Wichita Falls is agog with the old college spirit. Unseasonable weather that was more suitable for baseball than football made the wearing of raccoon skin coats (purchased by dad) impossible, and coeds left their new fall coats at home. But except for those artistic touches and midsummer rather than Indian summer weather, it was indicated as early as yesterday afternoon that a college football game is to be played here today.

The Southern Methodist university Mustangs of Dallas and Simmons university Cowboys of Abilene are to be the contending elevens in the battle here, the most important grid game ever carded in Wichita Falls. It is to be staged at Spudder park and to prevent a thousand phone calls (there will be many anyhow) I hasten to make early mention that the kickoff will be at 3 o'clock. That is the official starting time, though the posters around town have it at 2:30.

Simmons Arrives

Will the Cowboys tame the Mustangs? That was the question yesterday of football enthusiasts, as interest over the game was height-

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 12. (US)—Two marchers in the Columbus day parade here today were shot down as the parade started. The shooting, which will probably result in the death of the two men, followed a quarrel over a fascisti flag. The crowd was thrown into a panic.

Speakers Praise Smith At Cheering Demo Rally

Republican Corruption and Religious Intolerance Scored by Wichita Falls Party Leaders

Wichita Falls loyal Democrats at a rally in the Memorial auditorium Friday night heard Governor Smith and the principles for which he and his party stand praised in such terms that they were repeatedly moved to voice their approval in loud and prolonged cheering.

Observers said after the meeting that it was one of the most enthusiastic political gatherings ever held in the city. The speakers, who denounced the record of the Republican party, assailed religious intolerance and defended the records of Catholics of the past and present, were frequently stopped by long drawn ovations.

Catholics of today and yesterday were extolled by A. H. Carrigan, former judge of the 30th district court and prominent Democratic worker.

John C. Kay, Wichita Falls attorney and Edgar Scurry, county Democratic chairman, were the other speakers of the evening which was preceded by a band concert on the streets which lasted an hour.

"I am still a Democrat," said Mr. Kay in opening his address. The applause was so great he had to wait several minutes before proceeding.

"God Almighty hates a quitter, but the Democratic party is no beggar.

"Those who leave the party are in for a surprise when the Texas legislature meets next time, for it will put britches on them, and they must either stay in or get out.

"Whenever anyone quits the party, he ought to study a little about where he is going, for there is no such thing as a Republican party.

"There are many who belong to the Republicans, but they have had

Sinking of Sub With 43 Aboard Kept Secret Nine Days by Captain

Commander of Greek Craft Keeps Silence After Men Are Sent to Watery Grave

PARIS, Oct. 12. (AP)—The submarine Ondine, which was to have been the newest unit of the strongest arm of the French navy, is at the bottom of the ocean and all her crew of three officers and 40 men are dead.

The ministry of marine learned tonight that the tragedy occurred about midnight Oct. 3 when the submarine was rammed off Oporto by the Greek cargo carrier Aikaterini M. Goulandris. The advices came in brief dispatches from the French consul at Rotterdam.

Silence Astonishes

The ministry was totally at a loss to explain why the captain of the Greek steamer waited until today to report the accident. They were dumbfounded too by the fact that he abandoned a search for survivors of wreckage within two hours after his steamer hit the Ondine.

By the captain's own admission, the night was clear and the sea was fairly calm.

The ministry was prepared to hear bad news respecting the Ondine because she was three days overdue at her destination, which was Bizerta, the seaport of Tunis on the north coast of Africa. She was heading there on a trial trip which started at Cherbourg on Oct. 1.

Able Commander

Official communiques of the past three days had expressed optimism because of the known ability of the Ondine's commander. It was assumed, however, that a break down in machinery had delayed the boat and also prevented her from communicating with shore station.

The naval officials here were not at all prepared to learn that nine days had elapsed before report was made of the fate of the vessel. They were astounded at the conduct of the Greek captain in this respect and they freely criticized him for abandoning search for the 43 hapless members of the crew after what was considered only cursory efforts to find them.

PAIR TO SEEK DARROW'S HELP

Northcotts' Wires Fall Into Hands of Police

CALGARY, Alberta, Oct. 12 (INS)—Gordon Stewart Northcott and his mother, Mrs. Lousia Northcott, today were seekin the services of Clarence Darrow, internationally known criminal lawyer to defend them.

This was disclosed in telegrams exchanged between Northcott and his mother, who are facing extradition to California on charges that they murdered little boys in their abandoned chicken ranch.

The wires dealing with the advisability of retaining Darrow of Leopold and Loeb fame were reported intercepted by California investigators. The first message was sent by Northcott from Okalla prison at Vancouver to his mother, who is held in the city jail here.

"I will take Lyons to California with me but want to get Clarence Darrow, as he saved Leopold and Loeb," Northcott is reported to have wired his mother.

"Your choice satisfactory with me. Darrow will be alright," Mrs. Northcott is said to have replied.

These reported overtures led officers to give more credence to rumors that Northcott was married to a wealthy California widow who may be financing his spectacular fight against extradition.

Northcott is said to have boasted to his niece, Jessie Clark, that he had married "a very rich old woman for her money."

Woman Who Claimed Immortality for Sinless Life Dies in Rochester, N. Y.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (AP).—Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, who died in Rochester today, repeatedly proclaimed that she would never die, physically or spiritually. She always refused to tell the date of her birth and so her age was not generally known even among those close to her. She held that only sinners "died," and that as her life was unstained by sin her immortality was assured.

Aside from her part in her "spite wall" suit, Mrs. Stetson was perhaps best known to the general public for her attempts to abolish the third verse of the Star Spangled Banner.

She was called as a witness in 1924 before Deputy Commissioner of Accounts Loudon, who was investigating the financial source of an alleged flood of propaganda against the national anthem. She testified that she had spent $16,000 for an advertising campaign aimed at causing the song's third stanza to be stricken out.

She maintained that the verse was subversive to both peace and good will.

SMITH CHARGES HOOVER EVADES POWER ISSUE

Al Tears Into Opponent Before Record Crowd at Nashville

CROWDS GO WILD

Cheering City Extends Welcome to Happy Warrior

By FRASER EDWARDS

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 12 (US)—In this state where the power trust has a firm foot-hold and the disposition of the gigantic, government-owned power project at Muscle Shoals, Ala., is a vital question, Governor Smith tonight accused Herbert Hoover of "evasion, ducking and dodging" on the water power issue.

Contrasting his own clear-cut declaration for government development and control of water power with the recent statement of his Republican opponent at Elizabethton, Tenn., the Democratic candidate asserted that Hoover concealed "his exact position on this issue behind a wall of high-sounding phrases that leaves in the minds of so many thousands of our people the element of doubt."

Thus did Governor Smith speak in Tennessee, after all. He spoke to an audience jammed into Ryman auditorium, after what natives of Nashville say was the most remarkable demonstration for a political candidate in the history of the city. Only the frenzied celebration of the armistice surpassed it, they say.

Speech Demanded

The adamant refusal of the governor to change his program and speak in Tennessee was broken down by a group of the state Democratic leaders. He was told in substance that unless he spoke he might as well "kiss the 12 electoral votes good-bye" but if he did speak, particularly on the power issue, he could clinch them.

Aside from the power issue, the governor's speech was largely a repetition of his utterances on farm relief, immigration and prohibition. He said that neither Hoover nor the Republican platform suggests even a basis for farm relief and the farmers must look to the Democratic party for aid. On immigration, he said that he and Hoover were as one for restriction and therefore it was no issue in the

OLD JOHN DOWLING

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 12. (US)—Back in the fall of '56, young John D. Dowling of Ringgold, Georgia, suh, cast his first vote for president and cast it for a Yankee Democrat—James Buchanan of Pennsylvania. Today a weazened, wrinkled "Johnnie Reb," with a grizzled gray beard and bowed under the weight of 84 winters, now Old John Dowling, met another Yankee Democratic candidate for president, Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York.

This veteran of the legions of Lee and "Stonewall" Jackson from the red clay hills of Georgia and the man from the East Side of New York struck hands in a hearty clasp and the battered barracks cap and the brown derby went up together, while the strains of Dixie and the Sidewalk of New York blended.

St. Louis Society Folk In Furore Over Queen's Violation Of Custom

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12 (UP)—For 50 years the patron civic saint of St. Louis—the Veiled Prophet—has annually crowned the Queen of Love and Beauty.

By iron-clad social tradition, the highly honored individual selected has been an unwedded woman who usually remained single for a year after her coronation.

Today, however, St. Louis society learned to its consternation that Mary Ambrose Smith, crowned at a gala fete a week ago, was married last August to Dr. T. C. Birdsall of St. Louis at Winston-Salem, N. C.

J. Sheppard Smith, president of the Mississippi Valley Trust company here and father of the queen, announced the fact in a statement in which he admitted he did not learn of it until last Saturday, four days after the coronation.

MARY AMBROSE SMITH

It was the first time in half a century that anything of the sort had occurred to ruffle the regality of the Veiled Prophet's annual visitation.

As a result, social leaders here were in the worst conceivable quandary as to what to do about it. Everyone asked whether another queen would be crowned, but it was immediately recalled that the mysterious personage who crowns her had left the city in accordance with custom, leaving her to reign in his stead until another year.

Miss Smith is a direct descendant of Pierre Laclede Liguest, cofounder of the city of St. Louis.

Kirk, previously tried twice, was affected. His wife and mother, who sat near him through the four days' trial, were in tears.

Tabor was snot to death near the home of his father-in-law, J. N. Wells, after he had accompanied Kirk and Wells on a walk to the former's automobile, which had been called disabled. The defense attempted to prove that the fatal shot was fired by Wells in a scuffle with Tabor.

Son of Texas Blacksmith Crosses Sea on Zeppelin as U. S. Observer

CLEBURNE, Texas, Oct. 12 (INS)—As the monster German dirigible Graf Zeppelin nosed its way toward American shores today a Cleburne blacksmith and his wife eagerly awaited news of the ship's progress.

To the world the flight may mean the dawn of closer communication between the continents and another chapter in the bright annals of aviation; to them it held the destiny of a son.

Mrs. C. O. Rosendahl, mother of Lieutenant Commander Charles Rosendahl of the U. S. navy dirigible Los Angeles, American observer aboard the Zeppelin, told International News Service today that she was not "uneasy" baout the flight—"oh just a bit too," she added. "But we feel that he is safe as long as the ship does not run into storms." Eagerly she asked of the Zeppelin's progress.

Her husband, who is foreman of blacksmiths in the Santa Fe railroad shops here, went to work as usual today.

DIRIGIBLE MAY BE IN U. S. BY SUNDAY NOON

'Summerlike' Weather West Of Azores Reported by Ship's Radio

BOATS SIGHT CRAFT

Eckener Takes Southerly Route to Keep Out Of Storms

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. (US)—Sliding through the skies over the Atlantic at 80 miles an hour, the dirigible giantess, Graf Zeppelin should reach Lakehurst, N. J., late Sunday, aeronautic experts estimated tonight.

Her curving course from Germany—a vast arc extending to the African coast, to Medeira, swinging south of the Azores—to avoid storms was hailed by aviation chieftains as a masterly feat in navigation upon the part of Dr. Hugo Eckener, commanding the sky-diner.

Passes Bermudas Next

Navy department officials, plotting this course, said the Graf Zeppelin will next pass the Bermudas, and will roar her way on the last lap of a 6000 mile voyage up the Atlantic coast from the Virginia or Delaware capes.

By this course, encircling the storm area to the north, the Graf Zeppelin is cutting head-winds to a minimum, and in fact is getting increased speed from favorable air currents, it was pointed out. Furthermore the great dirigible is cruising through mild temperatures, adding to the comfort of her passengers and crew in the unheated cabins.

Practicability Shown

Naval aeronautic experts declared that Dr. Eckener's decision to make the great southern swing over the ocean demonstrated the practicability of the super-dirigible to overcome adverse weather conditions by avoiding the storm centers.

Head-winds may yet be encountered, according to weather reports, but fair weather was predicted and it was believed the great airship would have no difficulty in working its way to the Atlantic coast and to its Lakehurst goal.

As reports of the Zeppelin's speedy progress were received, capitol officials prepared for an exodus from the city to Lakehurst.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. (AP)—The Radio Marine corporation reported tonight that the following message apparently from the Graf Zeppelin, was intercepted by the Chatham, Mass., station of the corporation at 6:10 p. m. (eastern standard time):

"Weather is warm and summerlike. Heading straight for Bermuda. If weather continues good, we expect to arrive Sunday noon. Speed 85 miles per hour. Bag mail dropped over Funchal, Madeira."

The message was unsigned.

COURSE SOUTH AND WEST OF AZORES

HORTA, Azores Islands, Oct. 12 (UP)—The transatlantic dirigible, Graf Zeppelin, approximately 2,000 miles out over the Atlantic ocean from the Straits of Gibraltar, was threading her way south and west of the Azores early tonight.

Apparently Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the dirigible, intended to pass over Bermuda and thence northwest to Lakehurst, N. J.

The Graf Zeppelin passed south of the Azores and was in latitude 37.43 north, longitude 33.43 west, about 300 miles southwest of here at 2 p m. (Eastern Standard time).

She was making a speed better than her trip from Friedrichshafen, Germany, to Gibraltar. Although it was difficult to check on the dirigible as she moved across the ocean, her position indicated she was making close to her regular cruising speed of 68 miles an hour.

It was raining here and a growing westerly wind whipped the ocean. The Graf Zeppelin's speed indicated she was escaping the storm area, however, and probably would continue southwest to Bermuda to skirt the unfavorable con-

BUSINESS MAY BREAK RECORD

Fourth Quarter Conditions Highly Favorable

By W. S. COUSINS
International News Service
Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—American industrial and business conditions in the fourth quarter are unusually favorable, and all indications point to a record-breaking season for the major industries, as well as for numerous branches of trade which have been on the "sick list" since 1925. The "profitless prosperity" complained of by the heads of the steel, copper and other industries appears to be passing as the result of the stiffening of prices for raw and manufactured goods.

The stock market is a problem and a conundrum which the bankers and economists seem unable to solve. In the face of the most adverse criticism of stock price trends, over-use of bank and credit, undue speculative activity in all parts of the country, and repeated warnings against the pyramiding of stock values, the market rushed ahead at a break-neck pace this past week, numerous speculative favorites scoring new high price records for all time.

Public Eager to Buy

The pools enthusiastically report that the public is so eager to buy their stock that it is much easier to sell at the top than to buy at the bottom. So much momentum has been created in the rise of favorite stocks that in many cases they continue to climb after the distribution has been commited. Never in the history of the country has there been such an enormous volume of money awaiting investment, and never has the investing public been willing to accept such small immediate returns in anticipation of future profits on its investments.

The gradual increase of freight car loadings on the American railroads in a favorable commentary on the movement of goods in domestic commerce. Loadings are now close to a million and a quarter cars per week, an increase of 100,000 cars weekly from the same period last year. Important developments are now pending in the railroad consolidation field, attention to which has been sharply drawn by the acquisition this week of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh road by the Van Sweringen brothers of Cleveland.

Steel Sales Gain

The steel industry continues to make very favorable records, both in production and sales, as well as in net earnings of the principal companies. The U. S. Steel corporation reported a gain of 74,000 in forward tonnage in September, in the face of a considerable gain in quick-delivery business during the month. The railroad and motor car industries are absorbing an ever-increasing amount of finished steel, providing a background for a prosperous period in the steel and related industries.

The farm implement manufacturing industry is in the best condition since the close of the world war and the same can be said with few reservations for the shoe industry, the textile trade, clothing manufacturing trade, copper and metals trade generally. With copper selling at 15¾ and 15½ cents a pound, the low-cost producers are in a position to make the best profits in a decade, and the booming market for the stocks of the American Smelting, Anaconda, Cerro de Pasco and other well known copper companies is an evidence of the public's appreciation of that fact.

Despite the enormous expansion in speculative borrowing, bankers look for an easier trend in the money market after the turn of the month, to be accentuated from the first of December into the first two or three months of 1929.

ALLISON'S DRUG STORE WINS BIG AGENCY

Award Announced After Lengthy Conference Between Wilson and Associates

First Allotment of Sensational New Treatment to Arrive Today—J. H. Allison Issues Statement to Public.

Orgatone, the sensational new treatment which has been meeting with such phenomenal success everywhere it has been introduced, will be sold in Wichita Falls, by the Allison's Drug store, 716 Indiana avenue.

This important announcement was made last night by R. T. Wilson, special representative of Harry Kessinger, widely known as the Orgatone health teacher, after a long conference with their associates.

The first allotment of the celebrated medicine is expected to arrive here today and will be on sale at Allison's Drug store, 716 Indiana avenue, Saturday morning.

The decision to appoint Allison's Drug store exclusive Orgatone representative, stated Mr. Wilson, was the result of a careful survey of the local field to determine the stores best equipped to serve the public in distributing the famous medicine. It is the policy of those responsible for its distribution to have one or two thoroughly reliable and centrally located representatives in each city.

"Everywhere you go," continued Mr. Wilson, "you will find Orgatone is distributed by the most reputable and progressive druggists in each city. They are naturally anxious to obtain the agency because they know what Orgatone will do and because of the distinction and prestige the agency gives them. However, I should like to congratulate the people of this city in having such a splendid, up-to-the-minute firm such as Allison's Drug store. It would be a credit to any city."

The management of this store has long known the remarkable health-building power of Orgatone and the wonderful results it has accomplished, and they were among the first to seek a supply of the medicine for distribution here. After looking over the field first hand we feel the special agency could not be better placed. Their reputation for courtesy and fair dealing extends far and wide.

J. H. ALLISON ISSUES STATEMENT

Enthusiasm permeated the establishment of Allison's Drug store as a result of the award and every one connected with this store seems keenly appreciative of the signal honor and prestige won by their company.

"Everyone is elated," stated Mr. J. H. Allison, with a broad smile, "to be awarded the Orgatone special agency is an honor which any firm would feel proud to have attained. However, I also want to say that we fully appreciate the responsibility the award placed upon us, for the appointment carries an obligation both to the public and to the manufacturers of the celebrated medicine.

"To guarantee the fair and impartial distribution of such a remarkable preparation as Orgatone, which involves handling hundreds of individual purchases every day, and to see that each person receives personal attention, is no small undertaking. But in order to secure the agency, we had to guarantee this and we are prepared to carry out our obligations to the letter. Orgatone is a medicine of such wonderful merit and reputation that for us to comment on it would be superfluous. It has met with astonishing success everywhere. We were fortunate enough to secure a few bottles of the medicine some weeks ago and distributed it among our customers. We therefore know first-hand the wonderful results it accomplished."

In order to meet the enormous demand for Orgatone that is anticipated here, an order for a big shipment of the medicine has been placed by the Allison's Drug store, to supplement the initial allotment which is expected today.

Full and interesting facts about the new medicine will be announced from day to day starting tomorrow, it was stated.—Adv.

Where 15 Died in Ohio Prison Fire

Here are the smoldering ruins of the Ohio penitentiary brick plant at Junction City, Ohio., where 17 convicts are believed to have lost their lives when fire swept through the dormitory section at night. Trapped behind barred windows, the prisoners died before guards could release them. When this picture was taken, a number of bodies were believed still hidden in the ruins. Fifteen bodies were recovered and investigation of charges that these men had been trapped, without a chance to escape, was started by the state.

HERB BLAMED FOR BEAN LOSS

Tariff Also Looms as Issue In California

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 12. (UP)—Three elements make the farm issue in the California fight unique in the presidential campaign.

First, the wheat and corn farmer of the Middle West contends he gets little help from the protective tariff and wants some more drastic aid, but the California specialty farmer depends entirely upon the protective tariff to save him from otherwise fatal competition from Chinese eggs, Sicilian olive oil and Mediterranean fruits.

Second, what has become known as the "hell raisin'" raisin has slumped, ruining thousands in the raisin bowl around Fresno. It also has caused the retirement of Ralph W. Merritt, who was head of the great raisin cooperative and an intimate associate of Hoover in the war-time food administration, on the Hoover California ranch. Merritt was regarded by many as Hoover's choice for secretary of agriculture because of his success—until recently—in building up the gigantic California cooperatives which serve as models for the type of co-operative activity upon which the Republicans base their farm relief program. Merritt's retirement recently, however, has been followed by his retirement from the Hoover group politically. Democrats are seeking to make Merritt a liability to Hoover in the campaign here.

Bean Problem

Third, Hoover is being attacked by Democrats for having ruined the California bean industry during the war. They claim Hoover urged California farmers to plant thousands of acres of beans for the allies and then forced the price down and bought Manchurian beans in competition. The Republicans have issued a circular entitled "How the California Bean Story Became a Political Tear Bomb." Republicans deny Hoover was responsible for the heavy losses to bean growers in 1918.

George A. Turner, president of the California Bean Growers association, at the time, now says California growers held their beans for a higher price and the government bought in Michigan and elsewhere, and that next the armistice knocked the bottom out of the bean market.

Hoover's part in the great bean debacle having been thus defended, his enemies began to attack him with charges that he employed Jap labor on his ranch and refused work to whites. A group of farm leaders inspected the ranch and reported 50 per cent of the regular employes were Americans, 25 per cent were negro, 25 per cent Mexican, and none Japs. Much of the heavy squatting labor whites would do, it was explained.

Owens Model Farm

Hoover, the aforesaid Ralph Merritt, Julius Barnes, Duluth milling magnate, and Edgar Ricard, bought 1,300 acres in Kern county and have a model farm run by an engineer, raising two to three crops a year, with model accounting systems. It is regarded in California as a "noble experiment" and while not thus far highly successful financially, it was said at Republican headquarters, it serves as a valuable educational farm for surrounding farmers interested in greater efficiency.

Republicans are hammering hard on the tariff while Democrats say it no longer is a political issue. Mediterranean countries can send fruit to New York for one-half the cost California growers can send it across by rail. Labor is far higher here. Except for the tariff, California would be ruined agriculturally, Republicans say. Senator Johnson managed to get an excellent protection for California in the Fordney-McCumber act. Republicans are now printing lists of California commodities protected by the Fordney-McCumber act in contrast with the number on the free list of the Underwood act. If the Republicans needed an issue to carry the state, they probably would find the tariff one of their best.

Amnesia Victim of War Thought Found

PUEBLO, Colo., Oct. 12. (AP) — A telephone conversation across the continent today gave what Pueblo police considered positive identification of Harry Devlin, Canadian war veteran who is said to have been an amnesia victim since 1916.

From Toronto, Canada, "Billy" Wallace, boyhood friend of Devlin and now a reporter on the Toronto Star talked with Devlin and together they recounted boyhood experiences that led S. L. Devlin, 67, of Toronto, to believe he had found his son who was reported killed in the World war in 1916.

The elder Devlin, also in Toronto, talked to the war veteran over the telephone and said he believed he was talking to his son.

Devlin here said today's telephone conversation positively fixed his identity, but that he had not been entirely convinced until he talked to Wallace in Toronto.

The veteran, wounded by machine gun bullets during the war, has only a faint recollection of the happenings of the past 12 years.

He remembers that he has been in New York and that he visited a sister in Denver.

Last Sunday, he told police, he accepted an invitation to ride in an automobile to Pueblo. At Colorado Springs he entered a resort with his companions and that is the last he remembers.

He was found by Pueblo police unconscious Sunday night and when he had recovered from the effects of blows evidently given him by men who robbed him he told the authorities of his belief in his identity. He displayed a good knowledge of Toronto and operations of the Canadian forces during the war and recounted that he had been in the Royal flying corps. Devlin was wounded by machine gun bullets during the war and walks with the aid of crutches.

QUACKS' RAY CURE SCORED

'Vain Women' Are Victims, Doctor Claims

By W. F. SULLIVAN

CHICAGO, Oct. 12. (UP)—Vain women who believe a magnetic touch will enhance their beauty or take off extra hip poundage are the chief victims of quack doctors using "canned sunshine" and other treatments improperly, Dr. Maximilian Kern of Chicago, discussing the use of ultra violet ray, said in an interview today.

"Improper use of the violet ray treatment," Doctor Kern said, "is just as harmful as the proper use is beneficial. Frankly, the potency of the ultra violet ray is unknown and in the hands of an unscrupulous quack, is dangerous.

"Gullible sufferers who waste their lives 'curing' imaginary ills, neurotics and vain women, squander $30,000,000 annually for valueless and harmful treatments. The quack makes claims to cure rheumatism, tuberculosis and any disease, sells his victims magnetic blankets and the like, and much harm is caused."

Doctor Kern is attending the convention of the American College of Therapeutics in session here this week.

Unnatural Influence

"We are living in a world surrounded by magnetism and if we could apply all the magnetic powers beneficially, think of what could be accomplished in the treatment of disease," Doctor Kern continued.

"The chief danger is exposing an organism to an unnatural influence. Ultra violet ray influences lime formation, for instance, and an excessive amount of lime in the body is dangerous. It causes a toxic condition that taxes the heart and the nervous system and the reaction is damaging. The improper use in the treatment of lung tuberculosis is very harmful to the patient."

Use of the new radio knife or so-called "scalpel" through electrical high frequency application has made definite progress in the treatment of cancer, Doctor Dierall Kobak told the United Press.

"This electrical knife has been used with great success in aiding sufferers of cancer and tumors," Doctor Kobak said. "It has been so perfected to enable us to sever tissue, remove malignant cells without interfering with normal cells. It throws a protective zone around the normal cells and they are unharmed.

"The instrument is so delicate that we have been able to operate on brain tumors and even tumors on the lungs without causing hemorrhages. Cancer of the tongue, lips and breast have been successfully treated."

Clinic demonstrations of the radio knife and violet ray are being held in connection with the convention.

America's First Air Bandit Awaits Trial for Slugging Pilot

PONTIAC, Mich., Oct. 12. (INS) Clarence Frechette, 18 years old, America's first air bandit, is held in the county jail today awaiting sentence Monday after being found guilty last night of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than the crime of murder.

Frechette struck Pilot Harry Anderson with a hammer while the two flew in Anderson's plane 2,000 feet above this city May 14. Anderson and Frechette were severely injured when the plane nosed into the ground at a terrific speed.

It was the contention of Assistant Prosecutor C. Orr that Frechette intended to steal the plane when he slugged the pilot.

James H. Lynch, attorney for Frechette, described the "air bandit" as being "a youth who has gone crazy over flying as youths of our generation went crazy over automobiles."

EDISON SHRINE

Injunction Filed to Keep Birthplace of Noted Man Unmarred

SANDUSKY, Ohio, Oct. 12. (INS)—An application for an order enjoining the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad from building a siding in Milan in the district in which the birthplace of Thomas A. Edison is the center, has been filed in common pleas court here, it was learned today.

Mrs. Nellie H. Garnhart, of Milan, who filed the application, charges that if the siding is built it will mar the premises surrounding the old Edison home. A temporary restraining order has already been issued. The Civic club at Milan is said to be preparing to preserve the Edison premises.

Short Turkey Crop Forecast

FORT WORTH, Oct. 12. (AP)—Varied opinions on the probable status of the turkey market were expressed at the opening session of the annual fall convention of the Texas Butter, Egg and Poultry association Friday morning at the Texas hotel.

While some held strongly to the conviction that turkeys will be plentiful and prices lower than in the past, the prevalent forecast was a shortage of about 30 per cent over last year's turkey crop, and probably the highest prices that the market has known in some time.

Most of the discussion dealt directly and almost solely with the Texas turkey outlook, although several big dealers from outside the state brought news which contrasted the Texans' cry of "crop shortage, heavy losses and high prices."

Several poultry leaders in the state joined the out-of-state dealers in urging the Texas poultrymen to "buy cautiously" and at a price that will make the market popular rather than restrictive. They were warned against experiences of the past when Turkey raisers lost heavily by buying at too high a market only to find the market flooded and prices down.

Father and Son Blamed In Blacksmith's Death

GONZALES, Texas, Oct. 12. (UP) Emil Enderle, 50, and his 16-year-old son, Lewis Enderle, were formally charged with murder today following death of Will Whitehead, blacksmith.

Whitehead died in a hospital here as a result of two shotgun wounds inflicted late Thursday in his shop. The younger Enderle and his father surrendered to Sheriff B. Neighbors on the street shortly after the shooting.

GRAFT LAID TO SALOON LEAGUE

Senator Edwards Flings Broad Charges

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. (UP)—Senator Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey has accused the Anti-Saloon league of "graft, fraud and dictation" in an article which will appear in the November issue of "Plain Talk."

"I accuse the Anti-Saloon league of creating a super government, responsible to no power but itself, of dictating to presidents of the United States, of making the appointments of federal judges, United States district attorneys, United States marshals, customs agents and federal prohibition agents," Edwards writes.

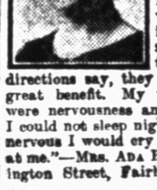

"I accuse it of setting up prejudicial tribunes to deprive cities of their legal rights, of railroading its enemies to jail and keeping its friends out. I accuse the Anti-Saloon league of having and exerting greater power than the president of the United States.

"I am putting the facts together for a complete picture of the whole reign of dry absolutism, of an absolutism that has frightened the national state government, intimidated high officials, the president, officers of the cabinet, the judiciary and all of the executive arms of our civil government."

COULD NOT SLEEP NIGHTS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fairhaven, Mass.—"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life. When I feel nervous and run-down my husband gets me a bottle right away. It is a great help to me and I think that if other people would only take it when they feel all run-down and take it as the directions say, they would find it a great benefit. My worst symptoms were nervousness and tired feelings. I could not sleep nights and I was so nervous I would cry if anyone looked at me."—Mrs. Ada Bebee, 196 Washington Street, Fairhaven, Mass.

NEW HIGHWAY PLAN URGED

Sterling Explains Method at Judges' Meet

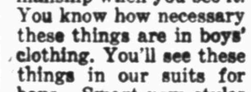

DALLAS, Oct. 12. (INS)—The state of Texas will be 30 years in paving its 20,000-mile highway system if the present methods of financing are retained, Ross Sterling, chairman of the Texas Highway commission, told the Association of County Judges and County commissioners here today.

He outlined for them his plan for a $300,000,000 bond issue for financing state highways, pointing out that this can be done on a gasoline tax of less than three cents per gallon, at an annual cost to each automobile owner in the state of $12. With such a bond issue, he declared, from 10,000 to [illegible] will be added to the Texas system within 10 years.

He would have the expenditure of this fund under joint supervision of the governor, the state treasurer, the attorney general and the highway commission. Reimbursement of the counties for contributions they have made to the state system was advocated by Sterling, who estimated the amount necessary to accomplish this at $50,000,000. He would compel the counties to expend this refund on lateral roads within their own boundaries.

HURT TO STOOP OVER TO LACE HER SHOES

Mrs. J. H. Nichols, 513 Elm Tree Lane, Lexington, Ky., says that Cardui has been of valuable assistance to her on two occasions, which she tells about below:

"Some few years ago, my health was bad. I had very severe pains in my sides. My nerves were in a terrible condition. I could not rest.

"The lower part of my body was very sore. I could hardly stoop over to lace my shoes. I would have to put my foot on a chair. I did not feel like eating, and did not sleep well at all at nights.

"A friend of mine recommended Cardui. I began taking it and saw quite an improvement in my condition. I kept it up until I felt strong and well."

About a year ago, Mrs. Nichols says, she found herself in a nervous, run-down condition. "I took Cardui again," she adds, "and it helped me wonderfully."

Thousands of women have written to tell how Cardui helped them to get rid of pain and suffering.

Cardui is made from purely vegetable ingredients, and may be safely taken from childhood to old age.

GRAF ZEPPELIN SPEEDS TO U. S.

Eckener Heads Out Into the Open Atlantic

ditions between here and New York.

She apparently headed due west from Funchal, Madeira Island, and plans to turn southwest to Bermuda.

Her flight from Funchal to Bermuda will be about 2,800 miles along the indicated route and she will have another 784 mile trip from there to New York.

SPEED OF 85 MILES PER HOUR MADE

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (UP)—The Radio Marine corporation announced tonight that its station at Chatham, Mass., had intercepted a message from the dirigible Graf Zeppelin, stating that the big craft was making 85 miles an hour across the Atlantic ocean under favorable weather conditions.

The message said the dirigible was heading straight for Bermuda.

"The weather continues good. We expect to arrive at Lakehurst, N. J., Sunday noon," the message said.

The speed of 85 miles an hour, as reported in the message, was considerable greater than had been made previously on the flight and probably would put the dirigible at Lakehurst about the time estimated, if maintained.

Drops Mail Bag

The message said the Graf Zeppelin had dropped a bag of mail overboard at Funchal, Island of Madeira, when the dirigible passed over there at 8:30 a. m., Eastern Standard time, Friday.

The steamship Carinthia, Cunard line, informed the Radio Marine tonight that the Zeppelin had been on a 2,200 meter wave length all day. The operator on the Carinthia said apparently the dirigible was getting along fine. There was some interference in radio communication, probably due to the Graf Zeppelin's motors, the Carinthia operator said.

The Brooklyn station, Radio Marine corporation, expects to pick up the Graf Zeppelin signals early Saturday.

TIME OF FLIGHT SET AT 100 HOURS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (UP).—One hundred hours was the time computed by naval experts today for completion of the transatlantic flight of the giant airship Graf Zeppelin, on the basis of radio reports and adverse weather conditions which have caused the great dirigible to follow a course which may cover 5,400 miles.

This would bring it to Lakehurst not earlier than late Sunday, although it had previously been expected the huge silver-colored craft would nose its way out of the Atlantic mists to the mooring mast there before noon Sunday.

Makes 50 Miles Hour

Acting Secretary of Navy Warner, in charge of aviation, pointed out that the course the craft had followed since it left Germany was at least 5,400 miles, and that so far the Graf Zeppelin, according to estimates, had been making only about 50 miles per hour.

Favorable winds might enable the dirigible to complete the flight under 100 hours, but there were no indications in weather reports sent it via radio that they would be encountered. The craft has been forced to skirt numerous bad weather areas and this has caused more delay than was anticipated by Commander Eckener.

Official Washington watched keenly for reports from the Graf Zeppelin as it threaded its way carefully across the ocean. President Coolidge has sought advices concerning the craft's progress and on completion of the flight will dispatch a congratulatory message to the commander and crew. The president revealed recently that he views the flight as heralding a new area in world aviation.

Contact With Steamers

The Graf Zeppelin is assured of constant radio communication with steamers while over the ocean. Records at the U. S. shipping board showed about 30 American ships in the vicinity of the middle Atlantic area being traversed by the craft, exclusive of many other vessels.

The importance of the flight of the Graf Zeppelin was stressed today by Read Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics.

"It is expected that the transoceanic flights of the Graf Zeppelin will demonstrate the practicability of transoceanic transportation of passengers, mail and express by rigid airships, Moffett said, "and will show that the navy was more than justified in carrying on with her own smaller ships, the Shenandoah and Los Angeles, thus keeping alive in the world the airship industry at most critical time."

Moffett said that while at first the Graf Zeppelin will be handled with extreme care, such craft to be fully useful in their own field will have to maintain practically regular schedules, even as heavier than air craft do now.

"The navy, by constructing the two 6,500,000 cubic feet airships, will make it practicable for commercial interests to carry on this new and important means of transportation and communication by building others like them," he added.

NIGHT LANDING IN U. S. POSSIBLE

NAVAL AIR STATION, LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 12. (INS)—If the transatlantic dirigible Graf Zeppelin arrives here late Saturday night, as is possible according to late advices, she will land at once as a night landing is as easily made as a day landing, officials said this afternoon. Floodlights atop the hangar and lights on the mooring mast will show the air liner the way to the field, the field itself, however will not be illuminated, although all the lights in the hangar will be lighted.

The prospective crowds, not the handling of the Zeppelin when it arrives, is what is causing concern among officials. They explain that they anticipate no difficulty in bringing the great air liner in to the hangar but they are taking extra precautions to keep the spectators within bounds.

The regular ground crew of 270 men will be augmented by 180 sailors from the Brooklyn navy yard and these 450 men will be ample to handle the Graf Zeppelin once it lands.

Special Precautions

Special police precautions are being taken, however, to maintain order among the thousands of visitors eager for a close-up of the Zeppelin. Fifty-one marines have been assigned to cooperate with the state police in patrolling the highways and keeping the throngs back of an era that will be roped off shortly before the air ship arrives. Automobiles will not be allowed to park within half a mile of the hangar. Only cars bearing the label "official" will be allowed past the dead line. A limited number of "official" stickers have been doled out to representatives of the German-American organizations, New York City officials and newspapermen.

Into the nearby towns of Lakehurst, Toms River and Lakewood is pouring a steady stream of automobiles with license tags which show that the occupants have come from states as far away as Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois. Every train disgorges its quota of Zeppelin fans and the housing problem is expected to become acute. Hotel rooms are at a premium, and scores of telegraphic requests for reservations are being rejected.

Room Rates Soar

Homes are being turned into boarding houses and rates are jumping sky-high. Lakehurst has a population of less than 2,000, Toms River, 6,000 and Lakewood 12,000 and these towns are utterly unprepared to meet the tremendous influx of visitors that is anticipated. Already business is booming and taxicab men particularly are reaping a harvest.

At the hangar, a battery of leased wires has been installed for the use of press associations and individual newspapers, and the telegraph offices in Lakewood will be utilized for the overflow. Beginning today thousands of words will be dispatched to all parts of the country and abroad.

Hot dog stands and refreshmen booths are spring up like mushrooms in the vicinity of the hangar. Huge signs, bearing the warning "no smoking" are displayed. Photographers have been warned that no flashlight pictures can be taken in the hangar. "There is too much inflammable material in and near the hangar to take any unwarranted chances," explained Lieut. George F. Watson, chief of communications.

SERVANT GIRL AWAITS "SWEETIE"

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 12 (AP).—Waiting for the arrival of the Graf Zeppelin probably with more anxiety and impatience than any one else in the United States is Dora Stoeckle, a domestic in the home of Dr. Davis B. Werren. Her sweetheart is a machinist aboard the airship and in his pocket, she says, he carries a ring. Miss Stoeckle says she came to the United States to earn her dowry. She met Joseph Meyer of Friedrichshafen when she lived there near the Zeppelin works. He was to follow her to this country when he could and they were to be married.

Business Council Hears Report From Hamilton on Nation's Trade

The prosperity of a nation is greatly dependent upon the business of the country, was the thought which was brought out in the address which W. B. Hamilton, councilor to the national chamber of commerce who represented the local chamber of commerce at the annual convention held recently in Hot Springs, Ark., delivered before the business council of the chamber, Friday.

Mr. Hamilton gave an idea of the manner in which chamber of commerce organizations make use of the national order. He pointed out that the national organization has a definite program, and that by making use of the referendum vote, the local chambers may set before the national chamber their recommendations on pertinent economic questions.

The national order has nine service groups, each headed by a highly trained manager and aided by an advisory committee. These groups make exhaustive investigations on problems before submitting their recommendations to the national order.

Texas chambers of commerce will fall into the seventh district, known as the southwestern division, according to the new grouping which was submitted at the convention for adoption at the May membership meeting. Other states associated with Texas in the new grouping are Colorado, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, New Mexico and Louisiana, the latter requesting to be placed in the district with Texas.

Horrace Robbins of the Safety council, gave a talk on fire prevention in which he stressed the importance of the "Cultivate Carefulness" slogan of fire prevention week.

Of all civilized nations, only Canada shows as poor a fire record as does the United States with its $489,000,000 fire loss annually. The speaker also stressed the unnecessary loss of human life.

Opening of the South Plains trade territory has been set for the middle of November, according to an announcement made by Hubert M. Harrison, general manager of the chamber of commerce. An effort will be made by the organization to make an annual event of the Simmons-S. M. U. football game, he said.

Luther Hoffman, chairman of the business council, presided.

Scouts Eager to See S. M. U.-Simmons Clash

Boy Scouts from all parts of the city literally swamped Frank Creighton, Boy Scout executive, Friday when it was learned that they would be used as ushers at the Simmons-S. M. U. game here Saturday, Mr. Creighton said Friday afternoon.

"I told them they they would have to march in the parade, but that made little difference," Mr. Creighton said.

"I never saw a bunch of boys want to see anything or go anywhere as the Wichita Falls Boy Scouts seem to want to see the Simmons-S. M. U. game."

Simmons Band to Play at Majestic

The Simmons University Cowboy band will play in the Majestic theater Saturday night, it was announced Friday evening by Hans Smith, manager of the theater.

Manager Smith also called attention to the fact that "Wings" will open with a midnight matinee at the Strand theater starting at 11:30 o'clock Saturday night. Al Jolson's "The Singing Fool" will play all day Saturday up to the time for the start of "Wings." Both are vitaphone pictures.

Woman Charged With Firing at Two Boys

SAN ANGELO, Oct. 12. (AP)—Mrs. George Cox of Knickerbocker, was released here today under $500 bond pending action of the grand jury on a complaint charging assault with intent to murder, filed against her by Dan Cockburn, 16, and Dick Cockburn, 8.

The two brothers testified that Mrs. Cox met them on a public road and, after harsh words, fired upon them. They were riding the same horse, they said, and the bullet passed between them.

Smith Speaks At Nashville

campaign. He again outlined his plan for modification of the Volstead act and a change in the 18th amendment to put prohibition on a states' rights basis, allowing wet states to be wet and dry states to remain dry.

Nashville Goes Wild

Nashville put on the show in a big way. It really started at Murphreesboro, where two planes from the 105th observation squadron met the Smith special and, flying low, escorted the train into the city. There a deafening din of whistles and sirens drowned the first shouts of the crowd at the appearance of the famous brown derby and the smiling Smith beneath it.

After parading through miles of crowd-lined streets, the throngs augmented by special trains and auto caravans which brought thousands of people from all parts of the state and nearby states, the governor held solemn conference with the party leaders in the state capitol.

In ripping into the power issue, the Democratic candidate said that he had "been patiently waiting" for some declaration from Hoover on that question, adding:

"I believed, and had the right to expect that, speaking in Tennessee, a state to be greatly benefited by public operation and control of Muscle Shoals, he would say something upon the subject that would give the American people an understanding of his attitude. To my great surprise, he did not even mention Muscle Shoals, but contented himself with the following general observation:

Quotes Hoover

"'There are local instances where the government must enter the business field as a by-product of some great major purpose such as improvement in navigation, flood control, scientific research or national defense.'

"I do not know what he can mean by 'by-product' unless it is the generation of hydro-electric energy. In another part of the speech, he said that violations of public interest by individuals or corporations 'should not induce us to abandon progressive principles and substitute in their place deadly and destructive doctrines.'

"I would like to know what Mr. Hoover means by 'deadly and destructive doctrines.' Does he refer to government ownership and control of water power sites? If so, why not say it? What is to be gained by clothing it in language that the man on the street is unable to understand? Is public ownership and public development of water power deadly? Is it a destructive doctrine? If so, why not let Mr. Hoover come right out and say:

"'I believe in leasing or in selling or in disposing of, to private coroprations for private developments and for private profit, the great water power resources that belong to all the people.'

The governor also launched into Hoover on the prohibition issue. Instead of suggesting a remedy for the admitted abuses of prohibition, the lack of law enforcement, graft and corruption, Smith declared that Hoover "expresses just the faint hope for its future success." He declared against a return of the saloon, pledged himself to law enforcement and to "wipe out the corruption and the bribery that have been so widespread in connection with the prohibition enforcement during the past seven and a half years of Republican administration."

In dealing with farm relief, the governor took a shot at Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, Republican vice presidential nominee, for voting for the McNary-Haugen bill and then voting to uphold the president's veto of the measure. He added:

"He could not have been right both times."

Once more the Democratic nominee endorsed the principle of the McNary-Haugen bill—to place the cost of marketing the surplus farm crops upon the product benefited. He added that Hoover offered no real alternative and the promises of the Republican platform were as empty as they were in 1924.

Gains Confidence

At the outset the governor said that the enthusiasm of the crowd gave him new confidence, "in the righteousness of the cause that I am fighting for" and closed by saying:

"On these issues I have talked plainly. That is what I have been trying to get my opponent to do, upon the theory that when the American people make their decision they will make it with a full knowledge of all the facts. And if that kind of a campaign can be conducted throughout the length and breadth of this land, I have not in my mind any doubt but what the Democratic party on the 6th of November will ride to a great national victory."

"That would define the issue. So why evade it?" Governor Smith declared Hoover had found that his reference to the problem was considered 'so vague and ambigious' that he subsequently issued two statements regarding Muscle Shoals but now his position is 'more involved than ever.' Referring to his own attitude, he said:

For Government Operation

"So far as Muscle Shoals is concerned, I said in my speech at Denver that I believe that the government should continue the full and complete development of that plant, retaining it under government ownership, operation and control.

"While it is true that it was a war measure and its purpose was to produce nitrates for explosives, the by-product of electrical energy can be used to promote industry and give cheap and reasonable rates for home, small stores and farm consumption."

Governor Smith then assailed President Coolidge for his pocket veto of the Norris bill of Muscle Shoals. He said that the question had been of "favorable to the rank and file of the people" in that measure and that "Mr. Hoover says he agrees" with the policy adopted by the president. He continued:

"As against that I promise the completion of the development under government ownership and control, which would reclaim to the government some fair revenue from the enormous expenditure already made for its improvement. When completed, the nation will be reimbursed, agriculture will receive its benefit of cheap nitrate production for fertilizer purposes and the surplus water power can be distributed fairly to the people of the 10 states which this plant could serve at rates which should remain under the control of the government and be fair and equitable.

People Have "Choice"

"The people of the country have their choice between my clear, clean-cut policy and the clear, clean-cut, staright forward policy of the Democratic platform and the evasion, ducking and dodging of the Republican platform and the Republican candidate."

Two of Three Juries Report on Cases

Two of three juries in district courts Friday reported in damage suits involving claims aggregating $122,000.

Cook in 78th district court the body could not reach a decision. Judge Cook dismissed the jury late Friday afternoon after the jurymen had deliberated since 9 o'clock Friday morning.

A jury in 89th district court rendered a verdict in favor of $950 damages for the plaintiff in the suit of McConnell Bros. against Harry Jaffe on a claim for $7000 damages. The firm alleged that stock in their furniture store in a building leased from Jaffe was damaged by dripping from a leaky roof.

A jury in 30th district court, Judge E. G. Thornton presiding, had not reached a decision in T. J. Porter's suit for damages against the Magnolia Petroleum company Friday night. The suit for $50,000 grew out of the drowning several months ago of Earl and Neva Sue Porter, children of the plaintiff.

Dorothy Dix Praises Woman Who Makes Brave Decision on Problem

How a Brave Woman Solved a Difficult Problem. Folly of Man Who Regrets His Wife's Domesticity. Shall This Boy Stay With His Selfish Sweetheart?

Dear Miss Dix—I was married fifteen years ago. I loved my husband then, as I do now, and he seemed to love me, and we were as happy as could be. We had three children and had an equity in a house in a pretty suburb, and everything seemed well with us.

Then two years ago my husband had to go away to another city on a big job for his firm. It seemed to be his great chance, and I rejoiced for him. He was gone ten months. During this time he met a woman with whom he fell in love. She was a gold-digger who had to have money, and he not only spent all he had on her, but borrowed money from his firm to give her. He did not pay his bills, but let even the payments on the house lapse, and he planned in some way to get rid of his family. He lied to this woman told her that he had only one child and that he could divorce me. And all of this time he was writing me home the most loving letters a wife ever got from a husband.

Well, now our home is in the hands of the court, and we are likely to lose it, and the children and I must go without things we need badly to pay back the money my husband borrowed to spend on this woman.

But am I going to leave him? No indeed. I am going to stand by my children and make their father be a man and support them and give them the education they deserve. It is his job as much as mine, and I am going to see to it that he sees it through. The children are working hard at school so they will be able to take care of themselves when they have finished, and I am preparing myself so I will be ready to make my own living. There will be no disgrace of divorce for my children, but the day my youngest child is 21 years old I will walk out of my husband's life. And when that day comes, just a little over ten years from now, I will be only 42 years old. A MOTHER.

Answer—I have quoted this woman's letter in full because it is one of the finest, bravest, most intelligent human documents I have ever seen, and because I hope that it will be an inspiration to many other women situated as she is. Here is a woman who faces her problems fairly and squarely and settles it in a commonsense way. She indulges in no hysterics of jealousy. She wastes no tears in maudlin self-pity.

She loves her husband and he has betrayed her. He has sacrificed her and his children to his passion for another woman. Nothing can alter that. Nothing can take the hurt out of her heart or give her back her lost faith, or restore her happy home to her.

But her husband's philandering does not keep him from being a money-maker and able to provide his children with the food, and the clothes, and an education, and the position in society to which they are entitled. And this wise and heroic mother determines to secure these good things to her children at any cost to herself.

So she does not fly off to the divorce court with her tale of wrong. She does not break up her home. She sets herself to the hard task of making her husband do his duty by his children. And you may be very sure she'll see it through.

This woman not only looks out for her children's future, but she prepares herself to make her own living so that she may be independent, and not forced to take a dole of alimony given by a grudging man. Hats off to such a woman! She is worthy of all honor and respect.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—My husband is in business for himself and is prosperous, but he demands that I go out and get a job. I don't want to work outside of my home. I love to keep house, and to cook and sew. Besides, I am not trained for business and never worked out before my marriage. My mother raised me to be a practical wife. I do my duty in making my husband a comfortable home, but I don't want to meet the public. I'm too shy and retiring and I don't want to live a business life. What must I do.—ELOISE.

Answer—The first thing for you to do is to have some competent alienist examine your husband. Something is radically wrong with the mind of any man who is married to a home-keeping woman who likes to cook and make things comfortable and who isn't satisfied with her and wants to change her.

Why, there are about seven million husbands in the United States who are pining and honing for that sort of wife. They are married to restless, discontented women who want to start gift shops, and go on the lecture platform, and be movie actresses, and do anything else on earth except stay at home and get dinner, and look after the children, and darn the socks, and sew on the buttons. Believe me, the great problem of the American husband is how to make home attractive enough to his wife to make her stay in it, and so I think a man who has been lucky enough to get a domestic woman is crazy if he wants to drag her out of her home and put her to work.

You are quite right to refuse to leave your home and go into business. Making the home is the woman's job in the matrimonial contract and when she has done that properly, she has done all that any woman ought to do, and all that any husband has a right to expect her to do.

No woman should ever work outside of her home and inside of it, too, because no woman has the physical strength to carry on two jobs at the same time. Tell your husband that if you work outside of the home, he will have to get another housekeeper, as you will not clerk, or keep books, or pound a typewriter all day and then come home and cook, and clean, and scrub.

If your husband thinks that you will help him by earning money outside of the home, he is mistaken. The best way you can possibly help him is by feeding him properly and ministering to his physical comfort. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I have left my home and the city where I had good prospects to come to another city where I have no prospects of even getting a job, because my sweetheart demands that I live in her home town. I love this girl dearly and want to marry her if I can prove successful here, but she refuses to leave her city and her family and go to where I could be a success. What shall I do?—PUZZLED YOUNG MAN.

Answer—Take the next train back to your own place, where you belong and where you can make money. The girl doesn't care much for you, and she would make you a poor wife if she isn't willing to follow your fortunes wherever they lead. And you may be very sure she will have nothing to do with you if you are a failure.

I have known many men who sacrificed their prospects to please the women they loved, but I have never known one of these women who appreciated the sacrifice, or who didn't reproach the man for not making money, even when she had been the cause of his failure.

So my advice to you is to go back to your job and make good at it. The girl will come to you if she cares for you, and if her city outrivals you, let it have her.—DOROTHY DIX.

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

Cherie's new dress is black crepe satin and is worth noticing for two of its features—the cowl collar and the short flaring flounce on the skirt. It's the flounce that makes it an example of the "Minaret" which Mr. Webster says is "A lofty tower . . . surrounded by one or more balconies." The flounce is a balcony!

Turned upside down, you know. Her suit is of the same cut. A suit of printed velvet with that same short flare below the waist. It used to be called a peplum, but this season it's a specimen of the minaret silhouette. Cherie likes it. It's about the newest sort of outline the season has offered up to this moment.

Evening gowns take to it particularly well. Cherie noticed a window display of evening frocks that all have balconies of a sort. The gown to the left is made of fine satin and the tiers are pleated. The black frock is of taffeta with circular flounces lined with silver. The lace frock is all lace and shows the essential feature of this silhouette in a single wired flounce. Because that's what we have come to—if the fabric doesn't flare enough it is puffed or wired out. It isn't enough to have tiers—they must flare at the sides so that they look like a pagoda, a Chinese temple, or, in short, like a minaret turned upside down.

Jimmy Constantin, he is really James Alford but is seldom called that—is going to be a doctor. Fortunately he chose that rather arduous calling himself, and if he hadn't his brothers might have wished one off on him. An older brother is going to be a lawyer, Jimmy will be a doctor and the youngest is to be a policeman, according to the manner the boys have the subject of callings "doped out."

Jimmy is the second son in the Jules Constantin family of 1110 Alma street. He has light hair but possesses lark dark eyes. The other boys are quite dark.

O' These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. (US)—A lady who has been reading the lengthy discussions as to whether political candidates were drunk or sober at certain stated times, says she is a loyal New Yorker, and she wants to say that Eugene Field settled that question once, as follows:

"He is not drunk who from the floor,
Can rise again and drink some more;
But he is drunk, who prostrate lies
And cannot drink and cannot rise."

Monkeys always have the cute habit of picking the pockets of everybody they meet. Usually it is considered an amusing performance. A lady in Los Angeles has a monkey who began emptying her husband's pockets the other night, took out a letter and handed it to the mama.

The lady wants big alimony with that divorce.

A business girl in New York cashed her pay check, lost her purse and is reconciled to the loss of the $100 cash. But she thought she might save a check for $1.50 that was in the purse, a dividend on some stock she owns. She wrote her broker in Chicago and was sent a long paper to sign, in many places, on many dotted lines. It must be sworn to before a notary who charged her a fee. Then she was told it should be looked at by someone else who would charge her another fee.

"And how much will that be?" she asked wearily.

"Oh about $1.50," said the clerk.

$1.75 to retrieve $1.50 didn't appeal to her. So she tore up the promise to return the check to the company if ever she found it and went home.

There is some sort of atmospheric change taking place, that is driving all divorced wives straight back into the arms of their first husbands. Four were heralded yesterday in the day's news, including two wealthy Chicago men, a prominent New York author, an Omaha historian, a Los Angeles banker and a violinist from the northwest.

Women are finding out that all men act about alike once you are married to them.

Invariably the wives who bring their husbands to court for having beaten them, once they get them before the judge, begin to plead for them and want them spared a jail sentence.

Yesterday a woman with two black eyes and a limp asked the court not to sentence the husband, and she would give him another trial. The court looked at her eyes and decided he would give the man at least six months in jail.

The woman began to weep copiously. "You can't do it," she said. "I won't testify against him. Now what are you going to do?" (This defiantly).

"I'm going to let him go home," said the court, "and when you have had plenty, come back."

A man suing his wife for divorce out in St. Louis, asked the court to make her return his satin kimona, his red satin slippers, some silk underwear, and his felt hat.

The court let him have the hat, and from the look he wore when he heard about the satin slippers you would think he had been boiled for nine minutes.

The wife said that the look on the judge's face was more fun than alimony.

TEA REPLACES OLD RECEPTION

Less Formality Is Shown in Modern Functions

IDA M. CHITWOOD
Noted Culinary Expert

The formal reception as a form of entertainment has been relegated to the past along with bustles and hips and ping pong, and has been replaced by the jollier, less formal afternoon tea. This may be of any proportions from the two or three intimates gathered together over a small tea table, to the large affair introducing a society bud.

For the larger functions the dining room table is laid with a pretty cloth; the tea service is at one end, and if men are invited, a service of coffee is surely at the other. If just women are coming, chocolate might be provided instead. If the time is summer, the table is usually out on the veranda or on the lawn, and the tea becomes an even less formal affair.

But for an indoor tea the shades are drawn and the table is lighted with candles. There is a handsome centerpiece of flowers, and both on the table and on the sideboard or buffet are small dishes of various kinds of candies and salted nuts so that a guest may help herself. Dishes of small and delicious sandwiches and cakes are either on the table within easy reach or they are passed by maids or by friends who are assisting.

The tea or coffee service is presided over by an intimate friend of the hostess, who usually knows most of the guests and says something agreeable to them as they pause beside her. While there are irreverent men who call this kind of party a "ta-fight," it will always be dear to the hearts of women who find it an easy as well as satisfactory way of dispensing hospitality.

ROAD ENGINEER RENEWS PLEA

Request for Machinery in Form of Ultimatum

AUSTIN, Oct. 12. (AP)—A virtual ultimatum that the state highway department would not be willing to issue shipping orders for or buy any road machinery which it does not approve, was added today to the highway department-board of control dispute, now concentrated on about $195,000 worth of tractors, rollers and trucks.

In a letter today to the control board, State Highway Engineer Gibb Gilchrist renewed his requisition of Tuesday for the equipment by name of supply company, brand and price. The requisition in this form was refused yesterday by 2 to 1 vote of the control board and Roy L. Tennant, purchasing agent member, was ordered to buy the 85 items specified, according to general description, with brand and price left to his discretion.

Chairman R. B. Walthall, who made the motion to this effect, said it was pursuant to a recent opinion of the attorney general holding the control board empowered to make its own choice of machinery within the general limits specified.

In his letter, Gilchrist said the board already has agreed with the highway department on the 85 items in question, as to price, brand and make and that "we cannot understand why the state of Texas cannot get the benefit of this machinery, in view of this, which you admit is true."

"I am stating the attitude of the state highway commission and myself," Gilchrist said, "when I say that we would not be willing to issue shipping instructions or to pay for machinery not clearly coming within our rights to select or which, from our own records, has proved to be unsatisfactory, and of which you have been advised."

Surgeon Removes His Own Appendix

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Oct. 12 (UP)—Dr. Robert Meals, Hollywood surgeon, was recuperating today from an operation for appendicitis which he performed on himself.

Using only a local anaesthetic, Dr. Meals made the incision, cut the inflamed appendix loose and then closed the wound.

Because the appendix was located so high and held by adhesions, he was forced to call on a physician to loosen it. Except for that one action, Dr. Meals performed the operation without assistance.

Dr. Meals said his idea in operating on himself was to study the reaction of a patient to such an operation and to determine if the shock of a full anaesthetic is not more harmful than the actual operation.

CARNES BILLED ON 14 COUNTS

More Indictments Against Official Expected

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 12. (INS)—Fourteen additional indictments were returned by the grand jury Thursday afternoon against Clinton S. Carnes, absconding treasurer of the Southern Baptist home mission board, making approximately $500,000 the total defalcations charged to him.

Three previous indictments alleged embezzlement of sums totaling $200,000. The new bills accused Carnes of taking from the mission board cash and securities worth around $250,000. With an indicated shortage of $953,000 in the board's books, other indictments are expected.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin did not recommend increase of Carnes' bond, which stands at $150,000.

Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? There is more hope of a fool than of him.—Prov. 22:12.

There is no room for love in a soul filled with the thirst for praise; nothing withers up the heart more than this fatal poison; it robs us of the most pure enjoyments and most modest emotions of which our soul is susceptible.—Vinet.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—In the roaring forties, where many interesting happenings are never chronicled and where many things that are recorded never happen, there is a unique bootblack parlor operated by five ebony gentlemen who have amusement, of a very high order, to offer while shining shoes. If it is the business of actors to amuse the public these boys are out to amuse the actors, which they do at a profit. They have a routine of talk that is wisecracking without being offensive; also a selected number of phonograph records to suit the mood. So you get shine, music and song.

Ambrose, the outside man, does a bally in front of the store that is fast and furious, but nevertheless effective. He has a mouth so big that he can whisper into his own ear, but unlike the average show with a barker, the big show is on the inside. If you don't care for music with your meals, but have no objection to it being served up with a shine, locate this place.

The amateur song writer is everywhere. It is not uncommon for a standard publisher to receive 500 compositions a day from non-professionals. Of course, but few of those are suitable for marketing, but the inflow is colossal and the ardor never seems to wane.

One of the boys in Tin Pan Alley, as this section is known, has facilities for obtaining the names of these would-be writers and circularizes them with a book "Hints to Amateur Songwriters." The responses have been quite large and as it cost very little to produce the book, which is sold for a dollar, he is clicking his cash register in a big way.

For some time it has been possible to obtain foreign hotel stickers and labels in this country. This practice has been indulged in by many who, seldom, if ever go abroad but get a thrill out of coving their luggage with these miniature posters and trying to convey the impression of being world travelers. Now comes the possibility of being able to get foreign post cards which you can address and have posted in various cities in Europe without leaving New York. Arrangements can be made with employes of steamship companies who will handle the whole thing efficiently and exact only a nominal charge.

Believe it or not, but a Park avenue hotel is serving special meals for dogs. The price is 50 cents and the meal is served on a blue plate in the guests rooms. The dog, or who-ever does the ordering, has the choice of two kinds of meat and the rest of the meal is made up of vegetables. This same hostelry also boasts of a dog laundry, where clothes are washed to the queen's taste. We haven't a price list before us, but we are informed that the charges are not exorbitant. In a word, this seems to be a dog gone swell hotel.

A Peril of Prosperity

PROSPERITY sometimes brings with it unsuspected dangers.

Max Ruben, secretary of a Detroit motion picture operators' union, announced the other day that his union had a fund of $200,000 for use in case a strike was called.

A few days later Ruben was kidnaped. The police investigated and learned, they say, that he was being held for ransom. Someone, apparently, decided that if the union had that much money it could spend a little to get its secretary back.

We don't know what the moral of all this is—unless it be that it's never wise to make too much noise about the great wealth you have.

Mrs. Rothenthal Passes

MRS. LILLIAN ROSENTHAL died in a New York hospital the other day. And if that name doesn't recall anything to your memory, we'll add that she was the widow of Herman Rosenthal, for whose murder Police Lieutenant Charles Becker and four gangsters died in the electric chair.

Rosenthal was a gambler. District Attorney Whitman, later governor, was investigating police department graft. Rosenthal was to tell all he knew. The night before he was to testify four gangsters shot him dead. They were arrested, Lieutenant Becker was found to be involved, and all were executed.

It is said that on the night of Becker's electrocution Mrs. Rosenthal refused to go to bed until she learned that the execution had taken place. Now, with the old enmities forgotten, she herself dies in peace—and puts the famous Rosenthal murder one more notch farther back in history.

Defense Against Planes

IT WAS a highly instructive session that the U. S. army authorities put in at the Aberdeen proving grounds the other day, when they tested the latest weapons they have devised.

Interesting is the fact that anti-aircraft fire proved more effective than ever before. New methods of range-finding and sighting made the new three-inch guns deadly. A small target towed 5,000 feet high received 10 direct hits in a few moments.

This indicates that the defense, once more, is catching up with the attack. At various times in the history of warfare new inventions have been brought out that seemed absolutel, unstoppable; but always, in the course of time, defensive devices have been perfected to equal them. The two kinds of war seem fated to remain pretty well balanced.

Analyzing Beauty

AND NOW they're telling us that Indian summer isn't all that it's cracked up to be.

A chemist in the Chicago health department has analyzed Indian summer sunlight. Shuddering, he reports that it is deficient in actinic rays, and, accordingly, less healthful than the brighter sunshine of midsummer.

Indian summer, he feels, is "all right for a visit, but you couldn't hire him to live there."

Now this is quite in the American tradition. We're so accustomed to analyzing things, from industrial steel to moonbeams, that we can't let anything alone. We have a passion for finding out the cold-facts utiltiy of everything. We don't ask if a given object or institution is beautiful, enjoyable or pleasing; we ask if it is useful. If it is, fine; if not, out the window with it. Are we not a nation that boasts a radio, an automobile and a household budget in every home?

That's fair enough, to be sure. But sometimes we seem to be transplanting our favorite cost-accounting system bodily into the realm of spiritual and aesthetic values. When we do, we shall, like the blind man led by a blind man, topple forthwith into a ditch.

For there are things that even an efficient American can't analyze. To scrutinize Indian summer sunlight in a laboratory is to be woefully blind. Indian summer wasn't meant to be healthful; it was meant to be something better. It is as much a state of mind as it is anything; in it, a man can step out of the frenzied daily pace and watch the age-old miracle of scarlet-clad death laying the seeds of an invincible new life—and thereby, if he is wise, gain for himself knowledge about his own destiny that will out-value all the laboratory experiments between here and Gehenna.

Every now and then some playwright or novelist has a nightmare in which he sees America as a nation of Robots—soulless, mechanized individuals that function on the spiritual level of the machines they operate.

Bad dreams don't often come true. Yet sometimes we seem to be headed in that direction. We can analyze Indian summer sunlight, dissect moonlight, make synthetic rose petals and calculate the horsepower engendered by white surf on a golden beach; and, wrapped up in these pursuits, we can come close to losing our immortal souls.

SOONER POLITICS SHOW LIFE

There can be no doubt that there has been a great change of sentiment in the political situation in Oklahoma in the last month, and that this change has been in favor of Governor Smith and the Democratic ticket.

A month ago where the Democratic committee seemed only a mere formal affair, waiting to see which way to jump, today it is an active, effectively functioning political organization, operating in a highly intelligent and effective manner. Its appeal is being made to the reason and the loyalty of its party members, and not to passion or prejudice.

"WOMAN POWER" ORGANIZED

Sometimes it is hard to trace any very definite results of the "woman's vote" in an American election.

But Omaha held an election the other day in which the fair sex most decidedly settled the outcome.

Omaha uses atificial gas in its kitchen stoves. A new company offered to pipe in natural gas all the way from Texas.

But in a special election held to decide the matter, Omaha turned down the natural gas offer by an overwhelming vote.

The women did it. Because it was widely reported that natural gas flames would make pots and pans dirty, while artificial gas wouldn't.

Chalk up one case where the housewife's vote was all important.

The Room Under the Stairs

The Baffling Story of a Man Who Read of His Own Murder

By HERMAN LANDON

Copyright by G. Howard Watt — Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

Synopsis of Preceding Installments

Thomas Dean, well-known writer of mystery novels, has hidden from the world the fact that he is really

Paul Forrester, who as a youngster had been raised up in a breech of promise suit and had figured in a self-defense killing out west some years before, from which encounter he still bears a knife scar on his neck. Dean is therefore astounded to read the death-bed confession of

Martin Lamont, western business man, in New York on a visit, in which he repents the murder of Paul Forrester five years before. This confession is witnessed by

Dennis Littleby, famous lawyer, at whose home the dying man is visiting, and

Dr. John Ballinger, well-known physician. Identification of the body, found in "The Room Under the Stairs," in Dean's deserted family house, is made by

Lieutenant Shane, of the police, who also finds a watch bearing the initials "P. F." Revisiting the house, Dean discovers pieces of a broken watch crystal at the scene of the murder, and is surprised at the sudden entrance of Littleby, who seems upset over Dean's find. Matters are further complicated by a strange young lady

Viola Gray, who tries to connect one of Dean's stories with Forrester's secret.

A visit to the notary who took the confession reveals that Lamont seemed to have a peculiar dread of the telephone.

That night Dean outwits a hired assassin, Freddie Mills, and forces the man to give the signal by telephone that his night's work has been successful and Dean supposedly killed.

A chance encounter with the mysterious Miss Gray proves startling, as she shows terror at seeing Dean alive.

A chance encounter with the mysterious Miss Gray proves startling, as she shows terror at seeing Dean alive.

Dr. Ballinger also seems stunned by Dean's appearance.

Screams

Again, as on his first visit to the lawyer's house, Dean was impressed by its gloomy aspect and the chill breath it exhaled. Its very immensity seemed forbidding, and the dreary walls of stone and stucco with a row of darkly shuttered windows on the upper floor, intensified its atmosphere of desolation. The central part had evidently been built on Colonial lines, but subsequent additions had failed to adhere to the original scheme, producing a singularly discordant effect. Creepers clung listlessly to the murky walls, as if having despaired early in life of their ambition to attain the roof. The very grass on the lawn had a sickly look, as if withered by some poisonous breath, and the thin scattering of gaunt and surly oaks had an undernourished appearance.

As he turned in at the gate Dean's glance slid along the lengthy rows of windows, arranged with painful exactness and an eye to rigorous symmetry. The vastness of the house, as he saw it with the waning shimmer of the sun gilding its roof, might have been designed with a view to providing ample play for the forces of evil that seemed to be hovering over the sick man's bed.

He was admitted by the same female servant who had answered the bell when he called in the company of Lieutenant Shane, and evidently she recognized him, for she did not inquire his business until he was inside.

"I have just seen Dr. Ballinger," he told her. "He referred me to Miss Farnham. Don't trouble to show me the way. It's the second door to the left, I remember."

He started up the stairs before she could voice a protest. Of a sudden he had conceived the notion that it might be interesting to come face to face with the nurse without being announced. It was just possible—since nothing seemed to be beyond the pale of possibility of late—that his unheralded appearance would have the same startling effect on Miss Farnham as it had exerted on Miss Gray and the physician. The prospect was diverting in a grim, sardonic way, but he saw the shallowness of it before he was half way up the stairs. More than an hour had passed since he left Ballinger's house, and in the meantime the physician had had ample time to warn the nurse, granting that she was involved in the conspiracy.

Leaving the stairs, he turned in the upper hall and knocked on the door to the sickroom. He gave but a gentle rap, so as not to disturb the sufferer unduly. No response came, and after a brief wait he knocked again, this time a little harder. Still no response; the measured taps seemed swallowed up in an immensity of silence. At length unthinkingly, he turned the knob slowly in his hand. A groan, low and feeble yet startlingly impressive made him fling the door wide.

He muttered an exclamation under his breath at the sight that met his eyes. A shaded light in a wall fixture cast a subdued illumination over the room. Probably the nurse had stepped out, for she was nowhere in sight, and in an instant the man on the bed claimed his full attention. With head and shoulders straining violently toward the little table beside the bed, the one on which the telephone stood, Lamont was occupying a half recumbent, half sitting position while his shaking hand held the receiver to his ear.

For a moment or two Dean stood spellbound before the spectacle, gripped by the awful fascination of the wild look that distorted the sick man's face. His gaunt body was writhing with slow terror. Huge drops of moisture beaded his ashen grotesquely twitching face. His sunken chest heaved as if racked by untold agonies, while now and then a fragmentory groan broke from his lips.

Dean stood motionless, momentarily shaken by the sight. He remembered the terrorized look that had come into Lamont's face when, on the first visit to the room, the sick man's glance had chanced to fall on the telephone. In a moment he realized that the cause of the sufferer's present anguish was that same telephone.

Whatever it was that Lamont heard as he crouched on the edge of the bed with the receiver pressed to his ear, it must be something that inspired him with a great, overwhelming fear.

Firmly Dean disengaged his cramped fingers from the instrument. The sick man looked up, a look of astonishment mingling with the horror stamped on his face, as if now for the first time aware of another man's presence in the room. He uttered a raucous protest, but the receiver was already at Dean's ear, filling his senses with horrible, jangling sounds.

His face grew dark and tense. It was diabolical! The instrument in his hand skemed alive with hideous sounds. He heard a scream, long and piercing, edged with a freezing anguish. The voice was a woman's. Another scream came, followed by a medley of cries and moans and a hubbub of rushing feet. Then silence.

He thrust the telephone from him as if it were a venomous thing. A mostrous discord was echoing in his ears. It seemed to fill the room with horrible sounds. He looked at Lamont, leaning weakly against the pillows, his chest heaving with labored breathing.

"Who was it?" he asked. "Where did it come from?"

The sick man's lips twisted open. There was a look in his straining eyes, fixed shudderingly on Dean's face, that seemed to clamor for vocal expression, but no words came. In the next moment it seemed as if an alien power had sealed his lips. He uttered a groan, and his head sank a little deeper among the pillows.

"It's all right. There will be no more of that," Dean assured him, scarcely knowing the meaning of his words, his only thought being to quiet the sufferer. He glanced toward the door, and suddenly he felt that he must not be found there. He had made a discovery, though as yet he did not know what it meant. If he were to follow it up, it was best that his visit to the room should remain a secret between the sick man and himself. He moved a little closer toward the bed.

"I am your friend,' he whispered, then paused for a momeit. There was a bit of grotesquerie in his declaration of friendship for a man who by his own confession was his murderer. "Everything will be all right. But you mustn't tell any one that I have been here. Will you promise?"

A light of understanding broke through the film of dread in Lamont's eyes. He nodded, and then his eyes slid downward a little, to the point where Dean's collar obscured the scar on his neck. With a little shiver Dean reacted to the incongruity of the moment, then quickly left the room and closed the door behind him. In Lamont's stricken face he had seen a sign which told him that the sick man would tell no one of his visit to the room.

He turned toward the stairs, but ascending footsteps made him pause. Looking down the dusky, winding stairway he saw some one with white headdress.

He had no desire for an encounter, so he decided to proceed upward instead of down. The third story of the building, whose shuttered windows he had seen from the outside, should contain a number of nooks in each of which he could hide securely while planning what to do next. Lightly, he swung up the carpeted stairs, reaching the landing just as he heard the door to the sickroom open. The nurse was returning to her patient.

It was very still up there, scarcely a sound penetrating from the lower floors, but his head seemed full of shrill echoes. Those fearful cries! Each haunting echo sent a shiver down his spine. He felt a tingling horror each time they were recreated in his imagination. What had they meant? Did Lamont, vacillating on the brink of the black abyss, know their significance? If so, why had not he—? But Dean's mind reeled beneath a welter of incomprehensible things. All he knew was that the cries had been uttered by a woman, wrung from the depths of a soul in anguish.

At random he had entered one of the rooms bordering upon the long hall. The air was stale in there, as if sun and wind had not freshened is in months. The furnishings with their white draperies, looked ghostly in the darkness. Evidently he was in a part of the house that had not been used of late, having probably been closed soon after the death of Littleby's wife. Moving guardedly in the gloom, he stepped to one of the windows, raised it a few inches, and opened the shutter.

The sun had set and black clouds were rolling up over the horizon. There was a sultriness in the air that presaged a stormy night. The lights of the town glimmered tranquilly in the heat waves that clung to earth like a quivering mist. He was looking out upon a back yard, cluttered with an accumulation of shadowy objects, with a high stone wall in the rear. From one of the houses on the opposite street came the strains of a violin, breaking in upon his reflections with a curiously irrelevant note.

Those cries? In Dean's mind they had already obliterated the significance of little Miss Gray's blanching cheeks and Dr. Ballinger's brief but tell-tale discomfiture. The mystery had taken a new and appalling turn. Until now it had been only a fantastic web of incongruities, but now the woof was stained crimson with tragedy. Of a sudden he recalled the unearthly pause that had followed the cries, swallowing up time and space in its immensity. Did it mean that someone had died—been murdered, perhaps?

The speculation brought a quickening impulse to his brain. When he left Lamont's room, with mind awhirl, he had formed a shadowy resolution to trace the cries to their origin. How to go about it he did not know, and to solve the difficulty he had sought a few moments of undisturbed reflection. The cries had sounded quite close, and they might easily have been transmitted from one part of the house to another by the mere turn of a switch.

Yet, distances were deceptive on the telephone wire, and he was no longer certain what he ought to do. Perhaps the sensible thing was to tell some one what he had heard.

Eavesdropping

But whom was he to confide in? The least incautious move might only aggravate matters, and since his recent encounters with Miss Gray and Dr. Ballinger, he felt a great reluctance toward trusting any one. Littleby, the master of the house, was logically the man to notify, but he was as suspicious of the lawyer as of any of the others. Shane, perhaps—but Shane had politely intimated that he regarded Dean as a liar, if nothing worse. He could picture in imagination the dubious twinkle that would come into the lieutenant's eyes if he should venture to describe the screams he had heard. It was not a story that could be documented and verified, and Shane was a stickler for evidence. Lamont could substantiate it if he would, but would he? Dean remembered the rigid set of the sick man's lips when he asked for an explanation, as if a power outside himself had clamped them shut. There were the local police, but they might not take his story any more seriously than Shane would. It would be hard to convince them that such sensational things could happen in the house of the estimable Dennis Littleby, and any perfunctory inquiries they might make would only aggravate matters and put the guilty persons on their guard. For the present, at least, Dean was thrown on his own resources.

Faint mutterings of thunder sounded in the distance. Near the horizon, pallid streaks of lightning played along the velvety blackness. Dean struck a match and glanced at his watch. It was a few minutes after 9. He closed the shutters, lowered the window, and crept noiselessly down the second flight of stairs. It seemed as if an irresistible magnetism were drawing him back toward the room where Lamont lay, hemmed in by inscrutable terrors.

His imaginary picture of the sick man made him relax his caution. The staircase was but dimly lighted, and at a turn his foot slipped and struck one of the pillars in the balustrade. The resultant noise seemed appallingly loud. He stopped and listened, uncertain whether to proceed or turn back, but a voice close by quieted his misgivings. The calm, casual tone assured him that his clumsiness had escaped notice, but the words themselves sent a thrill through his body:

"But what's in a scar?"

The voice, subdued and mildly incredulous, was Dr. Ballinger's. Dean, his hands clutching the stairway railing, waited a moment, and then the answer came. The speaker was Littleby.

"Everything or nothing. By dear doctor. It depends upon circumstances."

IF

If we knew our best friend's heartbeats,
And the life within his blood
Would be silenced on the morrow,
We would treat him as we should.
We would line his path with roses
That he treads upon today;
And we'd praise him, cheer him, laud him;
We would glorify his way.

We neglect to praise his virtues
Till his spark of life has flown;
Like the springtime, we don't miss him
Until he is dead and gone.
It is strange that warmth and sunshine
Never seem so clean and fair
As when winter's icy fingers
Tremble in the bitter air.

NEBRASKA IS FARM SALIENT

Smith Hopes to Win by Relief Promises

By D. FIELD BRITTLE

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 12. (AP)—To all appearances Nebraska is the major farm relief salient of the presidential battle.

Since Alfred E. Smith selected it for his first campaign speech the state has been bathed in continuous fire from big guns whose dominant note has been welfare of agriculture. There is every indication now that when the Cornhuskers go to the polls within less than a month, the farmer and his problems will have most to do with allocating Nebraska's eight electoral votes.

Now that the other pressing issues of the day have been neglected, for Nebraskans have sampled every item on the campaign menu and all of them are expected by party leaders to be of decisive value, notably prohibition and religion.

Both Parties Confident

When managers of Herbert Hoover's campaign take into consideration that the state usually is Republican and dry by accepted standards, and hear reports that Governor Smith has lost favor with the farmers since his Omaha speech three weeks ago, they contend with more than their former confidence that Nebraska will stand by the party.

Democratic claims are no less emphatic, however, the Smith leaders depending upon a combination of circumstances to aid their cause.

The fact that Governor Smith has told Nebraska farmers that he approves the principle of the McNary-Haugen relief bill is being relied on by his managers to draw support from those who originally fought for that measure and who wanted Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, as their standard bearer. They look also to the block of voters of foreign extraction to support Smith on the prohibition issue, but, as everywhere else, religion entered that field as a double-edged sword.

Bryan's Dry Tradition

It was not remarkable that Nebraska, home of William Jennings Bryan, should quickly take up the debate on prohibition.

Outside of the usual wet sentiment found in all states, Democrats are hopeful of support chiefly among the German populace, estimated to make up about one-third of the total vote.

Against the fact that the Germans once were normally Democratic in this state stands another fact that most of them are Lutherans, who for age-old reasons might object to voting for a Catholic. With the Germans and other foreigners the twin consideration of prohibition and religion make up a situation whose exact analysis in actual votes neither side has been able to write down in more than general terms.

Another factor, weight still in mid-air, is the undoubted influence wielded here by Senator Norris, Republican of determined independence at times. He has commented favorably on Governor Smith's speeches and has done nothing for Hoover, although he is supporting Senator Howell for re-election and Howell is advocating Hoover. Some Democrats say that Norris before long will endorse Smith, but the senator remains silent.

He is closely identified with the element which threw some 106,000 votes to La Follette four years ago, and where that vote will go this time is one of the nice problems.

Bryans Brother Runs

The governorship race, which finds Charles, brother of William Jennings Bryan, again contesting for the post against the Republican, Arthur J. Weaver, also is listed by Smith managers as a source of support for the presidential nominee.

Bryan is actively stumping the state and is speaking for the national ticket on the farm relief issue and is talking tax reduction on his own account. Not all of the state's Democrats are for Smith, however, a notable defection being that of Dr. Jennie Calfas, former national committeewoman and now a Hoover supporter.

Governor of Maryland Criticized for Address

CHICAGO, Oct. 12. (UP)—Governor Albert C. Ritchie's Chicago speech, in which he pleaded for religious freedom, has created a furore among Republican leaders here, who are openly accusing Ritchie of trying to inflame the Catholics of the city against Herbert Hoover.

James W. Good, western Republican campaign manager, issued a statement in which he criticized the Maryland governor for "seeking to stir up religious prejudice in a city internationally known for tolerance."

GRAYS CREEK, N. C., Oct. 12 (UP)—Gov. Angus McLean of North Carolina favors a change in the national prohibition laws similar to that recommended by Gov. Alfred E. Smith, he said in a speech here. Those were dark days for Woodrow Wilson after the Senate rejected his ideal of world peace, the League of Nations. Stricken by a physical breakdown in 1919, he remained an invalid until the day of his death. During the rest of his term he was able to give attention only to the more important problems of government.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health."

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

Inflammation of the Eye

Inflammation of the eyeball, termed conjunctivitis, is indicated by a reddish bloodshot appearance, usually accompanied by a discharge from the mucous membranes of the eye and may be caused by several distinct diseases.

The most frequent disease that attacks the eye is acute catarrhal inflammation which causes a bright redness on the surface of the eyeball, with a feeling of pain and dryness, extreme sensitiveness to light and a copious mucus secretion, at first having the consistency of tears. This turns into a glue-like pus as the disease progresses and may even fasten the eyelids together during the night.

This disease frequently follows measles, smallpox, influenza, colds and scarlet fever. Sometimes the disease, instead of being acute, is chronic in nature and lasts for a longer time, but usually without as violent symptoms.

A chronic catarrh of the eye may be caused by eye strain, irritation from foreign particles, smoke or other causes. The eye is reddened, but there is not as large a supply of mucus present.

Another type of inflammation of the eye, or conjunctivitis, is known as trachoma, and is often called granulated eyelids. In this disease, small pus lumps appear on the under surface of the eyelids. This disease is quite contagious and is usually carried from one person to another by towels or by the hands.

There is another very dangerous type of conjunctivitis that often results in blindness resulting from a gonorrheal infection that may be carried either on towels or the hands. This disease begins very much like the acute conjunctivitis but also causes a pronounced swelling of the front of the eyeball, accompanied by a thick pus discharge. The eyelids are sometimes so greatly enlarged as to be pushed forward entirely concealing the eyeball. There is a severe pain and tenderness accompanied by some fever.

This disease frequently results in blindness, as it may produce a sloughing off of the corner or front of the eye, and permit the escape of the gelatinous interior of the eyeball. Even if this does not occur, the cornea usually becomes more or less opaque. The disease is very contagious. A sad part is that this disease often occurs in babies about the third day after birth from infection during birth. Practically every nation now requires that the doctor place some weak antiseptic in the baby's eyes as a protection against this occurring.

The simpler types of conjunctivitis can be handled with an acid fruit fast, and the renewed application of cold wet cloths to the eyes.

A person with conjunctivitis should of course be kept away from the possibility of infecting others, and his eyes should be guarded against light until the inflammation has subsided. The gonorrheal type of conjunctivitis is very dangerous, and while a fasting regime accompanied by wet compresses is helpful, it is also necessary that your doctor employ antiseptic measures to overcome this trouble in its early stages before it has an opportunity to destroy the precious eyesight.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Extracting a Wisdom Tooth

Question: M. C. writes: "I have been having trouble with my wisdom teeth. Is it necessary to have these extracted?"

Answer: I do not advise extracting wisdom teeth unless they are badly decayed or so far out of their normal position as to injure the jaw or other teeth. The wisdom tooth is as valuable as any other tooth, and it assists in filling out the jaw. Better get the opinion of more than one dentist.

Prolapsed Stomach

Question: Mrs. R. D. S. writes: "I am very interested in your health and diet advice, and would like to ask what causes fallen or low stomach and intestines. Is this a serious condition? What can be done for same by diet or exercise?"

Answer: Prolapsus of the stomach and intestines comes from the abdominal muscles being too weak to hold these organs in position. Since man has learned to walk upright it has been found necessary to develop the abdominal muscles to an extraordinary degree, or the abdominal viscera tends to slip down into the lowest part of the pelvis. Exercises, particularly those taken while lying on the back, are a sure coure, but must be persistent in even for months to get complete results. Diet has an effect only as it influences the general health and strength.

Gray Hair

Question: Mrs. W. F. asks: "Is there any kind of food one should eat that would bring more color to the hair when it is beginning to turn gray?"

Answer: The use of plenty of green vegetables unquestionably has some effect on preventing the graying of hair, but there is no one single food I know of which is a specific to be used in keeping the hair its natural color.

Mae West is one of the outstanding personages in theatrical lights. Her career began at the age of 6, when Mae caught a subway in Brooklyn, rode over to Manhattan and entered vaudeville. She started out as a singer, developed into a singer, then an acrobat and acrobatic dancer. Later she was a musical comedy headliner and finally graduated as an emotional actress, playwright and producer. She has written and produced three "sexessful" Broadway plays and her fourth play will soon go into rehearsal.

"I get a big kick," Mae told me, "out of the story about the fellow who met a sweet young thing on the street corner.

"'May I come to see you at 4 o'clock this afternoon?' he asked.

"'I'm afraid you can't,' replied the sweet young thing. 'You see, I'm a clothes model at the department store, and at 4 o'clock I have to model fur coats.'

"'Then at 4:30?'

"'No, I model evening dresses then.'

"'Sorry, but at 5 I model lingerie.'

"'Gee, honey. I hope you will let me see you at 8.'"

PONIES AND COWBOYS READY FOR GRID BATTLE HERE TODAY

NOTED S. M. U. STARS TO PLAY

Simmons Is Out to Hold Vaunted Mustang Foe

ened by the arrival of the Simmons eleven and many of their adherents. Not that anybody, probably the most ardent Cowboy admirer, expects victory for the Abilene institution. But the question that waxed fast and furious was the ability of Coach Frank Bridges' warriors to hold the Ponies to a "respectable" score; respectable varying from two to four touchdowns.

The Cadets of the Army failed to tame the wild Mustangs of S. M. U. on the plains of West Point and the opinion is that the Cowboys will not tame the Ponies on the plains of Wichita Falls. Folks who knew their football, however, are not underestimating the strength of the Cowboys, nor the coaching ability of the diminutive Frank Bridges. Simmons fought the T. C. U. Horned Frogs to a 19-3 score last week at Breckenridge. The Cowboys are prepared to throw their greatest resources into today's fray, knowing that a creditable showing against the vaunted Mustangs of national fame will do more perhaps to increase the prestige of their school than victories over other opponents of this season.

Bridges Has Tricks

Bridges, who a few years ago coached a Baylor eleven that won the championship of the Southwestern conference, has been drilling his men on smashing the Pony aerial attack, that dazzling overhead game that bewildered the Cadets and was said to have been the greatest display of forward passing ever seen in the East. It would not be surprising, knowing the tactical genius of Bridges, if his team does succeed to a great extent in rendering impotent the passing of the Methodists. Too, Bridges all season is said to have reserved some of his own favorite offensive tactics for today's game and when he opens his bag of tricks the S. M. U. gridders may be in for some bewilderment on their own account.

The contending teams are prepared to hurl their full strength into today's battle. Except for the usual bruises and bumps incidental to the life of a moleskin hero the players of both teams emerged unscathed from last week's hard games.

There may be psychological angles to the game to react favorably for the Cowboys. One is that they are playing as the "underdog," and football history is replete with the example of outsiders who have arisen to smite the favorites. Too, it may be that the letdown, mentally and physically, following the pointing to and playing of the Army game will tend to decrease the power of S. M. U. to some extent.

Cowboys Limited

On the other hand, though not so important, it might be argued that the Simmons lads themselves had a strenuous battle last week. Too, they are playing with a limited squad, as their freshmen are ineligible, with today's game played under rules of the Southwest conference, which bars first-year men.

Wichita Falls, however, is not concerned over the victor. It is neutral, and will attend today's game only for the opportunity served to see real college football played by superb elevens.

Redman Hume, left halfback, and Sammie Reed, quarterback, of S. M. U., will be centers of interest. It was this pair of glittering players who passed and ran rings around the Army. Ross Love, Hume's halfback running mate and of particular brilliance as a defensive back, and Pat Knieff, the plunging, tearing fullback, will complete the ball-toting quartet which Coach Ray Morrison is said to plan to start against the Cowboys.

Two Veteran Ends

Leading the array of stalwart Methodists is Captain Baccus, the mighty left guard, with Hammon, a line star in the Army game, at left tackle. Dutch Daniels and Brown, the giant, will be at right guard and tackle, respectively. Saufley probably will start at center in place of Powell, who still feels the effects of the battering suffered in the Army encounter.

A pair of veteran ends, and a great duo they are, too, Harry Waters on the left flank and Charlie Trigg on the right, will be at the wing posts.

Capt. Red Moore, himself a star end, will lead a husky and fast Simmons eleven. Local interest will be centered on "Uncle" Joe Smith, a home town boy and a former star of one of the greatest Wichita Falls high school elevens. Smith plays left tackle.

Daniels is at left end with Captain Moore on the right side. Pearce is the other likely starting tackle, and C. Daniel, Jennings and Ribble will complete the wall.

Hyde and Walters, a pair of fine quarterbacks, are at Bridges' disposal but the mentor indicated last night that the former probably would be given starting preference. Sanders at left half, Kuhn, right half and Harvey, fullback, are other likely starters.

Noted football men will officiate in today's game. The referee will be Pete Cawthorn of Austin college. Joe Utay, an outstanding figure for years in college football in Texas, will be umpire. Theron Fouts and King Gill will be other officials.

Lending solor to today's game will be the presence of the picturesque bands of the rival institutions. The 50-piece Red and Blue band of S. M. U., which was so enthusiastically received at West Point, and the Cowboy band of the Purple and Gold of Simmons will vie in a display of music, noise and stunts. The 48-piece Simmons band is coming to the game from San Antonio, where it has been playing at the American Legion convention, making the trip here by motor bus.

The Simmons squad and several followers arrived in town shortly after noon yesterday. Coach Bridges hustled his gridders out to Spudder park where he sent them through a brief but snappy drill, a final tuning-up. The session was held behind locked gates.

Ponies Here Today

More than 300 Simmons and Abilene rooters will attend the game, most of them making the trip today in a motorcade. Team and fans are quartered at the Holt hotel.

Boss Morrison leads his Pony club into town today at noon. They were to leave Dallas early this morning, by special train, accompanied by their band and a delegation of rooters. They will have headquarters at the Kemp hotel.

The sale of tickets proceeded yesterday at the Renfro drug store, but word last night was that many choice ducats, box and reserve seats and of course general admission, still are available.

WESTERN GRIDS HOLD INTEREST

Irish-Navy and Big Ten Affairs Feature

(By United Press)

The eve of the first important Saturday of the 1928 football season found the nation's attention largely focused upon the middle west.

Although each has been defeated, the game at Soldiers' field between the Navy and Notre Dame promises to provide the most colorful, and possibly the most dramatic spectacle of the day, while on four midwestern gridirons, campaigning for the championship of the Big Ten begins.

The battles for the Western conference title, which start today, find eight of the contenders, three with high championship hopes, swinging into action.

Big Ten Contenders

Whereas before the 1928 season opened, Illinois was rated a certain winner among the Big Ten teams, the past fortnight has proved that Minnesota and Ohio State are pointing towards the championship. Today's games will tell the story.

The Navy and Notre Dame are headed nowhere as far as national honors of 1928 are concerned, yet nearly 120,000 spectators are expected at Soldiers' field. Chicago is ablaze with the colors of the contenders and save for the unseasonably warm weather, the city has something of the atmosphere of championship football. The Big Ten engagements are:

Iowa vs. Chicago at Chicago.

Ohio State vs. Northwestern at Evanston.

Purdue vs. Minnesota at Minneapolis.

Indiana vs. Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Wisconsin and Illinois, alone among the conference elevens, are engaging weak outsiders in games which do not count toward the championships.

Iowa, Ohio State and Minnesota are up against tests described as acid. Each must come through with a victory to retain its title ambitions. Each is favored to win by a small margin.

Stars Will Play

The Hawkeyes will present Mayes McLain, their celebrated Indian ball carrier, against the Maroon at Chicago, while at Minneapolis "Pest" Welch, who has been saved for the first conference game of the year following his baseball injuries, will go into action against the Gophers. Welch will be remembered nationally as the young man who assisted so materially when Perdue overwhelmed Harvard last season.

Ohio State, crippled by the loss of Kruskamp, Kriss and Huston, worked out at Dyche stadium yesterday in preparation for the game with Northwestern. The Buckeyes are favorites over the Purple, relying in no small measure upon the generalship and all around ability of Allen Holman, sophomore quarterback.

Michigan is not expected to figure strongly in the conference race this season and Indiana is favored to open the "big ten" race with a victory.

YALE-GEORGIA EAST FEATURE

Blue Out to Reverse 1927 Win of Southerners

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. (AP)—The football season in the east now reaches the stage where leading college teams get down to business of taking on powerful rivals in traditional battles.

Outstanding games of this sort on tomorrow's program are those in which Pittsburgh entertains West Virginia at Pittsburgh, and New York university stacks up against Fordham at the Polo grounds, New York.

With teams as strong as any in their history, Pitt and N. Y. U. were victorious by one-sided margins in these games last year, the scores being 40 to 0 and 32 to 0, respectively, but the record of both series has indicated that when rivals such as these get together almost anything may happen.

Another Fight Here

Another game in which the contending teams have something to fight for is that between Penn State and Bucknell at State college. One of the surprises of the 1927 season was Bucknell's victory over its bigger rivals, 13 to 7, and the Staters are out to wipe that reverse off the slate with a one-sided win of their own.

Colgate likewise will have a powerful incentive in its game with Virginia Polytechnic institute at Hamilton, N. Y., as last season the "Three Grenadiers" of the southern backfield led their team to an astonishing 6 to 0 triumph over the proud Maroon.

Yale, too, was upset in 1927 by the team that it encounters tomorrow—the University of Georgia.

Harvard, Princeton Play

Harvard and Princeton also take on southern opponents, North Carolina playing at Cambridge and Virginia at Princeton. These invading teams are rated as strong but not dangerous opponents.

Brown meets the University of Dayton, an intersectional foe of uncertain strength, at Providence. Holy Cross and Rutgers play on neutral territory at Newark, N. J.

Other noteworthy games tomorrow are Army vs. Providence, Carnegie Tech vs. Thiel, Columbia vs. Wesleyan, Cornell vs. Hampden-Sidney, Dartmouth vs. Allegheny, Georgetown vs. Lebanon valley, Lafayette vs. George Washington, Lehigh vs. Gettysburg, Pennsylvania vs. Swarthmore, Washington and Jefferson vs. Duquesne, and Syracuse vs. Johns Hopkins.

Walter Johnson to Manage Senators If Given Release by Newark Bears

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. (AP)—Walter Johnson, for many years idol of Washington baseball fans, is expected to return to manage the American league team for which he pitched for 21 seasons.

While negotiations were not complete, Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, said he and Johnson had talked over the matter, and that if the Newark club of the International league, which Johnson managed last year, would release him, he would sign him.

At the same time Paul Block, owner of the Newark club of the International league, which Johnson managed last year, said he would not stand in the way of Johnson coming to Washington.

If Johnson is taken on to pilot the Senators he will succeed Stanley Harris, who in the last five years led the Washington team to one world series victory and two American league pennants. Harris was relieved as manager by Griffith two weeks ago when a three-year contract expired.

Vernon Defeats Plainview, 25 to 0

Lions Go to Victory Via Overhead Route

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Oct. 12.—The Vernon Lions defeated the Plainview Bulldogs by a 25-0 score in the Interscholastic league schedule opener here this afternoon.

The Bulldogs were woefully weak on pass defense, and the Lions made many gains by the air route despite erratic tosses. The Bulldogs lacked the punch to drive the ball over when they got within striking distance. They had the ball within inches of the goal at one time.

Vernon scored the first touchdown on the third play of the game after Cox had made a 50-yard return of the kickoff, and Lawrence had made two end runs. The Lions weakened then and scored no more until the third quarter. Lineups:

ELECTRA WINS FROM QUANAH

Tigers Score 18-7 Victory in Conference Opener

QUANAH, Texas, Oct. 12.—Electra high school defeated Quanah here today, 18 to 7, in the first conference game of the season for both teams. Fumbles marred Quanah's play and helped Electra win.

High winds marred the punting of both teams and rendered passing attacks almost useless through the greater part of the game.

Electra scored its first touchdown in the early minutes of the first period when Quanah fumbled on the 20-yard line and Prince carried the ball across the line in two plays.

Crass Scores

Crass marked up the second Tiger score in the late minutes of the first quarter when he scooped up a Quanah fumble in midfield and raced 55 yards for a touchdown.

Cloninger carried the ball for the final Electra score in the third period when he ran through the Quanah team for a touchdown from the kickoff at the beginning of the half.

Frasier Tallies for Quanah

Frasier accounted for the Quanah score in the last quarter when he intercepted a Tiger pass and ran for a touchdown.

Frasier and Hall were the outstanding players in the Quanah backfield while Cloninger and Crass were backfield stars of the Tiger attack.

Daugherty and Shields played well in the Quanah line while Whitesides and Captain Smith stood out in the Tiger's line play. Lineup:

TEXAS AND AGGIES MEET MIGHTY SOUTHERN TEAMS TODAY

CENTENARY FOE OF CHAMPIONS

Longhorns Face Vanderbilt At Dallas Fair

DALLAS, Oct. 12. (AP)—Two football armies of the old south were camped on Texas soil tonight, awaiting tomorrow's skirmish with two leading representatives of the southwest conference.

The Vanderbilt Commodores, led by the brilliant Jimmy Armistead, reached Dallas late today, fit and confident of the eve of their annual debate with the Texas university Longhorns. A 13 to 6 licking plastered against them by an inspired Longhorn eleven last year was uppermost in their minds.

Here's Grid Classic

At College station the Centenary college gentlemen, who flashed meteor-like across southwestern football fields last season, were camped within the picket lines of the Texas Aggies, last year's conference champions. Their tussle is expected to be one of the classics of the season.

While attention of most fans was centered on the two important intersectional affairs, the Baylor Bears and Arkansas Razorbacks, both doped as second division clubs in the conference race, prepared to meet on neutral soil at Texarkana in the opening fray of the conference campaign. The Golden Bears were favored.

Ponies Play Here

The Southern Methodist University Mustangs, still stiff and sore from last week's excursion to West Point, faced an encounter with the Simmons university Cowboys at Wichita Falls. While they have been troublesome to all opponents so far, the Cowboys hardly were expected to push the Ponies. Coach Morrison announced, however, that he would start his first string.

Texas Christian university, with two lop-sided victories to its credit, was expected to win in fairly easy fashion over the Austin college Kangaroos at Fort Worth, but the Rice Institute Owls, trampled by the lowly St. Edward's university eleven last week, had prospects of an unpleasant afternoon with the Trinity university Tigers at Houston.

Labor and Capital to Be Drafted, Allen Declares

DALLAS, Oct. 12 (AP).—Labor, capital and "everything" will be drafted in event of another war, Maj. Gen. Henry T. Allen of the 90th division, declared in an address at a banquet here in his honor. The selective draft system in the World war proved unfair and ineffective, he said. He approved the present system of training high school students in army manuvers.

Souvenir Shrapnel in Fire at Port Arthur

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, Oct. 12 (AP).—The dark days of 1918 were recalled here when shrapnel began to fly while firemen were battling a fire in the downtown section. After the excitement was over it was learned that three shrapnel shells had been kept as souvenirs by an ex-soldier, and were stored in the burning building.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 12. (AP)—A brief cable from the steamship Antillian, off the coast of Florida, was received today at the local office of the Leyland line telling of the rescue of 11 persons apparently floating helplessly in a motor launch.

Simmons Cowboy Band

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

INTERSECTIONAL BATTLES and games involving sectional titles will be fought today on gridirons of the South and North, East and West. A host of contests will hold the interest of football enthusiasts, with practically every so-called "big" team, except in the East, engaging in contests of great import. And even in the East there is scheduled a flock of important games, though most of the outstanding clashes of the day will be contested on white-chalked fields of other localities. In many games today there is no favorite. Any team of many tilts may win. Too, so widespread is the advance of football, such is the progress of the game in all quarters, that teams considered of inferior strength to certain foes may arise and smite the favorites. There have been upsets this season. Expected setups probably will furnish other upsets today.

Southern Methodist university's Mustangs, who fought mighty Army to a standstill last week, engage the ambitious Simmons university Cowboys of Abilene here. This is a game of "ifs." The Ponies will win, or one of the greatest reversals of form of the season will be perpetrated. But just by how large a score they will win is another matter. There's where the "ifs" come in. If the Ponies have not recovered, mentally and physically from their gruelling engagement with the Cadets, they may have a startling surprise. Too, there is the possibility of Coach Ray Morrison reserving his stars for future Southwest conference games, should it develop that his reserves can play good enough football to beat the Cowboys.

SIMMONS ALSO HAD a hard game last week, which to them was about as important as the S. M. U. clash with Army—the 19-3 loss to the T. C. U. Frogs. The Methodists should win by a decisive, though not overwhelming score of from two to four touchdowns.

TWO INTERSECTIONAL games with southern foes and a conference tilt, the first of the season, mark the day's play of southwestern elevens. Texas meets Vanderbilt at Dallas and Texas Aggies play Centenary at home, while Baylor and Arkansas participate in the first conference affair at Texarkana. These games are tossups. Vanderbilt flashed power in trimming Colgate last week while Texas has shown strength in its previous two games. Centenary and Texas Aggies rated last season as among the foremost elevens of their respective sections. The Texas teams have whatever edge there is, by playing on home fields, while the invaders must play after undergoing trips of more or less duration. However, victories for the Commodores and Gentlemen would not be upsets, so closely are the teams matched.

THERE IS LITTLE to choose between Baylor and Arkansas. In view of their two victories while the Porkers were losing to Mississippi and beating College of Ozarks in preliminary games, the Bears are slight favorites. The two other conference members will have hard games from Texas teams. Rice, soundly thrashed last week by St. Edward's, shrould come back to beat Trinity, however, and T. C. U. is figured as victor over Austin college.

Two Texas elevens engage in a contest that should result in good, hard football. It is between Texas Tech and St. Edward's and an even battle it will be. Tech held Texas 12-0 last week, to offset St. Edward's crushing of Rice. Texas beat St. Edward's the previous week, 32-0, and I accord Tech the edge in today's encounter.

TULANE AND GEORGIA Tech meet in the feature game in the South. I would not be surprised if Tulane wins. The big green established a heavy score last week against Mississippi Aggies and seems to have returned to its high place held in football up to two or three years ago. Here, too, is the element of a team traveling to play on an alien field. Washington-Lee and Alabama should win their games handily over Kentucky and Mississippi Aggies, respectively.

A COLORFUL intersection meeting, one of the year's most noteworthy contests in some respects, and four games involving the Big Ten title glitter in a day of highly interesting football in the middle west. Notre Dame and Navy clash at Chicago and more than 100,000—the largest crowd ever to see a grid game, are expected to view the contest. Though both teams have been beaten they are expected to display a high class exhibition of football. Despite its two defeats, Navy has only had eight points scored against it and the Middies seem to have the margin over the Irish, who looked anything but a good team last week with Wisconsin.

IOWA, LOOMING as one of the foremost contenders in the Western conference, is favored to defeat Chicago, which seems to play as all Maroon teams of recent years, cautious, colorless football, which tends to hold down the score but not win games. Michigan, trimmed last week by Ohio Wesleyan, may "come back," to beat Indiana. There is nothing to choose between Purdue and Minnesota. Ohio State looms stronger than Northwestern. Illinois and Wisconsin should win with reserves from Coe and Cornell (Iowa).

Centre, having nothing but it's name (I don't believe they even pray before a game now) saved from the glory of former years, is doomed to another defeat at the hands of Missouri in an intersectional affair in the Missouri Valley district. Nebraska should repulse an invasion of Montana. Kansas is expected to beat Washington of St. Louis and break the tie that exists following their 21-21 game of 1927. Iowa State seeths more powerful than Grinnell. Oklahoma Aggies may rally from their defeat last week by Bo McMillan's Kansas Aggies to "take" Creighton. The Jayhawker Farmers apparently have little more than a practice session with Hays.

SEVERAL LEADING eastern teams still are going about their football with great care and some games today loom as certain victories for the favored ones. Still, there are some contests in the affete section that will be real battles. Colgate will have its hands full to beat Virginia Poly, as well known by the nom de grid of V. P. I. Bucknell should extend Penn State. Rutgers doesn't seem much more than a touchdown or two at the most better than Holy Cross. Lehigh will have a battle from Gettysburg.

THE FEATURE engagement in the East and an outstanding game of the day, is the meeting of Yale and Georgia at New Haven. Georgia came up from the South last year to trim a powerful Blue team that afterward was unbeaten and ranked as one of the greatest teams of the year. A repetition of that gruelling affair of last year is imminent today, though there is the likelihood that the Blue will reverse the decision by a low score.

Pittsburgh and West Virginia, old rivals, clash today and the Panthers seem to have the better prospects. Virginia may give Princeton a scare, but Harvard should beat North Carolina decisively. Army has a date with Providence, which should give the Cadets a rest following their encounter with the Mustangs. Two "little three" teams may win, Amherst from Haverford and Williams from Bowdoin, but Wesleyan faces a strenuous going from Columbia.

Man Jailed After Auto Strikes Wife

HOUSTON, Oct. 12. (UP)—Charles Bohem, 44, today was in city jail charged with assault by automobile and his wife, 45, was in a hospital with a broken left leg as a result of a disagreement as to who would drive the family auto.

The charge against the man was filed when his wife sent police word from the hospital that she wished it done. He had walked into the police station and told of the affair.

He said they had argued over who was to use the car. "I drove away and when I got back she tried to chop a back tire off. I asked a policeman about it and he said I could use it whenever I wished.

"Then the next time I drove out she stepped in front of the car and I couldn't keep from hitting her."

Muskrat Trappers Begin Winter Work

ORANGE, Texas, Oct. 12. (AP)—About a hundred men from Cameron Parish, La., and several southeast Texas counties, a majority of them engaging in agricultural pursuits during the summer, are preparing to invade the lands of the Orange-Cameron Land company to take up muskrat trapping for the winter.

The marshes which they will trap are the property of H. J. Lutcher Stark of Orange, through which he has built 70 miles of canals, the major part of a canal system which will contain 84 miles when completed Nov. 1.

Pre-War Speakeasy Bombed by Rivals

CHICAGO, Oct. 12. (UP)—"The 101," a speakeasy on the lower level of Wacker drive, dealing exclusively in pre-war rums, Irish whiskey and old wines, was bombed by two men who hurled a bundle of dynamite through the front passageway.

Police confiscated a large amount of liquor after the explosion.

Frank Kasenes, watchman, said he saw two men approach the entrance and throw the bomb, which caused damage estimated at $500.

Detectives said they assumed the speakeasy was bombed because its owners specialized in high grade liquor, refusing to buy local products from the beer and alcohol syndicates.

CROP ESTIMATE HELPS COTTON

Resulting Gain Features Week's Trade

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (AP).—The government crop report placing the indicated yield at 13,993,000 bales was the feature of the week in the cotton market. The figures were only 64,000 bales below average of private reports published previously, but local traders evidently were not prepared for an indication of less than 14,000,000 bales. The market, which had been weak under liquidation during the morning of bureau day, with December contracts selling off to 18.51, shot up rapidly after the report was issued. December advanced to 19.41, or 34.50 per bale from the lowest and back to just about the high price touched at the beginning of the month. The demand tapered off as the market approached the 19½ cent level, however, and there were reactions during the middle of the week under southern selling, together with realizing by recent buyers or liquidation of old long contracts. The bullish view of the probable statistical position based upon the reduced crop estimates was reflected by buying on declines or on scale down orders, however, and after ractions of 50 or 60 points, prices steadied up toward the end of the week on trade buying and covering. The latter was promoted by prospects for lower temperatures in the south over the Columbus day adjournment and a possibility that frosts might occur in some parts of the belt. Opinions here vary as to whether an early frost would materially curtail the crop this season, or a late frost materially increase it, but frost during the middle of October would be expected to exercise a considerable influence on sentiment and cut the potential yield in some sections, at least.

Encouraging reports from the cotton goods market are supposed to have promoted the policy of buying on the mid-week declines but according to local brokers, bullish factors have been offset to a considerable extent by the free movement of cotton to market and a possibility that the weight of the early supply may cause a lower market this autumn. The report of the census bureau showing 4,961,032 bales ginned priod to Oct. 1 came in for relative little coment, but it was pointed out by cotton men here that if ginnings between Oct. 1 and Oct. 18 this year were equal to those of last season, it would make the total for this season to that date about 7,000,000 bales, or approximately half the estimated crop.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 12. (AP) (U.S.D.A.)—Firm to 25c higher prices prevailed around the 11-market circuit on fat lambs. Choice natives in Chicago reached $13.75, and westerns sold up to $13.90. Total offerings approximated 54,300 against 53,687 a week ago and 73,011 a year ago.

Cattle trade around the loop was largely a clean-up with the supply uncovering nothing showing a high degree of finish. The outlet for the in-between-grade steers and yearlings was undependable and a few points reported a moderate decline on medium fleshed offerings. Packers have been very bearish this week, using a sluggish dressed beef market as a whip to offset the bullish influence of a light supply. Unless the dressed beef market stages a comeback next week shippers may expect a slow market even though receipts are moderate. Feeder buyer competition this week was spasmodic and caused the packers only slight concern. The supply estimated at 14,200 was around 1,000 larger than last Friday but slightly under a year ago.

Hogs registered an upturn of 10 to 25c but trade was not marked by as much activity on the part of the big packers. At this, Louis butcher weights closed slow with the advance lost. Chicago and St. Louis had a top of $10.40, while at Kansas City, St. Joseph and Omaha $10.60 was paid. Aggregate receipts were estimated at 47,000 as compared with 56,371 a week ago and 49,803 the corresponding day last year.

Richmond Printer Plays Organ on Sunday, Also Leads Choir

Stanley James, a Richmond, Va., printer who plays the pipe organ in church on Sunday, is shown at the linotype machine which keeps his fingers nimble during the week.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 12. (AP)—A linotype operator who spends six days a week at his keyboard finds recreation on Sunday at the keyboards of pipe organs in Richmond churches.

Stanley James, a young English man who began the study of music and printing about the same time in the little village of Pontypool, in South Wales, finds that each aids the other by keeping his fingers nimble. At the same time, James says, neither interferes with his work as choir leader at St. John's Evangelical church here.

James studied piano and voice while serving his apprenticeship in printing in England. He sang in a number of boys' choral groups in Great Britain and when he came to Virginia in 1912 as a youth of 16 he offered his services here, meanwhile obtaining a position with a newspaper.

Until the organist at St. John's church resigned, James had never attempted to play a pipe organ. He attempted the role, however, and did so well that he was given the position. About the same time he was asked to take charge of the choir music. He continued to study music and voice.

James has visited England and Wales only once since he came to America in 1912. He volunteered with the Canadian forces before the United States entered the World War and served with the British in France.

Newly Designed Plane Is Able to Rise in 40 Feet

MARSHALL, Mo., Oct. 12. (UP)—Walter Henry Barling, noted designer of the United States army air bombers, is developing here a swiftly rising monoplane said to be able to rise after a run of 40 feet.

It is called the NB-3, and is powered by an 80-horsepower motor. The distinctive feature of the plane is a new curve in the wing design which permits the craft quickly to attain "safety altitude."

POWER PROBE LINKS HOOVER

Nominee Again Shown as Opposing State Control

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (INS)—The name of Herbert Hoover was drawn into the records of the federal trade commission's power trust investigation today.

During the examination of H. L. Walther, of Portland, manager of the Oregon public utility information bureau, Judge Robert E. Healy, commission counsel, produced a press release distributed on Feb. 4, 1928, by Walther's bureau.

It was headed "Liberty Safeguarded," and said:

"The prominence of Herbert Hoover as a candidate for the presidency gives to his views more than ordinary interest at this time."

The press releases quoted Hoover, then secretary of commerce, as having said:

"Neither our national nor our state governments are planned or equipped for the task of government operation of utilities. The fathers purposely made our government to a different model, for a different task. They divided power and responsibility where business must concentrate them. They thought liberty and individual right were worth safeguarding."

AL PRAISED AT DEMO RALLY

Carrigan and Kay Draw Cheering Crowd

no control of their own party for 20 years."

The speaker replied to O. B. Colquitt's recent anti-Smith speech here by saying:

"It was the saddest meeting I ever attended. I enjoyed it, really, to see those preachers here, on this very same platform with Oscar. How much they must have felt at ease when he referred to his own dampness."

Referring to the death and burial in Germany of a certain prominent brewery owner in America, Mr. Kay remarked of Mr. Colquitt, "he is far from the land where his hero sleeps."

Rule of Majority

"The foundation of our government is in the rule of the majority. When all the millions of Democrats have spoken, I willingly submited myself to the will of the majority.

"Again, in regard to preachers and politics. When I want beans I go to a grocer, and when I want medicine, I go to a doctor. Likewise, when a man wants true knowledge of politics and government, he should go to one versed in it and making a specialty of it.

"A man should not go in for anything for which he is not fitted; and those preachers did look so awkard here on this platform with Oscar."

Reference to another recent speaker was made by Mr. Kay who said, "he is a better man than we are, for three juries have said so. Yes, he is a better man than we are."

G. O. P. System Attacked

The Republican system of centralized control, taking away from states many rights and centralizing them in federal bureaus was then attacked.

"The Republican party is in control of a wealthy oligarchy," he declared. "All they want is the control of all the property in the country. When we hear a little country town banker yelling for Hoover, we can visualize that same little banker a few years hence if the Republicans get through their branch banking law which would give the gigantic chain banks control of all little banks and drive the country bankers to the creeks.

"The Republican boast and cry has been 'give us property, and we will give you prosperity.'

"But what have they given? What laws have they passed?

"They have a law now that the Texas railway commission cannot make rates for roads in Texas.

"The city council itself cannot make water rates, gas rates, electric light or any other public utility rates.

"The Republicans have fixed up things along these lines so the big corporations can receive a 'profitable rate,' but why not do something to guarantee the farmer a decent living?

"The farmer has less excuse for voting against Governor Alfred E. Smith than any other class of men in America. Just think of the 500,000 little girls out in the fields picking cotton when they should be in school.

"One day a week the farmer works to pay excess prices caused by the Republican tariff. The work of these children largely accounts for the extra labor needed to feed the hungry man of the tariff.

"And, think of these Republicans, with these things staring them in the face trying to stir us up down here about religion!

"An anonymous old lady wrote a letter to me the other day saying she was praying that my eyes would be opened, politically speaking. Mostly I do my own praying. I don't want any human praying for me anonymously if they do pray.

"A man in California, after due process of the courts and all other legal channels was given punishment. What for? For violating an ukase of the secretary of the interior. The man had violated no city, county, district, state or federal law. He was a sheep herder and had driven his sheep across some federal land in violation of the imperial ukase of the secretary of the interior. Now, I ask you, how was that sheep herded, way up there in the mountains, to know that the secretary of the interior, away off there in Washington, has issued a routine order forbidding such a thing?

"The Interstate Commerce Commission controls and affects more property in one day than the United States supreme court. But the I. C. C. has 4000 employes to help it in its work.

"Then there is the commerce bureau and the trades bureau. We are getting to have a government of bureaus.

"The Democrats believe in a government for you and me, and not for the benefit of the government itself."

At the close of Mr. Kay's address, Mr. Scurry hid up both hands for silence as applause shook the house and made a single plea:

"All I ask is that you all go to the polls and help carry Wichita county for the largest majority ever given a Democratic presidential nominee."

Anent Quaker Belief

The Quaker belief in peace was brought sharply to the front by Mr. Carrigan, the first speaker of the evening who also defended Catholic patriotism in America.

"Do you know of any Quakers at Valley Forge with George Washington?" he asked. "Were there any in the Civil war? Where there any in the World war?"

As the speaker asked the first question he answered "no." As he asked the second question, a man in the audience answered "no." As he asked the third question the audience all joined in a thundering "no."

"They say an Irish Catholic is not patriotic," said Mr. Carrigan. "Yet many of the signers of the Declaration of Independence were Irish Catholics. When Washington was in despair at Valley Forge he ordered only Irish and Americans be put on guard that night. 'And put the Irish first as they are true and unbribable' Washington ordered. If George Washington could rely on them, we surely can rely on one. And we should remember that about 80 per cent of the Irish are Catholics and the rest cold blooded Presbyterians.

Throw Some Rocks

"The Republicans have thrown rocks, and now we will throw them back and let them eat them.

"I class Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York as the first American today." Here the speaker was interrupted by prolonged applause. "He is first in statecraft. He is first among executives, and he is first among men.

"They have attacked Governor Smith because of Tammany hall and they have attacked Tammany hall itself. Samuel Tilden sent Boss Tweed to prison. Likewise it frequently becomes necessary to eject individuals from every organization. There are bad men in every church, and there is a Judas in every camp.

"Denby, Will Hays and Fall, all cabinet members of the Republican party, left a trail so slimy that it is too rotten to recite in polite society. Yet they call Tammany corrupt!

"You have heard certain people talk about Catholics, and I will show why they are raising so much row.

"Tom Walsh, an Irish Catholic from Montana, went after the crooked oil deal and showed up the worst bunch of thieves that ever graced God Almighty's footstool.

"Sinclair and Denby hired the most magnificent array of dog fighting lawyers you ever saw and they went before the United States supreme court.

"There, $500,000,000 in public property, taken by thieving under a Republican president, was returned to the people.

"J. S. Butler, an Irish Catholic, was the member of the supreme court who wrote the decision.

Republican "Grudge"

"Don't you think the Republican bunch has got a grudge against the Irish Catholics?

"Do you know that 'Dixie' was written by an Irish Catholic?

"Do you know that 'The Star Spangled Banner' was written by an Irish Catholic?

"When Stonewall Jackson's invincible men were pounding at the gates of Washington, the only men who finally succeeded in turning them back were a bunch of New York Tammany hall Irishmen who were sent out by General McClellan and his back was to the wall.

"They have laid down a doctrine of hate in this campaign, but if I remember rightly the lessons my mother taught me, the chief one was the lesson of brotherly love. If she was right, Al Smith is my brother.

"It is not in good taste to raise a religious question or engage in religious persecution in the 20th century."

Woman Braves Blizzard To Save Lives Of Fifty

Unidentified Heroine Plunges Through Snow to Bring Aid to Stranded Tourists

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo., Oct. 12 (AP)—An unidentified woman today was given credit for the rescue of more than 50 automobile tourists who were marooned on the Lincoln highway between Baxter Station and Bitter Creek in last night's terrific blizzard.

The woman tourist succeeded in getting through the drifting snow and appeared at the Park hotel here and begged aid in saving 25 automobiles stalled along the road. More than a score of volunteers fought their way through the blinding snowstorm with trucks to the scene of trouble.

One by one the stranded cars were pulled out and started toward Rock Springs. Volunteers who assisted in the rescue said that but for the woman tourist, whose name was not learned in the confusion, many of the tourists might have perished in the intense cold.

DEMOS CALLED HYPOCRITICAL

Sen. Simmons Makes Hot Anti-Smith Talk

NEW BERN, N. C., Oct. 12. (AP)—Charging the Democratic party with conducting a "two faced and hyprocritical" campaign, Senator F. M. Simmons, former Democratic national committeeman from North Carolina, called on voters at an anti-Smith Democratic meeting here tonight, not to be "influenced by the smoke-screen of intolerance thrown about the campaign in the South."

"Protected by this smoke screen, they are cowardly running from and evading discussion of the question of prohibition, the paramount question at issue in this campaign," Senator Simmons said.

"Whenever the question of prohibition has been heard," Senator Simmons said, "the men and women whose souls are wrapped up in that cause, a cause for which they struggled for more than a quarter of a century, they are told that they are not opposed to Gov. Smith because he wants to destroy this great reform but because of their bigotry and sectarian prejudice."
