China dissidents

BEIJING — China released the most prominent student leader of China's 1989 democracy movement and two other dissidents Wednesday in what appeared to be a gesture to President Clinton and the Olympics movement. ### 1st black resident

VIDOR — John DecQuir says he just was looking for a place to live when he moved this week into a public housing project. DecQuir, 58, a disabled cement finisher, became the first black resident in decades in the nearly 11,000-person Orange County town. His move into the project Tuesday ends months of controversy and years of court battles in Vidor, which long has had a reputation as a Ku Klux Klan stronghold where blacks aren't welcome./6B

Survey on memory

NEW YORK — You're far from alone if you sometimes lose things or have trouble remembering names of people you know well, especially if you're 75 or older, according to a survey released Wednesday. Results suggest about half of people ages 18 to 44 and 45 to 54 sometimes or frequently lose things, as do 58 percent of participants ages 55 to 64, 55 percent of those ages 65 to 74, and 73 percent of those ages 75 and older. As for remembering names, 13 percent of people ages 18 to 44 have trouble sometimes or frequently, compared with 35 percent for ages 45 to 54, 48 percent for ages 55 to 64, 55 percent for ages 65 to 74, and 51 percent at ages 75 and above, the study found.

'Hit-man hire' jury finds teen guilty

■ Youth faces up to 40 years' incarceration for attempted capital murder.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A 16-year-old committed attempted capital murder despite defense claims that the youth really didn't want to hire a hit man to kill a fellow student, a 12-person jury determined in about two hours on Wednesday.

Clay Colby Sellars now faces up to 40 years' incarceration.

"Nobody twisted his arm to do any of that. . . . This is a sick twisted person," County Attorney Mark Dettman told jurors before deliberations began.

Sellars was arrested on Nov. 7, after paying a law-enforcement officer posing as a hit man $80 down to murder 16-year-old Mario Paredes.

Paredes testified that he was only an acquaintance of Sellars.

"We said 'hi' in the (school) halls, that's it," Paredes testified.

Sellars' ill will toward his intended victim apparently stemmed from 16-year-old Jeanette Oatman, Paredes' girlfriend and a friend of Sellars.

Ricky Sutherland Jr., who alerted police about Sellars' hunt for a hit man, testified that Sellars said the dislike for Paredes was "over a girl."

WASHINGTON — President Clinton asked Americans Wednesday night to accept one of the biggest tax increases in history, part of a tough $499 billion plan to curb massive budget deficits and stimulate the economy. "We must do this together," he said in a pointed overture to Congress.

"This economic plan can't please everybody," Clinton said in a 60-minute address to a joint session of Congress. "If the package is picked apart, there will be something that will anger each of us. It won't please anybody. But if it is taken as whole, it will help all of us."

The plan is a mixture of $246 billion in tax increases and $253 billion in spending cuts over four years. He said his plan would cut $140 billion from the deficit by 1997 — "a real deficit reduction."

"If we don't act now, you and I might not even recognize this government 10 years from now," Clinton said. He said the deficit would have grown to $635 billion a year and the national debt would consume almost 80 percent of the gross domestic product.

"Americans have called for change," the president said, "and now it is up to those of us in this room to deliver for them." He warned that lobbyists would try to block the program.

Clinton's prime-time speech was delivered in the House chamber, where majority Democrats gave a thunderous welcome to the first Democrat to hold the White House in 12 years.

Republicans denounced Clinton's plan as a massive round of tax increases. GOP lawmakers wore buttons that said "Tax and Spend. Again" and "It's Spending, Stupid."

House GOP Leader Bob Michel said, "The American people would do well to

Winter slaps city with icy reminder

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Mother Nature slapped the Midland-Odessa area with a stinging reminder Wednesday that winter weather is not a thing of the past quite yet.

Temperatures didn't get out of the 20s and some areas received freezing rain as a strong arctic cold front moved closer to the area than National Weather Service forecasters had anticipated.

The front, which was centered over Kansas, was expected to move south Wednesday, but, instead, took a southeasterly route that brought overcast skies and biting temperatures to the Permian Basin around 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Forecasters said the first wave of the cold front came through the area around Sunday and Monday, dropping temperatures slightly, but not making the weather uncomfortable.

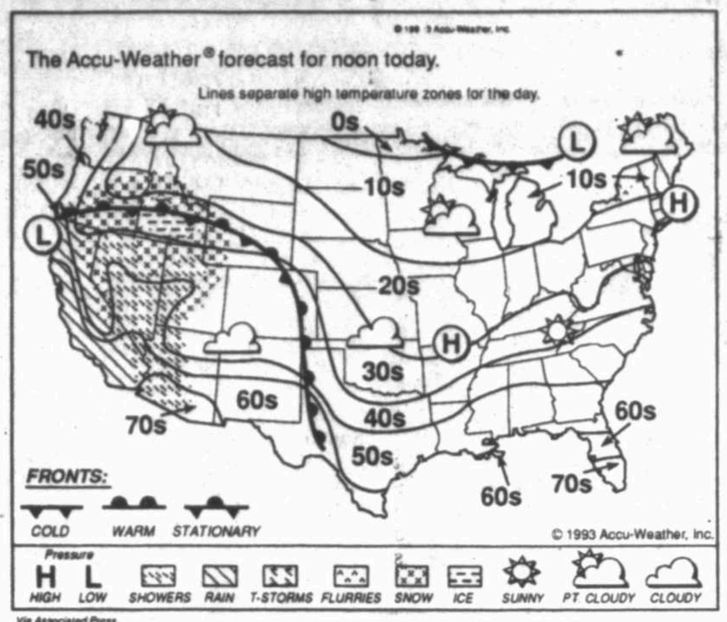

A freezing drizzle advisory went into effect at noon Wednesday and will remain in effect throughout this morning.

Forecasters predicted a low near 20 for Wednesday night, with early morning cloudiness, fog and possibly some freezing drizzle today.

Skies should become partly cloudy this afternoon as the front moves out of the area and the high

TRIAL: Teen attempted murder, jury finds

pressed that she wanted Paredes to disappear. So, Sellars said, he contacted Rick Fry, an alias of Sutherland's.

"Because Rick was basically the only bully I know," Sellars testified.

Sellars "seemed really serious about it (seeking a hit man)," Sutherland said.

Jurors listened to two audio recordings of Nov. 6 telephone conversations between Sellars and Sutherland setting up a meeting with a hired killer.

The jury also viewed a video of Sellars meeting with an undercover Department of Public Safety officer in the parking lot of Kmart, 340 N. Midland Drive.

Sellars paid the believed hit man $80 and signed a note to pay the remainder of a $500 charge for murder. The officer asked Sellars several times if the murder was what he wanted. Sellars repeatedly confirmed his intentions.

Defense attorney Tom Morgan tried to convince the jury that Sellars' initial thoughts of hiring a killer were puffery gone awry.

Sellars testified that he didn't want Paredes dead and only met the hit man because of his fear of the larger Sutherland and a stood-up killer.

Since the six-man, six-woman jury in Judge Al Walvoord's County Court At Law apparently didn't buy that, punishment will be considered today.

Under rules of a determinate sentence trial — essentially a cross between being tried as a juvenile and an adult — Sellars will be placed on probation or confined for up to 40 years.

Because Sellars turns 17 in June, juvenile probation would become basically void at that time, Dettman said.

If sentenced to confinement, Sellars would be sent to the Texas Youth Commission until 18 years of age then to the Texas Department of Corrections. After TYC, the judge, based on a review of the case and the youth's TYC behavior, can commute the TDC time.

The chief juvenile probation officer for Midland County, under oath, advised against probation.

Eleven defense witnesses are prepared to testify for a lenient sentence today.

"It worries me that he will get probation. . . . My son has had to look over his shoulder" in fear, said Martha Paredes, the mother of the intended victim.

should reach into the upper 40s. Winds will be south at 10-20 mph.

Tonight should be mostly fair with a low in the mid-30s, the NWS forecasted.

Friday will begin a warming trend for the area, which should last through the weekend, with mostly sunny skies and a high in the upper 60s.

After an overnight low of 23, Wednesday's high reached 29, compared to the record high for that date of 82 set in 1977. The record low of 12 was set in 1942.

STATE

Winter showed no sign of waning in North and West Texas Wednesday as a more moderate climate persisted in the southern part of the state.

Cool Canadian air plunged North Texas temperatures into the 20s along the Red River and around Abilene. Readings elsewhere ranged between 30 and 40 degrees under cloudy skies.

Today, partly cloudy skies are expected in North Texas along with a chance of flurries in the west. Highs are expected in the 40s with lows in the 30s.

Clouds also covered much of South Texas, keeping temperatures in the 40s over the Hill Country, in the 50s south central and southeast and in the 60s over the deep south.

The forecast for South Texas calls for mostly cloudy skies through today. Lows will be in the 30s and 40s, with highs in the 50s.

In West Texas, Wednesday was sunny and warm in the far parts of the region, but cloudy skies prevailed east of the mountains. Light snow continued over the Panhandle and South Plains with a widely scattered mixture of freezing drizzle and light snow over the remainder of the region.

Snow flurries and occasional freezing drizzle are predicted in the Panhandle, South Plains and Permian Basin. Forecasters called for partly cloudy conditions in the Far West and Big Bend.

Temperatures were in the teens and 20s from the Panhandle through the Permian Basin with 60s in the Far West. An easterly 15 mph wind dropped temperatures into the single digits as far south as the Midland-Odessa area.

Highs today from the upper 20s in the Panhandle to the 60s in the south, with lows from the teens in the Panhandle to the 40s in the south.

NATION

The latest storm from the Pacific spread rain and snow across parts of the West on Wednesday. Temperatures fell to record lows from the Northwest to the Plains.

At midday, rain extended over the central third of the Pacific Coast, changing to snow at higher elevations. Winter storm warnings were issued for California's northern Sierra Nevada.

At noon, Burney, Calif., in the far northern Sierra, had 11 inches of new snow and snow was falling at a rate of about 2 inches an hour, the National Weather Service said. Chester and Lake Almanor got 8 to 12 inches of snow overnight.

Winter storm watches were in effect today for the Sierra Nevada, west-central Nevada, and higher elevations near and north of San Bernardino National Forest in Southern California.

More storms were predicted through the end of the weekend and some residents of Southern California, rattled by severe flooding and landslides caused by January storms, were stacking sandbags.

"We've given out thousands of sandbags in the past few weeks," said Sylmar fire Capt. William Sommers.

A winter storm watch also was in effect today over the mountains of southwestern Colorado.

Snow showers were scattered over the southern Rockies, southern Kansas, Texas Panhandle, Oklahoma, northwestern Arkansas, Lower Michigan, the Ohio Valley, the Appalachians, lower Great Lakes and northern Maine.

Showers were scattered over the central Florida Peninsula.

Unseasonably cold weather reached across the Pacific Northwest, northern Rockies and the northern two-thirds of the Plains.

COURSE: Clinton unveils economic plan

(From 1A)

remember: When you hear a Democrat call for taxes, do not ask for whom the tax rises — it will rise for you."

"Tonight the president mentioned a number of new programs that inevitably will cost considerable sums of money," Michel said. "Laudable as they may be, how do we pay for them? The president's answer is: more taxes on everyone."

Clinton's Cabinet looked on as he spoke, as well as his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, and his mother, Virginia Kelley.

Clinton's plan would spread pain almost universally, although well-to-do people would be hit hardest.

The program would impose higher energy taxes on every household with income of more than $30,000. The administration calculated that would raise $71.4 billion by 1998.

The tax would start next July at 2.5 cents a gallon for gasoline, 2.75 cents per gallon of heating oil and 8.75 cents per thousand cubic feet of natural gas. It would increase over three years to triple those original figures.

Income tax rates would jump significantly — from 31 percent now to 36 percent next year — for families with taxable income over $140,000 and for individuals over $115,000. Clinton said that would affect only 1.2 of taxpayers. A 10 percent surtax which Clinton had promised to impose on millionaires would be applied to taxable income over $250,000.

A pay freeze would be put on the 3 million federal workers for a year; after that they would be allowed increases less than the rate of inflation. Clinton said congressional staffs should follow suit.

Taxes would be raised on Social Security benefits for retired couples earning more than $32,000 and individuals earning $25,000. Medicare payroll taxes would be required on all earnings, rather than the present $135,000 limit.

Grazing fees would be increased on federal lands. Recreation fees would be boosted in federal parks. There would be cutbacks in student aid, farm subsidies and Medicare payments for doctors and hospitals.

The top corporate tax rate, which is paid by most major companies, would increase to 36 percent from the current 34 percent. Deductions would be denied for lobbying, club dues and executive pay over $1 million, and reduced for other business expenses.

Clinton minimized the impact of the energy tax.

Altogether, he said a family earning $40,000 a year would pay only $17 more a month, and that would be offset for many Americans by lower interest costs for mortgages, consumer loans and credit cards. "This can be a wise investment for them and for their country now," Clinton said.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole said Clinton's plan added up to the biggest tax increase in history. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said it was the second largest, behind the 1982 increase under Ronald Reagan.

Clinton said he had made 150 specific cuts in spending over four years totaling $253 billion, including $76 billion in Pentagon reductions and $91 billion from pensions and automatic benefit programs.

In all, the package would cut $496 billion from the expected deficit over four years, the largest such reduction program in history.

Nevertheless, the deficit still would wind up in the $200 billion range by 1997 and climb higher unless health care costs are contained.

Clinton said that "nobody likes tax increases." However, he said, "For 20 years, through administration of both parties, incomes have stalled and debt has exploded and productivity has not grown as it should.

"We cannot deny the reality of our condition," the president said. "We have got to play the hand we were dealt and play it the best we can."

While cutting costs in some areas, Clinton proposed spending increases totaling $160 billion for construction projects, education and children's programs, job training, expansion of the earned income tax credit, extension of unemployment compensation and a variety of health-care programs.

The economy was the centerpiece of Clinton's campaign, and the success or failure of his program will be the benchmark by which his presidency is judged. Critics warn that Clinton's tax increases could endanger the economic recovery already under way.

Clinton said there "has been a lot of talk" about the deficit "but few credible efforts to deal with it. And now I understand why, having dealt with the real numbers for four weeks. But I believe this plan does" deal with it "seriously and over the long term."

"Our nation needs a new direction," Clinton said. "Tonight, I present to you our comprehensive plan to set our nation on that new course."

In his maiden speech to Congress, Clinton focused exclusively on his domestic agenda, not mentioning any foreign policy problems. In a reprise of his major campaign themes, Clinton asked anew for reform of the health care and welfare systems, as well as gun control legislation, a national service program and campaign finance reform.

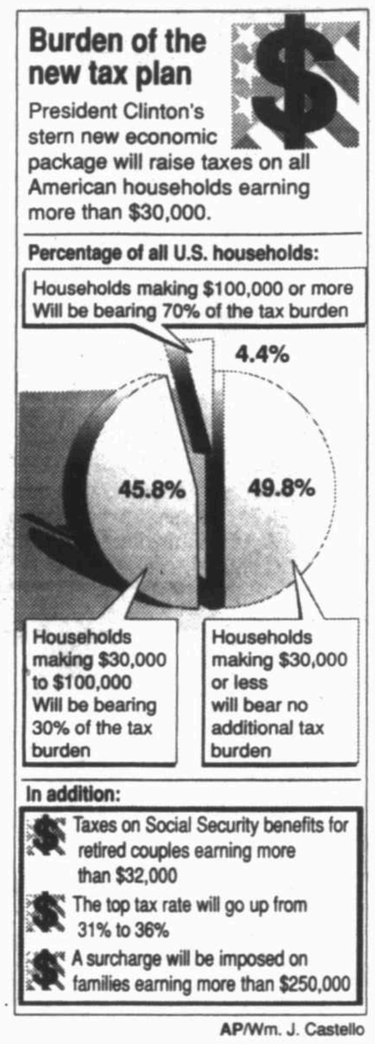

"I told him I didn't like it (the plan) at all," Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas, said as he left a White House meeting with Clinton. "There is nothing about this plan that says there will be one dime less spending next year than this year."

"Nobody likes taxes," said Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who will be in charge of shepherding much of Clinton's package. "I assume Clinton wants to be fair, and from what I interpret, he is fair. But it is going to be a tough row to hoe."

Yet, said Rostenkowski, "I think the American people will be ahead of the Congress and will be willing to accept" the package.

With opposition building, Clinton and his Cabinet plan a cross-country blitz, beginning today, to persuade Americans they should dig deeper in their wallets. The president also called Ross Perot to enlist his support.

The tax increases proposed by Clinton were tougher than the ones he discussed in his campaign. Originally, he had called for increases on couples with gross income of $200,000 and individuals with $150,000.

CRYING: Out-of-work sensation's in running

found effect on the secrecy that has thus far surrounded "The Crying Game." It also will have no small effect on the nominee. Hired for the film's pivotal role with no previous acting experience, Jaye Davidson had a temporary job in a shop two months ago, then landed some runway modeling assignments and is now out of work despite contacts in both the fashion and publicity businesses. "London is very depressed at the moment, so there's not much work around whether you've got contacts or not," said this overnight sensation, who can now be expected to have an additional contact or two.

London may be depressed, but Wednesday many of the principals of "The Crying Game" celebrated at Groucho's, a club there, and sounded anything but gloomy when reached by telephone. "This really does seem like something out of a '50s movie, it's so out of my own life," said Jaye. "I really can't express how amazed I am. And I am not an unsophisticated person."

Will the next steps, as they are for most Oscar nominees, be a publicity blitz and a trip to Hollywood for the awards ceremony? Not necessarily. The star is ambivalent, and the film's producer, Stephen Woolley, is one of those who still think it best that Jaye try to remain an unknown quantity.

"Some people who go to see the film don't really know who Stephen Rea and Jaye Davidson are," Woolley said.

So there is no immediate answer to a question that, for this Oscar nominee, has more than the usual resonance: what might Jaye Davidson wear on Oscar night? "Whatever it is, it will be elegant," said the nominee. "To be elegant, after all, is to be very subtle. I cannot be obvious."

nations with nine.

Although "Unforgiven" was a Warner Bros. film, it was among the veteran actor's most personal works — he both produced, starred in and directed the story of an aging gunslinger. Eastwood collected his first Oscar nominations ever in his long career, for directing and best acting.

Both "Unforgiven" and "Howards End" were nominated for best picture, as was "The Crying Game," writer-director Neil Jordan's riveting tale of violence and sexuality. Truly a guerrilla production, no major or independent studio would fund the film when Jordan shopped the screenplay.

"I never thought it was an Oscar kind of movie," said Jordan. "It's not a period drama, there's not an Edwardian dress in sight. It's not even about people triumphing over insuperable odds."

Also nominated for best picture were "A Few Good Men" and "Scent of a Woman."

Fully a third of the nominations in the best picture, actor and actress categories were awarded to films made outside the studio system. There was only one such nomination a year ago. In the top eight categories, nearly half the 40 nominations were taken by independent films.

"The good thing is that those movies are getting seen at least by the people who are nominating Academy Awards and that there's no big stigma attached to them," said John Sayles, whose script for the independent film "Passion Fish" was nominated.

"A Few Good Men" also won a nomination for best supporting actor for Jack Nicholson, but its star, Tom Cruise, and director, Rob Reiner, were overlooked.

In much the same way, splashy star vehichles such as "Hoffa," "Malcolm X" and "Chaplin" did not dominate the awards, even though similar films have been popular with Oscar voters in past years.

"The Crying Game" had the second-most nominations with six, followed by the animated musical "Aladdin" with five.

Selected for best actor were Eastwood for his turn as a gunslinger, Al Pacino for his part as a womanizer in "Scent of a Woman," Stephen Rea as the reluctant terrorist in "The Crying Game," Denzel Washington in the title role in "Malcolm X" and Robert Downey Jr. for starring as "Chaplin."

Best actress selections were Emma Thompson for a love-torn woman in "Howards End," Susan Sarandon as a concerned parent in "Lorenzo's Oil," Michelle Pfeiffer as an obsessed Texan traveler in "Love Field," Mary McDonnell as an invalid in "Passion Fish" and Catherine Deneuve as a Indochinese plantation owner in "Indochine."

Miss Deneuve became the 20th performer nominated for a non-English language role.

"Howards End" producer Ismail Merchant was in India when he learned of the nine Oscar nominations.

"One knew there would be something there, but not nine, surpassing even 'A Room With A View,'" he said by telephone. "Room" brought him seven nominations in 1986.

"It's a great endorsement of the feeling that independent producers can do and deliver the goods at half the price the majors do. The economics play a great part," Merchant said.

Pacino collected a rare double honor, also earning a nomination in the supporting actor category for "Glengarry Glen Ross." Other supporting actor picks were Jaye Davidson in "The Crying Game," Gene Hackman in "Unforgiven," Jack Nicholson in "A Few Good Men" and David Paymer for "Mr. Saturday Night."

"An Oscar nomination is an enormous thing in an actor's life," Pacino said. "To have two in one year, what can I say?"

Among the more unusual selections was a best supporting actress honor for Marisa Tomei in "My Cousin Vinny." Joining her in the category were Judy Davis in "Husbands and Wives," Joan Plowright in "Enchanted April," Vanessa Redgrave in "Howards End" and Miranda Richardson in "Damage."

Serbs bear down on Sarajevo suburb as U.N. halts aid

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serb tanks bore down on a key western suburb Wednesday as U.N. officials halted aid operations and accused Bosnia's warring factions of using food as a political weapon.

The Serb offensive on the last defensive lines outside Sarajevo was an apparent attempt to capture more of the capital before peace talks resume Friday in New York between Serbs, Croats and Muslims.

The Muslim-led government has blocked U.N. food aid from reaching Sarajevo, accusing of the United Nations of ignoring besieged Muslims in eastern Bosnia. But convoys to the region have been halted by ethnic Serbs, who took up arms after Bosnia declared independence from Yugoslavia in February 1992.

The United Nations has condemned use of relief shipments for political means. It also is increasingly frustrated by attacks on humanitarian personnel.

"I really regret that I have to take this decision because we have been trying to help the victims, the ordinary people, and we cannot do that," Sadako Ogata, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said in Nairobi, Kenya, in announcing the aid cutoff in Sarajevo and eastern Bosnia.

The action could increase pressure on officials in Sarajevo, where many of the 380,000 people depend on aid to stay alive and home food stocks could be running low after six days of the government's aid boycott. If the city began handing out food again, warehouses would be emptied in eight to 10 days.

In eastern Bosnia, an estimated 100,000 Muslims are trapped by Serb sieges. But the aid cutoff also will hit some Serb-dominated towns.

Bosnian radio reported battles throughout the republic and claimed 20 people were killed and 60 wounded in an air raid on Muslim-held Cerska, an eastern town. In Kamenica, near Cerska, Bosnian Serb authorities said they unearthed 23 bodies from what they called a mass grave of massacred Serbs.

Radovan Karadzic, the leader of Bosnia's Serbs, said his fighters would not allow relief convoys to pass through Serb-held territory en route to central Bosnia until the search for further bodies in Kamenica is completed.

Mrs. Ogata said aid shipments would not resume without guarantees from all parties to safeguard and allow passage of food convoys.

"We want to get the parties to cooperate. We want the international community to realize how serious the situation is," said Peter Kessler, a U.N. aid official in Zagreb, Croatia.

U.N. officials already had suspended aid flights to Sarajevo because the government's boycott caused U.N. warehouses to fill up with supplies.

"We've gotten to a point now where we have almost a 100,000 people who are starving to death in besieged Muslim villages in eastern Bosnia. And we can no longer in good conscience feed the Serb-held villages next door, and feed Serb families, while Muslim families just a couple of feet down the road are dying of starvation," said Sylvana Foa, a U.N. spokeswoman in Geneva.

The United Nations said it had delivered an average of 20,000 tons of food, medicine, blankets and other supplies to Bosnia each month since July. The suspension will affect about half that amount, spokeswoman Sylvie Girard said in Geneva.

The aid decision, which does not affect U.N. peacekeeping operations in Bosnia, likely will figure prominently at U.N. headquarters at the next found of peace talks among leaders of Bosnia's Muslim, Serb and Croat factions.

Hours after the aid cutoff was announced, the U.N. Security Council denounced both the Serbs and Muslims in Bosnia for blocking humanitarian aid. And for the first time, it began private deliberations on ways to set up an international war crimes court for atrocities in the former Yugoslav republics.

Shells also pounded central Sarajevo. Five mortar shells hit the main bakery, which shut down Sunday because of a lack of fuel. A tank shell smashed into an operating room at the main hospital, wounding one patient. Mortars sent shoppers at the downtown marketplace scurrying for cover.

Body of abducted toddler found on train track

LONDON (AP) — Videotaped images of a toddler being abducted by two boys has frightened parents across the country and provoked angry outbursts outside a police station where suspects in the kidnapping-murder were being questioned.

Police were pursuing a new report that two boys were trying to lure children from their parents in the Liverpool shopping mall where 2-year-old James Bulger was led away last week.

The report — and security camera pictures showing Jamie being led away then later — shocked Britons with the alarming possibility the murderers may be little more than children themselves.

Jamie's battered body was found Sunday on a rail line in Liverpool, two days after he wandered away from his mother in a mall butcher shop. Police said the boy was dead before he was hit by a train and there was no evidence of sexual abuse.

A coroner's inquest opened Tuesday, and the cause of death was still not known on Wednesday.

The abduction and murder of children as young as two is rare in Britain, where overall crime rates, though rapidly increasing in recent years, remain far lower than in the United States.

An average of 57 children under 5 have been murdered every year in Britain in the past decade, but only 10 in that period were killed by strangers, government statistics show.

"We were absolutely sick when we heard about that little boy," said Mandy Smith, mother of 2-year-old Jessica in Bishops Stortford, about 25 miles northeast of London. "I have not been able to stop cuddling Jess — it makes you realize how precious they are.

"All this has made me more determined to buy a set of reins," she said.

For Vanessa Bruce of west London, the case she described as "devastating" hit uncomfortably close to home. Last weekend, she said she reprimanded her 7-year-old son, Carl, for wandering away from her.

"You just have to keep a hold on them and nag them stupid," Mrs. Bruce said.

About 80 people jeered and shouted "murderer" as police led a 12-year-old out of a house Tuesday night with a blanket over his head. The boy was released Wednesday, as were two adults detained Tuesday night.

A crowd later demonstrated outside the police station where 20 youths, age 10 to 16, were questioned.

The World in brief

■ Leaders meet, discuss peace process

CAIRO, Egypt — President Hosni Mubarak and PLO leader Yasser Arafat met Wednesday to discuss the Middle East peace process before U.S. Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher begins a tour of the region.

Christopher arrives in Cairo on Thursday, the first stop of a tour that will include Jordan, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Israel.

He hopes to find a way to resolve the issue of some 400 Palestinians deported by Israel. The deportations caused the suspension of the U.S.-sponsored Arab-Israeli peace talks. Warren would like the negotiations to resume in April.

Egypt, the only Arab country to have signed a peace treaty with Israel, has been trying to mediate a solution.

■ Peacekeepers may stay in Cambodia

UNITED NATIONS — If the Khmer Rouge, the Cambodian government and two other factions cannot agree to disarm their forces by the May elections, more U.N. peacekeepers will have to stay on than planned, the U.N. chief says.

In a progress report to be sent to the Security Council, Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said that if the four factions cannot disengage, it will be necessary to keep military and civilian police components, "at a greater strength than previously foreseen, until the Constituent Assembly has completed its work and the new government has been formed."

He did not recommend a specific troop strength.

The current number of military troops under the U.N. Transitional Authority in Cambodia is 15,700, and the number was expected to be cut by 3,100 by June.

The Khmer Rouge has refused to comply with the demobilization phase of the 1991 peace agreement and has denied U.N. troops and election monitors access to areas of Cambodia under its control.

Elections for a Cambodian parliament are scheduled for May with or without Khmer Rouge participation, and U.N. peacekeeping officials fear this may lead to an escalation of violence and partition of the country.

■ Tower of Pisa leans toward collapse

PISA, Italy — Workers will begin placing a 600-ton counterweight at the north base of the Tower of Pisa next month to try to keep it from collapsing, news agencies reported Wednesday.

The counterweight will be set up to temporarily stabilize the tilting monument while permanent measures are taken.

The tower's bells were silenced two weeks ago for fear the vibrations could cause problems during the six-month installation of the lead counterweight, news reports said.

Last June, workers installed 18 steel rings around the 800-year old tower after international experts warned it was in danger of collapsing without notice.

But the tilt continued to increase last year, and the monument now leans 13 feet.

The 180-foot tourist attraction, begun in 1173, began to tilt almost immediately after it was completed as the ground shifted underneath it.

It was closed to tourists three years ago.

■ Legislation allows Communist trials

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Parliament has passed legislation opening the way for the arrest and trial of Communists for crimes committed during four decades of Communist rule.

The bill was adopted late Tuesday with 151 votes in support, 19 against and 67 abstentions, the daily Nepszabadsag said. It makes crimes committed during the 1956 anti-Communist revolution and subsequent repression punishable, exempting them from a 20-year statute of limitation.

A previous effort at such legislation was defeated in March 1992, when the Constitutional Court voided a previous bill on the grounds that it violated provisions on the statute of limitations.

Though most ranking Communists who could be prosecuted are now dead, the legislation opens the way for trials of less senior officials, including members of the former secret police.

China releases leader of democracy movement

BEIJING (AP) — China released the most prominent student leader of China's 1989 democracy movement and two other dissidents Wednesday in what appeared to be a gesture to President Clinton and the Olympics movement.

Wang Dan, who was No. 1 on the wanted list issued by police after the crushing of the democracy movement, was freed along with another student leader, Guo Haifeng. Zhu Hongsheng, a 76-year-old Catholic priest from Shanghai, also was released.

The early releases came just two weeks before a high-level delegation from the International Olympic Committee is to visit Beijing, whose leaders have made clear their strong desire to be host of the Summer Olympic Games in 2000.

The three paroles also might be intended as a goodwill gesture to the new Clinton administration, which has promised to focus on human rights in foreign policy.

The official Xinhua News Agency said Wang and Guo were released a few months early for good behavior. It said that with their release, all students "who violated the criminal law" during the democracy protests had been freed.

However, the government has not announced the release of many other students who are known to have been arrested after the democracy demonstrations in Beijing and other major cities.

Western human rights groups estimate more than 10,000 people were arrested after the 1989 protests and thousands are believed still jailed. China has never disclosed any figures.

"I've no regrets," Wang told reporters at his family home just hours after being released from Beijing No. 2 Prison. "My personal ambition is to do all I can to promote democracy."

Wang, 23, was arrested in July 1989 and was due to be released this July. He said no conditions or restrictions were attached to his release.

Guo, 27, also was arrested in 1989 and would have finished his four-year term in June.

Xinhua said Zhu was released before his 15-year term expired but did not say how long he had been jailed or why. No information about the priest was immediately available.

"I really wish I could take a bath and rest," Wang said as more foreign reporters arrived at his home.

He looked healthy and spoke in a strong, clear voice. Wang was not reported to have been mistreated during his imprisonment, unlike others jailed for participating in the 1989 movement.

"This is a test for the government. How will the central government react to my meeting with so many reporters today? This will really show whether the government is changing or not," Wang said.

Explosion of deadly 'toy' injures six Somali children

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Twelve-year-old Hasan lay in a coma Wednesday, shrapnel lodged in his head from a mortar shell he and his friends played catch with until it banged on a rock and exploded.

Ahmed, also 12, lay across the hospital aisle, one leg blown off and the other painfully broken. Ahmed's brother Omar, 10, had two broken legs. Three other children were hurt in the accident Monday.

"I hate it, all these weapons around here," Ahmed's mother, Halim Mohamed Abrahim, said, holding back tears.

Like ghosts from the years of superpower-fed proxy warfare and factional fighting, as many as a million mines and thousands of other abandoned weapons are killing or maiming kids who find them.

During 21 years of rule under dictator Mohammed Siad Barre, who was toppled and fled into exile in January 1991, Somalia allied itself first with Moscow, then with Washington to finance war with Ethiopia.

After Siad Barre's fall, the country descended into an orgy of fighting between factions. One of the missions of Operation Restore Hope, which began two months ago to secure food shipments for the starving, has been the search for mines and arms caches.

Not far from the border where Somalia and Ethiopia fought their turf battles and where Somali factions are still in a tense faceoff, Canadian soldiers this week displayed an array of rifles, grenades and mines.

Children often tip off soldiers about where the arms are or cheerfully walk up with the weapons themselves, said Maj. Charles Pommet in Belet Huen, 200 miles north of Mogadishu.

"We were sipping tea in a cafe and some kids dropped a couple of grenades at our feet," he said.

U.S. helicopters have begun dropping leaflets with pictures of the weapons and ordnance, said Col. Fred Peck, U.S. military spokesman.

Nobel laureates demand release of Burmese opposition leader

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The leader of a group of eight Nobel Peace Prize winners urged the international community Wednesday to join in demanding the release of Burma's main opposition leader.

The Nobel laureates came to Thailand — they were denied entry to neighboring Burma — to focus world attention on Burma's human rights violations and call for the release of Aung San Suu Kyi and 1,500 other political prisoners. Mrs. Suu Kyi is the winner of the 1991 Nobel Peace Prize.

"We invite the citizens of the world to join with us in demanding the end to oppression in Burma and the release of the woman who has become the symbol of liberty throughout the world," said Oscar Arias Sanchez, the former president of Costa Rica and the 1987 Nobel peace laureate.

He called for an arms embargo to be imposed on Burma.

But the Dalai Lama, the 1989 peace prize winner, told reporters that "gentle persuasion" should be tried first.

"If that doesn't work, stronger measures," should be used, said the Tibetan religious leader.

Arias said he helped initiate the mission because "Western democracies are not really committed to the fight for democracy in the Third World."

Clinton asks middle-income families for extra $10-12 a month

By Jim Luther
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's proposed tax increase would cost the typical middle-income family of four an extra $10 to $12 a month. Most lower-income families would avoid the pain altogether; high earners would be hit hard.

For most families and individuals with adjusted gross incomes between $30,000 and $100,000 — the middle class — the sole direct impact of the president's deficit-reduction proposal would be in higher energy prices.

If enacted by Congress, the program would raise gasoline prices by about 7½ cents a gallon; home-heating oil by 8¼ cents; natural gas by 26¼ cents per thousand cubic feet, and the average monthly electric bill by $2.25. One-third of the tax, based on a fuel's energy content, would be imposed July 1, 1994; it would be fully effective two years later.

The less than one-quarter of Social Security recipients who now pay tax on up to half their monthly benefits would be taxed on up to 85 percent instead. More than 90 percent of taxable benefits are paid to older Americans with incomes over $30,000 a year.

■ Analysis

Most of the 70 million couples and individuals earning less than $30,000 a year would, according to the Clinton administration, have most of the energy-tax increases offset by government spending programs.

The earned-income credit, which now benefits working families with children and incomes of $22,370 or less, would be expanded for the first time to cover childless workers. Spending for food stamps and an energy assistance program for low-income households would be increased.

Economists generally agree that any major energy tax increase — this one would raise more than $71 billion over four years — tends to inflate the prices of most goods and services. Thus, every family would be likely to feel effects of the energy tax, above and beyond the direct increase in energy prices.

About 57 percent of Clinton's total tax increase, which would average $60 billion a year, would be paid by those with annual incomes of $200,000 and over — those who in Clinton's view profited most from the tax cuts of the 1980s.

On average, these people's federal taxes, now 20.9 percent of pretax income, would rise to 23.8 percent. The average $200,000-plus earner would pay an extra $34,000 a year.

Here is how they would be hit:

■ The top individual income tax rate, now 31 percent, would be raised to 36 percent, retroactive to Jan. 1. This would affect the 1.2 percent of taxpayers with the highest incomes: single people with adjusted gross income over about $140,000 and couples above $180,000. The new rate would apply only to taxable income — after exemptions and deductions are subtracted — over $115,000 for singles and $140,000 for couples. The maximum rate on capital gains would remain at 28 percent.

■ All wages of most workers would be subject to the 1.45 percent Medicare tax. The tax now applies only to the first $135,000 of annual wages.

Clinton proposed to raise the maximum tax rate on corporate income, now 34 percent, to 36 percent. Businesses likely would pass at least part of such an increase to consumers in the form of higher prices.

Baboon liver recipient's autopsy inconclusive

PITTSBURGH (AP) — An autopsy on the second person to receive a transplanted baboon liver didn't reveal what caused an intestinal leak that led to a fatal infection, a surgeon said Wednesday.

The 62-year-old man, whose name wasn't released, never regained full consciousness after the operation Jan. 10.

He died Feb. 5, several days after surgeons discovered that intravenous fluid had leaked into his abdominal cavity near the liver.

"It is unlikely we will ever find a reason," said Dr. John Fung, chief of transplantation at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center.

Fung had previously speculated that loose stitching might have caused the leak, but he said Wednesday that was unlikely. If a stitch had been missed at the point where the liver was sewn to the small intestine, the infection would have started earlier, Fung said.

The patient was suffering from hepatitis B and near death when he received a baboon liver, which transplant surgeons say resists the disease. A human liver would have been destroyed by hepatitis B.

Fung said the liver had grown to the size of a normal human liver and "functioned well."

"It made bile," he said. "It grew to three times over its normal size."

Similar results were reported in the first patient, who died of an infection Sept. 6.

In that case, doctors said they were pleased because the patient's cells coexisted with baboon cells.

It will take several more weeks to determine if the same thing occurred in the second patient, Fung said.

Surgeons say it's likely animal organs will be used more frequently for transplants because the number of human organs available is small.

Clinton's decision to fund SSC is wise

It's always difficult to justify big-ticket items in the Congress when the economy's rocky and there's a huge bill to pay anyway. That said, President Clinton's decision not to kill the superconducting super collider (SSC) project at Waxahachie was correct.

Why? Because the $8.25 billion particle accelerator will ultimately mean more jobs and, potentially, greater knowledge about the universe which can be translated into better life on this earth.

It's a gamble, perhaps, from the perspective that we don't really know how quickly the benefits of the SSC will be realized, but throughout history advances in scientific knowledge have led to a better quality of life here on earth.

Unfortunately the super collider project arrived at a bad time — when mounting budget deficits in the Congress and the Persian Gulf War kicked up the U.S. debt to an unacceptable level. That debt must be reduced now for the stability of our economy. But that should not mean the project should be scrapped altogether. Rather, spending priorities should be shifted in order to keep alive the super collider until it can be funded entirely.

U.S. Sen. Bob Krueger agreed in an Associated Press news story earlier this week, when he noted that he had learned Clinton would ask Congress to allocate $640 million for the SSC project. That's less than the $859 million President Bush had planned to seek, but still enough to keep the collider alive.

"I'm convinced," said Krueger, "that this level of funding, while it may stretch out the construction phase a year or two, is a very good one."

The senator obviously recognizes the potential of the SSC, as do the other members of the Texas delegation to Congress and numerous other congressmen. The super collider should be funded just as the various NASA programs were during the 1960's and 1970's despite the cries of those who insist that the money would be better spent on helping people here on earth.

The reason is simple: the super collider will benefit the life of every person on earth, just as did the NASA programs. That type of program is what the Congress should be funding. It will make a difference in the quality of life on earth.

Talk show opinions do not reflect popular view

Pundits . . . are declaring the call-in talk shows of radio and television to be America's newfound electronic town meetings. . . .

Well, here's a news flash: Anyone who lives out here in the sticks and who watches or listens to these shows, and who reads, and who talks to a normal variety of fellow citizens, knows intuitively that the call-in shows absolutely do not speak the vox populi.

There may be a crude balance of opinion on some of them, because they hear from the far-out extremes on both sides of any issue. But most of the shows, and the opinions expressed by callers, are slanted sharply in the direction of their hosts' political leanings.

These shows may deal with broad issues, but they in no way gauge the broad popular opinion. They are, instead, sounding boards for those who hold extreme views. . . .

To say that call-in talk shows are America's electronic town hall meetings is silly. To believe it is dangerous.

Polls to invite Americans to change Hillary's name

The people have spoken. Nearly two-thirds don't like the first lady using her birth name as a middle name — Hillary Rodham Clinton.

This reaction doesn't surprise us, but we are puzzled about why the Wall Street Journal and NBC paid good money to find it out.

Apparently, the American people are going to be invited, through polls, to advise the first family on all sorts of things we used to let them decide for themselves. So we have a few more poll suggestions to consider:

— Should the president jog on city streets? . . .

— What should he eat after jogging? . . .

— Where should Socks' litter box be? . . .

— If the first lady can't call herself Hillary Rodham Clinton, what should her name be?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Feb. 18, the 49th day of 1993. There are 316 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 18, 1861, Jefferson Davis was sworn in as president of the Confederate States of America in Montgomery, Ala.

On this date:

In 1546, Martin Luther, leader of the Protestant Reformation in Germany, died.

In 1564, the artist Michelangelo died in Rome.

In 1885, Mark Twain's "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" was published in the United State for the first time.

In 1930, the ninth planet of our solar system, Pluto, was discovered.

GEORGE WILL

Clinton teaches nation about 'change'

WASHINGTON — Teachers are described as people who never say anything once. Bill Clinton, true to the modern notion of the president as national tutor, has embarked on a sustained seminar to teach the nation that the "change" it voted for means, and that deficit reduction entails, substantial tax increases. Millions in the electronic classroom may be skeptical.

Will

If skepticism is the chastity of the intellect, such chastity is proper regarding the "stimulus." We are getting the stimulus precisely because it is not needed, on the Connecticut Yankee principle. Mark Twain's Yankee knew an eclipse was due, so he commanded it to happen, and King Arthur's court pronounced him a wizard. Today a recovery is occurring, so Clinton's stimulus will command it to occur.

Last week, Clinton denounced "those who see the tax code as a table game to be won." But his program (if it turns out to be as advertised) will fuel the frenzy of the game by continuing what Bush began with the 1990 budget agreement — the unraveling of the 1986 tax reform. The principles of that reform were: few brackets, few loopholes, low rates. Clinton wants today's three brackets (15, 28 and 31 percent) increased to five (adding 36, and 36 plus a surcharge for millionaires).

The proposed increase of the top personal rate to 36 percent is already having a perverse effect in the form of the planned increase of the corporate tax rate from 34 percent to 36 percent. The reason given for this increase is that if the individual rate is lower than the corporate rate, individuals will incorporate.

So Clinton's plan to increase job creation and international competitiveness begins by burdening business with an extra $6 billion tax bill. As Harold Gleckman writes in Business Week, a higher tax rate combined with an investment tax credit tells business: add equipment, not labor. And the $6 billion tax bite dilutes the stimulus because corporations do not pay taxes, they collect them — from customers in increased prices of products, or from employees by reducing funds for compensation, or from shareholders by reducing dividends, or from the future by reducing research, development and investment.

But, you say, the future is served by tax increases that reduce the deficit. But Daniel Mitchell of the Heritage Foundation notes that taxes were raised four times in nine years (1982, 1984, 1987, 1990) explicitly for deficit reduction, and in the year following each increase the deficit increased.

Will Congress seriously cut spending? When Clinton addressed Congress Wednesday night he addressed 535 legislators, most of whom were here before he was and intend to be here when he is gone. Clinton, having been a professional politician since he was old enough to leave the amateur ranks, surely understands the primary motive in Washington: careerism.

Are the 110 new House members different? Hardly. Seventy percent were legislators at the state or local level. For them, coming to Congress is not a new career, it is a move within a career.

At the end of this seminar, the taught will grade the teacher. He's a 1960s guy, no doubt very respectful of students' opinions and the wholesomeness of dissent. So, fellow students, today's seminar topic is:

When our teacher equates cheerfulness about middle-class tax increases with "patriotism," is he not stigmatizing dissent — including belief in his abandoned campaign promises — as unpatriotic?

Actions to determine if NATO lives or dies

LONDON — Looking southward in 1876, Bismarck of Germany, borrowing a phrase from Frederick the Great, recoiled from Continental responsibility: "The Balkans are not worth the healthy bones of a single Pomeranian musketeer."

Safire

Many Americans today feel the same way. What the rapacious Serbs have been doing to the Bosnians is horrible, and what the Croats are now doing to the Bosnians as they get even with the Serbs is almost as bad — but what do all these ancient hatreds have to do with us?

Our inclination is to translate Bismarck's isolation into Lyndon Johnsonese: "I don't have a dog in this fight."

But when television brings film of suffering into our homes, and rescue workers and journalists report rapine and genocide, Americans are moved to a more principled position. We say human-righteously: You Europeans ought to do something about the evil rampant on your own continent.

So European leaders hold peace talks to legitimize current conquests. They loosely apply economic sanctions. They send in peacekeepers to provide humanitarian aid, treating the victims rather than confronting the perpetrators. The U.N. labors over imposition of meaningless flight restrictions.

Result: Aggression is rewarded and war spreads in the former Yugoslavia.

American public sentiment is now becoming prepared for another half-step: to allow the Bosnians to arm themselves and die for their country. We may even provide air cover and satellite intelligence for European troops, and threaten to bomb Serbian artillery now killing civilians.

Today, the essential American message to Europe seems to be: If you take the lead, we'll help, but our help has to be technological and not the sort that generates outcries of opposition.

This qualified offer to hold Europe's coat does not go over well with our allies. They much prefer that the superpower take the lead in the Balkans, which would give them political cover at home; barring that, they wish some hawkish Americans would stop talking about serious military response, because it may jeopardize the present conscience-salving treatment of the symptoms.

That's the state of play as the Clinton administration takes its place at the world table. Here are three facts that face our new policymakers:

1. Collective security is no longer limited to defending national borders; a nascent understanding grows that ethnic minorities are entitled to international protection.

2. Europeans are capable of being shamed into taking action to enforce this new concept of collective security, but unless America does the active shaming, Europe's leaders will shrink from their responsibility.

3. America, if it is to have the standing to call for effective action, must be ready to share the risk. We should be prepared to help pose a threat on the ground as well as in the air — perhaps as a symbolic part of a muscular NATO force that could be assembled in Macedonia, protecting that region as well as the ethnic Albanians who live in Serbia's Kosovo. This would not be a vulnerable contingent riding shotgun for the Red Cross; it would be a powerful deterrent ready to counterattack ethnic cleansers.

American public opinion is far from ready for this. Is President Clinton, so eager to begin domestic innovation, ready to begin preparing the ground for such a foreign commitment?

To do so, he must ask his aides: Why isn't the Pentagon working with allies to prepare a battle plan that might intimidate local aggressors into settlement without war? He must also ask France, Germany, Britain: Are the stable nations of Western Europe prepared to offer the carrot of economic incentives to the Balkans and to other impoverished peoples to the south and east?

We are entering the season that will decide whether NATO lives or dies. A misstep could cost lives; inaction will cost lives and an alliance. America cannot impose its ideals on its allies, but if the nations of Europe are unwilling to defend their innocents, those nations can hardly expect America to help defend their borders.

ART BUCHWALD

Everyone wins with frequent-flier miles

Every time you see an aviation executive on television, he's crying poverty. All the airlines are losing money and nobody knows why.

I do. Just this morning I received my latest frequent flyer accounting statement. For taking three flights to Newark I was entitled to five free trips around the world or one business-class seat on the next space shuttle from Cape Canaveral.

Buchwald

Apparently, there's nothing you do today that does not entitle you to a free airline ticket. When I opened the frequent flyer envelope, all sorts of colored coupons fell out informing me how I could build up airline mileage. If I used Purina dog food it would go into the computer. If I stayed in a hotel I would get points for just sleeping there. If I used my microwave to heat up a can of chicken soup I could get a round-trip ticket to visit Aunt Milly in Hawaii.

The airlines seem to be the only industry that gives away the very commodity it's supposed to be selling.

Jay McKenzie, the marketing director for Southern Freebie Airlines, is very proud of his company's free mileage policy.

"Frequent flyer mileage is our way of saying thank you to all the people who take our airline — or are thinking of taking our airline in the future."

I said, "I can understand you rewarding those who fly your airline, but it doesn't make much sense to give away free trips to people who jog in Central Park."

"The airline wants to attract many people who ordinarily don't fly — teen-age baby-sitters, green card holders, people in state prisons," Jay told me. "To do this we must persuade them that there is something in it for them. If we can provide an Orkin man and his wife with a free trip to Acapulco, we consider that we've done a good merchandising job."

"Don't all these trips cut down on your cash flow?" I asked.

Jay replied, "Admittedly, we could benefit from more profits, but once you go down the frequent flyer glide path, it's hard to turn back. The competition is always breathing down your neck. We heard that TWA is offering 20,000 miles if you watch 14 hours of basketball a week. Obviously we have to top that if we're going to stay in business."

"How do you plan to do it?"

"We're working out a deal with the iceberg lettuce people. Every time you buy a head of lettuce we'll credit you with 2,500 miles."

"If you're handing out frec mileage for everyone, what are you using for money to keep your planes flying?"

"We're giving our mechanics 25,000 free bonus miles for every plane they fix correctly. They love the incentive and will work late into the night to earn enough to get them to Europe."

"Dare I inquire how the stockholders are doing with all the free rides?"

Jay said, "Not bad. We give them a 4,400-mile bonus for every point that the stock goes down."

"Nobody loses according to your marketing campaign."

"Aviation is something that requires special selling. If a guy knows he can stay in a bed-and-breakfast hotel and get frequent flyer miles, he's going to sleep better. If he buys a set of golf clubs and gets a ticket to Argentina, he is ahead of the game. The next time he wants to fly somewhere, he'll take Southern Freebie Airlines."

Jay handed me a certificate.

"What is this?"

"We're crediting you with 14,000 miles for wearing a blue shirt."

Report: Combination of drugs stops AIDS virus reproduction

NEW YORK (AP) — A combination of three drugs has stopped the AIDS virus from reproducing in the test tube, researchers report, raising hopes of someday keeping AIDS infections at bay in people.

"We can prevent infection of new cells by this technique better than we have been able to do with any other strategy we've studied over the past six or seven years," said Dr. Martin Hirsch.

If the technique also blocks the spread of the virus within people, a patient's immune system might be able to "at least keep the virus in control for long periods of time, and perhaps forever," he said in a telephone interview. He compared that prospect to treatment of diabetes.

But he and other scientists cautioned that it will take experiments in humans to see if the technique really works.

"It would be foolish to underestimate the opposition, (the virus)," said Dr. Douglas Richman of the University of California, San Diego. "But it's certainly an exciting and reasonable hypothesis and it merits testing."

The test tube work is presented in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature by Hirsch, Yung-Kang Chow and others at Massachusetts General Hospital and Harvard Medical School in Boston.

They used the standard drugs AZT and dideoxyinosine, also called ddI, and a third compound called pyridinone.

The three drugs were chosen to overcome the fact that the AIDS virus can evolve to become resistant to individual drugs.

All three drugs attack a single enzyme, called reverse transcriptase, which the virus needs to reproduce.

The idea behind the "convergent combination therapy" was that the virus would be unable to resist such a triple attack, Chow said in a telephone interview. And if the enzyme can be prevented from working, it might also keep the virus from evolving into drug-resistant strains, he said.

In one of the new experiments, scientists infected blood cells with the AIDS virus, called HIV, then waited a week until HIV reproduction was at its peak. They then added the three-drug combination.

By 35 days later, the infection was no longer detectable. After 49 days of treatment the drugs were removed, and no HIV reproduction was detected for the next 45 days.

Hirsch said that while the virus apparently was eliminated under certain conditions, "it would be a mistake to say we can eradicate the virus when it's present already within a cell."

Starting this spring, the three-drug combination will be tested in a study of people with advanced HIV infections, he said.

"We've got to see what it does within the individual," commented Dr. Jay Levy of the University of California at San Francisco.

The Nation in brief

■ Semiconscious teen tells of beating

WESLEY CHAPEL, Fla. — A 13-year-old boy awoke briefly from a coma to tell his father his injuries weren't from a bike accident as believed but from a beating with a baseball bat.

Andrew Leigh Pate said two men wearing ski masks came out of the woods on either side of him as he rode his bicycle toward home Feb. 10. One beat him in the face with a baseball bat as he rode between them, he said. The father called the sheriff's office.

"They almost killed my son," said Karen Pate, who has kept a vigil by her son's bed at St. Joseph's Hospital. She said he has been drifting in and out of a coma since Monday's murmurings about the beating. He was in guarded condition Wednesday.

Sheriff's deputies have no suspects in what is considered an aggravated assault, spokesman Jon Powers said.

■ Doctors warn soldiers of pregnancy

FORT DRUM, N.Y. — Army doctors are warning female soldiers returning from Somalia to avoid becoming pregnant for three months because of possible complications from anti-malaria medication they take.

All returning troops must continue to take weekly doses of the medicine Mefloquine for four weeks after leaving Somalia to fend off any remaining risk of malaria, transmitted through the bite of the female Anopheles mosquito.

Women should avoid pregnancy for eight weeks as a precaution until concentrations of Mefloquine in their bodies are lowered, said Dr. Steven D. Klamerus, a preventive medical officer at Fort Drum.

■ Study: Overcrowded conditions double

LOS ANGELES — The number of people living in overcrowded conditions in the city doubled during the 1980s as housing costs and population soared, according to a new study.

Nearly 25 percent of the city's renters shared severely overcrowded conditions in 1990, up from 10.5 percent in 1980, according to Tuesday's report from the city's Housing Preservation and Production Department.

An inflation rate that totaled 59 percent eroded buying power during the '80s, while median housing prices soared by 154 percent, or more than double the national increase, and rent prices rose 138 percent, the study found.

■ Officials charge baby sitter with murder

ZANESVILLE, Ohio — A baby sitter charged in the mutilation death of the 5-year-old girl he was caring for will remain in jail until a judge decides whether to try him as an adult.

Billy Joe Shaeffer, 16, of Zanesville, is charged with a delinquency count of aggravated murder in Sunday's death of Sara West, who was disemboweled and shot.

If convicted as a juvenile, Shaeffer could be jailed in a juvenile facility until he is 21. If convicted as an adult, he could face 25 years to life in prison. Ohio law prohibits imposing the death penalty on someone younger than 18, even if he is tried as an adult.

Sheriff Bernard Gibson said Shaeffer confessed to killing Sara but did not give a reason.

■ Court upholds sentence of biting inmate

TRENTON, N.J. — A state appeals court upheld a 25-year sentence imposed on an inmate with AIDS who bit a jail guard during a scuffle and said "Now die, you pig."

Lawyers for Gregory D. Smith, 29, of Cherry Hill, argued in November that their client was convicted of attempted murder because of AIDS hysteria.

Lawyers Ronald L. Kuby and William M. Kunstler also said Smith was wrongly convicted because he knew that his bite could not kill the officer. At the time of the biting in 1989, Smith was being held at the Camden County Jail on robbery charges.

Smith's attorneys said they would appeal to state Supreme Court.

Seven children die in Detroit fire

DETROIT (AP) — A house fire killed seven young children who were left alone and were trapped by barred windows Wednesday, officials said.

Homicide investigators were called to the scene because the children's parents had left them alone, Fire Department spokesman Rodney Parnell said.

The victims were four boys and three girls, 7 months to 9 years old, authorities said. All seven had the same father and all but one had the same mother, said Dan Artman, spokesman for Children's Hospital of Michigan, where the victims were pronounced dead.

The parents arrived about 20 minutes after the fire was reported, asking about the children, according to a broadcast report. After going to the hospital, the mother was taken to police headquarters for questioning, WDIV-TV reported. It wasn't immediately clear where the father was.

The fire was in a two-story wooden home on the city's near east side, a neighborhood of rundown one-family homes.

The victims were found in one room, with a dresser pushed up to a window in an apparent attempt to escape, Battalion Chief Harold Watkins said. He said they were trapped by padlocked burglar bars on the windows.

"We smelled smoke and I had my kids running up and down our house. We thought our house was on fire," said Cynthia Taylor, a next-door neighbor. "Then I saw the truck pull up and I knew it was the house next door.

"I was praying the older kids were in school and (the mother) had the little ones with her but then I saw them bring the little kids out."

Taylor said the family had lived there for about 2½ years, keeping mostly to itself.

The children died of smoke asphyxiation, Fire Marshal Richard Milliner said. He said it wasn't known what started the fire.

Parnell identified the victims as Lawanda Williams, 9; Nikia Williams, 7; Dakwan Williams, 6; Laquint Lyons, 4; Venus Lyons, 2; Anthony Lyons, 7 months, and Mark Bray, 2.

It was the second time in 4½ months that security devices on windows trapped people in a burning Detroit house. The Oct. 3 fire killed four adults and two children.

Ex-judge pleads innocent by reason of insanity in federal extortion charge

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The former chief judge of New York state's highest court pleaded innocent by reason of insanity Wednesday to federal charges that he tried to extort money from his former lover.

Sol Wachtler, 62, who resigned as chief judge of the New York State Court of Appeals after his Nov. 7 arrest by FBI agents, appeared before U.S. District Judge Anne Thompson, who set a June 1 trial date.

Wachtler's lawyer, Charles Stillman, has said his client suffered from a "major psychiatric illness." Stillman said earlier this month that several psychiatrists had evaluated Wachtler and his conduct, concluding that he was not responsible for his actions.

In a five-count federal indictment handed up Feb. 1, Wachtler, 62, was charged with interstate travel and the use of telephones and mail to promote an extortion scheme involving Republican fund-raiser and socialite Joy Silverman. The two had broken off a relationship in early 1992.

He also faces three counts of mailing threatening communications to Silverman and her teenage daughter, and one count of making false statements to a federal agency.

If convicted, Wachtler faces up to 16 years in federal prison and $1.25 million in fines.

Silverman, a well-connected fund-raiser, went directly to FBI Director William Sessions, who put the agency's Newark office on the case Sept. 18.

Wachter has been under house arrest at his home in Manhasset, N.Y., and must wear an electronic monitoring device to verify his whereabouts.

Groups attack energy tax proposal

■ Broad-based levy would burden taxpayers and hurt competitiveness of U.S. products abroad, opponents say.

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON Business and energy groups attacked President Clinton's broad-based energy tax proposal Wednesday, contending that new levies would burden taxpayers and hurt the competitiveness of U.S. products abroad.

The proposed energy tax, one of the key components of a stern economic package unveiled by Clinton, is designed to raise an extra $71.4 billion in new taxes between 1994 and 1998. If approved by Congress, the taxes would be phased in over a three-year period beginning July 1, 1994.

Clinton said that under his proposal, Americans will still have far lower energy taxes than other major industrialized countries, "and they will be spread fairly" by his plan, which affects all major U.S. energy sources. Clinton also said his program would help promote energy conservation.

But business groups disagreed sharply.

"This is bad news all the way around," said Terry Hill, a spokesman for the National Federation of Independent Business. "This energy tax is going to hit our small business people hard, and will probably drive us back down just as we're coming out of a recession."

Some consumer groups embraced Clinton's plan, praising the administration's effort to soften the blow of higher taxes on fuels for low-income Americans, who spend proportionately more of their incomes on energy. Clinton has proposed expanding income tax relief for low-income Americans to defray their higher energy bills.

"It seems like the right way to tackle the energy tax issue," said Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, the Ralph Nader-founded lobbying group. "We like it."

Paul Leonard, an economist with the liberal Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, called Clinton's program "a very progressive tax package."

"Enacting a broad-based energy tax, with the adequate offsets Clinton is proposing, is something that we support wholeheartedly," Leonard said.

The program would affect all carbon-based fuels — oil, natural gas and coal — along with nuclear power. Over three years, the Clinton proposal would raise gasoline prices by 7.5 cents a gallon, add 8.25 cents to a gallon of home heating oil and increase the cost of natural gas by 26.25 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. The average electric bill would go up $2.25 a month over the three-year period.

The broad-based energy tax was proposed by Clinton instead of a simpler increase on retail gasoline because of stiffer congressional opposition to the gas

Dentist teaches proper brushing

■ Pediatric dentist discusses oral hygiene with second-graders.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Taking dental hygiene personally is not only smart for your health's sake, but brushing your teeth can be both habit-forming and enjoyable.

That is the message which Dr. Michael K. Wilkerson, a Midland pediatric dentist, and his dental assistants, Janet Watkins and Cyndi Corley, are telling Midland's public and private school second-graders.

And when children's permanent teeth start cutting through the gums and pushing the "baby teeth" out, Wilkerson tells the children:

"These are your permanent teeth, and this is your last set. You need to take care of them."

Among Wilkerson's classroom visits on Wednesday was to DeZavala Elementary School. He and his staff will be making the rounds to elementary schools through the middle of next week.

"I want to see that they know how to brush," Wilkerson said. He showed the students how properly to brush their teeth and so did the Peanuts' cartoon character, Charlie Brown.

"Some children have a high dental IQ, and some children have never been to the dentist," Wilkerson said. "We get a range (of tooth-care knowledge). It's fun to go in and talk to them."

Primarily, he wants children regularly to bush their teeth to remove the caries-causing plaque and to stimulate their gums to promote healthy gums and teeth.

"There are a tremendous amount of kids out here who have a lot of decay, a lot of cavities," Wilkerson said following a session with second-graders. "I'm not sure if it is related to their diet or to their brushing habits," he said.

Many children may not be "educated to the fact . . . what their problem is. And the parents may not enforce brushing."

'I want to see that they know how to brush . . . Some children have a high dental IQ, and some children have never been to the dentist.'
— Dr. Michael Wilkerson

Erik Leyva, a 7-year-old DeZavala student, tried brushing in Wilkerson's class. "It tickled," Erik said. "We didn't put no toothpaste to it (the toothbrush)."

The main thing, Wilkerson said, is brushing and rinsing.

"Toothpaste isn't what removes the plaque," the dentist said. "The brushing is what does it." The toothpaste is a "mouth freshener."

Felicia Perez, 7, said the importance of brushing the teeth is "so you won't get cavities."

"I learned that you should brush behind your teeth (as well as on front), on your tongue, and on top of them (teeth)," said classmate Ashley Hinojos, 7. "You take the plaque between your teeth off with dental floss," she said.

And DeZavala Principal Maria Mata, who sanctioned Wilkerson's in-school class on dental hygiene, said that it is "very important, especially at the lower elementary grades, to have the children to be knowledgeable about dental hygiene because it is going to help them in the long run.

"A lot of these children cannot afford dental checkups and so forth," Ms. Mata said. And through education, perhaps the children will be able to take care of their teeth and gums and avoid dental diseases and problems, she said.

Wilkerson, who, at 29, is establishing pediatric dental practice in Midland, talked about the importance of "prenatal counse-

Former deputy looks forward to his 'day in court'

■ Tim Rogers tenders his resignation.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Tim Rogers, the Midland County sheriff's lieutenant deputy who has faced a now-dismissed perjury indictment and a current driving-while-intoxicated (DWI) charge, this week tendered his resignation to Sheriff Gary Painter.

"I just can't describe the humiliation," Rogers, 39, said Wednesday night of the accusation against him. "It hurts. But the way I look at it, I'll walk away from it and never look back."

Rogers, who has worked 17 years in law enforcement, is maintaining his innocence to the DWI charge and said that the former perjury charge was frivolous.

"I'll have my day in court" in March on the DWI charge," Rogers said. But, due to what he termed inaccurate news reports about the Dec. 31 incident in which a sliding metal gate at the Las Colinas Condominiums closed on his car and in which he subsequently was charged with DWI, Rogers said: "I feel like I've been tried in court, to tell the truth.

"There's nothing there (to the DWI charge)."

Rogers said the gate closed on his county-owned car before he could drive through the entrance to visit a troubled friend there. His car did not "crash" into the gate, as reported in a television-news story, Rogers said.

"First off, I didn't crash into the gate, and I didn't total the car.

"I would just like for people to tell the truth about what they know," he said. "I'm not really worried about the trial." He said he knows he's innocent.

"The Sheriff's Office already is too much in the limelight for me to do something stupid like that (DWI)," Rogers said.

Rogers said he was not pressured by the sheriff to resign his $30,000-plus-a-year job but did so on his own accord. Rogers, who said he figured that the DWI trial would be well in 1993 and not as soon as March, said he felt that he "could not hang in there that long" and resigned Monday.

"No. 1, Gary (Painter) has enough problems to worry about," Rogers said of his resignation. "He would have stuck by me. He never asked for my resignation."

Following the DWI charge, Painter suspended Rogers for a few days until an internal investigation could be completed and then put him back to work.

"He was an excellent officer, a very fine man, a very honest man, and man with integrity," Painter said of Rogers. "And he will certainly be missed."

Rogers, a former Midland Police Department patrolman, joined the Sheriff's Department 12 years ago when Dallas Smith was sheriff and was hired by Painter in 1985 following Painter's election.

Rogers, who most recently was an investigator for Capt. Clayton McKinney, was promoted to captain of the Sheriff's Department's Special Services Division. But he was reclassified as a lieutenant in 1991 after the Commissioners' Court budgeted for only two captain's positions, and the former Special Services Division was dove-tailed into the Operations Divisions, which McKinney heads.

"Tim is not going to lie to a grand jury, or to anyone for that matter," Painter said Wednesday night.

Rogers had been indicted for misdemeanor perjury for allegedly making a contradictory, though quickly corrected, statement to a 1992 grand jury, which was looking into the sheriff's drug-sting operations.

"There was no evidence to prove up the case," Painter said.

Rogers, who feared that now "there's nothing that can get back my reputation," said he may return to law enforcement but not in Midland County.

"I've given my pound of flesh," Rogers said, "and I don't want to do it anymore — not anymore. I'm going to court, and I'm going to be found 'not guilty.' But I'm going to be still guilty in the eyes of some people. I don't care if I have to buy a pickup and a lawn-mower and mow grass for a living, I'll do that" before returning to law enforcement in Midland County.

I'll get it (the dismissed perjury indictment) expunged" from the courthouse record, Rogers said. "And I've got to get this DWI thing expunged, too.

"I'm not really blaming anybody, but what happened to me wasn't right. But I'll have to go through the system just like anybody to prove it (his innocence)."

City, KMB, Realtors join to pick up garbage items

Staff report

Keep Midland Beautiful, the city of Midland and the Midland Association of Realtors will be conducting the annual Citywide Large Item Pick-up again this year. The deadline for making appointments begins Monday.

The program is primarily for items such as washers, dryers, couches and chairs, and for one-time pickup of "spring cleaning" items placed in cardboard boxes or bags such as magazines and books, according to Keep Midland Beautiful officials.

Persons wishing to have the city pick up their unwanted items should call 685-0451. The time frame for making appointments is Feb. 22-March 5. The following guidelines do apply:

- No construction debris will be accepted, such as bricks, concrete, rock, gravel, plaster, etc.
- No tires, car batteries or liquid wastes will be picked up.
- If possible, residents should compost and/or chip and use their yard waste, such as leaves, tree limbs and shrubs. If tree branches and shrubs are to be included on the pick-up list, they must be cut into three-foot lengths or less, and be bundled and tied.
- No tree stumps will be allowed.

Officials emphasized that no appointments would be made after the March 5 deadline.

For additional information, call 685-7278.

National federation recognizes Erskine's Eos Wildlife Sanctuary

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Midge Erskine's Eos Wildlife Sanctuary in Midland recently was awarded the National Wildlife Federation's certificate of achievement.

Ms. Erskine is a geologist who took up bird rehabilitation in the mid-1970s.

The NWF certificate recognizes her establishment of the wildlife habitat, which is listed in the NWF's worldwide network of mini-refuges for wildlife.

The Eos refuge takes in about five acres.

"This award will bring national attention to Midland, Texas," Ms. Erskine said, "particularly because of the number of wild-bird species which have been observed at this sanctuary."

Since Midland is on overlapping edges of major flight paths for migratory birds, this part of West Texas has "one of the greatest diversities of bird life" in Texas and is appealing to bird-watchers, Ms. Erskine said.

The city of Midland has been hailed as a bird sanctuary largely through the "farsightedness" of the garden clubs of Midland, she said.

"In the Eos Wildlife Sanctuary, 12 species of hummingbirds, 41 species of warblers, 25 species of hawks and eagles, and 23 species of sparrows are among the 305 species of birds recorded here in the last 12 years," Ms. Erskine said.

Within the sanctuary is the Eos Bird Rehabilitation Center, which is a state- and federally licensed facility for the recuperation of sick and injured birds. The center was established in 1977 as a nonprofit corporation dedicated to the rehabilitation of tax, congressional sources said.

"The gas tax was just the dog that didn't bark," said Jim Jaffe, an aide to Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, who had endorsed a gasoline tax. "The administration probably figured they didn't have the votes for it."

According to Treasury Department estimates, the new taxes would add an additional $118 in annual taxes for a family with annual income of $40,000; for a $60,000 family income, the tax would be an estimated $133 more a year.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, a vehement opponent of Clinton's broad-based energy tax, said the proposal "isn't being received very well up here."

Gramm pledged to work against the Clinton plan and press for a new, bipartisan economic package. "I hope we can reject this proposal and sit back down and come up with something much better."

Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, called the energy tax "a recipe for recession," adding that Clinton "really stuck it to Texas. I'll bet his approval rating in the state, which was 27 percent last week, will drop to 20 percent next week."

Business groups, such as the National Association of Manufacturers, said the higher taxes would stifle the U.S. economic recovery by adding costs to goods and services across the board, while also making U.S. products less competitive in the global marketplace.

Energy trade associations also derided the Clinton energy taxes.

"This proposal really amounts to a thinly disguised gasoline tax," said Charles DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute. "It will raise the price of every consumer item that requires energy in its production, manufacturing or transportation."

Lawmakers from energy-producing regions and large western states where motorists must drive great distances joined the chorus of criticism of Clinton's program.

"This is unfair to Texans and other Americans who have to drive farther distances," said Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas. "It's also unfair to the U.S. energy industry. It will only cost U.S. jobs and depress the economy."

Peter Jump, a spokesman for the Edison Electric Institute, a trade group for the electric utility industry, vowed to battle Clinton "every step of the way."

"We're opposed to this and we're going to do all we can to defeat it," Jump said. "To narrow the economic sacrifice down to an energy tax is not really sharing the burden."

But citizens' and consumer groups disagreed, contending that the energy levies are not regressive, and that their broad-based nature spreads out the financial sacrifice.

"Overall, these new energy taxes are reasonably fair for the consumers, and they do a good job of distributing the economic burden," said Robert McIntyre, president of Citizens for Tax Justice.

Craddick's bill would ease speeders' insurance costs

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas motorists could escape higher insurance costs if they are ticketed for going up to 70 mph on a highway under a proposal being pushed by a state lawmaker.

"They can still fine you . . . but it doesn't go on your record for insurance purposes," Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, said Wednesday.

Craddick in 1991 touted a bill to allow drivers to just pay $5 if stopped for driving 70 mph on the 65-mph interstate. Each motorist would have been entitled to a pack of five $5 coupons for this purpose each year.

This year, Craddick filed a similar measure.

"I still think the fine is ridiculous," Craddick said. But he said the main concern is "that people are getting hit real hard on the insurance."

His bill would apply to motorists driving between 55 mph and 70 mph on highways built for the higher speed. It would not apply to people driving over 70 mph.

ling" in informing parents how to take care of their children's developing teeth.

Initially, by the parent rubbing the child's gum pads with a soft washcloth after feeding, "the child gets in a routine" of dental care.

Children, even if only one tooth has cut through the gum, should brush "every time they take a shower or bath, or wash their hair," Wilkerson said.

And when children grow up, they will realize that brushing the teeth and massaging the gums will "become a habit."

Wilkerson emphasized preventative techniques in maintain a healthy mouth.

When dental problems crop up is not the ideal "time to come to the dentist," he said. "That is a bad experience both for us and for the child." And certain words, such as "hurt," "shot," and "blood," ought not to be used to children when talking about trips to the dentist.

"I enjoy working with the kids," said Ms. Watkins. "It's easier to teach the kids. They are more open to it (dental hygiene) than most adults. The children are willing to learn, to ask questions, and the kids are fun. They are real bright."

Ms. Corley said that brushing the teeth can be enjoyable.

"Sure, you can have fun brushing your teeth," Ms. Corley said. "You don't have to do it in the bathroom. You can watch cartoons. We want children to have a positive experience in the dental office instead of what we, in our own age group had," Ms. Corley said. "We are down to earth."

Bullock: Bookkeeping measures could add $2.2 billion to budget

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said Wednesday that $2.2 billion more could be put into education, health care, social services and protecting Texans from crime — without increasing taxes.

His proposal would use government efficiency measures and bookkeeping transactions pointed out by state Comptroller John Sharp, Gov. Ann Richards and Senate staff, according to a statement from his office.

"Make no mistake about it. This is not a cure-all. At best, it is a prescription for relieving some of the pain," Bullock said.

He said most of the money would come from bookkeeping measures.

However, he added, "We find ourselves again without a permanent solution. But without question, we must take care of those that cannot take care of themselves in the field of human services. Needless to say, additional money for education is needed."

Bullock has been critical of bookkeeping tactics in the past and remains so.

"No, I don't like that. I don't think the people like that. But I do think . . . they like the idea that there will not be a tax (increase) bill this time," he said.

State leaders have said there isn't support for a tax increase in this legislative session. But state agencies have said they will need several billion dollars more over the next two years than Texas government is expected to take in.

An earlier balanced state budget proposal from the Legislative Budget Board staff would give health and human services a $2.4 billion increase over the next two years, according to Bullock's statement. That included a reduction in the average monthly grant under Aid to Families with Dependent Children from $57 to $45.

Bullock's plan would funnel $1.4 billion more in state money to health and human services, and the AFDC grant would remain at $57, Bullock's staff said.

Drug possession

Staff report

ODESSA — An Odessa man was in jail Wednesday after being arrested Tuesday for possession of methamphetamine.

According to a police report, officers received information that Curtis Lee Wilson, 47, was transporting methamphetamine in his vehicle and he was stopped at Murphy and Meadow streets at 6:10 p.m. Tuesday.

Wilson was taken to the police department for further investigation and he left after his vehicle was checked. The transporting officer then checked his patrol vehicle and located approximately 27 grams of methamphetamine, with an estimated street value of $3,375, underneath the seat. The drug had not been under the seat before Wilson's arrest, police said.

Wilson was taken into custody and bond was set at $7,500.

Stabbing

A 13-year-old Midland boy was sent to the hospital with a stab wound Tuesday night after he and his brother got into an argument over who was going to do the laundry.

Officers responded to a residence in east Midland at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday in response to an assault. According to reports, the 13-year-old and his 12-year-old brother were arguing over who would do laundry. The fight escalated and the 12-year-old grabbed a knife and stabbed his brother once in the left side, police said.

The 13-year-old was treated and released from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

The 12-year-old was in custody at Culver Youth Center, charged with aggravated assault.

Two men testify they were with McDuff during rapes

HOUSTON (AP) — Two men told a Houston jury considering Wednesday whether convicted killer Kenneth McDuff should be returned to death row that they participated in his torturous rapes of two women 25 years apart.

During the attacks, McDuff put a burning cigarette inside one victim's vagina and may have raped the other with a jagged broom handle, prosecutors and witnesses Alva Hank Worley and Roy Dale Green said.

Jurors found McDuff, 46, guilty Tuesday of capital murder for kidnapping and killing a Waco convenience store clerk Melissa Northrup, 22. The same panel of eight women and four men now must decide whether to sentence McDuff to life in prison or death by injection. Deliberations were to begin today.

"I guess I'm going to die," McDuff said as he was led from the courtroom. "We all do, you know."

Worley and Green were two of the eight witnesses the state called during the punishment phase of the trial.

Green testified he was with McDuff, then 20, when he allegedly killed three Fort Worth teenagers, two boys and a girl, on Aug. 6, 1966. McDuff was convicted of capital murder for the death of one of the boys and Green served 13 years for his role in the killings.

The three victims were abducted from a baseball park and driven to a field, where McDuff fatally shot the boys, Green said.

"He kept shooting, shooting. And every time he shot I jumped," said Green, who was 18 at the time.

"After he got through shooting I ran up to him and grabbed him by the arm and said, 'Good God, Kenneth, what'd you do that for?'" Green said. He said McDuff told him, "I had to."

"He was cool, calm and collected like he hadn't done nothing," Green said.

Green said they drove 16-year-old Edna Sullivan to another pasture where they both raped her, then strangled her with a broomstick, dumping her body over a fence.

McDuff had both a jagged, 3-foot piece of old, broken broom stick and a soda bottle in the back seat of his car, where he was raping Ms. Sullivan, Green testified. Prosecutors said Green could not see exactly what McDuff was doing, but believed he had assaulted her with the broomstick.

Under questioning by defense attorneys, Green said he had been diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic.

Worley, the second state's witness Wednesday, repeated his trial testimony about the Dec. 29, 1991, abduction of 28-year-old Colleen Reed from an Austin car wash. Her body has not been found. Worley has been charged with the aggravated kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault of Ms. Reed, but McDuff has not been charged in her case.

Worley said McDuff had raped Ms. Reed and subjected her to oral and anal sex as the three drove from Austin toward Lake Belton.

At the lake, Worley said McDuff took a cigarette and burned the woman in her vaginal area two to three times.

"I heard her moan, that was it," he said.

The defense called only one witness, psychologist Wendell Dickerson, who testified that according to McDuff's prison record, he had been involved in few violent incidents during his 23 years of incarceration. The most violent of 10 disciplinary reports included fighting without a weapon and throwing tomatoes at another inmate, Dickerson said.

"What the record itself suggests is that he has done passably well (in prison)," Dickerson said. "I cannot tell you what he will or will not do."

McDuff served six years on death row until 1972, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the then-death penalty unconstitutional. His death sentence was commuted to life, and he was paroled in 1989.

Mrs. Northrup, the pregnant mother of two, disappeared March 1, 1992, from the Quik-Pak store where she worked as the overnight clerk. Her decomposing body was found April 26 floating in a Dallas County gravel pit.

After his conviction, McDuff on Tuesday had asked for and received permission from state District Judge Bob Burdette not to attend the rest of his trial. However, defense attorneys said he changed his mind and he was back in the court room Wednesday.

Prosecutor testifies in Erdmann case

AMARILLO (AP) — A Randall County prosecutor testifying Wednesday read from a 1984 complaint that pathologist Ralph Erdmann let his 13-year-old son probe wounds during autopsies.

But John Davis said he didn't learn until last April that some authorities suspected Erdmann was faking autopsies and practicing "sloppy science."

Millard Farmer, a nationally noted defense attorney indicted for threatening Erdmann, led the questioning on his own behalf Wednesday. The hearing in federal court is seeking an injunction that would stop the prosecutions of Farmer and two Lubbock police officers who also have spoken out against Erdmann.

The trio says two West Texas district attorneys had them indicted in retaliation for criticizing Erdmann, who frequently testified in murder trials in the 40 counties where he worked.

So Farmer, Bill Hubbard and Pat Kelly sued Erdmann and 11 officials to prove authorities were covering up Erdmann's lies and mistakes. The hearing on the injunction began Tuesday.

U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson now must decide whether to lift a stay she imposed on the prosecutions.

Davis took the stand Wednesday to explain the prosecution against six men accused of bludgeoning an elderly Amarillo man to death. Farmer represents one of those defendants, Doug Palmer, in the capital murder case.

Farmer asked Davis why Erdmann listed weights for the dead man's organs, when a second autopsy proved the organs had never been removed from the body.

"That's a crime, isn't it — a crime for him to state falsely that the organs were removed and weighed, and they weren't," Farmer asked.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your talent for managing money wisely should help you make considerable financial progress. Avoid getting caught up in trivial matters that others can handle. By September, you will have learned how and when to delegate authority. Generous and outgoing, you attract both loyal friends and hangers-on. Let your keen intuition tell you which is which. Choose a mate who shares your confident approach to life's challenges.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors John Travolta and Matt Dillon, magazine editor Helen Gurley Brown, actress Cybill Shepherd.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The emphasis is on financial matters. The direct approach works best now. Stick to the truth and you will come out on top. Romantic possibilities abound this evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Try not to worry so much about your job. You will meet any new challenges one step at a time. A friend may act very emotional. Passions are stirred and a mystery solved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It may be hard to get moving at work this morning. A seemingly lost love could return later on. Reinforce existing partnership bonds. Replace worn-out behavior patterns with positive new moves.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good head for business guides you. Find out the facts and act on them. Be open to suggestions from powerful people. Love finds you when you get out and socialize.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are attuned to the psychic realm. You may be able to help someone by appealing to the proper authorities. An office romance is a distinct possibility.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your personal relationships would benefit from a lighter, more sensitive touch. You may be worrying too much about joint funds or shared resources. Unity means greater strength.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A working partnership can be a big plus if both partners strive to be considerate. Probing behind the scenes helps you find ways to boost profits. Salvage a love relationship headed for the rocks.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A quiet chat brings you closer to someone important to you. The pain of a lost love or a separation has given you wisdom. Friends are supportive and generous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your work is enhanced by a new sense of playfulness. Sharing ideas helps you decide what to do next. Spruce up your home. Buy brightly colored pillows or apply a coat of paint.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pouring yourself into your work distracts you from certain problems in a relationship. Friends are a source of love and support. Laughter keeps your spirits high.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Discard outdated procedures and promote teamwork. Discuss educational matters, purchase books and read professional papers. A letter from an old friend will provide valuable business insights.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Financial trends are working in your favor. A positive, optimistic attitude will help you over any rough spots. Communicate honestly with young people. Do not exaggerate.

Opening lead: King of ♠

There are players who will tell partner: "Don't worry about signalling. I'll work out what to do!" Our attitude is that defense is the most difficult facet of the game and any help we can get from partner is more than welcome.

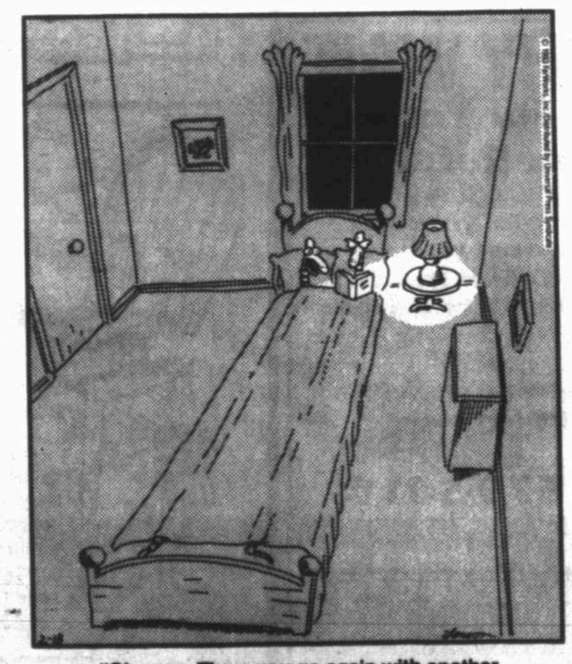

The auction is not without interest. North jumped to four hearts, since there was a possibility partner might think a raise to three hearts was merely competitive. And East-West, having pushed the enemy to five hearts, followed the old truism that the five-level belongs to the opposition and sold out.

West led the king of spades and East had to decide whether to encourage with a high spade or discourage by following low. Since West was marked with six spades for the weak jump overcall and thus a second trick in the suit was not available, and because a diamond shift would be more than welcome, East opted to discourage by playing the deuce.

The spotlight now shifts to West. If that defender ignores partner's signal and perseveres with spades, declarer can get home by ruffing the spade, cashing the ace of trumps, then running clubs for a diamond discard. East refuses to ruff, but is then thrown in with a heart. Whether East chooses to return a diamond, giving declarer two tricks there, or yield a ruff-sluff, the contract sails safely into port.

A trusting West will switch the attack at trick two, but to which suit? East's two carries no suit-preference message; it simply says don't lead another spade. The correct shift is obviously a diamond. If declarer has a club loser, there probably is no place to get rid of it, but a diamond might disappear on a club. Down one.

Rapper Ice-T defends 'Killer' song, says he dislikes police

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Rapper Ice-T defended his controversial song, "Cop Killer" Tuesday, saying it reflects his justifiable dislike of police.

"I have grounds to be angry at the cops," he told an audience at Harvard Law School. "I didn't think it was a controversial record, because I thought everyone hated the police.

"Everybody I know hates the police."

Citing "creative differences," Warner Bros. Records released Ice-T from his contract Jan. 27 after taking heat for the song "Cop Killer." The company said it wouldn't distribute the rapper's newest album, "Home Invasion."

Police and politicians, including former Vice President Dan Quayle, called on Warner to pull "Cop Killer" because they said it encouraged violence against police.

The song, which sold 200,000 copies in its first two months, contained the line "I'm 'bout to dust some cops off. . . . Die, die, die, pig, die."

More than 1,000 music stores removed the album, although Warner defended Ice-T's right to record the song until he finally announced it would be dropped from the album.

LOS ANGELES — One of Elizabeth Taylor's charities is donating $150,000 to fund a program that allows intravenous drug users to exchange used needles for clean ones.

Taylor

"We have to fight AIDS on every front. This means confronting the virus not only in the laboratory, the clinic and the classroom, but also on the streets and in the shooting galleries of our cities and towns," Miss Taylor said Tuesday at a meeting of the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

The money was being transferred to the research foundation from The Elizabeth Taylor AIDS Foundation.

Intravenous drug users account for about one-quarter of AIDS cases in the United States. The virus is transmitted through shared needles.

HARTFORD, Conn. — Zoe Baird has returned to her job as general counsel for Aetna Life & Casualty Co.

Baird, 40, took a leave from her $507,000-a-year post after President Bill Clinton nominated her for U.S. attorney general.

She withdrew her name Jan. 22 amid an uproar over disclosure she and her husband had hired illegal aliens to care for their child and had not paid Social Security taxes on the aliens' salaries.

"She's back to work, full time," Aetna spokesman Mike Bazinet said Tuesday. He said Baird returned to work last Thursday.

Baird oversees 120 lawyers at Aetna, where she has worked for more than two years.

She would have been the nation's first female attorney general.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Brooke Shields says she and Michael Jackson are just friends.

Jackson, 34, said in a television interview with Oprah Winfrey last week that he was dating Shields, 27, and that he loves her.

Shields, starring in the New Mexico Repertory Theatre's romantic comedy, "Love Letters," pointed out that Jackson didn't refer to her as a girlfriend.

"He felt he could say how he felt about me," Shields said Monday. "We grew up together. He trusts me."

INDIANAPOLIS — Karl Malden is proud of his Hoosier roots and his Indiana Governor's Arts Award. He also gives the state credit for his large nose.

"You're looking at the only actor in Hollywood whose nose qualifies him for handicapped parking," he said in accepting the governor's award Tuesday. "I got it right here in Indiana. I played basketball, broke it twice and never did anything about it."

Also receiving the award were country singer Crystal Gayle and the late poet Etheridge Knight. The award is given every two years for contributions to the arts made by people who have lived in Indiana.

Malden, 76, is an Oscar-winning actor who has appeared in more than 50 films, including "On the Waterfront," "How the West Was Won" and "A Streetcar Named Desire."

On television, he starred in "The Streets of San Francisco."

SYDNEY, Australia — Australia's first lady, Annita Keating, says she's "someone in between" Barbara Bush and Hillary Rodham Clinton. She's also in between the pages of her country's next Vogue magazine.

In a demure six-page spread, Mrs. Keating, 44, poses in clothes by Australia's top designers.

The mother of four is quoted saying she's not a homemaker like Mrs. Bush nor a career woman like Mrs. Clinton, but "someone in between."

Prime Minister Paul Keating has been campaigning hard to win the women's vote for the March 13 election.

East Texas town becomes desegregated

■ Disabled cement finisher is the first black resident Vidor has had in decades.

Associated Press

VIDOR — John DecQuir says he just was looking for a place to live when he moved this week into a public housing project.

"I never thought about being a pioneer," DecQuir said after moving the first of his belongings into a one-bedroom apartment at the complex.

DecQuir, 58, a disabled cement finisher, became the first black resident in decades in the nearly 11,000-person Orange County town.

His move into the project Tuesday ends months of controversy and years of court battles in Vidor, which long has had a reputation as a Ku Klux Klan stronghold where blacks aren't welcome.

DecQuir has been living with relatives in nearby Beaumont for the past year and had been waiting for a vacancy in public housing.

"I just needed a place to live," said DecQuir, who suffers from diabetes.

Reaction among other project residents has been mixed.

Ross Dennis, former president of the project's residents' council, shook DecQuir's hand and welcomed him.

Others aren't likely to be as friendly.

"I don't like it one bit," said Edith Marie Johnson, 46. "I can't stop it because it's the federal government, but I don't want my two grandbabies growing up around them.

"I have a 3-year-old white granddaughter, and after I'm dead and gone I don't want her marrying a black."

Orange County Housing Director Richard Stanfield said Ms. Johnson's opinion is not widely held by most Vidor residents.

"We're not talking about anybody from a foreign planet or something," Stanfield said Wednesday. "And we're saying right now this person's been accepted out here and that's the way it's going to be."

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler issued a desegregation order in 1985 for public housing projects in 36 East Texas counties.

Housing authorities in Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange joined with the Orange County Housing Authority, which administers the Vidor project, to work to desegregate all the housing projects in Orange and Jefferson counties.

The desegregation effort in Vidor prompted three recent Ku Klux Klan rallies in the area.

DecQuir said that was news to him and that he wasn't worried about any future Klan rallies.

"It's none of my business," he said.

Authorities sent questionnaires to about 1,300 black residents of other projects asking if they would be willing to move to Vidor, Stanfield said. DecQuir and "four or five" others were the only volunteers, he said.

Vidor Police Chief J.L. Reynolds said two of his officers will be on duty at the 74-unit project at all times.

Hughes wins 1,000th

■ Fort Worth Dunbar basketball coach becomes sixth high school coach in history to win 1,000 games.

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — It was an ugly victory, but a special one for Fort Worth Dunbar boy's basketball coach Robert Hughes.

Hughes became only the sixth high school basketball coach in history to win 1,000 games when his Wildcats defeated Fort Worth Wyatt 63-51 Tuesday night.

"I was not impressed," Hughes said.

The Wildcats were held 25 points below their season average. Hughes also was upset because of his team's turnovers, missed shots and free throws.

The team committed three turnovers, missed 10 shots and two free throws in a five-minute stretch of the third quarter alone.

Some of the Wildcats also went face-to-face with Wyatt players, almost touching off a couple of fights.

"We got into a talking contest," Hughes said. "Whenever you start talking, you forget about playing."

His players said their problem may have been that they were trying too hard.

"We wanted this to be the night for him," said senior guard Anthony Burks, who scored 24 points.

The victory boosted Dunbar's season record to 28-4 overall and 10-0 in district play.

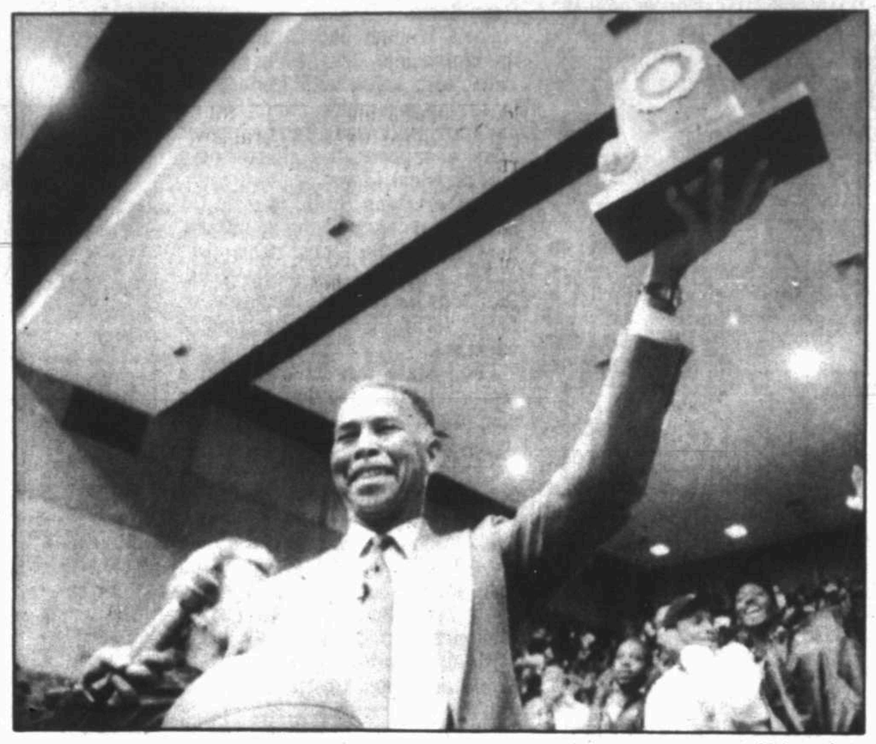

Hughes has never won a state championship with Dunbar, but won three state titles when he coached at Fort Worth Terrell, in 1963, '65 and '67. He has 174 losses to go with the 1,000 victories.

Last month, Ralph Tasker, coach at Hobbs (N.M.) High School, surpassed Leslie Gaudet for the all-time lead in victories. Going into this week, he was 1,029-256. Gaudet was 1,026-353.

Other coaches in the 1,000-victory club are Walter VanHuss (1,021-313), Bill Krueger (1,019-222) and Morgan Wootten (1,004-150). Krueger, who coaches at Clear Lake, and Wootten are active.

Midlanders know Hughes well since he has won six of 12 titles in the Region I basketball tournament since the event moved to Chaparral Center in 1981.

However, his team lost that title to O.D. Wyatt in the Region I finlas last year.

Just babes in the woods

■ One is a junior and one is a sophomore, but Julie Chancellor and Amy Alcala make the Lady Bulldogs run.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland High basketball stars Amy Alcala and Julie Chancellor are real babes.

That's not meant to be taken as a derogatory remark, but simply a literal statement. After all, Alcala is only a sophomore and Chancellor is a junior. It's probably certain that neither has hit full stride yet.

Still, these two have been the motor that makes the Lady Bulldogs run. Senior starters Lisa Koss, Charlotte Scharbauer and Jackie Perez provide the ignition.

That should be a running machine when this team enters the state playoffs against El Paso Andress at 1 p.m. Saturday in Alpine. At least, coach Jim Raughton likes the 23-7 car he's driving.

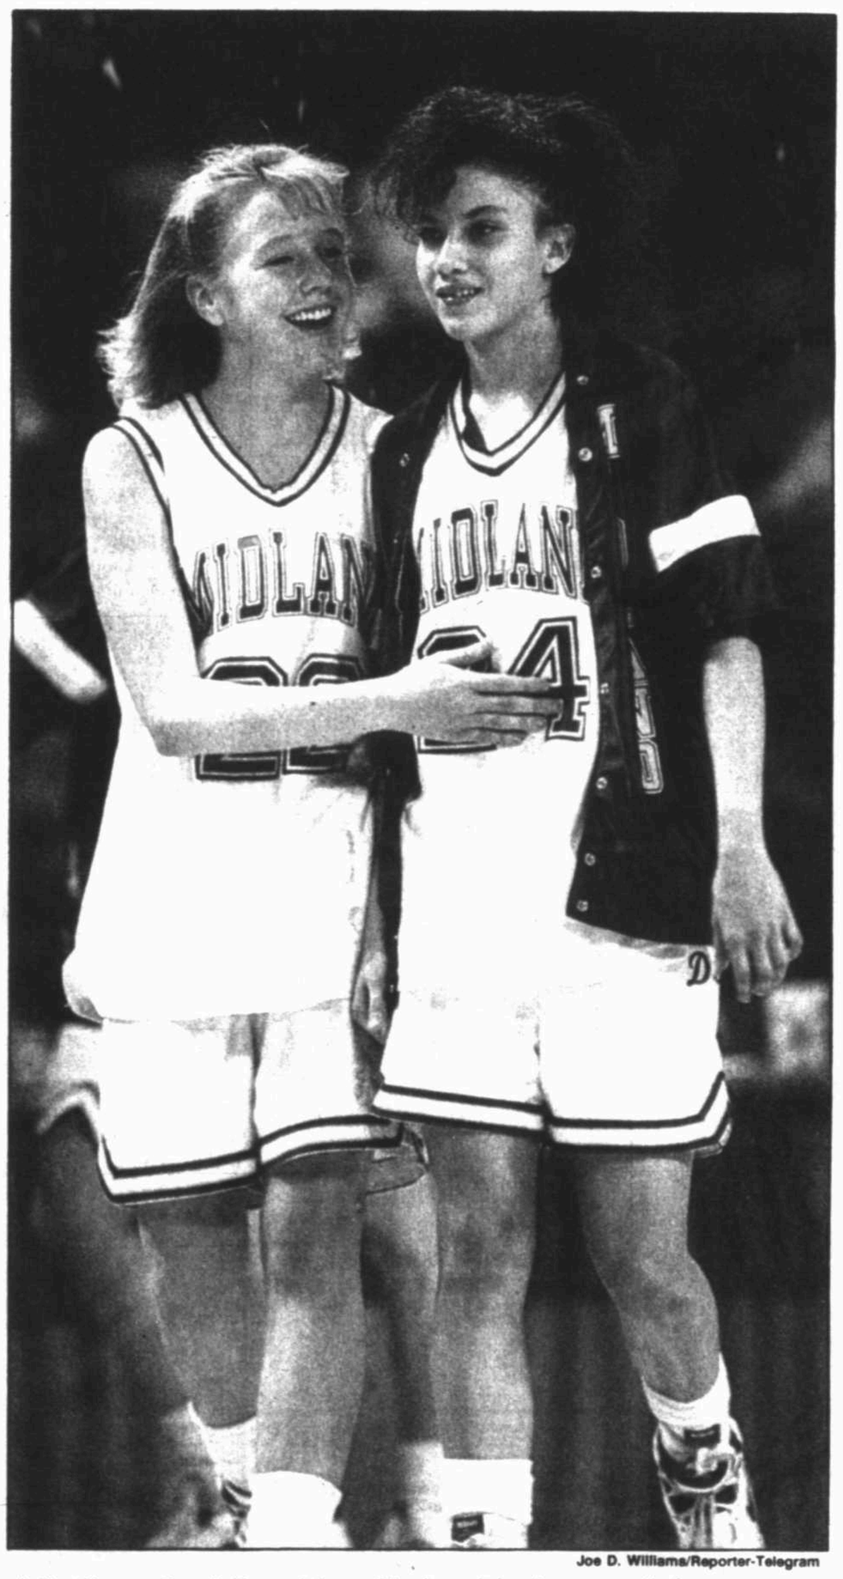

"I don't think there is any way you can say this team has peaked yet," Raughton says. "We're just getting closer.

"There is no doubt that Amy and Julie are the motor to this team, but we aren't just two-dimenional anymore with those three seniors out there. You can't just key on Amy and Julie."

Alcala has scored 553 points this year to set a Midland High single season scoring record and also set the single game scoring mark with 41 points against cross town rival Midland Lee as a sophomore babe in the woods. It would seem that before all is said and done in the next two years, she will go down as MHS' all-time leading scorer and probably recognized as the best player ever to wear Lady 'Dawgs' purple and gold.

"I just wish I had the situation that the Abilene schools have. They have freshmen on campus and they can play varsity sports. We can't do that here," Raughton said. "Girls mature faster than boys and there are a lot of girls who can play varsity athletics as a ninth grader. Can you imagine what Amy would be like this year if she had been able to

A&M eyes slush fund allegation

DALLAS (AP) — Texas A&M has informed the NCAA of an allegation by a prominent alumnus that a recently banned booster was part of a secret attempt to organize a slush fund for improper payments to football players.

Robert Smith, the Texas A&M vice president in charge of rules compliance, said Tuesday his office also will investigate the allegation.

In a letter dated Dec. 26, Dallas businessman and civic leader Larry Ferguson — a member of the 12th Man Foundation — wrote school president William Mobley of the alleged activities of Warren Gilbert Jr. and two other well-known 12th Man members, car dealer J.L. Huffines Jr. of nearby Lewisville, Texas, and businessman Thomas A. O'Dwyer of Dallas.

"During Jackie Sherrill's tenure at A&M, Tom approached me to say that he, Huffines and Gilbert had organized a meeting to raise a cash slush fund for the football efforts," Ferguson wrote.

Ferguson said he had no direct knowledge if a fund was created.

Smith and compliance officer Tedi Zalesky said nothing was done with Ferguson's allegations until this week, when The Dallas Morning News began making inquiries of A&M officials.

According to the two compliance officials, they process information as it "becomes elevated" in importance by certain events.

"I mean, obviously we cannot work all things simultaneously," Smith said. "So when something gets elevated, then we get on it."

The newspaper's questions elevated the Ferguson claims, Smith said.

Texas A&M announced Feb. 5 that Gilbert — a director of the A&M Lettermen's Association — was being disassociated from university athletics after it confirmed allegations that Gilbert-operated companies improperly paid players for work they did not perform.

The Dallas Morning News reported Dec. 20 that current and former Gilbert employees had told federal investigators that five members of the 1992 squad were being paid year-round for work not performed. The university has said none of the records Gilbert made available to it confirmed the year-round payments.

Star running back Greg Hill and three other players were suspended from the team and missed the Cotton Bowl game against Notre Dame as a result of an

New Marlins set for spring's historic moment

MIAMI (AP) — Because of geography, late February loses some romance for the Florida Marlins. It's just not the same when a team heads north to spring training.

Still, the Marlins will savor an historic moment Saturday, breaking out their balls and gloves to start spring training workouts near Melbourne.

Pitchers and catchers will gather Friday for physicals. Other players are due in camp by Wednesday.

Like everyone associated with the National League expansion team, manager Rene Lachemann is eager to get going. In the next six weeks he must learn enough about his new players to come up with a 25-man roster.

"You have a bunch of scouting reports, but it's nice to be able to stop looking at the reports and find out what people can do," Lachemann said.

The team will train at a new complex 200 miles north of Miami. Because the ballpark for exhibition games has not been completed, the Marlins will play this spring at the Houston Astros' old spring training stadium in Cocoa.

"It's not state-of-the-art as far as the stands," Lachemann said. "But the field is there."

The Marlins' first game is March 5 at home against Houston. Their first South Florida appearance will be March 6-7 against Cleveland at the Indians' new stadium in Homestead, severely damaged by Hurricane Andrew last August.

Aside from dealing with the logistics of putting a new team together, Lachemann's priority this weekend will be to begin assessing his 27 pitchers in camp.

"That's a huge number," he said. "There are not going to be a whole lot of innings to evaluate those pitchers. Some of them are not going to get a great evaluation."

That's a concern for Lachemann because his roster appears thinnest in starting pitching. Charlie Hough, the 45-year-old knuckleballer, and former All-Star Jack Armstrong are the leading contenders for the rotation.

"We're looking at some guys who haven't had any major league experience," Lachemann said.

Sooners stun No. 6 Kansas

Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Terry Evans became the Big Eight's career 3-point leader and Oklahoma upset No. 6 Kansas 80-77 Wednesday night, the Jayhawks' first conference home loss in three years.

Oklahoma (17-7, 5-4) won on the road for the first time this season. The Sooners did it without star center Bryan Sallier, sick with pneumonia.

Evans, a four-year starter, broke Steve Henson's conference record with his 241st 3-pointer with 15:43 left in the first half. Evans finished with 26 points.

The Sooners took a 72-62 lead on Angelo Hamilton's basket before Rex Walters' 3-pointer started a comeback by Kansas (20-4, 7-2). Steve Woodberry's jumper cut Oklahoma's lead to 76-75 with 1:10 remaining.

No. 1 Indiana 93, Illinois 72

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Calbert Cheaney's quick start doomed Illinois to an early finish.

Cheaney scored 13 of his 29 points during an early 19-4 spurt that carried No. 1 Indiana to a 93-72 victory over the Illini on Wednesday night.

Indiana (23-2, 12-0 Big Ten) won its 12th straight game and 28th in a row at home, the longest such streak in the nation. The Hoosiers' 12-0 start in the Big Ten also is the best by any team since 1976, when Indiana compiled a perfect conference record of 18-0 for the second straight year.

No. 2 Kentucky 87, S. Carolina 66

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Tony Delk made two 3-pointers during an 8-0 run in the second half, and scored a career-high 18 points to lead second-ranked Kentucky over slumping South Carolina.

Kentucky (19-2, 9-2 Southeastern Conference) held a 48-27 edge in rebounds and made 33 of 70 shots for 47.1 percent, but turned the ball over 17 times against the outmanned Gamecocks.

Rodrick Rhodes added 15 points while Jamal Mashburn and Rodney Dent had 14 each for Kentucky.

No. 3 N. Carolina 80, Clemson 67

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Eric Montross scored 22 points and third-ranked North Carolina fought off Clemson, its 39th straight triumph over the Tigers at home.

No team has suffered in Chapel Hill as much as Clemson (12-9, 2-9 Atlantic Coast Conference). In addition to their losses on North Carolina's home court, the Tigers have won just three of their last 67 games against the Tar Heels inside the state.

Clemson's last win over the Tar Heels in the state of North Carolina was Feb. 18, 1967, in the old North-South Doubleheaders in Charlotte.

■ Top 25 Roundup

No. 5 Michigan 80, Penn St. 70

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Jalen Rose scored 18 points, including a 3-pointer to end a Nittany Lions second-half run, as No. 5 Michigan took a victory on its first trip to Penn State.

Chris Webber had 20 points for the Wolverines (20-4, 9-3 in the Big Ten), who toyed with Penn State by giving a dunking exhibition on one fast break and often opting for alley oops over the shorter and less physical Lions.

Neither Penn State (6-14, 1-10) nor its fans showed the spunk evident during the Lions' near-upset of No. 1 Indiana last week. Then, the Lions led much of the game before falling 88-84 in double overtime.

Penn State lost its eighth in a row — its longest losing streak since 1984, when it fell 17 straight times over two seasons.

No. 8 Cincinnati 72, So. Florida 50

TAMPA, Fla. — Corie Blount, Nick Van Exel and Curtis Bostic led a 15-0 run early in the second half and No. 8 Cincinnati broke away from South Florida for its 17th victory in 18 games.

Blount scored 17 points, Van Exel had 16 and Bostic 15. Cincinnati (19-2) buried South Florida (6-15) with a 32-6 spurt during a 14-minute stretch that mae it 69-44 lead.

The victory was the third straight for Cincinnati, which had a 14-game winning streak snapped by Memphis State on Feb. 6.

No. 9 Florida St. 72, N.C. St. 71

RALEIGH, N.C. — Sam Cassell and Rodney Dobard each scored 18 points and No. 9 Florida State, playing without two suspended starters, held off North Carolina State.

Florida State (20-6, 10-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) played without leading scorer Bob Sura and top rebounder Doug Edwards. Both were suspended for one game for missing classes.

The Seminoles, who won their seventh straight game, are still minus starting point guard Charlie Ward, who has a separated shoulder.

North Carolina State (7-14, 1-10) suited up only eight players because of injuries and suspensions. The Wolfpack had won two in a row, their longest streak of the season.

No. 10 Wake Forest 88, Maryland 64

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Atlantic Coast Conference scoring leader Rodney Rogers had 28 points and 13 rebounds as No. 10 Wake Forest defeated Maryland.

The Demon Deacons (17-4, 8-3) have won eight of nine ACC games after starting league play with two home losses. Last-place Maryland (10-12, 1-11) has lost seven in a row and 11 of 13, including six straight to top 25 opponents.

Rogers, coming off a career-high 35-point performance in a weekend win over Duke, scored 15 points in the first half as the rest of the Wake Forest team started slowly. But the Demon Deacons built a three-point halftime lead to 56-41 with a 20-8 run in the first 7½ minutes of the second half.

Derrick Hicks helped spark the run, scoring six of his career-high 18 points. Maryland never got closer than 13 points the rest of the way as Wake Forest shot 62.9 percent in the second half.

No. 11 Vanderbilt 87, LSU 66

BATON ROUGE, La. — Kevin Anglin scored seven straight Vanderbilt points and 11 of 13 at the beginning of the second half as the 11th-ranked Commodores beat LSU.

Anglin totaled 18 and Billy McCaffery scored 14 of his 16 in the second half as Vanderbilt (20-4, 9-2 Southeastern Conference) topped 20 wins for the first time since 1974. Bruce Elder had 21 and Ronnie McMahan 20 for the Commodores.

LSU (17-7, 6-5) had been tied for first in the SEC West, but has lost its four games against ranked teams by an average margin of 25 points. Geert Hammink had 12 points and the Tigers got nine apiece from Jamie Brandon, Maurice Williamson, Sean Gipson and Lenear Burns.

No. 16 Seton Hall 95, No. 25 St. John's 85, OT

NEW YORK — Terry Dehere scored a career-high 41 points and his three 3-pointers in overtime led No. 16 Seton Hall over No. 25 St. John's that tied the teams for the Big East lead.

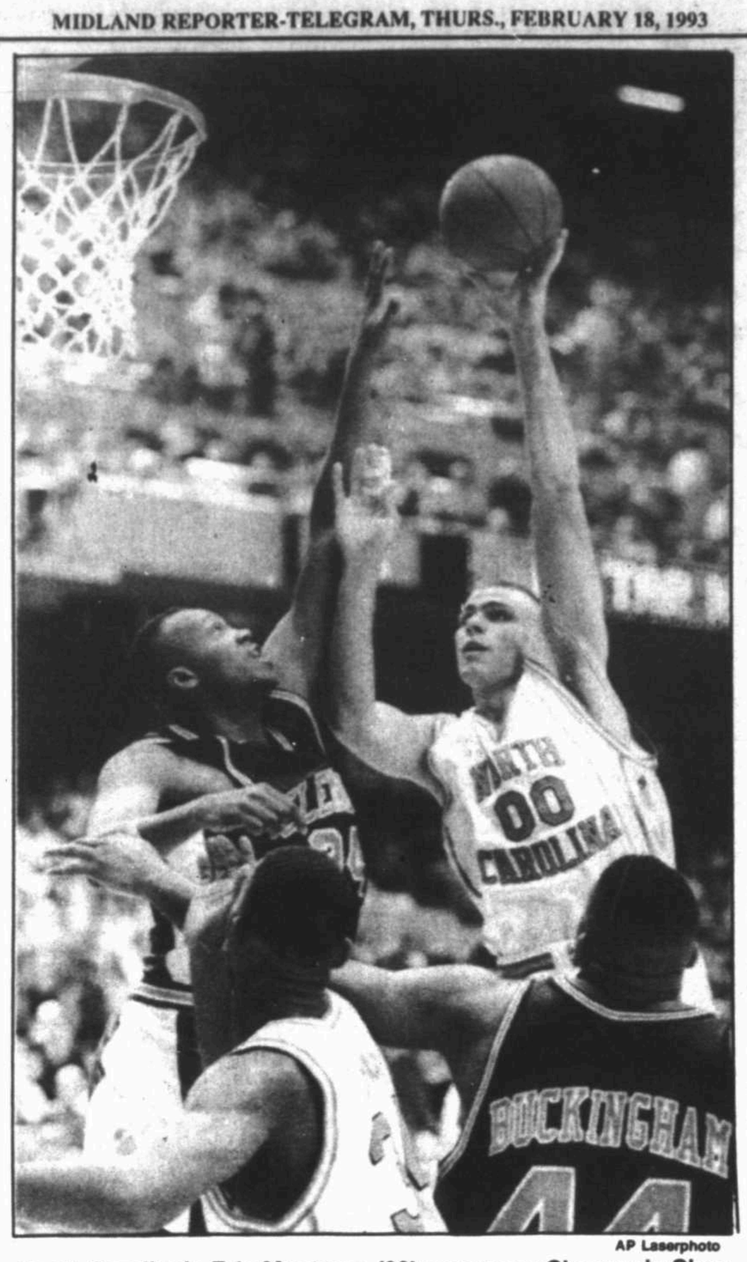

Dehere, a 6-foot-4 senior who is the school's No. 2 career scorer, became the conference's all-time 3-point leader in the first half when he made the 146th of his career.

His three in overtime gave him six for the game and ended St. John's surprising stint alone atop the league. The Redmen were picked to finish ninth in the coaches' preseason poll.

No. 24 Marquette 69, Notre Dame 61

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Damon Key powered a punishing inside game and No. 24 Marquette used its trademark defense for a win over Notre Dame.

Key scored eight of 18 points early in the second half as the Warriors (18-4) used a 14-2 run to turn a six-point halftime deficit into a six-point lead.

Mavs stay on worst streak

Associated Press

RICHFIELD, Ohio — The surging Cleveland Cavaliers closed the first quarter with a 10-3 spurt, and were not challenged again as they beat Dallas 124-97 Wednesday night, keeping the Mavericks on pace for the NBA's worst record ever.

Terrell Brandon led Cleveland, which won its fourth straight and ninth in 10 games, with 20 points. Mark Price and Danny Ferry scored 16 points apiece, and Gerald Wilkins added 14.

The Mavericks (4-45) have lost seven straight games overall and all 22 on the road this season. At their current pace, they would win seven games, worse than the mark of nine established by the Philadelphia 76ers in 1972-73.

Bulls 114, Jazz 96

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan got to take some time off on his 30th birthday.

Jordan got his 27 points in three quarters and the Chicago Bulls cruised to a 114-96 victory over the Utah Jazz.

It was the seventh victory in the last nine games for the Bulls, who now break for Sunday's All-Star game. Utah plays at Milwaukee on Thursday night before taking its break.

It was 77-61 after three quarters, with the reserves finishing up as Jordan sat out the fourth quarter.

The Bulls put on an early 18-5 run to take a 25-13 lead and the Jazz never got closer than 10 points.

Karl Malone led the Jazz with 20 points. B.J. Armstrong had 15 for the Bulls and Scottie Pippen added 14.

Knicks 124, Hornets 116

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Patrick Ewing, with 43 points, and John Starks, who had 39, helped New York fight back from a 13-point deficit to beat Charlotte.

Ewing, who also grabbed 12 rebounds, scored 31 of his season-high total in the second half, including eight during a key 14-0 run that began in the final moments of the third quarter.

Starks, a 6-foot-5 guard out of Oklahoma State, combined with Ewing to outscore the entire Hornets team 57-52 in the second half. New York outscored Charlotte 34-21 in the fourth quarter.

Pacers 125, Kings 99

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana broke its longest losing streak in four years as Kenny Williams came off the bench to score 16 points and grab a career-high 12 rebounds in a victory over Sacramento.

The win snapped the Pacers' seven-game slide.

Heat 111, Pistons 107

MIAMI — Glen Rice scored 33 points, and Miami held off a late 3-point barrage to beat outmanned Detroit, handing the Pistons their 11th consecutive road loss.

All-Star guard Isiah Thomas played only a minute in the second half before leaving the game for good with a strained Achilles tendon. The Pistons also lost Orlando Woolridge, who fractured a hand against a backboard in the third quarter.

The Pistons' road losing streak, which began with an 89-83 loss in Miami on Jan. 5, is their longest since a 20-game stretch in the 1980-1981 season.

Magic 111, Nuggets 99

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal had 24 points and 18 rebounds, and Orlando used a 16-point run to start the second half in beating poor-shooting Denver.

Leading 57-54 at the break, the Magic took command when the Nuggets missed their first 11 shots of the second half. Nick Anderson led the decisive run with eight of his 22 points.

Scott Skiles had 21 points.

Lady Raiders rip Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Sheryl Swoopes scored 37 points and grabbed eight rebounds as No. 9 Texas Tech defeated 13th-ranked Texas 77-67 Wednesday night for its first-ever victory in Austin in 14 tries dating back to 1977-78.

The victory also pushed the Lady Red Raiders (19-3 overall, 9-1 in the Southwest Conference) into a first-place tie with Texas (16-6, 9-1) in the league race.

Texas, which defeated Tech in Lubbock earlier this season, had beaten the Lady Raiders by an average of 22.4 points a game in their 14 previous meetings in Austin.

Neither team led by more than three points for a five-minute stretch midway through the second half, but Texas' star, 6-4 center Cenietra Henderson came out of the game for a brief rest and Tech took over.

Michi Atkins pounded the ball inside, scoring two key baskets in an 8-2 run to help give the Lady Raiders a 61-52 lead with 7:55 to play. Tech was never threatened the rest of the way.

Henderson led the Lady Longhorns with 25 points and seven rebounds. Fey Meeks added 15 for Texas.

Swoopes scored 19 points in the first half as the Lady Raiders hit 60 percent from the field and outhustled the taller, stronger Lady Longhorns. Tech, which frustrated Texas with a matchup 2-3 zone, led by as many as 15 in the first half and led 42-30 at intermission.

But Tech opened the second half 2 of 12 from the field and Swoopes was 0-for-4 as Texas drew even at 46 with 14 minutes left.

Cynthia Clinger had 13 points and Atkins added 12 for Tech.

Rice holds off Baylor

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Rice rallied behind 22 points by Torrey Andrews and held off a late Baylor charge for an 84-77 victory Wednesday night.

The Owls, 14-6 overall and 8-2 in the Southwest Conference, nearly blew a 66-50 lead with 9:09 remaining, allowing Baylor within 78-73 with 55 seconds to play.

■ SWC Roundup

Baylor (14-7 and 6-4) got a 2-0 advantage before the game even started when fans threw candy on the court, prompting officials to give Aundre Branch a pair of technical foul shots.

Rice took the lead for good late in the first half and led 44-37 at halftime even though Brent Scott, the Owls' second leading scorer, had played only five minutes after getting two early fouls. He finished with 9 points.

Houston 78, Texas A&M 51

HOUSTON — Charles Outlaw posted a career-first triple double and David Diaz added a career-high 29 points, leading Houston over Texas A&M.

Outlaw, with 10 points, 14 rebounds and 10 blocked shots, became the first Cougars player to accomplish the feat since Hakeem Olajuwon.

The effort fueled a 52-point second half for Houston, which improved to 15-6 overall and 6-4 in the Southwest Conference with its fourth consecutive victory. The Aggies dropped to 7-14 and 2-7.

Texas A&M coach Tony Barone drew a pair of technical fouls and was ejected with 10:03 minutes remaining after Houston turned a 26-20 halftime edge into a 51-31 lead.

MOTOR: Playoff wait ends for Lady 'Dawgs

(From 1C)

play with us as a freshman?"

Alcala stepped on the horizon with a shout and has been the added fuel that has helped bring a district championship to MHS. But did Raughton know what he had at the beginning of the year?

"I knew she was a good player because I saw some tape on her in the summer," Raughton said. "I knew she was going to be an impact player, but you never quite know what's going to happen until they get out there."

It's been a heady season for the sophomore, but not one she has tip-toed into with fear.

"I really didn't know what to expect this year, but I had an idea that I could play because I played in a summer league in Odessa with high school aged girls and I did pretty well," Alcala said.

But the scoring rampage in her sophomore year was a little unexpected.

"I thought the points would come, but not this early," Alcala said. "Things have worked out fine."

Chancellor is a much different player than the smooth flowing Alcala, who makes everything she does look easy. Chancellor is a get-on-the-floor, win-at-all-cost type of player.

"Julie has the biggest heart of anyone I've ever coached," Raughton said. "She is improving all the time. She scored 208 points last year and has over 390 this year. That's almost double, but the big thing is that she probably leads the team in rebounds and she has more steals than last year. Her whole game has improved. You want to go to war? Take her with you. No one wants to win more than she does."

Chancellor is an old lady compared to Alcala and she has already waded through the heartbreak of just missing the playoffs last year. She came into this season thinking Midland High could win despite the loss of two key seniors in Sally Gibson and Ashley Chase.

"We had a chance to get in the playoffs last year and we lost some good players, but I felt like we would still be good with the seniors we had back. And there is no doubt that Amy, being the player she is, has added a lot to this team."

So, now the Lady Bulldogs have their eyes set on the playoffs, and Alcala and Chancellor want to add a few more wins.

"It's true that Amy and I have more time to win some playoff games, but I'm not satisfied with this season yet," Chancellor said. "Making the playoffs has been great for our seniors, but they don't have another chance. I want it to happen now and go as far as we can go.

"Winning the district championship was great feeling. It was like Charlotte (Scharbauer) said to Coach (Raughton) after beating Odessa High to win the championship, 'I've never been so excited.' That's how we all felt. But we need to go out and make the most of the opportunity."

This is all new to Alcala, who probably thinks the playoffs are just part of the season.

"I know the seniors were excited after we won it, but it took me a little while to realize what we had done," Alcala said. "I'm really glad we did it, I know it means a lot to our seniors. They have never been to the playoffs."

That all changes this week. The motor is running.

A&M: Investigation begins

(From 1C)

investigation triggered by the newspaper report.

O'Dwyer acknowledged knowing Ferguson but called the accusations ridiculous. "I have absolutely never had a recollection of participating in any slush fund for any coach," he said.

Said Huffines: "I don't know anything about that. I don't remember anything at all about that."

Gilbert, through his attorney, said the statements were false, reckless and injurious.

Ferguson, 70, said he was willing to risk his friendships with Gilbert, Huffines and O'Dwyer to make sure Mobley knew there might be more to the stories published by The Dallas Morning News.

The Morning News said it received a copy of Ferguson's letter with no indication who may have sent it.

Ferguson confirmed the newspaper's copy as authentic. Although he had intended it to be private communication, Ferguson said he did not object to making it public.

"I don't know what you plan to do, but I stand up for whatever I've written or said," Ferguson said in a telephone interview.

"As far as I'm concerned, I've done my duty."

St. James 'finally' has an Indy Car sponsor

Associated Press

The goal for Lyn St. James is no longer to find an IndyCar ride — now she wants to be Rookie of the Year.

The top 1992 Indianapolis 500 rookie — finishing 11th last May — and only the second woman to race at Indy, said Wednesday she has put together a sponsorship-team package that will allow her to run for 1993 IndyCar PPG Cup series rookie honors.

"Finally," she said during a conference call from Phoenix, where she is testing a 1992 Lola-Ford Cosworth belonging to Dick and Diane Simon. "It took a long time to get this all put together, but it looks like the wait was worth it."

Co-sponsored by J.C. Penney, the Revlon Department Store Group and Jantzen — none of them traditional racing sponsors — St. James, who will be 46 on March 17, will run 15 of the 16 races this season, missing only the season-opener on March 21 at Surfers Paradise in Queensland, Australia.

St. James will be the first woman to run for series honors.

"We were later in making this announcement than we would have liked," St. James said. "We needed time to test and get things smoothed out and missing Australia was a decision I made. Now I'm kind of kicking myself a little bit. I'd really like to get started."

St. James, who will open her season April 5 on the one-mile oval at Phoenix International Raceway, said it was also a budgetary decision not to go to Australia.

"It costs a lot of money to do a full season and we're still trying to raise some money to help along the way," she said. "The trip to Australia would have put us behind in our testing program and would have cost money that will probably be better spent over the rest of the season."

St. James is happy to be in a position to set goals after several years of hard work to find sponsors willing to take a chance on her.

"Last year, I couldn't come out and say I was running for Rookie of the Year at Indy because I was too involved in just trying to get the job done, make the race and run the best I could.

"But, in 1993, our goal is to run for Rookie of the Year," she said. "And I hope that my presence in the series helps racing by broadening the interest level of women and sponsors in the sport. Maybe it will even help other women who are aspiring to become drivers."

St. James, who is a veteran of sedan and sports car racing but has run only the one Indy-car event, said, "I have a learning curve to go through and I know that. There are lots of tracks I've never run on, and it's going to take a while to learn them."

Simon, who helped Janet Guthrie break the gender line at Indianapolis in the 70's, is a team-owner known for giving drivers a chance. He will add St. James' effort to full-season programs with veterans Scott Brayton and Raul Boesel.

"This is the best equipment we've ever had in the history of our team, and we have a full engineering staff," Simon said.

Congress looking at women's athletics

By Bob Dart
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Congress may step in soon to force colleges to obey federal law and stop discriminating against women in sports, a House subcommittee chairwoman warned Wednesday.

But college officials said that attaining absolute equity between men's and women's sports could require massive changes — and probably cutbacks — in major college football programs.

"Football is not going to die, but football is going to have to share," predicted Donna Lopiano, director of the Women's Sports Foundation and former women's athletic director at the University of Texas.

Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Ill., chair of the House Commerce and Consumer Protection Subcommittee, said colleges are virtually ignoring Title IX of the 1972 Civil Rights Amendments that requires gender equity in sports in all colleges that receive federal funds.

Although more than half of all college students are women, she said, men get "the lion's share of athletic scholarships, coaching salaries and operating expenses" in college sports.

"Twenty years is too long to wait for enforcement," said Collins. To prompt immediate compliance, she is preparing legislation that would move enforcement of Title IX from the Education Department to the Justice Department — and take violators to federal courtrooms.

"It's clear that neither the NCAA or colleges are going to do the right thing any time soon," she said.

At a hearing Wednesday, college officials asked Congress not to interfere, insisting that progress is being made.

"Federal intervention is not the answer to making gender equity a reality," said Thomas Hern, president of Wake Forest University. "Athletic departments are now working hard to cut costs so that dollars can be reallocated to support women's athletic programs."

Grant Teaff, athletic director at Baylor University and a member of the NCAA Task Force on Gender Equity, said he didn't know if full compliance of Title IX could be achieved without severe cuts in football programs.

"Football by its nature is a resource-intensive sport — requiring more players, more coaches and more protective equipment than other sports," he testified. Since there is no comparable women's sport, football is largely "responsible for the spending disparities" when budgets of men's and women's athletic departments are compared, he said.

On the other hand, he said, successful football programs pay for themselves and generate revenues for other sports, including women's sports.

But Collins said football yields such profits at a relatively small number of college powerhouses. "Most football programs lose money and are subsidized in many ways, including mandatory student fees that are charged to all students — male and female," she said.

At many colleges, football has become a multimillion-dollar enterprise with lavish facilities funded with television revenues and boosters' contributions. Players go to school for free, live in plush athletic dorms, travel by airplane and stay in luxury hotels, sometimes even before home games. Women athletes are second-class citizens in comparison, the subcommittee was told.

Compliance with Title IX will not kill college football, testified Lopiano, who spent 17 years in the University of Texas athletic department. But "the standard of living of many football programs will have to be reduced in order to redistribute funds for the cause of gender equity," she said.

Hern, a member of the NCAA Presidents' Commission and the Knight Commission on Intercollegiate Sports, said a college's football scholarships will be limited 85 for next year.

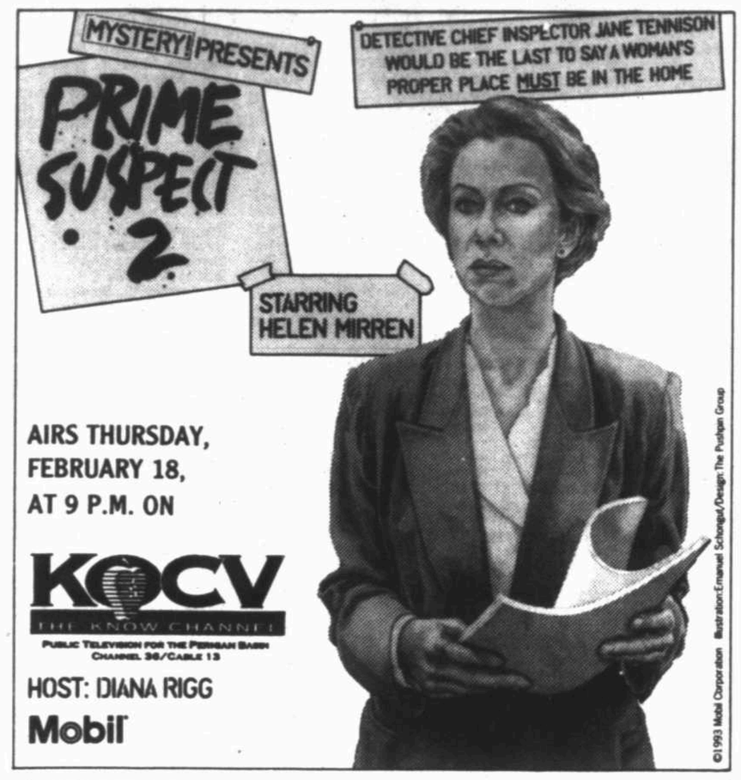

That's down from 88 in 1993, 95 in 1988 and 105 in 1973. He would not rule out further reductions.

Teaff said going below 85 scholarships could raise safety concerns. If the number of scholarship players is reduced further, he said a return to one-platoon football might be in order.

If football players are not counted, Teaff said, there are more women athletes than male athletes on scholarship at Baylor.

But football players are male, pointed out Ms. Lopiano, and they are counted under Title IX which says the male-female ratio of athletes should be roughly the same as for the student body in general.

As a initial step toward forcing compliance with Title IX, Collins introduced a bill Wednesday requiring all colleges receiving federal funds to disclose their expenditures on men's and women's athletic programs, participation rates and sports offered to men and women.

Jackson tries comeback

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Bo Jackson took a few more steps Wednesday in his bid to return to baseball with an artificial hip, working out at the Chicago White Sox camp a day before spring training officially starts.

Jackson, with a barely noticeable limp, ran the bases, took batting practice and fielded grounders at first base. His 40-minute session came under the watchful eye of team trainers and a few fans who wandered into Ed Smith Stadium.

Jackson worked out earlier this year at Comiskey Park in Chicago, running sprints through the corridors. He arrived in Sarasota on Monday and began drills designed to determine whether he will be able to play this year after missing the entire 1992 season.

So far in Florida, Jackson has not tried to slide on the bases.

"I don't forsee a problem," White Sox trainer Herm Schneider said. "He'll slide head-first on his right side."

Jackson did not comment on his progress. He has told the White Sox public relations department that he does not plan to speak with reporters about his return.

Jackson, 30, underwent hip replacement surgery last April. He has spent almost a year getting accustomed to the plastic-and-metal prothesis in his left hip.

Pitchers and catchers are scheduled to report to Chicago's camp on Thursday, and the first workout is set for Friday. The rest of the team is to report next Tuesday and practice the following day.

Jackson's comeback is sure to be the main attraction for the White Sox this spring. The team already has featured Jackson in its preseason ticket advertising, and hopes he will be able to provide some of the excitement he did before being injured in January 1991 in an NFL playoff game for the Los Angeles Raiders.

Jackson's last full season in the majors was 1990, when he hit .272 with 28 home runs and 78 RBIs for Kansas City. He played 111 games, most of them in the outfield.

Jackson was released by the Royals in March 1991 and signed by the White Sox in April. He went through a rehabilitation program that took him through the minors, and returned to the majors in September, hitting .225 with three homers and 14 RBIs in 23 games, all of them as a designated hitter.

Next week, Jackson will likely move into the outfield for workouts.

Owners step toward sharing gate revenues

PHOENIX (AP) — Baseball owners took a very tentative first step Wednesday toward increasing revenue sharing, but made no substantive progress on hiring a commissioner or restructuring his job.

The actions taken and not taken during the two days of sessions just before spring training highlighted the drift in baseball's executive circles since commissioner Fay Vincent's forced resignation last Sept. 7.

"Governance by committee is not a good way to govern in a normal situation," said Milwaukee Brewers president Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council. "This is abberational. We are exploring all the areas of baseball's business."

At Wednesday's meeting:

— Former Oakland Athletics adminstrative assistant Sharon Jones admonished owners for their behavior toward minorities, a speech Selig called "sincere and blunt." But the council still hasn't responded to the Rev. Jesse Jackson's threat of selective boycotts unless more minorities are hired.

— Owners unanimously approved a resolution saying there is linkage between revenue sharing and player compensation. But they didn't address what the linkage was or how much money the larger clubs are willing to split with the smaller teams.

— The restructuring committee voted on its report — due last Nov. 1 — but decided to forward it first to the executive council before giving it to all owners. Richard Ravitch, management's chief labor negotiator, wants the commissioner stripped of his labor authority, or the hiring of a commissioner delayed until after a new labor contract.

— The commissioner search committee, headed by Atlanta Braves chairman Bill Bartholomay, had its first in-person meeting and Bartholomay said the group didn't feel any time pressure. "It's hard to search if you haven't written a job description," Selig said.

Tewksbury role model for Johnson

Associated Press

Pitcher Randy Johnson and the Seattle Mariners had to be intrigued when they submitted their salary arbitration figures and discovered they were exactly the same as those of pitcher Bob Tewksbury and the St. Louis Cardinals.

Both pitchers asked for $3.2 million. Both were offered $2.05 million. So when Tewksbury and the Cardinals divide the difference and settled on $2.625 million last Saturday, Johnson and the Mariners decided that was a pretty good idea and did the same thing on Wednesday.

In the long run, though, Tewsbury made out better, getting the bigger raise. He made $800,000 last year when he was 16-5 with a 2.16 earned run average. Johnson made $1,392,500 and was 12-14 with a 3.77 ERA.

Also settling were Cincinnati pitcher Tim Belcher and Montreal second baseman Delino DeShields.

Belcher took $3.75 million after asking $4 million and being offered $3.3 million. He was 15-14 with a 3.91 ERA last year when he made $2.1 million.

DeShields, who batted .292 for Montreal last season when he made $302,500, accepted $1,537,500. He had asked for $1.9 million and the club had offered $1.2 million.

Two arbitration cases were decided in favor of the clubs with the Chicago Cubs beating first baseman Mark Grace and San Francisco prevailing over pitcher Jeff Brantley.

Arbitrator Howard Block decided that Grace must accept the Cubs offer of $3.1 million for 1993, rejecting the player's request for $4.1 million. Grace made $2,312,500 last year when he batted .307 for Chicago.

■ Baseball Roundup

Brantley, who was 7-7 with seven saves and a 2.95 earned run average for the Giants last year, was awarded $1.5 million by arbitrator Nicholas Zumas, a raise of $375,000. He had asked for $2.6 million.

The victories by the clubs gave management eight wins in the 12 cases decided so far.

Two cases were heard on Wednesday. Infielders Jeff King of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Midland's Randy Velarde of the New York Yankees both went to arbitration and, although not identical like Johnson and Tewksbury, the numbers were close.

King asked for $1.075 million and was offered $625,000 by the Pirates with aarbitrator Ira Jaffe listening to the arguments. Velarde wanted $1.05 million and was offered $600,000 by the Yankees with arbitrator Robert Creo assigned to the case.

King made $305,000 when he batted .231 with 14 home runs and 65 runs batted in last year and Velarde earned $360,000, hitting .272 with seven homers and 46 RBIs.

The New York Mets signed catcher Todd Hundley, second baseman Jeff McKnight and outfielder Ryan Thompson to one-year contracts.

Hundley batted .209 with seven homers and 32 RBIs in his rookie season and set a club record for fielding percentage by a catcher with .996, making just three errors in 751 chances.

McKnight batted .307 at Tidewater of the International League and .271 in 31 games with the Mets. Thompson, acquired from Toronto in the David Cone trade, batted .282 at Syracuse of the International League and .222 in 30 games with New York.

Schott keeps word on payroll

CINCINNATI (AP) — Marge Schott kept her word.

The Cincinnati Reds owner promised her players last fall that she wouldn't slash the payroll. They went into the offseason waiting to see whether she'd make good on it.

She has. The Reds open training camp Thursday in Plant City, Fla., anticipating a bigger payroll in 1993. It will jump to around $40 million from $37 million last year.

The financial commitment is a relief to players who worried last fall that Schott would dismantle the team to save money. There was so much clubhouse uneasiness that shortstop Barry Larkin and pitcher Jose Rijo confronted Schott about her plans.

She told them she'd keep the team basically intact. She's wound up letting general manager Jim Bowden increase the payroll a little to keep it competitive with the NL West champion Atlanta Braves.

"For all the crying the owners have been doing about how they don't have any money, the Reds have really shown that they are committed to winning," reliever Rob Dibble said. "They brought in tremendous people."

Bowden has remade the roster with great attention to salaries.

Shaking hands first for Rockies

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — While players on other major-league clubs will be working to get in shape and gain the eye of coaches and managers, the 63 Colorado Rockies players who assemble Friday will be shaking a lot of hands.

Simply getting to know each other is a priority for the young Rockies. Name tags will be in abundance.

At a Friday workout at Hi Corbett Field, manager Don Baylor gets his first look at some of the pitchers and catchers who will compete for the National League expansion team in its inaugural season in 1993.

The remainder of the squad reports next Tuesday, with the first full workout set for Wednesday.

The recently renovated training complex at Hi Corbett includes a new major and minor league clubhouse, offices to house the entire spring training operation, batting cages, new dugouts and a new press box.

The Rockies will have five fields, including the stadium field that will be used for games beginning March 6, when the Rockies kick off the exhibition schedule against the San Francisco Giants.

The Rockies play their first game on April 5 against the New York Mets at Shea Stadium. The Rockies' home opener at Denver's Mile High Stadium is April 9 against Montreal.

Expansion teams typically lose 100 or so games in their first season, but Baylor isn't conceding anything.

"We're not going to be a run-of-the-mill expansion team," Baylor insists. "We can be competitive. I don't plan on losing."

This is Baylor's 25th spring training camp, but this one is different from all the others.

"The other years I had to get myself ready to play," Baylor said. "Now I have to get others ready."

Baylor knows the most essential quality he'll need in his first days as Rockies manager is patience.

"It's going to take time," he said. "I'm going to have to be patient. When you have so many new guys, we need the chance to spend some time with them, talk to them, see where they're coming from."

Baylor believes some "coddling" also will be in order. Many of the Rockies' prospects were rejected by their former teams.

"I want to let them know they're part of a chosen group," he said.

Although all starting positions are open, Baylor has envisioned a starting lineup for opening day.

Center fielder Alex Cole, a singles hitter with speed, will probably lead off, followed by ex-Dodger second baseman Eric Young. Ex-Yankee third baseman Charlie Hayes will bat third, followed by former Gold Glove first baseman Andres Galarraga.

Left fielder Jerald Clark is tentatively set to bat fifth, with right fielder Dante Bichette, a solid defender, batting sixth.

Catcher Joe Girardi, a former Cub, will bat seventh, and shortstop Freddie Benavides will hit eighth.

Former Atlanta right-hander David Nied, the Rockies' first pick in the expansion draft, likely will be the opening day pitcher. Former Milwaukee right-hander Darren Holmes is projected to be the top reliever.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices fall

Oil prices extended Wednesday's losses on the New York Mercantile Exchange amid skepticism about OPEC's plan to cut crude production, and news that China will open sizeable inland areas for foreign oil exploration and development.

West Texas Intermediate for March delivery fell 20 cents to $19.33 a barrel.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $18 per barrel.

March natural gas rose 3.2 cents to $1.797 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Rexene loss

DALLAS — Rexene Corp. said it lost $6.5 million in the quarter ending Dec. 31, its first since completing a Chapter 11 restructuring.

The plastics company's loss amounted to 62 cents per share. Sales were $98.9 million.

The results are not directly comparable to a year earlier when Rexene was reorganizing under bankruptcy laws.

The company lost $1.05 million, or $1 per share, during the fourth quarter of 1991. Sales were $98.8 million.

Rexene said it lowered administrative expenses. A gain in profit margins for polyethylene was offset by lower margins for styrene and polypropylene, the company said.

Upon its exit from bankruptcy last September, Rexene had replaced $403 million of debt that was due in July with $337 million in debt that becomes due after 1999. The company also reduced annual cash interest payments through 1994 from about $74 million to $24 million.

Dollar declines

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mostly lower on world markets for the second day in a row Wednesday as concerns over President Clinton's economic package persisted.

In New York the dollar settled at 119.65 yen, down from 119.93 yen on Tuesday.

In New York it cost $1.4455 to buy one pound, less expensive than Tuesday's $1.4495.

Stocks mixed

NEW YORK — The stock market ended narrowly mixed in heavy trading Wednesday ahead of President Clinton's address to Congress.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed up 2.70 points at 3,312.19.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about three to two on the New York Stock Exchange, with 768 up, 1,152 down and 585 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled a heavy 287.22 million shares, but was still lower than 325.37 million in the previous session.

Nasdaq over-the-counter stocks suffered losses again Wednesday. The Nasdaq index closed at 659.43, down 5.96 points, or 0.90 percent.

China opens areas to oil search

■ Foreign petroleum companies have been awaiting move for years.

Associated Press

BEIJING — China announced Wednesday it is opening sizable inland areas for foreign oil exploration and development, a move that foreign petroleum companies have been awaited for years.

The 12 newly opened areas include part of the Tarim Basin in northwest China's Xinjiang region, which some Chinese experts believe holds one of the world's largest untapped oil reserves.

Also included are beaches and shallow areas of north China's Bohai Gulf and prospective fields scattered throughout northeastern, central and northern China.

Exploration rights will be sold in two rounds of bidding beginning in March, said Wang Tao, president of the China National Petroleum Corp.

"It's a significant first step. We've been looking forward to it for a long time," said Kevin Rolens, vice president of Amoco Orient Petroleum Co. in Houston.

John Thompson, president of the Houston-based Exxon Exploration Co., said the announcement showed the Chinese realize they need outside help to develop new fields, especially the remote Tarim, quickly enough to meet domestic demand.

Wang also invited foreign companies to invest in already operating Chinese oilfields, where advanced technology is needed to recover the dwindling reserves.

"This is an important step to speed up the opening of the Chinese petroleum industry," Wang said in a speech to dozens of foreign oil company executives at the Great Hall of the People.

He made a special pitch to American oil companies, saying, "The United States of America is one of the earliest nations willing to share its oil techology with us."

The Exploration Oil Co. of Louisiana was given a jump on the new fields. It signed a contract last week to form a joint venture to explore 79 square miles of shallow water in the Bohai Gulf.

For decades, Communist China insisted on self-reliance in exploiting oil and other minerals, reluctant to let foreigners profit from its natural wealth. Beginning in the late 1970s, foreigners have been allowed to explore limited areas mostly offshore, but few have found commercially viable deposits and the most promising areas have been off-limits.

In a sign that the decision to open up more areas was politically sensitive and made at the highest levels, Premier Li Peng met with the Chinese and foreign oil executives just before Wang's speech.

China produces much of its own petroleum but remains a net importer with rapidly expanding demand. Wang said China could continue to go it alone but opted for foreign participation to accelerate development.

However, it will have to compete for foreign investors with the former Soviet republics and Mongolia, also newly opening up their oilfields.

Among the newly opened Chinese sites, the Tarim is of the greatest interest.

Probe's on: Official chides airlines for overexpansion

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional investigation of the airline industry's money miseries began Wednesday with the Clinton administration chiding airlines for contributing to their own woes by overexpanding.

Other critics, including the head of USAir, were far harsher. Some accused the nation's three largest airlines of adding hundreds of planes to their fleets to drive smaller competitors out of business.

The so-called Big Three — United, Delta and American — said their expansion has been prudent.

The growth has been "far more than needed," said Patrick V. Murphy, an acting assistant secretary of transportation testifying for the administration. He said recent expansion by the Big Three equaled the creation of two new major airlines.

But he told a House Public Works subcommittee on aviation that the major airlines appeared to be well-intentioned, anticipating additional passengers who never appeared.

"The industry was used to a level of growth we haven't seen in five years," Murphy said. Airline travel is about the same as 1988.

The industry has lost $8 billion over the last three years.

Elsewhere in the capital, Robert F. Daniell, chief executive officer of United Technologies Corp., told labor representatives and Connecticut lawmakers that the industry situation is worsening. Calls come in daily from airlines and air frame makers canceling or reducing orders, said Daniell, whose company is the parent of jet engine maker Pratt & Whitney.

Daniell hinted that his company may have to lay off more than it announced just last month, which was 10,000 over the next two years. "That number is not fixed in concrete," he said. "It's a function of the business volume which is still changing — unfortunately negatively."

The administration is concerned that airlines will go out of business, reducing competition in the industry, Murphy said. "A lot of damage could be done while we wait for economic growth," he said.

Murphy appeared in place of Transportation Secretary Federico Pena, who was working on parts of President Clinton's economic package to be unveiled Wednesday night.

Pena joined congressional leaders Tuesday in proposing a commission to develop solutions to the airline industry's problems within 90 days.

The aviation subcommittee, headed by Rep. Jim Oberstar, D-Minn., will hold three days of hearings this week and next.

Construction of new housing dips 7.2 percent in January

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction of new homes fell 7.2 percent in January, the government said Wednesday. Analysts attributed the drop to bad weather and an unsustainable increase in building in December.

Unless the weather turns bad again this month, these analysts added, housing starts should turn up again, boosted by favorable mortgage rates and a gradually improving economy.

"The economy is growing more strongly, interest rates remain low and consumer confidence continues to be high," said economist David Berson of the Federal National Mortgage Association. "All that will translate into more starts."

The Commerce Department reported that starts totaled 1.19 million at a seasonally adjusted annual rate in January, the lowest level since last July when new construction dipped to a 1.11 million rate. Last month's decline was the largest since starts fell 16.9 percent last April.

Starts were down sharply in both the Northeast and West. They also fell in the Midwest, but rose in the South.

"Hopefully, this starts number was an aberration," David Lereah, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association, said. "Our projection is well over 1.3 million (for 1993). But it's not a good way to start the new year."

Analysts noted that starts had jumped 4.8 percent in December, to a 1.29 million annual rate, and ended the year 18.4 percent above those in 1991.

Guaranty to buy American Federal

DALLAS (AP) — Guaranty Federal Bank F.S.B. has agreed to buy American Federal Bank F.S.B. for $150 million, the companies said Wednesday.

The cash transaction will create one of the state's largest financial institutions with assets of $9.5 billion and more than 130 locations.

The deal is subject to approval by regulators and the shareholders of American Federal's parent company, Lone Star Technologies Inc. It is not expected to close until the fourth quarter of the year.

The sale would take Lone Star out of the financial service business. The Dallas-based company's primary holding is Lone Star Steel Co., which chiefly manufactures oil-field and other industrial products.

For Guaranty, which is owned by the timber company Temple-Inland Inc., the acquisition substantially increases its presence in Dallas-Fort Worth and East Texas. It currently has 20 locations in Dallas and five in East Texas.

'Gift to minors act' account has tax benefits

By Bill Doyle

Q: Last May, my grandfather purchased a one-year $10,000 certificate of deposit for my newborn daughter. The money is to be used for her college education. The CD is in my name, in trust for my daughter. It pays only 2.7 percent interest. When it matures, I want to invest for a better rate of return.

Doyle

Can you share your ideas for a long-term, low-risk investment? Also, is it possible to get some tax advantage?

A: You are at a tax disadvantage while the CD is registered in your name, in trust for your daughter. With that arrangement, the CD belongs to you and you must pay income tax on the interest it pays.

Far better to have it in "gift to minors act" or the newer "transfer to minors act" form. That way, it will be registered in your name, as custodian for your daughter's name, under the "gift to minors" or "transfer to minors" act of the state in which you live.

With that form of registration, the CD will belong to the wee child. So will the interest. The tax liability on the interest will be hers.

However, the first $500 of a dependent child's annual interest and dividends is not subject to tax. The next $500 is taxed at the child's rate — usually 15 percent. The child's interest or dividends topping $1,000 is taxed at the parents' rate while the child is younger than 14 and at the child's rate when he or she turns 14.

Boiled down, getting CDs and other investments into a child's name can reduce the family's total income taxes. Strictly from a tax point of view, it will be wise to get your daughter's college fund into "gift to minors" or "transfer to minors" form.

You have a wide range of investment choices.

If you want absolute safety, Series EE U.S. savings bonds are just the thing. Those now being sold will accrue interest at a 6 percent annual rate, at least until their original maturity in 12 years. If you go that route, do not use "gift to minors" or "transfer to minors" form. Have the bonds registered in your name. When they are cashed and used for higher education expenses, the accumulated interest will not be taxable.

But my choice would be a mutual fund with growth as its investment objective. While there is some risk involved, such funds have produced excellent results over the long haul, such as the 17 years before you daughter matriculates.

If you have been reading this column, you know it favors true no-load mutual funds, those with no commission when you buy shares, no redemption charge or contingent deferred sales charge when you redeem shares and no 12(b)1 plan constantly eating into the shares' value.

Q: My wife and I have only one child, a daughter who has five children. Her husband is a candidate for the title "worst person in the world." I won't go into details, but he is awful.

We want to put stocks in "transfer to minors" accounts for the grandchildren, but we fear our rotten son-in-law would empty such accounts and use the money on another of his harebrained schemes.

Any suggestions?

A: Name yourself as custodian for the accounts. Then, you will have control of the accounts and can manage them until each grandchild reaches the age of majority, which varies from 18 to 21 in different states. At that point, you will be required to turn the account over to the new adult.

Q: I plan to open a "transfer to minors" account for my two children, naming my wife and myself as custodians. Is that permitted?

A: No. With "transfer to minors" and "gift to minors" accounts there can be only one minor, who is the owner, and one custodian.

Solution? Open two accounts.

Fashions are soothing for fall

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

No, you don't have to make up your mind yet whether you want to go long or short in the next eight months or so.

Yes, designers' enthusiasm for pants continues unabated for day and for night.

Sure, the black evening suits and dresses that everybody has been wearing to black-tie events this winter will continue as important fashion.

These are some of the soothing observations gleaned from the early-fall fashion collections that are occupying designers and store buyers on and off Seventh Avenue at the moment.

Earlier this month, the big, expensive European fashion houses like Armani, Valentino and Chanel showed their collections. Last week, the more moderately priced clothes were introduced — styles that will be in the stores starting in June. By then, fashion enthusiasts will presumably have finished purchasing their summer wardrobes for work and for play and will be ready for the next step.

Those women who really look ahead will find clothes to wear when the first cool days of fall occur. They'll be ready to shed their rumpled summer cottons and linens for post-Labor Day clothes that will take them well into the winter.

'It is not a time for wild exaggeration, but you have to be a little adventurous for people to take notice.'

— Designer Byron Lars

ONE LATE European entry was Yves Saint Laurent, introducing a collection called Encore, created especially for American women. Prices are about half those of the Rive Gauche collection, which the house introduced more than 20 years ago and which helped spur the enthusiasm for French ready-to-wear in this country. Jackets, for instance, are $600 to $800, pants from $250 to $350.

The clothes, mostly interchangeable separates, have the same casual look that marks the more expensive collection. Saks Fifth Avenue, Neiman Marcus and I. Magnin are among the stores that will introduce the new styles in June.

As usual with this designer, pants have an important part in the repertory, supplemented by skirts of different lengths. The designer is not one who has jumped precipitously into the longer mode, even in the couture collection he introduced last month. But he does offer a choice: some hems stop above the knee, some below it and a few reach mid-calf length.

In addition to the many black styles, especially for evening, clear red stands out in coats, jackets and knitted clothes. Tailoring is neat and precise, and it would take a keen eye to tell the difference between these styles and those twice the price.

Randy Kemper is one of the American designers offering early fall clothes at affordable prices. His range is from $159 to $500. Kemper, who has been in business for four years, shot into public awareness when Hillary Rodham Clinton began wearing his clothes during the election campaign and after. She had been buying them at the Barbara Jean shop in Little Rock, Ark., for about three years, but Kemper never met her.

THE DESIGNER shows the kind of clothes that would attract a busy woman who does not have too much time to shop and also doesn't want to look too ostentatious. He is trying to pare his styles down even more than he has in the past, and he is succeeding.

There is hardly an extraneous detail in his pre-fall collection of sleek, tailored separates that will start appearing in the stores in May. The simply shaped shirts and jackets are in fabrics like stone-washed silk and handwoven cotton.

The thrust is classic sportswear, but the pieces are not boring. Shorts paired with a tailored belted jacket, a long jumper with matching pants and a number of sarong-draped skirts to soften the severity of the basic pieces enliven this small, tasteful collection of new-season daytime styles.

Eva Chun's focus for early fall remains cocktail and evening clothes, though she plans to expand her day styles. Typical is a black princess-style coatdress, which can be worn over nothing but opaque stockings.

It typifies her feeling for what she calls "well-proportioned, harmonious designs that are comfortable on the body." A bit more festive is a dress made of three layers of chiffon with a small beaded tulle bodice. A very short silk crepe jacket is provided to cover the bodice.

The suit look is also represented by a red crepe pants outfit with a flare of embroidered tulle at the wrists and a flat tulle collar at the high neck, all rather simple and serene. Miss Chun's clothes are in the $1,000 to $3,000 range.

BYRON LARS loves an upholstery fabric printed in a delft-blue design adapted from porcelain. He uses it for a jumper dress with corselet lacings in front and a lot of the quietly intricate seaming that gives shape to his clothes. He uses the same pale blue and white pattern for vests that add distinction to plain blue trousers and skirts. The skirt length he prefers is top-of-the-calf, which looks longer because of his midriff-emphasizing cuts.

"It is not a time for wild exaggeration," he said, "but you have to be a little adventurous for people to take notice." His early-fall styles, which start at $110 for blouses, seem to strike the right note of experimentation.

DEAR ABBY

Rapist now in prison took advantage of unlocked doors

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A recent letter in your column about locking your doors brought back some painful memories.

As a child, I was taught always to lock the doors to our home, and I've carried that habit with me into my adult life.

Van Buren

But there are many people I know who left their doors unlocked for "just a moment" while they went to the mail box, dumped their trash, and carried their laundry to the wash room. Abby, these "people" — all women — were the sexual assault victims of my ex-husband.

After he was arrested, he told how he would hide and wait for these unsuspecting women to leave their apartments — "just for a moment" — and when they returned, he'd be waiting for them. He also told of many assaults that occurred because he had gained access through unlocked doors and windows in the middle of the night. (Can you imagine waking up to find someone like him standing over you?)

My children and I have healed, but his victims have a long road ahead of them. My "ex" will be out of prison in five more years, and free to rape again.

Abby, please warn your readers often how dangerous it is to leave their doors unlocked — even for just a few minutes. If it saves one woman from being assaulted, the time I took to write this was well spent. — A WARNING FROM PHOENIX

P.S. Abby: My "ex" was not a typical serial rapist. We lived in a nice, family-type, middle-class neighborhood, and he was active in Little League, PTA, church, etc. He was a clean-cut guy with a big problem.

DEAR ABBY: My husband says "don't" when he should say "doesn't." This may sound trivial to you, but he is in business for himself, and when he deals with customers, the way he expresses himself is important. We've been married for 20 years, and this is really getting on my nerves because I know he knows better.

When I correct him, he accuses me of nagging him and trying to change him. Abby, I am not trying to "change" him; I am trying to help him. He is an excellent provider and is very skilled at the work he does, but he doesn't take criticism very well. He says how he speaks is not important because 95 percent of the people probably don't know the difference.

He says, "He don't care" and, "It don't matter."

I say, "Well, maybe it do!" What do you think, Abby? — BUGGED IN ST. PAUL

DEAR BUGGED: I can think of nothing more unwelcome and less appreciated than unsolicited criticism.

Apparently, your husband's grammatical gaffes haven't hampered his ability to make a good living, so if he "don't care," and it "don't matter," I advise you to lay off.

DEAR READERS:

"As the years leave fewer witnesses
"Who are able to contradict us?"

AT WIT'S END

Television talk shows could use little silence

By Erma Bombeck

Does anyone else sit around and wonder where and how they unearth these people who appear on talk shows and spill out every emotion they've ever had?

Bombeck

I'm serious. Is there a dysfunctional family bank somewhere that registers grandmothers who married their granddaughter's prom dates? Or does a TV booker excuse herself from a meeting, go to the window and yell out, "Anybody down there who gets turned on by venetian blinds?"

When Phil Donahue celebrated his 25th anniversary as a talk-show host recently, there was a skit where his competitors were all admitted to a room each week by giving a secret password. Then they sat around and put their claim on topics. (Joan Rivers said she got dibs on men who had slept with Madonna because she had already hired the stadium to do the show.)

My mother actually believed this was the way they picked out the theme of their shows.

She may be right.

Come next September, there will be 16 talk shows on daytime TV. Add to them the prime-time and late-night talk shows, the hundreds of radio interviewers around the clock, the people who walk the streets talking to themselves, and we are on the verge of being talked to death.

A talk frenzy could cause some real problems. Some talkers will have to be recycled. Let us say one couple who are neo-Nazis with eating disorders appear on Sally Jessy's show. The next week, the same couple appears on Montel Williams with yet another problem: They embarrass their children by chaining themselves to X-rated movie theaters. The legend continues.

With a dwindling supply of guests, talk-show hosts and hostesses will possibly have to start interviewing one another.

But the biggest problem I see will be getting someone who isn't talking to sit in the audience. With everyone making the talk circuit, there will be no one left to listen. Listeners have always been a sought-after commodity in this country. We have so few in government anymore, and most marriages cry for at least one partner who is a good listener.

Every Sunday morning I turn on Charles Kuralt. I listen to the news, feature reports, and reviews of movies and television. But the part I wait for is the last minute and a half where he shows pictures and sounds of wildlife and says absolutely nothing. Just silence. If the animals have problems, they keep them to themselves.

Midlander selected as finalist

Staff report

Alissa Chamness, 16, daughter of Mark and Rhonda Chamness of Midland, is a finalist in the 1993 West Texas National Teen-Ager Scholarship Program to be April 23-24 at Wayland Baptist University in Plainview. This program is the official preliminary to the 22nd annual Texas National Teen-Ager Scholarship Program planned for May 7-8 in San Antonio. The Texas representative will receive an-expense paid trip to compete for a $10,000 scholarship at Opryland USA.

Alissa Chamness

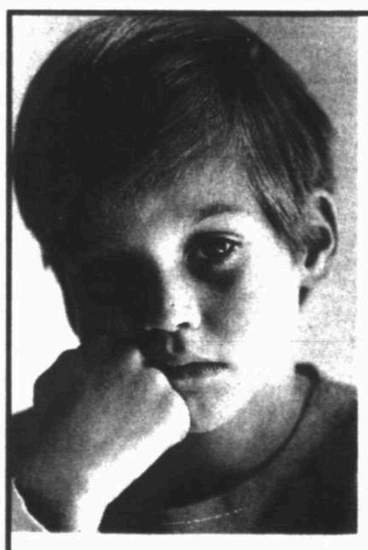

The West Texas program will have a regional winner and four runners-up in two age divisions: 13-15 and 16-18. Winner in each age division will receive a $1,000 savings bond, an all-expense paid trip to San Antonio for the state program and two full-tuition modeling scholarships from Barbizon and John Robert Powers, each worth $1,000. Senior West Texas winner also will receive a full-tuition scholarship to Mary Hardin-Baylor worth $4,000, and a scholarship to Wayland Baptist University, among other schools. West Texas Teen-Ager Program will award more than $50,000 in tuition scholarship from various universities during the weekend event. Every participant will receive a $200 scholarship to both Barbizon and John Robert Powers Schools of Modeling.

Contestants have the option to participate in the Volunteer Community Service Program of America's National Teen-Ager. Students will be judged on scholastic achievement-leadership, personality and individuality. The program has no swimsuit competition. Talent or an oral essay on "What's Right About America" may be presented.

Miss Chamness is being sponsored by Dr. John D. Bray, her parents, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Garrett.

Shettle, Maralo, Inc., and Erma Lowe (Collectively, the "Defendants").

4. On September 20, 1990, following an evidentiary hearing, this Court rendered and signed an Order certifying the Litigation as a class action and authorizing and directing the Class Representatives to maintain it for themselves and on behalf of a class consisting of all owners of royalty and other non-cost rearing interests in production during the period from December 15, 1967 through January 1, 1990 under leases committed by Gulf Oil Corporation to the Quito Unit in Reeves and Ward Counties, Texas, as created by that certain Operating Agreement dated December 15, 1967, by and between The Superior Oil Company, as Operator, and Gulf Oil Corporation et al., as Non-Operators, less only (a) owners of royalty or other non-cost bearing interests in production who are also the owners of a working interest in the Quito Unit; (b) the existing parties-plaintiff in certain specified lawsuits commenced prior to hearing on certification of the class and involving the same or similar subject matter; and (c) owners of royalty or other non-cost bearing interests in production under leases which were originally committed to the Quito Unit by Union Oil Company of California and which were later assigned, in whole or in part, to Gulf Oil Corporation. The leases committed by Gulf Oil Corporation to the Quito Unit are listed on Exhibit "A" to the Notice of Class Action and are hereinafter referred to as "the Leases." The Court's order certifying the Litigation as a class action was affirmed on appeal under challenge by certain of the Defendants.

5. The Court has previously afforded all persons qualifying as members of the Class the opportunity to be excluded from the Class by requesting exclusion in the time and manner specified in the Notice of Class Action. Members who did not so request exclusion and who have not entered an appearance in the Litigation through separate counsel are represented in the Litigation by counsel for the Class Representatives and will be bound by any final judgment in the Litigation, whether favorable or unfavorable.

6. The Class Representatives allege in the Litigation that the Defendants have failed to pay royalties to the Class Members upon approximately sixty-seven percent (67%) of the total gas production under or attributable to the Leases since October 1, 1983. The Class Representatives further allege that the Defendants have concealed such non-payment of royalties by means of fraud and deceit and that the Defendants have breached other express and implied covenants and obligations under the Leases, including the implied covenant to market gas prudently. By their operative pleadings in the litigation, the Class Representatives, for themselves and on behalf of the Class, seek (a) declaratory judgment decreeing the respective obligations of the Defendants for payment of royalties under the Leases; (b) an accounting of and monetary judgment for all unpaid or underpaid royalties under the leases; (c) a monetary judgment for actual and punitive damages; and (d) a monetary judgment for prejudgment and post judgment interest, attorneys' fees, and costs of court.

7. The Defendants have generally denied the allegations made by the Class Representatives and have asserted as affirmative defenses the Texas two and four-year statutes of limitation, the pricing restrictions of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978, and the doctrines of accord and satisfaction, waiver, release, and estoppel. Certain of the Defendants have also counterclaimed and cross-claimed for declaratory relief construing their obligations under the Leases and for recovery of attorneys' fees and costs.

8. On January 19, 1993 the Class Representatives filed with the Court a report and motion for approval of the Proposed Settlement (the "Report of Settlement"). On February 8, 1993 this Court conducted an informal preliminary hearing to consider the Proposed Settlement At that preliminary hearing, the Court determined the Proposed Settlement sufficiently meritorious to warrant a formal evidentiary hearing, at the item and place specified in Paragraph 2 of this Notice, during which the Court will hear and consider evidence, arguments, and authorities in support of and against the Proposed Settlement, the application of Class counsel for an award of attorneys' fees and expenses, and proposals relating to the administration and distribution of the proceeds of the Proposed Settlement, if approved. The sending of this Notice is not an expression of opinion by the Court with respect to the merits of any of such matters, nor as to the likelihood of any recovery by the Class or the validity of any of the defenses asserted by the Defendants in the Litigation.

SUMMARY OF THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

9. The Class Representatives, for themselves and on behalf of the Class, have agreed to a settlement of the Litigation with the Defendants, subject to approval by the Court. The terms of the Proposed Settlement are set forth in that certain Stipulation of Settlement (the "Stipulation of Settlement") dated December 1, 1992, between the Class Representatives and the Superior Oil Company, Mobil Oil Corporation, Mobil Producing Texas & New Mexico Inc., Chevron U.S.A. Inc., Union Oil Company of California, Mi Vida Partnership, Atlantic Richfield Company, Indian Royalty Company, Melinda D. Allspaugh, Catlett Minerals Corp., Robert O. Clark, Cornell Corporation, Markland Corporation, James H. Milligan, Omar B. Milligan Enterprises, Inc., Moody Oil Company, Security Trust, Polly C. Welfelt, Winoma Trust, Ted Collins, Jr., Exxon Corporation, Lowe Partners, LP, Maralo, Inc., Erma Lowe, Southland Royalty Company, Dell Shettle, Individually and Executrix of the Estate of George O. Shettle, Deceased, the Carotex Partnership, John McFarlane, and Eula McFarlane (all of whom other than the Class Representatives are hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Settling Working Interest Owners") A copy of the Stipulation of Settlement is attached to the Report of Settlement on file in the Litigation.

10. The terms of the Proposed Settlement are summarized as follows:

a. Settlement Fund. The Settling Working Interest Owners are to pay a total settlement consideration of $1,600,000.00 (the "Settlement Fund") into the registry of the Court within ten (10) days of finality of any order by the Court approving the terms of the Proposed Settlement. The Settlement Fund is to be administered and distributed among the Class Members as this Court shall determine and direct.

b. Release by Class Members. Upon finality of approval of the Proposed Settlement and deposit of the Settlement Fund into the registry of the Court, the Class Representatives and all Class Members, for themselves, their heirs, personal representatives, successors, and assigns, shall be deemed to have fully, finally unconditionally, and irrevocable released and forever discharged the Settling Working Interest Owners, their respective present and former agents, parents, predecessors, servants, employees, officers, partners, directors, subsidiaries, affiliates, stockholders, successors, personal representatives, and assigns, of the from each and every class, individual, derivative, or other claim, right, or cause of action of any nature whatsoever, in law or in equity, under federal, state, or common law, or any other law, whether fixed or contingent, other than Preserved Claims, which any of such releasing persons has against such released persons arising from, based upon, or relating to any claims asserted in the Litigation or any claims which could have been asserted in the Litigation, known or unknown, for all periods prior to and including December 31, 1992, which any Class Representative or Class Member may hold or claim to exist on account of, growing out of, or in any way related to, directly or indirectly, any and all damages, injuries, or loss arising out of operations on or production from the Quito Unit, Ward and Reeves Counties, Texas, or the Leases, including any express or implied covenants or the payment of royalty, arising out of or connected in any way with the Class Representatives' or any Class Member's ownership or other interest in the Leases or operations or production attributable to the Leases for all periods prior to and including December 31, 1991. The Class Representatives and all Class Members additionally shall be deemed to have released and discharged the Settling Working Interest Owners from any and all claims for expenses, including attorneys' fees, court costs, and witness fees, incurred by them in connection with the Litigation, the settlement of the Litigation, and any proceedings in connection wherewith.

c. Release by Settling Working Interest Owners. Upon finality of approval of the Proposed Settlement and deposit of the Settlement Fund into the registry of the Court, the Settling Working Interest Owners shall be deemed to have fully, finally, unconditionally, and irrevocably released and forever discharged the Class Representatives and all Class Members, their respective present and former agents, parents, predecessors, servants, employees, officers, partners, directors, subsidiaries, affiliates, stockholders, successors, personal representatives, and assigns, of and from each and every class, individual, derivative, or other claim, right, or cause of action of any nature whatsoever, in law or in equity, under federal, state, or common law, or any other law, whether fixed or contingent, other than Preserved Claims, which any of such releasing persons has against such released persons arising from, based upon, or relating to any claims asserted in the Litigation or any claims which could have been asserted in the Litigation, known or unknown, for all periods prior to and including December 31, 1991, which any Settling Working Interest Owner may hold or claim to exist on account of, growing out of, or in any way related to, directly or indirectly, any and all damages, injuries, or loss arising out of operations on or production from the Quito Unit, Ward and Reeves Counties, Texas, or the Leases, including any express or implied covenants or the payment of royalty, arising out of or connected in any way with the Settling Working Interest Owners' ownership or other interest in the Leases or operations or production attributable to the Leases for all periods prior to and including December 31, 1991. The Settling Working Interest Owners additionally shall be deemed to have released and discharged the Class Representatives and all Class Members from any and all claims for expenses, including attorneys' fees, court costs, and witness fees, incurred by them in connection with the Litigation, the settlement of the Litigation, and any proceedings in connection therewith.

d. Preserved Claims. "Preserved Claims" are defined in the Stipulation of Settlement as (i) claims arising under the Leases for periods from and after January 1, 1992; (ii) claims held by any qualifying persons who have timely and properly requested exclusion from the Class; (iii) claims under any oil and gas lease other than the Leases; and (iv) claims with respect to the performance or non-performance of the Stipulation of Settlement.

e. Ownership of Leases/Payment of Royalties. Under the Stipulation of Settlement, the Settling Working Interest Owners agree to be bound by the ruling in this Court's judgment in Cause No. 08-91-00052CV, styled "Lee Monroe et al v. Gulf Oil Corporation et al., 143rd District Court of Ward County, Texas (the "Monroe-Stratton Litigation"), that the December 15, 1967 Joint Operating Agreement which is the subject of this action (the "Quito JOA") constitutes a conveyance of the lands and leases described therein among the parties thereto in the proportions shown on Exhibit "A" to the Quito JOA. The Settling Working Interest Owners also stipulate as to their respective interests in the Leases as for periods from and after January 1, 1992, as soon as practicable, but in no event later than ninety (90) days after the effective date of the Stipulation of Settlement.

f. Suspense Funds Held by Chevron. Under the Stipulation of Settlement, Defendant Chevron U.S.A. Inc. is required to pay suspended royalty funds, if any, which are attributable to its 32.7326% interest in the leases for periods prior to January 1, 1992 into the registry of the Court on or before the date prescribed for payment of the Settlement Fund into the registry of the Court. These suspense funds are to be administered and distributed as the Court shall determine and direct.

g. Settlement Subject to Court Approval. The Proposed Settlement will become effective only upon finality of any order rendered by this Court approving the settlement and payment by the Defendants of the Settlement Fund into the registry of the Court. The stipulation of Settlement will automatically terminate and cease to have effect if this Court, or any appellate court in a final unappealed decision, shall reject the settlement, in whole or in part, and in any event if this Court shall not have approved the settlement, in whole or in part, and in any event if this Court shall not have approved the settlement by written order signed and entered in this action on or before June 1, 1993.

h. Dismissal of Litigation. If the Proposed Settlement becomes effective and binding as specified above, the Class Representatives and Defendants are to move jointly to dismiss the Litigation with prejudice to all claims other than Preserved Claims.

i. Costs and Expenses. Subject to any award by the Court to the Class Representatives and/or their counsel of attorneys' fees and expenses from the Settlement Fund, the Class Representatives and the Defendants are to bear their own attorney's fees, court costs, and other expenses incurred in connection with the prosecution, defense, and possible settlement of the Litigation.

j. Satisfied Contingency. The Stipulation of Settlement was expressly made contingent upon settlement of the claims therein referred to as the "Monroe-Stratton claims" by written agreement entered into on or before 12:00 midnight on December 2, 1992. The Court understands this contingency to have been satisfied.

k. No Admission of Liability. The Proposed Settlement is made without admission of liability by any party.

ATTORNEYS' FEES AND EXPENSES

10. Class counsel have advised the Court that they intend to apply to the Court for an award of attorneys' fees in an amount not to exceed twenty-five percent (25%) of the Settlement Fund and reimbursement of the actual out-of-pocket expenses incurred by them in the Litigation, plus interest thereon from the date of establishment of the Settlement Fund. The Court will consider and act upon the application of Class counsel for an award of attorneys' fees and expenses at the Settlement Hearing.

ADMINISTRATION AND DISTRIBUTION OF SETTLEMENT FUND

11. The Stipulation of Settlement does not prescribe or govern how the Settlement Fund is to be administered and distributed by the Court. At the Settlement Hearing the Court will consider and act upon proposals by the Class Representatives and any other affected or interested parties relating to the administration and distribution of the proceeds of the proposed settlement, if approved.

THE CLASS REPRESENTATIVES' REASONS FOR SETTLEMENT

12. In accordance with the directives of the Court, pending final decision in the Monroe-Stratton Litigation, virtually no formal discovery has taken place on the merits in the Litigation. However, through discovery relating to the propriety of class certification, through information and data furnished by the Defendants in connection with certification of the class and possible settlement of the Litigation, and through their own inquiries and research, the Class Representatives have diligently investigated the facts, circumstances, and legal issues which commonly affect the Class in the Litigation. Based upon such investigation, the Class Representatives believe that resolution of the claims of the Class and settlement of the Litigation that are common to the Class and have not undertaken any investigation with respect to potential claims that are unique to individual Class members. A detailed summary of the analysis employed and the factors weighed by the Class Representatives in entering into the Stipulation of Settlement is contained in the Report of Settlement on file in the Litigation.

COURT HEARING ON THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT

13. Unless you wish to object or otherwise be heard with respect to the proposed Settlement and the related matters described in this notice, you need not appear at the Settlement Hearing.

14. The hearing on the Proposed Settlement, the application of Class counsel for an award of attorneys' fees and expenses, and the proper administration and distribution of the Settlement Fund will be held on March 4, 1993 at 10:00 a.m. (or at any such adjourned time or times as the Court may without further notice direct) in the courtroom of the 143rd District Court AT THE WARD COUNTY COURTHOUSE IN MONAHANS, TEXAS.

15. If you are a Class Member and have not submitted a request for exclusion, you are entitled to object, if you so desire, to the proposed Settlement of the Litigation and/or to the application of Class counsel for an award of attorneys' fees and reimbursement of expenses. You are further entitled, if you so desire, to submit proposals with respect to the proper administration and distribution of the proceeds of the Proposed Settlement, if approved. Objections and proposals by Class Members will be heard, and any papers submitted in support of such objections and proposals will be considered, by the court at the Settlement hearing. However, no person shall be heard unless he, she, or it gives written notice of his, her, or its intention to appear and object or make proposals (which shall set forth briefly each objection or proposal and the basis therefor) and files such notice on or before February 25, 1993 with the Clerk of the 143rd District Court of Reeves County, Texas, P.O. Box 848, Pecos, Texas 79772, and mails by certified or registered mail, with return receipt requested, postage prepaid, sends by telephonic document transfer with confirmation of receipt, or otherwise actually delivers by means of hand delivery a copy of such written notice on or before February 25, 1993, to each of the following attorneys:

WEEKLY & MONTHLY INCOME

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of it few "Special Allowance" routes, available March 1, 1993. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday, in addition to the regular monthly route profits, $100 deposit is required. The route is in the Washington Park area.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week-commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributors provide great supplement income for housewives/ mothers, senior citizens, college students, or any other adult wanting to "Moonlight".

Apply in person 201 E. Illinois or call circulation 688-2700

WHAT?!? NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your "day job." Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400 to $800 monthly AFTER expenses. Some earn even MORE!

The catch? You've got to be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

CALL 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!
