COTTON'S UP

A one-week-old cotton plant lifts its leaves to the noontime sun Tuesday, June 20. Collingsworth County farmers who had not been able to get cotton planted and up because of wet weather finally got their chance last week, and most of the county's cotton crop was in the ground and on its way by the end of last week.

City Acquires Street Sweeper

A street sweeper has been acquired for Wellington through the Army surplus program and should be here

Two Charged In Stabbing of Illegal Alien

Two Wellington men, Isaac Cantu and Israel Sanchez, have been charged with aggravated assault as the outgrowth of a stabbing which took place about 7:00 p.m. Saturday, June 17.

Sheriff John Rainey reported that Lorenzo Lucio, 23, identified as an illegal alien living at 804 Galveston Street, was stabbed during an argument which took place there.

Lucio was stabbed under the left rib cage, and also received cuts, he said.

He was transferred from Collingsworth General Hospital to an Amarillo hospital about 2:00 a.m. Sunday but was released there later in the day, according to Rainey.

The sheriff's department was not notified until about an hour after the incident occurred.

Cantu and Sanchez were held in Collingsworth County jail over the week end and were arraigned before Mrs. Beatrice McKinney, justice of the peace, Monday morning.

Tuesday, June 27, City Manager Glen Taylor told the City council.

This was one of several capital improvements planned for upcoming budgets, and this acquisition will save the city around $20,000, the cost of a new machine, Taylor said after the meeting Monday, June 19.

The city manager, who has an Army surplus screening card, located the sweeper at Kelly Air Force Base, San Antonio. Army surplus equipment can be acquired at no cost. But there is no guarantee of its condition.

"It looks like a good one," he said, "although it may require some repair work when we get it here. Ninety percent of what we have had has been real good."

The present sweeper was second hand and has been plagued with breakdowns.

The new sweeper will be trucked to Wellington through an arrangement of Texas State Technical Institute for its truck driver course. The city will pay only for the fuel and cost of the driver.

Taylor will return to San Antonio Monday with the truck and accompanied by a sheriff's deputy to screen for other equipment, principally trucks and pickups, he said. Besides the city, he will look for equipment for the ambulance service, fire department, and possibly the schools.

After San Antonio, he will visit Bergstrom AFB at Austin, Ft. Hood, Carswell at Ft. Worth, Sheppard AFB and Ft. Sill.

With only three members present, Tom Wilkins, Wayne Cudd and Willie Gragson, the council approved unanimously $5,183.97 in bills on a motion by Willie Gragson and seconded by Wayne Cudd.

Mayor Bill Hatch reported on the conference which he, Gragson and Ralph Owens and Joe Fickling had with FAA officials in Albuquerque, N.M. There will be no money available for airport improvement until 1980, but FAA also said that on major projects already approved, there may be money left over that could become available in $75,000 to $100,000 amounts, Hatch said.

Taylor reported water sales were up for this fiscal year, which will end June 30, and by that time will amount to around $140,000 for the 12 months. A $127,000 figure had been projected.

The second swimming pool pump of the summer has gone out, Taylor said (both were old), and the council approved purchase of a new one on a motion by Tom Wilkins and second by Gragson.

Fifty boys and girls started swimming lessons at the pool Tuesday. Pool manager this summer is Rodney Bailey, a high school teacher.

The new pump was installed Wednesday.

The city manager said he will have a new budget ready

Summer Reunion Information Asked

Summer is the season of reunions, and The Wellington Leader would like to know when your family meets.

Because many of these are now held at Pioneer Park and Ellison Park, the newspaper does not know about them--unless those having the reunion let us know.

Registration sheets are available free of charge at the newspaper office.

Those who would like for their reunions to be listed in the July calendar of events should contact the newspaper by Monday June 26. For the August Calendar, they should be turned in by July 24.

Permanent Repair of Roads May Require Up to a Year

Damage to Collingsworth county roads from recent heavy rains may amount to as much as $100,000, and it can be as long as a year before all damage is permanently repaired, Chester White, county road supervisor said this week.

In the meantime, all available road employees are working to restore damaged roads to the point that they are passable.

"I have never seen so much damage to roads all over the county," Judge Zook Thomas said. "I have seen damage this heavy to roads before, but always limited to parts of the county."

This week, three areas remained where roads are impassable. Ranchers living north of the low-water bridge across Elm Creek, in the east part of the county, must reach Wellington by way of I-40 and Shamrock.

A 60-foot bridge near the Spurgeon Morgan farm east of Wellington went out and that road remains impassable. Lumber from this bridge is scattered over the adjoining farm and will be gathered up and much of it reused.

A wash across the road between Swearingen and Memphis cannot be crossed.

"There are bad washes all over the county, but you can get across most of them," White said.

He also said that he is short of help at this time and cannot find anyone to work.

"I'd hire several good workers right now," he added.

The damage was so heavy because of "too much water in this short time," he reported.

Work began as soon as equipment could get on the roads. Most barrow ditches were too full of water at that time to be cleaned, but now, most ditches can be cleaned as the roadbeds are repaired.

Roads in no part of the county escaped damage.

Judge Thomas said that an attempt will be made to replace the Elm Creek Bridge with a better structure similar to the one across Buck Creek west of Wellington.

"Elm Creek carries a tremendous amount of water, and we will try to put in something that will stay," he said.

Monday, a county maintainer cut into a Lone Star Gas line to Memphis while working in the Rolla Community. Several hours was required for gas company employees to shut off the gas, remove the damaged area and install new pipe.

Judge Thomas said there is the question of whether the pipe is buried deep enough, and estimated this was about two feet below the surface.

Mike Naylor, Lone Star local manager was hospitalized at the time, and further investigation of the accident will be made, Judge Thomas said.

Farm Bureau Queen Contest On July 14

A Farm Bureau Queen contest will be held this summer if there is enough interest among girls of the county, Mrs. Veva Davis, FB office secretary, announced.

The contest date has been set for Friday, July 14.

"We need to know if the girls are interested and we urge all who are to come to the Farm Bureau and sign up as early as possible," said Mrs. Davis.

"Our goal is 10 or 12 girls who are interested in competing in this contest and in going on to the district contest if selected to represent the county," she explained.

To be eligible, a girl must be 16 through 21 years of age and never married. She must be the daughter, or sister of a Farm Bureau member.

She will appear at the contest in a formal dress and make a one-minute talk on "Why I am glad my parents belong to Farm Bureau."

Kidnapping Charges Filed in Abduction of Infant Friday

Kidnapping charges have been filed against a 25-year-old Wellington woman in connection with the abduction of the 9-months-old boy with whom she was baby-sitting Friday night, June 16.

Sheriff John Rainey, who returned her to Wellington from Amarillo Tuesday, identified the woman as Sandy Crabtree, who has lived here about a month.

She was arrested about 10:00 p.m. Saturday at the Amarillo Boulevard night club where she formerly worked.

Sheriff Rainey said the baby, Robert David Abbe, son of Mrs. Ira Dale Abbe, was located about half an hour later.

His parents went for him Saturday night and an examination by a doctor showed he suffered no ill effects, the sheriff said.

According to the sheriff's department, Mrs. Abbe left the child with Miss Crabtree, whom she did not know, while she and her husband went on an outing to another town. When they returned home about 4:00 a.m., both the baby-sitter and child were missing. Officers were called in immediately.

Rainey said the woman hitched a ride to Hedley with a pickup driver, and he in turn made CB contact with a west-bound semirig and arranged for the driver to take the woman and baby to Amarillo.

A major break in the case came when the pickup driver, a Wellington man, heard sheriff's department radio discussion and contacted officers.

Concern mounted and Sheriff Rainey called in the Federal Bureau of Investigation into the case after the driver told officers Miss Crabtree spoke of taking the child, whom she said was her son, to Connecticut where she formerly lived.

The warrant for her arrest was issued early Saturday.

Miss Crabtree was arraigned in justice court at Amarillo and her bond set at $2,000.

Sheriff Rainey said she will be arraigned here, also, and that a higher bond will be asked. She is being held in Collingsworth County Jail.

He said no motive for the kidnapping has been determined, and no ransom demands were made.

The baby and his parents came here about the first of the year when the child's father went to work for a Wellington firm.

The FBI left the case after the woman was arrested, as the kidnapping was less than 24 hours old and the child was not taken across a state line, according to the sheriff. This leaves local officers in complete charge of the case. The FBI told Rainey that they would furnish him with an offense report, detailing what they learned in their investigation.

Assisting the sheriff in the investigation were Chief Deputy Richard Keller and Deputy Julian Torrez.

Extension Agents to Annual Conference

COLLEGE STATION--The entire professional staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, more than 1,000 strong, will gather at Texas A&M University, June 19-23, to key in on issues dealing with "People, Programs, Progress".

Miss Jean Chandler and Don Reeves, extension agents, will go from here.

The biennial conference is designed to enhance the professional competence of all staff members so that they can be more effective in conducting educational programs in agriculture, community resource development, family living, and 4-H and youth work, points out Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, Extension director.

Along with keynote speakers at three general sessions, the conference will be highlighted by 41 individual minicourses ranging from "4-H Basics" and "Energy Use and Conservation" to "Executive Management" and "Home Food Production." Each staff member will be attending one of the 10-hour minicourses to develop further expertise in a particular area.

A number of national figures will headline the general sessions, according to W.W. Grisham, Jr., conference general chairman, who serves as coordinator of energy programs for the Extension Service.

Gil A. Stricklin of Dallas, with the Baptist Convention of Texas, will discuss "Resource for the Future--People" at the opening session on Tuesday, June 20. Joining Stricklin on the program will be Dr. Jack K. Williams, chancellor of the Texas A&M University System; Dr. Perry L. Adkisson, A&M vice president for agriculture and renewable resources; and Pfannstiel.

The second general session

Thursday morning will feature Dr. George Hyatt, Jr., Extension director in North Carolina, who will talk on "Coordination of Extension Agriculture, Home Economics, 4-H, Community Resource Development and 1890 Programs." Other keynote speakers will include Dr. Lorne Parker, director of instructional communications at the University of Wisconsin, who will discuss an "Educational Telephone Network," and Dorothee Polson, food editor of The Arizona Republic, Phoenix, who will talk on "Communicating Nutrition Information to the Public."

The closing session on Friday will be headlined by Dr. W. Neill Schaller, acting deputy director for Extension, USDA Science and Education Administration, who will talk on "Extension Programming in the Year 2000." "A Futuristic View of Research" will be discussed by Dr. Neville P. Clarke, director of the Texas Agricultural Experiment station. The session will also feature the presentation of the Knapp-Porter Award to two distinguished Texans. This award is the highest given by the Extension Service to recognize outstanding contributions to agriculture and family living in the state.

Director Pfannstiel's "Message to the Staff" will conclude the biennial conference.

Tax Officials At School In Amarillo

Representatives of four taxing units attended a tax seminar in Amarillo from Monday through Wednesday, June 19 to 21.

The City of Wellington sent Mrs. Margaret Carroll, city secretary, and Mrs. Phyllis Killian; and going from the county tax office were Mrs. Ann Ware, tax assessor-collector, and Mrs. Paula Stallings, deputy.

Going from Samnorwood School was Mrs. Kenneth Martindale.

Five courses such as this one are required for certification. The next one will be offered at the state tax assessors-collectors convention to be held in October.

Alcohol-Drug Abuse Counseling Service One Year Old in County

The Alcohol and Drug Abuse Counseling Service on June 13 observed the first anniversary of its opening in Wellington, with plans in the formative stage for expanded work.

What is the scope of this work in Collingsworth, one of four counties served by the office?

L.E. Swaim, counselor who has been with the office since it opened, looks back on his 12-months work.

"In our community there are approximately 300 people who suffer from and are associated with the disease of alcoholism," he says.

"They are not necessarily people who travel to the Oklahoma border in the late hours of the evening, hoping to arrive before the liquor stores close in order to replenish their stock, but one in five certainly could be that person who has long since progressed from wanting a drink to needing a drink."

The 300 figure includes not only the alcoholic, but those affected by his actions—his family, employer, those who work with him, and his friends.

The number of men and women whom he is counseling is confidential, but Swaim says his case load is "heavy." Yet the size is about average for a rural county with background similar to this, he adds.

Swaim's office is a part of the Family Service Center, located in the Wellington Clinic. When it opened, a year ago, the Alcohol and Drug Abuse counseling service was funded through the Panhandle Community Action.

In March 1978 it was transferred to Amarillo Mental Health Mental Retardation which will be able to provide better funding for expanded services.

Swaim says approximately 30 percent of those whom he counsels are referred by County Judge Zook Thomas, after they have had brushes with the law—drunk driving, public drunkenness, etc. These are the visible alcoholics in the community.

Another 50 percent are self-referrals, men and women who realize they cannot control their drinking and ask for help.

The remaining 20 percent are referred to the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Counseling Service by state hospitals, the Vernon State Center or Panhandle Alcohol Recovery Center (PARC) at Amarillo.

In the year his center has served Collingsworth, there has been a recovery rate of about 30 percent, Swaim said. This includes those who have been sober for one year.

Here again, these figures are about average for the county.

Alcoholism or drug abuse among the very young—junior high and even upper elementary grade students—has not reached this county, "yet" says Swaim.

The youngest person coming regularly for counseling is 17, and the oldest 64. However, in another county, Swaim says he is working with a 79-year-old man, who has been sober a year after approximately 40 years of alcoholism.

Most of the teen-agers in need of counseling are seen by Larry Barton, director of the Family Service Center.

Swaim is pleased with the acceptance the Alcohol-Drug Abuse Counseling Program has received.

When it started the proportion of men to women receiving help was 75-25, now it is approximately 60-40. He credits stepped up public information, especially that of the National Council on Alcoholism as responsible for the greater number of women now willing to seek help.

"Alcoholism is not confined to the larger cities of the country," he emphasizes.

"Many people still would associate alcoholism with the person who is on skid row in our large metropolitan areas, and in reality, only three to

First place went to the Buffalo Chips of Canyon; second to Childress Wheels; and consolation to Childress Sonics.

Farm Bureau Taps Trio for Seminar

Three students who have completed their junior year in five percent of the alcoholics are found on skid row." Rural communities have a few within their areas who drink excessively, and who manage to spotlight their problem by being arrested for being drunk, drunk driving, etc, and there is the general belief that these are the town alcoholics, he points out.

Not so, says Swaim. What of the housewife, who through no real explanation has lost the ability to control her drinking. Or the small business man who continues to keep a long-standing promise not to drink during business hours.

Also in the future is an alcoholism seminar, sponsored by MHMR, which may be opened to the public.

high school were selected this week to attend the 1978 Farm Bureau Citizenship Seminar at Baylor July 17 through 21.

Representing Wellington will be Jimmy Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.I. Morgan, while Donna Langley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Langley, is the Quail selected and Lowry Schaub, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schaub, will go from Samnorwood.

They will join other students to make the trip on a chartered bus.

Collingsworth County Farm Bureau, which sponsors the students to the seminar, has had representatives at the sessions each year since it was organized.

The students hear outstanding and nationally known speakers, all stressing citizenship and the American way of life.

Best Security Guards Don't Look Like That, Marsh Says

Picture a security guard. He's a fairly big guy, right? Preferably a man who looks like he could handle himself in a one-on-one. Besides all that, he carries an equalizer, of course.

Wrong, at least in the case of guards assigned by Troy Marsh of Eagle Security Inc., and Don Cunningham, manager of the Denver office. Marsh rates a guard's most important qualifications as patience and a strong sense of responsibility, and Eagle's guards are rarely armed. Moreover, there's more than an outside chance an Eagle guard might be a woman.

"There's nothing a man can do as a guard that a woman can't do," said Marsh, a veteran of 23 years in law enforcement and allied fields. "Men have some advantages, but women average out more attentive, more alert."

Before opening the agency last fall in Clock Tower Square, 14211 E. 4th Ave. in Aurora, Marsh had worked for a nation-wide security agency as office manager in several cities and then as national director of its energy resource es division. His early career was as a chief of police, deputy sheriff and member of the U.S. Border Patrol in Texas.

Since starting the Denver agency and also an office in Colorado Springs, Marsh has sent armed guards on only one assignment and feels that having them carry guns is usually not only unnecessary but undesirable. Eagle uniforms purposely do not resemble those of policemen, and badges are cloth rather than metal.

Providing security to business and industry is a growth field, but Marsh attributes this to changing management attitudes rather than an increase in dishonesty.

"If you're profit minded, you have to be security minded," Marsh said, "since the Department of Commerce estimates that 10 cents out of every business dollar is stolen in one way or another."

Marsh believes that a certain fairly constant percentage of people will not steal under any circumstances, a group will or won't depending on opportunity, and a percentage will manage to steal no matter what.

Because of the last group, loss control is a more realistic goal than loss prevention, and good security deals with making theft as difficult as possible for the middle group.

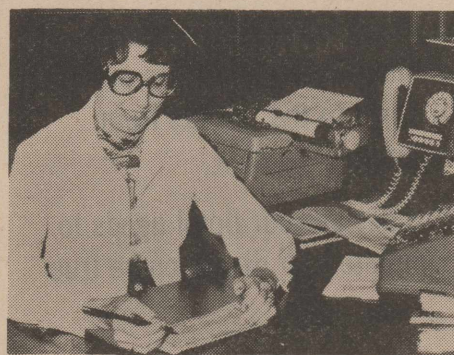

"When we are employed to perform a consulting contract for any company, our first priority is to security-orient its top management. Then the problem must be analyzed in depth before an appropriate program can be designed."

Marsh will hold a series of seminars, beginning with one in Denver in May, to discuss security problems and methods with management representatives. Thirty companies will be represented by invitation at the Denver session.

Marsh served as chairman of a group who assisted Senate Minority Leader Ray Kogovsek, D-Pueblo, last year in drawing up legislation to require state licensing of guards. (The bill failed in the House.) Marsh is playing an active role in current organizing efforts by security company officials seeking to upgrade standards in their field.

Dysart Descendants Gather to Honor Mrs. Jennie Holcomb

The descendants of the late Robert Allen and Ella Jane Dysart met Sunday, June 18, at 1:00 p.m. at the Farm Bureau Hospitality Room for their first reunion.

The only surviving child of this pioneer couple, Mrs. Jennie Dysart Holcomb, lovingly known as "Miss Jennie," was honored. She was born in the Fresno community in November, 1892, and has lived all of her life in Collingsworth County.

Robert A. Dysart, his wife, Ella, and five children, Ella Gertrude, Carey Allen, Robert Clyde, Charley Edgar and Herbert D.W., came to what was to become Collingsworth County in 1889. They built their home in what was to be Fresno community.

Most of those who attended this first reunion arrived Saturday, June 17, and gathered at the Farm Bureau to reminisce and get re-acquainted.

The other families arrived on Sunday. After attending church services, everyone was present for a catered luncheon at the Farm Bureau, and the reminiscing continued with many pictures being taken.

Those attending were Mrs. Holcomb and these children: Dr. and Mrs. H.A. Holcomb of Houston; Dr. Dysart Holcomb of Shreveport, La., and his daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Todd and children, Jennifer and Amy and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bjorback and daughter, Erica, all of Amarillo; Mrs. Dorothy Holcomb Johnson of San Diego, Ca.; and Dr. and Mrs. Carter Holcomb and daughter, Janet.

Children of the late Mr. and Mrs. Carey Dysart present were Mr. and Mrs. Elwyn Dysart of Dalhart, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Dysart of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. A.R. Foster (Alwyn Dysart) of Sulphur Springs, Mrs. Laverne Dysart McPherson of Amarillo.

Mr. and Mrs. C.M.B. Dysart came from Clayton, N.M. He is the son of the late Charley Dysart.

Children of J.W. and Ella Gertrude Dysart Loter who were here for the reunion included John Loter of Fallon, Nevada, Mr. and Mrs. A.Z. Hay (Lena Loter) of Abilene and Mr. and Mrs. Galen Hays and sons, Mark and David, of Richardson, also.

Mr. and Mrs. R.B. Harper (Margaret Loter) and grandchildren, Scott and Sherri Harper of Oklahoma City; Allen D. Loter of Lubbock, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Loter and son, Gregory of Lubbock; Mrs. Carolyn Hays Dickens and son, Ron Owens of Dallas, and her daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Byers of Lewisville; and a nephew of J.W. Loter, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Loter of Wheeler.

R.A. Dysart was prominent in early Collingsworth, and in 1890, he, along with Charles Roberts and P.W. Myers, was selected to serve as a committee member in the selection of the county seat of Collingsworth County.

Since opposition of settlers eliminated Aberdeen, which was the trading point of the large ranches, from the race for county seat, some other place had to be decided upon.

One day, John Drew, manager for the British-owned Rocking Chair Ranch, rode over and told the south side that he would choose two members of a committee and they would select three representatives.

Mr. Roberts, Mr. Dysart, and Mr. Myers were selected to represent the south side, while "Daddy" Holmes and Frank Newcome were chosen to represent the north. The committee met and selected Pearl City as their choice for the county seat.

But an opposition group put forth the village of Wellington, a few miles to the south.

When the votes were counted, Wellington won.

The first church service was held in the Dysart home at Fresno, before the house was completed. The preacher was Rev. W.Y. Seale, a Methodist circuit rider.

Mrs. Holcomb, born at Fresno in 1892, was orphaned at six years. For 9 years, she lived in the home of the late Mr. and Ms. D.M. Henard through the school year and returned to the "home place" in the summers.

In 1911, Jennie Dysart took a commercial arts course at Bowie. Returning in 1912, she went to work at the Wellington Hardware.

On June 21, 1914, she was married to Henry A. Holcomb in the home of her oldest sister, and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Loter.

Mr. Holcomb had come to Wellington in 1912. He was vice president of Wellington State Bank until 1921, and from 1926 to 1931, he was vice president of First National Bank. At the time of his death in a car accident in May 1934, he was associated with Castleberry and Kern.

In this mid-depression year, their two older sons, H.A. and Dysart, were freshman at Texas Tech (one recalled Sunday that a year in Tech then cost $250 each). Her youngest son, Sam, started to school that fall.

Mrs. Holcomb was Wellington's City Secretary 26½ years, and for a number of years afterward filled in at City Hall when she was needed.

She was selected Texas Mother of the Year in 1963 and was runner up for National Mother of the Year.

A long time member of the Order of Eastern Star, she has held all the offices, including Worthy Matron, and she has served as secretary since 1946.

Mrs. Holcomb has been a member of First Methodist Church more than 70 years. A picture of their home appeared in the May 18, 1978 issue of The Wellington Leader.

Delta Kappa Gamma Trio at State Convention in Abilene

Three members of the Gamma Kappa chapter of The Delta Kappa Gamma Society International have recently returned from the 49th annual Alpha (Texas) State Convention of the organization. Held in Abilene, the convention attracted some one 1026 key women teachers from all parts of the state, as well as guest members from several other states.

Wellington members attending the convention were Mrs. Jack Lowry, president of Gamma Kappa Chapter, Mrs. Rufus Sweat, music chairman, and Miss Maudie Coffee, treasurer.

Newly-elected presidents of Alpha State's (Texas) 256 local chapters participated in a leadership development workshop held on the campus of Hardin-Simmons University at the beginning of the convention. The state president, Mrs. Laginia Hale of Austin, and vice-presidents, Mrs. Bettye Mischen of Plano and Mrs. Mary Rowlette of Lubbock, directed the workshop. Planning for the twelve area fall workshops took place the second day of the convention with incoming presidents and area coordinators participating.

The Abilene night reception, held in the foyer of the Civic Center, on Thursday evening had Abilene Delta Kappa Gamma members and their husbands demonstrating a variety of square dances, called by Joel Wilson. PROPOSITION 13

A few days ago California voters approved Proposition 13, a proposal that drastically cuts California property taxes.

Some observers have called its approval a watershed moment in U.S. government history. They say that the trend of rising taxation and higher government spending which has continued unabated since the New Deal days of the 1930's has met its Waterloo.

We will have to wait a few years to see the outcome.

We doubt that the hugh bureaucracies which have developed to funnel this money to the designated areas will find themselves in favor of self-destruction. And whether politicians will be gutsy enough to fight off the special interest claims to the tax dollars (not the least of which will be the public employees), is another question.

Other observers have taken a darker view of the passage of Proposition 13. Liberals and big city politicians have classified it as racist and some have even said it was un-American.

We don't believe Proposition 13's success rested on some inhibited racism in the American psyche that found this means of venting itself. It may, however, represent a very real anger at the costs of welfare. For those who can and will not work to receive more than those who do work is something that goes against the American grain. But to equate opposition to larger welfare payments with racism is a rhetorical game that does not portray the facts.

As for the suggestion that Proposition 13 is un-American, nothing could be more American than a protest against taxation. Before critics make that claim again, they should read some American history, beginning with the Boston Tea Party.

Proposition 13 will have little effect in Texas where taxes and state services are already at comparatively low levels. But it will be fun to see how Washington and other states react during the next few weeks.

Other Editors Say . . .

Investment Pay Off

Although candidate Harry Ledbetter's campaign for election to the office of State Treasurer failed, his campaign did have some apparent effect on the conduct of that office by Treasurer Warren Harding which should be good news to Texas taxpayers.

Ledbetter, early-on in the campaign, began calling for interest-bearing investment of state funds...something virtually unheard-of during the tenure in office of the late Jesse James, who preferred to deposit state money in non-interest-bearing accounts in favored banks.

It may not be fair to Treasurer James' appointed successor, Warren Harding, to give credit to Harding's campaign opponent, Ledbetter, for the turn-about in deposit policies of recent months. Mr. Harding may, and we hope was, heading in that direction anyway. But certainly Ledbetter's campaign to "put state money to work" didn't slow the process any.

The results may now begin to be assessed. State Treasurer Warren Harding reports that during the first eight months of his term in office, the state has earned $17.4 million more on its invested funds than in a similar period last year. More than $79 million has been realized on investments for that period this year.

The state's money is earning 7 percent interest...or the 91 percent of it currently invested is, Harding says his goal is to have 95 percent or more of the state's money paying extra dividends.

Taxpayers should applaud that.

-Ben Ezzell in The Canadian Record

Identify Yourself

If you were stricken with a heart attack, or seriously injured in an accident, could strangers identify you?

This is not a facetious question.

Through 40 years of reporting the news I have never ceased to be amazed at people who carry no identification — no driver's license, no credit cards, no membership card; nothing with name or address or telephone number or names of next of kin. And no receipts or other identification of indication of ownership in the automobile glove compartment.

You owe it to your family to be sure that they can be notified immediately if something should happen to you. You owe it to yourself, for that matter, since surgery often cannot be performed without your consent or the consent of your family if you are unconscious. And you owe even strangers the consideration of not putting them to all the trouble often involved in identifying an accident victim.

STATE CAPITAL

HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Democratic gubernatorial nominee John Hill called major state agency heads together to urge them to slash spending wherever possible and to hold a firm line on new budgets.

Hill's action, as a nominee still facing November opposition, was admittedly unprecedented. And it brought a prompt reprimand from his Republican opponent, Bill Clements, who chided Hill for trying to take over as governor before his election.

But both Hill and Clements shared the view that the spiral of appropriations increases must cease.

"Never before has a Texas legislature faced a stronger demand for stopping government growth," said Hill, noting a California vote to cut property taxes.

"You and I have a choice of fighting those demands and resisting budget cutbacks or accepting our responsibilities and cutting our budgets ourselves," Hill told the agency heads. "It's time for us to take our medicine."

Hill said governmental agencies must get accustomed to the idea of operating with less than they have been used to having. He said he wants Texas to become a model for the nation in innovation and courage in the area of governmental economies.

He made clear, however, he stands by his commitments to a billion dollars worth of increased aid to education, including higher teacher salaries, property tax reform, elimination of the sales tax on utility bills and property tax relief for the elderly, farmers and ranchers.

Cutoff Studied

Don't be surprised if an unseen hand—or device—cuts off your air conditioner one of these days.

At least two Texas utility companies told Public Utility Commission examiners they are looking into possibility of remote control equipment to allow them to switch off electrical appliances during peak use periods.

Use of the load management equipment is still far down the road, but various devices are being evaluated.

Purpose of the equipment (still too costly for practicality) is to reduce consumption during peak hours and, thus, to help stabilize rates by making new plants unnecessary. One system would turn off appliances for a few minutes, at different times for different areas of a city.

PUC is examining proposals to conserve energy and lower cost of electricity. A series of hearings is under way.

Courts Speak

The Court of Civil Appeals heard oral arguments in a far-reaching case involving the authority of the attorney general to contest actions by state agencies which he believes are not in the public interest.

The Court of Criminal Appeals upheld the death penalty conviction of a Harris County man accused of beating an 81-year-old widow to death.

Texas Supreme Court overturned an intermediate court and concluded the state cannot appeal a judgment in a juvenile proceeding which is civil, not criminal, in nature.

A Houston man won a reversal of a life sentence for aggravated robbery due to improper jury instructions.

The Court of Criminal Appeals upheld a sexual abuse conviction of a Cass County man.

The Supreme Court held two Garland men are entitled to trial of their suit challenging city of Garland contributions to the Chamber of Commerce.

AG Opinions

A drainage project to be constructed by an entity other than the Harris County Flood Control District is not exempted from a requirement that Texas Water Commission approve its plans though they already have district approval. Attorney General John Hill concluded.

In other recent opinions, Hill determined:

Home rule cities shall follow their own charter provisions on construction bonds in event they conflict with state statutes.

A county tax assessor-collector is required to deposit tax funds in his possession in the county depository pending transfer of the money to the county treasurer.

A justice of the peace cannot maintain his office in an adjoining precinct to his own.

The comptroller's office set up roadblocks on major highways south of a line from San Antonio to Victoria to insure compliance with state motor fuel tax laws and other permit requirements. Agents will also be checking for violations of state sales and cigarette tax Texas Board of Education adopted policies making bilingual education mandatory through fifth grade for children who speak little English. Additional English training will be provided through grade 12.

The head of Texans for Equitable Taxation says no Texas tax revolt is likely because the state's per capita property taxes will remain in the median range for awhile.

Services For Former Lutie Woman Tuesday

An account of earliest Collingsworth County by a man who came here as an 8-year-old in 1889, was brought out during the Dysart family reunion which honored Mrs. Jennie Holcomb Sunday, June 18.

It was written by Carey Dysart, oldest son of Robert Allen and Ella Jane Dysart, in 1937. He lived at Mobeetie at that time.

Here are excerpts from his account:

I was very small when my father moved to Young County in 1885. It was then an open country for hundreds of miles. Father had about 400 head of cattle but the terrible drouth of '86 and '87 almost put him out of the cow business. Most of the rivers and wells went dry and cattle starved by the thousands. You could hardly ride the river for the smell of dead cattle.

In December 1888, Daddy and David Atteberry, who had moved to Young County, decided to look for a new land that flowed with milk and honey, so they naturally came to Collingsworth County. Mr. Atteberry filed on one-half section of land and Daddy on one section. Mr. Atteberry moved in February 1889 and we arrived in Collingsworth April 12, 1889.

Daddy got another little bunch of cattle together and hired a man by the name of Jim Mayes, giving him and me the job of trailing them through to Collingsworth. I was only eight years old at this time.

He had two wagons and an old hack to haul mother and the other four children and his 40 years gatherings. We were 12 days on the road.

We settled on section 27, block 10, one and one-half miles north of the Fresno School house. The grass was so high one could hardly find the iron stakes which located the corners.

There were only about 10 families on what was known as the flat, and a few on Elm Creek, besides the Rocking Chair Ranch on the north and east and the Diamond Tail on the south and west. There were a few cow camps. Great herds would pass our place, sometimes taking most of the day to go by.

There was only one fence which was a drift fence two or three miles north of where Wellington now stands. It ran south-east as far as the eye could see, and I don't know how far west.

The families on the flat decided they needed a school to educate us kids, so they set about to raise the money to build the school house. I think they raised most of it at Childress, 30 miles away. When it was completed the next thing was to get a teacher, so they hired Miss Emma Cocke of Denton County. I think she was about 15 years of age. Thirteen of us kids answered the roll call to the first school in Collingsworth County.

We had preaching services in our home before the floor was laid, and also a Xmas tree in the school building. Clyde, Charley and myself had a little express wagon which we would haul buffalo bones up to the yard in and make a big pile.

While we were in school I think Miss Emma got scared at Indians, but that didn't bother us, because we were having a good time.

In 1890, it was decided to organize the county. There were three townships, Pearl, Aberdeen and Wellington. The latter being the lucky one. I remember the day they unloaded Wellington. Daddy, Will Myers and myself had been horse hunting in the north and were coming back. They invited us to eat dinner with them and we accepted, so I suppose we were the first ones to eat a meal in Wellington.

Our horses and cattle would scatter from Salt Fork to Buck Creek and it took a lot of riding. Daddy always took me along with him as I was the oldest boy. I was too young to work on the big ranches, but when I got old enough, I would pick up a trail herd once in a while.

(Mr. Dysart described one of these rides to Kansas. Then he tells how he and 16 others crossed the flood-swollen Canadian River at Grand, Oklahoma.)

We went down to the edge of the water and got our horses, pulled off our boots and chaps, tied them on our saddles, tied one end of our rope to the saddle and took the other in our hands, so if we got washed off our horses, he might have a chance to pull us out.

We went in, two and two, about 30 feet apart, and moved the same way until we were across. We finally got out without anything happening, but most of the time our horses had to swim.

I could talk all day about the rattlesnakes, prairie dogs, deer, antelope, quail and prairie chicken all of which were plentiful, about the Indian scare and many other stories.

Some of the older ones that came earlier have had much greater experiences than I, but you who came later may never hear about it.

(A related story will be found on a society page.)
