CJAD panel saves center

Members OK full funding for restitution facility

■ Full board to vote today on recommendation.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — With a great deal of hesitation, a criminal justice subcommittee decided late Friday to recommend full funding for the Midland Community Restitution Center through the current fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1994.

The full Texas Department of Criminal Justice board is meeting today and is expected to give routine approval to the recommendation by the Community Justice Assistance Division (CJAD) subcommittee.

CJAD had decided previously to provide funding only through February, the first six months of the fiscal year.

If the full board approves the recommendation today, the center would get about $490,000 for the second six months.

Approval would mean the Midland center could begin accepting criminal justice offenders immediately for job training and rehabilitation. The center has been prohibited from accepting residents since February when CJAD refused to certify the facility for occupancy. It previously had 48 residents living on site.

In granting the reprieve, subcommittee members went against the recommendation of CJAD Director Dimitria Pope, who wanted to halt funding and close the center. Ms. Pope said Friday she stood "very

President seeks better relations, prods trade talks

SEATTLE (AP) — President Clinton, hosting an unprecedented summit of Asian-Pacific leaders, called Friday for "a more constructive" path in badly strained relations with China. Joined by Asian leaders, Clinton prodded reluctant Europeans to break a logjam in world trade talks.

In a speech to organizers of the annual meeting of the 17-member Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, Clinton signaled a shift in Washington's post-Cold War economic priorities from a sluggish Europe to a booming Asia.

'We must look across the Pacific as well as the Atlantic. We must engage the world's fastest-growing economies.'
—President Clinton

"We must look across the Pacific as well as the Atlantic," the president said. "We must engage the world's fastest-growing economies."

The forum's Pacific Rim leaders represent about 50 percent of the world's economic output. Their conference marks the first time that so many Asian heads of state and government have come together in one place.

The centerpiece of Clinton's agenda was a meeting with Chinese President Jiang Zemin, the highest-level contact between the two countries since the bloody crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators in Tiananmen Square in 1989.

Jiang smiled broadly during a photo opportunity with the president; Clinton fixed his face with an emotionless look. Outside, protesters loudly chanted, "Free Tibet."

When a reporter asked Jiang if he would give Clinton any guarantees on human rights or stopping missile proliferation, the Chinese leader said, "When the leaders of two of the largest countries in the world get together, we should talk about bigger problems."

Clinton, who had accused the Bush administration of "coddling" China, said before the meeting that he wasn't

Senate passes broad anti-crime package

■ Bill to include more police, prisons, ban on 19 combat-style weapons; Senators go on to discuss Brady bill.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Heeding the country's alarm over street violence, the Senate overwhelmingly passed an anti-crime bill Friday to put 100,000 more police on city streets, build more prisons and ban the sale of combat-style firearms.

Senators then took up a more contentious crime-control issue: the Brady bill and its five-business-day waiting period for handgun customers, hoping to deliver that measure to President Clinton by Thanksgiving.

"Crime is the single most pressing issue on the minds of the American people," Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr. said after the 95-4 vote for the crime package. He called it "a dramatic step in stemming the tide of violence that's overwhelming this nation."

Backers of the Brady bill failed in their first attempt to cut off debate and get a vote on that measure. They fell three votes short of the 60 necessary.

In addition to requiring a delay before handgun purchasers can get their weapons, the Brady bill requires checks into the

Midlanders can make holiday merry for many through Dress-a-Live-Doll

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

More than 1,000 children in need are depending upon the generosity of Midlanders to help make their Christmas merry by participating in the Dress-a-Live-Doll program.

Sponsored by the Salvation Army, the Dress-a-Live-Doll (DALD) program is a Christmas project that provides new school clothes for children in need.

Teachers at the 28 participating schools provide the Salvation Army with the names of potential recipients.

"We have asked the school teachers ... to submit the names of children they feel might benefit from this program," said Mrs. Major Ken (Eleanor) Bush, the DALD coordinator.

"The ages range from infancy to 14.

Associated Press

American Airlines' pilots union said Friday it would not join the flight attendants in their walkout — at least for now — because the flight attendants had been so successful at crippling the airline on their own.

The Allied Pilots Association had asked its members to vote on whether to wage a sympathy strike. But union president Rich LaVoy said the board had decided not to have the votes counted.

A walkout by the union representing American's 10,000 pilots likely would have grounded the carrier.

LaVoy said the union had tracked the strike's effects by direct pilot reports. Of 2,578 flights scheduled Thursday, an estimated 220 were canceled and 1,500 flew without passengers.

Of more than 1,000 scheduled departures before noon Friday, he said, more than 600 flew without passengers and more than 100 were canceled.

Prime Time

The YMCA will host a "a personal Thanksgiving" activity for children in the organization's Prime Time afterschool program at Washington Elementary School. The program is to be conducted from 4:30-6 p.m. Tuesday. Children will perform and two local ministers will speak. It will focus on the ability to have faith and give thanks in the face of adversity, according to Karen Campbell, child-care coordinator for the Metropolitan YMCA. The YMCA will also conduct an all-day program, from 7 a.m.-6 p.m. Wednesday for Prime Time participants and their families at the gymnasium at Carver Center, the former Washington YMCA.

Children, staff try to cope after shelling of classroom

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Vanja and Mirza are willing to go back to school when they get out of the hospital. But this time, they want their classroom in a basement.

They were writing poems when a shell landed just outside their makeshift storefront classroom on Nov. 9. By cruel fluke, shrapnel flew through a gap in a row of huge concrete slabs intended to protect them.

Their teacher, Fatima Gunjic, was killed at her desk. Three students in the class of 9- and 10-year-olds also died, and 23 were injured.

Three more children were killed in other shelling nearby.

It was the first time in more than 19 months of Serb bombardment of the city that a shell had hit a working classroom.

In the first year of siege, primary schools were closed for safety reasons. If children had any classes, they were held in private apartments or other makeshift locations.

But last spring, parents, teachers and community leaders decided it was time to risk reopening schools.

"No one thought it was wrong," said Dr. Ognjen Gajic, who treats Vanja and Mirza at Kosevo hospital. "People were afraid, of course. But everyone wanted to live as normal a life as possible."

Schools throughout Sarajevo closed for three days after the shelling. They opened again Monday, except for the primary school classes held in the high-rise neighborhood of Alipasino Polje, where the shelling occurred.

In all, 70 children witnessed the shelling first-hand, half in the classroom and the rest waiting outside for their class to begin.

"These 70 children will be marked for life," said Danielle Maillefer of UNICEF, which is sending field workers to visit the children in hopes of limiting the long-term trauma.

"Most of them are very quiet. They don't like to talk at first," said Mirjana Mavrak, a local psychologist working with UNICEF.

Ms. Mavrak recommended against putting the children back into a regular school too soon. She suggested placing them in small workshops emphasizing drawing, music and writing to give them a chance to vent their feelings.

"School must go on," she said. "It's a place for normalizing the children's lives. It's important for them to be with their peers, to learn songs, to create."

When the shell hit, 9-year-old Vanja was writing a poem about a girl waiting in line for water, as people throughout the city must do. Vanja tried to flee, but her leg was broken.

"We were shouting, 'We're hurt!' but no one came at first because they were scared more shells would fall," said Mirza, 10, standing at Vanja's bedside. "It seemed like 10 minutes before anybody came."

Both said they would return to school if their classroom was safe, preferably in a basement.

Both must integrate the memory of their teacher and her awful death into their new lives.

"I would try to be like Mrs. Gunjic," said Vanja, who thinks about becoming a teacher when she grows up.

Gunjic was "my best teacher ever," added Mirza, who suffered hand and foot wounds.

The shattered classroom, which city officials want to perserve as a memorial, was a wartime annex to the First of May school, a 40-classroom building about 100 yards away.

School director Brano Corovic said primary school classes were scattered at 15 sites around the neighborhood to minimize the risk of large numbers of casualties if there were an attack.

"The place where the shell hit was one our most secure sites," he said. "These were our children. All of us, all the teachers, are very upset."

Among them is Munevera Hurem, who was to have taught the next class in the room which was shelled.

"She really loved kids, and all the kids loved her," Mrs. Hurem said of her dead colleague. "Her two sons are grown and live in Norway now, and she wanted to adopt an orphan."

Mrs. Hurem said it would be up to parents to decide when and how the traumatized children return to school.

"But after this shock, the kids need us more," she explained. "I'll continue to work with my class and Fatima's, if the parents agree. All this hard work would be wasted if we stopped."

Former Soviet republics shift away from ruble

MOSCOW (AP) — Two former Soviet republics, Moldova and Armenia, will replace the Russian ruble with their own currencies within two weeks, news agencies reported Friday.

The moves will leave Tajikistan the only one of the 15 former Soviet republics still using pre-1993 Russian rubles as the only legal tender. Such rubles are no longer valid in Russia.

Armenia will introduce a new currency, the dram, on Monday and Moldova will issue its currency, the leu, a week later, the Interfax news agency said.

The dram's exchange rate has not been officially set.

Moldova has been using temporary currency coupons along with the pre-1993 rubles. The exchange rate will be 1 leu for 1,000 coupons or old rubles.

Russian officials ponder fate of smallpox cultures

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russian government has not yet decided whether to honor a 1990 Soviet-U.S. agreement to destroy the last known smallpox cultures in the world, a top scientist said Friday.

The former Soviet Union and the United States had agreed to destroy the cultures on Dec. 31 in what would be the first deliberate extinction of a biological species.

However, Russia might keep its smallpox cultures for another two or three years of research, said Valentin Pokrovsky, president of the Russian Academy of Medical Sciences.

"I do not think the destruction of the last cultures will take place on Dec. 31," Pokrovsky told The Associated Press. "The question is still open."

Smallpox had been one of the great scourges throughout history. During the 16th through 18th centuries, the disease — characterized by fever, vomiting and skim eruptions — routinely killed up to 600,000 people a year in Europe.

Between 1891 and 1912 in Russia, 100,000 cases of smallpox were reported annually. But after the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution, vaccination was made mandatory and smallpox was virtually wiped out in the Soviet Union by 1937.

By 1980, a worldwide inoculation effort eradicated the virus, but both the United States and the Soviet Union kept small batches in isolation laboratories.

Pokrovsky said many scientists felt the smallpox cultures should be preserved for research.

"First of all, current techniques do not allow us to learn all there is to know about the virus," he said. "Secondly, it is not excluded that somewhere in countries not supposed to have smallpox cultures, there are secret laboratories which have smallpox cultures available."

Pokrovsky said at least a two-year delay was likely, but the final decision still had to be made by the government.

In Washington, the journal Science published a debate among researchers from the United States, Russia and Britain arguing for or against destroying the cultures.

Those against said saving the cultures for at least 10 more years of research would not endanger humanity and might help solve puzzles about the AIDS virus.

But others argued that terrorists could use the smallpox specimens as a biological weapon. They said little would be lost to science if the cultures are destroyed because the complete genetic pattern of smallpox is known.

Japan keeps trade closed on rice markets

TOKYO (AP) — With world trade talks nearing a climax, Japan announced its final offer Friday on opening its markets by cutting import tariffs on 6,600 items but said it would not open up its rice market.

The financial newspaper Nihon Keizai Shimbun said, however, that the government had agreed with the United States on allowing limited imports of cheaper foreign rice. The government denied the report.

Rice is the biggest stumbling block for Japan in world trade talks in Geneva, which face a Dec. 15 deadline to work out a final agreement on reducing barriers to international commerce.

Other nations want Japan to drop its virtual ban on rice imports and substitute tariffs on foreign rice that would gradually be phased out. Japan says that would ruin domestic rice farmers, who are strong politically, and prevent the nation from being self-sufficient in its staple crop.

The ban has resulted in Japanese consumers paying about five times the world price for rice.

The rice issue has been overshadowed in Geneva by disputes between Washington and the European Community. But if those two can reach agreement, the pressure on Japan would intensify.

Fear of such pressure apparently led Japan to begin negotiations in Geneva with the United States on a compromise. U.S. diplomats confirmed that talks were taking place, although Japanese officials denied it.

The report in Nihon Keizai said Japan and the United States agreed that Japan would import 400,000 tons of rice yearly beginning in 1995, increasing to 800,000 tons in 2000. After that, Japan would consider allowing tariffs, the paper said.

"There is no agreement whatsoever," Foreign Ministry spokesman Terusuke Terada said. Japan's position of keeping the ban "remains unchanged," he said.

Japan's list of tariff cuts on 6,600 items would commit Tokyo to eliminating tariffs in several key areas — such as glass, ceramics and scientific equipment — if other nations did the same.

A trade ministry official, who disclosed the list on condition of anonymity, said that under the proposal Japan's average tariff would drop more than half to 1.5 percent if a world trade agreement is adopted.

WEATHER WATCH

Today to be sunny, upper 50s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the upper 50s and variable winds 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low near 30.

Sunday is expected to be mostly sunny with a high in the upper 60s.

After an overnight low 47, Friday's high was 59 compared with the record high for that date of 83 in 1950. The record low for today's date was 22 set in 1988.

STATE

A fast-moving cold front pummeled Texas with strong winds Friday as it pulled temperatures into the 40s in the Panhandle and brought cloudy skies to much of the state.

The front was approaching the Gulf coast and deep South Texas late Friday afternoon, with sustained northerly and northeasterly winds from 15 to 25 mph and gusts from 25 to 30 mph, according to the National Weather Service.

Winds in the Big Bend and far West Texas, where the front had not yet reached, were easterly at 5 to 10 mph.

Other high temperatures ranged from the 50s in the Hill Country and North Texas to the 80s in the deep south, just ahead of the front.

Readings were on the average 10 degrees cooler than at the same time on Thursday.

Skies were clear along a line from north of Longview through the Dallas-Fort Worth area to near San Angelo and partly cloudy to cloudy south of the line. The cloud banks were moving east-southeast at 25 mph.

A warming trend was expected Saturday and Sunday for West Texas, with clearing skies statewide.

Daytime highs should reach the 50s to 70s in the west, with nighttime lows from the teens in the northwestern Panhandle to the lower 50s along the Rio Grande.

Many times when teachers submit names we find pre-schoolers who need clothes (too)."

Mrs. Bush said letters are sent to the parents of the children referred to the Salvation Army and each family is interviewed to confirm that help is needed by the families.

Mrs. Bush said the program started in 1974 under the direction of Capt. Bob Vincent. There were 50 children involved.

During the 19 years the program has been operating it has consistently grown to the current list of 1,009 children, Mrs. Bush said.

She said the list could increase between now and the deadline of Dec. 8.

As of Friday, 162 children had been "adopted."

Mrs. Bush said the Salvation Army wants to provide these deserving children with new clothes in order to raise their self-esteem. Many of these youths have never had new clothes before, she said.

"Often these children never know the fun of wearing something new," said Peggy Kerr, a Salvation Army volunteer.

"What must it be like to always wear old hand-me-down clothes that are often misfits, too small or too large? Many needy children in Midland could tell you," Ms. Kerr said.

Mrs. Bush said the average cost for outfitting a child is $125, which varies depending upon the type of purchases and age of the child.

The gift should include an entire outfit for the child including a coat or sweater, a dress or pants and shirt, undergarments, socks and shoes.

The Salvation Army provides the child's sizes along with an identification number. The first name of the child may be provided, but the last name is withheld to protect the child's identity, Ms. Kerr said.

The gift is tax-deductible, Ms. Kerr indicated and individuals may sponsor a child or groups can join together to sponsor a child or an entire family of children.

"When we adopt one child in a family, we also adopt any other children in the family up to 15 years old, believing that if one is needy, so are the others," Mrs. Bush said in a letter to potential contributors.

"The cold snap is a reminder that new, warm clothing can make a Christmas merry for many of the children in Midland, some of whom have never worn new clothes," Ms. Kerr said.

The deadline for registering to sponsor a child is Dec. 8. Interested persons should call Mrs. Bush at the Salvation Army at 697-7262.

Early callers can request the specific age and gender of the child he or she wants to help, Mrs. Bush said.

She said a sheet will be mailed to the volunteer with the child's sizes and merchants who are offering discounts for the program.

Gifts can be wrapped individually or all together and then placed in one large plastic bag with the identification number on it. The gifts need to be taken to the Salvation Army Day Care Center, 3500 Park Lane, by Dec. 15.

"We're counting on you to give yourself a present this Christmas by dressing a 'live doll,'" Mrs. Bush said.

"Christmas is a time of awareness of giving and sharing with others. We invite you to be a part of the Dress-a-Live-Doll program and share in the true meaning of Christmas," Ms. Kerr said.

"Make this a Christmas one that you will always remember ... Share the satisfying experience of providing school clothes for a needy child."

"The joy of giving highlights the Christmas season," she said.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

The holidays are not always happy times for families in need. But the Salvation Army is working to alleviate those feelings by providing needy families with food and gifts for Christmas.

While the Salvation Army works to provide clothing for children through the Dress-a-Live-Doll program — which it has done for 19 years — it is also working on its traditional toy and food drive.

Families who receive assistance from the government and social service agencies can also qualify for the holiday assistance, said a Salvation Army volunteer.

To become eligible for the assistance, families need to register with the Salvation Army and interview with a representative to get on the list. The deadline for registering is Friday. To sign up and to be interviewed, interested persons should go to the Salvation Army office at 300 S. Baird St. during regular office hours.

Some of that assistance consists of providing deserving families with the opportunity to choose one toy for each child in the family. These toys are donated by various individuals, businesses and organizations.

One way the Salvation Army gets these toys is through its annual doll show. This year's doll show is scheduled for Friday through Dec. 6 at Midland Park Mall.

There are 500 dolls that will be dressed by volunteers. After the dolls are displayed, they will be some of the toys available through the Salvation Army for parents to select for their children.

For more information on these or other Salvation Army projects, call the office at 683-5072.

APPROVE: Subcommittee to recommend funding strongly" by her recommendation to discontinue funding.

The subcommittee decided at a meeting Nov. 4 to delay a decision on funding until Friday's meeting.

In the meantime, Phillip Bonner, a CJAD staff member, and Diana Clark, a member of the Judicial Advisory Council, inspected the center to see if it had solved all the physical plant problems cited in a November 1992 state audit.

Ms. Clark told the subcommittee the center was in "excellent, excellent" physical shape. She recommended continuing funding so the center could accept residents and see if it could correct the numerous management, program and procedure problems reported in the audit.

CJAD subcommittee chairman Gilberto Hinojosa said he was reluctant to go against Ms. Pope's recommendation, but that programs offered by restitution centers around the state are "so important and so effective" that "we need to work these things out."

He said obviously the center was "on probation" and that "everybody has been pushed to the limit on this thing."

Judge Dean Rucker, administrative judge for the Midland Judicial District, told the subcommittee the Midland center was safe, the staff was well qualified, trained and equipped, and the center could overcome its problems.

"The moratorium has given Midland time to correct its problems and strengthened its resolve to succeed," Rucker said.

Judge George "Jody" Gilles, of the 142nd Texas District Court, and Wesley Conner, the restitution center's new director, joined Rucker at the subcommittee meeting.

Conner said the action plan for correcting all the center's shortcomings was in place. He said he was confident the center would be in full state compliance before the end of the current fiscal year.

Hinojosa said one of his main concerns, aside from the management problems, was the low level of occupancy at the center, which has averaged about 75 percent of capacity rather than the 90 percent standard desired by the state.

Subcommittee member Josh Allen, who was highly critical of the center's operations at the Nov. 4 meeting, made the motion Friday to renew funding for the center.

Subcommittee member Ellen Halbert said she would give a "really hesitant second" to the motion and that she had been ready to vote to cut funding at the last criminal justice board meeting.

Allen said he was still very concerned, "but I also have to balance that with the fact that the state has invested a lot of money in that facility."

But he said the center now must be held accountable for turning the situation around.

"I can assure you that if in the very near future we have any inkling that the new program is going down the tubes, we will cut funding off at any time that we feel necessary," Allen said. "I cannot commit state dollars to an institution that is not functioning properly," he said.

Rucker said the restitution center means a lot to Midland in both its affect on crime and its economic impact.

"We fought for this program because we strongly believe Midland needs an alternative sentencing option ... to try to curb the cycle of crime that some offenders find themselves in by giving them structure, by getting them accustomed to employment and to giving something back to the community in the way of community service and paying restitution to the victims," he said.

CRIME: Senate passes broad package

customers' backgrounds.

The proposal bears the name of James Brady, President Reagan's first press secretary. He was severely wounded in a 1981 attack on Reagan. Brady and his wife, Sarah, have long fought for gun control legislation.

Foes won one skirmish. By a 56-43 vote, the Senate retained a provision that would phase out the waiting period after five years. The National Rifle Association, long the leading lobbying force against gun controls, supported that limitation.

The Brady bill's chief champion, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, argued unsuccessfully that the waiting period should be kept in law until a national instant felon identification system becomes operational. At that point, background checks would be done on buyers of both handguns and long guns.

On another handgun issue, the Senate, like the House, approved an NRA-supported provision that would erase more stringent state or local waiting periods. The vote was 54-45.

Triumphant after winning a one-sided victory for the broader crime-control bill, Biden said it showed that Americans are demanding that the national government deal with crime, normally a local matter.

Some new polls say crime has surpassed joblessness and health care as the top national concern.

"People are prisoners in their neighborhoods, they're prisoners in their houses," Biden, D-Del., told reporters. "We're finally all beginning to listen to the American people."

The bill would authorize $8.9 billion for the 100,000 new police officers, would ban 19 specific assault-style weapons while not taking any away from their owners, and would prohibit ownership of guns by juveniles.

It also would expand the potential use of the death penalty, increase prison time for dozens of offenses and authorize funds for new prisons, alternative sanctions, drug courts and efforts to combat violence against women.

The bill cannot become law, though, before January. A compromise must be shaped between the expensive Senate measure and a series of specific anti-crime bills adopted by the House.

The House has already passed the Brady bill, and its basic provisions match those of the version under consideration in the Senate.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, a member of the NRA board, argued that waiting periods won't curtail crime.

"Criminals do not walk boldly through the light of day into a gun shop and say 'I want to buy a firearm,'" Craig told the Senate. "Criminals just simply don't play by the rules."

But Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said, "If it will save one life, it's worth all the time we spend on it."

And longtime gun control opponent Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., said he would no longer "walk the plank" for the NRA's position on the Brady bill.

Brady bill supporters agree that it would not by itself stop crime. But the debate on Capitol Hill has gone beyond the normal realm of legislative passions.

"Brady is a religious issue," Biden said.

"A pagan religious issue," replied Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

The votes against the crime-control bill were cast by Sens. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., Russell Feingold, D-Wis., Mark Hatfield, R-Ore. and Paul Simon, D-Ill. Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., did not vote.

Groups team up to help needy for Thanksgiving

By Gary Shanks
Staff writer

During the Thanksgiving holiday, Midland businesses and organizations are combining their efforts to provide food for area individuals and families in need.

Various organizations are teaming up for the projects, compiling food baskets for delivery to families in need, collecting canned goods and providing food and volunteer labor for the Thanksgiving Celebration Dinner at the Midland Center on Thanksgiving Day, said Mrs. Sgt. David Finch of the Midland Salvation Army.

This is the fourth year for the celebration dinner, according to officials with Golden Corral, which sponsored the first Thanksgiving Celebration Dinner. About 3,000 people are expected to be fed on Thanksgiving Day.

Furr's Supermarket, Casa de Amigos and the Midland Salvation Army are providing food baskets, to be delivered to the homes of families in need. Furr's is providing 150 food baskets; Casa de Amigos and the Salvation Army are providing 75 each.

The food-basket program is called Food for Friends and is designed to help the most needy families in Midland and Odessa who would not otherwise be able to have Thanksgiving dinner, Mrs. Finch said.

"This is the first year for the program and Furr's hopes to make this an annual event," said Frans Wester, Furr's vice president of marketing.

The United Way, Casa de Amigos and the Salvation Army have identified 300 eligible families who are to receive the baskets. Midland Boy Scouts and the Crescent Park Baptist Youth Group will be delivering the baskets.

This program is supported by Furr's, KGEE radio in Odessa, KWES TV, the Reporter-Telegram and the Odessa American.

The baskets are to be delivered today from Furr's stores in Midland and Odessa.

The St. Vincent DePaul Society, in association with St. Stephen's and St. Ann's Catholic churches, are providing about 140 food baskets from their client list, said society President Mike Bove.

Society members, who routinely travel to the homes of area families in need, will deliver the baskets, each of which contains a turkey, Bove said.

"Regardless of (religion or race), we try to do as much as we can," he said.

The Midland Soup Kitchen Ministry is serving its free Thanksgiving feast from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. Wednesday at 1009 S. Terrell Ave.

Those wishing to attend the Midland College basketball game Wednesday against Lamar College of Lamar, Colo., at Chaparral Center can help feed those in need and get into the game free. Those bringing two cans of food to the game can get in free. All food will be given to the Permian Basin Food Bank.

Tickets to the Thanksgiving Dinner are being distributed by the Salvation Army as well as other church groups and civic organizations. Many area churches, businesses and civic organizations have joined to provide the food, money and manpower to bring about the all-city Thanksgiving Dinner, Mrs. Finch said.

Entertainment for the event will be provided by Young Clowns for Christ.

Dinner will be served at Midland Center several times on Nov. 25, Mrs. Finch said. Food will be served from 10:30 a.m. to 11:30, 11:30 to 12:30 p.m., 12:30 to 1:30 and 1:30 to 2:30.

APEC: Clinton pushes trade talks

softening the U.S. position toward Beijing.

"Our policy is to try to engage China but to be very firm with the human rights issues, to be very firm on the weapons proliferation issues," he said. "But there are 1.2 billion people in China and we don't believe we can achieve our objectives within the context of complete isolation."

The president's goal was to arrest the downward spiral in relations, strained by disputes over human rights, arms sales and trade.

Clinton said he would discuss problems with Jiang "in an effort to put our relationship with China on a more constructive path, but still one that deals with all of these issues that are important to the United States."

In a goodwill gesture, Clinton approved the sale to China of a Cray supercomputer to help forecast natural disasters and also tentatively approved the sale of turbines for nuclear generators.

The United States is looking for China's help in persuading North Korea to allow international inspections of its nuclear sites. Secretary of State Warren Christopher, at a news conference, underlined U.S. threats to seek U.N. sanctions if North Korea refuses.

Clinton also met with Japanese Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa, whose country has a $50 billion trade surplus with the United States.

Clinton was more pointed about trade barriers in his speech earlier.

POLICE REPORTS

Robbery

A 56-year-old Midland man was hit in the head and robbed after giving another man a ride Thursday evening, police reported.

Johnny Lee Loud told police he picked up a man who wanted a ride to South Midland at Fairgounds Road and Highway 80 about 11:45 p.m. After driving the man to South Midland, the man asked to be taken to Chapparral Apartments for $10, police reported.

On the way, the man pulled a small-caliber pistol and robbed Loud of $80 including the $10, police said. The robber hit Loud in the head before fleeing from the car, police said. Loud suffered minor injuries.

The robber was described as black, about 28 years old, 5-feet, 11-inches tall and weighing about 175 pounds. He was wearing a white T-shirt and blue jeans.

Fraud

Midland police are warning residents to beware of youngsters selling magazine subscriptions and making false claims that money raised will benefit Midland College.

Although the vendors, between 18 and 27 years old, have a permit to sell, claims that the sales are in conjunction with Midland College with part of the proceeds going to the Rodeo Club are untrue, said Midland police Lt. Tommy Wilkins.

The police department has received several complaints about the vendors.

Drug arrest

ODESSA — A 19-year-old man was arrested and about 200 pounds of marijuana was confiscated Friday at a residence when a seach warrant was executed by the Permian Basin Drug Task Force and the Odessa Police Department.

Manuel Ramos was arrested at his 1703 Linda St. home, officials said. He remained jailed Friday pending bond to be set Monday morning, an Ector County jail official said.

Thursday

Theft: A bicycle was reported stolen from 905 Alamo St. by Susan Phipps at 6:41 p.m.

Friday:

Burglary of a residence: Some men's clothing and tapes were taken from 4201 N. Garfield St. No. 133 reported Angelique McGee about 4:39 a.m. The point of entry may have been through a window.

Vandalism: A report of sugar being poured into a gas tank at 307 E. Cuthbert Ave. was made by Mary Griffth.

Burglary of a building: Storage unit No. 176 at Kentucky Storage, 2900 W. Kentucky Ave., was broken into.

At the YMCA, we have a unique way of keeping score with all our Sports Programs. Everybody plays, everybody wins. In fact, last year 1,000 kids played YMCA Basketball, and won. Now that may not satisfy the competitive spirit of some parents, but we feel it helps build a much stronger spirit in our children. We also believe that when children learn fair play and teamwork at a young age, it will help them grow up to better adults.

For more infomration on all we have to offer, call 682-2551. You'll see why thousands of people think the YMCA is a great place to belong.

ROME (AP) — The Mafia's reputed "boss of bosses" sat across from its most famous turncoat and said he would not deign to answer accusations from a man so immoral in love.

Then Salvatore "Toto" Riina, known as "The Beast," listened as the faithless husband and object of his scorn testified Friday about Riina's murderous reign over the Sicilian Mafia.

The witness was Tommaso Buscetta, who was the first insider to reveal the structure of the Sicilian Mafia and has helped U.S. and Italian prosecutors jail hundreds of mobsters.

He and Riina faced each other in a fortified, cell-lined courtroom at Rebibbia prison on Rome's outskirts.

Already sentenced to life for the murder of mob rivals, Riina is on trial for the slayings of Sicilian politicians in the early 1980s. He was arrested in January after 23 years as a fugitive and was charged last week with ordering the May 1992 murder of Giovanni Falcone, Italy's leading Mafia prosecutor and a national hero.

Riina denies having anything to do with Mafia crimes, saying he is a simple farmhand.

Italian law in certain cases allows defendants to respond directly to their accusers, and Riina had sought the dramatic confrontation with Buscetta.

He changed his mind at the last minute.

"I don't want to respond," he said in a high-pitched voice, extending his arms palms-up. Why, asked the judge. Because of Buscetta's immoral behavior — he had "so many wives," Riina answered.

"My grandfather remained a widower since he was 40 and did not seek other women. In our town we live with moral propriety," Riina said.

Buscetta, who abandoned his first wife and had two other long-term relationships, has spoken openly of his womanizing. He says it kept him out of the highest levels of the mob, which traditionally spurns men who leave their wives.

"How dare he speak to me about morality on a matter of women, when he brought about the end of my loved ones, when he has killed so many innocent people," Buscetta retorted, his voice rising and the words tumbling out.

Buscetta turned state's evidence in 1984 after two of his sons and five other relatives were slain by members of the mob family from Corleone, Riina's hometown in central Sicily. Authorities said Riina propelled the family to dominance in the Sicilian underworld.

During the 1½-hour session Friday, four plainclothes officers stood in front of Buscetta, who was seated next to the two judges, prosecutor and six jurors. Riina sat in a straight-backed chair facing him, flanked by two police officers, and refusing to respond.

Buscetta testified that Riina began his killing career in the 1950s by helping murder the Mafia boss in Corleone. The name became famous when author Mario Puzo gave it to his fictional mob boss in "The Godfather." He said Riina headed the Mafia's ruling commission.

"The real boss has always been him, Salvatore Riina," Buscetta said.

Buscetta said he met Riina toward the end of the 1950s and last saw him in 1980 during a Mafia meeting on a Sicilian farm.

Buscetta, who was arrested in Brazil and extradited to Italy, has been living in the United States under a secret identity since 1984. He had been sought by U.S. authorities on a drug charge in the early '70s. In exchange for his cooperation on testimony, that charge was dropped.

His testimony helped convict more than 300 mobsters in the 1986-87 "maxi-trial" in Palermo, Sicily, and 18 defendants in the 1986 "Pizza Connection" heroin case in New York.

In recent statements he has linked leading politicians with Mafia activities.

Prosecutors allege Riina presided over a billion-dollar crime empire and have implicated him in at least 50 killings. They say he introduced the policy of "excellent murders" — the elimination of judges, prosecutors police and politicians.

Rival factions set conditions for negotiations

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — An alliance of Somali factions opposed to Mohamed Farrah Aidid offered Friday to negotiate with the clan leader, but said he first must disarm his militia.

The 12 factions also demanded that Aidid's forces return stolen property and that he recognize U.N.-supported district and regional governing councils before entering talks on a political settlement.

Hoping to encourage such a deal with a carrot rather than a stick, the United States will tie a $100 million aid donation to Somalia to progress in the negotiations.

The donation will be formally announced Nov. 29, U.S. Ambassador Madeleine Albright told the U.N. General Assembly in New York.

"These funds will be available if and only if Somalis make real progress in creating a secure environment and reconciling politically," Albright said Friday.

Aidid has boycotted United Nations efforts to set up the councils as a first step toward national reconciliation and restoration of a national government. He has established his own councils in areas under his control, mainly southern Mogadishu and parts of central Somalia.

The alliance also urged that U.N. forces be more active in patrolling the country and in disarming militias. U.N. peacekeepers have reined in their operations since a fierce battle with Aidid's forces in early October led President Clinton to order U.S. troops withdrawn by March 31.

The alliance's factions claim to represent 98 percent of Somalis. Somalia's factions are divided largely according to sub-clans and families.

The 12 factions said they welcomed Thursday's vote by the U.N. Security Council to extend the mandate for the peacekeeping operation until May, but they added that they fear civil war will resume after the foreign troops leave.

The Security Council warned that the U.N. force could be withdrawn early unless Somalia's rival factions work together peacefully to rebuild the country.

The council's action came two days after it lifted an arrest warrant it issued in June for Aidid when his militiamen were accused of killing 24 Pakistani peacekeepers.

Aidid emerged from five months in hiding to make a triumphant public appearance in his southern Mogadishu stronghold Thursday, and U.N. officials have conceded a political solution will require his participation. U.S. special envoy Robert Oakley reinforced that position by meeting with Aidid on Thursday.

"The United Nations has put out a resolution bringing Aidid into politics," said Mohammed Ali Mahdi, chairman of the alliance of 12 factions, whose fighters battled with Aidid's forces last month in Mogadishu. "We are very, very sorry about that."

Ali Mahdi, a bitter rival of Aidid's, said Aidid had announced "three million times" that the civil war was over, but did not keep his word.

"I believe if the international front leaves without reaching its goal of disarmament, it's clear that civil war will start," Ali Mahdi said.

The United States plans to pull out its troops, more than half the 26,000-member U.N. force, and France, Belgium and Sweden also plan to withdraw their troops. Germany said Friday that it would reduce its contingent.

UNION: Pilots refuse to strike

(From 1A)

"The board determined that the need for a sympathy strike has been superseded by the overwhelming success of the flight attendants' strike," LaVoy said.

"The APA board will continue to monitor the situation and the responses by management and retains the right to reconsider the sympathy strike," he said.

However, it was unlikely the pilots would have time to conduct another mail-in ballot before the strike's scheduled end on Nov. 28.

Denise Hedges, president of the flight attendants' union, said her group does not consider the pilots' action a setback. Indeed, she said the flight attendants asked the pilots not to join in.

"I indicated that we appreciated all they did, but it was our strike," Ms. Hedges said.

LaVoy said the pilots calculate that American lost between $20 million and $25 million Thursday.

Shortly before the announcement, American said it had filed a federal lawsuit seeking an injunction preventing the pilots' union from joining the walkout.

The number of flight attendants joining the strike, which the 21,000-member Association of Professional Flight Attendants put around 95 percent, caught the airline and others by surprise.

Because of the American strike, thousands of passengers trying to get home from business trips or start Thanksgiving vacations competed for the dwindling number of seats on other airlines.

Travel agents and other airlines reported American appeared to be focusing its efforts on flying passengers between Dallas-Fort Worth, Miami, New York, Chicago and London. The cities represent American's largest hubs and destinations used by high-fare paying business travelers.

Rival airlines were accepting American tickets, but said they had few extra seats because of the normally heavy Friday travel schedule. Delta Air Lines said Friday almost all its available seats for the Wednesday before Thanksgiving and the following Sunday have been filled.

The airline still refused to tally the number of planes flying empty except for cargo Friday, and locked down access to gates by anyone but ticketed passengers at its main hub at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. Some other airports did the same.

However, American contended more flight attendants were crossing the picket lines Friday.

"We will concede that they surprised us yesterday. But things are definitely getting better today, and I think it's going to be a lot less disruptive today for our passengers because we can provide them better information," American spokesman Marty Heires said.

Transportation Secretary Federico Pena told American chairman Robert Crandall Friday to give travellers "much better information" about flights.

He also authorized additional flights by other carriers from New York's LaGuardia, Washington's National airports and Chicago's O'Hare, and said the department was working with other carriers on plans to minimize Thanksgiving disruption if the strike continues.

"If necessary, we'll ask other transportation providers to pitch in," Pena said.

More than half the flights from Dallas-Fort Worth flew with passengers aboard Thursday afternoon, Heires said, but he said that likely was one of the strongest hubs in American's system. He had no figures for Friday.

An executive with a competing airline said American appeared to be aiming at flying 75 percent of its schedule from Dallas-Fort Worth, but on Friday morning only got about 50 to 60 percent of its flights out of that airport. Many of the jets had no passengers.

Other airline executives estimated the carrier was trying to meet about 40 percent of its total schedule.

American has been trying to keep its jets in position for later connections by flying them without passengers when it can't assemble the federally mandated minimum number of flight attendants.

The airline carried on as best it could Friday, with other American workers certified as flight attendants in shortened 10-day courses helping staff flights. The Federal Aviation Administration said close to 500 workers graduated from the course a week ago, and nearly 1,000 more are taking the course now.

American, which has trained replacement attendants only on short and medium haul narrow-body jets, was unable to fly any passengers out of Europe on trans-Atlantic routes Thursday, where wide-body jumbo jets are used. But the airline said it was moving some passengers Friday.

The airline encouraged passengers to call reservation agents about two hours before they normally would leave for the airport to learn whether they had a flight to make, and if it was scrubbed, to get a place on another flight.

The strike was marring American's reputation for reliability among passengers. Travelers complained of being told their flight would leave as scheduled only to find it canceled at the last minute.

"My flight was supposed to be on," Rich Dimone, a 54-year-old life insurance and security broker in Phoenix said of his flight to Orlando. When he arrived at the airport Friday he found his flight canceled.

Debra Williams of Chicago, who was flying into Atlanta from Chicago Friday on an American flight, said she never could get through to the American ticket counter to see if her flight was canceled. So she called United, which accepted her ticket to Atlanta.

American's agreements with most airlines allow passengers to reserve a seat on a competitor with their American ticket.

Many of American's competitors on Friday advertised their willingness to take the tickets and suggested passengers reserve a seat now, adding that they can take American tickets through Nov. 30.

Northwest picked up an estimated $2 million in revenue from displaced American passengers Thursday, a Northwest executive, speaking on condition of anonymity, estimated.

Some airlines on Friday were replacing flights with larger jets or adding flights to routes in and out of American's hubs. However, some carriers such as United and Delta said they had already pressed nearly all their airplanes into service to meet the Thanksgiving travel demand.

Also Friday, numerous job seekers turned out at American's Fort Worth headquarters after the carrier started recruiting applicants to replace striking flight attendants.

Police arrest woman, 22

Staff report

ODESSA — A 22-year-old woman was arrested and approximately three ounces of cocaine seized Thursday evening, police reported.

Rosavla Pando was charged with aggravated possession of cocaine after a search warrant was executed at 1411 S. Grant Ave. No. 2, officials said.

Ms. Pando was free after posting a $15,000 bond, Ector County jail officials said Friday.

U.S. government to offer Somalia $100 million in aid

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — After deciding to pull all U.S. troops out of Somalia by the end of March, the Clinton administration announced Friday it will offer the country $100 million in aid at a big international conference on economic reconstruction opening in Addis Ababa later this month if its warring factions agree to make peace.

The Clinton administration has asked other aid-giving countries to make similar concrete offers to the Somalis at this meeting. The idea, officials at the United Nations say, is to encourage Somalia's warring factions to lay down their arms and accept national reconciliation by showing them they can expect a sizable amount of foreign aid if they cooperate.

The new U.S. aid package was announced by Madeleine K. Albright, the U.S. representative at the United Nations, during a General Assembly debate on humanitarian assistance. Mrs. Albright made clear that the U.S. money will only be available to those areas of the country that agree to peace.

"These funds will be used for humanitarian assistance and rehabilitation projects in those regions where progress on political reconciliation and security has been made," she said. "These funds will be made available if and only if Somalis make real progress in creating a secure environment and reconciling politically. We urge other donors to participate actively in this effort."

The aid package contains $33 million for setting up a new police force and $20 million for food. The rest of the money is earmarked for medium- and long-term rehabilitation projects in areas cooperating with the national reconciliation drive.

Mrs. Albright said that the Addis Ababa conference, which opens Nov. 29 and will be attended by leaders of all Somali political parties as well as by representatives of donor countries and international aid organizations, was "a key opportunity."

"If Somali leaders demonstrate their own commitment to peace, which is a prerequisite for development, international donors will respond," she said.

$30 Million for Bosnia

Mrs. Albright also announced that the Clinton administration is preparing a new aid package worth approximately $30 million for Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Thursday, leaders of the Muslim-dominated Bosnian government and of the Serbian and Croatian nationalist factions signed a new agreement with Lord Owen, the international mediator, in which they promised yet again to give relief convoys secure access to all parts of the country this winter.

As a result, U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali on Friday lifted the suspension of aid convoys he imposed nearly two weeks ago after a humanitarian worker was killed and several others wounded.

New dictatorship destroys democratic institutions

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Military commanders began taking over from elected civilian governors Friday as Nigeria's new dictator followed through on his decision to sweep away all traces of democracy.

Gen. Sani Abacha, who ousted the civilian government of Ernest Shonekan on Wednesday, announced the next day that he was dissolving the 30 state governments, the federal legislature and all local councils.

That effectively dismantled nearly a decade of progress toward a system of elected government made under former dictator Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, who resigned in August after installing Shonekan.

Army brigade commanders began moving into government offices in several cities, including Lagos, the commercial capital, and Port Harcourt, the petroleum capital.

State-run Radio Nigeria reported without elaboration that a shakeup in the military was under way and that Abacha "would not brook any nonsense."

Abacha, 50, a U.S.-trained soldier who helped lead military coups in 1983 and 1985, also banned all political activity. He said he was running the country as head of a military council and would organize a constitutional conference in the future to come up with a new system of democracy.

Nigerians were shocked by the moves.

"We did not expect destruction of this magnitude of the democratic structures," said Albert Legogie, deputy president of the now-defunct Senate.

The Campaign for Democracy, a coalition of human rights, trade unions and social groups, called for tough international sanctions.

"Gen. Abacha's continuation of the war against democracy, which the military has been waging for 33 years, shows him off as a persistent and committed traitor to the nation," said one of its members, Civil Liberties Organization director Olisa Agbakoba.

Campaign spokesman Shina Loremikan said police clashed with unarmed protesters in southwestern Akure and Abeokuta and several parts of Lagos.

Dozens of students were arrested and some were charged in a Lagos magistrate's court with rioting and possessing subversive material belonging to the Campaign for Democracy, he said.

The campaign ordered the demonstrations before Abacha's takeover to protest a sevenfold increase in fuel prices that Shonekan imposed last week. It triggered a general strike on Monday.

Abacha said he would reexamine the increases and ordered the unions back to work. The unions refused, but traffic and commercial activity was brisker in Lagos.

Union officials went into hiding after Abacha's announcement. Several prominent activists were reluctant to criticize the government, noting a rash of disruptions in the telephone service since Abacha took power.

Abacha's promises about a new democratic system echoed those made by Babangida when Abacha helped him take power in 1985. Both men had helped lead the 1983 coup that toppled the previous civilian government.

Babangida allowed local and state elections and then held a presidential ballot on June 12, which he voided four days later. It was to be the final step in the much-delayed process of returning Nigeria to civilian government.

Motive of alleged child murderers remains elusive

PRESTON, England (AP) — The 12 jurors who must decide whether two 11-year-olds are guilty of murdering a toddler have heard a lot about what happened the day the boys lured James Bulger from his mother.

But after 13 days of testimony, including 12 hours of tapes of police interrogation, the jurors have learned little about the character of the accused boys or their motives.

"He was laughing his head off" as he battered the 2-year-old with bricks and a metal pole, said Child B, tattling on his friend in police interviews. "(He) was probably doing it for fun or something."

"He said he felt like it," Child A told police, describing the other child hurling bricks at James. "(He) had a smirk on his mouth."

That was the closest the prosecution came to answering the troubling question: Why?

Motive isn't an issue in the trial of the boys, who can be identified in the press only as Child A and Child B. Nor are attorneys allowed under English law to discuss the pasts of the accused.

Because the accused are under 14, the prosecution must prove that they knew their actions could cause serious injury and that they knew their behavior was seriously wrong.

"If ever crime was committed jointly and together, then this was that crime," prosecutor Richard Henriques said Friday in his final argument.

After the defense's closing statements Monday, jurors will decide whether the boys, then 10 years old, are guilty as charged. They have pleaded innocent to three counts each of abducting and murdering James on Feb. 12 and of trying to abduct another boy earlier that day.

Defense attorneys said they will argue in their closing remarks that the boys did not intend to murder James and did not understand the gravity of their actions.

For Child A and Child B, that cold, clear Friday began as an ordinary day. They were bored, they skipped school as they often did, they hung around a shopping mall, they harassed people and they pilfered small items.

But according to prosecutor Richard Henriques, the two were looking for much more — they had planned to take a child, any child, that day.

Child B told police it was his idea to abduct a small child, and Child A's idea to kill the toddler.

Prosecutors, the boys' teachers and psychiatrists have all testified that the pair knew this was seriously wrong.

Psychiatrists said the boys are of average or above average intelligence, knew right from wrong, and now have nightmares and anxiety about the killing. Child B cries hysterically when asked about it.

Child A is one of a large family, with an absent father.

Child B's parents were estranged and living separately but have reconciled since his arrest.

The boys were in the same class at school. Each was held back in school a year, largely for truancy.

They both admitted to skipping school that day.

But from there, their stories changed constantly under separate police questioning until Child B, confronted with forensic evidence linking him to the crime and assured by his parents they would always love him, confessed in a soft voice, "I killed James."

Still, he tried to place as much blame as he could on his schoolmate.

Child A denied to the end — through six hours and 29 minutes of police questioning — that he took part in the killing.

His final version was that they left the shopping mall with James and walked him 2½ miles across Liverpool. As dusk fell, Child A told police, he watched Child B bludgeon James to death, and "got me ear against his belly and he wasn't breathing."

Henriques said Child A "told lies from beginning to end in his interviews, and quite sophisticated lies at that."

Tokyo court rejects woman's appeal to use maiden name

TOKYO (AP) — In a decision reflecting Japan's male-oriented society, a Tokyo court Friday turned down an appeal by a university professor that she be allowed to use her maiden name in her work.

Reiko Sekiguchi, 56, a sociology professor, sued her university in 1988, saying women should have the right to use their maiden names in professional activities and in daily life.

Sekiguchi changed her officially registered name to that of her husband when she married in 1966. But she continued to use Sekiguchi, her maiden name.

In denying the case, the three-judge panel in Tokyo District Court referred to a Civil Code provision which says couples must choose one of their surnames and register their marriage under one family name. In 97 percent of the cases, women give up their names.

Senator considers quitting amid ethics investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Packwood was said to be considering resigning Friday amid an ethics investigation into allegations of sexual misconduct. The Justice Department began an investigation into possible criminal misconduct by the Oregon Republican, Clinton administration sources said.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said the department is investigating whether Packwood acted on behalf of a Japanese company accused of unfair trade practices. The sources said the criminal investigation is not related to the sexual misconduct allegations.

Attorney James Fitzpatrick told reporters that Packwood's resignation "is under consideration" but added, "I don't know when it will be resolved.

"I don't think anyone is pressing anyone at this moment. This is a matter that is simply under consideration and no decision has been made," Fitzpatrick told a news conference.

The administration sources said the criminal investigation focuses on whether a lobbyist for Mitsubishi Electric Co. offered Packwood's wife a job in return for Packwood defending the company's against unfair trade practice charges.

Several senators said that Packwood had been on the verge of resigning, but changed his mind.

"It may have been considered a couple of days back. He's not resigning tonight," Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., said after speaking with Packwood.

Cochran said he heard "from another senator" that Packwood received a Justice Department subpoena.

And Sens. Don Nickles, R-Okla. and Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said they also heard about the subpoena.

"It's tough, awful tough. Remember there's a very tortuured human being at the bottom of the pile," Simpson said.

Packwood, R-Ore., met with Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole as speculation swirled about Packwood's political future.

An aide to a senator speaking on condition of annoymity confirmed the Dole-Packwood meeting at Dole's office, but the aide did not know the outcome of the discussion.

The Senate was prepared to file a lawsuit in U.S. District Court on Friday, seeking enforcement of its ethics committee's subpoena for Packwood's personal diaries. A Senate lawyer went to the courthouse, but left without filing the papers.

Meanwhile, The Oregonian in Portland reported Friday that there is a reference in Packwood's diaries to Mitsubishi, a Japanese company accused of unfair trade practices triggered the Senate's fight for his journal.

The newspaper said the Senate legal counsel is reviewing a transcript of subcommittee hearing on international trade held Nov. 6, 1989, when Mitsubishi Electric Co. was accused of using Japanese patent laws to block U.S. competition.

Fitzpatrick's comments followed a report by a Portland TV station that Packwood had resigned or was planning to resign.

More than two dozen women — former staffers, lobbyists and acquaintances — have accused Packwood of making unwanted sexual advances.

The ethics committee has been probing those allegations as well as accusations that Packwood threatened to smear reputations to keep some of the women quiet.

Packwood, serving his fifth term, has apologized for his behavior toward women but declined to comment on any specific allegation.

Teen receives life sentence in 'Hail Mary' strangulation

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — A 19-year-old convicted of strangling a onetime friend while the victim recited the "Hail Mary" was sentenced to life in prison Friday.

"I can't see what was inside you. I can only tell you what it is I see and that is no remorse or even regret," Judge Ronald Marmo told James Wanger.

Margaret Chircop, whose son was slain, spoke in court before the judge imposed the sentence.

"How dare you play God?" she said. "How dare you extinguish my son's life to say my son had no right to live?"

Robert Solimine Jr., 17, of North Haledon, was strangled in February 1992 while sitting in his car with Wanger and three other teens.

Wanger, who lives in Clifton, declined to speak on his own behalf before sentencing.

The sentence includes consecutive terms for two earlier attempts to kill Solimine. With credit for nearly two years served, Wanger won't be eligible for parole until he is 57.

The three other teen-agers in the car pleaded guilty to murder in juvenile court and received reduced sentences in exchange for their testimony.

The teens testified they banded together in 1991 to form a group with Mafia-like rituals headed by Frank Castaldo, then 18. Prosecutors allege Castaldo masterminded the slaying although he wasn't there. He will stand trial Jan. 3.

The teen-age witnesses — two 14-year-old boys and a 17-year-old — testified that Wanger recited the "Hail Mary" with Solimine before slipping a garrote over his neck.

They said the group grew to hate Solimine because they considered him a pest and a snitch who told about the teens' drinking.

"It was a murder basically for fun," said the prosecutor, John Snowdon, rejecting defense suggestions that Wanger may have a genetic flaw or an "attachment disorder" because his mother works and his father left them.

Senate begins hearings on controversial Pentagon nominee

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In what has been called the last battle of the Cold War, longtime liberal activist Morton Halperin faced the Senate Armed Services Committee on Friday and defended his thoughts and actions on American policies from Vietnam to Somalia.

Halperin, President Clinton's most controversial nominee since Lani Guinier, faces a tough fight for confirmation as assistant secretary of defense for democracy and peace-keeping.

His opponents charge that the former Vietnam antiwar activist and CIA critic now is too eager to send troops abroad under the United Nations banner, and is unfit for a sensitive Pentagon post.

"A number of charges have been made about my beliefs and activities which are simply false," Halperin said. "I resist any suggestion that I have done anything which compromises our nation's security or weakens our defenses."

As confirmation hearings opened, the historic sweep of the questions and answers illustrated the depth of animosity that many conservatives feel for Halperin.

The former Defense Department official and Washington director of the American Civil Liberties Union was pressed about his relationships with renegade CIA operative Phillip Agee and with Daniel Ellsburg, who leaked the classified Pentagon Papers during the Vietnam War.

He was questioned even more closely about his role in setting the Clinton administration policies in Haiti and Somalia.

The ranking Republican, Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, called Halperin's nomination "an insult to the nation's interests and to the welfare of the Armed Forces."

"In the committee votes to confirm this nominee, then it will confirm anyone, and I see no reason why, in the future, we should bother to hold confirmation hearings at all," said Thurmond.

Faced with such vehement opposition, Halperin used his opening statement to quickly answer some of the charges against him:

■ "I have been accused of aiding Phillip Agee in the disclosure of the identities of intelligence agents and advocating the disclosure of such identities. That is false."

■ "I have been accused of aiding Daniel Ellsberg in the disclosure of the Pentagon Papers. That is false."

■ "I have been accused of advising the secretary of defense not to send armor to Somalia. That is false."

But moments later, critics confronted the nominee with his own words.

Jackson is in Europe, Taylor says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael Jackson is undergoing addiction treatment in Europe, Elizabeth Taylor said Friday. She said she helped arrange the treatment but wouldn't say more about where he was.

"I have suffered and dealt with the same kind of medical problems now afflicting my friend Michael Jackson," Taylor said.

"Because of that and because of our friendship, when Michael's doctor called to ask if I would help, I was glad to intervene," she said. "Because of my own experience with addiction to prescription medicines, I was able to make a number of calls in search of the best and the most appropriate treatment for Michael, and he is now undergoing such treatment in Europe."

Jackson said last week that he had become addicted to prescription pain killers.

After the announcement, the Pepsi-Cola Co., which had been sponsoring Jackson's tour, said it was dropping him.

Taylor also said she would remain silent about the allegations.

Democrats doubt Rollins' claim that voter suppression was a lie

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican consultant Ed Rollins testified Friday that he lied when he said the GOP distributed $500,000 to suppress black voting in the New Jersey gubernatorial election. But the Democratic Party wasn't taking him at his word.

Rollins, who managed Republican Christie Whitman's comeback victory over Democratic Gov. Jim Florio, was grilled all day in a Washington office by lawyers for the Democratic Party. Democrats are suing to overturn the Nov. 2 election on the basis of Rollins' original claim.

Theodore W. Geiser, special counsel to the New Jersey Republican State Committee, said Rollins "testified it was a total fabrication.

"He expressed as I would say an unqualified act of contrition," Geiser said.

But Democratic State Committee Chairman Raymond J. Lesniak said Rollins' "bizarre explanation" would not end the lawsuit.

"We're not relying on his explanation as being truthful. We have what we've had all along and that is his original statement," Lesniak said.

Asked about the chance of overturning the election, he said: "It still is slim. We have a heavy burden to meet. It will be based on further questions and depositions."

Rollins gave the names of others in charge of various aspects of the Republican campaign, attorneys for the Democrats said, suggesting they would want to question some of those people.

They already are scheduled to depose Whitman's brother, Webster Todd, who managed the campaign before Rollins took over.

During the deposition, the Democrats' lawyers also questioned Rollins about Democratic workers who might have been approached with GOP money. Rollins said he knew nothing about such instances, the lawyers said.

In New Jersey, a spokesman for Whitman said Rollins' testimony "goes a long way toward convincing people that there's no truth to this story."

"None of it ever happened, which is what Mrs. Whitman has said from the beginning," said the spokesman, Carl Golden. A spokesman for Florio declined comment.

Rollins issued a statement through his lawyers: "I deeply regret the controversy and trouble my initial statements created. I want to apologize again to Mrs. Whitman, the African-American community and the voters of New Jersey. Soon I hope to have the opportunity to convey personally my sincere apologies for the trouble I have caused them."

Transcripts of the deposition, which lasted more than six hours at the offices of a law firm assisting the Democratic National Committee, were expected to be released Friday night.

The Democratic National Committee sued in U.S. District Court in Newark, contending that Rollins' earlier comments indicated racial manipulation of the election.

A judge allowed the Democrats to question Rollins under oath for their lawsuit, but denied news organizations permission to attend. Democrats said they would make the transcripts available.

One week after the election, Rollins told reporters that money was paid to black ministers and Democratic workers to keep voter turnout light in urban areas on Election Day.

The next day, Rollins retracted his statement, calling it an "exaggeration." Whitman vehemently denied that Republicans suppressed votes.

Asked why Rollins had made his earlier claim, Geiser said Rollins testified that "it's a competitive world and he was trying to improve an already successful performance."

California institutions turn up security with electrified fences

CALIPATRIA, Calif. (AP) — The signs show a man hit by a bolt of electricity, falling backward. "Danger. Peligro," they warn. "High Voltage, Keep Out. Alto Voltaje, No Entre."

It's no idle threat. A new electrified fence at Calipatria State Prison means instant death for any inmate trying to escape.

A prisoner advocate said she was horrified by what amounts to an automatic death sentence. State officials contend it's no different from the old shoot-to-stop policy for tower guards — just more efficient.

"The fence doesn't get distracted, it doesn't look away for a moment and it doesn't get tired," said Warden K.W. Prunty.

"We already had a lethal perimeter," he said. "This is simply a way to keep that same level of security while saving money."

Calipatria, a maximum-security prison, opened nearly two years ago. It's set in the desert scrub near the Salton Sea, 35 miles north of the Mexican border. The Chocolate Mountains loom over prison grounds.

Guards threw the switch on the fence Nov. 8. It carries 4,000 volts and 650 milliamperes. About 70 milliamperes is enough to kill.

The $1.5 million fence stands 13 feet high, erected in a no-man's land between two 12-foot fences topped with razor wire so nobody touches it accidentally.

The ring of fences is separated from the low, tan prison buildings and 3,900 inmates by a wide, empty strip of dirt.

As many as 20 other California maximum- and medium-security prisons will get electrified fences in the next few years as the state struggles to build more prisons on a tight budget.

Massachussetts, Indiana and Tennessee have used less sophisticated electrified fences for years, typically a high-voltage line atop prison walls. Walpole State Prison in Massachusetts installed one at the top of its outer wall in the 1950s.

In the early 1960s, a Walpole inmate was killed when he touched it during an escape attempt. A fellow inmate managed to jump over the electric wire, said Tom Rapone, Massachusetts Secretary of Public Safety.

A prisoner hasn't been shot to death during an escape attempt in California since 1981. Most escapes are walkaways from minimum-security prison camps, something that has happened 48 times this year. Only five inmates have escaped from higher-security prisons this year.

The California Department of Corrections estimates electrified fences could eventually save the state $34 million a year.

Brady bill would have small impact on street guns

BOSTON (AP) — Gun controls in a long-debated Brady bill may not slow urban carnage because stolen and black market weapons will still flow onto city battlefields.

"The Brady bill is not a panacea," said Joseph Saia, chief of detectives in Boston, where gun-related mayhem has escalated despite a tough state law mandating background checks on gun purchasers. "It will have a small impact on the guns in the street."

The Boston experience is repeated in cities like New York, Washington, and Chicago. Fifteen states require a background check of gun purchasers. Fourteen have waiting periods ranging from 15 days in California to 48 hours in Nebraska.

The laws have had little effect on street violence. Most troubling is the increased gunplay among the young. The number of teens who kill with guns has tripled since 1985; while overall violent crime dropped this year, it increased among the young, even in cities with handgun controls.

"Twenty-five to 30 percent of crimes, particularly youthful offenses, involve guns acquired through illegal means," said Sylvester Daughtry, the police chief in Greensboro, N.C., and president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

"The bill will provide some screening of people who should not purchase guns, but it won't keep people from acquiring guns from illegal sources," he said.

For years, the bill was the focus of gun control debate. Named after James Brady, the White House press secretary critically wounded in the attempted assassination of President Reagan, the bill is expected to pass this weekend.

While still under debate, the final version is expected to include a waiting period. Local jurisdictions would be required to run background checks on prospective buyers.

Massachusetts' laws are tougher. It took Jeff Krukonis three months to get his pistol permit. Until then, a dealer couldn't even legally hand him a weapon for inspection.

Immersed in paperwork necessary to buy a purse-sized Beretta for his wife at a downtown sporting goods store, Krukonis said an additional wait required by the Brady bill would be a minor annoyance if it accomplished something.

"I don't believe felons should have guns," Krukonis said. "But is it going to keep guns off the street?"

He answers with a shrug.

Boston police got a mixed answer when they traced back the years of guns seized in criminal investigations. They found 39 percent were stolen from Massachusetts homes; 28 percent came from Alabama, Florida, Georgia, New Hampshire, Texas, Virginia — all states without waiting periods or background checks.

Saia said the bill would do little to block these two supply streams.

"We need strong national gun control laws where citizens of Massachusetts can't go to Georgia and buy guns," he said. "All the Brady bill says is you have to wait five days until we check you out."

But gun control advocates hope even modest national legislation like Brady might close loopholes that allow interstate gun trafficking.

"State laws are never going to be as effective as a national law. It's like trying to heat a house where half the windows are opened," said Susan Whitmore, a spokeswoman for the lobbying group Handgun Control Inc.

Advocates point to what happened in South Carolina after it tightened its laws. The state was once a major source of handguns used in New York city crimes. A 1975 law limiting gun purchases ended that trafficking route.

Jack Killorin, a federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms spokesman, said it's uncertain how much the Brady bill's waiting period and background checks would impede "straw buyers," people who purchase weapons in their state for sale in another.

"With a five-day wait, the question is, how willing is a straw buyer going to be to come back?" he said.

Planned Parenthood official blasts TEA

AUSTIN (AP) — A local Planned Parenthood official is charging that the Texas Education Agency bowed to conservative pressure by revoking its endorsement of state-developed sex education materials.

"Once again, we are seeing how an education issue is being decided on political grounds," said Glenda Parks, executive director of Planned Parenthood of Austin. "Whoever can yell the loudest or write the most letters are the ones being heard."

TEA officials deny that pressure from conservative and religious groups prompted Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno to advise school districts not to use the materials, which were optional and focused on prevention of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

Meno has said he wants to revise the materials because of inaccuracies, then submit them to the State Board of Education. He also said parents should be given more say in whether their children participate in classes using the materials.

The Education Board didn't approve the materials before they were sent to elementary school campuses and made available to middle schools. The high-school version wasn't sent out.

Jeff Fisher of the American Family Association of Texas said conservative and religious groups led the campaign against the program. But he said it was driven mainly by parents across the political spectrum outraged by the curriculum.

Fisher also said the program should be scrapped because acquired immune deficiency syndrome and other sexually transmitted diseases are covered in new health textbooks approved last week by the Education Board.

Former Hightower aides get prison terms

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — Three top aides to former Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower were sentenced Friday to federal prison on bribery and conspiracy charges.

U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks sentenced Mike Moeller and Peter McRae to 27 months in prison, and Billie Quicksall to 12 months.

In addition, Moeller was fined $56,000; McRae, $15,000; and Quicksall, $8,000. Under the sentence, each will be on probation for two years after their prison terms.

Moeller and McRae said they would appeal, claiming they are innocent victims of a Republican attack on Hightower, an outspoken Democrat. Sparks allowed them to remain free pending the outcome of their appeals.

Quicksall was also allowed to remain free for the 10-day period to file an appeal, but his attorney said he probably wouldn't appeal and would begin to serve his sentence.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Dan Mills also said he would appeal Sparks' sentencing. Mills had sought stiffer sentences.

Moeller, McRae and Quicksall were convicted last month on charges that they traded state and federal contracts worth more than $173,000 for political fund-raising for Hightower and Moeller.

Moeller was Hightower's deputy commissioner and briefly considered running for the top post in 1990 until Hightower tried an unsuccessful bid to win re-election. Hightower has not been charged with wrongdoing.

The defendants were accused of using fraudulent invoices to get public money out of the comptroller's office to pay two consultants for political fund-raising.

The two consultants, Bob Boyd and Russell Koontz, weren't tried because they are suffering from ill health.

Moeller was convicted on seven felony counts. Former Texas-Federal Inspection Service officials McRae and Quicksall were found guilty of five and four felony convictions, respectively.

"It's been political from the very beginning," said McRae. "The folks that indicted us were the Republican justice department under (former President) Bush."

In sentencing, Sparks chastised the defendants, but added it appeared they inherited a bad system.

"You should've stopped it. You shouldn't have carried on," Sparks said.

Prosecutor Mills sought sentences of four years or more.

He said some people in agriculture were frightened that if they didn't give political contributions they could not expect any help from the Texas Department of Agriculture.

"There was a pervasive corruption of governmental function," he said, and that was carried out by Moeller, McRae and Quicksall.

But Sparks said federal sentencing guidelines were difficult to apply to the case because the defendants had inherited a practice already in use.

He also reduced the sentence of Quicksall, 60, because of his age.

San Antonio officials eye expansion of River Walk

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The famous River Walk may be extended north of downtown under a $72.2 million plan city officials are considering to improve the San Antonio River.

In the works for more than four years, the plan provides for more flood controls, access ramps, landscaping and sidewalks along the river. Funding would come from the city, the San Antonio River Authority, Bexar County and federal agencies.

The scenic river corridor would span from the historic King William District south of downtown to Brackenridge Park more than two miles to the north of downtown.

The city already has endorsed a southern plan for improving the River Walk that would link the city's historic missions with the river. State agencies are reviewing that project for possible funding, and parts of the plan have been rolled into a master plan for the $32 million Mission Parkway project.

The popular downtown section of the River Walk is lined by restaurants, shops and hotels.

City Council has yet to formally act on the $72.2 million improvement study, conducted by the river authority and presented informally to the council Thursday.

Tilton's church files lawsuit against media outlets

DALLAS (AP) — Robert Tilton's Word of Faith Church has sued The Dallas Morning News and several other media outlets for more than $61 million alleging the groups conspired to falsely accuse the church of fraud.

The lawsuit names The News, Dallas television station WFAA-TV, ABC News Inc. and the nonprofit Trinity Foundation, an evangelist watchdog group.

The complaint, filed Wednesday in Dallas with U.S. District Judge Robert Maloney, alleges that the news organizations and the nonprofit group conspired to falsely accuse the church of fraud and encourage state and federal agencies to investigate the ministry.

Complaint alleges that outlets conspired to falsely accuse church of fraud...

Also named as defendants are the parent companies of the news organizations, A.H. Belo Corp., which owns The News and WFAA-TV, and Capital Cities/ABC Inc.

"We believe the conspiracy claims are farfetched," said Michael J. McCarthy, senior vice president and general counsel for A.H. Belo.

Ole Anthony, founder of the Trinity Foundation, said the lawsuit is an attempt by Tilton "to prevent people from investigating his scandalous and fraudulent activities."

Attorneys for ABC News could not be reached for comment Friday.

In 1991, ABC's "Prime Time Live" reported that Tilton enjoyed a lavish lifestyle funded by donations to his ministry. The program also reported that prayer requests mailed to the ministry had been found in a trash bin in Oklahoma.

BAYTOWN (AP) — Police interrupted a high school tennis tournament Friday to arrest a 15-year-old player who allegedly tried to hire a hitman to kill his father.

The youth was taken into custody during a Ross S. Sterling High School tennis tournament at 8:55 a.m. and charged with solicitation of a murder, said Baytown Police Chief Charles Shaffer.

The boy offered an undercover officer $50 to kill his father, Shaffer said.

"There were differences between them for the last year," Shaffer said.

The father had recently called the boy a failure after he received a bad grade, Shaffer said.

He said police were alerted on Tuesday by someone who had overheard him wanting to find somebody to kill his father.

An undercover investigator from the Harris County district attorney's office told the boy he was a hitman for hire. In taped conversations, the boy offered the investigator $50 to kill his dad. The boy said he could get several hundred more dollars from his dad's pocket after he was dead, said Shaffer.

The teen-ager also told the investigator when was the best time to kill his father and gave him the location of his father's business and detailed descriptions of his father's car and physical appearance, police said.

The youth was recorded as he considered adding his mother to the list, but later decided against it, police said.

Shaffer said the district attorney's office was trying to have the youth certified as an adult. In Texas, a child who is at least 15 years old can be certified as an adult to face an adult penalty.

As an adult, the teen-ager could face life in prison if convicted. As a juvenile, he could be detained in a youth detention facility until he's 21.

On Friday, the teen-ager remained at the Harris County juvenile detention center, Shaffer said.

Sterling Principal Jimmy Creel said he was notified of the investigation and told that an arrest would be conducted. But on Friday, Creel said he did not even know the identity of the student.

Baytown is just east of Houston.

By Evelyn Iritani
N.Y. Times News Service

SINGAPORE — Inside the Singapore Town Club, one of this city's oldest businessmen's clubs, a young government official and a veteran lawyer were at loggerheads over the future of America.

The young man, who visited several U.S. ports during his two-year stint in the Singapore Navy, pointed to lawlessness in Los Angeles as an example of why he no longer looked to America for inspiration.

"I was scared to walk down the street," said the muscular young man.

A bar stool away, the older lawyer — a survivor of the brutal Japanese occupation of Singapore during World War II — pounded his fist on the counter.

"Don't you understand?" he said loudly enough to turn heads across the room. "America will always set the standard."

Perhaps. There is no question that Asians are looking at their former colonizer, benefactor and security guard with an increasingly critical eye. Still, while Asians may be more selective about what they emulate and accept, they are by no means asking Uncle Sam to leave their party.

In fact, a major concern among Asian officials and business leaders is whether the Clinton administration's focus on America's ailing economy will draw attention away from Asia, an area that has languished on the back burner of U.S. foreign policy since the end of the Vietnam War.

Over the past few months, President Clinton and his economic team have been championing the idea that competing abroad — particularly in the fast-growing Asia-Pacific region — is the best way of guaranteeing a stable economic future for the next generation of Americans.

The Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, meeting this week in Seattle, has been portrayed as a key player in the development of this "new Pacific Community."

But the Clinton administration's actions regarding Asia don't always match the rhetoric, diplomats and business leaders in the region say.

■ Clinton has hailed the importance of the region in numerous speeches, but did not appoint an Asia expert as U.S. trade representative or secretary of commerce, among other key posts.

■ Immediately after Clinton launched the "new Pacific Community" idea last July, Secretary of State Warren Christopher cut short a visit to Asia to attend to the Middle East and Bosnia.

■ While the United States is pushing companies to be more aggressive in Asia, the budget crisis has prevented the U.S. government from expanding its overseas commercial operations to meet the growing demands. Companies are being asked to pay for assistance that used to be free.

Over the past year, APEC's 15 members quietly debated whether a meeting of leaders, an idea originally espoused by the Australians, should be held in the United States or Asia.

Some felt the meeting should be held in Indonesia — the site of the 1994 APEC ministerial meeting — to boost the profile of Asia and lessen fears that the United States and Australia would use the group as a vehicle for their own ambitions.

In the end, according to several Asian diplomats, they decided that Clinton's role as host of the leaders' meeting would force him to pay more attention to the region and help the United States become more engaged in that part of the world.

"We felt it would help Clinton focus his attention on economic competition in this region," said one Asian diplomat.

In addition to being the world's largest consumer market, the United States is also viewed as the only country that can temper Japan's economic aspirations and China's territorial ambitions.

"People are very cautious about Japan's approach here," said a Japanese diplomat stationed in Singapore. "They want a balance between the United States and Japan."

The pressure for a continued U.S. presence in Asia doesn't mean a wave of nostalgia for the way things were. In recent months, Asian leaders have become increasingly aggressive about getting their views into the international marketplace.

Thieves steal paintings from under dog's nose

By Laurinda Keys
Associated Press writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — The solution to Sweden's biggest art robbery could lie in the question once posed by the fictional detective Sherlock Holmes: Why didn't the dog bark in the night?

A guard with a dog was on duty when thieves broke through the weak roof of the Museum of Modern Art on a recent Sunday night and lifted $52 million of framed Pablo Picasso and Georges Braque paintings, as well as a Picasso bronze sculpture, out through the hole they made.

They made a clean getaway from the museum, situated on a central Stockholm island with only one bridge, before the robbery was discovered Monday morning.

"The night guard was there, with a dog," museum press secretary Anna Rappe said. "What nobody understands is why the dog wasn't more attentive, that they could slip through and pass the dog."

Another question: Why didn't the museum alarm go off?

It also was disclosed that the thieves carried out the crime despite a tip-off to the police three weeks in advance.

"The security gave a tip three weeks ago" that a museum robbery was planned," said Ms. Rappe. "That gave us reason to change our routines. But it didn't prevent this from happening."

She said police were questioning all museum employees.

Security experts speculated that the stolen art works, which were uninsured because they are state property, are too well known to be sold. The experts suggested that the thieves may try to ransom them back to the museum.

One lead could be the thief who stole a $875,000 Matisse painting, "The Garden," from the Stockholm museum in 1987. According to newspaper reports, museum security chief Kjell Hestrell has been contacted by people claiming to have the Matisse who are trying to sell it back to the museum.

Museum director Bjorn Springfeldt said the thieves — who used metal shears and a saw to cut through the ceiling and land in the main exhibit room — had "cut the heart out of" the Picasso collection.

Kremlin continues to manipulate TV network

By Marcia Kunstel and Joseph Albright
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — At Ostankino Television Center, telephone hotlines still buzz with instructions from the Kremlin.

"At 7 or 8 o'clock, close to the time when the program is going to be on the air, a terrible number of telephone calls are coming," says Pavel Ogorodnikov, one of seven news anchors. "Everyone asks something."

At stake in next month's election in Russia is a new parliament and new constitution, essential tools for moving the nation beyond its Soviet past.

But the single most decisive factor in the balloting may be Russia's biggest TV network, an institution still operating by rules established in the communist era.

MTV, Teddy Ruxpin cartoons and Mexican soap operas have infiltrated the living rooms of an increasingly video-driven Russian society. But underneath, Russian TV is cloaked in the same, secretive Soviet-style bureaucracy that once sought to preserve Marxist-Leninism. Except now, the task at hand is the preservation of Russian President Boris Yeltsin and his style of democracy.

Throughout the former communist bloc, who controls television and the rules under which it operates have become key questions in the creation of dozens of new societies. Nowhere has the fight been more intense than Russia.

Last month, Yeltsin's final, violent confrontation with parliament was preceded by an attempted takeover of the Ostankino Television Center by anti-Yeltsin hardliners. Eight people died in the shoot-out with paratroopers stationed inside the glass complex in northern Moscow.

Ogorodnikov, 29, spends his off-air time at the Television Center undisturbed, in an office the size of a large closet. He has no secretary, and earns about as much as a Moscow policeman or subway sweeper — a government salary of roughly $40 a week.

During his once-a-week turn anchoring the 9 p.m. Channel 1 news, Ogorodnikov commands an audience of about 120 million viewers — more than four of every 10 Russians. Super Bowls produce those kinds of ratings in the United States.

Part of the reason for Ogorodnikov's powerful impact is anemic TV competition. On a typical night it could be "The Wonderful World of Ballet" and a TV series, "My Love, My Sadness."

Then again, attempted coups and massive political upheaval are attention-getting issues in Russia today.

Ogorodnikov sometimes chafes at serving as a pedal in anyone's political Wurlitzer. But he plays along, pursuing a patient, unsung career trying to broadcast balanced news across 11 time zones.

One daily problem, he acknowledges, is that Russian state television has almost no history of trying to accord fair coverage to a Kremlin leader's opponents. In Soviet tradition, television remains the servant of those in power.

"Subconsciously, always and everywhere, there exists here a perception of fear and mistrust towards any more or less distinguished political figure, except for government members, or the president's team," Ogorodnikov says.

He says the top leaders of Ostankino believe "that the state television should be as close as possible to the president's team, showing everything that relates to a pro-presidential course, his actions and positions and so on."

In the month after Yeltsin suspended parliament on Sept. 21, the undeniable result was that Ostankino viewers often didn't see what Yeltsin's opponents were doing.

For instance, Ostankino gave only glancing and long-delayed mentions of parliament's votes in late September to impeach Yeltsin and to elevate Vice President Aleksander Rutskoi as acting president. Ostankino also ignored Rutskoi's daily press conferences during the week before the storming of parliament.

In other words, for most Russians, the other side didn't exist.

Ostankino has its limitations, which include 5,000 state employees but only seven cameras in Moscow for local news events. Nonetheless, Ostankino is the most comprehensive source of news, commentary, game shows, talk shows and dubbed Mexican soap operas for the 80 percent of Russian households that have television sets. It also reaches the Baltics, Ukraine and nearly all of the other former Soviet republics.

Canadian fishermen face hardship as catches grow smaller

By Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press writer

BAINE HARBOR, Newfoundland — Ralph King's family has fished out of this village on the Burin Peninsula for more than 200 years. Now the fish are gone, and an entire way of life is dying.

"It's a disaster," said King, 41, as he and three neighbors repaired a small fishing boat tied up at the dock. "When you're making a living, and all of a sudden it's not there anymore, it's a disaster."

The federal government stunned much of Atlantic Canada in late August by banning virtually all cod fishing and putting quotas on other species in an attempt to save dwindling stocks.

That will throw 12,000 more people out of work in an already devastated industry that lost 30,000 jobs to last year's ban on cod fishing in waters north and east of Newfoundland.

This island province of 550,000 people has suffered most, but the economies of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and parts of Quebec also are threatened.

King and his neighbors see no shortage of culprits: foreign fishermen, seals, the Canadian government, falling water temperatures.

About 200 people live in Baine Harbor, a tidy cluster of white wooden houses nestled against low hills that slip down to the sea. Forty fishermen sail from it and 20 more work in a small processing plant.

Scores of similar communities cling to Newfoundland's 6,000 miles of coastline. Without fishing, many will wither and die.

"Where the hell are you going to get a job around a place like this?" asked Harvey Reid, 55, who like the others is forbidden to fish for cod, until spring at least.

"We're going to turn into the biggest bunch of alcoholics you ever saw," George Barry, 39, said in the Irish-like lilt peculiar to Newfoundlanders.

The federal government has set aside $190 million to help tide fishermen and plant workers over until next May. With unemployment insurance and a special allowance, laid-off fisherman can get $300 to $400 a week.

But experts think the ban will be extended, perhaps for several years. A scientific report issued this summer says stocks of Atlantic cod and other groundfish, bottom-feeders on the continental shelf, "are now in a critical position, at or near the lowest levels ever recorded."

Groundfish caught in recent years have been smaller and the number of breeding-age fish dramatically fewer.

What angers King, Reid and other fishermen is that, while their boats are idle, foreign vessels continue to scoop precious cod from the sea just outside Canada's 200-mile fishing limit.

The Grand Banks, long one of the world's richest fishing grounds, are southeast of Newfoundland inside the limit, but two important spawning areas, known as the nose and tail of the Grand Banks, extend just outside.

"We are making the sacrifice to protect those stocks . . . but in the meantime just beyond that arbitrary 200-mile line, the foreign nations are fishing," said provincial Premier Clyde Wells, who advocates Canadian management of the entire Grand Banks area.

Unemployment already is over 20 percent in Newfoundland, whose rocky, windswept interior is almost unoccupied, and may double with the full effect of the fishing ban.

Abilene librarian finds adventure in missionary journeys

By Roy A. Jones II
Associated Press

ABILENE — Mary Catherine Campbell was concerned that life as a Liberian librarian "might be a little mundane."

That was before God added a few exciting chapters to her biography.

If the longtime Abilenian ever gets around to writing a book of her own, it'll sound more like an adventure novel.

In her first three-year term in West Africa, Campbell had to be evacuated from two different countries because of civil wars — losing virtually everything she'd taken when she left Abilene.

On the brighter side, Campbell says, she wound up serving in six countries instead of one.

"It's been anything but mundane," she said with a grin.

Instead of being a librarian in Liberia as she planned, Campbell became what amounted to an itinerant librarian. A "librarian to go," if you please.

Eventually, the "librarian to go" wound up in — where else? — Togo.

Sound confusing?

That's the way much of the past three years has been for Campbell, but she remains upbeat and eager to return to Togo next month.

And that's despite being run out of Liberia and Togo and losing most of her possessions — twice.

Fellow missionaries have since returned to Togo while she has been furloughing in Abilene, and she says she can't wait to get back to West Africa.

"I feel like the Lord has got work to do there and he's called me to do it," she said.

In 1989, while Campbell was waiting for a missionary librarian job to come open, she proposed to the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board that she be a traveling librarian.

"I told them I'd go from spot to spot working out the problems, teaching them how to do it, serving for maybe a year or so at one spot and then moving on to another one," she said.

Unfortunately, the mission board doesn't work that way, an official told her.

"I think I've become an itinerant librarian in spite of the fact that the board doesn't do it that way," she quipped. In addition to Liberia and Togo, she also worked in Benin and the Ivory Coast, and studied in France and Sierra Leone.

Although she'd grown up as a preacher's kid, Mary Catherine Campbell hadn't seriously considered a career in missions until after her father's death in 1986.

The Rev. Clyde Campbell had pastored several area churches, including Calvary Baptist in Abilene. He had also been associate pastor at University Baptist.

"I'd been interested in missions all my life, but before the timing just wasn't right," she said. "After Dad died it started tugging at me."

Now 50, Campbell had graduated from Hardin-Simmons University in 1965. She taught school in Austin for two years before going to the Philippines for two years as a journeyman missionary, working as a librarian for a seminary.

After returning to the states, she earned a master's degree at the University of Texas at Austin, then became HSU librarian in 1971. She resigned in 1988 so she would be free to accept a missionary appointment, but when no library posts opened up, she spent a year as a librarian at Dyess Air Force Base.

Doors seemed to open in Canada and Hong Kong, but both closed before she could be appointed. When the job opened in Liberia, she accepted at once, even through she knew a civil war already was brewing.

"It was the only request, world wide, for a librarian, so I felt that had to be what God wanted me to do," she said.

When she arrived in Liberia in March 1990, the fighting was largely confined to rebel activity in the northern part of the country, far from her home in the Monrovia area.

Before she began language study in Monrovia, she got to visit Ricks Institute, the Baptist seminary where she would live and work, about 20 miles away.

"I saw the house where I'd be living, and measured the windows for drapes," she said.

But she never got to move in. Within a few weeks the missionaries began to hear shots. Soon the American embassy strongly advised them not to venture out to the seminary.

"We could see a lot of activity, soldiers all over town. Truckloads of solders were going out and truckloads of dead bodies were coming back," she said.

It was during this time that three large crates containing Campbell's furniture and other possessions finally was delivered to the seminary. Rebels took everything and trashed the seminary. Campbell never even saw her crates after she packed them in Abilene.

She downplayed her losses, but admitted, "some of it was irreplaceable; we'd been told to 'take what will make it home to you.'"

"I lost Mother's Bible and Dad's last portrait and a few other things of sentimental value, and I keep reaching for something that I realize I don't have anymore," she said.

"But people here lose houses in fires and floods and tornadoes and it's all gone. If you've got insurance you just buy some more stuff and start over. Most of it is just 'things.'"

A few days later the American Embassy told the reluctant missionaries they'd have to leave Liberia.

"They told us to show up at the airport Monday morning with your passport and one suitcase and one carry-on," she said. This time she lost most of her clothes, books and other belongings she'd taken in a footlocker to tide her over until her crates arrived.

After several weeks in Sierra Leone, France and Togo, it became apparent the civil war in Liberia "wasn't going to just blow over," she said. When she was offered a job as librarian at Togo's Baptist seminary, she took it.

"I felt like the Lord had taken me in the back door where I really was needed in the first place," she said.

Glenwood Hospital
A FREE Public Service From Glenwood

Support Group for Adult Survivors of Childhood Sexual Abuse

A support group for adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse meets on Mondays at Glenwood Hospital, from 6:00 - 7:30 p.m.

Developed by Glenwood Hospital, it is free of charge, for both men and women. The group will offer assistance in dealing with the negative effects of childhood sexual abuse - depression, suicidal thoughts, guilt, shame, poor self-image, addictive behaviors, inability to trust others and problems in forming lasting and healthy relationships.

The group will provide a supportive, non-judgmental environment for survivors to share experiences and feelings and to learn health coping skills for dealing with the traumatic effects of childhood sexual abuse.

IN ALL THINGS GIVE THANKS

Psalm 67

"Well, money's been scarce. There'll be meatloaf instead of turkey on our Thanksgiving table. We won't have much of a celebration this year."

Whether we're "talking turkey" or Christmas trees, those are only symbols, not the true theme of the celebration. In 1 Thessalonians 5:16-18 we read, "Rejoice always, pray constantly, give thanks in all circumstances, for this is the will of God..."

The message is clear. In all things give thanks. We may recall some "lean" holidays that were extraordinarily joyous and memorable. Why? Perhaps we were expecting little, thus, magnifying any additional blessings. Perhaps we relied more upon tradition, family, and worship in our search for joy and thankfulness.

It is our nature to seek thankfulness. God made us in His image with a joyful and thankful heart. This Thanksgiving, may a thankful heart be the center of your celebration. You will discover joy unsurpassed.

Riverboats, religion don't mix

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Church-based opponents of riverboat gambling say the defeat of floating casinos in four votes last week should give the religious lobby political influence on other social issues such as curbing violence and easing racial tensions.

"I am confident now that the church can provide the forum and the invitation for very diverse people who have not agreed on other issues to come together and tackle social concerns," said the Rev. Scott Schiesswohl, a consultant for the United Methodist Church.

But Brian Vargus, a pollster at Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis, said most casino oppoents cited fears of increased crime and congestion, rather than religious or moral objections.

"Religion was not a key factor. Let's face it, most Hoosiers don't feel that religion and politics should mix," Vargus said.

Riverboats were voted down in Clark, Floyd, Porter and Warrick counties and approved in Scott, Ohio, Vanderburgh, LaPorte and Dearborn counties and in the cities of Hammond and East Chicago.

Texas minister answers prayer

NYSTED, Neb. (AP) — If patience is a virtue, St. Peder's Evangelical Lutheran Church's congregation should be well rewarded.

After 35 years without its own pastor, the congregation in this tiny farm community of 26 has persuaded the Rev. Don Voorhees to move his family from Texas to central Nebraska to be minister here.

The community has a handful of houses, the church and remnants of an old school. There are about 15 families from Nysted, Dannebrog and Grand Island who attend St. Peder's church.

Nysted was once a successful Danish settlement known throughout the state for its Folk School run by C.J. Skovgaard, minister of St. Peder's. Skovgaard founded the school and built a wooden church in 1887.

Nysted's prosperity ended in the 1930s with the Great Depression. St. Peder's survived through the years with borrowed pastors and seminary students. For the last 23 years the church has been served by the Dannebrog Baptist minister.

Voohrees said he came because, "I could see these people were committed to getting this church going again."

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Special service set

Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. A St., will hold a special Thanksgiving Eve service at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

The service will include prayers, hymns, readings and psalms related to Thanksgiving.

Mary Beth Anton will lead the service. Leabeth Quinn will serve as organist. All are invited to attend.

For more information call the church, 683-1936.

■ Holiday service set

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, 1001 W. Tennessee Ave., is holding a Thanksgiving Service at 10:30 a.m. Thursday.

Biblical passages will be read and time will be given for Christian Scientists to share testimonies of gratitude to God.

The public is invited to attend. Child care will be provided for children to young to attend. No collection will be taken.

■ Luncheon to be held

A Thanksgiving Service will be observed at Ranchland Heights Baptist Church at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Hymns of praise and blessings will be sung. A luncheon will be served at noon. Traditional foods will be prepared by Pat Hall, Travis Hart, Delila Martin, Shirley Hanson and Mary Tolison. Members will bring covered dishes.

Guests are invited to attend Sunday School, the service and lunch. For more information call 697-4471 or 683-1947.

■ Church celebrates 65

Greater St. Luke African Episcopal Church, 401 S. Adams St., is celebrating its 65th anniversary Sunday.

The Rev. Hadley Edwards, pastor of Hollowell United Methodist Church, will be the guest minister.

An African Methodist Church was organized in 1927 by the Rev. H.Y. Tyler, and in 1928, Greater St. Luke was organized.

In 1929, after worshiping under a brush arbor, the church purchased a lot at the corner of Lee and Texas streets and built an adobe structure.

In 1936, the church was remodeled under the leadership of the Rev. H.J. Johnson. In 1943, the church was enlarged under the leadership of the Rev. L.E. Browning. In 1950, the Rev. G.A. Lowe became pastor.

Then, in 1955, lots at Adams St. and Kentucky were purchased, and the present structure was started.

The public is invited to attend Sunday's anniversary celebration.

■ Group to perform

Nancy Harmon and "The Love Special Team" will be at Victory Family Christian Center, 5200 W. Illinois Ave., at 6 p.m. Sunday.

Harmon

They also will give their testimony and perform at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

Ms. Harmon and "The Love Special Team" appear weekly over the Trinity Broadcasting Network. She is a recording artist and composer of numerous songs including "The Blood bought the Church," "I'm a King's Kid" and "Ready."

All are invited to attend.

■ Church to show film

The movie stars Connie Sellecca, Jeff Conaway and Deborah Tucker.

Returning home from covering the Persian Gulf War, award-winning TV journalist, Tom Edwards (Conaway) and his producer, Patricia "Pete" Peterson (Ms. Sellecca) are given the task of "keeping the ratings high."

It puts them at odds, since Edwards feels the best story is one which would trash the faith of returning servicemen and women.

Edwards' real war is at home with his daughter and within his own heart. In the wake of his wife's death, Edwards immerses himself in his work, leaving Jill (Deborah Tucker) hurt and alone. Their struggling attempts to reach out to each other serve only to widen the gap between them.

Through the moving stories of soldiers from Operation Desert Storm and the faithful support of co-worker "Pete" Peterson, Edwards comes to experience genuine peace in the midst of the storms that engulf him.

For more information, call 697-3101.

■ Revival scheduled

"If My People . . ." is the theme of a revival scheduled at Northwestern Baptist Church, 3901 Mockingbird Lane, Nov. 28 through Dec. 1.

The Rev. Bruce Troy, pastor of Second Baptist Church, Odessa, will be the evangelist and Rick Bender, minister of music at Northwestern, will lead the music.

Daytime services will be at noon Monday through Wednesday. All are invited to bring a sack lunch and eat together preceding the service. the church will furnish tea and coffee. Other daily services begin at 7:30 p.m.

All are invited to attend. For more information call the church, 689-0612.

■ Youths to make vow

Students will make public commitments to practice sexual abstinence until marriage during both morning worship services Sunday at Crestview Baptist Church.

This commitment is part of a nationwide emphasis by Southern Baptist students called "True Love Waits."

■ Advent to be observed

Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. A St., will celebrate the first Sunday of Advent at its 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. services Sunday.

Advent marks the start of the church year. It is a four-week period of preparation for Christ's coming as the baby Jesus at Christmas.

A single candle will be lit on the Advent wreath to observe the Sunday and will be followed by the lighting of an additional candle each of the following three weeks of the Advent season. The Rev. David Herman, pastor of the church, wil deliver the sermon.

In addition, Hope Lutheran Church will hold a 15 minute Advent meditation led by Mary Beth Anton at 6:15 p.m. Wednesdays during Advent begining Dec. 1. the worship will be preceded by a supper meal at 5:30 p.m. and followed by choir rehearsals for all ages.

■ Friendship service set

Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield St., is hosting "Friendship Sunday" Sunday.

All are invited to attend Sunday School at 9:30 a.m., worship services at 11 a.m. and a stone soup luncheon immediately following the service.

A nursery is available.

■ Church bazaar slated

The St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church Women will host its ninth Annual Heavenly Holidays Christmas Bazaar today from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the church's parish hall, 2900 Princeton Ave.

Admission will be $1 at the door with children under 12 being admitted free. All proceeds from this annual fundraiser go to the outreach projects of the Episcopal Church Women.

For more information, call 682-6423.

■ Church to offer thanks

Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., will have a Thanksgiving Eve service at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Ronald Meyer, invites the public to attend the service.

Also, the Women of the ELCA at Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., will be in charge of a special Thankoffering Service at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

Women of the congregation will participate in all aspects of the service said Gretchen Shults, president of the Women of Midland Lutheran.

The Chancel Choir and the handbells will present special music. The Sunday School hour for all ages is at 9:15 a.m. For more information call the church, 694-1373.

■ Workshop planned

The Rev. Edwene Gaines and her husband, Bert Carson, will present their Prosperity Plus Workshop from 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesday at the Permian Church of religious science, 2311 Elizabeth Ave.

Ms. Gaines is an ordained Unity minister. Carson is a writer, businessman and lecturer.

For more information call the church.

■ Performance to end

ABILENE — "Heat," a drama written by William Hauptman and directed by McMurry University senior theater major Kevin Helmer, closes with the 8 p.m. performance today in the Little theatre of Amy Graves Ryan Fine arts center.

In the cast is Midlander Bethany Swift, who is playing Billie Tucker; and Odessan Sarah Graff, who is playing Betty. Both are McMurry University freshmen.

"Heat" is the story of a young, psychotic boy who murders two teenage girls. It is based on an actual incident which occurred in Tucson, Ariz., in 1964.

Mobile ministry serves spiritual needs of long-distance drivers

By Tom Toolen
N.Y. Times News Service

BLOOMSBURY, N.J. — At first glance, nothing looks out of the ordinary about the 45-foot blue and white trailer parked at the truck stop off Route 78 here. The trailer blends in with the 700 or so that stop each day at the Garden State Truck Plaza.

The interior of the trailer is a far different story, however. It is equipped with an organ, carpeting, wood paneling, cushioned seats and even a chandelier.

That's because the trailer, which sits permanently at the truck stop, is a chapel serving the spiritual needs of drivers 24 hours a day, offering them a chance to pray, meditate or just sit in the quiet atmosphere. The trailer has a sign on the side identifying it as a chapel.

It is the only truck-stop chapel in New Jersey, says its operator, Transport for Christ, an interdenominational group based in Denver, Pa., that has placed chapels at 14 locations in the United States and Canada.

The chaplains usually spend a week at a time living in a small private room in the trailer, where they are available 24 hours a day to the truckers or any other drivers who seek solace or help. The chaplains rotate the one-week duty, going home to await assignment.

"We like to say we are on God's highway," Breadbenner said. "We are there to help everyone we can, because this is the Christian thing to do. The driver may have a problem with something, and he just wants to sit in the quiet of the chapel. Or he might want to talk, or he might just want to read the Bible."

Breadbenner said he knew all about the loneliness of the road, since he often had to be away from home while his six children were young. He became a chaplain, he said, because he had "always been a believer in Jesus Christ, and I wanted to share my faith and perhaps help others out on the road."

Howard Jones, 66, another chaplain at the Garden State Truck Plaza, said drivers were amazed when they entered the chapel. "They see the chandelier and the carpeting and the wood paneling, and they say this is a different kind of trailer," he said. "It sure is."

He said new chapels were being established in Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Buffalo and even in Moscow. "Russia has found the religion it had buried for so long," Jones said.

About a dozen people stop at the New Jersey chapel daily, he said. The other day, Mike Bobbitt, an Easton, Pa., trucker, was one of them.

"It does me a lot of good just coming in here and talking, and perhaps reading the Bible with a few of the guys," Bobbitt said.

Mike Freezer, 38, of Montoursville, Pa., said he enjoyed stopping in to say a prayer and "reacquaint myself with Jesus." Freezer said he would like to bring his wife and three sons to the truck-stop chapel's services, which are held each Sunday at 7 a.m. and 11 p.m. Typically, 8 to 12 people attend each service.

The trailer is always open, but the door to the living quarters is locked, although a sign posted at night announces: "Chaplain is sleeping. Knock if you have a need." There are plenty of men who have needs.

Breadbenner remembered a time when a young man came in distraught because he had just received a call from his wife telling him she wanted a divorce. "He was in bad shape, but stayed a few hours here at the chapel, and we talked and prayed with him," the chaplain said, adding that the man left in much better spirits.

Mike Lee, a Virginian who drives his own tractor-trailer, said that many people on the highways used to be considerate but that now "it's getting dangerous out there, because people seem less concerned about each other." Lee said that was why he thought the chapel "should be part of every trucker's life."

The chapel has also cleaned up the image of the truck stop. "In the old days, truckers had a reputation for being drinkers and rowdies, and many were," Lee said. "But thanks to the chapel, many of the drivers have found an alternative to all this drinking and getting into trouble."

William Hutchens, 70, a retired banker who owns the Garden State Truck Plaza, agreed that the chapel had helped the image of the stop. "It has changed the atmosphere of the entire stop," he said. "It has eliminated the unwanted people that used to hang around."

Lee faces giddy Bowie

■ Rebels take on underdog foe that is just happy to be there.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

EL PASO — If Midland Lee is to advance in the Class 5A Division II (Small School) state football playoffs here today, the Rebels will have to beat the Bowie Bears, a team that is giddy over just getting this far.

Lee 0-1, will meet Bowie, 7-3-1, at 1 p.m. MST (2 p.m. CST) at the Soccoro Complex in an area playoff matchup with the winner advancing to play either Lewisville (10-0-1) or South Grand Prairie (6-5) in next week's region round.

"Bowie came from behind 20-7 to tie Eastwood (27-27) last week, so they are doing something good," says Earl Miller, Lee head football coach.

"We've just got to keep from letting something like that from happening and try to get some better defense if we can find the personnel. But we're getting pretty thin in the defensive ranks right now."

Lee enters the game with defensive end Melvin Dunson suffering from an injured arm and middle linebacker Justin Goodman with a slightly injured ankle. Both may play, however.

"Bowie is very similar to San Angelo and Cooper in that they run a lot of one back stuff and throw the football," Miller said. "It hasn't been that hard to

Childress signs

HOUSTON — Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams and defensive tackle Ray Childress reached agreement on a revised contract on Friday.

Childress signed a four-year, $8.9 million deal on Sept. 3, but the NFL refused to approve it because it contained a right-of-first refusal clause.

Adams said the revised contract was agreeable to both him and Childress.

Foster out

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers deactivated running back Barry Foster for Sunday's game against the Broncos at Denver.

Foster, who has a sprained left ankle, was one of four players the Steelers dropped from the active roster Friday. The others were rookies: wide receiver Andre Hastings, tight end Craig Keith and guard Lonnie Palelei.

Ewing still out

"He is experiencing muscle spasms in his neck and we're listing him as day-to-day," Knicks spokesman John Cirillo said. "He did not practice with the team on Friday."

Ewing was injured last Friday when Indiana's Rik Smits hit him in the neck during a New York victory over the Pacers.

No, it wasn't an indoor track meet, but Midland's two girls basketball teams were clearing hurdles and barriers on Friday that may take both teams to the next level of competition.

Midland beat District 3-5A perennial power Lubbock Monterey 58-51 and will face Copperas Cove in today's championship at 7:30 p.m. at the Chap Center.

Midland took the lead early and never relinquished it.

MHS junior guard Amy Alcala scored a game-high and season-high 25 points in the win.

Midland Lee coach Elise Kail may have lost the battle Friday night at the Chap Center, but later in District 4-5A play she may win the war.

Kail and Co. gained a measure of confidence despite losing a heartbreaking 48-43 decision to undefeated Copperas Cove in a semifinal matchup.

The Lady Bulldogs (3-0) will move to the finals and play Midland High.

"I was extremely proud of our kids tonight," said Kail. "We finally put together four quarters. Against Wall it was maybe a half and last night against Andrews three quarters."

MCHS to play in 3rd-straight TAPPS final

By Brian Shaw
MRT Correspondent

ABILENE — The Midland Christian Mustangs advanced to the TAPPS six-man state championship game by trouncing the Fort Worth Temple Christian Eagles, 56-6, Friday night at Elmer Gray Stadium.

Midland Christian (10-0) has now won 29 games in row and seven consecutive playoffs.

The game ended when Kyle Jackson scored from 32 yards out, giving the Mustangs the game on the 45-point rule with four minutes left.

The Eagles, who ended their season with a record of 8-3-1, trailed only 14-6 at halftime before the Mustangs exploded for 22 third-quarter points. They scored on six of their seven possessions in the second half, punting once. Only one of those drives took longer than 45 seconds.

Although Temple Christian played strong defense in the first half, it appeared to lose its stamina in the second half. Temple Christian had only 10 players suited up for the game and seven of those played most of the game.

The Eagles failed to make a first down in the second half, and the Mustangs ran the ball at will. The Eagles never moved the ball past their own 34-yard line in the second half and moved the ball midfield only three times during the game, one of those times came when Bob Kirby scored from 49 yards out.

Rankin, Walker run past Petersburg

By Mike Butts
Staff writer

SEMINOLE — Rankin running back Baylor Walker's performance in the Red Devils 18-0 area playoff win over Petersburg mirrors Rankin's up-and-down season.

Walker carried the ball only twice in the first half for one yard in Friday's game. But he came back in the second half to log 11 carries for 95 yards and a key touchdown.

The Red Devils fell from a No. 1 state ranking with two midseason loses. But they now appear poised to make it deep into the Class A state playoffs. Rankin (9-2) plays Hart, 30-20 winners over Munday Friday, in a region round game tentatively set at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium Friday or Saturday.

"It's a personal thing, but he's been telling me he hasn't been getting the ball much," Rankin quarterback Jo Jo Guerra said of Walker. "And I told him when he does get it to run tough and that's what he did tonight."

Rankin dropped completely out of the state's top 10 poll with its two-game losing streak this year. Red Devil coach Raul Sanchez said that might help his team now.

"We're hoping people will overlook us," Sanchez said.

Safety turns game in Mustangs favor

By James David

LUBBOCK In a close game dominated by offense, it came down to a fourth-quarter safety to turn the momentum around for the Andrews Mustangs. The Mustangs went on to defeat the Canyon Randall Raiders 44-29 in a Class 4A area playoff at Texas Tech's Jones Stadium Friday.

Andrews improves to 10-1 on the year, rebounding after last week's 51-40 loss to Sweetwater. It will play Saturday's Brownwood-Fort Worth Eastern Hills winner in the region round next week. Canyon Randall finishes its season at 9-3

Andrews senior linebacker Paul Ryan tackled Randall tailback Brandon Stennett in the endzone with 5:27 left in the fourth quarter to give the momentum back to the Mustangs.

"It (the safety) was definitely the turning point in the game," Ryan said. "I was just glad to be there to make the tackle."

The safety gave Andrews a 29-21 lead, and launched their fourth quarter scoring spree.

The game was close in the first two quarters of play, with Andrews hitting the locker room up by the score of 14-7.

Rose runs for 303 yards in win

Staff report

EL PASO — Senior fullback Mike Rose set a school record of 303 yards rushing here Friday night at the Sun Bowl to lead Abilene Cooper to a huge 61-22 Class 5A Small School area playoff victory over the El Paso Riverside Rangers.

Rose also held the old school rushing mark of 240 yards set earlier this season against Austin High.

Rose did all the dirty work while quarterback Zac Allen put the ball in the end zone. Allen scored four times on short yardage and threw for another touchdown to Jason King. Rose had only one TD.

Cooper (8-3-1) will play Haltom (6-6) in the region round next Saturday at 1 p.m. at Texas Stadium in Irving. Haltom was a 21-14 winner over Flower Mound Marcus on Thursday.

Bowdens seek different goals in final week

Associated Press

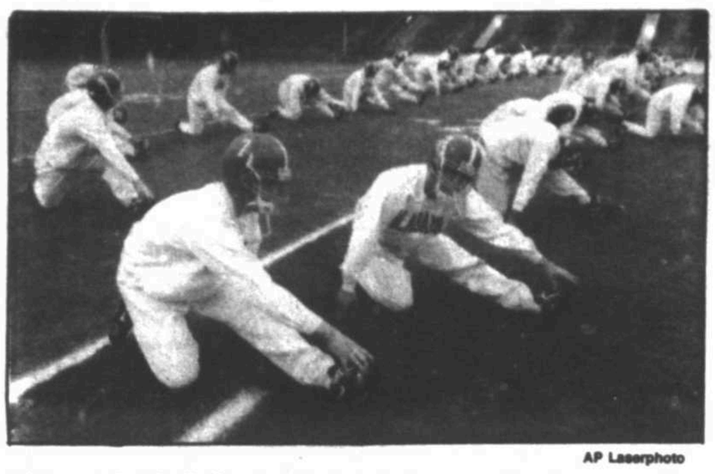
If one Bowden can't go undefeated in college football this season, maybe another can.

Coach Bobby Bowden's hopes for a perfect season ended a week ago at Notre Dame, where the Irish beat Florida State. His son, Terry, is still perfect, though, at 10-0 in his first year at Auburn.

■ Top 25 Roundup

The difference is pop is still in the national championship mix and bowl-bound, while the younger Bowden knows that NCAA sanctions for violations committed under a previous administration will keep his Tigers at home after the regular season ends today.

Both Bowdens will be working the sidelines today. No. 2 Florida State (9-1), is home against North Carolina State (7-3), while Auburn, ranked No. 6, tries to complete a perfect season against No. 11 Alabama (8-1-1).



AP Laserphoto

Elsewhere, No. 1 Notre Dame (10-0) tries to avoid a post-Florida State letdown at home against No. 17 Boston College (7-2); No. 4 Miami (8-1) plays at No. 9 West Virginia (9-0) in a Big East showdown; No. 5 Ohio St. (9-0-1) reaches for the Rose Bowl at Michigan (6-4), with the host role at Pasadena going to the winner of the game between No. 16 UCLA (7-3) and No. 22 Southern Cal (7-4); No. 7 Tennessee (7-1-1) is at Kentucky (6-4); Vanderbilt (4-5) visits No. 8 Florida (8-1), and No. 10 Texas A&M (8-1) is at Texas Christian (4-6).

Also, No. 12 Wisconsin (7-1-1) plays at Illinois (5-5); No. 14 Penn State (7-2) is at Northwestern (2-8); No. 18 Colorado (6-3-1) is at Iowa State (3-7); No. 20 Kansas State (7-2-1) visits Oklahoma State (3-7); No. 21 Indiana (7-3) entertains Purdue (1-9); No. 23 Virginia Tech (7-3) plays at No. 25 Virginia Tech (7-3), and No. 24 Clemson (7-3) is at South Carolina (4-6).

Then there are the traditional end-of-season showdowns including Harvard (3-6) at Yale (2-7) in The Game; California (6-4) at Stanford (4-6) in The Big Game; Minnesota (4-6) vs. Iowa (5-5) for the bronze pig statue called Floyd of Rosedale; Washington (6-4) vs. Washington State (5-5) for the Apple Cup, and Oregon (5-5) vs. Oregon State (3-7) in something unceremoniously called The Civil War.

Tennessee and Kentucky are playing for The Beer Barrel, and the Indiana-Purdue winner takes possession of the Old Oaken Bucket.

Alabama will be Auburn's bowl game and a chance for the younger Bowden to make history. No Division I-A coach has started his career at 11-0. It will not be an easy task, though.

Alabama, the defending national champion, has allowed Auburn only 13 points in the last three meetings between the teams. "This is clearly the best defense we have seen all year," said Bowden, hoping to lead Auburn to only the second perfect season in school history.

Auburn is favored by one point, a fact that does not amuse Alabama coach Gene Stallings.

"All I know is we've lost two games in three years," he said. "I don't know much about the folks that make us underdogs. Most of them don't play. Very few of them have ever coached. Now if coach Bryant told me we were an underdog, I'd run the antenna up."

While the younger Bowden deals with Alabama, his dad tries to restore Florida State's dented psyche against North Carolina State. The Seminoles need wins today and next week against Florida to stay in the middle of the mix for No. 1.

No sooner had Notre Dame beaten Florida State to take over the top spot in the polls than coach Lou Holtz began wringing his hands again, thinking about Boston College. A year ago, the Eagles were No. 9 in the country before Notre Dame, then No. 8, walloped them 54-7. Holtz figures Boston College will be out for revenge and a chance to upset the national championship aspirations for the Irish.

Undefeated West Virginia, bidding for a big-time bowl bid, gets a shot at certifying that at home against Miami. The Hurricanes are still hopeful of moving into position for a shot at the national championship on New Year's Day.

Tech, 'Bam' aim at bowl berth, Campbell's record

Associated Press

Texas Tech has a 1-2 punch planned for the University of Houston in San Antonio's Alamodome today.

The Red Raiders' top priority is a fifth straight victory that would qualify Texas Tech for a bowl game after a 1-5 stumble to start the season.

Secondly, coach Spike Dykes would like Bam Morris to take aim at Earl Campbell's single season Southwest Conference rushing record of 1,744 yards. Morris has 1,529 yards.

Morris, a 6-2, 240-pound junior, got within reach of Campbell's record by gaining 222 yards on a career-high 38 carries in last weekend's 41-24 victory over SMU.

"I think he's one of the best in the country and he's still getting better," Dykes said. "The best is yet to come. He does things that really amaze me."

■ SWC Roundup

Morris needs 216 rushing yards to break Campbell's single season record. Dykes thinks Morris deserves a chance to go for it.

"Earl said he'd give me some sausage if I wouldn't do that," Dykes joked. "Most coaches are the same. Anytime somebody has a chance to break a record, and it doesn't take anything away from the team, you'd try to do that."

Houston (1-7-1, 1-3-1) was vulnerable to the run last week. David Small rushed for 206 yards on 31 carries, leading Cincinnati to a 41-17 victory over the Cougars.

No. 10 Texas A&M (8-1, 5-0) also is seeking a place in the record books against Texas Christian today.

A victory would be the Aggies' 21st consecutive SWC triumph, tying the all-time SWC record for most consecutive league victories set by Texas in 1968-71.

TCU (4-6, 2-4) beat the Texas Longhorns for the first time in 25 years last season. Now the Frogs have a chance to erase a 20-year drought against the Aggies.

"This is a championship game for us," Slocum said. "We win this game and we have a share of the title. That's motivation enough."

What would it be like for TCU coach Pat Sullivan to beat the Aggies?

"What did it mean when David beat Goliath?" Sullivan asked. "They talked about that for 2,000 years. It would be the same thing."

In other games, Baylor (5-5, 3-3) plays at Texas (4-4-1, 4-1) and Southern Methodist (1-7-2, 1-5-1) is at Navy (4-5).

After today, only two regular season games remain on the SWC slate. The Aggies and Texas play Thanksgiving night at Kyle Field and the following morning, Rice, its bowl hopes dashed, is host to Houston at Rice Stadium at 10 a.m.

Baylor and Texas are in a bowl elimination game in Austin and the Bears are on a series role with four victories in the last five games. Amazingly, the Longhorns, despite their worst start in more than 50 years, can still play in the Cotton Bowl with victories over Baylor and the Aggies.

Texas suffered from a rugged early season schedule but coach John Mackovic isn't complaining.

"I've always said a balanced schedule is best," Mackovic said. "It's best not to always be the underdog but your schedule should also have some flavor to it and you have to play good teams to do that."

The Longhorns will get a good look at Baylor's running attack, which is averaging 237 rushing yards per game and ranks 13th nationally.

Baylor will be without running back Robert Strait in its bowl-elimination game against Texas in Austin.

Strait, who scored four touchdowns in the Bears' 38-14 victory over Rice last week, was dismissed from the team on Thursday for the second time this season. Strait also was suspended for the Georgia Tech game for a curfew violation.

Bears coach Chuck Reedy said the latest dismissal was for violating team policies, but he wouldn't elaborate. John Henry will replace Strait in the lineup.

RANKIN: Second half dominance lifts Devils

From 1C

Rankin got six turnovers from Petersburg (8-2-1), but the game stayed close until late in the third partly because Rankin made its own contribution to the Turnover Bowl with an interception and two fumbles. Rankin advances to the region round for the sixth year in a row.

The Buffaloes outrushed Rankin in the first half 82-49. But they failed to take advantage of an excellent scoring opportunity and the Red Devils defense came back in the second half to hold Petersburg to 27 yards rushing and two first downs.

"They just use an awfully good defensive scheme against us," Petersburg coach Joe Robertson said. "We haven't been behing much and they (the players) didn't handle it as well as they could have."

Both teams quarterbacks threw interceptions on their first drives and four turnovers where committed in the first quarter. The Buffaloes recovered a muffed punt by Rankin and marched to the Red Devil 7-yard line when quarterback Brandon Rogers fumbled and Keith Braden recovered.

In the second quarter Petersburg running back Rudy Marquez fumbles at his own 12 and Roy Abalos recovered for Rankin at the 6-yard line. On third down from the five Guerra threw to Jo'EL Armendarez for the game's first touchdown.

After Rankin took over at midfield late in the third period, Walker ran for six yards and then broke up the middle, broke a tackle and burst to the end zone on a counter dive play. Walker carried five time for 28 yards on the Red Devils last touchdown drive, which ended with Guerra sneaking over from the one.

"As long as somebody does it for us it's good," Walker said of his second-half heroics. "We were just trying to get angles on them mostly where we could just open it up and use our quickness."

Abalos is Rankin's leading rusher and carries most of that load for the Red Devils. He had 73 yards on 19 carries, but it was Walker who seamed to wear Petersburg down.

"Baylor is the one that's 190 pounds and he was making four yards a pop so we stayed with him," Sanchez said.

Now the rest of Class 1A will be trying to stay with the Red Devils.

ANDREWS: Mustangs win shootout, 44-29

Randall won the coin toss, and deferred possession until the second half.

The Mustangs were hot early on, scoring on their first two possessions of the game, with quarterback Bryan Lepard engineering a 3-play, 65-yard drive of quarterback keepers, culminating with a 7-yard scamper into the end zone.

Mustang halfback Kevin Lawrence broke away on a tackle breaking 57-yard run on the team's next possession.

The Randall Raiders retaliated with a nine-play, 63-yard drive, capped by an 18-yard Stennett touchdown to bring the Raiders to within seven at the half.

In the third quarter, Randall took the momentum back with an 11-play, 68-yard drive, with quarterback Chad McBrayer trying the score at 14-14 with a 1-yard quarterback sneak.

Andrews was not to be denied. Late in the third quarter, after holding Randall on their one yard line the Mustangs captialized on good field position and Lepard threw a 27-yard touchdown pass to Chris Fisher to give Andrews a 21-14 lead.

Randall went on to tie the game at 21-21 early in the fourth quarter on a 20-yard touchdown strike from McBrayer to Lance Denton, but the safety and ensuing Andrews 23-fourth period points put the game away for Andrews.

It was a very sweet win for Andrews coach W.T. Stapler, who is in his last season of coaching the Mustangs.

"I don't think we won a playoff game at Andrews since 1964," Stapler said. "We played spotty, but we did the things we needed to do."

Lawrence dominated on the ground, rushing for 128 yards on 19 carries and scoring two touchdowns. "It was a great win tonight," Lawrence said. "The line did a great job on their blocks, and we knew we had to win this one for coach Stapler."

MUSTANGS: Gunter leads 45-point rule win

(From 1C)

Midland Christian coach James Blake let Chad Bayley throw some passes in the second half, substituting for starting quarterback Neil Truex. Bayley responded by throwing a 44-yard touchdown pass to Chad Gunter with 8:18 remaining in the fourth quarter.

The Mustangs, who improved to 11-0 with the win, will meet fellow District 1 member El Paso Jesus Chapel, which defeated Dallas Winston 80-46 in the other semifinal, for the state championship next week. The time and place will be determined later.

Gunter scored four touchdowns as he carried the ball 13 times for 81 yards. Jackson carried seven times for 93 yards.

The Mustang defense held Temple Christian to 52 second half yards and allowed no first downs. Midland Christian compiled 300 yards of offense in the second half to seal the victory.

LEE: Underdog Bowie Bears will attempt upset

prepare for since we've seen it all this year. We've just had to get the kids familiar with that kind of attack again."

Bowie is doing cartwheels over being in the area round. It is the first time in the 71-year history of the school that the Bears have advanced in the playoffs. Bowie hasn't been in the playoffs since 1971.

And Bowie coach Ed Reveles promises a no-holds-barred contest.

"In a game like this against a traditional powerhouse, you just have to go all out, go for broke," Reveles said. "You try to do whatever you can do to win the game, whether that means go for it on fourth down or take some big chances.

"When you play a Lee or Permian out of that district, you can never second guess yourself. You take your chances and never look back."

But taking chances won't get the job done if the Lee offense again rides the playoff swell like it did last week in a 63-26 bi-district win over Amarillo High.

Lee pulled out the triple-100 performance while rolling up the 63 points. Quarterback Courtney had his first double-100 with more than 100 yards passing and more than 100 yards throwing. He accounted for four Lee touchdowns and had a 30-yard TD run called back on a holding penalty.

In addition, Lee fullback Jeremy Warren rushed for more than 100 yards. What makes that so impressive is that Lee used the team's two leading rushers, Marlon Henry and Phillip Sims, only sparingly against Amarillo High. If they get unleashed, Bowie could face some major woes.

Bowie has only 29 players listed on its varsity roster and that could play a major role as the game clicks off the minutes. Depth is a major problem for the Bears, who must face a team that pounds from gun-to-gun.

Bowie will live or die offensively with the throwing arm of quarterback Jim Romo, who has thrown for more than 1,200 yards this year to lead all quarterbacks in El Paso, and junior fullback Omar Ochoa, who has rushed for 824 yards. Ochoa had 87 yards rushing against Eastwood and scored the tying touchdown late in the game. Romo is expected to throw at least 25 times, his per game average this year.

Lee is a huge favorite to win the game, but some in El Paso were picking Eastwood to beat Bowie last week by as many as 40 points. It didn't happen.

"We surprised the whole city last week," Reveles said. "You never know what will happen. We feel like the pressure of winning is all on the other team. That can help you."

Lee has never lost a playoff game in which it was favored by 15 or more points. Lee also missed the playoffs last year for the first time in nine seasons, so the Rebels appear to be doing a good job of taking care of business at hand. That could spell trouble for some giddy Bears.

From 1C

three-point shooting. She and Glenda Keeler connected on a pair of treys in the first half while the Lady Bulldog defense kept the ball from Lee's 6-2 post Krissy Woodard who had just four points at the half.

In the second half, Copperas Cove built a seven-point lead, but a technical foul on Doyle started a 5-0 run by Lee to crawl back to within 41-39 with 2:23 to play.

"We had some mental lapses at crucial times, but I thought we played well," said Kail.

Lee (1-2) will play today in the third place game against Monterey.

Before MHS' win over Lubbock Monterey Friday night, the Lady Bulldogs defeated El Paso Burges 58-34. MHS jumped out to 15-2 lead in the first quarter and never looked back. Senior guard Julie Chancellor scored 20 first-half points to lead Midland.

Burges rallied with a 9-0 run midway through the second period to cut the Midland lead to nine, 24-15, but the Mustangs could never draw closer.

MHS held Burges to two field goals during the first 13 minutes of the second half to put the game away.

"We made some adjustments to our press at halftime," said Raughton. "We basically softened up our press."

Petrenko wins Nations on Ice

GELSENKIRCHEN, Germany (AP) — Viktor Petrenko of Ukraine flashed some of his gold medal form Friday and swept to the men's title in the Nations On Ice figure skating tournament.

Petrenko, the 1992 Olympic champion, turned in a strong performance to overcome the lead of American Scott Davis after the technical program.

Russia's Evgenia Shishkova and Vadim Naumov skated a nearly flawless freestyle program to sweep to the pairs championship.

No. 1 Tarheels top No. 19 Cincinnati

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Top-ranked North Carolina used a 12-0 run at the end of the first half to break open a close game and went on to beat No. 19 Cincinnati 90-63 Friday night in the second round of the Preseason NIT.

The Tar Heels (2-0) advance to the tournament semifinals Wednesday at Madison Square Garden against the winner of Saturday's Massachusetts-Towson State game.

■ Top 25 Roundup

Donald Williams, who scored 27 in North Carolina's opener, led the defending national champions with 21 points. It was his sixth straight game scoring at least 20 points. Eric Montross added 16.

Damon Flint, one of three freshman starters, led the Bearcats with 23 points.

The game was a rematch of last year's East Regional final won by the Tar Heels in overtime. And the first 15 minutes were just as close as the Bearcats battled North Carolina on even terms.

No. 9 Kansas 73, No. 6 California 56

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Richard Scott scored 19 points and Steve Woodberry added 14 as No. 9 Kansas withstood a valiant second-half charge and beat No. 6 California 73-56 Friday night in the second round of the Preseason NIT.

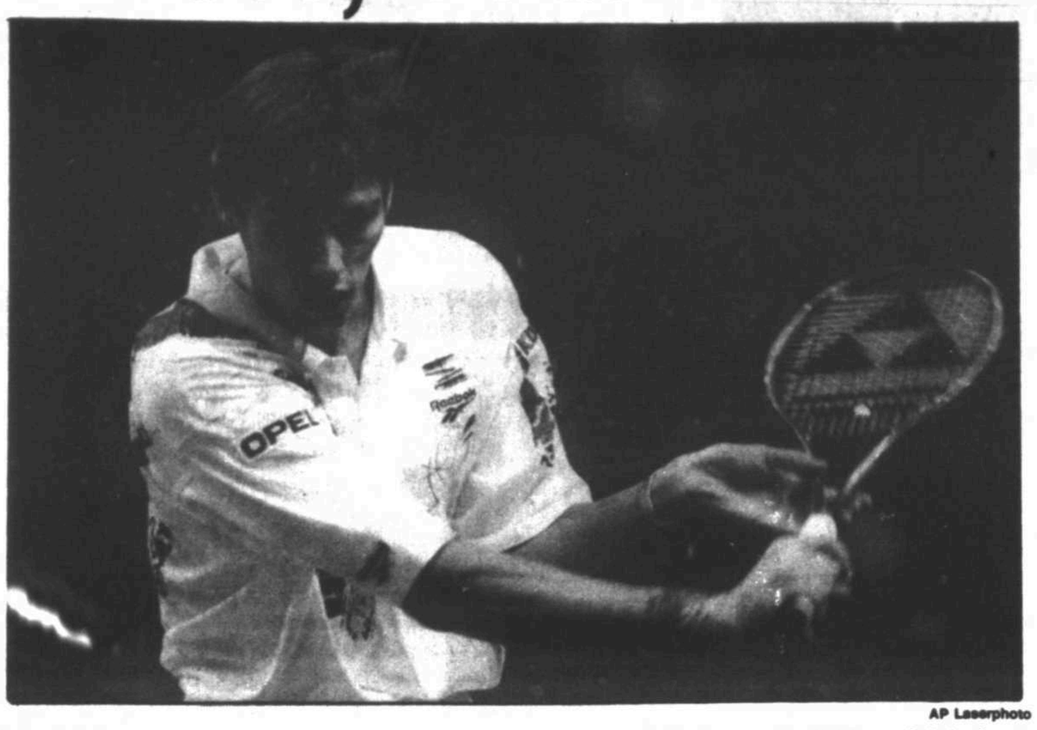
Stich, Ivanisevic set for semis



AP Laserphoto

Michael Stich of Germany returns the serve of American Jim Courier in the ATP Championship quarterfinal match Friday. Stich beat Courier 7-5, 6-4 to reach today's semifinal.

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Goran Ivanisevic fired 20 aces and beat Stefan Edberg for the sixth time in a row to reach the semifinals of the ATP Tour World Championship on Friday.

Ivanisevic won the error-filled match 7-6 (7-3), 6-7 (5-7), 6-3 and will meet Michael Stich in today's semifinals.

"Whenever he came close, I hit an ace," Ivanisevic said after reaching the semifinals for the second straight year.

Edberg, the tournament champion in 1989, served nine double-faults, had only three aces and hit 35 winners to Ivanisevic's 59. The Croatian also had 27 service winners to Edberg's 4.

Pete Sampras, the top-ranked player in the world and the 1991 tournament champion, will face Andrei Medvedev in the second semifinal.

Stich beat Jim Courier 7-5, 6-4 and will replace the American as No. 2 in the world if he wins the tournament.

Stich had a 3-0 match record in leading his group while Courier, second in this event the last two years, dropped to 0-3.

■ ATP Championship

Earlier Friday, Sampras beat Sergi Bruguera 6-3, 1-6, 6-3 in a match that had no impact on the final group standings in the round-robin portion of the tour-ending, $2.75 million event.

Sampras led his group with a 3-0 record and Ivanisevic is 2-1.

The tournaments pits the top eight players in the world, split into two groups. The top two from each group advance, and three semifinal berths had been decided before Friday.

In the only match that really counted, Ivanisevic again needed smelling salts early in the second set to ease his breathing, suffering from the same problem that plagued him in Thursday's win over Bruguera.

"I was breathing with difficulty and it made me dizzy, but it only lasted for a couple of games," the eighth-ranked Croatian said. "I was OK after that."

Ivanisevic was the final player to qualify for the tournament, and was helped by Sampras' semifinal victory over Cedric Pioline at Antwerp last week.

"I spent last week sweating in front of the TV and now I am in the semifinals," he said. "I lost to Boris Becker last year ... "

Stich has been carrying Germany's hopes, after Becker failed to qualify for the tournament he won last year.

Ivanisevic started with an ace, setting the tone for the entire match. He broke for a 5-3 lead, and was serving for the set, only to allow Edberg to break back at love.

In the tiebreaker, an Edberg double-fault and an ace gave Ivanisevic three set points and he got the first when the Swede hit a return into the net.

A similar pattern followed in the second set. Ivanisevic broke for a 5-4 lead, served for the match and was broken instead.

In the tiebreaker, he hit a simple overhead smash into the net, giving Edberg two set points. He saved one, but Edberg evened the score with a service winner.

The key break came in the eighth game of the third set, when Ivanisevic took a 5-3 lead. This time he made no mistakes, serving out the match at love, after one hour, 57 minutes.

Ex-Ranger Holcomb honored

By Bill Petitt
Staff writer

Most players and coaches would not admit, but the revenge factor plays a big part of one's motivation against opponents.

Former Greenwood standout Sean Holcomb admits that a little revenge was part of the fire burning that led the Texas A&M-Kingsville defensive end to Lone Star Conference player of the week honors last Saturday and helped his team win a spot in the NCAA Division II playoffs today against Portland (Ore). State.

"Yeah I really wanted to play well against (Angelo State)," said Holcomb. "Revenge did play a part of it. After going there and the way I left I really wanted to show them I could play. I had a personal vendetta against them."

Holcomb, recorded 13 tackles, nine unassisted and four sacks for 43 yards in losses against his former teammates Angelo State in the Javelinas' 16-7 win at Kingsville that earned them a rematch against Portland State in the playoffs. Portland, ranked fifth in the final NCAA poll and seeded first in the West Region, defeated the Javelinas 22-17 in the third game of the year.

Holcomb is playing for Texas A&M-Kingsville for the second time after a brief stint at Angelo State.

Holcomb finished at Greenwood in 1989 and went to TAMUK his freshman season.

He was redshirted his rookie season and after the fall season, return to Greenwood. "I was homesick," said Holcomb.

Holcomb walked on at Angelo State in the spring on 1991. Holcomb had broken an ankle while in Greenwood and the injury bothered him during practice. He suffered a torn knee ligament and didn't have a good spring practice. Holcomb said, the Angelo State coaches didn't encourage him to return in the fall and he returned to Kingsville.

"The lord has a way of doing things you really don't understand," said Holcomb "but it has worked out for the best and I wouldn't change it for anything."

As a sophomore, Holcomb earned all-conference honors after averaging 4.3 tackles per game and led the team in sacks with eight and had a fumble recovery.

Sanchez Vicario rallies for win

NEW YORK (AP) — Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, nearly on the verge of elimination, rallied Friday night to defeat Jana Novotna and grab a spot in the semifinals of the Virginia Slims Championships.

Getting stronger and more determined the longer they played, the second-seeded Spaniard toppled Novotna 6-7 (2-7), 7-6 (7-2), 6-4 in a match that took 2 hours, 57 minutes at Madison Square Garden.

Sanchez Vicario will play Mary Pierce in today's second semifinal. The unseeded Pierce reached the semifinals in her first trip to this season-ending tournament by upsetting four-time winner Martina Navratilova on Thursday night.

The first semifinal has top-seeded Steffi Graf against No. 8 Anke Huber. In Friday's first match, Huber made it an all-German semifinal by defeating fourth-seeded Conchita Martinez 6-3, 6-3.

It was a rare victory over Novotna for Sanchez Vicario, who has lost eight of 12 career meetings. But this one was sweeter, considering from how far back she had to come.

Although Novotna, one of the best all-court players on the women's tour, and Sanchez Vicario battled evenly through the first two sets, that parity was only on the scoreboard. Novotna appeared to be in control while Sanchez Vicario struggled.

■ Virginia Slims

Appearances were deceiving.

There were four service breaks in the first set and two more in the second. Each time one broke serve, the other broke right back.

Novotna controlled the first-set tiebreak, but it was Sanchez Vicario who was starting to control the match.

Novotna had to fight through five deuces to hold serve in the fifth game of the middle set. She was taken to deuce again in her next service game, but still managed to hold.

The first four points in the second-set tiebreak went against serve. That was when the Spanish right-hander took control.

She won the next five points to capture the tiebreak, then took the lead in the third set for good by breaking Novotna in the seventh game, the final point a forehand cross-court passing shot that ticked off Novotna's racket.

Huber and Martinez engaged in long baseline engagements, sending powerful groundstrokes to the outer edges of the court. If the points were long, the games were longer as the two evenly matched competitors kept battling to deuce.

Martinez had the bigger serve, a stroke that would have worked perfectly to set up a serve-and-volley game. Instead, the Spaniard retreated to her regular spot behind the baseline and worked her way into the point. Huber retaliated by slamming her grunt-assisted strokes deep into the corners, keeping Huber on the run.

The match was halted briefly in the second set when Martinez asked for and received medical attention when her back muscles tightened up. After a brief massage, the match resumed.

The loss ended the best year for Martinez, who had victories over Gabriela Sabatini, Navratilova, Mary Joe Fernandez and Graf, the latter Sunday in the final of the Virginia Slims of Philadelphia.

"I have a lot of confidence when I play against her," said Huber, who has never lost to Martinez in four meetings. "It makes it a lot easier."

Ferguson wins split over Mercer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — At the final bell, Jesse Ferguson said to Ray Mercer: "Nice fight, Ray." Mercer said nothing.

This time, Mercer let his fists do the talking as he won a 10-round split decision in his heavyweight rematch with Ferguson Friday night in a ballroom at the Convention Center.

The next time the two men will see one another will be in New York State Surpeme Court in Manhattan, where Mercer will go on trial Dec. 6 on a charge of attempting to bribe Ferguson to lose their first fight. Ferguson will be a prosecution witness.

Mercer, a flabby 238 pounds when he lost a unanimous decision to Ferguson on Feb. 6, came in at a trim 223 Friday night and his conditioning paid off in the late rounds.

The 32-year-old Mercer appeared in control in the first four rounds but then Ferguson came on in the next three with several good head and body punches. Mercer also was penalized a point in the sixth round for hitting low and Ferguson was given 30 seconds to recuperate by referee Tony Orlando.

Then in the eighth and ninth rounds Mercer jabbed and moved and took the momentum away from Ferguson, 232¼.

After the seventh round, the two men punched after the bell and when Mercer turned to go back to his corner, Ferguson hit him. In the 10th round, Ferguson hit the referee with a light left hook to the forehead. No damage was done.

While both men landed some hard shots, neither was in danger of going down, but Ferguson was cut over the left eye and it was swollen.

The Manhattan district attorney's office says certain videotapes of the first fight will prove that Mercer several times during the match offered Ferguson $100,000 to lose.

The loss in the first fight cost Mercer a $1.5 million challenge to then-champion Riddick Bowe. Instead, Ferguson fought Bowe for $500,000 and was knocked out in the second round on May 22.

Mercer, now fighting out of Indianapolis, is 23-2 with 16 knockouts. Ferguson, of Philadelphia, lost for the 11th time against 20 victories, 14 of them knockouts.

Miller shoots course record to lead Mitsubishi

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Alice Miller matched the course record with a 4-under-par 67 Friday to take a two-shot lead after two rounds of the Mitsubishi Motors Invitational Pro-Am.

Danielle Ammaccapane posted a first-round 67 over the Stonecreek course in Paradise Valley and followed that with a par round of 72 at Tatum Ranch to hold second alone at 139.

"Coming into this tournament, I just didn't want to embarrass myself," said Miller, an eight-time champion who hasn't won since the 1991 Jamie Farr Toledo Classic. That also was the last time she had the final-round lead.

Miller had five birdies and one bogey.

Celtics stay hot with win over Shaq, Magic

Associated Press

BOSTON — Kevin Gamble scored 14 points in the third quarter when the Boston Celtics pulled away, overcoming a 41-point performance by Shaquille O'Neal for a 115-106 victory over the Orlando Magic on Friday night.

■ NBA Roundup

Gamble, who finished with 18 points, got the first four baskets of a 10-0 run and the last three of a 14-5 spurt in the third period. Boston hit 18 of 23 shots as it outscored Orlando 36-21 in the quarter after trailing 58-57 at halftime.

76ers 124, Jazz 116

PHILADELPHIA — With Orlando Woolridge scoring 25 points in only his third game for Philadelphia, the 76ers scored 100 points for the first time this season to beat Utah.

Jeff Hornacek scored 23 points and Dana Barros and Clarence Weatherspoon 17 each for Philadelphia, while Warren Kidd grabbed 11 rebounds and scored 12 points.

Hawks 95, Heat 92

MIAMI — Dominique Wilkins scored 21 points, including a running hook in the lane that give Atlanta the lead for good with 2:10 left against Miami.

The basket gave Wilkins his only points in the fourth quarter, but it was enough to help the Hawks win their third straight game. Kevin Willis led Atlanta with 23 points, while Rony Seikaly had 19 points and 15 rebounds for the Heat.

Suns 118, Trail Blazers 109

PHOENIX — A.C. Green scored 31 points, two off his career high, and Kevin Johnson had 27 points and 16 assists, helping Phoenix weather another bout of poor free-throw shooting in a victory over Portland.

Clyde Drexler scored 29 points and Cliff Robinson 18 for Portland.

SuperSonics 116, Mavericks 87

SEATTLE — Shawn Kemp scored 24 points and unbeaten Seattle had 16 steals en route to its seventh straight victory over Dallas.

The SuperSonics and Houston (8-0) are the NBA's only two teams without a loss. Gary Payton added 17 points for Seattle, which has six of its victories at home.

Pistons 95, Spurs 86

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars scored 12 of his 24 points in the final seven minutes, leading Detroit to a victory over San Antonio.

The game marked Dennis Rodman's first game against the Pistons, who he played with for the first seven years of his career.

Rodman was ejected with 1:40 to play after picking up his second technical, finishing with eight points and 14 rebounds.

Barkley refuses apology, denies hitting fan in face

PHOENIX (AP) — Charles Barkley, in his own inimitable way, rejected Friday night a fan's offer not to press charges over a cut lip if Barkley apologized.

"I'd rather go to a Klan meeting with a Malcolm X hat on than apologize," Barkley said while dressing for a game against Portland. "I'm not apologizing. And I will give his daughter an autograph if he's not there. We don't apologize in Alabama unless we do things wrong."

Barkley also denied the claim that Edward Durham of Glendale made in a police report — that Barkley hit him in the face, cutting his lip. Barkley said he did not throw a punch.

Durham, 36, a self-professed Barkley fan, said he received the negligible injury in a scuffle early Thursday at Stixx — an upscale Scottsdale bar and pool hall.

"I know he's a good man inside," Durham told The Arizona Republic on Thursday. "I don't think he's a bad person. But he just has a temper problem, and that temper will get him in trouble someday.

"I couldn't understand why he just flipped like that. It was just like watching him on the basketball court when he gets out of hand."

Scottsdale police said Friday they had spoken with Barkley by telephone and wanted a face-to-face follow-up Monday to investigate Durham's sworn complaint against the NBA's current MVP.

Durham said the altercation began after a woman approached Barkley for an autograph and photo and was rebuffed by the 6-foot-6, 252-pound forward, who allegedly swore at her and threatened to kick her.

The 6-2, 210-pound Durham, who was waiting to get Barkley's autograph for his 5-year-old daughter, said he overheard the comment and said, "You don't talk to ladies like that."

After an exchange of obscenities, Barkley allegedly charged Durham and punched him in the mouth. Durham said he suffered swollen lips and a damaged tooth.

"I think it was a war of words, and he didn't like being scolded in public," Durham said. "I took him down, tackled him. I never hit him. I didn't get the chance."

Two Stixx employees broke up the scuffle and Barkley immediately left the area, according to police, who were called to the scene by Durham about a half-hour after the 12:45 a.m. incident.

If an investigation substantiates Durham's story, Keeley said Barkley could be charged with misdemeanor assault.

The decision whether to prosecute would be up to the Maricopa County Attorney's Office.

Suns president Jerry Colangelo said he had no plans to take action against Barkley.

McDowell involved in brawl with singer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 1993 Cy Young Award winner was not throwing pitches outside a bar in the French Quarter. Jack McDowell was out drinking with Eddie Vedder, the lead singer for the grunge rock group Pearl Jam, when a brawl sent him to the hospital and Vedder to jail.

McDowell was taken to Charity Hospital where the back of his head was stitched up after the melee.

The fight occurred at The Crystal, a trendy rock music dance club with a youthful clientele favoring black-on-black outfits and multi-colored hair.

"I haven't talked to him today," McDowell's father, Jim, said by telephone from California on Friday. "He was going to fly back to Chicago. What happened still has to be sorted out. Someone's popping off down there about cold-cocking Jack, I understand."

Police said a fight started after someone walking past Vedder's entourage made a remark Vedder did not like. James Gorman claimed the fight was started when Vedder attacked him.

"He spit on me for no reason," Gorman said. "He grabbed me by my throat and started pushing me and that's when things went wild."

The fight began about 4:45 a.m. Thursday. Witnesses said Vedder, noticeably intoxicated, approached Gorman on the sidewalk outside the bar and began verbally abusing him. The tirade led to some pushing and shoving, and when people tried to intervene, Vedder spit on Gorman and the brawl began, police said.

Vedder told police a group of men began punching him and some friends, including McDowell.

McDowell apparently became embroiled in the fight when he grabbed Gorman from behind and the two fell.

Anthony Martinez, the bouncer at The Crystal, said that he knocked McDowell out after the 27-year-old pitcher jumped up and returned to the fight.

McDowell fell and was unconscious for several minutes, police said witnesses told them.

"He was conscious when they took him to the hospital," Sgt. Marlon Defillo said. "He was OK. A couple of stitches and a cut lip, that's all."

No charges were filed against McDowell. Vedder was charged with public intoxication and fighting, misdemeanors.

Free agent Johnson quits Mets for Rockies

DENVER (AP) — Howard Johnson, one of six active players to hit 200 homers and steal 200 bases, became the first free agent to sign with another team this offseason, agreeing Friday to a one-year contract with the Colorado Rockies.

The switch-hitting Johnson, who turns 33 on Nov. 29, is a veteran of 11 major-league seasons, the last nine with the New York Mets.

Johnson has displayed an impressive combination of power and speed, averaging 31 homers, 95 RBIs and 32 stolen bases from 1987-91. He was known for his durability during that span, averaging 154 games a season. His best season was 1991, when he led the National League with 39 homers and 117 RBIs, batting .259 and stealing 30 bases.

However, his production slipped dramatically the last two seasons, primarily because of injuries.

In 1992, his year ended on July 28 with a broken right wrist. While recovering, doctors also repaired his left shoulder and both of his knees. He hit just .223 with seven homers and 43 RBIs in 100 games that year.

Last year, Johnson hit .238 with seven homers and 26 RBIs in just 72 games. He spent part of the year on the disabled list because of a viral infection that made him weak and dizzy, and his season ended on July 22 when he broke his right thumb.

Johnson, who has played third base, shortstop and all three outfield positions, likely will start in left field next season. He might be tried at first base if the Rockies are unsuccessful in re-signing Andres Galarraga, the National League's leading hitter last year (.370).

"Howard puts the ball in the air, which should play awfully well in the thin air at Mile High Stadium and later at Coors Field," Rockies general manager Bob Gebhard said. "This gives us some insurance and gives our fans a power hitter to put in the middle of the lineup."

Manager Don Baylor called Johnson "an ideal fit for our organization. He plays the game hard, and he's what we were looking for — a guy who can produce. He's also a switch-hitter, which gives us some flexibility. Howard fills a void on our team. We really don't have a power hitter from the left side."

Johnson said critics who have written off his career are mistaken.

"Believe me, the last two seasons are two I'd like to forget," he said.

Dodgers trade Martinez

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers, looking to speed up their lineup, acquired Montreal second baseman Delino DeShields in a trade Friday night that sent pitcher Pedro Martinez to the Expos.

DeShields, 24, hit .295 with 43 stolen bases last season. In four full years in the majors, he has averaged 47 steals and has batted .277.

Jody Reed, 31, played second base for the Dodgers last season and batted .276 with one steal. He became a free agent following the World Series and has said he was hurt that the Dodgers have not made much of an effort to re-sign him.

"I believe that in Delino DeShields we have acquired one of the finest young second basemen in major league baseball," Dodgers general manager Fred Claire said. "He gives our ballclub great speed, and will help us both offensively and defensively."

DeShields was Montreal's leadoff hitter last season until injuring his left thumb in August, which sidelined him for five weeks. He made $1,537,500 in 1993 and is eligible for salary arbitration.

Martinez, 22, was 10-5 with a 2.61 ERA in 65 games last season, all but two of them in relief. It was his first full year in the majors and he pitched 107 innings and struck out 119.

■ More Sports/ 12C

The Expos, however, intend to make Martinez a starter.

"Pedro is one of the top young arms in the National League," Expos general manager Dan Duquette said. "His addition will bolster our pitching rotation. Our staff feels he will quickly develop into a front-line starter."

Martinez made $114,000 last season. He is not eligible for arbitration until after the 1995 season.

Martinez's brother, Ramon, is a starter for the Dodgers.

Palermo makes tough call

BOSTON (AP) — His life has always revolved around choices with a clear outcome — ball or strike, fair or foul, safe or out. Former umpire Steve Palermo's toughest call now has him heading for an uncertain future.

Palermo, partially paralyzed by a mugger's bullet in Dallas two years ago, faced neurosurgery Friday on his spinal cord in an attempt to regain full use of his left leg and return to umpiring.

Surgeons weren't going to know if they could repair damaged nerves until after they had begun the operation, which could last up to 10 hours.

If successful, they won't know for months whether Palermo will walk normally again. If unsuccessful, there's a chance of undoing months of grueling rehabilitation and leaving him permanently crippled.

"It's a very delicate operation because you're so close to the spinal cord," Palermo said. "It's like having bubble gum balled up in your hair, and trying to remove all the gum without disturbing any of the hair."

Palermo was shot outside Campisi's restaurant in Dallas on July 7, 1991, while trying to rescue two waitresses being attacked in the parking lot of the popular Italian eatery. He had umpired a Texas Rangers game in Arlington hours earlier.

The mugger got a long prison sentence. Palermo got a bullet through the spine that left doctors saying he would never walk again.

Palermo, 43, who still has metal fragments in his body, has waged a relentless battle to regain full use of his legs. Through painful rehabilitation and sheer will power, he has recovered enough to walk — haltingly and clumsily, at times — with the aid of canes.

But that has not been good enough for Palermo, who vows he will umpire again.

On Opening Day 1992, the resident of Overland Park, Kan., walked with crutches to the mound at Royals Stadium and threw out the first ball of the season. As he headed off the field, he drew a line in the dirt behind home plate with his foot.

"That is one half of the X that I will make to mark my return to the baseball field again," he said. "I will be behind home plate again."

Despite excellent recovery on his right side, his left side remains weak and his progress has stalled in the last year. About six months ago, doctors suggested the highly unusual surgery, similar to that done on infants born with nerve abnormalities.

Palermo spent the past few weeks agonizing over the decision. He underwent countless tests — MRIs, CAT scans, bone scans — but doctors said they would only be able to fully assess his nerve damage with surgery.

He finally decided to have the surgery at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester, and flew to his parents' home in Oxford, Mass., last weekend to prepare for the operation.

Dr. Arthur Pappas, an orthopedic surgeon and the team physician for the Boston Red Sox, was to assist in the operation. He said the spinal surgery would be done through microscopes. A scalpel would scrape the scar tissue.

"The nerves on the left side of the spinal cord at the lower part of his back are encased by scar tissue," he said. "What has to be determined is if they are intact or disrupted.

"If the nerves are disrupted, there is very little that can be done. If they are intact, it is a matter of removing the scar tissue around the nerves to provide for the impulses to be transmitted from the nerves and to the muscles in his left leg.

"I don't know if this exact operation has been done anywhere."

Palermo knows the risks and the long odds. But he is intent on returning to baseball, and everything that goes with it.

"I'd like to be able to hear some boos directed at me," he said. "That would mean I'm back at work. That would be nice."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Fresh demands will be made on your energies. Turn to your mate or partner when you need an extra boost early in 1994. Be prudent when wielding the tools of your trade or profession. A careless move or comment could jeopardize something important. A health routine you adopt next spring will put you in mint condition for the summer. Fall of '94 is the ideal time to travel. If possible, combine business with pleasure.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Bo Derek, football player Mark Gastineau, journalist Judy Woodruff, comedian Dick Smothers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Encourage dialogues with VIPs today. You will win favorable publicity and an important meeting of minds. Stylish attire adds to your considerable allure. Everything seems to be going like clockwork at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not try to be a know-it-all. Give others a chance to display their knowledge and expertise. Keep your wits about you when using public transportation. Vigilance is essential.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Authority figures take special note of you today. Your singular skills are appreciated. A candid talk sets the stage for new financial rewards. Have a heart-to-heart talk with mate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You handle your responsibilities with aplomb, winning the respect of those who really count. As your status grows, so may your income. Do not let a family member take unfair advantage of people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Curb your impatience when dealing with authority figures. Recognition may not come as quickly as you hoped. Your special skills still carry plenty of weight. The passage of time aids your cause.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Again, you may feel torn between taking a tortoise or a hare approach to personal affairs. A non-move may be better than an ill-considered one. Romance holds a pleasant surprise this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Although emotions run high today, you are able to communicate effectively on all levels. The depth of your feelings impresses those whose opinion you value.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Move away from negative people who think only about their own desires. Share your expertise with others. Participating in a community project wins you new friends and admirers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your relationship with someone is strictly on the up-and-up. Outsiders may assume otherwise if you show your admiration too plainly. Be discreet. Concentrate on facts, figures and finances now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A new business proposition could work out well if you are willing to tackle all the financial details involved. Straighten out a small misunderstanding before it becomes a full-blown problem.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not get so caught up in details that you lose sight of your main objective. Ignoring a partner's wishes would be a mistake. Do something nice for your in-laws.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Iron out any kinks in an agreement before departing on a trip. Return phone calls promptly or you could miss out on a gala event. Strive to become a better listener at home.

Kennedy estate goes on the market for $7 million

PALM BEACH, Fla. — The Kennedy estate, famed as JFK's winter White House and darkened by the William Kennedy Smith sex scandal, went on the market Friday for $7 million.

"The Kennedy family has always enjoyed going to Palm Beach," said Bryan R. Dunn, a Kennedy family spokesman in New York City.

"They have a rich and long tradition of going down there. But it makes sense to sell the property now," Dunn said.

The Mediterranean-style, seaside mansion was built in 1923 and purchased 10 years later by Joseph P. Kennedy. It has six bedrooms and 8,500 square feet.

President Kennedy used the two-acre estate as a winter resort. More recently, Patricia Bowman alleged that Smith, the nephew of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, sexually assaulted her there in March 1991. Smith was acquitted.

The sale is "wholly unrelated" to the allegations and the trial of Smith, Dunn said.

DURHAM, N.C. — Get Walter Cronkite rewrite, but hold the adjectives!

The granddaddy of CBS news said happy talk in place of hard-hitting network coverage belittles the intelligence of viewers.

"Part of it is understandable," Cronkite said in Friday's editions of The Herald-Sun of Durham. "They've been trying, in view of CNN, to recapture their role somewhat."

CNN's 24-hour news coverage has meant that news won't hold until evening newscasts, so network executives have emphasized lighter stories, Cronkite said. And newspapers and magazines followed suit.

He prefers a just-the-facts-ma'am approach, "abjuring adjectives and adverbs. I don't really need those."

Cronkite will be in Durham over the weekend for a gala to promote the Duke University Eye Center.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Basketball's Charles Barkley is back in trouble over a bar brawl.

The Phoenix Suns forward was accused of slugging Edward Durham early Thursday after allegedly cursing two women who tried to talk to Barkley.

Durham, 36, said he told Barkley, "You don't talk to ladies like that." After more words flew, the burly former prison guard added: "I used to have a lot of respect for you."

At that, the 30-year-old Barkley allegedly charged Durham and punched him in the mouth. Police were investigating.

"I've always said, and I'm always going to say I'm going to defend myself verbally and physically," Barkley said. "Just because I'm Charles Barkley, I don't have to take crap off of people."

Suns President Jerry Colangelo said he planned no action.

In April, Barkley allegedly poured beer on a woman who tore up his autograph after he refused to sign more than one piece of paper for her. No charges were filed.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Sally Jessy Raphael's act didn't play well with a judge presiding over an invasion-of-privacy lawsuit against the talk show host.

After Raphael asked several questions of lawyers from the witness stand, Circuit Judge Melinda Morris said: "Put yourself in the position of people you ask questions of on a show. Wait until you are asked. Otherwise we'll be here tomorrow and the next day.

"The next time, I will take action."

In her testimony Thursday, Raphael said she had nothing to do with a decision to air a secretly recorded conversation on her show.

Raphael and others are being sued by Dorothy Dickerson, who belongs to the Church of Scientology.

Dickerson, 61, is heard saying on the tape that she earned $5,000 from her church job and loved to wash dishes for the church.

When angry parents tell their children, "Go to your room!" they may be presenting them with a cherished opportunity.

In a Metropolis magazine survey in which 350 people were asked, "When you think back to your childhood, what room do you remember most fondly?" most named their bedrooms.

Why?

Most answers were on the order of, "It was mine," "It was where I could be myself," and "It was where I could be alone and me."

The same survey found, however, that among adults, the bedroom is no longer the favorite room.

Adults have other choices for shelter and protection, says the magazine. When bedrooms are filled with exercise equipment, video equipment, reading matter and telephone, they no longer serve as personal retreats.

In the transition, writes Akiko Busch, places we would go for our most private moments of introspection have disappeared.

"We make (the bedroom) into a home office, a movie theater or a gym, always seeking to turn our investigation of the self away from being a solitary pursuit," says Busch.

Cleveland fans get first shot at Belichick

Associated Press

■ NFL Roundup

On Sunday, many in a crowd approaching 80,000 are likely to let him know how they feel about the ouster of the most popular Brown since Jimmy. It will be Cleveland's first home game since since the cut.

So much for the homefield advantage.

The Kosar controversy, plus the terrible performance of replacement quarterback Todd Philcox in the Browns' 22-5 loss last Sunday at Seattle, has Cleveland fans in an uproar.

It could get ugly.

"I thought about that," running back Eric Metcalf said. "In some cases there will be fans who are against us."

But Metcalf, whose two touchdowns on kick returns Oct. 24 provided the spark when Cleveland beat Pittsburgh — before things began to unravel for the 5-4 Browns — said there is one way to keep the crowd from helping the visiting Houston Oilers.

"If we're playing well, I imagine the fans will be behind us," he said. "They usually are.

"At the same time, that's something we can't worry about right now. We need to take care of our business ..."

New Orleans visits San Francisco Monday night.

Phoenix and Seattle are idle.

For the Browns to win, Philcox — now subbing for injured starter Vinny Testaverde — will have to play much better than against the Seahwaks. In that game, he completed only nine of 20 passes for 85 yards, with no touchdowns and two interceptions.

On his first play, Philcox fumbled, and Seattle's Robert Blackmon returned it for a touchdown.

Ratings in the Cleveland television market showed about as many viewers watched Kosar help lead his new team, the Dallas Cowboys, to victory over Phoenix last Sunday as watched Seattle beat the Browns.

A Cleveland department store placed a large ad in a daily newspaper this week to announce that Cowboys jerseys bearing Kosar's name and No. 18 were on sale for only $35 "while supplies last."

The Browns, after a 5-2 start, are struggling. The Oilers are going in the opposite direction after losing four of their first five games. They are riding a four-game winning streak, with their worst performance a 24-14 victory two weeks ago against Seattle.

"The harder you work, the luckier you get," Oilers coach Jack Pardee said. "We weren't very good, but we just kept working on the things it takes to win in this league."

Ironically, one of the big reasons for Houston's resurgence is wide receiver Webster Slaughter, another popular former Brown. He leads the AFC with 58 receptions. A few big catches Sunday are certain to elici howls of discontent from Cleveland Stadium's famous Dogpound.

Two division races, the NFC Central and the AFC West, could be blown wide open Sunday.

Detroit (7-2) is on a four-game winning streak, and a victory over Green Bay coupled with a loss by Minnesota at Tampa Bay, would give the Lions a three-game lead with only six games remaining.

Kansas City (7-2) again plans to rest Joe Montana, hoping his pulled hamstring will be sufficiently healed to start against AFC East co-leader Buffalo next week. By beating Chicago, the Chiefs would hold a three-game lead in the AFC West should Denver lose to Pittsburgh and the Raiders lose to San Diego.

Cincinnati is expected to remain the league's only winless team, but despite the recent fine play of the Jets (5-4), history shows how poorly they have done in so-called walkover games:

Last season, New England was 1-9 when it beat the Jets en route to a 2-14 finish. In 1991, Indianapolis was 1-15, its victory coming against the Jets.

Unleashing the big guns

Showdown looms between Eastwood, Costner, Williams

By John Horn
AP Entertainment Writer

■ Midland's UA Cine 4 will show a sneak preview of the Robin Williams' comedy, "Mrs. Doubtfire" tonight at 7:30.

LOS ANGELES — You'd think that with superstars Clint Eastwood and Kevin Costner paired for the first time, producer Mark Johnson would be thrilled with next week's debut of "A Perfect World."

But in the crowded and intensely competitive holiday film season, sure things don't always turn out to be sure things and Johnson is nervous. He's already predicting that "A Perfect World" may be overshadowed by Robin Williams in the comedy role of a lifetime: in drag as "Mrs. Doubtfire."

"It will definitely win the Thanksgiving weekend," Johnson says of the Williams film. "It will beat us out — I'm sure it will."

The next few weeks are crammed with Academy Award-caliber films ("Schindler's List") aiming high, sequels ("Wayne's World II") aiming low and a jumble of works ("The Pelican Brief") in between.

The box-office clash is especially intense Wednesday, when 20th Century Fox's "Mrs. Doubtfire" goes head-to-head with Warner Bros.' "A Perfect World" and three other major studio releases. The Thanksgiving weekend winner could go on to dominate the box-office charts until year's end.

"Mrs. Doubtfire" casts Williams as the father of three on the losing side of a custody battle. He disguises himself as a plump, aging English nanny who promptly is hired by his estranged wife (Sally Field) to watch the youngsters.

Once scheduled for a Dec. 10 debut, "Mrs. Doubtfire" was moved up to the day before Thanksgiving after the studio showed the film to recruited test audiences.

Make room for another weirdo

■ With the release of "Addams Family Values," movie-goers finally have a sequel which is funnier than the original.

By Hillel Italie

The first "Addams Family" movie was a major success, but seemed less a movie than an extended parody. Much of the excitement came in the first few minutes, just at watching how much the actors resembled the more famous TV and cartoon characters. Having assembled an ideal cast, no one seemed to know what to do with it.

"Addams Family Values," the sequel, also fails to live up to feature-

Dave's happy again

■ Three months after debuting opposite Jay Leno, the folks at "Late Show With David Letterman" are amazed at the amount of success the program has experienced.

By Frazier Moore
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — If you catch David Letterman without a grin on his face, don't worry: He's just pinching himself to prove the last three months weren't a dream.

Letterman

"We're surprising ourselves with how much fun we're having," says the star of CBS' smash "Late Show."

He isn't alone.

"I expected these first few months to be hell," says executive producer Robert Morton, "and it hasn't been at all."

"Better than I ever hoped for," says executive producer Peter Lassally.

"I'm just amazed," says CBS President Howard Stringer.

Amazing is the word, inasmuch as Dave worked his magic initially with only two-thirds of CBS' affiliates airing him "live" at 11:35 p.m. EST.

"We're at a vast disadvantage, for the time being," Letterman worried last August as he prepared to butt heads with Jay Leno on NBC's "Tonight

'My Life' doesn't stand a ghost of a chance

By Bob Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Life is too short. "My Life" wasted too much of mine.

The film's prosaic title offers fair warning. In trying to make this hard-to-market, terminal illness melodrama as universal as possible, writer-director Bruce Joel Rubin has succeeded only in making it drably generic. The result, when it's not ludicrously schmaltzy, is the cinematic equivalent of rigor mortis.

There is one saving grace: Michael Keaton's starring performance, a solid display of impacted emotions and blessed comic relief. The story's corny, witless circumstances never challenge him with anything too complicated or honest, but at least Keaton brings a sense of purpose to the proceedings that the material itself fails to supply.

Keaton plays Bob Jones (what did I say earlier about generic?) a Hollywood publicist (Rubin's only attempt not to make the character sympathetic) who recently learned he has inoperable cancer. As fate and manipulative plotting would have it, Bob's beautiful-as-she-is-wonderful wife, Gail (Nicole Kidman), is carrying their first child.

But an Asian healer (Haing S. Ngor) imparts the vaguely Buddhist wisdom that "it's not enough to marry goodness, you have to find it in yourself," and so Bob does. He goes back to Detroit to re-establish ties with his hard-

'Poundstone,' 'Grain' too good for TV

Oh well, they were fun while they lasted.

Intelligent television viewers should have seen it coming that a couple of quality shows didn't have a chance of survival. After all, the better the television show, the less of a clue the Neilsen families have.

Patterson

Those Neilsen people are pretty happy to veg away watching things like "Family Matters," "Nurses," "Step by Step" and other mindless drivel. After consuming so much junk on a nightly basis, when they finally get the opportunity to embrace quality programming, it is so foreign to them they practically black out.

After just two weeks on the air, "The Paula Poundstone Show" was led to the Neilsen guillotine. It was, after all, too intelligent a show, and the comedy was just too advanced for Hollywood and the Neilsens to comprehend. Intelligent viewers, on the other hand, barely had a chance to even find the show and enjoy it before it was axed. In the program's premiere episode, Poundstone herself joked about the horrible chances she had of becoming a success.

As sad as it was to see a quality comedy program like Poundstone's cancelled, there is the case of "Against the Grain." Critics' opinions have been favorable concerning this family drama. In return, the Neilsen families, notorious for lacking good judgment, have never rated the show above 76 in the ratings.

While the show hasn't been cancelled as of yet, it is being pre-empted for the next four Fridays, starting with last night's pulled episode. By the time it returns on December 17 (if, in fact, it does return), viewers will likely be watching the final two episodes. Only eight programs were ordered by the network. Six have been aired, two are left. Producers of "Grain" say the network has not ordered any more episodes, which, the producers say, would seem to indicate cancellation is just around the corner.

"Against The Grain's" time slot has always been the program's main problem. Who exactly would be dumb enough to schedule a show about high school football Fridays at 7 p.m.? Geniuses, these Hollywood types.

"Against the Grain" is a program that could've very well crossed the line and become a cliche-riddled, weak-storyline drama that deserved to be cancelled. But in the six episodes that have aired, the program,

N.Y. Times News Service

THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES: They look like the Clampetts. They act like the Clampetts. But the cast of this big-screen remake of the beloved '60s sitcom just ain't funny like the TV show clan was. There's one inspired exception: Lily Tomlin's assistant banker Jane Hathaway reaches a height of comic gooniness that is nearly extraterrestrial. Penelope Spheeris ("Wayne's World") directed in a manner that redefines the concept of broad. PG. Rating: ★★

CARLITO'S WAY: A surprisingly restrained — for them — gangster melodrama directed by Brian De Palma and starring Al Pacino. He's a Puerto Rican drug dealer trying to go straight in mid-'70s New York. Sean Penn is terrific as Carlito's weasily, coke-fried lawyer, while Pacino is less good, but more tolerable than usual, playing a relatively reasonable man. De Palma keeps a lid on the cinematic pyrotechnics, too; thus his masterful final chase through Grand Central Station packs all the impact it deserves to. Dramatics are strictly urban western superficial, but it's still the most satisfying movie either principal has made in years. R. Rating: ★★★

FATAL INSTINCT: Another — yawn — movie spoof, this time of erotic thrillers and their better, film-noir antecedents. Much too obvious, but this Carl Reiner production does have a few good laughs, some of which even spark off that oft-parodied, "Basic Instinct" leg-crossing scene. Armand Assante is the dim bulb detective. Sherilyn Fenn, Kate Nelligan and Sean Young are the femmes fatale. PG-13. Rating: ★★½

FEARLESS: Peter Weir's brilliant evocation of the surreal, nightmarish aspects of unspeakable catastrophe is the major achievement of this adaptation of Rafael Yglesia's book about two plane crash survivors who help each other come to terms with their very different emotional injuries. Jeff Bridges, in another one of his patented Golden-Boy-gone-south performances, plays an architect whose Good Samaritan rescues at the crash site leave him feeling euphoric and invincible, but totally detached from his loved ones. Rosie Perez is wrenching as a young mother paralyzed with guilt for not having saved her baby. A bit long-winded and fairly predictable in its resolution, but nonetheless a powerful and disturbing achievement. R. Rating: ★★★

FLESH AND BONE: More successful as a mood piece than anything else, this Southern Gothic screwball romance is mightily concerned with fate. As a child, Arlis Sweeney assisted in the murders of a rural Texas family. As an adult played by Dennis Quaid, he literally drives around in circles, trying to avoid what he fears may be his own violent nature. Taking up with Meg Ryan's runaway wife only shows Arlis that the past never goes away. Nothing here makes a lot of sense, but it sure feels interesting. Written and directed by Steve Kloves of equally quirky "Fabulous Baker Boys" fame. R. Rating: ★★★

THE FUGITIVE: The big-screen version of the classic TV show is a nonstop chase machine. But, similar to the Energizer bunny it goes and goes like, all it leaves you with are memories of motion and a drumbeat. Dully stalwart Harrison Ford is the innocent Dr. Richard Kimble, wrongly condemned for killing his wife. Charismatic, witty Tommy Lee Jones is implacable Marshal Gerard, determined to catch the escaped con, who's equally determined to find the real killer. Director Andrew Davis ("Under Siege") never lets up on the suspense, not even to toss a little character development into the mix. PG-13. Rating: ★★★

THE GOOD SON: A generally uninspired "Bad Seed" thriller, though notable for presenting cute movie kid Macaulay Culkin as a sociopathic killer and continuing director Joe Ruben's ("Sleeping With the Enemy," "The Stepfather") subversive obsession with deadly relatives. Culkin doesn't really perform as much as look the part — there's a dead quality in his sparkling blue eyes that's perfect for projecting amorality and malice. Elijah Wood is the good cousin who, of course, the grown-ups won't listen to. R. Rating: ★★2½

THE NIGHTMARE BEFORE CHRISTMAS: Tim Burton's puppet-animation musical is a clever comedy of misperception. The dedicated ghouls who stage Halloween every year take over Christmas with the best intentions, but with macabre misunderstanding of the holiday's subtleties. Although you never get past the fact that you're looking at puppets, they're always great to look at, sort of like Dr. Seuss characters putting on a German Expressionism exhibit. Danny Elfman (Oingo Boingo, "The Simpsons") wrote the show tunes. PG. Rating: ★★★

ROBOCOP 3: Thanksgivng comes early this year in the form of this utter turkey of a sequel to the once witty, exciting future cop series. Robert John Burke replaces Peter Weller as the cyborg policeman. This time, he sides with urban guerrillas fighting a conglomerate that's trying to bulldoze their homes. There are Terminiinjas, too; like everything else about the movie, their potential is totally wasted. PG-13. Rating: 0 stars.

RUDY: A true-life sports story that doesn't have an honest moment in it. Sean Astin plays the puny, dumb, working-class kid whose only goal in life is to dress out and sit on the bench for one Notre Dame football game. It takes years, inordinate effort and a lot of pain, but the conclusion is never in doubt. Rudy's sense of priorities, however, always are. One-dimensional acting and equally flat writing doesn't help, though you could give it points for modesty and efficient, if soulless, manipulation. David Anspaugh ("Hoosiers") directed. PG. Rating: ★★

SLEEPLESS IN SEATTLE: Tom Hanks and Meg Ryan star in Nora Ephron's contrived, self-mocking and deliriously wonderful romantic comedy. He's a widowed single father; she's a passion rattled journalist on the other side of the continent. They don't meet until the last scene. In the meantime, Ephron (who wrote Ryan's hit "When Harry Met Sally...") hilariously implores us to bury our fake, movie fed romantic notions — then makes us fall for them all over again. PG-13. Rating: ★★★3½

THE THREE MUSKETEERS: Alexandre Dumas' 17th-century adventure classic is loosely adapted for younger swashbucklers with cuddly Chris O'Donnell ("Scent of a Woman") as a milquetoasty D'Artagnan tagging along with smirking Brat Packers Charlie Sheen, Kiefer Sutherland and Oliver Platt. Handsome sets and costumes, lots of swordplay, Tim Curry's oily Richelieu and a perfectly cast Rebecca De Mornay as the treacherous Milady de Winter occasionally liven up the proceedings, but grown-ups should consider staying home with the video of Richard Lester's funner and bawdier 1974 version. PG. Rating: ★★

Show."

But three months later, and still handicapped by a station clearance inched up to the 76 percent level, "Late Show" draws an average audience of about 5 million homes each night — homes filled with younger, hipper viewers than Leno is able to attract. The once-indominable "Tonight," despite the advantage of virtually 100 percent clearance after 39 years on the air, now languishes with about 3.9 million households.

Sweetening its Nielsen one-upmanship is "Late Show's" stature as the Chat Show of Record. It was Letterman who Vice President Al Gore visited to discuss President Clinton's plan for streamlining government. Sean Connery came on to tell the world he wasn't dying of cancer.

Not that "Late Show" will ever stand for weighty discourse. (Viewers who want that turn to ABC's "Nightline," which is solidly in second place at 11:35 p.m. and occasionally on top.) Never fear: The Letterman ethos remains monkeyshines, not consciousness-raising. "If you walk away from this show learning something," says Morton, "then we haven't done our job."

But Dave's drollery, coming to you from Broadway's proudly renovated Ed Sullivan Theater, is now a souped-up, gussied-up affair: more pretaped pieces, more live remotes, more gags than you got on the NBC precursor he hosted for 11½ years from the 12:35 a.m. hinterland.

Recently Letterman addressed this quantum upgrade when, grinning like the target for a beanbag toss, he joked with his audience, "How do we do it — high-quality programming night after night at just pennies a serving?"

In an interview, Lassally delivers the answer: "Our days are much longer."

Yet you won't hear anyone complaining, least of all Dave.

"I couldn't be happier coming to work every day," he told The Associated Press, between taping his show and appearing at a "60 Minutes" gala — in black tie, yet — to deliver a Top 10 list before an audience of 600 bigs with his new boss Stringer beside him, in stitches.

Letterman as Company Man! Who would have ever imagined such a thing from the prankster who made an art of zotzing those "weasels" who run NBC?

Skeptics said it just wouldn't work out at CBS for the famously caustic and grudging host. It was so easy to mistake the khaki slacks and insubordinate attitude as the essence of his comedy, then to conclude that his aging-adolescent act would never click with a mainstream audience on the Tiffany Network.

But Howard Stringer took a different view, focusing on Letterman's "sensibility and intelligence that make him unpredictable and dynamic."

In the words of "Late Show" goat Lionel Ritchie, the network chieftain had a dream, he had an awesome dream: Make chronic late-night loser CBS a major player. Instantly. With Dave.

"Say you, say me," Stringer said to Letterman as early as July 1992. Backing up his words with $42 million over three years, Stringer won the star from NBC and several other suitors in January.

Stringer reasons, "You've got a man who was so disappointed that he didn't get 'The Tonight Show' (when Johnny Carson retired), who's been rehearsing for a decade for the opportunity to be at 11:30. It never seemed a particularly smart decision to go with him. It seemed an obvious decision."

Not so obvious to NBC, which cast its lot with Leno in June 1991, a full year before Carson actually stepped down. Even so, the slighted Letterman felt an attachment to the network with which he began his career.

"I would tell myself 'I gotta move, I gotta move,'" he recalls, "then I'd think, 'Welll-l-l, maybe I could stay on.'"

"Even with all the angst and anger that David has for us, there is a certain advantage to staying with the situation he has with us," an unnamed senior NBC official was quoted hopefully in The New York Times last December.

"It would have been so easy to stay Letterman concurs. "But finall I knew I couldn't."

" tell my students this was probably a $100 million mistake NBC made by letting Letterman get away," says Charles Williams, a Texas Christian University business professor who uses the debacle as a cautionary lesson in employee relations.

"It's easy for my students to contrast the looseness, the fun of the Letterman show with the rule-bound bureaucracy that works very well for (NBC parent) GE, but not so well at NBC," Williams says. "That culture clash makes it apparent why Letterman left."

Letterman's farewell "Late Night" was June 25, but despite CBS' incessant "Same Dave, Better Time, New Station" ad campaign, when "Late Show" premiered Aug. 30, it was clear this wasn't the same Dave after all.

"Honestly, I can't say I'm doing anything consciously different," Letterman says.

But his executive producers admit a few changes were in order.

Lassally: "Angry and malcontent — that was not a label he could afford to keep."

Morton: "I think he looked at himself and said, 'OK, I'm at 11:30. I'm a grownup. I have responsibilities.'"

Lassally: "Yes, people were surprised when he came out wearing a nice suit, and when he seemed much mellower and friendlier. But he is proud of this show."

Morton: "He loves having a network that's so appreciative, so nurturing, and he never had that at the other network."

Lassally: "It's all a dream come true for him. And that comes across on the show."

In return, Letterman's studio audience gives him standing ovations every night.

Meanwhile, his viewers — double those who watched him on "Late Night" — receive "Late Show" not just as entertainment, but as a nightly measure of themselves.

The message is clear, according to Dr. Will Miller, a standup comic who is also a psychotherapist: "Letterman's success reflects America saying, 'Dave, you're the one we connect with.'"

Charting a psychic shift in the Baby Boom Zeitgeist, Dave reminds his disciples that it's OK both to grow up and to move up. Not to mention cheer up: Night after night on "Late Show," he celebrates the American Dream, poking fun every step of the way.

movie played extraordinary well to everyone who saw it," says Peter Chernin, the chairman of 20th Century Fox. "And our thinking was that we should get it open early enough because we felt that the movie will play through Christmas."

"A Perfect World," on the other hand, travels across far more difficult R-rated territory.

Directed by Eastwood, last year's Oscar winner for "Unforgiven," the movie features Costner as an escaped convict roaming across Texas with an 8-year-old boy as his hostage. The fatherless boy develops an affection for his generally loving captor, and the film evolves into an unusual odyssey of alienation and attachment.

Eastwood co-stars as a Texas Ranger tracking down Costner with the unwelcome assistance of Laura Dern.

While "Mrs. Doubtfire" can be promoted with a simple pitch, "A Perfect World" requires a far more complex advertising strategy: Its premise cannot be condensed easily into superficial movie-poster prose. So what do you tell the audience the film is about?

"I think what you do is you tell them what it isn't," Johnson says of the marketing approach. "It isn't a Clint Eastwood-Kevin Costner movie. It's not what they expect it is. It's not an action movie. It's not a buddy movie. It so goes against that. I think it has to be sold dark," he says, meaning that audiences should know going in that it's no lightweight romp.

"I think our reviews by and large are going to be very good," Johnson says. "And I think we're going to depend a lot on those reviews informing the audience that this isn't like Costner and 'The Bodyguard' meets Clint Eastwood in 'In the Line of Fire.'"

Chernin says Fox will allow "Mrs. Doubtfire" to speak for itself, introducing the film in 1,000 theaters Saturday night in special sneak previews. Although the sneak preview returns will not be tabulated in the film's grosses, they are expected to eventually boost its total haul.

"The thinking is to get a bunch of people in to see the movie, because they will be our single best advertisement," Chernin says. "If we can get a couple of million people in Saturday night, this thing hopefully will ignite by Wednesday because there'll be so much word of mouth for it."

The Thanksgiving competition includes "Josh and S.A.M.," a film about two children driving across the country; "George Balanchine's The Nutcracker," with "Home Alone" star Macaulay Culkin; the animated work "We're Back! A Dinosaur's Story"; and the independent film "The Snapper," an Irish blue-collar comedy directed by Stephen Frears.

Two relatively quiet weeks follow, and then, on Dec. 10, three other big Christmas films arrive: "Sister Act 2: Back in the Habit," the Western "Geronimo: An American Legend" and "Wayne's World II." Five days later comes Steven Spielberg's holocaust movie "Schindler's List," followed by the dog sequel "Beethoven's 2nd" and another Western, "Tombstone."

On Dec. 17, Julia Roberts and Denzel Washington pair in the adaptation of novelist John Grisham's legal thriller, "The Pelican Brief." Given Miss Roberts' popularity and the earlier success of Grisham's "The Firm," Hollywood insiders expect big numbers from "The Pelican Brief."

Although several likely Oscar contenders already have been released ("Much Ado About Nothing," "The Remains of the Day"), December is filled with a number of quality titles released late in the year to qualify for the Academy Awards. They include Tom Hanks in the AIDS story "Philadelphia," and Daniel Day-Lewis in "In the Name of the Father."

ADDAMS: Sequel is better than first movie

(From 1D)

-length standards, but it is both a funnier and more confident film. Rather than trying to play off the expectations of television viewers, the filmmakers only concern themselves with the previous movie: Topping it was no problem.

In a film full of great one-liners, the best joke may be the title. Morticia has given birth to a baby Addams, whose mustache and slick, black hair duplicate his dashing father's. He is named Pubert and placed in a very special nursery, vultures looming from the wallpaper and a snarling stuffed bear perched over his cradle.

Believing the myth that once a family has three children, one of them must die, Wednesday and Pugsley decide Pubert is the best candidate. Their methods, to give them credit, are in the family tradition: aiming an anvil over his head, placing his neck under a guillotine, trying to find out whether Pubert or a cannonball can fall faster to the ground.

Gomez and Morticia decide their kids need supervision and hire a nanny (Joan Cusack), a sexy blonde who at first seems innocently flaky, but is soon revealed (to the audience) as a murderer of lonely, rich men. And by her bedside, and all over her walls, are newspaper clippings of Uncle Fester.

Running time: 94 minutes.
Rated: PG-13.

The "Addams" creative team — producer Scott Rudin, director Barry Sonnenfeld and writer Paul Rudnick — clearly have improved on the first movie. The satire is sharper and they wisely have expanded the role of Christina Ricci's unforgettable Wednesday, as stone-faced as Buster Keaton, as menacing as Judith Anderson's Mrs. Danvers in "Rebecca."

The rest of the cast also works well: Raul Julia and Anjelica Huston as the ever-romantic Gomez and Morticia; Christopher Lloyd as the manic, ghoulish Fester, his voice as raspy as Jimmy Durante's; Jimmy Workman as Pugsley; Carel Struycken as Lurch, and Carol Kane as the grandmother. Cusack, alternately plotting murder and begging for love, again proves herself a gifted screwball comic.

PATTERSON: Program at times hokey, but well written while at times a bit corny, has proved to be an intelligent show about Texas high school football.

It was not, as a reviewer on the Prodigy Interactive Service so ignorantly pointed out, a program that attempted to bring to life the book "Friday Night Lights." The only thing "Against the Grain" has in common with the controversial H.G. "Buzz" Bissinger book about the travails of the Odessa Permian football program is that its central storyline revolves around football and it's set in a small Texas town. End of connection.

"Against the Grain" has not fallen on insulting visual props like topless high school football players in the locker room, such as was suggested by at least one entertainment publication, which said that in order for the show to draw the giddy teenage female audience, it would need to offer up a weekly dose of bare chests.

The program, instead, has dealt with issues that, while not exactly reality-based (no town can be as perfect as the fictional Sumpter), are at least entertaining. In the last episode before the show headed into its four-week pre-emption, the storyline dealt with the school's head coach being faced with the loss of his job unless the team defeated Midvale, one of the toughest teams in the state. Unfortunately, Sumpter's No. 1 running back was felled by a knee injury in practice and was unable to suit up for a game. Instead, an inexperienced, unreliable player came on in the star's place and made the impossible play that allowed Sumpter to win, 23-20, as time ran out.

Along the way, we see the team holding a midnight practice (and no one even reported it to the UIL) so it would be ready to meet the challenge against the top-ranked school, therefore saving the coach's job.

Hokey, sure. But the writing was good enough to make it work, and work well.

It's time for fans of the show to contact KWES-TV, the local NBC affiliate, and register a vote of support for the program, and in turn, call the network before it makes yet another dumb decision.

"Against the Grain" deserves to survive. If the network would simply move it to another night — say Sunday, a night which has housed other successful family-based dramas — then it would almost guarantee additional viewers and at least an improved chance at success.

working, Ukrainian immigrant parents. But can this alienation ever be overcome? After all, they resent him for changing his name from Ivanovich, and he has never forgiven them for, well, working hard when he was a child instead of putting on a circus.

Ah, the circus. There's roller-coaster symbolism, too. And near-death experience, white-light nonsense. The miracle of birth! And folk dancing! And pop psych-o-dramatic dialogue like "Let me inside," "Share what you're feeling" and the perennial "I want to live!"

But the film's master stroke of mechanical phoniness is Bob's bright idea to videotape the story of his life for his unborn child. Really drippy in concept, this nonetheless provides the best opportunities for Keaton to strut his comic stuff, especially when giving advice on everything from cooking spaghetti to entering a room.

Still, what we're basically looking at here is a home movie grafted onto a disease-of-the-week thing; it's tedious times two. But at least it's well-intentioned, right?

Midland, TX 79701
(915) 686-0066

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS: On or about November 9, 1993 the Midland Neighborhood Housing Services, Inc. (NHS) will request the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs (TDHCA) to release funds under Title II of the National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 for the following project:

HOME Program Contract Number: 532022
Description: Rehabilitation of Ten Owner Occupied Homes
Location: TO BE IDENTIFIED IN EAST & SOUTH MIDLAND
Total Estimated Cost: $150,000.00

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within projects has been made by NHS which documents the Environmental Review Record is on file at 401 E. Illinois, Suite 106 and is available for public examination and copying upon request between the hours 9 AM to 4 PM Monday through Friday. Comments will be received 7 days following the publication of this notice.

NHS will undertake the projects described above with the HOME Investment Partnership program funds from the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs under Title II of the National Affordable Housing Act of 1990. NHS is certifying to the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs that NHS and Raul Ceniceros, Executive Director of NHS, in his official capacity as Executive Director, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts is an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental assessments, decision-making, and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon it approval, NHS may use HOME Program funds, and the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and 24 CFR Part 58.

The Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is on one of the following basis:

(a.) that the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer or other certifying officer of the Grantee approved by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs; or

(b.) that the Grantee's environmental review record for the project indicates omission of a required decision, finding, or step applicable to the project in the environmental review required procedures (24 CFR Part 58), and may be addressed to the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs, P.O. Box 13941, Capitol Station, Austin 78711-3941.

Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs. No objection received after (date of last day in the TDHCA 15 day objection period) will be considered by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.

JOBS AVAILABLE

Full or Part-time

Due to the high cost of factory space, insurance, worker's compensation, and other company expenses, many companies can save thousands of dollars in production time with people assembling very simple products at home for them. Special skills or experience not needed because instructions and materials are sent to you. After you complete work, send it back for payment. The more work you do the more you earn. Just 20-45 minutes a day working at home you can earn some very impressive wages. Kreger Publishing has a listing of a variety of different work that suits both men and women. Best of all, you work when you want. (One company is paying $342.00 per week to assemble simple plant hangers.) For more information and a FREE listing of over 60 opportunities write to:

KREGER PUBLISHING
309 Lothrop Street, OHMH
Tauton, MA 02780

Kreger Publishing does require $3.90 for postage and handling for listing. Orders can not be filled without postage and handling. Allow 3-4 days.
