WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Republicans Make Sweeping Gains For Both Senate and House Seats; Korean Situation Is Called Serious

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

An estimated 80,000 Chinese Communists are reported driving southward (broken arrows) in an attempt to split U.N. forces. U.N. troops withdrew, although some units were surrounded and cut to pieces. Observers report the Korean situation serious.

ELECTION: Republicans Gain

Taking the administration by surprise, the Republican party made sweeping gains in the senate and house in one of the most hotly contested national elections in years. As final tabulations were being completed, observers believed that the Democrats would retain 49 senate seats and the Republicans would have 47. To all practical purposes the Republicans will have a working majority in the senate and will control legislative voting with the aid of rebellious southern Democrats.

In the house the Republicans made sweeping gains, but not enough for control. Most startling aspect of the election, in the opinion of most observers, was the defeat of such men as Democrat Sen. Millard E. Tydings of Maryland and Sen. Scott Lucas of Illinois.

Lucas was the Democratic majority leader in the senate and Tydings was a strong supporter of the administration and the state department.

In Ohio, Sen. Robert A. Taft won a resounding victory over the labor-Truman purge attempt. Foreign policy played an important part in Taft's campaign and the results of the battle may shake the foundations of the Republican party. Some observers saw Taft's victory as a plain indication that the people were not happy with the administration's foreign policy.

The administration took another blow in Connecticut. Republican John Davis Lodge ousted Fair Deal Democrat Chester Bowles in the governor's contest. Democrat Sen. Brien McMahon, however, was re-elected.

In New York, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, twice-defeated Republican nominee for president, won a third term as governor of that state. The governor's running mate, Lt. Gov. Joe R. Hanley, was defeated by Sen. Herbert Lehman. Here again was evidence of that trend where neither Republicans or Democrats were able to sweep all offices. This split across party lines was evident in many sections of the country.

In California, Republican Gov. Earl Warren, seeking a third term, won re-election over James Roosevelt, son of the late President. Rep. Richard M. Nixon also defeated Democrat Helen Gahagan Douglas in a senatorial battle.

In a congressional fight that attracted nationwide attention, American-Labor party Rep. Vito Marcantonio of New York, the only minor party representative in the house, was unseated by a Democratic-Republican-Liberal coalition formed for the sole purpose of beating him. Marcantonio's foes charged that he followed every twist and turn of the Communist party line during his service in the house.

As final tabulations were completed, observers agreed that Democratic control of the senate and house was so slight it did not constitute a safe working majority. As a result, the next two years will see a number of bitter battles on legislation and much of it being passed or killed by incredible small margins.

OFFICIAL CENSUS

U. S. Population Now 150,697,316

As of April 1, 1950, there were 150,697,316 persons in the United States. That is the official count as recently released.

This represented an increase of 19,028,068 since the 1940 census.

In the last 10 years there has been a considerable shift in the concentration of the population. As a result seven states will gain a total of 14 seats in the house of

Headliners

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey added a marathon television show to his list of political-campaigning devices. He had Mrs. Dewey on the show with him a while. He asked her, "Why don't you take your hat off." She replied, "Because my hair's a mess. Why do things like this happen just when I need a permanent?"

"The Communists committed one of the most offensive acts of international lawlessness of historic record," Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in his report on Chinese intervention in North Korea.

George Bernard Shaw, Irish author and wit, who died at the age of 94, for years had kept the world in a whirl with his use of words. Here are some Shavianisms: Success—"The secret of success is to offend the greatest number of people." Truth—"The truth is the one thing nobody will believe." Love—"Sir, there are two tragedies in life. One is to lose your heart's desire. The other is to gain it."

KOREA: Situation Serious

The war in Korea which seemed on the verge of complete victory for the United Nations forces took a dangerous turn with the invasion of Chinese Communists. Political observers termed the situation serious, including Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the U.N. commander.

According to available reports, between three and six Chinese divisions crossed the boundary between Manchuria and Korea and went into battle beside the North Koreans. The immediate military result was a withdrawal of U.N. troops south, in some instances as much as 50 miles.

MacArthur summed up the situation by reporting that the North Korean army was finished as a fighting force in October by the inflicting of 335,000 casualties. This included 135,000 Reds who were captured.

His communique on the situation said: "In the face of this victory of U.N. arms, the Communists committed one of the most offensive acts of international lawlessness of historic record."

There are available in Manchuria about 300,000 troops—veterans of the Chinese civil war—which could be thrown into the battle immediately. Another 300,000 are believed to be either in Manchuria or North China.

The dangerous question now facing the free nations is what attitude the Chinese will take to MacArthur's charge that "alien Communists" have entered the war. Whether the Communist world is prepared to take this colossal slap is a secret, most probably locked in the depths of the Kremlin.

If the Communists are ready to take this risk it may mean the start of World War III and the end of the world as we have known it.

Congress could change the membership total of the house if it wished, but most observers believed this unlikely.

GERM-WARFARE: Infected Rats Found

One of the most frightening and horrible discoveries of the Korean conflict was made public when the army disclosed it had found five thousand rats and mice inoculated with deadly plague and other germs in a secret laboratory near Pyongyang.

The army reported more than 5,000 rats and mice were inoculated with such diseases as bubonic plague, encephalitis, and euryrady fever immediately after the U.N. landing at Inchon.

Only 380 of the carriers were alive when discovered and 200 of these were mad from hunger. None were believed to have been turned loose or to have escaped from their sealed cages, though fleas from the dead animals might spread disease.

The project was reported under the supervision of a Russian woman scientist who fled northward after the landing.

The animals were kept in cages in groups of from two to 20. They were well fed and their furs sprayed with a chemical that encouraged the multiplication of fleas.

The discovery will provide a clue to the type of germ-warfare experimentation Communist countries might be carrying out and give the free nations of the world an indication as to what horrors the Communist will resort.

SPAIN: Ban Is Lifted

After four years the United Nations had lifted its diplomatic ban against the Spanish government. The action accomplished two objectives:

1. It withdrew the 1948 recommendation to all U.N. members that they withdraw ambassadors and ministers from Madrid.

2. It lifted the 1948 ban against admission of Spain to the U.N.'s specialized agencies.

The United States, however, will not return an ambassador to Madrid. President Truman said publicly recently he would not appoint one.

The U.N.'s resolution left intact the condemnation of the Franco regime for its aid to the Axis during World War II.

The United States voted in favor of removing the boycott which was spearheaded by Catholic Latin American nations.

Revolutionist

Pedro Albizu Campos, Harvard graduate, leader of the Nationalist party that three Puerto Rico in turmoil, was arrested after the attempt to assassinate President Truman. FBI agents were trying to connect him with the attempt on the President's life.

WORLD WAR III: Thunder Can Be Heard

The capitals of the world trembled because many observers believed they heard the thunder of World War III on the horizon.

The thunder was caused by Communist China which adopted the attitude that "American intervention in Korea signals an intention to invade China."

All Communist dispatches and broadcasts hammered out the same recurrent themes:

1. The Chinese Communists will oppose "American imperialist aggressors" with concrete action.

2. American use of the atom bomb will mean retaliation in kind. Observers were further troubled because the Chinese evidently meant business. From three to six Chinese divisions had been identified in action in Korea against United Nations forces. They forced U.N. troops to make withdrawals, and, from early reports, intended to continue their march south.

No one in his right mind could overlook the fact that China could be the strongest nation in the world. The Chinese Communist armies already are estimated at 5,000,000 men of whom 1,000,000 are in Manchuria. Peiping, recently announced organization of 5,500,000 armed militia, bringing the country's armed strength to more than 10,000,000.

Its industrial might never has been exploited, but could, within a few years, become one of the greatest in the world. China's war supplies at present are furnished in great part by Russia. There is no reason to believe they will be discontinued.

Observers believe that if China is determined to do so, she can take over Korea. It would mean a defeat for United Nations forces and the first phase of World War III. The answer seems to be hidden in the brain of Mao Tse-tung, China's Communist leader.

DEAN OF OPERETTA

Romberg Has Composed Over Seventy Operettas and Musicals

Sigmund Romberg, whose life story soon will be shown on the world's movie screens, is the kind of man who makes "highbrows" unhappy.

He insists he is a "middle brow" composer and that he is happy being just that. For a man who bears the impressive label of Dean of American operetta, it is a startling admission.

"Most Americans have middle brow tastes in music. What's wrong with that?" he says in support of his statement that he'd rather write melodies with a sentiment and a tune that people can remember and whistle than heroic arias that almost no one can sing without weeks of hectic practice.

Since Romberg exiled himself to America 43 years ago to escape his parents' determination to make a bridge builder out of him, he is quite content to have the same tastes as most of the rest of the people in the United States.

"Besides," he asks, "what high-brow achieves enough importance during his own life to merit a Hollywood movie treatment of his career while he is still around to see it?"

Romberg will be able to see it as soon as Hollywood finishes the movie it is now making.

SIGMUND ROMBERG really might have built some beautiful bridges if his parents had their way and he had become a construction engineer. But instead, he has turned out more than 70 stage and screen operettas and musicals, among them standards like "Maytime," "Student Prince" and the "Desert Song," one or the other of which is still touring somewhere at almost any time. He has written a magnificent total of 2,000 songs like "Lover, Come Back to Me."

And he isn't finished yet! "There is lots more music to be written—lots of it in me—and I am writing it," he explains.

Right now, he is composing another musical which he expects to have on Broadway this winter. Some composers compose their songs on a piano, some in their head, Romberg composes most of his music on a Hammond organ, so that he can get the effect of the entire orchestra as he tests a melody on the Hammond. He used to do it on a pipe organ, sitting in solitary majesty before the gigantic instrument. When the Hammond organ was invented, he got one of the first made. Since then he has been using it to turn out the kind of music that fits in with America's heart beat.

IT WAS IN VIENNA that he got his first formal music education. Finishing his schooling in Vienna, he had to serve his term in the army. When that was finished, the crisis came. His father, though very musical himself, was determined his son was going to be an engineer and build bridges. The peace maker in the dispute that arose was his mother who suggested that he spend a year in America before making a decision. America had a lot of fine bridges, she figured, and maybe her son would learn to love bridges over rivers more than musical bridges. It didn't work. Romberg came to the United States, went to work packing pencils in a pencil factory for a brief period and then got a job as a pianist in a restaurant he had stopped at to satisfy his craving for Hungarian goulash. That was the beginning.

The next step in his career came in rapid succession. He organized his own orchestra, played at a fashionable New York restaurant and began composing in earnest. He never got around to thinking of the bridges again. Let the high-brows build the bridges, he decided. Instead, he wrote enough music to make him probably the most prolific of the big-time composers in the theater.

Samuel Goldwyn will come up with a re-make of "The Winning of Barbara Worth," remembered as the picture which launched Gary Cooper's career, in 1928. This time Dana Andrews gets the starring role. And it will be produced in semi-documentary style, since it deals with the trials of desert reclamation in the west. But the love story won't be ignored.

Gov. Dan E. Garvey of Arizona has agreed to appear in walk-on role in Pine and Thomas' "The Last Outpost," being filmed near Tucson. It has not yet been decided whether the governor will portray a Yankee or a Confederate soldier. In either case, he will be given the grade of corporal. Ronald Reagan, Rhonda Fleming and Noah Beery, Jr., head the cast.

Last night at Lindy's a bunch of us were discussing what, for want of a better term, I'll call the inevitability of the impossible. "The most improbable I ever heard," said Deems Taylor, "is the one about a missionary named Renault who was captured in 1948 by a tribe of cannibals in French Equatorial Africa."

"According to a report in the files out at the U.N., just as they were about to roast him over a fire, shish-kebab style, the missionary told his knees and asked the Lord to have mercy on his servant, Renault. And when the cannibal chief heard the name, he untied him and told him to go about his business."

"No, it wasn't the prayer that did the trick—it seems that six months before, they had cooked and eaten another guest named Renault and he had turned out to be tough and tasteless."

"I KNOW an equally implausible story," I piped up. "The one about the clerk in Tacoma, Washington, who was handed five thousand dollars to buy insurance for a bridge that was under construction. The fellow had never stolen a nickel in his life, but this was one temptation he couldn't stand off—what in the name of the five Ringling Brothers could happen to a bridge?"

THE FICTION CORNER

NEW NEIGHBORS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

THE Whitney's living room faced on a court. Across the court were the windows of another apartment. Occasionally Paul Whitney, relaxed on his couch, could see people moving around there. After a day or two he decided that the occupants were a young, childless couple who spent a good deal of time at home.

"I'd like to get to know them," Paul confided to his wife.

Mrs. Whitney sighed. "I would, too. We've been here a month now and haven't met a soul. Do you suppose I ought to go over and call?"

Paul shook his head doubtfully. "I wouldn't—not without some good excuse. You know how apartment dwellers are. They might think we were imposing." He glanced across the court. "They have a much better apartment than ours."

"Better?"

"Why, it's obviously their living room we can look into and, if you'll notice, there are windows on both sides."

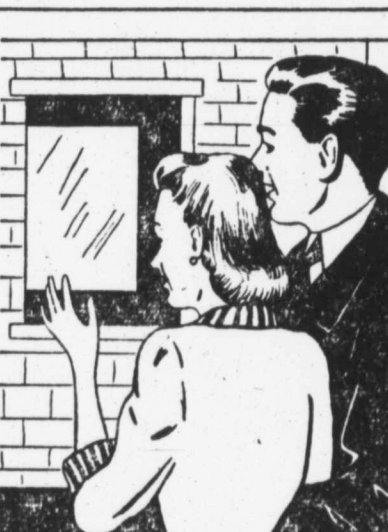

Mrs. Whitney followed her husband's gaze. Without effort she could look into their neighbors' living room and see the window on the wall opposite.

"That's so," she admitted.

Mrs. Whitney went into the kitchen and Paul rose and strolled idly toward the window of his own living room. On the chance of being observed, he pretended to examine a potted plant on the sill.

Surprisingly he glanced across the court, and was shocked to see the head and shoulders of a man framed in the window on the far side of their neighbors' living room.

He called his wife, and, standing well back so as not to be observed, they peered across the court. But

"You're positive you saw someone?" Mrs. Whitney asked.

The figure in the window on the far side vanished.

"You're positive you saw someone?" Mrs. Whitney asked.

"Positive!" Paul affirmed. "Ought we to notify the police?"

"I wouldn't. Whoever it is is gone, and perhaps the police wouldn't believe us. We'd appear ridiculous."

TWO evenings later Paul again saw the peeping Tom. He was standing in the same position, and sight of the man at the window of their neighbors' apartment gave him the same unexpected shock.

"I'm going to do something about it. Sooner or later the chap will conjure enough courage to break his way in," Paul said.

"Let's go over there and warn the people, tell them what we saw and then let them do as they like about it." She hesitated. "Perhaps we can strike up an acquaintance."

THEY CROSSED to the neighboring apartment and knocked. A pleasant-faced woman opened the door.

"Are you Mrs. Phelps?" Mrs. Whitney asked. The woman nodded and Mrs. Whitney said: "We're Mr. and Mrs. Whitney from across the court. We—"

"Come right in. Frank and I were thinking of calling on you."

The Whitneys entered and were greeted cordially by Mr. Phelps. "I'm afraid," said Paul, "that we came on rather an unpleasant mission." And he explained what they had seen.

Mr. Phelps looked puzzled. "There's something wrong here. Would you mind stepping into the living room?" They followed him in and he pointed toward the far wall. "You see we have no windows on that wall."

He broke off as Mrs. Whitney gasped. "Why, it wasn't a window at all! It was that mirror! You see, it hangs where a window might be, and faces our apartment. Paul Whitney, it was your own reflection, you saw! Standing near the flower pot, you saw yourself in the mirror, and it appeared that some one else was peering in at the Phelps!"

Paul's jaw dropped. He swallowed, grinned and looked sheepish. But the Phelps thought it was a grand joke, and urged their new neighbors to spend the evening.

Cheerful Giver

Lesson for November 26, 1950

TAKE a good look at a piece of money. Let it be in any form at all; "hard money," "folding money," a check, a money order, scrip—anything you can shove across a counter and buy something with. Let us say it is your own money, and that you earned it yourself. Just take a look at that piece of Dr. Foreman of cash. Do you recognize it? You should; for it is nothing less than a piece of your own life.

Money Is Life

Y ou got rid of something quite valuable to get hold of that piece of money. Time, certainly; you are poorer than you were 24 hours ago, poorer in time, for you have 24 hours less to live than you had then. But you are richer in money, for you did not have this money then, if it is the return for your work during that time. You lost time but you gained money; in other words the money represents time, which in turn spells life.

Look at it in another way: You put out a certain amount of energy for this bit of money. You plowed a field or you raised some chickens or you laid some pipe or you taught some children or you sold a bill of goods. Whatever you did to earn the money, it tired you a bit. You put out the work, — and the money came back to you. Money is time, money is energy. Furthermore, money is knowledge.

Why is a skilled workman paid more than an unskilled one? Not because he works harder or sweats more. He is paid more because his work is better, and his work is better because he knows more. Now, what would life be without time, energy or knowledge? Not much! So if a robber ever says to you: "Your money or your life!" you would be quite correct (even if untaught) if you said, "My dear fellow, you repeat yourself; money is life!"

Life Comes from God

AMONG the many differences between a Christian and a non-Christian is this: the Christian knows too much to say, "My life is my own, to do with as I please." Consider those three elements of life: time, energy, knowledge. Time itself is certainly God's gift, the Creator's gift. None of us can make a moment of it. We can accept it, use it; or we can waste it; but it was given us in either case.

Energy cannot be created by you or me. Each of us has a certain (and a different) amount; we inherit it, we are endowed with it; but only God in the long run is the source of energy. To make a long story short, life is God's gift, not our creation. It is a blank page on which we write, an empty field in which we can sow as we will. But though the writing and the sowing are our own, the page and the field are God's. So the Christian recognizes this as the central fact of his life: I belong to God.

Now if that is true it is also true that our money is also, just as much as life itself, ours only as a trust from God.

Stewardship

"STEWARDSHIP" is the word which recognizes God's right in our lives; it is the word which describes the principle of life for those who honor God as source of all they are and have. When the proverb-writer says, "Honor God with thy substance," he has just said, "in all thy ways acknowledge him." No man is likely to do what is right with his money who habitually does wrong with his life. No man is going to admit his partnership with God in money matters who does not confess God to be the Lord of all his life.

Now there are two principles brought out in our Scripture about stewardship of money in particular. One is this: God looks on what we have, not on what we haven't. A widow who gives one tiny coin, if that is all she has, is more generous than a millionaire who has just given half a million to Charity. Second is the principle of willingness. The Lord loves a cheerful giver. Sour givers, regretful givers, stingy givers, no. But the Lord does love the man who gives with a smile. It isn't how much you give, it's how you give. It's your heart-generous in the first place!

Correct Care of Floors Depends on Types of Surfaces

By Ertta Haley

NO MATTER what floor coverings you have in your home, much expense and work has gone into them. For these reasons alone, if not for the pleasure of having beautiful, gleaming surfaces, keeping floors flawless more than justifies the work.

Since there are so many different kinds of floor finishes, it's essential to know how each type should best be cared for. You won't want to use soap on an oiled floor, nor would you apply an oiled mop to a varnished floor.

How much water should be used on cement flooring? Should oil ever be used on waxed floors? What can be done to prevent dark colors streaking the unfinished floors? What is the best cleanser for a tiled floor? These and other questions naturally pop into the mind when it comes to floor care.

There is both a preferred daily routine for caring for floors, as well as weekly or monthly care outlined below. Faithfully followed, the treatments will give you the results desired, in shining, flawless coverings.

The biggest enemy to floor beauty is, of course, dirt or dust. For this reason, it's wise to keep after the floors daily, or at least every other day, and thus prevent the dust from grinding into the pores of the finish. Once lodged, it may be very difficult to remove.

Use Dustless Mop on Varnished Floors
The gleam of the varnished floor can be retained for a long time if daily dust is removed with a clean dustless mop or a broom covered with a soft cloth.

To prevent dust from gathering in the corners and crevices, use a good vacuum cleaner attachment. When more than daily cleaning is essential, use mild soap suds and water, and go over the floor with a mop. After the floor is thoroughly dry, go over it with a small amount of oil to restore the gleam. Make certain the oil is rubbed in or it will give a cloudy film to the floor. White spots on varnished floors can be removed—rub gently with a cloth moistened in kerosene or floor oil. If a light scraping is needed to remove the spots, touch up with a bit of varnish.

For varnished floors which have been marred and whitened in many spots, make a mixture of one tablespoon vinegar with three tablespoons of boiled linseed oil or olive oil and one teaspoon turpentine. Cover the spot with the mixture and let stand for several minutes.

ONCE OVER

The Great Ticket-Agent Conspiracy

By H. I. PHILLIPS

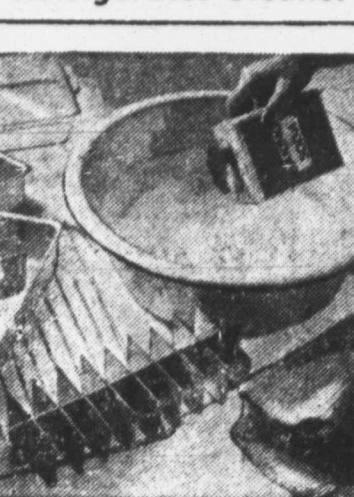

WE ARE IN RECEIPT of a communication from Thaddeus P. Swank, America's leading "Second Line" man, with regard to a recent column recording the seemingly endless red tape required to get railroad transportation to any fairly distant point. "Have you ever been the man directly behind the first man at the ticket window?" he demands. "If not you don't know what tough going really is. If you want to pity somebody pity me."

"I have never dashed to a railroad ticket window in my life seeking a ticket for a 30-mile trip without finding directly ahead of me, usually by a nose, some guy seeking transportation to Afghanistan via New Orleans and Carson City with a stop-over at Eggplant Creek," he continues. "If I am not in a great sweat, he may be not being quite so far, but let me be in a hurry and I am certain to find in front of me a fellow who has received the orders 'Find Dr. Livingstone!' and is making all the arrangements with special attention to drawing rooms, etc."

"I think the ticket window clerks and these birds are in cahoots. They both have such fun together. It seems to me, I suspect they have signals which are flashed the moment I appear at the station and start galloping for the window. Sure, there are other windows. Sure, one has a little sign 'Mr. Hasselstoffer.' But Hasselstoffer has a great eye. He sees the customer FIRST! And he can grab a bunch of papers, rubberstamps, etc., and hide fast!

"Another window announces

Refrigerator Cleaner

Keep the refrigerator sweet and fresh smelling with the old kitchen standby, baking soda. It will remove the greasy film which clings to the walls and fittings that hold food odor, and will thus remove odor. Sprinkle soda on a damp cloth or cellulose sponge and wipe inside surfaces. Then wipe walls, trays and shelves with cloth wrung out in clear water.

Then rub briskly with a cloth, following the grain of the wood.

Use Little Water On Oiled, Waxed Floors

An oiled floor requires daily cleaning with a soft brush and an oil mop. If this care is used, little water will be necessary to clean the floor. If you do have to resort to water cleaning, the floor will need a treatment of fresh oil every six months to keep it in handsome condition.

Cover a broom with a soft cloth, or use a dustless mop on waxed floors for daily care. Use water only on rare occasions, and only when necessary. Oil should never be used on waxed floors.

When stringent cleaning measures are necessary on the waxed floor, wring out a cloth in warm, soapy water, or dampen with turpentine. For even better treatment, wring a cloth out in liquid wax. This cuts and removes ground in dirt and supplies the floor with fresh wax. When using this wax treatment with a cloth for cleaning purposes, change the cloth frequently or the floor will get stubborn dirt streaks on it.

Three-fourths of the battle in keeping waxed floors in good condition lies in applying plenty of "elbow grease" to the floor to bring out the gloss in the wax. If you can get an electric floor polisher to use every so often, this will save you a great deal of work.

Dry Unfinished Floors As Quickly as Possible

Unfinished floors can be beautiful if you can prevent them from getting dark and streaking. Much of this dirty look comes from soaking the floors in water and from not drying them as quickly as possible.

Open the windows wide when you're scrubbing the floors so that the breeze will dry them rapidly. While you're washing with brush or mop, warm water and soap, it will help to keep a clean, dry cloth by your side with which to go over the floor as soon as it's cleaned.

For an occasional scouring, you can apply fine steel wool to the floors to keep them in tip-top condition. Floors which are badly stained should be given the acid treatment. Dissolve ¼ pound of oxalic crystals in one quart of hot water. Spread the solution on the stain and let stand overnight. In the morning, wash the floor with warm water to which a little sal soda has been added, rinse thoroughly and, of course, dry quickly.

These Floors Require Warm Water Washing

Painted floors are easy to keep clean daily with a soft, dry floor mop. However, when more extensive care is required, use warm water to which a little kerosene is added.

Shellacked floors, like painted ones, profit from daily dusting with a soft dry mop. If vigorous cleaning is needed, dampen a cloth with gasoline and wipe gently.

For shellacked floors which have developed slight blemishes, apply gasoline to spots and rub very lightly with steel wool, so that you don't break through the lacker film.

Warm water is prescribed for both glazed and unglazed tile floors. The glazed tile floor is simple to clean with just warm water and mild soap. Dry well after washing.

For unglazed tile floors, change water frequently, or the tiles will become soiled from dirty water. Avoid flooding the floor with water. An oil soap is preferred to ordinary soap for good cleaning, and a good paste wax helps "seal" the floors and helps it retain its beauty. Afterwards, you may apply liquid wax from time to time.

Oil soap is also best for cleaning terrazzo floors, and the care should be periodical. Sweep these floors free of all dust before washing for best results.

Cement and rubber floorings require water for vigorous cleaning, but even then water should be used sparingly. If either of these types are to be waxed, use whatever the manufacturer of the floor recommends for them.

Linoleum Should Have Finish Renewed

The best care which you can give linoleum is to wipe whatever spills on it as soon as possible, before it soaks into the finish. To get rid of daily dust and dirt, use a soft, dry mop, and go over the floor thoroughly.

When you do have to resort to washing the floor, use a tightly wrung mop after dipping it in mild soap suds and warm water. When the floor is clean and dry, it may be relacquered or waxed, depending upon the finishing material used originally on the floor.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

The Little Fox in Your House

"MY WIFE GETS A COLD, and the tip of her nose gets red, and it's that way all winter," a man wrote me, some years ago. "She never cures it up, and you'd think she was rather proud of it if you could hear her say, 'here's my cold again.' Now our little Sheila is four, and Gwen is beginning on her. I believe she's going to have my colds every winter," she tells me. Doesn't it ever go through her head that a man hates that sort of thing?"

"Little talks poor," another husband also wrote me some time ago. I have saved a dozen of these letters from men, all about those apparent trifles that really do have an important effect on married happiness. "Little talks poor," writes Fred Green. "We aren't poor, not by any standards that would hold anywhere else in the world. We own our home and most of our car and a third of our television set, and we have all the rest of it, refrigerator and radio and telephone and gas stove. Of course, we haven't as much money as we'd like, who has? But that eternal cheerful 'well, we're poor folks, and fur coats and trips to Florida aren't for us. Don't talk as if you were as rich as the Smiths, Fred, because you know we can't afford things.'"

"You get damned tired of it!" this letter ends gloomily.

A third letter is from a man who married a pretty wife.

Shabby at Home
"Beauty is Fern's business," Kane Choate writes. "She never lets up. The only people who see my wife looking pretty now are outsiders. At home she's always plastered and oiled and has her hair done up in little snails, tipping on her wrapper. She always wears shabby washable things around the house because lipstick and paint and nail polish get on them. She shoves

"...don't wrinkle me..."

one side of her face up at me to kiss when I get home and says, 'don't wrinkle me.'"

"When we go out she looks swell, and I'm proud of her. But a man likes a pretty, neat, comfortable-looking woman in his home, too."

Seven other letters, among those I have been collecting over the years, complain of untidiness and sloppiness at the breakfast table, on the part of busy wives and mothers, but for these criticisms I have less sympathy, for only a woman knows what that pre-office, pre-school scramble can be.

Then there's the husband whose wife cleans her fingernails in public places; when they are lunching together downtown, for instance. This is most irritating and embarrassing for all present.

"I've gotten used, and I guess most fellows have," says this letter, "to her taking out her compact and doing up her face and her lips right at the table. But then when she slowly and comfortably goes at her nails, somehow it makes me sick. Jean and I share law offices together, and she is a great pal, but all this nail-cleaning and after-lunch tooth-picking in public kind of goes against me."

Runs His Jokes

Another husband represents a large class of the domestically ill-treated. He appears to be a real man's man, president of more than one club and a general favorite. He says his devoted, loved little Lucy spoils all social occasions by hurriedly putting in the point of his jokes before he reaches them.

"Lucy has no more sense of humor than our seven-months-old son," he writes. "When I get started and everyone begins to laugh, she puts in these little unamused comments, or reminds me that it happened on a Saturday and not a Tuesday, or she corrects my grammar. What the dickens can a man do when he begins to talk, and his wife says 'that is funny, Dan, but I've heard it so often, or 'make this one short, dear, other people like to talk.' And it isn't," the aggrieved Dan finishes, "as if she contributed anything. Getting anything out of my wife is like getting the cork out of a bottle when its way down in."

Smugglers In Big Gold Rush

'Prospectors' Profit By Gold Price Changes

PARIS, FRANCE—There's still a gold rush in Europe of almost Klondike proportions, but the prospectors are men with limousines instead of burros.

Their tools are the financial pages of the newspapers instead of shovels. The arrest of a smuggling gang with $100,000 in American currency hidden in the fenders of a big American car led police on an international hunt for a revival of postwar black marketeering.

"They discovered that the gang had been buying gold in Italy and Switzerland and selling it in Paris for an 8 percent to 12 percent profit, for dollars. The gold price in Paris was higher.

Thus, on a single trip, they could net up to $12,000 for their $100,000 investment, a neat profit in any country for a three or four day job.

The outbreak of the Korean war, with resultant large fluctuations in gold prices, is believed to have set off the revival of the smuggling rackets. They had flourished previously just after the war, when all Europe demanded gold.

A black market artist, for example, can buy a Swiss gold franc for between $8.40 and $9 in Zurich and sell it in Paris for just under $10 at the black market rate for the dollar.

He can peddle the same Swiss franc in Brussels for $9.60.

In Brussels, police said there was "considerable smuggling" of gold into the country from areas where it could be bought more cheaply.

Swiss authorities claimed there had been a slight decrease in recent weeks, but other sources attributed it to the fact that gold can be bought more cheaply in Italy. When police arrested a gang of

MIRROR Of Your MIND

A Mother's Job Is Motherliness

By Lawrence Gould

Do we ask too much of mothers?

Answer: No, says Dr. James Clark Moloney—we're more apt to ask too little. The fact that a baby needs more "mothering" in his first two years than some "independent" mothers are capable of giving does not make him able to develop normally without it. "We must not lose sight of the child's needs just because some mothers are unable to provide the basic necessity of motherliness."

We must educate prospective mothers to accept and to enjoy the intimate relationship that Nature means them to have with their babies.

Does understanding others bring self-knowledge?

Answer: The two at least go together. Two Cornell University psychologists report developing a method by which they could test the extent to which subjects were able to "emphasize" other people (meaning roughly, understand how they feel). Those who rated high in this respect not only were more cooperative, but showed better insight into their own natures. Perhaps a psychoanalyst might suggest that this "puts the cart before the horse." For it's seeing yourself as you are that helps you understand your neighbors.

Are we born at war with ourselves?

Answer: Not inherently. Our inner conflicts start as we begin to realize that we are in a world where some of our wishes can't be gratified except at the expense of others; we can't keep our parents under our thumbs, for example, and still have them strong and wise enough to take care of us. A "well integrated" person is one who has worked out an effective compromise among his basic urges (like the wish for freedom and the need of security) so as to satisfy each one adequately without wholly frustrating any other.

LOOKING AT RELIGION

THE CASTING OF LOTS WAS A GENERAL PRACTICE AMONG THE ANCIENTS. THE ISRAELITES SOMETIMES USED THE CUSTOM TO ASCERTAIN THE DIVINE WILL. AMONG THE MANY INSTANCES OF ITS PRACTICE WAS THE DIVISION OF THE PROMISED LAND AMONG THE TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

KEEPING HEALTHY Every Patient Wants Emotional Care

By Dr. James W. Barton

EVERY PHYSICIAN KNOWS that every patient consulting him not only has some physical ailment but also needs mental and emotional treatment. A youngster has a slight or a severe illness and all members of his family and playmates do anything and everything to please him. A short time ago I saw a boy with a plaster cast on his leg being drawn along the street by two playmates. For several days afterward, the boy, wagon and playmates were all together. Then I noticed the boy sitting on his wagon, the cast removed, and the playmates not present. The boy looked disappointed because he was no longer receiving any attention. This looking for sympathy and attention is not confined to children. Many grownups, with a slight or severe illness, also expect it.

In Texas State Journal of Medicine, Dr. A. Hauser, Houston, states that nearly all diseases or illnesses include an emotional or psychic side which should be taken into consideration, and should be given careful thought together with the usual symptoms—temperature, pulse, pain, physical debility—that can be observed or told by the patient. It has long been estimated that 30 to 70 per cent of all illnesses observed and treated by the general physician have underlying causes and actual symptoms for which emotional and mental disturbances are responsible.

Dr. Hauser suggests that the physician should always have in mind that mental and emotional factors must be considered in the treatment of the case because treatment of the emotional and mental effects on the illness means a quicker recovery of the illness itself and a shorter convalescence.

The above is in line with the new idea of getting the patient up early after operation and also up early after other illnesses where the heart can stand it. The very fact that he is on his feet again arouses the fighting instinct within him.

HEALTH NOTES

Some striking results in giving middle-aged men a lift in morale by use of Vitamin B have been reported.

Use of purgatives to reduce weight below normal is a mistake.

The lower part of the stomach is the part that stimulates the flow of stomach digestive juices.

The patient must learn to live with high blood pressure, as there is little chance it can be cured. A long, happy life can be enjoyed by those afflicted.

Aspirin prevents coagulation of the blood.

There are more mental patients today than at any previous time.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT METHODIST CHURCH

Special services were held at the Methodist Church last Sunday. The entire program was centered around The Home. The high school girls in the Home-making class with the teacher, Mrs. Crawford, were present in a body. The pastor preached on The Home. Congressman and Mrs. Mahon were also present for the morning worship hour.

Sunday night Mrs. Holland Hope came with some pictures she and Chaplain Hope took while in Japan with the Army of occupation. She spoke after the showing of the pictures. Those who were not present missed something worthwhile. The needs of the Japanese people are as great as they ever were. They do not have soap, sewing equipment, no heat only for cooking one meal, no shoes, they wear wooden sandals, not enough clothes to keep them warm. Send boxes of used clothing to them. Check with me for information, or Mrs. Harvey Leach of the Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Palmer and baby and Mrs. Dorothy Stone and Floyd visited relatives in Lubbock Sunday. Mrs. A. D. Palmer returned with them after spending the day there with her son, Tommie Palmer, at Texas Tech.

Rev. C. V. Thompson is in San Angelo this week conducting a revival at the Bethel Baptist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Kidd and children and Mrs. Thompson and daughters will go to San Angelo Friday and attend the closing services of the revival Friday night. Rev. Thompson will return with them.

Don Narrell Spends Summer In Canada

Don Narrell came in Tuesday night from Edmonton, Canada, where he has been since June as a member of a professional football team.

Don, a graduate of T. C. U. in June, was one of the T. C. U. star players for four years. He was selected by scouts to play with the Edmonton Eskimos professional team.

Don and another T. C. U. player left on June 28 for Canada to begin training until opening of the season. Out of the 19 games the Eskimos played they won ten of them. They lost 2 out of the 3 games played with the Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the finals of the Western Interprovincial of Western Canada.

Winter had arrived in Canada before he left, the thermometer reading 20 below zero, and deep snow. The summer was very cool. Don said, and because of 85 degree weather at one time they postponed their practice because it was too hot.

He was in Edmonton, a city of 150,000 population. This fall they enjoyed the sport of hunting prairie chickens, pheasants and partridges. Deer season had not opened.

Introducing a Senior

Clayton Hughes was born to Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hughes February 11, 1933, at Valley View, Texas.

When Clayton was 5, he started to school in the first grade at Loraine. The advance through grade school was very speedy. In high school, Clayton played football one year and was the manager one year. He has played basketball 4 years, tennis 3 years, and in '48 was assistant editor of the Mastiff.

Some of Clayton's favorites are: Day, Friday; dish, fried chicken; actress, Rita Hayworth. His favorite girl is 5' 6" has brown hair, and is a Sophomore in L. H. S. Clayton intends to make his career farming, and the Seniors wish him all the luck in the future a swell guy deserves.

Homemaking News

Everything seems to be running smoothly around the Homemaking building after a very successful national F. H. A. week.

Most everybody came dressed out in red and white Monday and then wore ribbons other days. The emblem ceremony worked out beautiful, and ivy plants were taken to the sick and shut-ins.

The Ag. boy enjoyed the party we gave them Friday. We served chocolate chip and plain cookies with coconut and punch.

We also received many compliments and thanks for the tea for our mothers. We served cookies and punch. White napkins with "Mother and Daughter Tea" was printed in red letters. Favors were corsages of red paper roses tied with red and white ribbon.

Twenty-three girls and Mrs. Crawford went to the Methodist Church Sunday. We were also glad to have Mrs. Raymond Wheeler with us.

Everyone is looking forward to the wonderful holidays Thursday and Friday. We're hoping that we come out o. k.

Soph News

Seems like everybody stayed home this week-end to go to the Carnival. It seemed to be a big success although we didn't make much money.

Georgia did manage to stir her bones enough to go to Snyder Sunday and Beth went with her Mother and Daddy to Abilene. Doyle went to Sweetwater to visit some friends. Gloria says she went riding around Saturday night. We wonder who with? Couldn't be Doyle could it?

Mr. Maniss is here to make pictures for the Annual today. Let's hope they turn out real good.

The H. E. girls are coming along all right on their dresses. Some of us are nearly through but our slow ones are barely started! Might know!

Everyone seems to be happy because the Thanksgiving holidays are this week. I guess it doesn't take us long to get tired of going to school but I think we are all liking it pretty well.

The football season is over for us this year. The "Soph" boys are ready to get right into basketball, although they really enjoyed the football season. The girls basketball team are getting anxious for basketball to start. We're hoping to win a lot of games this year.

That seems to be about all the news for this week and until next week—Adios.

Senior News

Well the Seniors are jubilant today! Our candidates won in the King and Queen race Saturday night. The Seniors want to thank everyone for helping us. Our royalty were Barbara Pierce and Kenneth Merket.

The Seniors had bingo at the carnival. We hope we made a lot on it, so our dreams of going to New Orleans will come true.

The photographers of the Annual took pictures today, while everyone had on their Pep Squad suits, Football suits, and other things. We're not mentioning the fact that the Editor didn't do much, just having to go to all the classes, watch the pictures being made, checking lists, etc. As Betty would say, 'Anyone want my job?'

This is all the news so be good and have a wonderful Thanksgiving.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Rickman of Colorado City announce the birth of a daughter on November 12, whom they named Karen. Mrs. Rickman is the former Melba Mahon.

Football Is Hard to Officiate

By GRANTLAND RICE

Lefty James, the very able coach at Cornell, let out a lusty squawk about football officials and the penalties imposed against his Cornell team in the Harvard game. Lefty James is a first class coach and a first class sportsman. He was merely giving public utterance to what so many other coaches said before in private conversation.

What they all overlook in this—football is not a game that lends itself to the operation of officials. You have 22 men on the field, widely scattered, all over the lot, any one of them quite willing to face the chance of any penalty that might help win the game. As Hurry-up Yost once said to me—"There are at least one or two penalties incurred on every play in football. There are off sides. There is holding, secret or otherwise. There is always some form of rule breaking. All the officials can do is watch for penalties that affect the play directly."

In the course of one season after another, I have seen penalties that changed the course of four or five games a year. I have seen many penalties that were not called but that directly affected the turn of the game. These were shown in motion pictures later. Some of them were glaring infractions but unseen by the officials.

It so happened that I worked as an official in the south for many years as referee, umpire and field judge. It was then I made up my mind that football was not a game that could be handled efficiently on the field. I have never changed my mind since. No pair of eyes doubled and redoubled can follow all that takes place. Pass interference alone could drive any set of officials stark raving mad. I have shown slow motion pictures of such plays to many officials whose rulings in the game were at variance with the camera portrayal. They were, of course, guessing.

"Backfield in motion" is another problem that keeps coaches and officials in a frantic state of mind. It is a split-second decision and the human eye isn't equipped for split seconds. The hand—and the foot—are both quicker than the human eye. Which is never too fast. Otherwise magicians would starve to death. Yet the official must work with his eyes, which are not capable of handling the job.

Football the Toughest
Football is by all odds the toughest of all games for any set of officials to handle. Baseball is a holiday in comparison. The umpire today—or four of them—knows where to be and there can only be two men involved right under his nose—the runner and the fielder. But with 22 men scattered all over the field—from 50 to 100 yards apart—all with a little honest larceny in their hearts—no set of officials could cover this ground.

But the main fault is with the structure of football itself, not with the officials. No set of officials in any game works harder, trains harder, or tries harder to handle an impossible job. It is an impossible job on many occasions where the human eye falls down completely. In sitting up in a press box above the field, you frequently see plays clearly that officials on the field must miss with their visions shut off by intervening players.

The worst place to see a football game is from the bench. The level view is impossible. That is why scouts, helping to direct the play, move to some elevated spot and use their phones from above the field. Football officials, however, work on this level range. One official, working above the field, could see twice as much on many occasions as those working on the ground.

Coaches should understand the fault isn't with the officials. It is with the game itself. And the coaches could do a better job in training their men to play the game by the rules, which so few coaches do. Off side, holding, starting too quickly in the backfield are rule infractions, that right coaching could reduce.

Jinx in Sports

Stan Musial, recently voted the second most valuable player in the National League for 1950, can hit between .300 and .400 in any park in the majors—except Forbes Field, which is next door to his home town of Donora, Pa. Most years the finest batsman in the National League is happy if he can top .200 at Pittsburgh, his absolute, three-ring, gold-plated jinx. The following afternoon at Ebbets Field, Musial may be on base everytime.

Harry Breechen has won thirty times in his forty games with the Chicago Cubs. All he has to do is throw his glove on the field and the Cubs are down. Same was true of Art Nehf, the left-hander who could always beat the Pirates. Through four seasons Nehf defeated Pittsburgh thirteen times in a row before they broke the spell in 1922. Nehf was the main factor in depriving the Pirates of the pennant in 1921. They had a lead of seven and a half games going into New York in mid-August, but the Giants took them five straight.

How to FIX IT By HAROLD ARNETT

AROUND THE HOUSE

To keep peanut butter from losing its oil and getting too dry, store the jar upside down. Once it does get dry, though, you can soften it up by adding a little peanut oil, olive oil, or salad oil, and mixing it thoroughly. Or, mix some horse-radish with it and you'll have it moist again. In fact, the horse-radish improves the taste of the peanut butter so much, it's a good idea even if the peanut butter isn't too dry.

If honey turns grainy before it's used up, set the container in a saucepan of hot water, with a couple of sticks of wood under the honey jar so the water can circulate under it, and let it stand for several hours. Keep the water hot, but not boiling, and the honey should return to normal.

Cardboard milk and butter containers can be torn into pieces which are handy to use as plate scrapers and sink cleaners.

On Friday night, put a spoonful of dry mustard in the dishwasher to remove the fishy odor from the dishes.

ALL THAT FOOD brings a happy grin of anticipation to 11-year-old Kjell Tomter, in Oslo, Norway, as he uses his hunting knife to open the CARE package sent to him by friends in America. He is just one of thousands of children who have received CARE packages since 1945.

WORLD RELIEF

CARE Sent 9,500,000 Parcels Of Food to Europe in Five Years

An organization rarely talks about a customer it loses. But CARE the overseas service agency which is unique in so many respects, can lay claim to this distinction, too. In the files at its headquarters office, 20 Broad St., New York city, is a recent letter it is proud to show:

"You are losing a good and regular customer," the writer stated. "Since late 1946 you have handled my orders for parcels of different types addressed to my mother in Germany. You can hardly imagine how much joy each of your parcels brought to her, the safety she felt with the so urgently needed food in her pantry, the words of praise about the quality of the contents, the never-ending gratitude.

"Now there will be no more packages to her. She is coming to this country to spend the rest of her life with her new only son. Without CARE parcels to keep her alive, I doubt she would be coming. This is why you are losing a customer, but you are not losing two true, very grateful friends."

Expands Operations

While it rejoices in the "happy ending" for this mother and her son, the Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe approaches its fifth birthday with one primary concern—to continue to aid the millions of people who can not come to this country and must have help brought to them.

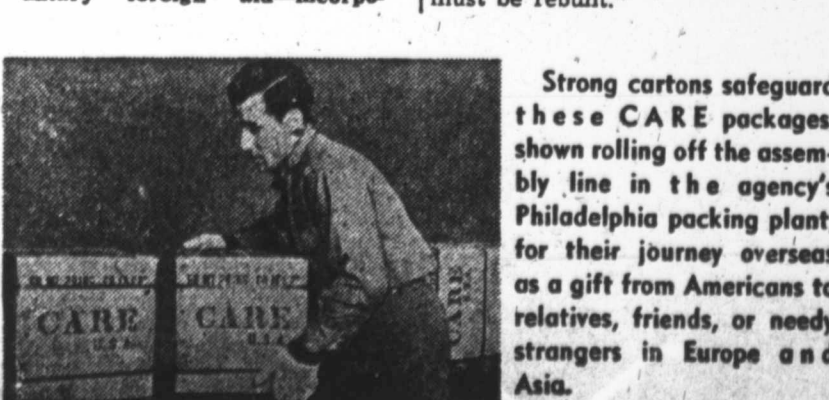

With a record of over 9,500,000 packages of food, clothing, textiles and other supplies—valued at $100,000,000—delivered to date as a gift from Americans, CARE within the few short years of its operation has far outgrown the geographic boundaries of its name. From Europe it has spread to Israel and Asia—to Japan, Okinawa, the Philippines, India and Pakistan.

Its types of services have also grown. To the standard price CARE packages of supplies it has added "food for the mind"—a book fund program whereby cash contributions in any amount are used to provide new American scientific and technical books for overseas schools and libraries, so that doctors, engineers, teachers, farmers, can gain the latest knowledge in their field. This program, launched in co-operation with UNESCO, has penetrated to Thailand, Ceylon, Burma and Jordan in addition to the package areas, until a total of 24 countries are now receiving some form of CARE aid. And going from "theory" to "practice," came the newest $10 CARE package—a plow to help farmers in India and Pakistan grow more of the food their countries need.

Founded in 1945

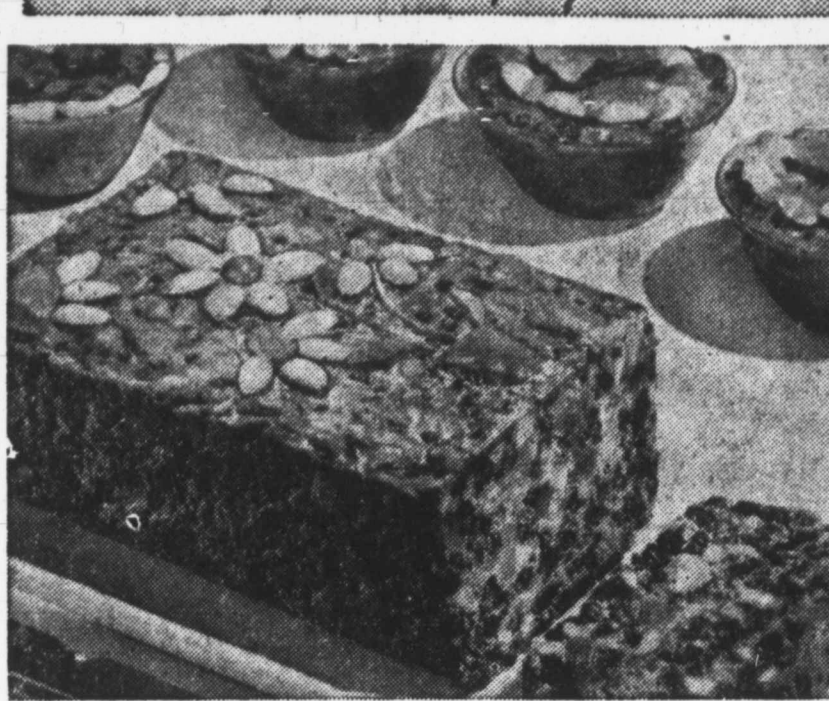

CARE remembered, too, the many persons overseas who have no uncle in Milwaukee, no ex-G.I. friend in Arkansas, no one in all the United States to whom they could appeal for help. For them, the agency developed its "general relief" plan, which permits Americans to order packages for a type of person or group—"a Greek orphanage," "a widow in Manila." Such gifts, like orders for designated relatives and friends, are delivered safely and promptly, in the donor's name, with CARE returning a receipt signed by the recipient.

All of this has come about since November 27, 1945, when 26 major United States welfare agencies—with the approval of President Truman and the state department's committee on voluntary foreign aid—incorpo-

Strong cartons safeguard these CARE packages, shown rolling off the assembly line in the agency's Philadelphia packing plant, for their journey overseas as a gift from Americans to relatives, friends, or needy strangers in Europe and Asia.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Bake Fruit Cake Early to Ripen It.
(See Recipes Below)

Holiday Desserts

IT MAY SEEM early to think of the holidays, but not if you're going to have fruit cakes and plum puddings on hand for the big feasts.

While you're making some for your own family, don't forget that festively wrapped puddings and fruit cakes make excellent gifts to fill in those spots on the list which are difficult, especially at the last minute.

Rich in flavor and fruits, both cakes and puddings need time to ripen and mellow so they will taste their very best. Make them four to six weeks in advance, and dessert's ready and off your hands when time is at a premium.

PUT THE INGREDIENTS together the following day, steam and bake them at a leisurely pace, and you'll have them all out of the way by the time you want to start supper.

Dark Fruit Cake

12 eggs
4 cups sifted flour
2 cups fresh butter
1 pound brown sugar
2 pounds raisins
2 pounds currants
1 pound pecans
1 pound citron
1 pound almonds
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon mace
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup lemon juice
1/2 cup canned peach juice
6 - ounce glass jelly (blackberry, currant or grape)
1/2 cup cream

Wash and dry raisins and currants. Blanch almonds, drain and cut with pecans into quarters. Cut citron into thin slices. Place fruit in large mixing bowl. Sift flour, measure and sift with the spices and mix with the fruit until well coated. Cream butter, add sugar gradually. Add beaten eggs and jelly. Next stir in the flour, nut and fruit mixture alternately with fruit juice first, then cream.

Line pans with heavy waxed paper and butter lightly. Fill pans almost to the top. Bake small loaf cakes for 3 to 3 1/2 hours at 275°. Bake large loaf cakes 4 to 4 1/2 hours at 250°. The cakes will shrink from the edges when done.

Cool cakes on a wire rack, without removing the wax paper. When cool, wrap in heavy wax paper.

White Fruit Cake

Makes 2 10-inch layers
1 pound white raisins
1 grated fresh coconut
1 pound crystallized cherries
1 pound crystallized pine apple
1/2 pound pitted dates
1/2 pound currants
1 pound pecan meats
1/2 pound walnut meats
1/2 pound Brazil nuts
1/2 pound blanched almonds
1/2 pound citron
1/2 pound candied orange peel
1/2 pound candied lemon peel
1 1/2 cups butter
2 cups sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt

LYNN SAYS:
Know Cookery Terms To Follow Recipes

When recipes call for parboiling, this means that the food is cooked briefly in water or stock, and then prepared in another manner to complete. The term applies usually to meat and vegetables.

To sear means to brown rapidly with a quick application of heat. The term is used with meats.

To poach means to cook very briefly in hot liquid just below the boiling point.

To lard means to draw narrow strips of salt pork through lean meat with a larding needle just for that purpose. Meats which are larded are those which are lean and need extra fat so they'll be juicy after cooking.

Marinating refers to the process of letting foods stand in sauce or seasoning to give them flavor. It's used for fruits and vegetables in salads, and meats before cooking.

Fan broiling? Grease a heavy skillet very lightly and cook food in it on top of the range.

Fumigate Stored Grain Says College

College Station, November 22.—Farmers who are still moving grain into their bins are reminded of the precautions necessary to prevent this grain from being damaged by insects. Grain already in storage should also be checked regularly for insects and J. A. Deer, assistant entomologist for the Texas A & M Extension Service, reminds farmers that pests of stored grain continue to do damage after other insect activity is reduced by cold weather. Deer recommends that the bins be thoroughly cleaned before the grain is moved in. If constructed of wood, the bin should be sprayed at the rate of two gallons per 1000 square feet of wall and floor surface area. Emulsions or water suspensions consisting of two and one-half per cent by weight of DDT or chlordane are good sprays for this purpose. Deer says that a water suspension of DDT can be prepared by mixing ten and one-half pounds of 50 per cent wettable DDT in 25 gallons of water.

Fumigation of stored grain is most effective within one month after it is placed in the bins, says Deer. He states also that grain should be as dry as possible when stored—not more than 12 percent moisture.

Deer says that insects are likely to be found on the surface of the grain bin. Therefore, their presence can usually be determined by shifting a sample of the surface grain. He points out that the temperature of the grain is also an indication of its condition.

Apply fumigants from the outside of the bin with a bucket pump or other type sprayer. Make sure that the fumigant is evenly distributed over the surface of the grain. Deer warns farmers of the danger involved in applying fumigant with a sprinkling can.

When breathed in a concentrated form, the fumigant vapors are very dangerous. Deer advises that the person doing the fumigating avoid inhaling the vapors and try to keep from spilling the fumigant on the skin and clothing or in the shoes. Remove wet clothing at once and wash the skin with soap and water to prevent blistering.

Ten gallons per 1000 bushels of grain of a mixture of one part carbon tetrachloride and three parts ethylene dichloride is a good fumigant mixture to use. Carbon tetrachloride may be used alone as a fumigant at the rate of eight gallons per 1000 bushels of grain, or a mixture of four parts carbon tetrachloride and one part carbon disulfide may be used at the same rate of application.

Deer suggests that farmers talk over with their local county agents the problems of controlling insects in their stored bins.

Questions and Answers

Q. My nephew is a paralyzed veteran who lost control of his hands and therefore is unable to sign his name. How may he apply for a grant for "wheelchair housing," when he cannot sign the necessary papers?

A. Forms and application papers will be acceptable if he merely makes a mark or symbol, which should be attested to by a witness.

Q. I am going to school under the GI Bill and I have just received notice that I am to return to active military duty. Need I inform VA to stop my subsistence payments?

A. Yes. Write the VA regional office which has your records, and include your full name and address, "C" number, the amount of the VA payment and the date you are to go back into service. You are not entitled to any VA benefit payments covering any period after you have returned to military service.

Q. My husband received a Certificate of Commitment on a GI home loan, and he died a few days later—before he had a chance to sign a mortgage or any other papers. May I, as his widow, go ahead and buy the house on a GI guaranteed loan basis?

A. Under your circumstances, VA does not have the authority to issue a Certificate of Guaranty, even though your husband already has a Certificate of Commitment. However, you may

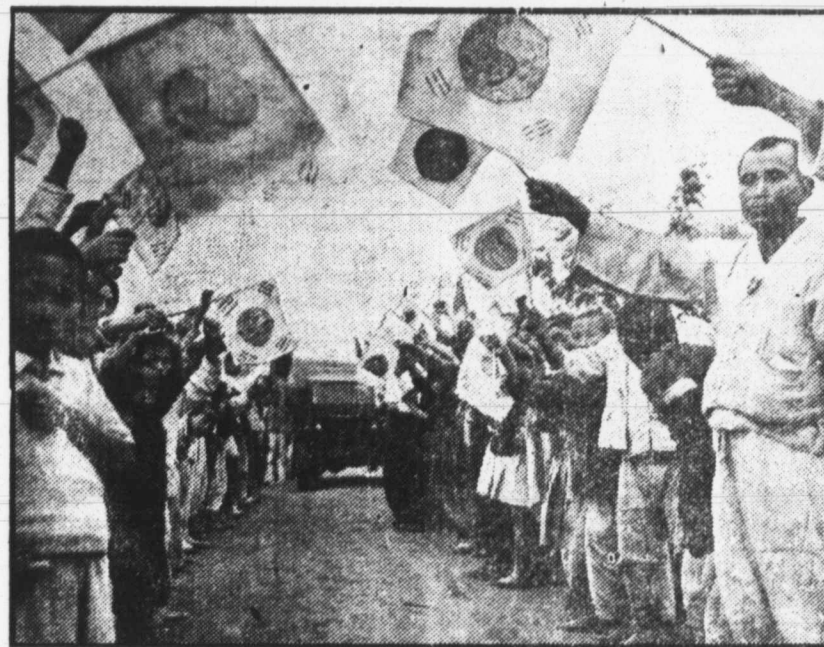

Mr. Dan Goldsmith, 3024 Curron Road, Louisville, Ky., owner of Coogla Cut Rate Store at 935 West Broadway, says there just aren't enough words in the English language to praise HADACOL correctly. He says he knows most folks don't realize what a change HADACOL can make in their life if their systems are deficient in Vitamins B₁, B₆, Iron and Niacin.

Here is Mr. Goldsmith's statement:

"Before I started taking HADACOL I was run down and nervous—and had a hard time sleeping nights. With my work in the store I have to spend sometimes 14 hours a day on my feet. Since I am in the retail business I saw how many folks were asking for HADACOL so I decided to try it myself. After the first couple of bottles I could tell a definite improvement. Now I have all the pep and energy in the world, my nerves are steady as ever and I really do get a good night's rest. HADACOL is wonderful—I not only take it, but recommend it to all my customers. I praise the day Senator Dudley J. LeBlanc put HADACOL on the market."

HADACOL is So Different
Thousands are benefiting from HADACOL... whose systems lack Vitamins B₁, B₆, Iron and Niacin. HADACOL is so wonderful because HADACOL helps build up the hemoglobin content of your blood (when Iron is needed) to carry these great Vitamins and Minerals to every body organ—to every part of the body.

Give remarkable HADACOL a chance and if you don't feel better with the first few bottles you take—you get your money back. Only $1.25 for Trial Size; Large Family or Hospital Size, $3.50. If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order it direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. ©1950, The LeBlanc Corporation.

JUST LOOKING—On the theory that every child is afraid of a new situation, experts on child dentistry suggest that youngsters be permitted to watch the dentist at work on their first visit.
