Dust Storms, Prevalent In Recent Years, Are Grim Portent To Farmer

In a history of the world's unusual weather, dust storms are no phenomena. They're common in the northern Sahara desert. Some years ago, for instance, a series of African dust storms littered cities of western Europe with Sahara sand.

In South America, a century ago, so much soil was transplanted in gales that afterwards natives were unable to tell where their land ended and their neighbor's began, giving rise to many lawsuits.

Just seven years ago, Poland and Rumania became indebted to sand-laden breezes for some 3,500,000 tons of Russian soil.

So there was nothing freakish about the recent dust storm, sired by the drouth out of mid-western farmlands, which filled the nostrils and littered the homes of distant metropolites, stalling traffic and adding to spring housecleaning chores.

An annoyance to city dwellers, dust storms are murky terrors to their rural brethren—grim harbingers of disaster and future famine. Increasing frequency in recent years of these hot, dry gales which stripped thousands of tons of fertile topsoil from midwestern farms and scattered it throughout other states has posed an ominous question—"It the midwest becoming a Sahara?"

The way was paved for the gray menace by the overproduction of war and post-war years, when turf was removed from great areas and repeated plowing ground the subsoil into powder. Lack of rain did the rest. Hot winds blew over the farmlands, and swept topsoil into dunes on neighboring lands. Eddying winds whirled the soil high into the air, depositing it in faraway states.

But soil conditions are not alone responsible. Statistics show that, over the last 25 years, there has been a steady decline in amount of rainfall. Other research has revealed that periods of heavy precipitation occur in cycles.

So there is the hope that soon the trend toward lighter rainfalls may be reversed: that instead of muttering morosely, "It ain't gonna rain no mo'," farmers will begin "singing in the rain," and that midwestern farm soil will shun its nomadic career and settle down, for a time at least.

LETTERS From the PEOPLE

(Editor's Note: The Leader will gladly publish any acceptable article which is submitted by readers, provided that the articles are signed by the readers and are free from libelous or malicious contents.)

Besides the personal gratification, there is a definite and tangible economic gain to the individual and community that promote the interest of school, juvenile, or fraternal bands. When better trained young men and women take their places in the community, the general well-being of that community is improved. Money spent in preparing the young comes back to the community quickly and increased many fold.

The band is a splendid builder of democratic group spirit. Here is a common interest which brings all classes together on an equal basis. Whether it is a school band, orchestra, Boy Scout band, a fraternal band, an American Legion drum corps—any juvenile or municipal organization—all the members are bound together in a common interest.

There is no better advertising medium for a community than a well established, permanent band or orchestra. The school, juvenile, or municipal band is a live spot in any community—They advertise that it is a good place in which to live and do business.

A band, orchestra, or any beginner organization cannot be developed overnight. It must have good and reliable sponsorship. We think that our Wellington school band and orchestra have started off on the right foot. We have 29 members in the band and 16 in our orchestra. We need 20 more in our band. Horns can be purchased for as low as $3.00 down and 3.00 a month. We need more violins in our orchestra. We have some nine-year-old members who are doing fine. Children who sing well are unquestionably musical and eligible to the band.

Band and orchestra work will be intensified this summer by a band school of six weeks duration.

The Government withdraws its appeal in the Belcher Lumber Case. Among other questions involved was the government's authority to impose the wage and hour provisions of the code, in interstate business. Federal Judge, Chas. I. Dawson, in the Louisville Case hold unconstitutional, that provision. Other judges have held that the government is without authority to cross state lines, and tell individual business engaged in interstate business, what they can or cannot do.

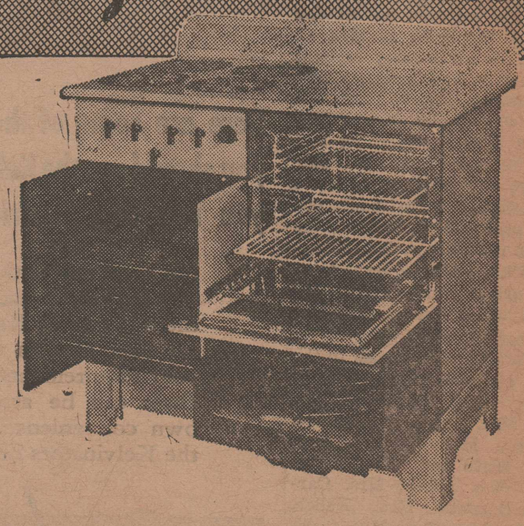

It looks like we might get a Supreme Court interpretation on the question in the New York Poultry Case. We hope so, for we might then, tell whether the Bird that made the track, was coming or going.

Heart Balm Dead In New York And Texas Is Considering Similar Ruling

ALBANY, N. Y.—A bill wiping heart balm laws off the statute books in New York was signed last week by Governor Lehman. The bill's sponsor reported that similar bills were being prepared for introduction in at least eight other states.

Senator John J. McNaboe, who introduced the bill, said the new law was aimed at a tribute of $10,000,000 paid annually by New York men to gold-diggers and blackmailers.

Although the bill took effect last Friday, a sixty-day period was given New Yorkers with broken hearts to file their suits.

New York's new law specifically outlaws suits for breach of promise, alienation of affection, seduction or criminal conversation.

AUSTIN, Texas—The campaign that Mrs. Roberta Nicholson inaugurated in Indiana a few weeks ago to make men safe from blackmailing suits for alienation of affections, reach Texas Friday when Mrs. Helen Moore filed for introduction a bill similar to the recently enacted Indiana statute. It would permit the filing of suits for which cause already has accrued for a period of sixty days after the act becomes effective. From that time on it would be unlawful to file a suit for alienation of affections, criminal conversation or seduction of a woman of more than 21.

Another provision of the bill would make it improper to identify a correspondent in a divorce action unless in the discretion of the trial Judge it should be necessary.

Improved Dairy Program Brings Bigger Incomes

Increased Prices Paid To Farmers On Butter, Cream And Milk

LUBBOCK, Tex.—The improvement of the dairy products program of The Dairy Industry of Texas has resulted in the increase of prices paid to farmers of one and one-fourth cents a pound nearer the Chicago standard price of butter, according to K. M. Renner, head professor of the dairy manufacturing department of Texas Technological College.

Texas Tech, Texas A. & M. College, The Dairy Industry of Texas, and the State Department of Vocational Agriculture cooperating with the State Department of Agriculture, have made possible and supervised this program which brought about the most important development in the dairy industry in the last few years, the increased quality of butter. Also the program has resulted in approximately 10 per cent of cream marketed being graded No. 2, instead of the former average of approximately 40 per cent.

Three inspectors are working full time checking creameries and stations in regards to cream grading, and are conducting a series of meetings with cream producers explaining the methods to use in producing high quality cream.

Texas Tech is a member of the state-wide cream grading committee in an educational and advisory capacity. Willis Tinney, dairy manufacture major and a graduate of the division of agriculture in 1932, is the West Texas district state inspector with his headquarters at the college.

Cream grading demonstrations have been conducted by the college, and more are being planned for this spring, according to Professor Renner.

Buildings For Centennial Will Be Started Soon

Several National Conventions Will Be Held At Dallas With Centennial

DALLAS, Texas — Preparations for the vast building program at the Texas Centennial central exposition are scheduled to gain momentum within the near future when the management will be able to estimate accurately the amount of money to be actually available for the project.

Fortunately the two houses of the Legislature appear to be almost in agreement regarding the measure to provide for State participation and a joint committte's recommendation is expected to be acted upon by the House and the Senate early in the present week.

Word has come from Washington that the Securities Exchange Commission has held an opinion of its counsel that the $2,000,000 in bonds of the central exposition corporation are exempt from registration. This exemption means that there will be no necessity for financial statements with proof of all figures and explanations of why's and wherefore's being submitted to the commission.

Encouraging prospects for Centennial crowds in 1936 are in evidence, being enhanced by assurance of additional conventions to be held in Dallas and in Texas during the Centennial year. News has been just received here that the National Association of Sheet Metal Contractors and the National Association of United Roofing Contractors both have selected Dallas for their convention gathering next year and that the usual large assemblages of both will be held until the central exposition is in full swing.

Under the state, organizations, municipalities and counties are beginning to feel the thrill of the coming Centennial observances. All Centennial-minded Texans have become convinced that a well-organized, properly financed commemoration will greatly enhance the prosperity and future development of Texas.

Center Of Texas

BRADY, Texas—(Special)—This city, in the real heart of Texas, also is looking forward and planning for the Texas Centennial celebrations of 1936. The geographical center of the State, located about 20 miles north and about 14 degrees east of Brady is to be appropriately marked if plans of the Brady Chamber of Commerce proves successful.

Some years ago it was proposed to purchase a tract of land at that point and convert it into a State park, but at that time there were no provisions for upkeep of State parks and the plan was abandoned.

State Needs More Teachers Shown By Survey Figures

AUSTIN—Requests for public school and college teachers, filed with the University of Texas Teachers' Appointment Committee during the twelve months' period which closed January 31, 1935, practically doubled the number of calls during the preceding year., according to Miss Miriam Dozier, secretary of the committee. The total number of calls for teachers was 1,214, as compared with 853 applicants for teaching positions. A total of 672 positions were filled by the Committee.

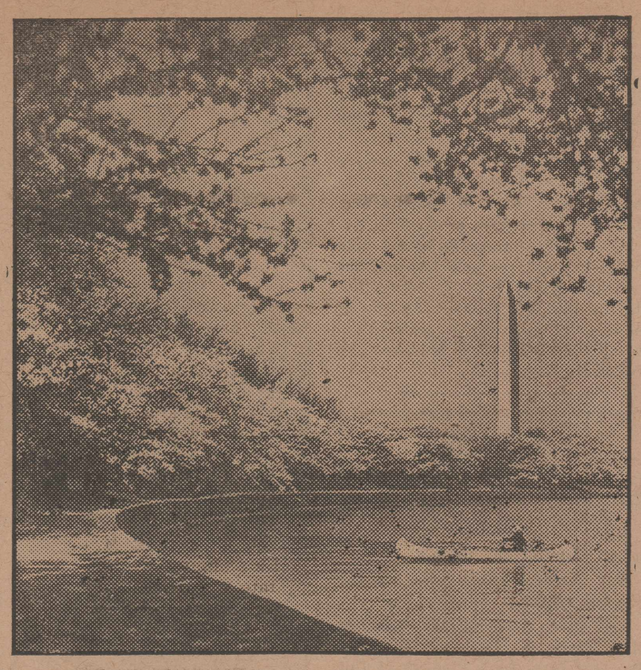

The calls for teachers comes not only from Texas educational institutions but also from other parts of the country. A total of 65 calls were made from other states, including one each from Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota: three each from Alabama, Arkansas, New Mexico, New York; six from Kentucky and Mississippi; nine from Oklahoma and 24 from Tennessee.

Renovating evidently allows for a certain amount of originality—one Gray county woman reports her husband put their mattress through the feed mill and that, coupled with a new ticking, has made them practically a new bed.

If the family likes cucumber pickles Rosborough says that the gardening partner of the firm had better plant a pickling variety. Two pounds of seed will plant 150 hills and that is the number specified by the home industries specialist for a pickling demonstration.

All's Beautiful Along Potomac

In the spring a public's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of cherry blossom time in Washington. And the reason is evident in this scene, heightened by the beauty of the Japanese foliage lining the Potomac river bank. The Washington monument rises in the background.

Economist Talks On Rise And Fall Of Cotton Price

"Cotton Priced Out Of The Market" Says University Professor

AUSTIN, Texas—Cotton again demonstrated its strongly international characteristics about the middle of March by taking a drop of about 100 points below the loan value placed on it by the United States Government, according to Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research and internationally known cotton economist. Decline in the price of American cotton so far below the Government loan value has virtually priced cotton out of the market for the time being he said.

"According to the New York Cotton Exchange Service, the total stocks of American cotton in the United States was about 10,500,000 bales on March 14," Dr. Cox said. "Mill Stocks amounted to a little over 1,000,000 bales. According to trade sources, the United States Government controls about 5,500,000 bales now, and there are about 500,000 additional bales subject to the 12-cent loan, which at present prices means that the Government will either own or control 6,000,000 bales of cotton. This leaves only about 3,500,000 bales for export and consumption in the United States until the new crop comes. Moreover, stocks in European ports and afloat to Europe are only 982,000 bales or 957.000 bales less than on March 1 last year. Stocks of American cotton in and afloat to the Orient are about 50,000 more than last year.

"If the Government is to hold its cotton for 12 cents or better, there must inevitably be a strong advance in prices of all growths of cotton or else very drastic curtailment of the commission of American cotton, which might conceivably result in a carryover of cotton on August 1 in the United States equal almost to that of 1934 in spite of the 9,600,000-bale crop."

ON TEXAS FARMS

He's all for Chinese cabbage for "greens" if you don't like spinach, even if you do. To grow it plant the seed in a hotbed right now and transplant to the garden about March 20. Manure the ground heavily and set the plants about a foot apart. "Best flavor in the world," he claims, recommending the doctor if you don't agree.

"Mattress school" took the center of the home demonstration stage during the last month's of the old year and the first three of the new, rural women having firmly made up their minds to have King Cotton take his part in this live-at-home business.

From Cherokee county we learn that 40 people representing 27 communities attended one of the three mattress schools held in the county. These representatives and all other such have an obligation to go back home and teach the women of their own community what they have learned about making nice, soft, comfortable mattresses out of home grown cotton.

"Spring Cleaning" At the Zoo

If winter ends, can spring be far behind? Not for the zoo inmates pictured above. The South American llama, with an "Oh, deah!" expression, submits to having her spring coat cleaned. And Howard Hippo obediently says "Ah," so that his tusks can be pumiced. But it's all a lot of monkeybusiness to the rambunctious simian, which raises its arms in protest.

Cannibals Spurn Tobacco Smokers; Flesh Not Tasty

NEW YORK.—To avoid being converted into a table delicacy on that next trip to the Cannibal Islands of the New Hebrides, take along plenty of smoking tobacco, suggests Dr. Edgar De La Rue, French geologist.

Terracing Costs Greatly Lowered By New Methods

Increased Proportion Of Work In Texas Done By County Equipment

COLLEGE STATION, Texas—Low-cost terracing with improved equipment for Texas farmers, who terraced more than 700,000 acres last year and more than 7,500,000 acres in the last twenty years, was demonstrated before 250 farmers and extension workers, county officials, agricultural editors and other visitors here Thursday.

Only $1.25 per acre is the total cost of terracing as demonstrated on the A. P. Tabor farm, officials estimated, whereas such work is said by mortgage companies and others to add more than $8 per acre to the value of the land. Diesel powered tractors, bulldozers and other improved types of machinery were used. More than 1,090 visitors have attended the four-day terracing demonstrations, sponsored by the Texas A. & M. College agricultural engineering department and a dozen implement firms, which culminated in an all-day program Thursday, led by Federal and State soil experts.

"Original Citizen" Of Texas Is Pride Of Hunt County Residents

GREENVILLE.—Of the many towns and counties in the State now making preparations for participation in the Texas Centennial celebration of 1936, few can boast among their present citizenry a "charter member." Certainly such a distinction is rare indeed for a county created as early as 1846, the year that Hunt County was founded.

Greenville and Hunt County both are proud to count among their people an "Original Citizen," Mrs. Catherine Oldham Arnold, who has maintained continuous residence here since the days of the Republic. Each year a local celebration does honor to this first lady of the town and county.

Mrs. Arnold was born near Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, on November 2, 1843, and came to Texas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Oldham, in 1845, arriving in what was to become Hunt County, the day before Texas became a State. The family located just east of what is the town of Greenville. Later Mr. Oldham built one of the first stores in the town, the family occupying the rear part as a home for a time. This store was located on the present site of the seven-story Greenville National Exchange Bank Building.

During all of the 90 years that have elapsed since the family settled here, Mrs. Arnold has maintained continuous residence in this town and this county.

Hunt County, a former component of old Fannin County, was created by an Act of the Legislature, which was approved April 11, 1846. When the surveying crew set out a month later to establish the limits of the County Seat, which was to be named Greenville, Mrs. Arnold's mother cooked dinner for the crew and her family has at all times played a prominent part in the growth, development and affairs of the town.

This distinguished citizen of Greenville is quite active and attends church regularly. She is the wife of Capt. William Arnold, who also is one of Greenville's pioneers Captain Arnold will be 98 years of age on August 18 next, and while he has lived in Hunt County since 1857, coming here as a youth of 20, his continuous residence is surpassed by that of his wife by some twelve years.

Mrs. Arnold each year takes part in the celebrations commemorating the founding of Greenville and Hunt County, while Captain Arnold, considering his age, is a physical marvel. He goes to town each day, leads parades mounted and is as active in every way as would be a man twenty or thirty years his junior. On the occasion of the Diamond Jubilee, held Mar. 22, 1925, to commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the donation of a 100-acre tract for the foundation of Greenville, Mrs. Arnold and another "Original Citizen," then alive, were the honorees, while Captain Arnold led the big procession, mounted on a white stallion.

Mrs. Arnold today is the only person living here, who has resided on the site of Greenville since before the town was born.

Deck's DIDACTICS

By H. D. W.

Next week Wellington is going to have its annual Easter Egg hunt, but I can tell you one thing about it. The Leader is not going to give out prizes for anybody else. Last year we took on ourselves the task of giving out free theatre tickets for the Ritz. The Ritz gave tickets for each of its silver eggs. There were about a hundred in all. We gave a dollar for each of our gold eggs. There were five of them. But the children who found the silver eggs did not remember that we mentioned gold eggs specifically in our advertisement. They only saw the caption on the silver egg that instructed them to bring it here. Each one of those hundred children who won a free ticket to the Ritz came in expecting to get a dollar from the Wellington Leader. It was one of the busiest mornings we have ever had. To make it worse the silver eggs started coming in long before any of our gold eggs started showing up. After the gold eggs came in and we had them to show, it was relatively simple and the children were satisfied. Before that it was not so good. This year we are going to let everybody take care of their own prizes.

If Collingsworth County had more young men with the mental and physical energy of Dan Henard, a lot of Wellington merchants wouldn't have to worry so much about the shape their business is in. In his spare time Dan has built a dam and impounded one of the finest lakes in this county. It is so situated that he can irrigate forty acres of land by natural flow. And the beauty of it is that the dam did not cost Dan one cent. He sold fishing and swimming rights enough to pay for the dam, and did the work in his spare time. Now he has a splendid source of pleasure and a desirable business asset. And all it cost him was a little thought and a right smart more work.

The City of Wellington now has an assistant water superintendent. I mean that Mr. and Mrs. Bura Handley have a nine and one-half pound son born Tuesday morning. When Bura told me about it, I inquired again about the weight. Yeah, he said, he weighs nine and a half pounds. Why he is practically grown. Now the last thing in the world that I would think of doing would be to wish Bura any such luck, but if young Philip Winston takes the colic, Bura is liable to think it is a long time between practically and actually.

The real truth, however, is that babies do grow so fast that they startle their own parents. One day they are babies and the next they are little boys and little girls. Infancy comes and then it is gone, and the swift miracle of its passing leaves a strange hurt in the hearts of the mother and father. They do not understand that time has taken their baby away until after the change is completely made. They rejoice in the laughing child that has taken its place, but they long for the chubby face, the tiny fingers and the gay gurgles that will never return to them. It is an emotion that lies deep within the secret places of the heart. It has to do with the nostalgia that comes with all passing things. It is a ficticious sadness—the shadow cast by the blazing joy the parents feel in their growing child.

It is reported that Clint Small will resign from the Senate when the present session is over. If and when he does, the most distinguished service this district has ever had in the State Senate will come to an end. When Clint Small went to Austin, the rest of Texas paid little attention to the Panhandle. It may sound like sectionalism, but this district was regarded as a political stepchild. The crumbs were good enough for its people. Now it is recognized and is included as a part of Texas. The reason is that the rest of Texas knows now that this section as well as others can produce men who have the courage to fight for their people's rights and the ability to make it effective. Clint Small is the man who brought this change about. Since then there have been others, but he paved the way. It has been a brilliant and significant contribution to the political welfare of the people of the Panhandle.

When bandits held up Miss Lulu Harrison of Kansas City she saved her diamond rings by concealing them in her mouth while they robbed her two male companions.

Two Missions Built Over 200 Years Ago

Mission Nuestra Sonora de las Purisma Concepcion de Acuna, better known as Mission Concepcion (pictured above) and Mission San Juan de Capistrano (below) are two of the five beautiful missions built by Franciscan friars in and near San Antonio. These two beautiful edifices, pictured as they appear today, were erected in 1731, more than 200 years ago. Both of these missions were first established in East Texas, near Nacogdoches, where crude churches of wood were built, but the original locations have long been lost.

Information Of Crop And Feed Loans Given Farmers By Field Supervisor

Field supervisor, C. Hogan, of the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office at Dallas, states that applications for emergency crop loans and feed loans are now being received by the Collingsworth County Loan Committee, with offices located on third floor of the courthouse.

In accordance with the Act of Congress authorizing the loans and regulations issued by the Governor W. I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration, loans will be made only to farmers who are unable to obtain elsewhere seed, fertilizer, supplies, feed or necessary credit to purchase such items. Loans will not be made to applicants who can obtain credit in the amount needed from any other source, including the production credit association.

Any farmer who has the necessary security should apply to the provision credit association first. If the association is unable to make him a loan in the amount needed the farmer will receive a statement to that effect and will be considered eligible to apply for a loan from the emergency fund.

The regulations provide that the largest loan to one farmer this year is $500 and the minimum $10, but no loan may be made in an amount greater than is actually needed to cover the cash cost of purchasing seed, fertilizer, supplies, feed, etc. Loans will be made for the purpose of growing and harvesting crops, for summer fallowing, for purchasing feed for livestock; but not for the purpose of purchasing livestock or machinery, or for the payment of debts or taxes.

Loans will be made only to applicants who are cooperating with the Productions Control Program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

As in the past, the security for an emergency crop or feed loan will consist of a first lien on the crop financed or on the livestock to be fed. A tenant must also give a first lien by getting the landowner to waive his claim in favor of the crop lien; but the landowner is in no way obligated for repayment of his tenant's loan.

Checks in payment of approved loans will be issued by the Regional Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office at Dallas, Texas, and not by the field supervisor or the loan committee.

Mr. Strong now has blanks and is now taking applications in his office located on the third floor of the courthouse.

Boy Scouts Enjoy Hike Last Week

By TRAVIS SOMERVILLE

Wellington Boy Scouts enjoyed a hike and fishing trip at O. M. last Friday. The trip featured many highlights for the boys and each of them are looking forward to the next hike.

Those who went on the hike were Joe Hardy, Silas Henry, Austin O'Neil, Pete Moulton, Douglas Bevers, Denzil Bevers, Robert Strong, Eddie Strong, Billy Rainer, Edward J. White, Eddie Bayouth, Bud Scruggs, Jimmie Cochran, T. D. Austin, Alvin Martin, A. D. Steward, J. W. McAnear, Derrell Tompkins. Elmer Tracy, Durwood Tracy, Joe Ross Longino, Jack McClure, Ervin Kersten, Cecil Kersten, Glynn Moore, Eugene Donahoo, Pat Templeton, R. L. Templeton.

They left the Legion Hall about 7:30 and were taken to the Country Club by Ray Morgan. Mr. Collins took their packs and the boys hiked six miles up the river to the O. M. Creek. After setting up camp and cooking dinner some of the boys went fishing while others explored nearby caves. After they all returned to camp a dam was constructed across the creek. A cowboy who visited the camp complimented them on their work and said he only wished it were six feet higher. While the cowboy was in camp Douglas Bevers found that he was very fond of hot tamales so Douglas fed him all that he could eat.

After the construction of the dam, Mr. Collins returned to town and left the camp in charge of Joe Hardy. After supper the boys told stories and sang songs. They were entertained by Eddie Bayouth who sang in the Syrian language. Taps were blown at 10 o'clock and everyone went to bed except two boys who stayed up to watch the fire.

Most of the boys got up at 4 o'clock and went fishing. After breakfast they policed the camp and about 11 o'clock, Mr. Collins returned for the party. When the sandstorm struck the boys packed up and crossed the river to wait for Polly O'Neil to bring them to town. Mr. O'Neil and Gerald Hardy are thanked by the Scouts for bringing 30 gallons of drinking water to camp.

A court of honor is to be held Wednesday evening at the Legion Hall. All the parents are invited to be present. The scouts are making special efforts to have each one make some advancement. The troop flag and first aid kit won by Troop No. 31 at the Junior Fair will be presented at this honor court.

Mr. Deahl stated that an eight-inch pipe line would be run from the reservoir to the city mains and estimated that Dodsonville would have a water pressure even greater than that of Wellington. No tower will be erected in the Dodsonville project since the land upon which the wells are located is actually higher than the town. The reservoir will be used in place of usual water towers.

The Dodsonville water system is expected to be one of the most modern and efficient in this section when it is completed.

Permanent Markers Will Remain; Towers To Be Removed

A huge steel observation tower erected on the northwest corner of the Wellington High School campus last week has created much speculation and comment on the part of residents of this county.

The United States Coast and Geodetic Survey Division of the Department of Commerce is ...ing a triangulation survey ... the Canadian to the Mexi... border, and a control point is ... established in Wellington.

... explained by Signalman W. ...lby, of Hartford, Conn., con...points, or permanent markers, ...being established about 25 ... apart in all directions over ... entire United States. These points will give government engineers, local surveyors and city engineers an exact point from which to base their measurements. It will permanently do away with the old system of measuring surveys by old stumps, rocks, river banks, etc.

Gives Record

Final records of the triangulation survey are filed in Washington offices and, regardless of the disposition of the land where the control point is established, it will always be the starting point for surveys in this section.

In making the triangulation survey, other towers are erected in the vicinity of the control point. Several other towers are also be-

Hamilton May Die On May 10

HUNTSVILLE—Undersized Raymond Hamilton cowered this week in his death cell at Huntsville prison, clutching a slim thread of hope for life in the mercy pleas of his mother and his erstwhile twin in crime, Joe Palmer.

If the efforts are unavailing, Hamilton and Palmer probably will expiate their flashy careers of outlawry in the electric chair on the same night, May 10. Both were convicted of murdering Major Crowson, young Eastham Prison Farm guard, in an escape in January, 1934.

Would Die Together

Palmer, hearing his doom pronounced recently at Anderson, Texas, after a fervid plea in Hamilton's behalf, asked that if 22-year-old Raymond must die, they be executed together.

District Judge S. W. Dean, in setting Palmer's death date for May 10, said he probably would grant the request for a double

Indians Hunt Airplane's Eggs So They Can Put On Setting And Hatch Own Ships

Several Indian warriors of Cauyora, Columbia, caught by a sentry last week while hunting for something beneath the wings of a trimotored transport plane, admitted they were looking for the "big bird's eggs."

The savage tribes of the desolate region saw their first planes recntly, when the Columbian government established an air line from Bagota to Puerta Carreno, on the Orinoco Rivver in South America. Needless to say, they were awed by the appearance of the "big bird." They traced strange fowl to its nest—and began a determined effort to get some of the bird's eggs so they could hatch out some ships of their own, according to United Press dispatchts.

At the airdrome in Cauyaro, while the chief with his bodyguard, awaited in the darkness, the most valiant braves wormed their way to the plane with arrows ready. Guards seized them and the Indians said their chief wanted to hatch out some birds of his own to use in fighting the white man.

Utilities Leader Discusses Raburn Bill Possibility

Holding Company President Says Bill Is A Bad Thing

Analyzing various phrases of the Rayburn Bill which he termed "drastic," S. R. Inch, President of the Electric Bond and Share Company, called to the attention of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee today that no plan has been presented as a substitute for the present locally-regulated, privately-operated public utility system.

"Certainly nothing so drastic as this bill should be enacted into law, unless and until those who would destroy what now exists have prepared and submitted a definite and workable plan of procedure," Mr. Inch said.

Effects of the Rayburn bill would ultimately increase the costs of electric and gas service to the consumer and by demoralizing local companies would impair service, Mr. Inch also stated.

"A large number of operating companies receiverships would inevitably follow the passage of this bill because necessary financing now obtained from holding companies, would not be forthcoming," said Mr. Inch. "This would result in general demoralization and would increase costs to electric and gas users for the simple reason that it would increase the cost of money necessary for continuance and expansion of the utility business."

Mr. Inch brought out that the electric and gas industries, if accorded fair treatment and cooperation from government, could be great leaders in the drive for business recovery.

"The way back to prosperity is through the re-establishment of business confidence which will permit private tax-paying capital to go to work again," he said.

"Then the next five years, instead of seeing the demoralization and destruction of these great industries as private enterprises under this bill would see them again engaged in constructive expansion.

"The same five years instead of bringing about the ruin of millions of investors would bring recovery to their investments and the restoration of their income, from which new taxes would accrue to government.

Mr. Inch brought out that in 1930 these two industries spent more than a billion dollars on construction alone in an effort to help stem the depression.

"Our own associated companies are now spending $25,000,000 a year for construction," said Mr. Inch. "In normal years they spend a hundred million dollars a year. This is just an indication of what these industries mean in the drive for business recovery.

"During the depression years the Electric Bond and Share Company and its associated holding companies invested $144,000,000 in building and unifying two natural gas systems. This created employment for thousands, with benefits to their communities and protected investors who would have suffered severe losses unless we had come to their aid.

"These developments represent real and outstanding contributions to social stability and business recovery during the worst years of the depression and they could not have been carried out and put into successful operation without the financial assistance of our company."

Mr. Inch said that the money put into these projects is still in them and he said, "the reward now offered to our stockholders is that their property shall be taken from them without compensation."

The same can be said of their efforts to develop the foreign market, Mr. Inch said.

"If this bill becomes a law, we must sacrifice $250,000,000 we have invested in foreign countries," he said. "Our government which now would force us to get rid of our foreign holdings, urged us to enter the foreign utility field as a means of creating closer ties between the United States and various foreign countries and as a means of creating new markets for American made goods."

Mr. Inch warned that if his company was forced to give up their foreign investments, it would be acquired by foreign interests, closing these important markets to American goods.

Mr. Inch brought out also that if this bill is passed "investors generally will regard it as the first step toward nationalization of the industry."

"Many believe that its purpose is to accomplish government ownership or at least government management, without compensation," Mr. Inch continued. "With this weakening in the investment field I see little hope that private enterprise can survive in this field."

Mr. Inch branded as false, claims that owners of public utility securities will lose nothing if the bill passes. He said these statements are incorrect and misleading to the security owners.

Mr. Inch championed diversity in business. He said diversity is the principle upon which most kinds of successful business is based. He used insurance companies as an example. The results of diversity as one of the principle contributions of the utility industries to social progress he brought out by showing how metropolitan utility service was brought to village, hamlet and farm.

"The Electric Bond and Share Company is not a "paper" organization," Mr. Inch said. "We furnish our client companies with necessary expert service at a charge which represents less than one-fortieth of one per cent per-kilowatt hour sold. The advent of cur company has always brought about improved service and lower rates. The customers of our associated companies have been saved over $64,000,000 in rate reductions since 1929."

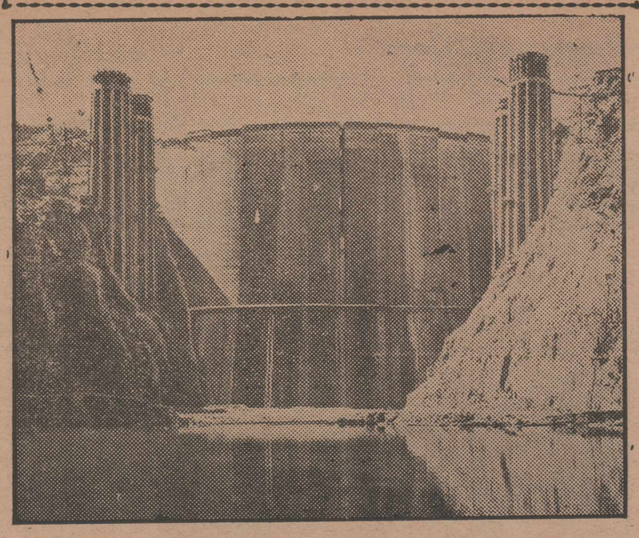

Discussing write-ups, he said that write-ups of their properties have never increased rates.

Write-ups are merely reflected in book values at a particular time, Mr. Inch brought out. He said rates are not based on book values but on the set principle of a fair return on a fair valuation of the actual property used and useful in public service.

"Write-ups or write-downs either have no effect on rates," he said. "In connection with our associated companies rate reductions invariably followed, in many cases immediately, and in all cases at an early date."

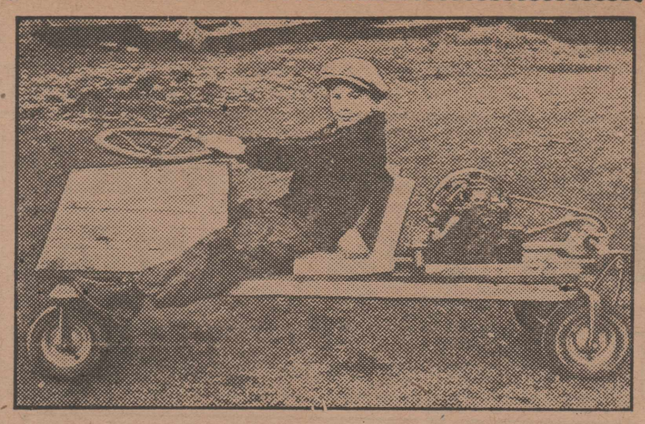

Since service has been good and rates reasonable, how can the present demand for the abolition of the holding company and the drastic federal regulation of local operating companies be for the well-being of the public utility user, Mr. Inch brought out.

Davis Mountains Observatory Has Great Telescope

Institution Erected For Furtherance Of Scientific Observations

FORT DAVIS, Texas—High on top of Mount Locke in the Davis Mountains, 17 miles from this southwestern town, the giant white dome of the world's newest astronomical observatory raises its thimble-shaped top toward the skies that "are not cloudy" 300 or more nights in the year.

Construction of the building on the 6800 foot peak that will house the second largest telescope in the world with a 32-inch mirror, was completed recently. The dome is 62 feet in diameter and 75 feet high.

Cost Over $900,000

This institution for the furtherance of science, created primarily from a gift of $900,000 by the late W. J. McDonald, a banker of Paris, Texas, will be known as the McDonald observatory and operated jointly by the University of Texas and the Yerkers observatory under the direction of Dr. Otto Struve.

The great reflector mirror that will be mounted in the vast telescope is being shaped into correct form at the optical shops of the Warner and Swasey company of Cleveland, O. Upon completion of that work the surface will be coated with aluminum which, officials at the observatory say, has two important advantages over the old method of "silvering."

First, the aluminum coat is relatively permanent whereas the old mirrors had to be resilvered every months. Second, it is possible photograph a considerable band tra-violet light with aluminum, h is completely absorbed by r.

ending installation of the 32- reflector and the appointt of a regular staff of prelimry program of observations has been inaugurated under the direction of Dr. Franklin H. Roach, astronomer, and Theodor Immega, assistant. Dr. Roach did his graduate work at the University of Chicago and Ohio State university. Mr. Immega is a graduate engineer from the Technikum Veral, Germany.

Special Instruments

Dr. Roach said that the accurate measurement of the light of the night sky by a "special sky photometer" set up for that purpose was the chief objective of the preliminary work.

"Previous measures have indicated," Dr. Roach explained, "that on a moonless night about 60 per cent of the 'sky light' is due to the zodiacal light, about 15 per cent to the permanent aurora of the earth's atmosphere and the balance to the stars.

"With our equipment it is possible to obtain a complete photographic record of the sky every hour. The records are sent to the Yerkes observatory for analysis.

"The zodiacal light cannot be seen in the cities because of the glare of artificial light and the obstructed vision. It appears as a cone of light in the west just after sunset and in the east just before sunrise. It is thought that it is sunlight reflected from small particles which exist beyond the earth's orbit.

To Measure Light

"In addition to the 'sky brightness" program it soon will be possible to make regular observations of variable stars—that is, stars whose light is not always of the same intensity. A telescope known as a 12-inch reflector has been installed to which will be attached an instrument containing a photo-electric cell for measurement of very small changes in the intensity of the light of a star. When light falls on the sensitive part of the cell a small electric current is generated which is a measurement of the amount of light.

"The reason the light from some stars is not constant is that we really look at two stars which revolve around each other. They are so far away that even our most powerful telescopes detect only one star. Most of the time we see the light from both stars but at certain definite periods one star gets between us and the other and the result is an eclipse with a marked diminishing of the light."

Photographic Deflector

The big reflector, which will be used chiefly for photographic work is made of pyrex glass, which has a low coefficient of expansion and is especially suitable in a climate where appreciable change of temperature during one night is the rule.

The staff that will man the McDonald observatory and nightly scan the celestial spectra will not be disturbed by manmade sounds.

Farm-Cured Hides As Leather Goods New Home Industry

COLLEGE STATION.—A new industry is under way in fourteen Texas counties, that of making leather goods from farm-tanned hides, which often go to waste. M. K. Thornton, extension service leather specialist, has conducted tanning and leather making schools in the state since January 23. County agents from sixty counties attended and farmers drove great distances to witness the demonstrations.

"Approximately two weeks is required to make leather," Thornton said, "so preliminary work is carried on in tanning the hides in their various stages before the school starts." The county agricultural agent where the school is to be held prepares hides in various stages of tanning in advance of the school. Thornton discusses the various problems encountered in each stage, demonstrates the cutting of leather, and the making of harness and other leather goods.

"Leather tanning schools do not work against the interest of those who deal in leather goods commercially," Thornton said, "because farmers would buy leather rather than make it if they had the money. The program is of value in conserving thousands of hides that would otherwise be going to waste and in providing leather for domestic use that the farmers could not have otherwise."

Simple Test To Identify Hegari

Hegari seed is being sold as Atlas Sergo seed by unscrupulous dealers in the Middle West, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Numerous complaints have reached the Department indicating that the scarcity of Atlas Sergo seed has prompted the substitution of the cheaper and less desirable seed of hegari in sales to unsuspecting buyers.

Although in outward appearance, seed of hegari is similar to Atlas Sorgo, it can easily be distinguished. After the outer coat of Hegari is scraped off there is found a purple-brown layer or subcoat. Seed of Atlas Sorgo does not have a subcoat of this color.

Hegari is not a practical substitute for Atlas Sorgo, especially under climatic conditions common to Kansas and neighboring States where the complaints have originated.

The Department advises that some Hegari seed shipped in interstate commerce as Atlas Sorgo has recently been seized under the Federal Seed Act. Dealers should determine definitely that their seed is Atlas before selling it as such. Growers may thus be saved unnecessary loss, and the dealer may avoid difficulty with seed law enforcement officials.

Are you using 1924 oil in your 1934-35 car?

Plain mineral oils are obsolete! You need a Germ Processed* oil for today's car!

★ What is the Germ Process?

The Germ Process is a patented method, used only by Continental, of giving oil certain valuable qualities that straight mineral oil does not naturally possess.

A small quantity of concentrated oily essence, a compound discovered by Continental scientists, is added to highly refined oil. This results in more oiliness and 2 to 4 times greater film strength than mineral oils—and the ability to penetrate and combine with metal surfaces.

BACK in 1924 most cars had less than 60 horsepower, and any high-quality motor oil could lubricate them properly.

But today's cars range from 80 to 180 horsepower and the average is over 100. With increased power have come like increases in bearing pressure and crankcase temperature. Oil today must do a job undreamed of ten years ago.

Yet motor oils generally have no more oiliness and film strength now than they had 10 years ago. New refining methods have recently come into use to make oils free from carbon and sludge. But the new refining processes have lowered instead of increased film strength and oiliness—the very qualities on which depends an oil's lubricating value!

There is one exception—Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. It, too, is free from carbon and sludge troubles. But more important, Timken Machine tests prove that the new Germ Process* puts into this oil 2 to 4 times the film strength of any straight mineral oil!

That extra film strength enables Germ Processed Oil to stay on the job and prevent wear under the most extreme pressures and heat. It helps Germ Processed Oil give long mileage, as proved by the famous Indianapolis Destruction Test.

Plain mineral oils were all right ten years ago—today they are becoming obsolete. Say "O. K.—Drain" and fill with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil—custom-made for today's cars!

The Rural Community Has Come to Town

The rural community and small city faces a new future. Electric service and all that electric power and light mean to home life, commercial and industrial development is now available for a more constructive and wider field of achievement.

Much work, planning, testing, engineering and large investments of capital was necessary in order to make this possible. Our 2600 miles of power transmission lines, interlacing 49 counties in West Texas and serving 160 towns and communities provide an adequate and economical source of dependable electric service with precise regulation to meet the requirements of modern day appliances.

Today hundreds of small West Texas towns and communities can offer to industry this modern electric service in proximity to its raw materials . . . two very necessary prerequisites for industrial progress.

We point with pride to our part in assisting the small towns and communities in this way, thus guaranteeing to them the same opportunities in respect to power as the larger metropolitan cities enjoy. It is our policy to fully co-operate with the small towns and communities we serve so that they may realize the full benefits accompanying and made possible by electrical development.

ing constructed in this county.

Working after dark, the surveyors cast light beams from the control tower, measuring the angles between the three points. This methods avoids the use of survey chains, it was explained. So delicate are the measuring instruments that the survey varies less than a quarter of an inch in a 10-mile line.

In 1921 a survey point was established at Hedley and this line is being extended to the Mexican border at Eagle Pass. Although national survey work has been under way since 1888, the triangulation survey from border to border was only begun in October from a point in North Dakota.

100 Men On Work

One hundred men, working in six parties, are completing the survey line from Memphis to Eagle Pass, and at present are headquartered in Childress. More than 40 trucks are employed in this division of the line working under the general supervision of Lt. C. I. Aslakson of Washington D. C.

Towers will be taken down and moved to the next control point when the work is completed here. More than a month will be required to finish the complete line, it has been estimated.

Studies Various Programs

Meanwhile, a Senate sub-committee studied various soil erosion control programs before Congress and moved toward a decision on a comprehensive measure to make soil erosion control a permanent governmental activity.

The House already has passed the bill by Rep. Dempsey, Democrat, New Mexico, which sets up a soil erosion section in the Agriculture Department and which is designed to halt the ravages of wind, dust and water run-off on unprotected lands.

This measure together with the bill introduced jointly by Senators Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico, chairman of the sub-committee; Costigan, Democrat, Arizona, received primary attention at last week's conference.

Carl Hinton of Amarillo, representing hundreds of farmers whose land was swept bare recently, arranged a conference with H. H. Bennett, Soil Erosion Service director, for last Saturday morning to learn details of the new plan so he could instruct the needy.

Hinton, upon his arrival here, found the situation "so well in hand," that he advised leaders in Texas there would be no necessity for a proposed five-state conference in Texas on procedure.

"The situation is being worked out so satisfactorily that there is no need for the conference at the present," Hinton said. "I also cited the fact that a soil erosion bill already has gone through the House co-ordinating all these erosion departments."

Samnorwood Given Honors At County Meet

High School Declaimers Are Represented At District Meet In Childress

Samnorwood High School made a good showing at the annual county Interscholastic League meet March 15.

There were 35 points won by the participating high school students. Cleoma Rainey won first in senior girls declamation and Ruby Honeycutt won third, while the senior boys' declamation contest was well taken care of by Jack Walker and Paul Wischkaemper, who won first and second, respectively.

Edna Wilkinson won second in senior spelling and Elsa Wischkaemper won second place in the ready writers' contest. Many other points were won by the Samnorwood ward schools.

Jack Walker and Cleoma Rainey were representatives of Samnorwood at the district meet Friday, April 5, at Childress.

think of sportsmanpatting our opponents in games. That is smanship—but not the ant part, and not alardest art to achieve.

ly easy in the excitefriendly rivalry of a a good sport. We've heard about being that kind of good sport ever since we can remember hearing anything and it has become a habit with us. There are times in the daily grind, however, when to take it with a grin is not so easy. For instance, perhaps our last report in history was lower than our dad thought it should be. Perhaps he told us what to do about raising that grade. Perhaps we firmly resolved to make and deserve an "A" in history this month. Then when we got our card, perhaps we had another "B," just like the "B" the month before! It's so easy to say to ourselves and to our friends, and even our dad, that we just did not grade we deserved! That an "A" and for some teacher just didn't give

That explanation doesnot usually get very far with our dad—our friends usually eye us with pity tinged with just a touch of contempt—our own common sense ought to teach us that every teacher is anxious to give as high a grade to each student as his conscience will allow. We've been poor sports' We couldn't take it—not with a grin—and a determination really deserve the "A" next month.

Another place where good sportsmanship is sometimes lacking is on the play ground. Possibly we can't all take part in a Are we always glad to give our place when it is another's turn to play? Do we try to see that no one is left out, even if it means standing on the sidelines when we'd rather be in the game? That is another way to be a good sport—harder than it is to help opponent up in game and a little pat.

Samnorwood Attendance Reported To Be 91.7 Per Cent Perfect Past Term

How-, the membership or those acly in attendance at that time 336 for the grades and 150 the high school or a total of or the entire school. The centage of attendance for the des for this same period was with a percentage of 93 in high school.

he average daily attendance the sixth month of school was which is 78 per cent of the shown by the census last March. This is only eight points above requirements for State Aid, and should there be any considerable falling off in attendance at the last of the term, as is usually the case at that time of year, our chances for receiving the last half of our State Aid Allotment would be seriously endangered.

The present census enumeration, recently completed, shows a scholastic population of 523 for the district as compared to the 561 of last year, and, unless there are sufficient transfers to make up the difference, it will be necessary to reduce the teaching staff by at least two teachers to meet State requirements for aid.

Seniors Mimic Faculty Members At Chapel Meet

Each Teacher Was Mimicked By A Student Of The Senior Class

By ERMA RHEA CLEMENT

The Senior class gave a chapel program Wednesday morning, March 13 in the high school auditorium.

The program was opened with a song by the congregation. Then the fun followed, with the students impersonating the members of the high school faculty. At the rise of the curtain, a bell rang and the seniors came in dressed as small pupils, carrying dinner buckets, dolls, and attracting much attention with their chewing gum. Selba Rainey, acting as Mr. Sanders, called the pupils to order and made a few announcements, such as "There will be no more chalk throwing between bells without a special conference in my office." In the most interesting part of the speech, Fred Thompson, as a barefoot boy, and Katherine Jolly, as a small girl with a large dinner bucket, came dragging in very late—and of course this meant go to the office with Mr. Sanders.

Leota Ammons, as Mrs. Robertson, came into the class room in a big hurry, asking that the windows be raised and complaining that it took every bit of her two hundred and fifty pounds to turn out the stove.

Leona Deger, as Miss Allen, answered the questions popped to her by John Willingham in Miss Allen's usual "Getting-back-at-you" manner.

Jack Walker caused much laughter and excitement in his excellent impersonation of Mr. Bailey, by using Mr. Bailey's favorite phrase, "The bell has sounded. Let's refrain from whispering.

Loney Sweat brought out Mr. Brown's outstanding characteristic of walking around absent mindedly with his hands in his pockets.

Millie Massey impersonated Miss Johnson by giving a geometry proposition and asking Clois Brown, "Do you see that?"

Erma Rhea Clement, as Mrs. Bretz, proved to be a very refined and sarcastic English teacher.

James Hobbs is attending school after recovering from a serious case of pneumonia.

We are planning on having our Junior-Senior banquet within another month.

The senior class was entertained with a weiner roast March 8.

Junior Students Present Program Friday, March 22

Program Well Attended; Sponsors And Students Should Be Honored

The members of the Junior Class entertained the student body in assembly with a 45-minute program Friday morning, March 22.

The program was sponsored by Miss Johnson, mathematics teacher, and Mrs. Bretz, head of the English department.

The program consisted of the following numbers: song, "America Republic," by audience; "Railroad Stunt," by a group of students; reading, "Little Willie," by Arlis Ketner; quartet, "Old Folks at Home," by four Junior girls; piano solo, "The Waltz You Saved for Me," by Lola Peeples; reading, "Even'en Grace," by Cleoma Rainey; a joke, "Too Many Beaus." The closing of the program was a song and yell for the Junior class.

The program was well attended and the sponsors and students should be complimented for their work.

Teachers Attend Faculty Meeting

The faculty of the Samnorwood District met March 14. A business session was held. Then the meeting was turned into a social hour.

Refreshments were carried out in green and white. Shamrock sandwiches, salad, tea and kisses were served. A long table was decorated with candles. Seated at the table were Mr. and Mrs. Leroy McDaniels who served the salad, and Mrs. Clyde Brown, who served the tea.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ledger, Olson Sweat, Jack Lowry, Rufus Sweat, Clyde Brown, Leroy McDaniels, Guy Beasley, Ray Powell, Mr. L. B. Bailey, E. G. Sanders, Hulen Laycock, Miss Jarrell, Audie Johnson, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Bretz and hostesses, Mary Allen and Katherine McMinn and host, Ben Baldwin.

It is planned to have Dr. J. A. Hill, president of the West Texas State Teachers College, appear in the next faculty program, which is to be given April 11.

Roy Rogers Trio Presents Program At Samnorwood

Roy "Whistling" Rogers and two of his companions entertained a large crowd in the Samnorwood High School auditorium, Friday night, March 22, starting at eight o'clock and continuing until ten o'clock.

Whistling Rogers is a perfect impersonator of birds and animals of all kinds. He has worked with many radio stations and phonograph manufacturers. With his red head Toby acts he is very comical. Does he know music, well, he knows so much about it that he can play a tea kettle and hand saw, and when he gets the piano-accordion started everyone listens for perfect music.

The program consisted of several short jokes, funny sayings and plenty of good music. We were very glad to have "Whistling" Rogers and his friends with us, and hope they will be with us again in the future.

"Kicked Out Of College," To Be Junior Class Presentation Friday, April 25th

The Junior Class has planned to present a college farce in three acts, "Kicked Out of College," Friday night, April 26, in the Samnorwood High School auditorium. The theme of the play has to do with the hardships of a young college boy who is kicked out of college for disobeying college rules. When he comes home his father threatens to disinherit him, but promises to relent if he would marry and settle down. By a false act his friend proves that he is already married. Several months later his father meets his son's second wife. He is so worried that he employes a detective to search out the truth. At last the truth comes out. Father threatens to disinherit his son again but finally the son marries and is happy.

The play is being sponsored by Miss Audie Johnson, head of the mathematics department, and Mrs. Hazel Br[illegible], head of the English department.

JEFFERSON, THE MAN

Each year on April 13, the anniversary of his birth, the virtues, patriotism and statesmanship of Thomas Jefferson are recalled at gatherings of his country men, especially of Democrats, who claim him as the founder of their party, although it was known as the Republican party in the beginning.

Jefferson's public services are generally known, but a few facts concerning his personality and private life may be of interest.

He was born April 13, 1743, the son of an obscure and uneducated Virginia planter, who, however, left Thomas a considerable estate. By his marriage in 1772 to Mrs. Martha Skelton, a rich and handsome widow of 23, he became one of the wealthiest citizens of Virginia.

At the time of Jefferson's admission to the bar in 1767, he was described as being "6 feet 2 inches in height, slim, erect as an arrow, with angular features, a very ruddy complexion, an extremely delicate skin, full deep-set hazel eyes, and sandy hair; an expert musician, the violin being his favorite instrument, a good dancer, a dashing rider, and proficient in all manly exercises; frank, earnest, cordial and sympathetic in manner."

During eight years in the active practice of law he acquitted an extremely large clientele, it being recorded that in a single year he was employed in 430 cases. Yet, in spite of the remarkable facility of his pen, he was no orator, and almost never attempted to make a speech.

One instance is related in which even his pen failed him, when an address he was commissioned to write to the new governor of Virginia by the House of Burgesses was rejected, and another member was given the task. But he overcame this humiliation and later wrote the Declaration of Independence.

Once when a friend asked how he could reconcile the phrase in the Declaration that "all men are created equal" with the fact that he, Jefferson, was a slaveholder, the author of the document is said to have replied: "By God, I didn't think of that."

It may be said, however, that Jefferson was really opposed to slavery, and only held slaves who had come into his possession through inheritance or ownership by his wife. He never trafficked in them, and advocated their gradual emancipation. He secured the passage of a law forbidding further importations of slaves into Virginia.

By a strange coincidence, Thomas Jefferson and his predecessor in the presidency, John Adams, both died July 4, 1826, on the 50th anniversary of American Independence.

END OF A SWINDLE

Some years ago William Renick and his wife, lately of Seattle, learned of a legend to the effect that one Jacob Baker, a surveyor, who settled in Pennsylvania in 1765, was at one time owner of land in the vicinity of Philadelphia, which he had leased to the government for a period of 100 years. This land is now occupied by the Philadelphia Navy yard, post office and mint.

Naturally Baker did not live to reclaim his land at the expiration of the alleged lease, but several thousand supposed descendants have at various times believed they had an interest in his estate, although they had no confirming evidence.

Taking advantage of this situation, the Renicks promoted Baker "inheritance associations," claiming to possess documents which would establish the claims of Baker's heirs. They had no such documents, of course, but by playing on the cupidity of the supposed heirs they collected various fees on the strength of representation that they could recover a large sum from the government.

Finally an Illinois couple who had been swindled made an investigation of the Renicks, with the result that a few days ago William Renick entered a Federal prison to serve six years, while his wife was let off with a two-year term.

Swindling schemes similar to this have been worked for centuries, but the crop of suckers never fails. Perhaps a new generation of Baker "heirs" will fall for the same old game a few years hence.

A BELATED HONOR

Coincident with his 91st birthday a few dags ago, the Congressional Medal of Honor was awarded to Major-General Adolphus W. Greely, retired, in recognition of his Arctic explorations and other distinguished service to his country.

In his "Reminiscences of Travel and Adventure," finished when he was 83, General Greely tells of his thrilling experiences in many lands. The story is simply and modestly told—too modestly to do the gallant narrator justice.

His boyhood days were not so exciting, but were full of earnest endeavor. His first money was earned weeding long rows of onions at one cent a row. In the Civil War he rose from private to captain, with the brevet rank of major for gallantry, having been wounded three times, and his war record as a volunteer gained for him a lieutenant's commission in the regular service.

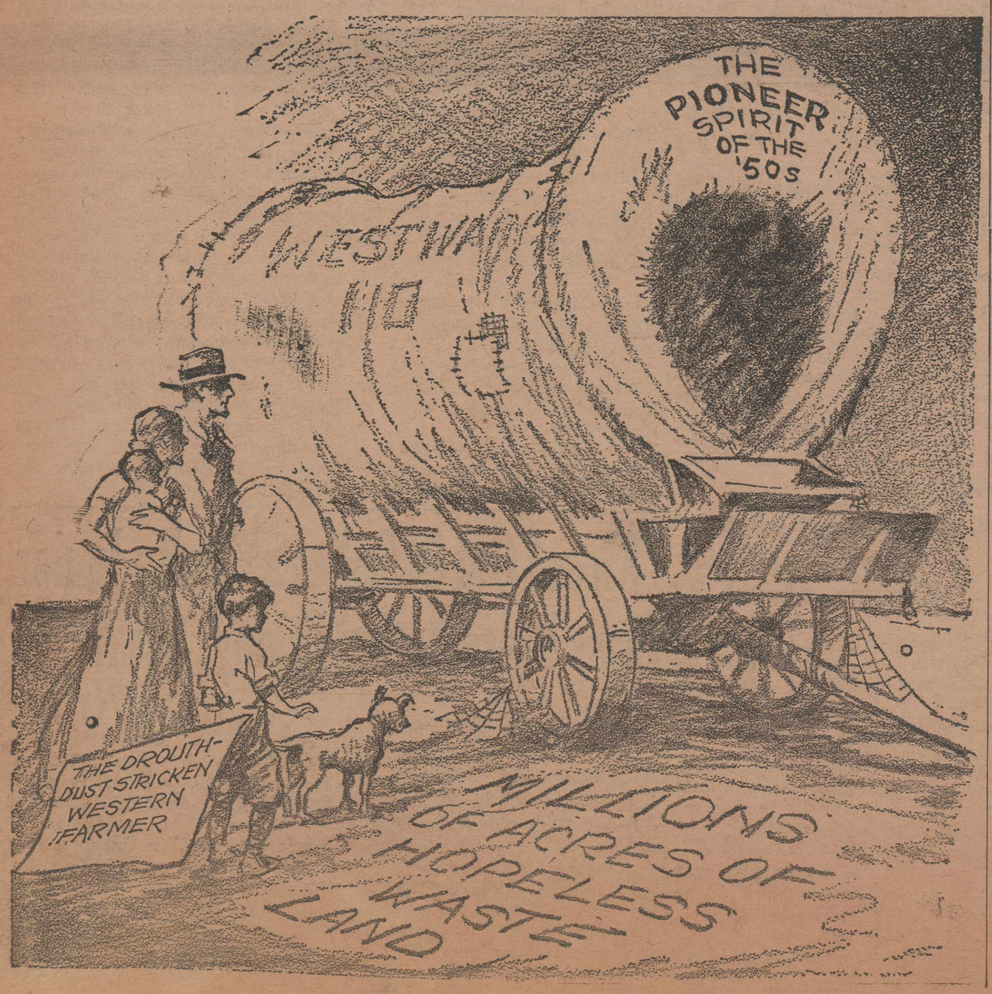

He fought Indians, re-organized the Army Signal Corps, headed the Weather Bureau for awhile, then built telegraph lines for the Army throughout the Southwest and later in Porto Rico, Cuba, Alaska, and the Philippines.

His greatest fame, however, rests upon his Arctic explorations, while a first lieutenant, 1881-84, in which with 25 men he reached the farthest north gained up to that time. Marooned in the far north, two relief expeditions failed to find him, and when the third finally reached him all but seven of the party had died of starvation.

These are only a few of the high spots in the career of this remarkable man, who was the first private soldier of the Civvil War to reach the rank of brigadier-general in the regular Army, which he attained in 1887. He became a major-general in 1906 and was retired in 1908.

His record of adventure and achievement is worthy of his sturdy ancestors, who, as he relates, "for nine generations labored with their hands in New England," since 1632.

It'll Come In Handy Again

The Story Of The Bible Told In Pictures

CHRIST BETRAYED BY JUDAS' KISS.—The betrayal of Christ by Judas is told in Matthew 26, Mark 14, Luke 22, and John 18. Luke describes the meeting of Jesus and Judas as follows: "And while He yet spake, behold a multitude, and he that was Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus to kiss Him. But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?"—Luke 22:47-48. This illustration is from Merian's story of the Bible in pictures, engraved in 1625-1630.

OUR PAST

By C. C. BISHOP

When our Centennial is held there will be many interesting things of historical value to be seen at the main celebration and numerous other communities of the State will hold their own Centennial exhibits.

While Texas prepares ambitiously to commemorate the hundredth anniversary of the achievement of its independence from Mexico by the Centennial celebration and exposition of 1936, the flag that floated over the Alamo, at the time of its historic fall, now is on exhibition in the National Museum of Archaeology at Mexico City.

The sword, which in the hand of Sam Houston, played its part in the victory at San Jacinto—a plain steel symbol of a bitter struggle for freedom—lies today in the exhibit of the Arkansas History Commission at Little Rock, Ark.

To the people of that State, for whom the symbolism of the blade is meaningless, it is little more than a curio, just another relic piled into a showcase to gather dust.

When Sam Houston fell, with a bullet in his ankle, at San Jacinto, he still clutched the saber he had carried through the campaign. This weapon went with him when he was taken to the home of Norris Austin at Sabinetown to recover from his wound.

When he departed thence, he left the saber at the Austin home together with his blanket, cane and trunk. He told the Austin family to keep the articles.

The cane and trunk are now in the Department of Archives at Austin, having been loaned by the descendants of the Norris Austin family. The saber, and the blanket, which Houston had used throughout the campaign and upon which, doubtless, he rested when he received Santa Anna's surrender, passed into the hands of J. T. Blincoe, of Little Rock, a great-grandson of Norris Austin. Mr. Blincoe, it is learned, has loaned the articles to the Arkansas Historical Committion.

The saber, still in excellent condition, bears the United States seal upon the hilt and the inscription, "United States, 1934," on one side. The other side bears the name and address of the armorer, N. P. Ames, Springfield, Mass.

Some organization in Texas should make an effort to secure these two articles from the Norris Austin descendants, so they might be shown in our Texas Celebration, because they are of great interest to use and as long as they remain in Arkansas, they are only curios.

This is just one example of the many articles that the Texas people should gather and have on display at our Centennial Celebration.

The writer doubts if a reader of this article has ever seen a postage stamp of the Texas Republic. It must be remembered that Texas had her own President, postal system, Navy, Army, and made her own treaties, besides having representatives in all of the other Nations of the earth.

Let's make our plans now to attend our Centennial Celebration in 1936 and see the many articles of interest that will be shown there.

Jesus, Savior Of Mankind

Text: John 3:14-17; Romans 5:6-10; Philippians 2:5-11.

The International Uniform Sunday School lesson for April 14.

The fact that he had come to the world as a Savior of men was one thing that Jesus taught clearly and directly.

Again and again through different parables He illustrates the reality of the fact that He had come to seek and to save the lost. His mission as Savior is from God the Father, who loves men and who will receive them with pardoning grace if they will turn from their sins and seek His mercy and the power of his salvation.

Depth and the extent of his gospel of salvation are alike set forth in John 3:16—"For God so loved the world, that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have eternal life."

The passages in our lesson from Romans and Philippians may be regarded as expositions of this elemental gospel concerning the love of God and the sacrificial mission of Christ. When Jesus hung upon the cross, His enemies railed upon Him contemptuously, saying, "He saved others, himself He cannot save."

There was more truth than they realized in their sneer. Even in ordinary human life we see often how men can save and help their fellow men only through giving themselves. Jesus gave Himself with the glory of a complete sacrifice—"God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

We ought to notice the way in which Paul expresses this. It has not always been put in that way, and men have sometimes taken even the language of Paul to express quite a different conception of the gospel; namely, that God could forgive man's sin only by making his own suffer the penalay.

Paul does discuss the nature of the sacrifice of Christ in relation to the conception of sacrifice in the Old Testament and among the Jews to whom his epistles were for the most part addressed. But when he comes to express the reality of the gospel on its positive and constructive side, he makes it plain that what Jesus was, God is.

The love and sacrifice of Jesus were the expression of the Divine Father himself. If God had not loved men, Jesus would not have gone to the cross, and the cross would have been of no avail. It is not God who is reconciled to us by the death of Christ, but it is we who are reconciled to God.

But our lesson concerning Christ the Savior has its human application. It is possible for us to have the man which was in Christ Jesus. We can live, also in the sacrificed spirit of life. We can so learn to know Christ and so receive into our hearts and lives the power of His salvation that we become saviours.

"We are co-workers together with Him," said Paul, and we could not be co-workers with Christ without participating in the great work that He came to accomplish in the saving of men.

Nor is this salvation that Jesus brings merely an individual or isolated thing. Men are saved into a fellowship. Through the salvation of Jesus we are brought into communion with the great company of those who everywhere bow in reverence and devotion at the name of Jesus.

Hamilton, who surrendered meekly to Sheriff R. A. Schmid of Dallas in the Fort Worth freight yard Friday night, will be marched three blocks down the street from the state prison to the Walker County courthouse Thursday or Friday to hear his formal sentence.

Plea To Governor

Mrs. Steve Davis, Hamilton's mother, to whom he clung desperately upon their reunion yesterday in the Dallas County jail, said she would go to Austin to plead with Gov. James V. Allred for a commutation of sentence.

Palmer shouldered the blame for Crowson's killing yesterday, denouncing District Attorney Max Rogers for the conviction of Hamilton by false testimony. Palmer was recaptured in Kentucky after the escape. Hamilton, a braggart, has insisted he never killed a man in his crowded career of bootlegging, car theft and bank robbery.

There was discussion here of possible institution of some court move in Hamilton's behalf. What it would be was not determined. Hamilton lost his right of appeal when he escaped and remained at large past the time for submission of an appeal.

Hamilton seemed in fair spirits Sunday after a sound sleep. From their adjoining cells he and Palmer called for morning papers containing the latest accounts of their exploits.

Must Reject Witnesses

Lee Simmons, prison system manager, was faced with the unpleasant necessity of rejecting most of the applications for opportunity to witness the double electrocution. The prison management tries to admit to the small death chamber all peace officers who worked on the doomed man's case, but Simmons said that would be impossible in this instance due to Hamilton's long crime career.

District Attorney Max Rogers said he saw no possibility of any further court action in the Hamilton case. He said the trial jury's verdict became final when Hamilton's escape and subsequent failure to return removed the jurisdiction of the court of criminal appeals.

Hamilton was confined in cell No. 7, the same one from which he escaped last July.

Ray Talks Freelyy

During the day he was visited by Adjutant General Carl Nesbitt, head of the Texas Rangers and Sam Allred, former district attorney of Hill County. Allred prosecuted Hamilton following the killing of a filling station operator.

"Nesbitt and Allred, with their wives, were just passing through." said Lee Simmons, general manager of the Texas prison system, "and asked if they wished to see Hamilton."

When they reached death row, Nesbitt spoke first.

"How are you getting along now, Hmilton?"

"Well, I'm getting along as well as could be expected," replied the Dallas auto thief, who became one of the nation's three chief public enemies.

Allred then introduced himself, and he and the outlaw conversed about the filling station holdup and slaying.

"They merely talked about certain aspects of that case," Simmons said afterwards, "Raymond seemed his usual loquacious self, talking quite freely."

would attract much attention because they represented objects which have played a great part in the progress and growth of Texas, the Panhandle and of Collingsworth County.

The articles will be placed in various store windows over town and will be accompanied by the legends concerning the history of each of the specific items. Absolute safety of the articles is guaranteed by placing them in windows where they cannot be handled or molested. The articles may be entered any time between the present and the afternoon of April 11.

In addition to general interest on the part of the public viewing the articles, many have also shown interest in the items which they have entered and a complete collection of old brands, irons, guns, dishes, crockery, clothing and other curios are included in the collection.

In making the announcement Mr. Jackson also stated that the school would sponsor a pie supper to be held at the school Friday night, April 12. He said that there would be plenty of pies, musical numbers and singing for entertainment, and invited the public to attend the event, which is expected to be one of the best ever held in the Kelley Community.

tracts completed. The agent's office has most of the contracts that have been turned in in shape to ship to the State Board.

"It is thought that there will be no delay in the producers receiving their checks this year in event that they have completed their contracts. The local cotton committeemen have been very busy the past week and would have been completed if the producers had contacted them as they were requested to do. The committeemen will this week continue to take applications, and it is the committeemen that has to certify same before it can be accepted by the county committee. The county committee will be in session next week to complete the certification of all contracts."
