Price index holds steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, beginning the year on an encouraging note, held flat in January, the government said today. Energy prices posted their steepest drop in almost two years while food costs also declined sharply.

It was the third time in the last five months that the overall index showed no increase.

While most economists foresee a price rise of 2 percent for all of 1985, one said that, over the next few months, "it is hard to believe that we will see any significant increase."

That optimism is based on sagging worldwide oil prices and the continued strength of the dollar, which hit new highs against foreign currencies again this week.

In more good economic news today, the government said production at the nation's factories, mines and utilities rose a healthy 0.4 percent in January. The report by the Federal Reserve Board said the increase matched the November gain and was only slightly lower than the 0.5 percent December advance.

The increase was attributed to strong gains in production of automobiles, defense equipment and energy materials.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said both reports were cause for optimism about the future.

"The industrial production index shows that the third quarter slowdown is clearly over and the economy appears to be on a steady growth path," he said. "Steady growth with low inflation at the producer level is welcome news."

The price report for January said energy prices fell 2.4 percent, the biggest decline since a 3 percent drop in March 1983. Gasoline prices fell 2.7 percent while home heating oil prices were off 2.3 percent. Both declines were the steepest since August.

At the wholesale level, gasoline is now 6.7 percent cheaper than it was just a year ago.

Food prices fell 0.6 percent in January, their best performance since a 0.8 percent decline last May.

That drop was largely the product of a 21.3 percent fall in egg prices, the steepest decline for any category in the index. Analysts credit that drop to higher production at a time of weak demand.

Fresh fruit prices rose 3.7 percent, the biggest increase for any food category. Experts said the February rise would likely be even higher as the January price survey was done before the devastating freeze hit Florida's citrus-growing areas.

Vegetable prices dropped 3.6 percent last month but experts again pointed to the Florida freeze and said consumers could soon see increases in vegetable prices.

The good news on energy and food prices was tempered somewhat by higher prices for new cars and trucks. Both posted price hikes of 2.2 percent.

In releasing today's report, the Labor Department said that if prices held steady for a full year at January's level, wholesale costs would actually fall 0.4 percent. That figure is based on a more precise calculation of monthly prices than the figure made public.

In all, the Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 292.7 in January, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $29.27 last month.

Prices rose a slight 0.2 percent December and 0.3 percent in November. For all of 1984, prices rose just 1.8 percent.

That performance, combined with an even smaller 0.6 percent increase in 1983, meant the United States enjoyed the best two-year inflation performance in two decades.

The department gave these other details of January price activity:

— Natural gas prices dropped 1.8 percent and are now 1.5 percent below their level of a year ago.

In truth, the energy price calculations reported today were for December. That component of the wholesale measure lags a month behind because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

Levin can't wait to get home

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Jeremy Levin, the kidnapped American reporter who said he escaped from 11 months in chains and solitary confinement by sliding down a rope of blankets, left Damascus today for a reunion with his wife.

"I can't wait to be back on American soil," he said.

A tear rolled down his cheek as he boarded a chartered executive jet at Damascus airport, bound for Frankfurt, West Germany, where his wife was waiting.

"I cannot wait to get to my wife, to hold her," said Levin.

He was turned over to U.S. Ambassador William Eagleton at the Foreign Ministry by Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa about two hours before the plane took off at 12:30 p.m. (3:30 a.m. CST).

The plane stopped at Rhodes, Greece on its way to Frankfurt, where it was scheduled to land this afternoon.

The television correspondent, who disappeared March 7 in Beirut, told reporters at the Foreign Ministry: "I feel wonderful. I've never been more thankful. I've never been more happy in my whole life."

Levin, 52, said he escaped Wednesday night by tying three blankets together, securing them to a balcony, sliding down from a second floor window and fleeing down a mountain to a Syrian army position in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

He said he believed there were four other people held in the same place he was, but he did not know whether they were Americans because he was isolated through his captivity.

Four other Americans who disappeared or were kidnapped in Beirut in the past year are missing.

He said he could not identify his captors. The shadowy extremist group Islamic Holy War claimed responsibility for the abduction. He said at the airport that he did not know why he was kidnapped.

"I've been in solitary confinement for the whole time chained to the wall or a radiator...The faces of the Syrian soldiers were the first faces I saw since March 7 of last year. They were good faces," Levin told reporters.

Levin's wife to meet him

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Lucille Levin, the wife of American television correspondent Jeremy Levin who gained his freedom this week after 11 months of captivity in Lebanon, arrived today in Frankfurt on the way to a reunion with her husband.

Mrs. Levin arrived at Rhein-Main airbase on an Air Force VC-135 at 9:50 a.m. She and those with her were whisked away in a convoy of Mercedes sedans to an undisclosed location to await the arrival of her husband from Damascus, Syria.

U.S. embassy spokesman Robert C. Heath said six family members, four U.S. government officials and an executive from Cable News Network were on board the flight from Andrews Air Force Base, Md.

Arson investigator: Weddel admits buying interest in building

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

A state arson investigator this morning recalled an interview with Keith Weddel during which Weddel — at that time a city councilman — admitted he'd bought interest in the O'Michael Building hoping to resell it to the city.

Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond Jr. and former two-term councilman Weddel are on trial in federal district court here for aiding in the alleged arson of the building and participating in a conspiracy to burn the building to collect the insurance claim. Hammond is also charged with lying twice in a deposition taken during the civil lawsuit in which the claim for the insurance was settled for about $150,000.

Rick Womack of the state Fire Marshal's Office said that Weddel told him during the December 1981 interview that he had bought an interest in the building with Mayor Bob Bryant on the speculation that a civic center would be built nearby.

Weddel said he owned 50 percent of the building, which was losing money at the time of the fire, according to Womack.

Weddel said his and Bryant's name were not on the deed of ownership because of their positions with the city, said Womack. Attorney Ray Stoker Jr.'s name appeared as owner on the deed.

Also, Womack said his investigation showed the fire was deliberately set, rather than accidental.

Odessan Bill Elms testified that the area near the O'Michael Building was one of three sites selected by a task force subcommittee assigned to find possible locations for the civic center.

Elms said the December 1980 bond election had failed because of a dispute between the school district and U.S. Justice Department over court-ordered busing which became public the week before the election, upsetting residents of the south side of Odessa.

He testified he had no knowledge of Bryant or Weddel owning interest in the building during the civic center campaign.

Reagan opposed to cutting military pensions

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan adamantly opposes cutting back on pensions for people already in the military but has not voiced an opinion about limiting benefits for future members of the armed forces, his spokesman says.

The sensitive issue arose anew Thursday in the wake of a fresh call by Budget Director David Stockman to curtail the military pension program as part of the deficit-reduction drive.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Stockman was not in hot water for making the statement and had not upset anyone in the administration by repeating remarks first voiced last week.

Stockman's proposal sparked protests from national veterans' groups and was quickly disavowed by Reagan last week.

Elaborating on the president's position, Speakes said Thursday, "The president believes that we have a contract with the military, and that we would provide their pensions as we have stated we would, when they signed on for the military."

As for whether Reagan would consider curbing pensions of people who are not yet in the military, Speakes said, "We have not made any decisions.

"The president has not really made any — I've not heard him say anything about how he would lean on that — but he's adamant about the present recipients," Speakes said.

The spokesman told reporters, "I wouldn't jump to any conclusions or make any leads out of it — frighten the people who may be signing up."

Reagan, meanwhile, relaxed at his mountaintop ranch, enjoying warm temperatures and sunny skies. His four-day vacation will end Sunday when he returns to Washington.

A senior administration official who accompanied Reagan to California said the huge cost of the military pension program was "a subject that has to be addressed." However, the official said Reagan was not prepared to deal with it while his already embattled budget is being debated on Capitol Hill.

The official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said Stockman's "problem is that Dave has this in the back of his mind that this problem has to be addressed, and what he keeps blurting out is that he'd like to see it done sooner rather than later. But that's not the president's attitude.

Chicago authorities fear wave of gangland-style slayings

CHICAGO (AP) — More than 50 years after seven mobsters were lined up and machine-gunned in the St. Valentine's Day massacre, the brutal executions of three reputed mobsters have authorities fearing a new wave of gangland-style slayings.

Three men with ties to gambling and other rackets have been shot or knifed to death since New Year's Day. Only one such slaying occurred in 1984.

"It's not exactly like the old heyday, but it's more than we want," Patrick Healy, executive director of the 65-year-old Chicago Crime Commission, said Thursday. "With this much movement, something's happening and I don't think we've seen the end of it yet."

Sgt. Jerry Gladden of the Chicago Police Department's organized crime division said the slayings were unusual because the victims all were considered high-ranking mob figures. The order to kill the three men probably came from the most powerful of Chicago's top mob organizations, Gladden said.

They may have been killed because they were "not doing what they're told," said Gladden, adding he expects retaliatory killings.

The slayings evoked memories of Chicago's bloody past.

On Feb. 14, 1929, seven mobsters were put up against the wall of a Chicago garage and shot to death with machine guns by killers who entered the building disguised as policemen.

Police suspected members of Al Capone's gang carried out the killings in a territorial power move, although no proof was ever found.

In recent years, the largest number of organized crime-related killings was reported in 1981, when eight people were slain.

On Wednesday, Charles "Chuckie" English, once believed to be the boss of the gambling, jukebox and other rackets on Chicago's West Side, became the latest casualty — the second in less than a week.

English, 70, was riddled with bullets after he left Horwath's Restaurant in west suburban Elmwood Park, said Capt. Frank Braun of the Cook County sheriff's office.

English's death may have been prompted by "revenge, maybe for something he did," Gladden said.

Three days before English was killed, the body of reputed gambling boss Hal C. Smith was found in the trunk of his car in the parking lot of a northwest suburban Arlington Heights hotel.

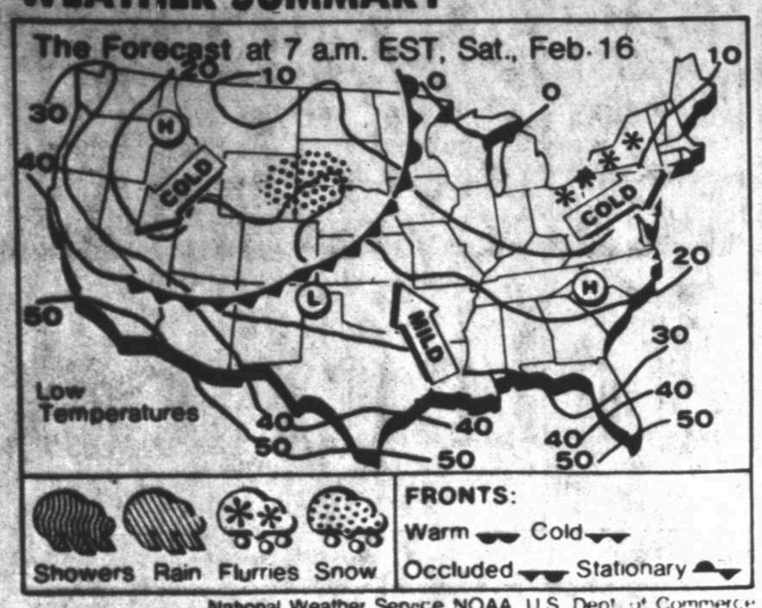
MIDLAND CENTENNIAL 1885-1985

WEATHER SUMMARY



National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts cold weather for Saturday from the Plains to the Rockies and from the Midwest to the Northeast.

Warm temperatures, clear skies forecast for area

Clear skies and warm temperatures will make Saturday an ideal day for outdoorsmen to get out of the house.

Forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport predict tonight's lows in the mid-30s to warm to the middle 60s Saturday. Winds will blow from the south at 10 to 20 mph.

Thursday's high of 53 was 23 degrees below the record set in 1979. Today's low was 14 degrees above the 1951 record of 11.

STATE

A rapidly moving upper level impulse triggered patchy light rain today in the northeast corner of Texas and rain mixed with light snow along the Red River.

Elsewhere, high pressure centered over central Kansas was the primary weather feature influencing the remainder of the Texas weather. The result was clear skies and cool temperatures.

A trough of low pressure associated with the upper level disturbance brought gusty northwest winds to sections of north texas at speeds of 15 to 20 mph.

Light northwest winds prevailed over most of West Texas and the lower Rio Grande Valley valley while westerly breezes at 5 to 10 mph were common across the remainder of the state.

Early morning temperatures fell into the upper 20s over the High Plains and west of the Pecos. Temperatures were in the mid to upper 30s across most of North Texas with low to mid 40s observed in South and South Central Texas.

Overnight, the temperatures ranged from 46 at Corpus Christi and McAllen to 25 at Amarillo.

NATION

Snow fell over the Great Lakes, Ohio Valley and central Appalachians today as road crews battled drifts up to 20 feet high and thousands of people remained without power following this week's string of snowstorms.

Travelers' advisories were posted for much of Michigan, northern and east central Indiana, and western and central New York.

Blowing and drifting snow continued to limit travel in Michigan, with many roads closed in the Upper Peninsula. Schools in at least 21 counties, mostly in the southeastern corner of the state, remained closed.

About 2,200 Detroit Edison customers, mostly in St. Clair County, remained without electricity early today, spokeswoman Lorie Kessler said. Some had been without power since Tuesday.

Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste declared 14 more counties emergency areas Thursday, making a total of 19 eligible for National Guard help.Columbus & Southern Ohio Electric Co. spokesman Ron McDade said the company hoped to get power back to most of the 1,500 customers who were without electricity today.

Court reverses murder conspiracy conviction of Elizabeth Chagra

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals today reversed the murder conspiracy conviction of Elizabeth Chagra, who was found guilty of participating in a plot that resulted in this century's only killing of a federal judge.

However, the appeals court affirmed the murder conviction of Charles Harrelson, the man convicted of assassinating the judge in San Antonio, Texas, for $250,000.

The court also let stand the conviction of Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann, for obstructing justice in the investigation into the death of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. Wood served as federal judge for the district court in Midland.

Mrs. Chagra, whose husband, Jimmy, was acquitted of paying Harrelson to kill the judge, is serving a 30-year prison sentence for the murder conspiracy conviction.

The appeals court reversed the conviction and remanded Mrs. Chagra's case for a new trial, said Betty Martinez, a clerk at the appeals court.

"I couldn't feel more elated for her and for all people who represent persons accused of crime," said her attorney, Warren Burnett of Galveston.

However, the 5th Circuit left intact Mrs. Chagra's related convictions for conspiring to obstruct justice and tax fraud.

Wood, known as "Maximum John" for the stiff sentences he dealt drug offenders, was gunned down outside his San Antonio condominium on May 29, 1979, shortly before he was scheduled to preside over the drug smuggling trial of Jimmy Chagra.

In 1983, Chagra was convicted of obstructing justice in the Wood investigation, the largest federal effort since the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

He pleaded guilty last year to masterminding a plot to kill Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, who escaped a barrage of bullets by ducking under the dashboard of his luxury car in November 1979.

The attack on Kerr, who often tried drug cases in Wood's court, took place just six months before and six blocks away from where the judge was killed by a single shot to the back from a high-powered deer rifle.

Chagra also has been convicted of continuing criminal enterprise, conspiring to import marijuana and tax fraud.

Harrelson is serving a life sentence without parole.

West Berlin official injured in blast

BERLIN (AP) — A bomb explosion damaged the home of West Berlin's top security official early today in what police speculated was a politically motivated attack.

Manfred Ganschow, chief of the West Berlin's State Security Office, was in the apartment when the bomb went off at 2 a.m. on a balcony. No one was injured, police said.

The explosion destroyed a balcony door, shattered windows, ripped open a plastic covering for an awning and damaged an exterior wall.

A police spokesman, who did not want to be identified, said the bomb was made out of explosives packed into a tin container and triggered by a fuse. "The attack was obviously politically-motivated," he said, but did not elaborate.

No one claimed responsiblity for the attack.

The terrorist Red Army Faction, a left-wing gang, has been making repeated attacks recently against West German authorities. Police refused to speculate whether they were behind today's blast.

The group has been blamed for more than 30 bombings and arson attacks in West Germany since mid-December.

On Thursday, a bomb in a luggage locker went off in a railway depot in the Rhineland, destroying a row of lockers and shattering windows.

Postal rates go up Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of mailing a first-class letter will jump from 20 cents to 22 cents on Sunday, and the Postal Service has issued a stamp to ensure adequate supplies for the rate hike.

The new "D" stamp, issued Feb. 1, is a 22-cent stamp that carries no denomination. However, it will represent the new rate until stamps bearing the 22-cent denomination are issued by the Postal Service at the end of March.

New rates for other classes of mail include:

—First-class first ounce rises from 20 cents to 22 cents, but the charge for each additional ounce remains at 17 cents.

—Presorted first class rises from 17 to 18 cents, and for mail sorted according to carrier route from 16 cents to 17 cents.

—Post cards increase from 13 cents to 14 cents. Presorted cards climb from 12 cents to 13 cents and carrier route presorted from 11 cents to 12 cents.

—The minimum charge for Priority Mail rises from $2.24 to $2.40.

—Express Mail rates increase 15 percent.

—Third-class non-profit mail increases 13 percent.

—Parcel post rates will rise by 11 percent.

—The fourth-class book rate will increase 8 percent.

TRIAL

On Thursday, a fire inspector with the Odessa Fire Department said the Nov. 25, 1981, fire at the O'Michael Building was set deliberately.

Fire Inspector Rick Cates narrated for the jury and before Federal Judge Lucius Bunton as a series of photographs taken at the scene after the fire was flashed on a movie screen.

As each photo was displayed, the inspector showed why he had eliminated accidental causes such as electrical malfunctioning and "careless smoking habits" during his investigation of the fire.

A fireman who said he was among the first to enter the burning building about 1 a.m. Nov. 25 recalled that water from the firehose failed to quell the blaze at first, but eventually the firefighters gained control over the fire in a second-floor office suite Weddel was remodeling.

Cates said this also indicated to him the presence of some type of flammable liquid which fueled the flames beyond those in a normal fire. Using the photo series, the fire inspector told jurors the heat inside the room and patterns of the fire suggested an arson had been committed.

Both Cates and the fireman said one of the windows was open after the fire had been put out. This appeared to support the story of the two men who testified they started the fire by tossing a lighted Molotov cocktail through the second-story window.

But as they have done throughout the trial, attorneys for Hammond and Weddel discredited the testimony of the federal goverment's witnesses. Travis Shelton, an attorney from Lubbock, questioned why the government's first witness from the fire scene was the youngest of the 17 firefighters there.

Shelton produced an FBI memo from an interview with the firefighter in which the fireman said he had not entered the building until most of fire had been controlled. The attorney also indicated that superior officers at the scene had ruled the fire was caused by an electrical malfunction.

Shelton pointed out Cates' testimony and his 1982 FBI statement varied as to when the inspector was on the scene. The attorney also questioned the sense of leaving a piece of evidence — a melted plastic container an FBI chemist testified contained gasoline residue — sitting in weeds outside the building for several days before it was brought back to the fire station.

Cates admitted he had not spoken with the first man into the building or the captains at the scene.

The defense has said it will bring more experienced members of the fire department to the stand to support their version of the incident — that the fire was accidental and the windows were closed until the blaze had been quelled.

Other witnesses testifying Thursday supported the stories of John Thomas and Lawrence Earl "Cotton" Peterson and L.C. Burditt. According to these three men — who admitted they agreed to testify for the government in exchange for immunity from prosecution for the crime — John Peterson arranged the fire with Hammond. Burditt and "Cotton" Peterson testified they set the fire at the building.

The government has alleged Weddel had purchased the building in July 1980 with former Odessa Mayor Bryant and Stoker Jr. because Weddel and Bryant knew where a civic center was planned to be built downtown.

Weddel allegedly wanted the building burned for the insurance claim after a bond issue in December 1980 ended civic efforts to fund construction of the center.

Elms, who headed the task force in support of the center, testified to Hammond's character shortly before proceedings ended Thursday. Upton County Judge Peggy Garner also testified to Hammond's character.

Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire and one of his deputies told jurors that Peterson's claims they had offered him "special favors" to stop talking with the FBI about the fire were false.

Other witnesses were brought as federal prosecutors attempted to prove the building was used for interstate commerce.

Bunton would not allow the federal government to admit a statement taken from Weddel by an FBI agent, which Assistant U.S. Attorney Ellen Byers said linked Weddel further with the arson.

Bunton ruled it inadmissible because the FBI agent had not explained to Weddel his rights before beginning the interview. Ms. Byers suggested she would attempt to change the judge's mind in the morning after researching the law concerning admitting such a statement.

Bunton has indicated he would see the trial through this week. The defense attorneys have objected to his leaving them with limited time to prove their clients' innocence.

If convicted, Hammond could face up to 25 years in prison and a $40,000 fine. The maximum sentence for Weddel would be 15 years in prison and a $20,000 fine.

The federal government has been investigating this case for about three years. Several sessions of the grand jury resulted in the September 1984 indictments of the two defendants.

LEVIN

Levin looked shaken when he arrived at the Foreign Ministry and appeared not to know exactly where he was.

A journalist told him he was about to be turned over to the American ambassador and he was in Damascus at the Syrian Foreign Ministry.

"That is fantastic," he said, in tears. "The Orwellian year 1984 was not a very good one for me, but 1985 is starting out a hell of a lot better."

"Lucille, where is Lucille," he said in a loud voice, asking about his wife.

When told by a journalist from Cable News Network, with whom Levin had worked in Beirut as bureau chief, that his wife was waiting for him in Frankfurt, he gasped and responded: "I can't wait to see her. Please tell her I missed her very much and I love her so deeply."

Mrs. Levin arrived in Frankfurt today from Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington on a VC-135 aircraft supplied by the White House.

Levin was dressed in gray trousers, a blue sweatshirt and bright white tennis shoes, which one of his escorts said were purchased in the east Lebanese town of Chtaura on Thursday because he arrived at the Syrian army position barefooted and in pajamas.

Levin, who has grown a beard during his captivity and whose hair was grayer than before his capture, did not show any signs of physical torture. But Foreign Ministry officials ordered reporters out of the room before they could pursue how he had been treated by his captors.

Levin said he was held in a multistory apartment building on a mountain. He said he could not be specific about the site because: "They took my glasses, and so I cannot see very far. I'm quite nearsighted."

He said the reason he believed there were others held in the same building was that he heard four knocks each morning from people signaling to their guards that they wanted to leave the bathroom, which was adjacent to his second-floor room.

"But the voices were muffled, and I could not tell whether they were speaking English," he said.

The four other Americans who disappeared or were kidnapped in the Moslem, western sector of west Beirut in the past year are William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer; the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister; Peter Kilburn, a librarian at the American University of Beirut; and the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest.

WIFE

Asked whether Levin would undergo a medical checkup in a U.S. military hospital in the Frankfurt area, Heath replied: "If he comes, I think it's safe to assume that. We've done that with all other hostages."

Heath said U.S. officials want to interview Levin about his kidnapping, "if he's willing."

He said the freed correspondent would probably return to the United States on the same Air Force plane that brought Mrs. Levin and other family members to Frankfurt.

For Mrs. Levin, the news of her husband's freedom culminated 11 months of waiting, praying and hoping.

"I got through a year without Jerry, and I never thought I would," the Birmingham, Ala., native, who met and married her husband in 1978, said in Washington on Thursday. "I'm thrilled there are so many people who expressed faith."

Over the past year, Mrs. Levin has tried to promote peace in the Middle East as the best way to secure the release of American hostages.

REAGAN

"The president's attitude," the official said, "is, 'Look, we've put a lid on it with the (cost-of-living) and that's as far as we're prepared to go now.' "

Reagan has frozen cost-of-living benefits for the military.

Stockman made his latest attack at a breakfast meeting with reporters in Washington. The official in California said he was going to call the budget director to find out "Why doesn't he eat his eggs and shut up."

In his latest remarks, Stockman said he had no misgivings about his testimony to the Senate Budget Committee Feb. 5 that the military pension program was "a scandal... an outrage."

In that same testimony, he called for cuts in other large benefit programs, including education and farm supports.

Explaining his remarks to the breakfast group, Stockman said the pension program "needs to be corrected. (But) you have to do it prospectively. You're not going to take anything away from somebody who's retired now. The longer you wait on the prospective issue, the more you build in the future obligations."

PRICES

Beef and veal prices dropped 2.6 percent, more than reversing a 1.8 percent December gain. Pork prices were up a tiny 0.2 percent while poultry costs fell 1.9 percent. Declines were also posted for fish and dairy products.

—Capital equipment costs were up 0.4 percent in January following no change in December.

"Given the amazing dollar, commodity inflation for the balance of the year will remain very, very subdued," predicted Thomas Thomson, chief economist for Crocker National Bank of San Francisco. "It is hard to-believe that we will see any significant increase in wholesale prices over the next several months."

The strong dollar makes foreign goods cheaper for Americans to purchase and also keeps pressure on U.S. manufacturers to hold the line on prices for fear of losing further ground to foreign competition.

Price changes that show up in the producer price measure are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. The Consumer Price Index, though, checks for a broader range of items, including housing and medical care, than does the wholesale index.

GANG

The Chicago Tribune quoted unidentified federal sources as saying that Smith, 48, whose throat had been slashed, was a major target of a two-year federal grand jury investigation of mob gambling activities in Chicago.

On Jan. 14, Leonard Yaras was shot 11 times and killed while sitting in his car on Chicago's Northwest Side. Gladden said authorities believe Yaras, 44, ran the gambling operations of a Jewish faction of Chicago's organized crime network.

Healy said he was searching for a pattern linking the three slayings.

"The patterns don't seem to fit," Healy said. "Hal Smith and Yaras were big gamblers and were about to be indicted — not that they were cooperating."

But he noted: "There's no indication English was going to be indicted. He was semi-retired, his heyday was in the '60s, '70s. He wasn't a major gambling figure now."

Healy said gambling generated "hundreds of hundreds of millions" of dollars annually for organized crime in the Chicago area.

"I've heard people commenting there's a gang war, but we can't say anything about that," said FBI spokesman Bob Long.

Man shoots teachers, self

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — A 28-year-old man who wounded two Temple Junior College instructors, holding one of the women hostage for three hours, showed wild mood swings before fatally shooting himself, police said.

"He'd be just normal and say, 'Well, I'll release her and come out if you promise me this and this,'" said police Chief Thomas Vannoy after Thursday's shootings.

Moments later, he'd say things like, "If I hear a noise, I'm gonna shoot her and kill myself," Vannoy said.

The gunman, identified as Steven Parsons, apparently had been caught rifling a woman's purse in an office. He held about 30 police at bay and negotiated by telephone from a barricaded office in the school's one-story Fine Arts Building before turning a .22-caliber pistol on himself.

Police said they had decided to storm the room when, at 5:45 p.m., they heard a single shot and sent in one officer, who found the gunman slumped unconscious. The man died about 10:15 p.m. Thursday at Scott & White Hospital during surgery for a gunshot wound in his chest, said assistant nursing director Dolores Gautier.

The hostage, management instructor Laurelyn Carlisle, 33, of Salado, was in critical condition early today following surgery for gunshot wounds to her abdomen, hospital spokeswoman Carol Trono said.

The other woman, speech instructor Debbie Foster, 30, of Little River, was treated for a gunshot wound to her hip and discharged, the hospital said.

Parsons, who had addresses in Austin and Longview, apparently was surprised by the women as he rifled a purse in one of their offices about 2:50 p.m.

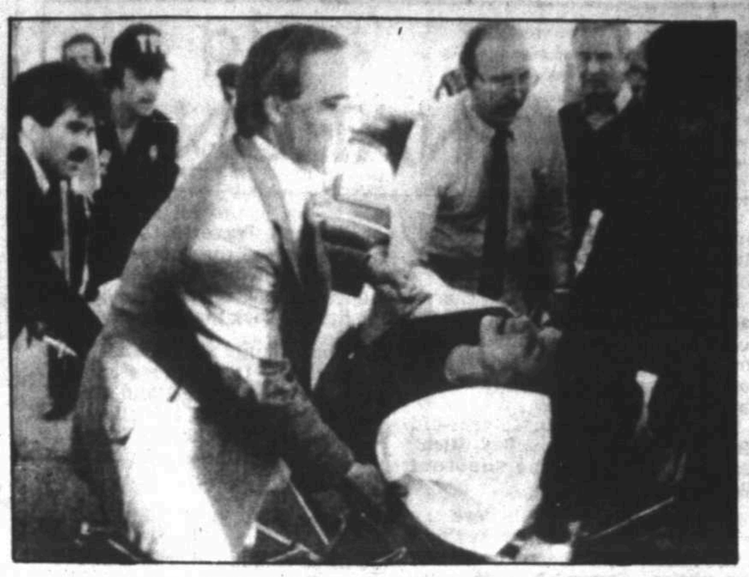
"He was carrying a woman's purse. He must have lost all composure and he began firing," said Temple president Marvin Felder.

Both women were wounded in the initial shooting, but Ms. Carlisle was wounded a second time, apparently by accident, about 30 minutes later, according to reports.

The gunman also fired at another, unidentified faculty member, who was not hurt.

Ms. Foster was allowed to leave, and Felder said she "really felt Laurelyn was in imminent danger — that the man was not at all stable."

"I can't help but think of Laurelyn in there for three hours with a man threatening to kill her or himself," Felder said. "I can't imagine the torture on the human mind," Felder said.



Laurelyn Carlisle,33, of Salado, a management teacher at Temple Junior College is rushed to a hospital after a 28-year-old Austin man shot two college instructors and held another hostage before turning the gun on himself Thursday.

STATE

White: Flat tax plan could hurt oil industry

AUSTIN (AP) — The Reagan administration's proposed flat tax plan would seriously damage the Texas oil industry and endanger the nation's security, Gov. Mark White says.

Calling the plan "nearsighted," White on Thursday wrote the White House asking Reagan to meet with him and Gov. George Nigh of Oklahoma to discuss proposals to abolish many oil-related tax exemptions.

"World War II was won on a sea of Texas oil. A president who has devoted so much of the nation's resources to protection of national security ... cannot turn his back blindly on the obvious need to protect our oil and gas resources."

White said the oil-related exemptions in the current law are legitimate and underwrite many of the risks associated with energy exploration.

Without the oil depletion allowance that allows independent producers to recover capital expenses and deducations for intangible drilling costs, many investors would choose safer places for their money, White said.

While he supports the idea of simplifying federal income taxes, White said, "There's no sense in running off the cliff committing national suicide in an effort to be simple."

The flat tax "constitutes a nearsighted attempt to eliminate these incentives at a time when the administration should be taking a leadership role to achieve more national energy independence and to encourage domestic energy production," he said.

White noted that 12 years ago, in the depths of the Arab oil embargo, the nation was reminded of the dangers of depending on foreign oil.

"It is a lesson we cannot afford to ignore today," he said.

"Texas could lose 85,000 to 170,000 oil- and gas-related jobs by 1990, our severance tax revenues could drop by more than $100 million annually between now and 1991. Texas royalty owners could lose $30 million in payments per year," he said.

"Our state cannot afford this predicted downturn in oil production ... We cannot stand idly by and allow the federal government to adopt tax policies that will put many independent oil and gas operators out of business and idle an estimated 460 drilling rigs a year."

Lawyer witness in Mattox trial

AUSTIN (AP) — Houston attorney Thomas McDade, who aroused Attorney General Jim Mattox' ire by trying to question Mattox' sister in a lawsuit, was scheduled to be the first witness in Mattox's commercial bribery trial today.

Mattox pleaded innocent to the felony charge on the first day of the trial Monday. On Wednesday a jury of eight women and four men was picked.

Mattox was named in a felony indictment Sept. 13, 1983, accused of threatening in a telephone call to put the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski out of the municipal bond business unless McDade dropped efforts to question Mattox's sister, Janice, in connection with a lawsuit involving the state, South Texas rancher Clinton Manges and Mobil Oil Corp.

The suit was settled last year, and Mattox denies threatening McDade.

In an open court hearing last November to take depositions for Mattox's trial, McDade testified that when another partner of the law firm, Wiley Caldwell, told him of receiving a June 17 call from Mattox he thought Mattox was "kidding."

He said Caldwell described Mattox as being "mad, angry, upset, fuming."

McDade said the firm was given until 3 p.m. June 17 to "back off" from taking depositions relating to getting Laredo Judge Ruben Garcia taken off the Mobil Oil case.

McDade and other attorneys of the firm, which represented Mobil Oil, contended that Garcia was too close to Mattox and Manges to handle the case.

Freeze may have cost $23 million in wages

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — At least $23 million in farm wages and more than 700,000 man-days of harvesting were lost in last month's crop-killing Florida freeze, according to a state estimate.

The preliminary figures were part of a statistical package headed for Gov. Bob Graham early next week. They were given to the Associated Press by a state official who demanded anonymity.

The state defines a man-day as the amount of harvesting one person could do in a day.

Estimates indicate the freeze killed about two-thirds of the state's vegetable crops, a quarter of the citrus crop and about a third of the forage on grazing lands.

Graham aides have said the governor is expected to use the figures to support a request for a presidential disaster declaration which would funnel federal dollars to unemployed agriculture workers.

A Graham spokesman declined Thursday to comment on the figures, saying the governor had not received them.

The total number of workers left jobless by the freeze was still to be calculated. The state source said the jobless data was the most important statistic because it will determine how many people get assistance.

Nearly $10 million in federal unemployment aid was distributed to jobless workers after the Christmas freeze in 1983.

If President Reagan declares a disaster, federal dollars can come in at least two forms: unemployment payments and low-interest loans, Graham spokesman Pat Riordan said.

Those payments could come from the Small Business Administration, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Labor Department.

Federal surveyors in the 66 counties hit by the freeze — it spared only Monroe County, principally made up of the Florida Keys and Everglades National Park — collected data on how many acres of crops were lost, how many workers were on hand and what they would have earned had the crops been spared.

The cold destroyed vegetables and forced an early harvest of citrus for processing into juice concentrate. Even though the citrus crop will be smaller than hoped, salvage operations kept many pickers and packing-house workers employed.

Other forms of assistance are available as well, said Joy McIlwain, a spokeswoman with the Department of Community Affairs, which oversees the Division of Emergency Management.

Suspects may be wanted in other states

NATION

COLBY, Kan. (AP) — Four suspects in a crime spree that left four dead and four wounded in northwest Kansas may have been on a two-week rampage through eight states that resulted in several robberies and at least one other killing, authorities said.

There are "strong indications" the four were involved in armed robberies and shootings over the last two weeks in Michigan, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma, police Chief Mark Spray said Thursday.

A three-county chase Wednesday that started with an apparent robbery at a restaurant in Granfield, Kan., 40 miles southeast of Colby, culminated in a shootout that left one suspect dead, authorities said.

Also killed Wednesday were a restaurant manager and two hostages who were taken at a grain elevator and shot "execution style." The four people who were wounded included two suspects and a Thomas County deputy who was shot after stopping the suspect's car.

Authorities spent Thursday trying to determine if the four suspects committed other crimes as they traveled south and west from Michigan before reaching Kansas on Tuesday.

Law enforcemen' officials from Arkansas and Texas said they planned trips today to Kansas to interview the three surviving suspects about robberies in which one woman was killed and another was shot seven times.

Meanwhile, local authorities planned to file charges today against James C. Hunter, 33, of Amoret, Mo., and Daniel E. Remeta, 27, and Lisa J. Dunn, 18, both of Traverse City, Mich., according to Thomas County Attorney Perry Murray.

Murray said he planned to charge each with two first-degree murder counts, two aggravated assault counts, two aggravated kidnapping counts and one aggravated robbery charge.

The fourth suspect, 18-year-old Mark Walter, of Suttons Bay, Mich., was killed during the shootout Wednesday.

Authorities said they believe the crime wave began Jan. 27 in Copemish, Mich., with the robbery of a gas station. Copemish is 25 miles southwest of the homes of three of the suspects, and the robbery occurred within 48 hours of the day family members say the suspects left home, Spray said.

Michigan authorities described Remeta as a long-time criminal who served three years at the Michigan State Prison at Marquette. Grand Traverse County Magistrate Stewart Soule said that Remeta appeared in his court at age 14 and said "what he wanted to do was kill a policeman, go out West and become a hit man for the Mafia."

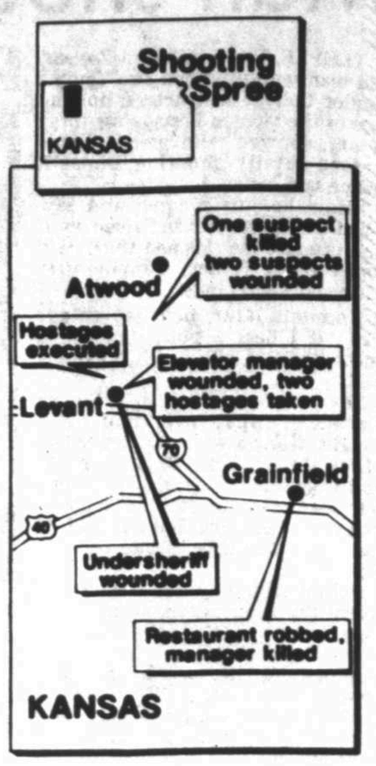
Ms. Dunn, Remeta's girlfriend, was described by Donna Dodd, a counselor at Traverse City Senior High School, as the "perfect model student" who rebelled after her junior year but appeared to be putting her life back together recently.

Thomas County Sheriff Tom Jones said in Colby that Remeta and Ms. Dunn drove to Georgia and arrived in Florida about Feb. 1. While there, Remeta and Ms. Dunn met Walter, a "good Catholic," according to his father, Robert Walter.

The three left Florida on Feb. 6 or Feb. 7. and authorities believed that the three committed crimes in Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma before arriving in Wichita late Tuesday or early Wednesday, Jones said.

There, they met Hunter — who had "somewhat of a reputation as a troublemaker," according to Bates County Prosecutor John O'Bannon. The four headed west, Jones said.

John James, an investigator for Harrison County, Texas, said Thursday he would travel to Kansas to question the suspects about a Feb. 10 service station robbery in Waskom, in which an 18-year-old female attendant was taken hostage and shot seven times.



AP Laserphoto Map

Crawford County, Arkansas, Deputy Prosecutor Joe Self said he and Sheriff Trellon Ball would travel to Colby to interview the suspects about a convienence store robbery Monday, in which a 42-year-old woman was shot to death.

Walesa, activists discuss strike plans

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity founder Lech Walesa says he held a second secret meeting with union activists to discuss plans for a 15-minute nationwide strike to protest proposed increases in food prices.

The meeting, held Thursday morning, was "apparently successful," Walesa told The Associated Press by telephone from his Gdansk apartment.

A similar meeting Wednesday of leaders of the outlawed Solidarity trade union was broken up by police, and seven senior Solidarity activists were detained. Walesa was released.

Gdansk police and the prosecutor's office told relatives of the activists that no decision on their release could be expected until today.

Walesa declined to identify the participants in Thursday's meeting or say where they met, but said they discussed ways to "promote" his appeal to Polish workers to join the protest actions planned for Feb. 28.

The strike call is the first by the Solidarity leadership in two years.

In a statement released Thursday, Walesa proposed that workers either stop work for 15 minutes and talk with management Feb. 28, or write letters to Poland's Communist leaders demanding union freedoms, the release of political prisoners and measures to "stop the disastrous decline in the living standards of working people."

Walesa's statement was read over the telephone by an aide, Bogdan Olszewski. The aide said the activists at Thursday's meeting had expressed "unanimous support" for Walesa's appeal.

"The point is not to cause economic losses or an escalation of tensions," Walesa's statement said. "The point is that with the solidarity of every enterprise we will confirm that we will not give up the gains of August (1980)."

The August 1980 strikes began as a protest over food price increases and led to the birth of Solidarity, the only independent labor federation in the Communist bloc.

The government imposed martial law and crushed the union 16 months later, and Parliament outlawed it in October 1982.

The Wednesday raid appeared to reflect government concern over public reaction to the price increases. Similar increases in 1970, 1976 and 1980 triggered widespread protests.

Those detained Wednesday were Bogden Lis of Gdansk; Wladyslaw Frasyniuk of Wroclaw; Stanislaw Handzlik of Krakow; Janusz Palubicki of Poznan; Jacek Merkel and Mariusz Wilk, both of Gdansk.

Arabs doubtful over U.S.- Soviet talks

Taher Hikmat, Jordan's acting information minister, describes the talks as among "the recent positive developments in the region." Egypt's foreign minister, Esmat Abdel-Meguid, says that if the dialogue "can lead to reducing tensions between the two superpowers, then good."

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Arab governments say the forthcoming U.S.-Soviet dialogue on the Middle East is unlikely to produce dramatic breakthroughs in resolving the region's troubles. But they hail the talks as a sign the superpowers are becoming more interested in the area.

Many see it as a positive step toward solving both the Arab-Israeli conflict and the Iran-Iraq war.

Delegations from the United States and the Soviet Union will open talks Tuesday in Vienna, Austria, for what State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb calls "merely an exchange of views" on issues in this volatile region.

Taher Hikmat, Jordan's acting information minister, describes the talks as among "the recent positive developments in the region."

Egypt's foreign minister, Esmat Abdel-Meguid, says that if the dialogue "can lead to reducing tensions between the two superpowers, then good."

Despite a general agreement on the merits, moderate and hardline Arab states have widely differing interests in the outcome.

Syrian President Hafez Assad, one of Moscow's closest friends in the region, wants the Soviets to insist that the Golan Heights be included along with the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip in any negotiations involving Israel's return of occupied Arab land.

Israel captured the three Arab territories in the 1967 Middle East war. Unlike the West Bank and Gaza, the Golan Heights was formally annexed in 1981 to Israel.

President Reagan's 1982 peace plan for the Middle East called for a Palestinian self-governing entity in the West Bank and Gaza but made no mention of the Golan Heights. Some Western diplomats concede Syria will block any negotiated settlement until the Golan is included in the bargaining.

Even Jordan, which is considered pro-United States despite policy differences with Washington, would welcome a limited Soviet role in Mideast bargaining.

King Hussein has complained of a U.S. monopoly on Middle East peacemaking because of Washington's strong support for Israel. In an interview last year, he argued the United States had "lost its credibility" as a negotiator with the Arabs and was "succumbing to Israeli dictates."

The Jordanians also have an interest in trying to use Moscow's influence in Damascus to fend off security and diplomatic problems with the Syrians, their powerful neighbors to the north.

The state-controlled media in Syria have blasted Hussein's decision last fall to restore diplomatic ties with Egypt, and vowed to "punish" him if the rapprochement leads to an alliance aimed at a "sellout" of the Palestinian cause.

Since then, Jordan, Egypt and Yasser Arafat's wing of the Palestine Liberation Organization have been working on a diplomatic strategy to revive the peace process. On Monday, Jordan and the PLO announced a "common framework" toward that goal.

Egyptian diplomats hope that if the superpowers narrow their differences, Moscow might use its influence to soften Syria's stand and persuade pro-Syrian wings of the PLO to accept Arafat's strategy.

Osama El-Baz, chief political adviser to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and a key figure in the talks with Jordan and the PLO, alluded to Egyptian hopes Thursday when he told reporters the Soviet Union "has a positive role to play" in the search for peace.

El-Baz added that the PLO-Jordanian "framework" does not "conflict with the broad lines" of proposals the Soviet Union has put forth in the past.

During talks between Hussein and Mubarak in Cairo last December, Egyptian officials said the two sides hoped other Arab nations, presumably Syria, could be brought into the peace process.

As an overture to Syria and the Soviets, the Egyptians have accepted Moscow's call for an international conference to settle Arab-Israeli differences.

A narrowing of superpower differences on the Middle East also offers Arabs a glimmer of hope for resolving the more than 4-year-old Iran-Iraq conflict.

Assad, who unlike most Arab leaders backs Iran in the conflict, is scheduled to visit Tehran today, and Kuwaiti newspapers report he will be carrying a new peace plan calling for a ceasefire and negotiations in Algeria.

Although many such plans have failed in the past, Arab diplomats note the Syrians and the Soviets have more leverage with the revolutionary regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini than do the moderate Arab states who feel threatened by a possible expansion of the Persian Gulf war.

Simply simplify?

Tax simplification is a great idea, but it isn't all that simple.

Here's only one example, and there are numerous more. A random sampling of opinion in Midland concerning the Treasury Department's tax simplification plan illustrated solid concern that the plan would step on too many toes. Over and over, Midlanders said: "Tax simplification is a really good idea, and it's truly needed, but ..."

Therein lies a definition of the problem. For decades the U.S. tax laws have been the object of ridicule, teeth-gnashing and lost sleep throughout the nation. The tax code has given many a lawyer and accountant long-term employment. It necessitates a huge bureaucracy merely to collect the tax revenue and to seek out those who slip in meeting their obligations to Uncle Sam. In a nutshell, the complication woven into the tax structure of the nation breeds two specific outcomes — hatred for the system and assurance that it will endure.

To say that everybody would be in favor of tax simplification is to oversimplify such reform. Restructuring the tax code would mean countless Americans would lose the security of tax shelters that have become part of their "income." Many others would get bumped into higher brackets because the Treasury Department plan would eliminate most of the current 14 tax brackets, most deductions and create possibly unworkable hardship for charity organizations and other concerns that derive a large part of their funds from taxpayer write-off giving.

There is no question that millions of Americans are fed up with the complexity of the system, but that system has been evolving for a lot of years, and while it may be a pain, most Americans have learned to deal with it, many quite profitably. While it's ironic in one way, the tax system is known and therefore "comfortable." Pushing for tax simplification will be an uphill fight all the way because the "tax industry" flows throughout every level of the population. Every direction one turns, someone's ox will be getting gored under the simplification plan. Americans never fight harder than where their taxes and income are concerned.

Yes, tax simplification is a great idea. Anytime it takes an average person numerous hours just to prepare their tax return, the tax code is too complex. Any time one industry can provide innumerable jobs for specialty professions like lawyers, accountants, and tax preparation specialists, it's too complicated for average citizens.

Tax simplification is needed, but ...

Real achievement

Tuesday evening there was an awards ceremony held here in which a number of young people were honored for their accomplishments this year in Junior Achievement.

That's particularly noteworthy since in too many instances young people go through their entire educational experience without actually learning what life after graduation holds in store.

Through the Junior Achievement program, young people learn what's involved in developing an idea, obtaining financing, manufacturing a product and marketing it. They learn what it really takes to succeed in business. The experience they gained undoubtedly will be invaluable to them after entering the business world because in today's economic climate only well-operated businesses survive.

District Judge Pat Baskin told the achievers at their banquet that "there are those who watch things happen, those who make things happen and those who never notice anything happening at all." The judge is correct, of course.

Since awards were given to Junior Achievers for sales of $25, $50, $100, $200, $300, $500 and $600, it appears Midland's young businesspeople are the type who make things happen!

Another View:

Why persecution?

At a recent U.N. conference on human rights in Geneva, Maarouf Dawalibi, counselor to the royal court of Saudi Arabia, addressed the issue of Jewish persecution. Such conferences normally receive little publicity, but Dawalibi's remarks are reported in the Feb. 4 New Republic magazine. They offer a strong lesson in the resilience of anti-Semitism. They also help explain growing Western disenchantment with the United Nations and some of its affiliated agencies.

"I confirm that indeed the Jewish people have been discriminated upon and persecuted in all centuries," Dawalibi said. "Why is it so? Why did Nebuchadnezzar scatter (the Jews) and Hitler try to exterminate them? .... It is because they call themselves the chosen people." According to Dawalibi, the Talmud says that "the whole world is the property of Israel and the wealth, the blood and the souls of the non-Israelis ... are theirs."

Dawalibi carried his poisonous version of Talmudic scholarship further. According to him, "The Talmud says that 'if a Jew does not drink every year the blood of a non-Jewish man, then he will be damned for eternity.'" In support of his thesis, Dawalibi dredged up the calumny that in 1840, Jewish elders in Damascus killed and drained the blood of a Christian doctor and his servant.

The conference at which Dawalibi spoke was held to encourage "understanding, tolerance and respect in matters relating to the freedom of religions or belief." We presume Dawalibi entered his remarks under the section labeled "understanding."

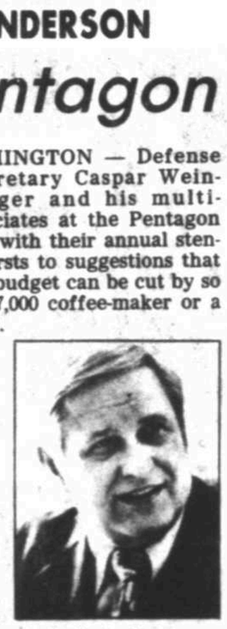
Pentagon flew in friendly votes

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and his multi-starred associates at the Pentagon are reacting with their annual stentorian outbursts to suggestions that the military budget can be cut by so much as a $7,000 coffee-maker or a $400 hammer.



Jack Anderson

Taking the last refuge of scoundrels, they have the effrontery to question the patriotism of those who think the military brass should fall in line like good soldiers and swallow a few budget cuts along with the poor, the elderly and the disabled.

The generals and admirals seem to think that what's good for the Pentagon is good for the country. My associate Tony Capaccio has dug up an example of this self-serving attitude.

The amount of money involved wasn't that great in the context of Pentagon budgets. It amounted to only $27,760, or the combined annual federal income tax paid by four or five middle-income families.

But the expenditure was of questionable legality, according to the cold-eyed auditors of the General Accounting Office — and it was an exercise in futility. Here's what happened:

On May 31, the House was scheduled for a midnight vote on the MX missile program. The Democrats wanted to be sure that Congress retained strict control over the controversial weapons program; the Pentagon opposed this move, of course.

So Weinberger's wastrels put the Air Force's special airlift unit to work fanning out over the country to bring back six loyal Republicans who would vote for the administration. As authority for this political shuttle service, they claimed the flights were "in connection with official business."

Though the Defense Department traditionally has some leeway in authorizing such transportation, the GAO auditors concluded this vote-hustling airlift "strains the limits of permissible administrative discretion."

It also strained whatever faith anyone might have had in the Pentagon's ability to anticipate the vote count on Capitol Hill. The vote wasn't even close: 298 to 98 against the Pentagon. So the six House members who were flown to Washington for the midnight vote could have stayed in bed.

As for the three members who were already in Washington and were flown home by the Air Force after the vote, one can only conclude that the Pentagon was hoping to ingratiate itself with a free plane ride.

According to the GAO auditors, the flights that cost the government $27,760 could have been made on commercial airlines for about one-tenth as much: $2,798.

The biggest share — $11,920 — was used to ferry Rep. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, from Midland to Washington and back to Waco. Gramm was the only round-tripper.

The Air Force taxi fare for Rep. John McCain, R-Ariz. — paid by the taxpayers, not the congressman — was $4,472 to fly him home to Phoenix after the vote. If he had flown commercial, it would have cost the taxpayers only $425.

The Air Force fetched Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., from a speaking engagement in St. Paul and flew him back for the futile vote at a cost of $2,194. The GAO said a commercial flight would have cost $249.

It cost $2,271 to fly Rep. Webb Franklin, R-Miss., to Washington from Greenville, instead of the $325 a commercial flight would have cost; $1,976 for Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., to be flown in from Grand Rapids, instead of $169 commercial; $2,506 to take Rep. Don Sundquist, R-Tenn., home to Nashville, instead of $204.

NAMIBIAN OUTPOST: Critics of the administration's policy in southern Africa have found a new target: the U.S. liaison office in South African-occupied Namibia.

Congressional critics have three objections to the diplomatic outpost: Its presence lends legitimacy to the South African occupation, which has been declared illegal by the United Nations; neither Namibia nor neighboring Angola wants the U.S. mission there; and the American military attache stationed there allegedly is spying on Angola.

The State Department insists that the office is performing a useful function as liaison between South Africa and Angola as the two countries begin pulling their troops back from the embattled Angola-Namibia border. An internal Congressional Research Service report, noting that the disengagement process has come to a stop because of ceasefire infractions, supports the State Department's contention, saying:

"One role of the U.S. mission in this dispute is to pass information between South Africa and Angola when it is not possible for them to communicate directly. Other activities of the liaison office to date have included reporting on internal Namibian politics ... and some debriefing of people on the Angola-Namibia border."

EVANS & NOVAK

Demo rift dramatizes disarray

WASHINGTON — Less than two weeks after Paul Kirk's selection as Democratic National Committee (DNC) chairman, big names and big money confront him with an independent party apparatus representing a direct challenge.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Kirk first tried to bring the new group under the umbrella of the DNC. But the DNC's aura of left-wing special-interest groups is just what the new organization wants to avoid. Instead, it offered a membership to Kirk. He responded with hurry-up plans to name the DNC's own policy council, and associates moved to shut down the new Democratic Leadership Council (DLC) before it could get started.

Whether the infant is smothered in its crib may not be certain until the Feb. 24-26 Winter Governors Conference, in Washington. Whatever its outcome, the backstage battle dramatizes the party's post-election disarray and fragmentation.

Behind the proposed new DLC are leaders of the unsuccessful fight to elect a moderate Southerner or Westerner as national chairman instead of Kirk. "I think there's a touch of pouting by the losers," one party insider told us. The dissatisfaction is less with Kirk personally than his associations with organized labor and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Beyond pouting are serious concerns about the party's future. "This is an effort to bring the Democratic Party back to the center, free of the special-interest groups," said one businessman who has contributed the standard $25,000 to the new council. Just such money men have no intention of contributing to the DNC.

The DLC was conceived by Gov. Chuck Robb of Virginia, who had searched in vain for a new-look DNC chairman. Robb sees the council separate from the DNC, independently funded and as a policymaking body for elected officials. He is supported by Arizona's Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Robb's colleague in the failed effort to elect a national chairman.

But this is no governors cabal. Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, one of the brightest congressional neo-liberals, has been on the phone asking businessmen for money to get the ball rolling. Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, everybody's future vice-presidential candidate, is helping. Alvin From, a savvy congressional staffer who was the late Rep. Gillis Long's aide, has been hired to run the DLC.

In his first days as chairman, therefore, Kirk faced a dilemma. If he ignored the new Robb-Gephardt group, he risked isolation. If he joined it, he risked downgrading himself. The only option, said his supporters, was to abort it.

He has made some progress. The DNC's new Policy Council, under the leadership of Utah's former governor, Scott Matheson, who turned down Robb's bid to seek the DNC chairmanship, will be announced presently. Kirk's backers are passing off the DLC as a Chuck Robb ego-trip seeking luster lost in his fruitless national chairman's search. The respected Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas has been urging that Kirk be given a chance. Other Kirk backers claim Robb has been losing support.

But Robb is not likely to suffer a second straight outright loss in the national arena. An alternative to the DNC is popular. Big-money names contacted by the new group cannot bring themselves to give money to today's DNC. "The Democratic Party has to move itself to the center," one such contributor, Los Angeles financier Don Gevirtz, told us.

For many money men, Kirk has a credibility problem. His background as Kennedy's former aide was highlighted when one of the senator's men jubilantly described Kirk's election as "the first primary of 1988." Worrying the centrists even more than Teddy's vague blessing is organized labor's hard-nosed backing in getting Kirk elected.

Kirk displayed his political expertise in winning the national chairmanship from a dead start, an organizational skill now turned against Robb's effort. But all signs point to a formal unveiling of the DLC, perhaps next week, posing a difficult choice for the new chairman.

Kirk should remember an inside-out parallel 30 years ago. Robb's father-in-law, then Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson, rejected the liberal-oriented Advisory Council set up by National Chairman Paul Butler and suffered because of it. The call for a centrist policymaking body today represents party sentiment as broad as the demand for a liberal body in those bygone days.

CHARLEY REESE

Why worry about trade deficits?

We are hearing a lot these days about the trade deficit — the difference between what we buy from foreigners and what foreigners buy from us. A lot of what we are hearing is either selfish interest pleading or squawks from the Chicken Little School of Economics.

Charley Reese

There is one main reason for at least a considerable part of the deficit and that reason has nothing to do with the strength of the dollar or with the U.S. budgetary deficit.

That reason is that Americans can afford to buy things now and many foreigners cannot afford to buy things. The American economy is healthy. Inflation is down, productivity is up, and more than 7 million new jobs have been created in the last four years.

The economies of many other countries are not good. In Western Europe, unemployment and interest rates remain high. Other countries have outrageous inflation. Much of the Third World, burdened with internatinal debt, is an economic quadraplegic.

In short, there would be a smaller market for U.S. goods due to the economic condition of our potential customers regardless of how we priced them. It takes money or credit to buy and many countries these days don't have much of either.

If you are in a business that depends on exports, that's bad news, but not many Americans relatively speaking are in the export business. We ourselves remain the world's largest and most affluent market and most of our gross national product derives from businesses which serve us, not foreigners.

It is the exporters who are screaming and that is an American tradition. Whenever our personal ox falls on hard times, we scream bloody loud that the Universe is out of kilter. Actually, it is only our own personal profit and loss statement which is out of kilter.

We have a considerable increase in foreign investments for the same reason we have a trade deficit. Foreigners with money are investing in our healthy economy because their own economies are not good places in which to invest.

Again, this is no problem. The United States was developed largely with foreign investments, mostly British. Some Chicken Little economists are claiming the sky will fall when foreigners withdraw their investments. That's nonsense.

Most of the foreign investments are in assets like land and business. The only way they can withdraw their investment is to sell off their assets. They can take their money out, but the land and the factories stay here.

European socialism has wrecked Europe's economy. The oil glut has put the Arab countries on a much lower level of extravagance. OPEC's high prices in the 1970s have virtually destroyed the economies of many lesser developed countries, aided mightily by gross mismanagement and corruption.

Japan has a healthy economy but Japan is an oligarchy masquerading as a nation. The average Japanese does not have a lot of cash in his pocket which he can afford to spend and the Japanese oligarchs are already buying what they need from the United States.

Not many Americans realize that a great deal of what we export are raw materials like hides, chemicals, wood, and coal. For foreign nations to utilize these products their economies must be humming and right now most of them are snoring.

In the meantime, cheap foreign goods are helping to keep inflation down and foreign investments are helping to modernize our industry and take away some of the pressure of the budget deficit.

Finally, the more we buy from foreigners the more money they have to pay their debts and eventually to begin buying from us.

I have a list of 10 things to worry about and the trade deficit is not on it.

The CPSC warns children to be careful when sledding in winter

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sleds and toboggans provide welcome recreation in these dreary winter months, but safety experts warn that carelessness with such items also results in thousands of injuries.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission estimated that 38,487 Americans were treated in hospital emergency rooms after mishaps with sleds, toboggans, snow discs and similar devices in 1982, the most recent figures available.

Not surprisingly, the largest share of those hurt were between the ages of 5 and 14, while the 15 to 24-year-old group had the second highest rate of injuries. And males were hurt more often than females.

The severity of the injuries was relatively low, however, with most of those injured treated and released from hospitals, although some fractures and concussions required hospitalization.

A forest is probably the safest area for snowplay, but such areas are not available to everyone. City dwellers may want to look for a park designated for sliding.

At any rate, never use a slope that ends up in a street that's open for vehicles.

The Forest Service urges careful checking of any slope before sliding, since a few inches of snow can hide boulders, tree stumps and other hazards. And sliders should avoid a slope with trees at the bottom. Even though people are aware of trees, they still collide with them, forest service safety experts point out.

If there are many people sledding, try to get them organized so people climbing uphill all follow the same path and stay clear of those coming down.

Avoid slopes with humps that may send sliders airborne, the Forest Service urges, since a hard landing can cause spine injuries.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission says the three major reasons for sledding injuries are structural problems with sleds, poor riding conditions or collision with an automobile or another sled.

Young people in particular should be cautioned about watching out for other riders and to get off the slope quickly once at the bottom to avoid collisions, the commission reports. The commission's safety tips on choosing a slope are similar to those of the Forest Service.

As to selection and maintenance of sleds and toboggans, here are suggestions from the safety commission:

—Check for sturdy construction. Avoid split or splintered wood and metal parts that are sharp or bent.

—Choose a sled with a protective guard or bumper over the metal front bar to prevent cuts or other injuries in a collision.

—Check sleds for easy steering without jamming.

—Avoid sleds with runners that end in sharp-edged hooks. Runners that curve continuously around to the top and connect to the side rails may be safer.

—Look for secure handholds and a place to tie the rope.

—Dry off the sled or toboggan thoroughly before storing.

—Occasionally rub sled runners and other metal parts with candlewax to make them coast easily and keep them rust-free.

—Lubricate metal bolts, pivots and rivets with a drop or two of oil for rust-free use and easier steering of sleds.

—Sand smooth any rough or splintered wood parts and protect them with wax at the end of the season.

Michigan group gives "crazy" new meaning

DETROIT (AP) — Lampooning loose use of language brought fame to the Unicorn Hunters, an international collection of zanies who see sauntering as a sport and believe legendary ax murderer Lizzie Borden was innocent.

But the group's offbeat activities don't stop with its biting list of "word banishments," a release each January exorcising misused or overused words from English and other languages.

What began as an informal poetry group at Lake Superior State College in 1969 has evolved into an overseer of unusual endeavors, ranging from world-class stone skipping to the burning of snowmen to celebrate spring.

"It's for people who have some whimsy about them," says William T. Rabe, archivist and publicist for the club, which is based in Sault Ste. Marie on Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

"There's a widespread interest," says Rabe. "I don't think a week passes that we don't get 15 or 20 letters ..."

There are at least 30,000 card-carrying Unicorn Hunters worldwide, he says.

"We've given out Unicorn-questing licenses to a lot of people, some of them fairly important people. It just goes on and on. We're getting people from the Far East, Africa ..."

The club was born when Lake Superior State professor Peter Thomas launched a "Poet's Fortnight," during which people were urged to write poetry to a loved one, Rabe says.The group sought a sponsor, so Thomas invented the Unicorn Hunters.

Since then, the hunters have been behind a variety of strange events that have drawn considerable publicity.

One was 1970's first annual "Burning of the Snowman," when they torched a 7-foot-tall paper snowman the day before the vernal equinox to welcome the coming of spring.

"That got a lot of publicity, and people started writing in and wanted to join," Rabe said. "The next thing we know people are selling unicorn stuff all over the place."

The club subsequently created a raft of tongue-in-cheek tips for hunting the single-horned beast of myth. Questing season, for example, begins Oct. 5.

Why the unicorn?

"The quest of the unicorn over the years has been symbolic of man seeking the meaning of life," Rabe says. "The search for the unicorn is an impossible thing. And finding the meaning of life is an impossible thing."

The club's unofficial publication is the college's Woods-Runner quarterly. Unicorn Hunter happenings also often turn up in Chase's Calendar of Events, a national calendar of oddities.

Over the years, the organization has become a conglomerate of fanciful clubs and events, including the New Original Dancing Cuckoos, devoted to the memory of Laurel and Hardy; and Teacher Thank You Week, during which members are to send apples to their most influential teachers.

Another offshoot, the "Friends of Lizzie Borden," notes that the woman never was convicted in the 1892 murders of her parents. "The only purpose of the group is to deny that Lizzie Borden did it," Rabe says.

Late June brings "World Sauntering Day," a spoof of jogging held on Mackinac Island.

Then there's the July 4 stone-skipping contest. After a world-record 24 skips was marked last year, the Guinness Book of World Records called Rabe and asked him to develop guidelines for challenging the record.

"As far as Guinness is concerned, we are firmly in control of world stone skipping," says the Unicorn spokesman.

But the event "that's really caught on" is the word banishment, he says.

Last month, after culling through 3,000 nominations, the club released its 10th annual banned word list, which included "Star Wars," "mandate" and any word ending with the suffix "-busters."

UT officials fear student drop-out

AUSTIN (AP) — Cuts in student aid proposed by the Reagan administration could force 2,000 or more students to drop out of the University of Texas, UT administrators say.

Reagan has asked Congress to deny guaranteed student loans to students from families with incomes above $32,500 and to limit to $4,000 annually the maximum federal help any student can get.

Ronald Brown, vice president for student affairs, said lower income students at UT would be most affected by the cuts.

"The limit on the total package of aid to $4,000 would have impact on the lowest income students, and thus would be of serious concern," Brown said.

"Based on our review of the data, there might be a couple of thousand whose need would be substantially above the $4,000 maximum. Those people we know are not taking out financial aid as a matter of convenience. They're taking it out as a matter of necessity," Brown said.

Asked if those students would be forced to drop out, Brown replied, "I think there's a good chance of that."

UT officials estimate that it costs $6,000 to pay for tuition, fees, books, personal expenses and modest room and board for a year, Brown said.

Some students whose families earn more than $32,500 annually might also have to withdraw, Brown said. But he said that is more difficult to determine because officials don't know which students needed loans to attend school and which obtained loans to make financing college more convenient.

About 25 percent of the UT student body receives some form of federal financial aid, said Don Davis, associate director of the Student Financial Aid Office.

Davis estimated that under Reagan's budget proposals, 4,000 to 5,000 students would be affected.

Brown said he doubted that many UT students receiving federal loans are abusing the program.

"I think very few of our financial aid recipients are plagued with problems of two weeks on the beach and the like. I'm not saying thre aren't students on campus who do that, but not financial aid students," he said.

Governor denies accusations

AUSTIN (AP) — Political campaign contributors don't get special consideration in appointments to state boards and commissions, Gov. Mark White said.

At his weekly news conference Thursday, White was asked about legislators' criticism of his appointments procedure and also about campaign donors.

"None," White replied when asked what part contributions play in his decisions.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, this week complained White first led him to believe a candidate Capterton favored for the Texas A&M Board of Regents would be appointed, then passed him over.

But Thursday, White said he never misled Caperton and was "very dismayed" by a speech in which Caperton told White to find someone else to push his favored legislation.

At that point, White was asked whether political contributions had any impact on his decisions. Then reporter Carole Kneeland of Dallas television station WFAA, asked:

"What about the accusation that you sell seats on the..."

White interrupted, demanding, "Who said that? Who's ever said that?"

"Some reporters in my shop in Dallas," Ms. Kneeland replied.

"Well they're damn wrong," White said.

"They're absolutely wrong. I don't know what contributions any of those people gave me."

About the same time, the Senate voted 28-0 to confirm three White nominees as University of Texas system regents.

The three were Austin lawyer Shannon Ratliff, who has been treasurer of White's 1982 gubernatorial campaign committee; Houston oil company executive Jack Blanton and oilman W.F. Roden of Midland.

On Monday, Caperton, whose Senate district included Texas A&M, charged that White and his staff misled the lawmaker into believing Caperton's former law partner, Don Mauro of Bryan, would be one of those the governor named an A&M regent.

When Mauro wasn't appointed, Caperton said, "Not only did this governor choose to ignore my advice, but I had no input or consultation with regard to the two appointees who ultimately were named."

Criticism also came from Sens. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, and Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin.

"It's an indication that this is not one problem involving one senator. We have made some painful decisions to help him, and friendship should be a two-way street," Edwards said.

"We need more proper action from the governor," Barrientos said.

White told his news conference he "never indicated" to Caperton "that I would appoint the person he wanted appointed."

The governor said he has sought to be "very careful to make top-quality appointments."

The governor's wife, Linda Gale White, during a visit to Bryan on Thursday, denied published reports that Mauro was passed over because of her friendship with John Mobley, who with his wife, Ann, worked on White's campaign for attorney general.

Actor Jeremy Stuart, dressed as comic book character Spiderman, performs for schoolchildren at the Blackstone Community School in Boston Thursay at a program where the children received special comic books that teach about sexual abuse. The comic books are being distributed in Texas by the Houston Chronicle and have already resulted in children confessing to being abuse.

Comic hero fights child abuse

HOUSTON (AP) — A Spider-Man comic book portraying sexual abuse and how children should handle it has helped authorities in two southeast Texas counties in making a number of arrests and launching investigations, officials say.

The comic book was distribued with the Houston Chronicle on Jan. 27, just a few days after the television series "Different Strokes" featured a child abuse incident.

Edie Connelly, a detective with the Montgomery County Sheriff's Department, said the two presentations have influenced a number of children and resulted in the arrest in Montgomery County of four men and a woman on charges of sexual abuse.

In Houston, police department investigators said they have been swamped with reports of child sex abuse, including five cases where the comic book figured prominently.

"These cases resulted directly from kids reading the comic book and telling someone about what happened to them," said officer R.W. Latch. "I've never had as many cases of child sex abuse as I have on my desk right now."

Latch spoke of a 10-year-old girl who recently told a school counselor that she had been raped by her mother's boyfriend.

"I asked her why she told her counselor and she told me it was after reading the Chronicle Spider-Man Book," said Latch.

In other incidents, a 7-year-old boy reported an assault by a 9-year-old, a 13-year-old reported being raped by her stepfather, and a 4-year-old told of being touched by her father. In each case, the reading of the comic book encouraged the children to make their reports, according to the Chronicle.

Dog foils crime

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The attempted kidnapping of a 7-year-old girl was foiled when the girl's dog bit one of her would-be abductors, police said.

"I've got the report up on my bulletin board with 'true dog of the year award' written under it," Lt. Robert Jasek said Thursday. "That dog saved that little girl from being abducted."

The girl told police she was walking her poodle, Nappy, about 5:30 p.m. Wednesday when a car drove slowly by. The two men in the car waved at her and the car went down the street, turned around, and came back, she said.

The passenger opened his door and motioned for the girl to get inside, she said. She told police she was scared and tried to run, but that the man grabbed her arm. At that point, she released Nappy's leash, and the poodle bit the passenger on his hand, she said.

The man then released the girl, who ran to an older girl who was riding a bicycle nearby.

Horse owner sentenced

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman convicted of cruelty to animals after 31 sick and starving horses were seized by authorities has been sentenced to one-year probation and ordered to pay a $250 fine.

Johnnie Riley, 56, also was ordered by visiting Court-at-Law Judge Rya Montgomery to perform 50 hours of community service as part of her sentence.

The judge on Wednesday found Ms. Riley guilty of the misdemeanor charge, which was punishable by up to one year in jail and a maximum $2,000 fine.

Ms. Riley was accused of neglecting the horses she kept on a 37-acre lot in northwest Harris County.

She wore a hospital bracelet to her sentencing Thursday and clutched a nausea tray as the judge announced her punishment. Defense attorney Darryl Campbell said his client had checked into Ben Taub Hospital earlier in the day, complaining of a headache and chest pain.

When the judge read the guilty verdict a day earlier, Ms. Riley shrieked and struck her head as her chair tipped over. She then sat up and said, "I can't help it if horses get sick and lose weight."

During Ms. Riley's trial, veterinarian Frank Martin testified that when 31 horses were confiscated from Ms. Riley's property on Jan. 31, 1984, most of them were about 300 pounds too light.

Heart defect holds up deportation

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Saying they wanted to more extensively review the case, immigration officials have postponed deporting the illegal alien parents of a 4-year-old American citizen with a heart defect.

Raul and Guadalupe Tena and their 6-year-old daughter, Daniella, were first to be deported Wednesday and then again Thursday.

The family has been living in Las Cruces, N.M., about 45 miles north of El Paso, since 1979, officials said.

They are fighting deportation because their 4-year-old son, Victor, has a congenital heart defect, which doctors say would not be treated properly if they were returned to Mexico.

Victor is an American citizen. Although he does not face deportation, the Tenas have said they would not return to Mexico without him.

After reporting to immigration officials Wednesday, the family was taken to the U.S.-Mexico border for deportation, but abruptly halted about half-way across the international bridge.

The Tenas said they were told to return to Las Cruces Wednesday night, but to report to the INS again on Thursday afternoon.

However, shortly before noon Thursday, the INS informed the family through an intermediary not to report.

"The ... family has been told not to report today," Henry McGehee, Immigration and Naturalization Service deputy district director in El Paso, said Thursday. "We're still in the midst of studying over the case."

McGehee said, "We don't think any further decision will be made today."

Immigration officials were reviewing the medical history of Victor and were trying to determine the medical treatment that would be available to the boy if he moved to Mexico, he said.

The Tenas have no telephone in Las Cruces and could not be reached for comment Thursday.

McGehee said a "mixup in communications" resulted in Wednesday's near-deportation for the family.

"A mistake was made," he said, declining to elaborate.

McGehee said INS officials in Washington, Dallas and El Paso were involved in the review of the case.

Patient Chaps do in Badgers

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College used patience and a disconcerting press to turn Amarillo College into an also-ran in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball race Thursday night at the Langford Chaparral Center.

The Chaps won more easily than expected, 74-61, to retain a share of first place in the race. The Badgers, however, dropped three full games off the pace and now must concentrate on solidifying a berth in the Region V playoffs. In that endeavor, the schedule favors the 9-5 Badgers, who also go 20-5 for the season.

After a close call against NMJC at Hobbs a week ago, a one-point loss to NMMI at Roswell Monday and the memory of an overtime escape against the Badgers in Amarillo still fresh, the Chaps had to go into this one apprehensively.

"If we'd lost this one we'd be looking in the mirror at ourselves, wondering who we were," Coach Jerry Stone sighed in relief after it was over.

ZEAK WILLIAMS and Vernon Coleman were the catalysts for this much-needed victory. They were the guys who made it happen, "but our press was the difference and Lawrence Chumbley played a big part in its effectiveness under their basket," supplied Stone.

Williams wound up with 14 points, high for the Chaps, scoring on five of seven field attempts in the last half.

Coleman's basket from the corner tied it at 20 with just over seven minutes left in the first half. A couple of free throws by Steve Dailey, who shared scoring honors for the Badgers with Ken Johnson at 18, put the Badgers back in front, but again Coleman tied it from the top of the circle.

That's when the Chaps went into their "have patience" offense, waiting for the Badgers to come out of their zone and then striking. After Johnson's basket tied it at 24 with five minutes left in the half, Chuckie Graves supplied a six-point lick, two baskets and two free throws, and Coleman hit another bucket as MC took a 31-23 lead at half.

AC was to go eight minutes without a field goal as MC forged a 41-25 lead at one point in the second half.

The Chaps broke fast after intermission with Chumbley rebounding. Williams going in on a fast break and Williams bottoming from 15-feet to get things going.

Amarillo managed to creep back into the picture to trail 52-43 with 7:31 left to play, still time enough. That's when the MC press was its most destructive, scoring 10 points, three off steals, in a deadly 1:12 stretch to leave the Badgers eating dust, 65-43.

"We started playing D like we are supposed to," said Zeak. "Coach called a 40-D full court and they panicked and we capitalized on it."

Williams went on, "We have been scoring in spurts and we've got a problem there. We get ahead and then we seem to ease off."

ON MC'S overall strategy, Williams, a sophomore from El Paso, said "We tried to contain Dailey and Kennedy because they were thin at point guard because of illness, so we pressured them to try to force the turnovers."

Kennedy and Dailey with 33 points between them weren't exactly shut out, but they didn't do any terrorizing either.

Six-nine Teviin Binns, held to one point at Roswell, scored 12 against AC, not a big night for the sophomore from New York City, but he grabbed off 17 rebounds.

The effect of MC's pressure is reflected by the steals, eight by Coleman, seven by Chuckie Graves and four by Williams. Coleman had 11 assists and Zeak five.

The win brings the Chaps to 21-4 for the season going into Monday's game against Howard College at Big Spring.

Win, lose, Rebs still in playoffs

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

As far as District 4-5A playoff berths are concerned the only thing riding on tonight's games is who is champion and who is runnerup. Midland Lee and Abilene High have clinched the top two places and are going no matter what.

The Rebels and Eagles have completed all but one game in 4-5A play and are tied at 10-3. If one team should win and the other lose, then first and second place will be decided in regular season play.

Should both teams win or lose, then a playoff game will be needed sometime next week at a neutral site to determine champion and runnerup for the playoffs.

For Midland High, the playoffs are nothing more than a dream. But, that doesn't mean the Bulldogs will simply roll over and play dead upon command in tonight's finale against Lee at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center. More likely, the Bulldogs have been trained to attack and would like nothing more than to maul the Rebels before packing away their gear for the year.

"Of course Paul's kids have a lot more to shoot at than we do because they are in the playoffs but I don't think you'll see any slow down of the tempo," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson about the game and his counterpart Paul Stueckler at Lee. "Some of our kids might be playing a little harder because they are seniors and know it will be there last game. But, anytime you put good athletes on the floor, I think they'll go out and compete.

"I think Paul and his kids need to be congratulated for their season. Paul already knows what I think about the year they've had. They went out and won the big games when they had to and I hope they go into the playoffs and win and win and win."

For Stueckler and his Rebels, "Getting into he playoffs on Tuesday (When Lee clinched a berth by defeating Odessa High while San Angelo fell from contention by losing to Abilene Cooper) does take some of the pressure off this game with Midland High," said Stueckler.

"We don't have to win this one to get in the playoffs but we are still looking at this game as being for the district championship. I don't think Abilene High will lose to Cooper — anything could happen — but I don't expect it. So, we need to beat Midland High to get at least a share of the title. It's still a big game as far as Midland Lee is concerned.

"I was tickled to death to learn Tuesday night that we were in the playoffs," continued Stueckler. "I hadn't even thought about Cooper beating San Angelo. I just didn't think that would happen."

THE LAST time Midland High and Midland Lee met this season, few, if any, were calling it an artistic game. Stephenson still isn't too happy with the way the things turned out.

"I hope this one is a better game," said Stephenson. "The last one was one of the worst games I've ever watched. Both teams were awful. Lee was just a little better than we were. It's too bad we had such a bad game in front of all those fans. The ball wouldn't fall in for either side. It was a mess."

Midland Lee was a little less messy but only by four points on the scoreboard, 50-46, and a few percentage points on the shooting charts. The Rebels dropped in 18-of-54 field goals (33 percent) and 14-of-24 free throws (58 percent) to the Bulldogs 16-of-63 (25 percent) from the field and 14-of-21 (67 percent) from the line.

Before Stueckler has a chance to coach his varsity squad against the Bulldogs, he has to do double duty by taking over the junior varsity helm for an on-the-road Coach Bill Jordan.

"I'm going to coach both the junior varsity and varsity teams so Coach Jordan can go to Amarillo to scout Monterey," said Stueckler. "Jesse Benavidez is going to scout the Palo Duro-Caprock game for me. It worked out nice because both of those games are in Amarillo."

And both feature a team Lee might face in bi-district: Lubbock Monterey, Amarillo Palo Duro or Amarillo High.

Monterey won the District 3-5A crown and will face the 4-5A runnerup and Palo Duro and AHS are tied for second. The eventual winner of those two teams will meet the 4-5A champion, either Lee or AHS.

It's a situation Stephenson would like to see his team in.

"You start the season wanting to win more than you lose," he said. "Your second goal is to win 20 games and your third goal is to make the playoffs. We accomplished two of the three goals. We've had a successful season and it's just a shame it has to end so early."

Arkansas grabs temporary hold on SWC second place

AUSTIN (AP) — Arkansas center Joe Kleine scored 22 points and held Texas center John Brownlee to six as the Razorbacks took sole possession of second place in the Southwest Conference with a 60-51 victory over the Longhorns Thursday night.

Arkansas improved its record to 17-9 and 8-4 in the SWC, still behind Southern Methodist but leaving Texas A&M and Texas Tech a half-game behind in third place. Texas fell closer to the conference cellar at 5-7. The 'Horns are 12-10 overall.

Texas led by three points several times in the first half until forward Mike Wacker picked up two quick fouls with about 6:30 left to play. He sat out the rest of the half and without him the Longhorns failed to score and saw their lead turn into a 24-19 Arkansas advantage at the half.

Wacker led Texas with 16 points, followed by Carlton Cooper with 15.

Kenny Hutchinson added 15 for Arkansas.

Midland High's Denise Lanz, in dark uniform, shows a cool hand under heavy defensive pressure

Looking to make 'things right'

Lanz leads Bulldogs down second playoff trail

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Senior Denise Lanz has been good for Midland High girls basketball, but she still thinks she needs to get things right before her high school career ends.

Lanz has started for Coach Jane Young's Lady Bulldogs since she was a sophomore, and when she hits the bi-district playoff court in Lamesa at 2 p.m. Saturday against Lubbock Monterey, it will mark her second appearance in the state's run for glory.

As a sophomore, Lanz was on Midland High's first playoff team and now she heads up the Lady Bulldogs' second effort in the hunt for a state title. Three years and two playoff berths isn't bad, but Lanz wants more before it's all over.

"I'm thrilled to be in the playoffs again," said Lanz after a 47-28 bombing of cross-town rival Midland Lee Monday gave the Lady Bulldogs admission to the bi-district round. "It was fun the first time, but maybe we can get it right this time around. I'd like very much to do a better job than last time."

The last time wasn't exactly a failure since MHS won bi-district with a victory over Plainview before losing the area contest to El Paso Eastwood in El Paso. Not bad for the first trip down the playoff road.

"I still remember that eight-hour bus ride to El Paso. Maybe we won't have that this time around," said Lanz. "And, of course, being a senior this time around makes this special."

LANZ HAS improved steadily over her three varsity years. She averaged around eight points a game as a sophomore, but began to bloom last year as a junior with 360 points over 28 games for a 12.9 per game average. This year she scored almost 100 more points for a 16.0 average per game to lead all Tall City scorers. She has been the heart and soul of the MHS offense.

Lanz scored more than 20 points in eight games during the 1984-85 season as the Bulldogs climbed to a 19-9 record. Only six times did she fail to break into double figures with a five-point low in a victory against Lee in the first of four meetings between the two teams. Lanz also got off to a slow start in the season opener with six points against fifth-ranked Class 4A Andrews.

She had 19, 18 and 13-point outings against Lee in the other games, but admitted, "Lee seems to bring out the worst in me. I don't ever play very well against them."

Lanz hit a career high 27 points in a 70-50 win against Big Spring when she was sick. After that game she said, "That is the most points I've ever scored in one game, but it didn't seem like it. I just want to go home. I've been sick all week."

THE 5-FOOT-9 blonde ended regular season play with three straight games over the 20-point mark as Midland High made its frantic push for the playoffs. The Lady Bulldogs have won 12 of their last 13 games and it took that pace to earn District 4-5A's runnerup berth. During that stretch, Lanz scored over 20 points six times and her 13 against Lee in the district playoff was her lowest output during that climb.

"Denise has been a good scorer for us all three years, but she also gives our team a lot of leadership," noted Coach Young. "Denise and Deidra (Knapp) have both played on the varsity since they were sophomores and they've been in a lot of games. Those two have given us a lot of leadership.

"After the start we got off to in district play, it looked like we would never get back in the race. We lost our first two district games and it was a tough climb to get back in it. I'm proud of all the girls."

Lee coach Shirley Stephenson also sings the praises of Lanz, saying, "She's a very good player. Denise doesn't make many mistakes and seems to always be under control. It looked like to me (in the district playoff game) that Denise and Deidra were the only players on the court who weren't tight. They have a lot of experience.

MONTEREY'S PLAINSMEN have been a trational playoff power in girls basketball and Lanz knows the task at hand Saturday won't be an easy one.

"I'm sure Monterey is a good team. They always are. I don't know a lot about them, but I think we will be in the game," Lanz said. "If we set the pace and play a good control-type game, which is our kind of game, we can win."

At one point during the season, MHS owned a meager 7-8 record and didn't look like they were headed anywhere. But after the 12-1 spurt, the Lady Bulldogs are one of the hottest teams in the state.

Monterey, an easy winner in District 3-5A, will be the bi-district favorite come Saturday, but Lanz and her Lady Bulldog teammates will still be looking to get things right.

Michigan defeats Iowa to increase Big Ten lead

Associated Press

Bill Frieder, the Michigan coach, wasn't buying all the hype over his team's Big Ten matchup with Iowa. George Raveling, the Hawkeyes coach, sauntered onto the floor wearing a warmup suit to show how uptight he felt.

"You guys can make it out as a big game, but we have to play six more," Frieder said after his third-ranked Wolverines took a 1½-game lead over No. 11 Iowa with a 56-52 victory at Iowa City.

"I'm damn happy," Frieder said. "I'm not going to downplay that, but there's a long way to go and a lot of funny things can happen in this conference."

Raveling and his coaches wore jogging suits instead of the more traditional sport jackets and neckties. "I figured since you guys said this was the biggest game of the year, I would relax," Raveling said.

Roy Tarpley led Michigan, 19-3 and 10-2 in the Big Ten, with 21 points, but only four of those came in the second half as Iowa took a five-point lead with 4½ minutes to play. The Wolverines erased the lead on two straight baskets by Garde Thompson and a bucket by Antoine Joubert that put Michigan ahead for good, 50-49. Greg Stokes had 15 points for Iowa, 19-5 and 8-3 in the Big Ten.

While he was relaxing in his sweatsuit, Raveling blamed a defense that was a little too relaxed for allowing the two baskets by Thompson in that run.

"One of our players just fell asleep," Raveling said. "As I told him in the dressing room, 'I can buy you falling asleep on it the first time, but not a second time.' "

College Basketball Roundup

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 8 Syracuse swamped Seton Hall 94-62, No. 12 Louisiana Tech beat Southwestern Louisiana 83-76 in overtime, No. 17 Illinois clobbered Northwestern 64-42 and No. 18 Oregon State defeated Washington State 69-49.

Top Ten

Syracuse scored the first eight points of the second half to open up a 60-47 lead and easily defeated Seton Hall in a Big East Conference game, giving Jim Boeheim his 200th coaching victory. In only nine years at Syracuse, Boeheim has a record of 200-66.

Wendell Alexis, a reserve forward, had 17 points for the Orangemen, 18-4 and 8-4 in the Big East. Seton Hall is 9-15 and winless in 13 conference games.

Seton Hall cut Syracuse's lead to 62-32 as Andre McCloud scored seven points in a 10-2 spurt, but Syracuse responded with a 17-4 run to put the game away. McCloud led the Pirates with 15 points.

Seton Hall Coach P.J. Carlesimo called Boeheim's achievement "mind-boggling," adding, "He's a great, great coach. It's unfortunate he doesn't get quite as much recognition as he deserves."

Second Ten

Louisiana Tech scored eight times from the foul line in the final minute of overtime, and Willie Simmons had 16 points as the Bulldogs improved their record to 21-2. The score was tied 63-63 at the end of regulation, but Lousiana Tech took advantage of three turnovers by Southwestern in overtime. Neither team led by more the five points in the first half.

Illinois ended a three-game Big Ten Conference losing streak by beating Northwestern, which has lost five straight games. Bruce Douglas had 17 points as the Illini upped its record to 19-7 and 7-5 in the conference. Northwestern did not score its first field goal until more than nine minutes were gone but rallied to trail only 32-26 at halftime. Illinois scored 16 straight points during a 10-minute stretch of the second half to lead 52-33.

A.C. Green had a game-high 29 points, and center Steve Woodside had 17 points and 11 assists as Oregon State coasted over Washington State in the Pacific-10 Conference. The Beavers never trailed, leading 33-22 at halftime and 43-27 five minutes into the second half on a three-point play by Woodside. Oregon State is 18-4 and 8-3 in the Pac-10.

Unranked

Ronnie Stokes had 17 points to lead Ohio State to a 72-63 Big Ten victory over Indiana as the Buckeyes won for the first time at the Hoosiers' Assembly Hall. Indiana dropped to 14-8 and 6-6 in the Big Ten, while Ohio State is 15-6 and 7-5.

Arnie Russell's 15-footer with 51 seconds left gave Iona a 47-45 victory over Army in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference. The Gaels are 21-3 and 9-2 in the MAAC.

Center David Robinson paced Navy to an 81-61 ECAC-South victory over American with 35 points. Robinson has scored 30 or more points in four games.

Alum can't get tickets for Garden's revival game

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Dr. Irwin Dambrot shrugged in frustration and held out his hands, sort of like a dentist explaining the need for a root canal.

"I don't have tickets," he said, "and I can't get any."

Now, this isn't just any dentist we're talking about. Dambrot was co-captain of the City College of New York grand slam team which swept the NCAA and National Invitation Tournament championships in 1950. Thirty-five years ago, he was one of the best basketball players in New York, where the college game was king.

The doctor's basketball nostalgia nerve has been touched by the hottest ticket in town — Feb. 27 at Madison Square Garden.

CCNY plays New York University that night and that hasn't happened in the Garden since Dambrot was a senior, far removed from his first fixed bridge.

Forget "Cats" and "La Cage Aux Folles." Seats for those Broadway shows are easy to come by compared to the Garden's basketball offering that night. If you don't have a ticket by now, forget it. They're just not available.

Frank McGuire, director of intercollegiate athletics for the Garden, thought this 50th anniversary year of college basketball in the building would be a perfect time to renew the CCNY-NYU rivalry there. Some of the respective basketball alumni, invited to a reunion by the Association for a Better New York, couldn't agree more.

"Thank you for bringing back basketball to the Garden, where it should be and should stay," said Sid Tanenbaum, NYU '47.

Tanenbaum was a Brooklyn kid, barely 6-feet, who had to talk his way into NYU. "They were looking for 6-4 guys," he said. "I was too small. I told the interviewer, 'I won't waste your time,' and I started to go out the door.

"He called me back and said, 'Where are you going? Let's talk a little more.' "

When the conversation was completed, Tanenbaum was a Violet. "When I left the office, I met Frank Mangiapane. He was the next interview."

Mangiapane was captain of the 1945-46 Violets, who went 19-3, beating a number of intersectional powerhouses including Arkansas, Notre Dame and Baylor. The last game of the regular season, however, was a 49-44 loss to CCNY, a defeat that snapped a 13-game NYU winning streak.

One of City College's stars of that era was Sonny Hertzberg, who played in the backcourt with Red Holzman, later the coach of the National Basketball Association New York Knicks.

"Our game was completely different from the one they play today," Hertzberg said. "We played in gyms with low ceilings. You had to shoot line drives."

After the Tanenbaum-Maniapane era, the next brace of Violet stars came in the late '50s when Cal Ramsey and Tom Sanders, a couple of local products, resisted out-of-town scholarship offers to play for NYU.

"All the home games were in Madison Square Garden," Ramsey said. "I had a chance to play against outstanding players there — Jerry West, Oscar Robertson, Hot Rod Hundley. Playing before 17,000 or 18,000 fans in Madison Square Garden, for a hometown kid that was a pretty good feeling."

Now the good feelings are back in the Garden. Basketball has been deemphasized at both schools — it even vanished completely for a dozen years at NYU — and they now play in the NCAA's low-key Division III. But their game is sold out, just like the old days when college games in the Garden were prizes to be treasured.

Some of the fans lucky enough to have tickets for the CCNY-NYU renewal may stick around for the doubleheader's second game, too.

No. 1 St. John's against No. 2 Georgetown could be interesting.

SDSU bombs UTEP; Tied for WAC lead

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Senior center Leonard Allen scored 17 points and grabbed a season-high 18 rebounds Thursday night to lead San Diego State past Texas-El Paso 76-63 and into a tie for the Western Athletic Conference lead.

The result left both teams at 10-3 in conference play with each having four WAC contests remaining.

San Diego State took control in the second half with a 15-1 surge over a four minute span to take a 54-41 edge with 10 minutes left in the game.

The Aztecs built their biggest lead at 68-52 with four minutes to play.

Watson, Jeff Konek and Michael Kennedy each posted four points during the spell.

Junior guard Anthony Watson posted 25 points to lead the scoring for San Diego State, which improved its overall record to 20-5. UTEP, 18-7, got 17 points from junior forward Juden Smith, who also had 10 rebounds for the Miners.

UTEP led at halftime 30-28 after overcoming a 14-5 deficit in the opening minutes.

The Aztecs dominated the game in rebounding with a 55-36 advantage.

Lamar 86, North Texas 60

BEAMOUNT — Freshman James Gulley scored 24 points to led Lamar University over North Texas State University in a Southland Conference action.

The 6-8 Gulley hit 10 of 11 shots from around the basket in 27 minutes of playing time to surpass his previous Lamar-high of 17 points. He was 4-4 at the free-throw line.

Senior guard Jerry Everett added 17 points for the Cardinals while Greg Anderson had 14. Tony Worrell led North Texas with 17.

Lamar moved their season record to 13 and 8 and is 5-2 in the conference. North Texas fell to 3-20 and 0-9.

Gulley was 5-5 from the field in the seond half as Lamar shot 62 percent and finished the game at 56 percent. North Texas hit only 40 percent for the game.

Hardin Simmons 70, Mercer 67

ABILENE - Guard Byron Strickland scored 20 points and pulled down 10 rebounds to lead Hardin Simmons to an upset Trans America Athletic Conference victory over league-leading Mercer.

Three other Cowboys scored in double figures to offset a record-breaking performance by Mercer's Sam Mitchell, who broke a career school scoring record. Mitchell ended with 22 to lead all scorers, giving him 1,814 career points.

Luis Phelps added 12 for the Cowboys, who improved their record to 10-13 and 6-5 in conference play. Lenard Brooks and Craig Sladek each had 10 for the Cowboys.

Texas Roundup

Arkansas St. 61, UT-Arlington 60

JONESBORO, Ark. — Sophomore forward Reggie Gordon hit two free throws with seven seconds left to lift Arkansas State to a Southland Conference victory over the University of Texas-Arlington.

The Indians overcame sluggish 41-percent shooting to improve their record to 11-10 and 4-4 in the SLC. The Mavericks fell to 12-12 and 3-6.

UTA held a 35-25 lead at the half, but the Indians, behind junior guard Tim Norman's 10 second-half points, came back to take the lead at 51-50 with 5:54 remaining on Norman's jumper from the wing.

ASU led by 59-54 with 1:27 left, but the Mavericks cut it to 59-58 with 11 seconds to go on a shot by UTA's junior guard Reggie Hurd.

After Gordon hit his two free throws, ASU allowed the Mavericks an uncontested layup by Hurd.

W. Texas St. 68, Illinois St. 66

AMARILLO — Earl Davis and Bryan Kirkland canned six consecutive free throws in the final minutes as West Texas State held on to defeat Illinois State in a Missouri Valley Conference contest.

The win was the Buffaloes first over the Redbirds since they joined the MVC in 1981-82. It was also their first over Illinois State since 1968, when the Buffs, now 10-13 overall and 3-10 in the conference, took a 91-67 victory.

For Illinois State, the defeat was costly to a bid for a second consecutive conference crown. The Redbirds dropped to 17-5 on the year, 7-4 in MVC play.

Houston Bapt 71, Ga. Southern65

HOUSTON — Senior center Anicet Lavodrama scored 28 points, including 16 from the free-throw line, to lead Houston Baptist to a victory over Georgia Southern in a Trans America Athletic Conference game.

The victory placed the Huskies in a three-way tie with Georgia Southern and Mercer for the top spot in the conference at 8-3.

Trailing 52-41, the Eagles fouled constantly in the last 3:56 of the game and allowed Lavodrama to sink 13 of 20 from the line during the span. The Eagles, 18-4 overall, committed a total of 32 fouls, including 15 in the last 4 minutes.

Landry not talking White trade

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys won't entertain trade offers for quarterback Danny White unless Coach Tom Landry says so, but three National Football League teams have inquired about White anyway, Cowboys personnel director Gil Brandt said.

White lost his starters job to Gary Hogeboom last year, but regained it midway through the season.

Landry, Brandt said, hasn't given him any sign that he wants to trade the veteran White.

"We didn't get down to any specifics regarding a deal because my answer to them (the NFL clubs) is always the same," Brandt said. "The answer is that until Coach Landry tells me he wants to go in that direction, we really have nothing to talk about."

Landry has said he would like to keep both White and Hogeboom until training camp, then decide on the starting quarterback for the 1985 season.

Brandt refused to identify the teams that inquired about White, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, February 16, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: With hard work, your dreams can come true. Count on it! Mate helps you succeed by getting you to face reality. Changes in the economy work to your advantage. Money becomes available for a business project. Travel leads to new profits. Do the unexpected and your career will zoom. Family members draw closer together. Devote more time to romance. Tennis star John McEnroe, singer-restaurateur Sonny Bono, actor LeVar Burton, the Chicago White Sox' Jerry Harriston, the Detroit Tigers' Glenn Abbott and golf's Marlene Hagge share your birthday. Also born this date: actor Hugh Beaumont and ventriloquist Edgar Bergen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A change in tactics solves a financial or romantic problem. An unexpected check could arrive. Discuss your emotions with close family members; they understand more than you think.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your spouse is your strongest ally. A change of scenery does wonders for your morale and disposition. You find yourself attracted to a cheerful Libra. Go slow on making promises.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some good news comes your way. Share it with your loved ones. A sensational new relationship could result from a casual meeting. Call someone you have long admired from a distance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Seek solitude if you must think about a knotty problem. Key events will center on your relatives and their affairs. Be a good listener. Someone may need a different kind of help now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Joint ventures will be free from discord. Stay on your toes! Do not be in too much of a rush to move on to bigger and better things. Attention to detail prevents costly mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Secret transactions could have mixed results. A backstage romance brings happiness. If someone acts strangely, ask direct questions. Be willing to change your social plans to accommodate others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be cooperative when family members ask for help. Change your schedule to accommodate others. You receive special assistance from someone who wishes to remain anonymous. Keep a secret.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your love life could be at a standstill. If so, take the initiative. Timely concessions could get the relationship back on track. Go slow if contemplating big changes. You need more information.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A personal research project will prove highly rewarding. Review investment portfolio to make certain you are getting the best return for your money. Be generous when asked to help the needy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good health habits will save you both money and worry. Plan a special family outing. Having a regular routine makes you more productive. Romance begins to deepen! Share your dreams.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Those willing to listen to suggestions will soon have extra money in their pockets. Go ahead and compromise if it will get you what you want. Intelligent concessions make you a winner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Resist the temptation to buy things on credit. A lovers' quarrel proves easy to mend. Send flowers or a sentimental note! Set aside time to go over financial records.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

It is not always enough to know what lines of play are available to you to make your contract. You might have to try them in a specific order if you want to test them all.

North-South bid well to reach an excellent club slam. After North's cue-bid of four hearts, which showed concentrated values in the suit, slam interest and good club support (North had denied a four-card major at his previous turn), South made the value bid.

There are 11 top tricks at six clubs. How many chances are there for declarer to make a 12th trick?

If you said two, the finesses in the major suits, you are almost right. There is an additional chance — a 3-3 break in diamonds. How would you go about testing all three possibilities?

If you take the spade finesse first and it loses, or if you duck a diamond and try for a 3-3 break only to find that the distribution is unkind, you might lose your slam if the next option you exercise goes wrong. But you can try all three chances if, after drawing trumps, you take the heart finesse first.

Assume it loses and East returns a heart. Discard a diamond on the third heart, cash the ace-king of diamonds and ruff a diamond. If the suit breaks, you have a parking spot for your spade loser. If it doesn't, as is the case here, you can still fall back on the spade finesse for your slam.

That works, and you get the same result as those who could go no further than a finesse. But at least you have the personal satisfaction of having played the hand correctly.

Schroeder celebrates 53rd birthday

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A recent bout of flu-like symptoms didn't prevent William Schroeder from celebrating his 53rd birthday, a milestone doctors said he would not have lived to see without an artificial heart implant.

Schroeder's family from Jasper, Ind., and the staff at Humana Hospital Audubon organized a party with punch, balloons, candle-lit cakes and presents on Thursday.

The fact it also was Valentine's Day didn't go unnoticed as the world's second artificial heart patient received a wealth of heart-shaped greetings from well-wishers nationwide.

Doctors haven't found the cause of a persistent fever and flu-like symptoms that have left Schroeder weak and with little appetite, said Bob Irvine, public relations director at Humana.

A high-caloric supplement, fed through a tube in his nose, was added to Schroeder's regular diet, Irvine said Thursday.

Tests performed Wednesday didn't shed any light on the origin of the fever, but it is "much less a concern than before," Irvine said.

After exchanging valentines and presents with his wife Margaret, Schroeder joined his six children and the hospital staff for a small party.

Five representatives of the Lexington Striders, a walking club, delivered a 6-foot-tall card signed by 113 club members. Schroeder also received a beret from Dr. Roland Girardet, a Swiss surgeon and a member of the medical team that implanted Schroeder's heart Nov. 25.

Doctors had hoped to give Schroeder a special gift — his release from the hospital room to a nearby apartment building.

Those plans were derailed in part because renovation of the apartment is unfinished and because of his fluctuating temperature.

Doctors initially suspected the temperature, which has risen as high as 105 degrees, was a reaction to medication. But the fever remained after the drugs were discontinued. Then they suspected a flu virus, but the illness has continued too long.

Queen attends premiere, gives away part of film's plot

Queen Elizabeth

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II attended the royal charity premiere of the Agatha Christie thriller film, "Ordeal by Innocence," and gave away part of the plot.

The 58-year-old monarch, bundled against the cold in a mink stole, arrived at the Classic Cinema off Piccadilly Circus with her husband, Prince Philip, on Thursday night. Before the film started, they chatted with three of the stars, Faye Dunaway, Donald Sutherland and Diana Quick.

Joking with Miss Dunaway, the queen said, "I gather you are the one that is killed off frightfully early — how sad."

The movie also stars Christopher Plummer, Sarah Miles and Ian McShane. The royal premiere is expected to raise several thousand dollars for the King George's Fund for Sailors.

Bob Hope

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Ventura County saddled comedian Bob Hope with a lawsuit after a herd of about 30 cows wandered "with frightening regularity" from his ranch to munch on the greener grass of Oak Park High School, officials said.

"These were not very contented cows," Assistant Ventura County Counsel Don Hurley said Thursday.

The suit filed Tuesday seeks $25,000 to $35,000 for damages, including trampled turf and crushed sprinkler heads, Hurley said. The cattle came through breaks in the fence or through a gate that was allegedly left open, he said.

"There seemed to be a group of about 30 of them that would come down with frightening regularity," Hurley said.

An insurance company which covers the Jordan Ranch 35 miles west of Los Angeles is handling the matter, said Hope spokesman Ken Kantor.

Hope, 81, never stays at the 2,329-acre ranch but leases it to Clifford Holmes, 86, who also named in the suit, Kantor said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Reagan, the president's older son, says he's discussing parts in television series and guest shots due to a new-found interest in the family business of acting.

Reagan, 39, said Thursday that he began taking acting lessons about a month ago to prepare for some endorsements he hopes to do in connection with his boat-racing business.

"My acting coach, Rick Walters, felt it was something I do well," he said. "Word got around and people came by and watched me work. We're now discussing TV series and guest shots."

There are also plans for a 90-second daily radio show called "Michael Reagan's Future File," but Reagan said he doesn't want to discuss specific offers.

He said he became interested in acting when he did a public service commerical for a charity.

Acting runs in Reagan's family. Besides his father and stepmother Nancy Reagan, his mother, Jane Wyman, stars on CBS-TV's "Falcon Crest;" stepsister Patti Davis is a singer and actress; and sister Maureen Reagan is a former actress.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Concerts featuring Dolly Parton and Kenny Rogers in four cities were postponed or canceled after Ms. Parton came down with the flu, a Met Center spokeswoman said.

The 39-year-old singer and actress "has some type of influenza," said spokeswoman Connie Shaver. Concerts in Portland, Ore.; Tacoma, Wash.; and Cincinnati also were postponed or canceled, Ms. Shaver said.

The concerts Monday and Tuesday at Met Center, which were sold out, were rescheduled to April 26-27, she said.

David Wolper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran producer David L. Wolper will receive the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award at the Academy Awards ceremonies for his good works, among them helping bring the Olympic Games to Los Angeles.

The 57-year-old movie and television producer was selected by the board of governors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the academy announced Thursday. The award will be presented at the Oscar ceremonies March 25.

"It's very exciting," said Wolper. "It's the highest honor anyone in the business can get."

Stars, Wings fight to draw

Associated Press

The Minnesota North Stars and Detroit Red Wings fought to a draw Thursday night. So did the coaches.

As the first period ended with Detroit leading 3-1, Minnesota's Willi Plett and the Red Wings' Greg Smith, who had tangled earlier in the period, squared off again as the teams left the ice. Both benches emptied and the brawl spilled into the Detroit bench, where the Wings' Danny Gare and Minnesota's Dino Ciccarelli exchanged blows.

Enter Minnesota Coach Glen Sonmor. His target? Injured Detroit goalie Greg Stefan, who wasn't even in uniform.

"You get a guy in street clothes standing behind the bench grabbing and punching our players, and if you think I'm going to watch that, you're crazy," said Somnor, who leaped from his bench and tried to get at Stefan after what he termed a "sucker punch" on Tom McCarthy. McCarthy reportedly suffered three facial cuts and a concussion and was taken to a hospital for observation.

Sonmor was intercepted by Detroit Coach Nick Polano. The two grappled for five minutes.

"Nick was all right," Sonmor said with a smile. "He was saying, 'Glen, we're too old for this.'"

Referee Ron Wicks, who handed out six fighting penalties earlier in the period, issued two majors, two misconducts and six game misconducts and ejected Sonmor and Stefan. After things quieted down, the teams battled to a 5-5 tie, thanks to third-period goals 52 seconds apart by Minnesota's Brian Bellows and Gordie Roberts.

NHL Roundup

Capitals 4, Flames 3

Bob Carpenter scored his 43rd and 44th goals of the season in the third period as Washington rallied from a 3-2 deficit. Carpenter, who earlier in the week established a league record for goals by an American-born player, tied the score with a power-play goal at 6:03, taking a pass from defenseman Mike McEwen at the Flames' blue line and firing a 55-foot shot behind a screened goalie Don Edwards.

He got the winner at 13:50 after some tough forechecking by the Capitals, which forced Calgary defenseman Jamie Macoun to cough up the puck in his zone. It ended up on Carpenter's stick and he flipped it in behind Edwards, who had dropped to the ice.The triumph enabled Washington to snap a two-game losing streak and kept the Patrick Division leaders seven points ahead of Philadelphia.

Flyers 6, Nordiques 3

Tim Kerr scored two goals and Brian Propp had a goal and three assists.Kerr's 44th and 45th goals of the season tied him for third place in the NHL with Mike Bossy of the New York Islanders.Propp has three goals and five assists in his last four games. It was Propp's 30th goal and the fifth time in his six NHL seasons he has reached that level.

The Flyers snapped a 2-2 tie at 14:55 of the second period when Ron Sutter deflected Propp's 25-foot shot between the legs of Quebec goalie Daniel Bouchard.The Flyers went ahead 4-2 at 4:30 of the third period on Kerr's second goal of the game.Philadelphia made it 5-2 just 48 seconds when Ilkka Sinisalo put a 15-foot shot over Bouchard's left shoulder.

Black Hawks 5, Penguins 4

Rookie Dan Frawley scored two goals and Troy Murray collected his fifth game-winner of the season with 14 seconds remaining in the second period.The victory was the fourth straight for the Black Hawks under interim Coach Bob Pulford. Meanwhile, the faltering Penguins increased their winless streak to 10 games — nine losses and a tie since their last victory Jan. 19. The Penguins have won only four of 40 games in Chicago Stadium. Pittsburgh rookie Mario Lemieux scored his 23rd and 24th goals of the season and assisted on a goal by Warren Young, who leads all rookies with 32.

Whalers 4, Devils 0

Goalie Steve Weeks made 19 saves in recording his second NHL shutout and Greg Malone and Kevin Dineen each scored a goal and added an assist as Hartford ended an eight-game winless streak.Dineen gave the Whalers a 1-0 lead at 6:31 of the second period, slipping the rebound of a shot by Malone underneath Devils' goalie Glenn Resch just 25 seconds after Mel Bridgman of New Jersey was penalized for tripping.The game remained close until midway through the third period when Hartford got goals from Malone, Marty Howe and Dave Tippett.

Blues 5, Maple Leafs 3

Jorgen Pettersson scored on successive slapshots in the second period and added a third goal on a wrist shot four minutes later for his sixth career hat trick. The victory kept the Blues seven points ahead of runnerup Chicago in the Norris Division and extended their string of unbeaten games to eight in a row.

Following goals by Brian Sutter of St. Louis and Peter Ihnacak of Toronto in the opening period, the Blues took a 2-1 lead on Doug Gilmour's goal just 11 seconds into the second period. That was followed at 6:16 by Pettersson's first goal on a power play. He next rifled a 40-foot slapshot through the pads of Rick St. Croix at 8:17 — that chased St. Croix in favor of Ken Wregget — and capped his scoring at 12:13.

Bruins 3, Kings 3

Mike O'Connell and Charlie Simmer scored unusual goals in the third period to rally Boston in the Bruins' first game after Harry Sinden replaced Gerry Cheevers as coach.O'Connell was credited with a goal at 1:06 when the Kings' Bernie Nicholls lost control of a clearing pass in front of his own net and the puck went between the legs of Los Angeles goalie Darren Eliot, hit the post and trickled over the goal line.

Class schedule goof costs team soccer playoffs

FORT WORTH (AP) — A high school soccer coach's misinterpretation of Texas' new "no pass, no play" regulations has caused his team to be booted out of the state soccer championships and forced to forfeit its victories.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported that the Fort Worth Paschal soccer team will be replaced in the march toward the state championship by an El Paso team it had beaten, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Thursday.

Three members of the 19-player squad were counting, as one of the four courses they were required to pass, an outdoor awareness and adventure class, state officials said.

Under the new legislation enacted last year, students must be passing four "core" courses in order to participate in athletics or other extracurricular activities.

Certain physical education and other locally optional courses cannot be counted.

Soccer coach James Bretthauer took responsibility Wednesday for the foul-up. Neither he, school principal Radford Gregg nor any counselor told the players they could not receive credit for P.E. classes, he told the Star-Telegram.

Springs indicted for felony assault

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury on Thursday indicted Cowboys fullback Ron Springs on a felony charge of aggravated assault on a police officer for allegedly striking and kicking a woman who was attempting to remove him from a topless bar.

Springs, 28, was accused in the indictment of an assault on police Cpl. Vanessa Pitz. Authorities said she and Cpl. James F. Hughes were attempting to arrest him at the Million Dollar Saloon on Jan. 18.

Springs, if convicted, faces a maximum punishment of 10 years in prison.

Springs was free on a $5,000 personal bond. He has an unpublished telephone number.

His attorney, Richard Corbitt, said he was "shocked" by the indictment. Corbitt denied that Springs assaulted the officers, and said he gave grand jurors affidavits from five witnesses that he said refuted the police version of the incident.

Olajuwon keys Rockets to 113-105 win over Knicks

Associated Press

While Moses Malone is still Chairman of the Boards in the National Basketball Association, it hasn't taken long for rookie Akeem Olajuwon to become one of the highest officers in the rebounding business.

The 7-foot center for the Houston Rockets established NBA season highs in rebounding and offensive rebounding with 25 and 15, respectively, to go with his game-high 30 points in a 113-105 victory over the New York Knicks Thursday night.

"I went for every rebound," Olajuwon said. "If I go up for 10 rebounds, I'm going to get about six of them. It was certainly one of my best games."

Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said Olajuwon has been so dominating that he should outpoll Chicago's sensational Michael Jordan for NBA Rookie of the Year.

"Let's hold another draft in New York tomorrow and see who's first," Fitch said of Olajuwon's performance. "I love Michael Jordan, but if I were his mother, the best I could do is split the ballot."

Olajuwon's performance surpassed the previous NBA season high of 24 rebounds by Malone on Jan. 30 against Boston. The 7-foot rookie's 15 offensive rebounds bettered his own NBA season high of 14 at Utah on Jan. 6.

NBA Roundup

Against New York, guard Lewis Lloyd had 25 points and Ralph Sampson, the other half of the Rockets' Twin Towers offense, added 22 points and 12 rebounds as Houston outrebounded the Knicks 73-44. That helped the Rockets overcome a 26-11 turnover deficit.

Despite all the turnovers, Sampson said New York might have been hurt more than helped by its pressing defense.

"They put the press on, but that only means that they have to handle Akeem 1-on-1, and they can't do that," Sampson said. "Their press was a learning experience, but we'd seen it before and it wasn't that big of an adjustment."

Spurs 131, Suns 102

George Gervin scored 24 points and San Antonio tied a franchise record with 21 steals against Phoenix.

The Spurs led by as much as 113-78 in the fourth quarter after starting that period with a 22-4 run.

Celtics 110, Sonics 94

Kevin McHale scored 26 points and Larry Bird added eight points and six rebounds in the decisive third period as Boston took over sole possession of first place in the Atlantic Division with a victory over Seattle.

The Celtics, whose 42-10 record is a half-game better than Philadelphia's, led only 54-50 at halftime, but outscored the Sonics 32-23 in the third quarter to take control.

Bucks 132, Pacers 128

Sidney Moncrief scored 31 points and first-place Milwaukee opened a four-game lead in the Central Division with a comeback victory over Indiana.

The Pacers, who got 31 points from Clark Kellogg and 26 from Steve Stipanovich, led 113-109 with 14 seconds left in regulation. But a three-point goal by Craig Hodges and a court-length drive by Terry Cummings helped the Bucks send the game into overtime.

Paul Pressey broke a 124-124 tie in the final minute of overtime with two free throws and he gave the Bucks a four-point lead with a basket following a steal by Moncrief.

Nuggets 138, Kings 123

Denver stayed two games in front of second-place Houston in the Midwest Division as Alex English scored 33 points against Kansas City.

English scored 11 points during a 23-8 second-quarter spurt that gave the Nuggets a 77-60 lead at halftime.

Calvin Natt added 29 points and Wayne Cooper 21 for Denver, while Reggie Theus and Larry Drew paced the Kings with 20 each.

Now you can watch television on your feet

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — It's a new way of watching television — on your feet, to the beat, in motion.

From disco dancing to hatha yoga, television programs are offering something physical for everyone. It's cheaper than joining a health club, and fancy workout clothes aren't needed to sweat in the privacy of your home.

Cable networks are in the vanguard of this video fitness craze. And while some commercial stations carry exercise programs locally, they're usually broadcast in the wee hours.

Fitness programming dates to 1951 when exercise guru Jack LaLanne and his dog "Happy" encouraged kids to wake their mothers and drag them in front of the television set. He's still at it.

"I want every man, woman and child to be physically fit," said LaLanne. "If you don't exercise, you can't be physically fit, and if you're not physically fit, you have nothing."

After more than a quarter of a century, the "Jack LaLanne Show" went off the air in 1979, but the 70-year-old muscle man is making a comeback. He's currently negotiating a TV deal for his "Wake Up America," a daily, half-hour program produced from his home in Moro Bay, Calif. LaLanne is also marketing a videotaped regimen.

If LaLanne's rigid physique isn't the inspiration you need, there are women in skimpy leotards demonstrating various aerobic exercises to the home audience in the syndicated "20-Minute Workout." Designed to become part of the viewers' daily routine, the show starts with slow stretches and builds to jogging in place to raise the heart rate, followed by a cool-down period.

Throughout the routine, women who don't need much toning up themselves demonstrate proper breathing, while exhaling through pouting, painted lips.

Showtime, a pay-TV channel, carries "Aerobicise" as filler between movies. The fit, firm female bodies are accentuated by scanty outfits, tight camera shots and throbbing rock music.

Not all the exercise shows are suggestive, though.

The Disney Channel, a cable supplier, was first to target children with "Mousercise," featuring members of the Mickey Mouse Health Club. Mickey and Minnie Mouse, Donald Duck and Goofy make daily appearances to encourage Mouseracisers to stretch their bodies as well as their imaginations.

> "I want every man, woman and child to be physically fit. If you don't exercise, you can't be physically fit, and if you're not physically fit, you have nothing."
> — Jack LaLanne

ABC also is aiming at children in its first national exercise segment. "ABC Fun Fit," set to begin this September, will feature kids doing aerobic exercise to popular music. The three-minute segments will be shown Saturday mornings.

But the bulk of the body shows are aimed at adults, who can choose from homey living room decor with girl-next-door instructors or bare backgrounds with sexy hostesses.

Other shows are aimed at blacks, Hispanics, office workers and yogis.

Cable News Network interrupts its news coverage three times a day with a two-minute "Fitness Break," featuring exercises that can be done anywhere, including sitting at a desk.

And the Christian Broadcasting Network carries "Fit For Life."

"Lilias, Yoga and You," first produced in 1970 by WCET in Cincinnati, is no longer in production, but the reruns still command a loyal following on many Public Broadcasting Service stations.

A video recorder offers another whole realm of packaged exercises.

"The Jane Fonda Workout," which stirred the home video market three years ago, has been emulated by many, including Raquel Welch. And there's also Playboy Video, which offers the "Playmate Workout."

For those who need a more disciplined approach to exercise, Vestron Video produces the "Armed Forces Workout," narrated by Bill Dower, the Marine drill instructor who trained Lou Gossett for his role in "An Officer and a Gentleman."

Rather than dance routines, Dower concentrates on old-fashioned boot camp basics: squat thrusts, jumping jacks, toe touches and push-ups. The tape, which begins with reveille and a flag raising, is not just an exercise routine — it's a motivational aid.

Is this what they mean when they say TV is an involving medium?

'Brazal' isn't about nation in South America

LONDON (AP) — It was mostly filmed in England, is largely about America and is called Brazil.

His new film bears no relation to a South American country and may seem only distantly related to the United States, but director Terry Gilliam says "Brazil" is the closest he'll ever come to making a movie about the country he left 18 years ago.

The 44-year-old Minneapolis-born filmmaker is a British resident and the only American member of England's Monty Python comedy troupe. He directed the 1977 "Jabberwocky" and the surprise 1981 hit, "Time Bandits."

He recently spoke at London's National Film Theater following a preview of the surreal tragicomedy, which opens in London Feb. 22 and in New York next month.

He said he hopes the film will redress what he termed "the McDonald's hamburger syndrome" of Hollywood movies: "You know what you're going to get beforehand, you get it, and you go out having gotten it," he said.

"I'm actually getting bored with every film having a happy ending to the extent that none of them have any point," Gilliam said.

The moods in "Brazil" encompass a wide spectrum — from the visual and verbal slapstick associated with Monty Python comedy to a bleaker, more pessimistic view of the present reminiscent of such writers ase George Orwell and Franz Kafka.

The British actor Jonathan Pryce plays a Ministry of Information clerk subject to romantic fantasies and to torture at the hands of a friend, played by Michael Palin.

Robert DeNiro, in his British film debut, plays the supporting role of a heating engineer who appears hooded at crucial moments to help Pryce combat the oppressive bureaucracy of the world where "Brazil" is set.

Jurors discover own evidence

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 40-year sentence for possession of drugs was handed down Tuesday by a jury that discovered evidence on its own, the Reporter-Telegram has learned.

According to courthouse sources, the 10-woman, two-man jury which had convicted suspected drug dealer Reese X. Barnes, 40, on a lesser offense of possession discovered the corners of plastic food bags which were seized from the kitchen cabinet during execution of a search warrant had been removed.

Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors admitted today that the prosecution was unaware of the condition of the bags.

Had the jury been aware of the condition of the bags before punishment deliberations, the defendant possibly could have been convicted of possession with intent to deliver. Cocaine and methamphetamine are packaged for delivery in the corners of plastic bags, according to narcotics officers' testimony.

Conners said the bags were admitted because they were seized from the house which was searched under warrant. However, 10 bagfuls of marijuana, which were also seized from a pickup under the same warrant, were not introduced as evidence but were discussed by witnesses.

Barnes was charged with intending to deliver less than one gram of a powder containing cocaine and methamphetamines, which was packaged in small pieces of tin foil.

Narcotics officers testified such drugs often are delivered in vials, tinfoil or the corners of plastic bags. Conners admitted that he and Administrative Assistant District Attorney Tom Morgan had not examined the boxes of plastic bags and were unaware the corners had been removed. He declined to comment.

Barnes will be allowed to serve the two 40-year sentences for possession of cocaine and methamphetamine concurrently.

He had turned down a 35-year sentence for possession with intent to deliver, offered by the Midland County District Attorney's Office.

The defendant, who cannot be released on appeal bond because he was sentenced to 15 years or more, remains in Midland County Jail.

Barnes was sentenced to 40 years on both indictments after a prior conviction of delivery of heroin in 1977 was admitted as an enhancement allegation.

Sentenced man claims innocence

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 33-year-old Odessa man sentenced Dec. 10 to life in prison for the burglary of a Midland residence was not involved in the burglary, according to testimony Thursday from a man who admitted committing the offense.

Paul Curtis Gipson, 29, also of Odessa, took the stand before 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin during a hearing on a motion for a new trial in the burglary conviction of Manuel Lujan.

The hearing, which resumed this morning, has been postponed until 11:30 a.m. Monday.

At the request of Lujan's attorney Edward Shelby, Gipson testified Thursday that prosecutors had intimidated him into remaining silent and not testifying during Lujan's trial.

"It wasn't specifically said to me but the impression I got was if I went in and testified, I'd get a life sentence myself," Gipson said. When asked why he thought a jury would be so harsh on him, Gipson replied: "Because I'm a three-time loser."

First Assistant District Attorney David Rosado testified today that the 40-year offer for a guilty plea was not revoked, even after Gipson refused to give prosecutors a statement.

Rosado, who denied Shelby's implication that the case against Lujan was "weak," said he told defense attorneys he wanted a statement from Gipson about the events that day if they wanted Gipson to testify.

"I told you and I may have told Mr. (Tom) Parker (Gipson's attorney), that he could be a witness but if he lied, I'd seek to have him indicted for perjury," Rosado said.

The prosecutor also denied having threatened Gipson by saying he would revoke the plea bargain agreement if Gipson didn't sign a statement.

"I don't think I said that," Rosado said. "I'm not saying I couldn't have but I don't think I did."

Midland police detectives arrested Lujan and Gipson Sept. 25 after obtaining a description of a car believed to be involved in a burglary of the Patsy Hochman residence, 3602 Trinity.

A chase with speeds exceeding 70 mph ensued and shots were fired before the arrests were made, according to testimony.

Lujan, the driver, did not have any jewelry in his possession; however, Gipson, who had jumped from the car during the chase, was found with pieces of jewelry identified by Mrs. Hochman and Virginia Earhart, 2409 Goddard Court, who was burglarized earlier that day.

Lujan, who was offered a 40-year sentence for a guilty plea, was convicted of the burglary and sentenced to life after jurors learned of prior convictions for burglary, theft and forgery. Gipson pleaded guilty under an agreement with the Midland County District Attorney's Office and was sentenced to 40 years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Both men have been in Midland County Jail since their convictions.

According to Gipson's testimony, he had met Lujan at the Sunset Motel in Odessa, where the two heroin addicts discussed how to obtain money for their next fix.

Gipson said he told Lujan to give him a ride to Midland, where he had an aunt who would give him money.

"I had him take me to this house I was looking at and thinking about burglarizing," Gipson said. He testified he told Lujan to drop him off because his "aunt didn't like Mexicans hanging around."

"I asked him if he'd just take off for about an hour and come back and pick me up," he said.

Gipson testified he burglarized one house before "hitching" a ride to "the opposite side of town," where he committed another burglary. He then returned to the original house, where Lujan picked him up 1½ hours later.

Under cross examination by Rosado, Gipson declined to identify the "dope fiend" he had known for "about four months," who gave him a ride.

He said he feared retaliation if he identified the person, whom he described as a white male in his late 20s or early 30s with long hair and beard who lives in South Midland and "hangs out at the Four Seasons" on Wall Avenue.

Lujan testified this morning that Gipson did not tell him he had burglarized the houses.

"He just said, 'Let's go to Odessa,'" after he picked him up, Lujan said. When the first unmarked police unit drove up next to him, Lujan said he started to pull over.

Gipson told him to keep driving because if the two ex-convicts were caught together they could be sent back to prison for violating parole, Lujan testified.

"I was scared," Lujan said. "I'd been out of the pen for 70 days."

Lujan also testified that he was trying to stop the car, which he claimed had a defective accelerator, after Gipson jumped from the car to run on foot.

Funding could cut small classes

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

If lawmakers approve funding recommendations suggested by the Legislative Budget Board, small classes at Texas junior colleges could be eliminated, junior college officials warned a House committee on education.

The LBB, a panel of legislators who make funding proposals to the full legislature, has recommended an overall 10.6 percent cut in funding to junior colleges.

Under the proposal, Midland College would receive a 13 percent reduction in funding from the state; Howard County Junior College in Big Spring would receive a 7 percent reduction and Odessa College would receive a 14 percent cut.

Nearly 170 junior college board of trustee members along with 40 junior college presidents were in Austin this week "getting the junior college story out," according to Midland College President Jess Parrish. "We all went down with the same story. The only picture we can paint is that we all want our fair share."

Stewart McLaurin, president of the Texas Public Community/Junior College Association, told the House Higher Education Committee, "In general, reduction in state funds hurts teaching, and thus learning.

"We can envision eliminating temporary part-time faculty members, but we can also see the prospect of reduced salaries for full-time faculty, and possibly even layoffs," McLaurin said. "In some cases, enrollments may be limited, and entire programs dropped."

The group also warned the committee that new occupational program development will be seriously hampered and equipment purchases will be minimal if the LBB recommendations are approved.

Odessa College President Dr. Phil Speegle said, "Both Odessa and Midland colleges have respiratory therapy programs. They're small and they're expensive, but they're all we have in respiratory therapy in West Texas."

A cut such as this would "seriously hamper" occupational development programs "as far as "purchasing up-to-date equipment" is concerned, he noted.

Speegle said, "We can raise the out-of-district fees, but many of our colleges have already done that."

He added, "I think we made an impact. We know that this Legislature is going to be a problem, but we've been told that the next two Legislatures will be just as bad."

Noting the state has made recent significant improvements in the quality of public elementary and secondary education, the group claimed it would be "inconsistent to impose such harmful effects on post-secondary education," according to McLaurin.

The junior college association has said it would support "a reasonable adjustment" in student tuition to offset the state's budget crunch.

Mannequin handler fussy worker

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Grace Pier fusses with the model's platinum hair, pulling a strand here, tucking a curl there. To acquire the wet look, she sprays the finished coiffure with window cleaner, then sets the glossy ringlets with a barrage of hair spray. As the cloud settles, Ms. Pier steps back to admire her work.

The model says nothing, but Ms. Pier is neither offended nor surprised. They are mannequins.

Ms. Pier, 25, is display merchandise specialist for the J.C. Penney store at Cielo Vista Mall, where she is in charge of dressing, grooming and displaying 84 mannequins. One might suppose that overseeing an orderly platoon of speechless fiberglass and plaster size 8s would be a supervisor's dream. Not so, Ms. Pier said. Her job entails hard labor and plenty of aggravation. Though immune to most work place abuses, mannequins must be treated with kid gloves.

"You have to know how to handle them, how to take them apart gently," Ms. Pier said. "You can't just yank their arms off."

Ms. Pier, a psychology student at the University of Texas at El Paso, began building department store displays five years ago. She worked at Union Fashion and The Popular before taking the job at J.C. Penney last year.

"It's harder than you think," she said of her job. "I learned through trial and error."

Ms. Pier begins each project by studying the newest fashions and deciding which clothes best complement which mannequins. She selects clothing, accessories, jewelry and shoes, as well as props if the display includes a theme.

"I'm mainly concerned with the visual aspect of selling, " she said. "The idea is to present the clothes in a way that makes customers want to buy them."

The clothes are pressed, and a description of each item to be worn by the mannequin is entered into an inventory book.

She then dresses the mannequin from the toes up. "I start with socks or panty hose, then shoes," she said.

Clothes must be chosen and draped to hide the mannequin's unsightly joints.

Tags are tucked out of sight, and props are secured to the figure with vital tools of the trade: invisible wires and double-stick tape. If a Sony Walkman is part of the picture, the radio must be firmly strapped to the body or a passing admirer may snatch it, Ms. Pier said.

Her last chore, often a critical one, is styling the hair.

"Selecting the wig is important," she said. "You can't put a gray wig on a young look. Also, my challenge is to be dramatic, because the point is to make customers stop and look. If the mannequin looks too ordinary, nobody will notice."

Most displays are effective, but Ms. Pier admits to a few failures.

"When it bombs, I change the display right away," she said.

Though mannequins change less drastically than fashion trends, Ms. Pier has noticed some cosmetic alterations over the years. Companies have introduced large mannequins "with pouchy stomachs" to flaunt fashions for heavier women.

"People used to think large women had to wear baggy, ugly clothes," Ms. Pier said. "That's not true now. They're wearing very stylish fashions."

Ms. Pier enjoys her work but is annoyed by passers-by, especially youngsters, who paw the delicate mannequins.

"That's the biggest problem," she said. "Since most of the mannequins are on the floor rather than in a window, people touch them a lot.

Woman charged in $755 grocery theft arraigned

From Staff Reports

A Midland homemaker accused of stealing $754.70 worth of items Wednesday night from a grocery store was arraigned Thursday on felony charges by Justice of the Peace Bob Pine.

Georgeann Caroll Sturgis, 25, of 4303 Andrews Highway No. 403 was charged with theft of property over $750 and less than $10,000. Bail was set at $10,000.

Ms. Sturgis was arrested at Albertson's Food & Drug, 3317 N. Midland Drive, after she made three trips to her car with a shopping cart full of items alleged to be stolen, police said.

In complaints filed Thursday with city police, Hannelore W. Hughes, 2405 W. Dengar Ave., said she returned home from a three-day trip to find a light on in the garage and, on further inspection, $5,960 worth of items missing.

Among the stolen items were three gold coins valued at $1,200, two gold necklaces valued at $3,000, a $600 gold bracelet, $300 pearl necklace and $250 gold and amethyst dinner ring. Also taken were a pistol, television set, portable radio stereo and crystal candle holders.

John Valenzuela of Monahans told police his 1982 Chevrolet Camaro was stolen between 11:30 p.m. Wednesday and 8:15 a.m. Thursday while it was parked at Quail Run Apartments, 3101 N. Midland Drive. The car was valued at $8,500.

Benny Roys, 609 Spraberry, told police a burglar alarm system was disconnected during the burglary of his home between 7:30 a.m. and 4:45 p.m. Thursday. Entry was gained by breaking out a window in the kitchen door.

Taken were a $230 .357-caliber rifle, $70 coin set, $1,100 cassette stereo, $1,400 video cassette recorder, $450 wedding ring, $900 diamond ring and a $500 guitar. The alarm system sustained $140 worth of damage, reports said.

Cheri K. Chenault of Walla Walla, Wash., told police her 1974 Chevrolet van was burglarized while parked at the Desert Inn Motel, 3101 Bankhead, between 11 p.m. Wednesday and 9 a.m. Thursday.

Taken were a stereo and cassette tapes, clothes, jewelry and a purse containing a $100 bill. Total loss was placed at $1,095.

Mickie Haas, 4307 Crestridge, reported her purse containing $20 and a $900 wedding ring was stolen from the 19th Hole at Green Tree Country Club, 4900 Greentree Blvd. According to reports, Mrs. Haas said she had gone in for a drink at 3:45 p.m. Thursday after playing golf. Unaware until she arrived home that she had left her purse, Ms. Haasreturned and found it gone.

About $800 in equipment were reported stolen from a workshop at the Loy Edgar residence, 2215 W. Louisiana Ave.

According to reports, entry was gained through an unlocked door between 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and 10 a.m. Thursday.

Tracey Brunson, 4100 Arroya, told police $595 worth of tools were stolen from the tool box on his 1981 Ford pickup. Reports said the vehicle was parked at his residence between 2 p.m. Wednesday and 11 a.m. Thursday.

About $400 worth of items were stolen from a travel home parked in the backyard of the Bill Jones house, 807 S. Connell St. According to reports, the burglary took place between Feb. 6 and Thursday.

Phone repair equipment, valued at $400 and owned by AT&T, was stolen from a 1984 Ford LTD, parked at No. 10 Desta Drive. According to Joe Love, his car was burglarized between 4:30 p.m. Wednesday and 8:30 a.m. Thursday.

Glenda Lee Wright, 4000 W. Illinois No. 119, told police she discovered the burglary of the Statler Terrace Apartment office, 506 W. Cowden, Apt. C, at 8:30 a.m. Thursday. Taken were $380 in cash. Damage to the door, kicked open, was placed at $30.

Robert V. Lockhart

Lockhart

Services for Robert V. "Bob" Lockhart, 51, of Midland will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in the sanctuary of the First United Methodist Church with Dr. Charles Lutrick, pastor, officiating. Entombment will be in Resthaven North Mausoleum, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Sunday in Pomona, Calif.

Lockhart was born Nov. 17, 1933, in Snyder, where he spent his early life. He moved to Lubbock with his family when he was a teen-ager and graduated from Lubbock High School. He received his bachelor of arts degree in business from Texas Tech in 1957. Lockhart married Ann Davis of Tahoka in Lubbock Jan. 25, 1958.

Following his graduation from Texas Tech, he moved to Snyder and began work with Standard of Texas (now Chevron) and in 1960 began working with Union Oil of California. Except for two years in Durango, Calif., they have lived in Midland since that time, where Lockhart worked in the Land Department. At the time of his death he was serving as district land manager.

A certified petroleum landman, he was a member of the First United Methodist Church, American Association of Petroleum Landmen and the Permian Basin Landmen's Association.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Cynthia Campbell of Dallas; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tate Lockhart of Snyder; and a brother, James Lockhart of Pomona, Calif.

Pallbearers will be Trey Robbins, Jeff Smith, Ed White, Bill Mathis, H.T. Finney and Ed Bayouth.

Honorary pallbearers will be Hyle Doss, Charles Snow, Dick Johnston, Jim Eggleston, Sam Terry, Walter Boyd, Walter Lockhart, Jerry Hooper, members of Union Oil of California Landman Department, and members of Permian Basin Landman's Association.

William L. Thompson

Thompson

William L. "Tommy" Thompson, 81, of Midland died this morning at a local hospital.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at the Ellis chapel. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Thompson was born Dec. 12, 1903, in Bristol. He attended schools in Bristol and Ferris, graduating from Farris High School in 1920.

A pioneer to the Midland area, he came in 1928 as a construction lineman for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., constructing the first long distance telephone lines between Abilene and El Paso. He was a veteran foreman of many winter sleet and ice storm repair crews throughout West Texas and the Panhandle. During his later years, he was in the Midland Plant Department. Following his retirement in 1965 he worked with Lynn Butler of Midland to establish one of the first commercial pecan orchards in northwest Midland County.

He was a life member of the Telephone Pioneers of America, a longtime member of Midland Masonic Lodge No. 663, served as past High Priest of the Grand Chapter of Texas Royal Arch Masons and past Thrice Illustrious Master of the Royal and Select Masters of the Grand Council of Texas, a member of the York Rite, a Knight Templar and a member of the Commandry.

He married Mamie F. Jordan in 1927. She died in 1960. In 1962 he married Janet Cross Johnson of Alpine.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, W.L. "Bill" Thompson Jr. of Richardson and Clifford C. Johnson of Everett, Wash.; a daughter, Sue T. Jones of Midland; a brother, Clyde R. Thompson of Copperas Cove; two sisters, Tina Mae Oates of Dallas and Naomi Martin of Carlsbad, N.M.; seven grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Phillip Cook Jr., Kevin Cook, Marc Thompson, Thad Johnson, Brett Jones and Billy Lee Tarrant.

Carrasco files for council seat

From Staff Reports

Manuel G. Carrasco, 48, 1607 W. Dengar, has filed for an at-large place on the Midland City Council.

A former Midland Independent School District official, Carrasco said one of his personal goals has been to serve on the City Council. "The timing was right for me.

"I've belonged to several organizations and this is another way I can be of service to the community. Maybe I can have some input that is worthwhile."

Noting that he has lived in Midland all his life, Carrasco called the city, "My kind of town."

If elected to the council, his philosophy is: "I want to be and have always been a team player, but at the same time I like to play quarterback."

His goals in this campaign include:

—Diversification of Midland's economy.

—Cooperative government to improve ways the various taxing bodies can get together and better utilize the tax dollar.

—Support of long-range planning, such as water availability to the city, city development and fire and police protection.

—Encourage ways to improve the south and east sides in areas such as housing, industry and business development.

Manuel Carrasco

Carrasco attended DeZavala Elementary, Cowden Junior High and Midland High School. He received a bachelor's and a master's degree from Sul Ross State University with a concentration in elementary school administration.

He was an elementary school teacher and principal, administrative assistant to the superintendent and director of elementary education. He left MISD three years ago to enter the real estate and insurance business.

Carrasco is a member of the Midland Board of Realtors, Life Underwriters Association, Legislative Committee of Texas Association of Realtors, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Mexican-American Professional Association, Permian Basin Petroleum Association board and Taylor Park Day Care Center.

Previous civic involvements include United Way, Education Committee for Midland Chamber of Commerce, Permian Basin Girl Scouts, Human Relations Council, Texas State Teachers Association, Midland Memorial Hospital Citizens Advisory Council, Big Brother/Big Sister program and Park Center YMCA.

He and his wife, Elidia, who is a kindergarten teacher at Crockett Elementary, have three children: Manuel Scott, a petroleum engineer at First City National Bank; Richard, property manager for Carrasco's business; and Mary Margaret, a junior at Midland High School.

Odessa police hold fourth suspect

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police are holding a fourth suspect in the Odessa City Jail following his arrest Thursday on an aggravated robbery charge in connection with the attempted robbery of a Pizza Inn employee at 1:20 a.m Saturday, police Lt. Rusty Baker said today.

Michael David Empson, 20, who listed his address as 1503 N. Lee, Odessa, was being held in the city jail on $15,000 bond following his arraignment Thursday before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

Empson is accused of trying to rob Wiley as he attempted to make a night deposit at an M-Bank at the corner of 42nd Street and Grandview Avenue, police said.

Three other men were arrested and charged in connection with the incident. Arraigned Monday on the same charge were Ricky Dale Kennedy, 23, and Ray Lynn Stull, 21, both of 208 Neal St. Arraigned Tuesday on the charge of aggravated robbery was Kevin Dean Berry, 19, of Alpine. Bond was set at $15,000 each.

Empson also was arrested on outstanding warrants from the Ector County Sheriff's Department charging him with probation violation, evading arrest; and two counts of burglary of a habitation — a first-degree felony. Bond on the burglary charges was set at $10,000 each following arraignment.

Congressmen to honor MIAs

COLLEYVILLE, Texas (AP) — Six congressmen are scheduled to give commemorative medals Saturday to some families of Texans still missing in action in Southeast Asia.

Family members said they were surprised when ceremonies at Carswell Air Force Base honoring the servicemen were announced. Officials said families of at least 10 of the 164 missing Texas servicemen would be present.

"I think we're surprised that someone is still interested," said Sharon Tucci of Fort Worth, whose husband, Air Force Maj. Robert Tucci, has been missing since his F-4 fighter was shot down over Laos in 1969.

But memories for the families are still sharp.

"Every night when I go sleep, I pray that he's all right. And every morning when I wake up, I wonder what kind of night he had," Wilma Vanden Eykel said. She hasn't seen her son, Marty, in almost 17 years.

Some families see the occasion through a haze of anger and frustration. Government officials first told them their sons and husbands were missing. Then, in the late 1970s, the government reclassified them as killed in action.

"I hope this is not government politics again," said Mrs. Vanden Eykel said.

Smile-a-thon, Kermit visit planned

From Staff Reports

A "Smile-a-thon" and an appearance by Kermit the Frog are part of the activities planned this Saturday by a group of dental wives.

"It's to help honor Dental Health Month," said Janet Orr, the wife of Midland dentist, David Orr. "We are going to see who can smile the longest."

The event will be held at Midland Park Mall at 11 a.m. with prizes in three different age categories. The contest is open to all children, ages three to 12.

Kermit the Frog will be at the Mall from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Study shows housing conflicts

DALLAS (AP) — Janette Washington wanted desperately to avoid the Dallas Housing Authority's deteriorating projects in West Dallas, fearing the effects that the crime and despair of the ghetto would have on her three preschool children.

But the cheapest three-bedroom apartment she could find in Richardson, the suburban city where her $640-per-month job was, was $550 a month. The Washingtons reluctantly joined 400 other households on the housing authority's waiting list for housing.

"Lord knows I don't want to live in west Dallas," Mrs. Washington said. "It's bad for my kids. But I have no choice."

Mrs. Washington is not alone, the Dallas Morning News found in a study of public housing.

Affluent communities in and around Dallas have slammed their doors to an initiative begun in the early 1970s to free the poor from inner-cty ghettos, according to interviews and records gathered during the News' 14-month investigation of national housing.

Within the city, the Dallas Housing Authority, which still segregated tenants by race six years after Congress outlawed racial discrimination in 1964, has yet to build desperately needed family housing outside minority neighborhoods. But the DHA has constructed so many elderly-only apartments that it has had to advertise for tenants.

Prosperous white communities have vigorously resisted subsidized housing projects, especially for families, the News said. Lawsuits have been filed by residents of Richardson, Plano and Dallas to prevent such housing, and, in separate incidents, opponents reportedly have threatened to shoot a developer and to kill a federal housing official.

Suburbs have used zoning laws as legal barriers to affordable housing for low-income groups, the newspaper said. Mesquite, east of Dallas, changed its laws several years ago to effectively prohibit federally assisted single-family homes — because, a former council member said, of fear that inner-city families would move there.

Builders say that Plano's laws effectively force them to install swimming pools. And in 1983, Grand Prairie considered but dropped a proposal that would have required fireplaces in all new apartments.

Such provisions raise building costs, which can drive rents high enough to exclude low-income families.

Humes to quit board

From Staff Reports

Midland School Board president Parker Humes announced Thursday he will not be a candidate for a position on the board during the upcoming trustee election April 6.

Humes was first elected to the board in 1979 and served as its president for three years. He chose not to seek re-election for personal reasons, he said.

Trucking suits filed

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Thursday that two more suits had been filed against trucking firms for allegedly violating Texas laws regarding overloaded trucks.

Mattox also said a hearing scheduled Thursday on several lawsuits filed last week against trucking companies had been postponed indefinitely.

The new suits were filed against the Hoffman Trucking Co. of Chickasha, Okla., and Permit Haulers Inc. of Fort Worth.

Artist uses human body as his canvas

Dave Risner, a tattoo artist for ten years, works on the arm of a customer in his shop in Big Spring, recently.

AP Laserphoto

By KIM KIRKHAM

BIG SPRING (AP) — Dave Risner is an artist, using the human body as his canvas.

The owner of T's and Too's at 114 W. Second, Risner began tattooing 10 years ago. "I wanted to tattoo people, so I went to a tattoo artist and asked him to teach me." He served an apprenticeship for a year.

"I don't know what it is about a person that makes them want to get a tattoo other than they're kind of neat. I like them," said Risner. They "tell a little bit about a person's individuality. It's a mirror impression of a person's personality.

"I can draw anything. The artwork is the easiest part," he said. "I try to make every tattoo different than a tattoo that I have done before."

Risner uses a tattoo machine loaded with one needle for fine lines or three needles for thicker, bolder lines. "It works just like an electric pen." But, "it (the needle) is going as fast as a sewing machine or even faster."

Getting a tattoo is "a feeling you've never had before in your life," said Risner. He explained the feeling as a cross between a bee sting and a match burning on the skin. "It's more annoying than anything.

"You can't get hurt getting a tattoo," said Risner. "Sometimes people faint, and the only thing that hurts is their ego. You can't get a tattoo and not bleed because I'm gonna poke you a million times."

But "it's not half as bad as what people think. It's all in your mental attitude. If you go in there thinking it's gonna feel bad, it's gonna.

"I'm not saying that everyone in the world should get a tattoo. Sometimes I try to talk them out of it." Risner tries to convince people against having someone's initials or name tattooed on them, because they may not be with that person forever. "I don't want to put anything on anyone that they're gonna regret."

He refuses to tattoo people who have been drinking. "I realize that a lot of times tattoos are a spur-of-a-moment thing. That's how I got my first one." Risner also does not give tattoos to diabetics, pregnant or breast-feeding women, or people taking heart medicine.

By law, he cannot tattoo anyone under the age of 19 without their parents' consent. Because of his own personal convictions, Risner will not tattoo a person's face or hands. "I don't want to screw up anybody's life, so to speak.

"Since you're gonna wear it the rest of your life, it's a good thing to think about it. If you're gonna do it, go to a professional or don't do it at all."

Tattoos can be removed by skin grafts or laser beam, but it is extremely expensive, Risner said. Both methods usually leave scars.

Using skin-toned cosmetics made for tattoos, he can fade or cover up the "jailhouse" or homemade tattoos.

The state doesn't require a tattoo artist to be licensed; however, Risner has been awarded a certificate stating that he uses the best equipment.

"I've got the best sterilizer there is. I've got the best ultrasonic cleaner, but anytime you get a scrape or anything there's a chance of an infection. (But) it's not gonna come from me.

"My main concern is if the person takes care of the tattoo the way I tell them to. If they do that, they'll have no problems."

The average tattoo costs $25 and takes 25 to 30 minutes to apply. "I guarantee my tattoos for life. If your colors fade, come back to me, and I'll put the color in for nothing."

"They youngest person I ever tattooed would be about 16 years old. It's gonna be pretty tough for anyone younger to convince their parents to sign the consent form.

"Women are just like guys. They like tattoos just as much, if not more than guys.

"Women have always gotten tattoos," he said. "Way back in the 20s, women were getting them." They had their lips tattooed red and their cheeks highlighted with a permanent blush. A well-known surgeon is now tattooing women's eyes with the eyeliner look, said Risner. "They say it's new, but it's not new.

TO PURCHASE ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES AT 7-ELEVEN®

COME OF AGE.

Alcohol Abuse is a serious problem, particularly among people who are not of legal drinking age. The 7-Eleven stores in this area want to help do something about this problem. We want to assure that the laws regarding the sale of alcoholic beverages to those not of legal drinking age are upheld in our stores. We are asking our customers who are age twenty-six and younger to have a driver's license or military identification available for inspection when purchasing alcoholic beverages from us.

We try to be good neighbors and to live up to our responsibilities as a corporate citizen.

This is not the first time we have been involved in community concerns. As family-oriented stores, we banned the sale of cigarette papers and other drug-related paraphernalia. We've been involved with you in the Mothers March of Dimes. We enlisted your aid in the fight against muscular dystrophy and, through your generosity, 7-Eleven stores have raised over $30 million to fight the crippling disease.

Now we ask your cooperation and support in helping us adhere to the law. If you come to 7-Eleven to purchase alcohloic beverages, please, come of age.

Dollar falls sharply

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell sharply early today in a bout of profit-taking that followed nine straight days in which the American currency set records. Gold prices inched higher.

Dealers said investors seemed to be buying other currencies they thought had been left seriously under-valued by the dollar's record-breaking advances.

The U.S. currency tumbled back below 10 French francs and dropped nearly two pfennigs against the West German mark. The British pound rebounded a cent and a half in value.

Some dealers said investors were trying to consolidate and square their positions before what is in the United States a long holiday weekend.

Others said there was a fear of new central bank intervention. "That is still very much a factor," said one banker in Frankfurt.

–2.7715 Swiss francs, down from 2.80075.

–9.9950 French francs, down from 10.0820, an all-time high.

–3.7095 Dutch guilders, down from 3.7295.

–2,020.50 Italian lire, down from 2,029.38, an all-time high.

–1.33895 Canadian dollars, down from 1.33995.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.1063, compared with $1.0930 Thursday. The pound also was being helped by reports of stabilizing oil prices. Sterling is widely seen as a petro-currency because of Britain's North Sea oilfields.

Adobe, Madison, announce merger

NEW YORK (SWN) — Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. and Madison Resources Inc. Thursday announced jointly their intention to combine the two companies into a new company that will continue to be engaged in the oil and gas exploration and production business.

As part of the transaction, Adobe's coal operations would be spun off into a new entity which would be owned by Adobe's existing stockholders, other than Madison.

Under the proposed terms of the transaction, based upon assumed net asset values of $25 per share of Madison common stock and $25 per share of Adobe common stock (excluding Adobe's coal properties), Madison shareholders would receive one share of common stock of the new company for each share of Madison common stock. Adobe shareholders would receive a package of securities of the new company consisting of .190 shares of common stock, .421 shares of 8 percent convertible preferred stock, and .40 shares of 12 percent preferred stock. In addition, Adobe shareholders would receive units of a new entity into which Adobe's coal properties will be placed.

The 12 percent preferred stock would have a $20 per share face value and liquidation preference. The 8 percent convertible preferred stock would have a $23 per share face value and liquidation preference and would be convertible at any time into .9 share of common stock. It is expected that the new company will apply for the listing on the New York Stock Exchange of the securities issued in the transaction.

Consummation of the consolidation is subject to the execution and delivery of a definitive agreement of consolidation, approval by the boards of directors and stockholders of Adobe and Madison, receipt of favorable opinions from investment banking firms retained by Adobe and Madison as to the fairness of the transaction, the receipt of a favorable ruling from the Internal Revenue Service as to the tax-free nature of the transaction and the receipt of any required regulatory approvals.

Adobe and Madison also announced that Madison and B.J. Pevehouse, Adobe's president and chief executive officer, had entered into an agreement granting to Madison the option to purchase all of Pevehouse's shares of Adobe upon the occurence of certain events. In addition, Pevehouse has agreed to support the proposed combination of Adobe and Madison and to vote his shares in favor thereof. Pevehouse owns approximately 20 percent of the outstanding common stock of Adobe; in addition, Madison currently owns approximately 27 percent of the outstanding shares of Adobe common stock.

"This transaction is a further step in the development of Madison as an operating oil and gas company," said George D. Gould, chairman of Madison. "The combination with Adobe links Madison to a company with a superior exploration and production history. The new company wil be one with a very strong balance sheet and substantial cash flow."

Pevehouse stated that Adobe operations would be continued as in the past with the same managment and employees, and that he is looking forward to working with Madison in the new company.

Financier says he is prepared to bid $7.5 billion for Phillips

NEW YORK (AP) — As Phillips Petroleum Co. began a campaign challenging the credibility of hostile suitor Carl Icahn, the New York financier said he is preparing to risk $7.5 million that his bid for Phillips will clear a crucial hurdle one week from today.

That $7.5 million is how much money Icahn said he must put up now to arrange for only part of the financing for the first step of his $8.06 billion bid for the nation's eighth largest oil company.

Nevertheless, Icahn, too, said he has doubts about his chances for success.

He told a group of investors late Thursday that he would not spend more on arranging financing because "I don't want to throw my money away" should he lose the showdown vote with Phillips next Friday.

He said he should know by the middle of next week if "I'm in terrible shape" for the vote on the Phillips' restructuring plan that his offer is up against. The Phillips plan would give employees of the company enough stock to block any future hostile takeover, and Icahn has launched a campaign to reject that measure.

He said his partial financing, which is aimed at raising about $1.5 billion this week, was being arranged to "sort of test the waters."

Phillips was more optimistic about the vote.

Asked whether he would win next week, William Douce, Phillips' chairman, told reporters, "You bet."

Meanwhile, Phillips, noting all the conditions Icahn has set for his bid, began a newspaper advertising campaign today that asks: "Is Icahn for real?"

Icahn owns 4.85 percent of Phillips stock. He has offered $60 a share for another 70 million shares, enough to give him control.

But he said the bid depends on his defeating Phillips' plan next week, arranging financing and defusing Phillips' elaborate takeover defense.

Officials warn inflation could return to cause damage

By The Associated Press

Despite widespread proclamations that double-digit inflation is dead, a group of former government officials is warning that it could come roaring back to cause "enormous continuing damage to our economy and our society."

The Federal Reserve, meanwhile, said Americans took on $6.95 billion more in installment debt than they paid off in December, a sizable increase that showed consumers are still willing to make big-ticket purchases, analysts said.

Also in December, sales of manufactured goods rose 0.6 percent while inventories climbed only 0.3 percent, the Commerce Department said in another report Thursday.

The bipartisan group of 14 former government officials — the Committee to Fight Inflation — warned current policymakers not to be complacent about inflation despite the modest price increases of recent years.

"Neither congratulations nor complacency are warranted," the group said in a policy statement. "The reduction of inflation to the neighborhood of 4 percent is in no sense a victory."

The group, headed by Herbert Stein, chairman of President Richard M. Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, and Henry Fowler, Treasury Secretary under President Lyndon B. Johnson, also said the White House was premature in boasting that inflation has been subdued.

In his budget message to Congress earlier this month, President Reagan noted that consumer prices rose just 4 percent in 1984 and said, "Inflation remains well under control."

Consumer prices rose only 3.8 percent in 1983, the lowest rate in more than a decade, after a 3.9 percent increase in 1982.

While the recent price performance looks good compared with double-digit rates in 1979 and 1980, the increases are still above the 1.5 percent annual average turned in during the 1950s and early 1960s, the group said.

The group also said a 4 percent inflation rate would cut the purchasing power of the dollar in half in less than 18 years and do "enormous continuing damage to our economy and our society."

The December increase in consumer installment debt outstanding compared with a gain of $7.95 billion in November, the Federal Reserve said.

"Even though it is a slowdown from November, it is still a very large increase," said Sandra Shaber, director of consumer economics at Chase Econometrics, a private forecasting firm.

"Consumers aren't going to be borrowing at the same pace they did last year, but they are still willing to add to their debt as long as their income growth holds up," she said.

The increase in sales of manufactured goods was the third consecutive monthly gain after sales fell between July through September.

Economists were concerned that economic growth could slow further as businesses cut back on orders in an effort to work down excess inventories. But those fears were eased by small 0.2 percent and 0.3 percent inventory gains in November and December, respectively.

Roger Brinner of Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., economic forecasting firm, said price discounts in November and December apparently helped to move products out of the stores.

In other developments:

—Chrysler Corp. said its fourth-quarter profit soared fivefold from a year earlier to $609.7 million, while 1984 earnings were a record $2.4 billion. The combined 1984 earnings of the Big Three carmakers — Chrysler, General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. — was nearly $10 billion.

—The South recorded the strongest gain in retail sales measured by region, 59 percent, between 1977 and 1982, the Census Bureau said. The West was second with a 55 percent gain, followed by the Northeast, 45 percent, and the Midwest, 32 percent.

—The basic U.S. money supply rose $1.4 billion in the week ended Feb. 4, to a seasonally adjusted $565 billion, the Federal Reserve said. Credit analysts closely follow the supply for clues to interest-rate trends.

Midland, Odessa Chambers make joint Saturn application

The Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce will develop and submit a single proposal on behalf of both communities today to attract the future General Motors Saturn manufacturing facility, said James M. Alsup, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The proposal was formulated in response to a questionnaire developed by the Texas Economic Commission (TEDC), the lead agency designated by GM to help them match selection criteria with interested communities in Texas.

Both Alsup and Roy Elsner, Odessa Chamber president, said benefits could be gained in jointly soliciting the giant manufacturing operation which is scheduled to employ 6,000 persons after opening in 1989.

Location factors included in the questionnaire required information on population, land, labor, education, water, electricity, housing and transportation.

As an example of the enhanced proposal made possible by working together, Alsup said, the combination of Midland's 24th state ranking population figure and Odessa's 18th Texas population rank, allowed the proposal to show a local population of 224,765 which would rank eighth in the state.

He said the GM Saturn project is attracting national attention and competition. With 150 communities in Texas invited to submit information, speculation is open as to the number of other cities and states being considered.

Both Elsner and Alsup pledged continuing efforts to make the project a reality for the Permian Basin.

The combined efforts of the two Chambers is a reaffirmation of the "We're Better Together Midland/Odessa" campaign and is one example of cooperative efforts aimed at attracting new business and industry to the area, the men said.

Exxon buys Goldsmith interest

Exxon Company U.S.A. today announced the purchase of additional working and royalty interest in the Goldsmith Landreth Unit in Goldsmith field of Andrews and Ector counties.

A.H. Barber, manager of the firm's newly formed acquisitions department for the Midcontinent Division in Midland, said the interests in the Ector County acquisition will boost Exxon's production in the unit by 250 barrels oil daily. He said one of the conditions of the transaction was that the terms and identity of the seller not be disclosed.

The acquisition makes Exxon, with 28.9 percent, the largest working interest owner in the unit, which is operated by Amoco Production Co.

PBPA opposes fee increases

The Permian Basin Petroleum Associaton's Executive Vice President Ed Thompson, following a visit with Representative Tom Craddick, Chairman, Natural Resources Committee, issued the following statement for the Association.

"In view of the current situation in the petroleum industry, we join Chairman Craddick in opposing the proposed $800 increase in the Drilling Permit fee, as well as any other increases on the industry, whether they be called fees or taxes."

"We realize that it takes money to run any business, including the state government. However, with the domestic petroleum industry still in the throes of trying to get back on track, we believe it behooves the state government to look for ways to cut spending, not increase taxes," Thomp-

Chrysler profits $2.4 billion

Iacocca wants more import quotas

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca used the company's announcement of a record $2.4 billion 1984 profit to renew his pitch for extension of import quotas on Japanese cars.

Chrysler's earnings put the combined profits of the Big Three U.S. automakers — Chrysler, General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. — at more than $9 billion.

The fourth year of voluntary quotas expires March 31 and the Japanese government has yet to say whether it will keep, raise or eliminate them."I must say, we get a little skittish," Iacocca said Thursday.

Chrysler's profit was more than three times that of its previous record — $701 million in 1983.

Iacocca said the profits will help Chrysler put in place an ambitious five-year, $10.5 billion investment plan in new plants and equipment.

But with the quota question unsettled, he said, "We get a little bit more conservative by the day. We say maybe we should take this money and hold back a little bit."

The quotas, which currently limit Japanese shipments to 1.85 million cars annually, had the effect of keeping Japan's share of the U.S. market at about 20 percent last year.

Iacocca said ending the quotas would accelerate the pace to seeking cheaper places to operate, like Korea, Mexico and Japan itself.

"We know what products we have to produce in the next five years," he said. "We just don't know where we're going to produce them.

"... If you can't lick 'em, you join 'em, and here we go. It's like saying, 'See you in Seoul, South Korea.'"

However, John Hammond, who researches the auto industry for Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass., said the quotas were designed to protect the U.S. industry while it fought its way back from its severe four-year sales slump that ended in 1983.

"They have clearly done that," Hammond said.

General Motors Corp. earned an industry record $4.5 billion last year and Ford Motor Co. earned more than $2.9 billion. The industry is expected to reach a record level of $9.82 billion in profits after American Motors Corp., the No. 4 U.S.-based carmaker, reports an expected $17 million in 1984 profits at the end of the month. Last year the four companies earned a combined $6.15 billion.

Iacocca said the Japanese have a cost advantage of $2,300 a car and "at least half that is due to the high dollar" in relation to the Japanese yen.

If there's no change in the next few years, he said, "I think you're going to see a headlong rush to go offshore because, simply stated, you can't build in dollars. You gotta build in yen or pesos or something."

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Pecos producer flows 7.38 Mmcf

Staff Reports

A prolific Waddell gas well has been finaled in the Abell field of Pecos County.

JOHN M. CLARK tested the No. 1 Wagner for a calculated absolute open flow of 7,380 Mcfpd with a flowing tubing pressure of 558.5 psi. The Waddell was perforated from 5,730 to 5,738 ft., acidized with 500 gallons 15 percent acid and fractured with 8,000 gallons and 12,000 lbs. sand.

Drilled to 5,780 ft., the well is plugged back to 5,760 ft. Final casing size was seven inches at 5,778 ft.

On an elevation of 2,382 ft., formation tops include the San Andres at 2,370 ft., Glorieta at 3,130; Clearfork at 3,226; McKee 5,260, and the Waddell at 5,730 ft.

The location is 648 ft. from south and 673 ft. from east lines of Section 23, Block 9, H&GN survey, three mils northeast of Imperial.

The well is a re-entry of the Stanolind Oil & Gas No. 1 E.E. Wagner "B", plugged Aug. 22, 1979 by Amoco.

Recompletions yield strikes for Eddy, Lea

Recompletions have led to strikes in Eddy and Lea counties.

CITIES SERVICE OIL & GAS CO. recompleted the No. 1 State "DF" Com. as an Eddy County Bone Springs discovery.

The well was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 3.84 Mmcfpd. The operator perforated the Bone Springs from 5,089 to 5,284 ft.

Location is 1,830 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 9, T21s, R27e, four miles north of Carlsbad.

The well is a former Morrow gas producer in the Burton Flat field. Original depth was 11,759 ft. A five inch liner was hung to the total depth.

EXXON CORP. tested the No. 1 South Carlsbad Com., an Eddy County Atoka find, for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.69 Mmcfpd. Exxon perforated the Atoka from 10,612 to 10,616 ft.

The site is 1,980 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 27, T23s, R26e, 10 miles west of Loving.

A former Morrow producer from the South Carlsbad field, the well was drilled to 11,866 ft. A 4 1/2 inch liner was hung to 11,861 ft.

ARCO OIL & GAS CO. tested the No. 1 Langley-Griffin, a Lea County Strawn discovery, to flow 342 barrels of 45 gravity crude on a 13/64 inch choke. Gas-oil ratio is 1,433:1. ARCO perforated the Strawn from 9,340 to 9,462 ft.

The well is located 1,980 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 28, T22s, R36e, nine miles southwest of Eunice.

Originally a dual competion in the Devonian and Ellenburger zones of Langley field, the well was first tested to flow 1.47 Mmcfpd from the Devonian perforations 12,435 to 12,668 ft., and flowing 1.67 Mmcfpd from Ellenburger perforations 15,322 to 15,515 ft. Though the Ellenburger was plugged, the Devonian is still producing.

Delaware discovery produces 24 barrels

A Delaware oil find has been completed in Eddy County.

YATES PETROLEUM CORP. tested the No. 1 North White City "ABP" Federal to produce 24 barrels of 38 gravity crude and two barrels of water. Gas-oil ratio is 417:1. Yates perforated the Delaware 4,516 to 4,522 ft., and acidized with 1,000 gallons.

The well is plugged back to 4,595 ft. with 5 1/2 inches casing set at 8,739 ft.

The well is located 960 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 31, T23s, R25e, 12 miles southwest of Carlsbad.

Yates re-entered the former No. 1 North White City Unit, drilled by Humble Oil & Refining Co. and plugged July 18, 1968. A second re-entry was made by C&K Petroleum, deepening the well to 12,074 ft. The well was plugged for the second time Oct. 3, 1972.

The find is 1 7/8 miles south and slightly east of the Dark Canyon West (Delaware) field.

Irion oil discovery flows 125 barrels oil

An undesignated oil discovery has been reported in Irion County.

GRUSS PETROLEUM MANAGEMENT, INC. tested the No. 2 Sugg "42" to flow 125 barrels of 39.4 gravity crude and no water on a 14/64 inch choke. Gas-oil ratio is 997:1. The pay zone was perforated from 5,884 to 5,898 ft. and acidized with 1,500 gallons.

Drilled to 6,730 ft., the well is plugged back to 6,490 ft. Final casing set was 4 1/2 inches at 6,730 ft.

On a ground elevation of 2,354 ft., formation tops include the Wichita Albany at 4,624 ft., Dean at 4,764 ft., Wolfcamp at 4,961 ft., and the Canyon B Sand at 6,490 ft.

The well is located 467 ft. from south and 2,071 ft. from west lines of Section 42, C.A. Chadwick No. 42, Abstract 1090, two miles northwest of Mertzon.

The discovery is a location west of Rock Penn (Canyon) production and 1 1/2 miles west, slightly south of Christi (Canyon 6800) production.

HNG sells coal subsidiary stock to investors

HOUSTON-Houston Natural Gas Corp. has announced that a senior management group headed by Zeigler president Michael K. Reilly and other investors have agreed to acquire the stock of Zeigler Coal Company from HNG for approximately $55 million cash.

Zeigler, a wholly-owned subsidiary of HNG, owns and operates four underground mines and coal preparation facilities in Central and Southern Illinois and employs over 900 people. The transaction does not include approximately 600 million tons of undeveloped coal reserves or the 12,000-acre farm, also in Illinois and operated by Zeigler.

Conoco reports gas discovery in California

HOUSTON-Conoco has discovered natural gas in Sutter County, Calif., about 45 miles northwest of Sacramento.

Conoco, a subsidiary of the Du Pont Company, said its 12-1 Newhall well tested natural gas in two zones-7.5 million cubic feet a day in the upper zone and 6.2 million cubic feet a day in the lower zone. The pay zones are between 5,600-5,620 feet and between 6,818-6,850 feet.

Tests were through a 24/64-inch choke, with flowing tubing pressures of 2,128 pounds per square inch in the lower zone and 1,980 pounds per square inch in the upper zone. Total depth of the well is 6,933 feet.

MidCon renegotiates cost of Canadian gas

LOMBARD,ILL. - MidCon Corp has announced that an interstate gas transmission subsidiary, Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America, and ProGas Limited, headquartered in Calgary, Alberta, have renegotiated the long-term pricing in an existing contract for purchase by Natural of up to 27.4 billion cubic feet of Canadian gas a year.

Diamond Shamrock earnings hit $50 million

DALLAS - Diamond Shamrock's fourth quarter earnings were $56.8 million, or $0.42 per share, up substantially over last year's fourth quarter loss of $130.0 million or $1.05 per share. Revenues for the quarter were $1.1 billion, versus fourth quarter 1983 revenues of $1.2 billion.

For the year Diamond Shamrock reported earnings of $242.2 million or $1.78 per share compared to a 1983 loss of $60.2 billion or $0.76 per share after write-offs and before an extraordinary item. 1984 revenues reached a record $4.5 billion versus last year's revenues of $4.0 billion.

PHILLIPS

Phillips values its own plan at $53 a share. It involves buying back 38 percent of its stock with securities valued at $60 a share, selling a controlling interest in the company to its employees and selling $2 billion in assets.

Icahn said he would sell $3.7 billion in assets to help finance his deal, including Phillips North Sea oil holdings, its recently acquired Aminoil subsidiary and several unidentified refineries.

He said if he succeeded in gaining control, he would buy the remaining shares with securities worth $50 a share.

Wall Street remained skeptical about his bid, with Phillips stock falling 75 cents Thursday to $49 a share.

Meanwhile, to shareholders who do not like his offer, Icahn had a new message Thursday, vote down the Phillips plan, and he would attempt to elect his own directors to Phillips and force the sale of the company to the highest bidder at a later date.

So far, no other bidders have surfaced for the company.

But Icahn said, "I believe something else is going to happen."

However, when Douce was asked if any other suitor had approached the company either directly or indirectly, he responded, "No sir."

Icahn was freed to proceed with his bid after a federal judge in Tulsa, Okla., blocked two courts in the state from carrying out orders that barred the offer from proceeding. U.S. District Judge H. Dale Cook also issued a temporary order Thursday to block enforcement of a new Oklahoma law that would make it tougher to buy an oil company.

Phillips' plan was put together to end a December takeover bid launched by a group led by Pickens. It would effectively end any further takeover bid by enabling employees to buy enough stock to block an unwelcome bid.

Pickens meantime, announced that a group he leads has purchased nearly 8 percent of the stock of Unocal Corp. and seeks to buy more stock for investment purposes. But the group also said it seeks to force that oil company into a restructuring.

PBPA

Thompson continued. "Had the Texas Railroad Commission indicated they needed the funds to meet their budget, that would have been one thing. To have them state that they had actually returned money to the State Treasury from their 1984 budget points up the fact, as the Governor stated, that $700 of the $800 increase was scheduled for the general fund. It seems to be the continuing ploy if you don't have enough, get it from the petroleum industry."

"We feel that the people, in their recent vote, sent a message to all branches of government to the effect that now is the time to cut out waste, eliminate inefficiency and reduce the government's load on the people, both of Texas and the nation. Certainly the industry will continue to carry its part of the load - let's just not have too many trying to catch a ride without doing their part."

Home furnishings top retail sales list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home furnishings, toys and games led the growth in Americans' buying over five years, new Census Bureau statistics show.

Overall, Americans spent more than $1 trillion in retail stores in 1982, up 47.9 percent from 1977, the bureau reported Thursday.

Fueled by population movement to the Sun Belt, growth was fastest in the Southern states where sales climbed 59 percent between 1977 and 1982, followed by a 55 percent boost in the West, the bureau said.

By contrast, sales increased 45 percent in the Northeast and 32 percent in the Midwest.

Texas led the nation with an 80 percent gain in retail sales to move from third place into second, displacing New York, the bureau said. California remained No. 1 in sales volume.

The smallest gain over the period was in Michigan, where sales increased 24 percent.

The biggest sales jump — 126.9 percent to $1.3 billion in 1982 — was posted in the practical category of stores handling miscellaneous home furnishings such as china, glassware, metalware for kitchens, linens, brooms, brushes, lamps and shades, mirrors, blinds and shades.

Hobby-toy and game stores were second with a 112.3 percent increase, followed by gift and novelty shops with an increase of 106.6 percent over the five year period.

Radio-television stores, up 93.5 percent, and book stores, which jumped 81.7 percent, rounded out the top five in sales growth.

At the other end of the list, mens and boys clothing shops posted the smallest gain on the list at 11.5 percent over the period. Ice cream stands boosted their sales 12.8 percent, the report said, and the increase was 14.4 percent for boat dealers.

Here is a list of the major types of business covered in the report and the percentage increase in sales from 1977 to 1982 as reported by the Census Bureau:

We've just made Allstate Texas multi-car insurance rates smaller. As much as 20% smaller than state rates.

Now that's big news for Texans with more than one car. And big savings, too. So see your Allstate agent for details today. After all, how often does anyone make something in Texas smaller?

Pageants are key to opportunity, Miss Texas tells teens

Representing Texas in the nationally-televised Miss USA pageant in May is Laura Martinez-Herring, a native of Mexico, a Swiss school graduate and a former volunteer rescue-crew social worker in the Himalayas.

The 20-year-old bilingual Miss Texas USA was in Midland recently and met with young aspiring models from Dillard's Teenboard.

The daughter of a rancher and a student at St. Mary's Hall in San Antonio and Aiglon College, a private school in Switzerland, she saw a different side of life when she became involved in an international student volunteer project in India.

She was selected from the Swiss school to be part of a 30-member rescue-crew in the Himalayas in 1982, where they hiked to remote villages and cut roads, repaired water pipes, planted vegetable gradens and built a school. During the project, they slept on floors of houses with no electricity and no running water.

In the Himalays, she was a guest of hosts who served her the last of their food, even if it meant the hosts didn't eat.

"I really learned a lot from people who seemed to have nothing," she said.

After her return from India, she traveled to the Philippines, Thailand, Egypt, Israel, back to India and through Europe, including Poland.

It was in the communist country where she witnessed rationings of foods such as tea, meat, coffee and chocolate.

After seeing the world, she returned to El Paso where she entered her first beauty pageant and was crowned Miss El Paso U.S.A.

Although she's only been in two pageants, she advised the Teenboard members that pageants are a good experience, if they compete in the right frame of mind.

Pageants "can be the key to open a lot of doors for you," she told the high school juniors and seniors, adding that since she was crowned, she has attended a cast party for "The Young and Restless," daytime series, and sat in on a filming of "Alice."

Perhaps more appealing to the eyes of the young models is hope for $84,000-worth of prizes, which include a $6,000 wardrobe from Dillard's, jewelry, a car, a mink coat and a $15,000 cash scholarship.

But," she cautioned, "don't get into a pageant until you're sure it's what you want to do. You have to be sure. And you have to do it to win. You have to be thinking the whole time you are a winner.

"You have to be able to picture it. Close your eyes and picture being crowned."

She gave the young women tips on dealing with stage fright, nerves, judges and competition.

Miss Herring will be training for the Miss USA pageant until May, which includes several visits to many cities. "Meeting new people, speaking in front of groups, interviews on camera, it's all practice."

A formal four-day session in San Francisco involves training in ramp walking, posture, hand gestures, facial expressions.

When the pageant parade and fanfare is over, Miss Herring would like to pursue a career in photographic modeling, the arts or retail business.

Though seeing the very best in life and visiting the poorest corners of the earth have enriched her life, Miss Herring realizes enrichment doesn't necessarily make one rich.

It's not that witnessing hunger in the world didn't change her perspective.

"I loved it, but you don't make any money at it. And I can't live off my parents forever."

DEAR ABBY

Woman can't confess temptation to the man on her mind

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I loved this boy (now a man) with all my heart all through school. "John" loved me, too, but we never went all the way. I would have, but John was stronger than I was, and he never let it happen.

He was an altar boy and dedicated to his religion. I'm also Catholic and thought that one day we would marry. Instead, John went to the seminary to become a priest. He was ordained and assigned to a parish out of town. In the meantime, I got married and had a family.

Sixteen years later, John moved back to town, and now he is my parish priest!

I still have strong feelings for him and I think he feels the same about me, too, although he hardly ever looks me in the eye. He took my confession twice, but I never confessed the sin that was really in my heart (my desire for him).

The temptation is terrible, and the guilt about my feelings is weighing heavily on my conscience. I cannot deny my feelings. I don't want to hurt John, myself or my family. Please help me. — A SINNER IN MY HEART

DEAR SINNER: Reduce the temptation by changing to another parish. It would be a kindness to John, and a favor to yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend, "Denny," was engaged to be married three months ago, so I threw a stag party for him that turned out to be a big mistake.

I hired "Salome," an exotic dancer, to entertain at this party the night before the wedding, and Denny ended up in bed with her. To make a long story short, Denny's fiancee heard about it and called off the wedding.

Now Denny is making plans to marry Salome. My question: Should I give Denny another stag party? — LESTER

DEAR LESTER: I vote no, but if you do, don't hire another exotic dancer. Ask Salome to dance — and retain the seventh veil for her wedding.

DEAR ABBY: I have some advice that could save a lot of people a lot of heartbreak. Recently my father died. He was an attorney and most people would consider him a wealthy man. I have one sister who has a history of emotional problems and is marginally employed. My father left her enough money to buy a house and be assured that she would never have to "worry." He left my mother the rest.

He left me not so much as a bubble gum wrapper! If people knew this, I'm sure they would be shocked because I had always been the "apple of his eye."

I am so hurt and humiliated, I can't see straight. My husband has a decent job, but we're far from rich. Every other paycheck goes to the house — you know what mortgage rates are these days — and our car has 80,000 miles on it. Frankly, we could have used a little something.

Anyway, please tell your readers this: If you're planning to exclude one of your children from your will on the grounds that he or she is apparently self-sufficient, at least say something nice about the person in your will — not that "so-and-so is already well-provided for." And please leave that child SOMETHING — even if it's only something of sentimental value. It will make a lot of difference in the way you are remembered. — SHUT OUT

DEAR SHUT OUT: Good advice. Thanks for a valuable item.

AT WIT'S END

Words powerful

By ERMA BOMBECK

"I'm sorry."

It starts as two little words a child puts together when he has broken a toy or wet his pants.

But the two little words have a great effect on Mama. Her eyes soften, her lips part into a smile and she envelops him with her arms in a show of forgiveness.

To a child, "I'm sorry" is the miracle phrase of the century.

"I'm sorry I pulled up all of Grandma's flowers by the roots." Mama shakes her head and smiles. Grandma even snickers. It's still working.

"I'm sorry I took a candy bar without paying and had it under my coat." Mama's smile fades. In fact, she insists the child walk right into the store and say those two little words to Mrs. Musselman who doesn't smile at all.

"I'm sorry I didn't clean my room today," "I'm sorry I got an F in geography." "I'm sorry I lost my sweater." "I'm sorry about the TV knob. It just came off in my hand." "I'm sorry I don't like cauliflower." "I'm sorry I forgot to say I'm sorry."

Mama responds numbly to it now. Occasionally she mumbles, "You should be."

"I'm sorry I wrecked the car." "I'm sorry I took the money from your purse." "I'm sorry I lied to you."

Mama has now had it with "I'm sorry." She says, "You think it solves everything. Well, it doesn't. You've said it too many times before." It isn't working. What happened?

Most of the mothers who write me wonder how they can tell when a child says, "I'm sorry," and means it.

There was the daughter who ran away from home to live with her boyfriend in the home of his parents who were really "neat." She was sorry. There was the son who lied to his grandmother to get money to have his truck fixed and used it for an abortion for his girlfriend. He was sorry.

Maybe I'm naive, but I believe every time they say, "I'm sorry," they mean it. It's the only phrase they've got to try and recapture that wonderful moment when our eyes soften, our lips part in a smile and we take them in our arms and forgive them.

It isn't easy to forgive. Never underestimate how tough it is for parents to go back to square one and start trusting them again. They've been hurt, lied to, humiliated and emotionally ripped off.

I have to remember there's only one thing harder in this world than forgiving.

It's to ask for forgiveness armed only with, "I'm sorry."

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Migraine treatment depends on severity

Dear Dr. Solomon: My 12-year-old son gets an occasional migraine headache. Our doctor has decided not to put him on medication. I would like to know what the general approach is to preventive treatment, both in relation to medication and for psychological counseling. — Mrs. E.P., New York City

Dear Mrs. P.: A decision for prophylactic (or preventive) treatment for migraine is generally determined by the frequency and severity of the headaches. Dr. Charles F. Barlow, of Harvard Medical School in Boston, notes that headaches that occur at least once a week usually deserve prophylactic treatment. Prophylactic treatment of migraine headaches that occur less often may also be advisable if they are associated with prolonged disability or with neurological symptoms.

Formal psychotherapy is rarely indicated, although the psychological pressures to which any patient is subjected should be evaluated. For children this usually means school pressures, and there is generally very little that can be done about this.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is 81 years old and he is living with me. He is in good health except that he complains that he doesn't sleep very well. He falls asleep without any trouble, but then he has to get up several times during the night to urinate. Is this a serious condition, and do you have any suggestions? — Mike, Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Mike: Any troublesome condition such as you describe deserves exploration by a physician. However, studies have shown that healthy, elderly people excrete more urine during the night than they do by day. On the other hand, nocturnal urination in a group of healthy younger adults was found to be only about one-half of the amount excreted during the day.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write him at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Priest readies to conquer mountain

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Rev. Jim Browning calls it "the height of lunacy," and not many would disagree with his assessment. The 31-year-old priest is getting ready to scamper over a mountain.

It won't be just an ordinary jaunt, either. The inner-city priest will be traveling to New Mexico for a quadrathlon on Saturday — a race in which he'll bicycle 11 miles, run four miles, cross-country ski six miles and trek four miles in snowshoes up one side of a mountain and then do it all again down the other side.

"I thought this might be a good way to get rid of the February blahs," said Browning, associate pastor of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church in Memphis. "It's the height of lunacy, but it keeps me sane."

Browning said he needed a new challenge now that he's competed in three triathlons, in which contestants run, bike and swim.

Home for unwed mothers honors woman's memory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The two unmarried teen-agers playing with their babies and watching a television soap-opera didn't know Sasha Bruce's story, but they remembered her mother coming to visit their home for troubled girls.

"She was very attractive...very nice," said one of the teen-agers, referring to Evangeline Bruce, international hostess and socially prominent widow of former diplomat David K.E. Bruce.

Mrs. Bruce was active in setting up the house for teen-age mothers, and helping to organize five other programs for young people with problems in the nation's capital.

The house, where five young mothers now live, is part of Sasha Bruce Youthwork Inc., named for Mrs. Bruce's daughter who died under mysterious circumstances nine years ago at age 28.

"I would have had to give my daughter up for adoption," said Anne, one of the teen-agers whose real names could not be used because they are wards of the state.

The young mothers, who had been abused or neglected as children, learn how to feed, change and care for their babies in a comfortable, homey environment on the top two floors of a townhouse in the shadow of the Capitol. The girls also complete high school or attend classes in computer science or other vocations.

The house is a haven, a "nice big family," according to one girl who left home at 12 and said she survived on the streets by staying with friends, dealing drugs and working in a fast-food chicken restaurant.

Then she got pregnant and was allowed to come to the group house two months before her baby was born.

It was the family and friends of Alexandra Bruce — Sasha — who helped make this project and others a reality after she was shot at the family's Virginia estate in 1976.

The death first was classified as a suicide, but a subsequent investigation led to an indictment against the young woman's Greek husband, Marios Michaelides.

Michaelides, who lives in Greece, was never brought to trial because of a treaty that bars the extradition of Greek nationals to the United States.

Following Sasha's death, her family sought to lend its support to a program that helped troubled youth, a concern of Sasha's while she was a student at Radcliffe.

The Bruces settled on an outreach program for runaways that operated in the basement of a church in Washington's fashionable Georgetown section.

Israeli army heavy tanks convene near the southern Lebanon port city of Sidon Thursday, as the Israeli army continued preparations to pull out of the area

Israel to pull out of Lebanon by Monday

JERUSALEM (AP) — The commander of Israel's forces in Lebanon was quoted today as saying Israeli soldiers may reoccupy trouble spots in Lebanon for months at a time after a planned withdrawal is complete.

Maj. Gen. Ori Orr said in an interview with the Yediot Aharonot newspaper that Israel's post-withdrawal defense policy would be aggressive, relying on swift retaliation for attacks against Israeli settlements.

Israel is to complete by Monday the first stage of a three-phased pullout from south Lebanon, which it has occupied since a June 6, 1982 invasion.

The government has announced no timetable for the subsequent stages, but Orr was quoted as saying he expected the second pullback at the end of April, and the evacuation to be completed in September.

Orr predicted a resumption of terrorist attacks across the border after an initial period of quiet during which rival Lebanese factions will establish a balance of power in south Lebanon.

"Israeli troops probably will return to parts of Lebanon. It could be that they will return and then go. It could be that they will return for months," he was quoted as saying.

"There will be areas where we will not tolerate operations (against Israel), even if they are fewer than before the war. Expectations have been built up among the 100,000 Israelis (who live) along this border, and I think this obliges us to act more aggressively," he was quoted as saying.

The general did not say which areas he considered sensitive enough to require an extended Israeli presence.

But he was quoted as saying Israeli forces would not hesitate to launch preventative strikes at Sidon, the provincial capital of the south, 30 miles from the Israeli border.

"If in a few months terrorist boats leave Sidon to attack Rosh Haniqra (a settlement on Israel's northern border) or if I know that squads are organizing against the Israeli army, we will go back to Sidon," Orr said. "We will go back with the air force, by helicopter, by sea or by foot."

He warned that Shiite Moslems, "who have turned against us in the last two years," might continue terrorist operations against Israel once the evacuation was completed.

He accused Shiite leader Nabih Berri, the Lebanese Cabinet minister in charge of south Lebanon affairs, of "building his personal political position on our backs" by encouraging attacks on Israeli forces.

House of Representatives prepares for Soviet visitors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives is preparing to receive the highest-ranking official Soviet delegation to visit the United States in more than a decade.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., announced on Thursday that the 30-member parliamentary delegation, which arrives here on March 4, will be headed by Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky, who has been a full member of the ruling Soviet Politburo since 1971.

Shcherbitsky is also a member of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet and first secretary of the Ukraine.

Other than Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who makes fairly frequent visits to the United States, Shcherbitsky is the highest ranking Soviet official to visit here since 1973, O'Neill said.

Shcherbitsky is described in Moscow as a tough defender of communist ideology who nevertheless strongly supported the search for detente with Western nations waged by the late Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. He took part in negotiations with former President Nixon in 1974.

The visit comes immediately before the re-opening of U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in Geneva and O'Neill said: "It is apparent on all counts that everyone recognizes the unique aspects of a visit at this time and is prepared to cooperate." O'Neill said.

The speaker added that he hopes the visit will further attempts to improve U.S.-Soviet relations.

O'Neill invited the Soviets to visit the United States last fall. He is expected to visit Moscow himself in April.

Plans call for the delegation to meet with members of Congress and the executive branch. A meeting with Secretary of State George Shultz is described as a possibility.

House Democratic Whip Thomas S. Foley of Washington and Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., have been named to serve as chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the congressional host committee, O'Neill said.

The Soviets also are scheduled to visit Texas, California and New York, but a detailed itinerary was not yet available for the March 4-13 visit.

A 10-member American congressional delegation visited Moscow in January, the first such visit since the fall of 1982.

Players angered at stoppage of world chess tournament

By DAVID GOODMAN

MOSCOW (AP) — The World Chess Federation president stopped the 160-day-old championship match between title holder Anatoly Karpov and challenger Garri Kasparov today. But the two Soviet players angrily shouted that the marathon match should go on.

The decision to end the grueling match — the longest ever in modern chess history — was unprecedented in world championship chess competition.

The players interrupted a news conference called to announce the decision to end the contest, and Kasparov charged the chess federation was trying to deny him a possible victory.

Federation chief Florencio Campomanes told reporters he halted the match because it "has exhausted the physical if not the psychological resources not only of the players but of all those connected with the match."

He ordered the players to begin a new, 24-game match on Sept. 1. The winner will be declared world champion, he said.

But Karpov, who reportedly has been under medical treatment for exhaustion, burst into the auditorium where the news conference was being held and said:

"We can and want to continue the game. I do not agree with (the decision) to end it and to start from scratch. I think Mr. Kasparov will second this position."

Kasparov demanded to know why the match was called off and shouted, "They are trying to deprive me of my chances. ... I want to play with no timeouts and no intervals. Every delay Karpov's chances improve."

With members of the audience booing and heckling, Campomanes told the two men he hadn't been able to get in touch with them over the past few days.

Karpov suggested the press conference be interrupted for a private meeting.

As the three were leaving, Kasparov told a reporter, "A meeting with the FIDE president would be useless; I don't trust the president."

Compomanes denied his friendship with Karpov influenced his decision.

The 33-year-old Karpov, who has been world champion since 1975 and has already defended his title twice, was leading 5-3 in the contest and needed only one more victory to win.

But he had not won in 21 games and Kasparov had narrowed his initial 5-0 lead.

Kasparov, at 21, is the youngest world title challenger ever.

Before the angry exchange, Campomanes told reporters he had talked to Karpov and said, "Mr. Karpov is well and appealed to me to continue the match until the very end."

The rules of the World Federation of Chess, known as FIDE, are ambiguous, but give the president virtually unlimited powers over a match.

There is an appeals committee within FIDE — currently composed of two Soviets, a West German and a Spaniard — but Campomanes has the power to overrule any decisions they might make.

His decisions are subject to approval of the General Assembly, made up of the more than 100 member countries, whose next meeting is scheduled for late August in Graz, Austria.

The world title match began on Sept. 10, with chess experts predicting it would last only a few weeks. Karpov took an early lead, coming to within one victory of retaining his title.

But the competition fell into a prolonged series of draws that lasted through October and most of November, until Kasparov shattered Karpov's chances for a shutout with his first victory on Nov. 24.

The 49th game was to have been played tonight after being postponed twice. Campomanes said Karpov had asked for another postponement since the players "are not psychologically prepared today because of all this brouhaha."

Several sources interviewed by the AP said Karpov had taken ill in the past two weeks, with, as one source put it, "something like a psychological breakdown brought on by tiredness." They said he had been undergoing treatment as an outpatient at a downtown Moscow clinic where top Soviet officials are treated.

Karpov's representatives were said to have approached the Kasparov camp two weeks ago seeking agreement to end the match and replay it later .

Arkansas offers people a taste of everything

By SCOTT CHARTON

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Traveling salesman Joe Glass noticed something unique about Arkansas when he first crisscrossed the state pushing IBM products in the 1960s: "There was just such a variety of landscapes, something for everybody."

Nearly two decades later, the unspoiled Ozarks and sprawling Grand Prairie are Glass' selling points in attracting movie production companies to roll their cameras in Arkansas.

Glass, 42, was the first employee of the 5½-year-old Arkansas Motion Picture Office, a division of the state's industrial development agency. "Our annual budget for the first four years of operation of the offiice was $25,000. It's now up to $52,000," a relatively small outlay compared with film commission budgets that run upwards of $500,000 in Texas and Florida.

But Arkansas has managed to capture a few major productions in recent years, including the 1982 CBS miniseries "The Blue and the Gray" and, most recently, the Columbia Pictures release "A Soldier's Story," adapted from Charles Fuller's Pulitzer Prize-winning play.

The murder mystery, set in a small Louisiana town during the 1940s, was nominated for Academy Awards for Best Picture, Best Screen Adaptation, and co-star Adolph Caesar was nominated for Best Supporting Actor for his portrayal of a rigid Army officer.

"When we heard 'A Soldier's Story' was nominated for three Academy Awards, we were just overjoyed," Glass said in a recent interview. "We knew it was a quality production, and they sure benefited from our 'nickel-back' rebate."

The rebate, enacted by the Arkansas General Assembly, refunds five cents of every production dollar spent in Arkansas to the moviemaker. "It's been one of our best tools," Glass said. Producers of "A Soldier's Story" bot back $50,000 from the state, and the motion picture office bought advertisements in Hollywood trade magazines, proclaiming "Arkansas Pays Off."

"Some have estimated that production brought in $10 million, if you include the turnover of dollars, the multiplier," Glass said. Since the motion picture office's inception, Glass estimates $100 million has been circulated in the state economy by production companies.

"That sure isn't bad for the $300,000 or less that has been put into the office since 1979," he said. "We sure try to point that out at every turn. We are not getting as much of the film business as we would like. We haven't even pushed the commercial production business that much.

Passengers fine after ferry boat runs aground

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The Coast Guard said today that 218 passengers and crew aboard a ferry boat that ran aground off the coast of Puerto Rico were safely evacuated and the vessel was in no danger of sinking.

The passengers and crew were taken to Mona Island, a 30-square-mile uninhabited island lying midway between Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic, where the boat was headed.

U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Reginald Reese said the 375-foot ferry boat "A-Regina" went aground at about 1 a.m. a quarter of a mile southeast of Mona, which is off Puerto Rico's coast.

Reese said the vessel had a cracked hull and was spilling diesel fuel. The ferry carried 130,000 gallons of fuel.

The A-Regina was carrying 143 passengers and 75 crew members from Mayaguez, on Puerto Rico's west coast to San Pedro de Macoris on the southeast coast of the Dominican Republic. The passenger and automobile ferry service started up last November.

The owners of the Dominican Republic-based ferry could not immediately be reached for comment.

Puerto Rico's Natural Resources Department, which maintains a wildlife preserve and ranger station on Mona Island, sent personnel to the scene of the grounded vessel to check on the extent of the fuel spill. The Coast Guard Marine Safety Office was also en route to the scene to examine the situation.

Social Security recipients may win back benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security Administration is notifying most of the 200,000 people forced off disability rolls in the last four years that they may be able to win their benefits back under new eligibility rules.

And the agency, in notices going out today to 90,000 former recipients in 21 states, is telling them they can draw monthly benefits immediately while they press for reinstatement.

The same notice will go out to 45,000 people in New York state later this month, and the agency is readying notices for 40,000 others across the country, for a total of 175,000.

They were covered by class action lawsuits in 31 states that challenged Social Security's former practice of ordering people off the rolls even if there was no evidence that their condition had improved since they first won benefits.

Congress enacted disability reform legislation last October that bars cutoffs in most cases unless a person's condition did improve. It also ordered the government to give those covered by class action suits filed by Sept. 19, 1984, the opportunity to press for reinstatement with benefits while they appeal.

Acting Commissioner Martha McSteen, in an interview Thursday, said many may not know they were covered by the class action suits. Former recipients must visit or call their local Social Security office if they wish to press for reinstatement and draw interim benefits.

If they are still found ineligible, they will have to pay back the interim checks, she said, but if they are reinstated, they will receive retroactive benefits for the time since their cutoff.

The first notices are going out to 90,000 ex-beneficiaries in: Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, South Dakota and Washington. The notices to 45,000 New Yorkers will be mailed in the next two weeks.

Mrs. McSteen said the agency has identified the people affected in the nine other states — Colorado, Florida, Maine, Maryland, New Jersey, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and West Virginia, as well as a second group in Washington. The agency will sent out their notices out within two weeks once the courts remand those cases to Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler.

The agency is still drafting new regulations to define what constitutes a medical improvement. Mrs. McSteen said that by law, those new rules must be ready by April 8.

Mrs. Heckler imposed a moratorium on all disability reviews last June. The reviews will not start up again until Social Security has all its new rules in place, Mrs. McSteen said. The agency recently issued new definitions of what mental illnesses qualify for disability.

Congress ordered the reviews in 1980 and the following year the agency began reviewing all cases in which a person's disability was not considered permanent. Previously, it only reviewed cases in which improvements were expected.

More than a million cases were reviewed, and 470,000 persons — 45 percent — were ordered off the rolls. The cutoff rate was twice as high as expected, and Congress was flooded with complaints and horror stories about people who died or committed suicide after they were told they were fit to resume working.

Administrative law judges or federal courts reinstated the benefits of most of those who appealed, and the government lost several major class action lawsuits.

The agency has already sent notices to 6,500 of 7,291 people who had individual court cases pending on the medical improvement issue.

Specialists: Flu outbreak could be worst in four years

ATLANTA (AP) — Ten states have reported "widespread outbreaks" of the Philippines flu in what government scientists say could be the worst flu season in four years.

This season's predominant strain, which researchers call type A-H3N2, or the Philippines flu, is the same type that was most active in 1980-81. It typically hits all age groups, as it's doing this year, said Karl Kappus, a flu specialist with the national Centers for Disease Control.

"When a flu strain affects age groups including the older age group, and you have a lot of outbreaks, you expect to see an impact in illness and death," he said.

One way the CDC measures the seriousness of the flu season is by the proportion of the nation's deaths caused by influenza and pneumonia.

For the week ending Feb. 9, flu and pneumonia caused 6.9 percent of the deaths reported to the CDC from 121 cities. This time last year, that ratio was at 4.8 percent.

The pneumonia and flu ratio last topped 6 percent during the harsh flu season of 1980-81, and this season "certainly seems to be" the most severe since then, at least when measured by that indicator, Kappus said.

The CDC stresses that its statistics cannot show just how many people have the flu. But the current data, the agency said, mean "U.S. flu outbreaks are now having a significant impact on illness and death."

Ten states, plus the District of Columbia, last week reported "widespread outbreaks" involving areas with more than half their populations, the CDC said in its weekly report. Fourteen more states reported "regional" outbreaks.

The states with widespread outbreaks were Alabama, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia and Washington.

NATION IN BRIEF

Family of slain man has to pay union

CHICAGO (AP) — The family and businesses of slain mob associate Allen Dorfman will have to pay $6.4 million to the Teamsters health and pension fund under a settlement with the government approved by a federal judge.

Under the terms of the consent decree given final approval Thursday by U.S. District Judge Hubert Will, the Dorfman interests admit no wrongdong.

The settlement resolves lawsuits filed by the government charging that Dorfman skimmed tens of millions of dollars from the fund.

Under a related agreement awaiting Will's approval, the Teamsters fund would pay Dorfman's interests $2 million in exchange for a promise to drop all countersuits.

Dorfman was shot to death in January 1983.

Murder suspect held

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) — A 19-year-old man was held in lieu of $500,000 bond after his arrest in the murder of a woman whose naked, bloody body was found outside City Hall, officials said.

Arthur Henry Davis was arrested Thursday and was charged with murder and assault with intent to rape in the death of Patricia Richard, whose body was found Sunday in a concrete walkway not far from the city police station. Mrs. Richard had given birth to her first child 10 days before.

Truck rolls, loses money

MIAMI (AP) — Brink's Inc. employees spent the day picking up an estimated $100,000 in bills and coins scattered along the roadside after the driver of an armored car lost control of the vehicle and it rolled down an embankment.

Norman Mills, Brink's vice president for the Southeast said he did not yet no how much money was in the truck when it rolled off the highway, but Florida Highway Patrol Trooper Patrick Fanning estimated the amount at about $100,000.

Driver Gustavo Perez, 35, said "I don't know what happened — I lost control of the steering."

Suspect to be retried

MARKHAM, Ill. (AP) — A man accused of murdering his deformed newborn son by hurling the child to the delivery-room floor moments after birth faced another trial after jurors failed to reach a verdict in the case.

Cook Circuit Judge Dwight McKay declared a mistrial Thursday in the case of veterinarian Daniel McKay, 38, and scheduled a hearing Feb. 27 to determine a date for a second trial.

McKay's son was born in June 1983 with serious heart defects, a deformed nose, a cleft palate and claw-like hands. The defense contended that McKay was insane when he threw his son on the floor 29 minutes after the birth.

Lawyer: Client irrational

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — The attorney defending a man accused of slaying a priest and two other men in a Roman Catholic church told a judge he has had trouble preparing a defense because the man cannot communicate rationally.

Circuit Judge Peter Pappas on Thursday sent Bryan Stanley, 29, to a mental health center for tests to determine his competency to stand trial.

In court documents, defense attorney Michael Rosborough described Stanley's behavior as inconsistent.

Stanley was arrested last week after the slayings at St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church in Onolaska. He had protested to the priest about elementary school girls reading scripture during Mass and identified himself as Elijah.

Extradition ordered

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Gov. Booth Gardner said he ordered the extradition of a man who built a new life in Nebraska after walking out of a Washington prison 27 years ago because doing otherwise would set "a dubious example" for convicts.

Meanwhile, an aide to Nebraska Gov. Bob Kerry said Thursday that Kerry wants to meet Gardner to discuss the case of 61-year-old Mayland Groo, who is now known as Eugene Day in Alliance, Neb.
