Three-Year Depression Hit Bottom in 1932, Says Roger Babson

By ROGER W. BABSON

For The W. F. Record News

BABSON PARK, Fla., Dec. 30.—Business in 1933 will total at least 10 per cent greater than in 1932. I refer to the volume of business, measured in tons, bushels, gallons, dozens, and other units of quantity. There is another way to look at business, namely, its money value in dollars. In general, prices in 1933 will tend to advance. Hence, under the double lift of bigger volume and higher prices, the dollar amount of business this coming year will total at least 15 per cent above that of 1932. I am not stating these definite percentages with the idea that they will check to the last pound and the last cent; economic forecast will never be a purely mathematical science. Business will always contain a human element that defies prophecy. My purpose in setting these exact estimates is to give a clear and simple diagram of 1933 as I view it.

Depression Area Half Completed

My reasons for that favorable forecast? Such conclusions are based squarely on the Law of Action and Reaction. Instead of moaning about depression, let us measure it. Business started to slip in the summer of 1929; the decline has run about three and a half years. As to depth, the slump has dropped below normal to bottoms that shatter precedent. Hence, in sheer size, we already have an expanse of depression that measures well over half the similar area of activity represented by the boom of 1926-1929. When the excesses of a period of overexpansion have been thus counter-balanced by the excesses of a period of hard times, then—and then only—you can confidently count on a major turning point. That is the meaning of the Law of Action and Reaction applied to fundamental business conditions. That is the foundation of my faith that the tide has turned, and every day sees additional evidence accumulating in support of a favorable attitude toward 1933.

Fundamental Trend Upward

If we grant that basic position, if we agree that the worst was witnessed in the summer of 1932 and that the main movement is improvement, then we can better visualize that bonds will strengthen; stocks will rise; jobs will increase; failures will lessen; losses will turn toward profit, deficit into surplus, defaults toward dividends, closing into openings, and fears into hopes. As in 1932, everybody in some way or other was stricken by depression, so in 1933 everybody directly or indirectly will feel the improvement. Recovery will not flare up like a photographer's flashlight, but should brighten gradually as at sunrise. Occasional reactions will be inevitable and we must be prepared to meet them courageously. What transforms the situation is the change of fundamental trend. We can stand temporary hesitations and recessions when we know that we are stepping up the staircase toward prosperity instead of continually sliding into deeper depression.

Recovery in Wholesale Prices

In the business picture, the highlight should be an upward trend of wholesale commodity prices. No signs are found at present of any continuous and dramatic bull market in commodities. The impending rise will be irregular and broken by seasonal weaknesses, and by

TESTIMONY FOR ALL BUT TWO FIELDS GIVEN

Hearing Speeded Up When Officials Delay Quiz Of Purchasers

CALL INVESTIGATION

New Hearing Set Jan. 12 At Tyler to Probe Illegal Buying

AUSTIN, Dec. 30. (AP)—Faced with the necessity of issuing new oil production proration orders before Sunday morning, when the shutdown period of the East Texas field expires, the Texas Railroad commission worked tonight in its hearing of operators to complete testimony on which to base conservation rules.

The hearing was simplified somewhat when the commission decided today to eliminate for the time being questioning of the proposed purchasers of oil in an effort to develop illegal practices, if they exist, in the production and transportation of petroleum from the big East Texas pool.

Hearing Ordered

A hearing for the purpose of conducting an investigation of charges that oil is being produced in violation of the commission proration orders and of accusations that employes of the commission have knowingly permitted wrongdoing was set for Jan. 12 at Tyler.

Testimony affecting all fields in Texas except Conroe and East Texas had been concluded. Information desired from purchasers of oil who nominated to take certain quantities during the next three months had been recorded.

Revised tabulations of nominations revealed that the probable market demand in Texas would be approximately 845,000 barrels daily for January, February and March. The aggregate allowable of Texas pools under the commission's last orders was 789,645 barrels daily. Alterations in the nominations, including new promises to buy, raised the East Texas allocation to approximately 336,000 barrels daily. When that field was closed on Dec. 17, the maximum permissible production was 310,000 barrels daily.

Conditions Described

When the various oil districts came up for consideration, in most instances records revealing conditions that existed at the time of the last hearings were introduced into the testimony.

L. L. Foley, petroleum engineer for the Mid-Kansas company, principal operator in the Yates field in the West Texas district, was questioned rather closely about production in that area, the questioners

Guy Pleads Not Guilty In Wanderwell Slaying

LONG BEACH, Calif., Dec. 30. (AP)—William J. Guy, 24, adventurer, pleaded not guilty today when he was arraigned before Superior Judge Albert Lee Stephens on a charge of slaying Capt. Walter Wanderwell, globe trotter, aboard the yacht Carma, here Dec. 5.

His trial was set for Feb. 2. Guy appeared unconcerned as the court asked for his plea, displaying the same debonair attitude he showed through the sensation investigation of the case two weeks ago.

FEELING FIT

Al Smith Looks Back On 59 Years of Life With Smiles

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. (AP)—Alfred E. Smith, who "never felt better," looked back on 59 years today with the conclusion "I guess I wouldn't change any of it."

"It has been a great life," said the former governor on the occasion of his 59th birthday, "a full life. I can't pick out the highlights. There are too many. I prefer to remember the whole period as one of service and labor."

Asked how he felt, the genial Smith said just as he felt at 50, or at 40—"I can see no difference."

Serious questions were barred at this brief press interview. He said he had thousands of letters and telegrams from friends all over the world and "cigars to last me three years."

MRS. MOONEY TALKS TO F. R.

President-Elect Promises To Write Gov. Rolph

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 30. (AP)—President-elect Roosevelt, in the midst of clearing his desk for the incoming governor, today received Mrs. Mary Mooney, 84-year-old mother of Tom Mooney, convicted perpetrator of the San Francisco bombing 16 years ago, and promised he would write Governor Rolph of California about the case.

Mr. Roosevelt, who tomorrow retires as governor, told the aged woman, who made a trip around the world in behalf of her son, he would communicate with Mr. Rolph after he leaves office.

Asked by one of Mrs. Mooney's companions what he would say in the letter, Mr. Roosevelt replied: "I cannot say until I consider the case a little more."

Mrs. Mooney was accompanied by Louis B. Scott, representing the Tom Mooney moulder's defense committee, Louis Weinstock, of the American Federation of Labor committee for unemployed insurance, Alfred Hirsch of the national committee for the defense of political prisoners and William L. Patterson, national secretary of the international labor defense.

Scott, after the meeting said the president-elect was "sympathetic."

WICHITANS TO WELCOME 1933 WITH REAL JOY

New Year Brings Hope And Little Regret For End Of 1932

RITES AT CHURCHES

Morris and Habern Warn Of Hazards From Traffic And Fireworks

Roseate with bright hope, pristine and unblemished, the infant year 1933 will be welcomed into the world with much acclaim in this city on Saturday night and during Sunday.

Guns will bang, whistles will scream, sky rockets will pierce the darkened heavens to herald the departure of Old Man 1932, whose distributed cargo left much of woe among men to be remembered along with such blessings as the birth of a new son to the Lindberghs, and an overwhelming Democratic victory in November's election.

Brief Period Celebration

From innumerable social gatherings at the hour of midnight Saturday will rise the wavering but heartfelt strains of "Auld Lang Syne" as the celebrants watch another of Time's mile posts recede into the darkness. Old discouragements will be bravely forgotten by other hearts in the promise of better fortune invariably held out by the new year. New resolutions will be formed and prayers will rise to bring upon humanity more of understanding and less of discord than that written into the history of the departing year.

The cherubic baby New Year will not rate the honors but lately accorded the venerable and bewhiskered Santa Claus, however. For while all of last Monday was observed throughout the city a full holiday—celebrating the Christmas anniversary which fell on Sunday—the coming Monday will be just Jan. 2, 1933—a busy day in which the work of a new 12-month period will get under way. City and county offices will be open as usual, more than 9,000 school children will be expected in their classrooms again Monday morning—and the baby New Year will have enjoyed but one brief day of festive sovereignty.

Officials Take Oath

The day will be one of particular activity at the courthouse for on Monday morning a group of new county officials, elected last Nov. 8, will assume their duties. The county commissioners court will hold its first meeting of the new year with Lee Cooper and M. L. Hines replacing M. A. Bundy and

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, Dec. 30. (AP)—Commercial banks today opened South Africa's "non-gold standard" exchange dealings with the quotation 91 pounds (South African) per 100 pounds (British sterling).

Dealings showed much hesitation, some houses considering the rate too high to bring money to South Africa from London.

LONDON, Dec. 30. (AP)—The exchange market quoted 90 South African pounds per 100 British pounds today, compared with 89 pounds, 12 shillings and sixpence in South African currency to 100 British pounds late Wednesday.

SUPPLY BILL

House Passes $100,000,000 Appropriation For Agriculture Dept.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. (AP)—The $100,000,000 agriculture department appropriation bill was passed by the house today and sent to the senate.

The measure was reduced $118,986 during the debate by the house, and the appropriations committee had pared about $7,000,000 from budget estimates. The bill carries about $206,000,000 less than that of last year. Most of the reduction was in road funds.

The agriculture bill is the third of the 10 annual supply bills to be passed by the house this session. The $961,416,897 treasury-postoffice bill and the $43,632,904 interior department measure have already been sent to the senate.

SENATORS BACK ECONOMY PLAN

House Demo Leaders Given Full Support

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. (AP)—A double-bladed ax—economy and taxes—is the tool Democratic congressional leaders have chosen to use in their efforts to chop down at this session the mounting treasury deficit and they hope to swing into real action next week.

The senate economy committee today approved the Democratic proposal to give President-elect Roosevelt blanket authority to reorganize the government in the interest of economy.

Another whack at the manufacturers' sales tax proposition, despite the incoming executive's apparent disapproval, was promised the ways and means committee by Chairman Collier today when he summoned the revenue rising group next Wednesday to pass on revenue raising methods.

Action by the senate economy committee today forecasts early results on the reorganization proposal, which is to be put onto the treasury-post office supply bill, now pending in the senate.

The proposition would give Roosevelt not only power to transfer agencies as provided in the economy act for President Hoover, but in addition, authority to abolish bureaus. It requires the action of but one branch to reject the Hoover transfer proposals, whereas the Democratic proposition would make it necessary for both to act before the Roosevelt measures could be blocked.

As in the economy act, the congressional veto would have to be accomplished within 60 days after the president issued orders making changes.

Should the senate fail to adopt the proposal, Speaker Garner said, it would be placed on the general deficiency appropriation bill in the house at the end of the session.

Mrs. Amanda Montague, 102, Dies Near Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Dec. 30. (AP)—Mrs. Amanda "Grandma" Montague, who would have celebrated her 102nd birthday Jan. 2, died at her home in Smithfield today.

To her appearance she gave her particular attention and although she did not approve of low-necked dresses, her hair was bobbed. Mrs. Montague was one of the sponsors of "The Kitchen," a new community clubhouse.

SOVIET PLAN FOR INDUSTRY ENDS TODAY

Achievement Won During Years, But Success Below Hopes

NEW PLAN STARTS

Next Five Years Devoted To Raising Standards Of Living

By STANLEY P. RICHARDSON
(Copyright, 1932, by The Associated Press)

MOSCOW, Dec. 30.—Soviet Russia's five-year plan for economic construction, shortened to four years and three months, ends with the old year in undoubted industrial, agricultural and social achievements for the world's first socialistic state, but fulfilment only in part of the definite objectives it laid down.

From the viewpoint of Soviet leaders the plan has been successfully carried out in the attainment of its broad general aim of establishing a base for industralization of the country.

The nation now has a foundation of heavy industry, they claim, on which can be built future means of production without relying on foreign imports.

Partial Success

Comparison of the program with the latest available figures of accomplishment, however, shows that the industrial plan as a whole has not been fulfilled. In some branches of economy it can be credited with successes far beyond the ambitious dreams of the planners themselves. In others, the country has fallen far short of the goals it set for itself.

Until complete and final figures are published, which may be several weeks, it will be impossible to strike a balance of the actual successes and failures under the plan. A fair index for industry, however, can be found in the record of the greater part of this year, showing less than 20 per cent increase over 1931 in all industrial production, whereas a 34.7 increase actually was required to fulfill the general plan.

Almost without exception, the yearly control figures were not met. On the other hand every year has

Davidson Farmer Freed In Slaying

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Dec. 30.—Establishing his plea of self-defense, Fred White, prominent Davidson farmer, today was free—exonerated of the fatal shooting Thursday of Earl Martin, Frederick, at the White home.

Eight witnesses testified in White's preliminary hearing this morning in Justice Roy J. Curtis' court. Two witnesses in addition to White himself were present when the shooting occurred. They were White's brother, Lee White, and Ruby Wood, 31, his cousin and housekeeper, over whom the slaying resulted.

Martin was said to have advanced on White and tugging at a pistol in his pocket when White fired at close range with a shotgun, killing the Frederick man instantly. The trouble had its source in Miss Wood's rejection of Martin's proposal of marriage.

Funeral services for Martin, a former produce dealer here, were held this afternoon. He is survived by his divorced widow and two children.

C. C. Julian Goes Back To Jail at Request Of His Bondsman

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 30. (AP)—C. C. Julian, much publicized oil operator and promoter, was placed in the city jail here tonight at the request of O. P. Estes of Oklahoma City, one of Julian's bondsmen on a federal mail fraud charge.

"I had heard Julian was spending much time in Canada, maintaining an office there, and understand that if Julian should be there when his trial is set, the bondsmen would be unable to have him extradited," said Estes, an attorney explaining why he had asked Julian's arrest.

The debonair oil man was taken from his suite at the Oklahoma Biltmore hotel and placed in the city jail pending his delivery to a United States commissioner tomorrow until a new bond is made.

FIEND MURDERS SOCIAL WORKER

Welfare Agent Strangled And Shot in Car

CLEVELAND, Dec. 30. (AP)—A young woman welfare worker was the victim of a fiendish murder in a fashionable suburb today only an hour after she had cheerfully started on an errand in downtown Cleveland.

She was Mrs. Ruth Steese, 30, an employe of the Cleveland Society for the Blind and a graduate of Western Reserve university.

The police decided it was a case of madness or robbery or both, but if robbery was the motive, the slayers were frightened off before they got their loot.

Jack Hayden and his sister, Louise, driving on the usually well-traveled Shaker boulevard, spied an automobile in a field some distance from the road in Pepper Pike Village. Many socially prominent Clevelanders live in the area, but no homes are close to the spot.

Suspecting an accident, Hayden walked through the muddy field to the car and discovered Mrs. Steese's body in the back seat. The woman had been bound and strangled with her own scarf. There was a bullet wound in the top of the skull and another in the back of the head. Much of the clothing had been torn to shreds, and there was evidence of a criminal attack. A 38 caliber bullet was on the floor of the car.

But strangely enough, Mrs. Steese's pocketbook, containing $250, a diamond ring and a wedding ring, were untouched. The woman's body and the radiator of the car were warm when Hayden walked up.

The car belonged to Mrs. Violet A. Warringer, business manager for the Cleveland Society for the Blind. It had been borrowed by Mrs. Steese for trips to two banks. Mrs. Steese had appeared at one of the banks to make a deposit but had not been seen at the other.

City Manager Of Stamford Resigns

Special to The Record News.

STAMFORD, Texas, Dec. 30.—Charles Zugg, city manager of Stamford, has resigned the position effective Jan. 1, 1933, or as soon thereafter as the city council selects his successor, it was announced here today.

Mr. Zugg took over the position of city manager on Sept. 17, 1923, and has directed municipal development that has included miles of additional paving, improved water supplies and efficient operation of city affairs.

Mayor J. K. Brady, in accepting the resignation, gave no cause of the decision on Mr. Zugg's part to leave his position. He indicated that the retiring manager felt he had served the city for such an extended period that a change would be for the best.

Mr. Zugg told a representative of The Record News he had no statement to make and that he had made no plans for future activity.

COMMUTATION OF SENTENCE IS REQUESTED

Action Follows Indictment Of J. J. Halloran For 'Concealing Crime'

LUMBERMAN IN DENIAL

'Happy Jack' Declares His Innocence Will 'Out' At Proper Time

PHOENIX, Ariz., Dec. 30. (AP)—Maricopa county's grand jury addressed a resolution today to the Arizona board of pardons and paroles, strongly urging that Winnie Ruth Judd's sentence of death for murder of Agnes Anne Leroi "immediately be commuted to life imprisonment."

The action followed return of an indictment against J. J. Halloran, wealthy Phoenix lumberman, charging him with being an "accessory to the crime of murder" in that he is allesed to have concealed from authorities knowledge of the slayings.

Mrs. Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson, both friends of Mrs. Judd, were killed in their Phoenix home. Mrs. Judd has not been brought to trial on an information charging murder of Miss Samuelson.

Her Story Convincing

The grand jury resolution cited that Mrs. Judd's story, when she appeared before it last Wednesday purportedly to tell the "whole truth," convinced the inquisitorial body "she acted in self-defense."

The resolution also cited the grand jury as convinced Mrs. Judd "at her trial was anxious to have the facts constituting self-defense put before the jury, but was prevented by her counsel."

Many statements made by Mrs. Judd in the grand jury room were corroborated by other evidence the grand jury investigated, the resolution said. It was signed by G. A. White as foreman.

Board Changes Sunday

The present membership of the board of pardons and paroles will change next Sunday midnight, when all state officials-elect legally take office. The board is composed of the attorney general, the superintendent of public instruction, and a civilian member, who is chairman, and who is chosen by the other two. Next week Atty. Gen. K. Berry Peterson will be succeeded by Arthur T. Laprade, and Superintendent of Public Instruction C. O. Case by Herman Hendrix. Reports have been that Lin B. Orme, chairman, would be reappointed.

The resolution was addressed to "the honorable board of pardons and paroles of the state of Arizona," without being addressed specifically to either the outgoing or incoming board.

Halloran declared tonight "there is no basis of truth in the charge."

Halloran's statement, issued through his counsel, contained only 34 words.

"There is no basis of truth in the charge," it said, "nor in any statement that produced it. That it is absolutely false and a grave injustice to me will be proved at the proper time."

Carter, former Azle constable and dry worker, at his home here last night. Carter had just stepped from the side door of his home when he was fired upon by two men.

Carter said he believed the older suspect was one of the men, but could not positively identify him. The man admitted ownership of a coupe which was abandoned in front of Carter's home.

President Lands Three Of 10 Prize Sail Fish Brought In By His Party

SAIL FISH CLUB, PALM Beach, Fla., Dec. 30. (AP)—Running into a veritable school of fighting sail fish late today, President Hoover and members of his party tonight brought 10 prizes as the total of a dawn to dusk angling expedition in the wind-whipped waters of the Atlantic ocean off Palm Beach.

The chief executive himself landed three of the sail fish, one seven feet and eight inches long. The total for the party would have been 11 except that a shark, whirling to the surface in a smother of foam, snatched a prize from Senator Austin of Vermont just before it was hurled into the boat.

Probably a score of small motorboats, all bearing sportsmen and women in quest of the same game fish, cruised within sight of the president and his guests during the day, and by nightfall almost every boat boasted one white flag and sometimes two.

Mr. Hoover set out this morning at 7 o'clock aboard the 65-foot auxiliary sloop Orca under guidance of Capt. Herman Gray, Palm Beach fisherman. Mrs. Hoover and members of the party were on board the smaller motorboat, Miss Sally.

The boat of Mrs. Hoover was the first to hoist a white flag, and after the Orca had displayed one from its masthead, the Miss Sally put up another on its halyard.

Mr. Hoover took up kite fly fishing during the afternoon. Instead of trolling, with a line running out behind the boat for more than 200 feet, the president attached his line to a small red kite.

Campaign For Speakership Stirred By Reports Of Roosevelt's Choice

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. (AP)—The contest for the speakership of the next house was thrown into a flurry today by reports and denials that the influence of President-elect Roosevelt had been placed behind any one candidate.

A rumor that Representative Sabath of Illinois, manager of Majority Leader Rainey's speakership campaign, had been informed by Roosevelt he was not supporting Representative John McDuffie of Alabama caused the excited discussions of house members. Sabath is in Chicago.

Questioned about the report, Rainey, veteran Illinois Democrat, said he had received a letter from James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, that "Robert Jackson, secretary of the Democratic national committee, had no authority whatever to say that Mr. Roosevelt favored Mr. McDuffie's candidacy."

Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, chairman of the appropriations committee, and McDuffie issued statements expressing doubt Mr. Roosevelt would take any part in the selection of a successor to Speaker John N. Garner.

McDuffie, Byrns and Rainey generally are conceded the leading candidates. They were joined by another—Representative John J. O'Connor of New York—whose name was put forward in a statement by Representative Grandfield, Democrat, Massachusetts.

1933 WILL SEE BIRTH OF NEW FORTUNES, SAYS BABSON

SLOW GAIN IN PRICES SEEN

Improvement to Be Steady —Not Flashy

corrections for too rapid advances. The main axis of the price movement, however, should be upward. The strongest groups will comprise raw materials and semimanufactured products. Some finished commodities have been stubborn in taking their share of depression. In some instances, these prices are out of line with the wholesale price level; hence, there are some groups of goods which in 1933 will probably have to accept some final readjustment in price. In general, however, the wholesale price trend should move higher for these reasons: (1) supplies are low; (2) current output is less than consumption in many lines; (3) any revival in demand will cause shortages; (4) credit is abundant and money rates low; (5) prospects are for at least partial settlement of important foreign trade problems during the coming year, thus restoring foreign demand for our products.

Better Alignment Farm Prices

One of the outstanding events in 1933 will be a tendency toward better alignment of the prices of agricultural products and industrial products, including merchandise which the farmer buys. The plight of the farming regions has been one of the grave dislocations of the depression. In 1933, this maladjustment will be corrected, at least partially. For the immediate future it is probably too much to expect that farm purchasing power will show spectacular advances. If we refer to farm income for the 1932-33 season, we must figure this apparently at about 15 per cent below the corresponding period of the preceding season. Nevertheless, we have already had one brief but impressive demonstration of how prices can climb. The upward swing in the prices of hogs and other livestock last summer showed what can be expected when once conditions are set to wipe out the price differential against the farmer. Furthermore with possibilities of later agreement on war debts and certain other foreign problems, demand from abroad could easily strengthen farm prices.

Retail Prices Mostly Deflated

The field of retail prices shows complete deflation in most lines of wearing apparel. In a broad way the same is true of foods. There are a few retail lines, however, in which further deflation may occur. To this extent, the outlook may still call for some caution; but fundamentally, the general price situation calls for courageous buying. After the punishment of the past few years, buyers are gunshy. At every temporary halt in prices, they imagine a return of complete demoralization of the whole price structure. Hence, be prepared for these fluctuations. Do not let the commodity markets whipsaw you, but basically, we are now witnessing the bargains of a generation. The next 12 months should demonstrate the correctness of this conclusion. For the general run of goods the prompt buyers of current bargains will be handsomely repaid for their foresight. They will not only serve themselves well by purchasing now, but also render a valuable service to business recovery.

Rents and Taxes

Although 1933 in general can be forecast as a year of improvement, this fact in itself implies that some further necessary adjustments must be expected. For example, a study of economic history shows that in the latter part of depression there is a lag in the adjustment of rents. Long term leases tend to support rentals artificially. Ultimately, however, the peg gives way and rents are readjusted in line with current conditions. In some localities and in some classes of property, this has already occurred. In other places, there must apparently be a marking down in the coming year. Likewise the year holds out the prospect that taxes will be lower. Tax reduction will be accomplished less by public agitation than by personal efforts of each property owner who presents directly to his assessors the concrete evidence that valuations on his properties are excessive. Certainly it will do no good to advocate wholesale discharge of government employes in an effort to cut taxes, because by so doing you merely add to the burden of local expenditures for unemployment relief.

More Jobs in 1933

No theories or statistics or anything else can change the fact that this is a hard winter. To every citizen let me say: This ought to be the final battle of the depression. For 1933, my forecast is higher employment levels. Normally a gain in employment conditions appears first in the amount of pay rolls in dollars; the number employed tends to lag. In the present period that lagging tendency will be less pronounced because it will be countered by campaigns such as the share-the-week movement and other measures. Wage rates will tend to wabble along in the present zone until increasing activity is plainly apparent, and then wages will gradually respond. No strikes of importance to industry are now indicated. Employers with sound management policies need not be apprehensive of labor troubles. For the first part of 1933, costs of living will remain not far from their present lows, and workers can count on continued benefits from this cause.

Technocracy a Delusion

Some say, however, "What about 'technocracy,'—this reign of labor-saving machinery which will make unemployment chronic?"

I answer that "technocracy" is merely a new-fangled name for an old-fashioned idea. For a long time we have had machinery that is said to save labor and ruin laborers. The same technocratic arguments which are exciting people today could have greeted the invention of the automobile or even the locomotive.

Automatic machines were with us in the boom of 1926-1929. You did not worry about the end of the world then—and you need not worry now. In fact if technocracy had been discovered in 1929 instead of in 1932, it would have been hailed as one more proof of the new era. The bulls would have played it up at their pools. No, the humorists are right when they say this new word "technocracy" ought to be spelled "techno-crasy." Instead of worrying about this fad of the pessimists, focus your energies on the development of purchasing power.

So far as there are any real threats in automatic machinery, the way to meet them is by greater development of advertising and selling, thus increasing buying power and advancing the standard of living.

Hence, I maintain: in 1933, of all the departments in a business the most essential will be sales and advertising. Admit it or not, there is gathering throughout this country a colossal force of latent buying power.

People have got into the habit of thinking there is no money. More than you would imagine from hearing them talk, people have the means to buy, but they are not in the mood to buy. Every person in the nation is in some degree a salesman. If all will help the organized sales forces and advertising staffs in a campaign to re-create confidence, we can rapidly and soundly rebuild business. Moreover, by purchasing now, the public can get more goods and superior goods at lower prices.

Improvement in Various Industries

Sales will not immediately soar, but already the pendulum is starting its upward arc. When 1933 is written into the sales sheets, the figures will make much better reading than those of 1932. The year will tend to become progressively better from a sales standpoint—with due allowance, of course, for seasonal patterns such as spring rise, summer slump, and fall revival. New England showed early traces of improvement in textile and shoe industries. The Northeast is habitually a leader in business recoveries; this territory ought to be among the first to move ahead in 1933. The automobile, iron and steel, machine tool and other manufacturing centers in eastern and mid-West sections will follow in this gradual revival of purchasing power.

The oil regions of the Southwest and Pacific coast should feel strongly the betterment in that industry. The second part of the year looks better for the farming communities.

They have been held down by stubbornly low prices of agricultural products, notably the grains. I look for improvement in the farm regions, but we shall have to give them time.

Outlook for Industries

Heavy industries respond slowly to the influence of general revival, and these lines appear more likely to advance in the latter rather than in the earlier part of 1933. In the automobile industry: Replacement and modernization requirements will become acute in 1933 and will force larger sales. In the aircraft industry: Gradual growth will continue; this, however, is an industry where some new invention could produce revolutionary results. In the general building industry: For the first part of 1933, most activity will be in the building of small houses. In the chemical industry: Its strong financial position will make itself felt when the heavy industries start up.

In the oil industry: Here also the financial position is strong and the industry ought to play a big role in the better business of 1933.

Among the utilities: Companies with sound franchises and proper rate structure should do well in 1933; some of the holding companies may be disciplined, but from an investor's viewpoint, diversification is in their favor and so is leverage in event of advance in general business.

War Debts Overemphasized

Congress will have to deal with much legislation of importance to business men and investors. Recently people have been much concerned over the question of war debts. I do not expect that the debts owed to us by foreign nations will be canceled. Moreover, the compromises which seem likely to be worked out by a commission to be appointed will probably be applied to the payment of interest rather than principal. In other words, interest will be scaled down and payments applied on principal. In my opinion, however, world debt is not the most important measure which will come before congress. What affects business men and investors most immediately is not international debts—but a national advertising campaign to encourage buying. If such a campaign were undertaken by business leaders, under government sponsorship and assistance, the stimulus to business would be enormous, particularly if supported with other measures to increase sales both at home and abroad.

Stock Market Outlook

In July, 1932, the stock market reached its final low. That month marked the death of a bear market and the birth of a bull market. This applies, of course, to long-pull trends and major movements. What particular pattern the market will follow in its short swings is now anybody's guess. Based on precedent, it is a plausible conjecture that in a bull market, the largest percentages of advance tend to occur in the first two years. In the latter stages of a bull market the advances look spectacular; but the cold-blooded test of percentages shows that the ratio of rise tends to flatten out. In the market, therefore, as in many other fields of activity the exceptional profits go to the pioneers. There is an economic law which puts a premium on promptness, and the United States will not be offered at 10 cents on the dollar very long. Investors must pick and choose with care, however, because not all companies will succeed. Furthermore, diversification of holdings is just as essential as it ever was.

A Two-Sided Bond Market

For 1933, two basic tendencies in the bond market are indicated: Long term government bonds will tend to decline; corporation bonds will tend to advance. In 1932, there was a blind rush for safety. People dashed to bury their money in government bonds just as they would bury it in a mattress or a hole in the earth. Such issues were therefore in artificial demand. Now that the corner has been turned, investors will gradually seek higher levels. This means that funds will slowly be withdrawn from long-term government issues, which will gradually decline. This declining tendency may be postponed until some of the short-term financing of the government is out of the way, but it will come into evidence before 1933 is over. Corporation bonds, however, will in the main, work higher in 1933. In the early stages of recovery, investors are too nervous to buy stocks but too needy to stick to governments; so they will pick the middle-ground and buy corporation bonds. The coming year I think will present a good domestic bond market.

Railroad Outlook Better

The railroad situation may be big news for investors in 1933. The railroads have a stake in all industries; hence, an improvement in general business implies increased business for the carriers. First aid from government sources has met the emergency, and restorative influences are under way. The Coolidge committee's work is helpful, especially in the hope it holds for reforming the roads' chief bugaboo, the I. C. C. Other hopes: Consolidations, some form of tax relief, and a rational adjustment of the wage agreements.

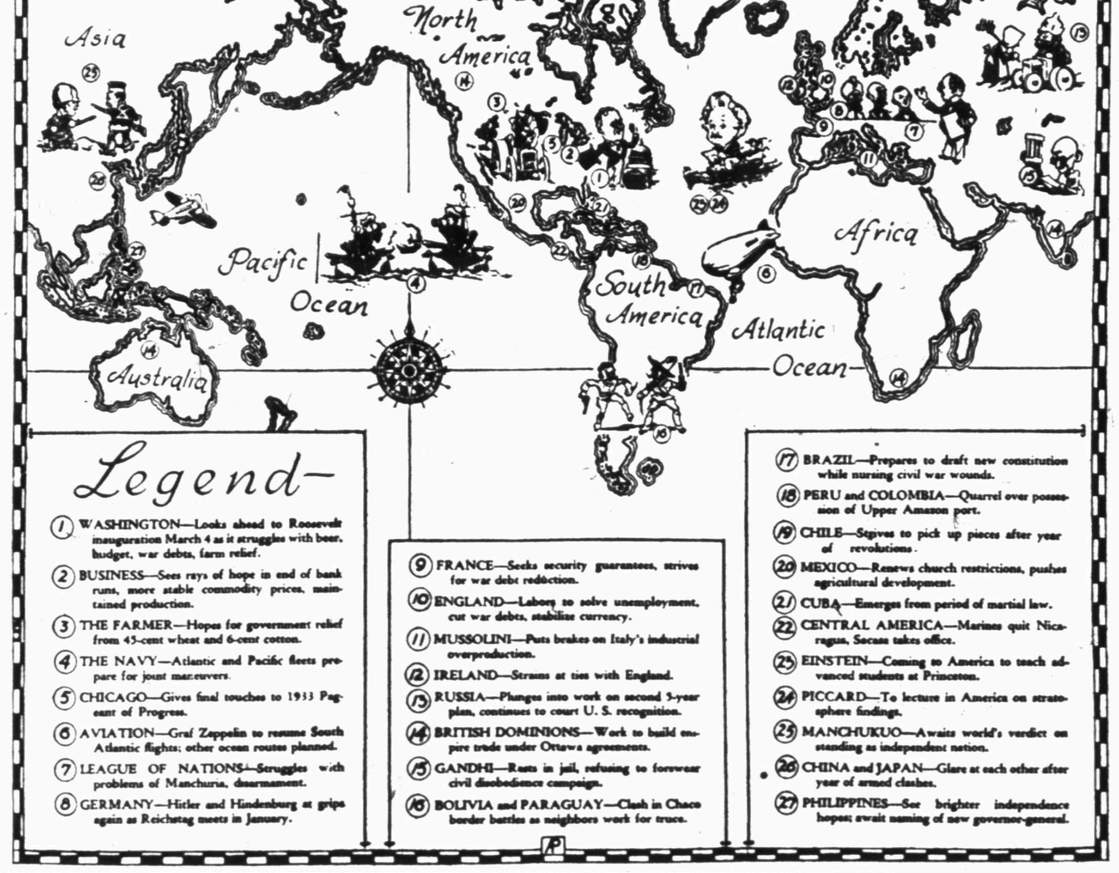

Although several of the weaker systems are in a predicament, the railroads generally ought to pull out of their plight. I do not recommend holding railroad securities for heirlooms. They are nothing to put in the baby's bank.

In 1933, however, the roads will do much better both in business and earnings. Certain bonds of the best railroads are quite secure. It is also probably advisable to buy the better railroad stocks, if the holder is willing to remain awake and watchful.

To found a successful business, or to build up a sound investment list, is no undertaking for the lazy, the reckless, the fearful or the overgreedy. Prudent courage, wise aggressiveness and determined action are the keynotes to real success. As you begin to tear off the leaves of the new calendar, here is the question to decide. Are you going to sit and await better things? Or will you get on your feet and go out to meet them? Never in the history of the United States, and probably never in the annals of civilization, has there been a depression which did not prove to be the birthpiece of new fortunes. The time will arrive when great organizations can account for their success by the explanation: "Established in 1933." In the years ahead, wealthy investors will proudly mark their choicest holdings: "Bought in 1933." The day is coming when you are going to ask yourself: "Where was I in 1933?" Make your answer now. Remember that prosperity comes as a reward for service. The greatest service can be rendered in 1933 through wise and courageous buying, which will bring back prosperity and employment.

Business as registered by the Babson chart now stands at 16 per cent below a year ago.

Interior Development Group Votes Opposition To Inland Waterways

The third regional conference of the Interior Protective and Development Association of Texas at Lubbock Thursday adopted a resolution opposing further development of inland waterways at public expense under federal direction, it was learned Friday. The resolution was presented by the Wichita Falls delegation, which included R. E. Shepherd and Manager John Boswell of the chamber of commerce.

The resolution stated that increased development of ports and inland waterways would tend to further complicate an already difficult traffic situation and deplored the cost of federal participation in such projects at public expense. C. P. Nevill of Greenville is president of the association and presided at the meeting. The principal address of the day was made by R. R. Gilliland of Quanah.

The Wichita Falls resolution carried out the already recorded opposition of the local chamber to such moves. The approval of the conference given the resolution does not represent the policy of the association. The policy will be determined by a referendum vote among directors at an early date.

SOVIET PLAN REACHES END

Five-Year Program Ends With New Year

shown substantial production gains over the previous year. These increases, rather than the actual relation of accomplishments to the plan, furnish the yardstick by which officials measure progress. The plan in their view is a goal to be striven for. If it is not entirely fulfilled this fact does not bulk so large if actual gains can be shown.

Food Shortage

Feverish efforts to industrialize the country, which the newspapers now loudly acclaim as an accomplished fact, admittedly have subjected the population to severe strain on the point of continued low-living standards.

As the five-year plan ends the Russian masses are faced with a severe food shortage, which is the worst since the plan began and responsibility for which can be traced directly to the subordination of light industry, producing consumption goods, to what the state felt was the larger necessity of creating its own heavy industry first.

The extent of the spread between these two branches of economy is shown in the fact that 87 per cent of all capital investments in industry during the five-year plan was allotted to heavy industry, leaving very little for the production of consumers' goods.

While not minimizing the seriousness of the present food situation, leaders justify their position by pointing out that heavy sacrifices were necessary on the part of the population during the first five-year period in order to give the nation the necessary means of defense for future development.

New Five-Year Plan

In reality, therefore, the present plight of the people cannot be blamed entirely on the plan itself, for it deliberately contained inadequate provision to obviate it. The growing extent of the human strain may have played no small part in the decision of the leaders in 1930 to end the five-year plan nine months short of the original five-year period so that a quicker start could be made in the improvement of living standards—one of the primary aims of the second five-year plan beginning with the new year.

Of the basic key industries, coal, pig iron, steel, electrification and transport, all are considerably behind the plan, and among other heavy industrial branches only oil and possibly machine building can claim fulfillment. In the case of oil, the five-year plan production was accomplished in half that period and it still is running ahead of a program revised upward.

Light industry, despite its relatively insignificant role in the five-year plan and notwithstanding that several of its branches more than fulfilled the program, failed to accomplish the plan as a whole by 7.7 per cent, although it showed an aggregate production gain of 64 per cent for the four-year period.

Climbs Upward

The food industry continues badly in arrears, barely showing a gain over the 1931 production and making the worst showing this year of any branch of economy.

In terms of world production Soviet Russia during the five-year plan, according to official figures, jumped from sixth to third place in coal, although the daily output now is averaging only approximately 18,000 tons compared with 90,000,000 planned for the whole year; in pig iron the nation jumped from sixth to second place, although the present daily average output of 17,000 tons is considerably behind the 9,000,000 tons planned for the whole year; in oil from third to second place, with 22,800,000 tons in 1932, compared with 21,700,000 planned; in machine building from fourth to second, with the 1932 output aggregating 5,700,000,000 rubles, compared with 6,800,000,000 planned; in electric energy from eighth to third, with 13,50,000,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 17,000,000,000 planned.

JACK HALLORAN FACES CHARGE

Lumberman Indicted For Concealing Murders

Lerol and Hedvig Samuelson in trunks in a Los Angeles railway station in October, 1931, where they had been sent after being slain here.

The true bill was drawn up two days after the winsome young woman had been removed secretly from her cell in the Arizona penitentiary at Florence, where she has been sentenced to be hanged Feb. 17, and brought before the jurors, apparently in answer to her many protestations the "whole truth" was not told at her trial.

Halloran, described previously as a friend of Mrs. Judd and the two youthful victims and visitor at the home of the killer Oct. 15, the night before the alleged date of the crime, was accused in the indictment of protecting Mrs. Judd after commission of the double murder.

Posts $3,000 Bond

Almost immediately after a court clerk had notified him of the indictment, Halloran appeared at the courthouse in answer to a bench warrant, posted bond of $3,000 and was released under order to appear for preliminary hearing next Tuesday.

In the same court where 10 months ago he was sworn as a witness in the Judd trial but never called to testify, he heard the reading of the charge. His demeanor displayed a trace of nervousness but there was no other outward sign of distraction as he stood before the court.

As reporters approached, he turned his back in answer to their request for comment and an attorney who accompanied Halloran replied neither he nor his client had anything to say for the present.

The proceedings were over in a few moments and, dodging photographers, Halloran disappeared out a back door of the courtroom, which led to an exit through the chambers of Judge Howard C. Speakman, the trial jurist before whom Mrs. Judd was convicted.

Charge Concealment

The indictment alleged Halloran, "well knowing the said Winnie Ruth Judd to have committed the said crime of murder, and with full knowledge that a felony, to wit, murder, had been committed by the said Winnie Ruth Judd . . . did then and there conceal the commission of said crime from the magistrate and did harbor and protect the person of said Winnie Ruth Judd."

More than this nothing came from the grand jury on the nature of Mrs. Judd's testimony, which required a full day to take.

Unofficial reports were circulated she had implicated no one in the slayings, which she had claimed were committed in self-defense, but had sought to involve others when she was confronted with disposition of the bodies and escape from the law.

Letter Gave Hint

The first intimation of another person in the case came with discovery of a letter in the drain pipe of a Los Angeles department store, where Mrs. Judd had hidden for a night after she had left here and gone to Los Angeles and had narrowly escaped detection in attempting to claim the trunks. She hinted in the letter, addressed to her husband, Dr. W. C. Judd, that others had known of the killings before the bodies were placed aboard a train here.

During the trial, a truck driver testified Mrs. Judd called him to the home of the victims and ordered him to remove two trunks. He refused because of the weight, telling her she must accompany him to the baggage station.

The witness said he "had a feeling" some one else was in the house. The next day the trunks were at the Judd home, from where they were removed to the station.

Mrs. Judd, who surrendered in Los Angeles a week after the killings, was tried only for the murder of Mrs. Lerol and another charge involving the death of Miss Samuelson never has been prosecuted.

Counsel for her has exhausted every effort to win a new trial from the Arizona courts. Her only hope of escape from the gallows remains in appeal to the state board of pardons and paroles, the supreme court of the United States, or an action by the prison superintendent to declare her insane. Her counsel announced in Los Angeles today he would appeal to the supreme court of the United States.

QUANAH, Texas, Dec. 30.—A prohibition rally will be held at the First Baptist church Sunday afternoon. This rally is a part of the state-wide movement of those desiring no changes made in the prohibition laws, and will be the final meeting in Hardeman county prior to the state-wide rally to be held in Dallas on Monday.

Several community rallies have been held in the county since the organization. It is expected the Sunday meeting will be well attended.

WICHITANS TO WELCOME 1933

Sunday Last Day of School Vacation Period

L. L. Kuntz, retired after long service in the voting of two months ago. Jim Robinson, county tax collector; Julian McFall, county clerk; H. W. Fillmore, judge of the county court at law; Judge Irvin J. Vogel of the 78th district court; and C. L. Bradford, constable, are the new names and titles to be inscribed on the "family roll" at the courthouse Monday.

Observance of the event will be included in the program of some local churches. At the Adams Street Methodist church, a New Year's eve watch party is to be held under the direction of Rev. L. D. Cook, the pastor. At St. Paul's Lutheran church, a similar New Year's eve service is to be held with Rev. C. M. Beyer, pastor, delivering a sermon on the seasonal subject.

Church Observance

Members of the Highland Heights Christian church are to hold an informal get-together in the basement of the church Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock in commemoration of New Year's day. Each person attending is to bring his own "sandwich supper." Impromptu talks on the old year will be made, and new resolutions for the coming year will be voiced.

Many local pastors will use the beginning of a new calendar year as the subject of their sermons. Rev. J. A. Wright of the East Side Presbyterian church has announced "Facing Life Squarely" as his morning sermon subject. Rev. Beyer, Dr. George Horst of the First Presbyterian church, and Dr. O. L. Powers of the First Baptist church are among the ministers here whose sermons will be on the New Year's theme.

Those who wish to dance the old year out and the new year in will find ample cooperation in a musical way from the national radio broadcast. Through the NBC network, orchestral programs heralding the arrival of 1933 will begin at New York at 11:05 p. m. Saturday and will be taken up at points across the nation as the hour moves, concluding at San Francisco and Los Angeles at 3:30 a. m. Sunday.

PUBLIC WARNED TO OBSERVE LAWS

Caution for the public of Wichita Falls in observing the close of the holiday period Saturday night and Sunday in welcoming a new year came from heads of municipal protective agencies Friday.

No Fireworks Downtown

Police Chief Dick Morris urged motorists to exercise caution in avoiding traffic accidents, especially in view of possible unfavorable weather conditions. A new warning to youthful Wichitans to use their fireworks outside of the downtown fire limits to avoid prosecution in corporation court was given.

A resolution for every Wichitan for the new year was framed by Mr. Morris, calling for increased cooperation with the police department in controlling crime in the city. Chief Morris pointed out the increased efficiency of the department service on calls by radio scout cars and emphasized the importance of prompt action on the part of the public in reporting unusual incidents to the department.

Any suspicious person noticed in any neighborhood, or any automobile whose occupants might arouse question in the minds of observers should be reported at once. "The best way to control crime is the catch the thief or hijacker before he acts," Mr. Morris said. He added that residents victimized by prowlers should call at once to give officers an even break in efforts to arrest the guilty parties.

Guard Against Fire

Assistant Fire Chief Grover Habern urged Wichitans to exercise extreme care in using stoves—to avoid overheating, or flue fires—and to watch open fires. And no trash fire should be allowed to burn without some one watching—the danger of the flames spreading to adjacent property must not be overlooked.

Mr. Habern added that youngsters should watch the use of fireworks as carelessness easily results in a residence blaze or injury to some friend or playmate.

Wichita Falls has an excellent chance to maintain a good fire record for 1932 provided the total insured losses from fire are not boosted by an outbreak Saturday.

OIL INQUIRY IN NIGHT SESSION

Commission Speeds Up On Proration Hearing

being East Texans, who are hoping for a bigger allowable in their pool.

Foley said that of the 403 producers in the Yates pool only four had been drilled in the past two years. The allowable there had been decreased from 130,000 barrels daily in 1929 to 61,000 barrels daily at present. There are 19,100 acres in the area, or an average of one well to each 47½ acres.

Considerable contention was expected in discussions of conditions in the Conroe and East Texas fields. East Texans believe their allowable has been too low compared with the 20,000 barrels daily output permitted from the 86 wells in the Conroe pool under the commission's latest order.

Buyers Questioned

The investigation set for Tyler was decided on after East Texans had questioned prospective buyers of oil in that area as to whom they bought oil from in the past and detailed information had been sought with reference to transportation practices.

State Senator Tom Pollard of Tyler, representing the East Texas Producers and Royalty Owners association, said the line of questioning that had been pursued was an effort to track down reports that from 50,000 to 80,000 barrels daily were being illegally produced in that area and dumped into the market in competition with crude placed on the market in conformity with the railroad commission's regulations.

"We want to cooperate with the commission to determine where this oil is coming from, how it is transported and to whom it is going," Senator Pollard said. "Unless the commission can stop the discrimination being practiced and the illegal taking of oil from East Texas, proration in that field cannot continue."

Could Alter Order

Commissioner Ernest O. Thompson told Pollard that should the Tyler investigation reveal unfair conditions existed, the commission then could alter its order fixing the market demand allowable for that area.

A number of concerns known to have been buying oil in East Texas in the past still had not made nominations as requested by the commission, Commissioner Thompson said it was the duty of the commission to obtain these nominations and that it would do so and consider them in fixing the allowable.

Representatives of several of the pipe line companies met with agents of the commission to recheck the list of nominations to eliminate duplications.

Mrs. Mooney Talks To F. R.

Mr. Roosevelt, a pile of papers almost hiding him, Mrs. Mooney said:

"I wish you would do your utmost to help my boy, who has been in prison, although he is innocent, for almost 17 years. My boy is a good boy."

Roosevelt answered slowly: "I feel sure because so many people believe he is innocent that there must be some reason for believing in his innocence."

"I am unable to take any action as governor," Mr. Roosevelt explained. Scott interrupted to say two other governors had written to Governor Rolph urging a pardon for Mooney, who is serving a life sentence.

The governor then went on to explain he would write to Mr. Rolph after he retires from the governorship and before he becomes president March 4.

Scott said he told Mr. Roosevelt that President Wilson had "saved Mooney's life" by communicating with the California governor. Mr. Roosevelt answered, "Yes, I am familiar with that, as I was in Washington at the time."

Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy during the Wilson administration.

Scott and Patterson said Mr. Roosevelt "should demand the immediate release of Mooney," adding if the president-elect interested himself in the case "he would rally the sympathy of the workers of the country and force California to free an innocent man."

After the Roosevelt conference Mrs. Mooney, just back from a world trip, continued on toward California. Her companions returned to New York.

Tomorrow Mr. Roosevelt ends four years as governor. He will retire at midnight although formal inauguration of his successor, Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman will not take place until Monday noon.

Tomorrow night, Mr. Roosevelt will give a dinner for his state cabinet. Afterward he will "look in" at the inaugural ball and motor down to Hyde Park, a private citizen until March 4. Mr. Roosevelt will return to Albany for the inauguration Monday morning.

TWO ROBBERY SUSPECTS HELD

Grapevine, Texas, Bank Raided by Young Pair

GRAPEVINE, Texas, Dec. 30. (AP)—Two suspects were arrested within two hours after the Grapevine Home bank was robbed of $2,280 at 12:30 p. m. today. One youth, 20, was identified by bank officials and $1,430 taken from his hip pocket.

He begged R. E. Morrow, president, to "be easy" with him.

He was captured on the banks of Bear creek, six miles south of here by two grocery clerks, Edward Davis and Gordon Tate.

The bank officials were hesitant about identifying the second suspect, who was arrested on the Grapevine-Arlington road about six miles from town. He was sent to Fort Worth in custody of Deputy Sheriff Hukill.

A posse of 20 officers, heavily armed, continued to search the wooded area in the vicinity of the creek after Sheriff Wright had sent for all available deputies.

Two young robbers locked six officials and customers in the bank's vault, scooped up the money and escaped in an automobile.

TWO HELD FOR LOUISIANA RAID

ALEXANDRIA, La., Dec. 30. (AP)—Two men were under arrest today, one in Texarkana, Ark., and the other in Winnfield, as suspects in the robbery of the Bank of Winnfield at noon Thursday by three unmasked bandits, who escaped with approximately $3,000.

At the request of Sheriff Sholars, of Winn parish, Arkansas officers arrested Gyp Barton, 23, of Lewisville, Ark., and detained him at Texarkana. At Winnfield, Henry Tolbert, 30, brother-in-law of Barton, was being held by officers as a suspected accomplice.

B. T. Bailey, president of the bank; J. A. Nugent, cashier, and Sheriff Sholars left Winnfield today for Texarkana for the purpose of questioning Barton and seeking to identify him as one of the bandits. According to Miller county, Arkansas, officials, Barton was arrested at the home of a friend at Garland City, Ark., last night.

He was held on the strength of reports that he owned an automobile that appeared to fit the description of one of the automobiles used by the trio of bandits in making their escape.

Barton is said to have denied any knowledge of the robbery, but admitted, officers said, that he had been in Winnfield yesterday.

Gotham Wonders What Mr. McKee Will Do In 1933

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. (AP)—The din that greets the new year on skyscraper isle will herald also the descent of a scholarly young man into the obscurity of a $25,000 job, and all over town they're asking:

"What will Joseph V. McKee do then?"

The former teacher of Greek, who stepped up from the aldermanic presidency to the mayoralty when the airy James J. Walker stepped out, goes back to his old post the first of the year. An older head in the person of John P. O'Brien, Tammany man, goes in.

But among the McKee supporters are those who say that their man, who found time in his four months as mayor to tweak the tiger's tail, will be back in the fight next fall. Several weeks ago he sounded a summons to a crusade against what he called waste, extravagance and abuses in the city government, a speech that was interpreted by newspapers as an open break with Tammany.

Although he has said nothing of his intentions, the stirrings of a possible "fusion" movement have been noted, and the slogan "McKee for mayor in 1933" has been voiced in some quarters.

Cotton Consumption Reported Increasing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. (INS)—A fairly optimistic report on the prospects of the American cotton industry in the near future was issued by the department of agriculture today.

The report stated cotton consumption in the United States was increasing. American exports to the orient were being "surprisingly well maintained" and the Indian long staple cottons this year were of small quantity and of low quality.

Pointing out that the Indian cottons compete directly with American exports abroad, the report added:

"This means that foreign mills will be more dependent upon American cotton than even the small size of the Indian crop would indicate."

Total world cotton production during the 1932-33 season is now estimated at 24,000,000 bales of 478 pounds, which is the smallest world figure since 1927-28.

Cotton consumption in the United States during November was the largest for any month in more than a year and a half, the report said, but sales of textiles were again considerably below production.

The trend of prices of spot cotton increased slightly this month with prices averaging 5.87 cents on Dec. 19.

AVERAGE FAMILY ILLNESS COST

Average annual cost of medical care per family ranges from $71 to $311, depending on income.

Average person is disabled by illness from 4 to 9 days a year.

HOW IT COMPARES WITH OTHER ANNUAL EXPENDITURES

(By NEA Service).

The staggering financial burden that illness imposes on the nation each year is indicated in the above chart, which compares the annual outlay of $3,000,000,000—as fixed by the committies on the costs of medical cares after a five-year study—with other large national expenditures.

This amount is more than 10 times the sum that European nations were scheduled to pay the United States, $247,000,000, in principal and interest on their war debts in 1932. In less than three years it would equal the total amount of principal, $11,800,000,000, that these nations are due to pay on their war debts in 60 years.

Nor does this huge figure, on the costs of medical care, include losses of income suffered during illness.

The investigators found that the cost of medical care varies widely between families, the average ranging from $71 a year in the lowest income group to $311 the highest income group. Even among families in the same income group, however, there is a wide variation—of those having incomes under $2,000, 40 per cent paid less than $25 in a year, while two-tenths of 1 per cent paid over $1,000.

In the boom year 1929, the committee found the average net income of 142,000 physicians was $5,467. However, half of this number had incomes of only $3,800 or less, the incomes of the more prosperous physicians in the big cities serving to pull up the average. Fifteen per cent (21,000 doctors) had incomes of less than $1,800 and 4 per cent lost money. Since that year, the committee reported, physicians' incomes have decreased.

As a solution of the problem, a majority report by the committee on the costs of medical care recommends medical service by organized groups of physicians, dentists, nurses, pharmacists, etc., payment for same to be made through insurance or taxation, or both. However, this would not preclude individual fee service for those who preferred it.

A minority report views with alarm the invasion of governmental agencies into the practice of medicine and recommends continued personal relationship between physician and patient.

The committee, an unofficial organization composed of physicians, public health officers, economists and representatives of various institutions began its five-year study in 1927. Its chairman is Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford university, and former president of the American Medical association.

RIVER FLOODS BEGIN EBBING

Streams Inundate Wide Areas in South

(By The Associated Press)

Upper reaches of flooding southern rivers began to recede today but downstream the rises continued, with water lapping at overflow marks on the gauges and spreading over more lowland territory.

Rains last night were generally so light as to have little or no effect on the streams.

Rome, Ga., whose thinly populated districts along the banks of three rivers had been under water for several days, was encouraged by reports that the Etowah and Coosanania, which converge there to form the Coosa, were falling at Canton and Resaca.

At Atlanta, the Chattahoochee rose again but did not approach the 28 feet of two days ago.

A dozen more negro families were moved out of North Montgomery, Ala., and transportation was held ready for others as the Alabama went to 40 feet, four above flood stage. The city proper was believed to be in a little danger.

Upper and middle portions of eastern North Carolina rivers were falling but floods continued in the lower reaches.

No change was reported in the situation in South Carolina where the Santee was spreading harmlessly over lowlands.

Peru Makes Attempt to Settle Bolivian Dispute

QUITO, Ecuador, Dec. 30. (AP)—It was reported today in unusually well-informed circles that with the cooperation of Miguel Cruchaga, former Chilean ambassador to the United States and now the Chilean secretary of state, a proposal has been made for the solution of the conflict between Peru and Colombia by which the government of Peru would assist in restoring Colombian sovereignty in Leticia.

Colombia would agree to revision of the Solomon Lozana treaty, and Ecuador would participate in the negotiations. Under the treaty Colombia holds sovereignty in Leticia. Several months ago a number of Peruvian civilians occupied the town of Leticia and since then there have been daily reports of the gatherings of armed forces in the vicinity.

State Restrained From Prosecuting Oil Case

AUSTIN, Dec. 30. (AP)—The supreme court today issued an order in the case of Alpha Petroleum company against the Texas Railroad commission temporarily restraining the commission from further prosecuting a suit pending in a district court of Travis county against the company.

The court restrained the enforcement of any order heretofore entered in the suit pending the final determination of suits concerning the same parties in the supreme court.

The litigation was begun in Montgomery county in connection with the commission's attempt to prorate the production of oil from the company's wells in the Conroe field.

W. C. T. U. Head Resigns Job After Charge Of Affection Alienation

CHICAGO, Dec. 30. (AP)—Mrs. Beata Brucer, under $500 peace bond on a disorderly conduct charge, resigned today as president of the Cook county chapter of the Woman's Christian Temperance union.

The charge against Mrs. Brucer was made by Mrs. Amelia Lynch, who alleged alienation of the affections of her husband, Arthur J. Lynch, a publicity agent for a prohibition organization.

Judge Joseph Graber said the two women appeared in his courtroom chambers yesterday and that Mrs. Lynch charged that the woman temperance worker with visiting cabarets, in her husband's company, paying his room rent, and allowing him to live in her home.

Mrs. Brucer replied, the judge said, that her association with Lynch was in connection with a "survey on alcohol," which they were making.

Sarcastic Language Found In Persia's Defense Of Oil Contract Cancellation

LONDON, Dec. 30. (UP)—Forceful and sarcastic charges contained in the Persian government's defiant defense of its Anglo-Persian oil concession cancellation were revealed today when translation of the recent Persian note to Great Britain was completed.

The note was in reply to a British ultimatum of Dec. 3 threatening to submit the case to the permanent court of international justice unless Persia withdrew the cancellation.

Persia replied by submitting the dispute to the League of Nations on the ground that the world court could not settle the dispute between the Persian government and a commercial company, although the British government owns most of the Anglo-Persian stock.

Although the complete text of the Persian note had not been published, The United Press learned that its chief charges included:

The Anglo-Persian company itself invalidated the concession by failing to pay royalties during the world war, although the oil used by the allied navies entailed "enormous profits" to the company.

The company made grants from the income of some of its subsidiaries, charging these grants as expenditure.

The company refused to pay income tax in Persia, "although the income tax law has existed in Persia since 1309." This was regarded as "defying" Persian laws.

The company refused to pay the Persians their share in the subsidiary companies' imagines.

The d'Arcy concession, one of the most important links in Britain's world-wide fuel supplies, was originally obtained under conditions tantamount to duress.

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

POSSE TAKES FIVE BANDITS

Use of Tear Gas Decides Desperate Battle

JAY, Okla., Dec. 30. (UP)—A score of Oklahoma and Kansas officers and federal agents raided a retreat in the foothills near Kenwood today and arrested five bank robbery suspects after a gun battle.

Three men, including one officer, were wounded.

The five suspects, all of them wanted for investigation in recent Kansas bank robberies, were taken immediately to Dodge City, Kan.

Deputy U. S. Marshal Charles Warner, Tulsa, was wounded in the arm. Jack Atkins and "Big Boy" Baulkner, two of the suspects, also were wounded.

The officers planned to stop at Vinita so that physicians could dress the wounds of the two injured suspects. Sheriff Jess Lindley said they were seriously wounded. Deputy Warner's arm was shattered.

The other three suspects gave the names of J. C. Casey, Elmer Ross and Don Bland. They were wanted in Edwards county, Kan.

Officers reported finding a veritable arsenal in the hill retreat. A dozen pistols and rifles were seized along with three automobiles with license plates of various states.

The tip came from Kansas officers who arrived in this vicinity early today and recruited officers from Nowata, Vinita, Tulsa and Bartlesville. They drove to the ranch and deployed about the house.

Sheriff Jess Lindley of Jay and Deputy Warner attempted to open the door. The first shot, from a rifleman inside the home, struck Warner. His companion officer grappled with one of the suspects, using him as a shield. The posse then laid down a barrage of rifle fire. This failing, they threw tear gas inside the house.

In a few moments, the suspects trooped out, ready to surrender.

A New Approach

A CLEVELAND firm has devised a new and interesting plan for keeping workers at work.

This firm, making machine tools and astronomical instruments, has just as much stock on hand, already manufactured, as most firms. Fortunately it is not perishable or quickly obsolete.

But this company decided to ignore those goods, or inventory, and operate as though their shelves were bare. When they get an order, they send it out to the shop to be made up new. Or if they fill the order from stock, they build a new machine to replace the one sent out.

News that this firm is operating on such a plan has been circulated in its trade circle, and has resulted in orders that might not have come in otherwise, officials of the company believe. Several orders have been given on the express condition that the goods be manufactured new, thus making new work, and at least keeping men at work even if not employing new ones.

Firms which fill orders from old stock are simply putting the proceeds into their coffers, the workmen's share in them already having been distributed. The Cleveland scheme gives the worker his cut immediately.

Naturally this is a temporary measure. Goods made up and stocked must be disposed of sooner or later. But the Cleveland scheme, if extended to every firm that could possibly afford it, might keep employment up in the present emergency, and excess stocks then could be gradually absorbed when demand picks up. In a time when every expedient, temporary though it may be, seems helpful, the Cleveland plan is worthy of thought by every business leader.

Our Art Goes Voyaging

TRULY, these are strange times.

For the past 50 years, art treasures of Europe have tended to gravitate to America. Chuckling behind her at the spurious, moaning loudly at the genuine, Europe has watched many of its olden art treasures drawn from the old shore by the golden magnet of America. Moral protest, embargo, counterbidding, all were in vain. When American magnificoes wanted art from Europe, they got it, with a capital A.

Now we see a curious spectacle. A French syndicate has been formed, with more than a million in hard cash to be dispensed by Edouard Jonas, to buy back French art objects, paintings, furniture and sculpture and return them to Paris. He reports a ready market there, although he closed his New York gallery six months ago because no one was buying.

Like the flow of people from Europe to the United States, the flow of art is reversing itself. And the country to which it is returning is none other than France, which is reported to be showing a certain unwillingness to pay certain debts which certain creditors have been inartistic enough to feel that Frenchmen owe.

Well, we played the game when we had the cards. So we can't kick when the cards are running against us. Most people will feel that America can find more use for the money right now than the art.

Honorable Mention

THIS paper Thursday morning carried a paragraph reciting that police officers were called Wednesday night by a resident near Seventh and Holliday streets who saw a Tilden bus slow down and turn off its regular course at that intersection. The incident points a type of civic alertness for which city officials have been pleading, and one which is commendable.

As it turned out, the bus driver was not being hijacked. The vehicle was detoured on its way to the car barn because it had run out of gas. There are many precedents, however, to account for the neighbor's suspicion that a hijacking might be under way. His immediate telephoning of that information to police headquarters was exactly the kind of cooperation which the city government and the police department have invited.

Residents of the city have been asked by local officials to notify police headquarters immediately upon observing any incident, or loitering strangers, calculated to arouse suspicion. Prompt dispatch of a police scout car to such a location is a valuable aid in checking crime. The attitude and action of the individual who reported the bus incident Wednesday night is to be commended to all other residents of the city.

Hurrahs for the Fugitive

THE sympathy which so many people extended to Robert Elliott Burns, the Georgia prison fugitive whom New Jersey's governor refused to send back to Georgia, undoubtedly was due not so much to the man's story of injustice and brutality as to the age-old impulse to extend good wishes to any man who is fleeing from the law.

That impulse dates away back in the history of civilization. Automatically, without inquiring into the justice or otherwise of the case, we have a queer fellow-feeling for any chap who is running away from restraint. We have a sneaking hope that he gets clear away, and we don't often bother to find out whether he is fit to be at large.

Burns had got away, made a useful citizen of himself, been recaptured, escaped again and established himself once more. That a great many people were glad when Governor Moore refused to send him back does not necessarily mean that the nation as a whole is aroused about the condition of Georgia's penal system.

SO THEY SAY!

It would be naive on my part to request to be left alone after my death. There cannot be peace around the grave of leaders of those great transformations which are called revolutions.—Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—It may be recalled that whenever Dr. Representative William Irving Sirovich, Democrat, New York City, is not dealing with the scientific or political facets of his complex nature, he discloses strong dramatic leanings.

WILLIAM I. SIROVICH

He even creates drama for stage production and with true-to-type artistic temperament, debates lustily with dramatic critics their assessment of his plays. They are, he contends, just sneering spoilers of true drama.

A Dramatic Touch

Between times, in the house, Doc Sirovich has treated the membership to many a scientific discourse regarding prohibition.

When the beer bill came up for house action this session, the doctor's dramatic instinct again held true. He dramatized his contention that beer and milk were much alike under chemical analysis with bottles filled with amber fluids.

The following day, however, when the beer bill was on its actual passage, achieved ultimately by a house vote of 230 to 165, Dr. Sirovich returned to the chamber in time to hear somebody poking fun at his milk-and-beer parallel in the form of a proposed amendment. He reacted promptly.

And at that point arose a situation that for a few moments all but killed the beer bill. The combination of Dr. Sirovich's dramatic instincts and the intricate house rules came within an ace of throwing the beer bill into the discard trimmed of its enacting clause.

For when Sirovich, seething with a desire to talk back, attempted to get the floor he found himself blocked by the parliamentary situation which made a motion to strike out the enacting clause the only method open to him to get a hearing. He made it, talked, then sought to withdraw his amendment and was blocked.

A Close Call

At that moment a quick count indicated that the "drys" might be in the majority on the floor. Representative Bankhead, in the chair, counted heads slowly and with a troubled face as pages sped about rounding up missing members. Even so and despite an intervening speech by Representative Sabath of Illinois to gain time for that mobilization, the first count stood 108 in favor of striking out the enacting clause to 132 against.

It so encouraged the drys that a teller count was demanded showing 118 for and 168 against. The wet mobilization was in progress and the bill was safe.

Convict Offers To Take Woman's Place In Electric Chair

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 30. (INS)—Howard Curtis, Atlanta, Ga., barber sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of his sweetheart, Annette Bryant, in a letter to Governor Blackwood today offered to take the place of Mrs. Beatrice Ferguson Snipes, expectant mother, in the electric chair.

Curtis wrote Governor Blackwood he would die in the expectant mother's stead if she were freed or her death sentence commuted to life imprisonment.

"It ain't right for a baby to be brought up without its mother," Curtis said.

Curtis, a husband and father, shot his waitress sweetheart to death in what he claimed was a suicide pact. He contended he failed to take his life when the remaining bullets in the gun snapped.

Mrs. Snipes, who expects to bear a child early next month, is condemned to die April 7 for killing a rural policeman who stopped her husband's car in search of whisky.

CONDEMNED WOMAN TOO ILL TO DISCUSS OFFER

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 30. (AP)—Mrs. Beatrice Ferguson Snipes was not "feeling well enough" today to discuss the offer of a young Georgia prisoner to take her "place in the electric chair."

"I am not feeling so well today," was the message the 29-year-old expectant mother sent from her cell in the state penitentiary here where she is under a sentence of death.

Mr. Snipes, convicted of slaying a York county officer, expects a child to be born to her within a few weeks. She already is the mother of a 6-year-old son.

The offer to pay "her death penalty for her" came from Howard Curtis, 24-year-old father of three children, serving a life sentence in Atlanta for the slaying of a waitress.

In a letter to Governor Blackwood, he offered to be electrocuted in Mrs. Snipes' stead "for the sake of her children" and let her serve his life sentence, if the South Carolina governor could arrange "the trade" with Governor Russell of Georgia.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE SNAKE BROTHER—Believing that the fate of the reptile will influence the fate of the child, little Constancio de Veyra has been given a pet snake as his twin. The reptile is given the same consideration as any member of the family, and the child has literally been reared with it. The Visayans in the village of Bato, Leyte, P. I., superstitiously regard them as brothers. However, the orientals have not the fear and repugnance of snake that is harbored in the occident. Constancio is the son of Mrs. Lucio de Veyra, wife of a merchant in Bato, and the family reverently observe the birthday of the unique twins on Aug. 16 each year.

PARIS LOVE

by NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Since her husband died 10 years ago Kate Sayers had made $60,000,000 by continuing the manufacture in France of the now famous American motor car Europa. In constant attendance on her was Alfredo Santini, whom she knew only as a gigolo and racing car driver but who was the chief of a gang of jewel thieves. Mrs. Sayers' daughter Alacia had recently fallen in love at first sight with Armand de Pas, Prince d'Orsant, who was learning the business at Piron's jewelry shop. One of Santini's gang, employed at Piron's, substituted imitations for Mrs. Sayers' fabulous rubies the day Santini left Paris in the Europa racer he was to drive in the Grand Prix at Monte Carlo. Armand was suspected, but Alacia suspected Santini. Armand was mistaken for Santini by a distrustful confederate, who warned him not to remove the rubies from the upholstery of his car seat, and to return to Paris. Armand decided to ram Santini's car in the race. Alacia surprised Santini in the garage where he had secreted his Europa. They struggled, he fell and hit his head, and as he lay unconscious, she changed into his clothes, helmet and goggles. A man dressed as a mechanic, coming to look for Santini, swung onto her car. Misled by Alacia's disguise, he poked a pistol into her ribs, and forced her to drive to the starting line.

INSTALLMENT XXXIV

She could still cry out and tell them who she was. If she did, Armand would start in any event. If she drove, she would be driving against him! A nervous excitement like electricity played up and down her spine, the blood sang in her ears. What should she do? Where was Armand? She looked about wildly, and finally caught sight of him, waiting in his car not 50 feet to her right. She raised her arm in a frantic signal intended to convey her questioning distress, but in the deafening noise it was hopeless to try and make him hear her. And then it was too late. The starting signal had come and more through instinct than intention she had shot across the line and was humming up the slope on the first lap of the course, a grey streak of living steel prodded into unbelievable effort by the frenzied approval of the watching mob.

To Armand the signal from the shrouded figure in the number five Europa was infuriating. It had all the appearance of a final challenge, a gesture of defiance, and it made his blood boil with anger. The damnable cheek of the man, turning up at the final second, risking disqualification, and then with a flourish, departing on a race from which, Armand knew very well he had no intention of turning back! Car number five had started on what was going to be its final journey, de Pas thought with an unholy satisfaction as the steep grade of the first long ramp melted under his swift progress. But beyond this fact, Armand did not allow himself to think at all, and as he found himself staring at the sanded track ahead, he ceased to feel any emotion whatsoever, and seemed to have become a part of the machine he drove, sensitive only to the strangely living quality of the throbbing motor.

The car immediately ahead of him in the formation of fours had been a Bugatti, and he passed it on the open space in front of the Casino at a speed which made the long blue jewel of the other car appear to be standing still. Then the track plunged downwards into a narrow chasm, winding between cliff-like houses whose windows were peopled by screaming enthusiasts whose shouting he did not even hear. The other Europa was nowhere in sight as he plunged along a second declivity and took a corner on two wheels; then all at once, there it was ahead of him the number five showing plainly as it climbed rapidly out of sight, but Armand made no attempt to gain on it. He wanted to test the course first and note the conditions it offered for what he intended doing. The next twist led up a steep hill with tall houses on the one hand and an open parapet on the other for a quarter of a mile! "No good, this," he decided, for the slightest deviation at high speed would send them both hurtling over the edge to the tiled roofs a hundred feet below. Then the route straightened out into a district composed of shops. There were tram lines here whose rails would explain a skid very nicely, but it also was too dangerous a stage for his drama for the shop windows where crowded with watchers and the sidewalks packed to the very edge. Then almost at the end of the first lap he found what he wanted. A sloping roadway led in curves like a letter "S" to the mouth of a railroad underpass which framed a blue patch of the open sea beyond, and a sharp turn to the right disclosed a long flat stretch of dirt road along the water's edge. There was a low wall towards the sea, protecting a drop of 10 or 15 feet to the water on his left. On his right the cliffs arose in a sheer wall, and this was the only portion of the route clear of spectators. Instantly he decided that it would do. Here no innocent bystanders could be involved, at any rate! And once he decided, he gave all his attention to the car ahead and his intended victim.

To Alacia, all unconscious of her lover's plan, the race had become, after the first doubtful moment, something to glory in. A fierce pride and exhilaration filled her, and every thought except that of doing credit to the Europa was wiped magically from her mind. Indeed there was no time for any other consideration as the track arose and fell in front of her, and the car seeming to take on wings. The first lap, she realized immediately, would be the hardest because of its unfamiliarity and like the man behind her, she concentrated on making mental notes of its difficulties. They were sufficient, she soon found, to tax the uttermost skill in her possession, but keyed to a high pitch of excitement she was insensible of the slightest sensation of fear until the homestretch of the dirt road along the sea front spread out ahead of her and allowed a conscious relaxing of her nerves. She decided to keep this bit of road in mind as a point of rest, and then plunging through the opening at the foot of the ramp, she was suddenly climbing towards the Casino again in the beginning of the second lap. This was accomplished easily and it was not until the third round of the amazing course lay ahead of her, that she began to realize there was something extraordinary in the behavior of one of the cars which were following. It was, she gradually sensed, deliberately chasing her, rather than merely driving the race.

Owing to the narrowness of a greater part of the course, passing was not allowed except in certain stated places. But, as Alacia approaches the curved descent which led to the railroad underpass for the third time, she could see in her mirror that Armand's car was close behind. More, it was edging her towards the outer curb, against all regulation. He must be mad, she thought, trying to pass on such a dangerous corner! But though she held out a warning hand, his car continued to approach. The realization of this incredible situation caused her to take the next turn badly, and very nearly caused her a spill, but going under the railroad bridge she managed to skid the curve and the straight road by the sea lay ahead of her. Then she permitted herself a hasty glance backward, and to her horror she saw the nose of number seven heading her off toward the water. If he kept it up, she thought in a panic, there could be but one result. Two cars could not possibly pass here, and she was on the outside. It would mean death. An icy chill came over her as she realized with a sudden deadly certainty that he meant to ram her deliberately! With frenzied hands she sounded her siren, but the desperate wail of the horn had no effect on the intent of her pursuer. It was a question of seconds now. With one hand she tore off her masking goggles and turned a desperate, stricken face towards him; saw his head jerk back in horrified dismay and knew that he had recognized her, and knew in the same instant, that she had revealed herself too late. The screaming brakes could never stop the heavy car in time. Maddened by terror, Alacia gave her wheel a desperate turn and jumped, her head striking the low stone parapet, her body lying in a little crumpled heap on the narrow footpath as her car plunged through the barrier into the sea, just as number seven slid past the place it had occupied a second sooner.

A hundred feet down the road, the number seven Europa came to a standstill and Armand springing out ran frantically back towards that hideous gap in the low parapet through which number five had vanished. In swift and terrifying succession the other racers screamed past him, the drivers unhesitating, and offering no slightest motion of aid, as is the cruel code of the track. The car which Alacia had been driving having completely disappeared, it was doubtful if any of them realized what had happened, and her limp little figure huddled against the wall must have appeared to them as a mere blurred speck by the roadside. Fortunately, Armand's car had been left on a broad ledge which jutted like a balcony over the sea, or the oncoming cars might easily have piled up to destruction, but he did not think of this as he struggled to reach her through the blinding dust and the gravel flung in his face by the swift passing of the race.

She was dead, he thought, and he had killed her! A miracle had occurred, an evil miracle which caused Santini to bear a semblance to Alacia in that one awful moment when her face had stared back at him just before the crash. The unconscious figure ahead, lying so terribly twisted and limp was Santini, he knew of course that it must be Santini! It could not in reason be anybody else and yet at the moment when he had borne down upon it with murderous intent, the face which was barred to him in useless appeal had by some strange turn of subconscious thought, seemed to be hers.

If the tea steeps over three minutes, too much tannin is obtained. With an oversupply of tannin in the tea, it often appears cloudy.

LEGISLATIVE GROUP ATTACKS TEXAS ATHLETIC SITUATION

DISMISSAL OF COACHES URGED

Physical Education Degenerated, Is Claim

AUSTIN, Dec. 30. (AP)—The Texas legislative committee on organization and economy, in a report issued today, attacked the athletic situation in state supported institutions of higher learning.

The committee asserted that physical education departments in state colleges had "degenerated into athletics" so far as such work for men was concerned. Recommendation was made that the colleges dismiss the majority of their male coaches, claimed by the committee to be unfit for the jobs, and employ physical education directors in their stead, who would be trained for their work like professors of other departments.

Claim Coaches Untrained

In most cases, the present coaches are untrained both academically and as physical education directors, the committee reported, adding that if the colleges are to be worthy of state support "the power of these uneducated athletic coaches should be completely crushed, or the real aims of the colleges will continue to be distorted."

"There is little reason why the state should finance the educational programs for the cities in which the teachers colleges are located," the committee said, asserting that athletics was over-emphasized at the expense of physical education.

"The aim of athletics is not the physical education aim," the report said. "In athletics the aim is to produce an automatic part of a perfectly working machine which can win games. No attention to individual needs or the effect upon individuals is considered unless these affect the working of the machine. . . . the individual's health and needs are frequently sacrificed to over training to the winning of games. The differences between physical education and athletics . . . is the objective—whether it is to develop individuals or win games.

Too Much Power

"The fact that in several colleges the physical education employes are considered as coaches, rather than educators, and gave their ranks as coaches indicated the light in which they hold their positions. The fact that most instructors are untrained for physical education instruction and have been selected from 'successful' high school coaches, indicates their unfitness for giving physical education instruction.

"It is not too much to require that instructors of physical education have the master's degree, and in some cases the doctor's degree."

The committee asserted that publicity attendant upon the coaches' athletic activity, often gave them "a great deal of direct power over the college and indirect power in the communities, so that the aims of the college become distorted."

Indians Release Veteran Jamieson

CLEVELAND, Dec. 30. (AP)—Charley Jamieson—an outfielder of 17 summers in the major leagues—got his unconditional release from the Cleveland Indians today.

The one and only Jamie for Cleveland fans paid the price of age and illness. He is in his 41st year, and dropped out in midseason last year with partial paralysis from sinus.

Even before that Jamieson had been replaced in left field by Joe Vosmik, a Cleveland youngster, although the veteran still had his batting eye.

Jamieson entered the big leagues in 1915 and came to Cleveland in 1919 from the Athletics. He already was acquiring a reputation as one of the fastest fielding performers in the league. His batting became better as the years went on, and when his release came today he had a 17-year average of .304 at the plate.

Passed Up Toledo

With release of the veteran Jamie, the Indians lost the last of the men on the team that captured the only pennant Cleveland ever won—in 1920. All the rest have been traded, or paid the penalty of age.

It has been Jamieson's philosophy that he would remain at the throttle in the majors until he wasn't needed any more, and for that reason last year he turned down the management of the Toledo American association club after the Indians had acquired it on option.

Jamieson was reported at his Paterson, N. J., home today, still suffering to a certain extent from sinus trouble. Friends here felt he would try to get on with a major league club as coach or utility outfielder. All of them passed him up at the $7,500 waiver price.

Georgia Dean Urges Scholarships For Athletes To Put End To Subsidization

Delegates to National Collegiate Athletic Association Hear Plan to Give Player Just Returns

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Dr. Steadman V. Sanford, dean of the University of Georgia, rolled a verbal bombshell between the legs of the complacent delegates to the National Collegiate Athletic association today and promptly started a movement for a new and sensible definition of an amateur athlete.

In a quiet drawl, never acrimonious, often smiling to take the edge from his words, the pleasant-voiced southern educator asked the association point-blank why it gathered annually for days of discussion, and then did nothing about such pressing problems as football deaths and injuries, rules changes, proselyting and subsidization until forced into it by the weight of public opinion.

Rhodes Plan Urged

"Why cannot this association modify the definition of an amateur in terms of the rules and regulations that govern the appointment of Rhodes scholars?" he asked.

"I have never heard any criticism of that plan. Any position, loan, or scholarship, open to all students should be open to any student—athletic or non-athletic—but under our present rule it is not."

He pointed out that Rhodes scholars, chosen for a combination of athletic and scholastic ability as well as leadership, went to Oxford, England, to study and were accepted in that country as true amateurs.

"If we adopt the rule governing the selection of Rhodes scholars as our definition of an amateur, a new day will dawn in college relations. Hypocrisy will disappear. The present rule or definition so far as it relates to an amateur is out of date—it has been supplanted by the rule governing the selection of Rhodes scholars.

"No Rhodes scholar has ever been denied the right and the privilege of representing his college in athletic competition," Dr. Sanford said, "despite the fact that his scholarship frankly comes in part from his athletic ability.

Rule Out of Date

"If the English do not consider the Rhodes scholar plan a violation of amateurism, then why should we? England has advanced—we have fallen behind. By this plan we put emphasis on scholastic attainment—the real purpose of a college.

"We have a rule that states that no loan or scholarship can be awarded a student 'wholly or in part for athletic ability.' This rule is out of date. We know it. It is largely responsible for the subterfuge that exists—and yet we do not seem to have the moral courage to formulate a rule than can be enforced.

"Shall we hold to a rule that is out of date, and continue a practice that is shameful. Or shall we adopt a rule that can be followed and in a large measure put an end to subsidizing?"

Dr. Sanford accused the delegates of timidity in approaching the "greatest evil in athletics today—subsidizing."

"We all know this evil exists in our colleges and universities, to a large extent in some and to a small extent in others. Why do we continue to discuss this evil without coming to some definite plan for its elimination? It can be eliminated—it should be—it must be! As practical-minded men we should face the situation as it exists in this modern complex civilization.

Urges Action

"All of us like to think of the ideal—but we have to live and move in the realm of the real. We must define in positive terms what really constitutes proper loans, positions and scholarships. When this is done, it is my opinion that colleges and universities will follow the regulation in letter and spirit."

Dr. Sanford explained later if a wealthy man were to subsidize a scholar, that would be considered a marvelous thing for science; but if his brother were to send a deserving boy with athletic ability through school that was subsidization.

He asked that the association, before weight of public opinion forced it into action, do something voluntarily about a situation where young men who have been "stars, idols of alumni, students, public, sporting writers, young men who have failed to complete their college work, failed to receive diplomas."

"They qualify neither for teaching nor coaching positions, he said, but are young men exploited for the glory of their institutions at the expense of themselves, eligible to play on any team in college through meeting minimum requirements, with nothing to show for it at the end for four years in school.

N.C.A.A. ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Griffith Named President As Meeting Ends

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The football rules committee, formally charged with the task of taking such further steps as may be essential to safeguard the game and its players, was organized for 1933 today by election of Walter R. Okeson, Lehigh university, Bethlehem, Pa., as chairman, to succeed the late Edward Kimball Hall.

In addition to this anticipated choice of a new chief executive of gridiron law-makers, the National Collegiate Athletic association re-elected William S. Langford, New York, as secretary, increased the membership of the rules committee from 10 to 11 by making Amos Alonzo Stagg, Chicago, a life member and named Fielding H. Yost of Michigan to replace Stagg as the fourth district's representative.

Chicago Chosen

The N.C.A.A. then concluded its annual convention by electing Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of the "Big Ten," as its new president, succeeding Dr. Charles W. Kennedy of Princeton, who was made an honory president. Dr. S. V. Sanford of Georgia withdrew his name, put forward by some of his friends as a candidate for the presidency. Chicago was chosen as the site for the next convention, Dec. 29-30, 1933.

The combination of Okeson and Langford the football committee officers was agreed upon harmoniously. Langford was boomed by his friends for the chairmanship, due to his long association with Hall, but he was prevailed upon to continue as secretary. Okeson now is commissioner of the Eastern Collegiate association, which handles selection of football officials. He is a former coach and official, one of the best informed men on gridiron rules and recognized throughout the country as an authority.

Limit Membership

Although making an exception to its membership policy in order to provide a life place for Stagg, the N. C. A. A. pronounced definitely its policy of limiting the voting membership otherwise. Meanwhile it has agreed to extend advisory membership in the rules organization to three representatives of the national federation of state high schools, thus putting the interscholastic spokesmen on the same footing as the college football coaches and football officials.

Under this plan, the high schools will be given an adequate hearing in any discussion or recommendation of football rules changes at the 1933 meeting of the rules committee, to be held late in the winter. The American Football Coaches association today announced its advisory group of three, consisting of Howard Jones of Southern California, Lou Little of Columbia and Noble Kizer of Purdue, who succeeds Dan McGugin of Vanderbilt.

Other Officers

Through re-election of H. J. Steggman of Georgia to the rules committee, as representative of the third or southern district, the N. C. A. A. automatically postponed any consideration of increasing membership of the committee further, to give representation to the surviving group of the southern conference, now confined to the Carolinas, Virginia and Maryland. Steggman, as well as Yost, was named for a four-hour term.

Other members of the rules committee, all holdovers, are: Ray Morrison, Southern Methodist; W. O. Hunter, Southern California; W. G. Crowell, Swarthmore; C. Henry Smith, Denver; William J. Bingham, Harvard; Dana X. Bible, Nebraska.

In the state of officers of the N. C. A. A. for 1933, headed by Major Griffith, the following vice presidents representing each of the eight districts of the association were included: Prof. A. W. Marsh, Amherst; Dean R. L. Sackett, Penn State; Dr. W. O. Smith, Tulane; Prof. O. F. Long, Northwestern; Prof. H. H. King, Kansas State; Prof. D. A. Penick, Texas; Prof. H. L. Marshall, Utah, and Prof. W. B. Owens, Stanford. Dean Frank W. Nicholson of Wesleyan (Conn.) was re-elected secretary-treasurer although illness prevented his attendance at this year's meeting.

BOWL RIVALS TAPERING OFF

Trojans and Panthers Near End of Practice

By BRIAN BELL

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30. (AP)—Southern California and Pittsburgh, football opponents Monday in the annual West-East Rose bowl classic, were living in the future rather than the present today. To all practical purposes preparations for the big battle were completed and only a few final chores remained.

Southern California held its final practice, a rather perfunctory one, on its home field and packed for a move to Pasadena to test the Rose bowl turf in the last workout tomorrow.

At the same time Pitt was going through a brief schedule at Tucson, Ariz., with another equally brief one on tap for tomorrow, after which the Panthers will entrain for Pasadena.

Seeks 20th Victory

The physical condition of the two star teams was excellent. Only Capt. Paul Reider, Pittsburgh halfback, will be kept out of the starting lineup by injuries suffered in mid-November. Players of both teams were reported down to weight and Coaches Howard Jones and Jock Sutherland were concerned about keeping them in fit physical and mental condition for the game.

Supporters of the Trojans pointed to the fact they will be out to win their 20th straight game, no small football feat in any league, and will be charged with the responsibility of keeping their Rose bowl slate clean. They have won three games there.

This works both ways, for Pitt has a matter of a 47 to 14 defeat at the hands of Southern California in this same Rose bowl to wipe out and a chance to break into the victory column. The Panthers have played twice at Pasadena, losing once by an eye lash and the other time by several parasangs.

Announce Lineups In East-West Tilt

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 30. (AP)—Practice loads were lightened today as eastern and western collegiate stars tapered off on training for the annual East-West charity football game here Jan. 2.

Scrimmage yesterday developed an eastern casualty in Bob Rowe, Colgate fullback, who injured his neck while driving through the line. Harry Newman, Michigan quarterback, still was favoring an ankle injured in earlier action during the week. Coaches Andy Kerr and Dick Hanley, however, expect both players to be ready for the game.

The western squad took a morning workout on the University of California field and later went on a sightseeing trip in San Francisco. Coaches Dana Bible and Orin Hollingbery said the players had learned all the plays readily and the rest of the week would be confined to polishing off the rough spots.

Tentative starting lineups for both teams were selected as follows:

EAST	Pos.	WEST
F. Moss, Purdue	L.E.	R. Stone, O. Club
M. Wells, Minn.	L.T.	Bill Morgan, Ore.

Brazil Suspends Trio Of Water Polo Rebels

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 30. (AP)—Three Brazilian water polo players—Castello Branco, Serpa and Pernambuco—who led an attack on the Hungarian referee of the Brazil-Germany match in the Olympic games, have been suspended indefinitely by the Brazilian sports confederation.

The trio were suspended from further Olympic competition in Los Angeles.

Kansas, Missouri And Oklahoma Boast Galaxy Of Stars

However gloomy Coach Forrest C. (Phog) Allen of the University of Kansas waxes over his own prospects, the experts expect his champion Jayhawks to make themselves felt in the Big Six cage race. One of the principal reasons is Bill Johnson, all-conference center last year, who figures to outjump any rival in the circuit.

CAGE COACHES SHOW MODESTY

Big Six Mentors Sure 'Other Team' Will Win

By CHARLES A. GRUMICH

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 30. (AP)—Big Six conference basket ball coaches are engaged in their annual squabble over who's going to win the title—and none will claim it for his own or accept the predictions of others bestowing it upon him.

It's an old custom hereabouts for the Kansas coach or the Missouri mentor or the head tutor at Oklahoma, Nebraska, Kansas State or Iowa State to nominate one of the others for the title.

Dr. F. C. Allen, dean of America's basket ball coaches, who has piloted the University of Kansas cage forces to nine championships and a tie for another, announces he can't see his Jayhawkers finishing much better than fourth in the 1932-1933 season. He felt much the same way about the Jayhawks who won titles in the last two campaigns.

Allen Likes Sooners

Allen picks Oklahoma to win, because six Sooner letter men are available. He places Missouri second and Nebraska third.

Coach Charlie Corsaut of Kansas State thinks Kansas will repeat as champion because Allen has at center Bill Johnson, all-Big Six pivot man last season, who is expected to control the tip over all opposition.

Missouri and Oklahoma each retained one member of the 1932 Big Six all-star first team. Oklahoma's big shot is Andy Beck, guard-center-forward, and Missouri's is Johnny Cooper, Kentucky exponent of the jump-turn shot, which won him a tie with O'Leary of Kansas last season for individual scoring. His average was 11 points per game.

Nebraska has a new head coach, W. H. Browne, who made a remarkable record in both basket ball and football at Lincoln, Neb., high school before he succeeded Charlie Black. He will depend largely upon two football players—George Sauer, whom he coached in high school, and Steve Hokuf, a big guard returning to competition after a year's absence.

Has Two Veterans

Coach Louis Menze's Iowa State team is being fashioned around two veterans—Capt. Ralph Thompson, forward, and Adolph Ludwig, reserve forward. Waldo Wegner, a 6-foot 4-inch youth, is available at center.

Although he has three squad members who are 6 feet, 4 inches tall, Coach Corsaut at Kansas State isn't satisfied with any of them at center, and has placed Capt. Andy Skradski, a forward, at the pivot position again. Ralph Graham and Emmett Breen, football players, man the forward positions.

Last season Kansas won the title, Missouri and Oklahoma tied for second, and Kansas State, Iowa State and Nebraska followed in the order named.

Youth Found on Road Unconscious Identified

DALLAS, Dec. 30. (INS)—A young man, found unconscious and seriously injured near Plano, near here, last night and taken to a Dallas hospital, was identified today as Buford M. Horner of Denison, Texas.

Horner had visited his parents in Denison during the holidays and had left there for Dallas where he is employed.

Officers are unable to explain how he was injured. Both wrists and both legs were broken, and he was badly bruised and lacerated. His condition was declared critical.

TWO TIES IN 40 YEARS

AMES, Iowa. (AP)—In one of the oldest and most constant sports rivalries in the mid-West, Drake university and Iowa State have met 185 times in 40 years in football, basket ball, baseball, track, swimming, cross country and tennis with only two tied contests in all that time.

SHOULD BRING LUCK

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Election of Stanley Fay as captain of the 1933 Michigan football team is viewed as an augury of good luck here. Fay never has played on a losing team, either in high school or college.

Virginia Van Wie To Play Charity Match At Dallas

DALLAS, Dec. 30. (AP)—America's queen of the links, Miss Virginia Van Wie, will demonstrate the style that carried her to a national championship, in an exhibition match tomorrow at Dallas Country club, if weather permits.

The Chicago girl, who arrived in Dallas early today, will be paired with Mrs. Peggy Chandler, Texas and Dallas champion, against two of Dallas' finest golfers, Reynolds Smith and Gus Moreland, the latter holder of the western, trans-Mississippi and Texas championships, as well as having been a member of the 1932 American Walker cup team.

Proceeds of the match will go to charity.

THREE WOMEN GOLFERS MAY MEET IN FLORIDA

PALM BEACH, Dec. 30. (AP)—A seven-year war for Florida golfing supremacy between Helen Hicks, Maureen Orcutt and Virginia Van Wie may enliven a 1933 Florida east coast golfing season, for which about 40 tournaments, major and minor, are scheduled.

The Hicks-Orcutt-Van Wie battle came into prospect on the Palm Beach country club course last February when Miss Orcutt sank a chip shot on the 19th hole for a birdie three, defeating Miss Hicks, one up, to win a leg on the Flagler cup, emblematic of the women's championship of Florida.

Miss Hicks had two legs on the trophy and Miss Orcutt one. So the coming match affords one of them the chance to win the third leg and final possession. Miss Van Wie enters the picture by virtue of the fact that she, too, has two legs on the trophy.

The opportunity for their triangular battle will come between Feb. 15 and 17, when the 1933 women's championship of Florida will be played here.

No evidence of a slump in winter sports is seen in schedules of golfing events for Florida east coast resorts.

Naismith Turned From Ministry To Invent Cage Game

LAWRENCE, Kan., Dec. 30. (AP)—Disagreement with a popular conception that athletics were "inventions of the devil" turned Dr. James Naismith, father of basket ball, away from a career in the ministry into a crusade in the field of sports, where he gained everlasting fame.

"When I was in college," says the robust, elderly doctor, now professor of physical education at the University of Kansas, "athletics and gymnastics were considered inventions of the devil, intended to lead young men astray.

"Some way I couldn't help feeling that if athletics had a power to attract young men that power should be used to attract them to better ways of living.

"Although I was graduated from a theological seminary, I felt there was a new field in which good could be done for mankind, as well as in preaching."

Dr. Naismith then entered a Y. M. C. A. training school at Springfield, Mass., where he met Amos Alonzo Stagg, a youngster whose views coincided with those of the preacher who had turned athletic missionary.

At the school young Naismith was commissioned to devise a game which could be played safely indoors between the outdoor football and baseball seasons. Basket ball was the result.

KLEIN RATED BEST SLUGGER

Philly Batsman Chalks Up .646 Average

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. (UP)—Charles H. "Chuck" Klein of the Philadelphia Phillies for the second year in a row was the best slugger, miscellaneous figures released today showed.

The records include players who participated in 50 or more games. Klein's slugging average was .646. In second place, 41 percentage points behind the leader, was Mel Ott of the Giants. Klein played in 154 games and batted in 137 runs for a total of 420 bases.

Klein's teammate, Frank Hurst, batted in the most runs this season, 143, and Mel Ott led in free trips to first with an even 100 bases on balls.

Wilson Fanned

"Hack" Wilson fanned 85 times to lead in strikeouts and George Watkins of St. Louis was hit the most times by pitched balls, eight.

Lloyd Waner, Pittsburgh, and Randolph Moore, Boston, with 11 strikeouts, tied for the fewest times a player fanned.

By driving in more than a hundred runs for the sixth successive year, Bill Terry, manager of the Giants, tied the league record held by Jim Bottomley, St. Louis. "Sunny Jim's" mark was established from 1924 to 1929 and Terry's from 1927 to 1932, both inclusive. Terry drove in 117 runs this year.

Philadelphia, with 442 led in club slugging, had the most runs batted in, 780, and received the most bases on balls, 446. Brooklyn players struck out the most times, 574. And Pittsburgh players were hit the most times by pitchers, 31.

WHITEY WINS BY FOUL ROUTE

Turkish Matman Makes It Rough for Govro

By MACK TURNER

The international war between Sweden and Turkey staged last night in Govro arena with Whitey Govro representing Swedish interests while Mustapha Pasha represented Turkish interests ended in a victory for Sweden when Turkey was disqualified for roughness. The match lived up to all expectations in the way of roughness and ended in a near free-for-all so exciting that it took the combined efforts of almost a score of men to restore peace to the ring.

Each contestant had won a fall when the final curtain was dropped in such a thrilling manner. Both men returned to the ring for this fall with blood in their eyes and the end came quick. The Turk had won the first fall in 28 minutes with a reverse flying mare, then Whitey evened the count in 8 minutes and 45 seconds with a flying mare and body pin.

Repeated Fouls

Pasha had repeatedly fouled Govro throughout the match and brought down the wrath of both the fans and the local promotor on his neck. Everything took place in the ring from tie-ups in the ropes to kicks to the midsection. When the two returned for the final fall, both men opened up with everything they had. Fists and feet flew as they battled about the ring and among the ringside patrons until Pasha was interrupted from his pounding and kneeing of Govro long enough for the referee to lift Whitey to his feet and award the match to him.

The result of the decision brought forth the second attack on the referee by Pasha within the closing four minutes of the battle. After a rush of spectators stemmed the tide of battle peace was once more restored.

Steve Nenoff, the "Bulgarian Bull," found little trouble in stopping Maurie Schrader on the semi-final and Nenoff won in straight falls over the youthful Dallas grappler.

Referee Down, Too

Nenoff employed the merry-go-round and body slam to win both falls, the first in 14 minutes and 17 seconds and the last in 7 minutes and 5 seconds. This match was another slam-bang rough affair with Referee Otis Hedrick joining in on the final fall to turn it into a three-cornered affair when Nenoff insisted on slinging fists into Schrader against the warnings of the official.

Red Riggles still remains in the unbeaten class in Wichita Falls mat circles when he stopped Buck Kennedy on the preliminary in the one fall. Riggles applied a short-arm scissors to win the fall in 3 minutes and 11 seconds. Riggles announced after the match that his challenge to any of the lighter battlers was still open to all.

Young Pro Breaks Miami Golf Mark

MIAMI SPRINGS, Fla., Dec. 30. (AP)—John Revolta, 21-year-old professional from Menominee, Mich., broke the Miami Springs golf course record after it had been twice lowered today and led the field in the $2,000 Miami open golf tournament with a sparkling 33-33—66, four strokes under par and two under the previous course record.

Revolta, runner up in the recent $10,000 Miami Biltmore open, reported his score late in the day after Denny Shute, Cleveland, and John (Sonny) Rouse, Chicago, had lowered by one stroke the course record of 68 established last winter by Tommy Armour, Detroit.

Gene Sarazen, rated the principal threat in the tourney in the absence of Armour, last year's winner, was able to keep within final scoring honors with a 35-36—71.

Revolta's performance surprised the field of 133 players who made the first round today.

Two Men Killed in Kentucky Gun Fight

LOUISA, Ky., Dec. 30. (AP)—Hurston Prince, 35, and Henry Hill, 28, married men with families, killed each other, and a man named Justice was wounded today in a pistol fight at Orr, in Lawrence county.

The trouble occurred on a road near M. V. Hensley's grist mill where the men were going for meal, and was attributed to an old grudge.

BARTER PLAN GAINS GROUND

140 Exchanges Operating in United States

By CARL C. CRANMER
Associated Press Staff Writer

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 30.—The depression bred "barter exchange" movement, it was reported today, has grown until 140 separate exchanges are operating in 29 states of the union and more than 200,000 unemployed in California alone are obtaining the necessities of life by trading a day's work for goods.

The progress of the barter movement has summed up by J. Douglas Brown, of Princeton university, before the American Statistical association.

U. S. Aid Sought

At the same time, it was learned a plan is being prepared, supported by prominent economists, to urge federal assistance for the barter movement. This assistance would take the form of self-liquidating advances from funds loaned by the Reconstruction Finance corporation to provide the cash required in operation. It is proposed, too, that the president be asked to appoint a committee to act as a clearing house of information on the best practices of operating barter units.

Outlining growth of the movement, Brown said 81 barter exchanges are functioning in Los Angeles county alone, that 100,000 persons previously unemployed are receiving self-help through bartering services in the Pacific northwest, chiefly in Washington state, and that the Utah association has a daily turnover of more than $5,000 in goods and services and has furnished 100,000 days of labor for its members. This association, he said, has grown until it has a "national" unit, three state units and 15 city units in Utah, Idaho and Arizona.

Coupons Used

The method commonly employed, he said, is to issue credits or coupons to workers producing goods of service. These coupons are then used in trade for goods or services produced by others.

Philip G. Wright, of Bookings institution, Washington, told the association that there will be no lasting peace until tariffs are subject to international law.

His assertion was followed by a discussion of "tariff bargaining" by Prof. Percy W. Bidwell of the University of Buffalo, who outlined a plan for a multilateral treaty to attain lower world tariff levels. "Peace pacts are likely to be scraps of paper consumed in the fierce fire of nations' desire for security—security against tariffs, as well as security against invasion," Wright declared.

W. Z. Ripley of Harvard university was elected president of the association for 1933; H. L. Moore of Columbia university and W. W. Stewart of New York, vice presidents. And F. S. Deibler of Northwestern, secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Wolford Thanks Newspapers For Aiding Public Health

Editor, The Record News—I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the wonderful way in which your entire organization has cooperated with the city health department in getting before the public the good to be derived from preventive measures in public health. We have endeavored during the year to carry on a campaign of education on public health measures and feel that a great deal of good has been accomplished and that it would have been impossible for us to have reached the public to the extent that we have without your helping us. And I wish you to know that we do recognize and appreciate your part in this accomplishment.

I wish for your entire organization a most happy and prosperous new year.

Sincerely yours,
R. B. WOLFORD, M. D.
City health officer.

Wyoming Restores Earned Time To Notorious Robber

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Dec. 30. (AP)—Acting Governor A. M. Clark today announced he had restored to William "Wild Bill" Carlisle, notorious train robber, all earned "good time" which Carlisle forfeited in November of 1919 when he escaped from the penitentiary at Rawlins.

Carlisle's record of train robbery in Wyoming extends back to 1916 when he was sentenced to life imprisonment in Laramie county for holding up the passengers of a Union Pacific train and escaped in the hills.

In 1919 the sentence was commuted to a term of 25 to 50 years by Gov. Robert D. Carey. He escaped and was recaptured 30 days later. Under prison rules all "good time" earned was then revoked.

In restoring this good will, Clark said he took into consideration the recommendation of the warden and the board of pardons.

A continuation of Carlisle's present record, described by Clark as excellent, would earn him his final discharge in 1935.

Advice To Investors

By Charles W. Storm—Editor of the "News Service of Wall Street"

L. N.—Please supply me with information on earnings and financial condition of Firestone Tire and Rubber company. How is the common stock rated?

Answer—A relatively good earnings showing was made by Firestone Tire and Rubber for the year ended Oct. 31, 1932, when sales of $84,377,000 showed a decline of 26 per cent from the preceding year. Profits per share on the common stock of $1.07 compared with a $1.25 in 1931. Poorer profits would probably have resulted, if it had not been for the fact that the company follows a policy of carrying its goods in process and finished products at cost as compared with the policy of certain other companies of carrying their total inventories at cost or market, whichever is lower. Very encouraging was the strong financial position reported by Firestone which showed current assets of $53,300,000 against current liabilities of $4,000,000. Cash alone amounted to $13,200,000. During the year the company eliminated $5,600,000 par amount of preferred and $1,200,000 of subsidiary funded debt. The common stock is on a $1 annual dividend basis and is considered speculative.

G. S.—Please let me know if you would prefer Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe preferred stock to Union Pacific preferred.

Answer President Storey of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway company recently said: "The chances seem to favor the earning of our preferred dividend for this calendar year." If earned in full, the margin will be small, and, should earnings not improve next year, the continuance of preferred dividends might again be questioned, one reason being the well known conservatism of the management. An interest in the preferred stock should ultimately result satisfactorily, but until there are indications that the margin of preferred dividend requirements is to be greater or until the stock sells lower, it will not appear outstandingly attractive. An interest in Union Pacific Railroad company 4 per cent non-cumulative preferred stock would seem preferable. Union Pacific Railroad company will this year earn charges between two and one-half and three times, with a balance the equivalent of about $18 per share of preferred stock. The company and its subsidiaries are strongly entrenched financially. Union Pacific preferred stock yields less than Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe preferred stock but this seems more than offset by the difference in earnings.

MIDWESTERN LIVESTOCK REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 30. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Cattle trade was more or less a cleanup affair with no material changes in the market situation. It has been a two-way market on fed steers this week with buyers competing on weight averages of 1,000 pounds and above but going very slow on medium weight and heavy steers. Current quotations on heavy steers are the lowest in more than 20 years. Prospects for the forthcoming week are not very bright unless receipts are held down as the eastern dressed beef trade has been very sluggish the past few days. Stocker and feeder classes were in meager supply all week but country demand was correspondingly narrow and the market failed to rally. Aggregate at 11 markets for the week to date show a 2,000 decrease from last week and are 27,000 short of the corresponding period a year ago.

Hogs found a less active demand at prices steady to 15c lower as compared with Thursday's average trade. Weight averages above 200 pounds showed the most decline. St. Louis had a top of $3.25 on offerings of light weight. Total offerings of around 30,000 were 23,000 heavier than last Friday and 40,000 more than a year ago.

Outside of a little strength in Chicago on fat lambs prices in the sheep market were unchanged. Chicago scored 6.00 both on choice natives and fed western lambs.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. (AP)—Cotton closed slightly lower today on hedge selling and commission house liquidation.

The trade was again the principal buyer but its purchases were generally on a scale down. March contracts sold off from 6.14 to 6.00 and closed at the latter figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 5 to 13 points.

The opening was unchanged to 4 points higher partly in sympathy with relatively firm Liverpool cables and the early advance in stocks. Continued rains over the greater part of the cotton belt also made for firmness.

Wall street as well as trade houses were among the early buyers but offerings both from the South and local sources were more liberal than for some time so that the market almost immediately reacted and the opening prices proved to be the highest for the day.

Pressure from commission house sources was noted in the March position and this was thought to represent stale long liquidation, part of which was against purchases of later deliveries. Spot houses, on the other hand, were buyers of March against sales of October at practically unchanged differences. Hedging as well as pre-holiday liquidation increased somewhat toward the close and final prices were at the lows for the day.

Liverpool cables reported Bombay and Continental buying there on firmness at Alexandria, while the Manchester cloth market was described as better with increasing inquiry from India for the new year. Mills were said to be contemplating the starting of new machinery advices to the New York cotton exchange service said German, French and Italian mills were about maintaining recent activity, but Poland and Holland were losing ground.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 30. (AP)—Cotton was rather quiet today in advance of a triple holiday. Prices were erratic but showed a slightly easier trend, closing barely steady at net declines of 4 to 11 points.

The market opened steady, when Liverpool cables came in 5 penny points better than due. Private cables said the market was steady with Bombay and the continent buying and Alexandria matter. Manchester cabled the market was better with increasing India inquiry for the new year, mills contemplating starting new machinery. First trades here were 1 to 2 points up, which was not a full response to the cables, but prices continued to improve after the start owing to trade buying and price fixing by the mills. March advanced to 6.08, May to 6.21 and July to 6.34 or 3 to 4 points above the close of yesterday.

The market turned easier later in the morning, reaching 8 to 10 points due to pre-holiday liquidation and some hedge selling. Weekly mill takings were also somewhat disappointing.

Prices were easy in the afternoon owing to pre-holiday liquidation and some hedge selling and made new lows right at the end with March at 5.95, May at 6.07 and July at 6.20, or 13 to 14 points down from the highs of the morning. The close was at the bottom with March closing 9 points net lower, May 10 and July 11 net lower.

Liverpool is due on New Orleans when that market reopens 3 to 4 penny points down.

Port receipts 40,246, for week 188,436, for season 5,812,185, last season 6,330,146. Exports 26,239, for week 164,665. For season 4,043,422, last season 3,905,263. Port stock 4,797,946. Last year 4,777,154. Combined shipboard stock at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 190,984, last year 156,025. Spot sales at southern markets 29,017, last year holiday.

Futures closed barely steady at net declines of 4 to 11 points:

Stocks Make Another Advance In Last Full-Day Session For Year

By JOHN L. COOLEY
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Stocks ended the last five-hour trading day of 1932 with another advance, one that was accompanied by a strong upturn in bond prices, and firmness of grains.

Little affected by isolated weakness in the tobaccos, shares discovered that the line of least resistance was upward. With shorts beginning to cover for the holiday week-end, and tax selling reduced to cash transactions, the market found it fairly easy to rally, building its strength chiefly on a spurt by the copper and steel shares. The average gain was 1.3 points, virtually the same as Thursday's. Volume, however, dropped to 1,045,614 shares. Perhaps 10 per cent of the sales were for "cash," which represented belated transactions for establishment of income tax losses.

Led by a 4-point break in Liggett & Myers "B," tobacco equities slumped heavily. Wall street heard reports that cigaret prices at wholesale were scheduled for a reduction, perhaps next week. This recalled recent discussions over the competition being offered popular and well-advertised brands by the newer, cheaper lines, a situation which professional stock traders have not ignored.

Revival of speculative interest in coppers accompanied gossip as to "new orders" for the metal which might be placed soon. Such business would help reduce existing stocks, but a substantial price increase would be necessary to restore profits for this hard-hit industry. Kennecott and Anaconda both rose about 1½ net, a healthy percentage gain for these low-priced shares.

U. S. Steel common, up 1⅛ at the best, held most of its gain and the preferred climbed 2, presumably a reflection of short repurchases. Bethlehem's gain was about the same. Westinghouse, International Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Western Union, Case, Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, New York Central, Lackawanna and Chesapeake & Ohio rose 1 to 1½. Net gains of major fractional size were recorded by American Can, General Electric, General Motors, American Telephone, Texas Corporation, and others.

Year-end rallies are familiar phenomena in the security markets. "Window dressing" by banks, investment trusts and other institutions for the benefit of Dec. 31 condition statements, are popularly supposed to be responsible for part of such mark-ups. Better tests for both stock and bond markets, of course, will be provided in the near future when fourth quarter earnings statements and other factors of more permanent interest come into play.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 30. (AP)—Wheat trading developed notable activity and strength here today simultaneously with approach of a cold wave and with unexpected upturns in prices at Liverpool.

Fears were expressed that freezing and thawing would cause damage to domestic winter wheat. Berlin reports were current that Russia was deeply concerned over events in Manchuria, especially advances of Japanese troops in Jehol province, and that a high Soviet official said: "We are convinced a big war is coming in the Far East."

Wheat closed strong, ⅛@1⅛c above yesterday's finish, corn ⅜@⅝c advanced, oats ¼c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 5 cents.

Highest prices of the day were the rule in wheat at the last. Upturns of securities at New York helped to accelerate wheat gains. A further stimulus came from Liverpool advices that China and India were purchasing wheat freely, and that there was no pressure abroad now to sell Argentine wheat. On the other hand, selling here to realize profits on price bulges tended to hold the market somewhat under restraint.

In some quarters, emphasis was put on assertions United States farmers were virtually conducting a sellers' strike, that in various respects paralleled the widespread buyers' strike of 1921. It was urged that the ultimate attitude of the seller was just as important pricewise as that of the buyer, and that not enough grain was moving in the United States to supply even subnormal demand. Possibilities of unsettlement from final December deliveries tomorrow were a source of caution for many traders.

Extreme scantiness of corn receipts helped give an upward trend to corn and oats prices. Chicago arrivals of corn during December have been the smallest in years.

Provisions sympathized with grain market upturns.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May 44⅜@44⅜c, 45⅜c; July 44⅜c, 45⅜@45⅜c. Corn—May 26⅜c, 26⅜@26⅜c; July 28c, 28⅜c.

SKIES CLEAR AFTER RAIN

Precipitation for Month Totals 4.63

The mercury dropped to 40 degrees early Friday night and a few stars appeared in a partially overcast sky. The downpour of Friday, setting in shortly after midnight Thursday, boosted the precipitation to 4.63 inches for December. The rainfall added to increased water reserves that were boosted materially 10 days ago as well as improved moisture supplies in agricultural areas.

Skies were clear on the Fort Worth and Denver City lines from Texline to Childress with the mercury ranging from 30 to 37 degrees. Cloudy weather prevailed from Childress to Fort Worth where precipitation was reported during the day. The M-K-T lines reported cloudy skies and continued rain in some Oklahoma sections with the average temperature at 35 degrees. Reports from the Wichita Valley and Southern said weather conditions were partially cloudy with lowering temperatures.

The mercury climbed to 52 degrees here Friday after a low of 36 early in the morning. The temperature dropped to 40 degrees in midafternoon but climbed back to 43 at 5 o'clock. A north wind ranged from 5 to 10 miles per hour in velocity. The barometer was high at 29.37 at 5 o'clock.

BIG LAKE IMPOUNDS FLOOD FROM RAIN

We might have been doing our post-Christmas shopping in boats this week but for the existence of the lake Kemp dam 40 miles up the Wichita valley.

Last week presented another of those emergencies in which the local populace generally reaps a real benefit—though indirect—from the existence of Lake Kemp. The downpour of rain on Dec. 22 and 23 raised the water level in Lake Kemp 3.2 feet within two days. That increased depth was registered over an area of 22,000 acres. Wichita river already was practically bank-full from thaw waters. Had the 66,000 acre-feet of water impounded by Lake Kemp come rolling down the river, the lower levels of Wichita Falls would have been inundated, according to those familiar with this river's habits in the past.

Why They Died With Boots On

And now a Tenth street mother —(2308 Tenth, but don't tell it!)— professes a clear understanding of why so many old-time westerners "died with their boots on." Her husky son, early in his teens, received a pair of ornamented, genuine cowhide "jubilee" cowboy boots on Christmas eve. He must wear them to midnight church services, to which she consented. Home again at 2 a. m., there ensued the task of removing the footwear. The youngster summoned maternal aid. While he clung firmly to the bed post, the mother tugged, twisted, pulled in vain for half an hour—the boots refused to budge. The boy was ready to sleep in the stubborn gear—mother disagreed. Then it was that the negro man-servant was called from his needed slumber, thrown into the breach, and commanded to heave with might and main. Ten minutes later the boots were parked beside the bed. Leather-limbering exercises have been the young man's diet during the past week.

Income Tax Deductions For Losses On Stock Sale Explained By Expert

The following limitations on deductions for federal income tax purposes of losses from sales or exchanges of stocks and bonds are pointed out by the bureau of internal revenue:

The bureau of internal revenue has received numerous inquiries regarding the provisions of the revenue act of 1932 pertaining to the limitation on deductions for losses from sales or exchanges of stocks and bonds for income tax purposes. The new provisions in the law are contained in section 23 (r), (s) and (t). Under these provisions deductions may be taken in income tax returns for the year 1932 (and subsequent years) for losses sustained from the sale or exchange of stocks and bonds which had been held by the taxpayer for two years or less prior to date of sale or exchange only to the extent of the gains from such sales or exchanges.

The limitation provided by section 23 (r) does not apply to losses sustained from the sale or exchange of stocks and bonds which have been held for a period of more than two years so as to constitute capital assets within the meaning of section 101 of the law and the treatment of losses sustained on the sale or exchange of such capital assets remains the same as it was under the revenue act of 1928. In defining stocks and bonds for the purpose of the limitation the statute specifically excludes therefrom bonds issued by a government or one of its political subdivisions. Such exclusion therefore not only includes bonds issued by the government of the United States or a state or political subdivision thereof but also bonds issued by a foreign country of foreign municipality. It therefore follows that the deduction for losses sustained from the sale or exchange of such bonds is not subject to the limitation.

In Regard to Dealers

The limitation is in general applicable to both corporations and individuals as well as other taxpayers. By the express terms of the statute, however, it does not apply to dealers in securities as to stocks and bonds acquired for resale to customers in respect of transactions in the ordinary course of business, or to banks or trust companies incorporated under the laws of the United States or of any state or territory.

Although losses in excess of gains from such sales or exchanges during the year 1932 affect the year 1933 by reason of the provision for carrying forward such excess to the latter year, the immediate concern is for the year 1932 and the chief emphasis at the present time is therefore devoted to outlining the method of handling such losses for the year 1932. The application of the limitation calls for the segregation of the gains and losses from such transactions from the gains and losses from other transactions. When such gains or losses are thus segregated, the aggregate of the losses is merely offset against the gains, thus giving effect to the provisions of the statute that such losses are to be allowed as deductions only to the extent of the gains from such transactions.

In case the amount of the gains is in excess of the amount of the losses from such transactions, such excess gains enters into the taxpayer's ordinary income and is subject to tax at the regular rates for computing the normal tax and surtax. In case the amount of losses is in excess of the amount of gains from such transactions for the year 1932, such excess may not be availed of by the taxpayer as a deduction for the year 1932 but may be carried forward to the year 1933, to the extent of his net income for the year 1932, and taken as a deduction against gains from similar transactions for the year 1933.

Graphic Illustration

The application of the statute may be illustrated as follows:

For the taxable year 1932 John Doe (who was not a dealer in securities) had a net income from salaries, dividends and rents of $50,000. He had gains and losses from sales of stocks and bonds during 1932 as follows:

Gains from sales of stocks and bonds held for two years or less	$100,000.00
Losses from sales of stocks and bonds held for two years or less	200,000.00
Excess of losses over gains	$100,000.00

The amount allowable as a deduction for the taxable year 1932 for the losses from the sale of stocks and bonds is limited to $100,000. The excess of the losses over the gains ($100,000) is not deductible, but the amount of such excess not exceeding the net income of John Doe for the taxable year 1932 ($50,000) may be carried forward and applied against the gains from similar transactions for the taxable year 1933.

Only in Way Specified

As losses from such transactions may be availed of by the taxpayer as a deduction for the year 1932 only in the manner and to the extent above specified, such losses may not be applied as a deduction against income from other sources, such as salary or other compensation received for services, and similarly, such losses may not be applied as a deduction against gains from the sale or exchange of property (including stocks and bonds) held for more than two years.

It is to be observed that section 23 (r) does not affect in any way the treatment of transactions in real or personal property (other than stocks and bonds). Such transactions are treated in the same manner as they were under the prior revenue act. Stocks and bonds held for over two years are in all cases treated in the same manner under the revenue act of 1932 as in the prior act. It is necessary, under the revenue act of 1932, for all taxpayers regardless of the size of their net income, to keep a record of their transactions in stocks and bonds so that they may determine how long such securities have been held on the date of sale. This is necessary to determine the amount of loss allowable, because stocks and bonds held for less than two years are subject to the special limitations.

OTIS TO VISIT JUNIOR C. OF C.

National President Booked As Luncheon Speaker

President Courtland Otis of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce of New York will be the guest speaker of the local junior group at a membership luncheon on Feb. 24, it was announced Friday following a meeting of the local directors. Mr. Otis accepted the invitation to visit the local organization en route to Dallas for a regional meeting Feb. 24-25.

Plans are under way for making the occasion one of the largest membership gatherings in the history of the junior chamber and also as offering an opportunity to entertain representatives of young business men's groups throughout the section. Delegates are expected here from Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Frederick and Duncan in Oklahoma and from Vernon, Pampa and other Texas cities.

The visiting delegates will join the Wichita Falls group in making the trip to Dallas following the luncheon here. The fact that Mr. Otis is coming to Wichita Falls is considered a compliment to the local chamber since it is the policy of national presidents to visit only at regional meetings," President H. B. Dudley said.

NEGRO HANGED

SHREVEPORT, La., Dec. 30. (AP)—Henry Lewis, 24, was hanged in the Caddo parish jail here today for the murder on Aug. 15, 1931, of Arthur Williams, negro bank messenger. The negro, calm, until the end, walked steadily to the gallows. He maintained his innocence, declaring that Landrum (Alligator) Lewis killed the bank messenger, but admitted he was in the group that kidnaped Williams. Landrum was shot and killed 10 days later by officers when he resisted arrest.

Cotton Picking Provides Tenant Farmer With Food for Winter

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Dec. 30.—A farmer living a short distance from Quanah, who withheld his name, told a Quanah business man recently that he had bought the following groceries out of money he and his family made from picking cotton for others: 32 sacks of flour, 1,000 pounds of meat, 550 pounds of lard, 700 pounds of sugar, 55 gallons of molasses, 400 pounds of navy beans, 600 pounds of black-eyed peas, 25 cases of canned vegetables, one barrel sauerkraut (360 pounds), 50 pounds baking powder, 30 pounds soda. All feed needed for his stock.

This man is a renter, and handled his own crop, in addition to picking sufficient cotton for others to lay in this supply of food. He stated the "depression" will not make his family go hungry this winter and neither will he have to worry because he doesn't get help from his bankers or the Red Cross.

"SPOTLIGHT"

LIKE a flame, like a flower in the wind, Sheila Shayne danced across the stage. The audience applauded, demanding encore after encore. But for Sheila that applause meant little. She was thinking of the letter that had not come. Almost a week now and no word—

"Spotlight", the new serial by H. W. Corley, is the story of Sheila Shayne, a "trouper" and the daughter of "troupers". It's a thrilling romance. "Spotlight" begins
