Senate approves $135 billion tax relief package

■ Senators vote 80-18 in favor of bill that directs most benefits toward families with children, college-bound students and investors.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With a bipartisan flourish, the Senate approved $135 billion in tax cuts Friday, paving the way for final compromise talks between the White House and Republican leaders over the heftiest package of tax relief in more than a decade.

The vote was an overwhelming 80-18 in favor of the bill, which directs most of its benefits toward families with children, college-bound students and investors. The measure also expands eligibility for individual retirement accounts, and would raise the cigarette tax by 20 cents a pack to finance a new program of health care for uninsured children.

Within moments after the final roll call, lawmakers of both parties hailed their work in an appearance on the Capitol steps — a gathering that Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott called a "celebration of a bipartisan effort to provide tax relief to every taxpayer at every stage of life."

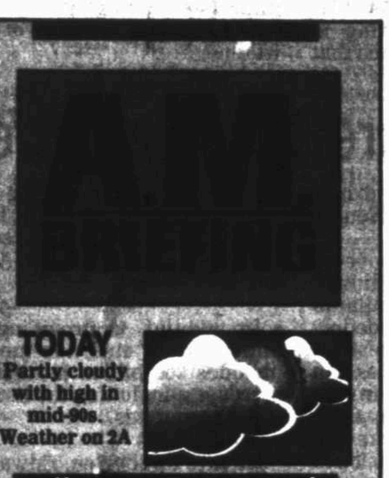

On final passage, a majority of both parties, 51 Republicans and 29 Democrats, lined up behind the measure. Only four Republicans and 14 Democrats were against it. The reach across party lines stood in marked contrast to Thursday's vote in the House, where Democrats battled against a different GOP measure as unfairly targeted toward the rich.

Republicans, in particular, also celebrated the end of a hectic, productive five days for their majority, and Lott told reporters, "I have put six months effort into this week." Both houses approved deficit-reduction measures earlier to reduce government spending by $140 billion over five years, and undertake the most comprehensive remodeling of the Medicare program since its creation in 1965.

In tandem with that measure, the tax-cut bill is designed to flesh out the landmark accord that President Clinton and the GOP leaders reached earlier this year to balance the budget within five years while reducing taxes.

At the White House, spokesman Mike McCurry positioned the president for the negotiations to come with GOP leaders. "The president wants a targeted tax cut and the House and Senate bills don't quite measure up

Gun control change

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court struck down a key part of the Brady gun-control law Friday as an infringement of state's rights, a decision that gun-owners rights groups hailed but that a large police group called just a "bump in the road." By a 5-4 vote, the court said the federal government cannot force state and local authorities to check the backgrounds of prospective gun buyers.

Mesa, P&P set meeting on merger

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Reports of intense pre-merger trading of Mesa Inc. stocks by HBK Offshore Fund Ltd., a company reported to be linked with Fort Worth investor Richard Rainwater, is not expected to stall or impact the $3 billion stock-swap between Mesa Inc. and Parker & Parsley Petroleum.

"We have been approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission to go forward on the merger and the approval meeting has been set for Aug. 7," said Lon Kile, spokesman for Parker & Parsley.

According to a copyrighted story in Platt's Oilgram News, a New York-based petroleum industry publication, questions have been raised by HBK Offshore Fund Ltd, a foreign-based "hedge" fund, which bought and sold heavily into Mesa common and preferred stocks about a month before the Mesa and P&P merger was announced.

According to Platt's Oilgram, HBK reported ownership of an effective 5.4 percent of Mesa's voting stock in mid-May, mainly in the form of convertible preferred shares. Its latest filing, June 12, showed a holding of 3.1 percent, again mainly convertible preferred. SEC rules require no further disclosure if HBK stays below 5 percent.

Included in the HBK transactions, according to a 13-D filing with the SEC, was an apparent "short" sale on March 25 of 1.7 million Mesa shares at $6. That was barely a week before the merger was announced, which sent Mesa stock tumbling to less than $4.75 a share.

On that same day, HBK bought almost 700,000 shares of Mesa convertible preferred. As part of the merger deal, the conversion rate on the stock was effectively boosted by 25 percent as a sweetener for preferred holders, said Jim Norman, a writer for Platt's Oilgram.

Norman said that the activity is problematic, because HBK appears to be intimately linked to Rainwater, Mesa's dominant shareholder and the prime instigator of the Mesa-P&P deal. Kile, however, said the trading had no bearing whatsoever on the proposed merger. "It is immaterial to the merger."

The Oilgram story notes that Rainwater Inc. is located on the same floor of a Fort Worth office building as HBK. The story further notes that Rainwater — the former Bass family financial advisor — is or was recently a general partner and investor in HBK, and that the firm handles Rainwater's own private stock trades. Norman said that when he called Rainwater Inc. for comment, the call was answered by Laurence Lebowitz, an official for HBK.

HBK are the initials of Harlan B. Korenvaes, a former Merrill Lynch arbitrage expert wooed to Fort Worth by Rainwater in the early 1990s to set up the fund, sources close to Rainwater's operation told Oilgram.

Sources in the story said that entertainment figures Steven Spielberg and David Geffen were investors at HBK, and that HBK may have capital as much as $800 million, which, as an offshore hedge fund, could be leveraged as much as six-fold.

Another HBK investor, according to Platt's Oilgram, is said to have been Kenneth Hersh, Rainwater's chief investment officer and a director of Mesa since Rainwater took effective control in a $1.2 billion bailout and recapitalization of the debt-laden company in April 1996.

MISD board to meet in closed session, discuss Aug. 14 unitary status hearing

From Staff Reports

Unitary status once again will be a topic of discussion for Midland Independent School District board of trustees when they meet in closed session Tuesday.

"We are going to be talking about the hearing and how we are going to handle it," MISD Trustee Martha Manulik said. "We have three new board members and we need to be brought up to speed."

The next hearing on the unitary status lawsuit is scheduled for Aug. 14 in San Antonio.

Midland Superintendent Joseph Baressi confirmed that the board would be meeting with their attorneys Tuesday to discuss the litigation.

Baressi said Friday that the lawsuit was proceeding as planned.

"I would assure you of this, if there is any change in our course of action it will be announced after Tuesday's meeting," Baressi said.

MISD is seeking freedom from the consent decree of 1976, a federal court-ordered desegregation plan.

The 1976 decree set up the cluster system of desegregation that groups schools into clusters and called for the busing of students.

MISD is currently operating under a 1995 Agreed Judgment plan, a court-supervised agreement whereby the district must make some changes in order to be granted unitary status.

As a part of the unitary status agreement, MISD was to undertake certain activities, including adver-

Two Midland law enforcement officials join state's D.A.R.E. board of trustees

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

Midland is one of the first cities in Texas to have double representation on the state's D.A.R.E. Board of Trustees.

Steve Skaggs, a deputy with the Midland County Sheriff's Department, and Belinda Boone, an officer with the Midland Police Department, have been appointed to top positions with the Texas D.A.R.E. Board of Trustees.

Skaggs has been with the Drug Awareness and Resistance Education program for seven years. Three years ago, he was elected sergeant at arms, and then climbed to the rank of a first vice president. At a recent meeting, he was elected to president of the state's board of directors.

He will be attending the national conference on July 8, which will be held in Washington, D.C.

Ms. Boone joined D.A.R.E. three years ago as an executive committee member. Later, she was promoted to the rank of secretary and is now first vice president.

She will be attending her first national conference in the year 2000 at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Though drug abuse, peer pressure and gangs are all serious problems, the program's officers do not take an aggressive approach with youngsters.

"A lot of the times, students only talk to a police officer when they are in trouble or when there is a problem," Ms. Boone said. "We

MERGER: Mesa, Parker & Parsley meeting set for Aug. 7

(From 1A)

Oilgram notes that Rainwater now is the sole general partner and half owner of DNR-Mesa Holdings LP, which owns some 62 million shares of preferred stock convertible into 34 percent control of Mesa, and that Hersh is also a principal in Natural Gas Partners, another Rainwater-funded energy investment group with offices on the same floor as Rainwater Inc. and HBK.

NGP has significant equity stakes in a number of smaller energy companies, including HS Resources, Offshore Energy Development and Titan Exploration of Midland.

According to Platt's, the sheer volume of trading raises questions, and, sources say, could have the effect of drawing other investors into the stock, attracted by the apparent liquidity. On April 30, for example, HBK's 13-D shows its funds bought 224,000 common shares and sold 612,000, or almost half the reported trading volume that day.

If the intent of such trading was to revive Mesa's share price, Norman said, it appears to have had some effect. Since the initial shock to Mesa's stock after the P&P deal was announced, Mesa shares crept upward again to about $5.50 a share. At a swap ratio of 7-to-1, that has boosted the apparent value of P&P shares to $38.50.

According to sources, one provision of the Mesa-Parker & Parsley merger was that the Mesa stock be at $5 or above, otherwise either party could back out of the deal.

"We don't think the trading had any impact on the stock price of either Mesa or Parker & Parsley," Kile said. He said the Friday closing price for the stocks were $5.69 for Mesa and $35.69 for Parker & Parsley. "Our stock is up about 20 percent since we announced the merger."

The Platt's story reported that P&P CEO Scott Sheffield was sharply critical of an April 16 report by Petroleum Research Group analyst Michael Spohn, who concluded the fall in Mesa's stock after the deal wiped out any merger premium for P&P holders. Kile said Parker & Parsley disagreed with the report because they thought it missed some key elements. Kile told Platt's that P&P was unaware of the HBK trading or any link to Rainwater interests. Mesa's investor relations department likewise said it was unaware of HBK's activities beyond the 13-D filings.

The Mesa-P&P merger requires approval by a majority of P&P shareholders and three majorities of Mesa holders: common, two issues of preferred (jointly), and both common and preferred (jointly). Rainwater's DNR-Mesa already controls an apparent majority of Mesa's preferred shares, but may not have enough votes to clearly assure overall passage, according to the Platt's story.

David Haley, president of HBK Investment LP, responding to Platt's inquiry, simply stated that HBK is not controlled by Rainwater, and that, "Our public filings speak for themselves." He refused to disclose who HBK's owners are or to explain its trading activities, which on many days, filings show, involved the purchase and sale of large amounts of Mesa securities at the same price, according to the Platt story.

If the seemingly close relations of the companies and the heavy pre-merger trading create questions, as in the Platt's Oilgram News reports, one energy analyst said he doesn't believe Richard Rainwater would have intentionally engaged in any improper trading. He said Rainwater was too smart and had too much experience to engage in improper trades.

"He is an expert in sophisticated takeover deals. It could have been miscommunication, or a technical violation but I would be astonished to know that any improper trading, if there was any, was a direct action of Rainwater."

APPROVE: Centerpiece of bill is tax credit for children

at this point," he told reporters. McCurry said that if the administration's efforts to reshape the legislation fail, "The president will veto legislation that blows a hole in the deficit."

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., said the two sides would come together, predicting, "Taxes will be cut and the budget of America will be balanced."

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, in a bow to political realities, said he was ready to negotiate with the White House. "How do you get it signed otherwise? We don't have a veto override," said the top GOP leader, attending a fund-raiser in Birmingham, Ala.

The bipartisan support for the Senate tax measure was the fruit of cooperation within the Finance Committee, where Sen. William Roth, the Delaware Republican who is chairman, showed a willingness to compromise with Democrats.

Roth placed his stamp on the measure in other ways, including several provisions to create or expand incentives for tax-deferred individual savings accounts to be used for retirement or educational expenses.

The centerpiece of the bill was a tax credit for children, although it differed significantly in detail from the provision in the House measure.

The Senate bill includes a $500-per-child credit for children under age 17, but to qualify, parents with children age 13-16 must deposit the funds into an education savings account similar to an Individual Retirement Account.

The measure also extends the credit to some working poor families who would be denied benefits under the House measure. Efforts by Sen. James Jeffords, R-Vt., and Mary Landrieu, D-La., to make it fully refundable, or available to all wage-earners regardless of their tax liability, were rejected in a long day of voting on the Senate floor.

Also in the bill is a series of education tax breaks, including a Hope scholarship credit similar to Clinton's proposal, and tax deductions for student loan interest.

The legislation includes an across-the-board reduction in capital-gains tax rates, which apply to the profits on sales of stocks and other assets. Unlike a provision in the House bill that has drawn a veto threat from the White House, the Senate measure would not exempt from tax capital gains that are caused solely by inflation.

The bill includes relief from estate taxes, with particular attention to family-owned farms and businesses, and would expand current rules for Individual Retirement Accounts to make them more widely available.

As is often the case, the measure also includes a grab bag of provisions designed for one narrow interest or another. Thus, there were provisions relating to tax treatment of culled cows, subsistence whaling in Northern Alaska and hard cider.

In addition to providing $135 billion in tax cuts, the measure includes $66 billion in offsetting increases, including the increase in tobacco taxes.

An attempt by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to increase the 20 cent-per-pack provision by an additional 23 cents sparked one of the few shows of emotion in the Senate during the day. Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, accused the Clinton administration of violating the balanced-budget accord by throwing its support behind Kennedy's proposal Thursday night, and said if it happened again he couldn't guarantee he would feel bound by the same accord.

get to know them at a personal level. We're more like their friends."

D.A.R.E. officers visit each fourth- and sixth-grade class once a week. In the classroom, officers give lessons and materials on drug and gang awareness. The curriculum they use was developed by a panel of teachers in Los Angeles.

The teachings are enhanced by anecdotal messages the officers pass on to the pupils.

"We have more credibility because we've seen the effects of drugs and violence," Skaggs said. "When we go into the classroom, students know we're not making things up. We use the negative to increase the positive."

In addition, the program does more than educate children about existing dangers. It provides an avenue for communication between the youth and law enforcement.

"They come to us for advice or direction," Ms. Boone said. "Sometimes they need to talk to us about child abuse or family disturbances. Sometimes they're just curious about the law and want to find out more about it."

"But a lot of the time, the students want to tell us about a friend who has a problem," she added. "At that point, they know we love them, and just want to help them and be there for them."

Recently, the D.A.R.E. program received criticism from groups that support marijuana legalization and claim the program is a failure because drug use among teens increased.

"The reason they are focused on us is because we have something successful here," Skaggs said. "If we keep children off drugs, it decreases the chance of them being legalized."

Skaggs added that at the same time Seattle dropped its D.A.R.E. program, 300 other cities in the United States were taking steps to initiate one of their own.

In a poll that D.A.R.E. officers conducted in local schools, students were asked if they think marijuana should be legalized.

"Ninety-nine percent of them said they wouldn't because of the health hazards," Ms. Boone said. "I think it shows great insight on their behalf."

Jarrell begins to see signs of recovery from tornado

JARRELL (AP) — Residents are still waiting for insurance claims to be awarded, loan checks to be approved, cement slabs to be inspected, and property lines to be identified.

But signs of recovery are everywhere in Jarrell, where last month a monstrous tornado flattened dozens of homes and killed 27 people.

Esther and Eddie Tschoerner are awaiting blueprints to begin rebuilding their home, which was obliterated by the May 27 twister.

"I don't know how to thank the people enough. Words are all we have to say, and we'll be thanking them for the rest of our lives," Mrs. Tschoerner said of the outpouring of help.

People are returning to their land. Telephone lines and fences are being reconstructed.

"We are making some progress, but it's still in the beginning stages of recovery," said Rev. Max Johnson, a pastor of the First Baptist Church.

Monetary support for the town, which sustained $20 million in damage, has passed the $1.3 million mark. Dallas Cowboy Bill Bates on Thursday presented a check for $150,000 — the single largest donation.

While repairs are under way, no one has actually started to rebuild, said the Tschoerners' son, Clifford Tschoerner Sr., deputy chief of the Jarrell Volunteer Fire Department and one of eight members of the Jarrell Recovery Board.

Debby LaFrance, 40, and her daughter Kristin, 9, remain at Scott & White Memorial Hospital in Temple and will require months of physical rehabilitation.

"I plan to go back out here. We will probably try to rebuild the house," Mrs. LaFrance told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in a telephone interview.

"I like the schools out there, and my daughter has her friends there. I know it will be hard to go back," said Mrs. LaFrance, whose husband, Billy, died in the tornado.

James and Virginia Davidson say they are struggling with not owning anything. Even their mobile home is on loan for six months.

Davidson said he has grown accustomed to wearing underwear that is the wrong size.

"It's like you're borrowing someone else's things. You don't own it. You didn't choose it. You didn't buy it," Mrs. Davidson said.

"I've got shoes that aren't the right size. So I think, 'OK, with those I'll wear a thin pair of socks and with these others I can wear three thick pairs. Then they'll fit.'"

With the help of thousands of volunteers, residents of Double Creeks Estates, the subdivision that was leveled by the storm, have cleared most of the debris.

So far, 29 residents have been approved for $1.7 million in disaster loans through the Small Business Administration, said Jim Atkins of the agency. Of those loans, 24 have been awarded to homeowners, he told the Temple Daily Telegram.

Baltimore inmate changes mind on how to die

BALTIMORE (AP) — Given a choice of how to die, convicted killer Flint Gregory Hunt picked the gas chamber over lethal injection to prove his point about the brutality of the death penalty.

"I want people to have nightmares and dreams, and suffer like I suffer," he said at the time.

As his execution drew near, however, he changed his mind. He was worried about causing pain for his mother, his new wife and his son, his lawyer said.

On Friday — after both the state and a judge said it was too late to change his mind — the state's highest court said he can die by injection.

Hunt, 37, is scheduled to die sometime between Monday and Friday for the 1985 murder of policeman Vincent Adolfo. Hunt was stopped in a stolen car and shot the officer in a Baltimore alley.

The gas chamber was last used in the United States in 1994, in North Carolina. Maryland last executed someone by gas in 1961, and since then it has put only one other person to death, three years ago, by injection.

Since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed capital punishment to resume in 1976, only 10 of the 398 executions nationwide have been by gas.

Back in 1994, Hunt was given a choice between the gas chamber and injection because Maryland changed its method of execution to injection while he was on death row.

Cyanide gas "is basically a suffocation that causes death. You're deprived of oxygen. It takes a number of minutes. It's not instantaneous by any means. It's a rather painful strangulation-type death," said Richard Dieter of the nonprofit Death Penalty Information Center in Washington.

Lethal injection renders the condemned unconscious before it kills.

Former spy's tale of torture in Peru has officials on defensive

By David Koop
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — She knew all too well what went on in the basement of Peru's "Little Pentagon." But as an government intelligence agent, Leonor La Rosa had no reason to fear the beatings, burnings and other tortures that took place there.

No reason, that is, until the day fellow agents detained her and led her down those stairs herself.

Unlike another detained agent who was dismembered, La Rosa survived days of imprisonment and torture by the government, and now she is talking. Her tale, confirmed by a military court, has put President Alberto Fujimori's administration on the defensive and given new weight to charges of human rights abuses by his soldiers and intelligence services.

La Rosa, 36, remains in a hospital bed two months after her release from detention, her spine damaged by beatings that make standing, sitting or even touching her head difficult.

"I always knew the cells were used for the interrogation of criminal terrorists. But I never thought they would use them against us," she said.

In all, La Rosa spent 12 years as an agent with Peru's intelligence services, the army's partner in a successful crackdown against vicious leftist guerrilla groups in the 1980s and early 1990s.

La Rosa's says she used to infiltrate student marches and union meetings, trailing suspected guerrillas and investigating members of the armed services.

Her troubles began in mid-January, when her superiors started to suspect her of telling a newspaper about military plans to intimidate and assassinate opposition activists and journalists.

"One day I arrived at work and everybody was silent and staring at me," she said.

Intelligence officers took her into custody Jan. 15, and led her down to the basement of army headquarters — known as the "Little Pentagon" for its shape. She heard a scream from the dank cells, and grew deeply afraid.

Her colleagues accused her of leaking secrets, which she denied.

They jolted her with electricity, leaving her hands and feet burned and scarred. Grabbing her by the hair, they bashed her head again and again into walls and a table, injuring her spinal cord.

"They beat me with their fists, covering me with cushions so as not to leave bruises," she said.

On Feb. 17, she was taken to a military hospital, bleeding from her nose and vagina from the beatings.

She stayed silent about the torture until a fellow agent visited her in the hospital, and told La Rosa about another female coworker who had been detained on suspicion of leaking secrets.

Mariela Barreto — what was left of her — was found dead near a highway outside Lima in late March. Her head and hands had been hacked off, her spine snapped in half. Barreto's killers have not been identified.

"It was then I understood that if I kept quiet, I would be the next victim," La Rosa said.

La Rosa told her account to a television station on April 6, then to opposition congressmen.

In addition to her allegations of torture — a tactic that La Rosa said her own experience has turned her against — La Rosa has publicly disputed military claims that military death squads have been disbanded.

La Rosa says she regularly saw the death squad's members at army intelligence headquarters. "They continue in activity, continue in their normal functions. They go in and out as if it's their home," she said.

Earth Summit follow-up ends without 'political statement'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The spirit of the 1992 Rio Earth Summit came down to Earth here Friday.

The world's nations were ending their five-year follow-up summit with a warning: Our oceans, our forests, the planet's very atmospheric shell are still in trouble. And doing better will take a lot more money.

But the summit chairman said "very serious divisions" over what to do about these problems kept representatives of 170 nations from agreeing on a keynote "political statement" to conclude the conference.

Instead, a brief, generally worded preamble was going to be attached to a more detailed "program of action," to be approved by consensus late Friday.

The biggest division was between the industrial world and Third World nations upset over a lack of financial help for development, according to the chairman, Razali Ismail of Malaysia, president of the U.N. General Assembly.

"A sense of parochialism has spread over the developed world that has affected the willingness of those countries to make funds available," Razali said.

Another key argument focused on what new steps to take to combat global warming — an area where oil states were resisting specific actions to cut back global use of "greenhouse gas" fuels.

The Saudi Arabian delegate complained that a seeming environmental good could be an economic disaster for some.

The rest of the world "should take into consideration the developing countries, which depend on the production and export of fossil fuels," Prince Turki bin Mohamed bin Saud al-Kabir told the main summit session.

The five-day New York conference, attracting more than 3,000 delegates and environmental and development activists, was convened to review progress since the historic Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro.

In Rio, governments endorsed policies of "sustainable development" — economic growth for all nations, with environmental protection.

The 200,000-word program adopted at Rio recommended hundreds of steps governments should take to protect forests, clean up water, reverse atmospheric pollution, alleviate poverty and address many other problem areas.

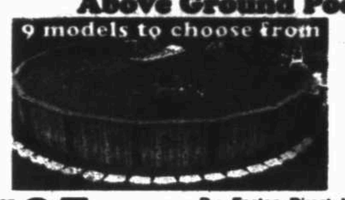

Despite that blueprint, this week's summit concludes that overall trends "are worse today than they were in 1992." Providing "adequate and predictable financial resources" to developing countries is critical, it said.

The New York negotiators, however, avoided major new financial commitments and recommended few new remedies for specific environmental ills.

Activists were deeply disappointed.

"It's a betrayal of Rio," said Gordon Shepherd of the Worldwide Fund for Nature. "People who are trying to implement (the Rio plan) locally came here for support and they're getting none whatever."

High court refuses to consider Mowbray case

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court Friday refused to review a state appeals court decision setting aside the 1988 murder conviction of Susie Mowbray, who was freed from prison last month pending a new trial.

Without comment, the court denied a petition from Cameron County prosecutors requesting that the Texas court's decision be reviewed and reversed.

Mrs. Mowbray, who was imprisoned nine years for killing her husband even though she insists he committed suicide, called the decision "another weight off my shoulders."

"This reaffirms what we've been saying all along: I'm innocent," Mrs. Mowbray said in a telephone interview from Dallas, where she has been living since being released on bond last month pending a new trial.

Last December, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals set aside Mrs. Mowbray's conviction, finding prosecutors suppressed evidence supporting her contention that Bill Mowbray shot himself on Sept. 16, 1987, at their home outside of Brownsville.

The court ruled that prosecutors withheld an expert's report concluding Mowbray's death was more likely a suicide because no blood was found on his wife's nightgown. The expert never testified.

In their appeal to the Supreme Court, prosecutors argued that the evidence was not suppressed because it was turned over to defense attorneys 10 days before trial.

"At best, the only issue that could possibly be involved is one of delayed disclosure," prosecutors stated in their appeal.

They also argued that the lower court erred because it failed to consider whether Mrs. Mowbray's defense was prejudiced by the delay.

Prosecutors did not immediately return a telephone message from The Associated Press. However, they have said they would retry Mrs. Mowbray if the Supreme Court rejected their appeal. An Oct. 13 trial date has been set.

But Mrs. Mowbray's attorney, Robert Ford, said he's working to ensure that the case never again is heard by a jury.

He plans to file a pretrial petition arguing that prosecutors should be barred from retrying Mrs. Mowbray because the law holds that a person cannot be tried twice for the same crime.

Mrs. Mowbray, meanwhile, said she is adjusting to life outside of prison. Since her May 16 release, she said she has been spending time with her family, having dental work done and learning how to drive again.

"Life is good," said the 49-year-old Mowbray. "Every day people say 'How are you doing?' and I say, 'Life is good.'"

Nature's Fury

Heat Wave
When it reaches 105º or higher and doesn't fall below 80º at night for two days or longer.
THESE PEOPLE NEED TO BE ESPECIALLY CAUTIOUS: Elderly, Small Children, Chronic Invalids, Overweight People or those who drink alcohol excessively.
SELF DEFENSE
• Heat Cramps-Painful spasms in the legs and abdomen, and heavy sweating.
What to do: Gently massage muscle and get to a cool dry place.

• Heat Exhaustion-Heavy sweating with weakness. Skin is cold, pale & clammy.
Fainting and vomiting are possible.

• Heat Stroke-Sometimes called sun stroke-106º or more temperature, hot, dry skin, rapid pulse, possible unconsciousness.
What to do: Get medical help immediately, heat Stroke can be fatal.
Victims should be moved to a cool area, but not given fluids.

What To Do In A Heat Wave:
• Dress in lightweight, light colored clothes.
• Wear a hat outdoors.
• Drink plenty of fluids (non-alcoholic)
• Do not take salt tablets without consulting a doctor.
• Spend as much time as possible in air conditioned places.

THUNDERSTORMS
A typical storm only lasts 30 minutes, but can last up to several hours. Thunderstorms are dangerous because they produce lightening, which is the second leading cause of weather deaths in the U.S. behind floods.

SELF DEFENSE
• Stay indoors. If you cannot, stay away from trees and power lines.
• Stay away form electrical appliances.
• Being in a car is better than being outside but do not touch any metal parts of the car and roll up the windows.

HAIL
Balls of ice that fall from a thunderstorm. Sometimes a burst of hail falls minutes or seconds before a tornado hit. It could be a warning to move into a small room, such as a bathroom, or get under a table.

TORNADOES
Can produce winds of 300 mph and rip apart even well built buildings, but these tornadoes are rare. More common tornadoes are dangerous to mobile homes and cars. A supercell tornado can be a mile wide and carve a path of destruction 200 miles long.

Some signs of tornadoes are:
• Dark often greenish sky
• "Wall Cloud" hanging form the bottom of a larger cloud.
• Large Hail
• A loud roar, often described as sounding like a freight train.

WHAT TO DO BEFORE A STORM
• Develop a tornado plan for your home, work place or school.
• Know the county or parish you're in and have a map that will help you follow reports of storm movements.
• Have a weather radio with a tone alert.
• Follow weather reports to know when severe thunderstorms are possible and when tornado watches, which means conditions are right for tornadoes are issued.

WHAT TO DO WHEN A STORM THREATENS
• In a home or building, move to a safe area such as a basement or to an inside room such as a bathroom or closet.
• Stay away from windows.
• Don't try to outrun a tornado in a car, instead, leave the car and find shelter, even if only in a ditch or under a bridge.
• Get out of a mobile home. Find safe shelter.

Many object to China's planned military display

HONG KONG (AP) — Overriding British protests, China will ferry 4,000 troops into Hong Kong on ships, helicopters and armored vehicles six hours after regaining sovereignty over the territory.

While the incoming government said it "welcomed the news," outgoing Gov. Chris Patten sharply objected to 21 armored troop carriers entering urban areas of Hong Kong after the midnight Monday handover.

China has the right to send in its army, Patten told reporters, but the method it had chosen would send "a very bad signal to Hong Kong and the rest of the world."

The deployment of the People's Liberation Army is one of the most sensitive issues of the historic change of sovereignty because the army is widely distrusted here as the enforcer of communism and destroyer of the 1989 democracy movement in Beijing.

The news came as Hong Kong's 6.3 million people headed into a five-day holiday surrounding the handover. The stock market closed for the last time under British rule with the main indicator at a record high Friday, a show of investor confidence ahead of China's takeover.

A territory-wide array of carnivals, fireworks displays and concerts awaited, and the mood seemed generally buoyant.

Margaret Thatcher, who signed the 1984 handover deal as Britain's prime minister, flew in Friday for the ceremony. Prince Charles and U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright were arriving Saturday, and British Prime Minister Tony Blair was due Monday.

Charles's arrival gives the British one more chance for military pomp, with a 21-gun naval salute to the prince.

Britain acknowledges China's right to put its troops in Hong Kong as a symbol of its sovereignty but says it should be a low-key affair.

Britain doggedly resisted a Chinese demand to deploy even before the handover, finally yielding and allowing 509 lightly armed troops to move in three hours before the handover.

China insists its garrison will be no bigger than Britain's. Still, it has to overcome an image problem — Hong Kong people see the British force as benign and unobtrusive and the Chinese army as highhanded and unfriendly.

Younger people have probably never even seen a real armored vehicle except on TV in 1989 when the Chinese army was crushing the democracy rallies in Beijing.

A statement from the office of Tung Cheehwa, Hong Kong's China-approved future leader, said land forces would cross the border at three points in 21 armored cars and 400 other vehicles.

Key Serbian suspect arrested

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A principal suspect in the 1991 massacre of more than 200 people in the Croatian city of Vukovar was arrested Friday by the international war crimes tribunal.

Slavko Dokmanovic, 47, the Serb mayor of Vukovar, was taken into custody in the eastern Slavonia region of Croatia and was taken to the war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, the United Nations said

This is the first time U.N. officials have arrested a suspect in the former Yugoslavia. U.N. administrators in eastern Slavonia have law enforcement powers, while NATO troops in Bosnia have not.

Dokmanovic was indicted by the tribunal March 26, 1996, for his role in a November 1991 incident in which Serb paramilitary forces took about 260 men from the hospital in Vukovar — a city seized by Serbs in Croatia's 1991 war — transported them to Ovcara and allegedly shot them.

Investigators exhumed a mass grave near Ovcara in 1996 and recovered more than 200 bodies, the U.N. said.

Dokmanovic's indictment was issued secretly and no details of the charges against him were immediately available.

In Washington, President Clinton welcomed the arrest.

Yeltsin denies ex-bodyguard's claims he attempted suicide

Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin on Friday denied claims by his former top bodyguard that the Russian leader suffers from chronic depression and has tried several times to kill himself.

"It is senseless to enter into polemics with a man blinded by grudge and moved in his attitude to the president only by the feeling of revenge," said a statement from Yeltsin's office.

Alexander Korzhakov was quoted Friday as saying Yeltsin's suicide attempts stopped only after he suffered his first major heart attack in 1995.

Korzhakov was Yeltsin's top bodyguard and a close confidant for nearly 11 years before being fired in a bitter Kremlin power struggle last year. The two men have feuded ever since.

Korzhakov told The Guardian newspaper in London that Yeltsin attempted suicide in 1990 by jumping off a bridge into the Moscow river, and tried again two years later by locking himself in his sauna.

The newspaper said Korzhakov declined to go into detail about either case, and noted that critics would likely accuse him of drumming up publicity for a forthcoming book.

Yeltsin had claimed the first incident was an attempt on his life by the KGB, the Soviet secret service, but many at the time thought it was because he was drunk, the paper said.

Yeltsin described the second incident in his book, "The View from the Kremlin," saying laconically that he suffered from dark thoughts. The Guardian said no one at the time realized the significance of the phrase.

Yeltsin's former chief of staff, Sergei Filatov, dismissed Korzhakov's claims that Yeltsin was prone to depression.

Congo's new regime under fire for autocratic ways

KINSHASA, Congo (AP)— Anti-government rallies broken up with force. An opposition leader dragged from his home and detained. Unpaid soldiers on looting sprees.

Supporters of President Laurent Kabila, who overthrew dictator Mobutu Sese Seko last month, say he needs time to establish a new order. But others question whether his newly renamed Democratic Republic of Congo is headed toward democracy at all.

"These methods hark back to the era of Mobutu's police. I call on all supporters to battle all kinds of dictatorship," Etienne Tshisekedi, the main opposition leader in the country once known as Zaire, told supporters Friday after he was freed from detention.

Kabila's soldiers broke down Tshisekedi's bedroom door and hustled him and his family away Thursday night, hours after he gave a political speech.

Tshisekedi, who was jailed repeatedly by Mobutu, now accuses Kabila of simply replacing Mobutu's tyranny with another. Other opposition leaders who once rallied behind Kabila's Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Congo-Zaire now say they are appalled by his government's performance.

Soldiers have been accused of looting sprees in several cities, including Uvira, 1,000 miles east of Kinshasa. Trouble there peaked last month, when soldiers allegedly fired into a crowd of unarmed demonstrators in the city, killing up to 275 people by residents' accounts.

With those exceptions, ordinary citizens outside of politics generally have been left alone by the new regime.

But three developments — the arrest of Tshisekedi, accusations that Kabila's men are massacring Rwandan refugees and Kabila's banning of political parties — have confirmed the worst fears of Alafuele Kalala, president of a Washington-based Congo opposition group, Rally for a New Society.

Kalala said he supported the rebellion at first because he came to the conclusion several years ago that Mobutu was not going to leave peacefully. However, by January, he realized that Kabila's Alliance had no intention of developing a democracy.

Clashes begin in Hebron after five days of quiet

HEBRON, West Bank (AP) — Palestinian rioters pelted Israeli soldiers with stones, firebombs and pipe bombs Friday, resuming clashes in this divided city after a week of tense quiet.

Protesters burned Israeli flags, hurled bottles filled with acid and rolled burning tires toward soldiers who responded with rubber bullets, wounding seven demonstrators. One Israeli soldier was slightly injured from stones.

A pipe bomb destroyed parts of a wall and blew out the rear window of a parked car.

Soldiers in riot gear took positions on rooftops to get better aim at the demonstrators, breaking into a Palestinian elementary school at one point to get access to the roof.

Most of the stone throwers were young teen-agers, who carried buckets of stones to reinforce their comrades in the front lines. Some shouted "Long live Qassam," a reference to the military wing of the Muslim militant group Izzedine al Qassam, and carried green Hamas flags.

Dozens of spectators watched the clashes, cheering whenever a rock or firebomb hit near an Israeli soldier.

There have been riots in Hebron and other Palestinian towns since March, when Israel began construction of a Jewish neighborhood in east Jerusalem, the sector claimed by the Palestinians as a future capital.

In the Gaza Strip, 200 Palestinian protesters gathered near the Jewish settlement of Morag, where Palestinians claim Israel has expropriated land.

Government orders people to evacuate around volcano

SALEM, Montserrat (AP) — Flying over villages of smoldering debris, rescue workers searched Friday for victims killed when Montserrat's Soufriere Hills volcano erupted, gushing rock, ash and gas hot enough to melt steel girders.

Six bodies were recovered Thursday but 13 people were still missing after Wednesday's eruption. Nine of the missing are presumed dead after they became caught in fast-moving flows of super-heated debris, an official in the governor's office said.

The government ordered 1,500 more people to evacuate Friday after scientists warned of more eruptions of rock, ash and gas — heated to 930 degrees and hurtling down the mountain at 200 mph.

Known as pyroclastic flows, the material forms rivers that obliterate everything in their path. Wednesday's eruption was the worst since the volcano on this tiny British colony burst to life in 1995.

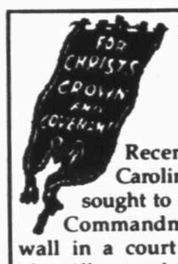

Rescuers in helicopters hovered Friday over a smoldering field of ash that was once dotted with concrete homes supported by steel girders. In other villages, only charred walls remained, and a steel-and-concrete bridge over a ravine had completely disappeared.

Friday's evacuation, from western Corkhill and Foxes Bay, created another headache for officials trying to find room in already overcrowded shelters.

"The shelters are full, but they'll just have to squeeze more in," said Phil Ellis, staff officer to the governor.

People cannot leave the island, since the airport was closed Wednesday after one river of debris came dangerously close to Montserrat's only runway. Boats are also not sailing because sailors fear the volcano could cause a tidal wave.

First Reformed Presbyterian Church of Midland

Recently in North Carolina the A.C.L.U. sought to remove the Ten Commandments from a wall in a court building. The plaintiff wanted to sandblast the commandments from the wall. I think that it is safe to say that most Christians are appalled at this action. There is something that is even sadder and that is that a large portion of the visible church have removed the commandments from the walls of their hearts. This has been accomplished in at least two ways. The first way is by teaching that the Old Testament is not applicable today. The second way is to call anyone who endeavors to keep His law a LEGALIST. A prime example of this is the Sabbath issue. If you won't go out to eat or shop on Sunday you are a legalist. We keep the law to glorify God not to earn a place in heaven. We have a place in heaven because we have a personal relationship with Jesus Christ.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ Secret weapons fund denied

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon denied a lawmaker's charge Friday that it had stashed away a $20 billion secret fund for future weapons purchases.

Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., a senior member of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee, produced a summary sheet showing a Pentagon "modernization reserve" fund totaling $20 billion and set aside for use from 2000 to 2003.

"This account is highly unusual, unlike any other contained in prior budget submissions to Congress," said Dicks, who has served for 20 years on the defense spending panel. He said it "proves that the Pentagon was deceiving Congress about the availability of out-year funding in its budget."

Senior Pentagon officials, however, had briefed lawmakers and reporters about the modernization fund earlier this year when President Clinton sent his defense budget proposal to Capitol Hill. The fund was described in a separate chart detailing how anticipated savings from military base closings would be put toward new weapons.

■ Smithsonian exhibits sediment

WASHINGTON — A 6-foot strip of ocean sediment, believed to support the theory that a huge asteroid strike pushed dinosaurs into extinction 65 million years ago, went on display Friday at the Smithsonian.

The core sample, unearthed six months ago about 350 miles east of St. Augustine, Fla., provides a unique window into one of the most pivotal moments in natural history, said Brian Huber, a micropaleontologist at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Natural History.

"This cataclysm profoundly changed the course of evolution," Huber said. "If it hadn't happened, in all likelihood we wouldn't be here today."

The mostly chalky white strip can be viewed as a natural timeline. It is interrupted by several inches of grayish-green sediment, which marks where debris from the blast came back to Earth after being forced into the atmosphere by the collision, Huber said.

After a few inches of grayish-green-colored sediment, a rusty band in the sediment strip indicates where metals from the asteroid had descended from the atmosphere, Huber added.

Many scientists believe an asteroid six to 12 miles in diameter crashed to Earth forming a crater 50 to 180 miles wide.

■ Simpson returns to court

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Likening the Heisman Trophy to "wallpaper," O.J. Simpson said Friday he really didn't pay attention to it until one day he realized it was gone.

Simpson, back in court to answer questions from lawyers seeking to collect a $33.5 million wrongful-death judgment, was mobbed during a break in the closed-door proceedings by reporters with questions of their own.

Most wanted to know what happened to the trophy that was missing when deputies seized his property earlier this year, but mysteriously turned up last week.

"I have pictures in my house that I don't look at all the time. It's like wallpaper in the house. One day the Heisman wasn't there," Simpson said, repeating his belief that the trophy and other items were taken from his home and placed in a trust for his children.

The trophy, signifying Simpson as college football's most valuable player in 1968, was brought to the courthouse in a plain cardboard box marked "Heisman."

A plaintiff's lawyer said Thursday that Simpson's business attorney claims the trophy turned up at the home of a sports memorabilia agent who had represented Simpson in the past.

Accuser takes stand against top enlisted man

■ Woman says Sergeant Major Gene McKinney made repeated advances toward her.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Army's top enlisted man repeatedly referred to his powerful position and his ability to "make things happen" during his ardent pursuit of a female sergeant, she testified Friday.

Sgt. Christine Petrow told an Army hearing that on several occasions Sergeant Major of the Army Gene McKinney urged her to have sex with him and hugged and kissed her. She said she always resisted his advances.

One of four women who have accused McKinney of improper sexual behavior, Petrow testified at a hearing at Fort McNair to determine whether he should be court-martialed.

During the session, prosecutors played the tape of a Feb. 18 telephone conversation in which McKinney told Petrow that investigators were trying to "make me look like a bad guy."

She told him that she had been questioned and that she did not want to get involved.

"All you have to do is tell them we talked a lot," McKinney was heard saying on the tape played in the hearing room. "You called the office and we talked about career development stuff. That's all they need to know. That's it, period."

He urged her to tell investigators that the only time they saw each other was when she came by his home and he introduced her to his wife, Petrow testified.

Petrow said they actually saw each other several times, including once when he took her to his Pentagon office when no one else was there.

Unknown to McKinney, Army investigators attached a tape recorder to Petrow's telephone and she recorded their conversation.

Since she began cooperating with the investigation, Petrow said, she has received telephone threats, her apartment was broken into and a threat was carved into the door. She is now in the Army's witness protection program.

The sergeant said she met McKinney in October 1994 at a convention of the Association of the U.S. Army. They were among several people having drinks in a hotel bar. He left the table and then beckoned to her to join him across the room.

She said he invited her to his room, and when she suggested the others join them, he said, "No, just you, just you."

When she declined, she said he told her "he was someone who could make things happen."

She quoted McKinney as saying, "Don't you know, you're what I need."

Assisted suicide proponents launch nationwide campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proponents of physician-assisted suicide said Friday they were expanding efforts to win support at the state level but said their fight was complicated by "rogues" like Dr. Jack Kevorkian.

"The activities of Jack Kevorkian are Exhibit A in why this needs to be brought out from under the cover, why it has to be openly acknowledged and openly regulated, so that society can really have some say over what guidelines and safeguards and procedures get followed," said Barbara Coombs Lee, executive director of Compassion in Dying, the Seattle organization that sponsored the assisted-suicide cases decided Thursday by the Supreme Court.

"Right now the environment is ripe for rogues like Jack Kevorkian in every state to start doing whatever they see fit, answerable to no one," said Coombs Lee, an attorney and former nurse. "Very unlikely that they would ever be prosecuted, practically impossible that they would ever be convicted."

Geoffrey Fieger, Kevorkian's lawyer, called his client's critics "losers."

"Nobody would even be listening to them if it wasn't for Jack Kevorkian," Fieger said in a telephone interview. "They do it in the shadows and they're afraid, and Dr. Kevorkian does it in the wide open and he's not afraid."

The Supreme Court, in a unanimous decision, ruled on Thursday that people do not have a constitutional right to doctor-assisted suicide. But the court left open the question of whether terminally ill, competent people in untreatable pain have a right to medical help to hasten death. The rulings also left room for doctors to continue giving dying patients painkillers, even if the drugs might bring on death.

Supreme Court strikes down key part of Brady law with 5-4 vote

N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court struck down a key part of the Brady gun-control law Friday as an infringement of state's rights, a decision that gun-owners rights groups hailed but that a large police group called just a "bump in the road."

By a 5-4 vote, the court said the federal government cannot force state and local authorities to check the backgrounds of prospective gun buyers.

The justices, however, left in place the Brady law's five-day waiting period on handgun purchases. And the ruling allows police to check voluntarily whether a person is fit to buy a handgun.

More than two dozen states have their own rules for checking a would-be gun purchaser's background to identify a felony conviction, a history of mental illness or other disqualifying problems.

Few law enforcement officials will stop performing background checks as a result of Friday's ruling, said Gilbert G. Gallegos, national president of the Fraternal Order of Police, who called the decision "just a little bump in the road to sane firearms policy."

Before the day had ended, President Clinton had ordered Attorney General Janet Reno and Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin to send a letter to law enforcement authorities contending that little had changed.

The letter urged police officials to "continue to run these checks voluntarily because they are saving lives." They said the Brady law had prevented more than 250,000 gun sales since 1994.

But National Rifle Association executive director Wayne LaPierre said his group, which strenuously opposed the gun-control legislation in 1993, felt vindicated by the decision. And Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., a fierce opponent of gun-control measures in the House, said the significance of the court action went far beyond guns. "It strikes as strong a blow as I can remember for states' rights," Barr said.

As for administration claims that the law had blocked tens of thousands of felons from purchasing handguns, Barr said that is "an empty statistic."

"People just go elsewhere. More significant is the number of prosecutions, which you can count on one hand," Barr said.

Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, called the ruling "a step toward returning sanity to our government."

"By eliminating this horrible provision of the legislation, the court has essentially rendered much of the Brady Act a lame-duck law, which is good news for anyone who cares about individual liberty and the constitution," Paul said in a prepared statement.

The Brady law's waiting period is set to expire in November 1998, to be replaced by a national instantaneous background check. Reno said she is confident the system will be ready on schedule.

But Sarah Brady, the chairwoman of Handgun Control Inc. whose husband was severely wounded in the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan, said she doubts the system will be in place by then. The law is named for Brady's husband, James, who was Reagan's press secretary at the time of the shooting.

Barr, an opponent of the waiting period, has introduced legislation to speed up by a year the implementation of the instant checks. He said he wrote GOP leaders in the House Friday, asking for hearings on his legislation.

Court set to decide racial hiring case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rebuffing the Clinton administration, a Supreme Court increasingly hostile to racial preferences plunged Friday into a teacher-firing case that could lead to a pivotal ruling on affirmative action.

Asked by the administration to stay out of the unusual dispute, the justices instead agreed to decide whether a New Jersey school board unlawfully laid off a white teacher to protect an equally qualified black teacher.

Arguments in the case will be heard after the court's 1997-98 term begins next fall, and a ruling is expected sometime in 1998.

Lower courts ruled that the Piscataway Board of Education's effort to preserve diversity amounted to racial discrimination. The school board carried the fight to the nation's highest court.

Justice Department lawyers, apparently worried the school board was entering what could be a precedent-setting battle without enough ammunition, urged the court to leave the lower court rulings intact — action that would set no national precedent.

The case became a rallying cry for Republicans in Congress who seek to dismantle many affirmative-action programs after the Bush administration supported the white teacher's complaint with a reverse-discrimination lawsuit against the school board.

When President Clinton took office, the Justice Department tried to switch sides and support the school board and its action in retaining the black teacher.

A federal appeals court treated the government's switch as a request to withdraw from the case, and now the white teacher and the school board are the only combatants. The Clinton administration, however, now may seek the court's permission to re-enter the case.

The dispute dates back to the school board's 1989 decision to abolish one teaching position in Piscataway High School's business education department.

New Jersey law requires that tenured teachers be laid off in reverse order of seniority, but two teachers — Sharon Taxman and Debra Williams — had been hired on the same day nine years earlier.

Taxman is white; Williams is black. Everyone agrees that they were equally qualified.

The school board laid off Taxman because Williams was the only minority teacher in the 10-teacher business department.

Police: Father drove children into waterway

MIAMI (AP) — Two little brothers drowned today when their father, angry over an argument with their mother, drove her sports utility vehicle into an Everglades canal, police said.

"He said, 'I put the vehicle in the canal,'" Metro-Dade Police detective Rudy Espinosa quoted the father as saying when he was taken into custody at his home on the Miccosukee Indian reservation.

Tribal police soon found where the truck had been driven into the murky canal, about 40 feet deep and infested with snakes and alligators along a desolate two-lane road on the fringes of the reservation.

Police divers pulled out the bodies of Keith Billie, 3, and Kurt Billie, 5.

The parents' names were not released. The couple has a history of domestic disputes and police believed they argued sometime before the boys' deaths though they did not have details.

Police divers removed the bodies from the submerged vehicle, and later used wreckers to drag it from the muddy canal bottom.

Economic growth moves up to 5.9 percent

By Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It doesn't get much better than this.

Economic growth in the first three months of the year soared to a 5.9 percent annual rate, the Commerce Department said Friday. At the same time, inflation continued to diminish.

The surge in the seasonally adjusted gross domestic product was even better than last month's calculation of 5.8 percent and the initial estimate of 5.6 percent in April.

The phenomenal growth rate, the best since the fourth quarter of 1987, won't last, according to economists.

It probably already slowed to about 2 percent in the quarter ending Monday, they believe, as consumers took a breather after a wintertime spending spree. And none too soon.

The moderation is coming just in time to dissuade the Federal Reserve from engineering a more jarring slowdown to keep inflation tame.

Fed policy-makers increased short-term interest rates by a quarter percentage point in late March, fearing the breakneck growth would exhaust the economy's scant excess capacity and create inflationary shortages and delivery delays.

But they passed up a chance to raise rates in May, and most economists believe they'll again vote to hold rates steady when they meet next Tuesday and Wednesday.

"They're perfectly happy with this near-perfect world of solid growth and low inflation. They can't ask for anything better," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York.

That's good news for businesses that need to borrow money to modernize and consumers who are looking for loans to buy homes and autos.

Jones said the course of rates later in the year depends on whether the economy rebounds over the summer and whether inflation starts to accelerate. Both will happen, he thinks, and he's looking for modestly higher rates this fall.

Consumers drove the first-quarter boom, which built on robust growth at a rate of 3.8 percent in the final three months of last year. Their spending represents about two-thirds of GDP, which measures the value of all goods and services produced within U.S. borders.

Consumers increased their spending at a 5.6 percent annual rate, the fastest in five years. They spent strongly because more have jobs. The unemployment rate in May was just 4.8 percent, the lowest in nearly 24 years. And surveys put consumer confidence at the highest level since men first walked on the moon in July 1969.

Spending in the second quarter has been hurt by a cooler-than-usual spring in the Northeast, just as there had been an extra boost from warmer-than-usual winter weather. But shoppers should soon be reopening their wallets.

"Since I don't know any reason why they shouldn't go back to the stores, I will predict that they will and we will find the economy gathering speed again," said economist Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "Odds are it will be faster than the Federal Reserve is comfortable with."

Housing construction and spending by businesses on new buildings and equipment also contributed to the big jump in GDP early this year. The growth came as an inflation gauge tied to the GDP advanced at a moderate 2.7 percent annual rate.

The principal source of the latest upward revision to the growth rate was a reduction in imports, which means more of the economy's output came from domestic production.

Separately, the department lowered its estimate of growth in corporate profits to 3.5 percent, from 4.5 percent. Corporations earned lower profits from foreign affiliates than first thought and U.S. financial companies had slightly smaller earnings than initially estimated. Still, it was the largest quarterly gain in a year.

Child killer who escaped in 1962 returned by Mexican immigration

DALLAS (AP) — A child killer who sawed his way out of prison 34 years ago was captured in Mexico and brought back across the border Friday, telling of a life on the lam that included a wife, four kids and a job driving a truck.

As 60-year-old Ernesto Lopez was led in handcuffs across a bridge over the Rio Grande into Laredo, he calmly told reporters he never feared being recaptured.

"I wasn't worried because I'm innocent," said the scruffy-faced Lopez. He wore dirty work pants and a dark T-shirt hanging over his ample gut.

Lopez, on the run longer than any other Texas escapee, was one of two men convicted in the slaying of a 12-year-old girl on New Year's Eve 1956. The case became known as the "Goat Hill" murder, for the lonely Dallas bluff where Jeannett Mangan was beaten, raped and shot to death.

He and another inmate disappeared Nov. 12, 1962, from a prison near Houston after sawing through bars, scaling over a high, barbed-wire fence and stealing a car. The other man was captured, but Lopez remained at large until he was captured Thursday by Mexican immigration officers.

Mexican officials, who had been working with the FBI for two years in a renewed effort to find Lopez, gave few details about his life as a fugitive. U.S. authorities also declined to say how they tracked him down.

But an official with the Mexican immigration service, who requested anonymity, said tipsters called authorities several months ago and said Lopez was living in Mexico.

When confronted by immigration police on Thursday, Lopez claimed to be a Mexican citizen and presented a voter registration card and a military service card as proof, the official said. Police discovered those documents were fake, and Lopez was arrested and deported, the official said.

Betty Shabazz remembered in Islamic service

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

Mrs. Shabazz, 61, died Monday, three weeks after suffering severe burns in a fire.

NEW YORK — Betty Shabazz was remembered Friday by hundreds of shoeless mourners who prayed in Arabic and English in an Islamic rite three decades after her husband, Malcolm X, was laid to rest.

"Our sister Betty Shabazz died by burning. May Allah forgive the person who did that," an imam, or Muslim prayer leader, told mourners at Manhattan's Islamic Cultural Center during a prefuneral service.

The prayers came over a loudspeaker from a room marked "For sisters only," where hundreds of women, some with children, bowed in neat rows before a prayer rug on the wall. They wore multicolored dresses and head coverings with only their faces visible.

Following custom, women were separated from men. The mourners carried their shoes in plastic bags.

Mrs. Shabazz, 61, died Monday, three weeks after suffering severe burns in a fire allegedly set in her suburban Yonkers apartment by her grandson, Malcolm, 12, who was named for his grandfather.

The boy remains in custody, charged in juvenile court with attempted murder, arson and other charges. The charges have not been upgraded since Mrs. Shabazz's death.

Mourners arriving at the East Side mosque walked past a large photograph of Mrs. Shabazz, bordered with red flowers, at the entrance.

During the half-hour service, Mayor Rudolph Giuliani rose to call Mrs. Shabazz "a great leader in New York City."

"All 7 million New Yorkers share with you this sense of loss," Giuliani said. "Everybody in New York City is ennobled by Betty Shabazz."

Former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, Giuliani, former Mayor David Dinkins, American Indian activist Russell Means and diplomats from Muslim countries attended.

The family lingered for a brief, private service before the coffin was carried out of the mosque.

Mrs. Shabazz, whose slain husband would have turned 72 last month, was to be buried next to him at a cemetery in suburban Ardsley, just north of New York City, following the funeral.

"She educated herself after her husband's death by earning a Ph.D. She raised her daughters as a model mother," said New York Rep. Major Owens, in a statement before the funeral. "But what I appreciate most about Betty Shabazz is that she was a good person."

Born Betty Sanders in Detroit, she was adopted and raised by a Methodist family and went to the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama before heading to nursing school in New York.

Mir cosmonauts try to deal with loss of power, failure in steering systems

Associated Press

The steering broke down on the already battered Mir space station, leaving the Russian craft adrift in orbit for up to three hours before the exhausted crewmen could regain control Friday.

NASA, meanwhile, launched an investigation into Wednesday's unprecedented collision and prepared to send more staff to Russia's Mission Control outside Moscow to help oversee a risky repair spacewalk planned for next month.

The Russians are considering having Mir's two Russian cosmonauts venture into the ruptured, sealed-off lab to connect power cables to the urgently needed solar batteries inside. They would replace the hatch on the airless module with a homemade version that would allow the cables to pass through without exposing the rest of the station to the deadly vacuum of space.

"How well that thing seals is of major concern," said Frank Culbertson, NASA's shuttle-Mir director.

The latest trouble aboard the 250-mile-high outpost apparently occurred as NASA astronaut Michael Foale and his two crewmates slept.

A power surge or some other electrical problem knocked out a computer, which, in turn, disabled Mir's steering system, Culbertson said. At the time, the crew was using the space station's thruster rockets to keep Mir's still-functioning solar wings pointed toward the sun to gather energy for the remaining batteries.

Once they discovered they were in an uncontrolled orbit, the crewmen used the attached Soyuz escape capsule to turn the solar wings toward the sun.

The thrusters began working again after the computer was reactivated and the data re-entered.

The mishap resulted in yet another drop in power — Mir is flying at only half-power as is — and prevented the crew from turning on gyroscopes for steering.

The gyroscopes, the preferred, fuel-free way of guiding the station, were shut down after a cargo ship slammed into Mir on Wednesday and pierced the pressurized hull of the Spektr lab module.

"It is certainly still serious" as long as the gyroscopes cannot be used and the power is so restricted, Culbertson said.

Using the thrusters to point the few good solar panels toward the sun was using up precious fuel.

Already, nearly half a tank of fuel for the Soyuz capsule has been used to maneuver the sprawling, 100-ton-plus station. The other tank, reserved for the cosmonauts' eventual trip back to Earth, is still full.

The three crewmen continued to work by flashlight aboard Mir, which was darkened to conserve energy and was a little humid because of changes to the thermal control system. Foale asked that extra flashlight bulbs and batteries be sent on the next supply ship, scheduled for launch no earlier than July 5.

Other items requested Friday by Foale, whose personal belongings are all inside the inaccessible Spektr module: three toothbrushes, three tubes of toothpaste, four large bottles of shampoo and 100 Tylenol tablets.

The cargo ship, similar to the one that collided with Mir, also will carry up cables, connectors and other repair equipment for use during the spacewalk.

Before the accident, Spektr's solar batteries were being powered by four relatively new solar panels jutting from the outside of the module.

Tobacco farmers look toward Congress to help them survive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Left out of the initial tobacco deal, the nation's tobacco farmers are lobbying Congress for guarantees that any final agreement won't destroy their livelihood.

Among the ideas being considered: earmarking $6 billion of the deal to help tobacco farmers switch to new crops, or requiring tobacco companies to use a higher percentage of American-grown leaf in their cigarettes.

"There's nothing in this settlement that speaks for farmers," said Larry Wooten, vice president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau. American farmers "are very concerned that this will have a negative impact on companies buying our tobacco."

Lawmakers from North Carolina and Kentucky, where 65 percent of American tobacco is grown, have long fiercely defended any attempts to scrap the government's tobacco price-support program or to end subsidies for farmers who buy crop insurance.

Now, farm groups are mobilizing to see how the proposed $368 billion settlement of 40 health-related state lawsuits could affect the 124,000 U.S. tobacco farms — and how Congress could shape the deal to their advantage.

Condon plans to meet with lawmakers, farmers, warehouse owners and other attorneys general to develop a unified lobbying approach.

No ideas have yet been formally proposed, and tobacco-state members of Congress are generally holding their fire until a White House review of the deal is done. That review includes the Agriculture Department.

But Condon and others said these proposals are being discussed if the settlement reaches Congress:

■ Ironclad protection of the tobacco program, which guarantees farmers a minimum price and sets quotas on how much individual farmers can market.

■ Setting aside $6 billion of the settlement money to either buy out farmers' quotas or pay them to phase in substitute crops.

■ Requiring cigarette companies to use up to 85 percent American-grown leaf in their products. Current law sets the U.S. percentage at 75 percent.

■ Mandating that tobacco companies pay fo 'armers' crop insurance. Last year, the House came within two votes of ending the government subsidized insurance.

Writing, reporting come naturally to DPS Spokesman Mike Cox

By Patrick Beach
Associated Press

AUSTIN — There's Mike Cox on CNN again — Cox, the mild-mannered spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, once again pixels across the TV, squinting at a battery of cameras and ill-mannered reporters, answering a barrage of questions at the latest law-enforcement crisis.

"MIKE, CAN YOU TELL US YADDA, YADDA, YADDA...."

"I think right now I just want to leave it that we're optimistic about the discussions that are taking place — we've had a good, uh, a good dialogue going on, and things are looking very positive but, uh, uh...."

"MIKE, CAN YOU BE MORE SPECIFIC ABOUT BLAH, BLAH, BLAH...."

"As I said, there are numerous discussions under way. Right now, I don't think it'd be appropriate to go into details of what's being discussed. As we get more developments on that I'll be happy to...."

At this moment, the man with the microphones thrust in his face, the man with the black mesh cap with "DPS PIO" on it, can be thinking only one thing: Calgon, take me away.

This public persona is how the world knows Cox, because that's how he has appeared on CNN and the networks repeatedly in recent years — at the mass killing at the Luby's in Killeen, at the Branch Davidian crisis in Waco and most recently at the Republic of Texas showdown in the Davis Mountains. But what does the 48-year-old Cox do when he's not fending off the media?

He writes. His new book is "Texas Ranger Tales." He collects books. He does historical research. He goes hunting. He counts the months since he had cancer. He watches his 3-year-old daughter grow up.

Cops and writing about cops have been the constants in his life. He comes from a family of writers, and his late grandfather gave him a sense history, telling him stories about the Texas Rangers. He grew up hearing newspaper tales from his father that made "The Front Page" sound like a documentary. Even his parents' meeting came about because of the intersection of journalism and crime: They were covering a murder trial for competing newspapers. They fell in love. They eloped.

"I am the product of two of man's more singular acts: murder and love," Cox likes to say.

Writing, he says, is "an inherited affliction." So there was little question he would become an ink-stained wretch. He grew up in Austin and, while attending Lanier High School, wrote a high-school news column for the Austin American-Statesman, in which he once gave grudging approval of the Beatles but predicted they'd never last as long as Sonny & Cher. At the same time he was a copy boy.

He went to San Angelo to go to college, but never got his degree. What was to have been a summer job at the local paper turned into a permanent thing. Then he spent a year at the Lubbock paper before, nirvana, he joined the American-Statesman as a police reporter in 1970.

The newspaper still published an afternoon edition then, and Cox was something of a legend for having a notebook full of stories before the sun came up, when most of his colleagues were fumbling with their alarm clocks. He wrote up until the first deadline, and then he'd keep going. And when he wasn't writing for the newspaper, he was freelancing for true detective magazines and the New York Daily News and researching books. (His sentimental favorite is still his out-of-print biography of Fred Gipson, the Texas author of "Old Yeller.")

He covered all kinds of carnage and cruelty and dismemberment. Among his subjects was Henry Lee Lucas, currently the most infamous inmate on Texas' death row in Huntsville, who confessed to more than 600 murders in 26 states. Lucas now says he didn't do the killings.

It wasn't all mayhem. Former colleague Larry BeSaw remembers when, their creative juices flowing after a session at Scholz Garten, the two of them decided it would be a fine idea to rent a gorilla suit and run around town in it, recording folks' reaction. Which is what they did. For a story.

In 1985, a year after Lucas was convicted, Cox went to work in the DPS public information office. In the newspaper world, becoming a flack is known as going over to the dark side, and those who do it are semi-jokingly evermore regarded as traitors to the cause. It's particularly egregious when one goes to work for someone they covered. Make the mistake of doing that, and your entire journalistic body of work is instantly suspect. Or so certain old-school high priests believe.

"I don't think he was biased in favor of the cops," says BeSaw, now associate editor of Texas Medicine magazine. "People say that, but I think they misremember."

The American-Statesman gave him a memorable send-off: He was allowed to push the buttons that started the paper's presses on his last day. After he'd made his big decision, he found himself suffering from severe withdrawal at first, especially when a big story broke. He had all the inside poop now and he couldn't write the story.

"I loved being a reporter," Cox says. "I still think covering police is the best beat on the paper."

Congress cruises down the information superhighway

By Kevin Eckstrom
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Two years ago, it was easier for Rep. Vernon Ehlers, R-Mich., to "send an e-mail to Germany than it was to someone 20 feet down the hall."

Internet technology was a foreign concept on Capitol Hill. Congress was, as one member put it, "lost in cyberspace." But after a multi-million dollar technology overhaul and prodding by House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R- Ga., Congress is cruising down the information superhighway.

All 100 senators have "a presence on the Internet," according to a spokesman for the Senate sergeant at arms, while 255 of the 435 representatives have created their own World Wide Web sites.

Almost 50 other House offices, including committees, have launched individual Web sites, and the central House Web site, with links to member sites, is accessed more than 2 million times every month.

Rather than mailing a letter to a member of Congress, constituents all across the country now can log into a member's "home page" and send letters, request information or check on what legislation the senator or representative is supporting.

"Never before has any Congress been so completely in touch and available to their constituents," said Ehlers, the House point man on technology.

Member Web sites offer a variety of services for constituents, including positions on legislation, press releases, information on tours of the Capitol, personal photo albums and how to be nominated as a congressional page or to one of the military's undergraduate academies.

In addition, most sites include links to home-state interests, such as the state government and weather reports, or links to resources for student aid or veterans benefits.

"A lot of people are sitting at their computer and wondering what their congress people are doing," said Arnette Person, the systems administrator for Rep. Alcee Hastings, D-Fla. "Instead of taking the time to write a letter, you can check out the Web. It's the wave of the future."

Several legislators have taken web technology further. Florida's senators, Bob Graham, a Democrat, and Connie Mack, a Republican, allow constituents to send requests for information or for flags flown over the Capitol through their Web pages, with just the click of a mouse.

Graham's page features a link to a hurricane watch service for his home state, while other senators have been equally creative.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., launched the first Senate web site in 1993, and now his page features his personal recipe for Cape Cod fish chowder, as well as Louisiana Democratic Sen. John Breaux's recipe for Cajun fried turkey and Maryland Democ-

Court presents parents with a vexing concern

By Amy Harmon
N.Y. Times News Service

■ News analysis

The discussion topics in Internet support groups for parents of teen-agers are typically as raw and predictable as adolescence itself: "Huge hickeys on my 16 y/o son's neck," divulges one message. "Our daughter had sex!" runs another.

But joining the ranks of such venerable lamentations these days are anguished postings from parents trying to balance the wonders of the Internet with the potential dangers that it poses to their children. Thursday, the Supreme Court said no help would be forthcoming from the government on this digital-age quandary.

"What do you do when your child is caught exchanging sexually tainted messages through e-mail?" one mother asked recently on a World Wide Web site called Parent Soup. "I hate to restrict an educational tool, but what do you do?"

In overturning the federal Communications Decency Act, which prohibits the transmission of indecent material to children over computer networks, the court essentially placed responsibility for children's online activities solely in the hands of the adults who watch over them.

And while that may square with the First Amendment and free speech, it leaves many already beleaguered parents uneasily sizing up a new and unfamiliar burden.

Even for the rare parent whose computer skills match those of their children, mastering the technical tools available to screen out inappropriate material takes time. And the so-called "filter" computer programs, which promise automatically to prevent children from viewing sexually explicit online sites, are not foolproof.

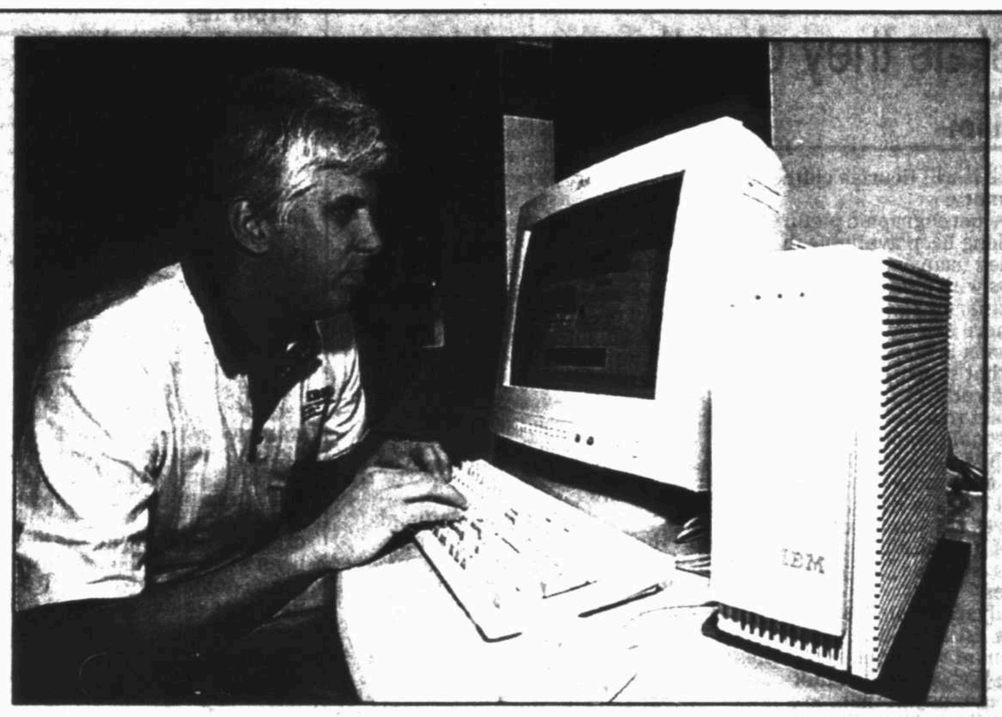

"The Internet is an excellent resource for families and it is becoming an even richer one for information and educational activities," said Wendy Lazarus, co-director of the Children's Partnership, a nonprofit advocacy group that has published a parents' guide to the online world. "But this is definitely a new role that comes along with being a parent in the 1990s, and sometimes I think we all wish it would go away."

No one is denying that there is much to be wary of in cyberspace, where the less savory reaches of the information universe can be explored without leaving the upstairs study.

The World Wide Web is home to some 10,000 sites devoted to all stripes of pornography, from 'www.playboy.com,' which offers pictures of Playboy centerfold models, to 'www.sexfantasy.com,' which charges subscribers $1.29 a minute to watch men and women performing sexual acts broadcast in blurry video over the Internet.

The fledgling Internet pornography industry is dwarfed by the estimated $8 billion that Americans spend annually on adult material in other forms. But with the threat of federal legislation apparently removed, many experts

How's this for a big, bad dream machine?

By Dwight Silverman
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — My boss is almost as fanatical about personal technology as I am. He's a notorious computing power hog who was jealous when I got a computer that was more muscular than his.

So when I wrote recently about the minimum specs buyers should consider when shopping for an IBM-compatible PC, it was no surprise when he said to me, only half-joking: "The minimum? Man, I don't wanna know about the minimum. I want to know what's the biggest, baddest, fastest, meanest machine you can own."

Hey, I understand the law of the corporate jungle. I know what I must do.

Fortunately, I spent a few days last week at PC Expo, a sprawling trade show in New York, where I had the opportunity to paw through some choice techno-goodies. I think I've pieced together a home computer that will satisfy most power junkies.

■ Processor: If you can find one, Intel's 300-megahertz Pentium II chip is the obvious choice. However, the chip is not quite in volume production, so you may have to settle for a 266-megahertz version. What a shame.

Yes, I know, there are some faster chips out there, most notably Digital's 500-megahertz

Electronic marketplace still far from safe on Web

By John M. Broder
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Not too long ago in America, the chief threats to personal privacy were the snoopy neighbor and the party-line eavesdropper.

Then came J. Edgar Hoover and Richard M. Nixon, using the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Internal Revenue Service to dig up — and dish out — dirt on private citizens.

The credit card, the supermarket scanner and the toll-free telephone number gave private businesses new avenues to pry into lives and buying habits — where we shop and what we buy, where we eat and what we wear. What was hidden in Queen Victoria's day is laid bare before the all-knowing 800-number order-takers of Victoria's Secret.

Still, all that looks pretty primitive compared to the threats to personal privacy posed by the growth of the electronic marketplace of the Internet.

Today, it's not Ernestine the telephone operator who is the threat. It's "cookies" and "spam."

These technological tricks are making millions of potential Internet consumers reluctant to jour-

Gates looks at cost cutting

Microsoft Corp. Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Bill Gates said his "top priority" is cutting costs for companies that run personal computer-based systems. Microsoft, the world's dominant supplier of software for desktop personal computers, is fending off a challenge from rivals that specialize in network computers, which are stripped-down machines relying on a central network for software and processing power.

Speaking at a Microsoft-based conference in Tokyo, Gates introduced a Zero Administration Kit, which is designed to save companies time and money by streamlining software installation and support.

"It's all of the benefits of a PC with also all the benefits of centralized computing" via a network, Gates said.

The free upgrade for Microsoft's corporate customers is the latest salvo in a battle between Microsoft and rival computer network suppliers such as Oracle Corp. and Sun Microsystems Inc.

Gates said 28 Japanese computer-equipment suppliers have agreed to support the new software, including NEC Corp. and Fujitsu Ltd.

Redmond, Washington-based Microsoft demonstrated its own network-computing software yesterday at the PC Expo Conference in New York. The company has started to debut network-based products in response to criticism of maintenance and other expenses incurred by companies with many PCs.

These expenses are known in computer industry lingo as the total cost of ownership, or TCO.

The TCO of a standard personal computer hooked up to a network and running Windows 95 is about $9,800, according to an estimate by Stamford, Connecticut-based market research and consulting company Gartner Group Inc.

Microsoft has begun developing new models of full-scale PCs that require less intensive support to cut customers' operating costs.

Jobs sells his Apple shares

Steve Jobs has registered to sell all but one of the 1.5 million shares of Apple Computer that he acquired when he agreed in December to sell Next Software to Apple for $400 million.

Since the acquisition, Jobs has served as a part-time adviser to Apple, which he cofounded. Jobs was ousted from Apple in 1985. After leaving Apple, he went on to found Next and Pixar Inc., the computer-animation studio that helped make "Toy Story."

In recent months, Jobs has emphasized that he is spending nearly all his time at Pixar with the advisory role at Apple being secondary.

Jobs said the filing was a routine matter done on his behalf by Apple. "I haven't sold any shares, and my intentions haven't changed at all," he said.

Nancy Paxton, director of investor relations at Apple, said the filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission was merely a follow-up step in connection with the acquisition of Next.

The stock issued to Jobs as part of the purchase of Next consisted of newly issued Apple shares. For those to have any marketable value, she added, they had to be registered with the SEC at some point.

Gates to donate $200 million to poorest U.S. libraries

By Hiawatha Bray
N.Y. Times News Service

Continuing a tradition set by Andrew Carnegie, the richest American of the 1890s, Microsoft Corp. chairman William Gates, the richest American of the 1990s, said Monday he is donating $200 million to bring computer technology to the nation's poorest libraries.

The gift, believed to be one of the largest private donations to public libraries, will be matched by $200 million in software donated by Gates's company.

"Since I was a kid, libraries have played an important role in my life," said Gates in a statement released last night that announced the gift. "In the past couple of years I have had the opportunity to visit many libraries and see first-hand how people are using personal computers and the Internet to do anything from look for a job to research a term paper. Witnessing the empowerment this technology has given people underscores my belief that computers can really make a difference in the lives of others."

To administer the gift, Gates and his wife, Melinda French, have established the Gates Library Foundation, an outgrowth of Microsoft's Libraries Online project, a pilot program that has already donated $17 million in computer hardware and software to more than 200 libraries. Patty Stonesifer, a former Microsoft executive who will head the foundation, said that the results of Libraries Online proved the social benefits of deploying computer networks in the nation's libraries.

The foundation will provide public libraries in low-income areas with the computer hardware and software required for community access to the Internet, as well as provide support and training for public library personnel throughout the United States and Canada. The process for awarding grants to individual libraries is still being defined, Gates said last night, although some institutions have already been identified through the Libraries Online initiative.

"This is an enormous gift to our nation's libraries," said Elizabeth Martinez, executive director of the American Library Association, in the Gates statement. "It means that potentially every child and adult will have access to global information on line at public libraries across America."

The foundation's activities could also have long-term financial benefits for Gates and Microsoft. Exposing millions of library patrons to the benefits of personal computers and Internet access could lead to greater demand for a variety of Microsoft products, ranging from Windows 95 operating system software, to the Microsoft Network Internet service, to WebTV, whose equipment lets people visit the Internet with a standard television set.

But Stonesifer stressed that such considerations played no part in the decision to create the foundation. "It may be a byproduct that more people will end up using computers than they did before," she said, "but that wasn't at the heart of this."

In any case, the foundation won't hurt Gates's ranking as the nation's wealthiest man, with a personal worth that hovers around $20 billion. The gift will also secure Gates's place among the nation's leading philanthropists. According to Fortune magazine, Gates gave away $135 million last year, making him the third-most generous of the nation's super-rich. Gates has said that he intends to donate the bulk of his fortune to charity.

Over the next five years, the foundation will concentrate on distributing up-to-date computer hardware, software and networking systems in libraries located in low-income areas. The foundation emphasize teaching librarians how to use the new technologies. The first grant will be given to the Seattle-based Technology Resource Institute, which will oversee the program for librarian training. The institute's president, Willem Scholten, formerly served as a visiting scientist at the computer company Thinking Machines Inc. in Cambridge.

Carnegie, the impoverished Scottish immigrant who built a vast fortune in the steel business, spent the bulk of his fortune in charitable endeavors. The best-known of these was his campaign to build free public libraries — still rare in the late 19th century — throughout the United States. By the time Carnegie died, in 1919, he had paid for the construction of more than 1,600 libraries in the United States and 830 in other countries.

COURT: Many laws prohibiting obscene sales apply to Internet just as they do other mediums believe it will flourish online even more.

Free pornographic pictures have long been available in encoded form on Internet news groups with names like "alt.binaries.pictures.erotica." But there has also been an explosion in home-grown Web sites that support themselves through advertising, and provide pictures easily displayed on a personal computer.

Beth Mansfield, who runs an index of pornographic sites called Persian Kitty, said she receives 250 submissions a day. One of her most popular categories, she said, is "amateur images."

Analysts of Internet commerce estimate that only about 3 percent of the commercial sites on the Web traffic in adult material, but many of them are among the most profitable.

PC Meter, a research concern based in Port Washington, N.Y., found in a recent survey of 10,000 households using the Web that nearly 30 percent visited adult sites. About 8 percent of those visits were by teen-agers, the survey found.

Nearly all the commercial adult sites warn minors not to enter, and require a credit card to get beyond the opening screen. To protect themselves from prosecution under federal and local statutes already in place, many go out of their way to be included on lists of inappropriate sites compiled by companies marketing filter software programs. But adult site proprietors say young adults can get through anyway.

"Kids are smart," said Seth Warshavsky, whose Seattle-based Internet Entertainment Group runs 27 adult sites. "If the parent didn't have Surf Watch or Net Nanny on the computer and the minor took the credit card, that's all he'd have to do."

Even without a credit card, there is plenty for a curious teen-ager to see. Several adult site owners say increasing competition over the last six months — especially after a lower court issued an injunction against the Decency Act — has pushed the industry to include more graphic material.

"To compete you have to get raunchier and raunchier," said Ken Snyder, owner of a San Francisco-based site that sells hoods and human cages, as well as offering subscriptions to bondage-theme chat rooms.

Federal laws that prohibit the sale of obscene material, including child pornography, apply to the Internet as they do to any other medium, and some industry analysts expect the government to enforce them more aggressively now that the Decency Act has been struck down.

But law-enforcement officials in the United States cannot do much about the pornography found on computers outside U.S. borders.

Experts recommend that parents use a combination of supervision and filter programs to monitor their children's wanderings on the Web. But perhaps more disturbing than its prurient sights and sounds is the Internet's capacity to encourage intimacy between strangers via e-mail and "chat rooms," which offer communication between two or more people logged in at the same time.

In 1995, a California man was convicted of luring a 13-year-old girl from Kentucky through a computer network to engage in unlawful sexual activity. The FBI has arrested 35 adult solicitors over the last two years.

On America Online, which has 8 million subscribers, parents can lock their children out of chat rooms and block access to Web sites that are not on an "approved" list. But company officials said only about one quarter of all parents use the controls.

Some parents say that is because the ability to surf freely on the Internet outweighs the risk.

"We took the controls off," said Wendy Ballard of Vero Beach, Fla., whose 16-year-old daughter complained that she could not find guitar music or chat with her friends. 'We've had discussions with the kids about being careful about who they talk to on line. We just felt like it was time we had to trust them."

ratic Sen. Barbara Mikulski's recipe for spicy bay crab cakes.

When Sen. Mike DeWine was designing his Web page last year, his 4-year-old daughter, Anna, wanted to have a say in things.

"Anna wanted to make sure there was something for kids to do," said DeWine's spokesman, Charles Boesel. "And Senator DeWine wanted it to be kid-friendly, too."

At Anna's request, her father's home page features a recipe for soap bubbles and word search games that ask kids to find words such as "legislature" and "chief justice."

Visitors to DeWine's page also can link to information on organ donation. DeWine has been a strong supporter of organ donation ever since his daughter Becky died in a 1993 car accident at the age of 22.

DeWine's colleague, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, offers Web browsers extensive information about his trip around the Earth in 1962 when he became the first American to orbit the planet.

The growth of technology, however, has made more work for congressional staffs. Graham's web site received almost 3,800 electronic messages last month, and more than 30,000 since the page was opened in November 1995. Each e-mail message receives a postal-delivered response, the same as those who send the office regular mail, said spokeswoman Kimberly James.

The growth of Capitol Hill Web sites was spurred by the 1995 "CyberCongress" initiative. Under the guidance of the House Oversight Committee, the CyberCongress plan called for technological infrastructure upgrades, computer training for staff and members, and an extensive World Wide Web "presence" for the House on the Internet.

The 7/8 7/8CyberCongress project has been a massive technological undertaking. The House Information Resources Office manages a $50 million budget to provide staff and training to ease members on line. The Senate does not keep track of total costs because each office's cost is handled independently.

Ehlers, a trained physicist, has taught computer classes to some of his colleagues and the reaction, he said, has been mostly positive.

7/8 7/8"Their biggest regret is usually that they don't have a lot of time to learn more about the Internet," he said.

"Communication is the very essence of representative democracy," a House working group on the CyberCongress project reported in February. "The empowerment of the citizen through computer-mediated communication technologies is the focus of ... the vision."

Most congressional Internet sites include links to 7/8 7/8"Thomas," the expansive online research tool maintained by the Library of Congress. The site, which is accessed at least 2 million times each month, provides the full text of legislation, the Congressional Record and historical documents. Similar information also is provided by a Web site run solely by the House. The central Library of Congress page receives about 42 million "hits" each month.

In addition, the House Internet Law Library, providing federal laws, state laws, international treaties and other legal resources, is visited at least 2 million times each month.

"This has revolutionized the way information is made available to the public and the way Congress uses computers," Ehlers said.

Voters, sitting at their computers, can log into the C-SPAN cable television home page and watch live debates from Capitol Hill, research the history and status of the legislation they're hearing about and e-mail their representatives with their views, all without leaving the computer, Ehlers said.

DREAM: Be prepared to pay for ultimate machine

(From 1B)

Alpha and the 300-megahertz PowerPC found in some Macintosh computers. But neither will run Windows 95, which would be the operating system of choice, though the Alpha will run Windows NT.

■ Memory: Some motherboards can be loaded with up to 256 megabytes of random-access memory. Others are limited to 128 megabytes, which is nothing to sneeze at. If you're assembling a megamachine, shoot for 64 megabytes at the minimum.

My personal machine has the latter amount. As a result, I've discovered something interesting. The Norton Utilities System Doctor memory gauge shows me that Windows 95 loads about 43 megabytes of itself into memory.

If you have only 32 megabytes — a standard amount in off-the-shelf machines nowadays — that means the operating system is still making heavy use of the virtual-memory swap file. With 64 megabytes, you've got room to spare. And more is always better.

■ Disk storage: I'd go for a roomy 6.5-gigabyte enhanced IDE disk drive. While it may not be quite as fast as a SCSI drive, it's probably a better bang for the buck.

While you're at it, throw in an internal Iomega Jaz drive, which accepts one-gigabyte removable disks. This is big enough to use as your backup system, too.

■ Video card and monitor: This is the toughest choice to make. You can drop a couple of thousands of dollars for high-end graphics cards used in PC-based workstations designed for professional imaging. But if you're going to be doing the kinds of things most people do at home or in business, why overspend? If you're not much of a games player, get a solid 2D graphics card, such as the new Matrox Millenium II, available with as much as eight megabytes of video memory. It sells for around $270, an excellent buy.

If you're a gamer, consider the Diamond Stealth 3D 2000 Pro, which, for a street price of about $200, is one of the best deals around. It supports OpenGL. Anyone who's ever played the GL version of id Software's Quake knows how impressive a GL graphics card can be.

For a monitor, dig deep into your pockets for the $8,000 NEC LCD2000, a 20-inch flat-panel monitor that's spectacular. Flat-panel monitors have almost no flicker and take up less space. This particular model has NEC's traditional bright, sharp look.

■ CD-ROM: Even though DVD-ROM drives are starting to make their appearance, I'll stick with a traditional CD-ROM drive for this system.

DVD drives will be much more attractive once a computer can write to them as well as read from them.

Panasonic makes a 24-speed CD-ROM drive that sells for $229. Go for it.

■ Modem: Can't decide whether to go with a 56,000-baud modem or an ISDN modem? You don't have to choose. Snag the U.S. Robotics Courier I-modem, which now supports U.S. Robotics' X2 protocol as well as ISDN connections. It sells for about $300 — less than you'd pay if you bought an ISDN adapter and a traditional modem separately.

■ Sound: When I wrote about minimum specs, I said you should have a 32-bit sound card. That was a misstatement; what I should have said was to look for a 32-voice wave-table card. That's the minimum. For this big, bad machine, install Creative Labs' SoundBlaster AWE 64 card, which can handle up to 64 voices simultaneously. It sells for around $200.

Now, for the grand total. If you were to piece a system like this together, you'd pay close to $13,000 — depending on how much memory you crammed into it. In this case, it's only play money — that is, until my boss submits the purchase order.

ELECTRONIC: Potential for abuse does exist

ney into cyberspace — and shop there — because of queasiness about the privacy of their electronic communications and suspicion that their names will be put to crass commercial uses.

And when information about people's Web-browsing habits is combined with the reams of personal data coursing through cyberspace, from credit histories to bankruptcy court records to real estate data, the potential for abuse multiplies.

That is what's new — and scary — about the Internet. And unless and until these concerns are addressed, experts say, millions of would-be Web browsers — and shoppers — will stay away, throttling a potentially gigantic industry.

Most computer users resent receiving "spam" — unsolicited E-mail advertisements — and those who are aware of "cookies" — electronic tags that record what Internet sites a Web browser visits — either want them blocked or want notice before any record of their travels around the Internet is compiled.

The Internet and the technology underlying it give companies abilities they never had before to learn intimate details about potential customers. And despite what Internet merchants profess, there is a fundamental difference between virtual shopping on the Web and browsing in a store.

"If you belong to a frequent buyer club at the bookstore, they probably keep a record of the books you buy," said Christine Varney, a member of the Federal Trade Commission, which held hearings this month on Internet privacy concerns. "But no one follows you around the store and keeps track of what you looked at and how long you looked at it before your bought."

That's what the cookies on a computer's hard drive enable a Web site operator to do.

Don't want your employer to know that you took a surreptitious trip to the pornography site "Genital Hospital" on your lunch hour? Too bad. You probably left an electronic cookie crumb on your hard drive.

Those records provide invaluable information for marketers who can use them to pinpoint custome.s for their products. By following your Internet "clickstream," they can learn about your hobbies, your shopping preferences, your medical condition, your reading habits, your political predilections.

The White House and the FTC, which has authority to police unfair trade practices — including those conducted in cyberspace — are exploring what new laws or regulations will be needed to protect personal privacy while fostering the growth of electronic commerce.

Companies from the Microsoft Corp. to the McGraw-Hill Companies sent representatives to the FTC hearings to pledge their efforts to protect the confidentiality of their customers' transactions. Give us a chance to regulate ourselves, they argued, before imposing some restrictive new government regime.

Gerald Cerasale of the Direct Marketing Association, one of many who spoke on behalf of businesses involved in electronic commerce, said that while the technology is new, privacy issues are no different from those raised by doing business over the telephone or through newspaper want ads.

"The same principles apply to new media as to old media," Cerasale said. "What's new is the rapidity and the reduction in expense."

Jerry Berman of the Center for Democracy and Technology, a civil liberties group in Washington that focuses on Internet policy, said that technology may be the answer to the problems posed by technology.

A consortium of Internet companies is working on a program for personal computers that would automatically tell Web site operators what personal information the user is willing to share. And such a device is the only solution to a decentralized global computer network that is beyond the reach of any government to monitor or regulate, Berman said.

"We have to develop mechanisms that allow consumers to control information about themselves, the content they look at and where they're going on the Net," he said. "That's the privacy equation."

But Ms. Varney of the FTC and her fellow commissioners are not yet convinced of that.

"Three things must exist for electronic commerce to prosper," Ms. Varney said. "Ease, ubiquity and trust. Technology can take care of the first two. But how can consumers be sure that their transactions are secure and private? How do they know when they click on L.L. Bean that they're getting the company and not some impostor?

"The question we're grappling with," she added, "is whether government has a role in creating that trust."

Gold Rush officially on in cyberspace

By Zachary Coile
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The digital Gold Rush has begun.

The early prospectors who called the Internet "the marketplace of the 21st century" have some news: The age of electronic commerce is here, and businesses better log on.

"The electronic commerce revolution is under way and businesses who hesitate do so at their own peril," said Harvey Seegers, president and chief executive of GE Information Services. "The time for waiting has passed. The time for acting is now."

The simple message was echoed by speaker after speaker at the Business Online conference in San Francisco this week.

Many companies already have seized opportunities in cyberspace, including Amazon.com, which sells books on the Web; Wells Fargo and Citibank, which handle on-line transactions; and UPS and Federal Express, which take orders and track packages over the Internet.

A March Nielsen survey of 6,600 North Americans showed that 73 percent of Web users surveyed used the Web to get information on products and services, and 15 percent had made purchases on-line. According to an earlier survey, companies offering merchandise on the Internet posted $1.2 billion in sales in 1996, more than double the 1995 figure.

The first companies to get on line saw it mostly as a marketing venture, a way to get their name out in front of more customers. Though sales over the Internet remain a modest portion of revenues for most companies, the Web is starting to transform the way they do business.

"A lot of things will have to be rethought," said Yoav Shohan, a professor of computer science at Stanford University. "Supply chains, brokerage services, middlemen — a lot of that will change."

Companies that aren't sure their customers are on line may be surprised. Jim Barksdale, Netscape Communications Inc. president and chief executive, said the only way to find out what the opportunities are is to set up a site.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 28, 1997:

You gain financially because of a natural talent that comes to light. You will put in many hard hours to realize what you want professionally, but it will be worth it. A partner supports you in realizing a long-term desire; your relationship benefits as a result. Be direct with partners and bosses, even if it is occasionally uncomfortable. If you are single, your self-confidence will grow because of caring feedback. If attached, the two of you will bond more. Special times together become more important. Plan on increased intimacy, and more one-on-one time. ARIES tests your patience.

BORN TODAY

Actress Kathy Bates (1948), actor-director Mel Brooks (1928), Sen. Carl Levin (1934)

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★★ You are serious about a new change. Others clearly get your message! A friend pushes you in a positive way to have a good time. Once you get started, you are on a roll. If single, a new relationship could be in the offing. Tonight: Make it as you want it!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Much is going on behind the scenes. Be realistic about what is happening, and don't push too hard. You feel tired. A boss or older relative demands more from you than you can give. At home, you find contentment. Tonight: Do for yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★★ Focus on getting what you want. Turn on your charm. You want to take off, and entice another to follow you. What opens up today can be positive. You break new ground. Tonight: Do something different.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Maintain a high profile. Be willing to spend money on your image. Indulge a loved one or partner on the way. Though you might have a responsibility or two, you enjoy yourself later in the day. Don't be uptight. Tonight: Have a good time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★★ Reach out for others, and put on your best dancing shoes. Expect adventure. You enter a new arena; be willing to take risks and forge new ties. You discover that a friend has many fun ideas; go along! Tonight: Let it all hang out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ You are sensitive about an emotional matter. Share what is bothering you with a partner; clear up a problem, or heal a wound. Emphasize togetherness. You will be surprised by what a little nurturing can do for a relationship. Tonight: Snuggle in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★★ Defer to another. Let him tell you what would knock his socks off, and happily accommodate him. Be naughty. Fun is for you and those in your life. A partner who is stern at times, loosens up. Make time for a party. Tonight: Find the action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★ Another places you in a golden light, as if you can do no wrong. Though you know better, you are unlikely to say so. In some way, you need to be of service; help a friend. He appreciates your caring efforts. Then take time for yourself. Tonight: Make it an early night.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

82-year-old Anthony Quinn receives award for promotion of Greece's image

RETHYMNO, Greece — His step may be slower than when he danced as "Zorba the Greek," but Anthony's Quinn's smile was just as broad as he returned to the place where the movie was filmed.

Anthony Quinn returns to place where "Zorba the Greek" was filmed.

"I have many dreams of this place," said the 82-year-old actor, who arrived Friday in Crete to receive an award for his contribution to the promotion of the Greece's image.

Quinn, who is of Mexican descent, told reporters he wants to do one more movie dealing with Greece. In addition to portraying the high-spirited Zorba in 1964, he played a Greek fighter in 1961's "The Guns of Navarone" and starred in the 1978 television movie "The Greek Tycoon," based on the life of shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

PHOENIX — So what will it be? John Wayne Parkway? American Indian Veterans Memorial Parkway? A combination of both?

The likely answer: Arizona 347.

Pinal County officials saluted the late actor by putting his name on a road where he once owned a ranch. But some American Indians protested because the road crosses the Gila River Indian Reservation, and they didn't like that it bore the name of a man who became famous fighting Indians in the movies.

Pinal County salutes John Wayne by putting his name on a road.

County supervisors thought they'd resolved the dispute Wednesday by renaming the part of the road that goes through the reservation the American Indian Veterans Memorial Parkway.

It turns out the whole argument is moot: The road's operation will be taken over by the state as early as next month. And highway officials say the state plans to go back to Arizona 347.

NIPIGON, Ontario — Bob Seger faces an impaired driving charge after his car ran off a road in northern Ontario.

Seger wasn't injured when his 1997 BMW went off the Trans-Canada Highway on Wednesday night.

Ontario Provincial Police said Seger was cooperative, but the 52-year-old musician also was charged with failing to provide a breath sample.

Seger was released on bail and has a court date of July 30.

LONDON — Rick Parfitt is ready to rock all over the world.

The lead singer of the band Status Quo has recovered from an emergency quadruple heart bypass operation last month and said Friday he's ready for two comeback shows in England.

Parfitt and fellow Status Quo stalwart Francis Rossi planned to perform July 30 at the opening of a new soccer stadium in Sunderland and Aug. 2 in Norwich.

"Doing the gigs will close the door on the whole thing," Parfitt told Press Association, Britain's news agency. "I've been given the go-ahead to exercise now and I'm raring to go. I can't wait to do my first gig, just try and stop me."

Parfitt and Rossi are the only remaining original members of Status Quo, which has been a fixture in British rock since its first hit single, "Pictures of Matchstick Men," in 1968. They topped charts in 1977 covering John Fogerty's "Rockin' All Over the World."

WASHINGTON — Millionaire oilman and former California Rep. Michael Huffington and his wife, Republican pundit and columnist Ariana Huffington, obtained a divorce here Thursday.

His lawyer, Marna Tucker, said the breakup was "one of the most amicable" ones she had ever seen.

The couple will share custody of their two daughters, Christina, 6, and Isabella, 8, whom they described in a statement as "the most important thing in our lives."

"Therefore, we'll always remain a part of each's life," they said in the statement.

Mrs. Huffington will live with her children in the Brentwood neighborhood of Los Angeles in a new home that was included in her multimillion-dollar divorce settlement.

The Huffingtons married in 1986 but lived increasingly separate lives after he lost a 1994 Senate race in California to Democrat Dianne Feinstein.

Last year, Huffington moved to Los Angeles while his wife spent much of her time in Washington in their $4.25 million Wesley Heights mansion.

The marriage was the first for each.

Tyson faces cloudy future if he loses

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Boxing Writer

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson will mark his birthday Monday as a heavyweight champion again or as a 31-year-old fighter with a cloudy future in the violent sport he once dominated.

No matter what happens, however, in the Evander Holyfield-Tyson rematch Saturday night in the MGM Grand Garden, neither man has indicated he will retire.

"Boxing is the best sport in the world," said Tyson, who will try and regain the WBA title he lost when he was stopped in the 11th round by Holyfield Nov. 9. "There will never be a sport as good as boxing. I love the sport."

"What motivates a man who has money and family and is happy?" said the 34-year-old Holyfield, who has been boxing as an amateur and professional for 26 years. "If the love of the sport is there, it doesn't get old. He loves what he is doing."

Since becoming the youngest heavyweight champion at age 20 by stopping Trevor Berbick in the second round for the WBC title in 1986, Tyson has been boxing's major attraction, except for the three years he served in prison on a rape conviction before being released March 25, 1995.

He quickly resumed his role as the Big Fighter, and in five fights since his release, he has made more than $100 million. His purse for the rematch is $30 million.

Should Tyson, who is a 9-5 favorite — compared to being a 7-1 choice in the first fight — lose the rematch, he would remain an attraction, but at considerably lower purses. An exception might be a fight against George Foreman.

A lot of people think Holyfield, who is getting $35 million Saturday night, should retire — win or lose. He has nothing left to prove and he has been in many tough fights.

"At any time this game can end for you, and I pray and ask the Lord when it's time he let me know," Holyfield said. "I used to be afraid because people talk about me staying too long or not knowing how to quit. But every time I retire, I want to go to the gym again. Maybe when the whole world says I'm the best around, that will be it."

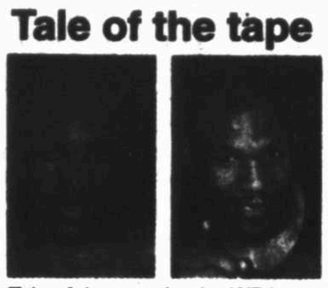

Holyfield appeared headed for retirement in 1992 after losing to Riddick Bowe and he retired briefly because of what was thought to be a heart problem after losing to Michael Moorer in 1994.

"If I truly feel I have done what I set out to do, I'll

Sosa gets big deal

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa became the third-highest paid player in baseball Friday, signing a four-year contract with the Chicago Cubs for $42.5 million.

Sosa, who's earning $5.25 million this season, will get yearly salaries of $7 million in 1998, $8 million in 1999, $10 million in 2000 and $11 million in 2001. Sosa and the Cubs have a mutual option for $12 million in 2002. If Sosa exercises it but the Cubs decline, he would get an additional $2.5 million buyout. If the option is exercised the contract would be worth $52 million over five seasons.

Sosa received a $4 million signing bonus, with $2 million payable now, and an additional $2 million due in January.

Sosa had a $5.75 million player option for next year under his current contract, but already told the Cubs he would not exercise it.

MLB officials investigating Giants scout

■ Dominican Rebublic players come forth with allegations of sexual abuse by man who signed Gonzalez, Rodriguez for Texas Rangers.

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Baseball officials are investigating allegations that San Francisco Giants scout Luis Rosa sexually molested eight baseball players in the Dominican Republic, the Giants said Friday.

Rosa, 51, resigned two weeks ago as the Giants coordinator of Latin American operations but has denied the allegations, according to the Giants.

The players, who made their accusations on television in the Dominican Republic earlier this month, claim that entrance into Rosa's baseball academy in Puerto Rico required sexual submission.

Major League Baseball has sent Miguel Rodriguez, a consultant, to the Dominican Republic to investigate.

The Giants have also traveled to the Dominican Republic vice president and general counsel Jack Bair and Rick Ragazzo, the club's international scouting director. Their investigation continues, Bair said.

"The Giants take these allegations very seriously, and upon concluding their investigation, will take whatever corrective action may be appropriate," the Giants said in a statement.

Rosa has scouted for Montreal, Baltimore, Seattle, San Diego, Texas, San Francisco and the Chicago Cubs.

He is credited with discovering or signing Roberto Alomar, Sandy Alomar Jr., Juan Gonzalez, Ivan Rodriguez, Sammy Sosa, Wilson Alvarez, Carlos Baerga, Benito Santiago and others.

"I'm surprised to hear this," said Roberto Alomar, now the second baseman for the Baltimore Orioles. "To me, he's a good guy.... I know nothing about this case."

Angels start homestand with win over familiar Wichita Wranglers

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Forgive the Midland Angels and the Wichita Wranglers if they look a little sick after each game of the current Halos' homestand.

They just might be a little sick of each other. After splitting a six-game series in Wichita, Kan., the two teams started another six-game series at Christensen Stadium on the way to a 12-game series. And would it be much of a surprise that the teams battled to a nail biter with the Angels escaping with an 8-7 victory Friday night?

The Angels got the best of the Wranglers after Wichita took a 5-1 lead early. With some clutch hitting and some power in the form of a two-run homer from first baseman Danny Buxbaum in the second inning, the Halos climbed back to a 5-5 tie.

Midland took the lead for good in the fourth inning with a two-run shot by Ben "Benji" Molina. Right fielder Jason Herrick added Midland's third long ball of the night with a towering shot over the right field fence in the fifth frame for all the insurance the Angels needed.

That set up the Angels' relief corps, which has been criticized in the past for letting games slip away, in the bottom four frames to step up. And step up they did as newcomer Bill Bene, Bob Gamez, and Nick Skuse, combined to allow just one run. Rob Bonanno, although not at his best on this night, kept the Angels (7-6) in the game early to get his third win of the year.

"They did a good job, kept the ball down and threw strikes," catcher Molina said about the Angels' relief pitching. "That's the main thing for me and that is that the pitchers keep the ball down and throw strikes."

Angels second baseman Keith Luuloa attributed the win to just old-fashioned teamwork.

"It seems like we're picking each other up as far as the offense, defense, and pitching," Luuloa said. "Everything's working out well so far and the turn out has been good. Everybody pulled together tonight, played well and got a win."

Luuloa is one of those players who is scratching his head at the weird scheduling of the Texas League, which has these two teams playing 12 games in a row and has the Angels playing with Tulsa and Shreveport throughout most of July.

"I think this is one of the hardest things for a baseball player to play the same team 12 games in a row. There's a lot of games for each team to figure each other's weakness. Sometimes it gets tough,"

Rain washes out Wimbledon again; matches may be played on Sunday

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Wimbledon was all wet again Friday.

Relentless rain at the All England Club reached historic proportions, and officials reluctantly prepared to break with tradition and schedule play Sunday if the forecast looks good.

Rain spoiled an entire session for the second consecutive day, and Wimbledon fell more than 200 matches behind schedule, making this the wettest first week ever.

The only other consecutive washouts in the tournament's 121-history occurred in 1909, also on the first Thursday and Friday.

With only two matches completed since Wednesday, 32 players were still waiting to play first-round matches. Wimbledon is now farther behind schedule than in 1991, the only time matches were held on the first Sunday.

That session ranks among Wimbledon's most memorable, attracting a youthful, boisterous crowd of nearly 25,000. They gave the ballboys and ballgirls a standing ovation, counted warmup strokes out loud and reveled in a rare chance to set foot inside the very proper All England Club.

After clearing logistical hurdles, the tournament apparently is braced for a repeat.

"Everyone with whom we have consulted has been most understanding and cooperative," club chief executive Christopher Gorringe said. "We will now have to see what the weather will be for Sunday before we make the final decision."

The forecast said more showers were likely Saturday, with gradual clearing Sunday.

Attendance Thursday and Friday totaled 56,000, and they didn't see a shot. Dismal conditions that have plagued Wimbledon this week actually turned worse Friday — windy and chilly with pelting rain that blew sideways.

Philly sends Van Horn to Jersey in eight-player blockbuster deal

By Tom Canavan
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New Jersey Nets and Philadelphia 76ers finally completed their multiplayer trade that will bring No. 2 draft choice Keith Van Horn to New Jersey.

In the deal, delayed more than 24 hours because of a grievance filed by the Boston Celtics, the Nets got the rights to Van Horn, a forward from Utah, and three veterans, center Michael Cage, swingman Lucious Harris and forward Don MacLean. The Sixers received the rights to Villanova forward Tim Thomas (the seventh pick) and Bradley guard Anthony Parker (21st pick overall) and two veterans, swingman Jimmy Jackson and center Eric Montross.

Van Horn, who had told the Sixers that he did not want to play for them, wowed the Nets in pre-draft workouts, especially with his athletic ability, New Jersey general manager John Nash said.

"On the day of the draft, it was evident to us that several teams were coveting his services," Nash said. "Frankly if we had not acquired him I don't know where he would have wound up, whether it would have been Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago or Denver."

"But we feel very good in having achieved our goal in acquiring the rights to Keith Van Horn," said Nash, who rated Van Horn the second-best player in the draft behind Wake Forest's Tim Duncan, chosen No. 1 by San Antonio.

Billy King, the Sixers vice president of basketball administration, was just as excited about pulling off the deal he termed the largest in team history.

"It's something we've been working hard for. ... This one took some time to get done," he said.

Sosa celebrates new contract with 0-for-3 day; Cubs still win

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa can celebrate his new $42.5 million, four-year contract. Kevin Foster will settle for a two-seam fastball.

Foster won for the sixth time in eight decisions, and Mark Grace and Shawon Dunston drove in Chicago's runs Friday to lead the Cubs over the Houston Astros 2-1.

Sosa went 0-for-3 with an intentional walk in his first game since agreeing to a $42.5 million, four-year contract with Cubs.

"I'm happy for him," said Grace, adding the signing doesn't really mean anything to the team. "Right now, the only thing meaningful to us is our record."

Foster (9-5), who lost to Houston 3-1 in his previous start, allowed seven hits in 6 2-3 innings, helping the Cubs win for just the third time in 11 games. Turk Wendell finished with hitless relief for his fourth save.

Foster added the two-seam fastball this spring under the tutelage of pitching coach Phil Regan.

"I'm using it more this year," said the right-hander, who led the NL in home runs allowed in 1995 with 32. "It's a regular fastball but it stays down more in the strike zone. I get a lot more ground ball outs."

The wind, blowing from right to left at 13 mph, actually helped the pitchers.

"I think this year he's had much better luck and pitched on some better days," Cubs manager Jim Riggleman said of Foster. "There were some parts of the ballpark where it would go out."

In Foster's nine wins, he has a 2.47 ERA. In his five losses, his ERA in 11.17.

"Today was a day when the pitching overmatched the hitting," Foster said.

Mike Hampton (3-7) dropped to 0-7 in 11 road starts this season.

"I'm not thinking about the streak," Hampton said. "I have the confidence to pitch anywhere. I do like the mound at the 'Dome. It's my fourth year there and I'm comfortable pitching there."

Hampton, who has not won on the road since last Aug. 16 at Wrigley Field, allowed six hits in 7 1-3 innings, struck out five and walked four.

"If he pitches like this on the road, we'll win one of them," Astros manager Larry Dierker said.

NL Roundup

Doug Glanville singled leading off the first and advanced on a balk and a wild pitch. Brian McRae walked, Grace hit a sacrifice fly and Sosa reached on a fielder's choice.

Sosa then stole second, reached third on a throwing error by catcher Brad Ausmus and scored on Dunston's double.

"Who would ever think that with the wind blowing out at Wrigley Field that there would be no home runs," Dierker said.

Houston, which had won four straight against Chicago, loaded the bases in the second and Sean Berry scored on Hampton's groundout. Houston loaded the bases again in the sixth but Hampton hit an inning-ending grounder.

"It was a good ballgame," Riggleman said. "But we're going to have to break out and put six or seven runs up there to take some of the pressure off our pitchers."

Braves 7, Phillies 1

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux pitched a six-hitter, throwing just 18 balls in 89 pitches, to lead the Atlanta Braves over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Maddux (10-3) struck out eight and walked none in sending the Phillies to their 12th loss in 13 games. Maddux, 21-10 against the Phillies, did not allow a run until Rico Brogna's RBI double with two outs in the ninth. Maddux has not walked a batter in 27 innings and has only 13 walks in 116 2-3 innings this season.

Jeff Blauser had three hits, including a two-run homer, as the Braves improved to 5-0 against the Phillies this season. Fred McGriff and Andruw Jones drove in two runs each for Atlanta, which has won three straight overall and six of eight.

Garrett Stephenson (2-4) was pounded for six runs and seven hits in five innings.

Expos 2, Marlins 0

MIAMI — Dustin Hermanson, Marc Valdes, Dave Veres and Ugueth Urbina combined for Montreal's club-record seventh shutout in June, limiting Florida to six hits in the Expos' victory.

Vladimir Guerrero had a career-high four singles and drove in a run as Montreal — shut out for 13 innings over two games by Marlins ace Kevin Brown — strung together four singles in a two-run sixth inning.

Brown (7-5) pitched seven innings, striking out five, walking one and hitting two batter.

Pirates 6, Mets 1

PITTSBURGH — Jason Schmidt shut down the New York Mets for the second time in a week with his first career complete-game victory and Kevin Young's two-run homer keyed a four-run first inning in the Pittsburgh Pirates' victory.

The Pirates were swept in a four-game series in New York last weekend, even though Schmidt limited the Mets to a run and four hits over seven innings in Pittsburgh's 3-2 loss Saturday. He gave up five hits and a run Friday.

Schmidt (3-4), now 2-0 in his last four starts after winning only once in his first 11 outings, has a 1.12 ERA in two starts against the Mets this season. Dave Mlicki (4-6) was the loser.

Reds 5, Cardinals 3

CINCINNATI — Willie Greene hit his third career grand slam in the sixth inning, rallying the Cincinnati Reds over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Greene hit the first pitch from Alan Benes (7-7) into the second deck in right field for a 5-3 lead. All four runs were unearned, the result of an inning-opening error by second baseman Delino DeShields.

Bret Tomko (4-1) allowed two hits and four walks over 6 1-3 innings, including Mike Difelice's two-run homer in the second. John Mabry had a sacrifice fly that put the Cardinals ahead 3-1 in the fourth.

Jeff Shaw got the last four outs for his 15th save, nailing down the Reds' second victory in five games against the Cardinals this season.

Giants 6, Rockies 3

DENVER — Kirk Rueter allowed six hits in eight-plus innings and J.T. Snow, Barry Bonds, and Jose Vizcaino homered as the San Francisco Giants beat the Colorado Rockies.

Rueter (5-2) won for the third straight outing, helping the Giants push their lead over Colorado in the NL West to 4 1/2 games. Snow had two hits and two RBIs, and Vizcaino, Darryl Hamilton and Stan Javier also had two hits.

Colorado rookie Neifi Perez hit a two-run homer, his second, chasing Rueter with none out in the ninth. Rod Beck finished for his major league-leading 26th save. John Thomson (2-5) was the losing pitcher.

Tigers get by Red Sox in 11 after O'Leary's gamble fails

Associated Press

BOSTON — The ball seemed to hang up just enough for Troy O'Leary to take a chance. He shouldn't have.

Tony Clark's 11th-inning liner sank in front of the diving left fielder and rolled to the wall for the winning double in the Detroit Tigers' 2-1 win Friday night over the Boston Red Sox.

"The ball was hanging up there and I was concerned that he might catch it," Clark said. "It was a judgment call."

"The wind was blowing in and the ball stayed up," Boston catcher Scott Hatteberg said. "He just missed it."

O'Leary was playing left field because Wilfredo Cordero, the regular at that spot, missed his second consecutive game as a result of domestic abuse allegations involving his former wife.

The Red Sox said they learned of the allegations before Thursday night's 10-6 loss to the Tigers and pulled him from the starting lineup.

"I don't really pay much attention to the other team," Detroit manager Buddy Bell said. "I'm busy managing my own club, but it's unfortunate that they've had a lot of distractions."

Detroit scored the winning run off Chris Hammond (3-4). With Travis Fryman at first after a single, Clark hit his liner. O'Leary raced in and dove, but the ball bounced and rolled to the wall, allowing Fryman to score.

"Hindsight's always 20-20, but I'll take his aggressiveness," Boston manager Jimy Williams said. "He wanted the ball and dove to catch it. It didn't work out."

AL Roundup

Clark drove in both Detroit runs, while Mike Stanley's sacrifice fly sent home Boston's only run in the seventh.

Dan Miceli (1-1) pitched a perfect 10th inning for the victory. Todd Jones picked up his ninth save.

Yankees 3, Indians 2

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden stopped Cleveland again as the New York Yankees became the first AL team to beat an opponent 1,000 times, defeating the Indians for their fourth straight victory.

Sandy Alomar extended his hitting streak to 24 games, longest by an Indians player since Dale Mitchell's 27-game string in 1953.

Paul O'Neill hit a two-run double in the first inning and scored on Cecil Fielder's groundout, giving Gooden (3-0) a lead he never lost. Gooden, who beat the Indians last Friday at Jacobs Field, held them to one run on five singles in seven innings. He permitted only one runner past first base.

New York is 1,000-804 against Cleveland since the teams began playing in 1903. There are 12 instances of NL teams with at least 1,000 wins against an opponent, mostly because the National League began play in 1876.

Blue Jays 2, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — Robert Person and three relievers combined on a five-hitter as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Person (3-5) allowed one run and three hits in 7 2-3 innings before Dan Plesac retired Brady Anderson with the tying run on second base. Paul Spoljaric pitched out of a ninth-inning jam for his second save.

Person outdueled Scott Kamieniecki (6-4), who allowed two runs, five hits and two walks in seven innings.

White Sox 10, Twins 6

MINNEAPOLIS — Albert Belle had a career-high five hits, including his 18th homer, as the Chicago White Sox beat Minnesota to push their season-high winning streak to seven games.

Belle, who drove in two runs and scored four times, had three singles before his 407-foot solo drive off reliever Greg Swindell in the seventh. He added a two-out double in the ninth.

Jorge Fabregas also had four RBIs as the White Sox remained perfect since a 3-0 loss to the Twins in Chicago last Friday night. Since then, the White Sox have climbed from last place in the AL Central to second. They closed within one game of first-place Cleveland, which lost to the Yankees.

Royals 16, Brewers 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jay Bell hit a grand slam and Craig Paquette homered twice to lead the Kansas City Royals to a rout of the Milwaukee Brewers.

Bell and Paquette drove in five runs each as the Royals scored their most runs since beating the Angels 18-3 last Aug. 10. Kansas City had 15 hits in all.

Kevin Appier (6-5), who had gotten an average of just 4.1 runs of support coming in, allowed one run and five hits in six innings. Ben McDonald (6-5), winless in five starts, lasted just three-plus innings and gave up eight hits and nine runs — matching his career high.

Orioles obtain Berroa from A's

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles finally ended their search for a power hitter Friday, obtaining Geronimo Berroa from the Oakland Athletics for pitcher Jimmy Haynes and a player to be named.

Berroa, 32, hit .310 with 16 homers and 42 RBIs in 73 games with the A's this season. A year ago, the right-hander hit .290 with a career-high 36 homers and 106 RBIs.

"I've been waiting for it to happen. In this game, even when you're playing good, you never know where you are going to be," Berroa said. "I get to go from a last-place team to a first-place team, but I have got to make new friends and new fans."

Berroa said he'll fly to Baltimore on Saturday and hopes to be ready to play Sunday.

Berroa will fill the void left by the absence of outfielder Eric Davis, who is on the 60-day disabled list following cancer surgery. The Orioles are also without catcher Chris Hoiles, who is on the DL with a torn knee ligament.

The Orioles had been blanked in four of eight games before facing Toronto on Friday night.

"With the reality of Eric Davis being out indefinitely, we needed to fill a void in the middle of our lineup and we believe we have done that with the acquisition of Geronimo," Baltimore general manager Pat Gillick said.

"We believe that he will make our already potent offense that much stronger. This move provides the club with another power threat in the middle of the lineup."

Ever since Davis had a cancerous tumor removed from his colon June 13, Gillick has been searching for someone to take his place. Among those considered was Mark McGuire of Oakland, Ron Gant of St. Louis, David Segui of Montreal and Toronto's Joe Carter.

"We're going to try and win this thing this year," Baltimore assistant general manager Kevin Malone said. "We've had frequent, consistent conversations with three or four clubs since Chris Hoiles went down. But our discussions with Oakland were always on the front burner."

The Orioles finally landed Berroa, even though he has been bothered by a shoulder injury. Berroa was given an MRI earlier this week.

"It was clean, no damage," Malone said.

Haynes, 24, was 5-4 with a 3.44 ERA in 16 starts with Triple-A Rochester this season. Last year, the right-hander was 3-6 with a 8.29 ERA in 26 games with the Orioles.

He will start his career in the Oakland organization with Triple-A Edmonton of the Pacific Coast League.

"From our standpoint, there were really two things that were important," Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson said. "We needed to improve our pitching. Haynes is someone who has the potential to be in our rotation this season. Secondly, we were just terrible oversupplied with players of similar abilities. We've seen the emergence of Matt Stairs and we need to find out about Patrick Lennon."

With Griffey hurt, McGwire takes over as most likely to break Maris' record

By Rob Gloster
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — With Ken Griffey Jr. sidelined by a hamstring injury, the focus in the early season "Who Can Catch Roger Maris?" sweepstakes has switched to Mark McGwire.

McGwire hit his 28th homer of the season, a grand slam against the Rangers, in Oakland's 6-3 win Thursday night over Texas to pull within one home run of Griffey for the major league lead.

McGwire, who generally is uncomfortable talking about his homers, sneers at suggestions he could threaten Maris' record of 61 homers in a season. And Oakland manager Art Howe says it's too early for such talk.

But a couple of the Rangers' big hitters say they think McGwire, if he stays healthy, has a good shot at the record.

"He's unbelievable. He is the best power hitter in baseball," Texas slugger Juan Gonzalez said. "I think Mark will break Maris' record. He's such a strong man he can hit it out off the handle."

Griffey is expected to be out of Seattle's starting lineup through at least the weekend with a mildly strained right hamstring.

"One thing about Mark is, if anybody is going to break Maris' record, it will be him," Will Clark of the Rangers said. "His swing gets the ball in the air. Griffey basically sprays the ball around."

The biggest problem for McGwire always has been staying healthy. Back and heel injuries limited him to 74 games combined in 1993 and 1994, and he has not played in 140 games in a season since 1991.

Last season, he missed the first 18 games with a foot injury but still hit a career-high 52 homers to lead the majors. It was the highest AL home run total since Maris hit 61 and Mickey Mantle had 54 in 1961.

McGwire, who appeared in 130 games in 1996, became the only player in major league history to hit 50 homers while playing in fewer than 140 games. He did it by averaging a home run every 8.13 at-bats, tying his own major league record.

So far this season, McGwire has been healthy. He has appeared in 77 games, which ties him for the AL lead.

"The difference this year is that he's playing," Howe said. "He's getting more opportunities."

McGwire, whose 357 career homers entering Friday night's game against Texas left him one behind Yogi Berra for 44th place on the career list, has hit some mammoth shots this season. His longest came Tuesday, a drive off Seattle's Randy Johnson that traveled an estimated 538 feet in the Kingdome.

His homer Thursday was considerably shorter. In fact, when McGwire hit a high fly ball toward left-center with the bases loaded in the first, he figured he'd just get a sacrifice fly out of it.

Instead, he ended up with his ninth career grand slam.

"When I hit it, I knew I got it in the outfield deep enough to be a sacrifice fly," McGwire said. "Then it just left the ballpark. I was as surprised as anyone."

Howe started yelling at his players to tag up when he saw McGwire's shot head toward the outfield.

"It was so high and so deep," the manager said, "but it went out. Just another example of his strength."

The 6-foot-5, 245-pound McGwire, who has spent his entire 11-year career with Oakland but will be eligible for free agency after this season,is averaging a home run every 12.17 at-bats during his career. That's second only to Babe Ruth's average of a homer every 11.76 at-bats.

Sorenstam shoots 65 at Shoprite

SOMERS POINT, N.J. (AP) — Annika Sorenstam watched the ball climb the rise on the 15th green in the Shoprite LPGA Classic and slide down the slick slope toward the cup 26 feet away.

As it neared the hole she rocked back on her left foot and kicked her right leg into the air, trying to keep the ball from breaking too much. When it caught the lip and spun in for a birdie she punched the air with her fist.

So goes the year of the hottest golfer in the world, who is playing so well right now that she seems to control the ball even after it leaves her club.

Sorenstam, already a four-time winner this year on the LPGA tour with eight top-three finishes in 12 starts, was nearly perfect on Friday as she made six birdies and an eagle to shoot a 6-under-par 65, one stroke ahead of Caroline Blaylock.

Jane Geddes, Patty Sheehan, Donna Andrews and Vickie Odegard were two strokes back at 67.

The 26-year-old Sorenstam was striking the ball with such relentless consistency and accuracy that her most memorable shots were her bad ones — because they were so rare.

Her only slip in the first round at Greate Bay Resort & Country Club came when she plunked her second shot on No. 13 into the water and made a double bogey.

"I hit it really fat," she said about the errant 5-iron. "I had 168 yards to the green and I hit it about 70 yards."

It was a rare mistake for Sorenstam, who in two weeks will be trying to become the first woman to win the U.S. Open three consecutive times.

Shooting a 65 despite a double bogey was a clear message of how dominant Sorenstam has been this year. It was her lowest score of the year and the 19th time in 45 rounds this year she has been in the 60s.

Six players were at 68 and defending champion Dottie Pepper was in a group at 69. Karrie Webb and Laura Davies both shot 71s.

Sorenstam, who made 3s on seven of the first eight holes, had birdies on Nos. 1, 3, 5 and 7 then hit a 5-wood to 20 feet on the par-5 eighth hole and made the eagle putt.

The only hole in her first eight that was not a 3 was on No. 6, where she made a par 4.

"And I almost made a 3 there," she said. "I hit the lip from 7 feet."

Sorenstam bounced back from her double bogey with the birdie on No. 15 and another one on the next hole when he hit a great punch wedge from 60 yards out to 6 feet.

She made a testy 10-foot downhill putt on the last hole to preserve her 65.

Blaylock, playing in the penultimate group of the day, birdied the last two holes to move into second place alone. She is a professional but not a member of the LPGA tour and got into the tournament on a sponsor's exemption.

Geddes, trying for her first victory since 1994, had a chance to share second place but made a bogey on the last hole when she missed the green with her 6-iron approach shot and then chipped poorly to 20 feet.

"That's getting to be a little bugaboo," Geddes said about getting the last of her 11 tour victories three years ago. "I'd like to post a win. It'll come in time."

Geddes took advantage of the two closing par-5s on the front nine to make birdies and get her round started.

"If you get a birdie in the first seven holes — great," Geddes said. "But when you get to No. 8, that's when your round kind of starts."

The third through the seventh holes played directly into a stiff wind off the nearby Atlantic Ocean and the closing two par-5s on the front nine played downwind.

"It was definitely a one-club wind out there," she said.

Sorenstam, in her last tournament before the U.S. Open, is playing with the kind of calm confidence that makes for great years.

"It's a new day tomorrow," she said. "I'm not going to change anything. It seems like it is working."

DIVOTS: Geddes, who at age 37 is leading the tour in driving distance, gives all the credit to her equipment, the Callaway Biggest Big Bertha driver and the Bridgestone Dyna-wing ball. "I think my equipment has added 20 to 30 yards to my game," she said. ... Sorenstam's last LPGA event was the Michelob Light Classic a month ago, which she won.

Japan's Isao Aoki blasts out of a sandtrap Friday during the second round of the U.S. Senior Open. Aoki stood at 11 over par, 13 strokes behind leader Kermit Zarley at the conclusion of the round.

Son knows best: Zarley leads U.S. Senior Open by a stroke

OLYMPIA FIELDS, Ill. (AP) — Kermit Zarley started listening to his son — who also happens to be his caddie — and used four consecutive birdies Friday to take a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the U.S. Senior Open.

Zarley, who argued with son Mike after missing a 4-foot putt on the first hole, shot his second straight 69 and was the only player at 2-under-par on the challenging North Course at Olympia Fields Country Club.

After one round, there were 18 players within two strokes of the lead. Friday, just six could make that claim.

Graham Marsh shot a 67, the tournament's best round, to join Dave Eichelberger, Tom Wargo and John Bland one stroke behind Zarley. Jimmy Powell was two back at even-par.

Bob Charles and Steve Veriato were another shot off the pace at 1-over.

Most big-name golfers made the cut, though each will need a big weekend performance to contend. Chi Chi Rodriguez trailed by five strokes, Lee Trevino by six, Jack Nicklaus by seven, Hale Irwin by nine and Arnold Palmer by 13.

"I'm not out of it by any means," said Nicklaus, who won the event in 1991 and 1993. "But I'm going to need a couple of birdies early tomorrow to get myself going."

Irwin, whose four victories this season lead the Senior PGA Tour, must get more aggressive.

"It's there for the taking, but no one seems to be taking it," he said. "Two birdies in two days is not going to do anything."

Defending champion Dave Stockton missed the cut at 12-over-par and said he was "embarrassed" to play so poorly.

Zarley, who has only one career senior victory, had a chance to win the 1993 U.S. Senior Open. But he lipped out two putts on the 70th and 71st holes and ended up in third, two strokes behind Nicklaus.

"Winning this would mean everything to him," Mike Zarley said. "It would be the Super Bowl."

The younger Zarley suggested that his father aim at the left lip on Friday's first hole, but the golfer read the green differently and ended up missing the 4-foot birdie putt.

"I could have kicked myself," Kermit Zarley said. "I should listen to him. He's reading the greens good."

The two argued briefly and Kermit struggled through the first 11 holes. He was at 1-over for the tournament before he took Mike's advice and made a 30-foot putt on 12. The elder Zarley followed with 15-foot birdie putts on 13 and 14 and a 12-footer on 15 before finishing bogey-birdie-bogey.

"I needed my son to calm me down," Kermit Zarley said. "Patience certainly is an important factor in playing good golf."

While Zarley broke what had been a five-way logjam atop the leaderboard and the rest of the field began to spread out, nobody was beating the course.

With its tough pin placements, tricky greens, thick rough and 6,841-yard length, Olympia Fields "is the toughest course we have ever had to play the U.S. Senior Open on," Rodriguez said.

Divots: Back in 1965, Zarley cofounded the PGA Tour's bible study group. He also has authored three books on religion and world affairs: "The Gospel," "The Gospels Interwoven" and "Palestine Is Coming." ... Jim Dent withdrew from the tournament because of a bad back. ... David Graham five-putted from about 15 feet on No. 18 for a triple-bogey 7. He still made the cut at 148. ... Rodriguez played well but still shot a 72 Friday. Asked if that was fair, he said: "If life was fair, my name would be Rockefeller, not Rodriguez." ...Stockton is now 0-for-23 at defending titles he won on either the senior or regular tour. ... Palmer has played in the event 17 times, missing the cut only twice. He didn't learn he made the cut until the last golfer on the course, David Oakley, parred No. 18; had Oakley birdied, Palmer would have been out.

Norman hits clubhouse ahead of rain, St. Jude pack

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Greg Norman didn't mind waiting 3 1/2 hours to finish off his second round with two putts. After all, that's more than 103 others got to do Friday.

Norman sat out the rain delay in the locker room, then headed to No. 18 to two-putt for par and a 6-under 65 that gave him the clubhouse lead before play was suspended in the $1.5 million St. Jude Classic.

"I played very well today. Tee to green was exceptionally good, and I got the job done. Right now I don't care what happens. We finished the day. I was a bit little concerned if we'd be coming out at 7 in the morning to have one maybe two putts," he said.

Norman's bogey-free round put him at 9-under 133 for two rounds. Gene Sauers was at 10-under with one hole remaining when play was suspended after the day's third rain delay.

Robert Damron, who shared the first-round lead at 6-under with Sauers and Lennie Clements, hadn't teed off yet. Among the players in the clubhouse, Tommy Armour III (67) and Jay Don Blake (64) were tied at 8-under 134.

A rain delay forced Thursday's first round to be suspended because of darkness, and more rain held up the start of play for an hour Friday. Thunderstorms struck again in the afternoon, stopping play for another 3 1/2 hours.

After the rain stopped, the temperature quickly jumped into the low 90s, prompting Armour to call the TPC at Southwind course a sauna. The steamy weather had one of his playing partners staggering over the last few holes.

"It's just hot," Armour said. "There's not a lot of air blowing out there. It comes right out of that zoysia."

With the repeated delays, Norman started his second round about a half-hour after concluding the last few holes of his first round at 3-under. He wasted little time in moving to the top of the leaderboard with four of his six birdies on the front nine.

He had reached the green on the par-4 18th in two when lightning stopped play again. Following his wait, he two-putted for par.

For Norman, winning for the first time this season would be a nice warmup for the British Open in two weeks and a good way to help him forget missing the cut in the U.S. Open. He's come close with ties for second and third in eight events.

But the delays meant only seven hours of golf was played Friday.

Drivers on fast track at Pikes Peak facility

■ Auto Racing

FOUNTAIN, Colo. (AP) — Appropriately for a new race at a new track, there was a new name at the top of the speed charts Friday after the opening day of practice for Sunday's Samsonite 200 at Pikes Peak International Raceway.

Kenny Brack, a 31-year-old rookie from Sweden, turned a lap of 173.486 mph to lead the way on the one-mile oval in the shadow of its namesake mountain.

"This was the wrong day to be quickest," Brack said with a grin. "But maybe it stays the same tomorrow (in qualifying)."

Brack did test here for two days earlier this month, but he said that was "basically little use" because the construction work that was going on during that time sent up a cloud of dust that made the track particularly treacherous and difficult.

It was still worth it, though, because "It's good for a driver to do laps. Obviously, the more you run the better you know the track."

Sunday's race will be only his fourth Indy Racing League event and only his second run on a short oval.

On Friday, the asphalt was clean and dry and Brack was able to take advantage of the situation in his Oldsmobile-powered G Force, finishing second in the morning practice to Tony Stewart and moving to the top of the scoring monitor later in the day.

"The speed differential tomorrow will depend on the weather," Brack said. "We're pretty much flat all the way around right now. The only way to go faster is to trim the car out. But we're pretty much at the limit now."

Scott Goodyear, who finished second to teammate Arie Luyendyk in the Indianapolis 500 last month, was second Friday at 173.452, followed by Stewart at 173.419 and 21-year-old Jimmy Kite, making his IRL debut, at 172.117.

"I agree with Kenny," Goodyear said. "I don't think we're going to go a lot faster tomorrow."

Asked why the IRL teams have been able to get up to top speed so fast on a brand new track, the Canadian driver said, "One of the things is that it's a smooth race track. At other tracks, you have to try to get the car over the bumps. You're constantly working with the shocks and springs. Here, it's so smooth you don't have to do that."

In fact, nobody had any complaints about the new track, which is banked 10 degrees in the turns, 7 degrees on the front straightaway and 3 degrees on the back straight.

"It's probably the best paved track I've ever been on," Stewart said. "You go to any new track and they have a bump somewhere, something that is going to bother you. But not here. It's like running on a billiard table."

Two drivers did have their problems Friday, with Luyendyk, riding a two-race win string, and Mark Dismore both hitting the wall during the morning practice.

Both drivers came away with bruised right knees and both teams were hoping to get the cars repaired for Saturday's practice and qualifying.

It was a peaceful day for the IRL, which recently fired the U.S. Auto Club as its sanctioning body after embarrassing incidents at Indianapolis and earlier this month at Texas.

"Well, I can stop holding my breath. We made it through our first day as a sanctioning body," said Leo Mehl, executive director of the IRL.

Scelzi tops Top Fuel qualifying

MADISON, Ill. — Gary Scelzi was the quickest driver during both rounds of Top Fuel qualifying at the inaugural Sears Craftsman Nationals, earning the No. 1 spot with a run of 4.707 seconds (300.50 mph) Friday night.

Point leader Scelzi, a rookie from Fresno, Calif., also led the afternoon session by covering the quarter-mile at Gateway International Raceway in 4.736 (295.17).

Other No. 1 qualifiers were Randy Anderson in Funny Car, Jim Yates in Pro Stock and Matt Hines in Pro Stock Motorcycle.

Qualifying ends with sessions at 11 a.m. CDT and 3 p.m. Saturday. This is the first NHRA national event at Gateway, just east of St. Louis.

Stevens beats out field of greats to claim first Jockey Championship

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

GRAND PRAIRIE — Gary Stevens, who won the Kentucky Derby aboard Silver Charm, earned the $100,000 National All-Star Jockey Championship without winning a race Friday night, taking a second and two thirds in his four rides.

Stevens earned a $25,000 check and a handsome trophy with his 14-point finish while Chris McCarron, who had a winner and a fourth-place finisher, came in second with 12 points behind the jockey he upset in the Belmont Stakes to keep Silver Charm from winning the Triple Crown.

"Chris was the first one to congratulate me and he's a class act," Stevens said. "It was a great show. I'll be here next year for sure. A great event."

McCarron playfully threw water on Stevens after the race was over.

"He beat me tonight but I'm a prankster and I got him back a little bit," McCarron said.

Ronald Ardoin, Jerry Bailey, Pat Day and Mike Smith shared third with nine points each. Eddie Delahoussaye, Kent Desormeaux and Marlon St. Julien scored seven points each and Shane Sellers had six. Laffit Pincay Jr. and Jorge Velasquez were shut out.

Bailey had the honor of winning the first race in the four-race championship at Lone Star Park aboard Valley of Kings, who nipped Devil's Deal in a photo finish with Ardoin in the irons. The win gave Bailey nine points and Ardoin six under the 9-6-4-3-1 scoring system.

"That was an exciting way to get things under way," Bailey said. "I had a lot of horse under me but it was still close at the wire."

McCarron won the second race on Jack Lightening but could manage only a fourth out of his other three races.

Day won the third race on 10-1 shot Miss Utopia and Smith won the last race on Brentwood Pass.

Seven of the riders have combined to win 34 Triple Crown races, including 12 Kentucky Derbies. Yet they had never squared off against each other.

"This is the first time in my 24 years of riding that I've seen all the active Hall of Fame riders competing in the same race on the same day," said Bailey, twice a winner of the Kentucky Derby. "This was a monumental accomplishment."

Riding assignments were drawn at random. Each field was handicapped by Lone Star Park officials. The top three horses in each of the four races were assigned to Group A, the next three to Group B, the next three were assigned to Group C and the final three were assigned to Group D. Each jockey rode one horse from each category.

"The best jockeys in the world met here tonight," Stevens said. "They were all tough. I had to have a little riding luck."

WIMBLEDON: Continuous rain may force matches to be played Sunday

(From 1C)

again serenaded themselves while waiting for a break in the clouds that never came. The worse the weather got, the louder they sang, and BBC Radio congratulated the fans on their "Dunkirk spirit."

The session was postponed at 6:31 p.m. following a wait of 7 1/2 hours.

"We're sorry for another very frustrating day," Gorringe told the crowd.

Only 94 matches have been played. Without the delays, about 300 would have been completed. In 1991, generally considered the wettest first week in tournament history, 123 matches were completed by Friday.

Among those yet to hit a ball is touted 17-year-old American Venus Williams, whose Wimbledon debut has been delayed five days by rain. She killed time by paying visits to two other local landmarks, the Tower of London and the London Dungeon.

"I'm not frustrated at all," Williams said. "I think maybe a lot of other players are, but I'm just fine."

The delays tested even the renowned patience of the British, including England's No. 1 player, Tim Henman.

"There's only a certain amount of practices you can have, lunches you can have, games of backgammon you can have," he said. "And I do feel sorry for all the people that are outside, because it is so frustrating for them, and standing out in the rain is probably not what they wanted to do."

At this point, fans and players alike are rooting for sunshine.

Good weather Sunday would help the tournament catch up with the schedule, and players can expect matches on consecutive days next week. Even so, the tournament is likely to stretch into a third week.

Defending men's champion Richard Krajicek, for one, said he could fit an extra day or two at Wimbledon into his schedule — especially to play in the final again.

"I had a holiday planned," he said, "but OK, for Wimbledon, I'll make an exception and stay."

"I would be delighted if I was still here on the third Monday," Henman said. "I would not be so pleased if we were still in the first round."

TRADE: 76ers get Thomas, Jackson

(From 1C)

completed by withdrawing their grievance on the Dino Radja deal Thursday.

The Celtics had questioned Philadelphia's decision to veto the Radja trade to the Sixers in exchange for forward Clarence Weatherspoon and Cage.

The Sixers nullified the deal Tuesday night because Radja, who underwent surgery on his left knee and played only 25 games last season, failed his physical. The Celtics had maintained his knee was OK before the trade, but Philadelphia acted because Radja had balked at the deal, then the Sixers got a better offer from the Nets.

Nash said the Sixers and Nets had a plan to complete the trade even if Boston had won its grievance. It would have involved substituting a player for Cage to complete the deal.

The deal was widely reported hours before the NBA draft Wednesday night, but the teams could not discuss it because of the uncertainty of Radja's situation.

Since Cage was involved in both deals, any discussion of the Nets-Sixers trade would have resulted in a fine, rumored to be in the $1 million range.

The trade was the second major one for the Nets this year and their second major one with the Sixers in the past two seasons. The first with Philadelphia was a six-player deal which included Shawn Bradley coming to New Jersey and Derrick Coleman going to Philadelphia.

The Nets dealt Bradley and three others to Dallas in February in a deal that brought Jackson, Montross, Chris Gatling, Sam Cassell and George McCloud. McCloud was later traded to the Lakers for center Joe Kleine and the 21st pick in this year's draft.

Van Horn, 6-foot-10, gives the Nets a big forward who can shoot. He led Utah in scoring each of his four seasons, averaging 22 points this season.

"I love Van Horn," Nets coach John Calipari said Wednesday. "I think he has great size, great ability to shoot the ball ... 90 percent free-throw shooter. He can shoot the 3 and do a lot of good things."

The deal spoiled Thomas' dreams of coming home to play as a pro. He grew up in nearby Paterson, N.J., about 20 minutes from Continental Airlines Arena.

Thomas, 6-8, 230 pounds, averaged 16.9 points, six rebounds and two assists per game for the Wildcats, who used him at both small and power forward.

Only 20, Thomas was at times spectacular at Villanova, showing impressive ballhandling skills, a decent outside shot and an unselfish nature. He also is agile enough to play off-guard.

On the down side, Thomas was inconsistent at both ends of the floor particularly on defense. Some scouts have questioned his desire.

"There's been doubts about Tim Thomas, but one thing there's no doubt about — he's one of the players in the draft that had the potential to be one of the greatest players in the draft," King said today. "And that's what we're excited about with Tim."

Parker, 6-6, was the Missouri Valley Conference player of the year as a junior, averaging 18.9 points and three assists per game. He missed the first nine games as a senior with a broken bone in his right foot but averaged 16.6 points.

The Sixers appeared to get the better of the deal involving the veterans.

Jackson, the fourth player taken in the 1992 draft, averaged 16.5 points in 31 games with New Jersey. Montross, who had six years left on his contract, averaged 5.1 points in 31 games with New Jersey.

Cage, who has two years left on his contract, averaged 1.8 points and 3.9 rebounds. Harris has six years left on his contract, and MacLean, a former UCLA star, has four years remaining.

MacLean averaged 10.9 points in almost 20 minutes per game, while Harris averaged 5.4 points and 1.3 rebounds in 15.2 minutes.

FIGHT: Neither boxer hinting at retirement

(From 1C)

decide then," Holyfield said. Then, he added, "Michael Moorer would be a good fight. If Lennox Lewis wins (against Henry Akinwande July 14), that would be a good fight. I would like to unify the titles and bring some order into who is truly the best heavyweight without a shadow of doubt."

A possible source of controversy was removed from the rematch when Mitch Halpern withdrew as referee and was replaced by Mills Lane.

John Horne and Rory Holloway, Tyson's managers, protested that their fighter didn't think he could be treated fairly by Halpern, although he was generally praised for his work in the first fight. The Nevada State Athletic Commission voted 4-1 Thursday to keep Halpern as referee.

Thursday night, Halpern called Marc Ratner, executive director of the commission and told him he didn't want to be the focal point of the fight and that he was withdrawing. Ratner contacted Dr. Elias Ghanem, commission chairman, and Lane was appointed. Lane will get $10,000 for refereeing what will be his fifth heavyweight title bout involving Tyson and the sixth involving Holyfield.

"Mitch felt he was doing what was best for him and for the sport," Ratner said.

Holyfield weighed in at 218 pounds, three pounds more than he weighed for the first fight. Tyson also weighed 218, four pounds less than his weight for the first fight.

The rematch before a sellout crowd of 16,331, paying up to $1,500 for a ticket, will begin between 11:30 p.m. EDT and midnight.

There will be three other fights on the pay-per-view show.

The most competitive of the three could be a bout of 10 2-minute rounds between Christy Martin of Orlando, Fla., and Andrea Deshong of Cambridge, Ohio. It is for Martin's WBC women's lightweight championship.

Julio Cesar Chavez of Mexico, a former champion in three weight classes, will try for his 100th victory in a 10-round super lightweight match against Larry Daniel La Coursiere of Hastings, Minn.

Miguel Angel Gonzalez of Mexico, a former WBC lightweight champion, will box Bert Roberto Granciosa of Honolulu in another 10-round junior lightweight bout.

Also on the card, Lonnie Bradley of New York will defend the WBO middleweight title against John Williams of Bradenton, Fla.

Mercury Mystique enthused with new passion in update for '98

By Bob Plunkett
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

FURNACE CREEK, Calif — Highway 190, a narrow blacktop strip which wiggles around the Amagosa Range of California's Black Mountains while skirting a depression called Devil's Hole, descends from the high Nevada desert into that fiery salt pit of Death Valley at Furnace Creek.

On a typical day, caravans of huge recreational vehicles clog this route, reducing travel time to a mule's pace and removing all the fun of steering around so many canyon curves. Yet at high noon on the vernal equinox of this year, the path to Death Valley looked vacant, leaving one driver alone to play with a new iteration of Mercury's worldly sedan, Mystique.

This second generational expression of Mystique — marked by a new sculptured face and revised mechanical components which enhance handing control and inflict excitement into the driving experience — more closely aligns the Mercury and Ford's equivalent Contour with their European predecessor, Mondeo.

As Europe's best-seller, Mondeo comes out of a Ford plant in Belgium and sets a high mark for responsive — even passionate — automotive action.

When the original Mystique debuted in 1995, it shared about 90 percent of content with Contour and Mondeo, although modifications in interior seating and softer suspension settings were arranged for Mystique to reflect suspected preferences of an American clientele.

Now, though, Mystique for 1998 edges more closely in form and feel to Mondeo, and the changes kindle new spirit.

That's why that vacated route into Death Valley looked so good — it was time to test Mystique's character.

Despite a speed-limit clip, Mystique's pedal signaled power in reserve, while inside the 5-person cabin all noise from engine and road and wind seemed mufiled to a minimum in response to the effect of new sound-proofing techniques.

Mystique's revised driver's seat, deeply contoured with firm side bolsters, fit snugly against the backside, as revamped instruments and adjacent controls on dash and door remained in ideal stance for use by a driver.

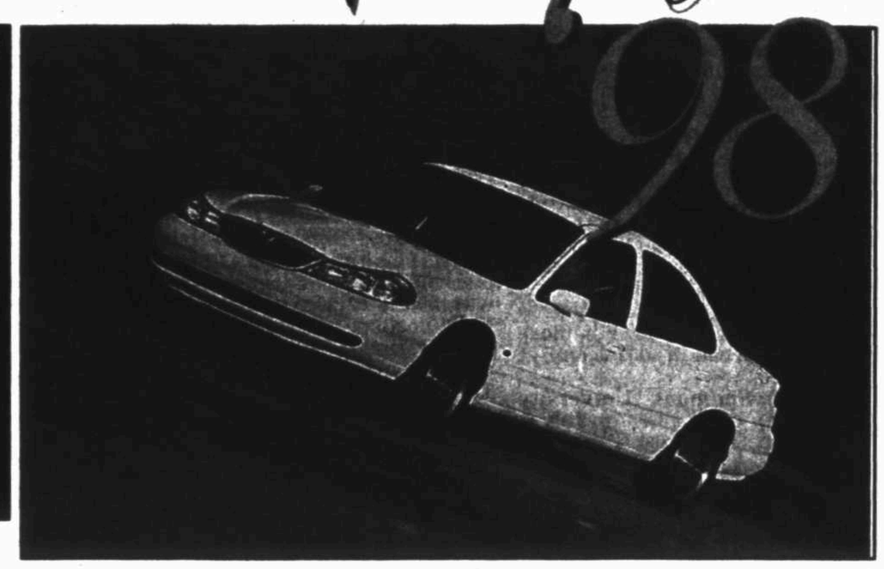

The steering wheel, small in diameter and sporty in design, felt good to touch and required only minimal effort to tum when whipping through a set of curves.

Then came the steep and narrow drop through twisted canyon circuits to Fumace Creek, and around each progressive bend I discovered this sedan maintained a bear's grip on the hot asphalt. It quickly demonstrated that Mystique behaves more like a Gemman performance sedan — and certainly not a mundane little Mercury.

For the next hour I played with Mystique on a low strip leading south through Badwater, all the while pushing it hard, trying to detect a weak point here and there.

Yet I could find none, for Mystique, as advertised, manages to deliver Euro driving passion in a practical sedan — and it feels like a world-class act.

Base prices make a revised Mystique more competitive, as Mystique GS begins at $14,495 with 4-speed automatic transmission included. The volume model, a GS with air conditioning and more power controls inside, totals to $17,400, while deluxe Mystique LS with auto transmission and the Duratec engine crowns the line at $19,295.

Mystique comes to market by a world-class route.

Like Contour, it wears a smooth sheetmetal exterior shell in roly-poly shape with nicely sanded comers. Designs for both cars were originally developed by teams based in Europe and North America and linked by sophisticated satellite communications to Cray 90 supercomputer housed at Ford's headquarters in Michigan.

The smaller of Mystique's two powerplants — the so-called "Zetec" 4-cylinder model — comes together in Chihuahua, Mexico, while the lightweight "Duratec" V6, out of Ford's Cleveland, O., engine plant, is also used for Contour in North American and Mondeo in Europe.

A quick-to-shift 5-speed manual transmission, a standard on entry models, ships from Europe for all three cars, while Vetec's automatic 4-speed with electronic shift control is built in the United States.

Is Mystique a domestic product or an import? With Ford's intemational production web, distinctions between domestics and imports blur to a fuzzy haze because no other automaker has attempted such a complex global manufacturing and marketing strategy. The world-wide effort adds up to three names, two engines and five body styles manufactured in three countries on two continents to create 800,000 annual units destined for 59 global markets.

Mystique, with formal front Mercury chrome grille that's an obvious variation from Contour's Taurus-esque prow, carries a higher content of convenience items on the inside and segments to only two trim levels.

Mystique's active persona begins on a rigid frame with wheelbase extended to set up a smooth ride and enlarge backseat legroom. The independent subErame-mounted front suspension with anti-roll bar attaches by drop links directly to new low-friction struts, and Ford's Quadralink independent rear arrangement adds a fomm of passive rear wheel steering. Apply sticky radial tires and the resultant vehicle exhibits highly predictable driving characteristics when comering, braking or accelerating.

Safety elements range from a cellular body structure to high tensile boron steel door braces, dual airbags, anti-submarine front seats and child-proof rear door locks.

In the power department, Mystique's base engine consists of the iron-block Zetec in-line-4 plant fortified by dual overhead cams, four valves in each cylinder and sequential fuel injection. Its horsepower runs to 125, and fuel economy figures reach beyond 30 miles per gallon for cruising on the highway.

Mystique's optional all-aluminum 2.5-liter twin-cam Duratec V6 pumps the action up to 170 hp.

This remarkable engine, one of the smallest and lightest of all V6 plants, requires only routine maintenance such as fluids and filters for its first 100,000 miles — which means no high-priced tune-ups.

Specify the V6 and Mystique eams disc brakes for all wheels, a condition necessary for the optional anti-lock braking system.

The cab-forward interior features the twin front seats separated by a new console, plus a 3-person rear bench with split-folding seatback and trunk pass-through. Mystique GS includes a number of comfort and convenience items, but the LS goes further with power controls and luxury trimmings.
