On Skateboards

Sidewalk Surfers Specialize

By Lily May Silcott

Pedestrians, plodding along city streets and sidewalks, are often startled to hear a slight noise to the rear then, almost simultaneously, feel a rush of air as some young, supple figure swoops past and on down the street with the speed of light and the grace of an eagle.

Oltonites have grown accustomed to the sight, but should never take for granted these young skateboard artists practicing their skills whenever they find free time and an available stretch of concrete.

Unsuspecting adults who follow a troop of these sidewalk surf riders to the school's idle tennis courts, or an empty parking lot, are amazed to see what goes on.

Many youthful riders have arrived at a high level of competency in graceful movements. They casually 'pop wheelies', slither under the tennis nets, perform 'jumps' and 'power turns, play tag and enter into 'dog fights' with a great spirit of competition.

With a sense of personal pride, young performers try to go from one trick into another as smoothly as possible. Striving for newer and more difficult feats they attempt "walking the dog" and turns from 90 degrees to 360 degrees. On any given day some of the group of about 30 boys, from sixth through ninth grades, struggle with new maneuvers . . . and it all revolves around having fun.

Enterprise reporters talked with some of the older boys who seem to be most proficient in the skills to learn how it all got started. Most of them agree this interest began last summer. When they mastered the art of the straight line, they would have been bored had it not been for the addition of new and challenging tricks to learn.

And the youngsters have done it 'on their own'. They are self taught. With only the sports magazines to study for form and procedure they found that spools (or cones) being discarded at the local Pro Sox, Inc., made excellent and professional looking obstacles for their "slalom course."

The slalom is the thinking boy's sport. It requires concentration, inventiveness, cleverness as well as perfect center of balance on a good set of hot wheels.

The boys interviewed say that wooden skateboards are not good. They prefer something faster, more responsive. Usually the colorful carriers are made of molded plastic, aluminum or fiber glass. In the more expensive boards, many layers of fiber glass are used for strength and resilience.

The prices, our informants say, range from $12 to $269, so far as they have heard quoted. Many of the local boards run in the $30 range.

And what is the secret of riding them? They explain one must keep his weight forward or centered.

Did you fall a lot in learning? "Oh, yes, before you get the feeling. But if you fall, just get right back on it and try again, don't dread or fear it."

What is the worst kind of wipeout you get? "Falling backward on the head," they said. They do not wear a lot of protective gear, but being fully clothed helps prevent scratches and many bruises.

These young local artists say that they learn from each other and they are quick to point out that certain of their number excel in "aerial jumps" while someone else does the "power turn" much butter, but all agree that one of the first Oltonites to attempt tricks on skateboards is still "the hottest skater on the scene."

Now the sport of city slickers and farm boys alike, the crash for skateboarding began in mid-1950s as an invention of a Malibu, Calif., surf crew.

In that area they adopted available storm drains, concrete banked slopes, dams, huge concrete pipes and parking lots for practice fields. With so many skating situations easily available a whole crop of new professionals quickly developed. Now Southern California, Arizona and other sports minded areas are building skateboard parks, bowls and canyon-like courses at the cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars for this new sport for a new era . . . and the influence is spreading.

Local skateboard specialists yearn for an abandoned swimming pool to try their advance operations; or for a king-sized cement saucer (or better still a bowl) in Granbery Park . . . or even a discarded section of the Alaskan pipeline for a wheel tunnel where they could swing back and forth in perpetual motion.

They'd like to promote their own 'hang ten' skateboard meet, in which they could vie with other skaters in competitive events.

The more agressive of the older boys are talking in terms of organizing, of developing a Skateboard Association for the promotion and development of the sport. They want to establish their own programs with safety clinics, and sponsor competition.

As is true in anything in which young boys engage, a great deal of trading goes on 'in the group'. Boards or the underpinning 'trucks' may be swapped and improved. Equipment wears rather rapidly, and many of them spend time repairing their own, or others, skateboards.

Understudies of the leading teen-performers of the city are dozens of younger aspirants. Both boys and girls have received skateboards at Christmas, or save precious allowance to purchase glamorous wheels and are now spending tedious (and sometimes tortuous) hours in mastering the innocent-looking object.

Skateboarding is a new sport, with many enthusiastic supporters . . . . who'll be the next rider?

P-TA Meet Set Feb. 8

Announcement is made by John Ratliff of an executive board meeting for P-TA Tuesday, Feb. 8, at 2 p.m. The board meeting will be held in the school cafeteria.

Regular session of the P-TA will be held in school cafeteria Friday, Feb. 11, at 7:30 p.m.

Program for the day, under direction of Ray Kinnison, will be a presentation of the choirs of grades one, two and three. All parents and interested persons are urged to be present.

Oltonites Attend Inaugural

Two young persons from the city were present and participated in the Inaugural Parade Jan. 20 in Washington D.C.

Miss Chesna Dickenson, white horse rider for Hardin-Simmons University Cowboy Band, went overland to the capitol for the band's appearance in the famed parade.

Traveling via chartered bus, the famous western style band left Abilene Sunday for the Thursday performance. Accompanying them was a van carrying the coeds who ride the equally famous Six White Horses and a couple of carloads of parents.

The horses had left two days earlier, allowing time to reach pre-arranged stables in Virginia and time to exercise the mounts. Since they were to appear before a new president and a television audience estimated at more than 100 million, they needed to be rested and look sharp.

The colorful band made its fifth appearance in the Inaugural Parade, but the invitation was not easily obtained. Months of preparatory work was involved in being chosen as the one band to represent the State of Texas. The one float representing Texas was from San Antonio.

Once the Band was invited to participate, still further difficulty was encountered in presenting the Six Flags of Texas carried by the white horse riders. One of the regulations of the inaugural parade is that no one is allowed to carry the national flag without official approval of the inaugural committee. The Cowboy band had to apply for special permission to carry Old Glory.

Because of the passing of the U.S. flag the president stood, smiling as the band passed the reviewing stand.

In an effort to be present for this 'once in a lifetime opportunity' Bryan Sullivan flew to Washington Jan. 19. Met by the Hardin-Simmons aggregation, and because of the great amount of work to be done behind the scenes he was pressed into service, moving trailers, helping with arrangements and being generally helpful.

Sullivan stated that the Capitol grounds were covered with snow and the scene was beautiful. The temperature was about 30 degrees but it was sunny.

"Our group was working o to help assemble the parade about two blocks from the President, but I felt that I got a better view of the parade this way, because I saw all the floats and bands from close range. And I was glad to be in that position.

"It was amazing all that was done for crowd control. There was a trailer house command post near us, with communication systems, army personnel and others. They really knew what was going on at all times. There were mounted park patrolmen, motorcycle policemen, patrol cars and plainclothesmen on all sides.

"I was certainly impressed with all the security precautions. We were told there were 1400 soldiers, stationed nine feet apart on both sides of the street. A service person served as parade marshall for each unit of the parade as it formed, and moved along with it.

"We were just over the hill and about a block or so away from the helicopter landing pad. We got to see some notable people and it was a real thrill just being there and seeing all of it happening."

Sullivan and Miss Dickenson flew home that day arriving in Lubbock about midnight after a long day that had begun about 4 a.m.

'Noah's Ark' To Olton

Beginning Sunday, Feb. 6, Main Street Church of Christ is providing a program for all children between the ages of four years through the fourth grade at a new location.

Children who ride the JOY buses and all others who wish to attend the special services will arrive at the Main Street Church building at 5:45 p.m. each Sunday. After getting a drink of water there they will board the buses and be taken safely across the street to the place originally occupied by Northside Gift Shop.

Called Noah's Ark, each program will include prayer, singing and Bible stories. Visual aids and puppets will be used. Directors are Rex Boyles and Charles Massie. The service will conclude at 6:45 p.m.

Men of the Church have painted and repaired the inside of "Noah's Ark". Tuesday at the workday of Women's Bible Class, some 25 women met at 10 a.m. and remained throughout the day. They placed the Bus Visuals in systematic order and made posters for the ark. A covered dish luncheon was served.

Police Kept Busy

Chief of Police Don Hatley received a report Friday from Basil Sherman that ugly words had been painted on the wall of mini-storage buildings at 9th Street and Avenue H.

Investigation disclosed that the same words had been painted on a window o on north Main Street. With William Hammon, Hatley talked with a local youth who admitted to the offense on Main Street but denied knowing anything about the painting on the storage building.

The case is still open.

Officer Hammon received a CB call late Thursday that someone was attempting to break into the Gene Wilson home. Arriving there, he found no one and talked with Jefferson Powell who lives in a mobile home next door to the Wilson house.

Powell reported that he had made the call after seeing a boy run from the house.

Investigati n continues in reported theft of pool tables at Trails Inn. Officer Hammon went to the restaurant where he was told that school aged boys had broken into the coin boxes while playing pool.

Officers Hammon and Hatley went to school Monday to question boys who were reported to have been in the arcade. Officers have the names of 22 boys. The case is still open.

Adrian Garza appeared Tuesday before City Judge Audie Thomas and pleaded quilty of possession of marijuana. He was fined $200 and court costs.

County Commissioner A.J. Spain reported that a window on a maintainer had been broken while it was parked at the County barn.

Investigating, Chief of Police Hatley discovered the glass in the left door had been broken with the glass falling inside the maintainer. The break, Hatley believes, occurred because the window had been shot although no lead was found inside the maintainer.

The case is still under investigation.

Hatley investigated a wreck Friday afternoon which occurred at 6th and Main.

Fourteen-year-old Christie Francies was the driver of a 1976 Chevrolet pickup which struck the rear of a 1975 Ford stopped at 6th and Main Street.

Mrs. Velma Young was the driver of the automobile which received damages estimated at $175.

Approximately $310 damages were reported to the front of the pickup which belonged to Landon Smith.

Officer Hammon investigated a two-car accident Wednesday night which occurred on Highway 70. Adrian Garza, traveling west, was given a ticket for failure to yield right of way when he pulled into the path of an approaching car.

Garza stopped and then turned left at the Dairy Queen restaurant when he failed to see the east bound car driven by Ealand Upchurch.

That's A Pig

By Rex Boyles

Twas the night before the stock show and all through the house (which was really a stock barn) all of the creatures were stirring, even a mouse. The animals were placed in their pens with care in hopes that the blue ribbons soon would be there. The owners were nestled all snug in their beds, but visions of pork chops, roast beef, sausage, steaks, ham, ribs and bacon danced in my head. (Take a quick glance through the paper and you will have some of the visions.)

The pig show is especially interesting, especially when you are aware of all the preparation. Centuries ago, when I was in 4-H, I had some pigs for show. We would take them to the show, weigh them in, and then spend a half hour scrubbing a years worth of mud and crud. We would then spend the rest of the day, trying to keep them clean for the show and the pictures. But all the cleaning and powdering was temporary, for back home, as soon as they were out of the trailer, they were wallowing in the slop. All that work and pampering erased in one good slosh.

That is a pig. No matter how you "fix him up" he is still a pig. If you will take close notice, you will see that a pig cannot look up. He cannot see above the pig sty. All he can see is slop and mire. He will never see above the pig sty and there he will stay.

Sometimes aren't we the same way? We wallow in the slop of the world, our eyes full of self, looking for satisfaction. We try and make things better by "fixing up" the outside, and yet all the time we are still struggling with our guilts, our fears, and our sins. We are still focused in on the problem. We get so obsessed with out self, following our desires . . . we forget to look up.

Thank God we are not like pigs. We can look up. We can see above our sty. By faith we can see Him, who is able to save us to the uttermost, if we will draw near to Him. In those times when you see the world, when you see yourself, look up . . . Rex

Everything But The Kitchen Sink

BY MOZELLE TROTTER

"Aloha, you all!" - our goodbye from the beautiful Hawaii!

This country gal succumbed as all others have. For one who vowed never to trust those "flying machines," the flight was thrilling. Sufficiently brain washing myself that I would not be air sick, even the prolonged need to "fasten your seat belts" failed to mar the adventure.

My brain wash job about the safety and pleasures of air travel worked so well I can honestly say that I wasn't panicky even when we had to deplane from our scheduled home bound flight. A malfunctioning hydraulic valve gave us an extra 24 hours, courtesy of the air lines.

Did you know that one of the most beautiful sights is pre-dawn discovery, far below, of a lighted California city after hours of dark nothingness when you're flying over the mighty Pacific? It's a wondrous view!

Fortunate enough to have a window seat for all our air journey, I was thrilled to identify the land marks and recognize Albuuerque, N.M. before the announcement came from our captain. I was frustrated though, after riding with my head jammed against the window, that I had not recognized Olton, Hart, Springlake, Hereford and Friona when I heard fellow passengers saying they had.

Living 16 floors up with my own balcony overlooking beautiful Honolulu and Waikiki Beach was thrilling! Pampered living, it was, having a maid turn back my bed each evening and placing a fresh, pretty orchid on my pillow as a "good night" greeting. All week I hoarded the little blossoms to bring them home and then learned that was a "no, no."

Pineapple served at almost every meal did not "burn out" this glutton! The fruit was so lucious I not only devoured every bite placed at my plate but also grazed over all left by those in our party. (Ann Landers says it's okay).

Home with all its clutter and mess was a beautiful sight when the thrilling visit was over. The balmy temperatures were marvelous to this cold-natured Texas Okie. And the island's beautiful was barely glimpsed. I'll have to go back someday! Besides, I didn't learn to hula!

Fetch & Carry Aide

Recipes for foods reflecting the Spanish and Indian traditions of northen New Mexico are shared this week by Mrs. Gene Reynolds.

Ruby has adapted the Mexican-Indian recipes so they may be prepared West Texas style. The posoli corn may be bought in the frozen food departments of grocery stores in the Northern New Mexico area where the Reynoldses lived for four years. As the corn cooks, the kernels pop open, Ruby says.

The Reynoldses moved to Olton in 1956 and lived here until 1972 when they moved to Pojoaque, N.M. North of Santa Fe, the land they bought was part of a Spanish land grant which had belonged to the same family through the generations. They had built seven homes on the land when they decided to return to the West Texas "town of wonderful people."

Old lumber, salvaged from the old Almeda Theatre in downtown Olton and two other old buildings, was used in the construction of the Reynoldses' new home which was family built.

With the help of their son, Lonnie, Gene built the house with Ruby in charge of "fetching and carrying." Patterned after the houses of Northern New Mexico, the house is truly the product of Gene's creativity, even to the planning of the kitchen, Ruby says.

Countless hours of labor went into the finish work of the cabinets which handsomely deny the fact they are merely plywood, two by fours and two by sixes. Many hours also went into laying the bricks which form the floor throughout the house.

Ruby, a beautician, and Gene are busy now in getting a beauty shop readied so that Ruby can "go back to work." What free time she finds left is usually spent in sewing.

The Reynoldses are parents of three children. The older two, Randy and Marty, are graduates of Olton High School. Lonnie is a senior at OHS.

Randy is a first lieutenant stationed at Fort Greeley, Alaska. A helicopter pilot, he is in search and rescue.

Marty is Mrs. Robert Coleman of Roswell, N.M. and the mother of red-haired, two-months-old Alex.

Architecture and art are fields of study which Lonnie would like to pursue when he graduates. While living in New Mexico, he learned silver smithing and territorial arts.

The meeting was held in the Sheraton-Fort Worth Hotel. Exhibits in the Grand Ballroom through both days were geared to the interests of Young Homemakers.

Sessions Friday began at 9 a.m. Highlight of the day, and possibly of the convention was an address given by Dr. Thomas J. Shipp, pastor of Lover's Lane United Methodist Church, Dallas.

Speaking to the subject "Life is What you Make It," stressed the importance of the mother's role in the home. He told the group assembled that they were strengthened by 'the giving side of love.' In proving his formula for family life in the home he cautioned young mothers "Whatever you do in life is a risk, or a gamble . . . but he admonished them to bet on the best in relationships; bet on the best, which is honesty with yourself and with your mate; be consistent in everything in your marriage and with your children." Dr. Shipp told the sad story of a little boy who had grown up without a home and all of the hardships he endured thereby. He concluded by saying "I am that boy."

A second outstanding speaker presented was Dr. Genevieve Blair, director of child education at Lewis University, Bollingbrook, Ill. She gave a comical emphasis to "A Child's Eye View of the World."

PIONEER® BRAND

One Horse of a Hybrid

for Lamb county

If you ever cowboyed for a living, you had one horse you liked best. It may not have been the prettiest or fastest but it rode easy and got the work done no matter what.

Pioneer brand 3306 is that kind of corn hybrid for a lot of farmers in this area. It's the hybrid that brought corn back to this country ten years ago and there is nothing to beat it yet for good steady production no matter the weather, insects, or disease.

NO HEAD SMUT.

In the big Texas Ag Extension Service Head Smut Test west of Dimmitt last year, they compared everything that would sprout to 3306. This included the new glamour girls that look so good . . . until it gets a little dry or a little wet or the wind blows. 3306 showed no head smut. It was still standing straight up with ears firmly attached when the big judge — the combine — got there.

TAKES STRESS IN ITS STRIDE.

3306 is the most dependable corn hybrid ever grown on the High Plains. It can adjust to almost any kind of stress . . . over planting, drought, extreme heat, early freeze, high winds, bugs, disease . . . you name it and 3306 has been there and produced a good corn crop.

If you're not farming in a greenhouse, tell your Pioneer dealer to save you some 3306.

If you're farming big acreage, 3306 is the perfect hybrid to use with Pioneer brand 3780 and 3195 in a STAGGERED MATURITY planting program. This new Pioneer program allows you to:

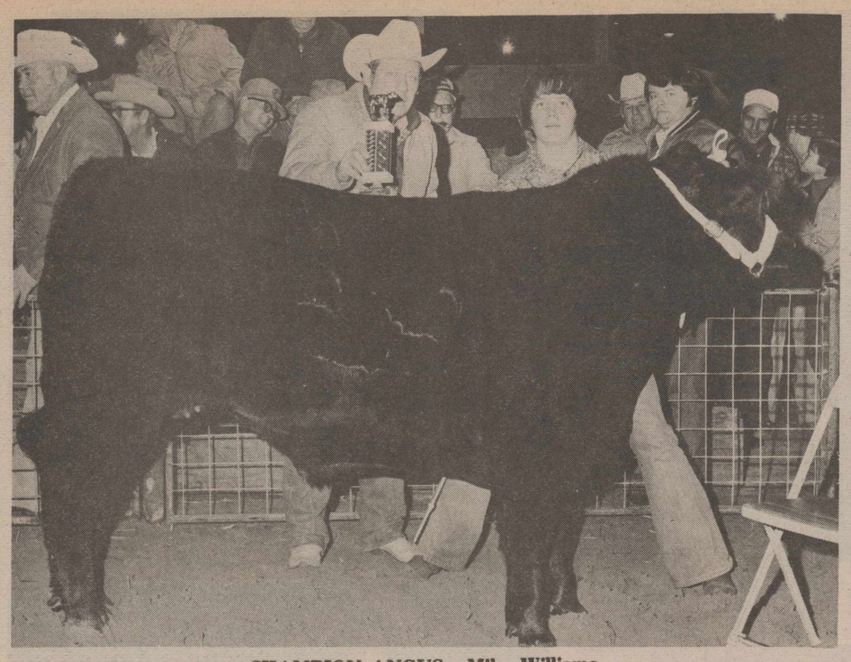

Hedge against weather problems
Use water, labor and machinery more efficiently
Harvest each variety at the optimum time

Your Pioneer dealer has a brochure which gives you the whole STAGGERED MATURITY story. Talk to him right away.

you can BANK on it!

By Kenneth Burgess
Olton State Bank

Although it will undoubtedly be a long time before we throw away our check books, the first steps in that direction have already been firmly taken — primarily through development of EFTS, Electronic Funds Transfer Systems, which, most simply stated, is a process for transferring money electronically from one place to another, whether from one bank to another or from one account to another.

Developers of the systems are moving slowly but surely to increase the use of EFTS. They are moving slowly because of the insistence on absolute security in the electronic transfer process . . . a plateau not yet achieved. They are moving surely because of the possibilities of substantial savings for all of us.

One of the nation's top banking executives has estimated that by 1983 some 700 million dollars will be saved by the use of EFTS. His estimates are based on the idea that the number of electronic transfer terminals now used in many of the retail stores in larger cities will be increased by more than 400 percent during the next seven years. With that rate of increase, it's something we'll be hearing a whole lot more about.

"The more you know about our business, the more we can help you!"
