Dry weather threatens area cotton crop

Unusually dry conditions continue to plague West Texas farmers — and it's threatening cotton crops in the area.

Don Richardson, Howard County agricultural extension agent, said rains in mid-June allowed most farmers to plant a cotton crop but dry weather since then is threatening the young plants.

"We need a rain. Bad," Richardson said. "We finally got enough to plant on — then it quit.

"That (rain in June) was enough to get the cotton planted and up, but not nearly enough to sustain us through the growing season."

A Saturday afternoon rainstorm dumped .4-inch of precipitation at his home in south Big Spring. He said any rain would be appreciated, but more is definitely needed.

"What we really need is one of the good old two to three-inch rains country-wide," Richardson said.

Subsoil moisture is running low, he said, and the cotton has reached a critical stage where rain is desperately needed.

"If it doesn't rain soon, it'll just die," he said. "We're real late to start with . . . and it just needs every bit of help it can get to push it along.

"We need a general rain of about the two or three inch level all over the county," he said. "All over West Texas would help even better."

Martin County farmers agree. Greg Jones, Martin County agricultural extension agent, said lack of rain has dried the ground out drastically.

"We had a lot of trouble with it blowing early," he said. "Some farmers even lost irrigated ground due to wind."

Although some of the cotton is mature enough that their tap roots have reached subsoil moisture, Jones said most of the cotton needs some rain.

"Anything. We need something pretty slow, a couple of inches," he said. "We haven't had a real gentle rain."

Jones said the cotton that is up "looks real good for the temperatures and the amount of rainfall we've had."

However, he said even if everything goes perfectly until harvest, this year's crop won't be as big as usual.

"It'll be smaller. The yields will be drastically reduced because of the slow starts we had," he said. "It's all going to be banking on the July rains and the type of fall we have."

If farmers get the necessary rain, they still face early frosts in

Veterans: Hospitals not doing their job

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Vietnam Veterans group says people with service-connected disabilities should be able to get government-paid care from the doctor of their choice because VA hospitals are falling down on the job.

The 35,000-member Vietnam Veterans of America issued the call Friday after details of a draft report by the General Accounting Office critical of the Department of Veterans Affairs was published in The Washington Post.

The report by the government watchdog agency said officials were unable to prove they had checked the licenses of more than half the doctors the VA hired bet-

"If the government is unable to provide acceptable health care through the veterans hospital system, then these veterans should have the right to seek medical treatment elsewhere," Mary R. Stout, president of the veterans group, said in a statement.

In its statement, the Vietnam Veterans group referred as well to a report of high mortality rates at VA hospitals. The new report also noted that some medical residents at the nation's 172 VA hospitals had criminal arrest records that went unreported.

The Department of Veterans Affairs disputed the reasoning used by the Vietnam Veterans group.

Area schools plan ahead for AIDS

Editor's Note: This is Part 1 of a two part series on AIDS in Howard and surrounding counties.

Although no AIDS cases have been reported in area schools, administrators say plans are in effect in each district if any cases are detected in the future.

The school plans, which closely follow guidelines published by the Texas Association of School Boards, deal with both students and teachers who may contract the deadly disease.

AIDS — Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — is an affliction in which the virus attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to a wide variety of infections and cancers.

Although fewer than 20 cases have been confirmed in Howard, Mitchell and Martin Counties — and none concerning area students or teachers — school districts in the area have implemented plans to deal with possible occurrences.

"We're pretty well prepared in case a student or teacher (contracts the disease)," Borden County Superintendent James McLeroy said. "Hopefully, we'll never have to deal with that."

In addition, schools are incor-

STANTON — Cold or hot, rain or shine, it seems that half of West Texas regularly finds it way to Stanton Drugs store.

It's not illness or a desire for perfumed bath beads that draw them to the vintage store: rather it's those famous, outrageously thick, lip-smackingly rich shakes.

The best shakes in West Texas.

Ask anybody.

"They are pretty famous," says Glenn L. Brown, the man who owned Stanton Drugs for 30 years and just happens to be the creator of those shakes so thick they have to be eaten with a spoon.

Brown attributes a taste so glorious that it draws customers from Midland (including a Midland College professor who regularly brought his classes for a sample) to the finest ingredients available.

"We just used the very best and a lot of it," Brown says. "Profit was no object. I'd drink them and eat them. We didn't stint on any of 'em."

Brown comes by his shake-making skills honestly. As a boy in Missouri, he began working in his uncle's drug store.

"I started out mopping floors and working the fountain," he explains. "I started when I was nine years old."

Back then, he says, the flavored syrups, which came in barrels, and carbonation were shaken together by hand to make a softdrink and ice was chipped off a block.

Brown stayed in the drug store business by becoming a pharmacist. He met his wife at school in Colorado and they moved to Midland after graduation so Brown could work at Walgreen's. After a few years of that, he was ready to set up his own shop.

"This was a new fountain and a new store in 1951," Brown says of the scarred counter top front by swivel stools. The fountain is so old, he says, he

No nursing woes for most area hospitals

By MARC SCHWARZ
Staff Writer

Despite national trends showing an increase in the number of nurses leaving the profession due to stress and burn-out, local nursing directors say the problem isn't prevalent in most area hospitals.

"Since I've been here, about 14 months, we haven't had any nurses leave the profession," said Dennis Brown, Chief of Nurses at the VA Hospital. "We don't really have any problem at this VA with nurses leaving."

Brown attributed the VA's success to a solid career ladder and benefit package.

"The career ladder has eight grades, and a number of steps in each grade," he said. "There's a new pay package that will increase the nurses' pay if it passes the House (of Representatives). It'll cut pay levels from eight to four, so nurses will receive more in each level.

"Our benefit package is also excellent; it includes five weeks leave a year, tuition support and reimbursements, and scholarships. The benefits really help in attracting nurses and getting them to stay."

The State Hospital is also fairly free of the problem of nurses burning out and leaving the nursing profession, said director of nursing Molly Butler.

nurses who leave our employment are usually leaving for better paying jobs, and the rest are those who can afford to retire. Most are working out of necessity, so they usually can't just leave altogether."

Pig pucker fights war on cancer

By STEVE REAGAN

STANTON — Louis Phelps probably would do almost anything for his friends — or a good cause — but he almost balked when it came time to kiss a pig.

But Phelps, displaying good humor about the situation, puckered up and smacked Bubba the Pig during the 56th Old Settlers' Reunion, held here Saturday.

Phelps' strange kissing date came about as part of the first-ever American Cancer Society Kiss-a-Pig contest, which was held in conjunction with the reunion.

"There's just no way to describe it," he said when asked what it was like to kiss the porker. For his part, Bubba seemingly protested the entire episode by squealing loudly.

More than $100 was raised for the Stanton branch of ACS during the contest, according to Marsha Todd, project chairman for the group.

Phelps and seven other candidates raised money during the morning. The twist to the event, however, was that they were raising donations for the other contestants. The winner, the person who had the most money raised in his or her name, had the "honor" of kissing Bubba.

Jack Allred was the apparent winner, but a week-long bout with

Weather taking heavy toll on Texas cotton

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

LUBBOCK — From the High Plains to the Coastal Bend, unfavorable weather is taking a heavy toll on the Texas cotton crop.

In some areas, it's a matter of too little rainfall, while in others it's too much moisture, hail or wind which is causing the problem for the state's $1.3 billion cash crop.

Parts of the State have been spared — up to now — from the erratic weather. Among these areas are the "pima pocket" around El Paso, parts of the Rolling Plains and Central Texas Blacklands and some of the Rio Grande Valley.

But the high production areas of the High Plains and West Texas, which annually account for more than half of the state's cotton crop, literally have taken a beating, report county agents and crop specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The 25 High Plains counties around Lubbock, in which some 2.7 million acres have been planted to cotton, have lost an estimated 200,000 acres to thunderstorms, hail and winds in the last few weeks. Hale County alone lost 100,000 acres of the 190,000 planted a month ago.

Not only the severity, but the timing of recent heavy rains and hail across much of the state has cotton farmers in a squeeze, according to Extension Service cotton specialists.

It is too late to replant cotton and expect it to mature and provide a profitable yield in many of the storm-ravaged areas of the High Plains, said Dr. James Supak, cotton agronomist at Lubbock. Yield expectations declined sharply when cotton plantings are delayed beyond the optimum planting periods. For this reason, farmers participating in federal crop insurance programs aren't required to plant cotton after predetermined cutoff dates.

On the High Plains, for example, the cutoff dates for counties in the northern sector were June 1-5; those in the central portion were June 5-10, and southern counties had until June 10-15. "Planting cotton after those dates is extremely risky. Farmers who do so are going to be giving up considerable yield potential," Supak said.

Further complicating the producer's plight is a scarcity of potential alternate crops to replace the lost cotton. In many areas, soybeans, mung beans, sesame, sunflower, guar, pinto or blackeyed peas can be grown in the remaining season, but producers need to find a market before committing to those crops, Extension Service specialists said.

In the Rolling Plains, producers had until June 20 to replant and are hoping the storm abates and fields dry out enough to get back in with shorter season cotton varieties, said U.U. Alexander, Extension [illegible]

In the Coastal Bend and Rio Grande Valley, the problem has been extreme drought. Irrigated fields are in generally fine shape in these areas. But normally high-yielding dryland fields will be lucky to produce half their customary lint, says Dr. John Bremer, Extension Service weed specialist at Corpus Christi, and John W. Norman Jr., Extension agent — entomology at Weslaco.

By regions, the Texas cotton situation looks like this:

High Plains — Estimated 200,000 acres of the 2.7 million planted has been lost to heavy rains, severe hail and high winds. Some areas have just gotten enough rain for proper planting or to ensure germination [illegible] table planting dates expired between June 1-15. Possible alternate crops include sesame, soybeans, grain sorghum, sunflower, pintos and blackeyed peas but contracts are limited and some seed of preferred varieties is in short supply.

Rolling Plains — At optimum planting date, May 20-25, much of area was too dry; since then, much of area has been too wet to plant, reported Alexander. About half of planned 600,000 acres was planted on time; some 100,000 acres had to be replanted because of hard rains and hail. Alternate crops include guar, mung beans, sunflower and soybeans, "but we have a problem raising soybeans because of our replanting will be done with shorter season cotton varieties.

West Texas — About 50 percent of acreage was lost to severe hail. Dryland areas around Mitchell, Howard, Midland and Nolan counties just got enough rain for planting. Much planting and replanting was occurring at cutoff date.

Cotton around San Angelo escaped hail and looks good; soil profile in that area is full of water, says Charles Stichler, Extension Service agronomist at Ft. Stockton. Alfred Gonzalez, El Paso County Extension agent, said that cotton in that area — all irrigated — has escaped hail damage and is probably five to seven days ahead of schedule; planting there is estimated at 2,500-3,000 acres of short staple and 20,00-30,000 acres of pima.

Blacklands — Most of the 200,000-acre crop is "pretty well on time" and growing well, although rains have caused some replanting, reported Dr. Robert Metzer, Extension Service cotton agronomist at College Station. Hail has been scattered, but some fields in the Dallas area may be under water and be lost. "What's lost won't go back to cotton," Metzer said. Entomologists are concerned about mounting insect pressures.

Winter Garden — The area's 30,000-40,000 acres of cotton, all irrigated and almost all pima, looks good, said Dr. Noble Kearney, Extension Service agronomist at Uvalde. Hot days have the crop progressing well. Hail has been minor. "We're starting to get insect pressure earlier than we thought we would," Kearney said.

Rio Grande Valley — The irrigated crop looks exceptionally good, but dryland acreage is very poor, said John Norman, Extension agent — entomology at Weslaco. The area has some 400,000 acres planted. This is about 200,000 fewer than last year; 125,000 acres is due to planned reduction, with 75,000 due to the extreme drought. Plants are compact and fruit load is good [illegible] jected at about half last year's 465,000 bales.

Coastal Bend — Prolonged drought in this dryland production area is taking a heavy toll. Farmers are looking at about half their normal production of lint, said Dr. John Bremer, Extension Service weed specialist at Corpus Christi. "Rain now would probably do more harm than good," said Dr. Robert Metzer, Extension Service cotton agronomist at College Station. He said it would cause the plants to throw off young squares and develop new growth at the top, costing producers more to protect the plants from insects.

Mike Payne, a Martin County farmer, looks over what was supposed a field of cotton. Cotton crops have been severely damaged by hail in Martin, Mitchell, Glasscock and Howard counties.

Area farmers reduce crop acreage

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

LUBBOCK — Farmers in the 25 counties represented by Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, have contracted to take 1.412 million acres of program crop bases out of production under the 10-year conservation reserve program (CRP) established by the farm act of 1985.

That's 17.5 percent of the 8.07 million acres that would otherwise be allocated to production and/or other acreage reduction programs for cotton, corn, grain sorghum, wheat, barley and oats, say PCG officials. The totals were compiled from county figures supplied by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Covered is the acreage enrolled in the CRP through eight completed sign-up periods, held from early 1986 through February, 1989. A ninth sign-up is scheduled July 17 through August 4 this year.

Cotton accounts for 723,017 acres and over half the CRP acreage on the Plains, which is equal to 15.4 percent of the area's 4.685 million total base cotton acres.

Farmers are obligated for 10 years to devote the idled acreage to conservation uses such as permanent grasses. USDA agrees to pay half the cost of establishing grass or other approved conservation measures, and pays an annual fee to compensate producers for loss of crop production income.

The accompanying chart shows county total base acreage of the six program crops, CRP acreage from all bases, total cotton acreage bases and cotton bases in CRP.

Nurses

Shirlene Brown, director of nursing for Scenic Mountain Medical Center, agreed.

"The nurses who leave us usually do so because their husbands can get better jobs in another town," she said. "The ones I've seen leave do it because of the economic situation. To my knowledge, no one who has quit has left the nursing profession."

She said nurse burn-out does exist, and is many times caused by bureaucratic demands.

"We do have some burn-out, but not as much as in a larger town," Ms. Brown said. "Nurses do sometimes get frustrated because all the paperwork and regulations makes them feel like they can't give hands-on care to the patients. All the regulations sometimes makes you feel like you can't nurse the way you want to nurse."

Mildred Ford, Martin County [illegible] a nursing shortage at the hospital has greatly increased the already rigorous demands on the nurses.

"We're down to just two nurses plus myself," Ford said. "I've got ads in every paper, but we can't seem to get anybody. I'm just about burned-out myself."

Ford cited paperwork and legal demands on nurses as the most pressing reasons they enter other professions, and she said the struggling local economy has contributed to her problem.

"When the oil companies left, a lot of wives who were nurses left because their husbands needed to get work," she said. "I've found there has to be work for the husbands to have a job out of the [illegible]

Although Mitchell County Hospital isn't facing a severe nurse shortage, according to nursing director JoAnn Merket, she said she understands why many people are shying away from the nursing profession.

"There's too much paperwork these days for nurses, and I think the fear of AIDS has caused a lot of [illegible] school," Merket said. "A lot of people can go to school for a lot less time and make more money without all the responsibility and pressure."

Merket said Mitchell County Hospital has no specific programs to cope with nurse burn-out, but "we try to pay as good as we can and hope that will be an incentive for them."

The Scenic Mountain administration tries to ease the demands of the job and reduce potential burnout, Ms. Brown said.

"We try to go out of our way to make the nurses feel appreciated," she said. "We try different staffing patterns until they find the one [illegible] want them to go home knowing they've done a good job."

Shakes

can't even find someone who knows how to repair its refrigeration unit.

Stanton Drugs began drawing customers immediately with its huge, 39-cent hamburgers and its hand-mixed cherry cokes. But for the ice-cream lovers, the lure was those unforgettable shakes.

When Brown created the confections, he took his cue from what he'd learned from his uncle and from his own personal tastes.

"My uncle, he ran a real good fountain," Brown says. "I just like 'em like that.

"I made 'em the best I could and if they were good enough for me, they ought to be good enough for the customers."

It was the same with his equally-famous burgers, he says. He cooked big, fat juicy ones — just the way he likes them. The fame of Brown's delicious burgers and fabulous shakes assured Stanton Drugs was a success.

"A fountain in a drug store when I was growing up was what drew people to the store," he explains. "If you had a good fountain, then you did good business."

Brown's store is the proof of that philosophy. More that 30 years later, Stanton Drugs is still going strong. Brown has watched many of his customers grow up and bring their own kids to the fountain for ice cream, malts and shakes.

Noemi Solano works the fountain at Stanton Drugs in the afternoons, but not all that many years ago she was an eager nine-year-old who came in for strawberry ice-cream cones after church.

"I grew up eating them and now I'm making them," Solano says with a laugh.

She's not the only regular customer. Solano says one faithful customer comes in for two chocolate malts every day. There's others who come in day after day, year after year, she says, asking for one of those oozing, thick skakes — even on the coldest days of winter.

"Big Spring (residents) come over here for our malts," she says. "We see a bunch of the old settlers here," during the Old Settlers Day Reunion.

And they all come in clamoring for the same thing: a rich, creamy, so-thick-you-can't-suck-it-through-a-straw shake.

Even after 30 years, Brown himself is not immune to that heavenly taste. Despite the incredibly high butter-fat content, Brown still sneaks one every now and then.

"They couldn't be any more fattening," says the tall, lean pharmacist. "But that never seems to [illegible] the fall, Jones said. That problem is compounded by the cotton crop's late start, he said.

To compound farmers' problems even further, hailstorms in early June damaged several crops in the area.

Richardson agreed that the necessary rains won't ensure a good crop for Howard County farmers.

"It's just too early to tell," Richardson said. "If we get the rains it would certainly enhance our chances of getting a good crop."

An early frost, he said, would be a disaster for this late a crop. Since they were forced to start so late, most farmers planted short season varieties of cotton, he said.

"But some of the longer season varieties are going to have a tough time making at all this year," he said. "It's just kind of a wait and see situation right now."

a particular hospital. Hospices, for example, have reported 100 percent rates.

She noted the GAO report, according to the Post, said: "The conditions cited do not mean that the medical services provided by the VA are substandard or that VA physicians are incompetent."

The study was requested by Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, ranking minority member of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee. His staff said it could not release a copy of the report because it was in draft form. The VA said it could not release the draft report, either.

The full report, with VA comment, is due for release in August.

Murkowski wrote a 1985 law telling the VA to act on problems at hospitals after the American Medical Association found 87 doctors with revoked, suspended or restricted licenses who were working for the agency.

VA officials said they could prove they had checked the licenses of only 105 of the 207 physicians hired from 1986 to 1988, the draft report said. The report also said the VA had not fulfilled promises to ensure that its doctors are qualified to practice their particular specialties.

A further problem was detected with medical residents who work at VA hospitals, according to the draft report. The government watchdog agency said a records check with the FBI found that 165 of the 16,756 residents had been charged with criminal offenses between the early 1970s and May 1987.

Texas legislators reluctant to tackle abortion issue

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas legislators are about evenly divided on whether the state already has sufficient restrictions on abortions, a Fort Worth newspaper survey indicates.

However, the small number of lawmakers responding to the confidential survey agreed that they are in no hurry to tackle the issue.

Only 39 of the state's 31 senators and 150 representatives responded to the non-scientific survey despite a promise of anonymity. And two who did respond declined to answer most of the questions.

Sixteen legislators, or 41 percent of those responding, feel the state already has adequate abortion restrictions, while 13, or 33 percent, say new restrictions are needed to limit abortions in the state. Six lawmakers, or 15 percent, said they are uncertain.

Four participants did not respond to the question of whether new limitations on abortions are needed.

The Star-Telegram survey included seven multiple-choice questions asking for lawmakers' opinions of abortion laws proposed or adopted in other states. The survey also sought lawmakers' views on a timetable for addressing the issue.

The legislators who participated were nearly unanimous in their opposition to an immediate special session on the abortion issue — or even one late in 1989, or sometime next year. Gov. Bill Clements has indicated that a special session on the topic is certain to occur.

Five of the 39 legislators said they would prefer a special session on the topic before 1991.

Anti-abortion leader Bill Price said he is not surprised by the low response to the survey or lawmakers' reluctance to deal with the topic.

"They don't like to answer questions on this issue at all, even in a blind confidential questionnaire. . .This is the kind of thing they would like to keep putting off," said Price, director of Dallas-based Texans United for Life.

Respondents who regarded themselves as anti-abortion tended to be slightly less reluctant to address the issue. Ten of 13 lawmakers who said they want to impose substantial abortion restrictions said they prefer waiting until 1991 or later to bring the issue before the Legislature.

Respondents were almost unanimous in saying they would allow abortions in the case of rape, incest or a serious threat to a woman's health.

Twenty-nine legislators, or 74 percent of those responding, said abortions should also be allowed when there are medical problems such as birth defects or deformities.

Fourteen, or 36 percent, favored a ban on tax money going toward abortions for poor women. Only 10 respondents, or 26 percent, said they favored a parental consent law.

Big Bend park loses firefighters

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK (AP) — National Park rangers in Texas fear their efforts to clear fire hazards in the Big Bend National Park may be cut back soon because of spreading New Mexico forest fires.

For the past two months, 20-man crews of trained Mescalero Indian firefighters from New Mexico have been cutting back heavy brush at Big Bend to reduce the risk of a large fire in the drought-stricken park.

But Big Bend National Park Chief Ranger Phil Koepp told The Odessa American Friday he is concerned that the extra crews may be lost soon because of fires in their own state.

"It's been nice to have this kind of security blanket," Koepp said. "Now, we'll just have to sit here and keep our fingers crossed. Without the extra crews, our firefighting resources are limited."

The crews have been rotating in every third week and the current rotation period ends Tuesday. Koepp said he is concerned there won't be a replacement crew available.

Ken Palmrose, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service, said Friday the huge fire along the Continental Divide in southwestern New Mexico probably would be contained by Monday.

A blaze in the Gila National Forest has charred 7,700 acres since Monday.

Other fires in New Mexico include the Rodeo, burning 30 miles north of the Mexico border; a five-acre fire burning near Alto in the Lincoln National Forest; the 200-acre Miribal fire; the 150-acre Americana fire; the 60-acre Hoya fire nine miles south of the El Malpais Ice Caves near Grants; and a 50-acre fire, called the Collapse, about 15 miles south of the ice cave.

Big Bend park spokesman Roy Given said all backcountry hiking and camping permits being issued by his park contain a warning of the fire danger.

"We're also warning about the extreme conditions using the in-park radio, during evening programs at the park and warnings at the entrance stations," he said.

Extreme fire danger also exists in the Guadalupe Mountains National Park.

Spokesman Bob Valen told the Odessa newspaper on Friday that smoking and campfires have been banned in the Guadalupe Mountains park.

"Fuels, like the grass, small woody plants and timber, are very, very dry," Vhe New Mexico fires. Twenty-three strikes caused fires in the Gila this week, said Palmrose.

Koepp said more than 30 fires sparked by lightning have burned about 3,000 acres at Big Bend since March.

Valen said lightning in the Guadalupe Mountains has caused six fires that burned about 1,000 acres.

Harris County jail inmates sleep on floor

HOUSTON (AP) — The population in the Harris County Jail has swelled to nearly 8,000 prisoners, and the sheriff said many of them should be in state prisons.

"We have never been this high," Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen said of the jail population, which stood at 7,938 as the weekend began.

Many jail inmates have to sleep on the floor, Klevenhagen said. County Commissioners recently approved the purchase of 20,000 new bed sheets and 5,000 new towels for the jail at a cost $106,000.

The main reason for the overcrowding is a federal order issued several years ago that says the Texas Department of Corrections' inmate population cannot exceed 95 percent of capacity.

TDC officials have closed the doors to new inmates many times because the population has exceeded the limit.

Robber's rose not unique

NORTH RICHLAND HILLS (AP) — Police in this Fort Worth suburb learned the hard way that a rose tattoo on a woman's bustline should not necessarily be considered a unique distinguishing mark.

Police told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram on Wednesday that they were looking for a woman with a rose tattoo on her left breast suspected of robbing a gas station of $8,500.

After the heist, police lifted the information Thursday, about 300 people called police to say they knew of such a woman.

"I've handled at least 55 calls myself," said North Richland Hills police detective Cliff Jaynes. "Every woman with a red rose on her has been snitched on."

North Richland Hills police decided to release more information about the robbery suspect that should nip further calls in the bud, the newspaper said Saturday.

The woman has another tattoo: a crude letter "S" with two horizontal slash marks on her left forearm.

Area briefs

Commissioners to meet Monday

County Commissioners will convene 9 a.m. Monday in the commissioners courtroom on the second floor of the Courthouse to consider among other issues, amendments to the 1988-89 budget and approval of the county payroll.

The amendments will be added to pay unexpected expenses related to the new jail, such as [illegible] and attorney [illegible].

Money to pay jailers for the rest of the year will come from a surplus fund that was built up about 2-3 years ago, Coffee said. It will increase the county payroll, which must be approved, but Coffee said he is not sure by how much.

"I haven't discussed with the auditor what kind of amendments are coming up," he said.

Other amendments have already kept money going into the payroll since this spring when money to pay jailers first ran out. "That surplus is fast dwindling," [illegible].

Discussions will also include equipment requirements, personnel status, a computer purchase and contracting for library services.

Local women recognized by CDA

BIG SPRING — Three local women have been awarded Child Development Associate credentials in recognition of outstanding work with young children.

Marlina Paredez, Jo-Elda Garza and Irene Flores, all of Big Spring, were awarded the credentials by the Council for Early Childhood Professional Recognition in Washington, D.C., which represents the early childhood profession through its affiliation with the National Association for the Education of Young People.

CDA is the only major national effort to improve child care by evaluating and recognizing the skills of care providers, according to a report from the organization.

More than 33 states already include CDA in child care licensing regulations, with others considering similar action, the report stated.

Rural/Metro issues June report

Rural/Metro ambulance crews averaged 5.8 minutes in response time to calls in the month of June, according to information released by the company.

Rural/Metro reported 70 emergency and 90 non-emergency responses during the month. Of that number, 94 percent were handled in less than 10 minutes, the report states.

The ambulances responded to 57 emergency calls in the city and 13 in the county.

The crews' average response time in the city was 5.1 minutes, while average response time to county calls was 9.6 minutes. The average time on the scene was 15.8 minutes.

For the year to date, Rural/Metro crews have an average response time of 6.0 minutes.

Several bids on county agenda

STANTON — The Martin County commissioners will consider several bids when they hold their regular monthly meeting at 9 a.m. Monday at the County Courthouse.

Bids for property, vehicle and liability insurance, mower and tractor and a new dtrack dozer and possible repairs will be on the commissioners' agenda.

In other business, the commissioners will consider:

- Damage cost payment on the Madison gas line.
- Road and Bridge Department radio system.
- Pipeline and utility crossings.
- Gas tank for the Lenorah Fire Department.
- Rural trash service.
- Apointment of election officials.
- A request for rent supplement increase for the State Health Department office.
- Regulating use of bicycles and skateboards on the Courthouse porch.
- Improvements and repairs.
- Reports from county officials and on the sanitary landfill situation.

Weather

Temperatures were above normal Saturday across large parts of the nation, with record highs in the western and northern Plains and central Rockies, and strong thunderstorms developed over the Midwest.

A stagnant upper-level high pressure system dominated the nation's weather by spreading temperatures in the 90s from the southern Atlantic Coast across the middle and lower Mississippi Valley, much of the Plains and the central Rockies to interior California.

Rapid City, S.D., reached 103 degrees before 11 a.m., then rose to a record 107.

Other records included 97 at Cheyenne, Wyo.; 100 at Denver; and 101 at Williston, N.D. Casper, Wyo., tied its record of 100 and Scottsbluff, Neb., tied its record of 105.

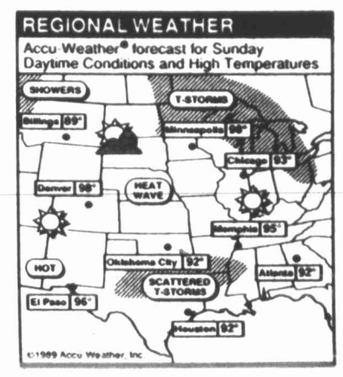

The reading at Denver extended the city's consecutive days of 100 degrees or higher to five. During 118 years of weather record-keeping at Denver, there had never before been more than two consecutive days of triple-digit temperatures.

Strong thunderstorms developed in unstable air near a warm front over central Illinois and Indiana during the afternoon.

Warm, very humid air from the Gulf of Mexico triggered showers and thunderstorms from central Texas across the Gulf Coast states to the Georgia and South Carolina coast.

An upper air disturbance off the northern Pacific Coast produced showers along the Washington coast.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 57 at Quillayute, Wash., to 111 at Needles, Calif. Saturday's low in the Lower 48 states was 40 at Truckee, Calif., and Redmond, Ore.

For Sunday, scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast from the lower Mississippi Valley along the eastern Gulf Coast region into the Florida Peninsula, and from the eastern half of the upper Great Lakes into the upper Ohio Valley and the lower Great Lakes.

Highs in the 70s were predicted in northern Maine; in the 70s and 80s along much of the Pacific Coast; in the 80s in the northern Intermountain region between the Rockies and the Cascade Range, much of Montana, and from northern Minnesota across the lower Great Lakes into the northern Atlantic Coast states; above 100 across sections of the central Plains and the middle Mississippi Valley, the central Rockies, and from the Big Bend of the Rio Grande in Texas across the desert Southwest into interior valleys of central and southern California; and in the 90s in much of the rest of the nation.

Herald opinion

Promises of improvement

A year from now, the mess on Gregg Street will be little more than a bad memory.

In fact, it will be well before that time that we are able to stand back and admire the improvement that is occurring along the main artery of this city. In fact, you can do so already.

Even the unobservant would have a difficult time driving the east side of Gregg along the 2000 block and not detect the transformation that has occurred. The progress is all the more evident as the construction crews clean their mess and move on to the next series of intersections and curbings that must be worked.

Those businesses that survive the disruptions in traffic and business, thanks to the inconveniences associated with widening and repaving, will reap benefits once the project is complete. Several people admit that they have avoided Gregg Street unless something compels them. That won't be the case nearly as often when a turn lane is in place.

What is also particularly encouraging is the activity on Gregg Street in two buildings that have been vacant longer than some of us care to remember. The renovation of the former White's building and reports that what was Western Mattress will soon see life once again are good signals for this community — and promise an even better look along Gregg Street.

Fourth of July — and the weeds

The memories of last year's Fourth of July are pretty distinct.

From this vantage point it was a stream of editorials, imploring the readers of this newspaper who wished to enjoy fireworks for the Fourth to come forward with a donation of any size. Raising the $5,000 that had been pledged was not easy, especially when it came to taking donations of 50 cents or slightly more.

This year's decision by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce to completely leave the matter in the hands of the public seemed a chancy one at first glance — perhaps even somewhat cold. But fireworks are not the business of those working for economic development.

The fact it is, fireworks displays really are public affairs and should be treated that way.

The display that Big Spring was able to enjoy last Tuesday evening was dandy — made all the more so by the fact that we didn't have to engage in a regular and frequent public appeal for funds.

J.B. Elmore's decision to fund the event and turn it into a spectacle to help sell cars and bring visitors to Big Spring was a welcome one for those involved in the project in the past and seemed to be enjoyed by everyone who took part.

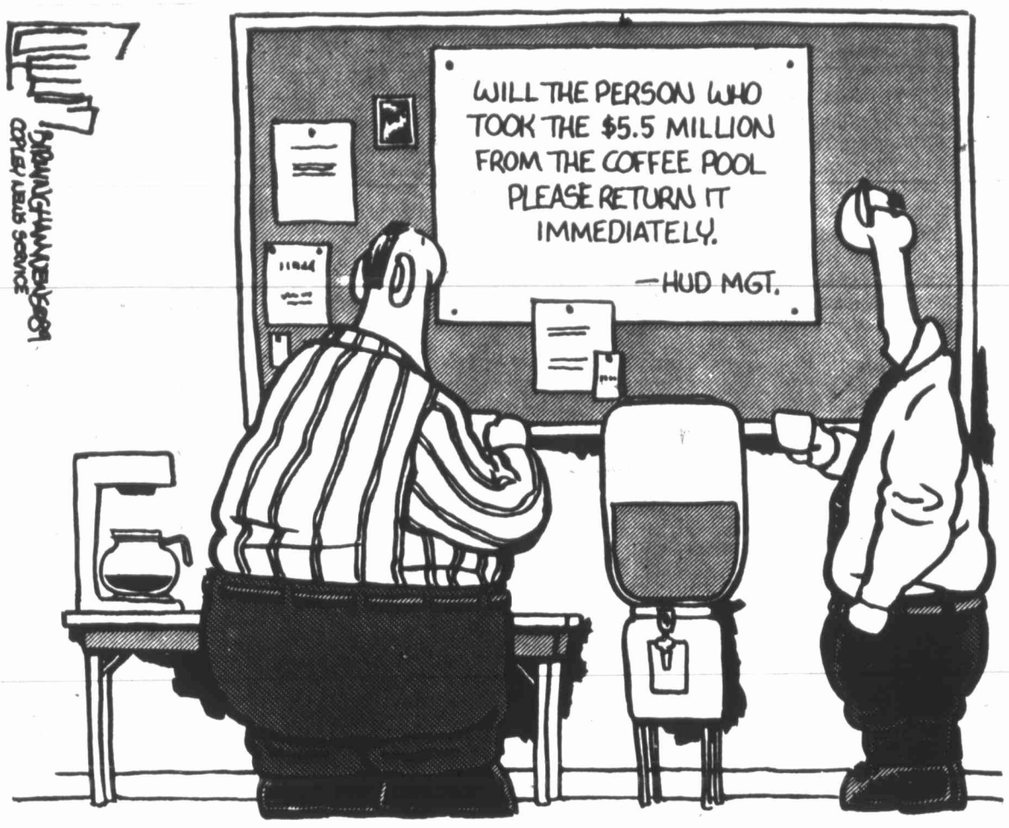

We're glad he did it.

The only disappointment expressed with the affair, perhaps, came from those who took to blankets and lawn chairs to view the festivities near the lake at Comanche Trail Park.

Although there is talk and activity about achieving a more beautiful Big Spring, you wouldn't have known it by the looks of the area around the Figure Seven tennis center and the community center building in that area.

The weeds and grass in that vicinity were a disgrace. If we are to take pride in our community, we need to do a better job of maintaining our public areas — especially at such times as the Fourth of July.

Writers of laws, beware

By ROBERT WERNSMAN
Herald publisher

These are busy days for social commentators — on the local, state and national levels.

Freedom of information is threatened; freedom of decision on abortions is imperiled; and the sanctity of the U.S. flag burns brightly in our social consciences.

What a time to be a citizen of this country!

Better yet, what a time to be a thoughtful, careful writer of laws with a vision to see the invisible and the courage to stand for what is right.

At the local level, a state issue came crashing down last week concerning the handling of information from law enforcement officials. They were faced with a law whose apparent lack of specific clarity proved so ridiculous no one stood ready to defend it when the matter came before judges, as media types sought injuctions to return the free flow of information.

The irony, of course, was that while legislators have their time to make the laws, people like Joe Cook and A.N. Standard must face the heat when trying to enforce them and, later, surmise whether the position they took was correct — legally, morally and sensibly.

Naturally, there are times when it may seem impossible to serve those three masters all at once.

Despite the police chief's decision Monday to relent with some information, the public's right to know remains poorly served under the circumstances. It apparently will continue to be so until his conscience is cleared about providing us with more specific information concerning where burglaries, attacks and other such crimes are taking place.

I contend that I have every right to know if four of the five homes on my block were burglarized last night, or if a rapist is performing his despicable acts in my neighborhood. Is that information of interest to you? Would it prompt you to take more precautions than usual?

• When it comes to flagburning, as is so very typically human, the overwhelming responses we've seen have been emotional and reactionary. Disgust with the individual who performed the original flagburning incident is understandable, but such contempt for the Supreme Court — by both letter writers and editorial cartoonists — borders on the absurd.

Looking at the matter with both feet on the ground and both eyes wide open, one must applaud the court for its action.

Why? Interestingly enough, the court itself provided us with the ammunition we need to deal with those who burn flags, if we have an appropriate law to banish such action.

The knee-jerk reaction against the court was misplaced. The court majority, according to Harvard law Professor Laurence H. Tribe, observed that the decision in the case would have been altogether different if Texas was punishing the flag burner on the "simple ground that he had physically mistreated something that the majority of the people have chosen by law to protect."

Unfortunately, the law was askew for punishing Gregory Lee Johnson for the views he expressed by burning the flag, instead of punishing him for the act itself. The Texas law had made it a crime to mistreat the flag so as to "seriously offend" likely observers.

One might suggest that is a minute difference. However, it is a huge difference in a court of law ordered to deliver justice and protect our constitution.

Thus, as Tribe suggested in the New York Times, if a flag desecration law were written and enforced without regard to the presence or absence of any message, we could defend the values embodied in the flag without addressing the values expressed by its destruction.

Sorry folks, it was not the court that deserved your outrage. It did its job perfectly. Let's look, again, to the writers of the law.

Besides, as an acquaintance so succinctly stated in a recent letter: "My brief belief — 'The flag flies in a person's heart.'"

Who could argue with that?

Treatment that's equal

To the editor:

A question was raised regarding the now defunct affirmative action laws. "Why should there be laws in the work place to insure minorities equal employment? They should be treated just like everyone else."

Well, that's a thought. In this land of the free where we all love and respect each other, all men are created equal and there is liberty and justice for all. Why should there be laws to insure equal opportunities? After all, we could still have slavery, segregation, illegal abortions, condoned lynchings because of one's skin color, gunfights in the streets and the list goes on. We are all good christian people who would never think of committing such acts of indignation against our fellowman. Would we?

Volunteers are always welcome

That is why we are so grateful to Jim and Debbie Grimes for volunteering to mow the shelter's two acres, and to Blackshear Rentals for loaning a tractor and mower to do the job.

Ready for the battle

To the editor:

I am a 29-year-old, single female registered to vote since I was 18 years old.

I believe it is my right as an American citizen to retain the liberty to have control of my own body.

I believe that abortion should be legal under all circumstances. It is my American right to have a legal abortion during the first three months of pregnancy if I and my doctor agree to it.

[illegible] may ban doctors, nurses, hospitals or other facilities from performing abortions.

The majority of pro-life people are men. Ask most men to wear a condom or have a vasectomy and they will tell you "that's a woman's problem." The majority of our lawmakers, judges and attorneys are men. I believe that men should let a woman control her own productive life.

I know some women who are against abortion and they have the right to their own opinion. That is what makes this country great. I am not going to force them to have an abortion, nor should they force other women to bare unwanted children.

[illegible] feeding, clothing, housing and education of these unwanted children? Do our conservatives want their taxes raised?

The adoption and foster home system cannot possibly handle this crisis. Few people want to adopt minority children. Think of the potential of abuse for all unwanted children.

I refuse to be silent any longer and let men take away women's rights. This is war against women. This is an outrage! American women will not tolerate it. We are ready, willing and able to battle.

Umpires can't solve everything

To the editor:

If I read Ducky Robertson's letter (Big Spring Herald, June 28) correctly, the umpires are to blame for the troubles of the Junior and Senior Baseball League. What else is new? The umpires are blamed for a game being lost, a boy striking out or making an error, the field not being in good shape or any number of other things.

We do read our rule books [illegible] that some managers, coaches and a lot of spectators would also) and it does say umpires shall be volunteers. According to the dictionary, a volunteer is one who enters or offers to enter into some service or undertaking of one's free will.

Of our own free will we go to the ball parks from 5:30 until after 10:00, three or four nights per week. During that time we endure the heat, the abuse of a few fans who are not knowledgeable about the game of baseball, and some managers and coaches. We purchase our uniforms and equipment and provide our transportation. We volunteer to drive to Midland, [illegible] games.

Some umpires have been doing this for more than 25 years. Yes, we do receive some compensation, and no, money isn't everything. We umpire because we love the game and enjoy working with boys and young men.

The bottom line — people make the country

By JESSE TREVINO

The alarming speed of the Supreme Court's recent rulings have caught the country like a sudden storm. It is raining all around us. The storm is only prelude of the divisiveness to come. The storm is indeed ominous, to quote Jusitce Blackmun. A new era of civil rights struggles is upon us.

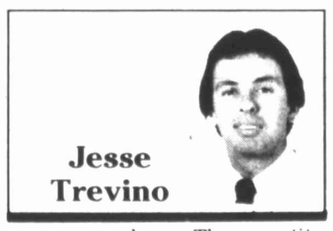

After the court's rulings on its civil rights cases, some newspaper columnists suggested casually that Congress would have to redress the court's decision.

It has quickly become evident it will take more than legislation to correct the total sum of the court's rulings. Pitched battles may be necessary to ward off the attacks that have been made on civil rights.

We have seen the beginning in the firefights of protest over the flag and abortion that sparked the July 4 celebrations in some cities.

Unfortunately, unlike the true presidential leadership of Presidents Truman, who integrated the armed forces, Eisenhower, who sent troops to Central High School in Arkansas, Kennedy, who landed on the side of Martin Luther King, and Johnson, who personally launched the country's war on poverty and racism, the country is at the mercy of a man who would propose a constitutional amendment to protect the flag while opposing legislation to correct the transgressions of the court on civil rights.

The debate, as before, will go to the core principles of how we govern ourselves. The constitutional amendment on the flag so haphazardly offered by the same man who would choose Dan Quayle vice president signifies the country is entering a momentous period in its history. It will have to come to terms with the kind of government it wants. Either we will have freedom of speech or not.

Jesse Trevino

Either we will respect minority rights or not.

A frightening aspect of the debate is how little the country knows about its own governmental system. The emotionalism sweeping the country in the wake of the Court's flag decision does not change the results of surveys that for 40 years have documented the curious deficiencies in knowledge Americans have of the country's ideals.

Americans in those surveys often confuse the language of the Bill of Rights and the Constitution with communist manifestos. This could set us up for failure of a system that has lasted 200 years. Television and a questionable educa[illegible] may be serving to undermine the American system of government.

We would all like to think that the political tragedies that have afflicted other countries cannot happen here. But when the country can be so easily manipulated and its people deficient in the ideas that are the underpinnings of their government, the circumstances are ripe for the worst.

After all, more than half of the country's students cannot find Washington, D.C., on the map. Are they much better at finding their way to the meaning of the Constitution?

But the people can come through. They have in the past. They came through on the cause for civil rights for black Americans. They came through when they finally saw through the threat of the Republican senator from Wisconsin, Joe McCarthy. They came through on Vietnam. They came through on Watergate and Richard Nixon.

Can the people come through again? How will the country respond to the civil disobediance to become commonplace as women defend their abortion rights? Abortion looms as a source of deep political anguish for many Americans because of the compunction to punish those who would break the law.

How will the country respond to the new push that must be made to protect racial and ethnic minorities from the racial harrassment and other insults that the Supreme Court has legalized?

Odd, this business of democracy. It faces challenges constantly. In the 1950s Sen. McCarthy almost succeeded in overthrowing trial by jury and the rules of evidence. In the 1970s, Richard Nixon trampled on the Constitution.

In the 1980s, Oliver North sought to change the separation of powers between the executive and legislative. Approaching the 1990s, the country faces the possibility that Bush's constitutional amendment on the flag would for the first time in peacetime stop a citizen from expressing himself.

I held my breath recently when two Republican friends of mine brought up the flag decision recently over a couple of beers. The moment they did, I felt an empty feeling. These two guys and their wives are good, solid people. I did not want to think less of them, to consider them unpatriotic.

To my utter and complete surprise, they talked brilliantly about the issue. They came down foursquare on the side of the Court and against the president they helped elect. I listened, said very little, marvelling at their love of country and its Constitution.

The people can come through.

Plungers to be used at SewerFest

OBERLIN, Ohio (AP) — Residents weary of wending their way through sewer construction will grab plungers and kazoos for some lighthearted fun at a SewerFest later this month.

"It started out as one of those hokey things," said Jan Pierce, a coordinator of the event. "I haven't laughed so much in ages putting it together. We hope the community will have some fun with it."

Since last year, barricaded streets have forced Oberlin motorists to take inconvenient routes and the rough roads have rattled car alignments. Construction is set for fall completion.

Ms. Pierce said she had to buy three new tires because of the rough going on streets along construction sites.

"We don't know from day to day how the streets will go," said Ms. Pierce. "It's frustrating. We all feel it on a personal level."

Ex-employee kills two superiors

AUSTELL, Ga. (AP) — A fired Coca-Cola driver who killed two of his superiors and holed up in the company's office for seven hours emerged this morning firing his guns and was fatally shot by police, authorities said.

John Wallace, 45, seized and released a hostage after shooting the two men, who allegedly had fired him earlier Friday night, then blockaded himself in the Coca-Cola West Metro Sales Center, said Cobb County Police Chief Culver Johnson.

He negotiated with police in this northern Atlanta suburb for most of the night.

Around 5 a.m. police fired tear gas into the building, a distribution and sales office, and Wallace agreed to come out without his guns, Johnson said.

Thousands trapped in subway cars

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of commuters were trapped in a sweltering subway tunnel when a passenger pulled an emergency cord on a jammed commuter train, and 32 people were treated for heat exhaustion and other injuries.

The pull of the cord brought the train to an abrupt halt as it approached a station in the Queens borough Friday evening, and two other trains also stopped, stranding more than 2,500 people underground.

It took rescuers more than 2½ hours to evacuate the trains.

"We saw people collapsing. Some of them collapsed right in front of us," said Fire Department Lt. John B. Harden. "There were quite a few people sprawled on the platform."

The person who pulled the cord was not found, said Termaine Garden, a Transit Authority spokesman.

Captain, mate pass blood tests

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Blood tests of a Greek tanker's captain and chief mate give no indication they were drinking or on drugs when their ship spilled 420,000 gallons of heating oil off Newport.

But National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Mike Benson said Friday the board would run the sailors' blood through further tests before ruling out substance abuse as a factor.

Capt. Iakovos Georgudis, 43, has said simply that he made a mistake when the World Prodigy slammed onto a reef June 23. A helmsman told a Coast Guard-NTSB investigating panel he saw the red warning buoy on the wrong side of the ship, but did not tell the captain.

The World Prodigy did not have a harbor pilot on board at the time. Pilots are required for commercial ships to navigate Narragansett Bay. The accident occurred at the mouth of the bay.

Batting practice

WASHINGTON — President Bush takes the position of catcher as baseball great Stan Musial poses with a giant bat at the White House. Bush hosted a ceremony saluting Little League Baseball at the White House.

Bush travels today to Poland, Hungary

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush embarks today on a historic trip to Poland and Hungary, offering encouragement for their revolutionary economic and political reforms and urging the rest of communist Europe not to be "lagging way behind."

Bush's journey marks the first visit to Eastern Europe by an American president in nearly 12 years and the first ever to Hungary.

The trip also will take Bush to Paris for an economic summit with six Western allies and to the Netherlands for a one-day visit.

Bush hopes the Paris meeting will produce a coordinated aid program for Poland and Hungary, which are in the forefront of reforms in Warsaw Pact countries but are struggling with massive foreign debt.

The four-day stop in Warsaw, Gdansk and Budapest will be watched closely for comparisons with Mikhail S. Gorbachev's triumphant visit last month to West Germany, where he was greeted by crowds of hundreds of thousands of people, and with the Soviet president's just-concluded trip to France, where the reception was more restrained.

Declaring himself unconcerned by Gorbachev's popularity in the West, Bush said last week he expects a warm reception in the East. U.S. officials have been working with opposition groups in Poland and Hungary to turn out huge, cheering crowds.

But in an interview with Hungarian journalists in Washington released Saturday by the government-run media in Budapest, Bush stressed he was not trying to stir the people against their government.

Botha meets with Nelson Mandela

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha invited Nelson Mandela, the imprisoned African National Congress leader, to his official residence this week for a conversation, the government announced.

It was the first time the two are known to have met.

Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee said Mandela, who is serving a life prison term at the Victor Verster prison farm north of Cape Town, paid a "courtesy visit" Wednesday to Tuynhuys, Botha's official residence in the city center.

Coetsee said no policy matters were debated and no negotiations were conducted but the two men "availed themselves of the opportunity to confirm their support for peaceful development in South Africa."

The minister said the 45-minute conversation took place in a "pleaseant spirt" but the possibility of "further steps or meetings was not discussed during the occasion." Coetsee said he was present during the visit.

Protesters disrupt ceremony

PARIS (AP) — Protesters hurling plastic baby bottles on Saturday burst into a square where U.S. Ambassador Walter Curley was speaking and demanded more city funding for day-care centers.

The protest disrupted a ceremony inaugurating the renovated square honoring the United States.

About 100 demonstrators chanted "Money for day care, not for the bicentennial!" France is celebrating the 200th anniversary of its revolution.

The protesters carried leaflets calling for a "Declaration of the Rights of Children to Day Care." Blocked by lines of police officers, they chanted slogans while the U.S. and French national anthems were played at the end of the ceremony.

Besides Curley, Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac also spoke at the inauguration of the renovated park in the Place des Etats-Unis, in a prosperous neighborhood just south of the Arc de Triomphe.

Menem serves as 46th president

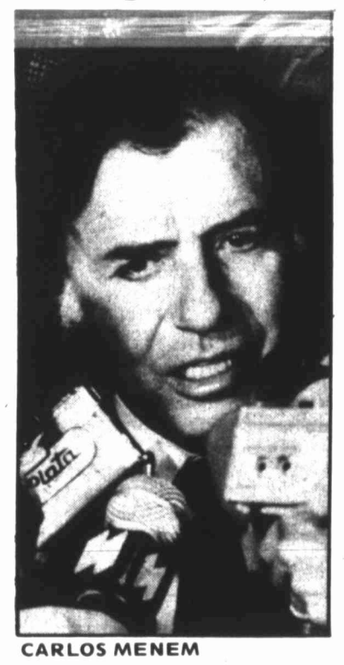

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Carlos Menem, a three-time provincial governor and former political prisoner who has stirred hopes in a country mired in economic crisis, was sworn in Saturday as Argentina's 46th president.

During the ceremony at a special session of Congress, Menem promised "to observe and enforce the constitution of Argentina."

"If I do not, may I be answerable to God and the nation," he said.

Senators, deputies and guests packed into the ornate, chandeliered chamber gave him a standing ovation.

"With faith and hope, we're going to move forward," he said earlier today as he left his apartment for Congress. Crowds along the way were enthusiastic but sparse on a chilly, overcast winter morning.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

U.S. Gov't. Approves Patent Claims for New Diet Pill

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)— An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get [illegible] there has never [illegible] process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising".

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W842, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. Sears, sandwich shop moving to mall

BIG SPRING — A third anchor store and a new sandwich shop will locate in the Big Spring Mall this summer according to mall manager Tammy Watt.

Sears Catalog and Appliance Store is scheduled to open at the mall in mid-summer, Watt said, offering an expanded selection of appliances, hardware, audio-visual and home improvements.

With 12,000 sq. ft. of leaseable area, the relocation will enable Sears to expand the sales area to offer a wider variety of merchandise, Watt said.

The expansion of the appliance department will include many different appliances such as washers and dryers, dishwashers, microwaves and freezers. A complete line of audio-visual items will also be available.

In addition to the appliance department, Sears will also be moving the entire catalog department. The move to Big Spring Mall will provide catalog customers with ample parking and more flexible shopping hours.

Also relocating to Big Spring Mall will be the service department of Sears. The new location will provide an improved area for service for all makes and models of Sears Appliances and lawn equipment. A rear door will provide the customer with easy access to the service department without having to go in the mall with the items.

"The move to Big Spring Mall is a positive step that we at Sears are looking forward to. This will enable us to stock many of the items people now have to order or go out of town to purchase. We hope we can provide Big Spring with the best sales and service possible," says Mark Brown, local Sears Manager.

"The addition of Sears to the Big Spring Mall is a positive move by Bramalea to provide Big Spring and the surrounding area with greater shopping variety. The fact that we are adding a third anchor store to a shopping center of this size is exciting. The addition of Sears will add a very balanced retail mix of shopping opportunities for the people of Big Spring," says Watt.

The new restaurant that will be located in the shopping mall in late summer will be called Sante Fe Sandwiches.

Menu items will be sugarless, low in fat and natural "to provide you with a stronger heart and lower blood pressure" according to information released by the sandwich company.

The menu offers a combination of low salt and low cholesterol items such as premium low-fat yogurt with fresh fruit toppings, fruit shakes, a variety of sandwiches, soups and salads.

"We are excited to have a restaurant in Big Spring Mall that specializes in a healthier way of eating," Watt said. "Sante Fe Sandwiches will offer food that is fresh, fast and fabulous. Along with a healthy menu, Santa Fe Sandwiches will be a colorful and relaxing place to spend a lunch break or a quiet evening with the family."

Santa Fe Sandwiches will be managed by local residents Sharon and Ronnie Dodson. Operating hours will be Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sundays from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Millions addicted to gambling

NEW YORK (AP) — While Pete Rose's betting makes headlines, millions of less prominent lives are afflicted by an addiction to gambling that some experts fear may become more widespread.

"We are viewing compulsive gambling as the mental health epidemic of the 1990s," declares Valerie Lorenz, executive director of the National Center for Pathological Gambling in Baltimore.

Adds Sirgay Sanger, president of the National Council on Compulsive Gambling in New York, "I think we're possibly headed into a decade in which gambling will be the addiction of choice" among young people.

It may be seen as a readily available and attractive alternative if alcohol and drugs become less popular, he says.

Almost $253 billion was bet in the United States last year, legally and illegally, according to the magazine Gaming and Wagering Business. Tables games such as roulette and baccarat drew $126 billion, and slot machines about $37 billion. Lotteries and parimutuel events such as horse racing each took in more than $17 billion, the magazine says.

The vast majority of gamblers are not addicted to betting. But perhaps 3 percent of American adults, which comes to about 5 million people, are hooked. So are a significant percentage of high school students, some studies suggest.

Fifteen years ago, the compulsive gambler was typically a middle-age white businessman, Lorenz said, but now treatment programs see people in their teens and early 20s, deeply in debt, suicidal and threatened by bookies.

She said she expects compulsive gambling to grow as more states adopt lotteries and other games of chance to raise revenue, promoting the idea of gambling and making it easier for susceptible people to become hooked.

Already, "we are seeing an increase in all forms of gambling," said Lorenz. Some 15 percent of calls to her organization's hotline are from people who say they are hooked on lotteries, she said, while "six years ago I never heard of a lottery addict."

But J. Blaine Lewis Jr., president of the North American Association of State and Provincial Lotteries, said experts have told him that lotteries do not interest most compulsive gamblers. The addicts want faster action, such as casino games, and games of perceived skill rather than pure chance, Lewis said.

While lotteries may promote the idea of gambling, "it's a long step to say then that that gets people to be compulsive gamblers," Lewis said.

Rose's situation does not directly involve the question of whether he is a compulsive gambler, and Lorenz and Sanger said they could not make a diagnosis from news stories.

But Lorenz said Rose shows some traits consistently found in compulsive gamblers: competitiveness, intelligence, ability with numbers, athletic ability and a high energy level. And his denials of improper betting "in the face of overwhelming evidence" suggest the reaction of a compulsive gambler, she said.

People who buy a lottery ticket every day or bet substantial sums are not necessarily compulsive gamblers. The addiction involves a collection of other specific behaviors.

For example, compulsive gamblers may continue betting despite mounting debts, the disintegration of life at home and on the job, and their own efforts to stop.

They may have to bet more and more in order to feel the excitement they crave. They may frequently gamble more money or for a longer time than planned, and may repeatedly try to win back losses.

ming his duties. Phelps then volunteered to take his sick friend's place.

"Jack's pretty well down with the flu, so I volunteered to take his place," Phelps said. Pointing at co-contestant Teresa Barnhill, he added: "I think Teresa should have won it."

Dispite the seemingly disgusting nature of his task, Phelps said he didn't mind taking part in the project.

"My mother died of cancer in December," he said. "This seemed like a good thing to work with."

About 90 percent of the money raised will remain in Stanton, with the remainder going to ACS national headquarters, Todd said.

"This is one of the programs the society came up with," she said. "We were going to do it last fall, but decided to do it at the same time as the reunion, since there'd be more people here."

After being kissed by Phelps, Bubba returned to his home, the Theodore Wells farm. It is unknown if the porker will return for next year's contest.

The Kiss-A-Pig contest was just one of many activities held during the reunion, which began Saturday morning with a parade through the downtown area.

Immediately following the parade, several contests, including egg and cow-chip tossing and bubble-gum blowing, were held downtown.

The historic Convent and the renovated Texas Theater were open for tours during the afternoon. Proceeds from the tours went toward the Convent's restoration.

The City Park was the site for children's games and a barbecue, while activities concluded with a country-western dance at the Community Center.

In connection with the reunion, several Courtney School and Stanton High School classes held their reunions during the weekend.

different grade levels; AIDS education has been mandated by state law.

Big Spring ISD offers different types of AIDS education in elementary through high-school grades, Superintendent Bill McQueary said.

Education into the disease is standard curriculum in high school health and science classes. Additionally, special instructional units — as well as various audio/visual material — is available for use at the elementary and junior high level, he said.

"The [illegible] material (concerning AIDS) has increased 10 times in the past few years," McQueary said. "There are a lot of resources available to our teachers."

Stanton ISD Superintendent Wayne Mitchell stated that AIDS instruction is supplied in high school health class; additional education is taught in one form or another in all grades.

In Ackerly, Sands ISD offers formal AIDS education in its health classes. "We even try to teach it in vocational classes like home economics," Superintendent James Blake said. "We show films . . . whatever we can get on it."

Garden City High School Principal Charles Zachary said his school provides instruction in AIDS in health and science classes as part of an "essential elements" package mandated by state law. "Whatever they say we have to teach, we'll do," Zachary said.

Big Spring's AIDS policy, which is fairly representative of the other districts' guidelines, was adopted in August, 1987. Among its provisions are:

• Attendance — A child or teacher with AIDS will be allowed to continue attending school with the superintendent's approval, based on recommendations from an advisory panel consisting of the [illegible] advisor, an assistant superintendent and the director of secondary or elementary education.

If the person's medical condition is deemed a danger to others in the school, the district has procedures in place to remove the student or teacher from class. Such removal may be lifted if the person's medical condition improves.

A student may also be removed from class for his own protection if there are outbreaks of rubella, measles or other infectious diseases reported at the school.

A teacher may be removed if school officials determine that the person poses a risk to other employees or students, a threat to his or her own health by remaining on the job, or the person's physical condition interferes with the performance of regular duties.

In case a move is made to remove a teacher from class, that person is allowed to present evidence to the district on his or her ability to continue work.

• Confidentiality — The district will do all it can to protect the victim's privacy; the person's identity will be limited to those with a direct need to know.

Those people, according to the Big Spring policy, are the student's teacher, the school principal and the school nurse.

• Notification — Although the [illegible] to the public, parents and staff members of the school in question will be notified in writing that a case exists at the the school, the Big Spring policy states.

Colorado City Superintendent Jim Ramsey said that his district's notification policy differs from Big Spring in that information will not be released unless written permission is received from the patient's family.

Other area schools have adopted policies based on guidelines issued by TASB, which issued a draft on the issue in August, 1987. The draft is similar to the Big Spring policy.

Tomorrow: AIDS testing is available in Big Spring. Reporter Lynn Hayes takes a look at the testing process and how people can protect themselves from the disease.

FmHA offering loans

STANTON — Applications for emergency farm loans for losses caused by adverse weather conditions are being accepted at the Farmers Home Administration office located here, FmHA County Supervisor Ronnal E. Bruton said.

Crane, Ector, Glasscock, Howard, Martin, Midland, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties are some of those in Texas recently named by Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng as eligible for loans to cover part of actual production losses.

Bruton said farmers may be eligible for loans of up to 80 percent of actual losses, the operating loan need to continue in business or $500,000 — whichever is less. For farmers unable to obtain credit from private commercial lenders, the interest rate is 4.5 percent.

"As a general rule, a farmer must have suffered at least a 30 percent loss of production to be eligible for an FmHA emergency loan," Bruton said. Farmers participating in the PIK or Federal Crop Insurance programs will have to figure proceeds from those programs in determining their loss.

Tax & financial planning

TAX TIPS FOR INDIVIDUALS

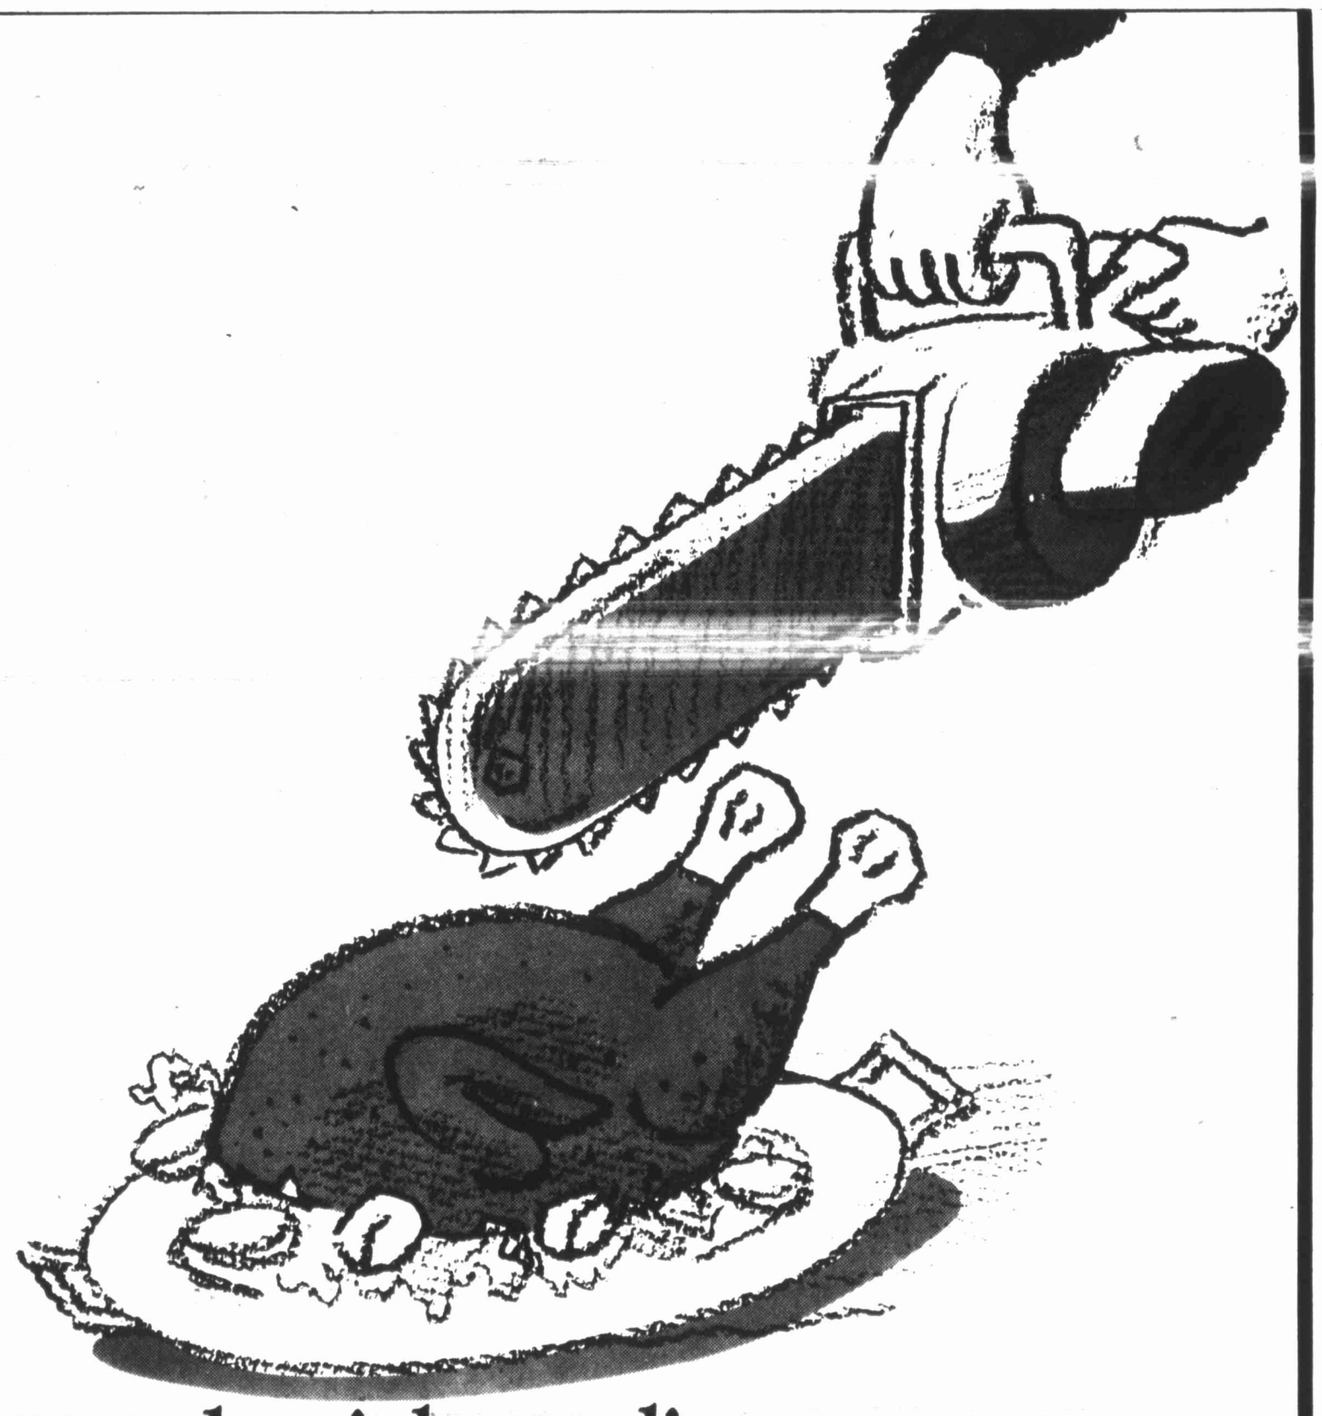

You might save yourself some tax dollars by knowing a few nontechnical things about your tax return. Here is one place where a little knowledge can be a good thing.

Here are a few tips to serve as "red flags" to warn you of tax considerations in financial transactions.

- If you have income other than from wages, you may be subject to paying quarterly tax estimates.
- Keep a file showing all expenditures on your home. When you sell your home, your accountant can determine which expenditures were improvements and, therefore, a tax benefit.
- Make gifts of income-producing property if your financial position warrants it. The gifted asset will be out of your estate, and the future income will be taxed to the new owner of the property.
- If you or your spouse is age 55 or older at the time you sell your principal residence, you may be entitled to exclude $125,000 of the gain from the sale.
- Consider "bunching" your itemized deductions into every other year. You may be able to save taxes by using the itemized deduction in the year of bunching and the standard deduction the following year.
- If you are subject to the "Medicare surtax," you might want to consider investing in tax-free securities.
- If lump-sum distributions from a retirement plan are rolled into an individual retirement account (IRA) within 60 days, the taxes will be deferred until you draw money from the IRA.

If we can be of assistance with the items mentioned here, or if you would like additional "red flag planning tips" please contact us.

Wimbledon finals today

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Boris Becker stepped up the power in the last two sets and outlasted Ivan Lendl 7-5, 6-7, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3 today to gain a shot at a third Wimbledon men's championship.

The title match, a replay of last year's against Stefan Edberg, will be played Sunday immediately after the women's final between Steffi Graf and Martina Navratilova.

That match was due to be played Saturday. But rain that started as drizzle and turned into steady showers forced it to be postponed until 1 p.m. local time Sunday.

It will be the ninth time both singles titles have been decided on the same day at Wimbledon, and the first time since 1973.

After 10 days of fairly good weather and relatively uninterrupted schedules, rain has plagued the last two days of the 103rd edition of the grass-court championships. Drizzle halted Edberg's semifinal victory over John McEnroe for 3½ hours Friday and forced the Becker-Lendl match to be moved back a day. Then the same type of drizzle interrupted the match for just over an hour in the third set.

Becker, champion in 1985 and 1986 and last year's runner-up, came back from a break down in the fourth set to end another unsuccessful challenge by Lendl for the title the Greenwich, Conn.-based Czechoslovak craves most.

Becker beat Lendl in the final three years ago and beat him again in last year's semifinals.

This time, Lendl, the world's top-ranked player has never has won Wimbledon, looked about to gain his revenge in a rain-hit semifinal. He hit back from a first-set loss to take a two sets to one lead and move up 3-2 in the third set with a break of serve.

But Becker's ripping backhand passes, plus some disputed line-calls against Lendl, changed the course of the match and sent the West German into his fourth final in five years.

As he put a winning forehand into the corner on match-point, Becker raised his hand in triumph at the end of a match lasting one minute over four hours. He then slammed a ball into the stands.

The men's schedule was pushed back by persistent drizzle Friday. Lendl and Becker never got on court after McEnroe and Edberg took seven hours to finish.

Similar conditions forced the players off court for 1¼ hours today, but the weather lifted.

Lendl, who never has been at home on Wimbledon's grass, set out with a game plan to serve and volley his way past the big-hitting Becker.

Although the West German took the opening set after breaking Lendl in the 11th game with one of numerous backhand winners, Lendl didn't wilt.

He saved five break points in the opening game of the second set, then matched Becker stroke for stroke until the tiebreaker.

Lendl, who had won five out seven previous tiebreakers in this tournament, used that experience to take the most important one. He won it 7-2 and carried on the momentum by breaking Becker in the opening game of the third set.

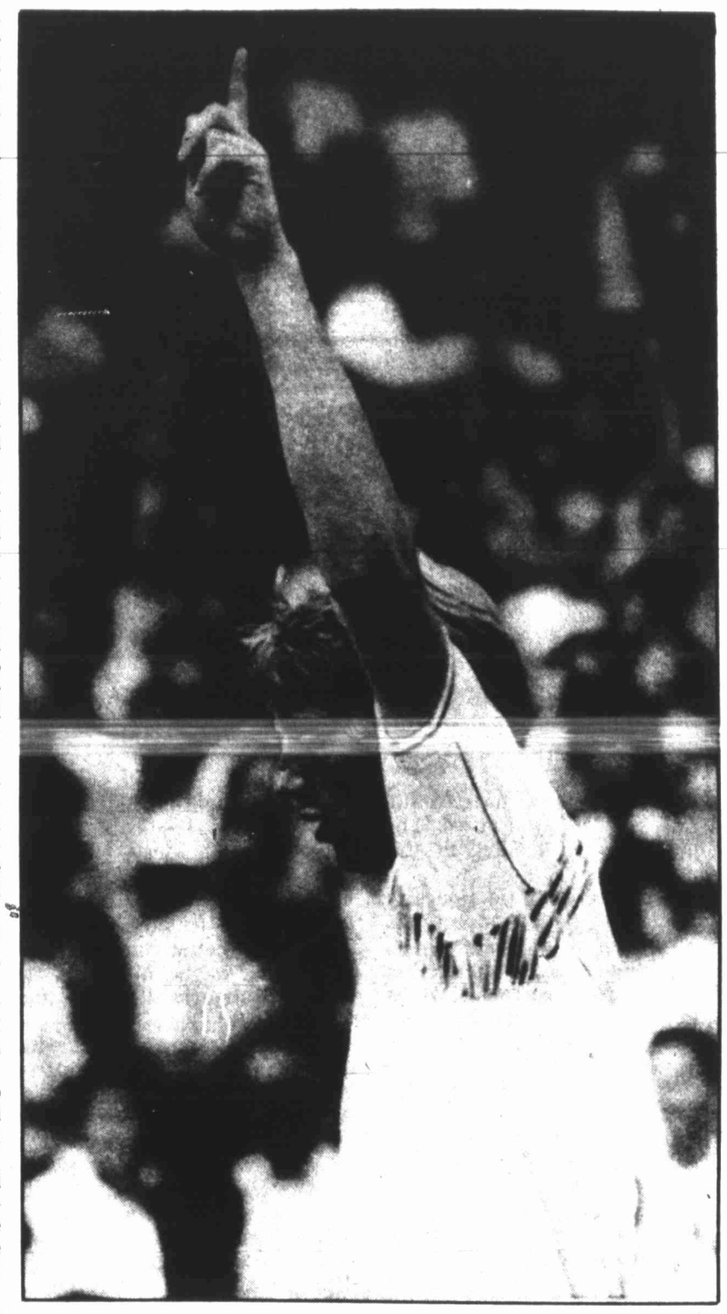

Becker was in trouble as Lendl put together one of his strongest runs on Wimbledon's grass. He broke the West German again for 3-0 before the drizzle forced the players off court for 75 minutes.

When they returned, all Lendl had to do to take the set was hold serve. At 5-2, he staved off two break points and took the set on his fourth set point as Becker put a service return long.

Lendl showed little sign of cracking as he stayed with Becker until 2-2 in the fourth set, then broke him for 3-2.

But in the next game, with Lendl serving at break point, he double-faulted to give Becker a break back for 3-3. From that moment, the West German took control.

Come on you guys, Lendl shouted at the chair as another line call went against him. "I'm having enough problems on my own. Why are you making it more difficult. It's unbelievable."

Action at 7 a.m.

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC will televise the women's and men's singles finals at Wimbledon Sunday starting at 7 a.m. Big Spring time, one hour earlier than originally planned.

The change was caused by the one-day postponement of the women's final between Martina Navratilova and defending champion Steffi Graf.

The men's final between Boris Becker and defending champion Stefan Edberg will follow the women's match.

On the West Coast, the matches will be shown on a delayed basis starting at 7 a.m. PDT, also one hour earlier than planned.

Young Stanton runner chip off the old block

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

STANTON — It's a very solid statement to say that Jeremy Stallings is following in his father's footsteps. More accurately, he's running in his father's footsteps.

The 14-year-old freshman-to-be is one of the best young distance runners in the state. He's currently undefeated on the track circuit this season in the 800 and 1600 meter runs. This includes spring season for Stanton junior high and in summer track.

He will put his record on the line in the Texas Games regional meet in Odessa Saturday. The top two finishers in each event qualify for the state meet in LaPorte Aug. 4-5.

It's no wonder Jeremy is a gifted distance runner. Dad Steve was the best distance runner to come out of Martin County, and one of the best in the Crossroads area for that matter.

Steve was the state champion in the mile for Stanton High School his junior year. His time of 4:24.0 is still the school record at Stanton. He went to Baylor on a track scholarship.

Jeremy, who's been running competitively for four years, has ran some remarkable times for his age. He's run bests of 2:06.0 in the 800 and 4:43.0 in the 1600. In comparision, the winning time in District 6-2A, the conference in which Stanton competes, were 2:01:29 and 4:50.90.

"One of my goals for next year is to make it to the state track meet as a freshman," said Jeremy. "I think if I run about a 4:30 and 1:58 I'll have a chance."

Jeremy began his career by running with his dad seven years ago. The two used to run at various road races together. Now dad doesn't run very much competitively; he spends most of his time as Jeremy's trainer.

A typical week of workouts consists of three to four miles of road work Monday and Wednesdays, and intervals on the track on Tuesday and Thursday. On those days he might run six 200's, 4-6 400's and two 800's.

STANTON — Jeremy Stallings has his sights on winning the Texas Games regional meet in Odessa. The Stanton runner is the defending champion.

Jeremy is one of about 50 youths in Stanton that participate in summer track. The program was started by Jeremy's mom, Kathy, dad and a couple of other people. Unlike other summer track programs which are school-funded, the Stanton program is funded mostly by parents. The local Lions Club does help with expenses, though. Other summer programs Stanton competes against are Kermit, Monahans, Pecos, Iraan, Midland and Odessa.

When there's no summer track meets scheduled, Jeremy

Three tied in Hartford

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Kenny Knox bogeyed the 17th hole after Wayne Levi and Wayne Grady birdied it and all three finished tied with a one-stroke lead after Saturday's third round of the Greater Hartford Open.

Knox, the co-leader after the first round and the sole leader after the second, shot a 2-under-par 69 for a 54-hole total of 12-under 201.

Levi's 64 was the day's best round and matched Lee Trevino's round on Friday for the best of the tournament. Grady shot a 65 and, like Levi, had a bogey-free round.

The trio had plenty of competition heading into Sunday's final round at the 6,786-yard, par-71 Tournament Players Club of Connecticut as 14 players were within three strokes of the leaders.

PGA

Tied at 11 under were Mark Calcavecchia, the tour's third-leading money winner, 1987 GHO champion Paul Azinger and Bill Britton, a non-winner on the tour. Calcavecchia and Azinger shot 67 Saturday and Britton had a 68.

Knox, who has won two tournaments since rejoining the tour in 1984, went 13 under par and took 18-foot birdie putt at the 424-yard 14th hole.

But on the 399-yard 17th, he followed a good drive with a 7-iron that he pulled to the left of the green. He pitched the ball 10 feet past the cup, then had a downhill putt for par. He played the ball to break from right to left, but it went straight and he had to tap in for just his second bogey in 48 holes.

Levi surged into a share of the lead despite getting little sleep much of the week because his 14-month-old son Brian, suffering from a viral infection, kept waking up.

"I'm dragging," Levi said. "The other day my eyes felt like they had bricks hanging from the eyelids."

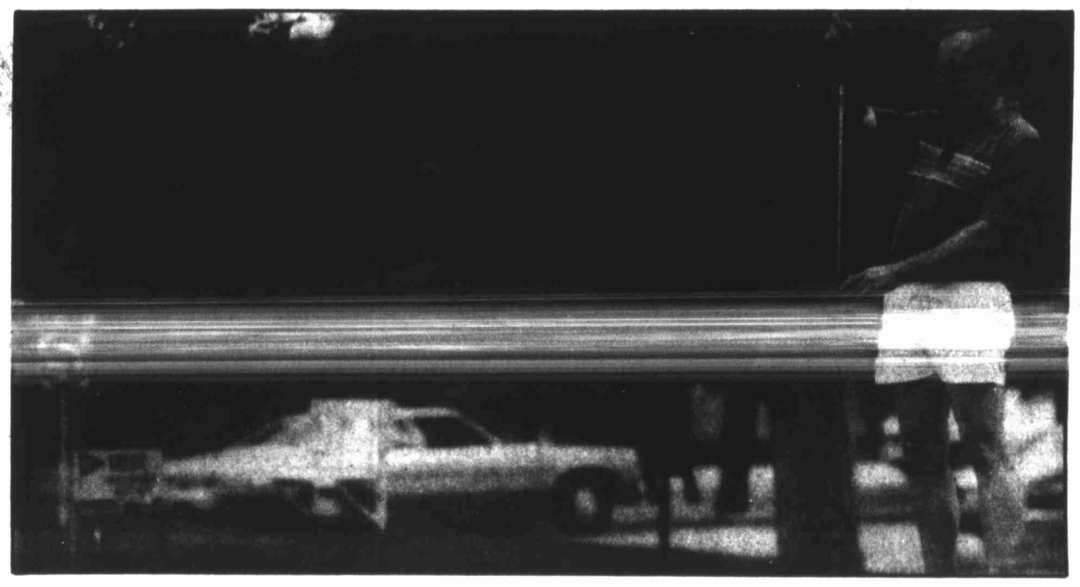

He was five under for the round, then birdied 16 and 17 with putts of 15 and 6 feet.

"I putted very well," he said. "The game's won and lost on the green."

Grady, an Australian who won his first event on the American tour at last month's Westchester Classic, tied for fourth at the 1985 GHO.

"This has been a good course for me," said Grady, who has rebounded from poor performances throughout 1986 and 1987. "You start to question yourself. ... Now I feel like I belong."

He was four under for the day, then birdied the 172-yard 16th hole with a 25-foot putt and the 17th with a 10-foot putt.

BIG SPRING — David Matus, using his putter, lines up the ball before putting during action in the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center Golf Tournament Saturday morning at the Comanche Trail Park golf course. Tournament play will conclude today.

Hammel leading Farr Classic by two strokes

SYLVANIA, Ohio (AP) — Penny Hammel birdied the final hole to complete a 5-under-par 66 and take a two-stroke lead after Saturday's second round of the Jamie Farr Toledo Classic.

Hammel, whose only LPGA victory came in the 1985 Farr Classic, shot the day's low round and was at 7-under 135 through 36 holes of the 54-hole tournament at Highland Meadows Golf Club.

Hammel, with only one bogey through 36 holes, came to the 18th hole tied with Neumann, who was playing in the group ahead of her. Neumann bogeyed the hole after hitting her drive into a fairway bunker. Hammel then hit a 7-iron to within 20 feet on the par-5 closing hole and rolled in the birdie putt to double her lead.

Neumann, the defending U.S. Open champion, will defend her title next week at the Indianwood Golf & Country Club in Lake Orion, Mich.

Lopez, who has finished second in each of her three appearances at the Farr, shot her second straight 70 and headed the group at 140. She was joined by three-time U.S. Open winner Hollis Stacy, Dale Eggeling and Jane Crafter.

Crafter, who started the day tied for the lead Susan Sanders, shot a 73 after an opening-round 67.

Fourteen players were under par through two rounds on the 6,370-yard, par-71 course.

LPGA

Liselotte Neumann of Sweden bogeyed the final hole for a 69 and was next at 137. Betsy King, this year's leading money-winner, was tied with Sara Anne McGetrick at 4-under 138.

Hammel, a 27-year-old native of Decatur, Ill., shot a final-round 65 to beat Nancy Lopez by a stroke to win this tournament four years ago, when it was a 72-hole event played at nearby Shannopin Country Club.

Fans, managers don't agree on All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — When fans do the All-Star voting, Howard Johnson and Ruben Sierra are zeroes. When managers do the picking, they're heroes.

Johnson, fourth in the voting among National League third basemen, and Sierra, sixth among American League outfielders, were unanimous selections in a survey of major league managers by The Associated Press.

"That's nice to hear," Johnson said. "I really don't mind the fans voting, but sometimes you run into problems when players make the team who shouldn't and it prevents other deserving players from becoming all-stars."

Twenty-four of the 26 managers participated in the survey — Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds and Tom Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers declined. Managers could not vote for players on their own teams.

Seven of the elected starters would be different if managers did the picking. In the AL, the Yankees' Don Mattingly would start at first instead of Oakland's Mark McGwire, Minnesota's Gary Gaetti would start at third instead of Boston's Wade Boggs, Mickey Tettleton of the Orioles would be the catcher instead of Oakland's Terry Steinbach and Sierra would start in the outfield instead of Oakland's Jose Canseco, who won't play because he's been on the disabled list all season.

In the NL, Mike Scioscia of the Dodgers would start at catcher instead of the fans' choice, Benito Santiago of San Diego; Cincinnati's Barry Larkin would start at shortstop in place of the Cardinals' Ozzie Smith, and Johnson would start at third instead of Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt, who won't play because he retired in May.

In addition to Johnson, there were two other unanimous picks — first baseman Will Clark of the San Francisco Giants and outfielder Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres.

Johnson got 647,415 votes from the fans, behind Schmidt (729,249), Cincinnati's Chris Sabo (713,113) and Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla (649,659). Going into Sunday's games, the New York Mets third baseman had a .297 average, 22 homers and 57 runs batted in.

"I said a few weeks ago that I would be happy just to make the team," said Johnson, picked as a substitute. "I guess major league baseball has to decide what the game should be — is it for the fans, or the best players, or what? Maybe they could come up with a way for the fans and players and managers to vote."

Sierra, who began Saturday batting .333 with 14 homers and an AL-leading 65 RBIs, got 729,775 votes. He trailed Kansas City's Bo Jackson (1,748,696), Minnesota's Kirby Puckett (1,555,881), Canseco (932,329), Boston's Mike Greenwell (826,577) and Oakland's Rickey Henderson (784,890).

"That's a big honor and I'm very happy that the managers think that way," Sierra said. "All the managers know what I'm doing. The fans don't follow the team very much. I don't feel good about the fans' vote, but [illegible] got chosen for the All-Star Game."

In the closest race among the managers, Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs beat Houston's Bill Doran at second base. Sandberg won the fan balloting with 1,150,064 votes and Doran finished sixth with 425,072.

Mattingly won the managers' voting for AL first baseman, beating Toronto's Fred McGriff 7-3, with McGwire getting two votes. The fans gave McGwire 1,263,476 votes, while Mattingly was second with 808,502 and McGriff fifth with 355,722.

At third, Gaetti had 7½ votes to 4½ for Boggs. Gaetti finished third in the fan voting with 546,927, trailing Boggs (1,295,355) and Oakland's Carney Lansford (907,124).

Tettleton, third in the fan balloting with 570,697 votes, got 10 of the 14 votes as the AL's starting catcher to three for Steinbach (1,078,902) and one for Toronto's Ernie Whitt (191,534).

In the NL, the managers chose Larkin over Smith 8-2 at shortstop. But in the fan balloting, Smith beat Larkin 1,776,233 to 708,126.

Canseco has been playing with the Athletics' Class AA farm team, the Huntsville Stars, while rehabilitating his injured wrist.

He sat out Friday night's 6-0 loss to the Memphis Chicks because of soreness, Stars manager Jeff Newman said. But he said Canseco, who has helped boost Huntsville's attendance to record levels, was scheduled to see action Saturday night against the Chicks.

"As far as I know, he'll play," Newman said.

Mets bruise struggling Reds, 8-3

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Teufel was hot at the plate and away from it Saturday.

The New York Mets infielder had four hits before being hit with a pitch that led to a brawl Saturday, and Darryl Strawberry had a two-run homer to lead the New York Mets past the Cincinnati Reds 8-3.

Cincinnati reliever Rob Dibble hit Teufel in the back with a pitch in the eighth inning. Dibble walked off mound and Teufel started out toward him. Teufel then threw several punches as both benches emptied.

"He threw right at me," Teufel said. "There's no need for that. He's not so good that he can't give up a run."

After order was restored, the benches cleared again as the players wrestled near the mound. Dibble, Teufel, New York's Juan Samuel and Cincinnati's Norm Charlton were ejected.

Dibble denied he was throwing at Teufel although Cincinnati manager Pete Rose admitted being unhappy that the Mets were stealing bases with a big lead.

"I don't need to send messages," Dibble said. "I went out there to get some work. I've already been fined enough."

"That's just rubbing it in," Rose said. "Davey Johnson and I are from the same school. If you're stealing at that point, you should expect to get knocked down."

After the game, Charlton called the Mets' clubhouse looking for Samuel and Strawberry answered the phone and told Charlton to come over.

Charlton, losing pitcher Tom Browning and Danny Jackson headed for the Mets' clubhouse but were headed off by security.

In his previous start on July 4 in Philadelphia, Browning, 7-7, came within three outs of becoming the first pitcher ever to throw two perfect games

Teufel was 4-for-4 with an RBI and Samuel had three hits and two RBIs to pace the Mets' 16-hit attack. It was Teufel's fourth four-hit game as a Met and second against Browning.

HOUSTON — Montreal Expos Mike Fritzgerald (20) hits the ground after he was hit by his foul tip in second inning action Saturday at the Astrodome.

Astros 3, Expos 2

HOUSTON (AP) — A single by Rafael Ramirez broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning as Houston snapped the Montreal Expos' eight-game winning streak at the Astrodome and gave the Astros their 23rd one-run victory.

Terry Puhl started the inning with a double down the right field line against Andy McGaffigan, 1-4, and moved to third on a grounder before Ramirez bounced his run-scoring hit up the middle through a drawn-in infield.

Dodgers 8, Cubs 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Eddie Murray hit a three-run homer and Alfredo Griffin and Willie Randolph each drove in two runs, leading Mike Morgan and the Los Angeles Dodgers over the Chicago Cubs.

The Dodgers snapped their five-game losing streak and ended Chicago's four-game winning streak.

Morgan, 6-8, went into the game with a major league-leading 1.82 earned run average but got little hitting support until Saturday.

Abbott and Angels gun down Twins

By The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Both Jim Abbott and the California Angels are riding high these days.

Abbott, the former Olympic hero born without a right hand, gained his eighth victory of the season with a 4-1 decision over over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

In winning, Abbott, 8-5, made sure the Angels would take an All-Star break with the top record in baseball. They have a 1-2 game lead over the Oakland A's in the American League West with a mark of 51-33.

"I think I've had a good first half," Abbott said. "I can say that especially because we're in first place. I've learned a lot, and I'm more comfortable with what I have to do."

Abbott allowed only one run in 6 1-3 innings before Greg Minton and Bryan Harvey, who earned his 12th save, wrapped up the Angels' win.

"Abbott looks like a good, young pitcher," Minnesota manager Tom Kelly said after the Twins lost their fifth straight game. "He has a nice breaking ball and a lively fastball."

California Manager Doug Rader, whose 1983 Texas club led the AL West at the All-Star break, downplayed the significance of leading at that point.

"It means very little. Honestly, I don't think it's that important," Rader said.

Abbott scattered nine hits, but blanked the Twins until Brian Harper's run-scoring single knocked him out in the seventh.

Greg Minton, activated from the disabled list before the game, came on to end the threat. Minton pitched until the ninth, when Bryan Harvey relieved for his 12th save.

The Angels broke through against Roy Smith, 4-4, in the fifth on Lance Parrish's two-run homer. They added a run in the sixth on Wally Joyner's sacrifice fly and another in the seventh on Johnny Ray's RBI double.

Rangers 5, Athletics 4

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Julio Franco's 10th-inning single drove in the winning run after Thad Bosley's two-run single tied the game in the ninth as the Texas Rangers defeated the Oakland Athletics 5-4.

Rafael Palmeiro singled with one out in the 10th off Oakland left-hander Matt Young, 0-3. After Ruben Sierra singled, right-hander Gene Nelson relieved and gave up the single to Franco, the All-Star second baseman who now has 62 RBIs.

Jeff Russell, 4-2, pitched two scoreless innings for the victory after giving up an eighth-inning homer to Rickey Henderson that gave the A's their first lead of the game.

Yankees 7, Red Sox 5

BOSTON (AP) — Mel Hall ignited a three-run sixth inning with a solo homer and Eric Plunk pitched four innings of one-hit relief Saturday as the New York Yankees rallied to beat the Boston Red Sox.

The Yankees spotted Boston a 4-0 lead in the first inning, then fought back with three runs in the third and three more in the sixth.

After Hall homered and Jesse Barfield walked in the sixth, Mike Smithson, 4-8, replaced Eric Hetzel and gave up two-out singles to Bob Geren, Alvaro Espinoza and Roberto Kelly, giving New York a 6-5 lead.

will usually find a road race to compete in. Tuesday he outkicked Ken Woody of Midland to win the men's elite division in the Midland Mile in downtown Midland.

Jeremy sprinted hard the last 100 yards to finish in 5:03, while Woody, a 32-year-old veteran of the area road racing scene, clocked a 5:06.

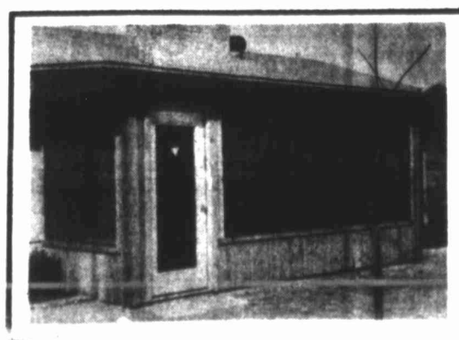

It's no doubt Jeremy will be the favorite in his events at the regional meet in Odessa — he's the defending champ. But he didn't get to compete in the national meet last year because it fell on the same dates of the Jesse Owens National meet. He finished third in that meet.

Jeremy met his toughest competition at the national Junior Olympics meet in Florida last year. He didn't make the finals in a field in which 4:15 won the 1500 meters, a time equivalent to a 4:32 mile.

"There is a lot better competition in the summer," said Jeremy. "It all starts at the state meet. I run better in the summer because of that. In the spring, it's hard for me to run a good time without anyone pushing me."

Jeremy has his sights on returning to the national JO meet again. It will be in Spokane, Wash. This year. Another long term goal is replacing Steve Stallings as the Stanton school record holder in the mile.

There's nothing like keeping it in the family.

Cowboys draft Miami QB

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, who said they didn't draft Steve Walsh to trade him, could have plenty of suitors willing to talk about it.

Green Bay, Miami and Kansas City all said they wanted Walsh in Friday's supplemental draft, only to see the Cowboys win the lottery and take the quarterback who led the University of Miami to a 23-1 record in two years, including a national championship in 1987.

That gives the Cowboys two rookie quarterbacks. They took Troy Aikman as No. 1 in the regular 1989 draft and signed him to an $11 million, six-year contract.

"That makes an interesting scenario in Dallas," said Tom Braatz, Packers executive vice president of football operations. "The first thing that everybody said as soon as Dallas took Walsh was: 'Do you think that makes Aikman available?' So people started clicking in their minds that Dallas all of a sudden has two young quarterbacks. We like both of them. That may be a place to go in the future to find one."

Braatz said the Cowboys told him in conversations prior to the supplemental draft that they would let Aikman and Walsh compete in training camp and then trade one of them.

In today's editions of the Minneapolis-based Star Tribune, one of Walsh's agents, Ron Simon, was quoted as saying a trade was likely.

"The impression (Dallas coach) Jimmy Johnson gave to Steve Walsh was that if they trade him, they'll try to accomodate his wishes," Simon said. "And that means Minnesota. I would think there is a significant chance of a trade from Dallas to Minnesota in the next year."

Walsh is represented by Simon and Marvin Demoff.

Minnesota general manager Mike Lynn said he contacted Dallas about a deal.

"It doesn't make a lot of sense to have two first-round quarterbacks the same year," said Lynn, quoted in today's editions of the St. Paul Pioneer Press Dispatch. "There's a good chance they'll move him. It'd be logical to assume he'll be traded.

"I expressed our interest. They said they would not trade him without calling us first."

David Pelletier, Cowboys assistant public relations director, said Saturday that two or three teams have called expressing an interest in Walsh. But he says that does not necessarily mean the Cowboys are looking to trade him.

"We would be perfectly happy to bring him into to camp and into the season with us," Pelletier said. "Having two rookie quarterbacks of that caliber ... that's a great situation. You need two good quarterbacks."

Greg Aiello, the Cowboys' public relations director, said Aikman has a one-year no-trade clause. But he refused to discuss a possible trade.

He also said the Cowboys do not expect to sign Walsh before Monday, but do expect him to show up for a voluntary one-week quarterback school that day.

Walsh told The Tribune that the Cowboys are in a good position either way.

Now they have strength at the quraterback position," Walsh said. "Whenever you have a strength, you're in good shape with your team or in good shape to make a trade."

Chiefs general manager Carl Peterson said he expects to talk with Johnson and Dallas owner Jerry Jones in the next week or so.

"I would venture to say Dallas will be talking to lots of teams," Peterson said. "The assumption is probably a good one that they probably don't want to go into the 1989 season with both those young quarterbacks. But I can't speak for Jimmy Johnson or Jerry Jones.'

The Chiefs drafted Mike Elkins of Wake Forest in the second round of the regular draft and also will go into the season with veteran quarterbacks Ron Jaworski and Steve DeBerg. In the supplemental draft, they passed on Washington State's Timm Rosenbach, taken in the second phase of the first round by Phoenix.

Asked if the Chiefs passed on Rosenbach because they considered Elkins a better prospect, Peterson said, "That is probably a good assumption."

By taking Walsh, Dallas gave up its first-round pick in the regular 1990 draft. Phoenix did the same with Rosenbach and Denver with running back Bobby Humphrey of Alabama.

Walsh said he expects to be paid an amount close to Aikman.

"If they want me to compete on an equal scale with Troy, compensation will have to be somewhat similar," Walsh said. "It's the only way to be fair to my career and Troy's career."

"I think people have found out in this league, you have to have more than one quarterback," said Johnson, who coached Walsh at Miami before joining the Cowboys. "I would have kicked myself for a long time if I had passed on a player of the quality of Steve Walsh."

"He drafted me to come out and compete for a job," Walsh said. "Troy and I are very similar, neither of us have taken a snap in the NFL. Coach Johnson has known my ability and they get to know Troy better day after day. It should be an interesting camp."

Green Bay, Detroit, Kansas City, Atlanta, Tampa Bay, Pittsburgh, San Diego and Miami all passed in the first round, opting to keep their 1990 first-round picks.

The two quarterbacks and Humphrey were the only prime players of the 12 eligible for the supplemental draft. Running back Mike Loman of Coffeyville Junior College was taken by Dallas in the 12th round.

The NFL did not release the order of selection by the first nine teams, which means it is not known how many, if any, teams passed on Walsh before Dallas took him.

Phoenix coach Gene Stallings says Phoenix got Rosenbach at the No. 13 spot in the draft and was surprised he dropped so low.

Rosenbach, a two-year starter at Washington State, led NCAA Division I-A in passing efficiency in 1988, completing 65.9 percent for 253.7 yards per game and 23 touchdowns. He led the Cougars to a 9-3 record, their best since 1930.

Rosenbach will be competing with Neil Lomax and Gary Hogeboom for a job at Phoenix.

"I've watched Neil since I was a kid in the Pacific Northwest and saw him get 115 points in one game for Portland State," Rosenbach said. "I've followed his career ever since. I have to be realistic and go to Phoenix to learn and compete. Who better to learn from than a guy who has done as much as Neil Lomax?"

Humphrey came back from a broken foot in spring practice to rush for 192 yards in Alabama's first two games in 1988, then broke the bone again. He ran for 1,471 yards and 15 touchdowns as a sophomore and 1,255 yards and 11 touchdowns as a junior.

"I'm excited about being in Denver," Humphrey said. "It showed the Broncos have a great deal of respect for what type ball player I am in picking me.

Mac makes gallant effort; no 4th Wimbledon crown

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe gave it everything he had but still came up short. Now, he said, things can only get tougher in his quest for a fourth Wimbledon singles crown.

"It doesn't get any easier," the 30-year-old American said after losing 7-5, 7-6, 7-6 on Centre Court to defending champion Stefan Edberg in a rainy semifinal Friday.

"I still feel my game is very well suited to this court and I feel I have an opportunity to win it," McEnroe said. "I'd like to win a couple more majors if I could. It does get tougher, probably."

Today's program on the next-to-last day of the tournament started with the other men's semifinal between two-time champion Boris Becker and top-seeded Ivan Lendl. Their match never got underway Friday because of the rain.

The women's singles final between defending champion Steffi Graf and Martina Navratilova, their third straight Wimbledon championship showdown, followed Becker-Lendl.

McEnroe, playing his first semifinal at Wimbledon since 1984, when he won the last of his three titles, did everything right against Edberg but found his opponent in inspired form.

In every department — serving, volleying, returning, passing and especially speed — the Swede had the edge. But it was only a slight edge, and McEnroe said he couldn't have fought any harder.

"I feel like ... I did the best I could," the left-handed New Yorker said. "It wasn't like I played badly."

Edberg agreed the match hinged on a few key points.

"It was the small things that made me win," Edberg said. "I hit some good shots when I really needed to. There was not a lot of difference between the two of us."

McEnroe, who had dropped sets against all but one of his previous opponents, began as if the match was his last. He broke Edberg for a 3-2 lead as the Swede double-faulted twice, then held for 4-2.

But with his first serve troubling him as badly as it had in previous rounds, McEnroe couldn't sustain the momentum.

He double-faulted twice to concede a break in the eighth game and Edberg broke him again for the set with two ripping winners and a couple of pinpoint volleys.

McEnroe's reflex shots would have beaten most other players. But Edberg's anticipation was superb and, in an intense second set, McEnroe saved a set point in the 12th game with an ace just before a sparrow flew on to the grass and briefly lifted the tension.

In all, the American served eight aces but also sent down nine double faults.

In the tiebreaker, Edberg took a 4-1 lead, then carved out four more set points at 6-2. He needed only one, a service winner.

McEnroe badly needed a respite and soon got one.

With the American leading 3-2 in the third set, a steady drizzle sent the players off-court. When they returned almost 3½ hours later, both looked faster and revitalized.

"I wasn't too worried going back," Edberg said. "I felt good and I knew I had to concentrate really hard because I knew he was going to go out and try to get a good start."

Short serves by either player were immediately killed and in another finely balanced set, McEnroe had a set point when Edberg served at 4-5.

The Swede saved it with a service winner and time began to run out for McEnroe, whose last victory in a Grand Slam tournament was the 1984 U.S. Open.

In the second tiebreaker, Edberg again was dominant, reaching double match point at 6-4 with another service winner. McEnroe saved one when Edberg netted a volley, then had the chance to stay in the match on his own serve.

But Edberg's brilliant backhand cross-court return flashed past the American.

McEnroe, who had to contend with four separate death threats during the tournament, said he coped well with the pressure.

"When I look back on it, I'll have pleasant memories of the role I played," McEnroe said. "Certain other things, obviously I won't have pleasant memories of.

Boggs will remain a Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — With a .384 lifetime average in little Fenway Park, Wade Boggs hopes to play his entire career with the Boston Red Sox.

For months he demanded a new contract with a no-trade provision, with his main clout an option to become a free agent in the fall.

The Red Sox, though, refused to budge from a club policy: no no-trade clauses for anyone.

Boggs and his agent, Alan Nero, finally gave in during a series of negotiations this week.

On Friday, Boggs agreed to a three-year $7.3 million contract [illegible] million in 1991 and $2.7 million in 1992.

"It wasn't one of my top priorities, but I'm glad we got it done," said Boggs, who is headed for his fifth All-Star Game as the starting third baseman.

"I'm very much relieved," the five-time American League batting champion added. "It's one less thing on my mind now.

"The way I'm looking at it, I'm going to be here for three more years, or until I'm told otherwise."

The new agreement worked out by Nero, and Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman, also contains several incentive clauses. They include $100,000 for MVP, $50,000 for runnerup, $50,000 for winning the Gold Glove, $50,000 for playoff MVP and $50,000 for World Series MVP.

"We're delighted to get Wade Boggs signed for the next three years," Gorman said. "Hopefully, this will put to rest all the rumors of Wade being trade or wanting to leave through free agency.

"He is an extremely valuable [illegible] most dedicated players in the game. Now he can concentrate on trying to win his sixth batting title and helping the Red Sox to get back to first place in the Eastern Division race."

"We worked really hard to get this contract done," Nero said. "Wade is very pleased because he's always maintained that Boston is where he wants to spend the rest of his career."

"Lou said to my face, 'We're not trying to trade you,' " Boggs said. "I've gotta take that at face value."

"There is no trade on the table for Wade Boggs with any team," Gorman said. "However, if a club is going for the pennant and wants to trade for Wade Boggs they would go for it regardless of the contract situation."

Red Sox co-owner Haywood Sullivan praised Boggs as "one of the hardest working people we've ever had," but he refused to rule out the possibility of trade.

"When you get that kind of money, you always have to expect that a trade could be a possibility," Sullivan said.

After a hectic spring training spiced by national publication of alleged details of his two-year affair with Margo Adams, Boggs, 31, got off to a slow start this season.

However, he hit .381 in June and raised his average to .330 heading into Saturday's game with the New York Yankees. He had 101 hits in an attempt to extend his major league record to seven consecutive years with 200 or more hits.

Knicks will take young coach

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks appear to be putting continuity over experience in their search for a replacement to Rick Pitino.

Stu Jackson has never served as an NBA coach, but his two years under Pitino give him a good shot at getting the job with New York. He will be named coach of the New York Knicks early next week, according to published reports.

Jackson, 32, would become the youngest coach in the NBA. He has no head coaching experience in college or the pros.

A Knicks spokesman said the team has no official announcement scheduled yet. But he did not deny that Jackson would get the position after serving as Pitino's assistant the last two years.

Several New York area newspapers have reported this week that Jackson was going to get the job. On Thursday, the New York Daily News said a source from Paramount Communications, which owns the NBA team, had confirmed Jackson's hiring.

In Friday's editions of the New York Times, it was reported that a Knicks official had confirmed Jackson would get the job vacated by Pitino, who left to coach at Kentucky.

When Pitino left in May, Jackson said he didn't think he was a candidate for the job.

"They want me to get more experience, maybe two or three more years as an assistant," he said.

But Knicks general manager Al Bianchi apparently has opted for continuity.

"All assistant coaches are candidates," Bianchi said earlier this week. "There are no head [illegible]."

Actually, Doug Collins became available Thursday when he was fired by the Chicago Bulls. But Bianchi already had decided on Jackson.

"I think he's an excellent choice. The guy is extremely well-organized. Stu has an amazing wealth of basketball knowledge and organization skills. Most important, he gets along great with the guys." — Knicks forward Kiki Vandeweghe.

Jackson often served as an intermediary between the players and Pitino, whose hard-driving style at times alienated some of the [illegible].

The Times quotes its source as saying Jackson's lack of head coaching background shouldn't be a drawback.

"The Knicks are an experienced team," the source told the newspaper. "Stu has been around them. He knows the things they can and can't do. But most of all, the players like him and that's important. We're not worried over his lack of experience. A lot of coaches started in the pro game without experience and did well."

Paul Silas, former coach of the San Diego Clippers and a star forward for the Hawks, Celtics and SuperSonics, reportedly will be hired as an assistant coach. So will former Knick Ernie Grunfeld, the team's radio analyst the last two seasons.

Soviets players know the key words of hockey

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey Devils coach Jim Schoenfeld is philosophical about teaching the ins and outs of the National Hockey League to his two newly acquired Soviet defensemen, neither of whom speak English.

"It's not like I have to teach them great literature," Schoenfeld said. "They know 'pass' and 'shoot.'"

Viacheslav Fetisov and Sergei Starikov donned their Devils jerseys for the first time Friday, as the team introduced the former stars of the Central Red Army team.

Fetisov, a defenseman and [illegible] political reforms led by Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev were responsible for giving him and Starikov a chance to play on the ice at the Meadowlands.

"If it wasn't for glasnost and Gorbachev, this wouldn't be happening right now," Fetisov said through an interpreter. "It's easier to play hockey than to deal with all this bureaucracy. What it comes down to is you fight for what you want."

Devils coach Jim Schoenfeld said the fighting instincts in Fetisov and Starikov are just what his team needs to become a playoff contender.

The two Soviets, signed earlier [illegible] anchor the Devils' defense. Scoring punch should be added by Fetisov — who in his best season, 1983-84, had 19 goals and 30 assists in 44 games.

"It's not like just two other players are joining the team," Schoenfeld said. "These two are very special individuals who are going to make an impact. They're physically tough and they're mentally tough and they're going to help us win."

Schoenfeld dismissed concerns that the Soviets' inability to speak English would hamper them.

Schoenfeld and General Manager Lou Lamoriello also [illegible] from the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation asking that the two players be banned from the NHL. The Soviet agency has claimed that contract negotiations were improper.

The Soviet government apparently agrees with the Devils.

Yuri Dubinin, Soviet Ambassador to the United States, attended the introductions and praised the arrangement as a furthering improvements in East-West relations.

"You are following the example of our leaders, Mikhail Gorbachev and George Bush," Dubinin said. "We try to develop our relations with the United [illegible] opening new avenues in a spirit of cooperation."

Center Kirk Muller, the Devils' captain, said the two players would face a rough time early in the season, but that he expected their talent and size would speed their initiation into the NHL.

Fetisov, 31, is 6-foot-1 and 200 pounds; Starikov, 30, is 5-10 and 215.

"It's certainly going to be tough for them and more of a test than a player from another North American country would have, because that's old hat," Muller said.

"It's something new and everybody's going to be watching [illegible] on," Muller said. "But they're comfortable with their skills and that's going to help them along."

Schoenfeld said there may be some animosity at first from Devils players whose jobs are threatened, but that competition is what builds championship teams and the players will realize that.

"It's got to make us a better team, that's all there is to it," he said. "Not just because we have these two players, but it'll help the players coming back. I think more competition will mean more people coming back in bet-

My stepson the shark

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

My wife and I recently took her five-year-old son home to daddy after a three-week visit, and I must say that I totally enjoyed his time with us.

Jeramy (a.k.a. George, Seymour, Mike or whatever name he conjures up to fit a situation) is a typical five-year-old, I guess. I say "guess" because every time I wondered at his ability to create all sorts of havoc, people would say, "Don't worry, he's only five years old."

I suppose these people are correct. After all, most of them have had far greater experience in child-rearing than yours truly.

But this tiny voice in my mind screams every time it hears "Jeramy" and "typical" used in the same sentence.

My mother reassured me that I was a typical five-year-old when I was that age, and I don't remember having half the energy our miniature lightning bolt possesses.

Energy — he has lots of that.

The first full day he was with us, I watched after him while the missus was working. Hoping to ingratiate myself with him early, I asked him what he wanted to do.

What he wanted to do, in short, was everything. If it involved climbing, sliding, swimming, running, jumping, playing, etc., he was all for the idea.

And of course, good ol' Stevie went along with his myriad suggestions. I don't consider myself to be in bad physical condition, but after several hours of attempting to keep up with Hurricane Jeramy, I had enough aches and pains to keep the Ben-Gay folks busy for months.

And that was just the first day. I count it as a miracle that I've avoided an extended trip to the hospital during his three weeks here.

I didn't altogether avoid a trip to our friendly neighborhood medical center, however. A few days after again being a nice guy and taking him swimming, I developed a nasty sunburn and an earache that required a short visit to the emergency room.

Did anything happen to my stepson? Noooooo. He emerged from the pool as hale and hearty as ever.

It isn't fair.

I devised a theory during the past few weeks that possibly explains Jeramy's over-abundance of vim and vigor: His biomechanics are similar to those of a shark.

A shark, you see, can never quit moving. If it stops — even for an instant — water will flood its gills and it will drown.

My stepson's condition, I fear, is similar, and would explain a few things, like how his jaw begins working the instant the rest of his body stops.

Can he talk, you may ask? Boy, can he ever.

He shared a lot of his acquired wisdom with me during his visit. I learned things that would confuse the average MIT scientist, like:

- Firecrackers are made by Santa Claus' elves so they can have something to do before the Christmas rush begins.
- If a mouse ever gets into our house, Jeramy will "beat it up and eat it."
- That, if his mom and I ever want to be rich, we ought to work at a bank.

Jeramy the Learned shared a great many other things with me during his stay, but space and a desire to stay on my wife's good side prevent me from going further.

More evidence in support of my shark theory comes every night around bedtime. For hours on end, Jeramy will be a dervish, darting about like a Keebler elf on amphetamines, when suddenly — almost without warning — he will fall asleep.

It's as if someone flipped a switch inside his head; one minute, Godzilla in the flesh, the next, our sleeping angel.

It kind of gives new meaning to the term "Bop 'til You Drop," doesn't it?

Well, it's all over until next time. For the next few months, the Reagan household will be quieter, and there'll be fewer toys laying around, waiting to crack my unsuspecting ankles.

I will be able to hear myself think, and "Stop That!" will disappear from my vocabulary — but I still can't wait until he visits again.

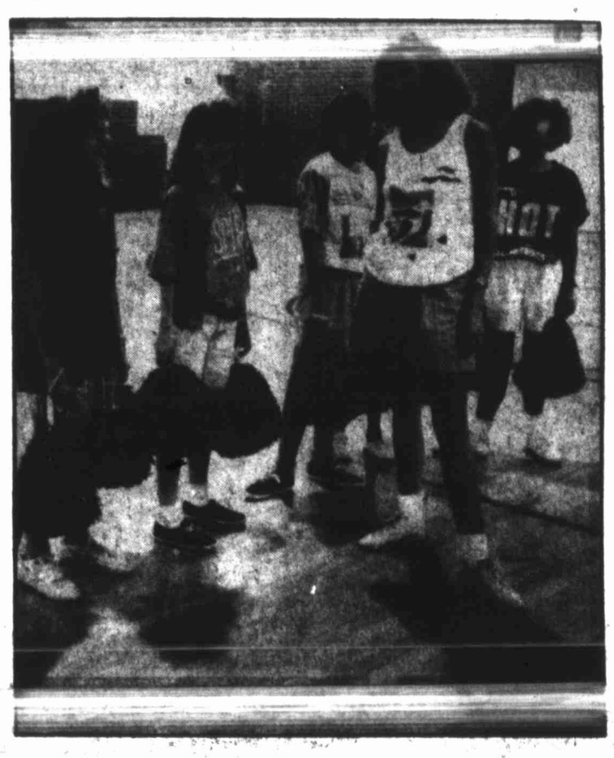

Jeramy the Shark — I love him to death.

Dancin' to the beat

Who says looks, charm and talent aren't enough to get you what you want?

Twenty cute, charming and talented young ladies were recently chosen to participate on Runnels Junior High School's dance team.

The eighth grade students were chosen to represent their school because "... they're all cute, have charisma and show an ability to dance," said Teresa Harrell, dance team sponsor.

The girls, all part of the school's first dance team, were chosen from a field of 46. "There were other girls that were just as talented — but they just didn't fit in with these girls," Harrell said.

After performing a dance routine Thursday afternoon to the tune of Funky Cold Medina, the girls all agreed their goal is to promote school spirit.

"We want to make our school look good," said 13-year-old Brandi Borchardt.

Amy Cook, 12, echoed her teammate, saying, "Students aren't happy to be [illegible] school after summer vacation . . . we want to make it fun for them."

Michele Zapata, 12, tried out for the team because "it's fun to dance."

The girls practiced for one week before proving their talents before several judges.

"Tryouts were hard — we had to dance for judges," Michele said.

Dedicating their summer vacation to practice has its rewards.

Not only will the girls dance at pep rallies and games — but they've already been invited to dance at a Howard College game.

Because cheerleaders are elected solely on their popularity, Harrell, who also sponsors the school's cheerleaders, said "I think there should be something that the girls can do that depends on their ability . . . I hope this (the dance team) catches on at other schools."

To be a member of the dance team, Harrell said, the girls [illegible] must maintain passing [illegible].

"All these girls are A and B students," she said.

"These girls should be the kind of girl that everyone looks up to," Harrell said.

The girls are looking forward to attending a dance camp in Austin — but after several unsuccessful fundraisers — they're not sure how they'll afford the $140 per student fee.

"We've tried to raise money — but our fundraisers haven't gone very well . . . we're hoping to find sponsors to help," Harrell said.

Members of the dance team are: Amy Alexander, Liz Anzaldua, Brandi Borchardt, Brandi Castillo, Misti Cauble, Amy Cook, Debbie Cunningham, Peggy Deanda, Amy Dominguez, Amy Earnst, Amy Garcia, Kim Middleton, Azure Miller, Christy Miller, Jaimee Parker, Corina Ramos, Cara Statham, Diane Thomas, Christy Torres and Michele Zapata.

If you'd like to help send a girl to dance camp, scheduled for Aug. 8-11 in Austin, please call Teresa Harrell at 267-6236.

Dixon offers predictions for mid-year 1989

By JEANE DIXON

The following is part one of the mid-year 1989 predictions by Jeane Dixon whose column runs daily in the Herald. More of her predictions will run throughout the week.

ROSEANNE BARR: Concern for ratings will lead Roseanne Barr and everyone around her into troubled waters in the fall. October and November could bring the end of many partnerships — including her marriage. New talent will save Roseanne's ratings and reputation.

RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN: With his return to weekly television, Richard Chamberlain will prove he has lost none of his television magic. But the return to series stardom will have a devastating effect on a personal relationship.

KEVIN COSTNER: Intriguing Kevin Costner will be mentioned for an Oscar in 1989 and will have one by 1992. Mr. Costner must beware of starting any projects with his nest egg next spring. At that time, everything he supports could cost him a fortune.

JOHN GOODMAN: As "Roseanne's" TV husband, John Goodman wins his share of the battles. But the cards will be stacked against John this fall if he enters a real-life power struggle with the star.

MIKHAIL GORBACHEV: Pushed by young people who have caught "freedom fever" from their Chinese counterparts, Russian leader Mikhail Gobachev will move his motherland away from totalitarianism. The Berlin Wall will shake and the Iron Curtain will flutter in the winds of change.

MICHAEL JACKSON: Michael Jackson's greatest desire is to fill his mansion with a family. There will be talk of a marriage as Michael spends more time with a beautiful girlfriend. A child who is already like a son to the superstar could round out the dream of an instant family. But bureaucratic walls will be built in Mr. Jackson's path and his dream will be postponed.

POPE JOHN PAUL II: By 1990 plans will be in place for a meeting between Pope John Paul II and Mikhail Gorbachev in Russia. This history-making event will begin a re-Christianization of Europe and be a turning point for the Catholic Church.

JERRY LEWIS: Health and a personal financial crisis will take second place to the precious agony of putting on the Jerry Lewis Telethon for Muscular Dystrophy. An important film will confirm Mr. Lewis' acting talents and he will win awards for his work.

ROB LOWE: As I predicted, trouble has found Rob Lowe and it will dog him for a full year if another secret taping comes to light next spring. But his reputation will be repaired by a good woman. He will find the love of his life, marry and be on the way to fatherhood by mid-1990.

MARIE OSMOND: The big break Marie Osmond dreams about is still a year away. By mid-1990 Marie will have the chance to work close to her home and her children. Look for an Osmond family TV special in 1990 to introduce a new generation of performers.

RONALD AND NANCY REAGAN: The Reagans will be in the limelight when Nancy's book is published with great fanfare and outcry from controversial former White House officials. Attorneys will bring Ronald Reagan's name into the Iran-contra trials, but will not hear direct testimony, as the wise former president leaves decisions to the law.

GERALDO RIVERA: The tables will be turned on Geraldo Rivera when he becomes the victim of an investigation. Within weeks there is danger of losing control of his show and again suffering an attack from a guest or member of the audience.

PAT SAJAK: Pat Sajak will be the victim of a hoax or fraud that could expose personal secrets. Friends and staff of his popular talk show will scatter in early fall when Pat feels the need for a change of image.

BRUCE SPRINGSTEEN: Bruce Springsteen will delay wedding plans when another love interest lays claim to his heart and purse strings. In 1990, Bruce will make a decision that could have devastating effects in the year 1992.

REV. JIMMY SWAGGART: The Rev. Jimmy Swaggart will follow Jim and Tammy Bakker into bankruptcy court if a brewing scandal is revealed by former associates. Donations will wither across the nation for televised ministries, forcing many fine spiritual leaders off the airwaves.

PATRICK SWAYZE: Patrick Swayze is wisely striking while the iron of success is hot, but he will be homesick for his wife, family and fabulous new ranch home. When Mr. Swayze is ready for his next career change, he will establish his own school of performing arts.

RANDY TRAVIS: Young country star Randy Travis is in danger of letting success railroad him into overwork, accidents and forgetfulness this fall. By mid-August the fatigue factor will open the door to personal and financial mistakes that would certainly be far costlier than a few days' preventative rest.

DONALD TRUMP: Millionaire Donald Trump will please investors but cause one of the year's biggest labor/management disputes. A shocking [illegible] lawsuit will reveal secrets the young genius failed to write into his best-selling autobiography.

PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH: George Bush will work hard for his victories through the second half of 1989.

Dorothy Binns, a native of Timperley, Cheshire, England, is spending a month in Big Spring visiting her sister, Lynn, and Jack Thorp.

Last weekend 22 members of the England and Texas sides of the family gathered at Lake Buchannan for a reunion. In addition to Dorothy, Lynn and Jack, others attending from Big Spring included Rory and Carol Speaker and Larry and Susan Harvey. The Harveys have just moved here from Iraan.

The reunion coincided with a birthday celebration for former resident Robbie Thorp, 80, Jack's mother. Now a resident of Tow, near Lake Buchannan, Robbie was a nurse for many years at the former Malone-Hogan Hospital.

R.E. "Peppy" Blount — former resident and now a Longview attorney — may have to turn down the invitation to speak at his Big Spring High School reunion in October.

Peppy, one-time UT-Austin football star and former state legislator, was on line as dinner speaker for the joint reunion of the classes of 1943-44-45-46.

But according to reunion chairman Pat Simmons, Peppy fell out of a tree and a chain saw came tumbling after him. He's recovering from broken ribs and a punctured lung, but now is able to come to his office for a few hours a day.

Linda Conway and Pam Callan took in the traveling production of "Les Miserables" in Dallas recently. "I had seen the show in New York," says Linda, "and I wanted to compare. It was wonderful!"

Linda and Pam stayed in the home of Linda's son, Larry Harp.

Linda is a frequent traveler to Dallas during that city's summer season of musicals. Just a few weeks ago she saw "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," with the original Broadway leads, Debbie Reynolds and Harve Presnell.

Sisters Stella Arnold and Lenna Wyman have returned from a week's vacation in Augusta, Ga., where they were the houseguests of Lenna's daughter, Vicki, and Kevin Ellis and their children Rachel and Paul. Kevin is minister of Richmond Hill Road Church of Christ in Augusta.

One of the highlights of their trip was seeing the Augusta historic waterfront renovation — now shops and restaurants and a park with antique-brick paved plaza and a fountain.

They also visited Stone Mountain Park where a complete plantation homestead has been put together as a museum — main house, slave houses, cook house and other outbuildings gathered from all around the state.

"We saw so many interesting things," says Stella.

Sidney and Andrea Clark, Tim and Terri Blackshear and Floyd and Gail Earls recently attended a conference for Texas mayors and city council members in Corpus Christi.

While Sidney, Tim and Gail attended meetings for three days, Terri and Andrea shopped and Floyd went deep sea fishing (Tropical Storm Allison was on its way, and Floyd reports that most of the boat's passengers were sea sick.)

According to Gail, the group particularly enjoyed dining at the C.C. Dock restaurant — an actual boat, floating on the water, made even more realistic by Allison's proximity.

The West Texas landlubbers tried out all the seafood specialties — except Tim, who stuck to chicken fried steak!

They picked up a couple of gag gifts — a motorcycle made of sea shells for Mayor Max Green, and a chicken made of sea shells for councilman Chuck Condray (who had complained at a previous conference that they never ate anything but chicken, which he hates!)

Gail, by the way, took a long Fourth of July weekend to go to Oklahoma City to visit her mother, Ida Mae Luckens, and to take in the fabulous new race track there. Floyd stayed home to roof the patio, she says.

"Everybody looked so good," says Carolyn Jackson about the Big Spring High School Class of '69 reunion. "Nobody looked 20 years older at all!"

Pam Welch and Shelane Roberts co-chaired the 20-year reunion — held at this time of year because exes are too involved with their children's school activities in the fall, explains Pam.

The crowded weekend included a golf tournament, pool party at the Big Spring Country Club, a picnic at the Old Settlers Pavilion and a dance at Russ and Tommy Rutledge's office/warehouse.

Others on the planning committee were Russ, Perry Gamble, Roe Lynn Nichols, Pat Romine, Kathryn Milch, Martha Hernandez Virginia Hicks, Terry Marshall, Jan Coffey and Lynda Elrod.

Traveling the longest distance were Susie Albertson, Falls Church, Va.; Bill Spear, Laizella, Ga.; and Laverne Lancaster, Grand Fork, N. D.; plus others from Illinois, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Washington.

Linda Davis was judged "Most Changed"; Kyle McAlister, "Least Changed"; Shelane Roberts was "Married the Longest"; and Luven Flores had "Most Grandchildren."

GARY DON CAREY

Professional Grooming Advice:

Q.: I've had several questions concerning fingernails. Here are a few interesting facts we came up with.

A.: Fingernails grow faster in the summer. A man's nails grow quicker than a woman's. Nails grow faster in the daytime and slower at night, faster in a warm climate, slower in a cold. Nails become thicker and more brittle with age.

The average fingernail grows about 1/8 inch every month.

They grow fastest on the middle finger, slowest on the thumb and little finger. Nails grow faster when a woman is pregnant.

The same tough protein found in the hair and outer layer of skin also makes up the nails.

The world manicuring is derived from the Latin "manus" (hand) and "cura" (care), and means the care of the hands and nails.

HINT:

Never file deep into the corners of the nails. If the nails are allowed to grow out at the sides, they will look longer and wear better.

Plea from Tennessee: 'Please let my husband walk'

DEAR ABBY: My husband, Carroll, and I are health nuts. We love to walk, and we walk everywhere we can because it's good exercise.

Now, the problem: Carroll comes home from work complaining. He tries to walk to work in the morning, but he's always stopped by some well-meaning person offering him a ride. He says the same thing happens when he tries to walk home from work. If this happened only when it was raining or storming, it would be OK, but it happens when the weather is beautiful and the sun is shining.

It's not that we don't have a car. As a matter of fact, we have seven. (No kidding.) I have told Carroll to tell these people that he's walking for his health, but he doesn't want to hurt their feelings, so he accepts the ride and cheats himself out of a healthy two-mile walk.

He's quite well-known in town, so if you print this, maybe those people will see it and take the hint. Thank you. — BARBARA DENNIS, JOHNSON CITY, TENN.

DEAR BARBARA: I can guarantee you that after this runs, Carroll will be known as "The Tennessee Walker."

DEAR ABBY: At a recent gathering, my aunt informed me that I could bring a date to my cousin's forthcoming wedding, with the proviso that he be only someone with whom I was "seriously involved." She told me that I had up to two weeks prior to the wedding to determine whether the individual I have been seeing for the past two months was such a person.

I am a 27-year-old woman and do not date around. In fact, five months ago, I ended a relationship of four years.

My aunt's offer visibly upset me. I felt that she was passing judgment on my choice of dates, and the fact that, although I have had two long-term relationships, I am still single. Upon seeing that I was upset, my aunt justified her proviso by saying that the wedding was a very expensive affair, so she didn't want "just any stranger" invited.

I feel that my aunt had the option of inviting me without a date, but, if she extended an offer for me to bring an escort, it should have been left up to me whom to bring.

My reaction to this kind of invitation has caused some friction within the family. I ask your opinion of her offer. — AGHAST ABOUT GOOF ABOUT GUEST

DEAR AGHAST: Your aunt's "offer" was a clumsy attempt to pressure you into deciding whether your present relationship was going to develop into something permanent because she didn't want to go to the expense of entertaining "just a stranger."

I agree with you. I think your aunt should have left the decision up to you concerning whom to bring to the wedding. Her "proviso" was chintzy.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a member of this church for 25 years and attend regularly. Among the members who attend church regularly are a divorced man, and a divorced woman with a young daughter. The three of them live together, but the man and woman are not married. The woman joined the church about five years ago, but the man has been a member for about 15 years.

This lady has worked hard for the church and was recently elected to the church vestry, which is a very high honor. Our church recently put out a pictorial directory, and in it is a picture of this man and the woman and her daughter. The three of them had their pictures taken together as though they were a family!

This really upset me, as I am concerned about the message we are sending to members of our church — especially our young people.

I am not judging this couple, but I do worry about the nonchalant way the church is handling this. I hesitate to discuss this with the pastor, but I would like to know how he can justify members who are living this kind of lifestyle being honored by the church and posing as a family.

Please give me some of your sound advice as soon as possible. — LOVES THE LORD

DEAR LOVES THE LORD: Feeling as you do, I think you should discuss this with your pastor. And please write again and let me know what your pastor had to say.

Cholesterol

Research indicates children are at risk

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

Heart disease and stroke account for half the deaths in developed countries.

Research is indicating that in many ways, these diseases are inherited from our earlier selves. A high cholesterol level in a child's blood lays the foundation for atherosclerotic plaque later in life.

This truth is widely recognized, but there is yet to be a medical consensus on how to approach the problem of high cholesterol before the age of 18.

There are no easy answers to questions such as who should be tested? Who should be treated? What should the treatment be?

Surveys suggest that between 3 percent and 24 percent of American children have a cholesterol level over 200 milligrams per deciliter.

Pediatricians have been reluctant to screen every child for high cholesterol, partly because of fears that therapy could be harmful.

In the past few years, however, these concerns have begun to be resolved. The Committee on Nutrition of the American Academy of Pediatrics advocates a cholesterol test for all children over the age of two years who are at high risk of developing artery disease.

High risk children are those who come from families in which either parent or more than one grandparent, aunt or uncle has had a heart attack, angina, stroke or other artery disease before age 50 (in males) or 60 (in females). Children are also put at high risk by a family history of high blood pressure, high cholesterol, gout or diabetes.

People under the age of 18 who are obese and inactive, who smoke cigarettes, or who take oral contraceptive pills might also benefit from a cholesterol test.

Active, healthy, young people of normal weight who come from families without histories of early atherosclerosis are not urged to have a blood cholesterol test until they reach their 20s.

Blood cholesterol at birth is typically around 70; it then rises steadily during childhood. Cholesterol in the low density lipoproteins form is closely associated with elevated coronary heart disease risk, and this value should be emphasized more than total cholesterol levels.

The risk posed by LDL-cholesterol can be offset by cholesterol in the high density lipoproteins, or protective form, which should also be measured and taken into consideration.

No guidelines on normal cholesterol values at different ages have yet been published. The Lipid Research Clinics Program suggests that cholesterol levels in children between the ages of 2 and 19 be classified as follows:

Total cholesterol:
- Normal — below 170;
- Moderately high — 170-185;
- High — above 185.

LDL cholesterol:
- Normal — below 110;
- Moderately high — 110-125;
- High — above 125.

For the most accurate results, the test should be done after a 12-hour fast. Any testing showing a high cholesterol level should be repeated. Although a moderately high value may be more ominous in a 5-year-old than in a 15-year-old, current recommendations are much the same regardless of age.

No matter what a child's background risk or cholesterol levels may be, parents would do well to start reducing the amount of fat in their youngsters' diet. Typical American diets contain 40 percent of more of their calories as fat; 30 percent would be much better for the arteries at any age.

Strict low-fat diets, however, can be dangerous for young children. Such diets should never be started without consulting a physician or registered dietitian so as to be sure the child gets enough calories, fat-soluble vitamins and protein for growth. Particularly during the first two years of life, low-fat diets can interfere with normal growth. Above the age of 2, moderately low-fat diets featuring a variety of foods do children no harm.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Members gather at 30-state 'Jubilee'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The congregations that make up the Church of Christ should overlook discrepancies in their beliefs and concentrate on building up families and reaching out to lonely people, an Arkansas pastor told 2,500 fellow Christians.

The Rev. Mike Cope of Searcy, Ark., spoke Thursday during the first "Nashville Jubilee," a national evangelistic convention for this collection of churches which refuse to call themselves a denomination.

"We're educated and uneducated, urban and rural, north and south and have different political bents, but we're still the family of God," Cope said during a keynote address at the Nashville Convention Center.

"Sometimes we don't see eye to eye. We just have to accept each other . . . No matter what — if your marriage is crumbling or if something happens and your child leaves the church, I'm still devoted to you. We bear our mutual woes," he said.

Churches of Christ are fiercely independent congregations that often agree to work together to support missions and schools. However, they also retain sometimes sharp disagreements over divorce and remarriage, worship styles and whether local church money should fund orphanages and gymnasiums.

Cope suggested that uniform agreement on every issue is not possible or even desirable.

Things they never told you about a heat pump.

Fact # 4

When you hear a sales pitch for a heat pump this summer, you need to think ahead to next winter.

A heat pump does such a poor job heating in our raw West Texas winters, they have to hook it up to a furnace to keep your family from being miserable when it gets cold.

After all, if your furnace has done a good job keeping your family warm all these years, does it make sense to attach something to it that doesn't work anywhere near as well?

Landscape for water efficiency

Ask the agent

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

With summer and its accompanying high temperatures continuing to move along, we get a lot of calls into our office concerning more efficient ways to use available water resources.

In the summer season, 40-60 percent of the water supplied to our more urban areas is used for lawn and garden watering. Water-efficient landscape design and practices can reduce landscape water use by half or more by simply using information already available to landscape professionals and easily accessible to individuals.

It can be a bit overwhelming to the average homeowner to consider a full-scale, complete conversion of a traditional, water-intensive landscape to a conserving, water efficient landscape but the important point is that it does not have to be done all at once.

Like a savings account, the important thing is to get started. The homeowner can spread the time, labor and materials investment over a period of several years with minimal disruption of existing landscaping. For example, a 3-year schedule is presented below:

Year 1: Begin by developing an overall plan and by watering efficiently with your existing lawn watering equipment so that obvious waste is eliminated; add deciduous trees and groundcover, which will reduce lawn area by 10-15 percent and mulch all flower and shrub beds.

Year 2: Add more shade trees, ground cover, and shrubs, to reduce lawn area by an additional 10-15 percent; install a drip irrigation in flower and shrub beds; and continue proper lawn maintenance.

Year 3: Add more ground cover and shrubs; install a deck or patio to reduce lawn area by another 10-15 percent; and keep up the good work. Literally hundreds of native or adapted drought resistant, low water-using trees and plants are readily available, and they make beautiful, practical landscape staples and accent plantings. Examples of the types of trees, shrubs, and ground covers are listed below:

Trees: Afghan Pine, Chinese Pistanche, Live Oak and Texas Red Oak Shrubs: Cenizo, Crape Myrtle (not real tolerant to salty type water), Texas Mountain Laurel, Youpon Holly, Mexican Buckeye Groundcovers: Monda Grass, Vinca, Verbena, and Wildflowers, Perennials, Autumn Sage, Lantana, Blue Sage, Mexican Oregano.

Grasses: Bermuda and Buffalo Water-efficient landscaping commonly called Xeriscaping, involves seven landscaping principles:

Good design; limited irrigated lawn and shrub areas; adapted, lower water-demand plants; effective and efficient altering methods; mulched flower and shrub beds; and proper landscape maintenance.

Water-conserving landscapes can be green, cool, inviting and full of beautiful plants, while simultaneously requiring less intensive care and much less water than most conventional landscapes.

New Catholic rite for blacks needed

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Rev. George A. Stallings hates the sight of empty pews, and that's one reason he wants the Roman Catholic Church to allow a special rite for black Americans.

But a black bishop contends that Stallings, suspended as a priest for creating an unauthorized parish in Washington, could wind up with a church that is no different from any other evangelical congregation competing for members and dollars.

Stallings, who is black, said in an interview Thursday that the Catholic church is missing the boat in attracting blacks and other minorities because its hierarchy and traditions are too bound by European culture and dominated by white males.

It fails to evangelize — make converts — among blacks because it doesn't train anyone to do so, he said, adding that other religions are filling the gap.

"I have been to cities where the church was closed," Stallings said. "Black Protestants came in there and took over and now they are packed to the gills."

Stallings said he wants to create a separate African-American Catholic Rite, along the lines of the ethnic Eastern Rite churches. Those churches accept the authority of the pope, but have considerable autonomy in ritual and discipline.

The unauthorized service conducted Sunday at Stallings' Imani Temple showed at least one side of what the new rite would entail: The service combined the traditional Catholic Mass with African ritual and the foot-stomping, hand-clapping style of the traditional black Protestant church.

Baptists and Muslims also attended the service, held at Howard University Law School.

Stallings was suspended the next day by Washington Cardinal James A. Hickey and barred from performing the Catholic sacraments.

At stake in Stallings' battle are 2 million black American Catholics, a minority of both blacks — some 30 million in America — and American Catholics as a whole — 54 million.

According to church figures, there are 300 black priests and 13 black bishops. Of the 17,000 Catholic parishes, 1,200 are predominantly black.

Stallings said the Catholic church must develop "an African-American Catholic liberation theology" to address social and political needs.

"It is difficult, if not almost impossible, for one ethnic or cultural group to define or to decide what is good for another ethnic group," he said. "It is always necessary for those ethnic groups to get a seal of approval from the white male power group."

Many practical reasons for owning your own home to own your own home," says Kay Moore, owner of Home Realtors.

"Interest rates are low, there is a large selection of homes for sale in Big Spring, and home prices are lower here than they have been in many years," she adds.

"There are many practical reasons for owning your own home, in addition to the personal satisfaction."

Home mortgage interest is one of the few interest deductions we still have, Kay reminds. "At today's interest rates, approximately 95% of the principal and interest payment made by a homeowner during the first five years would be tax-deductible (according to a brochure from Realty Financial Services, Inc.)."

Another tax break is real estate taxes on personal residences; a significant portion of a homeowner's payment goes toward payment of these taxes which incidentally support our local government.) Homestead exemptions lower the real estate taxes you pay on your principal residence.

If you use your home as an office, there may be other tax decutions.

Homeowners over 55 who are thinking of selling may be encouraged to do so because they can sell their residence at a profit without paying capital gains tax. This exemption often puts many attractive homes in well-established neighborhoods up for sale.

"By taking into account the tax breaks and other considerations," Kay says, "a family can often own their own home for less than they are now paying for rent."

Let Kay Moore and her staff help to buy a home. They can help you determine what price home you can afford, help you find the home of your dreams, and even help locate a lender.

Home Realtors is a member of HMS (Homeowners Marketing Services, Inc.) Through HMS, Home Realtors can now offer home warranties to its sellers and buyers which will eliminate the worries of major repairs during the time the home is on the market and for the first year of occupancy for the buyer.

Home Realtors is exclusive local agent for RELO Relocation Service, the nation's referral network of independent real estate brokers; and can draw on RELO's expertise to provide tips and advice for buyers and sellers.

In addition to Kay, the staff includes Doris Milstead and Doris Huibregtse, brokers; Jo Hughes; Gail Meyers, Kay Bancroft, Carole Lawson and Shirley Burgess, sales associates.

Home Realtors is located in Cor[illegible] them at 263-1284.

THERE'S GOOD NEWS — Interest rates are low and home prices in Big Spring are lower than in many years. Let Home Realtors show you how to take advantage of the situation.
