Speech Class Play Well Received

"Let Me Out of Here", a three act farce comedy by J. Vincent Barrett, was presented Friday evening, March 17, by the speech class directed by Mrs. Witt Hines.

The play was well received by the audience and many of them declared it to be one of the funniest they had seen.

The players portrayed their characters well, showing the excellent training they had received.

Bona Lynn and Eve Boyd, played by Shirley Taylor and Patsy Beatty, lived together in a little two room apartment and worked as typists in the same office. Bona had a handsome brother, Deryl Bennett, that Eve wanted to meet, while Eve's wealthy aunt, Fay Narrell, wanted her to marry Gifford Morton an eccentric poem writer, Gordon Mahon. Bona's brother arrived to visit his sister with his friend Victor Ward, Dale Baird. Victor tore his trousers and the trouble began for the boys. Victor wraps himself in a towel while Garret takes his pants to the tailor to be mended not realizing that it was a holiday. The snoopy landlady, Loeita Stewart, almost discovered Victor but he pretended to be one of the girls with a cold. The plot thickened and trouble for the boys is almost unsolvable, but the mixup is all explained later.

Donald Gene Black portrayed the part of Mr. Ward, Victor's father. The colored maid and colored elevator boy were Peggy Shumate and Melvin Baumann. The band, directed by Mr. Jimmy Verner, furnished entertainment between acts.

Mr. L. D. Crawford and Mrs. Verner sold tickets. Ushers were Vonelle Faulkenberry, Betty Jane Horton, LaJoyce Beatty and Gloria Wheeler and Joy Ann Graham of Midland, a former speech student, also served as an usher.

R. C. Noel was announcer and assisted Mrs. Hines. Mrs. Hines presented Dale Baird a book of poems between acts for having compiled the best book of poems as a class project the last six weeks.

This was the fifth annual speech class play presented under direction of Mrs. Hines since she has been on the local faculty and the community has learned to look forward to her production.

Soil Conservation District Gets Check

Another check is expected in August and two more next year, which will bring the total for the two years to approximately $15,000.

Ann Haygood Marries L. D. Smith

Ann Haygood, daughter of Arnold Haygood of Loraine, became the bride of L. D. Smith, son of Mrs. J. F. Smith of Sweetwater Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the home of her parents.

The Rev. C. V. Thompson, pastor of the Pleasant Ridge Baptist Church, read the double ring ceremony before an arch of green and white roses entwined.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white moire satin styled on the princess lines. The gown featured a lace yoke and long sleeves that came to a point over her hands, and a full skirt of floor length and ending in a train. Her finger tip veil fell from a braided halo with small pearls entwined in the braids. She carried a bouquet of orchid showered with pink satin ribbon and small pink roses on a white Bible. Her jewelry was a pearl necklace given her by the groom and an heirloom ring belonging to her mother.

Mrs. Henry Smaligan of Abilene, the former Ruth Mahoney, was matron of honor. Her dress of green mist taffeta was fashioned with a full skirt and was floor length with a low neckline. She wore a corsage of pink roses and wore pink roses in her hair.

Dianne Smaligan, daughter of Henry Smaligan of Abilene, carried the train. She wore a green mist crepe dress with a hoop skirt. Her corsage was pink carnation.

Best man was Truitt Nepper of Palava, a long time friend of the groom.

Miss June Thompson played the wedding music.

Garland Haygood, brother of the bride made pictures of the guests and the ceremony which will be shown by projection on a screen.

The bridal table at the reception given in the home of her parents was laid with a lace cloth and centered with a double tiered white cake decorated with small pink roses and a wreath of green leaves circled the bottom of the cake. A bride and groom standing beneath an arch of white flowers with a silver bell hanging from the center were placed on top of the cake. White roses and green and white candles in crystal holders formed the centerpiece. The candles were lighted by Peggy, little niece of the groom.

For traveling to Lovington, N. M., the bride wore a gray suit with white accessories and an orchid corsage. The couple will be at home in Sweetwater.

Band Boosters Make Plans For Future

The newly organized Band Boosters Club of Loraine met last Monday night at the band room and it was reported that 68 members have been enlisted in the club. Although not all of the members were present, a large representation of this group was present at the meeting.

The meeting was called to order and several important projects were discussed. Tentative plans for the future include such things as band equipment, band membership, and community interest being built up. In order to accomplish these things several committees were appointed by the president, C. H. Martin. Those appointed were: Resolutions, Mrs. J. C. Hall, Glen Coon and C. H. Martin; advertising, Ray Preston, Mrs. Woodrow Pratt, J. W. King, Martin Dobbs and Mrs. Tony Snyder; program, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Verner, Claude Woods, and Mrs. J. C. Hall, Jr.; refreshment, Mrs. Plez Beatty, Mrs. L. A. V. Coldey, Mrs. Bill Stribling, and Howard Combs.

These and other members of the club are working toward a Womanless Style Show to be held at the gymnasium Monday evening, April 3, at 8:00 p. m. This show will feature the tops in our local talent, both in and out of school. Several musical groups will participate in the program as well as some of the more prominent and attractive men in the community who will model the latest styles in women's clothes. The proceeds of this entertainment will go to the Band Boosters Club and will be used in their efforts to help our school band toward better musical achievements.

School Attendance Is Low Compared To Enrollment

Superintendent G. W. Parish sent us the following article for publication and we are glad to cooperate with him in an effort to get better attendance in the Loraine school.

"Attendance records at school this year have been very far short of that which it had been hoped that it would be. The new laws put into effect last year based the amount of money that the school should receive from the State as well as the number of teachers that a school should be eligible to employ on the number of students in average daily attendance in school.

"The enrollment of the school at the present time is sufficient to warrant the employing of 22 teachers exclusive of a part time special service teacher, but the average daily attendance will only allow the school to employ 18 teachers and a part time special service teacher. This curtailment reduces the possibilities of service to each child and every child is largely the cause of the crowding condition of the school, for if the attendance was such that the State would approve, a sufficient number of additional teachers could be employed to relieve the crowded conditions so far as teacher pupil ratios are concerned.

"Besides the penalty assessed upon each and every pupil enrolled in the school by reducing the ratio if teachers per pupils, a very high penalty is assessed in the way of financial reimbursement to the school are concerned. If those students enrolled were all in attendance in school the school would receive an additional $12,787.00 per year from the state funds. These funds have been appropriated and are allocated to the school program and would assist materially in improving the program of the school throughout the year.

"The members of the Board of Trustees and the Administration of the school would like to again urge all patrons to assist in improving this record of attendance so that as much of this deficiency as possible may be salvaged prior to the closing of this school year."

Methodist Church Open For First Service April 2nd

April 2, 1950 will be an outstanding day in the history of the Methodist Church of Loraine. It will be the official opening of the new church for its first service. The people have done a tremendous job in the building and paying for the church. It has been furnished with new pews and adequate class rooms. The Beights families of Loraine have contributed a Hammond Electric Organ and it has been installed and is ready for use.

Services will last throughout the day with a basket lunch served at the noon hour. "Bring your lunch and come worship with us in this first service," the pastor, Rev. Homer Salley, urges.

The morning service will begin at ten o'clock with the Sunday School. The pastor says, "come find your class and be present for the very beginning." The morning worship will follow with the pastor doing the preaching by request of the church.

The afternoon service will consist of hymn singing and the former pastors speaking. Perhaps a former pastor will speak at the evening hour.

The Methodist people extend an invitation to all people of Loraine to enjoy the day with them.

The church will be dedicated at a later date, some time after conference when Bishop W. C. Martin can be present. "This has been a great year in our church and the people have responded to the calls by their officials. May we thank you and tell you that the job was accomplished because of you. Come worship with us in this first service", the pastor said.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

New Aids Asked for Farm Support; Coal Industry Seeks Strike Peace; Unemployment Surges to New Peaks

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

FARM SUPPORTS:

New Aids Asked

Charles Brannan, U.S. secretary of agriculture, was still plumping for adoption of his (Brannan plan) system for farm price supports, arguing that new price aids must be provided now.

Pointing out that there is trouble getting rid of 1948 farm surpluses even as 1949 surpluses are pouring in, Brannan said the disposal problem "points to the need of supplementary action on price supports, particularly with respect to more efficient methods than procedures for handling price supports of perishable commodities."

THE agriculture secretary may have had a point there, but the main question was: Would his plan of letting farm products find their own levels on the price market, with subsidies making up the difference—provide an adequate solution?

Up to this point, he had been unable to convince congress that it would. What luck he would have in the future was wholly problematical. But there was no arguing the point that something needed to be done to clear up the muddled farm price support program. As it was being operated, federal farm policy seemed to be getting worse the farther it went.

Brannan was "eminently correct" when he admitted that the present price support system programs "encourage over-production on one hand, and under-consumption on the other . . . and to find sufficient new uses for the surpluses, or to divert them into non-commercial channels at anything comparable to the support price usually is impossible."

SUMMING UP, Brannan said: "Briefly, the outlook includes the likelihood of some further contraction in the total demands for U.S. farm products and points to the need for adjustment in production if a favorable price level is to be maintained."

The problem indeed was a grave one and made even more grave by the fact that the administration may be caught in a trap that has been long in the making—a trap created by the fact that having so long experienced the subsidy aid as is, farmers won't like any tampering with the program and might visit their ill will on anyone who may do so.

LEWIS:

A Fine Largess

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America—a labor union which does not pay its members strike benefits and which subjects them to untold misery and hardship during strike periods—was offering a victory-flushed one-million-dollar loan to the C.I.O. United Automobile Workers union.

THE PURPOSE of the loan would be to help the UAW win new contracts from Chrysler and General Motors. Lewis wrote Walter Reuther, head of the giant auto workers union, that wage-welfare improvements in the coal industry were fought by money interests linked with "the financial group" which dominates car-making.

He added that this aid is needed so "your union may be assured beyond peradventure, of success in its present struggle." Reuther was in the midst of a long strike for pensions at Chrysler corporation. At the time of Lewis' offer, it was estimated UAW workers had lost $5 million dollars in pay and the company 250 million dollars.

Help for Reuther was authorized at a jubilant meeting of Lewis with his top union aides, where Lewis was said to have boasted that he had "licked" the strike-emergency injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley law, inasmuch as a federal court injunction issued under the law failed to halt the coal strike.

MOST of the big U.S. industrial concerns feared that Lewis' victory over the coal operators in the matter of wage increases and additional health and welfare benefits would touch off a series of strikes as other unions sought to do as well for themselves.

Coal was being mined again and industry's wheels were turning, but the immediate future appeared grim and uncertain. The question seemed to be: When and where will the next strike erupt? It seemed inevitable to even a casual observer that another round of wage-hike fights was in the making.

FRENCH-SAAR:

U.S. Worried

United States high level diplomats had a new and aggravating problem on their hands: The suddenly critical French-German split over the Saar region.

The situation was complicated when France and the semi-independent government of the coal-rich Saar signed a pact under which France would take the Saar's coal for the next 50 years, which the German chancellor resented.

Communist?

A sensation was caused in British political circles when Lord Beaverbrook's conservative London Evening Standard named War Minister John Strachey (above) "an avowed Communist."

COAL:

A Look Ahead

The most crippling coal strike in the nation's history had come to an end. Miners were pouring back into the pits and allied industries, faced with a threat of total shutdown, were reviving and calling men back to work.

John L. Lewis, United Mine Worker chieftain, apparently had won again. He had obtained a raise in pay for the miners along with additional health and welfare benefits.

But as the nation relaxed with a sigh of relief that the production-stop threat had been removed, leaders in the coal industry began to look farther ahead—to examine methods by which a permanent coal peace might be won.

Leading mine operators stated they hoped to complete arrangements to have Harry W. Moses, head of the "captive" mine subsidiaries of the United States Steel corporation, to leave big steel and devote all his time to handling the coal industry's dealings with Lewis.

APPOINTMENT of Moses as a full-time representative of the soft coal industry in its relations with the UMW is designed as a move to end the chaotic conditions that have existed in the mine fields for years. The move has the support of virtually all the principal operators in the north and west and was expected to win strong favor among southern operators as well.

A lasting industry peace has long been the goal of operators and the public, which is beginning to tire of the almost annual war of nerves between the mine union boss and operators while the nation stands almost helpless without fuel.

JOBLESS:

Hit New Peak

Again jobless numbers in the United States had catapulted to a new high, and again the federal commerce department appeared unperturbed about it.

Unemployment rose to 4,684,000 in February—the highest figure since 1941—when the total was 5,620,000.

DESPITE THE FACT that many industrial and economic leaders professed to see danger in the situation, the commerce department came up with the usual bland, unconvincing explanation as to the cause of the big jump in unemployment.

As was stated in January when jobless figures appeared alarming, commerce department boss said: "The slight rise in unemployment between January and February (204,000) appears to be due mainly to seasonal increase in the labor force and not to any cutbacks in employment."

"But was that the case? Wasn't it logical to assume that an 'increase in the labor force'—meaning unemployed but available labor—meant a corresponding lack of employment for that same force."

IT WAS SIGNIFICANT, many observers felt, that the figure as reported did not include striking workmen, a fact that meant the unemployment picture was not distorted in that sense.

Why was unemployment apparently steadily increasing? How would the "seasonal turnover" explanation hold water? If there were serious threat of widespread unemployment in the nation, it seemed the government should ascertain the fact.

ARCTIC ARMY

Large masses of men never could be pitted against each other in Alaska, or other Arctic wastes, as they were in the last war, according to military experts who led the recent mock warfare in the Alaska sub-Arctic; but they couldn't agree on why that is the case. One reason given was difficulty of transporting supplies, another was that there simply isn't enough room.

U.N. COST:

One Dime Each

Each citizen of the United States pays less than a dime for his share of the basic United Nations annual budget.

At least three members of congress disagree on whether this is too much, too little, or about right, according to the first issue of a weekly wall newspaper in color, the UN GRAM.

APPEARING for the first time this week, the new publication reports that Sen. Herbert R. O'Connor of Maryland, chairman of the senate committee on expenditures in the executive departments which recently issued a report asking that the U.N. reduce its expenditures for the United Nations and its affiliates, thinks that a dime per capita is too much. Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas, on the other hand, says it is too little; while Sen. Estes Kefauver is quoted as saying it is about right.

The U.N. Gram, which tells subscribers about the United Nations, in this issue objectively presents each of these three viewpoints.

Buttressing Senator O'Connor's "too much" point, it states: "Internationalism, plus national defense, is a luxury. U.N.'s budget is just the start: each specialized agency asks more. How can the little nations pay?"

Supporting the "too little" approach of Congresswoman Douglas, it says: "New York City, U.N.'s permanent home, pays more for garbage disposal than U.N.'s annual cost; its subway deficit would run the U.N. for six months."

AND BACKING up Senator Kefauver's "just right" viewpoint, it argues: "Upping the U.N. budget, by forcing out poorer members, would make it a 'rich man's club.' If the U.S. paid the increase, still others might resign, charging that the U.N. was the 'creature' of the United States."

"Our aim," states publisher Wallace Thorsen, "is to get people thinking and talking about the United Nations and the job it is doing in building the world community."

"We try, in this and all subsequent issues, to present a simple, objective analysis of the problems faced by the world's only machinery for peace, to anyone with the time and inclination to pause before a bulletin board long enough to read the U.N. Gram—a matter of minutes."

FARM UNION:

Asks Red 'Bargain'

From a surprising source came a plea for the United States to "strike a bargain" with Russia and spend 150 billion dollars in the next 15 years on the undeveloped areas of the world.

THE SOURCE was James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union. Patton said, "Somehow, I believe we will be able to find a way to live in this world with peoples who differ in viewpoint as to type of economy and social systems."

"Let us try to strike a bargain with those whom we are fighting in the cold war along with peaceful lines," he went on, "so that all of us can lay down our arms."

"Let us lead out in America by placing at the disposal of the people of the world an annual credit of 10 billion dollars for the next 15 years for the purpose of building TVA's on the Danube and the Yangtze, and for building man's productivity in all of the undeveloped areas of the world."

PRESIDENT PATTON'S proposal was magnanimous, generous, all-inclusive, but withal mostly visionary. It would delight those who operate on the theory that America can buy peace and good will with its dollars.

They might even add that America must be the most hated nation in the world, inasmuch as it appears it has no friends except those who are won and kept with money.

Another Shirley

In Germany they are comparing six-year-old Dagmar Glombig to America's Shirley Temple when the latter was rising to stardom as a child in Hollywood. Dagmar is the daughter of composer and conductor Eberhard Glombig and has played in several German films.

RUSSIA:

Parley Proposed

That there was at least a possibility of a Big Four meeting including Russia taking place was indicated by a report from Paris that the three western foreign ministers, meeting in London, would discuss the matter. French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman was the authority for the statement.

From another authoritative source came word that the Big Three would "study the problems."

Nazis' 'Process of Selectivity' Outsmarted by Polish Scientist

By BILLY ROSE

Whenever I'm in the mood for gargantuan gab, I hie myself over to a Russian tea room near Carnegie hall where refugees of a dozen nations sit around and give out with tall talk about the old days behind them and the new days coming up.

To give you a fitting for-instance, the other midnight I heard a macabre yarn from a gent who used to teach science in Warsaw, and while I don't know whether it's history or hokum, it strikes me as being worth my allotment of white space today. . . .

During the last year of the war, there was a small concentration camp in east Germany which had been set up for two purposes: (a) to build an underground machine shop, and (b) to make available the required number of human guinea pigs for certain experiments being conducted by distinguished Nazi scientists.

By SS STANDARDS, the method of selecting these guinea pigs was scrupulously fair. Each morning before breakfast, the 50 men in each of the wooden barracks would stand at attention until the commandant appeared with a list of their names. He would read off the top name on the list and the prisoner whose name was called would step forward.

The commandant would then hand two small leather disks, one marked with a white circle and the other with a black, to the "trustee" of the barrack for examination. Then the commandant would drop the disks into his hat, and the prisoner would draw one of them.

If he picked the one with the white circle he was safe until his name came up again 30 days later; if he drew the black one, he would be shipped out that Saturday night.

In December of 1944, my tea-room friend—the scientist from Warsaw—was cattle-carred to this concentration camp and assigned to a barrack occupied almost exclusively by captured Russian soldiers. He was asked the usual questions, and when the Russians found the newcomer was a Pole, they quickly let him know that the fraternity of races as preached by Moscow was confined to Kremlin publicity handouts.

And when he further admitted he had never joined the Party—not for any big ideological reason, but simply because he was a scientist and had no interest in politics—the Red army men decided he was an enemy of the state and began to plot against him.

THE POLE, however, was more worried about the disks in the hat than the whisperings going on about him. Under the lottery system, it would be almost two months before his name was called, and since news had filtered into camp that the Russian forces were only a few weeks away, he kept telling himself that liberation, might come before the date for the drawing. But as the days turned into weeks, and still no sound of far-away cannon, he resigned himself to taking his 50-50 chances with the hat.

The night before the fateful morning, the scientist was lying

KNOLTON'S CASE

By

Richard H. Wilkinson

KNOLTON'S ACT was the result of two years' of planning. There was little chance that anything would go wrong. He had served as clerk at the lumber camp for two long years. And from the moment he first saw the payroll left unguarded in the office while the bank guard went out and a camp paymaster came in—from that moment Knolton knew that some day he'd steal that payroll and make a get-away.

The day that Knolton had chosen for the robbery was not unlike a thousand others. At exactly noon the payroll car drove up. A guard stepped into the office and deposited the heavy bag by Knolton's chair. Knolton greeted him carelessly, nodded at the bag and bent to his work. The guard went out. The moment the door closed Knolton's head came up. He listened intently. Outside he could hear the bank guard in conversation with Raymond, the camp paymaster. There wasn't a moment to lose.

Quickly Knolton lifted up the cover of his desk, removed from inside a bag almost identical to the one on the floor and equally as heavy. He made the transfer deftly, unhesitatingly.

The door opened and Raymond came inside. He nodded briefly to Knolton, picked up the decoy bag and went out again.

Knolton stepped outside and walked leisurely toward the river. Unobserved he climbed into the canoe which was hidden there, and pushed off.

By mid-afternoon Knolton reached a tributary and turned off the main stream. He paddled up this smaller waterway for more than a mile.

He set the canoe adrift and headed inland, swinging southward. By dusk he had come to a virgin stand of timber, mighty monarchs of the forest as yet unscathed by the lumberman's axe. His steps led him to a huge pine, larger than the rest with thick undergrowth at the base. He parted the growth, pulled at a tuft of dirt. The tuft came away, revealing a shallow hole. Knolton had dug the hole months before, allowed the undergrowth to grow over it so that no trace of his recent visit would be in evidence.

He deposited the bag in the hole and carefully replaced the dirt.

IT WAS A MONTH before Knolton reached his destination; a tiny village hundreds of miles south of the lumber camp. Here he paused to rest with a friend. By now he had grown a beard. The friend provided dye, and Knolton changed the color of his hair from light brown to black.

Six months later Knolton, now known as Carl Hedman, with no trace of the one-time clerk showing beneath his perfect disguise, rode leisurely back toward the scene of his crime.

The lumbermen gave him no more than a passing glance. Satisfied that he had not been recognized, Knolton followed the river to the mouth of the tributary.

Strange Alchemy

I AM amazed to find that pain and grief By some strange alchemy, if bravely borne, Become a power, vital beyond belief, To bless and comfort other hearts that mourn. I did not dream through those far lonely days, Those bitter hours when pleading for release, That God would move in His mysterious ways To make those hours a means to others' peace.

That one's own darkness may become a light For hurt, bewildered ones—'tis strange to me; Yet out of pain is often born a white Undying flame of love and sympathy; The power that comes to dry another's tears Was generated through long bitter years.

awake in his bunk when he felt a tug at his blanket. It was a young Czech who had been badly mistreated by the "trustees," and who had often mumbled about getting even.

According to the kid, the comrades had figured out a plot to make certain the Pole would be shipped off to the Nazi experimenters. The "trustee" had cut a leather disk from his shoe and made a black circle on it, and when the commandant asked him to examine the disk, his plan was to palm the one with the white circle and substitute his own, so that either would mean death to the non-Party man.

For a long moment, the scientist looked up at the slat ceiling of the bunk above him. "Thank you," he finally said to his friend. "I think I'll be able to manage."

Next morning when his name was called, he saw the "trustee" palm the white-circled disk and substitute another. But he pretended not to notice, and when the commandant held out his hat he smiled and selected a disk. "White or black," he said, "I'm going to have one good meal in this miserable camp." And before the officer could stop him, he popped the bit of leather into his mouth and swallowed.

The SS man frowned. "Crazy Pole," he said, "what good will that do? There is still a disk left in the hat. If it is black, you picked the white; if it is white, you picked the black."

"That is quite correct, Sir," said the scientist.

Recently she was to play an Italian role on a Playhouse broadcast. A perfectionist in the pictures she produces as well as those she acts in, she hired a voice coach and worked so hard that her doctor told her to let up. Finally, less than 24 hours before air time, she threw over the whole idea—said she couldn't master those Italian intonations. COURT-MARTIAL AND KETCHUP

TWO G.I.'s IN GERMANY have been court-martialed for refusing to pass the ketchup to a sergeant. "Get it yourself," they told him. Pfc. Oscar Purkey says either first sergeants have softened up since he was in the army or ketchup bottles are getting a lot heavier. "I wish that was all my top sarge had asked of me was ketchup duty," sighed Oscar.

"I just don't understand it," the vet of the last war went on. "What goes in the American army when passing the ketchup gets rated as a call beyond the line of duty? Have we got dogfaces today who think table etiquette is a major service problem? Do they want a special medal struck off for sliding the mustard down the line?"

"This pass-the-ketchup issue has got me more scared than the H-bomb. It's of greater immediate danger to security. I was scared before by today's news from the peace trenches, but never so scared as by the fact that a question of who passes the ketchup is troubling the American army anywhere, especially in Germany."

"Every time I pick up a newspaper, I read about how Joe Stalin's G.I.'s are getting scrappier and scrappier and are itching for a fight everywhere . . . and nowhere do I hear of no Russian sarge wanting ketchup from a pfc and not getting it with no back talk. If there was ever a time when there should be no mutiny in the American army over passing the mustard, the tabasco sauce, the strawberry jam or the salt and pepper this is it, brother. I don't get no details so I don't know how come these two G.I.'s get to think passing the ketchup is combat duty. All I know is if my top sarge would let me off with duty as a first-line ketchup passer and asked nuthin' more out of me I would of had no kick."

"I would of passed him anything on the menu up to a load of baled hay or else. And I would not of asked no furlough on account of battle fatigue."

"That sergeant in the case must of been a Harvard man with a short reach and a poor aim. The whole case should get a investigation by the war department fast. If we ain't got sergeants who can take a bottle of ketchup as an objective without no long arguments and court-martials the country is sunk. And if we got pfc's who think the fate of the world today depends on how the movement of a bottle of chili sauce should be executed I am surrendering now."

Plan Living Rooms With an Eye to Comfort

By Ertia Haley

LIVING ROOMS are just what they say: room for living. Is yours planned to be enjoyed by every member of the family, for real joy, comfort and friendliness?

For a room meant primarily for living, all these aspects are of first importance. Does the room invite you in to stay as you first step in to it, or does it urge you only to look at it in a detached sort of way?

A comfortable living room is full of friendly pleasing colors that give you a sense of rest and peace. It has chairs that invite you to lounge and relax. It's a room of which you won't tire easily because it has muted colors that you can live with a long time.

It's easy to furnish a room such as this if you let common sense rules guide you. Do plenty of thinking about the room before you jump into decorating it. Just as a good carpenter has a blueprint of what he is making, you, too, should have a definite idea of what the room is to look like when it's finished.

You may have to spend a week or two selecting one or two comfortable chairs, but when you think of the years of comfort they will give you, the time is of no importance.

The room should reflect you and your interests, too. If you like to have people drop in and spend an evening in good conversation, this can be shown in the comfortable conversational arrangements you've planned.

If you like it to be a place to read and relax, then have enough end tables, good chairs and lamps that make this pursuit easy.

Use no More Than Three Colors in Room

"But where can I start?" is the question most people ask when they start talking about decorating. Well, start with color, since that's a good, solid basic point.

The colors may be chosen from a favorite picture which you have in the room, or a piece of material you fancy on the drapes, a pot of flowers, a china-platter, or something like that.

Every room should have one main color, then a secondary one which blends with the first. The third color is used in small quantity, merely for accent.

You would do well to choose muted colors since they are easiest to live with year after year. If too brilliant, you may like them a lot at first, but then tire of them quickly. Too many colors will make the room look busy, thus tiring you out after you sit there awhile.

to give comfortable impression.

No color or no thought to color will give you an unpleasant feeling of indefiniteness and can make you just as eager to get out of the room as too much color.

If the living room is large you can easily use some pattern. Too much pattern will clutter the room and will give a feeling of restlessness and crowding, just what you want to avoid.

When considering color, never forget to use plenty of neutral colors such as beige or tan, white, gray, etc. These will balance the more definite shades and give the room color balance. These colors might be employed on the ceiling, woodwork or rug, wherever they are most needed. They are not often used on furniture upholstery or drapes, except when color has been used on walls or floor to create certain effects.

Create Pleasing Effects With These Decorative Tips

Just as you avoid clutter with the proper choice of furniture, you can do the same with the furniture and other trimmings. Some of these tips may surprise you, but they've been tested for suitability.

You can mix light and dark woods. All the furniture does not have to match, though it should give a pleasing impression. Modern is adaptable for it can be used with Victorian or Chinese. If the room is Early American, better keep it all that way, even to your choice of chintz for coverings.

Husband Forgives Indiscretion

"HERE IS A DISTRESSED husband writing you," says a letter in my mail this week. "I am asking you an age-old question, Hugh Von Ahlm's note goes on, 'but the question is: Is the answer age-old too?'"

"I love Edith, my wife, very dearly. I am five years older, we have three very small sons. Edith is kind, capable, devoted to me and the boys, altogether a splendid person. Because of her extraordinary understanding and patience, we have never had a quarrel in our seven years of married life."

"About two weeks ago Edith told me that a man whom I never had met, but had heard her mention as one of her college crowd, was going to call on me, in the hope of selling me three letters of hers. She distinctly recollected that she had written him but three times, for they had seen each other constantly during the last months of her college year, after which he had left for his home in a distant state. She wrote three times, under the most agonizing stress a girl of 19 can know. He never answered. She never has seen him since. I need hardly say that he is today a contemptible rotter, and that my one interview with him will be my last."

Blackmail

"My wife told me the situation quietly, saying that this man wanted $500 apiece for each of these three letters, and asking me to buy them. She said she had told him to come to me, and he came. I identified the letters, paid for them, and burned them unread before his eyes. For Edith's sake I didn't horsewhip him as I might otherwise have done."

"When I went home Edith asked me if I wanted a divorce. I said no. I wanted nothing but that our life should go on as it has been, for all these happy years. She told me that she bitterly regretted having kept these things from me at the time of our engagement, and asked if my knowledge of them would have made a difference in my feeling for her. I said that it might have done so—but that we had proved our devotion and compatibility today, and I wanted it all forgotten."

"Edith, however, had moved herself into a small room next to the nursery, professing concern for the middle boy, who had a bronchial cold, and she is staying there. She has changed from the cheerful, busy mistress of the house to a nervous, silent woman who shows altogether too much willingness to enslave and sacrifice herself, and of late she has been asking me again if I do not want a divorce. I've told her that I was no saint, as a kid. It doesn't help."

"This seems to me to rather reverse anything I would have expected of this state of affairs. I find myself the one who is suing for reinstatement. I am of Dutch descent, undemonstrative and silent by nature. Edith is—or was—the light and warmth of the house. To have her tearful and shaken, and evasive breaks us all up. Am I treating this problem lightly, and what else should I do?"

Hadacol Helps Textile Workers Stay On The Job

The great textile mills of the Carolinas are booming again with shifts working day and night to turn out the nation's finest materials, and HADACOL is doing its part to keep folks on the job.

Many textile workers have reported the wonderful relief which has been brought them by HADACOL with its five B vitamins and four important minerals. Two of these workers, a young father employed by the great Cannon Mills at Kannapolis, N. C., and a mother, working at a mill in nearby Salisbury, N. C., recently told how HADACOL had helped keep them on the job.

Jay W. Barnhardt, Route 3, Box 343, Kannapolis, N. C., is 30 years old and the proud father of two children. His work in the Cannon Mills calls for a great deal of standing up. "I had been ill for several years," said Mr. Barnhardt as he explained how close he came to having to give up his work. "I suffered with a weak stomach. It became worse and worse with gastric disturbances. I just could not hold food and no food agreed with me. I could not sleep and finally I became so sick that my legs got weak as I worked in the mill each day."

Mr. Barnhardt, like so many sufferers, had tried many preparations without relief, when he heard about HADACOL.

"After the second bottle of HADACOL I began to feel better and to regain the weight I had lost," said Mr. Barnhardt. "My digestion became normal again and today I am as well as ever. My legs no longer bother me, I eat and enjoy my food. I sleep well and have plenty of energy."

Mr. Barnhardt has taken several bottles of HADACOL and now takes the famous vitamin and mineral preparation to help stay well. He has had his wife take it with wonderful results and has recommended it to his friends in the mill.

Mrs. Maggie H. Poole, 1503 Caroline Avenue, in Salisbury, N. C., had become so ill that she was forced to give up her work, but soon after hearing the wonderful news about HADACOL she was back on the job and has been doing well ever since. "I was tired, weak and nervous," said Mrs. Poole. "I suffered indigestion and food didn't agree with me. I also had headaches. After taking five bottles of HADACOL I felt good and was back on the job at the mill. I had tried so many things that the HADACOL news was a real blessing to me. I have more appetite and eat what I want to. I feel better than I have in a long time."

Mr. Barnhardt and Mrs. Poole were both suffering from a lack of B vitamins and the Minerals which HADACOL contains. HADACOL comes to you in liquid form, easily assimilated in the blood stream so that it can go to work right away.

A lack of only a small amount of B Vitamins and certain minerals will cause digestive disturbances. Your food will not agree with you . . . You will have an upset stomach . . . You will suffer from heartburn, gas pains and your food will sour on your stomach and you will not be able to eat the things you love for fear of being in misery afterwards. Many people also suffer from constipation. And while these symptoms may be the results of other causes, they are surely and certainly the signs of lack of B Vitamins and Minerals which HADACOL contains. And if you suffer from such a deficiency disorder, there is no known cure except the administration of the vitamins and minerals which your system lacks.

It is easy to understand, therefore, why countless thousands have been benefited by this amazing tonic, HADACOL.

So it matters not how old you are or who you are . . . it matters not where you live or if you have tried all the medicines under the sun, give this wonderful preparation HADACOL a trial. Don't go on suffering. Don't continue to lead a miserable life. Many persons who have suffered and waited for 10 to 20 years or even longer, are able now to live happy, comfortable lives because HADACOL supplied the vitamins and minerals which their systems needed. Be fair to yourself. Temporary relief is not enough for you. Give HADACOL a trial!

Insist on the genuine HADACOL. Don't be misled. Accept no substitute.

We are so firm in our belief that HADACOL will help you that we sell HADACOL on a money-back guarantee. If you don't feel perfectly satisfied after using HADACOL as directed, just return the empty carton and your money will be cheerfully refunded. Nothing could be fairer.

Sold at all the leading drug stores. Trial size only $1.25, but save money—buy the large family and hospital size—only $3.50.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny postcard. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or the $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv.

Union Spy Chief Had Reputation as Liar

U.S. 'Fouche' Held Braggart

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The dread name of Fouche has become a synonym for the national police chief and spy-master—the sinister, ruthless, unscrupulous intriguer whose tentacles (always he has tentacles) prodded into far, murky corners, Fouche (pronounced Foo-shat) was Napoleon's chief dick, and he carried on in the classic manner.

America has had such a servant, in Lafayette Curry Baker. He is labeled the "American Fouche" by the conservative Dictionary of American Biography. As secret service chief of Civil War days, he performed roughly—very roughly—a part of the job that J. Edgar Hoover is doing today in combatting espionage.

America can be thankful that Mr. Hoover is an official of completely different character and outlook from Lafayette Baker. Baker was the founder of the secret service, but hardly a credit to it. "He glorified in his title of general but was really one of the worst rascals of an age in which rascality paid high dividends," the dispassionate historian George Fort Milton observes.

Liar, forger, braggart and show-off—Baker was all those and more. He boasted so consistently that President Lincoln mistrusted him on instinct and had little to do with him. Baker was the creature of Edwin M. Stanton, the hardshelled secretary of war.

In protecting the citizenry and army, Baker uncovered a trade in obscene books and pictures—something of the sort that every police force and district attorney is dealing with—constantly. Baker called it "a fiendish business, carried on by human vampires, for ruining the morals and bodies of men."

"It was decided to make a bonfire of this sensual trash. Our pure minded president intimated that he would like to see the conflagration, and he enjoyed the sight with the zest of a noble nature, to which vice was a loathing," Baker related.

The judge said that parents have a right to "butt into" their daughter's marriage, if they do so sincerely—out of love for their child, not hate for her husband. "From whom should a girl seek advice," exclaimed His Honor, "if not from her own parents?"

Ouster proceedings were filed against a certain judge, on grounds of "habitual drunkenness." It seems that His Honor would go on an all-day spree once a month, and often had to be helped home. At the hearing he said his drinking wasn't "habitual"—because he often stayed sober for weeks at a time! But the court ruled that he wasn't fit for his job. The court said that drunkenness is a habit when it happens this often—even though there may be intervals of sobriety!

May You Denounce An Auto Dealer For "Selling Lemons"?

A woman bought a car from a dealer. Although the car worked all right, she soon decided that she didn't like it. One morning, the woman hung several lemons on the sides of the vehicle, along with signs warning the public against buying other "lemons" from this particular dealer. Soon the man filed suit for a stop-order. At the hearing the woman insisted that she couldn't be prevented from speaking her mind, but the court ordered her to cease her campaign. While admitting some judicial disagreement on the point, His Honor decided that he should stop the woman's deliberate attack on the dealer's business.

Stars in Tomorrow's Skies

AS ANOTHER SPRING is about to break open with new blizzards in the North and warmer suns in the South, the time seems to be about ripe for naming in advance the baseball stars who will be crowned next fall and winter.

This is a simple enough job if you wait until October or November. It has many more tangles if you try it with 16 clubs just heading for the sun.

Here were some of the leaders of 1949: National league—Jackie Robinson, Brooklyn; Don Newcombe, Brooklyn; Ralph Kiner, Pittsburgh; Stan Musial, Cardinals. American league—Ted Williams, Red Sox; George Kell, Tigers; Phil Rizzuto and Joe Page, Yankees; Ellis Kinder and Mel Parnell, Red Sox; Roy Sievers, Browns.

In 1949 the American league, apparently, had more stars than the National league carried. The all-star game and the world series helped to prove this. So did the year's set of averages. The American league had no home-run hitter to match young Kiner. The National league had no all-around hitter to match Ted Williams. The National league had no pair of pitchers to match Kinder and Parnell, no shortstops to match Rizzuto and no relief pitcher to match Page.

But 1950 is another year. A new spring has arrived and some 500 big-league ballplayers are all itching to start from scratch, as you might or might not say.

Who will be the two most valuable players, the two leading pitchers, the leading home-run hitter, the best all-around hitter and the two best rookies of the new season? Here are some of the candidates reporting to southern and western turf—

American league: Most valuable player—Ted Williams, Mel Parnell, Red Sox; Joe DiMaggio, Tommy Henrich, Joe Page, Phil Rizzuto, Yankees; Dale Mitchell, Lou Boudreau, Indians; Johnny Groth, Tigers.

Leading home-run hitter—Ted Williams, Boston; Joe DiMaggio, Yankees; Luke Easter, Indians; Sam Chapman, Athletics.

Leading pitcher—Mel Parnell, Ellis Kinder, Red Sox; Vic Raschi, Allie Reynolds, Yankees; Bob Lemon, Ed Garcia, Indians; Art Houtteman, Tigers.

National league: Most valuable player—Jackie Robinson, Pee Wee Reese, Roy Campanella, Dodgers; Stan Musial, Enos Slaughter, Red Schoendienst, Cardinals; Ralph Kiner, Pirates; Whitey Lockman, Giants; Richie Ashburn, Phillies; Sid Gordon, Braves.

Leading pitchers—Don Newcombe, Preacher Roe, Dodgers; Howie Pollet, Harry Brecheen, Cardinals; Ken Heintzleman, Robin Roberts, Phillies; Jansen, Giants.

A Few Stabs in the Dark

Here are a few wavering stabs, delivered through the spring darkness, as far as 1950's awards are concerned.

American league:

Most valuable player—Joe DiMaggio, now in perfect health. Leading challenger, Ted Williams.

Leading all-around hitter—Ted Williams.

Leading pitcher—Mel Parnell.

Leading challenger—Allie Reynolds.

Leading home-run hitter—Luke Easter, Indians (if his doctored knee holds up.)

Leading rookie—Luke Easter, Indians.

National league:

Most valuable player—Stan Musial, Cardinals; leading challengers, Roy Campanella, Bob Morgan, Jackie Robinson, Dodgers.

Leading all-around hitter—Stan Musial.

Leading pitcher—Don Newcombe.

Leading power hitter—Ralph Kiner, Pirates.

Leading rookie—Sam Jethroe, Braves; leading challenger, Bob Morgan, Dodgers.

Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio should put on a brilliant American league batting duel.

Football's Spring Fever

Out of the shuffling and reshuffling of football coaches since the last season closed, we have a faint idea that Tom Hamilton and Pittsburgh captured one of the best of them all in the person of Len Casanova, the ex-head coach at Santa Clara.

For one reason or another more than a dozen well-known colleges suddenly found themselves without a head coach shortly after the last pass was thrown in 1949.

FIRST AID TO THE AILING HOUSE

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

QUESTION: What would you recommend for putting into enamel and paint (gloss or flat) to keep it from showing lap marks?

ANSWER: Follow the manufacturer's instructions for the application of enamel or paint. If you buy a top quality product and follow directions for use there should be no lap or brush marks in the finished paint job. Poor quality paint may show such marks. To avoid such marks apply paint in narrower strips so that paint will not set when you start the adjoining strip.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Serve Main Dish Salads for Variety

(See Recipes Below)

Vary Menus

IF THE WEATHER turns unseasonably warm and you wonder with what food the family can be tempted, why not try a main dish salad?

If you're going to have the women's club for lunch, why not make work easy for yourself, simply by preparing a molded salad that needs only garnishes and serving at the last minute? It's easy to make salads look tempting because of their fresh, jewel-like colors and crisp touches.

SINCE the following salads all contain fish, meat or cheese they can readily serve as a main dish on one of those days when you need variety in your meal plans.

Tuna-Vegetable Salad

(Serves 6)
1 tablespoon gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
1 cup boiling water
2 cups shredded tuna fish
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped pickle
1/2 cup peas
1 teaspoon onion juice

Dissolve gelatin in cold water; add boiling water, mix thoroughly and allow to cool. Mix tuna fish, lemon juice and pickle and let stand until gelatin thickens. Then add tuna mixture to it with peas and onion juice. Pour into a wet mold and let chill until firm.

Herring Salad

(Serves 12)
3 salt herring
2 medium sized apples
5 cups minced, cooked beets
1/2 cup minced onion
1/2 cup chopped dill pickle
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup French dressing
3 hard-cooked eggs

Soak herring in cold water for one hour. Remove skin and bones; cut into very small pieces. Pare apples and cut fine. Toss all ingredients except eggs together and chill for two hours. Serve on large platter garnished with chopped egg whites, sprinkled with egg yolks put through a sieve.

*Spiced Salmon Mold

(Serves 4-6)
1 pound canned salmon
2 packages lemon-flavored gelatin
1 1/2 cups boiling water
1/4 cup cold water
1/4 cup lemon juice
3 tablespoons vinegar
1/2 cup chili sauce
1 cup chopped celery

Arrange half of flaked salmon in bottom of loaf pan. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Mix well. Add half of the gelatin mixture to the chili sauce. Add cold water, lemon juice, vinegar and salt to remaining gelatin mixture. Pour half of the mixture over salmon flakes in pan. Chill until congealed. Add

LYNN SAYS:

Add Color to Menus To Tempt Appetites

Pot roast takes on a richer color if you use diluted cranberry jelly as the liquid for cooking. It adds a novel, tart flavor, too.

Dried beef can be heated in barbecue sauce, then served over split beans which have been spread with cheese and broiled.

Slices or shreds of ham mixed in with potatoes au gratin will give you a colorful supper dish as well as a flavor pleasing one.

celery to chili sauce and pour over jellied salmon. Chill. Then add remaining salmon and remaining gelatin mixture. Chill until firm. Serve on a bed of shredded lettuce with garnish of lemon wedges, sweet pickles and olives. Pass, if desired, bread, butter and lettuce sandwiches.

WHEN YOU WANT something special for luncheon main dish, there's nothing that will set the table off better than this tomato red loaf:

Tomato Jelly Ribbon Loaf

(Serves 6)
Tomato layer:
2 cups canned or fresh tomatoes
1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon pickling spice
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 stalk celery, diced
1 tablespoon plain gelatin
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon onion juice
1/4 cup water

Combine tomatoes, sugar, pickling spice, salt and celery. Simmer for 10 minutes. Strain. Soften gelatin in cold water, then add to hot tomato mixture and stir until dissolved. Add lemon and onion juices.

Cheese Layer:

1 package cream cheese (3 ounces)
1/2 cup mayonnaise
2 drops tabasco sauce
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon plain gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water

Combine cream cheese, mayonnaise and seasonings. Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve over hot water and add to cheese mixture. Pour half of tomato mixture into oiled loaf pan (7 1/2 by 3 1/2 inches). Chill until mixture is firm. Add cheese mixture. When this has almost set, add the remainder of the tomato mixture. Serve sliced on lettuce or other greens.

LUNCHEON GUESTS will also find lobster served as a salad a great favorite. The best of these salads require few ingredients other than the fish, and the seasonings are simple.

Lobster Salad

(Serves 6)
2 cups lobster meat, freshly boiled or canned
1 cup French dressing
1/2 cup diced celery
1/2 cup diced green pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup mayonnaise

Break lobster meat into chunks. Marinate in French dressing for one hour. Drain, and add remaining ingredients. Mix lightly. Serve on lettuce, garnished with lemon slices.

Use mashed potatoes put through the rosette end of the pastry tube as a garnish for the top of meat loaf or a roast beef pie. Heat in the oven until the potatoes have a delicate golden brown color.

Do single pork chops in milk, then in crushed cornflakes. Sprinkle with paprika while they are browning and add a bit of diluted catsup or tomato juice as a liquid in the pan to give them lovely color.

Try serving your next batch of chili over a bed of macaroni to give it a novel look.

SCRIPTURE: Romans 1:1, 7-15; 15: 22-29; 16; Acts 27-28; Philippians 1:12-20; 4:22
DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 2:2

World-Wide Church

Lesson for March 26, 1950

GOD WORKS his purposes out in ways that not even the wisest of his servants can foresee. A beautiful example of this is the way Paul went to Rome. Long before he saw that city he wanted to preach there. All roads led to Rome, as they do to all world capitals, and people went there from everywhere.

World Horizon

When Paul writes to his "pen-friends" at Rome (15:22-29) of a projected trip to Jerusalem and Spain, taking in Rome on the way, he was laying out a trip in the east and west ends of civilization, the jumping-off places. His plan was as ambitious as a modern evangelist would write to some church in India: "I Dr. Foreman aim to visit Iceland and Japan, and call on you on the way out."

Bond Voyage

PAUL EXPECTED to go to Rome a free man, his ticket (so to speak) reading on through Spain. Actually that was the end of his run. He went there under military guard, prisoner under sentence. The story is all there in Acts, how first he was jailed for protection from a blood-hungry mob, then kept in jail on general principles (which is to say, the governor kept hoping he would pay well for an acquittal), and finally appealed to Rome, the highest court of the empire. Appeals were expensive and slow, then as now.

But Paul must have come to look at his imprisonment, false as it was, as a heaven-sent opportunity to make that journey to Rome. It was a gift-edged accident insurance. Free, he might never escape the plotters and reach Rome alive. Chained, the efficient Roman army would see that he arrived—and he did. Four pairs of eyes were on him night and day. No plotter could stick him with a dagger or shove him overboard. So—after some hair-breadth escapes to be sure—he was delivered safe and sound in the very city of which he had been dreaming all these years.

The Church at the Hub

Of the World

THERE IS NOTHING at all in the New Testament to indicate that the church at Rome was considered, by Paul or any one else, as The Church, or the Mother Church. There is no claim that it was founded by St. Paul, still less by St. Peter.

It grew, as other churches grew, by infiltration. Christians who moved to the big city would get together, and there the church would be. Yet, of course, the Roman church was important.

It was important because it was at the hub of the civilized world. Paul did not seem to mind it in the least, that he could work only inside his prison, or "confined to quarters."

Writing from his jail cell to the Philippians, he mentions converts from the army and from the imperial slaves. ("Caesar's household" in Phil. 4:22 does not refer to the Emperor's family, but to the retinue of palace slaves.) We know from the letter to Philemon that Paul converted at least one "jailbird" named Onesimus.

The True Church is A

Marching Church

PAUL KNEW that a soul is a soul, sitting in the emperor's chair or waiting at the emperor's table. God is no respecter of persons. But he also knew that these Christian soldiers would not always stay in Rome; that even Christian slaves would be sold down the river; that the restless feet which brought their owners to Rome would take them away again. Great cities are like that.

Putting down Christianity in Rome was not like putting a single seed into a sheltered corner of the garden. It was like scattering a handful of it to the breeze, to be carried far and wide. Paul's vision is still the vision of the church at its best. The true church marches on, along the high-roads and byroads of the world.

We shall never be content with a narrow, sheltered Christianity. We cannot be satisfied with half-world religion. Only world-Christianity matches the grandeur of the New Testament ideal.
