Reagan, dressed for hunt, can't camouflage his problems

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — President Reagan, clad in green camouflage battle fatigues, ended one of the most troubled weeks of his presidency Saturday hunting wild turkeys on an isolated ranch. He failed to bag one.

"I have never gone turkey hunting, so I'm looking forward to this," Reagan said as he and aides set out on the hunting expedition in a four-wheel drive vehicle.

The expedition shot three turkeys, but Reagan got none. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president had a shot, but withheld his fire because the gobbler was surrounded by hens. "As a true sportsman, the president did not wish to shoot," Speakes said.

Neither Speakes nor any other aides could say immediately whether hens are protected under Texas hunting law.

Reagan, whose previous hunting experience has been limited to rattlesnakes, was the guest of his chief of staff, James A. Baker III, at J.O. Winston's 7,500-acre ranch. Winston is the former father-in-law of Baker's wife.

The president jokingly accused a large horde of reporters of scaring the turkeys away. "After seeing this, we don't think there are many live turkeys around," he quipped.

But after the upsetting week he had, Reagan made it very clear he did not want to talk about his difficulties.

Asked whether he planned to keep his national secuity adviser, Richard V. Allen, on at the White House depsite allegations that he accepted $1,000 from a Japanese reporter, the president replied, "I can't comment on that while it's under review."

The Justice Department is investigating the case. Allen has acknowledged receiving the cash, but White Housed officials say it was intended for Mrs. Reagan and Allen "intercepted" it only to spare the first lady any embarrassment and to avoid offending the Japanese journalists who offered it as a token of their appreciation for an exclusive interview.

The week Reagan appeared to be escaping from also was marred by a magazine article in which Reagan's budget directer, David Stockman, publicly questioned the soundness of the president's economic program and likened it to previous "trickle-down" programs of other administrations.

The hunting party, which also included Baker's sons, Doug and John and stepson, James Winston, used 12-guage shotguns provided by the ranch. Reagan said, "You bet" when asked if he had a hunting license.

With Baker driving and Reagan in the front seat alongside him, the party, on a hot day, drove into the wilderness.

The expedition happened to occur on the opening day of deer hunting season in the state. Deputy White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes said the president was driving to brush piles that would serve as blinds and there would await the wild turkeys.

The president was spending the night at the small white cinderblock ranch house with four other men — Baker, Michael K. Deaver, the deputy chief of staff, Winston and Baker's father-in-law, Jack Garrett, a Danbury, Texas, rice farmer.

Speakes said the ranch crew, including the cook, would stay in a trailer nearby.

Reporters were being lodged in San Antonio more than 40 miles away, but the White House arranged for about 100 of them to be driven 90 minutes by van, some of it over dirt road, to watch Reagan step into the Jeep and be driven away.

Reagan arrived Saturday morning from Houston, where he attended a state GOP fund-raising dinner Friday night in honor of Baker, who is a Texas native.

Unlike second mission, shuttle landing perfect

By ROBERT LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Spaceship Columbia crowned a busy, bittersweet mission Saturday, bursting like a silver wraith through mottled California skies to its second flawless desert landing.

With Joe Engle in command and Richard Truly beside him, the winged shuttle hit Earth right on time, right on target: the oil-black centerline on wide-open Rogers Dry Lake in California's Mojave Desert.

"Touchdown. Welcome home," said Mission Control.

For Engle and Truly it was a perfect ending for a troubled mission, halted three days early only because an electrical generator broke down. Crowds, estimated at 220,000 people, cheered "go" as Columbia passed overhead on its final approach to runway 23.

The astronauts headed quickly for home in Houston while technicians swarmed over the first ship to go into space twice. After two hours, Columbia was towed to its hangar, accompanied by a convoy of service trucks.

"The bird is real solid," said Engle as the 106-ton ship emerged from a 17-minute blackout and speeded across the Pacific at five times the speed of sound.

"It's a great day for the Ace Moving Co.," shuttle communicator Rick Hauck said from Mission Control, Houston. After two more test flights, the shuttle will begin service as a delivery van, hauling up satellites, scientific cargo and secret defense projects.

California's overcast skies had been a worry to the end, and for some moments the ship appeared to dart in and out of the clouds, waving cotton puffs of contrails, like an apparition, a wraith, from the heavens. There was one last plunge through one last wisp into a desert sky of brilliant blue.

Then landing, at 1:23 p.m. PST; 54 hours, 13 minutes and 10 seconds after Thursday's launch from Cape Canaveral.

"It's a great day for the United States and the space program," said James Beggs, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, in introducing the astronauts following their quick physical exam.

"Sorry we got down here a couple of days early," Engle said of the short flight. Engle called the cut in flight time "kind of heartbreaking," but added: "We were awful glad that we were able to accomplish the things that we set out to do and got the main objectives of the flight done."

Truly said, "The real hero of the day is sitting out there on the lakebed. That is some kind of flying machine.... I think it's going to lead us to things we don't even dream of yet."

"As to the famous tile problem, its getting better flight by flight," said L. Michael Weeks, acting associate administrator of NASA. None of the ship's thermal protection tiles came off en route home.

Sprinkling of space bases 'keeps everybody happy'

By JAMES R. KING

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia is launched in Florida, controlled from Texas and lands in California. Its rockets are developed in Alabama and the entire program is orchestrated out of Washington, D.C.

It's not that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration can't make up its mind where it wants to work. NASA officials insist sprinkling their facilities across the country is part of a grand plan to keep everybody happy — not least the politicians.

"When you have a big organization like NASA that spews a lot of money into the economy, you try to scatter it out if you can to give all different parts of the country an opportunity to have the advantages of the economic impact," said NASA spokesman John Lawrence.

The space center here provides jobs for more than 8,000 federal workers and contractors, and has turned what 20 years ago was a rural shrimping village of 5,000 people into a booming suburbia of 100,000 residents.

Because of the policy of spreading the wealth, a single space shuttle press conference here may also be covered simultaneously by reporters in Cape Canaveral, Fla., Edwards, Calif., Huntsville, Ala., and Washington, D.C., linked by closed-circuit television hookup so everybody gets a chance to ask questions.

In all, NASA has 11 facilities stretching from Wallops Island, Va., to Moffett Field, Calif. Four of them are directly involved in the mission of the shuttle, said John E. McLeaish, director of public information at the Johnson Space Center.

"We're responsible here in Houston for selecting and training the astronauts, developing the orbiter and controlling the flight," McLeaish said.

Building the rocket engines that propel the 116-ton shuttle into orbit is the job of the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, where the Saturn rockets that carried man to the moon more than 12 years ago were designed and contracted.

Midland bank president testifies on GMW foreclosure

By RICHARD ORR

DALLAS — During testimony Friday, First National Bank of Midland President Charles Fraser denied allegations that foreclosure action against a Midland oil company was designed as a tool to gain first-lien control of prime oil and gas leases near the Texas-New Mexico border.

"No sir, I never said that," Fraser replied when asked if he had indicated to GMW Chief Financial Officer Scott Mathews that calling in a $25 million promissory note was intended as "leverage" in order to acquire first liens on the leases, which are located on 21 sections of land in Texas and eastern New Mexico.

Instead, said Fraser, the reason for initiating foreclosure proceedings stemmed from GMW's "erroneously high" income projections on other oil property put up by the company in obtaining a $22.7 million loan from the bank last spring.

An adjusted appraisal in August led FNB to believe the property had been overvalued by at least $6 million, Fraser testified, adding that the bank didn't feel the note was "fully secured" when it was officially declared in default Oct. 6.

ACCORDING TO court records, GMW had put up nearly $50 million worth of property and stock holdings as collateral on the loan and GMW claimed in a complicated $150 million damage suit filed Oct. 9 that the bank had no valid reason for believing the note wasn't adequately secured.

Expanding on the reason for calling in the note, Fraser, who is also named in the suit, testified Friday that he had personally ordered the action because the financially ill company had failed to make certain payments and had demonstrated an ongoing unwillingness to cooperate with bank efforts to renegotiate the loan on terms more favorable to GMW, which the bank had been "trying to help for several months," Fraser told the court.

GMW, however, claims they had been "lulled" by the bank into believing the payments in question would be held in abeyance until the renegotiation discussions were completed. GMW also contends FNB had been advised the company was "ready and able to meet timely payements" and that calling in the note was a "malicious and unlawful move to break the will of (GMW) and destroy their business and business reputation."

Fraser also said Friday he had discussed the foreclosure move with

NEW YORK — On this coming Friday, November 20, President Reagan will have been in the White House for ten months, time enough, I think, to assess his stewardship.

This period since his inauguration last January has given our 40th president sufficient time to establish a style of leadership, and to give us an idea about the course his administration will take in the future. His style has been marked by candor, consistency, and a cautious optimism about the nation's destiny; characteristics which came through clearly in just about every answer he gave to reporters' questions at Tuesday's press conference.

His candor can be a bit unnerving. When asked if he shared Treasury Secretary Regan's gloomy view of the economy, the president came back with a head-on response: "I think that we're going to have some hard times in the next few months." This may sound pessimistic, but it's better than to make believe the road ahead is all roses.

At his press conference he repeated his campaign promise that one of his key goals is to cut the nation's burdensome taxes. He has been consistent in his war on bulging budgets. In response to a question concerning what he wants Congress to do about federal spending, he said: "...as I've said before, I will not stand still for

Midlander, 50, killed in liquor store shooting

Midland businessman Robert J. "R.J." Morris Sr., 50, was killed about 8 p.m. Saturday in an eastside liquor store after a 42-year-old man allegedly fired a volley of shots through the store's window.

Morris, who was struck once in the heart-area of the chest, was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Charles Sprayberry in the Emergency Room of Midland Memorial Hospital.

The accused in the case turned himself in at police headquarters at 8:25 p.m., and supposedly was being interviewed by police after Sprayberry read the man his rights. However, the man was not formally charged, though police booked him for murder.

Morris and the suspect reportedly had been arguing over a gambling bet Saturday night, according to police. Morris allegedly chased the man out of the liquor store with a pistol. The man reportedly got a rifle from his car and fired five rounds through the window of M&M Liquor Store in the 900 block of East Illinois Avenue.

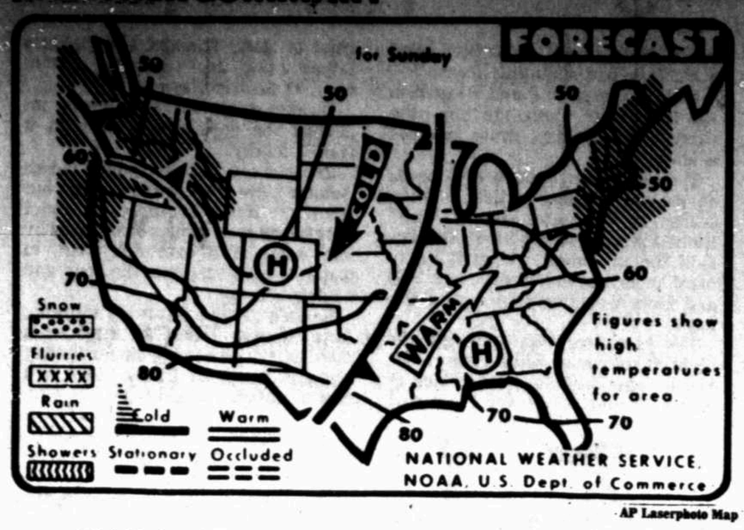

Small crowds of curious bystanders were milling around just outside the store Saturday night, as police were interviewing witnesses and collecting evidence, including slugs from the rifle.

Morris reportedly owned or had an interest in the liquor store.

"R.J. owns half this flat," an onlookers said of the core of the black business district in Midland.

It's hard to think about winter weather

By this time of the year Midland residents are usually beginning to winterize their homes and cars. But today's unseasonable forecast will make it difficult to start with the high expected to reach near 80.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, warm weather with clear skies should continue through Monday. The low tonight will cool down to the mid- 40s, but the temperature is expected to climb back up to the low 80s Monday.

Winds from the northwest should travel 10-15 mph through Monday.

Saturday's high of 82 might have felt a little out of season, and it fell just three degrees short of the record high of 85 set in 1933. The record low of 24 degrees set in 1932 was not threatened by Saturday morning's low of 42.

Paratroopers drop into Western Desert

By STEVEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO WEST AIR BASE, Egypt (AP) — More than 800 paratroopers dropped into the Western Desert Saturday, beginning the biggest test of America's Rapid Deployment Force. One jumper broke his hip, three suffered less serious injuries and a 2½-ton truck crumpled when its chute failed.

The windless, clear blue sky was filled with olive drab parachutes as 850 Americans, 10 Egyptians and their equipment — including trucks, howitzers and mortars — were dropped from 18 C-141 and six C-130 transport planes.

Less than six minutes elapsed before the first platform of equipment was dropped and the last soldier hit the sand. Each carried a 60-pound pack and an M-16 rifle. The operation began at 8:59 a.m. local time — 1:59 a.m. EST — about a minute ahead of schedule.

The semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram said in its Sunday edition that two AWACS radar planes took part in the exercises. U.S. military officials said Saturday afternoon they had no information on the AWACS involvement, but an American military spokesman had said earlier in the week that use of the aircraft was being considered.

Fifty-seven platforms of heavy equipment were dropped from the planes at an altitude of 1,500 feet. The troopers were dropped from about 800 feet.

One U.S. major broke his hip when he landed. The lesser injuries included a sprained ankle and a pulled back muscle, military officials said. The injured were not identified.

The parachute of one equipment platform failed to open, and a 5,000-pound, eight-wheeled vehicle called a "gamma goat" crumpled when it crashed into the desert, U.S. officials said. They said the mishaps were fewer than expected.

The officials also said a Special Forces team parachuted into the zone Saturday night from an altitude of 10,000 feet. They refused to reveal how many men participated in the jump, a commando-style operation.

The officials said the Green Berets free fell thousands of feet before opening their chutes a few hundred feet above the desert.

The mock assault on the war games field of this Egyptian air base 18 miles west of Cairo was part of Bright Star '82, the roughly month-long test that involves 4,000 Americans in Egypt and 2,000 in exercises in Sudan, Somalia and Oman.

Six of the C-141s carried troops of the 82nd Airborne Division 14 hours non-stop from Pope Air Force Base, N.C., and the rest of the planes flew from four undisclosed locations in Europe.

The troops that came by way of Europe had four hours' rest at bases there before linking up with the others over the Mediterranean and heading to Cairo West.

A-10 Thunderbolt jetfighters flew mock sorties over the field before, during and after the operation, in which the 82nd linked up with the 24th Mechanized Division of Fort Stewart, Ga., which reached Egypt last week by ship and plane, and secured the mock target.

"It was a good exercise, a good drop," said Lt. Gen. Robert C. Kingston, commander of the Rapid Deployment Force, after the landings. He sat with Egyptian Maj. Gen. Mustafa Mahmoud, deputy chief of the army's training department, on a reviewing stand about a mile from the landing zone.

Kingston said the significance of the exercise was the "extended projection of the force" — in other words America's ability to get about 1,000 men a third of the way around the world.

"Some of the paratroops you saw here today loaded the aircraft at Fort Bragg and jumped here in Egypt," he said.

Pvt. Ted Morris, 19, of Los Angeles, told a reporter moments after landing and removing his chute: "I'm OK. I've been to the California desert and had some training there. I feel this is more barren and desolate. The California desert has more shrubs."

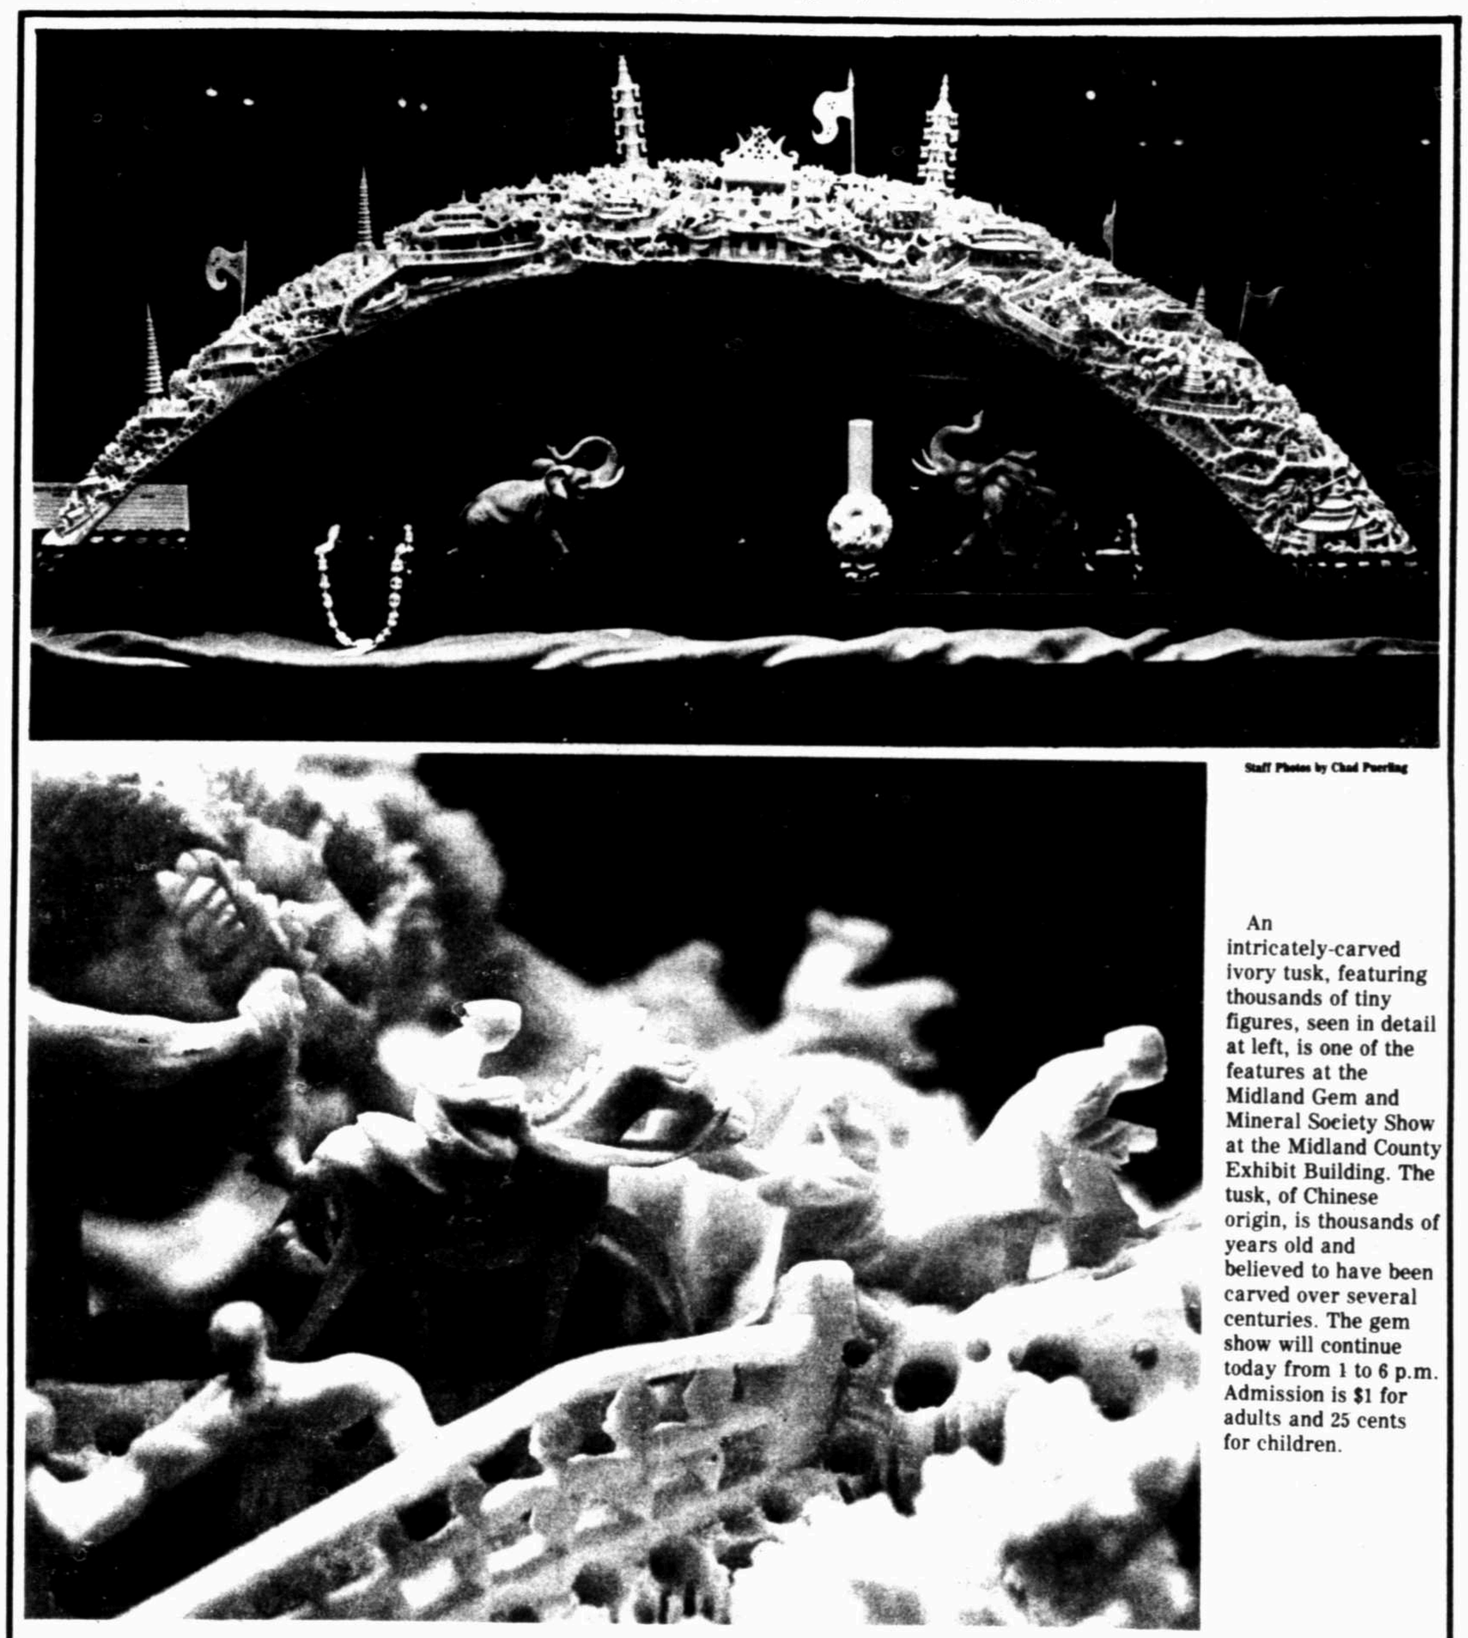

U.S. soldiers said the weather conditions, including mild 70-degree temperatures, were ideal for a parachute drop. "It's a lot easier than back home," said Pvt. Gary Pelletier, 19, of Fort Kent, Maine. "There are no trees here."

Asked what he thought of the desert, Pelletier said: "It's pretty big," and another member of his platoon, Pvt. Randy Normand, 20, of Brighton, Mich., replied: "too much sand."

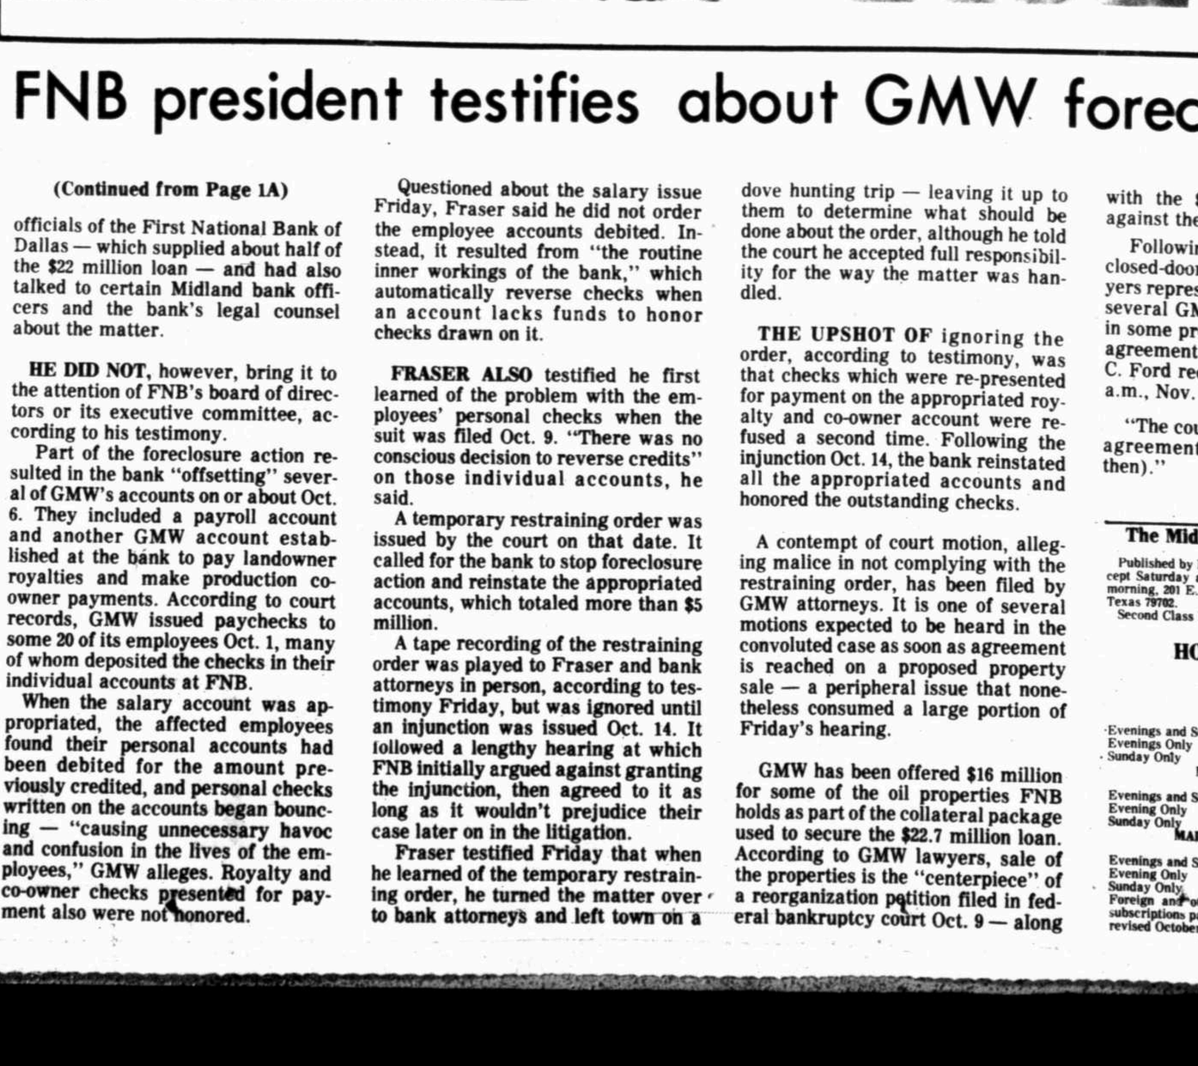

"I don't know how anyone could live in this place," said one of the GIs living in four-man tents at "Victory City," home for the troops during the exercises.

They wore dark-tinted goggles to protect their eyes from the sun and sandstorms that occasionally howl over the desert. The goggles were designed after last year's maneuvers by about 1,400 troops. The first sandstorm hit last Thursday.

"We could see it coming over the horizon," said 1st Lt. Richard Wyliy, 25, of Charleston, S.C.

budget-busting bills."

It may sound ironic, but Reagan has been consistent in his flexibility. He has not been afraid to change his mind when he has concluded he was going in the wrong direction. Social Security is an example. When he was told by the Senate, by a loud and clear 96-to-0 vote that he couldn't fool around with the nation's pension plan, he got the message.

The president did the same on balancing the budget in 1984. When reminded at his press conference of his promise, and asked about his conclusion that he could not keep it, he replied: "...our goal remains the same; we recognize now that the likelihood of meeting it on the 1984 date has become an unlikelihood because of unforeseen changes. And again, as I say, we can't predict when that'll be but we stay on target and that is our eventual goal."

His performance at last Tuesday's press conference revealed a great deal about the nature of this presidency in general and much about Ronald Reagan in particular. He staunchly defended his cabinet family as a "very happy group" which provoked some laughter from the packed media audience.

The laughter mightn't have been so spontaneous had the audience been aware of what was transpiring outside the White House. David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, was quoted in a magazine to the effect that he, Stockman, had little faith in the administration's economic plans and, in fact, never did have — this, despite the fact that he is one of the plan's architects!

Not only is Stockman's own credibility thus destroyed, he's dragging the administration's programs down with him even before they've been tested.

We're all aware of that famed quotation that "To err is human; to forgive divine," but politics isn't played by those rules, especially by a president, who should get rid of those who err.

If the administration feels Stockman would be more dangerous out of the administration than in it, that's a chance it must be willing to take. To my way of thinking, the president has committed a serious political blunder by protecting Stockman when it seems to me the sooner he gets rid of him the better.

In the press conference, President Reagan appealed to the "patriotism" of reporters in handling hot potato stories and urged them to consider the impact of those reports on American interests abroad. I wouldn't want anyone, including any American president, to pre-censor news reports, but I consider that President Reagan's appeal merits grave self-examination.

More in sadness than in anger, President Reagan observed that all the reports of cabinet in-fighting were grossly exaggerated. He added with a pixy-ish smile: "I think sometimes that the District of Columbia is one gigantic ear. There's just too much loose talk going on."

The president then wasted little time promising that he'll remain firm on spending cuts and that his administration intends to stiffen its spine and not "throw in the towel" as others have as the path of least resistance. Let's remember, there have been ups and downs economically in other Republican administrations. In business, it usually takes a few years to turn an enterprise around. It's that much harder with representative government.

President Reagan, in a characteristic manner now familiar to the American public, intended to show that he won't be derailed — not even detoured — from his economic goals.

FNB president testifies about GMW foreclosure

officials of the First National Bank of Dallas — which supplied about half of the $22 million loan — and had also talked to certain Midland bank officers and the bank's legal counsel about the matter.

HE DID NOT, however, bring it to the attention of FNB's board of directors or its executive committee, according to his testimony.

Part of the foreclosure action resulted in the bank "offsetting" several of GMW's accounts on or about Oct. 6. They included a payroll account and another GMW account established at the bank to pay landowner royalties and make production coowner payments. According to court records, GMW issued paychecks to some 20 of its employees Oct. 1, many of whom deposited the checks in their individual accounts at FNB.

When the salary account was appropriated, the affected employees found their personal accounts had been debited for the amount previously credited, and personal checks written on the accounts began bouncing — "causing unnecessary havoc and confusion in the lives of the employees," GMW alleges. Royalty and co-owner checks presented for payment also were not honored.

Questioned about the salary issue Friday, Fraser said he did not order the employee accounts debited. Instead, it resulted from "the routine inner workings of the bank," which automatically reverse checks when an account lacks funds to honor checks drawn on it.

FRASER ALSO testified he first learned of the problem with the employees' personal checks when the suit was filed Oct. 9. "There was no conscious decision to reverse credits" on those individual accounts, he said.

A temporary restraining order was issued by the court on that date. It called for the bank to stop foreclosure action and reinstate the appropriated accounts, which totaled more than $5 million.

A tape recording of the restraining order was played to Fraser and bank attorneys in person, according to testimony Friday, but was ignored until an injunction was issued Oct. 14. It followed a lengthy hearing at which FNB initially argued against granting the injunction, then agreed to it as long as it wouldn't prejudice their case later on in the litigation.

Fraser testified Friday that when he learned of the temporary restraining order, he turned the matter over to bank attorneys and left town on a dove hunting trip — leaving it up to them to determine what should be done about the order, although he told the court he accepted full responsibility for the way the matter was handled.

THE UPSHOT OF ignoring the order, according to testimony, was that checks which were re-presented for payment on the appropriated royalty and co-owner account were refused a second time. Following the injunction Oct. 14, the bank reinstated all the appropriated accounts and honored the outstanding checks.

A contempt of court motion, alleging malice in not complying with the restraining order, has been filed by GMW attorneys. It is one of several motions expected to be heard in the convoluted case as soon as agreement is reached on a proposed property sale — a peripheral issue that nonetheless consumed a large portion of Friday's hearing.

GMW has been offered $16 million for some of the oil properties FNB holds as part of the collateral package used to secure the $22.7 million loan. According to GMW lawyers, sale of the properties is the "centerpiece" of a reorganization petition filed in federal bankruptcy court Oct. 9 — along with the $150 million damage suit against the bank.

Following lengthy arguments and closed-door discussions between lawyers representing the bank, GMW and several GMW creditors that resulted in some progress being made toward agreement on the sale, Judge John C. Ford recessed the hearing until 10 a.m., Nov. 27, saying:

"The court very strongly feels that agreement should be reached (by then)."

IRA guerrillas kill member of British Parliament

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Irish Republican Army guerrillas shoved past 60 horrified teen-agers at a dance Saturday and shot and killed the Rev. Robert Bradford, a hardline Protestant member of the British Parliament. The gunmen also killed a caretaker at the door as they fled.

Screaming and crying youngsters scrambled for cover under tables, and one hurled a chair at the fleeing gunmen, who fired six bullets into Bradford and three into the caretaker. None of the youths was hurt, but witnesses said some were taken to nearby homes and treated for shock.

Police accused the guerrillas of trying to provoke "virtual civil war," and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher vowed "to cleanse our country of the evil of terrorism."

The assassination — the first of an Ulster legislator and second by Irish nationalists of a member of the British Parliament — came hours after the IRA blew up the London home of Britain's attorney general, Sir Michael Havers, and set off a bomb in Londonderry that wounded a soldier and a woman bystander.

Havers and his wife were in Madrid, Spain, for a legal conference. No one else was in the house at the time of the explosion, which caused heavy damage.

Bradford was the first member of Parliament assassinated by the IRA since Airey Neave, the Conservative Party's spokesman on Northern Ireland, was killed in a car-bombing outside the House of Commons March 30, 1979.

Bradford was a fierce critic of the IRA and close friend of militant Protestant leader, the Rev. Ian Paisley. Bradford, Paisley and other Protestant politicians were planning a tour of the United States next year to counteract IRA propaganda. Paisley called the killing "diabolical."

Police said two or three men took part in the attack at the Finaghy Community Center, on the outskirts of Belfast, and fled in a waiting car. Bradford's bodyguard fired on the car but it was not known if anybody was hit, witnesses said.

Witnesses said the gunmen shoved past the youths on the dance floor and opened fire on Bradford in an adjoining office. The legislator used the community center on Saturday mornings to meet with constituents.

"They (the teen-agers) did not seem to realize what was going on," said a father of one of the youngsters. "They were screeching and some were hiding under tables. You could almost feel the fear."

"One little girl went completely berserk and ran off," he said. "It was an hour before they found her again, completely stricken with fear."

"All the kids were screaming and shouting and I told them to get under the tables," said a 15-year-old boy who was changing records at the dance. "It was pandemonium."

"The gunmen pushed the kids out of the way to get at Mr. Bradford, and then shoved them aside again to get out," said the boy, who did not give his name. "It was then that I threw a chair."

The IRA, in a statement issued from its Belfast press bureau, said it claimed "responsibility for the execution" of Bradford, calling him "one of the key people responsible for winding up the Loyalist paramilitary sectarian machine in the North."

Bradford, 40-year-old minister at the Suffolk Methodist Church, six miles south of Belfast, had been a bitter critic of the IRA since his election to Parliament in 1974 as a member of the Protestant Official Unionist Party. He advocated hanging convicted terrorists and favored extension of the use of Britain's crack Special Air Service troops against the IRA.

His wife, Nora, 33, speaking to reporters at her home in South Belfast, said gunmen had tried to kill her husband "several times before" but he refused to give up his work "just for them."

Asked about the killers, she said, "The Lord will deal with them in his own good time."

News of the assassination was relayed to Irish Republic Cabinet ministers meeting in Dublin in a special weekend session on the economy.

British General-Attorney, Sir Michael Havers, the government's chief law-enforcement officer, talks on the phone from the Madrid hotel where he had been staying, after finding out a bomb had damaged his home in London Friday night.

Five party members must resign

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Five Communist Party members were ordered Saturday to resign from their city hall posts by Monday or face expulsion from the party.

On Thursday, six members of the party's central committee were ousted from the party after they refused to drop their support for the merger of Basque communists with separatists in the northern regions.

The five deputies warned on Saturday were ordered suspended from their municipal government posts pending their decision on the resignation demands. The five have said previously they would not resign their posts.

Four Czechs jailed in Prague in crackdown on underground music

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The leader of the Czechoslovak pop group "Plastic People" and three other people were jailed in Prague in a crackdown on underground music in Czechoslovakia, emigre sources said Saturday.

Police seized band leader Ivan Jirous, 37, last Tuesday and charged him with "disturbances of the public peace," the sources said. Also jailed were Frantisek Starek, Milan Fric and M. Hybek, alleged contributors to the banned underground cultural magazine Vokno, the sources said.

The arrests were part of a sweep that the sources said included house searches in Prague, Teplice and two other cities. At least nine people were taken into custody, although most were later released, the sources said.

Jirous was arrested by Czechoslovak authorities at least twice before, in 1976 and 1978.

Demonstrators march for artists

PARIS (AP) — Five-thousand demonstrators marched silently Saturday to demand what they called "the reappearance and liberation of 100 Argentine artists who have disappeared since 1976."

They carried 100 colored banners each representing an artist, writer, film-maker, sculpter, singer or actor said to have vanished in the last five years in Argentina under the military junta's rule.

The demonstration, joined by Argentine writers Julio Cortazar and Marek Halter, was organized by the International Association for the Defense of Artists.

Danielle Mitterrand, wife of French President Francois Mitterrand, sent a telegram to the group, saying she "hopes public opinion will be swayed by those who have taken upon themselves the task of supporting the cause of the oppressed."

Armenian terrorist arrested in Paris

PARIS (AP) — A suspected Armenian terrorist arrested at Orly airport was charged Saturday with using a false passport by a court that one day earlier had ordered him freed.

His arrest Wednesday was not revealed until late Friday by the court in suburban Creteil. The court first said without elaborating that he was being released because of special circumstances, but reversed its decision because police were angered, the French news agency Agence France-Presse reported.

The suspect was carrying a Cypriot passport in the name of Dimitriu Giorgiu when customs police seized him as he tried to catch a flight for Beirut. He was also carrying 10,000 Swiss francs, documents relating to the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia and newspaper clippings about the Sept. 24 takeover of the Turkish Consulate in Paris by Armenian terrorists, police sources said.

The sources said he admitted he was a member of the secret army, but it was determined that he could not have been involved in the consulate takeover, in which a Turkish guard was killed and the vice counsel wounded.

France, India announce agreement

PARIS (AP) — France and India said Saturday they plan to strengthen cooperation in developing energy sources and in other areas.

A joint communique announced the agreement on the last day of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's official visit.

Observers said it was unlikely, however, that any pact will be reached immediately on a contract for India's purchase of 150 Mirage 2000 jet fighters.

Indian officials were in France last month for talks with military specialists about the $3 billion deal for France's most advanced warplane. But Mrs. Gandhi said in a television interview Thursday that she did not think any commercial contracts would be signed during her three-day visit.

Khomeini warns government

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's supreme leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, sounding hoarse and weary, warned his government Saturday that it must cooperate with the people.

Breaking a three-week silence, Khomeini spoke to President Ali Khamenei, Prime Minister Mir Hossein Musavi and the 21 Cabinet ministers at his modest house in the north Tehran suburb of Jamaran. His 40-minute speech was broadcast by Tehran Radio.

"There must be cooperation between the people and the government, at any price," the 82-year-old leader said. "Otherwise, the country will go back to what it used to be."

Khomeini, who led the 1979 revolution that overthrew the regime of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, said enemies of the Islamic republic "want to create problems between the people and the government."

South Africa has electricity again

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Electric power is flowing into South Africa again from Mozambique's Cahora Bassa dam, after a more than six-month break forced by sabotage of power lines inside Mozambique, the South African Press Association reported Saturday.

Mozambique's Marxist government condemns South Africa's apartheid racial policies, but still depends on its southern neighbor for much of its foreign exchange earnings. All power generated by the dam is sold to South Africa.

Papandreou marks day of uprising

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Socialist Premier Andreas Papandreou Saturday laid a wreath at the Athens Polytechnic School as part of ceremonies marking the eighth anniversary of the 1973 student uprising which led to the downfall of the military government in 1974.

It was the first time a premier has placed a wreath at the school although the event has been marked each year by ceremonies and a march.

The three-day observances will culminate on Sunday with a mass march from the Polytechnic School to an area north of the center called Ambelokipi, the government said.

Schmidt meets with NATO's Luns

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and NATO General Secretary Josef Luns talked Saturday about East-West relations, defense problems and other matters pertaining to the alliance, a government spokesman said. Luns flew to Washington following the hour-long meeting, the spokesman said.

Libyan oil workers want U.S. embargo

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The Libyan oil workers' union called for an Arab petroleum embargo against the United States to protest the presence of U.S. troops in Arab countries, Libya's JANA news agency reported Saturday.

The union condemned Operation Bright Star, the month-long U.S. military exercises in Egypt, Oman, Sudan and Somalia designed to test the United States' ability to defend its interests in the Middle East.

Appealing to all Arab nations, the Union of Petroleum, Mining and Chemical Workers said: "You must rebel against American exploitation and decide on a petroleum embargo against America, which uses our petroleum to run its airplanes and fleets against us."

The Libyan call appeared unlikely to inspire an Arab-wide embargo. Several Arab countries, including the world's largest oil exporter Saudi Arabia, have friendly U.S. relations.

An embargo by Libya alone would not have much impact on the United States, which imports less than 5 percent of its oil from the North African country.

Libyan ruler Col. Moammar Khadafy has often called for an oil embargo against the United States without carrying one out. But Libya has been upset by the U.S. war games in neighboring nations, and observers said Khadafy might consider some retaliation.

"The invasion forces of the American army violate our lands in Egypt, Oman, Sudan and Somalia, where they are thorns in our hearts," JANA quoted the Libyan union's statement as saying.

"It's truly shameful that the Americans, who have supported the Zionist enemy (Israel) for so long and still support it, land their airplanes on Arab soil, to impose again their own hegemony on the zone and to suffocate the aspirations of the Arab nation for liberty and progress," the union said.

Many Libyan oil buyers have slashed purchases this year because Libya has pushed its price to $37.50 a barrel, highest in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries which is already plagued by a glutted market.

West Germans opposed to third airport runway

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Police estimated 100,000 people were in Saturday's march protesting the construction of a third runway at the Rhine-Main International Airport.

The marchers snaked for more eight miles through the streets of this elegant spa and gambling resort city. No violence was reported.

Representatives of the runway opponents gave officials at the state parliament 28 yellow boxes with around 300,000 signatures of construction opponents.

Six-nation force maintains law, trains Chad soldiers

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — A 14-man inspection team will go to Chad Monday in preparation for a six-nation African peacekeeping force that will replace departing Libyan troops, the News Agency of Nigeria reported.

The agency on Saturday quoted Kenyan Foreign Minister Robert Ouko as saying the force will maintain law and order and help train Chad's soldiers. Ouko was quoted as saying the inspection team would submit a report on Chadian security to commanders of the peacekeeping force.

Ouko, who heads the Organization of African Unity's Council of Ministers, met for two days here with foreign ministers of nations contributing to the force, which will include troops from Nigeria, Togo, Guinea, Zaire, Senegal and Benin.

Chad's President Goukouni Oueddei last month asked Libya to withdraw troops it sent nearly a year ago to help him defeat rebels led by former Defense Minister Hissene Habre in the country's civil war. Oueddei also requested the OAU to provide a peacekeeping force to replace the departing Libyans, whose withdrawal was reported nearly complete by Saturday.

Ouko was quoted by the Nigerian news agency as saying a Nigerian would be in overall command of the force, but did not name the commander. The agency also said a summit of participating nations was planned next Friday in Zaire.

Details on the force's size and financial support have not been disclosed. Ouko did not know how long the force would stay in Chad, the agency said. An estimated 12,000 to 15,000 Libyans had been stationed in Chad before their pullout was announced.

In Zaire, government spokesman Kande Dzambulate said 700 Zairean paratroopers would depart Sunday for Chad to take up positions as part of the force. He said they would be supplied by their own country while arrangements to finance the total force are worked out by the OAU.

Last December, Libyans helped Goukouni drive Habre's forces out of the Chadian capital, N'Djamena. Habre retreated to the extreme eastern part of the country near the border with Sudan, and has continued to wage guerrilla war.

Soviet allies oppose Bright Star

MOSCOW (AP) — The foreign ministers of Soviet-allied Libya, Ethiopia and South Yemen will meet in "emergency session" in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, on Sunday and Monday to protest U.S. military exercises in the region, Radio Moscow said.

The broadcast quoted the Ethiopian Foreign Ministry as saying that the U.S. maneuvers, which began Saturday in Egypt, "pose a threat to the security of the nations in the region."

The Soviet news agency Tass said the exercises in Egypt are a "dress rehearsal" for an invasion of Libya. One Kuwait newspaper called the maneuvers an "invasion."

Some 4,000 American troops are taking part in the first phase of the month-long exercises, code-named "Bright Star '82." Other GIs are to take part in maneuvers with soldiers in Sudan, which is sandwiched between Ethiopia and Libya; in Somalia, which borders Ethiopia, and in the Persian Gulf state of Oman.

The Reagan administration has said the exercises are designed to test the ability of the United States to protect its interests in the Middle East.

Learjet crashes in South Africa

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A new model Learjet crashed and exploded in flames at South Africa's Waterkloof air base outside Pretoria, killing the plane's two crewmen, South African radio reported today.

The plane, which crashed Friday night, was described by the South African Broadcasting Corp. as one of the most advanced executive jets in production. A military spokesman said later he believed the plane was a Gates Learjet Corp. Longhorn A-55, the U.S. company's newest executive jet.

The radio quoted the spokesman as saying the jet flew a routine demonstration, landed, took off and crashed seconds later about 220 yards beyond the end of the runway. The spokesman said an initial report that the plane fell back on the runway was wrong.

"The plane immediately burst into flames," the spokesman said. "There was nothing that could be done for the two men. The entire airplane was gutted."

Preller was not a member of the South African armed forces.

Theplane was "privately owned, and was not in any way connected with the military," the military spokesman said.

"It happened so fast. The jet went straight up into the air, flipped over onto its back and fell to the ground like a stone. It immediately burst into flames," said Ben van Rensburg, who told SABC he was driving past the airbase when the crash occurred.

Stockman rethinks doubts, but his problems still there

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget director David A. Stockman has taken back his confessions of doubt about Reaganomics, but the problems he cited — too bluntly for his own good — are coming to pass.

Now that he's staying on the job, his assignment will be to help President Reagan deal with the worsening economic woes he discussed in his controversial Atlantic Monthly interviews.

The nation's economy is weakening far more than the administration had predicted, the budget is drifting deeper into debt than ever before and members of Congress are considering new tax increases to cushion the costly tax cut law.

Even the president conceded last week that the country will face some "hard times" before his supply-side tax cut produces the economic revival he has promised to deliver.

Stockman had been warning about these problems for months in the privacy of White House conference rooms, congressional corridors and off-the-record statements in news reports. The breadth of his concerns remained largely private until this week, when they were catipulted into the public record by the Atlantic Monthly article.

His suggestions of political deception involving Reagan's tax cut and his admitted lack of faith in the "supply-side" economic theory the president espouses prompted a verbal spanking in the Oval Office, an offer of resignation, and a presidential decision to give the budget mastermind a second chance after Stockman reaffirmed his faith in Reagan's program.

But except for an "indiscreet" expression or two, Stockman told reporters last week, "I don't think there is anything in the article that somehow varies with where my positions have been."

Moreover, the potential failures he admitted during what he said he believed to be off-the-record interviews are coming to pass.

As early as last spring, according to the article, Stockman began doubting that Reagan could succeed in cutting taxes, raising defense spending and balancing the budget by 1984.

Allen denies taking money from Japan

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's national security adviser, Richard V. Allen, denied Saturday that he solicited a $1,000 payment he got from Japanese journalists as a token of their appreciation for an interview with Nancy Reagan.

He acknowledged he helped a Japenese magazine land an exclusive interview with the first lady the day after her husband took office, but insisted he did not actually arrange the session.

Allen's statement was released by the White House following reports from Tokyo quoting a magazine spokeswoman as saying the $1,000 was not offered until it was solicited by the person who arranged the interview.

In its Saturday edition, The Washington Post quoted the Japanese reporter who interviewed Mrs. Reagan as expressing surprise at Allen's denial that he set up the meeting.

"That's really funny because without the assistance of Mr. Allen the interview would never have been realized," said the Japanese reporter, Fuyoko Kamisaka, according to the Post account.

The story also quoted an unidentified spokeswoman for the magazine as saying that before the interview took place, "We were asked by the person who arranged the interview what we were thinking about in terms of 'gratitude.'

"We gave the answer, again based on our common sense, which was $1,000," the spokeswoman, who was present at the interview, told the Post. "In our business it is quite natural that we give thank-you fees to people who collaborate with us." The spokeswoman declined to identify the intermediary.

In his statement, Allen said, "As to whether I asked for or ever expected to receive any honorarium, gratuity or fee, the answer is categorically 'no.' Nor was the matter ever raised with me by anyone at anytime."

While asserting that he did not arrange the interview, Allen said, "I did receive the initial request that there be a meeting for the purpose of an interview, which I passed to others for evalution, handling and decision."

Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate, said in Los Angeles that she did not arrange the interview.

The Post story said Allen has a "longtime commercial and social relationship" with the husband of the woman who served as interpreter for Kamisaka.

The interpreter, Chizuko Takase, "acted as a go-between with Allen in helping to set up the meeting," Kamisaka was quoted as saying by the Post.

Allen said the interview request originated with Mrs. Takase. "Her husband and I had been academic colleagues, and later we had individually served as business consultants to several organizations and companies.

"There has been no financial relationship between us," Allen said.

The Justice Department said Friday it was investigating the matter.

Allen said he would not comment further while the Justice Department is investigating. An official statement from the White House said "the White House will refrain from additional comments on this subject" during the Justice Department probe.

In Texas, President Reagan was asked Saturday if he planned to keep Allen on the job despite the allegations. "I can't comment on that while it's under review," Reagan said.

The Post identified Mrs. Takase's husband as Tamotsu, a professor at Kyoto Sangyo University and commercial consultant to a number of Japanese corporate and government interests.

Mrs. Reagan met with representatives of the magazine — Shufunotomo, or Housewife's Friend — last Jan. 21.

U.S.' third Trident sub is launched

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — Dignitaries converged on a shipyard here today to launch the nation's third Trident nuclear submarine.

The Ohio, the nation's biggest and most powerful nuclear sub, on Wednesday became the first Trident to be commissioned. The Michigan was launched in April 1980.

Today's ceremonies at the General Dynamics Corp.'s Electric Boat division shipyard were to christen and launch the 560-foot-long Florida.

Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci III, keynote speaker for the launching, told the crowd that the Reagan administration will soon begin negotiations aimed at controlling nuclear arms production.

The administration, he said, is seeking a "meaningful, balanced and verifiable arms reduction."

"To that end, we will soon enter into negotiations with the objective of controlling and reducing both theater and strategic nuclear weapons," Carlucci said.

Outside the shipyard gates, about 400 anti-nuclear weapons protesters stood peacefully in a line, some handing out leaflets to dignitaries who had to pass through the gates.

Protesters carried signs reading "Trident Is Insanity Masquerading as Security" and "Feed The People, Not The Pentagon" as they marched to the shipyard before the ceremony. About 60 police officers were on hand to watch the demonstrators.

About 200 protesters demonstrated peacefully outside the main gates Wednesday. Five were arrested after chaining themselves together in a road that leads to a Navy base.

Killer's lawyers try to stop execution

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Attorneys for convicted killer Cornelius Lewis say they will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to block their client's execution.

The state Supreme Court ruled Friday that a death sentence ordered by a lower court must be carried out. The court said the penalty was correctly applied in the case of Lewis, 38, who was convicted of the 1978 murder of a Decatur bank guard, Donald Bivens. The execution is scheduled for May 14.

The state Court affirmed the sentence urged by the Champaign County jury and imposed by the trial judge.

Premarital agreement ruled valid

BOSTON (AP) — A premarital agreement that cut a husband out of his wealthy wife's estate if the couple divorced is valid, the state Supreme Court says.

Chief Justice Edward F. Hennessey, who wrote the 22-page decision handed down Friday, said this was the first time the court has validated such an agreement.

The ruling came in dispute between two physicians — the former Barbara E. Mallinckrodt, who lives in Texas, and David P. Osborne Jr. Married in 1967, the couple divorced in 1975. The court concluded that, under the premarital agreement Osborne signed, he was not entitled to alimony or a share in a $60,000 wine collection, $225,000 in jewelry or $448,000 in art works.

Takeover would lessen competition

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court has affirmed a lower court finding that if LTV Corp. were to take control of Grumman Corp., the takeover would diminish competition in the aircraft industry.

U.S. District Judge Jacob Mishler earlier issued a preliminary injunction in response to a suit filed by Grumman, headquartered in Bethpage, seeking to block the takeover attempt. A similar suit filed by the Federal Trade Commission is pending in federal court.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed Friday with Mishler's concern that Dallas-based LTV, which competes in aerospace and aircraft production through a subsidiary, Vought Corp., could liquidate Grumman's non-aerospace components.

California boy admits killing man

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A 17-year-old boy admitted killing a man and wounding a sheriff's deputy and two other men in a sniper shooting in his neighborhood, detectives said.

The unidentified youth was arrested Friday for investigation of murder and three counts of attempted murder, said Kern County sheriff's Lt. John Howard.

Deputy Dennis Micahel Shaffstall, 27, was taking information in an alley on a tire slashing when shots were fired Thursday. A passer-by, Victor Sylvester Browden, 47, of Bakersfield was killed in the shooting. The deputy and two other men were wounded.

Court says 'willful' enclosure okay

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The state Supreme Court dismissed a charge of professional misconduct against a lawyer who included himself in a will he wrote for a wealthy widow.

William H. Barrick of Rockford wrote a will in July 1974 for Josephine Caster that included a $12,000 yearly stipend for himself. Mrs. Caster died seven months later, leaving an estate of nearly $3 million.

The court Friday noted that the stipend was the same amount Barrick had been paid by the woman as an annual retainer. Barrick, 65, said Mrs. Caster had insisted he be included in her will and refused his advice to drop the idea or get another lawyer.

Fire leaves city in the dark

BOSTON (AP) — A manhole fire knocked out electricity Saturday to 6,500 customers in downtown Boston, and two-thirds of the area — including Chinatown and the red-light district — could remain without power until Sunday, officials said.

"We don't expect to have power restored until 9 or 10 a.m. Sunday morning," said Mike Monahan, a spokesman for Boston Edison. "We're just advising people to hang tight and bundle up."

No injuries were reported.

Monahan said the fire was discovered in a manhole shortly before 1 a.m. The heat of the fire was so intense it melted seven cable connections that provided power in a wide area. Officials don't know the cause of the fire.

"The manhole was a mess," said Monahan.

The fire initially interrupted electric service to some 6,500 Boston Edision customers in the heart of the city, including sections of the Tufts New England Medical Center, Boston Edison spokesman Walter Salvi said. The hospital continued normal operations with the help of emergency generators.

Electricity was restored to half the affected area shortly before 10 a.m., including the downtown shopping area and Beacon Hill, where the state Capitol and numerous apartment buildings are located.

But the garment district, Chinatown and the Combat Zone — a section of adult movie houses and striptease cabarets — were expected to remain in darkness.

Downtown stores were late in opening for business after the blackout. Impatient customers, some of whom had arrived at 8 a.m. when many downtown coffee shops open, waited for as much as 90 minutes to start their shopping.

Monahan said workmen were able to reconnect cables and restore power to customers north of the fire area. But extensive damage to cables running south of the manhole — including the areas which were expected to be without power overnight — had to be bypassed.

Settlements paid in Hyatt disaster

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Relatives of three people killed in the collapse of two skywalks at the Hyatt Regency Hotel have received payments totaling nearly $700,000 after settling their damage claims, court records say.

The payments were the first stemming from the accident. Lawsuits seeking more than $3 billion have been filed in connection with the July 17 collapse which killed 113 people and injured 188.

The Occidental Fire & Casualty Co. paid the claims. The insurance company insures the hotel and its owner, the Crown Center Redevelopment Corp.

Relatives of the victims appeared before Jackson County Circuit Judge Timothy D. O'Leary on Thursday and identified themselves as heirs. The settlements were formally agreed upon, and the relatives received checks in the courtroom. The settlements were entered in court records Friday.

The sum of $600,000 was awarded to Patricia Botnen and her four children, who had sought $10 million. Mrs. Botnen's husband, Henry, was killed in the accident, and she was injured. Mrs. Botnen is seeking an additional $10 million for her injuries.

Thomas A. Vance received $45,000 of the $2 million he had sought in connection with the death of his sister, Louise O'Connor.

Robert Gillespie and Lucille Edmiston, half-bother and half-sister of Neal O'Connor, husband of Louise O'Connor, each received $25,000. They had sued for a total of $2 million in separate suits.

"I don't think there's anything that helps ease the loss," Mrs. Edmiston said. "It was a fair settlement. But a loss like this takes a lot of time to overcome."

Girl gets donated liver

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 2½-year-old girl's cancerous liver was replaced Saturday by that of a little boy after a Wisconsin doctor spotted news stories about her plight and alerted doctors to the braindead donor.

Doctors had said Lauren Toohey of Kinnelon, N.J., might not live until Christmas unless her liver was replaced. Months of tense waiting ended after a donor was found and the delicate operation, led by Dr. Thomas Starzl, was completed in nine hours at Children's Hospital.

She was reported in critical condition Saturday after the surgery.

Officials at Kenosha Memorial Hospital in Wisconsin identified the liver donor as 4-year-old Robert Mayberry, son of Robert and Diane Mayberry of Kenosha. He died of meningitis Friday night.

The boy was hospitalized Nov. 8 and had been on a respirator since Monday, according to a hospital news release. Hospital officials said tests showed the boy had no brain function.

An unidentified Wisconsin pediatrician who had seen news stories about Lauren's parents' search for a donor alerted officials about the potential donor, hospital officials said.

"The donor was very compatible with the child," said Brian Broznick, associate coordinator of the University of Pittsburgh's Transplant Foundation.

"It's a very tough situation because, unfortunately, one child does have to die to save another child. A family that is grieving has to search their soul and try to find enough goodness in their heart to help somebody else," he said.

Blue-eyed, brown-haired Lauren flew with her parents, Joseph and Beatrice Toohey, by chartered jet to Pittsburgh on Friday night. Starzl, a transplant specialist at the University of Pittsburgh, accompanied them, then flew to Wisconsin to help retrieve the organ.

A medical transplant team of three doctors and a nurse from Pittsburgh arrived at the Racine, Wis., airport shortly after 8 p.m. Friday and left about three hours later with the liver, according to a hospital release.

Doctors had to move quickly because the organ can be preserved for only 12 hours after it is removed from the donor, said Broznick.

The operation began shortly after midnight and ended around 9 a.m. Saturday.

"We certainly never thought Friday the 13th would be our lucky day," said Beth Israel Hospital spokeswoman Dorothy Dennison. She said Lauren suffers from hereditary tyrosinemia, a condition which prevents the body from breaking down some amino acids, leading to the buildup of toxic substances. Ms. Dennison said the disease causes the liver to become cancerous.

Normally, in such cases, the liver fails completely by the time the child has reached the age of 2 and death results.

The disease also affected the child's mental development and left her with rickets.

The Toohey family launched a public appeal for a donor last summer and issued a renewed appeal last week. Beth Israel Hospital in Newark, N.J., coordinated the effort.

Lauren's age complicated the search because a suitable liver could only come from a child who weighed no more than 30 pounds and had either A- or O-type blood.

AMC requests 30-day supplier payment delay

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — American Motors Corp. is asking some of its key suppliers to accept a 30-day delay for payment of current bills, an AMC spokesman said Saturday.

George Thompson said the automaker "recently entered into agreement with certain suppliers with whom we have a very close relationship" to extend the billing deadline.

"This is just reacting to the present situation in the industry," Thompson said. "Sales are not good right now for the industry as a whole; it's just a reaction to a very down market."

The move came less than a week after AMC asked its workers to accept a 10 percent decrease in wages and benefits for 22 months.

AMC sales fell an estimated 38.6 percent for early November, to 2,500 cars from last year's 4,079. Sales for 1981 were pegged at 121,993 cars, a 6.1 percent drop from 130,362 last year. The figures are estimated because the automaker releases sales figures on a monthly basis only.

This year, U.S. automakers have sold 5,558,927 cars, down 2.8 percent from 5,742,359 last year.

More moms work than ever

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 45 percent of all preschool children had mothers who were either working away from home or looking for jobs as of last March, a record high, the Labor Department reported Saturday.

Citing a Census Bureau survey done for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the department said the mothers of 8.2 million children under 6 years of age were in the labor force at the time of the study, up from 7.7 million a year earlier.

The department said the trend "coincides with the upsurge during the last few years in the number of births among women in their late twenties and early thirties" and that it happened despite a generally declining birth rate.

As of March 1980, the number of preschool children whose mothers were in the labor force was 7.7 million — 43 percent of the total. Last March, 44.9 percent of those 6 and under fell into that category.

The Current Population Survey also said that 31.8 million children below age 18 — or 54 percent of the total — had mothers in the labor force by March 1981.

School board vetoes dictionaries

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Education on Saturday approved a $27.2 million textbook shopping list, one that includes no high school dictionaries because they included words found obscene by the state's education commissioner.

In a voice vote, the board unanimously approved the books for 26 elementary and secondary subjects recommended by Commissioner Raymon Bynum.

There will be no new dictionaries for high school classroom use because Bynum rejected the recommendations of the State Textbook Committee. His report said Merriam-Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, published by Ginn and Company, included "numerous words and definitions which are not considered as widely used and are unsuitable for adoption."

The rejection left only one dictionary recommended by the textbook committee. A state statute says no book can be picked if it is the only one recommended.

At a Friday meeting, the board voted 17-4 in favor of Bynum's recommendations. Board members Virginia Currey of Arlington, Mary Ann Leveridge of East Bernard, Volly Bastine Jr. of Houston and Wayne Windle of El Paso voted against Bynum's report.

Mrs. Currey, a Southern Methodist University professor, said Friday, "My understanding was that we very firmly stated in our proclamation ... that dictionaries should include, well labeled, all kinds of words."

Despite Friday's vote, when the board met as a committee to review books, there were no objections raised Saturday.

The dictionaries would have been used in a high school English class to familiarize students with use of dictionaries.

Despite the failure to adopt a dictionary, school districts are still free to buy any dictionary they want for library use.

School district textbook committees will meet early next year to select books from the lists approved by the state board.

In other action Saturday, the board approved a system of selecting students for bilingual education. Students will be tested and surveyed when they come into the public school system for the first time.

Board member Ruben Hinojosa of Mercedes said about 300 letters had been received concerning the criteria for determining if a student should enter or leave the bilingual program, approved by the 1981 Legislature.

There are about 200,000 non-English speaking students in Texas public schools. About 240 districts offer bilingual programs for the elementary grades. Another 450 offer English-as-a-second-language programs through high school.

Under the system approved by the board, students who fall below the 23rd percentile on a written exam will go into a bilingual program. Students who score above the 40th percentile will not go into the program.

Students who score between the 23rd and 40th percentile will be reviewed by a local Language Proficiency Assessment Committee, which will determine the best program for the child.

Hinojosa said letter-writers complained students in that group could be excluded from bilingual education if the local committee does not support the program.

"If the LPAC is not favorable to the program, there's that possibility," Hinojosa said. He said he is confident the committees will do what's best for each student, however.

The board reserved the right to revise the rules.

Also Saturday, the board:

— Requested $2.7 million in federal funds to help districts provide English instruction to refugee children. Some 10,295 students from Southeast Asia, Cuba and Haiti are enrolled in Texas public schools.

— Approved a rule change that will allow parents of handicapped children to appeal Texas Education Agency decisions directly to the courts. Under the previous system, the TEA decisions were appealed first to the commissioner and then to the board. A federal court, however, recently struck down Georgia's appeals process, which was the same as Texas'.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture inspector checks a box of chili peppers for quality before allowing them to enter the country from Mexico. Food and Drug Administration inspectors sometimes check produce entering the U.S. for pesticide residue, but two El Paso researchers say border area residents may be eating pesticide-ridden food.

Mexican produce may contain DDT

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Mexican fruits and vegetables imported into the United States may be carrying harmful pesticide residue, including the outlawed chemical DDT, say two El Paso reseachers.

Howard Applegate and Keith Redetzke, researchers at the University of Texas at El Paso, fear that Americans, particularly residents of border states, are eating large amounts of produce contaminated with harmful pesticides.

Federal officials say they sample incoming produce for pesticides, but admit that the number of shipments checked "is a low figure."

Redetzke and Applegate are worried because regulation of pesticides and enforcement of those regulations is weaker in Mexico than it is in the United States.

For example, it is illegal to sell DDT in Mexico. But levels of DDT in human tissue in Ciudad Juarez, right across the Rio Grande from El Paso, are among the highest in the world, they said.

Redetzke said a study of samples taken randomly from tissues removed in surgery at Juarez General Hospital in 1978 has shown an average of more than 20 parts per million of DDT. Studies have shown the average level in the United States to be 12.6 parts per million and an average of 3.24 parts per million in Japan.

"It may in fact be illegal to sell over there, but it still is sold," Redetzke said.

He and Applegate say DDT and related pesticides are less effective that what's currently on the U.S. market, but still are widely used in Latin America because they are cheaper.

"It's kind of scary to know there are high levels in Juarez and there is a lot of interchange between the two cities," Redetzke said. "These are not nice things to have in your environment. I'd like to see better regulation of their use in foreign countries."

The United States, which banned DDT except for emergency use in 1972, applies its regulations to produce entering the country from Mexico, but enforcing the regulations proves a difficult task.

"We have only a certain amount of human and financial resources," said Roman Longoria of the Food and Drug Administration's Dallas office. "The amount we can sample is a low figure. When you consider the volume, it's not too much."

Foodstuffs and live animals imported from Mexico last year totaled $1.3 billion, according to U.S. Census bureau figures. Of that amount, $131 million worth was tomatoes and $175 million worth was other vegetables.

Federal officials aren't even certain about how many shipments of produce enter the country from the south, said Andrew Towndrow, U.S. Customs' chief inspector in El Paso.

"They break down into formal or informal entries," Towndrow said. "Number-wise, I don't have any idea what part of those entries are produce. I don't know that we keep those kinds of figures.

"It's doesn't make any difference to me nor does it make any difference to Washington how much of this is produce," he said.

Boards misused closed door privileges

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Austin school trustees abused their power to meet behind closed doors six times in 1979 and 1980, a state district judge has ruled.

Judge Harley Clark on Friday approved a directed verdict on six of 13 allegations raised in an Austin American-Statesman lawsuit, which claimed the trustees violated the Texas Open Meetings Act.

"We can fairly say there are distinct limitations as to what we want our public institutions to consider in executive sessions," Clark said. Doing business in public "is the price we pay because this is a public institution."

Jurors, who recessed for the weekend, will come back to the courthouse Monday to consider seven other alleged violations.

The newspaper wants Clark to issue an injunction barring the Austin Independent School District board from meeting in unauthorized closed-door sessions. The Open Meetings Act says governmental bodies can meet privately only to consider personnel actions, land acquisitions and lawsuits.

Clark ruled the board violated the law by:

— Failing to post notices of executive sessions that specifically stated what was to be discussed in the closed-door meetings.

— Discussing in closed session the hiring of consultants to assist in the selection of a superintendent.

— Electing board officers in closed session.

— Deciding in a closed meeting to release to Common Cause the names and qualifications of applicants for superintendent.

— Deciding in closed meeting to offer surplus property for sale.

— Failing to convene in public before going into executive session.

School board attorney Shannon Ratliff argued that more specific notices concerning executive sessions would impair the trustees' ability to protect the privacy of students appealing disciplinary actions.

Clark said, "I don't know that I agree with that. It's dangerous to assume that anonymity of children in disciplinary matters is preferable."

Later, the judge said he appreciated the "considerable candor" of the trustees who testified at the trial. The violations were not committed "on the basis of unhealthy motives or meanness," Clark said.

Will Davis, school board president, said Clark's interpretations of the law "were simply different from" the board's.

Davis said no decision had been made on whether to appeal Clark's ruling.

"We'll have to pass on that sometime later. I didn't see anything in his rulings that are impossible for us to comply with," he said.

Two hurt at prison

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Two Texas Department of Corrections inmates face disciplinary action after a fight that left five guards and two inmates injured, prison officials said.

An investigation is continuing into the incident, which occurred when guards tried to quiet 17 Ellis Unit inmates during a routine count at 12:30 a.m. Friday, said TDC spokesman Guy Taylor.

The inmates were among a group of 160 who had been restricted to their cells for two weeks for protesting prison conditions by refusing to work, said TDC spokesman James Boyd.

When the inmates refused to be quiet, additional guards were called and "they were assaulted by inmates throwing bottles and jars at them," said Taylor.

The fight broke out when the guards tried to remove two prisoners who had thrown objects from their cells, Taylor said.

Affluent dealing brothers caught

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Brothers Benito and Matias Montemayor celebrated their rise to affluence by buying diamond-studded watches, thoroughbred racehorses and truckloads of furniture — mostly in cash.

They settled into comfortable houses, back-to-back, in the Parkland Estates subdivision in McAllen. Doctors and lawyers were among their neighbors along the fashionable cul-de-sacs.

Then on April 28, U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents dropped in with search warrants and orders to seize one home and the contents of both houses,down to a set of artificial fireplace logs.

The Montemayors, claimed DEA agents in federal court affadavits, had acquired all their personal property by running one of the country's largest brown heroin pipelines from Mexico.

Using a controversial 1978 law, the agents obtained permission from a federal magistrate to seize any property traceable to illegal drug ventures.

Code-named "Operation Cat Claw," the raid was the first under the civil statute. No criminal charges need be filed under the law.

In a test case likely to reach the U.S. Supreme Court, lawyers for the Mexican nationals go to court Monday to try to recover the property and challenge the law.

"Our problem is that the agents have usurped their power," said attorney Michael Guinan of Chicago, lawyer for the brothers.

Federal officials defend the law as a necessary tool to hurt large-scale drug dealers where it hurts — in the wallet.

Matias Montemayor currently is in the Nueces County jail in Corpus Christi on an unrelated firearms charge. He was moved there after the local sheriff feared he would try to escape from the Cameron County jail.

Benito Montemayor has been at large since October, when he and two other brothers were charged in a criminal complaint with conspiring to distribute $3 million worth of cocaine. He had appeared in federal court in July at a pretrial hearing on the property seizure.

DEA agents claim at least five of the six Montemayor brothers are involved in the "family business" of supplying heroin to Chicago and Detroit. Manuel and Meynardo Montemayor are in custody on the cocaine charge.

Reyes Montemayor has been wanted since 1979 on narcotics charges. Robelin Montemayor is the only brother not currently charged by U.S. officials with a drug violation.

The government requested a jury trial in the property seizure case. The trial before U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela is expected to take between four to seven days.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jose Berlanga of Houson has listed 33 potential government witnesses.

Those subpoenaed include merchants from whom the Montemayors purchased more than $1 million in goods — jewelers, furniture stores, dry cleaners, Oriental rug dealers, realtors and car dealers.

Engineers relocate

DALLAS (AP) — Between 60 and 70 engineers laid off by the South Texas Nuclear Plant have been offered jobs at the other nuclear power plant under construction in Texas.

The engineers were willing to relocate to the Comanche Peak Nuclear Plant near Glen Rose, said Louis Fikar, vice president for Texas Utilities Generating Co., which manages the plant.

Lubbock man guilty of coke smuggling

By TOM EBLEN
Associated Press Writer

SEVIERVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Texas man was convicted Saturday and sentenced to 10 years in prison for helping to smuggle cocaine worth more than $200 million into Tennessee.

Charles Leslie Kageler Jr., 24, of Lubbock, Texas, was found guilty of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver. He was acquitted on a second count of cocaine possession with intent to sell.

The Sevier County Criminal Court jury of seven men and five women deliberated more than four hours Friday night and Saturday morning before returning the verdict.

The sentence was the minimum Kageler could have received. The maximum would have been a life sentence.

Kageler showed no emotion when the verdict was announced.

But after Judge Ken Porter recessed court, Kageler held his wife in a long, tearful embrace before deputies led him back to jail.

Knoxville lawyer Bob Ritchie, who led Kageler's defense, said he would appeal the conviction.

Kageler admitted to being co-pilot of a Beechcraft Queen Aire 80 which landed March 23 at Sevierville-Gatlinburg Airport with 613 pounds of nearly pure cocaine from Colombia.

Federal Drug Enforcement Administration officials said the cargo, with a street value of more than $200 million, was among the largest amounts of the illegal drug ever confiscated in the United States.

Tennessee Bureau of Investigation agents seized the plane before the cocaine was unloaded but after its occupants fled.

Also charged is the man Kageler said piloted the plane: Clarence Dennis Newell, 51, of Kemah, Texas. No trial date has been set.

Kageler was arrested June 2 at his home in Texas, and Newell was seized May 18 at his lawyer's office in Houston.

Authorities also are searching for Kageler's father, Charles Leslie Kageler Sr., 47, of Lubbock, and Gerald Hemp, 42, of Gatlinburg, who they believe masterminded the scheme.

Agents saw Hemp and the elder Kageler at the airport shortly after the plane was seized but haven't seen them since.

Ritchie and Lubbock lawyer Clifford Brown said Kageler was tricked by his father into helping with the scheme. They portrayed him as an insecure young man who idolized his father and trusted him without question.

Choking back tears, Kageler testified that his father told him he made a living by smuggling weapons to anti-communist guerrillas in South America. Kageler said that when his father asked him to be co-pilot of the trip, he told him it was a weapons run.

Kageler said he became frightened and confused when, on the way back to the United States, Newell told him their cargo was cocaine.

But District Attorney General Al Schmutzer argued Kageler knew he was breaking the law when he flew the plane into Sevier County, and he tried several times to escape arrest after the plane was seized.

Odd pair in running for mayor

HOUSTON (AP) — A widowed accountant and a veteran sheriff old enough to be her father are paired in a heated runoff Tuesday for the mayoral seat in the nation's fifth-largest city.

One candidate was endorsed by the Gay Political Caucus while the other rejected backing he received from the Ku Klux Klan. The two say their approach to problems in the Gulf Coast city would be very different.

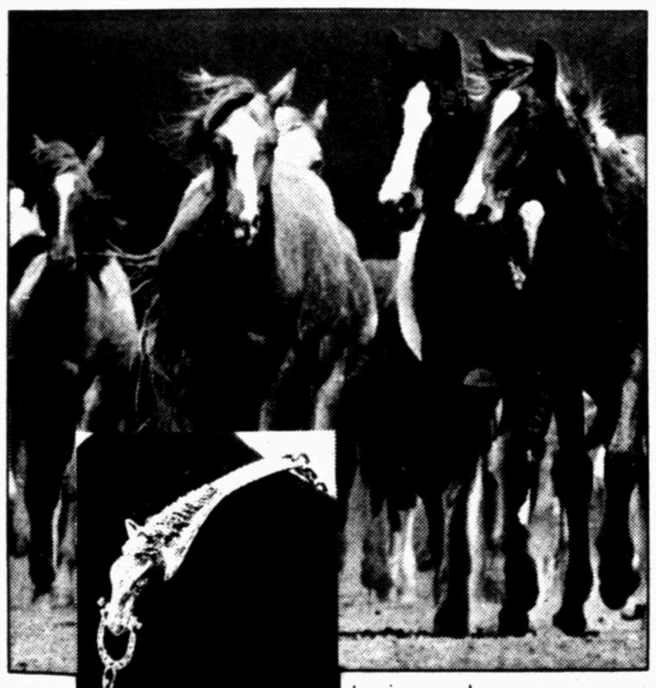

But the problems of the booming city and how to solve them have been overshadowed by a squabble over a promised television debate.

Even before the final tally was in from the Nov. 3 election, it appeared a runoff election would be necessary and city Controller Kathy Whitmire challenged Sheriff Jack Heard to a debate. He accepted.

But when Mrs. Whitmire's campaign workers were late for a planning meeting last week, irritated Heard supporters left after 15 minutes. Each candidate then accused the other of stalling to avoid the debate.

Adoring the doors

Two youths appear fascinated by the vertical doors of the DeLorean sports car on display at the Midland New Car and Truck Dealers Association's 1982 Car Show at Chaparral Center. The DeLorean, priced at about $27,000, is being sold through Rogers Ford. The show will continue today from 1 to 6 p.m.

Can't you just see me driving that?

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

It was a pleasant way to spend a Saturday afternoon.

The weather was nice outside the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center where several shiny, new-model cars, trucks and vans glistened in the warm autumn sun.

A small crowd of people gathered around the richly colored brown Lincoln Towncar Limousine, staring in awe at the lush interior with its color television console.

Inside, the crowd was a comfortable size, quietly milling around the Midland New Car and Truck Dealers Association's 1982 Car Show.

"We've had a pretty steady stream of people in here today," Bill Rogers of Rogers Ford said.

People reverently congregated around certain displays, such as Rogers Ford's DeLorean sports car. The stainless steel vehicle, with the gull-wing doors that open vertically to resemble a great silver bird, had a sticker price of around $27,000.

One teen-age girl was overheard saying to her friend, "Can't you just see me driving that?"

"That's not an American car is it?" a woman asked.

A reproduction of a 1930 Model A Roadster, exhibited by Village Lincoln-Mercury, also drew a crowd. With its bright yellow paint job, shiny chrome and safety devices built according to today's regulations, the car still looked like it had just driven in from the good ol' days of the Great Gatsby.

While music from a country-western radio station piped in, small children holding brightly colored balloons laughed and clapped for Grant Davis, of Odessa, and his magic tricks.

Two convertibles on exhibit caught the attention of many potential customers. The sporty Fiat Spider 2000 model displayed by Mid-Way Motors was the first year for the turbo, Jim Galyean, of Mid-Way Motors, explained.

According to Sam Fowler of Sloan Brothers Buick, the 1982 Skylark convertible "has caused a lot of comments. It's the only American convertible here at the show," he said.

The somewhat higher price of 1982 cars was reflected on the cars' window stickers. "The public knows they (the prices) are up," Bernie Jennings, of Berg Motor Co., said, "but many people are still in 'sticker shock.' "

"We're not really pushing sales on people today," Fowler said. "People are mainly just looking.

"But, in Midland, you never can tell who will come in to buy later."

Fowler explained that even though the prices of cars are high, so are the sales here, thanks to Midland's booming economy.

"We (car dealers) are just lucky to be in the part of the country we're in," he said.

The show continues today from 1 to 6 p.m. There is no admission charge.

That stylish scrub suit costs the hospital — now it could cost you

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

About a year ago on college campuses throughout the nation, students could be seen garbed in green-smocked surgical scrub shirts used by hospital physicians and nurses. This year, it is common to see joggers trotting in parks dressed in the same cotton shirts.

"It's a fad. It will pass," many say.

It has been stylish to wear the shirt or pants with the stamped identification of a hospital, say several Midland fashion merchandisers. Although the garment industry attempted to copy the design with the words "General Hospital" printed on the clothing, the public who favored this attire wanted the "real thing."

Who wears the drab green apparrel and where do they get them?

According to Tom Moses, vice president of operations at Midland Memorial Hospital, the scrub suits taken from hospitals are popular not only with the younger set, but with a variety of people — especially joggers, who like the complete outfit because of the comfort.

"Linen is always a major loss at hospitals. We lose everything — towels, washcloths, bed linen and scrub suits," Moses said.

He noted that last year MMH spent in excess of $28,000 for linen replacement with $16,924 on the scrub suits alone.

Hospital officials are not sure whether or not the disappearance of the scrubs are an internal affair, and they are reluctant to comment. However, Moses said "there is profit to be made by selling" the clothing. He added there also is a "possibility of the general public having access to the scrubs if they were to wait on the dock" when the laundry arrived.

As a result of this costly disappearance, Moses noted that many hospitals have come up with some kind of gimmick to prevent the loss.

But, sometimes even a "gimmick" doesn't work, Moses said, adding that when Las Vegas, Nev., hotels stamped ashtrays with the words "Stolen from...," it only made the tourists take more of them.

"People don't understand the cost involved in taking the srcubs. They think 'the hospital has plenty,' " Moses said.

Since replacement costs are skyrocketing for the suits, different ideas are being tested to stop the thefts.

"The vendor we use came up with a pattern-like design (with) the name of the hospital all over the scrub. Even they (vendors) are concerned and they really shouldn't be — they're making profit," he said referring to the seriousness of the replacement costs.

Moses, after thumbing through many medical magazines, saw an idea he feels will work for MMH.

From now on, MMH will have new color-coordinated scrub suits that will bear an iron-on stamp inside and outside that reads: "Property of MMH — Never Sold — Unauthorized Possession of This Article Constitutes Theft by Conversion," which means anyone found having or wearing the scrubs could be charged with theft. Moses claims that the stamped statement will hold up in court if offenders are prosecuted.

Futhermore, all nurses will be issued their own surgical suits and they will have to launder the clothing themselves in order to account for the clothing.

"Before a new set will be issued," Moses said, "they must bring in the old one."

Lyn Story, a MMH surgical nurse, said the idea of laundering her own scrubs would not cause an inconvenience — she did it when she wore nurses uniforms.

"The nurses will take better care of them if they are issued and must be laundered by the individual," she said.

The "fad" and relaxed attitude about the missing garments will have to stop, according to Moses. He said all personnel who are issued the scrubs will be responsible for them.

The color coordinated scrubs will be issued to the emergency room nurses in a cranberry color, surgery nurses in beige tops and brown pants and labor and delivery nurses in blue. Doctors' scrubs will remain green.

"This could precipitate more theft," Moses said. "On the other hand, the color-coordinated scrubs are not as popular."

Sherri Uhles, Midland Memorial Hospital registered nurse, wears a new color-coordinated surgical scrub suit stamped with a statement of prosecution if the garment is found in the hands of unauthorized personnel. The scrubs and stamp are a direct result of the popularity of garments which have been disappearing from hospitals throughout the nation.

In war with winter weather, you can win

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

In October 1980, a trace of snow was recorded in Midland — a foreshadowing of the pre-winter severe weather that was soon to follow.

For on Nov. 16, almost an official 6 inches of snow — and as much as 11 inches unofficially — buried the Permian Basin, while a week later 1.5 additional inches fell.

In the wide open spaces of West Texas, to be caught out in frigid conditions theoretically can be more severe than a blizzard in the Northeast — for distances between the cities are immense, help is sometimes not readily available, and the unpredictability of Texas weather means the sudden onset of a "blue norther" can catch a person unaware.

West Texas winter weather, perhaps surprisingly to newcomers, can at times be deadly, as the official record snowfall total for the winter in Midland is 13½ inches.

Automobile accidents result from icy roads; overexhaustion and extreme exertion in cold temperatures can lead to heart attacks to the susceptible; gas heaters or auto heaters used without proper ventilation can mean death by carbon monoxide poisoning; and icy sidewalks or downed electrical wires can wreak havoc with pedestrians.

"I am more concerned with people down here (in winter) than up north, because people aren't used to snow and ice here," said Midland Civil Defense coordinator Bob Edgerton.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency in Washington, D. C. has prepared basic winter weather tips which West Texans should be congnizant of, said Edgerton, including suggestions for the home, driving and emergency.

KEEPING INFORMED

As a first step in winter preparedness, FEMA recommends keeping posted on weather conditions through television, local radio, or weather service radio. A few hours' warning may prevent persons from getting trapped outside in a severe storm or allow adequate preparations to be made at home.

A severe weather "watch," as issued by the National Weather Service, means conditions are conducive for the formation of severe weather. A severe weather "warning," however, means severe weather is imminent, and immediate action should be taken to protect life and property.

Other NWS terminology relevant to winter weather includes "blizzard," the most dangerous of all winter storms, combining cold air, heavy snow and strong winds. A "blizzard warning" is issued when the NWS expects considerable snowfall combined with winds of 35 mph or more, while a "severe blizzard" means considerable snowfall, winds at least 45 mph and temperatures below 10 degrees.

A "heavy snow" warning usually is indicative that snowfall of 4 inches or more is expected within a 12-hour period, or 6 inches or more in a 24-hour period.

"Travelers' advisories" are issued to advise motorists of driving hazards posed by snow, sleet or freezing rain and drizzle, while an "ice storm" generally describes conditions when precipitation glazes over roadways. West Texans should keep in mind that more than 85 percent of ice-storm deaths are traffic-related.

"The most dangerous thing here are these ice storms where you get just a little ice on the highways," said Edgerton, noting especially the suseptibility of bridges and overpasses to this "black ice."

PREPARING FOR ISOLATION

Even in West Texas, said Edgerton, it is advisable to be prepared for isolation in the home during winter storms. FEMA recommends stocking an emergency supply of water, as well as food that needs no cooking or refrigeration. Additionally, it says it is advisable to retain emergency cooking facilities — backpack stoves or Sterno work well — and to remember that should home heating fail, more calories are required in cold weather to keep the body's own heating system maintained.

Because severe winter storms can knock out power lines, persons should keep a flashlight and extra batteries or candles and matches handy. A battery-powered radio with extra batteries will keep persons informed of emergency information broadcasts by local authorities.

Some type of emergency heating equipment and fuel also may be necessary, according to FEMA, such as a camp stove with fuel or a supply of wood or coal if a fireplace is available. However, proper ventilation is absolutely essential and extra caution must be taken to prevent fire.

FEMA also notes that water pipes can freeze if home heating fails, though they may be insulated with layers of newspapers. If it is extremely cold, faucets may be left dripping to prevent freezing or the main valve outside may be shut off and the pipes drained.

If despite such efforts the pipes do freeze, faucets should be opened wide to allow for expansion of the frozen water and any insulative newspapers removed.

MAINTAINING HEALTH

The FEMA recommends persons stay indoors during winter storms unless it is absolutely essential they go outside, for cold temperatures put an added strain on the heart. Persons who exert themselves physically — and who are not in shape — risk heart attack, stroke or other physical damage.

If a person must go outdoors, says FEMA, loose-fitting, light-weight warm clothing in several layers should be worn, as entrapped air insulates the body. Wool is highly regarded for winter storm wear, as it continues to insulate even when dampened by snow or perspiration. A wool hat, preferably the toboggan type, should be worn, as the body loses up to 75 percent of its heat through the head. Furthermore, mittens keep the fingers warmer than gloves, due to finger-to-finger contact.

Persons outdoors for prolonged periods during severe weather, such as hunters or backpackers, should guard against frostbite and hypothermia. Frostbite causes a loss of feeling, usually in the fingers or toes or face, and results in a white or pale appearance. Persons should seek medical attention immediately, but if no help is available, no amateur attempts at treatment should be made.

Rubbing snow over the frostbitten portions of the body is not a solution, and there have been instances in which mountaineers have hiked for several days with frozen feet.

Hypothermia, meanwhile, is when the body loses heat faster than it can produce it, and usually occurs at other times of the year when a combination of wet conditions, cool temperatures (generally below 50 degrees) and wind are present. First symptom is uncontrollable shivering. Later, the person may exhibit slurred speech, incoherence, stumbling, drowsiness and exhaustion. Because his mental judgment is impaired, he may vehemently argue nothing is wrong with him, so symptoms should be noted closely.

If possible, the person should be put into dry clothing and a warm bed or sleeping bag and warm liquids administered. In the back country, as a last resort, body-to-body contact inside the same sleeping bag may be required.

SEVERE WEATHER TRAVEL

The FEMA recommends that if extensive travel is required in severe winter storms, the driver should be sure his car is properly maintained. A CB radio is advisable, and the car radio should be left on continuously so further weather reports can be obtained.

Keeping the gasoline tank as nearly full as possible, says the FEMA, will keep water out of the tank and provide maximum advantage in case of trouble. Furthermore, emergency supplies should be carried, including a container of sand, shovel, windshield scraper, battery booster cables, tow chain or rope, tire chains, flashlight and transistor radio with extra batteries, first aid kit with pocket knife, compass and road maps, tools, non-perishable food supply, matches, winter clothing, sleeping bags or blankets.

CAR ISOLATION

If a storm traps a person in his car, according to FEMA, he should display his emergency flashers and raise the hood and wait for help, assuming he is on a well-traveled road. Regardless, it adds, if there is no house or apparent help in sight, a person should not leave his vehicle, as disorientation is likely to occur during a blizzard and overexertion can spell disaster. Rather, it recommends stranded motorists sit out the storm and wait for someone to come along.

The engine and heater should be run sparingly, but cautions should be made to crack a down-wind window for ventilation as well as to ensure the the exhaust pipe has not been blocked by snow. While exercise should be done through clapping of hands and moving of arms and legs, overexertion again should be avoided. Exercise warms a person, but also increases body heat loss.

If more than one person is in the car, one person should remain awake all the time, while if only the driver is present, he should avoid going to sleep.

FEMA recommends the dome light be turned on at night to make the car more visible to working crews.

Could you please help me find a recipe for a "Pina Colada Cake," made with pineapple and rum?

Thank you for any help you can give me. — Ginger Jones

ANSWER: This recipe for "Easy Pina Colada Cake" is provided by Imperial Liquors.

1 package (18½ ounces) yellow cake mix

½ cup plus 1 to 2 tablespoons Coco Lopez Pina Colada Mix

½ cup light Puerto Rican rum

½ cup vegetable oil

4 eggs

1 cup sifted confectioner's sugar

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F.

In a large mixing bowl, combine cake mix, pudding mix, ½ cup pinada mix, rum, oil and eggs. Beat at medium speed 2 minutes.

Pour into well greased and floured 10-inch Bundt or tube pan. Bake 50 to 55 minutes, cool slightly and remove from pan.

In a small bowl, gradually add the pina colada mix to the sugar and mix until smooth. Drizzle over the warm cake.

I want to take out a bank loan, but the only collateral I can offer is to pledge my life insurance.

Would this be a wise thing to do? — J.K.

ANSWER: It depends on how badly you really need that bank loan, says The American Council of Life Insurance.

If you should default on your loan payments, the bank can use the cash value of the policy to repay the loan, thus reducing your coverage by that amount and perhaps leading to the loss of your life insurance protection.

And if you should die before repaying the loan, the bank would deduct the outstanding amount from the policy you had assigned to them, paying what was left over to your family. Obviously, this again would reduce your family's financial protection — and presumably the reason you took out the life insurance coverage in the first place was to protect them.

If you decide you must go ahead with the loan, you definitely should take out some additional life insurance — at least a decreasing term policy — to protect your family until the loan is repaid. Perhaps the bank could arrange some low cost credit life insurance.

Is the Pap test really no good for detecting uterine cancer in older women? — Mrs. B.N.

ANSWER: The Pap test is helpful for all uterine cancer, but mainly for that affecting the uterine cervix, the American Cancer Society says.

It is only about 40 percent effective in detecting endometrial cancer, which affects the body of the uterus, and tends to develop in women 50 to 64 years of age. For them, physicians recommend a complete pelvic exam as well as a Pap test.

It is suggested that if you have any further questions about cancer you can contact the Midland Chapter of the American Cancer Society or call M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute's Cancer Information Service, 1-800-392-2040 toll free in Texas.

According to Texas law, how long can property be held in trust for a person's spouse, children and grandchildren? Is the law different here in Texas than in other states? — K.J.

ANSWER: In Texas, as in the majority of states in the United States, property can be held in trust for the lifetimes of all living persons named or referred to in the will or trust agreement plus 21 years, says the State Bar of Texas.

This rule which prevents tying up of property indefinitely is called the Rule against Perpetuities and was adopted from the English common law at the time Texas became a state.

New high school offers alternative

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

An alternative is a choice. And an alternative education is a choice of education.

Those associated with Permian Basin High School refer to the institution as alternative education.

"An alternative violates — with reason — the standards of regular schools," H.E. Phillips, past executive secretary of the Texas Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, explained.

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, along with the Texas Education Agency, is working with Midland's newest private high school to ensure accreditation.

PBHS, Midland's first one-to-one learning system, opened in September with 24 students and seven teachers. Presently, 30 students are enrolled and the staff has increased to nine full-time instructors.

"WE'VE AVERAGED an enrollment of one student per week since May 1," Glen Walton, executive director, said. "We knew we'd grow and we knew we'd be successful, but we did not anticipate such a rapid growth.

"It is gratifying and satisfying that it has grown so quickly," he added.

Walton attributed the success to the support of the board of directors, a tremendous amount of preplanning and the need for this type of educational facility.

Founded by a wealthy Midland couple whose child had experienced difficulties in the public secondary system, PBHS had been in the planning stages only since last December.

PHILLIPS, ALONG with the directors of two similar schools in Houston and Dallas, was in town evaluating the progress of the school and its standards for accreditation purposes. "I would profile the student body here at PBHS by saying 40 and 50 percent of the students have had such freedom, responsibility and economic privileges, that it has come to the point that if you put them in a program where they attend six classes a day at 50 minutes per class, it will drive them up the wall," Phillips said.

Walton agreed, saying that the idea of the alternative school being a place solely for the rich kids with behavioral problems or just for those who have failed in the public school systems is misleading.

"We have some students here who are very bright — and very bored with (public) school. The boredom is what led to bad grades," Walton said.

"The students we have here just happen to have the economic advantages that enabled them to find a system more compliant with their needs."

With the one-to-one system of learning, Walton said that the boredom, and therefore, the bad grades, can be alleviated.

"THE BEAUTY OF the one-on-one is that wherever the student is (in terms of educational levels determined through testing and previous school transcripts) we can move at the student's pace," he explained.

Walton used two PBHS math students as examples. "They both began in September," he said. "One of them will finish a physics book, senior level, next week. The other is in fundamental math. He's still on the multiplication tables.

"There is a difference between self-pace and our system. We challenge, push and encourage the student," he explained. "But we won't move faster than the student can work."

Patricia Groce, a PBHS instructor who has been a public school teacher as well as a tutor, said, "One advantage is you can work on that student's particular trouble and pass over what he already knows."

"If they start getting lost, we know it right away," Dick Bowdon, also a PBHS instructor, agreed.

THERE ARE A few disadvantages to the one-to-one method though, said PBHS teacher Richard Smith. "You can't do the group-discussion thing."

"We're not anti-public school — alternative schools are just pro-education. The public school is doing what it's designed to do. It just doesn't meet the needs of everyone."
— H.E. Phillips

Knowing at exactly what level a student being taught is on is important, Smith said, but "sometimes it's good for students to bounce around ideas."

There are other "violations of the standards of regular schools" besides the one teacher per one student format.

There also is a difference in the amount of time PBHS students spend in class and the time students spend in regular schools. Walton explained that a student at PBHS attends two subjects for an hour and a half each on Monday and Wednesday and two other subjects on Tuesday and Thursday. Every other Friday is devoted to a study lab.

Attendance is stressed. "Attendance and learning are directly related," Walton said. The directors at the two model schools in Houston and Dallas "found that it you were lax on attendance, then the students wouldn't come.

"It is important to go to class," he continued. "Especially when each class is worth a half of a week of school."

EVEN THOUGH Walton said the staff deals in a non-punitive, positive reinforcment fashion, students do face the consequences for unacceptable behavior.

The rules are spelled out to the student during the extensive interviews before enrollment, Walton said. "We give the students the information they need to be complete and total successes in the school."

Walton said that while it was true that many of the students had formerly experienced personality conflicts and social adjustment difficulties in public schools, behavioral problems and discipline don't seem to be a problem at PBHS.

Ms. Groce offered an explanation. "The students don't have any peers to show off for. We, as teachers, can direct the instruction to what they need.

"It's not like they sit there and say 'Well, I already know that so I'll just throw paper wads.' "

Consequences for inappropriate behavior are based on the merit and type of offense committed, he said. If a student misses a class, he makes it up. And if he accumulates 45 minutes of tardy time, he makes up a class.

ALTHOUGH PBHS students spend only 12 hours a week in class, with the one-on-one mode of learning, instruction is much more intense than in regular schools where students spend a considerable more amount of time in class. The success of the classes is based on standardized tests and the opinions of teachers, Walton said.

Applications of prospective students are considered very carefully, according to Walton. "We've got one eighth grade student who is on a 12.9 grade level now, but we're especially selective about the eighth grade students.

"How many kids that age can handle that much free time away from school?"

The process of enrollment is extensive and complete, Walton said. It begins with an interview with the student and at least one, but preferably both, parents that can last anywhere from an hour to an hour and a half.

That is followed by a full day of standardized testing in math, science, reading and social studies. Walton said he reviews the transcripts and evaluations of the student's work done in previous schools before conducting another interview where past transcripts and the tests are reviewed with the student and the parents.

"Then we sit down and project a degree plan for the student. We'll work in all areas, but we'll concentrate on the student's weaknesses," he said.

EVERYTHING IS non-binding for both parties up until the signing of the enrollment contract, Walton explained. The entire process can take from three days to a week.

"You can't just walk in and say, 'I want to enroll Junior' and good-bye," he said.

Walton estimated that by the fall term of 1982, enrollment at PBHS will reach between 50 and 60 students. He said the school had already begun receiving inquiries from Odessa due to the recent segregation trial.

"We're not competing with public schools," Walton stressed. "We're simply offering an alternative to them."

Phillips agreed, "We're not anti-public school — alternative schools are just pro-education.

"The public school is doing what it's designed to do," Phillips continued."It just doesn't meet the needs of everyone."

Midland Library joins Book Week celebration

Midland County Public Library along with other libraries across the nation are celebrating the 1981 Children's Book Week, "Anytime, Anyplace, Anybook," Nov. 16 through 22.

Book circulation is increasing through the schools encouraging reading proficiency. The Young People's Department in the library has hardback and paperback books along with filmstrips, records and cassettes for checkout.

Paperbacks have grown in popularity with the younger set. As a result, the paperback collection, preschool through young adult, has doubled in size this year.

New books of interest include "The Old Man of Lochagar," by H.R.H., The Prince of Wales. Written just over ten years ago, the story describes the adventrues of an old man who lives in a cave by the Loch of Lochnagar and is filled with such characters such as a grouse who repels visitors, the minature green people of Gorm and the numerous birds and fish who live in the skies and lochs around Balmoral.

Other new books for checkout are "Building A New House," by Byron Barton; "Audubon Cat," by Mary Calhoun; "The Kissimme Kid," by Vera Cleaver; "The Twits," by Roald Dahl; "McGoogan Moves the Mighty Rock," by Dick Gackenbach; "No, No Sammy Crow," by Barbara Ireson; "Tales Out of Time," by Karla Kiskin; "Cat Count," by Betsy Lewin; "Suho and the White Horse," by Yuzo Otsuka; "Encore For Eleanor," by Bill Peet; and "The Boy Who Waited For Santa Claus," by Robert Quackenback.

Special bookmarks will be given with each checkout during Children's Book Week. School tours are available by appointment.

Squaring off prior to next Saturday's "Fuzzbowl" game between Midland and Odessa law enforcement agencies are Sgt. Mark Donaldson, left, of the Ector County Sheriff's Department and Sgt. Tommy Jones of the Midland County Sheriff's Department. Midland is a 14-point underdog, as rated by The Reporter-Telegram's sports staff, in the event, the proceeds of which will go to aid in the fight against cerebral palsy.

Be charitable — Midland players not 2nd Fuzzbowl's only 'underdog'

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

The second annual Midland-Odessa law enforcement "Fuzzbowl" is set for 4 p.m. this Saturday at Midland Memorial Stadium, with The Reporter-Telegram's overrated sports department predicting the Midland team will suffer a humiliating 14-point defeat in the charity event.

That prognostication is based on a highly muddled, finger-counting analysis of the average, overall 19-pound weight difference between the two squads, which are manned by city, county and state police from Midland and Ector counties — along with investigators from both district attorneys' offices.

The full tackle game — complete with cheerleaders — pits the Midland Razorbacks' 34 players against the Odessa Blues' 32-member delegation. The largest Odessa player, a deputy sheriff, stands 6 feet, 9 inches tall and weighs in at 325 pounds.

By way of comparison, Midland's largest — city police officer Andy Glasscock — tips the scales at a puny 275 pounds and stands a runty 6 feet, 3 inches tall.

"They've got tons of size over us, so we'll rely on speed and a brilliant aerial display," said a Midland cop whose personal safety is best ensured by remaining anonymous.

All of the officers are donating their own time and some of them have purchased their own equipment for the game. The proceeds will go to aid in the fight against cerebral palsy — not the medical bills of the Odessa players, sneered an overly optimistic spokesman for the Midland Razorbacks.

The Midland Independent School District is donating the playing field. The $2 tickets are available at Oshman's Sports Center in Midland Park Mall, Stadium Sports Center on West Cuthbert Street and from most any cop on or off the street. Tickets also will be available at the gate. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

Results of last year's game, a cowardly touch-only affair, could not be ascertained by press time. Should any members of the law enforcement community survive Saturday's event, there'll be a rematch Dec. 12 in Odessa.

When Reporter-Telegram Sports Editor Ted "Abacus" Battles learned the upcoming game would be played on Midland turf, he recalculated and made his 14-point prediction. Originally, he said it would be a 19-point defeat for the home team: "One for every pound in the weight difference."

The normally placid sports writer became incensed and stormed off to sulk when an observer recalled previous predictions gone awry. "Just remember," he whined, "we're hitting above the 500-mark."

Maybe so. But if he's so good, why isn't he with Sports Illustrated?

Report changes in name

ODESSA — If you change your name, it is very important that this change be reported to a local Social Security office promptly. After submitting proof of identity a duplicate card will be issued in about four weeks.

The Social Security card will show the new name, but the same number. Reporting a name change is especially important if you have a job or if you are seeking work.

It also can avoid needless delay when not working. Earnings might not be properly credited to your Social Secuity record when the employer reports a new name, but Social Security Administraion records still show the prior name.

An income tax refund could be delayed if the name on the report does not correspond with that shown on the Social Security record. The discrepancy must be resolved before a refund or proper tax adjustment can be made.

A name change may be to a new name in the case of marriage or a return to a maiden name in the case of a divorce or annulment. You may also want to correct your record if the Social Security is under a nickname or abbreviated or shortened from of the full name such as "Dick" instead of "Richard."

The name on the Social Security card should be completed exactly as you intend to use it in employment, business, school and other official or legal circumstances. In doing this, when the employer records the name directly from the Social Security card, it will agree with the records established under Social Security.

To report a name change, get in touch with any Social Security office. Proof of identity under both the old name and new name must be shown. Indentity documemts may include, but are not limited to, driver's licenses, voter's registrations, marriage licenses, divorce decrees or insurance policies.

For more information contact the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Social Security Administration in Odessa.

Public hearing planned on housing rehabilitation

A public hearing to explain the housing rehabilitation program to residents of a windowpane area and to accept applications for participation in it will be held at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in South Memorial Baptist Church, 1700 Carter St.

The program is being administered under the auspices of Midland County, which applied for and received $1.6 million in federal funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development for a three-year plan to rehabilitate the windowpane area. That area is bounded by Carter Street and Taylor Park on the north, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum on the south, Johnston on the east and Garfield on the west.

Taking charge of the program are Midland Housing Association and Barbara Ellis, a coordinator from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc. in Lubbock.

Under the housing rehabilitation portion, HUD will repair seven owner-occupied houses for $8,500 each and one rent house, in which the landlord will pay 60 percent of the $8,500 cost. HUD will pick up the rest of that tab.

To qualify for the grant, the owner must have lived in the area for at least 12 months, hold title to the house and plot, paid all the taxes and fall in the low- to moderate-income range.

In Midland, maximum gross income allowed for a single person to qualify is $11,760; a family of four, $16,800. However, the latter figure is expected to be increased by $2,000 in a few weeks.

By conclusion of the three-year program, 30 houses are projected to be rehabilitated. A survey of the area by Ms. Ellis revealed 69 owner-occupied housing units are contained within the windowpane area.

Yucca Theatre again labeled 'pride of the Southwest'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Let Us Remember: Preservation Is Progress

The old Yucca Theatre, once hailed as "opulent" and the "pride of the Southwest" when it was opened in 1929, was graced with the symbol of its historic importance Saturday at the dedication of its Texas Historical Marker.

"The Yucca Theatre building certainly merits Texas State Historical Marker recognition," said W.H. "Bill" Collyns, a community leader and history buff, who dedicated the marker in brief ceremony. Collyns said the dedication of the marker signifies "our common interest in the historical preservation of our precious heritage."

The downtown theatre, built in 1927-29 in conjunction with the 12-story T.S. Hogan (Petroleum) Building, was closed as a movie house in December 1974 but was revamped and opened last summer as home of the frolicking Summer Mummers of the Midland Community Theatre.

"It is indeed a rare occasion in Midland to hold a gathering to applaud the preservation of a building rather than to view its destruction or implosion," said Mrs. John P. (Nancy) McKinley, a historian who has been critical of the city's failure to appreciate and to preserve historic landmarks and museum relics.

Mrs. McKinley, president of the Midland County Historical Society and chairman of the Midland County Historical Commission, quoted her grandmother, Mrs. F.E. (Eliza) Rankin, who had an historical perspective: "Let us remember: Preservation is Progress."

The Yucca Theatre, built to complement the Hogan Building which provided the impetus for transforming Midland to the petroleum center for the Permian Basin, was opened on Dec. 5, 1929, in a black-tie extravaganza attended by a full-house of about 1,200 celebrants.

The premiere included a screening of the Hollywood musical "Rio Rita" and a musical comedy revue by the Jubilee Players of New York City.

"We hope to maintain the Yucca tradition," said Jim Salners, Midland Community Theatre president, who read a Gary Askins-prepared historical profile of the Yucca. Efforts by Askins and other history buffs effected the Yucca's getting the historical landmark marker.

For years, the Yucca doubled as a movie house and a theatre for vaudeville troupes.

In his dedication of the marker, Collyns lauded the theatre as providing "good, wholesome entertainment of various kinds for countless thousands of West Texans and others."

He listed a sampling of the "fund-raising events for welfare and other causes," including Depression Days money drawings, music and dance recitals and, yes, "even World War II War Bond rallies" held on the Yucca's stage.

The marker was formally accepted by Salners and by Art Donnelly, president of the Midland SouthWest Corp., which owns the Hogan Petroleum Building and Yucca Theatre and which leases the theatre to the Community Theatre under a 25-year lease and options on two additional 25-years leases.

"It (the Yucca) is protected against destruction," Mrs. McKinley assured at the close of the ceremony.

Among these attending the dedication was Fred Hogan, son of the visionary T. S. Hogan, a Montana lawyer, former senator, and oilman who started construction of the 12-story office building and the theatre in 1927. Architect of the Gothic buildings was Wyatt C. Hedrick of Fort Worth.

Collyns described T.S. and Fred Hogan as "far-sighted, visionary...and fortunately so."

"But the Hogans of the 1920s perhaps didn't realize at the time just how visionary they were, judging by what has occurred in the intervening years and yet is occurring.

"We thank God for visionary persons like the Hogans," said Collyns. "We here today are the beneficaries of their visionary, courageous, faith-filled actions of yesteryears. We salute them on this memorable occasion."

Traditional Carving Method for Roast Turkey

Let turkey stand for 20 to 30 minutes after roasting — then try this easy carving method.

1. Remove drumstick and thigh — To remove drumstick and thigh, press leg away from body. Joint connecting leg to backbone will oftentimes snap free or may be severed easily with knife point. Cut dark meat completely from body by following body contour carefully with knife.

2. Slicing dark meat — Place drumstick and thigh on separate plate and cut through connecting joint. Both pieces may be individually sliced. Tilt drumstick to convenient angle slicing towards plate as shown in illustration.

3. Slicing thigh — To slice thigh meat, hold firmly on plate with fork. Cut even slices parallel to the bone.

4. Preparing breast — In preparing breast for easy slicing, place knife parallel and as close to wing as possible. Make deep cut into breast cutting right to the bone. This is your base cut. All breast slices will stop at this vertical cut.

5. Carving breasts — After base cut, begin to slice breast. Carve downward, ending at base cut. Start each new slice slightly up on breast. Keep slices thin and even.

Texas tailback A.J. Jones (24) eludes the grasp of TCU cornerback Reginald Cottingham as he scores on a pass from quarterback Robert Brewer during play Saturday in Austin.

Texas rocks TCU, 31-15

Kenneth Sims lost for year with ankle injury

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — No. 10 Texas, which lost the heart of its defense when tackle Kenneth Sims was injured, responded with pass interceptions by Bobby Johnson and Mossy Cade and a fumble recovery by William Graham in the end zone to whip Texas Christian 31-15 Saturday.

Sims, a 270-pound all-American, suffered a broken leg and torn ligaments in his right ankle late in the first quarter, ending his college career.

TEXAS LED 7-0 on a 29-yard scamper by A.J. "Jam" Jones when Sims got hurt, and Texas Christian closed the margin to 7-6 on field goals by Greg Porter of 25 and 24 yards. Johnson then raced in front of a Reuben Jones pass and sped 54 yards to the TCU 11, setting up a 2-yard touchdown dive by John Walker.

Craig Curry tipped a third-quarter pass that Cade swiped and returned 16 yards to the TCU 49. Raul Allegre climaxed the drive with a 21-yard field goal.

Late in the third quarter, Texas middle linebacker Doug Shankle threw Jones down for a 7-yard loss, and Graham charged in from his safety position to recover Jones' fumble in the end zone for a touchdown.

AFTER A 47-yard interference penalty set up Porter's third field goal, a 41-yarder, Texas drove 80 yards for its final score. Junior quarterback Robert Brewer, in his first college start, threw to tight end Mike Chapman for nine yards and a touchdown. It was Chapman's first college reception.

TCU closed out the scoring on a 1-yard run by Marcus Gilbert after another interference call on fourth down gave TCU a first down on the Texas 1.

The victory raised Texas' record to 7-1-1, including a 4-1-1 mark in the Southwest Conference. TCU fell to 2-6-2 and 1-5-1.

AFTER GILBERT scored midway in the fourth quarter, TCU only had the ball for four more plays and punted on fourth and 19 from its 49-yard line. Texas ran out the final 3½ minutes on runs by freshman Don Holloway and Jones.

Jones, the TCU quarterback, went almost exclusively to a Shotgun formation — even on third-and-one plays — to test Texas' second-ranked defense.

Texas' secondary defenders were flagged four times for pass interference in covering speedy receivers such as Stanley Washington, the nation's top pass catcher.

With Texas' offense largely ineffective in the first half, the Longhorns relied on three punts by John Goodson, who averaged 50 yards a kick, and Johnson's long pass interception return for a 14-6 halftime lead.

Jones led Texas rushers with 162 yards on 29 carries. Brewer, subbing for the injured Rick McIvor, had six completions in 13 attempts for 41 yards and a touchdown, but two of his passes were intercepted.

TCU'S JONES completed 15 of 42 passes for 239 yards with two interceptions. Jones, under pressure from the Texas defense, had minus one yard on 17 carries and the entire TCU team had only six yards rushing.

Hogs rally to stop A&M

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Arkansas' Jessie Clark ran one yard for a touchdown with 7:57 to play and defensive end Billy Ray Smith turned in a pair of key fourth-quarter plays Saturday to rally the 16th-ranked Razorbacks to a 10-7 Southwest Conference victory over Texas A&M.

Clark's touchdown nullified an outstanding passing performance by A&M quarterback Gary Kubiak who hit 19 of 21 passes for 233 yards and had the Aggies on the brink of a major upset.

But Arkansas freshman quarterback Brad Taylor guided the Hogs on a penalty-marred 91-yard drive to turn the game around. Taylor hit two key passes of 17 yards each to wide receiver Mark Mistler to keep the drive going.

Mistler's second reception came as the Hogs faced a third and 12 at the A&M 38 yard line.

The Aggies came storming back two more times in the fourth quarter, but each time Smith helped stop the drives.

Smith dropped Kubiak for a one-yard loss on fourth down with 4:56 left in the game to kill one drive. Then after Kubiak had passed the Aggies to Arkansas' 42, Smith caused the A&M quarterback to fumble and defensive end Ron Faurot recovered.

The Razorbacks had taken a 3-0 first half lead on a 36-yard field goal by Bruce Lahay.

Kubiak rallied the Aggies to a 7-3 lead early in the third quarter on a 7-yard touchdown pass to Don Jones, who caught his fifth TD pass of the season on nine receptions.

The victory increased Arkansas' SWC record to 5-2 and kept the Razorbacks in the running for the SWC title and a possible Cotton Bowl berth. The Aggies, 3-3 in SWC games, were all but mathmatically eliminated from the conference race.

The Razorbacks are 8-2 for the year, while the Aggies dropped to 5-4.

Taylor, winning his third straight game as the Arkansas quarterback, completed 11 of 24 passes for 145 yards and provided scoring punch when it was needed. Taylor kept the winning touchdown drive going despite three penalties.

Clark finished with 33 yards rushing on 14 carries and James Tolbert had 38 yards on seven carries for the Razorbacks.

Lahay's second-quarter field goal pushed him into a tie for second place for the most field goals kicked in one season with Arkansas' Ish Ordonez, who booted 18 field goals in 1979.

Taylor directed the Hogs to Lahay's kick with passes of 19 yards to Derek Holloway and 19 yards to fullback Jessie Clark. Arkansas reached A&M's 29-yard line where the drive ended on a pair of no-gain runs by Clark and Taylor and an incomplete pass.

The Aggies controlled the ball for 11:03 of the first quarter and drove to the Hog 17 early in the second period. The drive ended, however, on a fourth-down and one situation when Hector was tackled for a two-yard loss by Arkansas cornerback Kent Reber.

USC's Marcus Allen (33) went over the 2,000 season yard mark to became the NCAA's leading rusher and scorer against Washington Saturday. Allen's effort went for naught though as the Huskies nipped USC 13-3 to knock the Trojans out of the Rose Bowl picture.

Washington knocks USC out of roses

SEATTLE (AP) — Chuck Nelson kicked a 46-yard field goal with 2:19 left and Washington then recovered the ensuing kickoff in the end zone for a touchdown Saturday for a 13-3 upset victory over third-ranked Southern California to eliminate the Trojans from the Rose Bowl race.

After Saturday's games Washington was alive in the Pacific-10 run for the Rose Bowl with Washington State and UCLA.

FRED SMALL, a freshman from Los Angeles, came up with the final touchdown for the defending Pac-10 champion Huskies, who were nine-point underdogs.

Washington's defense was brilliant on a day when Marcus Allen, Southern California's premier tailback, rushed 38 times for 155 yards, and a Northwest wind storm accompanied by rain buffeted Husky Stadium with gusts between 40 and 60 mph.

Nelson then kicked off and the Huskies' Small recovered the ball in the end zone for a touchdown with no time elapsed.

THE SCORE was tied 3-3 at halftime and it hadn't changed when Washington got the ball on its own 20-yard line with 5:14 to go.

Pitt marches over Army

PITTSBURGH (AP) — By crushing Army 48-0 Saturday, the University of Pittsburgh football team likely assured itself the No.1 national ranking for the third week in a row.

And although the victory came against a relative patsy, that is the longest any college team has held a precarious top spot this season.

"We are hoping we'll be there at the end of the year. Right now it doesn't make any difference," said Pitt Coach Jackie Sherill.

"They certainly deserve the No. 1 rating. They have one of the better teams I have seen in recent years," said Army Coach Ed Cavanaugh.

Nonetheless, a Pitt victory came against a 3-7 Army team whose only three victories this season have come against Ivy League opposition.

Does that diminish the exhiliration for the Panthers?

"We're still No. 1. A lot of other teams have lost that. And as long as we're winning I don't think it takes away any exhilaration," said quarterback Dan Marino.

Marino and split end Julius Dawkins combined for four touchdown passes and three school records to pace the Panthers to their 16th straight victory, longest winning streak in the nation.

Now, Pitt needs only a victory next week at Temple to clinch a major bowl bid. The Panthers will play Penn State in their regular season finale, but that will be after the bowls make their choices.

Sherill hedged on what bowl he'd like to attend.

But several key Panther players voiced clear cut preferences.

"My dream is to go down to New Orleans. I'd love to go down to the Sugar Bowl," said Dawkins, whose four scoring receptions gave him a new Pitt record of 14 touchdown catches in a single season.

"If I had to decide today, I'd say the Sugar Bowl. The Sugar Bowl has decided the national championship in the past three years," said linebacker Sal Sunseri.

Tigers stun Sooners

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Brad Perry directed two touchdown drives, Bob Lucchesi kicked a pair of field goals and Jeff Gaylord led a fierce defensive effort as Missouri posted a 19-14 upset of No. 15 Oklahoma Saturday.

Trailing 19-7, the Sooners staged a stirring rally in the final two minutes of the fourth quarter. Darrell Shepard hit Steve Sewell on a 46-yard touchdown pass that was deflected by Mizzou's Van Darkow.

Oklahoma recovered the onside kick with 1:42 to play, but on fourth-and-9 from the 41, a pass to Buster Rhymes fell incomplete at the 25.

Gaylord, a 235-pound senior defensive tackle, recovered three fumbles and constantly bottled up Oklahoma's Wishbone offense, which entered the game with a nation-leading rushing average of almost 360 yards per game. The Sooners threw two interceptions and lost six of nine fumbles.

Oklahoma's loss, coupled with Nebraska's victory over Iowa State, means the Sooners will neither win nor share the Big Eight title for the first time since 1972.

Bryant ties win mark as Tide rolls

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — The Alabama players were more excited about their 31-16 victory over fifth-ranked Penn State Saturday than Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant appeared to be about tying the national collegiate coaching record of 314 victories.

"It was the biggest game anyone on this team ever played," said sophomore quarterback Walter Lewis, whose two touchdown passes to Jesse Bendross and a tenacious Alabama defense triggered the Crimson Tide's triumph.

Bryant was almost smothered in a small room adjoining the Alabama locker room as several hundred members of the media tried to record one of the magic momemts in college football history.

Bryant was badgered to make known his thoughts about equaling the record held by the late Amos Alonzo Stagg since 1946.

"I haven't had time to think about it," said the 68-year-old Bryant, now in his 37th year of college coaching.

"I really didn't tie the record. There have been multiple people with a hand in it," he said. "I'm grateful to all of them."

Bryant now has to wait two weeks until sixth-ranked Alabama closes the regular season against Auburn to try and break the record.

As far as the Penn State game was concerned, Bryant said his team "played as well as we can play. We played over our heads in the first half. In that first half, we played a little better than we're capable of playing."

But Lewis said Alabama should have won by a bigger margin. "We had two touchdowns called back," the quarterback reminded.

Lewis was asked what Bryant told his team before the game.

"He said, 'Go out and play like it was the last game of your lives. Play every play like you're behind,'" Lewis said.

Then Lewis volunteered, "Fifty percent of the reason for everybody on this team coming to Alabama was Coach Bryant."

Lewis conjectured that if Alabama could beat Auburn, win a bowl game and finish 10-1-1, it still had a chance to win the national championship.

"That'd be some history, wouldn't it?" Lewis asked.

Penn State Coach Joe Paterno, who now is 0-3 in confrontations with Bryant's Alabama teams, was an obviously disappointed man.

Lee boys have high cage hopes

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Now that the football season has moved into history, coaches, fans and players are turning their attention toward basketball at Midland Lee and the pre-season prognosis looks good.

Making that prognosis look good is a crop of returning lettermen and talented new-comers to the Rebel squad. Six of last year's lettermen, who saw a lot of playing time and shared starting roles throughout the 14-20 season, are back to add their experience and knowledge to the team.

The main strength of the 1981-82 Rebels is their team quickness, termed "above average," by head coach Paul Stueckler and a lot of that quickness is coming from the returning lettermen, but the new players have some speed of their own.

With the speed he has on his team, Coach Stueckler is going to use a running attack, fast break on offense and pressure on defense with the hopes of offsetting a weak point on the team, the inside game.

"Our quickness is above average but we're a little weak on rebounding," he said. "Our post men are 6-foot-5 and 6-foot-3 and we'll use a lot of back door cuts. On offense will be running the fast break and we'll press on defense. We have good depth at guard, but not at the post positions, it's adequate, but we're hurting inside.

IN SOME pre-season reports, Midland Lee is looked at as one of the teams to beat this season for the District 5-5A title because of their returning strength. But, Coach Steuckler feels that the race is up for grabs.

"Everybody in the league that I know of has got some great players and I think it's going to be close," he said. "Whoever gets their business going the best is going to win."

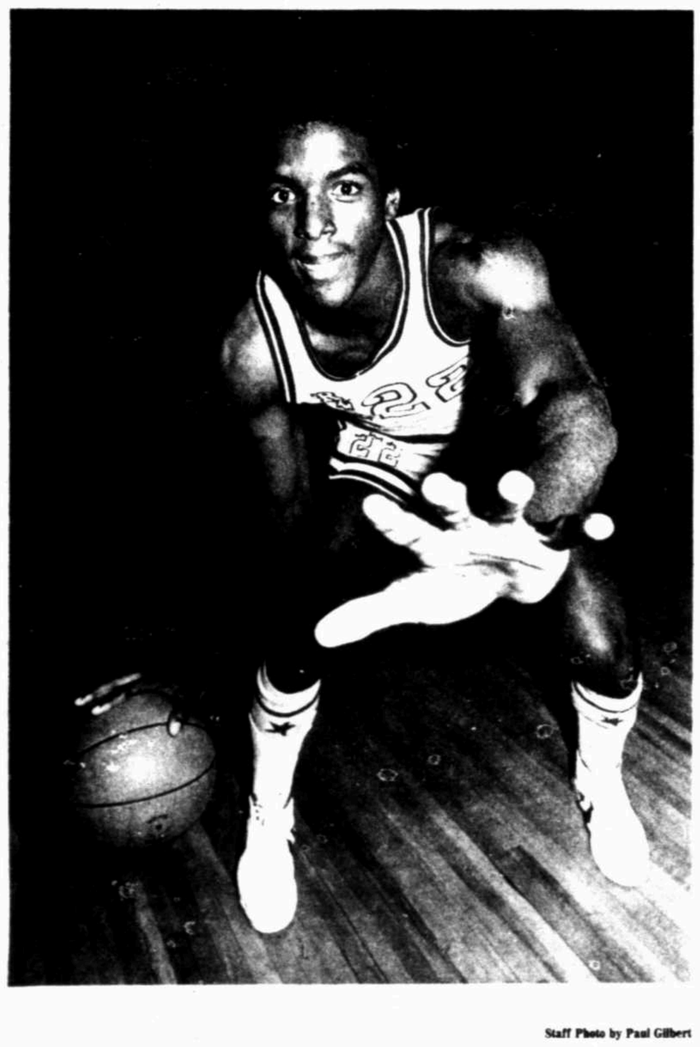

The six returning lettermen that everyone is looking at as a strength for Lee include five seniors and a junior. They are: guards Randy Pepper, 5-foot-10; Alvin Dunson, 6-foot-0; Steve Cherryhomes, 5-foot-10; and Barry Blackwell (junior), 5-foot-9; and post men Andre Van Buren, 6-foot-3 and Olen Smith, 6-foot-5.

Also on the Rebel squad this season are: guards: Jay Pendelton, Sr., 5-foot-10, Brian White, Jr., 5-foot-9 and Paul Dacus, Soph., 5-foot-10; forwards: Tommy Polland, Sr., 5-foot-11; and Billy Sewell, Jr., 6-foot-1; postmen: Tod Brown, Jr., 6-foot-2; Sylvester Johnson, Jr., 6-foot-1; and Jim Lee, Soph., 6-foot-5.

"Randy Pepper is a smart point guard, good penetrator and a good assist man; Barry Blackwell, good guard, good penetrator, good assist man and good outside shooter; Alvin Dunson, good quickness, good jumper with good rebounding ability and good outside shooter; Andre Van Buren, good quickness, good post moves, excellent rebounder; Olen Smith, quick off the floor, good rebounder; and Jay Pendelton, good fundamentally sound ball player, good outside shooter.

The 1981-82 basketball season was supposed to get underway for Lee on Tuesday, but a schedule change has moved the opener to Friday. Big Lake, according to Coach Stueckler, cancelled Friday's game in Big Lake and now the first opponent is Lubbock Monterey at Chaparral Center at 8 p.m. The sophomore and junior varsity games will be played at 4:15 and 6:15 p.m. respectively.

Cal falls to WSU

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Quarterback Clete Casper scored twice Saturday to lead Washington State to a 19-0 Pacific-10 Conference football victory over California.

The 17th-ranked Cougars, now 8-1-1 on the season and 5-1-1 in Pac-10 play, kept their Rose Bowl hopes alive with a second-quarter offensive surge that produced 12 points.

Casper scampered in from the f in the waning minutes of the game to add an insurance touchdown.

With a strong wind, which gusted at times to 55 mph during the game, at the Cougars' back, Casper led two second-quarter touchdown drives, offsetting a pair of WSU fumbles in that frame.

BYU edges Rainbows, 13-3

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — Brigham Young quarterback Jim McMahon passed for 269 yards to lead the Cougars to a 13-3 victory over 19th-ranked and previously Hawaii in a Western Athletic Conference football game Saturday.

Despite completing 22 of 33 passes, McMahon, the nation's highest-scoring college quarterback with an average of nearly four touchdown passes a game, failed to come up with a single TD strike.

It was the first time McMahon has been blanked since the season's opener when BYU crushed Long Beach State 31-8.

The Hawaii loss, the Rainbows' first since McMahon and the Cougars beat them 34-7 in October of last year, snapped their winning string at 11 games and shattered their WAC title hopes.

UCLA belts Devils

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Short touchdown runs by Tom Ramsey and Burness Scott and a 44-yard field goal by Norm Johnson in the fourth quarter Saturday boosted 18th-ranked UCLA to a 34-24 Pacific-10 Conference victory over ninth-ranked Arizona State and kept the Bruins solidly entrenched in the Rose Bowl race.

Ramsey tallied on a 1-yard quarterback sneak with 9:35 remaining to put the Bruins ahead to stay. Freshman tailback Scott went over from 2 yards out with 5:27 left to give UCLA a two-touchdown advantage over the Sun Devils.

Arizona State narrowed the gap to seven points on a 1-yard plunge by fullback Gerald Riggs with 3:52 to go. The touchdown was set up by a 37-yard pass interference penalty. ASU got another chance shortly later after a punt and moved to the UCLA 38, but a pass attempt by quarterback Mike Pagel was batted into the air by defensive lineman Karl Morgan and intercepted by Joe Gary.

Johnson's field goal followed with 49 seconds to play.

The Bruins are now 5-1-1 in Pac-10 play and tied for first place with Washington State. UCLA has a 7-2-1 overall mark. ASU fell to 4-2 and 7-2.

Hogs nab running title

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Baylor's Todd Harbour outdistanced Arkansas's David Taylor, to take the individual title in the NCAA District VI cross country championships Saturday, but the Razorbacks placed five runners in the top nine to win the team championship.

The Texas Longhorns had the third and fifth place runners in Sam Sitonik and Geoffrey Koech and placed second in the team standings.

Calhoun passes Owls over Bears

WACO, Texas (AP) — Michael Calhoun etched his name in the Southwest Conference football record books Saturday, throwing two touchdown passes and leading Rice to a 17-14 upset win over Baylor.

Calhoun has thrown 21 touchown passes this season, tying him for the best one-season TD passing record in SWC record.

RICE RALLIED from a 14-10 fourth-quarter deficit for the victory, with Calhoun's record-tying 15-yard toss to fullback Tim Sanders providing the difference.

Calhoun earlier had tossed for 35 yards and a touchdown to Vince Courville to go with Joel Baxter's first-half field goal.

Rice improved its record to 4-6, 3-4 in the SWC, while Baylor fell to 5-5 and 3-4.

The Bears blew a chance to tie the game when Marty Jimerson missed a 29-yard field goal effort with 2 minutes 34 seconds remaining, his second miss of the game.

Baylor scored on Alfred Henderson's four-yard reverse and a 33-yard ramble by fullback Dennis Gentry.

Bear tailback Walter Abercrombie gained 73 yards on 21 carries, giving him a career total of 3,598 yards and putting him third on the SWC career rushing chart.

Calhoun equalled the season touchdown mark set in 1958 by Chuck Hixson of Southern Methodist and tied by Rice's Tommy Kramer in 1976. Calhoun, who completed 10 of 16 for 165 yards against the Bears, has one game left to play this year.

RICE LED 10-7 at halftime on the strength of two long scoring drives, while Baylor's only points came as a result of an Owl turnover.

Rice took the opening kickoff and marched from its own 20 to the Baylor seven, with Calhoun hitting Hosea Fortune and Deron Miller with pass completions of 12 and 17 yards to keep the drive going. However, two straight incompletions from the Baylor seven forced the Owls to settle for a 25-yard Baxter field goal.

Baylor, which crossed midfield only once under its own offensive steam in the first half, recovered a Calhoun fumble at the Rice 23 to set up its first-half touchdown.

Abercrombie rumbled off tackle for eight yards and Baylor quarterback Jay Jeffrey passed to Bruce Davis for 11, setting up Anderson's 4-yard scoring scamper on the wingback reverse. That gave Baylor a brief 7-3 lead.

BUT RICE retaliated with a 63-yard march shortly before halftime to take a three-point lead into the locker room.

Calhoun hit Fortune for third-down completions of 16 and eight yards to keep the drive going, then found split end Courville running free behind Baylor cornerback Vic Vines for a 35-yard scoring toss.

Mustangs rip Tech

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Lance McIlhenny flipped two touchdown passes and place-kicker Eddie Garcia booted three ficid goals Saturday to power No.8-ranked Southern Methodist to a 30-6 Southwest Conference victory over Texas Tech.

Playing before a sparse crowd of 24,410 in Texas Stadium, the Mustangs upped their record to 9-1 and 6-1 in league play. SMU is ineligible for postseason competition because of probation.

THE RED Raiders, still looking for their first SWC victory under new Coach Jerry Moore, plunged to 1-8-1 for the year and 0-6-1 in the conference.

THE RED Raiders posted a third-quarter touchdown on sophomore Dale Brown's 1-yard run. It was the sophomore's first collegiate score.

Defensively, the Mustangs were led by linebacker Gary Moten, who recovered a fumble, caused two others and registered 18 tackles.

SMU tailback Eric Dickerson gained 127 yards on 18 carries — the ninth time this season he has rushed for over 100 yards.

Alternate tailback Craig James went over the 100-yard rushing mark for the fifth time this year by gaining 134 yards on 24 carries.

STERLING WILSON raced 18 yards on his first collegiate carry to the Tech 27 from punt formation. McIlhenny his Bolden with a five-yard scoring pass six plays later.

The fumble bug reached epidemic proportions for the Red Raiders. A Freddie Wells fumble recovered by Eddie Radford positioned the Mustangs for Garcia's 40-yard field goal, making it 10-0.

On Tech's next possession the second period, Dale Brown fumbled and Mustang end Russell Washington pounced on the ball at the Tech 28. Two plays later Leach scooted 26 yards for a touchdown behind the crushing block of tackle Rickey Schulte.

The Mustangs went 80 yards in seven plays to make it 24-0 late in the second quarter. McIlhenny completed passes of 13 yards to Jackie Wilson and 23 yards to freshman tight end Scott Ford before he completed a 24-yard scoring pass to Jeane.

Tech gained 221 yards rushing against SMU's tough defense but fumbles killed the Red Raiders.

TYPICAL WAS a third quarter fumble by tailback Robert Lewis in the Mustang end zone which was recovered by tackle Harvey Armstrong.

Cowboys bounce K-State

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Quarterback Rusty Hilger, starting in only the second collegiate game he ever played, led the Oklahoma State Cowboys to a 31-10 win over Kansas State in Big Eight Conference football Saturday.

Hilger, a sophomore from Oklahoma City, hit on 13 passes for 224 yards, including a 12-yard touchdown strike to tight end to John Chesley.

But it was a defensive player, Greg Hill, who really tickled the homecoming crowd as he grabbed a fumble in mid air and ran it 96 yards for the final Cowboy touchdown.

The numb Wildcat offense came to life at the start of the second half, narrowing a 17-0 deficit by 10 points, including a 33-yard desperation touchdown pass from Rusty Hill to flanker Mike Wallace.

Jayhawks tame Buffs, 27-0

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Frank Seurer and Wayne Capers burned Colorado through the air and Garfield Taylor pounded the Buffaloes on the ground to lead Kansas to a 27-0 Big Eight Conference victory Saturday.

The triumph gave the Jayhawks a 7-3 season record and kept their bowl hopes alive, pending next week's regular-season finale against Missouri. Kansas is 3-3 in the conference, while Colorado sank to 1-5 and 2-8.

It was the first time Kansas has shut out an opponent since the 'Hawks beat Kansas State 28-0 in 1975, and was KU's first blanking of Colorado since 1934, when the teams played to a scoreless tie.

Seurer completed 10 of 15 passes for 209 yards and two touchdowns, the best passing day of the sophomore's college career.

He broke the game open with scoring strikes of 62 and 15 yards to Capers in the third quarter, when Kansas opened up a 24-0 lead.

Taylor rambled for 123 yards on 22 carries and one touchdown.

Swimmers gain berths

FORT WORTH — Two City of Midland swimmers gained beths on the North All-Star team at TCU's Rickel Aquatic Center Saturday.

Becky Simpson splashed to a 2:06.24 to gain a berth in the 11-12 age group 200 freestyle. Andrea Freeman gained the prestigious team in two events. Freeman qualified in the 17-18 age group 200 freestyle and in the 200 individual medley. She swam a 2:01.92 in the 200 free and turned a 2:21.84 in the IM.

COM team members making the team as alternates were:

11-12 Age Group: Laura Morse, 200 freestyle, 2:10.27; 200 IM, 2:29.78. Tracey Delany, 200 freestyle, 2:10.37; 100 freestyle, 59.70. Becky Simpson, 200 IM 2:27.59; 100, freestyle, 59.83.

Michigan tops Purdue, 28-10

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Quarterback Steve Smith passed 27 yards to Craig Dunaway for a first-quarter touchdown Saturday, then ran 26 yards for another touchdown as 11th-ranked Michigan scored three times in the fourth quarter to beat Purdue 28-10 in a Big Ten Conference football game.

The Wolverines, taking over sole possession of first place in the Big Ten thanks to Wisconsin's 17-7 loss to Iowa, started their go-ahead drive from their own 24-yard line early in the final period.

Two runs apiece by Smith and fullback Stan Edwards brought Michigan to midfield, and a costly pass interference penalty against Purdue gave the Wolverines first down at the Boilermakers' 29-yard line. Two plays later, Smith rambled in for the score.

FSU falls, 58-14

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Undefeated but once-tied Southern Mississippi scored the first seven times it had the ball and the 14th-ranked Golden Eagles went on to crush No.20 Florida State 58-14.

Reserve tailback Ricky Floyd scored three touchdowns and quarterback Reggie Collier rushed for 150 yards on 15 carries, including a 69-yard scoring run, as Southern Mississippi hiked its record to 8-0-1.

Collier also completed completed 7 of 8 passes for 76 yards and two touchowns, and tailback Sammy Winder ran for two scores to lead the Golden Eagles past the 6-4 Seminoles, who suffered their worst loss in five years.

Lee girls eyeing repeat title

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Midland Lee failed to advance to bi-district play as the District 5-5A girls basketball representative for the first time in four years last season. San Angelo snapped the Rebel string with a 50-44 playoff win at Big Spring after the Bobcats and Lee tied for the regular season crown.

This season coach Shirley Stephenson feels that the Rebels have the firepower to correct that over sight.

Lee, who has won or shared the district title every year that the district has had girls basketball, has several big shoes to fill. Gone from last year's 20-11 club are first team All-District selections Gale Wilson and Melinda Hohenberger.

Despite heavy graduation losses, Stephenson welcomes back more letter winners this year then she ever has. Seven of eight letter winners will answer the bell when the the Rebels open their cage season Tuesday at Big Lake.

Lee received a jolt when super quick point guard Julie Gallagher underwent knee surgery. Stephenson said, "Gallagher just made a cut during practice two weeks ago and her knee went out. Yesterday (Wednesday) she had knee surgery and will be out for eight to nine weeks."

Stephenson stated, "I'm optimistic about this year. We have a great bunch of hustlers who work hard all the time. We really don't have any superstars. Instead we have a lot of people who can play. Right now I would say we have ten girls that are about even in talent and maybe even as deep as 12."

The Rebels won't put a tall team on the floor. Seniors Susan Gillis and Suzanne McCabe (honorable mention All-District last year) top the Lee tape measure at 5'9". A step behind are seniors Shun Harris, Rozena McCabe and Francis Gavia at 5-8.

Stephenson will be looking for a good year form Yshun King (District 5-5A sophomore of the year last season). King was the the team's second leader scorer behind the departed Wilson with 218 points in 31 games and led the Rebs in rebounding with 191 carooms (84 offensive and 107 defensive boards).

Maudie Akins (5-6 senior) adds strength to the rebounding corp despite her lack of height. Akins hauled in 102 rebounds and scored 127 points for the Rebs last year. Added rebouding and scoring punch comes from Harris (86 points, 115 rebounds), McGaha (169 points, 156 rebounds) and McCabe (64 points, 73 rebounds).

Stephenson said, "We not real tall but I feel that we will be able to rebound well." She added, "We have good desire, hustle, handle the ball pretty well and have good team speed. I am real optimistic about the year."

Stephenson said, "We have a tradition of winning the district and that should help us. The district race will be tough this year. Abilene and Odessa High have a lot of players back, Midland High will be improved, Cooper will be strong and San Angelo has everyone back except one."

Lee makes its home debut Nov. 23 when the Rebs host Monahans. The Rebels will also face Lakeview, Hobbs, Monterey and Pecos plus playing in the Amarillo, Slaton and Tall City Girls Invitational tournament before opening district cage action Jan. 2 against Midland High at Chap Center.

Huskers roll over I-State

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Ignited by Irving Fryar's 63-yard punt return, Nebraska exploded for 24 fourth-quarter points to roll over Iowa State 31-7 Saturday, winning a trip to the Orange Bowl as Oklahoma was knocked out of the Big Eight Conference football title chase.

Only Oklahoma and Nebraska had a shot at the crown and the opportunity to represent the Big Eight in the New Year's Day bowl game when play began Saturday. And as in years past, many predicted the question would be decided in next week's Nebraska-Oklahoma showdown in Norman, Okla.

But Missouri shocked Oklahoma 19-14 in Columbia, Mo., eliminating the Sooners. Nebraska has a perfect 6-0 league record, while Oklahoma fell to 3-1-1. Stubborn Iowa State proved a tough stumbling block for three quarters as the Cyclones controlled the ball and shut down Nebraska's high-powered offense.

Tulsa nails WTS

CANYON, Texas (AP) — Sophomore fullback Brett White ran for 105 yards on 21 carries including a 13-yard touchdown as Tulsa clinched a share of the Missouri Valley Conference football title Saturday with a 24-10 triumph over West Texas State.

The Hurricane, winning its sixth straight contest, improved its Valley mark to 5-1 and finished tied with Drake as conference co-champion. Drake earned its share of the title with a 13-10 win over Illinois State Saturday, but suffered its only conference loss to Tulsa two weeks ago.

Tulsa and West Texas State each stand 6-4 on the season.

Miami slips past Hokies

MIAMI (AP) — Jim Kelly threw for 209 yards and two touchdowns Saturday night as 12th-ranked Miami of Florida held on for a 21-14 college football victory over Virginia Tech in a rematch between last season's Peach Bowl teams.

Kelly, a junior from East Brady, Pa., hit on 20 of 27 attempts, including scoring tosses of 14 yards to wide receiver Mike Rodrigue and 3 yards to flanker Larry Brodsky.

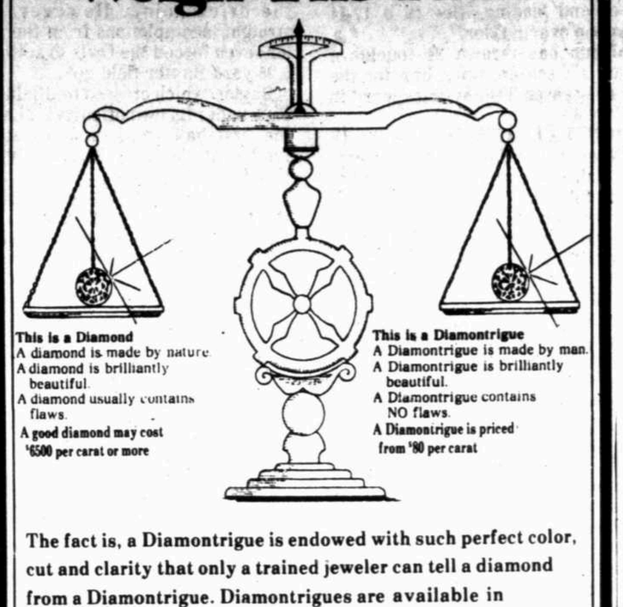

Fumbles helped set up the first two touchdowns as Miami built a 14-0 lead.

Fishing prospects look bright for Amistad

A recent Texas Parks and Wildlife survey on the 64,000-acre border reservoir revealed healthy populations of several species of native and non-native game fish.

Biologist Bob Zerr of San Antonio said crews applied the chemical rotoenone to three coves to determind standing crops of fish. "The most noticeable result was the presence of high numbers of small largemouth bass in the two-to-five inch lenght class," Zerr said. "This indicates an excellent spawn this year."

Zerr said in addition to largemouths, they also collected smallmouth bass, striped bass, walleyes, channel and flathead catfish and sunfish.

Department biologists consider Amistad a showcase for freshwater fisheries management. Once a poor fishing lake, Amistad has progressed steadily during the past decade, largely because of introductions of predator species not native to the Rio Grande.

"Anglers have caught several striped bass over 30 pounds, smallmouths up to five pounds and walleyes as large as six pounds during the past year," said Zerr. "Also, the Florida strain of largemouth bass has been introduced, and has been found in all our samples."

ANTELOPE POPULATIONS: Like the North American Indian, the pronghorn antelope has seen its numbers and historical range fluctuate greatly.

Prior to 1880, the pronghorn was numevous in Texas, with a range as far east as the Dallas-Fort Worth area and southwards to the coast at Rockport.

Settling of the Texas frontier, excessive market hunting pressure and changes in land practices accounted for the decrease of the Texas Antelope.

In 1903, a closed season was adopted but illegal hunting and increased fencing stalled the increase of these animals. Enforcement was intensified, landowners became interested in pronghorn preservation and the animals gradually increased.

Despite efforts of protection and conservation, the antelope in Texas have yet togain an enormous population, in contrast to the immense numbers of the pronghorn that inhabit the high grass plains of New Mexico.

NO WATERFOWL CHANGE: Despite all the bad publicity, the threatening to close all waterfowl seasons, duck and goose seasons in Texas are still on, according to wildlife officials at the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Reports of pesticide contamination in waterfowl found in Montana have kept P&WD phone lines busy for the past week, but Wildlife Division director Ted Clark said that at the moment there is no change in waterfowl seasons for the state.

The Monatana pesticide problem started in spring 1981 when some 120,000 acres of wheat in the eastern part of that state were sprayed with Endrin to control cutworms. Endrin is a highly toxic, persistent pesticide which concentrates in the fat and soft tissues of animals.

Because of this toxicity, the Montana Department of Game, Fish and Parks started taking samples of that state's wildlife. They foun Endrin concentrations in sharptail grouse which equal or exceed levels for pesticide concentration set by the Environmental Protection Agency for domestic red meat and poultry. Endrin residues also have been found in some ducks and geese.

As a result of this, Montana game and fish officials will meet to consider closing seasons set to open there. But latest reports just in say that Montana will go ahead with the season as planned. They recommend, however, that their hunters do not shoot too many birds and eat too much waterfowl meat.

In order to assess the situation in Texas, the Central Flyway Council will provide Texas and other states with a computerized printout which will be used by P&WD officials to determine the potential distribution of any affected birds in Texas.

As we find out more about the problem, we'll keep you advised. We've been most reluctant to print anyth'ng because of all the flying rumors. But it doesn't look as if anything will change this waterfowl season in our state.

Georgia clinched tie for SEC by beating Auburn

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) -- Buck Belue fired two touchdown passes and All-American Herschel Walker rambled for 165 yards and one score as fourth-ranked Georgia clinched a share of the Southeastern Conference football championship Saturday with a 24-13 victory over Auburn.

The victory, Georgia's seventh in a row since its only loss to Clemson earlier this season, probably gave the Bulldogs the inside track to a second consecutive Sugar Bowl appearance, where the Bulldogs claimed the 1980 national championship with a 17-10 victory over Notre Dame.

Belue hurled both of his touchdown passes in the second quarter, a 46-yarder to Norris Brown who was alone behind the Auburn secondary to take the pass at the 13 and a 5-yarder to Clarence Kay.

Walker, who scored on a 2-yard run in the third period, finished with 165 yards on 38 carries, lifting his season total to 1,667 and breaking his own school mark of 1,616 set in his freshman campaign last year.

Kevin Butler opened the Bulldog scoring with a 20-yard first quarter field goal, tying the NCAA record of 16 in a season by a freshman, set last year by Colorado State's John Poole. It also equalled the SEC single season record set by Florida's Berj Yepremiam in 1978 and tied last year by Georgia's Rex Robinson.

The triumph lifted Georgia to 9-1 for the year and 6-0 in the SEC.

Auburn, 5-5 and 2-3, got its touchdowns on a 7-yard run by Mike Edwards early in the second quarter and a 1-yard keeper by Clayton Beauford with 2:50 left in the game.

Clemson claws Maryland 21-7

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Quarterback Homer Jordan threw three touchdown passes to lead undefeated, second-ranked Clemson to a 21-7 victory over Maryland for the Atlantic Coast Conference championship Saturday.

Jordan completed 20 of 29 passes for 270 yards and was the Tigers' leading rusher with 58 yards. Meanwhile, wide receiver Perry Tuttle continued his assault on Clemson's record books by catching 10 passes for 151 yards and two TDs.

TUTTLE, A senior who keeps adding to his school record for career reception yardage (now 2,432 yards), eclipsed another Jerry Butler standard for number of career receptions with 142. Butler's record was 139 catches.

All of Clemson's scoring came in the first half, but it took Jordan nearly all of the first quarter before the Tigers scored.

He lofted the ball 14 yards over the head of the nearest defender into Tuttle's hands for the initial score.

Then in the second quarter, Jordan threw a 5-yard scoring pass to Tuttle and followed that with a 12-yarder to Jerry Gaillard for Clemson's final tally.

MARYLAND, WHICH was hampered by a swarming Clemson defense most of the game, finally scored early in the fourth quarter after Jordan fumbled on his own 7.

Vols slide by Ol Miss, 28-20

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee split end Willie Gault returned a punt 66 yards for a touchdown and a school career kick return record of 1,703 yards Saturday as the Volunteers beat fast-closing Mississippi 28-20 in a Southeastern Conference college football game.

Tennessee dominated the game early, scoring the first three touchdowns. Quarterback Steve Alatorre passed to wide receiver Anthony Hancock for a 13-yard touchdown, then tailback James Berry leaped one yard into the end zone with three minutes left in the first quarter.

Tar Heels clip Virginia, 17-14

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — North Carolina's 13th-ranked Tar Heels, trailing 14-7 at halftime, got a touchdown from tailback Tyrone Anthony and a 34-yard field goal by Brooks Barwick in the third quarter for a 17-14 Atlantic Coast Conference football victory over the Cavaliers Saturday.

Anthony's score from 2 yards out was set up by quarterback Rod Elkins, who first passed 32 yards to Jon Richardson at the Virginia 43, then 20 yards to Anthony at the Virginia 19.

Barwick's game-winning field goal came after Walter Black intercepted a pass at the North Carolina 43 and tailback Kelvin Bryant, who had registered the Tar Heels' first touchdown, ran 33 yards to the Virginia 24. The kick came with 1:45 left in the third period.

Following Bryant's 2-yard scoring plunge with 5:12 left in the first period, Virginia went ahead. Quarterback Gordie Whitehead threw second-quarter touchdown passes of 37 yards to Greg Taylor and 30 yards to Henry Johnson.

Princeton upsets Yale

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Quarterback Bob Holly passed for 501 yards including three touchdowns and ran for the winning score from 1 yard out with four seconds remaining as Princeton upset previously undefeated Yale 35-31 in college football Saturday.

It was the first time in 14 years that Princeton beat the Elis, who are seeking their third straight Ivy League championship.

The Tigers turned back a strong Yale ground game that included three touchdown runs by Rich Diana, who rushed 46 times for 222 yards.

Yale scored the first three touchdowns on a 3-yard run by quarterback John Rogan, and 1- and a 2-yard runs by Diana.

Holly, who completed 19 passes for 300 yards in the first half, threw for Princeton's first touchdown on a 20-yard pass to Derek Graham with 1:57 left in the half. Holly passed to Dave Ginda for a two-point conversion.

With Princeton's next drive beginning with 45 seconds remaining, Holly fired a 20-yard touchdown pass to Larry Van Pelt with 21 seconds to go in the half. Yale led 21-15 at halftime.

Early in the third period, Holly gave Princeton a 22-21 lead on a 19-yard touchdown pass to Kevin Guthrie.

Yale rallied on Tony Jones' 32-yard field goal. Linebacker Jeff Rohrer's fourth-quarter interception of a Holly pass set up Yale's final touchdown drive, a 1-yard plunge by Diana that gave the Elis a 31-22 lead.

The triumph put the Tigers' record at 4-4-1 overall and 4-1-1 in the Ivy League. The loss dropped Yale to 8-1 overall and 5-1 in league play.

Smith, Bramlett win

Kay Smith and Sandy Bramlett teamed for 18 points to win the Midland Tennis Club's Women's Scramble Round Robin tennis event Saturday at Midland High.

Cindy Williams and Beverly Baer scored 15 points to finish second as five teams played each other in six games.

Syracuse nips Boston College

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Quarterback Dave Warner's accurate passing, the 132-yard rushing of tailback Joe Morris and a revived defense spurred the Syracuse Orangemen to a 27-17 college football triumph Saturday over Boston College.

Boston College freshman signal-caller Doug Flutie scored on runs of 13 yards in the first quarter and 1 yard in the fourth.

Field goals of 37 and 31 yards by Gary Anderson opened and closed scoring for the Orange, who improved to 3-6-1 at the expense of the 3-6 Eagles. His BC counterpart, John Cooper, nailed a 39-yarder for a 10-10 tie in the third quarter, but missed earlier attempts of 38 and 41 yards, which would have given the Eagles a commanding lead.

Boston College led 7-3 at halftime before Syracuse exploded in the third quarter, taking the lead for the first time on Warner's 14-yard rollout and breaking the tie on an 18-yard run by Glenn Moore, Morris' understudy.

Morris increased the Orange lead to 24-10 early in the fourth period with a 12-yard run. The Syracuse defense, which had been giving up 370 yards a game, put on a show for the crowd of 35,623 by sacking Flutie seven times for 53 yards in losses.

Navy sinks Tech, 20-14

ATLANTA (AP) — Navy's Richard Clouse scored on a 4-yard burst to cap an 80-yard drive following the second half kickoff and sparked the Middies to a 20-14 college football victory over Georgia Tech Saturday, extending the Yellow Jackets' losing streak to nine games.

The Jackets' loss equaled their longest losing streak of nine set back in 1934.

Navy, 7-3, trailed 14-13 at halftime when Quarterback Marco Pagnanelli came out passing following the second half kickoff and connected on 4-of-4 passes for 71 yards, including a 33-yarder to Chris Yelder to the 4.

The victory by the Middies spoiled an outstanding effort by Tech freshman tailback Robert Lavette, who raced for 197 yards, including touchdown runs of 3 and 83 yards in the opening period as Tech took a 14-3 lead.

Tech allowed 310 yards and 18 first downs in the first half but managed to stop the Middies twice inside the 10

6 Reasons why the provisions of the new tax bill should cause you to purchase a new aircraft between now and the end of the year.

1. Previously, an aircraft could only be depreciated to some pre-determined "salvage value"... usually the aircraft's anticipated future market value. In many cases, this could restrict the amount of depreciation allowed to 50% of the purchase price, or less. The new tax system allows depreciation of 100% of the aircraft value for income tax purposes.
2. The new tax system stipulates a standard five year depreciation period for aircraft -- two full years shorter than the seven year life encouraged under the old rules. This shorter schedule, combined with the 100% depreciation allowance, provides for a substantial income tax deduction each year the aircraft is owned.
3. Normally, depreciation must be pro-rated so that any aircraft purchase made near the end of the tax year qualifies for very little depreciation in that year. The new tax system, on the other hand, provides for a standard 15% depreciation for the year of purchase. Therefore, the aircraft may be depreciated the full 15% even if placed in service on the last day of the taxable year — an excellent reason to select your new Cessna between now and December 31.
4. Under the old system, most parameters of depreciating an aircraft, such as depreciation method and salvage value, were left up to the taxpayer. This approach left the door wide open to challenges from the I.R.S. if they felt inappropriate decisions had been made. The new tax system establishes the aircraft life (5 years), the depreciable amount (100%) and the amount of depreciation to be claimed each year (15% in year one, 22% in year two and 21% each in years three through five), all to the benefit of you, the aircraft owner.
5. Previously, assuming the full 10% Investment Tax Credit was taken at the time of purchase, this full amount could be retained only if you kept your aircraft the full seven years. If you sold your aircraft after only five years, you would be obliged to return to the I.R.S. one-third of the Investment Tax Credit claimed at the time of purchase. A sale after three years would require the recapture of two-thirds of the I.T.C. Holding the aircraft anything less than three years required the return of the entire Investment Tax Credit. Under the new tax system, this minimum holding requirement for the full 10% I.T.C. is reduced to five years.
6. Under the new tax system, if you keep your aircraft less than five years, you simply return 20% of the Investment Tax Credit for each year the holding period falls short of the five year requirement. Therefore, if you purchase an aircraft for $100,000 and take the full I.T.C. ($10,000) but only keep the aircraft for two years, you would keep 40% ($4,000) and return 60% ($6,000) to the I.R.S. at the time the aircraft is sold. The old law would have required the entire I.T.C. to be returned at the time of sale since the aircraft was held less than three years.

Ohio State tailback Jim Gayle carries a host of Northwestern defenders as he goes for a short gain against the Mildcats in first half action in Columbus Saturday.

Buckeyes extend Wildcats' losing string to 30, 70-6

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Quarterback Art Schlichter's three touchdowns helped Ohio State smother Northwestern 70-6 Saturday, keeping the Buckeyes in contention for the Big Ten football title and extending the Wildcats' all-time record losing streak to 30 games.

The point total represented the highest figure for Ohio State in 31 years. The Buckeyes routed Iowa 83-21 in 1950 and had not scored more than 63 points in a contest since then.

Schlichter, starting his 45th straight college game, received a standing ovation from the 83rd straight Ohio State home sellout of 86,912 when he left the game midway in the third quarter.

Schlichter completed 16 of 24 passes for 281 yards. His touchdowns came on passes of 42 yards to Cedric Anderson, 36 yards to Victor Langley and 48 yards to Gary Williams.

The victory lifted Ohio State into a tie for second place in the conference with Iowa. Both have 5-2 records to leading Michigan's 6-2 mark. The Buckeyes, 7-3 overall, close out the season next week at Michigan.

Northwestern made a game of it for the first 20 minutes, before the Buckeyes scored three times in 3:11 for a 35-6 halftime lead.

Schlichter — a 6-3, 208-pound senior — now has thrown for 7,257 yards in his college career. He has 8,587 total yards, easily ranking as the school's all-time yardage champion.

Northwestern, suffering its 34 straight conference defeat, is 0-10 this season, with eight of those defeats coming in the Big Ten.

Iowa tames Wisconsin, 17-7

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Tailback Phil Blatcher dived one and two yards for touchdowns and Iowa's Big Ten-leading defense forced five turnovers as the Hawkeyes defeated Wisconsin 17-7 in a college football showdown Saturday.

Iowa, 7-3 overall and 5-2 in the Big Ten, jumped into prime contention for what could be its first conference championship since 1960, when the Hawkeyes shared the crown, and its first Rose Bowl berth since 1959.

Wisconsin, held to three first downs until the last three minutes of the third quarter, fell from a share of the Big Ten lead to 5-3 in the conference and 6-4 for the season.

Iowa drove 53 yards in 10 plays on its second series and took a 3-0 lead on a 35-yard field goal by freshman Tom Nichol. Gordy Bohannon completed 5 of 6 passes for 40 yards on the drive.

Iowa safety Bobby Stoops recovered a fumble by Wisconsin's Chucky Davis at the Badger 46 late in the first quarter. The Hawkeyes were set back to their 39 by a 15-yard penalty, but came back with a 57-yard pass from Bohannon to Dave Moritz which carried to the Wisconsin 4. Moritz beat cornerback Clint Sims on the play.

Blatcher scored from a yard out two plays later as Iowa led 10-0.

Iowa nose guard Pat Dean recovered a fumble by Wisconsin's Marvin Neal on the Badger 31 moments later. Bohannon passed to Ivory Webb for gains of 8 and 9 yards to set up Blatcher's second touchdown with 7:26 left in the first half.

Wisconsin scored its only touchdown with 2:29 to play on a 52-yard pass from Jess Cole to Thad McFadden. The Badgers tried an on-side kick after the touchdown, but Iowa recovered at its 34.

Illinois bombs Indiana

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Tony Eason passed for two touchdowns and ran for two others Saturday to lead Illiniois to a 35-14 triumph over Indiana in Big Ten action.

Eason, one of the nation's leading passers, gave Illinois an early 14-0 lead with his touchdown runs, but stepped up the aerial attack after Indiana used a trick play to tie the score at halftime.

The Hoosiers' scoring came in the second period when quarterback Babe Laufenberg threw a 34-yard touchdown pass to Todd Shroyer, then surprised Illinois by catching a 7-yard TD strike off the halfback option.

Eason put the Illini ahead to stay in the third quarter with a two-yard touchdown pass to Mike Murphy.

Pryor retains title

CLEVELAND (AP) — Aaron Pryor stunned DuJuan Johnson with a right hand, then followed with a barrage of head punches to stop the challenger in the seventh-round and retain the World Boxing Association junior welterweight title Saturday.

The 26-year-old Pryor, unbeaten beaten in 29 fights, was knocked down in the first round, but came back strongly in the fifth and sixth rounds before ending it 1:49 into the seventh.

The loss was the first after 17 victories, 13 by knockout, for Johnson, a Detroit native. For Pryor, who weighed in at 139¼ to Johnson's 140, it was the 27th knockout in 29 fights.

The title defense was the third for the Cincinnati's Pryor, who first won the crown Aug. 3, 1980, with a fourth-round knockout of Antonio Cervantes.

His undisciplined attack worked against him as he fell into the ropes after missing a wild third-round punch.

The pair fought on fairly even terms from the fourth through sixth rounds. Pryor, however, was landing numerous short punches to Johnson's body and head, wearing the challenger down.

Spartans clip Gophers, 43-36

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Bryan Clark bolted 15 yards for a touchdown with 56 seconds to play as Michigan State overcame Minnesota 43-36 in a topsy-turvy Big Ten football game Saturday.

Clark, who passed for a 70-yard touchdown to Daryl Turner on Michigan State's first play from scrimmage, scored the winning touchdown after engineering an 80-yard, nine-play drive.

Earlier in the fourth quarter, Clark hit split end Ted Jones for a 30-yard touchdown, then threw to tight end Al Kimichik for a two-point conversion which tied the game at 36-36 and negated a spectacular Minnesota comeback.

Mike Hohensee passed for a pair of touchdowns and ran for two more as Minnesota exploded for 30 points in the third quarter to overtake the Spartans.

Clark completed 21 passes for 318 yards and three touchdowns during the afternoon as Michigan State evened its record at 5-5 and improved to 4-4 in the conference.

Irish shoot down Air Force

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Workhorse tailback Phil Carter ran for 156 yards and two touchdowns Saturday to lead Notre Dame to its 11th straight victory over the Air Force Academy, 35-7.

The intersectional victory gave Irish rookie Coach Jerry Faust a 5-4 record while the Falcons dropped to 3-6.

Carter, a 5-foot-10, 200-pound junior from Tacoma, Wash., who carried the ball 27 times, scored a touchdown on a 4-yard sweep in the first quarter and on a 1-yard plunge in the second quarter to give the Irish all the points they needed.

Air Force cut the margin to 14-7 early in the fourth quarter when John Kershner broke up the middle on a 9-yard scoring run. But the Irish came back with three touchdowns on their next three possessions, a 17-yard run by sophomore tailback Greg Bell, a 5-yard burst by fullback Larry Moriarty and a 12-yard run by fullback Mark Brooks.

Auction provides wealth of information

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

The holdings of His Excellency the Maharajah Kala Singh Sood, deceased, will be auctioned in Midland's Midland Center beginning at 2 p.m. Friday.

The auction, conducted by Estate Auctions & Gallery Ltd., is sponsored by the Permian Civic Ballet Guild with a percentage of the purchase price of each item sold going to the Permian Civic Ballet. This percentage is also tax deductible.

The Permian Civic Ballet has been donated land for a rehearsal hall. The monies received from this auction will go toward the building fund.

Although Estate Auctions & Gallery Ltd., a division of Estate Auction Co. Inc., has held numerous auctions in Midland, this is the first time the company has conducted the guild's auction. Mark Blechman, a company representative, was in town in advance of the auction to finalize plans for the auction and for the company's proposed move from Houston to Midland this spring.

THE COMPANY IS a family enterprise.

"My father and my grandfather before me have been in this business," Blechman said. Blechman's grandfather "originally started about 80 years ago in a brokering system in Europe, then he got into the auction business.

"Our company, based in Houston, is now in the process of making Midland its home base. Houston is becoming like New York City, and it's not safe."

Blechman grew up in Houston in a simpler time — before the boom of the last decade.

"This (Midland) is the way it was when I grew up in Houston. The people were friendly there then as they are here now," Blechman said.

He enjoys his work.

"I LOVE BEING an auctioneer. It's fun meeting people, and the amount of information I learn at an auction is invaluable.

"There is no such thing as an expert. I am not ashamed to say, 'I don't know.' Someone who makes an instantaneous appraisal without researching an item is offensive to me."

The entire field of antiques, i.e. paintings, porcelains, sculptures, carpets, furniture, ivory items, "represents too vast an array of information to acquire all the knowledge," Blechman said.

"We handle quality merchandise. Each piece is referenced and each piece is identified," he said.

Estate Auction Co. Inc. "will go pretty much anywhere at the drop of a hat to do an auction," Blechman said, explaining that many people don't realize his company conducts auctions worldwide.

"IF WE GET a call from Johannesburg (South Africa), we go there to do the auction," he said.

Traveling and working in different parts of the world has helped Blechman to adopt the attitude of "I judge no one by anything. I don't know the names of the 'proper' people. I don't know when to be impressed or not."

This attitude opened the doors for the current inventory of stock from the maharajah's estate.

"This family had seen an auction I had handled, and they approached me," Blechman said. "I said, 'Yes, we are interested as soon as you've handled the family matters.'

"I was awestruck at the quantity as well as the quality of the merchandise. The inventory includes some of the most beautiful art work down to items of varied quality."

THE MAHARAJAH'S palace had 200 rooms, leaving a transportable stock of over 10,000 items, Blechman said.

"There will be new merchandise in every price range at each session," he said. The auction will have at least five open-to-the-public sessions, with an additional one Nov. 23 if warranted. The Friday and Saturday sessions will begin at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. with one session Sunday at 2 p.m. The merchandise will be on show an hour prior to each sale.

Many of the paintings from the estate have been recently appraised in Europe, Blechman said.

"Each appraised piece has the provenance with it which has been recorded in London in a manner as confidential as a Swiss bank account.

"A maharajah was a divine ruler of whatever territorial bounds he controlled. Unlimited revenues were at his disposal."

This was true if the territory he controlled had wealth, Blechman said. Grinning, he added, "There were some poor as well as wealthy ones."

"AT THE TURN of the century, a trip to Europe (from India) was a two-year expedition. Someone living in India who had unlimited wealth had the wherewithal to buy Russian malachite vases, French bedroom suites which have since been lost in wars or hacked up for fire wood during times of famine."

Few of the items to be auctioned have a reserve figure set on them, Blechman said. A reserve means an amount below which the item cannot be sold. This figure is the starting point for the bidding on a particular piece.

"If we cannot acquire an estate without a reserve on most of the pieces, we don't do the auction," Blechman said.

"Some items will go much lower than their worth and some will attain their worth," Blechman said. "The recipients of the estate are attaining 100 percent profit because they didn't attain the items in the beginning."

IF THOSE selling an estate want to "receive top dollar, it will take them two years" or longer and some expense to do so, because the merchandise will have to be advertised and sold off piece by piece, Blechman said.

In the case of a reserve item which does not sell at the auction, those parties interested in buying the piece at a lower price may make a reasonable offer which will be presented to the family, he said.

Auctioneer Mark Blechman of Estate Auction Co., Inc., handles this 19th century French Sevres vase, which is one of a pair, with care. Ten years ago the pair was valued at $5,000 to $8,000. Today's appraised value is $35,000. This vase is one of the 10,000 items which will be offered for public auction beginning Friday at 2 p.m. at Midland Center. The auction is being sponsored by the Permian Civic Ballet Guild, with a percentage of the sales going to the Permian Civic Ballet.

'Camelot' presented

Lerner and Loewe's "Camelot" will be on stage at Midland High School Auditorium at 8 p.m. Friday. The touring road show production, presented by Harlequin Theatricals and Columbia Artists Theatricals, marks the second show of the Midland Community Concert Association's 1981-82 season.

The musical includes such selections as "If Ever I Would Leave You," "How To Handle A Woman," "Camelot," "I Loved You Once In Silence," "What Do The Simple Folks Do?" and "Follow Me."

Actors burned on the set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Peter Barton was reported in stable and satisfactory condition Saturday after suffering burns while filming the new NBC-TV series "The Powers of Matthew Star."

Barton, 25, suffered second- and third-degree burns on his buttocks, lower back and right arm Thursday when he accidentally fell onto one of several magnesium flares used to light a scene at an auto wrecking yard, said a spokesman for Paramount Studios.

Barton, who was being treated at the Sherman Oaks Community Hospital Burn Center, was expected to be hospitalized for two weeks.

Also injured during the incident was actor Louis Gossett Jr. Gossett, 45, was released from Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center after being treated for burns on the back of his head and hands.

Autry's sidekick visits OC

ODESSA — Pat Buttram, humorist, western actor and writer, will be on the Odessa College campus Tuesday for a free program and lecture at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium.

Buttram, who was Gene Autry's sidekick in 200 westerns, will speak on "The Movies That Saved A Generation." Buttram also played the character of Mr. Haney on television's "Green Acres."

The actor plans on showing a collection of film clips from westerns never seen before on television or in the movies.

The public is invited to attend.

Brigl captures 'what the eye can observe'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

He has been painting for over 65 years. Approximately 125 of his paintings hang in Midland in private collections as well as in public centers. The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum has several of his works as does The First National Bank.

Most of those paintings were purchased 15 to 20 years ago. Few of those who own them know the artist has since become a Midland resident.

Born in Munchen, Bavaria (now Munich, West Germany), Brigl came to the United States in 1930. He lived in Wisconsin for 24 years before moving to Highland Park in Dallas. Brigl has been a state-appointed Judge of Fine Arts since 1946.

He is not fond of placing his works with a gallery and has for the greater part of his life sold his works himself.

"In 1933, the Finley Art Gallery in Chicago, Ill., sold one of my paintings for $600," Brigl said. "I personally have had no exhibition since then because I was so disgusted with the price he got (the owner of the Finley) and the price I got. I got $100. He was making a 500 percent profit."

Last year, he had his first gallery showing since 1933. His wife, Jane, convinced him to try it once before they left Dallas. The show was so successful that Brigl "had to close it.

"It was possible we would have sold out. In that case I would have given to the government 15 paintings (referring to income tax). Even old paintings you sell, you get no advantage."

Thursday the Roughton Gallery in Dallas will open the second one-man showing Brighl has had in 48 years.

The show will include 36 paintings. The subject matter includes five wildlifes; 15 landscapes, both European and those done when Brigl lived in Wisconsin; two marine paintings; two Indian paintings; five works done of the Big Bend country; a religious painting; and six in the miscellaneous category.

The show will last three weeks or until Brigl has to say, "I'm sorry, no more sale."

Cotton, peanut harvesting is continuing undaunted

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Open weather is allowing cotton and peanut harvesting to continue undaunted in West Texas, and harvesting of the state's pecan crop is in full swing, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Some High Plains Texas farmers have been waiting for a killing frost to harvest the cotton, he said. A few cotton fields remain unharvested in Central, North Central and Northeast Texas, but the crop has deteriorated due to rainy weather, Pfannstiel said.

Peanut harvesting continues in West Central, Central, South Central and East Texas, with the crop producing generally good yields except in eastern counties.

This year's pecan crop is a good one despite recent losses due to flooding in some areas and some disease and insect problems, said Pfannstiel.

Some farmers continue to plant winter wheat and oats, and early planted fields are doing well with favorable soil moisture conditions.

Movement of stocker cattle into the plains area to graze wheat remains limited.

Livestock and forage conditions remain good over the state, with winter grasses and weeds growing well with good soil moisture, Pfannstiel said. Cattle marketing varies, with some producers shipping calves and cull cows while others are waiting for market prices to improve.

Reports from district Extension directors showed the following conditions.

Panhandle: Poor field drying conditions have hampered crop harvesting. Almost half the sorghum crop remains to be harvested. Most cotton farmers are still awaiting a killing freeze to prepare the crop for harvesting. Wheat continues to look good, but movement of stocker cattle onto wheat fields remains limited.

South Plains: Farmers are wrapping up harvesting of corn, sorghum and soybeans and are getting ready for full-scale cotton harvesting. Some cotton farmers are still awaiting a hard freeze to prepare the crop for harvesting while others have used desiccants. A few carrots are still being harvested, and about half the sugar beets are in. Wheat, ranges and livestock look good.

Rolling Plains: Cotton bolls continue to pop open, but most farmers are still awaiting a killing freeze to prepare the crop for harvesting. Some early fields have been harvested, with good yields. Farmers are about through planting wheat, with good stands emerging. A good pecan harvest is under way.

North Central: Cotton harvesting has resumed following recent rains; crop quality has deteriorated due to extensive wet conditions. Peanut harvesting has started; the crop looks good. A good pecan harvest is in progress. Livestock have good grazing but market prices remain weak.

Northeast: Harvesting of cotton, sweet potatoes and soybeans is resuming as fields dry. Winter vegetables continue to make good growth. Some wheat remains to be planted due to wet fields. Oats are providing good grazing for livestock. Fire ants are on the rampage in many counties. Pecans are about 50 percent harvested.

Far West: Cotton harvesting is in full swing, with many farmers using desiccants to prepare the crop for harvesting. Harvesting of bell peppers is about complete. A good pecan crop is being harvested. Livestock are in good shape although a few have been lost to prussic acid poisoning.

West Central: Cotton harvesting has resumed following rain delays; waiting lines are increasing at gins. Wheat planting is in full swing; early fields are making slow growth. Livestock and range conditions are excellent. A good pecan harvest is under way.

Central: A few fields of rain-damaged cotton remain to be harvested. Peanut harvesting is in full swing and yields generally are good. Some planting of wheat and oats continues, with early fields making good growth. Army worms are infesting some fields. Livestock and forages look good. Pecan harvesting is in full swing.

East: Peanut harvesting has resumed after recent rains; how-ever, the crop is poor. Oats are making good growth and are pro-viding some grazing. Pecan yields are good but quality is only fair. Livestock marketing varies widely, with weak prices. Fire ants remain a severe problem.

Upper Coast: Late soybeans are being harvested, but yields are generally poor due to adverse weather conditions. Hay harvesting is about complete; plenty of hay was made this year. A light pecan crop is being harvested; recent flooding caused some losses. Some wheat planting continues due to recent rain delays.

South Central : Harvesting of a good peanut crop is about complete while harvesting of a good pecan crop is increasing. Wheat and oats are making good growth, with armyworms increasing in some fields. Livestock and forage conditions are good.

Southwest: Harvesting of carrots and cauliflower continues while cabbage harvesting is in full swing. Broccoli and sugar harvests are winding down. Winter vegetables continue to make good progress. Pasture, range and livestock conditions are good. Ranchers are preparing for the deer hunting season.

Coastal Bend: Harvesting of a good pecan crop is about 80 percent complete. However, recent heavy rains reduced the crop by as much as 25 percent in the Guadalupe River bottom. Rains have delayed planting of wheat and oats, which is about 75 percent complete. Pastures and ranges are in excellent shape.

South: Sugarcane harvesting continues light. Harvesting of early oranges is increasing while grapefruit harvesting continues light. Melons, cucumbers, cabbage and peppers continue to move to market. Some hay making continues. Livestock have good grazing.

Midland hosts Pecan Harvest Festival

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

The Second Annual Midland County Pecan Harvest Festival is set for Nov. 30-Dec. 1 in Midland Park Mall.

This pecan educational and promotional event has expanded from a County Pecan Show started five years ago to include a Foods and Pecan Arts Division and a Queen's Pageant.

The Pecan Harvest Festival, co-sponsored by the Midland Pecan Growers Association and the County Extension Service, is an outgrowth of the interest in and economic importance of pecan growing in the county. Pecans are being planted with increasing frequency in the county, with an estimated 35,000 trees now established in orchards of 100 trees and more. In addition there are an estimated 7,500 trees in home yards within the city.

The pecan show is open to everyone, whether they have one tree or 1,000. To enter, simply select 40 nuts of each variety. The sample should represent the variety and be uniform in size and shell color. Nuts should be free of insect or disease damage and free of dust, dirt and shuck remnants.

Participants are limited to one entry of each named variety they grow. The grower may enter as many seedlings (trees grown from a seed and not budded or grafted), known hybrids or natives (trees transplanted from a native pecan stand).

Each sample selected for entry should be placed in a brown paper bag and labeled with the name and address of the grower and variety name, if known. If the variety is not known, they will be classified by the show judges.

Entries must be received by 5 p.m. Nov. 28. Collection points for entries are as follows: County Extension Office, 218 W. Illinois St.; Village Barber Shop, 2-B Meta Drive; Sandyland Pecans, Rankin Highway (3½ miles south of IH 20), and Marge Shaw, 40 Lavera Drive, Ridge Heights Addition.

Pecans are judged on the basis of size (number per pound), appearance and shell color. Kernel quality is equally important and is based on percent kernel (as relative to shell), color, general appearance, texture, hollowness and taste.

The Grand Champion pecan will receive a Rosette Ribbon and a pecan wood plaque. The Reserve Champion will receive a Rosette Ribbon, and ribbons will be awarded places one through three in each of the variety categories.

All pecans, when entered, become the property of the Midland County Pecan Show. Winners in the county show will advance to the regional competition. The West Texas Region I Pecan Show this year also will be held in Midland. Dates for this show are Dec. 10-12 at Midland Park Mall.

M. S. Davis is serving as president of Midland County Pecan Growers Association. David Hall is vice president and Ms. Shaw is secretary-treasurer. Harold Semple is 1981 Pecan Show chairman; Ann Semple is publicity chairman for the festival.

In the Pecan Foods Department there are divisions for both adult and youth (Grades 1-12). Categories include Quick Breads, Yeast Breads, Cakes, Pies, Cookies, Candies, Appetizers (non-sweet) and Appetizers (sweet). Food entry forms available at the County Extension Office must be completed and returned to the office by 5 p.m. Nov. 23. The food entry items will be accepted between 7: 30 and 9 a.m. only on Dec. 1 in Midland Park Mall.

In the Pecan Arts Department, which also has adult and youth divisions, items submitted for judging may include any specific or all-occasion decoration accessories for home, business, etc., using any pecan parts (whole, shell, nut meats, tree wood and/or leaves). Pecans for art exhibits do not have to be grown by the exhibitor.

Fifteen of Midland's loveliest young ladies are entered in the Pecan Queen's Pageant. Cathy Harris is working with this group, assisted by Pam Leach of Midland Park Mall. The Queen's Pageant features competition in five categories: Talent, evening gown, pecan interest, beauty and poise and personality.

The pageant program will begin at 7 p.m. Dec. 1 when the county pecan queen and runner-up for 1981-82 will be selected from 10 finalists. The winner will represent Midland County Pecan Growers Association at the West Texas Regional Show Dec. 10-12 and at the Texas Pecans Growers' annual meeting and state pecan show next year in July.

We urge you to participate and support the Midland County Pecan Harvest Festival by entering any or all of the show divisions or as a consumer. There will be consumer exhibits at both the county and regional shows, and extension specialists available for individual consultation on any pecan production or use problem.

Second annual Pecan Harvest scheduled

The second annual Midland Pecan Harvest Festival and Queen's Pageant will be held Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 in Midland Park Mall.

Formal announcement of the fete will be in a news conference at 10 a.m. Saturday in Olga's Restaurant in Midland Park Mall.

Though the event will be the second annual festival-pageant sponsored by the Midland County Pecan Growers Association and the Midland County Agricultural Extension Service, it will be the fifth annual pecan show held by the 140-member pecan organization, which was formed in 1976.

Harold Semple is pecan show chairman. Morris Davis is president of the association. David Hall is vice president, and Marge Shaw is secretary-treasurer.

Those wishing to enter varieties of unshelled pecans in the show may drop off a sampling of about 30 select but untampered-with nuts from each variety at one of four Midland locations: Village Barber Shop at No. 2 Meta Drive; County Agent Charlie Green's office in the Courthouse Annex at 218 W. Illinois Ave.; Sandy Land Pecan Co. off the Rankin Highway 3½ miles south of Interstate 20; and at Marge Shaw's residence at 40 Lavera Drive in the Ridge Heights Addition.

He's found oldest bird

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The scientist who found the world's two largest dinosaurs in a Colorado quarry says he has discovered a fossil of the world's oldest known bird in the same dig.

James Jensen, a Brigham Young University paleontologist, called the discovery of a bird's pelvis and two leg bones in the Dry Mesa area his most exciting find. Jensen discovered what was then the world's largest dinosaur in 1972 and found a bigger one in 1979.

"I've discovered a number of dinosaurs, but there was no controversy about them," he said. "For 120 years, controversy has surrounded the world's oldest bird."

Fetus survives surgery, reimplantation in womb

CHICAGO (AP) — For the first time, a human fetus has survived out-of-the-womb surgery and return to its mother's uterus, the Chicago Tribune reports.

It long has been thought impossible to remove a human fetus from the womb and successfully replace it. All earlier attempts to do so failed, although the operation has succeeded in sheep. The major threat is miscarriage.

The fetus underwent surgery to correct a urinary tract obstruction that would have killed it, the newspaper said in a copyright story in Sunday's editions. The mother, who was not identified, was about 24 weeks pregnant, the paper said.

However, the baby died after birth from undeveloped lungs, a complication unrelated to the surgery, the newspaper said.

The operation was conducted earlier this year at the University of California at San Francisco by Drs. Michael Harrison, Mitchell S. Golbus and Roy A. Filly after years of research on animal fetuses, the Tribune said, without indicating the source of its report.

"The fact that the pregnancy continued to term is regarded by medical experts as a major breakthrough and the most dramatic development in the amazing new field of fetal surgery and fetal medicine," the Tribune said.

Harris declined to comment on the case until an account of it is published in a medical journal, the newspaper said. But he did say: "We have come along far enough in our animal experiments where it looks like we can do the procedure in humans."

The same team of doctors performed another fetal surgery first on April 29, but that fetus remained in the womb. They inserted a needle through a woman's abdomen and into the bladder of her unborn baby to correct a life-threatening blockage of the urinary tract.

Researchers are worried that fetal surgery may get out of hand with inexperienced doctors rushing to try it, the Tribune said.

It quoted Harrison as saying, "I have this tremendous fear that it could turn into the shambles that occurred with heart transplants. A lot of inexperienced surgeons all over the world tried heart transplants because they wanted to get their names in the papers. I think that is terribly dangerous."

'Of course' actress backs Equal Rights Amendment

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Helen Hayes, the 81-year-old doyenne of the American stage, says "of course" she's in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment. The only reason she's not campaigning actively for ERA is she doesn't want "to spread myself too thin."

Miss Hayes spoke Friday as part of a lecture series on Distinguished American Women at the University of Notre Dame.

"I've never given a lecture before in my life...and I don't intend to give one today," she said. Her appearance coincided with the dedication ceremonies for two new women's dormitories on campus.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Almighty Martin" Mellet marches to the beat of a different drum, and now the National Park Service wants him to pay for it.

After beating his electricially amplified drum in the shadow of Independence Hall for 13 years, Mellet, 59, has been charged with protesting too loudly.

The charges could bring him six months in jail and $1,500 in fines, according to U.S. Magistrate Edwin E. Naythons.

But the unemployed electrician says his wide-ranging protests are protected by the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech and the right to petition for redress of grievances.

"Too many people died to give me the right to do it and I won't promise not to do it again," said Mellet, who lives across the Delaware River in Camden, N.J.

During a hearing Friday, Naythons gave Mellet until Dec. 3 to prepare a defense against charges of disorderly conduct, illegal use of an audio device and demonstrating without a permit.

Mellet estimated he has been arrested 100 times by city police. Friday's court appearance stemmed from his arrest Sept. 9 by National Park Service rangers, who said his protest at that time involved the air traffic controllers' strike.

Mellet, who usually appears bare-chested and wearing an Apache-style kerchief, acknowledges the signs he displays are sometimes obscure in meaning and have been considered obscene. But he said he targets his protests at employers, unions, politicians and the Roman Catholic Church — hence the "Almighty" in the name he goes by.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Johnny Rodriguez has disclosed that he was treated for drug use last year at a rehabilitation center in Denton, Tex.

"I was doing too much cocaine — a lot of drugs," he said in an interview last week. "I couldn't do anybody a real good job."

Rodriguez said his 28 days of treatment "helped me out, talking about it. It was like school — 16-, 18-hour days. I thought it was going to be like a rest. Pretty soon the fog lifted."

Rodriguez, 28, is best known for his 1972 hit "Pass Me By."

Research changes agreed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal commission agreed Saturday to recommend a series of regulatory changes aimed at making sure persons taking part in medical research are fully informed of the risks they face.

The special commission, which will forward its recommendations to the president and Congress, also resolved to urge the strengthening of rules outlining how alleged misconduct by medical researchers should be reported and investigated, and guaranteeing that all federal agencies are informed if one agency suspends a researcher for misconduct.

The recommendations were drawn up by the staff of the President's Commission for the Study of Ethical Problems in Medicine and Biomedical and Behavioral Research. Organized in 1980, the commission is facing a deadline next month for presenting its first report on the protection of human subjects.

If the recommendations are carried out, all federal agencies financing research on humans would be required to adopt safeguards recently promulgated by the Department of Health and Human Services. That department would establish a watchdog office to oversee the other agencies.

In addition, research institutions would have to designate and publicize the name of a specific office where allegations of misconduct would be received. Such allegations would have to be forwarded quickly to the agency providing funds.

All federal agencies would also have to require researchers they finance to report the number of persons participating in projects and any unexpected, adverse effects they experienced.

The commission's staff said it had been unable to obtain such information quickly from agencies like HHS and the National Science Foundation. One agency that had provided such information was the Central Intelligence Agency.

Dress-A-Live-Doll for Christmas

Christmas means different things to different people. To some it means trees with colorful decorations, parties with lots of good food or parades and football games. To others, its a time to spend with family and friends. But to nearly everyone, Christmas is a time for giving and sharing.

Many Midlanders have found a way to make their Christmas celebrations more meaningful by giving to those less fortunate. Through the Salvation Army Dress-A-Live-Doll program, they help to make Christmas a happy time for children who might not receive many gifts otherwise.

"When the idea to "Dress-A-Live-Doll" for Christmas was born in Midland in 1974, it was not only unique to this city, but was the first program of its kind in the Salvation Army," noted Mrs. J. Paul Karcher, chairman of the project this year. "Since its inception, the program has provided hundreds of Midland's underpriviledged youngsters, from infancy to 14-years-old, with new clothing from 'head-to-toe'."

Individuals, together with friends or family, office staffs, civic organization members and many local church groups may outfit one child or several children, Mrs. Karcher said. The Salvation Army staff visits families recommended for help to determine the needs and clothing sizes of the children.

She said there is no personal contact by the donors and anonymity for all parties is assured.

"Purchase of a complete ensemble, including socks, shoes, night clothes, sweaters or jackets, etc., may be expected to cost approximately $75, and is tax deductible," Mrs. Karcher explained.

Persons interested in participating in the project may call Margie Deggs at the Salvation Army office at 683-3614 before Dec. 4. A child will be assigned to them and a size information sheet forwarded to the donors.

All clothing for each child should be gift wrapped in several packages and taken to the Salvation Army office by Dec. 18. The Salvation Army staff will then deliver the packages to the children.

Mrs. Karcher said that several local stores have initiated discounts for customers purchasing clothing for the Dress-A-Live-Doll project. Merchants participating in this way include Upstairs/Downstairs, Sears and Jimmy Smith Shoes.

Assisting Mrs. Karcher with the project are Mrs. John House Jr. and Mrs. John Wells. Major Pete D. Costas is Commanding Officer of the Midland Salvation Army.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Take 'em to the cleaners

DEAR FOLKS:

How much do you spend on dry cleaning? How often do you take your clothes to the cleaners to be done?

When you think about it, you probably spend a bit of money. Today, I want to give you some good advice and information that may save you money, and a favorite garment.

First and foremost, when you take something to be cleaned, if it has any spots on it, tell them what caused 'em. Don't be afraid to say, "I spilled mustard on this and then tried to get it out with mayo."

You have to tell them what the spot is (if you can) and if you have put anything on it because, when the cleaner tries to get it out with chemicals, there might be a bad reaction if you first tried hand soap or whatever and don't let them know.

Remember that dry cleaning does not mean that the garment is cleaned dry; it is put in a cleaning solvent. Some materials that specify "dry clean," particularly some of the new silks, may run, fade or spot, and it's just the way the material is made.

Check to see if your cleaner is a member of the International Fabricare Institute. (There are thousands of members across the country). If he is, and if something happens to your favorite shirt or dress, ask questions. If you think that it was the cleaner's fault, ask if he will send it to the I.F.I. lab to be tested to see if it was the manufacturer's fault (poor dyes, etc.), the consumer's (you used the wrong thing on it) or the dry cleaner's fault. — Heloise

CLEANING MARBLE

Dear Heloise: You once listed various ways to clean real marble. I would like to add that once a piece of marble has been polished, one should apply a coat of paste wax to protect the polish. Marble is porous, so if one puts on a coat of wax, most any stain will lay on the wax.

One other hint:

You should always provide coasters for everyone to avoid glasses being placed on a marble table top. — Lorraine Hauser, Marble Manufacturer

DISHWASHING TIP

Dear Heloise: I hate to see a dish drainer rack sitting on the counter in my beautiful kitchen but I don't always want to hand-dry a few items that I've washed.

So I let them drain and dry in my automatic dishwasher. The dishes are out of sight and out of my way. — Mrs. Charles Salvage

BRACELET TRICK

Dear Heloise: For those of us who have difficulty trying to fasten a bracelet clasp with one hand, do what I do....

Tape one end to your wrist and it's easy to bring the other end around and slip the prong into the ring.

No slipping off! — Bobbi

GOOD TO THE LAST DROP

Dear Heloise: After using the last of the milk out of a carton, let it (the carton) set for a very "short" minute.

What is left inside, runs down to the bottom. Then, when you tip the carton one more time, a noticeable amount has accumulated. A thrifty, over-the-years habit!

GREETING CARD REMINDER

Dear Heloise: At the first of the year, I write all the birthdays, wedding anniversaries and other special occasions coming up on each month of the calendar.

Each month, I purchase necessary cards, address them, and mark the date to be sent in the postage stamp area.

By doing this, I don't forget other people's special days and no injured feelings result. Frees me of guilt feelings and gives me peace of mind. — Mrs.Ruby Betten Hausen.

Have a thoughtful hint? Send it to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, Texas, 78216. She can't answer your letter personally but will feature the most thoughtful ideas received in her column.

MCC Ladies to hear Gary

Midland Country Club Ladies Association will hear entertainer John Gary Nov. 20.

Social hour begins at 11:30 a.m., followed by a noon luncheon. Members should make reservations by calling 682-4378.

Gary is a "total entertainer," having appeared in night clubs, on television, in the theatre and movies.

He has also had several recordings and appeared in countless concerts.

Born in Watertown, N.Y., his career began when...as a nine year old boy soprano...he won a three year scholarship at the renowned Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City. At 11 years of age, he sang as often as he could at the now famed Stage Door Canteen and won two pins of Distinction from The American Theatre Wing.

Then he lost his voice. It was on stage, while he was singing "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" to the late Marie Wilson.

Convinced that his singing career was over, John joined the U.S. Marines. After the marines, he became involved in a variety of artistic pursuits and, for a while, sang on the original Don McNeill popular morning radio program "Breakfast Club."

John now makes his home in the Dallas suburb of Richardson where his offices are also headquartered.

He is also an author, having written "A Fragment of Time." He has appeared on The Tonight Show, Carol Burnett Show, Ed Sullivan Show, David Frost Show, and had his own syndicated 90-minute show.

He has also appeared in two motion pictures "Time of Your Life," and "Our Very Own."

Fight fire with extinguishers

By AL CARRELL

Fighting a home fire is not really high on anyone's list of do-it-yourself chores. My first advice would be to make sure you have all members of the household outside, and then to call the fire department from a neighbor's phone. Then if the fire is still small, and if you can try to extinguish it without danger to yourself, have at it. Sometimes by doing this you can put out the the fire or lessen the damage. Just be sure you have a clear escape route.

The key to your being able to fight the fire is to have and use the right fire extinguisher. Home fires are classified as A, B, and C. And fire extinguishers are classified as to the class of fire or fires they will be able to handle.

A Class A fire involves common combustibles such as wood, paper and cloth. Class B fires deal with flammable liquids such a solvents, gasses or greases. The Class C fires are electrical in nature. There is also a Class D fire which is not a home type fire. It involves combustible metals like magnesium, titanium and others.

As you can see, a Class A fire could be fought with the garden hose, and the water would do the job if you started quickly enough. However, water on a Class B fire would be ineffective and could cause splattering or spread the fire. On a Class C fire, the water would bring about the danger of electrocution.

In selecting fire extinguishers, you should decide what types of fires could happen in what areas of your home. You wouldn't want an extinguisher for Class A fires in the kitchen where the most common causes are grease or electrical appliance related blazes. Combination type extinguishers will take care of all problems, and some are able to handle all three types of fires.

After you have extinguishers, you must be able to get to them without too much trouble. Don't place the unit near the hazardous areas because if the fire breaks out, you could risk injury trying to get to the extinguisher that was surrounded by flames. Also keep escape routes in mind, and position the extinguisher near your exit route. Wherever possible, keep the extinguisher in plain view. This can be done in many areas without fouling up your decorating scheme. If the sight of the red extinguisher doesn't go with the living room decor, at least be sure that you can easily get to it.

Remember that in an emergency you won't have time to read the operating instructions. Learn how to use the extinguisher before you need it and refresh your memory from to time. Make sure that other members of the family who could be expected to use the extinguisher also know how.

Knowing that the fire extinguisher is still in working order is important too. The owner's manual should tell you how to check to be sure it's still charged and at what periods of time it should be checked.

Remember, the most important thing is to save lives. Never fight the fire if there's a doubt that you can make it out. As we mentioned earlier, don't start the fire fight until all inhabitants are out of the building.

With a Class A fire, try to separete the burning materials as you direct the extinguisher from side to side. But don't get too close if the fire is too big. Unless otherwise indicated on the instructions, direct the extinguisher at the base of the flames. With a Class B fire, don't get close enough for the discharge from the extinguisher to cause the burning liquid to splash to spread the fire. If possible on a Class C fire, disconnect or otherwise turn off the electrical current.

While fighting the fire, stay low so you will avoid breathing smoke, fumes or vapors. If the smoke starts to get to you, get on out. If you can't control the fire, or if the smoke is enough to drive you out, close the door as you leave as this may help to contain the fire.

Buy quality fire extinguishers. Know how to use them. Keep them in working order and handy to the hazard areas, BUT realize that all the goods in the world aren't worth your life or the lives of any of your family.

DEAR ABBY

Absent father remains a haunting presence

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In 1930 I gave birth to a baby girl out of wedlock. When she was a year old I married a man who she thinks is her father. Today she is a lovely Christian wife and mother.

I am worried now because I'm afraid one day she will have to send for her birth certificate to get a passport or some other reason, and she will learn the truth. Abby, I have cried this room full of tears. Is there any way I can get a birth certificate for my daughter with my husband's name on it as her father?

I am desperate to get this done before I die. I am 73 and more than willing to pay for any trouble you have to go to get this information for me. — NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Two important questions need answering: Did the man who fathered your daughter sign any paternity papers? Did your husband legally adopt your daughter?

If no paternity papers were signed, and your husband legally adopted your daughter, when the adoption occurred a new set of birth certificates would have been made up naming your husband as your daughter's father. (No mention of adoption appears on these new birth certificates.)

Your state department of health (birth and death records division) has this information on file. It would be wise to ask a lawyer to guide you. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a good man, but he doesn't know how to be a father. He says he loves our children (6, 9 and 11), but he rarely talks to them except when they ask him a question or when discipline is needed. He rarely even touches them or takes them anywhere. He rarely goes to school functions or sports events, even when the children are involved. And on those very rare occasions when he goes, he always acts as though he'd rather be somewhere else.

We do very little as a family together. Their childish noise drives him into a gloomy silence and he takes off to be alone. On days when he's home, he finds numerous errands to busy himself, or he sleeps late.

I've tried hard to love him and accept him as he is, but I get few compliments on a meal or a well-run house. I know God can heal this home and that is what I am hoping for. I've mentioned my sad situation to some of my friends and find that others have it, too.

When are husbands going to wake up and realize their responsibilities to their families? What do you tell a child who feels fatherless with a father in the house?

Abby, I know he loves us, but how I wish he'd show it. Print this. It might help. — NAMELESS IN MAINE

DEAR NAMELESS: Your problem is a familiar one in many homes. Fathers who don't know how to show love or relate to their children are usually men who themselves had no father-son relationship while growing up. I urge you both to talk to a marriage or family counselor. And if you belong to a church, your clergyman will be happy to counsel you. If your husband is, as you say, a good man, he will want to learn how to be an involved family man. Help him.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 15-year-old girl with a problem and I need an answer fast! I've been out with only four guys, and they were all alike. On the first date they tried to go as far as they could with me, and when they couldn't get very far, they dumped me. This is terribly depressing. I'm a nice, respectable girl, and people tell me I have a good personality and I'm not too bad-looking.

I don't know why this keeps happening. All these guys I've been out with were about my age and considered nice and decent, but when they couldn't get past heavy kissing, that was the last I saw of them. Please help. — BROKEN-HEARTED FOUR TIMES

DEAR BROKEN-HEARTED: Some guys like to "test" a girl. The ones who don't give them everything they want are considered the cream of the crop. More girls have been dumped for giving too much too soon than giving too little on a first date. Don't cry too hard. They may be back. And if they aren't — who needs them?

Experts consider ginseng as cash crop

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

MILLS RIVER, N.C. (AP) — The small garden plot surrounded by wire fence may not look impressive, but growing in the rich, black earth are thousands of dollars worth of rare plants prized for their healing properties.

The valuable plants are ginseng, but they're not for sale. The ginseng patch is part of a unique research project being conducted at the Mountain Horticultural Crops Research Station in Henderson County. The study — to determine if ginseng can be grown as a cash crop by farmers — is the only one of its kind in the world.

"We started this particular experiment when we got so many questions about growing ginseng, and found out we didn't have any answers," said Dr. Tom Konsler, project leader and a horticulture professor at North Carolina State University.

"I'm certain this can be a money-making crop for farmers in this area," he added.

Ginseng, or "sang," as the mountain people call it, is a mysterious plant that grows in the rich, cool woods from Canada to Florida. The root of ginseng plants has been prized for thousands of years by the Chinese, who believe it can cure most diseases. They also believe the dried root is an aphrodisiac. A pound of ginseng root sells for about $135.

Export of dried ginseng root to Hong Kong from the United States began in the 1700s. Most of the ginseng grown in this country still is exported to China.

Ginseng is a delicate-looking, five-leaved plant. In the fall its clusters of seed pods atop the plant turn brilliant red. It is illegal to dig the rare plant before it drops its seeds.

Cultivating ginseng is not a new idea, but growing it as a marketable crop, like corn or tobacco, is. Konsler and his assistants spend their days checking soil acidity and the effects of different fertilizers on the ginseng plant.

"We know that ginseng grown in cultivated surroundings, instead of in the wild, matures faster," said Konsler, one of the world's foremost authorities on ginseng culture. "Ginseng roots grown in our plot are bigger at three years than ginseng in the wild after as much as 14 years."

The only problem with cultivated ginseng is that it is worth less than half the amount wild ginseng brings. Scientists say there is no difference betweeen the two as far as they can tell.

A rape victim fights back

By WALTER MICHENER
(Special from Reader's Digest)

Barbra Freeman (her real name, and certain others, have been changed to protect individual privacy), a 25-year-old employee of an arts and sciences center, sat on a bench in Riverfront Park, Poughkeepsie, N.Y., awaiting her friend. It was nearly 10 p.m. on a May evening in 1978 and picknickers had packed up earlier and left. Barbra turned and saw three young men sauntering toward her. One sat on her right, one on her left, the third stood behind her.

As they talked, Barbra tried to stay calm; she sensed that the men were exchanging signals. When she tried to stand up, they exploded into action. Seizing her shoulders and legs, they carried her, struggling and screaming, to the park's public restrooms. She was told to keep quiet unless she wanted her arms broken and her head smashed. But she struggled anyway, and she never stopped pleading, talking. She was sexually assaulted by her three assailants, who then fled.

To the teenage couple strolling in the park, Barbra must have seemed a frightening apparition. She ran up to them out of the night with her clothes inside out, her hair wet and matted. As the youngsters assisted her to her car, she spied her friend, David. She ran to him and collapsed in his arms. For the first time, she let herself cry.

Barbra could have let it end there - according to most estimates, half of all rape victims do. Many are ashamed to have friends and family find out. Many are haunted by fears of the rapist's revenge. And many are aware that reporting a rape to the police is often futile, so they keep silent. Rapists escape punishment about 75 percent of the time. Unless she took action, Barbra realized, she would not be the three rapists' last victim. David ran to phone the police.

Two detectives questioned Barbra briefly, then drove her to the hospital. Her body was badly wrenched, with bruises on her back and legs. Later, she was driven to the police station, where she spent four hours repeating her story and describing the rapists. Though the police were sympathetic, she walked out with the feeling that, for them, the investigtion was over.

When Barbra got home at 4 a.m., she tried to comprehend what had happened. The viciousness of the attack had left her stunned. If rapists could roam the streets unpunished, it was not a place she wanted to be. She determined that if the police couldn't find the three men, she would.

The next day, Barbra arranged to take two weeks' vacation from her job. Then she and David took to the streets, asking questions, giving descriptions. Days passed with no leads. But then Barbra got a tip that she should talk to a woman named Regina, who turned out to be in her late 20s. A few weeks before, three men had raped her. Although she knew them, she was too afraid to go to the police. She described each of them to Barbra. The first man sounded unfamiliar, but the other two were almost unmistakable.

The next morning, with Barbra's support and encouragement, Regina reported her rape to the police and identified two of her attackers - brothers Joe and James Johnson. By the next day, the suspects had been arrested. Within hours, they were back on the streets - out on bail. But now, at least, the police mugshot files included pictures of the Johnson brothers. (Regina's charges were eventually dismissed because of lack of evidence.)

Two days later, Barbra went through those files again. And this time, she was able to identify two of her attackers. For the second time in a week, the Johnsons were picked up, charged with rape, and again released on bail. Barbra's third attacker still remained unknown and at large.

Her case was assigned to assistant district attorney Jim O'Neil. It was a lucky break for, in him, Barbra found someone who considered rape a serious crime. In mid-September, she went before a grand jury. O'Neil led her through her testimony as 23 strangers listened to her relive every humiliating detail of that night. When she was done, the grand jury indicted each of the Johnson brothers on three charges of rape and two charges of sodomy.

Months passed as the trial was postponed again and again. Several times, Barbra caught glimpses of the Johnson brothers on the streets. She began to think that the waiting and the tension would go on forever.

Then, in April 1979, with the trial date approaching, the situation abruptly changed. Joe Johnson apparently realized that this rape victim was serious. Faced with up to 25 years in prison if convicted of first-degree rape, he wanted to make a deal - if allowed to plead guilty to a lesser charge, he would testify against his brother. He also promised to turn in the third rapist, which he later did.

On April 26, 1979, Joe Johnson was sentenced to one year in county jail for "first-degree sexual abuse." His brother was sentenced to up to 12 years in state prison for "first-degree attempted rape." There was no bargaining for the third rapist, Leslie Duncan, who had confessed to the crimes. A jury found him guilty of three counts of rape and two of sodomy; and, on Jan. 31, 1980, his sentences were handed down - 8 and 1/3 to 25 years - the longest to run. "Getting those men off the streets was the best therapy I could have had," Barbra says. "I couldn't change the fact that I had been raped. But, if I had to live with it, I was going to make the experience work for me. I think I'm stronger now than I was before it happened."

Instant coffee tip

Are you a "jet-setter," complete with instant everything — and bitter coffee?

Here's a prevent-bitter-coffee idea — for instant coffee, microwave users only:

Add the hot water to the coffee granules, instead of adding coffee to the hot water, suggests Dr. Cass Ryan-Crowe, a food and nutrition specialist.

When you add coffee granules to boiling water, the rapid flavor release from the granules can cause bitter coffee, she explains.

Lifestyle guidelines

The following are suggested guidelines for publication of stories in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday; or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

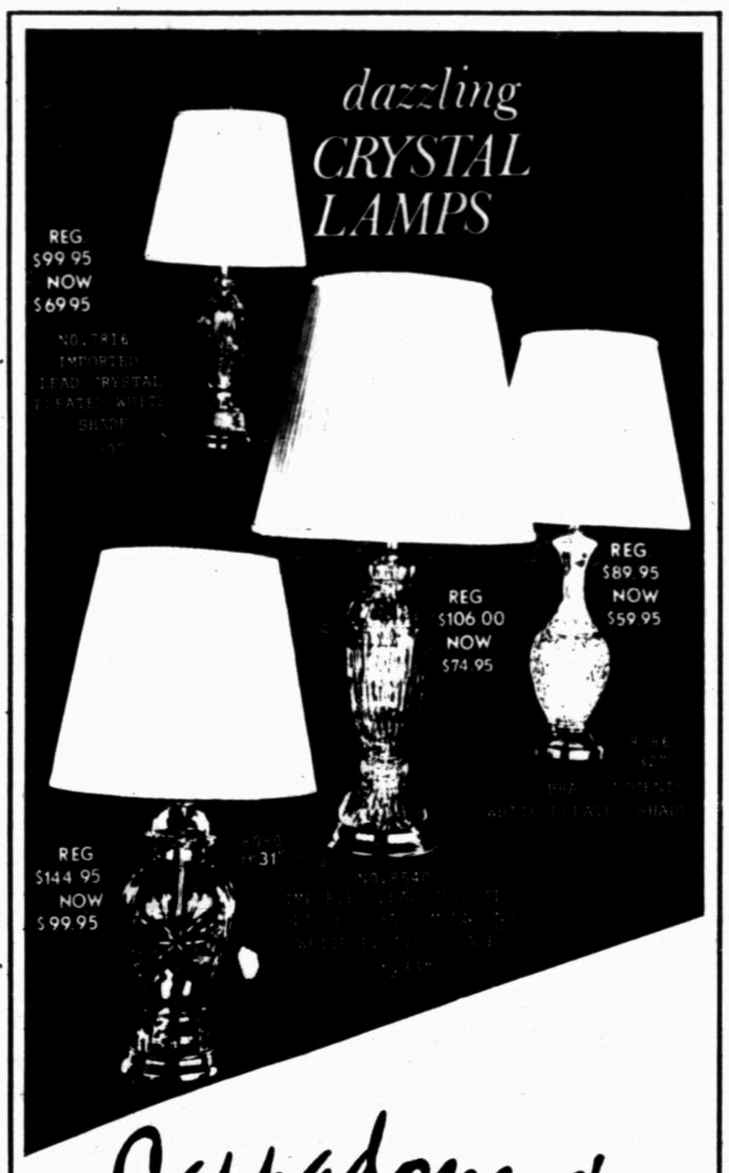

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Tips on planning parties for the holidays

"Anyone can learn how to entertain—you just need self-confidence," said Mrs. Thomas McIntosh before members of the Midland Junior Woman's Club, as she presented a program on "How to Plan a Party for the Holidays."

Mrs. McIntosh gave tips on decorating, preparing food and enjoying the results at the meeting which was held in her home.

She said that the most important ingredients for planning a party were loving, caring and sharing.

"Everyone has their own way to entertain," she said. "I've had no formal training in cooking and decorating, but I love it. It gives me a high.

"Through the loving efforts of my mom and dad (Mr. and Mrs. Otto Leichliter), I've made it through my 37th year thinking I could do it. And you can, too."

She also told the group that, no matter how little experience they've had, they must learn self-confidence. "You can entertain anyone—your friends, family or a formal group.

"Believe in yourself, never doubt yourself and start planning early to allow yourself plenty of time to prepare.

"Don't shortchange yourself. Do the best you can, she said."

She also suggested that the novice hostess start small.

Mrs. McIntosh gave out a list of ideas which she called "Karen's Method of Madness."

She also told her favorite author on cooking for a crowd. "Helen Corbitt's advice on the key to a success party advises the following," she said.

(1) Anyone who really wants to can cook—and cook well.

(2) To entertain thoughtfully and well takes time and organization.

(3) Do everything with love.

Here are some of Mrs. McIntosh's other tips:

(1) Keep a notebook at all times.

(2) Prepare a guest list. "Don't give a party to pay back everyone you owe all at once," she said. "Prepare your list carefully. Try to mingle and mix personalities."

(3) Write on a sheet of paper everything that you want and need to include in the invitation. "There's nothing worse than sending out invitations which leave out something important like the location," she said. "I personally put RSVP on all of my invitations so that I will have a definite idea of how many to expect," she added.

(4) Start planning at least six weeks ahead of the party. "You'll need all of that time to plan and prepare a menu, cook the food and get decorations," she said. In discussing menus, she said that plenty of time is needed to research cookbooks. "I also like to make things ahead of time," she said, adding that she had started preparing for this club meeting over two months ago. "I cooked everything here over a week ago," she said.

(5) Make a diagram on paper of places of all food (plus diagrams of table, coffee tble, etc. an placement of food on them).

(6) Make time schedules of (a) things to be done to house; (b) items that need to be purchased or rented; (c) baking; (d) day before party and day of party; and (e) final countdown.

Mrs. McIntosh also discussed decorations and how to be unique. She displayed some which she had made herself "in very little time."

"Use natural ingredients, such as dried flowers or fruit, and consider containers you already have in your own home," she advised the group.

"To get that shiny look on fruits and vegetable centerpieces, rub a little vegetable oil on them and polish," she said.

She also advised using clear acrylic spray on centerpiece containers such as pumpkins, gourds and pine cones. "It makes them shiny and like new," she said.

For floral arrangements, Mrs. McIntosh said to start out with basic necessities, such as tape adhesive, floral picks, ribbons, wires, bows, and boards to use as a base.

"Experiment with napkin arrangements. Or tie them up with colorful matching yarn.

She also advised adding the extra touch in food arrangements. "For example, put a little color in by putting spiced peaches or apple rings around your turkey. Or roll your cheese balls in parsley and put a cherry on top or use a star-shaped cookie cutter and make a unique design on top," she said.

"For a plain pound cake, you can dress it up by sprinkling with powdered sugar, then put a nutmeg candle in the middle and little mums around the base. Or put a votive candle in the middle and decorate on top with candied red and green cherries. Tuck little sprigs of holly at the base and maybe even a solid red bow at the pedestal," she suggested.

She culminated the program by serving a spectacular array of desserts which were served by co-hostesses and assistants. They included Barbara Stoltz, Margie McKinney, Rebecca Turner and Linda Ellis. They also assisted in serving and preparing a brunch before the program began.

Following are recipes for Mrs. McIntosh's holiday foods:

SAUSAGE PINWHEELS

2 cups Bisquick
2/3 cup milk
1 lb. Owens regular or hot sausage

Mix Bisquick and milk together. Put out onto a floured surface. Knead about 10 times and then roll outinto a rectangle about 15x9 inches. Let sausage reach room temperature and then spread a thin layer over the dough. Starting at one side (long one), roll in a jelly roll fashion. Wrap in foil and freeze. When ready to serve, take out of freezer and let stand for about ten minutes. Then, with an electric knife, slice pinwheels about 1/4 inch thick. Place on a cookie sheet and bake at 375 degrees until lightly browned. Good for brunches, appetizers, or for breakfast. Can keep in freezer for a long period of time and slice as needed.

GOLDEN FREEZER PUNCH

1 can frozen lemonade
1 quart ginger ale
1 bottle champagne.

Let orange juice, pineapple juice and grapefruit juice stand in freezer overnight. Remove fruit juices and lemonade from freezer 45 minutes before opening. Empty fruit juices and lemonadd into punch bowl; pour ginger ale and champagne over top. Garnish with fresh mint. Yield: 40 servings. Float individual ice cubes made of orange juice with a cherry and mint leaf in each one in punch.

BROWNIE MILE HIGH PIE

Take one Duncan Hines Brownie Mix (small size), add 2 eggs, 1/3 cup water, 1 tsp. vanilla. Bake 350 degrres in a greased pie plate for 20-30 minutes. Cool. Pile one-half gallon ice cream (your flavor choice—I like to use Gandy's caramel pecan praline) on top of the brownie layer. Place in the freezer until the ice cream has hardened. Meanwhile, melt one small size of chocolate chips and cool. Spread chocolate chip mixture over hardened ice cream and freeze. When chocolate has hardened, take out of freezer and cover with lots of cool whip. Decorate with shaved chocolate or chocolate curls. Take out about 10 minutes before serving. Good with a small amount of creme de menth or amaretto poured over each slice.

SHERRY CAKE

1 yellow cake mix
1 pkg. small instant vanilla pudding
1 1/4 cup inexpensive sherry, divided
3/4 cup vegetable oil
4 large eggs, room temp.
2 1/2 cups powdered sugar

In a large mixing bowl, combine cake mix, instant pudding, 3/4 cup sherry and oil blend for one minute. Add eggs, one at a time and beat at high speed for 5 minutes. Pour batter into a greased and floured 10 inch tube or Bundt pan. Bake in preheated 325 degree oven for 45-55 minutes. Cool on wire rack for 10minutes. With a fine straw or slender toothpick, punch holes in bottom of cake. Make a glaze with remaining 1/2 cup sherry and powdered sugar and dribble half over cake. Invert cake on platter and punch holes in top and sides of cake; dribble remaining glaze over cake. Decorate for the occasion.

New sterilization method safe, effective in clinical trials

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — A flexible, threadlike rubber plug is proving to be a safe, effective, and perhaps reversible method of sterilization for women, a researcher says.

"The results are extremely encouraging," said Dr. A.J. Kresch of Stanford University, who is testing the method in California. "There have been no failures (pregnancies) with normally formed plugs" among the 500 most recent volunteers.

The half-hour procedure, offered to carefully selected women at 11 centers in 10 cities, is done in a doctor's office with a local anesthetic, at about half the cost of other types of sterilizations, according to statements from RSP Laboratories of Stamford, Conn., which sponsored the trials. The other cities involved in the trials are New York, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Washington, Houston, Phoenix, Wilmington, Del., Hartford, Conn., and Reading, Pa.

The procedure involves squirting a few drops of liquid silicone rubber into each fallopian tube with a thin instrument inserted through the vagina into the uterus.

The rubber gels quickly, forming a thin, flexible strand about 3 inches long that fits the Fallopian tube exactly. An X-ray detects whether the plug is "good."

By blocking passage of the egg from ovary to uterus, the plug provides contraception.

The procedure involves no incision, no stitches, no general anesthetic or hospital stay, and none of the risks or discomforts of abdominal surgery. More than 600 women have undergone "tubal occlusion" since 1978, when clinical trials began, with no serious side effects, said Sandra Powers, an RSP spokeswoman.

Data on the safety and effectiveness of the first 1,000 experimental sterilizations will be sent to the Food and Drug Administration next spring. The agency will decide whether the method can be licensed for widespread use.

The procedure was invented more than 11 years ago by Robert A. Erb, principal scientist of the Franklin Research Center in Philadelphia.

After successfully testing it in animals, he began pre-clinical studies with Dr. Theodore P. Reed III, chief of gynecology at Lankenau Hospital.

"The whole concept is very appealing to women. ... I am amazed how many women, given that this is experimental, are willing to do this," said Kresch, associate professor of gynecology and obstetrics at Stanford.

"I feel very positive about this because it's a service to women. It makes it easy to have permanent contraception. ... The majority of volunteers can go back to work the same day," he said.

The troublesome aspect of the procedure is that "we can only expect to place a normal plug 85 percent to 90 percent of the time," Kresch said.

If a plug fails to gel within 4½ to 6 minutes or fails to fit the fallopian tube because of some abnormality or previous tubal infection, it is not considered normal, he said.

It can be removed by pulling a built-in loop and a new one reinserted if the rubber itself is at fault.

Early in the study, nine pregnancies occurred among 125 women whose plugs were considered inadequate.

Since plug-sterilization does not damage the fallopian tubes, it holds promise as a reversible procedure. In experiments on rabbits, some became pregnant when the plugs were removed. But Kresch stressed that rigorous studies are needed on reversibility. "People should approach it as permanent," he said.

"But if reversibility turns out to be true, it would be great for women. Even without reversibility ... it's exciting," Kresch said.

Haircuts can ruin relationships

By ERMA BOMBECK

You know how I've been nagging at my son for nine years to get his hair cut?

He finally did it.

And you know something? It's not the high I thought it would be. We have absolutely nothing to talk about anymore. I had no idea what a large part of our relationship was based on such intimacies as: How long does it take you to wash all that? How are you financing the shampoo? Why don't you at least style it like Jaclyn Smith?

Our visits now are awkward. We're strangers. It occurred to me that most of our relationships with our children are based on some form of criticism. I tried once to hold a five-minute conversation with one of my sons without expressing my viewpoint. Three seconds into the exchange, right after, "So what are you doing these days?" . . . I took over and he never got to speak another word.

Actually, long hair in this country did all parents a big favor. It brought us together on some common ground. Fathers who had never before noticed their sons began to talk to them from the moment they entered the door and continued until the moment they slammed it shut. They had rapport. They shared threats and feelings.

I found myself planning our next encounter and thinking of creative ways to bring up the subject of his hair. At church, when we were all asked to shake hands and wish one another peace, I'd turn to him and smile, "Get a haircut." I used to show him pictures of Dick Clark and say, "Now there's a boy who enjoys rock and roll and you can still see his ears."

Once on vacation, it was all we talked about from Gary, Ind., to Salt Lake City, Utah. The time really flew.

There are few things parents can talk about with their teenagers. Oh, sure, there are a few standards like, "You live like a hog," "Don't you ever hang up a towel?" and "Don't ruin your dinner with that junk." But I'm talking about a sure-fire topic to whip everyone up into a state of aggravation and hostility.

My son dropped by the other night and said, "Mom, how's it goin'?"

I said fine and we lapsed into a long silence. Finally, I ventured, "How are things with you?" He said okay and five more minutes went by. Finally, I said, "So, why didn't you tell me you were getting your hair cut?" We chewed on that for an entire evening. It was like old times.

She knows how to move them

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Patti Davidson knows about moving people.

Davidson, supervisor of a travel department with a staff of seven, coordinates travel plans for more than 83,000 R.J. Reynolds employees worldwide.

In an average month, that includes issuing 1,500 airline tickets, renting 450 cars and reserving 1,400 hotel rooms.

While the company saves money on hotel and car rental rates, Davidson says shopping for lower airfares is one method that just doesn't pay off.

"Business travelers are often forced to change their plans," she says. "We end up canceling or rescheduling so often that we can rarely meet the requirements for reduced fares."

Tortillas are Mexican bread

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The tortilla, a ubiquitous part of Mexican cooking, is actually one of the world's simplest breads.

Tortillas are created by softening dried corn in lime water, forming a thin cake and baking.

Tortillas are available today in most American grocery stores in both frozen and fresh varieties, says Patio Mexican Foods.

Sodium chloride is commonly known as "rock salt." More than 10 million pounds are sold every year in the United States, with half of that amount used on roadways and walkways during the winter montns to combat snow and ice.

The other 5 million pounds are used in water softening, food and agriculture.

New tradition: Pumpkin Cheesecake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: A friend of mine has, for the past couple of years, made Pumpkin Cheesecake a tradition at her Thanksgiving parties. Her Pumpkin Cheesecake has robust pumpkin flavor and is high in calories because it is made entirely with cream cheese. Do you have a lighter version — one with a fainter pumpkin flavor and not so many calories? — HOLIDAY COOK.

DEAR HOLIDAY COOK: Perhaps the following Pumpkin Cheesecake recipe, which we had developed with your request in mind, will please you. It uses part cottage cheese (instead of all cream cheese) and only a small amount of pumpkin. It also has no crust to add calories, which helps keep it from tasting too sweet. — C.B.

PUMPKIN CHEESECAKE

1-3rd cup cornstarch
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 pound small-curd creamstyle cottage cheese
Two 8-ounce packages cream cheese, soft
1 cup canned solid-pack pumpkin
1½ cups sugar
4 large eggs
1 pint commercial sour cream
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
Garnish: Thin orange slices cut in wedges

In a small bowl stir together the cornstarch, cinnamon and nutmeg. Butter the bottom and sides of a 9- by 3-inch springform pan.

Force the cottage cheese through a fine-mesh sieve into the large bowl of an electric mixer; add the cream cheese and pumpkin. At high speed beat until smooth and creamy; gradually beat in the sugar, then the eggs (one at a time) until blended. At low speed beat in the cornstarch mixture, then the sour cream, until completely blended. Stir in the orange rind. Pour into the prepared pan.

Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until firm around edge — about 1 hour and 10 minutes. Turn off oven. Let cake stand in oven for 2 hours. Remove to a wire rack to cool completely. Refrigerate to chill. May be made a day ahead. Before serving, remove side of pan. Garnish with the thin orange slices.

2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons butter
1 large egg
1 cup milk
1 cup cold cooked converted-type rice

In a medium bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. With a pastry blender, cut in the butter until particles are fine. In a small bowl beat egg until foamy; add milk and beat until blended; add to flour mixture with rice. Stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Fill muffin-pan cups (each 1-3rd cup capacity) ½ to 2-3rds full. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 25 minutes. Remove from pans at once and serve hot. Tops will be rounded but muffins will be only about an inch high. Makes 12.

No such thing as too many chicken recipes

By BETSY BALSLEY
Los Angeles Times

In this day of dietary concern there is no such thing as too many chicken recipes in one's recipe file. Chicken has gained almost unbelievably in popularity from the days when it was everybody's "Sunday special." Part of its increased use can, of course, be attributed to a growing public awareness of the advantages of a lower fat, lower cholesterol diet, and certainly the fact that it remains a relatively low-cost food has a great deal of bearing on its appeal.

Anyone who is counting calories or trying to avoid cholesterol-laden foods will find chicken parts, sans skin, a good, flavor-filled entree. But removing the skin will remove much of the moisture as well as most of the fat. So if you cook skinned chicken pieces keep this in mind and be sure you select a cooking method that will avoid a dry, unappetizing result. If a crisp, crunchy skin is something you adore, you can still eliminate some of the ever-present fat by pouring it off before making a sauce or gravy to go with the chicken.

The recipes that follow will provide plenty of variety if you want to serve chicken several times a week and, with food prices what they are, that's not a bad idea.

OVEN-FRIED DRUMSTICKS WITH PIZZA DIP

1-3 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 cup finely crushed corn chips
2-3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1-4 cup minced parsley
1 teaspoon garlic powder
2 teaspoons salt
Pepper to taste
3 pounds chicken drumsticks
1-2 cup butter or margarine, melted
Pizza Dip

Mix together bread crumbs, corn chip crumbs, cheese, parsley, garlic powder, salt and pepper. Dip chicken in melted butter, then roll in crumb mixture. Place in shallow baking pan and bake at 375 degrees 55 to 60 minutes, or until chicken is tender. Serve with Pizza Dip. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Note: If desired remove skins from drumsticks before coating with crumb mixture

Pizza Dip

2 tablespoons oil
1 large clove garlic, minced
1 medium onion, diced
1 (6-ounce) can tomato paste
1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
1 (6-ounce) can tomato juice
2 teaspoons sugar
1 tablespoon Italian seasonings, crushed
Hot pepper sauce, optional
Salt, papper

Heat oil in skillet or saucepan. Saute garlic and onion until tender. Stir in tomato paste, tomato sauce and tomato juice. Add sugar and Italian seasonings, and season to taste with hot pepper sauce, salt and pepper. Place in small bowl and serve hot. Makes about 2 1-2 cups.

BRANDIED CHICKEN ROLLS

4 large half breasts chicken, boned
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1-4 cup finely chopped onion
1 1-2 cups finely chopped mushrooms
1-4 teaspoon tarragon, crushed
1-4 cup brandy
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons fine soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1-4 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon paprika
Sauce

Place 2 half breasts of chicken, skin-side down, on sheet of wax paper with edges overlapping, reversing pointed ends to make meat roughly rectangular. Pull off small fillets from each breast and pound until thin. Cover rectangular breast halves with another sheet of wax paper and pound with mallet or edge of saucer until flattened. Repeat pounding with second pair of breast halves. Place pounded fillets on top of seams and pound lightly to flatten.

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in small skillet and saute onion 1 minute. Stir in mushrooms and tarragon and cook over medium-high heat 3 minutes. Add 3 tablespoon brandy, cook 1 minute longer, until mixture is almost dry. Remove from heat; stir in cheese, crumbs, parsley and salt.

Place half of mushroom mixture down center of each flattened chicken breast. Roll breast securing with small wood picks, then tie with thin string. Place in small shallow baking pan. Melt remaining tablespoon butter and mix with remaining brandy and paprika. Brush over rolls. Bake at 375 degrees 45 minutes, basting occasionally with drippings. Save drippings for Sauce. Remove strings and skewers, cut rolls in slices and serve with hot Sauce. Makes about 6 servings.

Sauce

Drippings
1 tablespoon flour
Salt, white pepper

Remove from drippings, place 1 tablespoon fat in small saucepan. Add enough water to drippings to measure 3-4 cup. Heat fat in saucepan, blend in flour. Cook 1 to 2 minutes. Stir in liquid and cook until boiling and thickened. Season to taste with salt and white pepper. Makes about 3-4 cup.

MUSHROOM SMOTHERED LEMON CHICKEN

1 pound mushrooms
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1-2 cup chopped onion
1-2 teaspoon minced garlic
2 whole chicken breasts, halved, bonded, and skinned (about 1 pound)
2 tablespoons flour
2-3 cup dry white wine
1-2 cup water
1-4 teaspoon tarragon, crushed
1-8 teaspoon black pepper 1-4 cup lemon juice

Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in large skillet. Add mushrooms, onion and garlic. Saute until golden, about 5 minutes. Remove mushroom mixture from skillet. Dust chicken with flour, shake off excess.

Melt remaining butter in same skillet. Add chicken, brown on both sides. Return mushroom mixture to skillet along with wine, water, tarragon and black pepper. Bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, until chicken is cooked, about 10 minutes. Serve over rice, garnished with lemon slices, if desired. makes 4 servings.

Diners putting bite on sharks

By JOE WING
For AP Newsfeatures

You may find a little shark meat in your diet one of these days, if there isn't some already.

Americans are acquiring a taste for the fish that "Jaws" made famous, according to the National Marine Fisheries Service. In fact, it is since the appearance of that movie, says Susan Smith, a biologist stationed at the Tiburon, Calif., laboratory, that shark has had a spurt in popularity in restaurants and in homes.

People are biting back.

John Casey, a shark expert at the Narragansett, R.I., laboratory, asserts that "the name shark has definitely come into its own in the seafood market. People are buying shark today because it IS shark."

It's cheaper, too. On the West Coast where white bass may sell for $5.25 a pound, thresher shark fillets cost only about $2.50.

Commerce Department statistics bear out assertions of shark popularity. The 1980 catch of all shark species except spiny dogfish was 4.5 million pounds. The 16.8 million pounds of dogfish were exported. They make up the fish in England's fish 'n' chips and are popular in Germany and other countries, too.

In Asia and the Caribbean shark has always been prized, and Orientals and other ethnic groups in this country doubtless are providing much of the demand here. It is selling mostly in California and the Southeast, but is found in many large fish markets and restaurants elsewhere.

Until recently the most abundant shark in the Pacific, the blue, was largely ignored but now a dozen boats are reported seeking it with techniques developed in a fisheries service project at San Pedro, Calif.

Dogfish were caught only incidentally by fishermen trying for other species in the Atlantic, but now some boats go out after them. Since shark meat spoils quickly, fisheries service technologists have been testing an automatic shipboard processing system.

Experts assert that only great white sharks pose much danger to people, and even they cause only about 10 fatalities a year around the world. Moreover, they are getting scarce. One reason: a pair of big shark jaws may bring $1,000 in the trophy market.

Divers have little trouble consorting with and studying the other sharks. One of the oldest forms of fish life, they have no skeletons. And they are smarter than you may think. They have comparatively large brains and some have been taught tricks. Also, they are considered more sensitive than any other form of life to electrical fields, which enables them to locate and hunt down prey.

TV problem

NEW YORK (AP) — An international study will attempt to find out why England, the Netherlands and Japan seem to consistently offer more quality television for children while this country gives sporadic policy consideration or backing for such programming.

The comparative study will be undertaken by the Children's Television Workshop, producer of "Sesame Street," under a grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation of New York. The report is expected next year.

Dr. Edward L. Palmer, CTW's vice president for research who will direct the project, says the study will evaluate the forces that significantly affect the amount of quality children's TV in the four countries, and also determine what shapes the standards for children's television programming.

Oppenheim show

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition of paintings by the 19th-century German artist Moritz Daniel Oppenheim (1800-1882) is being shown at the Jewish Museum through Jan. 3, 1982.

Show celebrates writer's birthday

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition to celebrate the 100th anniversary of writer P.G. Wodehouse's birth is being shown at the Pierpont Morgan Library through Jan. 10, 1982.

The items being shown "exemplify all aspects of Wodehouse's creative achievement, including manuscripts, letters, novels, short stories, magazines, newspapers, sheet music, piano rolls, scripts of plays and movies, theater and movie posters and programs, title pages, photographs and illustrations for dust jackets and periodical publications."

Textiles

Blacksmiths forge the future

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — When Todd Taylor and Dave Varner decided to go into business together, they took a step back into the past to forge their future.

The two men left lucrative careers to start up the Old Time Blacksmith Shop near the Mecklenburg County town of Monroe. After seven weeks of standing over a blazing forge, the men said they are enjoying their new line of business.

"It's a refreshing kind of life," Varner said. "We just got to thinking there had to be something more to life, something that would get us back to the basics. Well, we found it, and we love it."

Varner handles the business end of the shop, while Taylor works the hardware. The two invested about $5,000 in the operation, including rental of the building.

Stepping into the shop is like walking into an Old West scene. Taylor, wearing leather chaps and bluejeans, heats a steel rod to glowing red over the coal-fired forge and begins pounding it into a hook with a 4-pound sledgehammer on the anvil.

Varner, a burly, bearded man in blue jeans and boots, greets visitors inside the rough-hewn wood lobby. Black wrought-iron fireplace sets, shovels and other tools stand against the wall.

Taylor said he began making fireplace sets several years ago when a flimsy store-bought poker fell apart as he tried to punch up his fire at home. "I just went out to the anvil and made one that I knew wouldn't tear up," he said.

"So far, most of our business has come from repairs," Varner added. "But what we're really here for is to make things from other people's ideas, to have them tell us what they want and we'll make it."

Taylor, who worked his way through the University of Utah shoeing horses, spends Saturdays shoeing local horses. He has diploma from the Western School of Horseshoeing in Phoenix, where he studied corrective shoeing for horses with bad legs.

The shop has stalls where owners can leave their horses overnight for shoeing.

Meanwhile, the men said the 2-month-old business is off to a good start. They have orders for all types of tools, and they have representatives selling their wares in several cities across the country.

They unconditionally guarantee every piece they make.

"We don't have any urge to expand a lot or make a lot of things in a hurry," Varner said. "What we want to do is make quality lasting items, build up our reputation and have a good time with what we're doing along the way."

Fall fabrics

Fall's many choices of knitted surface textures are on the fashion scene, Ann Vanderpoorten, a clothing specialist says, noting that new varieties range from silk-like smoothness to sueded finishes to fuzzy, napped blanket looks.

One new development is a knitted fabric that looks like poplin and other woven fabrics, she adds. Vanderpoorten is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Cold water helps burns

NEW YORK (AP) — A major medical group cautions against applying grease, butter, sprays, ointments or home remedies to burns.

For minor and serious burns, the first step is to put the burned area in cold water or apply clean, cold-water compresses. Get medical attention for serious burns, the first-aid handbook suggests.

Library receives ten reproductions

By BARBARA EDSON
Fine Arts Librarian

A painting is an arrangement of colors and shapes. It is an extension of the character of the artist, a statement of philosophy of the time in which it is produced, and it can have meaning beyond anything concerned with one man or one period of time.

Most people judge the virtues of a painting as a picture of something. Using this standard, the picture is good first to the extent to which the subject matter "looks real," and second to the extent that the subject conforms to established opinions of what is entertaining or beautiful or inspirational.

The relationship of colors and shapes, or composition, is a very important factor in judging a painting, and is often overlooked by many people. Composition affects our reaction to a picture whether or not we think of it in compositional terms. If the composition is successful, we respond to the picture as intended by the artist, without asking ourselves why.

Even when the principles of composition and established beauty are known, there are no magic formulas that one can apply to come up with a fixed rating of a picture's quality. No two people feel quite the same about any given work. Keeping this fact in mind, and by voting as a group, a committee of the Friends of the Library and library staff select noteworthy additions to our framed art print collection.

We are proud to announce that our 1981 framed art reproductions have just arrived. Ten selections were made this year, encompassing a wide variety of styles and sizes.

Oriental artists have traditionally been interested in atmospheric effects. They use subtle washes to suggest softness and foliage forms are painted with brushwork of dazzling dexterity. Two new oriental pieces added to our collection are "Cantata" by Li Linchi and "Roses" by Moti Kaiko.

"Autumn Mirage," by Michael Rossi, is an expressionist piece that features warm tones utilizing the colors tan, brown, rust and orange. "Sanctuary" by Malcolm Thompson uses bright green and yellow colors to depict a forest scene. Judith Kingsley's "Round the Horn" streaks and interweaves cool white and green colors over a blue background to create a moving ocean scene. In these pieces, the picture's rawness and vitality presents a sense of immediacy which draws the observer into participating with the artist in the work.

The most notable characteristics of the watercolor medium are fluidity and transparency. "Flower Fantasy," by Barbara Nechis reflects the watercolor technique using an array of colors that seem to flow from areas of light to dark.

Victor Higgins was a noted member of the Taos Society of Artists. He was known for choosing the Indian people as his principle subject. "Fiesta Day," by Higgins, depicts two Pueblo Indians on horseback. One experiences a sense of lyric beauty and intellectual strength in this picture.

Bright blues and reds are the dominant colors in the work, "Along the Mississippi," by Lobrano De Witt. This is a picture that is done in the primitive style where there is a somewhat flattened perspective, symmetry of design, emphatic ornament, and a childlike delight in extraneous detail.

Three animal pictures have been added, "Pair of Cheetahs," by Paul Longenecker, "They Shall Dwell Together," by Nan Lee, and "A Koala Bear For Sandra," by Boulanger. These works would appeal to both youngsters and adults.

The library now has 351 art prints available for checkout purposes. Stop by the Fine Arts Department to find out the circulation details.

'Queen of Acid' still going strong

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Doing things the hard way has always come easy to Grace Slick.

"I learn very slowly because I'm so stubborn," she says. "I'm 42 and still living on the extremes."

To the undisputed queen of acid rock and acid tongue, extremes include everything from the jet-black dye she uses on her hair to her penchant for rising daily at the crack of dawn.

On this day — her birthday — she is up at 6 a.m. as usual, but she isn't celebrating.

Instead, she's sitting wrapped in a pink towel in a hotel room in Rockford, Ill., one of the Jefferson Starship's tour stops, talking on the phone about attitudes and alcohol; music and motherhood; her 10-year-old daughter, and her 15-year-old career.

"There's a clarity now. Things aren't such a big deal," she said.

"Some of it's good, some of it's bad. It's just that the bad doesn't strike me as being very important anymore. Actually, what it is, is that I can do something about it now."

Last January, Ms. Slick hopped back aboard the Starship, ending a 2½-year respite that turned into a kind of professional and personal renaissance.

During that time, she produced two solo albums and straightened out the tangle of alcohol abuse and confusion that drove her from the Starship in the first place.

Q. I read that a film was being made of Dr. Christiaan Barnard's life. I've always admired the man — when is the film due? S. Walker, Terre Haute, Ind.*

A. It isn't. Plans for the proposed $12 million film have been shelved due to lack of funding and Barnard's own resistance, reportedly centered on the section involving his first wife, Louwtijie. In the course of her embittered marriage to the famous heart surgeon, she once sold steamy letters written to him by Italian siren Gina Lollobrigida. Now married to former model Barbara Zoellner, Barnard at first wanted the film, based on his autobiography, "One Life," to go on without the sections on Louwtijie, but now has changed his mind entirely. "Films should be about dead people and I'm very much alive," he says. "Besides, I'm much too busy performing operations and running my three restaurants" — an interesting combination, to be sure. The turnaround, though, is bad news for Charlton Heston and Jack Nicholson, both of whom had expressed interest in portraying the Good Doctor.

BETWEEN THE LINES

THE STORY BEHIND THE STORY...

By Josie

Q. I saw an item recently about Twiggy, the model turned singer. Isn't she getting awfully tired of that silly name? Rachel S., Rockville, Md.*

A. Fourteen years after she was dubbed "Twiggy" by her former manager-lover, Justin de Villeneuve, she seems ready to pack the name in. "It's a ridiculous name, absolutely silly," she says. "To tell you the truth, I can't stand the sound of it anymore." But whether she'll go back to her real one, Lesley Hornby, is anybody's guess.

A. Usually, yes. He and wife, Rosemary, are regulars at "smooth" events. Recently though, he fell out of character in the course of shooting an episode of his new series, "Strike Force." The scene required him to consume a giant, ballpark-type hot dog with everything on it: chili, onions, relish, the works. After 15 takes and 15 hotdogs, none of the cast members would go near their star — for aromatic reasons.

Q. I'm glad that Sugar Ray Leonard won his championship bout. But doesn't his family get worried when he fights? J. Cripps, Ocean City, N.J.*

A. You bet — and their worrying is beginning to upset Sugar Ray. He makes a point, he says, of turning to the audience and smiling toward his wife and mother at least once during the fight, so that even though he may have blood dripping down his face, they know, he's OK. Recently, his son, Ray Jr. has taken to praying at the ropes, saying, "Please don't let anything happen to my dad," and that is shaking Sugar Ray up. His family's concern may speed his tranfer to acting; with one role in a TV movie called "The Magnificent Game" already lined up, that switch is definitely in the cards.

A. Just fine, from all reports, although he does suspect that she's a bit disappointed in him. "She reads that I have this flaming social life," he says, "because party PR people always publish the list of those invited, not of those who attend, so she thinks I'm out every night, when in fact, I'm often home watching the tube." From the look of some of the parties he supposedly attends, however, his mum should be happier that he stays where he is.

Q. I heard that Joan Collins had walked out on a charity function. Is her role on "Dynasty" going to her head? F. Reybold, Baton Rouge, La.*

A. It would be hard not to feel some effect when you're being paid half a million dollars for a few appearances, as she reportedly is. But the brouhaha in question, her no-show at two London charity events (one of which had billed her as its top draw), was due to her required appearance in L.A. on the "Dynasty" set. The charity spokesmen were outraged and Joan apologized long-distance, but added that her promises had been made on the condition that she wouldn't be working. And, when the time came, she was.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—Every once in a while the term "duplication of values" appears in your column. Do you play with a pinochle deck? I'm not familiar with the meaning of this term and would appreciate an explanation.—R. Bowman, Charleston, S.C.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—When partners have a concentration of strength in the same suit, or of controls, the high cards may not be pulling their weight. That is because their values are "duplicated." If you discover this in an auction, it is usually wise to be a little conservative.

Below are some examples of duplication of values:

a) Dummy
K J

Declarer
A Q

b) Dummy

Declarer
Void
K 3

c) Dummy
A K Q

Declarer
9 8 7 4 2

d) Dummy
K A J
6

Declarer

In a) declarer can make only two tricks in the suit despite the fact that he has the four top cards. Thus, the queen and jack are not working—they are "duplicated" values. Though the combined point count is 10, only 7 of those points are of use to declarer. In b), because the ace is in the void suit, declarer has at least one sure loser in the other suit; had the ace been opposite the king, it would be worth two full tricks instead of being useless.

Hands c) and d) represent cases of partial duplication. In c), declarer has three losers in dummy's weak suit, while in d), declarer's singleton is opposite the K-Q-J. However the duplication in dummy's strong suit is partially offset by the fact that, in some cases, declarer might be able to obtain useful discards on dummy's winners.

Dummy
K Q 10 7 6 5 4

Declarer
3

—K. Ladd, San Francisco, Calif.

A.—You don't say how many tricks you need in the suit, but strangely enough, it makes no difference. The right play is to finesse the ten, regardless of whether you need four, five or six tricks from the suit. If you are mathematically minded, the finesse will produce four tricks 98 percent of the time, five tricks 85 percent of the time, and six tricks 34 percent of the time.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Midland College has multi-faceted role

By H.A. TUCK
Public Relations Director
Midland College

This is Texas Public Community College Week, as proclaimed by Governor Bill Clements, to point out the contributions made by the 47 public community college districts to post-secondary education.

Midland College is one of the newer community colleges in Texas, but also one of the finest. Although it began in 1969, it has already attained a reputation as a leader in the community college field.

Its role in the community is multi-faceted, although many people know only one aspect of its educational activities.

First, it provides an outstanding university-parallel education for students who plan to transfer to another college or university for a degree. Small classes and instructors, who do nothing but teach, allow students to obtain the finest possible background in the basics.

Second, Midland College offers a wide range of vocational and technical programs that allow students to train quickly in various occupational skills, either to enter the job market or train for better jobs. Some of these are one-year certificate courses, while others are two years in length. Local residents may attend these courses full-time or part-time, depending upon their individual schedules.

Third, more than 200 non-credit courses allow for life-long learning in classes that brush-up skills, or simply let persons expand their knowledge for their own enjoyment.

Fourth, Midland College provides Adult Basic Education annd English As a Second Language for persons who dropped out of school before graduation, or who do not speak or understand English.

Fifth, Midland College provides a wide variety of cultural and recreational events. There are many diverse art exhibits and musical programs available, plus all the activities which take place at Chaparral Center.

Sixth, the presence of the college and its faculty add to the resources and diversity of the community. Nor is its financial impact an insignificant factor, from two aspects. One is the sizeable payroll and the many purchases made locally. Even more important, however, is the money saved by allowing residents to remain in Midland while obtaining quality education. The taxes paid locally to Midland College are returned in great measure to the community.

Certainly, Midland College is lovely to look at. But it's far more than a collection of buildings, trees, and shrubs. It helps immeasurably to create a more complete community in which we can live, work, and enjoy life to the fullest.

If you missed the Saturday opening of the 1981 Midland New Car Dealers Show, you still have a chance today. In and around Chaparral Center, from 1-6 p.m. today, are scores of new cars, trucks, vans, and pickups. It's an opportunity to see most of the 1982 models in one place, plus there are give-away items, entertainment, and door prizes.

High school basketball action begins at Chap Center Friday, when the Lee High boys' team hosts Lubbock Monterrey for games at 4 p.m., 6:15 p.m., and 8 p.m.

Entertainment of a different sort at Chap Center is slated Saturday at 8 p.m. when the Southside Lions Club presents its annual Gospel Music concert.

Coach Jerry Stone and his Chaparral basketball players head for Great Bend, Kansas, this weekend and the Barton County Community College Classic. The Chaps will have a few supporters, since Stone is from nearby Arkansas City and some of his relatives will be on hand for the tourney.

The Shidoni Gallery closes its fourth annual sculpture show on Friday, Nov. 20. The exhibit in McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, is open Sunday from 1-5 p.m., and Saturday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. It's a great show and Midland is fortunate to be able to view the works of some of the world's finest artists.

'20-20' to have new look

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's "20-20" made news in January with a special edition called "America Held Hostage: The Secret Negotiations," and stirred some controversy eight months later with a dramatized segment on top-secret "policy gaming" entitled "If You Were the President."

In between, there was an unpleasant scrape with the Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Co. over a story broadcast in April 1980 on the hazards of aluminum wiring, and a testy exchange — in public — with WBBM, the CBS affiliate in Chicago, over a locally broadcast show that criticized the "20-20" technique.

The newsmagazine, broadcast each Thursday night at 10 EST, continued in the meantime to build an audience, averaging about 30 percent of the viewers in its timeslot, and moving in the process from the shadow cast by CBS' "60 Minutes," the pioneer in the field.

And, last April, there were four Emmy awards for program segments broadcast between June 1, 1979, and Nov. 14, 1980.

There's no such thing as a new season for "20-20" — some segments, generally updated, are repeated during the summer — but the program did have a slightly different feel to it when the networks' 1981-82 TV year began in October.

Barbara Walters, an ABC News correspondent and anchor since 1976, came aboard as a "20-20" regular in September, and a short time later, John Stossel was hired away from WCBS-TV in New York, as consumer correspondent.

They joined host Hugh Downs and correspondents Geraldo Rivera, Sylvia Chase, Bob Brown and Tom Jarriel as members of the "20-20" family — itself an increasingly important consideration in creating an identity for the program.

In addition, the "Video Briefing," "Letter From ... " and "Moment of Crisis" segments, all introduced over the last several months, were established as regular, though periodically broadcast, features of the show.

And, as recently as early November, "20-20" announced that Marion Goldin, a "60 Minutes" producer for the last 10 years, would jump to the ABC program Jan. 1.

What a match! He writes the movies (about their marriage) and she's the star. So what's the secret of their love that keeps the audiences laughing?

By Fred Robbins

Fortunately, actress Marsha Mason, with her laughing Irish face and friendly ways, is impossible to dislike. And clearly she's had the luck of the Irish with her screen career. That success is, in no small way, tied to her marriage to playwright Neil Simon.

After getting a belated start at 31, as the second lead in "Blume in Love" eight years ago, Marsha Mason has since starred in seven movies. One, "Audrey Rose," was a disaster. And another, last year's "Promises in the Dark," drew critical raves but no audiences.

Now comes her latest, the bittersweet comedy, "Only When I Laugh," in which she portrays a brilliant but alcoholic Broadway actress with a sharp sense of humor, a fuzzy self-image and a teen-aged daughter (Kristy McNichol) she barely knows. Hollywood insiders are already speculating that in 1982 Marsha Mason will take home the coveted Oscar (she's had three previous nominations) for this role.

Her career has "been easier than some," Marsha readily admits. "I certainly can't say that I've had the pain of a lot of rejection and failure and difficulty, in the sense that some actors have had to pay dues. I've been very lucky."

OFF AND RUNNING

A large part of her good fortune, she willingly concedes, has been having the majority of her top roles — "The Goodbye Girl," "The Cheap Detective," "Chapter Two" and "Only When I Laugh" — carefully crafted for her by hubby Neil Simon.

"But Marsha's career would have flourished even without Neil Simon," insists one knowledgeable insider, noting that "she was already off and running in 'Cinderella Liberty' before they even met."

"Marsha is one of the best actresses of our time," Simon declares, explaining why he delights in creating roles for her. "I don't know an actress who is more passionate about the characters she plays. She vanishes into a room and goes through some mysterious process which involves reading the script over and over, making hieroglyphic notes nobody else understands. What emerges is special."

Today, Neil Simon finds it hard to believe that soon after their marriage in October 1973, he said to her, "This isn't going to work. Either give up your career or me." But he did. And wife Marsha didn't work again for more than three years.

Equally unbelievable, considering their eminently happy union, is their whirlwind romance — 22 days from their first "hello" to "I do" in a New York judge's chambers.

After she'd auditioned for his play "The Good Doctor," Simon told the casting director, "Hire her and ask her to marry me."

MARRIAGE IN A HURRY

The playwright's haste astonished her and his friends. His wife of 20 years, dancer Joan Baim (the mother of his daughters, Ellen, then 16, and Nancy, who was 11) had died of cancer only three months before. Simon's mourning was genuine and deep. Yet something intuitive told him that here, already, was a new beginning.

They began seeing one another from the first day of rehearsals on "The Good Doctor," and almost immediately Simon introduced her to his children.

"The girls' willingness to embrace me was a tribute to the truly beautiful marriage that Joan and Neil had," Marsha says. "It was their idea that we get married at once. We hadn't planned to marry as quickly as we did. When we told them we expected to wait, the kids said, 'Well, could Marsha then come and live with us? We won't tell our friends that you're not married.' That made all the difference in the world. Still, never having had a child of my own, it was a challenge, particularly under these circumstances."

Another woman in Marsha's shoes might have made sweeping changes, with potentially devastating results. But she moved quietly into the life of her readymade family, accepting everything as it was.

She says, "I also tried very hard to make it clear to both girls that they should talk about their mother. I told them that I would like to get to know her and that they shouldn't feel they had to hide how much they missed her. I tried to make them feel as comfortable as possible. The kids were very needy at that point. They needed a lot of love and attention and affection, a sense of security and the feeling of being a family once more."

BEHIND "CHAPTER TWO"

Now Ellen is 24, a young wife with a child of her own, and Nancy, almost 19, is going into her second year of college. And nothing has changed in their closeness to Marsha.

Neil Simon's adjustment to his second marriage was far more traumatic than that of his daughters, which he expressed in "Chapter Two." The play, and later movie version, was his personal outpouring of grief over Joan and his guilt at finding happiness again so soon after her death.

"Early in our marriage," Marsha says, "we had problems, of course, but I don't think it was ever in any real jeopardy. I am only human, though. There were times when I was terribly jealous of those wonderful years Joan and Neil had together. Sometimes I would feel so bad because Neil would remove himself to his own lonely, painful place. Then I knew he was thinking about Joan. So I had moments of great insecurity, moments of feeling inferior."

Marsha read "Chapter Two" as Simon was writing it ("Neil shares his work with me") and, despite its being the story of their own lives, was not upset. "The feelings that Neil was expressing were much more crucial than any privacy needs I might have had," she says.

All the same,"for several reasons," she chose not to do the play, which premiered in Los Angeles en route to Broadway.

"We had moved to California by then, to Bel Air, where we still live," she explains, "and I didn't want to go to New York and be separated from Neil and the girls. Emotionally, I didn't feel I was ready to play the part, either. The first time or two I saw rehearsals, I was able to think about the staging and the fine performances of Anita Gillette and Judd Hirsch. When the play opened in Los Angeles, I found a couple of scenes so personal I wanted to hide my face. I dissolved, just broke down and wept.

"Back home that night, Neil and I talked about our marriage, how we really felt about one another, and about that terribly rough period when he was still in deep mourning and feeling guilt-ridden about loving me. Even though that was all behind us, I thought it might be a bit exploitive if I did the play. I found myself fantasizing about the way it would be. To other actors, it would be just a play. But to me it would be much more."

She adds, however, she always intended to do the movie version of "Chapter Two," "since enough time would have gone by so that I could approach it as an acting role."

COMING TO THE BIG CITY

Clutching her speech and drama diploma from Missouri's Webster College, Marsha Mason arrived in New York in the summer of 1964.

But she says she was a "slow learner" and was hampered, she feels, "by being the older daughter in a strict, religious Catholic family."

Tutored by nuns, she has said she grew up with so many rose-colored glasses on, I didn't lose my virginity until I was in my 20s."

Tackling Manhattan alone at 22, determined to have success on the stage, Marsha soon was making suprising changes in her life.

After landing a salesclerk job at Franklin Simon, a women's store, she found an apartment on West 72nd Street. The day she moved in, she met actor Gary Campbell, the neighbor who became her husband five months later.

"We struggled together; we lived together for five years before we divorced and we are still good friends," she says. "And it was Gary who helped persuade me to undergo analysis.

"My analysis, which went on for years, was about discovery. I had to explore my true feelings about my parents, men, marriage and sex. I found I cared deeply about them all. But I had to resolve my feelings of guilt, particularly about sex. No one had ever made me aware before that my sexual yearnings were normal."

No longer in analysis, Marsha is very much into meditation. Around her neck she wears a gift from her husband, a gold necklace inscribed "Baba," a tribute to the Indian swami to whom she turned for guidance after psychiatric therapy.

NOT DISCOURAGED

During her stage-hopeful years, Marsha held odd jobs, including one as a clerk at New York Central Railroad, worked in soap operas ("Love Of Life," mainly), and did many TV commercials. It could have been a discouraging time. She refused to let it be.

Finally, after three years of trying and training, she landed her first stage job (alongside husband Gary Campbell) in an Off-Broadway production of Norman Mailer's spicy drama about Hollywood folk, "The Deer Park." And her career, though not Gary's, took off.

She next made her Broadway bow in Kurt Vonnegut's "Happy Birthday, Wanda June," played the ingenue in the national tour of " Cactus Flower," and signed on with San Francisco's American Conservatory Theatre as its resident leading lady for a season of classics: "Cyrano de Bergerac," "The Merchant of Venice," "You Can't Take It With You," "The Crucible," and "A Doll's House."

Then came the movies "Blume in Love," and "Cinderella Liberty," followed by her fateful meeting with Neil Simon.

MOVIE MOM

Interestingly, Marsha Mason has now played mothers in four of her films. She had a mulatto son in "Cinderella Liberty" (Kirk Calloway) and daughters in "Audrey Rose" (Susan Swift), "The Goodbye Girl" (Quinn Cummings), and now "Only When I Laugh." In "Promises in the The Dark," she played a doctor who cared for a terminally ill teen-ager.

She speaks affectionately of all her screen "children." "The little girl in 'Audrey Rose,' Susan Swift, was gracious and lovely," she recalls. "She came up from the Alley Theater in Texas and really applied herself so well. She was extremely dedicated. And the young boy in 'Cinderella Liberty' was a delight, just a regular kind of guy.

"Quinn Cummings was more verbal, more precocious, but in the best sense of the word. We had a grown-up relationship. We talked entirely differently to one another than an adult might, say, to someone the age she was (8) when we did the film. I ran into Quinn the other day. She's a young lady now. As bright as ever. And we were able to pick up right where we left off."

LAUGHING WITH KRISTY

In "Only When I Laugh," loosely based on Simon's play "The Gingerbread Lady," Marsha is seen as an actress who has a drinking problem as well as difficulty in handling relationships with her family and friends. But, at its center, the movie is the compassionate story of how she gets herself together through the relationship with her seldom-seen 17-year-old daughter, played by Kristy McNichol.

Determined to make up in one year for all the years they've missed, daughter Kristy moves in with her mother, while declaring,"I thought it would be nice if we got to know each other before we become the same age."

Says Neil Simon, who produced (for the first time) and wrote "Only When I Laugh," "Unless we had a feisty, funny, young actress who could go toe to toe with Marsha, the relationship wouldn't come off."

They found the actress. And the relationship not only comes off, but 18-year-old Kristy McNichol's radiant performance will assuredly rate her, along with Marsha Mason, an Academy Award nomination.

Of Kristy and herself, Marsha says, "We just had an immediate rapport right from the first reading of the script. I'd gone to see her in 'Little Darlings' and was greatly impressed by her work. And it was just something of a fine bonus that we liked one another so much, so quickly. Kristy is a very normal sort of person. She likes to go out dancing and she likes boys. And yet she has a very grownup attitude about her work. She is a thoroughly professional actress. Also she's most interested in directing — as I am — and I predict she will one day be a most excellent director.

"I've always held the view that acting is quite a peculiar thing for a child to do," Marsha continues. "If they do it a lot they're sort of robbed of a natural way of growing up. But, on the other hand, I've observed that all the kids I've worked with seem to find a great deal of satisfaction in acting. And, certainly, I have not experienced any of the difficulties of working with youngsters that other performers claim to have had."

AN ACTIVE VOICE

Coming up next is yet another mother role for Marsha Mason. In November, in a rare TV appearance, she begins production on a two-hour CBS movie,"Lois Gibbs and the Love Canal." And she will again be directed by Glenn Jordan, who made his feature film directorial debut with "Only When I Laugh." The story, based on fact, is about the celebrated housewife-turned-activist who spearheaded her community's fight to force the government to relocate those families threatened by the toxic chemical pollution that was discovered in the Love Canal area at Niagara Falls, N.Y.

An activist, though not a militant one, Marsha Mason says, "I'm not satisfied with the role of women in our society today. I feel that society in general could be better served by having more women in government. The few women who have been in government are terrific, interesting examples to me. But I think we need a lot more role models so that young women growing up, and men too, can have the opportunity to see that there are options. Because the more that men and women become integrated and share the responsibility of society, the better that society is going to be."■

He became heavily involved with left-wing political work and wound up, finally, broke, beaten and heavily in debt. His income in one of those final years was only $30. Layman puts it down the way Hammett did: lean and tough.

But there also are some large disadvantages -- increased government control over what you can and cannot do, increased expenses for a CPA and lawyer, higher Social Security tax. But if you decide to incorporate anyway, Kirk tells you how to do it -- step by step.

It's aimed primarily at small businesses and professional people.

The author's father had an active role in the revolution that brought the communists to power and rose to an eminent military position -- only to be killed himself in Stalin's purge of the late '30s. His son, now 60, survived many years in Stalin's prison camps, and is now almost totally blind. His recollection of those harrowing years is grim reading. There were no flowers or laughter in the dark night of Stalinism.

Davis stars in 'The Next Sting'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Singer-actor-songwriter Mac Davis will turn 40 next Jan. 21, and he approaches the date without a hint of mid-life crisis. As he explains:

"Turning 30 was a bigger trauma for me. It just seemed that my career was never going to get off the ground; I was always a day late and a dollar short. I didn't get my first hit record until I was 28, which was pretty old for a rock 'n' roll singer. I was playing college concerts when I was 10 years older than the audience. I felt like a father figure.

"Now I've got the movie I've been waiting for, a TV special I'm proud of, a new album, and I'm in good physical condition. Being 40 won't be so bad."

The movie is called "The Next Sting" — at least that's the most recent title. It is Universal Pictures' long-planned followup to its big winner of 1973, "The Sting." But not with the original cast. The leading actors are Mac Davis and Jackie Gleason.

"I play one of the gamest grifters, a guy who has never attained class," Davis remarked. "Gleason is the veteran con man, widely respected in his field. The roles are similar to those in the first movie, but of course there's no way to convince anyone that I am Robert Redford and Jackie Gleason is Paul Newman.

"There are a few references to the first sting in the script, but the names are different. The connecting character is Lonegan, with Oliver Reed in the role played by Robert Shaw. His henchman is Karl Malden, who plays such a mean character that you'll forget 'The Streets of San Francisco' and those credit card commercials."

The reason that Davis is in such good shape is that he plays a boxer in a prizefight that is the climactic sting.

"I've been working out every day for six weeks," he said, "and I have a lot of respect for Robert De Niro and Sylvester Stallone. In a movie you have to fight all day, not just a few rounds. Each round has to be choreographed, 200 punches to a round. The body punches land, the head punches don't. But you've got to throw your head back to make it look like a punch, and your neck can get very, very tired."

No complaints from Davis. "The Next Sting" is the followup he hoped for after "North Dallas Forty," in which he made a strong acting debut as a swinging pro quarterback ("I knew a lot of those boys from West Texas.") He stumbled on the next film, "Cheaper to Keep Her," which mercifully vanished from the marketplace ("The script was great, but —.")

Other Mac Davis projects:

"Christmas is Song," an NBC special on Dec. 14, taped in a Pasadena church with the Pointer Sisters, Lionel Richie and the Commodores, Andrae Crouch.

"Midnight Crazy," a new Casablanca album with a promising single, "You're My Bestest Friend," all songs written by Mac Davis.

Ormandy at his best with 'Eroica'

By KING DURKEE
Copley News Service

BEETHOVEN: Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra (RCA ATC1-4032: digital).

This is an "Eroica" that equals anything on records. So far as the sound is concerned, it goes to the very top of the list of the very best. Additionally, it is the finest recording of a Beethoven symphony Ormandy has ever made.

Ormandy takes a noble pace in the opening movement. It is precursor of his entire architectural vision of this work. I am particularly taken with the precision he achieves throughout the orchestra.

He adopts a beautifully contrasting tempo in the second movement. Not to slow. The vital crescendos are carefully built and the reultant tutti orchestra is sounded fully.

The scherzo is beautifully drawn. (Listen to the horn and see from whom Mendelssohn learned to write scherzos.) Absolute control by Maestro Ormandy.

The fourth movement, of course, is a glory of musical creation. So simple, yet so complex in its eloquent simplicity. Always a building up in the orchestral choirs, until finally the same theme, played throughout the movement from the very beginning, now sounds in the horns against a staccato string pattern.

How often this drags at this point. Not so under Ormandy. There is ever a forward thrust, ever a sense of urgency, right up to and through that miracle within a miracle, the 43-bar presto that concludes the symphony.

A not-to-be missed "Eroica."

TALLIS: Mass "Puer Natus Est," Motet "Suscipe, Quaeso Domine," Motet "Salvator Mundi." The Clerkes of Oxenford, David Wulstran, director (Nonesuch H-71378).

Tallis is a neglected composer in a neglected period of music. The catalog lists very little of his work. And it is safe to say that what is listed has few takers.

The music of Tallis is English church music of the 16th century. It is music of the time of Henry VIII and Mary Queen of Scots. It is great music of the church (both Catholic and Anglican), particularly in its amazing contrapuntal accomplishments.

This splendid recoring -- superbly conducted by Wulstran -- is a most welcome and most worthy addition to a very thin discography.

RAVEL: Sheherazade, Chansons madecasses, from Cinq melodies populaires grecques, Deux melodies hebraiques. Frederican von Strade, soprno. Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra (CBS 36665: digital).

This is an extraordinarily fine disc of music for voice by Ravel. Sheherazade is especially well served. It is the combination of von Strade's suitability of voice for this work and Ozawa's often demonstrated affinity for Ravel that raises this performance to the highest level.

It is at least a match for the fine Marilyn Horne-Leonard Bernstein recording. (Columbia M-35102). Its added advantage is that the entire disc is Ravel.

Sounds like an incantation. And in a way it is. Putting these instruments of ancient origin together does conjur up the renaissance in a most pleasing way.

The bandora is a wire-stringed bass instrument. The mandora is a smaller ancestor of the lute. The cittern is something between a guitar and a lute and uses wire strings. The theorbo is a kind of lage lute. The bass viol (not to be confused with the modern double bass) is also known as a viola da gamba and is held between the knees. The back of the baroque guitar, instead of being flat like the Spanish guitar, is gently vaulted. Thus it is a little more closely related to the lute. There is an appreciable difference acoustically between the two type of guitars.

Vallet, Castello, Corbetta, Ferrabosco, Terzi, de Rore, Bernia, Borrono.

Another incantation? Not quite. These are some of the composers Tyler and his group play. If you know any of them you're exceptional. You'll not find them listed in the Schwann Record and Tape Guide.

But all of this is of little or no moment. The lute's the thing wherein Tyler proves himself master renaissance muscian and captures us with his marvelous evocations of a long-ago world off masques, pavans and assorted dalliances.

Wallace profiles Jean Seberg

NEW YORK (AP) — The scene is chilling, for all that would come later.

Otto Preminger, the director, is heard, though not shown, asking 17-year-old Jean Seberg, "And do you want to be an actress?" To which the blond teen-ager from Marshalltown, Iowa, replies, "Very badly."

The short segment is from a screen test, conducted as Preminger sought to cast the lead for his 1957 film, "Saint Joan." Miss Seberg was selected for the part from among 18,000 aspiring performers.

"The story of Jean Seberg is a Cinderella story gone sour," Mike Wallace, the CBS News correspondent, says in an introduction to the premiere edition of "The Mike Wallace Profiles," Tuesday night at 10:30 EST. The irregularly scheduled series will continue, probably in December, with profiles of Robert F. Kennedy and playwright Noel Coward.

"An unknown at 18," Wallace says of Jean Seberg, "she burst upon the cinema scene as Joan of Arc in a flare of worldwide publicity — too much of it, too soon."

The Seberg story would end, in apparent suicide, 22 years later.

Film from the screen test, found sealed in a garage in New Jersey, has not been shown on televison before — and probably has not been seen by anyone outside the Preminger circle.

The half-hour show — subesquent programs will run an hour — also includes a first-ever interview with Miss Seberg's parents.

Wallace interviewed Miss Seberg herself in 1958, not long after that first screen test, as she stood — in the correspondent's words — "on the threshold of a motion picture career that could make her an idol of millions."

"Innocence, a little fear, fear for herself of the unknown," he recalls today. "And she was more than a little scared of Otto Preminger.

"I thought she was out beyond her depth," Wallace says, "as a young actress, and as an individual, too. I must say that in the screen test, she came across with a certain self-awareness. But she was not yet an actress, and she was given one of the most difficult roles imaginable to play."

In fact, "Saint Joan" was a critical failure, as was her second film with Preminger, "Bonjour Tristesse." She enjoyed fleeting success with "Breathless" in 1961, but by the age of 30, Jean Seberg had been married, divorced, and married again.

In 1968, Miss Seberg put money into a school project in Los Angeles organized by Hakim Jamal, a black nationalist.

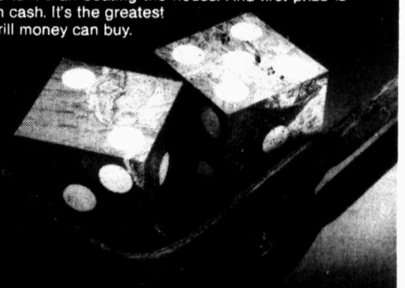

Wallace says in the "Profiles" piece that the FBI began, in 1969, "an active, discreet investigation" of Jean Seberg.

Then, in 1970, "believing that Jean was pregnant by Panther Raymond Hewitt," Wallace says, "the FBI's Los Angeles office requested permission from Washington to plant an item which would publicize the pregnancy of Jean Seberg, 'cause her embarrassment and serve to cheapen her image with the general public.'"

And Nothing But the Tooth

By Alan E. Nourse, M.D

All you need to know about dental problems and how to prevent them

Marian K.'s 4½-year-old son woke up screaming one morning with a toothache. Marian took him to the dentist, where she was horrified to hear that the child had 14 cavities in his deciduous or "baby" teeth, with three of the baby molars badly decayed. The dentist recommended filling and restoring the teeth because pulling them, he said, might lead to crooked, misaligned permanent teeth and even more expensive dental work later. Marian had never taken her child to the dentist for a general examination because she had thought that dental care was unnecessary until the boy's permanent teeth came in.

● Ann M., age 45, went to a dentist because three of her front teeth were loosening. She knew for years that something was wrong with her teeth and gums but had never done anything about it — she hated dental offices. Now the dentist told her that she had periodontal disease (infection and damage involving the gums and bone surrounding her teeth), which was so far advanced that over half of her teeth were threatened. Because of her own neglect, Ann is facing a long, costly period of dental treatment.

● Tina B. is having problems with her set of full upper and lower dentures. Tina is only 23. Two years before, when her long-neglected teeth began crumbling, this otherwise attractive young housewife chose the "easy" solution — she had all her teeth pulled out and got inexpensive dental plates. Tina's mouth changed after the extractions, however, and soon the poorly crafted dentures fit so badly and hurt so much, she could hardly use them. She now faces the cost of new, well-made dentures and — far more tragic for a young woman — a life-time with no teeth of her own.

BITER NEGLECT

These cases are not isolated or unusual. According to a recent public-health survey, almost 15 percent of all Americans have none of their own teeth left by the age of 35, while an estimated 20 million Americans under age 17 have never been to a dentist. Most people have advanced dental disease because of misunderstanding, ignorance, or neglect; they turn to the dentist to try to save their teeth when it is too late. Happily, most severe trouble with teeth can be prevented by learning what causes the trouble and what can be done about it.

Plaque — the No. 1 villain. Dentists know today that the major cause of most destructive dental disease is a dull, filmy material known as plaque. Plaque coats the teeth and if not removed, it leads to the development of dental caries (commonly called "cavities") and, ultimately, to tooth decay.

Almost every person has plaque to some degree, from the first eruption of the baby teeth on through life, because the mouth harbors many bacteria. One family of these bacteria, streptococcus mutans, produces a sticky stuff that enables the bacteria to adhere tightly to the enamel coating of the teeth.

Ordinarily, the enamel is an excellent protection for the teeth. But as bacteria cling to it and grow, a rough film of plaque is formed. Microscopic food particles and sugars from our food are fermented by the bacteria to form acid, and the acid slowly begins dissolving the otherwise impenetrable enamel. The plaque becomes especially thick and tenacious in the cracks and crevices between the teeth, in the back corners of the mouth, and just under the gum line — all the places that we tend to miss with a quick, casual tooth brushing. In these places the plaque often builds up layer upon layer till it eventually forms a thick, chalky coating known as tartar.

If the bacterial acids formed by plaque are regularly scrubbed away, the tooth enamel remains healthy. If the acids remain, they begin slowly and painlessly to pit and roughen the normally smooth surface. Then more bacteria can accumulate and produce still more acid. Eventually a hole erodes through the enamel, allowing bacteria to reach the softer interior of the tooth, and a cavity has begun. This, too, may be painless at first, but as decay spreads deeper, the tooth becomes sensitive to heat, cold, or pressure. Once decay reaches the pulp cavity — the tiny chamber containing the nerve and blood supply — at the center of the tooth, a severe toothache may result. If treatment is still not undertaken, infection and decay can spread down the pulp cavity, destroying the nerve and food vessels in the roots and forming an infective abscess in the bone supporting the root. The result then may be a dead tooth.

Plaque can also lead to another common dental disease — pyorrhea. This occurs when bacteria and decaying food under the gum line cause inflammation and infection, with soreness and swelling of the gums. If the disease is untreated, the gums will recede from the teeth, while the infection digs deeper into the gums and begins to involve the spongy bone supporting the teeth. As a result the teeth may loosen and fall out.

WILL ON THE FLOSS

Fighting plaque effectively. These tooth-destroying processes of decay and infection do not take place overnight. Many months, even years, may pass before irreparable damage has been done. Research dentists say that within the next decade there will be a vaccine against tooth decay. But till then, you play the most important part in preventing destructive dental disease. It will take you only 10 to 15 minutes a day to protect your teeth. Here's what you should do:

1. Use dental floss. This is the single most effective home technique to prevent plaque from forming. See-saw a strand of dental floss down between the teeth, moving from front teeth to back, top and bottom. The floss removes particles of trapped food and polishes the enamel surfaces where the teeth almost touch. Dentists recommend unwaxed floss.

The best time for flossing is just before retiring at night. An additional flossing after breakfast each day should take only about three minutes and will pay off handsomely in keeping your teeth free of plaque.

2. Brush in the right way. Scrubbing the front surfaces of the teeth for a few strokes back and forth doesn't really do much. An up-and-down scrubbing motion with a twist of the wrist, not a back-and-forth sawing motion, is what is needed. Sweep the bristles up from the gum to the tooth tip on the lower teeth, down from the gum to the tooth tip on the upper teeth, cleansing the front surfaces, the back surfaces, the biting surfaces, and most important, all four back corners. Brush for at least three minutes. Your choice of toothpaste is purely a matter of taste; it is brushing in the proper manner for a long enough time that clears the plaque from teeth and gum crevices. The best time for brushing is at bedtime, right after flossing; brushing in the morning provides additional protection. While electric toothbrushes simplify the brushing technique described above and save a lot of wrist motion, any medium-soft-bristled toothbrush will do the job if you do your part of the work.

You can check if your flossing and brushing are getting rid of plaque by using disclosure tablets, which are available at the drugstore. The tablets are chewed. They contain a coloring agent that stains the plaque red but leaves polished tooth enamel uncolored. Disclosure tablets thus help you spot places that need extra brushing and flossing.

3. Have regular dental checkups. A visit to the dentist's office is usually recommended at six-month intervals because in this time plaque will begin to accumulate no matter how faithfully you have been flossing and brushing. The dentist or a specially trained hygienist does a professional job of removing any plaque hidden below the gum lines or between the teeth. With modern instruments the procedure is not really painful. After removing the plaque, the teeth are polished so bacteria have nothing to stick to; then the dentist examines the teeth for any signs of early dental caries. In all, this cleaning and examination will take about an hour and will cost less than an average tuneup for your car.

4. Use fluoride. It's been known since the 1950s that safe quantities of flouride salts in drinking water, toothpaste containing fluoride, or fluoride applied to the teeth by the dentist will dramatically reduce the number of caries that form. Fluoride makes the tooth enamel harder and more impervious to decay. In addition, recent studies suggest that it also inhibits the growth and activity of bacteria on the teeth.

5. Watch what you eat. Any food we eat can provide the bacteria in plaque with the raw material with which to form acid — but nothing promotes acid formation as vigorously as sugar. Recent research indicates that it is the sugar itself, not necessarily the amount of sugar, in foods that causes tooth decay. Thus, a major step in preventing dental disease is to reduce the amount of sugar-loaded foods, candy, or soft drinks that you consume. Candy is particularly bad for children's teeth, and the stickier and gooier the candy, the more acid is formed. Sugar-free carbonated drinks should be taken in moderation because the carbonic acid they contain can also cause some damage to tooth enamel.

BRIDGE OVER TROUBLED MOLARS

If protective measures aren't taken soon enough, dental caries may slowly erode and destroy the crowns and roots of the teeth. Gum disease may lead to loosening of the teeth, and abscesses at the roots or infection in the surrounding bone accelerates the overall damage.

Years ago dentists usually treated such problems by pulling the damaged teeth and replacing them with dentures, bridges, or other appliances. Today, most dentists believe that saving and restoring a natural tooth to good function is far better than replacing it with an artificial tooth.

To this end, there are many techniques a dentist can use:

Fillings. The dentist removes decayed material from the cavity, after which the excavation is filled and sealed with a hard, inert material. Silver amalgam (a mixture of powdered metals including silver and mercury) is a simple, inexpensive filling material and therefore one of the most popular. Well sealed to the surrounding enamel, such a filling keeps bacteria out and will last from five to 15 years. Occasionally, a person will "lose" an amalgam filling and need to have it replaced. That is one of the reasons why dental scientists are constantly searching for other more durable filling materials; in the future, dental caries may be filled inexpensively with porcelains, superhard resins, quartzes, or even glasslike materials.

Inlays. When the cavity is very large or the patient wants a longer-lasting filling, the dentist may fit a gold inlay. A cast is made of the prepared cavity, and the inlay — a bit of gold alloy — is then fashioned to seal it perfectly and cemented permanently into place. Because they take more of the dentist's time and the metal is so costly, inlays are more expensive than simple fillings — but they also last far longer. A good inlay can last a lifetime.

In special cases, where the strength of gold is not necessary, other less costly inlay materials can be used. And where appearance is a concern — a front-tooth cavity, for example — the dentist can use a porcelainlike filling material, which can be color-matched to the healthy enamel of the tooth so the filling won't be seen.

Crowns, bridges, and other appliances. A crown is essentially a partial false tooth fitted to the remaining healthy tooth and root. It can be needed when a large piece of tooth has been broken off or destroyed by decay. Crowns may be fashioned of gold alloys or of hard porcelain materials.

A bridge may be used when a tooth has been lost to prevent the teeth on either side of the missing tooth from shifting into the empty space. In some cases the bridge may be fitted with an artificial tooth. Some bridges are permanently emplaced; others can be removed for cleaning.

Advanced decay and infection. When decay has destroyed the pulp cavity of a tooth, or when infection is deeply entrenched in the gums and bone surrounding the teeth, special dental techniques may be required to restore the teeth. The endodontist removes infected material from the pulp cavity and root canals of the tooth, sterilizes the area, and then seeks to restore the tooth to usefulness even though it may be no more than a shell. The periodontist treats infection of the gums and other areas surrounding the teeth so that tooth restoration may be possible. When dental disease has advanced so far that teeth just cannot be restored, they may have to be extracted — often by an oral surgeon — and replaced with well-fitting partial or complete dentures.

THE GETTING OF WISDOM TEETH

While few people really enjoy going to the dentist, dental work today is done swiftly and quite painlessly. Super-high-speed drills, for example, now permit the dentist to prepare a cavity for filling in a matter of minutes. Most other dental work has also been refined to reduce the time you must spend in the dental chair, even when quite extensive work must be done.

Other dental problems. A tooth may be broken off or knocked out as a result of an accident. Broken teeth can usually be completely restored by means of fillings, inlays, or crowns, And, surprisingly enough, if a knocked-out tooth can be found, kept clean, and taken to a dentist immediately, it can sometimes be successfully reimplanted.

Wisdom teeth fully deserve their reputation as troublemakers. These large third molars in the back corners of the jaws usually erupt between the ages of 16 and 21. All too often there is not enough room for the wisdom teeth to come down, and they become jammed or impacted against the second molars. Subsequent pain and, often, decay of the wisdom teeth may then necessitate their removal.

Though one may not be able to change how one's teeth come in, the vast majority of dental-health problems can be avoided by following, in your home and the dentist's office, the simple rules of preventive care. Preventive dental care is on of the greatest health bargains of our time — and one of the most effective.

WHICH TOOTH IS WHICH?

It's easy to identify your adult teeth by name just by doing a little exploring with your tongue:

Incisors. These are the wedge-shaped cutting or biting teeth in the front of your mouth. There are four on top, four below. The top incisors are broader and flatter than the ones below.

Canines. In many animals these are the long, sharp tearing teeth next to the incisors, top and bottom. In humans these teeth are large and strong but not so long and sharp. The canines are sometimes called "eye teeth" because the roots of the upper canines point toward the eyes.

Bicuspids. A "cusp" is a major point on the biting surface of a tooth. Back of the canines — which are single pointed teeth — adults have two double-point or bicuspid teeth on each side, upper and lower.

Tricuspids (molars). These large grinding teeth are behind the bicuspids and have three major points or cusps. Almost everyone has two tricuspids on each side, top and bottom. Most people have a third one on each side, top and bottom — the wisdom teeth. ■

Luke and Laura tie knot

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Luke and Laura finally reach the altar after a long and star-crossed courtship on ABC's super-soap opera "General Hospital."

The sexy, sophisticated and fast-paced serial, with a daily audience of more than 14 million, has created the same kind of stir for daytime TV that CBS' "Dallas," and the famous "Who shot J.R.?" episode, did for prime time a year ago.

Luke Spencer and Laura Baldwin, after a year and a half on the run, are married Monday in the backyard of a Port Charles mansion decorated like Indian summer. The townspeople turn out to wish them well, because the couple saved the town from megalomaniac Mikkos Cassadine's plot to take over the world by means of carbonic snow in the "Ice Princess" caper.

Carbonic snow? Ice Princess?

"General Hospital" is no ordinary soap. Since producer Gloria Monty saved the show from certain death in 1978, due to anemic ratings, the serial has taken on aspects of James Bond, "The Maltese Falcon," "The Fugitive," "It Happened One Night," "Tarzan," and goodness knows what else.

MS. MONTY INTRODUCED film techniques to the sluggish world of the soap. The camera moved, the actors moved, and how the stories moved! And the show, once near cancellation, began to make money — now a reported $1 million a week.

Even Elizabeth Taylor is on hand for the wedding. The international superstar, an avid fan, yearned to be there when Luke and Laura tied the knot, and she was written into the script as Helena Cassadine, who claims she wants to make amends for her late husband's misdeeds. Or has she come to seek revenge on Luke and Laura?

When Ms. Monty took over the sagging soap four years ago, she immediately began to infuse the show with new life and new characters. Yet, such stalwarts as Dr. Steve Hardy and Nurse Jessie Brewer, who have been with the serial since its birth in 1963, remain as popular as ever.

But it is Luke and Laura, the Romeo and Juliet of daytime TV — played by Tony Geary and Genie Francis — who seized the public's imagination. One controversial aspect of their romance was Luke's "rape" of Laura at the disco he manages. Ms. Monty said later it was only "a choreographed seduction," and Laura soon fell in love with Luke.

Repeated run-ins with the mob and the sinister Cassadine kept the lovers on the run. One celebrated episode found them hiding out in a department store, where they acted out the fantasy of having every plaything imaginable at hand.

The "Ice Princess" sequence took them to a lush tropical island, where Cassadine, like a Dr. No, turned the world frigid from an underground bunker.

THE MARRIAGE OF Luke and Laura has been an on-again, off-again event for some time. When the producers learned that Genie Francis was thinking of leaving the show, they backed off. Then, a decision was made to go ahead, and everyone had two weeks to get ready.

The future of Miss Francis is still in doubt. Her contract expires in December, and her agents and ABC have been unable to reach agreement on a new one.

The wedding sequences were taped on location at a mansion in an exclusive private community in Los Angeles. For the fairy-tale wedding, Ms. Monty assembled 140 cast and crew members on the grounds of the replica 17th Norman-French chateau. She had wanted to bring in 250 "guests," but the enclave's homeowners' association limited the show to 140.

"General Hospital," now immortalized in song, began to take off about a year and a half ago when Luke, a former front man for the mob, discovered a little black book with the goods on underworld figures, and was forced to run. Laura, with a background equally as shady, joined him as he tried to figure out the mystery of the left-handed boy. The ratings began to climb

Getting Over the Breakfast Blues

Are you a bear in the a.m.? Do you serve up burnt offerings instead of fluffy omelets? Here's how you can get through those morning hours — even if he is an early bird!

By Stephanie Pierson

Fantasy of my first breakfast with him: I am wearing a gossamer Victorian dressing gown. My hair is casually tousled and tied with a pale pink satin ribbon. The house smells of the freshly baked croissants I have just set out on the flower-sprigged Porthault tablecloth, right next to the bowl of pink tea roses. "Ode to Joy" is playing softly in the background. The sun is shining. And so, of course, am I. He sits down to breakfast wearing a simple cashmere robe and gazing with ardor at me.'He is Roger Moore. I am Jacqueline Bisset.

Reality of my first (second, third, etc.) breakfast with him: Having gotten almost no sleep (he snores), I am groggy and slightly grumpy. There are bags under my eyes, and I am late for work. He has gotten more than enough sleep (I don't snore) and is depressingly cheerful, which makes me feel worse. Inevitably I burn the toast... or the coffee... or the cat. He is Roger Moore. I am the Bride of Frankenstein.

Other people hate the I.R.S., their mother-in-law, or cellulite. I hate mornings. Most of all, I hate waking up. There has never been an alarm clock loud enough to wake me. There has never been a morning in my life when I have gotten up on the right side of the bed. I once had an important job interview with a fashion magazine at 8:30 a.m. I arrived wearing one black sling-back and one navy blue pump. Can you imagine how my eggs Benedict turn out?

I used to berate myself for not being wonderful in the morning. For years my mother got up before dawn in order to make pancakes and waffles and God knows what else for my father so he'd be fed in time for the 8:10 train. And then there was my ex-mother-in-law, who when she came to visit, always set her alarm for an hour earlier than ours. That way she had plenty of time to dust the house, squeeze fresh orange juice, and cook real old-fashioned Irish oatmeal, so as to make me look slothful.

Yet, for all my heavy exposure to the ways of morning people, I remain unchanged. I am at my best starting somewhere around midnight, when I'm witty, effervescent, alive. I adore the night life. I love to boogie. I am crazy about discos, smoky cabarets, New Year's Eve, the Late Show. At 2:00 A.M., I am Cinderella. At 9:00 a.m., I'm the pumpkin.

So with whom do I inevitably fall in love? A man who can't keep his eyes open beyond "Mork and Mindy." A man who has never once stayed up to see the Late Show. A man who springs out of bed before the alarm goes off, who rushes into the shower, does 25 sit-ups, reads the entire newspaper, and finishes the crossword puzzle — all at an hour when any sane person would just be getting ready to go to bed. To my mind, nothing can cool a romance faster than a lover who believes that ridiculous old adage about early to bed, early to rise...

Of course, if you're waking up alone, it's perfectly okay not to be wonderful. There's no one you have to charm except the cat or perhaps the mailman, and for them you can get by with a box of Friskies and a sleepy smile. But if you've paired up with someone wonderful, mornings become a challenge. Especially if Mr. Right is expecting to wake up to the same enchanting creature he went to sleep with the night before.

Long ago, I realized that there are as many of us who hate mornings as there are indeed mornings to hate. And most of us seem to be female.

Oscar Wilde said, "Only dull people are brilliant at breakfast." Ask my neighbor, Marilyn. For six years Marilyn was married to Harvey, a man who actually cracked jokes at the breakfast table. Marilyn says that she could barely get out of bed in the morning, let alone get a punch line. Their marriage didn't survive the time that Marilyn fell asleep during one of Harvey's knock-knock jokes.

More often than not, morning people are absolutely heartless. Lisa, my college roommate, told me that she once had a boyfriend who ripped open the curtains while shouting, "Rise and shine." As soon as she was awake enough to talk coherently, Lisa informed him that she had no intention of "rising" and that there was even less possibility she would "shine." Lisa's insensitive mate then altered his tune slightly to, "Up and at 'em." After two and a half weeks of morning angst, she left him.

Variation on a sleep theme: My hairdresser, Dolores, fell madly in love with a man who had an 8-year-old daughter. Dolores loved Jimmy. She even loved Jessica, but soon she grew to hate spending the night at their house. She says she managed all right with the spilled Cheerios and the daily search for lost bunny barrettes. What she couldn't take was waking up at 7:00 a.m. to the soundtrack of "Grease" blaring from Jessica's stereo. "I like to think," Dolores sighs dramatically, "that John Travolta is responsible for my breakup with Jimmy."

By now it's clear that when it comes to mornings, there are at least a million horror stories to be shared. Beyond commiserating with each other and relating anecdotes about the time we poured sugar into the toaster, what can we nonmorning people do?

First and foremost, we must develop more realistic expectations. No matter how much sleep you get, you're not going to greet the day looking as bright-eyed as Farrah Fawcett, or sounding as intelligent as Barbara Walters. Neither will you be dressed as fetchingly as Scarlett O'Hara. In short, do not expect perfection. Understand that you will not always be able to flip a pancake or discuss nuclear fission, and that it's okay not to.

Next, you should do a little advance work. Prepare everything you'll need the night before. Figure out what you're going to wear the next day and put it all out. Grind the coffee before you go to bed. Squeeze the juice. Wash your hair.

If you truly can't face some mornings, then don't. Call in sick, stay in bed, and settle in with a good book.

Obviously, the best thing you can do if you're allergic to mornings is meet a man who hates them, too. The next best thing is to meet a man who thinks your morning personality has a certain wacky charm about it. Opposites, thank God, do seem to attract. My own husband (once he got over the initial shock) decided my a.m. spaciness was kind of cute. Now he laughs when I trip over the cat's water bowl.■

HOW THE STARS FACE THE MORNING

Brooke Shields: "I enjoy a breakfast of juice and cereal, and I plan for just enough time to attend to all my necessary chores before I leave for school or work. The night before, I put all my books and papers into my briefcase and lay out the next day's clothes on the bed for my mother's approval. I'm really very well organized."

Roy Scheider: "I'm athletically inclined and won't budge from the house until I have a healthy round of morning calisthenics under my belt. When living in Manhattan, I find it easy to keep fit by jogging to my neighborhood coffee shop. Once there, I seek out my favorite table where I read the newspapers while enjoying my Danish and coffee."

Billy Joel: "Whenever I have an important meeting or engagement first thing in the morning, my wife, Liz, and I make sure to eat plenty of Chinese food late the night before. We love it, and we find it's guaranteed to make anyone get up early. This way, we're always on time!"

Diane von Furstenberg: "I'm a firm believer in list-making. I prepare myself for the day ahead by carefully writing everything down. With that done I find I can relax and go to sleep, secure in the knowledge that my day is well charted. I don't need an alarm clock to wake me; I have my own method. Usually, it's just an elbow — and a gentle nudge."

Here's how to take the luxury vacation you always wanted — without "sinking" your savings account

By Roberta Roesch

Do you love the pop of a champagne cork? The splash of the shimmering sea? Deck-chair lounging? Beneath-the-stars dancing? Sumptuous midnight buffets? If you do, maybe it's time for your very first cruise on one of the luxury liners that sails to exotic ports.

"Any way you look at it, a cruise is the greatest travel value you can get," declares veteran cruiser John Knox, a contractor from Philadelphia.

"No other vacation is as simple, as relaxing, or as comfortable," adds his wife Sally. "You unpack and pack just once — and that's it."

"There's something for everybody, too," stresses salesman Tom Barnes of Cleveland. "And I like not worrying about daily reservations and not having to dash all over."

"For us it's a great second honeymoon," says blue-jeaned Jane Blair of Dallas. "We can leave our problems and cares behind and just sail away from it all."

All over the country, many couples are answering the fabled call of the sea as they book their initial cruise. But there are techniques for planning a cruise, and my husband and I tried them all on for size while embarking on a wedding anniversary trip.

WHAT'S AVAILABLE

Cruising can fit everyone's budget, since you can go to sea for a round-of-parties weekend or for a 95-day world cruise. You can leave from a number of harbors, depending on the cruise you select. The main ports are San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York, Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Montreal, Miami, Fort Lauderdale and Port Everglades.

And you can cruise to a wide variety of ports. In the Caribbean, for instance, you'll find Barbados as British as Piccadilly Circus. Trinidad, Jamaica and the Bahamas have touches of England, too. In Martinique, Guadaloupe, St. Barthelemy and Haiti, you'll taste the flavor of France. Holland is alive in Curacao and Aruba. Spain can be seen in Puerto Rico. And the Stars and Stripes fly proudly in St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John.

PICKING A CRUISE THAT MEETS YOUR NEEDS

Some young couples are deterred from cruising because they're afraid that an ocean vacation is mainly for older people. But there are ways to select a cruise where you'll be with contemporaries.

The first way is to book a short cruise rather than a long one. The longer the cruise, the more apt you are to meet more older people. They're the ones, as a rule, who have the money and the time to take the more lengthy trips.

The second guideline is to be careful about the area the cruise is hitting. When you want to be sure that you'll be with young people, you're much more likely to meet them on a cruise to the Caribbean than on a trip to the Mediterranean.

HOW MUCH WILL IT COST?

Cruise rates include ocean transportation, landing and embarkation charges, other than port taxes, stateroom accommodations and meals and entertainment. Only one class is provided on cruises, and most lines have reduced fares for children. Rates don't include shore excursions or any personal items, such as liquor and gratuities.

The higher the deck, the higher the price. Outside rooms with a porthole cost the most. A tip to remember: When you're closer to the waterline and the center of the vessel, you usually feel less movement. Ask to see a deck plan when you book your trip so you'll know where your cabin is, and make your bookings through your travel agent well in advance of your holiday time.

WHAT CLOTHES TO PACK

Wash-and-wear wrinkle-proof daywear is right for both men and women — and practically anything goes. Except for formal evenings, men usually wear suits (or slacks and jackets). For formal nights, a tuxedo with a white, maroon, blue or plaid jacket is traditional. But on some lines today, men are forgetting their black ties and wearing a good dark suit.

Cocktail dresses, long skirts, evening gowns and pants are suitable for women — except for the first and last evening when the custom is not to dress formally.

You'll also need comfortable walking shoes for when you're in port. Sneakers are fine on board ship. For women, sandals and dressier shoes go dancing at night.

SAILING DAY

Arrive at the pier with your baggage clearly tagged several hours ahead of time. On arrival, red caps will take your luggage from you. Tip them 25 cents per suitcase. They'll put your luggage in your room during the bon voyage party or soon afterwards.

Breakfast is always an open sitting, but on some cruises there's a first and second sitting for lunch and dinner. Except in cases where you may want to dine alone, it's smart to ask for a table for six with two other compatible couples. If you find they're completely incompatible the first time you're together, ask for a table for two at once, before you get involved. When you've made your dining room reservations, find the deck chair steward to check on your chairs for the trip. On some lines, there's a charge per chair.

Usually you'll have an interlude between sailing and cocktails or mealtime. Use this time to walk around the ship, to unpack your bags, or to relax on a deck or in your cabin.

LIFE ABOARD SHIP

From the captain on down, every member of the ship's staff is trained to pamper you. The purser, a kind of sea-going hotel manager, will answer your questions and check your valuables. There's also a bank on board. Your room steward will keep your cabin ship-shape and will bring you whatever you want. Your cruise director and the hostesses will see that you have a great time.

When it comes to enjoying yourself fully, you can have your pick of fun. You can choose indoor and outdoor swimming, sunbathing, shuffleboard, shopping in the ship's gift shop, pingpong, deck tennis, deck chair snoozing, golf driving, calisthenics, massages, saunas, movies, dance classes, language lessons, travel lectures, bridge, canasta, horse racing and bingo. There's also a beauty salon, barber shop, laundry and pressing service when you need to put things into shape.

After 5:00 P.M., there are parties, dancing, nightclubbing, shows — and magnificent midnight buffets. In addition to this, there are three great meals a day — plus morning bouillon and afternoon tea.

TIME ON SHORE

We ran into differing opinions on whether to sightsee on our own or to take an organized tour. We found we preferred renting a car and spending the day on our own. ■

Sweaters to Knit in a Weekend!

By Cecilia K. Toth

Like the Lennon Sisters who wear them, the four sweaters shown here are pretty variations on a theme. Both the basic pattern and the stripes or novelty stitches that make each one distinctive are simple to do, so these cover-ups are big on style, short on time!

A WORD ABOUT GAUGE...

The importance of gauge in knitting and crocheting cannot be overemphasized. If you do not obtain the proper gauge, your garment will not be the correct size. Always make a swatch at least 4" square before beginning your garment to determine what size needles or hook you will need to obtain the gauge. The size specified in the instructions is the size the designer used to obtain the gauge; it is not necessarily the size you will need. Because your gauge can vary (because of tension, tiredness, etc.), be sure to spot-check your gauge throughout the garment.

An African safari: wild, primitive and fun

An African contrast: Modern Johannesburg, South Africa...

"Everything you shoot is brought back and use. All animals are used completely by the natives, even the tripe. The only waste is zebras. Nobody will touch zebra meat, they wouldn't even feed it to their dogs."

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

It isn't often that a hunter gets the opportunity to employ his talents in the wild and untamed regions of Africa on a safari for big game, but it was an experience that two Midland brothers were able to enjoy last month in Botswana, a state that borders the northern regions of South Africa.

Ron and Hill Britton left for Botswana on Sept. 14 for a 10-day safari and it was nothing like a weekend or week-long hunting expedition in the United States. For one thing, the area was wilder and more isolated than any region of the United States. A second difference is it takes more than two or four men to go on the hunt. Try 25 to 30 men, acting as guides, trackers, skinners, cooks and whatever else is required.

And that's just the beginning of the differences that the two brothers were to discover. They found the trip was to take nearly three days before they were in their camp (the round trip was approximately 39,000 miles) and ready to proceed with the hunting, and that the means of travel consist of three methods: flying, land cruisers and walking.

Even the guns and types of ammunition used were different. On one kill, Ron used a 7mm magnum with 180 grain solid bullet to bring down an impala and that gun, considered a big hunting weapon in the U.S.A., is the absolute smallest allowed on an African safari.

The reason for the bigger guns on a safari is that the animals in Africa are so much tougher and so much more ferocious that an average gun won't bring them down or would take more shots than time would allow to make the kill. The climate and life that these animals live in is what makes them so tough. They must be able to withstand the extremely hot temperatures, survive against preditors like lions and tigers and overcome sickness from a tsetse fly that would drop a domestic steer or bull. These conditions have made their hides into a highly resistant protection that would laugh at the efforts of a samller calibre rifle.

ONE PRECAUTION that the hunting party takes before leaving the base camp is to pack enough food for each member because "you don't know when you're going to get back," said Ron. "You get stuck in the swamp (the land cruiser) every day and you have to winch yourself out. The water in the swamps is sometimes over your boots when your inside the land cruiser.

"You haven't been lost until your lost in Africa at night," continued Ron. "There are no roads and you can hear the hyena, jackals, baboons and cape buffalo all around you."

Ron admitted that he would have found it impossible to find tracks back to the camp at night, but that the trackers always seemed to know which way to go. They would ride on top of the land cruiser and point with a sapling in the direction they wanted you to turn.

"The trackers are very proud of their jobs," said Ron. "They picked up a track on the first day out, and spotted an impala which we shot about 280 yards out."

While Ron and Hill were using their 7mm rifles and other guns up to the size of a 375 magnum, their white hunter (a term in Africa for a professional hunter that is licensed and registered with the state) Harry Selby would stand by with a gun big enough to bring down an elephant with one shot.

"The white hunter never fired a shot," said Ron. "But if he had to, if a member of the hunting party's life was in danger, he had a 458 magnum with a 500 grain solid bullet and an open sight. He never fired a shot, but it was nice to know he was back there. It was very reassuring."

ACCORDING TO Ron, the white hunter is a professional hunter and he is nothing like the stero type of a man living off his wits in a wild land. He is not uncouth but very polished and he can shoot his guns at 550 yards into a half dollar pattern. "Very professional."

Leading the way on a hunt were the trackers, (named Belousi and March) natives who knew the bush and who knew the wildlife within it. They would find sign that an animal had been in a certain area, know what it was and then pick up the track and follow it until it was sighted.

"When the trackers find the animal they drop back behind the gun bearers and the white hunter gets you behind him and he motions with hand signals what you do," said Ron. "We would already have been briefed about what to do, how to shoot certain animals; where to shoot, what shell and what gun, and he would know if it was trophy size or not. We got two greater kudu that were record size, 52 1/2 and 54 1/2 inch horn length. Anything over 50 inches is considered record book size."

But finding the animal and getting it is another matter. Africa isn't all desert as Ron and Hill were to find out. There were areas where there were desert conditions and five miles later it would turn into swamps. Some animals, like the Gemsbok, prefer the drier areas while others like the Leechwe and Reedbuck (all three are a type of antelope in Africa) prefer to roam the swamps, and have no fur on their legs as high as their knees from all the water they wade through.

Before a hunter can even look for any animal in Botswana, he must have a permit for that particular animal, whether they get that animal or not. Then, according to Ron "if you get one, you have to pay a trophy fee."

It's the trophy that the hunters want, not the meat on the animal, but don't go thinking that it goes to waste after the heads and skins have been removed. It doesn't, unless it's a zebra.

"Everything you shoot is brought back and used," said Britton. "All animals are used completely by the natives, even the tripe (intestines). The only waste is zebras. Nobody will touch zebra meat, they wouldn't even feed it to their dogs.

FROM HIS 10 days on the safari, Ron came away with 11 trophy animals. The biggest was a cape buffalo which he brought down with his 358 magnum. He also got a greater kuda, a tsessebe (pronounced with a silent T), a wildebeast, an impala, a leechwe, a reedbuck, a zebra, a warthog, an ostrich and a gemsbok.

Obviously, the thrill and the fun of a safari is the hunt, but it is offset by the danger and roughness of the trip.

"The only thing that bothered me was the thought of getting bitten by snakes, cobra and momba," said Ron. "The momba is a tree snake and there is no anti-toxin. The cobra is a lot like a rattlesnake. It can only strike the length of its body but it can spit its venom into your eyes."

He also didn't like the tsetse fly.

"The tsetse fly looks like a big horse fly," he said, "and they are tough. You can slap one on your arm hard and lift your hand and it'll fly away. If you get about 10 of them on you you can beat yourself to death. They cause sleeping sickness and that isn't fun."

And there were still other things to worry about, like getting scratched to pieces by branches with long thorns, avoiding malaria (the Brittons had to take pills for malaria for two weeks before the trip, throughout the trip and must continue them for eight weeks upon returning) and the almost total isolation of the hunting camp.

"The only way to contact anybody is by high frequency radio," said Ron. "And that didn't work at night because it operated off of the sun."

Asked if he would like to return for a second safari, Ron replied, "I don't know if I would. I think it was probably the greatest thrill of my life but I don't know if I'd want to go back. It's not the fear of my safety, it's the isolation. It's a damn hard trip. A good pair of boots are your best friend. Maybe I would love to go back and take my kids, they'd love it. It's rough, but fun."

"The only thing that bothered me was the thought of getting bitten by snakes, cobra and momba. The momba is a tree snake and there is no anti-toxin. The cobra is a lot like a rattlesnake. It can only strike the length of its' body but it can spit its' venom into your eyes."

President Ceausescu may bend to wind sweeping Romania

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, once considered the most firmly entrenched of all Eastern European Communists, may be headed for the exit.

Western intelligence sources believe he is under rising pressure as a result of domestic economic discontent that for the first time threatens to end his 17-year reign.

The sources emphasized that rumored moves to oust him are apparently not being directed from Moscow, but originate inside the Romanian Communist Party. However, it is obvious the Russians would be happy to be rid of their most independent-minded ally if they could be assured he would be replaced by someone equally orthodox about party dogma, but less resistant to Soviet tutelage in matters of foreign policy.

Until recently, the doughty little Romanian exercised iron-fisted control over party and government. But his previously docile party underlings are now said increasingly to believe that he has become a focus of nationwide frustration over disastrous food and consumer goods shortages.

At a public meeting late last month, he was hooted and shouted down — an unprecedented incident in a country where, even by communist standards, public opinion is normally kept on a very short leash.

The anti-Ceausescu outbreak is being interpreted as both a sign of how serious unrest threatens to become and of his personal unpopularity. Some Communist officials reportedly fear that allowing him to hold onto power too long in these circumstances could infect Romania with the "Polish disease."

Several similarities exist between Romania today and Poland before the wave of strikes last year that gave birth to the Solidarity workers' movement.

One is a staggering load of foreign debt that in Romania, as in Poland, compelled the Bucharest authorities to restrict imports and lean on farmers to produce more for export. The predictable result has been passive resistance in the countryside to deliver food at pegged prices to the state monopolies. As in Poland, food shops in the cities and towns are bare.

Romania recently introduced bread rationing, again following in the Poles' footsteps. In scenes similar to Warsaw, Bucharest's inhabitants spend a large portion of each day queuing up to buy largely unobtainable staples like cooking oil.

Most Romanians admire Ceausescu for his backbone in refusing to be a Soviet yes-man and his skill during many years spent twitting the Russians' nose in avoiding a dangerous showdown with them.

But recently their admiration has been overlaid by criticism of corruption and nepotism within his immediate entourage. A particular target is his wife, Elena, now a deputy prime minister, who is generally considered to be the second most powerful figure of the regime.

That kind of criticism also is reminiscent of Poland where charges of corruption among highly placed communists and their families were a key factor in creating the explosive situation there.

Diplomatic sources said the Romanian leader is under attack by his domestic critics for losing touch with real conditions in the country, relying on ever-bigger and better police crackdowns to keep things under control.

A Western diplomat recently in Romania said that "it's common to hear people charge him with living in a dream world of his and his family's making. He allegedly is fed with wildly-bloated statistics on industrial and agricultural output. At least until recently, he seems to have had no inkling of how much popular discontent was spreading."

The Ceausescus and their two sons are said to live in the lap of a degree of luxury unmatched by party elite anywhere in the communist bloc, including Russia. That too has provoked heightened resentment at a time when ordinary Romanians are living worse than they have in 20 years.

Western officials said that an analogy with Poland should not be carried too far. Romanians have little of the Poles' historic tradition of political dissidence. A Romanian Lech Walesa is unlikely to emerge.

"Ceausescu's overthrow, if and when, would be an internal party affair," an informant said. "There is only a slight chance it would either result from or produce a revolutionary situation."

On the other hand, considering Ceausescu's stature as a Soviet bloc maverick, a change in Bucharest would have a world impact far outweighing Romania's intrinsic importance.

Is this the buyer they're watching for?

Agence France-Presse

TOKYO — A men's wristwatch, billed as the most luxurious in the world and with a price tage of $8.7 million, found a prospective buyer as soon as it went on display at a Tokyo hotel this weekend, the Kyodo News Service reported.

Kyodo did not identify the buyer of the watch, named "Phoebus" after the Greek sun god. The timepiece took the Swiss watchmaker Piaget two years to build.

Its platinum face is studded with 130 small diamonds, while the band is encrusted with 140 small and 16 large diamonds. The diamonds weigh a total of 87.87 carats, according to Kyodo.

The watch will be kept on display in Tokyo until Nov. 29 and will later be exhibited in Europe, the Middle East and the United States, the news agency said.

Does Moynihan have prophetic wit?

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the Democratic wit from New York, is peerless at the art of spoofing and now, with the David Stockman affair, he seems to be something of a prophet, too.

Speaking before President Reagan and other notables at the Gridiron Club dinner last March, he told, with tongue in cheek, how Democrats were secretly infiltrating Republican ranks like the "moles" of the intelligence fraternity.

The senator recalled that he and his wife had Stockman, the future director of the White House Office of Management and Budget, as a boarder in their house while all were at Harvard. At the time, Stockman was a member of the leftwing Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and a Vietnam peacenik.

"Dave was everything you could dream of in a mole," Moynihan sighed. "Corn fed and cowlicked, he was the best boob bait for conservatives ever to come out of the Middle West."

The only trouble, according to the senator, was that Stockman couldn't stop talking about the Viet Cong, American imperialism and the immorality of the Vietnam war.

"So we installed him on the top floor of our house and got him into the Harvard Divinity School," Moynihan said. "There he was taught, of course, that there is no such thing as morality. Now, if there's no morality, it follows there is no immorality. Dave caught on right away and started to think about numero uno.

"We let him in on the (infiltration) plan and assigned him his objective."

Continuing the spoof, the senator said David Broder, politics writer for the Washington Post, then "insinuated" Stockman into the office of Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill, later a GOP presidential candidate.

"Incidentally, Mr. President, Broder is one of us (Democrats), as you would expect since he's on the Washington Post," Moynihan said.

"Next, Stockman wormed his way into the House Republican Conference, then a safe Republican seat in Michigan, and now he's deputy president."

Then, looking at Reagan, the senator said he thought it was "a touch of class" for Stockman to get Edwin Dale from the New York Times to be his spokesperson at OMB.

"The whole Times crowd is with us, of course," he added.

Moynihan concluded the spoof by calling Stockman "peerless" and adding:

"I have never known a man capable of such sustained self-hypnotic ideological fervor. One day he arrives at Harvard preaching the infallibility of Ho Chi Minh. Next thing you know, he turns up in Washington proclaiming the immutability of the Laffer curve."

Stockman may have changed his mind about any immutability, but Reagan found nothing to laugh about the curve his OMB boss threw him with the Atlantic Monthly interview.

Max Leibowitch is the last Jew in Shanghai

By MICHAEL PARKS
Los Angeles Times

SHANGHAI, China — During World War II, Shanghai became the refuge of more than 20,000 Jews who had fled the Holocaust and the earlier pogroms of Europe. Today, only one remains, still harbored protectively by the city that took him in more than 40 years ago.

Max Leibowitch, now 75, is living out his last years in a small, one-room apartment on the second floor of a prewar building off one of Shanghai's main avenues.

A large, knitted red skullcap on his head, he sits in the afternoon sun, hunched over in a big armchair. A shawl is wrapped around his shoulders, a blanket around his legs, and an English-language magazine is on his lap.

"He is the last Jew in Shanghai," said Li Lushou, a cook in the wartime refugee camp who helps care for the old man. "The others left or died, but Max is still here. He survived everything then, when dozens died every day, and he has survived everything since. These Jewish people, they are survivors."

But Max Leibowitch is totally disabled by advanced Parkinson's disease. He cannot move his hands or feet, or even turn in bed without help. He strains to speak, but can only manage unintelligible moans.

Yet he hears and reads, still understanding English, Russian, Yiddish and Chinese. His eyes light up as a visitor talks to him.

"Master Max's memory is still OK," Li said. "He has not forgotten anything, I know, and he does not want to be forgotten here."

He has not, in fact, been forgotten. Li, himself 72, and another man, Ji Wenching, 65, care for him day and night. A Jewish charity in Hong Kong sends money each quarter for his food, medicine and other needs and to pay the two men. Occasionally, there is a visitor from the United States or Europe, usually another survivor of the Shanghai refugee settlement.

"If you survived wartime Shanghai, you could survive anywhere, anything," said Joel Weiss, who lived here from 1935 to 1948 and returned recently from Belgium for a visit. "Shanghai was a jungle where only the most fit survived, and every time a person died, two others competed to take his place.

"We thought this was hell on earth — and then we learned later of the Holocaust in Europe. As terrible as it was, Shanghai was a refuge for us. We were lucky to be here."

Jews fleeing Europe in the 1930s did not need visas for Shanghai, Weiss said, recalling his family's flight from Austria after the German takeover of that country. "Even when America and Britain were closing their doors, requiring visas and restricting entry to Jews, Shanghai was open if you could make it this far," he said. "From 1943, we were forced by Japanese occupation troops to live in a ghetto, really a slum, but this gave us at least the safety and comfort of numbers.

The pictures on the walls of Leibowitch's 8- by 10-foot room and in his photo album reflect those difficult times — the cramped quarters of the Hongkew Jewish settlement, gaunt men and women, crowded hospitals, funerals for those who had died during the night.

But there are also pictures of Max Leibowitch — the fairly well-dressed, English-educated stepson of an established businessman — and of his friends, that also give a sense of youth, vitality, determination.

When 1,000 members of the old Shanghai Jewish community gathered early this year in Oakland, Calif., there was a certain sense of the bittersweet.

"We are the fortunate ones," W. Michael Blumenthal, former secretary of the Treasury and a veteran of Shanghai, told the reunion dinner. "We are the survivors of the historical upheaval in Europe that led to the destruction and personal tragedies of millions. While it was tough and difficult in the little backwater (of wartime Shanghai), we learned some lessons that I hope we have not forgotten and have passed on to our children."

Li also remembers those days. "We had more than 20,000, sometimes 30,000 Jewish people in the refugee area," he said. "Conditions were very crowded, very dirty, not enough food, not enough work, people dying all the time. Yet these Jewish people were very strong, like Max. Most came out alive."

The Leibowitch family had originally come from Poland — Max was born in Lodz in 106 — and first settled in Tianjin, in the small community of White Russians and Jews there. The family had already moved to Shanghai by the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese War in 1937, and Leibowitch's stepfather was well-established as a scrap dealer.

The greatest flow of Jews to Shanghai, which probably had a community of 12,000 to 15,000 Jews until then, came in 1938 and 1939, when more than 17,000 arrived, mostly Germans and Austrians.

"Half my family went to what was then Palestine and still live in Israel, and half came to Shanghai," said Ruth Arbeit, now 57, who came from Hamburg as a girl of 14 in 1938. "My older brothers and sisters went to Palestine, but my parents said I was too young and brought me here.

"We knew we had to leave Germany, and Shanghai needed engineers like my father. We had only the clothes on our backs — the Nazis took all our money and other possessions when we left — and wound up in the ghetto immediately. Looking back, I am not sure how we survived."

But they did — Arbeit emigrating to Mexico after the war, her parents going to Israel. She was back here recently on a visit.

Blumenthal, another survivor and now chairman of Burroughs Corp., returned here on a visit in 1979 and walked through the old Jewish quarter in Shanghai's Hongkew area.

This was the route he took to school past pimps, opium dealers and beggars, Blumenthal told journalists with him. That was the yeshiva — Jewish school — for boys whose families still had money. Here were the main gates to the ghetto, he recalled. One needed a pass to leave and had to be back before they were closed for the night.

The Hongkew district has not changed much, Weiss said, as he walked through the neighborhood in one of Shanghai's poorest sections. "I can't say I feel any nostalgia," he said, pointing out a corner where the bodies of those who had died during the night were stacked for burial. "I was happy to leave."

Postwar emigration was difficult, however, except for those wanting to go to Israel. "If you had relatives in America, you had a chance there," Weiss said. "Otherwise, it might be Hong Kong or Latin America. We were stateless. And nobody really wanted to take us in."

But Shanghai's Jews did manage to leave, and a community that grew from a few hundred in 1915 to perhaps 30,000 with the arrival of White Russian Jews and, later, those fleing the Holocaust, disappeared within a few years.

Leibowitch, however, had come down with Parkinson's disease, a degenerative nerve disorder, just after the war in 1946. That meant there was almost no chance for him to emigrate, though he was given and still holds a passport from the Soviet Union. His family was not Zionist and not interested in going to Israel. His stepfather did leave Shanghai after the Communist takeover in 1949.

"Most Jews left by 1951," Li said. "There were no jobs for them, and most wanted to go to America. A few stayed, mostly to look after the (Jewish community's) affairs or because they were too sick, like Max."

A few Jews from Shanghai and other cities went to work for the new Communist government as foreign experts, and a number of children of mixed marriages remained, taking Chinese citizenship.

Before her death, Leibowitch's mother commended her son, who was not yet paralyzed, to Chen Weiming, a woman who had cared for her, and Chen looked after him for 31 years until her own death in September.

"Master cried for more than three days when Weiming died," Li said. "They were very close after living together for more than 30 years."

Li, who cared for another Jewish woman after the refugee camp closed until her death in 1968, and Ji, who began to look after Leibowitch as his paralysis became almost total, work by turns, cleaning the small room, feeding and bathing Leibowitch, and talking to him throughout the day.

"Ten years ago, when he could still speak, Max would tell us how he was worried that he had been forgotten," Li said. "He would ask, 'Does anyone know I am here, that I am still alive?' He did not want to be the last Jew in Shanghai, but he is — all the others have died."

Cabinet's political personalities clash

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan may contend publicly that the news media has exaggerated tales of bickering and belligerency within his "very happy group," but White House aides concede candidly that the Cabinet continues to be plagued by personality disputes and substandard performances.

Not too far down the road, Reagan is expected to make some important changes in his team. Those changes, aides report, probably will be much more extensive than the routine shift in personnel that occurs after a president has been in office a year or more.

AS AN EXAMPLE of the internal friction that divides top administration officials, a presidential adviser cited a recent squabble between Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker and Office of Management and Budger Director David Stockman.

According to the White House aide, Stockman prepared a schedule of suggested new cuts in welfare, Medicaid and Medicare that could total more than $9 billion and sent the proposal to Schweiker.

Schweiker, described by the White House assistant as "too nice" to serve among throat cutters, gave general approval to the massive slashes in his budget and stated his position in a confidential memo to Stockman.

The next thing Schweiker knew, according to the official, Stockman's office had leaked the proposal to reporters and attributed it to Schweiker. Needless to say, nice guy Schweiker was furious.

AT HIS TUESDAY press conference, Reagan was asked to comment on reports of conflict between Secretary of State Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger as well as stories of dispute between Haig and Richard Allen, special assistant to the president for national security affairs.

The president first contended that "there seems to be too much just loose talk going around but it has been exaggerated out of all reality."

With his usual smile, he added, "There is no animus, personal animus, and there is no bickering or backstabbing going on. We're a very happy group. And the...picture that has been given of chaos and disarray is a disservice to the country and to other countries and allies as well."

But White House aides confirm that there have been disputes between Haig and Weinberger and Allen. Haig, who spent four years in the Nixon White House working with Henry Kissinger, who then was the president's national security adviser, has been especially wary and critical of Allen.

"He watched Kissinger spend four years undercutting (then Secretary of State) Bill Rogers," said a White House official, "and he watched Rogers take it. He is not going to let that happen to him." Kissinger, of course, ended up succeeding Rogers in the senior cabinet post.

BUT THE OFFICIAL also said that Haig tends to be too "contentious" for Reagan. Where Weinberger will accept a decision that runs contrary to his advice and move on to the next problem, the aide reported, Haig will continue to make a major issue of it. That is not a style Reagan admires.

Haig, who barely knew the president when he entered the cabinet, reportedly also feels some insecurity because Weinberger is an old friend and political colleague of Reagan's from California.

Aides also report that following the Haig-Allen flare up, the president let both men know that he wanted no more such conflicts and would keep a watchful eye on them during the coming months.

According to officials Weinberger continues to enjoy the president's utmost confidence while Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, who often is at odds with Stockman over economic and fiscal policy, has emerged as the strongman of the cabinet.

STOCKMAN GOT badly burned the day following the president's press conference when the Washington Post reprinted parts of an Atlantic Monthly article in which Stockman criticized supply-side economics, advocated by Reagan and Regan, as nothing more than "trickle down" policies that favored the rich. The article was based on a series of interviews given the Post's assistant managing editor, William Greider, by Stockman.

The most controversial cabinet member, Interior Secretary James Watt, continues to get high marks in the White House, because he generally reflects Reagan's thinking on conservation and environmental matters, is popular in much of the West and has proved a tremendous fund raiser for the Republicans.

Attorney General William French Smith, who was Reagan's attorney in California, is described as able but too politically naive for the politically votalile Washington scene.

White House aides are less complimentary about Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, who is described as hopelessly over his head, and Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce, who is said to do little homework and appear at meetings and news sessions very poorly prepared.

Philadelphia's way of easing the tax-avoiders problem

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — For 28 years William Gould refused to pay Philadelphia's wage tax, claiming it was "taxation without representation," a popular slogan that spurred the American Revolution.

But Gould, a resident of Moorestown, N.J. and past president of the Non-resident Taxpayers Association who works at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard, couldn't win his revolt.

He finally surrendered Tuesday after city threats to seize his house, his car and his bank account.

He was the latest of hundreds of delinquents to start paying old tax debts under limited amnesty offered in spring by Mayor William Green to recover $23 million due the city. Under amnesty, the city cancels penalties and interest.

The number of wage tax delinquents is estimated at 23,000, dating back 40 years to when the tax was adopted as a temporary 1 percent levy. It is now 4.3 percent.

Today about half of the city's $1 billion budget comes from wage-tax revenues.

Gould, who owed $7,421 since 1953, paid $1,855 down, pledged $150 monthly installments and agreed to have the 4.3 percent tax deducted from future earnings.

By giving in, after losing one legal battle after another all the way to the Supreme Court, he saved about $6,000 in penalties and interest which had been added to his bill.

"I feel the pressure brought on by the city is causing a number of people to submit to the city's wishes to pay the tax," said Gould. "Now that I am a taxpayer, no longer can Philadelphia shun me. They haven't heard the last from me. They are calling the amnesty turnout a victory. That is far from the truth."

Lawyer Michael Radbill, representing NRTA, said "we have a hard-core group of 2,000 to 3,000 who are going to fight to the bitter end," even though his clients were fined $24,000 — $25 each — for continuing to raise what Philadelphia Common Pleas Judge Stanley Greenberg called dead legal issues.

The Supreme Court held in March that non-residents must pay the tax.

Greenberg warned Radbill to stop "taking up the time of the court and misleading your clients," by advising them the tax is illegal. The judge extended the amnesty deadline to Nov. 30. It had expired Nov. 3.

A newspaper ad, signed by NRTA treasurer Caesar Ciccocelli, said NRTA does not endorse amnesty "and recommends that all non-residents continue to hold out for the ultimate elimination of the wage tax."

"We must show the city we will not be intimidated by threats," the ad said.

Assistant City Solicitor William Wolf said more than 2,000 people have taken advantage of the amnesty, which gained impetus during the summer and fall after the city foreclosed on three New Jersey homes and sold two of them.

Action now is under way in the New Jersey Legislature to halt the home seizures.

Philadelphia also attached the bank accounts of 126 Navy Yard workers who owe $500,000 in wage taxes.

"We recently grabbed a car in Jersey, just to show what we can do," Wolf said. "We will go to the Navy Yard and look for cars. If we find property in Pennsylvania it's ours."

Wolf and Deputy City Solicitor Theodore McKee, who heads the tax recovery program, said most of the delinquents live in New Jersey, and nearly all are federal employees.

"A federal law provides that while a federal employee is subject to the local wage-tax the government won't deduct the tax without the employee's permission if he lives in another state," McKee said.

"There are 60,000 federal employees who work in Philadelphia, and more than 55,000 have the wage tax withheld."

Wolf said New Jersey residents "were lulled into believing they could get away without paying it, and they are still trying, but we are suing and we are winning. We mean business. It's bare-knuckle stuff, but we're going to get the taxes owed."

Wolf and McKee are in tax court three days a week, and settling or collecting on more than 225 cases, averaging about $4,000 each.

NRTA president Daniel Ryan, of Pitman, N.J., who works for the Environmental Protection Agency in Philadelphia, said a new lawsuit claims the wage tax is discriminatory because it isn't enforced against entertainers and professional athletes.

"Philadelphia's high-handed political tactics will not be tolerated any more," Ryan said in a recent newspaper interview in which he claimed the city is strangling the non-resident. "The time has finally come for Philadelphia politicians to face the fact that there are no more free rides on non-residents' backs."

Republicans in the Pennsylvania Legislature are pushing bills that would reduce the tax on non-residents from 4.3 percent to 2.9 percent, and Ryan said he is confident they will pass.

"If those bills become law, the loss in tax revenue to Philadelphia is estimated at more than $100 million, which could force a huge hike in real estate taxes or a curtailment of vital services in the state's largest city," McKee said.

"Giving a non-resident a lower tax than the city resident working in the same office would encourage people to leave Philadelphia, and further deplete the city's tax base."

Tokyo loses many from city

By GREG GROSS
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Shunichi Suzuki is governor of Tokyo, where families enter lotteries for a chance to live in public housing and drinking water may be rationed in dry weather.

So perhaps he should be grateful that people are fleeing his massive metropolis for smaller outlying cities in Japan. But he's not.

Instead, Suzuki says he's looking at the possible creation of new vertical communities in the heart of one of the largest urban communities on Earth.

"The communities that used to exist in the center core of the city have virtually disappeared," Suzuki said. "What we'd like to do as the government of Tokyo is to find ways and means of attracting these people to come back."

He made his comments at a closing news conference here for the biennial Japan-American Conference of Mayors and Chamber of Commerce Presidents, held for the past four days.

People are leaving Tokyo at a disturbing rate, Suzuki said.

The population of Tokyo's center core has dropped by about 300,000 in the last five years. Another 65,000 have left the outer metropolitan zone within the last few years.

Bill Bragg's Dallas musuem broadcasts history

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — It's crammed with curios from every decade of broadcasting — a 1919 cylinder record player, tiers of varying televisions, the first type of transistor radio, and circa 1981, Walter Cronkite's microphone.

Bill Bragg's grade-school passion for all things broadcast has been transformed into the Texas Broadcast Museum, housed in a lofty warehouse on the outskirts of downtown Dallas.

"This is a hear-it, see-it, do-it place," the 34-year-old Bragg said. "It's 5,488 square feet, and just 10 square feet of that is under glass. But museum is really a poor word for this place. That implies a hands-off attitude. This is a hands-on museum."

The fruit of Thomas Alva Edison's ingenuity is strewn throughout the spacious room, in chronological order. Ornate victrolas. The primitive predecessor of the dictaphone. Microphones used in old radio shows. The first televisions and the latest videotape machines.

Bragg has even devised a jingle in honor of the inventor: "Dear Thomas Alva Edison, you'd be proud to see 'em. The inventions that you gave to us at the Texas Broadcast Museum."

Edison's personal microscope — used to inspect diamond phonograph needles — sits under glass in a display case.

Nestled in the same case are Bragg's dearest treasures — personal effects of the late rock'n'roll star Bill Haley, who died in Harlingen, Texas, this year.

Haley's guitar, used to play the familiar riffs of "Rock Around the Clock," lies in the glass next to Haley's trademark pointy black shoes — size 8E.

"It's Bill's oldest and favorite guitar," Bragg said reverently. "See where his pick has made a little dent in it? I didn't have a record player when I was younger, but my neighbor did. He used to blast 'Rock Around the Clock' out his window. It was the only record he had and I loved it.

Study: elderly more afraid of criminals than necessary

By TOM EASTHAM
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON – Fear of street violence is paralyzing old people in American cities, a new study confirms. But its authors suggest their worries may not actually be warranted — because the elderly are victimized less than younger people.

The federally-funded study discovered three out of four elderly residents limit their activities — with 78 percent feeling they are more likely to be victims of robbers, muggers and rapists.

As a result the oldsters are staying home, avoiding certain areas and buying locks, lights, alarms, window grills, dogs and weapons.

But, in fact, the study found such fears open to question. All evidence shows the elderly are victims significantly less than younger persons — and that the older they get the less chance they will suffer a crime, it concluded.

Claiming "victimization of the elderly is not as prevalent as it is often depicted in the media," the authors say their findings raise serious questions about whether cities should undertake major programs to improve police services for the elderly.

However, the study does not come up with clear explanations as to why older people, who are most vulnerable and living in fear, are victimized less. Is it because robbers, muggers and rapists are staying away from the elderly — or because the elderly are staying away from them?

"It has been frequently stated that fear of crime may represent a form of indirect victimization which can lead to serious restrictions on the elderly's daily activities and greatly diminish the quality of their lives," the study comments. "It has also been suggested that the precautions taken by older persons in response to their fears may have a major influence on their level of victimization."

There is no doubt that fear of crime is all-pervasive among the city-dwelling oldsters, or that the fear increases with age and has grown faster among old people than young ones. Surveys show the elderly fear crime more than health, money or loneliness problems.

But the study acknowledges that numerous questions remain as to the validity of their fear and its effect on them and on crime patterns, commenting: "A greater understanding of these issues is essential if successful efforts are to be made in alleviating the elderly's fear and helping them cope more effectively with the related anxieties."

At a time when city budgets across the country are under extreme pressure, the study's results could have an effect on plans to bolster police protections for older citizens — an issue that has been getting increased urban attention in recent years as crime rates have climbed.

The authors do not argue outright against putting large amounts of police resources into programs designed solely for the elderly. But they suggest the elderly might be better served by improvements in overall police effectiveness and in the community as a whole.

"The elderly have quite positive attitudes toward the police," the study states, "and they appear to be reasonably well satisfied with the quality of police services provided them.

"From their perspective, the need to tailor police services to fit the particular needs and requirements of the elderly does not appear to be as pressing as it is sometimes depicted."

Funded by a $229,000 grant from the Justice Department, the study, "Police Service Delivery to the Elderly," was carried out by three scholars at the University City Science Center here. They examined the views of 913 elderly residents of two unidentified cities — one north and one south — and questioned 893 police officers.

When asked if they were more afraid at home or on the streets, 80 percent of those interviewed named the streets, only eight percent their homes.

"The elderly feel more vulnerable while away from home — they perceive a much greater likelihood of being robbed or assaulted in public places than at home, and many fear their homes will be burglarized while they are out," the study says.

But such fears do not square with what actually happened to the elderly respondents. Those who were victimized reported suffering more crimes at home than on the street.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Method may reduce need for surgery

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother had her gallbladder removed many years ago, and now I'm told that I have gallstones, too. I've heard there is a new method to get rid of gallstones without surgery. If there is anything to this, I'd like to learn more about it. — Kate, Boston, Mass.

Dear Kate: You are probably referring to the use of chenodexoycholic acid — or CDCA — to dissolve gallstones, and the method does look promising. A study of more than 900 patients who were treated with CDCA indicates that a sizable number had complete or partial dissolution of their gallstones over a two-year period.

However, some questions remain unanswered, and the study is continuing. One question has to do with whether patients have to continue taking CDCA indefinitely, even after their gallstones have dissolved, to prevent a recurrence. Another question is how to be certain that all gallstones have actually dissolved. And finally there is the question about the significance of side effects which, so far, do not seem to pose a serious problem.

The use of CDCA, if it is eventually approved, will be especially good news for people for whom surgery is not advisable because of advanced age or illness. Others who use CDCA but do not respond to treatment can still undergo surgery at some future time.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is on his school's ice hockey team and is required to wear a face mask. He says this limits his vision and interferes with his game. I know there's a lot of body-checking in hockey, but the players are protected against that. Do you see any reason for a face mask to be mandatory? — Russ, Muskegon, Mich.

Dear Russ: I can't judge whether or not your son's vision is impaired by use of a face mask; it may simply be his subjective reaction to it. But I do know that many top-notch hockey players wear them and they seem to do OK.

Your son should be more concerned about the possibility of having his vision impaired by an injury if he does NOT wear a face mask. One Canadian study showed a dramatic decrease in eye injuries among high school and college players after face masks became mandatory. I would much rather have my son's vision temporarily impaired by use of a face mask while he played hockey, than permanently impaired because of an injury that could have been avoided.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine had surgery for cancer of the ovary and is now receiving radiation treatments. Is there any reason not to use chemotherapy? — Lois

Dear Lois: If your friend is not receiving chemotherapy, it is because it is not indicated in her particular case. In general, ovarian cancer is treated surgically. Chemotherapy and radiation are used when needed.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D, 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

It's bad year for whoopers

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's been a bad year for whooping cranes.

Not only were the endangered birds hit by weather, fire, predators and power lines, but the course of love did not run true for two whoopers that scientists had hoped would mate.

As a result, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said Friday that the number of the rare birds probably fall below the 124 counted in the wild and in captivity in 1980.

Scientists noted, however that research efforts to save the birds have advanced and their number remains far above the 15 whoopers known to exist in 1941, when the fight against extinction began.

"Once you get used to dealing with whooping cranes, it's like that," said Scott Derrickson, a Fish and Wildlife researcher. "It's three steps forward and two steps back. You just hope for the best."

During 1981, Derrickson said, the birds had trouble finding food because of late snow on the ground as they returned North. "Chicks just starved to death after hatching," he said.

The birds' year also saw increased egg losses to predators and destruction by a fire of 70 percent of the cranes' nesting habitat at the Wood Buffalo National Park in Canada.

Derrickson said four chicks reached flying age, but that two whoopers died after hitting power lines, including one of the chicks, and several others were lost to other causes. As a result, he said, the population probably will drop although a full count will not be available until next month.

Both important: energy and the environment . . .

let's keep our balance.

We Americans have built a great nation through productive use of the country's vast energy resources. Sometimes, though, things have gotten out of balance when long-term effects on our environment were overlooked.

Today most of us recognize the need to preserve the quality of our air and land and water, now and in the future. But the pendulum has swung too far.

At your electric company, we are faced with some laws which raise the cost of electricity without any significant benefit to the environment.

For example, a 1977 amendment to the Clean Air Act requires that plants using low-sulfur coal emit less sulfur dioxide than those which use high-sulfur coal. This requires more air quality control equipment on plants that use low-sulfur coal than is necessary to protect the environment. Ultimately, this will penalize our customers by increasing the cost of electricity from our future low-sulfur coal plants.

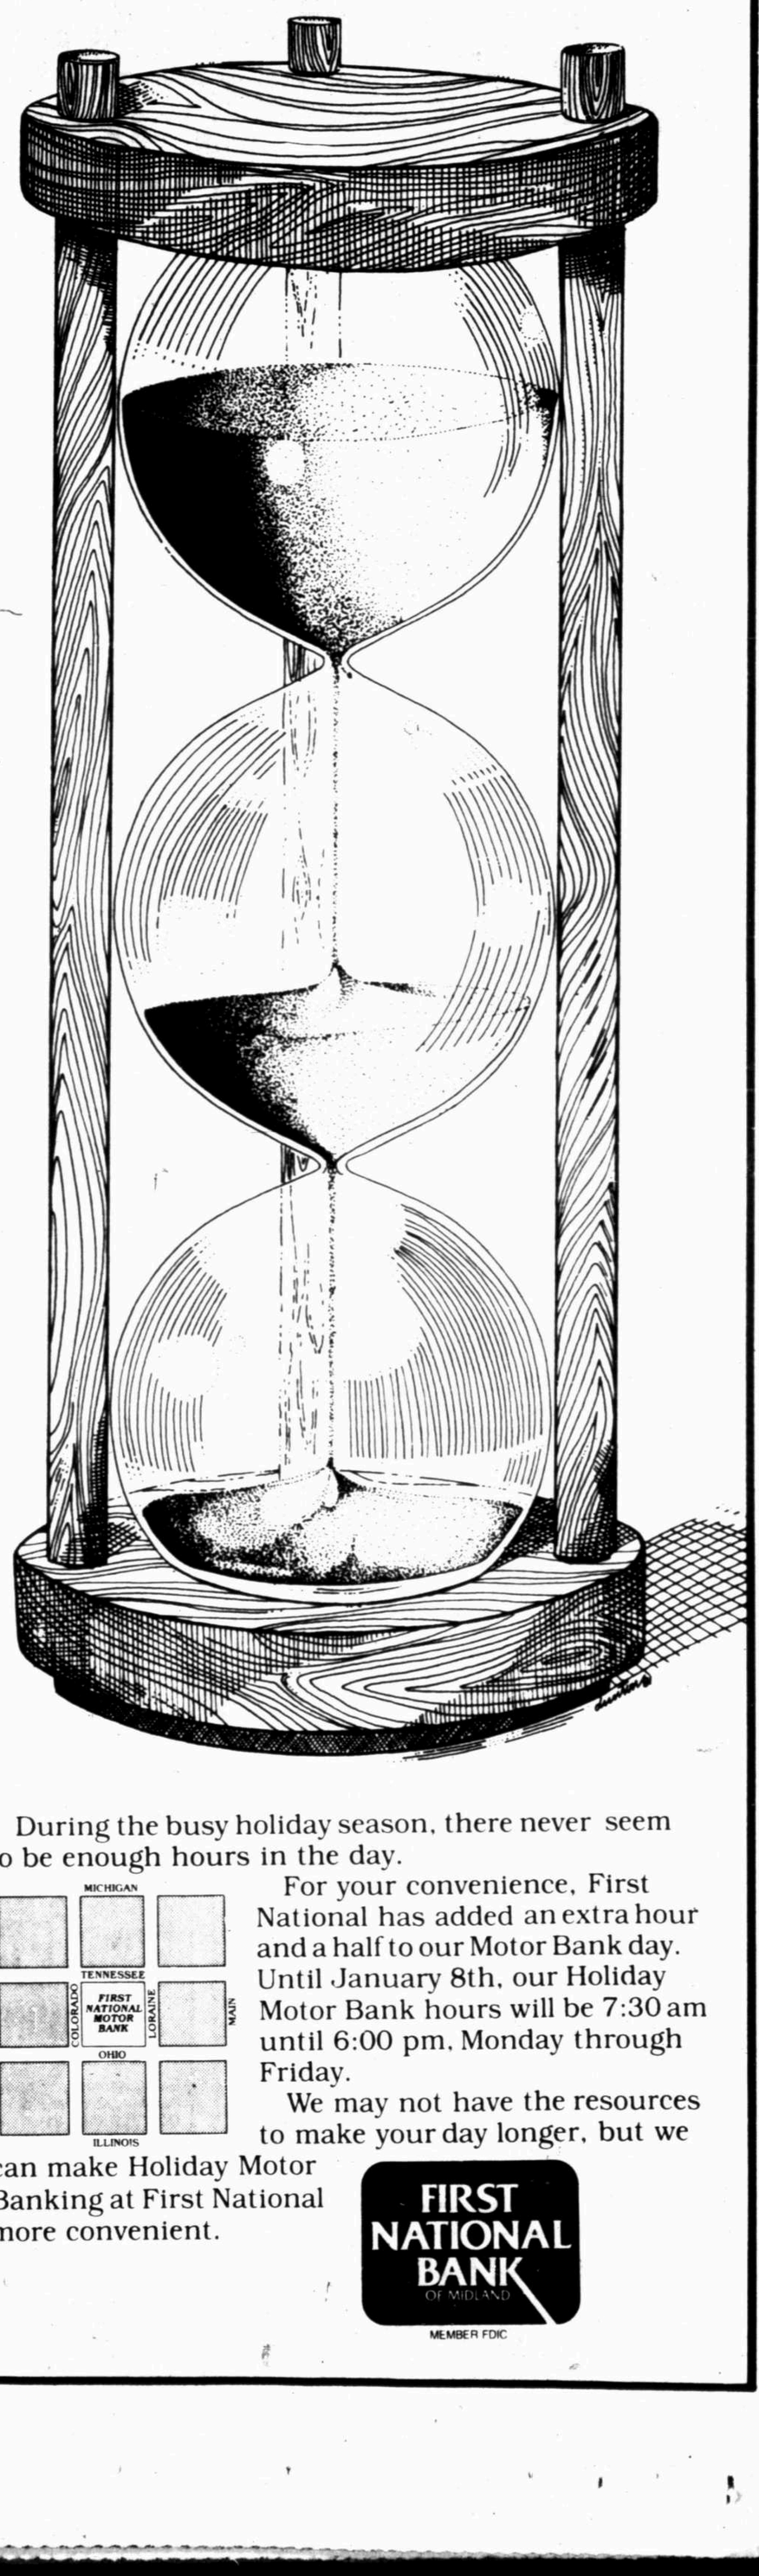

There's a lack of balance here that's costing all of us. Only the U.S. Congress can put it right by changing our laws so that they can be applied intelligently and made to work. Good regulations help keep a balance — let's get the benefits we're supposed to, and be sure they're worth the costs.

POSITIVE THINKING

Great feat is to bring out potential strength

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Everyone has more inner strength than he realizes. In fact, it is doubtful whether we use half, maybe even a quarter, of the strength we possess. Actually it is a pity how we settle for living on a trickle of power when there have been built into us reservoirs of strength that are almost incredible. Sometimes these inner power sources emerge under crisis. Human beings perform amazing feats in crisis conditions — things they could not possibly do otherwise.

A truck overturned on a young boy, pinning him to the ground. A crowd gathered. Efforts were made to lift the truck off him, but to no avail.

Then along came a fair-sized man. He never said a word. He saw the situation and responded in depth. He put his shoulder under the truck and lifted it just enough to allow the boy to be pulled free.

Later when he tried to do the same thing apart from a crisis situation he could not budge it. Where was the strength? Outside of him? Of course not. It was deep inside and it was activated when need arose.

It could be that the greatest achievement in life is to know how to bring out of one's self the potential strength that is there. It can be believed out, or practiced out; some pray it out.

Amazing indeed the inherent strength people have. Why then do we go crawling through life on hands and knees, afraid of tough situations and hard problems, or tragic occurrences?

The newspaper carried a story about a pilot in a small plane in northwestern Ontario. The pilot set his little plane down on its pontoons in a lake in a remote area. He stepped out of the cockpit onto the pontoon. The propeller was still turning as he expected to remain there only briefly. On the wet pontoon he slipped. The propeller struck him a blow on the head, swirled him around and toppled him unconscious into the water.

Apparently the cold water revived him and he came to. He tried to climb out of the water back onto the pontoon when he discovered to his horror that the whirling propeller had cut off his right arm below the shoulder. He was bleeding profusely.

Far from civilization, in a lake, arm cut off, lifeblood coursing out... What a situation for exploring this inner strength idea we have been discussing. What would you do? Panic? Well, that would hardly help.

What did he do? He says, "I sent up a quick prayer and it was answered." Painfully he pulled himself up onto the pontoons. Praying he would not black out he struggled into the cockpit and after several tries fashioned a tourniquet with a piece of rope. He lifted the plane off the water and flew 15 miles to a point where another pilot flew him to a hospital. The life of the 28-year-old pilot was saved although his arm was gone.

The newspaper writer commented on the incredible power that the man demonstrated in the crisis he experienced. Built-in power was the answer.

That power is built into you too. Few persons ever face a situation such as this pilot's, but to some degree everyone will face crises requiring more power than we feel capable of delivering. But you have that extra power within you.

Never say, "I can't handle it." For you can. Indeed you can handle whatever you must. Hold the thought that you are stronger than you think — that you have what it takes.

Draw on your built-in power. It is there waiting to be used.

FTC ends probe of pricing practices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission has ended a six-year-long probe into pricing practices in the women's and children's apparel industry.

The agency said Thursday that since the investigation began in 1975 it has noted a decline in resale price maintenance, a practice in which manufacturers take sanctions against retailers who sell their products at discount prices.

The FTC said the probe was ended after four firms signed consent orders agreeing not to engage in the practice. The firms are Interco Inc., Huck-a-Poo Sportswear Inc., Jonathan Logan Inc. and Motherhood Maternity Shops Inc.

CONSUMER TIPS

Check out freezer plan before signing contract

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau
of the Permian Basin, Inc.

With both husband and wife working, performing daily chores such as grocery shopping can be a hassle. More time is spent eating out because the refrigerator is constantly empty. For this reason, freezer food plans are becoming popular.

A freezer food plan is a service that stocks either the freezer you own, or a freezer the company sells you (usually of commercial quality), with a variety of foods on a regular basis. The plan is tailored to your family size and provides enough food for a family meal once a day. Name-brand meats and seafood, as well as vegetables, fruits and juices, are usually included.

Better Business Bureau files across the United States contain many complaints from consumers who have signed contracts for freezers and the food to fill them. The principle cause for complaint in regard to these plans has been the exorbitant price of the freezer, and sometimes an additional charge of several hundred dollars for "membership" in the food-buying plan.

Bob Harmonson, president of Family Food Plan, states a customer should not have to pay extra for membership dues if he wants the convenience of using a freezer food service. He states delivery costs and extended service policies on the appliances bought from the company likewise should not cost the customer extra.

Other complaints about food-freezer plans mention companies that failed to deliver food and companies that went out of business shortly after installing the equipment. Doing business with a well-established company that has a good reputation for providing service is important for customer satisfaction according to Harmonson. He also suggests a prospective customer should ask for references and check the company's reliability with the Better Business Bureau.

Before signing up for a food-freezer plan, wise customers should get the answers to five questions:

1. Do you really need and can you afford a freezer? A freezer takes up space and costs a lot of money to operate, as high as $65 a year (based on a 16 cubic ft. manual defrost freezer).

2. Do you know of anyone who is currently participating in a freezer food plan? Always ask the salesperson for satisfied customers in your community and then check with them before signing the contract.

3. Does the company offering the freezer also supply the food? Be skeptical of a company that does not have its own food processing plant. Firms which use independent suppliers merely add another link in the distribution chain which increases the cost to you. Often the offer of food is an excuse for selling an expensive freezer. The plan's promoters may sell your contract to a finance company and skip town, leaving you with an empty freezer to pay for.

4. Do you clearly understand the financing arrangements? The cost of credit is built into the cost of goods and services. So be sure to find out the exact cost of the freezer, all interest, carrying, packaging and delivery charges, the initial cost of stocking the freezer and how much food you have to buy before you can cancel the plan. Figure out for yourself whether you can get a better deal by shopping around for a freezer and paying cash for frozen foods at the supermarket.

5. Does the contract list in detail the exact quantities of food you will receive? Check to see whether you are paying for meat before or after it is trimmed. Also, be wary of buying meat sight unseen. The contract's promise of "satisfaction guaranteed" may be worthless.

Harmonson also suggests you check to see whether the firm is a current member of the American Association of Meat Processors. This organization requires their members to abide by a code of ethics which discourages the use of claims of monetary savings, exaggerating the advantages, conveniences and economics of freezer food plans, and representing that the quantity or selection of food is adequate for the purchaser's entire requirements by the salesperson.

If time is a resource you seem to lack, then you may be interested in the convenience and service a freezer food plan offers. By checking all the facts before you buy, then your satisfaction is guaranteed.

Where's water? 'Witches' hold Y-shaped key

EDITOR'S NOTE: Water, water, everywhere — but where is it? It's a question asked often in the water-thirsty Southwest. But one thing the area doesn't lack is people who believe they can find where the water is. They're called dowsers — or water witches.

By JIM McELROY
Associated Press Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Alphonse Hauer, 72, uses a nylon fork.

Paul V. Shannon, 74, uses a piece of galvanized wire.

Charles Sanders, 67, knew a man who used his thumb. "Me, I feel it in the palm of my hands."

What they feel is the presence of water many feet below the ground they are walking on. They are all private practitioners of the art of dowsing. They are dowsers, water witches.

Does dowsing work?

Scientists find no basis for it. Dr. Clay Smith, geology professor at the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology, says, "I'm not convinced."

He's tried it himself. "One old fellow cut a willow fork for me. He showed me how to hold it. You hold it in such a way that it's a strain on your muscles.... Your arms get tired. When you walk across a field you can feel it pull down. But I couldn't relate it to where I was, so much as the way I was holding my arms. I got tired."

Dr. Daniel Stephens, New Mexico Tech hydrologist, says one-half of 1 percent of water witches may have a special gift. But both he and Smith say the key factor in most dowsing success stories is the experience of the dowser.

"They're very astute observers. So they remember where they saw a set of conditions, drilled and got a well. Then they see the same conditions and say, 'This is the place.'

"I suspect they would do exactly as well if they didn't bother to carry the stick."

At any rate, there are an abundance of dowers in these water-hungry lands of the Southwest, and many of them carry the experience of many years.

Hauer has been dowsing for half a century. "Some people laugh at it. They would say it's a lot of baloney. How can a person locate subterranean water with an object, stick or something?

"I would probably feel the same way, if I didn't have faith in it. To imagine somebody holding a stick to get a reaction from a source between you, the instrument and the source, that's hard to comprehend. I would probably think somebody was trying to pull my leg or something. But it will actually work."

Dowsers also claim they can find minerals, and some say they can even find missing people.

The prevalence of the technique is difficult to gauge, either by those in the business or water experts.

Francis West, a hydrologist with the New Mexico Natural Resources Department, says there's no doubt people use water witchers but that there is no way to know how many wells are found by dowsing.

However, Martha Rose of The American Society of Dowsers, Inc., in Danville, Vt., says "it's definitely on the increase in view of what's happening to our water resources."

She says more and more people want to check with a dowser before paying "an immense sum of money to a well driller. Some people like to use it as a hedge."

Membership in the organization, the only national group of its kind, is steadily increasing with 2,200-2,500 members in 40 chapters in 20 states, she says. "There are many, many, many more dowsers than members of our organization.

"For some people it's kind of a closet thing. They dowse and believe in dowsing but don't talk about it because they don't want people to think they're kooky."

In describing how owsing works, Hauer says, "When you walk over an area, you have no way of knowing what's in the ground. The instrument is used to let you know you've located something you're in search of."

While agreeing that dowsing works, they differ on why.

Hauer calls it a gift, something one is born with and cannot be learned. Sanders says it's psychic, everyone has the power and needs only to be taught how to use it. Shannon, who believes the reason why has not been fully answered, says his theory is more scientific, having to do with the natural fields in the earth.

"My outlook is a lot different than the majority," he says. "It's all working with body fields and natural fields of the earth. It's not hocus pocus."

In one of two books he's written on dowsing, Shannon says a great many dowsers have gotten carried away with concentration or extrasensory perception as the reasons it works.

"This tends to make a great many people think of all dowsers as a bunch of crackpots, and I can't say that I blame them," he wrote.

Hydrologist Stephens says, "I would guess in 99 percent of the cases, people who call themselves water witches have a fair savvy of the land they work on and an understanding of hydrology. If you take a dowser out of his terrain, I would guess he wouldn't be able to perform as well."

Dowsers also claim they can not only find water, but predict its depth, amount and quality.

"If a dowser says the water is at 90 feet, 100 gallons a minute, that's just malarky," says Stephens, adding he believes such predictions are based on experience.

Inventive vending

History's earliest known vending machine dispensed holy water for a five-drachma coin and was found in Egyptian temples dated around 215 B.C. Today, the metal boxes are used for almost anything and found almost everywhere. (AP Laserphoto Graphics by Joe Yeninas)

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Dianne Sauder remembers the last time she bought anything from a vending machine.

"It was...five years ago," says the 31-year-old Boulder, Colo., health food store manager. It was in a laundromat, and it was the last time she had a soft drink.

But Miss Sauder is unusual. She is not among the millions of Americans who chew the gum, drink the coffee, smoke the cigarettes, munch the crackers, crunch the chips or eat the candy, ice cream and cupcakes that come out of those metal boxes.

Americans put an average of $65.39 each in vending machines last year, 190,000 coins every minute of every day for total sales of more than $13.8 billion.

That includes more than $3 billion for cigarettes, $2.7 billion for canned cold drinks, $1.1 billion for packaged candy and snacks, $1.2 billion for bottled cold drinks and $980 million for cold drinks in cups.

Vending machines have been around for at least 2,000 years, but it has only been in the last 20 years that Americans have come to rely on them for everything from soup to nuts, everywhere from airports to zoos.

History's earliest known vending machine dispensed holy water for a five-drachma coin in Egyptian temples around 215 B.C., and machines offered cigars and candy in this country before the turn of the century. But vending machines didn't really come into their own until after World War II, when sophisticated new equipment was developed to keep machines working and from being cheated by slugs.

There are an estimated 4 million vending machines in the United States: in schools, factories, stores, even coal mines and funeral homes.

Soft drink machines on military bases and in college fraternity houses dispense beer instead of soda. Bait shops have machines that let after-hours fishermen buy packages of fresh worms. And flower shops have machines that let wayward husbands pick up corsages to soften their homecomings after a late night out with the boys.

Arthur Yohalem, editor of Vending Times magazine, says Americans today rely on vending machines the way they used to rely on neighborhood merchants such as the iceman, the flower lady, the grocer and the tobacconist.

"Today, kids all grew up with vending machines," he says. "It's natural to them."

However, he says, the nation's more than 5,000 vending machine owners and operators — from huge companies like Canteen to the lone guy who has a half-dozen machines he services on the way home from his regular job each night — are on hard times.

The increase in vending sales has not kept up with inflation in recent years, Yohalem says, because more people are out of work now. For instance, he says, vending sales in the Midwest are closely tied to how many auto workers are on the job — and buying things out of auto plant vending machines.

The more business booms, he says, the more overtime workers put in, and the more often they grab a cup of coffee or a sandwich from vending machines.

Walter Reed of the National Automatic Merchandising Association says this is where every dollar you put into a vending machine goes: 45.5 cents for the product, 52.4 cents for operating expenses and 2.1 cents for profit.

Those operating expenses, Reed says, go to salaries for the people who service the machines, replacements or parts for machines, insurance, service vehicles, warehouse and garage space, taxes and corporate overhead.

Typically, he says, the owner of the building gets more money from a machine just for allowing it on the premises than the owner of the machine does for installing, stocking and servicing it.

Reed says industry surveys show that vending machines work properly about 98 percent of the time, and few people actually kick or pound on recalcitrant machines.

However, Reed concedes a certain amount of consternation among vending moguls who recently gathered for an industry conference at a Jackson Hole, Wyo., hotel, where the soft drink machine outside their conference room clearly showed the dents of a sharp and angry cowboy boot.

Reed also admits there is widespread belief that people resent vending machines because they are so impersonal, but he says preliminary results of an industry survey show the opposite.

"People expressed an idea, novel to us, that they like vending machine food service because it lets them get away from other people when they're eating," he says. "You're not obligated to sit down with someone and shoot the breeze."

But Martha Mapes, a nutrition specialist at Cornell University, says people who consistently buy food from vending machines and eat alone are missing the "sociability" of eating with other people. She says they also eat more quickly, while studies have shown it is better for nutrition and dietary habits to eat slowly.

Ms. Mapes says her biggest complaint, however, is not about vending machines but about the "junk food" in them — foods very high in salt, sugar, fat and caffeine.

In places where vendors have replaced candy with granola snacks and cupcakes with whole wheat sandwiches, she says, sales have actually gone up, not only because people want more healthful foods but also because they are willing to pay more for them.

Salt content will soon be easier to see

WASHINGTON (AP) — American consumers, particularly the 60 million with borderline or high blood pressure, soon may find it easier to watch for salt in the foods they buy.

The head of the Food and Drug Administration said that by next March, 40 percent of all processed foods are expected to list sodium content on their labels.

That would be a three-fold increase from the 13 percent sodium labeling rate last April when the FDA began a voluntary drive to get the food industry to list sodium content on labels, Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes Jr. recently told the National Health Council.

Salt, or sodium chloride, is an essential part of everyone's diet, but most Americans consume twice as much as they need or more.

Hayes said a survey by the FDA's Bureau of Foods indicates that by next March, "at least 40 percent" of the industry will divulge the sodium content.

Although it is not known if salt causes high blood pressure, cutting back on salt can lower blood pressure, Hayes said.

Hayes said the food industry's response to his drive "reinforces my faith in the willingness of the private sector to meet head-on an important public health challenge."

Reaching thousands of feet below the earth's surface, six drilling rigs and hundreds of pumping units combine to find and produce about 20,000 barrels of oil a day at the Huntington Beach, Calif., field operated by Aminol USA, Inc. Over the past 40 years, nearly 500 million barrels of oil have been produced from the 1,700 wells drilled there. Aminoil is the nation's third largest independent petroleum exploration and production company.

Oil giant plans to leave Libya

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp. is ending its oil-producing operations in Libya, where it has been pumping crude since 1955, but four competitors say they don't have plans to follow the lead of the world's largest oil company.

Exxon provided no explanation for the decision, announced Thursday. The Libyan goverment was notified of the plan last week, the company said, but there has been no statement from Libya.

The company removed the dependents of its 83 American workers in Libya last summer after United States Navy fighter jets downed two Libyan planes in a skirmish off the Libyan coastline.

Spokeswoman Sarah Johnson said Exxon was not sure how man Americans are working there now.

Exxon said it was negotiating with the Libyan government for a complete withdrawal of its oil-producing operations and had relinquished its right to produce crude there.

Oil market specialists said they knew of no special circumstances or recent events that would prompt Exxon to leave Libya. Some suggested the company decided it simply did not need Libyan oil and preferred to avoid the risk of political upheaval in that troubled North African nation.

Analysts estimated Exxon's oil liftings from Libya at between 10,000 and 20,000 barrels a day, or between 1 percent and 2 percent of its worldwide production. Exxon declined to disclose its recent rate of production in Libya.

Exxon hinted in its official statement that it was under no political pressure to withdraw.

"It is the desire of Exxon and, we believe, that of the Libyan authorities, that Exxon's withdrawal be accomplished in an amicable and orderly manner," the company said.

Marshall Thomas, the markets editor for Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, a trade journal, said he would not be surprised to see other American oil companies following Exxon's lead.

Mobil Corp. has no plans to withdraw from Libya, spokesman John Flint said.

Conoco Inc., which also produces oil in Libya under an agreement with the Libyan government, said it had no plans for withdrawing its operations or removing any of the approximately one dozen American workers there.

"Conoco makes an almost constant review of its activities around the world, and adds in new facts as they become known," said spokesman John Gehbauer in Houston. "Other companies' actions are a part, and only a part, of what we look at as we decide what is best for our company."

The Occidental Petroleum Co. said it would not be terminating its Libyan operations.

A spokesman for Marathon Oil Co. was quoted as saying his company was "keeping abreast" of the situation.

Libya's oil is among the most highly priced in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and the country is seen as politically unstable.

Alvin Silber, an oil analyst for Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in New York, said he believed the worsening relations between the United States and Libya was a factor.

"Obviously, it's an increasingly unstable situation in Libya," Silber said, adding that Exxon's withdrawal "signals that they don't see the situation getting any better."

Natural gas prices to rise

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers will be paying 50 percent more for natural gas in 1985 whether Congress decides to speed up the pace of price decontrol or not, a new study says.

The long-awaited report by the Reagan administration predicted Thursday that the average residential bill will be $690 in 1985, compared to $460 currently.

While prices will be the same in 1985, the current decontrol program will feature a one-year price jump in 1985 of 33 percent compared to more even increases in prices under a faster decontrol plan, the study said.

For this and other reasons, speeding up the decontrol schedule would benefit the country, the Energy Department study said, even though such an action would cost consumers $46 billion in higher prices over the next three years.

The study, which does not take into account the impact general inflation will have on gas prices, predicts that the average consumer paying $460 in 1981 for natural gas will see that price rise $20 a year under current law until 1985 when the price would shoot up by $170.

Under an accelerated decontrol plan favored by the Reagan administration, prices would rise much quicker but more evenly over the next three years, also hitting $690 in 1985.

Consumer groups attacked the report as presenting a totally unrealistic view of energy prices.

The Energy Action Education Foundation called the report an "economic fairy tale" based on a "cynical manipulation of data."

Energy Action Director Edwin Rothschild said his group estimated that when general inflation is taken into account, the $690 projection for 1985 becomes $1,111.

He also disputed that there would be no difference in price between current decontrol plans and an accelerated decontrol schedule. He said his group estimated that accelerated decontrol would add $598 to the average residential bill in 1985.

"What the administration is trying to do is convince people that the impact of natural gas decontrol will be mild when they know differently," said Scott Hempling, legislative representative of the Citizen-Labor Energy Coaltion.

Under current law, the price of natural gas from wells which begin producing after April 20, 1977 is being increased until Jan. 1, 1985, when all controls on this so-called new gas will be removed.

However, gas in production before April 20, 1977 — about 40 percent of all supplies — is scheduled to remain under controls forever. The Reagan administration wants to decontrol both old and new gas supplies in 1985.

Energy Secretary James Edwards said Monday that President Reagan remains committed to speeding up natural gas decontrol and will forward his recommendations to Congress next spring.

Reagan dropped plans to present his recommendations this year after a meeting last week with Republican congressional leaders who told him they did not want to take up the divisive issue now.

Making the best there is even better

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Oil Editor

Many years ago — it seems like a life time — I was a student at "Benning School for Boys," Infantry Officer Candidate School, at Fort Benning, Ga.

One phase of the training has always stuck in my mind. It was based on a series of films presented by the the leadership instructors. Each featured a shavetail lieutenant in a combat situation requiring a decision. The pictures ended with similar scenes, in which the young officer pondered his options. As the scenes faded from the screen, the room lights would flash on and an instructor would demand, "What are you going to do now, Lieutenant?" The class then assumed the role of the young "butter bar" and discussed the problems and options involved, then made his decision for him. It was a good way to develop problem solving skills.

One thing stands out in my memory about these films. It is the funny, kind of puckered-up look of perplexity on that Lieutenant's face as each show came to an end. It was always the same. Grunts at the Infantry School had a name for that expression. Translated into polite language it is the "who urinated in the Lister bag?" look. (A Lister bag being a large GI conatiner for potable water.)

Since becoming The Reporter — Telegram's oil editor, that same expression has formed my own face several times. I didn't need a mirror to tell me it was there, I could feel it. And as it took shape I could hear a little voice asking, "What are you going to do now, oil editor?"

It's happening again, but this time I don't know how to quiet that nagging little voice. I know something must be done, but I'm not sure what. I'm hoping you will help me out.

When I took this job I was told the Reporter — Telegram's oil news had once been regarded as the very best, but because of some unforeseeable events and problems the quality had fallen. As a result, readers were dissatisfied with what they were getting.

I was told that The R—T's readership is very demanding, almost picky at times. I was told that if respect for the R—T's oil news section was to be restored, a tough audience would have to be satisfied. It was obvious that the person taking the oil editor's job faced an up hill battle against some well entrenched critics.

My first few weeks on the job were like a battle. The critics laid down a pretty good barage. No matter which way I turned another round went off.

IN MY OPINION

Bang! There was an angry telephone call from a reader. Pow! There was a red hot letter from someone else. Boom! A reader came to the office and chewed me out. No matter how the oil news was presented, somebody would get upset and let it be known that they did not like the way the oil reporting was being handled.

Finally, the critics stopped the shelling. As far as I know it has been weeks since anyone here at the R—T has received an irate letter or phone call from a reader complaining about the oil news. Apparently the way we are presenting it is keeping our readers half-way happy.

But the cease-fire is the result of a stalemate. Although things have quieted down of late, we keep an ear open for the critics and we hear them grumbling. It's obvious a lot of people still aren't satisfied with our oil news.

We know we haven't succeded in fully regaining our oil news readers' esteem. All we have done is establish a base line, a minimum level of reader satisfaction. The opinion here is that a minimum level of acceptance is a long way from the maximum level of excellence.

And that's the reason I've got that puckered-up look of perplexity on my face, and why the little voice is giving me fits. It's my job to improve the oil news, break the stalemate, and win over the critics; but I'm not sure how it should be accomplished.

Nationwide, very few daily community newspapers report oil news. Of those that do, it appears only one other provides its readers with a greater quantity of oil news than the R—T is providing you. As near as we can figure it, no other newspaper in this country can match the the variety of oil news the R—T offers.

What it comes down to is this. No matter how you may feel about it, and no matter how we at the R—T feel about it, our oil news is, right now, the way we publish it, just about the best available in the whole darned country.

When you are the best there is — or nearly so — but still not satisfied with yourself, there is only one way to get better, and that is to start pioneering. You have to set off on your own and start living by your own code.

The only way to make the R—T's oil news better, as I see it, is to start breaking new ground. It appears there are three ways to turn the sod. First, we can do the same old things in imaginative new ways. Second, we can drop what we're doing and start something new from scratch. Or third, we can try some of both.

I can't make up my mind which course to follow. All I know is something must be done. I need your advice. Imagine yourself setting at this typewriter. "What would you do, oil editor?"

If you've got an idea, send it to me at The Midland Reporter — Telegram, Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702; or phone me at 915-682-5311, ask for extension 143.

Please be specific when you write or call. Vague comments really aren't very helpful. If you want more of something, say how much more. If you want less, say how much less. If you want something different, describe it in a way we can understand.

But what ever you do, please don't say, "Leave things just the way they are." That's one piece of advice we won't accept. It's too dangerous. The critics might use it as an excuse to start shooting again.

War is hell!

Significant gas well finaled in South Louisiana

OKLAHOMA CITY — Texas International Company has completed a four-point test in its wildcat well, 7688 No. 1, located in Eloi Bay, South Louisiana.

The well is now flowing through nine feet of perforations, and on a sustained test flowed at the rate of approximately 6.2 million cubic feet of natural gas and 1,000 barrels of 44.8 gravity condensate on a 16/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 8,501 pounds per square inch.

The initial calculated open flow is 46 million cubic feet of natural gas and 7,000 barrels of condensate.

The company indicated it had perforated only five feet of a 25-foot zone at the 13,000 foot level.

A company spokesman said that no testing will take place in the 44 feet of potentially productive sands located higher up in the well until some time in the future.

Texas International also reports that it has set and cemented casing in its 15,800 foot offset well to the 7,688 No. 1.

Texas International has a 90 percent working interest in the well and 12,000 acres surrounding the well, and King Ranch Oil Properties holds the remaining 10 percent.

CALGARY — Hudbay Oil (Australia) Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Company Limited, reported the discovery of oil in West Seahorse No. 1 well located in the Bass Strait offshore Victoria, Australia. It is on a 740,000 acre permit, V1C/P11, in which the company will hold a one-third interest.

The discovery well, which is in 40 metres of water 12 kilometers offshore, tested at a sustained rate of 1,800 barrels of high quality crude oil per day from productive sands at a depth of 1,411 meters. No water was produced.

This area accounts for about 320,000 barrels per day of production or 93 per cent of Australia's total daily production. A 1978 discovery which flowed at a rate of 2,000 barrels per day is 4.5 kilometers to the east of West Seahorse.

The well will be suspended and the detailed results of testing will be analysed to help determine delineation drilling plans. The drillship Petromar "North Sea" is preparing to move to the next exploratory location in the permit, Baleen No. 1.

HOUSTON — AMAX Petroleum Corporation announced today the completion of State Tract 129 Well No. 1 in Galveston Bay, Chambers County.

In making the announcement, Lloyd L. Parks, President of AMAX Petroleum, said that during a 20-hour test the well flowed 410 barrels of oil per day and 222 MCF of gas per day on a 12/64-choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,100 pounds per square inch.

The well was perforated in the Upper Frio sand from 7,498 feet to 7,508 feet.

FORT WORTH — American Quasar Petroleum Company has completed its Good No. 1-11 as an oil and gas discovery at the North Vealmoor prospect in Borden County, Texas.

The Midland Basin well flowed oil and gas at daily rates of 213 barrels and 390,000 cubic feet through a 16/64-inch choke opening on a 10-hour production test.

Shut-in tubing pressure was 775 pounds per square inch, and flowing tubing pressure was 240 pounds per square inch. Depth of the successful completion was between 8,042 and 8,052 feet in a Pennsylvanian reef zone.

American Quasar, along with its Can-Am Drilling Programs limited partnership 1981-2, has 100 percent working interest in the well before payout. Some 1,520 gross undeveloped acres are included in the prospect area.

DENVER — Black Dome Energy Corporation recently reported an apparent new-zone gas discovery in Clark County, Kansas, five miles north of the Cimarron River in the Anadarko Basin.

In testing through a half-inch choke, the well flowed at a rate of 7.3 million cubic feet of gas per day. Flowing tubing pressure was 1,322 pounds per square inch, and the well's open flow rate was calculated at 43.5 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Black Dome Energy is operator of the well, the No. 1 Combrink. The company and Black Dome Exploration and Development Fund 1981-II each own half of a 17 1/2 percent working interest in the well. Other working interests are owned by Natural Energy Corporation and Estoril Producing Company of Midland; Carolina Land Corporation of Plano; and Argosy Energy, Inc. of Salt Lake City.

In testing through a 7/32-inch choke, the well flowed at a rate of 975,000 cubic feet of gas per day. Flowing tubing pressure was 850 pounds per square inch, and the well's open flow rate was calculated at 2.5 million cubic feet of gas per day.

The company and Black Dome Exploration and Development Fund 1981-II each own half of a 17 1/2 percnet working interest in the well, which wass drilled tp a depth of 5,417 feet. Black Dome, the operator, has been acquiring additional acreage in the Area.

TULSA — Dalco Petroleum Corporation recently announced successful completion of the State D No. 1 well, located in southeast Compbell Field, NW SW/4, Section 36, township 23 north, range 15 west, Major County, Okla.

The Company said the well tested with a calculated open flow of 11,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a four-point test.

The well was selectively perforated in the Mississippian Meramec Limestone formation, and is expected to deliver 2,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a 16/64-inch choke.

Dalco Petroleum, Inc., Wholly-owned subsidiary of Dalco Petroleum Corporation, has a 27 percent working interest in the well.

The Davis Oil Co. No. 1 Lois Blalock, flowed 504 barrels of oil daily, with no water, on a 12/64-inch choke. The flowing tubing pressure was 2,150 psi. The gas-oil ratio was 2,579 cubic feet per barrel. Production is through perforations from 10,966 to 10,986 feet in the Fusselman formation.

Alta has a 1/32 working interest in the well and 1,920 surrrounding acres. Two development wells offsetting the discovery are now being drilled, and a fourth location is being staked.

OIL INDUSTRY NOTES

Midland SouthWest Corporation has reported an eleventh drilling rig, an Oilwell E-200 with 25,000-foot drilling capacity, has been ordered and is expected to be delivered into service in December 1981.

The addition will bring the number of deep rigs working in the Anadarko Basin area to five, according to G. Arthur Donnelly III, chairman and chief executive of the corporation.

Midland SouthWest has sought to use its rig fleet to earn a working interest opportunity in the Anadarko Play, and to date, has an average 4 percent interest in 13 prospects.

Midland SouthWest Corporation is primarily engaged in contract drilling for oil and gas; in the exploration and development of oil and gas for its own account; and in gas gathering activities in Texas and Oklahoma.

Adobe Oil & Gas Corporation, Midland, announced recently tha Newmont Mining Corporation's wholly owned subsidiary, Newmont Oil Company, is to acquire all the shares of Adobe Holland, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Adobe.

Newmont has agreed to pay a cash consideration of $30 million and Adobe Oil & Gas Corporation will receive 25 percent of the net operating income once Newmont has recovered 150 percent of acquisition and operation costs and capital outlay.

Adobe Holland, Inc. has a 7.5 percent interest in a developing gas field in Block P/6 in the Netherlands North Sea. Adobe also owns a minority interest in Blocks P/2, P/5, P/8, Q/4, Q/7 and S/2 in the Netherlands North Sea.

These blocks are being actively explored for both oil and gas.

MGF Oil Corporation has announced the signing of a definitive stock purchaseagreement with Bennie C. Griffin and Bennie L. Griffin, the two major stockholders of Griffin Petroleum Corporation, providing for the intended merger of Griffin into MGF or a subsidiary of MGF.

R.O. "Jack" Major, president and chief executive officer of MGF, and Bennie C. Grifin, president and chief executive officer of Griffin, said MGF has agreed to acquire 7,500,000 shares of common stock of Griffin Petroleum (approximately 44 percent of the outstanding stock of Griffin) from the two major shareholders of Griffin for $17,250,000 ($2.30 a share) in cash and notes and proposes to acquire the remaining 9,440,000 outstanding shares, including approximately 2,500,000 shares held by those same two shareholders in an exchange of stock whereby one share of MGF common stock will be exchanged for each 4.27 shares of Griffin common stock.

This exchange ratio has been adjusted from the exchange ratio of one share of MGF common stock for each of the 4.45 shares of Griffin common stock announced at the signing of the letter of intent on Oct. 14, 1981.

Introducing The Cessna Corsair.

Unparalleled performance, comfort and price in the world's most advanced propjet.

Highest service ceiling, to carry you to low-traffic, high fuel economy altitudes comparable turboprops can't reach.

Most fuel efficient of all turboprops powered by the world-renowned Pratt and Whitney PT6A engine, up to 30% more efficient than competitive aircraft. And with a time between overhauls of 3500 hours (over five years' normal use) this engine represents an industry milestone for reliability.

Quietest turboprop in the sky today. The Corsair's carefully engineered combination of low RPM, wide prop-to-cabin clearance, soundproofing, and quiet engines make it the quietest turboprop available.

A STUDY IN COMFORT.

For all its performance excellence, the Corsair story is a great deal more than numbers. While you're traveling so efficiently and quickly, you'll also be traveling in surroundings carefully designed to let you work en route, or rest and arrive refreshed and ready for business. Not exhausted and ready for a nap. The Corsair's interior is truly a study in comfort.

Inside the Corsair, your first impression is that of a comfortable, tastefully appointed office. And that's exactly what we had in mind.

When you sit in one of those twenty-inch-wide First Class seats, you'll appreciate its comfort and the ambience created by a variety of fabrics including pure wool broadcloth or optional leather. Note the cabin width (greater than any competition), the 1100 pound baggage capacity, and the convenience of options including stereo tape deck, refreshment center, telephone, flushing toilet, the only on-ground heating and cooling in its price class, and much more.

Also notice that Corsair comfort is more than simple interior amenities. For example, Cessna's exclusive trailing-link main landing gear, unique in general aviation, results in a smoothness in taxi and landing you have to experience to believe.

A WORD ON RELIABILITY.

You buy a turboprop to ensure you can go where you want, when you want. The use of proven components in our new Corsair assures you of a propjet that is technically advanced and, more important, that delivers unprecedented reliability. Based on service records to date, the Corsair is the most reliable aircraft of any kind you can buy today. Period.

But even the most reliable aircraft in the world needs service.

On that score, Cessna outshines all others. Each of our 26 Propjet Dealers nationwide was carefully chosen as the best to handle the Cessna propjet line. They have factory trained technicians standing ready to keep your Corsair in top condition. Our computer-inventoried parts department enables us to respond quickly to almost any request. When you buy a Corsair, you're buying over 50 years of Cessna service excellence along with it.

THE COST OF OWNERSHIP.

A new Corsair is designed to cost less to own and operate than any competitive propjet. Fully equipped, the Corsair's suggested list price is still comfortably under $1 million.

| % interest for 5 year financing | | |
|---|---|---|
| % of price financed | first 2 years | remaining 3 years |
| 85 | 14 | 18 |
| 75 | 13.5 | 17 |
| 65 | 13 | 16 |

| % interest for 9 year financing | | |
|---|---|---|
| % of price financed | first 2 years | remaining 7 years |
| 85 | 15 | 20 |
| 75 | 14.5 | 19 |
| 65 | 14 | 18 |

To give you maximum flexibility in determining your financing package, Cessna offers a multitude of plans through your local participating dealer. Cessna Finance Corporation will finance your Corsair for up to nine years at fixed rates, with no prepayment penalty. Rates vary according to the percentage of the purchase cost and the financing term. Representative examples are shown on the table.

THE ULTIMATE TEST.

The Corsair is a new propjet that, we think you'll agree, looks and sounds extremely good. But the real test is to experience the genuine article yourself, in the cabin or cockpit. Here's how:

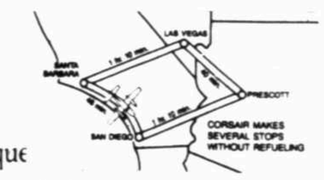

Cessna invites you to take your next one-day business trip in a brand new Corsair. You pay one dollar per mile. We pay the rest of the flying costs.

(Offer good through December 31, 1981. We'll schedule your trip with you at the earliest date possible.)

THE LOGIC OF BUYING A NEW CORSAIR.

As business travel grows steadily more expensive, the cost efficiency of propjet ownership becomes steadily more attractive. Propjets offer impressive speed and comfort at substantially lower cost than jets. And a degree of convenience airline passengers can only dream of.

The purchase of a Corsair would be a wise business decision any time. But now, it's a unique investment opportunity which allows you to take advantage of the recent changes in tax law. These changes include a combination of capital depreciation and investment tax credits that simply can't be recovered after December 31, 1981.

There may never be a better time to buy your new Corsair.

THE PERFORMANCE STORY.

In a propjet, the key word is performance. And performance is the Corsair's middle name. When compared to any plane near its size and price, the Corsair excels in virtually every category.

Corsair Performance at 29,000 feet:

| Number on board | Cruise speed | Time to climb | Service ceiling | Sound level | Baggage allowance |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|

Fastest cruising speed of any six-to-eight-place turboprop. To get you where you're going ahead of the pack.

Fastest climb to cruise altitude carries you quickly to uncrowded high altitude airways. While our current air traffic control system is being rebuilt, priority will be given to rebuilding the high altitude sector first. In a fast climbing Corsair, you'll be in that sector before any of the competition.

The quick climbing Corsair gets you out of traffic, weather and turbulence fast.

After Stockman's fall

In admitting he has had "serious" misgivings about aspects of President Ronald Reagan's economic program, Budget Director David Stockman verbalized concerns many Americans likely have shared. Yet Democrats would be well-advised to not try too quickly to capitalize on Stockman's untimely admissions: They do not negate the need for this direction in the American economy.

The turmoil of Stockman's devastating admissions is over for the most part. He has apologized, as was appropriate. The president has apparently accepted. The youthful budget director has even offered to resign his position. Mr. Reagan refused to accept that step, a wise decision considering the economic direction of the nation.

Stockman's decision to make the admissions, even though he thought they were made in confidence, was ill-advised. They represent disloyalty to Mr. Reagan and the economic program designed to take the nation away from fiscal calamity. It would have been more discreet had Stockman chosen to offer his resignation to the president, at which time the predictable discussion would have revealed the misgivings. Then, once out of his official capacity, Stockman could have revealed his misgivings without so much damage to the administration.

By revealing his misgivings in the way he did, Stockman exhibited political naivete and a degree of immaturity. His admissions also have compromised the office of the presidency and his own position.

Stockman, however, did not reverse his position about his conversations with the reporter after the story appeared. That was refreshing for a change. He stood behind his comments; he took the flak.

But the greatest potential danger has not yet surfaced. That would be the turning away of the American people from President Reagan's economic program. Perhaps some of Stockman's misgivings are well-founded. Perhaps the economic program should be carefully reviewed and altered if needed. After all, it did seem that the program was designed and implemented in a very short period. Perhaps there is a need for more of one of those "mid-course corrections" than was originally thought.

But that does not scrap the change of philosophy mandated by the American electorate. We can refine our program without losing its essential thrust.

Last, but certainly not least Mr. Reagan should take the opportunity to address the nation candidly to again discuss the economic program and, particularly, to emphasize the importance of staying on a sound economic track. The economic course followed by past administrations has not worked. More taxes, a growing federal deficit and bigger bureaucracy is not the way to economic salvation.

That fact should be reaffirmed for the American public.

Dollar takes a pasting

Devotees of the gold standard used to predict that someday the floating dollar would be so worthless that people would take to papering their walls with it. Well, they're right.

The U.S. Mint has once again begun selling uncut sheets of dollar bills and, according to a Mint spokesman, they're suitable for framing or as wallpaper. The uncut bills, natch, sell for more than face value — $38 for a sheet of 32.

Actually the severe decline in the value of the dollar has little to do with the latest decorator's delight. The Mint says it's just answering a long standing request from collectors.

Even so, the gold bugs are smirking at the latest evidence that the dollar is still taking a pasting.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Nov. 15, the 319th day of 1981. There are 46 days remaining in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 15, 1492, Christopher Columbus noted in his journal the use of tobacco among natives of the New World. It was history's first recorded reference to tobacco.

On this date:

In 1920, the League of Nations Assembly held its first meeting, in Geneva.

In 1977, Israel sent a formal invitaton to Egypt's President Anwar Sadat to visit Jerusalem and address the Israeli parliament.

One year ago: Speaking to a crowd in Cologne, West Germany, Pope John Paul II reaffirmed the Catholic Church's condemnation of divorce, abortion and pre-marital sex.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Nation's deadbeats get away without paying

WASHINGTON — A harried President Reagan is turning the federal budget inside out to find the savings he needs to run the government, without altogether plucking the taxpayers like Thanksgiving turkeys. Yet billions upon billions of dollars are owed to the Treasury; all the president has to do is order his minions to collect it.

Jack Anderson

But unhappily, the collection of delinquent accounts, overdue taxes, unresolved audit claims and other bad debts has always had a low priority in government agencies. Bureaucrats are far more enthusiastic about spending the public's money than they are in putting the squeeze on deadbeats.

They would rather hit up the faithful taxpayers for more revenue than bother to collect from the unfaithful. Result: Americans of easy virtue are learning that if they owe the government money and drag their feet, there's a good chance they'll never have to pay up.

It has been one of my private crusades to call upon federal agencies to collect what is already owed them before coming to us for more money. Consider these figures: According to government auditors, the amount legitimately owed to Uncle Sucker totaled at least $24 billion as of Sept. 30, 1979. One year later, the figure had skyrocketed to an incredible $139 billion. There's no telling what the total had risen to by September 30 of this year. But it's a cinch the figures haven't shrunk.

With the 1982 budget deficit now being projected at $100 billion, the government's lackadaisical attitude toward the "deadbeat deficit" is scandalous. There would be no need for many of the drastic cuts in federal social programs if corporations and individuals would pay the government what they owe.

To his credit, President Reagan has at least recognized the problem — which was ignored by his predecessors. On paper, the administration's response looks promising. Presidential directives have stressed the importance of timely debt collection, and most federal agencies have appointed collection officers to concentrate on the problem.

But it is a herculean task. The House Budget Committee's projections have assumed that only about $4 billion of the huge bad-debt total — whatever it is at this point — will be collected in the current fiscal year.

In fact, budget experts have told my associate Tony Capaccio the collection battle may already have been lost, thanks to decades of neglect. These sources say that many of the uncollected debts have become uncollectable.

The most important thing now, they argue, is to adopt businesslike procedures that will close the door on deadbeats in the future. Much of the current debt may have to be written off, but at least the situation would be brought under control if agencies can be persuaded to be more aggressive in their collection efforts.

Unfortunately, a radical change in bureaucratic habits is a prerequisite to any successful approach. The same "it's-not-my-money" attitude that leads to colossal waste and cost overruns has also permeated the bureaucrats' views on debt collection. The whole machinery of government is geared to spending money, not taking it in.

The big exception to this institutionalized inertia is at the Internal Revenue Service. Yet here the administration's economy measures are strangely counterproductive. There is at least $15 billion in unpaid taxes outstanding, waiting only for the IRS bird dogs to flush out the cheaters.

The answer here, obviously, is a beefed-up collection staff; experience has shown that for every dollar spent on collection efforts by IRS, about $20 is recovered for the Treasury — an investment return that should appeal to a business-oriented Republican administration. But with surprising shortsightedness, the president's pennypinchers have cut back the collectors.

Reflecting the longstanding bureaucratic boredom with debt collection, the $139 billion deadbeat deficit, staggering as it is, actually minimizes the true situation. An analysis prepared for Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., states: "Unfortunately, these gloomy statistics are materially understated, because the accounting systems of many agencies do not provide accurate information on receivables, expected losses and writeoffs."

In short, the bureaucrats don't know how much is owed to their agencies — and they don't especially care.

Some agencies do report on their delinquent accounts, even if they don't do very much about collecting them. The Department of Education has $2.2 billion in overdue debts; the Small Business Administration, $2 billion; the Health and Human Services Department, $1.8 billion; Agriculture Department, $1.3 billion; Housing and Urban Development, $906 million; Veterans Administration, $852 million, and the Labor Department, $621 million.

Auditors have told me that more aggressive collection efforts could do wonders in some cases. The Education Department, they estimate, could recover as much as 80 percent of its delinquent accounts — mostly in student loans — if the agency would undertake a determined crackdown.

But there are problems: Attempts to turn delinquent accounts over to private collection agencies operating on commission would require disclosure of the debtor's addresses to the private firms. Congress would be reluctant to approve such an option because of privacy-invasion problems involved and the possibility for abuse.

In another area, billions of dollars would be impossible to collect for political reasons: For example, the bulk of the $1.8 billion owed to HHS consists of overpayments to Supplemental Security Income, disability and old-age trust fund beneficiaries. No administration would put itself in the position of extracting money from the nation's neediest citizens to straighten out the government's own mistakes.

Clearly, the most sensible solution to the deadbeat deficit is prevention — locking the Treasury door before the money filters away.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

On the first anniversary of President Reagan's election, the White House acknowledged that there was a recession. I was afraid they wouldn't bring it about on time but they slid in right under the wire amid congratulations all around.

Also, on that same day, they acknowledged that they were having a feud. Al Haig said that White House "guerrillas" were attacking him, which is what happens when you let the CIA operate domestically.

The president then said that a feud would make our allies nervous. He's got it all wrong — our allies are already nervous.

Then, Jack Anderson identified the guerrilla as National Security Adviser Richard Allen. "I am not a guerrilla," said Allen, flashing a Nixon "V" sign with one hand and munching a banana in the other.

ART BUCHWALD

Controllers not controlling this situation!

I was sitting in a bar in O'Hare Airport killing time, and struck up a conversation with the man on the next stool.

"Your plane been canceled, too?"

Art Buchwald

"Yep," he said. "I was going to Dallas. Now they've routed me through Rochester, N.Y. Where you going?"

"Washington, by way of Montgomery, Alabama. I guess this air controllers business is catching up with all of us."

"It seems to be. But I think Reagan did the right thing, not letting them come back to work."

"You can say that again," I said. "He sure showed them who was boss."

"Those guys should have never gone out on strike. They cut off their noses to spite their faces."

"I like a president who hangs tough. What time does your plane leave for Rochester?"

"Midnight. My flight to Dallas takes off at six in the morning."

"You're lucky, you have only four hours to wait. I have seven."

"It's a small price to pay for showing the air controllers they couldn't violate the law of the land."

"You can say that again. I don't care if I ever get home as long as the air controllers have been taught a lesson."

"Bartender, I'll have another one, and don't forget the lemon twist this time."

"Sorry," the bartender said, "I'm new at this job. I'm really a pilot. I was laid off because of the air controllers strike. Now just when I'm getting the hang of bartending, I'm going to be laid off here."

"How come?" my friend asked.

"Not enough people in the airport. The flights have been cut down by 75 percent. All the concessionaires are going broke."

"Well, someone has to suffer to show that the Department of Transportation isn't going to take any flak from those guys on the picket line," I said. "Your wife work?"

"She's a stewardess," the bartender-pilot said. "She was laid off, too." He then went over to a man sleeping in a chair and woke him roughly. "Look, Mac, how many times have I told you you can't sleep in here. Now get out before I kick your butt."

"Who was that?"

"He's an air controller supervisor. Every time he gets a break, he comes down here and tries to catch a few winks before he goes up to the tower again."

"That's a nervy thing for a guy to do," I said. "You would think a guy could work in a tower for 12 hours without getting sleepy."

"You know what?" a man a few stools down the bar said. "I think Reagan should be a big enough man and go on television and say the air controllers made a mistake but he forgives them, and if they want to come back to work they can."

"Are you a Commie or something?" I said angrily. "What kind of signal do you think that would give to the Russians if he showed he was soft on air controllers?"

"If they pardoned Nixon they can pardon the air controllers," he said.

"There's always one bleeding heart in a bar," I said. "I'm glad there's no one in the Reagan administration who is thinking in terms of amnesty."

"You can say that again," my friend agreed. "I hear we'll have enough air controllers by 1985 to resume normal flight operations again."

"I can wait," I said.

"I'll drink to that," my friend on the next stool said. "You let one air controller return, and they'll all want to come back to work. Before you know it, we'd have radar screens all over the country manned by criminals."

GEORGE F. WILL

ERA supporters let embarrassing milestone pass unnoticed

WASHINGTON — Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment have an unequaled gift for generating publicity, but they have prudently let pass unnoticed an embarrassing milestone. ERA was proposed by Congress to the states in March 1972. Four years and 10 months later (January 1977), Indiana ratified it. No state has ratified it since then. That was four years and 10 months ago. So ERA has this unprecedented distinction: It has gone as long without a ratification as it took to get all the ratifications it has.

George F. Will

The last gasp of the ERA campaign is expensive, but has raised considerable funds, aided by press coverage absurdly disproportionate to ERA's chances of success, which are negligible. The fund-raising is fueled by a manufactured sense of melodrama, the fiction that the campaign is a cliffhanger because ERA needs ratifications by "just" three more states.

Actually, not one of the 15 states that has for nine years refused to ratify it is apt to do so before the deadline next June. And the notion that three more ratifications would be sufficient ignores the fact that five states (Tennessee, Kentucky, Idaho, Nebraska, South Dakota) have voted to rescind their ratifications. So ERA is probably eight states short. If before June, God schedules three quick miracles in state legislatures (more than He — or She — generally budgets for state legislatures), there will be an interesting constitutional controversy about the right of a state to change its mind.

The fact that the Constitution's amending provision does not discuss the right to rescind does not weigh against the right. In the absence of textual limitation on state legislatures' rights, legislatures should be presumed to retain the general right to rescind their own actions as long as a proposed amendment remains a live controversy — remains, that is, merely a proposal.

ERA extremists insist that proponents of an amendment can keep submitting it no matter how often a state rejects it, but that a state's vote to ratify is irrevocable, no matter how long the issue remains open in the country. This suggests that a state's vote to ratify is (in the words of Grover Rees of the University of Texas Law School) "a sort of sacramental act."

Alexander Hamilton explained (in Federalist Paper 85) that the amending procedure is designed to guarantee that the Republic's fundamental law shall not be changed easily. Thus three-quarters of the states must be "united in the desire" for an amendment. The Supreme Court has emphasized that the consensus must be "contemporaneous," meaning that the requisite number of states must ratify within a reasonable period.

Obviously, at least 20 states (the 15 that have repeatedly refused to ratify, and the five that have voted to rescind ratifications) can not be counted as part of the ERA "consensus." It is anti-constitutional to create a fraudulent illusion of consensus by suppressing the right to rescind. And it is doubly cynical to do so after having begged Congress for an unprecedented dispensataon — an anti-constitutional (it was not unconstitutional, just unintelligent) extension of the original, traditional seven-year deadline.

Some ERA supporters, bowing to the patent irrationality of denying a state's right to rescind, say only that the existence of the right is a "political question" to be answered by Congress. They probably are hoping that Congress would deny the right. That is, they are counting on Congress to display the kind of cowardice or gallantry (if ERA supporters can abide the thought) that caused Congress to extend the original deadline for the convenience of (so the extension implied) the weaker sex.

But the idea that the right of a state to rescind is a "political question" depends on the implausible notion that the Constitution grants Congress unlimited freedom to shape or adjudicate the ratification process. In fact, all that Article V explicitly empowers Congress to do is propose amendments and choose between ratification by state legislatures or state conventions. The sense of the Constitution strongly suggests that the right of states to rescind ratifications is a question — and an easy one — for the Supreme Court.

ERA is a device for empowering courts to write the nation's code of conduct regarding women, a task properly belonging to the political branches of government. So it would be amusing to watch ERA supporters try to keep straight faces while arguing that Congress, not the Supreme Court, should adjudicate the constitutional rights of states in the amending process.

For a change, let's look back at the amendment ballots

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Politicians and those who watch politicians always tend to be looking to the next election — which, for politicians, is always the election they must win.

So, inevitably, office-holders and reporters find themselves going around poking the political tea leaves and metaphorical entrails for omens and portents.

Such auguries have marked the recent election, with Gov. Bill Clements and Speaker Bill Clayton and their political prospects in 1982 coming in for much examination and soothsaying.

The reason for that is that both men have been perceived as having thrown their support to constitutional amendments which failed.

There's been some argument, by politicians and reporters, that this indicates that both Clements and Clayton are out of touch with the mood of the voters, and thus are vulnerable at the polls.

Clements did indeed put his support behind the proposed constitutional amendment to set up a finance management committee — as well as the proposed water trust fund, which Clayton authored.

In fact, Clements supported all the amendments.

But it seems a little far-fetched to argue that because the majority of the 12 percent of Texas voters who cared enough to go to the polls decided one way or another that there are any great implications as to how popular Clements may or may not be.

Clayton, of course, was more strongly identified with the water trust fund proposal that Clements was with the finance committee — although Clayton really didn't appear too eager to have his name associated with the proposal, at least outside of West Texas, apparently from concern that the play would be viewed only as an attempt to revive water import plans.

But if the rejection of the proposal reflects on Clayton, it would also seem to reflect on the two-thirds of the Legislature which had to vote for the proposal to get it to the voters.

Neither Clements nor Clayton think that the voters' action has any personal message to them as regards their statewide prospects.

Clayton thinks Prop. 4 was probably too complicated — "too much at one time," he says.

But while some politicians, and writers, have argued that the defeat of the two amendment points to weakness in support for Clements and Clayton, most also argue that there is statewide support for some program to fund and develop Texas' water resources.

That position has been argued by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who opposed the water trust fund, including during a visit to West Texas — which was about as popular as spitting on the flag or telling dirty jokes during a Jerry Falwell revival.

Former Secretary of State George Strake, who is running against Hobby, tried to take advantage of Hobby's opposition to Prop. 4 — and the argument runs that this just shows that Strake isn't tuned in to the feelings of the majority of Texans.

However, a recent study by the University of Texas, through the Institute for Constructive Capitalism in the UT-Austin Graduate School of Business, indicates that assuring an adequate water supply is one of the two top activities which Texans think state government should be doing.

The other activity is improving and maintaining the highway system.

That survey, involving 2,041 persons statewide, also found that there wasn't much support for either raising taxes, or initiating new taxes.

Dr. Robert A. Peterson, who designed and directed the study, reports that the study indicates that Texans feel "that government regulation is necessary but that it should be focused and directed better."

"There was not strong support for less government," he says, "rather, there was an underlying theme that government should be more efficient, and government regulations more effectively administered."

Another interesting finding in the study was that while there was no consensus as to the single most important future problem facing Texas, the most frequently mentioned one — with 17 percent — was "elected officials," which beat out over-population, inflation and illegal aliens.

One observation on the recent election, from a veteran observer, was that the only thing he could figure out that the election meant was that Texans are in favor of paying lower taxes and helping folks keep their land, but don't really want the Legislature, or governor, spending any of their money.

Another conclusion might be that 88 percent of the voters in Texas don't care enough about those matters to make the trip to the voting booth.

Still, the only sure thing is that the voters who turned out didn't like two of the proposals which were being offered them — for whatever reasons.

'Crack Down on Crime'

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — This is "Crack Down on Crime" month in Washington.

Under Republican leadership in the Senate and with the support of some Democrats, the greatest legislative offensive against crime in the history of Congress is underway.

Six separate Senate committee hearings are underway or scheduled for this month on proposals to strengthen anti-crime legislation.

A "Walk Against Fear" in Washington is scheduled for Nov. 17. Senators, civic leaders, sports personalities and ordinary citizens concerned about crime will participate.

It is hoped that civic leaders in other American cities and towns will organize similar walks against crime this month. A statement issued by Carter Clews, director of communications for the Senate Republican Conference, said:

"You, as an American citizen, have an inalienable right to walk down your own streets at any time of your choosing. Let's take back what is rightfully ours. Join the Walk Against Fear."

Urging support for "Crack Down on Crime" demonstrations this month, Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, said rising street crime is becoming the number one concern of Americans from coast to coast.

In less than one minute every single day, he added, "two innocent Americans will be killed, raped, or assaulted somewhere in the United States."

According to Federal Bureau of Investigation reports issued in September, a violent crime is committed every 24 seconds and one property crime every three seconds. One murder is committed every 23 minutes. One forcible rape every six minutes. One assault every 48 seconds. One burglary every eight seconds.

Senator Robert Dole, R-Kan., said the Republican administration is not alone in the determination to crack down on crime.

"In this session of Congress, as in perhaps no other that I've been a part of, there is a groundswell of support on both sides of the aisle for action," he added. "There is a realization that we have gone too far in the past few years, and are too often listening to the violators rather than the victims."

The former Republican presidential candidate has drafted a package of separate bills which calls for mandatory minimum sentences for persons using firearms to commit crimes; preventive detention of persons dangerous to the community, and restrictions on the use of the exclusionary rule which bars introduction of evidence when there has been a technical violation of law by police officers.

"Ultimately, the real key to solving the problem of crime in our communities lies not in reforming court procedures, nor in recasting laws, but in restoring a sense of respect for the law and the right of every human being to live in peace with his neighbor," said Dole.

Senator Arlen Specter, R-Pa., has introduced legislation which would make it a federal offense punishable by life imprisonment whenever anyone previously convicted of two robberies or burglaries commits another while armed with a gun.

"Our communities are under siege by career criminals who have spent their entire adult lives in committing robberies and burglaries. Each of these felons commit scores or even hundreds of crimes each year. Although relatively limited in number, they are responsible for a large volume of the serious and violent street crime in the U.S. These felons should be put behind bars for life."

Senator Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., is leading the Senate move to aid victims of crime. Noting that last year there were 13 million victims of crime in the U.S., he said :

"Criminal statutes which punish instances of victim-witness intimidation must be strengthened and enforced without exception. Laws which encourage the judge to require the convicted offender to provide restitution to the victim should be instituted. Serious study must be given to establishing a victims' compensation fund. The fund would reimburse victims of a violent federal offense for out-of-pocket medical expenses. This fund would be financed through criminal property forfeitures and fines paid by convicted offenders throughout the federal system."

Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., is supporting proposed legislation which would reinstitute the death penalty for crimes of murder, treason and espionage.

Utah's Republican Senator Orrin G. Hatch is co-sponsoring legislation which would make it more difficult for a person considered dangerous to the community to obtain bail, and would abolish the existing parole system that releases mentally unbalanced and habitual criminals long before they have served the original sentence.

Authority: It glitters (and costs) like gold

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

Authority.

It keeps societies in reasonable order most of the time. At other times, which are rare, the people rebel. And authority gets upset.

When the masses balk at the instance of a brave few vanguards, authority frowns and barks and does what it can to keep "peace."

Sometimes that entails the priming of propaganda machines, bloodshed, a war of intimidation, an out-cropping of concentration camps, tragic "examples" made out of the intellectuals who think rather than acquiesce, and a call to patriotism to protect the established order.

Authority.

That's what makes man want to believe that the dog is his best friend. Is he really, though? The dog who has mastered obedience has also mastered his master. Does not the one with the wagging tail get his wholesome food, his cozy shelter and his tender ego boosted by pats on the back and expressions of kindness?

Ah, yes.

The dog does very well. He does at least as well as the master and, sometimes, much better.

One contention is that the dog gets his reward by pleasing the master and therefore serves man. Pavlov bore that out. But that bespeaks of habit and rote and mindless servitude, of which man is a ready victim. Who but the doltish leader is flattered if a pack of automatons follows him in meaningless circles?

Authority.

Does it not glitter as brightly as gold? Oh, it is so precious. After gathering his worldly goods, what does the man of avarice seek next? The obsequiousness of others. What else is there? He cannot buy youth and eternity, but he can buy worlds of symbols of his dreams, and he can buy flattery so long as he decides never to awaken from his slumber.

Authority.

Sometimes it is earned; often, it is bought as a merchant might buy rhinestones and diamonds.

Often enough, compliance with authority is borne out of fear. Ideally, it springs out of respect, will and need. Ideally, what best serves the master also best serves the servant. If not, then a change is more than needed; it is a moral must.

A joke?

To The Editor:

The "Lack of talent" letter to the editor on Sunday, Nov. 8, 1981, concerning the lack of coaching in the Midland Lee Rebel and Permian Panther game has got to be a joke.

I've watched every Permian-Lee game for the last 11 years and the 1981 Lee Rebels had to be the best prepared team for this game that I have witnessed. The Lee Rebels, after giving Permian an easy touchdown early in the game, played Mojo off its feet for three quarters and 10 minutes until they fumbled with 2:13 left in the ballgame on Mojo's 25 yeard line.

Football is a game of mistakes and coaches try to coach not making mistakes but these 17- and 18-year-old players, like the college and pro players, are going to make them. Most of the time these mistakes are caused by the opposing team's aggressive play and have nothing to do with coaching or the ball carriers not doing their job.

The three questions asked were: 1) Why had Dykes scribbled the forward pass from his play book? On three occasions Lee had second or third down and long and picked up the first down to keep their drive alive with forward passes. Kenneth Brown made a remarkable catch and picked up a much-needed first down to keep their drive alive late in the game. This drive later ended on Permian's 25 yard line when Lee fumbled, not as a result of coaching or inability of the Lee ball carrier, but as a result of the aggressive play of Permian.

3) Why would a coach with fleet wide receivers and an excellent tight end refuse to throw the ball? For three quarters Lee dominated the ball game with its running attack but did throw the ball for crucial first downs throughout the game but only when needed. Incidentally, Lee does not have fleet receivers playing with the first unit. They are well-coached players who have the backfield and not in their receiving core. There are only three things that can happen when you pass the football and to of them are bad according to Darrell Royal. You pass when you have to but the teams that lie by the pass die by the pass.

2) Why would a well-schooled coach put in a prevent-defense late in the game knowing that Permian had only to score a field goal to win? I've watched grade school, junior high, high school, college and pro football for 25 years and I can't recall a team which is ahead not putting in a prevent-defense late in a ball game when they give up the all deep in their opponent's territory.

It is great when you win, but when you lose, you can do no right. It is also great sitting in the stands and calling the plays and it is even greater the day after the ball game.

Coach Dykes and his coaching staff spend hours each day working with our kids on fundamentals and in preparing them for a particular game. During the season he and his staff are at the field house or on the practice field 17 hours a day. They did a tremendous job getting the boys ready for Permian.

Coach Dykes and his staff are doing a great job and even though they might not be able to satisfy all of the grandstand or Saturday morning quarterbacks and coaches, I am looking forward to my eighth grade son playing for them whether they pass to him or put him in a prevent-defense with 2:13 left in the ball game.

Not a ghetto

To The Editor:

I wish to take issue with the article about head lice which appeared on page 1 in last Sunday's edition of The Reporter-Telegram.

In the third paragraph appears the statement "The problem is head lice...and the infested area is not limited to the east side of Midland."

Indeed! Why mention this as if it is to be expected that all infestation would occur only in East Midland? Why perpetuate the preconceptions that the majority of Midlanders hold to be true? "East Midland" is not a separate community or a ghetto, and need not be referred to as if it is.

Please, in the future, try to be more considerate and fair-minded and ask your writers to leave their personal prejudices out of their news stories.

R. Zachery

Spooky success

To The Editor:

During the six-day period Oct. 26 through Oct. 31, 1981, approximately 2,870 Midland residents went through the Midland Jaycees' Annual Halloween Spook House. The Spook House was a success financially, as well as a success in involving new and old Jaycee members in helping the community celebrate Halloween.

All Jaycee and Jaycee-ette members that worked on the house deserve a big thank you since we lost our first house to a fire on Oct. 14 and they completed our second house in less than a week and ran one of the best Spook Houses ever.

Others that need recognition and thanks are Larry Bell, president of HBF Corporation; Newnie Ellis, owner of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home; Joel Ford, owner of Tall City Sanitation; and last but not least, the people of Midland.

Please accept my thanks, as well as those of the Midland Jaycees, for helping make the 1981 Spook House a success.

C. Randall Bailey
1981 Spook House Chairman

Commendation

To The Editor:

Beginning in late September 1981, a fast-handed thief switched diamond earrings in three of our retail outlets in the Midland-Odessa area. On each occasion, the thief left fake earrings, and managed to conceal and steal the genuine diamond earrings.

The matter was referred to Lt. Gayle Reeves for investigation. Within two weeks, this excellent Midland police officer had not only arrested the thief, but had recovered all our merchandise, valued at over $10,000.

Zale Corporation would like to publically commend Lt. Reeves for his most efficient investigation and resolution of the matter cited. This was not the first occasion we have had professional dealings with Lt. Reeves, and it appears obvious he is an exemplary part of a fine law enforcement agency.

Gee whiz!

To The Editor:

Gee whiz! Why y'all all jumping on poor Mizz Georgia Temple. Don't you know she is doing her level best to make like a Broadway drama critic.

And you know about Broadway drama critics. Some of them, that is, that think if they can't be belittling and condescending the theater goers won't think they are intellectual eggheads. So they write barbs and sneer and try to make cute little belittling phrases which they think are clever repartee at cocktail soirees. This way they cover their lack of ability to either perform on the stage or be a successful playwright.

Lowell E. Branum
Midland

Poor Georgia

To The Editor:

Poor Georgia Temple! The Midland Community Theatre fans are really out for her blood, aren't they? Think of the courage it must take for Ms. Temple to even attend a play at the theatre. She probably has to attend incognito to avoid being lynched.

Come on, folks, the lady is just doing her job. And, some of us feel she is doing it very well.

Cause for concern

To The Editor:

At the regular board meeting of the Midland Independent School District on Oct. 13, 1981, the board expressed concern about the increasing number of teachers and administrators who have resigned to enter private business during the current school year. As a result, the board instructed superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey to examine options open to the board, including asking the Texas Education Agency for revocation of the teacher certification for those individuals who failed to fulfill the terms of their contracts.

Instead of the superintendent's time being spent in pursuing a lost cause, wouldn't it be far more constructive to devote his efforts to addressing the causes of teacher resignations? The personnel that have resigned have tried teaching and have found it lacking. They probably will never return to teaching. Of what concern is it to these people that they no longer have a teaching certificate? Only in the field of public schools is the teaching certificate a viable instrument.

During the month of September, Barbara O'Neil, president-elect of the Texas State Teachers Association — National Education Association, was in Midland discussing with the media the "silent strike" that was taking place in Texas. She set out to do something about the continuing unfair portrayal of the teaching profession, to clear up misconceptions about teachers, and to present a realistic picture of what the teaching profession is like today.

Ms. O'Neil told the press that over the past several years the teacher's image has taken a beating. Because teachers have motivated more students to stay in school longer and encouraged pupils to take tests that could led them to college, the overall standardized test scores are lower and teacher competence is questioned. Teachers have been denied meaningful input into the development of curricula but provide a handy scape goat for those who have ignored teacher advice.

Teaches have been paid the lowest salaries of any group of college graduates in America. Should we then be surprised that so many of them have decided to invest their time and talents in other fields? further stated Ms. O'Neil.

Dr. Maley's time should be spent in trying to keep the teachers who have persevered instead of using his time in punitive pursuit that will help no one.

The fabric is easier to clean, resists imbedded grime, and lasts up to 50 percent longer than untreated fabric.

Glass suncatchers are charming accents

Beautiful suncatchers such as those pictured in the accompanying illustration, or specially designed styles depicting the themes of Christmas can be made by any interested hobbyist. Midland Stained Glass Center, 4313-A West Illinois, is offering additional classes beginning the last week in November in the construction of suncatchers. These sessions are planned to finish up in time for students to make some of the charming little accent pieces for themselves or others before Christmas. Call Valerie Lee, manager os Midland Stained Glass Center, for specific dates and times of the classes. The center's phone number is 697-0322.

Another glass-related hobby resulting in beautiful personalized gifts is glass etching. Etching classes consist of one two-hour session each and are scheduled frequently, according to demand. Again, call Ms. Lee for specific information about class dates and times. The etching is done with a pattern or stencil and paste, giving professional results on almost any glass item at hand, and it's not nearly as difficult as the finished pieces would lead you to believe.

Midland Stained Glass Center is now open Tuesday evenings until 9 p.m. for those who may be lacking space in which to work and want to bring their projects to the center and work on them there.

The staff at the center has made up some very lovely glass items for sale. Custom personalized etched bowls, jewel boxes, and tree ornaments are available. Special order the see-through glass greeting card with poem or scripture and pictures, or commission a mounted wedding invitation or announcements of any kind for a friend or family member. Little treasures for sale include glass bees and butterflies to adorn plants and floral arrangements. Many of these glass things are also being prepared for the Starving Artists show in Midland Park Mall, where Midland Stained Glass Center plans to have working booth space.

The center continues to do commission work in doors, windows, mirrors, skylights, planters, lamps, etc. Glass repair is also available at Midland Stained Glass Center.

Governors upset by budget cuts

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON – Pressed by long-standing financial problems, governors and state legislatures are complaining that they are being made scapegoats for huge federal budget cuts.

Some of the governors believe the time has come for a domestic economic summit in which they would meet with President Reagan and congressional leaders to determine state and federal responsibilities.

Insisting they were double crossed by Congress on block grants, state officials are deeply concerned because they must now weather a second round of across-the-board cuts that will fall most heavily on state-run programs that depend on federal funding.

The resulting decline in services, they say, will revive the charges that state governments are incompetent and that federal funds ought to be channeled directly to local governments without going through state capitals.

"The prospect of massive federal cuts over the next three years," says Vermont Gov. Richard A. Snelling, chairman of the National Governors' Association, "is paralyzing the ability of state and local governments to plan their own operating and capital investment budgets."

"We not only have a federal budget that is not balanced, but the budgets of the states are in disarray and chaos," Snelling said in an interview.

"When states have to adjust to federal budget cuts without adequate lead time, the impact of the cuts is magnified," Gov. George Busbee of Georgia said, "and states often find their ability to adjust frustrated by federal regulations and court suits."

"I think it's time that we had a domestic economic summit involving the president, the bipartisan leadership of Congress and our leadership so that we might gain general agreement on ultimate prime responsibilities for government programs, the budget targets we should all plan for, and the time frame in which we are going to reach these goals," Busbee, the association's past president, added.

The governors complain that as most state and local governments enter the fifth month of their 1982 fiscal year, they do not know the final level of funding for federal programs they administer.

What is more frightening, they said in a series of interviews, is their inability, as they prepare 1983 budgets, to predict where tens of billions of dollars in federal cuts will fall in 1983 and 1984.

So the governors, Snelling said, intend to fight back, either by refusing to pick up the costs of the programs at the local level or by battling proposed cuts in Congress in the months ahead.

The officials feel they got a "dirty deal" on block grants earlier this year after they said they could handle cuts of 10 to 15 percent if given a free hand in consolidating and reshaping the tightly regulated grant programs.

Instead, the president cut the funding by 25 percent and the Congress took away the promised flexibility on how the money should be spent.

The governors and state legislatures have already started to fight back.

Western governors told the Reagan administration earlier this week they will not abide further "random and expedient cuts" in the domestic budget.

Meeting at Scottsdale, Ariz., the Western Governors Policy Office declared that more cuts will be opposed unless there is a "significant sorting out" of federal and state functions.

"From now on, this sorting-out process will be indispensible," said Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbit. "Without that, the administration can no longer count on the states as partners in budget-cutting."

Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee and welfare officials from Arkansas and Mississippi told a congressional hearing Monday that their states would not increase welfare spending to fill gaps created by federal budget cuts.

They also warned against further federal budget cuts soon, saying they intended to fight any and all cuts, especially any move to cut revenue-sharing funds.

Revenue-sharing is one of the most popular federal programs with city and state officials. It is a straight turnback of some of the taxes collected by the federal government and the money is dispensed with few regulatory strings.

When President Reagan proposed in September that 12 percent of the program's funds be slashed in a second round of cuts, he ran into a storm of criticism from governors, mayors, and county supervisors.

Projected cutbacks in federal assistance to state and local governments in capital development projects, including waste water treatment plants and new highways, are causing growing alarm in the Rocky Mountain region, where rapid population growth and the drive to develop energy resources have already put a severe strain on public services.

To compensate for the administration's proposed cutbacks in a broad range of programs that offer assistance or grants-in-aid to state and local governments for capital construction and planning, officials in the western states are looking at ways to either cut spending in other areas or to increase taxes.

Officials in Colorado and Utah are talking about raising the severance tax they levy on the value of their coal, oil, gas and other natural resources.

In the midwest, Minnesota is facing a $700 million deficit, partly as a result of a tax cut accomplished by linking tax rates to the Cost Price Index, a process known as indexing.

The state's municipal officials have said that if the legislature does not move quickly to solve the cash flow problem, they will be forced to make wide reductions in personnel and educational, maintenance, police and fire services will be cut back sharply.

In the Great Lakes states of Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, hit hard by the nation's manufacturing slump and high unemployment, the situation is also desperate and its governors intend to oppose any further federal cutbacks.

The Michigan legislature has raised taxes to bail out the state. Wisconsin is in financial difficulties and Ohio is nearing bankruptcy.

In the East, New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey contends that balancing the budget will cause more than the usual amount of difficulty, as the state will have a tougher time filling a predicted $300 million deficit next year.

"There seems to be an unspoken agreement among the governors," an aide to a midwestern governor confided the other day.

"They will take their lumps and the blame for any problems they have created," he said. "But they will be darned if they take the blame for what's happening in Washington."

"They're spoiling for a fight," he added. "If Reagan doesn't cooperate, he will get it."

San Fransico drug law controversial

By TOM MURPHY
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ernie Handy stumbled along a dirty sidewalk in San Francisco's South of Market district, his pants supported precariously by a piece of string. To the untrained eye, he looked like many of the unshaven men sipping wine nearby.

But Steve Bosshard and Joe Dutto didn't think Handy was drinking. They stopped him and discovered he was holding what police lab tests later showed was a marijuana cigarette and two balloons of heroin.

Bosshard and Dutto are two of 85 San Francisco police officers trained for a program that is drawing raves from police and cries of "sham" from critics.

The program is called 11-5-50 after section 11550 of the state Health and Safety Code which requires that anyone convicted of being under the influence of heroin spend at least 90 days in county jail.

It was started in an attempt to cut drug-related crime, like shoplifting and burglary.

Narcotics police like Bosshard and Dutto like the law because it leaves judges no discretion in sentencing heroin users. The court can't reduce the sentence or grant probation. The guilty go to jail, and off the streets, for the full 90 days.

To take advantage of the law, officers are trained to spot subtle signs of drug use they otherwise might miss: dilated pupils, well-hidden needle marks, slow reactions.

Critics complain police are wasting their time chasing small-time users. And they claim narcotics officers frequently violate the rights of those arrested.

"The whole program is a sham," says Pete Keane, chief attorney for the public defender's office. "It allows a police officer to make a clinical judgment for which he is not qualified."

Keane calls the program "an expensive bit of frill the police engage in that is meant more as public show than substantive law enforcement."

But police counter that the burglary rate fell sharply in the city's seedy Tenderloin area when six officers made 253 narcotics arrests during a six-week trial program in 1979.

However, the trained officers have made only 83 arrests since June, when the program was revived.

Bosshard said other priority items keep many trained officers from participating in the program, and those who are regularly assigned often lack enthusiasm, Bosshard said.

"Out of the 85 officers, I would bet 70 of them have never done an 11550," said Bosshard.

After the 1979 roundup, public defenders challenged the little-used 1972 law in court, and lost. Keane still believes the law is unconstitutional.

"Never before in the area of criminal inquiry have police been given such a broad power to sweep ordinary citizens off the streets," he said.

Healthy future for organized labor foreseen

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Organized labor's future in Texas "is going to be healthy," predicts Texas AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard, who points to a 42 percent increase in union membership over the last two years.

"We figure it over the last two years," Hubbard says, "because that's how long Bill Clements has been governor."

Hubbard argues Clements' election has spurred union membership in Texas, "just as the Reagan Administration's going to be a factor throughout the nation."

"Even with the loss of jobs," Hubbard says, "I think we will see a trend where there are jobs towards union organization."

Unemployment "has gone up a little bit even in Texas," Hubbard says, but employment remains high — with more of those workers joining unions.

Texas AFL-CIO now lists 298,500 members, he reports.

Union officials aren't making any special efforts in any particular areas or industries, Hubbard says, "just a continuing organizing drive on the part of all internationals throughout the state."

However, he notes, a long-range program "to do nothing but organizing" has been launched recently in Houston — the first such program in Texas.

"In the years to come," Hubbard comments, "that's going to pay off down there considerably."

The Houston program is patterned after one in Los Angeles, which has met with much success, Hubbard says, "and we think it will be the same in the Houston-Gulf Coast area."

Hubbard also notes that union officials will be keeping a close watch on the nationwide contract for the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers when bargaining on that pact begins in January.

Texas Air Control Board has called for changes in the Federal Clean Air Act in testimony filed with the U.S. House Subcommittee on Health and Environment in Washington.

TACB had planned to testify on changes in the non-attainment policy, but was told the panel would not have time to hear the presentation.

TACB has recommended that the non-attainment provisions be revised to incorporate "technology-based control improvements," and to eliminate the so-called emission "banking" or "bubble" concepts of "offsetting" emissions.

Also recommended was that state plans for implementing the Federal requirements be given approval within a 90-day period, and that if more stringent requirements are place on emission sources, that industries be given "some reasonable time period" for complying.

Gov. Clements, by executive order, has created the Govenor's Task Force on Work-Related Accidents, which has been charged with finding ways to reduce deaths and injuries in the work-place.

Referral service will match contractors, possible clients

Contractors Bureau, located in Suite 104 at 3108 N. Big Spring St., currently is being staffed by Law, 27, and his wife, Wanda, 26.

Presently the office is open only for the compilation of files on contractors. Beginning Jan. 1, 1982, however, the services provided by Contractors Bureau will open to the general public, Law said.

Referrals will be made to the general public from among contractors who choose to join the bureau. Law explained that when a customer calls the bureau seeking the services of a particular type of contractor, a builder for example, bureau personnel will research the files and provide to the customer a list of three prospective building contractors.

Robert Law

The bureau will rotate the names of contractors referred so that each contractor is referred an equal number of times, Law stressed. "We're not trying to hurt anybody's business," Law said.

The services of Contractors Bureau are designed to assist the public in locating various contractors and to protect the consumer against fly-by-night operations, Law said. The bureau will maintain files on all the contractors in Midland and can provide information to the general public about each. The service also will be valuable to contractors because a contractor listed in bureau files will be referred numerous times, he added.

If repetitive complaints are received against a particular contractor listed in the bureau's files, Law noted, and if those complaints are found to be justified, Contractors Bureau will stop referring that contractor. All complaints will be investigated, Law said.

Types of contractors to be listed in the bureau's files will include builders, framers, remodelers, painters, carpet-layers, maids and "just about anything anybody can do with a home," according to Law. The bureau can be reached by telephoning 686-7623.

A native of Altus, Okla., Law and his wife have been in Midland since Dec. 31, 1978. Previously he was a paint contractor here and also was employed with Sherwin Williams Co. in Altus, Plainview, Amarillo and Dumas.

Law and his wife have two children.
