Food costs lead prices up for April

WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by the first rise in retail food costs in four months, consumer prices increased four tenths of a per cent in April, the government said today.

The increase was the biggest price rise since January and was twice as large as the March increase of two-tenths of a per cent. However, it still was well within the Ford administration's prediction for an over-all 6 per cent increase in prices during all of 1976.

The Labor Department said the price of food rose six-tenths of a per cent during April, the first rise since a six-tenths of a per cent rise in December. Food prices had declined during the first three months of 1976 by a total of 2 per cent.

There were higher prices during April for fresh fruits and vegetables, coffee, pork, poultry and dairy products. The price of beef fell six-tenths of a per cent, but the decline was smaller than in the previous two months.

The department said the Consumer Price Index stood at 168.2 in April, meaning that goods which cost $100 in a base period in 1967 cost $168.20 last month.

The rise in consumer prices in the 12-month period ending in April was 6.1 per cent, substantially below the 12-month increase a year ago when prices had risen 10.2 per cent. During the last three months, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 2.9 per cent, a low rate that most economists believe cannot be maintained for long.

On a negative note, the Labor Department said the buying power of workers' paychecks fell nine-tenths of a per cent during April, the biggest monthly decline since November 1974 during the depths of the recession.

The agency said the drop was due to a combination of price increases, a decrease in average weekly hours worked and no change in average hourly earnings.

However, workers' spendable earnings still were up 3.8 per cent for the 12-month period ending in April.

Prices for commodities other than food rose three-tenths of a per cent in April, the same rate of increase as in the previous two months. Prices charged for services rose five-tenths of a per cent, the smallest increase in eight months.

Medical care costs rose seven-tenths of a per cent, down slightly from the average monthly increase of about 1.1 per cent since last November.

There were mixed results on fuel prices, with the cost of gasoline and motor oil dropping nine-tenths of a per cent, the fifth consecutive monthly decline. However, prices charged for fuel oil and coal rose three-tenths of a per cent, the first increase in six months.

Figures in the Consumer Price Index were adjusted for seasonal variations. However, the over-all increase in the price index on an unadjusted basis also was four-tenths of a per cent.

Food prices actually declined by 2 per cent during the January-March period. The Agriculture Department this week had additional good news for consumers, saying the over-all increase for food prices this year might be between 2 and 5 per cent, which would be the smallest annual increase in four years.

Economists, however, are more concerned about the trend in industrial goods, since food prices are considered volatile and not indicative of the over-all inflation rate.

Prices for commodities other than food increased during the first three months at an annual rate of nearly 4 per cent.

One indication that the very low inflation rate may be about over was seen in the April wholesale price index, which showed an increase during the month of eight-tenths of 1 per cent, the biggest increase since last October.

Another potential trouble spot in the inflation outlook results from the pace of the economy's recovery from recession.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that the nation's over-all economic output increased at an annual rate of 8.5 per cent during the first quarter.

The gain in the nation's Gross National Product was up from a preliminary estimate of 7.5 per cent and exceeded all predictions. Some concern now is being expressed by economists that if the economy continues to grow at such rates, it could lead to a big increase in demand for goods of all kinds, which would put new pressures on prices.

—Shell Oil Co. said it has raised its nationwide gasoline price by one cent a gallon. Shell said the hike was to account for increased costs of crude oil.

—The Ford administration continued its attack on a bill that would set a national goal of cutting the national unemployment rate to 3 per cent in four years.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers and Federal Reserve Board member Charles Partee told a Senate panel the goal was arbitrary, inflationary and could cost the government billions of dollars.

Senate may link plot with JFK assassination

By DAVID C. MARTIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate intelligence committee is to receive documents from the FBI showing that the bureau knew a CIA plot to kill Fidel Castro was in progress on the same day President John F. Kennedy was assassinated.

The documents, which the FBI apparently never gave to the Warren Commission, are expected to be turned over to the intelligence committee today, according to Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., chairman of the subcommittee investigating the Kennedy slaying.

Schweiker said the new documents "could be very vital in determining who in the FBI ordered the information about CIA attempts against Castro withheld from the Warren Commission, which investigated Kennedy's Nov. 22, 1963, assassination."

He said the information about the CIA plot against Castro may also have been withheld even from the FBI agents assigned to investigate the Kennedy slaying.

David W. Belin, who was an assistant counsel for the Warren Commission, said, "The fact that they would withhold information from an investigation of this kind has rather chilling implications. One of the things we were looking at was whether there was any Castro involvement in the Kennedy assassination."

Meanwhile, Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, has been named as ranking Democrat and likely chairman of the new Senate panel set up to monitor and control future spy activities. Eight of the 15 members, including Inouye, also serve on committees that have been responsible for monitoring the intelligence agencies in the past.

In another development, the committee released a report showing the CIA opened nearly a quarter-million private letters, even though senior officials knew the program was illegal and of little value. The FBI also opened mail on a smaller but "more intrusive" scale, the staff report said.

"All of these mail-opening programs were initiated by agency officials acting without prior authorization from a president, attorney general or postmaster general," the report stated.

Schweiker released a copy of a May 6 letter to Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi stating that "recently received materials reveal that the FBI, in 1964, had knowledge of the CIA's AM LASH plot and that there even exists an FBI file captioned 'Plans to Assassinate Cuban Leaders'."

AM LASH was the code name of a highly placed Cuban official who met with a CIA officer in Paris the same day Kennedy was killed and received a poison pen device to be used in killing Castro.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., a member of the old and new intelligence panels, has been quoted as calling AM LASH "a double agent" who kept Castro informed of CIA schemes against his life. "There is no doubt in my mind that John Fitzgerald Kennedy was assassinated by Fidel Castro or someone under his influence in retaliation for our efforts to assassinate him," Morgan was quoted as saying.

School establishes memorial trust for Page

Pampa school administrators and teachers have established the Joe Page Memorial Trust in memory of Joe Page, Austin elementary school principal who died recently.

Mr. Page had served the district as an administrator and teacher since 1953. The announcement was made at noon by Superintendent Dan F. Long.

The trust is established to provide a post-secondary educational fund for Mr. Page's daughter, a Pampa High School sophomore.

Friends may add to the fund by sending contributions to Roy Sparkman at Security Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Ford busing offensive not political move

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, denying that his offensive against court-ordered school busing is connected with upcoming primary elections, is considering ways to use federal money to help school districts avoid extensive busing, administration sources say.

Ford is also considering seeking new legislation as part of "a whole range of approaches" to limit the use of busing as a desegregation tool, according to a White House source.

The source declined to give details on how federal funds could be used to reduce busing ordered by federal courts.

Though officials are reviewing administrative and legislative proposals to curb busing, the first action in the Ford campaign will come on the judicial front if Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi decides to use the Boston school case as a vehicle for seeking new Supreme Court guidelines on busing.

Levi was to explain his views on government intervention in the Boston case at a meeting with Ford this afternoon. Justice Department spokesman Robert Havel said Levi had reached no decision as of late Thursday and that he may not do so until after the session with Ford.

Meeting with a group of visiting reporters from Kentucky on Thursday, Ford suggested the test case could even be made in Louisville, where busing orders led to racial unrest last fall.

Ford's decision to seek alternatives to busing became known as he prepared for a Republican primary campaign in Kentucky where he is considered to be well behind challenger Ronald Reagan in the drive for the state's 37 delegates.

But Ford denied he was scratching for political gains in the Kentucky primary, telling the Kentucky newsmen he had asked Levi and HEW Secretary David Mathews last November "to find a better answer, a better remedy to quality education, because court-ordered forced busing is not the answer."

The President told the Kentucky visitors he is considering three alternatives to busing, suggested several months ago by the Justice Department and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Ford declined to discuss details, but administration sources said the proposals include both the use of increased federal funds and new legislation strengthening the "Esch amendment," which requires that busing be imposed only as a last resort.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis expressed no enthusiasm at the prospect of the Justice Department entering the Boston case, suggesting it would make more sense for Levi to look at school districts just beginning to desegregate.

"Nothing the Justice Department does can affect the opening of schools next September," Dukakis said.

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., and members of the Congressional Black Caucus have also urged Levi not to back antibusing forces in Boston.

Brooke said Justice Department backing of anti-busing factions would "encourage violence and unrest in the city. It would encourage one side and depress another side. We would be back to demonstrations again, and that could lead to violence."

Ford, denying his offensive against court-ordered school busing is connected with upcoming primary elections, said today one of the alternatives he is considering is that the courts impose busing only as a last resort.

Safari buyer booked, bankrupt

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A dinosaur safari advertised for $29,995 in Neiman Marcus' Christmas catalogue may be as extinct as the specimen it was to uncover.

Amid much publicity, the safari was ordered from the Dallas-based luxury department store in January by Rick Boswell, president of Pinehurst Mortgage and Loan Co. of Southern Pines, N.C.

But Boswell's firm has since gone into bankruptcy, its books seized. And Boswell was convicted in Mississippi of fraud and conspiracy.

Plans called for spending a third of the $30,000 to excavate bones of the Allosaurus dinosaur and prepare a plaster and plastic cast of the skeleton which Boswell had said would be donated to the North Carolina State Museum of Natural History in Raleigh.

The other $20,000 was for a permanent assistantship in paleontology at the University of Utah.

Dr. James H. Madsen Jr., an assistant research professor at the university responsible for the safari, said the school had received a 10 per cent down payment from Neiman Marcus.

Some of the bones had been excavated earlier, he said, and the money was spent putting them in shape and on preliminary work for the safari planned for September in eastern Utah's Emery County.

Madsen said researchers know where to look for the rest of the bones. "The dinosaur safari was a sure thing — like an elephant hunt," he said.

He said it's his hope someone will rescue the project.

Neiman Marcus, however, had no immediate comment, and Pinehurst Mortgage and Loan's recently appointed trustee, John A. Huffines, said he wants to claim any assets the firm has in the project.

Walkathon set Saturday

The annual walkathon, sponsored by the Gray County Chapter of the March of Dimes, is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Saturday at the Pampa High School parking lot.

Each participant is scheduled to walk 15 miles. Sponsors are obtained by the participants.

David Martindale, county attorney elect, is chairman of the fund-raising event. Additional information may be obtained by contacting him.

At least 40 per cent of the contributions remain in Gray County with 60 per cent to spend for research.

Indians attack Canadian gun proposal

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — A proposed federal law that would require the licensing of those who buy guns and ammunition has come under sharp attack by wildlife organizations, rifle associations, Indians, lawyers and civil rights groups across Canada.

A special government agency, set up to explain the proposed law, contends most of the criticism is based on misinformation under the proposed law now in Parliament, a person would have to get a license to buy a rifle, shotgun or ammunition. "He would require two guarantors to attest to his fitness to own a gun. Unlike measures before Congress in the United States, it does not require the registration of guns.

Coming out against the Canadian bill are such groups as the Canadian Wildlife Association and the Canadian Bar Association.

The National Indian Brotherhood has voiced its opposition to the bill, claiming it would be an intrusion on Indians' constitutionally right to hunt.

The Peace and Security Commission, the lobby form letters disagree, saying that the bill is an "unwarranted imposition" on the law-abiding gun owner "useless as far as controlling the criminal element is concerned."

A form letter with a Sault Ste. Marie postmark says: "We believe that if the proposed laws are brought in then we would be heading for a police state with our rights taken away from us."

A British Columbian says the provision amount to "an erosion of civil liberty." An Edmonton signator says he agrees with the Saskatchewan Wildlife Federation that stiffer minimum sentences for lawbreakers who use a gun are the answer.

At the same time, the bill's provision for a one-year minimum sentence for those who use a gun in commission of a crime is under attack by civil liberties groups, who say minimum sentences inevitably are too severe in many cases. Wildlife groups suggest a five-year minimum.

Many gun groups voice their opposition in newspaper advertisements. One placed in the Dryden (Ont.) Observer by the Dryden government information group set up to handle publicity and answer mail on the licensing bill, said recently that it has received at least 15,000 form letters from worried gun owners since the proposed bill was unveiled in late winter.

The letters are drafted by wildlife groups which give them to members along with a stamped, addressed envelope. All the members have to do is sign and send them to their members of Parliament.

The members then refer the letters to the Peace and Security Commission.

The commission says it has mailed 300,000 information kits in an effort to ease confusion, anger and fear about the bill. It added that it has had to quadruple the original four-member staff assigned to answering the letters. The basic criticism is that licensing won't hinder criminals but will hinder honest citizens.

The government says the system requiring a licensee to have two guarantors would prevent people just out of prisons or mental hospitals or impulse killers from walking into a store and buying a gun. Rifle and Pistol Club and the Dryden District Conservation Club said "Punish criminals not gun owners."

Other points aired in the advertisement with the government responses, include: —"Interference with your right to collect guns." True. Canadians have been buying more and more .38 and .45-caliber pistols on the grounds they are starting a collection. The proposed law would allow only those who could demonstrate need for a pistol to get a permit to buy one.

—"Confiscation of Automatic Firearms." True. Machine guns would become prohibited weapons under the new and it would be an offence to own one. Many gun collectors do.

—"Restriction of semi-automatic firearms." True.

—"Registration and licence fees." Rifles and shotguns would not have to be registered. But the three million long-gun owners in Canada would have to get licenses to buy another gun, or ammunition for those they have.

—"Permits." Once an applicant had his five-year license he would have to produce it to buy a rifle, shotgun or ammunition. Retailers, wholesalers, importers and manufacturers would need permits and would have to record sales.

—"Arbitrary Changes by Order-in-Council at their Whim." The cabinet would have extensive regulatory power under the bill, a power the Senate committee, civil rights groups and lawyers have criticized. The Law Reform Commission of Canada says regulatory offenses should be kept out of the Criminal Code.

—"Unreasonable restrictions on shooters under 18." The current bill wouldn't allow anyone under 18 to get a licence to buy guns or ammunition and would restrict use of guns by those between 14 and 18. The government says it will amend this section to enable youths to shoot under supervision of parents or instructors.

The government says it has been trying to reply to these points but has been drowned out by the lobby. Urban groups that have sought gun controls after spectacular shootings have been silent.

"Letters for gun controls are the exception," says a Peace and Security official. "On the other side, the hysterical tone of some letters underlines the need for controls."

Bored with Ford?

By PETER GRUENSTEIN
Pampa's Washington
Bureau Chief

WASHINGTON — President Ford has had remarkably smooth sailing in recent months — presidentially speaking, that is.

The economy has been improving dramatically, the U.S. is at peace, relations with the Soviets are relatively calm, the Chinese are docile, the Mideast is no more volatile than usual, there are no major strikes, no threats of domestic violence, no major scandals within the Ford Administration.

It is, in short, a period of relative quietude for the country. One would have to go back to the Eisenhower years of the mid-1950's, after Korea and before Vietnam, to find the country in such a pacific state.

It is a circumstance that, historically, is ideally suited to the reelection of a sitting president. The President's campaign should be as calm as his presidential waters.

But after Texas, Indiana and Nebraska, that is hardly the case. Not only is Ford in danger of being washed overboard the good ship GOP, the ship itself is in danger of going under.

An aging ex-actor, with a narrow ideological base and without the benefit of badly needed federal campaign funds, is mounting the toughest nomination battle against an incumbent Republican president since Teddy Roosevelt took on William Howard Taft. What makes Ronald Reagan's incipient success even more astounding is that the former California governor has arisen from the political graveyard marked "long-shot presidential candidates" to which he was assigned after early primary losses in New Hampshire, Florida and Illinois. And he has done it by riding on such unlikely issues as the Panama Canal and inadequate military preparedness (even though the defense budget is at an all-time high).

Last November, I wrote that President Ford was in deeper political trouble than he realized because "the illusion of leadership is not enough. The American people want a president who's more than a nice guy, they want to be stimulated and challenged by their leader."

In the past, most sitting presidents who unsuccessfully sought reelection were tossed out of the White House by the voters because they did not like the direction in which the country was going. The example of Herbert Hoover comes immediately to mind.

But Ford's problem is not that the voters are dissatisfied with the state of the union — or that Ronald Reagan is such a dynamic alternative — but that the people are not stimulated by the former Michigan congressman, his administration, and all the other, too familiar Washington faces. The American people are bored.

Moreover, the last eight years of the Nixon-Agnew-Ford administrations have been tough ones — Watergate, a rough recession, Vietnam. The old campaign slogan, "It's time for a change," can be heard softly echoing throughout the land.

The lucky beneficiary of this boredom could be Ronald Reagan, Jimmy Carter, Jerry Brown, or some other new face. Logical or not, the American people are tired of the old faces. And, to many voters, Jerry Ford's looks all too familiar.

"But hear this: no amount of success by my opponent shall move me from the course of moderation!"

Ingmar's patience overtaxed

Americans, still recovering from their annual Form 1040 induced trauma, will find it easy to relate to the world-famed movie maker Ingmar Bergman who left his native country because of tax troubles because of "prestige-ridden, poker gamblers" in the Swedish bureaucracy.

In an open letter to the Swedish newspaper, "Expressen," Bergman said that he was ending all his projects in Sweden but was leaving his entire fortune in the country "at the disposal of the Internal Revenue Service," due to harassment by tax officials which had destroyed his ability to work there.

The film director was arrested earlier this year and charged with criminal tax fraud in connection with $750,000 he brought into the country from a Swiss film company he owned between 1968 and 1975. The criminal charges were subsequently dropped and the Swedish government, starting out with a demand that he pay a tax amounting to 139 per cent of the contested $750,000, indicated a willingness to "bargain."

Apparently, it was this cynical, but not so subtle, attempt at blackmail that prompted Bergman's disgust and departure. In his bitter letter to the newspaper, the filmmaker wrote that he refused to engage in "any kind of bargaining," adding that, the tax officials "presumably assumed that I, in my state of depression and out of fear for more gauntlet-running, would surrender to this blackmail."

The Bergman charges are reminiscent of those leveled by other businessmen in recent years fleeing Sweden's heavy taxation and oppressive regulations. Often hailed by statistas as the "showplace of socialism," the Swedish image is becoming tarnished. Bergman's concluding remarks concerning the political and economic climate in Sweden should burst like a bombshell among the socialist intelligentsia. He wrote:

"I have been a convinced Social Democrat. With honest passion, I have believed in that ideology of the gray compromise. I thought my country was the best in the world."

"My awakening was a shock, partly because of the humiliation, hard to stand, partly because I realized that anybody in this country, any time and in any way, can be attacked and humiliated by a special kind of bureaucracy that grows like a galloping cancer."

Welcome to the awakening club, Mr. Bergman.

Courts causing crime?

In the wake of the shocking Justice Department report that over 20,000 people in the United States were murdered in cold blood during last year, comes the inevitable question: Why?

Surely, one of the answers must be that of the extreme leniency being shown by the courts to convicted criminals, including murderers. Of all the complaints made by the late J. Edgar Hoover, former Director of the FBI, the one he probably repeated most often was against judges and courts who are "soft on criminals." But there is ample evidence that the "soft on criminals" attitude is still widespread.

One Associated Press story recently told of a convicted murderer in Des Moines, Iowa, who was freed by a Federal Circuit Court because, AFTER he had been picked up by police and advised of his right to remain silent and have an attorney, he led the officers to the location of the body of the ten year old girl he had slain. The circuit court ruled that the convict "had not intelligently waived his right to remain silent

Government by ethnicity

Something nobody apparently contemplated when the government got into the "affirmative action" business was that eventually everyone would demand a piece of the action — not just blacks or American Indians or the Spanish-surnamed.

The Chicago-headquartered midwestern regional office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has announced it will extend affirmative action as regards its own work force to include Polish Americans. It is reportedly the first time a federal agency has agreed to seek proportionate representation of a white ethnic group among its employees.

The decision came as the result of pressure from the Illinois division of the Polish American Congress, which found that while the Polish population of the Chicago area was 19.8 per cent of the total, only 9.4 per cent of HUD employees were Polish.

If affirmative action on behalf of white ethnics in government is here, can the same requirement of private industry be far behind? And what's sauce for Polish Americans most certainly will be sauce for Graustarkian Americans, Transylvanian Americans and on and on.

And of course, way down at the end of the line, there are all those Anglo-Saxons.

Don Oakley

Justice doesn't need a gag rule

By Don Oakley

Where does the First Amendment right of a free press end and a defendant's right to a fair trial begin?

This is the central question involved in the alarming increase in the use of pretrial "gag" orders — alarming, certainly, to the journalism profession, which has carried the issue up to the highest level of the nation's judicial system.

The whole controversy, however, may be based on a misconception, thinks one jurist. It is a misconception indulged in not only by judges and prosecutors but fostered by journalists themselves, and that is the impact of news on the public at large.

Addressing the recent annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, William J. Bauer, judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Chicago, told the editors some things that were both unsettling and comforting.

"I suggest," he said, "that one of the things that you have fostered, because you have done such a superb job of reporting, editing and publishing, is to think that you really influence people. And that four days after they read the story, they remember the first thing about it."

But the fact that this judge discovered in trying highly publicized cases which had been in the headlines for weeks or months before the trial was that when prospective jurors were questioned, 94 per cent by actual count said they could not remember reading anything about the case.

The other six per cent remembered vaguely that they had read something about it, but only about one-half of one per cent remembered what they had read and less than half of these had made up their minds as a result of what they had read.

In other words, there is more than a little truth to the old saying that nothing is deader than yesterday's news. This may be less than inspirational to those who labor to bring today's news to the public, but it does serve to put the gag-rule controversy into better perspective.

Pet rabbits should not be lifted by the ears; it hurts them.

A raw onion two and one-half inches in diameter packs only 40 calories but provides valuable quantities of potassium, phosphorus, sodium and ascorbic acid.

May 22, 1976

A seed you planted long ago and haven't been nurturing for some time may burst into bloom this coming year. The benefits should be worth the time and effort.

When was hunger 'acceptable'?

The Rev. Billy Graham with the likes of Sen. Mark Hatfield and others of religious hue has notified Congress that "hunger is no longer acceptable."

The message burst as a sunrise because we never before had thought of hunger in that particular way. Specifically, to say that hunger "no longer" is acceptable is to imply that at one time it was acceptable. The notion had just not occurred to us. So we constantly supposed the unattractiveness of hunger was the reason so many individuals had struggled for so many years to avoid it.

The message to Congress to which Mr. Graham and 26 other eminent divines lent the lustre of their names asserted "every man, woman and child on earth has the right to a nutritionally adequate diet."

"This right is not ours to give or take away. It is fundamental and derives from the right to life itself," the joint statement declared. "Without the food to sustain life, that right is meaningless." The axiom so set forth is supposed to become the basis of forthcoming legislation. Thus the objective of the declaration is to accomplish the elimination of hunger by legal force.

We should have more confidence in the means chosen if men ate edicts instead of bread. The long history of economics demonstrates that voluntary energy, not laws, produces foodstuffs. If the record were otherwise, the USSR would not have been bargaining for Kansas wheat while plotting to sustain a Cuban adventure in Angola.

The right that men have to life and to the food necessary to sustain life is just a shorthand way of saying that no one has a right to interfere with peaceful living and the pursuit of goods essential thereto. That means individuals can't rightfully interfere, and it means also that governments — which are collections of individuals — cannot interfere.

But Dr. Graham, Senator Hatfield and others very cleverly have turned the whole concept around. Instead of holding to the time-honored construction that right to life is a prohibition upon government intervention, they make it an appeal for government to act. They change the negative, the denial of government authority, into a hunting license whereby the state may roam at will.

As the Soviet experience shows, legal force does not produce farm products. Moreover, legal force restricts the ability of working men and women to produce farm products. When such goods are not produced, fewer persons have food to eat. So instead of helping the poverty-stricken people of the world, Graham and company literally have acted to snatch the food from their mouths.

Yet they draw applause for their charity. Some charity!

Legal plunder

"But how is this legal plunder to be identified? Quite simply. See if the law takes from some persons what belongs to them, and gives it to other persons to whom it does not belong. See if the law benefits one citizen at the expense of another by doing what the citizen himself cannot do without committing a crime." — Frederic Bastiat, "The Law," 1850

This No. 2 isn't trying harder

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — We should have listened to Nelson Rockefeller.

He told us for years that he was "never cut out to be No. 2 material." Now after 18 months as the vice president it's clear he was correct in fact if not in grammar. He has served in the office with a lack of commitment that can only add to the negative lore of this most abused and neglected federal position.

Given the nature of the vice presidency, it is admittedly difficult to tell when one of the occupants is awake, much less effective. Humorist Finley Peter Dunne said the post is so obscure that newly elected holders are notified of their duties "through th' personal columns iv th' pa-pers." And such are its responsibilities that during one careless period, from 1841 to 1857, the seat was vacant for more than 10 years, with hardly anyone in the nation giving a care.

And yet in those measurable ways a vice president can be of worth to his country, Rockefeller has failed. For instance, the singular constitutional duty of the office is for its occupant to preside over the Senate. Yet the current vice president has been seen in that chamber about as often (and with as much appreciation) as swine flu.

He did report to the Hill for training early in his tenure, but failed to get the hang of the job — banging the gavel and all. After some clumsy and cussed parliamentary endeavors (he once had to apologize to a senator for his undemocratic procedural conduct) he gave up, and has since avoided the lawmaking body as if it were a Democratic dinner. (It is not known exactly how much Rockefeller avoids Senate duties; his staff says his work record is "not available" for public scrutiny.)

It is true that most of Rockefeller's predecessors neglected their Senate responsibilities also. In the first half of 1973, before fate called him to other enterprises, Spiro Agnew spent only 146 minutes with a Senate that was in session for 667 hours. Hubert Humphrey passed by with the regularity of Kohoutek comet.

And it's remembered that when John Nance Garner was in office he simply lived in Texas for most of the end of his term. About the only eager beaver, actually, was Levi Morton, 22nd vice president, who was such a "fussy old woman" as observers put it, he refused to eat lunches for fear of missing a moment as the Senate's chief officer.

But if Rockefeller be only equally as apathetic as the champions who preceded him, it is of small comfort to a nation required to foot the bill. According to unofficial records kept in the Senate press gallery, the vice president has made about seven appearances in the Senate this year, for a total of about six hours work. At his pay, this comes out to $10,000 an hour — Rockefeller wages indeed.

And beyond the vice president's salary, we note, there are other economic considerations. The lethargic Rockefeller has a staff of 73 people, located in offices all over town, who are paid nearly $15 million annually. Then there is another quarter million dollars for "operational expenses" for his Executive Office Building activity. And how about the limousines, the airplanes, the secret service? Observers believe it costs the nation more than $5 million a year to keep its crown prince actively doing nothing whatsoever at all.

Well, wait — perhaps we've gone too far. The 41st and unelected vice president has had some accomplishments. His wife spent $315,000 to redecorate a newly acquired vice-presidential mansion, and never mind that the happy couple seldom chooses to stay there. Also, Rockefeller was instrumental in bringing final victory to the long struggle to establish an official V.P. seal, flag and — groan — coat of arms.

Yet these triumphs notwithstanding, it says here that as vice president Nelson Rockefeller has made a good millionaire. In the words of humorist Dunne his business has largely been "to call at th' White House an' inquire after th' president's health;" and then "when told th' president was niver better he gives three cheers, an' departs with a heavy heart."

His distinction, in short, has been to contribute generously to the low esteem in which the office is held.

40th anniversary observance

In observance of its 40th anniversary, the membership of Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority donated $200 in gifts to the newly opened Pampa Children's Home. Items given included rugs, bedspreads, clothes hampers and other things needed to complete the home like atmosphere. The money was earned by the 17 active members participating in a microwave oven fund raising campaign. Winner was Mrs. Don Cain. Investors concerned

DALLAS (AP) — Commerce Secretary Elliott Richardson says the United States is concerned about the nationalization of Canadian companies which have U.S. investors.

Richardson, asked Wednesday about the nationalization of some of these companies, said "the problem is one of conveying to Canada the concern we have over the actions that could discourage U.S. investment in Canada."

The United States is "concerned with the precedent this may set," Richardson said, referring to the nationalization of the potash mining industry in the Canadian province of Saskatchewan. "Canada, of course, has an enormous development potential and, correspondingly, great capital needs," he told a news conference before a speech to the third annual International Trade Conference of the Southwest.

The question of Canadian nationalization was prompted by a speech earlier in the day by Canada's minister of industry, trade and commerce, Don Jamieson.

Jamieson told the conference that Canada's economy is in trouble-faced with inflation, regional disparities and the need for economic expansion, particularly in the manufacturing industries.

Part of this reason, Jamieson said, is that Canada is "dominated by foreign investors, largely American investors, more so than any country in the world."

As a result, Canada has been forced to enact measures such as the Foreign Investment Review Act and the country's program of phasing out oil exports to the United States by 1983.

Jamieson said these measures have caused a misunderstanding south of the border as Americans look at the act as a means of blocking additional U.S. business inroads into Canada.

"We want a continued flow of foreign investment in Canada," he said.

Richardson said the federal government of Canada "has its own worries because the nationalization of U.S. controlled industry means the (Canadian) federal government is losing the tax payments that private industry would pay and is not obviously in a position to extract revenue from a provincially owned Crown corporation."

Richardson also was asked if he thought Mexico was a "minor annoyance" by having trade missions to push its products in the United States.

"I don't think we should consider it an annoyance," the secretary said. "It seems to me the Mexicans should be free to promote their own products and I think the development of growth of Mexico is very much in the U.S. interest and very much a market for the United States."

"If the standard of living of Mexicans improves, they will be a better market," he said. "I think we constantly have to remind ourselves that trade has to be a two-way street, so if they don't sell to us, they can't buy from us."

On the political scene, Richardson, whose name has been bandied about as a possible running mate for President Ford, said Ford's win in Michigan was due to Ford's successful campaign appearances there.

"Also, it is the result of concern by a lot of moderate people who hadn't really been worrying about Ford's prospects for nomination until he ran into a string of defeats," Richardson said. "I think that concern, coupled with the fact that this was his home state, caused a lot of people to come out and vote who might not otherwise have done so."

Asked about the possibility of being on the Republican ticket as vice president, Richardson retorted: "I don't try to plan my career," adding that it was a question he really hadn't reached.

"I don't know what I would do."

He was also asked if he would accept the post of secretary of state should Henry Kissinger step down.

"Well, I never turn down jobs that haven't been offered," he said with a smile.

Area piano students audition in Pampa

Piano students and teachers across the eastern Texas Panhandle are performing in Pampa today and Saturday in auditions sponsored by the National Guild of Piano Teachers, teacher division of the American College of Musicians.

The Pampa Audition Center, located in the Education Building of the First United Methodist Church, is one of 68 centers across the nation at which 182,977 musicians will audition.

Local chairman is Tracy D. Cary and others assisting are Mrs. Lola B. Brannon of Shamrock, Mrs. Sheila Pancratz of Canadian and Jamey Henderson of Pampa.

Adjudicator is Dr. Robert Reynolds, associate professor of music at Southwestern State University in Weatherford, Okla. He holds degrees from Indiana University, the University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma State University. He has also studied with Walter Robert and Carlos Moseley at the University of Texas.

Dr. Reynolds has been recitalist at the Carnegie Recital Hall and many other places throughout the United States. He also plays the violin, viola and organ. He was 1971 Grand Prize winner in the Teacher Division, International Piano Recording Competition.

Judge orders Mitchell to pay Martha $36,000

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge ordered former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell to pay his estranged wife, Martha, $36,000 in temporary back alimony.

State Supreme Court Justice Manuel Gomez granted a motion Thursday by Mrs. Mitchell's attorney, William C. Herman, to enter judgment for the back alimony "in the absence of any denial" by Mitchell that he owes the amount.

Mrs. Mitchell, who is reported suffering from cancer of the bone marrow, recently returned to her 14-room cooperative apartment on Fifth Avenue from a hospital where she had special surgery resulting from a broken arm.

She was awarded $1,000 a week alimony in December 1974 by Justice Gomez pending disposition of her suit for legal separation from Mitchell.

In oral arguments Tuesday, Herman told Gomez that Mrs. Mitchell was "without friends and without funds."

He said that Mrs. Mitchell owes nearly $10,000 on her apartment, and that Consolidated Edison utility company has threatened to turn off her electricity.

Herman also said the former attorney general received a $50,000 advance on a book he is writing about Watergate. Mitchell has appealed a conviction for making false statements, obstruction of justice and conspiracy to obstruct justice in connection with Watergate.

Mitchell's lawyer, Margaret Shaw, told Gomez on Tuesday that Mitchell is broke now, although she said he did receive the book advance. "He is living on borrowed funds," she said.

In response to that contention Justice Gomez said:

"While the defendant urges that his present financial condition is precarious, he does not disclose his exact status or present income. If his situation is actually and, in fact, as precarious as he contends, he would be well advised, upon the submission of proof, to move for a downward modification of the outstanding order directing the alimony."

Mitchell's lawyer said Mrs. Mitchell refuses to sell the cooperative apartment and also refuses to return his books and records.

Herman contended that Mitchell wants to use the monies from the sale of the apartment for himself and put Mrs. Mitchell in a nursing home. Mitchell's attorney denied it.

February 1976 was the 66th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America.

Tribesmen hijack airlines

MANILA, The Philippines (AP) — Six Moslem tribesmen hijacked a Philippines Airlines — PAL — jet with 103 passengers and six crew members aboard today and forced the craft to land in Zamboanga, military authorities said. The plane was on a domestic flight. The hijackers demanded $375,000 ransom and a DC3 plane to carry them out of the Philippines. The demands were made during negotiations with military commanders at the Zamboanga international airport, 530 miles south of Manila. Three armored personnel carriers with machine guns took up stations about 70 feet from the plane. About 100 troops ringed the airport, witnesses said. Military authorities identified the men as Maranaos, members of a Moslem tribe from the provinces of North and South Lanao in north-central Mindanao. That section was the scene of recent heavy fighting between dissidents who are seeking independence for the area and the armed forces. Two of the three men who seized a PAL plane in another Mindanao city, Cagayan de Oro, on April 7 were also identified as Maranaos. They and their leader flew to Libya during an eight-day odyssey. The BAC111 jet hijacked today was commandeered as it took off from Davao, 600 miles south of here, en route to Manila, sources said. Zamboanga is 250 miles west of Davao. Both cities are on the island of Mindanao. Manila is on Luzon. The pilot, Capt. Jovencio Lagaso, informed the Davao airport 22 minutes after takeoff that his flight was "under hijack conditions" and that he was "proceeding to Zamboanga under instructions."

The sources said the hijackers were not identified. It was not immediately known how many were involved or how the plane was seized. There were believed to be about a half-dozen foreigners on board. President Ferdinand E. Marcos had ordered his martial law regime to institute stricter security procedures following the April seizure. The Davao hijack was the third in the Philippines this year and the fourth in seven months. The April hijacking, which lasted eight days and was the world's longest measured in time, involved three Filipino Moslems who said they were members of the Moro National Liberation Front. That is a guerrilla organization fighting for independence of the southern Philippines with support from Libya.

Others stay out of Brown's state

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter, Morris Udall and Frank Church have signaled they will not make massive efforts fighting California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in the June 8 California primary because of Brown's home-state power. Udall and Church bowed out of a televised debate with Brown in Los Angeles next week, spokesmen said Thursday. Carter said he would concentrate on New Jersey and Ohio which also have June 8 primaries. Udall also indicated he will make major efforts in those two states — and did mention California — while Church is concentrating on the smaller primary states before June 8 to seek momentum for the California voting.

Meanwhile, the candidates were seeking votes in some of the states that are holding their primaries this Tuesday, in addition to states voting on June 8. Both Carter and Church were scheduled to campaign in Oregon, but the former Georgia governor planned to fly later to San Francisco. Brown's schedule took him to Nevada, while Udall, who spent Thursday campaigning in Kentucky and New Jersey, listed a day in Washington, D.C., on his agenda. President Ford was scheduled to spend the day in Washington, too, while Ronald Reagan, challenging Ford for the Republican nomination, planned campaign stops in Tennessee and Arkansas. About 18 per cent of all Democratic convention delegates will be selected June 8, making it the biggest primary day in terms of numbers. Delegates in New Jersey and Ohio will be selected on a winner-take-all basis at the district level, while California's delegation will be selected proportionally. Carter, admitting Brown will get many of California's delegates, told an Oregon news conference Wednesday. "He will have to fight me for every one," Carter aides said he planned to spend at least $300,000 in the California fight. Udall said in a New Jersey campaign appearance Thursday that he plans to spend $150,000 to $200,000 of the federal matching funds he is due in that state. He added he would spend as many days seeking the 100 Jersey delegates as he will spend in search of the 152 Ohio delegates. A Udall spokesman in Washington denied Udall had written off California, but said no California campaigning is now planned. Church is pinning his hopes on doing well in the next two weeks' primaries, including ones in Oregon and his home state of Idaho, and carrying some momentum into California. Church press secretary Bill Hall also denied the Idaho senator is bowing out of an active fight in California. "Of course, Gov. Brown starts with an advantage," he said. "He (Church) is going for broke in California." There was word from New York on Thursday that most of the state's Republican convention delegation, which has been holding out on Ford for six months, is about to come to his side. State GOP Chairman Richard Rosenbaum called the 154 convention delegates — most of them now uncommitted — to a meeting in Albany on Monday.

He said he would ask them to back Ford. At least 100 of the delegates, and perhaps as many as 130, are expected to follow Rosenbaum's lead. That would give Ford at least a brief lead in the nationwide contest for convention delegates. He now has 479 delegates committed to him against 528 for Reagan, with 1,130 needed for nomination. Ford, meanwhile, said in Washington that reports that he has written off any hope of victory in Kentucky's presidential primary next Tuesday "are totally unfounded." In an hour-long interview with reporters from Kentucky, the President said he is convinced the primary in Kentucky will "be a very close contest." In other developments on the political front Thursday: —The New York Daily News said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who repeatedly has said he would not seek the Democratic nomination, would accept a genuine draft. —Humphrey, whose backers announced formation Thursday of a committee to draft the Minnesota senator for the Democratic nomination, said in Cherry Hill, N.J., his analysis of the campaign so far indicates "there is no first-ballot victory" in sight. Humphrey has said he is not a candidate for the nomination but would accept a convention draft.

Shriners to conduct drive for children

Pampa Shrine Club members will conduct a charitable fund-raising drive Saturday, with proceeds going toward the care of crippled and burned children in Shriner-sponsored hospitals. The area Shriners organization will participate as part of the Khiva Temple. During the 54 years Shriners have operated their hospitals for children over 200,000 children have been cured or materially helped, according to figures released by the Khiva Temple in Amarillo. As of Dec. 31, 1975, 294,005 operations had been performed and 5,225,382 physical therapy treatments were given nationwide. Treatment in each Shriners Orthopedic Hospital includes diagnostic services and complete hospital and outpatient care. There are 19 orthopedic hospital units which care for crippled children up to age 15 at no cost to parents or guardians. The three Burn Institutes offer advanced medical techniques for burn injuries, including plastic surgery, physical therapy and hydrotherapy.

'US won't encourage revolt from Moscow'

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger has told Washington's European allies that America supports the independence of Eastern Europe from Soviet domination and will never accept the sphere-of-influence concept for Europe. U.S. officials said the secretary of state told North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) foreign ministers in a closed meeting Thursday that America is committed to encouraging the independence of Eastern Europe and has taken positive steps in this direction. But they said Kissinger cautioned the NATO ministers that any alliance action should be within the limits of what is possible. This meant, they said, that there should be no effort to encourage revolt or a major shift away from Moscow by Eastern European nations. About 20 youths demonstrated outside the heavily guarded meeting hall Thursday while 5,000 leftists marched in the streets. One group shouted "Out with the war criminal Kissinger" near the U.S. Embassy. Youths booed delegates headed for a dinner party given by the Norwegian government but there were no incidents. The demonstrators carried signs denouncing both NATO and Moscow's domination of the Warsaw Pact nations. The U.S. officials told reporters that Kissinger reviewed the U.S. program of challenging Soviet efforts to impose its ideology on the non-Communist world while still seeking detente. He asked if this was still NATO policy and the other 14 ministers confirmed. Kissinger's analysis, the officials reported. They said Kissinger told the session that the use of Soviet military supplies and Cuban troops to help the pro-Moscow Popular Movement in Angola's civil war violated the concept of coexistence and was an example of ideological aggression. The Popular Movement group defeated two Western-backed factions this spring. A senior American official said Kissinger probably will attend a conference of the Organization of American States (OAS) in Santiago, Chile, next month. He said the U.S. position was not affected by Mexico's decision Thursday to boycott the meeting. Mexico severed relations with Chile in 1974, accusing the Chilean military rulers of violating human rights. Kissinger met with Turkish Foreign Minister Isah Caglayan before today's closing NATO session. He told reporters after the hour-long meeting that "the United States supports rapid progress toward a satisfactory solution" on Cyprus. The secretary met Thursday with Dimitri Bitsios, the Greek foreign minister, on the Cyprus stalemate. Turkish troops occupy 40 per cent of the Mediterranean island which they invaded nearly two years ago after a pro-Greek coup. Kissinger also scheduled a talk with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Crossland. The two will have more extensive meetings next week when Kissinger goes to London.

Kennedy would accept 'genuine draft' for vp

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy has decided he would accept a "genuine draft" for the presidential nomination or second place on a ticket headed by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, the New York Daily News says. The News, in a copyright story from Washington, said Kennedy's change of heart is based on his worry that former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, the current front-runner for the Democratic nomination despite recent primary reverses, might repudiate many of the liberal wing's social programs. The senator was not available for comment, but CBS News quoted him as saying he had not changed his mind about seeking the nomination. The Massachusetts senator, the News said today, will not seek the nomination and has not changed his basic position since he said in 1974 that he would not accept a draft and would oppose such an attempt on his behalf. But Kennedy urged Humphrey to run in the New Jersey primary June 8 and when Humphrey decided against it, Kennedy "became increasingly concerned that with Humphrey out of the picture, Carter virtually had the nomination wrapped up," the News said. "This is what prompted Kennedy's ultimate decision that if Carter failed to win the 1,505 delegates needed to clinch the Democratic nomination and if party leaders came to him with a legitimate draft, he would accept," the News said. "Further," the newspaper said, "Kennedy also decided that if Humphrey were the subject of such a draft movement, he would agree to serve as Hubert's running-mate if such a decision would be required to put a Humphrey draft over the top."

Pentagon weapons request not before Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — After voting to delay production of the controversial B1 bomber, the Senate now faces decisions on whether to approve other weapons requested by the Pentagon. Votes are expected Monday on proposals to deny $322 million for production of 60 additional Minuteman III missiles and to delay building of additional Airborne Warning and Control System aircraft until NATO decides to buy the AWACS for European defense. Reversing an earlier decision by the House, the Senate Thursday voted 44 to 37 to delay production of the B1 bomber until next Feb. 1, which is 12 days after the next presidential inauguration. Production of the first of a 244-bomber fleet could then proceed only if the president certified that it is in the national interest. Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, sponsor of the delaying amendment, said the proposal would allow "the next president" to review completed test data on the B1 and make a judgment "free of election year politics."

The House voted 210-177 on April 8 against a similar proposal to defer spending $960 million in B1 production money until Feb. 1. The issue now goes to a House-Senate conference and will be subject to final votes in both chambers. After the Senate vote, Pentagon spokesman William Green said, "It was a shame that almost one-fifth of the Senate was not present to participate in the vote." Culver said the Pentagon had already decided to begin B1 production to replace the aging U.S. fleet of B52 bombers, although tests of prototypes are only about half completed and costs continue to mount. Estimating the cost of the B1 program at $21.6 billion, Culver argued that Congress would be "buying a pig in the poke" in approving production before tests are completed and alternatives are reviewed. Before agreeing to delay the B1 program, the Senate voted 48-33 to turn down an amendment by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., to kill the B1 by denying all funding. Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss., of the Senate Armed Services Committee defended the B1 as an essential part of the nation's "triad" of strategic bombers, land and sea-based missiles. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who has piloted a B1 test model, supported production of the supersonic aircraft, but said he would rather see the program killed outright than delayed. He said B1 workers will face layoffs and begin quitting their jobs if Washington signals "we're not going to buy this plane or that we're going to delay four, five, or six months." Tuna spend their entire lives in motion, the National Geographic Society says. These deep-bodied, saltwater fish are heavier than the water in which they swim. Should a tuna stop swimming, it would sink tail first into water until finally it was so deep that it no longer could breathe and would suffocate.

Sheriff thinks attacks on nuns was revenge

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff
PANHANDLE — Carson County Sheriff John Nunn said this morning that someone knows something about the brutal attack on two nuns at the Catholic Children's home here early Wednesday "that they are not telling." "We are working on two leads. Composites were made Thursday and the two are about as similar as day and night," he added. "We have a problem," the sheriff emphasized adding that officers are continuing their investigation. "It looks like revenge — it is not robbery, theft nor sex. The only motive is revenge," he explained. "And that doesn't give us much to work with," he said. Sister M. Valentina, administrator of the home where 35 children are cared for now, said, "All we know is that there was a man in the house who stopped in the smallest girls' bedroom. A few girls were awake, but too scared to do anything, and then he appeared in the doorway of the infirmary where Sister Mary Louise was resting. She thought it was a youngster and asked what he wanted. He started beating her head with a gun... It was pure brutality. The sister screamed. Sister Gabriel heard her and came quickly." Sister Valentina said. Sister Mary Louise didn't get a good look at him. Sister Gabriel isn't sure, but thinks she might know who he is. Sister Mary Louise was hospitalized at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo with lacerations on the head and wounds on the hands and arms. Sister Gabriel was treated and released. Asked if it could be a child who had been confined to the home, the sheriff asked: "Why not?" However, Sister Valentina said today she is definitely disclaiming that possibility. "I know of no one who left with a grudge like that," she said. "And if one had such a grudge it should be directed at me — not Sister Louise. And he would know where I was. I still have the same bedroom." Sister said the children are still scared — but are becoming a bit more normal after three days. The incident occurred at 12:30 a.m. Wednesday, and the children, especially the girls, have slept little since. Sister Valentina said. She said Sister Mary Louise may be dismissed from the hospital Sunday. Sister Gabriel was back on duty Thursday.

Gunman seized hostages

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — A gunman wanted for nearly 30 armed robberies surrendered to authorities after he allegedly seized seven hostages during a $30,000 bank stickup and held FBI agents and police at bay for an hour and a half. "He was very nice and didn't appear to want to hurt anybody, but you can never tell," said a woman bank teller after the incident Thursday. The robber, identified by the FBI as Jerry Bray, 26, of Mount Vernon, N.Y., grabbed the six employees and one custommer about 11:30 a.m. as police responded to a silent alarm activated at the Barclays Bank branch. Police said Bray fired a .45-caliber automatic several times during the siege and an FBI agent suffered a superficial leg wound from a ricochet. Bray freed the hostages unharmed at the urging of FBI agents and by 1 p.m. he was convinced to surrender, police said. Bray was described by the FBI as a parole violator, wanted by state police for two years. He had been sought for 27 armed robberies in the Bronx and one in Rochester, N.Y., during that period.

Dear Abby

Give Elderly Room With a View

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I just returned from having visited an elderly friend in a nursing home, and it was so depressing to see all those old people sitting in their rooms just staring at the bare walls I could have cried.

The windows are so high they couldn't look out unless they stood up, and most old people cannot stand for very long—if they can stand at all!

Abby, why can't they build the windows in those homes low enough for people to look out of while sitting in their chairs? To see the leaves turn colors, the flowers blooming, the seasons changing, the people and automobiles pass, or even an occasional bird or squirrel would mean so much to them. It couldn't help but reduce their feeling of isolation and loneliness.

I hope you care enough to print this.

SOMEONE WHO CARES

DEAR SOMEONE: I care, too. Thank you for a wonderful letter.

DEAR ABBY: I see so many letters in your column from wives-worrying about the "other woman." The smart wife doesn't have to worry. She looks at it this way:

The male animal is an automobile with the key always in the ignition. Just because another woman comes along and wants to steal him—even for a joyride—she is no more entitled to keep him than the thief who steals an automobile.

The smart wife doesn't panic. She faces the matter forthrightly and takes positive action. After all, the key is in the ignition for HER use, too.

She should run the motor until her Don Juan is completely out of gas, and let the other woman wonder what happened when her lover registers "empty."

SECURE IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR SECURE: In defense of the male animal, I consider your metaphor a prime example of "reverse sexism." But I'm sure the males won't object.

DEAR ABBY: About the "NERVOUS WRECK" whose husband taught their 15-year-old son to mistreat his mother: The poor woman said, "Our preacher is very young and says he's had no training in marriage counseling, so he can't help me. Besides, he won't even talk to people who do not tithe, and my husband is one of them."

First, what kind of lily-livered nincompoop can that preacher be? Ask him how he would have dealt with the Samaritan woman at the well of Sychar (John 4, N.T.)! The Savior this pastor claims to serve broke Jewish tradition by daring even to speak to the woman; I wonder if she "tithed"?

I further wonder at the attitude this hypocrite would take toward the woman taken in adultery (John 8:1-11) or the widow who cast a mite into the treasury of the temple (Mark 12:41-44)? That smart aleck needs to be "shepherding" a flock like I need a hole in my head, and you can see from this letterhead that I am a preacher.

Let's call a spade a spade. That hypocrite pastor should be brought to his knees.

Thanks, kid!

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — Last year X rays showed I had a collapsed lung. I recovered from this and about a month later the same thing happened to my other lung.

The doctor explained to me that an operation would correct this but said he did not favor an operation for me now because the accumulation of air in my chest wasn't much and that I could outgrow this whole problem. I am a 24-year-old, 6 foot, 135 pound male.

What's bothering me the most, Dr. Lamb, is that I am scared to death. Anyone who has had a collapsed lung can tell you that their lungs and chest hurt for a long time afterwards. It wasn't until about three months ago that my lungs felt all right again. Now I am right back again where I started from.

What do you suggest I do? What will happen if both my lungs collapse together? Exactly what kind of operation is the doctor talking about? Is it successful? What are the risks, should I seek other medical opinions? What causes this problem?

DEAR READER — You have had recurrent pneumothorax which means air inside the chest cavity. As disagreeable as this condition is, it is seldom life threatening. It is literally caused by a leak in your lungs. The leak usually occurs because of a small blistery formation or bleb on the surface of the lung breaks. This is like having a weak spot on an inner tube in a tire and having it finally rupture and the tire collapse.

The lungs are merely a collection of tiny air sacs which are like a cluster of balloons. The only difference is they are all interconnected. When one of these little air sacs converts into a bleb, or blister and ruptures, air leaks out of the entire lung. The air then accumulates between the lungs and the chest wall, giving you air in this space which is normally completely filled with the lung tissue. As the air accumulates between the chest wall and the lung, it forces the lung to collapse. The little broken blister on the surface of the lung then seals, sealing the leak and then the air between the lung and the chest wall is absorbed as the lung expands. Usually only a part of the lung actually collapses. The rest of the lung may continue to function normally.

These little blister formations are commonly at the tip of the lungs. Fortunately, because of scarring these areas often cause no further problems. The best way of judging whether or not future attacks are likely to occur is by careful review of X ray studies.

There are two different kinds of operations that are commonly done. One just cuts away the area of the lung where the blister formations are located. Another prevents excessive collapsing of the lung by literally scarring the surface of the lungs so it becomes attached to the surface of the chest obliterating much of the cavity for air to accumulate in.

You probably wouldn't get into serious trouble if you had a collapse of both lungs at the same time because neither lung would collapse entirely.

For a better understanding of the dynamics of how the lungs function and their relationship to air pressure, you can send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 24, Keeping Your Lungs Fit. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY — While burning a candle on my mantle, it melted and ran down on the sandstone fireplace front. I have tried to remove this with turpentine, a hot iron with a paper towel and dish detergent but to no avail. Do you have any suggestions? —GAIL

DEAR GAIL — I presume that after the above treatments there would be no excess wax remaining, but should there be remove it by scraping with a DULL knife. Heat treatments are mainly for white candles, as the heat may set the dye in colored wax. Try using one cup alcohol to two cups of water.

It is always best to carefully check, before lighting a candle, to see if there is something to catch the dripping wax. Large decorative candles may have to be placed in a saucer or other such container. Small round glass collars can be bought to go on regular size candle holders to catch the drips. —POLLY.

Dancer tells of love, courage

By Ira Berkow

The conversation turned to her husband and Dame Margot Fonteyn looked around the hotel suite and said from the couch, "Where is Tito? He was here a moment ago. Sometimes he just decides to disappear."

The renowned ballerina said this unworried, and with a good smile that seems never very far from her mouth and teeth and eyes.

Dame Fonteyn was in New York to begin a month-long publicity tour for the recently published, "Margot Fonteyn: Autobiography." Much of the book deals with her husband Roberto (Tito) Arias, a quadriplegic.

While running for a seat in the Panamanian government in 1964, Tito was shot five times at point-blank by another national politician.

Two bullets had smashed through his right arm and into his chest — where they remain to this day. One of them had punctured a lung. A third grazed past his shoulder and lodged against his spine high up near the neck. Surgeons operated within two hours, but the damage was irreparable.

Margot Fonteyn writes that in the months ahead, "the plight in which Tito found himself called for superhuman courage. Every little word required an enormous effort, and he rarely slept more than three hours at night. Rehabilitation sessions and speech therapy left him grey and drawn; with exhaustion. His anxiety about the chances of his mental and physical recovery was probably the worst torture of all. Not a day went by without his begging me to let him die.

"It was a matter I had to think over very seriously, because I knew that if, with the passage of time, he should still find living intolerable, there was no way he could end his own life: his arms and hands were useless. I concluded privately that, being his wife, I was the one who would have to help him. I further resolved to do it, if it became necessary. I did not fear what would happen to me, as I would not care once he was no longer there."

Margot Fonteyn Arias recalled this now without a trace of tears. Her business is the art of self-control. She sat straight but supple, hands folded in her summery black-and-white Yves St. Laurent dress, neck high and remarkably wrinkle-free for a woman of 57, a string of white pearls around her neck, ebony hair pulled back neatly, and her celebrated legs and feet crossed at the ankles. She looks beautiful. She wore also simple black medium-heeled shoes and in them her feet appear quite like a long-time dancer's, ample as potatoes. Even without tutu and beribboned slippers, one might upon seeing her feet guess her occupation, though one could never of course guess the breadth of her artistry.

"I read about a book that has come out about two brothers, one of whom had an accident and was now a quadriplegic, and one brother asked the other to kill him — and he did," she said. "I can understand that, and sympathize with it. It seems so unfair that if someone wants to take his own life, and can't even pick up a bottle of pills to do it, then a loved one should help. I know this is controversial and I will be criticized for it, but it is what I believe."

"At the rehabilitation hospital, I was told that this was a common feeling among patients in the first six months or so. I said to Tito, 'Wait, sweetheart, please. I don't think you should make a decision when you are still so weak and ill.'"

"Gradually his pleas to me — that he does not want to live, that I should take his life — subsided. He was regaining his humor — though he never quite lost it altogether. "There was one moment, for example, when he was at death's door and the doctor wondered about the condition of his brain. He held up three fingers and said, 'Arias, how many fingers have I?' And Tito whispered, 'Eleven.' The doctor looked alarmed, then saw the gleam of satisfaction in Tito's eyes, and said, 'Ah, Arias, you have a sense of humor!'"

Tito recovered sufficiently to run again for a seat in the assembly in Panama, and won. A military coup, however, has made him again a simple citizen of his country, a country that his father, Dr. Harmodio Arias, was once president of, and for which Tito served as the ambassador to the Court of St. James's in London, Margot's birthplace.

It was in London in 1939 that Margot and Tito, both 18, met. And fell in love. They went different ways, however, and not until 14 years later did they meet again, fall back in love, and soon marry.

Tito is a lawyer and a businessman and continues to pursue these interests. Margot Fonteyn has never given up dancing, and is still regarded as one of the best ballerinas active today; her pas de deux with Rudolph Nureyev remain one of the most exciting evenings in the theater.

Tito was present recently together when Dame Margot Fonteyn was honored at Gracie Mansion in New York for her high cultural achievements. The two stood in a corner and received the well-wishes of guests. Periodically, Dame Fonteyn would hold a glass of wine to Tito's mouth and he would sip. Other times she might smooth down his gray hair, as he sat with quiet smile, and long, coffee-colored fingers stilled on the arms of his wheel chair.

The presentation of the award by Mayor Abraham Beame was warmly done. Dame Fonteyn thanked him and said at one point, "I have so many different emotions I don't know where to start." The Mayor, off to the side, interjected politely, "You can dance," and the guests laughed. Finished, she stepped over to her husband, kissed him, and dabbed tears from his eyes.

"Oh," said Dame Margot now in her hotel suite, "here's Tito." He came in with a manservant and his niece. Dame Margot rose and gracefully moved across the room and kissed him.

MARGOT AND TITO: If he wanted to end his life, she would have to help him.

Mental health seminar in Amarillo Wednesday

AMARILLO — How people view themselves, other people and the world about them are questions to be explored in a seminar on mental health at the Hilton Inn in Amarillo Wednesday.

The one-day session, which begins at 9:00 a.m., is expected to attract an estimated 800 persons from a variety of organizations associated with mental health, as well as interested citizens from area communities.

Sponsored by the Family Living Youth Task Force of the Panhandle Economic Program (PEP), and the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, the seminar will include topics on how to recognize mental illness, new development in psychiatric treatment, psychosomatic medicine, emotional problems in children, coping with everyday stress and available treatment sources in the Panhandle.

Sue Farris, district agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service who is task force advisor for PEP, a volunteer organization, says the program will center on the theme of "people helping people."

"Mental health has to do with everybody's everyday life," she says. It is related to people getting along — in their families, at school, on the job and with friends and business associates in their community.

"This seminar is designed to help us develop awareness of needs and concerns associated with mental health, and to encourage people to help each other, especially in times of stress."

Mitchell Jones, M.D., is physician advisor for the seminar.

Speakers for the event include Ted Wallace, M.D., psychiatrist; Hugh Pennell, M.D., psychiatrist; and Bruce Beard, M.D., professor of psychiatry, Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

Jones, Wallace, Pennell and Beard will also answer questions following their morning presentations.

Afternoon speakers are Jaime Quintanilla, M.D., child psychiatrist; Temple Elliott, Ph.D.; Cal Yokum, Academy Certified Social Worker; Thomas Cannon, Ed.D.; and Ron Clark, chaplain and director of clinical pastoral education at Northwest Texas Hospital, Elliott, Cannon, Yokum and Clark are members of a panel on mental stress.

A group of five medical practitioners will comprise a third panel for the day, this one on treatment resources. They are Mrs. Claire Rigler, Mental Health - Mental Retardation - ODA, SPCI (Operation Drug Alert, Suicide Prevention - Crises Intervention); Mr. Harry Hayman, State Center for Human Development; Mitchell Jones, M.D., Kilgore Psychiatric Center; Allen Heacock, M.D., Regional Services, psychiatrist; and Fred Hill, Academy Certified Social Worker, Family Service.

All the speakers are from Amarillo, except Beard who is from Lubbock.

Educational exhibits will be added attractions for the event, says Mrs. Farris.

Mrs. Farris says interested persons can pre-register for the seminar by writing the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, P.O. Box 9198, Amarillo, Tex. 79106. Questions for speakers and panel members can be submitted with pre-registration, which is free. Lunch will be provided at a cost of $4.25. This can be paid in advance or at the door, she adds.

The Panhandle Economic Program, which annually has sponsored seminars on heart disease, arthritis and other public concerns, is an organization of volunteer citizens interested in helping area families achieve a better life.

Tougher eavesdropping controls?

By BILL CHOYKE
Pampa News
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A national wiretap study group has recommended that Texas establish criminal and civil penalties for illegal eavesdropping. The National Wiretap Commission, established by Congress to gauge the effectiveness of the 1968 federal law authorizing electronic surveillance, also says Texas and other states need tougher controls over the advertisement and private use of wiretap equipment.

Currently, Texas has no laws governing electronic surveillance (generally phone taps or room bugs). But federal law prohibits most wiretapping — except in cases approved by a U.S. judge or the attorney general — so the federal Justice Department can prosecute illegal wiretapping cases in the State.

Although the commission called for tougher criminal and civil sanctions for illegal wiretapping in Texas and other states, it recommended that both state and federal law enforcement agents be given greater authority by Congress to conduct legal electronic surveillance.

"We believe the federal government shouldn't get into local law enforcement," said Kenneth Hodson, executive director of the two-year-old commission. "So we recommend that states enact statutes which would enable them to prosecute for illegal wiretapping."

Because Texas has no state statute regarding wiretapping, law enforcement agents can not conduct any legal wiretaps. While past efforts to enact a state law have failed, a spokesman for the attorney general's office said he expects the legislature to reconsider a proposal next year to let state law enforcement agents install some wiretaps in accordance with federal guidelines.

The spokesman added that the wiretapping proposal could become a hot issue in light of recent reports that organized crime interests are active in the State.

Probably the most controversial commission proposal deals with expanded use of electronic surveillance by federal and local law enforcement personnel. The plan, if adopted by Congress, would reverse a trend toward restricting the use of wiretaps and bugs in an effort to ensure privacy.

In a minority report, several commission members criticized the proposal to expand the use of electronic surveillance.

"Bugs are so intrusive on personal privacy that they should be prohibited with the possible exception of national security investigations," the minority said.

The commission report said most private illegal eavesdropping is done on marital or family disputes. However, the commission concluded that it was impossible to determine the extent of illegal surveillance.

According to the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., 1,457 electronic eavesdropping devices were found nationwide in an eight-year period ending June 30, 1974. In Texas, employees of Southwestern Bell located approximately 90 wiretap devices — all presumably illegal — during that period.

During hearings last summer, the commission received testimony from Carroll Lynn, former Houston police chief, and Anthony Farris, former U.S. attorney from the Southern District in Texas. Both testified on illegal wiretapping by Houston police officers.

Before and after the testimony, 19 one-time Houston police officers were indicted by federal grand juries for illegal wiretapping, tax and narcotics violations and violations of the Civil Rights Act. Many of the former officers were convicted.

Congress has established three themes to serve as the focus of Bicentennial activities. They are Heritage 1976, Festival USA and Horizons 1976, said John W. Warner, administrator of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration.

We Hold These Truths...
A Chronicle of America

May 16, 1776:

A 500-man American garrison at The Cedars — 30 miles down river from Montreal — surrenders to a combined, British-Indian force of about 600 after only token resistance. Several days later, a 140-man relief column under Major Henry Sherburne of Rhode Island is ambushed near The Cedars. After a 40-minute fight, it too surrenders; some of the combined group of prisoners are scalped, tortured, or executed. Upon hearing of the disasters, Benedict Arnold leads a force of about 700 towards The Cedars. But the British commander warns that if Arnold attacks, the Indians will be authorized to massacre all the American prisoners. Arnold agrees (1) not to attack, (2) to take the American prisoners (for an exchange of British prisoners later), and (3) to return to Montreal.

Eighth grade certificates will be given during graduation, Banks said.

Books tell where money goes

Capsule reviews prepared by the American Library Assn.

by Howard Pasternack

You don't have to be a financial wizard to know that with every visit to the grocery store you're spending more and taking home less.

Inflation and recession are not just examples of economic jargon. They're facts of everyday life which affect our jobs, our ability to pay for housing and our standard of living.

Four new books attempt to explain how those twin monsters happened to occur together and how we — as consumers and investors — can stretch our dollars in spite of them.

In "Money, Whence It Came, Where It Went," John Kenneth Galbraith, former Harvard professor, presidential advisor and all-around intellectual superstar, traces the intriguing history of money. He tells fascinating tales of centuries past, emphasizing American monetary ingenuity and paying particular attention to inflated schemes of financial titans.

Banks, the Federal Reserve System, economists, bankers, corporate and union leaders all take their licks in this wry and witty account of how money comes and goes.

MONEY, WHENCE IT CAME, WHERE IT WENT by John Kenneth Galbraith (Houghton Mifflin, 324 pages, $10.00.)

SYLVIA PORTER'S MONEY BOOK by Sylvia Porter (Doubleday, 1105 pages, $14.95.)

THE BEAT INFLATION STRATEGY by Roger Klein and William Wolman (Simon and Schuster, 192 pages, $7.95.)

NOTHING CAN REPLACE THE U.S. DOLLAR...AND IT ALMOST HAS! by M. Martin Rom (Crowell, 244 pages, $7.95.)

"The process by which banks create money," Galbraith writes, "is so simple that the mind is repelled. Where something so important is involved, a deeper mystery seems only decent."

Even more shocking, he points out that governments create money simply by issuing it. The American Revolution was financed by ill-secured paper money (some of it even printed by Ben

GALBRAITH: "A deeper mystery seems only decent."

Franklin) as was the French Revolution after it.

Galbraith believes that the combined economic power of American corporations and unions has defeated any efforts to combine high employment with stable prices.

He comes down equally hard on economists. The only benefit of their consistently erroneous forecasts, he says, is that the work keeps them from joining the millions in unemployment lines. Policy, he insists, should be based on current economic reality.

"Out of 2500 years of experience and 200 years of ardent study have come monetary systems that are as unsatisfactory as any in the peacetime past. Few histories could have a less happy ending."

What is left once Galbraith dispels the myth of wise men deliberating around a table is a healthy disrespect for easy answers. However his book's "Afterward" does contain six "realistic" suggestions for improving the economy, including imposition of wage and price controls.

Reality is what Sylvia Porter's "Money Book" is all about. As the subtitle promises, the book tells you "how to earn it, spend it, invest it, borrow it, and use it to better your life." In it the reader can find information on everything from unit pricing to tips on investing in the stock market.

There are tables on anticipated income from social security, the average life of small and large appliances (11 years for a TV set and 24 years for a sewing machine), and guides on how to figure your assets as well as your monthly expenses.

The book is not only interesting to read, it also blows away cobwebs on complicated words and concepts that cloud comprehension of essential documents such as leases, life insurance and wills.

In short, the big, all-inclusive "Money Book" will lead you down the sensible road whether you're thinking of buying a house, adopting a baby or looking for a job. It's a book to keep next to the dictionary and refer to more often.

The basic premise of "The Beat Inflation Strategy," written by Roger Klein and William Wolman, both Wall Street analysts, is that the rate of inflation is directly determined by the rate of increase or decrease in the money supply. By following the publications issued by the Federal Reserve, an investor can predict periods of inflation and can take advantage of this knowledge to invest wisely and profitably.

This book is written for the serious investor who understands and follows the market and is willing to speculate. If you have an abiding fear of playing the market then you probably won't want to play the authors' game. But be prepared for a convincing argument.

"The Beat Inflation Strategy" contains a table which shows that between 1940 and 1970 the price of gold dropped steadily while the price of consumer goods almost doubled.

It's certainly possible to make a case that gold can be a prudent investment. Had Rom confined himself to this message, his book might have been useful. Instead he's overstated an already dubious case.

Visiting pastor

Dr. Douglas E. Nelson, Presbyterian pastor in New Haven, Conn., will preach from the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church, 525 N. Gray, at the 10:45 a.m. worship service Sunday. Dr. Nelson pastored the Pampa church from 1945-54. The sermon will be "The Sudden God" with scripture from Matt. 24:32-44 and Psalm 138. The Pennsylvania native graduated from Princeton University in 1934 and Princeton Theological Seminary in 1937. His doctorate was received from University of Edinburgh in 1939. A church dinner will follow the worship at noon in the Church Parlor. Dr. Nelson is returning to the Pampa church as part of the church's 50th anniversary observance.

Traveling Baptists

The Rev. and Mrs. Ted Savage of Pampa will conduct Deeper Christian Life and Evangelistic Campaigns to military congregations at Bittsburg and Augsburg, Germany June 1-18. Rev. Savage will preach in English and through a translator and Mrs. Savage will teach Deeper Christian Life Studies at noon daily to military wives. Rev. Savage is pastor of the Central Baptist Church.

Soil week gets assist

Several area churches are participating in the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District sponsored Soil Stewardship Week Sunday through May 30. The conservation group will furnish participating churches with special bulletins and other information on the week-long activities.

Soil Stewardship Week is set aside each year to "acknowledge before God our gratitude for His gifts of soil and all the bountiful resources associated with it," according to Perry Gruhkey of the SCS.

He added that the week has become a "special time to remind all people that the gifts of God related to soil warrant their best in Christian stewardship."

Gospel quartet sets Church of God concert

The Church of God at 1123 Gwendolyn will host the Gospel Joys, a ladies gospel quartet from Berger, in concert at the church at 7:30 p.m. tonight. The musical service is open to the public at no charge.

Participating churches are Calvary Baptist Church, St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church, First Assembly of God, Frist Christian Church, Zion Lutheran Church, First Baptist Church, Barrett Baptist Church, St. Paul United Methodist Church, The Salvation Army, Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, Fellowship Baptist Church and the First Presbyterian Church.

What Determines Right?

NOT HUMAN REASONING:

"For seeing that in the wisdom of God the world through its wisdom knew not God, it was God's good pleasure through the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." (1 Cor. 1:21) "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." (Isaiah 55:9).

NOT THE CONSCIENCE:

"Brethren, I have lived before God in all good conscience until this day." (Acts 23:1) This statement was made by the apostle Paul in all sincerity, even though he had spent a great part of his life persecuting the church of Christ, even giving his consent to putting one to death. This teaches us that conscience is not a safe guide.

NOT CUSTOMOR TRADITION:

Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God because of your tradition? (Matt. 15:3). "Take heed lest there shall be any that maketh spoil of you through his philosophy and vain deceit after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." (Col. 2:8).

NOT THE MAJORITY:

"Enter ye in by the narrow gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many are they that enter in thereby." (Matthew 7:13).

NOT THE CHURCH:

"And He (Christ) is the head of the body, the church," (Col. 1:18). The head rules the body; the body does not rule the head.

NOT OUR RELATIVES:

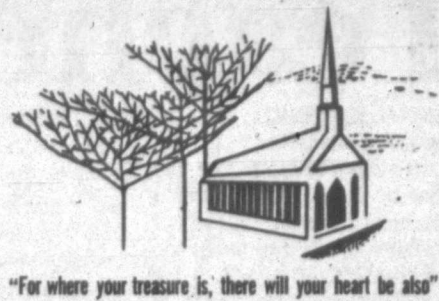

"He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." (Matthew 10:37).

ONLY THE WORD OF GOD:

It was given by inspiration of God. (2 Tim. 3:16). It is a perfect law. (James 1:25). It is the power of God unto the salvation of the believer. (Romans 1:16). It will purify and save the soul of the one who believes and obeys its commands. (1 Peter 1:22). It furnishes us completely unto every good work or all things that pertain unto life and godliness. (2 Timothy 3:17; 2 Peter 1:3).

An investment in Your Future
...ATTEND CHURCH

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

Childhood PLEASURES

"Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right."

A mother only has to glance at her child to know if his play is pure, or if it is leading to mischief. Our Father in heaven can as easily look on our hearts and judge our ways. "A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things."

Seek the Lord in his house, so that your heart will be right with God.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Teacher wants students IN classroom

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Co. editor

Four Pampa teachers stood before the Pampa Independent School District board of trustees Wednesday evening in Carver Center, 321 W. Albert, to say they believed: 1. students were getting out of school for extra-curricular activities too much, 2. smaller classes were essential, and 3. Pampa teachers weren't interested in unions of striking.

"We can't teach students when they're not in school," A.R. Nooncaster said that excused student absences for such things as athletic and music events were disrupting classes, teachers and education.

The absences affect those students who miss class, those who attend who feel they have a raw deal because they have to be in class, and the teacher who is frustrated by the upheaval and extra work, the high school teacher said.

He cited two possible solutions: eliminating all activities that take students out of schools, activities he suggested made schools "slaves of University Interscholastic League," or be sure no unnecessary trips or activities take place.

"It seems to me that we have developed in our community a Chamber of Commerce syndrome," Nooncaster said. "We are confusing publicity with education. There is I believe a critical difference between the two ... Are we that starved for public attention?"

"It seems to me also that we have developed a Small Town Complex. We think we have to do more things and go more places in order to be recognized, in order to be accepted. That seems to me to be a bad mistake," the English teacher said.

"The kids are not fooled. They know what the community thinks, what the community feels, and they are quick to reflect the ideals of the community in the courses they select and the kinds of school work they are willing to do, and in their general attitude toward education. And their general attitude towards teachers, too."

He pointed to the community survey taken last summer and said it indicates that many believe in the need to return to basic school subjects.

"Could it be that we are listening to a small segment of our community ... highly organized, single minded in its purpose and quite vocal?"

"Sooner or later we must face our problem squarely and decide if our schools exist to educate our kids or entertain them," he said.

Carol Mackey, sixth grade teacher at Travis, emphasized that small classes mean better educational experiences for the children.

"Handling children is not what you hired me to do. You hired me to teach them," she said, referring to crowded classrooms.

Bill Mackey, high school industrial arts teacher and president of the Pampa Classroom Teacher Association, reported that "Teachers, at least in this state, are not talking union or strike."

"We want you to manage the schools," he told the board. "We don't want to. If we did we'd be doing something besides teaching school."

But Dr. Dan Long, school superintendent, differed with Mackey, saying that other parts of Texas, teachers are supporting unions.

"Pampa teachers have different attitudes toward their community responsibility ... But I am concerned about what I see happening around the country and around in our state. But I don't see it happening here," Long said.

He said he believes that the situation is moving into a labor-management model among teachers, administrators and board members.

"The real issue is between those who would spend more on public education and those who want to spend less," Mackey added.

Austin teacher discussed TSTA, the teacher's professional organization. TSTA is concerned mainly with quality education, not salaries, she said, and compared teacher salaries with those of letter carriers.

Giscard praises deeds endeavors of Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France winds up a Houston area tour today after praising Texas as a state that has become synonymous with great deeds, endeavors and dreams fulfilled.

Giscard said Thursday night that is the major reason for his wanting to visit the state during his American Bicentennial tour.

The French presidential party ate western game hen at a black tie dinner for which Houston Mayor Fred Hofheinz was host. Giscard chatted during the dinner with Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, widow of the late president, who sat on his left in a ballroom crowded with about 1,000 invited guests.

Giscard was leaving early today for a short flight to Lafayette, La., and will wind up his United States tour Saturday at New Orleans.

"France feels a strong sense of affinity with this Texas, which symbolizes confidence in the future and the creative energy of the end of our 20th century," Giscard said in prepared remarks at the Houston dinner.

"For France is already a modern nation and intends to become more so. She is still committed to her traditions but she is able to seize the opportunity to change, when such change will prepare a better world, and she is capable of meeting competition from any quarter."

He used energy as an example of how he said France is forging ahead in the high technological sectors of industry and research.

"There is no major sector of research or high technology in which France is not engaged, be it exploration of outer space or the sea bed, medical research or high energy civic," he said.

"We have neither oil nor coal reserves, but we have gained an international reputation, and one will know here in the oil business because of the contributions our experts have made to the technical progress in each of the various phases of the industry from geophysical explorations to offshore drilling to the liquefaction and transport of gas."

The French president concluded his talk by describing Texas not only as a land of wide open spaces but "also the land that best expresses, in today's America, vitality, boldness and confidence in the future."

At the dinner, Hofheinz presented Mrs. Giscard a China plate painted by Frederic Remington and Giscard a silver plate with a Remington painting.

Some 1,000 persons were on hand to welcome Giscard Thursday afternoon at Houston's International Airport when the presidential plane arrived.

Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Hofheinz were among those greeting Giscard, and Briscoe immediately offered an invitation for the French president to begin regular Concorde Jet flights between Paris and Texas.

Briscoe extended the Concorde flight invitation after reminding Giscard that France was the first major power to "extend a helping hand" to the new Republic of Texas in the 1830s.

Giscard did not respond to the invitation extended by Briscoe but noted in his brief remarks that Texas history is "full of special ties and understanding with France."

Security was tight as the second Concorde Jet to land in Texas arrived at an airport private terminal. Police helicopters hovered over the airport as the craft taxied and officers with police dogs kept watch during the welcome ceremonies.

"I extend to you appreciation for the support and encouragement France gave the new Republic," Briscoe said in his welcoming remarks.

"We salute you and the people of France on the technological achievement of the Concorde and personally extend to you an invitation to establish a Concorde flight from Paris to Texas," Giscard said he had not known in advance "that there would be an exchange of words on my arrival" and that he faced certain problems in making an impromptu speech because of "blunders and in a language that is not mine."

The French president, speaking only in English, said visions of the past, present and future prompted him to participate in the American Bicentennial.

"I want to improve the understanding between the French people and the American people and I think the best way is to have personal contact," he said.

"We know the importance of Texas for the future of the United States because of your widely known abilities and accomplishments in various fields of technology and development."

Briscoe presented Giscard with a picture of the old French Legation building of the Republic of Texas and he received the keys to the city from Hofheinz.

From the airport the French presidential party made a 70-mile helicopter flight to the 900-acre ranch of oilman L. F. McCollum.

Texas style entertainment was offered at the ranch including a barbecue, a horse show, folk dancers and country-western music.

Giscard presented McCollum with a Salers bull, which is a French breed. Due to quarantine regulations, the animal will not be shipped the ranch until sometime next year. Giscard was given a painting of yellow roses by McCollum.

Atomic sale stirs leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Dick Clark of the Senate African affairs subcommittee says black leaders "are going to be very upset" with the State Department decision to support the sale of two atomic power plants to South Africa.

Sources told The Associated Press that department officials will testify at subcommittee hearings that blocking the license application by General Electric Co. or attaching special restrictions to the $2 billion deal would be unwise.

Clark said in an interview that he opposes the sale, which also would involve the export of 1.4 million pounds of enriched uranium as fuel for the two plants. According to GE, the plants could begin generating power. Arab students pelt them with stones and chant: "In blood and fire we will redeem our land."

Arab demonstrations and clashes with Israeli troops have become almost daily rituals in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Ten Palestinian Arabs have died in four months of riots, and Israel is worried about the backlash.

To reduce the bloodshed, the Israeli Ministry of Defense has issued tear gas to troops accustomed to only live ammunition and is considering the use of rubber bullets.

Israeli officials admit that the clashes have stirred growing sympathy for the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) among the West Bank's 670,000 Arabs. But authoritative sources concede there is no sign that the demonstrations have been fomented by the PLO.

The demonstrations began last autumn and intensified in February when a court ruling, later repealed, permitted Jews to worship at religious sites revered by both Moslems and Jews but in Moslem zones.

Arabs accuse the Jews of trying to take over their mosques on the holy Temple Mount in Jerusalem, and they are angry at Jewish settlements being built on the West Bank.

Levi gives okay to probe of CBS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has opened an investigation into accusations by a computer specialist, once jailed for using a computer to steal supplies, that CBS News asked him to break into the accounting system of a New York City bank electronically.

Atty. Gen. Edward Levi has given approval for FBI agents to interview Jerome Schneider, an electronics specialist who served 40 days in prison for stealing the supplies from the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. in 1972.

A Justice Department spokesman said Thursday that as of now only Schneider is to be interviewed in the investigation.

The spokesman said after an initial look at an affidavit Schneider gave before a House committee, Justice Department lawyers, decided "there could be a violation of bank larceny statutes."

Schneider had first gone to the House Ethics Committee, which turned his statements over to the Justice Department.

In New York, Paul Loewenwarter, producer of CBS' "60 Minutes," said Schneider was interviewed on film for two days in Los Angeles for a story on the weaknesses of electronic banking systems.

"In the course of our filming we stayed well within journalistic standards and violated no laws ...," he said.

Schneider told the ethics committee that CBS asked him to crack the electronic accounting system of the Chemical Bank of New York City by transferring money from an account held by CBS reporter Dan Rutherford to another account without the bank's knowledge.

One source familiar with the incident said Schneider tried and failed to make the transfer. Schneider reportedly told the committee that CBS then asked him to befriend a bank employee to obtain information to carry out the operation.

Loewenwarter would not comment on specifics of Schneider's allegations, except to say that he (Schneider) demonstrated how bank systems can be violated and discussed security precautions they might take to reduce this form of threat.

"We stand by our journalism," he said.

Schneider earns his living as a consultant on the weaknesses of computer systems.

Wall-to-wall cots at the Community Day Care Center, 600 W. Browning, has been given until June 1 to cut back its daily enrollment to 65 children — the number it is licensed for. The center's enrollment is 92, and it has an average daily attendance of more than 70 children. Jann Collard, a representative of the State Welfare Department, said the June 1 date was agreed upon because fees are paid in advance and with school out mothers will be able to find baby sitters to keep children in homes. However, officials here are concerned about whose children they might have to turn away. They add that Pampa could support a center designed for 400 children. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

Arab children light bonfires in protest

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops man the castle-like walls of Jerusalem, firing tear gas at roving demonstrators. Black smoke hangs over Arab towns, where swarms of children light protest bonfires of oil-soaked tires.

Soldiers patrol in armored cars, firing warning shots sky-ward. Arab students pelt them with stones and chant: "In blood and fire we will redeem our land."

World's wildlife future governed by humans

Unless man can successfully preserve existing wildlife habitat or create new natural living areas for animals, most of the world's wildlife may be doomed to living in zoos or wildlife parks in the not-to-distant future, reports the current (May-June) issue of INTERNATIONAL WILDLIFE.

Conservationists are working hard to devise methods to protect and create wildlife habitat, but the "road to survival is a rocky one," according to the bimonthly magazine published by the National Wildlife Federation. "What is emerging as the most promising approach to wildlife preservation is not one strategy but a whole spectrum of answers geared to specific problems," writes John Perry, vice chairman of the Survival Service Commission of the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources.

Because more and more rain forests and other wooded areas are being cleared for agriculture and cut for timber, the overall outlook for the world's threatened wildlife is bleak, says Perry. But four basic conservation strategies to save wildlife have worked around the globe and offer some hope for the future.

The classic preservation technique is the establishment of national parks and full-scale reserves. By setting aside large areas of natural habitat, conservationists can maintain entire eco-systems. Hunting generally is forbidden in these areas, as is logging, mining and agriculture. In recent years, the number of national parks and equivalent reserves has grown rapidly, with the world total exceeding 1,300. But the total land involved amounts to only about one per cent of the world's land surface, says the National Wildlife Federation.

A major drawback to the national park approach is that large areas of land are needed and conservationists must compete with other interests for the use of the land. Economic pressures in some developing nations already have forced them to open some national park land to commercial exploitation.

At the other end of the spectrum of wildlife preservation strategies, INTERNATIONAL WILDLIFE reports, is zoo breeding, an expensive answer which Perry characterizes as a "solution of last resort." Out of 276 endangered wildlife species, only 13 have successfully produced stable zoo-bred populations (see chart).

One problem with zoo breeding is that it requires extensive space and financial resources which many zoos lack. While certain animals, such as Pere David's deer and leopards, have enjoyed successful breeding in a zoo environment, other species must remain in a natural habitat to survive.

"Between these extremes of zoos and national parks comes the range of solutions that shows greatest promise," notes Perry in the National Wildlife Federation magazine article. "Basically, these measures fall into two categories: those that would protect, regulate or otherwise manage portions of existing habitat and those that would translocate animals to reclaimed or alien habitats."

By preserving portions of existing habitat in mini-reserves, conservationists can manipulate the habitat for the benefit of a few selected species. Israel's Hai Bar Reserve was established on land that has been overgrazed and now serves as a home for several species that thrived in Biblical times, such as the Dorca gazelle.

Nubian ibex, addax, and Ethiopian wild ass.

"This mini-reserve approach — whether it be an inviolate ecological island or a core breeding reserve to populate unprotected contiguous areas — is frequently the most realistic habitat option open to conservationists," says Perry, a former assistant director of conservation of the National Zoological Park in Washington, D.C.

National parks expect record year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America's parks have been described as "places for refreshment of spirit and mind" and islands undisturbed by the pace of daily life.

But this year the quiet may be broken — by fire and drum music and the sound of marching feet.

The National Park Service predicts a record 252.5 million persons will visit U.S. parks before the Bicentennial year is over — nearly 14 million more than 1975.

Some of the most crowded areas this summer will be historic park attractions in Philadelphia, Boston and Washington, as well as well known National Parks out west — Yellowstone, Grand Canyon and Yosemite. "The week of July 4 will be elbow to elbow all the way," said Ben Butterfield, who handles Bicentennial activities for the Park Service.

Smart vacationers may want to plan pre-season trips to historic areas, such as Independence National Historical Park at Philadelphia, he said.

Sandra Alley of the Park Service said planners are telling Americans to write ahead for information. People who want to avoid the crowds should think about taking springtime trips to park areas or delaying vacations until after August, she said.

In order to save money, several big parks are not opening the bulk of their campground areas until Memorial Day this year. They include Yellowstone, Glacier National Park and Yosemite.

There is no nationwide system to reserve campgrounds, and only parks that had their own reservation procedure last year will have it again this summer.

"We are trying to get people to go to some of what we call the lesser-used parks," said Ms. Alley.

Extinct in the Wild

The Pere David's deer has long been extinct in the wild but is doing well in captivity. The total zoo population in 1974 was 650.

Camping — low-cost form of vacation

NEW YORK (UPI) — Camping has become a year-round American life style that has shown it can withstand changes that might ruin other pastimes.

Its first challenge was the gasoline shortage of 1973, but campers met it by traveling short distances and remaining in one area as long as possible.

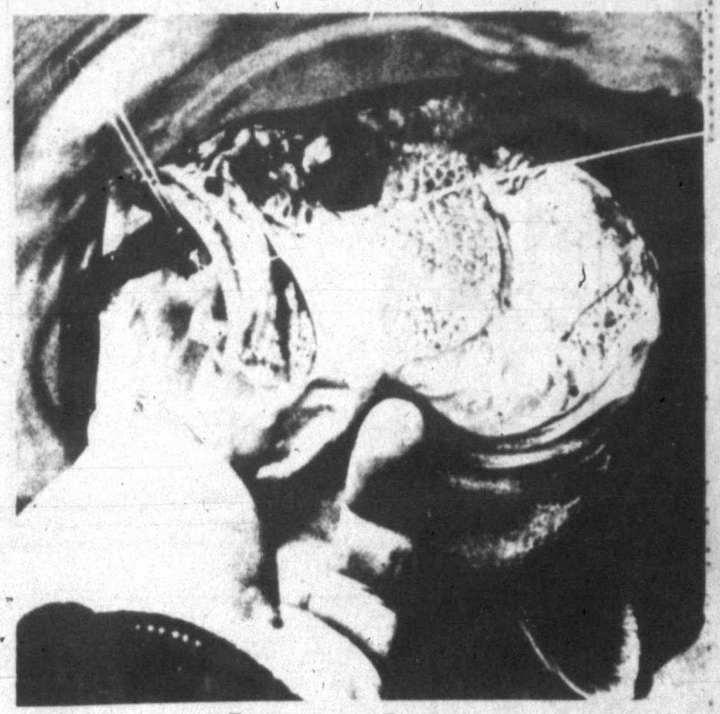

While the cost of gasoline indefinitely will remain the most expensive item of camping, American vacationers will bear the load purely for the pleasure of spending their leisure time in the open.

And camping is the most inexpensive way to spend a vacation, especially for families with small children.

Privately owned campground chains reported an overflow of business in 1975 and expect record business again in 1976, in both warm and cold weather.

Inflation and the high cost of energy have forced campground operators to raise their registration fees in some areas, but only in unusual places or resort areas will campers find the rate more than $7 a night, less than what a motel room in such surroundings cost 20 years ago.

In the first few years after World War II, camping was limited generally to fishermen or hunters, but an interest increased in the great outdoors, especially the desire to see America,

Lure selection

Selection of the proper lure in accordance with structure and the depth of fish often results in the hooking of a lunker bass. Every lure has its own action, and trying several kinds may find the right one.

Different strokes for different lures

By BOB BREWSTER
Mercury Consultant

Every different type of lure, whether plug, spoon, spinner or jig, has its own special action.

Even within a lure class, there is so much variation that most anglers aren't aware of all the possible actions. Realizing this, the fishing experts at Mercury outboards have studied one of the more popular types of lures, the plugs, and offer a few tips that will generally make fishing more successful.

There are four basic types of plugs, each calling for different fishing methods to obtain the best action:

SURFACE DISTURBERS can be fished at different speeds. Most have spinners at one or both ends of the lure. The idea is to attract attention by churning the water. Vary the speed until you obtain the most disturbance.

Those which float with one end out of the water are called nodders and should be fished very slowly, stopping occasionally for 30 to 40 seconds.

DARTERS float horizontally but dive when retrieved. They have a slight dart from side to side to create the action, an enticing wobble beneath the surface. Adjust the speed to suit the depth you want to fish. Three feet is usually the maximum.

FLOATING-DIVING plugs go under when retrieved, but have a lot more side-to-side action than darters. They also work deeper, some to eight feet. Diving plugs are ideal for fishing steep banks or underwater cliffs.

Long casts and fast retrieves take the plug deeper. Most have a large metal lip which can be bent out to make the plug go deeper, or twisted for more erratic action.

SINKING plugs go down immediately. To find fish, work the lure at various depths and speeds from the bottom up. By counting as the lure sinks, you can soon judge depth accurately enough to retrieve at the level where fish are found.

Solunar tables

The schedule of solunar periods, below has been taken from Mrs. Richard Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The major periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours hereafter. The minor periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

River fishing offers challenge

MANISTEE, Mich. (UPI) — The icy spring water of the Little Manistee River can numb the legs of even the warmest dressed steelhead fisherman and send him limping to the bank until circulation returns.

But there's one cry that stimulates even the coldest angler. "Fish on!"

The cry usually is followed by a beautiful leaping rainbow trout, a victim of a fisherman's bait en route upstream to spawn. When a fish is hooked, all fishermen within sight of the action usually stop to watch.

The battle that follows is fierce, and often it is the trout that wins. If the fish is especially active, it can leap a dozen times or more and make several runs before tiring enough to succumb to a net.

The river makes the angler an underdog. He is forced to use fishing line usually no heavier than 12-pound test in the clear water if he wants to be successful in pursuit of the wily spring-run rainbow trout.

Also, the Little Manistee is not a very wide river, and the fisherman must try to hold the trout away from logs and partially submerged bushes that frequent many stretches of the river. Sometimes it is impossible to hold the fish — which can weigh as much as 15 pounds — and lines snap easily under too much pressure or hooks are torn loose.

Spawn sacks (a small cluster of eggs wrapped in netting) are by far the favorite bait, with small spinners running second.

But steelhead angling, whether one is successful or not, creates an interesting camaraderie along the river bank.

When the fishing is hot, anglers are spaced only a short distance apart along the river, or are facing each other on opposite banks to fish the same hole.

Introductions aren't necessary. Simply sharing the same sport is reason enough for conversation and joking.

Anyone who loses a fish once it is hooked gets his share of ribbing and sympathy. The anglers who are successful are both envied and admired by those not as fortunate.

"I hope you left some in the river for the rest of us," an unsuccessful angler ribbed a fisherman who was leaving with a stringer of trout.

"Look at the positive side," the successful angler joked back, "now I've got to lug these smelly fish to the car and clean them when I get home. Aren't you glad you don't have to go through that?"

But steelhead fishing is serious work. It is difficult to detect a pickup as the fish takes a spawn bag bouncing along the bottom. Learning to read productive water and developing the touch for setting the hook are the biggest problems the beginner must overcome.

But once a fish is hooked, a nearby angler won't hesitate to help out, positioning himself in the river to handle the net if the angler is alone. On the other hand, one doesn't dare desert a good fishing hole or another fisherman will be quick to move in.

And it doesn't take a stringer of fish to make a steelheader happy. One is usually enough to call a trip a success.

Fly in the eye?

Actually, it was fly in the nose, as nine-year-old Glen Noack of the McCarty-Hull farm league team caught a line drive in the face Thursday evening at Optimist Park. Phillies edge Mets, Seaver

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Hey, Tom Seaver, where's that Cy Young-winning form? "I'm just not being aggressive enough," says the right-hander.

Seaver's lack of aggression is making pessimists out of the New York Mets. The high-salaried right-hander has lost three straight games, including Thursday's 5-3 decision to the Philadelphia Phillies.

Since Seaver has turned from hawk to dove, the Mets have been tailing off — losing seven of their last nine decisions.

The Phillies even teed off on Seaver's best pitches. Mike Schmidt hit a strong Seaver curve ball over the fence.

"It was a good curve ball, down and away," said a disconsolate Seaver, now 43.

At one point, the three-time Cy Young winner looked so unlike himself that Manager Joe Frazier walked out to the mound and asked him, "Are you sick?" Seaver replied, "No." To which Frazier replied, "Well, the ball's not getting up" to the plate fast enough.

In the other National League games, the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1; the San Francisco Giants nudged the Cincinnati Reds 6-5; the Houston Astros nipped the San Diego Padres 5-4; the Montreal Expos blanked the Chicago Cubs 3-0 and the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Atlanta Braves 3-2.

The Phillies jumped on Seaver for four runs in the first inning, two on Greg Luzinski's double, and held on to beat New York behind Jim Lonborg and Tug McGraw. Dave Kingman of the Mets also belted a home run, his 15th of the season, to keep abreast of Schmidt in the home run race.

The unbeaten Lonborg scattered nine hits in 6 2/3 innings to pick up his sixth victory of the season. McGraw, the one-time ace of the Mets' relief corps, pitched one-hit, three-strikeout ball for the final 2 2/3 innings to get his fourth save of the season.

Cardinals 4, Pirates 1
Mike Tyson's two-run single capped a four-run first inning and sent St. Louis over Pittsburgh, 2-2, scattered 11 Pittsburgh hits — nine singles and two doubles — in registering his first complete game of the season.

Giants 6, Reds 5
Gary Matthews' sacrifice fly in the eighth inning scored rookie Larry Herndon, giving San Francisco its victory over Cincinnati and ending the Giants' four-game losing streak. The Giants, who had lost 19 of their last 23 games, collected 17 hits, but only one was for extra bases — a double by Willie Montanez which did not figure in the scoring.

Astros 5, Padres 4
Joe Niekro and Ken Forsch combined to pitch a four-hitter and Forsch drove in the winning run with an eighth-inning single as Houston beat San Diego. Niekro went the first six innings but had to be removed from the game after he was shaken up in a home plate collision with the Padres' Willie Davis.

Sox trip Yanks

By HERSHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

Carl Yastrzemski had his hands up, but he did his hitting with a bat and left the punching to others.

After a bench-clearing sixth-inning brawl that featured Boston's Carlton Fisk and Bill Lee against New York's Lou Piniella and Craig Nettles, Yastrzemski went to work. He slammed a tie-breaking two-run homer in the eighth inning and another two-run shot in the ninth as the Red Sox waltzed to an 8-2 victory over the Yankees Thursday night.

Coupled with the three home runs Yaz walloped against Detroit one night earlier, it gave him a major league record-tying five in two games. It was the first such feat in the American League since New York's Tony Lazzeri did it 40 years ago.

According to Yastrzemski, it also woke the Red Sox up.

"Until the fight, Ed Figueroa was mowing us down and we were very complacent," he said. "But there was a tremendous will to win from the seventh inning on. It was the first time since the World Series I've seen the pulling-together attitude that we had last year."

Rick Burleson started Boston's late inning barrage with a two-run homer in the seventh inning. Yastrzemski connected in the eighth and then capped a four-run burst in the ninth with his record-matching blow.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Kansas City Royals whipped the Oakland A's 8-4, the California Angels downed the Texas Rangers 6-3 and the Chicago White Sox edged the Minnesota Twins 3-2. Baltimore, Cleveland, Detroit and Milwaukee were not scheduled.

Baserunner Piniella and catcher Fisk battled to a draw after a collision at the plate, although Piniella suffered an injury to his right ring finger and went for X rays. Nettles, however, emerged with a clean decision over Lee and the Red Sox left-hander suffered a serious injury to his pitching shoulder that will sideline him indefinitely.

Royals 8, A's 4
Triples by Fred Patek and George Brett keyed a five-run seventh inning as Kansas City whipped Oakland and plunged the A's seven games behind the Royals in the American League West.

The A's took a 4-2 lead in the top of the seventh on Don Baylor's second solo home run of the game and Phil Garner's RBI double. The Royals then batted around.

Angels 6, Rangers 3
Andy Eichenbarr's two-run double capped a three-run eighth inning that propelled California over Texas. The Rangers had rallied from an early 3-0 deficit to tie the game but Rusty Torres walked and Bobby Bonds singled for the third time to open the eighth before Bruce Bochte singled home Torres.

Texas starter Gaylord Perry was replaced by Steve Foucault, who gave up a sacrifice before issuing an intentional pass to load the bases.

White Sox 3, Twins 2
Rich Coggins, Chet Lemon and Jack Brohamer each drove in a run and Rich Gossage scattered seven hits to lead the White Sox over the Twins.

Fight must go on

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — The figures are usually millions when Muhammad Ali boxes, but the German promotional firm whose financial unsteadiness almost led to the cancellation of Ali's fight Tuesday with Richard Dunn of England was born only three months ago with a declared capital of $8,000.

It took the same firm — Promot, GMBH — only $150,000 dollars in "up front" cash a month later to convince Herbert Muhammad, Ali's manager, to go ahead with plans for the fight here, an informed source said.

"The money was an unusually small amount for this kind of thing," the source went on, "but Herbert took it. It got him in with people he knew nothing about, but the feeling was that if it's German it's probably solid."

On Thursday, the solidity of the deal had crumbled to the point where Robert Arum, the American co-promoter who sold the Ali-Dunn package to the National Broadcasting Company, said the fight was close to collapse because the Germans had not come up with $225,000 due Ali.

The sources said Ali and Herbert Muhammad had the choice of keeping the $150,000 in cash and foregoing the rest of their $1.65 million purse or waiving a part of the money owed them.

Eventually, a deal was worked out in which the outstanding sum, equivalent to the amount Ali was estimated to have to pay in German taxes, was reduced to $160,000 after consultation with German tax officials. Promot signed a statement that it would pay the money and Ali was left about $65,000 short.

"It would not have hurt me none to go home," Ali said, possibly thinking that the $1.65 million seemed insignificant alongside the $6 million he stands to gain boxing against the Japanese wrestler in Tokyo next month and the $9 million he'll get for fighting Ken Norton in Yankee Stadium in September.

The important thing in Munich, Ali said, was that "I got into $20 million condition here."

Ali's German bedfellows are nearly invisible. Walter Settele, a tax accountant who negotiated for Promot, has said his backers are people who prefer to stay out of the limelight.

Uli Kaiser, a German newspaperman hired to promote the fight, said he was employed by an intermediary who told him on three occasions that it could not say who the fight backers were.

The intermediary, a public relations firm specializing in sports, dropped Promot on Wednesday when it said it received only half its fees.

In any case, the backers were people without money enough or sufficient experience to avoid requiring a heavy advance ticket sale to provide them with the cash they needed to continue daily operations.

Marti takes advantage in Memphis after 65

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — "I think it's a lot tougher to make a living, year after year, out here than win a golf tournament," said old pro Fred Martini.

"There's a lot of guys who've won tournaments that couldn't make it. They aren't on the tour any more. The tough thing is to keep on making a living."

And Marti, who has precipitated one of the tour's great mysteries, has made a living for 13 long seasons on the pro tour. He's yet to win. And therein lies the mystery.

Ask any veteran and he'll tell you it's a complete mystery how Marti could play as well as he has for as long as he has and not win.

He put himself in line for still another shot at that elusive first victory with a brilliant, seven-under-par 65 in Thursday's first round of the Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic.

It included the best finish of the year: birdie-birdie-eagle-birdie-birdie.

"It kind of surprised me," understated the broadly-grinning, 35-year-old veteran from Baytown, Tex. "I was playing good and I chipped in twice. Anytime anybody's playing that good and then chips in a couple of times, it's gonna be a low score."

This was a record 30 on the back nine of the 7,193-yard Colonial Country Club course, including six under on the last five. It staked Marti to a two-shot lead over Eddie Pearce, who shot a 67 a few hours after a sneak-thief broke into his ho-

AMARILLO — Lubbock whip pounded out 12 hits to high Amarillo High, 14-5, in the second game of the bi-district baseball playoff series Thursday at the AHS field.

The win squares the series at 1-1 and ups Lubbock's record to 27-7 for the season. Amarillo is now 22-3 for the year.

The third and deciding game of the series will be played today in Lubbock.

"I wouldn't have given two cents for my chances of shooting a decent round," Pearce said.

Lee Trevino, twice a Memphis champion and winner of last week's Colonial National Invitation, Masters champion Ray Floyd and British Open winner Tom Watson were at 70. Defending title-holder Gene Litter and Gary Player shot 71s. Four-time Memphis champion Dave Hill struggled to a 74.

Cabot announces scholarships

Three 1976 graduates of Pampa High School have been selected to receive four-year scholarship awards of $1,000 presented by Cabot Corporation.

Cabot presents 20 such scholarships each year to children of its employees in the United States and Canada.

The three local winners are

Theodore T. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thurman T. Brown Jr. of 2515 Aspen; John C. Hollar, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Chapman of 1114 N. Russell; and Mary Theresa Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Walsh Jr. of 1114 Christine.

Another area scholarship winner is Amarillo High School senior Philip L. Farley, son of Earl F. Farley.

Brown plans to attend Princeton University in Princeton, N.J., where he will major in economics or pre-medicine. Awards earned by Brown include the most valuable swimmer on the high school team during his three high school years. He has held five AAU state championships.

Brown was named Pampa High Junior Rotarian for December 1975. Pampa Optimist Club Outstanding Junior Student of Pampa High, and Key Club's 1976 Sandy Ninninger award. He was a member of the National Honor Society and was ranked fourth in his senior class.

Brown has served as vice president and president of the Presbyterian Youth Group and he is a member of the Amarillo Aquatic Club and the Pampa Dolphins.

Hollar plans a business major at Angelo State University in San Angelo. He is a member of DECA and Key Club and was named "Key Clubber of the Year for 1975-76." He won honors at both the state and national conferences for DECA.

Hollar served as president of the Concert Choir, is a member of the National Honor Society and a member of the Student Council. He is employed part time at Zale's Jewelers through the high school distributive education program.

Miss Walsh intends to attend Texas Tech University in Lubbock to major in mathematics. She is salutatorian of the PHS graduating class.

A member of the National Honor Society and Quill and Scroll, Theresa has earned other honors including Interscholastic League Press Conference Certificate of Merit and a varsity letter in volleyball.

Steven H. Combs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hollis R. Combs of 2510 Charles, was selected as first alternate for a Cabot scholarship. If one of the original 20 recipients is unable to make use of an award, Combs will take his or her place.

The scholarships are selected by a committee which, this year, was composed of a representative from Purdue, Harvard, Oklahoma University and West Virginia University.

Accomplice up for parole

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Carl Fugate, who at 14 accompanied mass murderer Charles Starkweather on a rampage that shocked the nation, gets a chance for parole next month after spending more than half her life in prison.

Miss Fugate, 32, will be considered for release June 20 by the five-member state Parole Board. Her freedom could come then.

Relatives of some of the victims have fought against Miss Fugate's release, and Parole Board sources say a new identity and residence have been prepared for Miss Fugate in another Midwestern state.

She accompanied Starkweather on a 1958 killing spree that claimed 10 victims. Starkweather, who was executed in 1959, also was implicated in a gas station robbery which left one man dead.

Miss Fugate went to prison in 1959 — she was tried as an adult — and a series of unsuccessful appeals followed. She has never received a disciplinary citation in her years at the York Women's Reformatory, where she has studied to be a geriatrics nurse's aide.

Despite protests from victims' families, Nebraska's Parole Board — composed of the governor, attorney general and secretary of state — commuted her life sentence in 1973, making her eligible for parole.

The murders started in Miss

Fugate's home. Her mother and step-father were shot, her 2-year-old sister clubbed to death. It was right after Miss Fugate's mother told Starkweather she didn't think he was a good influence on her daughter.

Their bodies were found on Monday, Jan. 27, 1958, and the body of a bachelor farmer, August Meyer, was discovered the next afternoon at his farm near Lincoln.

That same day — Tuesday — Starkweather's car became stuck in the mud on a rural road, and Robert Jensen and his girlfriend, Carol King, stopped to give Starkweather and Miss Fugate a ride. Their bodies were found later that day in the storm cellar of an abandoned school house near Lincoln.

It was for Jensen's killing that Miss Fugate was convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to life in prison.

When the bodies of C.L. Ward, his wife, Clara, and their maid, Lillian Fencel, were found in their Lincoln home on Wednesday, the governor called out the National Guard.

A search of the frightened city failed to turn up Starkweather, who was on his way to Wyoming. He killed a salesman on a rural road there before a citizen and a police officer captured him near the town of Douglas.

After Starkweather was captured, Miss Fugate said Starkweather would have killed her if she had tried to escape. But Starkweather told a different story — he said Miss Fugate was a willing accomplice.

Fourth graders at Woodrow Wilson Elementary School have produced filmstrips for the Governor's Office of Traffic Safety in Austin.

Students in Mrs. Jean Cone's class and in Mrs. Marjorie Rogers' class worked with materials provided by the state traffic safety office to produce films under the title, "The Safest Show on Earth."

The film producing program is designed to stimulate youngsters to become more aware of pedestrian, bicycle and passenger safety fundamentals.

Fed uses private mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is telling its agencies to try to save money by sending some mail through private delivery firms instead of through the more expensive U.S. Postal Service.

The General Services Administration made the statement about the government's own mail agency in a bulletin circulated last month to federal agencies.

The bulletin, entitled "Reducing Mail Costs," was released Thursday by Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

One of the 10 recommendations contained in the bulletin was: "Use commercial small-parcel carriers as a cheaper alternative to priority mail and U.S. Postal Service-insured parcels."

United Parcel Service, a Connecticut-based company, has surpassed the Postal Service in recent years in the parcel field. Its rates average about 20 per cent below those of the Postal Service.

For example, a two-pound parcel sent from Washington to New York costs 83 cents by the government's parcel post and 75 cents by United Parcel.

A Postal Service spokesman, commenting on the GSA bulletin, said "Government agencies are mandated by law to use the most economical means available to them."

The GSA bulletin said "increases in postage rates have significantly increased mailing costs" in recent years.

It said the federal government's postage costs increased from $301 million in fiscal year 1972 to $403 million in 1973, $457 million in 1974 and $519.7 million in 1975.

"Since fiscal year 1972, therefore, the increase has been over 72 per cent. Additional increases averaging about 29.7 per cent went into effect Dec. 31, 1975."

Simon, a critic of the Postal Service, said he found the GSA bulletin while looking into the extent of government use of private alternatives to the Postal Service.

"It's another example of how the Postal Service, with its inefficiency and increasing rates, is pricing itself out of the delivery market. There's something seriously wrong when public agencies have to abandon the public mail service in order to save money," he said.

Six winners of the 1976 Knights of Pythias Essay and Safety Poster Contest received awards at a recent meeting.

First place went to Linda Williams, a junior at Panhandle

High School who won the honor for the second time. Her essay placed seventh in national competition after winning locally in 1975. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Williams of Groom.

Second place went to Martha Susanne Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C.W. Walsh of 1114 Christine. Miss Walsh is a junior at Pampa High School.

Vickie Coston, a Borger High School senior, placed third in the competition. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Coston of Borger.

In the highway safety poster contest Mike Love, a Pampa Junior High student, won first. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry E. Love of 536 N. Warren.

Second place went to Miss Lisa Adair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.J. Adair of 1227 Christine. Greg Haddock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don E. Haddock of 1433 Charles, placed third.

Judging the essay competition were Ms. Mable Torvie, head of the PHS English department; Ms. Mary Dean Dozier; Bill Haynes; and George A. Bailey, all PHS teachers.

The posters were judged by Charles Ely, art teacher at Sam Houston School; and Texas Highway Patrolmen Dawson Stubbs and Alton Yeakley.

Presiding at the meeting was Don Thompson, chancellor commander of the Pampa Lodge. Awards were presented by B.B. Altman Jr., lodge secretary.

Tarrant county clerk removed for drunkenness

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A civil district court judge declared Thursday that Tarrant County Clerk Ed Loftin is a habitual drunk and is not competent to run his office.

He will be removed from his job, at least temporarily, early next week.

Dist. Judge Charles Murray said he expects to enter a judgment in the case Monday.

If Loftin appeals the decision, the judge said he will appoint someone to serve as county clerk until the appeal is decided.

If Loftin does not appeal, Murray said, the appointment of a replacement will be the responsibility of county commissioners.

The trial in 17th District Court took four days. A jury of nine men and three women deliberated for two hours on two questions—whether Loftin is a habitual drunk and whether he is competent to fulfill his duties.

Their decisions were unanimous. In such a civil case a 10-2 vote would have been sufficient.

Loftin told newsmen he was "rather disappointed" at the outcome.

Asked if he planned to be at work today, he replied, "Certainly."

Loftin referred other questions to Ronald Aultman, one of his lawyers.

"We're going to have a conference in my office now, and we should know about an appeal tomorrow," Aultman said.

Three alcohol-related arrests of Loftin prompted County Judge Mike Moncrief and County Commissioner Jerry Mebus to file the removal suit,cessive alcohol consumption.

During the trial, Asst. Dist. Atty. Gerald Summerford, Cue Lipscomb and Kerry Armstrong called four Fort Worth policemen involved in the arrests Oct. 4, 1975; Dec. 24, 1975; and Jan. 17, 1976.

Testimony ends Thursday in Moyer murder trial

The court's charge to a 181st District Court jury in Amarillo is expected to be presented today in the murder trial of Jim Vanderbilt.

Vanderbilt, 23-year-old ex-policeman, is accused of murdering Katrina Moyer, 16, during a kidnapping on April 1, 1975.

Testimony ended Thursday in the guilt or innocence phase of the trial. Defense Lawyer Jim Brown of Canyon presented four witnesses with three testifying about events of the night of April 11, 1975 when Vanderbilt allegedly confessed to two police detectives involvement in the death of Miss Moyer.

State's witnesses Thursday were Police Detective Sgt. James Smith, who said information from Vanderbilt's oral confession led to a bullet 248.5 feet from the spot where the Moyer girl's body was discovered; Police Sgt. Kenneth McKnight, who drew diagrams of the area where the body was found and where witnesses said they saw a man identified as Vanderbilt on April 1 of last year; Police Lt. Lyle K. Baldwin who read Vanderbilt his rights to remain silent and to have an attorney and to terminate questioning on April 1 last year; and Nancy Moyer, mother of the girl, who said she saw her daughter the last day she was alive and she had no bruises on her wrists or forearms.

A pathologist testified Monday that he examined the girl's body and there was trauma to her wrists.

Vanderbilt's oral confession as reported by police detectives included mention that he handcuffed the girl and that she was handcuffed when the pistol went off on a dirt road north of town.

Brown asked the officer if someone were nervous and had hold of someone, "and that someone jerked, wouldn't that trigger make it fire?"

After a demonstration the officer said: "You'd have to have your finger on the trigger."

Vanderbilt did not take the witness stand during the trial.

The charge was to be completed with final arguments to begin at 9 a.m. today.

Busing decision impact not immediate

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi is moving toward a lonely decision that could make school busing a major issue in yet another national political campaign.

One arrest follows pot plane landing

CORDELL, Okla. (AP) — One person has been arrested in connection with the belly landing of a plane loaded with 3,600 pounds of marijuana, and the sheriff left for Texas saying he hoped to have another man before the day was out.

Sheriff Harold Cooper of Washita County refused to identify the person taken into custody about 9 p.m. Wednesday in a farm building west of Cordell. He added the man declined to talk about the marijuana found in the plane, which was abandoned after it skidded to a halt on a runway of the old Clinton-Sherman Air Force Base early Wednesday.

An off-duty air traffic controller who saw the 2:15 a.m. crash landing said he saw two men run from the twin-engine plane.

Glenn guilty in DWI case

Robert William Glenn, 45, of Amarillo pleaded guilty Wednesday to charges of driving while intoxicated.

The plea was entered in Gray County Court. Judge Don Cain set the penalty at a $200 fine, 30 days in jail and a six month probation term.

The jail term will not be required if he lives up to terms of probation, but if not, he will be sentenced to serve the 30 day jail term in addition to six months probation term.

FRANK CHURCH is thought to have more than the presidential nomination in mind in his primary presidential candidacy. The Idaho senator is reported in Washington to be most interested in the post of secretary of State in an eventual Democratic administration.

CALDWELL'S

Wednesday that Levi alone will decide whether to use the Boston school case as a vehicle for the federal government to seek new Supreme Court guidelines limiting the use of busing to integrate schools. His decision is expected this week.

The debate has split the Ford administration and the Justice Department itself as various officials lined up on opposite sides.

Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman, the only black Cabinet member and a former civil rights lawyer, discussed the matter with Levi privately. He declined comment on the discussion, but he has said he supports the Boston school busing order.

The chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, the League of Women Voters, a leader of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and 500 delegates to the National Conference on Desegregation Without Turmoil all urged the department not to seek new busing guidelines, particularly in the Boston case.

The national controversy may push the issue toward the forefront of the political campaign. It's already a major issue in Kentucky, where President Ford faces a primary election on Tuesday.

But department officials insist that Levi will not be swayed by partisan considerations. And Ford tried to brush off any hint that the timing of the move might be aimed at gaining antibusing support in upcoming primaries. Ford said, "We have made a major effort not to inject busing into the campaign. We hope we can keep this type of matter away from the emotional involvement of this problem and the primary elections."

Ford said he has asked Levi and David Mathews, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, to look for alternatives to busing.

Whatever course Levi takes may change votes, but it won't change court orders imposing busing any time soon, if ever.

If Levi proceeds with the plan he is considering, he would simply file a friend-of-the-court brief asking the Supreme Court to review the Boston busing order.

Department motions are believed to carry considerable weight with the justices, but there's no guarantee that Levi could persuade the court to take the case.

And if the court should decide to hear the case, there's no guarantee that the justices could be persuaded to accept the Ford administration's proposals on how busing should be limited.

Furthermore, a decision would be unlikely before next year. Until then, court-ordered busing would continue under present rules.
