South Elementary School principal Rob Van Stavern displays one of 24 McGruff hand puppets donated Wednesday to each of Midland's elementary schools. The nation crime prevention mascot, a gift from the Midland Suburban Lioness Club, soon will become a permanent fixture in the district's anti-crime program.

McGruff becoming 'class pet'

When it comes to taking a bite out of crime, Midland elementary school principals, teachers and pupils will soon learn that dog is man's best friend.

On Wednesday, Midland elementary school principals each were presented with a McGruff hand puppet that will become a permanent fixture in each of the schools' anti-crime programs. The puppets were a gift from the Midland Suburban Lioness Club.

The trenchcoat clad McGruff, famous for his "Let's take a bite out of crime" appeal to the public, currently serves as the national crime prevention mascot. The first McGruff puppet was introduced to Midlanders in 1984 and has since appeared before student assemblies teaching pupils the importance of obeying the law.

The furry, four-legged animal, accompanied by a cassette tape, is designed to inform children about child abuse, sexual abuse, shoplifting, burglary and other crimes in a language they can understand, said Midland County Sheriff's Department spokesman Sgt. C.W. "Buzz" Cupp.

Cupp told the principals that the McGruff program is valuable in that the school teachers conduct the presentations themselves and may review each topic with their classes.

Midland Suburban Lioness Club spokeswoman Debbie Hanson said the Lionesses view the gift, worth about $1,500, as an investment that will ultimately benefit the entire community.

"A lot of the Lions clubs throughout Texas have been trying to get a hold of the McGruff programs," she said. "Our club felt that something needed to be done."

Mrs. Hanson said the programs are intended to educate children about crime prevention before it's too late. "Once they get into junior high school they're past the stage and you really can't do anything about it."

Coral Sea sets sail for Mediterranean

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — The Navy today sent a second aircraft carrier to sea in the Mediterranean in case President Reagan decides to order a military strike against Libya, Pentagon sources said.

The Coral Sea sailed from Malaga, Spain, early this morning, Eastern time, and was steaming toward the Central Mediterranean.

But the sources, who demanded anonymity, said no orders had been issued for the Coral Sea and the America, which left port in Italy a day earlier, to re-form a battle group.

The Coral Sea had been scheduled to end a six-month deployment and sail for the United States. But that carrier and the America, which had been scheduled to sail from Livorno, Italy, for Cannes, France, were changed, officials said Wednesday.

Military commanders say they must have at least two carriers in the Mediterranean to support any military operation against Libya, the sources said.

On Wednesday, the sources said options are now being maintained to reform a battle group and head for stations off the Libyan coast.

The disclosure of the Navy actions came as President Reagan was telling newspaper editors the United States is "not going to just sit here and hold still" in the wake of renewed terrorist attacks against Americans in Europe.

Reagan said Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy is "definitely a suspect" in the latest fatal bombings aboard a TWA jetliner over Greece and in a West Berlin nightclub packed with American servicemen, one of whom died.

The president refused to say what he plans to do other than continue to gather evidence about the incidents and seek the support of European allies.

Shortly before the president's appearance a senior administration official disclosed that U.S. intelligence agencies had learned Khadafy was encouraging his embassies to guide new terrorist attacks against the United States and that Reagan administration officials had agreed there must be retaliation.

In Tripoli, Khadafy said Libya is prepared to respond militarily to American aggression and that two groups, the Arab National Command Forces and the International Platform Against Imperialism and Zionism, are awaiting his command to begin attacking U.S. targets around the world.

"We have just finished making military plans for confrontation in response to the latest American threats against us," Khadafy told 10 Western reporters Wednesday after he emerged from a meeting with Libyan military commanders in his fortified bunker.

"So far we have not instructed such actions, such attacks," Khadafy said. But he said he would issue the order in the event of "aggression" against Libya by the United States, which he called a "crazy superpower."

Reagan discusses cartel, world oil pricing method

By WILLIAM OSBORNE
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Wednesday night that Arab oil-producing nations may be trying to drive down the price of petroleum in order to rebuild a monopolistic cartel.

Reagan said at a nationally televised news conference — the 34th of his presidency and the first in two months — that free-market forces should determine the world price of crude oil.

But he quickly added that "the market in oil is not completely free. There are some major producers of oil who are governments, not private corporations or business people."

"And it is possible that — maybe somebody would think of driving the price down to the point that they get rid of a lot of competition and then they would do what comes naturally to a monopolist and the price would start going up again as it once did when others had a very dominant voice and hold on the oil market.

"So when I say free market — and I really mean that — I at the same time think that we must keep our eyes open to see that no one starts playing tricks for some kind of illicit future gain."

The president did not single out any individual Arab state. But the dramatic drop in oil prices in recent months has been widely attributed to significantly increased crude oil production by Saudi Arabia.

The plummeting oil price has generally been a boon for American consumers and the overall economy, but has led to severe economic distress to many U.S. oil interests.

Reagan also came to the defense of Vice President George Bush, who caused a political buzz saw for himself during his current Middle East tour when he said on his way to Saudi Arabia to meet with King Fahd that it was "essential that we talk about stability (of oil prices) and that we not just have a continued free-fall, like a parachutist jumping out without a parachute."

While many economists agree with that position, Bush's remarks have been viewed by others as a political gaffe that put him at variance with the president's views on the free market.

Oil futures prices fluctuate in response to Libyan reports

By JOHN C. GIVEN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Lower than expected domestic gasoline and crude oil inventories and the market's ever-sensitive ear for rumors have driven petroleum futures prices upward again, analysts say.

"You cannot trade this market," said Edward Dellamonte, an analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "They overreact at everything. It shot up because of a rumor that the U.S. had attacked Libya. Then it shot down when that was denied."

William Byers, an analyst at the Bear Stearns & Co. securities firm, also said the rumors "got the market running."

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, traded between $12.20 and $13.40 a 42-gallon barrel before closing at $13.00 Wednesday, up over Tuesday's $12.47 final price.

Candidate Clements calls for special legislative session

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements today called for a special session of the Legislature to consider three items — approving a $70 million prison, tort reform and cutting the budget by 7 percent.

During a news conference this morning at Rich Air South, the candidate seeking the Republican nomination said Gov. Mark White should call a special session immediately to deal with those three issues in light of Texas' economic problems.

Clements said White has encouraged the Texas Department of Corrections chairman to enter into an illegal and unconstitutional contract to build a $70 million prison; however, he said White has no budgetary or legislative authority to build a prison.

"This is a function of the Legislature. The Legislature should scrub the budget and give the TDC the $70 million to build the prison."

The proposed agenda would include approving a $70 million prison, tort reform and cutting the budget.

Under tort reform, Clements said businesses are going out of business because of liability insurance costs. The insurance crisis has not been manufactured, he said, putting the blame on trial lawyers, insurance companies and the Texas Insurance Commission.

The budget can be opened up to cover the shortfall, he said. There is 7 percent that needs to come out of the existing budget, according Clements, and where to cut is the Legislature's responsibility.

Concerning a Dallas Morning News story which indicated that state spending and personnel were up last month despite White's call for a 13 percent reduction, Clements said the trend "is going in the wrong direction. I said when White announced his program that it would not work. That is not the way to go about the shortfall."

Although Clements favors an oil import fee, he said he realizes it is a dead issue. Instead, he is calling for a four-point program which he believes stands a good chance of being approved by Congress. The program includes retaining the intangible drilling cost and depletion allowance, abolishing the Windfall Profits Tax and deregulating gas. He said he is confident Congress will approve retaining the IDC and depletion allowance, is hopeful they'll abolish the Windfall Profits Tax, but questions if they will deregulate gas.

Under ruling, average Midlanders to get credit on May TESCO bills

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Average Midland households will receive about $34 credit on their May electric bills thanks to action the Public Utility Commission took Wednesday.

The commission ordered Texas Utilities Electric Co. to refund to ratepayers $140.4 million in overcollected fuel costs the company charged its customers from August 1985 through January 1986.

Texas Utilities provides power to about 2 million customers through three divisions: Texas Electric Utilities Co., which serves the Midland area, Dallas Power & Light Co. and Texas Power & Light Co.

TESCO spokesman Dick Ramsey said the utility had originally wanted to get the refunds back to its customers in March, but squabbles over how to distribute the money slowed the process.

Woman rescued after two nights snowbound, shoeless in mountains

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — A 43-year-old woman snowbound and shoeless for two nights in the Sierra Nevadas had just finished writing a will and farewell note before rescuers tracked her 12 miles and found her, her husband says.

"She might not have been able to survive another night," George Fitzgibbons said of his wife, Jurhee. "An hour after she was rescued, a heavy snowstorm moved into the area and the temperature dropped to zero."

Mrs. Fitzgibbons, huddled in the outhouse of a locked cabin about 30 miles southwest of Hawthorne, Nev., was found Saturday by Mineral County Sheriff's Deputy Mark Nixon and reserve Deputy Jim Coffindaffer.

"They were fantastic," Fitzgibbons said. "I feel they saved the life of my wife."

Texas Wagon Train reaches halfway mark

FORT HANCOCK (AP) — The Texas Wagon Train is rolling across the dusty plains of West Texas at the halfway mark of the statewide tour.

"We're exactly on schedule. We're out in West Texas and will be in El Paso on Saturday, train spokeswoman Lou Mallory said Wednesday.

The West Texas heat and dust hasn't been a problem, said Mallory, who joins the trail ride every weekend.

"They're pretty prepared," she said. "We've been generally leaving at the same time every day (8 a.m.). We travel between 15 and 30 miles a day."

Because of the higher West Texas temperatures, the train might stay at a water break a little longer, but Mallory said the area hasn't been too hot yet.

Air France office in Lisbon bombed

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — A bomb blast early today shattered the ground floor offices of Air France and severely damaged the facade of a nearby discotheque, but caused no casualties, police said.

An anonymous caller to the state-run news agency Anop later claimed responsibility for the attack in the name of the French terorist organization Direct Action to protest French "collaboration" with the United States against Libya.

The caller told Anop's Oporto bureau that the "commando" who carried out the bombing already had returned to Oporto, Portugal's second largest city 200 miles north Lisbon.

"Don't bother looking for the group in Lisbon," the caller said in Portuguese with a heavy Spanish accent, "We're already in Oporto."

Anop said the caller claimed the bombing had been carried out to protest "the collaboration of the government of Paris with the North Americans." He said the group also was acting to show its "total solidarity with Libya."

The French government on Saturday expelled two Libyan diplomats in connection with possible attacks against U.S. targets, which reportedly were to include the American Embassy in Paris.

The news agency said the caller claimed Direct Action planned to attack two targets in Oporto, the French consulate and the French Institute, a language school.

"They'll both go up (explode) soon," he said.

Police told The Associated Press in Lisbon the Air France bomb apparently was placed in a plastic trash can in front of the office.

Portuguese radio reported police were looking for a green car seen speeding from the site of the blast minutes before the bomb went off.

"It's a miracle no one was hurt," the Portuguese news agency Noticias de Portugal quoted a police officer as saying. A popular disco called the Cova da Onca is located next door, and its entrance was heavily damaged.

The Air France office, just two doors away from the Trans World Airline ticket office, was bombed once before in August 1982, an action claimed by the previously unknown Zionist Action Group.

The Air France building also houses the Australian Embassy, which had its windows blown out by the blast.

First Secretary David Dukes said he did not think the attack was aimed at the mission, "but you never know."

Direct Action. a left-wing group that first emerged in 1979, has since claimed responsibility for more than 30 attacks. The only deaths attributed to the organization are those of Rene Audran, a top Defense Ministry official killed Jan. 25, 1985, and two policemen killing May 31, 1983. Until Audran's death, Direct Action had concentrated mainly on government and defense-related buildings.

A "joint communique" by Direct Action and the Red Army Faction in January 1985 announced their alliance and outlined guerrilla action in Western Europe.

PRICE

Among May contracts for refined products, unleaded gasoline was up 1.85 cents at 43.30 cents a gallon, while heating oil closed up 1.51 cents at 40.61 cents a gallon.

In recent years, Libya has been producing just over 1 million barrels a day, according to estimates contained in the Central Intelligence Agency's International Energy Statistical Review.

At the same time, various sources put the market's surplus of oil at somewhere between 1.5 million and 3 million barrels a day.

Accordingly, the market was temporarily encouraged by the possibility that a military conflict might force a Libyan production cutback, especially since it would come when the shutdown of strikebound Norwegian offshore oil rigs is already removing about 900,000 barrels daily from the market.

Wednesday's developments marked the third straight day of volatile trading.

On Tuesday, word that the Soviet Union had re-entered the market, after suspending sales over the winter, sent prices plunging $1.89 to $12.47 a barrel. This followed a $1.59-per-barrel gain Monday — to $14.33 — when traders were looking for tighter market brought on by the shutdown of Norway's production.

Some analysts said a closely watched weekly inventory report by the American Petroleum Institute, a Washington-based industry association, also contributed the the day's performance.

The breakdown was released after the market closed Tuesday. Analysts said it showed unexpectedly large drawdowns of gasoline and crude supplies, indicating a potential for stronger U.S. demand — and hence higher prices.

Ed Silliere, an analyst at Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc., said, "The lowering of prices have brought people out to start driving again — and the (API) numbers definitely tell us that."

Khadafy says: 'We are ready'

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — A government spokesman today echoed Col. Moammar Khadafy's statement that Libya is ready if the United States starts another military confrontation, and said President Reagan thinks of such clashes as "a game, like when he was in Hollywood."

Libya is "not looking for war. But if they (the Americans) attack us, we have to defend ourselves," said Ibrahim Seger, Khadafy's information director, in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

"We are ready in case something happens, in case war breaks out," Seger said.

His statements came when he was asked to comment on Reagan's statement Wednesday in Washington that Khadafy was suspected of involvement in last week's bombings of a TWA jetliner and a West Berlin nightclub, in which a total of five Americans were killed. Reagan said the United States was "not going to just sit here" as terrorist attacks escalate.

The Pentagon said Wednesday night that a battle group including the aircraft carrier USS Coral Sea would remain in the Mediterranean Sea instead of returning home. Pentagon and Reagan administration sources said the Navy had canceled shore leave in Cannes, France, for the crew of a second carrier, the USS America.

Seger, referring to Reagan's past as an actor, said the president "thinks the military is a game like when he was in Hollywood."

Khadafy said Wednesday that two groups are awaiting his command to begin attacking U.S. targets around the world. He identified the groups as the Arab National Command Forces and the International Platform Against Imperialism and Zionism.

(In London, the British Foreign Office said its file on terrorists did not include groups by those names, but said they probably were names for umbrella groups existing on paper only to coordinate the attacks of actual terror organizations. In Tel Aviv, terrorism experts speculated that the names were invented to cover the identity of known groups.)

Khadafy spoke to 10 Western reporters he had summoned to his fortified bunker for his first news conference since the U.S.-Libyan clash last month in the disputed Gulf of Sidra.

"We have just finished making military plans for confrontation in response to the latest American threats against us," Khadafy said after emerging from a meeting with Libyan military commanders.

"So far we have not instructed such actions, such attacks," Khadafy said. But he said he would issue the order in the event of "aggression" against Libya by the United States, which he called a "crazy superpower."

"It is axiomatic that if aggression is staged against us, then we shall escalate the violence, civilian and non-civilian, throughout the world," he said.

Khadafy, dressed in a green military uniform and black beret, laughed and dismissed a news report that U.S. intelligence agents had intercepted a message congratulating Libyan diplomats in East Germany for carrying out Saturday's nightclub bombing.

If the Americans have the message, "let us have it," Khadafy said. "We challenge them, we defy them to publish it."

Fouad Zlitni, a Libyan diplomat accompanying the reporters, translated Khadafy's comments.

"He's been saying pretty much what I've just been trying to say here now, that the free marketplace is... the answer to this," the president said of Bush. "But he has also been saying...that if someone is going to destabilize the whole petroleum industry by trying to take advantage of this present situation that we should be alert to that....

"I have made it a point to get exactly and specifically what he said. And I can't find myself quarreling with any of the remarks he's made."

The news conference was the second time Wednesday that the President was asked about plummeting oil prices and the Bush controversy.

He told a luncheon meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors that the lower prices have benefited many Americans even though they have been a hardship for the domestic oil industry. He said he hopes "this whole thing will stabilize very quickly."

"I hope that the free marketplace can adjust," he said. "I am resistant to the idea of government trying to inject itself through regulations, hoping to bring about a change, because that has never worked."

The club worked about six months to raise enough money to purchase one puppet for each of the schools, Mrs. Hanson said. "Now it's a matter of getting them into the schools, getting the teachers to learn how to use them and getting them into the classrooms."

Cupp said the sheriff's department will continue to support the program and are available to visit with students and answer any questions they may have.

"We're here if you need us because we enjoy doing it. It's always a treat for us to do something other than put people in jail," he said.

Guinness family member kidnapped

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Three masked gunmen kidnapped Jennifer Guinness, whose husband's family made a fortune as brewers and bankers, from her home outside Dublin and demanded more than $1.5 million for her release, police said today.

Police Superintendent Frank Hanlon told a news conference police were keeping "an open mind" about who might be behind the Tuesday kidnapping, which was disclosed today.

But police said earlier the method was similar to previous kidnappings by the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which is fighting British rule in Northern Ireland.

The kidnapped woman's husband, John, is a leading merchant banker and member of a Guinness family branch that built up a banking, insurance and manufacturing conglomerate, Guinness Peat. Another branch of his family became famous as brewers.

Hanlon said Mrs. Guinness, 48, persuaded the gunmen not to also kidnap her 23-year-old daughter, Gillian. Her daughter, her husband and an unidentified book dealer who came to the home for an appointment were left tied up.

"Two million pounds ($1.53 million) or you will never see her again," police quoted the kidnappers as telling Guinness before fleeing with his wife.

Hanlon, who heads the police press bureau, told reporters, "There has been no contact" with the kidnappers since they fled with Mrs. Guinness. Police described the getaway car as a Toyota sedan.

Hanlon said 45 detectives, backed by hundreds of uniformed police, have been assigned to search for the woman, and roadblocks have been set up nationwide.

He said the gunmen referred to their leader, who spoke with an educated Dublin accent, as "colonel," but that there was nothing else in the demeanor of the intruders to indicate paramilitary links.

The kidnappers took a small, undisclosed sum of money from the Guinness home, he said.

The ordeal began when the gang forced its way into the Guinness' Georgian-style house in the exclusive Dublin suburb of Baily Howth. The house overlooks Dublin Bay and is set on 12 acres of land.

Mrs. Guinness and her daughter were tied up, and when the book dealer arrived to keep an appointment he also was tied up, police said.

When Guinness returned home from work, he tried to grab a gun from one of the intruders, but was struck across the face with the firearm and tied up, police said.

About 2½ hours after the gang fled with his wife, Guinness freed himself and called police, who imposed a news blackout that was lifted only today.

Guinness, 50, an official of the Dublin merchant bank, Guinness Mahon and Co., was bruised but not badly hurt. The bank, a subsidiary of Guinness Peat, is valued on the London stock market at more than $292 million.

Police said the viciousness of the attack on Guinness made them "very concerned" about his wife's safety.

RESCUE

The two men tracked Mrs. Fitzgibbons for 12 miles after finding her car stuck in the snow. The Oxnard woman had been reported missing last Thursday by her daughters Deedee and Regan, whom she had taken on a skiing trip to Mammoth.

Two hours before she was found Saturday, a cold, hungry Mrs. Fitzgibbons, fearing she was near death, wrote a will and a letter to her family.

"I can only surmise no one has found my car as yet," she wrote. "If I am not rescued today, I freeze to death."

"Remember, I love you all. Take care of our children, George, and Deedee and Regan, take care of your father."

Mrs. Fitzgibbons had left her daughters in Mammoth, 250 miles north of downtown Los Angeles, for a brief shopping trip to Hawthorne, Nev., about 50 miles away. She also planned to visit the ghost town of Bodie.

Her car bogged down in mud and she lost her shoes attempting to free it, her husband said. She decided to leave the car and walk to Bodie, but couldn't make it to the town.

She spent her first night under a rock, then found the outhouse, he said. She ate packets of sugar and drank melted snow from a soft-drink can.

The deputies found her car and followed her footprints for eight miles, then lost track of them, Fitzgibbons said. After a few more miles, they stopped to build a fire by the roadside. Mrs. Fitzgibbons heard them and called out.

"It was like a miracle," Fitzgibbons said. "She was saved."

After treatment at Mono County Hospital, Mrs. Fitzgibbons was moved to St. John's Medical Center in Oxnard, where her husband said she was recovering Wednesday from frostbite to both feet and was in good condition.

There was still danger she could lose both big toes, he said.

House votes to ease gun controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted 286-136 today to ease many restrictions of the 1968 Gun Control Act but to maintain an 18-year-old ban on interstate handgun sales.

The vote followed intense lobbying by the National Rifle Association and rival handgun control advocates, including hundreds of uniformed policemen who roamed through the Capitol talking to lawmakers.

The bill sponsored by Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., now goes to the Senate, which last year approved a similar measure. Senators can accept the House bill or send the issue to a House-Senate conference to work out differences.

Both sides in the gun control controversy can claim a measure of victory. The NRA won the right to have firearms transported in interstate commerce and an easing of record-keeping requirements for gun dealers.

The handgun control groups won, on a vote of 232-185, retention of the interstate handgun ban — although the prohibition on interstate rifle and shotgun sales would be lifted. These forces also won an amendment to prohibit possession of machine guns.

TESCO

"We wanted to get the money back as soon as we could," Ramsey said, "but this is the best we can do."

Commission spokeswoman Maria Baker said consumer attorneys argued the merits of a new PUC rule over how to handle the refunds, but commissioners ultimately decided to base the refunds on customers' current usage, rather than consumption during the period of overcollections.

Attorneys representing the state attorney general's office and residential and small commercial ratepayers maintain the fuel rule adopted earlier this year prevents some customers from getting their entire refund.

For example, Assistant Attorney General Scott McCollough said state agencies within Texas Utilities service area will be penalized by the refund method since their electricity consumption is lower now than during the period of overcharges. State agenices have reduced electricity costs as part of an effort to cut expenses in light of a revenue shortfall, he said.

The PUC has already approved a reduction in the rate TESCO can charge its customers for the fuel it uses to fire its boilers that produce power. That reduction should decrease the average residential ratepayer's bill by about $2.25 a month.

Population will center in poor regions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Population growth will concentrate in the poorest nations as the number of people in the world doubles during the 21st century, new population studies project.

"Most of the large future increase in the world's population will occur in (less developed countries), including some of the poorest regions of the world — sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia," says Thomas W. Merrick, president of the private, non-profit Population Reference Bureau.

A pair of world population reports released by the bureau Wednesday indicate India is likely to surpass China as the world's most populous nation by the year 2100, while the United States slips from fourth to seventh place in the world population count.

Currently estimated at about 4.9 billion, the world's population is expected to top 10.4 billion by 2100. By contrast there were only about 2.5 billion people living on this planet in 1950.

"While growth rates have declined, (the) annual absolute increase in population continues to mount in many countries and will be large for several decades before tapering off," Merrick said in the study "World Population in Transition."

It was published in conjunction with the bureau's annual world population data sheet, detailing updated population characteristics for the nations of the world.

Merrick said that while future growth will be concentrated in developing countries, it is a concern for all nations.

Israel's coalition government seems near collapse

WORLD

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The coalition government appeared to be on the verge of collapse today as right-wing ministers refused to accept Prime Minister Shimon Peres' plan to fire the finance minister.

Peres, who heads the left-leaning Labor Party, demanded the resignation of Finance Minister Yitzhak Modai for comments critical of Peres reported by Israeli newspapers. Modai said Wednesday he is willing to resign, but his Likud bloc colleagues vowed to quit with him if he leaves his Cabinet post.

Likud, a right-wing political bloc that is Labor's main political rival, also became a partner with Peres' party in a tense coalition government that was formed after inconclusive elections in 1984.

Labor is holding its convention this week, and was to debate its role in the national unity government later today. A large majority of the party is expected to back Peres' decision to dismiss Modai.

The crisis is likely to come to a head at the weekly Cabinet session Sunday when Peres is expected to hand Modai a letter of dismissal, a close Peres aide said.

Likud leader and foreign minister, Yitzhak Shamir, said today on Israel Radio that Peres was not entitled under the coalition agreement to fire a Likud minister without his permission.

"We see this as a grave breach of the agreement, and so the government cannot continue to exist," he said.

Shamir said there was no mediation under way. He said he hoped the crisis would be defused, but the only hope was that Peres would change his mind.

Israel radio also reported a compromise proposal drafted by Industry and Trade Minister Ariel Sharon of the Likud bloc which called for Shamir and Modai to switch jobs as foreign and finance ministers.

The radio said Peres accepted the idea in principle, but that other Labor ministers opposed it.

Interviewed Wednesday night on Israel television Peres said he was willing to keep Modai in the government in a different ministry, but a Likud caucus also rejected that proposal.

If the Likud ministers stand by their threat to abandon the coalition, Peres will have to decide on new elections, two years ahead of schedule, or try to form a narrow government.

The last elections in July 1984 ended in virtual deadlock with neither side able to form a government.

Under the coalition agreement worked out in September 1984, Peres was to be prime minister until October 1986 and then hand over the job to Likud leader Yitzhak Shamir for the last two years of the government's scheduled tenure. Likud has feared that Peres would try to scuttle the coalition agreement to avoid handing power over to Shamir.

"We stand before a terrible change in Israeli society — one for which the violators of the coalition agreement will be responsible," said Dan Meridor, a Likud parliament deputy.

But Peres said on television, "I announced in advance what I would do if a minister steps out of line. If I don't do this (fire Modai) my word won't have any value."

Modai worked closely with Peres to bring inflation down from 445 percent last year to a projected 25 percent this year.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Three die in Sidon blast

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — A car packed with TNT exploded today in the main square of this southern port city, and police said three people died and 34 were wounded.

The Mercedes blew up at midmorning in the city hall courtyard in Star Square, police said. They estimated the car had contained 165 pounds of TNT.

At least 25 parked vehicles, including garbage trucks and fuel trucks, were set afire by the explosion, which hurled some vehicles 30 feet in the air and shattered windows in a 1,500-foot radius around the square, police and witnesses reported.

Van explodes in Tehran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — An old man was killed and 21 other people were injured Wednesday when a bomb exploded in a van opposite a downtown Tehran bus station, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

IRNA, monitored here, said six of the injured were in critical condition. The agency said the bomb went off at 1:05 p.m. Four cars were destroyed and 22 nearby shops were damaged, IRNA said.

The agency said the dead man was a 70-year-old pedestrian on the crowded avenue near the bazaar.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the bombing. IRNA, however, blamed "counter-revolutionary groups, backed by imperialist governments."

Chirac wins confidence

PARIS (AP) — Jacques Chirac, putting his premiership on the line less than a month after his appointment, won a parliamentary vote of confidence early today for a conservative agenda aimed at reversing five years of Socialist government.

"There has been no progress in five years, (only) backwardness, a slowing down," Chirac told the National Assembly shortly before the 292-285 vote. "The Socialist experiment has failed."

The balloting was preceded by lengthy debate and came nearly 12 hours after Chirac's policy speech.

March 16 legislative elections gave the conservatives a slight majority in the 577-seat Assembly, removing the Socialists from control of the chamber, which they had held since 1981.

Explosion may be cause

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A spokesman for Mexican airline pilots said Wednesday he and many other colleagues believe one or more explosions caused the March 31 crash of a Mexicana jetliner, but said their organization is withholding all official comment until an investigation is completed.

At a news conference here, Jaime Luis Gonzalez Navarro, spokesman for the Mexican Airline Pilots Association, denied the association or any of its members made any statements about the crash which killed all 166 people on board the Boeing 727 jet 90 miles north of here.

In London, Reg Smith, president of the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations, told a news conference on the eve of the federation's annual meeting, that Mexican delegates had presented evidence to him showing "there is a strong indication that it's a bomb" that caused the crash.

Reagan blasts Congress over military proposals, taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan blasted Congress for proposing to slow his military buildup and increase taxes, but members of the president's own party appear impatient with his refusal to negotiate on those budget issues.

"The American people are not undertaxed, but their patience is overtaxed," Reagan said at the opening of his press conference Wednesday night. "I ask the Congress to forget about raising taxes, and concentrate instead on controlling spending and putting government's financial house in order."

The president later said he was "a little annoyed by the fact" that Congress no longer was committed to the Pentagon spending increase it approved in last year's budget.

That spending plan, which would have increased military spending with inflation this year and 3 percent above inflation the next two years, was largely scrapped by Congress in the wake of the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law.

"Every time we make a compromise on defense spending, the Congress says, 'Well, that's the point we start new bargaining from,'" Reagan said.

Reagan also made those points earlier Wednesday at a meeting with Senate Republican leaders.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., said he asked Reagan to discuss changes in the fiscal 1987 spending plan he sent to Congress on Feb. 5.

"If you don't like what we produce, what do you suggest we put in its place?" Domenici said he told Reagan, "So long as it isn't the budget that you just sent up, because clearly there is no support for that game plan and that set of policies."

Reagan rules out June summit meeting with Gorbachev

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, still wrestling with the size of the American nuclear Navy, has ruled out June for a meeting here with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev while again airing charges of Soviet cheating on arms control agreements.

"June is just about out now," Reagan acknowledged Wednesday night as he swept aside the month the U.S. and Soviet delegations had tentatively picked for their Washington summit at the president's initial "fireside" meeting with Gorbachev last November in Geneva.

Reagan's announcement, at a news conference, reflected continuing U.S.-Soviet tensions over an agenda despite three days of talks here between former Soviet ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin and Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

The Soviets, led by Gorbachev, have maintained a drive to make arms control the centerpiece of the second summit and to have a new accord lined up before holding the session.

The United States, on the other hand, views Gorbachev's prospective visit to the capital as an opportunity to discuss a range of issues. The goal, Reagan said, was "to make some sizable and realistic gains in lessening the tensions" between the superpowers.

Reagan left open late July as a possibility for Gorbachev's visit, but flatly ruled out the four months through the congressional elections in November and seemed to suggest a summit toward the end of the year may be more likely.

Challenger's crew cabin survived breakup, but crew probably didn't

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's crew cabin survived the shuttle breakup and nine-mile plunge to the ocean, but the seven astronauts probably died the instant the spacecraft began falling apart, experts believe.

A federal safety investigator told reporters Wednesday that the nose section containing the cabin broke cleanly away from the rest of the spacecraft and was intact until it struck the ocean surface, shattered and sank.

The crew probably died when the orbiter was subjected to very high gravity forces as it was tearing apart, said a source close to the investigation of the Jan. 28 explosion who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He said the orbiter was jerked violently to one side after a booster rocket broke loose at its lower joint and swiveled, turning its flame onto the external fuel tank, freeing its liquid propellants to mix into a raging fireball.

Since the precise point this occurred remains unknown, it raises a question whether the astronauts lived one or two seconds, long enough to know something terrible was happening.

Even if the crew had survived the violent maneuver — a slim chance — gravity and aerodynamic forces from the first cabin tumble would have killed them, the source said.

When the orbiter's nose section "struck the water, it had some mass inside; that mass was the crew module," said Terry Armentrout, director of the National Transportation Safety Board's bureau of accident investigation.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration called on the board the day after the accident to help it learn the cause.

Armentrout said the NTSB would present its initial findings to the NASA investigative task force today. The task force also is to present its preliminary report to a presidential commission today.

The safety board report will have to be updated, Armentrout said, because so much wreckage remains to be retrieved. Only about 15 to 20 percent of the debris has been recovered from the ocean floor.

Submarines or divers still have not found the lower segment of the right solid rocket booster containing the joint that leaked a flame, causing the explosion. Investigators are considering several theories on why the flame escaped.

"We want every part of that right solid rocket booster we can get," Armentrout said. "The segment with the joint would be a very important piece of evidence."

Eight chunks of the right rocket were brought into port Tuesday night by the salvage ship Stena Workhorse, but none contained the joint.

Armentrout said aerodynamic forces rather than an explosion caused most of the initial breakup of Challenger and that the 140-to 180-mph impact with the water did the rest of the damage.

There was a fireball rather than a large explosion and the cloud of smoke and flame resulted from the flames that flashed when liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen propellant mixed after the huge external fuel tank ruptured, he said.

"There was evidence of explosion visually, but the explosion of the entire shuttle is not something we're seeing," he said. "The external tank did not explode. With all its potential, it would have been a much greater fireball."

Reagan likely to ask Congress for new shuttle

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said he will wait for a report from his advisers before deciding whether to ask Congress to replace the space shuttle Challenger. But he suggested the answer will be yes.

"I would hope that we can continue this," said Reagan, when asked what his recommendation would be.

"This was the request from every one of the families of those people who lost their lives on the Challenger, that we continue this program," the president told his nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night. "I said to them that's what I wanted to do and would hope that we could do."

LaRouche: Kremlin, bankers drug dealers ruining world

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kremlin, international bankers, drug dealers and top White House officials might not seem to have a lot in common, but political extremist Lyndon LaRouche says they are all conspiring to ruin the Western world.

In what was believed to be his first public appearance since the Illinois primary, LaRouche Wednesday outlined those theories and others to an audience of Washington journalists.

He also told reporters that the unexpected wins by his followers in the March 18 Illinois election had given him a mandate "to stick it to them in Washington."

LaRouche, who has declared his candidacy for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, made his comments during a news conference sponsored by the National Press Club. Such conferences are usually small gatherings of newsmakers and journalists in a semi-formal atmosphere.

But more than 100 reporters, cameramen and photographers flocked to the historic club to see LaRouche in one of the most unusual meetings ever held there. For about an hour, journalists heard him dramatically and energetically expound his highly unconventional views of modern affairs as his own bodyguards and security personnel hired by the club looked on.

Adlai E. Stevenson, winner of the Illinois Democratic Party's nomination for governor, has said LaRouche's views are neo-Nazi and that LaRouche's movement is fueled on bigotry and hatred.

Stevenson has refused to run on the same ticket with LaRouche supporters Mark Fairchild and Janice Hart, who unexpectedly won the Democratic nominations for lieutenant governor and secretary of state.

LaRouche said descriptions of him as a neo-fascist and anti-Semitic "originate with the drug lobby or the Soviet operation — which is sometimes the same thing."

When one journalist tried to get LaRouche to respond to allegations made in a televised report, LaRouche dismissed the question and snapped, "How can I talk to a drug pusher like you?"

During the meeting with reporters, LaRouche:

— Repeatedly contended that the Soviet government, the British government, drug dealers, members of the international financial community and American political officials are involved in conspiracies to destroy the Western world.

— Said the only way to stop drug dealing is to stop financial institutions that engaged in "laundering" illicit money and "you have to jail the bankers who do that — like Donald Regan, presently chief of staff at the White House."

Midland's assets

The rally held at Midland Center today could shock a number of outsiders who only see "gloom and doom" for Midland and other communities that are heavily dependent on oil.

Of course, that isn't the intent. The intent is simply to dispel the negative by emphasizing that Midlanders are willing to look beyond today's hardships toward tomorrow's good times.

The rally, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, City of Midland, Midland College, Midland County, Midland Independent School District, Midland Memorial Hospital, Midland Reporter-Telegram, the Sesquicentennial Commission and United Way, is in the words of United Way president Bill Morrow an attempt to change attitudes.

"We can't affect the oil price, so that's not going to change. The economic situation is not going to change because of the rally. But if we can get people's attitude directed toward positive solutions and other problems, then we would really achieve our purpose."

Morrow is correct. Languishing in sorrow over circumstances isn't going to change anything. That attitude likely will cause Midlanders to direct their attention even more to the economic problem and, in the process, overlook all that is good and fulfilling about life in the Tall City.

There is unlimited talent in Midland. It has been seen time and time again in the ability and dedication of the people here to "go the extra mile" to accomplish a goal and to make Midland a better community for all the people.

While it's true that the challenge now may be more grueling, more demanding, there's no question that Midlanders can overcome and emerge once again stronger than before. We say "once again" because tough economic times are not new to Midland people. This is not the first and it probably won't be the last.

But that's part of the fire that tempered Midlanders — past and present — to life here. Midlanders are fighters and winners, not people who give up at the first sign of a challenge.

Midland people are Midland's best asset, as the rally slogan indicated. And, yes, Midland we do love you.

Restless Svetlana

Josef Stalin's daughter, who defected to the West in 1967 and returned to the Soviet Union 17 years later in an extravaganza of publicity, is reported to be having second (or is it third?) thoughts about where she would like to live.

U.S. Embassy officials in Moscow have revealed that Svetlana Alliluyeva has been in touch with them but they decline to spell out the nature of the talks. Her desire to leave Russia again has been hinted by Soviet sources.

In justice to Ms. Alliluyeva, it must be said that while she has never lacked for material comforts, she has been subjected to considerable stress. Being the daughter of one of history's most brutal dictators was not easy and the collapse of her three marriages could have been jarring.

After her defection to this country, she became a high-income best-selling author of books assailing life in the Soviet Union. But in 1984, she renounced these books, blasted the U.S. and was welcomed back to Russia with the Kremlin trumpeting its glee.

If Ms. Alliluyeva indeed wants to settle in the U.S. again, the Soviet Union can hardly deny her an exit permit because her U.S. citizenship is still intact and she has an American-born teenage daughter whose father is a U.S. citizen. On the other hand, all the unflattering things Ms. Alliluyeva said about the U.S. two years ago will hardly endear her to her future American neighbors.

The nomadic Ms. Alliluyeva apparently has succeeded in becoming an embarrassment to both her native and her adopted lands.

Remembering history

Historical analogy is tricky business, and Nicaragua is not Vietnam. That said, the White House keeps producing chilling reminders that the United States once followed a trail of misinformation and intrigue and tunnel vision deep into the jungles of Southeast Asia. The latest is a report that the administration would use some of the $100 million that it wants from Congress to send Green Berets to train Nicaragua's guerrillas, the contras.

In South Vietnam, moral support and then financial support and then covert support from the Central Intelligence Agency were not enough to halt the infiltration of guerrillas from the north. So American military men were fed into South Vietnam army units to teach them how to fight. Then the Green Berets went in, on the ground that they were even better teachers. By 1967, Americans actually on the ground in Vietnam and those based in Thailand and with the 7th Fleet totaled nearly 600,000. In the end, 57,702 Americans died and 313,616 were wounded.

The commitment to stop the spread of communism seemed to justify each step. There was always light at the end of the tunnel vision. All that was needed, Americans were told, was one more effort.

There are big differences in Washington's commitment to the contras. Nobody claims that the next step, the $100 million in aid and the deployment of Green Berets, would make the contras strong enough to topple the Sandinista government. It might take $500 million, supporters of President Reagan say. It might take much, much more.

There are big similarities, too. Covert aid was not enough. The White House shifted to open support for the contras. Now it is planning to send trainers. The promise that Americans would not see combat in South Vietnam is made as to Nicaragua.

There is an even more important similarity. Historians, looking back on Vietnam, say that it demonstrated that no war, large or small, can sustain support from Americans if they are confused about the facts and about the reasons that fighting is important.

At first, Washington labeled Nicaragua a menace because it was shipping weapons to rebels in El Salvador. Now it is a menace on so many other grounds, the president's top advisers say, that its pro-communist government in Managua must be wiped out.

The armed forces of the United States remember the lesson of the importance of public support. Congress must have that lesson very much in mind when next it takes up the president's request for $100 million — money that would send Americans south to teach the contras how to fight.

Billboard barons lasso tax dollars

WASHINGTON — Probably few Americans are aware that $200 million in their tax money has been given to the billboard industry as compensation for removing its huge eyesores from the landscape under the Highway Beautification Act of 1965.

Jack Anderson

Nor do they realize that the House Public Works Committee — that open-handed custodian of the congressional pork barrel — has voted to boost the taxpayers' largess to the billboard barons. In an unprecedented move, the committee proposes to raid the federal highway construction trust fund to finance its generous payoff plan.

The legislation as approved by the committee would raise the benefit ceiling from $10,000 to $20,000 for each billboard the government wants to remove. The bill would block highway and mass-transit projects unless the federal or state government agrees to pay for relocation of the billboard — or can prove that removal is absolutely necessary, which isn't easy.

Environmentalists and at least one economy-in-government group are understandably incensed over the plan to enhance the billboard industry's revenues. "This is the only federal law we know of that pays polluters to stop polluting," Jill Lancelot of the National Taxpayers Union told our associate Stewart Harris. "We think it's time to stop federal subsidies of the billboard industry."

Subsidies weren't the idea at all back in 1965, when Lady Bird Johnson's campaign to beautify the country resulted in a law that supposedly would bring eventual removal of virtually all roadside billboards. But the law was turned on its head in a number of ways, with the result that after 20 years and $200 million, the removal job is only half done. And in some states, businessmen are using loopholes in the law to put up billboards faster than they're being torn down.

How does a relatively small industry have such clout in Washington? Some suspicious critics think it has something to do with honorarium — a 50-cent word for the fee a member of Congress gets for making a speech to a private group.

In 1984, for example, the billboard industry shelled out almost $100,000 in honoraria for speeches that in some cases were as brief as an Academy Award acceptance. One environmentalist joked ruefully that a congressman can earn an honorarium merely by clearing his throat as he flies over a billboard industry convention.

Rep. John Breaux, D-La., who drafted the current giveaway plan, pocketed $5,000 for sharing his eloquence with the billboard moguls in 1984. He also received some modest campaign contributions from them. (Unlike campaign funds, speaking fees go straight into a politician's pocket.)

Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., chairman of the Public Works Committee, earned $6,000 in speaking fees from billboard magnates and associated groups in 1984. He did give one free speech to billboard big shots that year, settling instead for an all-expenses-paid, five-day stay in Palm Springs, Calif.

Howard also accepted $16,050 in campaign contributions from billboard people in 1983-1985.

Both congressmen denied that the campaign funds or the speech fees had any influence on their views of the billboard industry.

In fact, the industry doesn't always get what it wants. Last February, while billboard lobbyist Vernon Clark was out of town, Reps. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., and Mike Synar, D-Okla., negotiated an exclusion for billboards from legislation requiring tough health warnings for snuff and chewing tobacco. When Clark got back, he realized this would leave regulation of this lucrative billboard advertising up to individual states or the Federal Trade Commission, which might promulgate stricter regulations.

He stormed up Capitol Hill seeking reconsideration of the exclusion provision. The billboard lobby was "crying all over the place," Waxman said. "It was a tense time," Synar added.

But they held tough.

DAVID? DAVID WHO?: Maureen Reagan, the president's political daughter, recently told us about the political action committee she heads. It is, she said modestly, a David among the PAC Goliaths. Turns out she has a lot to be modest about. There was some confusion over the correct name of her group, so we called the Republican National Committee to get it straight. Not only could they not help us, but no one there had even heard of Maureen Reagan's PAC. For the record, it's the GOP Political Women's League PAC, of Landover, Md.

DIPLOMATIC DILEMMA: Perhaps no job on the governmental level is as thankless as that of the neutral embassy that agrees to represent the interests of a nation that has broken off diplomatic relations with another. Like a marriage counselor or a labor arbitrator, the neutral diplomats listen to complaints from both sides and try to smooth things out as best they can. In Washington, Algeria's embassy handles this thankless chore for Iran, whose embassy was closed down years ago. The U.S. and Iranian governments are both so bitter that the Algerian Embassy is reduced to the role of mailman, passing messages back and forth.

DIPLOMACY IN THE 1980's

GEORGE F. WILL

Laxalt: Best answer to a difficult question

WASHINGTON — The answer, conceivably, is: Paul Laxalt. The question is the last line of an old story that sums up the mood of much of the electorate:

George F. Will

A man walking along a cliff feels the ground crumble beneath his feet. He manages to clutch at a root extending from the face of the cliff, which saves him from falling to certain death on the jagged rocks amidst the crashing surf far below. But he cannot climb back to safety so he shouts up: "Is anyone up there?" A voice — the voice of God — fills the sky: "Have faith and pray. If you have sufficient faith and pray properly, you may let go and you will fall lightly as a feather, landing unhurt amidst the rocks and surf." The man looks back down at the rocks and surf, ponders the offer, and then shouts up: "Is anyone else up there?"

When the electorate surveys an early list of presidential aspirants, it usually sinks into an "Is anyone else up there?" mood. The electorate has achieved a remarkably comfortable relationship with today's President, and cannot see a substitute on the horizon.

But waiting in the wings — not just waiting, actually pacing restlessly and pawing the dust — is Mr. Conservative's First Friend, Paul Laxalt, senior senator from Nevada.

Nevada has about 303,258 registered voters, a group smaller than the crowd that passes through Chicago's O'Hare airport on a busy day. But at this stage in the presidential scramble, much smaller numbers can matter more. There are, Laxalt says, about 5,000 Republican leaders crucial to the nomination process and he, because of his long association with Reagan and his service as national GOP chairman, has a long leg up in dealing with them.

If Laxalt enters the race — and a conversation with him leaves little doubt that he is inclined to — his entry could have two immediate effects. It could considerably complicate Jack Kemp's fund-raising which, naturally, starts at a marked disadvantage relative to the vice president's. However, Laxalt's entry also could wash off whatever sheen George Bush has by virtue of being perceived as the President's preferred choice. Laxalt and Reagan became freshman governors of contiguous states in 1966 and have remained politically and personally close.

Laxalt's placid temperament is a close approximation of the Reagan persona with which the country is comfortable. Reagan is going to be a hard act to follow, and it may be especially risky for Republicans to follow with a similar act rather than something new. But if they want more of the same — call the style Western ease — Laxalt is the obvious choice.

By 1987, Laxalt will have retired from the Senate. He does, however, have two related problems. One is Nevada. The other is a libel suit he has filed in response to a newspaper article.

O, Nevada. Mario Cuomo thinks he has problems because he is an Italian-American from New York and hence is vaguely tainted by imagined associations with unsavory elements. He should try being a public official from Nevada, a state in which the arrivals of Howard Hughes and the Teamsters' pension fund were considered stages of moral uplift.

Laxalt's libel suit springs from a long article of November 1983, in the Sacramento Bee. It alleged that substantial sums were skimmed from receipts of a casino in a Carson City, Nev., hotel then owned by Laxalt. It is not easy to say what, precisely, the article says Laxalt was culpable of knowing or doing. But some analysts think it is especially easy to win a libel suit against articles that seem too clever by half, articles written in a way that seems suspiciously prelawyered by people who may have thought they were on thin ice.

Laxalt is confident of at least a "Sharon verdict" — a judgment that the article was false. He thinks he also will win on the question of malice. If he does, he probably will promptly enter the scramble for the Reagan succession. He thinks the 1988 task is to prove that the Reagan years were not an eight-year aberration produced by Reagan's charm.

He does not disguise the fact that he thinks none of the active aspirants has shown, or seems likely to show, the required combination of political appeal and ideological steadfastness. Laxalt is especially impressed by the number of people who, although publicly supportive of Bush, are urging him to run.

He thinks about this at his cabin out at High Knob, Va., an hour and a world away from Washington. He calls it "Camp David without fences." He may soon ask the electorate to fence him in.

ART BUCHWALD

PAC money keeps politicians on the block

The political action committees are starting to dispense money for the election primaries. Not only are the committees a source of funds, but without PACs few legislators would know which way to vote.

Art Buchwald

I came to this conclusion while walking past the National Association for True-Blue Government, the PAC for the Dynamite Users Industry.

The line of legislators wound around the block.

In front of the building was a wooden paymaster's table and behind the table was Shifty Diamond, chief paymaster for the PAC. A large pile of $20 and $50 bills was stacked in front of him.

Shifty was yelling. "Have your voting records available so we can look at them, please. Only incumbents in this line."

Congressman Damper presented his record to Shifty and waited nervously.

Shifty said, "It says on our computer readout you voted against dynamite being transported through school and hospital zones."

"What could I do? The mail from my constituents was heavily in favor of regulating dynamite trucks."

"Do you know how much it costs us to deliver dynamite under present regulations? I think we ought to make something perfectly clear. We don't care how you vote on other issues. When it comes to dynamite, you're either for your constituents or you're for us."

"But they elected me," Damper protested.

"They may have elected you, but they can't finance your campaign. Now the big vote on more liberalized dynamite sales comes up on Thursday. Which side are you on?"

"I'm not sure. Dynamite kills people."

Shifty got red in the face. "No, it doesn't. People kill people."

"Then in that case I'm for dealers selling dynamite over the counter without asking anyone for identification."

"Spoken like a good friend of our industry," Shifty said and counted out a bagful of money.

Following Damper was Sen. Tobacco Stain's campaign manager.

"Where's the senator?" Shifty wanted to know.

"He's up on Capitol Hill dispensing funds from his own political action committee."

"Why should we give him money if he has his own PAC?"

"Because you need his vote to permit dynamite to be sent by parcel post across state lines."

"That's true. But why does Sen. Stain need money?"

"Because he's greedy."

Shifty shook his head. "That's the only honest answer I've gotten today. How would the senator feel about a $2,500 contribution?"

"He'd feel better about a $5,000 one."

Shifty said, "The man talks our language. Here it is in fresh fifties."

"I must warn you. The senator will never say thank you."

"Why not?"

"Because we're doing you a big favor by accepting the money. Your PAC needs every vote it can get, particularly after the police chiefs came out against people making bombs in their own homes."

"The police are panicking. Dynamite is safe as long as it is kept out of the hands of children and criminals."

"Forget the party line. You still need the senator to keep the anti-dynamite wimps from bulldozing your bill."

A third person came up to the desk. "I'd like some PAC money. I'm challenging the incumbent congressman."

"How can we give you money when you don't even have a voting record?"

"I don't need one. I decided the only way to run for public office is to sell out."

Shifty handed the young man a stack of bills. "Welcome to the club."

House panel demands full audit of earlier Contra funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says his $100 million military aid package for Nicaraguan rebels is vital to save Central America from becoming "a communist enclave," but a House panel is demanding a full audit to ensure that earlier funds were spent properly.

In a nationally televised news conference Wednesday, Reagan urged the Democratic-controlled House to reconsider its earlier rejection of the aid to show Nicaragua's leftist rulers that they "cannot crush their opponents" and must accept negotiations with the U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

The Democratic-controlled House is scheduled Tuesday to reconsider Reagan's request to send $100 million to Contra rebels fighting the Sandinista government. The House defeated the package last month, but it narrowly cleared the Republican-dominated Senate on March 27.

Meanwhile, a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Latin America voted Wednesday to direct Reagan to permit a full audit of $27 million in non-lethal assistance approved last year for the Contras. Democrats claimed the White House blocked the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, from checking on aid expenditures in Honduras.

Last month, the GAO reported it could not track $7.1 million in aid sent to the Miami bank accounts of "brokers" who were responsible for transferring the money to Central America to pay for supplies bought in the region.

Waldheim's son pleads father's case in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The son of former United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim is pleading his father's case with U.S. officials, attempting to put to rest allegations of wartime complicity with Nazis in atrocities against Yugoslav partisans.

Following a half-hour meeting Wednesday at the Justice Department, Gerhard Waldheim said his father "has an impeccable anti-Nazi record" and faced death if he had objected when drafted into the German army during World War II.

The 38-year-old Austrian banker is trying to persuade the United States not to place his father on an immigration "watch list" that would bar him from entering the country.

Kurt Waldheim, 67, is in the midst of an election campaign for president of Austria, his second bid for the presidency.

Waldheim served as U.N. chief for 10 years, but was blocked in his 1981 try for an unprecedented third term by China, which insisted on a Third World candidate and vetoed Waldheim during 16 inconclusive rounds of Security Council balloting.

Israeli officials send home copy of Waldheim's file

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli officials are sending home a copy of a secret U.N. file on Kurt Waldheim as the latest step in an investigation to determine whether the former U.N. chief concealed his wartime activities in the German army.

The Israeli ambassador to the U.N., Benjamin Netanyahu, spent more than an hour on Wednesday at the world body's archives office, where Waldheim's dossier from the defunct U.N. War Crimes Commission had been kept under seal.

"There is here clear indication of a need...for further comprehensive investigation," said Netanyahu. He declined to discuss the contents of the file, a copy of which he was sending to Israel for detailed study.

In an interview with the West German newspaper Bild, Waldheim was quoted on Wednesday as saying he himself had been a victim of the Nazis.

"They beat me when I was 18 or 19, when I distributed anti-Nazi leaflets," the Austrian statesman was quoted as saying.

The 67-year-old Waldheim, in the midst of an election campaign for his country's presidency, has denied allegations that he served with a German army unit in the Balkans that committed atrocities, including deportations of Jews, during World War II.

WORLD in brief

Judge lifts order barring Ryan White from school

FRANKFORT, Ind. (AP) — A county judge today lifted an order which had barred teen-ager Ryan White, who has AIDS, from school.

Supporters of the 14-year-old Kokomo boy burst into cheers in the courtroom after Clinton Circuit Judge Jack R. O'Neill vacated the preliminary injunction.

James O. Smith, superintendent of the Western School Corp., said teachers and staff at Western Middle School in Russiaville were prepared for Ryan's return to classes immediately.

O'Neill heard arguments Wednesday from attorneys for Ryan, the school corporation, six schoolmates' parents who sought the injunction and attorneys for the Indiana Civil Liberties Union, which supported Ryan's position and filed a friend of the court brief.

Ryan, who attended the hearing Wednesday with his mother, Jeanne White, said he was disappointed O'Neill did not rule immediately, but "at least there's a little hope now. It'll give him time to think about it."

Copter crashes kill eight

HINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Two Army helicopters crashed about a half-mile apart during a routine training flight in a remote part of Fort Stewart Army Base, killing all eight soldiers aboard, authorities say.

A CH-47-D Chinook helicopter carrying six soldiers and an AH-1S Cobra helicopter with two soldiers aboard crashed about 9 p.m. Wednesday, said Lt. Col. James Arnold, public affairs officer for the Army post.

The helicopters had taken off on routine training flights earlier Wednesday from Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah, about 35 miles to the east, Arnold said. Hunter houses all helicopters and planes used by Fort Stewart, he said.

"The crashes probably were related. They were very close to each other. They happened at the same time. But how they occurred we don't know yet," he said. "No landing or takeoff was involved to my knowledge. They weren't near an airstrip."

Church bests problems

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — The Bangor Baptist Church, after months of turmoil stemming from its pastor's confession of adultery, is on its way back, thanks to the Rev. Jerry Falwell, congregation leaders say.

The church was staggered last October when its founder, the Rev. Herman C. "Buddy" Frankland, announced he would resign because he had committed adultery.

The church dates its revival from the intercession of Falwell, who pronounced his "rescue mission" complete at a service Sunday to install the Rev. Ken Chapman, a long-time associate, as the new pastor.

"This church has had a record of being the leading fundamental church in this area, and I think it ought to come back to that place," Chapman said this week.

Fire damages skyscraper

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Fire broke out Wednesday on the ground floor of the tallest building in Louisiana, forcing hundreds of office workers to flee dense smoke in the 50-story structure and tying up rush-hour traffic.

The blaze at One Shell Square injured two firefighters who were burned in the face, but no one else was hurt as the fire was controlled within an hour, said Fire Superintendent William McCrossen said.

The fire, which was reported shortly after 3 p.m., began in a storage area, and smoke wafted to the top floor, he said.

Witness' credibility hit

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The credibility of the government's chief witness and the prosecution's alleged inability to prove its case have remained the focus of defense closing arguments in the alien-smuggling conspiracy trial of 11 sanctuary movement members.

Two more lawyers pressed their arguments Wednesday, making a total of four defense counsel that the jury had heard from, with seven to go. Two priests, a nun, a minister and seven church layworkers are accused of smuggling Salvadorans and Guatemalans into the United States.

Discussion of conditions in Central America, First Amendment rights and alleged government conduct brought a half-dozen admonitions by U.S. District Judge Earl H. Carroll, but the flare-ups were more muted than on Tuesday, when the lawyers and prosecutor Donald M. Reno Jr. traded calls for contempt citations.

Extended forecast

Saturday Through Monday

West Texas: Partly cloudy and mild with a slight chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms throughout the period. Panhandle and South Plains highs near 70 to mid 70s. Lows mid 40s. Permian Basin and Concho Valley highs around 80. Lows near 50 to mid 50s. Far West highs upper 70s to near 80.

Sunny weather expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

On Friday the Permian Basin should be mostly sunny with a high in the middle 80s. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is also reporting a slight chance of scattered thunderstorms in the late afternoon, though there is a less than 20 percent possibility.

Tonight's low should be in the upper 40s with light, variable winds. Winds will become southerly at five to 15 mph on Friday.

Wednesday's high of 60 was 33 degrees below the record high set in 1939. This morning's low was 21 degrees above the record low of 30 set for this date in 1952.

STATE

Moist tropical air moving northward from the Gulf of Mexico triggered scattered showers and thunderstorms across many sections of Texas today and forecasters said cool surface air would prompt more rainfall later.

Rain stretched from North Central Texas across the central Brazos Valley into the Piney Woods of East Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Other scattered showers and a few thunderstorms covered South and Southeast Texas, the Hill Country, the Rio Grande plains and the lower valley. Skies were clear over the mountains of far West Texas.

NATION

A storm off the northern Atlantic Coast today spread rain and snow from the eastern Great Lakes across the northern and central Appalachians to New England, breaking a West Virginia snow record.

Elkins, W.Va., had several inches of snow on the ground and a snowfall for the season of 111.8 inches, breaking a record 107.7 inches set in 1970-71.

A snow-prompted travelers' advisory was posted for the northern mountains of West Virginia.

A high pressure over the eastern Plains cleared skies and lowered temperatures across much of the East, but the southern and central Plains had scattered showers and thundershowers.

Today's forecast called for snow-showers mixed with rainshowers from New England across New York and the upper Ohio Valley; rain across much of Montana; and thunderstorms scattered over the southern and central Plains.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against most major currencies in early European trading today, after falling the previous day on speculation about cuts in interest rates. Gold prices were higher.

Rumors that President Reagan was preparing to take military action against Libya bolstered the dollar, but the currency remained "basically weak," said one Frankfurt dealer.

"Without any support from a U.S.-Libya confrontation, the dollar is basically weak," said the dealer.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar declined for the second straight day to close at 179.80 yen, compared with Wednesday's 180.20. Later, in London, it was quoted at 179.88 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Wednesday:

-2.3315 West German marks, up from 2.3255

-1.9532 Swiss francs, up from 1.9500

-7.4245 French francs, up from 7.3925

-2.6233 Dutch guilders, down from 2.6325

-1,595.50 Italian lire, up from 1,591.50

-1.3842 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3817.

In London, the dollar also rose against the British pound, which was quoted at $1.4612, cheaper than $1.4640 late Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $338.25 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $337. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $338.15.

In Zurich, the bid price was $338.10, up from $337.50 late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 77 cents to close at a bid $338.40.

In New York on Wednesday, gold fell 70 cents to close at $339.30.

Loeffler introduces bill to save stripper wells

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, Wednesday introduced a bill aimed at saving hundreds of stripper wells that he said are being shut down because the cost of lifting the oil out of the ground is greater than the current price per barrel.

Loeffler, a candidate for the Republican nomination for Texas governor, proposed filling the Strategic Petroleum Reserve at the rate of 300,000 barrels a day with oil from stripper wells — those producing less than 10 barrels a day.

The legislation requires the minimum bid for this oil to be $15 a barrel, which Loeffler said is the minimum lifting price. No producer would be eligible to sell more than 10,000 barrels a day for injection into the reserve.

Oil for the SPR, stored in salt caverns on the Texas and Louisiana Gulf coasts as a hedge against a major disruption in foreign oil supplies, presently is purchased by the government from Mexico.

Loeffler, at a press conference at his Capitol office, acknowledged that his plan would result in backing Mexico out of the SPR market, but he said the demand for imported oil would assure the Mexicans of a market.

While support for the strategic reserve is strong in Congress, Loeffler may find it difficult to work up enthusiasm for his package in a session crowded with must-pass legislation.

The Reagan administration's budget for the second year in a row requests that the strategic reserve be capped at 500 million barrels, almost exactly the amount now in storage, 250 million barrels short of the amount authorized by Congress.

Congress has refused to halt the filling and has rejected the president's requests to defer money already appropriated to continue construction of the last storage facility, near Beaumont, Texas, and to purchase more oil.

Loeffler — a Republican floor leader and a dependable Reagan ally — pointed out that he has fought the administration on attempts to cut back on oil purchases for the reserve as a means of saving money to help balance the federal budget.

Another section of Loeffler's legislation would remove federal constraints on spending money returned to the states due to oil pricing violations. In one recent case, the state of Texas received almost $160 million, but under existing law cannot spend the money for anything other than energy conservation programs.

In the Democratic-controlled House, Republican legislation rarely reaches the floor without significant help from Democrats. The fact that Loeffler is a member of the Interior Committee, with jurisdiction over natural resource legislation, is a plus. He said he has not spoken with committee chairman Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., about scheduling a hearing. "But I will, today," he said.

Loeffler said his proposal is not intended to "bring back the regulation and bureaucracy which have worked the last five years to dismantle." Nor is it a "bailout" for producers, he added.

The legislative package also calls for a $5 a barrel import fee on imported crude and a $10 a barrel fee on imported petroleum products. He earmarks the fees toward reducing the federal budget deficit.

Oil state senators, including Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, are sponsoring legislation to tax imported oil at a level sufficient to prop up the price of oil to around $20 a barrel. The senators, including Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., scheduled a meeting Thursday morning at his office, presumably to discuss progress — or lack of it — on their legislation.

Housing assistance program announced

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Garry Mauro

Garry Mauro, Texas Land Commissioner, visited the Midland-Odessa area yesterday to discuss the new Veteran's Home Improvement Loan Program, which is due to go into effect May 1.

"This program is a totally 100 percent self-sufficient program that doesn't cost Texas taxpayers a penny," he told a noon press conference at the Midland Regional airport.

Mauro added that the program will create new jobs in the state, citing one expert's opinion that the program will create 10,000 jobs a year. Asked how, he said that such remodeling jobs require carpenters, plumbers, glass fitters, among other workers. "There is a federal home improvement program, but for whatever reason, it hasn't been used. There's a pent-up demand for home improvements," he said.

Voters approved funding for the program last November when they passed a consitutional amendment last November approving general obligation bonds for the Texas Veterans Housing Assistance Program.

"We have spent 24 months developing this program, and I am here to announce that we'll be ready to take applications on May 1," Mauro stated. He noted that the state has made 388 Veterans Assistance loans in the Midland-Odessa area in the last 29 months. "We've had significant participation, and not a single foreclosure."

The program is designed to assist Texas veterans in making improvements to existing homes by offering fixed-rate, 15-year loans of between $5,000 and $17,500 at a rate of 11.5 percent. According to Mauro, there is no down payment required, and the loan carries closing costs of between $500 and $700. He added that the program protects the lender 100 percent against default.

Those eligible for the loans are veterans who have lived in Texas at leat five years, and plan to use the loans for single family detached and attached houses, townhouses, cuints of condominium development or planned unit development, as well as 2-4 family units constructed at least five years prior to the closing date of the loan.

Loans cannot be obtained to finance barbecue pits, bathhouses, burglar protection bars or alarms, entertainment facilities, greenhouses, airplane hangars, kennels, landscaping, lawn sprinkler systems, saunas, swimming pools, tennis courts, drive ways, sidewalks or patios, among other items.

According to Mauro,local institutions will be administering the loans, and the Texas Veteran's Commission will play an active role in certifying borrowers' eligibility. He said 80 lending institutions have signed up, and he will announce the full list on May 1. Interested veterans call call the Land Commission's toll-free number, 1-800-252-VETS.

Mauro also said that plans to grow asparagus and pistachio nuts in Reeves County are proceeding very well, that his office has signed a general partner to lease the land and put the operation into place, and is presently taking limited partners. "We had a consultant from Israel come in, and he just bout 18,000 pistachio plants," Mauro said. He added that his office will be ready to plant the asparagus and pistachios next year.

He also said his office has considered growing plants in West Texas that can be used to make tequila and sotol, a drink similar to tequila, but hasn't found anyone in the private sector who's interested yet.

Panel votes to retain oil tax breaks

By DAVID E. ROSENBAUM
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In its first conclusive action on tax revision legislation, the Senate Finance Committee voted Wednesday to retain all the special tax breaks now enjoyed by the oil, gas and timber industries.

The committee, aiming toward approval of a tax bill by early next month, then began debating a proposal for a new depreciation system that would give companies more generous write-offs than they can now take when they purchase machinery and other equipment. The proposal, which may come to a vote Thursday, appears to have the support of a narrow majority of the panel.

The House of Representatives, in passing its tax-revision bill in December, voted for limits on the preferential tax treatment of the oil, gas and timber industries and for a much less favorable depreciation system.

The natural resources section that was approved Wednesday would cost the government $1 billion over the next five years in lost revenue, compared with the current tax law. The House provisions in the same area would increase revenue by $12 billion.

Oil prices causes banks to tighten loan-loss positions

DALLAS (AP) — Dropping oil and gas prices prompted Texas American Bancshares to strengthen its loan loss provision by $44 million, resulting in an anticipated loss of more than $20 million for the first quarter, the company announced.

The increased provision brings the total to $84 million and will result in a loss of $22 million for the quarter ending March 31, 1986, the company said Wednesday in a news release.

The Fort Worth-based company, which holds most of its assets in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and Central Texas, said the increased provision was made because of dropping oil and gas prices. The loan loss provision was based on an average expected oil price of $15 per barrel.

The company's board of directors approved a reduction in the regular quarterly dividend from 38 cents to 25 cents per share, effective with the next dividend payment in July.

Meanwhile, National Bancshares Corp. of Texas Wednesday announced earnings of $3.2 million, or 27 cents per share, for the first quarter ending March 31, 1986, compared with $6.8 million, or 56 cents per share, for the first quarter of 1985.

The reduced earnings are due primarily to a provision of $10.9 million made to the company's reserve for possible loan losses compared to a $4 million provision for the first quarter of 1985, the company said.

National Bancshares, based in San Antonio, said the strengthened loan loss provision was due in part to loans at one of the member banks. The company said non-performing assets were $64.9 million or 3.07 per cent of total earnings compared with $51.4 million or 2.46 percent at the end of 1985.

The increase in non-performing assets is due to the general weakening of the Texas economy, officials said.

Phillips proposes stock bonuses over cash

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. wants to give its top executives additional shares of common stock rather than the cash rewards handed out since 1978, officials say.

A company spokesman said Monday that Phillips shareholders will be asked to approve the revised bonus program during the company's annual meeting April 26 in Houston.

Under the stock proposal, the company will offer common stock in the company, increasing the shares held by top management, rather than cash as bonuses.

If the plan is approved, the spokesman said Phillips will terminate the existing incentive compensation plan approved by shareholders in 1978. It is one of two bonus plans under which the top Phillips executives receive 50 percent or more of their total annual salaries in stock and cash bonuses.

Administration moves to decontrol natural gas

By GUY DARST

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is throwing a two-pronged spear at natural gas regulation.

Energy Secretary John Herrington today sends Congress a bill to remove the last price controls on natural gas, and also goes before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to argue the case for his proposal for de facto administrative decontrol.

Energy officials have insisted there is no conflict in the way they are proceeding, and the two approaches can be seen as alternatives.

About 40 percent of the nation's gas — gas produced before 1978 — is under price controls that range from about 50 cents to $2.56 per thousand cubic feet, the maximum permitted for such "old" gas.

All other gas was freed from controls in 1985.

Herrington last week outlined major features of his proposed bill, which many congressional aides have said probably will not be taken up this year for lack of time and distaste for a bruising replay of a battle on an issue that has seen only one successful bill in half a century.

The bill, Herrington said last week, leaves existing contracts alone, but new contracts would be free of price controls immediately. On April 1, 1987, FERC's authority to set "just and reasonable" prices would expire.

In the other prong of the attack, Herrington last year asked FERC to declare that the "just and reasonable" price for old gas was the old-gas ceiling, now $2.56 — a price now above spot market prices at the wellhead in many parts of the country. He proposed that producers be free to break contracts if their customers failed to negotiate new prices under certain conditions.

The Justice Department asked the commission to go a step further and declare the "just and reasonable" price was whatever the market set. The department argued that natural gas at the wellhead now sold in a competitive market, and prices set in such markets automatically were "just and reasonable."

The Energy Department's proposal, Justice said, would leave controls in place if market prices ever rose above the $2.56 ceiling.

Producers have strongly backed administrative decontrol, but pipelines have opposed it just as strongly. Pipelines, backed by local distribution companies, have wanted some relief from high-cost "take or pay" contracts.

McDonalds switching to Coca Cola Classic

CHICAGO (AP) — Coca Cola Classic is back by popular demand at the 7,000 McDonald's fast-food restaurants in the United States, officials say.

"McDonald's has switched to Coca Cola Classic because consumers, at least in this country, show a definite preference for Coca Cola Classic, and we feel we need to go along with these preferences," McDonald's Corp. spokesman Charles Rubner said Wednesday night.

U.S. customers didn't prefer new Coke, which the hamburger chain began using in the United States and Canada about a year ago, shortly after Atlanta-based Coca Cola changed its decades-old formula, he said.

The switch at McDonald's came as no surprise at Coca-Cola's Atlanta headquarters, said company spokesman Carlton Curtis. "Coke Classic outsells Coke. It is understandable that they would want to offer the soft drink that is consumed by more of their customers."

Curtis said McDonald's is Coca-Cola's largest customer in the fountain drink market, but that the switch is not expected to have any impact.

GETTING A HANDLE ON CHECKS

Hot checks have plagued Midland retailers for years.

Midland firm cashes in on bad checks

DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Ask any business person or banker about their most troublesome problems and chances are they will cite bad checks. Bouncing checks annually cost retailers and banks $4 billion a year.

A new Midland firm, however, is offers a computerized, cost-effective way for any size merchant to reduce the risk of accepting a check from a habitual bad check writer.

Locally owned and operated, Jerry Roberson has opened the 106th CheckRite office, serving a 14 county-wide area in the Permian Basin and West Texas. CheckRite is a national company with locations in 24 states with 12 offices in Texas.

Based on a concept developed by Gene Nethery of Denver, CheckRite works this way:

The company signs agreements with merchants to take bounced checks directly from the bank.

When a bad check shows up, CheckRite will try for six weeks to find the check writer and recover the money. If that effort fails, the check is returned to the merchant and the check writer's name goes on a monthly list sent to all CheckRite subscribers.

When the check writer realizes that he has lost the privilege of writing checks at many local businesses, he generally decides to pay up, according to Roberson. "About 75 percent of the check writers CheckRite tracks down make that decision to pay the check along with a $15 service fee," Roberson said. "That's how CheckRite makes its money — off the $15.00 recovery fee, not by the traditional method of charging the merchant's for the service."

Roberson stressed that his company was not a collection agency where they traditionally get a percentage of what is collected. "We are a recovery agency and the unique thing about our service is that the merchant does not have to pay us to collect bad checks. The cost of recovery is where it should be - on the guy who caused the problem."

"Not only do we give the merchant the full amount of the check once it is collected, but we also give him $3 of the $15 we collect for recovery fee."

Another unique feature with the CheckRite system is its low-key and businesslike approach in recovering which allows merchants to maintain the customer's goodwill and allows customers to honor their checks voluntarily without a hassle.

"Should the guy who misfigured his checkbook or the person who rarely writes a hot check but for some reason does have a check bounce have his name in a computer system somewhere as a bad check risk forever?"

Roberson and the CheckRite company think not. "If the average customer has a bad check, it is usually not a habitual thing and we feel that customer should be given every chance to come down and pick up his check and once he has honored the check, should be taken out of the system as a bad check writer, never to have his name there again, unless he writes another bad check," Roberson added.

"Market studies show that there are about 4,000 bad checks passed every day in the Midland/Odessa area so there is a tremendous problem here. Our recovery success rate is 70 to 80 percent," stated Roberson.

Why should the average citizen who does not pass bad checks even care about the problem?

Said Roberson: "A merchant has to make up for the money he is out for collecting bad checks. To make his profit then, he must raise prices at the store. So in effect, we who are honest and don't write bad checks have to pay for the guys who do, and that's not fair."

Diamond Shamrock forming property acquisitions group

DALLAS (SWN) Diamond Shamrock Corp. is forming an oil and gas property acquisitions group that will investigate potential purchases of producing properties primarily in North America.

William H. Bricker, chairman and chief executive officer, said the group will be evaluating and acquiring properties that fit in with Diamond Shamrock's current operations, with particular attention being placed on properties in the Gulf of Mexico that can enhance the asset value of Diamond Shamrock Offshore Partners Limited Partnership (NYSE: DSP), in which Diamond Shamrock is managing general partner and owns approximately 83 percent interest.

"We believe that in the current environment there will be excellent opportunities to acquire oil and gas properties at attractive prices," Bricker said.

C. Barton Groves, corporate vice president, has been given the assignment to form the group. Also named to the group as staff vice presidents are Noel D. Rietman and K. Delmar Rumph. Rietman will be responsible for generating prospective acquisitions and Rumph will coordinate evaluation of properties.

NRM cancels HCW acquisition

DALLAS (SWN) NRM Energy Company, L.P. announced the termination of its November 5, 1985 agreement with HCW Inc. under which NRM Energy was to acquire for cash substantially all of the oil and gas assets of HCW and make an exchange offer to acquire the oil and gas assets of certain HCW oil and gas drilling and income programs in exchange for depositary units of NRM Energy. NRM Energy indicated that the agreement was terminated effective as of April 8, 1986 as a result of the failure of certain conditions set forth in the agreement.

James R. McNab, Jr., managing director and chief executive officer of Natural Resource Management Corporation, the general partner of NRM Energy, said:

"Because of the termination of this agreement we do not intend to proceed with an exchange offer to the HCW oil and gas limited partnerships. We do, however, intend to proceed promptly with the previously announced exchange offer for interests in certain oil and gas limited partnerships managed by NRM. We currently expect to conduct this exchange offer in the second quarter of 1986."

NRM Energy is a Dallas-based, Delaware limited partnership engaged in the production, development, acquisition and exploration of oil and gas properties.

LOEFFLER

Other provisions in Loeffler's bill call for retaining current tax treatment of crude oil production and natural gas under pending tax reform legislation, retaining the current Superfund tax structure, selling the Naval Petroleum Reserve to help pay for the oil to be placed in reserve, and removing federal constraints on money recovered from oil pricing violations and returned to the states.

Loeffler emphasized that he is a co-sponsor of legislation —similar in some respects — introduced by fellow Texas Republican Rep. Bill Archer of Houston and Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

When Archer introduced his bill two weeks ago it attracted a bipartisan group of 18 original co-sponsors, including Rep. Larry Combest, D-Lubbock, and other Texas Republicans.

Archer's bill would allow marginal production tax credits, not to exceed $5 a barrel, for each barrel of high cost crude produced from marginal domestic wells. Also, he would allow a 15 percent tax credit for expenses incurred in exploratory activities.

Archer would repeat the windfall profits tax and repeal the Fuel Use Act and deregulate natural gas, among other provisions.

An aide to Archer said because the legislation covers so many areas it has been referred to several committees, including Ways and Means — the tax-writing committee — and Energy and Commerce.

He said it is difficult to assess the degree of encouragement Archer has received. "We're trying to build a stronger base to work from."

Both Loeffler and Archer said they believe members of Congress from non-oil producing states are beginning to understand that it is necessary that a domestic oil industry be allowed to survive.

"The same people at OPEC who now bring us $10 oil also lined us up at the gas pump during the Arab oil embargo, and they will do it again, given half a chance," Loeffler said.

TAXES

The potential revenue loss from changed depreciation rules would be even steeper. The sponsors of the proposal estimated that $20 billion would be lost, in comparison with the present depreciation system. The House bill, by contrast, would generate about $25 billion in new revenue — a spread of $45 billion.

No one suggested where the lost revenue might be made up. Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., said he had "deep concerns" about whether the committee would be able to adopt a bill that was "revenue neutral," raising the same amount of money over all as now.

Complaining about the proposed tax treatment of oil and gas producers, Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., declared, "Instead of cutting middle-income taxpayers' tax rates, we are giving a subsidy to a specific segment of industry."

He offered a series of proposals to phase out the oil depletion allowance, limit the deductions that oil and gas companies can take for drilling costs and end the favorable tax treatment for companies that harvest timber on Federal lands. None of the Bradley amendments received more than three votes; in some cases, he was the only senator favoring them.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, represented the committee's dominant position when he said that with oil prices plunging and the economy of oil-producing states in disarray, the oil industry needed new help rather than higher taxes.

Bentsen and other key senators plan to meet Thursday to discuss legislative steps that could be taken to dissuade small producers from plugging their oil wells.

Although the committee's provisions dealing with oil, gas and timber would be more favorable to industry than those proposed last year by President Reagan, the administration did not take issue with them.

The administration also seemed to support the proposed new depreciation system, which was worked out over the last few weeks by about a dozen committee members and their staffs. Richard G. Darman, deputy secretary of the Treasury, said it was "moving in the right direction."

Included in that category would be items ranging from airplanes to machines used to make jewelry.

But other items, including table-top computers, photocopiers and telephone switching equipment, would not be classified in this way and would be subject to less generous depreciation rules.

One of the chief sponsors, Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., said the proposal was intended "to create the kind of tax environment that will keep us competitive in world markets."

Forecaster says Austin will keep booming

AUSTIN (AP) — The city of Austin, one of the nation's fastest-growing metropolitan areas in recent years, will see a strong 7 percent growth rate in 1986 — more than double the rate projected by the local chamber of commerce, a real estate consultant says.

John Lindley, head of The Lindley Group, said he is changing his firm's projections for 1986 because of dropping oil prices and falling interest rates. He said he expects 50,000 people to move to the city this year, up from 30,000 in 1985.

Lindley's forecast runs counter to those by other economists, who have predicted a much slower pace.

"Sounds a little high to me," said Thomas Plaut, an economist for the state comptroller's office.

At the end of 1985, Plaut had projected a growth rate of 0.6 percent for 1986 and 3.6 percent for 1987. At that time, he was working for the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.

The Austin Chamber of Commerce last month projected a 2.9 percent increase for 1986 and 3.5 percent growth for 1987.

But Lindley said Austin is more affected by national economic conditions than by the economy of the rest of Texas.

"I think the catalyst of the whole thing is the oil crisis," he said.

He said the city has virtually no employment or industry related to oil, and he said the oil price drop will contribute to expansion by companies nationally.

With lower interest rates and improved economic conditions nationally, more companies will be expanding and Austin is high on their list, he said.

"The decisions affecting Austin are not being made in Austin but being made in the corporate board rooms around the country," Lindley said.

"The opening of branch offices of national organizations in Austin hit an all-time high in 1984, resulting in the population growth of approximately 10 percent and economic growth considerably exceeding that," Lindley said this week in his newsletter.

"These same conditions exist again today, only the oil crisis is far more severe than in 1983 and the business expansion mode is much stronger than existed at that time."

Plaut said the national economy will improve, but not as much as Lindley expects. "And second, people are not going to move to Austin if the jobs aren't there."

GOP statewide hopefuls air differences, similarities

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Some preached, some touted just their credentials, some took jabs at their opponents.

But it was a chance to air differences and similarities among candidates seeking the Republican nomination in statewide races. The primary will be May 3.

Featured speakers at the Wednesday luncheon of the Midland County Republican Women's Club were David Davidson and Virgil Mullinax, candidates for lieutenant governor; Frank Trompler, agriculture commissioner; Ed Emmett, Milton Fox and Ralph Hoelscher, railroad commissioner; and Judge Roy Barrera Jr., John Roach and Ed Walsh, attorney general.

Davidson and Mullinax agreed the Democratic incumbent, Bill Hobby, needs to be defeated but each differed in his perspective of the best person for the job.

A FORMER banker, businessman and minister and now serves as a business consultant, Davidson described the lieutenant governor's job as the person with the most power in state government. "Republicans won't change politics in Texas until we have a Republican lieutenant governor. Texas has become a Republican state but the Legislature doesn't reflect that.

"You have a dream in your heart for what you believe Texas ought to be. You have desire to see things made better. Hobby stands in the way of your vision, your hopes, your future," said Davidson.

Mullinax said he entered the race after being told Hobby was too rich and powerful to be defeated. Twelve years ago he unseated a longtime incumbent district judge, he said, and has held the seat ever since. As a district judge, "You're dealing directly with the people, not from the sidelines. You see that the laws of the state are applied directly to the people."

Trompler described himself as a farmer, not a politician, and that is one of the statutory requirements for agriculture commissioner, he said. The state doesn't have the farm programs or implementation that is needed. "A lot of your tax dollars are being wasted," he said.

A trade and export commission was set up in 1984 by President Reagan to help farmers and those people now are looking at the 1985 Farm Bill, Trompler said. "The commission is recommending we work on export markets. As commissioner of agriculture, I would be in the place of responsibility to do this."

The three candidates for railroad commissioner varied on their approach to the job.

EMMETT CITED three issues in his campaign deregulation of natural gas at time when gas wells are shut in and Texas is the number one state using coal, deregulation of the trucking industry and implementation of truck safety regulations. United Parcel Service, he said, was prohibited from operating in the state for 19 years by the Railroad Commission and the issue had to be settled by the Supreme Court.

Local educators divided on RN student requirements

Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Local nursing education directors are divided on a recent proposal by the Texas Nurses Association to change the minimum educational requirements for registered nurses (RNs) — a move that could mean two additional years of college for future Midland College nursing students.

During a March 19-22 convention held at the Shamrock Hotel in Houston, the TNA endorsed a measure that would establish by 1995, a minimum of a baccalaureate (four-year) degree in nursing for qualification as an RN.

"Our endorsement for upgrading the educational requirements of registered nurses culminates a 20-year process of debate and study nationally as well as in Texas," said TNA President Anna Pearl Rains.

Currently, individuals licensed to practice registered nursing in Texas are prepared by one of three different educational programs: a two-year associate degree (junior college) program, a three-year diploma (hospital) program or a four-year baccalaureate program in nursing.

"RNs have asked themselves how the profession can best respond to modern health care challenges," said Ms. Rains. "Our answer is to begin by unifying and strengthening the educational preparation of practitioners who will provide the nursing services needed by Texas consumers now and into the next century."

The measure adopted by the ANA called for two levels of nurses: professional and associate. Other states, including North Dakota, New York and Maine, have already required the professional nurse hold a BSN. New York and Maine have introduced legislation requiring the BSN as well, said the TNA.

Under the TNA proposal, the professional RN would be a baccalaureate graduate. Associate degree nursing programs, like those found at Midland College and other junior colleges would prepare an associate nurse to practice technical nursing, said the TNA. A grandfather clause in the proposal would guarantee already-licensed RNs the right to keep their standing as a professional nurses.

TNA Executive Director Claire Jordan, believes the change is necessary to keep Texas nurses in step with other states.

"Texas nurses are already losing reciprocity," she said. "Even now they can no longer work in North Dakota with just a two-year degree."

Dr. Eileen Piwetz, head of the nursing program at Midland College said she opposes the measure, which would have to be approved by the state legislature before becoming policy.

"I'm reminded of the old adage 'if it isn't broken don't fix it,'" said Ms. Piwetz. "We have enough job opportunities and descriptions for all three levels to function."

Ms. Piwetz supported the two-year associate program as necessary for many nursing students who may not have the funds or time to take time out for a four-year college education.

"Many of our students are older, have families and hold down a job," she said. "They can't always leave to go to a four-year college setting."

She also defended the merits of an associate degree in nursing (ADN) program versus the baccalaureate of nursing (BSN) program.

"Since 1979, the ADN's have outperformed the BSN's on the National Council Licensure Examination (NCLEX) for registered nurses," she said. "Since 1981 a higher percentage of ADN's have obtained a passing score."

"Not only do more pass, the majority out score them (BSN's) as well," she added.

Ms. Piwetz attributed the statistics to the junior college setting.

"I think we're doing a better job of education," she said. "It's more concentrated and they have clinical or internship experience. Our education is superior."

She added the statistics for career advancement following graduation from a ADN program were positive as well.

"Fifteen years after graduation, 68 percent of ADN graduates are still employed in nursing. Only 64 percent of BSN grads are still in the field," she said. Ms. Piwetz based her information on data supplied by the National Council on State Boards of Nursing.

"As far as career mobility, 25 percent of ADN grads went back for further education within 15 years," she said.

Commissioner candidate proposes private sector build, operate jail

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioner candidate Milton Rister declared that Midland County is at a "crossroads" in its jail problems and suggested that "radical and long-lasting changes" are needed.

"I propose that private enterprise be given the chance to find the correct solutions that have eluded our current county commissioners," he proposed Wednesday in a press conference.

Rister is a 35-year-old computer consultant who is in a three-way race for Midland County commissioner of Precinct 2 in the Republican Party May 3 primary election. He is seeking to dislodge Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, who first was elected to office in 1982, and to beat out challenger Guy McCrary, a marketing consultant.

Rister is proposing that the private sector build and operate the County Jail, lease space to the county, and let the sheriff monitor the operations.

"I believe in free enterprise," he said, and acknowledged that his proposal would "meet resistance" from sheriffs and governments. "I understand that."

And he expressed disapproval with the notion of a county-owned jail which could be leased to the federal government and become profitable enough to pay off much of the indebtedness.

"I don't believe that governments should be in the business to make money," he said. "That's what free enterprise is for."

Rister said that there is "no political constituency" for prisons.

"The public wants criminals locked up, but not at the expense of higher taxes. Corrections is a low-priority item. It is historically passed from one governmental agency to another. He said that attitude accounts for the "enormous problems" facing state and county governments. "Certainly, there is not reason to expect paying for prison reform to suddenly become a popular item with voters and taxpayers."

"The problem the Midland (County) Jail is suffering from is the same lethargy that's made efforts to correct penal problems difficult since the first crime was committed. Nobody wants to deal with it," he said.

"All of us would much rather spend our money to build a new library, improve our roads, or build a new football stadium," he said. "I must admit, so would I."

Rister said the "motivation" behind the jail issue is the Texas Commission on Jail Standards' order to bring the jail up to standards or build a new one.

The Jail Commission has ordered that flaws and deficiencies in the jail be corrected and has approved corrective measures. Likewise, the Jail Commission has approved architectural plans for a new and expanded County Jail but did not order Midland County to build a new jail.

"This state agency has the power to close our jail," Rister said. "They have done this in other areas of the state."

Lamar Smith calls for oil import fee as part of energy program

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

A congressional candidate for the Republican nomination is bucking the attitude of his opponents and is calling for an oil import fee as part of his four-point energy program.

Lamar Smith of San Antonio, one of five seeking the GOP nomination for 21st District congressional seat, announced his plan Wednesday afternoon during a news conference in front of the Texas Employment Commission office.

Also seeking the GOP nomination are G. Thane Akins of Midland, Henry Gandy of Kerrville and Van Archer and Jeff Wentworth, both of San Antonio.

Smith's program calls for a temporary oil import fee to stabilize the price of oil at $22 a barrel from the recent low of $10 a barrel; repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax retroactive to Jan. 1, 1986; deregulation of all natural gas by price and maintaining current tax provisions for intangible drilling costs and depletion allowance.

The candidate noted that while the three Republican gubernatorial candidates — Bill Clements, Tom Loeffler and Kent Hance — support an oil import fee, none of his opponents follows that thinking. He agrees with the proposal by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, for helping the oil industry, and Smith's program incorporates some of those. But while Gramm opposes the oil import fee, that is the crux of Smith's plan.

"I just think we need to do something right now to prevent the collapse of the oil and gas industry," said Smith. "We can't afford to wait. I'm the only one talking about a solution in this race."

In his news release Smith pointed out the Midland TEC office has set a record on new claims for unemployment insurance in one month by receiving 949 new claims. That also represents a three-fold increase in three months of claims, he said.

Contending to be a supporter of the "free market" system, Smith charged the domestic oil industry "is not competing on a level playing field with the foreign oil producers of OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries). Foreign producers are subsidized by their governments."

Domestic markets are controlled by supply and demand; in OPEC countries the market is dominated by market manipulation and price-fixing, he said. "Our domestic oil industry is threatened by unfair dumping of cheap foreign oil on the world market. I am not talking about protection. I am talking about survival. The Permian Basin is drowning in foreign oil and we need to throw it a life preserver."

Smith said an oil import fee would not only strengthen the domestic industry but also help reduce the federal deficit by as much as $45 billion over five years.

Dead or hurt animals lying in road dreadful sight

Road kills are a pathetic sight.

The other night, as I was driving home along a less-traveled street, I drove past an orange, tiger-striped cat lying motionless in the middle of the roadway.

I kept going but only for an instance.

I so dread seeing one of God's creature's needlessly dead and, more than that, repeatedly hit by traffic.

I had no intent of being an ambulance driver.

Even so, I turned around, drove back to the cat, and decided to carry unfortunate creature to the roadside.

With the headlamps shining on the feline animal, I hopped out of the car and approached the cat.

He was still warm. He was breathing. His eyes were unblinking. Much thick blood was about his head.

Now, the situation was compounded.

As I was pondering what to do, an expressionless teen-age boy in blue jeans walked over to the spotlight formed by the beams from the headlamps.

I told him the cat was still alive.

He meowed weakly.

"Kick him in the head," the boy suggested, "and get him out of his misery."

Unconscionable, I thought.

I told him that the young cat, a tomcat, probably was in too much shock to be miserable.

I remembered when I was a child, a German shepherd pup fell beneath a wheel of a team-driven wagon which we were driving on a muddy East Texas road in the 1940s. Dad stopped the team. The poor pup was yipping — crying painfully.

With mercy, Dad picked up the pup, looked him over, and presently hastened his death. At the time, I thought his killing the severely injured dog was a "hard" thing to do. I shuttered, probably cried, and couldn't understand why the crying pup wasn't cuddled, nursed, and healed. Today, I'm convinced that my father did what he knew was the humane thing to do in the country.

"Kick him in the head," the expressionless boy demanded this time, "and get him out of his misery."

I was obstinate. I wanted an instantaneous miracle or quick mercy. I wanted the cat to spring up healed and run back home or for him to die right then. I dreaded the thought of being an executioner and feared the cat wouldn't live long enough to survive an ambulance run to a veterinarian were one even available midway between dusk and midnight.

I carried the cat to the roadside and laid him at rest. The boy followed. I could sense his impatience. I refused to "kick" and was watchful that he didn't.

Presently, the cat went into a spasm and mightily kicked his rear legs. I could hear his gasping. Then, all was silent.

About that time, an unshaven, husky and pot-bellied man approached the death scene. I could feel his hostility before he opened his mouth and raged on and on.

This was no animal lover, I quickly surmised.

He told me to get the dead cat off of his property. I suggested that the cat was on the right-of-way and wasn't on his property. That mattered not to him.

He warned me not to pitch the cat into a nearby Dumpster. I wouldn't. In his anger, he said someone once threw a dead dog in the trash receptacle and "stunk up" the neighborhood for days.

His disdain for cats, particularly dead ones, was not amusing.

"They ain't nothing but filthy miniature lions from Africa," he yelled.

That was an interesting revelation, I thought. I wondered if he might consider opening a zoo for the public to view "miniature lions." He could make a killing.

I told the unruly man that I would telephone the police, who then could dispatch someone to pick up the cat and dispose of him. That notion did not appeal to the man.

He wanted the cat out of his sight and on the other side of the road.

"One of them cats ate on my father when he was on his deathbed," he screamed.

Finally, I picked up the poor cat after the man threatened to throw him at me if I didn't move him. By then, I no longer noticed the boy.

I carried the cat to the car, turned in the direction of the hostile man, and said "Bless you" in trying to conceal my disconcertedness and to avoid screaming unkind words at the man whom I didn't even know.

I wrapped the cat in a white T-shirt, and, as if a hearse driver, I drove away. At home, I wrapped the handsome cat in poplin even as my cats, in their curious aloofness, watched, dug a grave, buried him, and said a prayer.

Austin council to vote on becoming sanctuary city

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — So far 17 cities and a state have declared themselves sanctuaries for illegal aliens fleeing persecution in Central America.

Today the Austin City Council will decide if the state's capital should serve a a refuge for illegal immigrants from places such as Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala.

But before the vote, the council chambers will be overflowing for a public hearing on the sanctuary resolution. One city hall aide said the public hearing — limited to five minutes per speaker — could last as long as three hours.

Austin Mayor Frank Cooksey supports making Austin a sanctuary for undocumented aliens. Cooksey rewrote the resolution, basing it on the U.S. Refugee Act of 1980 and the Geneva Conventions of Aug. 12, 1949.

Cooksey believes the resolution does not break any federal laws, and, more importantly, is the right thing for Austin. However he also admits the resolution is only symbolic.

"When we can offer refuge to Ferdinand Marcos, why can't we give refuge to those in Central America who fled from political persecution," Cooksey asked.

No Texas city has declared itself a sanctuary yet, although El Paso is considering it and San Antonio's city council briefly discussed the idea. San Francisco, St. Paul, and 15 other cities serve as sanctuaries for illegal aliens, mostly from Central America.

The federal Immigration and Naturalization Service has frowned on Austin's attempt. One INS official threatened to dump detained illegal aliens on city hall if the council adopts the sanctuary resolution.

One city council member plans to vote against the resolution because he said it breaks federal law, but Cooksey said he wants a unanimous vote. All the other council members are on record as supporting Austin as a sanctuary.

State Rep. Terral Smith of Austin opposes the sanctuary resolution, saying the city is involving itself in foreign policy. Smith, a Republican, also thinks the council is showing its displeasure with the Reagan administration's Central American policy.

"Why in the world the city of Austin, with all its problems, would want to get involed in foreign policy is beyond me," Smith said. "It's a national and international issue."

Austin City Council member George Humphrey supports making Austin a sanctuary, saying America is a country of immigrants who came here freeing political or religious persecution.

Republican gubernatorial hopeful Kent Hance blasted Cooksey for wanting Austin to become a sanctuary. Hance, then a Democrat, ran for the U.S. Senate in 1984 on a strong flatform of tightening Texas' borders and immigration reform.

Hance said if Austin becomes a sanctuary and he is elected governor, Austin could see its state funds stripped.

Cooksey, replied that "There's not much chance of either of those happening."

LaRouche says he's happy with White's performance

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic arch-conservative Lyndon LaRouche had a few nice words for Gov. Mark White, but the governor wasn't much impressed.

"The governor said, 'Maybe he's only half crazy,' " reported Ann Arnold, White's press secretary, after LaRouche praised the job White has been doing.

During a Wednesday news conference at the National Press Club in Washington, LaRouche spent most of his time denouncing various government officials. He then was pressed to name some U.S. political leaders he liked.

"I think Cap Weinberger's (U.S. defense secretary) doing a magnificent job considering the circumstances he's been in.

"I'm very happy with the performance of Gov. White of Texas," LaRouche replied.

NURSES

The TNA proposal could have serious consequences, as well, suggested Ms. Piwetz, for certain medical institutions such as nursing homes and smaller, rural hospitals.

"The majority of grads in any program tend to stay in the area where they received their degree," she said. "Of course, most of the baccalaureate programs are in the larger cities. Those grads tend to stay in the larger communities."

She said consequently, many of the hospitals in smaller towns are staffed with RNs who have gone through a ADN program offered by a nearby junior college. While a grandfather clause would protect those nurses currently employed, any future new-hires by such rural hospitals, under the TNA proposal, would have to be graduates of a four-year program, making the availability of RNs more difficult.

While Ms. Piwetz opposes the measure, another nursing director, Dr. Ella Herriage of Texas Tech's Permian Basin nursing program, believes the proposal will be beneficial to the nursing field.

"I support it," she said. "I think we're at a point where we do need to look at what level the professional nurse needs to be educated."

She added if the measure ever goes into effect, it "would increase an interest in nursing."

Ms. Herriage said the change would not affect future Midland College nursing students' plans to continue their education through Texas Tech's baccalaureate program. Currently, the school admits only RNs.

A spokesman for the TNA, J.L. Brown, believes the proposal is just part of a national movement and one that is necessary to keep up with changes in the nursing industry.

"It's part of a national occurrence and was adopted by the American Nurses Association (TNA's parent organization) in June," said Brown. "You have three different education programs preparing individuals for the same examination for the same title."

"At the same time, there is more and more being required of RNs, including a lot of judgment calls.

Ms. Rains supports Brown's concern.

"In hospitals, schools and community health clinics today, RNs make decisions which require sociological, psychological and management knowledges in addition to technical nursing skills," she said. "Consequently, a four-year professional nursing education seems the basic foundation necessary to meet the public's right to a competent, safe and qualified nursing professional."

Midlander may be charged with delivery of cocaine

From Staff Reports

A 26-year-old Midland man was expected to be charged with delivery of cocaine today after Midland narcotics detectives arrested him Wednesday in the 3300 block of North Midkiff Road, according to police reports.

The man was being held in city jail this morning pending the filing of formal charges of delivery of cocaine and possession with intent to deliver, reports said. He was arrested about 1:15 p.m. Further details were not available at presstime.

In other reports, a 17-year-old Midland youth injured in a Tuesday-night traffic accident was released from Midland Memorial Hospital Wednesday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Randy Sample, 4433 Leddy, was a passenger in a car driven by James Horton, 3503 W. Louisiana, which struck a stopped pickup truck about 8 p.m. Tuesday on Loop 250 near Wadley Avenue, according to police reports.

Horton, 16, and 20-year-old Kerry Robertson, 4400 Holiday Hill Road, who was driving the pickup, were treated and released after the accident, according to hospital reports.

The accident occurred when Horton's car ran into the back of Robertson's pickup, which was stopped at a red light, police reports said.

Two computers were reported stolen to the Sheriff's Office in two separate burglaries, reports said.

Frontier Petroleum Services Co., 607 County Road 1300, reported the loss of an $8,000 computer in a burglary which occurred sometime between Wednesday evening and early this morning. Also taken was an $110 cassette-radio, reports said.

Compressor Systems Inc. reported the loss of a $3,984 computer taken sometime between Tuesday and Wednesday from the company offices on Farm to Market 1788 between Interstate 20 and Highway 80, according to reports.

A $350 roto-tiller was reported stolen by Joe L. Howell, 1001 W. Dakota. The theft occurred Wednesday, according to reports from Midland police.

GOP

Fox, who lived in Midland during 1959, said it then took him eight years to sell his house here. "I can relate to what's happening here today," he said.

Noting that he has "a professional understanding of oil and gas issues," Fox explained he worked in the oil industry, specializing in enhanced recovery. Looking at Emmett's issues, Fox said he doubted if one Republican on the RRC "can outvote two holdover Democrats. I doubt if the Railroad Commission can do a great deal with regulating trucking." Instead, he wants to remove the "burdensome red tape and delay" the oil industry finds at the RRC.

Hoelscher, who farms and ranches in Tom Green and Runnels County, said he can provide common sense on the RRC. He believes there should be reasonably priced fuel provided to consumers with a fair return to the producers. One of his primary concerns on the RRC would be protection of natural resources, especially ground water and land being contaminated by brine water leaking from improperly plugged wells.

IN THE ATTORNEY general's race, one candidate cited his background, a second attacked incumbent Jim Mattox and the third found fallacies with the other two.

Barrera began his talk with a quote: "On the shores of hesitation bleach the bones of countless millions who, at the dawn of victory, sat down to rest and while resting, died.

"Remember what happened in Illinois. The Democrats sat down to rest and were LaRouched," he said of the Lyndon LaRouche party victories that surprised the Democrats there.

Barrera said he has prosecuted people for all the major crimes and as a judge has assessed more than 11,000 years in the Texas Department of Corrections, not including probation. As a Republican, he said he received more votes four years ago in Bexar County than did Mark White or other Democratic statewide winners.

Roach, a 99th District Court judge, got laughs from the audience when he asked them if they would buy a used car from Mattox or get involved in a business deal with him.

With his specialty in prosecuting white-collar crime, Roach cited his background and areas of law enforcement in which he is certified.

The state attorney general, he said, has no criminal prosecution authority.

Walsh said the state of Texas doesn't revolve around Bexar County nor can someone beat Mattox by talking about being a certified expert. "I'm not ashamed to say I am the only district attorney who has gotten a death penalty for (convicted killer) Henry Lee Lucas.

The candidate said he has received awards for being a top prosecutor and endorsements from such law enforcements persons as Col. Wilson Speir with the Department of Public Safety.

JAIL

Rister said the current county commissioners have "just dealt with what the state wants today" and have "passed the real problems on to the next generation." He said meeting the Jail Commission's "demands" and doing "what is politically popular" will not solve jail problems.

However, he said that the idea of "privatization" of jails is "frightening."

"If private enterprise can do it, why can't governments?" he asked. But he said both state and county governments repeatedly have demonstrated that they "can not" solve penal problems.

"Midland is one of these," he said. "With the state threatening to close our jail and release criminals into our community, this problem is well worth dealing with now."

The housing of county prisoners may be compounded, he said, if the Texas Legislature creates a fourth-class felony and deems that new class of criminals be housed at the county level to help alleviate the over-crowded conditions in the Texas Department of Corrections.

"If this change is implemented, county prison populations and the problems we have now will simply be multiplied."

He said privately operated jails can be managed humanely, efficiently, economically and profitably.

A privately operated jail's accountability would not be limited to its investors.

"Private companies have an incentive to provide and operate a secure yet humane facility where prisoners are actually rehabilitated. Such is not the case with government jails that stay in business regardless of their dismal track record," Rister said. "The court system still decides sentences and governs parole. Private prisons simply would provide a facility to detain and rehabilitate criminals."

Couple will autograph new book

From Staff Reports

Roger and Diana Olien will be at Pages and Prints Bookstore, 40 Plaza Center, from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday autographing their latest book, "Life in the Oil Fields."

So much has been said about the great gushers, the notorious wildcatters and the raucous boomtowns of oil field life, but the stories of the people who lived their lives in the shadow of the derrick have mainly gone untold until now.

The Midland historians also have co-authored several other books on the history of oil, including "Oil Booms: Social Change in Five Texas Towns," and "Wildcatters."

Roger Olien is the J. Conrad Dunagan Professor of Regional and Business History at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Odessan charged with possession

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 32-year-old woman, charged on two counts of drug possession, remained in city jail late this morning in lieu of $5,500 bond.

Barbara Campos Patino, 1122 W. Clifford, was arrested early Wednesday morning during a raid in which a 31-year-old man was shot in the hand.

Mrs. Patino was arraigned before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly on two charges of possession of cocaine and marijuana Wednesday morning. Weatherly set bond at $5,000 on the possession of cocaine charge and $500 on the marijuana possession charge.

The 31-year-old man remained at Medical Center Hospital today still undergoing treatment for the wound in his hand. The man is to be arraigned on charges of aggravated assault on a police officer, possession of cocaine and possession of marijuana as soon as he is released from the hospital.

The man was wounded when search warrant-armed Odessa police narcotics officers and an Ector County sheriff's narcotics deputy forced their way into the home about 12:23 a.m. Wednesday.

According to police spokesman John McAhon, Deputy Jim Dickson and narcotics detectives had forced open the front door of the residence and were entering when Dickson saw the man, armed with a 9 mm semi-automatice pistol, turn and point the gun at him. McAhon said several shots were fired and one struck the man's gun and right hand.

Officers confiscated a quantity of cocaine and marijuana, as well as a quantity of pills that were sent to a laboratory for analysis.

Frozen shrimp often taste of 'iodine'

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. I buy shrimp frozen in the shell in five-pound boxes. Sometimes the shrimp have a slight taste that I can only describe as iodine, even though they are fresh and firm. Can you enlighten me? I cannot find an answer in any of my cookbooks. Mrs. F. Gescheidt, Fort Collins, Colo.

A. This condition can occur at random naturally because of the source of supply.

"Sometimes shrimps taste strongly of 'iodine,' but this has nothing to do with spoilage," states A.J. McClane in the "Encyclopedia of Fish Cookery." Shrimps caught in brackish water (water that is somewhat salty) rarely have this pronounced flavor because the food that the shrimps eat does not concentrate iodine.

Shrimps taken offshore in water that is totally salty may feed on certain organisms which can produce a distinctive iodine flavor. On the other hand, river shrimps which live in fresh water are always iodine-free and have a consistently sweet flavor.

"Some countries use sodium bisulfite as a preservative, and this chemical also magnifies the iodine taste," says McClane. But this is illegal in the United States.

McClane advises that you bear in mind that shrimps generally contain the highest amount of iodine among crustaceans, and are also high in vitamins and minerals. Based on 100 grams of meat, shrimps provide 20.5 percent protein; chicken, 18.6 percent; beef, 18 percent; and pork, 10.2 percent.

Q. I've always wondered what makes roosters crow at dawn. I've also wondered why they do it in the first place. I'm in the eighth grade and am 13 years old. Julie Rumple, San Antonio, Texas

A. Why do roosters crow at or before dawn? A. van Tienhoven, professor of animal physiology at Cornell University's Department of Poultry and Avian Sciences, explains it this way:

"It's somewhat like 'the early bird catches the worm.' By crowing early, he can warn others to stay out just in case they happen to be up and have any designs on his territory or his hens and/or chickens.

"But how does the rooster know it's going to be dawn before the sun is visible? This is based on the biological clock, just as the way many people can be awake a few minutes before the alarm goes off."

Why do roosters crow in the first place?

"Roosters can crow only when they secrete male sex hormones." (If a rooster is castrated, it does not crow.) "Roosters are territorial," explains van Tienhoven, meaning they defend a territory against other roosters and keep a flock of females within this territory. The crowing is an "advertising" vocalization that tells other males to stay out and asks females to come in.

Q. When is lipstick too old to use? I'm 67 years old and have used lipsticks for many years. I enjoy using makeup. Ernestine Chepul, Waterbury, Conn.

A. Nancy Risdon, spokesperson for Revlon, advises us that there is no absolute answer to your question. Unopened, a tube of lipstick will last from two to five years. But once opened and in use, this time period varies. Temperature and humidity may affect it and it may start to dry out or bead up. When the lipstick doesn't smell right, throw it out.

So, after two to five years it's a matter of esthetic judgment whether to use the lipstick or not.

Readers' feedback:

• Judith Burroff, Hoagland, Ind. "In reference to plastic jugs versus paper cartons for milk, I would be delighted to purchase milk in paper cartons if only the paper carton industry would get their act together and improve the cartons.

"May I suggest that the paper carton industry stop spending their time deriding the plastic jugs and instead spend it on improving their product so that consumers will not avoid it."

Computer selects best buyers

WOBURN, Mass. (AP) — A computerized system that determines which individuals represent the best prospects for a specific mail order product offer at a given time of the year has been developed, reports MIS Week.

According to the management information systems journal, the software system examines relevant information about specific individuals, such as when they last purchased merchandise via direct mail, the average amount paid, how often they responded and the type of product typically bought.

It also includes details such as merchandise-return information and a variety of other factors related to their likelihood of response.

The direct marketing industry currently represents a $100 billion-$150 billion marketplace. More than 10 percent of all retail sales comes from direct marketing, and this share of retail sales is growing four to five times faster than traditional retail or over-the-counter sales.

More than 50 billion direct mail pieces are delivered each year, and by 1990 this figure is expected to rise to more than 80 billion.

Advertising doesn't change taste of frozen pizza

By LINDA ANDERSON

Linda Anderson

I don't know about anybody else's home, but at our house pizza is almost a necessity of life. The young taste-testers (even the tiniest one) love pizza, and the fact that a pizza shop is close to our front door puts the teenagers in adolescent heaven.

Unfortunately for many of us, hot, fragrant, pizza-shop pizza is not always possible, due to financial and transportation considerations. The alternative is frozen pizza, which isn't always the best choice.

Frozen food manufacturers are always trying new things to tempt the pizza-loving public into trying their product. "Deluxe" pizzas and mini-pizzas and French bread pizzas have all been introduced into the supermarket's frozen food section.

The latest attempt at luring consumers is Pepperidge Farm's Croissant Pastry Pizza, which is available in two-serving, 12-ounce boxes.

The regular taste-testers checked out this new pizza treat against a Red Baron Premium frozen pizza, a long-time competitor in the frozen pizza market, for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Both pizza products were hamburger-topped.

A 12-ounce box of hamburger croissant pastry pizza containing two 6-ounce servings (which will actually serve two, three or even four people, provided the four people are under the age of 8) cost $2.99. A 13-ounce box of Red Baron Premium hamburger pizza, containing one pizza about 9-inches in diameter which could be cut into four medium-size pieces or six child-sized pieces, cost $2.29. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising on the croissant pizza claims "Croissant Pastry Pizza is a revolutionary idea in pizza. ... a luscious pizza made from our own golden croissant pastry crust ... crust is light and flaky" and holds "lots of real cheese, rich tomato sauce and your favorite toppings." The product is also available in cheese, pepperoni sausage or deluxe flavors.

Red Baron label advertising is just as flamboyant: "His name was Richthofen ... He was the legendary Red Baron. His name and his memory remain today symbols of excellence ... the standard of being the very best recognized the world over." (Though what a German Red Baron has to do with Italian pizza is beyond me.) "... extraordinary crust, carefully prepared for a texture like fine pastry — crisp and firm to the bite on the outside, yet tender and light inside ... a rich, precisely seasoned tomato sauce ... tasty and tender meats ... fresh vegetables quick-frozen to secure their full flavor ... and two varieties of real, freshly grated dairy cheese." This pizza also comes in cheese, sausage, pepperoni, Canadian style bacon, sausage and pepperoni, sausage and mushroom and supreme.

After all that advertising hoopla, the pizza experts couldn't wait to dive in.

And were they disappointed? There's nothing wrong with either frozen pizza, but they are — in spite of all their label claims — still frozen pizza.

The little kids ate the top off the croissant pizza but left most of the crust. They liked the pizza-shaped pizza better, but they mostly ate the top off it, too. One teen liked the croissant pizza better than the Red Baron pizza, and the other liked the Red Baron pizza and mostly turned her nose up at the croissant pizza.

I don't like any pizza much, though I did like the crust of the croissant pizza.

We still buy frozen pizza occasionally, when we want a quick, easy Saturday lunch. But frozen pizza is just not as good as store-bought or homemade, said the experts, and we don't expect it to be.

Store brands can save consumer dollars

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a bloom of popularity a few years ago the black-and-white labels of generic grocery products are seen much less often now, but careful shoppers can still find bargains in most markets.

The generics gained popularity as low-cost alternatives to national products, but have not always maintained a large market share.

Instead, in many instances they have been replaced by a store brands, often both a first and second level of such products bearing private labels of the market itself.

The Consumer Federation of America is encouraging shoppers to consider store brands as a means of saving money.

"Store brands typically offer superior value to national brands because of lower costs. Store brands usually cost less to develop, package, advertise and distribute. Most of the savings are passed on to consumers in lower prices," reports Stephen Brobeck, executive director of the federation.

While most major market chains have long offered their own brands in competition with national products, many now also sell a second level of store brand products — what Brobeck calls "neo-generics."

The main store brands are generally comparable in quality with national products, but are less costly because of savings in advertising, product development, marketing and packaging.

Neo-generics usually bear more colorful labels and product names than their generic predecssors, but like them cost much less than other products. They typically are lower in quality, although the difference is frequently just cosmetic.

Brobeck stresses that both store brands and neo-generics are generally safe and nutritious, being required to pass the same health inspections as any other product, although they may differ in color or texture or other factors.

Here is a list of some major supermarket chains and the names they use on their store and neo-generic products, as compiled by the Consumer Federation of America:

- Safeway: Store brands, Town House, Lucerne, S Brands, Mrs. Wright's, Empress; neo-generic, Scotch Buy.
- Kroger: Store brands, Kroger, Bright, Home Pride, Country Oven, Pet Pride, Cat's Choice, Big K; neo-generic, Cost Cutter.
- Alpha Beta: Store brand, Alpha Beta; neo-generic, Econo Buy.
- Jewel: Store brand, Jewel.
- King Soopers: Store brands, Topco, Food Club; neo-generic, Valu Time.
- Winn-Dixie: Store brands, Thrifty Maid, Arrow, Astor, Deep South, Crackin' Good; neo-generic, Price Breaker.
- A&P: Store brands, A&P, Ann Page, Jane Parker, Our Own Tea, Eight O'Clock Coffee; neo-generic, P&Q.
- Albertson's: Store brands, Janet Lee, Albertson's, Master's Treat; neo-generic, Albertson's Generic.

Red meats healthy

By MARIAN FARR

Red meats are not high-calorie foods. For example, a three-ounce serving of lean roast beef contains 169 calories, while a similar serving of baked chicken, without skin, contains 174 calories. If you are on a low-calorie diet, though, you'll want to make sure you prepare meat dishes so they contain as few calories as possible.

Here are some suggestions from the American Meat board and the Beef Industry Council for cutting calories in red meat dishes:

■ Select lean beef cuts, such as top round, top loin strip steak, top sirloin, eye of the round, flank, tip and extra lean ground beef.

■ Choose lean pork cuts, including tenderloin, fresh ham and loin chops.

■ Select lean ham and reduced fat luncheon and processed meats.

■ Trim the outside fat from meats before cooking and trim any separable fat before eating.

■ Bake, broil or roast meats on a rack so they remain above the drippings.

■ Remove the drippings after browning meats for stews, pot roast or ground meat.

■ Panbroil rather than panfry. In panbroiling, no fat is added and drippings are removed as they accumulate.

■ Remove the layer of fat from stews or soups after cooling.

Red meats provide a lot of nutrients for their calories, especially when you prepare them using these methods. When every calorie counts, you may want to think of what's in your hamburger as well as what kind of condiments you put on it.

Not all ground beef is created equal — different categories of leaness will determine the calories in the meat. The label on the meat package states the percent of leanness for the beef inside.

By law, "ground beef" must be at least 70 percent lean. Meat in this 70 percent category usually comes from portions of the chuck, shank, brisket, plate or flank.

At 70 percent, a three-ounce cooked serving will contain about 251 calories. The beef used in fast-food restaurant hamburgers generally fits into this 70 percent lean category. "Lean ground beef" is at least 80 percent lean. It's commonly called "ground chuck" because much of it comes from that cut. A three-ounce cooked serving of lean ground beef contains about 232 calories.

"Extra lean ground beef" must be at least 90 percent lean. It comes mostly from the round and other lean cuts and contains about 225 calories per three-ounce cooked serving.

You can also hold the calories down on all types of ground beef by broiling instead of frying patties, and making sure crumbled meat is well-drained before it's added to casseroles or other dishes.

Stolen automobiles major concern

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Every 29 seconds an automobile is stolen in the United States, according to National Car Rental, which adds that only about 50 percent of these are ever recovered.

Stolen vehicles are often taken by thieves directly to illegal operations called "chop shops," where they are stripped and reduced to untraceable parts. The parts are then sold individually for sums considerably greater than could be gotten for a whole and unaltered stolen vehicle.

National, which has a fleet of about 110,000 cars, says it has now begun marking its cars in many cities with vehicle identification numbers, both to prevent their theft and to facilitate their recovery.

Midland Reporter-Telegram

"After the other new restaurants started up, we didn't really know if we would survive."

In June of 1981 amidst the West Texas oil boom, The Wall Street Bar & Grill opened to an overflow crowd for lunch that to date has not decreased. But there has always been a challenge to this small, quaint Midland restaurant to attract an evening dining crowd to its downtown location, especially on weekend nights.

Gradually, the dinner business began to grow until the boom ended. Then it decreased rapidly.

Wall Street co-owners Mike McMahon and Paul Downs, analyzed their situation and recommitted themselves to their original business philosophy: serve excellent food; have a good variety; provide fast and friendly service; price the menu items reasonably and work hard everyday to do things right.

This philosophy served them well. Now, their business at lunch and dinner is better than ever. Even better than it was in boom times.

"We're very thankful that people in Midland and Odessa have responded so well to our efforts. It makes all of us feel extremely good everyday".

Mike McMahon Paul Downs
Co-Owners, Wall Street Bar & Grill

Faced with a tough situation, these two young men called upon their solid restaurant training and their determination to adhere to their original business philosophy no matter how many hours a day it required to weather the down times and come out on top.

Congratulations gentlemen.

Warnings issued for illegitimate door-to-door magazines sales

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

Door-to-door salespersons can provide a helpful service to some consumers, when the product or service they sell is legitimate.

But sometimes, the door-to-door technique is used by salesmen who are so overzealous they nudge customers into signing up for something they don't need, or don't want, or persuade them that they're getting a bargain which really isn't available. The BBB has received many complaints, particularly in the area of magazine sales.

These include allegations that the salespersons misrepresented the reason for their call.

Instead of announcing that they were there for the purpose of selling magazines, they tried to invoke sympathy of interest, often using some of the following pitches:

1. "I am taking a survey of reading habits."

2. "I am working for points, in a scholarship contest."

3. "I need your note to prove to my employer my value as a salesman."

4. "I am doing special work in this school district."

5. "I am offering a free magazine. All you have to pay for is the costs of handling and postage."

6. "Today, we can offer a free subscription to your favorite magazine, if you agree to buy these other four."

It is easy to see that all of these phrases down to the same basic message. The caller has something to sell. Bona fide market surveyors are not in the business of making retail sales. And, certainly, a school district would not authorize any firm to sell a product under the guise of conducting district research.

If you're not interested in a magazine subscription, it would be best, of course, not to admit the person into your home. If you are interested in buying a subscription, ask to see his credentials and write down his name, the name of his company, his address and the company's address.

Don't be talked into signing any contract on the spot. Think it over.

Don't let yourself be fooled by a claim that a subscription will cost you "Only pennies a day." Eight pennies a day would add up to $29.20 a year.

Examine a claim you could get a magazine "free, just for the cost of handling and postage." Compare the quoted cost of handling and postage to a regular subscription. In fact, it probably would be worthwhile to compare the salesman's quoted cost of subscriptions to the introductory subscriptions offered by the magazines themselves.

Some of the complaints we receive have been from consumers who were told that the contract was "cancelable," but later saw that they had signed a contract labeled "Noncancelable," or that they had been led to believe they had paid the full cost, but later were billed for "the other half."

Also, some consumers have charged that their rights to cancellation of the contract within three days after the home solicitation had been misrepresented to them.

One of the fraudulent practices which seems to irk consumers the most is that they are told they must take an "alternative selection," if the magazine they picked is not available. Be certain you can cancel if you can't get the publication you want — especially at this time, when so many magazines have folded.

It is important, especially when thinking of holiday giving, to check for an assurance that the person for whom you are buying the magazine really will receive it.

If you have any questions, or complaints, do not hesitate to ask your local Better Business Bureau at 563-1880 or 1-800-592-4433.

DEAR ABBY

Couple plans to adopt baby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are about to adopt a baby in the near future. When we tell friends and family this, the response is invariably the same: "Oh, that is wonderful! But I am sure you will have your own baby right after you receive the adopted one." This comment is absolutely devastating to prospective adoptive parents.

We understand that people mean well and are trying to say something supportive, but there are two reasons why this particular statement should never be made:

1. The subtle implication is that adopted babies are not as good as "your own," meaning one you bore yourself. My wife and I have many fears and apprehensions about adoption, the raising of an adopted child, and how that child will be viewed by others. This insensitive comment brings all of our fears to the surface.

2. Second, and even more important, friends and family often do not consider that the mother in question may not ever be able to bear a child of her own. My wife has been through many miscarriages, a tubal pregnancy, multiple surgeries, and she may never be able to bear our own child. We have many friends with similar tragic infertility problems and where the woman has no tubes, ovaries or uterus. Imagine the effect of this comment on them!

Please tell your readers that adoptive parents need to be reassured that their child is just as valued as the one they had hoped to bear themselves. Also, please avoid thoughtless and insensitive comments about "having your own" or "getting pregnant soon." They are brutal. I am a surgeon at a prominent medical school, but sign me ... EXPECTANT FATHER

DEAR ABBY: I dread going into public places any more because almost everywhere I go, video cameras are trained on me. I walked into a store the other day and was immediately confronted with myself on TV, and a large message that said, "SMILE, YOU'RE ON VIDEO CAMERA. SHOPLIFTERS WILL BE PROSECUTED WITH VIDEOTAPED EVIDENCE."

Abby, I will never set foot in that store again!

Am I abnormal for feeling uncomfortable for having every move I make recorded and shown on a TV screen? Do other people feel as I do, and what do you think of this idea? — MRS. L.M.S., MECHANICSVILLE, MD.

DEAR MRS. S.: I think it's a shame this method of discouraging shoplifting is used, but look at it this way: Although it is an invasion of privacy, stores that use this method are able to offer their merchandise at a lower cost because they will have fewer shoplifters. And shoplifters cost you and me money!

DEAR ABBY: I have a small but important problem. Our school's big dance is coming up. It's the only dance of the year so it's a big deal. I like to carry a purse with me in case I need money to call someone, or if I need to reapply eye makeup. What do I do with my purse when I dance? Give it to my friend? Put it down and risk losing it? Should I shove the stuff in my pocket and forget the purse? Or dance with the purse on my shoulder? — R. IN LEVERETT, MASS.

DEAR R.: Carry the absolute minimum, and shove it in your pocket.

DEAR ABBY: Please leave King Henry VIII at rest. The English learned their "strange eating habits" centuries before America was even born. So who is "wrong"?

The American tourists who thought the English need eating lessons should visit China and "teach" the Chinese to use a knife and fork, and throw away those funny little sticks they've been eating with for 5,000 years! — PROUD CANADIAN

McLemore leads Angels to win

From Staff and Wire Reports

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Angels rebounded from Tuesday's Texas League opening-night loss with a 6-3 victory over the San Antonio Dodgers Wednesday.

Mark McLemore, the game's only player with two hits, opened the Angel attack in the first inning with a single and stolen base, his first of three for the game.

Raul Tovar followed with an RBI single and the Angels were on their way. One more run would score in the inning.

Midland added three more in the third when James 'Sap' Randall lofted his first home run of the season, a three RBI shot over the right field scoreboard.

After giving up three runs to the Dodgers in the third, the two teams battled the rest of the way with the only remaining run coming in the top of the ninth for Midland.

Sherman Corbett went 6⅔ innings to pick up the victory for Midland while Dan Mayberry suffered the loss. Both teams are 1-1 on the young season.

In other league action, El Paso edged Beaumont 2-1, Tulsa defeated Shreveport 7-5 and Arkansas beat Jackson 6-5 in 10 innings.

Alan Cartwright had a double down the left field line in the fifth inning for the Diablos' first run. He advanced to third base on an infield out, then scored on a sacrifice fly to center. El Paso had an unearned run in the sixth inning.

Texas League

Winning pitcher Pete Kendrick worked the first seven innings, giving up seven hits. Derek Diaz came in to post a save and gave up one hit the rest of the game.

The Golden Gators' Joe Bitker claimed the loss, striking out eight on the night.

Tulsa picked up two runs in the second inning on a walk to designated hitter Jeff Mace, who scored on a double by leftfielder Greg Bailey. Bailey scored on a single by second baseman Jose Mota.

In the sixth, Bailey walked, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a single to center by shortstop Jerry Browne.

The Drillers added a run in the third, two in the fifth and another in the eighth inning.

Shreveport scored two runs in the sixth, one in the eighth and two in the ninth.

Steve Wilson was credited with the win. Brian Ohnoutka was the loser for Shreveport.

Giants open '86 season with two wins

Associated Press

Nobody's claiming any championships or predicting an unbeaten year. On the other hand, things are noticeably different around the San Francisco Giants.

For one, the record is a perfect 2-0. Certainly, that's nothing spectacular. But it sure beats a 100-loss pace, which the Giants went on early last season, the first year a Giants' team ever lost 100 games.

Rookie Will Clark and Bob Melvin each had run-scoring doubles and Jeff Leonard singled twice and scored two runs Wednesday night to lead the Giants to a 4-1 victory over the Houston Astros. The Giants, who had won only three of 15 previous games in the Astrodome, have taken the first two contests of the season there.

NL

"I don't think the attitude is different, I know it," said Leonard. "Attitude and confidence, that's what was built in spring training and during the winter. They put it in our heads to have fun and to play fundamental baseball.

"We believe we can win. We had that pounded into our heads."

Manager Roger Craig, who finished the 1985 season at the team's helm, has insisted the Giants play fundamentally sound and aggressive ball.

"We are the same players but it's a different mental attitude," Leonard noted. "People say you have the same players as last year so how can you be any better?

"But it's the power of the mind. That's the difference. We're not stronger or faster."

Giants 4, Astros 1

Scott Garrelts, who made the All-Star Game as a reliever last season, blanked the Astros on two hits through five innings. He lost the shutout in the sixth on a double by Dickie Thon and a run-scoring single by Craig Reynolds.

Clark doubled to right field in the third inning, scoring Dan Gladden. Leonard singled to open the fourth inning, stole second and scored on a double by Melvin. Leonard led off the sixth with an infield single, advanced to third on singles by Chris Brown and Melvin and came home on a double play.

Garrelts had had to make a major adjustment from relieving to starting.

"I worked on three or four windups during the spring," Garrelts said. "I haven't felt real comfortable but I went out there tonight and it all fell into place. I was worried before the game throwing out of the windup, but after the first couple of innings I felt comfortable."

Dodgers 1, Padres 0

Welch allowed three singles in the series finale. All three games were low-scoring, one-run affairs — Los Angeles won the opener 2-1 behind Fernando Valenzuela's complete game; Dave Dravecky's three-hitter beat the Dodgers in Game 2, then Welch edged Andy Hawkins and the Padres.

Bill Madlock, Greg Brock and Mike Marshall singled in the fourth for the only run.

Oilers survive upsets to beat Canucks, 7-3

Associated Press

While the Edmonton Oilers got off on the right foot in defense of their Stanley Cup title, three other division champions got the boot on opening night of the National Hockey League playoffs.

In a night of upsets Wednesday, the New York Rangers stunned the Philadelphia Flyers 6-2 in the Patrick Division, the Hartford Whalers turned back the Quebec Nordiques 3-2 in overtime in the Adams and the Toronto Maple Leafs defeated the Chicago Blackhawks 5-3 in the Norris.

A fourth team also won on the road when the St. Louis Blues defeated the Minnesota North Stars 2-1 in the Norris Division.

"We put in 10 months of good work, but tonight certainly was not typical," Philadelphia Coach Mike Keenan said after perhaps the most unexpected of the eight playoff results Wednesday night. "It was probably the worst game we've played since I started coaching here. We just were not involved in the hockey game."

The Patrick Division champion Flyers, who had the second-best record in the NHL next to the Oilers during the regular season, had beaten the Rangers 18 of 19 previous games, including nine straight at home.

Meanwhile, it was business as usual for the Oilers, who started drilling for their third straight Stanley Cup championship with a 7-3 decision over Vancouver.

In other first-round action, the Washington Capitals trimmed the New York Islanders 3-1 in the Patrick Division, the Montreal Canadiens beat the Boston Bruins 3-1 in the Adams and the Calgary Flames beat the Winnipeg Jets 5-1 in the Smythe.

Patrick Division
Rangers 6, Flyers 2

Rookie Mike Ridley and Bob Brooke each scored twice and handed out an assist as the Rangers upset the highly favored Flyers, the NHL's top defensive team.

The Rangers got a great effort from goaltender John Vanbiesbrouck, who faced 33 shots. The Flyers, meanwhile, got a poor effort from their specialty teams, converting only one of eight power plays and allowing two short-handed goals.

"The specialty teams didn't kill us," Keenan said. "We weren't prepared for the hockey game. The Rangers obviously were better prepared. The Rangers played much better than we did."

Rangers Coach Ted Sator liked the "composure" of his team.

"We played extremely well tonight," Sator said. "We kept our composure. One of the big things was we took advantage of our chances. We know from playing them all year, they go to the net as well as any team in the league, and we wanted to get back and not let them get organized and go to the net."

The last time the Rangers won at Philadelphia was March 14, 1984.

Evans gives return on full-time status

Associated Press

After leading the American League last year with 40 home runs, Darrell Evans thinks he should play every day. So far, he has — but the season is only two games old.

"See, to me, I've played two games that have counted. This is my environment. Nobody can take that away from me when I'm out there on that field," said Evans, who is hitting .624 after Wednesday's 4-for-5 performance, which included two homers, four RBIs and a game-tying single in the bottom of the 10th inning as the Detroit Tigers edged the Boston Red Sox 6-5.

Evans, who turns 39 next month, is at odds with Manager Sparky Anderson, who insists that "everybody's going to play. I think it makes everybody closer. But the important thing is that they all have to be able to play. These guys all can play."

Milwaukee kept pace with Detroit in the AL East at 2-0 by nipping the Chicago White Sox 4-3. Minnesota is the only unbeaten team in the AL West after a 5-4 victory over Oakland.

American League

Boston took a 5-4 lead in the top of the 10th off Willie Hernandez on a two-out walk to Glenn Hoffman and singles by Dwight Evans and Wade Boggs. Boggs was 4-for-6, including a two-run homer.

But Kirk Gibson, who is hitting .778, started the Tigers' 10th with a single and went to second when loser Bob Stanley walked Lance Parrish. Steve Crawford took over and was greeted with a single by Darrell Evans that tie the score. After Alan Trammell sacrificed, Mike Laga was given an intentional walk to load the bases and Chet Lemon forced Parrish at the plate but pinch-hitter Dave Bergman singled to score Evans with the winning run.

Bergman, a veteran utility man, is fighting for survival. Within a month, the Tigers will activate rookie Scotti Madison and bring up outfielder Pat Sheridan from the minors. Bergman figures to be cut. Considering the circumstances, he was asked if his game-winning hit was a bittersweet moment.

"Bittersweet is not a word I keep in my vocabulary," he said. "I never want to succeed at somebody else's expense. I always try to do the best I can because I want to help this team. I thought it showed a real vote of confidence for Sparky to send me up there in that situation."

Brewers 4, White Sox 3

Robin Yount had four singles, scored once and drove in a run while Tim Leary held Chicago to five hits and two runs in seven innings as the Brewers won their second straight. Chicago starter Richard Dotson, sidelined most of last season, was tagged for five hits and four runs in six innings.

Milwaukee took a 3-0 lead in the fourth in on Rob Deer's bases-loaded grounder and Paul Householder's two-run double. The Brewers scored the decisive run in the seventh on singles by Jim Gantner, Mike Felder and Yount. Chicago's rookie John Cangelosi hit his first major-league homer.

Twins 5, A's 4

Kent Hrbek broke a 3-3 tie with a run-scoring eighth-inning double off Oakland relief ace Jay Howell. Hrbek, who also had the game-winning RBI in the season opener, doubled to score Kirby Puckett, who singled and was sacrificed to second. Hrbek scored on a single by Roy Smalley. Mike Smithson went the distance for Minnesota, allowing eight hits and retiring 16 consecutive batters at one stretch.

Royals 7, Yankees 4

George Brett hit two solo home runs and Steve Farr pitched 4 2-3 innings of near-perfect relief. Brett's first homer led off the third inning against Ed Whitson, snapped a 2-2 tie and ignited a three-run uprising. It was the 194th home run of Brett's career, breaking the club record he shared with Amos Otis. Brett also homered off Bob Shirley in the seventh.

Masters is time to set aside problems

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — European champions Seve Ballesteros and Bernhard Langer want to set aside their other problems for a few days and concentrate on only one thing — the Masters golf tournament.

Ballesteros is under a one-year suspension for making too few appearances on the Professional Golfers Association Tour last year. Langer has to curtail his American schedule because of U.S. tax laws limiting the number of days a foreigner can work in this country without being required to pay taxes on worldwide earnings.

Both have won this major championship and both are confident they can win it again.

The 50th Masters opened today on the 6,905-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course with an international field of 88.

"I know this course as good as my house," said Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard who won this event in 1980 and 1983.

Masters

"I feel very good," he said. "I'm very strong physically and mentally. I'm ready to win."

Langer, the defending champion, had complained of fatigue after appearing in 11 of the first 13 tournaments on this year's tour, but he took off last week.

"I feel a lot better now," he said. "My confidence level is pretty high. I really feel I'm here this year to win the tournament. That's my goal. I don't see any reason why I shouldn't be up there on Sunday."

If the West German is able to repeat as the champion, he would be only the second player in Masters history to do it. Jack Nicklaus includes among his record five Masters crowns two in succession in 1965 and 1966.

"I think it is just a coincidence," Langer said of the failure of others to repeat.

Ballesteros drew his suspension for playing in only nine tournaments. PGA Tour rules require participation in 15 tournaments to retain membership.

"They have too many rules," Ballesteros said. "It's more difficult to follow the PGA rules than to win the Masters."

Asked if he had any U.S. tax problems, Ballesteros quipped:

"I have no problems with taxes. I haven't made any money."

The biggest question mark concerning Ballesteros in the Masters is how he will play after not being in competition for a while. He said he expects no problem with that.

Ballesteros said he would like to be able to play eight tournaments in America because he also must play 15 events on the European tour. If he had to play 15 in the United States as well, he said, he would be forced to play too much in a season.

Langer said it was easy for a foreigner to play 15 tournaments in the 182-day limit under the old tax law, but it is virtually impossible to do it in 122 days, the new limit under the revised tax code.

Foreigner golfers have always had to pay U.S. taxes on money earned in this country.

Langer said he believed the PGA Tour would revise its rule requiring 15 tournaments so that foreign players could retain their PGA membership.

He expects to play 14 tournaments this year within the 122-day limit.

Asked his reaction should he, like Ballesteros, lose PGA Tour membership for not playing 15 tournaments, Langer said, "I would feel that I'd been kind of cheated."

Warnings issued for illegitimate door-to-door magazines sales

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

Door-to-door salespersons can provide a helpful service to some consumers, when the product or service they sell is legitimate.

But sometimes, the door-to-door technique is used by salesmen who are so overzealous they nudge customers into signing up for something they don't need, or don't want, or persuade them that they're getting a bargain which really isn't available. The BBB has received many complaints, particularly in the area of magazine sales.

These include allegations that the salespersons misrepresented the reason for their call.

Instead of announcing that they were there for the purpose of selling magazines, they tried to invoke sympathy of interest, often using some of the following pitches:

1. "I am taking a survey of reading habits."

2. "I am working for points, in a scholarship contest."

3. "I need your note to prove to my employer my value as a salesman."

4. "I am doing special work in this school district."

5. "I am offering a free magazine. All you have to pay for is the costs of handling and postage."

6. "Today, we can offer a free subscription to your favorite magazine, if you agree to buy these other four."

It is easy to see that all of these phrases down to the same basic message. The caller has something to sell. Bona fide market surveyors are not in the business of making retail sales. And, certainly, a school district would not authorize any firm to sell a product under the guise of conducting district research.

If you're not interested in a magazine subscription, it would be best, of course, not to admit the person into your home. If you are interested in buying a subscription, ask to see his credentials and write down his name, the name of his company, his address and the company's address.

Don't be talked into signing any contract on the spot. Think it over.

Don't let yourself be fooled by a claim that a subscription will cost you "Only pennies a day." Eight pennies a day would add up to $29.20 a year.

Examine a claim you could get a magazine "free, just for the cost of handling and postage." Compare the quoted cost of handling and postage to a regular subscription. In fact, it probably would be worthwhile to compare the salesman's quoted cost of subscriptions to the introductory subscriptions offered by the magazines themselves.

Some of the complaints we receive have been from consumers who were told that the contract was "cancelable," but later saw that they had signed a contract labeled "Noncancelable," or that they had been led to believe they had paid the full cost, but later were billed for "the other half."

Also, some consumers have charged that their rights to cancellation of the contract within three days after the home solicitation had been misrepresented to them.

One of the fraudulent practices which seems to irk consumers the most is that they are told they must take an "alternative selection," if the magazine they picked is not available. Be certain you can cancel if you can't get the publication you want — especially at this time, when so many magazines have folded.

It is important, especially when thinking of holiday giving, to check for an assurance that the person for whom you are buying the magazine really will receive it.

If you have any questions, or complaints, do not hesitate to ask your local Better Business Bureau at 563-1880 or 1-800-592-4433.

DEAR ABBY

Couple plans to adopt baby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are about to adopt a baby in the near future. When we tell friends and family this, the response is invariably the same: "Oh, that is wonderful! But I am sure you will have your own baby right after you receive the adopted one." This comment is absolutely devastating to prospective adoptive parents.

We understand that people mean well and are trying to say something supportive, but there are two reasons why this particular statement should never be made:

1. The subtle implication is that adopted babies are not as good as "your own," meaning one you bore yourself. My wife and I have many fears and apprehensions about adoption, the raising of an adopted child, and how that child will be viewed by others. This insensitive comment brings all of our fears to the surface.

2. Second, and even more important, friends and family often do not consider that the mother in question may not ever be able to bear a child of her own. My wife has been through many miscarriages, a tubal pregnancy, multiple surgeries, and she may never be able to bear our own child. We have many friends with similar tragic infertility problems and where the woman has no tubes, ovaries or uterus. Imagine the effect of this comment on them!

Please tell your readers that adoptive parents need to be reassured that their child is just as valued as the one they had hoped to bear themselves. Also, please avoid thoughtless and insensitive comments about "having your own" or "getting pregnant soon." They are brutal. I am a surgeon at a prominent medical school, but sign me ... EXPECTANT FATHER

DEAR ABBY: I dread going into public places any more because almost everywhere I go, video cameras are trained on me. I walked into a store the other day and was immediately confronted with myself on TV, and a large message that said, "SMILE, YOU'RE ON VIDEO CAMERA. SHOPLIFTERS WILL BE PROSECUTED WITH VIDEOTAPED EVIDENCE."

Abby, I will never set foot in that store again!

Am I abnormal for feeling uncomfortable for having every move I make recorded and shown on a TV screen? Do other people feel as I do, and what do you think of this idea? — MRS. L.M.S., MECHANICSVILLE, MD.

DEAR MRS. S.: I think it's a shame this method of discouraging shoplifting is used, but look at it this way: Although it is an invasion of privacy, stores that use this method are able to offer their merchandise at a lower cost because they will have fewer shoplifters. And shoplifters cost you and me money!

DEAR ABBY: I have a small but important problem. Our school's big dance is coming up. It's the only dance of the year so it's a big deal. I like to carry a purse with me in case I need money to call someone, or if I need to reapply eye makeup. What do I do with my purse when I dance? Give it to my friend? Put it down and risk losing it? Should I shove the stuff in my pocket and forget the purse? Or dance with the purse on my shoulder? — R. IN LEVERETT, MASS.

DEAR R.: Carry the absolute minimum, and shove it in your pocket.

DEAR ABBY: Please leave King Henry VIII at rest. The English learned their "strange eating habits" centuries before America was even born. So who is "wrong"?

The American tourists who thought the English need eating lessons should visit China and "teach" the Chinese to use a knife and fork, and throw away those funny little sticks they've been eating with for 5,000 years! — PROUD CANADIAN

From Staff and Wire Reports

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Angels rebounded from Tuesday's Texas League opening-night loss with a 6-3 victory over the San Antonio Dodgers Wednesday.

Mark McLemore, the game's only player with two hits, opened the Angel attack in the first inning with a single and stolen base, his first of three for the game.

Raul Tovar followed with an RBI single and the Angels were on their way. One more run would score in the inning.

Midland added three more in the third when James 'Sap' Randall lofted his first home run of the season, a three RBI shot over the right field scoreboard.

After giving up three runs to the Dodgers in the third, the two teams battled the rest of the way with the only remaining run coming in the top of the ninth for Midland.

Sherman Corbett went 6⅔ innings to pick up the victory for Midland while Dan Mayberry suffered the loss. Both teams are 1-1 on the young season.

In other league action, El Paso edged Beaumont 2-1, Tulsa defeated Shreveport 7-5 and Arkansas beat Jackson 6-5 in 10 innings.

Alan Cartwright had a double down the left field line in the fifth inning for the Diablos' first-run. He advanced to third base on an infield out, then scored on a sacrifice fly to center. El Paso had an unearned run in the sixth inning.

Winning pitcher Pete Kendrick worked the first seven innings, giving up seven hits. Derek Diaz came in to post a save and gave up one hit the rest of the game.

The Golden Gators' Joe Bitker claimed the loss, striking out eight on the night.

Tulsa picked up two runs in the second inning on a walk to designated hitter Jeff Mace, who scored on a double by leftfielder Greg Bailey. Bailey scored on a single by second baseman Jose Mota.

In the sixth, Bailey walked, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a single to center by shortstop Jerry Browne.

The Drillers added a run in the third, two in the fifth and another in the eighth inning.

Shreveport scored two runs in the sixth, one in the eighth and two in the ninth.

Steve Wilson was credited with the win. Brian Ohnoutka was the loser for Shreveport.

Giants open '86 season with two wins

Associated Press

Nobody's claiming any championships or predicting an unbeaten year. On the other hand, things are noticeably different around the San Francisco Giants.

For one, the record is a perfect 2-0. Certainly, that's nothing spectacular. But it sure beats a 100-loss pace, which the Giants went on early last season, the first year a Giants' team ever lost 100 games.

Rookie Will Clark and Bob Melvin each had run-scoring doubles and Jeff Leonard singled twice and scored two runs Wednesday night to lead the Giants to a 4-1 victory over the Houston Astros. The Giants, who had won only three of 15 previous games in the Astrodome, have taken the first two contests of the season there.

NL

"I don't think the attitude is different, I know it," said Leonard. "Attitude and confidence, that's what was built in spring training and during the winter. They put it in our heads to have fun and to play fundamental baseball.

"We believe we can win. We had that pounded into our heads."

Manager Roger Craig, who finished the 1985 season at the team's helm, has insisted the Giants play fundamentally sound and aggressive ball.

"We are the same players but it's a different mental attitude," Leonard noted. "People say you have the same players as last year so how can you be any better?

"But it's the power of the mind. That's the difference. We're not stronger or faster."

Giants 4, Astros 1

Scott Garrelts, who made the All-Star Game as a reliever last season, blanked the Astros on two hits through five innings. He lost the shutout in the sixth on a double by Dickie Thon and a run-scoring single by Craig Reynolds.

Clark doubled to right field in the third inning, scoring Dan Gladden. Leonard singled to open the fourth inning, stole second and scored on a double by Melvin. Leonard led off the sixth with an infield single, advanced to third on singles by Chris Brown and Melvin and came home on a double play.

Garrelts had had to make a major adjustment from relieving to starting.

"I worked on three or four windups during the spring," Garrelts said. "I haven't felt real comfortable but I went out there tonight and it all fell into place. I was worried before the game throwing out of the windup, but after the first couple of innings I felt comfortable."

Dodgers 1, Padres 0

Welch allowed three singles in the series finale. All three games were low-scoring, one-run affairs — Los Angeles won the opener 2-1 behind Fernando Valenzuela's complete game; Dave Dravecky's three-hitter beat the Dodgers in Game 2, then Welch edged Andy Hawkins and the Padres.

Bill Madlock, Greg Brock and Mike Marshall singled in the fourth for the only run.

Oilers survive upsets to beat Canucks, 7-3

Associated Press

While the Edmonton Oilers got off on the right foot in defense of their Stanley Cup title, three other division champions got the boot on opening night of the National Hockey League playoffs.

In a night of upsets Wednesday, the New York Rangers stunned the Philadelphia Flyers 6-2 in the Patrick Division, the Hartford Whalers turned back the Quebec Nordiques 3-2 in overtime in the Adams and the Toronto Maple Leafs defeated the Chicago Blackhawks 5-3 in the Norris.

A fourth team also won on the road when the St. Louis Blues defeated the Minnesota North Stars 2-1 in the Norris Division.

"We put in 10 months of good work, but tonight certainly was not typical," Philadelphia Coach Mike Keenan said after perhaps the most unexpected of the eight playoff results Wednesday night. "It was probably the worst game we've played since I started coaching here. We just were not involved in the hockey game."

The Patrick Division champion Flyers, who had the second-best record in the NHL next to the Oilers during the regular season, had beaten the Rangers 18 of 19 previous games, including nine straight at home.

Meanwhile, it was business as usual for the Oilers, who started drilling for their third straight Stanley Cup championship with a 7-3 decision over Vancouver.

In other first-round action, the Washington Capitals trimmed the New York Islanders 3-1 in the Patrick Division, the Montreal Canadiens beat the Boston Bruins 3-1 in the Adams and the Calgary Flames beat the Winnipeg Jets 5-1 in the Smythe.

Patrick Division
Rangers 6, Flyers 2

Rookie Mike Ridley and Bob Brooke each scored twice and handed out an assist as the Rangers upset the highly favored Flyers, the NHL's top defensive team.

The Rangers got a great effort from goaltender John Vanbiesbrouck, who faced 33 shots. The Flyers, meanwhile, got a poor effort from their specialty teams, converting only one of eight power plays and allowing two short-handed goals.

"The specialty teams didn't kill us," Keenan said. "We weren't prepared for the hockey game. The Rangers obviously were better prepared. The Rangers played much better than we did."

Rangers Coach Ted Sator liked the "composure" of his team.

"We played extremely well tonight," Sator said. "We kept our composure. One of the big things was we took advantage of our chances. We know from playing them all year, they go to the net as well as any team in the league, and we wanted to get back and not let them get organized and go to the net."

The last time the Rangers won at Philadelphia was March 14, 1984.

Evans gives return on full-time status

Associated Press

After leading the American League last year with 40 home runs, Darrell Evans thinks he should play every day. So far, he has — but the season is only two games old.

"See, to me, I've played two games that have counted. This is my environment. Nobody can take that away from me when I'm out there on that field," said Evans, who is hitting .624 after Wednesday's 4-for-5 performance, which included two homers, four RBIs and a game-tying single in the bottom of the 10th inning as the Detroit Tigers edged the Boston Red Sox 6-5.

Evans, who turns 39 next month, is at odds with Manager Sparky Anderson, who insists that "everybody's going to play. I think it makes everybody closer. But the important thing is that they all have to be able to play. These guys all can play."

Milwaukee kept pace with Detroit in the AL East at 2-0 by nipping the Chicago White Sox 4-3. Minnesota is the only unbeaten team in the AL West after a 5-4 victory over Oakland.

American League

Boston took a 5-4 lead in the top of the 10th off Willie Hernandez on a two-out walk to Glenn Hoffman and singles by Dwight Evans and Wade Boggs. Boggs was 4-for-6, including a two-run homer.

But Kirk Gibson, who is hitting .778, started the Tigers' 10th with a single and went to second when loser Bob Stanley walked Lance Parrish. Steve Crawford took over and was greeted with a single by Darrell Evans that tie the score. After Alan Trammell sacrificed, Mike Laga was given an intentional walk to load the bases and Chet Lemon forced Parrish at the plate but pinch-hitter Dave Bergman singled to score Evans with the winning run.

Bergman, a veteran utility man, is fighting for survival. Within a month, the Tigers will activate rookie Scotti Madison and bring up outfielder Pat Sheridan from the minors. Bergman figures to be cut. Considering the circumstances, he was asked if his game-winning hit was a bittersweet moment.

"Bittersweet is not a word I keep in my vocabulary," he said. "I never want to succeed at somebody else's expense. I always try to do the best I can because I want to help this team. I thought it showed a real vote of confidence for Sparky to send me up there in that situation."

Brewers 4, White Sox 3

Robin Yount had four singles, scored once and drove in a run while Tim Leary held Chicago to five hits and two runs in seven innings as the Brewers won their second straight. Chicago starter Richard Dotson, sidelined most of last season, was tagged for five hits and four runs in six innings.

Milwaukee took a 3-0 lead in the fourth in on Rob Deer's bases-loaded grounder and Paul Householder's two-run double. The Brewers scored the decisive run in the seventh on singles by Jim Gantner, Mike Felder and Yount. Chicago's rookie John Cangelosi hit his first major-league homer.

Twins 5, A's 4

Kent Hrbek broke a 3-3 tie with a run-scoring eighth-inning double off Oakland relief ace Jay Howell. Hrbek, who also had the game-winning RBI in the season opener, doubled to score Kirby Puckett, who singled and was sacrificed to second. Hrbek scored on a single by Roy Smalley. Mike Smithson went the distance for Minnesota, allowing eight hits and retiring 16 consecutive batters at one stretch.

Royals 7, Yankees 4

George Brett hit two solo home runs and Steve Farr pitched 4 2-3 innings of near-perfect relief. Brett's first homer led off the third inning against Ed Whitson, snapped a 2-2 tie and ignited a three-run uprising. It was the 194th home run of Brett's career, breaking the club record he shared with Amos Otis. Brett also homered off Bob Shirley in the seventh.

Masters is time to set aside problems

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — European champions Seve Ballesteros and Bernhard Langer want to set aside their other problems for a few days and concentrate on only one thing — the Masters golf tournament.

Ballesteros is under a one-year suspension for making too few appearances on the Professional Golfers Association Tour last year. Langer has to curtail his American schedule because of U.S. tax laws limiting the number of days a foreigner can work in this country without being required to pay taxes on worldwide earnings.

Both have won this major championship and both are confident they can win it again.

The 50th Masters opened today on the 6,905-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course with an international field of 88.

"I know this course as good as my house," said Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard who won this event in 1980 and 1983.

Masters

"I feel very good," he said. "I'm very strong physically and mentally. I'm ready to win."

Langer, the defending champion, had complained of fatigue after appearing in 11 of the first 13 tournaments on this year's tour, but he took off last week.

"I feel a lot better now," he said. "My confidence level is pretty high. I really feel I'm here this year to win the tournament. That's my goal. I don't see any reason why I shouldn't be up there on Sunday."

If the West German is able to repeat as the champion, he would be only the second player in Masters history to do it. Jack Nicklaus includes among his record five Masters crowns two in succession in 1965 and 1966.

"I think it is just a coincidence," Langer said of the failure of others to repeat.

Ballesteros drew his suspension for playing in only nine tournaments. PGA Tour rules require participation in 15 tournaments to retain membership.

"They have too many rules," Ballesteros said. "It's more difficult to follow the PGA rules than to win the Masters."

Asked if he had any U.S. tax problems, Ballesteros quipped:

"I have no problems with taxes. I haven't made any money."

The biggest question mark concerning Ballesteros in the Masters is how he will play after not being in competition for a while. He said he expects no problem with that.

Ballesteros said he would like to be able to play eight tournaments in America because he also must play 15 events on the European tour. If he had to play 15 in the United States as well, he said, he would be forced to play too much in a season.

Langer said it was easy for a foreigner to play 15 tournaments in the 182-day limit under the old tax law, but it is virtually impossible to do it in 122 days, the new limit under the revised tax code.

Foreigner golfers have always had to pay U.S. taxes on money earned in this country.

Langer said he believed the PGA Tour would revise its rule requiring 15 tournaments so that foreign players could retain their PGA membership.

He expects to play 14 tournaments this year within the 122-day limit.

Asked his reaction should he, like Ballesteros, lose PGA Tour membership for not playing 15 tournaments, Langer said, "I would feel that I'd been kind of cheated."

Giminski goes crazy as Nets rip Celtics, 108-98

Associated Press

According to the record book, Mike Gminski had a career night against the Boston Celtics. Boston Coach K.C. Jones begged to differ.

Gminski scored 41 points and grabbed 22 rebounds, career highs in both categories for the sixth-year center out of Duke, as New Jersey beat the Boston Celtics 108-98 in the NBA Wednesday night. The Nets thus joined the Philadelphia 76ers as the only clubs to hold more than one victory over the Celtics this season.

"As an athlete you go out there and sometimes feel you can't do anything wrong," Gminski said. "Things were flowing tonight. It's such a great feeling to have a game like this against a team like them."

The real "them" didn't show up, according to Jones.

"It's difficult to get up for a team like this," he said. "We're set for the rest of the season. We have the best record in the league. We didn't need it. The only reason we played it was because it was scheduled and we had to."

In other games Wednesday night, it was Sacramento 113, Utah 108; San Antonio 114, Phoenix 102; and the Los Angeles Clippers 132, Denver 127.

Gminski's outburst came a couple days after Nets Coach Dave Wohl had one of his own. He blasted his players in the local media for lacking the killer instinct and being underachievers.

"When players read things in the newspaper, it stings a little," Wohl said. "I think that's good. Sometimes players have to play a little angry."

It certainly worked for Gminski, who hit 15 of 23 shots from the floor and 11 of 12 free throws.

NBA Roundup

Spurs 114, Suns 102

Mike Mitchell scored 22 points and Artis Gilmore 20, including eight in the fourth quarter as the Spurs claimed the eighth and final playoff berth in the NBA's Western Conference.

The loss means Phoenix will miss the playoffs for the first time in nine seasons.

San Antonio, playoff-bound despite the worst record in its franchise history at 34-47, took the lead for good in the second quarter.

Steve Johnson, who had seven of his 19 points in the period, triggered a late 10-2 run for a 60-53 Spurs' halftime lead.

Mitchell's eight third-period points put San Antonio ahead 86-76.

Kings 113, Jazz 108

Otis Thorpe scored 10 points in the fourth quarter, including seven in a row in the final four minutes, as Sacramento spoiled a 45-point performance by Utah's Adrian Dantley.

Dantley pulled ahead of Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins in the NBA scoring race, building his average to 29.99 points per game. Wilkins is at 29.93. Each has two games to play.

Utah led 101-99 with four minutes remaining, but Thorpe scored seven straight points as the Kings outscored the Jazz 14-7 in the final four minutes.

Clippers 132, Nuggets 127

Marques Johnson scored 32 points for Los Angeles, but the Clippers still were eliminated from a possible playoff berth by San Antonio's victory at Phoenix.

The Clippers led 87-80 with six minutes left in the third quarter when a public-address announcement told them of their fate.

New Mexico signs two from El Paso Andress

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The New Mexico Lobos, who began the basketball recruiting campaign in search of a point guard, instead landed a forward with impressive credentials and a pair of swing players.

Coach Gary Colson confirmed Wednesday he had signed two players from El Paso Andress High School to national letters of intent.

The two, Robert Newton, 6-8, and Marvin McBurrows, 6-4, led Andress to a 27-6 record this past season. Andress reached the regionals of the Texas High School playoffs before losing to eventual 5-A champion Amarillo High School.

New Mexico also signed 6-foot-5 Farmington High School standout Rob Robbins. Robbins led the Scorpions to the Class AAAA state championship last month, and averaged 23.5 points and 10 rebounds a game this season.

Newton is rated by Colson as the type of player who could provide immediate help to the Lobos. Robbins and McBurrows are both expected to play either guard or small forward.

By signing Newton and McBurrows, Colson also indicated he had resolved the questions surrounding the future of sophomore center Shawn Brooks. The 6-foot-9 Brooks was suspended during the final month of the regular season and did not return to school following the recent spring break.

If Brooks does not return next season, New Mexico would have three scholarships to fill, and the signing of Newton and McBurrows filled that quota.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Friday, April 11, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Taking the easy way out will not produce the results you want. Meet any problems head-on and look for innovative solutions. Tension fades as a close relationship becomes more rewarding. You find greater satisfaction in your work. A larger home or dream vacation may soon be yours. Continue to limit spending. Long-term investments are favored. Just be careful not to put all your eggs in one basket.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Supreme Court Justice Charles Evans Hughes, designer Oleg Cassini, statesman Dean Acheson, Ethel Kennedy, former New York Governor Hugh Carey, actor Joel Grey, country singer Dorothy Shay.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Others are willing to let you have your chance. Make the most of an unusual opportunity. Clear your desk before leaving for the weekend. Romance should be something special. Show tenderness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get what you wanted. Past doubts disappear. Money is available from several different sources. A candlelit dinner gives new energy to a flagging romantic relationship. Avoid making too many demands.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Something happens that could put you in the driver's seat. You hold your future in your own two hands. Make the right choices and there is no limit to what you can accomplish.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It is time to break out of a rut and get going! Use your special talents to build a firm financial base. Make a special effort to save a friendship. Admit past mistakes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Settle down to work today and you will be able to enjoy a carefree weekend. Others will lend a hand, but you must lead the way. A financial problem proves easy to solve.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It might be better to postpone a trip until later this month. You are coming up with some excellent stuff at work, and those who count are impressed. Romance looks promising.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance enters a vulnerable period now. Keep your head screwed on tight and refuse to make impulsive promises. Writing projects can earn you extra money. Be discreet about a secret deal.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A blunt speech may put off some people, but it will work to your advantage in the long run. Challenge the thinking of those who you know are on the wrong track. Welcome a child's spontaneity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not allow someone to lull you into a false sense of security. Taking things for granted would be a mistake. Look for inexpensive entertainment this weekend. Get together with good friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A speech you give inspires others to greatness! Postpone presenting an idea to an authority figure until you have done more research. You need additional facts to support your views. Call friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Steer clear of get-rich-quick schemes. If you keep plugging away at a work project, you will emerge victorious. A business decision favors you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep a low profile at work and you may be able to slip away early for the weekend. Give mate time to think things over and he/she will come around.

The Chairman of the Board (no, not Sinatra; Dick Frey, chairman of the Goren Editorial Board) has joined the host of bridge teachers and writers who are recommending five-card major opening bids. The new edition of his "How to Win at Contract Bridge in 10 Easy Lessons" (Fawcett Books, 305 pp., paperback, $3.95) has been completely revised, in keeping with modern methods. One of its most attractive features is its price—not many books make learning bridge so affordable.

Frey held the East cards in a recent rubber bridge game. North-South were using the methods Frey now propounds, and reached the excellent contract of four hearts. However, one slip at trick one exposed declarer to defeat, but it was essential for Frey to take advantage of it immediately.

West led the unbid suit, and declarer saw no harm in playing low from dummy. Frey soon showed him the error of his ways. He won the jack of diamonds and, flying in the face of the rule against leading up to strength, shifted to a club. West's king forced the ace, and the defense was a tempo ahead. He could not be kept off lead, and when declarer conceded a spade trick after drawing trumps, a club return netted the defenders two tricks in the suit for a one-trick set.

Note that declarer can land his contract by rising with the ace of diamonds at trick one. After drawing only two rounds of trumps, South cashes his high spades and concedes a trick in that suit. The 13th spade sets up for a club discard, and declarer loses only one trick in each side-suit.

Ronald Reagan Jr. says sister Patti will eventually regret 'Home Front'

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan Jr. says his sister Patti Davis made a mistake when she wrote the novel "Home Front," which has been described as a thinly veiled autobiography.

"I think she'll regret it eventually," the president's son said Wednesday on the WNBC-TV program "Live at Five."

Reagan, a contributing editor at Playboy magazine, also discussed how he listened through a door while covering last fall's summit meeting between his father and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"I was in the next room and there it is going on behind a door, so I just kind of put my ear to the door," said Reagan, whose special credentials gave him access to areas from which other reporters were banned. "I hope this doesn't mess up the next summit meeting."

NEW YORK (AP) — Reports of Bobby Ewing's death may have been greatly exaggerated, but you'll have to stay tuned to CBS' "Dallas" to find out for sure.

The producers of the series on Wednesday confirmed speculation that actor Patrick Duffy, who portrayed Bobby, is returning. Duffy will appear in this season's finale and next season, but Lee Rich, president of Lorimar-Telepictures, said Duffy's role won't be announced.

Patrick Duffy

At the end of last season, Bobby was hit by a car and seemed to die in a hospital room when he was taken off a respirator. This season, he was presumed dead and viewers occasionally saw his gravestone at the Ewing Ranch.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cristina Ferrare and her movie executive husband, Anthony Thomopoulos, are expecting their first child in December, says Daily Variety columnist Army Archerd.

Ms. Ferrare, the former fashion model who is co-host of the "A.M. Los Angeles" television show, has two children from her previous marriage to former automaker John Z. De Lorean.

Arthur Gregory, manager for Ms. Ferrare, refused to directly confirm Wednesday's report but said: "She chatted with Army and you won't be off if you went with it."

Thomopoulos, president of United Artists' motion picture and television groups, married Ms. Ferrare, 35, last April.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singers Amy Grant and Sandi Patti compete tonight for top awards in gospel music, including artist of the year, at the 17th annual Dove Awards.

Both are among five finalists for artist of the year and top female vocalist when the awards are presented at the Tennessee Performing Arts Center. The ceremonies will be broadcast live on cable television by the Christian Broadcasting Network starting at 7 p.m. CST.

The other finalists for artist of the year are Larnelle Harris, Russ Taff and Steve Green. Miss Patti has won the honor two straight years and three of the last four.

PARIS (AP) — French astronaut Patrick Baudry, who flew aboard a U.S. space shuttle last year, will be aboard a French mini-submarine that will dive to the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean this summer to study the wreck of the Titanic, organizers say.

The Titanic, which sank off Newfoundland in April 1912 during its maiden voyage, was found Sept. 1 by a joint French-American expedition involving the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts and the state-run French Institute for Research and Exploitation of the Sea.

Baudry was chosen because of the similarities between space missions and mini-sub operations, such as working in a confined space, autonomous vehicles operating in a hostile atmosphere, and robotics, institute officials said Wednesday.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A factory worker who promised his wife he would pull through his cardiac problems in A-1 condition died of "total system failure of the vital organs" 2½ weeks after receiving an artificial heart, hospital officials say.

A recipient of the Penn State artificial heart, meanwhile, was in critical but stable condition today at a hospital in Hershey, showing signs of having an inflamed pancreas. The "potentially serious problem" also afflicted the only other recipient of that device, doctors said.

Gary Blake, a 43-year-old factory worker from East Liverpool, Ohio, died Wednesday at Presbyterian-University Hospital when doctors disconnected his Jarvik-7 heart.

Doctors discovered a lung infection March 27, five days after Blake received the device, which was intended to keep him alive until he could receive a human heart transplant.

"It was total system failure of the vital organs," said hospital spokesman Tom Chakurda. "The lung infection never responded to antibiotic therapy."

Once the infection was discovered, Blake was removed from a waiting list for a transplant and began to decline steadily, Chakurda said.

Blake, who was married with three children and one grandchild, had suffered for years from a degenerative heart disease and had three cardiac arrests just before the Jarvik-7 was implanted.

"He wanted to go for it because he didn't have any choice," Blake's 18-year-old son, Gary Jr., said the day after the implant. "When he was going in, he said, 'Praise the Lord.' He told my mom he'll come out in A-1 condition."

In Hershey, meanwhile, doctors were trying to determine if Robert Cresswell, a 48-year-old laid-off factory worker from Huntingdon who recieved the Penn State heart on March 17, had pancreatitis.

"We're not sure this is pancreatitis...but we're playing it very safe and very cautious," said Dr. John W. Burnside, a Milton S. Hershey Medical Center spokesman.

"It's at the moment not serious, but it's a potentially serious problem," Burnside said shortly after the problem was discovered Wednesday.

Chap tennis teams still perfect in conference play

From Staff Reports

Midland College tennis teams took conference matches from South Plains College at Levelland Monday, the women blasting to a 9-0 victory while the men struggled for a 5-4 win, leaving both Chaparral squads undefeated in conference action with only matches against Odessa College next Tuesday remaining before the conference and regional tournaments.

The Chaparral women go to Las Cruces this weekend for a tournament hosted by New Mexico State University. Most of the teams invited are from universities, including California-Santa Clara and several other powerful squads.

"This tournament should provide some tough matches for the team," said MC coach Joe Williams, whose women didn't lose a set Monday and haven't been pressed in most of their matches.

NHL

Capitals 3, Islanders 1

Bob Carpenter, considered a doubtful starter because of a knee injury, scored the winning goal at 11:46 of the second period as Washington defeated the Islanders.

Carpenter suffered a hyperextended right knee in Sunday's final regular season game. He skated for the first time Tuesday, and then kept alive his streak of never having missed a game in his five NHL seasons. Washington's Mike Gartner, who had an arthroscopic knee operation on March 28, also returned to action.

Adams Division
Canadiens 3, Bruins 1

Bobby Smith scored two of three second-period goals for Montreal, while rookie goaltender Patrick Roy provided several key saves to lead the Canadiens over the Bruins.

Smith scored his first goal from the faceoff circle that beat Bruins goaltender Pat Riggin at 6:53. His second goal came on a backhander at 11:28. Mike McPhee gave Montreal a three-goal cushion five minutes later.

Whalers 3, Nordiques 2

Sylvain Turgeon scored at 2:36 of overtime to boost the Whalers over the Nordiques. Turgeon's winning goal beat Quebec goaltender Clint Malarchuk.

"I was going to go to the corner, but I saw a Quebec player there so I headed in front of the net," said Turgeon, who scored 45 times this season. "Then I saw a little opening, so I just shot."

Brent Ashton had sent the game into overtime tied at 2-2 when he scored for Quebec at 12:47 of the third period. The Whalers had taken a 2-1 lead when former Nordique John Anderson notched a power-play goal midway through the third period.

Norris Division
Maple Leafs 5, Blackhawks 3

Steve Thomas scored two goals and Gary Leeman and Walt Poddubny scored key third-period goals to lead the Maple Leafs over the Blackhawks.

The Leafs made the playoffs with a 25-48-7 record for 57 points.

Leeman, who assisted on two other goals, broke a 2-2 tie at 6:09 of the third period and Poddubny scored at 9:28. Thomas, who scored the game's first goal, added a power-play goal at 17:47 before Tom Lysiak added a consolation Chicago goal at 18:29.

Blues 2, North Stars 1

Doug Gilmour's short-handed breakaway goal with 12:54 left boosted the Blues over the North Stars. Goaltender Rick Wamsley made 27 saves as the Blues turned back the same Norris Division rivals that swept them out of last year's NHL playoffs.

The Blues executed their grinding offense to perfection most of the game. They were content to keep the bulk of the action at center ice and keep two defensive players back much of the time.

Smythe Division
Oilers 7, Canucks 3

Mike Krushelnyski and Kevin Lowe scored 42 seconds apart early in the third period to break up a tight game for the Oilers.

Edmonton finished the regular season 60 points ahead of Vancouver.

Flames 5, Jets 1

Lanny McDonald and John Tonelli scored long-range goals and goaltender Mike Vernon played an outstanding game in his first appearance in the Stanley Cup playoffs to lead Calgary over Winnipeg.

The goals by McDonald and Tonelli in the first two periods went between the pads of Winnipeg goaltender Dan Bouchard, who had a tough night for the Jets. Brian Hayward scored on the power play for Winnipeg in the third period.

Vernon made 22 saves, while Bouchard and Hayward faced a total of 28 shots.

NMSU inks 6-8 JUCO player from Terrell

LAS CRUCES (AP) — Ardic Fields, a 6-foot-8 junior college basketball player from Terrell, Texas, signed a national letter of intent with New Mexico State.

The Aggies apparently also will sign a guard from Seattle, Wash., in 6-foot-3 high school senior Chris Fogerson. Fogerson, who helped Garfield of Seattle capture the Washington high school Class AAA title this season, announced in Seattle he would sign with New Mexico State.

Fields played at Southwestern Christian College in Terrell, Texas this past season and averaged 17 points and 10 rebounds a game. He was an all-conference selection in the North Texas Junior College Conference.

Fourteen pay costly price in amateur football

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Seven people died and seven others were permanently paralyzed in amateur football during 1985, the National Center for Catastrophic Sports Injury Research reported Wednesday.

Two other deaths, one from heart failure and one from sickle cell anemia, occurred while the victims were playing football, but were not directly attributed to the sport, the center said in its report.

Head injuries accounted for six of the deaths, and one resulted from a ruptured spleen, said Dr. Frederick O. Mueller, a professor of physical education at the University of North Carolina who is co-director of the center. Neck injuries were responsible for the paralysis cases.

For the first time in a decade, no deaths were reported from heatstroke in 1985.

Four high school players died, one victim was a college player and the other two victims were members of recreational league teams, Mueller said. For the 13th year in a row, there were no deaths among professional or semi-professional players.

"The main purpose of keeping these statistics is to make football safer," said Mueller. "After people started looking at all the football deaths during the '60s and early '70s, they started asking themselves, 'What's going on here, and what are we doing wrong?'"

In 1968, the center reported 36 football related deaths, Mueller said.

Rules adopted in 1976 that prohibited using the head as the initial point of contact, better coaching techniques and improved equipment have helped reduce deaths and injuries in the sport, he said.

Since 1931, when the American Football Coaches Association began the annual survey, more than 900 players have died from football-related injuries.

Farr relieved a shaky Charlie Leibrandt with one out in the fourth and retired every batter he faced except for Ken Griffey's eighth-inning single.

Blue Jays 3, Rangers 1

Doyle Alexander scattered seven hits in 8 1-3 innings for his 150th major-league victory. Tony Fernandez doubled home two runs in the fifth against 19-year-old Edwin Correa, the youngest player in the big leagues. Alexander took a five-hit shutout into the ninth but Pete O'Brien ruined the shutout bid with a home run.

Orioles 4, Indians 3

Pinch-hitter Juan Bonilla hit a two-run double off the right-field wall with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning off rookie Scott Bailes, making his major-league debut. Cleveland had taken a 3-2 lead with two runs in the fifth against Mike Boddicker on Joe Carter's homer, Andy Allanson's single, Brett Butler's grounder and Tony Bernazard's single. Don Aase earned the victory with two innings of hitless relief.

Angels 9, Mariners 5

Brian Downing hit a pair of two-run homers and Wally Joyner added a two-run shot while Jim Slaton pitched seven innings of strong relief, allowing only an unearned run. Joyner's first major-league homer in the third inning pulled the Angels to within 4-3 and Downing's first homer of the game, which followed Doug DeCinces' double, gave the Angels a 5-4 lead. California batted around in the third, scoring five runs off Mark Langston. Angels starter John Candeleria left the game with a sore left elbow after two ineffective innings.

"The secret tonight was that I got ahead of them and I had good control," explained Welch, a 14-game winner last season.

Phillies 5, Reds 3

A four-run 11th inning gave Philadelphia the victory. John Russell's two-run homer capped the rally off Reds relief star Ted Power. Singles by Garry Maddox and Juan Samuel and Glenn Wilson's sacrifice fly broke a 1-1 tie. Third baseman Buddy Bell booted a grounder by Von Hayes to let in another run, and Russell provided the winning runs.

"He left it out over the plate," Russell said of Power's ill-fated slider. "It was good to hit the breaking ball because a lot of people have wondered if I can hit breaking balls."

Cincinnati came back with two runs off Steve Bedrosian, 1-0, in the 11th. The Reds loaded the bases with none out on a pair of hits and a walk, and Dave Concepcion singled home a pair of runs. But Bedrosian got Bo Diaz to bunt into a force play and ending the game with a pair of strikeouts.

AUSTIN (AP) — Carrie Steinseifer of Saratoga, Calif., current high school national record-holder in the 100-yard freestyle, has signed a national letter of intent to attend the University of Texas, school officials said Wednesday.

Court doesn't allow 'Holocaust Syndrome' as part of defense

AUSTIN (AP) — A state appeals judge has criticized his colleagues for barring a Houston man from using "Holocaust Syndrome" as part of his defense against a murder charge.

A psychiatrist who examined defendant Peter Alan Werner said the man grew up hearing Nazi concentration camp stories from his father, who was imprisoned in such a camp. Those stories could have left Werner prone to over-react in situations he perceived as self defense, the doctor said.

Werner, then 21, was sentenced to 10 years in prison in the April 1982 death of Tarbell Griffin Travis. Prosecutors said Werner chased Travis after Travis' vehicle damaged a car owned by a friend of Werner.

Werner shot Travis to death.

The testimony about Holocaust Syndrome was barred by the trial judge. That decision was upheld Wednesday by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in a majority opinion written by Presiding Judge John Onion.

"It did not establish that (Werner) did in fact act under the influence of the Holocaust on the night of the offense," Onion said.

But Judge Marvin Teague said testimony about Holocaust Syndrome should be allowed, just as is testimony about "Battered Wife Syndrome," "Battle Fatigue Syndrome," "Viet Nam Post-Traumatic Stress Syndrome" and similar conditions.

He said jurors were entitled to hear about Werner's state of mind and "his belief that it was necessary for him to defend himself because he comes from a family who did not defend themselves, thus causing them to perish in the Holocaust."

"Today the majority opinion rules out evidence concerning the Holocaust Syndrome. In light of this opinion, what will tomorrow bring?"

Judge Sam Houston Clinton also dissented.

Werner's father is a concentration camp survivor. Several other family members died in the camps, according to Dr. Rudolph Roden, a psychiatrist who examined Werner.

Roden, himself a concentration camp survivor, is an expert in the effects of the Holocaust on survivors and their families. In his testimony, which was barred, Roden planned to say that Werner "grew up with stories of concentration camps told to him by his father and grandmother, who related seeing people beaten to death who did not fight back."

Roden said that although Werner was not thinking directly about the Holocaust when he pulled the trigger, it might have had a "subconscious effect on him."

Report shows spending increases

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — For the first month, at least, it doesn't look good.

Comptroller Bob Bullock's budget police Wednesday released their first rap sheet on Texas' state agencies' response to Gov. Mark White's call for austerity. White asked agency heads and university presidents to curtail spending by 13 percent beginning March 1 to help cover a projected $1.3 billion budget shortfall.

Bullock's office wrote $1.65 billion worth of checks for the agencies and schools in March, up 15.2 percent from the September-through-February monthly average.

"This is strictly a bookkeeper's report," Bullock said. "The agencies sent us their bills and we wrote the checks. The figures mean nothing more or nothing less."

Bill Hamilton, White's budget director, quickly agreed with Bullock's assessment. "It doesn't say it isn't working, it doesn't say it is working," Hamilton said.

The report shows a 38.2-percent increase for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, with monthly expenditures increasing from $500,000 to $700,000. Most of that extra money covered greater salaries and "data processing related expenses."

Bullock and Hamilton pointed out that the report includes some agencies — such as the Foundation School Program, the state employee and teachers retirement systems — White had exempted from his cutbacks. Excluding the public schools — which received one of their four quarterly payments in March — brings the 15.2 percent increase down to less than 3 percent.

In his Feb. 18 executive, White suggested that agencies save money through a hiring freeze. Bullock's figures show the state employed 889 more workers in March than the average for the six previous months, although monthly payroll dropped by 2.4 percent.

The report shows that White's office employed four more workers in March than during the September-to-February average. "That's wrong," said Ann Arnold, White's press secretary. Ms. Arnold said the governor office has cut its staff by two-and-one-half full time workers.

The governor also suggested the elimination of all new professional and personal services contracts "except those absolutely required for the continuation of the most essential public services." Bullock's report shows a 19.2-percent increase in spending for those contracts.

The Texas Forest Service showed a 3,174-percent increase in contracts, the largest of any agency. Budget director Jim Hull said that figure came through a $20,000 contract for processing seeds for the 20 million seedlings the service plants in East Texas each year.

"The bill for seed processing came due and was paid in March, actually the work was done in December," Hull said.

White called for a crackdown on capital expenditures and the deferral of all but the most critical construction projects. In March, Bullock reported, capital outlay jumped $1.7 million, while construction expenses declined almost $6.9 million.

The governor directed the agencies to reduce in-state travel by 20 percent and limit out-of-state travel to "functions involving the direct delivery of services or that which is absolutely required to perform the statutory mission of the agency." Bullock's figures show in-state travel costs increased 6 percent, while out-of-state travel dipped 20.4 percent.

The review indicates 170 more employees at UTPB, a 54-percent increase in monthly payroll, a 33-percent drop in personal service contracts, a 14.6-percent increase in capital expenditures and construction, a 10.9 percent reduction in travel expenses and a 9.1 percent drop in utilities payments.

Ex-teacher convicted of gun violations

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge sentenced a former Houston teacher to three years in prison, saying the man violated the public trust by using his students to falsify gun records.

"When I see the misuse of the trust that has been placed in you as a teacher, I'm not sympathetic," U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald said Wednesday in sentencing Gerald T. Lassiter, 34, who now lives in College Station.

"You may be a sloppy bookkeeper, but you're going to have to pay," the judge said.

McDonald also ordered Lassiter to serve three years probation after completing his prison sentence.

Lassiter was convicted in February of 16 federal firearm and tax violations for using his seventh grade math class at Fonville Junior High School in Houston to fill out the false firearms applications in 1981.

Five students testified they thought they were learning to apply for jobs when they filled out the gun forms Lassiter handed out in class.

But the students were unwittingly listing themselves as gun buyers in what prosecutors said was a scheme by Lassiter to cover up illegal gun sales.

Forms were later filled in with gun data indicating Lassiter had sold guns to the students. Students denied purchasing guns.

Lassiter, a licensed firearms dealer, then submitted the forms to the U.S. Treasury Department, which regulates firearms transactions through the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

In pleading for probation, Lassiter said he was a sloppy bookkeeper.

STATE IN BRIEF

After an Abilene city ordinance banned portable signs in residential areas, Epworth Methodist Church decided to share its corner with a Calvary Baptist Church sign. Calvary is just about a block from the zone boundary.

Baptist church overcomes Abilene's sign ordinance

ABILENE (AP) — It was a case of church spirit overcoming bureaucracy.

The Rev. Pat Correll wanted to put a portable sign in front of Calvary Baptist Church promoting the Southern Baptists' national "Good News America" crusade. But Abilene's new portable sign ordinance created a few obstacles.

"We're on a busy thoroughfare, but the city's ordinance says our street is residential and we couldn't put up a portable sign," Correll said.

The ordinance, however, permits churches on major streets located across from non-residential areas to display portable signs.

Correll and a member of his church discussed the problem with the pastor of neighboring Epworth Methodist Church. The Methodist church meets the city's criteria for portable sign use.

"So we just moved our sign to their parking lot," Correll said. "We've had a good relationship with Epworth Methodist Church. They've borrowed our facilities from time to time."

Rare plant data available

AUSTIN (AP) — Information about 850 rare plants and animals in Texas is only a telephone call away, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Wednesday.

"Call 1-800-252-RARE," Mauro said in announcing a toll-free telephone service for the Texas Natural Heritage Program, which is part of the General Land Office.

"It will save Texas businesses time and money by preventing wasteful confrontations, and it will protect rare flora and fauna for all times for all Texas," Mauro said.

He said the Texas Natural Heritage Program was created 2½ years ago to identify and inventory the state's vast biological resources which include more than 5,000 species of plants, 2,000 types of wildflowers and 600 species of birds.

Mauro said that by using the toll-free number a developer can look for problems that may exist with endangered plants or animals before sizable amounts of money are invested in a project that may have to be scrapped.

Discharge permits requested

AUSTIN (AP) — Developers asked the Texas Water Commission for permits to discharge wastewater from three sewage treatment plants proposed along a two-mile stretch of the Colorado River.

A hearing on the permits was scheduled to begin today before an examiner, who will make recommendations to the three-member commission.

Applications filed with the commission show the sewage plants southeast of Austin would serve a 401-acre residential and commercial development, a mobile home park and an apartment complex.

The Sierra Club is protesting all three permit requests. Club officials said they are concerned about the proliferation of sewage treatment plants.

Developers said the plants are needed because sewage service is not available from the city. But officials said all three proposed sites are near the city sewage treatment and sludge disposal facilities at Hornsby Bend.

TDC to pay workers overtime

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Department of Corrections said Wednesday it will deliver about $4 million in checks for overtime work to about 8,000 employes for work done in 1985.

Both the Texas Public Employees Association and the Texas State Employees Union claimed credit for getting the checks released.

"We understand TDC had cut the checks, but was holding them because of an ill-advised suit filed by the Texas State Employees Union," said Gary Hughes, executive director of TPEA.

"The release of these checks is the result of TSEU's on-going discussions with TDC on the overtime issue," said Danny Fetonte of the TSEU.

The suit asked, among other things, for a clarification and correction of current procedures for paying overtime.

The TDC said it was advised not to issue the checks as long as the lawsuit was pending. The TDC said the suit had been dropped.

Court: Law unconstitutional

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled Wednesday that part of the state fish inspection law is unconstitutional.

The decision came in a Trinity County case in which a commercial fisherman was convicted of refusing to let a game warden inspect his catfish.

The fisherman was fined $75.

State law says no one can refuse to allow a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department employee to inspect "aquatic products" in the possession of a commercial fisherman or fish dealer. The inspectors enforce rules concerning fish size and species protected by law.

The 14th Court of Appeals in Houston overturned the conviction, saying the law violates the state and federal constitutions because it is too broad.

The Court of Criminal Appeals upheld the Houston appeals court ruling.

Teens queried about murders

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A teen-age couple wanted for questioning in the slayings of a Missouri couple were in the Cameron County jail Wednesday on charges of credit card abuse, authorities said.

Federico Rivera, 18, and Tammy Rivera, 17, were returned from North Olmstead, Ohio, Tuesday night and were taken before Justice of the Peace Eloy Cano who set bond at $250,000 each on five charges of credit card abuse.

They are wanted for questioning in the slayings of Keith Nordyke, 56, and his wife, Jean, 53. Their bodies were discovered in the Rio Grande near Brownsville on April 3, a week after they were last seen.

Dear Boss...

Remember April 20-26 is National Professional Secretaries week!

I understand that the Midland Reporter-Telegram will be featuring a

"SALUTE TO PROFESSIONAL SECRETARIES"

on Wednesday, April 23rd.

This gives employers a chance to brag about their secretary and the job she does to over 65,000 readers!

Sure hope I measure up!

...Jo Ann

P.S. I also heard that these "Lucky Secretaries" will be receiving a pretty red rose from Midland Floral Company at 1705 West Wall!
