Rally to draw thousands to pray, protest

■ Those who oppose The Response say Perry has overstepped his bounds.

By April Castro
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Gov. Rick Perry's prayer rally is expected to draw thousands of protesters today, including Muslims, Jews and even some Christians who say the evangelical event is exclusionary and inappropriate and Perry is overstepping the bounds of his office by hosting it.

The seven-hour event, billed as "The Response: A Call to Prayer for a Nation in Crisis," will be at Reliant Stadium in Houston, home to the NFL's Texans. More than 8,000 people have signed up to attend the rally, which is sponsored by several evangelical Christian groups and will include praying and Scripture reading.

Protesters, including a group of 50 local religious leaders who signed a letter expressing concern earlier this week, are calling the meeting exclusionary and disrespectful of the separation of church and state. One of the sponsors, the American Family Association, has been criticized by civil rights groups for promoting anti-homosexual and anti-Islamic positions on the roughly 200 radio stations it operates.

"What the governor has done is align himself with a certain kind of Christianity," said Barry Lynn, executive director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State. "The groups that are sponsoring tomorrow's event on his behalf have certain theological and political views that represent only a tiny fringe of American Christian thought. Even many of us who are Christians disagree with the views that these organizations espouse."

Perry, who is moving closer to announcing whether he intends to make a run for the White House, has rejected the criticism as unfair.

As many as 500 people were

With a streak of paint in her hair and a box of napkins in her arms, 12-year-old Courtney Deeds bent down to help students with their lunch plates and said she's loved getting to serve.

"This is pretty fun right now," said Deeds, who was one of more than 60 youth participating in the Disciples of Christ "Rock the Desert and Leave A Mark" mission trip. "I love being with children."

The group that involved youth from Midland, Odessa, Pampa, Longview, Tyler and Springfield, Mo., split up among several Permian Basin nonprofits this week in hopes of making an impact before getting to have some fun at the three-day Christian music festival.

Jeffs walks out of sentencing hearing

■ Polygamist sect leader promises 'whirlwind of judgment' on the world if he isn't set free.

By Will Weissert
Associated Press

SAN ANGELO — A polygamist sect leader convicted of child sexual assault walked out of his sentencing hearing in protest Friday, after reading a statement he claimed was from God. The statement promised a "whirlwind of judgment" on the world if God's "humble servant" wasn't set free.

Jeffs

Warren Jeffs, 55, represented himself during an eight-day trial that ended with his conviction on two counts of sexual assault. The same jury must now decide his punishment — which could be up to 119 years to life in prison.

But before the punishment phase began and jurors had even been brought back into court Friday, Jeffs said, "I request the full removal of myself as an objection to all that has been presented."

He asked to keep serving as his own attorney, but state District Judge Barbara Walther said he couldn't leave and continue to represent himself at the same time. Instead, she ordered two lawyers who had been Jeffs' standby counsel, Deric Walpole and Emily Munoz Detoto, to represent him.

"Mr. Jeffs, I know this is difficult for you to understand, but you do not have control over these proceedings," Walther said. Jeffs often stands in court and waits up to a full minute before speaking. He began in slow and deliberate manner to respond, saying "I am ...," but Walther ordered a recess.

Jeffs is the ecclesiastical head of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which believes polygamy brings exaltation in heaven. The more-than 10,000 FLDS members nationwide see Jeffs as a prophet who is God's spokesman on Earth.

Jeffs asked to be taken back to jail, but Walther said that would make it too difficult for his lawyers to communicate with him. Instead, he was placed in a room near the court and will be allowed to

Obituaries

Eva Mable Goolsby

Eva Mable Goolsby, 90, of Auburn, Alabama, died July 28, 2011.

Family and friends are invited to gather for visitation from 6:00 to 8:00 o'clock p.m., on Friday, August 5 at Reeder Davis Funeral Home in Hughes Springs, Texas. Following interment at 10:00 o'clock a.m., on Saturday at the Avinger Cemetery in Avinger, Texas, a memorial service will be held at 11:00 o'clock a.m., at the adjacent Avinger United Methodist Church. A reception will follow in the Fellowship Hall.

Mable, the youngest of six children, was born on January 17, 1921, in Avinger, Texas, to Tobasco F. and Harriett Elizabeth Holland Steed. She grew up in Avinger and graduated from Avinger High School as valedictorian of the class of 1938. After attending the College of Marshall (now East Texas Baptist University), to study business and accounting, she worked for many years as a bookkeeper and property manager. On August 3, 1946, she married George Bryan "G.B." Goolsby, of nearby Hughes Springs, Texas. G.B. had returned home following three years of service in World War II, and was working in the lumber business in East Texas and Fort Worth, Texas. After their marriage, the couple lived in Fort Worth, until moving to Midland, Texas, in 1948 to establish a lumber business in the fast growing Permian Basin area. From 1948 until G.B. died in 1971, he managed the lumber company and Mable handled the bookkeeping. While in Midland, they raised three children and were very active in the First United Methodist Church. They spent their Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays in East Texas with relatives, and often vacationed in California. Mable and G.B. were both avid sports fans, and sitting in the upper deck of Dodger Stadium to see Koufax or Drysdale pitch or attending Texas Longhorn football games were special events for the entire family.

When G.B. died in 1971, Mable had one son in college and two children at home. By continuing her property management work and carefully handling the family finances, she saw all three children through college, two becoming lawyers and one becoming a campus minister. Working with Meals on Wheels was her favorite charitable activity.

Well into her 80s, and after more than 50 years in Midland, Mable pulled up stakes and went to Auburn, Alabama, to stay with family. In Auburn, she became a full time grandmother and enjoyed attending the various school, church, and sporting activities of her Auburn grandsons, while continuing to be involved with her Texas grandsons. In support of the Auburn Wesley Foundation, each year for several years, she knitted hundreds of pairs of potholders that were sent as tokens of appreciation to those who made donations to the campus ministry. A member of First United Methodist Church in Midland for more than 50 years, she was a member of Auburn United Methodist Church at the time of her death.

She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband; three sisters; and one brother. She is survived by her sister, Marie Steed, of Lufkin, Texas; her son, George Goolsby and his wife, Cathy Goolsby of Houston, Texas; her son, David Goolsby and his wife, Sarah Goolsby of Auburn, Alabama; her daughter Barbara Bauernfeind and her husband, Rev. Paul Bauernfeind of Amarillo, Texas; and her grandsons, Wyatt Goolsby of Dallas, Texas, Bryan Goolsby of Atlanta, Georgia, Ward Goolsby of Houston, Texas, and Benjamin Goolsby of Auburn, Alabama. She is also survived by many nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews.

Mable was a dedicated, loving, and supportive mother and grandmother. She was a devout Christian, who raised her family as she had been raised: to be believers and servants in their church and community endeavors. Her family is grateful for her many years of love, for her unwavering support, for all of the fun times together, and for her long, faithful, and rewarding life.

For those wishing to do so, donations in memory of Mable may be made to the Auburn Wesley Foundation, 131 South Gay Street, P. O. Box 3488, Auburn, Alabama 36831-3488, or to the Methodist Children's Home, 1111 Herring Avenue, Waco, Texas 76708.

Henry Jack Naumann

Henry Jack Naumann died August 5th, 2011, at home surrounded by his family.

He was born October 21, 1918 to Wilhelmina Rosanky Naumann and Henry John Naumann in Smithville, Bastrop County, TX. Jack attended public schools in Smithville and graduated from Smithville High School as valedictorian in 1936. He entered the University of Texas at Austin and received his B.A. degree in Liberal Arts - Law. He then entered University of Texas Law School in 1939.

In 1941 he volunteered for service in the United States Army Air Corps. Ranking at the top of the USAAF Administrative School in Ft. Logan, CO, he was assigned to and completed his military service at Ft. Logan until the end of WWII. Jack then returned to the University of Texas and completed his law degree (JD) in 1946 and became a member of the State Bar of Texas that same year.

Jack began his professional career working as a landman for the Humble Oil and Refining Company (Exxon) in Tyler, TX working the very active East Texas, Louisiana, and Gulf Coast areas. He subsequently transferred to Los Angeles, CA as Assistant Division Landman, then as Assistant Division Landman for the Gulf Coast Division in Houston, TX where he served in this position for 12 years. Jack then moved to Midland, TX as the Division Landman for the Southwestern Division and retired in 1984. He continued to be active in the oil and gas industry as an independent landman and consultant.

Jack had the privilege to work in all the productive regions of the U.S. and always made efforts to be involved in the community and professional organizations with which he was associated. He served as Chairman for the first AAPL annual meeting in Houston, TX as well as Director of the AAPL and President of HAPL. At the first AAPL meeting in El Paso, TX, Jack was able to persuade Ronald Reagan to be the keynote speaker.

Jack's active memberships include the Texas Bar, HAPL, and the PBLA. Additionally, he was a 42nd degree Mason, Scottish Rite, and Shriners. He was a long time member of the Midland Petroleum Club, the First Presbyterian Church and the Midland Exchange Club.

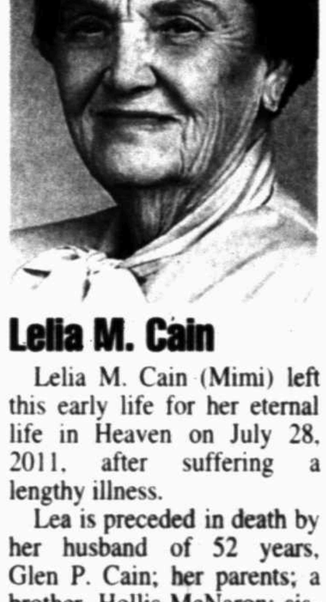
Jack was preceded in death by his parents and step father, John Thomas Grizzard; twin sister, Mary Louise Douglas, and his eldest daughter, Nancy Merchant. He is survived by his loving wife, Connie; daughter, Diane Ellis and husband, Jody of Perth, Australia; son, Henry Jack Naumann, Jr. and wife, Melinda of Midland; grandson Joshua Naumann of Midland; granddaughter, Mary Krista Sheffield and husband, John of Austin, Texas; granddaughter, Laura Ellis of Norman, OK; granddaughter, Courtney Ellis of Lubbock; and great grandson, Henry Beckett Naumann Sheffield.

Jack was a wonderful man. He was of the generation of honor, propriety and integrity and Jack epitomized these qualities. He was a true gentleman's gentleman and touched many lives with his kindness and sincerity. The love of family was Jack's main focus. He provided a wonderful home and loving environment for his family and was always there for his wife and children. To say he was the foundation of his family is an understatement.

Jack was a fourth generation Texan and proud of his German heritage and ancestors that settled in the Bastrop area in 1842. Jack loved his hometown of Smithville and maintained his childhood home there, in which many enjoyable days were spent with his family over the years.

Memorial service will be held at the First Presbyterian Church in Midland, TX on Tuesday, August the 9th at 10:30 am. Interment will be at the family grave site in Smithville, TX. Any memorials may be made to the First Presbyterian Church or the Midland Petroleum Museum.

The family wishes to express their gratitude to Dr. Raj Patel and staff, to caretakers Margie Cutree, Donna Roberts, Home Hospice of Midland, Nina Villa, and Elsa Rodriguez, for the loving care and kindnesses shown to Jack and his family.



Lelia M. Cain

Lelia M. Cain (Mimi) left this early life for her eternal life in Heaven on July 28, 2011, after suffering a lengthy illness.

Lea is preceded in death by her husband of 52 years, Glen P. Cain; her parents; a brother, Hollis McNaron; sister, Louise Chavers, and son-in-law, Scott Curry. Lea will be truly missed by her daughters and numerous grandchildren.

Lea was born October 7, 1922 to Archie and Myrtle McNaron in Bristol, Texas. She graduated from Farris High School in Ferris, Texas and moved on to Dallas to attend Mrs. Rutherford's Women's College and eventually went to work as Comptroller for the IRS.

Lea married Glen P. Cain on June 4, 1950 in Dallas, Texas, and they started their married life in Anaco, Venezuela where Glen worked for Mobile Oil.

In 1966, the couple was transferred for Midland with Texaco and Lea went to work at Mid-West Glass as a bookkeeper until her retirement in 1984.

After retirement, Lea and Glen spent most of their time traveling and living in Mesa, Arizona during the winters and spending the summers in Ruidoso, New Mexico.

Lea was an avid music lover. Whether playing the guitar or singing in her church choir, she loved to dance to country music, as well as, teaching seniors line dancing. Lea leaves behind daughters, Rita Curry, Glenna Haskell and husband, Steve; four grandchildren: Michelle Ream and husband, John; Vince Curry; David Haskell and wife, Aubrey; John Haskell and wife, Rebecca; and Brian Wafford. Also left to cherish her memory are 10 great grandchildren and 3 great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends from 6 to 8 p.m. on Sunday, August 7, 2011 at Ellis Funeral Home. A funeral service is set for 10 a.m. on Monday, August 8, 2011 at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with interment to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park. Pallbearers will be Lea's grandsons: Vince Curry, David Haskell, John Haskell, Anthony Haskell, Colton Ream, John Ream, and Brian Wafford.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Hospice of Midland (PO Box 2621, Midland, Texas 79702). Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home of Midland, Texas. Condolences can be made online at: www.ellisfunerals.com.

Robert Lee prepares for Bronte waterline

Associated Press

ROBERT LEE — Robert Lee may have less than a year before it drains E.V. Spence Reservoir, but the community is doing everything it can to postpone that event.

Residents are buying water tanks, carting in water from Bronte and using buckets of bath water to keep shrubs, flowers and trees alive.

"We're getting quite creative in some ways," Robert Lee Mayor John Jacobs said.

The city entered into serious talks with Bronte several months ago, and a contract is being finalized that would furnish Robert Lee with 150,000 acre-feet of water a year, Ricky Royal, Bronte water superintendent, said this week. The contract is being approved by the two cities and the Upper Colorado River Authority.

One acre-foot is about 326,000 gallons.

"Under this emergency condition, we're able to provide them X amount of water for them to get by," Royal said. "There's also talk of long-term water supply for both communities — possibly drilling more wells."

A few test wells have been drilled between Robert Lee and Water Valley, Jacobs said, but where the communities would drill if they go that route has not been established.

Jacobs said the communities are working out a fee for Bronte to truck water before it's piped to Robert Lee.

"We're kind of small," he said. "We're probably all going to have to work together some way."

Bronte draws water from Oak Creek Reservoir, south of Blackwell, as well as 10 wells between Bronte and Blackwell.

In a separate plan, Jacobs said Robert Lee is working on getting various "factors and finances in order" before building a pipeline to transfer water from Bronte. Currently the city is working on securing right of way to build the line.

Jacobs said he hopes by the beginning of December the city will be purchasing materials to start the project and that the pipeline could be operational within two months.

Officials said they did not yet know how much the project would cost.

Robert Lee is waiting on about half of the half-dozen permits it needs through various groups, including the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, to go forward with the pipeline.

"We've dropped all other options," Jacobs said, including a previous idea of trucking in water.

Robert Lee is the only community allowed to pump from E.V. Spence Reservoir. Last month the Colorado River Municipal Water District ordered Midland, Odessa and Big Spring to stop drawing water from E.V. Spence Reservoir.

The lake, which was built in the late 1960s, has about 3,000 acre-feet of water.

AG: Ex-agent has history of sexual misconduct

By Danny Robbins
Associated Press

BASTROP — A former liquor control agent accused of sexually assaulting a teenager recruited for an underage drinking sting had a history of sexual misconduct with teens, and he was hired to enforce Texas liquor laws despite being fired from a police department for drunkenness, prosecutors allege in a new court filing.

Joe Chavez, 42, is scheduled to go on trial Monday in Bastrop, about 30 miles southeast of Austin, on two counts of sexual assault of a child stemming from a 2009 incident with a 16-year-old girl. The teen alleges she had sex with Chavez in his state-issued vehicle after participating in a Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission sting aimed at catching businesses serving alcohol to minors.

The charges focus only on that incident, but court documents filed by the Texas Attorney General's Office appear to be questioning whether Chavez was fit to work for the liquor-policing agency and oversee teenagers employed for stings. The allegations are outlined in what's known as a notice of intent to introduce evidence of other offenses.

Chavez's attorney, E.G. "Gerry" Morris, declined to comment on the allegations. He said his client also didn't want to discuss them.

The court documents, filed June 27, allege Chavez sexually harassed two other teens during TABC sting operations and solicited sexually explicit photos from one of them in 2007. Prosecutors also allege he had sexual encounters with two other teens while working for the police department in Cuero.

Small lakes go dry, being mowed for weeds

Some park workers in West Texas have taken advantage of the drought by mowing dry lakebeds.

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal reported Friday that the drought had expanded the duties of park workers to include getting rid of unwanted vegetation.

Operation manager Stewart Gerhart said crews have been mowing down giant, flammable cattails.

"Gerhart said workers have been trying to clean out what they can "while the getting's good."

Superintendent accused of fraud put on unpaid leave

A West Texas school superintendent accused of fraud in an alleged scheme to steer a $450,000 contract to a friend has been put on unpaid administrative leave.

El Paso Independent School District trustees on Thursday night suspended Lorenzo Garcia.

Garcia, who's led the district since 2006, faces two conspiracy counts, one mail fraud count and one count of theft of federal funds. He pleaded not guilty Tuesday and is free on bond.

An indictment unsealed Monday alleges Garcia falsely presented the unindicted co-conspirator as the only provider of certain goods and services in order to secure a contract with the district.

Heat could be factor in train derailment

Union Pacific officials are trying to determine whether heat was a factor in an 18-car derailment in rural East Texas. UP spokeswoman Raquel Espinoza said crews are working to clear the tracks, several miles east of Mineola, but the line likely will reopen today. She said nobody was hurt Thursday afternoon in the derailment of a train made up of four locomotives and 99 cars, traveling from Kingfisher, Okla., to Westwego, La. Investigators are trying to determine the cause of the derailment. The National Weather Service said the temperature in the area reached 109 degrees. UP has said excessive heat can cause tracks to buckle. Some hopper cars overturned, spilling grain. Espinoza didn't provide a damage estimate. Mineola is 75 miles east of Dallas.

5 injured in single-engine plane crash in Amarillo

Associated Press

AMARILLO — Five people were injured, two critically, when a single-engine airplane crashed north of Rick Husband International Airport.

The Amarillo Globe-News reported that the Cessna T210N crashed about 6 p.m. Friday.

Fire officials said the pilot of the plane chose to attempt an emergency landing after the engine stalled. All five aboard were injured critically.

Officials said they were taken by ambulance to an Amarillo hospital.

Case of West Nile suspected in Houston

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Harris County health officials suspect a possible human case of West Nile Virus in Houston.

The Houston Chronicle reported that authorities on Friday were awaiting tests to confirm the case, just a day after Montgomery County confirmed its first case of the year.

Carrie Williams, a spokeswoman for the Texas Department of State Health Services, said the Montgomery County infection is the second human West Nile case confirmed in the state this year.

Citing confidentiality concerns, state officials released little information on the Montgomery County case. She is an adult.

Despite dry weather, Harris County is seeing more mosquito samples testing positive for West Nile.

Border gun shop owners sue over new requirement

By Amanda Lee Myers
Associated Press

PHOENIX — Gun store owners in states along the U.S.-Mexico border sued the acting director of the federal agency that oversees firearms to halt a new requirement that they alert authorities if someone buys multiple high-powered rifles in a five-day span.

The requirement, which goes into effect Aug. 14, follows a controversial 2009 law enforcement operation in Arizona known as "Fast and Furious" that resulted in more than 2,000 high-powered weapons making their way to Mexico as authorities went after people directing gun buys on behalf of cartels.

The operation has been the subject of recent congressional hearings in which the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives acknowledged making mistakes.

The ATF's new requirement for high-powered rifle buys applies to California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. It stipulates that gun shop owners must start providing the agency with detailed information, including birth dates, addresses, race and gender, about people who buy two or more semi-automatic rifles greater than .22 calibers in a five-day period.

In the three lawsuits filed Wednesday and Thursday against ATF Acting Director Kenneth Melson, store owners in Arizona, New Mexico and Texas argued the ATF does not have the right to make the requirement because it would hurt the businesses economically and invade the privacy of customers.

ATF spokesman Drew Wade said Friday that his agency will vigorously defend its authority to collect information from gun store owners.

He cited the Gun Control Act, saying it provides ATF with that authority. He also said courts have consistently upheld the law.

"The point of this request is to provide a targeted approach to address the problem of illegal gun trafficking through sales to 'straw purchasers,' people who claim to be the true buyers of firearms but in reality are purchasing firearms on behalf of others," he read from a prepared statement.

The lawsuits were filed in Washington, Texas and New Mexico and are being funded by the National Rifle Association. The suits do not seek money, only a stop to ATF enforcement of the new requirement.

Today in history

Today is Saturday, Aug. 6, the 218th day of 2011. There are 147 days left in the year.

On this date:

In 1945, during World War II, the United States dropped an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, resulting in an estimated 140,000 deaths.

In 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the Voting Rights Act.

In 1991, the World Wide Web made its public debut as a means of accessing webpages over the Internet.

Ten years ago: Ending months of speculation, former President Bill Clinton said he would write his much sought-after memoirs for publisher Alfred A. Knopf.

Five years ago: Oil giant BP announced an indefinite shutdown of the biggest oilfield in the U.S. at Prudhoe Bay in Alaska, after finding a pipeline leak.

service and fellowship," said Karakay Kovaly, an associate minister with First Christian Church in Pampa. "They've constantly said that these interactions they've had have changed them more than anything else this summer."

Junior Garcia, 16, said when he signed up for the trip with his Pampa church, he thought he was just agreeing to go to Rock the Desert. Tonight's show featuring Skillet is something he's certainly looking forward to, but he said interacting with kids through volunteer work has been the highlight so far.

His friend, Corban Rhoads, 17, agreed.

"It shows God's love through us," Rhoads said. "It's something that people wouldn't usually see."

In addition to spending afternoons at Casa de Amigos, the youth dedicated their mornings to painting houses with Christmas in Action and also spent time playing with foster kids at High Sky Children's Ranch, volunteering at Safe Place of the Permian Basin and participating in bingo games at Manor Park, among other activities.

"We're trying to get them beyond their little comfort zone," said Melody Deeds.

As a chaperone from Central Christian Church in Springfield, Mo., Deeds said the trip has been wonderful for her own children and for the other youth in attendance. Deeds said the kids participate in service projects in their own small town but typically don't get to see the diversity of people and needs they experienced this week.

"This has been great," she said, standing as students nearby helped kids at Casa de Amigos make necklaces. "It's neat to watch them grow."

Several youth said playing with children at High Sky Children's Ranch and Safe Place of the Permian Basin was their favorite activity. They said they'd never encountered kids who had endured such tough situations, and the time spent made them thankful for their families at home.

5:30 p.m.: Superchick
7 p.m.: Mike Pitt and Canton Jones
8:30 p.m.: Mike Farris
10 p.m.: Skillet

Weather alert
Today's high is expected to hit 105. Festival-goers should take necessary precautions against heat-related illnesses.

Despite the triple-digit temperatures, others said they enjoyed painting the most.

"We did an excellent job for none of us knowing how to do it," said Breanna Williamson, 12.

Paul Brooks, education program director at Casa de Amigos, said the volunteers couldn't have come at a more perfect time. The organization's summer program ended this week, and with just a few days left he said the children were hyper and ready for the change the volunteers provided.

"A group like this, they just do whatever needs to be done," he said. "You just tell 'em thanks."

After completing their work this week, the youth groups headed to Rock the Desert. And while they agreed the long lineup of bands is something they'll likely remember after going home, they know the work they completed before the concert is something that will stick with them for years.

"It's a good experience just to get out there and make a difference and help people," said Phoebe Hicks, 19.

return to the hearing whenever he chooses. The judge said Jeffs won't be able to dismiss his attorneys again and go back to defending himself, however.

He burned through a slate of seven high-powered attorneys, including Walpole and Detoto, in the six months before he decided to represent himself, and Walther said he did so in an effort to manipulate the court and stall the case against him.

Prosecutors plan to call witnesses during the sentencing hearing and introduce evidence showing Jeffs committed a slew of crimes not mentioned during his trial.

For starters, Jeffs had 78 wives along with his legal spouse, and 24 of them were under age 17, said Eric Nichols, lead prosecutor for the Texas Attorney General's office, which is handling the case. Nichols also said he would show that Jeffs committed six other sexual assaults and either witnessed or performed more than 500 polygamist marriages, as well as 67 other sect marriages involving underage girls.

Jeffs spent years evading arrest — crisscrossing the country as a fugitive who eventually made the FBI's Ten Most Wanted list before his capture in 2006, Nichols said, and he excommunicated 60 church members he saw as a threat to his leadership, breaking up 300 families while stripping them of property and "reassigning" wives and children.

All of that is separate from the assaults on two girls, ages 12 and 15, that Jeffs was convicted of Thursday, after jurors deliberated for 3 1/2 hours. Prosecutors used DNA evidence to show Jeffs fathered a child with the older victim and played an audio recording of what they said was him sexually assaulting the younger one. They played other tapes in which Jeffs was heard instructing as many as a dozen of his young wives on how to please him sexually — and thus, he told them, please God.

After Jeffs left the courtroom Friday, Nichols gave an opening statement, saying Jeffs was guilty of "a breathtaking quantity of criminal activity" as head of the FLDS.

RESPONSE

expected to attend a more inclusive religious event Friday at a Baptist church in Houston. And in Austin, U.S. Congressman Lloyd Doggett was expected to be among 1,500 people to gather Saturday in front of the Capitol for a march and rally that local Democrats are calling "Governor Rick Perry: Bad for Texas, Worse for our Nation."

The watchdog group Texas Freedom Network sent Perry a letter earlier this week signed by 10,000 people saying he is using religion for political gain. People for the American Way criticized the event for including intolerant groups.

"He's not pastoring a church called the Lone Star State," Lynn said.

More protesters, including Houston resident Kay Staley, were expected to gather Saturday outside the stadium. Staley was one of five plaintiffs who sued Perry over the event. A judge threw out the lawsuit last week, saying the plaintiffs could not show sufficient harm to merit the injunction they sought.

"Governor Perry's exclusionary use of religion is politically, culturally and religiously divisive and unacceptable constitutionally," said Randy Czarlinsky, director of the American Jewish Committee's Houston chapter.

Perry invited the Obama administration, the nation's governors and Texas lawmakers to attend the prayer rally. Organizers say more than 1,100 churches have signed up to simulcast the event across the country.

"The Response has touched the hearts and minds of Americans across the country who want to pray for a country in crisis," event spokesman Eric Bearse said. "People are coming to Houston from all over the nation, and many more will tune in via simulcast to experience God's presence, and seek His forgiveness and provision in their own lives, and for the nation."

Bearse said there is no desire to gather in opposition to any group of philosophy.

"We are praying for all Americans," he said. "We are seeking forgiveness for our own part in a country in decline, and we are lifting up Jesus Christ as the source of power and inspiration in our lives."

He added that the rally "will represent the diversity of the body of Christ, and will showcase the ethnic and racial diversity of America."

S&P downgrades US credit rating from AAA

The costs of a downgrade

Political wrangling over raising the debt ceiling was cited by Standard & Poor s as reason for their decision to lower their rating of the U.S. government s creditworthiness. Some potential effects of the downgrade:

Higher borrowing costs

Rates for much consumer credit, including mortgages and car loans, are tied to Treasury bond rates; if U.S. debt is downgraded, investors would likely demand higher rates, driving interest rates for consumers up

Mortgage and Treasury bond rates, an example

Monthly rates on 30-year conventional mortgages and 30-year Treasuries

- Corporations, municipalities and other bond issuers would likely also have to offer higher yields, increasing the cost of their debt and leaving less for shareholders
- Federal government would have to pay more to borrow, increasing government spending

Weakened consumer confidence

Faith in the economy, which had barely begun to rebound after the recession, is already souring; lack of confidence means less consumer spending, and less demand contributes greatly to fewer jobs

Consumer confidence and unemployment Rates, monthly

Jittery markets

Unease with the perceived soundness of the economy could spook investors, causing stock prices to drop as they did during the recession and reducing retirement assets, much of which are invested in securities

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States has lost its sterling credit rating.

Credit rating agency Standard & Poor's on Friday lowered the nation's AAA rating for the first time since granting it in 1917. The move came less than a week after a gridlocked Congress finally agreed to spending cuts that would reduce the debt by more than $2 trillion — a tumultuous process that contributed to convulsions in financial markets. The promised cuts were not enough to satisfy S&P.

The drop in the rating by one notch to AA-plus was telegraphed as a possibility back in April. The three main credit agencies, which also include Moody's Investor Service and Fitch, had warned during the budget fight that if Congress did not cut spending far enough, the country faced a downgrade. Moody's said it was keeping its AAA rating on the nation's debt, but that it might still lower it.

One of the biggest questions after the downgrade was what impact it would have on already nervous investors. While the downgrade was not a surprise, some selling is expected when stock trading resumes Monday morning. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 699 points this week, the biggest weekly point drop since October 2008.

"I think we will have a knee-jerk reaction on Monday," said Jack Ablin, chief investment officer at Harris Private Bank.

But any losses might be short-lived. The threat of a downgrade is likely already reflected in the plunge in stocks this week, said Harvey Neiman, a portfolio manager of the Neiman Large Cap Value Fund.

"The market's already been shaken out," Neiman said. "It knew it was coming."

One fear in the market has been that a downgrade would scare buyers away from U.S. debt. If that were to happen, the interest rate paid on U.S. bonds, notes and bills would have to rise to attract buyers.

And that could lead to higher borrowing rates for consumers, because the rates on mortgages and other loans are pegged to the yield on Treasury securities.

However, even without an AAA rating from S&P, U.S. debt is seen as one of the safest investments in the world. And investors clearly weren't scared away this week. While stocks were plunging, investors were buying Treasurys and driving up their prices. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note, which falls when the price rises, fell to a low of 2.39 percent on Thursday from 2.75 percent Monday.

A study by JPMorgan Chase found that there has been a slight rise in rates when countries lost an AAA rating. In 1998, S&P lowered ratings for Belgium, Italy and Spain. A week later, their 10-year rates had barely moved.

Jobs report is good enough to calm Wall Street

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. job market beat expectations and the stock market managed a modest gain — not great, but good enough after a turbulent week.

America added 117,000 jobs in July, the government said Friday — far from what happens in a healthy economy, and only good for a reduction of one notch in the unemployment rate, to 9.1 percent.

But the jobs number beat the forecast of economists, who were expecting no more than 90,000. And it was an overwhelming relief for investors, who just lived through two of the most brutal weeks in Wall Street history.

"Nothing to pop Champagne corks over," said Diane Swonk, chief economist at Mesirow Financial, "but a much-needed shot in the arm for confidence at a time when we have so little."

But when they come back on Monday, investors will have to absorb another body blow: Late Friday, ratings agency Standard & Poor's downgraded the United States' debt for the first time, saying the government's debt-reduction plans fall short. The downgrade could lead to higher interest rates and further hamper the economic recovery.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished Friday with a gain of 60.93 points and closed at 11,444.61. It made up only a small fraction of the losses from Thursday, when the Dow dropped 512, its worst since the financial crisis of 2008.

Friday was not exactly quiet for the market, either.

At the start of trading, investors were thrilled with the unemployment report, and the Dow rose 171. Ten minutes later, the gains were gone. Investors focused on Europe, which is struggling to keep Italy and Spain from being consumed by a growing financial crisis, and the Dow fell 243.

"The fear was that they had no plan to deal with the situation," said Randy Warren, chief investment officer at Warren Financial Service.

NATION BRIEFS
FROM WIRE REPORTS

LOS ANGELES

Man to plead guilty to plane stowaway charge

A man accused of using an expired boarding pass with someone else's name to get on a flight from New York to Los Angeles has agreed to plead guilty to a stowaway charge and pay $942 for the cross-country flight.

Olajide Oluwaseun Noibi, 24, will enter his plea in federal court to the felony count next Tuesday, said Thom Mrozek, a spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's office.

Noibi faces up to five years in prison when he is sentenced.

Prosecutors agreed to drop a second felony charge that Noibi tried to enter a secure area of an airport by fraud or false pretense. He could have faced up to 15 years in prison if convicted of that and the stowaway charge.

NEW ORLEANS

Jury convicts 5 in post-Katrina police shootings

A federal jury on Friday convicted five current or former New Orleans police officers of civil rights violations in one of the lowest moments for city police in the chaotic aftermath of Hurricane Katrina: the shooting deaths of a teenager and a mentally disabled man as they crossed a bridge in search of food and help.

The case was a high-stakes test of the Justice Department's effort to rid the police department of corruption and brutality. A total of 20 current or former New Orleans police officers were charged last year in a series of federal probes. Most of the cases center on actions during the aftermath of the Aug. 29, 2005, storm, which plunged the flooded city into a state of lawlessness and desperation.

Sgts. Robert Gisevius and Kenneth Bowen, Officer Anthony Villavaso and former officer Robert Faulcon were convicted of civil rights violations in the shootings that killed two people and wounded four others on the Danziger Bridge less than a week after the storm. They face possible life prison sentences.

LOUISIANA

Sheriff: School shooting plot foiled

COVINGTON — Authorities in suburban New Orleans said Friday they uncovered a plot by three teenagers for "an incredible and devastating" attack at their high school during the first day of classes, with plans for two specific targets, indiscriminate shooting and suicide.

The 15-year-old boys, who called themselves Day Zero, identified a student and a faculty member whom they planned to kill, Sheriff Jack Strain said in a conference call with reporters Friday.

75-year-old pilot explains encounter with F-16s

By Don Babwin
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Myrtle Rose was taking a short flight over suburban Chicago when the 75-year-old aviation enthusiast looked out her cockpit window to see two F-16 fighter jets. She assumed the military pilots were just slowing down to get a closer look at her antique plane.

It wasn't until she landed her 1941 Piper J-3 Cub that friends and the police told her the attention was much more serious — for straying into restricted airspace during a visit by President Barack Obama.

Rose, who tries to fly every day when weather permits, said she had been itching to get back in the air Wednesday after a number of days on the ground. She normally uses her computer to check for airspace restrictions, but it wasn't working properly.

"I hadn't flown in over a week," she said. "It was a beautiful afternoon." After some guests departed her home, she "just climbed in the airplane and left."

To make matters worse, she said, "I didn't have my radio on. I was just flying around."

On any other day, the brief flight would never have attracted notice. But Obama was in Chicago for a fundraiser marking his 50th birthday.

"There's really no excuse for not knowing," said Lt. Col. Mike Humphreys, a spokesman for the North American Aerospace Defense Command, which scrambled the two warplanes, a proposition that costs $9,000 an hour for each jet.

Rose said she was about 30 miles from O'Hare Airport when her plane was intercepted. As the fighters appeared, she wasn't alarmed.

"I thought, 'Oh, well, they're just looking at how cute the Cub is,'" she said Friday in an interview with the Associated Press.

Another NORAD representative suggested Rose had no business thinking that a military jet racing toward her would be in any way related to the cuteness of her plane.

"The biggest thing to keep in mind is that when F-16s come screaming up to you, they are probably trying to tell you something," spokeswoman Stacey Knott said.

Rose, who has been flying since the mid-1960s and even performed as a wing walker until five or six years ago, said the jet pilots could not have been more considerate.

Rose returned to land on the grass airstrip at her home in the affluent South Barrington area. Her late husband owned Rose Packing Co., a meat packer that supplies Canadian bacon to McDonald's restaurants.

Once she was on the ground, some friends rushed over and told her that the rendezvous had nothing to do with the good looks of the plane named Winston. After the aircraft was in the hangar, her yard began filling with police cars.

Rose said she filled out a report with the Federal Aviation Administration, including a note describing how she mistakenly believed the jets were circling to admire her plane. She said she has not heard from the agency.

FAA spokeswoman Elizabeth Cory said the investigation would probably take several weeks. Penalties could include a fine or a suspension of her pilot's license, or the agency might not take any action at all.

Bachmann: Improving economy 'won't take that long'

By Ryan J. Foley
Associated Press

NEWTON, Iowa — Michele Bachmann declared Friday "it won't take that long" for her to start turning economy around as president as she competed against other GOP presidential rivals to build support ahead of a key GOP straw poll in Iowa next week.

Four of Bachmann's opponents in the Aug. 13 straw poll in Ames — Tim Pawlenty, Newt Gingrich, Rick Santorum and Thad McCotter — later took turns bashing President Barack Obama's record at a Republican Party dinner at a high school in Tiffin and pitching themselves as best suited to defeat him.

Earlier in the day in Newton, Bachmann told reporters the economy would start to improve almost immediately after she becomes president because she would implement conservative economic policies to slash the nation's debt, stop tax increases and cut regulations.

"It won't take that long if we send signals to the marketplace," she said, standing by an earlier comment that the improvement would begin within the first quarter.

Reflecting the stakes of the straw poll, Santorum told the Friday night dinner crowd of about 400 activists the event would narrow the field and he urged them to give his struggling campaign a boost. He accused the media of ignoring him because he would be the strongest GOP candidate.

Pawlenty said Republicans were poised to take back the White House because of Obama's increasing unpopularity and "Iowa has to get it right" in nominating the best GOP candidate. He said voters should consider his conservative economic and social record as governor of Minnesota and be wary of candidates who can give great speeches but aren't strong leaders — which he said described Obama in 2008.

"Barack Obama is ripe for the picking. In fact, I would say politically you could stick a fork in him," Pawlenty said. "The main way we're going to goof this up as Republicans is to nominate the wrong candidate."

Of the straw poll, Pawlenty said: "It's going to have a big impact on this race, so I hope that you will help us."

The dinner at Clear Creek Amana High School capped a day of hectic campaigning across Iowa that was expected to continue until the straw poll, the first test of candidate support in the state with the first-in-the-nation caucuses.

Speaking to supporters earlier in the day, Bachmann said the event would be historic.

"That is the day we will make a down payment on taking our country back and making Barack Obama a one-term president," she said.

Speaking in the parking lot of a Pizza Ranch in Newton, Bachmann said Friday's report that 117,000 jobs were created in July showed Obama had created far more campaign donors than jobs. She also said this week's plunge of the stock market was proof that an agreement to raise the nation's debt ceiling and cut spending that she voted against was "a stinky deal."

Bachmann told reporters the economy would start to improve almost immediately after she becomes president because she would implement conservative economic policies to slash the nation's debt, stop tax increases and cut regulations.

"It won't take that long if we send signals to the marketplace," she said, standing by an earlier comment that the improvement would begin within the first quarter.

After the stock market plunged more than 500 points on Thursday, Jon Huntsman said in New Hampshire that President Obama has had enough time to fix the economy.

"We deserve a whole lot better in this country. The president's had two-and-a-half years to get it right. He has not infused enough confidence in this economy," he said.

'Change-Up' flip-flops between raunch, sweetness

By Christie Lemire
AP Movie Critic

"The Change-Up" begins with a poop joke. And not just any poop joke — this is projectile poop from a baby girl into her daddy's mouth during a bleary-eyed, middle-of-the-night diaper change.

Oh yes, it goes there. Early.

You'd think that would be a frightening harbinger of what's to come over the next two hours, but it's not — which makes it even more frustrating when you realize that it didn't need to startle us off the top in such crass and obvious fashion. There was potential here.

When you've got Ryan Reynolds and Jason Bateman — two masters of deadpan improvisational comedy — bouncing off each other, you should theoretically just be able to let the cameras roll and follow them wherever they take you. With a screenplay from Jon Lucas and Scott Moore, who wrote "The Hangover" — the clever, original "Hangover," that is, and not the lazy sequel — you should already be in pretty good shape.

But the overlong film from David Dobkin (who also directed "Wedding Crashers" and, unfortunately, "Fred Claus") is all over the place in tone, veering awkwardly from some daring comic moments to feel-good sappiness and back again in hopes of redeeming some semblance of edginess. It's as if "The Change-Up" is trying to say, "Just kidding! We didn't mean to be so sappy and square. Well, maybe we did, just a little. Whatever you guys like best."

Learning lessons is what body-swapping movies are all about. The grass is always greener on the other side until you have to mow it, or something. Here, Bateman plays Dave Lockwood, a wealthy, successful Atlanta lawyer. He's happily married to Jamie (Leslie Mann), with whom he has a sweet, 5-year-old daughter and a couple of adorable, 2-year-old twins. But he misses spontaneity and fun.

His childhood best friend, Reynolds' defiantly single Mitch Planko, spends his days doing bong hits in his man cave. Sometimes, he goes out on auditions for commercials. At night, he beds as many random women as possible. But he longs to have someone to come home to, to feel loved and secure.

One night, after too many drinks (which is also how Bateman's character got into trouble in "Horrible Bosses"), Dave and Mitch relieve themselves in a fountain. Each insists the other guy has the better life. When they wake up the next morning, poof! They've switched bodies, which leads to some predictable but amusingly executed fish-out-of-water scenarios. Mitch, as Dave, uses sheer bravado to navigate the uptight law firm where Dave is on the verge of making partner. Dave, as Mitch, gets an unexpected booty call late one night from one of Mitch's wild flings.

As an actor, Bateman gets the better end of the deal here: He's got Reynolds' wild child trapped inside of him, so he gets the showier part. Reynolds has a fearlessness when it comes to physical comedy but he's got Bateman's rigid, conservative character stuck in his body. Except for one scene in which Dave-as-Mitch makes a light porno film (or a "lorno," as they call it), he doesn't get as much of an opportunity to let loose.

Olivia Wilde is sexy and charismatic — no surprise there — as the law associate Dave secretly lusts after and gets to go on a date with inside Mitch's body. It's nice to see "The Change-Up" flesh her character out and give her some brains and personality, rather than letting her be eye candy as so many male-dominated comedies might have.

It's enough to make you wish the rest of the film had taken the high road. We won't trouble you with a description of what happens to Mann's character after too much Thai food.

"The Change-Up," a Universal Pictures release, is rated R for pervasive strong, crude sexual content and language, some graphic nudity and drug use. Running time: 112 minutes. Two stars out of four.

Comedians rally in support of Lewis

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Jerry Lewis' separation from the Muscular Dystrophy Association is not a laughing matter for some comedians.

Paul Rodriguez, Larry Miller, Tom Dreesen, Norm Crosby and others have joined in support of Lewis, the 85-year-old comedian who the MDA says is no longer its national chairman and will not appear on this year's telethon.

The funnymen told reporters gathered at The Laugh Factory comedy club Friday in Hollywood that they want the MDA to feature Lewis on the upcoming telethon.

Rodriguez said Lewis should be brought back in a limo and given the accolades that he deserves.

First day of Men's City Championship takes on 3-5A flavor

By Len Hayward
Sports Editor

One look at the leader board for this year's Midland Men's City Championship looks a lot like a District 3-5A tournament from about four years ago.

Led by Lee grad John Mark Peterson, a plethora of recently graduated high school golfers are pacing the field at the annual tournament at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Peterson shot a 6-under 66 on the Roadrunner Course to lead the tournament as five of the top six players on the leader board all graduated from either Lee or Midland High within the last five years and four of those five all have played or are playing college golf.

"It's pretty cool and it's fun," said Midland High grad Chris Hubbard, who is the only one of the five players who didn't play college golf and is tied for second. "Those guys are good players, and there's a reason they are in the championship flight."

Hubbard, who will be a senior at Texas Tech this fall, and Lee grad Brian Scherer each carded 5-under 67s and are tied for second. Ryan Fioretti, who went to Lee and now plays at Texas-El Paso, is fourth with a 68 and MHS grad and current Texas-San Antonio golfer Martin Board is in fifth with a 69.

"I had nothing but 3s and 4s on the card today, so it was good," said Scherer, who did play at Texas Tech but is not playing this year and will graduate from the school in December. "I shot 1-under on the front and I attacked the back nine."

Mixed in with those five is Mitch Aston, a 31-year old Midland police officer and former tennis professional at Odessa Country Club, who shot a 69 and is tied for fifth. Aston's score included a double bogey on 16.

"It was a roller coaster round but I knew I just had to hit my shots," said Aston, who is a native of Abilene and chased a tennis career before returning to his first love of golf within the last few years.

Peterson, meanwhile, didn't have a roller coaster round as he carded seven birdies and one bogey on the Roadrunner course. He said it was his putting that made the difference on Friday.

Peterson didn't know his exact number of putts, estimating at 25 or 26 on the day, but he said no matter how many he did have he said he's been working with his flat stick the last few weeks. Peterson's round came nearly a year after he struggled on the final day of last year's tourna-

Softball teams do their best to stay cool during daytime heating

By Jordan Mason
Sports Writer

In this day of record temperatures and heat-related deaths it's generally hard to find teams practicing or competing in anything during the hottest time of the day in the mid-afternoon.

Yet that isn't the case at the USA/ASA 14-and-under National Fastpitch Tournament, where play is taking place at the Freddie Ezell Softball Complex leading up to Sunday's championship game.

Tournament games begin in the morning and run into the evening, including during the hottest time of the day in the mid-afternoon, and have since pool play began Monday.

Yet players competing at the Freddie Ezell Softball Complex are well prepared to handle the record heat that they've had to deal with this week.

Well, kind of.

"We haven't got to where we play games where it's this hot," said Israel Martinez, an assistant coach of the SoCal Choppers, a team based in Valencia, Calif.

Carl Konz, who opted to stand in the shade to watch his daughter Kaila rather than sit on the bleachers in the sun, has actually seen worse traveling with Kaila's Minnesota Sting 96 team, namely a record 131 degree heat index in Iowa.

> "We haven't got to where we play games where it's this hot."
> — ISRAEL MARTINEZ
> Assistant coach for the SoCal Choppers

But that doesn't mean he was happy to see Friday's 103 degree high in Midland.

"It's still hot," he said laughing. "I'd prefer 90 degrees."

Martinez said his team, which played a 3 p.m. game Friday, is used to playing in upper-90 degree temperatures and certainly isn't used to playing during that time of day.

But Martinez said he and his staff have been preparing the team for two months now to play in this type of heat by having them give up sweet beverages and greasy foods like french fries.

"It was hard at the beginning," Choppers catcher Caitlyn Emberson said, "but we just knew that it would help us once we got here."

Emberson believes the change in diet has paid dividends, but of course, that isn't all that goes into combatting the heat.

Players are watched closely by teammates and coaches, and try to stay hydrated with copious amounts of water, Martinez said his team drinks 10 to 12 bottles on game days, and keep cool by wearing chamois that sit in ice water when they're not out on the field.

These measures may not nullify sweltering temperatures, but they certainly help.

"It's hard," Emberson said, "but we get through it."

Emberson may have it hardest having to wear catcher's gear, but said she's allowed to ask for time to get water if she's feeling overheated.

Yet she said she doesn't have the problem often.

Northern All-Stars fall in Regional opener

From staff reports

WACO — It was an emotional roller coaster for the 12-year-old Northern All-Stars at Norcross Stadium on Friday. Unfortunately for Northern, the night ended on a low as it lost its opening game of the Little League Southwest Regional Tournament 12-11 to Lafayette, La., in eight innings.

After a furious comeback from an early seven-run deficit, the 12-year-old Northern All-Stars briefly took on a pair of home runs in the top of the eighth inning. With the score tied 8-8 with one out in the frame, Jaxon Hallmark belted a solo shot over the fence, giving Northern its first lead of the game.

After Ty Coleman reached on an error by Lafayette's shortstop, John Wuthrich followed with at two-run blast, pushing Northern's advantage to 11-8.

The lead wouldn't hold up, though, as Lafayette managed to get four runs across in the bottom of the eighth to pick up the victory. Lafayette loaded the bases with a pair of singles and a walk, then closed the gap to 11-9 when a single brought in a run and left the bases loaded.

A game-winning double cleared the bases, scoring the three runs Lafayette needed to earn the victory.

"I'm just proud of the kids for fighting back," Northern coach Shaun Standard said. "They had an opportunity to just lay down there and let it all get away. I told them to keep fighing and let's see what happens. I'm at least proud of them for not quitting."

Northern was down 8-1 going into the sixth inning, but got a pair of home runs from Gunnar Blevins and Eric Hillman, while Austin Jordan and Coleman each had RBI singles, closing the gap to 8-6. A passed ball allowed two more runs to score for Northern and tie the game at 8-8, setting the stage for the extra-inning drama.

Northern meets Pearland in its second game of pool play at 2:30 p.m. today at Norcross Stadium, needing a victory to keep its Little League World Series dreams alive.

Jones dismisses offensive line concerns

By Tom Orsborn
San Antonio Express-News

Jerry Jones quickly dismissed the notion that the right side of the Dallas Cowboys offensive line is a weak spot even though it's currently manned by a pair of rookies after a back injury sidelined right guard Montrae Holland on Friday.

With Holland forced to leave the morning walk-through early, fourth-round pick David Arkin worked with the first team in the full-pads afternoon practice. Holland is day to day, but the journeyman has had an uneven camp even when healthy.

So with either Arkin, who hails from small school Missouri State, or Holland lined up next to first-round right tackle Tyron Smith, who has been routingly torched by DeMarcus Ware and Anthony Spencer, wouldn't any objective review of the right side of the line find it a weak spot?

"Not with that number-one draft pick out there," Jones said. "He's learning, but let me tell you something, he is impressive and he's physical and we are improved at right tackle."

Jones also likes what he sees at right guard and maintained he isn't in the market for one in free agency. Holland has been the starter ever since the Cowboys cut Leonard Davis at the start of camp in a salary cap move.

"We have a chance there," Jones said of the situation at right guard. "We have some real competition going on there, and it's legitimate competition. The good news is we have the time to evaluate them. Arkin has a chance to compete there the way he's playing — if he continues."

Jones also expressed confidence in Holland, an off-and-on starter for three teams during his eight NFL seasons.

"Holland has never let us down," Jones said. "When it comes time to get in ball games, he plays well in ball games. He'll continue to get these reps. He'll play well. I'm glad we got him."

Barfield's homer lifts RockHounds over Hooks

From staff reports

CORPUS CHRISTI — With one swing of the bat, Midland RockHounds right fielder Jeremy Barfield turned what could have easily been a hitless performance into a heroic one on Friday night.

After going hitless in his first three at-bats, Barfield hit a two-run homer in the top of the ninth inning, delivering a 4-3 victory for the RockHounds against the Corpus Christi Hooks at Whataburger Field.

RockHounds........4
Hooks 3

It was Barfield's ninth home run of the season and it came with one out and second baseman Wes Timmons, who had just drawn a walk, on first.

It was the second two-run homer for the RockHounds on Friday, which is how they accounted for all of their runs. In the top of the sixth with the Hooks up 3-0, first baseman Adam Heether hit a two-out, two-run homer — his 12th of the season — to cut Corpus Christi's lead to 3-2.

The Hooks also did most of their damage with the long ball. After left fielder Brandon Barnes hit a RBI single to center, scoring shortstop Jonathan Villar, first baseman Kody Hinze followed with a two-run shot to left for a 3-0 Hooks lead.

Brett Hunter (1-2) picked up the win for the RockHounds, pitching two scoreless innings of relief in the seventh and eighth before handing the ball over to Jared Lansford, who recorded his fourth save of the year.

Jason Stoffel took the loss for the Hooks, blowing his first save in four chances during his short tenure with the Houston Astros double-A club.

Midland and Corpus Christi meet at Whataburger Field for Game 2 of a four-game series at 7:05 p.m. today.

"My putter has been hot. I've been thinking, nothing but putting, putting, putting," said Peterson, who played at Northern Colorado but will finish his education at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. "I guess you could say after what happened last year and had the finish I had you have to learn from that. I just learned not to stress out and go out and have fun."

A quartet of players are tied for seventh as Derek Edmonds, two-time city champ Omar Sanchez, Craig Feuer and Marcus Lopez each shot 2-under 70s.

Defending and two-time champion Rick Houston shot an even par 72 and is in 11th.

The tournament will resume today as the Championship Flight will play on the shorter Quail Course and the leaders will begin teeing off at 8:30 a.m.

UTPB softball coach steps down

From staff reports

ODESSA — Angie Kenney, who has been part of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin softball program for the past six years, is stepping down as head coach.

Kenney came to UTPB in 2006, serving as an assistant coach and holding that position for three seasons. She was promoted to head coach in 2009 and immediately made an impact as she was named the Heartland Conference Coach of the Year in 2010.

Not only was she recognized by her peers in the league, her players garnered numerous individual honors during her tenure. She coached 10 All-Heartland Conference players as well as two Newcomers of the Year and 12 academic all-conference performers.

After taking over the reins of the program, she raised UTPB's conference winning percentage nearly .300 points and the overall winning percentage by .200 points.

"Angie has invested a lot of her time and efforts in our program since joining as a graduate assistant as well as head coach," Athletic Director Steve Aicinena said. "She has also served as our Senior Woman Administrator and her services have been appreciated. She will be missed."

Kenney will stay on with the department until Aug. 26.

"I want to thank all of the people who helped make the softball program here at UTPB better," Kenney said. "Without the help and support of the athletic staff and softball booster club, we would not have been able to accomplish the things we did. I also want to thank Dr. Watts (UTPB President) and Steve Aicinena for giving the me the opportunity to become the head coach here at UTPB."

Hamilton leads Rangers past Indians

Associated Press

Rangers 8
Indians 7 (11)

ARLINGTON— Josh Hamilton drove in the winning run with a two-out infield single in the 11th inning and the Texas Rangers rallied to beat Cleveland 8-7 on Friday night, denying Ubaldo Jimenez a victory in his first start for the Indians.

Elvis Andrus sparked the game-ending rally with a two-out bunt single against Rafael Perez (4-2). Andrus advanced to second on Perez's wild pitch, and Hamilton hit a soft grounder to shortstop Asdrubal Cabrera.

Hamilton slid headfirst into first, beating Cabrera's throw. Andrus never stopped after rounding third and beat first baseman Matt LaPorta's one-hop throw to the plate.

Neftali Feliz (1-2) pitched 1 2-3 scoreless innings for the win.

MLB ROUNDUP

FROM WIRE REPORTS

American League

YANKEES 3, RED SOX 2: At Boston, reliever Boone Logan struck out Adrian Gonzalez with the bases loaded to end the fifth inning, and the New York Yankees came back to beat the Boston Red Sox 3-2 on Friday night to win their eighth straight game and take over first place in the AL East.

Logan (3-2) was the first of five Yankees relievers who combined to throw 4 1-3 shutout innings after starter Bartolo Colon couldn't make it out of the fifth. Mariano Rivera was the last, pitching the ninth for his 29th save.

The win gave New York the division lead for the first time since July 6. Boston had beaten the Yankees in eight of their previous nine meetings this year.

RAYS 8, ATHLETICS 4: At St. Petersburg, Fla., Jeff Niemann took a four-hitter into the ninth inning en route to winning his fifth consecutive decision for Tampa Bay.

Niemann (6-4) allowed four runs and seven hits over 8 2-3 innings. The right-hander was replaced by Kyle Farnsworth after giving up a pair of runs and three hits in the ninth. Niemann improved to 5-0 in eight starts since returning from a strained lower back on June 20.

Evan Longoria and Casey Kotchman both had run-scoring doubles, and Matt Joyce hit an RBI single in the fifth that put the Rays up 4-0.

WHITE SOX 5, TWINS 3: At Minneapolis, Carlos Quentin had two home runs and four RBIs, Mark Buehrle was sharp after a rough first inning, and Chicago snapped a six-game losing streak.

Buehrle (9-5) allowed three unearned runs and four hits over eight innings, extending his streak of allowing three runs or fewer to 17 straight games.

All three runs against Buehrle came in the first inning and were unearned because of an error by first baseman Adam Dunn. Buehrle retired 22 of the last 24 hitters he faced.

BLUE JAYS 5, ORIOLES 4: At Baltimore, Brett Lawrie got two hits and an RBI in his major league debut, Aaron Hill drove in two runs, and Toronto beat Baltimore.

Lawrie hit a run-scoring single in his first at-bat and singled in the eighth inning, missing a chance for a second RBI when Colby Rasmus was thrown out at the plate.

Obtained last winter in a trade with Milwaukee, the 21-year-old Lawrie is the 17th Canadian to play for the Blue Jays. He made an error at third base in the second inning, but it was inconsequential.

TIGERS 4, ROYALS 3, 10 INNINGS: At Kansas City, Mo., Brennan Boesch hit a go-ahead RBI single in the 10th inning lift Detroit past Kansas City.

Wilson Betemit led off the inning with a walk and pinch-runner Andy Dirks took second on a wild pitch by Aaron Crow (3-3) with one out.

Daniel Schlereth (1-1) worked two scoreless innings and Jose Valverde pitched the bottom of the 10th for his 31st straight save.

National League

BREWERS 8, ASTROS 1: At Houston, Yovani Gallardo allowed four hits over eight innings as Milwaukee got its ninth victory in 10 games.

It was Gallardo's seventh straight decision over Houston and boosted his career record to 10-2 against the Astros.

Houston got three hits and one run off Gallardo (13-7) in the second inning. After that, he didn't allow another hit until J.B. Shuck singled in the fifth in his first major league at-bat.

BRAVES 4, METS 1: At New York, Dan Uggla extended his career-best hitting streak to 26 games with a two-run single in the eighth inning, Tim Hudson pitched seven stellar innings and the Atlanta Braves beat the New York Mets 4-1 on Friday night.

Rookie Freddie Freeman doubled twice to run his hitting streak to 19 games, a personal best. Hudson (11-7) allowed three hits in helping the Braves hand the Mets their fifth straight loss.

CUBS 4, REDS 3: At Chicago, Tony Campana drove in two runs with an inside-the-park homer and Chicago won its sixth straight.

It was the first major league homer for Campana, who also singled and doubled. He became the first Cub to hit an inside-the-park shot at Wrigley Field for his first homer.

CARDINALS 3, MARLINS 2: At Miami, Lance Berkman's second double of the game brought home Albert Pujols with the go-ahead run in the eighth inning to lead St. Louis.

Pujols doubled off Florida starter Anibal Sanchez (6-5) to lead off the inning, and Berkman drove Sanchez's final pitch of the game into center field to put St. Louis on top.

PADRES 15, PIRATES 5: At Pittsburgh, Chase Headley's grand slam highlighted San Diego's first four-homer game of the season, and the Padres handed the Pirates their eighth straight loss.

Headley's shot to right-center capped a six-run fourth inning and was the Padres' first grand slam of the season. Kyle Blanks, Aaron Cunningham and Jesus Guzman also homered for the Padres, who have won seven consecutive and 12 of their last 14 at PNC Park.

FISHING REPORT

WEST
ALAN HENRY: Water lightly stained; 86-90 degrees; 5.41' low. Black bass are good on topwaters early, later switching to shaky heads, Texas rigs and Carolina rigs. Crappie are good on minnows and jigs. Catfish are fair to good on prepared bait.
ARROWHEAD: Water turbid; 85 degrees; 6.93' low. Largemouth bass are fair on spinnerbaits and moving to deeper water. Crappie are fair on chartreuse jigs and minnows in deeper water off the derricks. White bass are very good with lots of surface action early and late. Blue catfish are good on juglines with cut shad.
COLORADO CITY: 15.79' low. No report available.

Weber-Gale wins 100 free at US nationals

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

STANFORD, Calif. — The future of American sprinting may well lie in Texas, where Jimmy Feigen is the latest in a long line of speedsters to come out of the Longhorns' program.

Olympian Garrett Weber-Gale won the 100-meter freestyle in 48.87 seconds Friday night at the U.S. national championships, defeating Texas training partner Feigen, who took second at 48.99. Scot Robison was third at 49.06.

Feigen led after the first lap before Weber-Gale surged from third to first down the stretch.

"I have no endurance so the only way I have a chance is to go out fast," Feigen said. "I'm all about the fly and die. I can't change my strategy now. I was happy with the place, not so happy with the time."

In the 50 free a day earlier, Feigen was second behind Nathan Adrian and Weber-Gale was third.

"I love the fact that Jimmy and I did so well in the freestyles," Weber-Gale said. "I want the Texas guys to always come out on top."

Weber-Gale has taken his 21-year-old teammate under his wing, giving him a pre-race pep talk before the 50.

"He's smart about everything he does," Feigen said. "It's kind of nice to get that old-school knowledge and experience. Hopefully some of it will rub off on me."

Weber-Gale's time was slower than his 100 split of 48.33 in the 4x100 freestyle relay at the world championships. In Shanghai, he was slowest of anyone on the Michael Phelps-led U.S. relay, which took bronze. He blamed himself for the Americans' upset loss to Australia.

"That really bothered me for several days. I felt sick about it. I felt embarrassed about it," Weber-Gale said. "I guess everyone has an occasional swim like that. (Coach) Ed (Reese) says that's the kind of thing that happens once in a long while and you'll never make that mistake again."

FSU coach's son fighting rare blood disease

By Brent Kallestad
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida State football coach Jimbo Fisher and his wife Candi said Friday they have started a fundraising organization to raise money to help their youngest son and others fight a rare life-threatening blood disease.

Both parents also asked people to join the National Marrow Donor Registry during an emotional half-hour news conference.

"There are so many people out there who need bone marrow transplants who can't find the right match," Candi Fisher said. "That's something that you can do to help us."

With a large university auditorium room crowded with friends, media and many Seminole players, the Fishers said 6-year-old Ethan suffers from Fanconi anemia and will eventually require a bone marrow transplant.

Once considered untreatable, the recessive gene disorder affects roughly one of every 300,000 people. Because the disease is so rare, it has been hard for researchers to obtain federal grants to help them in pursuit of a cure.

But Ethan's specialist, Dr. Margaret MacMillan, and the Fishers want to change that.

"We are in this to win the fight against Fanconi anemia on behalf of all the children who share this struggle with Ethan," the second-year Florida State coach said Friday. "We're here to find a cure."

This Jan. 7, 1996, file photo shows Dallas' Deion Sanders dancing in the endzone following a touchdown in the NFC Divisional playoffs, in Irving. For 14 seasons, Sanders strutted his stuff across the NFL, a threat to score — or at least shake things up — on defense, special teams and occasionally on offense. His talent was as undeniable, although often overshadowed by his flamboyance. His induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Saturday night will seal his greatness.

Prime Time for Hall of Famers

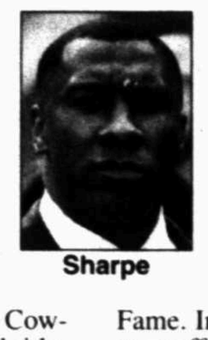
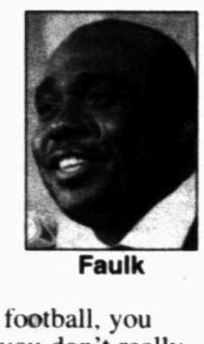
Sanders



Sharpe



Faulk

CANTON, Ohio — Deion, Marshall and Shannon. Three players who could get by with only their first names, and soon to be known as Hall of Famers.

Deion Sanders, Marshall Faulk and Shannon Sharpe (of course) will be inducted into the Pro Football shrine Saturday night. Sanders and Faulk were slam dunks in their first year of eligibility.

Joining that trio will be Richard Dent, Chris Hanburger, Les Richter and Ed Sabol.

Sanders was one of football's most versatile and entertaining players, earning the nickname "Prime Time." According to Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, he also was a phony.

"Deion was a fraud — a fraud, OK?" Jones said. "He wanted it to look easy, but he was a hard worker. He would give just enough at practice to be a team player in strength and conditioning, but when he went home he worked like a dog on his strength. He wanted everyone to think he was a natural. He was, but it wasn't only because he was born like that. He worked."

The teams Sanders played for generally worked their way into the playoffs. In 1994, he joined the 49ers and helped them win the Super Bowl. The next year, he was headed to Dallas, helping the Cowboys win their third title in four seasons.

"Deion was 'Prime Time,' 'Neon Deion,' always that flashy player that everybody wanted to be," said Mike Jenkins, the Cowboys cornerback who now wears 21. "He always stood out and he let it be known that he was one of the best. He definitely made it exotic to play cornerback."

Faulk wasn't quite so exotic. He was just as formidable, though, retiring with 12,279 yards and 100 touchdowns rushing, another 6,875 yards and 36 TDs as a receiver.

His dominance in an 12-season career, the first five with Indianapolis, the last seven in St. Louis, earned him election to the hall over two other running backs who became eligible for the first time in 2011. Both Curtis Martin and Jerome Bettis rushed for more yards than Faulk, yet fell short of enshrinement.

"People make a big thing about going in on the first ballot, but it's really more about getting in," Faulk said. "They don't give you a target to shoot at. In baseball, you know what you have to do to make the Hall of Fame. In football, you start off, you don't really know what you have to do to make it. There's no 'If you break these records as a tight end, you're going to get in' or Shannon Sharpe would have got in his first year. That's hard to do."

Sharpe retired in 2003 and missed out on making the hall in his first two years of eligibility. He compiled 10,060 yards receiving and 62 touchdowns, monstrous numbers for a tight end, and won three Super Bowls — two with Denver, one with Baltimore.

But tight end always has been a difficult position from which to gain hall entry; there are only eight tight ends in Canton.

Sharpe did it the hardest way, working his way from a seventh-round draft pick out of Savannah State to making eight Pro Bowls.

"Shannon was the best at what he did, no question," said Mike Shanahan, who coached him with the Broncos. "He dominated. His work ethic was at the top. He played his best in big games, and he did it all over a long period of time."

Goodell, NFLPA head Smith sign new, 10-year deal

By Will Graves

Phil Long/AP

NFL Comissioner Roger Goodell, left, and NFLPA Executive Director DeMaurice Smith, congratulate each other Friday after signing their collective bargaining agreement at the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio.

CANTON, Ohio — NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell and NFLPA head DeMaurice Smith each grabbed a side of the massive 300-page collective bargaining agreement between the players and league owners and exchanged a relieved handshake while posing for the cameras.

And just like that, 4 1/2 months of acrimony, anger and posturing from both sides during the protracted NFL lockout was over.

Smith and Goodell signed the new CBA on a makeshift stage on the steps of the Pro Football Hall of Fame Friday morning, a largely ceremonial gesture after the players agreed to ratify the 10-year agreement Thursday night.

Still, there was a sense of relief from both Smith and Goodell, who shook hands three times during the brief signing and even hugged after spending nearly half a year in tense negotiations haggling over a new way to distribute the NFL's massive revenue stream.

"We're all relieved because football is back," Goodell said. "That's what our fans want, and that's what we all want and we're thrilled that we got it done."

One fan shouted "thank you" to Smith as he took his seat, with Smith answering "more than welcome."

Following the signing both men glad-handed their way to the NFL Network's set inside the Hall of Fame Gallery. With the busts of Hall inductees serving as a backdrop, Smith and Goodell detailed the sometimes difficult journey to the new deal.

Neither pointed to a breakthrough moment in the lengthy talks, instead crediting leadership on both sides for being able to find common ground so the 2011 season could be saved.

Goodell said a small group of player representatives and owners did the leg work of putting aside the considerable differences between the two groups and focusing on the future.

"There was a tremendous amount of respect and an attempt to find solutions," Goodell said. "Once we understood each other and we understood that that was what we were there for, we got it done."

Both Goodell and Smith were vague on the possibility of HGH-testing. Smith called it "something to be strived for," with Goodell adding "we're going to get it done but we want to get it done right."

Testing could begin by the start of the regular season, though the specifics are still being worked on, as are several other details. It didn't stop Smith from celebrating a "joyous" day. The process has turned him into a celebrity of sorts, and he spent several minutes posing for pictures with fans before being whisked away in a van.

Though the players were eager to get back to work, not every team walked in lockstep to ratify the CBA.

The Pittsburgh Steelers voted no, citing the rushed nature of the deal — the Steelers didn't receive a copy until 3 p.m. — and the agreement's inability to address Goodell's role as judge and jury for on-the-field discipline.

"We felt it was shoved down our throats," Pittsburgh defensive tackle Willie Colon said Thursday.

Texans stocked at running back

By Kristie Rieken

David J. Phillip/AP

Houston Texans running back Arian Foster runs Friday during training camp in Houston.

HOUSTON — Arian Foster led the NFL in rushing last season, and Houston Texans teammate Steve Slaton was the top rookie rusher in 2008.

Throw in Ben Tate, Derrick Ward and Chris Ogbonnaya, and a team that once struggled to find a dependable running back is now overstocked.

Foster was on Houston's practice squad for much of 2009 before last year's breakout season, when he rushed for 1,616 yards and 16 touchdowns. He knows he can't rely on what he did last year to be successful in 2011.

"The crazy thing about this league is that — coach (Gary Kubiak) says it all the time — that you have to prove yourself every single day," Foster said. "You could lead the league in rushing one day and the next day they'll forget you fast. You have to keep on making your mark."

Foster sat out much of Friday's practice after experiencing tightness in his hamstring, but should be OK. It was a setback that Kubiak said highlighted the need to have a deep group at the position, as players get banged up throughout the season.

"We're going to end up with four dang good ones and we may be in a situation where we can keep five," Kubiak said. "So we're strong at that position right now, but y'all know how this works. You come out one day or play one preseason game and you go from having a bunch of them to something happening. So let's just keep our fingers crossed that they're all going to be there at the end and we're going to have a good group."

Slaton had 1,282 yards rushing with nine touchdowns as a rookie in 2008, but hasn't done a lot since then while dealing with injuries and the emergence of Foster. He's healthy now, and the Texans believe he could add to the running game.

Tate was selected in the second round of the 2010 draft after rushing for 1,362 yards and 10 touchdowns as a senior at Auburn. He was expected to see limited playing time last season, but missed his entire rookie year after breaking his ankle in Houston's first preseason game.

"I'm very anxious to get back to a preseason game and get to show everyone, the fans, the organization, teammates, what I can do," he said.

Houston has so many options at the position that the team may not be able to keep all of them.

"He's in a battle," Kubiak said of Tate. "He's working as a fourth guy right now and that's a humbling experience. You come out here after you miss all last year (and) it's a very competitive situation, and we've got a nice problem back there. So we'll see how it works out."

Ogbonnaya spent last season on Houston's practice squad. After a successful career at Texas, he spent one season mostly on the St. Louis Rams practice squad.

The 30-year-old Ward spent the first five seasons of his NFL career with the Giants, where he ran for a career-high 1,025 yards in 2008. He appeared in each game for Houston last season and finished with 315 yards rushing and four touchdowns.

Quarterback Matt Schaub said a dynamic running game took pressure off the passing game.

"It allowed us to control the tempo a little bit more, keep our situations and our downs manageable ... and we were able to execute better in the red zone because the field is shorter," he said. "The defense doesn't have as far to defend in the pass game, so running the ball down there was of the utmost importance. It just helped us keep everything manageable. So it helped me out tremendously."

blowing by Smith, coach Jason Garrett is encouraged because the Southern California alum isn't hanging his head or looking for a place to hide.

The Cowboys declared Smith the starter shortly after they drafted him ninth overall. Last year's starter at right tackle, the aging, injury-prone Marc Colombo, was let go last week to clear salary cap space.

"He's had to block 94 (Ware) and 93 (Spencer) a lot," Garrett said. "He's challenged every time he breaks the huddle and walks up to the line of scrimmage. Again, what has been impressive to me has been not only the physical ability and the fight and the ability to compete, but the ability to come back after he gets beat.

"(Ware) beats a lot of guys, (Spencer) beats a lot of guys, and how do you respond to that? (Smith) is doing a nice job of standing there and competing and coming back on the next play."

Adding to their challenge, Smith and Arkin didn't get any tutoring from offensive line coach Hudson Houck the past 4½ months because of the lockout.

"It's good to get those (first team reps)," Arkin said. "Rookies don't get a lot of reps, so I'm fortunate to get them and have a chance to get better. I'm just trying to come out here and work and get better. I'm starting to feel a lot more comfortable."

Former OL Damien Woody retires after 12 seasons

By Dennis Waszak Jr.
Associated Press

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. — Damien Woody was always there at his locker after games, ready to answer questions after a big win or even a disappointing loss.

And most of the time, the big offensive lineman did it with a smile.

Woody officially announced his retirement from football after 12 seasons Friday and will join ESPN as an NFL studio analyst. It should be a smooth transition for the former Jets, Lions and Patriots player.

"Retiring for any athlete is hard, and you just never expect this day to happen," Woody said during a news conference at the Jets' training facility. "But the one thing is, I'm really looking forward to life after football, especially my body."

Woody, 33, spent the last three seasons playing right tackle for the Jets, but was released before the NFL lockout began in March. He contemplated returning for a 13th NFL season, but decided to move forward with his plan to get into broadcasting.

He has six kids at home and a seventh on the way.

"I'm here to sign a one-year contract for wide receiver," Woody said with that familiar grin as his wife, Nicole, laughed. "I heard they need a little help with guys being banged up. I'd definitely be the biggest wide receiver in the league."

Fowler part of 4-way tie as Woods falters

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio — Rickie Fowler had eight birdies and an eagle to give himself another shot at winning. Adam Scott did well enough to stay in the lead. PGA Tour rookie Keegan Bradley got in on the action late.

It seemed as if everyone was in contention Friday at the Bridgestone Invitational.

Except for the guy most everyone came to see.

Fowler

On another soft day that was ripe for low scores, Tiger Woods missed a 2-foot putt and didn't make enough birdies to atone for his short-game mistakes during a 1-over 71 that left him in the middle of the pack.

He was only seven shots behind, but had 35 players in front of him at Firestone.

"Today was not very good," Woods said.

It was good enough for Scott, except for making the putts he holed in the opening round of this World Golf Championship. He had a 70, which is never bad at Firestone in any condition.

After opening with a 62, Scott was at 8-under 132 along with Ryan Moore (66), Fowler (64) and Bradley (65). Jason Day bogeyed his last hole for a 70 and was one shot behind with Martin Laird (67) and Robert Karlsson (65).

"The last time I shot 62 was probably a long time ago, so am I going to expect to do it two days in a row?" Scott said. "I don't think so. But it's a hard golf course, and if you're just a little off, you get quite severely penalized. There's no real secret that it's not easy to shoot a couple of 62s."

Fowler was all over the place. He made only five pars, and kept his gallery guessing the rest of the time. There were three straight birdies, and a wedge he holed from 110 yards for eagle on No. 3. He followed that with three bogeys and three pars.

"A lot of good things came out of today," said Fowler, who is still searching for his first win. "Building some confidence going into the weekend."

No one appeared to have more fun than Bradley, the nephew of LPGA Hall of Fame player Pat Bradley and a winner this year at the Byron Nelson Championship. With big crowds lingering even after Woods left the course, he could hear plenty of cheers for birdies all around him, and even some for himself as he worked his way to the top of the leaderboard.

"I had Luke Donald behind me, Phil Mickelson a few groups behind me," Bradley said. "I mean, it's something that I dream about since I was 2 years old. It's kind of happening in front of my eyes, which is a weird feeling to describe. But it's spectacular. I just can't express how much fun I'm having out there."

His biggest birdie came at No. 3, even though it was only a 12-foot putt.

Bradley played a money game with Mickelson on Wednesday, in which Mickelson serves as a mentor until the final holes when the four-time major champion cares only about getting into Bradley's pocket. Mickelson pointed to a hole location that can be tricky. The putt looks as if it should break right, but it actually moves left.

"And sure enough, I had this exact putt he brought me over to," Bradley said. "I wanted to make it so bad so I could go back and tell him later tonight."

Mickelson was among those who couldn't keep up with 31 guys who broke par in the second round.

He holed out from the 11th fairway for eagle, but followed that with a double bogey on the par-3 12th, and finished with a pair of bogeys for a 73 that put him at even par, eight shots behind.

GOLFROUNDUP

FROM WIRE REPORTS

Champions

3M CHAMPIONSHIP: At Blaine, Minn., Jay Haas aced the fourth hole and finished with four straight birdies en route to an 8-under 64 Friday to share the lead with John Huston after the first round of the 3M Championship.

Huston birdied five of his final nine holes. Gary Hallberg, Tom Lehman, Peter Senior and Rod Spittle were one shot back at the TPC Twin Cities. Mark Calcavecchia, Dave Eger, Kenny Perry and Joey Sindelar were at 66.

With temperatures in the mid-80s, high dew points and little wind, 53 of the 80 players finished under par.

Because of the nearly 2 inches of rain received in the past week, the only complaint was that balls hit off the tee would stick in the damp fairway and leave mud on the ball, reducing the player's ability to control a second shot.

Junior PGA

JUNIOR PGA CHAMPIONSHIP: At Fort Wayen, Ind., Cody Proveaux of Leesville, S.C., drained a 15-foot putt from the fringe for birdie on the 18th hole at Sycamore Hills Golf Club to win the 36th Junior PGA Championship.

He bettered, by one stroke, Lorens Chan of Honolulu, Hawaii, who had made a putt from the same spot for birdie to tie Proveaux atop the leader board Friday afternoon.

Proveaux, who shot a final-round 1-over 73, finished the 72-hole tournament at 6 under.

The girls' side was won in dominating fashion by Thailand's Ariya Jutanugarn, who had a final-round 70 to finish at 15 under, 10 strokes better than Mariah Stackhouse of Riverdale, Ga.

The 15-year-old Jutanugarn had 21 birdies, 46 pars and only five holes worse than par at the Jack Nicklaus-designed course, where 156 players from the U.S., Columbia, China and Thailand competed. The 17-year-old Proveaux had 20 birdies, 40 pars and only 12 holes worse than that.

SOFTBALL

From 1B

"Our team is good about getting out of the innings," Emberson said.

Emberson's confidence in being able to handle the heat was shared by Martinez and Konz.

And despite the soaring temperatures, each seems to view playing in the heat as part of the game — even if it is during the hardest part of the day.

"We've got to prepare them mentally more than anything that they're going to come out to the heat and that you've got to expect these kinds of games," Martinez said. "As long as we do that then we should be fine."

Edwards says Roush offers best chance at Cup title

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press

LONG POND, Pa — The one phone call from his boss that meant the most to Carl Edwards wasn't a pitch to stay at Roush Fenway Racing.

Jack Roush simply told his star driver — and the hottest free agent in NASCAR — to make the decision based on what was best for Edwards.

"He said those words to me, and that meant the world," Edwards said Friday at Pocono Raceway. "It meant that I didn't have the pressure to do something for any reason other than what I thought was best."

In the end, Edwards decided what was best was sticking with the only organization he's called home in his Cup career. Edwards signed a multi-year contract extension with RFR this week because he believed the resources, sponsors, crew and car give him the best chance to win championships.

"Whenever I'd start feeling that pressure start creeping in from the outside I'd think, 'OK, let's get back to the basics here,'" he said. "Where can I win the most championships? And what would I do if other people's opinions weren't a factor?"

There were plenty of opinions around the garage from fellow drivers to the media speculating on his future. Greg Biffle, his teammate, intimated Edwards was leaving the organization. Four-time Cup champion Jeff Gordon said lingering contract negotiations were a distraction to Edwards as he chased his first career championship. Edwards enters Sunday's Sprint Cup race in first place, a spot he's held in the No. 99 Ford for the majority of the season.

"I still think it got them a little bit behind, but this will allow them to get back on track," Gordon said. "I never considered them a non-threat. Carl's a great driver and that team's a very good team. There's no doubt those talks and that constant barrage of questions is hard to get past until you get settled."

Sunday, look for sunny skies with a high around 104, a low around 75 and north winds around between 5 and 10 mph.

Monday, the forecast calls for sunny skies with a high around 106 and a low around 78.

The high on Friday reached a record 104 while the low dropped to 78. The previous record high for Aug. 5 is 103 set in 2003. The record low is 61 set in 1978.

A storm moving into the eastern part of the country will spark widespread showers and thunderstorms Saturday from the Ohio Valley to the Mid-Atlantic states and Southeast. Some of the thunderstorms will lead to flooding.

Moisture from Tropical Storm Emily will help to enhance the shower and thunderstorm activity across much of Florida, leading to scattered downpours.

High pressure centered over the northern Gulf of Mexico will lead to another day of relentless heat across Texas and the southern Plains.

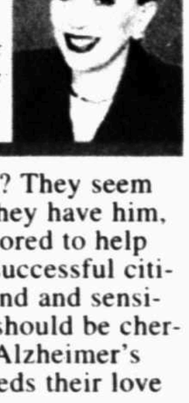
Bride-to-be wants a do-over on groom's proposal

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.



DEAR ABBY: My fiancee, "Vanessa," and I have been engaged almost a year. We're to be married in three months. When I popped the question, I took her to one of her favorite spots in the Smokey Mountains. When I proposed, she was overcome with emotion — but not the kind I would have thought. She said yes, but she wasn't at all happy about being surprised. She doesn't like surprises.

At the time, I was sure she had an inkling about my intentions. We had discussed becoming engaged several times. Now, as the wedding draws near, she wants me to "re-propose." It makes me feel like my first wasn't good enough, and it is really upsetting me. I only intended to do it once in my life. What would you recommend? — QUESTIONED-OUT IN OHIO

DEAR QUESTIONED-OUT: I recommend you clear the air with Vanessa ASAP. Tell her you intended to propose only once in your life, and that her request has hurt your feelings. If she still insists on a second proposal, ask for a script so you won't disappoint her again. Then be prepared to have her provide you with them regularly, because unless you're a mind reader, it's the only way you'll live up to her fantasies.

DEAR ABBY: We stand in line for movie tickets, sporting events, Black Friday shopping, etc. Am I being overly sensitive when I have stood in line and the person in front of me allows family or friends to cut in? It irks me no end when I have spent anywhere from 30 minutes to several hours waiting and someone butts in front of me.

How can I tactfully address this without being confrontational? Or should I just bite my tongue and move on? — STANDING IN LINE

DEAR STANDING: It's one thing when a person lets a spouse or one other person in — and quite another when it's half a dozen people. However, folks this rude can be hypersensitive when challenged and cause an altercation, so I don't recommend taking them on.

An exception to this would be Black Friday, or a store event in which only a certain number of shoppers will be allowed in. In a case like that, security should be notified if a large number of people are cutting in line.

DEAR ABBY: How can I get my stepsons to show some compassion and love for their father? They seem to forget that they have him, and that he labored to help them become successful citizens. He's a kind and sensitive man who should be cherished. He has Alzheimer's disease and needs their love now more than ever.

They live in other states, but could call more than once a year. My husband doesn't say much about them anymore. He did when we first married six years ago. We keep busy, but I cry for him. He has no family. His first wife lived for her sons only and probably forgot about her relationship with my husband. Perhaps this attitude was passed on to his sons. How do others in my situation cope? — CRYING IN WISCONSIN

DEAR CRYING: Dry your tears, pick up the phone and encourage the "boys" to call their father once a week to say they are thinking of him and love him — and to share some memory their father will relate to. And should your husband's sons have a memory lapse and forget to call, remind them — but do it without laying a guilt trip.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 6, 2011:

This year, you might believe you are being clear, but you will be giving mixed signals. You often distance yourself from others without intending to. Ask several respected and trusted friends or family members if perhaps your body language doesn't match your message. Some of you might opt to take a class in communication. Be aware of the possibility. If you are single, you could meet someone through family or close to your home. Take your time dating this year. If you are attached, the two of you probably will see the communication issue just mentioned rear its ugly head. SCORPIO can pressure you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Deal directly with issues that surround a key partnership. The discussion could go anywhere from trying to resolve a disagreement to deciding as a team your next step. Use care not to confuse matters by saying one thing but doing another. Tonight: Dinner with a favorite person.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Others prove to be challenging because they are so determined to have matters tumble the way they want. You might see that you are spreading yourself thin. Worry less about what is happening and more about the quality of the interaction. Tonight: Say "yes" to living.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ You might do the unthinkable ... work on a project rather than socialize. Don't let someone's question throw you. You know what is good for you. Don't feel as if you have to explain everything. Tonight: Let your energy be a factor in making choices.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Amid everything that is happening, you might be wondering if you need to cancel some plans. Give 125 percent to whatever you do, and you will have your answer. Tonight: Fun and games.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Just as you are ready to take off and soar, you discover that a family member or roommate needs something. It might feel as if you have shackles on. Be a little more easygoing, but also know when to respond to your own needs. Tonight: Entertain at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Your ability to communicate crosses a barrier. You have an opportunity to heal a relationship, if you so choose. Don't take people's comments personally, and you will be far happier. Tonight: Strutting your stuff.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ A friend might be trying very hard to point you in the correct direction. Do remember that what is right for you might not be right for this person, and vice versa. Try to open up to different types thinking. Tonight: Your treat.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ You might be all smiles. Pressure could be building where you least expect it. Listen to news more openly. Don't allow a judgment to cloud your thinking. Remain imaginative yet direct with others. Tonight: Enjoying the moment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You might want to project yourself differently than a friend. You also might want to make plans independently. Honor your needs, but also expect a bit of a backlash. You need to follow your own drummer. Tonight: Don't read more into a situation than is really there.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Find the crowds and find your friends. In this type of setting, you'll feel great. A partner manifests some jealousy. Single Goats might discover just how interested someone is by his or her possessiveness. Tonight: Where your friends are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Others often follow your lead. Right now, the same people could reverse their direction out of the blue. You wonder what is going on. Don't worry about the present situation. Remember, everyone is free to do what they want. Tonight: Ask, and you shall receive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Keep reaching for more of what you desire. Listen to news with an open mind. Following the now-possible path could be very exciting yet problematic in some way. You might need to give up a lot. Tonight: Use your imagination.

Gov. Rick Perry gestures during a speech June 23. Perry is hosting The Response: A Call to Prayer in a Nation of Crisis today at Reliant Stadium in Houston. The event is expected to draw thousands.

The Response

Plenty of ties between Team Perry and event, super PAC

By R.G. Ratcliffe
Cox Newspapers

AUSTIN — Organizers of The Response, a day of fasting and prayer in Houston this weekend, may not be directly coordinated with Gov. Rick Perry's political team as it considers a run for president.

But like supporters of an officially independent presidential draft committee pushing Perry's name in the key state of Iowa, the Response organizers include people who have shown a strong interest in Perry's political prospects.

About the event

What: The Response: A Call to Prayer for a Nation in Crisis

When: Today from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Where: Reliant Stadium in Houston

Can't go?: A live stream of the event will be available at www.theresponseusa.com

Perry initiated the Response, billed as "a call to prayer for a nation in crisis," and its political implications were clear from the start. The American Family Association and other groups involved in the event have been active in the past in organizing evangelical Christians to vote.

And in next year's Iowa caucuses, the first test of strength in the presidential nominating process, more than half those attending the Republican caucuses likely will be evangelical Christians, based on past data. Political scientist Dennis Goldford, of Drake University in Iowa, said Perry "can't hurt himself" with Iowa caucus-goers with the Houston event.

Some, on the other hand, have criticized today's event as divisive because its strong Christian orientation might be unwelcoming to non-Christians.

The Response bears a close resemblance to a series of gatherings for evangelical pastors that occurred in 2005 at the start of Perry's re-election campaign for governor.

The closed-door sessions, known as the Texas Restoration Project, were designed to urge pastors to get their congregants to vote. Perry spoke at each event, while other potential gubernatorial candidates were excluded. Some of the same people organizing the Response were involved in the Restoration Project.

"I don't think it's a coincidence that this event is taking place at the same time that Rick Perry is clearly, seriously running for president," said Kathy Miller, president of the Texas Freedom Network, a group dedicated to countering the influence of the religious right on state public policy.

"The Response looks the same as many of his efforts to use religious gatherings and

A sign outside Reliant Stadium lists today's prayer event, The Response: a call to prayer for a nation in crisis Tuesday in Houston. Gov. Rick Perry has organized a prayer meeting in Houston this weekend that could be a political double-edged sword now that he is considering running for president.

Politics at The Response? That's against the rules

■ Make no mistake, Perry will be judged by what takes place today.

Editor's Note: The following appeared earlier this week in the Austin American-Statesman.

We are a few days from "The Response," perhaps the nation's first ever apolitical, Christ-centered prayer and fast meeting convened in a football stadium and initiated by a probably soon-to-announce presidential candidate.

I, and much of the nation's political press, can't wait to see how this goes Saturday in Houston's Reliant Stadium. So far, more than 150 reporters from 110 media organizations have requested credentials. I'm guessing there will be more political reporters than religion reporters.

So far, more than 8,000 people have registered to attend. The stadium holds 71,500 for football. I don't know how it will be configured for The Response, so I don't know if 8,000 will look like a small crowd. In my synagogue, 8,000 would be considered a huge crowd, even on a bar mitzvah day. And though Gov. Rick Perry, the event's "initiator," invited all governors, only one — Sam Brownback of Kansas — has said he'll be there.

Before I get into the rules set out by organizers of The Response, allow me to relay the best one-liner I've heard about the event. I'd credit the creator (of the joke, not the universe) if I could remember who it was. It's based on long-suffering fans of the Houston Texans, Reliant Stadium's prime tenants:

The Response will be just like a Texans game at Reliant: Lots of people in the stands screaming, "Jesus Christ!"

Sorry if that offends anyone.

Perry says he's not sure what his role will be. In Houston last week, he said, "I'm going to be there; I may be ushering, for all I know."

"Don't get confused; this isn't about me. It's not about the people on the stage, either," he said. "This is truly about coming together as a state and lifting up this nation in prayer and having a day of prayer and

Did you know?

Across the United States, Rick Perry is largely an unknown quantity.

"Outside of Texas, all that the public knows about Rick Perry is that he's been a successful governor elected to three terms," said Stephen J. Wayne, a professor of American government at Georgetown University.

Manchester, N.H., lawyer Ovide Lamontagne, a leader among GOP conservatives in the first-in-the-nation presidential primary state, says: "Perry comes in as an unknown to us."

Back home, however, Texans know a lot about Rick Perry already — after all, he's been governor longer than anyone else in Lone Star history, and he's dominated the state's political news for a decade.

Still, there are a lot of things that Texans don't know about Perry. Here are 10 facts that will come as a surprise to all but the most avid Rick Perry fanatics:

1. His real first name is James. (He was born James Richard Perry — or J.R.)
2. His father was a politician, too. Joseph Ray Perry was a Haskell County commissioner — and a Democrat.
3. His hometown, Paint Creek, is located about an hour north of Abilene and has a population less than 4,000. Paint Creek residents are 11 years older than the state average and earn just more than half the state's average income.
4. He met his future wife Anita at a piano recital when they were both in elementary school.
5. At age 11, his father took him to attend the funeral of the legendary Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, Sam Rayburn, in Bonham.
6. He was an animal science major at Texas A&M.
7. During college, he had a summer job as a door-to-door book salesman.
8. He is a second-generation military veteran. His father was a World War II tailgunner. The governor flew C-130 tactical airlift aircraft for the Air Force.
9. College buddy John Sharp, a rising Democratic star in the Texas Legislature, helped to recruit Perry to run for the state House in 1984 — as a Democrat. Fourteen years later, Republican Perry defeated Democrat Sharp to become the first Republican lieutenant governor in Texas history.
10. He is the first Aggie ever to serve as Texas governor.

TEXAS ECONOMY IS THRIVING

But did Gov. Rick Perry make it happen?

By Jeanna Smialek
Houston Chronicle

WASHINGTON — Gov. Rick Perry may credit much of the state's recent economic success to the low-regulation, small-government philosophy he has espoused, but some economists say his policies aren't the most important reason.

The Dallas Federal Reserve notes that Texas entered the Great Recession late and came out of it early, with 2 percent job growth in 2010 and an expected 3 to 4 percent for 2011. Of the 496,000 jobs added to the U.S. economy between fall 2009 and spring 2011, more than half of that job growth came from Texas — a finding Perry has bragged about recently.

On the other hand, Texas' unemployment has remained stubbornly high. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the state's jobless rate increased from 8.1 percent in 2010 to 8.2 percent in June, while the unemployment rate in nearby states remained lower or dropped. And many of the new jobs in Texas have been government or low-wage positions.

Though economists say Perry's low-tax, low-regulation policies have helped the state's economy, there are many other reasons why Texas' economy is thriving while other states' flail.

10 reasons why Texas' economy is doing so well

1. Rising oil prices

In January 2008, crude oil sold at $92.97 a barrel, but as of June 2011 it stood at $96.26 a barrel, according to federal Energy Information Administration data. Those rising oil prices may have been bad news for drivers, but they helped out the Texas economy, said Howard Wial, a fellow and economist at the Brookings Institution.

When oil prices are high, job growth in Texas historically has exceeded that of the nation, said Keith Phillips, the senior economist and advisor at the San Antonio branch of the Dallas Federal Reserve.

According to Dallas Fed research, a 10 percent increase in oil prices leads to a 0.3 percent rise in employment and a 0.5 percent rise in GDP for the state of Texas.

"If you look at what states were expanding, they are almost all the energy states," Phillips said. "When oil prices are high, our job growth is stronger relative to that of the nation."

2. Government growth

Federal spending in Texas topped $227 billion in 2009, up from almost $107 billion in 2000, according to the Census Bureau. Wial said that increase could have protected jobs, and the overall economy, from the fallout of the recession.

According to a recent Wall Street Journal article, employment in Texas' public sector has grown more rapidly than the private sector recently, with a 19 percent growth in government jobs compared to 9 percent growth in private jobs since 2000. Texas has added more than one in five of the public-sector jobs nationwide at local, state and federal levels.

"Creation of government jobs help to create jobs in the rest of the economy, because people spend money and buy things," Wial said.

That trend will change with the implementation of the new state budget, which will make cuts to state spending to account for a state budget shortfall.

3. Military spending

The federal government has significantly expanded its military spending in the decade since 9/11, and that has been good news for Texas, home to major bases like Fort Bliss and Fort Hood.

For example, over the past three years the Army has relocated about 14,000 troops to Fort Bliss, which is outside El Paso, and plans to permanently relocate an additional 6,000 troops there in the next two years. According to a fact sheet issued in August of 2009 by the Fort Hood Public Affairs Office, "Fort Hood is the largest single site employer in Texas, directly inserting nearly $3 billion annually into the Texas economy."

4. No housing bubble

Texas escaped the foreclosure bust that crippled other states' economies — only 6 percent of Texas mortgage borrowers are in or near foreclosure, according to the Mortgage Bankers Association, while the national average is nearly 10 percent.

While nearby states like Arizona and Nevada face mortgage foreclosure rates of 13 percent and 19 percent, respectively, Texas' relatively stable market may have been a factor in preventing housing prices from climbing.

Some credit Texas' stability to state regulations on cash-out and home equity loans, which don't allow borrowers to take out loans that total more than 80 percent of a home's appraised value.

Phillips said that because housing prices never rose during the housing boom, partly because Texas has cheap, open land for building, they also didn't crash during the recession.

5. Cheap immigrant labor

Texas has added more people than any other state during the past decade and now accounts for 8.1 percent of the U.S. population, up from about 7.4 percent in 2000. The state has grown by 4.3 million people over the past 10 years, and according to U.S. Census Bureau statistics, Hispanics account for 65 percent of that population increase.

About one in five new residents moved from other states, but nearly 25 percent were immigrants. Many of those new residents are immigrants from Mexico and Latin American countries who work at low wages and help keep wage averages down throughout the state. Because cheap labor is readily available in Texas, employers looking for low-wage employees are more likely to locate in the state, contributing to its economic growth.

Statistics support the states' trend toward low pay, as many of the jobs Texas has added since the recession are low-wage. Texas is tied with Mississippi for the greatest percentage of minimum wage workers.

6. A young, consumer-oriented population

Not only is Texas' population expanding, but it is also young and has a tendency to spend more than most Americans on consumer goods. According to Bloomberg Businessweek, Texas is one of the youngest U.S. states, with a median age of 33, almost four years below the national average. With one of the youngest populations in the country, the state benefits from their higher-than-average consumption levels.

7. High-tech industry

Phillips said high-tech industries have weathered the recession better than other sectors of the economy, entering the downturn late and improving more quickly as consumer demand has ramped up. And he said Texas — home to many high tech industries — has benefited from that trend.

"When the economy came back, consumer demand for high tech products — automobiles, cell phones, iPads, semiconductors — has been strongest," he said. "Texas is a high-tech state."

8. Hydraulic fracturing

A decade ago, Texas oil engineers decided to combine horizontal drilling and a process called hydraulic fracturing, which injects chemical-laced water into the shale to push out minerals and natural gas. The system has been effective in releasing previously untapped pockets of natural gas in shale formations, such as the Eagle Ford shale formation.

According to the Wall Street Journal, 1 percent of the U.S. gas supplies in 2000 were from shale, but that figure is 25 percent now. And as a result of the new technology, Texas is home to some of the most prosperous new energy fields in the country.

9. Texas exports

Texas is a big producer of products that either weathered the recession well or have rebounded quickly, including high-tech goods and oil and gas. Those goods have also been leading exports during the recovery, meaning that Texas has experienced an inflow of foreign capital even as other states lag behind pre-recession export levels.

"We're a big export state," Phillips said, explaining that Texas' current export levels exceed the pre-recession peak by more than 12 percent. He said that advantage has helped the state's overall economy to recover more quickly than other areas.

10. Drug trafficking

Jack Schumacher, a retired Texas-based DEA agent, told New York Magazine that at least half the drug shipments coming from Mexico stop and offload in Texas, where it is repackaged for sale elsewhere. That means the money that comes with the drug trade also flows through Texas, driving consumption and investment in the state and possibly contributing substantially to the state's economy.

"If you have a few million," Schumacher said in the article, "would you invest in a war zone or a bank in San Antonio?"

What Perry's prayer rally says about solving America's problems

■ On the surface there's nothing wrong with Christian event, but Perry's theology is troubling.

WILLIAM MCKENZIE
Dallas Morning News

When Texas Gov. Rick Perry hosts his prayer rally today in Houston, some will want to jump him. A group already has sued, unsuccessfully, to stop him from attending the event, sponsored by the American Family Association.

Let's cut the governor some slack. If he wants to gather largely conservative evangelicals to hold a rally to pray for America — and has invited other governors to what is billed as a Christian event — let him. It's his prerogative.

What's troubling is Perry's theology.

Start with the flag-and-cross concoction. Perry and other sponsors want attendees to pray to God to guide America and to learn about Jesus Christ.

Each is fine, but not together. When you bind prayer for a nation with learning about Jesus, you take off down the wrong road.

For one thing, there's an assumption that by simply learning about Jesus — and his central message of sacrificial love — our nation will move toward resolving our political problems.

Nice try, but learning about Jesus doesn't balance a budget, improve our schools or, presto, solve our Pakistan problem.

In fact, there's a strong argument that God expects us to make those calls. C.S. Lewis, for one, argued that's why God gave us the ability to reason, to create and to judge. We should use those gifts with wisdom and compassion and shouldn't expect Jesus to suddenly make everything better.

And that's where Perry seems to be leaning. In talking to donors recently about the threat to private property, especially from our tax system, he reportedly said: "It's time to just hand it over to God and say, 'God, you're going to have to fix this.'"

Perry's impulse is understandable. Our problems seem overwhelming. But a blanket "Christ is the answer" response assumes our political conflicts would begin working themselves out if everyone only came to Jesus.

Not only is that inconsistent with Scripture, it ignores the political differences among followers of Christ.

For example, younger evangelicals show a passion for environmental stewardship. Such liberal evangelicals as author Ron Sider, author of "Rich Christians in an Age of Hunger," have long written about the plight of the poor.

How do their views factor into the Perry rally? Or what heed would the governor give them? He's not been known for his crusade against pollution or his policies to directly lift the poor, beyond creating jobs for all.

And here's another problem with the event's theology: Mixing Jesus and America and the assumption that Christ will bless America with greatness if we, the people, call on him. I don't doubt that God loves each American and that he wants our nation to act justly and righteously. But this view assumes that we — collectively, as a nation — are on his side and that he should be on ours. Where in Scripture can you remotely get to either point?

Some on the Christian Right long have woven America into their theology. And this goes way beyond politicians asking God to bless America at the end of speeches.

In a 1972 essay, author Thomas Howard explained how Americanism and Christianity became intertwined as far back as the 1800s:

"America was not just vaguely considered Christian; believers actually looked upon the American way of life as a basically Christian one, and hence regarded any threat to that way as a menace to Christianity itself."

One good thing about this Perry rally is that it shows again how conservative evangelicals have engaged the world. They once separated themselves from the larger culture.

But the theology at play is open for debate. Perry and his followers aren't going to change their minds today.

They still are going to promote their creed. But the rest of us don't have to buy it.

Perry should follow moderate politics with day of prayer and fasting

Beaumont Enterprise

■ Guest editorial

If you thought Rick Perry couldn't add any more surprises to his unusual call for a day of prayer and fasting at Reliant Stadium in Houston, well, you've underestimated our governor.

The latest twist on this ever-evolving story is that now Perry isn't sure what role, if any, he will play the Aug. 6 rally. He's morphed from leader/organizer to a sort of interested bystander. He even quipped, "I may be ushering, for all I know."

Actually, that might be an improvement. Initial plans to have all 50 governors have fizzled and now only two others may show up. It's still not clear if this event is connected to Perry's vague plans to run for president.

It's also worth noting that the previous Texas governor wouldn't have done anything like this. Though George W. Bush ran into his share of criticism while president, his two terms as governor were generally marked by prudent behavior and moderate politics.

That model worked well in the 1990s, and it's worth trying again.

use religious leaders to promote his own political ambitions," Miller said.

Miller's group filed a complaint with the Internal Revenue Service after the 2005 events, claiming they violated federal laws limiting the involvement of certain nonprofit groups in electoral politics because the Restoration Project was a key element of Perry's re-election campaign. The IRS ruled that merely having a politician speak at a gathering of religious leaders did not constitute political activity.

A key link between the Response and the Restoration Project is Wayne Hamilton of Austin-based San Jacinto Public Affairs. Hamilton, former executive director of the Texas Republican Party, has been one of the lead coordinators for both events. Hamilton dismissed Miller's belief that the two events have been about promoting Perry as a candidate: "That is bizarre, since neither are political events."

Another Response coordinator is Allan Parker, former president of the San Antonio chapter of the Christian Coalition, an organization founded by 1988 Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson to make evangelicals a political force in America. Parker is now president of the San Antonio-based Justice Foundation, which is financed by businessman James Leininger.

Leininger, an advocate of private school vouchers, is one of Perry's past business partners and has donated more than $300,000 to his campaigns. Leininger was among four wealthy Perry donors who paid for the Texas Restoration Project meetings in 2005.

Also involved in Response coordination are former Perry speechwriter Eric Bearse and former senior adviser Bill Nobel.

Though the Response has a religious focus, the efforts of other Perry associates have been overtly political.

Americans for Rick Perry, an independent political action committee, was founded by Republican consultant Bob Schuman of La Jolla, Calif., to promote a draft-Perry movement in Iowa. It is known as a super PAC because it is not limited in how much money it can raise, as a candidate committee would be.

Schuman first hired Houston political consultant Elizabeth Blakemore to raise money for Americans for Rick Perry, then brought on former Dallas County Republican Chairman Nate Crain as national finance chairman. Crain, a member of Perry's "kitchen cabinet" of unofficial advisers when he was lieutenant governor, has given more than $130,000 to Perry's gubernatorial campaigns.

The PAC's first campaign finance report showed $193,000, raised mostly from Texans, including $100,000 from longtime Perry supporter Harold Simmons of Dallas.

Schuman also has hired as Iowa field coordinator Craig Schoenfeld, who resigned from the presidential campaign of Newt Gingrich in June along with Dave Carney, who has been the senior consultant to Perry's Texas campaigns since 1998.

Another super PAC waiting in the wings is Veterans for Perry, organized by Austin lobbyist Dan Shelley and Alexis DeLee. Shelley in the past was Perry's legislative liaison, and DeLee was the spokeswoman for former House Speaker Tom Craddick.

Carney said neither the Response nor Americans for Rick Perry is tied to the governor's explorations of running for president.

fasting."

But whether he wants it to be or not, it will become truly about his probable candidacy for president. Perhaps with that in mind, event organizers this week sent out a list of rules aimed at toning down the politics among attendees.

"The historic trumpet call sounded by government officials has resulted in a historic response from the church," a Monday email to registrants for the free event states. "Please come prepared to engage in sincere repentance as we worship the name of Jesus and pray from the Scriptures."

The event is billed as "a nondenominational, apolitical Christian prayer meeting," though it is backed by some definitively denominational groups that have gotten deeply involved in some deeply political battles.

The Monday email notes that the "Family of God will be coming together" at Reliant Stadium. Under the heading "To keep the day focused on prayer," organizers included a pitch they see as a nod to religious diversity (though they do seem to think non-Christians are outside the "Family of God").

"Recognizing that we will not all pray and worship the same way, thank you for respecting the diversity of the body by keeping the focus on Jesus and not the people around us," it says. "We thank you in advance for demonstrating true Christian character by responding in love and blessing to any possible media or protesters you may encounter."

The no-politics rule also is reflected in the "clothing guidelines": "Please refrain from wearing clothing with messages that accuse others or make political statements. Anyone with a shirt of this nature will be asked to turn their shirt inside out; if not, they will not be allowed to enter the stadium."

Citing "security reasons" based on stadium rules, attendees cannot bring "any items that could become disruptive or dangerous, so we ask that you not bring banners, flags, signs (religious or political) or noisemakers of any kind.

"While these expressions of worship have their place, our posture together will be one of humility and unity. Those who bring any items of this nature will be asked to return them to their vehicle."

Registrants were reminded that "much like airport standards, no food or water will be allowed in the stadium. Yes, there will be vendors open with food, beverages and water available for purchase." And, yes, this is supposed to be a fast.

"This is truly a historic opportunity," registrants were told. "The church is responding and Jesus will be exalted."

Whether he's inviting it or not, Perry — be he usher or keynote preacher — will be judged by some based on what goes on Saturday.

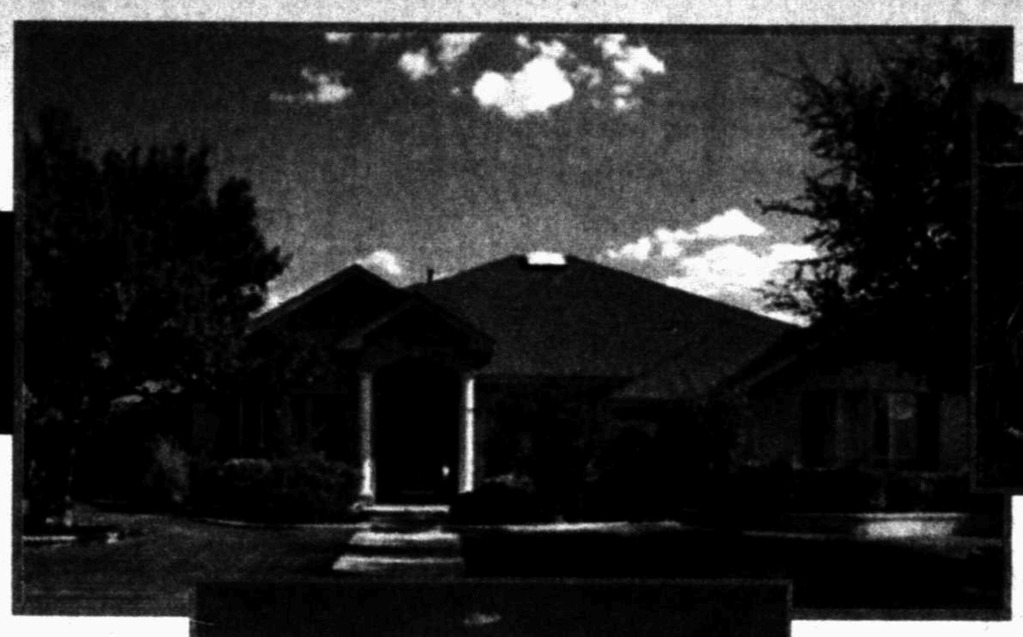
homes & classified

The PERFECT home is waiting in Grassland Estates.

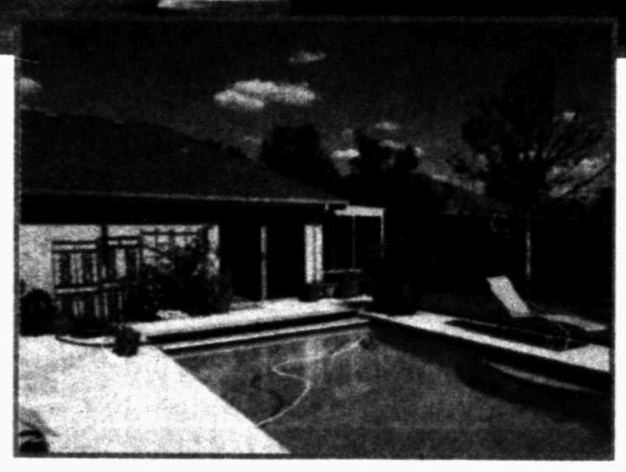


OPEN SUNDAY 12-2

5813 Highland

Welcomes you with beautiful, mature landscaping and an inviting entrance. This home is 4,199 square feet (MCAD) and features five bedrooms, 4 full baths, 2 half baths and 2 living areas. There is a four car garage with access to the back yard and pool. Children of the household will attend Scharbauer Elementary, Abell Jr. High, and Lee High School.

As you enter the home you are greeted by a wall of windows. The windows invite you to walk across the formal living for a view of the meticulously landscaped back yard and the sparkling pool. The formal dining area, to the left of the entry looks over the front yard and the wonderful trees. Down the hall next to the formal dining is the master suite. Large and inviting with bay windows and access to the pool through lovely french doors; the master suite is the perfect setting for relaxing in the evening. The master bath is open and full of natural light provided by the huge skylight. There are separate his and her vanities and closets. There is a jetted tub and separate shower.



Back down the hall and through the formal dining is the kitchen. This kitchen is breathtaking! Natural light rains down on the island from the charming window pane framed skylight. This kitchen is an entertainer's dream. Large bar separating it from the breakfast area, granite counter tops, cabinets and storage in every direction, double oven, built-in microwave and an under-counter ice maker. The perfect place for your family to gather and create meals together.

Through the Kitchen to the left is a HUGE den/family room. The textured walls really shine in this room it makes the room feel warm and cozy despite of the size. Down the hall you will find the laundry room and the additional bedrooms, each with its own full bath.

The back yard is an out door paradise! The pool features an automatic pool cover. There is plenty of room for you patio furniture either under cover or out in the sun. There is also a partially screened room with a half bath that would be perfect for a hot tub, used as a pool room or for the gardener as a potting shed. The choice is yours! Don't miss this fabulous home. Stop by our open house today from 12pm until 2pm or call 698-0411 for private viewing.
$525,000.

Simply charming in Polo Park Estates.

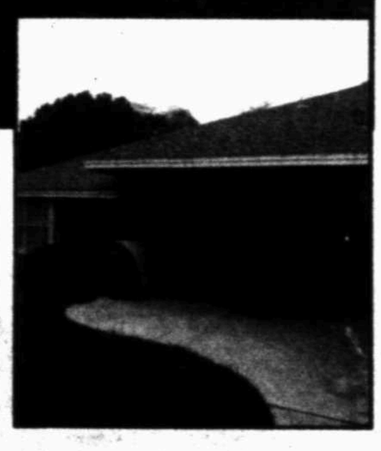
OPEN SUNDAY 12-2

4808 Knights Place

Has it all! Four bedrooms, three and a half bathrooms, hand scraped hardwood floors, mile high ceilings, plantation shutters and crown molding. The entrance is framed by two beautiful mature trees. Enter into a home full of warmth. There is a sitting area to the left of the entrance and a dining area straight ahead. You can get to the kitchen through either. The Kitchen is wonderful with granite counter tops and a granite topped island. This kitchen boasts a double oven and an abundance of cabinet space. There is a living area off of the kitchen with beautiful built-ins and a brick fireplace.

The master suite is accessed from the living/kitchen area. This room is large and the cathedral ceiling gives the room an open, spacious feel. The wood floors add a coziness to the bedroom that will appeal to the new residents. The master bath has a separate shower and tub and also a granite topped vanity with double sinks. There are also his and her closets.

Across the home, through the kitchen and living areas is the hall leading to the other bedrooms. These rooms are large with Jack and Jill bathrooms. Windows provide lovely natural light and add to the open feeling throughout the home. This home also features a divine back yard. Don't miss this opportunity to move in before school starts.
Call 698-0411 for private viewing.
$349,900.



The possibilities are endless at 5709 Pedernales.

OPEN SUNDAY 12-2

Make this house your home. You'll fall in love with the unique walk way, front entrance and open floor plan all on a corner lot. As you enter the home you are greeted by wide open spaces! The stained concrete flooring ads color and warmth as does the flip-switch fireplace that separates the living area from the dining area. The kitchen features lots of beautiful cabinetry and all appliances stay with the home. The three bedrooms can be found down the hall off of the living area. These rooms are large; one with a stained concrete floor and the other two feature neutral carpeting. The master suite features a huge closet with lots of built-ins, perfect for keeping all of your belongings organized. The master bath boasts a jetted tub with separate shower. There is also double vanity with lots of counter space. The back yard is enclosed by a wood privacy fence and there is plenty of room to play!

2011 Hyundai Sonata Hybrid sedan

First Look

By [illegible] Automotive Rhythms
Motor News Media Corporation

It's an auspicious time in the auto industry that is warranting the proliferation of advanced [illegible] technology, proactively measured performance [illegible] innovations, and of course, strategically [illegible] answers to the incessant opportunity to [illegible] free ourselves from petroleum [illegible]

[illegible] with the [illegible] its chiseled, coupe-like [illegible] to a sculpted rear end [illegible] Further differentiators include LED [illegible] running headlights, LED taillights, [illegible] side molding and cleverly styled rims. [illegible] a Hybrid Electric Vehicle (HEV) [illegible] [illegible] with [illegible] electric motor to reduce emissions achieve [illegible]

[illegible] hybrid system employed by [illegible] consists of 2.4L four-cylinder gasoline [illegible] electric motor, lithium-polymer battery [illegible] hybrid starter generator, six-speed automatic transmission, hybrid power control unit, and a brake regeneration system.

The Sonata hybrid is equipped with a 30 kW permanent magnet synchronous electric traction motor. This electric motor is hard-coupled to the input of the A6MF2H six-speed transmission and completely replaces the torque converter. A multi-disc clutch pack sits within the inner circumference of the traction motor and is used to de-couple the motor from the 2.4L Theta II inline-four cylinder gasoline engine for idle stop and electric [illegible] [illegible] age along with a torsional damper to fit within virtually the same volume as the traditional torque con-

er.

Separating the motor from the gear set has several functional advantages over more heavily integrated systems. In addition to providing the flexibility to accommodate different applications, it also is one of the main factors contributing to the Sonata's superior highway fuel efficiency.

The Sonata Hybrid will be offered in one trim and with one option -- the Premium Package -- which is a must. Without Premium you will not get the easy-to-use touch screen navigation system, rear back up camera. Infinity sound system, leather seat covers, 17" alloy rims or the panoramic sunroof. A supervision cluster, multi-function 4.2" display and the Hybrid Technology Display with the navigation screen keeps you up to date on what your hybrid is doing and the mileage it is achieving. You even score points for optimal green thumb achievements.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
I work in the Human Resources Department at my local school district. Fortunately for us, three new teacher's aid positions were created in our last budget cycle. However, being a small town, I pretty much know who is going to apply to my classified ad. Not that it's a bad thing, but I'd like the kids to be exposed to others who may bring new experiences. I think this is a great opportunity to get some younger faces on our staff, maybe even a couple of recent grads. I've never advertised regionally before. How should I choose among all the newspapers in my state?

Carry: It's nice to hear that your district is expanding to support your teaching staff. Many teachers don't get the recognition for the hard work they do.

Cash: Especially those teachers that had Carry in their class.

Carry: I know. Just thinking about it brings such fond memories of after school detentions!

Cash: Your hiring problem is one that small towns often experience. Unless there is a major attraction in the town, it can be difficult to solicit new faces. Many younger graduates and even seasoned staff tend to drift toward urban areas for either conveniences or increases in salary.

Carry: Fortunately, you're on the right track by advertising regionally. Since you are unsure of the best markets to place your ad, start by talking with your local newspaper. Although their distribution may only reach your town, they may suggest other newspapers that could locate the best applicants.

Cash: You can also try targeting your search as well. For instance, if you would like to bring in a recent graduate, locate all the colleges and universities in the area with teaching curriculums. Try advertising through the classified sections in those areas or directly through the college.

Carry: Since your ad is trying to attract applicants to a small town, consider mentioning some of the benefits of working in your community. Your teacher aides will have the chance to personally know the students, faculty and parents as well as experiencing a professional position with a "hometown feel". Unless your school is offering excellent salaries, it's important to note the additional benefits for the position.

Cash: My favorite benefit was always the summer recess!

Fast Facts

A+ Effort

Teachers may get a nice summer vacation policy, but they are typically under appreciated for the work they do. With each state mandating the number of days or hours our children must be in school, many of the kids spend more time with teachers than with their own parents. It's no wonder that teachers become mentors, friends and members of a children's support group. So next time, you meet a teacher, give them an A+ for their efforts.

Teacher's Pet

We all have our favorites and teachers are no different. According to a recent survey, mathematics is the most popular subject taught by teachers. It outranked other subjects like Social Studies or English. As for the benefits of the job, 24% surveyed enjoyed the sick leave benefits most, followed by the paid holidays. And unlike corporate positions, casual dress ranked as one of the least appreciated benefits. More than 40% of teachers surveyed prefer teaching at colleges and Universities.

A+ Student

I work as a teacher's aide for a local parochial school. It never fails that when the teacher sends home the report cards, a few disgruntled parents show up wanting to talk with the teacher.

Sure enough, last Tuesday a parent showed up and asked the teacher how her child could only receive a satisfactory grade when she thought he deserved an "A".

The mother continued on about how her child never brings home a book or any projects to work on. "He can already read two grade levels higher," she exclaimed.

After several minutes, the teacher finally had enough. She stopped the parent in mid-conversation and replied, "You do realize that this is only pre-school!"
