COUPLE KILLED IN HIGHWAY CRASH

HOME TOWN TALK

By Beddy

The railroad committee will, it appears, have things ready pretty soon to present the facts about what Big Spring has got to do to make possible construction of the Texas & Pacific Northern Railway Company.

Watch for it. Every man and woman should be interested.

A number of local men, many of them reported to be unemployed, held another meeting last night for the purpose of creating public sentiment disfavoring employment of negroes and Mexicans in positions they felt white residents ought to fill.

Unemployment, of course, is the reason why those men met. If all of them had jobs they would very likely not have paid any special attention to when, or whether, members of other races were employed.

We can just here, hear some of the egg heads of our town wonder why in the world does that fellow point things like that—calling attention to unemployment. "It's bad publicity," they will say, "many of them, however, when a plain fact, obviously existent, is pointed to."

We always think then of the ostrich, the bird that sticks its head in sand and, not seeing a danger, believes it no longer exists. You can't get along very well without facing facts.

The facts are that, although conditions here are considerably better than in many parts of the country, there is a comparatively large number of unemployed.

In the ranks of unemployed there are many who, of course, those who would not really want a real job, but the large majority of them do want jobs, need jobs and must have jobs.

Therefore, we are going to follow a method successfully used by a number of editors in recent months—unemployment exists throughout the nation, you know, and even if calling attention to it were bad publicity not many folks outside town could say anything because their towns are in the same boat—but, back to the method to be used to help improve the unemployment situation.

We are hereby urging every reader who has any work of any kind to be done and will pay wages therefor to telephone No. 728, calling for the editor, and, if he is not in, talking with anyone in the office.

Please give your name, address, the type of work you want done, and what you will pay per hour or day or week or month.

Now, until announcement is made in this column that jobs are available there will be no reason for anyone to apply to this office for a job. We will list the jobs available in this column so that readers wanting work may call. The first to call for any job will, of course, get first call for it.

We are taking this method of doing what we can to benefit the entire community. If there is a local unemployment problem this method will determine its nature and magnitude. And, if the problem really exists, perhaps we may be able in a small way to help somebody. That is our sole purpose.

Jno. E. Shelton Jr. of Abilene in Big Spring in the interest of his company. He will stop at the Crawford Hotel while here.

The Weather

Coste and Companion End Visit to Dallas, Hopping Off For Night Stop in Louisville

Texas Multitude Aclains French Conquerors of Atlantic After Swift Flight From New York

AVIATORS SENT GREETINGS OF $25,000 DONOR

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 5 (AP)—The following cablegram from Col. William E. Easterwood, donor of a $25,000 prize for a Paris-New York flight, was received here today by Deudonne Coste, French aviator who won the prize along with his co-pilot Maurice Bellonte on landing his plane here yesterday. "Congratulations; world's greatest flight. May God bless you both."

In reply, the fliers said: "We are happy to arrive at Dallas. We are sorry of your absence here but your representatives, Jimmie Smith and Sky Mead, have received us for you so cordially and fraternally. Will you receive our greatest thanks? We will always think of the interview we had with you in Paris and will be happy to see you again. Please accept our gracious regards."

The fliers' American representative said the $25,000 prize money would be paid by Col. Easterwood, who is in London either in Paris or New York depending on the future plans of the fliers in this country.

FORMER LOCAL FARMER TAKEN TO STATE PEN

T. E. Nabors, at one time awarded the title of Howard County's Master Farmer, was on his way to the penitentiary today—four months after he was found guilty and sentenced to 30 years on a statutory charge.

Nabors was tried in the May term of district court. He pleaded guilty to the charge, asking the mercy of the court.

Anthony Coste, given one year for violation of the liquor law, also was taken to the penitentiary.

And Russell, penitentiary agent, stopped here Thursday night with 30 prisoners, picking up the two here.

The prisoners taken here were the first in several months to be removed to the penitentiary.

Indictments Against Two

McGee, Johnson Billed by Grand Jury in Liquor Case

Sammie McGee and Jack Johnson, arrested by members of the Sheriff's Department in a raid on the Dew Drop Tourist Camp, West Third Street, were indicted by the Howard County grand jury, now in session. It was learned today.

The two are charged with possession for sale of intoxicating liquor. A quantity of whiskey was seized in the raid.

The indictments were included in a bunch of 12 returned Wednesday by the body.

Other indictments reported by the district clerk, follow:

Jack Sullivan, driving while intoxicated.

M. L. Hunt, forgery and passing.

B. Warren, forgery.

Floyd Thompson, possession of intoxicating liquor for the purpose of sale.

H. H. Bullian, forgery and passing.

Harold Henderson, theft.

Pete Stevens, chicken theft.

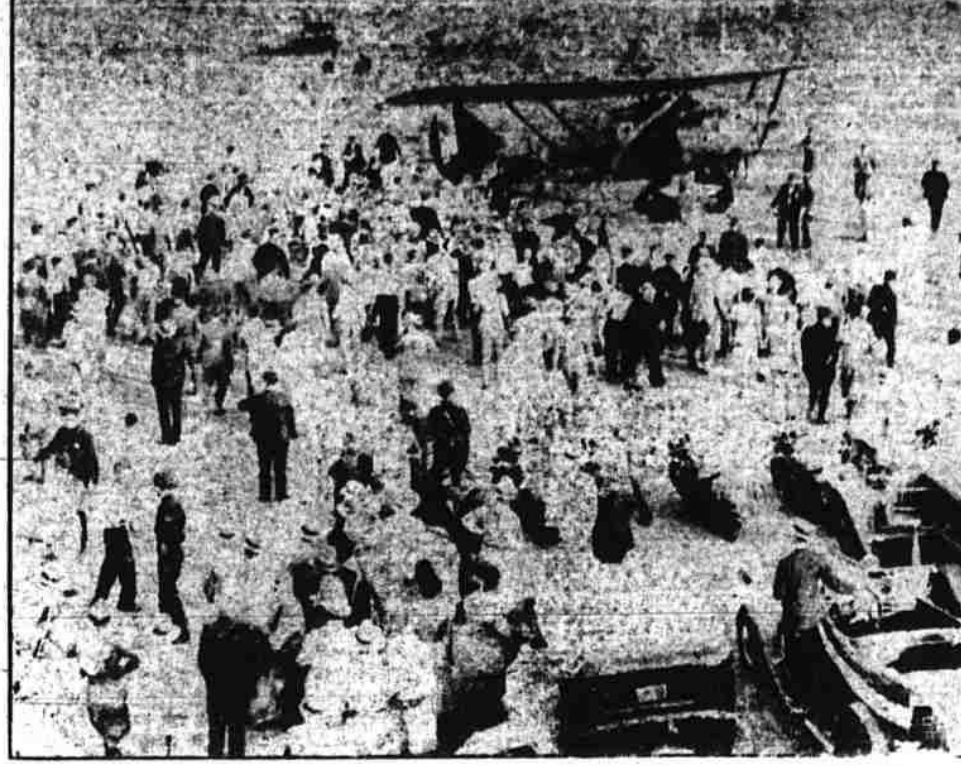

A. W. Burnett, driving while intoxicated.

Other indictments are expected to be returned before the grand jury recesses for the week-end.

Howard-Glasscock Proration Order Is Approved By Board

AUSTIN, Sept. 5.—The railroad commission Friday signed an order for proration of Howard-Glasscock fields. It fixed a 12-barrel basis for wells to 1800 feet; fifty barrel basis wells 1800 to 3000 feet, and provided remainder of pipeline outlet for all wells should be based on the excess potential. For the Phillips-Excess field it adopted an average potential basis; and for Chalk, Dora Roberts and Henshaw, total potential basis.

WHEN THE QUESTION MARK TOUCHED TEXAS SOIL

NEA Ft. Worth Bureau

The upper picture shows "Q", flown by Captain Deudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte touching Texas soil at Love Field, Dallas, late Thursday—the end of a jaunt to Paris via New York. The trip to Texas was to earn a $25,000 pot put up by Colonel William E. Easterwood, Dallas chewing gum magnate. The crowd, dashing madly toward the plane, is shown reaching it from all directions. The picture to the right is of Captain Coste, as he left the ship amid the cheers of nearly 20,000 Texans.

Laborers To Be Organized

Second Meeting Is Held; No Trouble Is Threatened

Following a series of meetings of laborers, held Wednesday and Thursday nights, a climax is expected to be reached tonight when a meeting is to be held to organize a Common Laborers Union.

Laborers have been urged to attend a meeting at the Labor Hall, Army Store building, 8 o'clock tonight for the purpose of organizing the body.

For two nights both employed and unemployed laborers have met at Dad's Camp, West Third Street, for a conference.

The primary object it was understood, will be to urge contractors to employ unemployed white laborers instead of Mexicans and negroes.

Since the first meeting was held rumors have been rife that racial outbreaks might occur. Leaders of the crowd, however, declare that such is not the intention of the body. They maintain that white men with families should be given work when it is possible, instead of employing alien labor.

At the initial meeting, held Wednesday night, Deputy Sheriff Andrew J. Merrick attended and spoke to those that attended. He declared the sheriff's department had been informed that Mexicans and negroes would be molested if they continued working on certain projects. He told those present that any outbreak would be subject to action of the law regulating mobs and riots.

Following Merrick's statement, he was informed that the rumors were "absolutely unfounded" and that such action had not been mentioned. He was assured the primary object of the organization was to improve the unemployment condition, and to urge employers to engage white persons instead of foreign labor.

At the present time few, if any, building contractors are using either Mexican or negro labor.

It is alleged that a group of men protested the use by the Worth Construction Co., engaged in building the West Ward school, of three negroes in brick laying work. The negroes were released, however.

The major construction work now underway is the erection of the three ward school buildings, and no alien labor is employed at either of the sites.

The majority of the contractors use local labor when it is possible, and at all times Americans are given the preference, it is understood.

The city's work of expanding the water department service and construction of two reservoirs is given

DEFIANT, MAN WHO KILLED 22 IS EXECUTED

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Sept. 5 (AP)—Carl Panzran, self declared slayer of twenty-two persons, was hanged at the federal prison early today for the murder of R. G. Warnke, civilian laundry foreman at the penitentiary where Panzran was serving a sentence for burglary imposed by a District of Columbia court.

President Hoover last night denied a plea for clemency.

The slayer was pronounced dead at 6:19 a. m.

Jeering the crowd as he walked to the gallows Panzran noted two chaplains present. He asked the warden that they be removed. The chaplains left in accordance with his will.

Panzran, serving his sixth prison sentence, struck down the laundry foreman with a heavy iron bar June 19, 1929, in a frenzy of rage.

The hanging was the first legal execution in Kansas since 1870, with the exception of that of a federal prisoner in Wichita in 1888. The Kansas law provides capital punishment only for treason. Panzran, however, was prosecuted under federal statutes, his crime having been committed on federal property.

Before his trial for murder at Topeka, Kas., the prisoner wrote a letter to the trial judge demanding justice which he described as "That I be found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to die."

Railroad Men Hear Service

"Life's Railway" Subject Of Rev. Lindley At First Christian

A large group of railroad men and their families heard Evangelist D. R. Lindley deliver a message on "Life's Railway To Heaven" at the revival in progress at the First Christian church last night.

Rev. Lindley said: "If we are going to travel this road to the city of God we must travel according to the directions. I couldn't take a T. & P. train to Fort Worth and detour by way of San Angelo, and yet some men think they can detour to God the terms by which they shall travel and the direction by which they shall go to the Kingdom of God."

"We must travel according to the directions given in the railroad guide, and that guide is the Bible. The directions are the same for all. No special privileges are given. No passes are issued. No man can ride on his wife's railroad ticket. Every man must pay his own way. Neither can any man ride the Pullman to the Kingdom of God. Some men seem to think that once they are on this train they can sleep their way to the promised land. My friend if you are riding on a Pullman you are just on the wrong train. There are no Pullmans, no express trains, and no freight trains on this road. It is going to be a great disappointment to some men to learn that they can't check their worldly goods, social prestige, and political power to the Eternal City. But you can't check any baggage on this road."

"You know I have actually found some well to do and seemingly respectable people who are trying to ride the blinds to the kingdom of God. They want to live in a community where they can partake of the blessings of the church, and yet are trying to get to the Kingdom of Heaven on the outside of the church. They think they can steal their way to the Eternal City. My friends, there is only one way to travel this road and that is to go on the work train. The work train goes along and prepares the road so that others can travel it more safely."

Just before the sermon Rev. Paul Campbell painted a picture entitled "Life's Railway to Heaven" bringing out in a vivid way the message of the picture. The picture was awarded to Mrs. Forest Walters for bringing the most new people to the revival, sixteen signifying they had come with her. Rev. Campbell also sang a beautiful solo "Life's Railway to Heaven."

The service tonight will be a special service dedicated to the young people. The subject of the message will be "Is the Youth Today Safe?" Rev. Campbell will draw a picture entitled "Rescue the Perishing." This picture will be one of an airplane battle in the air.

Weatherford Man Suffers Serious Hurts

Scene of Other Fatalities Claims Young West Texan

WEATHERFORD, Texas, Sept. 5 (AP)—Miss Coral Mae Dunn, 19, of Mineral Wells and Herbert Smith, 21, of Weatherford, were killed and Walter Fant, 31, of Weatherford was injured probably fatally when the automobile in which they were riding overturned on the Bankhead highway five miles west of here early today.

The two Weatherford men were returning Miss Dunn to her Mineral Wells home after a visit with friends here at the time of the accident.

The young woman was killed instantly and Smith died a few hours after the accident in a hospital here. Fant also was taken to the hospital in an unconscious condition. Physicians said he suffered a fractured skull and a broken arm. Miss Dunn's body was sent to Mineral Wells.

Fant was the son of W. S. Fant, president of the First National bank of Weatherford and manager of the Hotel Parker. The other two victims also were members of prominent families.

The accident occurred near the scene of a similar one two years ago in which two Mineral Wells people were killed.

The Rev. D. R. Lindley, pastor of the First Christian church, will conduct the funeral service of Herbert Smith, Weatherford youth, killed in a crash between Mineral Wells and Weatherford Thursday night.

The rites will be held Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Christian church at Weatherford. Rev. Mr. Lindley was formerly pastor of the Weatherford church.

Walter Fant Jr., son of a prominent Weatherford family, who is believed fatally injured, brought back to the United States from France one of the most brilliant war records.

At 19 he was a captain and received service medals and awards from the United States, Belgium, France and England, according to local acquaintances.

Fred Burke Sought In Kidnaping Case

CHICAGO, Sept. 5 (AP)—The much hunted Fred Burke, wanted for many murders, was sought anew today as the kidnaper of Harold Cusack of Brighton Park.

Cusack, held prisoner several days, was reported today to have won his liberty by the payment of $10,000 ransom.

Girl Dies at McCamey Following Fatal Shot

McCAMEY, Texas, Sept. 5 (AP)—J. L. Pitts Jr., 12, last night accidentally shot and killed his sister, Nellie, 10, with a 22-caliber rifle he thought was unloaded as the two were playing at their ranch home near Buena Vista. The girl was taken 35 miles to McCamey, where she died about 9 p. m. The bullet entered her abdomen and lodged in the spinal column. Surviving are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Pitts, and another brother.

Howard County Car Registration High

AUSTIN, Sept. 5.—Howard county registered within less than 600 of as many cars during the first six months of this year as it did during all of 1929, records of the state highway department show.

For the first half of this year the county registered 6808 motor vehicles, while its total for all of last year was 7333.

TO CAP WELL

BEAUMONT, Tex., Sept. 5 (AP)—Special machinery was being manufactured here today for use in attempting to tame the Yount Lee Oil Company's Moore's Bluff No. 3, in the West Dayton field, 50 miles west of here. The gasser blew in Monday with a terrific roar from a depth of 7,000 feet and has been making about 100,000,000 cubic feet of gas since that time. Little progress was made yesterday toward capping it but officials believed the crew of 15 or 20 men would be able to accomplish their purpose in two days.

SEEKS JUDGMENT

Rix Furniture Co. has filed suit in county court against W. L. Tucker, asking judgment in the amount of $369.92.

It is alleged this is due on furniture purchased by Tucker.

The Store That Quality Built
307 Main

We, the Ranger Bulldogs got only gentle methods of teaching the jump on the district. Thursday afternoon—in order to be sure of earning that great title of having played the first 1930 football game—the Doggies and Gorman had a little set-to at Ranger, the Maroon gang copping the fray 19-0. Ranger, up to its usual height of hand tricks, set the game for this afternoon, and moved it up a notch and played it Thursday. Which wasn't treating the fans of other towns very nice. After this when Ranger plays a game it will be necessary for the fans to go over and spend the week in order to be there when they decide to play the tilt. Gorman, as usual, bit the dust at the hands of the City of Flowing Gold squad. Such notables as Chuck Luck Bird, Dangerous Dan McCarthy and Arkansas McLaughlin, galloped around the gridiron and everyone had a good time in general. Incidentally we're glad the question about Bird is settled. Mineral Wells will see their loss this year. Last winter we did everything but tie Bird to East Mountain to keep him down at the water hole. Even went so far as to get him his old job back, almost, of running an elevator. However the building which house the elevator shut down, and if there is anything that doesn't pay dividends it is running an elevator in a closed building. So Bird will be seen in a Ranger uniform. Just another one of those imported football players that always seem to find their way to the kennels of the Bulldogs.

Incidentally Cisco is scheduled to battle Gorman. If Gorman knows Cisco, Gorman will label all her football players and call the roll after each quarter. Even so.

Red McMahan, the cherry topped half-pint who operates the press in the rear of this establishment, and who slips off down to his old home town of San Angelo every time the form turns his shoulder blades, has been talking out of school. He has trekked down to the center of activities of Tom Green county and informed one Bruce Cross that the dul note we have sounded so far regarding the Steers is a bunch of hokum, that Big Spring really has an aggregation here that looks like West Point in spring training. We are going to be compelled to go to the mat with that lad with the sunset hair and tell him a few things. First of all he should learn he is now a full-fledged resident of Big Spring and no longer carries in his clothes the aroma of sheep as he did when he first entered the portals of this corporation. After that we shall demonstrate that it is sometimes golden. Next we shall whisper in his left ear that to stray away from the home lot and visit the alien coral, telling things about us and our nation is the next thing to striking a match on a nitro-glycerine barrel. We hope we will have to em-

All hail! That great and august group known as the District Committee of the Interscholastic League gathers this afternoon at 2 o'clock for great and mighty deliberations. According to George Gentry, the generalissimo of the High School, and who leaped suddenly into the limelight of fame by being elected president of the new passe City Baseball League, declares the Supt. has gone over to represent this metropolis at the barley. Several little matters are to come up before the various school solons. As usual, we presume, newspaper men will be barred from the meeting. We may be unusually dumb, rather below the average when it comes to a mental rating, but there is one thing we've never been able to understand. And that is this: Why is it that the high school officials depend upon the newspapers to backhous impudent football games, demand up a weary scribbles to die out the dope, and keep things moving, and then turn around and nibble on the helpful hand by refusing to let the press representatives sit in on district committee sessions. The meetings are usually so secretive we often suspect the members of trading pearls or something.

This afternoon at Merrick and Bristow's baseball stadium the second game of a scheduled five match series to decide the winner of the Oilbelt League Laurels, if any, will be played. The way to reach the field is to go south on the San Angelo-Big Spring highway until you think you have passed the place, then you will be half way there. Turn to your left at the Conoco sign and go east until you reach some oilwells. Then you are nearly there, so keep going east. The game starts at 5 p. m. Magnolia took the first last Tuesday 7-4 after Guy Rainey, the be-hemoth, socked a four ply sock to drive across three ahead of him. This afternoon's tilt should prove interesting, entertaining and what not. We shall expect to find the owner of a neat little vanity left in our vehicle at the last game. If she cannot be found we shall wrap it up and send it forthwith to Hart Schaffner and Marx Hodges of the Breckenridge American.

The aforementioned Mr. Gentry also enlightened us that if we thought Dusty D. was dusty we should see the new athletic field. Rain, and a big bundle of it at that, is needed just over the viaduct. The fire truck—the big red job—went out and tried to saturate the gridiron, but we understand the city water pressure was so low it couldn't be mastered. So it looks as if we will be compelled to wait until someone turns on the heavenly waterworks and lets the spouts run full tilt. Saturday afternoon Big Spring plays McCamey, so it doesn't make much difference. Mc-

New Athletic Field Site Of Tilt

Initial 1930 Contest Is Scheduled For Three Thirty

The many pounds of assorted beef that Coaches Bill Stevens and George Brown have been putting the screws to during the past two weeks, will fly into action Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the new athletic field when they clash with McCamey.

Although the new field is not in the best of shape, the initial contest will be played on it. It has recently been constructed and final touches are yet to be added.

The Steer-McCamey tilt will be the second in this section this week. Ranger and Gorman met Thursday afternoon at Ranger, the Bulldogs grabbing the fray 19-0.

Saturday's game will be the first and the last of minor tilts. A week from tomorrow the strong Roy eleven invades this metropolis. After that comes hey-days. The District race will be formally opened Sept. 19 when Big Spring goes to Mineral Wells for the initial 1930 "games that count."

Caney is used to the whirls of dust anyway.

Boyce House of the Ranger Times has already started quarreling. For shame that such a likable fellow like him goes in so intensely for argumentation, and so forth. This time he is tangled with none other than Lord Blonde of the house of Cross, over which of the two is the most egotistical of district two sports writers. Last year House called Jinx Tucker of the Waco publications a flop eared jackal, or something to that effect, and Tucker retaliated by labeling House as a big fire horse with no fire. Such prattle by such childish men. As if Mr. House and Mr. Cross don't know there is but one honest sports writer in this section of sod. He lives about 40 miles east of Midland.

CHARLES REVIVES INDIANS' ATHLETIC FAME

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—The athletic prowess of Indians is legendary, but it took Wilson Charles, a 22-year-old Oneida, to give the legend the first concrete form. It has had since the days of Jim Thorpe.

Charles' old boy running the legs off of Jim Stewart, University of Southern California athlete, to win by 250 yards the 1,500-meter event of the decathlon at the A. A. U. championships in Pittsburgh.

The victory gave Charles 7,313.343 points, more than the total that won him third place in decathlon in the A. A. U. meet a year ago at Denver.

In the 10-event competition, Charles relies chiefly on his running ability. It is his speed that has made his versatile career possible. He is a star football, basketball and baseball player at Haskell institute here.

In the Pittsburgh decathlon, Charles, who is 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 180 pounds, ran the 100 meters in 11 1-2 seconds, the 400 meters in 4 51-10 seconds and the 1,500 meters in 4 minutes and 55 seconds.

Though John Levi gained some fame as fullback of the Haskell football team several years ago, Charles is the first Indian to show great athletic virtuosity since Thorpe faded definitely from the picture when released from the New York professional Giants football team in 1925.

The Oklahoma Sae and Fox brave leaves some high marks for his follower to shoot at. In 1912 Charles was at Stockholm, Thorpe won both the decathlon and pentathlon. As a fullback of the old Wilson "Buster" Charles, 22-year-old Oneida who captured the decathlon in the A. A. U. championships at Pittsburgh, is an all-around athlete at Haskell institute, starring at football, basketball and track.

Carlisle Indian school team, Thorpe was named for Walter Camp's All American team in 1911 and 1912. Thorpe later essayed professional baseball, and for a time was an outfielder with the New York Giants, Charles, whose home is Fland-

Cards Loom As Contender For Threat Honors

Record Of St. Louis Club Surpasses That Of Giants

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR., Associated Press Sports Writer

Except for the difficulties which the schedule has in store for them, the St. Louis Cardinals might well be considered the most serious threat to the supremacy of the Chicago Cubs in the National League instead of New York's Giants. The Cards and the Giants are tied for second place and the recent record of the St. Louis club is far more impressive but the Cards are faced with a long tour of the East while the Giants will have the advantage of playing at home most of the time.

The Cards gained their deadlock for second place yesterday by trouncing the Cincinnati Reds, 13 to 2, for their fourth straight victory and their 13th in 15 games. The Giants at the same time took a 7 to 1 beating from the Boston Braves and lost a full game in the chase for the pennant.

Since Aug. 1, the Cubs have made an upward rush that has brought them 26 victories in 35 games.

Chicago had another tough struggle with Pittsburgh but came out victorious in the tenth inning, 10 to 7, when Gabby Hartnett clouted his second home run of the game and his 31st of the season with two on base. Previously the Cubs had staged their favorite act of giving away a big lead and then overcoming it. Brooklyn and Philadelphia had another day of idleness.

The American League leaders also had to go over time to gain victory. It took the Philadelphia Athletics 15 frames to down the Boston Red Sox 8 to 7.

Washington's Senators kept pace with the champions by winning a tight game from the New York Yankees, 3 to 2, their 16th triumph over the Yanks in 20 games this season.

Cleveland retained its last mathematical chance of tying the Athletics by downing the Chicago White Sox, 3 to 2, as Willis Hudlin pitched a three-hit game. The Detroit Tigers did some effective hitting to defeat St. Louis, 8 to 4, in the fourth American League game.

Grimm got in Wednesday as a pinch batsman, and probably will be ready early next week. However, he may find it difficult to break into the front line, as Long George Kelly has been hitting a busy clip.

Oilbelt Loop Battle Today

The second of a scheduled five game series to decide the winner of the Oilbelt League, is set for 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Merrick and Bristow ball lot near Fort-

Magnolia Petroleum Co. and Merrick and Bristow, winners of the first and second halves, respectively, clash in the second tilt. In the first game of the series, played last Tuesday on the Magnolia diamond, the Mag crew cracked out a 7-4 victory over the M. & B. outfit.

Lefty Lyday, who twirled the orbit for Merrick and Bristow in the opener, and who is rated as the top-notch chunker of the Oilbelt contingent, is due to be on the slab again this eve. The Magnolia chunker had not been selected this morning.

Mrs. H. E. Autry left Wednesday to visit with relatives at various points in Arizona.

AMERICAN WINS

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 5 (AP)—America's six-man team has scored an overwhelming victory over Great Britain in the second competition for the British-American cup.

The American team won its fourth successive race of the best four-out-of-seven series in Long Island Sound yesterday. The Americans scored 20 1-4 points to 15 for the Britons and an aggregate of 89 to 55 for the entire series.

Great Britain won the inaugural series for the cup on the Clyde in 1928.

Stiff Workouts Set For Lamesa Material

LAMESA, September 5.—Stiff workouts have been on the menu of the prospective members of the 1930 high school football team this week under the direction of L. E. Gregg, assistant Coach F. T. McCollum in whipping a team into shape from a mound of green material. The rigid training will continue until the first match in the latter part of this month. Carl Viggins was elected captain of the Tornado squad and Ross Lawry was named manager for his second term. V. Z. Rogers, chairman of Class B, District football and superintendent of Lamesa's schools, McCollum and Gregg will attend the West Texas Football Conference in Lubbock Saturday, they announced. Joe Spikes may also be a representative from Lamesa in the gathering which will convene in the gymnasium of Texas Technological college at 3 o'clock.

Victor Mellinger is in St. Louis purchasing a stock of goods for his new store that will soon be opened.

Rogers Hornsby Joins Cubs After Injuries

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 5 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs today were within one man of being the team that started the season in quest of a second consecutive National League championship.

Rogers Hornsby—the Rajah himself—yesterday played his first game since his left ankle was fractured last Memorial Day, and only captain and first baseman Charlie Grimm was lacking from the band of seasoned athletes who composed the starting Cub lineup.

Hornsby demonstrated that he can still get around. He handled six chances without an error, was in the middle of one doubleplay and started another that squelched a Pirate rally. He also was the same patient Hornsby at bat, waiting out Pittsburgh hurriers for three walks.

Grimm got in Wednesday as a pinch batsman, and probably will be ready early next week. However, he may find it difficult to break into the front line, as Long George Kelly has been hitting a busy clip.

Confining Work Didn't Agree
With Him.—Black-Draught
Brought Relief.

Somerset, Ky.—"I have used Theodor's Black-Draught for twenty-five or thirty years," says Mr. W. S. Conant, of this city. "I have often been confined. I am a saddler and harness-maker, and am very closely confined. I found that I had to take something for constiveness, as I would get so tired, or have a dull feeling. After I heard of Black-Draught, and began taking it, I avoided this trouble, and am now in good condition."

"I take Black-Draught in small doses, and it is most satisfactory. I feel better after using it. I have recommended it to my friends."

Theodor's Black-Draught is prepared from medicinal herbs and roots, of highest quality, finely powdered, carefully combined and packaged by automatic machinery. This well-known medicine has been in use nearly 100 years, and its popularity is constantly increasing, as growing sales clearly prove.

First Meeting, Plans Are to Install Cafeteria SoonProgram For the Year Is Presented to Large Group
Of Mothers: Mrs. Showalter Makes Health Talk

The South Ward Parent-Teacher's association opened its first fall meeting yesterday afternoon with over fifty mothers present.

The attitude of all of the mothers, said Mrs. Bernard Fisher, president of the organization, was one of confidence and enthusiasm.

The chief project of the organization this year will be the installation of a cafeteria so that the children will get at least one hot dish for their mid-day meal.

Mrs. Fisher stated that the women would bend every effort to realize this necessary project.

The Children's Health

Mrs. M. R. Showalter talked to the mothers on the subject of their children's health. She stated that an arrangement had been made with local dentists for a one dollar reduction on dental work for children who present a slip filled out either by their teacher or by Mrs. Showalter.

She stated also that the South Ward had more children immunized against diphtheria than any other school in the county.

Mrs. Showalter outlined her plans for the year and told the group of the exhibition to be put on at the County Fair in October by the Junior Health Clubs.

Hospitality Committee

Seven women were appointed by Mrs. Fisher to serve on the hospitality committee. They will meet the mothers when they arrive. They are: Mesdames Harry Lees, H. I. Stahlman, L. M. Gary, Ben Lovelace, A. S. Woods, Clarence Shive and Garland Woodward.

Mrs. Lee Weathers gave a reading at the close of Mrs. Showalter's health talk.

It was decided that the room which has the most mothers enrolled during the membership drive will be presented with a potted plant.

At the regular meetings the room with the most mothers present will receive the "hospitality package" to be opened the morning following the meeting by the room. Mrs. Smith's room won this week.

Set On Books

The P. T. A. presented the school with a set of four Wondersworth books to add to the library.

The announcement was made that thirteen children had been examined during the summer health-up.

Yearly Program

Under the direction of Mrs. V. H. Fleweller, the program committee presented the following program for the coming year:

September
Reading: Mrs. Lee Weathers
Health Talk: Mrs. Showalter

October
Fire Prevention Week
Talk on Fire Prevention: Mrs. Smith

Hints For Homemakers
By Jane Rogers

If your pancakes have a tendency to stick to the griddle, try rubbing it with the cut side of a raw potato instead of greasing it. This will usually prevent sticking even when grease consistently fails.

The art of seasoning lies in blending and developing the flavors of the main ingredients; never in smothering them out of all recognition. A small amount of sugar, for instance, is frequently used in the preparation of meat and fish sauces; not to sweeten, but to point up and harmonize the flavors of the fish or meat, and the other ingredients of the sauce.

FORREST APPLETON

Forrest Appleton has a Frenchman's gift of culinary skill. He bakes the best angel food cakes your humble reporter has ever eaten. As light and soft as the proverbial feather, they melt away in your mouth like the cotton candy they leave you with your will strong and your digestion whole.

Forrest has been making cakes for years. He lives out in Vincent and when he isn't making cakes he is out in the cotton fields fighting the leaf worms.

After he makes his cakes his mother brings them into Big Spring to dispose of. They are large and lovely and she has little trouble selling them. Un-iced they sell for $1.00 and iced they sell for $1.50. Mrs. Louie Allgood at 1135 will take orders for Mrs. Appleton.

King Charles II Once Knighted The Lowly Loin Of Beef, Making It
Always Known As 'Sir' Loin of Beef

Many and varied have been the items offered to an epicurean palate as delicacies beyond price. Some of these have achieved more or less extended popularity. Pate de foie gras and truffles, have long been heralded as menu items supreme. It was natural that Pate de foie gras should carry a German label of origin, although the name is French. In Germany, the lowly goose reaches his highest development as a table delicacy. In the valleys around Strassburg, Germany, the fields are white with geese ready to be taken to the pen, where, shut off from water, and through intensive feeding, an enlargement of the liver is secured, free from strong taint or toughness, which provides the background for a world wide delicacy.

Truffles
Truffles are hunted industriously in the leafy asides of the German forests, with the aid of hogs, specially trained for the purpose. They locate the truffles and root them out for their masters. In America Terrapin a la Maryland, has been renowned since anti-bellum days. Frogs of Alsace furnished an entire nation with a characterizing epithet, for who has not heard of "frog eaters," referring to the French.

On the other hand, so common an item as loin of beef, when attractively served to Charles II of England, inspired his Royal Majesty to such a peak of appreciation, that he declared such a dish worthy of membership in the nobility, and knighted it—declaring in the future it should be referred to as Sirloin of Beef.

Hamburgers

Peculiar sausage combinations of two German cities, that at one time were considered more or less rare, have become household words in America—Frankfurter and Hamburger. Southern biscuits, Vermont maple syrup, and corn dodger of the middle West, are delicacies equally as intriguing to the appetite as Russian caviar, although their background may not be quite so distinguished. Two distinctive American contributions to the culinary vegetable group, the tomato and Irish potato—both are susceptible to scores of intriguing recipes of preparation.

The housewife who confronts the eternal question of "what shall I serve today," need only increase her repertoire of recipes without considering it necessary to stock in her pantry items which she realizes are beyond the family purse.

Mrs. Leona Rusk Ihrig, famous home economist and lecturer on cookery, who will appear in Big Spring, September 16-19, as the result of the intensive efforts of the Herald, is a strong exponent of a more thorough understanding of the possibilities in the simpler and cheaper items of diet. Approaching her subject with the confidence of a recognized master, she will explain to the throngs of women who attend her free lectures at the high school auditorium the methods and means by which they may transform an otherwise soggy meal in to a delectable group of appetizing and captivating dishes, without adding one extra penny to the cost.

The hundreds of startling and amazing suggestions she will make regarding the preparation of new dishes, as well as old dishes in a new way, will prove a revelation to her listeners.

Model Kitchen
Presiding at a model kitchen, which will be installed for her use, the actual and practical demonstration of the preparation of meals by this nationally known expert, will bear a far reaching influence in Big Spring and trade territory.

Knowledge of how to cook and what to cook, is an exact and recognized science, closely related to a happier life and longer life, declares Mrs. Ihrig. "There are reasons why a meal is unsatisfactory, as well as why it is appetizing. The theme of my lectures is to demonstrate by simple, practical solutions the problem of serving varied and tasteful meals without increasing the expenditure for food."

The Herald wishes to warn its women readers of the necessity of planning in advance to attend all of these lectures, since they constitute a logical series of developments on a program basis worked out as units. The hundreds of thousands of happy housewives over the United States that attest to Mrs. Ihrig's wonderful assistance, form a remarkable background as a testimonial to this charming woman who is devoting her life toward aiding in the solution of culinary problems.

The Herald feels that Big Spring is to be congratulated on being able to secure Mrs. Ihrig, and extend

The attendance of last year's Herald Cooking school reached the total number of 1617.

This year, with Leona Rusk Ihrig as lecturer, we expect that there will be almost twice that many in attendance.

The school will be held at the high school in the auditorium, an open, light and airy room, large enough to hold a record crowd.

What Mrs. Ihrig will teach you will bear out our feeble attempt with this column and this page.

This week's prize offers will be for roast recipes. Now that school is starting again the children must have their roasts and steaks—mere sandwiches and salads will not do them when they

London Fire Damage Mounts To Millions

LONDON, Sept. 5 (AP)—London's largest fire in many years, that which swept through a section of Wapping, east end district yesterday, has left in its wake damage estimated by the authorities at fully $5,000,000.

About 2,000 persons who were driven out of their homes today sought shelter in what was left of their dwellings or neighboring quarters.

London was amazed at the intensity of the fire fighting facilities mobilized for the conflagration, seeing for the first time the crews of seventy-five fire companies in action handling ten miles of hose.

One of the most serious obstacles was formed by a veritable rain of coals from a six-story warehouse. The beams filled the streets and firemen floundered ankle deep in the slippery mess.

One hundred thousand excited persons gathered around the police cordons which enclosed the fire area. They watched with keenest interest the efforts which prevented spread of the flames to a huge gas plant close to the rim of the fire.

Two huge warehouses and a few smaller buildings were destroyed and many other buildings damaged.

Active Volcano Found Near Brownsville, Texas

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 5 (AP)—Dispatches from Ciudad Victoria, in the state of Tamaulipas, today said an active volcano had been discovered near Aldama, about 200 miles south-west of Brownsville, Texas. The discoveries said the crater was in an unsettled mountain area.

Coste—

The big crowd that had waited most of them since before daylight anticipating an early departure. They went immediately to the hangar to see about the plane.

Mayor Dan Kennan of Okmulgee, Okla., made his way to Captain Coste and presented an invitation in French requesting the flyers to attend the state American Legion convention there. Rene Racover, American representative of Coste and Bellonte, said they would probably not be able to accept.

One hundred gallons of gasoline were ordered pumped into the tank.

Coste and Bellonte, perspiring freely in the hot mid-day Texas sun that was bearing down steadily, inspected the strainer and funnel closely.

"Oh, that's good; very good," Coste said in broken English after he had examined each.

Into Cockpit

Bellonte pulled his coat off and hopped up into the cockpit. He was first in one and then in the other, skipping to and from like a cat. Coste gave instructions as the plane was moved from the hangar into the field at 10:30 for servicing.

Police seemed in better control of the crowd than was the case yesterday and photographers and movie cameras seemed to be doing some business.

Racover said the Question Mark would take its time on the trip to Louisville.

"We want to take a good look," he said.

While the gasoline was being put aboard, Coste climbed to his cockpit and sat there leisurely drinking iced gingerale, consuming three glasses.

Previously, George (Jimmie) Smith, personal representative of Colonel William E. Easterwood, who offered $25,000 for a flight such as Coste and Bellonte terminated here yesterday, had posed with the fliers before picture cameras, the three chewing gum. Easterwood is a chewing gum distributor.

As the gasoline pumps continued to work Coste was kept busy affixing.

WAS SLAVE TO LAXATIVES

If you have constipation, read this letter from Mr. John J. Mulligan, 300 So. Cicero Avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

"I tried numerous remedies in vain. Finally in desperation, I turned to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. The results were remarkable. In fact the next day long-hoped-for relief became a happy reality."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is now improved in texture and taste. As good to eat as it is healthful.

ing his autograph to eager passers-up to him by women and children, the stream seeking this form of souvenir increasing steadily. The flyer's disposition was not ruffled by the demand and policemen looked on without interfering with the groups that approached the plane.

The latest weather report, said there were scattered thunderstorms along the border of the route to Louisville, but the weather was favorable on the line the Question Mark proposed to fly.

Difficulty was experienced in turning the propeller over and it was indicated the start might be delayed for an indefinite period.

Coste had put his silk muffler around his neck and donned his helmet in the forward cockpit. Bellonte was directing the ground crew in its effort to start the motor.

The big red plane with a white "Z" as its insignia, needed little attention for the latest flight. Guards at the hangar said it had not been touched by mechanics since it hit the field.

Southern Air Transport officials sent a call for more policemen as the crowd continued to grow, hampering somewhat movement of passenger planes and other commercial ships that use this port.

The United States weather bureau reported the proposed route to Louisville partly cloudy as far as Memphis, Tenn., with surface winds from the east and northeast in Arkansas and western Tennessee.

Shortly after arrival here, Rene Racover, business manager for the fliers, announced Capt. Coste and Bellonte would shortly tour the United States over the same route followed by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh on his historic good-will flight. The flight, it was said, would be a good-will gesture from the people of France to the people of the United States, and would occupy about 40 days. It was not stated when it would begin.

As Capt. Coste shut off the ignition upon arrival late yesterday and raised himself to the back of the seat, peering out over the throngs with tired eyes, there was a rush from the sidelines and police, guardsmen, newspapermen and photographers and spectators, including many women, were mixed in a milling, frantic mass of humanity.

There were cheers roared out from thousands of the crowd, cheers of "Hoorsay for Coste and Bellonte," the shrieking of automobile horns and the loud, excited shouts by policemen and National Guard officers.

Hundreds pressed forward, laughing, joyfully anxious to welcome the famous airmen, and they were met by the struggling police and guardsmen. Before the guns of the guardmen, held in two hands and rammed against men and women, and the waving of bills of the police, who hurled some persons to the ground, the throngs retreated but the crush of other thousands pushed them forward again. National guard officers ordered several cavalrymen to ride their horses into the crowd, and when the horses reared they were slapped on the haunches to make them spring forward. A small boy was knocked from his feet and dragged up again by spectators near him. Men and women were stepped upon by horses and buried aside by the frightened animals. Several photographers were knocked down and lost their shots, and one was badly beaten. Newspapermen were helpless in the confusion.

Police Chief Claude Trammel, informed of accusations that photographers had been attacked and others roughly handled, said he had issued no orders affecting photographers and he would deal with any policeman whose name was given him. The photographers were unable to name the men who attacked them.

Meanwhile, Coste and Bellonte alighted and were surrounded by police and guardsmen, who forced a lane through the throngs 200 feet to the administration building, where a reception committee awaited the doors as hundreds tried to force their way inside to attend the ceremonies, and newspapermen and photographers obtained entrance only with the greatest difficulty.

The fliers were whisked upstairs, and guards at all doors and on the stairways kept the spectators back. Before a microphone, Coste and Bellonte made short talks, expressing appreciation for the welcome accorded them. They spoke in French, and a short translation was given.

Then at the head of a line of automobiles, the fliers were driven to the business section, seven miles distant, through banks of cheering spectators. Coste and Bellonte sat on the folded top of a touring car and waved and grinned. There were those who said Colonel Lindbergh did not receive a warmer welcome in Dallas when he came to the city on his good-will tour. Even after the fliers were in the hotel, in the personal suite of Colonel Easterwood, the crowds were not satisfied, but milled excitedly about the lobby.

The utmost in flavor and aroma comes to you in Hills Bros Coffee

FRESH from the original vacuum pack. EASILY opened with the key. LOOK for the Arab on the can.

Every doughnut turns out "perfect" when only a few are cooked at a time. Every berry of Hills Bros. Coffee is roasted evenly by roasting only a few pounds at a time.

HILLS BROS.' patented, continuous process—Controlled Roasting—has a definite advantage over any bulk-roasting method in that it prevents variation in flavor. What's more, the flavor which is developed in the famous blend has a richness that you won't find in any other coffee.

This rare coffee, so abundant in distinctive flavor and aroma, is sealed in vacuum tins as fast as it comes from the roasters. Air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is completely removed at the time of packing and kept out by this vacuum pack. So-called air-tight tins cannot keep coffee fresh.

Don't let another day go by without trying Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab on the can. Sold by grocers everywhere.

The History of Steel

AMERICAN history is usually written around the careers of certain famous men. Study the biographies of such men as Washington, Lincoln and Roosevelt and you will have a very fair notion of the things that have happened in your country's life.

There is another method of approach, however, that has not been exploited yet. By tracing the development of certain industries you could do the same thing in quite as interesting a way—and, at the same time, turn up a lot of facts that the traditional method overlooks.

This thought is provoked by Samuel Crowther's remark, in the current issue of Worlds magazine, that sometime during the present year this country produced its billionth ton of finished steel.

The remark becomes more stimulating when Mr. Crowther goes on to say that it has taken since 1810 to make that much steel, but that more than half of the total has been accounted for during the past 12 years.

Trace the history of steel production, from the making of that first ton back in 1810 to the present day, and you would have a very fair picture of the development of the nation.

At the beginning you would see a thinly-settled agricultural land struggling painfully to industrialize itself. You would see it using foreign capital to do it, dotting the eastern landscape with small mills, slowly pushing its way west as the tremendous iron deposits of Michigan and Minnesota began to come into use. You would see the emergence of great industrialists, and as the industry grew to greater dimensions the influence of the financier and the promoter on the country's industrial life would become clear.

The history would explain the development of Pittsburgh, of Gary, of the Mahoning Valley of Great Lakes transportation. It would give a picture of the industrial renaissance in the "new south" around Birmingham. A thoroughgoing discussion of "Pittsburgh plus" would contain many significant facts affecting all the rest of the nation.

So, too, would the story of the last dozen years, when more steel was produced than during the entire preceding century. To explain the reasons for that amazing increase in production, the historian would have to enlarge on the new uses for steel—the automobile, the skyscraper and so on. He would come down to the present great development of the steel pipe business, which will have a very profound influence on American life during the next few decades.

All in all, a history of steel would be a very fair history of America. It might miss some of the battles and some of the "statesmen," but it would give us most of the essentials.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

Proration By Agreement

Brownwood Bulletin:
THIS question is raised in The San Angelo Morning Times. "Now that they are prorating oil to 'avoid waste' or overproduction against an unsatisfactory market, some of the people who fought to limit cotton production are asking why it is that their proposal was ruled to be unconstitutional, illegal and void, if the state can do the same thing with oil."
The answer is that proration of oil production is being accomplished primarily by agreement on the part of producers, who recognize the urgent necessity of protecting their own interests by maintaining production at a level somewhere near that of the active demand.

The state enters into the program of oil chiefly in the role of agent for the producers, and as such acts with an authority that has not been seriously challenged, although from a legal standpoint it seems to be a somewhat doubtful authority. The successful operation of the recently enacted pipeline law depends upon proration of production, and authority to maintain proration is given the Railroad Commission under that law. This phase of the pipeline law is thought by many to be unconstitutional, and the courts of last resort may be asked to decide that issue some day, but under the conditions now prevailing in the petroleum markets it is not to the advantage of any producer to complain against the principle of proration so long as it is equitably applied; and in working out its proration programs the Railroad Commission has advised with the producers and has left much of the details of the work in their hands.

If by any chance the major companies should refuse to obey the proration schedules fixed by the Railroad Commission, then the independents would also revolt; or if independents should attempt to violate the proration program, then the majors would throw open the rushers they control and rush all their oil to the markets. But such a step on the part of either would be so decidedly foolish under present conditions that there seems to be no likelihood that it will be taken.

Cotton producers have not displayed the wisdom of the oil producers, principally because there are thousands of cotton producers for each oil producer and it is impossible to bring all of them into agreement for their mutual protection. Another reason for the failure of plans to restrict cotton production is that the yield per acre and not the total acreage is the basis of production; and the yield per acre is influenced by many agencies which are not under the control of the farmer. Hence, even if all the farmers should agree to acreage reduction, there might be an overproduction of cotton and a ruinous market, just as there would be overproduction of oil if proration were based upon the number of wells rather than upon the production of crude oil.

No matter how one looks at the case, the farmers' position looks less favorable than does that of any other industrialist.

HOW'S your HEALTH?

By Dr. J. H. Giddens, D.D.S., D.M.D., D.P.H.

Position of Sleep
"What side is the best to sleep on?" is a question the physician is frequently asked.
People have the impression that one position is better than another, and that some postures are to be avoided.

The most universally objected to position is on the left side.
You will be told that it interferes with the circulation of the blood and the free action of the heart. Or again, you will be told that this position places a strain on the stomach, and brings about a congestion of the left half of the brain.

A search through medical literature shows, however, that there are as many opponents to one, as to any other sleeping posture, and that, in fact, relatively little of a convincing nature is known on the so-called normal, or best, posture.

Recently, however, an interesting contribution to this matter was reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association by Johnson, Swan and Weiland.

These scientists studied the various postures which normal persons take during normal sleep.
By using motion-pictures, electrical timing-clocks, etc., they were able to secure a record of the different positions assumed and of the time duration during which these postures were held.

The conclusions drawn are that the healthy sleeper does not prefer any one position to the exclusion of all the others.

On the contrary, the healthy sleeper, in the course of a typical night of eight hours, changes from one position to another from 20 to 45 times.

The larger number of positions are maintained for but a few minutes, and the average sleeper holds no more than one posture for an hour at a time.

HOLLYWOOD Movie odds and ends and oddities:
Arthur Casca: incurable wisecracker of the movie gang, has taken up polo but can't use polo ponies. Weighing 220 pounds, he has four "polo ponies" that can stand the punishment better.

Even in deserts and mountains where nature doesn't give a rap for grease paint, the outdoor movie actor is getting an even break with his fellows on the lots.

Raoul Walsh chanced to tell Joseph Kelly, the studio "director of public safety," of his troubles in getting players made up properly on location, and Joe got an idea.

Now a traveling dressing room equipped with studio conveniences including electricity and ice water follows the troupe into the wide drawn by a coupe, it goes anywhere the car can.

But "There's a tear for every smile in Hollywood," sang Blanche Sweet in "Show Girl in Hollywood," in her role of the passe movie star. Composers of the sadder ditties were song-writers, now gone back to Tin Pan Alley.

WISE

Noah Beery will not make speeches at banquets or talk over the radio. He cannot talk extemporaneously and prefers not to try.

Signs of the movie times: A studio bought a Broadway musical comedy hit for production as a musical special. On second thought they're leaving out the songs entirely and making "Fifty Million Frenchmen" stand up on its story alone.

Harry Green soon will produce his own pictures. The comedian wanted his studio to buy him a certain story, one with an unhappy ending and on its refusal, Green gave notice and bought it himself. DAGGER by Mary Dahlberg ong," the Tu-chun remarked philosophically. "What are a few weeks more? If it is fated that you will find him, you will find him. If it is fated that he will love you, he will love you. If fate wills neither . . . the narrow eyes flashed—"remember Chang has a destiny for you. No mean one."

Dagger could only look at him reproachfully, and he shrugged again. "A man takes what he can, my dear lady," he said. "Do not be so disturbed. And by the way, treasure that lucky-piece I first sent you. It enjoys a notable luck. I ever one thinks right. In India Gulum Buk, Buddhist priest, declares happiness lies in forgetfulness of self. Chang Kai Shoo, Chinese war lord, preaches the doctrine that might makes right. He shows unusual interest in his capital out of curiosity. One day he invites her to his palace to dine alone with him. There he asks her to become his wife, but she refuses. Then he tells her that Elaine Howard is alive."

Chapter 36
RISEN FROM THE DEAD
Dagger huddled down in her chair, crushed, unbelieving, at Chang's startling words. Two swift steps, and Chang was beside her. "Drink this," he commanded, and she obeyed him.

A moment, and her faintness had passed. "Do you mean that, General?" she pleaded. "Yes, he was with me until a few weeks ago. He escaped out of Siberia through Siberia. One of my patrons on the Mongolian border found him, delicious, starving. Fortunately, the officer in command knew him. After he had recovered sufficiently he was brought to my camp, and told me his story. He had been unhappy, and when he was taken prisoner by the Germans he decided to 'die.' He exchanged identification papers with a dead man, and became that man. After the German revolution he escaped into Russia. But that is a long story, which he can tell you, himself perhaps."

"If I ever find him," cried Dagger, "Why didn't you tell me this before?" Chang's eyes chilled. "A man must fight for his own hand," he returned implacably. "You had believed him dead. For all I know he may have ceased to love you—if he ever did."

"He never spoke of me?" she inquired pitiously.

"He spoke of a wife who did not love him, and of his unhappiness. He read in a newspaper that his wife had married another man, and said that at last fate was on his side. He was dead, and he would remain dead."

Dagger shivered. To have come so close! And then have missed. But instantly her thoughts returned to the practical. "Where is he?" she demanded. "Where has he gone?"

The Tu-chun shrugged his shoulders. "To his own country. A man is happier with his own people, even if he be 'dead.'"

"If you had told me that the first day," she rebuked Chang. "By now I might be close to him."

"You have searched for him rejoined. "In a selfish sense, of course. But one must think of himself. Goodnight, Mrs. Vanering. I am afraid my wives will be very curious about you."

When she left Sung-fu Dagger had no definite plan for her future, save that she must reach America as quickly as possible; but on the journey she developed a nostalgia for the Texas plains and the Figure 2.

Practically, she told herself, she required a jumping-off place for the next stage of her search for Blaine. He would scarcely go to New York, if he wished to be considered dead. No, the probability was that he'd bury himself in some out-of-the-way hole, where he could lose his identity and build his life anew.

She was first on the car platform when El Paso at last loomed in the distance behind a welter of tanks and signal towers.

There was Uncle Jim, squinting anxiously from beside a new car. And McCarthy—bless his heart!—McCarthy at the wheel, eying the descending passengers no less interestedly. Dagger walked straight up to them.

"Don't you know me, Uncle Jim?" she demanded. "Mac, you chump! Don't you know me?"

Jim Marley let out something between a yelp and a curse. "What's the matter?" protested Dagger, almost in tears. "Am I changed so?"

"Changed?" gasped her uncle. "Yew've don't growed up!"

McCarthy, grinning foolishly, had snatched off his hat, and scrambled to the ground.

"What have you done with yourself, Dagger?" he asked. "Yew look like one of these here ladies in the Sunday papers. I never see such clothes—outside of a film picture."

"But clothes haven't anything to do with me," she answered. "I'm just the same."

Jim Marley put his two hands on her shoulders and held her off, so that he could peer down into her eyes.

"No, yew ain't just the same, Dagger," he denied. "Yew've don't growed a heap. Grown up, like I said. Too bad, but I reckon once yew got to be a woman yew couldn't help it."

"How's the ranch?" she inquired idly. "Pretty good. Might have more water, but the steers are holdin' up—if we can get a decent beef price. But that ain't so much money into cattle these days. Seems like people were eatin' greens 'stead of meat." He paused. Got a new foreman?

"How's that?" asked Dagger. "Do I know him?"

"Ain't had a dependable foreman since Dick went," her uncle replied. "All of 'em too young or careless."

"How's the new man?" "Fair. Got a heap to learn, but his heart's in his work." And when Dagger started to ask for more information, "Come on, Mac, let's get goin'."

"But what's the hurry? I want to see everything."

"I reckon yew'll have time aplenty for such things," returned her uncle. "Right now, I want to make Casa Blanca afore sundown. Yew see, Dagger—" he hesitated—"these roads are hell. Much as yore life is worth to tackle some of 'em in the dark."

Dagger was puzzled, but amenable, regarding, with a degree of amusement, the speed which McCarthy rang up on the dashboard. "You never used to drive like this, Uncle Jim," she observed.

Jim Marley removed his hat, and

KILLED AT SWEETWATER
SWEETWATER, Sept. 5. (AP)—Public funds were being raised here today to send to his mother the body of Sylvester Mitten, twenty-year-old youth of McAlester, Okla., who fell to his death under the wheels of an oil tank car in the Texas & Pacific freight yards here Wednesday afternoon.

Last night's reports gave the victim's name as T. J. Kilgore, but a message from his mother, Mrs. T. J. Kilgore, from McAlester, said he was Sylvester Mitten. She wired she did not have funds for sending her son's body home.

A German city has placed in service a single deck steel car 45 feet long that can seat 117 passengers.

Wiped a moist forehead. "Wa-all, we got to git thar," he offered mildly. "See them steers, Dagger? Not so bad for a dry summer, huh?"

"That foreman must know his business," she remarked. "Him?" snorted Jim Marley. "Wall, I ain't claimin' he's a fool, but yew might give me credit for knowin' my own ranch."

They sped past the water-tank, and rounded to in front of Casa Blanca with a resounding blast of the horn—and scores of friendly faces, weather-tanned, dusky, Indian-red, crowded about them. "Mees Dagger!" "Howdy, Dagger!"

Her eyes were damp as she was half lifted, half-pulled, from the car. She wasn't sorry when her uncle dragged her in the house door, calling over his shoulder: She'll stay with us a piece, now. Yew'll see.

Final Contests Of Play-Off Set For Wichita Falls

BY GAYLE TALBOT, JR., Associated Press Sports Writer. Texas League tradition that a first-half champion never been beaten in a play-off with Wichita Falls when they meet Fort Worth in the first of game series next Wednesday night.

In addition to that psychological advantage, the Oilers will play the two games of the saw-off on home grounds, where they have been beaten to all opposition. Notoriously long hitters, Williams can deal enemy misery in their small park, an almost constant breeze home plate wafts high flies to the ballustrades.

For the two opening bouts at Wichita Falls, however, the advantage will rest with the winners of current race. Resting Friday, two clubs will move to Fort Worth for the concluding game series, starting Saturday. The Oilers win three decisions in the Southern Association play-off, almost certain to be the Dixie series.

One of the title contenders in their concluding series is the Oilers. With the second already sewed up, the Oilers used two fingers to win a radical contest, 10 to 7. Jack McCabe had held the Oilers to one run for five frames, relieved by Terry, a rookie, who hit six more in the eighth. McCabe's great showing made him want to start one game of off.

Until the winning days season to get hot, the San Antonio Indians won their sixth at the expense of Waco, who Cottey limited the Cubs to scattered knocks. Morrell outpitched Walt Taus, the Shreveport Sports. Dallas, 9 to 3, to start their series. A homer by Hugh Wilcox for the Steers featured

PRODUCES RAINFALL

SA. (INS)—There hadn't any rainfall in about two weeks, so Lamesa residents hurried and hurried to read morning paper that a local offered a special sale of all mud chains. There were few sales, but the professed satisfaction. Very next day a torrential luck Lamesa, converting the mud. "Which proves," the merchant, "the value of mud, not to mention the reason why achieve if one as the correct mental attitude."

IN NEW YORK JUDICIAL INQUIRY

Governor Roosevelt has ordered a state investigation of charges that New York City Magistrate George F. Ewald (left) paid $10,000 for his appointment to the bench. He placed Attorney General Hamilton Ward (upper right) in charge of inquiry and instructed Justice Philip J. McCook (lower right) to convene special term of state supreme court to consider case.

Jack Thompson Defends Welter Title Tonight At Cleveland Park

BY CHARLES W. DUNKLEY, Associated Press Sports Writer. CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 5 (AP)—Young Jack Thompson, world's welterweight champion, risks his title tonight for the first time since he won it from Jackie Fielda four months ago. He will meet Tommy Freeman, Cleveland challenger, in a 15-round contest to a referee's decision in the Cleveland American League baseball park.

The match will be fought at the welterweight limit of 147 pounds. Indications were that both Thompson and his challenger would easily make the weight. The champion figures to scale around 144 pounds, with Freeman tipping the beam at 146 pounds when they appear before the Cleveland boxing commission.

Freeman defeated Thompson last January, before Thompson won the title, but in that engagement the Cleveland welterweight had a weight advantage of six pounds. He scaled 152 pounds, which enabled him to retain his full fighting frame down to the welterweight limit would impair his fighting ability tonight was a question that caused his handlers to worry.

Four Texans Remain In Oklahoma Tourney

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 5 (AP)—Four Texans met today to fight it out in the semi-finals of the Southwest amateur golf tournament over the Nichols Hills course here.

The Texans yesterday eliminated the last of the Oklahomans in the race. Today Tommy Cochran of Wichita Falls was playing Dennis Lavender of Abilene and Bob McKinney of Del Rio was matching strokes with Byron Nelson of Fort Worth in 36-hole fights for the final positions. The finals will be played tomorrow. Lavender yesterday entered the

AMERICAN POLA TEAM FAVORED OVER BRITISH

By HERBERT W. BARKER, Associated Press Sports Writer. NEW YORK, Sept. 5 (AP)—The battle for a 44-year-old cup and world polo supremacy begins on Meadow Brook Club's international field, Westbury, Long Island, tomorrow with Tommy Hitchcock's American four favored to beat back Great Britain's challenge for the third successive time.

Close to 40,000 spectators are expected to witness the opening match of the series for the Westchester Cup, first up for competition in 1886. Although Great Britain won the first series and the next one in 1902, the United States leads six victories to three. England won in 1914 while the United States, regaining the cup in 1921, successfully defended it in 1924 and 1927.

Unless all signs fail, the contenders will ride like this: America, Pos. Great Britain, No. 1. Eric Pedley, Gerald Balding, No. 2. Earle Hopping, Lewis L. Lacey, No. 3. Tommy Hitchcock Capt., Roark Back, Winston Guest, Lieut. Guinness.

The United States aggregates 34 goals in handicap with Hitchcock at 10 and the others at eight each. Great Britain's team rates 33 goals with Lacey and Capt. Roark nine each; Balding eight, and Guinness seven. The match will be played on the flat, or without handicaps.

Lubbock Gin Man Says His Troubles Disappeared After Taking Argotane and He Now Feels Fine and Full Of Energy

Still another Lubbock resident gives his reason for being glad he was induced to try the remarkable medicine Argotane. Guy Young, who lives on rural route three, a well known gin man, for the Monroe Gin of Lubbock, Texas, said a few days ago:

"Before I took Argotane I felt so miserable I actually hated to try to work at all. But I'm feeling fine and full of vim now, and I'm obliged to praise Argotane as the best medicine I have ever taken. "For over a year, I suffered with kidney trouble and I reckon I had about all the tough feelings a body can have with this awful trouble. I was constipated most of the time and did not enjoy my meals as I should. My back would hurt me so bad, that often times when I would bend over it was a real effort for me to try to straighten up. It got so that I was hardly able to pick up any of the tools or anything else of any weight around the plant. In fact, I was all in and felt unfit for work."

"After taking Argotane a few days I could eat breakfast and enjoy it. Those pains in my back have disappeared and my kidneys don't bother me at all now. All my pain and nervousness is gone and I sleep like I did, when a boy. I can lift anything now and it does not hurt me and I feel fine and full of energy all the time. I can work all day and not feel tired when high noon and I have never seen such benefits in so short a time as Argotane has been to me. I already feel better than I have since my troubles began, and I'm improving every day." Genuine Argotane may be bought in Big Spring at the Collins Bros. Drug Co.—adv.

Borotra-Bell Clash Features Net Tourney

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 (AP)—The national men's singles tennis championships get under way at Forest Hills tomorrow with a first round clash between Jean Borotra of France and Berkeley Bell of Austin, Texas, expected to provide most of the fireworks.

The first day's schedule of 31 first round matches will cut the field of 95 by about one-third. The luck of the draw was all against Borotra, favored with Big Bill Tilden to reach the final round. Not only is he pitted against such a formidable first round opponent as Bell but probably will be forced to meet another "first ten" player in the second round, Fritz Kumerow of Bethlehem, Pa.

Sterling City Schools To Open September 8

STERLING CITY, Sept. 5.—Sterling City schools will open Monday, Sept. 8, according to W. L. Hardy, superintendent. Institutes will be held Thursday and Friday of this week.

Quite a lot of improvement has been done to the school building this summer. A new water system has been completed. Book shelves one new class room and rearrangement of doors and windows have been done. Plenty of play room and play ground equipment have been added.

Sterling county has only one rural school. The Divide, school which is a large community. Four years ago five rural schools consolidated with the Sterling City school. There will be 10 six-year-old students to enter at the beginning of the year.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

Answered By
Dr. S. Parkes Cadman

Questions from readers are answered daily by the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Radio Minister of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Cadman seeks to answer inquiries that appear to be representative of the trends of thought in the many letters which he receives.

Why do you support prohibition? Because I believe it is one of the greatest social experiments ever undertaken by a democracy. I agree with Mr. Laurence Abbott, for example, when he says it is a pity that so many so-called men, otherwise supporters of human progress, cannot see the social aspect of the Eighteenth Amendment, but persist in taking it as a personal affront, and therefore obstruct it in every possible way. They are willing to fight tuberculosis, hookworm, yellow fever, typhoid, and syphilis, but not alcoholism, and yet I will undertake to say that alcoholism has wrought as much mischief and death in the human race as any other habit. Human progress cannot see the social that could be named. If there is any better way of graduating this great scourge than outlawing the liquor trade I would like those who oppose it to rise up and tell us what it is.

Troy, N. Y.

Some Protestant Churches seem to teach an intermediate state, with an opportunity of spiritual change between death and the resurrection. Others seem to teach that the soul goes immediately to judgment, and thence to its eternal destiny. The Roman Catholic church teaches a period of purgatory.

Which view expresses the teaching of Christ? Our Lord did not deal specifically with this question. He taught that death is appointed unto all men, and after death, the judgment. Therein souls would find themselves or not according to their attitudes and deeds while in the body. But concerning the time of resurrection and judgment, He seems to have been silent.

The language He employed to describe these august events was largely symbolic, and wise interpreters will not force its meanings in behalf of preconceived ideas. Perhaps after studying all He utters about the reward of the righteous and the fate of the wicked we come nearest to His mind in that memorable closing interview with His disciples recorded in St. John's Gospel, chapters fourteen to sixteen.

He there tells them that He goes to prepare a place for them and that He will come again and receive them to Himself, that where He is they may also be. Theological speculations upon the future life have been numerous, but beyond the Lord's simple words and more elaborate schemes of man's forthcoming bliss or misery.

These schemes have some scriptural sanctions, and in not a few instances they shed light upon the spiritual possibilities of eternity. But while we are justified in attempting to fill the gaps which divine revelation has apparently left by design, in all such attempts the mind of the Master must prevail.

With this qualification it may be seriously questioned whether bodily death absolutely fixes character. If not, moral changes are in order beyond the grave. The soul may get better or worse as it does here. Hence the Catholic doctrine of purgatory and the Protestant suggestion of an intermediate state corresponds with this idea of man's further development. But the notion that the soul is entirely immured between bodily death and far distant resurrection is, as I see it, unintelligible and unscriptural.

Toronto, Canada.

Generally speaking, conscience is supposed to be inborn and its promptings and warnings infallible guides to our prospective actions. I have studied my six-year-old boy since his first comprehensive mental moment, and so far as I can see his mind develops and all his reactions come from environment, precept and example. Am I correct?

Yes, up to a given point. Few thinkers now suppose that children are born with an infallible knowledge of right and wrong. On the other hand they enter human life with the potential capacity to distinguish between right and wrong and to judge their actions accordingly. You could not afford to neglect and guide your boy's moral development unless he had the receptive faculty for such stimulation and training.

Conscience in him as in all of us is the expression of his moral nature. It awaits in him the best possible "environment, precept and example" and responds to their influence. A few years hence, you will find that the lad exercises his independent power of determination. He may then change his views concerning some things you have taught him. The sense of responsibility in him will deepen. He will ask himself, "What ought I to do?" In that critical phase of adolescence assumes its potential right and becomes increasingly impatient of specific advice from outsiders.

To make the most of your opportunities before the older intuitionism or current behaviorism besieges your son's heart. Teach him that his conscience testifies to the Divine Author and should be standardized by life's changeless realities. For it always speaks as Bishop Butler has told us, "in tones which indicate a higher authority than its own which will presently enforce its decrees."

THE STATE OF TEXAS

TO THE SHERIFF or any CONSTABLE OF GLASSCOCK COUNTY, GREETING:

YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED TO SUMMON Virgil I. Smith and R. W. Dickey, whose residence is unknown, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Glasscock County, Texas, to be held at the Court House thereof in Garden City, on the second Monday in November, 1930, same being the 10th day of November, 1930, then and there to answer petition filed in the said Court on the 10th day of August, 1930, the number of which is 299, in which suit the Weekly Oil Corporation as plaintiff and John Schaubauer, Charles Schauer, Addison Wadley, W. E. Wallace, Robert E. Estes, J. B. Walton, R. M. Harrold, Dora Robinson, H. P. Robbins, J. B. Tubb, Virgil I. Smith and R. W. Dickey are defendants.

The said suit being one instituted by the plaintiff for the dissolution of a joint adventure in which the defendants were co-adventurers with the plaintiff in the operation of an oil well on the East 1-2 of the Southeast 1-4 of Section 166, Block 23, Waco and Northwestern Survey in Glasscock County, Texas, and in the drilling and equipping of which plaintiff expended an advance payment to said adventure $10,275.26, and up to and including June 30, 1930, expended as an advancement $4,221.21 in the operation of said lease and production of oil therefrom, and in which suit plaintiff seeks contribution from the co-adventurers and the establishment of its debt for said advancements, and the foreclosure of lien on said oil and gas lease, and the oil well thereon located, all machinery and equipment used in connection therewith and the oil produced therefrom.

It is alleged that defendant Virgil I. Smith owns a 1-25th interest in said venture, and each of said defendants is liable for their proportionate part of said advancements. Plaintiff prays for dissolution of said venture and an accounting and establishment of plaintiff's debt, all the foreclosure of its lien and for general relief.

Herein fail not but have you before said court, on the first day of the next term thereof, this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same. Witness my hand and the seal of said Court, at Garden City, Texas, this 22nd day of August, A. D. 1930.

At Lion Luncheon

The Rev. Paul Campbell, pastor of the First Christian church, Weatherford, and who is assisting the local Christian church in a revival, was the principal speaker at today's luncheon of the Lions club, held at the Crawford Hotel.

The Rev. Mr. Campbell, accompanied by Mrs. Pittman, also gave two vocal selections.

The program was in charge of the Rev. D. R. Lindley, pastor of the First Christian church. "Youth" was the subject of the Weatherford pastor's address.

Damage Suit Sent Here For Hearing

A suit for total damages of $13,000 has been transferred to district court from Hidalgo county.

D. B. McLain, a resident of Hidalgo has filed suit against Toby Adams and Edna Rawlings of Hidalgo county, and Alvin Adams of Howard county. McLain seeks $8,000 actual and $5,000 exemplary damages.

The suit was an outgrowth of a real estate deal between the parties involving Howard and Hidalgo lands.

TEXAS ELECTRIC SERVICE COMPANY
$6 PREFERRED STOCK

WHAT IS SPECULATING?

Too many people think of speculating and gambling when INVESTING is mentioned. There is a vast difference between speculating and investing. Speculating consists of plunging in blindly and taking chances with your money—subjecting your hard earned savings to all kinds of hazards where you risk losing your money.

WHAT IS INVESTING?

The dictionary says investing means "to place money where it will be SAFE and EARN MORE MONEY." Hundreds of customers of the company and other local people have placed their savings in this Preferred Stock. There it is SAFE and every three months each stockholder knows he will receive a check from the Company for money earned by his savings INVESTED in

Easy to Sell if You Need Cash

"Is it easy to sell?" This is a most important question to bring up when you are about to invest your money. Excellent provisions have been made for such an emergency. If you ever want cash for your stock you can get it in two ways: Take the stock to your bank and get a loan on it or bring it to any office of the Texas Electric Service Company, as a Resale Department is maintained to assist and advise local stockholders who may wish to sell their shares.

Protective Rights and Safeguards for Preferred Stockholders

DIVIDENDS. The dividends (or wage earned by the money you invest in this stock) amount to $6.00 per share a year, payable every three months, $1.50 per share, on January 1, April 1, July 1 and October 1, at which time dividend checks are mailed to stockholders.

TAX FREE FEATURES. If you live in Texas you will not have to pay the present City, County and State Taxes on the money you invest in this stock. Also you will not have to pay the present normal Federal Income Tax on the income, or money you will receive as dividends, from this investment.

PREFERRED AS TO ASSETS AND DIVIDENDS. This Stock is Preferred as to assets and dividends over the Common Stock.

CUMULATIVE. This Stock is Cumulative, therefore, the Company must pay the dividends in full before one penny of dividends can be paid on the Common Stock.

FULLY PAID AND NON-ASSESSABLE. Every share of this Stock is fully paid and non-assessable.

A NEW PLAINS RAILROAD
Texas Weekly

The announcement that the Texas & Pacific Railway Company proposes to build 333 miles of new railway line, extending from Big Spring, on its main line, northward through the western Panhandle to Vega in Oklahoma County, with branches to Lubbock and to Amarillo, has been received with great enthusiasm not only in the country the proposed route traverses, but in Dallas, Fort Worth and all along the main line of the Texas & Pacific. The proposed route traverses the counties of Howard, Dawson, Terry, Hockley, Lamb, Castro, De Witt, Smith, and Oklahoma, with one branch through Lynn and Lubbock Counties, and another through Randall into Potter. The main part of the region through which it passes is virgin territory, the counties included having an area of more than eight million acres. Most of this land is not under cultivation, and the greater part of it is subject to cultivation. It is estimated that the new line will cost $13,000,000, or less than two dollars an acre of the land which would be affected. The "empire building" character of this proposed line is apparent, therefore, at once.

Some of this territory is owned by the Santa Fe, which was the pioneer line in this region, and the Fort Worth & Denver has a branch extending into Castro County. Both of these railroads, because of their lines through contiguous territories and into Lubbock and Amarillo, would be directly affected by the proposed new line and the Rock Island is also affected at Amarillo. It is probable that one or all of these roads will file protests with the Interstate Commerce Commission against the granting of a permit to the new line. That the Texas & Pacific will have the support of the people of the region traversed and the principal cities and towns touched is already indicated by enthusiastic meetings held at various points. It remains to be seen, of course, how such a contest before the Commission, if it takes place, will result.

However, the mere fact that a leading railway like the Texas & Pacific should propose to build 333 miles of new line into that territory is at once an illustration of the potential importance of the region and of the faith of J. L. Lancaster and his associates in its future. It illustrates also what an undeveloped empire Texas really is. For the past five years or more Texas has led the entire United States in railroad building, and the outlook is that it will continue to lead for several years in the future. The Texas & Pacific, like other railroads, has been investing in Texas much more than its earnings in the State, which is eloquent of the faith its directing heads have in the future of the State.

On the same day that the announcement of the proposal to build this new line was made, building permits were issued to the Texas & Pacific at Fort Worth for the construction of new passenger and freight terminals which will cost $3,000,000. And this is only a part of an $8,000,000 expansion program which the Texas & Pacific has under way at Fort Worth. The recently completed Lancaster yards in that city is one of the finest switching yards in the United States. In this way is the Texas & Pacific preparing to keep pace with the enormous development of the West Texas empire in which it proposes to play an aggressive part, as its projected expansion into this Handmade would indicate.

Added from all other aspects of the proposed new line such an announcement coming at this time ought to have a heartening effect upon all of us. It visualizes in a concrete fashion the truth which has become all too commonplace among us, that only the surface of Texas has been scratched. In any other section of the country such an announcement would be regarded as spectacular and would be heralded far and wide. It is being heralded in Texas, to be sure, but we wonder whether the significance of things of this kind is really appreciated by the great bulk of our people. With the rest of the country, we are having hard times in Texas just now. But when those who control and direct great investments of capital in the State show such faith in the future and go forward steadily making still greater investments, ought it not bring us to a realization that present conditions are only temporary, and that we have every reason to assume an attitude of determined and aggressive optimism, instead of talking calamity?

We think so. And we think also that it is time that the great bulk of our people came to realize that Texas is entering a new era in which they should assume a new attitude toward the invested capital in the State, and the new capital that is coming into the State. We have made a big start by electing a successful business man Governor, and by repudiating a kind of politics which has been all too common in Texas in the past. Let the people and their representatives in the legislature catch something

ANOTHER RAIL LINE
Mineral Wells Index:

Another railroad line has been planned for West Texas. It would traverse the plains country, one of the richest agricultural sections in the state. It would give residents of the plains overnight service to El Paso, Ft. Worth and Dallas, without a necessity of a change, in other words the new project is the Texas & Pacific Northern Railroad Company, newly chartered and affiliated with the Texas and Pacific, which has applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to construct 333 miles of lines from Big Spring north to the Panhandle.

According to the Washington story the 333 miles of rail line would run from Big Spring on the Texas & Pacific, to Vega, directly west of Amarillo with branches of 20 and 55 miles respectively from the juncture of the south boundary of Terry and Lynn Counties to Lubbock and from Dimmitt to Amarillo. Action of the I. C. C. is expected in from sixty to ninety days. Building of the road was estimated to take about two years, and the application stated that the road expected to make traffic and financial arrangements with the Texas & Pacific James Lynch Lancaster, widely known in American

Chaney Widow To Get Bulk of Actor's Estate

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 5. (AP)—Hazel G. Chaney, widow of Lon Chaney, will receive the bulk of the screen actor's $500,000 estate under a will filed for probate here yesterday.

The probate petition stated the estate consisted of $275,000 in life insurance, $15,000 in real estate and $125,000 in personal property. Mrs. Chaney was named executrix. Cleve Creighton Bush of Pasadena, Chaney's former wife, was bequeathed one dollar. The will read: "So that there may be no misunderstanding or contest of any kind whatever, I hereby give and bequeath to Cleve Creighton Bush the sum of $1 and no more."

Creighton Chaney, son by the actor's first marriage; Jony Chaney, a brother, and Carrie Keyes, a sister, had been provided for through life insurance, the will stated.

BIG SPRING, TEXAS, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1930

NUMBER 51

900 PERISH IN HURRICANE

HOME TOWN TALK

By Beddy

IT has always appeared to us that Big Spring has been one of the luckiest towns in West Texas. We have not been called upon to make the sacrifices many communities have had to bear in order to develop. Where some of our neighbors in West Texas have had to raise tens and hundreds of thousands of dollars for such things as our railroads, hotels, refineries and shops we have, more or less, had them thrust under our noses on silver platters.

We do not mean to leave the impression Big Spring has not wanted, worked for and welcomed improvements and expansions. But it is evident we have not had to dig as deeply into our pockets at times as our neighbors.

The Texas & Pacific Northern Railroad is going to cost us something. But it is not going to cost us anything for a bonus, such as many places have had to scrape up to get far less valuable rail connections.

The first words almost of Mr. Somerville, vice-president of the road, in his initial announcement of the plan to build a 333-mile system from Big Spring into the Panhandle, was that "we're not asking any town for a bonus and we're not interested in developing townships."

The request of towns along the route is that right-of-way and station sites be provided. In some instances, very likely, property owners will feel their interests would be improved by construction of the line and they will donate right-of-way. In other cases the building of this road will be a real relief to some property owners. In that case, damages will have to be paid on land sold.

Whenever the right-of-way from Big Spring to the Dawson county line, including a stretch across the northern corner of Martin county, amounts to Big Spring it is going to have to raise.

Men who know property value and who know the people of the county pretty well inform us they figure the total cost of this road to Big Spring will be in the neighborhood of $500,000, very likely more than that.

In any event, it appears very obviously that Big Spring must raise $500,000 to $750,000 to be safe.

"Can We Raise It?" is the big question many are asking.

"We've GOT to raise it," is the answer.

Not many months ago, our neighbors over in Abilene raised $400,000 for a 55-mile railroad to Cross Plains. Surely we can dig up $750,000 for 333 miles of road that would without doubt mean tremendously more to Big Spring than the 55-mile line will mean to Abilene.

It is going to be a sacrifice for many of us. No getting around that. But, it is going to be worth it.

When this fund is raised, and we are sure it will be, we predict the subscription list will be a long one. The sum will be divided among many individuals and firms of moderate means. We are not a community of many wealthy persons who always have plenty of ready money. Rather, we number in our ranks thousands of wage earners and salaried men and women who can give a little but not any large sums.

The wealthy and those just comfortably fixed must join hands with those who live solely upon salaries. Each must do his proportionate part on a basis of income and worth and also on the basis of the measure of individual benefit construction of the line would afford him.

THE mass meeting held Wednesday night by several hundred local residents in which resolutions

French Fliers Speed Toward Dallas Field

Half of Journey From New York Is Flown In Five Hours

LOVE FIELD, DALLAS, Sept. 4.—Southern Air Transport officials estimated at 2 o'clock this afternoon that the French fliers, Captain Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, would arrive here at 3:15 p. m. (CST) if they maintained the rate of speed made on the first half of the flight from New York.

PADUCAH, Ky., Sept. 4.—Those containing the transatlantic fliers, Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte and Rene Racover passed over here at 1:15 p. m. C. S. T. today. This city is about 100 miles from Owensboro by air.

(By The Associated Press) Speaking southwestward across the eastern half of the United States, France's two heroes of the Paris to New York flight were well into the second half of their non-stop $25,000 flight to Dallas this afternoon.

Coste and Bellonte passed the half way mark in their little more than five hours after their takeoff from New York at 6:55 EST. This morning and at 1:20 p. m. (EST), after six and a half hours of flight, they were reported over Owensboro, Ky., with about 950 miles of their 1,600 mile flight behind them.

Hitting west of the Alleghenies at an even faster pace than the stride of 120 miles an hour to which they held on the first part of their journey, they seemed likely to complete the voyage in about eleven hours.

LOVE FIELD, DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 4.—Dallas was all set, really, to greet this afternoon to receive Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte. Frenchmen who hopped the Atlantic east to west, and now were hurtling towards Texas on the first non-stop flight from New York to this point.

Aviation fans and the citizens generally from a wide area were converging here as early as noon seeking vantage places from which to view the landing of the new trail blazers, who, by adding Dallas to their brilliant Paris-to-New-York achievement, will claim a $25,000 prize offered for such a feat by Colonel William E. Easterwood, Dallas chewing gum distributor.

A brisk wind blew from the south, whipping the flags of France and the United States on the hangars of its once war-time field but helping to alleviate the rather high temperature of the day. A thin layer of gray clouds hung over the sky, but the sun was trying to break through and there was no threat of rain.

Field officials carefully instructed a ground crew of at least 12 mechanics with reference to their duties when the seagull-plane of the French aviators lands.

They were told to surround the plane quickly when it landed to protect it from an anticipated rush of thousands of spectators.

A large number of policemen were detailed to assist in maintaining order, and they were augmented by special guards of the aviation companies with offices at the field. No unusual precautions against fire were taken, but the regular fire fighting agencies were held in readiness for emergency.

Release of County From Pink Bollworm Area Being Sought

In an effort to have Howard county removed from the pink bollworm quarantine, Chamber of Commerce officials are in communication with three state officials seeking to have restrictions lifted.

Letters asking this county be removed from the area have been sent to G. B. Terrell, state commissioner of agriculture, R. E. McDonald, federal board, and J. M. DeCurtis, pink bollworm commission, all of Austin.

Farmers and merchants interested in having the quarantine lifted are urged by C. T. Watson, manager of the commercial organization, to communicate with the three men.

The Chamber of Commerce seeks to have an open market for cotton seed, rather than be forced to sell to certain mills.

Enrollment In Schools Is 2,180

Total enrollment in the Big Spring public schools at noon Thursday, two days after registration opened, was 2,180, according to a report by Superintendent W. C. Blankenship.

In the first grades where worst congestion existed, the total enrollment was 353.

Enrollment was distributed as follows: senior and junior high school, 1254; central ward, 401; south ward, 352; north ward, 34; Mexican school, 86; negro school, 36.

Kiwanis Club Hears Report

Woodward Finds Amarillo More Enthusiastic For Railroad

Reports from members who attended the Texas-Oklahoma district convention of Kiwanis International in Lubbock Monday and Tuesday were heard at the local Kiwanis club's weekly luncheon Thursday at the Crawford hotel.

Among those who were heard were J. E. Kuykendall, V. R. Smitham, Garland A. Woodward, Lewis Rix, L. D. Davenport, Rev. Paul Campbell of Weatherford, Rev. D. R. Lindley of the First Christian church and Mr. Jones of the Texas Electric Service company were heard.

The program was in charge of Wendell Belluck, President. He announced special efforts would be made to have a strong program for Constitution Week, September 14-20.

A meeting of officers and directors at breakfast at the Crawford next Tuesday morning was announced following the luncheon.

Mr. Woodward, who, according to fellow Big Spring members, talked much with Lubbock men and delegates about their attitude toward the Texas & Pacific Northern, was heard in an interesting talk. He said he found Lubbock favoring the project and willing to support it in a hearing but not "pepped up" about raising any fund to provide right-of-way.

On the other hand, Amarillo is enthusiastic and anxious to do everything asked of that community to assure construction of the line, said Mr. Woodward.

Ray Wilcox told the club he had learned inquiries had been made about prospects of obtaining a site here for a federal building. He said he had been informed the government would pay no more than $20,000 for a site and urged the club to use its influence toward obtaining 15 by 200 feet of the Central Ward school property at Fourth & Gregg streets for that amount. He pointed out that cutting off a strip of that size would leave two building sites on Scurry street and that the remainder would be materially enhanced in value by construction of a federal building next to it.

Right Turn on Red Light Now Is Permitted

With the ordinance allowing a right turn on a red signal now in effect, city officials today urged motorists to observe the new law regulating traffic where the light system is used.

A motorist may take a right turn on a red signal only after he has brought the car to a complete stop. Failure to stop before making the turn, constitutes the same violation as failing to stop for a red signal, regardless of whether a turn is made.

Motorists also are urged to clear the path on the right. If a right turn is not to be made, the motorist is asked to stop near the center of the street, allowing room for a car to pass between the curbing and the parked automobile.

The ordinance authorizing the change in traffic regulations was passed at a meeting of the City Commission held Tuesday.

Boys Wish To Feed Baby Bees Again

The following boys have informed the county farm agent, J. V. Bush, that they wish to feed baby bees this season: Marvin Hayworth, Hubert Hayworth, Cohoma; William Craig, Moore; Buster and Barger Caudle or Elbow; Thurman Proctor, Jack Proctor, Wallace Proctor, Richard; F. D. Rogers, Moore; Oran and Arvel Doty, Richardson.

Weather conditions and their effect on the feed crop within the next few days, said Mr. Bush, will determine whether these feeding demonstrations will be undertaken.

H. A. Hicks, 75, To Be Buried

H. A. Hicks, 75, resident of Big Spring for a number of years, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. J. Ely, 703 East 13th Street, at 1 p. m. today.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Eberly Chapel, with the Rev. S. R. Hughes, pastor of the East Fourth Street Baptist Church, conducting. Interment will be in Mt. Olive Cemetery. Eberly Funeral Home has charge of the body.

Mr. Hicks was born Nov. 31, 1855, in Tennessee. His wife died in 1925 and was buried in Mt. Olive Cemetery.

Besides Mrs. Ely, he is survived by two other daughters, Mrs. Jesse Harris of Fabens, and Mrs. H. H. Swinford of El Paso. A son, J. N. Hicks, also lives at El Paso.

REV. WINGO JERE

Rev. Claude Wingo, formerly pastor of the First Christian church here, is visiting his mother in the city. He is now pastor of the Christian church at Floydada. He is also enjoying the revival meeting being conducted at the local church where he was pastor until a few months ago and declared the efforts of his successor, Rev. D. R. Lindley, and those assisting in the revival were bearing much fruit.

City Manager Gives Position In Matter Of Employing Whites

Asked the city's position on employment of resident white labor, V. R. Smitham, city manager, declared that he not only favored it but practiced it on all city forces and that only white men, residents, were being employed. He said a few Mexicans were employed some time ago but that when he got into a position to do so he discharged them in favor of resident white men. He also told of having advised a building contractor recently that he ought not to employ any laborers except residents so long as such men were unemployed. He advised the contractor further that in his office he had a list of 65 or 70 such men who needed work. In a few hours the contractor telephoned a request that four of these men be sent him, he reported.

Ector Strike May Open New Active Field

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Sept. 4.—The West Texas permian basin appeared assured of another oil field Thursday when Southern Crude Oil Purchasing Company's No. 1 Cowden, Northern Ector county wildcat, before noon made a twelve to fifteen minute head of oil, estimated at 35 to 40 barrels at a total depth of 4171 feet in lime and green shale.

Earlier this morning the well slopped over several times and prior to that sprayed oil for about ten minutes. It was thought likely drilling would stop to erect tanks, none being available.

The oil tests 29.7 gravity, corrected. Gas was estimated at between 750,000 and one million cubic feet, following an increase at 4161-67 feet. The well began filling up early Wednesday from increased pay at 4130-35 and had further increases at 4118-51.

No. 1 Cowden at 4171 feet was not as deep as Andrews county wells, the nearest producers, twenty-one miles to the northwest. The Penn field in southeastern Ector county, near Judkins, is twenty-four miles south and slightly west.

Contract Sought For Hauling Iron Pipe

City Manager V. R. Smitham Thursday asked that local trucking contractors or those equipped for such work call at his office and enter bids for hauling a quantity of

Another Session Scheduled For Tonight

Several hundred residents of Big Spring, in a meeting of Wednesday evening at Dad's Camp, named a committee of six to visit building contractors and other employers and request that negro and Mexican labor not be employed in preference to white residents.

With announcement of the meeting's action another meeting, this evening at 8 o'clock at Dad's Camp, was issued.

The committee consists of J. C. Myrick, Jim Atkin, W. H. Smith, E. J. Reynolds, L. A. Tannehill and C. L. Payne. Mr. Reynolds was chairman of the meeting.

Chamber's Attitude Cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce was asked. In a statement to The Herald Manager C. T. Watson of that organization said he had advised the committee that the Chamber of Commerce would be glad to send a representative to call on contractors if the committee would furnish a list of those it felt should be called on.

Mr. Watson informed the committee the Chamber of Commerce believed that home owners should always be given preference to employment over transients, regardless of color.

Leaders of the movement said their efforts were aimed at operators of filling stations, hotels and other establishments in addition to building operations where they declared negroes and Mexicans were displacing white residents. They were not prepared to issue a list of situations being thus taken away from residents of the city but announced their intention of developing the matter further at tonight's meeting.

City Now Employing More Local Men

City Manager V. R. Smitham's aid to the local unemployment situation was getting further underway today, as ditches for the water mains extensions over the city were being excavated, preparatory to receiving pipe.

The city commission, upholding the recommendation of Smitham several weeks ago, voted to use local labor on the ditching work, in preference to contracting the entire project.

At the present time the city is getting the work done at the same price that would have been contracted for, and in addition approximately 75 local laborers will be given work.

The use of local labor on the extension work marks the carrying out of a "campaign promise" made by Smitham, acting under authority of the city commission just before Big Spring voters passed

Sales Of Stamps Here Are Higher

Although total postal receipts for August fell below those of July, in reality stamp sales for the past month exceeded those of July, E. E. Fahrenkamp, postmaster, announced today.

The total for August was $4,157.72, while that of July was $4,650.72. Although the total for July is the larger of the two, approximately $800 in box rents are included. This would bring the total stamp sales to below the receipts of August.

The total for August, 1930, was slightly lower than for the corresponding period of 1929. The August, 1929, total was $4,236.70.

C. C. Chambers Trial Slated

Contractor Charged With Murder In Death of Ray Jones

C. C. Chambers, Big Spring dirt contractor, who is charged by grand jury indictment with murder, will go to trial in district court Monday morning. It was announced today by George Mahon, district attorney.

Chambers is charged with the slaying of Ray Jones in the business district of Big Spring, early in May. Jones fell mortally wounded with several bullets from a pistol in his body.

Chambers later made a statement to County Attorney James Little regarding the shooting.

A special venire of 80 men was being drawn today. They are ordered to appear Monday morning. Witnesses also have been summoned for the case.

It is expected that Judge Fritz R. Smith, who has been ill at his home in Snyder, will be able to be on the bench for criminal week.

Chambers was indicted for the slaying by the May term grand jury. He was released on bond, following filing of habeas corpus proceedings and his trial postponed until this term.

Twelve Indictments Found By Jury

Twelve indictments were returned just before noon today by the Howard county grand jury, three and one-half days after that body was impaneled by Special Judge Grover C. Cunningham.

The indictments covered violations of the liquor laws, burglary and other felonies. Names of those indicted were withheld.

Capices were being issued today by the district clerk.

The grand jury continued hearing evidence this afternoon offered by District Attorney George Mahon.

Another report of indictments is expected to be returned by the last of the week.

Howard Boy Wins Honor

Ozie Bailey, known throughout Howard county as one of the most successful 4-H club boys of West Texas is one of 25 Texas boys who will receive a gold pin from the Extension Service of the A. & M. College of Texas, as winner in a statewide contest among 4-H boys, according to an announcement from College Station.

Young Bailey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Bailey of the Highway community. He's one of the two winners in the grain sorghum project contest. The other was Marley Arthur of Plainview.

The award was made after judging projects of the hundreds of club boys on a four-fold basis of worth, profit, history and record of demonstration and its influence upon the community.

Ozie's net profit from maize grown on his five-acre project patch was $141. He raised 14,280 pounds on the five acres, in addition to a half ton of pea hay, although his patch was in a dry section of the county last season. He raised a Jersey calf for $21.02 net profit.

This young man has missed but one club meeting since he has been enrolled. He won a trip to the Texas State Fair at Dallas and the State Club Boys' Educational Enrichment on his record of last season.

PLANE REPAIRED HERE

A broken oil gauge line on Gypsy Moth plane forced down Pilot Hudson of the Midland Oil Co. at the local airport today. Repairs were made here in about two hours.

Santo Domingo Devastated By Tempests Fury

Red Cross Cables Cash for Relief of The Homeless

By The Associated Press Nine hundred persons were reported dead and injured today in the wreckage left in Santo Domingo by a hurricane which swept westward along the greater antilla during the last twenty-four hours.

The capital of the Dominican republic, a city of nearly 50,000 population, was laid waste by the storm. Not until midday was communication restored with the stricken city when All-America cables improvised a station in the island city by which first details of the horror began to reach the world.

The wind mounted to 160 miles an hour during the climax of the hurricane. Leaving a trail of ruin and almost sinking the Porto Rico Steamship Coamo, the storm lashed its way toward Cuba and the Florida straits but, latest advices said, swerved sharply northward, apparently passing out to sea and sparing lands further to the west.

Every agency of the United States government today was bent toward gauging the extent of the calamity and preparing for what ever relief measure might have to be taken.

Weather bureaus around the storm area watched closely for developments. Red Cross headquarters stood ready to use its facilities. The Navy department awaited messages which would indicate the role it might play.

By ERNEST NICHOLS Special Correspondent Of The Associated Press

Copyright, 1930, and all rights reserved by The Associated Press. AZUA, Dominican Republic, Sept. 4.—Santo Domingo City today lay desolate from a hurricane that swept over the Dominican republic yesterday. It is in urgent need of medical supplies and water. Almost the entire city is said to have been destroyed. The hurricane hit it early in the afternoon.

Its greatest violence was felt from about 2:30 p. m. after blowing for four hours it moved northwest diagonally across the country, cutting a wide swath of destruction. Damage is estimated in millions of dollars but no accurate total can yet be formed.

I arrived 20 miles south of here by automobile today, after eluding Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, last night. I continued by horseback and am pushing on to Santo Domingo City. On my journey I found as I entered the stricken area that roads and many country estates were wrecked.

The floods resulting from the hurricane washed out many houses. People in some places were reported to have taken refuge on improvised rafts.

Azuza is near the south coast of the Dominican Republic and about 55 miles west by south of Santo Domingo City. Its population is given by gazetteers as 1500.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—The Red Cross today cabled $15,000 in cash to Santo Domingo for relief of storm sufferers, and ordered one of its officials to fly immediately from Porto Rico to the stricken island.

Many granaries have been washed away and cattle drowned. Communications have been cut off from the inundated area and no trains are running.

The government has ordered relief measures.

Discoverer Of Polar Explorers' Bodies In Arctic Is Related

By DR. GUNNAR HORN
Chief of the Norwegian expedition that found the bodies of Salomon August Andree and his companions of the aeronautical polar expedition of 1897.

Given exclusively to the Associated Press and the Oslo "Aftenposten," this is Dr. Horn's first authorized statement about the discovery of the Andree expedition's last camp on White Island, Fridtjof Nansen Land.

(Copyright, 1930, and all rights reserved in North and South America and Japan by The Associated Press.)

ABOARD MOTOR SHIP BRATVAAG, Skjager Island, Norway, Sept. 1. (By Wire to The Associated Press.) The Norwegian expedition to Franz Josef's Land (now Fridtjof Nansen Land) in the summer of 1930 was made with the motor sealer Bratvaag of Alesund. The skipper was Peder Eliassen. It was planned that the vessel should at the same time hunt whales, seals and ice bears.

July 29
We sailed from Alesund on July 29 and in marvelous weather we went northward along the coast to Tromsø, where we arrived on the 30th of July. The morning, the evening we continued our voyage and by the next morning we were well out at sea past Soroya Island.

Sept. 1
We made our course for Hopen, our first stopping place. We arrived there Aug. 2. From there we proceeded to King Karls Land (Spitzbergen) and arrived on Aug. 4 at Sable Island, which is northwest of Franz Josef's Land. Because of reports from a hunting expedition that had been north earlier this year, we knew that ice conditions were unusually favorable, and up to now we had not seen one floating iceberg.

Therefore we decided that en route to Franz Josef's Land we could visit the islands between Spitzbergen and Franz Josef's Land, which usually are hard to reach.

These are Stor Island, White Island and Victoria Island.

August 5
So we continued, and early on the morning of Aug. 5 we climbed a great island's white peak through the fog. We discovered that the map for this region was incorrect, as this island lies about twelve miles further to the west than on the British admiralty map, and that the mapping done by the Worsley-Algarsson expedition in 1925 is quite correct.

Southeast Side
We first landed on the southeast side of the island, where the coast is quite bare. After that we were on the northeast side, where there is a great expanse of bare flat land. Just on the beach there is a pole that marks the spot where a depot was established by the Italians in 1928 for Noble and Roald Amundsen. Beside this depot we erected a hut that we had with us.

It is good to have a hut on this God-forsaken place in case some ill-fated expedition should seek refuge there.

At five o'clock we weighed anchor and sailed eastward in ice-free waters. At the outlet we were followed by our old friend fog, but it soon disappeared, and then we caught sight of the big white peak on White Island.

This island—Giles land, as it is also called—is known to be one of the most unapproachable islands in the whole of the Spitzbergen region, and here we were going full speed toward it in ice-free waters.

Lucky
We certainly were lucky, and our joy was great over the possibility of being able to land so easily at this rarely visited place. Little did we imagine then that our visit would lead to the final explanation of one of the most tragic and mysterious happenings in the history of polar exploration.

We came up under a bare flat land on the southwest side of the island. White Island's position also is incorrectly marked on the maps, too far east.

It was quite still and there was a burning sun as we came to land. Very carefully Skipper Eliassen maneuvered his vessel in through innumerable projections of land. Fortunately some strange icebergs showed us where most of the dangerous projections were located.

The skipper dropped anchor and members of the expedition went ashore. These were the botanist, Olaf Hansen, the zoologist, Adolf Sorensen, and myself as leader of the expedition.

Walrus
On our way into the beach, we saw a school of walrus playing about in the sea, and the outlook for a good catch helped to put us in a good humor.

We landed and were soon on our way inland across the naked island. On it were mountains of granite and rocks. Between them were stretches of gravel and sand. Only a shallow little lake broke the tediousness of the landscape.

Brown moss made a little spot of color here and there. Otherwise vegetation was very sparse. There were the usual polar flowers about.

We worked through the evening in the northwest part of the island and went on board again in the early morning.

On August 6 we had the same marvelous weather with brilliant sunshine and cloudless sky. The ocean was like a mirror and on many jutting peninsulas round about were steeply rising mountains.

White Island's great ice peaks rose majestically from the low coast land. Everywhere reigned an intense silence. Just once in a while we could hear the noise of ice

Metal Runners
This sledge, as well as the other one, had metal runners. When we got everything free, we began to transport our find the 150 yards down to the beach.

The ice filled boat soon became too heavy, and its canvas covering was torn to pieces. Therefore we put five oars under the boat and with five men on each side we tried to carry it.

But this method also proved ineffectual. One of the oars broke. It was not until we had removed more ice from inside that we managed to make progress, then we went carefully toward the beach with what in more than one sense was a heavy burden.

Before we left the spot we built a cairn, surrounded by a pole, on a hill just behind the camp. It is easy to see and will make it possible for future visitors to find the place without trouble.

HOME TOWN

calling on contractors and other employers to employ white residents in preference to negroes and Mexicans is worthy consideration of all. If a man has a family and has no employment he deserves to be helped in finding a job. It is not only humane and beneficial to that man and his own family, but of benefit to the entire community's self respect and well-being.

If there are cases here where white residents are being deprived of employment because men, of any color, who are not residents or who have no families depending upon them, are being given jobs in preference to them something ought to be done in a sensible, business-like manner to remedy the situation.

A note of encouragement to the men who met Wednesday night and are to meet again tonight comes from Manager C. T. Watson of the Chamber of Commerce. He said that he had assured the leaders of the movement that they will furnish a list of contractors they feel are not totting fair with white residents to the Chamber of Commerce that organization would be glad to send a representative to call on them. He also declared that the Chamber of Commerce feels that home owners should always be given preference to local employment instead of transients regardless of color.

ed the bond issue authorizing the work.

At that time Smithman declared at a mass meeting, that local labor would be used.

At the present time a large crew of men are doing the work, and approximately 20 more will be given work within the next few days.

It is estimated the work will last for a period of 8 days at a minimum. The men are working on a footage basis. They are paid eight cents per running foot for excavating a ditch 18 inches wide and three feet deep. The regular city crew will do all of the actual laying of six, eight and twelve inch pipe.

According to city officials, the municipality stands no chance of losing money on the work, inasmuch as the laborers are paid only for the amount of ditch they dig each day. The laborers seem satisfied with the arrangement and the majority are averaging between $3 and $4 a day on the job.

When the project gets into full swing approximately 75 men will be given work. The "register" system is being used by the city in obtaining work for idle men and relieving unemployment conditions in this city.

A book containing the names and addresses of Big Spring men is kept by city officials and they are summoned when needed. In this manner it is possible for local residents to be used instead of transients. In addition to using local laborers on the water extension project, contractors for the construction of two water reservoirs here are using local men entirely.

On a basis of 40 cents per hour for unskilled labor, a large crew will have work for several weeks constructing the 1,000,000 gallon and the 250,000 gallon tanks now under construction.

This clause was inserted in the contract before it was awarded.

Mrs. Lem Stallings is a guest at the Mack Stallings home.

Oil Refiners Are Warned To Cut Runs

Course Is Plain Says Lamp: Just Watch Records' Advice

A warning to the refining branch of the oil industry to curtail operations during the last three months of this year to the level of gasoline demand is sounded in the current issue of the Lamp, official publication of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

"If the individual refiner," it states, "will maintain his stocks at an even level from the end of September on, it is more than likely that the close of the year will come pretty close to seeing a reduction in excess gasoline storage by something like the 5.0 million barrels recommended as a minimum by the government's committee on petroleum economics last spring, thus enabling the industry to start 1931 in a considerably healthier statistical condition than it has been in quite a spell.

"Each year, consumption of motor fuel begins its normal decline in September, running to the end of the year and into January and February. Naturally, a corresponding reduction in gasoline output is expected. Instead, the refiner has gone on, running his plant at the same rate as during the summer peak period, resulting each year in an increase in stocks during the last two months. December, in fact, comes pretty close to peak figures each year for both refinery output and finished stocks.

"During the last 10 years, additions to storage increased, gasoline stocks approximately 32,000,000 barrels, but if the additions during that period for the months of November and December are added up they reach a total of 40,000,000 barrels.

Fall of 1928 Good

In November and December, 1928, gasoline stocks increased by 2,953,000 barrels, while the supply and demand figures were fairly close together. The result was that, until the fall, 1928 appeared as a fairly good year. The same was true for the first part of 1929, after additions to storage during the last two months of 1927 were held to approximately 3,000,000 barrels. In 1929, with additions to gasoline storage during November and December of the previous year approximating 6,631,000 barrels, the industry started off the year with supply and demand as far apart as the poles. And, instead of improving the situation any, the refiners piled up a further surplus of more than 8,000,000 barrels, adding it to already overloaded storage tanks during November and December.

Refining Capacity of Nation

The refining capacity of the United States, considering the increased yield of gasoline from cracking during the past few years is more than ample currently to take care of the greatest demand the country has yet made for motor fuel, with no drafts upon stocks whatsoever.

"Reduced refinery operations during the summer months of this year has resulted in some decrease in stocks, but figures for the week ended August 16 still show 41,252,000 barrels of gasoline in the industry's hands, far more than it needs.

Course Is Plain

"Right now, the course of the refiner would seem to be reasonably plain. All he has to do is to watch the records for gasoline production and the sale of motor fuel on his own books, and keep them in balance. There was never any reason why stocks should have been allowed to pile up to the extent they have in nearly every fall season at a time when the consumption in drops off year after year—and even less today when the excess running of gasoline in 1928 and 1929 has overburdened the industry with a big excess of stored products.

"Nothing can be accomplished, of course, so long as the refining branch of the industry continues to race along right through the fall at the same clip it held during the peak season."

NEW YORK—A revival of romantic manners in men is awaited. Kathleen Howard, magazine fashion editor, points out that with longer skirts women have softened their voices and become femininely again. Men used to tell women that if women changed men would return to kissing hands and cease such things as "come on girls, let's dance" but women are still waiting for men to treat them with the deference given mothers.

A Healthful Sign

THE secretary of labor, James Davis, points out that the present depressed period in business is the first in which employers have sought to keep workers as fully employed as possible instead of cutting wages.

This policy was termed a mighty effort at stabilization and while it did not stave off some measure of the depression it did prevent the country from hitting the bottom in any instance before.

Mr. Davis believes that in due time this application of wisdom and effort must bring a return to normal conditions.

It is a healthful sign that this degree of sympathy and understanding is being shown by the larger employers throughout the country. It is perfectly obvious, we believe, that the policy of keeping men at work or at least disturbingly even whatever work there is to be done is not only just to the worker but beneficial to the country as a whole.

Retail sales have dropped in parts of the country and are slow throughout it but they would be lower if wages of thousands of workers had been cut. Every business man has benefitted by this general policy of maintaining wages.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

'Billing' The Billboard

New York Herald Tribune.

THERE is a touch of the grand manner in Col. Frederick Stuart Greene's answer to the billboard menace. Hearing that a billboard was about to go up on private property adjoining the approach to the new bridge at Poughkeepsie, Col. Greene proposed to erect a large screen on state property in front of the billboard, a procedure from which he has been stopped only by a court order. The precise ethics and law of the matter may be a trifle complex, but as the colonel announces his intention of fighting the case through the highest courts, an answering cheer will go up from the crusaders for free scenery and the preservation of our highways.

It was not so long ago that a volunteer ax brigade was going through Westchester, chopping the illegal signs from the public property on the margins of the highways. This method could not, of course, touch the large signs standing back from the roadways, but now that Colonel Greene has advanced the idea there seems no reason why volunteer camouflage corps should not finish even these by the erection of tasteful screens—perhaps made out of chicken wire and cut branches, like the camouflage on the western front—between them and their victims on the roadways. Naturally, it would be impossible to screen every glaring signboard in the countryside. But it would not be necessary. The real gain is in the moral effect; many advertisers are already coming to appreciate that their outdoor publicity gains rather than loses when it is removed from spots where it can only irritate and offend. The billboard will retire of its own accord to sites where they do no matter as soon as the public shows that it cares enough.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 4 (AP)—When Hack Wilson's straw hat comes off to stay off this season, the National League pennant race will be history.

The pudgy Cub home run hitter today defied convention and his teammates to knock the hat bonnet off.

"It stays on my dome until the race is over," Hack said.

Again Konjola Shows What It Can Accomplish

PROMINENT SAN ANTONIO MAN EAGER IN HIS PRAISE OF NEW MEDICINE.

MR. CHARLES OLIPHANT

"I am glad to endorse Konjola to any who suffer as I did," said Mr. Charles Oliphant, well-known San Antonio railroad man, 423 Lamar street, San Antonio. "About a year ago I suffered a breaking out on my skin. Little patches of pimples appeared and were called water-blister. They itched and burned severely, and, though I tried many remedies I gained only temporary relief. From Konjola, I gained what I consider miraculous results. The breaking out disappeared within three weeks after I began taking Konjola. I had kidney trouble but now the pains in my back and the swelling under my eyes have disappeared also. I feel better in every way and have gained weight. I think Konjola is a very fine medicine."

Konjola is recommended over a six to eight weeks' period and is designed to relieve ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and rheumatism, neuritis, and nervousness.

Konjola is sold in Big Spring at Collins Bros. drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

HOW'S your HEALTH?

Hair, like the enamel of the teeth and the nails, is a special form of the skin covering.

But while the latter two are now accorded a fair degree of care the hair frequently is neglected.

There are many scalp conditions that suffer from too much and the wrong kind of care.

It is not common to find a history of years of neglect followed when the first bald spot appears by an aggressive and intensive use of the scalp through excessive washing and the application of too strong alcoholic tonic preparations.

The normal scalp and hair—that is, those neither too dry nor yet too oily—require shampooing not more frequently than once a week, nor less frequently than once a month.

Shampoos of unknown composition are not to be trusted, and for washing the hair few things are better than castile soap and warm water.

When the hair is worn long, daily brushing is advisable. The brush should not, however, be too stiff nor too fine, and should not irritate the scalp.

Hats should not be tight-fitting and should not be allowed to interfere with the circulation of the scalp. They should also allow for direction of air.

Whether or not dandruff directly causes the loss of hair is a disputed question but that it is a contributing cause all are in agreement. Those suffering from dandruff should avoid irritating lotions.

Since not infrequently the loss of hair is associated with deep-seated disturbances in the body, it is wise to submit to careful physical examination.

Hair is said to have roots, but these must not be conceived of as in the nature of tree roots. No remedy can be applied to the hair shaft and cause the hair to grow.

STREET NAMED AFTER SLAYER IF ARCHDUKE PRAGUE (INS).—Asked in Parliament if he was aware that a street in the city of Theresinstadt was named after Gabriel Princip, the Serbian student who murdered the Archduke Francis Ferdinand in 1914, Dr. Benes, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, replied that the naming of the street broke no law, and therefore no action could be taken.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 4 (AP)—Manager Joe McCarthy of the Cubs, an exceptional baseball prognosticator, believes this week will tell the tale of the 1930 National League pennant race.

"The Giants are playing Boston and they usually slaughter 'em," the Cubs chief said as he gazed in the future of the race. "The Reds have been set-ups for the Cardinals of late, so we cannot figure on any help from those sectors. It is up to us to help ourselves and the Pirates are always tough, particularly down the home stretch. This is the crucial week of the race."

HOLLYWOOD Notes on a dull summer day.

Irene Delroy, who denies being a superstitious, still dislikes odd numbers.

The street number of her apartment hotel in Beverly Hills, the light on her studio dressing room, and her automobile license all are even.

And she wears size four shoes. Evelyn Laye, Joe E. Brown's nickname to his friends, is "Evo." Short for "Beautifull."

John Robertson tells about the Scotch singer who enrolled at a dramatic school and did not want to take the complete course. He wanted to buy just one of two lectures.

SPORTING Like stars who for fun sometimes play the mob scene in a picture, playing extra, Eddie Cline has assisted a fellow director, John Adolph, on football games at a college picture.

Euster Keaton, Lucien Littlefield and Joe E. Brown each has his own baseball team. They play Sundays and whenever opportunity offers.

And speaking of Joe E., we learn that, even though the musical picture was a receding, maybe the worst is yet to come. He of the generous mouth is taking singing lessons!

IMPROVING ON NATURE "The Silver Horde," after an expensive location trip to Alaska, has returned and is to be made largely in Hollywood, Alaska, probably not being as Alaska enough.

Hollywood frequently can improve on nature in this manner: Will Rogers and company did not go abroad for "They Had to Suffer," but used the Dunning process which superimposes figure on a setting very naturally. Tay Garnett, directing "Her Man," flew to Havana to take street scenes to be used in that picture, all of which was made in Hollywood.

Talkie-making differs from old movie procedure in that now the scenes more often are taken in sequence, as a stage play would be presented.

Alice Gentile, the opera star, like Mary Lewis has lost her excess weight. Miss Gentile, through diet and exercise, shed forty-four pounds in the past year.

By MARY DAHLBERG

SYNOPSIS: Two men are loved and lost by Dagger Marley, spoiled young niece of a Texas ranchman. The first is Blaine Howard, who is killed on the Western Front in France. The second, whom she marries, is Captain John Vaneringer, war ace, who meets death in an airplane crash. Another man loves her, the Duc de Pontoise of Paris, but she cannot return his affection. Dagger, in search of happiness, decides to take a pilgrimage in imitation of one once taken by Howard, on which he visited friends in Africa, India and China, seeking their answers to the riddle of life. Sidi Marut, Arab chief, the first of the three, tells her one should do what one thinks right. The second, Ghulam Buk, Buddhist priest, declares "happiness lies in forgetfulness of self. In China, Chang Kai Shek, powerful war lord, upholds the doctrine that might makes right. He shows, unusual interest in Dagger, and one day invites her to dine with him alone in his palace. Despite misgivings she decides to accept.

Chapter 25 STARTLING NEWS SO DAGGER drove up to the Palace that evening, alone, trusting absolutely to herself, her ability to read character, her capacity to handle men and to control any situation.

The Palace guard turned out for her. A handsome, young officer of the Tu-chun's staff received her in the courtyard, and conducted her past the motionless sentries into the great hall, very foreign in appearance, despite the wealth of Chinese ornaments scattered about in careless profusion. Chang, himself, appeared immediately from a curtained doorway, austere, proudly deferential.

"I appreciate your coming," he said simply. "If you are not fatigued, would you care to see my collections?"

Dagger assented enthusiastically. She had heard of the countless beautiful objects he possessed, spoil of years of unchecked looting, the most valuable collection of Chinese curios and art in the whole world, men said. And she followed him from room to room with unaffected pleasure. Here were representative pieces from all the several centuries of the golden ages of China's past: pottery, porcelain, exquisitely-painted panels, carvings in ivory, in wood, in stone, in jade. Ah, the jade! She was acquiring an appreciation of this essentially Chinese stone, and never had she seen such matchless jades as Chang possessed. Armor, too, and ancient weapons; garments lay and priestly, crusted with gold and silver and precious stones. Jewels in heaps and trays.

Unperceiving all else, she climbed with him from floor to floor, unseeing sentries and chamberlains, until they came to a massive door, where two immensely fat men mounted guard. These stood aside at a word from Chang, who paused with one hand on the heavy bronze handle.

"You have seen my treasures," he said. "Here are my wives."

"And he pushed the door open, leaving a space for her to look through upon a scene which impressed Dagger as presenting the appearance of a meeting of a women's bridge-club in San Antonio—allowing for the fact that all the members had come in their kimonos.

There were twenty or thirty women in the large room, fat women, thin women, beautiful women, women with intellectual faces, women with lovely, vivid faces, blonde women, dark women, white women, brown women, yellow women. Some were drinking tea, some were nibbling candy, some were playing games, some were sewing and gossiping. It was precisely the kind of scene which might be going on in thousands of homes all over the United States. There was actually the same disorderly buzz of conversation, which was choked off abruptly as Chang stepped in the doorway.

He gave Dagger the one bird's-eye view, and closed the door, a grin of what she interpreted as irony twisting his lips. Her mind was spinning dizzily. Why this revelation, obviously so dramatically staged? But Chang gave her no clue.

"Come," he said. "I fear I have bored you. And dinner should be ready."

Dagger murmured that she wasn't bored and indeed, she was enthralled. The evening promised better than she had anticipated, although she couldn't very well say so, and she returned downstairs, walking demurely at his side, trying to guess what would happen next.

Chang led her through a series of rooms on the ground floor to a terrace set in the midst of a formal Chinese garden. The grass was groomed as carefully as a thoroughbred's hide; the stars were reflected in a pool where water-lilies grew, and a soft wind, sighing up from the war-torn South, rustled the branches of trees that were half-unseen. Overhead, the sky was a speckled purple vault. The one definite spot in the clustering shadows was a small table, appointed in Western style, about which hovered several servants, whom Chang waved away as he seated Dagger opposite his own place.

He seemed to have forgotten the recent incident. The conversation he started as the first course was served led to political subjects, the roles the Western powers had played in the empire by the opium war and the Tai-ping Rebellion two generations since, climaxed by the Boxer uprising.

He spoke of the impetus to Chinese liberalism, which had been applied by the students sent to America through the repayment of the Boxer indemnity; and the consequent intoxication of a people who still dwelt mentally in the Middle Ages, and whose traditional philosophy and folk-ways must be completely amended before they could distinguish between the good and the bad in western civilization.

It was as absorbing to Dagger as all her recent experiences, and she threw out frequent comments, which brought grim nods of approval or curt: "You see it, Mrs. Vaneringer!" "Yes, but not many foreigners have the patience to weigh that." Finally, she interjected:

"But didn't Blaine—Mr. Howard—empathize with all your ambitions, General?"

Chang frowned over her shoulder in the odd, blank way that was one of his characteristics.

"More than any westerner who has tried to understand us. But we will come back to that. First, I have something to say to you."

And the cold, nerve-twisting hand of drama clamped down upon Dagger's heart.

"Yes?" she responded mechanically.

His eyes settled upon hers, possessive, dominating.

"All this is mine," he continued, waving his arm, with its silver-tipped fingers, to include the surrounding darkness. "Sung-fu is but the beginning, 290,000 square miles, 20,000,000 people. But—the beginning. Someday, if I live, I will rule all China. I will be Emperor, Constitutional Emperor. I do not believe in your democracy any more than I believe in a divine Son of Heaven."

He stopped, and his eyes bored harder into hers.

"A man such as I am must have a woman to keep pace with him. I did not know that until recently. I thought women were toys to amuse a man's ease. But that is one thing you Westerners have discovered. Now and then, very rarely, there are women a man may treat as an equal. You are that kind of woman."

Another pause, and Dagger resisted by a conscious effort the commanding influence of those narrow, jetty eyes.

"You have seen my wives," he said bluntly. "I will put them all away. I have a palace in the hills where they can be comfortable—grow old quarreling together," he added cynically. "You are different. You are my equal. Will you, as you westerners say, marry me? I do not know what that means, but I will accept whatever terms you make." He leaned closer to ward her. "I want you for my Empress. Together we will make China over."

Dagger shut her eyes to keep out that piercing stare. She had a sensation of numbness. How ridiculous! How flattering! How preposterous! How just plain silly! She was being proposed to by a Chinaman. How Uncle Jim would rave if he knew it! And Blaine—her head cleared. She reopened her eyes, and met Chang's fearlessly, level-browed.

"I know you offer me a great honor," she said. "But I belong to another man—who was your friend."

"A gasoline truck driver ran out of fuel near Jola, Kas, and had to walk to the nearest town" fuel.

Chang frowned.

"To a man you must think of as dead?" he asked.

"Yes, although I never belonged to him living."

The frown left the Tu-chun's face.

"More than ever I see you were meant to be my Empress," he said. "But such loyalty is not to be despised. You have not loved in vain. Mrs. Vaneringer, Blaine Howard is alive."

BUSINESS MEN DISCUSS RAIL PLANS AT ROTARY LUNCHEON; MUST OBTAIN RIGHT-OF-WAY

Big Spring Rotarians devoted Tuesday's session at the weekly luncheon in the Crawford Hotel to discussion of the situation into which the Texas & Pacific Northern Railway proposition has emerged after eight days of work since its initial announcement.

Dr. G. T. Hall, C. W. Cunningham, L. S. McDowell, E. A. Kelley, B. Reagan and C. T. Watson were heard. The program for the day was in charge of Mr. Watson. Guests included Mr. Bliss of the Coudon Oil Company marketing department, Judge Perkins of Sweetwater, Wilburn Barcus and Wendell Bedichek.

Remarks of Dr. Hall and Mr. Kelley, both members and the latter chairman of the railroad committee, indicated no time would be lost once the T. & P. determines the exact route it proposes to follow with its railroad in calling upon the citizens of Big Spring to underwrite the cost of that portion of the right-of-way which owners of land will not relinquish for the purpose without adjudication of alleged damages.

The plan is to have the underwriting agreement so framed that no individual will be called on to stand good for more than he is able individually to pay if necessary. Big Spring is expected to obtain the right-of-way from the city northwest to the Martin county line and also across the north-east corner of Martin to the Dawson county line.

Mr. Kelley said he expected to have information within a few days that would inform the committee of the exact route to be followed and that this would place the committee in a position intelligently to tackle the job of obtaining the right-of-way.

"It is my personal belief nothing has ever been offered us that promises so much. The railroad committee is faced with the problem of buying the right-of-way in this and Martin counties. It is of vital interest to every resident whether he owns property or not, for this proposition to go through," said Dr. Hall. "We are going to have to give, perhaps, even until it hurts. We are going to try to arrange things so that when the time comes to pay off no one will be involved in any big blanket obligation. Before the day passes I believe the form of the instrument to be signed by those underwriting the matter will have been framed."

Mrs. Tracy Smith Entertains S. P. C. Club

The members of the S. P. C. Club met with Mrs. Tracy Smith at her home on Lancaster street. Games were played and refreshments of strawberry ice cream and cookies were served to the following: Nancy Bell Phillips, Mary Louise Inkman, Ruth Horn, Winifred Piner, Virginia Hilliard, Camille Kobert, Anna Katherine Ringler, and Doris Cunningham.

Mrs. Purser Hostess To Bluebonnet S. S. Class

Mrs. F. M. Purser entertained the members of the Bluebonnet Sunday School class at her home on San Antonio street Sunday evening after church services with a slumber party.

The group was serenaded during the night with Hawaiian music. Refreshments were served to the following: Mesdames Jack Johnson, Jack Clark, Willard Read, Steve Baker, Tom Baker, J. J. Green, J. T. Allen, W. B. Sullivan, Leo Wright, and Misses Elizabeth Queen, Kathryn Gillean, Allyn Bunker and Bird and Pyle Bradshaw.

Mrs. P. C. Cayton Party Honoree

Mrs. Dee Davis entertained Monday afternoon with a pretty shower at her home, 907 East 13th street, complimenting Mrs. P. C. Cayton, a recent bride. The house was gay with cut flowers arranged in floor basket and wall vases.

Following the social games and the presentation of the gifts a refreshment place and iced tea were served.

The guest list included: Mesdames Ben Cole, Joe Cleve, Charlene Pierce, Mickle Nell, Misses Christine Little, Wanda LaVelle, Clara Fisher, and the hostess.

T. W. Long and family of Midland recently arrived in Big Spring for a two weeks' sojourn. Mr. Long is district manager of the Snowwhite Creameries.

Berry Duff and his mother, Mrs. B. N. Duff spent the week-end in San Angelo with friends and relatives.

Miss Miller Is Honored

Mesdames Parish And Bell Are Hostesses To Visitor

Mrs. Wayne Parish and Mrs. L. B. Bell entertained with a bridge party Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. M. M. Mancill in honor of Mrs. Bell's house guest, Miss Little Mae Miller, Fort Worth.

Five rounds of bridge were played with Mrs. Steve Baker winning high score. Miss Marie Faubin won cut prize and Miss Miller was presented with a guest prize.

Luncheon was served to the following: Mesdames Marie Faubin, Edith Gay, Jessie Morgan, Kathryn Gilliam, Ruby Bell, Letha Whitmore, Lillian Rhotan, and Mesdames Sam Baker, Reagan Bolinger, G. E. Freeman, W. G. Morelock, Morgan Martin, Miss Lillian Mae Miller and the hostess.

Cunningham Presides Over Local Court

Judge Smith Unable To Convene Term; Jury Empanelled

With Grover B. Cunningham, local attorney, acting as special judge in the absence of Judge Fritz R. Smith, the September term of district court got underway Monday morning.

Judge Smith is under the care of a physician at Snyder, his home, suffering from infection following a nail wound in his foot. He was unable to be here for the opening of the term and asked the Big Spring bar association to name a special judge.

Cunningham received 13 votes and will act as judge until Judge Smith is able to assume his duties.

The Howard County grand jury was impaneled Monday morning and was busy today hearing testimony.

The grand jury is composed of N. G. Hoover, Lawrence McCoy, C. E. Anderson, R. F. Lyons, J. F. Wolcott, J. C. Douglass, B. O. Jones, R. C. Reed, all of Big Spring, and R. L. Powell, Coahoma, Lawrence Anderson, Luther, Willie Winters, Vincent and W. W. Lay, Coahoma.

Monday was spent in endeavoring to set cases for trial. This week and the third week will be devoted to civil cases, the second week being used for criminal proceedings.

J. P. (Pat) Ray, who was injured Aug. 28, 1928 at McCamey, while an employee of the Snowwhite Creameries Co., will receive $12,500 for his injuries as the result of an agreement between his counsel and attorneys for two insurance companies.

Ray will receive $625 from the Globe Indemnity Co., and a like amount from the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co.

The agreement in the suit to set aside the award of the Industrial Accident Board and obtain compensation, was settled Monday.

Disabilities of a minor were removed in district court Monday in the case of John Louis Elles.

Special Judge Grover B. Cunningham signed the order removing the disabilities.

Residence Building Permit Is Issued

Permit for the construction of a modern business building at 109 East Third street, has been issued by Merle J. Stewart, city secretary.

The building will be 19x50 feet, and constructed of brick. The estimated cost is $4,500.

G. E. Talbot is the contractor.

LUNDGREN READY FOR DASH AROUND THE WORLD

Ted Lundgren, Hollywood, Cal., aviator, made final preparations at Roosevelt field, N. Y., for an early takeoff for a race against time around the world. The first day's flight will be to Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

RICHARDSON AND COSDEN OIL REFINERIES HERE INSTALLING IMPROVED PROCESS DEVELOPED BY OWN STAFF FOR HANDLING WEST TEXAS CRUDE

Another of those real and useful but non-spectacular battles that are so rapidly revolutionizing American industry and commerce has just been won right here in Big Spring.

At a cost of approximately $100,000 the Richardson and Cosden refineries are installing equipment to take advantage of a special process for refining "sour" West Texas crude, with its high content of sulphur and resultant poisonous gases, which chemists of the concerns, led by Superintendent Charles B. Faught of the Richardson plant, have worked out.

Patents on the process, which will be used privately, have been applied for. It will greatly reduce cost of refining, especially cutting down the expenditures for chemicals now used.

This new process eliminates two complete processes now necessary and, in addition, makes possible 7 per cent higher gasoline recovery from crude, aside from reducing operation cost.

The Richardson plant research department worked on the new process fifteen months. In April one experimental still was installed. It was operated so successfully that both plants are to adopt the new process.

"This process," said its chief originator, Mr. Faught, "will completely change our operating procedure. We will be able to recover seven per cent more gasoline from the same amount of crude, at much less cost."

The Richardson plant will open this week after having been shut down for installation of the equipment for the new process. Cosden will have the installation finished soon. Installation of the equipment for this process in the Cosden plant is separate from construction of a large new cracking still at that plant, a still that will bring its daily rated capacity to 20,000 barrels or more.

The Cosden and Richardson forces have led the way in devising means of combating corrosion of equipment by West Texas low-grade crude. The refining of this crude presents a great many peculiar problems, Mr. Faught pointed out.

That the refining industry fully appreciates the value and significance of the local forces' research is attested by an illustrated article which has just appeared in "The Refiner and Natural Gasoline Manufacturer," a foremost journal of the industry.

Two Couples Taken In Raid of Cabin

Four persons, including two men and two women, were arrested Tuesday night in a raid on a cabin at the Big Spring Tourist Camp, West Third Street.

The raid was conducted by Chief of Police E. A. Long, Patrolman Howie, and Deputy Sheriff Andrew Merrick.

It is alleged that nine pints of "bonded" whiskey was seized in the raid.

Chief Long declared today that one of the men would be turned over to Federal authorities. Vagrancy and drunkenness charges will be filed against the other three.

Cutting Affray Leads To Charges Against Two

LAMESA, Sept. 3.—Two charges have been filed against H. C. Parkes and Lewis Carbaugh following their arrest Sunday, when Avery Kates was seriously wounded during a knife affray. Kates, an oil field worker, received cuts in his right shoulder and chest but is reported improving by physicians attending him. Charges of assault and driving while intoxicated are being held against the men lodged in jail here. They gave their home as Fortan. The cutting culminated in a quarrel on the highway near Sunset, 14 miles from Lamesa.

Oak 2,000 Years Old Is In French Cemetery

PARIS (INS).—The oldest French oak thought to be in the cemetery of Alouville, Normandy, turns up today in Montraville, near Saintes, with a claim that antedates the Christian era.

Prof. Paul Baqueret, Paris tree expert, calculates that the tree must be at least 2,000 years old, outlasting the Alouville oak by several hundred years.

NEXT WEEK'S PRIZES OFFERED FOR PIE RECIPES; TWO DOLLARS FIRST, ONE FOR SECOND AWARD

Misses Velma Webb and Clarice Hambrick Winners of This Week's Sherbet Contest

The Herald will offer two prizes of $2 and $1 for first and second places respectively for the best pie recipes submitted during the next week.

W. R. Hearst Is Expelled By French Govt.

American Publisher Gives His Idea of Reason For Action

PARIS, Sept. 2 (AP)—William Randolph Hearst was served with an official request to leave France and has complied. The surety general—the French Scotland Yard—made known the fact of the American publisher's expulsion today.

Upon the arrival of Mr. Hearst in Paris yesterday morning agents of the republic called upon him at his hotel and informed him that it was the wish of the government that he should leave France before this (Tuesday) evening.

Mr. Hearst left for London last night.

At the surety general's Associated Press was told today: "The French government has always expelled foreigners who are consistently hostile to France."

"Mr. Hearst is a Franco-Phobe and we prefer that he should do his criticizing outside of France. The Horan affair of 1928 formed only a part of the reasons why Mr. Hearst was asked to leave."

The publisher arrived in Paris at 9:30 a. m. Monday and left at 1:00 p. m. for London without waiting for the expiration of the 36 hours grace accorded him under the expulsion order.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2 (AP)—The International News Service today printed the following dispatch from its London office:

"William Randolph Hearst issued the following statement here today: 'I have no complaint to make, the officials were extremely polite. They said I was an enemy of France and a danger in their midst. They made me feel quite important.'"

"They said I could stay in France a little while longer if I desired, that they would take a chance on nothing disastrous happening to the republic."

BRIGADIER GENERAL DIES
WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (AP)—Brig. Gen. John B. Bennett, retired, died at the Walter Reed Hospital today. He was 64. He was a colonel when the United States entered the world war in 1917 and saw service in France as a brigadier general. He retired in 1925.

WHAT EDITORS SAY ABOUT THE TEXAS AND PACIFIC NORTHERN

PATH OF RAIL EMPIRE

Dallas News:

The proposed invasion of the Panhandle by the Texas & Pacific's 333-mile extension from Big Spring to Lubbock, Vega and Amarillo adds an important chapter to rail history in Texas. It is an impressive tribute to the growth recorded by the Panhandle Plains country. Although railroad development must sight along the lines of future advance, it can not make a blind guess on the progress of sections. It proposes to serve a $13,000,000 investment must be predicated upon sufficient resources to justify the belief that these will increase annually the traffic that the rail lines expect to handle. West Texas is regarded today as the field in which rail interests require extension. This is attested by the efforts that competing lines have made to add trackage in both the Panhandle and the territory south of it.

Although it is impossible to figure in advance the view of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the adverse decisions of that body on rail extensions for the most part have been directed against parallel lines. While the proposed Texas Pacific Northern will traverse territory already served by existing lines or by authorized construction many features of the proposed Texas & Pacific subsidiary assure it serious consideration by the commission. The single-line freight service provided the Panhandle to New Orleans will supplement the port facilities now offered to the products of the section. That is likely to be of greater weight with the Commission than the overnight passenger and freight service that the new line will give the Panhandle to Dallas and Fort Worth, but the importance of the latter, especially for perishable freight, should not be overlooked.

Rail development is unquestionably following the path of King'sley's star of empire. A glance at the rail map shows that to be a necessity. The West, once growing slowly in population, has begun a rapid increase, as capital has been made available for its resources and as initiative has seized opportunity. Rail's great open spaces, long existing between the eastern half of Texas and the Pacific Coast, are beginning to fill up. In the case of the Texas & Pacific alone, this proposed Panhandle development, in addition to construction south of its main line, evidences the stimulation of interest in West Texas service.

Fortunately, the T. & P. is in first-class financial shape. Its careful administration under J. L. Lukaster has been reflected in annual financial statements evidencing sound condition. A proposed expenditure of $13,000,000 is not only a testimony to the possibilities of West Texas but to faith in the future of rail service.

Abilene News:

The Panhandle of Texas is fairly well supplied with east-west rail traffic lines. It has only one north-south connection with the heart of Texas, if we regard the Fort Worth & Denver City as being more or less on the rim of the Panhandle.

The only north-south existing line is that owned and operated by old man John G. Santa Fe.

News that the Texas & Pacific is organizing to build a 333-mile line from Big Spring northward to Vega, with offshoots into Lubbock and Amarillo, comes therefore with a great deal of interest to all of the Panhandle. The proposed line not only challenges the Panhandle supremacy of the Santa Fe but it offers to give the Panhandle another north-south connection—tapping a tier of counties lying to the west of the Santa Fe and giving the rich agricultural lands of the Plains a more direct route to the Gulf ports.

The Texas & Pacific is amply able to build such a road. Under the guiding genius of J. L. Lukaster the T. & P. has not merely prospered; it has become one of the finest railroads in the Southwest. It operates its freight trains on passenger train schedules, and it has spent and is spending millions of dollars in improving roads and terminal facilities. The Texas & Pacific has waxed wealthy on the development of West Texas, and it is nothing short of poetic justice that a part of those proceeds should be used in giving West Texas additional rail facilities.

It is true that in its most recent clash with the Santa Fe (the proposed Abilene & Southern extension into San Angelo) the Texas & Pacific lost out. But perhaps the ICC will listen with a more sympathetic ear to its pleading for the new Plains road. Let us hope so, for the sake of West Texas.

The new line would mean a big step forward for Big Spring. Lamesa, Brownfield, Levelland, Dimmitt, Hereford and other towns in the territory to be served. It would place the Plains of Texas on a competitive basis as to railroad facilities. It would give the Plains another north-south route, supplementing the single-line now in use. It would make Big Spring an important railroad center. Big Spring could afford to take the risk of becoming a mere "Texas & Pacific town," as the saying goes. It would become the gateway for a vast undeveloped empire and would profit accordingly.

The great rail systems are fighting for territory in West Texas, and that is a good sign. It shows that this great section is worth fighting for.

San Angelo Standard:

No greater tribute has been paid to Texas than that of capital's readiness to take a chance on the Southwest in these days when capital is being careful of itself. The proposal of the Texas & Pacific to build 333 miles of road north of Big Spring at an outlay of $13,000,000 is a case in point. It wants the South Plains and the Panhandle linked with its transcontinental system.

The power of agriculture is shown there. The vast development of Texas farming lands has made a thirteen million dollar asset. That confidence ought to begot more confidence. It is cumulative. Where railroad capital has been assured of a sufficient return to warrant the investment, other capital will find its path strewn with inviting opportunities.

It is just a portion of a rail investment of something near a hundred million dollars in construction in Texas. It will help to maintain labor's buying power, it will help to grease the wheels of industry throughout the nation, it is another monument to the powers of the Southwest.

Lubbock Avalanche:

Lubbock people yesterday afternoon turned from the blackened ruins of two business buildings and a grain elevator to another and a better day. The front page of the Evening Journal, companion paper to The Morning Avalanche, supplied the reason.

In connection with the news reports covering the fires were the statements that both business buildings damaged by flames would be rebuilt, fire-proofed and improved. And right next door to the fire reports was another story, telling of plans of the Texas and Pacific railroad to build a line across the South Plains connecting Big Spring, on the south with Amarillo on the north.

Twelve counties in this great section of Texas will be touched or traversed by the Texas and Pacific line when the Interstate Commerce commission approves its construction. Overnight service to Fort Worth, Dallas and El Paso, over one system of railroad is offered and the line, when in operation, will serve one of the finest agricultural sections in the whole Southwest.

Lubbock's fires were calamitous. Much money was lost, much time will elapse during which business will be naturally held up. But as everyone realizes, they might have been worse and every city must occasionally be called upon to repel an invasion of man's great enemy—fire.

A better day is just around the corner. The clouds of pessimism following the flames are dispelling and the sun has broken through. Lubbock will rebuild, bigger and better than ever. The city will continue to grow and prosper and we'll soon forget the fires as we turn to other and happier tasks.

Second Death From Crash Occurs Here

George Gordonhire, 23, Dies Week After Accident

An automobile crash between Midland and Stanton Saturday night, August 23, claimed its second victim Monday morning, when George Gordonhire, Martin county youth, died at the Big Spring Hospital.

Although the crash occurred Saturday night, the youth was at first thought slightly injured, but the following Monday was brought to the hospital from Stanton in a critical condition.

He died at 3:30 p. m. Monday. Carroll O'Dell, another Martin county resident, was killed in the crash. The two youths were riding on the fenders of a small coupe when it collided with a school bus. Three other occupants of the car were uninjured.

Funeral services for Gordonhire were held Monday afternoon at the First Christian church, Stanton. Eberly Funeral Home had charge of the rites. Burial was in the Stanton Cemetery.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Gordonhire of Rockwell, and the following brothers and sisters: W. L. Gordonhire, Mrs. G. B. Pollock, Stanton, L. G. Gordonhire, Austin, Clarence Gordonhire, Stanton, Mrs. Ira Burleson, Fort Worth, J. N. Gordonhire, Jr., Austin, Thaddeus Gordonhire, Sulphur, Okla., and Eugene Gordonhire, Menard.

Internal injuries caused the death of the youth.

Mrs. W. S. Stewart and Mrs. T. W. Long motored to Sweetwater for the day Tuesday.

Explosive Is Used In Cell By Attorney

Method Employed To Kill Wife Used On Self; Writes Children

AMARILLO, Tex., Aug. 30 (AP)—The strange, spectacular career of A. D. Payne, Amarillo attorney and wife-slayer, came to a dramatic end in his jail cell here early today when he touched off a small quantity of explosive believed to be nitroglycerine and brought himself instant death.

For his own death, Payne chose a high explosive, the same instrument he had used to kill his wife and cripple his son, A. D. Payne, Jr., for life. Mrs. Payne was killed and the 11-year-old boy maimed June 27 when a bomb planted in their automobile exploded.

Payne postponed his suicide until he believed the three children would get the benefit of his $10,000 in life insurance. The policy carried a clause that the insurance would not be payable in case of suicide within a year. The year expired at midnight Thursday.

IN LONDON

SAN ANGELO, Aug. 30 (AP)—The suicide of A. D. Payne was front page news in London today. Houston Harbo, publisher of the San Angelo Standard-Times, said in a transatlantic telephone call to his papers here from London, where he and his family are spending a vacation. Harbo said all the London dailies printed long accounts of the explosion at Amarillo which killed Payne last night.

Payne thought it was believed he had killed himself 21 minutes before he killed himself. The policy, however, is contestable for two years.

Opinions

Mayor Ernest O. Thompson, who ordered Payne's arrest after details of the slaying had been unearthed by two newspapers, one from Kansas City, expressed the belief Payne had the small bottle of high explosive concealed about him when he was first taken into custody for just such an emergency. District Attorney Edward W. Thompson said, however, that the grand jury which resumes its deliberations Tuesday would be asked to investigate the possibility of the explosive having been smuggled into the jail.

R. L. Conder, cellmate, who was commissioned by Payne to clear out the large cell before the terrific blast, testified at the coroner's inquest that Payne told him late last night he "had everything fixed to chest the electric chair" and that he had a bottle of nitroglycerine secreted on his person when he was transferred from Stimpert to Amarillo Sunday.

Officers and cell mates expressed the belief that Payne set off the explosive either by connecting it with a light extension wire in the cell or by means of a short fuse and attached to the bottle. The fact that the light bulb was removed from the socket led to the theory that the charge was set off by contact with the wire.

Indicted

Payne had been indicted yesterday for murder. He repeated in would plead guilty and reiterated his desire for a speedy trial. He previously had chafed at the delay, saying he wanted to pay the death penalty quickly so his relatives might forget. His brother, however, had hired an attorney who had been expected to enter an insanity defense.

Last night in his talk with Conder the attorney said he had found a better method of dying than the electric chair and would use it for his children's sake.

In his 20,000 word confession, Payne had told of sending his wife on a "pleasant bypath away from the highway of life" which would have led to financial disaster and mortification if she had found out about his attentions to his former stenographer, Miss Verona Thompson, whose confession led to his exposure.

Was Cool

Commodore Pulliam, the only man who had not left the cell at Payne's instructions when the explosion occurred said Payne appeared calm and cool as he raised himself slightly above the upper berth on which he was lying face down and seemed to press some one thing. He died instantly.

A half hour before the blast which was heard six blocks, Payne finished letters to his mother, and the parents of his former wife and concluded work on his diary, which had occupied his time ever since he was arrested.

He called to Conder: "You notice I finish my diary in ink. This is the end. The ink means that the diary is closed." In his last entry in the diary, Payne called attention to the fact that he had waited long enough that the suicide clause in his insurance policy had become inoperative.

The slayer's letters to his wife's parents and to his mother were practically the same. He asked each for forgiveness and said he was taking "this way out" for the best interests of his children. He said he would soon join his "beloved" wife "over yonder."

"For Love"

"All that I have done is for love" of my dear wife and our darling children," he wrote.

In his diary he inserted the wish that he could take "my dear children along with me" and agonized, ed them to show the world that you can make fine men and women.

Two young employees of a Borge hardware store, who sold Payne the dynamite with which he killed his wife, were questioned by the district attorney this week, but they said they did not remember how much explosive a man answering Payne's description bought.

No definite funeral arrangements for Payne had been made, awaiting the arrival of his sisters, but it was certain not to be held tomorrow.

Mrs. J. C. Johnson, mother of Payne's slain wife, has refused to permit his burial beside her daughter here and Sidney Payne, his brother, has acquiesced to his burial at Tulsa. Payne's diary and letters had asked that he be buried beside his wife.

3 UNUSUAL VEGETABLE RECIPES

By ETIENNE ALLIO, Chef Hotel New Yorker, New York City

Many housewives have been preparing their vegetable dishes in the same way that it seems to them almost like a sacrifice, to suggest that the same vegetables prepared in different ways might be heartily welcomed by the family as delightful variations from the ordinary routine.

While the family may have been well trained to eat the dishes offered them without comment, or less it is a favorable one, the wife housewife will never, while many new recipes are readily available, allow herself to run the danger of a sudden family revolt. Her natural pride in her skill in the culinary art will lead her to seek variety, both for the sake of her own reputation and the pleasure her family will take in the appetizing results of her well planned meals.

Spinach au Gratin—Clean, wash and steam two quarts of spinach. Drain and press through colander. Add one tablespoon butter, one and a half cups fairly thick white sauce, one-half teaspoon salt, and one-half teaspoon sugar. Mix thoroughly and pour in buttered glass baking dish. Sprinkle with two-thirds cup grated cheese and bake in hot oven for twenty minutes.

Onions Aragonaise—Melt one-third cup butter in a saucepan. Add two cups peeled, small onions, pressing down firmly. Sprinkle over top one scant teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, and one-fourth teaspoon sugar. Shake until seasoning is well distributed. Add enough chicken stock to cover. Cover saucepan and simmer until onions are tender. Remove cover and boil rapidly until liquid is reduced to about one-fourth. Butter squares of toast, sprinkle cheese over them, then pour over them the onions. Place in hot oven to brown.

Parmsip and Tomato Scallops—Slice and saute in one tablespoon butter, one medium-sized onion. When golden brown add two cups stewed tomatoes, one and a half teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, two or three cloves, pinch of cayenne, and one teaspoon sugar. Simmer until smooth. Have ready three cups of diced, cooked parmsip, grease a shallow baking dish and place in it a layer of the parmsip. Add a layer of tomato, then a layer of parmsip, continuing this until all the ingredients are used, being sure that a layer of parmsip is on top. Sprinkle with three tablespoons grated cheese mixed with one-fourth cup bread crumbs. Brown in hot oven.

Baby Boy Meets New Misfortune

The sixteen months old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Al Bain thinks, perhaps, that it is a hard life—this being.

Not so many weeks ago the boy was burned when his mother accidentally spilled hot grease upon him. He made his initial trip to a hospital and was given emergency treatment.

Thursday night the baby, like so many other babies, tried to make a treasury out of his abdomen. In other words he swallowed a penny. So the second trip to the hospital was made. The penny was found lodged in his throat.

Dr. C. K. Bivings of Bivings and Barcus Hospital, extracted the coin with forceps after ether had been administered.

The baby was back home today doing nicely.

Local Hospital Adds Equipment

The Big Spring Hospital will have X-ray equipment as complete as any between Fort Worth and El Paso when additional supplies, which have just been ordered, arrive.

WILL ROGERS TELLS ABOUT HIS OWN 'WONDERFUL' TRIP

Everybody was apologizing for the falls.

BY WILL ROGERS

Well, all I know is just what I read in the papers, or what I see while prowling. Well sir, a week or so ago I had a great trip. We were starting to go to the famous Lake Tahoe in California to film the old Frank Bacon play "Lightnin'".

You know it was a hotel on the Nevada and California line, and the divorcees would stop there and it had a California address but in reality you would be living in Nevada.

Well, Fred Stone and his family were out at our little ranch at San Monica spending a little vacation with us, so we all decided to go up. We first hit out for Yosemite. I hate to admit it but I had never been there. My family had been there, and Fred and his folks had been there. It's a great sight. I am not going to tell you about it for you can get folders that can make it wider than I can.

First place they have one of the most unique Hotels you ever saw. In fact lots of dandy places to stop. Everybody was apologizing for the falls as an account of the Republicans giving us no more rains than they have why there has been years in which little water comes over. But there was some, and it would give you an idea of where they were and what would happen to some water if it did happen there that way, what a drop it would get.

We took drives and we took ghost towns where he worked on the pad on the river bank on the gravel bar. They sure do know of the old opera house, and dug how to look up tents, and they around in the dressing rooms and not then old Banjo play-stage. That was the hit of the trip and I ought to say I was with him. He said he had never seen good old Fred Stone and his family played there in the early days but I had heard in years and he had had played lots of em like it, some I had never heard. Then around the middle west.

Then to Carson City, Nevada, one of the most picturesque and historic old state capitals we have, saw where Corbett and Fitzsimmons fought the famous "Solar Plexus" fight. Fred got a kick out of that for he used to box with Corbett all during his championship days, and Corbett always said he would have been a champion middleweight if he had taken it up as a profession. He was always the best boxer, (and fighter) of any actor we ever had on the stage. Then to Reno, which is only forty miles from the lake. But Reno I will have to take a whole chapter to tell you about it, and its "industry." But if you want to have a good time, I don't care where you live, just load in your kids, and take some congenial friends, and just start out, you would be surprised what there is to see in this great country with in 200 miles of where any of us live. I don't care what state or what town, I tell you Henry Ford has been good to us.

Body Of Youth Sent To Home Of His Parents

The body of J. Daniels Houston, youthful clerk of the Texas & Pacific Railway, who was instantly killed Saturday night when he was thrown from his automobile as it turned over in the Big Spring-San Angelo Highway, was sent to Jacksonville, Fla., Sunday night.

F. J. Gibson, 407 West Fifth street, who was riding with Houston but escaped uninjured, accompanied the body.

Houston was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Houston of Jacksonville, formerly of Big Spring.

A few months ago the elder Houston was a Texas & Pacific Railway dispatcher.

LAMESANS MOBILIZING RAIL WORK

W. W. Evans Central Committee Head For Drive

LAMESA, Aug. 29.—Committees to aid the Texas & Pacific Northern railway company in establishing the 333-mile Panhandle route from Big Spring to Vega with branches off to Lubbock and Amarillo were appointed this week during a meeting of Lamesa business men presided over by W. K. Crawley, president of the local Chamber of Commerce.

W. W. Evans, director of the Industrial bureau of the chamber, was named as head of a central committee under which several other groups will work. Other members of the central committee are: W. K. Crawley, M. C. Lindsey, J. D. Dyer, O. B. Norman and Wm. A. Wilson. Branches of this committee include a right-of-way committee with M. C. Lindsey as chairman; a publicity group with O. D. Carter as its head; an agricultural bureau with J. R. Lowry as director; an industrial committee with Aubrey Thomas chairman and J. H. Harp and Owen C. Taylor as members; a statistical committee headed by J. D. Dyer.

A finance committee will be headed by O. B. Norman with C. E. Cameron, Jess Paulk, Clarence Martin, Guy Travis and Joe Flanagan as members. V. Z. Rogers is chairman of a civic, religious and educational committee with Dyer, Kirk and the Reverend E. F. Collier.

LAMESA, August 29.—Work of securing data for establishing the proposed Texas and Pacific Northern Railway line from Big Spring to Vega and with connections into Amarillo and Lubbock for a distance of 333 miles was begun this week when a crew of surveyors for the Texas and Pacific company began work. Elmer Smith, directing the work, will be here permanently, while his assistants, J. V. James, E. Berry, C. W. Ligon, W. L. Walcott, Laurence Henderson, Nap Haughton and Harry Tooner, will be here for six weeks only.

LUBBOCK ASKS HEARING ON T & P N

LUBBOCK, Sept. 1.—An interstate commerce commission hearing in connection with a proposal by the Texas and Pacific Northern railway to construct a 333 mile line from Big Spring north into the Panhandle is expected within the next 90 days by officials of the railroad, it was reported here Tuesday.

An invitation to hold the hearing has been extended the interstate commerce commission by the Lubbock chamber of commerce, officials of the latter organization said.

Survey Completed

Completion of the preliminary survey, which must be placed before the regulatory body, likely will require about six weeks, it has been said, and will precede the setting of the application for hearing. It was also revealed that the question of when the petition can be reached on the docket of the commission also must be taken into consideration, but officials are of the opinion that the hearing will probably be set for November.

The proposed new construction, for which application was filed Monday, would have as its northern terminus, Vega, in Oldham county, and would include extensions from Dimmitt to Amarillo and from the southeastern portion of Terry county to Lubbock. The two spurs would be 55 miles and 46 miles, respectively.

The new road would intersect the Santa Fe at five points in the 13 counties it would traverse, and the two lines would be parallel from Canyon to Amarillo.

Reports Of Railroad Earnings Received

NEW YORK, Aug. 31 (AP)—Railroad earnings reported today for the month of July continued to show decreases, with few exceptions, from figures for the like month of 1929. The Kansas City Southern, including the Texarkana & Fort Smith, showed an increase of $10,476.

Among the roads reporting net operating income for past month, with comparative figures for July last year, were:

Last Remnants of Ferguson Bloc in Austin Disappear

BY RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Aug. 28.—Practically the last trace of the old Ferguson organization was wiped out of the state government by last Saturday's primary election.

Not a single pro-Ferguson legislator was elected this year on the Ferguson issue. One or two sympathizers with the family that went down in defeat have been elected, but on other issues, and by their keeping away from this issue in the campaign.

This contrast with the election of many Fergusonites in 1924, even before Mrs. Ferguson was nominated that year, was the harbinger of Ferguson defeat last Saturday.

Perhaps the most pointed rejection of those who had been part of the Ferguson organization came in the Wichita Falls senatorial district. Roy J. Daniel was beaten in the first primary, and Rube Loftin, another pro-Ferguson former house member, was decisively defeated in the second primary.

Miles Goes Out

Sen. Eugene Miller, who was anti-Moody if not pro-Ferguson, was eliminated from the upper house by a decisive vote last Saturday in his district.

At Houston, John M. Mathis, formerly friendly with Ferguson, was nominated for house membership, but he won the nomination by supporting Ross S. Sterling for governor.

At Austin former Senator T. H. McGregor, whose personal friendship for Ferguson survives, was nominated to the house, but he did not turn his hand for the Ferguson issue in the race.

Archie Parr, only surviving senator who voted against the impeachment charges in 1917, was barely re-nominated to the senate by a district over which he in the past had been the undisputed political czar. He lost half the counties in his district.

Tennant Last Appointee

Sen. A. J. Wirtz of Seguin, who was leader of the opposition to Moody during the past four years, voluntarily withdrew. The democrats have nominated for his seat young Willie K. Hopkins of Gonzales, who is not a follower of the Ferguson flag. The republicans have nominated Reno Eickenrodt, Seguin publisher, who likewise has no sympathy with the Fergusonites.

The six-year appointees of Mrs. Ferguson to state offices will be wiped off the books next January, with one exception. That is Roy L. Tennant, board of control member, who was appointed for a term running to the end of 1931.

Texas Drouth Causes Crops Deterioration

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 1 (AP)—The severe drought over a large area of the Eleventh Federal Reserve Bank district has caused a rapid deterioration in growing crops and has intensified the slackness in business and industry, according to a resume of conditions in the district made by the federal reserve bank here.

On the basis of the August 1 report of the department of agriculture the indicated production of major crops, cotton excepted, was smaller than a year ago, the review revealed. While the prospective yield of cotton was somewhat larger than the small 1929 crop, the survey continued, the lower level of prices prevailing for this commodity will offset the advantage of larger production.

The low indicated return from the cotton crop, the report said, together with the reduced income from other crops, will materially affect the purchasing power of the district. It added, there had been sufficient moisture to mature fair to good crops but conditions were becoming acute in those sections where the drought had been most severe.

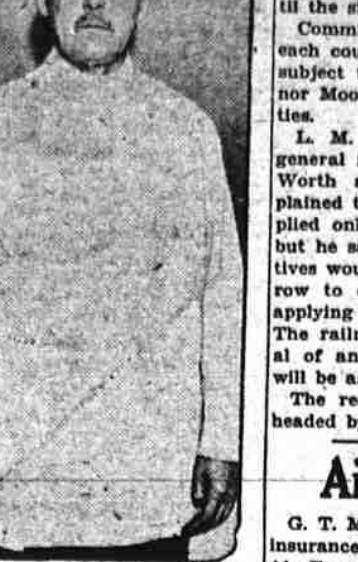

Deterioration

The report also said that the protracted drought and the unusually high temperatures which prevailed over practically all of Texas had caused a sharp deterioration in range conditions. The condition of ranges on August 1 was estimated at 76 per cent of normal, which represented a 10 point decline during July in cattle ranges and 12 points in sheep and goat ranges. Livestock, however, was reported to have held up remarkably well in the face of adverse conditions.

The review further stated that "the demand for merchandise in the wholesale and retail channels continued at a low level during the month. The sales of department stores in the larger centers reflected a decline of 21 per cent from the previous month, due in part to seasonal influences, and was seven per cent lower than in the corresponding month a year ago.

"While sales in some lines of the wholesale trade showed a seasonal improvement over June, the gain was less than usual and business was on a considerably smaller scale than in 1929. The low prospective returns from agriculture, added to the prevailing dullness of trade, has increased the cautious attitude of merchants with the result that they are limiting purchases to actual requirements."

RED CROSS ASSISTANCE IS FAVORED

38 Counties Included By Body In Area

BULLETIN WICHITA FALLS, Tex., Aug. 29 (AP)—A resolution asking the legislature to remit state taxes for a year in drought stricken counties was adopted here today by the state drought relief committee.

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., Aug. 29 (AP)—An emergency call to the American Red Cross for funds to aid 40 drought-stricken Texas counties appeared imminent today as the Texas drought committee heard the situation pictured by residents of the counties.

Need Actual

Speakers were unanimous in the opinion that immediate aid was needed. Over the entire block of it, West Texas counties, stock is dying, vegetation is gone and the people soon would lack food and other necessities of life, the committee was told by representatives of several counties who said their counties were representative of the area.

Speakers advocated an emergency call to the American Red Cross. Counties represented were Knox, Throckmorton, Baylor, King, Hall, Childress, Wilbarger, Hardeman, Foard, Cottle, Motley, Crosby, Haskell, Stonewall, Kent, Lynn, Garza, Dawson, Borden, Scurry, Fisher, Shackelford, Eastland, Stephens, Cass, Callahan, Taylor, Nolan, Mitchell, Howard, Martin, Sterling, Coke, Runnels, Coleman and Wichita.

Members of the committee present were O. B. Martin of College Station, L. M. Hogsett of Fort Worth, Dick McCarty of Albany, D. A. Bauden of Stamford, J. M. Crews of Childress, J. F. Friberg of Wichita Falls, L. M. Thompson of Throckmorton, C. A. Phillips of Paducah, E. B. Smith of Quanah, H. T. Fletcher of Alpine, A. M. Cooper of Baird, Andy Bourland of Vernon, Edgar Hutchins of Crosbyton, Sin O'Neal of Coleman, L. J. Harper of Linden, Fred Rennels of Crowell, J. K. Crews of Madador, J. A. Lacey of Turkey, John H. Thaxton of San Saba, O. P. Thrane of Snyder, B. Eagan of Big Spring, Monte Owen of Sweetwater, R. R. Patterson of Roby, R. V. Colbert of Stamford, W. R. Keeble of Abilene, Guy Patterson of Rotan, G. S. Plants of Seymour, W. K. Crowley of Lamesa, A. P. Pierce of Quanah, W. B. Slaton of Tahoka.

Suggestions made during the morning session, on which action was expected this afternoon, included a request to the president of Mexico that the order closing the Mexican consulate at Sweetwater be rescinded; that the federal government make loans to farmers with liberal collateral requirements; that reduced drought yards and that the time limit of the lower rates be extended until the situation should be relieved.

Committees of five men, from each county were being selected, subject to certification by Governor Moody, to direct relief activities.

L. M. Hogsett of Fort Worth, general freight agent for the Fort Worth and Denver railroad, explained that lowered rates now applied only to interstate shipments but he said Texas railroad executives would meet at Dallas tomorrow to draft a reduced schedule applying to intra-state shipments. The railroad commission's approval of any schedule then drafted will be asked, he said.

The resolutions committee was headed by W. B. Lee of Spur.

Airport Log

G. T. McDonald, manager of the insurance department of Southern Air Transport, made an inspection of the local airport today. The hangars and house were investigated and fire fighting equipment tested.

C. C. Hatcher of New York, was a passenger today on the east-bound S. A. T. plane to Dallas.

Flying a Gypsy Moth, Pilot Hudson of the Midland Oil Co. landed here Thursday. He was enroute from Fort Worth to Midland.

Rev. and Mrs. Ben Hardy of Hamlin, parents of Dr. Wofford B. Hardy, and Mrs. Buster Eubanks and son of Corpus Christi, sister of Dr. Hardy, are visiting here for a few days.

With four experienced teachers to lead a student body that is expected to include 120 boys and girls, the Midway district school will open the 1936-37 school session Monday morning, September 1, in a new fireproof building, just completed. The school building is located on the Bankhead highway between Big Spring and Coahoma. Miss Alice Pickle will again be principal. She has taught at Midway four sessions. Dee Tonn, beginning his third session in the school and Miss Maryon Hutto, who taught there last year, will return. The fourth teacher, Miss Arvoo Bishop, comes from the Vincent school.

Highway Bond Issue Due In Dem Platform

AUSTIN, Aug. 28.—It won't mean anything for the present, but the democratic state platform to be written at Galveston Sept. 9 is practically certain to carry an endorsement of a statewide highway bond plan.

This was foreshadowed by retention of the bond issue as a campaign plank in Ross S. Sterling's successful race, even after campaign leaders admitted the bond proposal cannot get before the voters for another two years.

Mr. Sterling, as the nominee, and his friends, will have the right to draft the party platform. Sterling said his opposition had charged he would drop the bond proposal in the run-off race, and just to show them he commended it in everyone of his 60-odd speeches. The cards read now that he would consider abandoning it in the party platform as backing up the same as he would have backed up to quit it during his race.

The platform is sure to endorse equalizing and adjusting taxes and modifying the tax burden upon the small farm and home owner. Mr. Sterling advanced the road bond plan as the only immediate practical route to this goal. He submitted it as a plan "not to mortgage your home; not to lift the mortgage already upon them; not to bend you but to unhand you." His speeches reiterated that he wanted the state bond issue to relieve outstanding local and county issues, now levied upon property, and to relieve counties from having to pay into the construction of state highways. He wanted to transfer the whole cost of highways to the gasoline revenues; and reaffirmed that this plan will allow schools to keep their present one-fourth the gasoline tax.

Highway Commissioner W. R. Ely, while introducing Mr. Sterling to West Texas audiences, said a poll of the new senate already has disclosed more than a sufficient number of senators against it to block submission of the bond issue. Eleven senators can block it. The constitutional amendment can be submitted only at a regular session, so this meant it cannot be put up to the voters before 1933, and required a vote by them after that.

So that a favorable expression upon it in the party platform at Galveston will be a gesture that cannot change present conditions. It will indicate the purpose of an educational campaign during the two-year Sterling term in office toward the ultimate submission of the plan.

This much of the party platform already is evident. Another plank is sure to reaffirm prohibition, and prohibition law enforcement.

The platform will follow the campaign advocacy of better facilities for caring for tuberculars and other state wards. Another will affirm a liberal state policy toward education, both public schools and institutions of higher learning. Another will pledge a square deal for labor.

Rev. Owen Home From Virginia

Rev. R. L. Owen, pastor of the Presbyterian church, has returned from a 25-day vacation, which he spent in a Bible conference at Manassas Springs, near Harrisonburg, Va. He reported an exceedingly profitable visit there. With his brothers, Rev. J. A. Owen of Abney, he made the trip by motor. They constituted the entire Texas delegation at the conference and also had the distinction of having come the greatest distance. A "hunt" program was given during the conference. Each state delegation was expected to perform. Singing "The Eyes of Texas" by three Owen brothers won the prize.

Messrs. Henry Neal and Joe Calverley are working cattle this week.
