Reagan to issue stiff trade tariffs

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan is slapping stiff tariffs on a wide range of Japanese electronic products, but the U.S. trade representative said today that the dispute over Japan's alleged violation of a trade pact on computer chips could be resolved in a few weeks.

Reagan, who is vacationing in California, was scheduled today to issue a presidential proclamation imposing $300 million in duties on specific Japanese goods. Sanctions on some items were expected to range up to 100 percent, potentially doubling the price of the products.

An initial list of targeted products — since narrowed — included Japanese-made television sets, pocket calculators and computer disks. But the administration predicts little impact for the American consumer.

The duties are in retaliation for alleged Japanese violation of a 1986 agreement to open its home market to American-made semiconductors, or computer chips, and to avoid "dumping" chips at unfairly low costs in other countries.

The United States contends that Japanese semiconductors, or computer chips, have been sold in foreign markets at prices far below their true value in violation of the 1986 pact. The Americans argue the chips then can be resold in the United States at unfairly cheap rates.

Reagan administration officials previously have said that even if the Japanese acted quickly, it would take three months at least for the issue to be resolved and the sanctions lifted, but U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter said this morning that the dispute could be settled relatively quickly.

The Japanese "can correct it very quickly, almost overnight, if they'll just do so," Yeutter said on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "They've been arguing this week that they have already corrected it, and I hope that's the case.

"But for us to verify, that's going to take a little time, because we have to gather data that will demonstrate the verification," he said. "We can't back off on this action on the basis of one or two days of compliance. We want to see a pattern of compliance. So, at a minimum, I would say that will take a few weeks."

However, Yeutter said it was unlikely the sanctions would be lifted by the time Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone arrives in Washington to meet with Reagan at the end of this month.

"I don't see any practical way to resolve this particular dispute before or during his visit," Yeutter said in an interview from Washington.

Makoto Kuroda, Japan's deputy minister of international trade and industry, prepared to leave Washington today after failing in his attempts to head off the sanctions.

Pilgrims crowd the Via Dolorosa on Good Friday

JERUSALEM (AP) — Christian pilgrims singing hymns, reading from prayer books and carrying wooden crosses crowded the Via Dolorosa, walking in the footsteps of Jesus in Good Friday devotions marking the day of Christ's crucifixion.

Israeli soldiers carrying automatic rifles patrolled the winding, cobblestone streets as thousands of visitors crowded Jerusalem's Old City.

The Christian Easter celebrations of both the Eastern Orthodox and Western churches coincided this year with the week-long Jewish Passover observances which brought thousands of Orthodox Jews dressed in black cloaks and fur-trimmed hats to the Wailing Wall.

A long procession made up of groups of pilgrims singing and praying in different languages wound past the 14 stations of the Cross on the Via Dolorosa, marking the route Jesus took to his crucifixion.

The groups included pilgrims from Denmark, West Germany, France, the United States, Italy, Ethiopia, Sweden, South Africa, Ireland and Palestinian boy and girl scouts in uniform.

"It puts flesh on the story we have read so many times," said the Rev. Joe Condren of Gormanston College near Dublin, Ireland.

"This devotion is one of retracing the stops that Jesus made and the images we see here are helpful to a better understanding," said Condren, dressed in a brown robe as he led a group of 15 Irish pilgrims to the fifth station of the cross.

A woman and two men hefted a six-foot long cross made of thick pine as another priest read from the scriptures about Jesus' walk carrying the cross on which he was crucified.

"This is such a contrast to what we are used to back home," said Sheila Miller who together with her sister Fay runs a fabric shop in Gayndah, Australia.

Despite protests, panel votes to purchase land

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Despite protests by three district judges, the Midland County Commissioners court narrowly approved Thursday of a contract to buy almost six acres of downtown land — the South Superblock — to use as a jail site or office space.

District Judges Pat Baskin, Vann Culp and Barbara Culver told the five-member court they were making a mistake if they bought the south block to use for a maximum security jail site.

"It reduces the ability of the courts to do their work when the jail is separated," said 142nd District Judge Baskin.

The South Superblock is bounded by Main Street on the east, Industrial Avenue on the north, Colorado Street on the west and Washington Street on the south.

Baskin said it is essential for efficient court operation that prisoners be immediately available in the courtrooms. He said moving the prisoners away from the courthouse would cause delays that will eventually cost more time and money to the taxpayers.

Commissioners Scott Welch and County Judge William Ahders agreed with the judges and voted against the land contract.

But Commissioners Durward Wright, Guy McCrary and Win Brown contend that the county must prepare for "several uncertainties in the criminal justice system."

McCrary said, "This court has a responsibility and it's imperative on us to seek alternatives to deal with the space problems we have. A passive posture is probably going to restrict our options."

The commissioner's court has been grappling with jail and courthouse space problems for the past two years. A $1.5 million renovation of the courthouse's fifth floor jail will begin Monday to correct state violations and add 19 "usable cells."

Electra fasts, prays for community's needs

ELECTRA (AP) — Members of 10 churches in this hard-hit Texas oil and agricultural community participated in a 24-hour prayer and fast as a way to get themselves "right with God."

"We are not trying to twist God's arm, but merely getting ourselves right with God," the Rev. Mike Gresham, pastor of the First Baptist Church, said Thursday.

Residents have many material needs because of the depressed oil and agricultural industries, he said. But the 24-hour period of fasting and prayer isn't aimed only at getting God's help with more jobs and better wages and prices.

"We have vast spiritual needs that all the money in the world wouldn't overcome," he stressed.

Periods of fasting and care are uncommon in today's times, Gresham said. The 24-hour fast began at a Wednesday night service.

The Rev. Richard Safford, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, said the community has a strong Ministerial Alliance of 10 churches, and that when Gresham recently proposed the fast, ministers of all 10 churches accepted it as an excellent proposal.

"This brief period of fasting and prayer is for the people in this community whose lives have been disrupted by the economic conditions of North Texas," Safford said.

Children and those with medical problems were were told not to fast. Instead, they were urged to give up smoking or sweets for the 24-hour period.

Unemployment in Electra has risen, but on the upside, Safford said, "we are a small town and the people pull together."

Groups file motions on MISD elections

By JANE MARLER-DEES
Staff Writer

Seven community coalitions filed motions to intervene with the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals asking for immediate elections of four school district trustees' positions whose terms have expired.

If the court agrees with those seven motions, Midland Independent School Board trustees Ronald Britton, Bill Jackson, Fred Newman and Joseph Reed could find themselves very soon hitting the campaign trail.

Jackson's and Britton's term expired in April 1986 while Newman's and Reed's expired this month, Jackson said.

A stay of election was placed on MISD on April 14, 1986, by the appellate court in New Orleans.

The stay was in response to the legal battle being waged between the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council, and the MISD.

The 1986 stay was to hold until the appellate court decided on U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's order to abolish the MISD at-large method of elections.

The appellate court has upheld Bunton's decision, but the MISD is again appealing and promising to go the Supreme Court if necessary.

The motions to intervene seek to have the appellate court's stay overturned and to have an election immediately, said the president of the Midland Women's Political Caucus, Joanne DeWitt.

The seven groups are filing motions using their legal right to be "plaintiff's interveners," said Parents in Control member Judy Farris.

Reagan seems hopeful of arms control accord

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan is talking hopefully of a U.S.-Soviet arms control accord by year's end, while pledging no hasty decisions on a Kremlin proposal to eliminate all short- and medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

Reagan, after getting a 75-minute briefing from Secretary of State George P. Shultz at his mountaintop ranch near here, said "We've narrowed the gaps a little more" on medium-range weapons.

"I remain optimistic about an agreement this year," said Reagan, standing outside his adobe-style "Rancho del Cielo" with Shultz, who had just returned from a meeting with Soviet leaders in Moscow. The president said he's optimistic that he and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev "can complete an historic agreement on East-West relations at a summit meeting."

Neither Reagan nor Shultz would respond in detail to reporters' questions about whether America's NATO allies would be upset over an accord that essentially rids Europe of missiles.

Shultz, however, did say, "I don't think that at all.... The opportunities before us...are all very positive."

And Reagan promised to "consult personally with our NATO allies on further negotiations and plans."

Bentsen sees need for united oil effort

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The oil industry needs to stop being a "wall flower" and get solidly behind a passable bill for energy relief, said U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in a Reporter-Telegram interview Thursday.

While the senior senator from Texas still supports an oil import fee and doesn't feel it is an entirely dead issue, he says the chances of its passage without presidential support are almost nil.

He favors a tax incentive package to stimulate drilling, but says regaining a 27.5 percent depletion allowance for the industry is very unlikely. "I still bear the scars on my back from my many battles for depletion, but I feel the chances are very slim this time," Bentsen said.

The oil relief remedies that he feels have the best chance of passage are a "peril point" bill, tax credits for drilling and a floor under oil prices.

"I still bear the scars on my back from my many battles for depletion, but I feel the chances are very slim this time."
— Sen. Lloyd Bentsen

He said the peril point bill would put responsibility for a remedy in the president's court. The president would be required to submit estimates for petroleum imports for three years in advance. If imports estimates exceed 50 percent for any one of those years, the president would have to submit a legislative remedy immediately and Congress would have 90 days in which to act on the bill.

"The president would be able to select his own option," said Bentsen. "It could be an import fee, tax credit, or floor price or other options."

The Houston senator said the logic for a floor price was so obvious he couldn't understand opposition to it: "It's nothing new. We once had a $7 floor price on oil in the Nixon administration." An $18 floor may not generate all that much drilling, but it will steady the nerves of a lot of bankers and allow operators to go after a real good prospect, Bentsen said.

He said is working now to define and consolidate support for a tax credit bill that would give a tax break to exploration. "We'll have to remember, though, that when we give tax breaks in one area we have to take them in another. So it might be a fight."

Bentsen said there was little doubt in his mind that some in the administration like George Bush fully understood the gravity of the oil situation, but he was disappointed in President Reagan's understanding of the plight of the oil industry.

He said a national energy policy was needed, but energy self-sufficiency could no longer be the cornerstone. "We can't go back and count on energy self-sufficiency, but we can moderate it," said Bentsen, who voted 97 percent in favor of energy legislation in the past Congress. He suggested that a good incentive package for the industry and peril point legislation might make the best cornerstone for an energy policy, adding that he had gained considerable support from non-producing states for the bill.

On the general economy, he said it appears the Texas economy has bottomed out and is heading back up. "I hear that from most of the economists and businessmen," he explained, "and the employment indicators also point in that direction."

On other issues he said the Highway Bill would be good for Texas and that the money would not come from the general budget, but from funds already collected by the states.

He also said the Garden City site was still in the running for the superconducting super collider, but Illinois appeared to have an edge because of the Fermi Lab and its association with the scientists.

Minolta president foresees impact

DALLAS (AP) — The imposition of $300 million in tariffs on electronic equipment shipped to the U.S. should make an impact on Japanese business leaders, says Minolta Corp. president Sam Kusumoto.

The General Accounting Office gave President Reagan the green light Thursday to impose the sanctions because the Japanese had violated an agreement to stop dumping cheap semiconductors in the U.S.

After receiving that word from Washington, Kusumoto told the Dallas Times Herald that the import duties should turn some heads in Tokyo and cause a greater opening in the Japanese market for U.S. goods.

"Japan cannot afford a real conflict with this country," Kusumoto said.

"We depend on the United States militarily, politically and economically. Whatever we (Japanese) say, if we lose the friendship of the United States, Japan will go down. I believe the Japanese are smart enough to overcome this problem."

Kusumoto added Japan has long been an export-oriented nation traditionally reluctant to import goods. But he said even small-and medium-sized Japanese companies have grown rich by depending upon export markets.

Echoing the complaints of trade experts on both side of the Pacific, Kusumoto criticized the reluctance of U.S. and European firms to develop an awareness of export potentials and their seeming inability to adapt their products for the Japanese market.

"Since America is such a big market, (U.S. companies) think exporting is just extra business," Kusumoto said. "If they can get it without any trouble...they go for it. (In Japan) even small guys in unknown places making odd things are interested in exporting...and finding (overseas) buyers)."

Kusumoto, head of the U.S. subsidiary of the huge Japanese camera and electronics company, also said Thursday that a foreign trade zone for high-tech financial and informational services should be created in Dallas.

"To the best of my knowledge, no one has ever established a foreign trade zone solely for the export of services," Kusumoto said. "Insurance companies, banks and other financial service companies might find such a zone extremely interesting."

Kusumoto suggested that a development authority in Dallas or North Texas could explore and promote the creation of a free trade zone. Such zones created for manufactured products — including the Dallas-Fort Worth Freeport — offer breaks to mostly import-oriented companies on inventory and value-added taxes, reduced utility and other costs, and exemption from various government regulations.

GAO report left 'little choice,' Bentsen says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has little choice but to impose the most severe economic sanctions since World War II on Japan because that country has broken a trade agreement, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says.

A report by the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, said sanctions would be enforceable under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT, and would serve to strengthen the credibility of U.S. resolve on trade issues in general.

"The president will decide soon...whether to enforce the semiconductor agreement by imposing $300 million in duties on Japanese exports to the U.S.," said Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which is responsible for trade legislation.

"Under the circumstances, the president has little choice but to impose sanctions on Japan. They made an agreement which is enforceable under GATT and then broke it," the Texas Democrat said Thursday.

The deadline for Reagan to act on the trade sanctions is today, and his chief of staff, Howard H. Baker Jr., has said he expects the president to sign the proclamation imposing them. Reagan announced his intentions on March 27.

The agreement on semiconductor trade was negotiated with the Japanese last year in response to U.S. complaints of unfair trade practices.

The agreement intended to stop the "dumping" of Japanese semiconductors in the United States and other countries at bargain-basement prices and prevent continuation of trade barriers limiting U.S. access to Japanese markets.

A key element in the agreement was U.S. protection for essential semiconductors known as "technology drivers."

"Some experts suggest that if this essential segment were to disappear from U.S. production, the entire microelectronics industry could be threatened or lost in subsequent years," said the GAO study's author, Frank C. Conahan.

The study concluded that the Japanese had stopped dumping semiconductors in the United States, but had continued to dump them in other countries and had failed to dismantle trade barriers restricting U.S. access to Japanese markets.

Conahan said the administration's announcement of planned sanctions should not necessarily be seen as an indication that the arrangement is a failure, but rather seen as an enforcement of its anti-dumping provisions.

JAPAN

"It is regrettable that the U.S. side is going ahead with a unilateral measure, ignoring our explanations," Kyodo News Service quoted him as saying.

The presidential action highlights the most serious trade conflict between the two allies since World War II.

It also marks one of the first times the United States has singled out Japan for punishment, instead of trying to compromise.

Trade experts say the tiff over the chips, the tiny silicon-based elements that are the heart of today's computers, is only one factor in the decision to impose tariffs. U.S. officials also are exasperated with Japan's persistent trade surplus, its relatively closed markets and failure to pump up its economy to take in more of the world's exports.

The Japanese government denies having violated the semiconductor agreement and announced it would appeal for relief to GATT, the international trade tribunal in Geneva.

Japan also has accused the United States of refusing to disclose documented evidence of the "dumping" allegations.

The duties are unlikely to hurt American consumers, Yeutter said today.

"We think there will be very little consumer impact because we've ... tried to pick products for this list that are readily available from other sources, either U.S companies or from other foreign companies," the trade representative said.

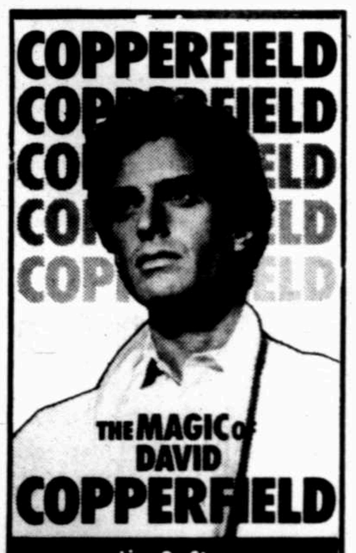

In addition, the sanctions are more symbolic than painful as far as the Japanese are concerned, since they are expected to have little economic effect. The $300 million in goods covered by the duties amount to less than 1 percent of the $58 billion trade imbalance between the two economic superpowers.

Earlier this week, Reagan's Economic Policy Council decided in a private session to go ahead with the tariffs despite expressions of concern by some members that the proposed measures already had provoked unexpected turmoil in financial markets.

Since Reagan announced the proposed trade retaliation in late March, the dollar has taken a nosedive against the Japanese yen on foreign exchange markets — a plunge that even intervention by central banks of major industrial powers has been unable to check.

Trade officials have said the prospects of a trade war with Japan have prompted the sell-off of dollars.

LAND

Although the jail has 101 cells, only 85 can be used under Texas Commission on Jail Standards rules and many county officials say they fear more space will be needed once reconstruction is completed in about a year.

Wright said a study will be conducted to determine the final use of the south block that could be used for a minimum security jail — which the judges did not object to.

Wright said the south block will provide "insurance" to the county which may face more prisoners at a local level due to pending legislation.

But Commissioner Welch and Ahders questioned buying the $169,600 parcel at about $28,000 an acre for a minimum security prison when eight acres near the County Exhibit Building, on U.S. Highway 80, remain vacant.

"I'm against investing money for a minimum security facility. I'd want to do it on land we own," Ahders said.

Welch agreed saying, "I think it was a good business decision, but I don't think the county is in the land speculation business."

However, Wright countered that the land near the courthouse is needed.

"Possible future events will require the county to acquire land as close to the courthouse as possible," he said.

McCrary said, "I don't presently believe the land is the best site for a jail, but it could possibly be used as a minimum security facility like a restitution center."

But 318th District Judge Culver contended that courtroom space and buildings are needed — not land.

"If there's money it should be put into buildings," she said.

The judges urged the commissioners to follow through on the $50,000 master plan that proposes the county expand to a vacant lot north of the courthouse.

Baskin said of the south block purchase, "If we buy that down there, we've closed the door on effective improvement on this block."

But McCrary disagreed.

"We endorse the north land purchase, but we don't believe it's feasible to go to the voters with a bond issue now," he said.

"The acquisition of this property does not close the door for future use of the block north of us."

The commissioners agree that now is not the time to go to the voters with an about $11 million bond issue needed to expand the courthouse to a north vacant lot.

Groups who filed individual motions Thursday include the Taxpayer Awareness Group, the Midland Women's Political Caucus, Parents in Control, Midland Parents in Action Committee (IMPACT), the Mexican American Advisory Council, the Midland Hispanci Chamber and Our Lady of Guadalupe Knights of Columbus.

An "intervener" files a motion to intervene after concluding that he has been affected by a lawsuit's decision, Ms. Farris said.

The motion to intervene states in part: "...the interveners seek the court's permission to intervene in the ... case for the sole and limited purpose of asking the court to modify and rescind its order and stay on election by terminating ... the stay ... and ordering an immediate election to be held for the four trustee positions that are being occupied by trustees pursuant to the court's order beyond the expiration of their term."

"As interveners we feel that our rights to have school board members elected on a regular basis are being violated," said Ms. DeWitt.

"No one would like to get this case settled more than me," Jackson said. But in response to claims the voters' rights are being denied in not having an election, the MISD board of trustees president hastened to add that he was elected by all the voters in Midland already.

The trustees have been confronted with "many things the past three years," Jackson said. He noted one major accomplishment of the trustees was to cut $3 million out of the district's budget.

"We think that in dealing with the issues that need to be looked at, this board is doing a yeoman's job," Jackson added.

In 1985, Bunton ordered a stay on MISD elections, as well. Twelve groups filed petitions April 9 asking Bunton to lift his injunction on the MISD elections.

Most interstate speed limits remain at 55 mph

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Don't gear up to 65 mph yet if you're traveling across the South this Easter weekend.

Of 10 states polled, only Louisiana and Oklahoma have joined Mississippi in raising the speed limit on rural interstates to 65 mph. Arkansas has approved the speed limit hike but it will not go into effect until all the new signs are posted Monday night.

Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Texas, North Carolina and South Carolina have not raised their speed limits and are not expected to do so anytime soon. In Florida, about 829 miles of the state's 1,338-mile interstate system will be increased to 65 mph on April 27.

The Mississippi Highway Commission voted earlier this week to increase the speed limit on 611 miles of rural interstate. The change doesn't affect the urban areas of Jackson, Vicksburg, Meridian, Hattiesburg, Laurel and Biloxi.

Efforts to change the 55 mph law became possible earlier this month when Congress overrode President Reagan's veto of the federal transportation bill, which allows 65 mph limits on rural interstates if the respective state Legislature approves it.

Highway maintenance crews in Oklahoma were busy Thursday replacing speed limit signs, said Oklahoma Department of Transportion spokesman Mike Mayberry. He said the change should have been completed sometime Thursday night.

Speed limits in several urban areas in both Louisiana and Oklahoma will remain at 55 mph.

Bill Stanton, a spokesman for the Arkansas Highways and Transportation Department, said, "We've already had the signs made but the speed limit will not be in effect until the signs are up." That should be finished Monday, he said.

In Florida, Larry Ferguson, deputy public information director for the state's department of transportation, said preparations are under way for a April 27 changeover.

He noted that the Florida Turnpike, which cuts diagonally across the state, will remain at 55 mph.

Of the states currently at 55 mph, laws to change the speed limit are being discussed in the respective legislatures.

SHULTZ

The Soviet proposal made to Shultz in Moscow would mean the elimination of about 130 short-range Soviet missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia, in addition to getting rid of all U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles in Europe.

Gorbachev offered to include those weapons, which have a firing range of 350 to 600 miles, in a treaty to scrap medium-range missiles except for 100 warheads that would be left in Soviet Asia and in the United States.

The allies fear that elimination of these weapons would leave them vulnerable to the Soviet Union's superior conventional fighting capability.

Shultz took issue with suggestions that Gorbachev's proposal probably would divide the United States and its allies.

"If we are placed in a box, it's a wonderful box to be in. It's the box we've been trying to get into," the secretary said. "That is, we have been working from day one to bring about radical reductions in these weapons systems."

He said the question of removing battlefield-type tactical nuclear weapons, those of very short range, is not a part of the superpower negotiations.

As for the conventional force imbalance in Europe, he said the United States has "a negotiation going on right now to set a mandate" for talks that would broaden those that have been taking place in Vienna.

And, he added, "I think the assurance (to NATO allies) comes from the fact that we have troops there...we behave like an ally...we have the same security concerns."

The Shultz trip to Reagan's ranch took on the aura of a summit in its own right, with the secretary taking a helicopter to the ranch from Point Mugu Naval Air Station to a landing pad, then wending his way toward the ranch on a curving road.

When he stepped from his car, Nancy Reagan walked up and kissed him, and Reagan shook his hand, while nearly a dozen presidential aides stood by. Then Reagan and Shultz, accompanied by national security adviser Frank Carlucci and White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr., went into a guest-house adjoining the ranch.

Seventy-five minutes later, Reagan, wearing a pink cowboy shirt, jeans and cowboy boots, walked Shultz to a microphone, and the pair's comments were piped by the White House communications agency back to a press room at the Santa Barbara Sheraton.

Time and again during his subsequent news conference at the press center, Shultz emphasized that no quick decisions would be made on the Soviet proposal, although he did say there would be a decision "long before" the seven-nation allied economic summit in Venice in June. "But I don't want to put a time on it."

Regarding the Kremlin's offer, Shultz said "the president hasn't made a decision about it yet," and Reagan said he planned to consult with congressional leaders of both the Democratic and Republican parties when he returns to Washington next week.

"All I heard today is in the direction that I want to go in," Reagan said at one point. But he said he doesn't want another summit with Gorbachev just for summit's sake.

The groups also included about 15 blind people from Sweden who were led by a priest.

The Via Dolorosa, or "road of suffering" in Latin, ends at the candlelit Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which marks the site of the crucifixion and resurrection. There chants in Latin and Arabic from the masses of Roman Catholic and Egyptian Orthodox mixed with the spontaneous singing of monks and lay pilgrims.

"I see us as a group of people coming together from all different faiths, all different religions recognizing the Lord of Lords, the King of Kings," said Kathleen Case, a preacher from Corona, Calif.

"All the way through this procession I have had this feeling that these people are looking backwards. But they should look forwards. It won't be long. He'll be back," said Ms Case, who was leading a group of 15 pilgrims from her Changing Life Ministries.

Daniel Rossing, head of the Christian section of the Ministry of Religion, estimated the number of visitors this year exceeded the 50,000 who came last year when tourism was down because of a wave of terrorism in the Middle East.

This year's unofficial estimate of 70,000 was still below the 80,000 who came to Israel during Holy Week in 1985.

Mount Etna erupts

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Gas and rocks spewed today from Mount Etna, Europe's tallest and most active volcano, killing a 10-year-old Italian boy and showering a group of tourists, officials reported.

A police official in Catania, who declined to give his name, said the boy was killed by falling rocks and his mother also may have been killed. The official said three other people were injured.

The Civil Defense Ministry in Rome said two people were believed killed.

The explosion occurred 9,900 feet above the ground — nearly at the summit of Mount Etna.

Income crisis noted

Increased inequality in income distribution, at least in some countries, has been one effect of the economic crisis in Latin America, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. For example, it cites a Brazilian survey that indicates that while the real income of all groups in that country declined by an average of 20.4 percent in 1981-83, the incomes of the bottom 40 percent dropped by an estimated 27.4 percent.

Argentine leader refuses to negotiate with mutinous air regiment

New York Times News Service

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Faced with a mutiny at an airborne post outside Argentina's second-largest city, President Raul Alfonsin declared in a nationally televised speech Thursday night that he will not negotiate with the mutineers.

The mutiny near Cordoba of the 14th Army Airborne Regiment was sparked Wednesday by the refusal of Maj. Ernesto Guillermo Barreiro to obey a civilian court summons. The federal appeals court in Cordoba wants to question the officer concerning crimes committed during the Argentine military's campaign to eradicate leftist terrorist groups during the 1970s.

It is not known how many officers are participating in the mutiny, which appears to have been confined to the 14th Airborne. It the most serious case of military insubordination Alfonsin has faced.

According to reports from Cordoba, the mutineers have asked the Catholic Church to deliver a list of demands to the government.

They include amnesty for crimes committed during the Argentine military regime's "dirty war," during which over 9,000 Argentines "disappeared" at the hands of security forces. Other demands include the retirement of the chief of staff of the Argentine army, Gen. Hector Rios Erenu, who has called on his men to comply with court orders in the ongoing investigations into the "dirty war," and an end to the "campaign against the armed forces" via television networks and other government-controlled media.

Alfonsin responded Thursday night with a flat "no."

"I am not going to make concessions in the face of any initiative or pressure which seeks to limit or place conditions upon the subjection of all citizens, with or without uniforms, to the law," Alfonsin siad during the speech, which was delivered before a special session of congress.

"Ceding before such demands (for amnesty) would only mean putting the nation's democracy at risk, so there's nothing to negotiate," Alfonsin declared. "The democracy of the Argentines is not subject to negotiation."

Alfonsin siad the Cordoba mutiny was not spontaneous, but rather the "premeditated maneuver of a group of men."

The speech was delivered to clamorous applause not only from the assembled politicians but also from tens of thousands of Argentines gathered in the plaza outside the congress building who heard it over loudspeakers.

But while demonstrations here and in other Argentine cities demonstrated that support for this country's three-year-old civilian regime remains strong, the Cordoba mutiny shows the risks the government is running with its policy of prosecuting officers who gave orders during the "dirty war" and those who committed acts such as torture and murder.

Greek Orthodox Church fighting lay control

WORLD

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Greek Orthodox Church, locked in a bitter dispute with the Socialist government, has pledged to defy a new law that allows laymen to control church administration and finances.

Archbishop Seraphim of Athens, the white-bearded Primate of Greece, says the church will contest the legislation as unconstitutional in Greek courts and if necessary in the European Court and the World Court at The Hague, in the Netherlands.

Greece's 78 Orthodox bishops threaten to bypass the law by declaring allegiance to the Ecumenical Patriarch in Istanbul, the spiritual leader of Eastern Orthodox Christians worldwide.

"You render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, but church administration is for spiritual authorities, not party politicians," the Rev. Stefanos Avramides, head of the church foreign relations department, said in an interview.

Premier Andreas Papandreou, whose government eventually wants to cut constitutional ties between church and state, rejects the bishops' protests as exaggerated.

"I don't believe there's any substantive extension of the state's role in church affairs because of these reforms. We have carefully respected the Orthodox tradition," the premier recently told legislators who are members of his Panhellenic Socialist Movement (PASOK).

The law, which takes effect in October, transfers ownership of more than 350,000 acres of forests and farmland from Greece's 390 monasteries and convents to Socialist-run farm cooperatives.

It also gives laymen control of parish and bishopric councils and of the Organization for Administering Church Property (ODEP), which handles lucrative marble quarries and urban real estate owned by the church.

City and countryside holdings together are valued at more than $1 billion.

The government maintains that the clergy should spend more time on spiritual tasks and less on business administration.

"We don't have any objection to losing the monastic lands," said the Rev. Dionysios Mandalos, assistant bishop of the North Sporades Islands. "But they should go to poor villagers and farmers with large families, not to cooperatives controlled by a political party.

"But the church, not government-appointed laymen, must have the deciding voice in disposing of income from the city properties."

Backed by the Holy Synod, the church's governing body of bishops, Orthodox supporters organized noisy demonstrations in Greek cities as the legislation was debated in Parliament.

Tens of thousands of protestors shouted "hands off the church" and brandished gold-and-black Byzantine flags, recalling the church's role in keeping the Greek language and culture alive during 400 years of Ottoman Turkish rule.

The church was given vast estates for playing a major part in a seven-year revolutionary war that brought Greece independence in 1830. Even after handing over four-fifths of its holdings to the state in 1952, it remained Greece's biggest landowner.

In return, the church received the city properties and the country's 9,000 Orthodox priests became civil servants, paid by the state.

Under the 1975 constitution, Eastern Orthodoxy is Greece's official religion and 97 percent of its 10 million residents are baptized church members.

More than 3 million Greek emigrants have kept their faith, founding Greek Orthodox churches in the United States and Australia.

In Greece, fewer than 10 percent of the population are regular church-goers, according to surveys. The church's once-powerful moral and political influence also has faded since the 1970s, following a spate of scandals over alleged corruption and homosexuality among the hierarchy and the rise of socialism.

Intellectuals and academics complain that the church has failed to keep pace with fast-changing social attitudes.

"The church has spent too much time politicking over the past 20 years and not enough on developing a pastoral role for modern society," said Savvas Agourides, an Athens University theology professor. "It's lost touch with its flock."

Workers end phone strike in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Telephone workers ended an eight-day-old strike early Thursday, agreeing to 56 percent wage hikes.

Most telephone service had continued without serious disruption during the nationwide strike, although repair work was reported to be slow. Cuts on six large cables after the strike began, in what authorities said may have been sabotage, put about 80,000 telephones out of service.

About 32,000 employees of the Mexican Telephone Co. went on strike, but continued to work because the government took over the company under an emergency law that allows it to keep essential services in operation. The government has majority ownership in the firm.

Negotiations reopened after the Mexican Telephone Workers' Union, one of the strongest in the country, withdrew a demand for emergency wage increases of 23 percent retroactive to Jan. 1, when the minimum wage was raised by that amount.

They agreed to a 38 percent increase in the annual contract renewal, 18 percent emergency raises and 2 percent in fringe benefits, retroactive to April 1. In addition, more than 15,000 operators will get a 20 percent increase in a wage revision agreement.

Before the increases, operators averaged about $192 monthly, linemen $220 and secretaries $167, a telephone company official, who asked not to be identified, said.

The company had petitioned the Federal Mediation Board to declare the strike non-existent, a measure that stops short of finding it illegal but reduces its impact. The board had postponed a decision.

After electrical workers struck in late February, the government also took over the company. The board declared that strike non-existent and workers eventually won 38 percent increases.

When the Labor Congress, which includes all but a handful of Mexican unions, failed to win an overall 20 percent increase for workers at state-owned companies, the individual unions were told to negotiate separately with the companies.

Libyan-backed group claims rocket attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Libyan-backed Palestinian guerrilla group claimed responsibility today for a rocket attack on a northern Israeli town.

The group said the attack was in retaliation for Israeli air raids on a refugee camp in south Lebanon.

Samir Ghoseh's Palestine Popular Struggle Front said a guerrilla unit "operating in the occupied homeland rocketed an Israeli settlement in the occupied Galilee Thursday."

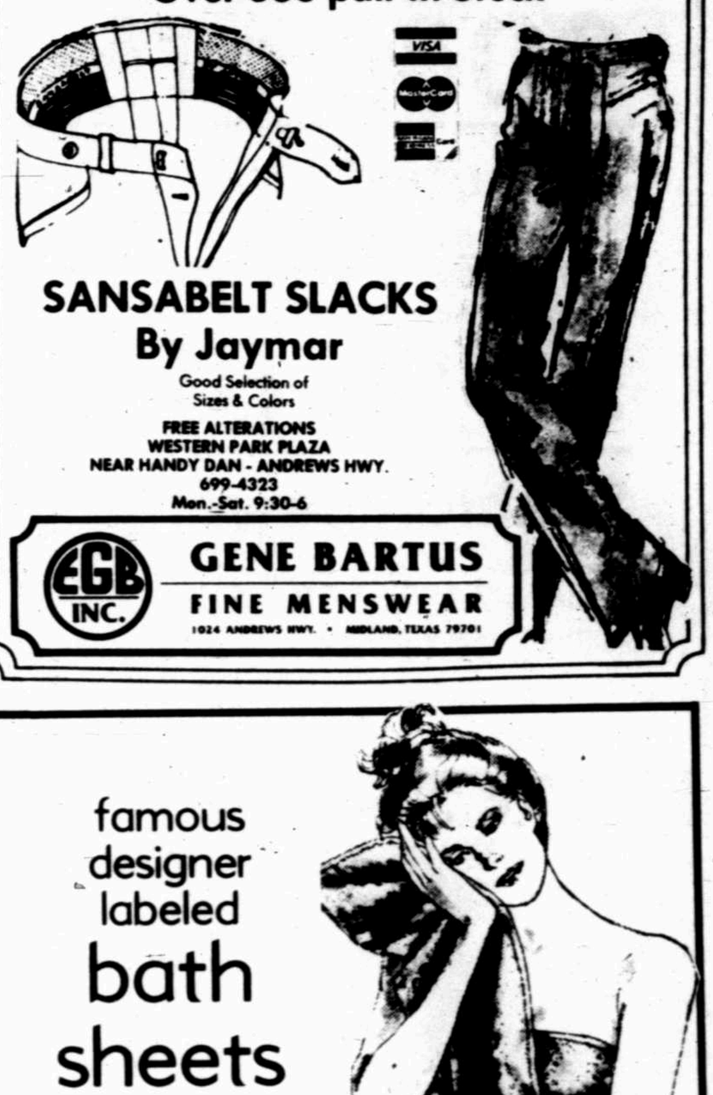

"The 107-mm rockets scored direct hits on the targets," the group said in a statement.

A Soviet-designed Katyusha rocket slammed into a northern Israeli town Thursday, wounding one person and causing shock to three people, an Israeli army spokesman said. He did not name the town.

Israeli military sources in Tel Aviv said one rocket struck the northern town of Kiryat Shmona and another landed in Israeli territory without causing damages or casualties.

The Palestinian claim did not mention Kiryat Shmona by name. It said the rocket attack was carried out "in retaliation for recent Zionist (Israeli) air raids against the Ein el-Hilweh camp."

NATO debates fate of missile placement

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO has begun an urgent debate that could determine whether the superpowers conclude a deal to withdraw hundreds of nuclear missiles from Europe before President Reagan leaves office in 1989.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization said Thursday it was launching a study of the implications for Western security of Moscow's new offer to widen the scope of nuclear missile cuts in Europe.

Secretary of State George Shultz, after three days of talks with Soviet leaders in Moscow, briefed alliance officials on the Kremlin's offer and said NATO now faced "hard decisions" on nuclear disarmament.

He then flew back to the United States and met with Reagan, who later Thursday was asked whether Washington would be able to sell the Soviet proposals to the west Europeans.

Reagan replied, "That's what we're working on."

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev told Shultz he was willing to dismantle his country's arsenal of shorter-range nuclear missiles as part of an accord eliminating both sides' medium-range missiles in Europe.

Gorbachev previously had refused to include the shorter-range missiles, with a reach of 310-620 miles, in negotiations on medium-range missiles, which can strike targets within 620 to 3,100 miles.

The U.S. position, supported by NATO, has been that instead of scrapping the shorter-range Soviet missiles, they should be frozen at current levels and America should be allowed to match the Soviet total. The United States currently has no shorter-range rockets in Europe.

Both sides have hundreds of very short-range nuclear weapons, those below the 310-mile range. Shultz said these weapons were not involved in the current negotiations.

The key question now appears to be whether the Western alliance is willing to forgo a buildup of shorter-range missiles for the sake of achieving its oft-stated goal of eliminating the medium-range missiles.

There is a widespread feeling in Europe that unless a superpower accord on this issue is reached by the autumn, the U.S. presidential election campaign will preclude a deal until after Reagan leaves office.

Shultz said after the NATO meeting that the Soviet offer was "broadly along the lines" of what the alliance had been seeking for years. He said it put "the basic elements" of a final deal in place.

He stopped short, however, of explicitly saying the Reagan administration was willing to accept the Soviet offer or that NATO should embrace it.

Officials from the European NATO nations were more cautious, reflecting their governments' concern that such a step would leave them more vulnerable to Warsaw Pact superiority in chemical and conventional arms.

"It does evoke the problem of how far do you want to go" in nuclear disarmament in Europe, said Hans van den Broek, the Dutch foreign minister. "What kinds of systems are you prepared to do without?"

Shultz said Gorbachev's offer to dismantle the Soviet shorter-range missiles required no reciprocal U.S. action. The only cost to the West would be forgoing the right to install this type of weapon in the future, he said.

"We have before us a prospect for a good agreement. We have the basic elements in place, and we now have to make a decision about our position — whether it should change — on the so-called shorter-range missiles," he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Vietnamese party calls for private enterprise

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam's Communist Party called for more private enterprise and criticized bureaucratic practices of the past, according to an official statement made available today.

The latest push to liberalize the stagnant Vietnamese economy came during an April 1-9 meeting of the party's Central Committee in Hanoi, Vietnam.

A long communique on the meeting was read over Radio Hanoi on Thursday. Its text was obtained today from Western sources in Bangkok who monitor and translate Vietnamese media.

The committee admitted that earlier attempts at economic reform had failed, and it spelled out a series of new initiatives.

Delivering the opening and closing speeches at the meeting was Nguyen Van Linh, a reformist installed as party chief in December in the wake of an unprecedented peaceful purge of aging, hardline Marxist leaders.

Tamils attack buses

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil militants attacked at least three buses with machine guns and grenades today, killing more than 50 people, the government announced.

Tilak Ratnaker, chairman of the government Media Center, said it was believed most of the victims were Sinhalese.

He said many Tamil guerrillas stopped the buses near Aluth-Oya Village, 115 miles northeast of Colombo, the capital. Women and children were among those dragged off the buses and killed by the guerrillas, he said.

Most of the victims had been headed home to Colombo from villages in the Trincomalee district after New Year's celebrations with their relatives, Ratnaker said. The New Year holiday is celebrated both by Tamils and Sinhalese.

The government had announced a 10-day cease-fire for the New Year and said its forces would not attack Tamil militants on land or by air. Tamil groups agreed to go along if soldiers did not attack, but both sides allege violations.

Ratnaker said some of the dead may have been Tamils and Moslems.

Students, police clash

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Riot police battled again today with students protesting the government's ban on debate on how South Korea chooses its president.

Witnesses said at least three students were injured, including two hit by tear gas canisters. Police fired the gas at hundreds of students, some throwing rocks and firebombs, at Yonsei University and Korea University.

It was the second consecutive day of student-police clashes.

Student sources said rallies and demonstrations were planned at several other schools in advance of the anniversary of a major student uprising on April 19, 1960.

Chinese cuisine studied

BEIJING (AP) — China, whose centuries-old reputation for fine eating has suffered somewhat during decades of political turmoil, has set up a National Cuisine Association, the official Xinhua news agency said today.

The report, quoting Lin Zepu of the association's organizational committee, said the group will include outstanding chefs, cooking instructors and nutritionists.

Lin said the association will "summarize cooking techniques over the centuries, do research on improving dishes and snacks, compile cookbooks and train chefs."

It will apply for membership in the World Association of Cooking Societies and hopes to increase contacts with foreign chefs to diversify Chinese cooking.

Nuclear test conducted

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said it conducted an underground nuclear explosion today at its test range in Soviet Central Asia — the fourth since the Soviets ended their 19-month unilateral test ban Feb. 26.

The official Tass news agency said the 20- to 150-kiloton nuclear device exploded at 5:05 a.m. Moscow time, or 9:05 p.m. EDT Thursday.

Twenty kilotons was the yield of the atomic bomb the United States dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945. One kiloton is the explosive force of 1,000 tons of TNT.

Tass said the test was designed to perfect military technology, but it provided no other information.

Disband vigilantes

Philippine President Corazon Aquino risked the wrath of some of her military commanders by outlawing vigilante groups and civilian paramilitary groups.

Even her Defense Secretary Rafael Ileto and armed forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos thought Philippine citizens should be armed. Since the country's 200,000-member military had failed to wipe out leftist insurgency in the country, they reasoned that citizens should be enlisted in the war against communist guerrillas. Wasn't it a good idea for the townspeople to help the army by banding together and defending themselves?

However appealing those arguments, Aquino wisely concluded that vigilantism — under any guise — can be as destructive as the rebellion it is supposed to put down.

She had only to look to Central America to witness the tragic toll of unbridled civilian violence. In Guatemala, for instance, the military government unleashed paramilitary forces in the 1960s to help the army stop rural communist guerrillas. But las fuerzas incontrolables, the uncontrollable forces, as they were called, struck indiscriminately. They killed not only the guerrillas but intellectuals, trade unionists, teachers and villagers who sold food to the rebels. They triggered a cycle of violence and revenge killings that makes the country all the more difficult to govern, even today.

Guatemala is not an isolated case. The legacy of private armies and paramilitary squads is reflected in the chaos and bloodshed from San Salvador to Belfast to Beirut.

It must not get out of hand in the Philippines. The Civilian Home Defense Force, the paramilitary network created by deposed Filipino leader Ferdinand Marcos, should be dismantled. Let the professional army keep the peace.

Wanting it both ways

Like the Roman god Janus, China's communist rulers have a remarkable ability to face in two directions at the same time. Since 1979, they have looked to the capitalistic democracies for economic inspiration while continuing to see authoritarian Marxism as the instrument of political control. That mixed approach was resoundingly reaffirmed at the recent annual National People's Congress.

Premier Zhao Ziyang approvingly noted the government's crackdown a few months ago on student protesters and outspoken intellectuals, but said the tough policy would not be allowed to interfere with economic reform.

While that's far from ideal, in the eyes of Americans and other supporters of democracy, it's certainly better than nothing. As long as Chinese rulers are intent on modernizing the economy, they are almost certain to adopt even more of the free-market techniques of Western capitalism. In the process, they are very likely to notice that personal freedom enhances free economic systems.

For instance, scientists and engineers are much more inclined to be creative when they are able to openly exchange ideas and pursue projects on their own. Industrial managers tend to be more efficient when they are liberated from rigid bureaucratic control and given discretion over such actions as the buying of materials and the hiring of personnel. Middle- and lower-level politicians are more likely to serve the real interests of the state if they are encouraged to express their thoughts.

Meanwhile, thousands of mainland Chinese now being educated in the United States are sure to want some political freedom and professional leeway when they return to China and become part of the elite.

Thus, the odds are that China will have to let a bit of democracy seep into its system as time passes. The change will not be fast enough for many, such as the thousands of students who took to the streets in China in December or the intellectuals who were expelled from the Communist Party after speaking their minds. Still, given the pragmatic bent of China's present rulers, some improvement of political conditions would seem to come naturally.

Even the recent setback for political liberalization may have been less profound than it appeared to be at the time. Many experts on China say the crackdown was dictated less by a desire to return to absolute despotism than by political leaders' fears that the protest and other manifestations of restlessness would get out of hand.

Another element, it appears, was the perceived need to correct excesses caused by an overheated economy. Western ways have brought rapid economic growth, but they also have brought inflation, supply bottlenecks and an increase in corruption.

When China's leaders denounce "bourgeois liberalization," they're probably sending a dual message — one political, the other economic. Yet, if they are as practical as we think they are, the denunciation is not wholehearted. They know that some liberalization is essential.

Today is Good Friday, April 17, the 107th day of 1987. There are 258 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 17th, 1961, about 1,500 CIA-trained Cuban exiles launched the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in an attempt to overthrow the government of Fidel Castro. The invasion failed, and the survivors were captured.

On this date:

In 1492, a contract was signed between Christopher Columbus and Spain to seek a westward ocean passage to Asia.

In 1521, Martin Luther went before the Diet of Worms to face charges stemming from his religious writings.

In 1524, Giovanni da Verrazano discovered present-day New York harbor.

In 1790, Benjamin Franklin died in Philadelphia at the age of 84.

In 1861, the Virginia State Convention voted to secede from the Union.

In 1941, Yugoslavia surrendered to Germany in World War II.

In 1964, Jerrie Mock of Columbus, Ohio, became the first woman to complete a solo airplane flight around the world.

In 1969, Sirhan Sirhan was convicted of assassinating Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

In 1969, Czechoslovakia's Communist Party chairman Alexander Dubcek was deposed.

In 1975, Phnom Penh fell to Communist insurgents, ending Cambodia's five-year war.

In 1984, gunfire erupted from the Libyan embassy in London at a group of anti-Gadhafi demonstrators. The shots killed a policewoman, Yvonne Fletcher, and wounded eleven others.

Ten years ago: Lea Rabin, wife of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, was fined about $27,000 for her role in keeping bank accounts in Washington in violation of her country's currency regulations.

Five years ago: the White House said President Reagan still hoped to meet Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev during a U.N. special session in New York the following June despite Brezhnev's proposal to meet in a neutral country.

One year ago: The bodies of American librarian Peter Kilburn and two Britons were found near Beirut. The three hostages had been slain apparently in retaliation for the U.S. raid on Libya. A bomb was found in the luggage of an Irish woman about to board an El Al plane at London's Heathrow Airport. The bomb, it turned out, had been planted by the woman's Jordanian-born fiance.

US-Soviet youth seek detente on Mars

WASHINGTON — The United States and Soviet Union are close to reaching an agreement that could lead to the joint exploration of Mars. On both sides of the Earth, astronauts and cosmonauts are eager to explore that distant speck in the starlit sky.

Jack Anderson

The sheer size of the venture to Mars, the enormity of its demands for technology, the unlimited possibilities of the future it portends would dwarf the differences and vanities of the past and open a new page in Soviet-American relations.

The idea of a joint journey to Mars was formalized by the Young Astronauts and Young Cosmonauts when they met in the Soviet Union last October. They were caught up in the vision of space exploration and agreed they should share the space adventure. On their own initiative, they adopted a simple, three-word resolution, "To Mars Together," a common slogan that defines their goal shining on the far horizon.

Another joint space mission is opposed, however, by Pentagon hardliners who contend that past space cooperation helped the Soviets improve their missiles. In 1975, American astronauts and Soviet cosmonauts linked up in space — a dramatic rendezvous between the Apollo and Soyuz space capsules. According to a top-secret CIA report, the Apollo-Soyuz cooperation enabled the Russians to improve their hardware, procedures and training.

The Soviets "gained a great deal from their exposure to U.S. hardware and software technology," the CIA contended. For example, the Apollo-Soyuz mission helped the Soviets to "improve their capabilities" at operating a command center. The Soviets also "spent several hours training on U.S. equipment." They brought home valuable lessons learned from the exhaustive prelaunch simulations insisted upon by the Americans.

The hard-liners argue that the United States still has a superior space technology and that a joint Mars expedition would produce spillover into Soviet military programs. They point out that 85 percent of all Soviet space launches have been military missions controlled by the Strategic Rocket Force.

Yet many experts say that the Soviet Union is now ahead in space research and that the United States would have the most to gain from a joint Mars mission. The world's most eminent authority on the subject, "Jane's Spaceflight Directory," claims the Soviet Union has a 10-year lead over the United States in space exploration. In its 1986 edition, "Jane's" declares: "The Soviet lead in space is now almost frightening."

The surge into space has been accompanied by a rush to develop space weaponry. Should any nation gain military control of space, it would be able to dominate the Earth. The two superpowers, each determined to prevent the other from achieving this, are militarizing space and developing so-called "star wars" capabilities.

Military rivalry in space could evolve into a world war fought with nuclear weapons. This has given urgency to the idea that the superpowers must somehow join in a leap of faith if we are to banish the specter of global annihilation.

The keys to peace on Earth may lie beyond the Earth. For a grandeur awaits us out there that puts the Earth in its proper perspective — a fragile biosphere, a dot of green and warmth, in a universe inconceivably vast.

Together, the United States and Soviet Union could pool their resources and embark on the greatest of all adventures: the exploration of space. To find the keys to peace, we must seek the keys to infinity. Let it begin with a joint expedition to Mars.

FAT CAT PROTECTION: The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. might seem to be in bad enough shape without taking on any extra burdens. There were 136 bank failures last year, and FDIC insiders are expecting 200 banks to collapse this year. Yet FDIC Chairman William Seidman told us the agency will soon be taking steps to protect deposits above the $100,000 level insured by the federal government. Why? Self-defense. The amount of money in these uninsured, over-$100,000 deposits is so enormous that a financial panic could result if word got out that particular banks were in trouble. And a panic would break the FDIC's insurance fund.

Israel's silent blessing on Syria against PLO

WASHINGTON — A strange twist of events has positioned implacable enemies Israel and Syria in an unspoken alliance of convenience out of fear and hatred of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), a convergence that might conceivably lead to basic change in the seemingly immutable Arab-Israeli struggle.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

The PLO, grown to several thousand fighters who are mostly retreads from Israel's 1982 invasion that drove them from southern Lebanon, is restoring its political and military structure north of the Israeli border. These Fatah fighters, representing Yasir Arafat's dominant PLO faction, are hated by Syria's President Hafez Assad almost as much as they are feared by Israel.

Reagan administration officials believe that this mutual fear and hatred may bestow a silent Israeli blessing on a Syrian military thrust south from Beirut to a point only a few short miles from the Israeli border. As projected by high officials here, the Syrian move toward the border would come in the next two or three months. If Israel permits it, other forms of unacknowledged cooperation might follow.

Israel has sent no hard word here — and presumably not to Damascus either — that a Syrian military operation would be accepted so close to the Israeli border. But signs point to a non-lethal response based on Israeli self-interest: since Israel would not dare to invade Lebanon again to accomplish the disposal of the PLO that the 1982 thrust failed to achieve, let the Syrians do it.

An unspoken policy of no-shooting between Israel and Syria held up pretty well during much of the Israeli invasion and occupation of Lebanon. That proved particularly true after Israel pulled most but not all of its forces out of southern Lebanon two years ago. During the overall five years of Israeli occupation in Lebanon, Syria kept its troops far enough from the border to avoid menacing Israeli security.

For Assad, destruction of the Fatah guerrillas is becoming a political imperative because of his alliance with the Amal Shiite movement, now being threatened and undermined by the PLO's rebirth as a fighting force. If his Amal allies ask Assad to help protect their positions in the south against the resurgent PLO, officials here believe Assad will have no choice but to come to their aid.

That would force a major extension of Syria's military operations, now largely confined to the Beirut area. Assad would move some of his nearly 10,000 troops south and bypass Beirut suburbs that are dominated by Hizballah, the Iranian-supported Shiite fundamentalists. With his forces exposed to relatively long lines of supply and communications, Assad could be dealt a heavy blow by Israeli air power, operating from behind Israel's border.

Such a response would gain Israel nothing but dead Syrians. It would sacrifice a golden opportunity for Israel to use its hated enemy to clean out the PLO. And beyond the PLO is another enemy in southern Lebanon that U.S. officials view as a far graver threat to Israel in the long run than the PLO: the Hizballah.

Assad's alliance with Iran's Shiite fundamentalist regime and its Lebanese adjunct, the Hizballah, has always been regarded here as tenuous. It is based far more on hatred of Iraq's President Saddam Hussein than on love for the Ayatollah Khomeini. Indeed, the ruling Alewite faction in Syria that Assad heads might be brutally overthrown by pro-Iranian Islamic factions if Iran won its war with Iraq.

That explains Assad's ambivalence toward Hizballah fanatics now in control of Beirut's suburbs. At any moment, Assad may decide the time has come to end his alliance with Iran, freeing him to turn his military power in Lebanon against Hizballah.

When Israel examines the matter carefully, the conclusion is that the Jewish state gains almost as much as Syria from destroying the vanguard of Islamic fundamentalism that threatens large regions of the Middle East. Reducing Hizballah to a token force in Lebanon would destroy its first stronghold outside Iran itself.

There are no illusions in the Reagan administration that this confluence of interest in Syria and Israel will quickly transform their hatred. But if self-interest is a motivating force in foreign policy, what starts as an unspoken alliance of convenience could have unforeseen and unpredictable consequences.

Time to stop playing Mr. Nice Guy to USSR

Ronald Reagan has done some good things as president, not the least of which is to save us from four more years of Jimmy Carter. Still, he's too nice a guy to be president.

Charley Reese

The Soviet Union, which is a gangster government of bloody swine, has invaded our embassy in Moscow in violation of even minimum standards of a civilized government and then publicly laughed about it and ridiculed the Marines who were seduced by their female KGB agents into committing treason.

It sends a delegation of party stooges posing as movie directors, and they stand around with their left-wing wimp hosts calling American movie directors incompetent, irresponsible, and without talent.

Since when do Americans have to put up with insults from vile totalitarians who are such chronic liars that their own people wouldn't believe them if they announced the time? Are Americans now so frightened of nuclear warheads that they will smile and call it dew when the Soviets spit in their faces?

President Reagan ought to call a press conference, tell the Soviets where to go, break diplomatic relations, expel every Soviet and East European stooge from the United States and tell them if they ever decide to act like civilized human beings, we might consider resuming relations with them.

It is absurd to continue dealing with these criminals as if they were normal people. The Soviet government is one great concentration of evil. You can whimper and whine if that's your pleasure, but you can bank on this: There will be no peaceful relations with them because they are at war with us and always have been. There will be no normal relations with them because they are a regime of abnormal creatures. They lie, murder, break their agreements, enslave people and persecute them. They are worse than their former allies, the Nazis.

There are no misunderstandings between the Soviet Union and the United States except on the part of those Americans too frightened to face the obvious truth. It is a sickening sight to see Americans squirming around, performing obscene mental acrobatics in a pathetic attempt to explain away and rationalize every Soviet insult, outrage and atrocity.

Americans need to clear their minds of some myths, one being that we are invulnerable to horrible things. America is more vulnerable than at any time in its history since the British burned Washington. A few more mistakes and we're history. Why do you think the Soviets are so openly insulting? Because they know how vulnerable we are.

The second myth to dispel is that we face a long, happy, peaceful future. There isn't going to be any easy, peaceful future for any of us. If that's your dream, tough beans, because God put you on the planet at the wrong time. The conflict that has raged most of this century and that already has cost more than 100 million lives is nearing the climax. What the future promises is hard economic times, terrorism, wars, possibly nuclear war, possibly a revolution or conventional war in the United States.

Alexander Solzhenitsyn warned us nearly 10 years ago that if we are to survive, we are going to have to produce leaders of the caliber who fought the American Revolution. Well, we had better find them in a hurry.

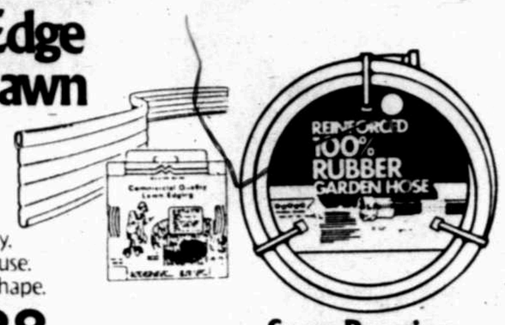

What we really need to do is go on a war footing, clear the decks and rearrange our priorities. Instead, we are sitting around as if we were English gentry safe and sound in Surrey in the middle of the Victorian Era.

We need to quit running from our fate, stop and face it. This generation and next will either defend and preserve liberty or lose it and we will have no choice. History will mark us as either the end of an old era or the beginning of a new one.

We can't afford any more nice guys in the White House and mediocrities in Congress. In 1988 we have to find strong leaders.

Warm weekend is anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Permian Basin-area residents can expect sunny skies and hot temperatures on Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Forecasters at the NWS are calling for a high near 100 degrees.

Warmer nighttime temperatures will also be felt in the area. Tonight's low should be in the middle 50s. Skies will be fair and winds will be out of the south at five to 15 mph.

Thursday's high was five degrees below the record high of 96 set for that date in 1937. Today's low of 45 was 18 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1947.

STATE

Sunny skies and unseasonably warm temperatures were forecast for all of Texas for the first part of the Easter holiday weekend.

The state's weather was under the domination of a weak low pressure system located over the southern High Plains.

Lows tonight will be in the 50s and 60s.

It will be continued sunny and unseasonably warm Saturday except in South Texas where it will be partly cloudy and warm.

Highs Saturday will be mostly in the 90s, ranging upward to as high as around 100 in Southwest Texas and to 105 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

There were a few high clouds early today from the lower Texas coast to the Edwards Plateau. Elsewhere, skies were mostly clear.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 50s and 60s except in the Panhandle and the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas where readings dipped into the 40s. Extremes ranged from 46 at Marfa to 69 at Del Rio.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 47 at Amarillo, 53 at Wichita Falls, 56 at Fort Worth, 53 at Waco, 58 at Austin, 59 at San Antonio and Corpus Christi, 55 at Houston, 63 at Brownsville, 53 at San Angelo, 52 at Lubbock, 48 at Midland and 53 at El Paso.

NATION

Flooding in the mid-Atlantic states closed roads in parts of Virginia and West Virginia today as showers and thundershowers continued over the East Coast.

Small-stream flood warnings were posted for northern Virginia, central and western Maryland and northeastern West Virginia. Flood watches were in effect in central Virginia, southeast Pennsylvania and west central New Jersey.

Pipe dealer facing drug charges

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 50-year-old Midland oil equipment and pipe dealer and a 33-year-old Odessa woman have been indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland for trafficking in cocaine.

The Midland man, Cal B. Wright, is being detained in the federal unit of the Midland City Jail after U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith denied the man bail-bond following a bond hearing on Thursday. The woman, Misty Dennard, was released on a $20,000 bond.

Testimony in the bond hearing indicated that Ms. Dennard had cooperated with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration in elaborating on the alleged cocaine dealings and in relating Wright's alleged conflicts with the Internal Revenue Service, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and Departmant of Energy.

Wright was indicted on four counts of conspiracy to possess cocaine in October and November 1986; aiding and abetting in the distribution of cocaine in Oct. 15; distributing cocaine on Oct. 24, 1986, and again on Nov. 5, 1986.

Ms. Dennard was indicated on two counts of conspiracy and aiding and abetting in the distributing of cocaine.

If convicted, Wright could be sentenced up to 70 years in prison and fined $1.75-million. Ms. Dennard, if convicted, could be sentenced up to 35 years and fined $1.25-million.

DEA Special Agent Larry Nichols, who said he had gleaned cocaine dealings and other information on Wright from a "confidential informer" and from Ms. Dennard, testified that Wright "occasionally" dealt in marijuana and received a kilogram (2.2 pounds) of cocaine a month from Houston.

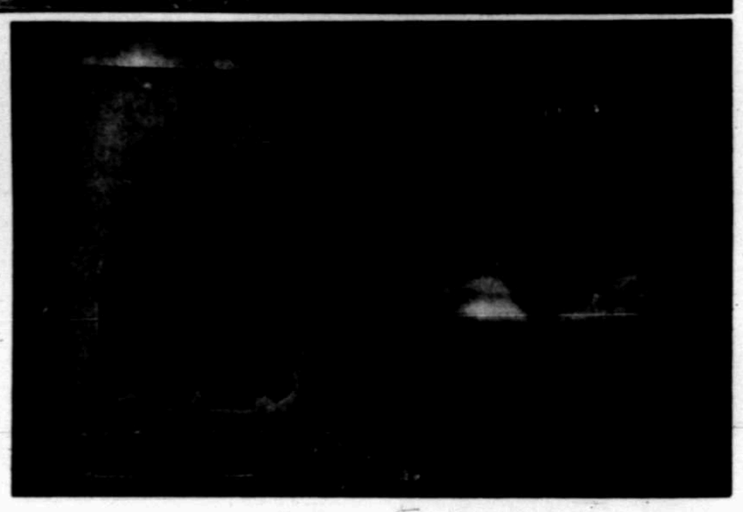

Wright was represented in the hearing by Odessa defense attorney Tom Hirsch. Representing the government was Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven "Jake" Snyder of San Antonio.

"He (Wright) stated on occasion people gave him cocaine and on occasion he gave people cocaine," said Nichols, but denied paying for cocaine.

Grand jury indicts former Midlander on bigamy charges

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A bigamy indictment has been handed down by a Midland grand jury, one of the rare times the law has been invoked in Midland County, according to authorities.

The indictment, handed down April 8, alleges that former Midland resident Marvin Butler, 34, was married to his first wife, Debra Thomas Butler, when he married his third wife, Scarlette Fay Butler, on Feb. 28, 1986.

According to the Midland County District Attorney's Office, he also married another woman, Barbara Elliot Butler, in Sept. 1981. They were divorced in Jan. 1986, according to records.

Butler, who authorities believe is living in the Dallas area, is currently on parole.

District Attorney Al Schorre said the state parole office here notified him when the bigamy was discovered, and Schorre called Scarlette Butler to testify before the grand jury.

"I thought they (grand jury) would be interested in her story," Schorre said.

"Very, very few of those cases are filed across the state," he said. "As a general rule, the state is more interested in getting the parties divorced, and cleaning up the paperwork, so to speak, like the division of property, and child support, things like that.

"But this appears to be an aggravated case, so, yes we are going to pursue it."

Schorre said he could not comment on the aggravating circumstances of the case.

The prosecutor said he had not even considered what punishment he might seek for Butler if he is brought back to Midland and convicted of the crime. He said he hasn't had to ponder punishment for many bigamists.

"At this point, I haven't really thought about it (the punishment)," he said. "Like I said, we only do those cases that are really aggravated."

Schorre said it is possible Butler's parole could be revoked and he could be returned to the Texas Department of Corrections.

Police spokesman Lt. Hank Norton said he had never heard of an arrest for bigamy, or indeed any case of bigamy in the city. Norton has been with the force for more than 20 years.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, a former Department of Public Safety trooper, said he has heard of "very, very few" cases of bigamy.

"I, in my time, have never worked one," the sheriff said.

Under Texas law, bigamy is a third-degree felony, punishable by two to 10 years in state prison. A convicted bigamist could also be fined up to $5,000.

According to ancient Roman law, the term "bigamy" referred to the offense committed by an ecclesiastic, or clergyman, who married two wives successively. Under that definition, bigamy could be committed by marrying a second wife after the death of a first, or by marrying a widow.

Combest denies backing Garden City SSC site

LUBBOCK (AP) — A congressman said his positive comments earlier this week about attempts to lure the lucrative multibillion-dollar supercollider project to the Permian Basin shouldn't be construed as him favoring it over other proposed West Texas locations.

"I don't have a position on where the site is as long as it's in West Texas," Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, said Thursday.

He has not visited a site near Garden City, 20 miles south of Big Spring, that he spoke favorably about during a speech in Odessa on Monday, or a proposed site in Hockley County, west of Lubbock, he said.

Because a series of community meetings over Congress' long Easter vacation began Monday in Odessa, Combest said, his favorable comments on the Garden City proposal have been misinterpreted as favoritism for that project over others.

He remains neutral on specific locations, Combest said.

"My interest is to make sure the West Texas region has...adequate consideration of our sites."

Combest said the cost savings of building and operating the world's largest atom smasher in Texas would be the state's biggest advantage in the selection process.

He surmised that Texas is among the "top three or four" candidates vying for the project. He said West Texas has a further advantage with flat, cleared land which also would make construction of the project less costly.

"Forty-five of the states want it. We (in the state's final recommendations) have got to put forward the best site — or two sites, I hope — in Texas," Combest said.

The congressman said Texas should be the No. 1 choice for the project unless the final selection committee bases its decision heavily on project benefits.

"I don't want them to look at who has the best recreation and best social life," he said.

The super-collider project is a giant atom-smasher described as the world's costliest scientific instrument, designed to probe the deepest scientific secrets of matter.

Landing the project would mean thousands of construction jobs, long-term work for 2,500 scientists and technicians, and a budget of about $200 million a year.

Ector commissioners to discuss agency changes

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners will meet in special session next Tuesday to consider departmental changes that will occur with acquisition of the former Sears Building on East 8th Street.

Commissioners last Monday authorized Judge Jan Fisher to enter into negotiations with owners George and Mary Ida Williams for purchase of the 52,000 square foot building for $300,000.

The action apparently ended consideration of the possible purchase of the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce Building, 400 W. 4th St., which carried a $500,000 price tag in 1985.

Acquisition of the of the old Sears Building would alleviate increasing space problems at the courthouse by allowing the tax office to occupy about one-sixth of the the facility once it is remodeled, according to county officials. Target date for moving the tax office is Oct. 1.

Current plans call for the Adult Probation Department to move into the first floor area now occupied by the tax and auto registration offices. Adult Probation was moved from the third floor of the courthouse to offices on Texas Street about 2½ years ago before expansion and remodeling of the courthouse began. The Adult Probation office space has been costing the county about $37,000 a year, officials said.

The acquisition of the building at 1010 E. 8th St. will apparently end plans to extend the courthouse across East 3rd Street and build an annex in the area behind the county health department now occupied by the county purchasing office, the refurbished Henderson Building and a county parking lot. Construction cost of the annex was estimated at about $2 million when the proposal was first discussed more than three years ago.

Under the proposal to acquire the building the county would pay $150,000 in fiscal 1987 and another $150,000 payment in fiscal 1988.

Officers arrest man, woman in marijuana bust

From Staff Reports

Public safety authorities in Midland were busy Thursday and early today by a variety of activities, including an airplane crash and a drug bust.

According to the Midland County Sheriff's Office, a man and a woman were arrested and two pounds of marijuana valued at $2,000 was seised Thursday evening. Officers obtained a search and arrest warrant for the pair from Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, according to reports.

The arrests were made without incident at the the Desert Inn Motel, 3101 Bankhead Hwy., reports said. Nearly $1,500 cash was also confiscated after the arrest.

The two are being held in the Midland County Jail until they can be arraigned, authorities said.

Police Roundup

No injuries were reported but a house was heavily damaged in a fire that broke out early today in south Midland County, according to fire department reports.

Ten firefighters were sent to fight the blaze near the intersection of Cottonflat Road and County Road 114 at 3:30 a.m. today, but when they arrived the house was in flames.

Reports said the fire was confined to the rear area of the house.

The cause of the fire is being investigated.

Because the owner of the home could not be located, firefighters turned over several firearms that were in the house to the sheriff's office, including a 12-gauge pump shotgun, .22 caliber rifle, .22 caliber pistol, and another rifle of unknown caliber.

A 60-year-old woman was identified as the pilot of a single-engine plane that flipped over Wednesday at a grass landing strip northeast of Midland, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Guilty plea nets former HRC director Jones deferred adjudication

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The former executive director of the Midland Human Relations Council received a probated sentence after he pleaded guilty Thursday to three counts of forgery.

Bob Jones, 42, who resigned from the HRC Feb. 2 after an internal audit revealed $4,600 was missing from the agency, was indicted by a grand jury Feb. 11.

Thursday he received three years deferred adjudication in an agreement with the Midland County District Attorney's Office, according to authorities.

Jones also agreed to make full restitution to the HRC, the agency whose checks were forged, according to 142nd State District Court records filed Thursday.

Jones also was indicted April 8 for theft for allegedly stealing a stereo system Feb. 6, but that indictment was dismissed after Jones made full restitution, according to court records.

Jones pleaded guilty to forging three separate HRC checks, according to court records.

In Feburary, the seven-member HRC board of directors originally agreed not to file charges against Jones, if he made $5,000 in restitution.

But when Jones missed a deadline for settling the dispute, the district attorney's office was asked to seek an indictment.

According to Tom Morgan, Jones' Midland attorney, because Jones received deferred adjudication, if he complies with the terms of the agreement, a conviction will never appear on his record.

Patricia Comer Schneider of Midland was slightly injured about 7 p.m. Wednesday when the Cessna she was flying attempted to land at Ryan Field, near the intersection of CR 1150 and CR 60E.

A brake on the plane, owned by Topat Ranches, Inc., apparently failed when the pilot attempted to stop the plane, DPS reports said. The craft crashed through a fence, a nose section wheel broke, and the plane flipped upside down in a freshly-plowed field, reports said.

The incident was not reported to authorities until 7:30 a.m. Thursday, and the Federal Aviation Administration is investigating, reports said.

Nichols testified that Wright had hired a hit man out of Houston to kill a narcotics agent and to "harm or shoot" an FDIC representative, Al Robinson. Nichols said the bearded Wright was courteous to him and exhibited no ill will.

The DEA agent said that Robinson knew Ms. Dennard on "a friendly basis" and occasionally dated her.

Nichols also said that Ms. Dennard said Wright had given her a semi-automatic pistol and that the "pistol had been used to hurt somebody." Nichols said the woman did not elaborate.

"We're not finished with our investigation," Nichols said.

Wright was implicated in a Phoenix, Ariz., bank robbery. Nichols testified that Ms. Dennard had overheard Wright say he supplied an aircraft used in a Phoenix bank robbery.

In a facetious vein, Hirsch suggested that Wright had sold state secrets to Russia and had consorted with Russian women.

Though he wasn't compelled to take the witness stand on his bond hearing, Wright nevertheless did. His daughter was in the courtroom for the hearing, but his wife, Glenda, a registered nurse, and 28-year-old son were not present for the hearing.

In questioning Wright, prosecutor Snyder noted that Wright was under "criminal investigation" by the IRS. Snyder suggested that Wright reported "not a dime" of income on his oilfield equipment business for the 1980, 1981 and 1982 tax years.

"I'm not sure if that's correct or not," Wright said. "I don't have them (IRS income-tax forms) in front of me. I don't remember."

"Very good, sir," replied Snyder, who said Wright owes the IRS $100,000.

Defense attorney Hirsch said that the IRS had dropped the criminal investigation of Wright and was conducting a civil investigation into Wright's income taxes.

Snyder asked Wright if the DOE had investigated him for oil-pipe theft.

"As far as I know, I've never been investigated," Wright said.

"That's how you get your pipe — you steal it, don't you?" Snyder asked.

Testimony indicated that some pipe which Wright had used for collateral on loans had been stolen. "I've got odds and ends of pipe stored at different places," Wright said.

Wright, who apparently owes the FDIC about $245,000, said that the FDIC had seized his twin-engine Cessna 414 aircraft, valued between $130,000 and $140,000, and had seized $150,000 in certificates of deposits.

"I should think I should have a refund coming," Wright said.

"The FDIC is selling your assets as fast as they can find them," said Snyder.

Snyder suggested that the FDIC was seizing Wright's property and CDs because he had defaulted on loans.

"I have never defaulted on a bank loan...to my knowledge," Wright said. "I can't remember." He said he had taken out bank loans since he was 14 years old.

Snyder asked Wright if he uses cocaine.

Wright's attorney, Hirsch, did not object to the question.

"I have before," Wright said, "...just when we were out at a social gathering or a party."

"That is why it (deferred adjudication) is so desired by people accused of crimes," Morgan said. "You are not convicted."

Morgan said Jones is employed as a hospital administrator out-of-state. He said, in fact, that Jones has already been promoted.

"I am totally confident that Bob Jones will successfully live up to the terms of the agreement," he said.

"It is time to give back and restore to Bob Jones his good name," Morgan said.

Before working with the HRC, Jones managed inventory for Midland's Parkview Hospital, now known as Physicians and Surgeons Hospital. He had been executive director of the HRC for more than a year.

Two local men indicted on fraud charges

From Staff and Wire Reports

SEATTLE — A federal grand jury has indicted four men, including a Midland lawyer and a Midland real-estate developer, on charges of conspiring to defraud the federal government, a now-defunct Seattle savings and loan and its subsidiary out of millions of dollars.

The indictment, issued Wednesday, charges that the defendants carried out the scheme between March 1982 and July 1983 at a time when Queen City Savings and Loan Association was troubled financially.

The insolvent Queen City Savings was taken over in 1984 by Gibraltar Financial Corp. of California.

Charged in the 16-count indictment are Paul D. Smith, a Midland developer; Jim Kip Boyd, a Midland lawyer; former president of Queen City Savings and Loan, G. Michael Kirchoff, of Gig Harbor; real estate developer Jerry D. Smith of Walla Walla, Wash.

Paul D. Smith was out of town today and was unavailable for comment. Boyd was "not available" for comment.

The defendants are accused of draining the savings and loan by getting it to enter into questionable high-interest, high-loan fee transactions, particularly in the Midland-Odessa area of Texas, and of obtaining money from the thrift institution under "false and fraudulent pretenses."

The indictment charges that the defendants made "false entries in the books, records, and statements," of the saving and loan and its subsidiary Queen City Inc., "with intent to defraud these institutions and to deceive officers, auditors, examiners, and agents of these institutions and of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board."

The defendants also are accused of inflating the purchase price of real estate purchased through Queen City loans.

Geneva Ridgeway, R.N., waits for the first new patient to come into the Testing and Diagnostic Center at Midland Memorial Hospital.

MMH's Testing, Diagnostic Center should end some patients' waiting

From Staff Reports

Fewer patients will be sitting in Midland Memorial Hospital waiting rooms anticipating medical tests with the advent Monday of the new Testing and Diagnostic Center.

Prior to the center's opening, patients who required medical tests would have to go to as many as four different areas of the hospital for testing, MMH spokeswoman Lisa Ball said.

The Testing and Diagnostic Center has condensed those areas into a four-room area where patients can have bloodwork, urinalyses, cardiopulmonary tests and scope procedures done.

The center is also located next to the radiology department where all X-rays are done.

In addition, patients may begin the admission process through the center, reducing their total waiting time by as much as 50 percent, Ms. Ball said.

The idea for the center came from many patient and physician requests to reduce waiting time associated with admissions and testing, the spokeswoman added.

Parking adjacent to the doors nearest the center has been earmarked exclusively for those being tested at the center.

Snyder water treatment plant 'clams up'

SNYDER (AP) — Asian clams have invaded Snyder's water treatment plant, fouling the water and treatment plant machinery, officials say.

The clams, sucked into the plant through a pipeline from Lake J.B. Thomas, excrete waste products that combine with chemicals used in water treatment to produce a chemical that causes cancer, City Engineer Don Osborne says.

"There's no silver lining to this cloud," Osborne said. "It'd be a nice trick if we did find some pearls."

The pearl-less clams first showed up in the lake about seven years ago, he said, but the problem "has built up steadily and reached a plateau. When we have a buildup of clam shells (in the plant's water tanks), we just have to shovel them out."

In one 10-day period, he said, workers shoveled three five-gallon tanks full of clam shells from the treatment plant's water tank.

The clams excrete waste products that, when chlorine is added, produces trihalomethane, Osborn said. Federal officials have said that trihalomethane can cause cancer, he said.

Snyder's water should have a trihalomethane concentration of no more than 100 parts per billion, he said. In part because of the clams, he said, Snyder's water has had concentrations ranging up to 120 parts per billion.

The mouth of the city's pipeline is at the floor of the lake, abutting clam colonies, Osborn said. Snyder officials have suggested that the Colorado River Municipal Water District, which manages the lake, push the pipeline farther up from the lake floor.

At the treatment plant, he said, a series of chemical treatments will be added during the treatment process to clean up more of the clams' waste.

City Council approved April 6 a plan to spend $190,000 on equipment and chemicals for the plant, he said.

Clam colonies have formed in intake pipes at the Lake Fort Phantom Western Texas Utilities plant, almost forcing a plant shutdown several times, said superintendent Charles Brown.

Lake water is used to cool the plant's generators, he said. If the pipes are blocked, the generators can overheat and cause a shutdown, he said.

Workers began cleaning the pipes more often about five years ago after several emergency pipe-cleaning incidents, he said. Now, the pipes are cleaned twice a week "during what I call clamming season — from May to October when the water heats up," he said.

"It can be expensive to deal with these clams," Robert McMahon, a biology professor at the University of Texas at Arlington, told the Abilene Reporter-News.

Lowering lake levels is the most effective way trimming the clam population, he said, because it leaves clam colonies high and dry. But that's a difficult project in parched West Texas, he said.

"Many of us scientists consider this clam the most significant water pest in the country," he said. "They have a tremendous ability to invade and take over an area."

In California, he said, a clam colony grew so big that it blocked a canal. State workers cleared the canal, he said, but the clams reappeared and blocked the canal again two years later.

Bluebonnets surviving despite late freezes

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Late freezes and low rainfall haven't beaten down the bluebonnets growing along the Texas highways, says a Texas A&M University horticulturist.

Dr. Ed McWilliams, who has been keeping an eye on two bluebonnet species in three Central Texas counties, says tourists looking for a beautiful drive shouldn't be alarmed.

Bluebonnet trails will be as blue as ever for the rest of the month, depending on rain, because roadsides are seeded with the same type of bluebonnet that survives as far north as Oklahoma.

But fields of certain native bluebonnets in central and southern parts of the state aren't likely to seed this year. Some fields of blue from the sand variety have faded away.

"While the flowers can survive under considerably drier conditions than we have now, they can't survive freezing temperatures in late March and early April," he said.

New Odessa deputy police chief named

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police Chief Alan Stewart announced Thursday the selection of an 18-year veteran as the department's new deputy chief.

Det. Lt. Marvin Crumrine, 40, who has worked in both patrol and detective divisions of the Odessa Police Department, assumes responsibility of overseeing the detective division.

Stewart chose Crumrine to fill the position formerly held by Deputy Chief K.R. Jones, who joined the city's Planning and Inspection Department after resigning amid considerable controversy including threat of a lawsuit against the city and police department.

Crumrine was one of eight final candidates for the position who underwent an extensive evaluation process before Stewart made his selection.

The new deputy chief is a 1979 graduate of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin with a bachelor's degree in Criminal Justice. He also is working toward a master's degree at University of Texas of the Permian Basin. He holds advanced and instructor certificates in law enforcement and is a graduate of the FBI National Academy. Crumrine also earned an Associate of Applied Science Degree in Law Enforcement in 1974 from Odessa College.

Crumrine's appointment was effective immediately.

Zinc fertilizer revolutionary on tree growth

Kiker

Zinc fertilizer on pecan trees has had a revolutionary effect on tree growth and production. The growth of the pecan industry in the southeastern United States in the 1930s and 1940s was directly related to the discovery of zinc's importance to the pecan. Commerical production in Texas would not be possible without foliar zinc sprays each spring. Orchards would take more than 10 years to bear if it were not for zinc sprays.

These are the basic choices of zinc foliar sprays: Zinc sulfate, 2 pounds per 100 gallons of water or 2 teaspoons per gallon; NZN, 1 quart or 2 teaspoons; ZN Special, 2 pounds or 2 teaspoons zinc sulfate plus 32 percent liquid nitrogen. This last option should be used only by large producers who have very serious zinc problems in the irrigated west. NZN should be used by homeowners because of its low percentage actual zinc and potential phototoxicity to plants other than pecan trees. If zinc is sprayed onto ornamental or fruit trees, it will kill the foliage, so use NZN around the landscape when drift will be a problem. Applying zinc to soil is of little or no value because the pecan cannot remove it from the soil. This is especially true for very high pH soils and soils high in phospherous.

Young trees should be sprayed every two weeks from April to mid-August. Bearing trees should be sprayed every two weeks for three or four applications beginning at bud break. In far West Texas where zinc sprays are extremely critical, weekly zinc sprays may be needed to insure optimum growth and production. Leaf samples can be taken in mid-July to determine if your zinc program is working. The optimum foliar zinc level is 80-120 ppm zinc. Terminal growth and leaf size is also a good index on zinc nutrition. If your trees have long shoots and very large leaves, your zinc program is working. If the shoots are short and leaves are small, you need to re-evaluate your zinc program.

State farmers assessing damage from freezes

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas farmers are still assessing crop damage from two hard freezes about a week-and-a-half ago, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Particularly hard hit were fruit and nut crops and the wheat crop, said Carpenter, in his weekly report on the state's agriculture.

Losses to the Texas peach crop could be as high as 75 to 80 percent while the pecan crop could be reduced by 35 to 40 percent. Wheat losses could surpass 50 percent in south central areas where the crop was in the booting to heading stage, and losses in other areas will become more evident over the next few weeks due to various types of structural damage to plants, Carpenter pointed out.

Some young corn, sorghum and cotton also was damaged by the unseasonally cold weather. However, farmers are still assessing the extent of the damage to determine whether or not replanting is necessary. The continued cool weather following the freeze has slowed seed germination of crops already planted, and many farmers are waiting to see if crops will come up to a stand.

Soil temperatures stayed on the cool side the past week, according to readings by the Southwest Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University. Readings at the 4-inch depth averaged as follows for the week ending April 6: Austin, 56 degrees Fahrenheit; Beaumont, 62; Big Spring, 54; Bushland, 47; College Station, 57; Dell City, 60; Eagle Lake, 61; Fort Stockton, 55; Haskell, 56; Lavon Dam (near Dallas), 54; Lubbock, 51; Lufkin, 55; Pecos, 53; San Angelo, 59; Stephenville, 59; and Waco, 55. Minimum temperatures recommended by the Extension Service for planting are 50 degrees Fahrenheit for corn, 55 for sorghum and 65 for cotton.

Livestock and range conditions remained good over the state although the recent siege of cold weather caused some weight loss in animals and some deaths of newborn calves, lambs and kids. Forage growth was slowed but should improve with open weather as soil moisture conditions are favorable over most of the state, Carpenter said.

Milk producers want pizza cheese standards

By DON KENDALL

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's rejection of its own four-year-old proposal to set a minimum standard for the amount of cheese used in frozen meat pizzas has not set well with the National Milk Producers Federation.

The proposal would have required frozen meat pizzas to contain at least 12 percent cheese, at least half of it natural cheese. It also would have required frozen pizza manufacturers to use more prominent labeling for meat and poultry products containing cheese substitutes and imitation cheeses.

Although the proposal had been supported vigorously by the federation and some other farm interests, it was opposed successfully by a number of pizza manufacturers and consumers who feared costs would be driven up.

Current USDA rules define pizza as "a bread base meat food product with tomato sauce, cheese and meat topping," but they do not define cheese or specify a minimum amount.

It is this definition that will continue as a result of USDA's decision announced Monday to scrap the 1983 proposal to set minimum cheese standards for frozen pizza.

The federation, whose members include the nation's largest dairy co-ops, said it will continue to lobby and speak out for pizza cheese standards despite USDA's rejection of the plan.

"It looks like Pillsbury has been determined by USDA to be the company that can decide what's going to be in pizza," said federation spokeswoman Doni Dondero.

Opponents noted that current federal rules require that the use of cheese substitutes be listed in the label's ingredient statement.

"There's no way a (pizza) buyer would know that they could put 90 percent imitation cheese in there and only 10 percent real cheese," Ms. Dondero said. "For all they know, its a smidgin...and that, to me, is real consumer deception."

Dairy interests have lobbied hard for years to get stiffer pizza cheese regulations adopted by the federal government. One reason for dairy involvement is the use of imported casein — a milk protein derivative — that American milk producers say encroaches into their market.

The USDA began trying to revise pizza standards in 1973, but each time a new proposal was suggested, industry snarls and bureaucratic infighting sent it back to the regulatory kitchen for more work.

It was 10 years before the most recent rule-making proposal was ready. As before, it applied only to packaged, frozen pizzas, the kind sold in supermarkets. Fresh-baked kinds sold by pizzarias would not have been affected by the rules.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said the rule changes proposed in August 1983 drew 5,543 comments when they came up for public review, a record for the regulatory agency. Most comments were from consumers.

Houston said the USDA concluded that the comments in opposition to the proposed rule changes were persuasive and that the new requirements were not necessary.

The rulemaking document rejecting the proposal cited comments that set out several reasons for opposition.

For example, Houston said, the Pillsbury Co., Minneapolis, Minn., said "a different labeling scheme for cheese substitutes implied that these products are 'inferior' to natural cheese." The company said its research indicated very little nutritional difference between cheese substitutes and real cheese.

"The company further pointed out that cost savings from the use of cheese substitutes benefits manufacturers and consumers, and that as such, there was no need for a change in the existing standard," Houston said.

Others opposed the proposed cheese standard on dietary grounds, arguing it would prohibit frozen meat pizzas from being manufactured entirely with cheese substitutes in place of real cheese.

Soviets buying more grain than expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union surprised Agriculture Department experts by once again boosting grain imports, suggesting that Moscow is adding to granary stocks in support of a huge livestock sector.

Officials said Thursday that the Soviets now are expected to import 28 million metric tons of grain in the marketing year that will end June 30, an increase of 2 million tons from last month's forecast.

Despite the increase, Soviet grain imports from all foreign sources still will be short of the 29.9 million tons imported in 1985-86. The 28 million tons now forecast also would be the smallest import total in eight years.

Even so, imports of 28 million tons are "somewhat surprising given the fact that the Soviets reported a 1986 crop of 210 million tons, 18 million above the 1985 harvest and the fourth highest on record," the report said.

The Soviet wheat import forecast for this year remained at 15 million tons, while the estimate of coarse grains such as corn accounted for all of the 2 million ton increase from last month, rising to 12 million tons.

"Miscellaneous grains, rice and pulse (such as peas and beans) imports are expected to account for the balance," the report said.

According to the report, the Soviet Union has bought more than 25 million tons of its expected 1986-87 grain imports, including orders the past month for additional quantities of U.S. corn. Moscow also has been "apparently finalizing details" for Canadian wheat and barley.

The report said the larger imports appear to be supporting both an increase in domestic use as well as "a significant addition" to Soviet grain stockpiles this year.

"Livestock inventories are at record or near-record levels," the report said.

USDA reports on cropland erosion

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas has about 2.3 million acres of highly erodible croplands, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture report.

Most of the acreage is in the High Plains and Rolling Plains of Northwest Texas, the report said.

The Conservation Reserve Program in effect pays farmers for taking erodible croplands out of production for 10 years and for planting the lands in permanent vegetative cover, Ron George, coordinator for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, said Wednesday.

George said the program is an excellent opportunity for the Texas landowners to create wildlife habitat on the unused lands.

The landowners will be able to lease the acreage to hunters for additional income, he said.

Hightower says problems ahead for state farmers

AUSTIN (AP) — A continuing decline in land prices mean the state's farmers can expect even more serious economic problems ahead, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said last week.

A federal study released by the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported that farmland values across Texas dropped by 11 percent during 1986, almost half again as much as the national decline of 8 percent.

"Plummeting land values in Texas and across the nation are just more proof that the depression in rural America is worsening and that current federal farm policies need a complete overhaul," Hightower said.

U.S. meat inspections 'best in world'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng says he has witnessed some bitter battles over meat inspection but that he is convinced American consumers have the best inspection system in the world.

After Congress tightened federal meat and poultry inspection laws in the late 1960s, Lyng said it was his job as an assistant secretary of agriculture in the early years of the Nixon administration to put the new rules into effect.

The meat industry "didn't like me a damn" in those years, Lyng said Thursday. But after he left the Agriculture Department the industry-supported American Meat Institute hired Lyng as its president, a job he held for seven years.

Lyng, in a feisty mood, told a meeting of the National Cattlemen's Association that he was upset by recent reports of widespread salmonella in the nation's poultry supply.

"It's damned unfair to be so critical of our system," Lyng said. "And it's being done by people that don't really make an effort to understand what the system's about."

He told the cattlemen that there have been "some tremendously unfair and non-factual attacks" on federal inspection recently.

Lyng singled out a CBS News television report on "60 Minutes" last Sunday night about poultry inspection deficiencies and how salmonella can result from hurried, unsanitary conditions in slaughter plants.

The USDA has said that nearly four of every 10 chickens reaching consumers is contaminated by salmonella, a group of common food poisoning organisms.

Other news accounts also have focused on the salmonella problem in poultry. The Senate Agriculture Committee has scheduled hearings later this month on USDA's inspection program, and the National Academy of Sciences is expected to release a report on the health-risk aspects of federal poultry inspection.

Internal parasite control essential in preventative program for horses

Minzenmayer

The single most important item in a preventative medicine program for horses is internal parasite control.

By establishing a good parasite control program in conjunction with your veterinarian, including deworming and pasture management, damage from parasite infections in horses can be minimized.

A parasite control program should focus on eliminating parasites already existing in the horse and controlling the environment through effective management so that the horse will be reinfected with fewer parasites.

A veterinarian can set up a deworming program tailored to the needs of any horse. Such factors as the environment, health of the horse, and parasites naturally found in your area must be considered in devising a treatment that will insure that the medication is continually efective. Also, a veterinarian can advise on how medication should be administered and on the correct dosage.

An effective deworming program will call for treatments at two-to-four month intervals because of continuous reinfection pressure. Programs should be designed to have major effectiveness against large and small strongyles, pinworms, roundworms and bots.

Opening lead: King of ♠ Looking at all four hands, it is hard to see how South went down at his contract of four hearts in a duplicate pairs contest. Even if he misguesses the queen of trumps, two spades and a trump are apparently all he has to give up. But see what happened.

North was on the borderline between a jump to three and four hearts. He chose the more conservative action, and South had sufficient values to contract for game.

West led the king of spades and East dropped the queen. That is something you never do with a doubleton; it promises the jack and asks the leader to continue with a low card so you can win the trick with the jack. West did so obediently, and East persisted with a third round of the suit, ruffed in dummy.

Declarer cashed the ace of trumps and was acutely conscious of West's nine. With that card out of the way, it seemed completely safe to finesse East for the queen of hearts. Even if the finesse lost, a high trump would remain in dummy to prevent a spade overruff. So South made the normal play of running the ten of trumps, and he lived to rue the day.

After winning the queen of hearts, West continued with his last spade. For the moment declarer had no problem -- he was able to ruff with the table's last trump. While East could not overruff, he had an equally deadly defense: he discarded his singleton club. Declarer was locked in dummy with no way to get back to his hand except in clubs, and when he led that suit East ruffed with his last trump to administer a one-trick defeat!

German flight attendant in TWA hijacking becomes U.S. citizen

NEWTON, N.J. (AP) — Uli Derickson, the German-born flight attendant praised for her bravery during the TWA hijacking two years ago, has become an American citizen.

The 42-year-old woman recited the pledge of allegiance Thursday along with 37 other new citizens.

"It's an exciting day, but it doesn't come easy," she said.

During the hijacking of Flight 847 in June 1985, she dealt with Shiite Moslem terrorists and tried to prevent them from separating passengers thought to be Jewish from the rest of the passengers.

The flight, which began in Athens, eventually ended in Beirut, where 39 passengers were held hostage for 17 days before being released. A Navy diver was killed by the terrorists.

Ms. Derickson, who lives in nearby Fredon and is still a TWA flight attendant, said the thanks she received in this country "made me feel I was an American. I was so touched by that, I told my husband I should become an American citizen."

She first arrived in the United States 20 years ago to work as a governess.

"I've lived in this country a long time; it's been good to me," she said. "My husband is American, my son is American. I decided it was time.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jimmy Stewart says one of his most embarrassing experiences before an audience was when he told his grade-school classmates he heard a song called "Columbia, The Germ of the Ocean."

Stewart

"I've never lived it down," said the 78-year-old actor. The title of the patriotic ballad is "Columbia, The Gem of the Ocean."

Stewart said Thursday that as a boy he built a radio and that he and his friends were thrilled when they picked up a broadcast of President Warren G. Harding's inauguration in 1921.

"The next day in class I was asked to get up and tell what it was like to hear this. Now, I had never done this. ...I had not progressed anywhere as an actor," Stewart said.

"And I said I heard speeches and I heard a band and they played 'Columbia, The Germ of the Ocean,'" he said.

Stewart, who was born in Indiana, a city about 60 miles east of Pittsburgh, was honored Thurday by the Pennsylvania Association of Broadcasters.

"I'm fed up. I'm disgusted. I'm hurt. And I'm through with Mickey Rooney forever," said Bill Britt, who lives at a reservoir in Brookline. "I guess I believe that if you are a living legend like him you should live up to that legend."

A Rooney press agent, Dan Kellachan of New York, said, "My understanding is that Bill and Mickey reached some sort of agreement on undisclosed terms and that the lawyers were just working out a few things."

But Britt said Wednesday a contract offered by Rooney "was all for him and very little for me," so he didn't sign, and a later contract offer provided for only a few thousand dollars up front.

"This is a very marketable story. I ought to become a wealthy man," said Britt, who lives on money he gets from reeeming returnable soda bottles and cans.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Business owner concerned about impending layoffs

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR COPING: I am the owner of a small business here in Midland. I am growing increasingly sure that I am going to have to lay off some more of my employees if things don't pick up. Should I tell them now? If so, what and how should I tell them? GP

DEAR GP: There are times when management has to deliver bad news. It is important how this news is delivered, both in human and business terms. It is not unusual for the person delivering the bad news to be very stressed themselves which greatly diminish their ability to effectively communicate their thoughts. This, in turn, often increases the recipient's stress and the chances of a negative response.

Ambiguity usually increases perceived levels of threat and at this time, things are very ambiguous. Many people, employees and employers, have a sense of helplessness during such times. The general consensus seems to be that it is better to call everyone together and explain things as best as possible. It may not solve the problem, but it usually serves to clear the air. There is the added benefit of being able to discuss the matter with employees prior to a crisis, rather than during a crisis.

In more formal terms, Dr. Gary Whitney of the University of San Diego, suggests the following general guidelines:

- Deliver bad news as soon as it becomes a certainly.
- Be clear and unambiguous when delivering bad news.
- Accurately identify reasons for the decision.
- Be prepared to provide information on severance pay, retirement income, medical insurance status, etc.
- Identify potential resources that might help the recipient in adapting to his or her new situation.

DEAR COPING: I live in rural Midland and I think our situation is every bit as bad as the oil people's. Just about everybody that I know is faced with losing their land. In most cases this land has been in these peoples' families for several generations. They are wiped out. Do you have any advice for us? MP

DEAR MP: A recent study conducted by the Texas Office of Rural Health paints an even bleaker picture of rural Texans. They note that the family farms are facing a crisis of unequaled proportions that rural Texans have lower than average incomes, inadequate drinking water and waste water systems, substandard housing, below average transportation systems and higher than average death rates. On the other hand, rural living produces as much drug abuse, domestic violence, depression and teenage pregnancy as does urban living.

There is no simple solution for the problems you mention, and the more inclusive problems that the research identifies. Texas must make some kind of commitment to help the farmer. The average Texan also must be educated about the problems "down on the farm."

DEAR READERS: I hope that during this Holy time you will join me in reflecting upon this past year. Many of us have experienced the embarrassment of the public airing of our financial "sins," whether in a banker's office, on the street or in bankruptcy court. Sometimes it helps to know that we are not alone. But it still is a heavy burden. Many have suffered a real blow to our pride and our life's work.

Some lost their jobs early, but others suffered slowly. When financial death came, many people realized that they were not dead, only wounded. It then became clear that there were many more important things to focus on.

New insights were found and the knowledge that more is not necessarily better. The financial aspect of life may have been lost, but many more things of real value may have found. Things that are of true value cannot be bought. Sometimes, to find something of great value, we must first lose something of great value.

Home-colored Easter eggs still tradition

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

If you're hard-cooking and coloring your own Easter eggs this year, follow these tips on timing.

First, place the eggs in a single layer in a saucepan. Add enough water to come to at least 1 inch above the eggs. Cover and bring the water just to boiling. Turn the heat off. Let the eggs stand, covered, in the hot water for 15 to 17 minutes for large-size eggs. For extra-large eggs, let them stand for 18 to 20 minutes; for medium eggs, reduce the time to 14 minutes.

Drain promptly and run cold water over the eggs until they are completely cooled.

Once the eggs are dyed, refrigerate them until ready to use. To keep the eggs safe to eat, do not leave them standing at room temperature for more than three hours.

If you have extra uncooked eggs, try them in these Easter morning breakfast dishes and desserts.

1½ cups sugar
2 eggs, beaten

To prepare the topping, combine ⅔ cup oatmeal, ⅓ cup brown sugar, ½ cup chopped nuts, ¼ cup melted margarine and ½ teaspoon cinnamon.

Spread half of coffee cake batter in the prepared pan. Sprinkle with half of the topping. Top with the remaining batter and topping. Bake for 30 to 35 minutes or until the center tests done.

Storage units help sort possessions

Copley News Service

No matter where we live, most of us manage to fill all available space with our possessions. Despite annual spring cleanings, our closets, garages and drawers overflow with accumulated treasures and miscellaneous stuff.

Solve your storage problem while you discover the joys of simple carpentry; follow two plan sheets for build-and-stack storage units and under-stair storage. The two fold-out plan sheets will show you how to make simple, versatile storage places for much of your miscellany.

The first flyer, Plan Sheet No. 50, provides specific, detailed instructions for building a basic modular storage unit from solid Western softwood. The sheet also supplies directions for constructing variations on the basic unit, including units with shelves and different types of doors.

Plan Sheet No. 51 shows how to assemble units with drawers and shelves that make efficient use of the areas under your stairs. Diagrams and instructions tell how to create dividers and drawers, as well as pull-out storage bins, shelves and tables for convenient under-stair storage.

All of the storage plans call for standard-size lumber and basic tools.

Neighbors bring office home for off-duty officer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him Denny) is a police officer, and our neighbors know it. Last week a neighbor called Denny while he was home — off duty — and asked him to meet him about a mile from our house. We thought this neighbor was having car trouble. When Denny got there, he found some guy holding a woman hostage with a gun! Not only was valuable time lost until the police arrived, but Denny was totally unprepared for the situation and could have been killed. Another time, a neighbor lady called Denny and asked him to come over and arrest some guy because he had cashed her paycheck without her permission!

Abby, why do people think that because off-duty police officers are armed they are always available? (Cops carry their weapons to protect themselves from criminals who might recognize them as cops and try to "waste" them.)

Police officers are taught in the academy that if they see a crime committed, they should try to be a good witness, but leave the law enforcing to the cops in that jurisdiction. (Most cops don't appreciate outsiders butting in.)

The bottom line is this: If a cop is needed, don't waste time calling one who is home off duty. Call the station.

I hope you think this is important enough for your column. — DENNY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: It is. Thanks for the tip.

DEAR ABBY: I identified with that long-suffering woman who stayed married to a physically filthy man for 47 years. I was married for 10 years to a man who never showered. He wore his underwear for 24 hours a day for over a month at a time. I finally left him when I had to put a tissue over my nose when we made love. (Yes, he expected lovemaking regularly!)

But do you know what really ticked me off? It was his adoring family — especially his mother and sister — who kept insinuating that his filthy condition was my fault!

Outside of hiring two thugs to rip the clothes off his back and throw him under a shower, I can't imagine what they expected me to do.

We are not married anymore for obvious reasons, and his family still thinks I'm crazy for giving up this prize. What do you think? — HAD ENOUGH

DEAR HAD: I think 10 years with such a man is about 9 years, 11 months and 3 weeks too long.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a gorgeous beard that neither one of us wants him to shave, but it's so stiff it irritates my face, which becomes raw and abraded from the roughness. We've tried hair conditioners, but they don't help.

Can you give us any advice on how to save our love life — short of shaving his beard? — SORE IN LOVE

DEAR SORE: Can you fashion some kind of protective covering on the order of a ski mask? Or perhaps a "snood" to cover the beard? (You may break up laughing in the middle of a love scene, so keep your eyes closed.)

This is no gag, it's a serious problem, so if any of my readers has a solution, I'm open for suggestions. With moustaches and beards in vogue again, how do other lovebirds manage?

Easter holiday brings parade of homemade breads

By VERNE PALMER
Copley News Service

Easter brings with it a number of traditions, but none is as sweet as the parade of freshly baked holiday breads.

These yeasty treasures take a variety of forms — buns, braided rings, tall mushroom-shaped loaves, tube rings and flat rectangular rolls — but they bear a striking similarity in content. The dough is almost always studded with raisins and nuts and accented with citrus rind or juice.

Powdered sugar glaze or icing — sometimes used to form a cross atop the bread, as in Hot Cross Buns (originally a Lenten favorite) and Kulich — is another common bond.

One of the most striking holiday traditionals is Italian Easter Braid, an almond-and-anise-flavored sweet bread baked in a ring and decorated with pink, purple and yellow tinted eggs that bake right along with the bread.

Amsterdam Easter Bread is as traditional to Holland as tulips and wooden shoes. This wheat-rich bread is wrapped around a filling of creamed butter and strawberry jam topped off with chopped raisins and ground nuts.

Babka, a Polish favorite, is baked to a golden brown in a tube-shaped pan, then topped with a tart lemon-flavored icing that is allowed to drizzle down the still warm sides of the cake.

Perhaps the most visually distinctive of the Easter breads is Kulich, a Russian creation whose mushroom crown traditionally bears the sign of the cross. This yeasty buttermilk bread, studded with raisins and almonds, is the main attraction in a weeklong feast that begins immediately after midnight on Easter morning.

HOT CROSS BUNS

3¼ to 3¾ cups all-purpose flour
1 package quick-rising yeast
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ cup milk
½ cup water
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 egg
¾ cup currants
2 tablespoons grated lemon rind
1 egg yolk
1 tablespoon water
Frosting:
1 cup powdered sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
3 to 4 teaspoons water

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

In large mixer bowl, combine 1½ cups flour, yeast, sugar, cinnamon, salt, cloves and nutmeg; mix well. In saucepan, heat milk, water and butter until very warm (120 to 130 degrees, butter does not need to melt). Add to flour mixture. Add egg. Blend at low speed until moistened; beat 3 minutes at medium speed.

By hand, gradually stir in currants, lemon rind and enough remaining flour to make a soft dough. Knead on floured surface until smooth and elastic, 5 to 8 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place until doubled, about 30 minutes.

Punch down dough, divide into 3 parts. Divide each third into 6 pieces. Shape each piece into a smooth ball. Place on greased cookie sheet, sides touching. Cover; let rise in warm place until double, about 15 minutes. Combine egg yolk and water; brush buns. Bake at 375 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes until golden brown. Remove from cookie sheet; cool. Frost each roll with a cross. Makes 18 buns.

FROSTING: Combine powdered sugar, vanilla and enough water to make a thick frosting.

ITALIAN EASTER BRAID

½ cup milk
1 tablespoon dry yeast
1 teaspoon honey
1½ cup to 2 cups whole wheat flour
3 eggs, at room temperature, beaten
½ cup honey, slightly warmed
¼ cup butter, melted and cooled
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 teaspoon anise seed, well crushed
½ teaspoon almond extract
½ cup golden raisins
½ cup slivered almonds
6 raw eggs in shells, tinted
½ cup almond glaze

Scald milk in small saucepan. Cool just until it feels very warm. In small bowl combine milk, yeast and 1 teaspoon honey. Let stand until mixture bubbles up, about 5 minutes.

Mix together whole wheat flour and unbleached white flour in medium-size bowl.

In large bowl beat together eggs, ½ cup warmed honey, butter, orange rind, anise seeds and almond extract. Add yeast mixture and blend well. Add flour mixture ½ cup at a time to a soft but workable dough. If using dough hooks, knead by machine for 5 to 7 minutes. By hand, knead on floured surface for 10 to 12 minutes. Place dough in well-buttered bowl and butter all sides. Cover with plastic wrap and let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk, about 2 hours.

Flatten dough on lightly floured surface and let rest for 10 minutes to relax gluten. Roll out to about 10x20-inch rectangle. Sprinkle with raisins and almonds and roll up like jelly roll. Flatten dough again and roll out to 10x15-inch square. Cut into 3 long ropes and roll ropes to firm and lengthen them. Pinch ropes together at one end, and lay on buttered jelly-roll pan. Begin to braid them, gently braiding in raw eggs in shells as you go. Coax braid into circle around oiled custard cup and pinch closed. Cover lightly with plastic wrap and let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk, about 1½ hours. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Bake bread on middle shelf of oven for 25 minutes. Gently remove custard cup and continue baking for 10 minutes or until bread sounds hollow when tapped and is brown on top. Loosen bread from pan and place on wire rack over sheet of waxed paper.

Spread almond glaze over bread while loaf is still warm. Cool on wire rack. If keeping bread overnight, store in bread box in cool room.

ALMOND GLAZE

3 tablespoons honey
5 tablespoons almond butter (recipe follows)

In small skillet (preferably with a non-stick surface) heat honey, stirring constantly, until it bubbles. Stir in almond butter to make smooth paste. Spread over warm bread or cake immediately.

ALMOND BUTTER

2 cups whole or slivered blanched almonds
3 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon vegetable oil, or more as needed
⅛ to ¼ teaspoon almond extract

In food processor, grind almonds until soft and pasty. Occasionally stop machine to break up ground nuts that pack down below blade. Add honey, 1 tablespoon oil and almond extract. If necessary, add more oil to achieve spreadable texture. Store in refrigerator. Keeps for about 2 weeks.

AMSTERDAM EASTER BREAD

¾ cup lukewarm water
2 tablespoons honey, warmed
1 tablespoon dry yeast
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons butter
1 egg, beaten
4 to 5 cups whole wheat flour
½ cup golden raisins
½ cup dark raisins
1 cup ground walnuts
2 egg whites
½ cup butter, softened
¼ cup strawberry jam (recipe follows)

Butter large bowl. Flour large baking sheet.

In another large bowl, blend together water and honey. Stir in yeast and set aside until mixture bubbles up, about 10 minutes.

In small saucepan, scald milk. Remove from heat and stir in butter until melted. Allow to cool slightly. Add to yeast mixture along with beaten egg.

Sift flour into medium-sized bowl. Beat 3 cups flour into liquid ingredients, 1 cup at a time. Add as much of remaining flour as dough will accept, working it in with your hands. Dough should be very stiff. Knead in food processor into 2 batches for 1 minute or until a ball forms; kneading can also be done by hand for 10 minutes, or with dough hooks for 5 to 7 minutes. If kneading was not done in food processor, form dough into a ball. Place into prepared bowl, turning to coat all surfaces of dough with butter. Cover with plastic wrap and let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

In food processor, chop raisins. Remove to bowl and add walnuts, working in with hands until raisin pieces are separated and coated with nuts. Beat egg whites slightly, and add to raisin-nut mixture.

On floured surface, punch dough down and form into rectangle.

In small bowl, cream together softened butter and jam. Spread on top of dough. Pile raisin-nut mixture in line in center of dough. Lengthwise, leaving 1-inch border at each end. Fold one side of dough over filling, then fold other side of dough over top to form roll. Close ends by folding under and working together.

Place on prepared baking sheet, cover with plastic wrap and let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk, 30 to 45 minutes.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Remove plastic wrap and bake on middle shelf of oven for 20 to 25 minutes, or until bread sounds hollow when tapped lightly on bottom with fingertips.

Cool on wire rack.

STRAWBERRY JAM

4 cups fresh strawberries
½ cup water
1½ cups honey

Place berries and water into 8-quart pot and bring to boil, stirring often. Stir in honey. Boil until jam mounds up in spoon. Spoon hot jam into hot, sterilized ½-pint jars to within ⅛ inch of the top. Seal and process in hot water bath for 15 minutes.

KULICH

5¾ to 6¼ cups all-purpose flour
2 packages quick-rise yeast
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
1¼ cups buttermilk
½ cup water
½ cup butter or margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
⅔ cup raisins
⅔ cup chopped almonds

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

In large mixer bowl, combine 2½ cups flour, yeast, sugar and salt; mix well.

In saucepan, heat buttermilk, water and butter until very warm (120 to 130 degrees; butter does not need to melt). Add to flour mixture. Add vanilla and eggs. Blend at low speed until moistened; beat 3 minutes at medium speed. By hand, gradually stir in raisins, chopped almonds and enough remaining flour to make soft dough. Knead on floured surface until smooth and elastic, 5 to 8 minutes.

Divide dough into 3 parts; shape each third into smooth ball. Place in greased 1-pound coffee cans. Cover; let rise in warm place until doubled, about 30 minutes. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes until golden brown. If too dark, cover loosely with foil last 5 to 10 minutes of baking. Remove from cans; cool. Drizzle with powdered sugar glaze and garnish with candies, if desired.

Makes 3 loaves.

BABKA
Polish Easter Egg Bread

½ cup flour
¾ cup hot milk
1 cake yeast, crushed
1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon warm water (115 degrees)
2 large eggs
½ teaspoons salt
2 to 2¼ cups flour
2 tablespoons soft butter
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup raisins (optional)

Combine flour and milk; stir until smooth and lump free. Set aside to cool lightly.

Combine yeast, sugar and water and add to flour-/milk mixture; set aside to rise (1 hour) until doubled.

Beat egg yolks and salt until thick; add to risen yeast mixture.

Add flour, butter, sugar, vanilla and raisins; work in by hand until dough no longer sticks. Let rise in warm place until doubled. Punch down and place in greased 8-inch tube pan, let rise again (45 minutes) until almost doubled. Bake in 350 degrees oven for 30 minutes.

Frost top with lemon-flavored icing, allowing it to drop over sides.

Easter lilies provide fragrant blooms for many seasons

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

"Come live with me and be my love,
"And we will all the pleasures prove
"That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
"Or woods or steepy mountain yields.

"And I will make thee beds of roses,
"And a thousand fragrant posies,
"A cap of flowers and a kirtle
"Embroidered all with leaves of myrtle."

Christopher Marlowe
The Passionate Shepherd to His Love

Even in Elizabethan times, lovers and romantics knew the potent enticements of "saying it with flowers." It took a hard-headed nymph to reply with practical realism to the shepherd's rosy invitation.

With the Easter weekend coming up, many of us will be succumbing to the allure of gorgeous flowering plants beckoning from florist shop windows and garden center displays. As a loving gift either to ourselves or to another, a beautiful plant does add something special to the celebration of Easter.

The most traditional and popular of flowering gift plants at Easter is the Easter lily, much loved for its intensely fragrant, pure white trumpet flowers. For beauty and scent, the Easter lily can't be surpassed as a gift for this occasion.

And it can be kept for repeat performances of sweet-scented bloom. But first of all, to keep an Easter lily in bloom for as long as possible while it is in the house to be enjoyed, place it in as cool a spot as possible and out of direct, hot sunlight. And keep its soil well moistened.

Once the plant has finished blooming, cut off the spent flower heads only and keep the plant watered until you can move it outside. If you have a yard, you can sink the pot in a garden bed in hopes of more bloom in the fall so that you can bring the pot in once more to enjoy its beauty and scent at close quarters — or you can remove the plant from its pot and plant it outside in sun or part shade. Plant it in rich, well-drained soil and away from other lilies so that any virus present will not be transmitted.

If you live in an apartment or condominium, your lily may be set outside on a patio or balcony for the summer, again in hopes of repeat bloom in the fall. Its pot could well be set inside a larger, outer sleeve with dampened peat in between the container walls to keep the plant's roots cool.

It's a little difficult for an apartment gardener to keep a lily strictly as a houseplant but it's worth a try. Allow the plant to die down naturally in the fall. If it hasn't died back by mid-October, cut it down at soil level and repot it. Use fresh soil and a fairly deep pot about 6 inches wide. Set the bulb halfway in the pot and cover it with just 1 or 2 inches of soil.

Your potted lily will need at this point to be set in a cool, dark place, ideally between 45 and 50 degrees F, for a minimum of six weeks or until some top growth appears. Once the top growth begins to develop well, the potted lily may then gradually be brought into bright light and more warmth.

As with other potted bulbs, the degree of heat at this point will determine how fast the lily will bloom. But a temperature range of between 60 and 70 degrees F will produce the best flowers. Bulbs planted in October and brought into warmth in December should bloom in late winter or early spring if all goes well. Potted lilies in active growth should be fed every two to three weeks, and their soil should be kept moist.

Planted outdoors in the garden, Easter lilies eventually will revert to their normal midsummer blooming season along with most other fragrant trumpet lilies.

Easter spending reported down

New York Times News Service

A late Easter is usually good for business: Balmy weather helps retailers sell their spring merchandise. But this year's late Easter won't be enough to get overall consumer spending to bloom.

While Americans may be interested in buying bonnets, baseballs and bedspreads, they are not purchasing big-ticket items like cars or houses anywhere near the rate of a year ago, says Burton Zwick, senior economist at Kidder, Peabody & Co.

This spring, overall spending by debt-burdened consumers has slipped to a 2 percent real annual rate of growth, down from 4 percent in 1986.

"If this level is maintained, it will be the slowest year for spending since this recovery began in 1983," he said.

This is not necessarily bad news, says Zwick. Among other things, lower spending means less demand for imported goods — and that helps to narrow the nation's trade gap.

In fact, he said, getting trade back in balance may mean that "spending growth may have to slow to 1 percent beyond 1987."

Cause of wrestler's death still unknown

Mike Von Erich

DALLAS (AP) — An autopsy on the body of professional wrestler Mike Von Erich, found zipped inside a sleeping bag with no evidence of injury, failed to establish a cause of death, but officials say it appears to have been suicide.

The body was found Thursday in heavy underbrush near Lewisville Lake, where his abandoned car was found Wednesday night, said Denton County sheriff's Capt. Allen Lewis.

The body was discovered by a police dog sniffing Von Erich's trail.

"He was lying there very peaceful, like you would go out for an overnight, to get away from it all," said Justice of the Peace Hubert Cunningham, who declared Von Erich dead and ordered an autopsy.

The 23-year-old, 210-pound athlete, a member of the famed Von Erich wrestling dynasty founded by Fritz Von Erich, was last seen Saturday when he posted $3,500 bond on drug and alcohol charges.

He had been arrested in Argyle early that day and held briefly for investigation of driving while intoxicated, possession of less than two ounces of marijuana and possession of a controlled substance.

World Class Championship Wrestling referee David Manning said the family first became alarmed Saturday night when Von Erich failed to appear for a scheduled match. A family attorney reported him missing Monday.

Cunningham said pathologists determined that Von Erich, whose real name was Michael Brett Adkisson, died Sunday, probably in the afternoon. He said toxicological tests probably won't be completed until Tuesday.

Lewis said notes found in Von Erich's car and in his Roanoke apartment indicated he had contemplated suicide. Sheriff's deputies had found an unsigned note on the front seat of Von Erich's car, Lewis said.

"In its entirety, it said, 'Mom and Dad, I am in a better place. I'll be watching,' " he said.

Lewis said the Adkisson family had found a note from Von Erich at the wrestler's apartment Saturday night. "Basically, it was a handwritten note telling his brother, Chris, that he could have his scuba gear," he said.

As a 20-year-old, Von Erich was named rookie of the year by a national wrestling publication and was among the best-known wrestlers in the country.

"It's tragic because he's such a young boy," said Cunningham, who for years has known the Adkissons, who raised their family in the Denton County community of Lake Dallas before moving to Chandler, near Tyler.

Mike Von Erich suffered toxic shock syndrome in August 1985 after surgery on a separated shoulder and was in critical condition for several days.

Man who killed DEA agent faces life in prison

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A man convicted of killing a federal narcotics agent as they struggled over a gun during a drug bust will be sentenced next month, but prosecutors say the stiffest sentence possible is life in prison.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Wolfe says prosecutors did not seek the death penalty for Felipe Molina Uribe because federal statutes are "screwed up."

State law, however, allows the death penalty for such a crime, and assistant U.S. Attorney Christopher Milner said he would discuss the case with state prosecutors to determine whether it should be brought before a state jury.

A federal court jury deliberated 4½ hours Thursday before finding the 29-year-old Mexico City man guilty of first-degree murder in the death of William Ramos.

Ramos, a special agent for the Drug Enforcement Administration, was shot in the chest during a New Year's Eve drug bust in the parking lot of a South Texas grocery store.

The agent's 24-year-old widow, Thelma, sobbed when the verdict was returned and clutched their 22-month-old daughter.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela polled each juror before releasing the panel, and said he would sentence Molina next month.

Molina pleaded guilty to two drug charges before the trial began, and jurors also found him guilty of using a firearm in the commission of a violent crime.

The judge said he believed the proper sentence for the first-degree murder conviction was life in prison.

"The verdict speaks for itself," said Ken Miley, agent in charge of the DEA's McAllen office and Ramos' boss.

Defense attorney J.M. Ramirez said an appeal was being considered, while noting "the jury has spoken. There is no sense in second-guessing the jury verdict."

In their closing arguments Thursday, prosecutors said Ramos was killed by a "big-time dope dealer" while trying to keep drugs off the street.

"It was a simple, brutal, vicious, malicious murder of Agent William Ramos," Wolfe said.

Molina's court-appointed attorneys said he was a victim of "a simple conspiracy of silence" and suggested Ramos was the victim of an assassination by someone other than Molina.

"I'm grateful the jury saw through the most shabby and most underhanded attempt at distorting the facts that I've ever had occasion to witnesses," Wolfe said after the verdict was returned. "The defense in this case was in the minds of Joe Connors and J.M. Ramirez."

Ramirez contended jurors were being "flim-flammed" by government prosecutors who relied on DEA informants to identify Molina as the triggerman.

Ramos was shot in the chest as he and DEA informant Roberto Ortiz struggled over a gun with Molina, witnesses testified. The three were in Ramos' car.

Ramos, Ortiz and DEA informant Ernesto Rodriguez had gone to Junior's Supermarket in Las Milpas, where they had told Molina they would exchange cash for 300 pounds of marijuana, testimony showed.

"I can't tell you who killed Agent Ramos," said Ramirez. "Did he get hit from somebody he did not expect? I do not know. The physical evidence before you contradicts completely."

Would-be columnist cut from list

RICHARDSON (AP) — A woman who was a serious contender to replace advice columnist Ann Landers had some advice for herself Thursday.

"Life goes on," Shirley Reynolds said after learning that she was eliminated from the Chicago Sun-Times columnist competition. "It's not the end of the world. I'm still the same person I was before I applied."

Ms. Reynolds and another Texan, Anne Reeks of Fort Worth, had been selected from a pool of 11,000 applicants vying for the job, survived the first and second cuts. But when the Chicago paper narrowed its field of finalists from 22 to seven, the names of Reynolds and Reeks weren't on the list released Thursday.

El Paso shortstop Walt Pohle has mouth set just right as he takes a hot grounder at Angels Stadium Thursday night. El Paso ended Midland's three-game winning streak with a 7-6 victory. The Angels head for Wichita today for their first road trip.

Angels lose three-game halo, 7-6

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

El Paso's Diablos ended Midland's winning streak at three, 7-6, at Angels Stadium Wednesday night, but the Haloed Ones squeezed the last ounce of drama out of this one before surrendering.

Down 7-0 going into the home seventh, David Farmar hit a solo homer over the left field fence, a nice gesture, but it was only the second hit Midland had managed off starter Cam Walker and it seemed that the blow's sole function was to save the Angels the embarrassment of a shutout.

Edwin Marquez and Mitch Seoane opened the eighth with singles and Walker was gone. Jamie Brisco gave up a three-run homer to David Farmar, walked a batter and Stan Holmes reached on an error.

ON CAME strikeout lefthander John Miglio. Shortstop Walter Pohle's second error of the inning put Ty Van Burkleo on base and then Joe Redfield hit a two-run double, the first hit off Miglio in four appearances this year. Still no one out and runners on second and third of a 7-6 game.

Miglio called on a sinking fast ball to whiff Mark Doran and John Hotchkiss and Marquez' liner to right ended the threat. But there was more excitement to come.

With two out in the ninth, pinch hitter Doug Davis beat out a Baltimore chop to third and Miglio walked Holmes and pinch hitter Robbie Allen to load the bases. Manager Max Oliveras pulled out all the stops, pinch running Vinicio Cedeno for Davis and Brian Brady for Allen.

Miglio made it all academic by blazing a fast one by Redfield on a 3-2 count to send Midland to Wichita with a loss, but a creditable 5-5 record after a shaky opening series against the Pilots. And how many times in the last two years has Midland emerged from a series against El Paso with a 3-2 edge?

DESPITE the score, the difference was pitching. Miglio's gutty relief job and Walker's seven strong innings. After all, the former junior hockey player from Manitoba, who somehow wound up pitching for Western Kentucky, brought a 23.14 ERA into the game, yet managed to handcuff Midland on one hit until Farmar's homer to lead off the seventh.

"It was only my second game and I was concentrating on my mechanics, which were horrible the first game," Walker advised. "Tonight it was simply a case of throwing my forkball, I had no slider tonight, for strikes and their not hitting them."

As for Miglio, Manager Duffy Dyer is in something of a quandary. "He's a closer, but I've got four closers-.....Brisco, Stapleton and Diaz...so I've had to use them in long relief as well."

"Miglio is a fastball, slider pitcher and his fastball was sinking tonight."

LAVELL Freeman's solo homer to center in the first off Chris Collins, 0-1, was a blow from which Midland never completely recovered. Pohle hit a solo homer in the third. In the fourth Eric Hardgrove's RBI double and Frank Mattox' two-run single accounted for three runs.

However, an unearned run in the seventh proved the ultimate decider. Garrett Nago hit a popi fly single to right. Darryel Walters' singled to center and Nago went to third on the error in the outfield. Nago then scored on a double play grounder.

HALO HOOPS— Van Burkleo's consecutive game hitting streak reached eight, but Doug Jennings six-gamer, Stan Holmes' five-gamer, and Mark Doran's seven-gamer all bit the dust.....Redfield had a streak of sorts halted despite that double. In two previous games he had homered and tripled each night.....Ray Burris, who broke in with Midland off the campus of SW Oklahoma, in 1972, was with El Paso as a roving coach for Milwaukee. "I'm really not sure what my title is. But I got to Beloit from here."...Burris had such a good spring in 1973 that the Cubs took him to Chicago from Scottsdale-.....Midland opens a five-game series in Wichita, Kan., tonight, returning home Wednesday against San Antonio....

Cougs 'one hit' Lee, want more

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

■ San Angelo dims playoff hopes of Midland High Bulldogs. — 2C

When a baseball scorekeeper makes a call fans disagree with, he hears about it, and hears about it and hears about it.

Thursday, after the bottom of the first inning when Bobby Dunn announced over the PA system "For the Midland Lee Rebels, no runs on one hit, one error and one runner left on base," no one on either side of the park said a word.

A little more than two innings later, when Abilene Cooper pitcher David Tollison was still working on a one-hitter and time was rapidly running out, Abilene Reporter-News writer Brandon Berry commented, "You know, that call in the first could be trouble."

Sure enough, as the Cougars finished their half of the fifth inning with an 11-0 lead and Lee three outs from losing by the 10-run rule, Cooper fans started coming to the scorekeeper to ask about the call.

"What was the call on that guy in the first inning," said one Cooper fan.

"You gave him a hit? He makes that play all the time," said another.

Four batters later the game was over and Cooper had the 11-0, one-hit victory for a 19-2 overall and 8-0 District 4-5A record.

The play in question came in the bottom of the first inning when Lee leadoff hitter Robin Pyle hit a high chopper down the third base line. Danny Whitford came charging in and fielded the ball but had to make a quick throw to first. It was wide. Pyle was safe on a hit and advanced to second on the errant throw.

MEANWHILE, FOR Cooper there were no problems in determining hit from error. Their barrage of hits started in the first inning, 15 of them, and kept the Lee defense off balance the entire game.

Five Cougars collected multiple hits in the game, Jay Estes and Scott Malone, 3-for-3; Jason Marshall 3-for-4; Tollison and Whitford, 2-for-3. It helped make up for what Cooper coach Andy Malone thought was an average performance.

"Fifteen hits, I'll take that," said Malone. "We struggled today, weren't very sharp but all we did was go out and win 11-0."

And, despite the score, it was defense and pitching that bothered Malone. He didn't think Tollison really had his stuff and three errors (two by Whitford) are more than Cooper has made in district play this year.

"The thing about Tollison's fastball is it moves in on the right-handed hitter and makes it tough," said Malone. "If he had a curve ball he'd be dangerous. He does have a curve ball, but he's struggled with it the last two games."

Midland Lee coach Ernie Johnson made the same assessment of Tollison's pitching.

"He really didn't have control of his pitches, especially his curve ball," said Johnson. "His fastball was up and down and all around. A good hitting team is going to get to him. He needs better control. Between Tollison and the other kid who pitched against us (Jason Satre, a 6-0 no-hitter in the first half of the season), the other kid has so much better control and he's only a junior."

Johnson is still an admirer of Tollison's ability, an ability that has already earned him a scholarship at the University of Texas, but not as a pitcher.

"The thing about Tollison is that he's such a competitor," said Johnson. "The last time we played, he caught one hit to the hole (by Danny Guerra) that anyone else would have sat back on. But, he came up and caught it."

And, about the hitting off losing pithcer Nicky Sanchez, 2-4, Johnson said, "They're real aggressive up there. They don't just hit the strikes, they hit everything thrown."

WITH THE victory, Cooper clinches no worse than a tie for second place, considering the possibility of four straight losses while Midland High, 5-4, would have to win its final three games. Odessa Permian, 6-2, is the only team that can keep Cooper for the 4-5A title.

The loss drops Lee to 4-5 on the year as the Rebels go into a week-long break from play, returning Saturday at Permian. Cooper and Permian meet Tuesday in Abilene.

4-5A thinclads race in Abilene Saturday

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The following is an event-by-event preview of the District 4-5A boys track meet scheduled for Saturday at Abilene Christian University:

Long Jump: This is one of 4-5A's unexact sicences. Lee's Derrick Roberts and OHS' Tracy Blaylock have both jumped 22-0¾ while San Angelo's Brett Carpenter stands at 22-0¼. All have been up and down, which even leaves the door open for Lee's Waymon Goodley, Abilene's Junior Bell and OHS' Lindsey Garnett.

High Jump: Abilene's Bob Walker and Permian's James Brown have gone 6-6 in another lackluster event. In the wings for a surprise are MHS' David Lujan, Abilene's Dell Anderson, Permian's Eddie Hubbard and OHS' Joel Dewbre.

Pole Vault: This could be a fairy tale story for Lee sophomore Joel Van Cott, the only vaulter improving late in the season. Cooper's Cary Blankenship and Van Cott have both gone 13-0, but Van Cott's came last week. Still, some consider Lance Sloniger of OHS as the favorite.

Shot Put: San Angelo's Antheny Pape (56-10¼) is on a roll while teammate Greg Armstrong should finish second. If any surprises develop, it will come from either Cooper's James Hunter or Lee's John Bradley.

Discus: Cooper's Hunter and San Angelo's Armstrong in a duel for the top two spots. San Angelo's Darrell Abbe and Abilene's Ricky Williams the best of the rest.

3200: Lee's Mike Garza (9:55.20) has the best time, but won't run this event Saturday. That leaves the possibility of a Permian 1-2 sweep with Hershel McGaha and Brad Hawkins. Defending champion Rodney Clark will have to pull another major upset if he is to gain another Region I berth.

400 Relay: Permian with a state ranked 41.22 should win it, but it could be a battle for second. Lee normally gives Permian a run for its money, but there are injury problems. That leaves the second place berth open for just about any team.

800: Garza's 1:55.24 is a state ranked time and should win a repeat championship easily with Abilene's Tim Griffin and San Angelo's Garren Hill in pursuit of second.

110 Hurdles: If anyone besides Lee's Jimmy Fennell wins this race, it would be an upset, but Permian's Shawn Crow, San Angelo's Doug Bonds and MHS' John St. Germain have a shot at second.

100: Permian's Patrick Wilson has a state ranked 10.3 and is favored over defending champion Anthony Adkison of MHS. Both should advance to the Region I meet again.

Lee, MHS gain Region I berths

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

No one is sure just how the girls District 4-5A golf chase turned into a rout.

But one sure thing is that champion Midland Lee and runner-up Midland High were the class of this field, and they proved it again Thursday at Hogan Park in the final stop of the district tournament with the two lowest team rounds of the year.

Lee's 363 in the final round earned the Lady Rebels a 63 stroke edge over the Lady Bulldogs for the title. But MHS was doing a little routing of their own, building a 30-stroke bulge over third-place San Angelo with a fine round of 378. Both Tall City teams will make the trip to Lubbock for the Region I tournament at Elm Grove Golf Course on May 1-2.

"When the season started, we just felt like if we could contend the first few weeks we would have a chance," said Rebel coach Shirley Stephenson. "But three of the courses have been very hard and we've had tough conditions. We haven't been playing great, just better than anybody else."

For first-year MHS coach Greg Manship, a playoff berth was little more than a pipe dream in early March.

"I thought we might have a shot, but I didn't know that we would do it," Manship said. "But the girls competed well, they did what they had to do. This was our best round of the year and going into regionals, it helps to finish on a good note."

The Hogan Park course played as easy as it could for the final round as temperatures inched over 90 and the usually treacherous winds quieted long enough for a pair of scores in the 70s.

Abilene Cooper's Michelle Hapack carded the lowest score, a five-over par 77, to runaway with her third straight medalist's crown. Chrissie Wittenburg's 81 was good enough to hang on to second place and earn the second individual regional berth.

Lee's Jane Pepperone also dipped into the 70s with a 79 to take third, the first time she has broken the 80 mark this year after a second place individual finish last season.

"Jane started late for us this year, but that's where she should be nearly every week," Stephenson said. "This is a good time for her to get it back with us getting ready to go to regionals."

Midland Lee's Jane Pepperone ...chipping toward a 79

Joining Pepperone in the individual standings were teammate Jamie Winborne, fifth with a 91 Thursday, and a trio of MHS players. The top 10 finishers earned All District honors.

Joanna Carrillo held onto sixth place overall despite a 94, while Lori Simon's 92 was good for eighth and Kim Carson's 94 snuck her into the 10th spot.

Carrillo is in her first year at MHS after moving from Alpine, but she is not new to golf success. Last season the Bucks went all the way to the Class 3A state finals where they took third, but the pressure of helping earn MHS a playoff spot even got her nervous.

"I felt nervous when we first got out there, but my putting helped relax me," Carrillo said. "I like the competition we play at Midland High a lot more than at Alpine. We'll be nervous at regionals, but I've been there before so I shouldn't be too bad."

Bulldog playoff hopes put on hold by 'Cats

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — A sixth inning rally by San Angelo put a severe crimp in Midland High's playoff plans Thursday as the Bobcats fought back for a 5-3 victory.

After three singles, a double, walk, wild pitch and an error, San Angelo's Bruce Andrews singled up the middle to drive home the fifth and final San Angelo run of the inning off starter Joe Rendon and reliever Doug Hayes.

The Bulldogs started the scoring in the top of the fourth inning when David Malone collected Midland's first hit off Chris Lowry. Tony Perez followed with a bloop single to right.

After Eric Boyt grounded Perez into a force at second and then stole the base, Craig Crawford hitter a grounder that was booted by first baseman Peter Garcia to plate Malone. Boyt came home on Gonzalo Almager's single to right.

In the sixth, Boyt tripled and, one out later, scored when Andrews kicked Almager's grounder at third base.

Course record paves Hayes' way

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Mark Hayes set a course record on the way to a 7-under-par 64 that staked him to a 2-stroke lead after Thursday's first round of the $650,000 Heritage Classic.

Hayes, 37, birdied the first three holes and went on to a 6-under-par 30 over the front nine, a record for the difficult little Hilton Head Golf Links. The score broke the course record of 31 set by Jack Nicklaus in 1975 and equalled several times since.

"That's probably the best I've played in five or six years," said Hayes, whose last official PGA Tour victory came 10 years ago. "Everything was working together."

Hayes scattered eight birdies across his card, used only 24 strokes on the tiny greens — and said he could have played better.

"My putting was kind of off and on. I missed two or three putts I should have made," said Hayes, who was forced to withdraw from the Greater Greensboro Open two weeks ago due to a rib cage injury.

At his home in Oklahoma, a doctor told him he "had a rib out of place," Hayes said. "He popped it right back in, and I was hitting balls an hour later."

Although the weather was blustery, with gusty winds and occasional brief showers, scoring was exceptionally low on the course that winds through woods and marshes down to the lighthouse behind the 18th green.

Five players — former Heritage winner Bernhard Langer of West Germany, veteran Howard Twitty, Scott Hoch, John Cook and Mark Calcavecchia — were tied for second at 66.

South African David Frost and Steve Jones, who got into the invitational field only after Tony Sills withdrew, were next at 67.

Defending champion Fuzzy Zoeller was in a group at 68, 3 under par. Corey Pavin, the only two-time winner on the Tour this season, and U.S. Open champ Ray Floyd were another shot back at 69.

Larry Mize, the new Masters champion, struggled to a 5-over-par 76 in his first effort since beating Greg Norman in a playoff at Augusta, Ga., last weekend.

Bulls' Jordan soars over 3,000 points for NBA season

Associated Press

Michael Jordan is keeping Wilt Chamberlain company in the NBA record book.

The third-year Chicago guard scored 61 points Thursday night in a 117-114 loss to the Atlanta Hawks to become the second player to ever surpass the 3,000-point mark in a season. Chamberlain was the other, doing it three times, the last in 1963.

Jordan also became the second player to ever score at least 50 points in three consecutive games, having scored 53 against Indiana on Sunday and 50 in Milwaukee the next night. Chamberlain was the other, doing it five consecutive times in 1961.

Jordan also scored 23 consecutive points for the Bulls in the game, including the final 17 of the first half, breaking the record of 18. Chamberlain wasn't the holder of that mark, Jordan was, doing it earlier in the season.

"I know records are meant to be broken but I also know that I am the only guard in the history of basketball to have scored this many points," Jordan said. "I'm a realist because I'll know there will never be another scorer like Chamberlain. I may reach 70 points someday, but doing it consistently like he did is out of the question.

"But these records and marks meant nothing," Jordan said. "I'd rather have had the win because it would have clinched the seventh playoff spot in the Eastern Conference."

The 61 points matched Jordan's regular-season best.

In other NBA games Thursday night, the Los Angeles Lakers beat Utah 110-97; Seattle beat the Los Angeles Clippers 118-87, and Sacramento beat Denver 123-117.

TRACK

That leaves Abilene's Eric Petty and San Angelo's Charles Kelly dreaming.

400: MHS' Tyrone Oliver (48.70) is a solid favorite, but the battle for the other Region I berth is wide open. Lee sophomore Anthony Keys has a leg injury, but will run, and that might open the door for someone like Brett Carpenter of San Angelo. Second place is a real mystery.

300 Hurdles: This could be a war. San Angelo's Bronza Moore, MHS' St. Germain, San Angelo's Doug Bonds and Abilene's Jon Davis all have a shot at winning if best times are turned in. And there are even a couple of dark horses in Lee's Marcus Strambler, Lee's Troy Oliver and Permian's Crow.

200: Until last weekend, Permian's Wilson (21.50) was an uncontested favorite, but he was beaten by teammate Marcus Dixon at the Tall City Relays. San Angelo's Charles Kelly, injured of late, is the unknown force in this race.

1600: Garza again has the best time of 4:30.21 and is the defending champion. Permian's McGaha and Abilene's Griffin are the best of the rest.

1600 Relay: Permian (3:21.12) is again favored, but Lee (3:21.99) could challenge if the injury bugs are all worked out. However, Lee's Garza will run one leg, 15 minutes after the running the 1600.

Team Championship: San Angelo scores heavily and early in the field events, leaving the rest of the field in a catch-up role. The Bobcats have to be considered a slight favorite and Permian is poised to take advantage of any San Angelo mistakes. Top dark horse is the Kiddie Korps of Lee and Abilene High might be strong enough to contend if some really wild things happen.

Time Schedule: Meet begins Saturday at 11 a.m. with field event finals. Running prelims will be held at 1:30 p.m. The 3200 finals will be held at 3:30 p.m. and the remainder fo the running finals at 6:30 p.m.

Strange Happenings: Whenever the 4-5A meet is held at ACU, strange things seem to happen. A couple of years ago, a heavy rain fell just prior to the finals, causing a two-hour delay. The time before that, the 100 meters was run on the dark side of the track, and many still claim that the wrong winner was picked.

NTSU to meet Longhorns

AUSTIN (AP) — North Texas State will fill the vacant spot in Texas' 1988 football schedule created by the decision of Southern Methodist to not field a team.

The University of Texas men's athletics council approved a contract Wednesday that will guarantee North Texas $175,000 to play at Memorial Stadium in Austin on Oct. 22, 1988.

The council also approved a home-and-home football series with Auburn. Texas will visit Auburn on Sept. 5 this season, with the War Eagles coming to Austin on Sept. 21, 1991.

In other action Wednesday, the council:

— Approved the hiring of Curt Fludd as academic counselor. Fludd comes to Texas after eight years at Georgia, and replaces Joe Elvens.

— Forwarded a proposed budget of $8.9 million for 1987-88 to university president William Cunningham for his approval. The budget represents a $420,642, or 4.9 percent increase over 1986-87.

Mets continue homer streak while Phils continue skid

Associated Press

The New York Mets and Darryl Strawberry are keeping the home runs coming.

The Mets continued their streak of at least one home run in each game this season as Strawberry's fifth of the season led a 9-3 assualt over the Philadelphia Phillies on Thursday night.

"I'm not overswinging or overstriding and I'm waiting for my pitch," said Strawberry, who took over the league with four runs batted in for a total of 15. "I'm just swinging well. I've developed good work habits and good things are happening."

What happened to the Phillies was another poor start that has meant a 1-8 record to open the season.

The Mets took a 4-0 lead with the help of two bases-loaded walks by Joe Cowley, 0-2, who has an earned run average of 48.60 in his two starts. Strawberry's two-run homer came in the second inning off reliever Tom Hume, and it made the score 7-0.

"I'm here to have fun," Strawberry said. "I'm trying to live up to what I can do, not the dreams of others and what they think I should do."

New York's Rick Aguilera went eight innings for the victory, his first of the season, allowing nine hits with eight strikeouts. Terry Leach pitched the ninth.

The Mets team record for consecutive games with a home run at the start of the season is 10, set in 1970 and matched in 1975. The major-league record is 13 by the 1954 Chicago Cubs.

The victory enabled the Mets to sweep a three-game series from the Phillies for the first time since 1972, when they took four-and three-game sets.

Expos 4, Cardinals 3

Randy St. Claire struck out pinch-hitter Jack Clark with two runners on to end the game and earn the Expos' first save of the season.

St. Louis led 2-0 before the Expos rallied for four runs, three a sixth-inning rally that was capped by Tom Foletwo-run double. Ozzie Smith's eighth-inning single brought the Cardinals within one and brought on St. Claire, who got the final two outs in the inning.

Pirates 6, Cubs 0

Bob Kipper threw a four-hitter for his first complete game and shutout in the major leagues. The 22-year-old left-hander had a career-high eight strikeouts and walked one.

Lavalliere and Andy Van Slyke, both of whom the Pirates obtained on April 1 in a trade with St. Louis for catcher Tony Pena, had three hits and two runs batted in each.

Padres 3, Dodgers 2

Tony Gwynn had the first five-hit game of his career and scored the winning run in the 10th inning as the Padres won for just the second time in 10 games.

Gwynn became the first San Diego player to get five hits in a game since Kevin McReynolds did it on Sept. 4, 1984.

Lance McCullers, 1-0, the fourth Padres pitcher, pitched a scoreless 10th inning for the victory.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Blue Jays 4, Red Sox 2

Jimmy Key is having the kind of start to 1987 that Roger Clemens enjoyed a year ago.

Conversely, Clemens is struggling the way Key did at the beginning of 1986.

"All I know is that it feels a lot better to be 3-0 instead of 0-3," Key said Thursday night after tossing a two-hitter over six innings in the Toronto Blue Jays' 4-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Mariners 6, Athletics 5

An errant throw by Oakland second baseman Tony Phillips allowed the winning run to cross the plate.

Seattle starter Mike Trujillo, 1-0, pitched seven innings, allowing five runs on six hits. Edwin Nunez pitched the final two innings for his second save.

Carney Lansford extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a three-run homer in the third.

Maple Leafs, Quebec gain advancement

Associated Press

The National Hockey League's second season has provided two fourth-place teams with a second life.

From the second week of October through early April, the league's 21 teams jockey for playoff position, eventually eliminating five teams from the Stanley Cup derby, which could last until June.

Toronto, fourth in the Norris Division, and Quebec, fourth in the Adams, still find themselves in the running for the NHL championship.

The Maple Leafs, who made the playoffs the last weekend of the season, defeated St. Louis 4-0 Thursday night as goalie Ken Wregget made 19 saves in ousting the Norris Divampions.

Quebec, had to hold off last-place Buffalo in the Adams Division to qualify for the playoffs, and then lost the first two games of the division semifinal series to first-place Hartford before winning four straight including Thursday's 5-4 overtime victory on Peter Stastny's goal at 6:05.

In other playoff action Thursday night, Philadelphia advanced to the Patrick Division finals with a 5-0 victory over the New York Rangers to take the series 4-2. The Flyers will play the winner of the Washington-New York Islander series, tied 3-3 after the Islanders' 5-4 victory. Winnipeg beat Calgary 6-1 to advance to the Smythe Division finals against Edmonton.

At Toronto, Wregget held St. Louis to two goals over the final three games of the series — all Toronto wins. But he said his teammates deserved credit for his strong showing.

"I got great support from my teammates," Wregget said. "They hardly gave them a first shot and there were no second shots at all. Theg is that we got a win and we don't have to go back to St. Louis. The shutout is just a bonus."

Seldom-used wing Brad Smith scored the only goal that Wregget would need at 2:55 of the first period. He took a pass from Wendel Clark at center ice, went in alone and beat Greg Millen.

Blues Coach Jacques Martin said Wregget made the difference.

"We gave it all we had, but you have to give a lot of credit to the Maple Leafs," he said. "Ken Wregget was superb, we couldn't get any goals by him. He was a big part of this series.

The Maple Leafs, 32-42-6 during the regular season, meet the Detroit Red Wings in the division finals, beginning Tuesday night in Detroit.

Cocaine trade yields Wall Street arrests

By VIRGINIA BYRNE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some Wall Street brokers arrested in an undercover investigation used cocaine "as a regular method of exchange," dispensing it to employees and customers and trading it for stock tips, authorities said.

"Cocaine became an integral part of the personal and professional lives of these people," Robert Stutman, special agent in chargeh federal Drug Enforcement Administration in New York City, said after the arrests Thursday of 19 people, including at least 16 financial workers and two alleged drug suppliers.

"We don't believe this case is an aberration," he said.

Federal authorities described a cocaine subculture in which the drug was snorted in bathrooms, stairways and boardrooms on Wall Street and purchases were made in neighborhood bars.

Those arrested included Wayne D. Robbins, a senior partner in the firm of Brooks, Weinger, Robbins & Leeds Inc.

Authorities also filed suit to seize assets of the firm, which has offices in nine cities. U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani told a news conference he believed it was the first time the government tried to seize part of a brokerage's assets because of a narcotics violation.

"Cocaine was used as a regular method of exchange, allegedly in the business of this firm," Giuliani said.

But its lawyer, Bert Gusrae, said the principals of the firm have "no knowledge of any widespread drug distribution or drug network inside the firm."

According to Giuliani, a Brooks broker once sent a free sample of heroin via the firm's messenger service, information on stocks was traded for cocaine, a person was hired because he was a trusted source of the drug, and accounts were steered to brokers who returned the favors with cocaine.

He said that on one occasion, "a principal of a company whose stock Brooks was about to offer to the public was given cocaine in exchange for $10,000 worth of the stock."

The prosecutor said Brooks has been involved for some time in manipulating the issues of 'penny stocks' — shares in new companies that trade at a very low price.

Further charges and arrests are expected, he said.

Wall Street workers were led from offices in chains Thursday as drug enforcement agents arrested 19 financial employees — including on senior partner of a brokerage house.

Ten of those arrested were brokers and five were professionals in the field, said Robert Strang, a DEA spokesman. One other person may have been a broker, he said.

In addition to the Brooks firm, Stutman said, those arrested worked for Prudential-Bache, The New York Depository Trust, Advest Corp. and Allied Capital, all financial institutions with offices in the Wall Street area.

"This is a classic case of how drugs affect every American in this country," Stutman said. "Every American is touched by Wall Street."

The DEA said the arrests stemmed from a three-year investigation that included an undercover agent working at Brooks since mid-March as a broker's assistant.

Charles Rose, an assistant U.S. attorney in Brooklyn, said his office had participated in initial parts of the investigation of five brokers, three of whom earned than $1 million a year. But Rose said his office declined to prosecute the brokers because they were at worst drug users and not traffickers.

"We went on to other cases which we consider more significant than a bunch of yuppies," Rose said.

City police and DEA agents also announced Thursday that a separate drug sweep had netted 114 street-level drug buyers and sellers in the Wall Street area since April 1. Two stockbrokers were among those arrested in "Operation Buy and Cry," according to Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward.

Coastal files to reorganize TransAmerican Natural Gas

HOUSTON (AP) — Coastal Oil and Gas Corp. has filed a proposed bankruptcy reorganization plan for TransAmerican Natural Gas Corp., under which Coastal would manage some of TransAmerican's assets, officials say.

TransAmerican is operating under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, and has filed its own reogranization plan with the bankruptcy court.

TransAmerican officials have in the past accused The Coastal Corp. the parent of Coastal Oil and Gas, of attempting a hostile takeover of the company.

Officials of Coastal Oil and Gas filed the proposed reorganization plan and a disclosure statement Wednesday night. TransAmerican on Thursday issued a statement saying it would not comment about Coastal's plan until officials studied it.

Coastal officials claim its plan projects a faster payback to TransAmerican creditors with a guaranteed annual stream of money, up-front cash advances and a drilling program to be funded by Coastal.

The plan was to be reviewed by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Manuel D. Leal in Houston, who will also review TransAmerican's plan and disclosure statement, attorneys said.

After a vote by creditors, Leal can confirm or reject either plan, Coastal officials said.

In the past, Coastal officials had said they planned to file their own reorganization proposal for TransAmerican because Coastal is an interested party and a creditor of TransAmerican.

According to Coastal, TransAmerican owes $623,000 to Coastal subsidiaries.

Earlier this month, TransAmerican filed a $300 million federal lawsuit accusing Coastal and its chairman Oscar S. Wyatt Jr. of trying to curtail natural gas production in South Texas to fix prices.

Texas' failed bank count hits 20

By The Associated Press

Buyers have been found for the two latest Texas banks that collapsed in a rising tide of financial failures, federal regulators say.

Poor management and bad loans led to the failure of First Bank of Saginaw, closed Thursday by Texas Banking Commissioner Kenneth Littlefield, said Julie Amberson, spokeswoman for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The bank north of Fort Worth was to reopen today as a branch of Southwest Bank of Fort Worth, Ms. Amberson said.

In Houston, deposits of First Commercial Bank of Texas, N.A., were assumed by OMNIBANC North Belt, N.A., of Houston, the FDIC said.

The two insolvencies bring to 20 the number of banks that have failed in Texas this year and 62 nationally. A record 26 banks failed in Texas last year.

First Bank of Saginaw had assets of $30.7 million. Southwest Bank will assume about $30 million in 6,400 accounts and will pay the FDIC $752,000 to purchase the bank.

Littlefield said the failure stemmed from losses on loans to a variety of commercial and real estate borrowers outside the bank's market area.

The losses were caused by liberal lending practices and the board of directors' inattention to the lending function, said Littlefield, adding the board's attempts to recapitalize the bank were unsuccessful.

1987 bank failures around the state

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Banks take control of bankrupt Kendavis

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The bankrupt Kendavis Holding Co. and one of its main subsidiaries has been taken over by management installed by the company's 21 creditor banks.

Brothers T. Cullen Davis, 52, and Kenneth W. Davis Jr., 61, remain in control of some 50 other subsidiaries that account for most of the energy-related conglomerate's revenues, their lawyer says.

Lawyer John Flowers told the Dallas Times Herald Thursday's events could be reversed by a federal appeals court.

"It's a very complex situation," said Joseph Freeman, the consultant installed at the holding company by creditors Thursday.

"At the moment ... I am chairman of the board of the holding company and the Davises remain in their offices as officers and directors of the various subsidiaries."

New Braunfels draws WalMart warehouse

BENTONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A regional distribution center for Wal-Mart Stores with an eventual payroll of 650 is to be built at New Braunfels, Texas, the company announced Thursday.

The center, to be built on 125 acres, is to initially hire 300 workers and increase its payroll to 650 when the 984,000 square foot warehouse and a 12,300 square foot truck maintenance facility are completed, Wal-Mart said in a news release.

The center will supply 170 Wal-Mart stores in central and southern Texas, said Bill Fields, Wal-Mart senior vice president for distribution and transportation. "The center's location shows Wal-Mart's continuing dedication to Texas."

Adobe Resources announces new officers

NEW YORK (SWN) — Stanley R. Rawn Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Adobe Resources Corporation announced that Russell L. Allen has joined the company as senior vice president and chief financial officer. Allen previously served as the chief financial officer for Weeks Petroleum Limited and chief accounting officer for Damson Oil Corporation. He is a C.P.A. and previously was associated with Deloitte Haskins & Sells.

Rawn also announced that Curtis A. Bedrich, a vice president of the company, has been promoted to the additional position of chief accounting officer. Both appointments were effective April 1.

Housing starts plummet 3.2 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction fell 3.2 percent in March, the biggest decline in six months, the government reported Thursday, as sharp increases in mortgage rates in recent weeks continued to send shivers through the housing industry.

The Commerce Department said new homes and apartments were being constructed at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.77 million units in March, down from a revised February rate of 1.83 million units.

It was the first decline in housing starts since November and the biggest setback since a 6.2 percent drop last September.

In other economic news Thursday, the government reported that American factories, mines and utilities operated at just 79.2 percent of capacity in March, down 0.5 percentage point from the February level.

Analysts said the dip in housing starts and the big slide in factory operating levels were further indications that the economy weakened in March.

In a third report, the government said business inventories edged up in February by 0.2 percent, following a huge 1 percent rise in January. Analysts believe the rise in inventories will boost economic growth in the January-March quarter but cut into activity in the spring quarter.

Housing construction had risen a healthy 10.6 percent in December and then held steady with smaller gains of 0.2 percent in January and 0.9 percent in February as falling mortgage rates raised expectations for another strong year for builders.

However, mortgage rates, after declining for most of a year, jumped sharply in the past two weeks, carried higher by fears in the financial markets over rising inflation and the falling dollar.

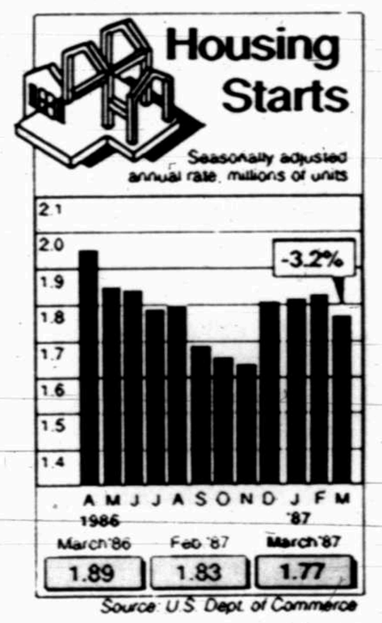

Analysts said the downturn in housing starts in March, which occurred before interest rates began to rise, could deepen if mortgage rates don't moderate.

"Higher rates could slam the brakes on housing starts in the months ahead," said Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association. "Higher interest rates mean that fewer people will be able to afford housing and we will end up with a weaker year than we had hoped for."

The upward spurt in rates may actually act to spur sales in the early spring as people who had been waiting for rates to go lower realize they had better buy quickly before rates rise even further, analysts said.

But for the whole year, Lasko said it was now likely that housing construction will total only 1.6 million to 1.65 million units, down as much as 12 percent from last year's total.

The nationwide average for fixed-rate loans, which had dropped to a nine-year low of 9.07 percent in late March, had climbed to 9.4 percent last week, according to a survey by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

Source: U.S. Dept. of Commerce

"The outlook for the balance of the year in housing is not as rosy because of the turmoil in the financial markets," said David Seiders, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders. "There is so much skittishness in the markets related to what the dollar is doing and what that will mean for inflation and interest rates."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Total return, tax basis may not provide equal yield

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. This is in response to the column in which a reader told you he had invested $10,000 in a mutual fund and, over two years, received $2,442.10 in dividends and capital gains distributions, which he reinvested to buy more fund shares. He said that made his cost $12,442.10. You agreed.

He also said, based on the current price of the fund's share, his investment is worth $12,762.71 and calculated he had a gain of only $320.61. Again, you agreed, called that mutual fund a "clunker" and advised him to redeem his shares.

I disagree. His $10,000 investment increased $2,762.71 in two years. That's 27.62 percent, an average of 13.81 percent a year. Is that a clunker? If so, there are lots of clunkers in the market.

A. OK, I'll admit to being overly harsh on that mutual fund. But it must be pointed out that, by redeeming his shares, that investor will have a taxable gain of just $320.61.

That's because reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions increase the investor's "basis" — cost for tax purposes. His basis is $12,442.10 — the $10,000 he originally invested plus the $2,442.10 he reinvested. The difference between that $12,442.10 basis and the $12,762.71 he would receive by redeeming would result in a $320.61 taxable profit.

You, of course, are figuring that fund's performance based on its "total return" — the gain in value of the investment, taking into account the reinvestment of dividends and capital gains distributions.

On that basis, the fund did provide the investor with a total two-year return of 27.62 percent, for a 13.81 percent annual average. That's not bad, at all. Compared to many other investments, it's quite good. However, it is not as good as many other mutual funds.

Statistics from Lipper Analytical Services, Inc., which tracks the mutual fund performance, show that average total return on mutual funds was 28.95 percent in 1985 and 15.07 percent in 1986.

Q. As a broker, I collect commissions when I sell shares of load mutual funds. Why does the press continually misrepresent the facts by always telling readers they can get "something for nothing" with no-load mutual funds?

A. Even though I read a lot of newspapers, I can't answer for the entire "press." But I never wrote — and I never read — what you claim we are always telling people.

In this column and elsewhere it has been explained that investors can avoid paying commissions by buying shares of no-load mutual funds. That's a financial fact of life the public is entitled to know about, although you evidently feel otherwise.

Your lament brings to mind two old one-liners: "Why is everybody always pickin' on me?" and "Even paranoiacs have enemies."

Q. I work for a broker-dealer selling load mutual funds. In the three years I have been in this business, I have never seen a no-load fund with performance as good as a load fund. Have you?

A. I've seen lots, in the 30 years since I was first assigned to cover mutual funds.

In Lipper Analytical Services' tabulation of the 50 best performing mutual funds for 1986, 22 were no-load, five were low-load with commissions of no more than 4.5 percent and 23 were full load.

A study of 542 equity mutual funds conducted by Morningstar, Inc., and published in the Dec. 1, 1986, edition of The Wall Street Journal, shows that, on average, no-load funds had slight performance edges over load funds in the one-, three-, five- and 10-year periods ended Sept. 30, 1986.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Phillips records 233 barrel strike

From Staff Reports

PHILLIPS PETROLEUM CO. has recorded a Delaware discovery in Eddy County, N.M., surrounded by production in the Cabin Lake field.

On potential test, the No. 2 James "A" flowed 233 barrels of 30.9 gravity crude, 152 Mcfd and two barrels of water on a one-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 202 psi. Production is from perforations 5,625 to 5,940 ft., which had been acidized with 6,100 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL acid and fractured with 22,000 gallons of gel and 34,000 lbs. 10/20 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 651:1.

Permitted as a 6,100 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,000 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 5,954 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,186 ft., include the Rustler at 194 ft., Salado at 550, Bell Canyon at 3,690, Cherry Canyon at 4,432, Manzanita at 4,681, and the Brushy Canyon at 5,780 ft. Pay was topped at 5,625 ft.

Alliance, banks agree on debt elimination

LIBERTY, Texas (SWN) — Alliance Well Service, Inc. announced that it had reached agreement in principle on most major business points with its lending banks pursuant to which all of the company's $29,271,000 in outstanding bank debt and all related unpaid interest ($6,866,000 through March 31, 1986) would be eliminated.

Pursuant to the agreement in principle, the company has proposed to issue to the banks shares of its authorized but previously unissued common stock and has proposed not to challenge the banks' foreclosure on the company's 119 well service rigs. Concurrently, the company will lease from the banks, for a monthly rental fee equal to 10 percent of operating profit, 25 of the rigs selected by the company. In addition, the banks will grant the company the option to purchase the 25 rigs at their fair market value exercisable at any time during the two year lease term.

Texas Eastern net income shows improvement

HOUSTON (SWN) — Texas Eastern Corp.'s net income for the quarter ended March 31, 1987 was $52.5 million, or $0.99 per common share, up from first quarter 1986 income of $41.6 million, or $0.78 per common share. Net income for the first quarter 1986 has been restated to reflect the change in 1986 from the full cost method of accounting for oil and gas exploration and production activities to the successful efforts method.

Net income for the first quarter 1987 benefitted by $0.23 per share from a number of non-operating actions. During the first quarter, the company completed sales of domestic oil and gas properties, two petroleum services subsidiaries and subsidiary Halcon SD's catalyst manufacturing facilities and licensing businesses, as well as the sale to the public of a portion of Petrolane Partners, L.P.

Loch Harris Energy acquires Loch Exploration

Sun reports Wyoming strike

DALLAS (SWN) — Sun Exploration and Production Co., managing general partner for Sun Energy Partners, has annouced the discovery of a Wind River basin oil well that flowed oil and gas.

The Sun Ranch Federal No. 1, located in Section 15, T33N-R86W, Natrona County, Wymoming, flowed at a daily rate of 1,048 barrels of 33.6 API gravity oil and 976,000 cubic feet of natural gas through a 25/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 673 pounds per square inch. Production is from several perforations in the muddy sandstone formation over a gross interval of 10,225 to 10,286 feet.

Sun, the operator, has a 50 percent interest in the discovery well. Woods Petroleum Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of Sunshine Mining Company, has a 25 percent interest; and Columbia Gas Development Corporation, a wholly owned affiliate of the Columbia Gas System, Inc., also has a 25 percent interest.

Sun plans to seek permits for three offset locations with 80-acre spacing in the near future. The Sun Ranch Federal No. 1 is approximately 35 miles west of Casper.

House finishes work on spending plan

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House budget writers finished their work early Thursday morning on a spending plan that Speaker Gib Lewis said would require $2.4 billion in new taxes.

The proposed House budget, yet to be voted on by Appropriations Committee members, is about $600 million less than the Senate-approved plan but billions more than Gov. Bill Clements said he will allow.

After budget staffers put the complete bill together next week, committee members will vote to either send the bill to the full House with the recommendation that it pass or with no recommendation at all. Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said he expects the committee to easily approve its budget, which members worked on until 3:30 a.m. Thursday morning.

"It's not what I wanted, it's not what everyone on the committee wanted, but it's got enough in it to make all 29 (Appropriations Committee members) go along with it," Rudd said. Human services and executive agencies, he said, took the biggest hits, and public education probably received enough money to avoid local property tax increases.

Additional cuts, Rudd said, would result in increased school, junior college and hospital taxes. "We come up with the best budget we could without passing the burden on to local folks," he said.

The Senate bill includes substantially more money for human services and higher education and includes money for two new prison units. The House panel made new prison construction contingent on some future bond program or a dedicated prison tax.

Lewis said he expects the House budget to grow even leaner as it moves through the process, but not lean enough to avoid a tax hike.

"I don't see any way we can get through here without some type of revenue enhancement or tax increase," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth. "I can agree with the governor that we all want to hold spending down...But at the same time we have a responsibility, and that responsibility is to make sure we address the needs of this state and the future of this state, that we don't shortchange the future of this state.

"Being responsible is not always politically advantageous."

Clements, meanwhile, will begin a statewide tour to convince Texans that large tax increases will block the road to economic recovery. The Republican governor again said he will veto any new tax increase.

"The people of Texas want jobs," Clements said. "The people of Texas do not want a $5.8 billion tax increase."

Lewis said if Clements follows through with his pledge to veto any new tax increase, the House would not have the necessary 100 votes to override the veto.

Sanctuary worker to serve rest of sentence at home

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Pregnant sanctuary worker Stacey Lynn Merkt will be allowed to leave prison and serve the balance of her sentence at home, according to an order signed by a federal judge.

Attorneys for Ms. Merkt, sentenced to prison for conspiring to transport illegal aliens from El Salvador, said they feared she could lose the baby if not released.

Under U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela's order on Thursday, Ms. Merkt will be sentenced to 83 days of house arrest, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Guerra.

She could be released immediately and will not be allowed to leave her home without the court's permission during that time, said Guerra, who prosecuted Ms. Merkt on the conspiracy charge.

Ms. Merkt, who is six and a half months pregnant, began serving a 179-day sentence at a federal correctional center in Fort Worth in January.

Her attorneys said she has been ill in prison and the health of her baby was threatened. They requested her release in a petition filed Tuesday.

Ms. Merkt, named a prisoner of conscience by Amnesty International after entering the correctional center.

Ms. Merkt was a volunteer at Casa Oscar Romero, a shelter for Central American refugees in San Benito in the Rio Grande Valley, at the time of her arrest.

The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld her conviction and the U.S. Supreme Court refused last month to hear the case, one of several that have stemmed from the sanctuary movement.

Clements backs legislation banning late-term abortions

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill banning late-term abortions has won the support of Gov. Bill Clements, who had been holding out for a provision that would require minors to obtain parental consent before having pregnancies terminated.

"I want the Texas Legislature to pass the strongest pro-life legislation possible," Clements said Thursday. "It is Sen. (Ted) Lyon's position that his proposal banning post-viable abortions is that bill. I am committed to supporting his bill."

Clements said he would encourage senators to leave the provision out when the bill reaches the Senate floor.

"I am also committed to encouraging senators with whom I have influence not to offer amendments that could jeopardize that passage in the Senate," the governor said.

Clements' comments came in response to a request from Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville. Edwards pledged to vote against a bill sponsored by Lyon, D-Rockwall, that would ban late-term abortions following comments by Clements that the bill might be amended on the House floor.

"I appreciate Clements' statement. It makes clear his position on Sen. Lyon's bill and should help accelerate what I've wanted to do, which is prevent this bill from being written on the floor of the House and Senate," Edwards said.

The bill stalled in committee when the governor said during his Tuesday news conference he considered the parental consent provision a vital part of abortion legislation.

He added he wouldn't be surprised if it was tacked on when the bill reached the Senate floor. Lyon dropped the provision Monday in hopes of getting the bill passed out of committee.

Clements' support helps the bill, but doesn't guarantee it will be passed out of committee, Lyon said, adding he expects a close vote.

Judge upholds order suspending physician's license

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge refused to overturn an order that temporarily suspends the medical license of a Pasadena physician who performed fat removal surgery on a woman who later died.

During a telephone hearing Thursday, Harris County Ancillary Judge Davie Wilson refused to grant Dr. Hugo Ramirez a temporary restraining order nullifying the suspension ordered by the executive committee of the state Board of Medical Examiners in Austin on April 3.

Wilson set a hearing in Houston for April 24 on whether to grant a temporary injunction to restore Ramirez's right to practice medicine until the board holds a full hearing on the case May 18.

Ramirez claims in a lawsuit naming the 14 board members as defendants that he was not allowed to cross-examine witnesses at the April 3 emergency hearing.

He also claims his attorney did not have enough time to prepare witnesses or evidence on his behalf and that state regulations require personal service by certified mail upon a licensee before removing or suspending any license or registration with the board.

The hearing was called in response to the death of Patsy Howell, 39, of Baytown, who died a few days after undergoing a suction-assisted lipectomy, commonly called liposuction, at Ramirez's Pasadena clinic near Houston. Another woman, Patricia Rogers, 31, of Houston, became critically ill after having the same surgery to remove fat at Ramirez's clinic on the same day.

Austin real estate agent arrested after bomb threat

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin real estate agent, apparently upset over financial problems, was arrested after threatening to bomb a North Austin savings association and forcing workers to give him a bag of cash, police said.

Investigators said the man was arrested Thursday a few blocks from First Federal Savings in northwest Austin.

Police said a man called the savings office about 10:30 a.m. and told the manager he would blow up the office if she did not follow his instructions, Hunt said. The man said he had an electronic device by his phone that would detonate a bomb in the building, said Police Department spokesman C.F. Adams.

The man told the manager to put several thousand dollars in a trash bag and place it outside the savings office in a trash can.

Later, a man walked over, pulled out the bag and fled, Adams said.

Within minutes of the robbery, officer Robin Mathers arrested a man about a mile from the bank.

Mathers found the money and the bag from the savings institution on the seat of the car, Adams said.

Six Houston firefighters injured in wall collapse

HOUSTON (AP) — Six firefighters were sent to a hospital this morning after a burning wall collapsed on them as they tried to extinguish a warehouse blaze, officials say.

Three of the firefighters were scheduled to be released from Hermann Hospital in Houston later today and the other three were to be admitted to the hospital for more treatment, officials said.

One firefighter may have suffered a dislocated hip and another had a mild head injury, hospital official Linda Buschardt said. She did not know the extent of the other firefighters' condition.

The firefighters were injured about 5:30 a.m. as they helped fight a fire in a carpet warehouse in Houston. A wall of the warehouse collapsed on them and they were freed by other firefighters.

Firefighters fought the blaze for about an hour before putting it out.

Psychiatrist says woman needs treatment

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A rich woman who gave away thousands of dollars in cash and gifts needs treatment in a mental institution before she can improve, a psychiatrist says.

Leslie Negley, 37, has been battling her family's attempts to have her temporarily committed to a mental institution. She is the granddaughter of George Brown Sr., one of the founders of construction giant Brown & Root Inc.

Ms. Negley's family says she has been taken advantage of by people she met at a religious encounter. A Bexar County probate court jury must decide if Ms. Negley needs to be committed to a mental institution for a maximum 90-day treatment.

Dr. Charles L. Bowden, a psychiatrist who treated her in 1985 and saw her again last week, said she needed to be hospitalized for between two and 10 weeks.

"She doesn't deal where she has a problem which requires any professional treatment," he said.

Ms. Negley's mother, Nancy Brown Negley Wellin, wants her son to manage her daughter's estimated $3 million estate during her daughter's hospitalization.

David Ramos, 25, testified earlier Thursday that he met Ms. Negley two months ago and that she gave him and his wife, Elisa, $20,000 each. He also testified the four cars Ms. Negley bought were used primarily by himself, his wife, her sister and his mother-in-law.

Ms. Negley testified earlier that she was spiritually motivated to purchase the four cars.

"I bought it out of the kindness of my heart," she said about the purchase of one car for a woman. "He put it in my heart. He wanted her to have that car."

Ramos said Ms. Negley gave him the $20,000 to buy video equipment for his business.

"Leslie gave out of love," Ramos said. "I guess the Lord told her to give me some money so I could buy some equipment."

Ms. Negley, listening intently to Ramos' testimony, smiled and frequently whispered, "Amen."

Ramos said his wife introduced him to Ms. Negley. The two women had met at an interdenominational church gathering earlier, he said, adding that the group has no official name.

Mrs. Ramos withdrew items from the safety deposit box on April 6, two days after Ms. Negley was ordered hospitalized for psychiatric evaluation.

Baptists support taxes, reject lottery

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Baptist Churches support responsible taxation as public policy but not a state lottery, Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission said Thursday.

The policy statement was made Thursday by the commission, the social action and moral concerns agency of Baptist General Convention of Texas.

"The Christian Life Commission urges Texas churches to take up the call for leadership," said the statement. "Oppose the lottery as bad public policy. Support responsible taxation as good public policy. Tell our government leaders that we will support their courage to pass a tax bill to solve our problems. We will back them on this moral issue," said the statement released by commission director Phil Strickland.

The statement urged all Texas Baptist churches to observe "Good Government Day" on May 3 to oppose the lottery and support responsible taxation.

The statement praised Gov. Bill Clements and the Texas House for recommending continuation of the "temporary" sales tax increase by the special session of 1986.

The statement also praised Comptroller Bob Bullock for his plan to broaden the sales tax by taxing many services that are now exempted.

"Lottery is condemned as a regressive, inefficient and irresponsible means of raising revenue," the statement said.

"The lottery does not bring in even 10 percent of the current shortfall and less than one percent of the budget needs."

Strickland said the commission issued the statement Thursday recognizing that legislators must chose between budget cuts and taxes, and based on a conviction that further cuts in human services will result in genuine human suffering.

"In literally every category of meeting human need, Texas ranks near the bottom," Strickland said. "There is no room to cut without the lost dollars directly impacting our ability to respond to the needs of children, the elderly, the abused, the hungry and the sick."

B-1B bomber based in Abilene sets flight records

ABILENE (AP) — A B-1B bomber and its Dyess Air Force Base crew was in the air for 21 hours, 40 minutes and flew 9,411 miles to set distance and endurance records for the aircraft, officials say.

The previous records of 13 hours, 12 minutes and 5,940 miles had been set by a test crew at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., last Oct. 29.

The plane and its six-man crew took off from Dyess at 9:08 a.m. Tuesday and landed on the same runway at 6:48 a.m. Wednesday. The flight included five mid-air refuelings at 20,000 feet.

The farthest the plane ever got from Dyess was the northern coast of Alaska. Part of Alaska is only 55 miles from the Soviet Union, but the plane got no closer to that country than 160 miles, Dyess officials said Thursday.

It was nevertheless the closest a B-1B has ever been to Soviet territory, the Air Force confirmed.

Delighted Dyess officials said the test by the Air Force Operational Test and Evaluation Center was the most challenging yet of the aircraft's "global mission capability."

Prisons open for four days

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The state prison system admitted inmates for its fourth consecutive day this week, prison officials said.

On Thursday, 144 inmates were released from the prison system, while 226 inmates were admitted according to an unofficial count, said prison spokesman Charles Brown.

At midnight Wednesday, the 26-unit system held 38,049 inmates, 306 inmates below the ceiling of 95 percent of capacity required under state law, Brown said.

After Thursday's admissions and releases, the prison system was believed likely to again remain below the 95-percent limit, meaning it would be open to more admissions Friday, Brown said.

Texan jailed in dispute

SILVER CITY, N.M. (AP) — Slim pickings around Bear Creek apparently caused some quick tempers, a challenge for a quick draw and gunfire in a gold camp.

None of the three prospectors involved was hurt, but one of them was in the Grant County Jail Thursday in lieu of $7,500 bond.

Leslie Vernon Jr., 36, of Katy, Texas, was arraigned Wednesday before Magistrate John H. Scholl of Silver City on a charge of aggravated assault.

Detective Steve Chavez of the Grant County Sheriff's Department said Vernon and brothers Glenn Kamman, 37, and C.R. Kamman, 44, both of Wharton, Texas, had been mining for gold for three weeks in southwestern New Mexico.

Apparently there was bickering among about money and about a very small amount of gold they had found, Chavez said.

Boy accidentally kills niece

LA PRYOR (AP) — A 10-year-old boy playing with a gun accidentally shot and killed his 2-year-old niece during a family gathering, police said Thursday.

The girl, Magdalena Cuellar, was pronounced dead on arrival at Uvalde Memorial Hospital after the incident at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday, Zavala County Deputy Sheriff Gus Marburger said.

"He (the boy) thought it was a gun to play with," Marburger said. "He just found it in the bedroom...it's a tragic situation."

Marburger said the girl's mother, Adelita Cuellar, apparently kept the 9mm automatic handgun for protection.

The boy, investigators said, was in a bedroom when the weapon discharged. The girl was struck while she stood in a living room that was separated from the bedroom by an open door.

Convicted murderer weeps

LIBERTY (AP) — A Houston man wept after a jury convicted him of capital murder in the 1984 slaying of a Channelview businessman.

Nelson Wayne "Angel" Mooney was convicted Thursday in the shooting death of Raymond William Garner, 63, who owned a trucking business.

The jury took more than hour to find Mooney guilty.

Garner's mother and three sisters wept and hugged each other as District Clerk Joy K. McManus read the guilty verdict.

Mooney, 30, stared straight ahead when the verdict was read, but began crying when District Judge W.G. "Dub" Woods Jr. asked them if their verdict was unanimous.

Philadelphia Inquirer wins three Pulitzers for public service

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — A series about drug abuse and dangerous medical problems among airline pilots won The Pittsburgh Press the 1987 Pulitzer Prize for public service, while The Philadelphia Inquirer won three awards.

The New York Times and The Los Angeles Times each won two Pulitzers, while playwright August Wilson won the drama prize for "Fences," about a black garbage collector robbed by racism of a chance to play major league baseball.

The general non-fiction prize went to New York Times reporter David K. Shipler for his book "Arab and Jew: Wounded Spirits in a Promised Land." The fiction prize went to 70-year-old Peter Taylor for his novel, "A Summons to Memphis," about an elderly widower's remarriage.

Other journalism winners included the Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal, the Chicago Tribune, The Washington Post, The Tribune of San Diego, the San Francisco Examiner, The Des Moines (Iowa) Register and The Miami Herald.

Winners of the Pulitzers, journalism's most prestigious award, were announced Thursday by Columbia University. The journalism award carries a $1,000 stipend.

A three-piece band tooted "Happy Days Are Here Again" at The Pittsburgh Press, where the public service prize was its second Pulitzer in as many years. "You don't set out to win them," said reporter Andrew Schneider. "You go out and do the reporting we all do every day."

It was a series by Schneider and Matthew Brelis about the Federal Aviation Administration's medical screening of pilots that won this year's gold medal for public service for the newspaper.

The stories led to FAA reforms, including new procedures for testing flight crews for drug and alcohol use and replacement of a federal air surgeon who allowed more than 250 pilots or co-pilots to return to the cockpit after they were grounded by debilitating or potentially fatal medical conditions.

The Inquirer's John Woestendiek was cited in the investigative reporting category for outstanding prison beat reporting, including stories that helped win a new trial for a man convicted of murder.

An investigative reporting prize also went to the Inquirer's Daniel Biddle, Fredric N. Tulsky and H.G. Bissinger for a series about backroom deals and other shady doings in the Philadelphia court system. The series led to investigations and reforms.

Said Bissinger: "It is the second most wonderful moment of my life next to the birth of my children." Bissinger is studying at Harvard University on a Nieman Fellowship.

The Inquirer's third Pulitzer, for feature writing, went to Steve Twomey for a look at life aboard the aircraft carrier America, which became a launchpad for the U.S. air strike on Libya while he was aboard.

The newspaper now has won 13 Pulitzers, all during the past 15 years.

Publisher Sam McKeel declared it a "great day, a great year and the continuation of a great trend" at the Inquirer, where the newsroom was awash in champagne.

In national reporting, the staff of The New York Times was cited for coverage of the Challenger aftermath. The Times' Alex S. Jones won the specialized reporting prize for his story about the sale of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Louisville Times.

The two awards brought the Times' total to 58 Pulitzers, by far the most of any news organization.

The Pulitzer Prize Board also awarded a prize in national reporting to the staff of The Miami Herald for "its exclusive reporting and persistent coverage" of the Iran-Contra affair.

"I have a lot of people to thank," said Herald reporter Alfonso Chardy, "but most of all, I guess I should thank the Contras."

As always, the announcement of the journalism prizes brought work to a halt in winning newsrooms. There were hugs and cheers, and champagne corks were popped.

In Iowa, Des Moines Register photographer David Peterson cried when he heard over his car radio that he had won the feature photography award for a photo essay depicting "the shattered dreams of American farmers."

"I think everyone knew about it but me," said Peterson.

The Akron Beacon Journal stuck to its ban on alcohol in the newsroom, so there were no champagne toasts when staffers celebrated their general news reporting prize for team coverage of the attempted takeover of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. by a European financier.

The Los Angeles Times' Michael Parks, who successfully fought an expulsion order by South African authorities in December and January, won the international reporting prize, for his dispatches from South Africa.

The newspaper's other award, in the criticism category, went to Richard Eder for his book reviews.

The editorial cartooning award went to Berke Breathed for his wacky syndicated comic strip, "Bloom County." Columnist Charles Krauthammer of the Post Writers Group won the commentary award.

The fall of the Ferdinand Marcos regime in the Philippines provided the award-winning subject matter for photographer Kim Komenich of the San Francisco Examiner, who won the spot news photography prize.

In the explanatory journalism category, Jeff Lyon and Peter Gorner of the Chicago Tribune won for a series on gene therapy.

The San Diego Tribune's Jonathan Freedman won the editorial writing award for editorials urging passage of an immigration reform bill.

The other arts winners were:

— Biography: "Martin Luther King Jr. and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference," by David J. Garrow.

— History: "Voyagers to the West: A Passage in the Peopling of America on the Eve of the Revolution," by Bernard Bailyn.

— Poetry: "Thomas and Beulah," by Rita Dove.

— Music: "The Flight into Egypt," by John Harbison.

Congress not in favor of higher phone charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress say they may seek legislation to block a $1.50 boost in the cost of basic telephone service unless they are satisfied the increase is needed.

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House telecommunications subcommittee, said Thursday he remains unconvinced the increase is needed and will seek legislation to block it unless the Federal Communications Commission satisfactorily justifies its case to raise the cost of connecting customers with their local telephone companies.

The FCC's studies, he said, "are long on highfalutin' theory and speculation but short on hard data. It's time the commission and its supporters deliver the goods.

"We on Capitol Hill and across the country are waiting," he said in a statement.

His remarks followed FCC action Thursday to increase to $3.50 over the next two years the $2 monthly charge that helps pay the cost of connecting a subscriber to the local telephone office.

The FCC action, on a 5-0 vote, would further reduce long-distance rates and discourage large business users from abandoning the public telephone network.

The first increment will add 60 cents to customers' bills on July 1, an additional 60 cents in December 1988 and as much as 30 cents in April 1989. The FCC will evaluate the amount of the final increase when the time comes.

The FCC, in a compromise with skeptical members of Congress, agreed to delay the first increment by one month to July 1 to provide additional time to review tariffs that will pass through the increase to reduce long-distance rates and to provide more information to Congress to justify the increase.

'Window of opportunity' spurs numerous guilty pleas

NEW YORK (AP) — When a federal judge with a reputation for leniency handles arraignments, defense attorneys call it the window of opportunity. Those working to shut the window call it judge shopping.

There were 67 defendants in 49 cases, including insider trade in narcotics trafficking, on Judge Morris E. Lasker's calendar Thursday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. By the end of the day, about 20 had pleaded guilty and nine more were slated to do so today.

"I wish I'd had a case down there," Thomas Fitzpatrick, a defense attorney, said when told Lasker was handling arraignments Thursday.

Last week, Judge Thomas P. Griesa, who has a tougher reputation, was handling arraignments. Only one of the 50 defendants on the calendar pleaded guilty.

Every Thursday at the courthouse, people indicted the previous week appear for arraignment, the procedure in which a defendant enters a plea.

Each judge handles arraignments for two-week periods. The Southern District of New York has an unusual rule specifying that the judges who preside over defendants' arraignments will also sentence them.

Defendants who don't plead guilty take the chance of getting a tougher judge when their case is randomly assigned to one of the 30 or more judges who try cases.

Recent news reports that the rules may be changed later this year had courthouse observers predicting a mad rush to plead guilty Thursday before Lasker.

In fact, about 15 defendants who had been arrested but not yet indicted pleaded guilty before Lasker in their first court appearance, triple the usual number, according to court clerk Ronald Sulyma, who called the large number of guilty pleas "most certainly" unusual.

Defense lawyers are split on the merits of the window of opportunity.

"I think it was a good procedure to have," said Fitzpatrick, a former federal prosecutor. "It generated pleas that might not have been obtained otherwise. It clears the docket and prosecutors can go on to other cases."

Milton Gould, a partner in the law firm of Shea & Gould, said it was to his advantage to keep the present system but a change was needed "to avoid the erosion of public confidence." He said the public perception that lawyers are "playing games with the system causes distrust."

The arraignment procedure in the federal district that covers Manhattan, the Bronx and six counties north of New York City is unusual in having one judge handle all incoming cases at the arraignment stage.

Report says FBI probe at Morton Thiokol began early

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal investigation of the company that builds the Challenger booster rockets began after company employees approached the FBI with "substantial allegations" of fraud, a newly released document says.

The employees at Morton Thiokol Inc. are not identified in the paper, which is a transcript of a conversation between a Justice Department lawyer and a federal judge.

But the Justice Department attorney, David W. Long, said the FBI was conducting "an extremely sensitive investigation."

The disclosure about company informants added a new element to an already complicated case that involves two lawsuits filed by engineer Roger Boisjoly against Morton Thiokol, his former employer. One lawsuit alleges that Morton Thiokol defamed Boisjoly; the other charges the company defrauded the government. Each lawsuit asks billions of dollars in damages.

Among three documents released Thursday by U.S. District Judge Harold Greene is one in which Boisjoly claims the company received money from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to hire 18 quality control and safety people but used it instead "as a slush fund for Thiokol."

He also says his warning in July 1985 that there could be a catastrophic failure of seals on the shuttle booster rockets was immediately classified as "company private" by Thiokol and withheld from NASA.

Another document contained a conversation between lawyer Long and Greene and shows the Justice Department sought to keep Morton Thiokol from knowing about Boisjoly's fraud lawsuit so the company would not learn of the FBI investigation.

That investigation, Long said, began after "persons still in the employ of Morton Thiokol came to the FBI in Salt Lake City and disclosed or made substantial allegations of fraud concerning Morton Thiokol's building of the rocket rocket motors." That was on Jan. 15, nearly two weeks before Boisjoly filed his first lawsuit.

'Yuppie strategy' blamed for leading GOP astray

An analysis

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the religious right, where political influence has grown for a decade, there now are fears of a yuppie takeover of the Republican Party and talk of an alliance with blacks.

As the battle shapes up for control of the GOP in the post-Reagan era, maintaining influence in party councils looks less certain for the religious right compared with the heady times during the first six years of Reagan's presidency when fundamentalist ministers exulted over the presence of a kindred spirit in the White House.

They had become a force in the Republican Party — their opposition to abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment became part of the GOP platform. But now, according to conservative activist Gary Jarmin, there is a "yuppie strategy" being pursued by ome Republican strategists who want to play down the religious right's social agenda and concentrate on conservative economic proposals.

"They are leading the party astray," he said of such strategists, implying they were in the camp of such presidential aspirants as Vice President George Bush and Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas.

"If Bush wins the nomination, I guarantee you most conservatives are going to walk," Jarmin said over breakfast this week with a reporter and the Rev. Robert Grant, chairman of Christian Voice.

But where to? A third party?

"Down the track maybe," Grant said.

"The Republican Party is elitist," Jarmin said.

Grant's organization puts out a "Biblical Scorecard" on what it calls "the family-moral-freedom issues." Those issues include not only abortion and school prayer, but also support for increased defense spending, "Star Wars," and aid to anti-communist insurgents in Nicaragua, Afghanistan, Angola and elsewhere.

Led by politically active television ministers such as Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson, the religious right captured public attention in the late 1970s by mobilizing their followers and claiming to bring millions of new voters to the polls in support of conservative causes and candidates.

Robertson is aspiring to the 1988 Republican presidential nomination, an effort not universally cheered by his fellow evangelists. Falwell, who is supporting Bush, has expressed misgivings about the Robertson campaign, calling it "a very precarious undertaking."

Grant and Jarmin expressed concern that if Robertson stayed in the GOP race "for the long haul" even if he had no chance of winning the nomination "his leverage is going to be less than what it could have been."

FCC cracks down on broadcast obscenity

Stern

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a decade afte Carlin's "seven dirty words" shook the airwaves, federal regulators are issuing their own words to clean up obscene and indecent broadcasts.

In actions Thursday against three radio stations, including one with controversial morning-show personality Howard Stern, regulators sent word that they will be holding the nation's broadcasters to higher standards.

The Federal Communications Commission is hoping its crackdown on broadcast obscenity will tame the airwaves, but until the agency details its new guidelines, Stern is planning no changes in his New York-based radio program. The FCC plans to publish its new guidelines soon in the Federal Register to put all broadcasters on notice that it will no longer limit its definition of indecency to the "seven dirty words" broadcast in 1975 in a monologue by comedian George Carlin. That broadcast led to a 1978 Supreme Court decision, which set an indecency standard for the airwaves.

The FCC has interpreted the standard narrowly, and since the Carlin case arose in 1976, the agency has taken no action against a station for indecency or obscenity.

FCC General Counsel Diane Killory said the FCC had to advise stations about the new standards before it takes action, which could include fines and the revocation of licenses.

Mel A. Karmazin, executive vice president of Infinity Broadcasting, owner of WYSP-FM, Philadelphia, which airs Stern's program, called the FCC position a victopite a written warning against Stern's sexual-excremental talk on the airwaves.

"Clearly, we've won," Karmazin said. "What they've said is that they're not taking actionagainst us."

Stern, 32, at a news conferenc where his show is aired on WXRK-FM, said, "When the FCC makes a statement and says what it will do, I'm the first one to abide by it."

"I never thought that I pushed anything to the limit. I go on the radio in the morning to have fun. We make a lot of people laugh. Maybe some people in Mississippi are offended," Stern said.

"A bunch of 65-year-old men don't like the show, I'm offended," he said.

The FCC took even stronger action against Pacifica Foundation Inc.'s KPFK-FM, Los Angeles, sending the case to the Justice Department for possible prosecution for broadcasting a program allegedly containing graphic depictions of homosexual sex acts. The commission found the program was clearly indecent and "may have crossed the line" to obscenity.

Tarabu Betseai, general manager of KPFK-FM, said the FCC failed to consider the material it aired in its proper context — a discussion about a play running in Los Angeles about safe sex and the disease AIDS.

"It's frightening that a group of people who can be swayed by political pressure can determine what is appropriate for broadcast,' he said.

The FCC also issued a written warning to KCSB-FM, licensed to the University of California at Santa Barbara, which broadcast a rock song with sexually explicit lyrics.

The station's manager, Malcolm Gault-Williams, said the action marked "a sad day for the electronic media. It's obvious the First Amendment guarantees for the print media will not be extended to the electronic media."

In the future, the FCC will apply a broader definition of indecency than was embodied in the Supreme Court decision which said: "Language or material that depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs."

The FCC also is warning broadcasters that it is no longer safe to assume that 10 p.m. is late enough to presume that children won't be listening. The FCC is now saying that indecent material cannot be broadcast at a time when there is a "reasonable risk" that children are in the audience, and the agency says that time period can vary from city to city.

In recent years, the FCC has been getting 20,000 complaints a year about offensive broadcast programs.

"There has been a change in broadcasting" with the recent introduction of "shock-talk" and other programs that include liberal doses of sexual innuendo and double-entendre, said James McKinney, chief of the FCC's mass media bureau.

John Lund, president of the San Francisco-based Lund Consultants to Broadcast Management, said the FCC crackdown probably will tame the dozen or so "shock-talk" programs on the airwaves and make other disc jockeys think twice.

"I think morning disc jockeys will be spending a lot of time this next week with their management going over the decision," he said.

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Benjamin Franklin, as president of Pennsylvania, received a poignant letter from Aaron Dean:

"The exalted goodness of your Excellency's Character, emboldend me most humbly to hope you will condescend favorably to receive the exclosed Petition; and that you will compassionate my long sufferings, and distress, by granting me relief. The vindictive spirit that unhappily prevailed, at the time the Offence is said to be committed, for which I suffer; has now happily subsided; Whig, and Tory, go hand in hand together, not a word of Animosity is heard; even those who called themselves my greatest Enemies in Bucks County, have declared, they would be happy to see me at liberty; that I have suffered long enough.

"Let me hope my good behaviour, during my Confinement, will be no small inducement with your Excellency, to grant me relief .. ."

Dean, a weaver of Bucks County, was imprisoned for joining the enemy in Philadelphia during the British occupation in 1778.

The comptroller general of Pennsylvania, in a report made public today, reported receipt of 55,989 pounds for the year 1786 for excise tax on liquors. Of that sum Philadelphia County paid 34,715 pounds. Cumberland County paid a total of 31 pounds for both 1785 and 1786.

By the collector's reckoning, Philadelphia County alone owed the state treasury 57,858 pounds, over 2,000 pounds more than the amount collected for the entire state. In an effort to halt this evasion of excise taxes, the Assembly's committee called for a stronger reporting and enforcement policy.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

No Congress assembled for want of a quorum.

Franklin, in a long letter to the Marquis de Lafayette, discussed America's international reputation:

" ... Our enemies are as you observe very industrious in depreciating our national character. Their abuse sometimes provokes me, and I am almost ready to retaliate; but I have held my hand, though there is abundant room for recrimination; because I would do nothing that might hasten another quarrel by exasperating those who are still sore from their late disgraces. Perhaps it may be best that they should please themselves with fancying us weak, and poor, and divided, and friendless."

DELEGATES TODAY

Despite the continuing discomfort of gout and kidney stones, Franklin wrote cheerfully to his old friend the Countess d'Houdetot.

"My Health continues good, my old Malady excepted; and that, Thanks to God, does not grow worse; so that I am capable of going thro' the Business of the Station to which I was chosen for the second Year in November last, by the unanimous Vote of my Country in the General Assembly of their Representatives. And I am happy in my family, having an affectionate Daughter to take care of me, and a Number of her young Children to amuse me, with whose pretty Actions and Prattle, and promising Tempers and Qualities of Body and Mind, I am extremely pleased and entertained."

LOOKING BACK

The Carpenters' Company Rule Book

On Jan. 15, 1787, the Carpenters' Company of Philadelphia paid Hall & Sellers 15 pounds "for printing the Books of the rules for Measuring and Valueing house Carpenters work." Members of the Carpenters' Company had, as early as 1774, adopted a set of prices for building so that "the workman should receive a fair compensation for his labor and the employer obtain a fair value for his money."

Circulation of the printed Rule Book was tightly controlled. The book was issued only to members of the company, and on loan; the company reserved the right to reclaim the book on demand. At a member's death, his copy of the Rule Book was immediately collected by his colleagues. Only after the book was returned to the Hall were the carriages ordered for the funeral.

At the quarterly meeting of the company on April 16, 1787, the members drafted a two-page resolution outlining the regulations for owning a copy of the rules.

" ... And we do hereby Solemnly promise and declare, As we wish to be believed or estiemed by the Company; That we will to the utmost of our power preserve the said Book from being perused or examined by any person whatsoever who doth not belong to the said Company ... And if by any means thro' me or my heirs the said rules should be designedly divulged, We do hereby declare That we will not Assist ... Any person that shall break his Engagement to the Company."

The need for secrecy was still very much apparent in 1817 when Thomas Jefferson requested a copy of the Rule Book. He was courteously, but firmly, turned down.

Policy to allow patents on new animal life forms

NEW YORK (AP) — A new government policy that allows inventors to patent new animal life forms that are created through gene splicing specifically bars the patenting of new human characteristics, according to a report published today.

However, one official of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office said the policy could lead eventually to commercial protection of new human life forms.

"The decision says higher life forms will be considered and it could be extrapolated to human beings," Charles E. Van Horn, director of organic chemistry and biotechnology in the U.S. patent office, told The New York Times.

"But for the time being, we are not going to consider applications involving human life."

Under the policy adopted by the Commerce Department's Patent and Trademark Office and scheduled to be announced next week, patents of animals with new traits produced through new reproductive technologies, including genetic engineering, will be allowed, the Times reported.

The policy would make the United States the first country to patent animals.

Scientists and farming experts say the technology has important economic consequences for the biotechnology industry and agriculture.

It could produce, for example, cows that give more milk or pigs that have less fat. It often takes years to produce commercial traits using natural, selective breeding, the scientists say.

A coalition of animal welfare and public policy groups led by the Humane Society of the United States and the Foundation on Economic Trends in Washington was formed on Thursday to block implementation of the policy.

Aluminum TV dinner trays to be Smithsonian artifact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soon to take its place at the Smithsonian Institution among such well-loved bits of Americana as Dorothy's ruby red slippers from "The Wizard of Oz," and Archie Bunker's wing chair is an aluminum TV dinner tray.

A tray that contained one of the first Swanson frozen dinners to hit the market in 1954 was presented recently to the Smithsonian to be enshrined along with 100 million other cultural and scientific artifacts.

"This metal tray is a piece of Americana," said Dr. Terry Sharrer, a curator at the National Museum of American History who accepted the tray from Robert Revelle, the Swanson dinner marketing manager for Campbell Soup Co. "It is something many of us grew up with."

By giving the TV dinner tray to the Smithsonian, Revelle said, his company "hopes to show future generations how 20th-century Americans really lived."

EPA leery of formaldehyde

WASHINGTON (AP) — No causal link between formaldehyde and human cancer has been proven, but the Environmental Protection Agency reaffirmed that the chemical probably does cause the disease.

EPA will use its cancer risk assessment in deciding this summer whether additional regulations are necessary, Charles Elkins, head of EPA's Office of Toxic Substances, said Thursday.

The agency, which said some garment workers could face an increased risk of cancer of about three in 10,000, already has asked the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to decide whether some 1.1 million garment workers need additional protection.

The EPA, based on studies, has put the chemical in a class of probable causes of human cancer for which there mited" evidence, although it already has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals.

"We have not shown a causal link," said Richard Hefter, lead author of the risk assessment issued Thursday. "There are associations. We cannot rule out exposure to some other chemical" as the cause of the cancers observed in the human studies, he added.

More aid to elderly urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poverty hits elderly widowed women primarily, with some living on as little as $12 a day, says Thomas Moloney of the Commonwealth Fund, a philanthropic foundation.

"What we're suggesting is a moderate agenda of increasing that to $15 a day," he said Thursday as he called for increasing federal aid to the elderly at a cost of about $3 billion.

The $3 billion could be raised in several ways, including asking elderly people living above the poverty line to contribute 32 cents a day and applying the estate tax to estates valued at $400,000 or more instead of the current $600,000, he said.

Moloney, senior vice president of the New York-based fund, was one of the speakers at a news conference called to mark the release of a report by the fund's Commission on Elderly People Living Alone.

April 16, 17, 1987

U.S. ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY. REGION 6. NOTICE OF PROPOSAL TO GRANT A PSD PERMIT. EXTENSION TO UNION TEXAS PETROLEUM CORPORATION.

The Texas Air Control Board (TACB) received a request from Union Texas Petroleum on November 7, 1986, for an extension of their Prevention of Significant Deterioration (PSD) Air Quality Permit, PSD-TX-664, issued by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on December 11, 1985. This permit authorizes the modification of the Benedum Gas Plant located on Ranch Road 1555, approximately 11 miles northwest of Rankin, Upton County, Texas. This permit will expire June 11, 1987. Construction has been delayed due to economic conditions.

The TACB reviewed the extension request of Union Texas Petroleum since it has been delegated the technical review authority for PSD in the State of Texas. The TACB recommends approval of an extension to coincide with the expiration date of TACB Permit No. C-9677. Based on that recommendation, EPA proposes to grant the requested extension of the expiration date of Permit PSD-TX-664 to November 16, 1987. Because of the potential public interest in this permit extension request, EPA is accepting comments on the merits of the company's request for a period of 30 days following publication of this notice.

Comments should be addressed to Mr. John Hepola, Chief, Air Enforcement Branch, Air, Pesticides and Toxics Division, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region 6, 1445 Ross Avenue, Dallas, Texas 75202. Documents relative to the company's request are available for inspection during normal business hours in the Air, Pesticides and Toxics Division, address above and in the offices of the TACB, 6330 Highway 290 East, Austin, Texas 78723.

Bet you can't buy just one.

Chances are if you buy one Honda, you'll buy another. Once you're spoiled by Honda's intelligent, attractive design, quality craftsmanship, value and dependability, you won't ever want to pay more for less again.

Truth is, many Honda owners wouldn't trade their Hondas for anything but another Honda. The proof? Honda continues to be first in owner loyalty of all import cars. Come look at a Honda. Just one.
