The settlement came after mediation. Hall received the lump sum payment last week.

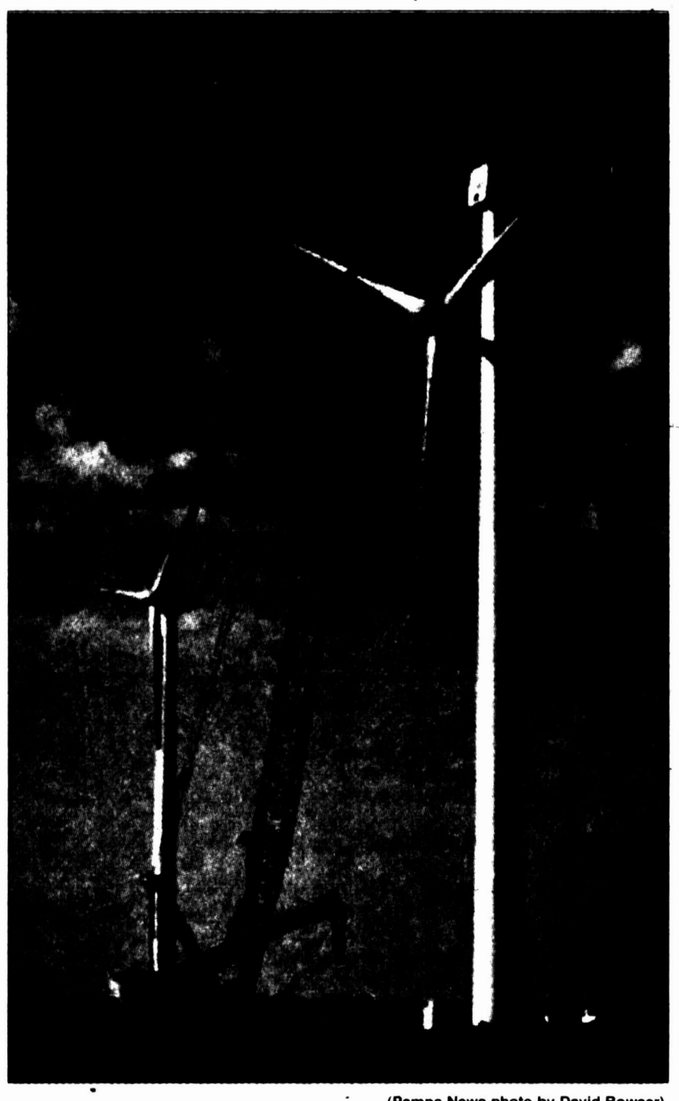

Hall was in her third year as city manager when she was fired last year, her attorney, Thomas E. Baker Jr., said. In her lawsuit, Hall alleged sexual harassment and sexual discrimination as well as civil rights violations.

Sprouting from the ground near White Deer, giant windmills began taking shape this week. A Minnesota construction company started mounting propellers on the 220-foot-tall towers at the Llano Estacado Wind Ranch for Southwestern Public Service.

WHITE DEER — A Minnesota construction company began mounting propellers on 226-foot-tall towers this week as the Llano Estacado Wind Ranch takes form.

Cielo Wind Power, LLC, an Austin-based company is building a wind ranch about three miles northwest of here and selling the electricity the wind turbines are expected to generate to Southwestern Public Service.

Propellers were mounted on the first of 80 towers this week by Mortenson Construction. Ken Oxford, Mortenson's superintendent on the project, said he hopes to have all 80 of the white, three-bladed wind-turbine generators in place by Christmas, weather permitting.

The construction company is using a 600-ton crane to hoist the 95,000 pound generators into place atop the 226 foot tall towers.

Two cranes are required to bring the 88,000 pound, three-bladed propellers into place.

Each of the 80 turbines will generate one megawatt of electricity for the SPS system.

The 80 megawatts of electricity from the Llano Estacado Wind Ranch here at White Deer will fill the average needs of more than 26,000 homes, according to Walter Hornaday, president of Cielo.

Southwestern Public Service, now part of Minneapolis-based Xcel Energy, has contracted to buy electricity from the wind ranch for the next 15 years.

Each of the 14 families, who own the land upon which the wind ranch sits, are being paid wind royalties, similar to oil and gas royalties.

Gary Gibson, president of SPS, said the cost of wind power has decreased in recent years, making it competitive with other sources of energy.

The wind ranch will be the largest between Midland and Wyoming, Gibson said. SPS has about one million customers in a 52,000 square mile region that includes the Texas Panhandle and

Chase lands man in jail

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

A 24-year-old Pampa man is in jail this morning following a late-night pursuit through west Pampa that ended in his arrest and with damages to a utility pole, fence and gas meter.

Salvador Rodriguez, 24, 417 N. Faulkner, remains in Gray County Jail today in lieu of $5,000 bond on an enhanced charge of evading arrest. Justice of the Peace Kurt Curfman set bond at a hearing this morning. The charge was enhanced, sheriff's officials said, due to previous convictions.

At 11:15 p.m., Monday, Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Chris Didway was patrolling near Gray County Road 5, watching an area that had been vandalized recently, said Lt. Randy Langwell.

Didway saw a 1982 silver Chevrolet pickup turn north on Gray 5 at a high rate of speed. He then saw the pickup turn east on Texas 152 without signaling. When the deputy attempted to stop the pickup for the traffic violations, the pickup took off, heading south on Price Road, at times traveling in the northbound lane, Langwell said.

The seven-minute pursuit traveled throughout the western part of Pampa, including Horse Alley area, Alcock, Montague, and Davis streets and alleys. When the pickup turned north in the 300 block of Doyle, the deputy saw the pickup strike an unidentified object and continue into an alley in the 400 block of Perry where it then struck a utility pole. A fence and gas meter in the 300 block of Davis were also damaged by the speeding pickup, according to the report.

Officers continued to chase the pickup through Doyle and Davis streets, west on Buckler, south on Perry and finally east on Browning where Texas Department of Public Safety trooper Daimon Jones joined the pursuit.

Volunteers sought as child advocates

CASA of the High Plains will hold an informational meeting at 7 p.m., Monday, Nov. 29 for anyone interested in learning more about volunteer opportunities with the program. The meeting will be at the CASA offices at 600 W. Francis.

CASA of the High Plains, a United Way agency, provides trained, court-appointed volunteers to act as advocates for abused and neglected children who are in the custody of the Department of Protective and Regulatory Services.

These volunteers attend a 30-hour training course to provide them with the tools they need to advocate for abused and neglected children. The program has grown from serving 40 children in 1999 to 64 children in 2000. Unfortunately there are more abused and neglected children that need to have their voice heard.

If you could be the "eyes and ears" of the court, advise the court about the best interests of the child, serve as monitors to ensure compliance with court orders and interview individuals with pertinent information such as parents, teachers and doctors, please attend this meeting.

Coyotes, bobcats OK as pets; some wild animals not allowed

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

Coyotes and bobcats can be kept by Gray County residents in unincorporated areas, but many wild animals will not be allowed in the county following action by the Gray County Commission.

County Judge Richard Peet told the commission at the last meeting there were three choices: prohibit wild animals, register the animals for $50 a year, and not impose any restrictions.

He said the county commission has very limited law-making authority, but the legislature has given the individual counties the responsibility to decide whether they would want to prohibit wild animals.

"This is one of those items that the legislature often imposes, but doesn't send you any money to impose the restrictions," said Peet. He said authority was given to the sheriffs to impose any restrictions which may be imposed by the commission in the unincorporated areas.

Commissioner Joe Wheeley said a registration program will be better than to outlaw them in the county.

"I know a person who currently has a bobcat and it's like a member of their family," said Wheeley. "Both paws are declawed and it is a pet of the family, and to enact a law that would prohibit that would actually put them breaking the law.

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion around Texas:

San Antonio Standard-Times on worry about flu, not anthrax:

The threat of anthrax exposure has prompted many patients to call their doctors requesting Cipro, the anthrax antibiotic of choice.

But the reality is that Americans have a much greater probability of being exposed to the flu this winter than to anthrax.

And a $10 shot of prevention can save lives and spare many Americans undue suffering during the next few months.

The New York Times reports that each year, 10 percent to 20 percent of Americans are victims of influenza. It hospitalizes 200,000 people and contributes to 20,000 deaths a year.

While flu shots could greatly reduce those numbers, only about 60 percent of people at risk for hospitalization and death from flu will be immunized.

Doctors advise those at the highest risk, the elderly and those with chronic health problems, to get their flu shots early. But most people will benefit.

The vaccine is not recommended for people allergic to eggs or who have suffered an allergic reaction to a flu shot in the past.

This year, a flu vaccination could be particularly important.

Because early symptoms of inhaled anthrax are similar to flu symptoms, avoiding the flu can prevent anxiety over possible anthrax. Thus, it can ease an overburdened health system.

This flu season, prevention is the best medicine. It can help avoid both real illness and psychological distress.

El Paso Times on "smart" visa:

One of the victims of Sept. 11's terrorism was U.S. immigration policy. And El Paso is becoming a laboratory for the challenge that has emerged.

The problem is obvious: A porous border is an open invitation for terrorists to enter and wreak their havoc at their leisure. The solution, while equally obvious, isn't as easily solved: Secure the borders.

Secure borders will not be achieved by any one master stroke. Rather, the implementation of a number of complementary measures will help accomplish that goal.

One idea with lots of merit is the "smart visa." Sens. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., and Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., introduced legislation that would require millions of foreigners to carry cards that contain fingerprints and other, biometric data.

Information would be entered into a central database that could be accessed by appropriate law-enforcement agencies, such as Border Patrol, Customs and the Immigration and naturalization Service.

Consider: Last year, 529 million people entered the United States by land, sea and air and were inspected by the INS. We now know that some of them were terrorists. It's entirely possible that a "smart visa" system would have caught at least some of them or prevented them from entering the country.

"Smart visa" isn't the whole answer. And it's going to be somewhat of a logistical nightmare for both the U.S. government and those millions of people who will have to carry the visas.

But it's better than a repeat of Sept. 11.

America's foreign-policy needs attention

Charley Reese
Syndicated columnist

Terrorism is always a reaction to policy, and I had hoped that the recent atrocity in New York City would at least generate a debate on America's foreign policy. It has not.

Basically, we have two choices. One is the old republican model advocated by George Washington. We offer trade and friendly relations with all countries on an equal basis. We do not get involved in their internal affairs. We do not make moral judgments about their internal affairs. We do not involve ourselves in their quarrels with neighboring countries. In short, provided they leave us alone, we leave them alone and simply do business when it is in our mutual interests. Today this policy is always labeled "isolationism" by advocates of internationalism.

And internationalism is our second choice and our current policy. This basically involves our country presuming to interfere in the internal affairs of some countries, to take sides in some quarrels between foreign countries, to make moral judgments and seek to inflict economic or military injury on some countries while rewarding others with special favors and aid. I prefer to call it imperialism, since it involves our country's national government acting as if it were the seat of a world empire, allied with certain vassal states and contending with potential rivals.

Just to cite one example: Why should Afghanistan's government take orders from our government? Afghanistan is a sovereign nation, and we have no extradition treaty with it. To simply order the government to hand over Osama bin Laden or face military attacks is about as imperialistic as it gets. We did the same thing when we interfered in Yugoslavia's attempt to put down Albanian rebels in Kosovo.

Well, you might like playing a neo-Roman citizen. I don't. I would like it much better if we could return to our old republican model, when Americans could travel the world safely and hear nothing but praise about their country. Today in many parts of the world, we are hated simply because of the injuries our government has inflicted on people in pursuing its imperialistic policies.

And, yes, those policies are often closely connected with the financial interests of multinational corporations, though our imperial politicians almost never admit that. I've always contended that if a multinational corporation wishes to protect its financial interests, it should hire its own mercenaries and not hijack America's armed forces under false pretenses. No American who died defending the business interests of Kuwait Inc. had any share of those profits. As far as Americans were concerned, we were already buying Iraqi oil, so if Iraq added the Kuwaiti fields, it wouldn't make any difference at all to us.

Some of the bad side effects of imperialism include the constant need to have a foreign enemy in order to justify so large a standing military establishment and so much federal power. Another is the exclusive equation of patriotism with militarism and unquestioning obedience to the government. In fact, a true patriot loves his people and his land; a nationalist loves his government.

No American who has unthinkingly jumped aboard a bandwagon to wage war on some country that had done us no harm or even had the capability should look down his nose at the German people of the 1930s. If you're going to surrender your mind to a politician, you are going against the American tradition. Traditional Americans look upon their political leaders as temporary servants, not as fuehrers or emperors.

At least today, you know there is a price to be paid for being a neo-Roman citizen of the New Empire. And I hope you know that no empire in the history of mankind has ever lasted.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 13, the 317th day of 2001. There are 48 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 13, 1775, during the American Revolution, U.S. forces captured Montreal.

On this date:

In 1789, Benjamin Franklin wrote in a letter to a friend, "In this world nothing can be said to be certain, except death and taxes."

In 1927, the Holland Tunnel opened to the public, providing access between New York City and New Jersey beneath the Hudson River.

In 1940, the Walt Disney animated movie "Fantasia" had its world premiere in New York.

In 1942, the minimum draft age was lowered from 21 to 18.

In 1956, the Supreme Court struck down laws calling for racial segregation on public buses.

In 1971, the U.S. space probe Mariner 9 went into orbit around Mars.

In 1974, Karen Silkwood, a technician and union activist at the Kerr-McGee Cimarron plutonium plant near Crescent, Okla., died in a car crash.

In 1977, the comic strip "Li'l Abner" by Al Capp appeared in newspapers for the last time.

In 1982, the Vietnam Veterans Memorial was dedicated in Washington.

In 1985, some 23,000 residents of Armero, Colombia, died when a gigantic mudslide buried the city.

Ten years ago: The U.S. House of Representatives approved a Senate-passed bill guaranteeing many workers up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for family emergencies.

Five years ago: A grand jury in St. Petersburg, Fla., declined to indict police officer Jim Knight, who had shot black motorist TyRon Lewis to death the previous month; the decision prompted angry mobs to return to the streets. An all-white jury in Pittsburgh acquitted a suburban police officer, John Vojtas, in the death of black motorist Jonny Gammage in a verdict that angered black activists. Sgt. Loren B. Taylor, a drill sergeant who'd had sex with three women recruits at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., was given five months in prison and a bad-conduct discharge in the first sentencing of the burgeoning Army sex scandal.

One year ago: Lawyers for George W. Bush failed to win a court order barring manual recounts of ballots in Florida. Florida Secretary of State Katherine Harris announced she would end the recounting at 5 p.m. the next day — prompting an immediate appeal by lawyers for Al Gore. Joe Mullen and Denis Savard were among those inducted into the Hockey Hall of Fame.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Jack Elam is 85. Actress Madeleine Sherwood is 79. Producer-director Garry Marshall is 67. Country singer-songwriter Ray Wylie Hubbard is 55. Actor Joe Mantegna is 54. Actress Sheila Frazier is 53. Actress-comedian Whoopi Goldberg is 46. Actress Caroline Goodall is 42. Actress Tracy Scoggins is 42. Rock musician Walter Kibby (Fishbone) is 37. Thought for Today: "Education is a private matter between the person and the world of knowledge and experience, and has little to do with school or college." — Lillian Smith, American writer and social critic (1897-1966).

Teaching values to make America strong

Bob Chase
President, NEA

The national response in America's classrooms to the destruction and loss from terrorist attacks on the U.S. has been nothing short of magnificent. This year's celebration of American Education Week (Nov. 11-17) must begin with a salute to the New York City teachers and school staff who risked their lives to lead local children to safety, and to the critical role other educators are playing in reclaiming the nation's spirit.

This American Education Week, I urge the nation to take a moment to recognize that public schools are on the frontlines in this new era because it is in classrooms, more than any other place, that we create and nurture the citizens of tomorrow.

As President Bush said, the terrorists attacked America because they despise our values. We will defeat this enemy by arms and law, but also by holding fast to the values that define us as Americans.

America is defined not by its wealth and abundance, but by our freedom, our liberties and our commitment to an open, tolerant, democratic society.

In the months and years ahead, it is our challenge to guide an entire generation of young Americans to understand the freedom and ideals that our country represents.

Our schools are superbly suited to this task. For two centuries, public schools have been preservers and transmitters of America's ideals. In our schools, generation after generation of native-born and immigrant students have been taught America's core values.

In first grade, we teach our students to face the flag respectfully and to pledge allegiance to "one nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all." And that is just the beginning. For 12 years, through study and discussion of American history, literature and government, we nurture citizens and patriots.

Public schools never stopped teaching values. We teach them explicitly, and more important, we model values. Everything we do and say in front of our students is a values statement — and those values include the all-American values of honesty, responsibility, self-discipline and love of country.

Public schools also stress one other value that is especially urgent today: Tolerance and respect for people of different colors, cultures and faiths. In our most diverse public schools — often with children from dozens of countries — teaching students to cooperate and excel in a multicultural setting is a powerfully important lesson. As a student at one remarkably diverse high school told me: "We all get along — all of us. If anyone tried to act prejudiced or to hurt someone, the other kids just wouldn't allow it."

This student may not realize it, but she is a "combatant" in the civilized world's struggle against terror and hate. So are her teachers.

The success of America's homeland defense will depend on more than metal detectors and sky marshals. It also will depend on the values taught in America's public schools.

— Bob Chase is a middle school teacher and president of the National Education Association.

WIND

South Plains, southeastern New Mexico, the Oklahoma Panhandle and southwestern Kansas.

Joe Peter with Cielo said the White Deer project is a seed program.

Within five years, he wants 2,000 megawatts of power produced from wind in this area.

Cielo has a single wind generator near Texico on the Texas-New Mexico stateline that provides electricity for SPS. The company also has Southwest Mesa Wind Farm near McCamey, Tex., the largest wind farm in the state with 107 wind turbines.

As seen from the air, it takes a lot of equipment and supplies to build a wind farm. Note the size of some of the material as compared to a truck in the right center foreground of the photo.

Somewhere on Browning Street, between Christy and Dwight, the pickup's driver jumped from the vehicle. Trooper Jones ran after the fleeing suspect, finally capturing the man when he jumped a fence in the 400 block of Dwight.

Officer Didway took the suspect to Pampa Regional Medical Center for treatment of minor injuries to his nose and mouth, Langwell said, adding that officers could smell a strong odor of alcohol on the suspect, also.

The man was placed in observation at the local hospital for a time, the sheriff's lieutenant said, and was placed in jail after being medically cleared.

ANIMALS

Wheeley said he has visited with the owner of the bobcat and he is more than willing to register the bobcat.

"Coyotes are listed on that and I have known people who've had half-coyotes as pets," he said. "Now, how much are we going to regulate people for protection?"

He said the commission can add or delete any animals on the state list of animals. He said wolves are not on the list. "Many people have wolf-hybrids, too." he said.

Lion, tiger, ocelot, cougar leopard, cheetah, jaguar, lynx, hyena, bear, jackal, baboon, chimpanzee, gorilla orangutan or any hybrid of an animal listed are among the animals commissioners court agreed to prohibit.

Commissioner Gerald Wright said when there was a tiger in the McLean area he wished the commission had the authority to help the county residents. He also cautioned while wild animals can be domesticated, the wild can't can't always be taken out.

Wheeley said more people are bitten by dogs and cats than wild animals. "Kids in the country are more close to nature, and I hate to take this away from them," said Wheeley.

Peet said the commission may also make modifications to the list.

In other business, County Treasurer Scott Hahn told the commission, "Interest rates are not very good at all," as he gave the commission a third quarter investment report.

He said the county is being paid two percent on checking accounts, two-and-one-half percent on certificates of deposits, and 2.8 percent on county funds in TexPool.

Hahn said the shortest time period the county funds are on certificates of deposit is 18-20 days with the longest period about 100 days. He said if the interest is high he will keep the money in around 120-140 days.

Commissioners approved erecting a proposed fence on a potential county right-of-way at the request of Lee Cockrell.

The commission also approved a request from Romines and Warner Oil Co. for road crossing at Seminole, renewed medical officer contract with Gray County Jail and approved Lefors Independent School District selling block four, lot five in the original town of Lefors to the First Baptist Church in Lefors.

Commissioners also decided to again provide flu shots for county employees.

Stocks rise at midday

NEW YORK (AP) — The flight of Taliban forces from Afghanistan's capital Tuesday gave investors a surge of optimism and sent stocks climbing sharply in midday trading.

Relief that Monday's jetliner crash in New York appeared to be an accident and not the result of terrorism added to the market's upbeat mood.

In late morning trading, the Dow Jones industrial average was up 140.74 to 9,695.11, a sharp contrast with the plunge it took in the hours after Monday's plane crash.

Broader stock indicators also rose. The Nasdaq composite index was up 41.74 to 1,881.87, and the Standard & Poor's 500 index was up 15.37 to 1,133.70.

Guest At Wedding Discovers Source Of Bar Bill Inflation

Dear Abby

Is written by Pauline Phillips and daughter Jeanne Phillips.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing this for the couple who questioned the bar bill from their wedding. The caterer claimed they had served seven drinks per person.

I attended an elaborate wedding. I am diabetic, can't drink alcohol and have a bad foot, so dancing was out. I spent the entire evening at the table while everyone else danced. Each time guests returned to our table, a server would take new drink orders. After a few sips, the couples would head back to the dance floor. The server would then clear the drinks from the table. Abby, some of the guests had taken only one sip.

I told the server the people would be coming back to the table. She replied that she was instructed by the bartender to remove all drinks when people were not at the table. I'm sure that's the reason the bar bill was so high for the physician's wedding.

OBSERVER
FROM NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR OBSERVER: You could be right. Thank you for an eyebrow-raiser of a letter. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Years ago when I organized functions featuring a hosted bar at high-end hotels, I noticed that as the events drew to a close, the barmen would crack the seals on several bottles of the good stuff. We would then be charged for the open bottles. Presumably, the barmen and their friends would have an extremely pleasant evening — and be credited with ringing up additional revenue for the hotel. Seven drinks per guest wouldn't be out of the ballpark.

Once I discovered this game, I made a point of monitoring the barmen more closely. I instructed them not to break any seals during the last half-hour of the function and to collect opened bottles before the barmen left. After each event, we used the remaining liquor to throw a thank-you party for the secretarial and administrative staff who had helped to organize the function but hadn't been able to attend, a gesture that was much appreciated.

I can understand the sticker shock. The host probably paid for numerous full but "opened" bottles.

KENNETH B.,
CLAREMONT, CALIF.

DEAR KENNETH B.: What you are describing is fraud and the exception to the rule in the hospitality industry. But thank you for the warning. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: As "social director" for the firm I work for, I have encountered many instances of caterers inflating a liquor bill, or guests from other parties crashing our open bar.

While it's highly unusual, I don't blame the couple at all for double-checking on their guests' consumption. Seven alcoholic drinks per person is certainly questionable. Could the man and his wife have consumed seven drinks each and driven home? I think not! And I can't imagine other guests making up the difference — unless they all had to be carried home.

I applaud the couple's refusal to assume the bill was correct. I'm sure they struggled with the decision to contact their guests, but considering they were talking about a bar bill of approximately $3,500 for 100 people, how can anyone blame them for not wanting to pay for a caterer's or bartender's mistake?

NO LONGER RIPPED OFF
IN ATLANTA

DEAR NO LONGER RIPPED OFF: While I agree with you, it was clear from the signature ("Appalled") that the writer was very put off by the host's request. Personally, I always double-check my bills, because they sometimes contain errors. And darn it, I have yet to see one that's in my favor.

AUTO RACING

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — NASCAR said that it can do little to improve safety at its small U.S. tracks, where a newspaper investigation found that 150 people have died since 1990.

NASCAR sanctions 92 short tracks, but doesn't have the resources to set and enforce safety rules at those events, NASCAR vice president Jim Hunter said.

"I don't think we can assume a bigger role than we currently do," Hunter said in Homestead, Fla. He gave no reasons for the stand in an interview published Monday in the Charlotte Observer.

An investigation by the Observer found that at least 260 people have died in auto racing — at large and small tracks — since 1990.

The sport's perils were clear again Sunday in the Pennzoil 400 at Homestead-Miami Speedway. During a pit stop, Ward Burton's car hit several of Ricky Rudd's crew members.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawyers for players and owners met again to go over their disagreement on management's plan to eliminate two teams next year but did not set a schedule for arguing the case.

The meeting was required by the collective bargaining agreement that expired last week.

Later this week, the sides probably will schedule dates to argue their positions before Shyam Das, baseball's permanent arbitrator.

NEW YORK (AP) — Retired Florida pitcher Alex Fernandez and Los Angeles infielder Tim Bogar filed for free agency, raising the total to 147 among the 158 players potentially eligible.

HOCKEY

TORONTO (AP) — Vyacheslav Fetisov shudders when he recalls trying to stop the scoring of Mike Gartner, Dale Hawerchuk and Jari Kurri.

As a defenseman, Fetisov always was trying to find a way to break up their rushes toward the net.

But now, they are on the same side, as members of the Class of 2001 in the Hockey Hall of Fame.

Joining the four players' induction was Craig Patrick, the general manager of the Pittsburgh Penguins, who was voted into the hall in the builders category, the fourth member of his family to be honored.

TRACK AND FIELD

LONDON (AP) — Blood tests will be carried out for the first time at next year's London Marathon.

The blood tests are being introduced in a bid to detect the use of the banned drug erythropoietin, or EPO, a synthetic hormone that improves endurances by increasing the level of oxygen-carry red blood cells.

Pampa favored by 3 over Andrews

PAMPA — A year ago, the Andrews Mustangs put together one of their best seasons in school history.

The Mustangs reached the third round of the state playoffs before being eliminated. They finished with a 9-4 overall record and 6-1 in District 4-4A. After losing 17 seniors to graduation, including five starters on offense and four on defense, it was doubtful if Andrews could advance to the playoffs again.

However, the Mustangs defeated Levelland 29-13 in the season's final game to capture the third-place playoff spot.

Now, Andrews (5-5 overall, 3-2 district) meets Pampa at 7:30 Friday night in Plainview in the bi-district round of the playoffs. The Harris Ratings has the Harvesters favored by three points.

Pampa came through with an impressive 20-7 over big-time rival Borger last weekend to not only secure a playoff spot, but gain a share of the District 3-4A championship. The win also snapped a two-game losing streak to the Bulldogs.

"We played well in all phases of the game," said Pampa coach Dennis Cavalier. "Over 48 minutes, we won the game in all categories."

Senior quarterback Randy Tice, who has started the last four games, led the Harvester offense. Tice scored on a 5-yard run and tossed a 36-yard touchdown pass to Jesse Tarango that put Pampa ahead 14-7 in the third quarter.

Tailback Ty Elledge put the finishing touches on Borger with a 1-yard TD plunge in the fourth quarter.

The Harvesters, behind some key blocks up front by tackles Trent Price, Jon Lambright and end Jon East, combined 326 total yards and 13 first downs.

Senior cornerback Ryan Nash led the Harvester defense, which held Borger to 207 total yards. Nash finished the night with seven tackles, including three solo stops. He broke up all three passes that Borger quarterback Jarred Hooper threw his way.

"We had good pressure on the Borger quarterback most of the night. We were very opportunistic against a good Borger team. We buckled down when we needed to when Borger was in our territory, Cavalier said.

The 7-3 Harvesters have been designated as the visiting team in the bi-district game, which kicks off at 7:30.

Suzuki, Pujols voted top rookies

Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Ichiro Suzuki was looking for a shutout.

The 28-year-old Seattle outfielder became the second straight Japanese player to win the American League Rookie of the Year award but was disappointed one voter put him in second place.

"I was a little embarrassed to be called a rookie here in the United States," he said Monday through a translator. "I was so relieved today when I heard this announcement I won the Rookie of the Year award because I felt this was an award I should have won without any doubt."

Suzuki, who came to the major leagues after nine seasons in the Japanese Pacific League, received 27 of 28 first-place votes from a panel of the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

"If I won this award, I had wanted to win unanimously," he said.

Albert Pujols of St. Louis was a unanimous choice for the National League rookie award.

"It's a pretty good honor," the 21-year-old Pujols said. "You only get it one year, and so I'm happy I got it."

Suzuki was the first rookie to win a batting title since Tony Oliva in 1964. Suzuki batted .350 with 56 stolen bases, becoming the first player to lead the major leagues in both categories since Jackie Robinson in 1949.

Suzuki's 242 hits were a rookie record and the most for anyone since Bill Terry's 254 for the 1930 New York Giants. Suzuki, the first Japanese non-pitcher in the major leagues, was the second straight Seattle player to win the award, following reliever Kazuhiro Sasaki.

Before last year, the only Mariners' player to win had been Alvin Davis in 1984. Seattle paid the Orix Blue Wave $13,125,000 after the 2000 season for the rights to Suzuki, then gave him a three-year contract that guaranteed him $14,088,000.

Suzuki, who gets a $75,000 bonus for winning, had 138 points, easily beating Cleveland pitcher C.C. Sabathia, who had 75 points after going 17-5 with a 4.39 ERA.

Sabathia got one first-place vote, from Chris Assenheimer of the Chronicle-Telegram in Elyria, Ohio.

"I just felt that Sabathia better met the criteria of what a rookie is in the truest sense of the word," said Assenheimer, who was surprised he was the only voter not to have Suzuki No. 1 on his ballot. "That's nothing against Ichiro."

Sabathia disagreed with that view and thought Suzuki was the top rookie.

"The award is for first-year players in the big leagues, and he's definitely deserving of it," he said. "There's not an argument about that at all."

New York Yankees second baseman Alfonso Soriano was third with 35 points, and Angels shortstop David Eckstein was fourth with six.

Pujols got all 32 first-place votes in the NL, becoming the ninth unanimous rookie pick in the NL. The others were Frank Robinson (1956), Orlando Cepeda (1958), Willie McCovey (1959), Vince Coleman (1985), Benito Santiago (1987), Mike Piazza (1993), Raul Mondesi (1994) and Scott Rolen (1997).

Pujols set an NL rookie record with 130 RBIs, and led the Cardinals with a .329 average, 37 homers and 112 runs. He won the award one day after St. Louis teammate Mark McGwire announced his retirement.

"It shocked me when I heard that last night," Pujols said.

He played 78 games in the outfield, 55 at third base and 43 at first base in becoming the sixth St. Louis player to win the rookie award.

Harper and the Bucks meet Nazareth at 7:30 Saturday night in Dick Bivins Stadium. The Harris Ratings has Nazareth favored by one point in the bi-district game.

Report: Cowboys consider Central Texas for part of training camp

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Central Texas officials are negotiating to bring two weeks of the Dallas Cowboys' annual training camp to the Alamodome.

City Councilman David Garcia said Monday that San Antonio officials had had two meetings with what he called "excited" Cowboys officials.

"But Jerry Jones is a shrewd businessman, and we all have to sit down and look at the figures," Garcia told the San Antonio Express-News in Tuesday's editions.

Talks were expected to continue Wednesday in Irving, where Alamodome manager Mike Abington is scheduled to meet with Dallas director of marketing John Hickman and Jerry Jones Jr., the Cowboys' vice president. Any agreement would need City Council approval before being implemented.

However, Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple would not confirm that San Antonio was the team's leading choice for 2002.

"We're in the process of considering potential sites for future training camps, but it's premature for us to talk specifics at this time," Dalrymple said. "There are a few different options in Texas that are being considered."

Garcia said two National Football League-quality outdoor practice fields would need to be built. He estimated the cost of those grass fields to be between $2 million and $3 million.

Wichita Falls has played host to the Cowboys the past three years. But Dallas' contract with Midwestern State expired last year.

Any scheduled workouts in San Antonio would follow a two-week training camp in California. The Cowboys spent 27 years training at Cal Lutheran College in Thousand Oaks, Calif., before moving to Austin in 1990.

"It's something that makes sense," said Garcia. "San Antonio loves the Cowboys, all of South Texas loves the Cowboys and all of Mexico loves the Cowboys. That sort of fan base inherently makes this an attractive venue."

Officials of McAllen and Mission, in talks last summer, offered to split costs and cover the team's expenses over three years, but construction delays have stymied plans.

A source close to the negotiations said the Cowboys would allow San Antonio to sponsor a scrimmage every year during the proposed agreement. A similar scrimmage once drew more than 50,000 people to El Paso's Sun Bowl.

Ravens' defense preserves win with goalline stop against Titans

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The officials gave Tennessee one final chance at the end zone, and the Titans knew they would put the ball back into the hands of quarterback Steve McNair.

So did the Baltimore Ravens.

This time, the Ravens stopped McNair short of the goal line with no time left Monday night, preserving a 16-10 victory that will rank among the wackiest finishes ever.

"We knew that's the only thing they wanted to do," Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis said. "They weren't going to put the ball in someone else's hands. If you watch film on them, you know that they run quarterback sneaks an awful lot."

McNair thought he had scored the winning touchdown on just such a sneak minutes earlier on a hurried play with the clock ticking down. Officials signaled a touchdown, but confusion then reigned over an offsides penalty.

Officials talked with each other, then Tennessee coach Jeff Fisher and Baltimore coach Brian Billick.

Finally, referee Bernie Kukar said the offsides penalty had been a dead ball foul, moved the ball about a foot from the goal line and gave the Titans one last play.

"Who wouldn't sneak it on the 1-yard line?" Baltimore linebacker Jamie Sharper said. "Our big dogs up front, Goose (Tony Siragusa) and Sam (Adams) blew up the middle, and he couldn't get any push. Then he tried to come around the outside, and me and Corey (Harris) smacked him."

The Ravens started sprinting toward the locker room, a few bottles and cups flew onto the field and Titans receiver Derrick Mason threw his helmet down and kicked a pylon.

The Titans could have thrown the ball, but Fisher said he thought McNair would find a way to score.

"We thought we'd jam it in, and the game was going to be over," he said.

McNair, playing with a sinus infection, was weak and not as sharp as he needed to be. He was 27-of-48 for 256 yards passing and a touchdown. He also ran six times for 19 yards.

"They stopped us. I can't explain it ... things happened so fast. I felt myself not penetrating, so I tried to go the right and it wasn't there," he said.

Now the Ravens (6-3) have won three straight overall and five of the last six in this series. They couldn't feel any better about themselves with five of their final seven games at home.

"(Winning) on the road in an environment like this has got to mean something," Baltimore coach Brian Billick said. "I don't know what."

The Titans (3-5) find themselves in serious danger of missing the playoffs after winning an NFL-high 13 games last season. They only have themselves to blame.

Similar to their playoff loss last January, the Titans outplayed Baltimore but came up short on the scoreboard. The Titans limited the Ravens to 55 yards total offense in the first half, and piled up 318 yards total offense against the NFL's second-rated defense, compared to 238 yards for the Ravens.

Tennessee played its preferred style of keepaway, holding the ball for more than 35 minutes.

But the Titans' special teams botched two field goals. Joe Nedney missed a 48-yarder wide left, then a holding penalty erased a 24-yarder, and a bad snap led to a turnover.

The defense also allowed Elvis Grbac, who had a 57-yard TD to Qadry Ismail in the third, to drive the Ravens down for Matt Stover's third field goal, a 30-yarder with 3:06 to go.

"This is a typical finish for us with the Titans," Baltimore tight end Shannon Sharpe said.

McGwire announcement shocks Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mark McGwire's retirement announcement came at the perfect time for the St. Louis Cardinals, even if they didn't appreciate the way the news was delivered.

On Monday, general manager Walt Jocketty, manager Tony La Russa and the rest of the front office convened in Phoenix for annual organizational meetings. Though still a bit in shock to have learned of McGwire's future via fax, at least they can begin discussing ways to spend the resulting $30 million windfall.

McGwire did his best to soothe ruffled feathers by telephoning general manager Walt Jocketty ON Monday night, a day after the news broke. The fax arrived at Busch Stadium late Sunday night, so the team didn't see it until Monday morning.

"I just hope that how this has been handled over the course of the past 24 hours, I think we'll get through that real quick," team president Mark Lamping said. "I think everyone would agree that as we look back on Mark's contributions to St. Louis that we celebrate all the things he did for this franchise."

Team spokesman Brian Bartow said McGwire apologized to Jocketty, saying the announcement was supposed to be made Monday after he returned from vacationing in Mexico. McGwire said the public relations firm he hired jumped the gun.

"It happened a little sooner than he thought," Bartow said.

McGwire, who retired after two injury-plagued seasons, walked away from a $30 million, two-year contract extension he agreed to last spring but never signed. Among the options to replace the 38-year-old McGwire is a player who's done it successfully once before: Jason Giambi.

Giambi, who has admired McGwire since their days together in Oakland, replaced Big Mac on the Athletics in 1997 when McGwire was traded to St. Louis.

Giambi won the AL MVP last season and could win it again this season after hitting .342 with 38 homers and 120 RBIs. But the Cardinals will probably have to compete with Oakland and the big-spending New York Yankees to bring in Giambi and it might take as much as $20 million a year.

Giambi's agent, Arn Tellem, said he expects 6-to-8 teams will be in the running for his client, who's vacationing out of the country. Tellem has had one conversation with Jocketty.

"It's early at this point. It's just beginning," Tellem said.

Another possibility at first base is Tino Martinez, a free agent after winning four World Series titles in six years with the Yankees. The Cardinals also could move NL Rookie of the Year Albert Pujols to first base and sign an outfielder like Moises Alou.

Pujols wasn't sure how McGwire's retirement would affect his future. He started at four positions last year, including 31 at first base.

"It doesn't matter where I play," Pujols said. "I just want to be in the lineup every day."

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Look ahead. Don't become muddled in an immediate emotional issue. A new moon encourages new beginnings on a profound level. Your instincts guide you in both finances and emotions. Lighten up and look at your cup as being half full, rather than half empty. Tonight: Touch base with a loved one.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★ A higher-up or mate displays anger. Take a walk. Chill out. Feeding the volcano won't help. Make decisions about how to handle this situation and person more effectively. You don't need to experience this type of upset. Tonight: Go along with another.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Information you receive could be faulty. You might be heading in the wrong direction if you aren't careful. Someone indulges you both financially and emotionally, if you let go of your temper. Decide to become more responsible for yourself. Tonight: Work late.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Your intuition comes through when others fail you. Even when a potential problem lands in your lap, you find ways to pull a white rabbit out of a black hat. Use your ingenuity. Scratch the word impossible from your vocabulary. Tonight: Enjoy a special friend or loved one.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Others add fire to your ideas. Understand that controversy sometimes works in your favor. Allow others to air out ideas and explore personal options. Deal with fundamentals. Decisions need to be made about home and family. Tonight: Lay back at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Speak your mind, especially in a difficult work-related situation. Ultimately, holding in your anger can only cause you a problem or cause you to be accident-prone. Don't forget a friendship. Make plans to get together with this person. Keep your focus. Tonight: Where the action is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ A new financial beginning appears on the horizon, but you need to say "no" to risks. Also learn to not allow another to manipulate you by pleading. You can and need to say no, despite the reaction you might get. Be tough. Tonight: Go over your budget.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You know what you want, but so does another. Rather than creating a major skirmish, step back and try another approach. Carefully evaluate a change that involves family, home and your personal life. Opt for new beginnings that are workable. Tonight: Whatever makes you happy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★ Make it OK to drag your heels. How you see a personal situation could change substantially because of a conversation. Don't worry about losing your temper. Holding in anger ultimately could cause you a greater problem. Decide to take better care of yourself. Tonight: Do something just for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Aim for more of what you want. Understand that you do not have to cause yourself financial instability because of these desires. Stay focused, eyeing the long term. Someone celebrates good news. Your sensitivity adds to your kudos. Many really adore you. Tonight: Join friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You could sabotage an important new beginning involving your work or a key person in your life. Think in terms of success and change. Curb a tendency to react and be spontaneous. At this point, make your work your highest priority. Tonight: Could be late.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Your creativity helps you head in the right direction. Your imagination draws from information or research. Don't hesitate to sign up for a workshop or class. Make long-distance calls and reach out for someone at a distance. Tonight: Start working on your Christmas list.

The Golden Touch...massage therapy

Danny Degner massages a client with special stones a registered massage therapist in Pampa. Owner of The Golden Touch, he has recently begun massaging on a full time basis.

Is stress getting to you? Are your muscles taut? Can't seem to relax?

The Golden Touch is the place for you.

A relaxing atmosphere awaits his clients as tensions begin to leave their body.

Danny Denger has been a certified massage therapist since May, 1999. During the past two and one-half years, he has been giving professional massages on a part time basis while employed with Celanese.

Recently retiring from the Pampa company, he is now providing massages full time.

Aromatherapy, hot stones, two types of vibration therapy and essential oils are just part of Denger's treatment in this professional atmosphere.

Music plays in the background as a relaxing technique while the special stones are warming in a crock pot while Denger begins the two-hour massages.

Aromatic scents are in the air as green lights give clients a relaxing atmosphere. The subdued lighting assists the clients as the tensions ebb from their bodies. Lying face down on a special massage table, clients' bodies are covered during the massage with a sheet. Only the area of the body being massaged is uncovered.

As the clients disrobe in privacy, a special bell is provided to for clients to signal Degner when they are ready for him to enter the room.

Each of Denger's massages are individualized to meet the needs of the individual. At the first appointment, the client completes a form giving information on any medical conditions and medications which they take prior to the massage.

Denger discusses any medical conditions with the patient and provides techniques which will most help the client. He uses the essential oils which will be compatible with the client.

Deep knots which have formed in muscles of some clients due to tension are relieved by vibration and then special hot stones are used to relax these muscles.

The special massage stones include specially shaped ones of Italian Marble and Chinese Jade. Flat stones from Mexico are kept by him in the palm of his hands as he massages the back. The special stones are hundreds of years old.

Hot stones are placed down the spine on a covering on the back to additionally relax these muscles before the massage begins. Therapeutic hydrotherapy is also used.

Trigger points and stretching are an important part of the therapy. Nerve endings in the feet and hands reveal where the tense spots are in the client's body.

Oregano, marjoram, thyme are all spices seen in most kitchens, but Denger has these oils to help clients with their individual needs.

Shoulders, arms, neck, back, face, legs, feet, fingers and toes are all massaged.

Denger continually studies on the most modern and up-to-date techniques used in massage therapy to provide relaxation to his clients. He keeps abreast of the latest developments in the field by attending workshops and classes.

His massages are designed to provide the most effective treatment for each man and woman. He has even given massages to pregnant women into their eighth month of pregnancy, and has men as well as women clients.

Denger continually seeks knowledge to help his clients as some have special health conditions such as high blood pressure, cancer, heart conditions, diabetes as well as other diseases and health conditions.

Specials oils and lotions for clients use are available for purchase from him.

At the conclusion of the massage, he gives each of his women clients fresh flowers and the men candy to take home with them.

Degner always contacts his clients a day or two after the massage to check any reactions to oils and to see if he needs to modify treatment for the following massage.

Anyone wanting to have a relaxing, professional massage may contact him at 665-6850. Gift certificates are also available.

Degner welcomes anyone with inquiries to contact him. He is accepting new clients and will work with those with busy schedules. He takes late appointments to accommodate his clients.
