Reagan says summit talks 'cleared the air'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told his Cabinet on Friday his talks with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev "cleared the air" in superpower relations, and administration leaders from Washington to Geneva trumpeted the message that the summit "succeeded beyond any reasonable measure."

Reagan acknowledged he failed to soften Gorbachev's opposition to the "Star Wars" missile defense plan. And, the administration's claim of summit success was countered by fresh criticism that there were no concrete results on nuclear arms reductions.

In an interview Friday with a group of reporters, Reagan also said the summit produced evidence that the Soviets want a political solution in Afghanistan.

"I told him (Gorbachev) that if we were going to make any gains at all, we should start by trying to eliminate the distrust and the suspicions that have existed so long," Reagan said.

"Out of this came an evidence that they want a solution to this problem," Reagan said, referring to what he called "quite a discussion" of Afghanistan during the first of several private fireside chats with Gorbachev.

Reagan did not give any details, but Secretary of State George Shultz, briefing the group after the president left, said progress was made on procedure and "some of the substance" involved in persuading the Soviets to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan.

Reagan also said he believes the Soviets may move soon on human rights, but declined to discuss details.

At a news conference called to give their reaction to the summit, two former arms negotiators lamented the lack of concrete arms-reduction steps.

"The two arms races are to go on," said Gerard Smith, the chief U.S. arms negotiator for the SALT I talks.

Paul Warnke, chief negotiator for the unratified SALT II agreement, said the good news from the summit is that Reagan and Gorbachev agreed to meet again. "The bad news is that not much will happen then, either," Warnke said.

Both men said they regretted the president did not agree to abide by provisions of the SALT II treaty for an additional year. The accord is due to expire on Dec. 31.

At the White House, Reagan's cabinet secretaries assembled to hear his summit report and applauded as the president entered the Cabinet Room.

Describing two days of meetings with Gorbachev, Reagan said, "Nothing was papered over, nor did anyone try to pretend that we had done better than we had. On some (issues) we just could not quite come together."

"We have a lot of work in the meantime," the president said. "We have cleared the air and I think we have a sense of the common ground."

The president said he told Gorbachev — and the Soviet leader agreed — that "words are not going to be enough. It will take deeds to eliminate the suspicions, the mistrust on each other's parts."

Akins decides to jump into race for Congress

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Taking about two months to study his chances and his desires, Mayor G. Thane Akins has decided to jump into the race with at least three other candidates seeking the Republican nomination for Congress from the 21st District.

"I am running," said Akins, but he won't enter the race officially until January.

Akins told the Reporter-Telegram in September he had been approached by several people to enter the race and he was sending out letters of support then to determine his chances.

"I've got people out raising money. I'm trying to get my organization together. I've got a lot of encouragement from a lot of different places. I found no negatives in testing the water," he said.

He is the process of putting together a steering committee and finance committee. Currently, J.D. Faircloth is serving as treasurer, he said.

Three other Republican candidates who have been campaigning are Van Archer, Lamar Smith and Jeff Wentworth, all of San Antonio. Because a candidate in the primary must garner 50 percent plus 1 vote to be the nominee, a runoff is expected in this race. According to one source,

Thane Akins

Akins stands a good chance of being in the runoff against one of the San Antonio candidates.

The 21st District runs from Bexar County in San Antonio north to Midland. One report indicates that in the Republican primary, 32 percent of the vote comes out of Bexar County.

Democratic group, Green Beret chapters commemorate JFK's death

DALLAS (AP) — The assassination 22 years ago of President John F. Kennedy was commemorated Friday by a local Democratic group and two Texas Green Beret chapters who laid wreaths and said prayers.

Fewer than 100 people gathered under overcast skies in front of the Texas School Book Depository, the building from which the Warren Commission said Lee Harvey Oswald fired the fatal shots Nov. 22, 1963, from the sixth floor.

"Dallas doesn't want to face what happened here. It's the most negative event in the history of Dallas," said Larry Ray Harris, who attended the Downtown Dallas Democrats' ceremony Friday in front of the depository. "They want to put it behind us, but they can't. They can't downplay it like they've tried to for years," Harris said.

Others maintain that the president should be remembered on his birthday, May 29.

"It's kind of strange to do something remembering the death of somebody," said Richard Cox, executive director of the Dallas County Democrats. "We thought it would be inappropriate to do something on his death."

Cox said other U.S. presidents are honored on their birthdays, not on the day of their death.

At the depository, a priest read a brief prayer, a red, white and blue wreath was placed on the ground and the Navy fired a 21-gun salute.

In a separate ceremony a few blocks away, a wreath was laid at the Kennedy Memorial by Green Beret chapters from Dallas and San Antonio.

It marked their last official commemoration honoring the slain president on the day he died; his family has asked that he be remembered on his birthday, said Sgt. Maj. Joe Lopez.

Kennedy strongly supported the Green Beret, an elite army force whose members were given approval to wear the distinctive headwear that helped them gain prominence in Vietnam.

The Kennedy Memorial is located about two blocks from the Dealey Plaza assassination site.

"Today, we just wanted a silent type of affair," said Lopez, who started the ceremony Nov. 22, 1980.

He said that despite an end to the ceremonies, he never will forget Kennedy's support.

Thanksgiving dinner will be costly for Texas farmers

By DAVID ELLIOT
Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — When you sit down to that scrumptious Thanksgiving dinner Thursday, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower wants you to remember the farmers who produced the food on the table.

Hightower's staff analyzed the farm value of 12 Thanksgiving menu items that Texas farmers grow or raise. While the results will be tasty news for consumers, they might be hard to swallow for the farmers who depend on produce sales for survival.

"If Texans want to know how bad things are in today's farm economy, they need look no further than their own Thanksgiving dinner," Hightower said. "The meal will be tasty and consumers will be thankful, but farmers will actually lose money on most of the items they bring to our Thanksgiving tables this year."

On a per-plate basis, Hightower said, Thanksgiving dinner will cost consumers $2.88 — leaving farmers with a seven-cent profit for the ingredients for that perfect holiday meal. "Even this ridiculously low return is inflated when we consider that a couple of large turkey-production firms are practically the only ones who will realize even a small gain on our Thanksgiving dinner, leaving the vast majority of Texas farmers eating a loss," he said.

If that's not enough food for thought, Hightower said, consider this: nine traditional entrees — cornbread dressing, broccoli, carrots, spinach, lettuce, tomatoes, beets, pickles and bread, returned either no profit or a net loss to the farmer who produced them this year.

"The total loss suffered by producers of these nine items is three cents per serving," he said. "Two other dinner items — peas and pecan pie — each paid a whopping 1 cent per serving to the producers of the farm ingredients. Only turkey showed any sizeable return to the producers — 8 cents per serving."

Young boy killed when pickup ran over him

From Staff Reports

A 14-month-old Midland boy was killed Friday when he was accidentally run over by a pickup, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Kenneth Wayne Cupp, Route 10, Box 10170, was playing behind the pickup near a house south of County Road 60 East and west of County Road 1133 about 4 miles east of Midland when the accident occurred about 11:10 a.m., reports said.

Richard Charles Hodge, of Midland, backed a 1970 Ford pickup over the Cupp boy, apparently without realizing the boy was behind the truck, reports said.

The boy was pronounced dead on arrival at Midland Memorial Hospital at 12:50 p.m., reports said.

Also killed in a Friday traffic accident was a 59-year-old Odessa woman whose car was hit by a truck in the intersection of Loop 338 and 8th Street in Ector County, according to DPS reports.

Lennie Travis Pate, 709 Pacer, was eastbound in a 1979 Lincoln on 8th Street about 12:05 p.m. when she entered the intersection of Loop 338 and her car was struck on the right side by a truck driven by Jerry Mack Creech of Odessa. Creech was driving north on the Loop when the accident occurred.

Ms. Pate was pronounced dead in Odessa Medical Center at 1:07 p.m., reports said.

Mahon remembered as man who never forgot West Texas roots

LUBBOCK (AP) — Statesman George H. Mahon was remembered as a man who made his mark in history but never forgot his West Texas roots as 1,500 friends, family members and statesmen gathered for the late congressman's funeral Friday.

The former U.S. representative, a personal friend of Lyndon Johnson who attained the power of the nation's pursestrings during his 44 years as a congressman, died Tuesday. He was 85.

Thirty-six delegates from Washington, led by House Majority Leader Jim Wright, joined state and local leaders in honoring Mahon, who served as the 19th District representative.

"He was such a gentle man. The word honorable was not just a title for George Mahon, it was a way of life," said Wright, who delivered the eulogy.

Wright recalled the time 22 years ago to the day when Mahon stood beside then vice president Lyndon B. Johnson as he took the oath of office following the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

"George was standing there beside Lyndon Baines Johnson on Air Force One as he took that oath of office," Wright said. "He was a part of history then, and throughout his life."

But "George Mahon never forgot where he came from," Wright said. "Each year he would return to his district, where he would pick 100 pounds of cotton just to remember his roots."

Wright, who broke down once during the eulogy, said that Mahon was also a great friend for Texans in Washington.

The Rev. Sam Nader, another longtime friend of Mahon's who officiated at the funeral, characterized Mahon as a servant of both God and his fellow man.

"He was a great man, for greatness consists of service to God and service to our fellow man," Nader said.

Trinity Towers Manor Park will be holding open house

From Staff Reports

Trinity Towers Manor Park, a residential community for senior citizens, will preview its recently completed Mabey Health Care Center during an open house from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at 2208 N. Loop 250 West.

The 36,000 square-foot center will provide an infirmary, personal care, custodial care and nursing services for residents of Manor Park.

Residents of the center also will be provided around-the-clock medical attention, security, meals and recreational activities.

The 60-bed personal health care unit was constructed adjacent to the central facility, which houses a chapel, library, gift shop, beauty/barber shop, exercise room, dining room and more.

Manor Park is a self-contained residential community for persons 62 years of age and older. Construction of the community began with $6 million in donations.

The final stages, expected to be completed in seven to 10 years, will result in a $40 million project with 416 retirement homes and a 150-unit apartment complex constructed on 40 acres of land.

Bill Saxton, chief executive officer of Midland Presbyterian Homes, said those residents in need of nursing care will be transferred from the parent Trinity Towers complex to Manor Park by Dec. 2.

The third floor where those beds were at Trinity Towers will be remodeled and made into residential rooms, he said. The second floor will become the personal care area.

"When the public comes out Sunday I think they'll be pleasantly surprised," Saxton said. "It's really a dream come true, especially when the health care residents are anxious and excited. It makes it all worthwhile."

Donations for the construction of the facility were provided, in part, by the J.E. and L.E. Mabey Foundation of Tulsa, Okla., and other individuals. General contractor was HBF Construction of Midland.

Final touches are put on the new Mabey Health Care Center at Trinity Towers Manor Park. The new facility will be showcased during open house ceremonies Sunday from 2-5 p.m. at 2208 N. Loop 250 West.

Body buried of American who was MIA longest

HONOLULU (AP) — Navy Lt. j.g. Richard C. Sather was buried on a grassy slope in an extinct volcano crater Friday, ending 21 years of uncertainty for the family of the American listed as missing in action in Vietnam longer than any other.

Sather, of Pomona, Calif., was shot down over North Vietnam on Aug. 5, 1964, when he was 26. He was the first American pilot to have crashed in North Vietnam.

Sather's remains were among those of seven people recently identified by the Army's Central Identification Laboratory here. The others were flown to the mainland two weeks ago for burial.

Sather's mother, Magdalena, who now lives in Hawaii, brother and two sisters looked on as Sather's remains were interred in the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific in extinct Puuowaina Crater, better known as Punchbowl.

A "Missing Man" fly-over by four Navy A-4 Sky Hawk jets from the Fleet Composite Squadron One at the Barbers Point Naval Air Station broke the silence as six Navy officers carried the silver casket to the grave.

"Dick taught me that serving others is the greatest kind of freedom," said the Rev. Jerry Reynolds, pastor of St. James' Episcopal Church in Kaimukua, Hawaii, a family friend.

"Dick was humble and loving and one who cared more about others than himself," said Reynolds in his tribute during the 15-minute ceremony.

After a seven-member Navy squad fired a three-volley salute and a Navy bugler played taps, George Wyman, a family friend and member of the U.S. Pacific Command staff, presented the U.S. flag that draped the casket to Mrs. Sather.

Sather's funeral came three days after a team of Americans and Vietnamese began their first joint search for the remains of U.S. servicemen in Vietnam. The team found bone fragments and what appeared to be pieces of an airplane on Tuesday in Yen Thuong, Vietnam, where villagers said a bomber crashed 13 years ago.

Mrs. Sather last saw her son when she drove him to San Diego to be shipped out on the aircraft carrier USS Constellation in May 1964.

25 percent from Midland County, 15 percent from Kerr County, 7 percent from Tom Green (San Angelo) and 8 percent from Comal (New Braunfels). The metropolitan San Antonio area can deliver 60 percent of the vote in the primary, according to the report.

Akins agreed with the assessment he could easily get into the runoff and added he feels his chances of winning that second race are good.

"My support in Midland is very good and my contacts in Brady and San Angelo are good. And I've even had some encouragement from San Antonio. It looks very winnable to me," he said. Akins was raised in the Brady area.

The mayor cited his oil and gas background as an important qualification. He has worked as a petroleum engineer for more than 25 years, first with Arco and now with O'Brian Engineering.

"If qualifications are an issue, and it will be, it will make me unique in the race. Right now it (oil and gas) is critical to the country. I'm seeing what is happening in Congress to the oil and gas issues and with the Ways and Means Committee," he said, referring to the oil tax proposal adopted by that congressional group on Wednesday.

The congressional seat is being vacated by Tom Loeffler, who decided to return to Texas and run for the gubernatorial seat. When considering the race, Akins had said he already knew he would not seek a fourth term as mayor.

Traffic jam

This four-car accident at the intersection of Big Spring Street and Florida Avenue occurred about 10:45 a.m. Friday. Few details were available from police, but one woman was apparently taken to Midland Memorial Hospital to be treated for minor injuries, according to Emergency Service reports.

REAGAN

Asked by a reporter if Gorbachev had softened on Star Wars, Reagan replied, "Not on that issue, no."

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, there were strong signs of unhappiness over Reagan's statement Thursday night, immediately upon his return from the summit, about sharing Star Wars technology with the Soviets.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said "there wasn't much applause" in the House chamber when Reagan talked about a "reciprocal program of open laboratories" in the United States and Soviet Union on Star Wars. "I think it was very quiet at that point," Dole said.

Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said flatly, "I don't like that idea. Why should we shoot people for selling such information to the Soviets, if we're going to turn around and give it to them?"

Nonetheless, Byrd said, "I don't think we should get hung up on that. I think we have something this morning to be glad about. We had a good summit."

Administration officials echoed that theme.

"This meeting was terribly important," said Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security adviser.

Even so, Shultz said, "I think this result is very good and undoubtedly the most that anyone could expect."

McFarlane, in a speech at the Geneva University Institute for Higher Studies, said the meeting "succeeded in establishing a very thorough understanding on both sides of the other country's purposes, priorities, ambitions and willingness to compromise."

Shultz said he was encouraged by the summit's outcome, but added, "I don't have my hat throwing in the air, either."

MAHON

Nader told Mahon's family not to mourn his loss because Mahon had left behind something that every family would wish to have.

"He left you a name without a stain, and a reputation without a blemish," he said.

Kent Hance, who followed Mahon in Congress after he retired in 1978 as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, called him the "ideal public servant. He acquired power, he didn't abuse it, and he always knew how to use it."

Mahon died at a San Angelo hospital. Funeral services were at the First United Methodist Church in Lubbock, with burial in the Loraine Cemetery at Loraine, Mahon's hometown in Mitchell County.

After the services, many gathered to share their own personal memories about Mahon.

"He was one of the greatest political leaders of our time," said Gov. Mark White. "The contributions he made to this state and the nation can never be repaid."

Other public figures who attended the service included Gen. Maxwell Taylor from the Pentagon, former Texas Gov. Preston Smith, State Sen. John Montford, Attorney General Jim Mattox, and several county and city officials.

Mahon served as the only 19th District congressman until his retirement. He was first elected to the West Texas district in 1934. In Congress, Mahon became known as a conservative with a passion for pay-as-you-go government.

Mahon maintained a home in Colorado City throughout his career, but lived in Lubbock for many years.

"I think if it's the wishes of the family, we should honor it," he said. "But you'll never forget this day. I will come back, but I probably won't ask anyone to join me except my wife."

His wife, Delane Lopez, said she doesn't think the anniversary of Kennedy's death should be overlooked.

"It happened and it happened here," Mrs. Lopez said. "To ignore it would be an insult."

Kennedy's brother, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, meanwhile, visited the late president's grave at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Va.

In a church at Hyannisport, Mass., the home of Rose Kennedy, the late president's mother, a Roman Catholic Mass was celebrated at noon in honor of Kennedy, said the Rev. John C. Ozug, who added that he did not know whether Mrs. Kennedy attended the Mass.

DEATHS

Paul Edgmon

LAMESA — Paul Edgmon, 61, of Lamesa died Thursday at a Lubbock hospital following a lengthy illness.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. today in the First Presbyterian Church in Lamesa with the Rev. Bob Hawkins officiating. Dr. C.H. Murphy, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will assist. Burial will follow in the Hancock Cemetery under the direction of Branon Funeral Home.

He was born April 5, 1924 in Dawson County. He owned and operated Edgmon Radio and TV for many years. He was a 1941 graduate of Lamesa High School, veteran of the U.S. Air Force and worked in the aircraft factory before joining the military. He married Annie B. Sellers on March 13, 1944 in Lamesa.

Test pilot for aircraft company says his job is 'down to earth'

KERRVILLE (AP) — The test pilot — an image comes to mind of a hell-for-leather wildman with flapping scarf, bulging eyes and a penchant for maniacal feats of derring-do.

But for Bob Kromer, an engineering test pilot for Mooney Aircraft Corp. of Kerrville, that image is almost laughable.

"We're not the Chuck Yeager type. That's military stuff," Kromer said. "You wouldn't want a Boeing 727 developed by a military test pilot."

Kromer said his job is much more down to earth. There's no place for hot-dogging or aerial acrobatics in his line of work.

"We're not stunt pilots. We're looking for handling qualities — how does the airplane feel? They have to be tuned to the average pilot... We're looking at the safety characteristics for the average pilot."

For the more dangerous assignments — which Kromer refers to as "critical flight tests" — he takes more precautions.

"We wear a chute for a first flight, simply because we don't know what's going to happen," Kromer said.

Other equipment for these critical tests includes an oxygen mask and tank, a glossy red crash helmet with pull-down visor and a radio headset.

But so far, Kromer said, he hasn't had any really frightening experiences while testing — "no engine failures, no fires. We look at potential problems before we fly."

A large portion of a test pilot's job is done on the ground. After every test flight, several hours are spent in data reduction, or assimilating information accumulated during flight. The computer is "one of the most important tools in testing," Kromer said.

Kromer said a flight test precedes the design-team's final efforts. "Our job is one of testing and evaluating the final changes on the airplane. My job is to see if these ideas work."

Mooney's design and testing operation is very much a team effort, Kromer said. "My job is kind of the most glamorous, but it's just one step in a team effort. There are also design engineers, propulsion engineers, aerodynamicists and the experimental shop mechanic."

Most of Mooney's flight testing is done between Kerrville and Junction at altitudes between 1,000 and 28,000 feet, Kromer said.

Kromer, an aerospace engineering graduate of Texas A&M University, worked for six years at Cessna in Wichita, Kan., and for two years at Fairchild Aircraft Co. in San Antonio before coming to Mooney in 1983.

Educators support public school reforms, A&M reports indicate

By STEVE LEVINE

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas educators "overwhelmingly support" the massive public school reforms of 1984 but have serious questions over how the state has executed them, two reports issued Friday conclude.

Researchers at Texas A&M University and the LBJ School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas at Austin interviewed about 1,300 teachers, principals, superintendents and school board members last spring. The A&M study focused on teacher issues, while the UT team studied all aspects of House Bill 72.

"We found enormous support for HB 72, contrary to reports that have been circulating," said UT professor Norton Grubb.

"Overwhelmingly there was support for HB 72," said A&M researcher Carole Crain. "There are specific problems with implementation."

The good points the two reports found included:

- Increased state aid to school districts, including increases in teacher salaries.

- Decreasing the gap between rich and poor districts in dollars-spent-per-pupil

- Increased emphasis on academic performance, including mandatory graduation tests and the elimination of social promotion

- Increased state support for programs for poor students and for bilingual education.

Grubb predicted problems will arise in the future, when districts face additional HB72-mandated requirements with no extra state money. Those problems, he said, will particularly hurt the poorer districts.

For example, next year all districts may have no more than 22 students in first and second grade classrooms. Poorer districts tend to have more students per class now, he said, and have little money available to build more classrooms and hire more teachers.

Grubb said he was stunned by the amount of publicity the controversial no-pass, no-play rule has received. "In general everyone that we talked to supported the no-pass, no-play rule because they thought it was one of the issues that would return academic excellence to the high school," he said.

Crain said 67 to 76 percent of the educators her group surveyed supported the career ladder bonuses for outstanding teachers. However, she added, they all found problems with the process for measuring teachers' performance and the relative lack of money to pay for the bonuses.

T.W. "Skipper" Dippel of Brenham, chairman of the group that commissioned the studies, said the results indicate the state has achieved a qualified success. They also point out issues which the Legislature may wish to address.

"Many people in the general public believe...that from this point forward everything is solved," Dippel said. "That's not the case."

Moratorium lifted on Medicaid

By DAVID ELLIOT

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Under fire from lawmakers who claimed it was acting against the Legislature's wishes, a state agency has lifted a moratorium on new hospital beds eligible for Medicaid payments.

The Texas Board of Human Services, fearing uncontrolled growth in the health care industry, last July imposed a six-month moratorium on Medicaid contracts with new hospitals and nursing homes. That action came after legislators abolished the Texas Health Facilities Commission last May.

The Health Facilities Commission was responsible for issuing "certificates of need" before hospitals could be constructed.

Thursday, board members heard complaints that it was trying to assume the commission's duties. "It was certainly not our intention that your department take over the duties of the Health Facilities Commission," said Rep. Alex Short, D-Texas, in a letter sent to board chairman J. Livingston Kosberg.

State Rep. Don Lee, D-Harlingen, joined Short in criticizing the moratorium. "It is inconceivable to me that a state agency would ignore the intent of the Legislature," he said.

Kosberg said his agency's focus is much more narrow than that of the Health Facilities Commission. "Their actions were designed to look at the whole market," he said. "Our concern is the more narrow one of taking the dollars that are given us and distributing them."

The board decided it will not renew the moratorium when it expires Dec. 30. Commissioner Marlin Johnston said careful monitoring of the distribution of Medicaid funds erased fears of a possible revenue shortfall. "This monitoring has not demonstrated the anticipated or potential surge in requests concerning new hospitals," he said. "In fact, it has allayed our concern of a drain on medical funds through the addition of new hospital beds."

The board's action came after state Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, said the moratorium not only circumvents the Legislature's intentions, but could also hurt Medicaid recipients by limiting their access to health care.

"It is obvious that you feel you can ignore the Legislature's mandate," he said in a letter to the board. "This type of arrogance is why the public loses confidence in our government's institutions since many seem to be accountable to no one. I, for one, intend to hold the board accountable next session."

Police shoot suspect in robbery-slaying

IRVING (AP) — A man wanted in the robbery-slaying of a night clerk at an Irving motel was shot and wounded by Houston police after he pointed a gun at officers staking out a suspected hideout, authorities said.

Thomas Joe Miller, 34, was shot once in the left side, was listed in fair condition Friday at Ben Taub Hospital.

Miller had been named in an arrest warrant alleging capital murder in the slaying of a Holiday Inn clerk in Irving last Saturday. Houston police, acting on a tip, surrounded a house where Miller reportedly had been staying, authorities said.

The man drove up about 9:45 p.m. Thursday, said Houston detective C.R. Williams.

"The guy came driving up and when he saw the officers, he started to back away," Williams said. "While he was backing away, he lost control of the vehicle. He got out of the car and had a weapon, and he pointed it toward the SWAT team officers and one of them shot him."

Irving police Lt. Richard Bailey said a semi-automatic pistol in Miller's possession matched the description of the weapon used in the hotel shooting.

Houston police also arrested Twanna Bey Bonner, 23, who was named in a capital murder warrant.

Three other people, including a former employee of the motel, remained in custody Friday in connection with the slaying.

Investigative charges of capital murder were filed Thursday against Dorothy Jean Miller, 37, and Kenneth Sonny Flowers Jr., 23, both of Irving, police said. They were held in lieu of $250,000 bond.

A 22-year-old man also was being held for investigation pending charges, police said.

Pete Phillips, regional manager of Brock Hotel Corp., operators of the inn, said Ms. Miller began working there on Jan. 23 and left her job earlier this month.

Caseworker shortage affecting child abuse victims, official says

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Half of the known victims of child abuse in Texas do not receive the counseling they need because of a shortage of caseworkers, a state official said Friday.

A committee examining child abuse and pornography met Friday to begin discussing what recommendations it will make to the 1987 Legislature to help solve the problem of mistreated children.

Jim Marquart, assistant commissioner of the Department of Human Services, told committee members that recent increases in caseworkers' workloads has "seriously affected" the safety of confirmed child abuse victims. He said the number of sexual abuse victims rose from 4,951 in 1982 to a projected 9,922 in 1985.

"Contrary to recent press coverage suggesting that the number and severity of abuse or neglect cases has been reduced by public awareness, that is clearly not what has happened in the state of Texas," he said. "The department continues to find significant increases in the numbers of children needing protection from serious harm."

While the number of caseloads has increased, the number of caseworkers has dropped from 2,700 in 1977 to 2,546 in 1985. Last spring, department officials asked lawmakers for enough money to hire 800 more caseworkers, but were only allowed to hire an additional 150.

Marquart said children who are not in immediate danger often do not receive the treatment they need. He said the department now investigates "fewer than one out of every 10" children who fall into that category. "We are concerned that if we don't do something about their situations, they could deteriorate into a dangerously abusive situation," he said.

In fiscal year 1985, Marquart said, 31,353 children who were confirmed victims of child abuse but were not removed from their homes did not receive any treatment from the department beyond an initial investigation. "All of these children have experienced some degree of measurable harm as a result of neglect, physical or sexual abuse," he said.

Bulldozer which cost $14,000 rented for $93,000, paper says

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Utilities Electric Co. has paid a Granbury park operator more than $93,000 in rental fees for a bulldozer that cost $14,000, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported in a copyright story.

C.N. Marsh, who operates Squaw Creek Park on utility land adjacent to the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant, purchased the bulldozer in 1981 from builder-developer Dave Bloxom Sr. of Fort Worth, Bloxom said.

Bloxom's business records show that Marsh paid him $14,000 for the bulldozer Nov. 19, 1981, the Star-Telegram reported.

Between November 1981 and June 1984, Marsh billed Texas Utilities $93,396 in lease and rental fees for use of the bulldozer, the newspaper said.

Marsh charged the utility $25,050 for the brief time between the purchase date and Dec. 1, 1981, when the park opened, utility auditors found.

Marsh said previously that the bulldozer was used to build the park and for routine maintenance, the Star-Telegram reported. Attempts by The Associated Press to reach Marsh by telephone at his home and office for comment were unsuccessful Friday.

The machine was among several pieces of equipment for which Marsh charged the utility $200,391 in rental and repair fees since the park was built, the Star-Telegram said.

The fees surfaced during a Texas Utilities audit of the park, which was ordered after the Star-Telegram reported that park money and labor were being used on private construction projects and business ventures. The Texas Public Utility Commission is investigating whether all costs associated with the park should be refunded to electricity customers.

Texas Utilities, which leases the park to Marsh, has spent more than $185 million in park construction and operating costs, and it has passed $400,000 of that to its customers.

The park is on a lake for nuclear power plant cooling.

Marsh said the bulldozer and other vehicles belonged to the Two-0-Five Corp., a Marsh-owned construction company that was the park's building contractor in 1981.

Bloxom's records confirmed that the bulldozer was purchased with a check issued by Two-0-Five Corp.

STATE IN BRIEF

Bill would exempt Indians from rules regulating bingo games

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill pending in Congress would allow Indians to operate unregulated bingo games on reservations in East and West Texas, Comptroller Bob Bullock said Friday.

"If this bill passes like it's written, we might as well get the highway department to put up a sign at the state line that says, 'Gangsters Welcome,'" Bullock said.

The bill, sponsored by U.S. Reps. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, and Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, would place the Texas Tigua and Alabama-Coushatta tribes under federal trusteeship, exempting them from state regulation.

Neither the Tiguas, near El Paso, nor the Alabama-Coushattas, near Woodville, now run bingo games.

"All that could change overnight and probably for the worst unless they are subject to the same rules as the 1,500 other charity bingo operations in Texas," said Bullock.

Soviet couple awaits word on visas

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A San Antonio couple has been awaiting word on whether President Reagan was able to win exit visas from the Soviet Union for their relatives.

Lev and Lilia Baytler said they asked Reagan to carry the name of their son, his wife and their granddaughter to his summit this week with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez intervened in the Baytlers' behalf and was successful in getting the Baytlers' family on a list of human rights matters Reagan carried to the meeting in Geneva.

Lev Baytler, 62, said his son Ilya, 35, is an electrical engineer. His daughter-in-law, Valentina, is 35. They have a 5-year-old daughter, Paulina, the Baytlers have never seen.

The Baytlers, who immigrated to the United States from Leningrad in 1978, became naturalized citizens Oct. 24.

They teach Russian at the Defense Language Institute at Lackland Air Force Base.

Jet slips off runway into mud

HOUSTON (AP) — An American Airlines jetliner preparing to take off from Houston's Hobby Airport on Friday slid off a runway and into the mud, authorities said. The 90 passengers aboard the flight were unharmed.

The pilot turned too sharply onto the runway as the Boeing 727 was preparing to depart for Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, according to Curtis Jenkins, manager of Hobby's control tower.

Georgia farmer saved from eviction

COCHRAN, Ga. (AP) — A farmer who said he would rather die than be thrown off the land his family had owned since the Civil War has been spared eviction by a woman who remembered him as a man "who never turned anyone down."

Oscar Lorick, 66, can stay on the 79-acre farm the rest of his life with his wife Virginia, 59, under an agreement announced Friday by Alvin McDougald, an attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Linda and Melvin Dixon of Miami will purchase the farm from the Cook Banking Co. of Cochran for $75,000 and lease it to the Loricks for $1 a month, McDougald said. Lorick owed $112,000 on the property and his farm equipment already had been sold at auction.

Mrs. Dixon, who lived in Cochran until she was 5, said she learned of Lorick's plight last Saturday from a newspaper story. The farmer's name sounded familiar and Mrs. Dixon's mother confirmed that Lorick had assisted her family years before.

"He was always so kind and never turned anyone down," said Mrs. Dixon, whose husband is a Miami businessman. "When we

"He (Oscar Lorick) was always so kind and never turned anyone down. When we lived here she had mentioned to me that he had helped her and had helped many other people...I just felt the need to come back home and help. I would spend much more than that to make him happy."

— Linda Dixon

lived here she had mentioned to me that he had helped her and had helped many other people."

Asked if he would now farm again, Lorick replied, "If you'll get me some...equipment, I'll sure try."

Lorick's financial problems received nationwide publicity when a group of armed supporters, some wearing camouflage uniforms and carrying military assault rifles, occupied the farm

Nov. 15 and vowed to use force if necessary to block his scheduled eviction. Lorick and his wife said they were willing to die defending the farm.

Sheriff Edward Coley visited the farm to talk with Lorick, and the bank eventually agreed to postpone his eviction.

Since the incident, the farmer has received thousands of dollars in donations from around the country and two movie offers that could earn him enough money to buy back his farm, McDougald said.

While the farmer's immediate problems have been resolved, McDougald said the NAACP still plans to sue the bank for allegedly failing to follow proper foreclosure procedures and failing to properly credit payments to Lorick's account.

"We still feel there were gross irregularities," the attorney said.

The bank's president, Lee Wiley, said he believed "everyone was satisfied." He referred questions about any legal action to the bank's attorney, Lonnie Barlow, who was not in his office Friday afternoon.

Lorick, who once was regarded as the most successful black farmer in Bleckley County, told reporters he was grateful to the Dixons for bailing him out. He blamed his financial problems on his inability to read or write, saying he was cheated.

Upon her arrival at the Lorick farm, Mrs. Dixon said she discovered the farmer was her second cousin, which made her offer even more rewarding.

"I just felt the need to come back home and help," she said. "I would spend much more than that to make him happy."

Lawmaker apologizes for AIDS-poster prank

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A state senator who used a poster on AIDS to play a prank on a fellow senator apologized publicly Friday.

"It has become clear that the nature of that practical joke inadvertently offended various people in our community," Assistant Senate Minority Leader Jaime Gutierrez said. "I extend my sincere apologies for any offense that was taken from my actions. No offense was intended."

Kirk Baxter, a board member of the National Gay Task Force and the Arizona AIDS Fund Trust, said he applauded Gutierrez's "honesty and new-found sincerity and hope that his apology will in fact serve our purpose in educating other legislators and the general public to the need for a visible show of compassion and action toward dealing with the AIDS crisis."

The original poster, distributed by the state Health Department, shows pictures of a used glass, a toilet, a doorknob and a handshake and is titled "None of these will give you AIDS."

In the prank poster, a picture of Senate Minority Leader Alfredo Gutierrez was pasted over one of the original pictures and the initial letter "N" was blanked out, making the poster read "one of these will give you AIDS."

The Gutierrezes, both Democrats, share an office and a secretary but are not related.

Baxter said he saw nothing funny in the poster, especially since lawmakers are likely to be considering bills on AIDS next session.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is an affliction in which the body's immune system becomes unable to resist disease.

Crash that killed 10 still under investigation

AUGUSTA, Me. — Investigations of the crash that killed a pilot and six others in a small plane last week are continuing, says a state investigator.

Steve Corrie of the Maine Department of Transportation said an agency is collecting information about a traffic accident involving a small plane that crashed on a highway near Bangor.

The Beechcraft plane crashed on Aug. 22 on a runway at the Bangor Municipal Airport.

Handicapped

DETROIT (AP) — A group of 10 handicapped people in the city's Thanksgiving parade was a dispute over the event last year. The state commission on the disabled said the group was not a legitimate parade group.

Man sentenced for murder of baby in Michigan

BANGOR, Me. — A man who claimed he was a life prisoner in a Michigan prison for the murder of a baby was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

"I hope Mr. Lane has mercy on me," said the man, who was not named in the report.

Chandler said the man had a maximum sentence of 10 years on defendant Lane.

Lane said the consequence to the man was that he would not be able to see his children.

It doesn't matter if you give me a ready prepared verdict in the verdict in the case of the death of Angela.

1984 The defendant thought Angela was performing a murder when he was in their Auburn prison.

A murder child's mother was reduced to her trial.

Friday, and the defendant had to hand down a day or Monday.

Palmer, like the defendant, had pleaded insanity.

Patents granted

The U.S. Patent Office granted 72,149 patents in 1984, more than in any other year since 1960.

NATION IN BRIEF

Crash that killed Samantha still under investigation

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — The investigations of the plane crash that killed Samantha Smith, her father and six others is still in its preliminary stages three months after the accident, says a ranking federal investigator.

Steve Corrie of the National Transportation Safety Board said the agency is collecting statements and awaiting a transcript of air-to-ground communications between Bar Harbor Airlines flight 808 and traffic controllers.

The Beechcraft 99 turboprop went down on Aug. 25, a mile short of a runway at the Auburn airport. The commuter flight had originated in Boston.

Samantha, the Manchester schoolgirl who gained fame as a peace ambassador when she wrote to Soviet leader Yuri Andropov, was returning with her father, Arthur, from England, where she was filming a television series.

NRC office to be probed

ATLANTA (AP) — A Nuclear Regulatory Commission official said the agency's Atlanta regional office will be investigated following complaints of lack of enforcement at some Southeastern nuclear power plants.

"I've had some concern about the aggressiveness of some people in the region," NRC Commissioner James K. Asselstine said Thursday.

Asselstine was in Atlanta to review conditions within the Tennessee Valley Authority's crippled nuclear program.

Court invalidates 'ESP's'

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania's Supreme Court has invalidated local police use of a popular electronic device for nabbing speeding drivers, leaving hundreds of police departments to seek other enforcement tools.

The court, in a 4-2 decision Thursday, said the state Department of Transportation was wrong to classify the "Excessive Speed Preventer" as a kind of device that can be used by local police departments. According to the ruling, only state police can use the ESP machines.

The ruling reversed the speeding conviction of a man cited near Harrisburg in 1981.

More than 500 departments own ESP devices, said transportation department spokeswoman La-Verna

Fountain. The devices calculate speed by measuring the time it takes a vehicle to travel between sensors on a road. Under state law, local police may use only mechanical or electronic devices to catch speeders. State police may also use electronic devices.

Handicapped scouts to march in parade

DETROIT (AP) — A decision to let 10 handicapped Boy Scouts march in the city's Thanksgiving parade ends a dispute over the exclusion of 200 handicapped Scouts who took part in the event last year, the head of a state commission said Friday.

"Things are resolved," Leo Carter, head of the Commission on Handicapped Concerns said in announcing the Scouts would march in Saturday's parade. "We've gone overboard on this, as a matter of fact."

The Michigan Thanksgiving Parade Foundation received heavy criticism, including a telegram from 32 state senators, for rejecting an application from the 200 Scouts who marched last year.

The Scouts were among 40 groups rejected from the event because of a policy to bring new participants into the parade, said foundation consultant Doris DeDecker.

Parade officials relented Thursday night, and decided to include 10 members of a Detroit troop of handicapped Scouts.

The decision to include the Scouts came after foundation President Carlene Bonner talked to Carter, DeDecker said.

"They were selected because of the misunderstanding," DeDecker said. "They (the foundation) said it should never happen again."

The commission will select a different handicapped group each year to participate in the parade, she said.

An official with the suburban Boy Scout district representing the excluded Scouts said he wished his youngsters could have taken part again this year.

"We were very happy when they were included in the 1984 parade," said Steve Barnes, assistant executive director of the Pontiac-based Clinton Valley Council.

Man sentenced for murdering baby in oven

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — A man who claimed he was performing an exorcism was sentenced Friday to life imprisonment for murdering his girl friend's 4-year-old daughter by burning her in an electric oven.

"I hope, Mr. Lane, that God will have mercy on you, but I simply cannot," Superior Court Justice Bruce Chandler said after imposing the maximum sentence under Maine law on defendant John Lane.

Lane said the sentence was of no consequence to him.

"It doesn't matter what sentence you give me," said Lane. "I've already prepared for my own death. It won't take much. I'll be going."

Chandler, who had handed down the verdict in Lane's non-jury trial, said the premeditation and "extreme cruelty" of the killing outweighed any circumstances that might favor a shorter prison term.

Lane had entered an insanity plea to the charge stemming from the death of Angela Palmer on Oct. 27, 1984. The defense claimed that Lane thought Angela was Lucifer and that he was performing an act of exorcism when he put her in the oven at their Auburn apartment.

A murder charge against the child's mother, Cynthia Palmer, 30, was reduced to manslaughter during her trial. Palmer's defense rested Friday, and Chandler was expected to hand down his verdict later Friday or Monday.

Palmer, like her former boyfriend, had pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Columbia official worried because volcano making 'strange noises'

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Rumblings have been heard in two more volcanoes in Colombia, and a southern governor asked foreign experts Friday to find out if there is a danger of an eruption like the one on Nov. 13 that killed 25,000 people.

Ney Guzman, geology professor at Valley University in Cali, said the devastating eruption of Nevado del Ruiz may have triggered volcanic activity in the 340-mile stretch of the Andes Mountains.

Gov. Mercedes Apraiz of Narino province in southern Colombia said the 15,721-foot high Azufral volcano, 37 miles southwest of Pasto, was "making very strange noises" on Thursday.

Guzman said there also were reports of steam and rumbling on Thursday from the 14,111-foot Galeras volcano, 12 miles west of Pasto.

In a Caracol Radio interview from Pasto, the provincial capital 375 miles southwest of Bogota, the governor said she asked the national government to send foreign volcano experts and seismologists to determine if Azufral poses a danger.

The governor said, "There is a large population near this volcano and that is why it is necessary to adopt all preventive measures."

Pasto has a population of about 200,000. The town of Cumbal, about 10 miles south of Azufral, contains about 10,000 inhabitants.

A team of about 20 foreign and Colombian experts, including seven from the United States, is studying Nevado del Ruiz from a base at Manizales, 178 miles northwest of Bogota and 40 miles from the volcano.

The Nevado del Ruiz eruption melted huge amounts of ice and snow on the volcano's peak, sending a 150-foot-high wall of mud racing through a narrow canyon into the valley, where it spread out into a mile-wide 15-foot deep sea of muck that covered the town of Armero, with a population of 28,000.

Health Minister Rafael de Zubiria Gomez said at least 500 bodies are still floating in drying mud at Armero and that the government will have to act to avoid the spread of disease.

"So far, in the area, the chance of epidemics is under control," he said.

Army squints at issuing soldiers contact lenses

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — About 150 2nd Armored Division soldiers may show up for duty wearing eyeglasses again in January unless they decide to buy contact lenses on the civilian market.

Although contact lenses are not normally available to soldiers from the Army, the 2nd AD soldiers were issued contact lenses in May as part of an Army test. Unfortunately, they will have to return them in December so that the lenses can be examined and tested to collect additional data for the test, Capt. Patrick Leas, 4th Main Support Battalion, says.

"Some of the guys love them. They don't want to give them back," Leas said. But the Army has to take the lenses back in order to test them to see if they absorbed any contaminants from the soldiers' environments, he said.

The lenses were fitted voluntarily to tankers, infantrymen and air defense artillery gunners to see if the soldiers' performance would improve, Leas said.

Former 2nd Armored commander Maj. Gen. John Woodmansee had asked for the test of contact lenses after some of his commanders in the division's tank companies said contact lenses that the soldiers had bought for themselves improved the soldiers' performance in gunnery.

The formal Army test, which compares the performance of eyeglass wearers and contact lens wearers at Fort Hood, is an attempt to gather sufficient data for the Army to verify or disprove those contentions and make decisions on the wisdom of providing certain soldiers with contact lenses.

Contact lenses have improved over the years. Modern extended-wear lenses have few of the drawbacks of older hard lenses and the day is rapidly approaching when disposable extended wear lenses will be available, Leas said.

"That's going to work out great for these guys," he added. "If the lenses get dirty or contaminated, they will just throw them out and put in another pair. We would like to be able to issue six to eight pairs to each soldier."

Currently, soldiers involved in the test are asked to take the lenses out and clean them about once a week. Some soldiers on extended field maneuvers haven't been able to do that, though, and apparently have experienced few problems from wearing the lenses longer, Leas said.

When disposable lenses become available, they are expected to cost about $10 to $20 a set, he said. Eyeglasses can pose problems for soldiers in the field. They interfere with sighting weapons, can be uncomfortable under tankers' helmets and fog with temperature changes.

Peripheral vision — very important to soldiers in combat — is not as good with eyeglasses.

That reduces combat efficiency, he said. In the test at Fort Hood, more than 200 soldiers were fitted with soft extended-wear contact lenses, with three different types of lenses were used in the test. Some of the soldiers later were dropped from the test for various reasons, such as inability to adapt to the lenses.

Los Angeles becoming 80s' Ellis Island

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — In yet another sign that Los Angeles is the "Ellis Island of the '80s," more than 38,000 immigrants became U.S. citizens this week and last during a marathon series of twice-a-day naturalization ceremonies unequalled in American history.

By the time the 12th ceremony finished Friday, a total of 38,648 people — the equivalent of the population of San Luis Obispo, Calif. — had been naturalized. The total is nearly one-sixth of all naturalizations in the United States this year.

The first of the emotion-filled half-hour ceremonies took place at the Los Angeles Convention Center when 3,200 people from 106 countries took the pledge of allegiance for the first time under the auspices of U.S. District Judge Albert L. Stephens Jr.

Most of the new citizens are from the Philippines, Vietnam, Mexico, Korea and China, according to Ernest E. Gustafson, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. They are residents of several Southern California counties.

One of the new citizens, Bergouhi Zomjian of Lebanon, was sworn in on an emergency basis when she went into labor shortly before the second ceremony began Wednesday afternoon.

Los Angeles became the naturalization capital of the United States for the first time in 1983, when it surpassed New York City by naturalizing nearly one-fifth of new U.S. citizens. This year, according to Gustafson, the Los Angeles area will have naturalized a total of 75,000 — or one-third of all new U.S. citizens in the United States.

The ceremonies are also a milestone for the INS Los Angeles office, which only two years ago held the dubious honor of maintaining the biggest backlog of naturalization cases in the country.

In September, 1983, a legal resident who applied for citizenship had to wait nearly two and a half years to even be interviewed by an immigration officer. Los Angeles had such a bad reputation for its naturalization backlog, that the current drive to cut the backlog has been dubbed "Operation Albatross" by INS officers. The operation was started in February, 1984.

Today the wait is about two months. "But now our goal," Gustafson said, "is to start up again in January and hope that by May, you can come in for an interview appointment in the morning and be naturalized that same afternoon."

Ironically, the immigration service is making more work for itself with every naturalization because every new citizen has a right to apply to immigrate to the United States his family members living abroad. Gustafson estimated that about half of all new citizens will file such applications and that each of those want to bring in two relatives.

Columbia official worried because volcano making 'strange noises'

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Rumblings have been heard in two more volcanos in Colombia, and a southern governor asked foreign experts Friday to find out if there is a danger of an eruption like the one on Nov. 13 that killed 25,000 people.

Ney Guzman, geology professor at Valley University in Cali, said the devastating eruption of Nevado del Ruiz may have triggered volcanic activity in the 340-mile stretch of the Andes Mountains.

Gov. Mercedes Apraez of Narino province in southern Colombia said the 15,721-foot high Azufra volcano, 37 miles southwest of Pasto, was "making very strange noises" on Thursday.

Guzman said there also were reports of steam and rumbling on Thursday from the 14,111-foot Galeras volcano, 12 miles west of Pasto.

In a Caracol Radio interview from Pasto, the provincial capital 375 miles southwest of Bogota, the governor said she asked the national government to send foreign volcano experts and seismologists to determine if Azufra poses a danger.

The governor said, "There is a large population near this volcano and that is why it is necessary to adopt all preventive measures."

Pasto has a population of about 200,000. The town of Cumbal, about 10 miles south of Azufra, contains about 10,000 inhabitants.

A team of about 20 foreign and Colombian experts, including seven from the United States, is studying Nevado del Ruiz from a base at Manizales, 178 miles northwest of Bogota and 40 miles from the volcano.

The Nevado del Ruiz eruption melted huge amounts of ice and snow on the volcano's peak, sending a 150-foot-high wall of mud racing through a narrow canyon into the valley, where it spread out into a mile-wide 15-foot deep sea of muck that covered the town of Armero, with a population of 28,000.

Health Minister Rafael de Zubiria Gomez said at least 500 bodies are still floating in drying mud at Armero and that the government will have to act to avoid the spread of disease.

"So far, in the area, the chance of epidemics is under control," he said.

Army squints at issuing soldiers contact lenses

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — About 150 2nd Armored Division soldiers may show up for duty wearing eyeglasses again in January unless they decide to buy contact lenses on the civilian market.

Although contact lenses are not normally available to soldiers from the Army, the 2nd AD soldiers were issued contact lenses in May as part of an Army test. Unfortunately, they will have to return them in December so that the lenses can be examined and tested to collect additional data for the test, Capt. Patrick Leas, 4th Main Support Battalion, says.

"Some of the guys love them. They don't want to give them back," Leas said. But the Army has to take the lenses back in order to test them to see if they absorbed any contaminants from the soldiers' environments, he said.

The lenses were fitted voluntarily to tankers, infantrymen and air defense artillery gunners to see if the soldiers' performance would improve, Leas said.

Former 2nd Armored commander Maj. Gen. John Woodmansee had asked for the test of contact lenses after some of his commanders in the division's tank companies said contact lenses that the soldiers had bought for themselves improved the soldiers' performance in gunnery.

The formal Army test, which compares the performance of eyeglass wearers and contact lens wearers at Fort Hood, is an attempt to gather sufficient data for the Army to verify or disprove those contentions and make decisions on the wisdom of providing certain soldiers with contact lenses.

Contact lenses have improved over the years. Modern extended-wear lenses have few of the drawbacks of older hard lenses and the day is rapidly approaching when disposable extended wear lenses will be available, Leas said.

"That's going to work out great for these guys," he added. "If the lenses get dirty or contaminated, they will just throw them out and put in another pair. We would like to be able to issue six to eight pairs to each soldier."

Currently, soldiers involved in the test are asked to take the lenses out and clean them about once a week. Some soldiers on extended field maneuvers haven't been able to do that, though, and apparently have experienced few problems from wearing the lenses longer, Leas said.

When disposable lenses become available, they are expected to cost about $10 to $20 a set, he said. Eyeglasses can pose problems for soldiers in the field. They interfere with sighting weapons, can be uncomfortable under tankers' helmets and fog with temperature changes.

Peripheral vision — very important to soldiers in combat — is not as good with eyeglasses.

That reduces combat efficiency, he said. In the test at Fort Hood, more than 200 soldiers were fitted with soft extended-wear contact lenses, with three different types of lenses were used in the test. Some of the soldiers later were dropped from the test for various reasons, such as inability to adapt to the lenses.

Los Angeles becoming 80s' Ellis Island

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — In yet another sign that Los Angeles is the "Ellis Island of the '80s," more than 38,000 immigrants became U.S. citizens this week and last during a marathon series of twice-a-day naturalization ceremonies unequalled in American history.

By the time the 12th ceremony finished Friday, a total of 38,648 people — the equivalent of the population of San Luis Obispo, Calif. — had been naturalized. The total is nearly one-sixth of all naturalizations in the United States this year.

The first of the emotion-filled half-hour ceremonies took place at the Los Angeles Convention Center when 3,200 people from 106 countries took the pledge of allegiance for the first time under the auspices of U.S. District Judge Albert L. Stephens Jr.

Most of the new citizens are from the Philippines, Vietnam, Mexico, Korea and China, according to Ernest E. Gustafson, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. They are residents of several Southern California counties.

One of the new citizens, Bergouhi Zomjan of Lebanon, was sworn in on an emergency basis when she went into labor shortly before the second ceremony began Wednesday afternoon.

Los Angeles became the naturalization capital of the United States for the first time in 1983, when it surpassed New York City by naturalizing nearly one-fifth of new U.S. citizens. This year, according to Gustafson, the Los Angeles area will have naturalized a total of 75,000 — or one-third of all new U.S. citizens in the United States.

The ceremonies are also a milestone for the INS Los Angeles office, which only two years ago held the dubious honor of maintaining the biggest backlog of naturalization cases in the country.

In September, 1983, a legal resident who applied for citizenship had to wait nearly two and a half years to even be interviewed by an immigration officer. Los Angeles had such a bad reputation for its naturalization backlog, that the current drive to cut the backlog has been dubbed "Operation Albatross" by INS officers. The operation was started in February, 1984.

Today the wait is about two months. "But now our goal," Gustafson said, "is to start up again in January and hope that by May, you can come in for an interview appointment in the morning and be naturalized that same afternoon."

Ironically, the immigration service is making more work for itself with every naturalization because every new citizen has a right to apply to immigrate to the United States his family members living abroad. Gustafson estimated that about half of all new citizens will file such applications and that each of those want to bring in two relatives.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ghanaians sentenced for being spies for CIA

ACCRA, Ghana (AP) — Courts convicted a police official and a telephone worker Friday of spying for the CIA and sentenced them to long prison terms.

Two other Ghanaians were convicted and sentenced to prison Wednesday.

The cases grew out of the arrests in Washington in July of a Ghanaian man and a woman who formerly was a CIA clerk at the U.S. Embassy in Accra. U.S. authorities accused them of passing on the names of the CIA agents and Ghanaians who cooperated with the agency.

Stephen Balfour Oforu-Addo was sentenced to life in prison. The court said Oforu-Addo, a former chief superintendent of police, gave government secrets to the CIA and arranged taps on the telephones of diplomatic missions and high-level government officials.

Robert Yaw Appiah, a technician with the Post and Telecommunications Corp., was sentenced to 22 years. He gave a CIA agent copies of keys to manhole covers, the court said.

Both men initially pleaded innocent but changed their pleas to guilty.

Bomb explodes on train

NEW DELHI (AP) — A bomb exploded on an express train entering a station in India's troubled Punjab state late Friday night, killing three people and wounding at least 20, the Press Trust of India reported.

The blast tore through the last coach of the train as it pulled into Shambu, a small town near the state capital, Chandigarh, about 100 miles north of New Delhi, the news agencies said.

The train was bound from Nangal Dam in Sikh-dominated Punjab's Chandigarh district to Ambala city in neighboring Haryana state, where Hindus are in the majority. Shambu is the last station before the Haryana border.

No other details were available immediately.

Irishman to stand trial

ENNIS, Ireland (AP) — Dominic McGlinchey, once the most-wanted man in Britain and Ireland, was ordered Friday to stand trial on charges arising from a shootout with police when he was captured last year.

McGlinchey, 31, is from Londonderry, Northern Ireland, and reputed to be chief of staff of the Irish National Liberation Army, a Marxist offshoot of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Fighting breaks out over which sect's flags would fly over Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Moslem militiamen fought a fierce battle for control of west Beirut on Friday, Lebanon's independence day. The fighting began over whose flag would fly over government buildings.

They pounded each other's positions with tank cannons, 106mm recoilless rifles and anti-aircraft machine guns. A thick haze of smoke from burning gasoline stations and apartment buildings hung over streets that stank of cordite.

Gunmen fought from house to house. Police and hospitals said at least 30 people had been killed and 200 wounded since the fighting broke out Wednesday.

The warfare swirled around the Commodore Hotel and into the lobby at one point, trapping Church of England envoy Terry Waite and stalling his mission to free Americans held by Lebanese kidnappers.

The day's fourth cease-fire appeared to take hold at dusk. Rescue teams moved into the streets, expecting to find more dead and wounded.

Militia chieftains toured the battle areas with bullhorns, ordering their men to stop fighting.

Hostilities began when Druse militiamen attacked a Shiite unit of the Lebanese army that was placing national Lebanese flags on public buildings. The Shiite militia Amal entered the battle immediately.

The Druse, members of a mystic Islamic sect, tried to raise the flag of their own paramilitary organization, the Progressive Socialist Party. Hooded Sunni Moslem gunmen of the Murabitoun militia joined the Druse.

For the Murabitoun, it was an opportunity to avenge the crushing defeat they suffered at the hands of the Shiites, then aided by the Druse, in three days of street fighting in April.

Druse and Shiites have been allies against Lebanon's Christians, but often turn on each other. The current fighting illustrates fears among Druse and Sunni Moslems that a Syrian-sponsored peace plan to end the 10-year-old civil war will deliver west Beirut, a traditional Sunni stronghold, to the Shiites.

Akram Shehayeb, top military aide to Druse militia chief Walid Jumblatt, told reporters "a third party" was shooting at both sides in an attempt to intensify the fight. He did not elaborate.

Police said a day-long Druse push brought most of west Beirut's Corniche Mazraa commercial thoroughfare, the seafont Raouche boulevard and the Hamra business district under Jumblatt's control.

Pockets of Amal gunmen held out in several buildings despite barrages of rocket-propelled grenades and 50-caliber anti-aircraft machine gunfire. The guns fell silent at dusk.

Radio stations, gasoline stations and apartment houses were ablaze. Scores of bullet-riddled cars littered the streets.

A shell struck the Soviet cultural center in the once-plush Verdun district, causing damage but no casualties, police said.

While the Moslems fought each other, Christians paraded in east Beirut, their part of town, to mark the 42nd anniversary of Lebanon's independence from France in 1943.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Sunni, and Grand Mufti Sheikh Hassan Khaled, spiritual head of the Sunni sect, appealed to Syrian President Hafez Assad to intervene and stop the fighting.

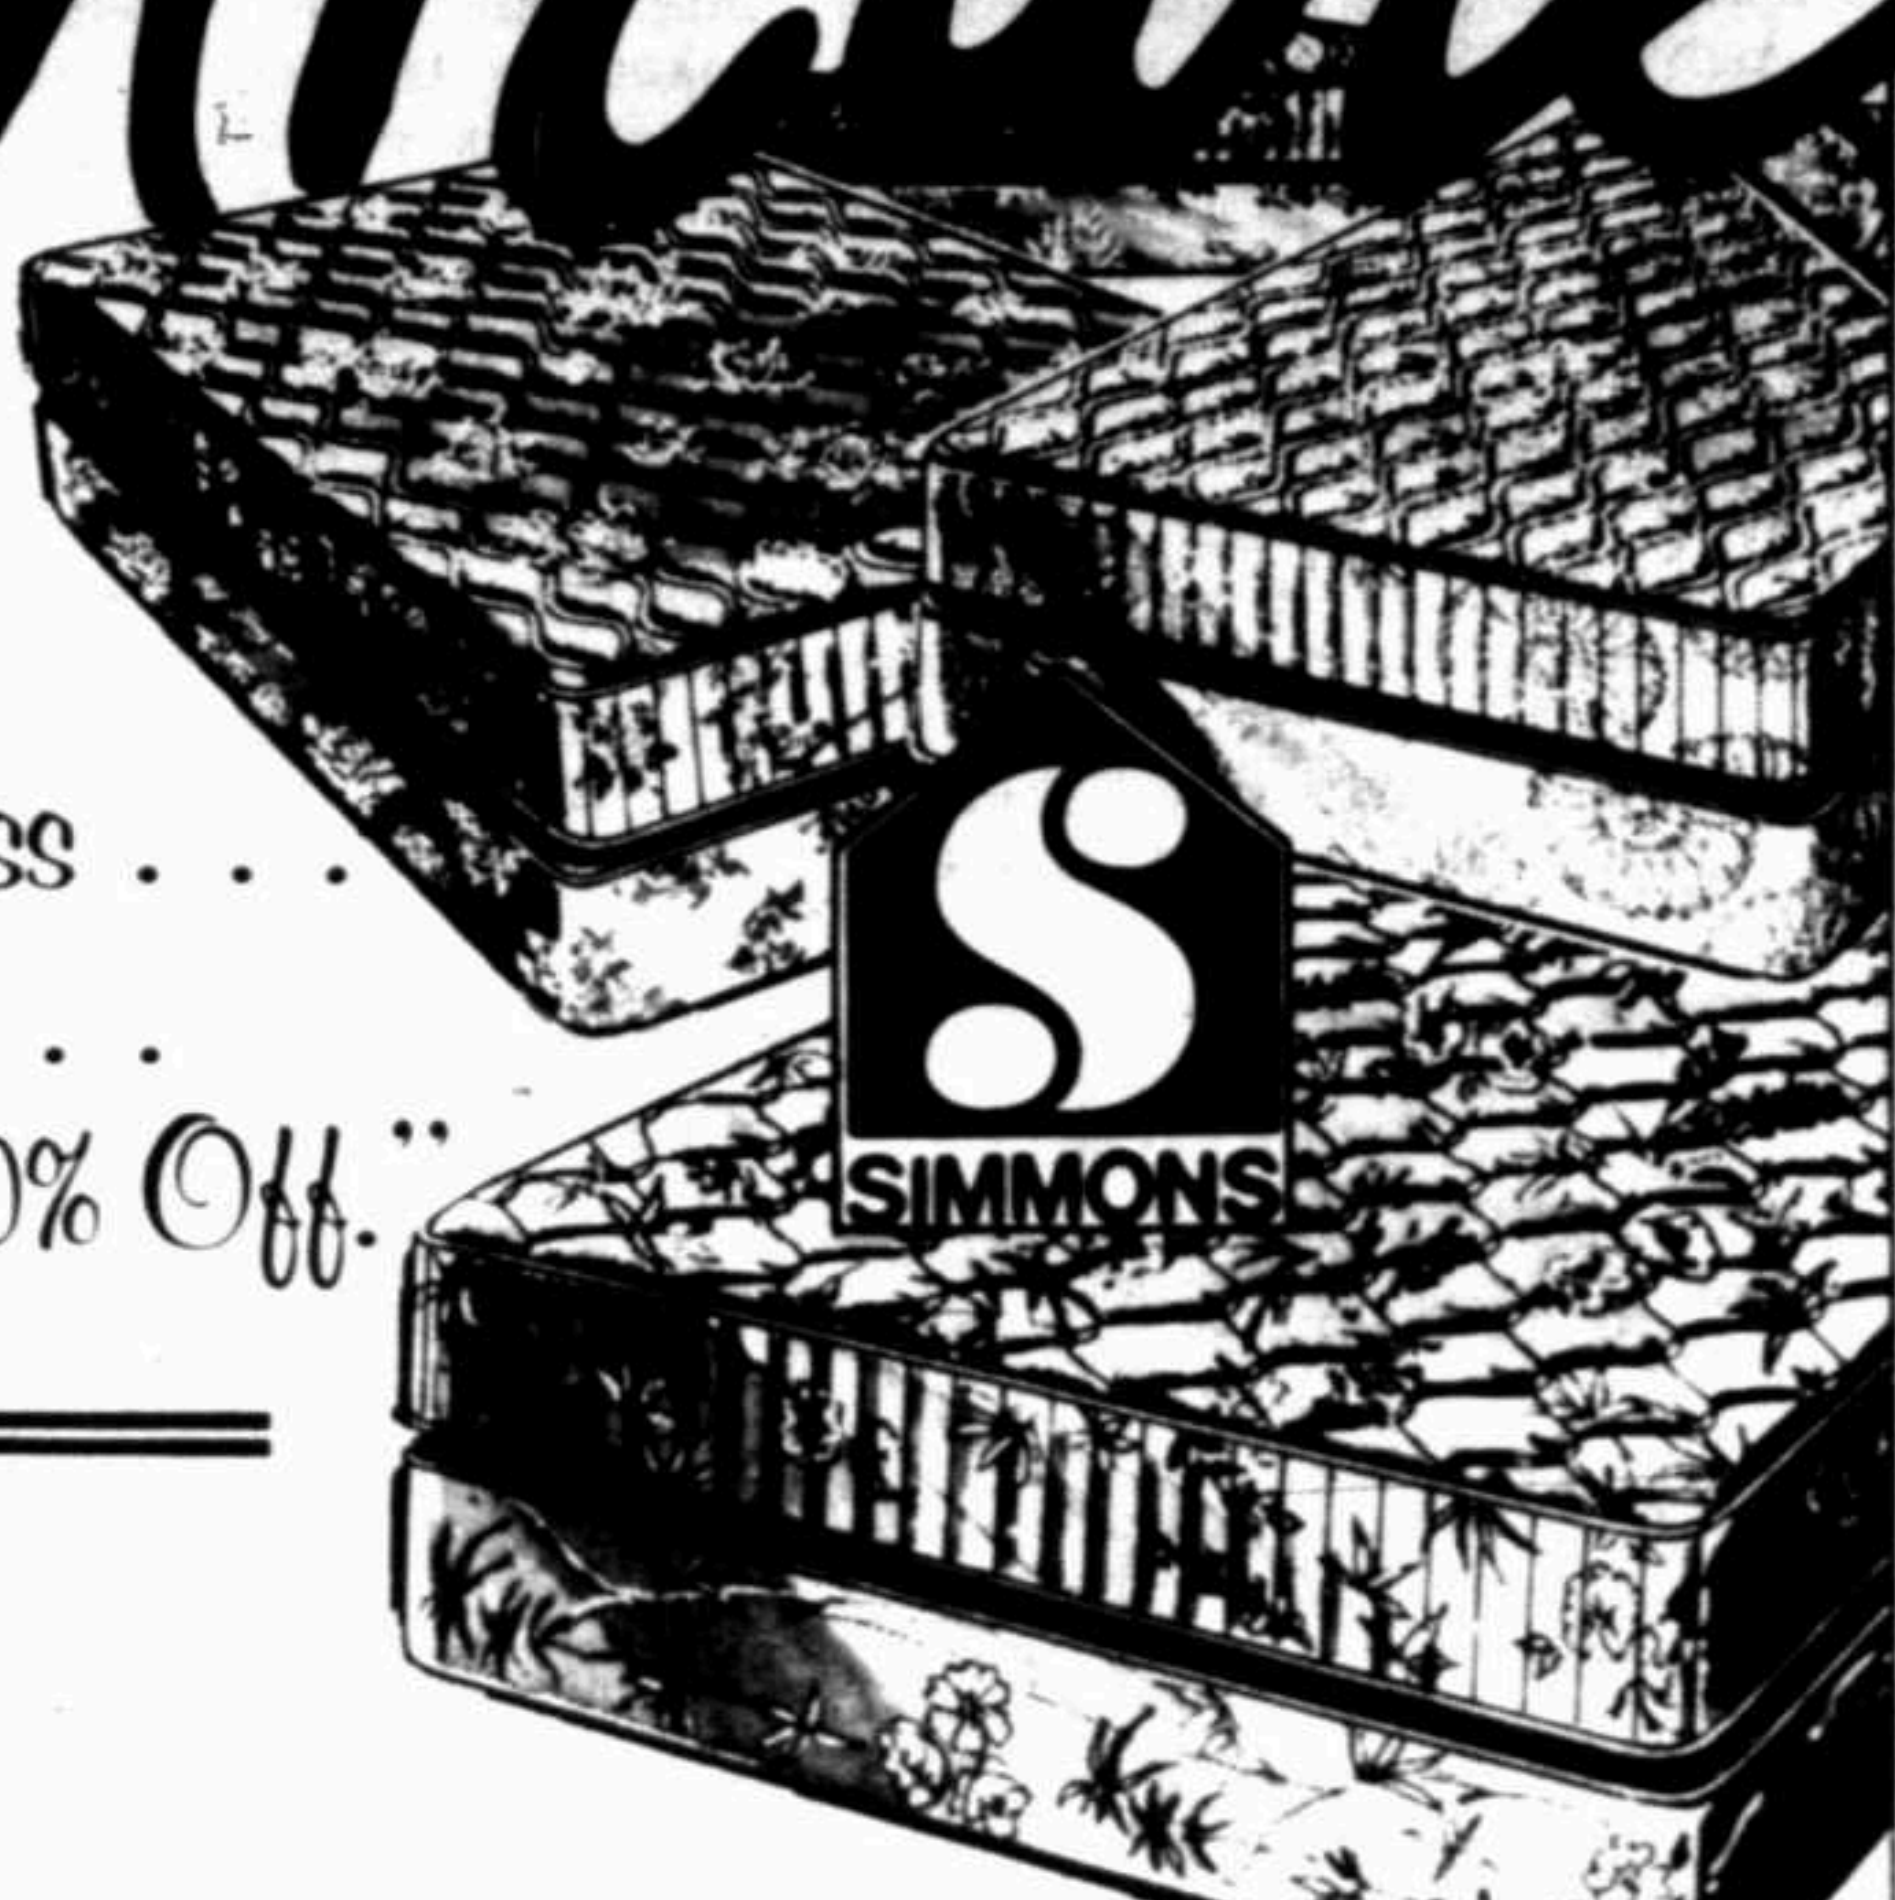

Syria has 25,000 soldiers stationed in Lebanon and is the nation's main power broker.

Southern voter-fraud probe raises specters of past for blacks

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — It is a story with unhappy precedents in Deep South politics: Local political leaders are accused of voting fraud after a U.S. Justice Department investigation; a politician is sentenced to prison.

This time, however, the politician is black, and black leaders nationwide accuse the Justice Department of ignoring its 20-year-old commitment to the civil rights of black Americans.

Spiver Gordon, 46, a Eutaw city councilman and national board member of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was sentenced last week to six months in prison and a $1,000 fine. He is free while appealing the conviction.

He was convicted last month by an all-white Tuscaloosa jury on two counts of mail fraud and two of providing false information to an election official in the filing of absentee ballots for rural blacks in Greene County's Democratic primaries last year.

Five others were acquitted of related charges, and two received misdemeanor sentences under plea bargains after the federal investigation of voting practices in five predominantly black, west-central Alabama counties.

"The Justice Department once was an advocate, but now it's an adversary to justice," said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the SCLC, joined in his criticism by the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Maryland state Sen. Clarence Mitchell, a Democrat who heads the National Black Caucus of State Legislators.

But prosecutors of the cases said the Justice Department under President Reagan is no different than it was 20 years ago.

"Nothing has changed," said U.S. Attorney Frank Donaldson of Birmingham, who prosecuted the bulk of the voter fraud cases against the seven blacks and one white who went to trial this year.

"What does one person, one vote mean? It doesn't mean anything if some folks are disenfranchising others," Donaldson said.

U.S. Attorney Jeff Sessions of Mobile, who this summer unsuccessfully prosecuted civil rights activist Albert Turner, his wife, Evelyn, and Spencer Hogue Jr., all of Marion, also said such allegations were "absolutely false."

"A U.S. attorney faced with the situation had no choice but to conduct an investigation. I looked at this as corruption. It wasn't black and white."

But Lowery and other black leaders accuse the Reagan administration of using the investigation as a "witch hunt" to intimidate black voters. They say those who cast absentee ballots — many of them elderly blacks — would stop voting out of fear of an investigation.

They also charge that the Justice Department focused its investigation solely on black political groups led by Gordon and Turner, ignoring allegedly similar ballot practices by opponents aligned with the white power structure.

Greene County Tax Assessor John Kennard, a black political foe of Gordon's, contends the Justice Department's action is a sign of progress in a state where 20 years ago blacks could not register to vote.

"Black people conspired to steal an election, they got caught doing it and began blaming Ronald Reagan and (Attorney General) Edwin Meese," Kennard said.

"When they got caught they started the old thing of hollering racism and intimidation."

The vote fraud probe in Alabama is not over. U.S. Attorney John Bell of Montgomery said his office is investigating similar charges in Lowndes County, which could lead to new indictments in a mostly black county.

Gordon was encouraged to appeal his conviction by presiding U.S. District Judge E.B. Haltom Jr., who, before passing sentence last Thursday, said the case raised "very significant issues that deserve attention by the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals, grave issues of law."

Among those issues was the government's use of its six peremptory challenges to exclude six blacks from the pool of 47 jurors.

"Our allegation was that they were discriminatorily exercising their strikes to ensure that no blacks would be seated," said defense lawyer Lewis Pitts, a specialist in civil rights cases. "The judge overruled our motions." Haltom said he was concerned by accusations of blacks that he was in league with the Justice Department to intimidate black voters.

"The progress of my black brothers is largely due to the courage of the U.S. courts," Haltom said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

TEMPERATURES:

PRECIPITATION:

FRONTS:

Conditions forecast for 8 p.m. Saturday

Weekend will turn colder

From Staff and Wire Reports

After Friday's relatively warm temperatures, the weekend will become progressively colder, with the high dropping from Friday's 75 to near 60 today and near 50 on Sunday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Skies will be fair this morning, with winds from the south at 10-15 mph, but by the afternoon, mostly cloudy conditions will prevail, with winds from the north at 10-20 mph. Tonight will be clear and cold, with a low near 30, and Sunday will be mostly cloudy in the morning and partly cloudy in the afternoon. Friday's high of 75 was 6 degrees below the record for the date of 81, set in 1966, while the overnight low of 32 was 15 degrees above the 1938 record of 17.

STATE

A weak cold front lingered across the Panhandle through North Central Texas, bringing low clouds and cool temperatures to northern regions of the state Friday.

The front extended from east of Dalhart and Amarillo to near Abilene and the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Low clouds also covered South Central Texas as the result of wet air from the Gulf of Mexico.

Light and variable winds were reported across most of the state, while northeasterly breezes around 10 mph were noted behind the front. No significant precipitation was detected across Texas for most of Friday.

The forecast called for cloudy to partly cloudy skies over most of Texas. Overnight temperatures were expected to dip into the 20s in the Panhandle, while readings from the upper 40s to the lower 60s were forecast for the rest of the state.

NATION

Tropical Storm Kate blew into Georgia and the Carolinas with heavy rain and winds up to 60 mph Friday, while snow and cold closed schools and roads in the Pacific Northwest.

Kate washed out bridges and left tens of thousands without power in the Carolinas and Georgia. Schools were closed in many communities.

Lowland flooding was reported along several rivers in South Carolina and flooding of roadways was reported in North Carolina's Southern Brunswick County.

Up to 4 inches of snow fell in Oregon, causing dozens of minor traffic accidents and closing schools. Blizzard-like conditions prevailed early Friday in the Columbia Gorge, where westbound lanes of Interstate 84 were closed for about three hours because of accidents.

Afternoon playoff bash set for Memorial

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee and El Paso Andress are throwing an afternoon Class 5A Area playoff bash at 2 p.m. today in Memorial Stadium with the winner earning the right to party again while the loser goes to the list of the uninvited.

The party invitation says that these two teams are equally matched, both owning 9-2 records, but the Rebel faithful are hoping that history is on their side.

You have to go back to 1966 to find a game in which the Rebels have lost to an El Paso team. El Paso Austin won a 9-7 decision over Lee in 1966 and the only other Border City team to beat a Rebel squad was in 1962 when El Paso High pulled the trick, 13-6.

Andress and Lee are meeting for only the second time. Lee defeated the Eagles in last year's Area playoffs by a 41-6 margin. It's a history that Andress coach Allan Sepkowitz knows all too well.

"I know (Lee head coach) Jack Tayrien is crying about how his team isn't as strong as it has been in the past, but Lee is a good football team," says Sepkowitz. "They may not be good for them in the district they play, but they are good by our standards. I think most people will agree that we don't play the same caliber of football that Lee does in its district. Still, we're here to give it our best shot and we'll show up."

Tayrien also knows that you can't live on football history. There are no points coming from previous performances.

"Today is today and we have to take care of the business at hand," said Tayrien. "The last time I checked we sit at home if we lose this game, so Andress is as important to us this week as any game we play all season. You can't live on what you've done in the past."

And if Lee needs any incentive for an afternoon outing, they need only look at "The Doctor." That's William Doctor, a junior scabbard who has rushed for 1,515 yards in 11 games this year. That in itself is enough to make the Rebels cautious. If "The Doctor" gets loose too often today, Lee could need one.

"Andress has some great skill people on their offensive team, and 'The Doctor" is a great back," notes Tayrien. "And their defensive line weighs more than the North side of town."

Lee has nothing to match Doctor's offensive statistics with halfback Rodney Sims leading the Rebel rushing armada with 603 yards. However, the Rebels have used as many as nine backs in a game with five owning over 350 yards rushing and three more over 100.

The Eagles can pose some defensive problems for the Rebels because they run out of a multiple offensive set that includes both the wishbone and I-formation. It's a combination that has led the Eagles to seven straight victories in which Andress hasn't scored under 30 points.

Sepkowitz says of his high scoring offense, "We've been, for the most part, a big play team. We're not the type of team that can drive the ball downfield. If we don't get our usual big plays, we could be in trouble."

With that in mind, Tayrien would like to see his Rebels play another error-free game on offense like it did in a 13-7 Bi-district win over Amarillo High.

"The best way to stop a team like Andress is to keep the ball away from them. I hope we can do that and score some points in the process," says Tayrien.

Sepkowitz is impressed with Lee's offensive line, saying, "Jake Young may be the best offensive guard I've ever seen. We've seen film on him and he is as good or better than everyone has said he is. And when you add in that other guard (Ricky Lee) and center (Wade Wiesepape) you have the best three I've ever seen together."

"Still, I think Lee's defense is the strength of the team. They don't stay on their blocks long and we're going to have our hands full with them. Tony Brown, Ronald Penile, Dejuan Norris, Jay Roach and Brad Cooper all look like players to me."

But Tayrien has been impressed with some of the Eagles, too.

"Emilio Pittman is a good quarterback and he has some gifted receivers in Darryl Ervin and Jimmy Jones," said Tayrien. "The defensive line averages about 238 pounds a man and tackle Jesse Branon weighs 288. That's tough enough to face, but their linebackers are probably the strongest part of the team. One of their linebackers is Greg Prohaska, who played well against us last year as a down lineman."

Sepkowitz' Eagles won by a 50-12 margin against El Paso Riverside in Bi-district, but he doesn't use that game as a proof of strength.

"We only played the starters in the first half, but if I'd known that the people here were going to make such a big deal out of Riverside outscoring us in the second half, I might have left them in the entire game," Sepkowitz laughed.

Tickets still remain for today's shootout at $5 each. Tickets will be sold at Memorial Stadium prior to the game.

The winner advances against the winner of the Irving MacArthur-Wichita Falls Area contest next week in the Region round of the playoffs. That game has a 2:30 p.m. start in Wichita Falls today.

Reagan County quarterback Scott Lipsey (11) finds running room behind the block of teammate George Delarosa (30) in Friday's Area victory over Shallowater in Big Spring. The Owls pulled off a 27-24 upset over the Mustangs.

Owls find way to break concrete

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — After scoring a quick touchdown against Shallowater here Friday in Memorial Stadium, the Reagan County Owls suddenly found 2A Area playoff football to be a rough game.

The Shallowater Mustangs were moving the ball and, when they had to, were playing defense like a steel reinforced concrete wall, stopping the Owls inside the five-yard line twice in the second and third quarters.

However, even concrete and steel can be torn down if it's hit often and hit hard. That's what the Owls did, rallying from a 24-12 halftime deficit for a 27-24 Area victory and a berth in the 2A Region game next week against Abilene.

The Owls didn't do anything fancy against the Mustangs, opting to stay on the ground 65-out-of-76 offensive plays. They spread the action around too, as fullback Tim Tatum, wingback James West and quarterback Scott Lipsey each busted the magical century mark.

Tatum barely led his teammates in rushing with a 115-yard, two touch down performance. West added another 111 and Lipsey 102 with a TD.

"We've been trying to do that all year and this is the first time for us," said Reagan County coach Ronnie Reeger of the triple 100s. "I'm just tickled to death. I'm extremely proud of those three and the rest of the offensive players that blocked for them."

"It was a great accomplishment for us," said offensive tackle Rodney Grantz. "The coaches deserve all the credit. They really fired us up."

"All I've got to say is, in the first half we didn't play up to par," said center Mitchell Martin. "We had a real good talk at halftime and it pulled us together as a team."

Lipsey had kind words about his offensive mules up front, saying, "It was these guys that did it. The line did an extremely good job, they really did. The key was the line James and Tim hit it well, but wouldn't have gone anywhere without the line."

EVEN WITH three backs breaking for 100 yards, the Owls had to rely on a last minute touchdown to save the victory.

Trailing 24-17, the Owls forced the Mustangs to punt and took the ball back at their own 38 with 4:25 left to play in the game. West came up with the first big play in the eight-play, 62-yard drive, breaking a 30-yard run to the Shallowater 28.

Badgers taste own tonic, 'outquicked' 25-9

No. 2 Hamlin turns trick with three long runs

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — McCamey, a team that outquicked its competition all season, ran into an even quicker Hamlin team and was ousted 25-9 from the Class 2A Area playoffs Friday night in the Mustang Bowl.

It was three big plays by the Pipers, now 12-0, and a slew of McCamey penalties that cost the 8-2A and Bi-district champion Badgers on this night.

Hamlin, ranked No. 2 in the state and advancing as the Area champs for the second straight season, broke open a pair of big runs in the first half and added a third early in the second half. The Badgers could never fully recover.

"The three big plays were it," admitted McCamey coach Buster Leaf. "But we knew we had to gamble on defense to prevent those big plays from happening. We just couldn't sit back and play a vanilla-type defense or their quickness would have killed us."

"They've got six backs who are faster than anything we've got. The explosion of their speed was the difference. When they broke loose, they would score. When we got loose, they would catch up to us and tackle us."

The Badgers had many chances to fold, especially early in the game when the Pipers pulled off some big runs and penalties cost the Badgers some golden scoring chances.

After having a touchdown called back on penalties twice to end the first half, McCamey's back could have been broken on the second play from scrimmage in the final half. Hamlin quarterback Michael Howerton faked a pitch and went 75 yards untouched around the left side to make the score 18-0.

But the Badgers didn't break and, instead, finally put their offense in gear. Their first drive of the half ended at the Piper's five and resulted in a 22-yard field goal by Nandy Zarate. Just a few minutes later, a McCamey interception by Danny Venegas resulted in a two-yard touchdown run by Ben Molina with just five seconds left in the third quarter.

"We really felt like we dodged a bullet at the half," said Hamlin coach Art Briles. "But it also showed McCamey that they could move the ball against us."

McCamey did move the ball in the third quarter, but the Pipers defense held in the final quarter however, and the will now advance to the Regionals where they will play Memphis in Wichita Falls.

"We felt like we had a chance to win the ballgame if we could stop their big plays," Leaf said. "And we did, except for those three. We didn't move the ball as well as we'd hoped, but you can do everything you can, but with their ability and quickness, they'll still catch up to you."

McCamey's last stand came with just under three minutes to play. Zarate was making a last ditch drive and had moved to their own 40. But the senior quarterback threw up one too many passes and Dave Daniel picked him off. The Badgers had one more chance late in the game, but a fumble killed that drive before it even got started.

The Pipers recovered and had to ramble just 15 yards for the final score. It was Howerton who snuck in for his third score with 20 seconds left on the clock.

McCamey had trouble moving the ball on the ground all night. Speedster Rodney Terry, who sat out more than a month this season with a broken bone in his ankle, could not get outside the Hamlin defense making the inside game less effective.

"We tried every formation we had on offense to get Rodney outside.

And we had 'em blocked at times," Leaf said. "But their quickness was so great that they'd still get out there by the time Rodney turned the corner."

The Pipers opened the scoring in typical big play fashion. After stopping the Pipers for one or less yards on eight of their first nine plays, McGee busted loose on a 30-yard touchdown run. After a penalty on a good kick, the Pipers failed on a run for two.

Hamlin put a second drive together in the second quarter, thanks to a bundle of McCamey mistakes. Punter Nandy Zarate had put the pipers in a hole back on their own 14, but a personal foul gave them the ball on the 29. An offside call and a rouging the passer whistle helped Hamlin move the ball to the Badger 35. From there, Howerton burst a draw the final distance for the score. Again the PAT failed.

Just before intermission, McCamey mounted a drive that could have put them back in the ball game. But again, penalties cost the 8-2A champions. First a Zarate touchdown pass was called back because of illegal motion, then on the next play with the halftime clock running out, a second was called back because Zarate crossed the line of scrimmage.

"I've told the kids they have nothing to feel sorry about," Leaf said. "There's no reason to dwell on the bad things when you go 10-2 and you're the district and Bi-district champions. We had a lot of good times and made a lot of memories that you can't learn in the classroom."

Andrews nails Permian, 70-61

From Staff Reports

ANDREWS — The Andrews Mustangs opened its basketball season here Friday night with an impressive 70-61 victory over the 5A Odessa Permian Panthers.

The Panthers may have wished that they were in El Paso with their football counterparts after Andrews' Benard Williams delivered 26 points. He had help from Louis Clay, 14; Doodle Woods, 12; and Damon Clay, 10. Davis led Permian with 12 points while Watkins had 11 and Evans 10.

Andrews is now 1-0 on the year while the Panthers fall to 1-1.

Theismann vows return to football

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Washington Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann vowed Friday that he will return for the 1986 season.

"There has never been a question in my mind I would play again," said Theismann during a news conference at Arlington Memorial Hospital, where he underwent two operations to repair a compound fracture of his right leg suffered in last Monday night's victory over the New York Giants.

"I am excited about next year already," he added.

THEISMANN was on crutches and accompanied by his fiancée, TV personality Cathy Lee Crosby, as he spoke with reporters.

"I feel great. For the first time I am anxious to go to minicamp," said the 12-year veteran, who at 36 was the oldest starting quarterback in the NFL.

Theismann, the Redskins' all-time leading passer, was injured in the second quarter. His replacement, Jay Schroeder, seeing his first extended action in the National Football League, rallied the Redskins for the victory.

"I was very proud of Jay. But it will be interesting to see how he does in Pittsburgh now that he has a week to think about football," said Theismann, adding, "I think Jay will be great."

Dr. Charles Jackson, the Redskins' orthopedic surgeon, said he was very pleased with Theismann's progress and what he described as "the excellent" alignment of the reset broken bones. He said the prognosis for recovery continues to be good. The former most valuable player's leg will remain in a long cast for six weeks and a shorter cast for another six weeks. After that, he will begin an extended rehabilitative period.

THEISMANN THANKED the Giants, in particular linebacker Lawrence Taylor, for their concern immediately after the injury. Taylor and linebacker Gary Reasons fell on Theismann after Taylor had sacked him. Taylor, obviously distraught, frantically signaled the Redskins bench when he realized that the quarterback was seriously hurt.

Asked what he remembered most about the play, Theismann laughed and said, "I remember wishing we had never called it." He added that when he returns next year, he will ask Coach Joe Gibbs to remove the play from the team's playbook.

Theismann recalled that the same leg was broken in 1972 when playing for the Canadian Football League's Toronto Argonauts. Continuing to joke with reporters, he said it was "probably the best thing for my punting career."

Earlier this season, Theismann was pressed into duty against the Chicago Bears when punter Jeff Hayes went down with a leg injury. Theismann responded with a one-yard kick.

ASKED WHAT he would miss most about being on the sidelines on Sunday, the first time he will not be starting at quarterback since 1978, Theismann said, "The camaraderie of my teammates...and the criticism, not doing what I did wrong the next day."

Asked if he had seen the graphic video replay of the injury, Theismann said that it had been kept from him for three days but that he finally saw it on television on Thursday. "I saw the videotape once and I won't see it again. When I saw it I quickly turned off the TV," he said.

Finally, Theismann said he didn't think that his luck had run out. "I think I'm beginning a new chapter of my life."

Canadians owns stranglehold in World Cup

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Canadian Dave Barr and Dan Halldorson played without a bogey and opened up a 6-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the 32nd World Cup and International Trophy golf tournament.

Halldorson compiled a 6-under-par 66 on the Mountain course at the La Quinta Hotel and, in addition to leading Canada to a stranglehold lead in the team competition, took the individual lead at 134, 10 shots under par for 36 holes.

Barr had a 69 in the mild, sunny desert weather. That gave the Canadians a 9-under-par total for the day, lifted them out of a tie for second and placed them well in front at 273, 15 under par, at the tournament's halfway point.

England, the first-round leader, was the only other team in the field of two-man squads from 31 nations able to keep the Canadians within sight.

And it took a birdie-birdie-eagle finish by Howard Clark for them to do it.

Clark's romp over the last three holes gave him a 67 for the day. Paul Way had a 75 and the English completed two rounds in 279, nine under par.

Americans Tom Kite and Lanny

Wadkins, tied with the Canadians after first-round play, fell nine strokes back.

Wadkins shot a 70 and finished two rounds at 138. But Kite encountered all sorts of difficulties on the back, made a couple of double bogeys and had to put on a birdie-birdie finish to salvage a 74. That gave the Americans a 144 for the day and left them in third place at 282.

Australia and Spain were next at 285, 12 off the pace.

Dallas Cowboys feel redemption day near

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys feel they owe the Philadelphia Eagles a whipping. After the Eagles upset the Cowboys 16-14 on Oct. 20 to begin their remarkable comeback, Dallas defensive back Dennis Thurman promised, "There is a redemption day coming in Dallas."

The Eagles come calling Sunday at 3 p.m. to play a Dallas team which has just suffered its worst loss in history, 44-0 to the Chicago Bears.

The Eagles will be trying to win two games in the same season from Dallas for the first time since 1964.

Eagles' quarterback Ron Jaworski had a career-best 380 yards passing day against the Cowboys but is listed as questionable Sunday because of a bruised right shoulder.

"They are just messing with us," said Dallas cornerback Ron Fells. "Jaworski will be out there."

"He'll play unless he has a broken leg," said Dallas cornerback Everson Walls.

The Cowboys are 7-4 in the wild National Conference Eastern Division while the Eagles are 6-5 with victories in five of the their last six games.

"When you have been embarrassed like we have been embarrassed I don't think it should be too hard to come back," said Thurman.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry tried to get his team to forget Chicago. Landry said, "We've got two big games in the next 11 days."

Gary Hogeboom started at quarterback for Dallas and threw two interceptions when Danny White's bruised ribs did not allow him to play in the first Eagles game.

White has a jammed neck and is questionable.

Rookie Randall Cunningham directed the Eagles' attack last week after Jaworski was hurt.

"I'd like to see Jaworski play because he had a great game against us last time and we want him again," said Thurman.

The Eagles are 2-12 in Texas Stadium.

"We've beaten the Cowboys once, but it's hard to defeat a division opponent twice in a season, especially on the road," said defensive back Wes Hopkins.

"We're going to have to play won of our best games. We are trying to make the playoffs and Dallas is in our way."

Faust's fate to be decided

More Sports on Page 8B

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — A decision on Gerry Faust's future as head coach at Notre Dame will be made in two weeks, athletic director Gene Corrigan said Friday, and Minnesota Coach Lou Holtz again is being mentioned as a likely successor should Faust be fired.

Corrigan, in a telephone interview with The Associated Press, said the decision would be made within one week after the Fighting Irish play Miami, Fla., on Nov. 30.

Faust is 30-24-1 with two games left on his five-year contract. Corrigan said it was not unusual for a decision to be made so soon after the end of the season.

"I think we've been telling people that all along," said John Heisler, Notre Dame's assistant sports information director. "It wouldn't be fair to the players or coaches to make that decision before then."

Corrigan would not speculate on the outcome.

Corrigan did say the Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, Notre Dame's executive vice president, would head the selection committee to find a new coach if Faust is not retained. However, he emphasized that "I don't know that there will be a selection committee."

Joyce would work in conjunction with the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, Notre Dame president.

There has speculation for some time that Faust, a successful high school coach at Cincinnati Moeller, will not remain as head coach, but will stay at the school in another capacity.

The Irish lost last week 36-6 to No. 1-ranked Penn State, dropping the team's record to 5-4. It was Notre Dame's worst setback since a 55-24 loss in 1974 to the University of Southern California.

The Irish are at home Saturday against No. 17 Louisiana State, 6-1-1, then visit the Orange Bowl for the Miami game.

Indianapolis Star sports editor Bob Collins said in a column Friday that Faust is heading toward his final two games as head coach.

Collins said that Holtz, who is in his second year as Minnesota coach, is the leading candidate to replace Faust.

Joyce reportedly had breakfast with Holtz the morning after the Purdue-Minnesota game on Oct. 5.

Holtz was traveling to Iowa City, Iowa, where his team will play Iowa Saturday, and couldn't be reached for comment.

Holtz also was mentioned as a leading candidate by the Cleveland Plain Dealer on Friday, along with Dick Vermeil, a CBS pro football commentator who was coach of the Philadelphia Eagles and UCLA Bruins.

A secretary in Holtz's office, Chris Baumgartner, said, "He really doesn't have any comment. He said he doesn't write, he just coaches."

Tom Greenhoe, assistant sports information director at Minnesota, said, "He's been asked the same question a 100 times. His only response has been 'I've got a five-year contract with Minnesota and I plan to finish out that contract. That's the only answer he's given anyone.'"

Greenhoe said Holtz has been asked about the Notre Dame coaching job at every weekly media luncheon this fall. "The only answer he's given anyone who's asked him is: 'Hey, I've got enough problems at Minnesota without worrying about something else.'"

The Plain Dealer quoted a source at Notre Dame as saying, "The expectations the next time we hire a coach will probably be greater. The person will be someone who has had big-time success, which means he will have to produce right away. Having someone conduct a rebuilding job is not what we're after."

SWC Thumbnails

DALLAS (AP) — Here are thumbnail sketches for this weekend's Southwestern Conference football games:

BAYLOR (8-2, 6-1 in SWC) at TEXAS (7-2, 5-1 in SWC), 12:04 p.m. (Raycom TV) — Baylor can wrap up at least a share of the SWC title and win Cotton Bowl host spot by beating Longhorns, Texas can claim outright title by winning the last two. Bears haven't won in Austin since 1951 with record of 15 losses and one tie (1957). Longest home-site domination in any SWC series...series has had bearing on ten of last 15 SWC championships, including 24-10 Baylor victory last year that denied Texas share of title and Baylor victory in '74 that ended string of six straight Longhorn championships...game features four of top eight passers in SWC...Baylor second in SWC total offense (399.7 yards per game), Texas fifth (376.4)...both among most balanced offenses in country. Baylor at 183.4 rushing yards and 216.3 passing per game, Texas at 213.4 rushing and 163.0 passing. Baylor first in SWC defense at 287.6 yards per game, Texas fifth at 332.3. Longhorns and Bears fourth and fifth in rushing defense at 169.3 and 172.3 yards per game, respectively...Baylor second both nationally and in SWC pass defense at 115.3 yards per game (behind Texas Tech) and Texas fifth at 163.0. Baylor win over UT last year coming on five interceptions...Baylor's Tom Muecke and Cody Carlson rank first and eighth, respectively. Texas' Bret Stafford and Todd Dodge rank third and fourth in SWC passing efficiency...both offenses utilize depth: Bears have called on 17 runners and ten receivers, Texas 16 runners and 12 receivers...Baylor's Buzzy Sawyer No. 2 SWC punter with 44.5-yard average, Texas' John Telschick third at 43.7...placekickers also among best...Texas Jeff Ward is 24-24 PATs and 17-22 FGs, Baylor's Terry Syler is 30-30 PATs and 10-11 FGs. Baylor 15th in Associated Press writers poll...Texas has 54-16-4 series lead, 33-6-2 in Austin, but only 6-5 in last 11 meetings.

TEXAS TECH (4-6, 1-6 in SWC) at HOUSTON (2-7, 1-5 in SWC), 7 p.m. — Game matches two most prolific one-game quarterbacks in SWC history: Houston's Gerald Landry set SWC total-offense record of 434 yards vs. Arkansas, Tech's Billy Joe Tolliver set SWC passing record of 422 yards vs. TCU. Landry leads SWC in total offense at 193.8 yards per game and second in passing yardage at 155.4. Tolliver making his third start and second in SWC passing efficiency with 137.6 rating points. UH won last Astrodom meeting, 43-41, in '83 as teams had SWC record 1,025 yards from scrimmage...Bill Yeoman ends 24th year as UH coach next week vs. Rice. Jerry Moore ends five-year stay as Tech coach after announcement Tuesday that he won't return. Raiders had SWC's third-highest offensive day in history two weeks ago (699 yards) in 63-7 victory over TCU, didn't allow a TD last week but lost to SMU on three field goals, 9-7. UH had SWC's eighth-highest offensive day (676 yards) in 49-27 victory over Louisville on Sept. 28...both teams balanced offensively. Houston averages 217.7 rushing and 160.9 passing, Tech 181.8 and 143.9. Tech leads nation in pass defense (112.3 yards a game), has defensive edge with yield of 23 TDs and 341.4 yards per game to Cougars' 36 and 425.4...UH's Michael Simmons seventh in SWC rushing (88 yards a game), Carl Hilton third in receiving (29 for 361 yards), Larry Shepherd No. 9 receiver (21 for 294)...Tech frosh Wayne Walker averaging 39.8 yards each run, 18.1 a reception, 27.4 each kickoff return, fellow freshman Tyrone Thurman at 11.4 per punt return, set up go-ahead TD vs. SMU last week with 50-yard return...Tech has lost three SWC games by total of five points...UH has 13-4 series lead, 8-1 in SWC, 7-1 in Houston, winning six straight since '53 loss before either joined SWC.

SMU (6-3, 5-2 in SWC) at ARKANSAS (8-2, 5-2 in SWC), 1 p.m. — Razorbacks have chance to tie for SWC championship with victory in final game, provided Baylor, Texas and A&M all lose one more, while SMU has one more game Dec. 7 vs. Oklahoma...SMU has won four and tied one in last five to cut Arkansas advantage to 28-27-5, one of three closest member-vs.-member rivalry in SWC, with Razorbacks holding 9-8-1 advantage in Fayetteville...teams have won or shared five of last ten SWC championships. SMU scored 31-28 victory last year, holding off 21-point Arkansas fourth-quarter rally, and tied for title as Arkansas finished one game out. Reggie Dupard scored three TDs vs. Razorbacks last year, leads SWC and in national top ten rushing and scoring with 119.3 yards and 9.3 points per game...Mustangs scored 32-18 victory in last Fayetteville meeting, clinching SWC title and knocking Hogs out of race. Last SMU trip to Arkansas ended 125-game Razorback scoring streak, longest in SWC history, 17-0...teams are one-two in SWC rushing attacks and eight-nine in nation, but neither offense scored last week. SMU beating Tech, 9-7, on three FGs by Brandy Brownlee. Arkansas scoring on blocked punt in 10-6 loss to A&M. Arkansas rushes for 265.1 yards a game, SMU for 256.3. Arkansas has allowed two rushing TDs, none in SWC play, and ranks first in SWC rushing defense (103.4 yards a game). SMU third at 162.3...SMU's Jeff Atkins fourth in SWC rushing at 76.6 yards a game. Arkansas' James Rouse tenth at 51.9 with 17 rushers in action.

TEXAS A&M (7-2, 5-1 in SWC) at TCU (3-7, 0-7 in SWC), 2 p.m. — Aggies need to win last two over TCU and Texas for at least co-championship, can win outright with two victories if Texas beats Baylor. A&M win last year knocked TCU out of title share. Frog victory could return favor. A&M tied with Texas for longest victory streak in SWC, taking last three. Aggies overcame major hurdles in last two victories over SMU and Arkansas, outstanding defense keying both. A&M stopped Arkansas' SWC-leading rushing game last week as Razorbacks' points in 10-6 loss came on blocked punt. Frogs have lost four straight, but held Texas to 10-0 third-quarter lead before falling, 20-0. Frogs include 15 freshmen among top 22 offensive players, 16 among top 22 on defense.

Tech team decides against boycott

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech football players, upset over the firing of Coach Jerry Moore four days before the season ended, considered boycotting Saturday's game against the University of Houston.

The players met in the athletic dining hall after Thursday's practice and discussed whether to sit out the game at the Astrodom, Joe Hornaday, the school's sports information director, said Friday.

"There was never any vote," he said. "It was just an airing out of frustrations. A few people mentioned boycotting the game, but it was more of a time to get everything out in the open and make themselves feel better about it."

The Red Raiders were scheduled to board a plane Friday afternoon for the flight to Houston, and Hornaday said, "We expect everybody to be on the plane and to be ready to go out and play."

Tech Athletic Director T. Jones on Tuesday said that he had fired Moore, effective after Saturday's game, because he wanted the school to compete more strongly against other intercollegiate powers.

The Red Raiders are 4-6 this season after opening with three straight victories. In five years, Moore's teams were 16-32-2.

Moore was a popular coach and his players reacted to his dismissal with dismay. Hornaday said a boycott was one of several options they discussed Thursday in voicing among themselves their frustration and sympathy for Moore.

"I think they realized that (a boycott) wouldn't help him," he said.

He would not reveal the alternatives the players considered.

"I think it's quieted down and there should be no trouble from here on out," he said.

Hornaday said Jones is conducting a search for a new head coach. "He has not divulged a timetable or who the candidates are," he said. "Everybody's just trying to finish up this last game right now."

Sooners ride freshman gun to top

New York Times News Service

NORMAN, Okla. — On the eve of Oklahoma's season opener at Minnesota, Coach Barry Switzer said he envisioned the most inexperienced offense of his 13-year regime becoming one of the best he had ever had.

Switzer projected the halfback Spencer Tillman rushing for 1,200 yards and the fullbacks Lydell Carr and Earl Johnson combining for 2,000 yards. But the primary reason for optimism was the quarterback Troy Aikman, a sophomore whose drop-back passing gave Oklahoma unprecedented balance. Switzer and his aides revised the run-oriented wishbone to embrace the balanced version pioneered by Air Force.

The night after Switzer made his projections, Tillman gained 70 yards in the first quarter against Minnesota, then suffered a pulled hamstring on the second play of the second quarter. He missed four games and has only 59 yards in three games since returning. Johnson suffered a broken kneecap and underwent surgery that will sideline him until next season.

THEN AIKMAN suffered a broken ankle three games later against Miami. Oklahoma lost that game, 27-14, but has since won four straight and takes a 7-1 record into its most important game so far. The Sooners will face Nebraska (9-1) on Saturday for a possible Big Eight Conference championship and Orange Bowl bid.

One reason the Sooners have been able to overcome their offensive injuries is a defense that is ranked No. 1 nationally — allowing only 186.4 yards a game — and that features two of the best players in Oklahoma history: the nose guard Tony Casillas and the linebacker Brian Bosworth.

But, surprisingly, another reason is that Oklahoma's improvised offense has approached the level Switzer had envisioned. It is primarily because of the 5-foot-11-inch quarterback who was not the most coveted that Oklahoma recruited last spring: Jamelle Holieway.

Holieway took over when Aikman was hurt and has dazzled as an elusive runner, competent passer and deluxe operator of the triple option.

With Holieway, Oklahoma had three successive games — against Iowa State, Kansas and Missouri — with more than 500 total yards for the first time since 1972. And the Sooners have averaged 47 points in the four games that Holieway started.

In his second start, against Kansas, Holieway rushed for 162 yards, second highest ever for an Oklahoma quarterback. In his third start, against Missouri, Holieway's 324 yards broke the school record for total offense set by Jack Mildren.

whom many considered the nonpareil of wishbone quarterbacks.

In his four starts, Holieway has rushed for only 18 fewer yards than Carr's team-leading nine-game total of 576. Holieway would be Oklahoma's rushing leader but for 60 yards in losses while trying to pass. He has averaged 6.2 yards a carry. He has passed for four touchdowns, has thrown only one interception and is rated the leading passer in the Big Eight. His 41 percent completion record does not reflect his passing ability. Switzer maintains. He shares the team touchdown lead, having scored five.

HOLIEWAY HAD the benefit of breaking in against the Big Eight's weaker teams. Nebraska will be the first outstanding defense he has faced and his first pressure game.

But Switzer said Holieway is as good a player as the team has ever had in executing its offense. "He has good speed and great quickness and squirts through the defense," Switzer said. "He does not have the arm that Aikman had, but we have not had to change our offense because Jamelle is a good passer. We have to throw more sprint-out passes with him because of his height, but he can throw drop-back passes. And his ability to read defenses is amazing."

Eric Mitchell, not Holieway, was the freshman quarterback with the better credentials. Mitchell is bigger and faster than Holieway and demonstrated fascinating ability as a backup quarterback. But Holieway, the product of a sophisticated high school program at Carson, Calif., quickly established himself as Aikman's backup during the preseason.

"He was so advanced in his understanding of our offense that we knew early if Troy got hurt we would go with Jamelle," Switzer said. "He has the ideal personality and temperament to be a leader."

Holieway is quiet and modest but not surprised by his success.

"I have been reading the defense and running the option since I played Pop Warner ball," he said.

JIM MURRAY

Marcus Allen: Gets it down without really trying

Most working stiffs are 9-to-5 guys. And the trick is to turn those eight hours into three of actual production. What you do is, you come in to work. You hang up your coat, then you go hunt up a colleague and you go out for coffee. You catch up on the latest gossip. You hang around the water cooler a lot.

You shuffle papers, call your bookie, have the switchboard tell callers you're "in a meeting." Maybe you go out for a shine.

You turn the lunch hour into two. First of all, you pretend it's a business lunch even if the only business you discuss is the Chicago Bears. You loiter at the newsstand a lot. Research, you convince the auditor.

Back in the office, the idea is to let somebody else stick his neck out. It's the key to corporate success. It's sure the key to longevity.

That's why I find it hard to understand the incomprehensible, totally unprofessional behavior of a young business executive in the well-respected conglomerate doing business as the Los Angeles Raiders, Inc.

Marcus A. Allen has done a great deal for that firm, about on the order of what Lee Iacocca has done for Chrysler. He has boosted sales, dumbfounded competition, opened up new markets.

If anyone was entitled to sit and do his nails and try to decide where to go to dinner on the expense account it would seem to be this quasi-chief executive officer, Marcus Allen.

The last thing you would think he would want to do is rock the boat.

Instead, Marcus Allen has set the art of how to succeed in business without really trying back by decades. Allen's stock in trade is to carry or catch the football. He does that better than almost anyone in the game, give or take a rival executive like Walter Payton or so.

But lots of things can happen to you, career-wise, when you go back into the basic rough and tumble of everyday commerce. You can fumble the ball. You can drop the pass. You can get knocked down behind the line of scrimmage. You can get stopped on the goal line.

The really experienced executive bucks these chores to unwary junior partners, eager beavers on the way up, guys trying to be noticed, guys who, so to speak, don't have their names on the door yet.

When you're an exec who's got it made, what you do in football, for instance, is wait for the easy ones, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, for example, and you say, "I'll handle this one." You duck the tough ones.

Otherwise, you run the risk of the office staff whispering, "The old boy doesn't have it any more. Got caught from behind by a tackle the other day" or "Couldn't put it in from the one against the Bengals. Can you believe it?"

Even management seemed content to let Marcus play the Mr. Allen-is-not-available-at-this-time-care-to-leave-a-message? game. When Marcus asked to run more, the managing general partner, Al Davis, suggested the beach at twilight.

But Allen wasn't interested in coupon-clipping, gliding toward his pension. He wanted the action. He wanted to be on the floor of the exchange.

He got noisy about it earlier this season. He felt he was getting like the executive whose phone stops ringing, whose number stops being called, who is not counted on anymore, who is treated like a guy who has been put out to pasture and carried on the books as a consultant.

Allen violated every canon of the business code. He screamed to be allowed to earn his pay. He didn't want to be just another vice president going around cutting ribbons.

He didn't like the way the company was going and he thought he could do something about it if they'd bring him back on line. That's a no-no for the exec looking for a cushy place to rest on his laurels or to keep out of the eye of the stockholders, or the industry analysts, in this case, the sportswriters.

Marcus didn't have to do it. His salary was guaranteed for several years. His pension is vested. He could have artfully covered his aspects, picked his spots, run the ball out of bounds, said, "Give it to somebody else" on the one, showed up with mysterious ailments on the days they played the Seahawks, not gotten open when he knew the 49er secondary was waiting over the middle.

But, the company was going bad and CEO Allen decided it was because they had stopped using his talents.

He took charge again. He risked his reputation, to say nothing of his knees and ankles. He'd either turn the company around or he'd have to have lunch in a bag at the desk by himself every day.

The firm had just lost marketing decisions to the Kansas City Chiefs and the San Francisco 49ers when Marcus loosed his blast of dissatisfaction. He wasn't content just to take his paycheck and polish his Mercedes.

The Raiders won five straight games after Marcus' outbreak. They gave him the ball, all right. He gained more than 100 yards in six of the last seven weeks. He reached 1,000 yards gained faster than any Raider exec in history.

The team won five straight games after his eruption, and six out of eight.

Sunday's game illustrated his worth to the company. A desultory game of almost sandlot football, it was Cincinnati 6, Raiders, 6, in the fourth quarter, a sort of thinly disguised scoreless tie, when they began to get Marcus Allen the football.

With about three minutes to play, Allen's firm had fourth-and-two on the rivals' 31-yard-line. A flat pass to Allen over the middle and it was first-and-10 on the 13. Two plays later, he scored the game's only touchdown for the victory and a season-saving sales move.

In the locker room later, someone wanted to know whether Allen's outburst earlier in the year had resulted in his role change and his getting the ball more. "Oh, no," he said. "It had to do more with the inexperience of the quarterbacks. We had to change the philosophy."

As you can see, a good company man to the last. No 9-to-5 guy Marcus. If he ran a restaurant, he'd want to wash the dishes, too.

Boob tube makes kitchen appliance a star

Barry Lorge
Copley News Service

Television, the vast wasteland, has helped America become infatuated with a vast waistband.

Forget Bill Cosby, Joan Collins and John Forsythe. The surprise star of the boob tube this season has been not The Equalizer, but The Refrigerator.

William Perry, the corpulent rookie defensive lineman running back receiver blocking back of the unbeaten Chicago Bears, is bigger than Dallas.

He and his teammates ate Dallas last weekend, devouring the Cow-boys like barbecued ribs. 44-0 America's Team? The Bears are 11-0, and Perry is a national darling — the toast with the most, from coast-to-coast.

HE'S LIKE John Candy in cleats, a loveable, 320-pound sex symbol — give or take 10 pounds, depending what's for breakfast. If Hollywood had known that he was coming, it wouldn't have wasted the title, "All of Me."

What a soap opera The Refrigerator's rise to celebrity has been.

When Chicago selected the over-stuffed nose guard from Clemson in the first round of the college draft last May, even Mrs. Bill Tobin, wife of the Bears' director of player personnel, asked her husband "Why'd you draft that fat guy?"

Well, dear, Shamu already had a job at Sea World.

Perry held out two weeks beyond the reporting date for training camp before signing a four-year contract for $1.356 million. He weighed in at 318 — 40 or 50 pounds less than his most blubbery, but considerably higher than the 295 the Bears had recommended. He shed 13 pounds — a real baker's dozen — the first morning of workouts, but missed the afternoon session with dehydration and cramps. Refrigerator off due to energy shortage.

BUDDY RYAN, the Bears' demon defensive coordinator, was not amused. He looked at Perry and saw a fat tub of goo — Terry Forster without an arm. He dismissed Perry as "a wasted draft choice."

But head coach Mike Ditka — who's so popular around Chicago these days that thousands of idiots got on the cops when they arrested him for drunk driving — believed there was more in The Refrigerator than food enough to stock a training table. How many guys who stand 6-2 and weigh 320 can dunk a basketball? Run the 40 in 5.2 seconds? Side-step Buddy Ryan's wrath? Perry is an exceptional athlete, and Ditka saw possibilities.

He did not imagine the cult figure he would create by putting Perry in the backfield — a brainstorm that was part "payback" and part whimsical experiment to get The Refrigerator some playing time and positive publicity. The San Francisco 49ers had used guard Guy McIntyre as a blocking back in short-yardage situations when they whupped the Bears, 23-0, in the NFC Championship game last season, and Ditka retaliated in kind against them on Oct. 13.

A WEEK later, against the Green Bay Packers, The Refrigerator became a prime-time sensation, the "Monday Night Football" equivalent of the movie, "The Gods Must Be Crazy." He charged out of the backfield in goal-line situations like a bull elephant on the rampage.

Twice he led the blocking as Walter Payton ran for touchdowns. Replays of The Refrigerator driving defensive back George Cumby through the end zone riveted viewers who couldn't see it too often. And when Perry took a handoff and rushed for a touchdown — well, you've seen about everything when you've seen an elephant fly.

But not quite. Ditka knows a groundswell when he sees one. He fueled Fridge mania, using Perry as a pass receiver. Touchdown!

Miniseries tries to make Mussolini seem 'prince of a guy'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's a tough trick turning a genocidal maniac into a prince of a guy who dotes on his wife, kids and mistress. But NBC's "Mussolini: The Untold Story" dies trying.

The seven-hour miniseries, which will be broadcast Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, offers a monumental whitewash of the Italian dictator, played by George C. Scott. At the end of the film, just after Mussolini and his mistress have been strung up by their heels, this printed crawl comes on the screen:

"The death of Benito Mussolini was small retribution for the 2 million men, women and children who died in Europe and Africa at the hands of his Fascist regime."

The postscript treats Mussolini's atrocities as a mere footnote to history, an afterthought, or maybe pangs of conscience for the previous seven hours that stressed the domestic side of Mussolini as sort of a "Fascist Knows Best."

"Mussolini" is neither fish nor fowl, or as the Italians might say, pesce ne pollo. As history, it's not perceptive or penetrating. As family drama, it's humdrum and uninspired.

ENTERTAINMENT

Like HBO's three-hour "Mussolini" last September, NBC's tale would have been better left an "Untold Story."

Sunday's three-hour installment begins in 1922 with Il Duce, a former newspaperman, preparing to assume power as Italy's premier. Little is learned about his political rise, his ideology or the man himself.

His nagging wife, Rachele (Lee Grant), is a woman who would not be queen. She wonders why the family must move from Milan to Rome and "tear up our roots...just because you've taken a new job."

She treats his new position as if he were a junior-level executive moving from one widget company to another. Rachele, who obviously has no Nancy Reagan-type interest in political advice and consent, prefers to knit and cook. "You go run Italy...I run this family...Are you staying for dinner?"

One time, after an assassination attempt, Mussolini laughs at the near-miss, while Mama Mussolini fusses about darning the bullet hole in his sleeve.

The evening activity at the Mussolini mansion is watching newsreel footage of Il Duce. Isn't it just like kids not to be impressed? Daddy, can we borrow the car?

His 19-year-old daughter, Edda (Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio), has become a bit of a party girl. Mama Mussolini complains about the temptations of Rome. As Edda drives off into the night, the crescendoing trumpets from the pretentious musical score blare in the background. High drama, this isn't.

Scenes come out of nowhere to give small pieces of the puzzle, but a broader sense of the man and his policies is missing. How does he come by his positions and philosophies? "The Untold Story" never tells.

Mussolini is intent on making the trains run on schedule, so he grabs a loafing railroad worker and throws him off the train. In another scene, a female reporter from London comes for a story. Mussolini doesn't like her first question, which is a bit gossipy, so he rapes her. End of interview.

Painting artist's fantasy view of Corsicana

CORSICANA, Texas (AP) — Detroit's finest is parked along the curb, and not a boy on the block can resist giving it the once over. And here comes old Mrs. Thornapple in her horse-drawn surrey; she'll undoubtedly cast a discriminating glance in the direction of that Thunderbird.

stories it inspires.

"It's not Main Street, per se," Noyes said. "It's a composite. It's a fantasy."

The painting, done especially for the Sesquicentennial, combines past and present in delightful simplicity. It's colorful. It's busy. It's enchanting. But above all else, it's fun.

"I enjoy my paintings," Noyes said. "You have to have a sense of humor when you paint."

Noyes is a newcomer to Corsicana, but he already has become an active and productive member of the community.

He may not fit the stereotypes of artists — Noyes is a bit unconventional and eccentric. He said he was drawn to Corsicana by a beautiful damsel in distress.

Around the first of April, Noyes said he received a call about the health of a close friend, Minnie Jim Christy of Corsicana. She had suffered a stroke, he said, and doctors had told him she probably would spend the rest of her life confined to a wheelchair in a nursing home.

Noyes said he was greeted by tears from Ms. Christy upon his arrival at her room in a Corsicana nursing home from his home in Los Angeles.

"It took five weeks of work, and then we walked out of there," he said. The two were married May 20.

He might have gotten the idea for such a fairytale romance from his first New York job.

"When I was 24, I moved to New York and my first job there was as an editor for True Confessions magazine. Now that was exciting," he said, without trying to disguise his sarcasm.

After six years in the Big Apple, Noyes headed off to Hollywood.

"I was in movie-studio advertising most of the time," he said, noting that he did a lot of work for the Walt Disney Studios. "Mostly record album covers and things like that," he said.

While living in California, Noyes said, he became a member of the prestigious Laguna Beach Art Association.

"I just took painting up as a hobby," he said. But eventually he gave up his career in movie-studio advertising and took up painting full time.

His works have been shown at the Phillips Galleries in Dallas as well as several other galleries across the country, and last month there was a showing of some of Noyes' works in Corsicana at the Temple Beth-El.

At the Temple Beth-El showing, notecards featuring Noyes' Main Street U.S.A. painting were introduced for sale.

Tommie Griffin, a local art agent, said she met Noyes shortly after his arrival in Corsicana. It was Ms. Griffin who approached Noyes about doing a painting to benefit the Sesquicentennial Committee.

"We decided this would be a great fund-raiser because it appeals to most everyone," Griffin said.

Noyes is no stranger to fund-raising projects. Two consecutive years he designed Christmas cards that were sold to benefit leukemia research at the Wadley Institutes of Molecular Medicine in Dallas. The two cards raised more than $80,000 for the center.

Noyes now spends most of his time caring for his wife and capturing bits and pieces of Corsicana on canvas. His most recent paintings, feature local homes and buildings.

One is of the Navarro County Court House.

"All my paintings are authentic," he said. Although the courthouse was built in 1905, he said he chose a time period of 1910 because he wanted to include two cars in the painting, one was built in 1908 and the other in 1910. Noyes said the people in the painting were dressed in fashions from 1910.

He is a stickler for detail, but that is what makes his works come alive. While many paintings may say a thousand words, Harold Noyes paints at least that many stories on every canvas.

Brenham couple relishes serving the 'inn' crowd

BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — Because she loves cooking so much, Emily Urban had always wanted to open a restaurant. Her husband, Loren, shared that dream.

Last March, they opened the Ole Washington Inn east of Brenham, about four miles from Texas Highway 105 on Farm to Market Road 2193.

The Urbans worked in a printing business for 35 years before retiring to the site where they built their home and restaurant.

Urban says they're never going to retire, they "just changed occupations in 1984."

"We traveled a lot and picked up ideas from little restaurants, combined them and wound up with the fulfillment of a dream," Mrs. Urban said.

But Mrs. Urban, who does almost all the cooking at the Ole Washington Inn, had never run a restaurant or even cooked in one although she had cooked for organizations.

"I just like to cook," she said. "It's my forte."

She said she's mainly "just a housewife," and added, "I'm not a chef."

"We have a saying over the door as you come in. It's good home cooking."

Urban smiles at her modesty and says, "We've been successful because she is a chef."

"Whatever you enjoy doing, you do it to the best of your ability," she said.

Urban said one of his wife's most popular dishes is her gumbo, of which she makes four gallons at a time.

"It takes three or four hours," she said. "It's the roux that takes so long."

The Ole Washington Inn specializes in fresh seafood dishes. Mrs. Urban believes her seafood dishes are special because she grew up on seafood in Louisiana. She says her family has always enjoyed seafood and she has had a lot of opportunity to practice cooking the dishes.

"We lived in New Orleans for several years," she said. "That's where I really developed the knack for fish."

"When we were newlyweds, every Friday night we bought five pounds of shrimp. It was our treat of the week. Of course, that's when shrimp was 50 cents a pound."

Emily said the secret of her special shrimp is her beer batter. "They puff up pretty and light," she said.

Although the recipe is worth it, she has to mix the batter 10 times a night because it goes flat quickly.

Everything is prepared fresh, the Urbans said.

"Nothing is pre-prepared," Mrs. Urban said. "We use low cholesterol oils because we eat a lot of our own cooking. I have to confess, though, we use a lot of real butter in our pies."

She bakes fresh pies daily, including her specialties — pecan, sweet potato (made with two shots of bourbon), peach, pumpkin, apple, lemon, chocolate and coconut.

"We have a full-fledged bakery," she said, "with pies, bread and rolls. People are becoming very health-conscious, so we bake without preservatives."

The restaurant runs a special every week, "depending on what we can buy," Urban said.

"We don't use any fancy names on anything," Mrs. Urban said. "If it's a stuffed crab, we call it a stuffed crab."

The restaurant may not use fancy names, but it does use humorous ones. Each steak is named after a Texas hero. For example, a Sam Houston is a 12-ounce ribeye and a William B. Travis is a 10-ounce strip. The fried chicken is named after Santa Anna, the Mexican general defeated in the Texas war for independence.

Mrs. Urban laughed and said the play on Santa Anna's name is the only one with an underlying meaning. "We tried to stick with Texas names."

The Urbans chose the site for the restaurant 17 years ago. "We considered where the highway was and thought if we built it right on the highway we would have to be open seven days a week," Urban said. "We believed a good, quality restaurant would draw local people."

With this in mind, they chose a site away from the highway.

The Urbans designed a log cabin and sent off for a kit. A local contractor constructed it for them.

The inn overlooks a small pond complete with geese, ducks and peacocks. The Urbans also have a guest house that is available "when the kids aren't using it."

They have a son and daughter and three grandchildren.

Tunnel tells of Mexico relief work

Dale Tunnel, Amarillo, was guest speaker for the Adventist Church's recent week of revival and rededication.

Prior to the evening services, Tunnel showed slides and gave reports on the devastation caused by the earthquake in Mexico which showed thousands of homes totally destroyed and many thousands of people left homeless and confused.

The Texico Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists, one of the several conferences and S.D.A. hospitals sending relief to the stricken area, recently sent its semi-trailer loaded with $400,000 worth of clothing, bedding and food to the area. Tunnel and Timo Chacon, departmental directors of the Texico Conference, drove the truck from Amarillo to Guadalupe. There, the shipment was placed in the hands of denominational authorities for further distribution.

The men had worked through the Adventist Development and Relief Agency to arrange for the proper documents and had no trouble in getting the provisions to those who needed them. Included in the shipment were blankets and homemade quilts.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Witnesses meet in Odessa

ODESSA — Jehovah's Witnesses from Midland will be meeting with members of nine other West Texas congregations at Ector Junior High School this month.

Frank Davis, spokesman for the local congregation, said that over 1,000 delegates are expected to attend this two-day session of Bible instruction and fellowship.

"Our program theme is 'Doing Our Part in Glorifying God,'" Davis said. "We all have a responsibility to glorify God and to keep on glorifying Him in our lives."

The principal address of the assembly will be delivered by H.E. Shalkoski, a representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society from world headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses, Brooklyn, N.Y. His subject will be "Global Peace: From What Source?"

Alamo Baptist debt-free

Alamo Heights Baptist Church is planning a triple celebration beginning Sunday through the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. worship services and continues at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

The extended celebration is to give praise and thanksgiving to God for making it possible for the church to become a debt-free church," said a church spokesman.

The church retired its debt Nov. 15 on its sanctuary constructed in 1982 at a cost of $700,000. In addition to becoming debt-free, the church will dedicate a new fellowship hall during the Tuesday evening service.

The triple-service Thanksgiving celebration will be highlighted by testimonies by members of the church, inspirational music presented by the church's sanctuary choir and selected soloists and messages from the pastor, the Rev. J.E. Meeks.

A note-burning will be held during Tuesday's service. The service will be highlighted by a message from the Rev. Jimmy Law, director of missions for Midland, Odessa and Pecos Baptist associations, the dedication of a new fellowship hall, special recognitions and a Thanksgiving meal.

The church invites former members, friends and others to join in this time of thanksgiving.

Boys' Club has winners

The Boys' Club of Midland Game Room Tournament held Nov. 18-20 produced 18 winners who will represent the club at the third annual West Texas Southeastern New Mexico Boys' Clubs Game Room Tournament in Abilene Dec. 7.

Winners from the club are Ralph Natividad, Carlos DeLeon, Ruben Esquivel, Ramon Najera, Tony Tucker, Frank Lozano, Michael Esquivel, Paul Zarate, Abelino Silva, William Morales, Flora Mendoza, Sammy Ramirez, Abraham Gutierrez, Francisco Galindo, Danny Sepulveda, Jesse Arizpe, Carlos Rocha and Beaver Sepulveda.

The events for competition include Football (singles and doubles), ping-pong (singles and doubles), chess, checkers and eight-ball pool. Seventy people participated in the three-day tournament.

Special time at St. Ann's

St. Ann's Spiritual Church, Tilden and East Illinois Avenue, is sponsoring a special presentation at 8 p.m. Thursday.

The Mighty Cross of Calvary of Los Angeles will perform Thanksgiving. The church's pastor, Mother Scott Williams, invites the public to attend.

Midlanders on boards

SAN ANTONIO — Midlanders including the Rev. G.A. Magee, Bellview Baptist Church; G.S. Cromwell, oil and gas producer, and James B. Henry, owner of Henry Engineering, were elected to major positions on Texas Baptist boards during the annual meeting of the 2.3 million-member Baptist General Convention of Texas this November.

Magee was elected to the executive board. Cromwell was elected to the board of trustees of Howard Payne University. Henry was elected to Wayland Baptist University Board of Trustees.

The executive board is composed of pastors, church staff members and lay persons and conducts the business of the BGCT between annual sessions.

Institutions of the BGCT include eight universities, an academy, eight hospitals, four children's homes and four homes for the aging. This work is supported by the Convention's more than 4,900 churches and missions which will give about $60 million this year through the cooperative program for mission work at home and abroad.

Besides the institutions, the Convention helps support the work of about 7,200 missionaries in the United States and in more than 100 foreign nations.

Thanksgiving for needy

The Church of God of Prophecy will be serving Thanksgiving lunch to needy families on Thanksgiving Day at 5301 Thomason Drive. Any needy family, or those knowing of families in need, may call the following numbers 697-3644 or 683-8567 to make reservations. The Church of God of Prophecy would appreciate hearing from businesses wanting to donate money or food to this cause.

John Miller is pastor of The Church of God of Prophecy.

All-Bach service at Grace

Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield St., is offering an all-Bach musical service at 11 a.m. Sunday in recognition of Bach's 300th birthday celebration this year.

Student and adult choirs will sing, along with instrumentalists and soloists bass Tom Laney and soprano Nancy Barnhill, music from three Bach cantatas and the B Minor Mass music, "Et Incarnatus Est."

The Thanksgiving Service includes the serving of communion and will be followed by an "Agape Feast" in the fellowship hall. Director of music is Marilyn Wilson.

The church's minister, the Rev. Patrick Willson, invites the public to attend.

Johnson on Polish board

Pam Piatkowski Johnson of Midland was elected to the board of directors of the Texas Polish American Congress at its 15th annual convention in Houston this November.

Theme of the convention was Fryderyk Chopin's 175th anniversary. Several musical tributes were given honoring the Polish composer.

Former Congressman, Roman Pucinski, president of the PAC Illinois Division, addressed the closing banquet on the political situation in Poland and gave an assessment of the 15 million Americans of Polish descent.

The Rev. John W. Yanta, San Antonio, pastor of St. James the Apostle Catholic Church, received the Distinguished Member Award. As its first recipient, he was recognized as the founder and first president in 1971.

Francis Kajencki, El Paso, was re-elected president for his third one-year term. The Rev. John Morokovsky, retired bishop of Galveston-Houston, was elected as an emeritus member of the board of directors.

Churches honor holiday

The Midland Association of Churches invites the public to attend an ecumenical Service of Thanksgiving at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Trinity Presbyterian Church, Louisiana Avenue and Andrews Highway.

The Rev. Ellis E. Brust, the 1986 president-nominee of the Association, will preach on a text from the 25th Chapter of Matthew, verses 31-46. "For I was hungry and you gave me food."

Brust is a graduate of Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va., and serves as associate rector at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church.

John Palmer of First Christian Church will direct the music.

A nursery will be provided for young children.

Revival at Hollowell

Revival services at Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., continue at 7:30 p.m. today and 11 a.m. Sunday.

Guest preacher is the Rev. Michael DeVaughn, associate pastor at St. Paul United Methodist Church, Dallas.

A pre-Thanksgiving turkey dinner with all the trimmings will follow.

Sunday's worship service

Music for Sunday's service will be provided by Hollowell Adult Choir. Antioch Baptist Church Choir provided the music for Friday's service.

The Rev. Hadley R. Edwards, the host pastor, invites the public to attend.

Methodists set lecture

The Rev. Jordan Grooms is the speaker and leader for the Spiritual Enrichment Series which began Friday at First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Illinois Avenue. The series, which follows the theme "Mustard Seed People," continues at 10:30 a.m. today and at 10:35 a.m. and 7:15 p.m. Sunday.

This is the second presentation in the First United Methodist Lecture Series of 1985. Grooms will speak today on "Focus on the Sacramental Strengths." His topics Sunday will be "Focus on the Priesthood of Believers" in the morning and, at night, "Focus on Continuing Conversion, Change and Growth."

Grooms, a United Methodist minister, is a leader and speaker for youth conferences, spiritual life retreats, Ashrams and a teacher. He has served as pastor of First United Methodist churches in Lamesa, Big Spring and Amarillo.

Child care is provided for the sessions. The public is invited to attend.

Handbell festival today

The sixth annual Midland Christmas Handbell Festival is being held at 4 p.m. today in the Fellowship Hall of first Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

About 200 handbell ringers from Texas and New Mexico, representing several denominations, are participating.

Christian Science plans Thanksgiving service

The local Christian Science congregation is planning a special Thanksgiving service for the community at 11 a.m. Thursday at 1001 W. Tennessee Ave.

The sermon on Thanksgiving will focus on actively expressing gratitude to God by following Christ Jesus in daily life," said a spokesman for the church. "The Master's injunction sounds the keynote: 'Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.'"

The sermon will also include hymns of praise, a brief silent prayer and the Lord's Prayer.

A portion of the service will be set aside for spontaneous expressions of gratitude. "It's not unusual for Christian Scientists to briefly relate instances of spiritual healing among their blessings," the spokesman said.

Since Christian Science churches are lay churches, sermons are not written by ministers but are composed of selections from the Bible along with correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," written by the church's founder Mary Baker Eddy.

Child care will be provided.

Revival at Hollowell

Revival services at Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., begins at 7:30 p.m. today and continues at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. Sunday.

Guest preacher is the Rev. Michael DeVaughn, associate pastor at St. Paul United Methodist Church, Dallas.

A pre-Thanksgiving turkey dinner with all the trimmings will follow Sunday's worship service.

Music for Sunday's service will be provided by Hollowell Adult Choir. Antioch Baptist Church Choir will provide the music for tonight's service.

The Rev. Hadley R. Edwards, the host pastor, invites the public to attend.

Brooks at Word of Life

Rice Brooks will be speaking at Word of Life, 3838 W. Wall Ave., at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

Brooks is with Maranatha Ministries, a worldwide ministry that plants and builds churches. He has been seen on the 700 Club.

Brooks was instrumental in the conversion of Rosey Grier of the National Football League. He has ministered in 12 nations.

Word of Life's pastor, Russ Austin, invites the public to attend.

Thanksgiving service set

The Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance will sponsor two services for Thanksgiving. The first will be at 8 p.m. Sunday at Goodwill Baptist Church, 1508 S. Main St., and the

Rev. Grooms

Rice Brooks

Rev. Brust

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, November 24, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY:

Your optimism is a wonderful asset so long as it doesn't overrule your common sense. A miscalculation could prove costly. Medical science makes gains that could improve either your health or a loved one's. Financial pressure ease. Creative ideas will be richly rewarded. Consult marketing experts. Something you thought useless comes in very handy now. Ask loved one's forgiveness for a mistake. Romance blossoms anew. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: "A-Team" favorite Dwight Schultz, the Dodgers' Steve Yeager, columnist William F. Buckley Jr., author-producer-director Garson Kanin, author-lecturer Dale Carnegie, composer Scott Joplin, President Zachary Taylor.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Intellectual pursuits are favored. A discussion of current events entertains both family members and neighbors. Show respect for other people's opinions. Be more discreet about a former relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Seek advice from a friend or relative who knows you well. Someone may have contributed greatly in the past. Reward this person in a very special way. A domestic situation should be changed as quickly as possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It is possible to be clever without showing off. Think in terms of a long-term relationship instead of indulging a passing fancy. Short trips prove rewarding. A romance leads to marriage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep your social plans flexible and you can take advantage of a sudden invitation. A casual encounter could prove important to your future. Check your appearance before leaving home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spend the early part of the day with family or friends. An opportunity arises to mix business with pleasure. Be discreet. Others admire your loyalty.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone influential is very interested in your opinions. A piece of family history will be revealed today. Do not let your ambition interfere with family unity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Social events involving relatives prove very rewarding. Someone you trust could let you down unintentionally. Be forgiving. Listen to loved one's explanation. Singles find new romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A long-distance phone call brightens your day. Share good news with loved ones. An older person deserves more of your time. Romance is very much on your mind but should not interfere with family responsibilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Talking with someone who has been absent for a while can be both comforting and informative. Work out a schedule that allows you to spend more time with teen-agers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A pleasure trip is best postponed. Seek the company of old friends and nearby neighbors. A gala event proves very interesting without being unduly expensive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make a special effort to develop an untapped talent. Relatives continue to play an important role in your plans. Avoid becoming entangled in the financial affairs of an extravagant friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You usually succeed at whatever you attempt. Set aside some special time to spend with a parent or young child. Your encouragement means more than you realize. Tend to home repairs promptly.

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Noguchi says Tarnower killing accident, Harris should be pardoned

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — The killing of Scarsdale Diet developer Dr. Herman Tarnower was an accident and his former mistress Jean Harris should be pardoned, says the controversial former chief coroner of Los Angeles.

Thomas Noguchi said Thursday he would ask New York Gov. Mario Cuomo to pardon Mrs. Harris, who is in the fifth year of a 15-years-to-life prison term for shooting Tarnower, 69, in his home in Purchase on March 10, 1980.

Noguchi's findings had been published earlier in Good Housekeeping magazine. They also appear in his new book, "Coroner At Large," which came out Friday.

Noguchi said in the magazine that Tarnower's wounds — clustered in one area but angled differently — back up Mrs. Harris' story that she was trying to commit suicide and he was shot while struggling to stop her.

Noguchi has made controversial statements before. The former coroner was transferred from his Los Angeles job after making public statements about the deaths of celebrities.

may have finally found her own particular niche in show business.

Singing such melodic, moving standards as "I Am What I Am," the 5-foot-2, 95-pound Miss Zadora received similar reviews after her London performances a few weeks ago, said her husband and career financier, businessman Meshulam Riklis, who backed her poorly received movie career.

Remember "Lonely Lady" and "Butterfly?"

WASHINGTON (AP) — Biographer Edmund Morris, who won a Pulitzer Prize for a book about Theodore Roosevelt, confirmed Friday that he is being given special access to the White House to write a biography of President Reagan.

Morris, 45, is being granted interviews and allowed into meetings at the White House, according to a report in The Washington Post that Morris said is correct. He accompanied Reagan to Geneva for this week's superpower summit.

"It was irresistible from a biographical point of view, and we have come to an arrangement," Morris said.

Sources, who declined to be identified, said selection of Morris as the official biographer stems from a dinner party held on Feb. 14, 1983, by Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., a former political science professor.

"He thought it very important to get someone in a position to have first-hand knowledge of the Reagan years so that there would be an accurate record," said Rick Rolf, the senator's press secretary.

"The dinner was not held with any specific intent to get me to write the biography," Morris said. "At that time, I wasn't ready to think of another presidential biography."

He said he became more interested in the historical importance of the subject after Reagan's reelection.

Morris won the Pulitzer Prize for "The Rise of Theodore Roosevelt," published in 1979 as the first volume of a projected three-volume biography of the 26th president. He said he is now nearly finished with the biography.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, were among the guests at the Hatfield dinner. Others included Daniel J. Boorstin, the historian and librarian of Congress, and several biographers.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — "Hail Mary," a French film about the virgin birth of Jesus Christ that was banned out of Boston, opened Friday across the river in Cambridge to protests and counterprotests under police guard.

Two hours before the first show at 1:45 p.m., 60 people carrying rosary beads and paintings of the Virgin Mary began marching outside the Orson Welles Cinema, which decided to show the film after a major Boston theater chain canceled its run. No violence was reported.

The protesters, led by several priests and nuns, sang "Ave Maria" and recited prayers during the movie. Despite a freezing rain, the group walked in a slow procession, led by a priest carrying a cross atop a 6-foot-tall scepter.

Eight police officers, some hired by the theater and others ordered to the scene by city officials, patrolled inside and outside the theater.

"Don't dishonor Mary," shouted the protesters, who carried posters that said, "Mother of God, forgive us sinners," and "Will God forgive America?"

"I believe in freedom, do you?" one moviegoer repeatedly replied. Others shouted, "No censorship!"

"It's not offensive at all," Barry Burr said after watching the film. "If those people saw the movie, they'd put their signs down. It seemed to me like Marv gave into the will of God. It was a good movie."

Midland Lutheran Church to 'arise and build'

Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., is working on plans for a facility expansion. The proposed addition will include a new sanctuary, additional classrooms, a larger fellowship area and more parking space.

Charles Weisepaper headed the committee to study the needs of the congregation and the feasibility of expansion. Also serving on the building committee were Audni Hacke, Helen Leflar, Greg Oehler, Pat Orseth, Herman Porsch, Ron Reed and Clarence Tucker. Congregation president, Jim Orseth, and the pastors served as advisers to the committee. Pastors of Midland Lutheran, a member of the American Lutheran Church, are the Rev. Marvin Koenig and the Rev. Charles Meyer.

The building finance committee was chaired by George Hacke. Those serving on the committee were Terry Leflar, Marvin Peterson, Dale Stice, Don Tergerson and Greg Oehler.

POSITIVE THINKING

On Thanksgiving Day, try being thankful for yourself

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Thanksgiving Day — what a great invention! Historically it's an American tradition, and that's as it should be because we Americans have so much to be thankful for. Despite some faults and problems, despite all the critics, this is still a Heaven-blessed land — not only beautiful but productive, generous, religious, basically decent and free.

This year I have a faintly startling proposal to make. When you get around to counting your blessings on Thanksgiving Day, why not add one more to the list? Why not be thankful for you?

This is not an invitation to be smug or self-centered. It's a thought based on the very strong probability that day in and day out you don't appreciate yourself as much as you should. My old friend Dr. Smiley Balton, the eminent psychiatrist, once told me that the most common emotional ailment that he was called upon to deal with professionally was low self-esteem. "You'd be amazed," he said, "at how strong the tendency is in many people to exaggerate their faults and minimize their virtues. Very often, in such people, self-confidence is weakened until they can't cope with the tensions and pressures and problems of everyday living. And so they end up in my office."

Low self-esteem is a disease that is epidemic. One way to avoid it might be to follow the simple suggestion that forms the title of this article: "Try being thankful for you."

Why shouldn't you be thankful, whoever and wherever you are? Almost certainly there are other people who appreciate you and rely on you. Your husband. Or wife. Your children, if you have any. Friends who admire or love or care about you.

If you're a self-deprecating person perhaps you think you're a bit selfish at times. And perhaps you are. But what about all the other time? If you're a housewife, cooking, cleaning, making beds, doing the laundry, chauffeuring children all day long, how much of this effort is other-person directed? Most of it, right? If you're the family breadwinner, how much of the money you earn goes into things that benefit you exclusively? Ten percent? Five? Not much, certainly. So be thankful for yourself as a contributor to other people's happiness, because you undoubtedly are.

Be thankful for yourself, also, as a unique creation. Be aware of the fact that nobody else in the whole human race is exactly like you. Be thankful for the eyes you see with, the ears you hear with, the marvelous senses of taste and smell and touch. But be just as grateful for the smile, the sense of humor, the gestures, the tone of voice, the thousand little characteristics and mannerisms that make you so unmistakably you.

Be thankful, also, for the age you are, whatever that age may be. If you're young, give thanks for energy and vitality, for the spirit that challenges everything, for the determination to make the world even better than it is. If you're middle-aged, be thankful that you're at the peak of your productivity, that you've learned to be a problem-solver, that you have the will and the strength to carry heavy burdens cheerfully. If you're past middle age, be thankful that you've reached the point where you can truly be yourself, say what you think, give others the benefit of your wisdom and experience, watch the passing parade with affection — or march with it as long as you can keep time to the music.

Does this kind of thankfulness involve self-love? Yes, to some extent it does, but there's nothing wrong with that. We can never function successfully in life, or even love other people properly, unless we have a healthy amount of self-esteem. That's what the Bible is saying when it tells us to love our neighbor as ourselves.

"This is the day which the Lord has made," the psalmist sang. "We will rejoice and be glad in it." On Thanksgiving this year, why not alter that just a little and say to yourself, with quiet pride and satisfaction: "With all my faults, I am the living, breathing, feeling, caring, helping, struggling, loving creature that the Lord has made — the only one that He has made in exactly this way. Today and every day henceforth I will rejoice in this knowledge — and be glad in it!"

Non-readers are obstacle in spreading word

NEW YORK (AP) — Most people have become "habitual non-readers," says a Scripture specialist, a condition that has been added to illiteracy as an obstacle in regard to the Bible.

Unless it is "heard through the ears, the great majority of people in every country will not receive it," says the Rev. Tom Houston, president of World Vision and former head of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

He told the 1985 annual meeting of the American Bible Society:

"It is not just that the majority of people in the Third World are not yet literate or able to read. It is that the majority of people in our Western countries like the United States are habitual non-readers."

Male kindergarten teacher 'the best'

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) — Syd Armistead knew from his first school days that he wanted to be a teacher. "I had a blackboard I'd put on a tree, and I taught that tree everything I learned at school that day. I had the smartest tree in the neighborhood," he said.

From educating vegetation to planting the seeds of learning in young minds, Armistead's teaching career has been fruitful and interesting. A teacher at Killeen's East Ward Elementary School, he not only is a rarity in an education field long dominated by women, but also is a curiosity in his half of one percent of kindergarten teachers in the state who are male.

He is also a novelty in the Killeen Independent School District, being one of only 24 male elementary teachers, and the only such educator teaching a class lower than the fourth grade.

East Ward Principal Johnny Watson admitted that he had some qualms about having a male kindergarten teacher at his school. "Honestly, I was a little apprehensive. I had never met one before. After meeting Syd, however, I came to be aware that that is exactly what he should be. He's a loving, caring gentleman and the parents and children think the world of him. He's just the one to work with 5-year-olds," said Watson.

Dr. Tom Davis, assistant superintendent for personnel, said that male elementary teachers are hard to find, because "most males are more subject-matter oriented while the females seem more into the care of the child. Although we don't actively recruit male teachers, we do look with favor upon early elementary types."

Armistead made his home among the 5-year-olds after trying to teach other grades and finding it not as rewarding as his work with the younger children. He started with fourth-graders, but found it wasn't for him, then taught first grade for six years and is now in his second year of teaching kindergarten, a move he considers "the best I ever made."

"Kindergartners walk into a world they've never seen, and my challenge as an educator is to get them either to love school or hate school. I plant the seeds," he said. "I get to shape so many young lives.

I've seen little eyes open so wide to a world they didn't know existed. One little boy in class found everything so amazing, because his mom had never taken the time to explain things to him when they took a walk, such as what a stop sign meant."

The joy of discovery Armistead enjoys imparting to youngsters almost matches the wonderment with which he is greeted by the children themselves, who aren't quite sure how to regard this mountain of a man. Does he ever frighten the pupils?

"My dad wondered a lot about that, having this 6-foot 2-inch, 275-pound character with a beard greeting the little kids, but I don't think I've ever really scared them."

"Mostly, the kids like to pat and shake my tummy. They say things about my 'shelf' such as 'My daddy has one like that.' There's a song we sing about putting your knee to your chin and I can't do it, which makes the kids laugh because my 'shelf' gets in the way."

Armistead had the opportunity to meet more of his own kind at the Kindergarten Teachers of Texas Convention last month, where he found two other male kindergarten teachers who work in Brownsville.

"Toody Byrd, a wonderful woman I met at KTOT convention to which Mr. Watson sent me said 'The world of the kindergarten is all thighs and nostrils,' meaning that when they looked straight ahead it was at your thighs, and when they looked up, your nostrils were all they could see."

Crusader for handicapped angered she can't 'park it'

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Ruby DeGiovanni has an artificial knee and severe arthritis in her neck and spine, yet when she drove to her doctor's office in Massachusetts, police refused to let her park in a space reserved for the handicapped.

For disabled people, the lack of a national law entitling them to special parking spaces in any state sometimes means being humiliated when police ask them to move their cars.

It also results in longer walks and, sometimes, parking fines.

"It's just ridiculous," Mrs. DeGiovanni said. "If you're handicapped here, in Connecticut, you're handicapped in New York."

Last month, Mrs. DeGiovanni decided to do something about it.

Armed with a petition asking for a nationwide law, she began promoting her cause at shopping malls. After getting nearly 1,000 signatures, she sent the petition to U.S. Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn.

"People just don't realize that there is no such law," she said. "They just take it for granted that we can go anywhere and park...Why don't (politicians) do something for the handicapped?"

Mrs. DeGiovanni, 59, broke her leg in 1979 and has had two operations since. She often is troubled with severe arthritis and can walk or stand for only an hour or two at a time. She cares for her husband, Joe, who requires dialysis for kidney failure.

Gejdenson said he planned to draft legislation requiring all 50 states to acknowledge vehicles of handicapped people from other states. The measure would provide for denial of a portion of federal highway funds for states that failed to comply.

"Usually that is a pretty good way to get them to come around," Gejdenson said. "There shouldn't be any opposition; I think it's just an oversight. And then there's the difficulty of coordinating all 50 states. But this tells them very directly that unless there is a (national) recognition of handicapped parking, they will be penalized of some highway funds."

He said he believed current restrictions cause a major problem for the handicapped. "If you look at the amount of mobility that now exists for the handicapped, then they go to other states and find themselves getting fined for parking in what is designated parking for handicapped people," Gejdenson said.

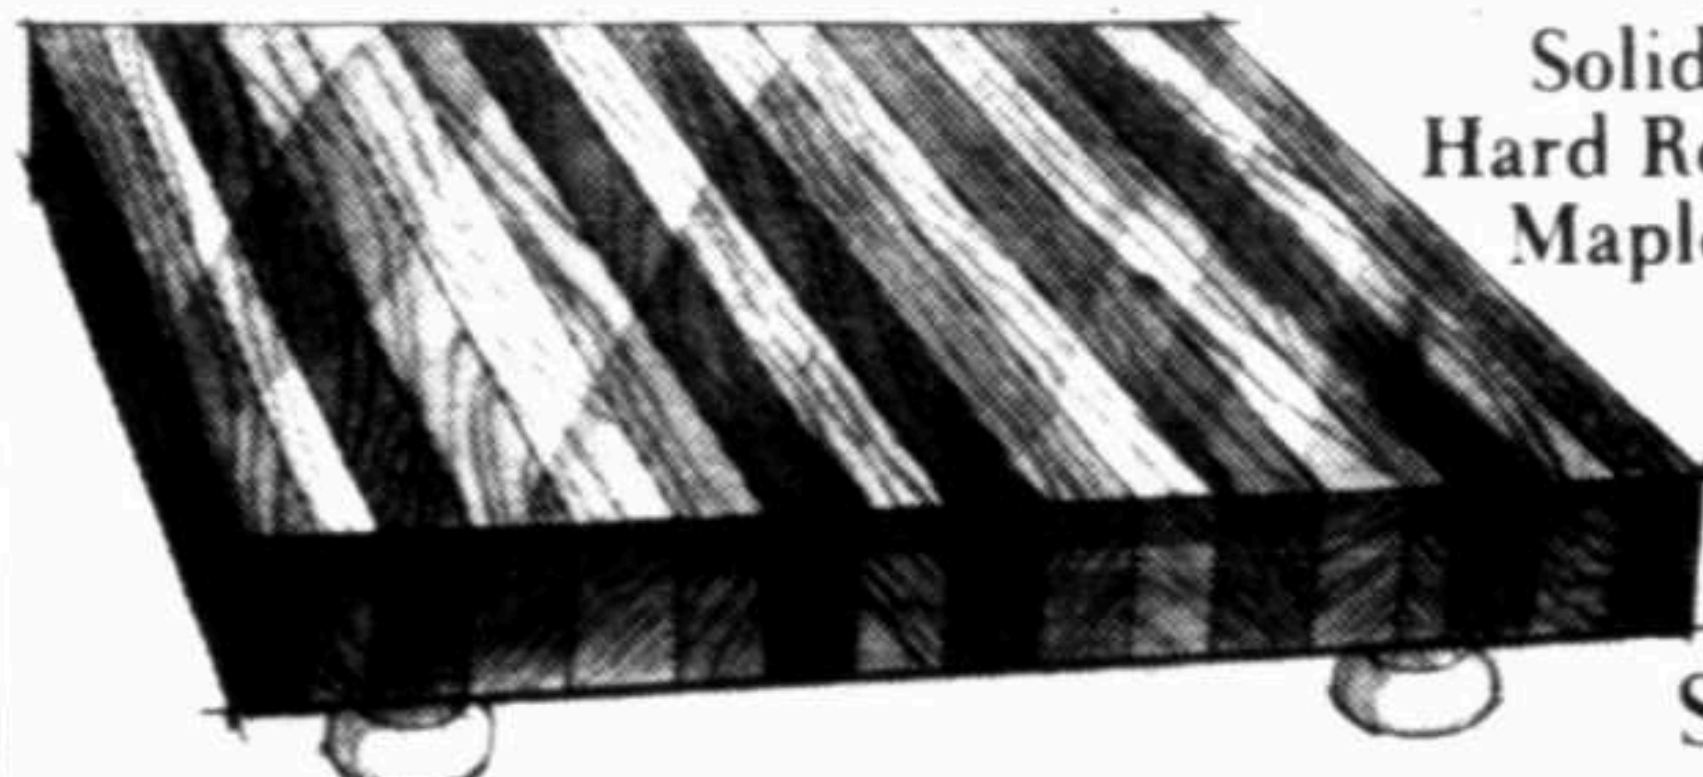

State Sen. Richard S. Eaton agreed that there was a need for a more uniform approach.

"Massachusetts specifically does not honor Connecticut's handicapped permits," he said.

Award-winning garden 'labor of love'

FAIRFIELD, Texas (AP) — Glass jars filled with the ruby red tomatoes, the deep green of peppers and the burnished gold of corn stand gleaming on shelves in a neat white house near here.

The homegrown fruits and vegetables are the reward of a spring and summer of labor for Bert and Evelyn Willard. But for them, it's a labor of love — and teamwork — that has brought other benefits as well, such as being named grand champions in the Freestone County Fruit and Vegetable Show each year since 1983.

Now the two can be seen on the cover of the November/December issue of Texas Gardener magazine as winners of a $500 prize in the first Texas Gardener of the Year contest. "Immaculate" is the word managing editor Rita Miller used to describe the Willards' half-acre garden that yielded some 3,000 pounds of tomatoes, 300 pounds of cucumbers, 250 pounds of squash and 200 pounds of beans.

"You could tell they put a great deal of love and care into their garden," Miller said. "It was beautifully kept."

The simple, old-fashioned garden was chosen from more than 60 entries statewide, including an ornamental aquatic garden and another divided into areas with different themes such as Japanese and English gardens.

BUT THE WILLARDS' garden was "well-rounded and representative of Texas gardens in general," Miller said. "They seem to have great success with all the major vegetable crops."

"You can't argue with what success they had," she said. Other crops harvested were 10 bushels of field corn, five of sweet corn, seven of peas, six of potatoes, three of eggplant and two of onions.

Willard's philosophy, he said, is to leave the land in better shape than he found it.

He's been gardening since he was 13 and, his wife said, "Experience is the best teacher."

But more than that is the cooperation between them. As Mrs. Willard said, "I doubt if there was a couple in there (the contest) that worked together as we do."

Such teamwork is a way of life for the Willards who, after some hard times and four children, still are quick to praise — and tease — each other.

The two Fairfield natives married in 1937. "He had less than $100 when we married. The first year after we married he worked for a dollar a day," Mrs. Willard recalled. "But we made it."

THE 22-YEAR-OLD BRIDE came prepared. "I had 40 quarts of fruits and vegetables canned before we got married," Mrs. Willard said, as well as five quilts.

A carpenter for more than 30 years, Willard did some shipbuilding in Houston for five years — the only time they didn't have a garden — before returning with his family to Mrs. Willard's home place south of Fairfield in 1947.

"We had four good children," Mrs. Willard said. "They were brought up to mind. I never had to pick up toys."

She probably didn't have time, between gardening, housekeeping and working as county extension agent secretary. She often canned and preserved until midnight, she said, then rose at 5 the next morning to fix breakfast and prepare lunches for her family before going to her job.

"I enjoyed doing it," Mrs. Willard said, crediting her husband with gathering and preparing the fruits and vegetables to be processed. Did all that work save them money?

"Oh my goodness, I guess it did," Mrs. Willard said. "There we were with four children, and they're all big eaters just like we are."

And Willard said their children have commented, "We never did have a lot of money, but Dad never did let us go hungry."

"DAD" STILL LOOKS out for daughter Gloria Smith of Fairfield and sons Irv, Dan and Don Willard, all of Houston. The four helped harvest this year's garden, and got plenty of good food to take home to their families in return.

Irv Willard also helped his parents by making a photographic album of the garden from beginning to end to submit to the Texas Gardener contest.

The Willards' award-winning garden, though picturesque, doesn't have any special systems or fancy equipment. The sandy loam soil is prepared by plowing, discing and tilling, with planting beginning in mid-March or April.

When plants begin fruiting, side-dressing of 10-20-10 fertilizer is applied, using two pounds per 100-foot row. Willard puts on a lot of mulch, keeps the soil in good till and hopes for adequate, gentle rains. "Heavy rain can take its toll on your garden," he said, when plants "get no air to the roots."

After a sudden heavy rain, he said, one can rake around the plants to loosen the soil if care is taken not to disturb the roots.

The Willards raise their own tomato plants in seedbeds, using lights and a plastic covering. In the garden, the plants are spaced three feet apart in rows that are five feet apart, Willard said. "We always plant them on the ridge so they won't drown out," he said.

WHEN THE PLANTS are six or eight inches high, he unrolls 24-inch hogwire between them and secures it with stakes to keep the plants from blowing over.

In that way, Mrs. Willard said, the tomatoes are easy to pick, and are kept off the ground so they won't rot.

Despite his 71st birthday coming up Christmas Day, Willard spends long hours in the garden. Mrs. Willard said she tells him, "You're working to kill yourself," only to hear his standard rejoinder, "No, I'm working to stay alive."

And evidently the hard work and outdoor lifestyle has suited both.

A welcome part of gardening, said Willard, is taking a break to sit with a big glass of home-brewed tea beneath the linden tree that towers over their home.

You can see the garden from there, filled with all kinds of vegetables in the growing season, and lined with cheerful rows of the bright flowers that are Mrs. Willard's specialty.

Her husband can get a little put out when visitors ignore his vegetables to exclaim over her marigolds, Mrs. Willard said.

"They'll say, 'Your flowers are so pretty,' and they won't say anything about his vegetables," she said, laughing. Willard said he threatens not to give visitors any of the fresh produce until he gets a compliment.

But you can see it's an empty threat since neighbors, friends and others are kept in ample supply of the Willards' fresh, canned and preserved goods.

"The Lord was good enough to give it to us," said Mrs. Willard. "We can share it."

Guilty mother says she'll curb delinquent hot rodding tot

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — A 4-year-old boy who raced his motorized three-wheeler at 35 mph and ran stop signs won't be hot-rodding on streets anymore, his mother said as she pleaded guilty to contributing to his delinquency.

Regina A. Scott, 25, told told Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court Judge E. Preston Grissom earlier this week she would supervise William's outings, keep him off public thoroughfares and rig his Yamaha to keep it from exceeding 15 mph.

In a plea bargain, Ms. Scott pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and a felony child neglect charge was dropped.

William seemed unperturbed by the legal wrangling. As five lawyers and the judge discussed the legal intricacies of the case, the boy crawled under the courtroom's wooden benches.

Polygamist pursues 100 wives

EDITOR'S NOTE: Polygamy is illegal, but not unknown, in India. Unless police get a complaint, they simply ignore multiple marriages. Indeed, Udaynath Dakshin Ray is something of a celebrity in his village, a master of matrimony.

BY SANTOSH BASAK
Associated Press Writer

ORALI, India — It is said that Krishna, the fertility god of the cowherds and a favorite of the shepherdesses in Hindu mythology, had as many as 32,000 lovers.

India's Mogul emperors and maharajas had harems of nubile maidens numbering in the hundreds.

Keeping that lusty legacy alive today is a 61-year-old patent medicine salesman who claims to have wed 89 women and lost an inherited fortune in the process.

But Udaynath Dakshin Ray, a contented, if broke, local celebrity, vows to make it an even 100.

"I must have 100 wives before I die and I will," says Ray, who is planning to take a 19-year-old as his next bride. "The only intoxication in my life is sex, and I love it."

With a wink and a grin, he claims he already has offers from seven prospective brides.

Ray's amorous exploits are part of the accepted lore in this village in eastern Orissa state, 90 miles south of Calcutta. His neighbors, the police, and his current and former wives all agree that Ray is a master of matrimony.

But everyone, except Ray, has lost count. And no one cares, except Ray. He's obsessed.

"A young woman makes a man younger in mind, body and spirit," says Ray, whose library is filled with books on film heroines and sexual fitness. "A woman is a man's better half, so many women only make a better man."

Polygamy is illegal but not unknown in India, especially in rural areas where a rich man sometimes takes several wives.

Ray's marriages may be a record of sorts. His claims were widely reported in the Indian press. But the Guinness Book of World Records only lists the record number of marriages in traditionally monogamous countries.

Ray says his marital adventures began 36 years ago when his 15-year-old first wife abandoned him. Two weeks after their marriage, he went back to Calcutta for school finals and she returned to her father's village. She never came back.

"My first wife pushed me into this by leaving me," Ray snarls. "The humiliation was unbearable. People gossiped."

Ray vowed to prove that he was virile and desirable. "I decided to fill my bed with women, to marry 99 other girls to hit a century."

Two years later he married again. He hasn't stopped since.

Ray now lives under the same thatched roof with one wife and visits another regularly in another house he owns in the village.

Ray, a slender, pleasant-looking man, says he once had 16 squabbling, competing spouses living together under one roof. Most walked out in disgust.

He doesn't know the whereabouts of many of his mates over the years. Some died and most abandoned him. Many just went back to their families, but some divorced him and sued for his property. He says he has only 11 children, including three at home.

Ray says there are precedents of polygamy in Hindu mythology and Indian history. He says that by one account Krishna had 32,000 lovers.

"Even my grandfather had three wives, my uncle had four and my father had two," Ray says. "So why not me?"

The seventh and eighth wives of Udaynath Dakshin Ray, 61, the "master of matrimony," ride in a cart as they visit relatives at a village near Orali, India. Ray has been married 89 times, and says there are precedents of polygamy in Hindu mythology.

AP Laserphoto

"I must have 100 wives before I die and I will. The only intoxication in my life is sex, and I love it."

— Udaynath Dakshin Ray
Indian patent-medicine salesman

But that has not discouraged him from marrying poor girls who bring him gifts. He spends less than $8 on weddings these days.

"The new wife will have to live with me in poverty," he says. "If she likes it, she stays. If she doesn't, she goes home. I never try to bring them back. I just marry again."

Although Ray is breaking the law, he shrugs. "Never mind the law, it has not stopped me yet and it cannot stop me."

A local police superintendent agrees, tolerantly calling Ray "a much-married man." Unless there is a formal complaint, the police do nothing, explained Officer Gour Chandra Kar. No one has complained.

Most of his neighbors like Ray, don't care about his personal affairs, and appreciate his kindness in treating poor villagers who are ill. Many don't know that bigamy is against the law.

Ray, asked the secret of his success and stamina, said he is a teetotaler, doesn't drink coffee or tea, and doesn't smoke.

"I will tell you my secret," he says. "If an old man like me can marry young women, he will become young."

Trauma care center deals with precious minutes

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six years ago, researchers in Orange County, Calif., found that 70 percent of the people who died of severe trauma at hospitals without trauma centers could have been saved. Today, despite resistance from some sectors of the medical community, teams of surgeons are cheating death as never before at 165 severe trauma centers across the country.

By GARY LANGER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Bronx launderer Larry Chin died with a bullet in his head. Five minutes later, his heart in a doctor's hand, Chin lived again.

The "save" did not hold: Chin's brain was damaged, and a day later, his heart stopped for good. But Dr. Rolando Sanchez's efforts bespoke the drama, and some of the controversy, of one of medicine's newest specialties.

Trauma surgery, techniques honed on the battlefields of Southeast Asia, is reaching to hospitals across the United States. Teams of surgeons are restarting hearts, sealing slashed veins, replanting torn limbs — cheating death — as never before.

Cases such as Chin's raise questions about the quality of some lives that may be preserved by trauma surgeons, and the issue of when to halt aggressive lifesaving techniques. But most cases, where brain damage is not involved, are celebrations of the lifesaver's craft.

Take Brigitte Gerney: Legs crushed by a capsizing crane, she spent nearly six hours pinned to the ground at a midtown Manhattan construction site in May. Trauma crews sedated her, stabilized her condition, then, when she at last was freed, stopped rush hour traffic to speed her to an operating room.

The prognosis for saving her legs? Excellent, doctors say.

OR BISWANATH ROY: Kidnapped as he stepped into his car, tortured, knifed seven times, then dumped into a ditch to die, he arrived at Sanchez's emergency room bleeding so profusely, the doctor recalled, "You could hear it."

"In the car I thought, yes, that's the end of my whole life," says Roy, a 56-year-old gynecologist. "But at the hospital... I thought I was going to make it. I didn't believe I could die here at the hospital. They are experts."

Saving Roy — and the hundreds of thousands of others treated successfully for severe trauma last year — took more than traditional surgical expertise. It also took sheer speed, the principle at the root of trauma treatment.

ANY INJURY, ACCIDENTAL or intentional, constitutes trauma. But when the injuries are serious or numerous they begot shock, and the body, overwhelmed by the damage, quickly begins to shut down.

Dr. Rolando Sanchez examines the incision scars of former trauma treatment patient Dr. Biswanath Roy at New York's Jacoby Hospital.

"Shock is a momentary pause in the act of death," says Dr. R. Adams Cowley, a Maryland physician and early exponent of trauma care in the United States. "If you don't do something about it, the patient is going to die."

Cowley, researching shock for the U.S. surgeon general in 1958, discovered what he called "the golden hour" — the time in which a trauma victim, whether crumpled in a wrecked car or blasted by a land mine, can be saved.

"Within 60 precious minutes, you have to be seen by the right people at the right time in the right place," Cowley says. "Or you won't survive."

His concept, joined with the experience of military surgeons in Vietnam, grew into the trauma care system: networks of ambulances and helicopters ready to speed badly injured people to specially equipped hospital emergency rooms where surgeons are on 24-hour call.

"We went around this bugaboo of going to the nearest hospital because if you go to the nearest hospital and they don't have the stuff to take care of you, you're dead," Cowley says. "In years gone by it was one hell of a battle, because doctors thought it was interfering with their business."

SOME OF THAT resistance has softened since Cowley set up a nine-center trauma system for Maryland in 1973. There now are 165 severe trauma centers in the United States — from New York's 11-center system, begun in 1982, to the one at San Francisco General Hospital, founded in 1966.

The spread of the centers, though still too slow and fragmented for Emergency Medical Service technician Mark Watin and paramedic Lenny Schneider, from left, treat an elderly man who fell out of a three-story window in University Heights, in the Bronx.

Cowley and many of his colleagues, has been fueled by studies that show their success. Six years ago, researchers in Orange County, Calif., found that 70 percent of the people who died of severe trauma at hospitals without trauma centers could have been saved. At hospitals with trauma centers, the "preventable death rate" was only 4 percent.

"Nobody believed that trauma centers made a difference until 1979," says Dr. Donald Trunkey, chief of surgery at San Francisco General and a director of that study. "We showed a major reduction in trauma death after the institution of the system."

The figure is significant because of the toll trauma takes on society. About 160,000 people died of it last year, an estimated 20,000 of whom could have been saved by prompt and proper care. For every death, there were two permanently disabling injuries.

"THE COST TO is absolutely staggering," Trunkey says. He noted the National Safety Council's estimate that trauma, including medical expenses, lost wages and productivity losses, costs the nation about $250 million a day.

One reason is that most trauma victims are young people with decades of productivity ahead of them. Motor vehicle accidents account for 55 percent of trauma injuries, and the average person killed in a highway crash is 28.

"He's got 40 years of productivity ahead of him, if you can patch him up," Trunkey says. "You can't patch him up unless you can get him to the hospital and you've got the surgeons there."

West Germany has proved the point: The government established 27 trauma centers along its autobahn network in 1970, and in the ensuing decade, deaths on the highways fell from 16,000 to 12,000 a year.

Proponents say the value of lives saved by trauma care far exceeds the high cost of the centers, where a patient's bills can reach $70,000 in a few days — the kind of money that fosters competition among some hospitals to be designated trauma centers by state or local authorities.

"Trauma centers make significant amounts of revenue because of the kind of care they render," says Dr. Steve Merson, an associate of Cowley's at the National Study Center for Trauma and Emergency Medical Systems. For that reason, he says, "A lot of hospitals are looking to put up the shingle."

At the core of the system are the trauma surgeons — many of them former combat surgeons in Vietnam — whose daily experience at handling trauma cases enables them to respond by reflex to the injuries they see.

"You're working so fast that you don't have time to worry about the pressure," Sanchez says.

Biswanath Roy arrived at Jacoby Hospital soaked in blood, suffering the kind of injuries "that cause a trauma surgeon to shudder," Sanchez says. The worst were two deep stab wounds at the base of Roy's neck, one that had nicked the jugular vein. The only way to reach the damage was through the upper chest.

Sanchez and his team wasted no time. "We took out the collarbone, split open the breastbone and opened the chest like a window," Sanchez says. "We opened him up like a book. He was close to dying. If we didn't do something, and do the right thing, he was going to die."

Roy lived to thank his doctors for their effort. "They did the best they could do — quickly, promptly and efficiently. And my body coped with it," he says. "It was a joint thing. I cooperated, they cooperated and the result is good."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department on Friday picked its Hanford National Laboratory to develop and test a 300-kilowatt atomic reactor for use in space to power the exotic lasers, radars and particle-beam weapons for a "Star Wars" missile defense system.

The revival of work on space-based nuclear power is largely prompted by President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, as the Star Wars program is known formally. But scientists see the compact reactors someday powering better communications and air traffic control satellites, probes to the outer planets and, eventually, even a manned space flight to Mars.

"To put a spacecraft in orbit around Neptune with chemical propellants alone would require a flight time of more than 20 years," said Herbert Davis, planning manager for the SP-100 space reactor program at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

"A 100-kilowatt nuclear-electric propulsion system could cut this time in half."

The Energy and Defense departments and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration launched the SP100 program in 1983 after Pentagon and NASA officials concluded that batteries and solar cells now used on most satellites cannot produce the amounts of energy needed for space-based weapons.

The Hanford lab, at Richland, Wash., was picked by Energy Secretary John Herrington over four other national laboratories vying to be the test site in the $480 million program to have a reactor ready for space use in the early 1990s.

The four other Energy Department labs that were in the competition are in Albuquerque, N.M., Idaho Falls, Idaho, Oak Ridge, Tenn., and at the Nevada atomic weapons test site 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

Woman died to survive p

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A woman who crash-landed a plane after her husband collapsed at the controls said from her hospital bed Friday that she never expected to walk away from the aircraft.

"My only thought was, if Joe and I are going to die, we are going to go solo." Ella Faye Wilcoxson said at a news conference at Washington Regional Medical Center, where she is recuperating from bruises and a sore back. "I consider myself very lucky."

Mrs. Wilcoxson, 45, of Anchorage, Alaska, radioed a mayday message that her husband had died and that she was at the controls of the twin-engine Cessna Skymaster.

Goodrich said she told him just before the crash, "I'm coming in out of er this month for the program, has been conducted at Hanford and Oak Ridge.

The government spent between $3 billion and $4 billion from 1955 to 1978 on developing atomic reactors for use in space, but work on the program slowed to a trickle in the middle 1970s.

So far, the United States has put only one reactor into the heavens, the 500-watt SNAP (Systems for Nuclear Auxillary Power) model 10A, in 1965. It worked for just 43 days before shutting down prematurely because of an electronics mishap.

But interest was reviving even before Reagan announced his plans to accelerate research for a Star Wars defensive shield against nuclear missiles. In early 1983, the House Science and Technology Committee was told that existing military communications satellites were vulnerable to electromagnetic forces from hostile nuclear explosions.

With more energy available from nuclear reactors, Pentagon officials said, those satellites could use less energy-efficient but much more rugged integrated circuits.

NASA officials also began concluding that solar cells, batteries and radioisotope thermoelectric generators now used in satellites are too bulky, too heavy or too expensive for some of the long-term civilian space programs.

For example, it would take a large nuclear-electric propulsion system to make a manned voyage to Mars possible.

"With a six-megawatt nuclear power plant, a five-man crew could travel to Mars in about 600 days, stay for 30 days and return in 270 days," Davis said in an article written for the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers.

A six-megawatt reactor would be 20 times the size of the SP-100 model to be developed at Hanford. But it would be only a fraction of 1 percent the size of nuclear power plants now generating some 15 percent of the nation's electricity.

the clouds, guys, and I don't think I have any power."

They then lost contact with the craft, which crashed in a pasture about three miles north of Drake Field, the Fayetteville airport.

Mrs. Wilcoxson, still wearing the plane's radio headset, was hurled from the cockpit into ankle-high grass.

On Friday, Mrs. Wilcoxson thanked well-wishers and "the general aviation crew for their help in getting me down out of the sky."

Mrs. Wilcoxson said the ordeal was overwhelming.

"Fortunately, Joe is one of those people that when you ask what time it is, tells you how to build a watch. I knew quite a bit about airplanes — where most of the controls are and what they do," she said. "I didn't know how to operate the air flaps. And flying a plane without the flaps is sort of like driving a car without any gas pedal or brakes."

She also had some advice for those who fly with others: "They should learn at least how to land."

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A woman who crash-landed a plane after her husband collapsed at the controls said from her hospital bed Friday that she never expected to walk away from the aircraft.

4. Newly advanced 138 twin-rotor engine with Six Port Induction and supercharger-like Dynamic Effect Induction System; 140 hp at 6400 rpm, 138 lb.-ft. torque at 3500 rpm. A flattened torque curve in the 2500-5000 rpm range: 0.60 mph in 8.0 seconds.
5. Sophisticated, powerful new micro-function system combine to fine-tune all phases of engine performance through sensors monitoring functions from throttle position to rpms to exhaust.

6. Special 5-speed overdrive with hydraulic clutch linkage provides tight, interactive feel, precise shift action.

7. Inclined single A-arm, modified strut front suspension. Toe-in, camber, neutral; caster, 5° positive. Special double-actuator bushings resist lateral forces to enhance direct steering feel, yet flex easily to

8. Ventilated front disc brakes with single-piston sliding calipers, extra-large pads. Sport package and GXL have racing-type 4-piston fixed-caliper discs.

9. 14-inch wheels, 185/70HR steel-belted radials (Luxury Package aluminum alloy wheels shown). 15-inch alloy wheels, 205/60VR low-profile performance radials standard for GXL and for the Sport Package.

10. New rack-and-pinion steering system combines smooth, quick maneuvering control, with tight steering feel.

11 Air-skirted side mirrors, single-panel doors, flush glass, sculptured fenders, and unibody construction lend structural integrity and design unity, and smooth air flow, cut wind noise.

1.2 Wide-track stance, front and rear stabilizer bars, low center of gravity, and near-perfect balance of weight between front and rear wheels contribute to RX-7's incredibly sure road poise.

13. New Dynamic Tracking Suspension System uses the rear wheels to actually help steer you through tight turns with new agility and precision. Unique Triaxial Floating Hubs provide sophisticated "toe control" to steer rear wheels from "toe out" to "toe in" for better control.

- to neutral to 10-in<sup>3</sup> automatically and provide optimum maneuverability and stability in all situations
- 14 Separable front and suspension mountings neutralize negative interaction between these components, maximizing new rear suspension functions
- 15 New camber control system helps maintain peak rear wheel traction and road control through corners and over bumps
- 16 Single-piston, aluminum sliding-caliper rear disc brakes. For Sport Package and GXL ventilated rear discs
- 17 Sophisticated double-arc contoured on-piece rear hatch with 18.5° angle provides near-ideal air management
- 18 Vertically-mounted compact spare tire just inside hatch opening allows quick, easy access. Precision scissors tire 3.7 pound aluminum jack, standard equipment
- 19 Luxury Package exterior features shown include 14-inch aluminum alloy wheels, dual electric mirror control mirrors, electric "roof-top spoiler" sunroof
