Bombs set off by IRA kill four, wound 12

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA guerrillas set off bombs Friday at a fishing contest and on a rural road that killed four people and wounded 12, officials reported.

They said two off-duty British soldiers were killed and 11 people were injured when a bomb planted in the soldiers' car exploded as about 400 anglers were leaving from the weigh-in at the end of a five-day fishing competition.

The soldiers, who had been given time off to take part in the contest, were killed instantly when the device blew up as they started the engine, and parts of their shattered car slashed into the crowd.

In the other attack, two policemen were killed and a third was wounded when a mine blew up under their patrol car, with the Irish Republican Army saying it was in revenge for the death of an IRA hunger strike three years ago.

Police said the soldiers' car was in a parking at the Lakeland Forum leisure center in Enniskillen 10 miles north of the Irish border and exploded as the anglers, most of whom were Britons, were returning to their cars.

Two other soldiers were seriously wounded, with one losing both legs, but the nine other victims were released after treatment, hospital officials said.

In statements to news organizations, the outlawed IRA claimed responsibility for both blasts and said, "Our organization...will attack more crown forces unless the British people realize that the path to peace is the path of withdrawal from Northern Ireland."

The mine that destroyed the police vehicle also was near the border with the Irish Republic, but about 40 miles from the Enniskillen sports complex.

In London, Britain's secretary for Northern Ireland, James Prior, called the attacks "barbaric — they are an assault on the very heart of society."

The fishing competition, organized by the British ferry company Sealink, was an effort by tourist authorities to attract visitors to the lake district in County Fermanagh.

Although most of the anglers were Britons, about 50 foreigners also entered the competition, including several from West Germany, Holland and the United States.

Prizes were to have been presented Friday night, and the ceremony was rescheduled for today despite the tragedy.

"The competition will be held next year, terrorists or no bloody terrorists," said Bertie Kerr, the chairman of the Fermanagh Council's amenities committee.

"The bomb went off in the middle of everybody as they were returning to the car park," Press Association, the British domestic news agency, quoted an unidentified photographer as saying. "There was a fire and a lot of wreckage."

Authorities said the 500-pound mine that killed the policemen was detonated by guerrillas watching from a hillside as the armored patrol car drove by near the town of Camlough in south Armagh, an area known by British troopers as "bandit country."

Witnesses supply alibi for Foote

By LARRY BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Witnesses provided Johnny Foote with an alibi as testimony ended Friday in his murder trial in an Ector County district court.

Foote's cousin and a friend testified they had been with the 22-year-old defendant during the time 65-year-old Velma Nesset was reportedly stabbed to death and left to die April 19, 1982, in a culvert near Permian Mall where she and Foote worked.

Sally Smith Hollingsworth, who worked as a cleaning woman with Ms. Nesset, told the jury in the 244th District Court that she had been with Foote from 4:45 to 7 a.m. The murder is alleged to have been committed during this time period.

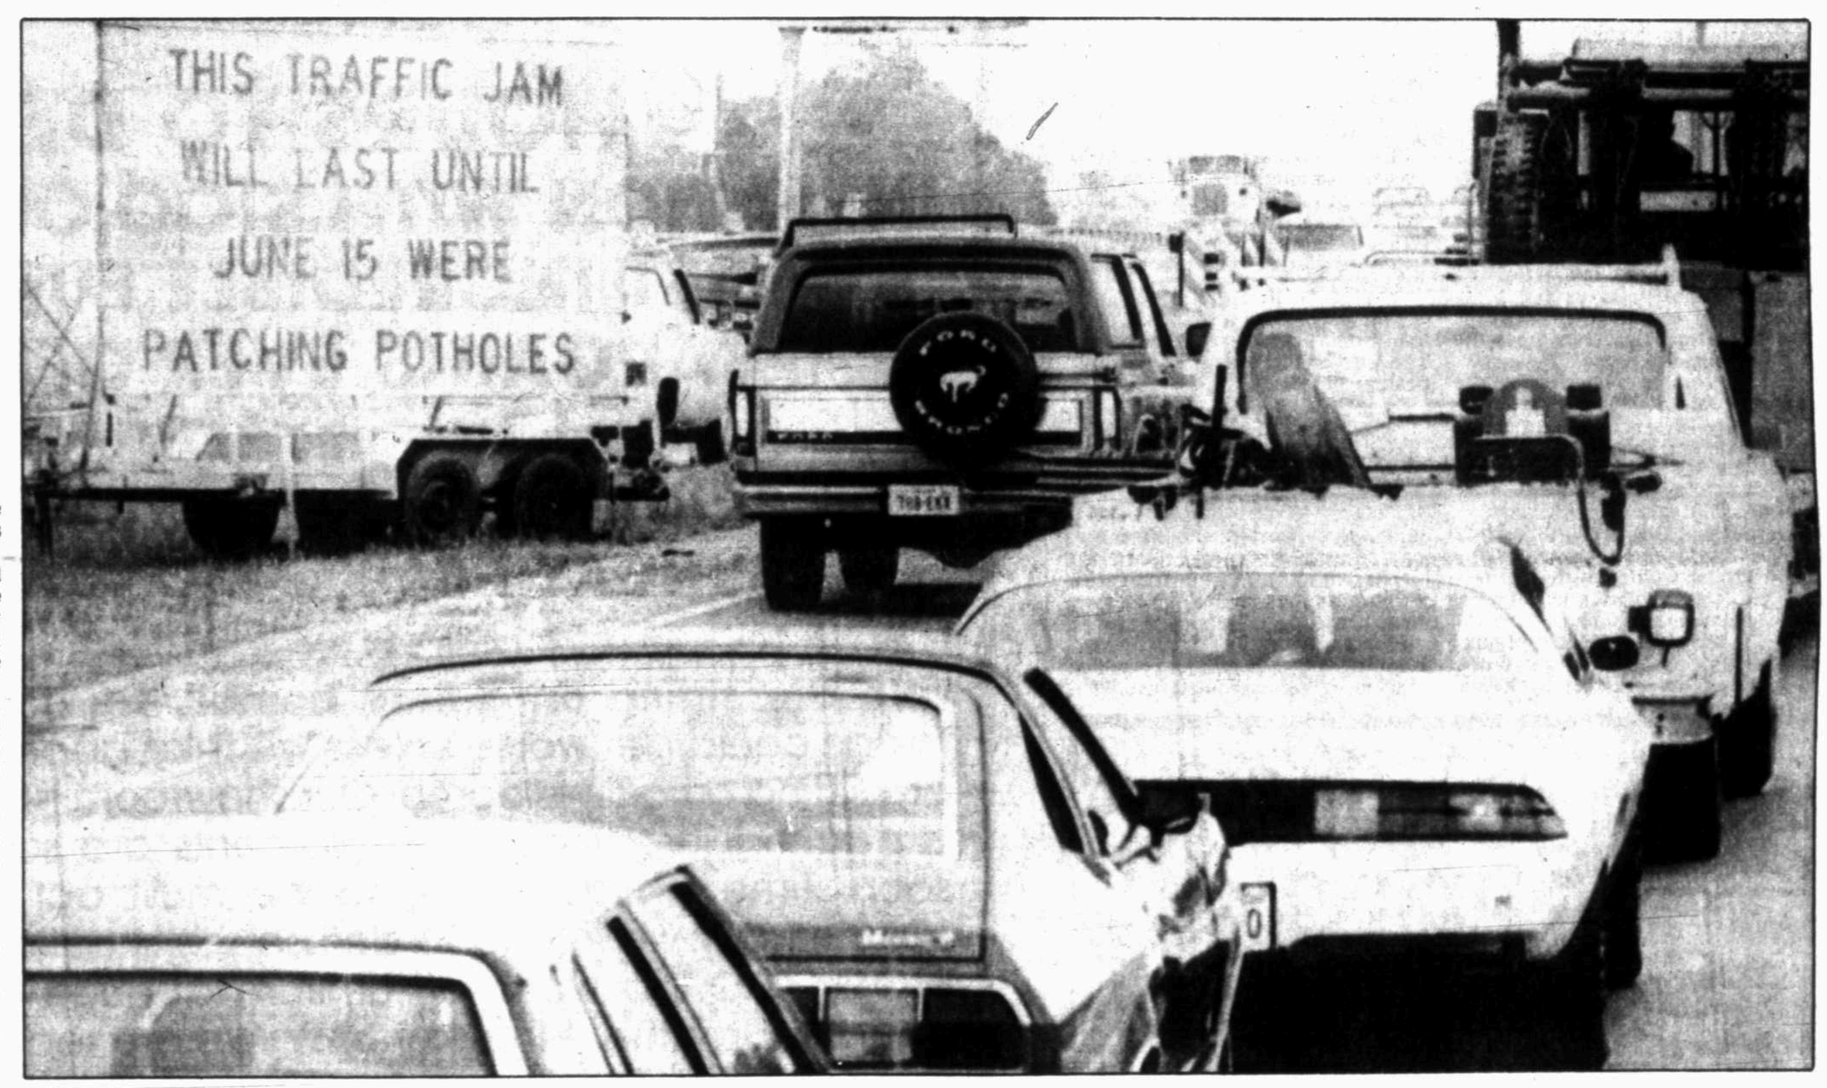

Prosecutor David Rosado referred to a statement Ms. Hollingsworth had given which did not include any mention of cleaning floors with Foote as she testified to Friday. "Why did you wait until today to tell anyone about it?" he asked.

She explained detectives had not asked her specifically about Foote during their interviews and maintained the defendant had been with her that day until 7 a.m.

Foote signed a confession 18 months after the killing. But the defense has attempted to discredit the validity of the statement, charging police intimidated the defendant, who doctors testified has brain damage.

Ms. Hollingsworth also described a short, dark-haired man she saw walking near the mall at 4:30 a.m. "That he was out there walking was what struck me as kind of odd," she said.

Craddick: Tax hike won't add much to coffers

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A special session being planned by Gov. Mark White to raise the gasoline tax to cover additional costs of education and highway programs might cost Midlanders more in the long run, according to State Rep. Tom Craddick, who represents Midland in his 76th District.

In reviewing recommendations for uses of a 5 cent gas tax hike, Craddick has discovered some of the suggestions wouldn't add any more money to what already is in the coffer for highway projects and the educational upgrading might be placed on the back of the Midland school district.

White has proposed the gasoline tax go from 5 cents a gallon to 10 cents, which would bring in an additional $351 million, or about $70 million for each penny. Of that nickel increase, the governor wants one cent dedicated to education and the rest to State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Another suggestion has been to change the gasoline tax to a 10 percent surcharge.

BUT THAT will be opposed statewide by petroleum marketers, who also have their own proposal, said Jack Walcher of Midland. "We all recognize the need for a larger state tax; we know it's going to go to the education system and the highway system. But we think it might be a little excessive."

Craddick said that State Comptroller Bob Bullock informed the House Appropriations Committee recently the state budget for the next biennium was going to be $2.5 billion in the hole by the time the next session convenes in January.

This was based on the assumptions, according to a report, that "if the Texas Legislature enacts appropriations for each year of the 1986-87 biennium that represent no growth and no inflation from the 1985 level of services, but implement current law with regard to the Foundation School Program and the Highway Cost Index and...

"If the State Comptroller's estimate of major fund revenues provides an increase of 9 percent biennium to biennium as it did for 1984-85, then the shortfall would be $570 million."

The report also shows that if appropriations grow and reflect an inflation rate of 4 percent a year and a population growth of 1.6 percent each year, then the budget shortfall would be $2.18 billion.

"WE'RE LOOKING at a $2 billion shortfall in the next session with no new programs put into effect," said Craddick.

To help lessen that shortfall White has proposed the nickel tax.

For the four cents to realize some good in the State Highway Department, the rules will have to be changed. Craddick said under current regulations, the revenue generated from the four cents would be trading out for money coming from the General Fund. "You won't end up with any additional money," he said.

House Bill 3 must be changed to allow the Highway Department to continue receiving its allotment through the General Fund and the additional monies from the gasoline tax hike. "You've got to have both, or you get nothing," said Craddick.

Mondale challenges Hart to renege support for weapons build-down

The Associated Press

Walter F. Mondale, accusing Gary Hart of talking a better fight than he actually fights on arms control and the environment, challenged the Colorado senator on Friday to repudiate his support for the nuclear weapons build-down proposal.

Hart, meanwhile, continued to hammer at Mondale's labor connection as the two leading candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination aimed their tit-for-tat campaigns at New Jersey voters.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson was on the other coast, slogging through the horse stables at Hollywood Park in Los Angeles and decrying a racing industry he said is "built on the shoulders" of underpaid and maltreated exercise boys and grooms who live in the stable areas.

New Jersey and California are the most populous of the five states holding primaries June 5 to allocate the last batch of popularly elected delegates before the Democrats' July national convention.

Mondale, back on the trail after a couple of days rest in Washington, renewed his long-standing argument that Hart has built an unsteady and inconsistent Senate record, particularly on the nuclear freeze.

"I call on Gary Hart today to take his name off that build-down proposal as a co-sponsor...and join with me and with the voters of New Jersey in coming out for a position that is absolutely committed."

Mondale said the nuclear build-down — where two old weapons would be scrapped for every new one built — is "at war with the freeze" and has the support of the Reagan administration.

The former vice president, campaigning in a state where toxic waste is a major issue, also gigged Hart on the environment — saying the senator failed to vote on the "superfund" bill to clean up toxic waste dumps.

"He didn't attend one hearing," said Mondale. "He was missing and didn't vote on the bill when it passed."

Tornado warnings issued for two area counties

From Staff Reports

Although no tornadoes or funnel clouds were spotted in the Midland-Odessa area during Friday's storms, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport issued warnings for Gaines and Dawson counties, and also for Lea County, N.M., Friday afternoon.

The Lea County warning was issued about noon after a tornado and numerous funnel clouds were confirmed by Civil Defense teams near Knowles. The warning was later lifted and no damage was reported as the storms moved slowly eastward out of the area.

Gaines County was under a warning until 3 p.m. after two tornadoes were confirmed 15 miles northeast of Seminole about 1 p.m. They moved out of the area without any reported damage.

The Dawson County warning was lifted at 4:20 p.m. after a possible tornado was reported by the sheriff's department 10 miles west of Lamesa.

A funnel cloud was reported by the public about 25 miles north of Big Spring, but no warning was issued.

The difference between tornadoes and funnels, according to the NWS, is that a tornado is a funnel that touches the ground, while a

Krueger says he won't seek recount of primary votes

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Bob Krueger, who finished a very close third in that race, said Friday he won't seek a recount of the 1.46 million votes cast in the May 5 primary.

In one of the closest elections in Texas history, Krueger finished 1,287 votes behind state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, who in turn finished 273 votes behind U.S. Rep. Kent Hance. Hance and Doggett will meet in a June 2 runoff.

Krueger earlier asked officials to recheck machine and computer vote tabulations, but Friday ruled out a statewide recount and any bid to move him into second place.

"I just don't think those votes were cast on election day," Krueger said.

The former congressman from New Braunfels said he would work for the Democratic nominee in November "although it is too early at this time to know whether I will endorse another candidate in the runoff."

Krueger told the crowded Capitol news conference that a number of his supporters urged him to ask for a recount of the 185 counties that used paper ballots and make up 36 percent of the vote. "Having worked hard, they naturally wanted to be sure that the totals were accurate and that we would not look back in later years and conclude that, had we asked for a recount, we might have won."

STATE

"I have weighed their views, have prayed and thought long about what to do and have decided not to seek a recount of the paper ballots," Krueger said, his voice trembling slightly.

"I can only say that no one would want more than I to find the approximately 1,000 votes to put me into the runoff, but I just don't think those votes were cast on election day."

The final official figures of the May election, released Friday by the State Democratic Excutive Committee, showed:

— Kent Hance 456,446.
— Lloyd Doggett 456,173.
— Krueger 454,886.

In answering questions, Krueger said he felt "comfortable" about his decision, although disappointed.

"I will, in times ahead, look for other opportunities to address issues of Central America and Mideast policy, of energy and educational policy — and the ways of balancing out social needs with our financial resources," he said.

"But for now, those are questions for the candidates, and for the first time in a year and a half, I'm not a candidate."

Krueger, who was accompanied by his wife Kathleen, said his immediate plans would be to close out his campaign organization and begin working on his campaign debt — "which is in the six figures."

Krueger, whose has ranch and real estate holdings, said he may have $500,000 of his own money in the debt.

"That's all right. I made that decision. I may have to eat that," he said.

Gramm: Spending, deficits key issues

Phil Gramm

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican candidate Phil Gramm said Friday the U.S. Senate campaign should focus less on amnesty for illegal aliens and more on the key issues — federal government spending and the budget deficit.

Democrat Kent Hance created a "false distinction" between himself and Democrats Lloyd Doggett and Bob Krueger by trumpeting his opposition to amnesty, Gramm charged.

He said neither Doggett, who's in a June 2 runoff with Hance, nor third-place finisher Krueger ever favored blanket amnesty for aliens. And opposing amnesty doesn't solve the illegal immigration dilemma, Gramm said.

"I'm opposed to blanket amnesty. So was Bob Krueger. As far as I know, so is Lloyd Doggett. So is Kent Hance. So what? That doesn't solve the real problem," Gramm said.

Gramm's solution includes more money for the Border Patrol, enforcing current law, allowing "guest worker" status for some aliens and expanding trade so "goods and services can cross the border instead of people."

But the former college economics professor said he believes the candidates should start talking more about taxes and spending.

"Moving the debate back to this issue is moving the campaign back to reality," he said.

Gramm said Doggett's proposal to increase taxes on the wealthy and corporations would neither eliminate the budget deficit nor keep the economic recovery going.

Taxing all earned income of taxpayers making $75,000 and more "would cut the deficit by one-tenth and fund the federal government for about seven days," he said.

Doubling the corporate income tax, Gramm said, would reduce the deficit by one-third while also stopping the economic recovery in its tracks. "It would wreak havoc on the recovery.

"Lloyd Doggett wants to soak the rich. That's good political rhetoric, but not a good solution," Gramm said.

Despite campaign advertisements saying he opposes tax increases, Hance has voted for higher taxes and against some spending cuts, Gramm charged.

In votes affecting the 1984 fiscal year, Gramm said, Hance voted for $73 billion in new taxes which were included in the budget resolution and for a $6 billion tax increase which would have been part of a limit on the third year of the federal income tax cut. He said Hance voted against eliminating a $6 billion tax hike and replacing it with $12 billion in spending cuts.

"Congressman Hance says he opposes tax increases when in reality he voted twice for raising taxes and once against cutting spending. Hance's (campaign) position is not totally consistent with his record," Gramm said.

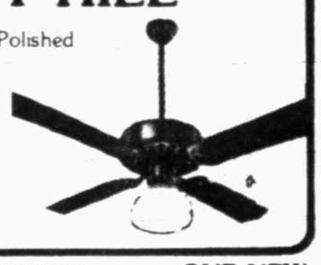

"Our problem is a spending problem, not a (tax) revenue problem. The key is to control spending," Gramm added.

Gramm said he supports several measures to keep federal spending under control, with a constitutional requirement for a balanced budget at the top of the list.

He also supports a modified federal spending freeze, reduced defense spending, requiring the Pentagon to get competitive bids on more projects, requiring defense contractors to post bonds that would be forfeited if they failed to produce weapons at cost and one time.

France starts year of remembrance of war victory

PARIS (AP) — France has started a special year of remembrance of the momentous events that brought down Adolf Hitler's Third Reich in World War II, and of the struggle against another German invasion in World War I.

The highlight will be the 40th anniversary of the D-Day landings June 6, to be attended by President Reagan, Queen Elizabeth II, and the heads of state and government of other Allied nations.

But the government of President Francois Mitterrand, a distinguished French Resistance worker during the Nazi occupation of France, has laid down a program to honor many other heros.

Throughout the national school system, teachers will use the commemorations to give new "awareness" of those now-distant years to the current generation, a primary objective in the government's planning.

France will recall major Resistance battles, the overshadowed Allied invasion of southern France, the liberation of Paris, the martyrs of German massacres — and the turning back of the German invasion 70 years ago on the Marne River near Paris.

JEAN LAURAIN, secretary of state for veterans, has said the year will conclude with one ceremony in Paris May 8, 1985, which will mark "not only the end of the war, but the beginning of the era of peace," and to which "all participants in World War II will be invited."

No invitations have been issued to German, Italian or other Axis nations for this year's events.

The nation has already remembered, quietly, the sacrifice of Pierre Brossolette, a pioneer member of the Resistance who committed suicide in April 1942, after being captured by the Germans, to ensure he would not talk under torture.

In 87 schools named after him, teachers held special classes to make their pupils aware of his heroism.

ON THE EVE of May 8, 1985, Paris will honor the three fighting leaders of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French movement, Marshals Philippe Leclerc de Hauteclocque, Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, and Alphonse Juin, and thousands of Resistance workers shot at the Mount Valerian fortress west of the city.

May 8 or VE-Day, the anniversary of victory in Europe, will see traditional ceremonies at the Tomb of the Unknown Solider at the Arc de Triomphe.

Two major 1944 battles of the Resistance, and a German massacre, will serve as reminders of the fight at home. A band of 465 fighters held the Glieres Plateau in the French Alps from Jan. 31 to March 26, 1944, against the might of the German Wehrmacht. It took several battalions backed by aircraft and mountain artillery to subdue the French, killing some 400.

As many as 30,000 Germans fought 3,000 French fighters in the central Vercors Mountain, killing 2,000 and massacring a village in reprisal. De Lattre de Tassigny called the Vercors battle one of the key operations which "hastened the hour of deliverance" from the Nazi occupation.

WITHOUT THAT battle, he said, it would have taken the French and Americans "weeks, not days" to advance from landing zones in the Riviera in southern France to the Rhone Valley and Grenoble.

The Allies landed in southern France Aug. 15, 1944, in a operation now overshadowed by the memories of D-Day at Normandy. The government is trying to redress the balance, and particularly to honor this Aug. 15 the important role of soliders from the now-independent French African colonies.

The Normandy landings inspired the Resistance to increase operations around the nation, but hideous reprisals followed.

On June 8, resistance groups captured the town of Tulle, killing 40 Germans. The next day it was recaptured by the feared SS Das Reich Division. Officers chose 99 Frenchmen at random and they were hanged from balconies or trees.

THE NEXT DAY, the division swept into the village of Oradour-sur-Glane and massacred at least 642 people. The village men were herded into barns, machine-gunned and the bodies burned.

Forced into a church, 241 women and 202 children died when it was set afire and machine-gunned. The village was then destroyed.

Its ruins remain as a permanent memorial.

Lebanese Red Cross hurt by war

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese Red Cross, whose volunteers have aided thousands of families through nine years of civil war, has itself fallen victim itself to the hostilies.

A third of its 75 ambulances have been stolen, some by militias in need of frontline transport.

The number of people seeking medical care or social services has skyrocketed as devastating artillery battles continue.

At the same time the local Red Cross, which is accredited by the International Committee of the Red Cross in Geneva, Switzerland, is running out of funds and being hampered by the war in raising them.

"We can't reach the usual donors at schools, offices and factories," said Salwa Saeed, the local Red Cross press officer, explaining that many are shut down or in battle areas that can't safely be reached.

"Even the telephones do not work," she added in an interview. "And we are afraid to send our young people to the streets to solicit donations."

Mrs. Saeed said that the Lebanese Red Cross will have to halve its operations in 1984 if an emergency fund drive, publicized by the mass media here, does not succeed.

LEBANON ALSO has chapters of the Red Crescent Society, the Moslem equivalent of the Red Cross. The chapters here are affiliated with the government-funded civil defense, various militias and some Moslem groups, such as the Moslem Boy Scouts. Officials, who declined to be identified, said that the Red Crescent here has not had fund-raising problems because it does not rely on public donations.

The Lebanese Red Cross, with both Christian and Moslem members, was founded some 40 years ago by a group of Lebanese women. Initially a first aid service, it has expanded to train nurses and ambulance teams, run a sewing workshop, operate a health care and social service center and provide in-home hygiene instruction.

It's emblem — the red cross on a white field — is often the first seen at any disaster site.

The Lebanese Red Cross counts on donations to cover more than half of its $1.7 million annual operating budget of 9 million Lebanese pounds ($1.7 million). The rest, or about 4 million pounds ($750,000), comes from member contributions and grants from the Lebanese government and the Lebanese army, which has made the local Red Cross an auxiliary of the army medical corps.

Khadiga Anouti, 45, says that her husband, Mohammed, could not have had heart surgery if it had not been for the Lebanese Red Cross' financial help and the donation of all the blood needed before and during the operation.

"May God give to them as they gave to us," Mrs. Anouti said.

The agency has about 150 salaried workers who handle administrative duties and run the agency's blood bank and pharmacy.

BUT MOST OF its programs are conducted by about 2,000 volunteers, many of them young people.

"I volunteered because I can serve the society in addition to learning new things," said Fayza Alwan, a woman in her mid-20s who showed up at the headquarters in west Beirut recently to volunteer as a secretary. "The tragedies of war have made me more determined to join."

What criticism there has been of the Lebanese Red Cross has come from the militiamen. Charging that the agency isn't providing adequate ambulance service along the warfronts, the militias have "borrowed" more than 25 ambulances since fighting was renewed last February.

Some of the vehicles, driven by fighters, carry wounded men to hospitals. Others, also driven by fighters, ferry troops to hot spots.

Marylis Ezzedine, a Red Cross official whose mother and grandmother proceeded her as volunteers, defends the agency.

"There isn't any reasonable first aider who is going to go to the frontline during shelling," she says. "A dead first aider cannot help a wounded person."

Aware of the problem, the Red Cross offered to train fighters in first aid, Mrs. Ezzedine said. One group of fighters arrived for lessons "driving one of our stolen ambulances," she added.

About 675 of the volunteers are trained in emergency first aid work. Since the civil war broke out in 1975, five have been killed while trying to help others. Several have been wounded.

The National Weather Service forecasts rain for today for parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

WEATHER

funnel is a potential tornado that juts out of a cloud but doesn't touch down.

The showers brought another 0.23 of an inch of rain to the NWS's weather gauge, bringing the monthly total up to 3.14 inches and the yearly to 3.73 inches.

The weekend forecast, meanwhile, calls for partly cloudy skies and less than a 20 percent chance of isolated rain. Winds will be out of the north, northwest at 10 to 20 mph.

High temperatures are expected to be in the mid-80s, with lows in the upper 50s. High on Friday was 78 degrees and the overnight low was 62.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms Friday brought welcome relief to residents of south Texas, some of whom had not seen rain for almost two months, while cooler temperatures helped slow the melt of a near-record snowpack in the Rockies.

Runoff from the spring snowmelt eased slightly across the Rockies, but the weather service said many rivers are still near or above flood stage and will likely stay high for the next few days.

Sunny to partly cloudy skies dominated the weather across much of the rest of the country, although cloudy skies and scattered showers prevailed from southeast Colorado, across northeast Nebraska and southern lower Michigan into western Pennsylvania and in coastal sections of Washington and Oregon. Cloudy skies were the rule from New York state to eastern Virginia.

Today's weather forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from Texas and the lower Mississippi Valley across the mid-Mississippi Valley to the Ohio Valley and much of the Great Lakes. Showers were also expected across the Pacific Northwest.

The rest of the nation will enjoy sunny to partly cloudy skies. High temperatures were forecast in the 50s across northern Minnesota; 80s from Virginia to Florida and westward to the lower Mississippi Valley, Texas, much of the southern Rockies and into central California; and 90s to near 100 across the southwestern deserts. The rest of the country will have afternoon highs in the 60s and 70s.

CRADDICK

The State Highway Department has pointed out it really needs a 10 cent a gallon hike — up to 15 cents — to accomplish the necessary programs. They include a new 20-year plan at a cost of $3.2 billion each year which involves improving and rehabilitating existing roads and bridges and facilities and constructing new ones.

Also suggested is an increase in the vehicle registration fee, which this year is bringing in about $276 million.

"I THINK that will have a hard time passing," Craddick said of the recommended $25 hike. "It would be the same price to register an old car as it would be for a new one."

The gas tax is preferred, he said, because the users pay an amount proportionate to how much they drive.

The percentage charge could bring in more money than the increased gasoline tax, Craddick said in reciting those supporters' reasons. "If the cost of inflation goes up, so do those revenues." If the state had imposed a 5 percent tax on gasoline back in the 1950s instead of 5 cents, the highway department wouldn't be in its scrambling situation today.

The State Comptroller's Office in a publication called "Fiscal Notes" explained the situation between 1957 and 1983, using FM 1378 in Collin County. Back then, a new $2,900 Olds 88 could cruise on the road at 60 mph, getting 16 miles per gallon out of the 30-cent-a-gallon gas. The road had just been built at a cost of $920 per mile. That same road resurfaced in 1983 cost $6,600 per mile. Gasoline prices have more than tripled and a $12,000 1983 Olsmobile Cutlass would get 29 miles per gallon. The state gas tax has remained the same.

BUT WALCHER with Eddins-Walcher Co. in Midland said petroleum marketers, also known as jobbers, are opposed to the percentage idea.

Trying to determine what is owed to the state based on a percentage is difficult. "It's much easier to multiply gallons times the tax," he said.

Jobbers supply gasoline to most of the service stations and practically all the commercial accounts, such as the city of Midland, school district and county.

Considering that not every service station charges the same price, it would be difficult to figure how much tax would be owed, according to Walcher, who favors a 3 cent a gallon hike. "It's so complicated as compared to just a straight tax."

He also suggested the legislators consider what adjoining states are charging. Walcher said several service stations in Hobbs, N.M., have closed because stations at the Texas-New Mexico state line follow the Texas prices. New Mexico, he said, has an 11-cents-per-gallon tax.

And, said Walcher, "all gasoline is not sold at the same price. Is it 10 percent of wholesale price or of the retailer's price? We buy from seven different refineries and they all have a different price."

THE ONE PENNY for education, or about another $70 million, added to revenue, said Craddick, would mean just that much less the legislators will have to look for money elsewhere next year if the proposed education package is passed. He expects the package to get approved in some form.

One proposal is to let the local school districts match the teachers' retirement fund, rather than the state. It would eliminate $206 million from the state budget, said Craddick, but it would mean MISD would be adding $360,000 to its budget.

Another proposal calls for reducing the average class size to 15 students in grades one through four. None of Midland's elementary schools has an average class that small. To meet the state requirement would take more classrooms, more teachers and more money from the local district.

Extending the school day two hours would cost another $303 million in 1985 and $748 for the 1986-87 biennium, according to figures compiled by the State Comptroller's Office. The career ladder, or teacher compensation, would add $359 million to next year's budget.

"The cost will be a major factor," Craddick said of the education proposals. "We'll see a package put together but juggled around, looking at the costs. Are we robbing Peter to pay Paul?"

WITNESSES

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell said he had met with representatives from the Ector County district attorney's office recently about the possibility confessed murderers Henry Lee Lucas or Ottis Toole had killed Ms. Nesset. "It's always possible," said Boutwell.

Responding to a question by prosecutor David Rosado, Boutwell said, "In my opinion, sir, it's possible Lucas could have done it, as it's possible 100 other people could have done it."

Four other murders of Odessans occurred during the week Ms. Nesset was slain. Toole has been charged in two. Lucas has been charged with a murder about 100 miles away in Hobbs, N.M., the day before the elderly cleaning woman was found dead.

Kenneth Wayne Kirk, Foote's cousin and roommate at the time of the slaying, said he had awakened the defendant at 4 a.m. and they had ridden together to the mall.

Kirk could not explain why Foote had failed to discover Ms. Nesset's body in the culvert. The defendant had been sent to check the culvert where the body was found, but told police he saw nothing when he checked the spot only minutes before the body was found.

Cindy Myers, another mall employee, said she had driven Foote and Kirk to work that morning and drank coffee with the two men and Ms. Hollingsworth before going off to work. Also a cleaning woman, Ms. Myers said she was a "very dear friend" of the victim.

Rosado asked Ms. Myers why her February 1984 deposition said she had not seen Foote — who remains free on a personal recognizance bond — punch his time card that morning, as she testified Friday.

"I didn't punch Johnny in," she said during the intensive cross-examination, insisting she had seen him at work during the time Ms. Nesset is supposed to have been killed.

"It's been two years," said Ms. Myers, later admitting the defense's investigator had first asked her about the time frame during which she testified she had been with Foote.

Another former employee, who found a knife in the parking lot one week after the murder, told jurors he and another employee lived in their cars behind the mall in April 1982. The maintenance supervisor testified Thursday that transients had been living in the mall's trash bins and work sheds during this time.

The sequestered jury will be brought back to court today to hear final arguments and the charge. District Judge Joe Connally told jurors they should be able to begin their deliberations by noon.

Father of crewman learns of son's fate

HOUSTON (AP) — Robert McCurry, among family members who waited anxious months for the identification of bodies recovered from a sunken oil drillship in the South China Sea, has learned the fate of his son, but it wasn't the message he wanted to receive.

"At least now I know there can be peace of mind," McCurry said. "Now I won't go through the rest of my life wondering if there's one chance in a thousand he's in Vietnam."

Officials of Global Marine Inc. of Houston, have started notifying families that 28 of the 31 crewmen of the Glomar Java Sea had been identified.

McCurry had hoped that his son and others might have escaped in a lifeboat and drifted to shore in Vietnam.

"It is a relief but it's not the news we wanted," McCurry said.

McCurry's relief was shared by other relatives, who had waited anxiously since the ship sank seven months ago.

"The unknown is what drove us crazy," Audrey Battiste of St. Elmo, Ala., told the Houston Chronicle. Her husband, Gerald, was among those killed. "Thank the Lord the body was found."

Dick Vermeer, vice president of the Houston company which owns the ship, said the bodies of those identified included 10 Chinese.

Mrs. Battiste said she held several prayer meetings with wives of three other crewmen. On Wednesday, all four women were told their husbands' bodies had been identified.

"It's so amazing," she said. "We'd all hold hands and we'd pray. And we asked the Lord that if our husband's body was on the ship, to send that body back."

President Reagan gives the "I love you" hand sign to deaf and hearing impaired students from East Central University in Ada, Okla., Friday as he was leaving the White House. The president was headed for Bethesda Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., for his annual physical examination.

Doctors find benign polyp on Reagan's colon

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small growth was discovered in President Reagan's colon Friday, but an examination showed the polyp was noncancerous and it was not removed, his spokesman said.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the benign growth was discovered during the course of a general physical examination and had caused the 73-year-old president no discomfort.

Speakes described the growth as "very small," about 16-hundredths of an inch in size and located about 16 inches inside the anal canal.

Doctors have not decided whether to remove the polyp, a common disorder. Reagan left the hospital after his first physical in 2½ years and proceeded as scheduled to his Camp David retreat in the Maryland mountains where he and Mrs. Reagan are spending the weekend.

In a brief written statement issued five hours after Reagan's physical was completed, Speakes quoted Navy Capt. Walter Karney, the physician who led the team of doctors examining the president at Bethesda Naval Hospital, as saying Reagan was in "very exceptional physical condition" and that the results of the physical were "entirely normal."

However, the spokesman said, the report was held up for several hours while a biopsy, a microscopic examination of tissue, was performed. That showed the polyp was benign and the president did not have a cancerous tumor, Speakes said.

The growth was discovered in the course of a procto-sigmoidoscopy — an examination conducted by inserting a special instrument in the rectum. Speakes said part of the polyp was removed for biopsy during the course of the examination but that no anesthetic or further surgical procedure was required and that Reagan "suffered no ill effects" afterward.

A polyp is a mass of fleshy tissue that grows from the mucous membrane of the colon or rectum. The common growths, which ordinarily increase in incidence with age, are of concern to doctors because they can become malignant.

If polyps prove to be cancerous they are immediately removed surgically and if they occur frequently in a patient, doctors sometimes must remove whole sections of the rectum or colon to prevent recurrence.

"Polyps are a very normal occurrence," Speakes said after being briefed by Reagan's doctors.

Speakes said Reagan was told at the time of the examination that doctors had found the polyp and that it "appeared to be benign." About five hours later, when the biopsy had been completed, assistant presidential physician Eric K. Louie, who had accompanied the Reagans to Camp David, informed him by telephone of the laboratory finding, the spokesman said.

It is standard procedure for a physician to accompany the president on all trips outside the White House.

The physical exam turned up no other abnormalities, Speakes said. It consisted of a battery of tests, some of them conducted at the White House during the past two weeks.

Asked if the rest of the polyp would be removed, Speakes said, "None of this has been decided yet ...There's no urgency on the matter, and if there was anything further it would be done at the president's leisure, perhaps during the summer. There's no need to do it right away."

He indicated the doctors may decide to conduct a further examination called a colonoscopy, which would enable them not only to remove the polyp they found but proceed further into the intestinal tract to determine if there are any others beyond the range of the proctoscope.

In addition to the proctological exam, Reagan had a chest X-ray, an eye examination and an intravenous pylogram, which is a visual examination of the kidneys and urinary tract.

Speakes' statement said Reagan earlier had undergone blood counts, stool examinations, blood chemistry analyses, urine studies and electrocardiological exams, which were conducted at the White House.

Mideast envoy resigns

Donald Rumsfeld

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan accepted the resignation Friday of Donald M. Rumsfeld, his special Middle East envoy and said "your ability, insight and contributions were invaluable during a critical period."

Rumsfeld submitted his resignation in a letter dated Tuesday, citing his responsibilities as president and chief executive officer of the G.D. Searle pharmaceutical company. "I must proceed on with my other responsibilities," he said.

In his letter of acceptance, the president expressed "my personal appreciation for your enormous efforts and good work. ...It is unquestionably one of the most difficult assignments and your ability, insight and contributions were invaluable during a critical period."

It was reported in February that Rumsfeld would resign after his last trip to the Middle East on March 29. He took the assignment in November.

Rumsfeld engaged in extended shuttle diplomacy in the region, hoping to resolve the Lebanese crisis and advance Reagan's Middle East peace plan. But both fell apart.

Rumsfeld was known to have been discouraged about his role and the U.S. policy failure in Lebanon.

Nonethless, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Rumsfeld will be available as a consultant and adviser to Reagan.

"As we are all aware, the problems in the Middle East are at once both exceedingly difficult and terribly important," Rumsfeld wrote the president. "The conflicts in the area are deep-seated."

"While a continuation of our steady efforts is vital, you have rightly identified the growth of state-sponsored terrorism and the use of surrogates to mask accountability as profound threats to hopes for progress in the area," he wrote.

"Your efforts to make the world aware of and to develop effective policies for deterring such activities are important steps forward."

Speakes said there would be no replacement named because "we have a competent corps of ambassadors (stationed in the Middle East) who have been active throughout the Middle East.

Officials: Amusement park fire started by cigarette lighter

TOMS RIVER, N.J. (AP) — A fire that killed eight teen-agers in a "haunted house" attraction was started accidentally by a youth who lit a cigarette lighter to find his way, authorities said Friday.

Ocean County Prosecutor Edward J. Turnbacha also announced that a grand jury will be convened to investigate whether the deaths were "the result of a reckless act" because of possible improper construction.

Officials said they believe there were a "number of" possible safety violations in the construction of the Haunted Castle at Six Flags Great Adventure in Jackson Township.

Turnbach said the May 11 fire began when a 14-year-old boy accidentally ignited a foam rubber "crash pad" used to protect people who might bump into the wall.

There were indications a strobe light in the area where the fire erupted was not working properly, said Col. Clinton L. Pagano, superintendent of the state police.

"That is probably why that young boy, whoever he may be, lit the lighter," Pagano said.

Turnbach said the information on the start of the fire came from a 13-year-old boy who saw the other youth start the blaze and try to put it out with a bag he was carrying. The 13-year-old said he was able to escape by leaning on an emergency exit and did not know how the other youth got out.

The 13-year-old's account was supported by two men and two women from New York who had visited the attraction at the same time, Turnbach said.

Authorities do not know the identity of the 14-year-old and said they were hoping he would come forward.

"We're looking to him to come forward, but if he feels he shouldn't for some reason, he should know he was not responsible," said Pagano. "This is not something he should walk around with on his conscience. He did what any kid would do in the dark."

The Haunted Castle was comprised of 17 metal trailers — eight of which were in use at the time of the fatal fire — and surrounded by a castle facade.

The fire struck at 6:35 p.m. as about 20,000 visitors were at the park, and it was brought under control about an hour later. Firefighters said the flames, fanned by high winds, reached heights of 100feet, gutting and partially melting the trailers.

Three of the victims were from New Jersey and five from New York City. Eight other people were treated for smoke inhalation and minor injuries.

Pagano said a Department of Community Affairs report detailed violations in the construction of the Haunted Castle.

"There was no construction permit ever applied for. There was no plan approval...and ultimately no certificate of occupancy," Pagano said. "We feel there were a number of violations of the Uniform Construction Code."

In addition, he said, there were violations in the materials used on the inside of the attraction which "ignited too quickly."

Turnbach said his office obtained a court order last Saturday to seize the Haunted Castle in order to investigate. But he said he was "stonewalled" by Great Adventure officials in repeated requests over the next several days for construction documents.

Meanwhile, Rep. Joseph Gaydos, D-Pa., announced the House Subcommittee on Safety and Health would hold a hearing on the fire. A date for the hearing, requested by New Jersey Democratic Reps. Frank J. Guarini and Joseph Minish, is expected to be announced Monday.

The 200-acre park, located in a rural area about 60 miles south of New York City, is adjoined by safari areas where animals roam freely on a 500-acre preserve.

Officials of the parent Six Flags Corp. of Los Angeles said the deaths at the Jackson Township park were the first by fire at any of the six amusement parks run by the firm.

Since opening in 1974, there have been three other fatalities at the Jackson Township park — two people died on rides and a repairman died while working on a ride.

Judge clears man of charges he aided Nazis during WWII

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — A 69-year-old man was cleared Friday of charges that he assisted the Nazis in the murders of Jews in Latvia during World War II.

Elmars Sprogis was cleared in a ruling by U.S. District Judge Frank Altimari in Uniondale, who conducted a non-jury trial last October.

The federal government had sought to strip Sprogis of his U.S. citizenship and deport him. In an 87-page decision, Altimari ruled the government had failed to prove its case.

Sprogis, a retired construction worker, denied the allegations, and said he had informed U.S. authorities that he served as a Latvian police officer when he applied to enter the United States in 1951.

Men plead guilty to theft charges

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two suspects in the slaying of a Dublin minister have pleaded guilty to theft charges in Arizona, clearing the way for authorities to seek their return to Texas, authorities said.

Robert Michael Purtell, 25, and Dale Arthur John Carrasquillo, 23, are scheduled to be sentenced May 31 by Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Howard Thompson.

The two are suspects in connection with the February slaying of the Rev. John H. Basham, whose body was found Feb. 9 in the back seat of his van in Palo Pinto County.

The two men have pleaded guilty to two counts each of trafficking in stolen property in exchange for a recommended prison sentence of 10 years, said Maricopa County Attorney Mark Kennedy.

Ex-state senator out of prison

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former state Sen. Tommie Broadwater Jr. was released from a federal prison camp on Friday after serving 4½ months of a six-month sentence for food stamp fraud.

The Prince George's County Democrat now begins serving four years' probation. He also must perform community services and pay restitution for the $45,000 he was convicted of stealing by laundering food stamps through his Chapel Oaks Farmers Market in Glenarden.

The market was auctioned last month to satisfy a $135,000 outstanding loan from Citizens Bank and Trust Co. to Broadwater. Broadwater, 41, also is under a court order to find a way to satisfy $200,000 in other debts.

Vets aid Westmoreland against CBS

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A group of veterans, vowing to back retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland "for the duration," are helping him wage his legal battle against CBS News.

The group, Veterans for Westmoreland, has raised $25,000 to help the former commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam pay his legal expenses in his $120 million libel suit against CBS, said Anthony Bliss of Locust Valley, N.Y. Bliss, the group's co-chairman, said the veterans will continue to raise funds as long as Westmoreland needs them.

Westmoreland's suit contends he was libeled in a 1982 CBS documentary which alleged that the former general conspired to underestimate enemy troop strength in Vietnam. Westmoreland, who lives in Charleston, said he didn't ask for the financial support, but he appreciates it anyway. The money is going to the non-profit foundation that is supporting his suit.

Teen faces stay in detention home

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — A 13-year-old boy faces a maximum of four years in detention after pleading guilty to juvenile delinquency charges in connection with the shooting death of an 11-year-old girl last month.

The youth, who was not identified, admitted shooting playmate Tracy Stephens "between the eyes" on April 7 with her father's .38-caliber revolver, Monmouth County Prosecutor John Kaye said.

Police had said the girl took the gun to the boy's home.

The boy, who pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of juvenile delinquency in connection with an aggravated manslaughter, is to be sentenced June 8.

Former American hostages in Iran ask high court to hear their case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirteen Americans held hostage by Iran for 14 months asked the Supreme Court on Friday to revive their $65 million lawsuit against Iranian government.

The former hostages, along with the wives of two of them, asked the justices to reverse rulings that blocked the suit. The four were among the 52 Americans held captive until January 1981 after the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was stormed by supporters of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in November 1979.

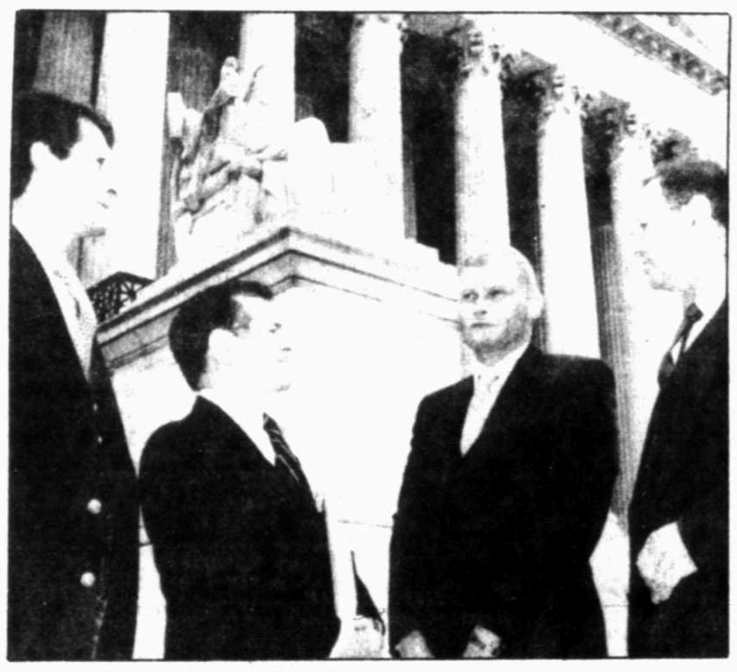

At a news conference held before the appeal was filed, four hostages stressed that more important than obtaining a money judgment was the need to punish state-sponsored terrorism.

"It's reprehensible that Iran has not been brought to justice for the hostage-taking," said former hostage William Royer, an English teacher who had been assigned to the U.S. Embassy.

Their suit was dismissed by U.S. District Judge William Gray in Los Angeles in a ruling upheld by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last Dec. 30.

The lower courts ruled that federal courts do not have authority to preside over any such suit.

Even if such jurisdiction did exist, the hostages are barred from obtaining any monetary judgment against the Iranian government by an agreement negotiated by former President Carter in seeking the hostages' release.

Three former American hostages who were held in the American Embassy takeover in Iran confer with their attorney outside the U.S. Supreme Court as they prepare to file a petition asking for a hearing on their case against the United States and Iran. They filed their suit after being released from Iran 3½ years ago. From left are William Royer Jr., attorney James Davis, John McKeel and Charles Scott.

"While Iran would face no financial exposure due to the president's executive order, the granting of (federal court) jurisdiction would at least signal would-be terrorists that premeditated international crimes and intentional and heinous crimes against diplomatic officials and United States citizens would be potentially costly," said the appeal filed Friday.

The appeal was filed on behalf of former hostages John D. McKeel Jr., Charles Scott, William Royer, Donald Sharer, Leland Holland, David Roeder, Paul Needham, Duane Gillette, Alan Golacinski, Malcolm Kelp, Charles Jones Jr., William Gallegos and William Belk. Also represented in the appeal are Scott's wife, Elizabeth, and Roeder's wife, Susan.

Couple wins battle for low phone bills

GREENCASTLE, Pa. (AP) — An elderly couple who found they would have to pay hundreds of dollars a month to talk to friends, stores and firefighters a few miles away have won their battle for restoration of a special phone service.

For 38 years, the $4-a-month service connected Arthur and Carrie Grove with friends in neighboring Hagerstown, Md., allowing them to make unlimited toll-free calls.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. of Maryland disconnected the Groves' service after the couple decided they could not afford to pay the new $222.32 a month charge.

The Maryland company said the antitrust settlement that resulted in the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. restricted such private lines when the customer lived in a state served by a different phone company.

The retired couple said they felt "cut off from the world" they had known for so long.

Pic Wagner, AT&T Communications spokesman in Washington, said the Groves' service would be reconnected "at the same rate" the couple paid before divestiture.

"There is a tariff (rate schedule) on file covering this service, and we will honor that tariff," said Wagner. "In fact, if the Groves had contacted us in the first place, we would have provided them the service."

Mrs. Grove agreed she had not contacted AT&T in her efforts to retain the service.

"We did everything through C&P," she said.

"At first I was numb," said Mrs. Grove, of her reaction to the news AT&T would restore the service. "Then I was elated. Then there were tears. But now I feel as if I am in a sense of suspension, because I don't know if they are going to follow through on what they already said."

Mrs. Grove said the service had not been restored by mid-afternoon Friday, but she said AT&T notified her that the telephone would be working by Monday.

Mrs. Grove, 65, and her husband, who is 67, have lived on a fixed income since Grove retired on disability in 1977. He has Parkinson's disease, a degenerative nerve disorder.

The Groves live in Pennsylvania, about 100 feet from the Maryland line.

To receive the special service which linked their phone with an exchange in Hagerstown, the Groves' phone was tied to a telephone pole located in Pennsylvania, 45 feet from the Maryland border.

The couple said all their friends were in the Hagerstown area, and they received their groceries and fire protection from Maryland.

After the old service was disconnected, the Groves got a new phone from United Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania. But their phone bills were "astronomical," Mrs. Grove said.

Toy soldiers link man with his childhood

WACO, Texas (AP) — Soldiers, uniforms, cannons and guns are "toys" for men who march to the drums of war.

But to one man of peace, war's death and destruction are things of which he wants no part — even though his hobby is creating toy soldiers.

It's not a vision of warfare that prompts Peter Johnston to pursue his hobby, but a childhood memory of a toy store where rows of toy soldiers captured the fascination of many young boys.

At times, Johnston seems a contradiction, because he labels himself a pacifist, yet paints toy soldiers and even served in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserves.

But for Johnston, who will turn 32 this month, there is no contradiction. He says people are attracted to the uniforms, the flags and the pageantry of the military, but fail to look ahead at the battlefield carnage.

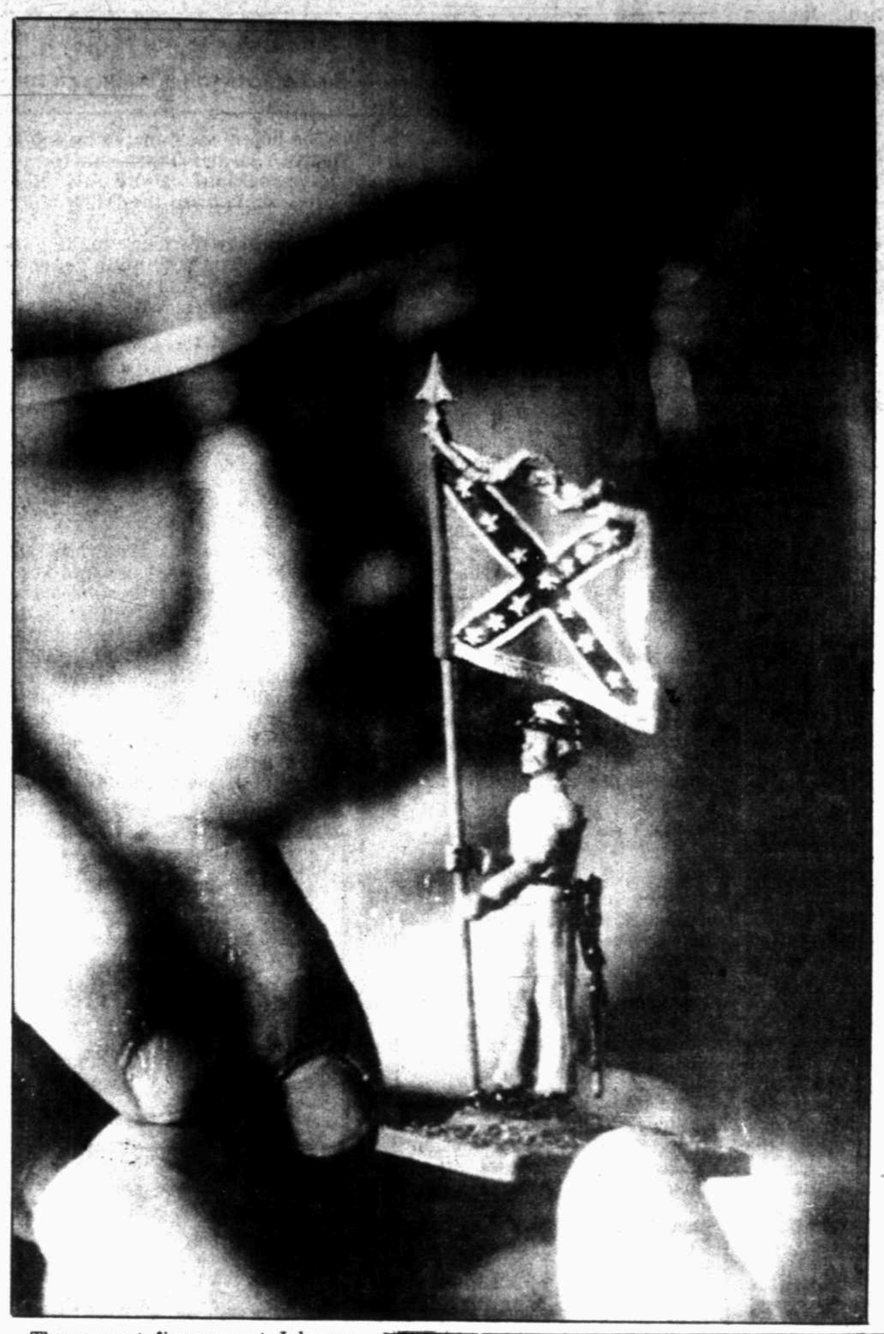

"Going to war is real glamourous, but being there is no fun at all," he says. Referring to his time in the reserves, Johnston said, "Basically I came out without much affection for the real military. They didn't have much trouble getting me to leave (at the end of my enlistment)."

Although Johnston is not interested in the modern military or fighting many wars, he has a special fascination for the Civil War, fought from 1861 to 1865, and aims his hobby at that one war. He uses a book depicting Civil War uniforms to accurately paint the dozens of different uniforms used by the North and South.

Using a lead-tin alloy, Johnston casts some of his two-inch tall soldiers. However, he has shifted mostly to purchasing precast soldiers and then sanding the rough edges before painting them. The precast metal figures have a better relief than the home-cast figures and allow for greater detail to be painted onto them, Johnston said.

Altogether, Johnson has about 500 toy soldiers of various descriptions, time periods and countries, but he said he is now working exclusively on Civil War soldiers. In addition to the soldiers he also has 15 miniature artillery pieces complete with boxes of ammunition.

Painting just one of the soldiers takes about four hours, he said, and with a wife, a 3½-year-old son and a job occupying days, he says he does not have as much time to work on his hobby as he would like.

Peter Johnson holds a two-inch replica of a confederate soldier he made from a lead-tin precast model and later painted to match the exact uniform worn during the American Civil War. Johnston has made up to 500 toy soldiers and spends up to four hours hand-painting the detailed models.

AP Laserphoto

The precast figures cost Johnson between $3 and $6 before adding the cost of the paint and his time, he said. But Johnston said he isn't in it to make money and has given away many of his handpainted soldiers to friends and relatives.

Pecos resident collects cans

PECOS, Texas (AP) — If Bill Couette had 99 bottles of beer on the wall, he probably would trade them for a can.

Already, one wall of what used to be Couette's carport is literally lined with beer cans. About 1,500 from all over the United States as well as Holland, Japan, Australia, Germany, Spain and other countries, are mounted on rack after rack along his den wall.

While some beer cans from around the world are worth up to $3,000, most of Couette's are just worth more cans — four to five for the most valuable ones.

"This one here, I could probably get four to one (for cans) for," he said, pointing to a 1949 Schlitz can. "Some guy found it under his porch, and it hadn't rusted at all."

A few of Couette's cans are rusty, especially the older ones.

"The obsolete and real old cans are the most valuable," he explained.

Some of his more unusual cans include those of M.A.S.H. beer, made from the television series and distributed in a camouflage-printed can, and Billy Carter and J.R. beer brands.

For some brands, Couette has collected several cans bearing different prints or from different breweries. His 10 or more Schmidt Beer cans each bear different scenes on the front, and some of his 28 Pittsburg-brewed Iron City Beer cans picture the Steelers during the years they won the Super Bowl.

"It's history on the cans," Couette said with a smile.

Couette also has collected quite a few of yet another Pittsburg brand: Frothingslosh. This beer's claim to fame throughout its history and printed on its cans from year to year was "it foams on the bottom."

Couette explained that when poured into a glass, the foam hung below the beer.

Pictured with the slogan on the cans is another Frothingslosh tradition: a brazen, brunette fat lady clad in clothing from swim suits to a ballet tu-tu and sometimes clenching a long-stemmed rose between her teeth.

Now, who cares about taste when you could get "foam on the bottom" and a can like that?

Couette and nearly 25,000 other members of the Beer Can Collectors of America club have made hobbies with such unusual cans. The club was established in 1970 in Fenton, Mo., and has since brewed in popularity.

For $20 yearly club dues, Couette has at his disposal — among other things — a complete index of other members' addresses by their name and state.

Lamar High School (Houston) senior Beverly Ann Green receives encouragement from friend and fellow graduate Eric Robinson as they enter Sam Houston Coliseum for the commencement ceremony. Miss Green suffers from sytemic lupus erythmatosus, a disease which affects the body's major organs.

Girl fulfills dream by getting diploma

HOUSTON (AP) — After all Beverly Green has had to endure to earn her diploma from Houston Lamar High School, it was a small inconvenience that she had to use a wheelchair to accept the document.

Over the past seven years, when the headaches would come, she studied. When sickened from dialysis treatment because of failing kidneys, she studied. When potent drugs to fight her illness caused such side effects as facial swelling, she studied.

But Miss Green made it all worthwhile when she wheeled across the stage to at least temporarily score a victory over her disease, lupus, an immune system disorder that has devastated many of her normal body functions, including bringing on end-stage kidney problems.

Graduating from high school has been Miss Green's dream since she contracted lupus seven years ago.

"This is the most wonderful day of my life," Miss Green said. "But I knew I'd make it. I had faith in the Lord, in my doctors and in myself."

She has needed critical care nursing and treatments for recurring inflammation of the lining around her heart and lungs, arthritic-like aches and inflammed blood vessels leading to her brain.

Since lupus was diagnosed , she has been in and out of hospitals. She left Texas Children's Hospital Thursday to attend graduation ceremonies with her classmates at Lamar High.

But her dream has kept her going, her mother said. "No matter how bad she felt, she was interested in her schoolwork," said Ruby Green.

Doctors describe her case as severe and the prognosis is guarded. Most recently her kidneys failed, forcing her to undergo dialysis treatments three times per week to survive.

Last week, she was placed in the hospital's intensive care unit to remove a fluid buildup around her inflamed heart.

"She has an incredible will," said Dr. Donald A. Person, who has treated Miss Green throughout most of her illness. "Most people would have given up by now. Most wouldn't have made it this far."

Despite her handicaps, Miss Green wants to attend college and become a commercial artist.

"I wish I could say to all children who feel school is not important that they are wrong," she said. "It doesn't matter if you have a headache or your back hurts or the weather is bad. You have to put your mind to it and fight to overcome those pains — and above all, you have to pray for the Lord to take care of you."

Donated house paradise to foster parent

DALLAS (AP) — Birdie Jackson began taking care of handicapped children in the early 1940s, raising more than 430 handicapped children in a small, one-story house in West Dallas with her husband, Charles, who died last year.

In recent years the family of foster children, which now numbers eight, began to outgrow the house — even after the installation of two portable rooms and a bath.

Early Thursday, a new house arrived — a two-story, 2,000-square-foot brick structure that was moved across town to an empty lot bought for her next to her old home. It came sliced in half, somewhat frayed and splintered, but Mrs. Jackson said it looked like paradise to her.

"This house is a miracle. It's an answer to my prayers."
— Birdie Jackson, foster parent

"This house is a miracle," Mrs. Jackson, 63, said as workmen repaired the roof. "It's an answer to my prayers."

Mrs. Jackson said that when reconstruction on the new house is completed in about two months, the children will be able to eat at the same table. The hallways will be large enough to accommodate one child's wheelchair and the five boys will no longer have to sleep in the same room, she said.

The house was donated by Joe M. Dealy Jr., a developer and former vice president of the A.H. Belo Corp., which owns the Dallas Morning News.

Dealey gave the house to the Variety Club. The city then learned about the house and wanted to work to find a beneficiary, which it did in February.

"When you meet people like Birdie, you just want to help," said Gale Paul, hardship coordinator with the city's Department of Housing and Neighborhood Services. "This is her reward."

About 20 individuals and groups — including the Dallas County Housemovers Association — helped Mrs. Jackson get the house, said J.R. Edmonds, a businessman and chairman of the Birdie Jackson Foundation, which helps Mrs. Jackson care for the handicapped children placed in her home by county welfare officials. Others will help pay for house improvements.

"I never could have afforded to move — we never did have any money," she said. "I never dreamed I'd have a brick home. Now, thanks to God, I will."

Snakes on prowl again, says wildlife specialist

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Snakes, the venomous reptiles that roam Texas' deserts and brushland, are on the prowl again and a Texas A&M University wildlife specialist says people should exercise caution.

"If you do encounter a snake, simply walk away," said Dr. Fred Hendricks of the university's Department of Wildlife and Fisheries Sciences. " Most snakes are not aggressive and most man-snake encounters go unnoticed by man. In any case, an average person can outrun a snake."

But Hendricks said chances are about four in 10 that a poisonous snake will release venom when it bites.

The fatality rate from snake bite is extremely low. Less than one percent of the victims who are struck die from the 2,000-plus bites annually reported nationwide, he said.

Snakes are most active between April and mid-June because it is their mating season, Hendricks said. In early spring, they move a great deal but as the weather warms up much of the activity will be in the early morning and late evening hours.

"Nearly all bites occur from people handling snakes, rather than by being surprised by one," Hendrick said. "Most of the bites should come as no surprise."

Hendricks said people should learn to distinguish one snake from another, pointing out that rattlesnakes, copperheads, cottonmouths (all pit vipers) and coral snakes are the only ones considered dangerous in Texas.

If bitten, people should remain calm, avoid unnecessary movement and place a constricting band over the bite to slow down, but not cut off, the blood flow. The next step is to go to a hospital, Hendricks said.

Official says inspectors took bribes

HOUSTON (AP) — Thirteen grain inspectors at the Port of Houston solicited or accepted gratuities, including beer and liquor, from ship captains, the Agriculture Department's top inspector said Friday.

One of the employees resigned from the department's Federal Grain Inspection Service and the other 12 face dismissal, John V. Graziano, the department's inspector general, announced in Washington.

Graziano declined to release the identities of the employees.

The announcement said the U.S. attorney in Houston "declined to prosecute the employees, clearing the way for USDA to take disciplinary action."

But Ron Woods, acting chief of the criminal division of the U.S. Attorney's Office in Houston, said prosecutors are still looking at the case.

The inquiry showed 13 of the 43 employees who examine ships hold stowage at the Port of Houston had solicited or accepted gratuities, Graziano said.

Mass said for Solidarity worker slain last year

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — An estimated 7,000 people attended a memorial Mass on Friday for a 19-year-old Solidarity backer who died a year ago from injuries suffered in a beating inflicted after he was detained by police.

Two ambulance drivers, two policemen and two doctors are scheduled for trial May 31, charged in connection with the death of high school senior Grzegorz Przemyk.

His mother, Barbara Sadowska, who had worked at a Roman Catholic relief center that provided aid to jailed Solidarity activists, attended the Mass at the St. Stanislaw Kostka church.

After the service, more than 3,000 people walked silently along sidewalks to Przemyk's grave in the Pawazki Cemetery nearly two miles away.

Police vehicles, including at least three water-cannon trucks, were parked on side streets but the police did not intervene with the march. They took photographs of people leaving the church, however, and stopped some cars in the area to check the documents of the occupants.

In indictments handed down May 7, the policemen and ambulance attendants were charged with inflicting a fatal beating, which carries a minumum one-year prison sentence and no maximum. The charge against the policemen was later reduced to inflicting a beating, and if convicted they could be sentenced to a maximum of three years.

The doctors are charged with negligence, punishable by a jail term of six months to five years. Authorities have not disclosed the full names of the accused.

About 20,000 people attended Przemyk's funeral last May 19, and his grave has became a shrine for followers of the outlawed Solidarity labor federation, who frequently lay flowers and banners there.

In the memorial sermon, the Rev. Bronislaw Dembowski said those responsible for Przemyk's death would be judged not by a Polish court but by God.

"We do not expect punishment for the culprits, or a revelation of who is most to blame for the death of Grzegorz," he said. "We wish that something be moved in the conscience of man and that he have the courage to confess, 'I am to blame, forgive me, pardon me, because I have done wrong'."

The priest, known as a Solidarity sympathizer, also criticized the state-run press.

"A man may justify his actions before other people, and it can all be nicely presented in the newspapers," he said. "In reality, however, everyone will stand in judgment before God."

Your horoscope

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Happy Birthday to you, Jimmy Stewart, singer-actress Cher, Minnesota Vikings coach Bud Grant, "Capitol" star Constance Towers, golf's Dave Hill, New York Yankee broadcaster Bobby Murcer and football's Cullen Bryant! Also born on this date: French painter Henri Rousseau and novelist Honore de Balzac. Aviator Charles "Lucky" Lindbergh made his famous transatlantic solo flight on this day in 1927. Discuss your goals openly with your loved ones and they will be easier to achieve. Close friends are happy to promote your interests. Keep a low profile at work. Romance needs more time to mature.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A great day to widen your social horizons. Pay more attention to your intuition and expect some surprises. Romance sizzles. Be cautious. Do not reveal too much too soon.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stick to your plans. Others will come around when you least expect it. Take the initiative and spend the afternoon or evening with someone you love. Someone special admires your tenacity!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Give your mate or date a special treat. Do everything you can to strengthen family ties. A wonderful day for launching a new project. Ask loved ones for their ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Postpone travel. A walk with a favorite canine could lead to a delightful new friendship. A family member's indecision can be irritating. Try to come up with helpful suggestions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Discuss a difficult problem with influential person during the early morning. Finances are the main topic of conversation at home. You may have to call a family conference on reducing expenses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Continue to be cautious about projects that involve financial risk. Although your friends mean well, their actions could interfere with family life. Set them straight! Romance is mostly happy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A phone call brings surprising news. Someone has a last-minute change of heart. Be realistic if there is nothing further you can do. Getting together with old friends boosts your spirits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You tend to get more than you give. Be more obliging. A close friend or neighbor shares a confidence. Tell no one. A phone call from an absent teen-ager sends your spirits soaring.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The domestic scene is lively. Mate or partner could behave in a silly way. Refrain from passing judgment. Extend the hand of friendship to someone in need. Watch costs when entertaining.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone may offer criticism today. Control your temper if you think his or her comments are constructive. New ideas abound! Remember the lessons you have learned in the past.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You want to stay home but find that your loved ones have other ideas. Compromise! A major change holds great appeal. You and mate enjoy a new rapport.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A busy and rewarding day lies ahead. A visitor brings wonderful news. Invite him or her to a family gathering. A small incident makes you realize that someone needs help. Be generous.

Fantasy Olympics apolitical

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — For those yearning for an Olympics free of politics, drugs and unsportsmanlike conduct, NBC, which was boycotted out of its coverage of the 1980 Moscow Games, has at last a rah-rah, clean-cut, 110-percent pure Olympics.

It's the five-hour miniseries, "The First Olympics — Athens 1896," which will be broadcast Sunday and Monday nights, competing in a miniseries marathon, hour to hour, with ABC's two-parter, "The Mystic Warrior."

"The First Olympics," which chronicles the rags-to-medals story of the all-preppy U.S. team in the reborn Games, is a benign, fiercely patriotic, upbeat film. It is certainly watchable, not in a riveting way but as a noteworthy story and as the first totally G-rated miniseries.

Given the current miniseries mania toward glamorizing lust, hate and the baser human instincts ("Lace," "Master of the Game"), it's refreshing to finally see the virtues of sacrifice, dedication and camaraderie.

"THE First Olympics," however, is not a significant triumph. It lacks the drama, passion and inspiration of "Chariots of Fire," the Academy Award-winning theatrical film of three years ago. NBC gave its go-ahead to the project after "Chariots" won the best-picture award, but before it became a TV failure on cable and CBS.

The sports events and practices here are well-staged and exciting, but they are interminably padded. The two-hour concluding installment is nearly wall-to-wall competition. One hungers for some real character development, perhaps even an "Up Close and Personal."

The movie does succeed in evoking an exuberantly playful spirit.

The Americans supposedly learned about some events by looking at pictures depicting the ancient Games. Copies are made of the shot and discus, but the competitors actually benefit from practicing with equipment that is bigger and heavier than standard size.

IN another scene, the Greek musicians could only find sheet music for "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and dub it the Americans' gold-medal anthem — until some U.S. sailors volunteered "The Star-Spangled Banner." Unfortunately, even the most chauvinistic viewer will tire of its repetition in victory ceremonies.

The story begins, once upon a time, in 1894, before politics became the Olympic sport. Pierre de Coubertin decided that the Greek tradition of an athletic Games should be renewed. Louis Jourdan plays this sportsman as a cultivated simpleton who would seem more at home in "Alice in Wonderland."

To make the Games truly international, an inexperienced and small American team, mostly collegians from Harvard and Princeton, is recruited by Princeton Professor William Sloane (David Ogden Stiers from "M*A*S*H").

Befitting this fact-based fairytale, each of the dozen athletes is strong of character, serious of purpose and fleet of foot.

ONE heroic type who is introduced early on sets the tone. Robert Garrett (Hunt Block) rescues a man pinned beneath a carriage by lifting him free, a la Superman, then tells his mother (Angela Lansbury) that he was late because he was "detained" — in the ancient tradition of aw-shucks humility.

Block is no acting medalist. His is the most wooden performance. A former long jumper who was several inches short of qualifying for the real U.S. Olympic team in 1976, he is more convincing as an athlete. According to NBC, the young actors did their own running, throwing, jumping and even pole-vaulting.

It is documented that Garrett won the discus and shot put. But the filmmakers then needlessly stretched credibility by having him run in the marathon, which he loses to a peasant from the Greek army.

Fantasy Olympics apolitical

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — For those yearning for an Olympics free of politics, drugs and unsportsmanlike conduct, NBC, which was boycotted out of its coverage of the 1980 Moscow Games, has at last a rah-rah, clean-cut, 110-percent pure Olympics.

It's the five-hour miniseries, "The First Olympics — Athens 1896," which will be broadcast Sunday and Monday nights, competing in a miniseries marathon, hour to hour, with ABC's two-parter, "The Mystic Warrior."

"The First Olympics," which chronicles the rags-to-medals story of the all-preppy U.S. team in the reborn Games, is a benign, fiercely patriotic, upbeat film. It is certainly watchable, not in a riveting way but as a noteworthy story and as the first totally G-rated miniseries.

Counting has Marcos' candidates leading National Assembly election

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Latest election results Friday showed President Ferdinand E. Marcos' candidates winning a majority in the National Assembly. But Marcos' support has diminished in the first test of his popularity since the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Candidates from the ruling New Society Movement took the lead in both government and independent tallies for the first time as the count from Monday's balloting continued. It was expected that the president would retain control of the assembly.

But the opposition's strong showing was a setback for Marcos, who faces a slumping economy and still-unanswered questions about last year's Aquino killing. The economy and the killing were major campaign issues.

Marcos' chief opponent, Sen. Salvador Laurel, charged that "massive fraud, terrorism and vote buying" marked the voting in 16 of the country's 73 provinces and demanded that new elections be held in those areas.

Election officials had formally declared results in only 69 of the 183 races — and 43 of the winners were members of the ruling New Society Movement. Non-Marcos candidates won the other 26 races.

Opposition parties held only 13 of the 200 seats in the old National Assembly. The opposition would need to win 101 seats to gain control, since 17 seats are appointed by the president.

Actual control of the National Assembly is not the main issue since Marcos is empowered by the consitution to legislate by decree. But gains registered by his political foes are an indication of growing opposition to his 18-year rule.

Marcos announced Friday he would revamp his government and served notice on members of his Cabinet that he expects them to submit their resignations by June 30, when the new assembly is installed for a six-year term.

Marcos said that in a parliamentary system resignations are automatic at the end of an assembly's term.

With 71 percent of the vote counted, an unofficial tally by an independent watchdog group showed Marcos candidates leading in 98 of the races. Non-Marcos candidates were leading in 84 races, and the results for one seat were not in.

The government's Philippine News Agency gave no new figures Friday but had said a day earlier that Marcos candidates were leading or had won 120 seats, compared to 60 for the opposition.

Laurel has accused poll officials of slowing the official vote count and proclamation of winners to enable the ruling party to alter the results so they can coincide with the 140 seats Marcos claimed he won a day after the election.

"The order has gone out of Malacanang (Marcos' palace) for a change in the results," said Laurel, president of the United Nationalists Democratic Organization, in a telephone interview.

Numerous protests have been filed by both ruling and opposition parties, each accusing the other of switching ballots, vote-buying and intimidating voters.

In Aquino's home province, Tarlac, about 3,000 followers led by members of the slain opposition leader's family demonstrated in the provincial capital to denounce alleged intimidation of voters by police and soldiers.

Latest counts show both of the province's assembly seats going to Marcos candidates, but the opposition claims it should have won one, if not both.

The five-member board investigating the Aquino assassination resumed its public hearings in suburban Manila on Friday after a two-week break for the elections.

Aquino, Marcos' strongest political rival, was shot Aug. 21 moments after arriving at Manila airport from three years exile in the United States. Aquino's family claims he was killed by a soldier, while Marcos says the assassination was the work of a Communist agent.

Friday's witness was William Stewart, a Tokyo-based ABC-TV producer who traveled with Aquino on the plane, who confirmed his crew shot a television film clip recording the politician's last moments alive.

French convent trying to get back 16th century painting they sold

PARIS (AP) — When a group of French nuns went about their spring cleaning four years ago, they didn't dream they were throwing out a 16th century Italian masterpiece.

Now that the sisters from the Saint-Charles du Puy convent know "the piece of junk that cluttered up our attic," is in fact Lorenzo Lotto's "Christ Carrying His Cross," they are suing to get it back.

But a spokesman for France's National Museums said Friday the Louvre, which bought the work in 1982 for $382,000, will not give it up.

In 1980, the convent in central France sold everything in the attic to an antique dealer for the lump sum of $740. The painting was valued at $47.

The dealer put the painting in his shop window and managed to sell it for $470 to a private collector, who sold it to the Louvre after it was authenticated.

Collapsed roof results in charges

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Fourteen people were indicted Friday in connection with the collapse of a roof at a high school that killed 26 female students in August, court officials said.

Officials at the Taichung District Court, 100 miles south of Taipei, said those indicted included the principal of Fengyuan High School andfour faculty members.

They were indicted on charges of dereliction of duty or corruption. Details of the corruption charges were not dislosed, but prosecutors said an investigation disclosed the roof of the auditorium, believed to have been weakened by heavy rains, was not constructed according to specifications.

Germans get restrictive papers

BERLIN (AP) — The East German government has issued restrictive identification papers to some 60,000 citizens in an apparent effort to stem the flow of emigrants to the West, a West Berlin human rights group said Friday.

Many would-be emigres have been obliged to return regular papers and to carry special identity cards, said the August 13 Workers group. The cards require their holders to remain in their town of residence and ban them from certain restaurants and bars.

The card is usually issued to potential troublemakers in the Communist country. Its holders often must report regularly to police.

Yugoslav official visits China

PEKING (AP) — Yugoslavia's Communist Party chief arrived to a warm welcome Friday by general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party, along with several hundred dancing children. China, which once denounced "revisionist" Yugoslavia, in recent years has praised its independent brand of socialism.

Dragoslav Markovic is the first Yugoslav party leader to visit Peking since the late President Josip Broz Tito in 1977.

China and Yugoslavia have found increasingly common ground in their independent stance within the Communist world, distancing themselves from Moscow and the East bloc.

Letter denies charges against de la Madrid

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government, in a letter to The Washington Post, has denied a U.S. columnist's report that President Miguel de la Madrid sent millions of dollars abroad despite his campaign against corruption.

"Everything that article says about President de la Madrid is inexact, false and tendentious," the letter sent by presidential spokesman Manuel Alonso to the newspaper said. Parts of it were printed here Friday by the government newspaper El Nacional.

"President de la Madrid does not have any bank account in any foreign country; he never has carried out transfers of money abroad; his salary is fixed strictly by the law," Alonso's letter said.

The Post had carried the column by Jack Anderson on Tuesday.

'Let's play four': Cubs in twin doubleheader

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Another rainout Friday night left the Midland Cubs and Tulsa Drillers facing back-to-back doubleheaders tonight and Sunday, but there was no assurance that the Cubs Stadium field would be ready even tonight.

The Cubs showed up to loosen some arms at 4 p.m. Friday as thunder rumbled across brooding skies and lightning picketed the field. Even that workout was cut short by a downpour that left puddles in the infield.

Game time tonight is 6 p.m. In the event of a postponement, a doubleheader will be played at 6 p.m. Sunday. The two lost games of the series would then be made up as parts of doubleheaders in Tulsa.

However, it is hoped that the field can be made ready for play tonight.

BUT ALL the news wasn't bad. Righthander Ken Pryce usually spends the first part of his summers in Midland and then goes north to Des Moines, as the weather warms up. This year he reversed the procedure. He opened the season in Iowa and Friday reported to Midland.

Manager George Enright welcomed the San Diego native with open arms. In 1982, Pryce started the season in the Midland bullpen and then became a starter and as soon as he became the ace of the staff, Iowa wanted him. Same thing last year. In two partial seasons with Midland, Pryce is 11-7 for the Cubs.

Pryce isn't exactly overjoyed by going from AAA to AA ball, but he likes the idea of steady work. Enright plans to use him as a starter. "I wasn't getting that much work, so they wanted me to get some innings in," said Pryce.

AS EVIDENCE that he needs work is 17 walks in 29 innings this spring. Last year he walked only 18 in 81 innings at Midland. In 1981, he walked just 16 in 132 innings at Quad City.

Enright expects another pitcher to report over the weekend. "I don't want to say who it is until he gets here," said Enright, "But he has pitched for me the last two years and has a good arm."

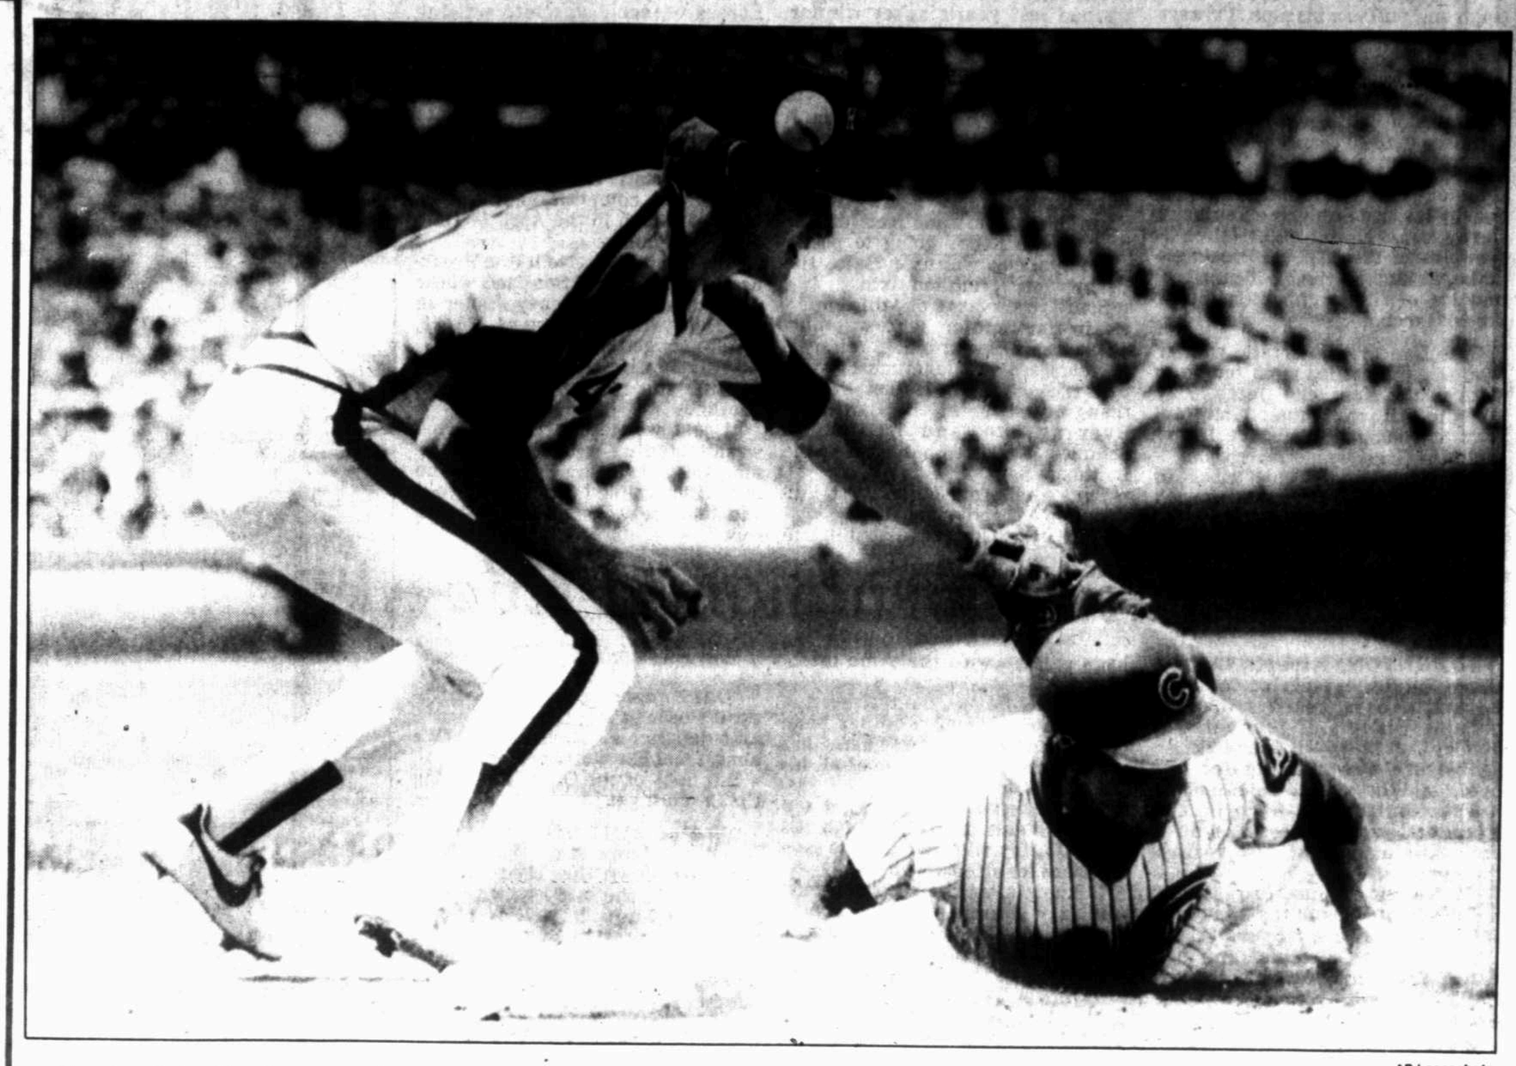

The Cubs won the opener of the series with Tulsa, 11-2, Wednesday night, a game stopped with two-out in the eighth because of rain.

Out in Arizona, third baseman Tony Woods, the all-star third baseman and one of the 10 top major league prospects in the Midwest League last year, takes the cast off a broken wrist today and Enright hopes he will join the club sometime during the road trip to Little Rock and Tulsa in the next two weeks.

Woods has had just one at bat as a Cub.

Shortstop Shawon Dunston, out with an ankle sprain, is ready to go again and third baseman Joe Henderson, fighting a 101 degree fever during Wednesday's game, is eating again, which is a good sign. Now if his aching foot will just come around.

Enright has had no word on infielder Jeff Rutledge, who left the club three weeks ago. Rutledge returned to California because of an illness to his daughter.

Comeback Cubs remain in first

Amazing Tigers continue to roll, now 30-5

By The Associated Press

Houston reliever Frank DePino walked pinch-hitter Gary Woods with the bases loaded to force in the winning run and climax a two-run ninth-inning rally that gave the Chicago Cubs a 7-6 victory over the Astros Friday.

After Houston had broken a 5-5 tie on Enos Cabell's solo homer off Tim Stoddard with two out in the top of the ninth, Gary Matthews led off with a wind-blown fly down the right-field line that fell in for a double.

Leon Durham then doubled Matthews home and was sacrificed to third by Keith Moreland. DePino then relieved Dave Smith and walked two more batters intentionally to set up a force before issuing the pass to Woods.

"I wasn't looking for a walk," said Woods. "I know he's not afraid of me, he's gotten me out before. He was wild. He won't do that too much."

Baseball Roundup

In other National League games Friday, Pittsburgh shut out Atlanta 3-0 and St. Louis beat Cincinnati 5-3.

In the American League, it was Toronto 4, Chicago 3; California 4, New York 3; Minnesota 8, Boston 3; Baltimore 3, Seattle 1; Texas 2, Kansas City 1; and Detroit 8, Oakland 4 in a game shortened to five innings by rain.

In Pittsburgh, Larry McWilliams scattered eight hits for his first win of the season. Rookie Benny Distefano's triple sparked a two-run third inning and Tony Pena added an eighth-inning grand slam. McWilliams, who has lost three, struck out six, walked two and benefitted from three double plays.

In St. Louis, Tommy Herr and Lonnie Smith belted solo first-inning homers and George Hendrick broke a tie with a two-run double to led the Cardinals over the Reds. John Stuper, 2-2, survived a rocky second inning and Gary Redus' third home run to win with relief help from Dave Rucker and Neil Allen.

Kirk Gibson's bases-loaded single drove in two runs during a five-run first as Detroit ran its record to 30-5. Dan Petry, 6-1, allowed seven hits, walked two and struck out four in the 5 1-3 innings that the game lasted before being called by rain.

In Toronto, Dave Collins broke a sixth-inning tie with a double and Damaso Garcia collected three hits, stole two bases and scored a run to lead the Blue Jays over the White Sox. Jim Clancy, 3-3, went 6 2-3 innings and rookie Jim Key collected his second save.

Doug DeCinces led off the 10th by smashing Jay Howell's first pitch for his seventh homer to give the Angels their win and end a four-game Yankee winning streak. The winner was Luis Sanchez, who relieved Tommy John in the ninth and gave up Butch Wynegar's two-out, two-run game-tying single.

Mike Smithson won his sixth with a six-hitter, Tim Teufel homered and Tom Brunansky knocked in three runs to lead the Twins, who scored five runs in the first.

In Baltimore, Eddie Murray hit his eighth homer and Storm Davis tossed a six-hitter as the Orioles posted their 16th victory in their last 20 games. Davis pitched his third complete game in his last four starts and lowered his ERA to 1.56 in handing the Mariners their fourth straight loss.

Gary Ward, hitting .187 going into the game, slugged a two-run homer off Bud Black in the eighth inning as Dave Stewart won his second straight after six losses for Texas. The loss spoiled the 1984 debut of George Brett and the home debut this year of Willie Wilson before a crowd of 27,753, largest of the season in Kansas City.

The Milwaukee Brewers played the Cleveland Indians in a game delayed by rain.

MHS postpones Mims

From Staff Reports

Midland High's spring football season was extended by three days Friday night when Mother Nature hit the Tall City with heavy rain showers.

Since the Bulldogs still had a few days remaining in their alloted spring training time, head coach Doug McCutchen opted for delaying the annual Bill Mims scrimmage game.

Hoping for clearer skies, and dryer weather, the Bulldogs will play the Mims game at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Memorial Stadium.

If the rain lets up, the delay will not only mean dryer weather, but also cause less wear and tear on Memorial Stadium's grass.

Midland High has changed the format of the spring game from last year's out going seniors against varisty players to an inner-squad game.

Coaches have divided into two teams and, in turn, used an NFL-style draft to pick players to more equally divide the talent.

Midland High will play a live game on Monday in all areas except the kicking game. Instead of returning punts and kickoffs, play will begin where the kick comes down. If it's a deep kick, the ball will be placed at the 35 yard line.

Cooper baseballers advance with sweep

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — Abilene Cooper remained unbeaten in state baseball playoff action Friday, posting a 5-1 victory over El Paso Hanks here for a 2-0 sweep of the best-of-three area series.

The Cougars, 24-7 on the year, advance to the regional game against Fort Worth Arlington Heights Tuesday for one game in Abilene and then the "if necessary" doubleheader on Friday in Fort Worth. On both days, play is scheduled for 4 p.m.

Cooper pitcher Terry Suggs improved his season record to 9-4 with the victory over Hanks, throwing a three-hitter at the Knights while striking out 10. Dave Gonzalez took the loss and ended his season at 5-2. The Knights are out of the playoffs with a 19-9 record.

With a 1-0 lead, the Cougars picked up the deciding runs in the third inning. Doug Hadley, with one out, was hit by Gonzalez and went to second on Clay Clemmons single up the middle. Kent Strain then walked to load the bases.

Greg Badgett followed with a two-RBI double to the gap in right field for a 3-0 lead and, one out later, Strain stole home when Gonzalez' pitch got away from Timbo Dunkin. Cooper picked up its final run in the bottom of the fifth. Hanks' lone tally came in the top of the seventh.

Cooper started the area playoffs with a 6-3 victory over Hanks in El Paso on Tuesday.

Wranglers hoping to settle score

By The Associated Press

The Arizona Wranglers have several scores to settle with Denver tonight, not the least of which is a 17-7 loss to the Gold in the teams' first meeting this year.

Even before that April 1 game at Denver, Craig Morton, the coach of the Gold, had some unkind words about Arizona Coach George Allen, three of which were "liar .. .cheat ... thief."

What's more important to Allen at the moment is not getting even but getting back on a winning track as the United States Football League season heads into the homestretch. With six games remaining, Denver has a 7-5 record and is atop the Pacific Division, while Arizona and Los Angeles are tied for second, each at 5-7.

Also in the USFL tonight Memphis will be at Oakland and Jacksonville at Philadelphia. Sunday's games are Oklahoma at Houston, San Antonio at Washington, New Orleans at Tampa Bay and Michigan at Los Angeles. Monday night, it's Pittsburgh at New Jersey.

USFL Roundup

IN THE only Friday night game, Birmingham crushed Chicago 41-7 as Cliff Stoudt threw for 229 yards and two touchdowns. The victory improved the Stallions' record to 11-2, while the Blitz fell to 4-9.

"I'm not even thinking about the last time," Allen said of Morton's pregame diatribe at Denver. "I don't even want to bring it up. There were hard feelings. I think Morton carried some of that a little too far.

"I heard he was going to get fined. But he sent me a letter since the game's been over and it was very apologetic. Craig's a new coach and the more a guy coaches, the more he learns.

"When you're undefeated like they were then, things don't matter. But when you lose a few, you change your mind. I remember saying at the time, 'Let them lose two or three games and see how they feel.' Craig's going through that now."

Denver has lost four in a row, most recently 29-17 to the Blitz.

"They're a good team and they're a big team," Allen said of the Gold. "This is an opportunity to gain ground on them in the standings. We've got to keep our poise and not make any mistakes," the way they made them in a 14-3 loss last week in Oakland.

Quarterback Greg Landry, a 16-year pro who lost his starting job to young Alan Risher three games ago (two of them losses), has been restored to his No. 1 position.

"I think we're stronger now that Alan's got three games under his belt, but Greg's experience is more important. He has that leadership factor and in the past he's played well under pressure," Allen said. "We haven't moved the ball very well the past three games. Risher will get better and better as he plays more. However, we're running out of time."

OAKLAND, WHICH lost its first nine games of the season, now has won three in a row, as has Memphis, 5-7. The Invaders, with the next-to-worst defense in the league (only Chicago's has allowed more yards), will be going against Showboats' quarterback Walter Lewis, who last week tied a USFL record with five touchdown passes in a 38-14 rout of San Antonio.

Philadelphia, 11-1, is on a nine-game winning streak, matching the league mark set by the Stallions.

Morgan thunders to Colonial lead

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The rain made the golf course soft and things very hard on Gil Morgan.

A wave of afternoon thundershowers Friday gave Morgan a minor scare as he managed a one-stroke lead over Payne Stewart after two rounds of the $500,000 Colonial National Invitation golf tournament.

"I'm glad to be in," Morgan sighed after carding an early 3-under-par 67 for a 36-hole total of 133 and the lead at the midway point of the tournament over the Colonial Country Club.

Morgan missed the worst of the storm, including a 53-minute suspension in play that came after he was done, but did not escape unsullied. He was coasting along at eight under par when the rain caught him at the par-3 16th, where he took a double bogey.

"I think the rain upset my composure," said Morgan, a two-time winner last year and currently 11th among the money leaders with nearly $180,000.

Besides missing the brunt of the storm which briefly flooded some tees and greens, he also survived a scare on Thursday when he fired a 66 but thought for several shaky minutes he had signed a faulty scorecard.

"I hope I can think of something exciting to do today," he joked Friday.

Actually, it was Stewart and Sammy Rachels who provided most of the second-round excitement, not so much by the score they shot but how they arrived at it.

Stewart, who played his collegiate golf at Southern Methodist University in nearby Dallas, reeled off four straight birdies after the rain delay and his 4-under-par 66 was the best round of the day.

"Rain doesn't really affect me," he shrugged. "I just came in and had lunch and went back out."

He sank four 15-foot putts and two 20-footers after the suspension and his 134 total was one stroke ahead of Rachels and Peter Jacobsen, the first-round leader.

Rachels flashed through the front side like a West Texas prairie blaze, notching six birdies — five straight — and his 5-under-par 30 got him seven under for the tournament.

"I could have had one of those magic rounds," he said.

However, the slender Floridian, who has a history of back ailments, returned from the rain suspension and all but self-destructed. He hurt his back on a tee shot that caught the water at the par-3 13th and a double bogey wrecked what might have been.

He posted a 67 and said he was lucky just to have finished the round.

"It felt like something popped," he said. "I knew I hurt it, but it was difficult to tell how much ... I just scrambled my way to the clubhouse."

Rachels said he was not certain he could continue to play today.

Meanwhile, Jacobsen, who opened the day with a two-shot lead, found himself scrambling for pars most of the afternoon and seemed more than slightly pleased with the 71 that left him tied for third.

"A 71 on this course is not a bad round of golf," he insisted, adding that the rain didn't bother him.

"I grew up in Oregon ... I guess I'm a mudder from way back."

Scott Hoch, with a 67, and Mark Lye, 70, were at 136. Six players were at 137, including Craig Stadler.

Swale Preakness favorite

BALTIMORE (AP) — Approaching trainer Bill Boniface is an easy assignment.

"No comment," he says with a laugh and puffs on his pipe."I always wanted to say that."

Actually, the 65-year-old Boniface is willing and able to talk to the media, having been the racing editor at one of Baltimore's newspapers for more than 40 years.

Today, he bucked big odds as he sent longshot Pac Soldier against heavily-favored Swale, the Kentucky Derby winner, and eight other 3-year-olds in the $338,600 Preakness Stakes at Pimlico, the 1 3-16-mile second leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown.

Gate Dancer, the erratic runner who was disqualfied from fourth to fifth in the Kentucky Derby, Play On, the Withers winner, and Taylor's Special, the Louisiana Derby and Blue Grass winner, were considered among Swale's chief rivals in the 110th running for the black-eyed Susans and the winner's purse of $243,600.

No matter the outcome today, Boniface said Friday that the 109th Preakness will remain as his biggest thrill since his son, J. William, trained last year's upset winner, Deputed Testamony, who is partly owned by the elder Boniface.

"Last year was my first in retirement," he said, "but I had plenty to do, helping out Billy on the farm. It was a great day for our familiy and for all Marylanders."

Deputed Testamony, a home bred from the Bonifaces' nearby Bonita Farm in Bel Air, came from off the pace in the sloppy going to post a $31 payoff as Sunny's Halo, the Derby winner, finished sixth.

Boniface also has a one-third interest in Pac Soldier, who was purchased as a 2-year-old. Boniface's partners are two longtime newspapers friends, Philip Heisler, retired manging editor of the Baltimore Evening Sun, and William F. Schmick Jr., retired publisher of the Baltimore Sun.

Thus, their four-horse First Edition Stable is aptly named.

"For years Bill used to tell me what horses to bet," said Schmick. "Now he tells me what horses to buy."

"Actually, I knew a lot about horses before I got into writing because my farther was a horseman," Boniface said. "They (the Sunpapers) needed somebody who knew about horses, so I became their writer."

Pac Soldier, a strapping Maryland-bred son of Quartermaster, had won two of six starts this year and in his only stakes competition this year, finished fourth in the April 14 Tesio Stakes at Pimlico.

"We decided to give it (the Preakness) a shot," said Boniface whose colt is the lowest money-winner in the field with earnings of $38,310. "We're not getting any younger."

Still, Boniface was uncertain whether to run Pac Soldier in the Preakness.

"I just wanted to make sure I wasn't kidding myself about running this colt in the Preakness," he said. "Billy trained this colt last year and told me we ought to give it a shot."

Islanders face elimination in Cup

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Denis Potvin, captain of the New York Islanders, realizes that his team — winners of four straight Stanley Cup titles — is in trouble.

"We are now playing for our lives," said the veteran defenseman.

Billy Smith, the hero of the Islanders' past successes, who is struggling at present, also realizes the situation.

"We've played into their hands," Smith admitted about the Edmonton Oilers, who own a 3-1 lead in the 1984 Stanley Cup final and can clinch their first National Hockey League title with a victory at home Saturday night.

Islanders defenseman Ken Morrow also understands.

"We have to find some way to slow them down," Morrow acknowledged after the Oilers had used their superior speed to score two straight 7-2 home victories this week and take command of the best-of-seven series. "We are giving them too much room."

The Oilers understand something too. While the Islanders know they are in a desperate situation and must beat the Oilers three straight times to capture a record-tying fifth straight Stanley Cup, the Oilers know they can't get overconfident just one step away from the top of the hockey mountain.

"I don't think we need to think about winning the Cup," said Mark Messier, a prime candidate for the Conn Smythe Trophy as the most valuable players in the playoffs. "We know the fifth game has to be treated as just another game and we have to play with the same intensity."

And Paul Coffey, the high-scoring Oilers' defenseman who has been outstanding the past two games, has the same idea, and he hopes all his teammates do.

"We have to try not to get too excited about it, even though it's hard," Coffey said. "We have to save emotions for after we win.

"I know after the second period tonight (Thursday), I got goosebumps thinking about it. But we have to put those feelings aside and, hopefully, we can express them Saturday night."

The Islanders shut down the Oilers last year in a four-game sweep of the championship series. They did so again in the first two games of this series. But since coming to Edmonton, the Oilers have gotten their offense — which set NHL goal-scoring records the past three years — in gear. They've forced the Islanders out of the checking positions they favor, usually doing it with their skating speed. And they've been able to get the puck past the usually tough Smith, last year's Conn Smythe recipient.

"We should get credit for checking them well," said Coffey. "We've forced them with our forechecking and it has opened things up for us."

Opening up was the last thing the Islanders wanted in this series.

"The reason we've beaten the Oilers in the past is we have never allowed them to open up," Potvin said. "Now they are. The Oilers are extremely explosive and now they're confident."

How confident?

"Our confidence level is the highest it's been in my five years here," said defenseman Kevin Lowe. "We almost feel like world-beaters."

But none of the Oilers is claiming the Cup just yet.

"We're still afraid of the Islanders," Lowe said. "When they get a team down, they check so hard it seems like the lead is insurmountable. We know how it is to get kicked when we're down. Now we have to kick them while they're down, keep them down and win another game."

The Islanders never have been in this situation during the finals. They've lost as many times in this series as in their four previous championship rounds combined.

But they're also one of only two NHL teams to rally from a 3-1 deficit to win a playoff series. In 1975, their first year in the playoffs, the Islanders trailed Pittsburgh 3-0 but bounced back to win the next four games of their quarterfinal matchup.

In 1942, Toronto lost three straight games to Detroit, then came back to win the series and the Cup.

"We have to take it upon ourselves to do everything we can to win," said Islanders left wing Clark Gillies. "Obviously we haven't done it in the last two games.

"But don't count us out. We're a great hockey team with a lot of character."

DEAR ABBY

Woman loses respect for live-in

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Gary," the man I live with, informed me on Saturday night that we would have to be out of the house on Sunday afternoon because he promised to do his friend "Johnny" a favor. When I asked him what kind of favor, he told me that Johnny wanted to use our house to meet with his lawyer. Johnny is married and has two young children. Well, I came home a little early and was shocked to discover that Johnny was using the house to commit adultery!

Abby, Gary knew what Johnny wanted to use our house for and he allowed it. I never thought Gary would help anybody cheat on his wife because he caught his first wife cheating on him; that's why he divorced her.

I told Gary that I no longer respected him, couldn't trust him and I didn't want to sleep in the same bed Johnny and his girlfriend used to commit adultery. Then I packed up and moved out.

Gary says he can't understand why I left him. Can you? — DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Yes. Because you no longer respect him, can't trust him and didn't want to sleep in the same bed Johnny and his girlfriend used to commit adultery.

DEAR ABBY: We are having an ongoing battle at our house, which I hope you can settle. We have three children, Karen and Karla, 10-year-old twins, and Heather, who is 8. We live in a small apartment and have only two bedrooms for the three girls, so the twins have always shared one bedroom and Heather has had a room to herself.

When they were little, everyone was happy because the twins always wanted to be together. But all of a sudden the twins feel that it's not fair for them to have to share a room while Heather has a private room all to herself. So Karla and Karen want Heather to move out of her room for about six months while one twin moves into the private room, and the other twin shares a room with Heather. After six months, the other twin will get the private room and repeat the cycle.

Heather is heartbroken. She doesn't want to move out of her room because she has helped select the carpet, curtains, etc., and she feels it is "her" room for eternity. On the other hand, each twin feels she should have a turn at the private room, too.

They have been fighting like cats and dogs over this, and I want to do what would be fair for all concerned. How would you settle it, Abby? — MOTHER IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR MOTHER: All three girls should be treated as individuals. Having been born together should not deprive Karen and Karla of their rights as individuals. Each sister should occupy the private room for an agreed length of time.

DEAR ABBY: I read your advice to "Unsure About Rocky." You said, "Spaying a female reduces her chance of uterine infections..."

Since the uterus is removed in doing a spay, it's like saying, "A guillotine will reduce the chances of a headache." — IRENE W. BRYANT, D.V.M.

POSITIVE THINKING

'Debt doctor' offers hope for debtors

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

I met an amazing man who runs a collection agency. He calls himself a "debt doctor." Such organizations take over uncollected debts from business firms and get as much money as possible out of the delinquents. Usually on a commission basis.

I have always thought that men in this business must be the hard-nosed type who get a kind of sadistic pleasure from badgering other people. But I was wrong. Surprisingly, this collection man is a rare character. He was in business, he declared, to help people get their affairs organized.

He would call on a family whose account with a department store, let us say, was long overdue. "This is what you owe," he would explain, "so let's get together and try to find a way to do something about it."

Then the debt-ridden husband would begin to explain, perhaps, that he had an extravagant wife, that there had been illness or business conditions were bad. "I'm absolutely swamped with bills," was the usual frustrated explanation. "I have no respect for myself any more, and I know that other people have no respect for me either. I'm sick and fed up with the whole futile business. There's just no way out of the mess."

After he had given the unhappy man opportunity to pour out his woes, the collection agent or debt doctor would suggest: "There is a way out and we will find it. And to start, what do you say — let's put the whole matter on the table and pray silently about it."

This would usually so startle the debtor that he would be willing to do anything, even pray. Then the agent would go on: "Let's see, now. What is your income? What are your assets, as small as they may be? Let's organize thing so that by paying off a little each week you'll ultimately get out from under. I'll get in touch with your creditors and tell them the exact amount they can expect regularly from you even if it's only a little. Using this systemized approach, we will get you out of financial trouble sooner than you think."

The agent grinned at me. "You ought to see the change in a guy the minute he gets organized and begins to pay up. Before long he gets a new self-respect. Seeing an out from his troubles, he keeps at it and soon his bills will have been cut by ten percent, then twenty and he then becomes excited that he'll have them all cleaned up eventually. When there is, say, ony twenty-five percent left, he'll start knowing that people are beginning to have respect for him again. They always respect an honest and systematic person who is trying to solve his problems." And better still he gets a new respect for himself.

An upstate New York farmer, an old friend of mine, had a homey and very sound philosophy of life, together with the gift of simple and potent expression. I was constantly surprised and enlightened by his insights. Once I heard im tell a boy, "To respect yourself and be respected, simply live up to your best." The more you think of it, that bit of advice has the earmark of real wisdom. Do that, and you can look yourself and everyone else in the face. And the person who truly earns his own personal esteem is very likely to have the respect of others also.

Brown has called on his father, John "J.R." Brown, for pinch-hitting duty in the courtroom during the next four to six weeks until a new bailiff is hired.

Bedroom community ready for business

SANGER, Texas (AP) — Until the auctioneer's gavel banged on the final item sold, Sanger Chamber of Commerce members were holding their breath.

The proceeds from the Chamber's annual auction at the Double JP Ranch, will start the first full-time Sanger Chamber of Commerce office. Once the office is established and running smoothly, the Chamber, city and school will begin a program to bring in new industry.

"We have never had an organized chamber of commerce in recent years to actively pursue businesses," said Chamber President Charlie Roe. "We have never had the time or the people to devote to it."

Sanger is predominantly a bedroom community. The majority of its residents travel to Denton, Gainesville and the Dallas-Fort Worth area to work. Sanger city officials want to create a more self-contained community by attracting industry that will employ some of the city's residents.

"We want to maintain a healthy balance between business, industry and residential property," said City Manager Lloyd Henderson.

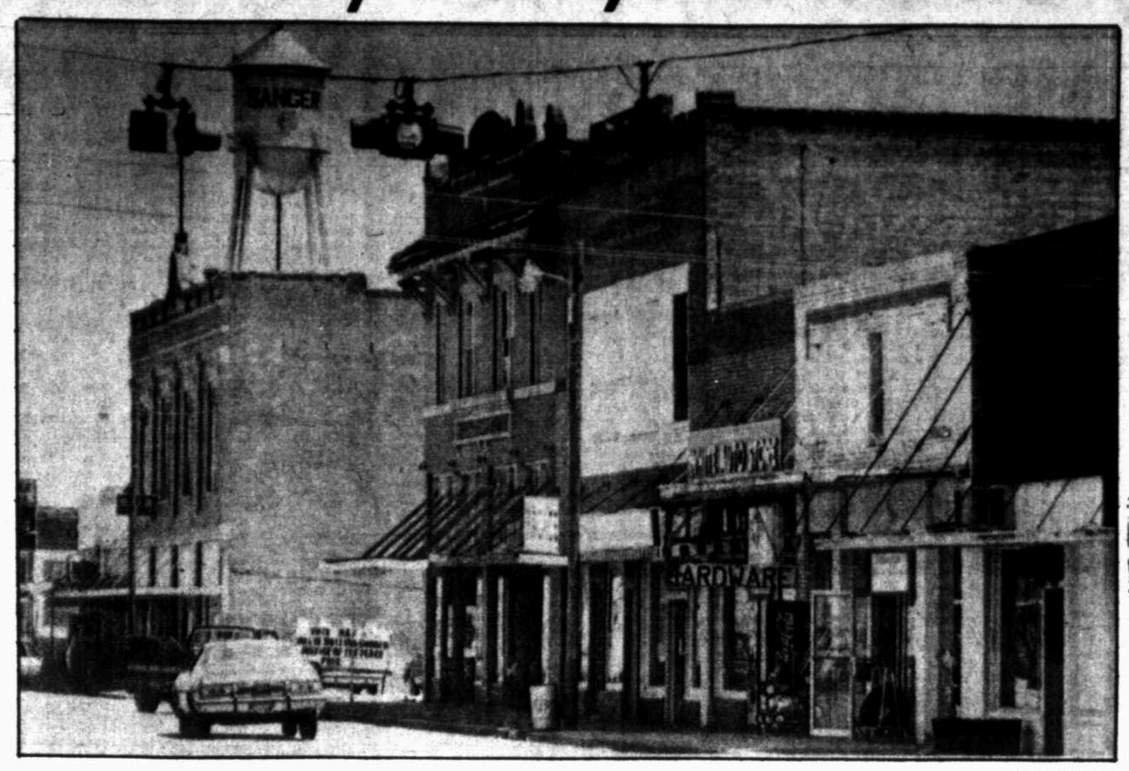

Sanger currently has more than 2,500 residents. Nine manufacturing companies located here employ about 140 people.

Henderson and Roe believe Sanger's major selling point is its location nestled in north central Denton County and surrounded by open land. The growth potential is unlimited, they say.

The city is surrounded by Denton, 12 miles to the south; by Gainesville, 21 miles to the north; by open land on the west; and by what will eventually be Ray Roberts Lake on the east.

"There's lots of land around (Sanger) that can be purchased at reasonable prices," said City Manager Lloyd Henderson. "Plus we have good access to D-FW (regional airport), as well as Santa Fe (railroad) access."

City officials have set aside two areas on Interstate 35 for industrial development. Landowners in the designated area have agreed to sell all or part of their land parcels to developers, Henderson said.

Many of the buildings in downtown Sanger, Texas, are vacant, but officials are hoping to attract more business and industry to the north central Texas community.

One area is a 25-acre tract of land on the west side of Interstate 35 that will be developed for small industries and businesses, he said. Another is a 50-acre tract north of Sanger set aside for large industrial development. There are no restrictions on either, he said.

One of the ways city officials have prepared for growth is through improvement of support services.

Henderson said a new water tower and well were recently finished. Water facilities will handle a population of up to 8,000. Construction had begun to double the sewer plant capacity, which will handle a population of about 6,000, he said.

And within the past year, Sanger opened a new landfill that is expected to handle city needs for 30 years.

Now the emphasis is shifting toward recreation and beautifying the city, he said.

The city plans to ask owners of vacant lots for use of their land to install playground equipment for children. In return for the use of the land, the city agrees to maintain it, Henderson said, and will remove the equipment with seven days notice.

A four-acre park proposal was recently approved by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, he said. Completion is set for the end of the summer. The park will include two soccer fields, a softball field, tennis and basketball courts and two open play areas.

Although city officials are not against that, they are concerned that such a relocation would take away business from the already-ailing, older downtown portion of the city.

So the city formed an agreement with the state highway department to move the Sanger exit so visitors will drive through downtown on Bolivar Street.

Henderson and Roe are hoping that will attract new businesses and restaurants to the almost-deserted area.

'Chipping' potatoes adds calories

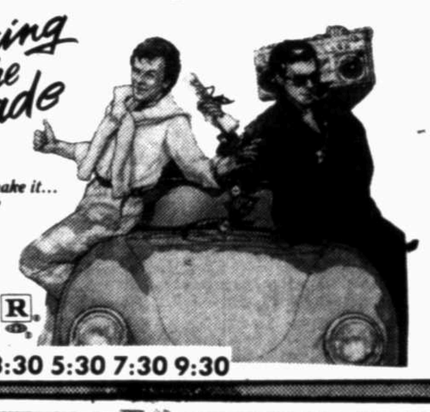

Bake it, and the average potato contains about 150 calories, or about 250 calories fewer than the average quarter-of-a-pound meat portion.

But, according to nutritionists, converting half a cup of potatoes to potato chips increases the caloric value about six times.

Strike threatens German economic revival

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Just as West Germany's economy begins to revive after a long recession, a strike in the automotive industry for a 35-hour workweek is threatening to switch off the engine of European recovery.

Mercedes-Benz assembly lines were hit by walkouts Wednesday because of a components shortage, caused by metalworker strikes launched Monday in parts factories.

BMW production was at a standstill for two hours today while workers met to discuss the company announced shutdown due to lack of components. BMW closed assembly lines after the late shift Thursday at 11 p.m. local time, with the exception of its West Berlin motorcycle plant, which shut down Friday at the same time.

The West German automobile industry, which encompasses 1.6 million workers, is the keystone of the world's most export-oriented economy. Automakers export more than half of the nearly 4 million cars produced annually, and their business is a barometer for the entire economy.

An industry-wide shutdown would mean a loss of 18,000 vehicles a day, and a prolonged conflict would rule out attainment of the 3 percent economic growth that had been predicted for 1984 after four years of stagnation.

Any decline in the West German economy also would imperil chances for modest gains in other Common Market countries, whose economic progress depends on the German "locomotive."

THE metalworkers' strike "couldn't have come at a more inopportune time," declared Rolf Rodenstock, outgoing president of the national employers' association.

Rodenstock called labor's demands for a five-hour reduction in the workweek without cuts in pay "totally exaggerated" and said the conflict would puncture the economic recovery before it has a chance to start rolling.

The strike is symptomatic of a confrontational trend in labor-management relations in West Germany, where workers rarely resort to walkouts. The last metal industry strike was six years ago.

Leaders of IG Metall, the country's largest union with 2.5 million members, have staked their careers on obtaining at least "entry" into the 35-hour week without pay cuts — meaning they would only settle for something under the current 40-hour week.

IG Metall has said it wants the reduction in order to create and protect jobs, to reduce stress on the job and to give workers more time for families, hobbies and politics. Hans Mayr, chairman of IG Metall, added another reason: "It is essential not only to protect the worker from loss of income, but also to protect the entire economy from a decline in (consumer) demand."

This poster was published last month by the employers' association and photographed in Frankfurt, Germany. It resembles a Japanese flag and the writing reads "The competitiors in eastern Asia are welcoming the 35-hour workweek in Germany."

UNION POSTERS across the country reading "Jobs For Everyone" refer to labor's claim that a 35-hour workweek would put at least half of West Germany's 2.25 million unemployed — 9.1 percent of the labor force — back to work.

But employers have flatly ruled out a 35-hour workweek, saying that labor costs would zoom 14 to 18 percent and ruin the country's competitive position abroad.

The employers' association has hung up its own posters showing a Japanese flag with a slogan reading, "The competition in Eastern Asia hails the 35-hour workweek in Germany."

The employers have offered a 3.3 percent wage hike plus an early retirement plan and more flexibility in working hours for some groups of workers, but labor won't budge.

West German automobile workers earned the equivalent of $11.75 an hour on the average last month, according to the West German automobile association; among American autoworkers, salaries currently range from $9 to $12 an hour for those employed at component plants to nearly $13 an hour at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., according to Wall Street auto analysts.

THE VALUE of American autoworkers' benefits runs from about $5 an hour to $10 an hour at the Big Three automakers. West German employers must contribute 9.25 percent of an employee's gross monthly pay to the state pension plan, 6 percent to the state health plan and 2.25 percent to state unemployment insurance. Workers also get other benefits, including one month's pay as a holiday bonus. German workers older than 30 commonly get six weeks of vacation. A current strike at Citroen plants by French autoworkers demanding a 35-hour week without pay cuts may figure in West German employers' reluctance to compromise.

Workers in the French car industry have a 38½-hour workweek, but Citroen employees are demanding shorter hours as a hedge against proposed job cuts.

The pro-business West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has branded demands for a 35-hour week "dumb and absurd."

His government believes that only sustained economic growth can create the jobs needed to make a significant reduction in West German unemployment.

Economists say 3 percent growth this year would put 200,000 people back to work.

BEHIND LABOR'S demand for a shorter week is widespread fear of automation that could eliminate more jobs.

In the auto industry, union members are particularly concerned about assembly line robots, which employers say are essential to raise production standards and keep the industry competitive with the Japanese car makers.

But Rodenstock, in a speech Tuesday in Bonn, cautioned against shorter working hours. Instead, he urged industry to create jobs with technological innovation and to abandon outdated production and jobs that often require state subsidies to remain competitive.

Stressing the foreign market, Rodenstock noted that about one-third of West Germany's labor force is working for exports.

German tank gunner lives with former enemies

CREPON, France (AP) — Herbert Drossler, a German tank gunner, fought in many of the fiercest battles that followed the Allied D-Day landings in Normandy 40 years ago. Since then, however, he has lived among his former enemies in this tiny French village.

It has not always been easy. In the early days, after he was released as a prisoner of war, there was the expected resentment, if not outright hostility toward a "dirty Boche."

"In the beginning, I didn't speak French and it was very hard," said Drossler, 58, who now converses in nearly perfect French with only a whisper of an accent that could be mistaken for Alsatian.

"Once I learned the language, it was a lot better. The hatred against the Germans has passed now. I can't complain about my treatment. I am well received here and have a lot of friends."

That fact was apparent during a long conversation one recent afternoon in Crepon's only cafe, where villagers stopped by to chat, to laugh and to joke with the man who once was shot in the leg by members of the French Resistance.

A good-humored man with an easy smile, Drossler recounted the story of a Frenchman he was working with one day years ago in a factory. The co-worker was avidly anti-German.

"He would say, 'I hate the Boche. If I saw one, I would kill him.' I told him: 'Me too. I'd help you.'

"Later, in the lunchroom, he continued to talk. He pointed me out to other workers and said, 'See him? He hates the Germans, too.' Somebody said, 'Are you crazy? He's a German. Didn't you know?'

"He came up to me and said, 'Is it true? Are you German?'

"I said no, I'm a Boche."

They went on to become friends.

Drossler was one of six brothers from Thuringia, in what was to become East Germany, who all fought in the German army during World War II. Five of the brothers were wounded, one of them three times. All survived the war. Herbert Drossler entered the army in May 1943 and two months later was sent to France.

When the Allies stormed ashore in Normandy on D-Day, June 6, 1944, Drossler was in the German Tiger Division in the Cherbourg area. His unit immediately went into combat against American airborne troops that had been dropped in the region.

The Americans dropped dummies first, which confused and then angered the Germans, Drossler said. "But when I saw the first dead soldier, I knew it wasn't a diversion, that it was serious and no longer a joke.

"During the day (June 6), we advanced, we retreated. There were casualties. It was war."

After three days, the division fell back to the area of Carentan and Falaise.

"We were encircled. The fighting was heavy. Tilly-sur-Seulles, we took it seven times. There were a lot of dead. They decorated us at Tilly."

Finally, at 10:30 a.m., Aug. 21, 1944, Drossler was taken prisoner by the Americans at St. Sever.

"The track had been blown off our tank, but we were still rolling on the wheels. The SS had opened a hole in the encirclement and an officer tried to get us to break out, but I knew if we left we would be killed. We waited in a barn from Aug. 19 to 21 to be captured.

"There were 28 of us. We had been shelled for three days. I was guarding the door of the barn when I saw somebody come up. He told us to fall in behind a line of other prisoners."

For Drossler, that was the end of the war and the beginning of a long imprisonment.

Later, the prisoners were asked if they wanted to do some work. Drossler volunteered. Eventually, he went to work on a farm near Crepon, a village of 200 people, where he stayed until October 1949. The last years, they were prisoners without guards.

"My father wrote to me that if I came home, I would not be happy. They were in the Russian zone. In the beginning, they had a lot of trouble. He said if you are happy and can make a living, you should stay there."

Drossler worked at a number of jobs and finally ended up at the Renault factory at Blainville, from which he is now retired. He lives here with his French wife, Raymonde, a widow whom he married five years ago.

"I have no regrets," he said, reflecting over his life of the past 40 years.

And when the occasional German tourist wanders through the village, people fetch Drossler to act as interpreter.

Inmate says he's finally free of obsessive drive

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Doug Seymour says he is finally free of the monstrous pressure that swelled up inside him and manifested itself in an obsessive drive to commit sex crimes.

Seymour, a former Vidor High School honor student and football star, says that awful compulsion is gone now and he's feeling good.

Seymour, who is imprisoned in Huntsville at the Texas Department of Corrections, says he is sorry for the lives he has devastated.

The 24-year-old Seymour claims that psychiatric counseling has helped rehabilitate him and now he wants to help prevent — instead of commit — sexual assault.

He recently shared his story during a two-hour interview conducted at the prison. He asked that the name of the unit be withheld.

Seymour is 6 feet 3 inches tall and a solid 210 pounds. Dressed in the standard TDC prison whites, he wears brown frame glasses and has a small scar over his right eye from a beating he received in prison.

Seymour wants the TDC to allow him to go out to the public — even if it's in handcuffs — and tell groups of women what measures they can take to lessen the chances of becoming sexual assault victims.

He wants to warn women that they are vulnerable when they are alone in public.

HE SAYS he would stress that they should never open their door to a stranger. If a stranger asks to borrow the phone, keep the door locked and make the call for him, Seymour advises.

He cautions that sliding chain locks can be broken with force. Windows should be covered with foil and venetian blinds should be turned up — someone can see through when the slats are turned down, he says.

Seymour is speaking from personal experience on all counts.

It was difficult for those who knew Seymour to believe that the model young man was the "West End Rapist" that Beaumont police officers had tracked for a long period of time. Some people still don't believe it, he says.

In 1975, when Seymour was 16, his promising life took on a dark and secret dimension shortly after the night he says he became the victim of a bizarre and traumatic rape.

Seymour says he was driving in Beaumont one night when he stopped to help a motorist, a black woman, who was stranded on the side of the road. He took her to her home and says that before he could leave he was raped by this person who was actually a man — a transvestite.

He kept the pain and humiliation bottled up inside and within two months he began trying to "get the bad feeling off" by exposing himself — to black women only.

After three years of that, he began exposing himself to white women while working as a mail carrier with a post office in Beaumont's West End.

IN 1979, two years after he graduated from high school, Seymour married a girl who had been a cheerleader at Vidor. They were divorced last August. They had two sons, now 6 and 2 years old.

Seymour said he thought getting married would help him stop exposing himself. But it did not, he says.

He was finally caught in December 1979. He spent one night in the Jefferson County Jail. And a year later he would be fined $50 for exposing himself.

In 1980 he graduated to sexual abuse and rape. Over a two-year-period Seymour actually committed two rapes out of what he says were 10 or 12 attempts.

For the past two years, Seymour has been serving time for conviction on five felony charges — two counts of aggravated sexual abuse, attempted aggravated rape, burglary of a habitation and robbery.

Seymour was sentenced to 20 years on each of the five counts, said David Grove, an assistant district attorney in Beaumont. Since the sentences are concurrent, Seymour will be eligible for parole after being imprisoned just over six years. That will be in 1988.

Seymour says he began feeling that he had to commit rape to relieve the pressure inside.

HE SAYS he wanted very badly to stop committing sex crimes and thought that if he raped someone he would be able to stop altogether. But he was wrong.

Seymour selected his victims in Beaumont, particulary at three shopping malls. He only picked on women who were alone and looked vulnerable.

He based his selection on a very specific image etched in his mind — an image based on the transvestite who raped him.

Seymour had a specific mode of operation in his sexual assaults. He broke into a woman's home and would pretend he was robbing her. One time he got one dollar, he says.

He used a gun, but claims it actually was unloaded.

Seymour says he never wanted to hurt anyone and he never hit a woman. He claims that the only time he would rape a woman was if she did not refuse or if she showed no emotion. The biggest deterrent for him was when a victim cried.

He picked out one of his victims two months before the rape occurred. The night his wife was in the hospital delivering their baby, he broke into the woman's home and raped her at gunpoint.

A month later, he went back to the same woman's house to rape her again. Fortunately, he says, she wasn't home.

One woman he followed to a laundromat in Port Arthur. However, she left while he waited in his car and he ended up assaulting another woman, who happened to be a tenant at the Vidor apartments that he was managing then.

But now, he says he wants to help prevent rape.

He has been corresponding with Det. Sgt. Frank Coffin of the Beaumont Police Department, offering his own insights into various sex crimes the officers are investigating.

Coffin says that "his impressions are real interesting," and that it helps to get a different point of view on an offense.

SATURDAY SCHOOL

Ronnie doesn't realize it ... but right now he's in school! Sitting on that warm rock with his dog and his trusty fishing pole, he's learning the ways of nature and the fun of living. There's hardly a minute, at home or at play, that he isn't learning something. And, of course, from Monday to Friday in the regular classroom, he studies man's accumulated knowledge and how to make use of it.

How about Sunday? Well, there's a lot of learning to be done on Sundays too, and it's the kind that helps a child to develop truth, honesty and integrity. The Church sets high standards for its young people ... and youngsters love to be challenged! Church School encourages Ronnie to reach high and to strive for the best that's in him ... so that he may become the man God meant him to be.

Saturday 1 Peter 2:1-10	Wednesday 1 John 3:19-24
Sunday John 14:1-14	Thursday Psalm 145:1-21
Monday Acts 9:26-31	Friday Revelation 21:1-8

Retired clergyman dishes out doughnuts at Methodist meeting

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

RELIGION

BALTIMORE (AP) — This time, he carried a cane, something he hadn't needed before. But it didn't slacken his energies in rounding up the customary doughnuts and also on this particular occasion, the forgotten but fitting flowers.

Those special, individual gestures were carried out at the United Methodist governing conference here last week by the Rev. Elmer Schmitt who officially had nothing to do with the big, organizational tuning up of church operations.

But the 69-year-old retired clergyman of Sunnyvale, Calif., had a lot to do with perking up reporters who covered the 11-day affair, and with precipitating for its main hero some appropriately due respect.

Schmitt, a friendly, easygoing and observant minister, has made it on his own to all of the denomination's top legislative conferences for 30 years — eight of them, one every four years, beginning in 1956.

He's not on hand for any assigned duty as one of the 1,000 voting delegates or in some staff role, but strictly at his own initiative and expense to say, as he puts it, "thank you" to his denomination by providing doughnuts in the news room.

"The doughnut man," he's called by reporters, many of whom have come to know him well through the years and who have made up many a missed breakfast with those doughnuts he heaps beside the news room coffee urn.

"I get a kick out of it," he says as he and his wife, Ruth, bring in the morning batch.

But this time, with the 200th anniversary of the start here of organized Methodism being celebrated at the conference, Schmitt discovered that something else was sorely needed.

With all the festivals, speeches and allusions to that founding meeting in 1784 of circuit-riding preachers and their first bishop, Francis Asbury, Schmitt one afternoon made a lone, thoughtful visit to Asbury's grave.

"I was horrified," he says. The grave, situated in Mount Olivet Cemetery on Baltimore's Frederick Road, was barren of any kind of decoration — no flowers, no wreath, no church banner or any display of remembrance.

"This had been completely overlooked, despite all the fanfare of the bicentennial of Methodism that the pioneer bishop had begun 200 years ago," Schmitt says.

Like many other out-of-town clergy, Schmitt served as a guest preacher on Sunday at a local congregation.

Methodist churches join in celebration

All the Methodist churches of Midland will join together in observance of Aldersgate Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the sanctuary of First United Methodist Church, Main at Illinois.

The worship service will feature a combined choir of over 100 voices from the several church singing hymns written by Charles Wesley. This joint meeting is a part of the Bicentennial celebrations as the Methodist churches observe their 200th anniversary in America.

Methodist churches in Midland are African Methodist Episcopal, Greater St. Lukes; Christian Methodist Episcopal; Free Methodist; and the seven United Methodist churches: Asbury, El Calvario, First, Hollowell, St. Luke's, St. Mark's and St. Paul. Each of these churches will have a member or pastor participating in the leadership of the service Sunday night.

The Aldersgate Service commemorates the experience of John Wesley on May 24, 1738, at a Methodist Society meeting on Aldersgate Street in London. This "heart warming" experience was a turning point in his life and ministry. John Wesley was the "father" of the Methodist movement in England and the United States.

The Methodist Church in North America was officially organized in the "Christmas Conference," Dec. 24, 1784, in Lovely Lane Chapel, Baltimore, Md.

The offering of the Aldersgate Service Sunday will be designated for the restoration fund for Lovely Lane Church. One of the aspects of the Bicentennial is raising funds for the church building's restoration, which, although in poor repair, is recognized as one of the outstanding architectural structures in the U.S.

Texts distort religion's role

WASHINGTON (AP) — History textbooks used in public schools "neglect, deny and distort" the role of religion in America's past, says the report of a study by Learn Inc., a private foundation that stresses traditional teaching methods.

It says an examination of 20 different textbooks used in suburban Montgomery County in Maryland found that the only extensive discussion of religious influences had to do with the New England's colonial Puritans, with most references to them negative and superficial.

Religious influences since then get little or no attention, the report says, adding that although the country was settled by people seeking religious freedom, "religion is taken to be negligible in American history."

Rabbi wants coalition

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — The president of the Rabbinical Assembly, representing Conservative Judaism, has urged rabbis to take the lead in a new black-Jewish coalition to combat problems facing the nation.

Rabbi Arnold Goodman told the organization's annual meeting that Jews and blacks worked closely together in the civil rights struggles of the 1960's and despite recent differences, the two groups' "historic ties...must be strengthened" to work for "the full potential of democracy."

Speaker of California assembly enjoying job, political power

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Willie Brown, one of the most powerful black politicians in the nation, whipped his smoke-black Jaguar through the city streets, a world away from his poor Texas upbringing.

Moments later, the speaker of the California Assembly faced 800 high school students and recounted just how far he had come since he was their age.

"When I lived in Mineola, Texas," he said, his eyes twinkling and his expressive face beginning his wide grin, "I couldn't have a glimmer that one of these days I would be handling $30 billion of mostly white people's money.

"That is an AWE-some amount of power!"

"I can pass or kill any piece of legislation existing in this state," Brown told the students, adding that he was primarily responsible for passing the state budget, which next year will hit the $30 billion mark.

Brown relishes his triumphs and flaunts the power, fame, expensive suits and fast cars he has earned through his forcefulness and intelligence.

Brown's political clout was displayed recently when 1,200 guests turned up at the San Francisco Hilton to help him celebrate his 50th birthday. By paying $500 each for a dinner of rock Cornish game hen, they helped him raise half a million dollars which in turn will help him elect Democrats to the Assembly.

Brown, who has spent 20 years in the state Assembly, has been the speaker of the lower house since December 1980. After Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, he is the most powerful politician in California.

Children on the streets and men on airplanes recognize him and call out, "Hey, Willie!" He is the subject of national magazine and television profiles. He will receive more national attention this summer, when the Democratic National Convention meets in his home city.

His power prompted Assembly Republicans to sponsor a proposition on the June 5 presidential primary ballot that would limit the speaker's power in a variety of ways. The speaker has almost absolute control over members' committee assignments and shapes legislation that emerges from the Assembly.

Brown arrived in San Francisco in 1951 as a naive 17-year-old with the modest goal of wanting to become a math teacher and "achieve a comfortable living for me and my family."

He was born and grew up in Mineola, Texas, population 4,300, about 40 miles east of Dallas. He was the fourth of five children. His mother worked as a domestic in Dallas; his father was a railroad porter who left the family when his son was 6.

Brown, raised mainly by his grandmother in a one-room unpainted house in the black part of Mineola, picked berries in the hot Texas summer sun and shined shoes for 25 cents a pair at a local barber shop.

He left town the day he graduated from high school on May 25, 1951, and headed to California with his uncle Itie Collins, a flamboyant, former professional gambler whose tales of the wonders of San Francisco dazzled him.

He couldn't get into Stanford University, his dream, but later won admission to San Francisco State on a special minority probation program.

Brown worked his way, mainly as a janitor, through college. After graduation from law school, he set up his own practice. He began as a criminal lawyer and now represents wealthy developers before city and county agencies.

At State he had met Blanche Vitero, the sweetheart of his fraternity. They were married in 1957 and have three children: Susan, 25, a television production assistant in New York; Robin, 23, a magazine graphic artist in New York; and Michael, 20, working in San Francisco. Brown and his wife, who teaches dance at State, are now legally separated.

He first came to public attention in 1960 when he tried to buy a house in an all-white San Francisco neighborhood; he also organized one of the first sit-ins protesting racial discrimination outside the South.

Two years later he defeated a 22-year Democratic incumbent in a primary.

A quarter horse mare gave birth to a male zebra Thursday. Doctors from the Louisville zoo and a Simpsonville veterinarian induced labor after waiting a month past the normal 11-month pregnancy. Attending the baby, left, were zoo veterinarian Dr. Bill Foster, Scooter Sheehan and Terry McDaniel.

'Surrogate' horse gives birth to zebra

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A Kentucky quarter horse mare made history today by giving birth to a healthy male zebra as a "surrogate mother," zoo officials said.

Never before has a horse given birth to a zebra, the familiar striped animal from Africa, said officials at the Louisville Zoo.

The zebra embryo, fertilized normally a year ago Wednesday, was implanted in the mare's womb last May by Dr. Bill Foster, veterinarian at the Louisville Zoo and Dr. Scott Bennett, a veterinarian from Simpsonville in nearby Shelby County.

The doctors induced labor this morning after waiting a month past the normal 11-month term pregnancy for horses and zebras.

The delivery took a little more than five minutes and shouts went up from participants as the infant zebra was born.

"It's got stripes," Bennett yelled.

The doctors said the experiment is important to scientists because a similar procedure could be used to increase the populations of vanishing and endangered equine species such as Grevey's and Chapman's zebras.

Foster said the foal appeared to be the normal size and weight for a newborn zebra — 65 to 70 pounds — and about two-thirds the size of a normal horse foal.

The veterinarians said they would have preferred to wait on the mare to go into labor naturally, but said they couldn't wait any longer because the horse began dripping its colostrum, or first milk, in the past day or so. That milk, which contains special antibodies that give the foal immunity to a range of diseases, would be gone after about 48 hours.

Foster said the doctors aren't sure whether the birth could have occurred normally.

The horse belongs to Embry and Norene Rucker of Prospect. For most of the term, the horse remained at their farm, but was moved to an undisclosed location when the birth appeared imminent to protect the mother and foal.

Keeping peace is in their blood

ATHENS, Texas (AP) — In Athens Police Chief Dave Harris Jr. and his son, Henderson County Deputy Sheriff Dave Harris III, there's the continuation of a rich heritage in law enforcement dating back over 100 years.

Beginning in 1865 with Ranger J.C. McDuffy of Tennessee, six generations have watched the influence of the law enforcement field change the shape of the Southwest.

Although not much is known about the two earliest lawmen, J.C. McDuffy and his son, Ed McDuffy, both from Tennessee, there is quite a legend surrounding the third peace officer, Texas Ranger Dan McDuffy.

According to Texas Ranger William Warren Sterling, author of "Trails and Trials of a Texas Ranger," McDuffy was one of "our best Rangers."

He was also responsible for hosting what is known as the "great whiskey amnesty of 1923."

According to legend, over 80 stills used for illegal sales of alcohol (bootlegging) were voluntarily handed over to McDuffy in exchange for personal amnesty.

"The story went nationwide," Dave Jr. commented. "It gave him (McDuffy) a reputation."

On July 7, 1931 Dan McDuffy met his doom in the East Texas oil town of Gladewater where he lived. According to Sterling, McDuffy's assassin was a man who had been constable of the precinct and later served as city jailer.

At the height of the boom, ex-Ranger W.A. Dial was appointed Gladewater chief of police. The man he replaced had been forcibly discharged and had "sworn to wreak vengeance on the new chief."

"Armed with a 30-30 Winchester, the ex-constable appeared on the streets yelling and cursing," Sterling wrote. "He defied anyone to arrest him and threatened the lives of bystanders."

McDuffy, a friend of the gunman, talked Dial into handling the matter "in his own way." McDuffy was later found fatally wounded by gunshot. The gunman was instantly killed by Dial.

"The merciful but imprudent Ranger died in an ambulance en route to the hospital, unafraid to the last. He crossed the Great Divide with these words to his comrades, 'Boys, I hope to see you all on the Other Side.'"

Dave Harris Jr. reported that writer Bobbie Flunker, known for his research on Bonnie and Clyde, is putting together a book on Ranger Dan McDuffy's life for future publication.

McDuffy's daughter, Nina McDuffy, married David Harris Sr. in 1934 "because he was a farmer," their son explained. "My mother wasn't real crazy about Dad becoming a peace officer, partly because of what had happened to her father (Dan McDuffy)."

Dave Sr.'s farming career was short-lived, however. He served as deputy sheriff, justice of the peace, and first chief of police ever in New Boston, Texas.

He was an officer of Bowie County until the age of 70, served as justice of the peace until last year and finally retired at 79.

"My earliest memories of law enforcement are of when I was 14 or 15," Dave Jr. said. "I started riding with some of the officers and eventually I became a dispatcher for Boyce County.

"When I ws eight or nine I remember the 'Phantom Killer' of Texarkana who gave the town the reputation as "The Town That Dreaded Sundown.' Lone Wolf Gonzales was working as investigattor in the case. I don't think he (the killer) was ever caught.

"Mom wanted me to be a school teacher. It worked on my brother Dan. He's a high school principal for Denver City, but he's also a lieutenant over the reserves of Yocum County."

Dave Jr. spent six years going to Texas A&M, Texarkana College and Henderson County Junior College. He served in the 49th Armoured Division of the 117th Medical Battalion.

He began his basic training and specialized courses in 1962 at HCJC and at Kilgore Police Academy.

"I chose Athens when R.D. Hamruel retired from the Highway Patrol and offered me a job working for him under the chief of police," Dave Jr. explained. He has served in Athens for 21 years.

"We have bad days and good days. I've seen a lot of things happen — kids and police killed, car wrecks and murders. I wish I hadn't seen those things, but I just never thought about any other career. I had a farm at one time with livestock; I could have managed a grocery store or a bowling alley. I have no regrets," he said.

"I enjoy Athens and the people of Athens. I don't want to go any place else or do anything else. This is my home."

Harris' son, David III, replaced Randy McGee as Henderson County deputy sheriff on Jan. 9. When asked how he felt about his son choosing law enforcement as a career, Dave Jr.explained, "You've got to put things into perspective; you can get killed driving down the street. To say I don't worry would be a lie. I've carried many caskets and been to many funerals of peace officers. It's on my mind.

As a new deputy sheriff in Athens, Dave III recalls similar childhood experiences as his father. A graduate of Athens High School in 1982, he decided to take a couple of law enforcement classes in college to "see what it was like."

"I never felt any pressure from my father to get into this field. He told me I could pick any profession as long as I was happy with it. He also warned me about all the ups and downs of being a peace officer.

Historic town prizes its traditional ways

WASHINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Old-fashioned buildings and old-fashioned virtues are something to be prized in this small Mason County community four miles south of the Ohio River.

The town's bank is in a log cabin and so is the post office. On Sundays, a church bell rings from an 18th-century steeple. And the mile-square area of downtown is called "Old Washington," just to distinguish it from the newer suburbs that also have a "Washington" address.

A new home along the main street is anything less than a century old and residents look on old homes as challenges they can turn into antique shops.

This is a town with a past to be proud of. In 1790, it was the second largest city in Kentucky, with 462 people. It has about the same number today.

Washington stakes a claim to being the first town west of the Alleghenies to have public waterworks, a macadam road, and a post office, which was the distributing point for all points west.

In 1809, Zachary Taylor, who later became president, performed his first public duty when he was stationed here for recruiting purposes, and Confederate general Albert Sidney Johnston was born here in 1803.

The town's fall as a "metropolitan" center started in the early 1800s when steamboat traffic along the Ohio River began expanding neighboring Maysville, which had grown to a city of 5,000 residents by the time the county seat was moved there from Washington in 1848.

Washington remained an educational and cultural center through the late 1800s, although it steadily lost population.

The town remained relatively unchanged through the first 50 years of the current century. Postmistress Mary Bickley said an attempt to bring something new into town about 25 years ago had sparked a revival, getting people to think about what treasures they had.

"What really got things started was they wanted to turn the old Methodist Church into something we didn't want," Miss Bickley said.

Since then, Miss Bickley said many area residents had been taking a second look at their homes and their town. A historic district was created in 1969 and it was placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

No longer does Washington enjoy the commercial success it had in the 18th century. Even U.S. 68 was moved out of town and out of the middle of things. Nowadays, Washington has one service station, one convenience market and 15 antique shops.

But its renovation draws busloads of people in the summer to wander the tree-lined streets and look at the old buildings. The Harvest Festival in August drew about 3,000 people in 1983, and tourists came again in the winter to help Washington celebrate its "Frontier Christmas."

Perhaps people come because it reminds them of a time gone by.

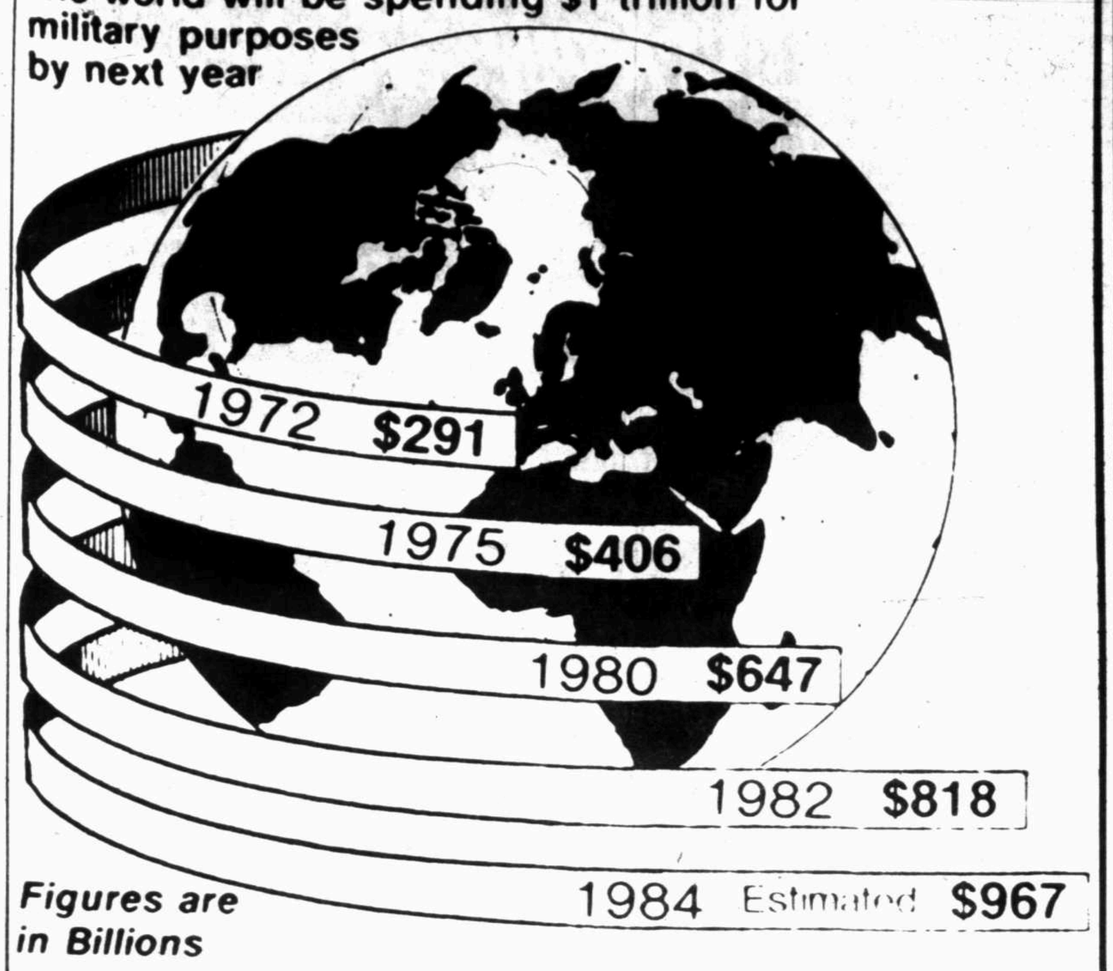

When the alarm goes off in the bank, Miss Bickley says, it has always been a false alarm. Once in a while, she says, the service station has trouble with youngsters. For most of the residents, however, no news is good news.

World Military Spending

Source: U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency

Spending should top $1 trillion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military spending around the world will top $1 trillion next year in an upward spiral propelled mostly by the United States, the Soviet Union and their allies.

Together, the two superpowers are responsible for more than 55 percent. The Soviet Union is the top arms supplier, the United States is next — $250 billion to $196.34 billion in 1982, the last year covered in a U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency study released Monday.

The superpowers and their allies in the Warsaw Pact and North Atlantic Treaty Organization accounted for nearly 75 percent of the arms delivered from 1972 to 1982.

During that span, overall military spending — which includes manpower costs, research and upkeep as well as weapons — increased from $290.9 billion in 1972 to $817.5 billion in 1982 and will reach an estimated $967 billion this year.

Inflation was partly responsible for the rise, but even in real dollars spending is increasing an average of 3.1 percent a year. It moved up twice as fast in developing countries as in industrialized ones, with the Middle East and Africa leading the way.

While the United States, the Soviet Union and their allies played the leading roles, the U.S. agency found a number of other countries coming into prominence as arms exporters in the early 1980s: Brazil, Israel, North Korea, South Korea and Turkey.

Still, their sales were far below that of the leading suppliers for 1978-1982: the Soviet Union, the United States, France, the United Kingdom, West Germany, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania and China.

The Soviet Union, the top arms merchant since 1978, held 30.1 percent of the arms market in 1982. The United States was second with 26.2 percent. However, the NATO allies led the Warsaw Pact, 47.9 to 38.3 percent.

The arms control agency gathered its material from a number of sources, including the World Bank and International Monetary Fund, the U.S. Agency for International Development and the Central Intelligence Agency.

In the case of some countries, actual military outlays probably are higher than reported because nations tend to understate what they spend on arms, manpower, research and supplies, an agency official said.

Saudi Arabia ranks first in the world in per capita spending on defense, followed by Qatar, Oman, United Arab Emiates, Israel, Kuwait and Libya.

Israel stands first in the percentage of population in the armed forces, while Oman spends a bigger proportional share of its budget on the military than any other country.

Iraq was the biggest arms importer in 1982.

The growth in military spending in the developing countries slowed dramatically after the mid-1970s and has remained low since, Kenneth L. Adelman, director of the arms control agency, noted in a statement.

But, Adelman said, the reason was an economic slowdown rather than an easing of tensions. "Much of the underlying causes of military spending — particularly aggressive political-military tendencies and insecurities in the world — have not abated," he said.

Sexual harrassment common on campus

NEW YORK (AP) — A professor blurts out to one of his female graduate students:

"You know I want to sleep with you. You know I can do a lot for you; I have a great deal of influence. Now of course I don't want to force you into anything, but I'm sure you're going to be sensible about this."

A fine arts student is finishing a drawing. Her professor sits down beside her and offers to pose nude for her in her house.

Another student decides to report the actions of her teacher who has a habit of putting his hands on her thighs and breasts while explaining things to her.

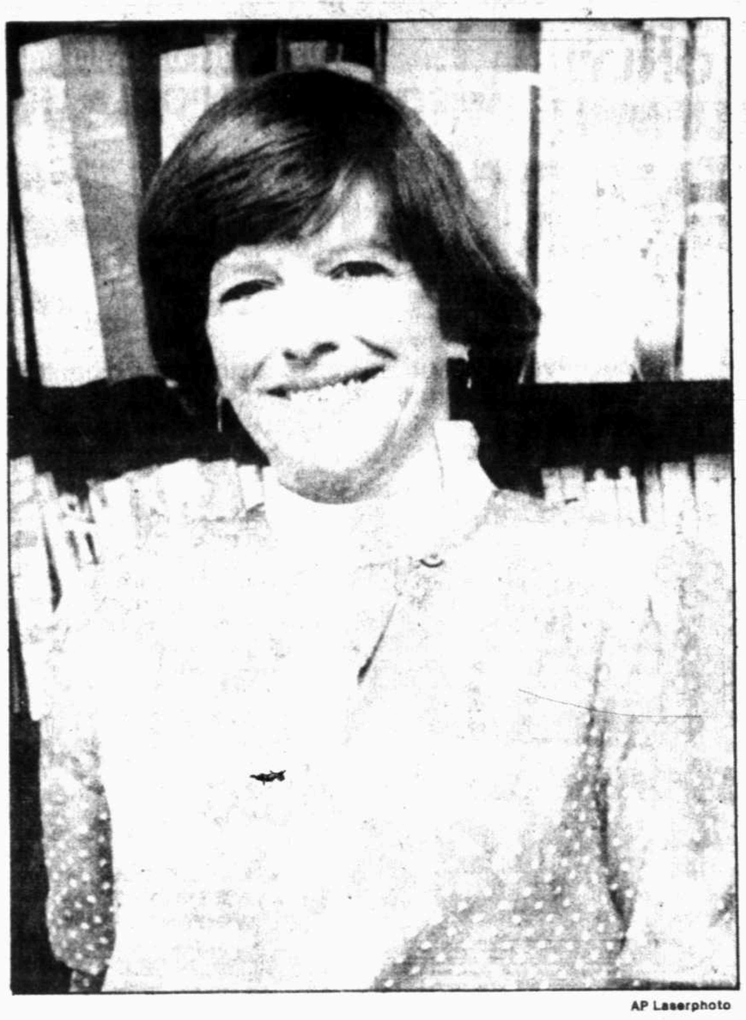

"After a few conversations with the head of the department," this student says, "I could see the attitude that he had developed: 'Oh, this is one of these supersensitive females who always thinks males are out to get her.' I became aggravated and guilty that I had said anything at all about it."

Scores of similar tales of sexual harassment by college teachers against female students across the country have been collected in a new book, "The Lecherous Professor," by Linda Weiner, vice provost for student affairs at the University of Cincinnati, and Billie Wright Dziech, a literature professor at the same school.

The study, based on four hundred anonymous interviews of students, faculty, alumni and administrators across the country, may well be the most chilling indictment of higher education ever published.

ACCORDING TO the study, 20 to 30 percent of female students can expect to be sexually harassed by male faculty during their college years — at a time when parents or the students are being asked to pay upwards of $10,000 a year for a college education.

The book, published this month by Beacon Press, offers the collective testimony of female students who say they have been pawed, gawked at, sexually assaulted, verbally abused, threatened with lower grades, promised higher ones, and even had their future careers ruined by male faculty members.

AP Laserphoto

Author Linda Weiner, shown in her office in Cincinnati, has authored a book on the sexual harassment of female students by male faculty.

And the authors charge that few campuses are doing anything meaningful to stop it.

Bernice Sandler, director of the Project on the Status and Education of Women at the Association of American Colleges, a group representing liberal arts colleges, does not take issue with the book's charges. But she says she is "a little more optimistic because I think our perceptions have been irretrievably changed in the last several years."

She and others point out that some colleges are beginning to take the problem more seriously.

The most radical steps are being considered at the University of Minnesota. The school is weighing a new policy that would advise faculty that even consenting relationships between teacher and pupil are "very unwise." And if a student later charged a teacher with harassment, mutual consent would not be considered an adequate defense.

THE UNIVERSITY of Michigan for the past three years has shown videotapes to female students portraying different kinds of sexual harassment and encouraging them to report incidents to school authorities.

And numerous campuses have surveyed female students in recent years to determine the extent of the problem — including Harvard University, Arizona State University, the University of Rhode Island, Iowa State University, the University of Florida, and the University of California at Berkeley.

Despite that increased attention, this latest study charges that higher education may be "simply unwilling to deal with the problem." It identifies formidable obstacles:

— Students realize the power faculty has over them. A rejected sexual overture can mean a master's proposal turned down, or a lower grade.

— The "self-imposed silence" of many victims is a result of widespread confusion over what is and is not sexual harassment. Says the book: "Behavior that may be perfectly acceptable from a classmate may be totally improper for a professor. Sexual harassment implies misuse of power and role by a faculty member."

IN FACT, the book continues, "Normal sexual give-and-take is not possible in student-teacher relationships because the power imbalance and role disparity are too great."

— The scarcity of women faculty on most campuses reinforces indifference to sexual harassment.

Will Iran launch final all-out assault on Iraq?

By BARRY SCHWEID

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — While attacks on tankers in the Persian Gulf are today's worry, the Reagan administration is bracing for even more bad news when the roads near Basra dry: the possibility of an all-out assault by Iran to topple Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

The flare-up of fighting in the gulf is risky business in itself. Insurance rates are bound to go up. Oil deliveries to Japan and Western Europe will slip if shippers choose not to gamble on safe passage through the Strait of Hormuz.

President Reagan declared last February that he could not "stand by" if the strait was closed. Analysts William Quandt and Thomas NcNaugher speculated in a private report this week that persistent Iranian attempts to disrupt traffic might lead to U.S. attacks on Iranian vessels and aircraft.

And administration officials said Thursday that the United States has discussed with Saudi Arabia and its neighbors the possibility of providing air cover for tankers in the gulf. However, the countries have not requested the help, the officials said.

"It's very worrisome," the State Department spokesman, John Hughes, said Wednesday about the flare-up in the gulf. He said Iran's assault on tankers from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait represent "a dangerous escalation of the Iran-Iraq war and a growing danger to shipping in the Persian Gulf."

There is enough oil in storage around the world to make up for any short-term cutback and the United States hardly would feel the pinch since it imports only about 4 percent of its oil from the gulf.

But Japan and Western Europe would be hurt. The Japanese get about 60 percent of their oil from the gulf, the Europeans, about 40 percent. And then there is the grave possibility of U.S. military involvement in an area former President Carter first designated as vital to American security interests.

Iran's show of force in the gulf does not mean the Khomeini regime is about to launch a final drive against Iraq. It may simply be retaliation for Iraqi assaults on Iranian tankers in the past.

But the State Department would hardly be surprised if the hundreds of thousands of Iranians poised on the southern stretches of Iraq's border cross over. Many carrying only rifles, their sheer number might be enough to overwhelm the better-trained and equipped Iraqi ground troops.

"We're still not sure why the offensive hasn't taken place already," said one official Wednesday. The probable reason, he said, was severe flooding east of Basra, caused by an unusual runoff from nearby mountains. The Iraqis gave nature a hand by blowing up dikes to keep the Iranians at a distance.

But the roads are now drying. Unless Tehran has had a change of heart — or army commanders were able to persuade the ruling fundamentalists that losses would be heavy — the battle for Iraq may be about to begin.

Analysts Quandt and McNaugher have concluded Iraq has a better-than-even chance of holding Iran off. But the two Brookings scholars say if Iran wins it could supplant Saudi Arabia as the dominant power in the upper gulf and in the oil-export market.

Hussein rules Iraq with an iron hand, and yet that hasn't kept the Reagan administration from edging away from a neutral stand in the 44-month war. Tilting toward Baghdad, the adminstration has tried to pressure Iran's arms suppliers and to encourage U.S. firms to help Iraq build a new pipeline to Jordan.

Although Iraq has close ties with Moscow and depends heavily on Soviet arms, Arabists in the State Department have never abandoned hope that the country can be part of the Arab mainstream.

On the other hand, Iran under Khomeini is seen as implacably hostile to the United States and as a threat to conservative Arab governments.

Europe's "Car of the Year." Your car for the future.

Audi 5000S Sedan

Audi 5000S

Audi When Audi created the new 5000S, they did more than design the most aerodynamically efficient sedan ever. They did it with style. Elegant, luxurious style.

That's why 53 journalists from 16 countries voted the Audi 5000S Europe's "Car of the Year." Drive it. You'll call it #1, too.

"WE WANTED A QUALITY LIFESTYLE, NOT GIMMICKS AND GIVEAWAYS..."

"...That's why, when John and I were transferred to Midland, we chose to live at Oakridge Apartments. Sure, we passed up a few gimmicks and giveaways offered by the other communities. But what we got instead is an apartment community superior to anything else we saw. New on the market this year, Oakridge Apartments are bright and beautiful with sparkling new amenities and lots of extras. But more than that, Oakridge is a real quality neighborhood. The people out here are just great, and the management team is the best we've ever had."
