U.S. military antenna damaged

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S. Air Force communications antenna near a U.S. Marine air station in western Japan was damaged today in an apparent sabotage attempt by a radical leftist group, police said.

They said two of the antenna's steel supports were cut, but U.S. military authorities said communications were not disrupted.

The antenna atop a mountain 12 miles southwest of Iwakuni was not guarded, police said. The device is used by the U.S. Air Force for microwave communication in Japan.

A member of the Middle Core Faction, a radical leftist group, phoned newspapers in Osaka and claimed responsibility for the incident.

Leftists shoot Peruvian candidate

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Police say leftist guerrillas wounded a government party candidate for mayor in south central Peru and killed a policeman in suburban Lima.

Police blamed the attacks Monday on the Maoist guerrilla organization Shining Path, which has threatened to disrupt local elections and has warned Peruvians not to vote.

U.S. advisers trying to lower high Salvadoran mortality rate

SAN JUAN OPICO, El Salvador (AP) — U.S. military medical advisers are training Salvadoran medics in hopes of lowering what they consider a "phenomenal" mortality rate among wounded Salvadoran troops.

An American colonel with the program said that of each three wounded Salvadoran soldiers, one dies.

"The experience our Army has had is one death for eight wounded," he said.

The United States decided in May to send a medical team here for humanitarian reasons because of the high casualty rate.

The team's 26 members are not counted in the self-imposed ceiling of 55 on American military advisers in El Salvador, but they abide by the same security regulations and ask not to be identified by name or photographed.

The team hopes to train 600 battlefield medics by December. It also will try to begin building a Salvadoran medical officer corps and advising the Salvadoran military on a range of issues, including how to provide better sanitation in the barracks, purchasing supplies and other medical logistics.

The Salvadoran garrison in this town 27 miles northwest of San Salvador is one of three sites used for six-week medic training courses.

"When we got here, we estimated the Salvadoran military was 50 percent to 75 percent short of combat medics," the colonel said. "They had 314 medics, and most of them are senior medics working in dispensaries...We're shooting for about 1,000 total medics."

Under the plan for the armed forces, which have grown to 37,000 troops during the 4-year-old war against leftist guerrillas, there would be five medics for each "hunter' company of 85 men.

The colonel said the main reasons for the high mortality rate among the wounded are the absence of battlefield care and the difficulty and resulting delay in evacuations to hospitals.

Soldiers were bleeding to death from arm or leg wounds because no one at the scene of combat knew how to put on a tourniquet, the colonel said.

The basic course concentrates on four lifesaving steps — clearing the air passage for breathing, stopping bleeding, treating or preventing shock, and bandaging and splinting.

"We put a lot of emphasis on shock treatment because we found out that a lot of casualties don't die of the wound. They die of shock," a sergeant teaching here said. Most of the U.S. team comes from Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio.

The Salvadoran medics must sign a contract saying they will remain in the army for two years after completing the course, a requirement made in response to the low re-enlistment rate in the Salvadoran armed forces.

Botha: Vote against constitution supports guerrillas

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Prime Minister P.W. Botha is telling whites they would be in league with black guerrillas if they turn down a new constitution giving limited political power to Asians and people of mixed race.

A referendum on the constitution is Wednesday, with only whites allowed to vote. If "no" votes prevail, Botha might be forced to resign.

The constitution would represent the first step away from total white control since Botha's National Party came to power 35 years ago and intensified apartheid, South Africa's system of strict racial segregation.

During the two-month campaign, ultra-conservatives, who object to giving even limited power to non-whites, as well as anti-apartheid activists, urged a "no" vote.

The new constitution calls for the creation of chambers of Parliament for Asians and "coloreds," as the government calls people of mixed race, for the first time, although it would ensure continued white control of major policy decisions.

Addressing a rally of about 2,000 supporters at Johannesburg City Hall on Monday, Botha reminded the crowd that the main guerrilla group opposed to white-minority rule — the African National Congress — had urged voters to defeat the referendum. The ANC said Saturday that the plan entrenches apartheid and completely excludes the nation's black majority.

Botha told the crowd: "Those of you who considered abstaining or voting no — do you want to be in the company of the ANC?"

The new constitution, Botha claimed, would have no limits on "the constitutional, economic and social potential of black people, provided they show the capacity to develop to that extent."

At a rally in suburban Johannesburg, Colin Eglin, chairman of the liberal Progressive Federal Party, said, "the new constitution formalizes apartheid and makes it much more difficult to abolish."

Zulu leader Gatsha Buthelezi, who opposes the new constitution, said approval would encourage violence by blacks to end domination by the white minority of 5 million.

"A political death sentence is being passed on 22 million of your fellow South Africans," Buthelezi said.

Blacks have been assigned citizenship rights only in 10 tribal homelands. But more than half of South Africa's blacks live outside the homelands in white-designated areas.

South Africa's population includes 2.7 million people of mixed race and 800,000 Asians, most of them of Indian descent. Most whites are Afrikaners, descendants of early Dutch, German and French settlers, who make up the National Party's power base.

Rescuers aid quake's survivors

ERZURUM, Turkey (AP) — Rescue teams today erected tents and fed tens of thousands of people left homeless in freezing weather by the earthquake that killed at least 1,226 in eastern Turkey.

President Kenan Evren, after inspecting the disaster area, called for generous donations of money and supplies to help the survivors.

Rescue workers continued to clear the rubble and villagers buried the dead.

The photographs are something that usually cannot be replaced at any cost, because your photos will catch tender moments that often will never again be reproduced. You, as the photographer, are only half of what is necessary to insure yourself of a precious lifelong memory of that moment. If the film developing lab you take your film to does not do a superior job of developing and printing your film, all is for naught. When you leave your film, you want fast, dependable service by someone you can trust. You can trust Fast Photo Service, Town & Country Shopping Center in Midland, to protect your memories with top quality prints and fast, friendly, dependable service.

Fast Photo has recently added brand new enlargement equipment for even better service. They can make enlargements on your 110, 126, 120, 35mm film in sizes from 20 x 24 down to wallet size. When you trust Fast Photo with your enlargements, you receive 3 day service and the added relief of knowing that your negative never leaves the store. That means you don't have to worry about your film being lost, exposed to excess heat, or mailed somewhere else to be processed. Enlargements may be made for either color or black and white film. This is just another way Fast Photo offers their customers top-quality service.

Of course, you still get the same dependable, quick service at Fast Photo that you have always gotten. You get one hour service on all C-41 film processing prints, 6 days a week. Fast Photo has modern equipment throughout, giving you very high quality prints and enlargements. And you still get the personal service that you deserve at a price that you can live with.

Other services offered to the customers of Fast Photo include one day slide processing and black and white film, as well as next day service on disc film processing. You can also have old photos copied, and instant passport photos are made at Fast Photo with no appointment needed. For those of you who would be interested in learning how to take better pictures, you can even take a five week photography class which meets once a week. Contact manager Aaron Salton for information on these classes.

Fast Photo offers their customers a rather unique service they call immediate inventory. Just call Fast Photo for an appointment. A professional cameraman will come to your home or office, set up and videotape the objects you would like to have recorded for future reference. You can then keep the tape locked in your safe deposit box or some other safe place and have a sight and sound record of your valuable possessions. Fast Photo is insured and bonded for your protection.

This service also offers other unique applications, such as videotaping of a wedding, etc. Fast Photo will videotape a special event for you that will serve as a lasting memory to you and your loved ones. Photographs alone simply cannot recreate the event the way a videotape can. If you would like more information on this service, or if you would like to set up an appointment, call Aaron Salton at Fast Photo, 699-5041.

Fast Photo also offers personal attention to their customers through the use of a VIP card. You may purchase your VIP card from Fast Photo and enjoy convenience as well as discounts on film purchases.

You can even get photo supplies at Fast Photo. They offer high quality Pioneer photo albums and refills. You can purchase Fujica 35mm automatic cameras, including the DL-100. This is the easiest camera to load ever made. You can also get salon mats in sizes from 3½ x 5, up to 16 x 20. They sell all types of Kodak and Fuji film, and remember, these are available to you at wholesale with your VIP card.

Fast Photo is located at Midkiff and Cuthbert in Midland, in the Town & Country Shopping Center. Next time you need film, film processing, or even enlargements, call on Fast Photo and see what quality and convenience can mean to you. They are open from 7am to 6pm, Monday through Friday, and 8am to 3pm Saturday. Fast Photo is closed Sunday. For more information on the services offered at Fast Photo, call them at 699-5041.

Fast Photo Service, Midkiff and Cuthbert in Midland, can help you to relive your memories with high quality orints of your film. They also offer friendly service and the latest in modern developing and enlarging equipment, as well as a variety of other services. Go by today for quality you can trust.

Yosemite highway

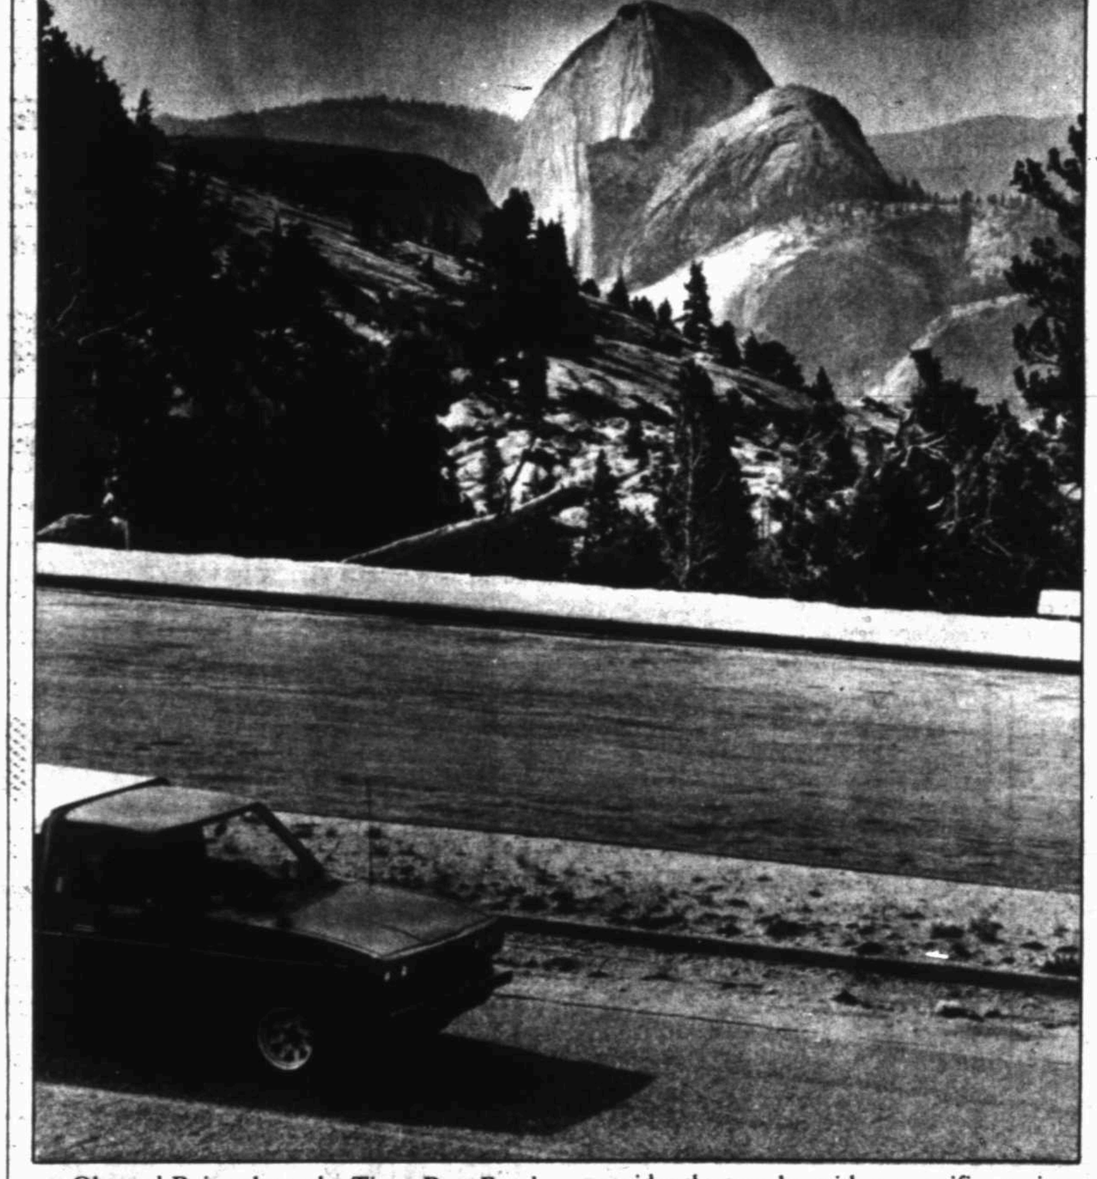
YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. — Tioga Pass Road, California's highest highway, traversing one of the most spectacular stretches of mountain terrain in America, is 100 years old this summer.

A century ago — from April through September 1883 — a silver mining company employed 160 Chinese laborers to construct the 56-mile Great Sierra Wagon Trail through the heart of Yosemite's high country.

The one-lane, twisting dirt road followed a footpath that had been an Indian trade route as early as 2000 BC.

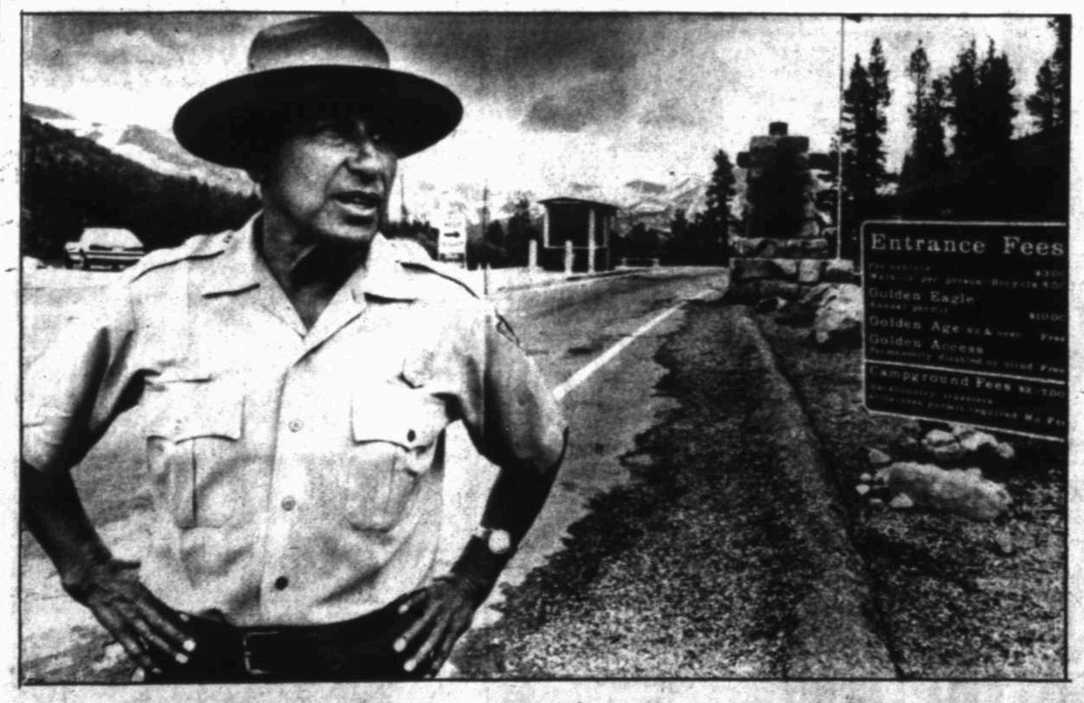
The road remained like that until 1937 when 11.6 miles were paved and widened to two lanes.

And the last vestiges of the old dirt Great Sierra Wagon Road continued to be used until 1961 when the final 21-mile middle section was paved.



Olmsted Point along the Tioga Pass Road provides the traveler with a magnificent vista of Half Dome in Yosemite National Park.

Naturalist Carl Sharsmith has spent 53 summers guiding visitors at Yosemite.



Ferdinand Castillo a longtime ranger, works in Yosemite National Park.

TODAY THE Indian footpath that became the Great Sierra Wagon Road is a two-lane highway slicing through a breathtaking landscape of alpine meadows, sparkling lakes, waterfalls and tall timber, a wildlife sanctuary embraced by huge granite domes in a chain of 9,000- to 13,053-foot peaks ringed with glistening year-round snowfields.

"They come from every state, from all over the world, hiking along the road, pedaling their bikes, in cars and campers to drive this remarkable highway," said Ranger Ferdinand Castillo, 67, spending his 30th summer as keeper of the eastern gate of Yosemite National Park at the 9,941-foot summit of the Tioga Pass Road.

A car with two gray-haired couples pulls up to the kiosk manned by Castillo.

"Anybody in the car American and 62 or over, or disabled?" asks the gatekeeper.

"You don't have to pay if any one of you qualifies, otherwise there's a $3 fee per car," he explains to the motorists. The charge is 50 cents for hikers, bikers or passengers on buses.

A CAMPER IS next in line. Castillo detects a foreign accent in the driver's voice. "Where are you from?" he inquires.

"Austria," replies Gert Hain, 39, a weatherman from Linz, Austria, traveling in a rented camper with his wife, Louisa, and son, Thomas, 15.

"In Austria we heard all about your Tioga Road in Yosemite, one of the most beautiful roads in America. That's why we came here on our vacation."

"Glad to have Austrians. We had some West Germans earlier today. Have a good time. Don't pick the flowers. Watch out for the deer. Thirteen deer have already been killed on the road this year by vehicles."

Castillo, a lifelong bachelor, lives year-round in the park. In summer he lives at a stone house at the east entrance in a structure built by the Civilian Conservation Corps in 1933, and he winters in Yosemite Valley.

An elderly man leading 25 hikers walks by the eastern gate. "Carl, how are you?" says Castillo, leaving his kiosk to greet his long-time friend.

"FINE. Just fine," replies Carl Sharsmith, 80, a renowned botanist and Yosemite's most experienced ranger-naturalist. He has spent 53 summers at Tuolumne Meadows and in the high country looming above the Tioga Road introducing visitors to California's alpine heights.

Ranger Sharsmith, who drives a 1936 Ford with more than 300,000 miles on it — he bought it new — gives campfire talks and leads parties into the towering wilderness all summer. The rest of the year he teaches at San Jose State University.

On this outing Sharsmith was leading a daylong hike to the upper shoulders of 13,053-foot-high Mt. Dana to see the flora and fauna as well as the finest example of tundra in the High Sierra, an isolated remnant of a landscape that existed here 60 million years ago.

"IT'S A struggle to keep up with him," laughs Joann Doran, 44, of Newport Beach, Calif.

Sharsmith, like Castillo, is one of the handful of people who have spent much of their lives in the wilderness along the century-old road through Yosemite's heartland.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
Pursuant to Article 5421q, V.A.T.S., notice is hereby given to the City of Midland Parks Department and the general public of a public hearing to be held on the 22nd day of November, 1983, at 1:30 o'clock p.m. in the City Council Chambers at 300 North Loraine Street in the city of Midland, Texas, for the following purpose:
The City Council of the City of Midland is contemplating advertising for bids for and executing an oil ad gas lease on Section 13, Block 39, T-1-S, T&P Ry. Co. Survey, Midland County, Texas, commonly known as "Hogan Park".
The proposed program or drilling project is described as follows:
A. Lessee must agree and obligate itself to restore the surface of all land which might be damaged by its operation hereunder as nearly as possible to its original condition as soon as it has finished with the use of the area where such damages occur. Lessee must further agree to indemnify against any and all claims upon the part of third person for damages or injuries of any kind or character which might arise from the Lessee's operations hereunder. Specifically since this is a park site with (4) four possible drill sites, it is understood that drill sites will be selected and determined in cooperation with the Director of Parks and Recreation in order to minimize harm or distraction to any Hogan Park Facility and/or recreation activity.
B. On drill sites located within or on the limits of the Hogan Park Golf Course Lessee shall repair all turf and support systems, ie., cart paths, water lines, sewer lines, etc., back to their nearest original condition with greatest care to encase production off flow lines under cart paths and locate such lines whenever possible in (undeveloped or non-maintained) areas of the Golf Course. The layout and staking of flow and production must be approved by the Parks and Recreation Director.
C. All Drill Sites and land areas will be specifically sized and approved to accomodate normal drilling operations in cooperation with the Director of Parks and Recreation Department. Permissible drill sites are reflected on a map on file in the office of the City Secretary and available for public inspection.
D. The City will prohibit the surface disposal of salt water or oil field waste on the herein above described tract of land, and Lessee must agree that any topical or above ground surface sites will be protected with liners to protect the park site during drilling operations and any subsurface disposal of salt water and/or oil field waste on said tract shall meet with the written approval of the Director of Parks and Recreation department of the City of Midland,Texas.
E. The use of potable water from the leased premises for water flooding or secondary recovery will be expressly prohibited and the use of such water restricted solely to ordinary exploration and production activities.
F. Lessee must conform to all City Ordinances and codes contained in the City Code, Chapter 6-1-7 "Oil and Gas Wells".
G. Ingress and egress to drill sites must be approved by the Director of Parks and Recreation Department. The site containing a tank battery should be located such that ease of work, normal maintenance and access to said tank battery will be on an asphalt surface sufficient in size and carrying capacity to accommodate proper removal of all production from the tank battery site. This site will be protected by gates and fencing in accordance with all City codes.
The public hearing is to assist the City Council in determining whether or not (1) there is no feasible and prudent alternative to the use or taking of such land for the above described project, and (2) such program or project includes all reasonable planning to minimize harm to such land as a park or recreation area resulting from such use or taking.
