What City Managers Do
Outsiders Make Best—
Dan Moody Is Governor
Ferguson's Failing—

SAVING money for a municipality under the city manager form of government, does not, necessarily mean penny-pinching or the reduction of salaries for firemen or policemen. This salient fact is pointed out by R. E. Hicks, city editor of the Star-Telegram, in an article on the city manager's two years experience in Fort Worth.

FORT WORTH, the city manager system failed to reduce salaries of city employes. On the other hand, it raised them with the introduction of the civil service system. It has spent more money than the former administration—but it has also done a great deal more for the city.

Read today in the Record News Editorial what has been accomplished by Fort Worth taxpayers under the city manager. Elimination of almost million dollar overdraft; increase in the rate of interest paid by city and the discovery of a $66,000 leak in water mains are a few of the things credited to the new Kaiser of municipal government.

FORT WORTH seems to have an (AP) able, efficient city manager band has made a study of city-conscious ding. They imported him. He Stayed into the city a neutral in city politics. He had no axe to grind. He went to work. The chips began to fly. There were some discordant notes. Old-timers did not like the idea of importing a "man to run the city." But the merit of the man's work overcame all of this and the entire city manager ticket recently was re-elected by an overwhelming majority.

AUSTIN PICKED as its city manager one of its favorite sons—an experienced business man, a former member of the board of control and a mercantile who has been in office only 10 months, but he has consolidated six city bank accounts into one and now the city is collecting interest on one big account rather than paying it to a few of the six that were always in the red. Incidentally, the Austin man has also wiped out a big overdraft and cut water and light rates a hundred thousand dollars a year.

WACO IMPORTED its city manager. Beaumont promoted a highly efficient chamber of commerce man. Knoxville, Tenn., brought in an expert. The theory is that an outsider is more qualified, as he generally comes from another city and profits from the experience he has gained on his other jobs. He is free of political ties and therefore deals with one and all alike.

DAN MOODY cracks down and says, in so many words, that he is the governor of Texas. The youth of 31 years, with four months' experience in the executive office, has met his first test at the altar of political patronage.

Cone Johnson, member of the highway commission, has declared to stand on this text: "No senator, no representatives, chamber of commerce or any other man can dictate appointments." Now Moody has climbed upon the same platform, declaring that he will back up the highway commission.

NOW COMES Senator Parr with the statement that the highway commission "will serve as a point of attack on Moody in the next governor's campaign." The senator has mistaken his man, if he assumed that he could beat down the youthful governor and continue the old game of pork barrel appointments. We do not mean that Moody can successfully ... more a spoils system of politics so popular in Texas for years. He ... y and he may not. But one thing is certain. Just so long as he ... s governor, he is going to follow that ideal—and he is an ideals ... young man. Parr may defeat ... m for governor (or will it be for ... ator?) but Moody will go down ... ghting for ... his principles.

THEY SAID a lot of things about Jim Ferguson, and among those who were doing the talking were senators and representatives. But no one said this, in the time of stress for the old political warhorse:

"His greatest fault was that he was too good to his friends."

Far be it from us to defend Mr. Ferguson. He does not ... our crowd and his wife is ... one of our sister papers for $... But to give him his due, it can be truthfully said that Jim Ferguson was "worked" by his friends for political spoils—appointments and other favors. And much of the criticism of his (the Fergusons) administration was due to the fact that he was merely being good to his friends.

DAN MOODY apparently is not going to make that mistake. He is the sole owner of his name—in the light that he feels it must be protected. He knows nothing about the spoils system—certainly not the price he may pay for discounting and sneering at it. The future will say whether he can cope with such a problem. The public will agree with him today that he is right.

Million Dollar Overdrafts Eliminated By City Manager

Efficient City Employes Rewarded Under Modern Form Of Government at Fort Worth and City Hall Hums With Activity

By ROBERT E. HICKS
City Editor, Ft. Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, April 30.—Two years is not a very long time in the history of cities, but it has been long enough to indicate to the majority of Fort Worth's voters that they at last have their city government on the right track and the cries of the faction which once advocated doing away with the city manager form of government here no longer are heard.

The new plan of managing municipal affairs was instituted in Fort Worth on April 15, 1925, an elected council of nine of the city's leading business and professional men taking charge after the voters had junked the old commission plan. One of the nine councilmen was appointed mayor for two years and the council appointed a city manager for an indeterminate term at a salary of $18,500 a year, which figure has since been raised to $15,000.

Higher Interest for City Money

The council was criticized by the old guard politicians, for paying a man such a salary, but the man selected for the place soon demonstrated his ability to save the city many times that amount of his compensation. One of his first official acts was to invest some $800,000 of the city's interest and sinking fund into approved bonds. The sinking fund for years had lain in a bank drawing three per cent interest and the bonds purchased with it bear an average of 4.6 per cent, the difference in the interest rates netting the city more than $10,000 a year.

One of the principal arguments used by advocates of the city manager plan of government in nearly all cities where it has been adopted is that it "saves money," and the voters often obtain the wrong impression of what "saving money" means. Those who do not stop and think naturally assume that if the city manager plan is adopted, it will cost lesser number of dollars to operate the city. In a few cases this has been the case, but in most instances—and Fort Worth is in this class—the total number of dollars now being spent for the city's operation is greater than it was previously. Despite this fact, it can be said truthfully that the city manager plan is saving money in Fort Worth, for it has ben demonstrated time and again that the administration is getting more value for

TOLL OF FLOOD LEAPS HIGHER

Many Cities On Mississippi In Desperate Peril

By ARTHUR HACHTEN
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 30. — With breaks in levees at South Bend, Ark., and Yazoo City, Miss., and a smash in the Mississippi river barriers south of Natches, Miss., threatening to occur momentarily; the floods in Dixie rolled on today, adding thousands to the list of homeless and to the stupendous property loss.

Property damage from the break in the levee at Yazoo City today was estimated at $1,000,000 and rapidly rising.

Ten thousand bales of cotton were destroyed in one building alone and the inexorable flood waters are steadily rising there.

Frantic calls were sent out by the Red Cross to all sections of the country to rush boats to the lower Mississippi valley for concentration in the vicinity of Natchez, where the raging Mississippi seems certain to bowl over a levee on the west bank and inundate thousands of acres of the best farming land in America.

With the big swell in the Mississippi river due to reach Vicksburg, Miss., in four days and the Yazoo river rapidly rising at that city it was feared that some of the wholesale district in that city was doomed to disaster.

The section threatened is along the water front, but several hundred yards back the city rises sharply and is in no danger of general flood. Property loss that would run into millions would ensue should the waters overflow the levees there.

Flood warnings have been issued to all of the people below Natchez on the west side of the Mississippi. Thousands of persons are treking into the communities of higher ground. It is a staggering sight.

They come in automobiles, wagons, horse back and afoot, some of these refugees, not knowing where they will rest their heads or whither they are going, carrying bundles of treasures and possessions. A flood or a fire in one community ordinarily at-

NEW ORLEANS LIKE CITY ON BATTLE FRONT

Refugees By Thousands Rush To Town, As Other Thousands Flee

WATERS RISE HIGHER

Wichita Falls Men In Flood Area Tell Graphic Story of Horrors

Camped in the streets, parks crowded, sleeping on sidewalks, breakfasting on the curb!

That's New Orleans, a city upon whose mercy has been thrown thousands of homeless flood sufferers, a city sought for aid and yet a city that before the week is out may be seeking aid itself. So pictures Charles Spragins of Wichita Falls.

Thousands of people going out, abandoning their homes, fear crazed, using nearly every method of conveyance known to mankind. Yet thousands coming in. Thousands jammed in departing trains, auto caravans, on bicycles, in wagons, on foot, leaving the seaport of the south in fear of those swirling waters of Father Mississippi. Yet thousands struggling in, thousands scurrying from the flood-stricken areas further up the Mississippi!

Fight to Save City

That, in part, is New Orleans today, says Spragins upon return from the City of the Delta where he attended the past week convention of the National Electric Light association as representative of the Texas Electric Service company.

Hurrying workers, numbered in the tens of thousands, striving to increase the height of protecting levees as the swollen waters of the Mississippi whirl past, a scant six inches under the overflow point. The expected the middle of this week. An 18-inch rise! And defense barriers only partially completed. That's New Orleans again, New Orleans today from another angle, seething, rushing workmen in the thousands scurrying about crest expected the middle of this nest of ants.

Like War City

The city has taken on the aspect of a city during war time that fears almost immediate attack from enemy forces. New Orleans has this appearance, says Spragins, although there is no martial law. The people fleeing out and yet the steady incoming flow, in part produces this picture. Fully 50,000 have left New Orleans the past week, declares Spragins, in fear of the flood waters which have not arrived to their fullest extent yet, and may not if further dynamiting of levees suffices to abate the "brown torrent."

They're feeding Foydras people in lower Canal street. Regular bread lines. Families homeless, only too glad to camp under a corner street light or on a clump of gress in a nearby park, families that but await the abating of the waters to return to their stricken fields, their wrecked homes and start the rebuilding process, begin replanting their crops. That's the flood area.

FORMER WEST TEXAN TELLS OF HAVOC

First hand description of the Mississippi flood was given here Saturday by F. D. Futch, former West Texan whose home is now in Marks, Miss., a short distance north of Greenville, where the levee broke this week and allowed additional territory to be flooded. Mr. Futch is visiting his two sons here, J. M. and F. D. Futch Jr., local tailors.

As far as the eye can see there is water in the stricken district, Mr. Futch stated. Only the towns and farm homes situated on high ground are free from the flood.

Much Suffering

The entire distance from Memphis to Little Rock is inundated and refugees can be seen from the railroad huddled together in tents, box cars and any other available shelter on railroad dumps and small hills which have not yet been covered by water, he said.

Although there is much suffering in the valley now, Mr. Futch stated, it does not approach the deplorable conditions which will prevail after the main flood stage has receded. The lowlands will be left standing in water and a majority of the fields will not be tillable for several months while many of the homes have been washed entirely away and others practically wrecked.

Dairy Industry in $600,000 Class As Butter Moves in Carload Lots

A new source of income for Wichita Falls and its trade territory which at its initial rate will bring approximately $600,000 annually into the pockets of creameries and dairymen of the territory was started this week when the first solid carload of butter was loaded out for Chicago by creameries in Wichita Falls, Electra, Childress and Bowie, it was announced Saturday by officials of the Fort Worth and Denver City railroad.

Four Cities Join.

Under a co-operative plan creameries in the four cities have contracted to load out a car of butter each week to Chicago markets. Butter has been shipped by express out of this district for several years, but it was not until this week that carload movements were inaugurated.

A half of a car was shipped the previous week by the Producers Creamery company of Wichita Falls and the Ferndale Creamery of Bowie, the latter concern placing in the car 2,800 pounds of the 15,548 pounds in the shipment.

The first full car which was started in Childress on Monday, completed its load at Bowie and was started on its way to furnish butter for diners on Chicago's famous loop by Monday night.

Of the total of 27,938 pounds in the car, the Ca... Creamery at C... 18 ... Electra loaded 5,070 pounds, the Ferndale Creamery of Bowie put in 4,270 pounds and the Producers Creamery of Wichita Falls added 11,570 pounds. The local plant could have almost loaded out the car had it not made the shipment in the previous week.

Steady Growth.

Beer Drinkers In For Dry Summer Says Morgan, Between Raids

War on road houses was declared Saturday by Constable Frank Morgan who declared that he was starting a vigorous campaign on beer joints operating in the Wichita Falls precinct.

A promise has been made by Mr. Morgan to citizens of Wichita Falls to rid the outlying districts of drinking places where beer and whiskey are sold and he intends to keep his promise, the constable declared.

"They will not operate this summer," Mr. Morgan said in speaking of beer traffic in Wichita Falls. "I make no idle boast when I say that—road houses may run for a while but my department will raid every one of them in time."

Constable Morgan led deputies on two raids Friday night and on one Saturday morning, making six arrests and capturing approximately 396 bottles of beer besides beer making parhphenalia.

Breaking up a "wild party" being staged on the Henrietta road the officers arrested five persons and seized about 100 bottles of beer Friday night.

Girlish Charm

The exquisite daintiness you admire in so many women depends as much on their hair as their peach-blow complexion and stylish clothes. You can't look good with a pretty dress and dull, stringy hair any more than you would be neatly dressed if you had on a pair of shoes with run-over heels.
You don't have to be denied the admiration you love, because your hair isn't lovely. It is so easy to keep it soft, bright and silky. But don't expect shampooing to do it. Soap and water only washes out the dirt, but you can remove dandruff and that oily film and each strand which keeps hair dull and lifeless. Danderine does it, without drying out the hair too.
The next time you fix your hair, wet your brush with Danderine and draw it through with long, even strokes until each strand is alive and glowing. It takes just a few minutes each day. There's no inconvenience of waiting. You can go right out, and the improvement you will see in the loveliness of your hair will thrill you so you will want to always have Danderine in your room along with your other beauty necessities, so you can make it a daily habit to use it. It will help to keep in your waves.
Danderine is so inexpensive too. The 35c bottle contains enough to prove to you how wonderful it is You can get it from your nearest store.

BODY OF GIRL IN CHURCH LOFT

Negro Janitor Finds Corpse Of Missing Maid

By Universal Service.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 30. Little Floella McDonald, one of two children who mysteriously disappeared during the week of April 11, is dead. Her body was found late today in the belfry of the First Presbyterian church. No trace has been found of Lonnie White, the other child.

That the child was slain and her body dragged to the dim church belfry is conceded by the authorities tonight but they are at a complete loss to account for the crime.

Frank Dixon, aged negro janitor, preparing the church for services tomorrow, detected a strange odor. He searched the building and finally his aged feet negotiated the 50-foot ladder leading to the towering, silent belfry. He had not been up there before in years.

Groping through the dark, his vision aided only by streaks of light that filtered through the loose lattice work, he saw the body huddled on the floor. It was stripped of clothing and decomposition had set in.

Trembling with fear, the aged negro descended the ladder and told white friends of his discovery. The authorities investigated.

The body was quickly identified as that of little Floella McDonald, 11 years old, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McDonald. The parents were prostrated.

An autopsy will be performed to determine the cause of death. Police officers in searching the building late today discovered what appeared to be dried splotches of blood in the basement of the church where the stairs lead to the belfry.

Little Floella disappeared late in the afternoon of April 11, after leaving the city library for her home. The following day Lonnie White, a boy one year her senior, also disappeared. Floella and Lonnie were not acquainted. They attended schools located in widely separated points of the city. No trace of Lonnie has been found.

The authorities early tonight had several negroes under arrest and were cross-questioning them closely.

Large rewards raised through public subscription have been offered for the arrest and conviction of the abductors of the children.

each dollar expended than it did in the past, and few complaints of high taxes are registered where the taxpayers feel that they are getting full value for their money.

Overdrfats Thing of Past

Those who look further into the matter also realize that the increased cost of government is not due to the adoption of the city manager plan, but rather to the fact that the city is growing. Fort Worth is larger this year than it was last year, and constantly it takes more men to police the city, more firemen to protect it against fires, more fire stations and equipment, more miles of water and sewer mains, in fact, more of everything which the city has to buy.

And on the other side of the ledger, it is noted that revenues also are higher than before, due both to a slight increase in the basic tax rate and a large increase in taxable property values. Probably the most important point of all is the fact that while both revenues and expenses are higher, the city's outgo is being well within its income, and million dollar overdrafts for current expenses such as were piled up under the old commission form of government are a thing of the past.

City Employes Rewarded

Inauguration of the civil service among city meployes has resulted in the weeding out of inefficiency and, on the whole, higher pay for the workers. Removal of their their jobs from the political pie counter also has had a salutary effect upon the employes who now work with greater zest and interest. The city hall, once the choice loafing place of the city, now is a bee hive of activity and looks the part of what it really is, the workshop of the biggest business concern in the city.

A change was made in the method of garbage collection and disposal which resulted in a saving of $50 a day to the city, despite the fact that a larger volume of refuse is now being handled than previously.

A $66,000 Leak

Leaks in water mains and conduits were located through which 915,000 gallons of water per day was being wasted. The leaks were stopped, representing a saving of $66,795 per year.

District pump stations in the water system, in the past operated by engineers, were equipped with automatic controls, saving $9000 per year. This saving was sufficient to pay for the automatic controls in nine months.

GIRL ATTACKED ESCORT BOUND

San Antonio Reports Series Of Brutal Assaults

SAN ANTONIO, April 30.(AP)—City and county authorities today were searching for two Mexicans who late Friday held up and robbed Frank St. Claire, Brooks field flying cadet, then abducted and attacked his 17-year-old girl companion.

Pretending they wished to borrow a match the two Mexicans stepped up beside St. Clair's automobile about 10 o'clock and when he started to oblige them they produced pistols and ordered him to start his car, according to reports to police. The couple were forced to drive about a quarter of a mile out of town where St. Clair was bound and gagged and left in a mesquite thicket. The Mexicans are then alleged to have driven with the girl some 13 miles from the city where she was attacked.

When St. Clair freed himself he immediately notified police who organized a searching party for the girl who was found several miles out about 1:30 a. m., walking towards town. Her hands were tied behind her back with a neck tie, according to police.

A similar attack occurred about 10 days ago within a few blocks of the scene of last night's occurence. Descriptions of the bandits given were said to have tallied with those given of the attackers last night.

Both girls are high school students and members of the same class, police said. While several arrests have been made in the first instance all had been released on failure of identification.

Wars of Future Will Be Fought Out By Armored Tanks, Say Experts

WASHINGTON, April 30, (AP)—Even the infantry may go riding into the next war behind the protective armor plate if the dream of some British army authorities comes true. A completely motorized fighting force, says the Infantry Journal in its May issue, is to be tried out beginning next month by the British military establishment to test a theory that tanks and similar equipment have largely destroyed the effectiveness of the older units of the service. This theory has as its chief exponent Col. J. F. Fuller, foremost British tank authority, who will command the experimental force this summer and who declares in an article the Infantry Journal that gas engines have revolutionized the art of war as much as did gun powder.

Decisive battles of the future, Colonel Fuller predicts will be fought in the open country by fleets of tanks to conserve man power, the world war having demonstrated that "on ground over which tanks could move, infantry, either to assist or resist tank attacks, were useless." He adds that infantry still can "fight in woods, swamps and amongst hills, but its regin over the plains is at an end."

Comment by American army tank experts on Colonel Fuller's doctrines shows wide disagreement with some of his conclusions, but unites in praising his break away from old military conceptions.

"While even the most enthusiastic among us for mechanical warfare may not be able to accept in toto the views of the extremist, he will certainly cause us to bestir ourselves and bring us to a realization that commanders will be held accountable for an economical expenditure of their fighting power," said Brig. Gen. S. D. Rockenbach, former chief of the American tank corps. General Rockenbach also challenged the statement that uselesness of infantry to assist or resist tank attacks had been demonstrated in the world war.

TEXAN WINS HERO AWARD

Bexar County Farmer Named For Carnegie Medal

SAN ANTONIO, April 30.(AP)—In recognition of his valor in saving the life of a friend who was drowning in spite of the fact that he was himself a poor swimmer, Floyd F. Reece, a young farmer living near here, has been awarded a citation by the Carnegie hero fund commission.

Reece saved Miss Gertrude Waltrep from drowning at Post, Texas, July 5, 1926. Miss Waltrep, who could not swim, stepped into a deep hole while wading. Reece, a poor swimmer waded out to her and attempted to draw her back. In the struggle he was pulled into the hole and twice submerged. He managed, however, to shove her toward the bank as he walked on the bottom in water six to eight feet deep.

News of the award was released by the commission in Pittsburgh last night.

TRIO OF RUM PLANES SEIZED

Dry Agents in Los Angeles Kill One Aviator

LOS ANGELES, April 30.(AP)—Federal agents reported today that they had captured three airplanes in which aliens were being smuggled into the state from Mexico and that one aviator was shot and killed in the fighting which resulted in the seizure. The planes were seized on the Riverside-Redondo road outside Los Angeles.

Two other avitors were captured by the federal immigration inspectors, but 10 Chinese, declared to have been carried out of Tia Juana at 5 a. m. today, escaped. The officers requested police to throw a guard around Los Angeles Chinatown to effect their capture.

The dead aviator was identified as Arthur D. Daugherty, 30, of this city. He died a few minutes after being shot.

The Eagle Airport on the Riverside-Redondo boulevard near Gardena, a suburb, was the immediate locale of the capture and gun battle. The successful raid by the immigration officers, of whom there were four, was the result of definite discovery a week ago that a fleet of planes was operating in the smuggling of aliens from Mexico. Early today they were tipped off that three planes had left Tia Juana and although flying very high, they were seen passing over San Diego and were reported to the officers here. The latter lay in wait for their arrival at the airport.

More Than Million U. S. Farms Have Radio Receiving Sets, Survey Shows

WASHINGTON, April 30, (AP)—A total of 1,252,126 farms in the United States were equipped with radio sets on April 1, an increase, says the department of agriculture, of 126 per cent over the 553,008 estimate of July, 1925.

There were more farm radio sets in Iowa than any other state, the 99,990 representing an increase of 160 per cent. Indiana was second with 81,144, a gain of 377 per cent; Illinois 65,532, Ohio 63,448, and Kansas 62,055.

Replies to a questionnaire addressed to 10,000 farmers, many of whom have reported definite savings as a result of the farm radio service, showed that a majority prefer radio talks to music and that old fashioned tunes and classical pieces are desired when music is broadcast. Political talks and more current news programs are wanted in addition to the weather and market reports.

"Expressing Willie" is a full length drama, with comedy predominating although there is no absence of the popular problem play idea and philosophy.

PURCHASE PLEDGE

Studebaker Policy Proves Worth, Says Fritz.

That the merchandising of used cars is no longer a "hoss tradin' game" has been most conclusively shown by the results obtained by Studebaker dealers all over the country through the sale of used cars under the Studebaker used car pledge, according to announcement received by D. L. Fritz, local Studebaker distributor.

Against the predictions of the entire automobile fraternity, Studebaker dealers, two years ago, began selling used cars under the terms of this pledge. For the year 1926 records show that 100,000 cars were sold under this pledge plan. Moreover they were so honestly sold that less than 200 complaints were registered at the factory.

The terms of this Studebaker used car pledge read as follows:

1. Every used car is conspicuously marked with its price in plain figures, and that price, just as the price of our new cars, is rigidly maintained.
2. All Studebaker automobiles which are sold as certified cars have been properly reconditioned, and carry a 30-day guarantee for replacement of defective parts and free service on adjustments.
3. Every purchaser of a used car may drive it for five days, and then, if not satisfied for any reason, turn it back and applay the money paid as a credit on the purchase of any other car in stock—new or used. (It is assumed that the car has not been damaged in the meantime.)

Camp Fire Girls Observe Forestry Week With Tree Planting Program

National forestry week was observed Saturday by the Camp Fire girls in an all-day rally at Scotland park. The morning was taken up in games and preparation of lunches which were cooked over fires.

R. H. Rhine gave a talk in the afternoon on tree conservation and tree planting, stressing the value of trees to man and the great problem of lumber shortages which confronts the United States. Camp Fire girls were declared by Mr. Rhine to be fortunate in living in an age in which the value of trees is being brought to them.

Miss McIlheran read several poems and discussed the idea of having a Camp Fire Girls' nursery which would be symbolic of different ranks, with each rank planting trees in its section. It was decided to plant the tiny cedar sent here by Frank Rush of Craterville in a city park where it can be cared for until it is larger. This tree has been christened Quanah Parker for the Indian chief whose name is well known in Craterville.

A short sing-song preceeded the nature games of which Thelma Bridges was in charge.

In blind man's test one girl from each group was blind folded and led to four different trees to be identified by feeling of the bark.

Another game played was nature tag in which girls were given a certain time to reach a specified tree and return to their lines first. This game proved interesting and lively.

Every guardian is urged to attend the guardian's association meeting on May 3 at the home of Miss Mary McIlhern, 2015 Wilson street.

Lorraine Snyder, 9, To Testify Monday At Mother's Trial For Father's Death

NEW YORK, April 30. (AP)—Added to the list of prospective witnesses in the Snyder-Gray trial which resumes Monday is the name of a child, who, by being born a girl instead of the boy her father desired, so provoked bickering that it ended only when the disappointed father was murdered.

Lorraine, 9-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, co-defendant with Henry Judd Gray in their trial for the murder of Albert Snyder, magazine art editor slain in his Queens Village home March 20, will take thestand in her mother's defense Monday, it was announced today by Edgar F. Hazelton, chief of counsel for Mrs. Snyder.

Lorraine was an "unwanted child", Mrs. Snyder testified. Albert Snyder had "wanted a boy."

When the little girl was born he was angry. They "quarreled often" about her, and the child, whose birth was looked forward to as a means of restoring her to her husband's affections, caused bitterness, sometimes lasting for weeks.

It was little Lorraine who first carried outside of the Snyder home news that led to the discovery of the murder. Awakened by her mother's tapping on her bedroom door, thechild found her lying on the floor outside, her hands bound and a gag in her mouth. Lorraine was sent to a neighbor's house for help. The neighbor found Albert Snyder dead in his bed, picture wire twisted tightly about his neck and his head battered by blows from a sash weight.

ENGINEER MAY QUIT HIS JOB

R. A. Thompson Will Insist On $10,000 Salary

AUSTIN, April 30. (AP)—Resignation of R. A. Thompson, state highway engineer, unless the fortieth legislature in special session grants him an annual salary of $10,000 seemed probable tonight.

Thompson today announced he will quit Monday from a consulting engineering position he holds with the city of Dallas, in line with his intention announced some time ago.

Questioned as to his attitude toward action of the senate finance committee in cutting recommendation for his salary from $10,000 to $8,000, Thompson declared he was "promised $10,000 a year and expected the promise to be fulfilled. If the legislature fails to approve, I then shall announce what I shall do."

The highway commission's employment of Thompson, with Governor Dan Moody's sanction, Thursday drew various "comments" from angered senators in a row precipitated in the senate finance committee room between the commission and various senators. In the heat of the argument, the open threat was made that a campaign will be made against Governor Moody "next election day" with the commission's administration one of the issues.

Bonner Faces Trial Monday

First Trial in Bomb Death Deadlocked Jury

By Universal Service.

SAN ANTONIO, April 30.—For the second time this year, Frank H. Bonner, Texas university graduate and San Antonio electrical engineer, is scheduled to face trial Monday for the bomb slaying of J. F. Barnes and his 7-year-old son, Jesse Barnes, in Corpus Christi Nov. 14, 1922.

Both sides Saturday said they are ready for the trial.

The first trial, which resulted in a hung jury, was held in Corpus Christi January 13.

Barnes and his little son were fatally injured when they opened an express package containing an infernal machine. The package, it is alleged, was sent from San Antonio.

Following the double killing, Bonner, the accused man, married Dorothy Barnes, daughter of the dead man. They were married in New York City March 21, 1924.

Later the Nueces county grand jury indicted Bonner for the slayings, and he was arrested at his home in San Antonio just before Christmas day, 1926.

Following the trial in Corpus Christi, Judge J. W. Cunningham, upon his own violation, ordered the case tried here on a change of venue.

In the first trial the state based its case principally upon the testimony of Raoul Fernandez and Santiago Mendosa of San Antonio, who testified that Bonner resembled the man that gave them the fatal package to mail.

$1500 Prize Offered For Song to Be Used By U. S. Infantry

NEW YORK, April 30. (AP)—The American infantryman needs a good, stirring "peppy" song and the Association of Infantry Officers is willing to pay $1500 to see that he gets it.

The 500 song writers, including Irvin Berlin, who have already entered for the prize have been told that the song must be above all things, impressive, but also "simple, catchy and capable of being learned readily by the rank and file."

As to expressiveness it must translate "the spirit of the infantry—the plodding, hiking, dogged, storming, fighting infantry, whose success means victory and whose recoil means defeat for the army and nation.

Grave Yields Missing Body

Wealthy Florida Merchant's Disappearance Solved

VICTORIA, Texas, April 30. (AP) The Potters Field here today gave up the body of Louis E. Overstreet, prominent produce merchant of Lake Worth, Fla., who has been missing since April 6 and who is believed to have been the victim of a mania for jumping from trains.

On April 19 the body of a shabbily dressed man, his neck broken, was found along the Missouri Pacific railroad near Placedo, in this county.

The body was exhumed and identified today as the Lake Worth merchant by his brother, H. E. Overstreet of Alamo, Texas. The Lake Worth man wired his brother on April 6 that he was coming to Texas. Nothing has been heard from him since, but it has been established that he bought a railroad ticket at New Orleans for San Benito, Texas.

Man Leaps From Train

A few days later press dispatches reported that a man answering his description had jumped out of a train window between Beaumont and Houston. This incident, the finding of the body near Placedo, and the disappearance of the Lake Worth man caused his brother to come here and investigate.

The missing man's baggage was located in Houston yesterday. His suit case contained a costly suit and other good clothes.

Mr. Overstreet said his brother had a mania for jumping from moving vehicles and that he had often cautioned him about it. It is believed that after jumping from the train, he was accidentally struck by a freight train while walking on the tracks, or that he was hit by a swinging chain on a freight car as he stood near the rails.

Congressman Interested

The Overstreets formerly lived at Kissimmee, Fla., where J. L. Overstreet is district clerk.

Congressman Mansfield of Texas today received a telegram from Congressman Sears of Florida, a close friend of the Overstreet family, asking the Texas congressman to interest himself in investigating the case.

This request was transmitted to Sheriff Louis O. Hudler of this county. Another brother is a plantation owner in the Rio Grande Valley, and still another brother was robbed and murdered in Valdosta, Ga., years ago.

The body of the man taken from Potters Field today is to be shipped to Kissimmee, Fla.

POLICE ERROR PROVES FATAL

Vernon Man Shot as Robber By Mistake, Dies

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, April 30.—Funeral services for G. M. Stroud, mistaken for the man who attacked and robbed Mrs. A. B. Swartwood Friday morning, shot by Houston Abell, Vernon policeman, will be held from Baptist church at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Stroud died at 4:30 Saturday morning from effects of the wound.

Stroud was shot when he thought officers were hold-up men and ran. One bullet took effect in his back, going through and coming out in front. Blood transfusion, blood furnished by his son, Tyrus, was made, but was of no avail. Abell was held on charges of attempt to murder.

Finger Prints Found.

Barney Fink, head of Fort Worth police department Bertillion system discovered two excellent sets finger prints, one on bed post and other on window, of man who robbed Mrs. Smartwood. Identity of the man is known by officers and arrest is expected momentarily.

Four other burglaries committed the same night are believed by officers to have been committed by the gang of thugs who robbed Mrs. Smartwood. Homes of four Vernon residents were burglarized and watches and money valued at several hundred dollars were taken.

Police Saturday morning foiled an attempt of knob knockers to rob the safe of the Peoples store, but failed to make an arrest. The knob was knocked off the safe, but nothing of value was taken before arrival of officers.

The Vernon Legion post officers offered its services to the mayor in an effort to combat the crime wave here. Services accepted by mayor and fifty members of post will assist in enforcing law.

Bound and Gagged.

Mrs. Swartwood was alone in her house at the time of the attack. She was awakened at about 3 o'clock by someone raising the window of her dressing room. Before she had time to get up, she was seized by the intruder and bound and gagged. The burglar had knocked off the light switch of the house and, since he had to work in darkness, failed to find a purse containing $50.

Mrs. Swartwood begged him not to take a small Shrine ring which she valued very highly, but the burglar replied, "I won't leave you nothing, and if I need any help I got a negro outside who will help me," Mrs. Swartwood said.

After the burglar had gone, Mrs. Swartwood knocked over a telephone and managed to call central, who in turn called officers. The woman was found in a hysterical condition, with bruises about her face and body. She is now under the care of a physician, and is not reported to be seriously ill.

Texas Government To Operate 1927-28 On Budget of $41,000,000

State's Estimated Expenses For Next Two Years Total Up to Staggering Aggregate

AUSTIN, April 30. (AP)—A rough aggregate of about $41,000,000 to run the state for the next two fiscal years is called for in the four major appropriation bills to be put up to the fortieth legislature's special session, May 9, by the senate finance committee, Senator A. E. Wood of Granger, chairman, announced today. This is an increase of some $3,000,000 over the board of control recommendations because of changes in the disbursement situation since the recommendations were made.

The house bills are not ready yet and totals are not available. Only the educational budget yet remains to be passed on, however. The eleemosynary budget was agreed upon today, with much less reduction from the board of control recommendations than was made by the senate finance committee, it was estimated by house committeemen.

Budget Slashed

The senate committee slashed the educational and eleemosynary budgets submitted by the board of control, but had to increase the departmental and judiciary budgets. Increase in the departmental budget was occasioned by a change in providing for operation of the state prison system. Under the reorganization bill passed at the regular session, prison revenues will go into the general revenue funds and then be appropriated. Increase in this case thus is only a matter of bookkeeping. In the judiciary budget, however, an actual increase was necessary to take care of the judges' salary raises and certain fee increases made by the 40th legislature.

Adhering to a policy of economy which the house committee also is committeed to, the senate finance committee cut $1,401,655 from the recommended eleemosynary institution budget of $9,832,805.

The departmental budget, which carries the new prison budget will carry something more than $3,000,000 more than was recommended by the board on control. A rough $1,000,000 increase will be carried in the judiciary budget. This includes, besides the judges' salary raise, an increased mileage and per diem fee for witnesses and increased allowances for district attorneys who have more than one county.

Final Check Soon

A final check over on the completed bills will be made next week by the senate committee, while the house committee completes its educational hearings.

Representative J. F. Wallace of the house committee has it figured out that the state's revenue for the next two years will run close to $45,000,000 counting the prison revenues heretofore not counted in the general fund. He declares that there will be very little deficit at the end of the present fiscal year, August 31, if any.

Mr. Adair also visited Childress and was advised there that a holiday would be declared May 16 to allow citizens of that city to attend the convention. Approximately 1000 citizens of Childress are expected at the convention.

BUFFS VIE FOR HITTING CROWN

Spuds Pound Right Along With Turge Leading

In spite of the ups and downs of spring pitching, Texas League hitters continued to hold the edge through Thursday's games with 44 batting .300 or better and many averages above .400. Stump Edington of Beaumont appeared as the new leader with an average of .455, largely because while collecting 20 hits he had drawn an astonishing number of bases on balls. Heck, the Buff leadoff man, led in hits with 26. Jenkins, Wichita Falls, 19, and Connolly, Beaumont, 18, vied for scoring honors. With five home runs, Miller, Dallas, led Lapan, Wichita Falls, and Galloway, Beaumont, 4 each, while Gross, Dallas, led in stolen bases with six.

Houston held the lead in club batting and number of hits, Wichita Falls in runs scored, Waco in home runs, and Dallas and Wichita Falls tied in stolen bases. Penner of Houston is the only pitcher with four victories and is still undefeated. Fussell is the strike-out leader with 19. Batters hitting .300 or better and pitchers winning half or more of their games through Thursday follow:

440 Record Goes In Longhorn Win

AUSTIN, April 30. (AP)—Featuring the remarkable running of Slim Daniels, Coach Clyde Littlefield's Texas Longhorn cinder path artists defeated the Owl proteges of Coach Hjerberg from Rice institute in a dual meet on Memorial Stadium's turf here Saturday by the unexpected high margin of 41 points, the final count being Texas 79; Rice 38.

Daniels' sensational parades were twofold—once in the 440-yard dash when he circled the oval in 49.2 seconds, far eclipsing all previous marks hung up in the southwest, and besting the southwest conference record by Captain Parker of Texas A. & M. at 50.4 seconds.

Then Daniels again promenaded on the cinder pike in the last event of the meet, as anchor man on the Longhorn mile relay team. On that final lap he received the baton full three strides arear of Greer, the Owl anchor man, chased the featured carnivore until he reached the straightway on the opposite side of the oval, then pulled up to run abreast for a distance, while making the second curve, to put on another sensational burst of speed on the finish and win the event by at least three paces.

Spudders To Lose Enthusiastic Backer

The Spudders are about to lose an enthusiast supporter in Jack Coates, sportsman and manager of the Golf and Country club who relinquishes the reigns Sunday to A. A. Dickson, formerly Texas hotel steward.

Coates plans leaving Wichita Falls Monday for a short rest and pleasure visit in Chicago after which he intends removing to Seattle where he plans going into business for himself.

Coates is comparatively well known in Wichita Falls athletic and social circles. He was connected with the Wichita club before taking the managership of the Country club more than a year ago.

Dickson and Mrs. Dickson arrived in the city Saturday. The new manager will be assisted by Mrs. Dickson.

Twilighters Primed For Inaugural This Afternoon

Champion Panhandle Longhorns Tackle Texas Electric Service Company Team in New Amateur Baseball Plant, Starting at Three Bells

Both teams primed to the limit and each confident of copping the jump on the rest of the league, Bill Hoehn's Panhandle Longhorns clash with Charley Spragins' Texas Electric Service company team in the 1927 Wichita Falls Twilight league opener Sunday afternoon at Katy park, new Twilight plant located just outside of the city limits on the Burkburnett highway. Game is to be called at 3 o'clock.

Roy Carter, police commissioner, is scheduled to pitch the first ball and A. W. King, the sanitary commish, is to be on the receiving end. There will be a brass band and everything necessary to make the opener similar to the first game of any professional league, according to A. E. (Doc) Kelly, master of ceremonies.

There will be an admission charge of 25 cents. Proceeds of the game are to go toward paying for construction of the park. The new plant is rated one of the most up-to-date amateur playing fields in the southwest. The league plans to make it self-supporting.

How They Look

Batting orders of the two teams were not certain Saturday, according to the team leaders, but tentative line-ups are as follows:

Champs Optimistic

The champion Panhandle outfit expects to come back even stronger this year than in 1926, but the Electrics have bolstered in many departments and hope to give the Longhorns a mean battle for the laurels.

The Spudders are playing in Dallas today. Texas league fans here who want to see a first class baseball game should take in the Twilight opener. Wichita Falls amateurs play a surprising brand of baseball, as any amateur fan will attest.

Johnny Lynch and Jack Thurman may break into the Panhandle infield and Red Hicks may do some of the catching. McMahon and Melear are the only new men in the Panhandle line-up. Cox, an old Panhandle first sacker, and Francis, former American refinery second baseman, are included on the Kilowatt roster.

Both of these men are expected to aid the Electric team very much. Doc Allen was with the Texhoma team last year, Ross was with the Security National Bank team, Downing, Miller and the two Houseman boys are all new men in the league.

Cox Real First Sacker

Maurice Cox of the Electrics is expected to steady down the infield of the Kilowatts and make it a smooth-working machine. He is a great fielder and will make the throwing of the others a much easier task. Francis is as steady a fielder as is Allen. Miller is a newcomer.

In the outfield Blue and Gordon are hard to beat while the other two players are newcomers.

Andree has been an effective pitcher in the league for several years.

Johny McMahon and Riley Rawls are rated as two of the best hitters in the league. Both are sharp fielders. Kerr and Graves both are dangerous at the bat and are good fielders.

Wild Bill Hoehn has shifted from second base to first base to fill the shoes of Don Faichney. Speck Roberts and Johnny Hinds are both well known infielders. Melear is a new man.

Horton and Hicks were recognized as the best catching staff in the league last year. Randolph and Connally are hold-overs from last year.

700 Golfers Expected to Go After Laurels

NEW YORK, April 30. (AP)—With the selection of 17 sectional qualifying courses, the United States Golf association today completed its preparations for the national open championship on June 14, 15 and 16 at the Oakmont Country club.

The championship committee again fixed 150 entries as the qualification limit for the championship proper. Thirty-one of these places will be set aside for leaders in the order of last year's finish, while 10 additional reservations in the field will be made for members of the invading British professional team. The committee thus expects to produce 109 qualifiers in the tests, which probably will draw an entry of at least 700 golfers.

Only five of the courses used a year ago have been rechosen this year for the trial tournaments on June 6, as follows: East Lake in Atlanta; Brookhollow in Dallas; Oakmont in Pittsburgh; Lochmoor in Detroit, and Hill Crest in Kansas City.

Members of last year's Walker cup team who were exempted in 1926, this year will be required to take the tests. Bobby Jones, as the champion, will, of course, be excepted. Jones was the only member of the International team to finish among the first 31, but two other well known amateurs are included in the list—Chick Evans and Harrison R. Johnston.

Among the well known professionals who will be exempt are Joe Turnesa, who finished second to Jones, Bill Mehlhorn, Gene Sarazen, Leo Diegel, Johnny Farrell, Walter Hagen, McDonald Smith, Tommy Armour, Mike Brady, Willie MacFarlane, Emmett French, Harry Hampton and Bob McDonald.

Conditions of play in the championship are unaltered, with prize money of $2145, apportioned among the first 20 professionals. The first in the hunt again will draw down $500 and a gold medal.

NORTH TEXAS ANGLERS HAUL OUT RODS AND TACKLE AGAIN

Fishermen, those who think they are and those who would like to be return to their own Sunday morning as the bars are lifted from North Texas waters on the great outdoor game of angling.

In other words, ladies and gentlemen, the fishing season is with us again after a hibernation or what would you, of three months. Closed through February to April 30 inclusive, the gates are open this Sunday morning and North Texas sportsmen may go back to baiting the bass and coralling the crappie.

AUSTIN, April 30. (AP)—Sunday, May 1, is the opening of the main fishing season in Texas.

Even before early mass or protestant Sunday school opens, it will be legal to catch black bass crappie, barred by state law until the first of May.

Reports to the game, fish and oyster commission here indicate that the spawning season in Texas waters has been unsatisfactory this year because of turbidity occasioned by excessive rains in some localities.

Last crop of fish, however, was an exceptionally good one.

The season will be open from today through January 31.

You won't need any license to angle at Lake Kemp, in the Diversion lake, Lake Wichita and tributary streams today, nor, for that matter, the next several weeks. But June 15, a law goes into effect that all fishermen using artificial bait must purchase a license. There will be no strings on the users of natural bait.

There follows a summary of the Wichita valley fish bill effective at this time:

Waters controlled by this law—Lake Kemp, the Diversion lake, Lake Wichita and all waters impounded by these lakes, also Wichita river connecting Lake Kemp and the Diversion lake and all waters in Wichita and Archer counties in the irrigation canals leading from the Diversion lake.

It is unlawful to buy or sell or offer to sell any fish except minnows taken from these waters.

It is unlawful to use dynamite or any explosive or any poison in any of these waters.

It is unlawful to use a seine, net or trap of any kind, except the regular minnow seine, to catch fish in these waters. Fish may be taken on the regular hook and line, or with artificial baits, and in no other manner.

Size limit—Bass, not under 11 inches. Crappie, white perch, California bass, not under seven inches. Blue Gill Beam, not under five inches.

All fish under size shall immediately be returned to the water without unnecessarily damaging same.

Bag limit—Bass, not more than 10 in one day and not to exceed 20 pounds in one day. Crappie, White perch, Carico bass and Blue Gill Bream, not to exceed 20 per day of all kinds and not over 20 pounds in one day. It is unlawful to have in your possession at any time more than 30 pounds of all kinds, Bass, White perch, Calico bass, Blue Gill Beam.

FROGS BEAT OWLS

HOUSTON, April 30. (AP)—Kit Clark's home run over Bloxsom's head in left field with two men out in the 9th proved the undoing of the Rice Owls and they dropped the second of a two-game series to the Texas Christian University Frogs by a 5 to 4 count here Saturday.

TRIS AND BAN BAT IN 270'S

Cobb Jumps Into .400 Class Of Hitters

CHICAGO, April 30. (AP)—The slugging New York Yankees, major league batting leaders dropped a few points in the second week of the season but they still have four representatives among the first 10 who are hitting better than .400. Babe Ruth added 40 points to his batting mark, but he is still more than half way down the list with a mark of .272, just below Tris Speaker.

All the American league clubs except the Yankees and Detroit picked up in their hitting in this week's games, according to averages including Wednesday's games, but the Chicago White Sox made the greatest gain of them all. Bill Hunnefield, Sox shortstop and Harry McCurdy, top the list, just above Fothergill of Detroit, one of three leaders last year. Ty Cobb jumped up into the 400 class but is just outside the first 10 of those who have played more than five games. Ty moved up from .243 last week to .404 with three doubles, two triples and three stolen bases to his credit.

Sad Sam Leads.

Sad Sam Jones of St. Louis is the leading twirler of the American league just now with three victories, Duth Reuther of New York, Willis Hudlin of Cleveland and Stan Coveleskie of Washington have two apiece. Waite Hoyt of the Yankees is the hardest mound toiler, having worked 33 innings in five games, winning two and losing one. He shares the strike-out mark of 17 victims with Lefty Grove of the Athletics.

Goslin and Judge of Washington are base running leaders with five stolen pillows apiece, Fothergill of Detroit has four and Cobb, Tony Lazzeri of New York and Lou Blue of Detroit have three each.

The leading hitters in the American league today are Hunnefield, Chicago .538; McCurdy, Chicago .538; McCurdy, Chicago .500; Fothergill, Detroit .472; Simmons, Philadelphia .458; Gehrig, New York .447; Goslin, Washington, 447; Koenig, New York .428; Judge, Washington .425; H. Collins, New York .421; Meusel, New York .415.

The New York Giants wrecking crew, Hornsby, Tyson and Lindstrom, cling in a bunch near the top of the National league list of leading hitters topped only by Heinie Sand, Philadelphia. McGraw has a pinch hitter named Henie Mueller, who has hit twice in three times at bat, too.

Hafey of St. Louis and Gibson of Boston round out the .400 hitters in the second week of the season in the elder circuit.

The team batting averages this week showed slight gains and losses but only one change in position, the Cubs pushing Brooklyn down into the cellar.

Just below 10 leading hitters is young Lance Richbourg, the Braves' outfield purchase from Milwaukee. When he did break into the batting order he started off with a batting mark of .353.

Old Cy Williams of the Phillies shares the home run honors of the major league with Lou Gehrig of New York in the American league. Each has four in games including Wednesday. Earl Webb is next to Cy, in the National league with three while Babe Ruth is the American league runner-up with a trio.

Specks Tops National.

Lee Meadows of Pittsburgh, with his specs is the league leading pitcher to date with four victories Jess Haines, who heads the effort to keep the world's champion Cardinals near the top, has won three and so has Fitzsimmons of the New York Giants. Charley Root of Chicago is the strike out king at present with 17, but his record shows on defeat against the two victories.

Kiki Cuyler of Pittsburgh, the usual leader in base stealing is being rivalled this year by Tyson of the Giants each has five thefts to his credit, with no serious competition in sight.

Mustangs Defeat Longhorns, 10-3

DALLAS, April 30. (AP)—Uncle Billy Disch's Texas University Longhorns drank deeply from the cup of defeat Saturday afternoon at Armstrong field when the SMU Mustangs stampeded and nailed two Longhorn hurlers for twelve hits and ten runs, evening the series. The score was ten to three. The Longhorns Friday had beaten SMU by a score of 10 to four, Redman Hume went the rull route for the Mustangs, allowing six hits, two of which were home runs by Baumgarten. The bags were vacant both times.

Back at Old Stand In Different Role

GRIP CONFIDENT HE'LL SLAM MONTANA FOR MAT VICTORY

THE CARD

Bull Montana, Hollywood, versus Charley Grip, Buffalo. Catchweights, two falls to a finish.

Jack Gorman, San Angelo, versus Billy Gibson, Kansas City. Welterweights, two falls to a finish.

Place: Ross arena on Indiana between Tenth and Eleventh.

Time: 8:15 Tuesday night.

The wrestlers' new open air mat emporium has been completed and is ready for the "Battle of the Brutes," the first outdoor engagement of the year, Tuesday. The diminutive Charley Grip, Buffalo's bullethead who will tip the scales around 150 pounds against Montana's 170 pounds or better, Saturday declared confidence he will slam the movie man for several kinds of a goal.

Grip in reality is a more apelike and uglier human than Montana, but Bull has been smarter in commercializing on his lack of good looks, whereupon Charles becomes envious or something. There isn't any doubt but that Grip is jealous of Montana.

Bull beat Charley Leahman at the Palace a couple of weeks ago, making an impressive showing. In fact, dislocated Leahman's jaw for him and otherwise roughed him up.

Grip was present at the match and urged that Montana be put in the ring with him. Bull appears stronger than Grip, but the bullethead's potent body slam is expected to stand him in good stead.

The popular Jack Gorman is expected to find Gibson, the newcomer, a pretty tough piece of furniture.

Wichita Falls Polo Club Looms As Favorite in Tourney Final

CROWELL, April 30.—The final game to determine the winner of the Minnick polo tournament, a steeple chase, an airplane circus and a quarter mile horse race will feature Sunday's program at the Minnick Ranch south of Crowell.

The steeple chase is creating almost as much interest as the final polo game and over 20 horses from many sections of the southwest will be entered in it. The chase was held last Sunday and proved so interesting that arrangements were made to have it again Sunday, May 1. Last Sunday was the first time that such an event had ever been held anywhere in the southwest and was one of the few steeple chases that have been held in America, although these chases are common in England. A better natural course for such a chase could not be found anywhere. It includes six three and one-half foot jumps, covering a two mile course through ravines, down steep embankments and twice crossing the Wichita river. Ray Embree of Oklahoma university has the honor of winning the chase that was held on this course for the first time last Sunday.

It is difficult to predict teams that will play in the final game for championship of the polo tournament, however it seems that the Wichita Falls polo club of which Charley Featherston is captain, will be one of the contestants as this team has already won two games. Oklahoma university and Dallas are also to be considered for the final game. Fort Reno's army team has a very strong front but has lost two games by very small margins to Wichita Falls.

Dark Spudders Trim Dallas Club

Steady pitching by Brooks and Harry Wright's double against the left field wall gave the Wichita Falls Black Spudders a 3 to 2 victory over the Dallas Black Giants.

Brooks let the Giants down with only three base hits while Wright's double gave him the victory in the ninth inning.

Johnson made a great one handed catch in right field for Dallas, while Brook's unassisted double play for Wichita Falls was the fielding feature of the game.

CITY LEAGUERS BEARING DOWN

New Amateur Loop to Open Next Sunday

The City league, newly organized amateur baseball loop composed of the Scotland plumbers, Jackson tire team, Muny Gassers and Post Office nine, plans adoption of schedule this week which calls for the opening game of the season to be played next Sunday on the Jalonick street diamond formerly used by the Twilight league.

Meanwhile, all four teams are practicing diligently and expect to make the race a humdinger from start to finish.

Manager Bert Dimock of the Plumbers is leaving nothing undone in his efforts to turn out a winner. But Willie Lawson, pilot of the Jackson tire club, isn't loafing on the job either, by a long shot. They say Manager A. M. Cole of the Municipal gas company club and J. W. Beard, leader of the post office club, both have lined up comparatively formidable aggregations.

With one week remaining in which to whip into shape, the teams will have to bear down pretty hard. What with the twilighters swing under way this week and a bunch of independent clubs on the war path, Wichita Falls sandlots are going to be buzzing centers of attraction.

Buster Martin To Box In New York

Martin expects to participate in several battles throughout the east later this summer, he said. Syman already has lined up tentatively a string of bouts.

The Wichita Falls pugilist has come in for quite a bit of colorful publicity throughout the east and will not be received coldly by Gotham fandom. Caricatures and photographs of Buster have been carried in a number of eastern sports sections with stories lauding him as a title contender in the making.

YUS

Maybe Jim hasn't licked the Dallas manager, but it cannot be said the Spudders haven't licked Dallas.

* * *

NO HURRY

Rumor roamed so far and often about J. Riley supposedly having whipped Snipe Conley into a hospital that Walter Morris in a peevish moment of laxity ups and recklessly offers a total of one grand to the bird who can prove it. There's a noble opportunity for the wisenheimers to come through for a neat coin catch.

* * *

They've got it out all over the circuit that Jim jumped Snipe so roughly that Snipe jumped the club. Jim denied the story at every turn. Still the carbarn and barber shop boys carry on. Wager the Stutz against that thousand of Walter's that nobody will apply for the prize. How do they do it?

* * *

THE STORY

For those who are not familiar with the story: S. Conley, manager of the Dallas Steers flopped into the feathers a couple weeks ago and remained there under doctor's orders to recuperate from a severe strain caused by heavy practice exercise, whereupon somebody started a narrative to effect Jim Riley, Dallas first baseman, had a fight with Snipe and put him out of commission, at least, temporarily. Snipe and Jim are said to be warm friends. Jim said so when in Wichita Falls the other day. His team mates ditto the statement.

* * *

SOUTH PAW 'EM TODAY

Gazing up at those summer stars, it reads very much like the eminent Mr. Fussell will assume the hurling chores in Dallas today for Wichita Falls. Mr. Fussell has made no lefthanded bows yet before a Dallas attack, as you know. On the contrary, Mr. Fussell appears to take great lefthanded joy in thumping the Steers gorgeously.

* * *

HIGHER MATHEMATICS

After that noble victory registered by our nine yesterday on the Bovines' mesa, Mickey McGuire solemnly inquired: "Wichita Falls don't have to win but two more games to get back to 1000 per cent do they?"

* * *

ALL AT ONCE

Just by way of coincidenting things, it appears Wichita Falls has the Redskin sign on Dallas. Mr. Williams' merry men trimmed Dallas. Our polo team whopped the Dallas polo team and the Black Spudders beat the Dallas Black Giants. That's kind of rubbing it in.

* * *

KIDDING ME ALONG.

Boys over in Cowtown give you a chuckle. Step right up and admit they believe the Spudders have a yen for spotting 'em two outs and then knocking over a bunch of runs. That last larruping handed the Cats did look that way in four of five scoring frames.

* * *

The fame of Jabez Gardner's clouters has traveled into the flood-menaced area of Louisiana, take it from Charley "Spragins who's just rolled back from Noo Orl-e-ens. Charles watched the Pels drop one to Nashville the other day. Fell in with a bunch of Pelican fans who, so help us Hannah, didn't know until this year that Wichita Falls is in the Texas league. "But lemme tell you," quoth Charles, "some of those guys over there in entirely another league know more about the Spudders than lots of our own fans do. I hadn't had a chance to see the paper that day, so I asked one of those fellows and he told me how bad Wichita Falls had beat Fort Worth, how many games we had won to date, how many lost and probably would have told me who got the most hits but about that time one of the New Orleans players hit a long one and distracted his attention."

* * *

Your dainty friend Yaqui Joe was in New Orleans same time as Spragins. He beat some guy in a hurry but came away quite disappointed because there wasn't much dinero. Gate was small.

WHAT NEXT?

Dan Shine and the swivel chair boys of the City National building started something the other day when they broke out disguised as baseball players and endeavored to emulate a few Babe Ruths, Pete Lapahs and Eugene Turgeons. Lo, the pencil pushers of the Panhandle refinery wobbled up into the public eye yesterday, or, at least, so you can take it from one Peter Albritton. Peter pulled a Grantland Rice or something similar. Diked himself out as a star baseball reporter, but gave the old reportorial game a new wrinkle—new this day and time (honest), anyhow. For Pete twanged out his story of the game down to the most minute details before the game was played, leaving nothing undone other than guessing of the score. Pete wouldn't predict the tabulation. Not wishing the agony that surely would have been entailed in witnessing the orgy, Pete retired to a distance, waked until the battle was over, then rushed up and asked for the score. G. W. Reid's "Panoclean" team won by a 18-17 count. There were no physical causalties, but a number of aching muscles and twinging backs are expected to crop up in the Panhandle family this morning. The "Panocleans" were composed of the office gang from the Staley building. Bunch of the boys, most of them big fat bozos, from the boiler shop and wholesalery formed the losing aggregation which was known as the "Panotones."

Pete's story of the game, all except the score which was supposed to have been added in the open spaces down in the last sentence, but wasn't, follows:

PANOTONE

Utility: Graham, Wright, Hilliard.

Umpires: Bob Steward and Guy Fletcher.

Game was officially called for 2:30 p. m. in the Panhandle new ball park, with Bob Steward and Guy Fletcher as the disagreeable, unrespectable umps.

Cook was ruled out when caught stealing a base. Harris was in right pasture trying to catch some kind of flies. Hendrix got out when he slip into what he thought was third base, while Robinson was at bat swinging for exercise. Dobson throwed to first and Fletcher called a strike, then some fowl hit Kerr on his climax.

Nation got a long one to pitcher, took a drink and sit down. Scores was being made so fast we had to get Mack Bauer to use the Comptometer. Ump Steward became very indignant when spectator Riley Rawls was making more noise than he could with his wax. Caldwell got a hit through short while McMahon was playing with Gillis.

Apparently all players were in good shape, account having their old joints well oiled with Panolene oil before the game started.

Heimcamp, Graham, Christopher, Wright and Hilliard performed their duties well in keeping the bench warm so that when the players come in hot they would not have to sit down on a cold bench and catch cold.

After several necessary arguments the game was finished with a score——to ——favor the——.

Both Clubs Clout Stuffings Out of Heavers

HOUSTON, April 30.(AP)—Buff and Exporter ball players were dizzy on base hits, and tired from running about the bases here Saturday after Houston walloped Beaumont, 16 to 9, in a slugging contest that was certainly hard on the twirlers. Ten doubles, and three triples were included in the 35 safe wallops.

Each team used three twirlers, and none showed anything remarkable although Tex Fickling, third Bison hurler, was touched for only three hits and two runs in two and one-third innings, which was considered good twirling, considering how the other heavers were maltreated. The score:

SAN ANTONIO 11; WACO 7.

WACO, April 30. (AP)—San Antonio evened the two-game series with the Cubs here today by taking the final game by a score of 11 to 7. Errors behind Benge had much to do with the final count.

Windle tied the count in the third with a homer, after the Bears had counted three in their half. San Antonio made two in their half of the fifth and Pratt tied the count again with a homer scoring one runner ahead of him. Phipps clinched the game for the visitors with a circuit blow with two on in the eighth. He also hit two doubles and walked twice in five times at bat. GARDNER BILLS BENEFIT GAME

50 Per Cent of Wednesday Gate to Fund

Wichita Falls will play a benefit game with the Waco Cubs at Spudder Park Wednesday, President Alvin Gardner announced last night by telegraph from Dallas where he is with the Spudders.

Fifty per cent of the gross proceeds will be given the Mississippi river flood sufferers, Gardner said.

Spudder Game At Palace Again

With the Spudders still going strong and on the road Slick Ansley again comes to the front with his "marvel" score board at the Palace theater. The game will be shown on the board today and a great crowd is expected to be on hand. Wichita Falls plays in Dallas.

Many have been using this chance every day to get the first hand baseball news on the games and they have been drawing good crowds all along.

Babe Grabs High Honors in Rotary Club's Track Meet

Babe Anderson carried off high point honors at the Rotary club track field meet at Junior college Saturday. Dempsey Moore ran a close second and several times threatened to take the lead from him. Little J. Z. Powell was the outstanding star of the junior boys. Little Powell carried off many first places. He is a younger brother of the famous Coyote athletic groups of Powell boys.

Frank Williams was another outstanding star in the dash events. Williams copped both the 100 yard dash and the 220 yard dash. Lefty Watson carried off the senior broad jump after a close battle from Melvin McKinney.

Filmore Meredith carried off the 440 yard dash with apparent ease. Pat Hood and Maurice Allred staged a great battle on the 880-yard run with Hood coming out the victor with a flashing home stretch.

Duncan Perkins won the baseball throwing contest with a wide margin when he heaved the ball about 85 yards.

Many handsome prizes were presented to the winners. Kodaks, watches, passes for the T-O fair, cash, and other things of use were given as the prizes.

Horace Robbins was master of ceremonies.

CHICAGO 5; PITTSBURGH 4

PITTSBURGH, April 30. (AP)—Hack Wilson knocked a victory from Pittsburgh today, when he drove in the winning run with a circuit clout in the last inning, giving Chicago a 5 to 4 win.

It was a nip and tuck battle from the outset, with the Pirates leading until the eighth, when the Cubs pushed one run across after Webb hit a homer, tying the score. Then Pittsburgh bunched hits to tally again and take the lead but not for long, for Wilson's mighty swat, scoring Adams, gave Chicago the edge.

BUFFS VIE FOR HITTING CROWN

Spuds Pound Right Along With Turge-Leading

In spite of the ups and downs of spring pitching, Texas League hitters continued to hold the edge through Thursday's games with 44 batting .300 or better and many averages above .400. Stump Edington of Beaumont appeared as the new leader with an average of .455, largely because while collecting 20 hits he had drawn an astonishing number of bases on balls. Hock, the Buff leadoff man, led in hits with 26. Jenkins, Wichita Falls, 19, and Connolly, Beaumont, 18, vied for scoring honors. With five home runs, Miller, Dallas, led Lapan, Wichita Falls, and Galloway, Beaumont, 4 each, while Gross, Dallas, led in stolen bases with six.

Houston held the lead in club batting and number of hits, Wichita Falls in runs scored, Waco in home runs, and Dallas and Wichita Falls tied in stolen bases. Penner of Houston is the only pitcher with four victories and is still undefeated. Fussell is the strike-out leader with 19. Batters hitting .300 or better and pitchers winning half or more of their games through Thursday follow:

440 Record Goes In Longhorn Win

AUSTIN, April 30. (AP)—Featuring the remarkable running of Slim Daniels, Coach Clyde Littlefield's Texas Longhorn cinder path artists defeated the Owl proteges of Coach Hjerberg from Rice institute in a dual meet on Memorial Stadium's turf here Saturday by the unexpected high margin of 41 points, the final count being Texas 79; Rice 38.

Daniels' sensational parades were twofold—once in the 440-yard dash when he circled the oval in 49.2 seconds, far eclipsing all previous marks hung up in the southwest, and besting the southwest conference record by Captain Parker of Texas A. & M. at 50.4 seconds.

Then Daniels again promenaded on the cinder pike in the last event of the meet, as anchor man on the Longhorn mile relay team. On that final lap he received the baton full three strides arear of Greer, the Owl anchor man, chased the featured carnivore until he reached the straightway on the opposite side of the oval, then pulled up to run abreast for a distance, while making the second curve, to put on another sensational burst of speed on the finish and win the event by at least three paces.

Spudders To Lose Enthusiastic Backer

The Spudders are about to lose an enthusiast supporter in Jack Coates, sportsman and manager of the Golf and Country club who relinquishes the reigns Sunday to A. A. Dickson, formerly Texas hotel steward.

Coates plans leaving Wichita Falls Monday for a short rest and pleasure visit in Chicago after which he intends removing to Seattle where he plans going into business for himself.

Coates is comparatively well known in Wichita Falls athletic and social circles. He was connect-with the Wichita club before taking the managership of the Country club more than a year ago.

Dickson and Mrs. Dickson arrived in the city Saturday. The new manager will be assisted by Mrs. Dickson.

Twilighters Primed For Inaugural This Afternoon

Champion Panhandle Longhorns Tackle Texas Electric Service Company Team in New Amateur Baseball Plant, Starting at Three Bells

Both teams primed to the limit and each confident of copping the jump on the rest of the league, Bill Hoehn's Panhandle Longhorns clash with Charley Sprogins' Texas Electric Service company team in the 1927 Wichita Falls Twilight league opener Sunday afternoon at Katy park, new Twilight plant located just outside of the city limits on the Burkburnett highway. Game is to be called at 3 o'clock.

Roy Carter, police commissioner, is scheduled to pitch the first ball and A. W. King, the sanitary commish, is to be on the receiving end. There will be a brass band and everything necessary to make the opener similar to the first game of any professional league, according to A. E. (Doc) Kelly, master of ceremonies.

There will be an admission charge of 25 cents. Proceeds of the game are to go toward paying for construction of the park. The new plant is rated one of the most up-to-date amateur playing fields in the southwest. The league plans to make it self-supporting.

How They Look

Batting orders of the two teams were not certain Saturday, according to the team leaders, but tentative line-ups are as follows:

Champs Optimistic

The champion Panhandle outfit expects to come back even stronger this year than in 1926, but the Electrics have bolstered in many departments and hope to give the Longhorns a mean battle for the laurels.

The Spudders are playing in Dallas today. Texas league fans here who want to see a first class baseball game should take in the Twilight opener. Wichita Falls amateurs play a surprising brand of baseball, as any amateur fan will attest.

Johnny Lynch and Jack Thurman may break into the Panhandle infield and Red Hicks may do some of the catching. McMahon and Melear are the only new men in the Panhandle line-up. Cox, an old Panhandle first sacker, and Francis, former American refinery second baseman, are included on the Kilowatt roster.

Both of these men are expected to aid the Electric team very much. Doc Allen was with the Texhoma team last year. Ross was with the Security National Bank team. Downing, Miller and the two Houseman boys are all new men in the league.

Cox Real First Sacker

Maurice Cox of the Electrics is expected to steady down the infield of the Kilowatts and make it a smooth-working machine. He is a great fielder and will make the throwing of the others a much easier task. Francis is as steady a fielder as is Allen. Miller is a newcomer.

In the outfield Blue and Gordon are hard to beat while the other two players are newcomers.

Andree has been an effective pitcher in the league for several years.

Johny McMahon and Riley Rawls are rated as two of the best hitters in the league. Both are sharp fielders. Kerr and Graves both are dangerous at the bat and are good fielders.

Wild Bill Hoehn has shifted from second base to first base to fill the shoes of Don Falchney. Speck Roberts and Johnny Hinds are both well known infielders. Melear is a new man.

Horton and Hicks were recognized as the best catching staff in the league last year. Randolph and Connally are hold-overs from last year.

700 Golfers Expected to Go After Laurels

NEW YORK, April 30 (AP)—With the selection of 17 sectional qualifying courses, the United States Golf association today completed its preparations for the national open championship on June 14, 15 and 16 at the Oakmont Country club.

The championship committee again fixed 150 entries as the qualification limit for the championship proper. Thirty-one of these places will be set aside for leaders in the order of last year's finish, while 10 additional reservations in the field will be made for members of the invading British professional team. The committee thus expects to produce 109 qualifiers in the tests, which probably will draw an entry of at least 700 golfers.

Only five of the courses used a year ago have been rechosen this year for the trial tournaments on June 6, as follows: East Lake in Atlanta; Brookhollow in Dallas; Oakmont in Pittsburgh; Lochmoor in Detroit, and Hill Crest in Kansas City.

Members of last year's Walker cup team who were exempted in 1926, this year will be required to take the tests. Bobby Jones, as the champion, will, of course, be excepted, Jones was the only member of the International team to finish among the first 31, but two other well known amateurs are included in the list—Chick Evans and Harrison R. Johnston.

Among the well known professionals who will be exempt are Joe Turnesa, who finished second to Jones, Bill Mehlhorn, Gene Sarazen, Leo Diegel, Johnny Farrell, Walter Hagen, McDonald Smith, Tommy Armour, Mike Brady, Willie MacFarlane, Emmett French, Harry Hampton and Bob McDonald.

Conditions of play in the championship are unaltered, with prize money of $2145, apportioned among the first 20 professionals. The first in the hunt again will draw down $500 and a gold medal.

NORTH TEXAS ANGLERS HAUL OUT RODS AND TACKLE AGAIN

Fishermen, those who think they are and those who would like to be return to their own Sunday morning as the bars are lifted from North Texas waters on the great outdoor game of angling.

In other words, ladies and gentlemen, the fishing season is with us again after a hibernation or what would you, of three months. Closed through February to April 30 inclusive, the gates are open this Sunday morning and North Texas sportsmen may go back to baiting the bass and coralling the crappie.

AUSTIN, April 30. (AP)—Sunday, May 1, is the opening of the main fishing season in Texas.

Even before early mass or protestant Sunday school opens, it will be legal to catch black bass crappie, barred by state law until the first of May.

Reports to the game, fish and oyster commission here indicate that the spawning season in Texas waters has been unsatisfactory this year because of turbidity occasioned by excessive rains in some localities.

Last crop of fish, however, was an exceptionally good one.

The season will be open from today through January 31.

You won't need any license to angle at Lake Kemp, in the Diversion lake, Lake Wichita and tributary streams today, nor, for that matter, the next several weeks. But June 15, a law goes into effect that all fishermen using artificial bait must purchase a license. There will be no strings on the users of natural bait.

There follows a summary of the Wichita valley fish bill effective at this time:

Waters controlled by this law—Lake Kemp, the Diversion lake, Lake Wichita and all waters impounded by these lakes, also Wichita river connecting Lake Kemp and the Diversion lake and all waters in Wichita and Archer counties in the irrigation canals leading from the Diversion lake.

It is unlawful to buy or sell or offer to sell any fish except minnows taken from these waters.

It is unlawful to use dynamite or any explosive or any poison in any of these waters.

It is unlawful to use a seine, net or trap of any kind, except the regular minnow seine, to catch fish in these waters. Fish may be taken on the regular hook and line, or with artificial baits, and in no other manner.

Size limit—Bass, not under 11 inches. Crappie, white perch, California bass, not under seven inches. Blue Gill Beam, not under five inches.

All fish under size shall immediately be returned to the water without unnecessarily damaging same.

Bag limit—Bass, not more than 10 in one day and not to exceed 20 pounds in one day. Crappie, White perch, Carico bass and Blue Gill Bream, not to exceed 20 per day of all kinds and not over 20 pounds in one day. It is unlawful to have in your possession at any time more than 30 pounds of all kinds, Bass, White perch, Calico bass, Blue Gill Beam.

TRIS AND BAN BAT IN 270'S

Cobb Jumps Into .400 Class Of Hitters

CHICAGO, April 30. (AP)—The slugging New York Yankees, major league batting leaders dropped a few points in the second week of the season but they still have four representatives among the first 10 who are hitting better than .400. Babe Ruth added 40 points to his batting mark, but he is still more than half way down the list with a mark of .272, just below Tris Speaker.

All the American league clubs except the Yankees and Detroit picked up in their hitting in this week's games, according to averages including Wednesday's games, but the Chicago White Sox made the greatest gain of them all. Bill Hunnefield, Sox shortstop and Harry McCurdy, top the list, just above Fothergill of Detroit, one of three leaders last year. Ty Cobb jumped up into the 400 class but is just outside the first 10 of those who have played more than five games. Ty moved up from .343 last week to .404 with three doubles, two triples and three stolen bases to his credit.

Sad Sam Leads.

Sad Sam Jones of St. Louis is the leading twirler of the American league just now with three victories. Duth Reuther of New York, Willis Hudlin of Cleveland and Stan Coveleskie of Washington have two apiece. Waite Hoyt of the Yankees is the hardest mound toiler, having worked 33 innings in five games, winning two and losing one. He shares the strike-out mark of 17 victims with Lefty Grove of the Athletics.

Goslin and Judge of Washington are base running leaders with five stolen pillows apiece. Fothergill of Detroit has four and Cobb, Tony Lazzeri of New York and Lou Blue of Detroit have three each.

The leading hitters in the American league today are Hunnefield, Chicago .538; McCurdy, Chicago .538; McCurdy, Chicago .500; Fothergill, Detroit .472; Simmons, Philadelphia .458; Gehrig, New York .447; Goslin, Washington, .447; Koenig, New York .428; Judge, Washington .425; H. Collins, New York .421; Meusel, New York .415.

The New York Giants wrecking crew, Hornsby, Tyson and Lindstrom, cling in a bunch near the top of the National league list of leading hitters topped only by Heinie Sand, Philadelphia. McGraw has a pinch hitter named Henie Mueller, who has hit twice in three times at bat, too.

Hafey of St. Louis and Gibson of Boston round out the .400 hitters in the second week of the season in the elder circuit.

The team batting averages this week showed slight gains and losses but only one change in position, the Cubs washing Brooklyn down into the cellar.

Just below 10 leading hitters is young Lance Richbourg, the Braves' outfield purchase from Milwaukee. When he did break into the batting order he started off with a batting mark of .353.

Old Cy Williams of the Phillies shares the home run honors of the major league with Lou Gehrig of New York in the American league. Each has four in games including Wednesday. Earl Webb is next to Cy, in the National league with three while Babe Ruth is the American league runner-up with a trio.

Specks Tops National.

Lee Meadows of Pittsburgh, with his specs is the league leading witcher to date with four victories Jess Haines, who heads the effort to keep the world's champion Cardinals near the top, has won three and so has Fitzsimmons of the New York Giants. Charley Root of Chicago is the strike out king at present with 17, but his record shows on defeat against the two victories.

Kiki Cuyler of Pittsburgh, the usual leader in base stealing is being rivalled this year by Tyson of the Giants each has five thefts to his credit, with no serious competition in sight.

Mustangs Defeat Longhorns, 10-3

DALLAS, April 30. (AP)—Uncle Billy Disch's Texas University Longhorns drank deeply from the cup of defeat Saturday afternoon at Armstrong field when the SMU Mustangs stampeded and nailed two Longhorn hurlers for twelve hits and ten runs, evening the series. The score was ten to three. The Longhorns Friday had beaten SMU by a score of 10 to four, Redman Hume went the rull route for the Mustangs, allowing six hits, two of which were home runs by Baumgarten. The bags were vacant both times.

Wichita Falls Polo Club Looms As Favorite in Tourney Final

CROWELL, April 30.—The final game to determine the winner of the Minnick polo tournament, a steeple chase, an airplane circus and a quarter mile horse race will feature Sunday's program at the Minnick Ranch south of Crowell.

The steeple chase is creating almost as much interest as the final polo game and over 20 horses from many sections of the southwest will be entered in it. The chase was held last Sunday and proved so interesting that arrangements were made to have it again Sunday, May 1. Last Sunday was the first time that such an event had ever been held anywhere in the southwest and was one of the few steeple chases that have been held in America, although these chases are common in England. A better natural course for such a chase could not be found anywhere. It includes six three and one-half foot jumps, covering a two mile course through ravines, down steep embankments and twice crossing the Wichita river. Ray Embree of Oklahoma university has the honor of winning the chase that was held on this course for the first time last Sunday.

It is difficult to predict teams that will play in the final game for championship of the polo tournament, however it seems that the Wichita Falls polo club of which Charley Featherston is captain, will be one of the contestants as this team has already won two games. Oklahoma university and Dallas are also to be considered for the final game. Fort Reno's army team has a very strong front but has lost two games by very small margins to Wichita Falls.

THE CARD

Bull Montana, Hollywood, versus Charley Grip, Buffalo. Catchweights, two falls to a finish.

Jack Gorman, San Angelo, versus Billy Gibson, Kansas City. Welterweights, two falls to a finish.

Place: Ross arena on Indiana between Tenth and Eleventh.

Time: 8:15 Tuesday night.

The wrestlers' new open air mat emporium has been completed and is ready for the "Battle of the Brutes," the first outdoor engagement of the year, Tuesday. The diminutive Charley Grip, Buffalo's bullet-head who will tip the scales around 150 pounds against Montana's 170 pounds or better, Saturday declared confidence he will slam the movie man for several kinds of a goal.

Grip in reality is a more apelike and uglier human than Montana, but Bull has been smarter in commercializing on his lack of good looks, whereupon Charles becomes envious or something. There isn't any doubt but that Grip is jealous of Montana.

Bull beat Charley Leahman at the Palace a couple of weeks ago, making an impressive showing. In fact, dislocated Leahman's jaw for him and otherwise roughed him up.

Grip was present at the match and urged that Montana be put in the ring with him. Bull appears stronger than Grip, but the bullethead's potent body slam is expected to stand him in good stead.

The popular Jack Gorman is expected to find Gibson, the newcomer, a pretty tough piece of furniture.

Brooks let the Giants down with only three base hits while Wright's double gave him the victory in the ninth inning.

CITY LEAGUERS BEARING DOWN

New Amateur Loop to Open Next Sunday

The City league, newly organized amateur baseball loop composed of the Scotland plumbers, Jackson tire team, Muny Gassers and Post Office nine, plans adoption of schedule this week which calls for the opening game of the season to be played next Sunday on the Jalonick street diamond formerly used by the Twilight league.

Meanwhile, all four teams are practicing diligently and expect to make the race a humdinger from start to finish.

Manager Bert Dimock of the Plumbers is leaving nothing undone in his efforts to turn out a winner. But Willie Lawson, pilot of the Jackson tire club, isn't loafing on the job either, by a long shot. They say Manager A. M. Cole of the Municipal gas company club and J. W. Beard, leader of the post office club, both have lined up comparatively formidable aggregations.

With one week remaining in which to whip into shape, the teams will have to bear down pretty hard. What with the twilighters swing under way this week and a bunch of independent clubs on the war path, Wichita Falls sandlots are going to be buzzing centers of attraction.

Martin expects to participate in several battles throughout the east later this summer, he said. Syman already has lined up tentatively a string of bouts.

The Wichita Falls pugilist has come in for quite a bit of colorful publicity throughout the east and will not be received coldly by Gotham fandom. Caricatures and photographs of Buster have been carried in a number of eastern sports sections with stories lauding him as a title contender in the making.

NO HURRY

Rumor roamed so far and often about J. Riley supposedly having whipped Snipe Conley into a hospital that Walter Morris in a peevish moment of laxity ups and recklessly offers a total of one grand to the bird who can prove it. There's a noble opportunity for the wisenheimers to come through for a neat coin catch.

They've got it out all over the circuit that Jim jumped Snipe so roughly that Snipe jumped the club. Jim denied the story at every turn. Still the carbarn and barber shop boys carry on. Yeager the Stutz against that thousand of Walter's that nobody will apply for the prize. How do they do it?

THE STORY

For those who are not familitr with the story: S. Conley, manager of the Dallas Steers flopped into the feathers a couple of weeks ago and remained there under doctor's orders to recuperate from a severe strain caused by heavy practice exercise, whereupon somebody started a narrative to effect Jim Riley, Dallas first baseman, had a fight with Snipe and put him out of commission, at least, temporarily. Snipe and Jim are said to be warm friends. Jim said so when in Wichita Falls the other day. His team mates ditto the statement.

SOUTH PAW 'EM TODAY

Gazing up at those summer stars, it reads very much like the eminent Mr. Fussell will assume the hurling chores in Dallas today for Wichita Falls. Mr. Fussell has made no lefthanded bows yet before a Dallas attack, as you know. On the contrary, Mr. Fussell appears to take great lefthanded joy in thumping the Steers gorgeously.

* * *

HIGHER MATHEMATICS

After that noble victory registered by our nine yesterday on the Bovines' mesa, Mickey McGuire solemnly inquired: "Wichita Falls don't have to win but two more games to get back to 1000 per cent do they?"

* * *

ALL AT ONCE

Just by way of coincidenting things, it appears Wichita Falls has the Redskin sign on Dallas. Mr. Williams' merry men trimmed Dallas. Our polo team whopped the Dallas polo team and the Black Spudders beat the Dallas Black Giants. That's kind of rubbing it in.

* * *

KIDDING ME ALONG.

Boys over in Cowtown give you a chuckle. Step right up and admit they believe the Spudders have a yen for spotting 'em two outs and then knocking over a bunch of runs. That last larruping handed the Cats did look that way in four of five scoring frames.

* * *

The fame of Jabez Gardner's clouters has traveled into the flood-menaced area of Louisiana, take it from Charley Spragins who's just rolled back from Noo Orl-e-ens. Charles watched the Pels drop one to Nashville the other day. Fell in with a bunch of Pelican fans who, so help us Hannah, didn't know until this year that Wichita Falls is in the Texas league. "But lemme tell you," quoth Charles, "some of those guys over there in entirely another league know more about the Spudders than lots of our own fans do. I hadn't had a chance to see the paper that day, so I asked one of those fellows and he told me how bad Wichita Falls had beat Fort Worth, how many games we had won to date, how many lost and probably would have told me who got the most hits but about that time one of the New Orleans players hit a long one and distracted his attention."

* * *

Your dainty friend Yaqui Joe was in New Orleans same time as Spragins. He beat some guy in a hurry but came away quite disappointed because there wasn't much dinero. Gate was small.

WHAT NEXT?

Dan Shine and the swivel chair boys of the City National building started something the other day when they broke out disguised as baseball players and endeavored to emulate a few Babe Ruths, Pete Lapans and Eugene Turgeons. Lo, the pencil pushers of the Panhandle refinery wobbled up into the public eye yesterday, or, at least, so you can take it from one Peter Albritton. Peter pulled a Grantland Rice or something similar. Diked himself out as a star baseball reporter, but gave the old reportorial game a new wrinkle—new this day and time (honest), anyhow. For Pete twanged out his story of the game down to the most minute details before the game was played, leaving nothing undone other than guessing of the score. Pete wouldn't predict the tabulation. Not wishing the agony that surely would have been entailed in witnessing the orgy, Pete retired to a distance, waited until the battle was over, then rushed up and asked for the score. G. W. Reid's "Panoclean" team won by a 18-17 count. There were no physical casualties, but a number of 'aching' muscles and twinging backs are expected to crop up in the Panhandle family this morning. The "Panocleans" were composed of the office gang from the Staley building. Bunch of the boys, most of them big fat bozos, from the boiler shop and wholesalery formed the losing aggregation which was known as the "Panotones."

Pete's story of the game, all except the score which was supposed to have been added in the open spaces down in the last sentence, but wasn't, follows:

PANOTONE

Tollett	1b
Ranbarger	ss
Reid	2b

Utility: Graham, Wright, Hilliard.

Umpires: Bob Steward and Guy Fletcher.

Game was officially called for 2:30 p. m. in the Panhandle new ball park, with Bob Steward and Guy Fletcher as the disagreeable, unrespectable umpires.

Cook was ruled out when caught stealing a base. Harris was in right pasture trying to catch some kind of fliest. Hendrix got out when he slip into what he thought was third base, while Robinson was at bat swinging for exercise. Dobson throwed to first and Fletcher called a strike, then some fowl hit Kerr on his climax.

Nation got a long one to pitcher, took a drink and sit down. Scores was being made so fast we had to get Mack Sauer to use the Comptometer. Ump Steward became very indignant when spectator Riley Rawls was making more noise than he could with his wax. Caldwell got a hit through short while McMahon was playing with Gillis.

Apparently all players were in good shape account having their old joints well oiled with Panolene oil before the game started.

Helmcamp, Graham, Christopher, Wright and Hilliard performed their duties well in keeping the bench warm so that when the players come in hot they would not have to sit down on a cold bench and catch cold.

After several necessary arguments the game was finished with a score——to ——favor the——.

Both Clubs Clout Stuffings Out of Heavers

HOUSTON, April 30.(AP)—Ruff and Exporter ball players were dizzy on base hits, and tired from running about the bases here Saturday after Houston walloped Beaumont, 16 to 9, in a slugging contest that was certainly hard on the twirlers. Ten doubles, and three triples were included in the 25 safe wallops.

Each team used three twirlers, and none showed anything remarkable although Tex (Kildee) Carlton, third Bison hurler, was touched for only three hits and two runs in two and one-third innings, which was considered good twirling, considering how the other heavers were maltreated. The score:

SAN ANTONIO 11; WACO 7.

WACO, April 30. (AP)—San Antonio evened the two-game series with the Cubs here today by taking the final game by score of 11 to 7. Errors behind Benge had much to do with the final count.

The Cubs started off in fine fashion, after the visitors had tallied once in the first. Blackerby hit a homer with two on to put the Cubs in front. Windle tied the count in the third with a homer, after the Bears had counted three in their half. San Antonio made two in their half of the fifth and Pratt tied the count again with a homer scoring one runner ahead of him. Phipps clinched the game for the visitors with a circuit blow with two on in the eighth. He also hit two doubles and walked twice in five times at bat. Moos hit a homer in the third and Wolgamot also hit one with home on. Score:

GARDNER BILLS BENEFIT GAME

50 Per Cent of Wednesday Gate to Fund

Wichita Falls will play a benefit game with the Waco Cubs at Spudder Park Wednesday, President Alvin Gardner announced last night by telegraph from Dallas where he is with the Spudders.

Fifty per cent of the gross proceeds will be given the Mississippi river flood sufferers, Gardner said.

Spudder Game At Palace Again

With the Spudders still going strong and on the road Slick Ansley again comes to the front with his "marvel" score board at the Palace theater. The game will be shown on the board today and a great crowd is expected to be on hand. Wichita Falls plays in Dallas.

Many have been using this chance every day to get the first hand baseball news on the games and they have been drawing good crowds all along.

Babe Grabs High Honors in Rotary Club's Track Meet

Babe Anderson carried off high point honors at the Rotary club track field meet at Junior college Saturday. Dempsey Moore ran a close second and several times threatened to take the lead from him. Little J. Z. Powell was the outstanding star of the junior boys. Little Powell carried off many first places. He is a younger brother of the famous Coyote athletic groups of Powell boys.

Frank Williams was another outstanding star in the dash events. Williams copped both the 100 yard dash and the 220 yard dash. Lefty Watson carried off the senior broad jump after a close battle from Melvin McKinney.

Filmore Meredith carried off the 440 yard dash with apparent ease. Pat Hood and Maurice Allred staged a great battle on the 880-yard run with Hood coming out the victor with a flashing home stretch.

Duncan Perkins won the baseball throwing contest with a wide margin when he heaved the ball about 85 yards.

Many handsome prizes were presented to the winners. Kodaks, watches, passes for the T-O fair, cash, and other things of use were given as the prizes.

Horace Robbins was master of ceremonies.

CHICAGO 5; PITTSBURGH 4

PITTSBURGH, April 30. (AP)—Hack Wilson walked in from first from Pittsburgh today, when he drove in the winning run with a circuit clout in the last inning, giving Chicago a 5 to 4 win.

It was a nip and tuck battle from the outset, with the Pirates leading until the eighth, when the Cubs pushed one run across after Webb hit a homer, tying the score. Then Pittsburgh bunched hits to tally again and take the lead but not for long, for Wilson's mighty swat, scoring Adams, gave Chicago the edge.

THROCKMORTON COUNTY FURNISHES WEEK'S LARGEST PRODUCER

REITER-FOSTER DRILLS OFFSET

Flowing Well Is Completed In 500-Foot Sand

The largest producer in North Texas the past week and one which rewards certain companies' faith in the Woodson district of Throckmorton county was completed by the Red Bank Oil company at its No. 4 Parrott in section 971 T. E. and L. survey. This well started off with a natural flow of 100 barrels per hour and although it later declined to 900 barrels daily it was easily the biggest producer completed during the week.

Entering the Breckenridge lime at 3,909 feet it started flowing at 3,924 feet and gradually increased to 100 barrels per hour. The formations are running 28 feet higher than in other producers on the lease which gives a very favorlight aspect to Reiter-Foster Oil company of Wichita Falls lease just west. This company has made a location to offset the new producer while Red Bank is going to start drilling its lease on the J. H. Cole land in block 172.

Good Shallow Well.

Another remarkable well was completed in Young county's shallow district, near Markley. Reed and Wooten drilled into the sand at 511 feet in No. 1-C J. W. Jack and it is flowing 20 barrels daily. This well is located in block 2, Young county school land.

News from Archer county was not particularly exciting. In block 121 of the A. T. N. C. L. survey the E. J. Stump and company No. 1 Wilson fizzled when salt water cropped up in a sand at 1,420 feet. L. T. Burns completed the first dry hole in his "Little Seminole," No. E-9 being plugged at 1,480 feet.

Muenster Pool.

Two events stood out in the development of the Muenster pool of Cooke county. The Hedrick-Camp Drilling company at its No. 1 Kleiss deepened No. 1 Kleiss and found that there is 28 feet of sand in the pool. This weel is flowing 250 barrels daily. Farther east and nearer the center of the townsite the Oil Operators Trust and Camp No. 4 Kleiss found the sand higher than any of the other wells, indicating that production lies under the inhabited portion of the town.

Despite a prediction by E. W. Marland, recognized leader in the industry that the period of low prices will last for several years, North Texas operators are gradually getting back to normal in drilling operations. New locations took a spurt the past week and, while most of them were in proven territory, they will help greatly in speeding up the dragging development which has characterized this district for several weeks.

Marland's statement, first issued through W. J. William and company last week, has been presented in two different lights but when boiled down it simply implies that the vast undrilled shallow areas of West Texas where oil can be produced cheaper than elsewhere will keep the price at a low level for an indefinite period when more rapid drilling is begun.

Back Yard Oil Wells Yield Good Incomes To Fortunate Owner After 38-Year Period

WATROUS, Pa., April 30 (EFS) —Have you a little oil well in your yard?

Here, in the center of the widely known Gaines oil field, many of the residents derive the major part of their income from one or two oil wells sunk in the yard, which yield from one to five barrels per day per well, and a scene such as is here pictured is not unusual in the tiny hamlet.

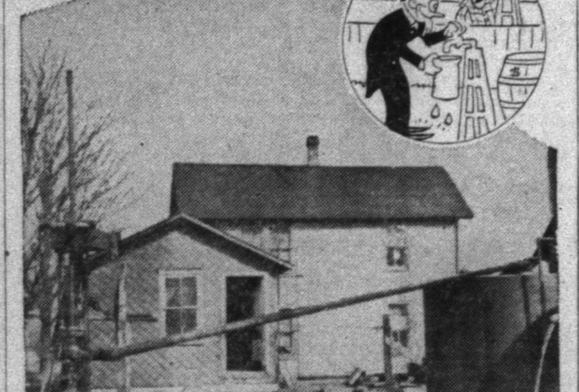

Nearly 40 years ago, when the oil craze struck Gaines, wells were sunk freely and those who could not secure leases upon farms did the next best thing and utilized the land upon which their homes stood. As a result the old residenters are still drawing a measure of liquid gold from the earth each day and expect their children will do likewise.

When the wells were first sunk the oil production was comparatively high, from 25 to 75 barrels per day, but soon they settled down to business and through the passing years a regular but not large supply has been forthcoming without apparent diminution. The "youngest" well is about seven years of age while the old-timers have a satisfactory production history of some 38 years.

Standard Oil Buys It

The Standard Oil company has a supply pipeline in the Gaines field, with a 5000 barrel storage tank on the nearest railroad, a few miles away, so the well owner simply has to provide a pump, engine house, storage tank, and start the engine every morning. Once each month the Standard company's representative measures the oil in the tank, issues a credit slip and then turns the valve that permits the oil to enter the company's pipeline and flow to the storage tank, from which it is later run into tank cars.

At the present price for this quality of crude oil each owner of a well is receiving about $4.60 or $32.20 per week and if he has two wells, he doesn't have to worry about the condition of the crops upon the surrounding hills. The Gaines field is said to be one of the few places in the United States where so many "family pumps" are found.

Cosden Test In Young Shows Oil

Extension of the deep sand of the South Bend field may be the outcome of J. S. Cosden's No. 1 A. H. Jones, nine miles southwest of Graham in Young county and approximately six miles northeast of South Bend.

The test is shut down now and waiting for pipe with showings of both oil and gas at a depth of 1430 feet.

This would be the most important strike of the year should the well make a producer. Cosden drilled a well just south on the Timmons tract which showed oil and gas at 4006 feet.

Daily Pipeline Runs Fall Back Toward Normal Figure Past Week

Receding from an all time record marked up the previous week in daily pipeline runs, the North Texas fields fell off 3490 barrels in daily production last week.

The record total of the previous seven days caught the flush production from wells in Young and Montague counties and it was these areas which furnished most of the loss for the past week.

While the Electra, Iowa Park and Clay county fields were making very slight gains and Jack county failed to fluctuate, the remainder of the fields were showing losses. The district is expected to be back at its regular daily output of slightly more than 100,000 barrels daily in the next few weeks.

The Texas, Continental, Magnolia, Panhandle, Gulf, Roxana and Phillips companies continue to lead the way in production in the order named.

Daily runs by fields follow:

FIELD—	Last Week	Prev. Week	Difference

OIL MEN ASK LOWER RENTAL

Oklahoma Panhandle Developmnet Is Retarded

Special to The Record News.

AMARILLO, April 30.—Mid-Continent operators, large and small are launching a movement to lay before free owners of lands in Cimarron, Texas, and Beaver counties, of the Oklahoma Panhandle, and also in Baca and Las Animas counties of southern Colorado, and Union county of the northeastern New Mexico, a movement for the lowering of lease rentals.

The small showing that W. R. and W. E. Ramsey had in No. 1 state, in the center of the northwest of the northeast of 27-5n-5e, north of Boise City, in January, has caused free owners to advance rentals on leases in that area from 10, 15 and 25 cents an acre to a flat $1.

The fact that the producing horizon in that area, if they cover a large territory, are quite deep, and drilling conditions are not ideal, has caused some operators to wonder if they shall "carry" all of the acreage taken right after the Ramsey's showing became known. The operators feel that the fee owners should voluntarily lower their rental requirements. If this is not done the Oklahoma Panhandle is due for a sharp releasing of acreage, where a tendency of co-operation with the oil firms will stimulate more leasing and earlier developments.

Wichita Falls Men Pay $64,000 For Royalty On Estate Near McLean

Special to The Record News.

AMARILLO, April 30.—Humble Pipeline company Saturday announced that its 286-mile pipeline from Burnett station in northwestern Carson county and due south of Borger to Comyn in Comanche county of Central Texas, was completed and it was running 1000 barrels of crude oil an hour. The line can handle 30,000 barrels when fully tested.

Gulf pipeline-Magnolia pipeline joint line from Panhandle is only running as far south as Truscott, but will soon be finished southeasterly towards Ranger. Prairie pipeline 206-mile line from Kingsmill to Ringling, Okla., is finished but not tested.

Empire Gas and Fuel company Saturday made location for No. 1 Cubine in section 26, block 25 of H. & G. N. survey south and west of the Max R. Travis No. 1 back in section 44 which was a week old and is now making 1000 barrels a day of clean oil.

The Travis well opened the McLean pool of southeastern Gray county. The Back estate has sold one-fourth of the royalty under their 640 acres for $100 an acre to Staley and Wynne and John W. Lampton of Wichita Falls.

ANOTHER DEEP ONE

Atlantic to Deepen Its No. 4 Sigler To Level of No. 5

Preparations are going forward to deepen Atlantic Oil Producing company's No. 4 Sigler-Waggoner to the level from which No. 5 on the same lease is producing. The distinction of being the deepest producer in Wilbarger county belongs to the No. 5 well, which is located in section 51, block 2, H. & T. C. survey. It is pumping 100 barrels daily from a total depth of 2710 feet.

POTASH OUTPUT

Potash produced in the United States in 1926 amounted to 46,324 short tons of crude potash salts containing 23,366 short tons of potash, according to the United States bureau of mines, department of commerce. Sales by producers amounted to 51,369 tons of crude potash containing 25,060 tons. The potash materials of domestic origin, sold by producers in 1926, were valued at $1,683,064 f.o.b. plants.

NEAR WAURIKA

Dancinger Oil and Refining company has rig completed and will spud in within the next few weeks, in its No. 1 Milchrist, in the southeast corner of the northwest of 11-5s-7w, southeast of Waurika, in Jefferson county, southern Oklahoma. The test is to be drilled to 2500 feet, and perhaps deeper.

BURNS' FIRST DUSTER

First dry hole drilled by L. T. (Bobby) Burns in the Little Seminole pool of Archer county was plugged this week. The well was No. E-9 in block 124, Robert Carson survey, which was abandoned at 1480 feet.

MORAN GETS RESULTS

J. J. Moran completed an unusually good well this week at his No. A-4 Graham Stewart, located in the David Dawson survey of the northeast part of Young county. From sand at 782-95 feet the well is pumping 110 barrels of oil daily. No. A-5 was spudded this week.

MARKET FOR BRUISES

BERKELEY, Calif. — Retail prices for busted ears in this state are steady at around $20, on a dull market. The executive committee of the University of California awarded this amount to Roy Niswander, football star, for one caulliflowered ear and the same sum to James E. Johnson, wrestler, for similar injury. Teeth wrecked in baseball were uneven. Lone Fletcher got $50 for his; but for a similar loss James Dougherty was paid only $1.

HOWARD WELL IS ATTRACTION

Humble Brings in Producer In Crane County

Special to The Record News.

SAN ANGELO, April 30.—Oil testing 32 baume at 80 degrees, free from water, stood 1200 feet deep today in Marland-Texon's No. 1 Harding in Howard county when drilling stopped at 2163 feet and there is a good gas showing. The wildcat is five miles southwest of Big Springs.

SAN ANGELO, April 30.—Completion of Humble's No. 3 University, broadening the eastern boundary of the university field in Crane county; striking of oil in Texon-Marland's No. 1 Harding, in Howard county; drilling in of another producer in that county by Marland on its Clay lease and completion of the Big Lake Oil company's 94th well in Reagan county were among this week's oil developments in the Edwards Plateau region of West Texas. Topping of the solid salt in Simms' No. 1 B. C. Clark in Upton county at 440 feet; eight feet higher than in Prairie's No. 1 Allie Lane, a producer, three miles to the northwest, attracted much attenton. Preparations were launched by the Ozona Development company to sink the first test in the bed of the Pecos river nearest the Yates field.

Humble Well

Humble's No. 8 University in section 38, block 30, in Crane county, made 413 barrels of oil Wednesday, after flowing Tuesday at the rate of 25 barrels hourly following a shot with 60 quarts from 2914 to 2965 feet. Drilled to 2975, it initially swabbed 140 barrels a day. The new producer is a half mile south of Gulf's 6 Lassiter and a half-mile north of Humble's No. 7 university, the three forming a direct north and south line that marks the eastern boundary of the university pool.

Texon-Marland's No. 1 J. B. Harding, five miles south of Big Springs in Howard county, encountered a good showing of oil Thursday at 2170 feet. First reports were that there was 700 feet of fluid in the hole. The test is located 1322 feet from the south line and 1324 feet from the east line of section 10, block 33, township 1 south. Marland, which the week before completed seven producers in Howard county, had another in the making in its No. 4 Clay. It was drilling Wednesday at 1785 feet in oil sand topped at 1764 and was standing 1700 feet in oil. Marland's No. A5 Clay had topped the sand at 1771 feet. Marland's total production Monday from 30 wells in Howard county was 1891 barrels, with two of the number off production and some on production only part time.

Ninety-Fourth Well

When Big Lake Oil company completed its No. 72 well in Reagan county for 300 barrels daily from 2877 to 2900 feet, it registered its 94th producer in the deep sand. The company's production Sunday totaled 19,500 barrels with six wells shut in. Eighteen tests are drilling by contract and the Big Lake is deepening another with its own tools. Some idea of the extent of the field and the length of time that will be required for development is shown by the fact that there is room for 300 more locations on the Big Lake Oil company's properties alone. The discovery Santa Rita well still is making around 20 barrels daily. The recovery of gasoline from the natural gas in the Big Lake Oil company's casinghead gasoline plant at Texon virtually has been doubled largely through improvement of plant operation. It is now 3.30 gallons per 1000 cubic feet of gas.

Roxana completed its No. 22 Upton county at 2111, feet in hard lime after the well in 15 hours had flowed and swabbed 220 barrels of oil and 55 barrels of water. The well pumped 280 barrels of oil Wednesday, after making 272 barrels, 50 per cent of which was water and basic sediment, the day before. Roxana production Wednesday from the Bowen lease totaled 3241 barrels, the district total being 3858 barrels. Roxana tests on the Bowen lease were drilling at the following depths: No. 16 at 2170, No. 24 at 2025 and No. 26 at 1835, all in lime, and No. 25 at 1465 in lime shells. Six producers of the Republic Production company on the Baker lease made 195 barrels Wednesday.

In Winkler County

Independent Oil & Gas company's No. 1 Hendricks in Winkler county was scheduled to drill in Thursday. Seven hundred feet of fluid was reported in the hole late Wednesday. Earlier in the week the test was drilling at 2865 feet in green shale. At 2825 feet, three million cubic feet of gas daily developed and on deepening increased and began spraying oil. Estimates of the gas volume were as high as 10 million cubic feet daily. The well is 1600 feet west of Southern Crude Oil Producing company's No. 1 Hendricks, the Winkler county discovery producer. The Llano-Scarborough test was shut down at 2671 feet, where a strong odor of oil was obtained. Eight-inch casing was en route and was expected to reach the well Saturday.

The Illinois Pipe Line company is running 10,000 barrels of oil daily through its six-inch, 28-mile line to McCamey, where half the amount is going to the Humble refinery. Only one of the Mid-Kansas and Transcontinental's four producers on the Yates dome was open during the week, No. 4B, making 250 barrels daily. The other wells were opened only about 30 minutes daily. No. 4A Yates was drilling early in the week at 1040 feet and No. 1C Yates was fishing at 850 feet.

DISLIKE LINE

Drillers Prefer Pure Sand Like Wilcox Found.

AMARILLO, April 30.—Only objections that old-time drillers have to the Panhandle is the absence of pure sand, most of the pay coming from a lime, granite wash or a sandy lime.

H. F. Wilcox Oil and Gas company in No. 25 Worley-Reynolds, in section 81, block 3, of I. & G. N. survey, in the Pampa field of Gray county, topped a pay sand, and it was all pure oil sand, from 2816 to 2836 feet, and it made 500 barrels natural the first 12 hours. This test standardized at 2740 feet.

TO DRILL MORE POTASH TESTS

Bureau of Mines Awards Contracts For Two

Contracts for the drilling of two additional potash test wells in southeastern New Mexico have been awarded by the United States Bureau of Mines, Department of Commerce, to the Sullivan Machinery company of Chicago, which submitted the lowest bids for the work. Under the terms of the contract, drilling operations are to start within a period of 30 days. Both new locations, which are recommended by the United States Geological survey as giving favorable indications of the existence of potash beds, lie in Eddy county.

Near Artesia.

The site of potash well No. 2 is in the northeast corner of Section 14, T. 20 S., R. 29 E., approximately 27 miles from Artesia, N. M., and 25 miles from Carlsbad, N. M. The depth to the top of the salt beds at this location is estimated at about 500 feet. Drilling will be continued to a depth of 1,000 or 1,500 feet, as conditions may determine, this allowing penetration of most of the estimated thickness of the salt beds in this region.

The site of potash well No. 3 is in the SW 1-4 of Section 34, T. 22 S., R. 30 E., and is about 28 miles from Carlsbad. The depth for drilling is the same as for well No. 2.

On Western Limit.

Both locations are on the western limit of the potash-bearing salt beds identified in this region, and have a minimum of overburden. For each test a continuous core will be taken from top to bottom and each hole must bottom with not less than a 2 1-2 inch core.

The diamond-drilling outfit used in the drilling of potash well No. 1 also located in Eddy county, will be moved immediately to the site of well No. 2. The drilling of potash well No. 1 was completed April 9, at a depth of 1,847 feet, six inches, drilling operations having been in progress since Feb. 21. At this location, the hole penetrated the salt beds at a depth of about 550 feet. Various favorable showings of potash-bearing salts were encountered in this well.

SOUTH OF ELECTRA

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, April 30.—The Len-Cooke Oil company has made location for No. 1, W. T. Waggoner on section 30, block 5, H. & T. C. survey, three miles south of Electra.

R. H. Cook, who has recently completed a good pumper on the W. B. Throckmorton, Torrey survey, four and one-half miles southeast of Electra, will superintend the drilling of the new well.

FLUHMANN SAND MISSED

Northwest of the Fluhmann pool in Wilbarger county, Barclay and Meadows have apparently missed the 1500-foot sand in an effort to extend the field in their No. 1 Alex Streit, located in section 29, block 3, H. & T. C. survey. The test is now drilling at 1920 feet.

HAVE you heard that "Bargain Bill" is coming to Wichita Falls? He arrives this week for a ten-day stay, but it is difficult to discover on what train he will come. This famous man has been pursued by crowds in the various cities he has visited in much the manner of Rudolph Valentino during his tango tour, so it is not surprising that "Bargain Bill" wishes this information withheld.. Bill's attraction, unlike Valentino's, is not due to magnetism or handsome form and features, but is based upon the wonderful bargains he brings. The management at Williams has given him full permission to mark down prices throughout the store. When you consider the already low prices at Williams, and "Bargain Bill's" reputation for cutting them in half, you can guess at the wonderful values which will result from the combination. Watch for the big four-page circular "Bargain Bill' is sending you!

JONTEEL in the shoe world, visca in the hat world—those are the proper terms for the beautiful shiny straw which forms the forepart of the shoe illustrated above. You will find this especially modish slipper at P. B. M. Company in either water lily and robin's egg blue kid combination or beige jonteel with kid, the small engraved silver buckle adding to its smartness.

...A stunning patent version of the inevitable summer sandal, with extreme spike heel and white kid inlay, has also found its way from Paris to P. B. M. in remarkably short time.

The Artcraft hose shade of the month for May is "Magic," as lovely as it sounds (a sort of enchanted monkey skin color) and priced at $1.95. For "occasion" and evening wear flesh-pink, clocked mesh hose are the newest and most attractive thing fashion and P. B. M. offer.

ZIEGFIELD FOLLIES seem to be a school for motion picture training judging from the cast of "Just Another Blonde," this week's attraction at the Olympic Theater. Dorothy Mackaill has the feature feminine role and Louise Brooks has the second (both former Follies dancers). Jack Mulhall, William Collier and special scenes in Luna Park, Coney Island, where Dorothy plays a dance hall hostess, are also of outstanding interest in "Just Another Blonde."

Golden Gate Girls, a clever and talented sextette of versatile girls, furnish entertaining vaudeville with song, dance and acrobatic numbers.

Plan to take Mother to the Olympic next week — she'll be sure to enjoy the show.

For Mother

MOTHERS prefer flowers. Nothing else you can choose as a remembrance next Sunday will be so expressive.

The Wichita Floral Company offers the beautiful Bebb flowers, cut, potted and in corsage, appropriately boxed for Mother, at practically no increase this year over the regular prices. A special pot of bright geranium, coleus and fern, reasonably priced at $2.50, is offered for May the eighth.

Send Mother the flowers she loves from the Wichita Floral Company. Flowerphone 3300.

MOTHER'S HAT — the frame for that dear face means so much. Jozn Dickson is showing new matron's hats in beautiful straws and fabrics in the shades that become Mother—orchid, gray and black. The head sizes are large and the fitters expert in finding just the hat to put her at her best.

THE approach of Mother's Day reminds us of the many sacrifices Mother has made for us. She probably neglects herself and do we think of the things which will preserve and make her life pleasant? Her greatest pleasure may be found in reading and equally likely her glasses need changing. Save those precious eyes by taking her to Geo. W. L. Spencer, O. D., 705 Ohio Avenue. Phone 5615.

LEGAL NOTICE
S. J. R. No. 24.

Proposing an amendment of Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of Article V of the Constitution of Texas for the purpose of providing a more efficient judicial system.

Be it Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

SECTION 1. That Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of Article V of the Constitution of the State of Texas, be amended so as to read as follows:

Section 2 (of Article V): The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices, five of whom shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of five Judges shall be necessary to the decision of a case. No person shall be eligible to the office of Chief Justice or Associate Justice of the Supreme Court unless he be, at the time of his election or appointment a citizen of the United States and of this State, and unless he shall have attained the age of thirty years and shall have been a licensed lawyer for seven years and, during that time, shall have been a practicing lawyer or Judge of a court of record, or such practicing lawyer and Judge together. Said Chief Justice and Associate Justices shall be elected by the qualified voters of the State, at a general election, and shall hold their offices six years, or until their successors are elected and qualify, and shall receive such compensation as may be provided by law. In case of a vacancy in the office of Chief Justice or Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, the Governor shall fill the vacancy until the next general election for State officers, and at such general election the vacancy for the unexpired term shall be filled by election by the qualified voters of the State. The Judges of the Supreme Court, who may be in office at the time this amendment takes effect shall continue in office until the expiration of their terms of office under the present Constitution and until their successors are elected and qualify. When this amendment takes effect, the Governor shall immediately appoint six additional Associate Justices of the Supreme Court for terms of office so that the terms of two of such appointed Associate Justices shall expire with the term of office of each of the present members of the Supreme Court, and, upon the qualification of such new Justices, the Commission of Appeals of the State of Texas shall terminate.

Section 3 (of Article V): The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction only, except as herein specified, which shall be co-extensive with the limits of the State. Its appellate jurisdiction shall extend to questions of law arising in the cases in the Courts of Civil Appeals in which the Judges of any Court of Civil Appeals may disagree or where the several courts of civil appeals may hold differently on the same question of law, or where a statute of the State is held void, and to questions of law arising in such other cases of which the Courts of Civil Appeals have appellate jurisdiction as may be prescribed by law; provided, that the Legislature may authorize direct appeals from the County and District Courts in any case where a statute of the State has been declared void. The Supreme Court and the Judges thereof shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus as may be prescribed by law; and, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, the said Court and the Judges thereof may issue the writs of mandamus, procedendo, certiorari, and such other writs as may be necessary to enforce its jurisdiction. The Legislature may confer original jurisdiction on the Supreme Court to issue writs of quo warranto and mandamus in such cases as may be specified except as against the Governor of the State. The Supreme Court shall also have power, upon affidavit or otherwise, as by the Court may be determined, to ascertain such matters of fact as may be necessary to the proper exercise of its jurisdiction. The Supreme Court shall be open at all times and shall sit at the State Capital for the transaction of business at such times as may be designated by the Court. The present statutes defining the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court not in conflict herewith shall continue in effect until repealed or altered by the Legislature. The Supreme Court shall appoint a Clerk, who shall give bond in such manner as is now or may hereafter be required by law, and he may hold his office for four years, and shall be subject to removal by said Court for good cause entered of record on the minutes of said Court, and who shall receive such compensation as the Legislature may provide.

Section 4 (of Article V): The Court of Criminal Appeals shall consist of three Judges, provided that the Legislature may increase the number to five, and a majority of the Judges shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of a majority of the Judges shall be necessary to the decision of any case. Said Judges shall have the same qualifications and receive the same salaries as the Judges of the Supreme Court. They shall be elected by the qualified voters of the State, at a general election and shall hold their offices for a term of six years. The Judges of the Court of Criminal Appeals who may be in office at the time this amendment takes effect shall continue in office until the expiration of their terms of office under the present Constitution and laws.

Section 5 (of Article V): The Court of Criminal Appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction co-extensive with the limits of the State in all criminal cases of whatever grade, with such exception and under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and the Legislature may confer original jurisdiction upon it to issue writs of mandamus, procedendo and certiorari in criminal cases. The Court of Criminal Appeals and the Judges thereof shall have the power to issue the writ of habeas corpus and, under such regulations as may be prescribed necessary to enforce its own jurisdiction. The Court of Criminal Appeals shall have the power, upon affidavit or otherwise, to ascertain such matters of fact as may be necessary to the exercise of its jurisdiction. Said Court shall be open at all times and shall sit at the State Capital for the transaction of business at such times as may be designated by it. Said Court shall appoint a clerk, who shall give bond in such manner as is now or may hereafter be required by law, and he shall hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed by the Court for good cause entered of record on the minutes of said Court, and said Clerk shall receive such compensation as may be prescribed by law.

Section 6 (of Article V): The Legislature shall, from time to time, divide the State into such number of Supreme Judicial Districts as to it may seem necessary, not exceeding twelve at any one time, and shall have the power to re-district the State at any time, and shall establish a Court of Civil Appeals in each of said Districts, which Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and not less than two Associate Justices as the Legislature may provide, who shall have the qualifications as herein prescribed for Justices of the Supreme Court, provided that the aggregate number of Judges of all of the Courts of Civil Appeals shall never at one time exceed thirty-six. Each of the existing Courts of Civil Appeals shall continue until otherwise provided by law. The Courts of Civil Appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction co-extensive with the limits of their respective districts, which shall extend to all civil cases of which the District Courts or County Courts have original or appellate jurisdiction, under such restrictions and regulations as may be prescribed by law; provided, that the decisions of said Courts shall be conclusive on all questions of fact brought before them on appeal or error. Said Courts of Civil Appeals shall hold their sessions at such places as may be designated by the Legislature and at such times as may be prescribed by law. Said Justices shall be elected by the qualified voters of their respective Districts, at a general election, for a term of six years, and shall receive such compensation as may be provided by law. Said Courts shall have such other jurisdiction, original and appellate, as may be prescribed by law. Each Court of Civil Appeals shall appoint a Clerk in the same manner as the Clerk of the Supreme Court, which Clerk shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by law. The Judges of the Courts of Civil Appeals who may be in office when this amendment takes effect shall hold their offices until their respective terms shall expire under their present election or appointment.

Section 7 (of Article V): The State shall be divided into as many Judicial Districts as may now or hereafter be provided by law, which may be increased or diminished by law. For each district there shall be elected by the qualified voters thereof, at a general election, a Judge, who shall be a citizen of the United States and of this State, who shall have been a licensed lawyer for four years next preceding his election, and during that time shall have been a practicing lawyer or Judge of a Court of record or such practicing lawyer and Judge together, who shall have resided in the District in which he was elected for two years next preceding his election, who shall reside in his District during his term of office, who shall hold his office for the term of four years, and shall receive for his service such compensation as may be prescribed by law. He shall hold the regular terms of his Court at the County seat of each county in his district at least twice in each year, in such manner as may be prescribed by law. The Legislature shall have power, by general or special laws, to authorize the holding of special terms of the court or the holding of more than two terms in any County for the dispatch of business. The Legislature shall also provide for the holding of District Court when the Judge thereof is absent or is, from any cause, disabled or disqualified from presiding. The Supreme Court or the Chief Justice thereof may assign any District Judge to any District in the State other than that for which he was elected, with all the powers of a resident District Judge of the District to which he is assigned, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Legislature, or by the Supreme Court in the absence of such regulations enacted by the Legislature. The District Judges who may be in office when this amendment takes effect shall hold their offices until their respective terms shall expire under their present election or appointment.

SEC. 2. Said proposed amendment shall be submitted to a vote of the electors of this State qualified to vote on constitutional amendments at an election to be held throughout the State on the first Monday in August, A. D. 1927, at which each voter opposing said amendment shall scratch off of the ballot with pen or pencil the following words printed thereon:

D. 1927, at which all ballots shall have printed thereon "For amendment to the Constitution of the State of Texas giving the Legislature power to provide compensation for the District Attorney and county officers through salaries in lieu of fees, and commissions and prequisites as now prescribed by the Constitution," and "Against amendment to the Constitution of the State of Texas giving the Legislature power to provide compensation for the District Attorney and county officers through salaries in lieu of fees, commissions and perquisites as now prescribed by the Constitution," leaving the one expressing his vote on the proposed amendment.

Sec. 3. There is hereby appropriated out of any money on hand in the State Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars or as much thereof as may be necessary to defray the expenses of the holding of this election, including the expense of printing notices and advertisements.

Toll of Flood Mounts Higher

tracts nation-wide attention. Here is the heart of Dixie bleeding.

Homes Engulfed.

Accompanying Secretary of Commerce Hoover through the lower Mississippi valley I saw thousands of homes engulfed, hundreds of persons huddled together on high ground awaiting rescue, with Hundreds more of animals left behind in the exodus of entire communities.

Secretary Hoover conferred with relief chiefs here today. He said these forces were doing all that is humanly possible to rescue the people in the flood regions and feed them.

He left tonight for Washington, D. C., where he will make a personal report to President Coolidge. While there Hoover will address a Pan-American trade conference. Then he plans to return to the flood zone and give his expert aid.

With the "flood dictators" in command, one in Memphis, another in Mississippi and the third in Louisiana, and all organizations functioning directly under these men, Secretary Hoover feels that he has organized Dixie as he did Belgium, after the Boch over-ran that country, and as he fought the 1922 famine in Russia.

But the flood disaster in Dixie grows worse daily, now threatening to wind up in an epidemic of disease. There are thousands of persons still clinging to life in flooded areas; whole families are huddled in single rooms and on roof tops—they have been there for several days.

Food For Refugees.

The relief agencies, National Guard, Red Cross and co-operating civilians are combing these areas with loads of food. Close inspection of sanitary conditions there has not been attempted, so pressing have been other emergencies. Airplanes fly over the devastated regions, picking up information for the relief agencies.

Boats were rushed from here today for England, Monticello, Hamburg and Eudora in Arkansas, to be used in hauling in refugees from the surrounding country to refugee camps at these towns. The south bend break will force these people to flee for their lives.

Lake Village and McGehee in Arkansas are being evacuated. These people are being taken to Monticello and Eudora. Houses were reported to be crumbling at McGehee.

The Red Cross has 25 trained disaster workers in the south bend zone. They are organizing relief corps. Red Cross officials estimated that an additional 2000 persons would be immediately affected by the south bend levee break.

2715 On Levee

There are 2715 persons on a levee about 20 miles south of Eudora. They ran there when the flood waters drove them from the homes and means of a livelihood.

Boats were ordered to go to them and take them to Eudora, where they will be ticketed and put in the refugee camp there.

Hundreds more are being flooded out by the Boeuf and Arkansas rivers. Waters from these rivers are heading for Oak Grove, La. Delhi, La., also has sent in a cry for boats to bring in refugees from the countryside. Delhi normally has a population of about 700. It expects 2500 refugees within 36 hours.

Baby Born in Box Car

Amid all this gruesomeness there come human interest reports. A baby was born in a box car at Helena, Ark., and at the same time a dog under the car gave birth to six puppies. The Red Cross nurse reported "all doing fine."

The coast guard today despatched a boat to Arkansas City with three smaller boats aboard. The small boats will be lifted over the levee there and used in searching the countryside for persons in distress.

The Red Cross today ordered shipping interests in the east to rush by rail 25,000 motor boats to Natchez. The coast guard was called upon to round up every available craft in the east for relief work in this section.

"The section immediately south of Natchez is the most critical today and we are doing all that man can do to prepare for the crushing hand of fate," declared James L. Fieser, acting national chairman of the Red Cross, who is accompanying Hoover.

Some idea of the size of the relief job in these parts may be gleaned from the fact that today 50 carloads of food and emergency supplies for refugees arrived here today.

Included in the receipts were 27 carloads of assorted vegetables, seven carloads of tomatoes, 30,000 pounds of rice, 16,000 mattresses, 10,000 mess kits, 20,000 blankets and 60,000 tents.

30,000 Refugees

Baton Rouge, La., is prepared to receive 30,000 refugees. That city is high and dry and will continue safe. A representative of Universal Service inspected the refugee camps being set up there.

C. W. Warburton of the federal department of agriculture, estimated that 2,500,000 acres of farm land had already been inundated by the floods. About 6,000,000 acres of land in all, woodland and marshes included, were engulfed.

Arkansas has from 1,250,000 to 1,500,000 acres of farm lands under water. Eeighty per cent of it is cotton land.

COAST GUARD BOATS TO FLOODED AREA.

WASHINGTON, April 30. (AP)—Plans for the largest relief expedition in the history of the coast guard went forward today with the ordering of 40 boats with their crews to proceed to Natchez, Miss., from Lewes, Del., and Asbury Park, N. J.

In all, 150 craft will be assembled at New Orleans and approximately $0 will go to Natchez. The ships, together wth many privately owned craft, will be sent from eastern and southern seaboards and the great lakes.

All coast guard craft on the Gulf and Florida coasts have been ordered to New Orleans, along with picket boats, power surf boats and a number of customs vessels. Privately owned small boats will have been donated for use in the flood work will be motorized with a shipment of engines en route to New Orleans.

At the request of the Postoffice department, a coast guard vessel will establish mail service from New Orleans to points cut off from other communication.

A trainload of small boats which were sent from Chicago on flat cars arrived last night in the flood area and proceeded today under their own power down the river to join the fleet, starting refugee camps and cleaning-up the aftermath of the floods in districts where the waters have receded.

Twenty-seven power surf boats and their crews from the Great lakes, intended for service around Memphis, were diverted to Vicksburg and were reported today as having arrived "in time to be present at the crisis."

Wichita Men Tell Of Flood

many of the counties seem to be the less concerned over their plight, Mr. Futch stated. The average negro of the rural districts feels that he is faring better than under normal conditions, what with relief workers furnishing food and shelter without requiring labor in return.

A pitiable tale of one poor black marooned in a tree top and, having lost his mind while there, defiantly refusing to be removed by rescue workers in boats, was related by Mr. Futch.

Practically all local transportation is done by means of boats, every plantation having a number of motor boats or row boats tied at the door of the house. In some of the higher localities wagons and automobiles are used for short distances but they can not travel far without running into water.

Many Trapped

The people themselves in many instances waited until the flood was upon them before leaving their homes. At one point from the car window Mr. Futch saw the tops of many automobiles which had been abandoned as the water caught them in their race for higher ground. In some places the water came within a few inches of the coach steps and at these points the train barely moved.

Mr. Futch is a native Mississippian but moved many years ago to Ballinger, Texas, where he made his home until last November. Although the town of Marks has been a comparatively light sufferer from the flood, Mr. Futch declared that he is glad to be again in West Texas. He will return to Mississippi within a few weeks.

Oil Stocks Held To Quiet Role On Market As Result Of Pessimistic Tone of Oil Leaders

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, April 30—Chicago Great Western was again the outstanding feature in the stock market and in the two hours of trading sold up four points to a new high price for the year. Heavy trading accompanied the rise. Soft spots were again in evidence, particularly Steel which was affected by the ruling of the stock exchange in not permitting the old stock to sell ex the 40 per cent stock dividend tomorrow. Short covering in the oils held that group steady, although the Seminole pool continues to report increased production. Commodities and foreign exchanges were quiet.

Rails traversing the flooded area of the south were stronger, although the damage may grow. The enormous buying in Chicago Great Western is coming direct from banking circles. The estate that controls the property is in a position to force terms and has refused to sell less than a price considerably above the current market. On account of the big sum put back into the property and the high state of its physical development, Chicago Great Western is in a position to enjoy increasing earnings because of the big manufacturing plants and agricultural developments growing along its line. With a connection to the southwest this road will be in a position to increase its business threefold. The deal is understood to be nearer consumation than Wall street realizes. Chicago Great Western is regarded as a second Wheeling & Lake Erie.

Delaware and Hudson was quiet although segregation of its properties is scheduled. Quiet accumulation has been going on in this stock since attention was called to it in this column. The hidden assets will astound the most sanguine friends of the property.

On account of the aggressive campaign engineered by the big electrical supply manufacturers and their jobbers to the retail supply concerns, the latter that are making their own goods are finding competition keener. As the leading public utility companies only handle standard and fully tested goods, the small supply concerns are finding business poor. The public utility companies are only handling goods that can be bought in department stores and electrical contractor shops. This deprives certain small firms of business who try to force their goods at higher prices than the standard articles sold by the big companies.

On account of the warning sent out by E. W. Marland, president of the Marland Oil company, and "The Lamp," the publication of the Standard Oil of New Jersey, seems to have an effect in preventing any bullish speculation in the oils. There will be no let-up in the situation, practical oil men say, because there is a big profit in huge flush wells now being brought in and are likely to continue. The smaller wells of the older companies that have to pump, will be apt to shut down because their cost is beyond the price of the oil. This applies to some of the subsidiary companies who have increased their capital enormously within the last few years and not in a position to take advantage of these new fields.

Hudson & Manhattan reached a new peak. This stock is going up on the developments spoken of here. Some big plans may be given out soon in relation to this property. One reason why the stock is going up is that the company will extend to 42nd street and Sixth avenue and make a deal to get to Grand Central which right is in the company's charter. The Hudson & Manhattan gets a ten cent fare from up-town New York to Jersey City, a distance in the neighborhood of five miles and the fare is said to be worth 15 cents in convenience and speed on account of it being interstate. The growth in Jersey City has made that point one of the busiest centers, where land values are up tremendously and where store locations are in big demand.

Excellent buying is taking place in Timken roller bearing. Mr. Timken has been a frequent visitor in Wall street the past few days. Important developments are said to be pending. The company's roller bearing is likely to be used on all Pullman cars on the railroads. Earnings in the first quarter may show a gratifying increase over last year. General Motors continued firm on expectations of a $2 extra dividend at the coming meeting. Selling of Continental Baking followed rumors that the dividend may be sliced in half again. There were also rumors of a reorganization.

Grain

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, April 30.(AP)—Largely as a result of surprising strength shown by the Liverpool market, wheat averaged higher today in early dealings here. Continued active demand for wheat both in Great Britain and European continental countries, was reported. Opening at ½c to 1 1-8c advance, Chicago wheat reacted under profit taking but gave evidence of power to rally. Corn and oats were firmer, corn starting unchanged to 1-2c up, and subsequently gaining all around. Provisions held steady.

Besides unusual strength of Liverpool quotations, indications here today pointed to good sized export business in North American wheat. Among the sales announced were 50,000 bushels of domestic red winter wheat and 120,000 of durum. On the other hand, whether conditions today for the growing winter crop southwest and west and for the seeding of spring wheat northwest were of a character to give encouragement to bears.

Corn traders showed interest today in estimates by a leading authority that the country's supply of corn is 25.8 per cent less than was the case a year ago. He figured that there has been a total disappearance of 2,116,000,000 bushels in the six months ending today as against 1,852,000,000 bushels during the like period last year.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, April 30.(AP)—The stock market today opened with an outburst of strength, experienced a sharp sinking spell in the middle of the session, and then made irregular recovery. Final quotations, as a rule were lower, with net losses of 1 to 2 points rather numerous, but there were a number of conspicuous strong spots, particularly in the railroad group.

The shifting of speculative sentiment was not traceable to anything in the day's news developments, although a lowering of scrap steel prices at Pittsburgh may have influenced some selling of the steel shares. United States Steel common dropped over two points to a new low on the current decline at 146⅛, and then rallied slightly. Republic Steel sold down about a point and most of the others yielded fractionally.

A good rally developed in the oil shares when it became apparent that the short interest in many issues was becoming over-crowded, with California producers making the best showing. Houston Oil was freely liquidated, closing 2 3-8 points lower at 116, and General Asphalt lost 1 3-8. Motors also were subjected to rather heavy selling, but most of them offered good resistance. General Motors closed fractionally lower at 190 after fluctuating between 189 1-8 and 192 3-8.

White Sewing Machine was run up over three points to a new top at 29 7-8 and moderate gains were recorded by American Brown Boveri, Barnet Leather, General American Tank preferred, General Outdoor Advertising certificates, McCrory Stores and Otis Elevator.

Rails were featured by a quick runup in the Chicago Great Western issues to the highest levels in several years, and a revival of speculation for the advance in the Missouri Pacific shares.

Texas and Pacific jumped nearly 5 points to 79, but lost most of its gain.

Foreign exchanges were slightly easier in the usual quiet half holiday trading. Demand sterling ruled around 4.85 2-8 and French france above 3.91.

Cotton

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, April 30. (AP)—Early advances in the cotton market today were followed by reactions under week-end realizing. There was a considerable demand at the start, but after selling up to 15.25 July eased off to 15.18 and closed at 15.22 the general market closing barely steady at net declines of one to four points.

The opening was seven to 11 points higher. Active months showed net gains of about 10 to 12 points in early trading, May advancing to 15.08 and October to 15.64 on buying stimulated by higher cables and unfavorable flood or weather news. Additional overflows were reported in the Mississippi valley, while private advices said there was anxiety over the state of some of the other levees.

These features, combined with the unsettled weather with showers or rains, and the unexpectedly firm showing of Liverpool brought in considerable buying. It was supplied at the advance by profit-taking, however, while there was considerable southern and local selling, and prices turned easier during the forenoon.

Private cables said Liverpool had advanced on trade calling and buying stimulated by the flood and rain news from the south. Reports received from Manchester were to the effect that buyers of cotton cloths were holding off, but said there had been a better turnover in yarns made of Egyptian cotton.

Low Priced Oil

A goodly percentage of Wichita Falls' yearly income comes from the oil industry. Present low prices for crude and refined oil may cut down this income, but the prevailing sentiment in the oil trade is optimistic.

We are approaching the season of greatest consumption of oil. Indeed new records in consumption may be made throughout the summer and fall. This should tend to equalize the benefits of oil between producers and cousumers to the benefit of both and of our community.

MEDICO TELLS OF HAY FEVER

Physician Explains Causes At University Club

Dr. W. B. Whiting was principal speaker at the University club luncheon Saturday at the Kemp hotel with an interesting lecture on the cause, treatment and prevention of hay fever and asthma.

"Asthma and hay fever are not merely irritations of the nose and throat, but are reactions against some foreign substance. In the spring and summer, conditions are increased by the pollination of flowers and trees, and it is the pollen carried by the wind that causes hay fever," he declared.

"Treatment of hay fever in its first stages is very simple, and consists in administering substances hypodermically in order to be immune from the malady."

Dr. Whiting concluded his talk by saying that asthma was an an advanced stage of hay fever and was almost incurable. He also answered questions on the disease.

Lester M. Aldrich sang two solos, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Hermoine S. Vaughan. It was voted to adjourn the club until the second Saturday in September.

Olney Hospitality—
Finest Ever—
Visitors Pleased—

From Across the Sea—
Good Citizens—
Forum Breakfast—

THIS letter, Kitty, will be full of the echoes from the twenty-sixth annual district meeting of Texas Federation of Women's clubs held at Olney last week, past glories and those to come.

For months, the Olney club women had been preparing for this event. They wanted the convention to meet there and they showed it by their unlimited hospitality to the delegates and visitors. And not only did the women want the convention, but the men as well were intensely interested. Now if you are wondering how I know that the men were interested I will relieve your mind by telling you that on President's Evening, the opening program of the convention, when Mrs. Rhea Anderson of Olney, general chairman of the local committee gave the visitors a most cordial welcome, she not only offered the services of the local women in doing everything possible for the comfort of those attending the convention, but also handed them a lovely bouquet of compliments concluding her greeting with, "And our men are glad you are here and they are going to smile at you I know. And we don't care at all if you smile back at them."

* * *

AND O my! What preparations those women did make. When you entered the city you knew at once that something of importance was going on there. The streets were gay with decorations of flags and bunting and handsome cars decorated with large posters bearing the words, "Federation of Women's Clubs." Now these cars were available all day long to the visitors. Kept right in front of the First Presbyterian church in readiness to convey them back and forth to luncheons, receptions, or just any place they wanted to go. Really and truly, Kitty, the convention was a most interesting event and the days and evenings were filled with brilliant programs.

* * *

AND they certainly didn't miss their guess far on attendance. Prepafations were made for 200 and according the report of the chairman of credentials, Mrs. Charles Randall of Seymour, exactly 274 were there. Now you would say, "Well, that is some crowd for a small town to entertain." But with every detail so well arranged in advance, it seemed no trouble at all for Olney. Homes were opened to the visitors with every club woman in the city caring for two or three delegates. All sessions were held at the Presbyterian church and, dear me, what a scope of study and information these sessions did cover. Wonderful reports of study work being done all over this part of Texas including general education; library extension, illiteracy, better American speech, motion pictures, community service, recreation, fire prevention, thrift, street and highway safety, fine arts, literature, drama, music, American citizenship, international relations, all in this three day session. When you think about it you gasp and wonder how it was done. In the motion picture report compiled by Mrs. R. R. Darrah of Arlington, she stated that pictures are witnessed daily by 20,000,000 people in all walks of life. That there are 966 theaters in Texas and asks, "What are they teaching, what ideals are being instilled?"

The Love of Pericles and Aspasia Is Theme of The Book of the Week

"THE IMMORTAL MARRIAGE"
By Gertrude Atherton.
Published by Boni & Liveright.

In "The Immortal Marriage," her first novel since her sensational "Black Oxen," Mrs. Atherton has returned to historical fiction, which is the type of fiction through which she first won fame. This time she has built a story around the famous love romance of Pericles and Aspasia. It is written with Mrs. Atherton's characteristic gusto and even when it is most weighted with descriptions of Greek manners and customs of the Golden Age, it is an entertaining and informative novel.

Mrs. Atherton has tackled her theme from an angle that will especially appeal to a contemporary audience. She has shown Aspasia as a modern woman who, practically single handed, revolutionized the humiliating position of Greek women in Athens during the period of that city's ascendancy in art, science and literature.

Aspasia was born in Miletus, where women had greater freedom than in Athens, and she acquired an education which was not permitted to Athenian women. As a girl she is pictured as both brilliant and beautiful, and very headstrong. To men she seems unapproachable, and the gravity of her demeanor, as well as her calm self-sufficiency, frightened suitors away. In her youth she had no time for love-making, because she possessed an insatiable curiosity for knowledge. It was because of this that she prevailed upon her adopted parents to move to Athens, where she could meet the great philosophers, sculptors and poets.

Scandal Springs.

The women of Athens never went unveiled or unchaperoned and Aspasia's foster parents were afraid that she would scandalize the city and achieve a reputation for looseness of morals. Aspasia did achieve that reputation; but Mrs. Atherton is at pains to show that Aspasia's reputation as a courtesan was unfounded and was due entirely to the fact that the Athenian women could not imagine that any woman would do the unconventional things Aspasia did and permit herself the freedom Aspasia permitted herself unless she was a courtesan. Aspasia was an heiress, however, with enough money in her own right to do whatever she pleased.

Aspasia had gone to Athens with a definite dislike of Pericles. That great Athenian leader had been responsible for the passing of a law which forbade equal marriages between Athenian citizens and "foreigners" which meant even the residents of other Greek cities, and he had fostered other measures designed to limit the freedom of women.

On her arrival in Athens, she paraded the streets of the city unveiled and the populace gasped at her beauty. An ugly, ungainly, short and flat-nosed young man, who called himself Socrates the philosopher, addressed her and paid eloquent tribute to her beauty and learning. She was impressed by Socretes at once and he later became one of her luminaries. Pericles saw her from a distance and sent word to her that he wished to interview her. She curtly refused the interview, but arranged with her kinsman, an Athenian architect, to give a dinner at his house, where she would hold the seat of honor and Pericles and all the great minds of the city would be invited.

Pericles in Love.

The dinner was an entire success. Every one, especially Pericles, was fascinated by Aspasia's wit and beauty. Pericles fell in love at first sight. Aspasia thereafter regularly kept open house, where the philosophers and artists might come and hold discussions.

Pericles, having passed the law, making the marriage of an Athenian citizen and a resident of any other city illegal, was constrained to carry on his courtship of Aspasia under the handicap of knowing that they could never marry and have children that would be legitimate and protected by the state in their rights.

A wife in Athens at that time had an unenviable position. She was not allowed to acquire an education; she was little more than a servant in a house in which she was kept a prisoner like the inmate of a harem. When her husband wished to converse with other men, she was not permitted to be present. When Aspasia married Pericles then, it was by a religious and not a civil ceremony, and the very illegality of the union offered her a unique position among the women of Athens. She was, to all intents and purposes, the wife of Pericles, and yet she did not have to bow to the convention which kept married women secluded. She conversed as an equal with Socrates and Pythagoras and Praxiteles.

Humiliated Women

At the time that Aspasia became one of the dominating minds of Athens, Athens was so thoroughly a man's world that even feminine beauty was disregarded and only handsome youths were admired by men. These friendships between men and youths were supposed to be on the highest plane, with the youths submitting to the instruction of mature minds that molded their character and to whom they gave absolute devotion. But however noble these relationships might have been or were assumed to be, they placed women in the humiliating position of being entirely disregarded and of not being allowed any romantic part in life.

The drama of the novel lies in Aspasia's triumph over these conditions and the conflicts she was involved in when she attempted to make Athens a better city for women to live in. She had, curiously enough, the antagonism of the women in the city, who looked upon her as a menace to their security and as being no better than she should be.

With her refreshing talent for presenting characters in her novel who seem to be real human beings and not marionettes, Mrs. Atherton has been very successful in making the city of Athens and its people live before our eyes. It is meant as a tribute to her when I say that she makes Athens seem like a modern city and Pericles and Aspasia like personages we have known. There is a tonic zest to Mrs. Atherton's point of view. It is a happy, optimistic point of view, not crudely or sentimentally optimistic, but the optimism of good humor and of faith that life is worth living.

as clubs, they are told to form a community committee made up of representatives of organizations who are interested in better films. No isolated group is strong enough to secure desired changes, but by co-operation a sufficiently large public can be reached to bring necessary influence to bear. The clubs are further asked to keep the community informed through the joint committee as to the character and value of films both of new and current productions. The co-operation of the manager of the local theaters is also asked on advance bookings. As most theaters advertise their coming attractions the federation believes that good films can be requested, and bad ones protested. Clubs are instructed that if a film is bad, to send a letter to the producer immediately, and get as large a number as possible to join in the protest.

AND Wichita Falls clubs were well represented at the meeting. Groups of women went back and forth at Olney constantly during the session and some stayed the entire three days. Among those noted there were Mesdames C. Y. Tully, W. M. Priddy, P. P. Langford, J. C. Berney, J. T. Carter, Charles Staley, Ben G. Oneal, T. A. Hicks, S. M. Gose Sr., R. D. Bone, J. M. Isbell, C. E. Bailey, A. R. Bleakley, O. T. Gorsline, Raymond Gutzler, A. B. Lipscomb, W. E. Brothers and Miss Berniece Strawn.

And while it would seem that everything was going on at Olney and that everybody was over there, social life at home was by no means dull. The Flat-Iron luncheon given at the Kemp Tuesday by the music and drama departments of the Woman's Forum followed by an unusually clever program proved one of the most attractive events of the spring. And then on the same afternoon, a party of especial interest was given at the Country club when Mrs. John Hampton was hostess at 20 tables of bridge while on Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Harry ten Brink entertained a group of friends with a unique Dutch tea. And Mrs. ten Brink knows how it is done, because she is a native of Holland who has only been in the country a few years.

* * *

AND if anyone has the least doubt as to whether our sisters from across the sea make good American citizens, it is your friend's pleasure to refer them to Mrs. ten Brink. Her work in the Sam Houston P.-T. A. has been nothing short of wonderful and her activities for the upbuilding of her community are unlimited.

This week will bring with it a notable event in the annual breakfast of the Woman's Forum to be given at the Country club. Preparations are being made for 300 guests.

And that's all. And if you haven't had enough of convention talk, take an airplane and fly down and let Peggy tell you some things that are not given to newspaper reporters concerning all the chatter of the females who attend conventions and about the elegant gowns one saw worn there. Surely all of this will cause you to want to read another epistle from—

Spring Frolic Is Staged By School Pupils Saturday

Proving one of the most colorful and pleasant social events of the week, the "Spring Frolic," a combined program and exhibit was held at the Zundelowitz school Saturday evening. Originality was shown in grouping and displaying the exhibits and the entertainment features of the affair were exceptionally clever. Every department of the school was represented.

The musical drama was held in the auditorium of the building and directed by Mrs. Hermoine Stuart Vaughn. It was opened with the selection, "Sleepy Head" played by the school orchestra with solo parts taken by John Starks. In character costumes of Maggie, Jiggs, gypsies, tramps, and other types the music was played from harps, horns and cow bells. The selections were finally caught up by Margaret Dale, vocalist, who sang, "All Alone". Lysle Schose sang "Let Me Call You Sweetheart". Several other numbers were given by the orchestra which was led by Homer Donohoo. Charlotte Sutton gave a toe dance in flower costume followed by a rose drill by the Girl's Glee club.

The program was concluded with the crowning of the May Queen and King surrounded by their attendants. Dorothy Jameson took the part of the queen and her train bearers were Charlese Vaughn and Mary Morgan. Peggy Marie Glass was crown bearer, and the maid of honor was Hulda Maude Cole. The King's knight was Homer Donohoo. Fifty girls took part in a Maypole dance and trained dancers gave solo numbers wearing the costumes of flowers and fairies.

The art club exhibit on the second floor was declared by all who visited it to be exceptionally splendid. The history department featured a museum of natural history and rare novelties, and in here a medieval ministrel was staged. The singers were Edna Gay Phillips, Dorothy Bobo, Hulda Maude Cole, Ed Reeder, Stringer Williams and Joe Long.

The "Fun House" and "Fish Ponds" proved popular as did the mystic attraction and fortune telling booth. Mediums wore Oriental costumes. The affair was attended by a large crowd of patrons and friends of the school.

Huey P-T. A., "Infant" Of City School System, One Of Most Active Groups

BY MRS. J. B. SCARBROUGH
President of the Huey P.-T. A.

Looking back just a few months, to March 17, 1926, we can hardly believe that so much could be done in so short a time; yet looking ahead with a vision of the possibilities of the future, the Huey P.-T. A. realizes that the work is just beginning. And with the earnest constituency and capable officers now in charge, we feel that our slogan should be and is, that of A. L. Huey, for which the school was named, and who donated the ground on which the building stands:

"Scotland and the Huey school shall not be excelled."

Not to be excelled is the motive power that drives the machinery of the Huey P.-T. A. although in size of building and numeral constituency, Huey is the infant school, but surely has assumed proportions in growth that would make a prediction reasonable that it would outgrow some of the larger and older schools.

First Meeting

On March 8, 1926 the school opened its doors to the teachers and pupils. Then on March 17, 1926, the first meeting of the P.-T. A. was held with 20 members. Although the P.-T. A. has been organized one year, the standard of excellence has been the slogan; and to accomplish this, the program of the state and national congress, and the local city council of the P.-T. A. has been adhered to.

The present date finds us in the midst of a membership drive, and the results are very gratifying as our present membership is 55 as compared to 20 a year ago. If this condition continues (and we are sure it will) at the close of our drive we expect to have 200, as the fathers as well as mothers are being interested and realizing our organization is a Parent-Teacher association instead of Mothers' club as some see fit to call it, and that the welfare of the school and the community and educational interests as well as the moral uplift evolves with the responsibility of the fathers as well as the mothers.

When there comes a concerted effort from both fathers and mothers the accomplishment of greater things is possible. The outlook of this very thing is encouraging.

At the last meeting Mrs. J. B. Scarbrough was re-elected president. Others re-elected were Mrs. D. F. Knight, treasurer; Mrs. J. T. Osteen, first vice-president. New officers elected were: Mrs. Wade, second vice-president; Mrs. P. A. East, third vice-president; Mrs. W. T. Goodson, secretary; Mrs. Yarbrough, press reporter.

Teachers Praised

The diligence and service of the teachers are largely responsible for the excellent spirit dominating the meetings. Their co-operation with the parents is indispensible, and much appreciated by all. Miss Berry, the principal, seeing that the mothers with small children are relieved from the responsibility of their care during the meetings, being aided by the Camp Fire girls, make it possible for many mothers to attend that would otherwise be unable to do so.

The pre-school roundup committee of which Mrs. Brooks, 1220 North Seventh street is chairman, anticipates (with the co-operation of the Red Cross nurses) to accomplish much in baffling epidemics so prevalent in the last year.

We hope to accomplish much through our committee for prevention of juvenile delinquency, one of the most important branches of P.-T. A. activities.

A piano has been purchased, and a Victrolia was donated by the Wichita Music company. There were also donated as decorations three P. P. C. monuments and one large and several small pictures. Our finances have been cared for by sewing circle activities, and entertainments such as dramas by the school children and social hours when refreshments were served. For the future we anticipate adopting the budget plan, as outlined at our last meeting by A. J. Newby from the Alamo school.

Realizing the possibilities and great responsibilities of educational progress, moral uplift and civic betterment, untiring service duplicating last year's efforts will be the promise of the teachers' officers and constituency of the Huey P.-T. A.

CHOIR GIVES "HOLY CITY"

Oratorio Presented Sunday Night at Church

The choir of the First Baptist church, under the direction of W. E. Young, Mrs. F. R. Collard, organist, will present the oratorio, "The Holy City," (Gaul) evening, 7:45 o'clock.

The treatment of the subject of this work is almost entirely reflective, the more dramatic parts of the book from which many of the numbers are taken, viz: The vision of St. John, having already been treated in so masterly a manner by the great German composer, Louis Spohr, in his oratorio, "The Last Judgment."

The first part of "The Holy City" was suggested by the passages of scripture, "Here have we no continuing city," "Thy kingdom come," and sets forth the desire for a higher life, as expressed in the words, "My soul is athirst for God," which desire is followed by other passages expressive of the perfection of the higher life, such as "Eye hath not seen."

The second part was suggested by the words, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away," thus realizing the desire and promises contained in the first part.

With the exception of two hymns a verse from Milton, and three verses from the Te Deum, the words are entirely scriptural.

"Future Life" Subject of Series Of Sermons by Dr. F. A. Bash

A series of sermons on the general theme "The Future Life" will be given in the First Christian church in the Sunday night services in May, by the pastor, Dr. Floyd A. Bash.

The recent suicide craze has called attention to the modern and ancient notions of death and what follows. Dr. Bash has sent a brief questionnaire to 12 prominent citizens of Wichita Falls, asking their answers to a series of questions as follows:

1. Do you think continuance of life after death is desirable? Why?
2. What is your conception of the future life?
3. What is your chief problem concerning a future life?
4. Do you think we will know each other after death?

These questions were sent to lawyers, doctors, business men, women and young people so that all shades of though might be obtained.

The names of the writers will not be given, so there may be utmost frankness in the answers.

The sermon topics are as follows:

May 1—"Does Death End All?"
May 8—"What Is Death Like?"
May 15—"What About Heaven and Future Rewards?"
May 22—"Is There a Hell and a Future Reaping?"
May 20—"Will We Know Loved Ones in Heaven?"

The musical program will be arranged in harmony with the subject under discussion each week. The great hymns of hope and immortality will be sung Sunday night, with L. E. Shepherd leading.

BASH RETURNS

Wichita Falls Pastor Speaks At Convention of Christian Churches

Dr. Floyd A. Bash, of the First Christian church returned Friday from Houston where he had attended the state convention of the Christian churches. The attendance was large and the convention went on record favoring a three-year program of advance in evangelism, stewardship, missions and religious education. The three-year program will culminate in a great celebration of the 1900th anniversary of the day of Pentecost, when the church was started in Jerusalem. The aim for evangelism is set to increase the Texas membership from 77,000 up to 100,000 within the three years.

Dr. Bash gave an address on Wednesday night on "The Plea for Unity." He was elected to membership in the governing board of the Texas Christian Missionary society. The next convention is to meet in El Paso.

Aged Catholic Prelate Defies Danger of Flood

By Universal Service.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 30. In the flood waters engulfing St. Bernard and Plaquemines, parishes sacrificed to save New Orleans, a heroic figure stands out. He is Father Jean Girault de la Corgans, viscarage of the little church at Pointe a la Hache.

Father Corgnais steadfastly refused to leave his little charge. His parishoners begged to remain and face the flood.

And looking beyond the flood, Father Corgnais set his face against the Hegira to New Orleans, ordered by army engineers, government and state officials.

More Than Flood.

"There are things worse than flood," Father Corgnais said, speaking slowly and freely. For he is an old man, in ill health.

"My people want to stay and watch their homes," he went on. "I shall stay with them. We have seen floods before. Surely this can be no worse than some of those others."

Danger greater than flood lurks in the pathway of these simple Acadians, many descendents of that little band banished from Canada 200 years ago. It is the danger of the city.

Father Corgnais realizes that into the maw of the city is going the youth of his loved land. He knows of the temptations there, dangers more fatal to the soul than the yellow water of the Mississippi. He said:

Defends His People.

"It would be a pity for this land to be deserted. You outsiders call my people Cajans. They are good people. They have had little chance to shine. Their name shows the trouble which lies behind their history."

Many times before Father Corgnais has seen his people withstand the flood water of the Mississippi for he has been their spiritual adviser for more than 10 years. He came to the parigh when stories of the invasion of the northern soldiers were fresh when the carpetbagger of old exploited this loved land. Yes, there al things worse than flood, he will tell you.

"Yes, we, my people and I, have gone through floods before," the old man says dreamily as he recalls wending his way through flooded fields in a little bateau to visit isolated parishoners. "And we will go through this one. If the water gets too high we can always hall a boat. The river is near and that has been our highway for a long time. It was our highway before the automobile brought us any other. It can be our highway again now that these citydwellers are turning the river against us."

Holds Home Sacred.

Father Corgnais holds home sacred, something against storms and and defended against storms and floods and outside encroachments. His people will suffer, he knows full well, but he feels to suffer will give them greater strength, greater faith.

He fears for the young people. Many of them will never find their way back from New Orleans. Temptations of the city will hold them in an embrace more enduring than flood water of the river, he fears. The happy fields and gardens that they love will be forgotten for mills and factories of the north.

People Love Priest.

"They love me and follow me," the aged priest repeats often. "They should not be driven from their homes."

Music and Musicians

By MME. COBINA WRIGHT
Famous Songstress and Society Leader.

NEW YORK, April 30.—While the moderns are having their day, it is interesting to hear of someone devoting artistic energies to the music of the past, and in Wanda Landowska whose delicate playing of the harp-sichord has held many an audience spellbound we find an extraordinarily sensitive artist blessed with executive ability and knack of accomplishing what she sets out to do. In the "art center" of her own which she has established in the beautiful surrounding of Saint-Leu-La-Foret near Baris she will foster the finest musical traditions—her ambition for years.

An artist herself to her finger tips, she is an unusually clever and intelligent woman with that barest of all gifts, a quick and facile mind which grasps possibilities and understands. When I say "to her finger tips" I speak literally for her hands are indicative of her character. Most human beings are known by their faces, but Mme. Landowska's hands speak for her. They are the most expressive hands I have ever seen.

Some days ago while we were having tea Germain Taillieferro joined us and I discovered that Mme. Landowska is a great tease as well as a great artist for the bride came in for a goodly share of chaffing. For bride Miss Talleferro is, having recently married Ralph Barton, the illustrator. It was with great interest that we learned that the art center is completed and when Mme. Landowska returns to France she will see for the first time the embodiment of her dreams having come true.

"I have always dreamed," says Mme. Landowska, "of living close to nature and working in the intimacy of my beloved old masters.

A FEW days ago I went once more to hear Deems Taylor's first operatic opus "The King's Henchman" which has met with such success at the Metropolitan Opera house this season, and I discovered that a second hearing is more enjoyable than the first. The music grows on one, and confirms the first impression that it is a fine piece of work and a credit not only to Taylor himself but to all American composers. Mr. Taylor's success has made the road easier for all American composers, and far from seeing in his work the influence of those who have gone before him, I feel that Mr. Taylor's music is singularly free from reminiscent harmonies. He has been influenced of course by the masters, but who has not?

By GEORGE ADE

In one of the Regular Shops on a Spur Line of a Western Road there lived a Man who wanted to see Europe. Somebody had told him that Travelling broadens one. He had six weeks to spare, so he thought he would hustle over and get Broadened about $1500 worth.

This would-be Marco Polo wanted to hie over and look in Pity on the decaying Monarchies of the Effete East and compare them with Bird Center. He was afraid that if he waited a couple of Seasons they would be so Far Along in the Process of Decay that they would not be Fit to look at.

He was a Coal Dealer in Bird Center, but he sighted for further Honors. He wanted to be pointed out as the Fellow who had took in the Old Country. There was one Woman in Bird Center who had skipped over and back again before Europe knew anything about it. This record gave her a gosh-awful Standing in the Chautauqua. She had put in two days in dear old Rome. When the Circle began to speak of Art, she had all the other Girls spiked to the Tan Board.

The Coal Dealer had his Name stenciled on a low-browed Steamer Trunk. Also he secured a Passport which identified him as a Male American and requested Foreign Powers to overlook all Breaks as he was from Bird Center.

The Cold Shoulder

His Friends gave him a Farewell Dinner. When he boarded the Train, the entire Population was down to see him off. His Neighbors pounded him on the Back and gave him a box of Lottie Lees to smoke on the Trip, because they had heard tell that it was impossible to get a Good Segar away from Home. They told him to give their Best to George, meaning his Gracious Majesty, and to ask King Albert to take one on them, and to tell the Pope howdy. In fact, his departure was made a regular Festival of home-grown Humor, and he felt that he was something of a Public Character.

But when he boarded the Liner and came up against the Sea-Dog who has been across 47 times and liked Heavy Weather and never had been Sick, he shrank considerably. His plans for doing Great Britain and the whole Continent in one Month, did not seem to excite any burning Interest.

The voyage was not up to his large Expectations. A majority of the Passengers lay about in a Comatose Condition, rolled up in loud rugs. The others did numerous Laps around and around the Deck, like the Participants in a Six-Day Match, and spoke to no one. The Coal Dealer spent most of his Time in somebody else's Steamer Chair sucking a Lemon.

In due time he landed on Albion's Shore, as he called it in writing to the Home Paper. He had read all about the Angelo-Saxon Alliance, and the Friendly Feeling for Americans and blood being thicker than Water. He expected the Duke of Newcastle-on-Tyne to be at the Dock with a Union Jack in one Hand, a Starry Banner in the other and an Invitation to Marlborough House held in his Teeth. But the Reception Committee failed to materialize.

The Man from Bird Center rode up to London in a small Compartment with several of our British Cousins. He tried to be Sociable and dab a little more Cement on the Angelo-Saxon Alliance, but they looked out at the Landscape and did not seem inclined to mix up with one who had not been Presented. By the time the Train rumbled in among the Chimney-Pots, they had him frozen as Stiff as a Board.

The Revolt of the Angel

After he had been on the Other Side for about a Week, he learned that if he wanted to Talk to any one, he could go out and engage a Guide.

Still, there were some who recognized the Blood Relation, and they bled him. The Cabbies charged him three times the regular Tariff. He discovered that a Nasal Accent was Expensive. Somehow, every one seemed to know that he was one of those eccentric Yankees. He was regarded as a Millionaire just because he came from America and talked in a Loud Tone. He did not like to correct this flattering Impression and explain that he was merely a Bounder from Bird Center who wanted to go it Cheap. So he Let Go rather freely, and the first thing he knew his Letter of Credit began to acflop-sided.

He went against the London Tailor and bought a lot of strange Garb with Cushions in the Shoulders. The Garments did not fit him, but were said to be Durable. The Tailor said he Couldn't Wear them Out and after he returned Home, he found that he did not dare to.

After remaining in London for a week and getting fairly well acquainted with a Waiter, he struck out for the Continent, where they had been saving all their Bad Money to give it to him. He did not know how to make change. In the Excitement of Travel, he forgot his four French Sentences and became so Locoed that they did what they pleased with him. He was from the U. S. A., where the Currency grows on Bushes, and they felt at Liberty to go through him.

He was so busy scrapping over Bills, looking up Time-Tables, paying Excess Baggage and sending Illustrated Postal Cards back to Bird Center, telling what a Grand Time he was having, that he had very little Time for Sights. Still, he managed to look into 400 Cathedrals that seemed just alike and had the same damp Odor and he stood in front of several thousand Masterpieces and let on to Admire them. After a while all Scenery looked alike to him and when a Guide tried to pull him into a Gallery he kicked and clawed.

The Wanderer's Return

Wherever he stopped, a smiling Hotel Manager gave him the Sleeve across the Wind-Pipe.

After a couple of weeks though, he got used to it and would extend His Neck and take it in the Jugular without a Murmur.

He began to count the Days until he would see Bird Center again. He wanted to be back where the Teams were hitched around the Court House Square and no Building was more than 15 years old and everybody said, "Hello, Bill."

In addition to being Homesick, he was Hungry. He could not get his Steak and Onions. At the sad Round-up known as the Tabble Dote, they passed him a lot of Trimmings that he could neither Pronounce nor Assimilate. He sat in the Forum at Rome and longed for Rhubarb Pie. As he floated on the Grand Canal of Venice, he realized that Green Corn was coming into the Market back in Bird Center and the Blow nearly threw him out of the Gondola. He stood in the Majestic Presence of Mont Blanc and made an Open Offer of Seven Dollars for a Cup of Mother's Coffee without any daggoned Chicory in it.

It was a joyous Day when the Coal Dealer climbed into a Six-Day Boat headed for Sandy Hook. He had used a Cable to get 200 over and above the Letter. He didn't know whether or not his trip had Broadened him, but he knew that it had left him Short.

He realized that when he landed in New York, he would be searched as a Smuggler and then Sand-Bagged by a Taxi Bandit, but he was ready to stand for everything that wasn't done in a Foreign Language.

"The Latin Races may be on the Decline, but they didn't refuse to take All of Mine," said the Coal Dealer, as he looked back across the vasty Deep. "The only way I can get Revenge is to go back to Bird Center and talk Europe for the next 10 years."

MORAL: The Time to enjoy an European Trip is about Three Weeks after unpacking.

CALUMET'S DOUBLE ACTION

Gives you a baking powder containing two leavening units—one begins to work when the dough is mixed, the other waits for the heat of the oven, then both units work together.

CALUMET never works until you want it to. It is the most convenient, most economical and dependable of all leaveners. You get best results in a moderate oven, but you may bake in either a hot or slow oven with safety.

Don't be a slave to single acting leaveners. Arrange your bakings to best suit your convenience. If you want hot rolls or biscuits for breakfast, you don't have to get up earlier in the morning, because you can mix the dough the night before.

If you are making a cake or any other baking—don't think that it has to be rushed right into the oven. It doesn't—you can set the dough aside for hours.

Use slip found in can to secure a beautiful cook book.

Oratorio Presented Sunday Night at Church

The choir of the First Baptist church, under the direction of W. E. Young, Mrs. F. R. Collard, organist, will present the oratorio, "The Holy City," (Gaul) evening, 7:45 o'clock.

The treatment of the subject of this work is almost entirely reflective, the more dramatic parts of the book from which many of the numbers are taken, viz: The vision of St. John, having already been treated in so masterly a manner by the great German composer, Louis Spohr, in his oratorio, "The Last Judgment."

The first part of "The Holy City" was suggested by the passages of scripture, "Here have we no continuing city," "Thy kingdom come," and sets forth the desire for a higher life, as expressed in the words, "My soul is athirst for God," which desire is followed by other passages expressive of the perfection of the higher life, such as "Eye hath not seen."

The second part was suggested by the words, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away," thus realizing the desire and promises contained in the first part.

With the exception of two hymns a verse from Milton, and three verses from the Te Deum, the words are entirely scriptural.

An old fashioned "Holy Ghost" Methodist revival is what we are all working and praying for.

Our church organization is being perfected rapidly.

We want to take this means of thanking all those who have so liberally helped us with time and money in getting our church plant. Also, the newspapers of our city who have been so liberal with space for the news concerning our church.

If you live in the neighborhood of the Crockett public school, or the Sam Houston public school, and are Methodist, or are friendly to the Methodist people, we want you to make this new church your church home. Come out to our revival meeting this week and get acquainted with us, and let us get acquainted with you.

"Future Life" Subject of Series Of Sermons by Dr. F. A. Bash

A series of sermons on the general theme "The Future Life" will be given in the First Christian church in the Sunday night services in May, by the pastor, Dr. Floyd A. Bash.

The recent suicide craze has called attention to the modern and ancient notions of death and what follows. Dr. Bash has sent a brief questionnaire to 12 prominent citizens of Wichita Falls, asking their answers to a series of questions as follows:

1. Do you think continuance of life after death is desirable? Why?
2. What is your conception of the future life?
3. What is your chief problem concerning a future life?
4. Do you think we will know each other after death?

These questions were sent to lawyers, doctors, business men, women and young people so that all shades of though might be obtained.

The names of the writers will not be given, so there may be utmost frankness in the answers.

The sermon topics are as follows:

May 1—"Does Death End All?"
May 8—"What Is Death Like?"
May 15—"What About Heaven and Future Rewards?"
May 22—"Is There a Hell and a Future Reaping?"
May 20—"Will We Know Loved Ones in Heaven?"

The musical program will be arranged in harmony with the subject under discussion each week.

The great hymns of hope and immortality will be sung Sunday night, with R. E. Shepherd leading.

PRIEST STICKS BY HIS FLOCK

By Universal Service.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 30. In the flood waters engulfing St. Bernard and Plaquemines, parishes sacrificed to save New Orleans, a heroic figure stands out. He is Father Jean Girault de la Corgans, viscarage of the little church at Pointe a la Hache.

Father Corgnais steadfastly refused to leave his little charge. His parishoners begged to remain and face the flood.

And looking beyond the flood, Father Corgnais set his face against the Hegira to New Orleans, ordered by army engineers, government and state officials.

More Than Flood.

"There are things worse than flood," Father Corgnais said, speaking slowly and freely. For he is an old man, in ill health.

"My people want to stay and watch their homes," he went on. "I shall stay with them. We have seen floods before. Surely this can be no worse than some of those others."

Danger greater than flood lurks in the pathway of these simple Acadians, many descendents of that little band banished from Canada 209 years ago. It is the danger of the city.

Father Corgnais realizes that into the maw of the city is going the youth of his loved land. He knows of the temptations there, dangers more fatal to the soul than the yellow water of the Mississippi. He said:

Defends His People.

"It would be a pity for this land to be deserted. You outsiders call my people Cajans. They are good people. They have had little chance to shine. Their name shows the trouble which lies behind their history."

Many times before Father Corgnais has seen his people withstand the flood water of the Mississippi for he has been their spiritual adviser for more than 10 years. He came to the parish when stories of the invasion of the northern soldiers were fresh when the carpetbagger of old exploited this loved land. Yes, there al things worse than flood, he will tell you.

"Yes, we, my people and I, have gone through floods before," the old man says dreamily as he recalls wending his way through flooded fields in a little bateau to visit isolated parishoners. "And we will go through this one. If the water gets too high we can always hail a boat. The river is near and that has been our highway for a long time. It was our highway before the automobile brought us any other. It can be our highway again now that these citydwellers are turning the river against us."

Holds Home Sacred.

Father Corgnais holds home sacred, something against storms and and defended against storms and floods and outside encroachments. His people will suffer, he knows full well, but he feels to suffer will give them greater strength, greater faith.

He fears for the young people. Many of them will never find their way back from New Orleans. Temptations of the city will hold them in an embrace more enduring than flood water of the river, he fears. The happy fields and gardens that they love will be forgotten for mills and factories of the north.

People Love Priest.

"They love me and follow me," the aged priest repeats often. "They should not be driven from their homes."

Music and Musicians

By MME. COBINA WRIGHT
Famous Songstress and Society Leader.
(Copyright, 1927, By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, April 30.—While the moderns are having their day, it is interesting to hear of someone devoting artistic energies to the music of the past, and in Wanda Landowska whose delicate playing of the harp-sichord has held many an audience spellbound we find an extraordinarily sensitive artist blessed with executive ability and knack of accomplishing what she sets out to do. In the "art center" of her own which she has established in the beautiful surrounding of Saint-Leu-La-Foret near Baris she will foster the finest musical traditions—her ambition for years.

An artist herself to her finger tips, she is an unusually clever and intelligent woman with that barest of all gifts, a quick and facile mind which grasps possibilities and understands. When I say "to her finger tips" I speak literally for her hands are indicative of her character. Most human beings are known by their faces, but Mme. Landowska's hands speak for her. They are the most expressive hands I have ever seen.

Some days ago while we were having tea Germain Tailleferro joined us and I discovered that Mme. Landowska is a great tease as well as a great artist for the bride came in for a goodly share of chaffing. For bride Miss Tailleferro is, having recently married Ralph Barton, the illustrator. It was with great interest that we learned that the art center is completed and when Mme. Landowska returns to France she will see for the first time the embodiment of her dreams having come true.

"I have always dreamed," says Mme. Landowska, "of living close to nature and working in the intimacy of my beloved old masters.

A FEW days ago I went once more to hear Deems Taylor's first operatic opus "The King's Henchman" which has met with such success at the Metropolitan Opera house this season, and I discovered that a second hearing is more enjoyable than the first. The music grows on one, and confirms the first impression that it is a fine piece of work and a credit not only to Taylor himself but to all American composers. Mr. Taylor's success has made the road easier for all American composers, and far from seeing in his work the influence of those who have gone before him, I feel that Mr. Taylor's music is singularly free from reminiscent harmonies. He has been influenced of course by the masters, but who has not?

By GEORGE ADE

In one of the Regular Shops on a Spur Line of a Western Road there lived a Man who wanted to see Europe. Somebody had told him that Travelling broadens one. He had six weeks to spare, so he thought he would hustle over and get Broadened about $1500 worth.

This would-be Marco Polo wanted to hie over and look in Pity on the decaying Monarchies of the Effete East and compare them with Bird Center. He was afraid that if he waited a couple of Seasons they would be so Far Along in the Process of Decay that they would not be Fit to look at.

He was a Coal Dealer in Bird Center, but he sighted for further Honors. He wanted to be pointed out as the Fellow who had took in the Old Country. There was one Woman in Bird Center who had skipped over and back again before Europe knew anything about it. This record gave her a gosh-awful Standing in the Chautauqua. She had put in two days in dear old Rome. When the Circle began to speak of Art, she had all the other Girls spiked to the Tan Board.

The Coal Dealer had his Name stenciled on a low-browed Steamer Trunk. Also he secured a Passport which identified him as a Male American and requested Foreign Powers to overlook all Breaks as he was from Bird Center.

The Cold Shoulder

His Friends gave him a Farewell Dinner. When he boarded the Train, the entire Population was down to see him off. His Neighbors pounded him on the Back and gave him a box of Lottie Lees to smoke on the Trip, because they had heard tell that it was impossible to get a Good Segar away from Home. They told him to give their Best to George, meaning his Gracious Majesty, and to ask King Albert to take one on them, and to tell the Pope howdy. In fact, his departure was made a regular Festival of home-grown Humor, and he felt that he was something of a Public Character.

But when he boarded the Liner and came up against the Sea-Dog who has been across 47 times and liked Heavy Weather and never had been Sick, he shrank considerably. His plans for doing Great Britain and the whole Continent in one Month, did not seem to excite any burning Interest.

The voyage was not up to his large Expectations. A majority of the Passengers lay about in a Comatose Condition, rolled up in loud rugs. The others did numerous Laps around and around the Deck, like the Participants in a Six-Day Match, and spoke to no one. The Coal Dealer spent most of his Time in somebody else's Steamer Chair sucking a Lemon.

In due time he landed on Albion's Shore, as he called it in writing to the Home Paper. He had read all about the Angelo-Saxon Alliance, and the Friendly Feeling for Americans and blood being thicker than Water. He expected the Duke of Newcastle-on-Tyne to be at the Dock with a Union Jack in one Hand, a Starry Banner in the other and an Invitation to Marlborough House held in his Teeth. But the Reception Committee failed to materialize.

The Man from Bird Center rode up to London in a small Compartment with several of our British Cousins. He tried to be Sociable and dab a little more Cement on the Angelo-Saxon Alliance, but they looked out at the Landscape and did not seem inclined to mix up with one who had not been Presented. By the time the Train rumbled in among the Chimney-Pots, they had him frozen as Stiff as a Board.

The Revolt of the Angel

After he had been on the Other Side for about a Week, he learned that if he wanted to Talk to any one, he could go out and employ a Guide.

Still, there were some who recognized the Blood Relation, and they bled him. The Cabbies charged him three times the regular Tariff. He discovered that a Nasal Accent was Expensive. Somehow, every one seemed to know that he was one of those eccentric Yankees. He was regarded as a Millionaire just because he came from America and talked in a Loud Tone. He did not like to correct this flattering Impression and explain that he was merely a Bounder from Bird Center who wanted to go it Cheap. So he Let Go rather freely, and the first thing he knew his Letter of Credit began to look lop-sided.

He went against the London Tailor and bought a lot of strange Garb with Cushions in the Shoulders. The Garments did not fit him, but were said to be Durable. The Tailor said he Couldn't Wear them Out and after he returned Home, he found that he did not dare to.

After remaining in London for a week and getting fairly well acquainted with a Waiter, he struck out for the Continent, where they had been saving all their Bad Money to give it to him. He did not know how to make change. In the Excitement of Travel, he forgot his four French Sentences and became so Locoed that they did what they pleased with him. He was from the U. S. A., where the Currency grows on Bushes, and they felt at Liberty to go through him.

He was so busy scrapping over Bills, looking up Time-Tables, paying Excess Baggage and sending Illustrated Postal Cards back to Bird Center, telling what a Grand Time he was having, that he had very little Time for Sights. Still, he managed to look into 400 Cathedrals that seemed just alike and had the same damp Odor and he stood in front of several thousand Masterpieces and let on to Admire them. After a while all Scenery looked alike to him and when a Guide tried to pull him into a Gallery he kicked and clawed.

The Wanderer's Return

Wherever he stopped, a smiling Hotel Manager gave him the Sleeve across the Wind-Pipe.

After a couple of weeks though, he got used to it and would extend His Neck and take it in the Jugular without a Murmur.

He began to count the Days until he would see Bird Center again. He wanted to be back where the Teams were hitched around the Court House Square and no Building was more than 15 years old and everybody said, "Hello, Bill."

In addition to being Homesick, he was Hungry. He could not get his Steak and Onions. At the sad Round-up known as the Tabble Dote, they passed him a lot of Trimmings that he could neither Pronounce nor Assimilate. He sat in the Forum at Rome and longed for Rhubarb Pie. As he floated on the Grand Canal of Venice, he realized that Green Corn was coming into the Market back in Bird Center and the Blow nearly threw him out of the Gondola. He stood in the Majestic Presence of Mont Blanc and made an Open Offer of Seven Dollars for a Cup of Mother's Coffee without any daggoned Chicory in it.

It was a joyous Day when the Coal Dealer climbed into a Six-Day Boat headed for Sandy Hook. He had used a Cable to get 200 over and above the Letter. He didn't know whether or not his trip had Broadened him, but he knew that it had left him Short.

He realized that when he landed in New York, he would be searched as a Smuggler and then Sand-Bagged by a Taxi Bandit, but he was ready to stand for everything that wasn't done in a Foreign Language.

"The Latin Races may be on the Decline, but they didn't refuse to take All of Mine," said the Coal Dealer, as he looked back across the vasty Deep. "The only way I can get Revenge is to go back to Bird Center and talk Europe for the next 10 years."

MORAL: The Time to enjoy an European Trip is about Three Weeks after unpacking.

CALUMET'S
DOUBLE ACTION

Gives you a baking powder containing two leavening units—one begins to work when the dough is mixed, the other waits for the heat of the oven, then both units work together.

CALUMET never works until you want it to. It is the most convenient, most economical and dependable of all leaveners. You get best results in a moderate oven, but you may bake in either a hot or slow oven with safety.

Don't be a slave to single acting leaveners. Arrange your bakings to best suit your convenience. If you want hot rolls or biscuits for breakfast, you don't have to get up earlier in the morning, because you can mix the dough the night before.

If you are making a cake or any other baking—don't think that it has to be rushed right into the oven. It doesn't—you can set the dough aside for hours.

SENTER ON THE WARPATH

FORMER State Senator E. G. Senter is on the warpath again. He has been on the warpath for the most of the time for 30 years. He was an editor before he became a lawyer. His friends say he is a hornet. His enemies say that he is a constant seeker for trouble. Former Lieut. Governor T. W. Davidson is president of the State Bar association. Lawyer Senter is a member of the association. He is a member of its legislative committee. He grabbed his typewriter, just the other day and drafted a letter for the press of the state, but addressed it to the president of the State Bar association.

"All of the measures proposed by your committee and submitted to the last legislature," reads the letter, "each of which in my judgment was meritorious, went as all such measures will go in a legislature dominated by lawers of the type who go to the legislature—to the waste basket—and most of them went there without even the pretense of consideration."

After getting the above out of his system the alleged hornet of the Texas Press and the Texas Bar association continued, "in view of the fact that I joined in the indorsement of all the measures which were submitted by your committee to the last legislature, I deem it proper to say that I have written to the governor requesting that he shall not present this subject to the special session of the legislature soon to meet."

Hornet Senter must be a very wise man. This is a sample of his wisdom: "I do not believe that the legislature is qualified to act either with good intent or with technical knowledge. Most of them do not know the road to the supreme court, and yet, with virtual unanimity, they desire to keep the path so clogged and mystified that nobody else will find the way."

For the above and perhaps for other reasons the hornet is going to take the situation in his own hands and butt the engine off the track. This is his challenge to the Texas Bar association, all lawyers of Texas, including the legislative lawmakers and all friends of court reform who do not agree with him.

"It is my purpose to take the stump against the judiciary amendment which is to be voted on in August and which was designed to perpetuate the present situation and to take the stump in the next campaign and ask the people to defeat every lawyer running for the legislature."

Hornet Senter deserted the press for the bar. He invaded the legislature. He served four years as state senator. His people did not send him back. Life is a queer game. Hornets find it so.

Now this particular legal hornet after having defeated the judicial amendment and shutting all lawyers out of the legislature may desert the legal game and invade the evangelistic field. His perpetual slogan is, "On With the Battle."

FEE SYSTEM CONDEMNED

A WICHITA county grand jury recommended the nullification of the judical fee system and the cleansing of the court house of the county. Cleanliness is said to be akin to Godliness and there are many court houses in Texas that stand in need of purification. As for the judical fee system, it is a relic of barbarism and if the qualified voters of Texas will do their duty in the coming month of August they will adopt the constitutional amendment doing away with the antiquated system in the Lone Star commonwealth. This is an excerpt from the report of the grand jury of Wichita county:

"The grand jury desires to go on record as unalterably opposed to the fee system. We welcome any legislation that will curb the pernicious fee system nad put service ahead of selfishness in public office."

This declaration has the right ring to it. More than a quarter of a century ago certain lawmakers of Texas inaugurated a movement for the abolition of the judical fee system and the placing of all officials on a salary basis.

To the credit of the 40th legislature it may be said that an amendment was submitted to the people which if adopted would wipe out the system and its pernicious practices.

All this in line with a decree handed down by the supreme court of the United States declaring that judical officers were barred from getting their fees or salary from the costs in criminal cases.

Texas is moving onward and upward. This amendment should be adopted by the voters. Why a system handed down from the dark ages?

DAVIS GIVES HIS WORKERS $20 IN GOLD

EDGAR B. DAVIS is a man with a memory. He is the Santa Claus of Luling. He made a large fortune in oil. He gave a great foundation farm to the tillers of the soil for experimental work. He gave a great park to Luling. He remembered the men who worked by his side before fortune came to him.

On Easter morning he remembered the employes of the United North and South Oil companies. He is the president of the company. He gave his employes a bright new $20 gold piece as an Easter gift. Mexican laborers on the foundation farm were remembered. Each Mexican received his gold piece.

It is well to have a memory. It is well to keep it bright and fragrant. It is well to remember that flowers given to the living have a more subtle fragrance than flowers heaped upon the coffin of the dead.

EUROPEAN TAKINGS OF COTTON

ACCORDING to the New York Times the export of American cotton during March of this year was the largest ever sent out in that month.

Again, according to the Times, and this too notwithstanding the monthly value of American cotton exports has been nearly $11,000,000 above that of a year ago and $25,000,000 above 1913, before the coming of the World war.

They are buying cotton in Europe. Europeans are working their way back. This is the history of all wars. Diggers go to work. Producers go to work. They toil and they save.

As the years roll by they restore that which was destroyed by the sword or the incinerated by the touch.

ON THE TRAIL OF ROMANCE WITH KIT CARSON!

Thrilling Incidents on the Santa Fe Trail. Carson guides soldiers in pursuit of Apaches who have attacked a stage and kidnaped a white woman. Finds the Indians, but plans for a successful attack are unexpectedly frustrated. Carson's brilliant exploit in saving the lives of two traders from desperadoes. He and his men from Taos are the "Minute Men" of the great trail.

CHAPTER IV.

KIT CARSON was on one of his numerous man hunts along the Santa Fe Trail.

Guiding several companies of United States Dragoons, Carson had trailed a large band of Apache Indian marauders, through January snows, to inflict punishment for the murder of a stage load of passengers and the kidnaping of a white woman, her child and a colored nurse.

Carson had never given a more brilliant exhibition of his skill as a finder of obscure trails. Under the most difficult circumstances he had guided the soldiers to the haunts of the Apache, under White Wolf, a Jicarilla chieftain who was a scourge to the travelers and settlers along the West's first great highway.

A Ghastly Crime.

Carson's uncanny sense of perception, which only the born trailer possesses, told him that he was approaching within striking distance of his foes. Regardless of danger to himself, Carson slipped away from the camp at dawn, before the soldiers had been aroused from sleep. A few miles from the camp his attention was attracted by the action of a flock of buzzards circling in the air. The plainsman had seen these birds circling, many times before, over the camps of red men and white, and their message was not lost.

Proceeding with redoubled caution, Carson crept to the top of a ridge. In the valley beneath he saw several Indians, driving a large herd of ponies. He knew that they were night herders who were driving their charges to camp. Also, from the size of the pony herd, he knew that a large party of Indians would have to be dealt with.

Making his way back to camp, Carson reported his discovery to the officer in command, and to two scouting companions, "Uncle Dick" Wootton and Tom Tobin, experienced trappers and Indian fighters. Wootton was a giant in stature, and Tobin's short but sturdy frame was seemingly made of iron. Both scouts agreed to go ahead and find the exact location of the Indian camp, while the soldiers were making ready for the attack.

"You shore done right to observe them buzzards, Kit," said Tobin, little thinking that a few years later he would profit by Carson's example—for it was by watching the action of birds over the treetops that Tobin tracked down and killed the Espinosas, two Mexican bandits for whom Colorado and federal troops had searched in vain.

Tobin and Wootton carried out their scouting expedition perfectly. Without being seen by the Indians, they found that the tepees of the Apaches had been pitched in a thick grove of timber, not far from where Carson had seen the herders.

The atrocity for which the scouts and soldiers were burning to punish the Indians was one of the worst in the blood-stained history of the Santa Fe Trail. A coach on its way from Independence, Mo., to Santa Fe, had been attacked by White Wolf and his warriors in the canyon of the Canadian river, a gloomy place, favorable to a successful ambush. The coach had a full complement of passengers, and besides carried the government mail.

The Apaches shot the lead mules, thus stopping the coach. Then they dragged out the passengers and killed most of them, after the driver had been filled with arrows. Among the slain passengers was a Mr. White, who was traveling to Santa Fe with his wife, a small child, and a colored nurse. The next day a party from the nearest stage station found the coach still standing in the road, and the slain passengers and the driver, twelve in all, lying where they had been struck down by the Indians. Mrs. White, her child, and the colored nurse had been carried off into captivity.

Dissention—and Death.

Because of his skill and courage as an Indian fighter, and his general knowledge of the country adjacent to the trail, Kit Carson was called upon for aid. With Tobin and Wootton he willingly took the field with the soldiers, and, with characteristic modesty, deferred to the officer in charge in matters of command, never dreaming that any difference of opinion would arise.

Carson, from his long familiarity with various Indian tribes, knew that Apaches had attacked the stage, though some at first had been inclined to blame the warlike Utes, who had been giving much trouble. Also Carson knew that it was the work of none other than White Wolf. Snow had covered the tracks of the Indians by the time the soldiers took the trail, so Carson struck across country, toward the haunts of the Jicarillas. He brought the soldiers to the very edge of the Indian camp, without their presence being discovered, and then he waited for the order to charge.

To the amazement and rage of the scouts and soldiers, no such order came. The commanding officer thought it would be best to parley with the Indians, in the hope of getting them to give up their prisoners without a fight. Carson for once in his life lost his temper completely. He flew into a violent rage, after having vainly attempted to point out that delay would surely be fatal to anyone who might be held prisoner in the Indian camp. As "Uncle Dick" Wootton put it in after years:

"I knowed Kit Carson could cuss, but I never knowed he could cuss so long and hard as he did at that there Major."

The officer was obdurate, and while scouts and soldiers alike were endeavoring to make him change his mind, the command was discovered by the Indians. There was confusion in the Indian camp, but soon White Wolf's warriors began to line up in battle array. A shot was fired from the Indian ranks, and the bullet struck the Major, being deflected by a belt buckle, which saved his life. Without waiting for the command to charge, the impatient dragoons dashed forward. The Indians had hidden their women and children, the warriors remaining behind to fight. Several of them were killed or wounded, before they were driven from the camp.

Mrs. White's body was found in the Indian camp, an arrow in her breast. She had tried to escape at the first sound of fighting, but had been struck down. Her child and the nurse never were found and it is believed they were killed shortly after the attack on the stage.

Carson and the other Indian fighters on this punitive expedition were firmly of the opinion that had the charge been ordered without at attempt at parley, there would have been a good chance of finding Mrs. White alive, though no official blame was attached to the commanding officer, who had acted in accordance with what he believed was best. The fleeing Indians were followed and lost several more warriors. Also they suffered the loss of their village and many ponies, but these things did not compensate Carson and his fellow scouts for the death of the woman they had set out to save.

The services of Kit Carson were constantly in demand, for several years, in such expeditions along the Santa Fe Trail. Outlaws, as well as Indians, preyed upon the commerce of the trail from early days. The trail extended westward from Independence, on the Missouri River, and followed up the Arkansas well toward the headwaters of that stream, in what is now Colorado. Then it branched southward to Santa Fe, following the general course of the Purgtoire River, which empties into the Arkansas below the site of old Fort Bent.

Taos, long the home of Carson and his trapping companions, was not far west of the trail in Northern New Mexico. A shorter trail, known as the Cimarron cut-off, left the Arkansas at old Fort Dodge and extended southwest to Santa Fe, but water on this trail was scarce, and protection against Indians was negligible.

Kit Carson's Old Home At Taos, New Mexico, Where He Lived for Years and From Where He Sallied On Many of His Thrilling Expeditions Along the Santa Fe Trail.

Outwitting Outlaws.

Carson, when living at Fort Bent as a hunter, always guided the wagon trains of Bent and St. Vrain along the trail with their valuable loads of furs and brought them back with hardly less valuable loads of supplies and merchandise for trading with the Indians. When living at Taos, between trapping seasons he guided pack trains and wagon trains to and from Santa Fe.

He and his fellow trappers lived at Fernandez de Taos, a white settlement established near the Indian pueblos of Taos. It was here that Governor Charles Bent, one of the brothers who founded Fort Bent was killed in an Indian uprising, and from here Carson sallied on many quests of daring in which savages and outlaws figured.

One of these chivalrous excursions resulted in saving the lives and property of two traders, named Brevoort and Weatherhead, who were going to St. Louis from Santa Fe to purchase goods. They were friends of Kit Carson, who was greatly disturbed when word came to him that the traders had started from Santa Fe with a disreputable characted named Fox as guide. Carson, searching out one of Fox's friends, forced from him a confession to the effect that there was a plot afoot to rob and murder the traders when the wagon train had reached the Cimarron crossing.

Fox had enlisted several of his associates as helpers, to enable him to carry out his plot. Engaged ostensibly as drivers and caravan guards, they were in reality outlaws intent only upon murdering the honest men in the party and making away with the funds which the traders were known to carry.

Kit Carson was on the trail within an hour after he had learned of the plot, and with him were several of the old trappers of the Taos fraternity. The Cimarron crossing was three hundred miles away, and the question was: would the rescue party be able to catch up with the wagon train before the plot of the desperadoes had been carried out?

Carson and his men rode night and day, with frequent changes of horses. They caught up with the wagon train in the evening just as the traders had made their last camp before reaching the Cimarron.

When Carson and his men rode into the firelight, Fox and his desperadoes were too surprised to offer any resistance, though they knew what errand had brought these pursuers along the trail. Nor is it likely that they would have shown fight under any circumstances, as every man with Carson was a dead shot and enjoyed nothing better than a "scrimmage," whether with Indians or outlaws. Fox's hands were elevated at Carson's sharp command: "Hands up!"

Then, while the traders looked on in amazement, the men known to be in the conspiracy were lined up and bound, after their weapons had been taken from them.

When they learned of their escape from death, the traders tried to press rewards upon Carson and his men, but all he rescuers wanted were some blankets, so they could roll up under the wagons and get some sleep after their gruelling ride. Carson, some considerable time later, was prevailed upon to accept a pair of silver-mounted pistols from the traders as a reminder of their gratitude. Fox and his companions were released, after being assured that they would be courting death if they reappeared again on the Santa Fe Trail.

A Running Battle of Retaliation.

On another occasion two horse herders were shot, near Taos, by Apaches who drove off their stock. Carson, with ten dragoons, set off in pursuit. After a chase of twenty-five miles they came in sight of the Indians, twenty in number. Carson had set so fast a pace in the pursuit that the horses of several of the dragoons gave out. Carson rode on with the remainder, and soon they were near enough to engage in a running fight with the Indians, five of whom were killed. The rest of the Indians then abandoned the stolen horses and made their escape.

The commerce of the Santa Fe Trail offered rich prizes, not only to Indians but to desperadoes who were strongly organized and who would not hesitate to attack wagon trains that were poorly guarded. Spies at both ends of the trail kept the leaders informed of the situation. In consequence the services of men like Carson, who seemed to be ready to meet any emergency, were in great demand. Those who did not take the precaution of having their possessions well guarded by experienced guides frequently paid the penalty with their lives. Many graves along the Santa Fe Trail testified to the foolhardiness of those who ventured into frontier regions with an insufficient or inexperienced guard.

Many Mexican caravans were sufferers from attacks by these organized bandits. There was little or no law west of Missouri, and Mexico could not send any armed forces across the line in retaliation, so the desperadoes thrived along the Arkansas River, in what was generally known as "Indian country." One of the most startling crimes perpetrated by these outlaws was the murder of a wealthy Mexican, Don Antonio Chavez, who was traveling from Santa Fe in his private coach, followed by several wagons and a score of retainers.

The Don and his entire party were killed and $15,000 in gold taken as booty. Soldiers from Fort Leavenworth, guided by a plainsman named Hobbs, caught the desperadoes and killed several of them, the others being imprisoned. As a rule, however, such crimes went unpunished, and, until such desperadoes as Fox and his companions were driven out of the country by Carson and men of like determination, travel on the trail was full of danger.

The city of Trinidad, Colo., has put up a monument to Christopher Carson. Denver and other cities have similarly honored his memory, and such tributes come largely from Carson's work as a "Minute Man," in making the great Santa Fe Trail safe for the tides of civilizing western travel that were soon to flow over it.

Next Week—Carson, on an expedition to California has thrilling fights while recovering stolen horses from Indians. A single-handed battle with an Indian in which Kit brings the duel to a surprising climax.

Soon They Were Near Enough to Engage In a Running Fight With The Indians.

Etiology of Disease

Many of you will think that "Etiology" means the science of eating, but it does not mean that at all. It really means a study of the "causes," and this can be aptly applied to a study of the causes of disease.

There are a thousand and one systems of treatment of the various ailments, but the "Regular" physician and the osteopath, chiropractor, or any other practitioner of the healing arts, is required to study and be examined in practically the same subjects about the diagnosis of disease. All physicians, of whatever school, who are licensed, use the same systems and methods of arriving at a diagnosis. Even the report written on the death certificate, as to the cause of death, is usually the same whether made out by a licensed physician and surgeon or by an osteopath. Every physician is asked to fill out a certain form, and a small space is allowed after "Cause of Death".....
In this space the physician is ordered to write the special name of the disease which caused death. He is not allowed to generalize and write, for instance, Kidney Trouble but must state the exact form of kidney disease from which the patient suffered and which seemed to cause death. Of course, if several physicians, from different schools were each asked to make out a report, there would be, occasionally, a difference of opinion as to what to name the disease, but as a rule, the chiropractor would write down the same cause of death as the allopath.

However, if each were asked to make out a lengthy statement about all of the causes which originally produced the trouble, there would be a wide difference of opinion. If the patient died of Nephrolithiasis (Kidney Stone) they would all agree on the cause of death, but the surgeon would say that the patient should have had the kidney removed. The chiropractor would say that an impingement of the nerves going to the kidney made the kidney lose its proper power of function. They might both be perfectly right, but still the dietitian would also be correct when he stated that the original cause of the kidney stones was because the patient ate the wrong kind of food, and so, therefore, the real cause was a lack of knowledge about proper diet and habits of living.

From time to time, physicians write to me criticizing statements which I make in this column. I expect this, and am not disappointed as I realize that my theories regarding the causes of disease must be necessarily different from every other physician. My experience has taught me not to be satisfied with a discovery of any immediate cause, but to look a long ways back to the fundamental causes of the different diseases.

Each reader, whether a physician or a layman, who reads these daily articles must understand that the theories put forth are true to me from my honest observation and experience, and that I make no attempt to adhere to a set creed established by any particular medical or non-medical school or association.

QUESTION: L. B. writes: "If a person sleeps well, eats lots of fresh vegetables and fruits, etc., and not much candy or sweets, takes lots of outdoor exercise, why is it that he should have a very poor complexion?"

ANSWER: You do not explain what you mean by "poor complexion." You may have a sallow complexion which comes from biliousness, or you may be troubled with acne which is caused by intestinal poisoning.

QUESTION: M. M. writes: "Please answer through the column: A strict diet for stiff joints. I am using the oil of wintergreen treatment."

ANSWER: The oil of wintergreen treatment is sometimes effective if you will rub it on the stiff joints and cover it with cotton, holding the cotton in place by many wrappings of gauze. This will make the joints sweat, and help remove some of the toxins from that particular point. The best thing to do, however, is to use a general systematic treatment for diet for curing the rheumatic toxemia from which you are no doubt suffering.

QUESTION: Miss E. F. writes: "I have oily skin, and quite a few blackheads. Would a fast help my skin? If so what kind of a fast and for how long?"

ANSWER: A short fast is always helpful in getting rid of the cause of blackheads. If your skin is oily, it is doubtless because you are using too much milk, cream or butter.

Col. Tommy Tompkins Gets Chance To Commmand His Old Cavalry Unit

SAN ANTONIO, April 30. (AP)—Col. Tommy (S. R. H.) Tompkins, who has commanded troops for 32 years is back in command of his old love, the seventh cavalry regiment at Fort Bliss after four years as commandant at Camp Stanley here.

Col. Tompkins, one of the best known and most beloved officers of the army has risen from ranks. Thirty-two years ago he joined the seventh cavalry as a second lieutenant and he has worked his way up through various rankings until he is in command of the outfit.

His personality, his bristling whiskers, his erect military carriage which he still retains in spite of his 64 years and his unfailing sense of humor, have made him a favorite wherever there have been soldiers to command.

Four years ago he was made commandant at Stanley Camp, a post which gave him an area of 17 square miles to care for and a company of infantry as his command.

He protested loudly and humorously that he was commandant of more acres and fewer men than any other man in the service.

He was returned to the cavalry, being made commander of the seventh recently, in order to give him a taste of the life which he has learned to love in the last 32 years before his retirement this summer. Col. Tompkins has been in the army 42 years.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Tired of beauty contests on the routine lines, Wittenberg college students are out for a new pulchritude competition. The prize is this struggle will be awarded to the co-ed of Wittenberg displaying the smallest ear. Proprietors of the college bookstore will be the judges, and either may be submitted to the test. Bobs which have acted as bushels over dainty aural appendages for many semesters will be firmly brushed back and ears which have not been seen in public since the armistice will brave the light of day once more.

SHERIFF NO HIGH DIVER

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—Deputy Sheriff Will Lowe is a fine man, but he has never swam any channel, English, Catalina or Hot Springs. This placed him at a disadvantage when a prisoner he was taking to jail on a charge of moonshining jumped over a 20-foot bluff into a creek and swam to safety. Said Sheriff Will: "Who do you think I am, Gertrude Ederle?"

PASTORS URGE CHILD WELFARE

Churches Join in Observance Of Day

Churches in Wichita Falls have been requested by the Rotary club to dedicate Sunday services to child welfare work in connection with boys' week which starts Saturday and will be sponsored in the city by the club.

Three churches announced services that will be dedicated to child welfare work. In the First Presbyterian church, Dr. E. F. Grafton, pastor, will preach on the subject, "A Bill of Rights." The subject will be in connection with child welfare work. The Rev. S. Stephen McKenney of the First Methodist Church, will preach on the subject, "The Value of a Child." The Rev. W. D. Cook, of the Vale Avenue Evangelical church has chosen for his Sunday sermon subject, "How Shall We Care for the Youth of Our Country?" Other churches will mention the subject.

The Farm Servants' Union and the Farmers' Union of Mid and West Lothian, Scotland, have just agreed to reduce wages of farm servants $9.50 to $8.75 a week for men, and from $6.25 to $6 for women.

LON CHANEY AT MAJESTIC

Popular Star Plays Greatest Role in "Mr. Wu"

Lon Chaney—man of a thousand faces—has given the screen a new disguise. He has disguised a human soul instead of a human face—this is the secret of "Mr. Wu."

Chaney transformed himself into a Chinaman in the stupendous new drama now playing at the Majestic theater; he used his uncanny tricks of make-up, of course—but the significant fact was not his face, painted to portray one of another race.

His walk, his every little action—in fact, his very personality, turned Chinese for the picture. It is said that he did it by studying Chinese customs, philosophy, literature, until he actually thought from a Chinese standpoint.

After seeing "Mr. Wu" this is not difficult to believe.

It is a mighty character — this Chinese mandarin, wise in the wisdom of ages of Chinese lore; wise in the newer wisdom of a European college; a grim nemesis pursuing, with implacable hatred and the certainty of doom, the English family from which he had suffered wrong. Walker Whiteside gave the world the character on the stage—but Chaney goes much further in his delineation. He seems the living embodiment of the whole mysterious Orient.

Renee Adoree plays a Chinese girl—his daughter. Her make-up is no less complicated than Chaney's. The big scene is between Chaney and Louise Dresser, playing the English mother, in the desperate duel of wits wherein she pits a woman's intuition against the ancient wisdom of China to save her son's life.

Gertrude Olmsted plays the daughter — and looks beautiful. Ralph Forbes gives a splendidly-balanced characterization as the son, whose misdeed precipitates the mighty dramatic situation of the play.

Anna May Wong is convincing as the Chinese cousin, and Claude King as Muir, the old tutor of the mandarin, has a role he handles with consummate skill. Others in the cast are Mrs. Wong Wing, Holmes Herbert, Kao Mao and others of note.

William Nigh, who directed "The Fire Brigade," directed the spectacular new play.

Strand Showing "Matinee Ladies"

Jewel-bedecked and flirtatious dowagers known as "matinee ladies," sleek-haired, sallow youths, gigolos, ornate cafes resplendent in an artificial warmth of jazz and strident gayety.

Into this jazz atmosphere of metropolitan sophistication is woven the plot of "Matinee Ladies" in which May McAvoy and Malcolm MacGregor play leading roles showing at the Strand theater Sunday and Monday.

Weaving its way through carefree comedy and exciting drama, this lively love story is centered in an atmosphere laden with the heedlessness and abandon of a circle made up of idling, thrill-seeking women who openly court afternoon pleasure in questionable flirtations with young men of frail moral fibre.

Hedda Hopper plays a principal role as a playfully amorous "matinee lady." Richard Tucker is seen as a wealthy idler whose romantic conquests hint of villainy. Miss McAvoy is a quietly unsophisticated cigarette girl in one of the cafes. MacGregor, as the college student, embarassed by financial difficulties and in love with Miss McAvoy, momentarily yields to the temptation of a gigolo flirtation with Miss Hopper as a way out of his troubles.

The story unfolded is startling in theme and has a sparkle of mingling comedy and melodrama.

Byron Haskins directed. The scenario is by Graham Baker.

Pipe Story's No Pipe Dream.

HILLSBOROUGH, N. H.—One of Hillsborough's most celebrated characters, Mrs. Eliza Jane Gould, recently celebrated her ninety-third birthday. Friends and neighbors gathered around offering congratulations and seeking wisdom. To queries as to the cause for her longevity Mrs. Gould replied: "I've smoked a clay pipe ever since I was 12 years old. I never smoke before breakfast, but after each meal I have my pipe and thoroughly enjoy it, and I am convinced that smoking has helped to keep me healthy. When I was younger my husband objected to my pipe, and sometimes he hid it on me, but I just got another and finally he let me have my own way. Now, when all the girls are smoking, why, I'm right in style."

CHICAGO.—Alfred Jones owed a board bill. Alfred Jones paid his board bill. Alfred Jones' landlady took the bill Alfred Jones gave her in payment for his board bill, and remarked to her friend—"Why, this is a $15 bill! I never heard of a $15 bill." No one else had ever heard of a $15 bill, either, including the police, who took Alfred Jones to the hoosgow for explanations. "It was," said Alfred Jones, "merely a typographical error. I meant to make a $25 bill." The news was broken to Alfred Jones that there is no such thing as a $25 bill either. "No!" cried Alfred Jones, astonished. "When I get out I'll have to read up on this currency thing."

WAUPUN, Wis.—Behind the gray stone walls of Wisconsin's state penitentiary are 100 students enrolled as undergraduates of the University of Wisconsin. The prisoners enroll through the university's extension division and pay tuition fees just like their classmates who do not happen to be in jail. Most of them are training for a new start outside, but some take the courses to avoid boredom/under the prison regime. Warden Oscar Lee controls the study perfods, and some 700 prisoners have completed extension courses since the privilege was extended to prisoners.

Wise-Cracking Comedy of Coney Opens Run At Olympic Theater

Jimmy O'Connor was some hustler. He sold Tuesday morning newspapers on Wednesday night and gave change in Canadian coins!

That gives you an idea of the amusing characters in "Just Another Blonde," the fast-moving, wise-cracking comedy opening today at the Olympic theater, with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall featured and William Collier Jr., and Louise Brooks heading the supporting cast.

This sophisticated little yarn of a pair of Bowery gamblers and their Coney Island sweethearts has the same fresh, humorous sparkle that made "Classified," "Subway Sadie" and "Bluebeard's Seven Wives" such sensational successes.

"Just Another Blonde" tells the tale of the gamblers, pledged to a "Fifty-Fifty," "Even-Stephen" comradeship through life.

If you read the late Gerald Beaumont's story, "Even Stephen," in the Red Book you'll know what a wealth of material the players have to work with in this modern Damon and Pythias partnership.

But in case you didn't read the story, let us give you a hint—and only a hint—of the plot. There is such suspense, such a lot of action and romance in the plot, it would be a shame to spoil it, by giving it all away.

Coney Island Shown

The pair drift to Coney Island and there set up a gambling joint. Just as they are sworn to life-long friendship, so are the two girls, one a dance hall hostess, the other a shooting gallery attendant, whom they meet.

Now "Kid" Scotty, played by William Collier, decides that having a pal is pretty fine but having a wife would be better and the "sure shot" Annie Oakley, played by Louise Brooks, agrees.

But Jimmy O'Connor (Jack Mulhall) was "off" women. So the "Kid" cements their friendship by making it a "quadruple alliance" in a modern version of "The Courtship of Miles Standish" with Jeanne Cavanagh on the "Speak for Yourself, John," end.

All four of the featured players give the best performances of their young lives in this peppy tale.

"Just Another Blonde" is more fun than a trip to New York! Better make it!

THROUGH FIRE AND WATER

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.—Three setting geese refused to leave their nests when a fire destroyed a haystack beside them. Firemen, discovering their presence, swerved the hose so that they were untouched and the fire was finally controlled with the geese complacently retaining their seats.

New Thrills In Mission Picture

All the world loves to be thrilled. This is well known to motion picture producers in general and to those who specialize in "Westerns" in particular. It would seem that trepid cowboy star to undertake, trepid vowboy star to undertake. They assert that their greatest difficulty is to think of new pieces of daredevilry.

In "The Arizona Whirlwind," showing Sunday and Monday at the Mission theater, Bill Cody accomplishes the seemingly impossible—and right in front of the camera lens, at that. Believing himself to be safe from the posse which has been pursuing him, Cody has dismounted and unsaddled his horse, when, without warning, the galloping horsemen swoop down upon him. With one motion, Cody grasps his saddle and springs to the horse's bare back and gallops off. Riding at a terrific clip, he actually succeeds in saddling the horse and tightening the girth—a truly marvelous feat, and one thus far accomplished by no other rider.

GARDEN SHOWS "SILENT RIDER"

Noted Magazine Story Adapted To Screen

A courageous but inexperienced young wife, who would rather wait table for rough but kindly cowboys than submit to the humiliation of a brutal husband is the plot of Hoot Gibson's picture, "The Silent Rider," a Universal-Jewel production coming to the Garden theater Sunday.

The story is an adaptation of "The Red Headed Husband," a magazine story by Katherin Newlin Burt and deals with the maze of circumstances involving Gibson and his partner in a murder and payroll robbery and their subsequent vindication. The love theme is particularly appealing in that it shows that love of a mother for her child knows no bounds.

Blanche Mehaffey as the young wife, does by far the best acting of her short but colorful career before the screen in "The Silent Rider." This is her second picture with Gibson but from all indications will not be the last.

The picture was directed by Lynn Reynolds, who has directed a number of Gibson's best pictures. An all-feature cast supports Gibson and Miss Mehaffey.

Gibson is supported in "The Silent Rider" by Blanche Mehaffey and a strong cast of western players including Otis Harlan, Ethian Laidlow, Wendell Phillips Franklin, Arthur Morrison, Nora Cecil, Dick LaRena, Lon Poff and Dick LeStrange.

May McAvoy in "Matinee Ladies," showing at the Strand theater Sunday and Monday.

Mrs. Chaplin Routs Husband In Court Battle

LOS ANGELES, April 30. (AP)—Lita Grey Chaplin today was awarded $1500 a month alimony pending her suit for divorce from Charlie Chaplin. Superior Judge Walter Guerin made the order retroactive, the payments to start from January 10, the date on which she filed her complaint. She also was awarded $4000 for attorneys fees and $1629.12 for legal expenses.

The award was won by Mrs. Chaplin after five hours in court during which she matched wits with Gavin McNab, heading her comedian-husband's battery of attorneys, and opposing counsel engaged in a searing verbal exchange in which neither she nor Chaplin were spared.

Tidbits For Gallery

Tidbits for the consumption of the eager gallery which crowded into the court room on the heels of the fashionably gowned Mrs. Chaplin, her mother and attorneys, came with rapidity as McNab began his cross examination.

Asked if she had bought $8629 worth of clothes just two days before she left her husband, Mrs. Chaplin promptly declared this was not true. The bill, she said, represented clothes for virtually the entire time lived with the comedian. McNab asked why so many clothes were necessary.

"Well, I thought that when my husband began giving other persons diamond bracelets it was time for me to stop making my own clothes and buy some," Mrs. Chaplin shot back.

Birthday Party

The questioning next turned to a birthday party given by Mrs. Chaplin recently at which she thought she had about 30 guests. McNab wanted to know whether there were not 57 guests.

SPRING MENUS

Orange Fluff.

One tablespoon granulated gelatine, 1-4 cup cold water, 1 cup orange juice, 1 lemon (juice of), 3 egg whites, whipped cream or custard.

Soften gelatine in cold water, and dissolve by standing the dish in hot water. Dissolve the sugar in the fruit juice and strain the gelatine into it. Set in ice and water, and stir occasionally until the mixture begins to thicken. Then gradually add the well beaten egg whites and beat until the whole mixture is very light and stiff enough to hold its shape. Pile lightly in a glass serving dish or mold and serve with whipped cream or soft custard.

Nut Cookies

One-third cup butter, one-half cup sugar, two eggs, one cup flour, one level teaspoon baking powder, three-fourths cup chopped nuts, one teaspoon lemon juice.

Cream butter and add sugar and eggs well beaten. Sift flour and baking powder together. Add first mixture; then add nuts and lemon juice. Drop from a spoon on an unbuttered baking sheet, leaving an inch space between them. Sprinkle with chopped nuts and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.)

'Oh, Hell!'—That's He-Man's Way To Talk Declares Oil Head

BEAUMONT, April 30. (AP)—"Oh, hell!" or "My word," which is the better expression when a man suddenly gives vent to a sense of chagrin?

Herbert L. Pratt, president of the Standard Oil company of New York, votes enthusiastically in favor of "Oh hell."

The former quarterback and holder of the lightweight championship belt at Amherst college from 1893 to 1895 scorns the use of the English expression, "My word." He stands unafraid and unashamed in favor of the straight United States phrase, "Oh hell." He would "consider it the greatest kind of insult," he says in a letter to Seymour Ransom, newspaper editorial writer here, if he should be "found guilty of using the expression 'My word'," in a moment of chargin or disappointment.

Some weeks ago Mr. Pratt and Standard Oil company associates visited Beaumont on an inspection tour of the Magnolia Petroleum company plant. One of the events provided for their entertainment was a basketball game. Numerous photographs were taken of the oil official party while it was here.

In one of these photographs the camera caught Mr. Pratt at the moment when the Magnolia team had missed a try at field goal in the basketball game. Rooting as they were for the Magnolia team, he plainly registers an expression of disappointment in this photograph.

What exclamation escaped the lips of the president of the Standard Oil company of New York at that instant? Wagers were made on the question. One of these wagers was made between the sports editor of the Beaumont Enterprise, who is of Irish extraction, and the sports editor of the Beaumont Journal, who is of English descent.

The sports editor of English derivation insisted that Mr. Pratt's exclamation was "My word." The sports editor of the Irish extraction laid odds it was "Oh hell."

To settle the wager, they prevailed on Mr. Ransom, a college mate of Mr. Pratt at Amherst to get in touch with the oil man and find out, if possible, what Mr. Pratt did say when the photograph was taken.

Mr. Pratt's answer was a decisive victory for the Irish sports editor. He said he would consider the use of the expression, "My word" an "insult to my 10 years close association with oil refining men, to my speaking knowledge of the game of golf, let alone my college football days with its two years of boxing."

When the sports editor of English descent was shown the letter he mopped his brow and exclaimed, "My word, it's done, you know; but then it isn't being done, you know."

When the sports editor of the Irish descent read what the president of the Standard Oil company of New York had written, he said, "Oh hell, it's a shame to take the money."

BRITAIN NAMED IN SECRET PACT

England Accused of Aiding Italy in Balkans

By Universal Service.

BERLIN, April 30.—A sensational report of a secret pact between England and Italy, which, if genuine, would give Italy a free hand in the Balkans and force a radical realignment of powers in Europe, is published in Belgrade by the newspaper Wreme.

The publication of the alleged pact is arousing great interest in Europe because the Wreme is so close to the Jugo-Slavian foreign minister and because, whether the pact is a fact or not, the story marks the reported increasing bitterness in the relations between Jugo-Slavia and Italy.

Terms of Pact

According to the Wreme the alleged pact provides:

1. England acknowledges the pact of Tirana under which Italy established a protectorate over Albania, the pact being the main bone of contention between Jugo-Slavia and Italy;
2. England and Italy agree on joint action by their fleets in the Mediterranean in case of war;
3. Tangiers goes to Spain in return for which Spain is supposed to turn over the Baleric islands in the Mediterranean, off the coast of Valencia, to Italy.
4. Italy pledges support to England in the far east;
5. England supports Italy in the Balkans.

Such a pact, especially the agreement, regarding joint action of the fleets, it is agreed by some here, would force Jugo-Slavia, and especially France, to reconsider their whole position in Europe and seek new alliances to oppose the Anglo-Saxon bloc.

Jugo-Slavs Aroused

The Jugo-Slavian press continues to charge that Italy is feverishly preparing for war. The whole region around Fiume, it is charged, is like an armed camp, occupied by the facist militia which is supposed to be putting up concrete trenches and foundations for big guns. The Italian fleet is alleged to be in readiness for an alarm at Quarnero.

Facist organizations, it is charged in the Jugo-Slavian press, are freely talking of the time to come when they will free Dalmatia from "foreign barbarians."

FASHION REVUE IN FILM HERE

Esther Ralston Plays At Majestic

Esther Ralston, she of the golden hair and skin so fair (sounds like poetry but it isn't) comes to the Majestic theater next Wednesday in her first individual starring effort "Fashions for Women." In her few years before the camera Miss Ralston has been co-starred once but featured many times.

Frank Lloyd's Paramount production "Children of Divorce" co-starred Esther with Clara Bow. As for her featured roles, one has only to think of "The American Venus," "The Blind Goddess," "The Quarterback" and "Womanhood" in order to realize exactly what the calibre of her work has been.

Now, in "Fashions For Women" Paramount has surrounded her with everything one could possibly need for a successful starring debut.

And the story! Adapted from a French play "The Girl of the Hour" by Jules Furthman and Herman J. Mankiewicz—just listen!

Celeste, most beautiful model in Paris, suddenly disappears. The modiste firm she represents is distracted as their fashion show will be a total loss without her. Sam Dupont, live wire press agent who arranged her disappearing act, gets busy. Lola, a cigarette girl bearing a resemblance to Celeste agrees to substitute if Raoul de Bercy, former aviation ace, is hired as her private aviator. (This isn't exactly correct but gives one some slight idea of what it's all about.)

Then, the big night arrives and so do Celeste and a former admirer who mistakes Lola for his old flame and attempts to make love to her. Raoul by this time, madly infatuated with the girl, sees red and—the fun begins! But that's far from being all. There's a gorgeous fashion revue in which Hollywood's fifteen most beautiful girls appear.

EXHAUST GAS SPRING DANGER

Overhauling Work Brings Threat of Poison

Proper and sufficient ventilation of the air in garages is the one thing which will eliminate entirely all danger from carbon monoxide gas, according to Bob Cornelson of McFall Brothers, local Dodge dealer.

"Emphasis has always been placed upon the greater danger from carbon monoxide poisoning in the winter months," says Mr. Cornelson. "While it is undoubtly true that more lives are lost from carbon monoxide poisoning in the winter than at other seasons, the danger is just as great at all times if automobile engines are permitted to run in small garages without proper ventilation.

All-Year Danger

"With the coming of spring many automobile owners will tune up their own cars for the summer. Much of this work will be done out-of-doors but in many instances it will be done in the owner's garage. Because of the danger from motors running inside of buildings it is timely to again point out the precaution which should be taken.

"Automobile manufacturers realize fully what this gas might do to workmen if it were permitted to contaminate the air in the factories. At most plants the air is kept free of the deadly gas by the system of fans or blowers which carry all exhaust fumes from the motors outside of the buildings.

"Probably the worst spot in automobile factories is at the ends of the final assembly lines. Here the motors are started prepatory to driving away the assembled cars under their own power. Because of this much more carbon monoxide is generated than is the case after the motors have been tuned up and operated for some time.

"Were only one motor running at a time the fatal gas would not be liberated in dangerous quantities. In large plant ssuch as Dodge Brothers, however, the gas would soon make work at the end of the lines impossible if it was permitted to contaminate the air.

"Dodge Brothers main plant has three parallel assembly lines, each separated from the others by only a few feet. The motors of cars at the end of each line are running simultaneously and each motor is throwing off the poisonous gas.

Blowers Used

"A very simple device is used at this spot to protect the workmen. One end of a 30-inch rubber hose is attached to the motor exhaust and the other end drags in a narrow trough in the assembly line. The trough is about 50 feet long and is connected with a suction blower. The exhaust gases from the running motors are liberated in the trough through the loose end of the hose. The suction from the blower draws all the exhaust gases from the trough, discharging them into a system of pipes leading to the roof of the factory.

"Another feature of the system is interesting in that it illustrates how simple devices are used in the Dodge Brothers factories to save time and labor. The end of the hose which drags in the trough is fitted with a long bolt which projects about four inches. At the end of the trough is a slotted piece of steel. As the car is driven away from the line the bolt catches in the slotted piece of steel and the resulting pull frees the other end of the hose from the motor exhaust pipe."

Buick Names New Sales Head

Announcement was made today by C. W. Churchill, general sales manager of the Buick Motor company, of the appointment of Arthur H. Sarvis to the office of assistant sales manager. Mr. Sarvis was engaged in newspaper work until 1913, when he became sales manager of the Flint Varnish and Color Works. He entered the employ of the Buick Motor company in 1919, and for the past several years has been working under the general sales manager as sales service manager, during which period he aided in the development of the present world-wide Buick authorized service facilities, which are available in some four thousand towns and cities in the United States, and in practically all foreign countries.

In announcing the appointment, Mr. Churchill issued the following statement:

"Mr. Sarvis' wide experience in sales work for the Buick Motor company has fitted him for the duties of his new position. He has a wide acquaintance throughout the Buick dealer organization in the United States, and through his close contact with the men in the territory he has become familiar with their sales problems. His experience will be of value to the Buick Motor company in the handling of the work of the sales department."

CANADA RUINS BOOZE TRAFFIC

New Law Cripples Business Of Rum Runners

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Canada has struck a crushing blow at the giant international rum ring, backed by powerful financial interests on both sides of the border, which for several years has been flooding the United States with illegal liquor.

This announcement was made by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews today in interpreting the operation of an amendment to the Canadian customs laws requiring heavy bonds on liquor shipments from Canada by water. This amendment was adopted by the Canadian parliament at the session just ended.

Rum Trade Crippled

Chippling of the rum smuggling traffic on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States, where ships unloaded secretly after clearing for South America, Cuba and Mexico, was foreseen at the treasury as a result of the new requirements.

Most of the smuggled liquor was shipped into Canada from the British Isles under the "in transit" provision of the law. As liquor to be re-exported it could be held in Canada without payment of customs duties.

"Under the old law liquor could be loaded at Halifax or Vancouver for South America, for example," said Andrews. "Then the liquor could be landed in this country and the vessel could return to the Canadian port with a fake landing certificate purporting to show delivery of the cargo in South America.

"The amendment will require the ship owner to post with the Canadian government a bond of double the value of the cargo. The cargo must be landed at the port of destination and a bona fide landing certificate produced before the amount of the bond will be refunded."

Law Is Severe

Re-enforcement of the Canadian law will be effected by a check-up on shipments at both ends. American consuls reported whether each rum ship actually reaches her South American or other port and unloads her liquor cargo.

Andrews attributed the amendment to a recommendation believed to have been made by the Royal Canadian commission. This body has been investigating operations of the ring, with its fleets of vessels, motor trucks and automobiles, since last August.

CHRYSLER

FOURTH IN DOLLAR VOLUME OF SALES BY REASON OF PUBLIC ENDORSEMENT

WHEN Chrysler came three years ago, it was felt in the industry that types and styles of engineering design, appearance and performance, were so set and established that the public would never flock to follow a new standard.

Yet almost instantly the public recognized in that first Chrysler a new vision and a new measure of value.

This initial interest has since swelled into a veritable tidal wave of enthusiastic acceptance, which in the last six months of last year and the first few months of this, has completely overturned the previous alignment in the industry and lifted Chrysler up from 27th to 4th place.

In volume of sales Chrysler now stands next to a large independent manufacturer and two units of a corporate group.

The mere fact itself is so tremendous and so impressive — so clearly an expression of public choice—so directly due to the discernment of the average man and woman in judging finer appearance, performance and value—that there is no need to draw a moral.

Once more people have proven that they will always seek out the individual operator who disregards outworn principles and practices and brings them something unmistakably new, unmistakably progressive, and unmistakably superior in service.

Chrysler is now fourth in money volume of sales —preceded only by that other great individual manufacturer who gave the world standardized quantity—as Walter P. Chrysler introduced Standardized Quality—and two individual units of the largest combination in the industry.

PONTIAC SIX IN NEW PLANT

Machinery Moved Without Halting Production

PONTIAC, Mich., April 30.—The recent removal of the Pontiac six production machinery from the Oakland factory to the new $10,200,000 Pontiac plant was a vivid illustration of the length to which efficiency has been developed in the automotive industry. Though 375 large machines had to be disconnected, hauled almost a mile to their new locations, and re-installed there, the move was accomplished without the slightest interruption of production, either of Oakland sixes or of Pontiac sixes.

Until the completion of the new Pontiac plant, the Pontiac six was manufactured in the Oakland factory, where it was born little more than a year ago. Almost 100,000 Pontiac sixes were produced in the Oakland plant. However, as a demand for the Pontiac increased, more and more space was required for the machinery to manufacture it, as well as to meet Oakland's own increasing demand.

So thoroughly did Oakland and Pontiac production machinery fill the Oakland factory that a visitor would have thought it impossible to extricate a single machine without shutting down the entire plant. Scientific planning, however, enabled engineers to carry out their huge task without interfering with the production schedules of either car.

When the date for the move was set, A. A. Miller of the maintenance department carefully plotted every detail of the move in advance. He prepared charts listing every machine and stating its specifications, so that proper facilities might be provided to handle each unit. He ascertained from the foremen in various production departments that each had sufficient stock on to supply the assembly lines while the move was in progress. From the traffic department he obtained freight cars, a locomotive, and a clear track from the Oakland plant siding to the covered spur within the Pontiac plant.

Three crews of six men each were appointed for the day shift, and three more for the night. Each man was instructed just what to do, so that no time would be lost in duplicated motion when the actual move started. Tractors, hoists, and specially designed "dollies" on which to trundle the huge machines were ready far in advance. Then with every preparation complete, the movers awaited the signal to start.

When that signal arrived, no time was wasted in ceremony. First an electrician cut the wires of the first machine slated to go. Then a pipefitter disconnected water and oil lines of that unit. Almost before the wondering operator could grasp what was going on, his machine was jacked up onto the waiting dolly and towed off by a tractor to the waiting flat-cars. The first intimation some of the operators received that the move was under way was the sudden stopping of their machines in mid-operation as electricians snipped the wires.

Loading of freight cars went on rapidly, with three crews working. The short haul to the new plant and re-installation of the machines there, completed the job. This was comparatively simple, due to adequate space and lighting the presence of facilities for handling the heavy equipment. Removal from the Oakland plant grew easier as it progressed, for the crews operated inward from the edges, constantly gaining space in which to work.

Two days' work proved that the crews could keep well ahead of the schedule laid down for them. At the end of that time they had moved 11 carloads, totaling 440 tons—the amount of work prescribed for 90 hours instead of 48.

Included in the moving job is a rearrangement of machinery in the Oakland plant itself. One of these units, a big milling machine, weighs 55 tons. The moving crew prefer large machines to small ones, explaining that the satisfaction of seeing a big hole compensates for the effort involved in creating that space.

Today the 375 machines uprooted from the Oakland factory are performing their accustomed operations in the new Pontiac plant, and there are hundreds of new machines, necessitated by the vastly-increased Pontiac six demand, to help them. The space they vacated will be filled with new machinery for Oakland six production.

Corb Now Has Two Hats.

PONCA CITY, Okla.—Corb Sarchet of this town has got himself a new hat. This makes two new hats in a month for Corb which is a record for this part of the country. The United States senate is responsible for Corb's newest top piece. Like this Corb, who is secretary of the Ponca City Chamber of Commerce, went to Washington recently to urge upon congress the vital necessity of making Ponca City an airmail stop. He bought a new hat for the occasion. While he was visiting the senate, that august body went into executive session and all visitors, including Corb, were ushered out. Corb left his hat behind. When he sought to return for it, stalwart attendants barred his way and Corb had to buy a new hat or go around bareheaded, which is not his habit. But the senate made amends. Next day Corb's older hat was returned to his hotel by messenger.

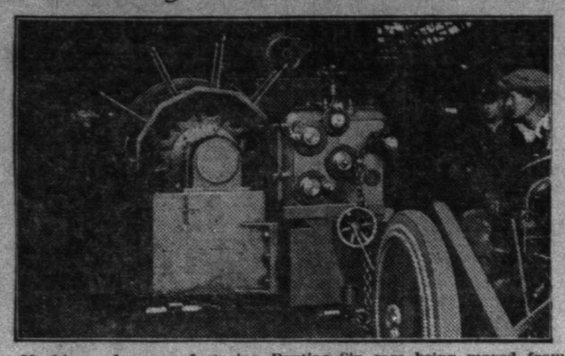

Stern Judge Judges Self.

DANVILLE, Va.—A. B. Dabney, of Charlottesville, Va., was late 20 minutes for the opening of corporation court here. Judge A. B. Dabney of Charlottesville, promptly fined A. B. Dabney $5.00 for his tardiness, at the rate of 20 cents a minute. A. B. Dabney explained for the benefit of the court that his car had broken down, but Judge A. B. Dabney insisted that there could be no excuse. Even when sympathetic lawyers pleaded that A. B. Dabney's apology be accepted, Judge A. B. Dabney sternly declined to remit the fine, and the fact that Judge A. B. Dabney and A. B. Dabney were one and the same person made no difference, said Judge A. B. Dabney. "I would fine anyone else for tardiness," Judge A. B. Dabney declared sternly. "I can make no exception in my own case."

Jailbreak? Of Corset's Easy.

BOSTON.—Marion Brazier, held here under bond for escaping from jail at Hackensack, N. J., told her keepers here that breaking jail in Hackensack is as simple as rolling off a log. She concealed a file in the place in her where a steel rib had formerly been sewn, and the rest was just a matted of awaiting the right opportunity, she said.

Hupp Engineer Explains Importance Of Proper Balancing of Crankshaft

By FRANK E. WATTS,
Chief Engineer, Hupp Motor Car Corporation.

"Perfectly Balanced Crankshaft," is an oft repeated phrase in automobile advertising. "What does it mean?" asks the reader. "It is important?" he also asks, and "How is it done?"

The crankshaft and flywheel are the heaviest rotating parts of a car. If they are not perfectly balanced it is easy to see that vibration will result, and since the tendency to vibrate increases as the square of the speed it is important to secur perfect balance to have a smooth running engine at high speed.

It is comparatively easy to secure an almost perfect balance in the flywheel because its form is simple and if the balance is not right when first tested after making the correction is a simple matter.

With a crankshaft such as in the Hupmobile straight eight, it is not so simple a matter because the crankshaft extends the whole length of the engine, having eight separate crank pins located on four different sides of the shaft and at eight different points along its length.

The old way of balancing a rotating part was to let it rest on level "ways" to see if it would roll evenly or if there was one point that would always come up. If the latter was the condition metal would be removed from the lower side till even rolling was secured. This results in what is known as "static balance."

But an object as irregular in form as a multiple cylinder engine crankshaft may be in perfect static balance and still cause vibration when rotating at high speed. This is because there may be a heavy point at one end of the crankshaft counterbalanced by another heavy point in the center or even at the opposite end. The shaft will then roll perfectly on the ways but when rotating at high speed will tend to bend outward at each of these heavy points and will set up a vibration in the whole engine that can be noticeably disagreeable to the occupants of the car.

Every Hupmobile crankshaft is not only put in static balance but is further tested at high speed in a very delicate machine that shows up any tendency to vibrate at high speed. Not only does it show any defect in what is known as "dynamic balance" but it is provided with an ingenious counterbalancing device which can be set to neutralize the lack of balance somewhat as you set the weight on a beam scale to counterbalance an article being weighed. This shows just where and how much metal should be removed to bring the crankshaft to perfect dynamic balance.

When the indicated correction has been made, the crankshaft is again tested at high speed and it must show perfect dynamic balance on an extremely delicate dial indicator within very close tolerances, just as the diameter and roundness of the bearings must be accurate within .0005 inch, in order to pass inspection.

The crankshaft is subjected to laboratory tests for hardness and toughness. It is also given many different inspection tests with micrometers, dial indicators, and special gauges of great accuracy. All crankshafts are heat treated to show a minimum elastic limit of 70,000 pounds per square inch.

Maney Has Wings, and He Knows It.

CLEVELAND, O.—David Cass paid off an $8000 note to Benjamin Braver the other day. The two men went to the Peoples State bank and Braver cashed Bass' check for $8000, receiving the money in eight $1000 bills. Then they went on their way. Two blocks from the bank Braver stopped in a crowd to watch a store window demonstration. He was nudged and elbowed, and thought nothing of it, until slipping his hand into a trouser pocket he found no $8000, and for that matter, no pocket. A smart thief had cut away the entire pocket, while Braver was being shoved around in the crowd. Police are hunting the slasher, but with little hope of success.

To Scalp Protection—75c

DALLAS, Tex.—Records of the old Texas recently unearthed disclose that the pioneers of the Lone Star state had a system of insurance which protected them if in Pickett, contemplating a trip into place themselves in a position to be thoroughly scalped by some playful Redskin. One of the records shows that in 1870, one B. S. Pickett, contemplating a tripp into west Texas, deposited the sum of 75 cents for "frontier protection." Old timers recall that frontier protection was also known colloquially as "scalp insurance," and provided extra compensation in the event of any untoward happening at the hands of Indian marauders.

Guayaquil, Eucador, which in 1918 was considered one of the worst yellow fever spots in the world, has not had a case of the dread disease since 1919, when scientists from the United States introduced methods of elimination.

FOOTLOOSE PUSS RIDES BRAKEBEAMS.

CHICAGO.—Weary Willie is the name of a cat. Weary was so christened by a Pullman porter when he was escorted into the dining car and fed a real meal for the first time since the Union Pacific flyer left Ogden, Utah. Weary Willie climbed on board the train at Ogden, settled himself on the trucks, and refused to be moved until the run to Chicago was completed. His normally black coat was gray with dust as his protector took him into the dining car; but in true gentleman fashion he insisted on washing up before he ate. The suggestion that Weary be charged with vagrancy was abandoned when the Pullman porter undertook to be responsible for him in the future.

JAIL HAS LAST LAUGH.

HACKENSACK, N. The other day Mrs. Brazier was captured in Boston and returned to Hackensack. She was greeted at the jail entrance by a hearty burst of laughter from the assembled jail attendants.

NEW RECORDS IN STUDEBAKER

Commander Wins Novel Test At Washington

Climbing in high up a series of 20 inclines to the top of a ten-story Washington, D. C. garage in the record time of one minute and twenty-nine seconds, is an additional accomplishment of the Studebaker Commander, the car which recently set five world records when it traveled 5,000 miles in less than 5,000 minutes.

In the novel Washington climbing test, the Commander was driven by King Richardson of the Joseph McReynolds company, Washington distributors for Studebaker, up a series of twenty steep ramps (inclines) in the newly-opened $1,000,000 Capital Garage. Five thousand people saw the race, watched the Studebaker out-speed and out-climb the rest of the field of ten competitors. When the Commander reached the top floor of the garage, it was loudly cheered.

Studebaker's nearest competitor in the race made the run in one minute and thirty-four seconds, five seconds behind the time of the Commander. The climb covered a distance of over 1,500 running feet. The floor levels each measured forty-five feet of turning and the twenty ramps were each twenty-eight feet long. The cars were driven in what was practically equivalent to a constant spiral, an operation which tested both the skill of the drivers and the speed and power of the cars.

An Erskine Six was also entered in the contest and made the climb in one minute and forty-one seconds, far ahead of many competitors.

Hansen Ely Jr., manager and director of the Capital Garage in which the test was made, was the official timekeeper of the contest and he personally rode with each of the contestants to make sure that no one slipped the clutch or changed gears.

New Studebaker Model

New Studebaker custom tourer, one of the new additions to this popular line of automobiles, which was recently announced by the Studebaker Corporation of America.

New Model Issued By Studebaker

A new Studebaker Custom Tourer was announced this week by the Studebaker Corporation of America, according to D. L. Fritz, local Studebaker dealer. Equipped with a custom tailored top of Carrco duck that folds into a trim flat boot, the new Tourer represents the height of the sport motif in open cars.

A new and exclusive feature of the Custom Tourer is a convenient method of storing the side curtains. Tilting the back seat forward, discloses a concealed compartment in which a heavy fabric envelope can be slipped to store the curtains. This method not only keeps the curtains far more accessible than under the seat, but also affords them complete protection from dust and dirt.

The low, straight lines of the new Studebaker Tourer reflect the abundant power of the Standard Six motor, which, based on the ratings of the Society of Automotive Engineers, is the most powerful engine used in any car of the size and weight of the Custom Tourers.

From the graceful figure of Atlanta on the radiator to the smartly inclined tire carrier, the new Tourer is a thoroughbred sport car. The graceful low-hung body is a symphony of gleaming brown lacquers. A deep rich brown above the full length belt contrasts with the lighter color below. Pin striping of a warm red color in the moulding emphasizes the beauty of the combination.

Nickled supports for the one-piece windshield and nickeled top hangers, with natural wood finish for the top bows and steering wheel add a distinguishing smart touch. The special material from which the top is made is particularly adapted to the new Custom Tourers, for it will stand the repeated folding that takes place when the top is lowered without showing wrinkles or wear.

Standard equipment on the tourer includes: Bumpers, front and rear; disc wheels; balloon tires; four-wheel brakes; two-beam headlights, controlled from the steering wheel; rear view mirror; automatic windshield cleaner; coincidental lock to steering and ignition; rear traffic signal lamp. Instruments artistically arranged in an oval under glass on the instrument board, and indirectly illuminated, are engine thermometer, hydrostatic gasoline gauge, speedometer, ammeter and oil pressure gauge.

Flashing acceleration, rakish lines and finish comparable to special-built motor car creations make the Standard Six Custom Tourer an outstanding sport car value at its low price of $1165 f. o. b. factory.

The Studebaker Custom Tourer can also be obtained for seven passengers. It is identical with the five-passenger tourer except in color and seating capacity. It is finished in two shades of blue, a deep blue below and a lighter blue above, separated by a light grey pin stripe. The folding auxiliary seats are covered with blue Spanish grain leather. The Studebaker Custom Tourer, for seven, lists at $1245 f. o. b. factory.

GRAHAM BROS. HAULING NITRO

Trucks Specially Equipped For Work in Fields

If you travel on the by-roads through the great fields of Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas, or those in other sections of the country, you are likely to meet trucks on whose sides large letters spell NITRO-GLYCERIN. If you are prudent, you will pass by cautiously for this truck probably contains 300 or 400 quarts of the most concentrated of all explosives.

Transportation of nitro-glycerine, an essential in the oil fields for the "shooting" of wells to start the flow of oil ranks as one of the most hazardous of occupations. It presents especially difficult problems due to the passage of laws which prohibit vehicles containing the substance from running on highways or within two miles of any city or town. Other recent laws prohibit its transportation by rail. The entire production therefore must be handled by automobile or truck.

The passage of such drastic laws has made these trucks seek the by-roads, many of which are almost impassible. Trucks of the most rugged structure and exceptional roadibility are required to stand the abuse. In fact, if anything does go wrong, the explosion that usually follows demolishes everything within range.

Three of the largest manufacturers of nitro-glycerine have selected Graham Brothers trucks for this perilous work, thus paying high tribute to the dependability and staunch construction for which these trucks are noted. Their ability to "hold the road," due to correct balance in design, the easy riding qualities and adequate power for the hardest going make them especially adaptable to this type of hauling.

The Graham Brothers trucks have been fitted with special bodies with felt-lined compartments to hold from 30 to 40 ten-quart cans of nitro-glycerine. Here again, Graham Brothers has demonstrated exceptional ability to suit the buyers' needs. Through its special equipment division, experienced transportation engineers are ready to study the user's problems and make recommendations, without charge, as to the best body design for the job, whether it is to carry nitro-glycerine or milk

Low Center of Gravity Adopted In Willys - Overland Models

A conspicuous feature noted in the 1927 line of Whippet and Willys-Knight motor cars is the adoption of the low center of gravity construction for all the Willys-Overland products. The trend to this style of design, factory officials declare, followed the success and public acceptance of the low swung body style, first adopted by the Whippet which made its initial appearance last June. Not only has this type of construction been continued by the Whippet but it also features the 1927 Willys-Knight line of sixes.

The advantage in this type of automobile construction, according to Willys-Overland engineers is to provide a smooth riding quality not obtainable in types where the bodies are high in the air thus producing the inevitable top sway. Engineers claim that with a low center of gravity, typical of the 1927 Willys-Overland products, top sway and back swinging are entirely eliminated, providing a maximum of comfort for the occupants.

Another advantage is cited by Willys-Knight officials in pointing out the merits of low center of gravity construction. They contend that this feature gives the car unusual road stability regardless of conditions, and tends to eliminate vibration. This, they assert, adds not only to the pleasure of driving but increases the life of the car, provides a safety and reduces the repair expense that comes where the type of construction places an extra heavy duty on the mechanism.

Willys-Overland officials declare that in the adoption of this type of construction for their products, present indications are than in a short time this style of car will be universally demanded by the motorwise public and that Willys-Overland, in sensing this trend for a more serviceable type of car, has kept a step ahead of other American automobile manufacturers.

PACKARD NOVELTY

Built into the paneled back of the front seat on Packard cars are two glove compartments, a parcel space and a compartment for all tools, the latter making it unnecessary to lift the front seat cushion to get at the tool kit. Each compartment is fitted with a lock.

DODGE SEDANS

Ease and Comfort Keynote In New Machines.

The general body designs of Dodge Brothers sedan with its low swung appearance embodies the characteristics of the better known Eurepean custom built bodies.

The roof of this sedan body is about eye high to the average man and yet body development is such that there is all the head room that could be desired.

The design and arrangements of the seats confirm to the general contour of the body, the seat cushions being low in the body and tilted upward to give comfort of a lounging chair to the occupants.

The seats are also equipped with back supports of the lazy cushion type so that the body is supported well up to the shoulders.

This is a marked importance at the present time when the rush toward lower prices of motor cars has caused a general adoption of designs which naturally entail the use of straight backs and narrow seat cushions.

Seats are so placed in relation to the windows that the vision of the passengers and driver is never obstructed.

The stering column is also tilted at a comfortable angle so that the driver rests as easily in the car as any of the passengers. Roominess of the front seat allaws also, a change in driving posture, which is so necessary to the comfort of the long mileage driver.

Oil Pump Novel Packard Feature

A novel feature of both the Packard Six and Eight engines is the arrangement of the oil pump, which, with the filter, is located at the lowest part of the crank case. The bottom portion of the pump forms an inverted chamber over the well. For lubricating oil to enter the pump it must first enter the well round the bottom of the skirt and then pass upward through the screen before it reaches the inlet. That is designed to remove water which might collect in the well after the engine has stood overnight. The small quantity of water apparently moves upward, reaches some of the heated surface and is vaporized.

Quality Cheapest, Tire Firm Finds

The continuing decrease in imports of crude rubber this year, following a decrease in imports amounting to 72,500 tons last year, is evidence that substitutes for good rubber continue to be used in large quantities by American tire manufacturers, says a bulletin of the General Tire and Rubber company to the trade.

The Rubber association has just announced that March importations of rubber totalled 35,078 tons as compared with 42,677 tons for the same month last year, and that imports for the first three months of 1927 were 105,000 tons, a decline of 6302 from the same period of 1926. All figures in the association's report represent long tons, of 2200 pounds each.

Under the guise of conservation, many tire makers put great quantities of second-hand, or reclaimed rubber into their tires last year, the amount being represented approximately by the fact that the rubber imports in 1926 were 72,500 tons less than the year before, in the face of a growing business and demand for tires. The use of these substitutes accounted for the selling drives placed behind "secondary" or bargain lines of tires even by some manufacturers who had hitherto borne a good reputation for quality.

Although much of the public paid for a lesson in the difference between cheap and quality tires last year, it is evident that some manufacturers did not, as is reflected in the story of smaller rubber imports thus far in 1927, and reclaimers of rubber goods that have already lived one life of useful service are busier than ever. Their task is rendered more difficult by the fact that the rubber goods they now seek to reclaim now already contains reclaimed.—That is, rubber that has lived not only one life of work, but two, so the resultant product is of very doubtful usefulness indeed.

Pure rubber alone, of course, has no commercial value. It must be mixed with sulphur, first, in order that steam may make it a stable and not a mere, sticky substance. After that mixture come others, to give hardness, toughness, tensile strength, resistance to abrasion, desired color, etc. And it is also possible to compound a small amount of good reclaimed with a large amount of first-class crude rubber without damaging the product, but the percentage of this admixture must be small.

The extent to which the use of rubber substitutes is growing should be alarming to the consumer, and the evidence is that this year will be another clearing house time between quality and substitute goods, such as that by which the General Tire and Rubber company benefitted in 1926.

RUG RAID FOR LADIES' AID.

FLUSHING, L. I.—The Ladies' Aid society of the First Methodist church here planned a rummage sale in a vacant store on Main street to raise funds for Flushing's needy families. Mrs. John Santle, an enthusiastic aide for the Ladies' Aid, telephoned that she had a bundle the Ladies' Aid could sell at their rummage sale, if it would to collect it. A male aide of the Ladies' Aid volunteered to do the chores, went around to Mrs. Santle's house, and returned with 13 rugs. "Isn't Mrs. Santle the most generous creature in the world?" cooed the Ladies' Aid. But it wasn't long before Mrs. Santle was on the phone again. Said she: "I fear your aide, aided by my maid, who put a lot of rugs together in a bundle for the cleaner, has gone off with some of my most costly Belchistans. Please aid me." The Ladies' Aid aided Mrs. Santle, and the male aide carried the rugs back again. The rummage sale was a huge success.

HOBOKEN, N. J. — William Stephens stood up in traffic court before Judge Carsten and told a lie when he said that his car, in collision with a truck, had been stolen from him just before the accident. To make the story good, he had telephoned the police that the car was missing. Later he phoned again to say he had recovered it. But the police had another notion, being of suspicious nature. They told the judge that Stephens had made up the theft story to escape blame for the accident. Judge Carsen agreed and said: "Ten dollars fine, not for the accident, but for lying about it." Stephens is now reading the life of George Washington with much earnestness.

NASH
Leads the World in Motor Car Value

There is a DIRECT force-feed oil line to each and all of the 7 bearings and to the cylinder walls to guarantee positive lubrication.

Nash 7-bearing crankshaft takes longer to build—costs more

It takes longer to build a 7-bearing motor than it does to build one with only 3 or 4 main bearings.

There are at least 3 more bearings to grind and polish. [Nash has considerably more bearing surface than other six-cylinder motors in the Nash price field with 4-bearing crankshafts.]

There are at least 3 more bearings to align.

And there are at least 3 more bearings to check for proper clearances.

But the Nash 7-bearing crankshaft eliminates the "whip" which loosens bearings and piles up expensive shopwork on motors with fewer crankshaft bearings.

Obviously, it costs more in time and money to build the Nash 7-bearing crankshaft.

Why then does Nash build it, when other manufacturers still use engines with fewer bearings?

The answer is that Nash owners have come to expect Nash to be definitely better than any other car they could buy at the Nash price.

And 7 bearings alone produce superlative power-smoothness and power-quietness.

Before you select your new motor car, drive a Nash and see how smooth it is at high speeds, how powerful and effortless its pick-up at every speed.

Latest Facts from Science, Mechanics and Invention

Dishes Washed by Old-Time Methods May Appear Clean, but the Microscope Reveals That They May Also Be a Disease Danger as a Breeding Ground for a Great Quantity of Harmful Bacteria.

How Science Rescues the Housewife from the Evils of Dishwashing

Four Examples of Bacterial Cultures of Dishwater, Mops, Towels and Supposedly "Clean" Dishes. I. Gas Bubbles and Characteristic Germs Found on Dishes in a Pan Although Dried in the Air. II. Culture Taken from a Dish Mop Showing It Covered with Germs. III. Bacteria Found on Brushes and Towels Used in Washing Dishes. IV. Germs Found on Dishes Washed in a Pan and Dried with an Unboiled Towel.

DISHWASHING not only has always been the housekeeper's bugbear, and the dishpan a symbol of household drudgery, but they are also the last stand of primitive household methods. And for this reason every housewife should be glad that scientific processes are being applied to banish dishwashing, the nightmare of the kitchen, with the invention of time-saving devices to ease this daily burden.

Women have long complained loudly about the evils of dishwashing, but today, however, that knight-errant, Science, has come into average homes to rescue beleaguered housewives. Scientific studies of dishwashing have been completed and results are fully described in The Forecast Magazine by Mollie Amos Polk. At last experts have proved that there is one method of washing dishes which combines three essential virtues. It is quick, easy and—most important of all—scientifically sanitary.

Perhaps you think, madam, that your dishes are clean? Ah, yes, they have been scrubbed in a pan of hot water and soap, well rinsed, dried by fresh towels and now stand shining and spotless on your shelves. To your critical eye they are clean. But to the infinitely more sensitive eye of the microscope they may be quite otherwise. Yes, those very plates, gleaming from their hot bath, may be the haunt of deadly bacteria. A horrible thought! But, deny it all you please, if you cannot make a laboratory examination of your dishes by means of a powerful magnifying lens, you can have no idea of the actual truth about them.

You can, however, safely trust the findings of unbiased investigators who have made such microscopic examination of supposedly clean dishes. You can be sure of the bacteriologists of Pratt Institute. With that scrupulous care characteristic of scientific work, the class in bacteriology, under the direction of Miss Alva L. Johnson, has made a complete study of dishwashing. They are ready to tell you what they discovered. They are prepared to teach you how to solve the problems of sanitation, time-saving and labor-saving.

The class began with the idea of determining only the best method of washing. But soon they saw that if the experiment were to have full value, a study of various methods of drying dishes would have to be included. The class washed the first batch of dishes by the most common method, in a dishpan, using plenty of hot water, soap and mop. When the plate seemed to be perfectly clean it was rinsed in hot, but not boiling, water and the bacteria from it were transferred by means of a sterile swab to a dish of agar. Then they were protected and permitted to grow for two days. On the gelatine-like surface of agar bacterial growth is very rapid. After the allotted forty-eight hours the agar plate was placed under the microscope and photographed. The result may be seen in Plate I. The air bubbles shown in the plate indicate that the bacteria are of the harmful variety, and the whole picture is surely one to disgust the careful housekeeper.

Not all the bacteria present on this plate and the plates of the succeeding experiments were harmful. Some were helpful to man, others harmless. A third class were of the kind which cause food to spoil, and a fourth made up of varieties that cause disease to man.

To eliminate the latter it was necessary to find a method that would leave the plate sterile. Perhaps the mop was at fault? The class shook the mop over a dish of fresh agar and the agar was permitted to stand for one day; growth was so rapid that the photograph was taken then to prevent the solid covering of the surface. Plate II shows conclusively that the ordinary dish mop or cloth may be very dangerous, indeed, a veritable breeding ground for all sorts of bacteria. What was the answer—to discard it? But how about clinging gravy and bits of egg that will not disappear with mere rinsing in hot soapy water, or films of grease that must be scrubbed off? Some sort of dish mop seems to be necessary to the dish-washing ensemble! It is well known that boiling will destroy bacteria and so the mop was boiled. Touched to a clean plate of agar it then left no trace of bacterial growth and the class recorded its first observation: Use a dish mop if you must, but boil it.

The second phase of the experiment then began. Had the unboiled mop been the sole cause of the rich bacterial growth shown in Plate I, or had the pan contributed its bit? The class tried washing the dishes in a pan with plenty of hot water and soap and the boiled mop, but many bacteria still appeared on the plates after each experiment. It was found, however, that washing down the sides of the pan and changing the water frequently helped to cut down the number of bacteria and that discarding the pan entirely and washing the dishes under running hot water with lots of soap and a boiled mop left the dishes entirely clean.

So much for the washing. The class then turned to various methods of drying. A plate, washed as the first part of the experiment had taught them to wash it, was dried by the class with an ordinary dish towel, one that had been used around the kitchen all day without being washed. The result may be seen in Plate III. Plate IV shows the result of wiping an absolutely clean plate with a towel that had been washed out with soap and water, but not boiled. Apparently mere washing with soap and hot water will not dislodge the bacteria that have taken refuge within the meshes of the linen. The only safe tea towel is the one which has been freshly boiled.

However, the class concluded that constant boiling of tea towels would add too much to the dishwasher's burden, and it was decided to discard the dish towel as well as the dishpan. To the method of washing which had left the dishes bacteria-free was added rack drying. The washed dishes were stood in a wire rack in the sink and rinsed with clear hot water, permitted to dry, and then a culture taken in the usual way. The plate, after the usual incubation period, showed no traces of bacteria. Here was proof that dish-drying with a towel is not only adverse to time and labor-saving, but to health as well.

Nothing could be more complete and definite than the result of these experiments, in the opinion of the investigators. "If we wish absolutely microbe-proof dishes," they say, "we must follow its edicts faithfully. Throw away the dishpan and turn on the hot water spigot; boil the mop, set the dishes in a rack for rinsing and pour boiling water over them; then when you've thrown away the dish towel, let the dishes dry by themselves. This is the easiest, the speediest and the most sanitary method."

HOLES by the BARRELFUL

HOLES may be said to be a by-product of the United States Bureau of Engraving at Washington, where all the postage stamps are made. On an average day it turns out four barrels of holes. Packed in the barrels, they take the form of tiny paper disks about the size of a pinhead.

These disks are punched out of the sheets of postage stamps to make the perforations. An average output of 125,000 sheets a day means 1,365,000,000 holes, or an equal number of disks, which fill four barrels. The contents of the barrels are sold for paper stock, for Uncle Sam is very economical and effects a saving at every opportunity.

There is a story that the man who first hit upon the idea of punching rows of holes between postage stamps, to enable them to be easily torn apart, sold his invention to the Government for a large sum of money. It seems impossible to verify, however, and the name of that inventor cannot be learned.

These Barrels Are Filled with Tiny Paper Disks Punched Out of Sheets of Postage Stamps to Make the Perforations for Tearing.

MAKE Your Own SOAP

SOAP is extensively sold nowadays in the form of flakes, because in that shape it is so much easier to use for washing clothes, dishes, etc. Of course, the flakes cost more than bar soap. But why not make your own?

Herbert B. Brougham, of White Plains, N. Y., has patented a simple device that will do the work easily. It is a metal box with one side punched outward to form a series of rows of sharp biting edges.

When a bar of soap is rubbed along this surface (the punched side being placed uppermost), it is rapidly chipped into flakes which fall into the box.

But an essential feature of the contrivance is a movable panel which, sliding in grooves, seals all of the punched openings when it is pushed in. When the box is filled with flakes, the panel is slid in, closing the holes.

At a corner of one end of the box is a triangular opening closed by a sliding lid of corresponding shape. The lid has a button which slides in a slot. Thus the opening can be made of whatever size may be desired when the housewife wishes to pour a suitable quantity of the flakes into her washing water.

Now the "Animated" Raincoat

MOST in demand nowadays, in the way of apparel, is something "distinctive." It is a requirement sought to be met by the animated raincoat, which Morris Cooper, of New York, has patented.

In the back of the coat is set a large disk of celluloid with a face painted on it. The face has two circular openings for the eyes and a third opening for the mouth. Behind each of the eye holes swings a little pendulum, its supporting rod hidden by the eyelid.

When the wearer of the raincoat walks, the two pendulums oscillate to and fro, making the eyes appear to turn this way and that. At the same time the eyelids, which are on pivots, wink; and the lips, which are of pink rubber, weighted, alter their shape.

It is easy to see how attractive a raincoat thus ornamented must be. If desired, the face may be that of a cat or other animal, the lower jaw having a movement of its own, with an equivalent arrangement for the eyes.

When the Wearer of the Coat Walks, Pendulums Set in Motion the Eyes and Lips of the Face Painted on a Celluloid Dick Inserted in the Back of the Garment.

New Inventions

ESCAPE from a burning building can be made by sliding safely down a fire escape consisting of a lifebelt attached to the wire by a wooden block, inside which is a curved groove. The strand passes through this slot and, to regulate the speed of descent, the occupant of the belt has but to adjust a thumbscrew on the block, which is done with a wingnut.

* * *

Radiator units that may be safely built into the wall and, when installed, are completely hidden from view, have been introduced to save space and to promote better heating. They consist of an outlet grill above and have an inlet opening below. The grill is fitted with a control damper to shut off the heat when desired.

* * *

A small and convenient charcoal stove for the use of motorists and campers is so constructed as to permit the attachment of an airpump, to quicken the starting of a fire, and is provided with a foldable support and hinged cover, so that it can be used with safety as a cookstove in the open or as a heater in the automobile.

Lieutenant-Colonel Jacob Schick, of the United States Army, has invented a repeater razor which has space in its handle for twenty blades. An ejector changes blades by discharging the old one and thrusting a new one into position.

How the Hearing of School Children Is Now Easily Tested in Secret

NEARLY all old people are deaf to some degree. Most of them do not know it, however, the impairment of hearing being not sufficient to excite their own attention or that of others. But it is certainly surprising to learn, on highest authority, that 3,000,000 school children in the United States are defective in this respect.

Each Child Is Equipped with a Pair of Telephone Receivers Which Are Connected to a Phonograph and Instructed to Set Down What He Hears as an Indication of the Acuteness of Hearing.

An examination of 4,112 school children revealed the fact that fourteen in every hundred were deaf in greater or less degree.

The defect is easily detected by simple means, such as holding a watch at varying distances from the child's ear. How far off can he hear it tick? But the matter is one which in schools has heretofore received no attention at all—unfortunately, inasmuch as deafness in childhood may commonly be helped and often cured if the necessary treatment is begun in time.

Recently the problem was taken up by the American Federation for the Hard of Hearing, which, with a view to the systematic testing of children's hearing, advocates the adoption in schools of a special form of "audiometer." The apparatus, so simple that any teacher can make the tests and record results, has already been introduced in the schools of Cincinnati, Rochester, N. Y., and Springfield, Mass.

If, in making the test, a child is separated from his companions, he is liable to feel embarrassed and unable to concentrate upon the trial of his hearing. Hence it has been found desirable to apply it to many children simultaneously, taking a whole class, perhaps, together. For this purpose a phonograph is used, to which as many as forty telephone receivers may be connected.

The receivers are fastened to the right ears of the children, who are told that they will first hear numbers called by a woman, and then by a man, who seem to be moving farther and farther away. They are instructed to write down as many of the numbers as they can hear. This having been done, the receivers are changed to their left ears, and the performance is repeated.

Each child writes his or her name at the top of the paper sheet on which the numbers heard are written. The records thus made give an accurate measure of each child's acuteness of hearing. Most of them will be normal; some will show subnormality in less or greater degree, and a few will indicate serious defect, suggesting the need of prompt medical attention.

"Sun Babies"

Physicians nowadays write fewer prescriptions. Modern medical science seeks to prevent disease and in every way possible looks to nature for cures.

In nature, sunshine is the greatest curative agent. Nowadays babies and young children suffering from rickets (a trouble much more common than is generally supposed), or from incipient tuberculosis, are treated with "sun baths," which begin with exposure of the hands and feet to sunshine for an hour twice a day, the process being progressive until the whole body is exposed, nude.

When sunshine is not available, resort is had to ultra-violet rays, artificially produced. It is the ultra-violet rays in the sunshine that do the good work, promoting health and vigor. The apparatus used for the purpose is a quartz mercury-vapor lamp, which (quartz glass being transparent to ultra-violet rays, while ordinary glass is opaque to them) emits a strong curative glow.

Why Boiling Liquids Bubble

WHY water or practically any other liquid is caused to bubble when it is boiled is scientifically explained as follows:

All liquids hold a certain amount of dissolved air or other gas. But when it is heated it becomes less able to keep this gas in solution, and the air collects into tiny bubbles, each surrounded by an envelope of liquid squeezing it in.

The heating, of course, will start near the bottom of the vessel, and each little bubble will race up to the top. Its place is then filled by a drop of the colder liquid from above. So it goes on until there is a continuous procession of tiny bubbles hurrying up to the surface, each there bursting into steam as it reaches the cooler air and the pressure of the envelope of liquid round it is removed.

High Society Secrets Behind the Night Club Queen's Latest Lowbrow Rumpus

How a Flying Shoe Revealed the Romance Between "Mother" Merrick's Daughter and a Dashing Earl.

Characteristic "Closing Hour" Scene in a London Night Club of the Type Where Earl Kinnoull Met Mae Merrick.

"Let the Queen rave, let the Queen rant,
A fig for her cares and her woes;
She thinks she can stop us, but we know she can't;
Pooh-pooh! to her uplifted nose."
—Night club parody sung at the Forty-Three Club.

LONDON.

IT isn't often, even in the Merrie England of this astonishing generation, that a woman rises from obscurity by means of dubious night-club operations, becomes independently wealthy and then sees her two daughters, both dragged into her entertainment ventures, marry into the oldest and most respected nobility.

But that is exactly the spectacle that Great Britain is being treated to today, and the heroine of this strange tale is none other than "Mother Kate" Merrick, owner of half a dozen night clubs, mother-in-law of a wealthy baron and prospective mother-in-law of England's handsomest young earl.

Nor is it any more frequently that a handsome young earl has his wooing interrupted by raiders set upon the trysting place by one of his too solicitous friends, but that is reported to have happened to the 24-year-old Earl Kinnoull, the potential son-in-law of "Mother Kate," while he was paying court to beautiful Mae Merrick in the jazzy Forty-Three Club near Piccadilly.

To add to the singular aspects of "Mother Kate's" remarkable life, there is her strange behavior in continuing her proscribed night-life ventures even after she has become independently wealthy and has seen one daughter, Dolly, married to the Baron de Clifford and the other one awaiting the divorce of the present Lady Kinnoull to become Lord Kinnoull's second bride.

Moreover, "Mother Kate" Merrick, or "Kitty" as she was known before the world learned of the existence of the beautiful daughters, has the doubtful distinction of probably having been responsible for heaping more woe on the head of the socially meticulous Queen Mary than any other cabaret proprietor in London today. Not only did Queen Mary frown with all the severity of her marble forehead upon the de Clifford-Merrick match, but she has all but gone into "the silence" since the reports of the Kinnoull-Merrick romance reached her ears.

Considering all these angles, is it small wonder that "Mother Kate" Merrick is one of the most discussed figures in London and that every ear, both in the nobility and the night life of London, was close to the ground when her Forty-Three Club fell under the attention of the police while Lord Kinnoull was enjoying himself within?

There was more than a little horror, even in circles outside the nobility, when the scandal came out about the Forty-Three Club doings. To be sure, it was proved in court that all the disturbance was caused by an inebriated, but faithful follower of Lord Kinnoull, and that there was no official impropriety connected with the club or his presence therein, but, just the same, London was shocked from the innermost sanctuaries of Buckingham Palace to the outskirts of Twickenham.

The facts in the case of the Forty-Three Club seem to be, according to court records, that a few weeks ago one Liddell Steel, 34, a Piccadilly chum of Lord Kinnoull, appeared before the portals of the club and demanded entrance. He purported to be a friend of Kinnoull, who was inside, as has been pointed out, but "Mother" Merrick, answering the door at the request of her doorman, claims to have noticed that Steel was intoxicated and refused him admission.

"Mother Kate" used as her excuse for denying Steel admittance the fact that he was not a "member" of her club. After more than a little argument, "Mother Kate" slammed the door in Steel's face, leaving him out in the cold with his mission unfulfilled.

Piqued by this gesture, Steel sat down on the running-board of a taxicab and, according to his story in court later, removed one of his shoes and hurled it through a window of the ritzy club. At this "Mother Kate," who has suavely avoided tilts with the law when possible, lost her patience and then summoned the "bobbies."

When the police arrived, "Mother Kate" told them of Steel's quaint manner of applying for membership in the Forty-Three Club and suggested that they speak to him and try to improve his social technique. The "bobbies" approached Steel and found him decidedly refractory. He refused either to quit the vicinity or to cease his loud talking and announced to the police, "Mother Kate" and the crowd which had gathered in the street that he wanted her arrested "for operating a place where liquor was sold in defiance of the law." He also observed that Lord Kinnoull was inside and, being detained against his best interests.

After this oration, Steel made another dive for the door of the Forty-Three, but "Mother Kate," accustomed to such maneuvers, was too quick for him and headed him off. Here the "bobbies" switched tactics on the impetuous young crusader and, even though "Mother Kate" refused to "charge him," took him into custody on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

At the hearing, Steel attempted to adduce testimony to show that the Forty-Three Club and its owner were violating the liquor laws of the British Isles, but the Crown refused to permit him to have his say, pointing out that he was on trial, and not Mrs. Merrick and her businesses. However, he did succeed in publicly accusing many members of the police department of accepting graft from the queen of the night clubs and with condoning her operations.

Lord Kinnoull was spared the embarrassment of being present at the hearing, despite his presence in the club on the night of Steel's individual raid and Steel's pleas to him to aid in suppressing "Mother Kate's" alleged iniquitious trafficking in strong drink. In the end Steel was given a stiff fine for being drunk and disorderly, and was warned to temper his solicitude for his friends with mercy on his own peace of mind at such times in the future as he felt called upon to do personal evangelistic work.

But even though he failed to obtain immediate action, Steel's charges in the courtroom stirred up more than a little commotion in high society circles concerning the projected marriage of Mae Merrick and likewise have been responsible for a somewhat more rigid vigilance by the police in the vicinities of the several Merrick enterprises.

The story of the romances of the two Merrick daughters begins with the introduction of the Baron de Clifford, a very wealthy and very handsome young noble, to Dolly Merrick. They met in one of the Merrick night clubs and within a week had decided to marry. A few days later they became man and wife, or Baron and Baroness, and Queen Mary, who is said to have given her silent approval to a match between the young baron and a very desirable noblewoman, received another of those shocks which have been so recurrent in the last five years. As a result, Buckingham Palace failed formally to recognize the bride, but, after a little consternation, the baron and baroness went their happy way, apparently undaunted by the snub.

Then came the rumored romance of Lord Kinnoull and Mae Merrick further to confound the Queen and shock the society folk. Lord Kinnoull has been a bit given to romancing since he was little more than a beardless youth. Back in 1922, when he was not yet out of his teens, he was barely restrained by his parents from marrying Mrs. T. Surle, a widow from the States. Two years later he met and married the daughter of the late Mrs. Hamilton Fellowes. Mrs. Fellowes, at her subsequent death, left $5,000,000 to her daughter, who had fallen out with the Earl and left him.

Shortly after the wedding Lord Kinnoull and his bride began to find difficulty in synchronizing their interests. The marriage drifted closer and closer to the rocks, and finally royalty received the disconcerting underground news, that the Kinnoulls had parted and Lady Kinnoull was to sue for divorce. The Earl, somewhat shaken by the collapse of his romance, decided to seek what solace he might in the night clubs. But even his fondest dreams had not promised him such a soothing influence as he found in the bewitching Mae Merrick.

Mae was acting as a hostess in "Mother Kate's" Manhattan Club when they met, and Lord Kinnoull appeared to fall as suddenly and completely in love as his noble colleague, the Baron de Clifford, had. In the early days of her venture, "Mother Kate" had spent her days as a "perfect parent" to her pretty daughters, but it is doubtful if she dreamed of the good fortune that would send each of them a nobleman of high rank to love and wed.

Lord Kinnoull's romance with Mae progressed rapidly, and it was not long before all London knew of their plans to be married as soon as the current Lady Kinnoull could or would obtain a divorce. The latter's plea for a decree has not yet been granted, however, and his lordship is known to be growing somewhat impatient over the procrastinations of the English judiciary.

Because of the tremendous popularity of Mae and the need of her services in the clubs, now that Dolly is the wife of a Baron and consequently hardly available for jazz palace didoes of the kind demanded by London's blades, Lord Kinnoull has found it necessary to do much of his courting in "Mother Kate's" places of business. It was, perhaps, this circumstance that brought about Liddell Steel's crusade and has added no little to the gossips' pleasure.

As has been pointed out, "Mother Kate" Merrick led a double life in the early days of her night club operations. But since the publicity that resulted from Dolly's marriage to the Baron de Clifford and the subsequent publicizing of Mr. Steel's anti-speakeasy complex, she has dropped the mantle of anonymity that covered her suburban existence, and has "stepped out." Only recently she gave London a severe shock when she purchased a mansion overlooking Regent's Park and moved her family into it. The house is one of the finest in the district and is believed to have commanded a tremendous price.

In her struggling days her children were very young and she cared for them in a little cottage in a suburb. It was like any one of hundreds of other cottages, and she came and went as any devoted mother would come and go. She tucked the children into bed with meticulous care and many pats and caresses, and then, slipping off a robe with which she had concealed her brilliant evening gown, she entered an automobile and sped to her business.

In the vicinity of her cottage, the Merrick children were known as model youngsters. Their hair was unbobbed, their dresses and suits were plain and dignified and their manners perfect.

Mrs. Merrick in the Days When, Posing as a Quiet Suburbanite, Her Name Was Unconnected With Piccadilly's Wild Night Life.

They went to good schools, studied diligently and received frequent approbation from their teachers. Not one of them knew of their mother's night life operations, nor did the neighbors realize it.

When Dolly grew up, she was told of her mother's business ventures and soon became a hostess in one of the clubs. Then she met Baron de Clifford and the wildfire romance and marriage followed, with the Baron politely telling society it could accept his bride or take a pooh-pooh from both of them. This, to be sure, brought about a great swell of publicity and the duplex life of the night queen came to light.

Two viewpoints prevail in London today on the noble marriage of one of the Merrick girls, and the probable engagement of the other to a peer.

The staid, old aristocratic element sees in these alliances a devastating sign of a relapse in social standards. "Why, my dear," you can hear old ladies say who regard the late Queen Victoria as the essence of a womanly woman, "they'll be marrying barmaids next." The hectic interest of young noblemen in night clubs and their pretty hostesses is attributed by this element to a post-war let-down in morale.

But the more juvenile element in society, remembering what frightful results over-breeding has had in other nations, sees in such matches a wholesome infusion of new blood, which may result in saving the race from stagnation.

How Chicago's Champ Romeo Fled from "Too Much Love"

Business-Like Fade-Out of Popular Mr. Comstock, Wedded, Divorced, Engaged a Couple of Times, and Now a Live Wire Realtor in "Womanless" Hollywood.

STANLEY COMSTOCK, often referred to as the super-champion Romeo produced by Chicago, has, on his own admission, abandoned his career as a snatcher of hearts for one of sternly unsentimental go-getting in the Far West.

Mr. Comstock, youngish, wealthy and good-looking, the boy-friend of the international beauty, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, and of Marion Almy, cute little dancer, is going to devote himself to the real estate business from now on. He is, he says, through with love.

In Hollywood, he declares, he is not looking for marriage—he merely wants to sell real estate and to leave all the ladies alone. He admits that Peggy Hopkins Joyce, to whom his engagement was reported a year ago, is a beautiful and attractive woman, and he holds only the kindliest regards for Miss Almy, but as for marriage—well, not while he's in his right mind.

The earliest woes accruing from Stanley's marriage complex developed shortly after he announced his engagement to Peggy, after having given her a $19,000 diamond bracelet and a $10,000 engagement ring. It seems that Stanley had overlooked the reaction of his earlier loves to his sudden flare for the much-married Peggy.

No sooner had news of the engagement been flashed over the wires than Evelyn Cady Comstock, to whom Stanley had been married in Detroit several years before, began heating up the Western Union's facilities with denials that the millionaire fiance had been divorced.

Snapshot of Peggy Hopkins Joyce and Stanley Comstock, Taken at the Time Their Engagement Was Widely Reported.

Later it developed that Stanley had obtained a divorce in Florida, but Evelyn Cady Comstock alleged that it was null and void and had been obtained by fraud. Whereupon she took the first train Miamiward and upon arrival in the Florida metropolis announced that she would act to have the decree set aside.

Now this development, quite unforeseen by the beautiful Peggy and Comstock, had a serious effect on their wedding plans. It became necessary to postpone the nuptials for a time until some sort of an agreement could be reached with the indignant Evelyn.

While these matters were being threshed out another crisis came to a head, this time in Milwaukee. It seemed that Stan had been married there to one Betty Comstock before he took the indignant Evelyn as his spouse. However, he had attended to the formality of a divorce from Betty and Betty held no resentment against him. In fact, she was somewhat amused by the situation and especially by the discomfiture of Evelyn, who, she said, had stolen Stan's love from her just as Peggy Hopkins Joyce had, in turn, cooled the "great lover's" ardor for his second wife.

Betty made a few more remarks before she subsided with a last giggle. She avowed that Stanley's reputed millions did not exist, that his mansions and yacht were figments of a romantic imagination and that he always had been given to harmless day-dreaming. This news Peggy received with some arching of the eyebrows and a short time thereafter announced that she was sailing for Europe.

In the meantime Evelyn charged that Stanley, infuriated because she had refused to divorce him or to permit the divorce he had obtained to stand, had forced his way into her apartment and severely beaten her. Just a few days before she had made the boast that she would win Stan away from Peggy and had all but made the threat good when she appeared in public with him while the bewitching Peggy was beauless that night.

Whether these things contributed to Peggy's decision to see more of Europe and less of Stanley, no one knows. In the early days of her engagement she had told the world that Stanley was the one great love—that she was marrying to stay married and that her fiance's former wife was only a trouble-maker who would soon vanish from the picture.

When Peggy departed Stanley went on about his business of selling real estate and making much money without a great deal of distress. He began to be seen at night clubs with other girls and appeared as pleased with the world as ever.

Less than a year after the collapse of the Peggy Hopkins Joyce romance Comstock appeared one night in the Movie Inn, a popular resort near Miami, where he had been known as a steady customer, and, calling the doorman aside, requested that worthy to announce the arrival of no less a celebrity than Stanley Comstock.

The announcement made, Stanley strode in and selected a table in the very center of the festivities. He then summoned Constance Almy, a beautiful young dancer in the club, and, placing his arm gently about her pretty waist, announced to all and sundry that they were to be wed on the morrow or shortly thereafter.

Amid much gaiety and celebrating, Stanley and Connie received the congratulations of their friends and made public their wedding plans. The following day Stan attempted to carry out his plans but found the marital bugaboo on his trail again. He was unable to get a license because Evelyn Cady's action had not been disposed of. He tried in half a dozen places, but to no avail.

Disappointed, the affianced couple parted late that night. The following day legal efforts were renewed. But again they were balked. Next came a gleam of hope. It seems that matters were adjusted and Stanley was ready to take his bride-to-be to another State, probably New York, where he could get a license. Connie was happy again. Her nervous attack, which had followed the earlier disappointment, had abated.

The next morning she rose bright and early and peered out of the window. It was a perfect Florida day—a perfect day for romance and love. The sun was gently shining through the palmettos, the sea was calm and blue and soothing, the air was freighted with the odor of magnolia blossoms—in fact, everything was just about top hole.

She dressed and awaited the coming of Stan to bear her away to the altar. An hour's waiting brought no cloud of dust on the horizon. She called his apartment on the telephone. He had left the night before after only a few moments in his room. Consternation seized Connie. Perhaps he had been kidnaped or was ill. She telephoned the police. No word of him. She tried the hospitals. The same reply. She tried his friends. No, Stan was not there—had not been there.

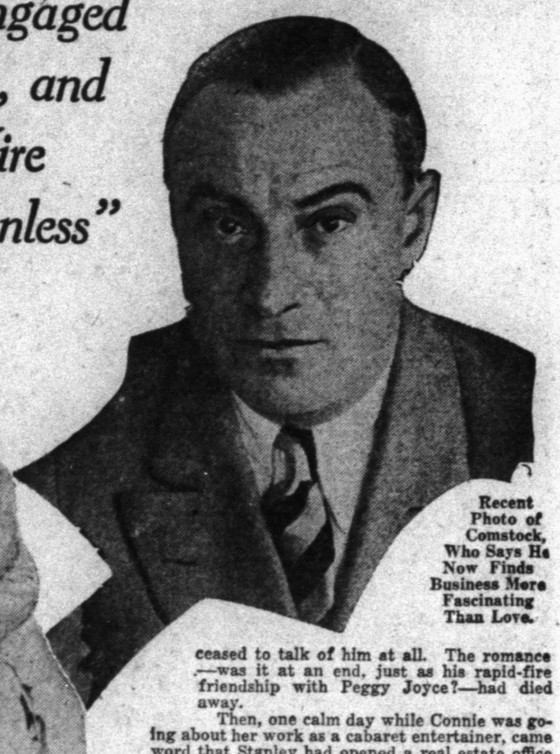

Then began a long search and much watchful and tearful waiting. But no Stanley appeared and no trace or word of him was had. Connie was in despair, but she did not relinquish her claim to his devotion. She would hear from him, she declared stoutly. He loved her—hadn't he told her so? He'd be back.

But days and weeks passed and no Stanley. Weeks began to drag into months and still no Stanley. One day Connie reassured her friends with the calm announcement that she had heard from Stan and that all was well. Soon they would be reunited, she would be the blushing and happy bride and the horrors of the past weeks would be obliterated in the business of living happily ever after.

When days and yet more days passed and Stanley did not come back friends of Connie began to be a bit dubious about the word from him. Connie herself talked less and less of her one-time boy-friend. He seemed to be fading out of the picture. Eventually Connie appeared to have lost all idea of seeing Stan again and ceased to talk of him at all. The romance—was it at an end, just as his rapid-fire friendship with Peggy Joyce?—had died away.

Snapshot of Stanley Comstock and Constance Almy, Taken at the Time THEIR Engagement Was Widely Reported.

Recent Photo of Comstock, Who Says He Now Finds Business More Fascinating Than Love.

Then, one calm day while Connie was going about her work as a cabaret entertainer, came word that Stanley had opened a real estate office in Hollywood. He had slipped in with little or no ballyhoo, had quietly taken a business suite and launched himself in lot-selling on a flourishing scale.

Newspaper men tracked him to his lair and demanded to know, to the satisfaction of the curious public, just what his intentions were toward little Connie.

Comstock was as urbane as ever. He had his explanation ready.

It wasn't a particularly new and original explanation. In fact, there are three or four cases on record where it has been used to advantage. What he said was:

"It was all a misunderstanding."

He amplified this slightly by adding:

"I am very, very fond of Constance Almy. She is a very nice girl and a very, very fine wife—for someone, or will be if she chooses. And the same goes for Miss Joyce. I enjoyed her friendship tremendously. She, too, is capable of making a very fine wife—for someone else. Good-day, gentlemen."

What an about-face for one who but a few short months before was rushing the glorious Peggy and would have undoubtedly led her to the altar but for the strenuous protests of his second wife as to the validity of that Florida divorce. And even the collapse of his romance with Peggy apparently failed to dampen his urge for romance itself, for the event was still live news-copy when Stanley announced to his friends and the world in general that he had found the "perfect girl" in Miss Almy. Well—thought the newspaper men—was it possible for the "champ Romeo" to change his ways so quickly? They pressed him further.

"That goes," he snapped definitely. "I'm through. Strict attention to my business from now on."

Meanwhile Peggy, in New York, queried about the report that she planned to go South and recapture the heart of Stanley from the twinkling Connie, declared that she was "fed up" on the Florida-Comstock situation and didn't want her name mixed up with it any longer.

"Say," she commented characteristically, "I broke my engagement with Stanley months ago. And when I break an engagement, it stays broken."

A theory as to the real motive behind the popular Mr. Comstock's retirement from the field of hearts, is advanced by a close friend. The latter sees in the settling down of Stanley the possibility of a renewal of his romance with the beautiful Betty Comstock, his first wife. The first Mrs. Comstock, despite the unhappy ending of her romance with Stanley, has apparently retained nothing but the kindliest feeling toward him. She characterizes him as "just a big-hearted, good-natured boy."

Moreover, Comstock, in his recent affairs of the heart, exhibited a preference for the type of blonde beauty exemplified by his first wife. Betty has frequently been pointed out as an almost exact counterpart of Peggy Hopkins Joyce and since Connie Almy also is a blonde and of the vivacious and spirited type, Betty Comstock's friends see in Stanley's choice of girl-friends a constant longing for the woman he left behind.

Nor is Betty Comstock wholly unmindful of this phase of the case. When interviewed during the surge of publicity attending Comstock's romancing with Peggy Hopkins Joyce, she called attention to the resemblance and, appeared more than a little pleased that "Stan" should have selected someone who so closely resembles her. She declared then that the circumstance indicated that Stanley still could be fond of her and she added that she had nothing but the kindliest feelings toward him.

Try This Trick of Your Will

DR. EMILE COUE, the late French physician who acquired a world-wide fame by teaching his patients to think that "day by day they were better in every way," also developed other interesting psychological experiments which he has described in his books. One of these is the following, which not only boys and girls will find interesting and amusing, but grown-ups as well, as a demonstration of the belief in the power of mind over matter.

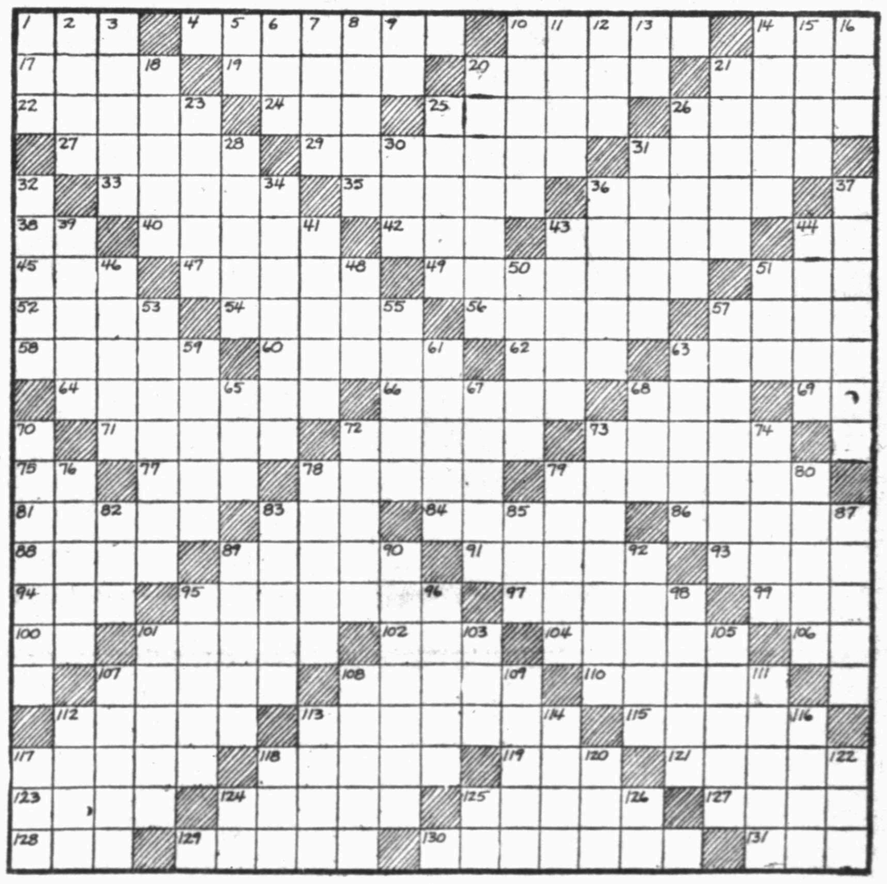

Take a piece of string and tie a button to one end of it. Then stand up and take the string in your right hand and hold it so the button just escapes touching the floor, as shown in the drawing. Next fix your gaze and attention on the floor at a point just beneath the suspended button. Now decide in which direction the button and the string will swing.

After a few moments the button will begin to swing like a pendulum in the determined direction, according to Dr. Coue, who says that the time varies with different experimenters. Then if you determine that the button is to swing in a direction at right angles to this, it will gradually turn around and swing that way. Dr. Coue cautions the experimenter not to try to swing the button in that direction, but to let the mind remain neutral in the matter and the button will finally swing in obedience to the will. Just how long this will take depends upon the ability of the experimenter to concentrate his attention.

Dr. Coue used this experiment to prove that the will is not the whole thing and that each person possesses a power which, under the right conditions, can be made to act, at least to some extent, outside of the will.

Three Women and a Novelist By FANNIE HURST

THREE times a year the noted novelist wrote home.

Those were the three times that the envelopes held enclosures.

On those occasions, the novelist sent to his two maiden sisters back in Goodetown, Utah, and his deaf old mother, who was close on seventy-eight, checks for the modest amount that covered their yearly expenditures.

Not that the novelist was parsimonious with them. He could and would have sent more, twice as much, with precisely the same impersonal cheerfulness with which he sent the smaller sums. But the women of his family were insistent upon their ability to live within the bounds of a certain amount. And so they did, too. Maintaining the old home, which stood in the very shadow of the superb iron-looking hills where the novelist had run as a boy, with a fine dignity and simplicity.

The old house had a magnificent view of marching mountains that were snow-capped twelve months out of the year. To the south there stretched flat lands and the town lay nestled in between, while to the north a great pine forest stalked across the plain.

Fine, variegated country. Clean air. Cool, stimulating summers. Changing color of mountain side, woodland and plain.

The three women lived the simple lives of children. The two "girls", Hanna and Deborah, aged fifty-eight and sixty, respectively, tended house, tended their palsied mother, raised their garden truck, contributed their services to church and charities in much the fashion they had done all their lives.

The mother still crocheted. A curiously intricate method she had learned from the Mormons. The Woman's Exchange at Salt Lake City sometimes sold a few yards for her and delighted the drying old heart of the novelist's mother.

An unexciting household, to be sure. Horsehair and stiff black walnut. Great gaunt bedrooms which heated badly, if at all, in winter. Carpet hassocks. Crayon portraits of deceased members of the family. Albums. Pot-bellied stoves. Great draughty hallways. Much woodwork to keep scrubbed. A neat, iron-fence-enclosed front lawn with an iron negro boy at the curbstone still holding a useless carriage ring.

A four-cornered, stiff, austere-looking house on a street of similar houses.

A neat street. A precise and orderly street. A street of women in black sateen and men in black broadcloth and precise children, with the boys in leather knee-caps and the little girls in stiff pig tails.

Sometimes, seated in the effete luxury of his studios in New York or Paris, the novelist could feel himself suffering an acute kind of chill, just as surely as if a pathological one had shivered along his spine.

Merely calling to mind that stern house on that stern street could do that. Not that the novelist permitted himself to call it to mind very often. The busy, the successful years since his departure from the house in Utah, had all but erased any but the faintest memories. In twenty-six years, the novelist had not been back. Twice in that period his mother and sisters had journeyed East to see him. Once as far as Denver, when he spoke in that city as his farthest point West on a lecture tour, and another time when he was attending a great publishers' convention in Kansas City, and he had sent them the necessary checks to make the journey.

It was strange how little he really knew of these three women. How his life had shot off at tangents incredibly removed from them. His sisters, prim, darkly-clothed women, might have inhabited another planet so far as they had anything in common with the brother whose fame, when he was forty, had spread not only from coast to coast but throughout Europe.

Was it the iron hills marching forever movelessly onward?

Or—the three women who were blood of his blood—gaunt, alien women, yet blood of his blood.

The days when he had been a youngster in the square grim house, while not so remote to them, seemed nevertheless far away. Too far away for them to be able to capture the interest of their brother by recalling them to him.

The sisters and the small and senile mother practically lived on those memories. The fact that the small boy had grown up in that household gave to the township its one claim to importance.

The sisters and the mother remembered everything that had to do with the childhood of the novelist. They never tired of retailing his boyhood to whoever would listen. The house was full of memories and mementoes of him. His photographs graced every nook and corner.

The three women remembered.

The novelist had forgotten.

He had forgotten in a manner that amazed him when he stopped to think about it. So far as his boyhood was concerned, except for the purposes of giving out interviews, it was as if those days had never been.

They were gruesome days for him to recall, as gruesome as the memory of his sternly religious father who had worn a spade of iron-gray beard and whom he had seen laid out stiff in the stiff parlor of the house in Utah.

The women who were so strangely removed from the gay, graceful women of his world; the women of his world whose shoulders shone and whose eyes were full of the lure and the mystery of their sex. Not just bead-eyed girls like his sisters, with their high shoulders and their hands with cable-like veins across the backs.

Sometimes the novelist felt that if life had cheated him at all, it had cheated him in this respeect. The novelist sometimes experienced the need of soft, graceful women in his family. He had never married and once in a while, when a sister or a mother of a friend hove on his cosmopolitan horizon, the novelist thought rather bitterly of his own mother or his sisters arriving on his scene.

Strange, grim, alien women. While the women relatives of the men he knew somehow fitted into their scheme of things. Graceful women. Women of beauty and manner.

No, when the novelist thought about home at all, which he usually did only when he wrote the checks, he did so with the chilled feeling that he somehow associated with the street where he had spent his boyhood.

And yet this happened:

One day, motoring in the small nours of what had been an hilarious dawn, from one Long Island estate where there had been a late party, to another Long Isalnd estate where he was a week-end guest, one of those chaotic smash-ups occurred that smatter up the columns of the daily press.

The limousine in which the novelist and his beautiful young hostess and her middle-aged husband were driving, turned turtle down an embankment, killing the chauffeur and the owners of the car instantly, and resulting in the gravest injuries to the author.

There followed five months in a New York hospital, while one of the sisters, Hanna, came on, and the second remained back with the senile old mother, who was no longer able to travel.

In the exotic environment of her brother, Hanna did truly enough seem out of place. Grim, square-shouldered woman. who laughed so seldom. She was not even unusually efficient, sitting most of the days through, silently there beside her brother's bed and apparently unmoved by the deluge of flowers, the visits of fair women, the attentions of men of international renown.

There was no use attempting to merge poor Hanna more definitely into the picture. The novelist, propped against pillows as some faint suggestion of his old strength came flowing back to him, realized that. Sometimes a little bitterly.

What must people think! The gay, beautiful women who called. The gifted men and women of his craft who came to do him honor. People from all walks of life. Mostly distinguished walks. Great talents. Men of great wealth. Musicians. Philanthropists. Fair ladies of the theatre. Magnates. Bankers. Artists. Poets. Seekers after beauty.

What must they think?

And in the end what must they have thought of this:

The novelist did not come back to his full strength. For three years, before he could even use his shattered limbs, he was to lie inert upon a bed of pain.

And after the first year, there came over him a longing, a hankering for the sight of those iron hills that reared their peaks around the stern house in the stern street out in Utah.

There came over him a longing and a yearning and a feeling for the blood of his blood.

Those three stark, stern women out there in that stern, stark house were blood of his blood. He knew them. He had time, as he lay there month after month, to come into the realization that behind their repressions and their suppressions, these women were blood of his blood.

They were not strange to him. They were his flesh. Suddenly, lying there in his ornate hospital room de luxe, it came over him that he had a home to go to. A square, brick house that overlooked the grim beauty of snow-capped mountains.

The novelist wanted to go back there. So it was from one of the windows of the house that overlooked those early scenes that he was slowly nursed back to health by the three women.

Recovered, he lives in that house now. He writes in it now. He is happy in it now. The three women tend him in it now.
