Chevron acquires land for $100M campus

By Mella McEwen
Oil Editor

Chevron has agreed to acquire 25 acres west of the Scharbauer Sports Complex from SBC Corp. with plans to build a new office campus. The acquisition is expected to be completed this fall. Chevron would not disclose purchase terms.

Alan Kleier, vice president of Chevron's Mid-Continent Business Unit, said the new building will bring together the company's 450 employees from its building in ClayDesta Center and 80 employees from a site on Farm-to-Market Road 1788 under one roof while also providing room for additional employees as the company grows its operations locally.

"The ClayDesta building is 30 years old and has served us well, but we have outgrown it and need to accommodate the anticipated growth in our local workforce over the coming years," Chevron said in announcing the new facility. The new building will be designed to offer the latest technology.

The company is in the early stages of working with the architectural firm HOK, of Houston, in developing the design for the new campus, Kleier said. He anticipates the cost will be more than $100 million.

It's possible the campus could contain multiple buildings as Chevron's local operations grow, he said.

After Chevron moves into its new building, he said the current building at ClayDesta could be renovated or put up for sale.

"The purchase of this land represents a step forward in our growth plans for our Permian Basin business," Kleier said. "We are committed to this community, to providing our current and prospective employees with a first-class work environment and to producing energy supplies that will fuel this region and our nation from what continues to be one of the most prolific oil and gas basins."

School district's top leadership spots change

By Meredith Moriak
Staff Writer

Midland ISD Superintendent Ryder Warren announced changes to his 15-member executive team, including those of Chief Academic Officer Sylvia Garza and Chief of Staff Ed Zachary on Friday afternoon.

Garza will become executive director of career and technology education, and Zachary will become executive director of human resources.

Current Executive Director of Secondary Services Patrick Jones was promoted to chief academic officer. Warren said he believes Jones' long history in MISD makes him the best person to oversee curriculum and instruction.

"The last two people the district had in the position were from the outside, and I think it's important to have someone who really knows the district," Warren said.

Jones began working for MISD in 1994 as a teacher and coach at Abell Junior High. He worked five years as a high school assistant principal and six years as a principal before being promoted to executive director of secondary education in 2007.

"Patrick is a team builder, consensus builder and brings people together," Warren said. "He makes decisions that put the kids first and will have credibility with the staff."

Jones replaces Garza, who was recruited by former Superintendent Sylvester Perez to MISD in 2007 after serving as assistant superintendent for teaching and learning in San Marcos CISD. As executive director of career and technology education, Garza will serve as liaison to Midland College and be housed at the Advanced Technology Center.

Former Executive Director of CTE Teresa Moore will replace retiring Executive Director of Student Services Bill Maurer, who had a 38-year career in education serving MISD as a teacher, principal, executive director of elementary education and student services.

Airport to hold disaster drill June 16

By Kathleen Petty
Staff Writer

Fake blood, simulated broken bones and ambulances rushing to the scene all will be a part of Midland International Airport's June 16 disaster drill.

In an effort to provide a test to the emergency response systems and also identify any issues that could occur in the event of a real airplane crash or other disaster, the Federal Aviation Administration mandates a broad-scale disaster drill take place every three years, said Justine Ruff, deputy director of airports.

"Basically whenever you do one of these you find out there's some gap," she said. "The idea is to take care of that gap."

Want to help?

For information about volunteering, visit www.flymaf.com.

To simulate a fake plane crash with mass casualties requires about 150 volunteers. Ruff said they're still seeking about 50 who can give up their morning to take part.

Some will be assigned as victims and painted to look as if they've been injured. Others will pretend to be distraught family members and may be asked to wait inside of the airport where staff there will work to deal with them as they would in the event of a real emergency.

Ambulances will pick up some victims and take them to Midland Memorial Hospital or to Odessa where emergency room staff will then conduct their own drills as they respond to the mock injuries, Ruff said.

Other victims will be transported to "family reunification" spots or the terminal building to re-connect with the volunteers playing their distraught relatives.

The Transportation Security Administration also will participate and run a security drill, Ruff said.

With the fire department, area law enforcement, airport personnel and hospitals all participating, the drill is meant to provide a look at what response times would be from each

'Amnesty' ad jolts Texas' US Senate race

By Will Weissert
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The already vicious Republican primary battle for a U.S. Senate seat turned nastier Friday when Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst implied that tea party favorite Ted Cruz supports amnesty for illegal immigrants, and Cruz retaliating by saying Dewhurst is "race-baiting" and making generalities about Hispanics.

Dewhurst and Cruz, an attorney and former state solicitor general, are seeking the GOP nomination to replace retiring Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, as are former Dallas Mayor Tom Leppert and Craig James, an ex-NFL running back and ESPN commentator. If no one gets at least 50 percent of the votes in Tuesday's primary, a runoff is set for July 31.

Dewhurst's television ads have long attacked Cruz for his firm representing a Chinese tire manufacturer in an intellectual property dispute with an American company. But Cruz has won the support of national limited-government groups, such as the Club for Growth, which have organized media campaigns claiming Dewhurst has been too moderate during his nearly nine years overseeing the Texas Senate.

Tensions spiked, though, over a 60-second Dewhurst radio spot featuring two women talking while birds chirp and children play in the background. It says Cruz "helps run two national organizations that have been leading the push to give amnesty to illegal immigrants."

Cruz hasn't denied being involved with the Hispanic Alliance for Prosperity Institute and the Hispanic Leadership Fund but said he's always opposed amnesty. He denounced the ad on a Dallas radio station as "designed to say anyone who is Hispanic must support amnesty."

"It's flat-out lies," he said. "They should pull this ad. It's deceptive and it's unethical."

Cruz's father, Rafael, was born in Cuba and fought with Fidel Castro's rebels, but fled to the United States before Castro took power. And Dewhurst once worked for the CIA, learning Spanish on assignment in Bolivia.

Both sides said the ad indicates desperation. Cruz said that "the moderate establishment has circled their wagons around David Dewhurst," and his campaign issued a statement accusing the lieutenant governor of "shameful race-baiting." Dewhurst supporters charged that Cruz's only defense from the issues raised by the ad was to play the race card.

The Dewhurst campaign made available for comment Jacob Monty, who serves with Cruz on the board of the Hispanic Alliance for Prosperity Institute and said the right-leaning policy group has "been champions of immigration reform since 2002."

Monty added of Cruz, "he defended our position. But that was pre-tea party."

"I think it's a fallacy that, in order to be elected, you have to use illegal as a noun and call people 'illegals,' " he said. "Ted Cruz was there with us. He's not there now."

The Cruz campaign countered with its own surrogate, George P. Bush, who serves on the boards of both the Hispanic Alliance for Prosperity and the Hispanic Leadership Fund.

"It's very disappointing to see David Dewhurst resort to blatantly false attack ads," Bush, nephew of former President George W. Bush, said in a statement. "I was offended not only as a Hispanic but as a Republican."

Meanwhile, the U.S. Justice Department said it plans to monitor primary elections in three Houston-area counties to ensure compliance with the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Monitors will be assigned to polling places in Harris, Fort Bend and Jefferson counties and will watch and record activities during voting.

Republican U.S. Senate candidates Craig James and Ted Cruz participate in a live debate held in the LeRoy and Lucile Melcher Center for Public Broadcasting at the University of Houston on May 3. A new TV ad from Dewhurst heated up the contentious race after it claimed fellow candidate Ted Cruz supports amnesty for illegal immigrants.

Ex-soldier sentenced to prison

A former Army soldier has been sentenced to a year in prison after failing to register as a sex offender as required after his conviction in Colorado in 2009.

A news release from the U.S. Attorney's office Friday said that 29-year-old Richard Michael Nieves, who in March pleaded guilty of failing to register, was sentenced Friday.

In 2009, Nieves was convicted of possessing child pornography while stationed in Fort Carson, Colo., and sentenced to four months. Because of the conviction, he was required to register as a sex offender.

In 2011, after moving to New York from Abilene, where he'd worked for a year, Nieves failed to update Texas officials of his move and to register in New York.

Nieves was ordered to surrender to prison officials June 22.

Lawmakers hoping to promote diverse juries

Several lawmakers upset by an all-white jury's acquittal of a former Houston police officer in the alleged beating of a teenage burglary suspect say they plan to present a bill at next year's state legislative session to promote diverse juries.

Andrew Blomberg, who is white, was acquitted earlier this month for his part in the alleged beating of Chad Holley, who is black, during a 2010 arrest.

Congressional Democrats Al Green and Sheila Jackson Lee said Friday at a Houston news conference they will work with state Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, on legislation to review the number of single-race juries that have decided trials around the state. They also want to require officials to explain why such juries tried a case.

Woman fatally shot outside Texas daycare

A 38-year-old Nederland man has been charged with murder in the fatal shooting of a woman in the parking lot of the Southeast Texas daycare where she worked.

Nederland police said Travis Wade Smith is in custody having surrendered at the police station. Smith's attorney did not immediately return a call to The Associated Press.

Police Chief Darrell Bush said 36-year-old Hollie Crenshaw was killed around 6 a.m. Friday as she prepared to open the Round the Clock Child Development Center in Nederland, located between Beaumont and Port Arthur.

Bush said the alleged shooter is believed to be the woman's boyfriend.

Police said the man pulled into the parking lot and fired three shots as the woman was getting out of her car.

MCALLEN

Texas deputy arrested on drug charge

A federal judge in McAllen has ordered a South Texas sheriff's deputy held without bond for his alleged role in a cocaine trafficking conspiracy.

Federal prosecutors said Duval County Sheriff's deputy Ruben Silva took $5,000 in payment and planned to smuggle cocaine in his sheriff's department vehicle from the Rio Grande Valley north through the Border Patrol inland checkpoint. He was arrested Thursday.

A Drug Enforcement Administration informant and undercover drug task force officers participated in the bust which included arrests of two others with whom Silva was allegedly conspiring.

High-speed chase ends in crash, arrest of 2 men

By James Cannon
Staff Writer

A high-speed chase of a stolen car ended with a collision and a foot chase Friday afternoon in the area of Wadley Avenue and "A" Street.

The driver, Jeremy Govan, 27, is charged with a third-degree felony of evading arrest in a motor vehicle and a third-degree felony charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Govan also faces misdemeanor charges of evading arrest on foot and leaving the scene of the accident. The passenger, Eddie Frasier, 55, is charged with a third-degree felony of evading arrest in a motor vehicle.

Midland Police Department officers noticed the stolen Jeep Cherokee near the intersection of Big Spring Street and Veterans Airpark Lane. A notice about the stolen vehicle was released by MPD Friday morning. Once officers tried to stop the vehicle, Govan and Frasier fled, striking one vehicle in a parking lot, Sgt. Jason Lee said.

There were minor injuries in the first accident.

The chase continued, and the Jeep traveled south on "A" Street and then west on Wadley Avenue, striking a vehicle. Frasier was apprehended on scene while Govan fled on foot, moving north on "A" Street. Govan was found in a draw near Midland College. No one was injured in the second accident.

No bond information was available by press time Friday.

NM governor names Deming Republican to judgeship

Associated Press

SANTA FE, N.M. — Gov. Susana Martinez has appointed Deming lawyer Jarod Hofacket to a judgeship in southern New Mexico.

Martinez announced the appointment on Friday.

Hofacket at least temporarily fills a vacancy created by the retirement of District Judge Gary Jeffreys in the 6th Judicial District of Grant, Hidalgo and Luna counties. However, the winner of the general election will end up serving on the court.

Hofacket is among two Republicans seeking their party's nomination in the primary election. Two Democrats also are running for the judgeship.

Hofacket earned his law degree from Texas Tech University.

The Republican governor made her selection from four nominees recommended by an independent commission. Martinez had asked the nominating commission to send her more names after it initially recommended one candidate.

Animal Services offers 2-for-1 cat adoptions

From staff reports

Animal Services staff are looking for good homes for more than two dozen kittens that now are at the shelter.

Director Paul O'Neill said they've had an influx of kittens at the shelter and they're offering two-for-one adoptions starting Tuesday and running through the end of June. They hope to encourage Midlanders to give the cats a family.

"Hopefully, we can give a lot of them good homes," O'Neill said.

In April, 10 cats were adopted from the shelter. Another 19 were transferred to the Midland Humane Coalition for adoption, O'Neill said.

O'Neill said they'll need more adoptions through June if the cats will be placed in a home.

Through June 29, two kittens can be adopted for $35, O'Neill said.

Adult cats also can be adopted through the special. However, even with the second adoption fee waived, both cats will need to be spayed or neutered, microchipped and given a rabies shot, which brings the cost to $72, O'Neill said.

In a typical month, O'Neill said they're able to hold cats until they can find them a home. However, he said with the influx this month, they need to find the animals permanent places to live.

Today in history

Today is Saturday, May 26, the 147th day of 2012. There are 219 days left in the year.

Today's highlights

On May 26, 1942, the U.S. War Department formally established the Armed Forces Radio Service (AFRS) during World War II as a way of boosting morale among American troops overseas. That same day, Radio Tokyo boasted of recent victories in the Pacific War and declared that "the Japanese people can look forward to a triumphal march into London and a victory march in New York."

On this date

In 1868, the impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson ended with his acquittal on the remaining charges.

In 1940, the evacuation of more than 338,000 Allied troops from Dunkirk, France, began during World War II.

Firefighters battle a wind-driven fire that has destroyed at least two homes and a number of outbuildings in Topaz Ranch Estates, south of Gardnerville, Nev., on Tuesday.

911 tape reveals early concern over burn

Associated Press

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Questions are being raised over fire crews' initial response to a backyard burn that rekindled two days later, destroyed two homes in a rural Nevada community and scorched 7,500 acres.

According to a 911 recording obtained by The Associated Press, resident Bill Elliott called emergency personnel Sunday morning to report that his neighbor's permitted burn in the Topaz Ranch Estates appeared to be out of control.

"It looks like it's getting into the trees," Elliott said on the tape. "This place is dry like a bone."

Residents said volunteer firefighters with the East Fork Fire Protection District arrived at the scene and then left, apparently without extinguishing the fire.

While community fire departments within the East Fork Fire Protection District rely mainly on volunteers, management personnel are paid county employees.

District Fire Chief Tod Carlini did not immediately respond to messages seeking comment Friday about the response or if firefighters determined the residents had the burn under control when they went to the home nestled against the Pine Nut Mountains. At press briefings earlier in the week, Carlini wouldn't comment on whether the fire department was called out that Sunday, citing the ongoing investigation.

Gusty winds rekindled the fire Tuesday, and it spread quickly through thick brush and dry grasses. Two homes and 17 outbuildings were destroyed. Cooler temperatures that also brought rain and snow to the region Friday helped firefighters, who hoped to have it fully contained sometime Saturday.

Contacted Friday by the AP, Elliott said he and his wife, Lois, were leaving their home in the Douglas County community when he saw the initial fire Sunday.

"The smoke was just billowing," said Elliott, a state emergency management planner. "The flames were higher than the pinion trees that were around."

When asked by the dispatcher if the fire was out of control, Elliott said, "I don't know if they realize it, but I'm realizing it."

Elliott said the residents, who have not been identified, were trying to put out the fire with a garden hose.

Residents are allowed to burn dry vegetation during certain times of the year but must abide by regulations that dictate what can be burned and the size of the burn pile. Douglas County Sheriff's Sgt. Jim Halsey earlier said a preliminary investigation indicated the residential burn exceeded the permit requirements, including ignition of materials prohibited under county regulations.

Violations are a misdemeanor, and offenders can be held responsible for all costs of fire suppression. Results of the investigation — being conducted by Douglas County, the state fire marshal's office and the Bureau of Land Management — will be forwarded to the district attorney's office for review. Douglas County District Attorney Mark Jackson could not be reached Friday for comment.

As of Friday, the cost was estimated at $2.3 million.

National Guard rescues hikers near wildfire

The New Mexico National Guard came to the rescue of six hikers who apparently got disoriented due to smoke from a raging wildfire in the southwestern part of the state.

A guard spokesman saidthe hikers were spotted Friday and one of them had an injured knee and had to be taken to safety by a ground ambulance.

The other four hikers were able to walk out of the Turkey Canyon area about 50 miles south of Silver City.

Col. Michael Montoya said all the hikers are fine. He couldn't immediately provide their names or why they were out hiking in an area where a wildfire was approaching.

The Gila Wilderness blaze is two lightning-sparked fires that have merged and grown to 85,000 acres or more than 130 square miles.

Bus driver taking kids to Disneyland arrested

An alert police officer who boarded a bus full of recent Utah high school graduates headed to Disneyland averted what could have been a deadly road trip after arresting the driver for suspicion of being under the influence of drugs, authorities said Friday.

"There's no other way to put it," said Cedar City police Lt. Darin Adams. "I really hate to think of what would have been. We may have been getting calls today that the bus had crashed and students were dead or injured."

About 100 students from Canyon View High School in southern Utah had just graduated Thursday night and boarded the charter bus for their senior trip, Adams said.

MISD

From 1A

Warren said he believes Moore will be a strong student services director, having served in a similar capacity as executive director of administrative services from 2000-2008.

Executive Director of Elementary Services Linda Jolly will replace Jones as executive director of secondary services. Jolly's previous experience working in high school will serve her well, Warren said.

As chief of staff, Zachary was responsible for overseeing the police, facility, athletic, student services, health services and human resources departments, according to the district's organizational chart. When the executive director of human resource services left in July 2010, Zachary assumed the responsibilities and saw his role in the department increase, Warren said.

"Right now 90 percent of his day is acting as director of [human resources] and he's expressed that's what he wants to do," Warren said.

"That department was in bad shape when he took over and he's done a good job turning it around."

Zachary came to MISD in spring 2002 as assistant superintendent of curriculum and instruction after serving as superintendent of Hull-Daisetta, Hamshire-Fannett, Glen Rose and Comal ISDs.

With two years as Midland's superintendent complete, Warren said he had the time to evaluate his staff and believes he's found the best fit for employees based on their talents.

"Leadership positions at this level are never written on stone, even mine as superintendent," Warren said.

With Zachary's decision to relinquish the role of chief of staff, Warren said he will rename the position to chief operations officer and begin searching for a replacement. With Jolly's new appointment, the position of executive director of elementary services is also open, Warren said.

Both positions have been posted, and Warren said he will consider all applicants, internal and external.

"I many try to bring someone in I've worked with in the past, but we may also have an all star from the district apply," Warren said.

At the April 10 board of trustees meeting, Warren announced San Jacinto Junior High Principal Joanna Rowley will replace Liz Lozano as executive director of bilingual/ESL services. Warren has not announced Lozano's new position.

Administrators part of the executive team not affected by Warren's changes are Chief Financial Officer David Garcia, Executive Director of Accountability Elise Kail, Executive Director of Athletics Todd Howey, Executive Director of Elementary Services Jane Rambo, Executive Director of Facilities James Riggen, Executive Director of Special Services Nancy Isaacs and Executive Director of Technology Tom Holly.

SpaceX makes history with docking

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The private company SpaceX made history Friday with the docking of its Dragon capsule to the International Space Station, the most impressive feat yet in turning routine spaceflight over to the commercial sector.

It marked the first time a business enterprise delivered a supply ship to the space station.

"There's so much that could have gone wrong and it went right," said an elated Elon Musk, the young, driven billionaire behind SpaceX.

"This really is, I think, going to be recognized as a significantly historical step forward in space travel — and hopefully the first of many to come."

SpaceX still has to get its Dragon back next week with a load of science gear; the retro bell-shaped capsule is designed to splash down into the ocean, in the style of the Mercury, Gemini and Apollo programs. But Friday was the crucial step, Musk noted, and NASA agreed the next SpaceX mission could come as early as September.

After a three-day flight from Cape Canaveral, the Dragon closed in on the space station as two control centers — NASA in Houston and SpaceX in Hawthorne, Calif. — worked in tandem. A problem with the capsule laser-tracking system prompted SpaceX controllers to order a temporary retreat, but the problem quickly was resolved.

NASA astronaut Donald Pettit used the space station's 58-foot robot arm to snare the gleaming white Dragon as the two craft soared 250 miles above Australia, a day after a practice fly-by.

"Looks like we've got us a dragon by the tail," Pettit announced once he locked onto Dragon's docking mechanism.

DRILL

agency should an actual disaster occur.

Patrick Repman, district chief with the Midland Fire Department, said typically the drill leads to some improvements in the department's methods. Having volunteers and multiple agencies take part helps to make the drill more realistic so they can identify those improvements that need to be made, he said.

"This type of drill, we try to make it as true to life as we can," he said.

During the 2009 drill — the most recent one to occur — Ruff said they learned their communication systems weren't set up in an ideal manner and after discovering the issues were able to make some fixes.

"There were just small things," she said. "We realized not every agency can talk to every other agency."

Both she and Repman said there typically aren't major malfunctions but often minor issues are discovered.

"It's a learning experience," Ruff said.

The FAA will be on-scene evaluating the drill.

Volunteers will be asked to arrive at 7 a.m. to be prepped for the day. Those wanting to act as victims must be older than 16, though younger volunteers can be assigned as family members.

Breakfast and lunch will be provided and the day counts toward community service hours needed for scholarships and other programs, Ruff said.

HOUSTON

Weekly US oil, gas rig count down by 3 to 1,983

The number of rigs actively exploring for oil and natural gas in the U.S. is down three this week to 1,983.

Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes Inc. reported Friday that 1,383 rigs were exploring for oil and 594 were looking for gas. Six were listed as miscellaneous. A year ago this week, Baker Hughes reported 1,847 rigs.

Of the major oil- and gas-producing states, Colorado gained five rigs; North Dakota four; Alaska two and California one.

Texas declined by eight rigs; Pennsylvania by four; New Mexico and Oklahoma two each and Wyoming one.

Arkansas, Louisiana and West Virginia were unchanged.

NEW YORK

Oil holds near 2012 low, up 20 cents

The price of oil held near the lowest levels of the year on a quiet Friday ahead of the holiday weekend.

Benchmark U.S. crude on Friday added 20 cents to finish the week at $90.86 per barrel in New York while Brent crude rose by 28 cents to end at $106.83 per barrel in London.

Both crude varieties have tumbled this month on forecasts of weaker world demand and higher supplies. U.S. crude closed Wednesday at $89.90, its lowest close since October.

Prices fell in May as the economies of the two biggest oil consumers — the U.S. and China — showed signs of slowing. And many analysts are betting that the European Union will fall into a recession as it struggles with massive government debts. Meanwhile, some of the world's largest oil producing countries have been exporting more crude this year, boosting supplies.

Iran also appears to be interested in defusing tensions over its nuclear program. Tough talk between Iran and the West pushed oil prices higher earlier this year. The U.S. and other world leaders fear Iran is building a nuclear weapon, a charge the oil-rich country denies. Negotiators for the two sides made little progress this week but agreed to further talks, which analysts consider a promising sign.

Gene McGillian, a broker and oil analyst at Tradition Energy, said many investors will avoid making new bets on oil until they get an updated look at the U.S. economy. They'll likely wait for next week's reports on employment, personal incomes and housing, McGillian said.

Icahn spends $785M on Chesapeake stake

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Activist investor Carl Icahn has taken a sizable stake in Chesapeake Energy Corp. and is calling for at least four of company's directors to be replaced.

Icahn spent about $785 million to buy 50.1 million shares, or 7.6 percent, of the second-largest U.S. natural gas producer.

The billionaire investor's stock buy was disclosed in a regulatory filing Friday. It comes as Chesapeake has been hit hard by falling natural gas prices. It is also being criticized for allowing CEO Aubrey McClendon to borrow money from companies that do business with Chesapeake, and allowing him the perk of buying personal stakes in company wells.

McClendon gave up his post as chairman May 1 after reports of his financial dealings were made public. Investors have expressed concerns that the transactions could have influenced the company's business decisions. McClendon said he borrowed $846 million in principal, with some of the loans coming from companies that were planning to buy Chesapeake assets.

Chesapeake is now looking for a non-executive chairman, and Icahn said shareholders need to have input on that decision.

Icahn said he recently met with McClendon and asked him to consider direct shareholder representation on the board. Icahn said Chesapeake Energy refused to consider the suggestion.

"Having the current board select a new chairman without shareholder approval and without allowing for shareholder representation is akin to asking the fox, who has plundered the hen house, to choose another fox to assist it in standing guard over the remaining hens," he wrote in a letter to the company.

More travelers to hit the road this Memorial Day

Associated Press

NEW YORK — More Americans will hit the road this holiday weekend than a year ago. And they'll have a bit more money to spend thanks to lower gas prices.

Memorial Day kicks off the summer travel season, and since pump prices never reached $4 or $5 a gallon, as feared, economists says travelers are likely to dine out or shop more once they pull off the road.

About 30.7 million people will drive more than 50 miles for Memorial Day trips, according to auto club AAA. That's 400,000 more than last year, a jump AAA attributes to improvement in the economy and consumer attitudes.

The number of holiday travelers grows to 34.8 million when you include planes, trains and other means of transportation.

A drop in gas prices encouraged Americans to spend more at restaurants and bars in April. And that trend could continue over the holiday. Pump prices are down 27 cents since their peak in early April, to $3.67 a gallon, where they're likely to stay this weekend, predicts Tom Kloza, the chief oil analyst at the Oil Price Information Service. That's 12 cents cheaper than last year. Over the weekend, U.S. drivers will burn about 1.2 billion gallons of gasoline — and spend $144 million less on gas than last year.

Restaurants, movie theaters and retailers hope some of that savings goes to them. Just last month, AAA and IHS Global Insight, the firm that analyzed the AAA study, were expecting travelers to spend less on entertainment, dining and shopping on vacation and devote more time to family and friends.

Now, travelers might take longer trips or spend more on other things "because there's more money left in their pocket," says John Larson, vice president for IHS.

Still, most people need to restrict their travel budgets. For many, incomes are growing slightly if at all. Household debt remains high. And although the increase in the stock market over the past year has helped some regain wealth lost in the recession, there is still a ways to go. A recent report from the Federal Reserve shows that American household wealth would have to rise by 13 percent to return to pre-recession levels.

While drivers may feel relief at the pump, gas still isn't cheap. Besides last year, the only other time gas was more expensive on Memorial Day was 2008, when it eventually climbed to a record of $4.11 per gallon. This year, gas shot up by 66 cents from January through early April because of a spike in oil prices.

Senate panel reins in Pentagon on clean energy

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's investment in green energy requires too much green paper for some in Congress.

A sharply divided Senate Armed Services Committee voted this week to prohibit the military from spending money on alternative fuels if the cost exceeds traditional fossil fuels such as coal, natural gas and oil. The move underscores congressional concern about the greater expense of clean energy sources such as biofuels as the Pentagon wrestles with smaller budgets. The committee, in crafting a sweeping defense budget for next year, also voted to block Pentagon construction of a biofuels refinery or any other facility to refine biofuels.

Both efforts passed on 13-12 votes that were disclosed Friday.

"In a tough budget climate for the Defense Department, we need every dollar to protect our troops on the battlefield with energy technologies that reduce fuel demand and save lives," said Sen. John McCain of Arizona, the top Republican on the Armed Services Committee. "Spending $26 per gallon of biofuel is not consistent with that goal. The committee's action corrects this misplacement of priorities."

The moves by the Senate panel follow even tougher steps in the Republican-controlled House challenging the Pentagon's investment in clean energy. That version of the defense bill would bar the military from buying alternative fuels if the cost exceeds traditional fossil fuels. The bill also exempts the Pentagon from some requirements under the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007, which is designed to increase production of clean renewable fuels.

The law stipulates that if a federal department or agency uses alternative fuels, they cannot produce more greenhouse gases than regular petroleum.

In threatening to veto the House bill, the White House said it objected to provisions that would affect the Defense Department's "ability to procure alternative fuels and would further increase American reliance on fossil fuels, thereby contributing to geopolitical instability and endangering our interests aboard."

The department is the nation's largest consumer of energy, spending about $15 billion last year on fuel for tanks, ships, aircraft and other operations. In Afghanistan, the military uses more than 50 million gallons of fuel each month.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta recently said higher fuel costs have hit the Pentagon hard, creating a budget shortfall of more than $3 billion.

The Pentagon is pushing for $1.4 billion in next year's budget for investments in clean energy, including hybrid electric drives for ships, more efficient engines, better generators and solar power.

Judge: Anti-gay marriage law is unconstitutional

A judge in California has ruled that the federal law that prohibits recognition of same-sex unions is unconstitutional because it denies long-term health insurance benefits to legal spouses of state employees and retirees.

U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken also concluded Thursday that a section of the federal tax code that made the domestic partners of state workers ineligible for long-term care insurance similarly violates the civil rights of people in gay and lesbian relationships.

Syngenta agrees to settle US lawsuit over herbicide

EAST ST. LOUIS — Swiss chemicals maker Syngenta's agreement to pay $105 million to settle a nearly 8-year-old lawsuit over one of its popular agricultural herbicides could help reimburse about 1,887 community water systems that have had to filter the chemical from its drinking water, a plaintiffs' attorneys said Friday.

The proposed deal, announced Friday by Syngenta, must be approved by a federal judge in southern Illinois, where community water systems from at least six states have sought to have the company reimburse them for filtering weed-killing atrazine from their supplies.

As part of the deal, community water systems serving more than 52 million Americans may be eligible to make a claim, said Stephen Tillery, the St. Louis attorney behind the class-action lawsuit.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Two giants in the wrestling world are getting ready to rumble — in a courtroom.

Nashville-based Total Nonstop Action Wrestling has sued World Wrestling Entertainment, accusing WWE of obtaining secret contract information in an attempt to poach TNA's wrestlers.

TNA's top wrestling talent includes veteran wrestler and actor Hulk Hogan and Ric Flair. The company says in the lawsuit that WWE appears to have already tried to lure Flair and is pursuing TNA's other wrestlers.

An attorney for WWE denied the allegations. A message left for TNA's corporate counsel on Friday was not immediately returned.

The lawsuit, which was filed in Nashville this week, claims that a former TNA employee leaked secret information to WWE, which included the terms of the contracts TNA has with its wrestlers.

Armed with the secret contract information, TNA says its Connecticut-based competitor is now in a position to steal its wrestlers by offering better deals.

"The disclosure exposes TNA to potential liability with respect to its contract — WWE knows the details of TNA's contractual relationships with its wrestling talent, which could allow WWE to place itself in the right place, at the right time, with an offer to TNA's talent at just the right place," the lawsuit says.

Jerry McDevitt, WWE's longtime attorney, said WWE has not tried to lure Flair or any other wrestlers under contract with TNA.

The lawsuit claims that former TNA employee Brian Wittenstein went to work for WWE and then leaked the information.

A message left at a phone number listed for Wittenstein in Nashville was not immediately returned Friday.

He signed a contract with TNA saying he would not disclose any of the company's confidential information after his employment ended.

McDevitt said that WWE never asked Wittenstein to disclose the information and that the company fired him when he did. Furthermore, WWE told TNA officials about the breach and sent back the information Wittenstein leaked.

"To us, it's a no good deed goes unpunished kind of thing," McDevitt said. "They sued us for doing the right thing."

Davidson County Chancellor Ellen Hobbs Lyle has signed a restraining order barring WWE from using the information to solicit wrestlers from TNA and from interfering with any of its contracts. The order also bars WWE from destroying any of the information.

A hearing on the matter is set for June 11.

Homeless man charged in Kansas TV station attack

Associated Press

TOPEKA, Kan. — A homeless military veteran has been charged with breaking into a Kansas television station and attacking several employees.

Shawnee County records show four felonies and two misdemeanors were filed late Thursday against 48-year-old Ray Anthony Miles. He remained jailed Friday on $100,000 bond in Wednesday's melee at WIBW-TV in Topeka.

The station said the man became upset after learning that it would not do a story about his problems with the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs.

Miles allegedly attacked people, including with a knife, after throwing a lamp through the station's glass front doors. None of the injuries was serious.

The public defender's office didn't immediately return a phone message from The Associated Press seeking comment Friday.

Methane bacteria project rejected

Associated Press

GILLETTE, Wyo. — Federal land managers have rejected an application by a Colorado company to use bacteria to produce methane from northeast Wyoming coal beds.

Luca Technologies Inc. wants to use a process called methane farming in which water and chemicals are injected into a coal seam, activating microbes that live in the coal. The microbes eat the coal and produce methane.

The permit rejection is but one recent setback for the Golden, Colo.-based company, not the least of which has been very low prices for natural gas. Last month, Luca withdrew its plans for an initial public offering, citing "adverse market conditions." Gas prices in recent months have plunged to 10-year lows.

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management turned down the permit for Luca after it refused to pay an additional $40,000 for the cost of processing its application, on top of $40,000 it paid previously.

Luca executives said they refused the additional payment because it appeared the BLM would never approve the permit. Company CEO Bob Cavnar accused the federal agency of favoring the coal mining industry, which has expressed concerns about methane farming.

BLM spokeswoman Lesley Elser said the original amount had been exhausted and that the company has "to pay into the cost recovery account for the fees for permitting and they didn't pay the account, so it was overdrawn."

Obama off on thrifty spending claim

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House is aggressively pushing the idea that, contrary to widespread belief, President Barack Obama is tightfisted with taxpayer dollars. To back it up, the administration cites a media report that claims federal spending is rising at the slowest pace since the Eisenhower years.

"Federal spending since I took office has risen at the slowest pace of any president in almost 60 years," Obama said at a campaign rally Thursday in Des Moines, Iowa.

The problem with that rosy claim is that the Wall Street bailout is part of the calculation. The bailout ballooned the 2009 budget just before Obama took office, making Obama's 2010 results look smaller in comparison. And as almost $150 billion of the bailout was paid back during Obama's watch, the analysis counted them as government spending cuts.

It also assumes Obama had less of a role setting the budget for 2009 than he really did.

Obama rests his claim on an analysis by MarketWatch, a financial information and news service owned by Dow Jones & Co. The analysis simply looks at the year-to-year topline spending number for the government but doesn't account for distortions baked into the figures by the Wall Street bailout and government takeover of the mortgage lending giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac.

The MarketWatch study claims that spending is grown only 1.4 percent over 2010-2013, or annual increases averaging 0.4 percent over that period. Those are stunningly low figures considering that Obama rammed through Congress an $831 billion stimulus measure in early 2009 and presided over significant increases in annual spending by domestic agencies at the same time the cost of benefit programs like Social Security, Medicare and the Medicaid were ticking steadily higher.

Associated Press

President Barack Obama speaks at a campaign grassroots event at the Iowa state fairgrounds in Des Moines, Iowa, on Thursday.

Fact Check

A fairer calculation would give Obama much of the responsibility for an almost 10 percent budget boost in 2009, then a 13 percent increase over 2010-2013, or average annual growth of spending of just more than 3 percent over that period.

So, how does the administration arrive at its rosy claim?

First, there's the Troubled Assets Relief Program, the official name for the Wall Street bailout. First, companies got a net $151 billion from TARP in 2009, making 2010 spending look smaller. Then, because banks and Wall Street firms repaid a net $110 billion in TARP funds in 2010, Obama is claiming credit for cutting spending by that much.

The combination of TARP lending in one year and much of that money being paid back in the next makes Obama's spending record for 2010 look $261 billion thriftier than it really was. Only by that measure does Obama "cut" spending by 1.8 percent in 2010 as the analysis claims.

The federal takeover of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac also makes Obama's record on spending look better than it was. The government spent $96 billion on the Fannie-Freddie takeovers in 2009 but only $40 billion on them in 2010. By the administration's reckoning, the $56 billion difference was a spending cut by Obama.

Taken together, TARP and the takeover of Fannie and Freddie combine to give Obama an undeserved $317 billion swing in the 2010 figures and the resulting 1.8 percent cut from 2009. A fairer reading is an almost 8 percent increase.

Those two bailouts account for $72 billion more in cuts in 2011. Obama supported the bailouts.

There's also the question of how to treat the 2009 fiscal year, which actually began Oct. 1, 2008, almost four months before Obama took office. Typically, the remaining eight months get counted as part of the prior president's spending since the incoming president usually doesn't change it much until the following October. The MarketWatch analysis assigned 2009 to former President George W. Bush, though it gave Obama responsibility that year for a $140 million chunk of the 2009 stimulus bill.

But Obama's role in 2009 spending was much bigger than that. For starters, he signed nine spending bills funding every Cabinet agency except Defense, Veterans Affairs and Homeland Security. While the numbers don't jibe exactly, Obama bears the chief responsibility for an 11 percent, $59 billion increase in non-defense spending in 2009. Then there's a 9 percent, $109 billion increase in combined defense and non-defense appropriated outlays in 2010, a year for which Obama is wholly responsible.

As other critics have noted, including former Congressional Budget Office Director Douglas Holtz-Eakin, the MarketWatch analysis also incorporates CBO's annual baseline as its estimate for fiscal years 2012 and 2013. That gives Obama credit for three events unlikely to occur:

- $65 billion in 2013 from automatic, across-the-board spending cuts slated to take effect next January.
- Cuts in Medicare payments to physicians.
- The expiration of refundable tax cuts that are "scored" as spending in federal ledgers.

Lawmakers are unlikely to allow the automatic cuts to take full effect, but it's at best a guessing game as to what will really happen in 2013. A better measure is Obama's request for 2013.

"You can only make him look good by ignoring the early years and adopting the hope and not the reality of the years in his budget," said Holtz-Eakin, a GOP economist and president of the American Action Forum, a free market think tank.

So how does Obama measure up?

If one assumes that TARP and the takeover of Fannie and Freddie by the government as one-time budgetary anomalies and remove them from calculations — an approach taken by Holtz-Eakin — you get the following picture:

- A 9.7 percent increase in 2009, much of which is attributable to Obama.
- A 7.8 percent increase in 2010, followed by slower spending growth over 2011-13. Much of the slower growth reflects the influence of Republicans retaking control of the House and their budget and debt deal last summer with Obama. All told, government spending now appears to be growing at an annual rate of roughly 3 percent over the 2010-2013 period, rather than the 0.4 percent claimed by Obama and the MarketWatch analysis.

Fast-moving wildfire burns nearly 20,000 acres

NEWBERRY — A fast-moving wildfire fed by dry conditions in Michigan's Upper Peninsula continued to burn Friday, consuming nearly 20,000 acres and prompting evacuations of homes and sections of a state park, officials said.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources said the blaze it's calling the Duck Lake Fire was in an area of Luce County north of Newberry that includes Lake Superior State Forest land. It was detected Wednesday after a lightning strike and intensified Thursday, scorching the tops of jack pine trees as flames hurtled northward.

The fire nearly doubled in size overnight and reached Lake Superior's southern shore Friday, said Ed Golder, DNR spokesman. It was being compared to the Sleeper Lake Fire of 2007, which burned more than 18,000 acres in the same area.

KANSAS

Governor signs measure blocking Islamic law

TOPEKA — Kansas Gov. Sam Brownback has signed a law aimed at keeping the state's courts or government agencies from basing decisions on Islamic or other foreign legal codes, and a national Muslim group's spokesman said Friday that a court challenge is likely.

The new law, taking effect July 1, doesn't specifically mention Shariah law, which broadly refers to codes within the Islamic legal system. Instead, it says courts, administrative agencies or state tribunals can't base rulings on any foreign law or legal system that would not grant the parties the same rights guaranteed by state and U.S. constitutions.

"This bill should provide protection for Kansas citizens from the application of foreign laws," said Stephen Gele, spokesman for the American Public Policy Alliance, a Michigan group promoting model legislation similar to the new Kansas law. "The bill does not read, in any way, to be discriminatory against any religion."

But supporters have worried specifically about Shariah law being applied in Kansas court cases, and the alliance says on its website that it wants to protect Americans' freedoms from "infiltration" by foreign laws and legal doctrines, "especially Islamic Shariah Law."

Sandusky charity to shut down, transfer programs

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The charity for troubled youths started by Jerry Sandusky more than three decades ago — and through which the retired Penn State assistant football coach met the boys he is charged with sexually abusing — said Friday it is seeking court approval to shut down and transfer its programs to a Texas-based youth ministry that serves abused and neglected children.

The Second Mile said it has been crippled financially by the child-sex abuse scandal involving its founder and onetime public face and concluded after a six-month internal review that it had no other option but to close.

The State College-based charity began the legal process of dissolving itself Friday, submitting a plan to Centre County Court that would transfer its programs and millions of dollars in assets to Arrow Child & Family Ministries Inc., a $36 million charity that operates in Texas, Pennsylvania, Maryland, California and Honduras.

"While we are sad that The Second Mile will not continue running programs, we are heartened that the important work of helping children — and their families — reach their full potential will go on," the charity's interim president and chief executive, David Woodle, said in a statement.

The sign outside the State College, Pa., office of The Second Mile is seen March 26. The charity for troubled youths started by Jerry Sandusky more than three decades ago — and through which the retired Penn State assistant football coach met the boys he is charged with sexually abusing — said Friday it is seeking court approval to shut down and transfer its programs to a Texas-based youth ministry that serves abused and neglected children.

The announcement was widely expected after Sandusky's November arrest plunged The Second Mile into crisis. Donations dried up, volunteers fled and organizations that once referred children to The Second Mile said they no longer would.

Prosecutors allege that Sandusky found his victims through the charity he started in 1977 and committed many of his offenses inside Penn State football buildings. He has pleaded innocent to more than 50 counts of sexual abuse involving 10 alleged victims and awaits a June trial.

The Second Mile said in its petition Friday that "it became immediately apparent that the allegation against Sandusky, especially as they focused on child sexual abuse, jeopardized the very existence" of the nonprofit.

The Second Mile considered attempting to restructure itself as a smaller organization — or discontinuing its programs entirely — but settled on a third option that Woodle said was the "most attractive in that the programs will be continuing and the kids who need those services" will continue to get them.

One popular program, Summer Challenge Camp, teaches life skills, conflict resolution and goal-setting to 300 to 400 troubled children each year. Arrow plans to maintain the camp, along with mentoring programs, an institute to promote leadership skills and support for foster families.

"We got many, many emails that said, 'You've got to keep those programs,'" Woodle told The Associated Press.

From its beginnings as a home for foster children, The Second Mile grew to become one of the largest providers of youth social services in Pennsylvania. The nonprofit thrived because of Sandusky's prominence as a defensive coach at Penn State, its close ties to university donors and leaders, and its use of Penn State's athletic fields for its camps serving at-risk children. The late coach Joe Paterno often served as master of ceremonies at The Second Mile fundraisers.

Ex-Penn State president sues, eyes Sandusky emails

Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Former Penn State University President Graham Spanier has filed a civil lawsuit to force the school to release emails related to the Jerry Sandusky child sex abuse scandal.

The lawsuit was filed late Friday in Centre County court and concerns an internal investigation, led by ex-FBI chief Louis Freeh, that Penn State is conducting about the scandal. It was first reported by the Centre Daily Times newspaper on its website.

Spanier isn't asking for money in the lawsuit, which claims he first was told Penn State emails from before 2004 didn't exist and that he recently learned at least some of those emails have been retrieved but the school refuses to allow him to see them.

New club team offers local soccer players another option

By Len Hayward
Sports Editor

The situation for older high school soccer players in the Permian Basin was pretty simple, either play in the Metroplex or risk not playing at all at a time that is critical for a young soccer player's career.

By the time a player had reached a junior or senior season the options were limited in the Permian Basin, and the main options required extensive travel to larger metropolitan areas, which in turn costs plenty of money.

This year, though, older high school boys soccer players will have a chance to play on a team based in the area with the formation of the FC Dallas West Texas Super 20s. The team is in its infancy and is working on a shoestring budget, but for the players it's a chance to play at a high level before going to college and while still in high school.

"This is actually a great opportunity people older than us from the area haven't had," said Wes Blue, who graduated from Midland High and will play at Wayland Baptist in the fall. "It's a really competitive league to go into right before college and it's a higher standard. So it's good."

The team will compete in the United Soccer League's Super 20s League in the Mid-South Division with teams from across the state and features a roster of players from high schools in the Permian Basin and New Mexico. The team will open its season at 8 p.m. today at Grande Communications Stadium against the Houston-based Texas Dutch Lions.

Shane Barden is the team's head coach. He has experience coaching in college and high school and was also a prominent club coach in the area. He said simply "it's tough to be a soccer player here."

Barden said FC Dallas West Texas Director of Coaching Hobie Richardson asked him about doing it and he was willing partly because he has a son who will be a senior next year at Midland High and was going to be playing somewhere else this summer. Barden added that he wanted to help give other players his son's age in the area a chance to play closer to home.

"The PDL team in theory, those guys should be 20-25 and they should be upper classmen college players and guys looking to be pros," Barden said. "We go below those guys, with high school juniors to college sophomores and that's giving them a summer league. It's a wooden bat league so to speak."

Barden said the games they will play in will give players who haven't signed a chance to play in front of college scouts in

Grabbing the spotlight

Williams, Sanchez shine during the Rebels' spring game

By Jordan Mason
Sports Writer

The Lee football team knew what it was going to get from proven commodities like Talor Nunez, its returning starter under center, and Jason McAfee, the Rebels' second-leading rusher in 2011, coming into Friday.

So for coach James Morton, it was nice to see players like juniors Daravion Williams and Abel Sanchez step into the spotlight as the two former junior varsity players shined in the annual spring game.

Maroon	24
White	19

Sanchez had the longest run of the day on a 62-yard touchdown and tossed a 43-yard score, while Williams ran for the game-winning touchdown as the Maroon team defeated the White team, 24-19, at Grande Communications Stadium.

"That's the thing that I've stressed all along is that our depth of our skill positions and our line is a plus for us," Morton said.

Sanchez and Williams, teammates on Lee's undefeated JV Silver team last fall, helped prove Morton right as Sanchez rushed for a game-high 121 yards and Williams rushed for 89 yards and two touchdowns, including a 5-yard plunge with five seconds to play that was the difference in the final score.

"(Chris) Lara and Jesse (Garcia) just told me to follow them, and I followed them," a smiling Williams said after the game. "It feels pretty good."

The game didn't start exactly the way Morton had hoped, with the two teams combining for four penalties and four punts on the first four series of the game. Morton said Wednesday that the randomly assigned teams might lead to a bit of inconsistency, but that didn't stop him from getting upset early in the game.

"I was going to stay out of it, not get emotionally attached to the spring game, (but) in a couple of series early I kind of got emotionally involved.," Morton said. "But for the most part, I was real pleased with what happened."

The game turned after that thanks to the play of the veteran Rebels, who impressed as well.

Early success of Spurs' superstars eludes OKC

By Paul J. Weber
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — They're small markets with once-in-a-generation forwards, All-Star point guards, left-handed sparkplugs off the bench and closely linked front offices. In the entire NBA, San Antonio and Oklahoma City are about as similar as it gets.

Except the championships that came quickly for the Spurs, and the Thunder are still chasing their first one.

"I know that what happened to me isn't something that happens often," said Spurs guard Manu Ginobili, whose 2003 rookie season ended with a title.

The Spurs and Thunder begin the Western Conference finals Sunday in the first playoff series between two of the three winningest teams in the West the last three seasons. Second are the Lakers, who won their last title in 2010 behind Kobe Bryant and Pau Gasol. San Antonio's celebrated Big Three — Tim Duncan, Parker and Ginobili — have three championships in the last decade and the most regular-season wins in the NBA since 2009.

Then there's Oklahoma City.

Superstars Kevin Durant and Russell Westbrook have led a stunning turnaround for a franchise just four years removed from having one of the worst records in the NBA. Even Bryant, Michael Jordan and Shaquille O'Neal waited at least four seasons before getting sized for their first championship rings.

"I don't think their timeline is behind anyone," Spurs general manager R.C. Buford said of the Thunder.

Instead, it's the Spurs who are the anomaly.

Duncan won a title in only his second season in 1999, as did Parker four years later. Now both now stand in the way of Durant and Westbrook.

Spurs coach Gregg Popovich on Friday credited the Thunder for speeding through a maturation process that has left the franchise ready to compete for a championship after feeling the "bumps and bruises."

Duncan said the Spurs didn't win their titles unscathed, either — despite theirs coming much quicker.

"I was lucky enough to get one really early in my career, along with other guys," Duncan said. "But we all had to work very hard for them and we all had to go through different situations, scenarios to get there. Our road luckily ended with a lot more titles than

Dufner has 2-stroke lead halfway through Colonial

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Jason Dufner lists Ben Hogan as his hero.

At Hogan's Alley, Dufner had the lead halfway through the Colonial with a chance for a Texas two-step that only Hogan has accomplished.

Dufner had a bogey-free 6-under 64 on another windy day Friday to reach 11-under 129. A week after winning the Byron Nelson Championship, Dufner had a two-stroke lead over Zach Johnson — the 2010 winner who shot a 67.

The only player to win both PGA Tour events in the Dallas-Fort Worth market in the same year was Hogan in 1946.

"That would be great company to join, obviously," Dufner said. "To have anything compared to him or be talked in the same sentence with him is something that would be pretty unique and special to me."

With the way Dufner is playing these days, his game certainly is in a different class.

Both of Dufner's PGA Tour victories came in his previous three starts. He has led or shared the lead after 11 of his last 34 rounds.

"When I step to the first tee, I feel like I'm going to play a good round of golf. That's a nice way to play. It's a comfortable way to play," Dufner said. "I'm just trying to be confident and think about the things I've been doing for almost a year now, and realize that those are the things that are making me successful out here, and not get too caught up in everything else that's going on around me."

Johnson, who had an opening bogey-free 64, started the second round eagle-birdie-bogey. Then there was a four-hole stretch on the back nine when he alternated birdies and bogeys twice.

During the third round Saturday, Johnson will be paired with his buddy Dufner.

"He's got a good rhythm about him, about his game right now," Johnson said. "But it's irrelevant who I play with. I'm not playing against him. I'm playing against the golf course and the conditions and the elements that are presented. So that's my focus."

Two years ago, Johnson set the Colonial tournament scoring record at 21-under 259 en route to the last of his seven PGA Tour victories.

Van Pelt (64) and Tommy Gainey (67) were tied for third at 133, a stroke better than Tom Gillis (69).

Defending Crowne Plaza Invitational at Colonial champion David Toms shot a 71 and missed the cut at 5-over 145.

With the wind again blowing steady about 20 mph with higher gusts, Dufner stood in the middle of the fairway at No. 5, his 14th hole of the day. Dufner stepped back twice before changing clubs, then hit the approach to about 18 feet for his sixth and last birdie.

That is the end of Colonial's "horrible horseshoe" — as Nos. 3-5 are known because of their layout and with the longest par 4s sandwiching a 243-yard par 3.

Dufner has played those holes 4 under through two rounds, and wasn't even aware of the trio's reputation.

"It's just a product of playing well and having good control of my golf ball," he said. "It doesn't really matter what holes you're playing."

From staff reports

SPRINGDALE, ARK. — A pair of three-run innings proved to be more than enough for Northwest Arkansas in a 10-3 victory over the Midland RockHounds Friday at Arvest Ballpark.

Even with the loss, the RockHounds still took two out of three from the Naturals and now head to Tulsa to begin a three-game series.

Shawn Haviland (2-4) took the loss as he gave up six runs (five earned) on six hits, while striking out four, walking two and hitting two batters.

The Naturals got to Haviland early as they scored three runs in the first inning and also had a leadoff home run by Yem Prades.

Prades' homer was the first of three solo shots by the Naturals as Carlo Testa went yard in the sixth and John Whittleman added a solo blast in the eighth.

Anthony Aliotti had a solo home run for the RockHounds in the third and was 3 for 4 on the night with an RBI and three runs scored.

The RockHounds had 11 hits but Elisaul Pinementel (2-2) and Michael Mariot combined to limit the RockHounds from doing much damage.

Rams push across winning run in the 7th

On a night where hard-hit balls were hard to come by, it was only fitting that the winning run scored without a base hit.

El Paso Montwood turned a hit batter, three walks and a key error into the winning run in the top of the seventh inning to take a tight 2-1 victory against Southlake Carroll on a windy Friday night at Citibank Ballpark.

The second game of the best-of-three Class 5A regional semifinal series is set for 11 a.m. today at Citibank Ballpark.

Rams second baseman Eder Erives drew a two-out walk with the bases loaded to bring in pinch runner Ruben Solis for the eventual winning run.

Montwood managed three hits off Carroll starter Greg Maisto, but the Dragons (21-10) also had two errors that helped lead to both runs and offensively they stranded nine base runners.

"I think especially with the speed we had coming off the bench (we could score)," said Montwood coach Tom Carrillo said. "You know they've been playing like this all year long and I guess that's why we are 34-2. We played good defense and (Avila) had some trouble at the beginning but he settled down after a while."

The game was a pitcher's duel as Maisto and Montwood hurler Saul Avila kept both teams off balance much of the night as Avila scattered seven hits over seven innings.

But in the top of the seventh, Montwood's Wes Jordan drew a lead-off walk and Eric Soto was hit by a pitch. Then the two advanced to second and third on a throwing error by Maisto. Carroll coach Larry Hughes decided to intentionally walk leadoff hitter Chris Benitez to load the bases with one out, but Erives drew the bases loaded walk for the winning run.

"We made too many mistakes," Carroll coach Larry Hughes said. "We ran through a stop sign in the first inning, and we missed several signals that cost us. We just made too many mistakes, and they played well and their pitcher was tough."

Carroll did get out of the inning without giving up another run as Ben Sego came on to relieve Maisto, who threw 125 pitches and had six walks and three strikeouts, but couldn't muster any offense against Avila in the seventh to mount a comeback.

"We'll try again, and try to get it right again (today)," Hughes said.

DNA on beer can needle 'likely' belongs to Clemens

By Joseph White
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A needle stored with a beer can appeared to contain an extremely tiny amount of Roger Clemens' DNA, which turned out to be good news and bad news for both sides in the perjury trial of the seven-time Cy Young Award winner.

A forensic scientist on Friday linked Clemens to cotton balls and a syringe needle saved from an alleged steroids injection 11 years ago. His testimony, laced with statistics and probabilities, was one of the last pieces of the government's case in its effort to prove that the pitcher lied to Congress in 2008 when he denied using performance-enhancing substances.

Under cross-examination, Clemens' lawyer tried to poke holes in the physical evidence. He got the expert to acknowledge there were "hundreds of thousands" of white males in the United States who could be a match for the scant amount of DNA found on the needle, and that it's "conceivable" the cotton balls could have been contaminated by beer and saliva.

Prosecutors had hoped to wrap up their case heading into the long holiday weekend as the trial reached the end of its sixth week, but the DNA expert's testimony took much longer than expected. U.S. District Judge Reggie Walton then ended the session a half-hour early when one of the jurors learned that her mother had died.

The judge said he doesn't expect the juror, a woman who works in law enforcement with the local public transportation authority, to return. Two jurors have previously been dismissed for sleeping, and another departure would leave only one alternate in a trial expected to last at least two more weeks.

The government's key witness, longtime Clemens strength coach Brian McNamee, said he injected Clemens with steroids in 1998, 2000 and 2001 and with human growth hormone in 2000. He said he kept the needle and other waste from a 2001 injection and stored it in and around a beer can in a FedEx box in his home for more than six years before turning it over to federal investigators.

Alan Keel of Forensic Science Associates told jurors that the DNA found on two cotton balls was "unique to one person who has ever lived on the planet" — Clemens. He said that one of the cotton balls had a random match possibility of one in 15.4 trillion for Clemens' DNA, and the other was one in 173 trillion, when compared to the population of white people in the U.S.

But the needle was not as conclusive. Keel was able to detect only six to 12 cells for testing when he examined it. A drop of blood, by comparison, contains up to 30,000 cells.

The match: one in 449 for Clemens.

"That means that Mr. Clemens is the likely source of that biology," Keel said.

Knowing that the defense would attempt to undermine the integrity of the evidence, prosecutor Courtney Saleski asked: "Is there any way to fake this?"

"No," said Keel, shaking his head. "If this were contrived, I would expect to obtain much more biological material."

In other words, it would have been extremely difficult for anyone, including McNamee, to purposely contaminate the needle because it contained such a minute amount of human residue.

During cross-examination, Clemens lawyer Michael Attanasio attacked the findings in several ways. He pointed out that Keel was being paid by the government. He pointed out that Keel didn't test all of the items available. He pointed out that the DNA had degraded over time. He noted that 449 was a "far, far smaller number" than the other numbers in the trillions, and it therefore can't be said with uncontested certainty that the DNA on the needle belongs to Clemens.

Attanasio got Keel to agree that the Clemens blood found on one cotton ball appeared to be from the aftermath of an injection, but that the Clemens puss on the other cotton ball "is not from an immediate injection site." The lawyer also suggested the blood on the cotton ball might not have come from an injection at all: "Is it not at all uncommon for a pitcher to have a little blood blister at the end of his finger when he was pitching?"

Patriots score late to beat Sockers

From staff reports

EL PASO -- El Paso's Ernesto Bolivar scored in stoppage time to give the Patriots a 1-0 victory against the West Texas Sockers on Friday night at Patriot Stadium.

The two teams played to a standstill through much of the game but Bolivar's unassisted goal broke the deadlock and gave the Patriots their second win of the season and are now 2-2-1 with seven points. The Sockers fell to 1-2-1 with four points this season in the Premier Development League Mid-South Division.

"It was a combination of a lot of things, but being in the 91st minute to give up a goal hurts, given the fact we played as hard as we did," West Texas coach Warren Cottle said. "The boys played extremely well."

The Sockers will play an exhibition against the FC Dallas West Texas Super 20s at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Grande Communications Stadium, and then return to Premier Development League action at 8 p.m. June 2 against the Texas Dutch Lions.

Barden said his brother, Chad is an assistant coach, but he also brought in Aaron Thornton to the team, who is essentially the team's strength and conditioning coach.

Thornton's presence helped the players realize quickly that this wasn't just another club team when it came to training and getting in shape.

"The fitness is completely different than what it was in the high school level," said Dustin Beal, a Lee grad who will play at Hardin Simmons this fall. "I felt fit, but I don't know if behind is the right word, but there's still a lot of room to improve. We came in fit and we are getting better."

How successful the team is in wins and losses will be determined over the next few months this summer, but Barden said he hopes it's the start of something good for the players in the area.

"It's the first time in a very long time that you see all the best young kids playing together," Barden said.

Celtics, minus G Bradley, set for Sixers, Game 7

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

WALTHAM, Mass. — Kevin Garnett won't be posting any comments from the 76ers owners on his mental bulletin board. The Philadelphia fans won't be getting all riled up over comments deriding their loyalty.

"It's Game 7. There's no tomorrow," Celtics captain Paul Pierce said before practice on Friday. "If this is not the most important thing to you right now, there is no way to motivate you as a basketball player."

The Celtics and Sixers will play tonight for a spot in the Eastern Conference finals, where one of them will face the Miami Heat for the right to play for the NBA title. The 76ers forced the series to a decisive game by beating Boston, 82-75, on Wednesday, keeping alive a surprising run that started when they knocked out top-seeded Chicago in the first round.

"I think they're excited about the chance to go in there and have this Game 7 and see what we can do," Philadelphia coach Doug Collins said. "I don't think we have any fear. I haven't felt that in our guys at all. When we have played poorly, it's not out of being fearful. I think sometimes we don't execute well. That to me has nothing to do with whether or not the guys believe they can do it."

The Sixers have not been to a Game 7 since 2001, and Collins said he was relying on the energy of a young team that has just one 30-year-old, Elton Brand, getting significant playing time. The Celtics, who have three in the starting lineup alone, are 3-2 in seventh games since the new Big Three was assembled in 2007.

Brand said his younger teammates are ready. Philadelphia point guard Jrue Holiday, who called Game 6 the "end of the world," said this would be "The End of the World II."

"They're not scared of the moment at all, which is really good for our team," Brand said. "Some of the older guys are saying, 'Hey, we don't get this opportunity too many times. So let's try to win this game.'"

That's also the mood in Boston, where they are gearing up for the last run of the new Big Three. Pierce is under contract, but Garnett and Ray Allen are free agents at the end of the season.

Still, Garnett wasn't manufacturing anything to motivate himself for the game, like he did for the finale against Atlanta when he fixated on comments by a Hawks owner calling him a dirty player. (He then fed the Sixers bulletin board material this week when he said they had fair-weather fans.)

Allen said he wasn't thinking — yet — about the possibility it could be his last game in a Boston uniform.

"We've been so fortunate to do what we've done here," he said. "It seems like we've been ruled out so many times before, so many years before. It's just another opportunity to go out and be who we are, so we're not worried about what's beyond tomorrow. We're worried about more about what we have in the present day."

Spurs

people usually do. But we're fighting the same way."

Durant, the NBA's scoring leader the last three seasons, doesn't begrudge the Spurs their comparatively instant success.

"We admire them because they're a group that we looked up to when we were growing up, losing 15 games in a row," Durant said. "You look at the Spurs and say, 'We want to get there one day.'"

They're almost there after beating defending NBA champion Dallas and then the Lakers.

The Spurs haven't won it all since 2007. Trying to get back these last five years has given Ginobili an appreciation that he didn't feel as a rookie while walking onto a championship-ready roster.

"I realize that when I won the first one, I really didn't know what was going on. I didn't know how difficult how hard it was to make it," Ginobili said. "But it is what it is. Only one team is going to make it. The fact that they haven't — they're young. Durant and Westbrook are 23. I was 25 my rookie season."

Ginobili is among the pieces that make Oklahoma City and San Antonio so similar on the surface. Like the Thunder's James Harden, Ginobili is a left-handed former Sixth Man of the Year winner who provides the spark off the bench. Both were picked by a front office with the same roots, with Thunder general manager Sam Presti starting in San Antonio as an intern under Spurs general manager R.C. Buford.

Both are also candid about their good fortune: not every franchise gets to draft Durant and Duncan.

Buford said few NBA teams have ever been as lucky to add a player like Duncan to an already strong roster. When Durant joined the Thunder, the team needed a total makeover.

"They were 23-59, and three years later to be in the conference finals?" Buford said. "To me, that doesn't seem to be behind any curve."

five yards out to put the White team up 7-0 nine seconds into the second quarter. McAfee was solid in one half of action, rushing for 86 yards on a game-high 7.8 yards per carry.

Nunez needed just two plays to respond, connecting with Darius Strambler for a 63-yard touchdown to knot the score up at 7-7.

Then it was Sanchez's turn, hitting Alex Bell on a nice play-action pass for a 43-yard touchdown and a 13-7 lead with 4:59 remaining in the first half.

But Williams later scampered in from 11 yards out for the first of his two scores to put the Maroon team up 14-13 with 1:58 to play in the half.

"I just didn't want to touch the ground, that's it," Williams said of his day.

Not to be outdone, Sanchez put the White team up 19-13 with his 62-yard dash into the end zone at the 6:49 mark in the third quarter.

"It was exciting," Sanchez said. "All I saw was blur and that end zone."

The Maroon team, however, pulled the game out late thanks to a Ryan Knittle 37-yard field goal with 6:15 to play and Williams' final touchdown run of the day.

But for Lee, it was a nice ending to what Morton said was a strong spring. And even Sanchez was happy with the conclusion to the spring despite his seeing his JV Silver teammate put his team away late.

"It's all right because we're all teammates here," Sanchez said. "We all get along."

5 heavyweight fights top UFC 146 card

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press

Frank Mir is a two-time UFC heavyweight champion with more victories in the division than any fighter. That's why he knows it's never been tougher to pull off what he's trying to accomplish at UFC 146.

The UFC is going big in its Memorial Day weekend show, headlined by five heavyweight fights at the MGM Grand Garden in Las Vegas. Junior Dos Santos will make his first title defense against Mir, who marvels at the UFC's current roster of enormous fighters.

"The UFC has always had the best fighters in every weight, but typically in the heavyweight division, (only) the top five was dangerous guys fighting for the title," Mir said. "The top 10, maybe you'd talk about them in the conversation. I don't think five or six years ago, we could have had a card that had five bouts of heavyweights fighting — and then we've had injuries, too. If we'd had a card five years ago with five heavyweight fights and somebody got injured, the whole card would have had to be scrapped."

Heavyweights jumped to the forefront of the UFC in recent years with the rise and fall of Brock Lesnar, who quit his pro wrestling career and made a high-profile run to the UFC title, stopping Mir (16-5) along the way in July 2009. Lesnar battled injuries and illness, but also struggled to compete with the new wave of dynamic talent arriving in the division, eventually retiring last December after getting pulverized by Alistair Overeem.

Mir's title shot would have belonged to Overeem, but the Dutch kickboxer failed a drug test, clearing the way for Mir to attempt to reclaim the heavyweight belt just two days after his 33rd birthday in a fight with Dos Santos, the Brazilian boxer with humble beginnings and a remarkable MMA pedigree.

"It's a huge moment in my life and career," Mir said. "Eventually, one day we retire and we're forgotten as athletes, but people try to somehow make their mark on history. It'll give me something to brag about to my grandchildren. You know, one time, Grandpa could move from one side of the room to the other without hobbling."

Devils advance to Cup finals with win over Rangers

New Jersey wins series, 4-2

NEWARK, N.J. — A year after missing the playoffs for the first time since 1996, the New Jersey Devils are going back to the Stanley Cup finals, thanks to a rookie, a 40-year-old goaltender and a coach who'd never been to the postseason in the NHL.

How's that for a turnaround?

Adam Henrique scored off a wild scramble in front at 1:03 into overtime and the Devils defeated the rival New York Rangers, 3-2, in Game 6 of the Eastern Conference finals to advance to their first Stanley Cup finals since 2003.

The Devils will face the Los Angeles Kings for the Cup in a series that will start on Wednesday here.

This series win came against the Devils' most intense rival, and it was that much sweeter.

"That one was like Christmas," said Henrique, who also scored the series winner as Devils' first-round win over Florida.

It also was needed. The Devils' blew a 2-0 first-period lead and didn't want to head back to New York for a Game 7 on Sunday.

"It didn't matter how it got to overtime, we were in a good position," Devils captain Zach Parise said. "We were at home. We just needed one shot."

Actually, the Devils needed four shots to win the game.

Henrique's winner came after Henrik Lundqvist stopped Ilya Kovalchuk twice and Alexei Ponikarovsky. The last shot lay in the crease and Henrique tapped it home.

Ryan Carter and Kovalchuk also scored for the Devils, whose biggest move this year was hiring Peter DeBoer as coach. He was fired by Florida after missing the playoffs in his three seasons. In his first postseason, he is hoping to lead New Jersey to its fourth Cup.

Ruslan Fedotenko and Ryan Callahan tallied for top-seeded New York, which had a good flurry just before New Jersey scored.

Henrique, who is nominated for the Calder Trophy — given to the NHL's top rookie — skated away from the crease and jumped against the end boards in the corner as his teammates jumped off the bench and mobbed him.

Djokovic, Federer could meet in French semis again

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

PARIS — Novak Djokovic's bid to win a fourth consecutive Grand Slam championship — and first at the French Open — might require a semifinal victory over Roger Federer.

Friday's draw set them up to face each other in Paris at the same stage as last year, when Federer beat Djokovic in four epic sets to end the Serb's 43-match winning streak that dated to December 2010.

That was Djokovic's last loss at a major tournament: Since then, he won the titles at Wimbledon, the U.S. Open and Australian Open. He's trying to become the first man since Rod Laver in 1969 to win four Grand Slam trophies in a row.

Djokovic's quarterfinal opponent could be No. 5 Jo-Wilfried Tsonga of France. Other possible quarterfinal matchups: Federer vs. 2009 U.S. Open champion Juan Martin del Potro or No. 7 Tomas Berdych; six-time French Open champion Rafael Nadal vs. No. 8 Janko Tipsarevic; and No. 4 Andy Murray vs. No. 6 David Ferrer.

The highlight of the women's quarterfinals set up in Friday's draw could be Serena Williams against Maria Sharapova.

Williams owns 13 major titles, including the 2002 French Open, while Sharapova is hoping to complete a career Grand Slam with her first title in Paris.

The other possible women's quarterfinals: No. 1-seeded and Australian Open champion Victoria Azarenka vs. U.S. Open champion Sam Stosur; defending champion Li Na vs. Wimbledon champion Petra Kvitova; and No. 3-seeded Agnieszka Radwanska vs. No. 8 Marion Bartoli.

In her first Grand Slam tournament since revealing she has an autoimmune disease, seven-time major champion Venus Williams could meet Radwanska in the second round and 2009 French Open champion Svetlana Kuznetsova in the third.

Seeded No. 1 at the French Open for the first time, Djokovic will play 97th-ranked Potito Starace of Italy in the first round and could face two-time major champion Lleyton Hewitt in the second.

Starace was ranked as high as 27th in 2007, but later that year he was suspended for six weeks and fined $30,000 for betting on tennis matches involving other players.

Nadal will begin his attempt to win a record seventh title at Roland Garros, breaking a tie with Bjorn Borg, by facing 111th-ranked Simone Bolelli of Italy. Nadal might have to deal with 6-foot-10 Ivo Karlovic's big serves in the third round, and the No. 2-seeded Spaniard could meet Murray in the semifinals.

Starting on the back nine, Dufner had two birdies, a 5-footer at the 166-yard 13th hole and 7-footer at the 363-yard 17th. He then birdied Nos. 1-3 for the second day in a row.

"I got off to a great start. ... I had a chance to catch Dufner, is he not hot right now," said Gainey, who opened his round with three consecutive birdies before bogeys at Nos. 7 and 8. "I got hot and then let a couple get away."

Alabama wins 1st title, Jao-Javanil top individual

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

FRANKLIN, Tenn. — Alabama won its first women's golf title Friday, holding off two-time champ Southern California by a stroke on the 72nd hole in the NCAA Division I championship.

Oklahoma's Chirapat Jao-Javanil won the individual title by four strokes, closing with a 2-under 70 to finish at 6-under 282.

The Crimson Tide gave coach Mic Potter his first national title and first for a program in its seventh trip to the national tournament when senior Brooke Pancake rolled in a 4-footer for par on No. 18. It's the third national title this year for Alabama, which also won in football and gymnastics, and sixth for the Southeastern Conference.

Alabama finished at 6-over 294 in the fourth round for a 19-over 1,171 total.

Southern Cal trailed Alabama by 14 strokes after 36 holes and by two going into the final round. The national champs in 2003 and 2008 tied the Crimson Tide five times atop the leaderboard and led by five strokes before losing the lead on the back nine. The Trojans shot 293 for a 1,172 total. They were followed by LSU (289-1,173) and Virginia (292-1,175), which lost a six-stroke lead in the first round when Elizabeth Brightwell signed an incorrect scorecard.

Jao-Javanil, ranked 59th by GolfStat and 41st by Golfweek, won the first women's individual title for Oklahoma.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

Champions

SENIOR PGA CHAMPIONSHIP: At Benton Harbor, Mich., Hale Irwin shot his age with a 5-under 66, finishing the second round of the Senior PGA Championship two shots behind leaders Roger Chapman and John Cook.

Cook also had a 66 to match Chapman at 7 under after a more forgiving day at Harbor Shores. Chapman had a 67. Michael Allen broke the course record with a 64, recovering nicely from a first-round 77.

PGA European

BMW PGA CHAMPIONSHIP: At Virginia Water, England, England's James Morrison shot an 8-under 64 to take a four-stroke lead in the BMW PGA Championship, while Rory McIlroy had a 79 to miss the cut and leave himself in danger of losing the top spot in the world ranking to No. 2 Luke Donald.

Morrison had a 12-under 132 total on Wentworth's West Course in the European Tour's flagship event. Donald, the defending champion, was tied for second with David Drysdale. Donald had a 68, and Drysdale shot 70. Donald must finish solo eighth or better to reclaim the No. 1 position.

Pinehurst No. 2 preps for 2 US Opens in 2014

By Joedy McCreary
Associated Press

PINEHURST, N.C. — Things are starting to take shape before the first doubleheader of U.S. opens.

In just over two years, Pinehurst's renowned No. 2 course will play host to the U.S. Open and U.S. Women's Open on consecutive weeks — the first time the USGA has attempted such a feat.

Organizers said Friday they'll keep an eye on the freshly renovated course next month to see how it behaves in typical June weather and make any necessary tweaks.

Ben Crenshaw led the course's yearlong $2.5 million facelift in which, among other things, the rough was removed and its layout reverted closer to its original Donald Ross design.

That project started in the fall of 2010 and the course re-opened last spring. Now Pinehurst president Don Padgett said it's finally mature enough that "we can kick the tires and see what we've got."

Eight tees were added to the championship course, lengthening it by 271 yards to 7,485. The fairways were widened by an average of 50 percent, a move designed to give players more options. The tight-angled dogleg on the seventh hole was widened to more closely resemble how it played in the 1940s.

Pinehurst Resort CEO and owner Bob Dedman Jr. said groundskeepers have eliminated "40 acres of the rough that we have come to know and hate."

Only two cuts of grass remain: green and fairway. Roughly 32 acres of grass was stripped and replaced with areas of hardpan, sand, pine straw and wiregrass — all components of the course's original design.

"We obviously started on the track of preparing for (the two opens) over two years ago when we started working with Ben Crenshaw ... on the concepts to return some of the strategy back to the course," Dedman said. "And it continues to evolve. ... The beauty of that has been just adding that much more texture and more variety, and aesthetically, it's significantly different than it was (when No. 2 last hosted the Open) in 2005."

Dedman said the course itself should hold up well despite two weeks of nearly nonstop traffic, and that for the Women's Open, he expects the greens to be "somewhat more receptive than they would from a men's shot approaching the green.

"Certainly the firmness and the texture of the fairways will be the same," Dedman said. "Really, the only difference is the receptiveness of the greens, and they really have it down to the metrics."

Reg Jones, managing director of the U.S. Open, said the biggest questions faced by the organizers at this point concern parking, transportation, booking volunteers and the other outside-the-ropes logistics that must be sorted out during the coming two years.

But that's where the region's experience at hosting big-time golf comes in handy, and that's why Jones said his crew is "looking forward to a home game in 2014."

"When you look at the recent history of golf in the sandhills, I think it's pretty obvious the USGA likes to be here," Jones said.

Signle women wonder where all the single men are hiding

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: My friends and I are women in our late 40s and early 50s. Some of us are married, some are single. Individually or as a group we have taken classes, volunteered, gone on cruises, gone to clubs and bars — you name it.

We have noticed that nearly everyone at these activities is either female or with a female as part of a couple. There are loads of single middle-aged women out there joining things and having fun, but there seem to be almost no single middle-aged men. Friends in various parts of the country report the same thing.

Where do the single men go? They rarely go out alone or with a male buddy. Our running joke is they're all home watching bad cable TV. Middle-aged guys must be there somewhere, but where? You'd think that if they wanted to meet women, they'd go where women are, but we rarely see them. Can you solve this mystery for us? — WHERE THE BOYS AREN'T, NORTHERN WYOMING

DEAR WHERE THE BOYS AREN'T: Part of your problem may be that most of the males in your age group are already married. I don't recommend looking for eligible men in clubs and bars because the ones who go there are usually looking for younger women.

I do suggest volunteering because it offers an opportunity to expand one's circle of acquaintances, and even if you don't meet a man there, you might meet a woman who knows someone who is eligible. I caution women who are looking for companionship not to "hunt in packs" because some men find the idea of approaching a group of women to be daunting.

The pool you're fishing in appears to be small. Have you considered looking online for men in other communities in your state? You will increase your odds of success by putting yourselves "out there" because most relationships begin as the result of luck and timing.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a wonderful man for two years. We're talking about marriage, but there is a problem. He has his ex's name tattooed on his backside and it's starting to bother me. I offered to pay to have it removed, but he doesn't want it off. Do I stay with him and try to get over it, or break up with him and find someone else? Help me! — REALLY CONFUSED GIRL IN COLORADO

DEAR REALLY CONFUSED: Removing a tattoo can be expensive, time-consuming and painful. If the only deal-breaker in your relationship is the tattoo, consider asking him to turn the other cheek and have YOUR name placed opposite his ex's so you will have equal billing. A large "X" could be inked over the ex's name if it would make you feel better.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a debate between my fiance and me. He contends that when we're in a restaurant, it is impolite to say to your server, "I will have ..." and insists that the request should be, "May I have ... ?"

I was raised to believe that either statement would be acceptable. What say you? — QUERY-CONSCIOUS IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR Q.C.: If the server asks you, "What'll you have?" it's perfectly acceptable to respond, "I'll have ..." However, "May I have ..." sounds more refined.

If this is the only complaint your fiance can come up with, he's a lucky man and should count his blessings.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, May 26, 2012:

If you have ever wished for more attention, you will find out if you really like being noticed so much this year. To many, you seem quite glamorous and sophisticated. People also are drawn to you because of how well you communicate. If you are single, you certainly will have the opportunity to change that status. Know that you don't need to settle. If you are attached, relating becomes much easier, as you seem more easygoing. Both of you learn to talk on a relevant level more. LEO draws you out.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Just go with the flow. Make plans if you don't already have them, creating the most fun adventure you can come up with. Give yourself space to take off and do something else, too. Spontaneity works best right now. Tonight: Paint the town red.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You like what is going on at home so much that you reverse plans, deciding to stay close to the nest. This spontaneous idea could cause some problems with someone you expect to be mellow. You gain insight into a close loved one. Tonight: Toss a favorite food on the barbecue.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Keep conversations flowing. You might wonder what is going on. You expect the unexpected as well, because a close friend acts in a very peculiar manner. As a result, when others might be surprised, you are not. Bring your friends together. Tonight: Lots of talk, wherever you are.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You might want to handle a personal matter differently, especially if you feel that someone is taking an unnecessary risk. Plans could change, especially if they involve an older relative or someone you must answer to. You have little choice. Tonight: Treat others to a favorite dessert.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You might want to consider what is happening on a deeper level, as you see some craziness erupt. You like playfulness and impulsiveness on a certain level. Don't forget to check in with an older friend or relative. Tonight: Relish the moment as if there were no tomorrow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★ You want to have some quality time with a loved one; otherwise, you want to be left alone. Someone surprises you with a call or news. Check in with an older relative if it is getting too late. Be optimistic. Tonight: There is nothing wrong with vanishing and not being available.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Know that you can have quite an adventure. You have been thinking about taking off on your own or maybe exploring a new area of town. Go with the moment, but don't even consider leaving a loved one or family member at home. Tonight: Only where there is fun.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Somehow, once more you are the key person, whether you are executing plans or filling in for someone who didn't complete an important task. Others want your company. Your high energy surges. You probably can do it all. Tonight: On top of your game.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Sometimes you don't want to suppress yourself at any cost. Right now is an excellent example of just moving with the moment. A loved one could issue a surprise invitation. If you are single, someone special could just drop in your lap. Tonight: Full speed ahead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ You might be tired of the same weekend ritual. You might want to strap on your seatbelt, as excitement or unexpected events could head in your direction. Relate directly to loved ones. You are better off not in a group. Tonight: Dinner out.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You know you have no control over others. When the right person appears with the right invitation, are you going to say no? Of course you aren't. Flex with the moment. Your popularity soars to a new level. Know that anything is possible. Tonight: So many choices. Now what?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Flex. Yes, you have a lot of responsibility and demands. Ask someone to pitch in. You have an opportunity that you don't want to say no to, nor should you. Let more spontaneity in, and caring will flow. Use care with your wallet and change today. Tonight: Don't go overboard.

Vettel locked in tight battle for F-1 championship

MONACO — When Sebastian Vettel headed to the Monaco Grand Prix last season, all the talk was of how quickly the Red Bull driver would wrap up the Formula One championship.

It could not be more different this year, with the two-time defending champion tied with two-time former champion Fernando Alonso of Spain and seven drivers within 20 points of each other in one of the most wide-open seasons for years.

It started with six world champions on the grid for the first time ever, and after this weekend another record could tumble.

There has been a different winner at each of the five races so far — which last happened in 1983 — and a sixth winner on Sunday would be a first in F1 history.

"No one's really got any momentum yet in terms of results. But obviously there are a few people that follow the sport that love it like this," Red Bull driver Mark Webber said. "It depends who you ask. If you want to have lots and lots of different teams being competitive, that's the way it is at the moment, which I don't think is too bad."

A sixth different winner remains a distinct possibility considering that former champions Lewis Hamilton and Kimi Raikkonen are still looking for their first victories of the season.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — They've got nine championships between them and a combined five victories on the single most prolific day of racing of the year.

Dario Franchitti and Jimmie Johnson also share a friendship, even if it's from afar. They follow each other's races, text back and forth during the season and give the public a glimpse of their mutual admiration via Twitter.

"Well done (at)JimmieJohnson on the race last night, massively impressive," Franchitti tweeted following Johnson's victory in NASCAR's All-Star race on Saturday night.

They are, for the most part, the most decorated drivers over the last six years from their respective series.

Johnson's record run of five consecutive Sprint Cup titles was snapped last season, but Franchitti won his third-straight title to make it four championships in the last five IndyCar seasons.

"We keep threatening to drink some beers together to celebrate all these championships," Johnson said.

Both will be on the center stage Sunday for the biggest day of motorsports.

It begins early for Franchitti, who will watch on television as cousin Paul di Resta races in Formula One's Monaco Grand Prix. Franchitti's turn comes before lunch, when he will attempt to win his third Indianapolis 500.

Johnson will be watching from his motorhome at Charlotte Motor Speedway, where he will try for his fourth Coca-Cola 600 victory Sunday night.

"I catch the start, it's on every television at Charlotte Motor Speedway," Johnson said. "Then you go do your hospitality and sponsor events, the driver meeting and usually as I get back, I'm lucky enough to catch the finish."

Franchitti knows no matter how his day goes in Indy, he'll be in front of the television before the night is over.

"Of course you go see what Jimmie and the boys are up to," he said.

The racing community can be small sometimes, even though it spans the globe. Drivers cross paths coming up through the ranks — Danica Patrick and Sam Hornish Jr. raced go-karts against each other as kids, both made it to IndyCar and both now race against each other full-time in NASCAR's Nationwide Series — and make friendships that carry far beyond the track.

Franchitti and Johnson, in a conference call with The Associated Press, recalled how

Hendrick goes from ice cold to red hot

By Pete Iacobelli

CONCORD, N.C. — After months of wondering when any Hendrick Motorsports car would win again, NASCAR's powerhouse program is on a major roll heading into the Coca-Cola 600.

Five-time Sprint Cup champion Jimmie Johnson broke a 16-race victory drought this month at Darlington Raceway for Hendrick Motorsports' 200th win, then won the All-Star race Saturday night at Charlotte Motor Speedway. Throw in a Sprint Showdown victory by Hendrick driver Dale Earnhardt Jr. and a win in the Pit Crew Challenge by Johnson's No. 48 team and it's a non-stop party for owner Rick Hendrick.

"The company," Johnson said Thursday, "is still on a high from the 200th win and the All-Star win just kicked it up another notch."

That could be bad news for the rest of NASCAR, which thought it might be gaining on Hendrick's dominance.

Johnson collected the program's 199th win last October at Kansas as he chased a sixth straight championship. But Johnson came up short of the title, losing to Tony Stewart. None of Hendrick's high-power drivers — four-time cham-

Susie Weldon returns to Indy to honor husband

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. —

Some days are better than others for Susie Wheldon, and there's rarely any warning what will trigger the emotional roller coaster she's been on since husband Dan Wheldon's fatal crash in last year's IndyCar finale.

A familiar coffee shop brings back a flood of memories; a song can make her sad. Most recently, it was a trip to the emergency room for a stomach bug 1-year-old son Oliver couldn't shake. In an instant, she was reliving the frantic efforts to save the two-time Indianapolis 500 winner following the Oct. 16 crash at Las Vegas Motor Speedway.

"Almost immediately when I walked in, they brought me back to a room just to wait for a doctor, and I just sat there and I instantly felt panic," she said. "I hadn't been in a hospital since, and I just saw all these machines. Something like that, that I didn't even think would be a big deal. It was just a really horrible thing.

"Took me back there again, just the panic of everything of that day."

Seven months after the accident, Wheldon heads back to the race track at the Indianapolis 500 for ceremonies honoring the defending race winner. She arrived Thursday and will spend the weekend, accompanied by her two sons, who were present for their dad's surprise win last year, but isn't sure if she'll attend Sunday's race. In an exclusive interview with The Associated Press, Wheldon said she's just not sure how she'll handle the tumult of returning to the track her husband loved so much.

She couldn't do it in March, when she left town rather than face the pain of IndyCar's season opener in St. Petersburg, where she still resides in the family home with Oliver and 3-year-old Sebastian.

But Indy?

"I'm ready. I think I'm ready, or I have to be ready, because it's something that I want to do and I want to be able to be a part of that for Dan as far as having the boys there," she said. "His family is the most important part of his legacy, so we want to be there to honor him in that way as far as him being last year's winner and everything about that race that he loved so much. I feel like it's important for me to be there, and I'm trying to prepare myself as much as possible."

Dan Wheldon, who also won the 500 in 2005, will be remembered on the race day ticket that features him pouring the traditional winner's bottle of milk over his head in victory lane last year. His race-winning car was on display in the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Hall of Fame Museum last week, will be on the Pagoda Plaza (a famed area of the race track) on Saturday and will be driven by car owner Bryan Herta in a lap of honor during Sunday's pre-race ceremonies.

Susie Wheldon holds the 2011 Indianapolis 500 Champion of Champions ring that was presented to her during a ceremony at Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Thursday in Indianapolis. Wheldon's husband, Dan Wheldon, who won the 2011 Indianapolis 500, was killed in a fiery 15-car crash at Las Vegas Motor Speedway in October.

Fans entering the track Sunday will be given a pair of white sunglasses, Dan's preference, to wear during tributes on the parade lap, lap 26 and lap 98, which recognize the numbers of his winning cars.

Susie Wheldon is scheduled to participate in Saturday's public drivers meeting and accepted the Champion of Champions ring on behalf of Wheldon's 2011 victory in a ceremony Thursday afternoon.

Race car drivers often say they accept the risks involved with their profession, and their loved ones understand that accidents sometimes happen with dire consequences. But constant safety improvements have dramatically reduced fatalities, and IndyCar had just three driver deaths since this league began in 1996.

The last fatality was Paul Dana, in 2006, during the warm-up session for the season opener at Homestead. Wheldon went on to win that race later the same day.

So, sure, the wives and girlfriends know bad things can happen when cars are on the track at very high speeds. But it's not something Susie Wheldon was dwelling on when her husband strapped into his car last October.

Dan Wheldon didn't have a full-time job last year; he refused to settle for a ride that didn't give him a chance to win and instead took the season off. He stayed home with his young family. Oliver was born last March, two months before Dan headed back to Indianapolis with Herta because he believed he could win in that car. And he did, inheriting the lead when rookie JR Hildebrand crashed coming out of the final turn.

"That is one of the things that I loved about Dan — he believed in himself," his wife said. "He definitely rallied and got everybody around him on fire. It was a little team, it was their second start at Indy and probably not a lot of people thought they had a shot at winning that race."

From there, Dan Wheldon settled into a summer of testing IndyCar's new car during Dallara's development and working as a commentator for some of the race broadcasts. Things picked up as the season wound down, with Wheldon moving closer to completing a deal to return to Andretti Autosport in a full-time ride in 2012 as Danica Patrick's replacement.

Then he agreed to enter the $5 million challenge being offered by IndyCar to any outside driver who could come from the back of the field to win the season finale at Las Vegas. When no driver from any other series accepted the challenge, Wheldon was ruled eligible because he wasn't a full-time IndyCar driver.

He ran Kentucky two weeks earlier as a warm-up, then went into Las Vegas convinced he could win the race.

The entire weekend was festive — on a whim, Dan and Susie got each other's initials tattooed on their wrists the night before the race. Never did anyone think the day would end in tragedy.

It happened quickly, a fiery 15-car accident just minutes after the start, and it was immediately apparent that Wheldon was seriously injured.

Susie Wheldon does not discuss the events of that day. And if she second-guesses his participation, she doesn't let on.

"No, not mad that he did that race. No," she said quietly.

But the reality is the race changed her life. She's now a 33-year-old widow, with two toddlers who will never know their father. His family is in England, her parents in North Carolina, and she's essentially alone trying to pick up the pieces and move forward.

This isn't the life she imagined — "That's actually a phrase we've used, this isn't how it was supposed to be," said Emma Dixon, wife of IndyCar star Scott Dixon — and Wheldon has been angry about different things during her stages of grief, but not at Dan, at least not yet.

"Maybe that will come later, I don't know," she said. "We definitely shared something. It sounds silly to say because it sounds so cliche, but I know a lot of people don't experience that, what we had. I feel lucky (but) our four years of being married is like a second (in time). I get angry sometimes at that, that I wish we could have grown old together.

"I am thankful just for everything that we do have. Did have. Two beautiful children. We had an amazing life together and I know most people don't experience that in a lifetime. That's something that I hold on to."

Wheldon is also grateful for the support she's received from inside the racing community — an auction started by Graham Rahal after the accident raised $627,203 — and she's been touched by fans who sent her thoughtful notes about her husband. She read every one, replied with hand-written thank you letters and saved them all to one day show her sons.

"There's a lot of times, I think, that when people pass away everybody that's left sometimes can romanticize about the idea of what that person was or what they did," she said. "With Dan, he really was that amazing guy. It wasn't like you're kind of embellishing because everyone wants to say good things about someone when they're not here. He really was that guy."

HENDRICK

From 1C

pion Jeff Gordon, Earnhardt and Kasey Kahne are Johnson's teammates — could break through this season until Johnson took the checkered flag at Darlington and touched off a party that hasn't stopped.

Neither has the winning.

"Things have been pretty good," said Kahne, 16th in drivers' points. "Then after Jimmie won that 200th, that got everybody even more excited."

Johnson doesn't see why that can't continue Sunday night in the Coca-Cola 600.

Johnson has won nine times at the 1.5-mile track, three 600s, three of the 500-mile fall race and three All-Star events. "We are excited to get on the track today and through the course of the weekend," he said. "We feel like we will be a threat to win."

And giving Hendrick even more to celebrate.

This week, the car owner hosted a party in Charlotte headlined by country music superstar Brad Paisley. Hendrick's current crop of star drivers was on hand along with others who brought his machines to victory lane through the years like Geoff Bodine, Mark Martin and Kyle Busch.

"It's a huge accomplishment for our people and I'm really proud of them," Hendrick said. "You know, you need to stop and celebrate something like, this because they don't come along too often."

Johnson said it was fun to watch Hendrick kick back and revel in the achievement. "I'm really proud of him to sit and enjoy the 200th win and savor it and spend some time in the moment," Johnson said. "It's not like him to do that type of thing."

That's for sure.

Johnson recalled how during the Darlington celebration two weeks back, Hendrick told him that now they'd gotten to 200, "let's get 250."

It's a focus that's kept Hendrick Motorsports clicking off the wins since Bodine collected the program's first victory at Martinsville in 1984.

Hendrick's far from done this season. He expects to follow through on the goal he set before the season that he wanted all four of his cars in the season-ended Chase for a Championship. They've got some work ahead for that to happen, though.

Earnhardt's No. 88 sits third behind points leader Greg Biffle and second-place Matt Kenseth. Johnson is fifth. Then comes Kahne, 54 points out of 10th place. The one struggling most this season is Gordon, the usually steady former champion stung with a several problems that have him way back in 24th and most likely needing a couple of race wins to claim a wildcat sport to the year-end shootout.

Hendrick said he's never had so many races get away from such talented group like Gordon's No. 24 team and Kahne's No. 5. "Between Kasey and Jeff Gordon, probably the rottenest luck I've had in my racing career," Hendrick said. "I mean, I can't even remember as many flat tires or wrecks or Kasey is running third on the last lap and gets shoved into the wall. We have had some freak things break on the car."

FRIENDS

their friendship began.

They met in 2005, when Johnson was teammates with Franchitti's little brother, Marino, in the Rolex 24 Hours of Daytona sports car race. Marino introduced Johnson to his brother, and before the event was over, a group of six or so drivers had spent an evening together at the local dog track.

"I got to know Marino first, and I felt like getting to know Marino, they can't be too different," Johnson said. "If I can connect with Marino, then I can connect with Dario. And I wanted to, I rooted for Dario before I knew him. I'd watched him for a lot of years, and I always appreciated his passion and the way he carried himself.

"Dario's always been that guy for me in open-wheel."

Despite different backgrounds — Johnson grew up in Southern California, Franchitti in Scotland — the two both ooze cool, and they have an appreciation for the finer things in life. Johnson married former model Chandra Janway, Franchitti is married to actress Ashley Judd. But in racing, both are lauded for their on-track accomplishments and off-track professionalism.

"I like the way Jimmie goes racing. I like the way he controls the car, and the ways he just has two sides," Franchitti said. "What he does on track is just phenomenal, but I also like the way he conducts himself off the track. We have similar attitude in that regard.

"And the fact that he won five championships in a row, I think it says a lot about him. To find the motivation to win two or three, but then to go and do five and still be hungry for more, it's unbelievable. He one of racing's good guys. One of the best on and off the track."

Franchitti got to see it firsthand in 2008, when he left IndyCar for NASCAR. He'd won his first Indy 500 and series championship the year before, and slid over to stock cars for a new challenge. It was a short-lived experiment for Franchitti, who broke his ankle in an accident at Talladega and ultimately fell victim to the economic downturn and sponsorship woes.

Franchitti ran just 10 Cup races — his best finish was 22nd — before team owner Chip Ganassi pulled the plug because of the sponsorship issues.

"I went in there with my eyes somewhat closed, I should have done my homework and driven the car before I went," Franchitti said. "With the Cup car, I struggled to get the hang of what the car needed to drive it. It was difficult to adapt to, and I think it would have taken a bit more time. I'd ask Jimmie what do you do here? And he'd tell me, and I'd think 'I can't do what you do.'"

Johnson hasn't had a chance to try IndyCar, and a promise to his wife not to race anything that lacks a roof has stalled his dream of ever running the Indy 500. But he is hopeful that he can one day at least experience an Indycar in a closed-course test.

"There is a void there, and Dario has been helpful and encouraging for me to come give it a shot," Johnson said. "I have a lot of friends in the sport, they've always talked about it, and I would love that chance. I grew up wanting to be an IndyCar driver."

Should Johnson ever get into an IndyCar, Franchitti wants to be present "just to see Jimmie's face after the first few laps." Beyond that, he thinks both he and Johnson will be just fine with their current jobs.

"I am back in IndyCar doing what I should be doing and what I want to be doing," Franchitti said. "We're both doing exactly what we should be doing."

And in a sense, they get to live vicariously through each other. Johnson was criticized last year for saying IndyCar should abandon ovals following the death of Dan Wheldon in an accident at Las Vegas, but the many active drivers he knows understood his comments were out of concern for his friends.

So as he heads into this Sunday's race, he encourages his NASCAR fans to check out Franchitti and the Indy 500.

"For the longest time, as NASCAR was trying to outgrow IndyCar, or be bigger than them, there were some hardcore fans who took the stance, 'I'm just NASCAR, or I'm just IndyCar,'" Johnson said. "I don't subscribe to that, and I think that is fading. If motorsports is strong, it's because all of the series are strong. We're all race fans, and the reason I watch is because I like it."

VETTEL

and I'm only eight points off the lead of the championship," McLaren driver Hamilton said. "That's a really encouraging statistic, and it's reassuring to see my approach is paying off ... there would be no better place for the cards to fall in my favor than at Monaco."

Last season's Monaco GP was one of most exciting races of the season, featuring almost as many twists and turns as the famed street circuit itself. Vettel appeared certain to be caught by Alonso or Jenson Button, until a crash involving Vitaly Petrov and Toro Rosso's Jaime Alguersuari swung the balance back in Vettel's favor as a red flag came up.

This gave Vettel a priceless gift: Changing his worn out tires without the need for an official pit stop. When the race restarted, he comfortably held off Alonso.

The race featured numerous crashes and prompted improvements to the track.

Various sections have been resurfaced to remove bumps, the tire walls in turns one and 14 have been replaced by barriers, and a crane on the end of the barrier in the chicane's run-off area has been removed, providing more space.

But Vettel does not expect this to make things any easier.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys, Remember the days of cassette tapes? You know those things that came between the 8-track and the CD. Well I have literally hundreds of them and I don't know what to do with them all. Were talking thousands of hours of Billy Joel, Madonna, U2 and the Beatles, to name a few. Throwing them out seems like a downright crime. Today I have everything on my MP3 player so the tapes just sit in the closet taking up space. I can't bring myself to toss them since I spent most of my allowance on them growing up. My parents are lucky. They saved all their 45 records from their youth and put them in a gorgeous jukebox that they can still listen to every day. But my generation, the one with cassette tapes, is left out in the cold. Is there anything I can do with them, or are they destined to sit in my closet forever?

Carry: It seems like some things become classics and others just become obsolete. The hard part is trying to guess which ones will be the classics.

Cash: Take vinyl records, for example. Like you stated, the 45 rpm records of the 50's and 60's became nostalgic, synonymous with the "Do-Wop" era. However, most of my records from the 70's barely get an offer at a yard sale.

Carry: Neither do my 8-track tapes!

Cash: It's not just music mediums though. All kinds of electronics and related items are becoming obsolete. Videotapes have been replaced by DVD's, Blue-Ray or online viewing.

Carry: And when it comes to TV's, everyone today wants the latest high definition sets.

Cash: However, that doesn't mean there isn't a market for your cassette tape collection. You may be surprised to learn that there is a collector for practically everything, even those items bought with your hard earned allowance.

Carry: If your tapes are originals and not copies, then take out a short ad in your newspaper. There may be someone right in your area who collects them. You could be surprised at the number of calls you get.

Cash: Fortunately, cassette tapes are not completely obsolete just yet. Most used cars are still equipped with a cassette deck to play your collection.

Carry: And remember the bright side. At least you didn't spend your allowance on Betamax videos.

Fast Facts

Speeding Along

Before CD's and MP3's, vinyl records were all the craze. But why did they come in three speeds: 78 rpm, 33-1/3 rpm and 45 rpm? While some of the reasoning had to do with sound quality, most was a result of marketing. The 78's were the standard up until the late 1940's when Columbia mass released their 33-1/3 rpm "Microgroove" system. The 12" record held more music and became the new standard. However, at the same time RCA developed the 45 rpm record that was only 7" in diameter. It became the popular choice for releasing single songs.

Staying Hip

With the advances in technology, most of us need a technical dictionary to keep up with the lingo. Previous generations used terms such as "record" or "cassette" to describe the medium. Today, the lingo is far more encrypted using abbreviations like CD, DVD or MP3. While most of us recognize the term "Compact Disk" (CD), fewer know the term "Digital Versatile Disk", formerly "Digital Video Disc" (DVD). And for those not aware, MP3 stands for MPEG-1 (Moving Picture Experts Group) Audio Layer 3. It's a good thing they shortened that!

Lessons Learned

My co-worker and I are music teachers and were traveling to a conference together recently. About an hour into the trip, I pulled out a map and completely unfolded it across the dashboard. Its size was quite obnoxious.

After finding our route, I then struggled to refold it back to its original shape. After several failed attempts, I was convinced it wasn't possible. As my desperation grew, my co-worker finally pulled the car over to help. He grabbed the map and like magic folded it perfectly into its original form.

"That's amazing" I told him. "How did you do that?"

"I've had a lot of practice," he smiled at me. "As a kid I played the accordion!"

(Thanks to Alvin M.)

YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD'S BEEN REZONED OR HADN'T YOU HEARD?

When local governments make decisions they are required to publish a newspaper notice to let you know. But that could change.

Local governmental entities across the state want to bury their public notices on little seen, rarely visited government websites.
