Parnell Promises to Sift Circumstances Around Franklin Death

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 29. (UP)—Out of a thicket at the end of a deer trail in the wooded glens of northern Arkansas the state will drag next week the story of the scourge of St. James—feudal rule by Ozark landlords allegedly plied from generation to generation by the whip lash and threat of the rifle.

This, according to copyrighted reports by special investigators sent to the region by the Kansas City Journal-Post, will reveal why a half-mad soldier, seized while he walked to his wedding, was forced to die on a fiery pyre after he was severely beaten.

No Railroads

St. James is a small settlement surrounded by crumbling and chinked cabins of hill folk, ignorant, superstitious and cowed by the rule of the clan, according to the Journal-Post.

Neaf there, in a quiet spot at the end of a deer trail—no railroads touch St. James—Connie Franklin, psycopathic war veteran who stalked the woods calling himself "Uncle Sam," was burned alive by a band of men "right smart after sundown" last March 9.

His charred bones lay unmolested at the spot and his horrible death was untold until the vengeful tongue of a woman, cunning in her gossip, relayed the story to officers. Monday, the Journal-Post said, Gov. Harry Parnell of Arkansas will send investigators into the section to learn of the "life of bondage" which transposed the middle ages to middle America.

The governor, visiting on his modern farm near Little Rock and far removed from the generation-

Pardons in Liquor Cases Are Petitioned

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29. (AP)—Petitions for pardons were filed here today by Paul Barras, Mrs. Onelia Stansbury and Mrs. Alice Loucon, charged with transporting liquor at Lake Charles Oct. 21, and sentenced to serve 60 days in prison and to pay $500 fines. They sought to change pleas of guilty to not guilty. Mrs. Loucon is the wife of an employe of the Texas company at Port Arthur, Texas. Mrs. Stansbury is the wife of Milton Stansbury, dredge employe at Port Arthur. Barras also lived at Port Arthur.

Former Prosecutor On Trial for Bribery

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29. (AP)—Donald McKay, former chief deputy district attorney under Asa Keyes, went on trial in superior court today for alleged bribery. McKay is accused of accepting money from A. I. Lasker, convicted embezzler and former finance executive, to attempt to clear Lasker of defalcations in his company.

Robber Sentenced Though He Repented

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 29. (AP)—Although he repented while in the midst of robbing Mrs. Grant Renne in her home here, and departed without any loot, Clarence Lusby, 17, today was sentenced to two years in the state reformatory for the offense.

There Was One Napoleon Necklace but Now There Are Two

Chicagoan and New Yorker Each Owns $500,000 Diamonds

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Napoleon I. probably didn't know it, but it begins to look as if there was something strange about that $500,000 diamond necklace he gave his wife, Marie Louise, to commemorate the birth of their son.

Just to get the records straight in the big Napoleon necklace mystery it must be set down first that there actually was a Napoleon, that he actually spent $500,000 for the necklace he gave her. That is all a matter of history, thoroughly authenticated.

Mrs. Charles A. Townsend, socially prominent New Yorker, has that same $500,000 necklace on exhibit at a Fifth avenue bank where she hopes to sell it.

That sounds probable enough. And the necklace is there for all to see. The mystery now enters the case.

Mrs. Ernest R. Graham, wife of an internationally known Chicago architect, also has that $500,000 necklace of Napoleon's, safe in her bank right here in Chicago.

Despite his well-known generosity Napoleon only gave his wife one necklace. That also is history. Five hundred thousand dollar trinkets, even for Napoleon, apparently were $500,000 trinkets.

But the indisputable fact remains that Mrs. Townsend in New York has that necklace. And so has Mrs. Graham in Chicago. Both of them absolutely are positive of it.

"Yes," said Mrs. Graham tonight, "I have Napoleon's necklace. My sister got it in Europe for me from an impoverished nobleman."

Mrs. Graham went on to say that she didn't care to reveal the identity of the nobleman, where her sister met him, or how much much her sister paid for the necklace.

"It is my own personal affair," she said. "I have the necklace, I don't care to sell it, and am positive it actually is the one that Napoleon gave the Maria Louise."

That would be that, were it not for the fact that Mrs. Townsend in New York is equally positive that the necklace she owns is the one that once reposed on the plump neck of Maria Louise.

Mrs. Townsend, daughter of Prince Baronte of Italy, and thus an actual princess herself, is a friend of Maria Therese, archduchess of Austria, now 74 years old.

The necklace belongs to the archduchess, according to announcements of the sale. Mrs. Townsend merely is acting as its guardian until it is sold.

In the same vault with the necklace, Mrs. Townsend has a pile of documents from various members of European nobility, all intended to prove that the necklace is the one that Napoleon presented his wife.

If you buy the necklace you will get all the documentary evidence at an extra cost. But whether you will get Napoleon's necklace or merely a necklace will have to depend upon whether you'd rather believe Mrs. Townsend or Mrs. Graham. Both have excellent reputations for veracity. So if you feel that you simply must have Maria Louise's diamonds, then you will have to decide the big necklace mystery to suit yourself.

Rothstein Trial Uncovers Scandal To Delight North Caroling Folk

Asheville Woman Startles Court in Identifying 'Mr. and Mrs.' On Hotel Register

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Servcie, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Draw near, friend reader, for a touch of ohh-my-goodness has finally crept into the roaring forties' most famous murder trial. Scan-dal, no less. Sh-h-h!

And where do you think we had to go to get it?

To Walnut street, in the pleasant mountain city of Asheville, North Carolina. Folks, that's sin in them hills?

Here we'd been going along quietly for days and days on end with the matter of George McManus, charged with plugging Arnold Rothstein with a .38, when in comes a lady from the ol' Tarheel state.

Woman Is Witness

A Mrs. Miriam A. Putnam, she was, who runs the Putnam grill in Asheville, a lady of maybe forty-odd, who testified today that she had heard loud voices of men, and a crash coming from the vicinity of room 349 in the Park Central hotel the night "the master mind" was "settled," and that later she had seen a man wandering along the hallway on the third floor with his hands pressed to his abdomen and "a terrible look on his face."

Then James D. C. Murray, attorney for McManus, took charge of the witness and began addressing the lady on other subjects.

Handing the lady a registration card from the Park Central hotel, Murray asked:

"Who are the Mr. and Mrs. Putnam indicated by that card as registering at the Park Central on Oct. 30, 1928?"

"I am Mrs. Putnam," the lady replied.

"Who is Mr. Putnam?"

Mrs. Putnam Hesitates

Mrs. Putnam, who has gray hair, hesitated a moment, and replied:

"A friend of mine to whom I am engaged."

Nathan Raymond followed Mrs. Putnam on the witness stand. He is the swarthy complexioned, black-haired high roller from the west coast, who beat Rothstein for $219,000 in the famous high spade game that the state has been trying to show furnished the motive for the murder of A. R."

Murray asked Raymond:

"You didn't kill Arnold Rothstein, did you?"

Somewhat surprised by the question, the witness replied, emphatically:

"No."

Accused by Police

"But members of the police department accused you, didn't they?"

"Well, they seemed to think I was implicated."

Then Murray demanded:

"Didn't Inspector Coughlin ask you if you had an altercation with Arnold Rothstein in a taxicab, during which blows were exchanged?"

Raymond said he didn't remember.

His testimony went over the famous card game again, which has been told, and re-told, but which was interesting coming from him as he won $219,000 off Rothstein, and didn't get a quarter, as he put it. He didn't get as much as an I. O. U.

BOY, 13, HURT IN CAVE FALL

A. B. Hudspeth in Grave Condition

A. B. Hudspeth, 13-year-old boy, is in the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital in a critical condition suffering from a fracture of the spine which he sustained about 11:30 o'clock Friday morning when a cave which he and other boys had built collapsed. The cave was said to be located in the vicinity of Thirty-fourth and Holliday streets.

A report was circulated Friday afternoon that L. E. Wilton was the man who had suffered a fractured spine. Mr. Wilton, 28 years of age, is in the hospital with a fracture of the right fore arm. His home is in Markley, Texas.

The youth was rushed to the hospital in a Merkle ambulance after the cave-in. His condition was reported grave Friday night but physicians were hopeful for his recovery. The boy lives with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Shannon at 1423 Thirty-sixth street, according to hospital attendants. A group of boys in the neighborhood had dug the cave to play in, it was reported.

Jones Makes One Bond, But Fails on Second

STINNETT, Texas, Nov. 29. (AP)—Sam Jones, deposed Borger deputy constable, made bond of $7,500 tonight in connection with the indictment against him for the slaying of District Attorney John A. Holmes.

He was not released from jail, however, as he did not make $1,500 bond on a second indictment for a liquor law violation. Sheriff C. O. Moore said it was doubtful that he would obtain the additional bond tonight. K. R. McNutt, a landowner, qualified for $28,000 on the bond.

$15,000 Bond Set For Payroll Theft Suspect

GALVESTON, Nov. 29. (AP)—Bond for Daniel J. Denny, under indictment in connection with the Galveston Dry Dock payroll robbery last May, was set at $15,000 today. After a hearing, counsel for Denny said he was unable to make the bond.

Record News Cotton Table

For Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma

Cotton prices for Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma held steady Friday, while gins pushed the season's total of ginnings several hundred bales higher. Fair weather over most of the area has materially aided farmers in gathering their cotton, Memphis turning out more than 850 bales in the last two days, and Plainview more than 500 in the last three days. With the reports of Friday, Memphis had ginned more than 18,000 bales of cotton, and Wichita county had increased its production over last year about 30 per cent. The following reports were received from Record News correspondents:

EARLY TAX CUT AIM OF CHIEFS

Little Opposition Found to Federal Reduction

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29. (AP)—Legislative action on the $160,000,000 program for reduction of 1929 income taxes will be expedited by house and senate leaders in an attempt to get it to President Hoover as soon as possible after congress convenes next week.

Chairman Hawley, of the house ways and means committee, predicted today that before the regular session is five days old and the house will adopt the joint resolution, which will call for a flat one per cent cut on normal incomes of individuals and corporations.

Quick approval by the senate was forecast by Chairman Smoot of the finance committee. He said he expected only one day would be required for that branch to complete action. He would be willing, he said, to defer consideration of the tariff bill in order to present the tax resolution to the senate quickly.

There has been no apparent disposition in either house seriously to oppose the program, which has been agreed upon by the administration and leaders of the majorities and minorities in both branches. Senator Borah, Republican independent of Idaho, intimated, however, that there might be some questions asked with regard to whose incomes would be affected.

Nobel Peace Prizes Not to Be Awarded

OSLO, Norway, Nov. 29. (AP)—The Nobel prize committee has decided not to award the 1928 and 1929 peace prizes.

The 1928 prize money will be placed to the account of the committee's funds and the 1929 prize will be reserved for 1930.

(Among the candidate's whose names were reported to have come before the committee were Frank B. Kellogg, former American secretary of state; Miss Elsa Brandstorem, Swedish Red Cross nurse, Archbishop Nathan Soederbiom and Hansen Noeroemoelle, Danish legislator.)

Teachers Told It Pays To Advertise Principles

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 29. (AP)—English teachers from all parts of the United States today were advised by their national president, Miss Rewey Belle Inglis, of the University of Minnesota, they "must swallow their conservatism though it choke them," and enter into a policy of advertising.

Principles advocated by the national council of teachers of English, the organization meeting here, may best be achieved by publicity, Miss Inglis declared. Approximately 600 delegates are attending the convention.

Sculptor, Jilted, Seeks Return of His Gifts

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29. (AP)—Count Leon Bayard de Volo, son of the lady in waiting to Italy's queen and a well known sculptor and artist in the Hollywood motion picture colony, today sued Miss Laura Langhauser, Huntington Park, Calif., Sunday school teacher, for breach of promise. The count, who attributed the rupture of his romance to "another man," asked the return of gifts valued at $2,000.

Screen Comedian Dies in Wisconsin

OSHKOSH, Wis., Nov. 29. (AP)—Alice Washburn, 68, one of the premier comedians of the cinema, died at her home here yesterday after an illness of several years. Immediate cause of death was attributed to heart failure. She was identified with the Edison company of New York and shared the popularity enjoyed by John Bunny, the best known of the early screen comedians.

Former Jeopardy Plea Frees Alleged Slayer

MEXIA, Texas, Nov. 29. (UP)—On a defense plea of former jeopardy, the murder case against W. J. Fagan was dismissed today by Judge Fountain H. Kirby. The indictment against Fagan resulted from the killing of the late Texas ranger, Tom Williard, in a whisky raid in Limestone county two years ago.

Fagan got 99 years at his first trial and the second trial resulted in a hung jury. On the ground the court had not entered a written order to record the hung jury trial, move was made to quash the indictment. Judge Kirby said he had heard the evidence in the case and did not believe a conviction possible, and so dismissed the case.

Santa Fe Clerks To Get Wage Increase

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 29. (AP)—A 5 per cent wage increase, effective Dec. 1, for some 7,000 Santa Fe clerical employes was announced today by D. F. Commander Byrd Becomes First Man To Fly Over Both Poles of Earth

Bernt Balchen, Harold June and Captain McKinley Accompany Explorer on Spectacular Flight

NEW YORK, Nov. 29. (US)—Commander Richard Evelyn Byrd has successfully completed the first aerial flight over the south pole.

This announcement was made here tonight by the New York Times and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and newspapers affiliated with them in the Byrd Antarctic expedition.

A wireless message to these papers said the flight was without mishap and that Commander Byrd had returned to his base at Little America.

Commander Byrd's flight across the south pole has made him the first man in history to fly across both of the earth's poles.

In May 1926, in the tri-motored Fokker airplane, the Josephine Ford, Commander Byrd flew from King's bay Spitzbergen, across the north pole and return.

Makes Fast Time

Flying a huge tri-motored plane, Commander Byrd completed his aerial survey of southpole in record time. He took off from his base at Little America at 10:29 p. m. Thursday (New York Standard Time).

With him on the flight were Bernt Balchen, who piloted the plane; Harold June, radio operator, and Captain Ashley C. McKinley, photographer and aerial surveyor.

The plane was heard from at 7 a. m. when it was estimated it was over the Queen Maud mountain range about 400 miles from the Byrd base at Little America and about half way to the pole.

Capt. H. H. Railey, personal representative of Commander Byrd in New York said the failure of further communication was due to the fact that daylight virtually precluded short wave transmission. The 7 o'clock message, Captain Railey said, was faint and neither altitude nor the position of the plane could be determined.

It was planned to keep in direct

Dallas Mayor Favors Increase in Wages

DALLAS, Nov. 29. (AP)—Mayor J. Waddy Tate of Dallas has recommended an increase from $3.20 to $4 a day for all city-employed day labor, during December, January and February. He said today he would ask the city commission Monday to approve the wage boost, as a contribution toward maintaining local prosperity.

TEXAS TO TAKE BIG STRIDES IN COMING YEAR

Governor Believes State's Construction Will Cost Half Billion

30 CITIES SURVEYED

Moody Takes Henry Ford To Task for Views on Commodities

AUSTIN, Nov. 29. (AP)—Texas will expend $350,000,000 for public improvements in 1930, Gov. Dan Moody advised President Hoover tonight in response to the chief executive's request for a compilation of such outlays in an appeal to speed construction to offset any ill effects from the stock market debacle.

The governor said that a survey of 30 of the principal cities and towns revealed that $350,335,000 would be spent for public works during the year and that this amount did not represent more than two-thirds of the total for the state.

Higher Figure Expected

Governor Moody said that although the survey indicated that only about $350,000,000 would be spent he was of the opinion that the figure would be nearer $500,000,000.

He suggested to the president legislation that would have a tendency to strengthen the market for securities of political subdivisions, pointing out that should the market improve for city and county bonds there would be a tendency to even greater improvements.

He also dispatched a telegram to Henry Ford taking issue with the automobile manufacturer for his purported interview in which he said that wages would be increased and the prices of commodities decreased.

Urges Road Funds

He said that although he did not attribute the decrease in the price of cotton to Ford's statement that nevertheless it went down immediately after he had made his state-

Jesuit Earthquake Wizard Found Dead With Open Books Before Him

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29. (US)—With two opened volumes on siesmology before him, the Rev. Francis A. Tondorf, world authority on earthquakes, was found dead at his desk at Georgetown university early today.

Death was due to heart attack complicated by high blood pressure and aggravated by overwork. His body was found when an investigation followed his failure to appear for early mass.

Father Tondorf had been director of the seismological observation at Georgetown university, and one of the finest in the world, for 26 years. He was also a recognized authority on pathology, physics and biology, and in addition to his many other duties was recently appointed head of the department of physiology in the university's school of medicine.

It was Father Tondorf who recorded and located the disatrous Japanese earthquake three hours before the first dispatch had been received from Tokyo.

Of late, Father Tondorf had devoted much time to a study of the possibility by which communities so threatened could be warned in advance.

With his many activities, Father Tondorf rose each morning at 4 o'clock and it was usually midnight before he had checked the last of the six seismographs with which the observatory is equipped. This rigorous routine is believed to have contributed to his death.

BYRD FLIES ACROSS POLE

Explorer Observes New Land in Anarctica

touch with the New York Times radio station, which is receiving press reports of the flight. A brief message—flashing merely "All's well"—came at 12:30 a. m. today.

Dr. James H. Scarr, meteorologist, who supplied data for numerous transoceanic flights, when informed of the Byrd dash to the pole and return to Little America, said:

"Commander Byrd is a very careful and experienced man for the big job. I am pleased, but not surprised he was successful."

As the world waited for word from the voyagers on their historic mission, the flight assumed importance in international relations. The question of the whole expedition is involved in claims to national title of antarctic regions made by Great Britain.

Byrd has claimed some land in the name of the United States. Great Britain claims some by right of discovery and previous exploration. The British government, about a year ago, sent a note to the United States informing this government the expedition was being closely watched because of British interests possibly involved.

The document lay for a year in state department files, until Nov. 15, when an answer was sent. The United States, it said, had nothing to say at this time.

The British government laid claim to part of Coats land, Enderby land, Kemp land, Queen land, Wilkes land, King George V. land and Oates land.

The explorer's brother Tom of the Tom, Dick and Harry Byrd trio, the last named being governor of Virginia, led Washington's watchers in direct interest. His emotion prevailed too at the White House and among the men on the street.

Diplomats Interested

Diplomats watched Byrd's efforts believing they might give rise to the question of title to lands in the ice-locked antarctic. First to come, however, might be the work of the map makers, who visualize a chance to draw more lines upon the globe.

In aviation quarters success by Byrd would mean valuable knowledge in aeronautical construction, navigation and the capacities of ships to perform under severe conditions.

Those both in official and private life saw the spectacular side of a 1,600-mile dash over frozen plateaus in an area where no rescue ships hovered to give aid to hapless fliers and where failure meant probable disaster.

The National Geographic society, sponsor and counsellor of expeditions to all quarters of the globe and which cooperated with Byrd, looked to his flight for further commendation of the sun-compass. Use of this instrument is credited by Byrd with a large share in the success of his north pole flight, and six were carried to the southern area. It was invented by the society's chief cartographer, Albert H. Bumstead.

"The antarctic undertaking," the society said today in a statement, "is faced with difficulties far different than those encountered by the commander when he successfully flew his plane over the waste and barren regions of the north pole.

"The north pole is in an ocean while the south pole is roughly in the center of what has become to be called the antarctic continent or antarctica."

CHICAGO CRIME CRUSADER OUT

Frank J. Loesch Resigns as Special Prosecutor

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. (AP)—Frank J. Loesch, 77-qear-old crusader against crime, resigned today as special assistant prosecutor on the staff of John A. Swanson, state's attorney. Loesch is a member of President Hoover's crime commission.

His action had been anticipated since the collapse of the state's case against the nine men accused of slaying Octavius Granady, negro politician. The state nolle prossed the case following a clash between Loesch and Judge Joseph B. David.

Loesch resigned a lucrative law practice a year ago to undertake a battle against what he regarded a politico-criminal alliance in Cook county.

old squalor of the hill folk, promised to begin the inquiry Monday and will turn over the findings to the federal government.

According to the Journal-Post, authority of the state and courts are almost unknown to most of the hills' illiterates. The law of the Cabin creek and the Cabin creek clans, members of which are now held in Franklin's death, is the law of the hills.

For months the murder of Franklin was hushed by clan rule. Then Mrs. Bertha Burns, 40, spoke. Flogged and beaten by night riders, who plied their lashes also against her 80-year-old husband, Mrs. Burns was silenced for a time.

Couldn't Stop Tongue

They could lay the switch to her back and make Bertha Burns cringe, but they could not stop her tongue. "Have you heard that awful happening last March?" she would ask at every opportunity. It took months before gossip traveled 15 miles from cabin to officers at Mountain View.

Then Sheriff Sam Johnson got wind of the story.

Franklin, a newcomer in those parts, had championed reforms among the hill folk. He found 16-year-old Tiller Ruminer a good companion. He had the audacity to court Tiller, whose name denotes the status of hill women.

Franklin was seized by a band of night riders as he and the girl, "big enough to pick her man," had been bidden by her backwoods parents to get married. They killed him, according to the gossip, because he "was too smart."

The girl was forced to watch. They slugged him. They ripped a knife across his flesh. They tossed him, delirious with pain and screaming for mercy, upon a log fire. He rolled off. They tossed him into the pyre again and he was consumed.

His screams had penetrated the woods to nearby cabins.

"I heered him, but I was afeered them fellers wanted to git my man out there and whup him, and I wouldn't leave him go," Mrs. Ruminer, his prospective mother-in-law, related.

Mrs. Burns and her aged husband heard likewise. None responded. The raiders attacked Tiller, then released the girl after threats of death. They descended upon nearby dwellers and used the lash to enforce silence.

For months the crime went unknown until Mrs. Burns was questioned and she brought forward "Uncle Lou" Saunchisee, a devout recluse of the hills, who revealed he had witnessed the scene while hidden behind a tree.

The state will take up the story Monday.

DIXIE EXPERIENCES EARLY COLD SPELL

ATLANTA, Nov. 29. (AP)—Winter riding a stiff northwest wind drove into the South with a vengeance tonight and sent the mercury tumbling toward new low levels for the season while the weather man predicted freezing temperatures as far south as the Georgia coast.

A mantle of snow covered Kentucky where the lowest temperatures of the day were recorded, and also lay over the mountains of Northwest Virginia where temperatures of 20 degrees were recorded. It was the second snow of the season for these two states, and far in advance of the usual falls.

Minimums of 20 degrees were in prospect for Arkansas, Tennessee, north Georgia and probably similar temperatures for north Alabama, and north Mississippi.

Sears-Roebuck Plant Robbers Are Identified

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 29. (AP)—Three of four men arrested yesterday for questioning in connection with the several thousand dollars payroll holdup Sept. 17, of the Sears-Roebuck plant here, today were identified as the robbers by five witnesses. Those police said were identified were Lonnie Affronti, 31, an ex-convict; Angelo (T-Bone) Torino, 30, and Mike School, 24.

ment and that such "utterances of prominent men influenced the market." He said he favored high wages but that he opposed advocacy of a decrease in prices of commodities.

The survey of proposed expenditures in the 30 principal cities and towns showed that $65,200,000 would be expended generally for public improvements, $110,138,000 building permits issued, $40,000,000 in county improvements, and $35,000,000 for state improvements, including construction of highways.

He suggested to President Hoover that he use his influence to increase the federal appropriations for aid on highways by from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 the coming year, promising that Texas would match dollar for dollar any amount allotted to Texas for this purpose.

LONG TELEGRAM SENT TO FORD

AUSTIN, Nov. 29. (UP)—Henry Ford was taken to task in a one-thousand word telegram from Gov. Dan Moody of Texas tonight for his reported statement that the prices of commodities should come down.

The Texas governor said in his telegram that he agreed with Ford's position that the price of wages should be maintained, but declared that if cotton is included in the commodities the motor king suggests should come down, that it will mean an average wage of $1.50 per day for the cotton farmer.

Sixteen-cent cotton, Governor Moody said, means 14 cents net to the farmer after picking and ginning costs are paid.

Quoting government figures on cotton acreage and yield, the governor argued that the average five-member family engaged in cotton raising is making only $700 per year.

Police Open Sale Of Revue Tickets

Several hundred tickets were reported sold Friday, the opening day of ticket sales for Sketches of 1930, the musical revue to be presented Dec. 18 at the Memorial auditorium for the benefit of the police relief fund.

Tickets may be purchased from any police officer at any time between now and the night of the performance, it was announced. Rehearsals are being held daily in the building formerly occupied by the J. C. Penney company on Eighth street. About 500 persons are in the cast and all are practicing strenuously with the expectation of presenting the largest musical revue ever seen in Wichita Falls.

Mammoth stage settings and intricate lighting effects are being arranged at the auditorium. Each act will require a different setting. The sketches will be models of the hits from Broadway successes and will present a futuristic effect. One of the features will be the only toe-tap dancer in Wichita Falls.

A fine cabinet radio, valued at $149, donated by the Philco Radio Sales company, will be given away the night of the performance. Chance to win the radio are given with the tickets, which sell for $1 each.

POULTRY SHOW AT FREDERICK

Expert to Hold Demonstration Today

Special to The Record News

FREDERICK, Okla., Nov. 29.—Of special interest to chicken raisers of the county will be the practical demonstration to be conducted at the district court room in this city Saturday at 2 p. m. on problems confronting the raisers of poultry. The demonstration will be conducted by A. E. "Chickoline" Olsen, poultry expert.

The demonstration is being put on through the courtesy of the Culver and Robinson gin of this city, in an effort to further the prosperity of this county by encouraging the raising of better poultry.

Mr. Olsen has been in the poultry business practically all of his life. He started handling chickens at the age of six years in the Salvation Army orphanage. He now has poultry interests in Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma.

All of the demonstrations will be by actual work and Mr. Olsen will answer any question pertaining to the raising of poultry. The demonstration is free.

Storms Wires Bridge Order

Acting Governor Asks That Contracts Be Drawn

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 29. (AP)—Acting Gov. C. S. Storms telegraphed authority today to W. C. Lewis, assistant attorney general, and W. C. Burnham, state bridge engineer, who represented Oklahoma in a conference at Fort Worth with Texas authorities, to draw up a contract for construction of three free bridges across Red river, at Terral, Okla., Denison Texas and Gainesville, Texas.

Lewis and Burnham, who went to Fort Worth yesterday to meet an asistant attorney general and the Texas bridge engineer, for the formal drawing up of bridge contracts, advised Storms today that under Texas laws they must be designated as agents of the governor.

The bridges are to be constructed by the two states near toll bridges now in operation. Bids opened here and at Austin by highway commissioners Monday showed the Southwest L. E. Meyers company of Dallas low bidder on all three structures.

Universal Air Lines Extension Is Planned

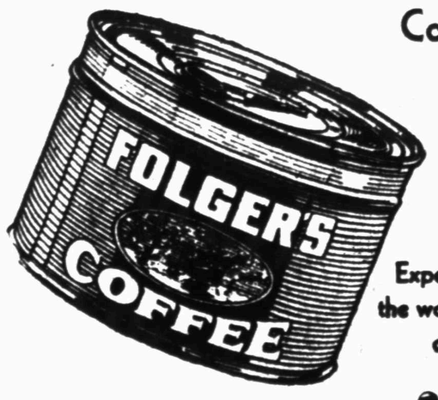

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 29. (US)—An extension of lines and revision of schedules in the Southwest was announced tonight by Universal Aviation corporation through Col. Halsey Dunwoody, executive vice president.

Rumors that the Braniff division service between Oklahoma City and Dallas was to be curtailed was denied by Colonel Dunwoody in announcing the expansion of service from Oklahoma City to Tulsa and the revision of schedules between Oklahoma City, Wichita Falls, Dallas and Fort Worth to hook up with the Southern Air Transport.

Break in Transformer Halts Electric Service

Wichita Falls was forced to get along without the aid of electricity in any form for a few hours Friday morning. But the people need not worry about it happening for some time to come now because the trouble has been remedied, according to J. W. Lyle of the Texas Electric Service company.

The trouble was caused by the breaking of a large transformer in the main station of the plant.

GRUNDY FAILS TO FILE BOND

Writ Today May Seek Lower Bail From Court

Bond of $10,000 for the release of Roy Grundy, charged with the murder of June Hulburn, had not been made Friday night and proposed habeas corpus proceedings asking that the amount be reduced had not been filed in the 89th district court, according to information in the district attorney's office.

Cedric Taylor, of defense counsel, announced he expected to file the habeas corpus proceedings in the event it was impossible to make bond of $10,000. The proceedings will probably be filed Saturday if bond has not been made by that time.

The date for Grundy's trial has been set for Jan. 16 in the 89th district court, according to Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney. At a trial earlier this week, the jury failed to agree and was discharged Thursday morning. District Attorney Sam B. Spence announced Friday his department would resist any attempt to lower the amount of the bond.

of athletes, either in high schools or colleges.

The resolution dealing with preservation of historical landmarks will be called to the attention of Gov. Dan Moody." In it, special stress is laid on the proposal for a memorial park around the Alamo.

The report congratulates the new state board of education; re-indorses the education bill, providing for a U. S. department of education, and asks an amendment to the Texas constitution to allow a teachers' retirement fund. It is also recommended that the powers and duties of the state superintendent of public instruction be transferred to the state board of education, and that the board be empowered to select the superintendent.

Coincident with the teachers' meeting, the Speech and Art Teachers association opened its two-day session today, the seventh year the state-wide association has met with the state teachers. Marjorie E. Will of San Antonio was elected president of the association to succeed Gladys De Silva Bates of San Angelo, who was elected vice president.

Other officers of this group named were: Lolo L. Cox, Denton, historian; Mabel Bonner, Corsicana, secretary, and Wilhelmina Hedde, Dallas, treasurer. Delegates will visit the Dallas Little Theater's production Saturday night.

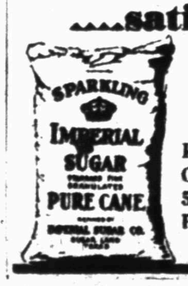

Another affiliated group, the Texas Classroom Teachers association elected officers at the annual meeting today. Miss Ida Mae Murray, San Antonio, was elected president; S. A. Tibbets, Amarillo, vice president; Miss Hulett Jones, San Antonio, secretary; Miss Nancy Hammons, El Paso, treasurer, and Miss Kate Hassell, Dallas, publicity director.

Albert Edward Wiggam, editor of the American Magazine, addressed this sectional meeting.

DROUTH GRIPS WESTERN AREA

Pacific Coast Needs Rain; Records Broken

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29. (INS)—That topical subject, the weather, was getting more of its share of attention along the Pacific coast today as stockmen and farmers faced heavy losses because of lack of rain.

California and her sister states are undergoing the longest "dry spell" in history. The weather bureau began compiling its records along the Pacific seaboard 80 years ago. The records disclose that each of those years surpassed 1929 in precipitation.

Charts show the longest absence of low pressure areas for all time; meteorologists declare they do not know why the rain-bringing low pressure areas, usually common in this season of the year, are absent now.

Father Jerome Richard, Santa Clara university's "padre of the rains," declared today planetary conditions were affecting the atmospheric conditions.

Sun spots, he asserted, have a direct bearing on the formation of high and low pressures. At present the "highs" rule the coast and the "lows" are not able to find "free passage" inland.

In the San Francisco bay district but one one-hundredth of an inch of rain has fallen since July 1. The present dry period is general on the Pacific coast, and extends to the foothills of the Rocky mountains.

Man Wanted by Police In Missouri Is Held

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. (INS)—Carlos Lewis, 22, wanted by police at Macon, Mo., for assault with attempt to kill and robbery, was held here today for Missouri authorities.

Zelma Lewis, who said she was his wife, was also seized at an address furnished by Macon police.

Lewis and his brother, William, who fled before the arrival of detectives, is wanted for assaulting and robbing his father-in-law, police stated.

There are approximately 30,000 silver foxes in Norway.

Self-Imposed Fast Kills Aged Woman

COALBURG, W. V., Nov. 29. (UP)—A self imposed fast "in emulation of Christ" cost the life of Mrs. Janet Love, 79, at her home here today on the 26th day of an attempted 40-day fast.

Mrs. Love announced to her neighbors four weeks ago that she would fast, that she "had been inspired to abstain from food for 40 days in emulation of the Savior."

POSTAL BOMB MANGLES MAN

Telegraph Warning Comes Too Late

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 29. (AP)—Postoffice officials here today said that Frank Scott, 25, mechanic received probably fatal injuries today when a small metal package he received in the mail exploded when he opened it at Townsend, Tenn.

Scott's hands and arms were mangled, his face and body lacerated. At a hospital in Maryville where he was removed to, it was said he was not expected to live.

Thirty minutes after the explosion, a telegram came for Scott reading "Don't open package. It will explode. Throw it in river." It was signed "Dementi" and came from Los Angeles, Calif.

Scott received the package in the noon mail and took it to his boarding house to be opened. A Mr. and Mrs. Fancher, and an 8-year-old girl, Ada Swann, guests at the boarding house, were slightly injured when the box exploded. The explosion blew out the windows in Scott's room, and destroyed the box. Only fragments were found by postoffice inspectors.

Man, Wife and Two Children Asphyxiated

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. (INS)—The bodies of Clayton Van Wie, 30, his wife, Helen, 21, and their two small children, were found today in the Van Wie home. Death occurred by asphyxiation, according to police who said they found a small gas heater which had absorbed the oxygen in the room.

"She took her husband unawares

...and learned a lot!"

"I'll surprise them," she told herself.

MRS. KIRK'S husband wasn't expecting her back from Fort Worth until Sunday morning, but she came home on Saturday night.

"I'll surprise them," she told herself, slipping her key into the latch and entering the house quietly.

Savory odors came from the kitchen and she heard voices behind the closed door.

"Yes, sir; your mother's the best cook on earth," she heard her busband saying to her son, "but, my boy, she certainly doesn't make good coffee. She's such a dear, good woman, though, that I have never liked to tell her so."

"Well, it's good that we found out about this White Swan Coffee and laid in a good supply while she was gone, Dad," her boy said. "I think she'll notice the improvement."

Mrs. Kirk was 'a good sport' and a wise woman. She slipped back to the front door again, slammed it and shouted, "Look who's here!"

Mr. Kirk and his son raced to meet her and immediately after the embraces were exchanged, she said, "By the way, I ran across the most wonderful coffee in Fort Worth. It's called White Swan and . . . "

Yes, indeed—a wise woman!

No matter which member of the family may have introduced White Swan Coffee—or by what means—the enthusiastic praise for its tempting aroma and satisfying flavor is always unanimous.

WHITE SWAN COFFEE

To develop its natural goodness, more than a half century of experience is brought to the science of roasting and the art of blending—each playing its important part in achieving that uniform, delicious flavor which has made White Swan so popular wherever it is served.

By controlling every step in its preparation, the Waples Platter Company—importer, roaster, packer and distributor—makes certain that every sealed tin of White Swan reaches you with its full appetizing quality kept intact.

White Swan Coffee always comes to you fresh. Mrs. Waggoner Winner of Golf Championship Cup

Mrs. John L. Waggoner was announced winner Friday in the annual tournament for the Woman's Golf association permanent championship cup, with Mrs. C. O. Davis, runner up. Each was presented by the Woman's Golf association with a "friendship pin."

Mrs. Waggoner's name will be the third engraved on the cup, Mrs. George Hampshire and Miss Laura Lee Hampshire being the two previous winners.

In the regular weekly golf game, Mrs. Waggoner was also winner of the low ball.

Luncheon was served at noon in a private dining room where the yellow chrysanthemums and green crystal used, made an unusually pretty table.

Covers were laid for Mesdames E. Garonzik, H. L. Ruehl, D. O. Johnson, Ben Bell, H. L. Hargrave, Fred T. Couper, Helen Kendall, W. P. Bolding, John L. Waggoner, Ortha Morris, B. F. Caldwell and little Myrdell Gates.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

A weathered looking gentleman on the bus Wednesday vouchsafed the remark that these days were "weather breeders."

From the cold weather that has come, we believe he was right, but at any rate, weather from now on will make no difference to Christmas shoppers. The streets are so crowded they are dangerous to people with sore toes.

We have read an editorial about choosing Christmas toys and wonder how many people will pay attention to college extension suggestions.

Christmas is a time when most people "catch" a Christmas complex; their hearts, rather than their heads guide them.

The stores are full of shoppers already; one thing in the way of improvement we do notice, and that is hearing women ask if the paint is fast. They are trying to buy toys from which the baby won't suck the paint.

But cannons and popguns and toy soldiers and bugles and martial drums are what the little boys like; and dolls appeal to most little girls in spite of the trend of the times.

You can see women on the streets now with shopping bags on their arms, pouring over long written lists.

Every monthly magazine has its Christmas story and the one that makes you cry, then laugh, is the greatest success.

Members of Durland grove, 1487, Woodman circle, met in regular session at Eagles hall Friday afternoon when 22 members were in attendance.

Four membership applications were read, balloted upon and accepted by the order. Initiation services were held for Miss Hortense Cabiness.

A communication was read from members of the field work committee in Omaha, Neb., complimenting the grove for the amount of publicity obtained in the recent contest. The grove's score in the contest for the month of October was 514 lines.

It was decided to have a rummage sale early in December, the time and place to be decided at a later date. Plans were completed for the all-day meeting and luncheon to be held next Friday. Mrs. Clara Putty and Mrs. Maggie Brooks were appointed as assistant hostesses. The grove closed in regular order.

Norwegian Life Studied Friday By Travel Club

Mrs. Ben G. Oneal was leader when the Travel club members met Friday morning at the Woman's Forum clubhouse to study Norwegian people in America. An unusually interesting program was presented.

Mrs. G. L. Shapard read a paper prepared by Mrs. Guy Rogers on "Cleng Pierson and the First Settlements He Located," and "Peder Victorious" was discussed by Mrs. Oneal as it touched on the transition from Norwegian pioneering to Americanization.

Mrs. W. W. Cook closed the program with an extremely interesting talk on "Famous Norwegians in America." The entire program was reported to be exceptionally well handled.

Mrs. Oneal requested that the members of the Travel club assist Mrs. W. W. Silk in sponsoring an art exhibit to be shown at the forum next week.

Mrs. John W. Caldwell will be hostess to the club members on Friday, Dec. 6, at her home on Bullington street.

Mrs. E. C. Will, formerly a member and now living in McClain, Texas, was a guest. Others present were Mesdames J. W. Akin, John T. Bonner, C. H. Clark, W. W. Cook, John Caldwell, E. T. Dinner, Show And Music Given Day Nursery Family

All churches of the Federated Missionary societies, under the leadership of Mrs. Louis Pink, chairman, joined Thursday in serving a Thanksgiving dinner at the day nursery.

At tables decorated with masses of chrysanthemums and spread with turkey and all the trimmings, 16 mothers and 60 children were served a Thanksgiving dinner. The mothers, many of whom were workers at the laundries, were given time off for the celebration and the Wichita laundry furnished all linen necessary for the large tables.

R. E. Shepherd sang many numbers for the group, accompanied by Mrs. Shepherd, and Mildred Loevy gave several delightful readings.

Finishing a happy day, Colbert Blackshear of the Olympic gave free tickets to that theater to all the mothers and children.

Another donation which has added a great deal to the pleasure of the day nursery family is Mrs. Perry Wilson's gift of a handsome victrola and a dozen books of splendid records.

Mrs. Bolding Directs New Century Lesson

Mrs. W. P. Bolding was director for members of the New Century club when they met at the home of Mrs. C. W. Snider Friday afternoon for the first of a series of two lessons on the Bible.

Mrs. C. B. Felder gave an interesting paper on "How We Got Our Bible" and Mrs. W. D. Cline discussed "The Bible, a Body of Literature."

Following a short social session a delicious refreshment course was served to Mesdames W. P. Bolding, Fred T. Couper, W. D. Cline, T. P. Duncan, C. B. Felder, J. A. Fisher, R. W. Gutzler, C. W. Gilliland, W. J. Grisham, J. C. A. Guest, C. R. Hartsook, T. T. T. Reese, R. E. Shepherd, C. W. Snider. Mrs. C. J. Barnard, an associate member, and her house guest, Miss Nell Morris, were guests.

Suit on Barber Law Set in Dallas Court

The trial of the suit testing the constitutionality of the recently enacted state barber law, scheduled for hearing in federal district court here Saturday, has been continued until the court term in Dallas as a result of an agreement between the plaintiffs and the state attorney general's department, it was announced Friday by Judge William H. Atwell.

The suit was brought by L. R. Munoz, Dallas barber, who alleged in his petition that the law was class legislation and discriminatory for the reason that it required a $10 license fee by those who followed the barber trade. The Burton Barber college of Dallas and Fort Worth, which filed an intervention joining with Munoz in his attack, alleged in its petition that the law was confiscatory, that it abridges the right of contract and that it would deprive barbers of the right to trial by jury.

Head and Heart Should Be Used In Hunt for Mate

Does Choosing a Partner by Head or Heart Make for a Happier Marriage?—Folly of Youthful Marriages Without Money—Doubting Thomas

Dear Miss Dix—Should a woman follow the dictates of her heart or head when marrying? My sister thinks one way, I the other. What do you say?—AGNES.

Answer—I do not think that there can be any happy or successful marriage in which both the head and heart do not equally participate. You cannot afford to do without either one when you pick out a husband or a wife.

Certainly love is indispensable in marriage. Nothing else is a satisfactory substitute for it. Worldly advantages do not take its place. Nor respect, nor abstract appreciation of an individual's worth. Nor liking. Nor friendship.

A man may appreciate that a woman has every charm and virtue. She may come up to his ideal of perfect womanhood. He may know that she would make him a model wife. They may be interested in the same things, have the same tastes and habits, and be congenial in every respect, but unless he has that intangible feeling for her that we call love, unless he thrills at her touch and for some reason that he cannot explain to himself she has some allure for him that no other woman has, he will not be happy if he marries her.

And the same thing is even more true of women. The woman who marries a man because he is a good match, because he can provide for her and give her the things she wants, or because he is a fine and honorable man and she knows that he will be good to her, or because she is getting along in years and wisdom counsels her that this is probably her last chance to settle herself in a home of her own, is never happy, no matter how hard her husband tries to make her so, nor how appreciative she is of all his goodness to her nor how much she admires him as a man. Liking isn't loving. Being satisfied isn't rapture. Endurance is not joy.

If we trusted to our heads alone to guide us in marriage we should make safe and sane unions with men and women who had tidy little bank accounts and good health and who were moral and sober and industrious, and we should feel toward them just about as we do toward our business partners, and the holy estate would be dull and flat and with no thrill left in it.

But, on the other hand, if we marry solely for love and with no thought of future consequences, we bring even worse misery upon ourselves, because love does not stand the wear and tear of antagonistic personalities nor does it often survive the strain of shame or poverty. No matter how wildly a man may be in love with a girl when he marries her, he is not happy with her if she develops into a shrew or a peevish neurotic, or if she keeps his nose to the grindstone and balks his ambitions by her extravagance, or if she is a sloven and a poor housekeeper.

Nor is any girl happy who marries a drunkard or a roue or a ne'er-do-well, no matter how much he intrigues her heart. Indeed the more she loves him, the more miserable she is as she sees him throwing himself away on drink, or as she watches his philandering with other women. Nor can love reconcile her to being shabby and down at the heel and seeing her children lack the advantages that should be theirs.

And so it is only when the heart and the head both put their O. K. on a marriage that it is happy and successful. We must have love in marriage, but the only love that endures is that which is founded on respect.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am 16, very much in love with a boy of 17. He had started to save his money with the hope that it will aid us after marriage, but we figure out that it will take five years before we will have enough to get married on and we are afraid that waiting so long we will tire of each other. If we marry now we will have a terrible struggle because we haven't anything to start housekeeping on, but we feel that our love is strong enough to withstand the knocks it will receive. But, dear Miss Dix, won't you please tell us what is best for us to do?—MAE.

Answer—That I will, and right gladly. The only thing for you to do is to put all idea of marrying out of your mind until you are grown up and have enough money to get married on.

For you to marry now with not a penny between you to bless yourselves with would be suicidal. It would wreck your lives before you have even begun to live.

In the first place, even if you were as rich as Mr. Henry Ford, you should not get married when you are only 16 and 17, because you are nothing but children with children's changing tastes and you don't know what sort of husband and wife you will want when you are man and woman.

Think how your ideas have altered in the last two or three years. Think how bored you are by the things you used to like to do. How you loathe the things you used to like to eat. Well, in the next three or four years you will change still more because your minds have really just begun to develop.

But you haven't any money. How are you going to live? Who is going to feed and clothe you? Are you going to inflict yourselves upon your poor, hard-worked parents? And probably it won't be just you two who will have to be supported. The chances are that there will be babies, too.

Young people who rush so blithely into matrimony without any way of financing it and then come and dump themselves down on their parents to be fed and clothed do one of the most cruel and dastardly acts in the world. They know that their families will not let them starve, and they are so selfish that in order to gratify their own puppy love instincts they ruthlessly sacrifice their old father and mother and force them to support the husbands and wives they have brought home.

If you are afraid that your love won't survive five years of waiting, what makes you think it will stand five years of marriage? Believe me, my children, five years of such a marriage as you propose, with the wolf howling outside of the door and your young shoulders sagging under burdens too heavy for them to bear; five years in which you will be cut out of all the pleasures that belong to youth will put a strain upon love that only the affection of a mature man and woman could stand. No child love could endure it. Don't try it.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—Will you answer this question frankly: How many questions in your newspaper columns do you invent yourself?—J. R. R.

Answer—On my honor, not a single, solitary one. Every day from all over the country I get hundreds of letters from men and women telling me their heart stories and asking the questions which I feebly try to answer in this column.

They come from men and women, from boys and girls, from the old and the young, and they reflect every phase of human experience and run the whole gamut of human emotions. There is nothing of joy nor sorrow, of hope nor despair, of love nor hate, of bitter repining and patient acceptance of life that these letters do not tell to me, and my only regret is that I have not the wisdom nor the power to help my correspondents better.—DOROTHY DIX.

W. M. S. DINNER

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Texas, Nov. 29.—The ladies of the W. M. S. of the First Baptist church served Thanksgiving dinner to 300 guests at the basement of the church Thursday. This has been their custom for the past 25 years, and several out of town visitors were present.

REALTY HEAD HERE MONDAY

Culver to Address Group at Oil Meeting

Members of the finance committee of the Deep Oil Development company will meet with Wichita Falls realtors and other local citizens in a banquet at the Wichita club next Monday night, Dec. 2, at 6:30 o'clock, when Harry T. Culver, president of the National Association of Real Estate boards will be speaker.

Walter S. Curlee, member of the local real estate board, made this announcement Friday noon at the weekly meeting of the Junior chamber of commerce at the Kemp hotel, and stated also that an invitation to attend the banquet has been guest of honor and principal speak- extended to real estate men of Lawton, Okla., and to all citizens of Wichita Falls. Mr. Culver will arrive by airplane from Oklahoma City at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon.

"Failure Through Interior Corrosion" was the subject of Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor of the Methodist church at Archer City, in the principal address given at the meeting. The speaker pointed out that nations and individuals alike fall from forces which work from within, rather than through the strength of outside forces.

Announcement of a Junior chamber of commerce dance to be held at the Wichita club on Dec. 7, and the annual banquet on Dec. 10, was made by Guy P'Pool, secretary.

Two dances were given by Miss Virginia Green of the Knickerbocker studios, accompanied by Mrs. Marion Smith. Jerry Vinson presided at the meeting.

Graham Court Opens Monday

Shook and Reese Cases Set For Term.

Two capital cases are included in one of the heaviest criminal dockets in years to come before the 30th district court which will be convened in Graham Monday morning by Judge Allan D. Montgomery, it was announced Friday by Sam B. Spence, district attorney.

The trial of Tom Shook, former chief of police at Electra, charged with robbery, is set for Dec. 16 on a change of venue from Wichita county. Mr. Spence announced he would ask that the trial of John M. Reese, charged with murder in connection with the slaying of Ed Langford, Olney constable, on Nov. 18, be set for Dec. 19. Reese has not yet been indicated, the grand jury not having been in session since the slaying.

The district attorney's department will submit about 15 or 20 other cases to the grand jury, Mr. Spence said.

Marriage for Two

By Arthur Somers Roche

Shortly after an interview in which Helen Wilson tells Larry Tracy that she wishes to break their engagement so that she can marry the wealthy, middle-aged Frank Burton, and Larry swears, in pique, to marry the first girl who will have him, he rescues from a park bench a starved but beautiful girl.

In the smart little restaurant to which the taxi driver takes them, Larry orders dinner for her. He is amazed at the bravery with which he faces life, and at the bitter cynicism of her regard for men.

He learns that she is homeless and precalls upon her to accept $500, promising never to attempt to see her again. She says good by—and he is just in time to catch her as she faints.

Realizing that she is seriously ill, and respecting the pride behind her desire to hide her poverty from the world, Larry takes her to his own home and calls his friend, Dr. Blanchard.

He warns Larry of the risk of losing his heart "on the rebound."

A newspaper reporter arrives with Mrs. Wilson's announcement of the breaking of the engagement, and asks for a statement. Larry has nothing to say.

A Proposal

He had a great deal to say, but not the sort of thing one could utter to a newspaper man, or, for that matter, to any one. There are thoughts which one must keep to oneself, for the outward observance of chivalry cannot be abandoned.

Quietly, but profusely, he damned Mrs. Genevieve Wilson. But finally, the first flush of anger gone, he reviewed the matter shamefacedly. When he inwardly denounced her mother, he was really denouncing Helen, and what reason had he for denunciation because their dissolved engagement had been made public?

The dissolution could not be kept secret. Why should it be? Not to let their world know that the engagement had been broken would be to be guilty of a meaningless, profitless deception. Still—and he grew angry again—she might have waited a day or so.

Mother and daughter, he told himself, were acting about the dissolution of the engagement as they had acted when the arrangement had been entered into. He had wanted to keep their love a secret for a while. There had seemed—how naive he had been—a certain sacredness about it that would be lost, or at any rate lessened, by taking the world into their confidence. There would have been, he felt, an exquisite delight in encountering mutual friends and in hugging to his heart the thought that Helen and he loved each other and that these friends did not know it.

Silly, yes. But silliness was forgivable in a man newly engaged. There would be years when every one would know that Helen and he were lovers—he had envisaged a passion that would extend half a century—and so he had wanted just a few days when none should share their secret.

But no! Helen's mother had been unable to wait. The engagement had been announced almost in the same sighing breath in which it had been agreed upon. Almost, he now told himself, as though Mrs. Wilson—Helen, too, if he would be honest—had been anxious to commit him irretrievably. He sneeringly supposed that Helen's engagement to Frank Burton would be in the papers the day after tomorrow. Thus Burton would be permitted no chance of withdrawal. Maybe, next week, some man with a hundred millions would supplant Burton . . .

Nothing Serious

Hogan interrupted his reverie to announce dinner. What a travesty the meal was on the meal that had been planned. Helen and her mother were to have been there; then the theater; and then, having taken Mrs. Wilson home the young couple would have dropped in at some night club, have danced, have ridden home together, and in the kindly shelter of the taxi his arm would have gone around her, her lips would have yielded to his . . .

Well, that dream was over, but its memories would be always bitter . . . He smoked a cigaret with his liquor and was gravely debating the advisability of a highball when Nurse Evans asked him to see him.

She was a capable-seeming, plain-looking woman of middle age. Her manner, while good-humored enough, seemed to say, "No nonsense, please."

"I've a list of things that I'll want from the drug store," she announced. She gave him a paper.

"I'll attend to them right away," he announced. "How is the—patient?"

The nurse shrugged. "As well as can be expected. I don't anticipate anything serious, Mr. Tracy. Rest, care—those two things work wonders, you know."

He nodded assent.

"But Dr. Blanchard was a bit apprehensive," he said.

"As to the future? Yes, I got him on the phone at another patient's house, and—but we can't think about that now, Mr. Tracy. All we can do for her is cure her body. In her mind—I mean if that poor child worries—well, we'll do what we can," she finished. "Will you send for those things?" she asked brusquely.

"I'll go myself," he answered. "Need a breath of air."

An hour later—it had been a rather extensive list that Nurse Evans had prepared—he was back in the house. The nurse met him at the door of the bedroom where Joyce Carroll—the name attracted him—lay, received his bundle of medicines, whispered to him that her patient had finally gone to sleep, and withdrew into the darkened bedroom.

Tracy felt strangely alone. All his life he had lived in this house, and for several years had lived alone, save for his servants. But he'd never felt lonely until tonight. It wasn't strangely enough, because of his misery over the de-

Six Cases Set for Trial in 89th Court for Week Beginning Dec. 9

Six criminal cases on the docket for the 89th district court have been set for trial Dec. 9, according to the announcement Friday of Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney. The cases have been pending for some time.

Ladonia Stout will be brough to trial on a charge of theft and receiving and concealing stolen property. Larry Kilroy will appear on charges of possession of liquor and Dan Norwood on charges of possession and manufacturing of liquor. D. M. Barker and Mosell Barker will appear jointly on charges of theft and receiving and concealing stolen property. J. J. Bartlett will be brought to trial on a charge of rape.

Tad Locke, arrested at the same time as Dan Norwood, will appear on a charge of possessing a still. Locke had his hand amputated as a result of a gunshot wound suffered during the raid on the still where the arrest was made several weeks ago.

Banquet to Be Given John Henry Kirby

DALLAS, Nov. 29. (AP)—Friends of John Henry Kirby, Houston lumberman and president of the Southern Tariff association, are to honor him with a dinner here Dec. 7, it was announced today.

Ed Woodall of Dallas, who is aiding in planning the dinner, said it was to be given to show "we honor him as an honest and faithful citizen who has worked to better Texas and the Southwest."

Kirby's sincerity was attacked in Washington by the lobby investigating committee which attempted to "belittle his efforts," according to Woodall.

Sick and Discouraged

MRS. L. H. MILTON, Forrest City, Ark.

"I WAS weak and run-down, and had severe pains in sides and back," writes Mrs. L. H. Milton, 402 North Division St., Forrest City, Ark. "I was in bed for about five weeks, not able to do a thing. This caused me to be blue and discouraged. My mother gave me Cardui when I was a girl, and it helped me, so I decided to try it again. I sent for it, and began taking it. After taking one bottle, I felt better. I kept on taking it, and grew stronger. By the time I had taken three bottles, I was up and able to do my work. Now I am well and strong, care for the house, and have time to tell my friends what splendid things Cardui did for me."

Wichita Falls as a Dairy Market

Marking the results of extensive development of the dairy industry in the Wichita Falls community during the past few years, and supplying a substantial foundation for further growth in the future, this city now is provided with unusually complete facilities for the marketing of milk and its products.

A district naturally well suited to dairying has produced more than 130 dairies, from which an average of about 90,000 pounds of whole milk daily is supplied for immediate consumption in the residential and business districts of the city.

In addition to large scale manufacturing of butter and ice cream which has been carried on in Wichita Falls for years, preparations are now being completed for manufacturing powdered milk and condensed milk in the modern plant occupied during the past two years by the Kraft Cheese company. Beginning of the condensing process has been announced for about Dec. 15, while the powdering of milk is expected to begin about Jan. 15. The capacity of this plant for the use of whole milk will permit the purchase of more than 100,000 pounds daily, if such amounts can be secured, it was said.

In addition to the powdering and condensing plant, alterations are under way at the Producers' creamery plant which will considerably increase its capacity both for handling of milk for retail trade, and the manufacture of butter, cheese, etc.

The Ferguson Ice Cream company, until recently located on Austin street, has just moved its plant into a new brick building at Fourth and Ohio, and will have a materially increased capacity. Lehrack Ice Cream company, adjoining the new Ferguson location, is using from 20,000 to 25,000 pounds of whole milk daily in its manufacturing. A close estimate by leaders in the industry indicates that the plants now located here could market as much as 250,000 pounds of whole milk daily from producers in this community.

THE JOKER
Daily Editorial

ONE BY ONE, France had played her trumps, and lost—until there were no aces left to lead. Then she reached for the discard and drew—the Joker.

Once more, her die seemed cast and the moment arrived for the traditional maid or youth to snatch her fortunes from the slavering jaws of defeat.

But no Jeanne Hachette or Jeanne D'Arc appeared to retemper the sword of victory.

Martel failed Chalons—no reincarnation of Henry of Navarre burst from the tomb—Rosney slept on—and all the prayers of the nation could not evoke another Little Corporal.

Instead of an Amazon, a miracle monger or a captain of audacity, a shaggy runt of a man—a misfire in politics, and a dabbler in journalism for seventy odd years—emerged from obscurity and repudiation to seize the tattering oriflamme of France and wave her retreating hosts back to triumph.

The crisis called for Hercules. And a gnarled dwarf, who had never signally succeeded at a single labor to which he had hitherto set himself, answered.

Let us rest the scene. Precedent had confessed bankruptcy. A seemingly invincible enemy, warring with unexpected weapons, employing new strategies and hourly confounding counter thrusts with dumfounding resources, had invested the very environs of Paris.

Like the Iron Woman of Heidelberg, implacable cordons advancing from north and east, had already crushed Flanders and Burgundy.

France's sun was setting upon a German helmet spike and fast disappearing into the maw of conquest, when Clemenceau's belated hour struck.

He had eaten his allotted three score and ten years of chagrin and rebuff. Popular opinion had retired him from action.

THE TIGER was too old to bite; time had dulled his fangs and the precarious journals from which he intermittently growled at this cabinet and that—at these notables and those—roused tolerant amusement oftener than effective fervors.

But desperation cannot afford to quibble at instruments of salvation. And France at bay, without a Jeanne D'Arc, or a Henry Fourth—without a spark of genius among her younger statesmen and without a Bonaparte among her cadets, in her extremity dared to play the Joker—and won.

He was 76 years old, remember that. He had missed his goals at 40, at 50, at 60, remember that.

Important achievement had left him no credentials; but neither time nor an empty scorecard could browbeat Clemenceau's self-confidence.

He still believed in himself.

He knew that he knew what to do and how to do it. He bided his chance and it came.

He refused to discount the eleventh hour; he didn't subscribe to Osler's theory of obsolescence at 50 or let the frosts that had nipped his head, nip his heels or hopes—but marched unflinchingly on to his appointed rendezvous with duty.

He wasn't a quitter and so he became an immortal.

He decided what he wanted, he wanted it hard enough and he finally got it.

Hang his picture on your wall, beside the calendar, to remind you that opportunity has no deadlines or age limits.

And when fool balance sheets cast speculative eyes upon your job, find courage in the thought of the man who never found it too late to make good.

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

"He who seeks happiness should seek God."

If you would find lasting happiness you must seek to know God's truths and understand nature's laws, physical, mental and spiritual. God is everywhere and in everything, working through His infallible laws His wonders to perform. In Him we live, move and have our being. We are in Him and He is in us.

An Ohio man, reciting poetry to a womn, shot her in the leg accidentally. She ought to be grateful for the relief, anyway.

The hoboes are asking for a four-day working week of two hours daily. They ought to run for office.

The Hours of Despair

WHEN a man sits down, pens a farewell letter and then shoots himself to death, those last words he has written are bound to be of more than ordinary interest.

The other day a man drove his car up to the jail at Great Falls, Mont., left a letter for the sheriff, returned to his car and killed himself. The sheriff found in the letter, among other things, these lines:

"And now of course you wonder why I do this so-called cowardly and crazy act. Well, I am not crazy, but I am one of those millions that are of no use to anybody, never get any place, never accomplish anything, never get a chance at anything worth while, and if I did I wouldn't have sense enough to take it.

"I haven't any financial difficulties, although a little more money at certain times might have led to better understanding, happiness and contentment. I have at this time no one to confide in, no pal that would understand, no one that I could work and strive and live for and no more relatives, either, only my worthless self. So why should I live? No reason for it."

Probably all of us have moods in which we feel much the way this lonely, discouraged Montana suicide felt; moods in which we feel that we "are of no use to anybody, never get any place, never accomplish anything." Our moods don't often drag us down to such depths of despair as his took him; yet we have them, just the same, and they are hard to live through.

Yet a mood of that kind, whatever the circumstances, is mistaken. How do we know that we are "of no use to anybody?" Is there any man, anywhere, of whom that can be said? The lowliest, most insignificant mortal has his place; he has, perhaps, a bright smile that his acquaintances have come to depend on, or he is an unobtrusive, efficient workman, or he unconsciously convinces some stranger that the world is a decent place by the brave fight he makes daily against unfriendly circumstances. You cannot take any mortal out of the world without leaving some sort of void.

The other thing—loneliness—is harder to combat. It, also is a thing to which we fall victim now and then. Unless we can tie our own lives up with someone else's we feel lost.

Yet—that, too, is a thing we must overcome. We are condemned, by the mere fact that we are alive, to a certain amount of loneliness. It is up to us to realize the fact; to school ourselves in independence, and, at the same time, to extend bits of ourselves to our fellows, so that they perhaps can escape from their own prisons for a time.

Despair comes to all of us, at times. All we can do is remember that others have moments in which they feel the same way. Things are never quite as black as we believe.

Map in 46 Languages

THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY has just issued a new map of Europe in 46 languages. The 46 languages were required to give the precise official spellings of the place names in countries where the places exist.

In the years following the armistice one of the notable changes that has taken place in Europe has been the development and intensification of national feeling with respect to geographical place names.

Warsaw is Warszawa to the Poles; pre-war Reval has been replaced by Tallinn in Estonia; St. Petersburg was transformed to Petrograd, but now is Leningrad. So with hundreds of the names which, like the places they represent, have endured for centuries.

One practical reason for the society's preparation of the new map is the increasing difficulty European travelers find in identifying the names of towns as they are spelled on time-tables, or known to ticket agents—spellings that often are at wide variance with the names we have been using.

The traveler soon finds that Brussels, in Belgium, is Bruxelles; that Copenhagen is Kobenhavn; that Vienna is Wein and Constantinople is Istanbul.

Another reason is the growing correspondence of American firms and individuals with Europeans. Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic society, in summarizing the may changes, writes:

"Every person expects others to spell his or her name as he or she spells it, wherever he or she may happen to be. Courstesy and custom will soon require that when we write to our friends in Europe we spell the names of their cities as these names are spelled at home.

"The National Geographic society has 50,000 members in Europe. Communications coming to these members from the National Geographic society addressed to Rome (Roma), Venice (Venezia), etc., would probably seem to them as illiterate as we regard letters coming to us addressed to Nuova York, Filadelfia, Salzscestadt (Salt Lake City), or Waszyngton, which is the manner the names of a few of our cities are spelled in some European gazetteers.

"Foreseeing the ultimate desirability of according to each nation recognition of its own approved geographic names within its boundaries, the National Geographic society three years ago began to assemble the data for and to construct the present new map of Europe.

"Many of the names on our map will have an unfamiliar appearance to the average user, and yet these are the place names to which letters should be addressed; they are the names which the traveler abroad will find on his time-tables of the various countries; and they are the names which will greet his eye as his train or boat or airplane passes station, dock or landing field."

Children and Horses

ONE OF THE FAVORITE DIVERSIONS of children a generation ago was "playing horse." Today, however, the old game has gone into the discard. We seem to have advanced far into the horseless age; at any rate, when Caroline Ticknor recently set to work to prepare a children's book on famous horses, she discovered that most modern youngsters never even so much as heard of a hitching post.

The automobile has accomplished a number of things. Add to the list the fact that it has freed the American parent from the necessity of getting down on all fours every evening and playing Pegasus for his excited offspring.

If I Were King

If I were king I would throttle the swift-talker who got me to consent to serve on the Board of Governors for the planned Fleetwood Beach Club at Long Beach, N. Y., just because Eddie Cantor, George Jessel, Bugs Baer, Mark Hellinger and others were so gullible. The enterprise, it appears, is being worked along the lines of another "racket" to which I am opposed, and I hope others won't invest in the damb thing because our names are being prostituted.

Editors who fall for such obviously spurious press agent stories like the one about the chorus girl who appeared as a "chorus boy" would be forced to eat steaks without Worcestershire Sauce.

I would spank Winnie ("Show of of Shows") Lightner until her cheeks got red for letting herself get so fat—ugh!

Girls who eat scallions and then get confidential with you when they converse would have to wear stockings with runs in 'em.

Producers of musical shows who still have the gall to use that radio bit (in which the voice answers a listener's query) would be forced to sit next to Vincent Astor at an opening night.

Clucks who tell you they only want two minutes of your time (when you are busiest) and then warm an office chair for 15, would have to crack their own ice at highball parties.

I would give a parade in honor of Harry Reichenbach, the great press agent, for so cleverly putting his client, Margaret Shotwell, the Town Hall pianist, on the nation's first pages with that counterfeit $1,000,000 Wall Street loss. Reichenbach, in case you didn't know, tried to give the story to three different N. Y. reporters as an "exclusive" and, failing, got her mother in Omaha to tell it to a representative for a famous news service.

The chump succumbed and New York editors seeing the "story" come over "the wire" fell harder than a gal who is promised a Ziegfeld job. And Bernarr Macfadden and others wrote long editorials about her courage.

Friends who turned out false would have to put in eight hours daily learning how to put on a typewriter ribbon.

Night club waiters who stand directly in front of you just when Ruth Etting starts to sing those grand torch tunes would be made to fly over New York in rented planes that have been "okayed."

Authors of "Broadway" novels would be reminded that when you buy a cross-word puzzle book, you at least get a pencil with it.

Guys like Frank Fay and John Barrymore, who feature those oversized attached collars would be forced to ride in taxicabs in which the lights don't work when you want to read.

I would proclaim a holiday for theater managers like Tom Weatherly and Gilbert Miller, who make late-comers stand up in the rear of the house until the first scene is over.

Songwriters who never blush when they lift famous melodies would have to attend literary teas and parties.

Desperate contemporaries who burgle the other fellow's stuff for suburban papers, and, when confronted, have the cheek to assert that they aren't doing anything of the sort, would have to pay their checks in night clubs instead of taking it out "in trade" via a free ad in their columns.

People who disgraced me with a defense when I was being panned, would be made to sit through a play by Wm. A. Grew.

Ah-ahs that grab you by the arm or ask you something (when you are trying to chat with others) and get peeved because you ask them to wait a minute, would have to wear vests without buttons.

Guys who ask for passes to sell-out shows would be condemned to the life of a chorus boy in flop shows.

Marriage for Two--By Arthur Somers Roche

fection of Helen. It was because his life—even though slumbering or hushed life—existed in the house apart from the staff, and he was shut out of it. The presence of physician or nurse always remakes the atmosphere of a house, but Tracy was not aware of this, having no previous experience.

He went to his own bedroom, swore that he would not think about Helen, would go right to sleep. But after an hour's restless tossing, he turned on the light, got out a book, and read until dawn. Then he fell into uneasy slumber, visited by dreams in which he was starving.

Headlines

He awoke to find Hogan fussing with the curtains.

"Let you sleep until 9, sir," said the butler, "then I got nervous. You have a court appointment this morning."

"Much obliged," said Tracy. He leaped out of bed, bathed and shaved, and re-entered his bedroom to find Hogan ready with his breakfast tray.

"Nora says the young lady seems quite well," said the butler.

"Sleep well?" asked Tracy.

"Fine, the nurse says. Had a good breakfast—the morning papers—they—well, here they are, sir."

Hogan indicated them, quite unnecessarily, and retired from the room. Tracy picked up a copy of the Argus. A front-page headline hit him almost physically. He read the article beneath it.

"Society," he read, "will be rocked by the breaking of the engagement between Miss Helen Wilson, daughter of the late Henry Wilson, clubman and broker, and Laurence Tracy. The dissolving of the engagement was made known by Mrs. Genevieve Wilson, mother of the young society beauty, in a brief note issued to the press yesterday afternoon. Neither the two Wilson ladies nor Mr. Tracy would comment on the matter.

"But the breaking of the engagement comes as no surprise to those who keep abreast of matters tender in smart circles. For the past three weeks Miss Wilson had been the recipient of assiduous attentions from an elderly man of distinguished financial position. * * *"

Tracy threw the paper on the floor. The snobbery of the article was offensive enough, but much worse than the references to "society" and the use of the word "smart," was the galling intimation that he had been blind where the rest of the world had been granted sight.

Helen

Good God, Helen must have flagrantly encouraged. * * * But of course she had! Men, even men of the Frank Burton type, do not propose marriage to girls already affianced unless they've been given encouragement. Blind, besotted fool that he had been. But, if he'd been a fool, what had Helen been? To accept and return his caresses, when secretly she was yearning for tenderness from a richer man. * * *

And his friends had been sneering at him. If they hadn't been cynically amused, they'd been cynically pitying. And, with a sudden insight he realized that Helen would not be condemned. People, in these days of feverish living, were too concerned with affairs of their own to waste much time in censuring the actions of others. The prospective bride of fifty millions would be an important and powerful person. * * * What was the matter with him? Did he want Helen's friends to damn her? Did he want people to turn aside from her.

Certainly not. But he did want to hurt her, wanted people to sneer. * * * Unworthy, but damn worthiness! Vulgar, but damn refinement! It was a tactical error to meet vulgarity with good breeding, because the former never understood the latter and was therefore impervious to its attack.

Helen had been vulgar—for what was greed but vulgarity? If, in some equally vulgar way he could hurt her * * *

The snobbery of the article was bad enough, but much worse was the galling intimation that he had been blind. Blind, besotted fool that he had been.

"Your office wants you on the telephone, sir."

Hogan was in the doorway, and in his eyes Tracy read a comprehending pity. But he didn't want pity. A man conscious of his own strength has no use for pity. He brushed by the butler and descended to the ground floor.

His chief clerk spoke to him.

"Sorry if I've been officious sir, but—the place is beseiged by reporters, and—I managed to secure a postponement of the hearing set for this morning. Thought I'd give you a chance to keep out of the way of the newspaper men until they have another sensation and forget you, sir."

"Much obliged," said Tracy. "I—er—have only seen the Argus, and didn't bother to read much of that. Are the other papers * * *"

"They've made quite a fuss about it," replied the clerk dryly.

"Well, tell the reporters I have nothing to say," said Tracy.

He smiled grimly. He had done nothing wrong, had, so far as his recollection served him, behaved with scrupulous honor. Yet the public, vulgarly inquisitive about the affairs of people with a little more money than the average, would demand of the press details, details, details.

Well, they'd get none from him. He jammed a hat upon his head. He'd walk around to the garage, get his car. * * * On the outside step he stopped short. Three cameras caught him in a post of bewildered indignation.

Also, two young women and one young man dashed toward him. Tracy fled into the house. He slammed the door and stood safely inside, trembling.

He had never known the horrors of unwanted publicity, had, in fact, never been the subject of printed matter. Oh, his name had been included among the lists of those present, and the Mesdames On Dit and the Berties This-and-That who wrote social gossip had occasionally referred to that desirable and eligible young bachelor, Mr. Laurence Tracy.

But nothing like that was promised now. Good Lord, what sort of people thought that a man cared to say anything when he had been jilted? Then he transferred his anger from the reporters and cameramen to their editors. Then he grew enraged at the public, whose final fault it was that privacy was no longer a sacred right in America.

Then, he transferred all his mounting rage to Helen. If she—hadn't been—the thing she was * * *

"How Can I Repay You?"

"Miss Carroll has been asking for you."

At the top of the stairs looking down upon him with an expression whose compassion made Tracy writhe, stood Nurse Evans.

"Is she able to see any one?" he asked.

Then, as he wonderingly climbed the stairs, she explained.

"The maid, Nora, talked with her while I was out of the room. She had read the morning papers and stupidly told Miss Carroll. I'm afraid—she thinks herself responsible. . . ."

"Good Lord," exclaimed Tracy.

He went into the bedroom.

Sleep had done wonders for the face that looked up at him from the mathematically exacted middle of the pillow. Tracy recognized the formidable fussiness with which the coverlet was arranged. He had visited friends in hospitals and remembered the business-like way in which nurses even made beds.

"How are you this morning?" he asked.

"Yesterday," she abruptly began, "you said that you couldn't pull a drowning man half out of water and then drop him, or something similar. But what right has the drowning man to drag you in? You'd be silly to let him drown you. Did you fiancee break the engagement because you—were foolishly charitable to a strange woman?"

"I doubt," said Tracy, "that she knows of your existence. How could she? And the engagment was broken before I met you."

"I'm sorry," she said.

He tried to smile. "Sorry that you had no part in the wrecking?"

"That is unnecessary," she said. "I meant—sorry that—if you're unhappy."

Her words in some inexplicable fashion seemed to clarify his thoughts.

"I don't think I am—unhappy," he said.

"But you loved her," she said.

"I loved some one whom I thought was she," he corrected.

"Isn't that hair-splitting?" she asked. "But—I shouldn't—I have no right to make you discuss the matter."

"I don't particularly mind," he said. And this was strange, because, until a second ago, he could not have borne even the thought of discussion of the broken engagement. "I—I'm not sorry—I'm angry," he added.

"Hurt pride is not a worthy thing," she stated.

"Isn't it?" he asked. "Well, I'm not being bothered with worthiness, I owe her nothing, except to hurt her."

"Oh, that's cant," she cried. "Injuries are injuries, and it doesn't matter if it's a woman that inflicts them. Women take too much advantage of their sex. They do mean, cheap things and cry, 'I'm a woman.' As if that condoned the offense. But if a man offers them their own medicine, then he's cowardly, unchivalrous—I'm sorry. My troubles are my own, and should not be inflicted upon any one else. Is there anything I can do for you?"

Her black eyes were misty, though her lips tried to smile at him.

"You? Do for me? As if you haven't done—everything. But," and now her voice was almost savagely earnest, "If I could ever do anything for you. . . ."

She was near to tears. This was a very different girl form the one who yesterday had been so brave, so light of wit, even in the midst of torture. Or perhaps it wasn't another girl; perhaps—of course—it was merely another side of an admirable character.

"Don't think about it," he said.

"What else will I ever be able to think of—until the debt is paid?" she asked.

"Some debts pay themselves," he said.

Her low broad forehead wrinkled. It was, Tracy told himself, reminded of a child puzzling over a problem too deep for youthful logic.

"I don't know what you mean, though I think it's something nice," she said.

"I mean," he said, gravely, "that it is sometimes a privilege to be of help, and that the granting of the privilege more than offsets a debt."

"That," she said, judicially, "is sweet. But—I can't look at it that way. I—I'm a burden. I'm in a stranger's house, with each minute adding to my intrusion upon his—charity. Only, I can't get up now." Her eyes were suddenly frightened.

Tracy involuntarily touched her hand, patted it reassuringly.

"I tell you, you're to think of nothing, but of getting well and strong," he told her.

"And I'll never think of anything but of repaying you," she said. "But I never can. How can money—supposing that I ever have money enough—how can money repay a debt that's more than material? What have I to give?"

"Yourself," said Tracy.

He was startled at the idea that swept through his brain. It was an unworthy idea, a shaming idea, but—what had he to do with worthiness or with shame.

"Oh," exclaimed the girl. Color swept over her face, and in her eyes was disappointment, as though a child had seen a precious toy destroyed.

"I dont' mean," said Tracy stiffly, "what you imply. I thought I'd made that clear. But I mean—you say you want to repay me. You intimated that you'd do anything—will you marry me?"

Elmer Twitchell Boosts the Prosperity Drive

Elmer Twitchell today announced that he is out to do his part in the Hoover drive to keep the wheels of industry moving. "I have wired the president assuring him that I am going ahead with a big expansion movement, and when Elmer Twitchell starts expanding he expands plenty," he said this morning.

PHILLIPS

"Of course, I can't promise to spend millions like those railroad and industrial leaders, but I am going full speed ahead with expenditures just the same. I have placed an order for two new bridges, work to begin at once. This order is with my dentist and not the United States Steel corporation. However, I want to help the steel company avoid a slump, too, and I intend to order one steel rail.

"Have you ever stopped to think what it would mean to the steel industry if every person ordered one steel rail?" demanded Elmer.

"I have no use for a steel rail and am going to order one as a national duty, and I urge every red-blooded American to do the same. You can put it in the back yard to arouse neighborhood curiosity if you have no other use for it. Think of all the fun you can have keeping the neighbors guessing whether you are going to build a spur track!

"A nice shiny new steel rail dumped in your yard will have them thinking all sorts of things. I urge every citizen to order one steel rail at once, and, if he has the money, a bar-plate and a couple of ingots. If you can't afford a steel rail all to yourself get a friend to go fifty-fifty.

"I am taking up with Washington the matter of striking off a badge or medal to be given to every citizen who buys a rail. This medal will be inscribed with the buyer's name and the words, 'I've bought a steel rail. Have you?"

"You can say for me that I'm going ahead with a big program of spending," continued Elmer. "I am having all my shoes soled and heeled, although they do not need it at this time, and I am going to get shaved every day instead of four times a week. I am also going ahead with a tonsil operation which I intended to defer until next summer."

S. W. CONFERENCE GRID TITLE TREMBLES IN BALANCE TODAY

FROGS FAVORED TO TRIUMPH

20,000 Fans Will See Titanic Struggle

By GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Nov. 29. (AP)—Texas Christian university and Southern Methodist university, survivors of a gruelling season, will clash at Fort Worth tomorrow in a game to decide the Southwest conference championship. Twenty thousand fans, the utmost capacity of Clark field, will watch the two undefeated elevens scrap it out for premier honors.

Texas Christian enters the title tilt with a perfect record, nine consecutive victories, four of them over conference opponents. Southern Methodist's crack young team, which has gained power gradually after a slow start, faces the crucial battle with a record of six victories and three ties for the year.

In the event of a tie tomorrow, the title will go to the Horned Frogs. Southern Methodist must gain a clean vistory to salt away the year's honors. It will be the first time since T. C. U. was admitted to the conference in 1923 that the Frogs have entered their final bout with a shot at the crown. They will enter the game slight favorites.

Baylor Meets Rice

The day's second conference fray, that between Baylor and Rice at Houston, finds itself more or less obscured by the glamour surrounding the struggle at Fort Worth. It amounts to a consolation match between the two bottom teams, with Baylor favored. By winning, the Bears can finish in a deadlock with Texas for fourth place. It is not difficult to remember when the same Bruins were outstanding favorites to win the title.

For probably the first time since the Southwest conference was organized, ticket speculators have found a fertile field in tomorrow's big bout. The limited capacity of Clark field has placed sideline seats at a premium for more than a week and it was next to impossible today to get a pasteboard of any kind. The game probably would draw 40,000 customers if seats were available.

Frogs Wear Old Togs

Coach Francis Schmidt's mighty Frog machine will wear the same frayed, grey jerseys that have clothed it in nine victories this year and three last season. The gaudy purple shirts purchased for the season have never seen service and probably never will until the Frogs lose a game.

The title game, in its final analysis, will be played between a team that has proved itself consistenly powerful through a rugged schedule and a team that has been a mystery ever since the season began, rising to supreme heights one week and looking very ordinary the next. The Frogs are a known quantity. They have everything. The Mustangs, while not so strong in sheer manpower, are capable of defeating any football team in the land if they have one of their good days. It is this that has made the championship bout a tough one for the forecasters.

Spectacular Football

There will be spectacular football tomorrow, football of every known variety. If both elevens retain their characteristics of former games, there will not be much to thrill over until one or the other scores a touchdown. Then things will break loose right. Both play that way, never throwing the throttle wide open until scored upon.

Much of the contest's color will be centered about the individual efforts of Cy Leland, Frog halfback, whose dazzling runs have featured almost every game his team has won this season. The Mustangs are reported to have set a special defense which they expect to stop the Frog flash in his tracks, but that is expecting considerable. Leland's snarkling runs and a sure-fire passing attack directed by Howard Grubbs have been the Purple's chief weapons all year. It has been a deadly combination.

Wild Passing Attack

The Methodists, as usual, are expected to employ the wild passing attack which Coach Ray Morrison introduced into the conference, supplemented by a tricky running offense built around Weldon Mason, speedy halfback.

Both squads are reported in prime condition for the bout, an unusual feature in itself. Usually there is at least one star reported definitely out, who bobs up miraculously at the last minute and plays the game of his life.

Six Frog regulars will play their final game tomorrow. They are Grubbs of the backfield and Captain Mike Brumbelow, Milford Barr, Robert Moore, Phil Handler and Buster Walker of the line. Captain "Choc" Sanders is the only S. M. U. regular who closes his career. Vic Sandfley, reserve center and end, will wear the Red and Blue for the last time.

Conference standing:

	W.	L.	T.	Pct.

U. of Kansas Takes In $143,433 Gate

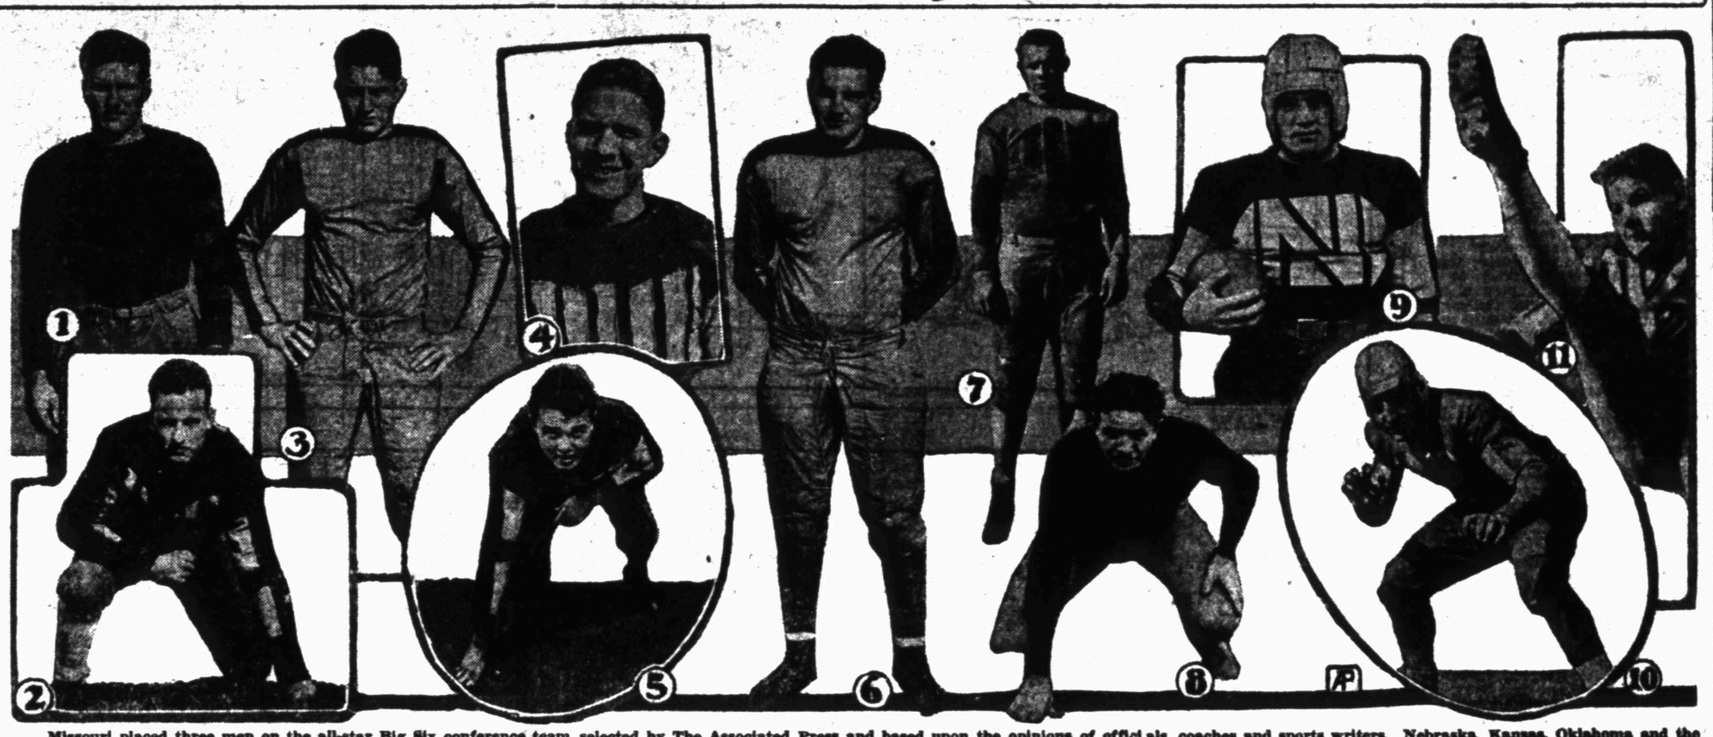

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 29. (AP)—Dr. F. C. Allen, director of athletics at the University of Kansas, today announced that 112,131 persons paid admission to see the Kansas Jayhawk football team in action during the 1929 season. Kansas' share of the football receipts on home and foreign fields for the season was $143,433.95.

Last year 80,984 paid admission on home and foreign fields to see the Jayhawkers and the university's share of the gate receipts was $83,686.86.

Dallas Hunter Shot To Death Accidentally

DALLAS, Nov. 29. (AP)—E. L. Brown, 22, was shot and killed at his home here last night when a shotgun he had finished cleaning was discharged accidentally. He had just returned from a hunting trip. His wife and 2-year-old daughter were in an adjoining room at the time.

The Associated Press Names Big Six All-Star Team

Missouri placed three men on the all-star Big Six conference team selected by The Associated Press and based upon the opinions of officials, coaches and sports writers. Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and the Kansas Aggies each landed two places. Ames was not represented. The players are: 1, Ray Smith, Missouri, center; 2, George Atkeson, Kansas, guard; 3, Keith Hursley, Missouri, end; 4, Frank Crider, Oklahoma, halfback; 5, Tom Churchill, Oklahoma, end; 6, John Waldorf, Missouri, quarterback; 7, C. O. Tackwell, Kansas Aggies, tackle; 8, K. C. Bauman, Kansas Aggies, guard; 9, Clair Sloan, Nebraska, fullback; 10, Raymond Richards, Nebraska, tackle, and 11, James Bausch, Kansas, halfback.

Memphis Hi School Cyclone to Meet Perryton Rangers in Title Contest

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, Nov. 29.—Memphis high school Cyclone football will meet the Perryton Rangers on the local gridiron Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in a championship game of sections C and D of the interscholastic league. The game Saturday is occasioned by the fact that a Pampa man was ruled ineligible and the Harvesters thereby being thrown out of the race for district honors.

The Cyclone is not in the best condition, due to the fact the boys presumed their football season was over when Pampa defeated them decisively by a score of 33 to 13 here Friday of last week. The players had turned in their football uniform and letters had been awarded to 19 members of the squad by the Memphis athletic council. Coach Nolan Walter had returned to his home in Abilene to spend the Thanksgiving holidays, when word was received here that Memphis was still in the running and would be expected to play Perryton by Saturday. Arrangements were then perfected for the game. Earlier in the season, the Perryton Rangers were defeated by the Pampa Harvesters by a score of 18 to 0.

Perryton entered the protest against Pampa playing an ineligible game and the district athletic committee sustained Perryton in the protest. Advance dope is to the effect that Perryton has a strong team. The boys have been kept in training, whereas Memphis has had little preparation for the tilt Saturday. In addition, members of the Cyclone squad are still suffering from injuries received in the game with Pampa and several regulars may not be included in the starting lineup. Despite the fact that little time was afforded to advertise the game, the largest crowd of the current season is expected to be on hand. Memphis has one of the best gridirons in the Panhandle and is adequately prepared to care for a crowd of several thousand people.

Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and Purdue

In a recent football gathering only a few practice swings were needed to bring up the argument as to whether Pittsburgh or Notre Dame had the stronger football—or the strongest football team—since the argument indicated these two stood at the top.

What about Purdue? What reason is there to figure that either Pitt or Notre Dame could beat Purdue? Neither has turned in more decisive results than Purdue's 32 to 0 against Indiana, a team good enough to beat Northwestern, or 26 to 0 against Chicago, a team good enough to beat Washington 26 to 6.

Officials who have seen Pittsburgh play pronounce it one of the strongest teams they have seen in years. Pitt has a fast, powerful line, two fine ends and a fast, elusive, hard running backfield. And Pitt has a world of experience to call on.

Notre Dame is the most interesting team in football to watch. It has a finer blend of speed, rhythm and variety than any other team. It hasn't as much power as Pitt—and possibly no more speed.

Yet Purdue must be rated upon a par with both. Welch, Harmison and Yunevitch are three star backs. Slight is one of the best tackles of the year. Caraway is a star end. There is both offensive and defensive strength in the Purdue mixture with a schedule that has been as hard as Notre Dame's and harder than Pitt's.

Any two of these three teams lugged into action would provide a toss-up where one guess would be just about as good as another.

Their different backers can't even settle the argument as to which of the three has the better backfield or the better line. It might be sufficient to state that all three backfields and all three lines will do pretty well until something better comes along. Which may not be any too soon.

The Great Pointer

When Pop Warner points for a final game at the end of the stretch he is about 102 per cent poison.

Warner's records, or the records of Warner teams, in these final games through the last 25 years have been something uncanny. No available statistics are at hand, but with Carlisle, Pittsburgh and Stanford he must have won at least 90 per cent of his final season games.

Hard Traveling

To show how hard it is to make any great headway in football, even with strong teams, consider these records:

Harvard—Lost two games, tied one.

Yale—Lost two games, tied one.

Army—Lost two games, tied one (with Notre Dame left).

Navy—Lost two games, tied two (with Dartmouth left).

Southern California—Lost two games.

Stanford—Lost two games.

Pennsylvania—Lost two games.

Iowa—Lost two games, tied two.

Minnesota—Lost two games.

Here are nine strong teams taken in the way of samples or examples—at their best among the strongest in the country, at their best able to give anybody an even battle, yet they all lost at least two games and were tied in others. And as the seasons slip on by it isn't getting any easier to crowd by without taking at least two or more dents, especially where the schedule calls for four or five or more hard games. Teams that have not been called on to stand up under the drive of at least four or five standard teams have a big advantage when it comes to cleaning up.

A good, average team might be described as a team that has beaten at least one well known opponent. Indiana's record was none too impressive, but Indiana beat Northwestern. Chicago lost several games but Chicago beat Washington, Indiana and Princeton.

At any rate Detroit university had almost scrapped its way through 23 starts before the big bump came. Oregon State likes the tastes of anything east of the Rockies.

Something to look at—a meeting between Tulane and Tennessee; between Banker and McEver.

That sophomore backfield of Harvard's—Wood, Devens, Mays and White—should be even more annoying as juniors and seniors. Even as it was, they caused enough trouble.

They hooked Dr. Zuppke of Illinois only once this season, which isn't so bad in this baffling age of sudden turns.

Several hundred thousand football fans, here and there, may have taken it for granted that Notre Dame will romp through the Army, but the Army hasn't. There's nothing like having the most shining target of the season to shoot at.

Among the good ends there is also Murphy of Boston college, Schoonover of Arkansas, and a leading star in Tappan of Southern California.

Ray Schalk May Coach The Chicago Cubs Is Rumor

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. (UP)—Ray Schalk, former White Sox catcher and manager and later assistant to Manager McGraw of the New York Giants, was seen today in a conference with William L. Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs.

That led to rumors that the former American league star would replace Grover Land as coach and assistant to Manager Joe McCarthy. Schalk indicated the report he would go to Brooklyn was incorrect, and indicated he was considering offers from three clubs.

AMARILLO-BRECK

Two Title Elevens to Play Post Season Game

AMARILLO, Texas, Nov. 29. (AP)—The bi-district football game between the high school elevens of Amarillo and Breckenridge, winners in districts one and two, respectively, will be played in Breckenridge Saturday, Dec. 7, it was learned here today.

LAMESA WHIPS RALLS 10 TO 7

2,500 Brave Weather to See Titular Bout

LAMESA, Texas, Nov. 29.—Living up to a season's reputation of winning every game with a slogan of "no quarter for the enemy," the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes today swept through the Ralls Jackrabbits' defense to win the class B, district two championship with a 10 to 7 score, while a crowd of over 2,500 braved an almost freezing temperature to witness the titular clash. Hillary Banta, Lamesa halfback, wrote his name on the score book as star of the battle after shining in every detail of field work and offense. His 60-yard run after scooping up a punt and stiff-arming three opposing players to gain the pay mark to run the score to 10 after Allen had kicked a safe field goal clinched the title for the Tornadoes.

Lamesa's First Downs

The game was Lamesa's in all respects with Lamesa making 15 first downs to Ralls' six and with the ball in Ralls' territory three-fourths of the time. Ralls' aerial attack fell flat during the first quarter but the company of N. E. Walker and Perryman, dealers in passes, gave Ralls her marks. Perryman dashed 28 yards for a touchdown after safely grabbing one of Walker's aerial offerings. Over 700 Ralls boosters were in attendance, 500 of which rode into Lamesa on a special train. Business here was at a standstill during the game when all business houses were closed.

Lamesa won the privilege of meeting the winner of district one for class B championship taking this afternoon's game. Lineup during the game was as follows:

RALLS (7)	Position	LAMESA (10)
Perryman	L. E.	Lockhart
Young	L. T.	Allen
Harris	L. G.	Sprayberry
Tidwell	C.	Saulters
Walford	R. G.	Austin
Whaley	R. T.	Borden
S. Walker	R. E.	Wiggins
E. Walker	Q. B.	Riley
Coy	L. H.	Banta
Henry	R. H.	Hill
Bryan	F. B.	Moore

Substitutions, Lamesa, Marr for Moore, Treadway for Marr, Moore for Treadway. Ralls, Richards for King, Ivey for Perryman. Officials, Davis, Texas A. & M. referee; Condy, Quichita, umpire; Freeland, Vanderbilt, headlinesman, Van Zandt, line keeper.

Mustangs in Last Drill Before The Big Test Saturday

DALLAS, Nov. 29. (AP)—A light signal drill today completed the preparation of Coach Ray Morrison's Southern Methodist eleven for tomorrow's championship duel with Texas Christian at Fort Worth. The team wore an air of confidence as it clicked off play after play to be used against the Frogs.

Morrison announced he would not take his squad to Fort Worth until early tomorrow, enabling the Ponies to sleep in familiar bunks on the eve of the crucial melee. As usual, the Methodists will carry along many gallons of their own water.

Every man on the Mustang squad was in good shape, and equally as confident of victory tomorrow. In addition to wanting the conference title, the Ponies have the added incentive of gaining revenge for last year's 15 to 6 defeat by the Frogs.

While Morrison has refused to comment upon his plan of battle or make a guess on the outcome, visitors to Ownby stadium this week are certain the Mustangs will rely on their vaunted aerial attack to subdue the Frogs. After signal practice today, Gilbert and Mason spent most of an hour flipping long passes to ends and backs. Bruce Kattmann was punting in practice today and clipping the sidelines with regularity. It was predicted he would give Leland few chances to return punts.

Gilbert at quarterback, Mason and Kattmann at halves and Hopper at fullback will round out the Mustangs' starting backfield. Long and Koonts will hold down the ends, Skeeters and Hammon will be on tackles, and Sanders and Neely at guards. Saufley may start in place of Powell at center.

Star Performers of the Speedway Show in Cycle Races Here Sunday

The estimated total purses for the motorcycle races to be held at the Texas-Oklahoma fairground speedway on Sunday, Dec. 1, has been set at $1,000. The first prize award will be $500, second $200, third $100, fourth $75, fifth $50 and $75 will be divided amongst the leaders of each lap of the race. The purse will be forthcoming and dependent upon the gate receipts.

Four of the foremost cycle race riders of the two wheeled speed mounts in the Southwest were signed up in the middle of the week to perform at the big event here Sunday. All four of these aces of the speedway will ride Harley-Davidson machines. Griffin Kathcart hails from Waco and is one of the best riders in the country and probably throttled his mount in more than any other riders in these parts. Griffin will have some stiff competition in the 200 lap with G. F. Harvil of Altus, Okla., and the Meyer brothers of Wichita Falls.

Wichita Falls Riders

Two other Wichita Falls entries are Maynard Carver and Norman Woodard, both Harley-Davidson riders, who are hoping to urge their steeds under the checkered flag first, and pull down the $500 first money prize. Kathcart will have Jimmie Palmdale of Waco as his co-rider, Harvil will carry P. G. England of Altus, Dutch and L. A. Meyer will ride F. O. Savage and Doc Rodda. Co-riders for Carver and Woodard are Bill Finger and Woodard Gale. The co-rider, aside from warning the rider of the position of competitors, is required to assist the mounts through the sharp turns by arising at each turn and throwing his weight behind the rider at the handle bars. This position requires the co-rider to arise and sit down 400 times during the 200 lap race, in his bath tub chariot. The rider and co-rider may change at will during the race.

Track in Good Shape

Henry Williams, superintendent of the local speedway, asserted he would have the half-mile oval absolutely smooth and in better condition than ever before for the cycle event. Williams commenced conditioning of the course Monday and said that he would have it ready to turn over to the riders for tryouts by Thursday. Williams promises the fans to have all the weeds trimmed from the fences so that the machines can be watched the entire distance of the track. All fences crashed through at former race meets at the local plant are also being renewed. More entries are needed for the junk stock car race and local fans who have a model car they are willing to sell for $75 should make arrangements to enter in this unique race. The purse in this race is expected to amount to about $200 with $100 on first place. Entries can be made with W. W. Bowen, 1506 Eighth street. The race is open to all makes and models of cars.

Parfet & Martlew Bowlers Take Off With Three in Row

ARMY VS. NOTRE DAME TODAY

Irish at Two to One Odds To Win Game

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Nov. 29. (AP)—The eastern football season will be brought to a spectacular climax tomorrow by the attempt of Captain Red Cagle's gallant Army team to check the wild rush of Notre Dame's warriors, undefeated contenders for the national gridiron championship.

The odds tonight were all in favor of Notre Dame, in spite of the fact that the fighting Irish enter the fray without their star center, Tim Moynihan, who broke his ankle a week ago, and minus the coaching direction of the famous Knute Rockne, kept at South Bend with an infected leg to listen to the game by radio.

The unbeaten Notre Dame array was a 2 to 1 favorite in the wagering, but the Army has completed plans for a sustained attack, led by Captain Cagle, making the last eastern appearance of his brilliant career. West Point's hopes are pinned on Cagle, the law of averages, and a fair share of the "breaks."

For West Point and Cagle, the contest offers a chance through triumph to redeem a season of disappointments. Beaten by Yale and Illinois, tied by Harvard, the Cadets have failed to win a single major engagement so far.

The probable lineups:

ARMY	Position	NOTRE DAME
Carimark	L. E.	Collins
Perry	L. T.	Leahy
Hillsinger	L. G.	Law (C)
Lassar	C.	Nash
Rumber	R. G.	Cannon
Price	R. T.	Twomey

Carver	Q. B.	Gebert

CHRISTIANS IN SHAPE FOR GO

Fireworks to Start at 2:30 o'Clock

FORT WORTH, Nov. 29. (AP)—The Horned Frogs of Texas Christian university close to the goal toward which Texas Christian university elevens have struggled for seven years, take the field at 2:30 o'clock Saturday, 60 minutes to play and a championship to go.

Once before in their seven years in the Southwest conference, the Frogs came just as close to the championship, only to be thrown for a loss by the same team they face Saturday—Southern Methodist university.

But Saturday the Christians will put on the turf at T. C. U. stadium the greatest scoring machine that ever has run and passed under the Purple banners and thousands of loyal supporters will rally 'round, confident that their old rivals, the Methodists from Dallas, will be put in their places; confident that at last a Southwestern football crown will come to their alma mater.

Followers Confident

Just as confident are the followers of the Red and Blue banners of Southern Methodist university, undefeated but thrice tied; tied once by a team that later lost to T. C. U.

This confidence means a record crowd for Fort Worth. The stadium will be packed to capacity. With practically all seats sold, it is estimated 21,000 persons will be present, the greatest crowd that ever saw a sports event in this city. Ten thousand more would be present were the stadium able to take care of them.

Both elevens, on the eve of the game, reported themselves in excellent condition for the final and deciding clash of the Southwestern season.

Plainview Gridder Injured in Game Is In Serious Shape

Special to The Record News.

LUBBOCK, Texas, Nov. 29.—Carroll "Bub" Laird, fleet Plainview halfback who was critically injured in the Lubbock-Plainview high school football game here yesterday, late in the game when he was tackled about the neck while returning a punt is still in a semi-conscious condition and while he has slightly improved his condition is considered extremely serious with little hopes for recovery.

The fast halfback who runs the hundred in 10 seconds was rushed to the Lubbock sanitarium here immediately after his injury where an X-ray picture showed a vertebra injury and concussion of the brain. One side of his body seems to be practically paralyzed from the injury and he has never fully regained consciousness.

His twin brother, Harold and "Little Bub" had gone out of the game just before his injury suffering from a foot which was broken in the Plainview-Slaton game, played the first of the season which has kept him out of the game until yesterday. He was not seriously hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Laird of Plainview, parents of the 16-year-old athlete, his sister Virginia and his brother Harold are at his bedside.

He was playing his last high school game after three years of a brilliant high school football career and because of an injury to his head received in the Wichita Falls game this year he had promised his folks that he would not play college football. For the past several years he has won practically every track event he had entered in meets here on the South Plains and is one of the most popular boys on the Plainview team.

Codfish

The codfish is a fish weighing from three to 30 pounds. It is smooth skinned, white fleshed and fine grained. Where this fish may be obtained fresh, it makes a very desirable salt water fish.

Only a few years ago the fresh cod could only be purchased at the seashore in Maine, Massachusetts, California and Alaska, but now with our modern refrigeration the fresh fish is being supplied to all parts of the country, being shipped on trains direct to countrywide markets.

Cod fishing is no doubt one of the most dangerous occupations, due to the heavy seas and the deceptive fogs which seem to exist wherever the cod are found. The fishing boats are often lost, or the fishers swept overboard and drowned.

Most of the cod is found off the banks of Newfoundland or Labrador, but many tons of the "Cultus" cod are now caught off the coast of California.

The fresh cod is best cooked by broiling or baking, and is cooked in much the same manner as any other fish. An ordinary size small cod will broil nicely in about 20 minutes. It should not be buttered while cooking, but a small amount of butter may be melted over the fish after it has been baked or broiled.

The salted codfish is the form in which it is most used, and many of my readers perhaps do not even know that it is possible to buy fresh cod. The salted cod is perfectly wholesome if it is soaked overnight and then parboiled to get out all of the salt.

Most housewives cook fish with milk or cream and a flour sauce, and it is then frequently served over mashed potatoes. I do not approve of this combination from a dietetic standpoint, although I remember with pleasure the taste of this mixture which I used eat before I was so dietetically minded. I still use codfish, but in my own home we now prepare it in other different and interesting styles. I would especially recommend to my readers the following recipe:

Soak the codfish, drain, parboil out the salt, cooking the fish from 10 to 15 minutes. Grind the fish in the meat grinder, running it through the second time with some carrots, turnips and beets which have been previously ground. Put this mixture into small casseroles and bake in the oven until well done. For sake of variety, also try stuffing tomatoes with this same mixture of ground fish and vegetables and bake the entire stuffed tomato in the oven until well done.

Many cooks use the codfish left over from the previous meal and mix it with potatoes to make codfish balls. As it is better not to use potatoes and codfish together at the same time, I will give my readers a substitute recipe which is even a more delicious dish:

Mix Melba toast crumbs with the cooked codfish, run through the food grinder and make into small patties, baking them in an aluminum dish in the oven. Put a small piece of butter on each patty after taking it from the oven.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Abscessed Teeth

Question—K. L. writes: "Please tell me if there is any way to find an abscess on a tooth without using the X-ray."

Answer—In the first place, it is usually a dead tooth that can abscess at the end of the root. A dentist is usually able to determine the presence of a large abscess of a dead tooth by probing through the root canal with a fine probe. However, the best policy would be for you to have an X-ray taken, for the removal of a dead tooth is often not advisable, as it may serve to hold a bridge in place.

Playing Saxophone

Question—M. H. asks: "Is it injurious to the mouth, throat or lungs to play a saxophone?"

Answer—I do not believe that it is particularly injurious to the throat or lungs to play a saxophone. However, with the ears, it might be different, not only to the player from the compression caused to the inner ear, but also to the neighbors who are forced to listen to the practicing.

Joint Adhesions

Question—D. W. writes: "Over two years ago I broke my left wrist close to the hand, and the doctor did not set it right. The hand is turned over and seems to be held there by muscles fastened in a sort of gristle growth which has formed. I have spent quite a bit of money to get this corrected, including electrical treatments. What is your advice?"

Answer—Sometimes adhesions form to the ligaments from a break in the bone and it may be necessary to have an operation performed to loosen the attached ligaments, although this can sometimes be done by persistent exercises of the joint and massage with the fingers. However, I cannot advise you definitely in your own particular case without having a chance to examine your wrist.

Rancher Gets Bail in Tar-Feather Affair

PENTICTON, B. C., Nov. 29. (UP)—Charles E. Oliver, rancher, son of the late Prime Minister John Oliver, was released on bail today on charges of assault preferred by Dr. V. E. Latimer, who alleged that Oliver and a number of other men tarred and feathered him Wednesday night.

Oliver entered a general denial of the charges.

Acquaintances of Dr. Latimer and Oliver said that bad blood existed between them because of Oliver's charges that Latimer had provided narcotics to a woman member of his family.

Woman and Man Plead Not Guilty to Murder

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. (UP)—Mrs. Genevieve O'Brien and Howard Stanley Dorr pleaded not guilty today to charges of first degree murder, when arraigned before Judge Denis Normoyle.

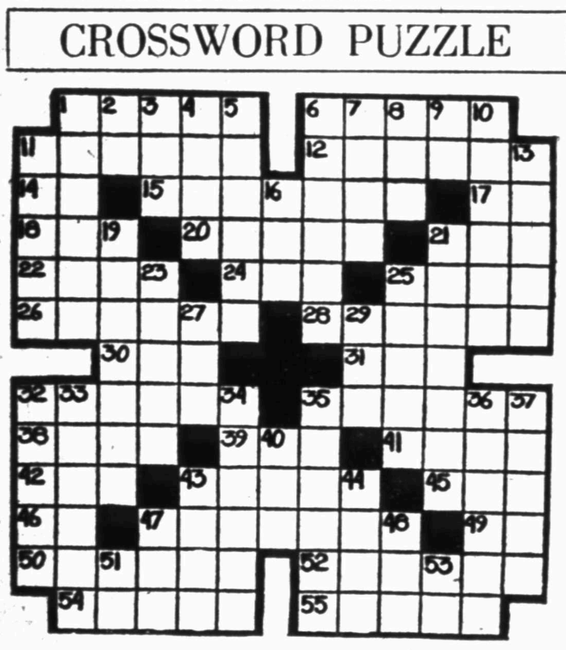

The two are accused of the murder of Mrs. O'Brien's husband, William, here last week. O'Brien was shot to death and Dorr confessed later that he and Mrs. O'Brien had plotted the killing to collect insurance.

Submarine Crew Men Rescued by Steamer

SPEZIA, Italy, Nov. 29. (UP)—Eight members of the crew of a navy submarine chaser were rescued today by the steamer Regina Italia after the two vessels had collided outside the harbor.

The Regina Italia was carrying 300 passengers, most of them shipyard workers. The submarine chaser sank.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 29. (AP)—Cotton was higher today on covering and some trade or commission house buying promoted by steadiness in Liverpool over the local holiday and rather a bullish interpretation of the report on grades and staples of cotton ginned prior to Nov. 1. January contracts sold up to 17.40 or 16 points net higher and closed at 17.36 with the general market closing steady at net advances of 12 to 15 points.

The opening was steady, unchanged to 5 points higher. There was some southern selling and liquidation which caused irregularity after the call, but offerings were light.

A private report placing the indicated crop at 14,830,000 bales may have brought in a little buying. The demand became a little more active after the publication of the grade and staple report. This indicated that 79.21 per cent of the ginnings prior to Nov. 1 were tenderable compared with 85.09 per cent to the same date last year, which was commented upon by some of the local traders as indicating that there would be a comparatively large proportion of untenderable cotton in this season's crop. December sold up to 17.26 and March to 17.70 while May advanced to 17.95, making net gains of 14 to 21 points on the active months. Realizing checked the advance at these figures and last prices showed reactions of 4 to 6 points from the best.

Exports today 35,518, making 3,200,833 so far this season. Port receipts 36,111. U. S. port stocks 2,596,564.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29. (AP)—Two rather bullish private crop estimates caused a slight advance in cotton market, although trading was only moderate due to expectations of considerable private estimates and the approach of the government's final crop report. January advanced to 17.33 and closed 2 points under that figure for a net gain of 14 points. The general market closed steady at net advances of 14 to 15 points.

Liverpool cables were favorable and resulted in an opening advance here of 1 to 4 points. Some selling was encountered and the initial gain was lost. The market steadied under trade buying and covering by shorts on the two bullish private crop estimates of 14,330,000 bales and 14,744,000 bales.

Prices were on the upgrade most of the morning with March at 17.60 and May 17.85, or 17 to 18 points above the lows and 15 to 16 points over yesterday's close.

During the afternoon trading was quiet and prices fluctuated within the early range. Near the end, however, the market firmed up again and May contracts made a new high at 17.65, while other positions practically duplicated the earlier highs. Final prices were at about the best with March at 17.60 and May 17.65.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. (AP)—Broadening out of wheat export business from North America together with radically unfavorable Argentine crop reports, led to sharp new advances of wheat values today. Premiums paid on United States wheat taken for shipment overseas were at the highest basis yet on the 1929 crop and showed signs of further tightening. Today's rise resulted in apparent fading away of prospects of heavy deliveries here on December contracts.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were strong at virtually the day's top level, 2⅛c to 3¼c per bushel higher than Wednesday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to ⅝c up, oats ¼c to ⅛@⅝c advance, and provisions varying from 15c setback to a rise of 25c.

It was estimated that in the last 48 hours 3,000,000 bushels or more of North American wheat had been bought for export. Back of this export business were advices suggesting that the 1929 Argentine and Australian combined surplus of wheat available for shipment abroad would be as low as 100,000,000 to 120,000,000 bushels.

One well known American crop authority now in Argentina cut 10,000,000 bushels today from his latest previous forecast.

Corn and oats borrowed strength from the action of wheat, despite weather likely to facilitate marketing of the new corn crop.

Provisions averaged higher, reflecting upturns in hog values and in grain as well.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW

NEW YORK, Nov. 29. (AP)—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

Trade and industry appear more irregular, in that gains in retail trade, proceeding from more seasonable weather and the opening of holiday buying, contrast with a fairly well maintained volume of wholesale and jobbing trade, in which fill-in business constitutes the larger volume of purchasing. Against this is to be set a further quieting in industry, which as usual apparently prefers to meet the inventory period with reduced supplies of goods and materials on hand.

Retail trade, with which is naturally linked holiday buying, has made a rather encouraging step forward, with colder weather and snow described as helping the movement of heavy clothing, shoes and women's wear of various sorts in wider than normal areas. Stress is laid more frequently in the reports on the evidences of staple goods selling relatively better than so-called luxuries, for goods being frequently mentioned as tending to drag, although jewelry trade reports show up perhaps better than some other lines. "Sales" are mentioned more frequently as a stimulus to retail trade in some centers. Wholesale and jobbing business is, on the other hand, characterized more frequently as being of hand-to-mouth proportions.

Weekly bank clearings $10,811,099,000, a decrease of 6 per cent from a year ago.

COTTON CROP SHOWS GAINS

30 Per Cent Increase in Wichita County

Wichita county will gin at least one-third more cotton during the 1929 season than was indicated by September estimates, according to information given by ginners of the county Friday evening.

Reports for the past two days showed a total of 357 bales ginned, bringing the county's season total to 19,532 bales. About the time that picking began in September, it was predicted that the county would possibly equal the production of 1928, when about 15,200 bales were ginned. Estimates of cotton still in the field Friday indicated that the figure will go well beyond the 20,000 mark during the coming two weeks.

Electra continued the heavy pace set during the past three weeks, her three gins turning out 142 bales during the two days, and bringing that community's ginnings to 4,127 for the season.

One cent was trimmed from the price offered for light and heavy hens by local dealers Friday, and the price on sour cream moved up from 34 to 35 cents.

MIDWESTERN LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 29. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Hog trade around the 11-market circuit was moderately active at 10-25c higher prices. Several points reported a slow close to packers with prices 10-15c lower than the early shipper market. The day's extreme top of $9.50 was paid both at Chicago and St. Louis. Offerings were around 96,100.

Moderate interest was shown in fat lambs at firm to slightly higher figures but mature classes of sheep were unchanged. Choice native lambs in Chicago realized $13.20 and $13 was secured for fed westerns. Supply approximated 36,000.

Cattle receipts estimated at 22,100. Beef steers and yearlings found a fairly broad outlet at generally steady to strong prices, a few of the river markets reporting substantial upturns on short fed steers. Demand at eastern dressed beef markets was somewhat improved and this was a boon to the live trade. Chicago reported several lots of show rejects selling at $15.00@16.00. Good 1,376-pound Kansas steers on the Kansas City market scored $13 and were considered sharply higher than the recent low spot.

No replacement stock of consequence was available.

TEXAS LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Nov. 29. (AP)—Quality as well as number was lacking in today's receipts of cattle and calves at Fort Worth. There was very little change in the price schedule as in effect on Wednesday. Steers a little easy while canners and cutters showed a little strength.

Plain steers $5.25 and $8.50.

Better heavy bulls $6 and $6.25; common light bulls $5 and $5.50. Slaughter yearlings up to $11, some around $10, and common packages $6.50 and less.

Canner cows $3.75 and $4.25; strong kind at $4.50; good cows $7.50; bulk butcher cows $6.

Good calves $7 and $7.50; heavy calves $8 and $8.50; steer calves $9.

Best rail butcher hogs $9; truck top $8.85, and bulk of the 175 to 250-pound butchers at $8.75 and $9; packing sows $7.50 and $8; pigs up to $8.50.

Shorn fat wethers $7 or around 50c higher.

SIR HENRI SAYS U. S. MUST LEAD

America Must Curtail Her Oil Output First

NEW YORK, Nov. 29. (INS)—"America must take the lead in the world conservation of oil by curtailing her own enormous productions," said Sir Henry Deterding, managing director of the Royal Dutch Petroleum company, when he arrived here today aboard the S. S. Homeric.

"Common sense," he continued, "should impel Americal producers seriously to consider the grave dangers of overproduction, and to adopt means of improving the situation."

Sir Henry will deliver an address before the annual meeting of the American Petroleum institute at Chicago on Dec. 3.

He said that, in his opinion, the institute could, with the backing of the leading oil producers, go a long way in remedying the present state of affairs. In California, he pointed out, splendid results are being obtained in the curtailment of oil production, but that curtailment in California alone was not enough.

In conclusion Sir Henry said, "My address to the meeting in Chicago will deal with curtailment of production, and I earnestly hope that it may result in a better understanding of the aims of American and foreign oil producers".

The Royal Dutch company has, through two of its larger subsidiaries, the Shell Union Oil company an dthe Shell Eastern Petroleum Products, Inc., been building up a large marketing system in the United States, and has entered into active and challenging competition with American companies, notably the Standard Oil of New York and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

The Royal Dutch is opposing any increase in the basic gasoline price which has been proposed by certain interests, contending that it would tend to stimulate production and delay the curb on output that is sought.

Palacine Field Gets New Work

Tests Rigging Up in Area Near Duncan

Special to The Record News

DUNCAN, Okla., Nov. 29.—Work of rigging up new tests continues to hold the center of interest in the new Palacine oil field 12 miles southeast of Duncan.

The Wirt Franklin Petroleum corporation is drilling at 3027 feet on the No. 1 Martin in the NE NW SW of 9-2s-6w, a diagonal offset to the discovery well where production was found at 3233-41 feet.

The Franklin corporation's No. 1 Green in the NW SW NW of 9-2s-6w, second oiler in hte field, has averaged better than 675 barrels a day since being completed last week.

The Magnolia Petroleum company has set surface pipe at 180 feet on the Andreae No. 1-A in the NE SE NE of 8-2s-6w, a west offset to the No. 1 Green and a twin to the No. 1 Andreae, completed as a gasser.

The Franklin corporation have completed rig for the No. 2 Brooke in the SE SE NE of 8-2s-6w, a diagonal offset to the No. 1 Green and a twin to the No. 1 Brooke gasser.

The came company is building derrick for the No. 2 Spain, in the SE SE NW of 9-2s-6w, a south offset to the No. 1 Green, while their No. 2 Green in the NW SE NW of 9-2s-6w, a north offset to the discovery, is still a location.

Clark and Cowden and the Ven-Mex are rigging up the No. 1 Andrese in the SW NE SE of 5-2s-6w, northwest of the No. 1 Green. The same operator's No. 1 Howard in the SE SE NW of 5-2s-6w is still a location.

On the west side of the county, Slick and Taylor have cemented casing on an oil showing at 2100 feet in the No. 1 Blake in the NE SW SW of 16-1s-6w, on the same lease where Louis Sikes recently opened a new gas field four miles southwest of Duncan. The No. 1 Blake will be completed Friday.

Reichstag Hears Foreign Policies

BERLIN, Nov. 29. (UP)—Dr. Julius Curtius, in his first speech to the Reichstag since he was made foreign minister, announced today that he would follow the late Gustav Stresemann's policy of moderation and cooperation with other nations. He said any other policy would isolate Germany from the remainder of the world.

Curtius said the nationalist party's attempt to kill the Young plan would if successful, entail a complete reversal of foreign policy and would be most likely to have a disastrous effect on Germany at home and abroad.

Germany, he continued, must do its part to keep Europe peaceful, and enable Germany to rebuild herself under the protection of that peace.

The foreign minister's speech was received quietly, except for some fascist heckling.

Radio Installed In Tipton Orphan's Home

A new Atwater Kent radio has been installed in the Tipton Orphan's home at Tipton, Okla., according to the announcement made by Rev. L. S. White, pastor of the First Church of Christ.

This orphanage is kept by members of all the Churches of Christ in Texas and Oklahoma and these members have paid for the new radio. All but a small sum was subscribed for at the Thanksgiving services for the children at the home Thursday and the local church assumed the remainder of the amount. Rev. Mr. White also secured the radio for the county jail here, through subscriptions over KGKO in his morning radio services.

FREIGHTER SINKS

MOSCOW, Nov. 29. (UP)—The freighter Third Internationale, en route down the Onega river from Kem, sank in the White sea today. Reports indicated the entire crew of the freighter was lost.

ELKS PLAN ANNUAL RITES

Atwell to Attend Memorial Services

Judge William H. Atwell of the federal district court will be an honor guest at the annual memorial services to be given in the Elks lodge room on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, according to E. F. Fruechte, exalted ruler of the order.

Similar services are to be given on the same day at all Elks lodges as a memorial to members who have died during the year. Those for whom the local service will be held include William H. Huey, F. M. Kelleher, J. J. Simon, and D. M. Hardy.

The program follows:
Offertory, Ernest Katz.
Opening ceremonies, officers of the lodge.
Invocation, A. L. Huey.
Piano solo, Ernest Katz.
Eulogy, Mr. Fruechte.
Vocal solo, Mrs. A. M. Hepler.
Memorial day address, Wayne Somerville.
Closing ceremonies, officers of the lodge.

Special invitations are issued to members of the families of those whose memories will be honored at this service. Visiting Elks are also invited to attend, Mr. Fruechte announced.

Band Program

C. C. Bunnenbeig, city park superintendent, Friday expressed satisfaction at the reception given the Plaground band Thanksgiving day program Thursday evening at the Memorial auditorium. Over 700 people were present, he said, despite the fact that many other programs were in progress throughout the city.

Hyer Visits Relatives

W. R. Hyer, city tax collector, is out of the city for the holiday season. He spent Thanksgiving day with relatives at Mineral Wells. He is expected to return this week-end.

I. O. O. F. to Observe Tenth Anniversary

Three degrees, the patriarchial, golden rule and royal purple, will be conferred upon a large class of candidates at the 10th anniversary of the establishment of the Wichita encampment of the I. O. O. F. lodge in the lodge rooms Saturday evening.

It is only on rare occasions that more than one degree is conferred at one time but through a special dispensation the three degrees will be conferred, leaders said.

Encampment members from all parts of Oklahoma and Texas are expected to be here for the services.

A large group of applications is on hand. Five or more are to be here from Bellevue and a number from Petrolia, will receive the work at this time. Various other towns and communities will be represented. A lunch will be served at the close of the initiation services.

STRAND: "The Cock Eyed World," with Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen. Breathe easily if you can. Paramount sound news.

MAJESTIC: Dorothy Mackaill, Jack Oakie and Charles Delaney in "Hard to Get." Not hard to take. Eddie Cantor in "Ziegfad Midnight Follies." Movietone news.

OLYMPIC: Belle Bennett in "The Sporting Age." Comedy. Pathe news. Gypsy Strollers company on stage.

GEM: Tom Tyler in "The Man From Nevada." Chapter 9 "Queen of the Northwoods." Comedy.

Pulling his heavy mouth shaunchwise to hurl vituperative oaths upon Sergeant Quirt, bulging his tremendous muscles to send privates scurrying in a riot of quick obedience, and anon reducing that hardened countenance to an expression of extreme tenderness—that is Victor McLaglen as Top Sergeant Flagg, slashing his way through "The Cock Eyed World" with the Marines.

For Captain Flagg of "What Price Glory" was "busted" for the making of the Strand's present offering, and enjoys only one grade in rank above that of his equally hard-boiled nemesis, Quirt; a superiority which prevails in line of duty, but which disappears in confusion as the pair compete for whatever siren may be found between formations. The story is built entirely upon Rudyard Kipling's poetic observation that barrack room life "don't make plasterparis saints" of our soldiers and marines. No pair of actors could have been chosen from the present school of dramatic talent who better could have portrayed the leather-necked line sergeants who make "The Cock Eyed World" decidedly unsaintly in its atmosphere.

Hailed as a sequel to "What Price Glory," the present Flagg-Quirt story differs from its progenitor largely in its having been constructed fictionally to utilize the characters and atmosphere of the former production, without having the same degree of authenticity generally accorded "What Price Glory." The earlier picture was accepted as a powerful argument against war, an argument presented through the reproduction of the trench warfare in France in which all of its gruesome elements were pictured with intense realism. "The Cock Eyed World" follows the Marines to Russia, back to the Brooklyn navy yard, thence to the tropics for the purpose of laughing at the leatherneck's incessant philandering with the "broads" in every port.

Scattered bits of the picture are built for those who react with salt tears and tremulous sighs to heavy doses of sentimnet. The death of the company's youngest member, this time his sweetheart's picture instead of his mother's to be drawn from his crimsoned shirt-pocket, is repeated. The scene is featured by McLaglen's capacity for moulding his massive, uncomely features into a moving picture of grief. The "old pal" theme also is played up heavily when the fever seems to have delivered a knock-out punch to Sergeant Quirt. But all in all, such injections have lost much of the kick given them by the world war background of "What Price Glory."

McLaglen mastered a vernacular which combines the traditional "colorful speech" of the line sergeant with that of a Bowery rough for his role in "Cock Eyed World." Throughout his recurrent vitriolic dialogue with Edmund Lowe, fraught with much soldierly wisecracking, he remains surprisingly in character, linguistically speaking. Incidentally, we suggest that the "Says Who?" "Says Me!" theme be adopted only by those who have protruding, under-slung jaws and ape-like torso. Robbed of its setting the gem loses its luster.

Lighter and contrasting humor is developed throughout the picture by Brendel, as "Ole Olson" and Lila Damita, about whom the Flagg-Quirt duel revolves in the tropical episode. Brendel was heard here about two years ago on the Interstate vaudeville stage. Barrack ballads of his own invention, and equally ingenious affaires d'amour, are lubricated with a well intoned Swedish brogue. After seeing Lila weave new patterns of sex appeal about the burly sergeants who were supposed to be chasing Serrano, it may be supposed that Clara Bow will do her "Itting" hereafter in a tropical setting. While Lila's writhing and tossing of wavy hair was covered by a barrage of Spanish lingo which beat a constant tattoo upon the ear, the eye emerged with sufficient illumination to haul down the "It" flag from over the house of Bow.

Evidences of musical comedy-technique crowd themselves into the action occasionally with almost a jarring effect. They pull one temporarily out of the atmosphere which is the picture's largest accomplishment. The orchestra which turned up immediately to relieve Sergeant Quirt's feelings after a verbal tilt with the top soak, for instance, was in a surprising degree of readiness considering that they were lounging in the barracks after evening mess.

Classified strictly as entertainment, "Cock Eyed World" goes just where its name implies—with barnyard and bar-room stories. The subject matter of which its dialog and pantomime are constructed is drawn from that fleshly level to which soldiers are supposed to be reduced by the terrible realities of war. Stories which are classified in every day parlance as smutty have exactly the same humor which is used in "The Cock Eyed World" under the caption of "gripping realism." If the tone of "The Cock Eyed World" has a wide appeal to the public, it raises the question as to why vice districts should be meticulously segregated.

It Begins Where "WHAT PRICE GLORY?" Left Off!

Yes, sir! Now you HEAR what the two hard-boiled buddies of "What Price Glory" say to each other! Hear all their remarks as they make their love tour of the cock-eyed world!

It's the funniest, lovingest, fightingest, scrappingest story you ever listened to!
