By OZELLE STEPHENS

"Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as you have; for he hath said, I will never leave you, nor forsake you." (Hebrews 13:5)

Beginning the New Year our thoughts turn back to the decades behind us. We name the decades as "The Roaring Twenties", the fifties as "Happy Days", the seventies as "Great Changes". Now we look toward the eighties, some have already named them "Awesome Eighties".

When we try to look ahead to the ten years that are stretched out before us, the prospect looks awesome. All we know is that our lives are going to be drastically: Marriages, children being born, and growing up. It's nearly frightening when we think of world conditions.

We must begin the era standing steadfast on the Word of God and His promises. We must tell one another often that our greatest need will be God and His Son, Jesus Christ. His word is the solid rock on which to stand, the Holy Spirit is a sure guide, who will take us through it all safely. Because of the Cross we can live in the company of Jesus Christ; under the shadow of the Almighty. Seek Him daily and He will never leave or forsake you.

O'Brien Happenings

By CHARLENE BROTHERS

(LAST WEEK'S NEWS)

Here I thought I would have one week of not having to worry about getting anything to the paper, and they call me Friday and ask if I could make up something to have in the next week's paper. I told Billye I might have to make up something, for sure. There has not been much going on here since last Monday. Everyone is getting ready for Christmas. The gin crews are going to get off three whole days, Sunday, Monday, and Christmas Day. Probably no one will be able to sleep late, you know how that goes, you get so used to getting up early and when you get time off, then you cannot sleep past the time you have been getting up. Or, at least, we find it that way at our house. At least we will not have to worry around and get to the gin on time.

The Miss Merry Christmas Pageant was very good. All the girls looked so pretty. I'm sure it was hard to decide which girl should have first place. I'm glad I did not have to make that decision, with all the parents and grandparents that were in the audience, it would be very hard. Of course everyone knew, or should have, when they entered their child, that her chances of winning were approximately 73 to 1. So maybe no one was disappointed. They were all winners in my book, it takes something to just get up in front of all those people and walk across the stage. Starting out as early as some of these have, maybe by the time they are grown it will be easier for them than it is for me. I can talk to all the farmers at one time in the gin office, but when I get up on that stage at the gin meeting to read the minutes, I just nearly die. I do not know what I will do if I'm called on to make a speech during my campaign for County Tax Assessor-Collector this next year, guess I'll survive some way.

The Christmas season has already come my way several times this week. I have received gifts from several people and I really appreciate them and I thank each of you. You know it makes you feel good to give a gift to your friends. Try giving one to someone that will not get as much as you, and see how that makes you feel! Especially the little children, they are the ones that Christmas is for anyway. I guess all of us are really just overgrown children, since we all enjoy getting gifts.

I hope you had a good Christmas and do have a Happy New Year. If you are traveling, be very careful of the driver in the car that is behind the one in front of you. Sometimes these can be the ones to really look out for.

I know we are going to be so busy the first few days in January that I am already trying to save some time for them, if this were just possible.

(Editor's Note: Charlene called in this week to explain that the close of the year at the O'Brien Coop Gin was going to be so busy that she would be unable to get any news in for our early deadline. We do appreciate her efforts every week and hope that maybe after all of the holidays, we can get back to a regular routine.)

Stenholm Friends To Host Party

STAMFORD - Local friends of Charles and Cindy Stenholm are hosting a home town party for them on Tuesday night January 8, at the Catholic Parish Hall in Stamford beginning at 7:00 p.m.

Congressman Stenholm has indicated that he will announce his future political plans at that time. Area citizens are looking forward to the opportunity to get a first hand report on life in the national's capitol and visit with the Stenholm family.

The schedule of the Congress has made it very difficult for the Stenholms to get back home as much as they would have liked during 1979. This occasion will afford an opportunity for longtime friends to visit on an informal basis and everyone is urged to join in welcoming them to Stamford after their first full year in Washington, D.C.

Pace-Maker, A New Lease On Life

(Editor's Note: The following article appeared in a recent issue of a Coalinga, California, paper concerning a former Knox City resident, Don Griffith, who now resides there. Because of Don's friends here, we are using the article in its entirety.)

By ROBERTA MECHALIS

On October 15, 1979, Don Griffith got a new lease on life. His life had been saved. He has one of six pace-maker instruments in the world to monitor the beating of both chambers of his heart. It was a Texas-made pace-maker saving a Texas man. The small, matchbook size pace-maker was designed with the help of Dr. Robert Chambers of Fresno by Intermedics, Inc., of Freeport, Texas.

Griffith went to Dr. Chambers, was hospitalized and had another heart attack in the hospital. Dr. Chambers had this special pacemaker sent to Fresno, instead of to Stanford Hospital for which it was made. Two engineers accompanied the instrument to Fresno and watched the 4½ hour operation.

Don Griffith, 53, was a successful printer, shop foreman of the print shop for the Glastron Boat Company, photographing, and showing the products to their best in catalogues to be sent all over the world. But his heart condition worsened, even after having open heart surgery and receiving a heart bypass operation. Subsequently, he retired from his job, and restricted his activity. He lived with the fear of another heart attack, perhaps a fatal one. After leaving his home in Austin, he came to Coalinga

First Federal Offers New Certificate

STAMFORD - A new 2½ year, high-interest money market savings certificate is now available with a minimum of only $100, according to John Harrell, president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Stamford.

The interest rate, set by the Federal agencies which regulate financial institutions, will be tied to the rate paid on 2½ year Treasury Department securities. That's currently between ten and twelve percent.

"A certificate of deposit is the same thing as putting money in a savings account, except that you deposit a fixed amount for a fixed time," Harrell said.

"There are more than half a dozen types of savings accounts available," stated Harrell. "A rundown of the basic offerings follows:

"Passbook Savings. This is your everyday account. Its biggest advantage is what's known as liquidity. You can put your money in today and take it out tomorrow. First Federal pays 5½ percent a year.

"Savings Certificates. These accounts pay more than passbook savings, but you have to agree to leave your money on deposit for a fixed period and there is a minimum deposit of $100 or $1,000, depending on the length of time your money is pledged.

"Here is a list of certificates including the new 2½ year C.D., and annual interest rates.

*3-month certificates - 6 percent.

*1 year and 2½ years - 6½ percent and 6¾ percent, respectively.

*2½ years - savings and loans will pay half a percentage point below the average for 2½ year Treasury

SERVICES OF THE CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST

The Southside and Bethel Churches in Abilene told of how the Lord greatly blessed the revival held down there last week.

Evangelist Dennis Williams of California preached during the revival and people were saved and filled with the Holy Ghost.

Sunday school had a very good attendance with Supt. Smith in charge. In the morning service Missionary Wilson brought the major lesson from Joshua 3:1, 10. Missionary Ware conducted the morning mission service.

We were happy to have Mrs. Lou Ada Gardner of Galveston to visit with us.

The Mission Joint Meeting was held at the Rule Church with the president, Mother Sanders, in charge.

Mother Sanders taught the major lesson Sunday evening. Her subject was "He Looked Beyond My Faults and Saved My Needs".

YPWW was the last service of the day here.

The Union Joint Meeting was held in Abilene at Southside on the fourth Sunday. Evangelist Dennis Williams preached that day from St. John 4:1, 6, "Jesus Needed in the City", a great message.

Houndette Basketball Results

By COACH McILHANEY

The Houndettes finished the old year right with a 48-46 overtime win over Guthrie. The team played very well in the early going and when times got hard in the late going the team came back to play well and pull out a victory. Over all this could have been the best game that we have played. Our scoring was good from start to finish. Our defense did a fine job when needed.

The team will start the new year with a 10-6 record with 13 games remaining. If we can continue improving in our scoring we could win most or all our games.

Our defense has been good all year, holding our opponents to 31 points a game. Our freethrow percentage has improved and our press is causing problems for our opponents and giving us some easy baskets. Scoring will be the key to our success. If we keep the same hustle and desire going in the other aspects of our game.

(Editor's Note: The closing of the Santa Fe Depot in Knox City was a sad experience for many here including Z.I. Smith, local agent for the past twenty years. Smith furnished the News office with the following clipping from the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, so old it had yellowed with age, but because the description of the old depots brings memories to many, we thought it would be appropriate to reproduce the article in its entirety. Seems as though, with the energy shortage, trains should be making a comeback rather than becoming obscure.)

SOME THOUGHTS: On Train Stations

By ROGER SUMMERS
Star-Telegram Writer

They were vibrant with life, those train stations were, some small, some large but each one big as all of life in its own way.

Each had its own personality. Each had its own characteristics. Yet each was alike, in so many ways.

They came, of course, as that new mode of transportation huffed and puffed across the nation, community by community linking the country a little closer together.

And the moment they came, they were a focal point of the community.

A place for sad goodbyes.

A place for joyful reunions.

A place for daydreaming of a someday trip, of wonder about where the tracks could take you.

They were the place of warm, pot-bellied stoves, of big wall clocks, of high ceiling fans, of friendly station masters and freight wagons and mail bag hooks.

And memories.

There were some 40,000 of them, they say, and now maybe half of them are gone.

Gone in the name of progress.

Gone in the wake of the demolition man.

Gone to become an architectural loss, a community loss, a personal loss. And those that remain? Some still in use as train stations, of course. But some ignored. Some boarded up. Some rotting. Some peeling.

But some have found new uses, uses such as antique shops, eating places, museums. Even use as a church here and there.

And each that remains is a gentle reminder of a time, of a way that was and, in that, they have their greatest use.

solidated hearing was scheduled for December 6 in Austin.

The commission may need more than fill-in-the-blank forms to overcome the sense of futility some small-town shippers feel when opposing railroad plans. The Knox City case, featured in our earlier article, is one of the best examples of just how much weight local shippers can expect their protests to carry.

The Knox City case has been notable for the community support behind the depot; the parties protesting Santa Fe Railway's application include the mayor, the president of the chamber of commerce, and a banker. In spite of objections from the community and the railroad's customers, Houchins has recommended that the depot be closed and that business from Knox City and the neighboring towns of O'Brien and Benjamin be handled through the depot at Rule, eighteen miles away. The proposal will go before the RRC in early December for a final decision.

Meanwhile, local shippers are starting to give up on the railroads. The O'Brien Co-operative Gin Company, for instance, is switching to truck transportation of its carload lots of cotton. The reason: by agreement with the railroads, cotton buyers across the state have stopped paying freight charges from gin points to compression points, which means the O'Brien co-op must pick up a 53-cents-per-hundredweight charge between O'Brien and Hamlin that it didn't pay last season. Gin manager Samuel Tankersley said a local motor carrier who offered cheaper and more reliable service is now trucking the cotton to Hamlin, two counties away.

The railroad squeeze on small-town Texas has been compounded by boxcar shortages. At the end of last season, Tankersley complained in a letter to Houchins about the Santa Fe's "boxcar shortage which has delayed shipping and has necessitated the movement of cotton by motor truck, at greater expense, to meet marketing commitments." Now the co-op is experiencing its biggest season in about ten years and expects to ship between 18,000 and 20,000 bales. But the railroad couldn't guarantee boxcars for O'Brien, and trucks started to look like a good idea.

To W.R. Baker's way of thinking, that's about the worst thing that could happen. Baker is president of the Knox City chamber of commerce and a party to the protest against the depot closing. He says we ought to be relying on fuel-efficient trains to move more and more of our freight, but by gradually cutting back on services the railroads are forcing small-town customers to use trucks. Railroads long ago surrendered their less-than-carload business to motor carriers (some of which are railroad subsidiaries); Baker doesn't want to see small-town carload freight go the same route. "We need our rail system. It's just going to be important," he said.

Although the RRC examiner has recommended that Knox City's depot be closed in spite of its admitted profitability for the railroad, the local protesters convinced him to make one concession. Houchins revised the proposed final order to require an extra clerk at the depot in Rule who would handle business from Knox City during peak harvesting seasons in October, November, December, January, and June. Santa Fe has filed an exception to that recommendation, contending that an extra clerk would be needed only during June. Specifically, the railroad requested "that language be added allowing discretion as to when an additional clerk might be necessary."

"Discretion" is exactly what K.O. Richardson, regional legislative director for the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, would like to see left out of the final order. Richardson filed an exception against an earlier draft of the order and requested that details of the clerk's employment be spelled out. Personal contact and prompt service were the major concerns of shippers who protested the closing. As Z.I. Smith, the Santa Fe agent at Knox City, pointed out, the Rule depot already serves three communities; closing the Knox City depot will add three more. And when a harvest is in full swing, everybody wants cars and bills of lading at the same time. To insure that shippers can get service when they need it, Richardson "wanted the language tight enough that the provision would be followed."

As far as the final decision is concerned, Richardson doesn't expect the commissioners to start denying the requests of railroads. "Not this commission," he said. "They are more aware of the public than they were, but I don't think their attitude has changed very much." The Knox County News is also skeptical. Noting RRC chairman John Poerner's assurance that his decision on the Knox City depot closing "depends on the interest of the local people," the News editorialized this summer, "If it weren't such a serious loss for the entire area, we could all laugh at that remark."

By LORRAINE ATHERTON

(Editor's Note: In the December 14, 1979, issue of The Texas Observer, the following article followed up two stories that appeared in its May 25, 1979, edition. The Texas Observer, a bi-weekly publication, with editorial and business offices in Austin, 'told it like it was' concerning the depot closing in Knox City. The December article, "Knocking Out Knox City," appears in its entirety.)

Since our report in the spring on railroad depot closings (Obs., May 25), the Railroad Commission has revised at least one of its policies. It is now mailing notices to all affected customers whenever a railroad applies for permission to close a freight depot. In the past, the commission notified only mayors and county judges, leaving notification of small-town shippers to the railroad.

RRC examiner James Houchins said the Observer story had "a little something" to do with the change. He also said the last two years have seen a jump in the number of applications for closings, accompanied by increasing numbers of complaints along the lines of: "We didn't really know about this till just a few days ago." "I heard enough complaints," Houchins said, "to know we had a notification problem."

But in its first trial, Houchins said, the new procedure didn't have the effect he expected. When South-

Pacific applied to close depots serving Brenham, Giddings, Caldwell, Yoakum, Beeville, and Llano, notices were sent to all the shippers at each of the six points, along with fill-in-the-blank protest forms. "We were prepared to go out into every one of those communities and hold hearings," Houchins said, but the commission received only six protests from all six towns combined. A single con-
