Haig spurs optimism, agency says

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig's negotiations with Britain and Argentina to avoid war over the Falkland Islands have set a "climate of compromise" and an "air of optimism," an Argentine news agency reported Friday.

But Argentine Foreign Ministry spokesman Hernan Massini Ezcurra declined to suggest a peaceful solution might be near in the crisis that developed two weeks ago when Argentine troops invaded the islands in the South Atlantic.

He was questioned after Haig delivered a message from President Reagan to Argentine President Leopoldo Galtieri. Contents of the note were not disclosed.

Haig told reporters during a dinner break after five hours of talks with Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez, "We are working hard."

His spokesman, Dean Fischer, replied "No comment" when asked if the secretary would fly to London from Buenos Aires. He declined to characterize the discussions and said he did not know if the negotiators had placed any telephone calls to Washington or London.

Costa Mendez called on Haig at the secretary's hotel in downtown Buenos Aires late Friday and left shortly before midnight. The U.S. Embassy had indicated a briefing might be held in a press room estalished in the hotel, but it was announced Fischer would not have anything to say until Saturday

Noticias Argentinas, a private news agency here, said the talks were "well on track." It cited "reliable sources" as saying "an eventual accord would revolve around British recognition of Argentine sovereigny in the archipelago and the sharing of natural resources found there."

A WELL-PLACED U.S. official in Washington, who did not want to be named, said America is providing intelligence information to Argentina as well as to Britain, but he did not believe the information included the location of an armada of 40 British warships heading toward the Falklands.

It was learned earlier in the week that the United States was providing information to the British, from satellites and other other sources, and the U.S. official said, "There has been some passing of information to both sides." Washington officials have said the Soviet Union, a major importer of Argentine grain, also was supplying Argentina's military government with some intelligence information.

Britain's domestic news agency, Press Association, reported Friday night that Argentina had asked the United States for intelligence information on the British fleet and said Washington "looks likely to agree."

There were rumors in Washington that Argentina was prepared to withdraw from the Falkland Islands if Britain called back its battle fleet, considered to be about a week away from the Falklands.

The rumors apparently were based on a call from Galtieri to Reagan Thursday night. Reagan told reporters Friday that Galtieri expressed "his desire for a peaceful solution" in line with U.N. Security Council Resolution 502. It calls for immediate cessation of hostilities and withdrawal of Argentine soldiers who seized the Falklands, a British colony, on April 2.

Galtieri's press secretary, Rodolfo Baltierrez, said Galtieri told Reagan a solution must be sought "within the framework of Resolution 502 and what has been dealt with for thefor past 17 years over the course of U.N.-sponsored decolonization talks" between Britain and Argentina.

Davis and wife pray after testimonies

During prayer, fellow evangelicals lay hands on Karen Davis of Fort Worth and her husband, T. Cullen Davis, following the couple's Christian testimonies at Midland Center Friday night. Earlier in the day, Davis, a controversial figure acquitted of murder charges and charges of contracting the murder of a judge, addressed a crowd at a downtown Hilton luncheon. His wife also addressed a group of women at Green Tree Country Club. See related story, 2A.

Factory usage drop signals recession holding

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. manufacturers operated at just 71.4 percent of capacity last month, recording their seventh drop in factory usage in the past eight months, the Federal Reserve Board reported Friday.

The new figures, coupled with the Fed's Thursday report that industrial production also has fallen in seven of eight months, gave new evidence that the recession was still holding on as the first quarter of 1982 ended.

Robert Ortner, the Commerce Department's chief economist, said it now seems clear that the over-all economy continued to decline during that January-March quarter.

Economic activity, as measured by inflation-adjusted gross national product, fell at an annual rate of 4.5 percent in the fourth quarter of 1981. And Ortner said Friday that for the first three months of 1982 "I see no reason to believe it's going to look in total much improved.

However, he said the first-quarter weakness was much more "characteristic of the latter stages of a recession."

That is, weak final demand for goods dragged the economy down at the end of last year, but the first-quarter decline has been due to cutbacks designed to trim inventories of unsold goods.

If inventory liquidation is now slowing, as some economists think it is, "it won't take a lot to get flat GNP in the second quarter, Ortner said.

In the meantime, he conceded that analysts still are only "hoping for some near-term indications of an upturn The latest reports show the economy hasn't turned up, or at least it hadn't in March, he said.

Lacy Hunt, executive vice president and economist for Fidelity Bank in Philadelphia, agreed that the first-quarter GNP figure, due to be published next week, will be at least as low as the 4.5 percent rate of decline in the fourth quarter and said perhaps it could be "in excess of 5 percent."

But he noted that March's decline in factory use was not large enough to push the utilization rate quite back to January's level of 71 percent.

"The inventory problem is nearly finished," he said. "It's my feeling that there will be a net rise in capacity utilization and industrial production in the current (April-June) quarter."

"The basics are in place" for such an increase, he said, pointing to recently rising consumer spending for durable goods.

March's 0.6 percentage-point drop in factory use followed a one-point February gain that most economists said was at least partially weather related.

The Federal Reserve had reported on Thursday that industrial production fell 0.8 percent in March. The two reports go hand-in-hand, since it only stands to reason that if factories were producing fewer goods, they probably were making less use of their manufacturing capacity.

The March factory use rate was only slightly above the 71 percent level of January, the low point of the recession so far.

The new report revised January's figure to that level from the 70.6 percent previously reported and revised February's to 72 percent from the original 71.8 percent. The March figure for manufacturers is also subject to revision when later figures are available from private businesses.

The factory use rate for producers of industrial materials also fell in March.

Analyst says cultural barriers rule out regional facility

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Parkview Hospital's bed-need analyst told the Texas Health Facilities Commission Friday that Midland and Odessa have too many cultural barriers to support a regional psychiatric hospital.

Dr. James Vinson, an expert in demographic and bed-need assessment testified that an average daily census of 35 psychiatric beds could be adequately used in Midland.

Parkview is one of three hospitals which have submitted certificate of need applications to gain approval for a psychiatric and/or chemical abuse facility. Friday was the last day of the THFC hearings.

The other applicants are Midland Memorial Hospital and Southwest Health Inc.

Throughout the two-week-long hearings, witnesses have testified that the Midland-Odessa area could support two facilities easily. But, according to Vinson, the cities cannot support two and the facility should be placed in Midland.

Southwest Health Inc. has proposed a 60-bed psychiatric hospital, called West Plains, to be built at the Midland Regional Airport.

"Would this type of facility be considered a regional service?" J. Kay Trostle, THFC hearing officer asked.

"Psychiatric hospitals show a larger service area than medical-surgical hospitals, but I do not have the information to make a generalized statement that it is regional," Vinson said.

He added a psychiatric facility would be more appropriate in Midland than Odessa because of three factors which are the number of physicians practicing psychiatry, the number and utilization of psychiatric beds and socioeconomic factors.

Although Odessa Medical Center Hospital has more psychiatric beds than Midland Memorial Hospital, Vinson said statistics show that MMH beds are more utilized. In addition, Midland has more psychiatrists than Odessa.

Parkview officials have proposed to convert the existing facility into a 60-bed psychiatric hospital with 20 of those beds for chemical abuse treatment.

During the hearing, Ms. Trostle has asked each bed-need analyst if two facilities could be built.

"Does your study indicate a need for the number of beds represented by any two?" she asked.

"I don't know if there is a sufficient need. Either one or both would be underutilized," Vinson said.

In addition, Vinson emphasized a central location between the two cities will not work.

"These barriers will not be broken. If they have an Ector County staff, it will be an Ector County facility. And if they have a Midland County staff, it will be a Midland facility," Vinson said.

"What if it's half and half?" Trostle asked.

"It won't happen in Midland and Odessa," Vinson said. "There's too many cultural barriers — a rather strong cultural dissention between these two communities. Everything that has been done to attempt getting these two communities together has failed," Vinson said.

Ms. Trostle told Vinson that Dr. David Warner, Southwest Health's bed-need analyst, said the population in the Midland-Odessa area depends on the oil industry.

"Do you agree with this?" she asked.

Vinson said in some ways he did agree, but the bottom line is that the Permian Basin is branching out in other areas of industry and he sees steady population growth.

In rebuttal only Parkview brought a witness in to testify at the hearing.

Thomas Campbell, an architect for the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, was subpoenaed to the hearing Friday.

Parkview amended its application, increasing square footage and project cost because of a recent change in the MH-MR's minimum requirements for psychiatric hospitals.

Campbell said that in the past general acute care hospital guidelines had been used for psychiatric hospitals.

Parkview falls short on the minimum square footage required in two of its semi-private rooms.

Campbell told the hearing officer that Parkview officials were "working in good faith to comply with the guidelines."

The two rooms are approximately eight to 10 feet short of the guidelines.

Because of the heavy scheduling for other hearings, Ms. Trostle said the earliest she would be able to review the findings of facts from each applicant would be May 28.

All three applicants' attorneys must write a brief and submit it to the THFC by 5 p.m. April 23.

Ms. Trostle said she could possibly make her recommendation by June 11. The final decision will be made by the three-member commission in an open hearing June 25 or July 2.

UAW says agreement near in talks with American Motors

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The United Auto Workers said Friday an agreement may be imminent with American Motors Corp. on the the union's demand that AMC ease its budget squeeze by reducing the number of people on supervisory pay scales.

Raymond Majerus, UAW secretary-treasurer, reported that a deal may be signed as soon as Saturday when contract concession talks resume.

The proportion of supervisors to production workers was cited as a chief cause in a breakdown of contract talks two weeks ago. Negotiations on the issue resumed this week.

The discussions involve about 14,000 workers at AMC plants in Kenosha, Milwaukee and Toledo, Ohio.

Majerus said [illegible] willing to go along with an AMC plan for loaning portions of their paychecks to a company rebuilding program, but that the company must show fiscal wisdom by reducing supervisory overhead.

The company replied that it needs all its supervisors to help set up new production models, and that it has "a problem" with labor dictating to management about the employment roster.

The issue, Majerus said, has "largely been put to bed" and AMC was ready to present a package offer comprising all remaining contract issues.

Spokesmen reported tentative agreement on most issues, including the employee investment plan. Majerus said talks now could proceed to the mechanics of the plan.

Midland's switch to one-way streets secretary's topic in 'Speaking Out'

Midland's downtown conversion to one-way streets in selected locations is proving a bit annoying to Midland legal secretary Carol Ann Miller. In Sunday's "Speaking Out" column, Mrs. Miller takes a light look at the conversion's impact.

Mrs. Miller came to Midland five years ago from Houston. This is her second contribution to "Speaking Out," an open forum for those who want to address any topic. Columns may be light in nature or on a more serious note.

Columns, which should be limited to 750 words, should be mailed to "Speaking Out," P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX. 79702.

Karen Davis says religion, politics mix

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

"This country was never founded with religion and politics to be separated," Karen Davis, wife of T. Cullen Davis, said at a luncheon Friday at Green Tree Country Club.

"Our forefathers made a covenant with God that this would be a Christian nation — a nation with one God. They recognized that there were several different denominations and they respected these different denominations. They didn't lie to one another, didn't have the petty bickering between denominations like we sometimes do today."

Mrs. Davis read excerpts from several historical documents, including the diary of Christopher Columbus, the Mayflower Compact, and the Fundamental Orders of Connecticut, that stated the desires of the early American settlers to live in a God-centered community.

"We've removed every reference to God (in school textbooks), and as a result we have total chaos in public schools," she said. "Textbook writers don't want true Christian heritage reflected in the textbooks."

"Many times historians try to twist truth about the heroics of our forefathers," Mrs. Davis said. "Many of the truths are omitted so children aren't getting truth about God in public school education." She encouraged people to check their children's textbooks — "You won't find God in them.

"A lot of times in America today we don't know what to do," she said. "A recent Gallup Poll said that 80 percent of Americans said they believed Jesus Christ was God or the Son of God and was divine. That tells us that there are a lot of people in the United States that believe in God."

Mrs. Davis discussed the Salt Covenant written about in the Bible, saying it was a covenant of man's faithfulness to God and to each other. "And aren't we commanded to be salt of the earth as Christians? Whenever we who are supposed to be the salt of the earth are not doing what God wants us to do — tolerating evil and wickedness — we become part of the problem.

"We've lived in apathy too long," she said, "and I believe God wants to raise an army of praise. God inhabits the praises of his people."

Mrs. Davis said, "Through the blood of Jesus Christ, we can have victory and we can claim this land for God. God gave us this land. We can call upon him to help us until he comes. When God comes to our country, we will be witness to the rest of the world because the news media will have to spread the word.

"We cannot be apathetic — the Bible tells we're to love new young Christians, disciple them, guide them," she said. "You and I are to love and to bring into the fullness of the Lord those who are living with sin." She added that the sin itself is not to be tolerated.

"When we do it in love, when we obey the Lord in the Holy Spirit, He will take that and use it," she said. "God wants you to be part of the army that's marching forward."

Mrs. Davis said she became born-again "April 9, 1980." She said she began speaking in the fall of 1980, "after the National Affairs Briefing in Dallas, when Reagan came and spoke. More than anything I realized that you don't need a political science degree to know what's going on. I felt very called to share the facts."

Approximately 50 women attended the luncheon, which was sponsored by a group of Christian businessmen who invited Mr. and Mrs. Davis to speak in Midland, according to Janelle Hail, one of the hostesses of the luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis also spoke at Midland Center Friday night.

Temperatures expected to be in 70s

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport promises a pleasant weekend, with light winds and high temperatures in the 70s.

Today's high temperature will be in the low 70s, with Sunday seeing temperatures in the upper 70s. The low tonight will be in the mid-40s. Winds will blow east-northeasterly today at 10 to 15 mph.

The record high for Friday's date was 96 degrees, set in 1937. The record low for today's date was 27, set in 1947.

Harding pre-trial reset after election

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — After losing their bid to have the case thrown out this week, defense attorneys for state Treasurer Warren G. Harding have asked that his pre-trial hearing on official misconduct charges be postponed until after the Democratic primary.

State District Judge Tom Blackwell granted the motion Friday and reset the hearing for May 12.

Harding's attorneys had tried to get two third-degree felony indictments voided because of faulty wording. Blackwell was to have ruled on that motion Wednesday.

But prosecutors quickly re-indicted Harding Wednesday afternoon, correcting defense criticisms that the charges weren't specifically spelled out.

Harding is accused of having two secretarial employees of the Treasurer's office work on his re-election campaign. He was indicted on the two official misconduct charges March 23.

Deputies probing two-month-old death

Sheriff's deputies are investigating the death of a man whose badly decomposed body was found in a pasture east of the Rankin Highway near the Lucky Lady Lounge in Midland Friday morning.

Investigators said a citizen discovered the remains about 9:40 a.m. The man was of Spanish descent and had been dead about two months, according to preliminary reports.

His wallet and personal effects appeared to be intact and a .38 caliber handgun was recovered near the body. Justice of the Peace Robert Pine ordered an autopsy and authorities were in the process of establishing positive identification late Friday.

Red Cross assists tornado victims

Although the American Red Cross has provided disaster assistance to more than 1,050 victims of the recent Northeast Texas and Southwest Oklahoma tornadoes, the organization is concerned that many more families need assistance but have not visited the Red Cross Assistance Center in the Paris, Texas, Boys Club.

"We have committed more than $300,000 in assistance to victims in Lamar County," said John Crafton, Red Cross director of disaster operations. "However, with the number of families affected by this disaster, we expect that figure to go much higher."

In an effort to reach more victims, Red Cross workers are making home visits to persons who are unable to come to the Assistance Center and are providing follow-up assistance to those who have visited the center.

All Red Cross services are provided free of charge. Anyone wishing to support the relief effort can make financial contributions earmarked "Tornado Relief" to their local Red Cross Chapter. More information can be obtained by calling Donna Curb of Midland at 684-6161.

FTC to close four regional offices to save $5 million

By G.G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission, acting over the objection of a House subcommittee chairman, decided Friday to close its regional offices in Boston, Denver, Seattle and Los Angeles to save $5 million a year.

The agency had voted last October to shut four of its 10 regional offices. FTC Chairman James Miller said Friday that the choice of Boston, Denver, Seattle and Los Angeles was made on "both a budget and a management" basis.

The new structure of six regions will provide a "much more even distribution of workload," Miller said, adding that the closings also recognize "the growth in state and local enforcement and the president's efforts toward greater federalism."

However, Commissioner Michael Pertschuk, FTC chairman under former President Carter, argued that Miller's move to restructure the agency was "a euphemism for closing down 40 percent of the commission's regional resources."

"There is no satisfactory way six offices can do the work of 10," he said.

Though he voted for the choice of the four offices to close, Pertschuk maintained any closings at all were "painful, costly and in all likelihood unnecessary." He said the regional offices had "paid for themselves many times over" in effective law enforcement and savings to consumers.

The vote, taken at a closed meeting, was unanimous, FTC spokesman Neil Friedman said. He said the 82 employees in the offices to be closed effective July 15 would be offered transfers to the agency's headquarters in Washington.

Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., had asked Miller to pospone the decision until the House eommerce, consumer and monetary affairs subcommittee he chairs could hold hearings next week on the closings.

Rosenthal, maintaining that some of the FTC's best work is done in regional offices, warned in a letter to Miller that Congress had the power to override the commission's decision.

Miller said Friday that he felt it was necessary to go ahead now rather than wait for next week's hearings because uncertainty in FTC regional offices could cause morale problems.

"We have been in limbo in this matter for some time," he said.

Peter Barash, one four Rosenthal aides who attended the private meeting Friday, called the commissioners' discussion "superficial." He said Rosenthal's subcommittee would conduct an "in-depth" discussion of the productivity of the four offices at its hearing next Tuesday.

"Each of the regions, including those closed, has been highly productive," he said. "Even on a purely cost-benefit basis, there was no justification for closing those offices."

Miller said statistics on the productivity of the regional offices could be misleading because the numbers did not reflect the "quality" of the cases involved. "A great deal of the work of the regions is really done here" at the agency's headquarters, he said.

James Williams, acting deputy executive director of the FTC, said the caseloads of the four offices would be transferred to Wasington headquarters. Asked why those cases were not given to the remaining regional offices, he said, "They have a full plate for the kinds of cases they're handling now."

The closings leave the FTC with regional offices in New York, Atlanta, Cleveland, Chicago, Dallas and San Francisco.

Rosenthal also had maintained the FTC session should have been public under the so-called "Sunshine Law," and Barash said "virtually nothing was discussed the justified the closing of the meeting."

Friedman had said beforehand that as a part of the discussion of regional caseloads, comments were expected on individual cases not yet public and that this justified a private session.

Youth saved by New York cop returns to mother

NEW YORK (AP) — When New York City policeman William Fox told Michael Buchanan he cared, the troubled youth decided not to kill himself. When his mother said it, he went home.

It was the search for a home, and the belief that no one cared, that led the 17-year-old to the brink of a seedy hotel rooftop last Sept. 1, where Fox offered him a new life and told him "somebody cares."

As the crowd urged the teen to jump, Fox told him: "I'd be proud to have a son like you."

When the bachelor policeman became Buchanan's legal guardian and the youth, now 18, moved in with Fox and his mother and entered a Staten Island high school, the search for home seemed over.

But three weeks ago, the mother he thought had abandoned him showed up and said she loved him and wanted to see him.

She had learned he was alive because of the wide publicity about Fox's adoption proceedings.

"We discussed it carefully and Michael said he would like to go for a visit at Easter," Fox said in a interview Friday.

Every day, the teen called Fox, brimming with the excitement of discovering his mother, a brother he had only suspected he had, plus a half-brother, Matthew, 10, and a stepfather, Douglas.

IT WASN'T LONG before he said he wanted to stay for good.

"He said 'I'm happy here, you've got to realize it's my family," said Fox, who said he told the youth he understood completely.

On March 28, from her home in Everman, Texas, Gloria Hunsinger told the press she had not abandoned her son 15 years ago when she lost custody of him during divorce proceedings.

"I thought his dad would take care of him and I had no way of knowing he didn't," she said, adding that she kept Michael's 3-week-old brother, Jimmy, later remarried and was then told her oldest son had been killed in an accident.

Buchanan had told police he had been beaten up by his father and shunted to numerous foster families, two of which he ran away from.

It was the maternal plea and the pull of family roots that made Michael decide to stay in Texas.

"It was a big thing in his life to discover his family," Fox said, explaining that Buchanan decided not to finish his junior year at Curtis High School, where he was a top student.

He has a supermarket job lined up in Everman, plus plans for getting a high school diploma, Fox said.

"SOONER OR LATER, every foster child has to see his mother. I felt he would approach us with this and I always had it in the back of my mind," he said.

Michael takes with him a trust fund set up by Fox that currently has a $2,000 contribution from the Patrolman's Benevolent Association and which is to be used only for medical and educational expenses until he turns 21.

The trust will also receive a portion of the profits from a planned television movie and book on Buchanan, according to Fox, who said there were "absolutely no" plans to terminate the trust.

Sad to lose his "son," Fox is also philosophical.

"It was a pleasure having the boy here and I'm glad I did what I did for him," Fox said. "If all this stuff didn't happen, the boy might not have found his real mother."

Morin gets death

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Jurors recommended Friday that Stephan Peter Morin suffer death by injection for the murder of a young woman he killed during a shootout with police last December.

Morin pleaded guilty to capital murder charges in connection with the death of Carrie Marie Scott Dec. 11 outside a San Antonio restaurant. State law required prosectors to present corraborating evidence of the killing before seeking the death penalty.

Jurors deliberated two hours and 15 minutes before handing down their verdict.

Jury foreman Floyd LaBure, 50, a chemical operator, said after the verdict that jurors believed Morin had become a Christian.

Guru followers say they may run for city office

ANTELOPE, Ore. (AP) — Some followers of an Indian guru say they may run for city office now that they have turned back an attempt by old-time residents to disincorporate the tiny community.

But the red-garbed members of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh's commune insist they aren't about to organize a movement to overtake the entire town government in November's general election.

The City Council's plan to disincorporate the town rather than have it taken over by followers of the guru was crushed Thursday, 55-42, after newly arrived disciples demonstrated their voting strength.

"We have known for some time that old-time residents were in the minority," city attorney Keith Mobley said after the vote.

"Some sannyasins (what disciples call themselves), may decide to run," said David Knapp, one of the leaders who has spearheaded the commune's nearly constant legal battles with the council, which has tried to deny permission to construct buildings on commercially zoned property the group bought within the city.

Five of the seven council seats will be up for election in November, including the jobs of mayor and city recorder, Mobley said.

The Rajneesh claim they are victims of religious discrimination. City Council members admit they don't like the newcomers, but say they are not discriminating. They also admit they are not happy with the prospect of a worldwide guru festival planned for a nearby ranch owned by the commune in July. The event is expected to draw as many as 10,000 visitors.

Both sides accused the other of moving voters into town to take advantage of liberal Oregon election laws, which allow people who have lived in the state for 20 days to move into a city, register and vote — all on election day.

Thousands of extra commuters clog the northbound lane of the Southeast Expressway during the Friday morning rush-hour following an early-morning stike by drivers of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority.

Boston transit bus drivers stage wildcat strike; Traffic paralyzed

BOSTON (AP) — A wildcat strike by transit workers paralyzed Boston's rush hour traffic Friday and stranded 300,000 commuters who take public buses, subways and trolleys to work.

Union officials ordered an end to the strike early Friday evening about an hour after a judge sent three union officers to jail. The union told the 3,200 striking transit workers to return to their jobs immediately.

The three union officials who had been held in contempt were freed after the union called off the work stoppage.

State government and many businesses allowed workers to go home early Friday afternoon to help ease evening traffic. The transit system arranged for private bus lines to add extra runs.

The members of the Boston Carmen's Union have been working without a contract for 16 months, but their walkout was touched off by animosity over one long-sensitive issue — part-time workers.

The strike — the first in four years — began without public warning when transit workers refused to go to work Friday morning. Many commuters did not learn of the strike until they got to their bus stops and subway stations.

Commuters made do by driving, walking, bicycling or even roller-skating in the mild spring weather.

Leaders of the union and the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, which operates the metropolitan transit system, had held a late-night bargaining session Thursday and transit officials insisted later the union had assured them there would be no strike.

In a 10-minute midmorning hearing in Suffolk Superior Court, Judge Joseph Ford issued a temporary restraining order directing workers to stop the strike.

Later, the judge held three union officers in contempt of court. Richard Guiney, the union's recording secretary; John S. Webber, a labor delegate, and Paul Connolly, the vice president, were ordered taken to Boston's Charles Street Jail.

But about 5:20 p.m., union President John J. Gallahue rose in court and said: "On behalf of the officers of Local 589, we instruct all members of the union to return to work immediately."

At a news conference later, Gallahue said the midnight shift would go to work, and service would be normal on Saturday.

"The rank and file will go along with it," he said. "We'll be there."

Management officials testified that the three ordered union workers not to report to their jobs Friday morning.

Transit lawyer Joseph Elcock asked the judge to fine the union $300,000 a day, but the judge did not act on his recommendation.

Gov. Edward J. King described the strike as "an illegal and... a truly outrageous action by the Carmen's Union."

James O'Leary, general manager of transit system, had said he would seek fines against the union of $1 million a day and warned that workers who stayed out risked suspension or dismissal.

"Everything was tied up this morning, solid everywhere," said metropolitan policeman Phil Marotta, a 21-year veteran of the force. "It's the worst I've ever seen it."

Boston's downtown streets were bumper-to-bumper cars, and its sidewalks were shoulder-to-shoulder people.

"I ALMOST GOT HIT BY A car," complained Jonathan Place, who walked five miles from Brookline to downtown Boston. "Drivers were anxious because they were caught in stop-and-go traffic, and they weren't stopping for red lights." Gallahue said the walkout was not formally authorized.

"There was no official vote," he said. "It wasn't ratified by the membership. It's been a pretty volatile situation. It just erupted, and we couldn't resolve it."

Gallahue said the strike was touched off by anger over the use of part-time drivers. Several drivers walked out for three hours on Thursday and stopped bus service in Boston's South Shore suburbs.

The use of part-time drivers was approved by the state Legislature two years ago over the union's objections.

"The part-time driver thing just got out of hand," Gallahue said. "Some drivers were laid off, then rehired as part-timers, and at less pay and no fringe benefits ... And those drivers are getting the choice routes, driving Monday through Friday, during the day, and not at night."

Government delays approval of Braniff plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government refused Friday to give immediate approval of a plan by Braniff International Airlines to lease most of its South American routes to Pan American World Airways, but held off a final decision until further hearings can be held.

Daniel McKinnon, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, said the issue was so complex that oral arguments from supporters and opponents of the plan is necessary. He promised a final decision by the end of July.

The plan, vehemently fought by a number of other carriers who wanted Braniff's routes to South America, has been described by Braniff officials as essential in keeping the financially struggling carrier afloat.

Under the proposal, Pan Am has agreed to pay Braniff $30 million, two-thirds of it immediately, and help Braniff solve some of its short-range cash problems.

McKinnon said the CAB, while denying the two carriers' request for interim approval, would examine the issue as quickly as possible. But he said the board was also ready to consider alternative proposals, some of which "do not present the competitive and public interest problems" of the proposed Pan Am-Braniff plan.

A number of carriers have complained that the proposal would give Pan Am a monopoly over South American routes.

The CAB also announced it was rejecting part of the Pan Am-Braniff proposal that prohibits Braniff from discussing other agreements with other airlines. American Airlines has offered to subsidize Braniff on its money-losing South American routes if the CAB agrees to give a full hearing to the issue.

"The issue of the competitive impact in the U.S.-South American market was so complex and contested that (the board) could not now consider approving the proposal before completing an oral evidentiary hearing on the issue," McKinnon told reporters.

Braniff lost $160 million last year and its executives have said the deal with Pan Am is essential for Braniff's financial heath. The Dallas-based carrier is in the midst of a financial restructuring aimed at helping it pay off $733 million in debt.

The two carriers had asked for CAB approval by April 25 so Pan Am could begin service on that date. They noted that Braniff needs an immediate infusion of cash.

The four-year shift of routes would make Pan Am the only U.S. carrier to most of South America. Under the agreement Pan Am would fly to 11 cities in nine countries now served by Braniff.

IRS trying to make forms less taxing

By GRACE-MARIE ARNETT
Copley News Servic

WASHINGTON — The IRS says it wants to make tax day simpler for you.

While it didn't help most of us this year, the federal government's tax collection agency is testing simpler tax forms it hopes will make April 15 a lot less agonizing in the future.

Gone will be instructions like: "Add lines 7, 8e and 9b, subtract line 10 from 11. If less than $10,000 see instructions, page 13."

Instead, the tax forms will have friendlier language. "Always take 1 personal deduction for yourself," and "Add your medical and dental expenses and write the total."

"WE'VE MADE tremendous strides in making tax forms less complicated," said Roderick Young, a spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service here. "They're much simpler now than they were 10 years ago."

"Readability experts" said it took a 12th grade education or more to understand the language in the tax forms a decade ago, Young said. "Now, the readability level is down to the 8th or 9th grade," he adds.

If that isn't enough to make the taxpayer who spent all night April 14 wading through the complex forms mad enough, Young adds more. "We feel if people will sit down with the forms and keep careful records, they can easily figure it out."

Young says he has no estimates of how many people fail to file returns because they believe the forms are too complicated. However many there are, he says there aren't any more or less this year than last.

He projects the IRS will receive 95 million tax returns, 57 percent of them using the long form for itemized deductions. That's slightly more than last year, just enough to account for new entrants into the job market.

About 30,000 taxpayers in the Atlanta area are the subjects of this year's simplicity test. Instead of receiving the standard 1040 and 1040A tax forms mailed to everyone else, the test group received forms designed by a New York graphics firm that look less foreboding.

THE TYPE is larger, important instructions are printed in red, and the form takes an easier, step-by-step approach to figuring taxes.

Those 30,000 taxpayers will be asked to tell the IRS what they think of the new forms — whether they are in fact simpler. Then the agency will decide whether to use them universally.

"The bottom line will still be the same, if not worse," warns Ray Hite, a district manager of the H&R Block tax firm here. Hite says he worries people will get so excited about the relative ease of preparing their own taxes, they will fail to take legitimate deductions.

"They may decide to not pay a $35 to $40 fee to have their taxes prepared by an expert, and wind up paying $300—$400 more in taxes because of the deductions they don't take," Hite said.

He says the IRS may be wanting people to take advantage of simpler forms because it means the federal government will wind up getting more money.

Even if it gets more money, it still won't be enough. The federal budget is expected to be about $100 billion in the red this year and the IRS needs to collect every penny it can to help reduce that deficit.

The one area that makes IRS agents see red is unreported legal income. The federal government could collect $87 billion more if citizens didn't duck taxes on earnings like tips, moonlighting jobs, and cash transactions, Young says.

AND THAT'S just legal earnings. The IRS doesn't even have estimates on how much more it would get if people reported and paid taxes on income from illegal activities like gambling, prostitution and drugs.

If they did, of course, they would be admitting their crime and could be arrested, so the IRS doesn't count on collecting much from black market activities.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., an advocate of lower taxes, says as tax rates drop, the federal govennment should find more and more people reporting legal income.

"Most taxpayers really don't want to cheat," Kemp says. "But if the rewards are high enough, they'll do it. What we need to do is reduce the incentive to cheat."

For example, if a worker must turn over half his wages to the federal government, he is more likely to lie than if he only has to pay 25 percent in taxes, Kemp argues.

The 1981 Economic Recovery Act passed by Congress last summer is scheduled to reduce individual income taxes by 25 percent by 1984.

For those who don't want to wait that long and decide to cut their own taxes a little earlier by cheating, the IRS will audit 1.6 percent of all returns.

But they are not randomly selected. A sophisticated computer has been programmed to look for all the places people usually cheat and spit out those returns for audits.

Some renegade economists believe there's an even simpler way to get everyone to pay their fair share. The solution: a flat rate. No deductions for home mortgage interest, no tax credits for home insulation, no special write-offs for business lunches.

Town supports teacher accused of sexual assault

LEONIA, N.J. (AP) — When John Anagnosti was charged with sexually assaulting a young boy, residents of this tiny borough rallied around the popular fourth-grade teacher.

The charge that he fondled one of his 9-year-old students summoned an outpouring of support from the townspeople, scores of sympathetic letters and more than $8,000 in donations for legal expenses.

When the 38-year-old bachelor goes on trial Monday, parents, former students and other supporters plan to crowd into the Bergen County Courthouse to show their respect for "Mr. A."

"I don't think these charges should ever have gotten into a courtroom," said Gail Hurvitz, mother of two of Anagnosti's former students. "It seems bizarre that a man who would do so much for the children and the community would find himself in this situation."

Mayor Arthur Jones agrees.

"Other kids don't believe these charges," he said. "There's no reason for them to believe it."

"My friends, they're shocked," said John Hurvitz, Mrs. Hurvitz's son and a high school senior who once took an elective astronomy class from Anagnosti. "I know he didn't do it."

During the 14 years at the Anna C. Scott School, Anagnosti's teaching ability won him praise from the students and the community. But, he said, they also made him vulnerable to the charge.

"I didn't go by the book," he said, sipping coffee at a nearby diner during a recent interview. "I thought the child came first. That was my utmost concern. I'm not a naive person. I was aware of the possibility that something like this could happen."

ANAGNOSTI SAID HE regularly took five or six of his elementary school students to the circus, museums or on other trips on Saturdays, using his own money, until every student had been on a field trip.

"He took the children, split them into groups, and every week took them places," said Mrs. Hurvitz. "He saw the circus five times a year. After the trip they would go to his house for dinner, with their parents' permission, and discuss what they did."

"He made learning an adventure, it was more than just the book," said John Hurvitz. "He was so concerned with children, with people. He can understand kids. He makes an attempt to treat them not like children, but people. They're important, they're somebody."

The case against Anagnosti began in January 1980 when a former Leonia resident tried to re-enroll his son in the school after moving back to the community. The man refused to sign an affidavit affirming his residency in the borough. A short time later, he accused Anagnosti of molesting his son.

The man filed a formal accusation against the teacher with the Leonia police in February of that year, and soon began carrying a sign around town and near the school, claiming his son was assaulted.

Anagnosti's attorney, Christopher Stueben, said that charge was dropped, and the case pending trial against Anagnosti involves another youngster.

But townspeople say the charges Anagnosti now face grew out of the controversy over the first accusation.

"One charge triggered the other charges," said Jones, who had two children in Anagnosti's class. "It's the same father-son relationship. Both sons were without mothers."

"AT THE TIME, NO one knew it would go this far," said Joan Kramer, whose daughter was in one of Anagnosti's classes.

In March of 1980, Anagnosti was charged with sexual assault. Within three days, he pleaded guilty to fondling a 9-year-old boy, telling the judge he wanted to spare the child involved the emotional trauma of appearing in court.

He resigned from teaching and dropped from sight.

"The nature of the charge traumatized me so severely, I imagined myself alone in the woods," Anagnosti said.

But shocked parents and community members began to raise money for his defense and convinced him to fight the charges.

In June, Superior Court Judge James F. Madden dismissed the guilty plea, basing his decision on a report psychiatrist's report that said Anagnosti was not mentally competent at the time to enter a plea.

In October, a grand jury returned an indictment against Anagnosti, charging three counts of sexual assault, alleging he rubbed up against the boy while they were at the teacher's home.

"He was devastated," said Mrs. Hurvitz. "He felt strongly about protecting the child. But he soon came to realize his own reputation prevailed, his sense of self-survival."

ANAGNOSTI NOW SUPPORTS himself by tutoring privately and says he spends much of his time "reading a lot and watching TV situation comedies to keep from getting depressed." He still lives in nearby Fort Lee and says he would "love to come back to Leonia to teach."

He acknowledged that his openess with children could have been misinterpreted by others and left him open to the charges.

MacLeish in serious condition

BOSTON (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning poet and playwright Archibald MacLeish was reported in serious condition Friday at Massachusetts General Hospital, but hospital officials would not disclose details.

The Greenfield Recorder, quoting an unidentified hospital representative, said MacLeish, 89, had been in the hospital since at least Tuesday. The Morning Union of Springfield also reported his hospitalization.

A hospital spokeswoman would not confirm or deny the reports, saying MacLeish's family had requested that no information be released. She asked not to be identified.

MacLeish won Pulitzers for poetry in 1932 and 1953 and for drama in 1959. He was the librarian of Congress from 1939 to 1945.

He has lived with his wife, Ada, for 45 years on their 250-acre Uphill Farm in Conway, a rural western Massachusetts town near Greenfield, where his grandfather was a minister.

On the farm, he writes in a one-room stone building away from the house and telephones.

He received a law degree from Harvard Law School in 1919 and was Phi Beta Kappa as an undergraduate at Yale University. He was born May 7, 1892, in Glencoe, Ill.

Teamsters ask Reagan to support mortgage loan bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Teamsters union asked President Reagan on Friday to support legislation that would free union pension funds for investment in mortgage loans at interest rates well below the prevailing rate.

Roy Lee Williams, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said such changes in laws and government regulations are needed "to once again put housing back in the reach of middle-income Americans.

"There will be no resurgence in home-buying until interest rates again reach a level affordable to the average person," he said. "And union funds in a position to perform this service should do so."

Robert F. Bonitati, a White House labor adviser, said Williams' letter has been received and "we're taking a look at the whole proposal. ... It's a rather unique proposal and it sounds rather innovative."

Williams asked Reagan to take the lead in seeking amendments to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), which governs use of unions pension funds, to permit this money to be invested in the housing industry. The Teamster leader wants to offer mortgage loans "at the affordable rate" of 10 percent.

A SIMILAR proposal had been made last year by the AFL-CIO's Building and Construction Trades Department, but investment by construction unions of pension assets in their own industry is presently forbidden by the ERISA act.

Another provision of the existing law requires that investors of union pension assets obtain the highest possible rate of return, and that apparently would have to be eased for the Teamsters to invest in mortgage loans well below the prevailing 17.5 percent rate.

At a Dec. 3 meeting with representatives of the home building industry and union leaders, Reagan said he was asking the Labor Department "to move as expeditiously as possible to complete the drafting of regulations designed to provide even greater freedom for all pension funds to invest additional monies in housing, if they choose to do so."

REAGAN AT the time was referring to mortgage investment by construction industry pension funds. He said that changing the rules was "not intended to water down but rather to "unlock important new doors to prudent investment in the housing market."

Williams first unveiled his proposal at the Teamsters quarterly general executive board meeting earlier this week in Scottsdale, Ariz.

The 21-member board "unanimously and enthusiastically endorsed the innovative new concept and encouraged the Teamster leader to seek the administration's support for any required legislation to get the ball rolling immediately," the union said in a statement.

Williams asked Reagan to support the changes "to allow union pension fund for home mortgages at below market rates, but above te rates necessary to meet the funds' long-term actuarial projections" without running afoul of fiduciary responsibilities for management of pension assets.

"Under this program, I can easily foresee some of the largest, soundest union pension funds in the country making available a portion of their money for home mortgage loans in, say, the 10 percent range," he said, "while fully maintaining the soundness, integrity and growth of their asset bases and their returns on investment."

Currently, federal standards for multi-employer pension plans require trustees to seek to achieve the highest possible rate of return on investment of the plans' funds.

"I certainly don't quarrel with this standard or any other that leads to strong investment performance by a pension plan," Williams said. "But investment return is not the most important cornerstone in the foundation of a secure pension fund. Jobs are. Jobs that build the participant base of a fund, that cause contributions to be made to a fund on a workers' behalf, that bring in the income to invest."

In the letter, Williams also said, "I further recommend that pension funds (trustees) not be the administrators or managers or direct lenders of mortgage loans, but rather that they act to make money available to existing lending institutions at an agreed upon rate.

"Given the great jump in the price of housing in the last five years, the middle income earner, who buys most of the homes in the country, simply cannot afford those interest rates and the gigantic monthly payments they require," he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is one less acronym in the federal alphabet soup.

This aerial view of Hever Castle shows the inner and outer moats, 156-room village complex, maze and Anne Boleyn's gardens. The Eden River is in the background.

Live royally for 14 million pounds

One of the most extraordinary real estate opportunities in the 20th century is about to unfold. An estate rich in romance and history, and the most important property to be offered on the open market for many generations, is for sale in Great Britain.

What makes it even more remarkable is that though it sits on British shores, its roots are Anglo-American in tradition. Hever Castle first came to fame in the 16th century as the home of Anne Boleyn, second wife of King Henry VIII. Yet, it was an American, William Waldorf Astor, who restored the property in the early 20th century to a greatness it had never known before.

Sotheby Parke Bernet International Realty Corporation in New York, in conjunction with Savills in London, is handling the exclusive sale of the estate. Because it is a British national treasure, it will have great appeal to discerning individuals worldwide as well as to major international corporations seeking headquarters in England in a bastion of style and tradition.

"Owning Hever Castle is like owning a bit of history with all its implications," says Edward Lee Cave, chairman of Sotheby's Realty. "Here is an opportunity to possess not only a grand English castle with famous gardens, but an extraordinary collection of art as well.

"The collection, all acquired by three generations of the Astor family, is particularly appropriate as it reflects on every phase of English and European civilization over the past 500 to 800 years — just as the castle itself does," Cave says. "For example, there is memorbilia from the days of Anne Boleyn and, reminiscent of feudal days, a fine collection of arms and armour. European works of art, furniture, rugs and tapestries from the 17th century were added — elements that made the English country house the standard of the 'grand life' for the world. Beautiful classical and Renaissance sculptures are effectively placed in the garden so as to remind us of the grand tour the early 19th century milord would take to Italy, bringing home his reminders of a great Mediterranean civilization."

The collection also includes a group of French impressionist paintings, bronzes, ivories, manuscripts and books. Within the castle, the architectural appointments have been painstakingly restored, always in keeping with the period they represent, so that the evolution of life on the estate has retained its historic traditions while continuing to be a comfortable, modern home.

William Waldorf Astor was compelled by a sense of history to restore the 13th century castle with its 16th century additions as authentically as possible. To maintain the castle's beauty and the symmetry of its surroundings while enlarging it to accomodate more guests, he built a Tudor "village," an imaginative appendage to the castle. An Italian garden, with beautiful lawns, was created to contain his numerous statuary and remains a majestic and fitting site for this graceful sculpture.

The 3,200 acre estate also includes a river; a lake on whose shores sits a loggia and colonnaded piazza with fountain; stables and a riding school; two working dairy farms; eight leased farms; a public house with restaurant as well as 600 acres of woodland.

In addition, there is great potential for increased leisure development areas at Hever Castle by making use of the squash court, tennis court and heated swimming pool and the reinstatement of the nine hole golf course. A pavillion built in 1973 overlooking the lake comfortably contains 250 people for dinner, dances or for lunches or conferences.

The listing price for the Hever Castle Estate is 14 million pounds.

Britain may revive some Irish self-rule

Hearst Feature Service

BELFAST — Hardly anybody likes the British government's latest proposal for moving toward a solution in Northern Ireland — but that could be the best thing going for it.

In the midst of another, far different crisis over the Falkland Islands, Britain has introduced measures designed to revive a measure of self-rule, abolished by London a decade ago in the wake of communal violence between Protestants and Catholics.

Even the Falklands may prove a blessing in disguise for the situation here. "Matters do best in Ireland," explained political scientist Fergus Pyle, "when attention is directed elsewhere."

The new British plan passed through the House of Commons in London last week with scarcely a murmur, so absorbed was that body by the Falklands affair. The plan is the handiwork of James Prior, the most senior, subtle and determined politician to hold the post of minister in charge of Northern Ireland for many years.

To outside visitors, officials of the Northern Irish office explain patiently that Prior's basic objective is to convince all sides they can profit by giving limited cooperation another try.

The ultimate aim is to persuade Catholics and Protestants into a posture of cooperating with one another on bread-and-butter problems. But the minority Catholics would have a say — because of the 70 percent rule — that generally was denied them under the old Northern Irish regime. Ideally, that could lead to new arrangements between the north and the Irish Republic.

Elephant-sized weight loss has circus officials worried

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Stacey has lost about a quarter of a ton in the last month, but those who know her say she has been eating just like an elephant.

Stacey, a 12-year-old Burmese elephant and featured performer with the Hoxie Brothers Circus, has checked into the Auburn University veterinary clinic, where she is undergoing tests for an unexplained weight loss.

"She eats a whole bunch, but she's had a chronic weight loss," said Dr. Douglas Shearer, an Auburn University veterinarian. "We're not sure what the problem is. She's lost about 500 pounds in the last few weeks."

Entertainers, coroners may testify for Noguchi

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainers and medical examiners from other cities will testify on behalf of Coroner Thomas Noguchi, who was demoted amid accusations of mismanagement and sensationalism, his attorney said Friday.

Noguchi was ordered demoted by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors on Thursday. The demotion to "physician-specialist" takes effect April 28; he was suspended March 29.

The supervisors contended the coroner's office was administered incompetently. In the past, board members also accused Noguchi of sensationalizing the deaths of celebrities, including actor William Holden.

His attorney, Godfrey Isaac, said he intends to combine an appeal of Noguchi's demotion with a Civil Serivce hearing on his suspension.

No date has been set for the hearing, but it probably will be set for mid- to late May and will probably take six weeks "because there is a great deal of material and the charges have been vague and unspecific — shotgun charges," Isaac said.

The county will have to prove its allegations, Isaac said.

"They'll show one or two things that did indeed happen. There were two or three instances of theft brought to Dr. Noguchi's attention," he said. "But it's not whether an employee down the line stole something ... it's how he (Noguchi) handled it."

Meanwhile, Rita Dimond, administrative assistant to Supervisors Chairman Pete Schabarum, said the position of physician-specialist in forensics has a salary range of $55,000 to $75,000. Noguchi has a current annual salary of $69,340.

"A raise is possible because of the number of years he's had in county service," Ms. Dimond said. "It's one of those strange things that Civil Service does. There are department heads who make less than some people in that department."

Isaac said he and his client had not yet discussed whether Noguchi would accept the lesser position.

"Many medical examiners from across the country will testify" at Noguchi's hearing, as well as "some entertainers ... and many employees of the coroner's office," Isaac said.

Different actors, he said, have different ways of looking at Noguchi's handling of celebrity deaths such as Holden's. The coroner said Holden had been drinking heavily before he died.

He cited statements by Dana Andrews, former president of the Screen Actors Guild and a recovered alcoholic, that Noguchi should be praised for revealing the role alcohol played in Holden's death — causing him to fall and suffer a fatal head injury.

A celebrity fund-raiser to aid Noguchi is scheduled Monday. Among those organizing the event was producer-critic John Barbour, one of the hosts on the NBC-TV "Real People" series.

Dr. Ronald Kornblum has been acting coroner since Noguchi was suspended.

FBI to reopen investigation of MacDonald murders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New evidence in the murder case against Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald has prompted the FBI to reopen the investigation at the request of a retired agent, authorities said Friday.

The evidence is a 53-page signed statement from Helena Stoeckley, who says she witnessed the murders of MacDonald's pregnant wife, Colette, 26, and two daughters, Kimberly, 6, and Kristen, 3, by members of a satanic drug cult that broke into the MacDonalds' home at Fort Bragg, N.C., in 1970.

That account would support MacDonald's version of what happened. He has insisted that the murders were committed by intruders chanting "Acid is Groovy. Kill the Pigs."

Ms. Stoeckley, who had been a police informant, was interviewed by authorities before MacDonald's 1979 trial in Raleigh. But she gave confused and conflieting accounts of her whereabouts the night of the murders, and said she had been high on drugs. At the trial itself, the judge severely limited her testimony.

MacDonald, a former Green Beret, was jailed after his conviction, but he was later freed when a federal appeals court ruled his right to a speedy trial had been violated. The U.S. Supreme Court recently reinstated his conviction and he is back at the federal prison on Terminal Island in Los Angeles pending appeal on other grounds.

The ex-agent, Ted Gunderson, who was hired by MacDonald's defense team to investigate independently in 1980, said he is concerned about how aggressive the FBI investigation will be, noting it has been more than a year since he informed the Justice Department of the woman's statement.

"I confirmed with the FBI that they did receive my report," said Gunderson, who used to be special agent in charge of the FBI's Los Angeles office. "This is the first time I've heard the FBI was investigating."

Gunderson, in a telephone interview from San Francisco, told The Associated Press that apparently the probe will focus on his allegations of civil rights violations against MacDonald and obstruction of justice.

Brian Murtagh, the supervising Justice Department attorney in the case, confirmed in Washington that the FBI has been investigating Gunderson's report since June 1981.

THE FBI'S GOING to do a thorough investigation," Murtagh said in a telephone interview Friday. "There's substantial progress."

But he indicated that Gunderson won't like what results have been obtained has been so far.

"I'm convinced of the correctness of the jury verdict," Murtagh said.

Murtagh said none of the evidence submitted has explained how little Kristen MacDonald's blood came to be found on her father's eyeglasses.

"They contended he wasn't wearing his glasses that night," he said.

Murtagh said Ms. Stoeckley's new statement certainly warrants investigation but that other allegations now being raised by Gunderson were contained in the trial record.

Gunderson said the FBI had questioned him and another investigator, retired Fayetteville police detective Prince Beasley, last December about the statement by Ms. Stoeckley, asking whether she had been coerced or offered incentives like money or a contract for a movie or a book. In the statement, she implicated six other members of the cult in the killings, he said.

"We made her no promises," Gunderson said Friday. "There was no duress. She thought we had an inside informant in the group who had implicated her. She told us the story to give her side of it. I'm not saying we do or we don't have such an informant."

Gunderson said her testimony had been available at the original trial but was not introduced.

"After the murders she said she thought she'd been at the crime scene but was high on drugs. The judge interviewed her and said her mind was gone. Nobody paid any attention to her after that," Gunderson said.

HE ALSO SAID MACDONALD'S civil rights were violated by an Army investigation that "was incomplete, negligent and was conducted by inept investigators.

"Evidence was lost and destroyed," he said. "One of the documents of a laboratoy exam was altered, and the trial was based upon this incomplete and inept investigation and therefore he was not given a fair trial and his civil rights were violated."

In a letter to FBI director William Webster, Gunderson said: "Failure or refusal to preserve evidence constitutes an obstruction of justice violation."

Manson family member stabbed in prison

TRACY, Calif. (AP) — Manson family member and convicted murderer Bobby Beausoleil was in extremely critical condition Friday after being stabbed in the heart in a prison attack, officials said.

Beausoleil, 34, was stabbed twice Thursday night with a prison-made knife in the wing for honor inmates at the Deuel Vocational Institution, said prison spokesman Cliff Reed.

The inmate was wounded in the chest and back with a 10-inch piece of sharpened metal that may have been broken off a fixture, Reed said.

Investigators stand in front of the debris Friday of the steel and concrete bridge that collapsed at a highway construction site in East Chicago, Ind., Thursday killing 12 workers.

Phony ads educate answerers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service says its bogus newspaper advertisements are saving money for people who answered them in hopes of earning extra cash or shedding pounds.

In an experimental effort to educate the public about mail fraud, the Postal Service lured more than 140 readers into answering phony ads run in 39 newspapers in three states.

The ads promoted a work-at-home plan claiming to generate $750 monthly and a weight-loss scheme to erase pounds "like never before."

Kacy McClelland, consumer program specialist for the Postal Service's Pittsburgh division, said most respondents merely said they needed extra income, but "one fellow even asked me if there were any sales openings."

Instead of asking people to send money as shady advertisers might, McClelland returned their postage with a brochure warning about envelope-stuffing, chain letters and other possibly unscrupulous enterprises.

McClelland said that on Friday alone he received 65 letters, most from women.

Nine out of 10 people who answered the ads responded to the work-at-home proposition, he said, adding: "The work-at-home and medical fraud are the two single most prevalent problems, at least in the last year, that we've seen."

The Postal Service estimates that of $70 billion to $80 billion in mail order business nationwide last year, about $500 million was fraudulent. It's legal to answer ads for bogus money-making schemes, but the con men behind them face up to five years in jail and $1,000 fines if convicted of mail fraud.

El Salvador representatives get credentials

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Right-wing supporters cheered Roberto d'Aubuisson as he took his turn among 60 newly elected deputies picking up credentials Friday for the Constituent Assembly that is to pave the way to representative government.

Rightists leaped to their feet as d'Aubuisson strode to the stage of the National Legislative Chamber, where the Central Elections Council handed out official credentials to winners of the March 28 election.

The general elections, observed by delegates from many countries, were conducted as part of an effort to end the 2½-year-old guerrilla war between leftists and the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta.

The applause for d'Aubuisson was sustained, the longest given any of the deputies-elect, and cheers of "Viva d'Aubuisson" resounded in the chambers — empty since the national legislature was dissolved after the October 1979 coup.

The Constituent Assembly that is to pick an interim president and lay the groundwork for electing a national government is expected to be seated next week.

But it appeared doubtful that a coalition to the United States' liking would be formed by then to lead the assembly. None of the six parties that fielded candidates in the election won a majority of seats.

D'Aubuisson, once accused of plotting to overthrow the government and alleged to have ties to right-wing "death squads," emerged from the underground last fall to found the ultra-right National Republican Alliance (known by its Spanish acronym ARENA).

ARENA won 19 of the 60 seats, and was expected to play a leading role in the assembly. ARENA and four other rightist parties won a total of 36 seats. The centrist Christian Democrats, whose leader Jose Napoleon Duarte is president of the current junta, won 24 seats. Although the Christian Democrats won more seats than the five other parties, they lack a majority.

Leftists boycotted the election and one rightist party did not win any seats.

D'Aubuisson was shadowed by a pack of reporters and photographers Friday morning. In brief remarks at one point, he said talks aimed at forming a new government were "going well."

He said progress might be more evident once the assembly is seated and negotiations are able to proceed among deputies themselves, rather than among the parties.

But Julio Samayoa, secretary-general of the Christian Democrats, said there has been no progress.

The Christian Democrats say their support, about 40 percent of the popular vote, entitles them to more power in the government than the coalition of the rightist parties appear willing to deliver.

They say they will assume an opposition role if necessary.

The Reagan administration has told the parties that Congress may be reluctant to support a government that leaves out the Christian Democrats.

The Christian Democrats proposed appointing a new junta with three members, representing the Christian Democrats, the military and the conservatives. The military has not responded but the right, with its powerful force in the assembly, has said it won't share power with the military.

The conservatives, who bill themselves as the "triumphant faction," insist the new government be headed by a president and vice president.

American pressure apparently is the major, if not only, block to the conservatives forming a government of their own and leaving the Christian Democrats out entirely.

At the credentials presentation Friday, ARENA deputies saluted and shouted "Present for the Homeland" when the name of David Joaquin Quinteros was called. Quinteros was found shot to death April 4, and his seat will be taken by the elected alternate deputy, Mario Enrique Amaya Rosa.

The chamber observed a moment of silence for Quinteros.

Leftist guerrilla activity has been at a low level since the election. Observers say Easter Week may have been a factor since most Salvadorans are devout Roman Catholics.

Policeman under fire because of Jolson act

By CHRISTOPHER CORBETT

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bobby Berger says he's just a guy who likes to sing, but his employer, the Baltimore Police Department, has banned Berger's off-duty performances as an Al Jolson imitator in blackface.

Now the American Civil Liberties Union has filed a $10,000 civil suit in federal court on Berger's behalf, saying the issue is free speech.

The local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in a city where blacks outnumber whites, calls the whole situation "outrageous."

The 53-year-old Berger, a 10-year veteran of the force, charges his superiors with attempting to run his life.

"They pay you for eight hours a day and tell you what you can do with the other 16," he said during an interview.

"He's got a right to say what he wants to when he's not on duty," said Barbara Mello, the ACLU's lawyer who is representing Berger.

SGT. MIKE BASS, a spokesman for the police department, said that as a matter of policy the department does not comment on pending litigation.

The NAACP has called Berger's performances "socially and racially reprehensible."

Jolson, a popular white entertainer in the 1920s, '30s and '40s, is best known for his starring role in "The Jazz Singer," the first talking film. In it he sang his famous version of "Mammy" in blackface.

Although Berger performed his Jolson review for more than four years, appearing in small clubs and bars in predominantly working-class, white neighborhoods, his problems surfaced in February when he brought his show to a downtown hotel.

His performances brought Berger national attention when the NAACP picketed the hotel.

The final performance was called off and on Feb. 19 the police department ordered Berger not to perform in blackface, saying, "This activity has become the subject of tremendous negative reaction from members of the public who perceive this to be demeaning to the black race." He was threatened with disciplinary action.

INJURED IN A car accident in 1979 and assigned to "light duty," Berger was reassigned to regular police work in February. He charges the reassignment was punitive.

> "There's nothing racial involved in it...with all the attention that's been drawn to it I still don't understand what the beef is. I'm just a guy singing a song, a song and dance man. As long as I'm singing I'm happy."

"I don't know every day when I go to work if I'll be suspended," said Berger.

Despite the order, Berger continues to perform his Jolson show at a suburban night club, although he does not accept payment for his performances because the police department denied him permission to seek outside income.

Berger can be found on weekend nights at the Four Seasons, where he sings the songs that made Jolson famous, including "Mammy."

"There's nothing racial involved in it ... with all the attention that's been drawn to it I still don't understand what the beef is," he said. "I'm just a guy singing a song, a song and dance man. As long as I'm singing I'm happy."

Although Berger also performs without blackface, singing a variety of popular music with his three-piece band, it is his Jolson routine that has made him well-known here.

His lawsuit argues that his act was extensively publicized in recent years and continually performed without incident.

Last year, Berger performed for six days at the Maryland State Fair without any complaints, he said.

BERGER'S MANAGER, Sammi Uhler, said of his black critics, "They are doing to him what was done to them which is discrimination in reverse."

Ms. Mello believes her client is caught in the crossfire involving long-standing tensions between the black community and the police department.

"The department is trying to overcome a bad image that it earned in the 1960s," she said.

Emmett Burns, NAACP regional director and one of Berger's most vocal opponents, has also been an outspoken critic of the police department.

"This activity has become the subject of tremendous negative reaction from members of the public who perceive this to be demeaning to the black race."

Phony ads educate answerers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service says its bogus newspaper advertisements are saving money for people who answered them in hopes of earning extra cash or shedding pounds.

In an experimental effort to educate the public about mail fraud, the Postal Service hired more than 140 readers into answering phony ads run in 30 newspapers in three states.

The ads promoted a work-at-home plan claiming to generate $750 monthly and a weightless scheme to crash pounds "like never before."

Kaye McClelland, consumer program specialist for the Postal Service's Pittsburgh division, said most respondents merely said they needed extra income, but "one fellow even asked me if there were any sales openings."

Instead of asking people to send money as shady advertisers might, McClelland returned their postage with a brochure warning about envelope-stuffing, chain letters and other possibly unscrupulous enterprises.

McClelland said that on Friday alone, he received 65 letters, most from women.

Nine out of 10 people who answered the ads responded to the work-at-home proposition, he said adding. The work at home and mail-fraud are the two single most prevalent problems, at least the last year that we've seen.

The Postal Service estimates that of $70 billion to $80 billion in mail order business nationwide last year, about $700 million was fraudulent. It's legal to answer ads for bogus money making schemes, but the con men behind them face up to five years in jail and $1,000 fines if convicted of mail fraud.

El Salvador representatives get credentials

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Right-wing supporters cheered Roberto d'Aubuisson as he took his turn among 60 newly elected deputies picking up credentials Friday for the Constituent Assembly that is to pave the way to representative government.

Rightists leaped to their feet as d'Aubuisson strode into the hall of the National Legislative Chamber, where the Central Elections Council handed out official credentials to winners of the March 28 election.

The general elections, observed by delegates from many countries, were conducted as part of an effort to end the 2½-year-old guerrilla war between leftists and the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta.

The applause for d'Aubuisson was sustained, the longest given any of the deputies-elect, and cheers of "Viva d'Aubuisson" resounded in the chambers — empty since the national legislature was dissolved after the October 1979 coup.

The Constituent Assembly that is to pick an interim president and lay the groundwork for electing a national government is expected to be seated next week.

But it appeared doubtful that a coalition to the United States' liking would be formed to then to lead the assembly. None of the six parties that fielded candidates in the election won a majority of seats.

D'Aubuisson, once accused of plotting to overthrow the government and alleged to have ties to right-wing "death squads," emerged from the underground last fall to found the ultra-right National Republican Alliance (known by its Spanish acronym ARENA).

ARENA won 19 of the 60 seats, and was expected to play a leading role in the assembly. ARENA and four other rightist parties won a total of 36 seats.

The centrist Christian Democrats, whose leader Jose Napoleon Duarte is president of the current junta, won 24 seats. Although the Christian Democrats won more seats than the five other parties, they lack a majority.

Leftists boycotted the election and one rightist party did not win any seats.

D'Aubuisson was shadowed by a pack of reporters and photographers Friday morning. In brief remarks at one point, he said talks aimed at forming a new government were "going well."

He said progress might be more evident once the assembly is seated and negotiations are able to proceed among deputies themselves, rather than among the parties.

But Julio Samayoa, secretary general of the Christian Democrats, said there has been no progress.

The Christian Democrats say their support, about 40 percent of the popular vote, entitles them to more power in the government than the coalition of the rightist parties appear willing to deliver.

They say they will assume an opposition role if necessary.

The Reagan administration has told the parties that Congress may be reluctant to support a government that leaves out the Christian Democrats.

The Christian Democrats proposed appointing a new junta with three members, representing the Christian Democrats, the military and the conservatives. The military has not responded, but the right, with its powerful force in the assembly, has said it won't share power with the military.

The conservatives, who bill themselves as the "triumphant faction" inside the new government, be headed by a president and vice president.

Armando Calderon Sol, apparently is the major, if not only, block to the conservatives forming a government of their own and leaving the Christian Democrats out entirely.

At the credentials presentation Friday, ARENA deputies saluted and shouted "Present for the Homeland" when the name of David Joaquin Quinteros was called. Quinteros was found shot to death April 4, and his seat will be taken by the elected alternate deputy, Mario Enrique Alfaro Rosa.

The chamber observed a moment of silence for Quinteros.

Leftist guerrilla activity has been at a low level since the election. Observers say Easter Week may have been a factor, as most Salvadorans are devout Roman Catholics.

Channel Islands bring history to life for sightseer

By PRUDENCE HELLER

ST. PETER PORT, Guernsey, Channel Islands (AP) — Many Americans probably know the names of some of the islands in the English Channel without realizing it.

Jersey, Guernsey and Alderney cows are named after the Channel Islands, on which the strains were developed.

Agriculture is big business in the Channel Islands — not only dairying, but growing flowers and vegetables.

The word "Guernsey" derives from the old Norman "Grenezay" ("Green Isle"), and this tells you something else about the islands. They're nearer to the French coast than they are to England. Alderney is only nine miles from France.

Day-trippers come over to Jersey from St. Malo on the hydrofoil — to shop in the duty-free markets and sun on the beaches. Some of the islanders still speak a Norman patois.

The islands were part of William the Conquerer's Duchy of Normandy when he crossed the English Channel (Battle of Hastings, 1066) to become King William I of England. They remained loyal to the Crown when King John of England lost the rest of Normandy in the early 13th century. But they have their own parliaments, currency and postage.

The vacationer is reminded of history everywhere he goes — by forts, castles, caves used by smugglers of yore, and bunkers left behind by the German occupiers of World War II.

But there's much more than that — including beaches for every taste, and a warmer, sunnier climate than the British and others who vacation here often find back home.

On the island of Sark, two square miles in size, you have to be sure-footed to reach the rock-and-sand beaches, down winding, wooded trails. Five people is a crowd down there. Up above, you'll have explored the farms and other sights on foot, horseback or a bike, or by horse-cart. No cars allowed.

Sark is ruled in feudal style by a line of hereditary seigneurs dating back to the days of Queen Elizabeth I of England.

Jersey is the biggest of the Channel Islands — 45 square miles. At St. Brelade's Bay, there's a big, sandy beach with a boardwalk lined with little stores and lots of people, strolling along as they eat cones of rich Jersey ice cream, or sitting taking tea in the sun. But elsewhere — at l'Etaq, for instance — you can have a beach almost to yourself. And the same can be said for the other islands.

Jersey is where Lillie Langtry, the actress known for her beauty and her affair with King Edward VII, was born.

The port of Gorey, in Jersey, is dominated by Mont Orgueil Castle, with centuries of history — from 12th century St. Mary's crypt and 13th century St. George's Tower to Nazi bell bombs left over from World War II.

Looking at the present and future rather than the past is the zoo founded by the writer and wildlife expert Gerald Durrell on Jersey. It's a center of efforts to preserve endangered species by breeding them in captivity.

The French romantic author Victor Hugo lived and wrote in St. Peter Port, on Guernsey, for many years. You can visit his house. On Guernsey also is the "Little Chapel," so small people go into its rooms one at a time. It's made of shells and decorated bits of pottery — a labor of love by a monk who came to Guernsey from France at the beginning of this century.

But you'll also want to mix with today's islanders. To find out what they're doing, look in the local newspapers with their listings of poetry readings, concerts, polo games, family jogging jaunts and the like.

Jersey, Guernsey and Sark are the Channel Islands most frequently visited by tourists. But others, such as Herm and Alderney, are waiting to be explored, too.

All the islands are easy to reach from England or St. Malo, in France. There's air service from London and numerous other British cities, and boat and hydrofoil service from Portsmouth and Weymouth in England and from St. Malo.

Blind woman uses music to help mentally ill people

PEARL, Miss. (AP) — Jeanne Gallagher finds joy in her life helping people in her work and in her church, people she never has seen and never will.

Miss Gallagher has been "blind for all practical purposes" since birth and, barring a miracle, she will remain so. But it has not prevented her from earning a degree from St. Mary's College in South Bend, Ind., and forging a career as a music therapist.

Since October 1978, she has been working with patients at Mississippi State Hospital in Whitfield, and since June 1979, she has been minister of music at St. Jude's Church in Pearl.

A music therapist, she explains, uses music and himself or herself as tools to bring about a positive change in the behavior of a mentally ill patient.

"There are up days, and there are down days," she said. "And the patients don't really tell you of their progress."

But she says often it is obvious that the therapist has made some sort of breakthrough.

Miss Gallagher told of a recent session with a group that included a woman patient who had been totally uncooperative. In fact, she said, "about all the woman would do was curse at the others."

But the gratification in the job came recently when the woman suddenly took one of the percussion instruments she had previously ignored and began playing along with the others, with a "big grin on her face."

Miss Gallagher says it is almost impossible to do any one-on-one therapy with the patients, since there are only two music therapists in the hospital, which has about 1,700 patients. Mostly, she said, it is a job of providing musical recreation for them, with the hope that some of it touches a patient.

Music lovers from miles around come to hear Mighty Wurlitzer

NORTH TONAWANDA, N.Y. (AP) — Old-time music junkies from miles around find satisfaction in a grand old theater here, as organists still hold court every month on one of the world's remaining Mighty Wurlitzers.

"I guess I'm an old fogey, but I love it," said Bill Ackendorf, a self-described regular at the concerts. "I'm from the rock 'n' roll era, and I like that, but I like this, too."

From 1910 to about 1934, this Buffalo suburb was home to the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., which built the massive pipe organs for use in silent movie theaters.

Called "unit orchestras" then, the organs enabled theater managers to replace hard-to-find musicians with what amounted to a one-man band. With the advent of talking motion pictures, the organs faded in popularity.

At the Riviera Theater, a Wurlitzer installed in 1926 has three keyboards, about 3,000 pipes, 16 pedals, and 25 buttons controlling a host of independent instruments.

Along with 19 separate instrumental sounds — including drums, chimes, cymbals, marimbas, castinets, bells and a piano — are such "extras" as wolf whistles, the chirping of birds, a roaring ocean surf, the trotting of a horse and a Bronx cheer.

Since 1963, the Niagara Frontier Theater Organ Society has lovingly cared for the massive instrument, drawing performers from as far away as Germany, Australia, France, England and Japan, said Randy Piazza, its president and concert emcee.

At a recent concert, Betty Ackendorf said the usually packed house often included people from "a hundred-mile-radius, 50 percent with tape recorders in their laps."

Black students gaining on white students

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Black children closed the gap on whites in educational achievement tests during the 1970s, a new study of national test results says.

The relative improvement, the study's author says, may be tied to blacks' increased motivation to succeed.

"We can't point to school integration or busing or economic changes in black families or to the assimilation of minorities into society as causes of this," said Dr. Lyle V. Jones. "But all of these things together have created a different world for the black child who may be motivated to succeed in school because there are some career options available."

The study by Jones, a psychology professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is to be published in the April issue of Educational Researcher. It was based on tests by the National Assessment of Educational Progress from 1969 to 1980.

Overall, there was little change in test scores during the period. But the blacks students gained on white students.

At the credentials presentation Friday, ARENA deputies saluted and shouted "Present for the Homeland" when the name of David Joaquin Quinteros was called. Quinteros was found shot to death April 4, and his seat will be taken by the elected alternate deputy, Mario Enrique Amaya Rosa.

The chamber observed a moment of silence for Quinteros.

Leftist guerrilla activity has been at a low level since the election. Observers say Easter Week may have been a factor since most Salvadorans are devout Roman Catholics.

Bobby Berger performs his Al Jol trouble with his police superiors. The American Civil Liberties Union is backing his claim to free speech.

Policeman under fire because of Jolson act

By CHRISTOPHER CORBETT

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bobby Berger says he's just a guy who likes to sing, but his employer, the Baltimore Police Department, has banned Berger's off-duty performances as an Al Jolson imitator in blackface.

Now the American Civil Liberties Union has filed a $10,000 civil suit in federal court on Berger's behalf, saying the issue is free speech.

The local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in a city where blacks outnumber whites, calls the whole situation "outrageous."

The 33-year-old Berger, a 10-year veteran of the force, charges his superiors with attempting to run his life.

"They pay you for eight hours a day and tell you what you can do with the other 16," he said during an interview.

"He's got a right to say what he wants to when he's not on duty," said Barbara Mello, the ACLU's lawyer who is representing Berger.

SGT. MIKE BASS, a spokesman for the police department, said that as a matter of policy the department does not comment on pending litigation.

The NAACP has called Berger's performances "socially and racially reprehensible."

Jolson, a popular white entertainer in the 1920s, '30s and '40s, is best known for his starring role in "The Jazz Singer," the first talking film. In it he sang his famous version of "Mammy" in blackface.

Although Berger performed his Jolson review for more than four years, appearing in small clubs and bars in predominantly working-class, white neighborhoods, his problems surfaced in February when he brought his show to a downtown hotel.

His performances brought Berger national attention when the NAACP picketed the hotel.

The final performance was called off and on Feb. 19 the police department ordered Berger not to perform in blackface, saying, "This activity has become the subject of tremendous negative reaction from members of the public who perceive this to be demeaning to the black race." He was threatened with disciplinary action.

INJURED IN A car accident in 1979 and assigned to "light duty," Berger was reassigned to regular police work in February. He charges the reassignment was punitive.

> "There's nothing racial involved in it...with all the attention that's been drawn to it I still don't understand what the beef is. I'm just a guy singing a song, a song and dance man. As long as I'm singing I'm happy."

"I don't know every day when I go to work if I'll be suspended," said Berger.

Despite the order, Berger continues to perform his Jolson show at a suburban night club, although he does not accept payment for his performances because the police department denied him permission to seek outside income.

Berger can be found on weekend nights at the Four Seasons, where he sings the songs that made Jolson famous, including "Mammy."

"There's nothing racial involved in it ... with all the attention that's been drawn to it I still don't understand what the beef is," he said. "I'm just a guy singing a song, a song and dance man. As long as I'm singing I'm happy."

Although Berger also performs without blackface, singing a variety of popular music with his three-piece band, it is his Jolson routine that has made him well-known here.

His lawsuit argues that his act was extensively publicized in recent years and continually performed without incident.

Last year, Berger performed for six days at the Maryland State Fair without any complaints, he said.

BERGER'S MANAGER, Sammi Uhler, said of his black critics, "They are doing to him what was done to them which is discrimination in reverse."

Ms. Mello believes her client is caught in the crossfire involving long-standing tensions between the black community and the police department.

"The department is trying to overcome a bad image that it earned in the 1960s," she said.

Emmett Burns, NAACP regional director and one of Berger's most vocal opponents, has also been an outspoken critic of the police department.

"This activity has become the subject of tremendous negative reaction from members of the public who perceive this to be demeaning to the black race."

Senator wants members to clean up acts for TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — A noisy, unruly Senate with members milling around on the floor during roll call votes? That's the the usual scene now, but senators are considering sprucing up their act for television.

As part of a bill to permit TV coverage in the chamber, the Senate voted last week on a proposal by Sen. Jennings Randolph, DW.Va., to require senators to vote from their desks.

And Senate sources say there's a good chance Randolph's colleagues will go along — if only to put an end to his years-long practice of scolding the Senate for being out of order.

"It's not a role I relish," the 80-year-old Randolph told the Senate.

Senators now can vote from anywhere in the chamber. As the roll is called, members shout out their votes from various locations, with a large group usually congregated around the clerk's desk in the front of the chamber keeping track of the tally.

All that should change, especially if the Senate goes along with the proposal by Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., to permit TV cameras in the Senate, Randolph said.

"When that roll call comes, that's a very important decision-making process. There should be a quiet Senate saying yes or no on matters affecting millions of people in this country," he said.

Randolph called for a restoration of "good manners" in the chamber, claiming that in his 24 years of Senate service "I have seen a deterioration of the Senate...from its orderly conduct."

"It's something I feel very deeply about. Each senator should vote from his or her desk," he said.

"I wonder what people in the galleries really think (when they see) a milling about of senators on the floor," Randolph said. "Very valuable time is lost in this chamber when over and over again we try to restore order in this chamber."

For several years, Randolph has taken it upon himself to shout out, "Mr. President, the Senate is not in order" at such times. He told the Senate he doesn't want to have to keep doing this.

And while the outcome of the legislation to permit TV coverage of the Senate remained in doubt, Randolph's proposal seemed to be gaining broad bipartisan support.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., noted that the desks used by senators are the same ones that have been in the chamber for 120 years.

If Daniel Webster could vote from his desk when he represented New Hampshire in the 19th Century, then there's no reason why senators can't do the same in the latter part of the 20th Century, Moynihan told the Senate.

"The fact is that these desks are part of our history. We should maintain a modicum of decorum by voting from these desks."

One Senate Republican source said, "Randolph will probably get his way. A lot of senators will probably go along with him because they're tired of hearing him yell out for order in the Senate all the time."

Author's found way to make economics enjoyable

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — For most people, an anchovy is something found lying on top of a pizza, while grain is something found in amber fields.

They don't seem to have anything in common.

But there is a connection — a financial connection.

As writer Adam Smith explains it in his latest best-selling book, "Paper Money":

"In this case the anchovies swam away from the coast of Peru, no one knows where to, and the fish that ate the anchovies followed them, and the fishermen came back without the fish, and the European cattle feeders who normally used fish meal as feed switched to grain...The result was an explosion in grain prices."

THIS USE OF anecdotal material, nicely put and easy to follow, is one of the reasons for the popularity of Smith's four books that deal with the seemingly arcane world of economics, a subject many shun as reading matter because they often find it difficult to understand.

Smith — a pseudonym used by 51-year-old George J. W. Goodman — says one reason much of this kind of writing is difficult to follow is that the person who writes it is "an observer."

"When I first began writing," he says, "I did so as a participant and that let my words carry the emotion and knowledge that you don't get by being an observer and keeping a distance.

"Another thing that makes some of this writing difficult to grasp is the use of jargon. Jargon is something that's taught and some of the people who learn it don't break it down or explain it for the people who don't know it.

"What I try to do is write clearly and relatively simply. I try to tell stories. You can't just assemble from passive materials such as books and articles. You have to make yourself a quasi-expert on whatever it is you are writing about.

"Sure, you have to read a lot, but you've also got to get out there and talk a lot to a lot of people. If you're writing about oil, you talk to Arabs.

"In 'Paper Money,' I discuss housing. I went through mounds of papers to get information, but I also got out there and gathered stories and anecdotes to liven up that material. I went out and looked at houses and talked to the people who bought and sold them."

SMITH'S APPROACH to writing about the economic scene was sort of a roundabout one.

"I wrote a lot of fiction when I was an undergraduate at Harvard," he recalls. "Then I went to Oxford (as a Rhodes scholar) and wrote a novel while I was there. It was published, and I later wrote three more novels."

While serving in the Army during the 1950s, he wrote some non-fiction pieces — one was about kite flying in Thailand — and sent them to The New Yorker magazine. He says the money he got from these articles he invested in the stock market, "and by the time I got back it had tripled."

"This interested me," he recalls with a smile. "I decided to learn all I could about this. I worked for a financial magazine and then I went to work for a stock market security analyst who took me under his wing and eventually let me run a mutual fund."

He says the idea of writing about the financial world came to him at a meeting of security analysts. Smith says he found some of the goings-on "so funny I decided to write it up. I submitted the article under the name of 'Procrustes,' but the magazine said that sounded too much like a pseudonym and ran the piece under 'Adam Smith.'

"IT WAS well-liked. I did a number of others and eventually I got around to writing the books."

Shelter from the fallout storm available

By MIKE GIULIANO
Hearst Feature Service

Not everyone will have to flee the cities of the United States to avoid the horrors of a nuclear war.

The current international tension and nuclear rhetoric have prompted several new companies to market residential shelters. Homeowners can pick from several firms selling fallout shelters.

For the past five years, Calvin Zehring has run the Nuclear Fallout and Bomb Shelter Supply and Construction co. in Muncie Valley, Pa. For $13,900 he sells a galvanized steel fallout shelter that resembles a giant pipe. The shelter, which is 16 feet long, 11 feet wide and 7 feet high, is buried completely in the ground and has an escape hatch at the top.

Zehring, who would not say how many of these fallout shelters he has sold also sells dehydrated food and air filtration systems.

Thomas Nieman of Denver, Colo., author of "Better Read (sic) Than Dead," said that fallout shelters such as Zehring's greatly improve one's chance of surviving a nuclear holocaust.

"Living in the nuclear age," Nieman said, "each individual has to decide how to prepare himself in case of nuclear attack and fallout."

He said building or finding an adequate fallout shelter is crucial, and he also recommends keeping a 4- to 5-pound survival kit containing plastic bags to cover yourself, burn ointment, quick-drying glue to apply to cut arteries, water, dehydrated mashed potatoes, a pocket knife and a flashlight.

For survivors who want company, a firm called Terene Ark I in LaVerkin, Utah, has built a community of underground fallout shelters there. So far, 65 of the 240 two- and three-bedroom underground condominium units have been sold at prices ranging from $25,000 to $97,000.

The condos have 8-inch thick concrete walls and are completely underground. Because there are no windows the sale price includes the outdoor painting of your choice in the spaces where the windows would be.

End Time Foods Inc. of Richmond, Va., provides dehydrated canned goods that manager Michael Heflin said have a shelf life of up to 20 years.

The company also sells a year-long supply for a family of six in what Heflin calls a "module" — 66 gallon-size cans of dehydrated food that he said provides an average of 1,000 calories a day for each person. Modules range in price from $800 for an economy module to $1,360 for the gourmet module.

Last year, he said, End Time sold 65 modules.

Heflin said the firm was started six years ago with a premonition after his "Pentacostal grandmother had a vision telling her to preserve food because of dangers facing the earth."

Coppola selling production company for needed cash

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Francis Ford Coppola, the maverick filmmaker who gambled millions on his Las Vegas romance "One From The Heart" and saw it fizzle at the box office, is selling his Hollywood studio because his production company needs cash.

The company says it is seeking a minimum of $20 million — but expects much more — for Zoetrope Studio, which consists of nine sound stages spread over 8.66 acres. The company itself, called Zoetrope Studios, will continue to produce movies at other locations.

Coppola, director of the Academy Award-winning "Godfather" series and the costly but successful "Apocalypse Now," bought the studio in 1980 for $6.7 million. He hoped to make it a place to develop new techniques, including integration of high-resolution video into filmmaking.

Zoetrope president Robert Spiota said the studio was up for sale because of "the high demand for studio space" and because of a "cash crunch" caused by the box office disappointment of Coppola's $26 million musical, "One From the Heart."

He said the sale would not mean a cut in film production, calling the facilities "a great adventure" that became a luxury.

"We need to get rid of some real estate, and the studio is the biggest piece of it and the most liquid of our assets," Spiota said. "We can function without a studio, as we did for 12 years."

Coppola was in Oklahoma directing "The Outsiders" for release by Warner Bros. and was not available for comment, said Bruce Feldman, studio public relations spokesman.

The move was the latest Hollywood belt-tightening because of a poor box-office showing. TransAmerica Corp. sold United Artists to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer last year after UA's "Heaven's Gate" bombed.

Spiota said the Zoetrope studio was being offered for public bid because "you can spend a lot of time structuring deals in this town that don't materialize."

Bids will be accepted until May 26. "We're looking for a lot of cash," Feldman said. "Other than that terms will be subject to negotiation."

Spiota said Warner Bros. Pictures — which paid $35 million for the Goldwyn Studios in 1980 — was interested, but Robert Daly, Goldwyn's chairman of the board, declined comment. The Burbank Studios, where Warners is located, is filled to capacity.

"Studio space is now tight but not critical," said Jerry Greenberg, a vice president of 20th Century-Fox Studios. Fox is expected to sell its studio in the future for conversion into condominiums, a shopping center and office buildings.

Hollywood studios are filled by regular network television work and by video production for cable TV. There has been a trend toward more shooting in studios, after years of emphasis on location filming. Increased use of special effects also requires more studio space.

Reagans take deductions for gowns given to charity

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Reagan reported earnings of $418,826 in 1981 and paid nearly 40 percent of that on federal income tax, their joint return showed Friday. The first family also claimed deductions for what it said were thousands of dollars worth of gowns given to charity.

The return, released by the White House a day after the filing deadline for most Americans, showed that more than half the first couple's income came from a blind trust Reagan set up and from interest and dividends.

They claimed nearly $12,000 in deductions for contributions to charity, half of that for gowns Nancy Reagan reported she gave to museums. The Reagans' accountant said Mrs. Reagan had the gowns before her husband became president.

It was revealed some months ago that Mrs. Reagan had been wearing clothes she received from various American designers but did not pay for. Her office characterized the dresses and gowns as loans and said she planned to pass them along to museums.

Although some tax attorneys contend the new gowns should have been listed as income, the Reagans' return does not mention them.

Reagan, whose salary as president is $200,000 a year, reported receiving $189,167 in wages from the U.S. government (He was a private citizen until Jan. 20, 1981.) and $42,635 in royalties, advances and payments for "past writings and from past radio, acting or other appearances."

He said he received $66,558 from his blind trust and $51,482 in delayed payments on the sale of some property several years ago.

He also received a pension of $22,197 as a former governor of California.

Roy D. Miller, the Los Angeles accountant who prepared the tax returns, said in a telephone interview that a $5,930 deduction for "contributions other than cash" was for the donations of clothing by Mrs. Reagan on Jan. 5, 1981, before she moved into the White House. The donations were to Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising Museum and the Los Angeles Country Museum of Art.

MILLER SAID an additional $5,965 which Reagan claimed in cash contributions was donated to unspecified churches and public charities.

Miller said he had a record of the recipients, but he refused to identify them.

The president told a news conference on Jan. 19 that he believes in giving a tenth of his income to charity but that his tax returns don't reflect that because much of the money he gives away is to individuals and is therefore not deductible.

"My conscience is clear as to what I have been giving," Reagan said.

"I realize that some have noticed that there seemed to be a small percentage of deductions for worthwhile causes, and that is true," Reagan said. "And I'm afraid it will be true this year because I haven't changed my habits. But I also happen to be someone who believes in tithing — the giving of a tenth. But I have for a number of years done some of that giving in ways that are not tax deductible with regard to individuals that are being helped.

"And I'm afraid that to avoid future questions of this kind, maybe beginning this year, I'm going to have to start publicly doing some things."

The combined cash and clothing contributions constitute 2.8 percent of the Reagans' total income. In 1980, Reagan's deductible contributions were 1.4 percent of his $228,000 income in 1980, and in 1979, they were 0.8 percent.

White House spokesmen have refused to identify any of the individuals to whom Reagan said he gave money.

DEPUTY PRESS secretary Larry Speakes said, "It would be the grossest invasion of privacy to publish someone's name. The president has sought to do it on a personal and private basis, and that's the way he would like to keep it."

White House officials said Mrs. Reagan received "on loan" thousands of dollars worth of free designer clothing last year. Some tax lawyers have suggested that the value of the outfits should be treated as taxable income for the first family.

The tax lawyers said that under existing legal precedent, the Reagans might be required to pay taxes on the value of the clothing because it was donated by designers who stood to gain publicity.

Binder to handle Williams appeal

ATLANTA (AP) — Alvin Binder, the Mississippi lawyer who defended Wayne Williams during his nine-week murder trial, was appointed along with an Atlanta attorney Friday to handle Williams' state-financed appeal.

Binder and Lynn Whatley were appointed by Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper, who on Thursday declared Williams indigent and therefore eligible to use public funds in his appeal.

Although Whatley was not involved in the murder trial, he has been representing Williams since his Feb. 27 conviction.

Williams, 23, a free-lance photographer and self-styled talent promoter, was convicted on two murder charges and given two consecutive life sentences.

Black students gaining on white students

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Black children closed the gap on whites in educational achievement tests during the 1970s, a new study of national test results says.

The relative improvement, the study's author says, may be tied to blacks' increased motivation to succeed.

"We can't point to school integration or busing or economic changes in black families or to the assimilation of minorities into society as causes of this," said Dr. Lyle V. Jones. "But all of these things together have created a different world for the black child who may be motivated to succeed in school because there are some career options available."

The study by Jones, a psychology professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is to be published in the April issue of Educational Researcher. It was based on tests by the National Assessment of Educational Progress from 1969 to 1980.

Overall, there was little change in test scores during the period. But the blacks students gained on white students.

Channel Islands bring history to life for sightseer

By PRUDENCE HELLER

ST. PETER PORT, Guernsey, Channel Islands (AP) — Many Americans probably know the names of some of the islands in the English Channel without realizing it.

Jersey, Guernsey and Alderney cows are named after the Channel Islands, on which the strains were developed.

Agriculture is big business in the Channel Islands — not only dairying, but growing flowers and vegetables.

The word "Guernsey" derives from the old Norman "Grenezay" ("Green Isle"), and this tells you something else about the islands. They're nearer to the French coast than they are to England. Alderney is only nine miles from France.

Day-trippers come over to Jersey from St. Malo on the hydrofoil — to shop in the duty-free markets and sun on the beaches. Some of the islanders still speak a Norman patois.

The islands were part of William the Conquerer's Duchy of Normandy when he crossed the English Channel (Battle of Hastings, 1066) to become King William I of England. They remained loyal to the Crown when King John of England lost the rest of Normandy in the early 13th century. But they have their own parliaments, currency and postage.

The vacationer is reminded of history everywhere he goes — by forts, castles, caves used by smugglers of yore, and bunkers left behind by the German occupiers of World War II.

But there's much more than that — including beaches for every taste, and a warmer, sunnier climate than the British and others who vacation here often find back home.

On the island of Sark, two square miles in size, you have to be sure-footed to reach the rock-and-sand beaches, down winding, wooded trails. Five people is a crowd down there. Up above, you'll have explored the farms and other sights on foot, horseback or a bike, or by horse-cart. No cars allowed.

Sark is ruled in feudal style by a line of hereditary seigneurs dating back to the days of Queen Elizabeth I of England.

Jersey is the biggest of the Channel Islands — 45 square miles. At St. Brelade's Bay, there's a big, sandy beach with a boardwalk lined with little stores and lots of people, strolling along as they eat cones of rich Jersey ice cream, or sitting taking tea in the sun. But elsewhere — at l'Etaq, for instance — you can have a beach almost to yourself. And the same can be said for the other islands.

Jersey is where Lillie Langtry, the actress known for her beauty and her affair with King Edward VII, was born.

The port of Gorey, in Jersey, is dominated by Mont Orgueil Castle, with centuries of history — from 12th century St. Mary's crypt and 13th century St. George's Tower to Nazi bell bombs left over from World War II.

Looking at the present and future rather than the past is the zoo founded by the writer and wildlife expert Gerald Durrell on Jersey. It's a center of efforts to preserve endangered species by breeding them in captivity.

The French romantic author Victor Hugo lived and wrote in St. Peter Port, on Guernsey, for many years. You can visit his house. On Guernsey also is the "Little Chapel," so small people go into its rooms one at a time. It's made of shells and decorated bits of pottery — a labor of love by a monk who came to Guernsey from France at the beginning of this century.

But you'll also want to mix with today's islanders. To find out what they're doing, look in the local newspapers with their listings of poetry readings, concerts, polo games, family jogging jaunts and the like.

Jersey, Guernsey and Sark are the Channel Islands most frequently visited by tourists. But others, such as Herm and Alderney, are waiting to be explored, too.

All the islands are easy to reach from England or St. Malo, in France. There's air service from London and numerous other British cities, and boat and hydrofoil service from Portsmouth and Weymouth in England and from St. Malo.

Blind woman uses music to help mentally ill people

PEARL, Miss. (AP) — Jeanne Gallagher finds joy in her life helping people in her work and in her church, people she never has seen and never will.

Miss Gallagher has been "blind for all practical purposes" since birth and, barring a miracle, she will remain so. But it has not prevented her from earning a degree from St. Mary's College in South Bend, Ind., and forging a career as a music therapist.

Since October 1978, she has been working with patients at Mississippi State Hospital in Whitfield, and since June 1979, she has been minister of music at St. Jude's Church in Pearl.

A music therapist, she explains, uses music and himself or herself as tools to bring about a positive change in the behavior of a mentally ill patient.

"There are up days, and there are down days," she said. "And the patients don't really tell you of their progress."

But she says often it is obvious that the therapist has made some sort of breakthrough.

Miss Gallagher told of a recent session with a group that included a woman patient who had been totally uncooperative. In fact, she said, "about all the woman would do was curse at the others."

But the gratification in the job came recently when the woman suddenly took one of the percussion instruments she had previously ignored and began playing along with the others, with a "big grin on her face."

Miss Gallagher says it is almost impossible to do any one-on-one therapy with the patients, since there are only two music therapists in the hospital, which has about 1,700 patients. Mostly, she said, it is a job of providing musical recreation for them, with the hope that some of it touches a patient.

Music lovers from miles around come to hear Mighty Wurlitzer

NORTH TONAWANDA, N.Y. (AP) — Old-time music junkies from miles around find satisfaction in a grand old theater here, as organists still hold court every month on one of the world's remaining Mighty Wurlitzers.

"I guess I'm an old fogey, but I love it," said Bill Ackendorf, a self-described regular at the concerts. "I'm from the rock 'n' roll era, and I like that, but I like this, too."

From 1910 to about 1934, this Buffalo suburb was home to the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., which built the massive pipe organs for use in silent movie theaters.

Called "unit orchestras" then, the organs enabled theater managers to replace hard-to-find musicians with what amounted to a one-man band. With the advent of talking motion pictures, the organs faded in popularity.

At the Riviera Theater, a Wurlitzer installed in 1926 has three keyboards, about 3,000 pipes, 16 pedals, and 25 buttons controlling a host of independent instruments.

Along with 19 separate instrumental sounds — including drums, chimes, cymbals, marimbas, castinets, bells and a piano — are such "extras" as wolf whistles, the chirping of birds, a roaring ocean surf, the trotting of a horse and a Bronx cheer.

Since 1963, the Niagara Frontier Theater Organ Society has lovingly cared for the massive instrument, drawing performers from as far away as Germany, Australia, France, England and Japan, said Randy Piazza, its president and concert emcee.

At a recent concert, Betty Ackendorf said the usually packed house often included people from "a hundred-mile radius, 50 percent with tape recorders in their laps."

Cactus Webb, the Searchlight, Nev., trashman, lives in the city dump, but not without certain comforts; his open-air bedroom has a telescope.

Cactus Webb sees life from desert home

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

SEARCHLIGHT, Nev. — His name is Cactus Web, and he sleeps in an iron bed on a platform atop a 20-foot tower in the desert on the outskirts of this small Nevada town.

"Unbelievable, ain't it?" the 72-year-old desert-rat said of his open-air bedroom.

"It's hotter 'n hell out here in summer. I built the tower to escape the heat. The farther up you get off the ground the cooler it gets."

Cactus Web has a telescope. From his airy lair he watches rattlers and other varmints slithering across the desert floor. Through the spyglass he keeps track of what's going on in town.

The tall, spindly desert denizen with shoulder-length hair and a long beard was christened Linwood Sampson Webster.

But evrybody calls him Cactus Web, a name he came by because he lived for years off wild cactus plants, so he says. Other favorites of his diet, he insists, are:

"Coyote tongue. Snake eyes. Snail ears. Catfish guts."

Cactus Web is a gambler, prospector, poet, cowboy and junkman.

"God almighty, I'm a gamblin' man," Cactus Web said. "I'm way ahead of the game. I ain't lost my shirt, yet." (Poker is his game.)

He says there's a bonanza waiting to be plucked on his mining claims — copper, gold and silver.

Three jailed in Wood investigation

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Three of the five people indicted in the assassination of a federal judge almost three years ago were flown here Friday and jailed pending formal arraignment on April 28.

Bail in excess of $1 million was set for two of the three. The remaining two have yet to be transferred from prisons where they are serving sentences.

A federal grand jury indicted imprisoned drug trafficker Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra and convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson on Thursday for the shooting death here of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The panel also indicted Chagra; his wife, Elizabeth, 28; his brother, Joe, 35, and Harrelson, 43, for conspiracy to murder a federal judge and accused the three Chagras, Harrelson and his wife, Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, 41, with obstruction of justice in the investigation of the slaying.

Joe Chagra, an El Paso attorney, appeared Friday before U.S. Magistrate Robert O'Connor and was sent to the Federal Correctional Institute at Bastrop in lieu of $1.6 million bond.

Mrs. Chagra was ordered held in lieu of $1.1 million bond and Mrs. Harrelson in lieu of $250,000 and both were taken to the Bexar County Jail late Friday.

U.S. Marshal Bill Jonas told reporters that Harrelson, the alleged triggerman in the May 29, 1979, killing of Wood, would be transferred early next week to federal custody. Harrelson is serving 40 years in state sentences at the Texas Department of Corrections near Trinity.

Jimmy Chagra, 37, a high-stakes gambler who allegedly paid Harrelson $250,000 to kill Wood, will be brought to San Antonio from the federal penitentiary at Marion, Ill., before the arraignment, probably within a week to 10 days, Jonas said.

The indictments culminated a massive three-year investigation into the slaying of Wood, 63, who was shot in the back with a single rifle bullet outside his San Antonio home. He was the first federal judge to be assassinated in this century.

The indictment alleged Jimmy Chagra hired Harrelson to kill Wood because he feared a stiff sentence on a narcotics case pending in Wood's court. Chagra subsequently was convicted and sentenced by another judge to 30 years without parole.

Jonas told reporters "special considerations" would be made to ensure that Jimmy Chagra and Harrelson did not escape.

The obstruction of justice count in the indictment alleged the Chagras and Harrelsons conspired to break Jimmy Chagra and Harrelson out of jails.

That count also alleged Harrelson and Jimmy Chagra plotted to kill or "corruptly discredit" co-defendants or witnesses who might testify against them.

O'Connor appointed local attorney Charles Campion to represent Mrs. Harrelson after she signed a statement that she had no job, no income and no assets.

Campion said he considered Mrs. Harrelson's bond to be "excessive, because this defendant's maximum exposure (sentence) would be five years and a $10,000 fine." He said he would file a motion next week to reduce the bond.

Attorney Charles Lieck, standing in for Joe Chagra's lawyer, Billy Ravkind, said a motion already had been filed to reduce the $1.6 million bond to $250,000, which he said Chagra could post. And he said Ravkind had flown to El Paso to meet with his client Friday, because federal agents hadn't told him they were flying the Joe Chagra and his wife aboard a U.S. Customs plane to Kelly Air Force Base here.

Harrelson's lawyer, Bob Tarrant, said Friday his client cannot get a fair trial in San Antonio because of the publicity surrounding the investigation and he would seek a change of venue.

Mrs. Chagra appeared without an attorney, but said lawyer Warren Burnett of Odessa would represent her in the future.

Jo Ann Harrelson, 41, wife of convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson, is led from a plane at the San Antonio International Airport Friday. She was jailed on charges she conspired to obstruct justice in the grand jury investigation of U.S. District Judge John Wood's murder in 1979.

Hinkley claims not shooting at president

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr. has claimed he was not aiming at President Reagan when he shot him nearly 13 months ago, but was trying to hit his limousine, the government revealed Friday night.

Prosecutors disclosed the information in a legal brief filed in U.S. District Court in an effort to have a federal judge approve its plans to show a jury slow-motion videotape of the March 30, 1981 shooting.

Hinckley's lawyers have objected to the government's plan to introduce the tape and other evidence, such as testimony of at least some of the victims, on grounds that the evidence would inflame the jury and prejudice Hinckley's case.

"The videotapes are the best evidence of exactly how the crime was committed — showing where Mr. Hinckley was aiming, how he was shooting and how it happened that the other victims were shot if Mr. Hinckley was trying to shoot the president," the prosecution's legal papers said.

"The use of different speeds is solely for the purpose of allowing the jury to perceive to the fullest extent possible what happened."

When this is done, the jury is better equipped to evaluate the claim, advanced by Mr. Hinckley that he was not trying to shoot the president, but rather trying to hit the limousine. If the jurors can see the crime as it actually occurred, and then view the videotape in slow motion, they can decide for themselves the validity of this claim."

Hinckley is scheduled to go on trial April 27 for the shooting of Reagan, White House press secretary James Brady and two law enforcement officers. Hinckley has admitted shooting the four men, but has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

The prosecutors, who still must prove to a jury that Hinckley was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, said the videotape is among the evidence necessary to show jurors that Hinckley intended to shoot the president and had criminal responsibility for his actions.

If Hinckley can show that he was insane at the time of the shooting, he would not be criminally responsible for the crime and could be sent to a mental institution instead of a prison.

The government also asked U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker to allow introduction of enlarged photographs of shooting targets found in Hinckley's room in the home of his parents in Evergreen, Colo., home, as well as the targets themselves.

The targets, the government argued, will show that Hinckley was "more accurate with the .22 which he ultimately used in his assault upon the president."

Cow catcher

By ANN JAPENGA
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — When a cattle truck overturned on the Golden State Freeway on Nov. 1, a CB radio squawked in Wild Bill Ruehle's pickup truck. His handle: Cowcatcher.

Ruehle wheeled the truck back to his Rocker B ranch in Beaumont, about 50 miles east of here, and, with the help of a cowboy on call for such emergencies, loaded horses, portable corrals and chutes into a trailer.

The partners arrived at the scene of the wreck to find chaos. Civilians and would-be cowboys had ditched their cars and were racing around, scaring the beasts. Twenty-four dogcatchers helplessly trotted after escaped cattle, Ruehle said. And Highway Patrol officers, who described the "gentle country cattle" as "raging Brahman bulls," fired guns wildly at the animals.

Ruehle saddled his horse and rode up to the cattle, roping them calmly and leading them away, docile as house cats.

Freeway cattle-roping is Ruehle's specialty. It says so on his business card: "Wild Cow Catchin'. Specializing in Freeway Cattle Truck Wrecks." In 30 years in the business, he figures he has lassoed 10,000 head on the Southern California freeways.

But never had he seen a mess like this one. The Highway Patrol ordered him off the freeway. The Los Angeles Police Department escorted him back on. He was later reprimanded in writing by the CHP for obstructing traffic and interfering with their work.

"I don't care if I catch any more cattle or not," he said recently. "I guess all these know-it-alls are going to bungle the business."

Ruehle was still smarting from indignities suffered by cowboy and cattle alike in the November wreck when he recently met a reporter for lunch at a downtown coffee shop. ("I eat a steak everyday," he explained.)

Around his neck Ruehle wore a grizzly bear tooth as big as his fork.

Ruehle gestured expansively and said: "I've roped runaways right here. On that bridge over the Los Angeles River. Down by City Hall."

LIKE ALL GOOD cowboys, Ruehle got his training in the rodeo. He was the last of nine children. His father, he said, was the "anonymous" composer of the "Cowboy's Prayer" and was often depicted in the Western paintings of Charles Russell. Ruehle's mother died when he was 16 and he hit the rodeo trail. "I always went to the pay window," he said.

Moving to Los Angeles in 1946, he made regular trips to Nevada where he roped wild mustangs and sold them with a "break-'em yourself" plan.

He also got a job as a buyer for a packing house. Now and then a tough old cow who was supposed to be dead crashed through a window to freedom, or jumped off the killing room floor, chasing butchers around.

When that happened, they called on Ruehle and paid him $20 a head to collect the dazed beasts from the streets around the Vernon packing house.

In 1948, Ruehle was called when a cattle truck overturned on the Grapevine, the winding, steep highway over the mountains north of Los Angeles. Since then he's been "the Freeway Cowboy."

Wild Bill's phone number is filed in the rolodex at CHP headquarters. All the truckers who work for packing plants also carry his card in case of an accident.

When a call comes in, Ruehle asks the location of the spill and the driver's name — he knows most of them personally. He doesn't go after farmers' cattle or horses. "Messing with another man's cattle is like messing with his wife." His fees — he now charges $150 a head — are paid by the packing houses, insurance companies.

He tells people at the scene of the wreck, "Keep away from the cattle." Left alone, the cows will mosey over to a dripping sprinkler and curl up on the center divider, staying there until someone they recognize as authority — a man on a horse — comes along.

"They're used to a horseman, see," Ruehle said. "You can ride right up to them on horseback." Through the years Ruehle has developed a good working relationship with various law enforcement agencies, including the Highway Patrol, which acknowledges his expertise and, usually, leaves him alone. The last time, however, something went askew.

"It's like those fellows graduated from a different academy," he said. "They were a different breed of cats. If you're a horseman," he added, "you'll find this out. You always run into macho men who wish they could ride a horse. Even Archie Bunker always wanted to ride." Ruehle says the offending officers "hate a horseman."

"They didn't even know how to shoot the animals right," Ruehle said. He and his partner told an officer: "See that foxtail on the cow's forehead. Hit him there and you'll kill him instantly."

THE COWBOYS walked away from the sound of gunfire and returned later to find the cow still alive, spitting blood, with its nose shot off. Ruehle finished the job.

Ruehle said later his kids could have handled the situation better.

The Freeway Cowboy has been married twice. His first wife had two children (by a previous marriage) whom he reared alone after their divorce.

"Laura, she's another Brooke Shields," he said proudly. If a mule train wrecks high in the mountains in a blinding blizzard, she knows just what to do, but "she's a lady," he said, and wants to be a model.

"My son always said he's gonna do just what his dad does. I say, 'Be a lawyer, doctor or piano player — don't be a cowboy because the world is changing. There's no place for a man like me."

While his working life can be rough — nights spent on a trail or in a lonesome cave — Ruehle's off-duty style is more elegant. "I don't drink. I don't like rough women — only ladies. I like marble and candlelight and fine clothes — I own 250 shirts."

His attorney is Melvin Belli. He reads the Wall Street Journal, carries a beeper and dates actresses whose identity he conceals — true to his gentleman's image.

His heroes are Ronald Reagan, Winston Churchill and James Watt ("He's a realist. He'll save the environment.") "I like Lawrence Welk, too. Put him on my list of favorites. I once rode 13 miles out of the mountains — and back — to see Lawrence Welk on TV."

Ruehle's Rocker B ranch, the last in a string of 31 ranches he's owned, was recently the scene of a large auction in which he sold off his farming implements and most of his livestock.

"I'm going to move to town," he announced.

Ruehle intends to work as a troubleshooter for ranchers. And he'll spend some time auditioning. Ruehle has appeared in a few television commercials and was once groomed to be the Marlboro Man. "But they took a guy that couldn't ride a horse," he said.

Despite some bitterness he still feels over his mistreatment on the Golden State Freeway cattle spill, Ruehle plans to keep enough horses in the city to continue freeway roping.

At 51, he is perpetually amused at the contradictory roles life has dealt him.

His sign-off: "Keep your ropes tight and good luck."

Back in 1966, this was the scene, top photo, as Wild Bill Ruehle chased down a runaway heifer on a West Covena, Calif., freeway off-ramp. Ruehle, whose specialty is roping runaway cattle from freeway truck wrecks, estimates that he's collected about 10,000 head during his 30-year career.

Siddon runs rehabilitation program for animals

By JOHN KENNEDY

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — Dave Siddon is at once the Florence Nightingale and Lowell Thomas for animals of the wild.

Siddon, an imposing man with a shock of white hair, has for about 40 years nursed, photographed and filmed wild animals around the world.

On six acres some 12 miles west of this southern Oregon town, Siddon is almost always nursing about two dozen maimed, crippled or battered wild birds that came out the worse in meetings with man and nature.

But one of his healthy birds, a magnificent red-tailed hawk named Happy, has picked up Siddon's fascination with film.

Happy has performed in dozens of commercials for Siddon, most notably as the bird that alights on the Buick logo in commercials as a symbol of that company's "free spirit."

Siddon also has used his birds in commercials for a wood products company, banks, an aircraft company, beer brewers, airlines and an after-shave company.

But he funnels money from commercials into his non-profit venture to rehabilitate wild animals and educate the public about their fragile existence on earth.

Siddon started filming the California condor in the 1940s when the massive bird was approaching the fringes of extinction.

In the 1960s, he sold some footage on a hawk in flight to a California savings and loan company. But he got mixed results from other commercial projects in those years.

In the early 1970s, he moved here from California and filmed a feature about an eagle, a cougar, a coyote and a little boy who returned to the wild. It failed to set any box office records. A few years later, Siddon launched Happy's career. Happy caught on.

The bird appears in four or more commercials a year for the company in a marriage of corporate image and high-flying ego.

"She got so good she could tell when the camera was running," says Siddon.

Filming has taken Siddon to Africa with Olivia Newton-John, where they released a cheeta. He has gone to Alaska, where he lived with Eskimos for six months, and to London, where he did a show with the late Dr. Louis Leakey, the noted archeologist and anthropologist.

But the 50-year-old Siddon has been trying to get away from the filming to concentrate on traveling education programs about the fragility of wildlife's environment.

He has federal permits that allow him to rehabilitate injured birds and animals brought to him by wildlife officers.

Siddon has treated about 370 birds and animals a year for the past 20 years. He invariably ends up each year with about a dozen too sick, maimed or tame to release in the wild.

Sometimes, they are good specimens for his traveling education shows. Now, he has two shows on the road. One includes an eagle, a red-tailed hawk, a long-eared owl and an American kestrel.

Another features vanishing species, in which he uses similar species as examples. One of them is a European ferret, a weasel-like critter that is considered one of the most dangerous in the United States.

The programs have kept school children agog in about 16 states.

"We'll eventually hit all 48 of the continental United States," says Siddon.

"We don't take anything out of the wild," he says. "We get everything we've got from accidents."

Siddon is an activist in preserving areas for wildlife. But he avoids the image of an environmental extremist.

"You can't save every rock and every tree. It's a series of compromises," he says. "Let's enjoy what we can and save what we can and recognize we've got to compromise."

Pilot climbs mountains for the beauty of sport

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — With his 8-week-old son cradled in one arm and his other hand gently maneuvering the baby bottle, David Saas is a dad with ambitions — and contrasts.

He can be tender enough to summon a baby's coos and brawny enough to challenge some of nature's most fierce tests.

This month he'll scale Mt. McKinley. In three years he'll tackle Mt. Everest. And after that — well, maybe it'll be toddler William's turn.

He'll be a mountain climber, too?

"You bet your life," Saas says with fatherly pride as vast as the Rockies.

A Continental Airlines pilot based in El Paso, Saas soars to the sky as often as he can — either on foot or by plane.

This week he'll be on the former as he and four others inch up Alaska's 20,320-foot Mt. McKinley, the highest peak in North America.

"For every climber, there's a different motive," Saas said.

Forget the old notion of climbing it because it's there.

"That was originated back in the '20s by a British climber who was eventually killed on Mt. Everest," he said. "I enjoy the beauty of it. It's a fairly unique sport."

It's also an athletic pursuit that balances agility, strength and endurance over a precipice of possible death.

The 45-year-old Saas trains hard to give himself the advantage in that balancing act. In addition to regularly lifting weights, he hikes up El Paso's Mt. Franklin about twice weekly, an eight-mile round trip, he said.

That regimen and a long history at the sport dating back more than two decades give the 5-foot-10, 175-pound athlete a strong foothold in climbing mountains.

So far, he's matched his skills against lethal terrain in New Zealand, Switzerland and South America and come out on top. In 1978, he mounted Argentina's Mt. Aconcagua, a 22,835-foot peak that lays claim to being the highest point in the Western Hemisphere.

Wife Patsy — "She's very, very tolerant. She understands why I do it" — has ventured on some of the climbs with him, not always with satisfactory results. In 1980, the couple were part of a team tackling Washington's Mt. Rainier when Patsy got "mountain sickness."

"We had to carry her down," Saas said.

That's one of the risks of the avocation, caused by ascending too quickly. Another is the extreme temperature range. Mt. McKinley, for example, is only 100 miles from the Arctic Circle.

Finally, there's the pain of pushing your body to its farthest limits.

The surest way to get fired—if not hurt—is to venture into a "hard hat area" without a hard hat. After all, if you make your living in the construction trades you're expected to be equipped for your responsibilities.

Much of life is a hard hat area. You can't avoid every danger, escape every temptation, rise above every frustration, laugh off every disappointment. But you can take into life's danger zones the sort of spiritual equipment that others have found important, essential.

The one day of the week I set aside for worship gets me ready for my five, and sometimes six, days on the job. I look on my Christian convictions and my moral principles the way I look on my hard hat. God, like the foreman, expects me to be equipped for my responsibilities.

The Newspaper BIBLE

ANGELS, ANGELS, ANGELS--EVERYWHERE!

Suddenly, the angel was joined by a vast host of others--the armies of heaven--praising God:

"Glory to God in the highest heaven," they sang, "and peace on earth for all those pleasing Him."

When this great army of angels had returned again to heaven, the shepherds said to each other, "Come on! Let's go to Bethlehem! Let's see this wonderful thing that has happened, which the Lord has told us about."

They ran to the village and found their way to Mary and Joseph. And there was the baby, lying in a manger.

The shepherds told everyone what had happened and what the angel had said to them about this child.

All who heard the shepherds' story expressed astonishment, but Mary quietly treasured these things in her heart and often thought about them.

Then the shepherds went back again to their flocks, praising God for the visit of the angels, and because they had seen the child, just as the angel had told them.

Eight days later, at the baby's circumcision ceremony, He was named Jesus, the name given Him by the angel before he was even conceived.

When the time came for Mary's purification offering at the Temple, as required by the laws of Moses after the birth of a child, His parents took Him to Jerusalem to present Him to the Lord; for in these laws God had said, "If a woman's first child is a boy, he shall be dedicated to the Lord."

At that time Jesus' parents also offered their sacrifice for purification--"either a pair of turtledoves or two young pigeons" was the legal requirement.

Study says media people on whole more 'secular'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

An old rule of journalism is that a reporter should look at events with the eyes of the average reader, answering the questions and interests of the "Kansas City milkman," free of personal atttitudes.

It involves a kind of spiritual process, a self-detachment and identification with wider human concerns than one's own, but it comes automatically to the practiced hand.

The importance of the rule in the coverage of religion is pointed up by research into opinions of journalists who handle reporting for some major news media. The staffs were found generally not to share the public's degree of religious interest.

"THEY'RE VERY SECULAR," says Robert Lichter, a political scientist of George Washington University who made the study together with another political scientist, Stanley Rothman of Smith College.

Although the media people were found "much less religious than people in general," Lichter says, "that doesn't necessarily mean they don't do a fair job" — a matter dependent on the old reporting rule.

The study involved hour-long interviews with 240 editors and reporters for the New York Times, Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, Time, Newsweek, U.S. News and World Report, and the major television networks.

The objective was to discover the backgrounds, attitudes and views toward American society of those responsible for the content of the news output.

"A predominant characteristic of the media elite is its secular outlook," says a summary of findings published last fall in the journal, Public Opinion.

The report says only 8 percent of those interviewed go to church or synagogue weekly, compared with 41 percent of the American public. Eighty-six percent of the journalists seldom or never attend religious services, it was found.

Also, 50 percent of them disclaimed any religious affiliation, in contrast to 70 percent of the public claiming religious membership as found in Gallup polls.

Lichter says the generally non-religious aspect of the media people simply showed up in the data without looking for it. "We asked the standard things and it just jumped out at us," he says.

"It seems to be a cultural milieu which they reflect to a greater degree than the average citizen," he added in a telephone interview, "a cosmopolitan, Northeastern, liberal, highly educated point of view.

"They relate to the world differently than middle America."

HOWEVER, OTHER STUDIES of the general public find that just as large a proportion of the college-educated are religiously committed as those with less education.

The firms involved in the media study all have headquarters in the East, but their staffs come from across the country. The study was part of a continuing project by the two researchers examining outlooks of various occupations.

The journalists are predominatly white males in their 30s and 40s, apparently "typical of leadership groups throughout society," the report says, and one of the country's best-educated groups.

Describing them mostly as "ideolgically liberal," the report says they strongly support environmental protection, affirmative action, women's rights, homosexual rights and sexual freedom in general.

On various moral issues, their attitudes were found to differ sharply from those of the general public.

Fifty-four percent of the media staffs do not regard adultery as wrong, and only 15 percent see extramarital affairs as immoral, the report says.

In some lands, beliefs may cause trouble

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Upholding religious belief, particularly putting it into practice, is dangerous in many places, says a new survey on the state of religious freedom in the world.

Harassment, imprisonment, torture and killing of believers were cited on all seven continents, both in the East and West, both in Islamic states and in mainly Christian populations of Latin America.

"The past 12 months have been violent ones where religion is concerned," says the survey report, compiled by A.D. Magazine, published jointly by the United Church of Christ and United Presbyterian Church.

However, the report says growing attention to religious rights by cultural and other organizations indicates that the cause of religious freedom is looking up in the long run.

"Everywhere, excessive controls on religion are increasingly viewed as ethical aberration," says the report, written by James A. Gittings, a specialist on the subject.

Nevertheless, reviewing the cases in 1981 of governmental and police-military actions against believers, and in other instances, of religious groups against each other, the report says:

"Faithfulness to a religion can upon occasion carry heavy price tags of discrimination, pain, imprisonment and death, anywhere."

The report lists 13 nations as the "most repressive": Albania, North Korea, Guatemala, El Salvador, Iran, Ethiopia, the Soviet Union, China, Czechoslovakia, Saudi Arabia, Argentina, South Korea and Turkey.

New to the list, varying from a similar survey the year before, were Guatemala and El Salvador, where the report says the younger Catholic clergy are viewed "as the enemy" for their work with the poor.

Turkey also was added to the "most repressive" list for its restrictions on resurgent conservative Islamic customs, jailing those who disobey.

Listed as the "most free" countries were the Scandinavian nations, Switzerland, Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, West Germany, the United States, Canada, Japan, Austria and Italy.

"Citizens of these nations have cause to rejoice," the report says. "Their religious existences are far and away more free than anywhere else."

However, the report says the U.S. administration is displaying hostility to religion in some foreign policies, namely in Latin America.

There, the United States was given "black marks" for "willingness to ally itself, and to equip and advise, the police and armed forces of regimes that are openly engaged in the represssion of activist Christians."

Also, the United States was cited on a "cautions list" of places of potential erosions of religious liberty, claiming U.S. tendencies to "over-legislate" on cults and financial accountability of religious bodies.

Among countries described as "most violent" in repressing religion were Iran, for its jailings and execution of Baha'i leaders, Syria for slayings of Moslem fundamentalists, and some other countries of sectarian conflict, including Northern Ireland and Israel.

Since that service March 24, the second anniversary of the assassination of El Salvador's Archbishop Oscar Romero, the interfaith movement has spread, with houses of worship in many places declaring their doors open to Salvadoran refugees.

Churches open doors to refugees

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — About 100 churches across the United States have declared their buildings to be sanctuaries for Salvadoran refugees — a movement that began here and has spread widely.

Only six scattered churches were involved when the effort was launched three weeks ago at an ecumenical "Service of Solidarity" to protest deporation of Salvadorans, now estimated at 1,000 monthly.

"Sanctuary symbolizes the compassion of Christians for the desperate plight of refugees and the deep conviction their lives must be protected," said the Tucson Ecumenical Council.

Aggressor pilots better than best enemy pilots

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Capt. John Davee maneuvers his jet fighter until he catches an unwary American pilot squarely in his sights, then delivers a sobering radio message: "You're dead."

Wearing the shoulder patch of the 65th Fighter Weapons Squadron, a red star on a pale blue field, Davee is one of a select group of American pilots known as "aggressors."

They are masters in the "air-to-air arena," an unforgiving place where death can travel at supersonic speeds and a split second is a lifetime.

Four aggressor pilots from Nellis Air Force Base near Las Vegas, Nev., recently spent a week at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, hunting down their fellow officers in simulated attacks.

The aggressors give no quarter. The only noticeable departure from reality is the substitution of cameras for cannonfire.

Capt. Bob Zaehringer, an instructor pilot with D-M's 357th Tactical Fighter Training Squadron, flew against Davee. He will pass along what he's learned to the A-10 pilots he trains.

The aggressors "have got to be better than the best enemy pilots — if we're used to fighting the best, then second best isn't as tough," Zaehringer said.

There are only four aggressor squadrons in the Air Force — two overseas and two at Nellis — so most of their time is spent working with operational units.

Aside from their time in the air, the aggressors and their victims may spend hours talking about each mission and analyzing the films. The experience can be invaluable in adding to the "bag of tricks" at a pilot's disposal.

The A-10s, often flown in pairs above Tucson, are attack planes. They are designed to support ground forces by destroying enemy tanks, not for dogfights.

But they would have to fend off the attacks of enemy fighters on the way to their targets, and the aggressors give them a taste of what to expect.

The aggressors fly the Northrop F-5E, a small, lightweight fighter that can duplicate the performance of the Soviet-built MiG-21. The pilots are specially trained, and employ the tactics used by the Soviet-bloc nations.

Looking at films from an earlier practice mission, Zaehringer and Davee pointed out that an attacking fighter looks like a flyspeck at a distance of two miles, but can travel that distance in a few seconds.

A defending pilot must spot the attacker, determine its distance, course and speed, and then take defensive action.

The reaction must be instantaneous, Zaehringer said: "You don't have time to sit there and analyze it. If he was doing a head-on attack, he'd have a closing velocity of more than 1,000 mph."

Kraft admits he once doubted man landing

By PAUL RECER

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The man whose leadership repeatedly guided America to the moon and back says he once doubted it could be done.

Christopher C. Kraft Jr., the retiring director of the Johnson Space Center, said he was still trying to figure out how to safely send a man into orbit when President John F. Kennedy proposed a moon landing.

"I said, 'That guy's lost his mind.' That (a moon landing) was beyond my comprehension," Kraft said in an interview Thursday.

Today, he said, such a bold idea would not be as intimidating.

"You could name almost anything today and I'd say, 'Let's give it a try,'" he said. "That's the real legacy of Apollo — not that we landed a man on the moon but that we learned that if we set our minds to doing something we could do it. It was a very profound lesson for this county."

But, he said, the nation seems to lack the willingness that could carry the nation to a level of space expertise and provide a military invulnerability.

"It's unfortunate we are not willing to be a little more aggressive in space, both from a commercial and a defense point of view," Kraft said. "We somehow need to leap from the present concepts we have and decide what we need to do to checkmate those who would destroy us."

With such a determined effort, he said, "we could be there a lot sooner than we believe."

Kraft said he wasn't criticizing the Reagan administration but rather what he perceived as a national attitude.

Kraft announced Wednesday that he plans to retire after the fifth flight of the space shuttle Columbia, a revolutionary reusable spacecraft to which Kraft made key contributions. The flight is scheduled for November.

Kraft, 58, is the last member of the original group of aerospace engineers selected in 1958 to organize America's space effort.

He was primarily responsible for developing the system of men and computers that evolved into the Mission Control Center. He also developed management techniques that prepared both astronauts and ground personnel for the complex challenges of space flight.

Kraft said he has no employment plans after he retires, but he said he expects to find a new position.

Sinking of Titanic signaled end of Gilded Age

ED JAHN
Copley News Service

Early Thursday morning, a U.S. Coast Guard crew planned to bundle up, climb aboard a C-130 military aircraft and head out over the North Atlantic toward the Banks of Newfoundland.

Above the icy sea 1,600 miles northeast of New York, at precisely 41 degrees 46 minutes north and 50 degrees 14 minutes west, a crew member was to toss a wreath overboard.

It is a tradition in its 70th year. For somewhere 12,000 feet below the surface of the sea lies the Titanic, the behemoth luxury liner that sank on that date in 1912, taking with it the lives of 1,522 passengers and ending the Gilded Age.

Last Saturday, several hundred people gathered at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles. They sat down to a ceremonial meal of barley soup, roast sirloin with bernaise sauce, asparagus vinaigrette, carrots and peas.

That was the last meal for many of the victims the night the Royal Mail Steamship Titanic, the largest and most sumptuously appointed vessel put to sea at the time, struck an iceberg and foundered.

Paul Scripps of San Diego, Calif., associate editorial director of John P. Scripps Newspaper Group and a Titanic enthusiast, was among those at the anniversary dinner of the Oceanic Navigation Research Society, a group devoted to the mystique and lore attending the fate of the "unsinkable" ship.

The fascination goes beyond simple curiosity over a sensational disaster," says Scripps. "It was a collision of modern technology with the realization that there are limitations to the capability of science."

ALTHOUGH SCRIPPS has always been interested in ships and the sea, he also has a family tie to the disaster. His great grandfather was directly responsible for an immediate investigation into the greatest maritime disaster.

Michigan Sen. William Alden Smith was roundly criticized, especially by the British, for demanding and carrying out a Senate Commerce Committee hearing less than a week after a rescue ship bearing the 713 survivors reached port in New York.

"I remember him (the senator) as a very able and courageous man of that time," Marie McRae Temple of La Jolla, Calif., recalls. Temple married Smith's son, William Jr., after the investigation. Her husband died in 1919 from pneumonia contracted while he was an aviator in World War I.

"I remember that (Sen. Smith) brought his son from college to work with him in the investigation, but I was really too young (a teen-ager) to have remembered or realized the impact of what was happening then," she said.

She also wonders why Sen. Smith, a renowned politician of his time, is now a minor historical footnote despite his successful attempt to determine the Titanic's fate.

Temple's daughter, Marie Smith Wimner, also is a Titanic enthusiast and attended the anniversary dinner at the Biltmore. "Certainly the strong family connection has something to do with my interest," she said.

"But the whole tragedy of the finest possible liner sinking and the era of the great, lavish trans-Atlantic ships is fascinating," she explained.

Popular legends die hard and a great many myths and misconceptions were created in the wake of the disaster.

Motion picture shows to the contrary, the band did not play "Nearer My God to Thee" as the huge ship nose-dived beneath the waves. Witnesses recalled hearing a a medley of ragtime hits and then the Episcoplian hymn "Autumn" at the very end.

PERHAPS THE confusion over what tune the band was playing grew out of testimony in the Smith investigation.

Survivors in half-full lifeboats recalled singing "Nearer My God to Thee" to drown out the ghastly chorus of shrieks, wails and moans coming from a group of about 1,000 victims slowly freezing to death while hanging onto pieces of wreckage and floating in lifebelts.

"Not only did the band die that night," Scripps points out, "the event marked the last vestige of the centuries-old chivalric code of women and children first."

A disproportionate number of the ship's crew survived, however, and 60 percent of those in first class were rescued, while only 25 percent of the emigrants in steerage made it out alive.

The steamer Californian was a few miles away, but the radio operator was off duty and others aboard thought the Titanic's distress rockets were fireworks.

The Titanic was the state of the art in mass transportation when it was constructed for the British White Star Line with money from American tycoon J.P. Morgan.

At the time, it was the largest moving object ever built at 882 feet in length. By comparison, the Navy carrier Ranger, which until recently was docked in San Diego Bay, is 1,071 feet long.

Built with a double hull and watertight compartments, the Titanic also was the first large turbine-engine-powered ship when it began its fatal maiden voyage.

"IT WAS A million-to-one shot for that ship to sink," says Scripps. "So many dominoes had to fall, there was so much human error, and all this compounded to make the tragedy."

The North Atlantic, usually a turbulent and unpredictable waterway, was uncommonly calm that night, making icebergs difficult to distinguish among the reflections of the stars.

When the iceberg was finally sighted — the lookout in the crows nest hadn't been issued binoculars — the commanding officer made the worst possible mistake, Scripps explained.

Instead of maintaining speed and attempting to sidestep the iceberg, the officer stopped the newfangled turbines and tried to steer away from the hazard.

"It was a moment of panic and a costly error," he pointed out. The ship slowly turned at an angle as it approached the iceberg and with no power from a propwash to navigate, received a 300-foot-long gash along the prow that canceled the effectiveness of the watertight compartments.

"It could have gone head on into the iceberg and still come away without sinking," Scripps said. "I doubt someone could have duplicated the maneuver that sank it."

"That pulled the rug out from under all those people who had confidence in technology. What was never to have happened had just happened."

Finding the Titanic now and recovering the rumored hoard of diamonds and artifacts aboard would be difficult at best since the North Atlantic sea bottom is riddled with sunken ships from two world wars, and at 12,000 feet, the water pressure is 2,000 pounds per square inch, Scripps pointed out.

"AND EVEN IF it were found, the real importance is in history. It would be like exhuming the body of Lincoln."

The Titanic had on board President William H. Taft's chief adviser, numerous corporate heads, politicians, financiers, artists and entertainers — the jet set of the era. When they died, so did the Gilded Age.

Disaster psychologist Wyn Craig Wade theorizes that the modern age was signaled more by the sinking of the Titanic than World War I.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram
SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1981

Amarillo hands Midland first home defeat, 5-3

You can't win 'em all, but that was something Midland Cub Manager Brian Murphy already had discovered in San Antonio.

Amarillo's Gold Sox ended Midland's two-game home winning streak 5-3 before 1,737 fans at Cubs Stadium Friday night, striking early and then holding off the Bruins in the late innings.

The series resumes tonight at 7 p.m. and winds up Sunday with a 6 p.m. game.

JOE SCHERGER, who homered to right Thursday night, led off the third with a solo blast over the scoreboard in left-center to give the Sox a 1-0 lead. The blow so shook up starter Carlos Gil that he walked the next two batters, but then settled down to escape without any further damage.

Amarillo struck for two more runs in both the fourth and fifth innings for a 5-0 lead that was never seriously challenged, although Amarillo Manager Glenn Ezell was forced to employ three pitchers to keep the Cubs at bay.

A single by Gerry Davis, hitbatsman and single by Jeff Ronk produced one run and Gil forced in another with a couple of back-to-back walks in the fourth to make it 3-0.

In the fifth, James Steels singled, stole second and came home on a two-base throwing error by shortstop Dave Owen. Ronk then tripled for the second run, a blow that knocked Gil out of the game.

Kenneth Pryce did his job in relief, finishing with 4 1/3 innings of runless relief, but the Cubs just couldn't exploit their opportunities.

MIDLAND "chased" starter and winner John White in the sixth after spoiling his shutout with a run in the fifth on a walk to Bruce Chaney, Owen's second of three hits, another walk to load the bases and Mike Kelley's run-scoring grounder to short.

A one-out walk prompted Ezell to lift White in favor of Marty Kain, although the only hits White had allowed were two singles to Owen. However, he had walked six and thrown a lot of pitches. Kain gave up a run in the seventh when Owen singled, Henry Cotto doubled and again Kelley's infield grounder got the run home.

In the eighth, Midland loaded the bases on singles by Fritz Connally, Mike Diaz and a walk to Chaney, but again came away empty when Mike Couchee came in to get the final out.

In the ninth, a walk to Cotto, who moved to third on a passed ball and infield out, and a two-out single by Martinez made it 5-3, but Couchee caught Connally looking with a strike on the outside corner for the final out.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Connally's glove work around third again stood out for the Cubs. In the second, he ranged down the foul line to make a back bending catch of Ronk's foul pop...In the third, he dove to the line to spear Scherger's smash and scramble to the bag in time to force Brian Greer, a play that prevented a big inning...The Cubs turned two double plays and the Owen-Chaney combination continued to be a pitchers best friend...Lefthander Tom Spino probably will pitch for Midland tonight.

Atlanta Braves second baseman Glenn Hubbard tags out Art Howe after Howe tried to stretch a RBI single into a double in the fourth inning of Friday's game in the Astrodome. Watson posts 137 to take T of C lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson engineered a 2-stroke swing on the 17th hole and vaulted into a 1-shot lead with a 4-under-par 68 Friday after the second round of the $350,000 MONY-Tournament of Champions.

Watson, twice a winner of this exclusive event that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour events from the last 12 months, completed two trips over the 6,911-yard La Costa Country Club course in 137, seven shots under par.

With two rounds to go in the chase for a $63,000 first prize and one of golf's more important titles, Peter Oosterhuis held second at 138 after a second round 66, the best effort of the tournament.

"I'm pleased with the round," said the 6-foot-5 Oosterhuis, a transplanted Englishman now living in California. He scored his first North American triumph last year in the Canadian Open.

"I hit some good shots and followed through with my putting," said Oosterhuis, who led the British Order of Merit four consecutive seasons before joining the American tour in 1975.

First-round leader Lanny Wadkins retained the top spot through 16 holes of Friday's play, but made bogey-6 on the 17th hole while Watson, his playing partner, made birdie-4.

The 2-shot swing sent Watson to the top and dropped Wadkins back to third. He finished with a 72 and a 139 total, two off the pace.

It was three more shots back to a group of seven tied at 142. They included Ron Streck, Ray Floyd, J.C. Snead, Andy Bean, Tom Weiskopf, U.S. Open title-holder David Graham and Fuzzy Zoeller.

Streck had a second round 70. Floyd had to battle back from an 8 on the second hole to shoot a 71. Snead had the same. Bean, Weiskopf, Graham and Zoeller all matched par 72.

Defending champion Lee Trevino had a 72 and was at 143.

Craig Stadler, who won the Masters last weekend, played the front nine in 32, but went to a 40 on the back and was eight shots off the pace at 146.

"It was a better round today," said Watson, who dominated golf for four seasons as the leading money-winner and Player of the Year before his streak was interrupted last year.

"I'm surprised 7-under is leading the tournament," said Watson, already a two-time winner this season. "The golf course is not playing that difficult. And the conditions couldn't be better."

Wadkins had a 2-stroke lead at the start of the day's play and he and Watson matched 35s over the front.

But Watson closed to within one with a nine-iron shot to 30 inches on the 13th hole and moved into a share of the lead on the 16th, where he dropped an eight-foot putt.

On the 17th, Wadkins drove into the deep rough, moved the ball only 40 yards with his second shot, was short in three, chipped on and two-putted for bogey-6. Watson took advantage of the lapse and holed an 18-footer for the birdie that completed the 2-shot swing and gave him sole control of the lead.

Braves beat Astros 5-3, within one of NL record

HOUSTON (AP) — Brett Butler's two-run single highlighted a five-run sixth inning that carried the Atlanta Braves to a 5-3 victory over Houston and extended their unbeaten string to nine games, one shy of the National League record.

Atlanta's 9-0 record is one short the record set by the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers and two off the major league record of 11 straight by the 1981 Oakland A's.

Bruce Benedict doubled and Rafael Ramirez walked to start the Braves sixth, and after the runners advanced on a ground ball, Butler's full-count single off loser Nolan Ryan, 0-3, scored both base runners. Butler then stole second, went to third on a groundout by Glenn Hubbard and scored the third run on Ryan's wild pitch.

Dale Murphy walked and scored from third base on Bob Horner's double to left field, and Horner scored from second on relief pitcher Dave Smith's throwing error on a slow roller by Chris Chambliss.

Atlanta starter Rick Mahler lost his string of 26 consecutive shutout innings in the fourth when Tony Scott and Jose Cruz hit consecutive singles and scored on Alan Ashby's double to the warning track in left field.

Ashby went to third on Ray Knight's groundout and scored Houston's third run on Art Howe's single.

Cooper takes 5-5A golf title

ABILENE — As expected Abilene Cooper swept the District 5-5A golf team championship as their teams finished one-two in the final round, on the Maxwell Municiple Course here friday.

Cooper's No.1 team won the last of the five district meets with a 279 while Cooper No.2 and Midland High tied for second with a 310. Midland Lee finished in fourth by shooting a 326.

The victory gave Cooper No. 1 the district title with a 1546-1579 margin over their No. 2 team. Lee finished third (1649) and MHS was fourth (1652).

MHS was led by sophomore David Pritchett who carted a 75. Reese Boudreaux and Grant Word came in with 78's and Mark Bigbie had a 79. Russell Owens finished with an 82 for the Bulldogs.

Emil Hale had a 77 to lead the Rebel linksters and Kevin Lundy finished with an 81. Britt Gardner and Rob Marberger both came in with 84's and David Hicks finished with an 85.

In the Medalist competition Mike Standley took top honors in district over Cooper teamate Cole Thompson 294-296. Kyle Coody, also of Abilene Cooper, finished third with a 297.

Both the Cooper teams will go to the regional competition in Lubbock. The top two teams and individual finishers at regionals will then go on to fight for the state golf title, which Abilene Cooper presently holds.

Tuten paces Cougars to lead

HOUSTON (AP) — Billy Tuten shot a two-under-par 68 Friday to pace the Houston Cougars to the first-round lead in the 54-hole Southwest Conference golf tournament at the Quail Valley Golf Club.

Jim Wagner of Rice, a summer employee at Quail Valley, blistered his 6,700-yard home course for a two-under-par 68 Friday to tie Tuten.

Houston, seeking its eighth SWC golf title, took an early advantage over defending team champion Texas and Texas A&M. Houston had a one-day total of 284, Texas and Texas A&M had first-rounds of 287.

"It's a good start for us. It could have been a lot worse," said Houston Coach Dave Williams. "We have four big hitters on this team and this isn't really a big hitters course."

Defending state amateur champion Mark Brooks led Texas with an even-par 70. The Aggies got a one-under-par 69 round from junior Danny Briggs.

Arkansas, led by a one-over-par 71 round by Bob Sauerberg, was in fourth place with a team total of 295. Rice was fifth at 296, followed by Baylor at 298, TCU at 300 and Texas Tech at 315.

The second round will be played Saturday and the tournament concludes Sunday.

Lee, MHS open chase for District 5-5A second half title against OHS, Permian

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The second half of the District 5-5A baseball season gets underway today with Midland Lee hosting Odessa High and Midland High traveling to Odessa to face the Permian Panthers.

Lee finished with a 2-5 district record in the first half (10-11 overal) and is looking to start off the second half on the right foot with a victory over winless OHS. The Bronchos went 0-7 in 5-5A play with 4-17 record overall.

The Rebels won the first encounter by a 6-3 score but that doesn't mean Coach Ernie Johnson expects to do so again. He knows the Bronchos are a team to be leary of.

"They played a lot of people close and they scored a lot of runs in the first half. "They just couldn't win," said Johnson. "They are having trouble winning, but so are we. The thing that's encouraging for us, is they've also given up a lot of runs."

One of the problems the Rebels had in the first half was a lack of hitting. As a team they hit for a .253 average (all averages based on 5-5A games) with Chris Parker the most consistant batter at .364 followed by Bart Ryan at .318. Ray Longoria, who saw action in three district games and only went to the plate eight times, has a team-high .375 average.

Johnson has elected to bring Kerry Robertson up from his junior varsity team to pitch in the second half opener, noting improved performance at JV level as the reason for promotion. It will be his first 5-5A appearance of the season.

Scott Page will get the call for work behind the plate with Mike Mercurio playing first, Dennis Matta second, Parker third and Barry Blackwell at shortstop.

In the outfield, Lane Marks will hold down left field with Ryan in center and Scott Ullom in right. Longoria will be the Rebel designated hitter.

MIDLAND HIGH'S Billy Miles will get a chance at revenge today when he takes the mound against Permian. In the first meeting between the two teams, the senior Bulldog hurler was knocked off the mound after only one-third of an inning by the Mojo hitters as MHS suffered an 8-3 loss.

Since that time, Miles has come on strong by posting three wins in his last three starts while dropping his earned run average to 2.63.

"Right now (Friday), I'm still undecided who I'll pitch," said MHS' Tim Whalen. "I was going to go with Wes (Davis) but he has some trouble with his eyes. I'll probably go with Billy. He wants to get back at them."

The Bulldogs, 3-4 in 5-5A and 9-10 overall, had some problems at the plate in the early going of the first half, but things seem to have picked up a bit. The team average is up to .268 with Jose Carrasco leading the way with a .500 average in 20 at bats.

"I always felt he was a good average hitter," said Whalen about Carrasco. "He's doesn't hit for power, but he can hit for average. That's why I've got him in the leadoff spot because he gets on base a whole bunch."

Behind Carrasco is Tim Davis who is hitting for both power and average with a .400 including two home runs and two doubles. Whalen also has two other hitters who have come along as the season's progressed, Jim Gunnels (.313) and Benny Ozuna (.375).

"He can move runners over just making contact," said Whalen about Gunnels. "Benny Ozuna is hitting well and that helps a whole bunch also.

Another hitter who will miss the Permian game because he is competing in gymnastics this weekend is Jay Motter at .333.

Davis will hold down the catching chores for the Bulldogs with Gunnels at first, Faustino Granado at second, Daniel Castaneda at third and Carrasco at shortstop. Peter Galindo will be in left field, Hipolito Zarate in center and Joel De La Garza in right. Ozuna will DH.

Elsewhere in the 5-5A, Abilene Cooper will take on San Angelo and Big Spring will face Abilene High. The Steers and Eagles tied for first place in the first half race with 6-1 records and both will be looking to gain an edge in this the start of the second half.

Spurs defeat Mavericks to claim Midwest title

DALLAS (AP) — San Antonio's George Gervin scored 35 points to propel the San Antonio Spurs to their second straight Midwest Division championship and a 118-106 National Basketball Association victory over Dallas Friday night.

San Antonio center George Johnson blocked four Dallas shots in the final minute of play to stymie a possible comeback effort by the Mavericks.

Gervin, who is expected to win his fourth NBA scoring title, hit 18 first quarter points as the Spurs rolled to a 34-24 first period advantage.

San Antonio led by as many as 17 points in the second period, but the margin was cut to 11 at 61-50 at the half.

Mark Olberding scored 25 points for San Antonio and Mike Mitchell scored 14.

Rookie forward Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 24 points, including 21 in the second half. Wayne Cooper chipped in 18 for the Mavericks and Allan Bristow hit a season-high 16.

Aguirre scored 13 points in the final period as the Mavericks twice cut a Spurs lead that had been as high as 18 points to eight points.

San Antonio, 48-33, completes its regular season Sunday at home against Utah. The Spurs will receive a bye inthe first round of the championship playoffs.

Dallas, 28-53, ends its season Saturday night at Denver.

San Antonio has won four division titles in the six years since it joined the NBA from the old American Basketball Association.

NHL ROUNDUP

Islanders even series with 7-2 victory over Rangers

By The Associated Press

The New York Islanders recaptured the form that carried them to the last two National Hockey League championships, blitzing the New York Rangers 7-2 Friday night to even their quarterfinal playoff series as Duane Sutter scored two goals.

The Islanders struggled to beat Pittsbuegh in five games in the opening round of Stanley Cup playoffs, then dropped the first game of this best-of-7 series with their local rivals. But they dominated the second game with tight checking, crisp passing and an opportunistic attack.

The third game of the "Battle of New York" will be at Madison Square Garden Sunday night.

Denis Potvin got the Islanders started with a power-play goal at 5:34 of the opening period, drilling a slap shot from the left point through traffic and beating Rangers goalie Steve Weeks to the glove side.

Billy Carroll made it 2-0 at 11:03 with the Islanders short-handed, completing a 2-on-1 rush by knocking Butch Goring's pass behind Weeks.

Weeks, who performed splendidly in relief of starting goaltender Ed Mio — injured in the first period of the Rangers' 5-4 victory in Thursday night's game — then was victimized twice by Sutter.

The Rangers' goalie and the Islanders' right wing had a fistfight in the first game, but this time Sutter used his scoring touch to frustrate Weeks.

Sutter concluded the Islanders' three-goal first period by scoring from directly in front of Weeks at 16:29 after taking a pinpoint pass from Anders Kallur. He connected again at 10:21 of the middle period on a 20-foot wrist shot.

for the Islanders. Mikko Leinonen got the Rangers' other goal with 2:19 remaining.

St. Louis 3, Chicago 1

Wayne Babych broke a 1-1 tie early in the second period and Joe Mullen added an insurance goal, helping the St. Louis Blues deadlock their NHL playoff series with a 3-1 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks.

The triumph evened the best-of-7 quarterfinal series at one game apiece. Game 3 will be played at Chicago Sunday night.

Babych was tied up by a Chicago defender but still managed to get away a one-handed, backhanded swipe at the puck and put it behind Black Hawks' goalie Tony Esposito.

Jorgen Pettersson, who had been benched in the Blues' previous three playoff games, slipped the game-winning pass out from behind the net.

The Blues, who took a 3-2 lead into the third period in Thursday night's opener before bowing to the Black Hawks 5-4, were not about to let the same thing happen again as Mullen fired a 35-foot slapshot past Esposito near the 16-minute mark of the third period for an insurance goal.

Chicago jumped in front 1-0 4½ minutes into the contest on a power-play goal by Tom Lysiak, who backhanded a seemingly harmless chance between St. Louis goalie Mike Liut and the goal post.

Liut then stopped the next 26 Black Hawks' shots. The Blues held a 32-27 shooting advantage in the game.

Boston 8, Quebec 4

Barry Pederson scored twice in the second period, and the Boston Bruins whipped the Quebec Nordiques 8-4 Friday night to roll to a 2-0 advantage in their best-of-seven NHL quarterfinal playoff series.

The high-scoring rookie added an assist, and linemate Rick Middleton notched a goal and three assists as Boston stayed in command of the series, which continues Sunday night in Quebec.

With the score tied 2-2 after the opening period, Pederson, who had 44 regular-season goals wasted little time giving Boston the lead.

Defenseman Ray Bourque carried the puck across the Quebec blue line and passed to Middleton in the right corner. Middleton then got the puck to Pederson in front of the net, and Pederson scored on a 10-footer 37-seconds into the second period.

Boston outshot Quebec for the second consecutive night 39-31.

Yankees score 10-2 win over Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — The New York Yankees scored five unearned runs in the second inning and Ron Guidry pitched a seven-hitter as the defending American League champions defeated the Detroit Tigers 10-2 in a rain-delayed game Friday night.

In the Yankees' first, Detroit starter and loser Pat Underwood, 0-1, retired leadoff batter Willie Randolph on a grounder before the game was halted by a heavy downpour.

Following a 98-minute rain delay, Jerry Mumphrey singled off Underwood and scored on successive two-out singles by Dave Winfield and Dave Revering. Lou Piniella doubled Winfield home to give New York a 2-0 lead.

In the second, during which the Yankees sent 10 men to the plate, Rick Cerone was safe when Detroit first baseman Enos Cabell dropped his pop fly beside the mound for an error. Randolph singled and Underwood walked Mumphrey to load the bases. Underwood then slipped on the wet grass and bobbled Ken Griffey's grounder for an error, allowing Cerone to score.

Dave Tobik came on for Detroit and Winfield lined his first pitch to left for a double, driving in Randolph and Mumphrey. After Tobik walked Revering, Piniella doubled home Griffey and Winfield.

The Tigers scored one run in the third when Alan Trammell hit a leadoff double, went to third on a grounder and came home on Chet Lemon's double. Cabell hit a solo homer in the Detroit fifth.

Guidry, 1-0, who lasted only four innings in his only other start this season, struck out four and walked two against Detroit.

The Yankees got three more runs in the eighth. Ken Griffey singled home one run and Graig Nettles singled in two more.

Shoemaker may have found 'Link' to achieving some immediate goals

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Veteran jockey Bill Shoemaker may have found the horse that can help him realize some immediate goals.

Shoemaker talked about goals after riding Mrs. Jane duPont Lunger's Linkage to a victory in Thursday's $28,640 Forerunner Purse at Keeneland.

"Right now I have two: to win the Blue Grass and then the Derby," he said.

Shoemaker has ridden three Kentucky Derby winners, but the last one was Lucky Debonair 17 years ago.

If he could win one more, he would trail only Bill Hartack and Eddie Arcaro in Derby victories.

Shoemaker has had mounts in only two of the last six Derbies. He finished 15th on Cure the Blues last year.

But he was impressed by the performance Linkage displayed in the 7-furlong Forerunner.

With Shoemaker riding him for the first time, Linkage came from off the pace, accelerated at the head of the stretch, and won by half a length over Royal Roberto.

"When I asked him to run, he shot by the horse that was in front," said Shoemaker, who hit Linkage only once at the head of the stretch and once again about 50 yards later.

"He spurted out and took the lead. And he won kinda comfortably," the jockey said.

Shoemaker said he did not know how Linkage would handle a longer distance. "We'll know more about that next week," he said.

Hanshin downs Yomiuri in Japanese baseball

Compiled from R-T Wires

The Hanshin Tigers scored three runs in the first three innings and held on to beat the Yomiuri Giants 3-2 Friday, nailing down the victory when right fielder Terufumi Kitamura threw out Yomiuri's Itaru Ninomiya at home plate in the ninth inning. In other Japan Central League action, the Hiroshima Toyo Carp and Chunichi Dragons tied 4-4 in a game called after nine innings.

Masayuki Matsumura fired a six-hitter and Koichi Tabuchi hit his third homer of the year to give the Seibu Lions a 5-0 win over the Nankai Hawks in Pacific League action. The Kintetsu Buffalos edged the Nippon Ham Fighters 6-5 on Hiroshi Moriwakis' home run in the bottom of the eighth. The Lotte Orions cranked out 12 hits including a three-run homer by Sumio Hirota in a 10-3 victory over the Hankyu Braves...

Detroit guard Isiah Thomas was named Rookie of the Year in a Sporting News poll of NBA players, the Pistons and the publication said Friday. Thomas, who led Indiana to the NCAA title a year ago, received 65 votes to 59 votes for Buck Williams of the New Jersey Nets. Finishing third with 40 votes was former Michigan State University player Jay Vincent, now with the Dallas Mavericks. Kelly Tripucka, rookie out of Notre Dame now a teammate of Thomas', received 15 votes and finished fourth.

The official NBA Rookie of the Year award — which is decided by balloting of sportswriters throughout the nation — will be made in mid-June...

Former Green Bay Packer linebacker Mike Hunt, who retired last May because of recurring headaches, says he has been cleared by physicians to play in the pro football again and plans to rejoin the team. Hunt said he would write a letter to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle asking to be taken off the reserve-retired list.

Hunt said he hoped to be back with the Packers in time for their mini-camp May 16-21 in Green Bay. "I got a clean bill of health from the doctors at the Mayo Clinic and in Green Bay," he said. "I just figured that I never reached my potential. I want to give it another try."...

Murrell P. "Buck" Riley has been named basketball coach at Adrian College, which was unable to win a game last seeson. Riley replaces Kim Rank, who resigned after three years as head coach and an 0-22 record last season. Riley will begin part-time duties immediately and assume the post full-time July 1, school officials said...

While it's the dream of most top college basketball players to play in the NBA, Larry McKinney, a star on last season's Boise State team, says he turned down an invitation from the Indiana Pacers to sign a contract for the last eight games of this season. That's because once he played in an NBA game, he would lose his amateur status. And McKinney, a slender 6-foot-11 center who was second team all-conference his senior season, said he still might want to remain an amateur so he can continue to play in England or European basketball leagues.

McKinney said in a telephone interview from his Ogden, Utah, home that he already has been invited to the Pacers' summer tryout camp. He was with the Pacers last summer until the final cut. He wound up in England, leading his team with an average of 26 points and 11 rebounds per game.

Rangers post 4-1 win over Brewers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pinch hitter Bill Stein drove in the tie-breaking run with a double and the Texas Rangers added two runs in the 10th inning to beat Milwaukee 4-1 Friday, spoiling the Brewers' home opener.

Mike Richardt began the Rangers' winning rally with an in infield single off the Brewers' relief ace, Rollie Fingers, 1-2. Mike Wagner followed with a single, before Stein, batting for Doug Flynn, smacked his double, breaking a 1-1 tie.

Lee Mazzilli then singled, driving in Wagner, and stole second. After Buddy Bell was walked intentionally, filling the bases, Leon Roberts hit a long sacrifice fly, knocking in the final run.

Rangers' starter Dave Schmidt retired the first nine Brewers' hitters before Paul Molitor poked a ground-single to right leading off the fourth.

Charlie Moore then hit a grounder to Schmidt, who fumbled the ball and recovered in time to throw out Moore. Molitor, running with the pitch, raced to third on the play and slid under first baseman Pat Putnam's throw.

Molitor scored on a grounder by Cecil Cooper as the Brewers took a 1-0 lead.

The Rangers tied the score 1-1 against Moose Haas in the fifth on a single by Larry Parrish, an infield hit by Putnam and a two-out single by Wagner.

The game, delayed at the start for 34 minutes because of rain, drew 49,887, the fifth largest home opening crowd in Brewers' history.

The Brewers' first two scheduled home games of the season were postponed because of bad weather last week.

Milwaukee shortstop Ed Romero reaches out and pulls in a throw from Brewers pitcher Rollie Fingers to force out Texas Ranger Buddy Bell (25) at second during ninth inning action Friday in Milwaukee. Bell was trying to reach second on a bunt by Larry Parrish. Texas went on to win the game 4-1 in 10 innings to spoil the Brewers 1982 home opener.

Pirates edge Cubs 7-6 in extra innings

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Omar Moreno's bases-loaded single over the head of drawn-in centerfielder Gary Woods in the 12th inning gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 7-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs Friday.

It was the belated home opener for the Pirates, who turned back a pair of Chicago rallies to hand the Cubs their fourth straight loss.

Losing reliever Willie Hernandez, 0-1, the fourth Cubs' pitcher, hit Tony Pena to open the 12th. Johnny Ray bunted, and was safe at first when second baseman Bump Wills failed to touch the bag at first.

Jim Smith then sacrificed, before Steve Nicosia was walked intentionally, setting up Moreno's game-winning single.

It was the belated home opener for the Pirates, who had a series against Montreal postponed by wintry weather.

Pittsburgh led 5-3 after six innings behind the two-hit pitching of John Candelaria and Don Robinson. But the Cubs rallied for three runs, two unearned, on only one hit in the seventh inning.

After Leon Durham opened the inning with a walk off Robinson, Steve Henderson's bouncer was muffed by third baseman Bill Madlock for an error. Woods doubled, scoring Durham.

Reliever Tom Griffin retired Larry Bowa on a grounder, but Rod Scurry walked Jerry Morales and Wills, forcing home Henderson with the tying run.

Ryne Sandberg followed with a popup to shallow right that was caught by second baseman Ray. Woods tagged up and made a surprise dash from third, scoring easily.

The Pirates tied the score 6-6 with an unearned run in the eighth off reliever Bill Campbell. Pinch-hitter Willie Montanez singled, and pinch-runner Lee Lacy was sacrificed to second, took third on Mike Easler's grounder and scored on a passed ball by Keith Moreland.

Dave Parker's solo homer in the third helped Pittsburgh to a 2-0 lead off Cubs' starter Dan Larson. Candelaria yielded a solo homer to Wills in the fourth, and Woods gave the Cubs a 3-2 lead with a two-run double in the fifth.

The Pirates moved ahead 5-3 with three runs in the fifth. Pena's run-scoring double was the big hit.

Leal, Jackson combine for shutout win over Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Luis Leal of the Toronto Blue Jays came within three outs Friday of hurling his first major league shutout. Instead, Leal settled for a share of a shutout with reliever Roy Lee Jackson.

They combined for a seven-hitter in outdueling Dennis Eckersley for a 2-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

"I don't think of shutouts," said Leal, whose last shutout was in the Florida State League in 1979. "I think only of winning except when I'm out on the mound. Then I think only of throwing strikes and getting the batter out."

Leal didn't permit a Boston runner beyond second base, but he was replaced by Jackson after Carney Lansford led off the ninth inning with his third single. Jackson then ritired three batters in order, collecting his first save while protecting Leal's second victory in two starts.

Four-hit pitching leads Royals to win

CLEVELAND (AP) — Vida Blue and Dan Quisenberry combined to hurl a four-hitter, and U.L. Washington tripled home the game-winning run to spark the Kansas City Royals to a 3-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians victory Friday night.

Blue, 1-1, struck out four while yielding two of Cleveland's hits and one walk as he recorded his first American League triumph since a member of the Oakland A's in 1978. The Royals obtained the veteran left-hander in a trade with the San Francisco Giants during spring training. Quisenberry gave up two singles in the ninth before gaining his third save.

Lee May led off Kansas City's seventh inning with an infield hit. After Cleveland's Len Barker retired the next two batters, Washington laced his game-winning triple into deep center field.

Barker, 1-1, surrendered five hits and two walks over seven innings while striking out seven.

Kansas City took a 1-0 lead in the top of the third inning when John Wathan drew a two-out walk, stole second and scored on George Brett's double to the right-center field fence. Toby Harrah's third home run with two outs in the bottom of the third tied the score for Cleveland.

The Royals added an insurance run in the eighth off reliever Dan Spillner. Brett walked, moved to second on a single by Amos Otis and continued to third when center fielder Rick Manning mishandled the ball for an error. Brett then scored as Hal McRae grounded into a fielder's choice.

Local favorite Beth Daniel missed a chance at the lead late in the round, bogeying the last two holes to finish in second place at 2-under-par in the Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

First-round leader Sandra Post faltered badly, finishing with a 10-over-par 82.

WHITWORTH, THE first woman golfer ever to hit the $1 million mark in career winnings, fired a 68 Friday for a 3-under-par two-day score. She shot a first-round 73.

"I just picked the right club at the right time," the 42-year-old Whitworth said.

She said her birdie on the par-4 first hole helped her to get off to a good start. She later fired birdies on the third, eighth, 14th and 15th holes.

The 6,200-yard Devil's Elbow course at Moss Creek Plantation is one where "you can't let it get away from you," Whitworth said.

"I played it pretty well today, but tomorrow I could just play it crummy," she said. "You try to get as many birdies as you can because you know you're not going to get them back."

TWO-TIME top money winner Daniel bemoaned her double-bogey finish.

"You never want to finish bogey-bogey," she said. "But I just hit bad shots so I deserved it. I'm under par so I have to be pleased."

Daniel stroked into the marsh on the 17th hole and ended up in the bunker on 18, wiping out her chances for the top spot.

Daniel, who is from nearby Charleston, S.C., has never won her home state tournament.

Defending CPC champion Sally Little, who was in second place going into Friday's round, dropped out of contention with an 8-over-par 80.

Spring weather has its dangers

By REX WORRELL

With the arrival of spring and the nice weather we have had lately, comes the chance violent weather. The suddeness of a thunderstorm forming makes it necessary that any person involved in outdoor activities, including golf, be aware of and follow precautions to protect themselves from the elements.

Lighting associated with thunderstorms is the most dangerous and life-claiming weather condition. For this reason, the United States Golf Association has made several recommendations concerning safety. Raising golf culbs or umbrellas increases the danger of persomal injury and therefor should be avoided.

If caught out-of-doors during a storm take shelter inside buildings, vehicles or other structures or locations which offer protection. Buildings protected from lighting, large metal frame buildings, large unprotected buildings, automobiles, trailers and areas shielded by large buildings are good examples. If shelter is not available try to seek out depressed areas avoiding hilltops, isolated trees, golf course machinery and water.

Always keep an eye out for severe weather. Hogan Park Golf Course is ideally located for spotting severe weather and we will keep players aware of approaching stroms.

IT IS STILL not too late to sign up for the Northern Texas PGA Pro-Am and a trip to Kapalua Bay, Maui. The trip is scheduled for July 22-30. Further infornmation is available in the golf shop.

There were two of the rarest shots in golf scored at Hogan Park this past week. Two players scored double eagle two's, on par five holes. Rick Anthony hit a driver and a 6 iron into the hole on the 520 yard, 14th hole.

Five days later, Jim Strawn hit a driver and a four iron to score his duce on the second hole, a 545 yard par five. Jim was playing with Ed Wagner, High Bliss and R.L. Faulkner. Witnessing Anthony's double eagle were Mark Eaves, Joel Jackson and Mike Peterson.

There were also four eagles scored recently. Tim Hanley, while playing with Roger Wright, Bob Reimers, Don Higgins and David Teichmann, hit a driver, five iron and putter for his eagle on the twenty fourth hole. Verne Williams witnessed Tom Standley's eagle on number 15. He hit a driver, then a six iron into the hole. Garvis Ray also eagled the 485 yard, par five twenty fifth hole using a driver, three iron and a one put. Stan Standifer used a driver, two iron and one putted the second hole to score his eagle.

Hazel Pierce won the Hogan Park Womens Golf Association trophy for April, while Gloria Dellenback and Jean Conner tied for second.

Rookie leads $100,000 Tallahassee by one stroke

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Rookie Hal Sutton carded a 3-under-par 69 Friday to take a 1-stroke lead midway through the $100,000 Tallahassee Open.

Sutton, who has won slightly more than $13,000 in his first season on the PGA Tour, was one of four golfers who started the day four shots behind first-day leader Lee Rinker.

The 1980 U.S. Amateur champion used four birdies on the first 17 holes to move into a tie for the lead and snapped a three-way deadlock with a 10-foot birdie putt on No.18.

Sutton's 36-hole total of 135 over the par 72, 7,027-yard Killearn Golf and Country Club course placed him a shot ahead Gavin Levenson and Bob Byman, who were among eight golfers who recorded opening-round 67s on Thursday.

"I knew the putt at 18 was for the lead, but I also know that for me to win this thing I'm going to need a lot of birdies in the next two days," said Sutton.

"The course was easier yesterday (Thursday). The wind and pin placements made it much tougher today. I'm really hitting the ball solid. I'm just thinking about playing good golf right now."

SEVEN GOLFERS — Rinker, Bob Murphy, Denis Watson, Tim Simpson, Tommy Armour III, Ed Sneed and Jim Dent — were bunched at 137, two shots behind the leader.

Rinker fired a course-record 10-under-par 62 Thursday but lost his grip on the lead when he double-bogeyed the third hole Friday.

Sneed, who won this tournament in 1977, is attempting to become the first double winner in the 14-year history of the event, which is unique in that the defending champion never retired.

The winner of the $18,000 first-place check Sunday will qualify for next year's MONY Tournament of Champions, which is always played opposite the Tallahassee tournament.

The cut was established at 3-under-par 141 — low on the tour for this year — and eliminated 106 of the 156-man field, including hometown hopefuls Kenny Knox, Forrest Fezler and Greg Powers, who all shot 142.

Italians shocks U.S. with 7-5 World Hockey upset

TAMPERE, Finland (AP) — Dave Tomassoni scored an empty-netter with 10 seconds left to give newcomer Italy a shocking 7-5 victory over the United States Friday in the second round of the World Hockey Championships.

It was the first win in a World Championship in 23 years for Italy, which has a team consisting of players who learned their hockey in North America and are former Canadian or American citizens.

The U.S. team, which got together only a week ago, dropped to 0-2 in the eight-team round-robin portion of the tournament. The Americans lost their opener 2-4 to Sweden Thursday night.

In Helsinki, Jiri Lala scored three goals as Czechoslovakia skated past Team Canada 6-2 for its first victory.

Canada, outclassed by the fast-skating Czechs on the large European ice surface in the final period, is 1-1 going into its third game with Sweden on Sunday.

Sweden played the Soviet Union at Tampere and host nation Finland faced West Germany at Helsinki in the other second-round games Friday night.

Italy, which was bombed 1-31 by the Americans the last time the two teams met in a world tourney in 1948, led 5-2 going into the third period in Friday's game.

Bob Miller of the Colorado Rockies and 1980 Olympic hero Mark Johnson of the Minnesota North Stars made it 4-5 with two quick goals early in the third period.

After Italy's Tom Milani scored to make it 6-4 at 11:09, Miller cut the Italians' lead again three minutes later.

With Mike Amodeo penalized for hooking at 18:23, the United States pulled goaltender Chico Resch for a sixth attacker. But the two-man American advantage didn't help, although Johnson came very close to knotting the score.

Tomassoni, a defenseman, then picked up a loose puck in his own zone and blasted the puck along the ice into the empty goal at 19:50.

Oliver's homer lifts Expos to 4-3 victory over Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Al Oliver homered in the ninth inning to snap a 3-3 tie and give the Montreal Expos a 4-3 victory over the New York Mets Friday night.

Oliver led off the ninth with his solo homer, his second of the season, against losing pitcher Jesse Orosco, who had gotten ahead of the hitter with an 0-2 count. Jeff Reardon, dealt to Montreal last year by the Mets, got the victory with three innings of one-hit relief.

The Expos took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when leadoff hitter Tim Raines tripled and scored on Wally Johnson's infield out. The Mets tied it in the bottom of the inning when Mookie Wilson singled, stole second and was singled home by Wally Backman.

Backman also stole second, but Expos starter Tim Gullickson retired the next three hitters, two of them, Dave Kingman and Joel Youngblood, on strikeouts.

The Expos regained the lead in the fourth inning. With one out, Al Oliver walked and Warren Cromartie homered into the Mets bullpen in right field.

The Mets tied the score 3-3 in the sixth on a two-run single by George Foster. After Gullickson had retired 11 batters in a row, Mike Jorgensen, pinch-hitting for Mets left-hander Pete Falcone, led off with a walk. Wilson singled him to second, and both runners advanced on Backman's sacrifice bunt before Foster drove them home.

Foreign country might mint U.S. Olympic coin

By HANK LOWENKRON
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The U.S. Olympic Committee may ask a foreign country to mint commemorative coins for the 1984 Summer Olympics if the U.S. government won't, USOC President William E. Simon said Friday.

"It's tragic," Simon said about the stalemate of legislation authorizing the minting of the coins. Legislation has been approved in the U.S. Senate, but the bill has been held up in the House Banking Subcommittee, chaired by Frank Annunzio, D-Ill, in a dispute over whether the government or a private group should market the coins.

Simon and USOC Executive Director F. Don Miller, here to attend the organization's annual meeting which began Friday and ends Sunday, both said revenue anticipated from the coin sale are a vital part of the USOC's budget through 1984.

"We're not asking the government for anything," said Simon, a former Treasury Secretary. "As a matter of fact they stand to make $25 million from the program. We're not asking for anything extraordinary. It's been done in every Olympic Games since 1968."

Annunzio is conducting a hearing on the coin bill on Wednesday with Miller and former USOC President Bob Kane scheduled to testify.

"If the United States Congress doesn't do this (pass a bill that meets the satisfaction of the USOC) then I'm going to begin to think very seriously about going to another country and having them mint coins for our games," Simon said.

"Isn't that quite a commentary to have Canadian dollars or West German marks to commemorate our games?"

A group consisting of Occidental Petroleum Corp., Maison Freres Co., and the Franklin Mint Corp., which had been scheduled to market the coins, withdrew its offer last Friday.

Simon, who admitted the USOC would not make as much money if the coins were minted outside the United States, said the USOC had asked to mint 29 coins but agreed to cut the number to 17 in a compromise with the Illinois Democrat.

"I still believe we'll get a coin program," he said, adding that he didn't think one conducted by the government would be as successful as one conducted by a private group.

"Except for making war, I don't think there's anything the government can do better than the private sector," Simon said, adding that he hoped Congress would approve a coin bill by June and that they could be on the market by January.

Borg's decision forced by tennis rivalry

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The Wimbledon tennis tournament has lost Bjorn Borg for this year — the first bitter harvest from a clash between rival world circuits.

The five-time Wimbledon champion refuses to play because of the indignity of having to go through the qualifying tournament against minor players at Roehampton the week before.

A year ago, the situation would never have arisen. Borg would have been free to play when and where he liked during the year and would still have been accepted at Wimbledon.

But Lamar Hunt, who runs World Championship Tennis (WCT), decided to run his own circuit, and offered tempting prize money.

The Men's International Professional Tennis Council saw the danger to its year-long Grand Prix series. To stop players deserting the Grand Prix for Hunt's tournaments, it made it mandatory for everyone to play at least 10 Grand Prix Super Series events — those offering prize money of at least $200,000 — during the year, not counting the three big ones: the French Open, Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

If the players did not sign up to play the minimum, the penalty was they had to qualify for every tournament.

Nobody suspected that any of the top players would mind that. But Borg lost his Wimbledon title to John McEnroe, lost to the American again in the final of the U.S. Open and clearly was stale.

He decided to take a few months rest and to play less tennis when he returned to action. He entered seven Grand Prix events in 1982 and said that was all he wanted to play.

"OK," said the Pro Council. "That means you qualify for them, like anyone else who breaks the rules."

The Council may regret now it ever made the "10 tournaments" rule. David Gray, secretary of the International Tennis Federation (ITF), said recently it will have to be changed next year "because we don't want this kind of situation again."

But it was too late to change it for 1982.

Borg announced his decision in Tokyo Friday after Wimbledon had ruled that he must qualify.

But the Swedish star has been kicking against the rule for weeks. He thought that as a former Wimbledon champion he was entitled to special consideration.

Many sympathizers in the tennis world thought so, too. Some believed the All-England Club at Wimbledon, which is big enough to go its own way when it wants to, might take an independent line and grant Borg a special dispensation.

But after a lot of soul-searching, Wimbledon decided to back the Grand Prix.

The All-England Club has had its differences with Hunt in the past. In 1972, Hunt's contracted professionals were banned by the ITF from playing Wimbledon. The ban came after Hunt and the All-England Club had a bitter fight in 1971.

The next year, 1973, he entered into an uneasy alliance with the ITF and they split up the year's tournament circuit between them. Hunt had his own tournaments in the early part of the year, culminating in the WCT Championships at Dallas.

But last year, Hunt decided to end the alliance. The Grand Prix went on the defensive and tried to keep the top players by coercion, abetted by the players, who have three places on the Council.

Nobody thought at the time it would end with Borg, one of the most popular players in the world, pulling out of Wimbledon.

Sir Brian Burnett, chairman of the All-England Club, gave a strange twist to the story Thursday night.

He revealed he had offered to accept Borg for Wimbledon if the Swede would agree to play in 10 tournaments spread out between April 1, 1982, and March 31, 1983.

Borg's pride was still hurt, and he refused.

But if you start bending the rules, it is halfway to breaking them completely. Burnett said the offer had the approval of the Pro Tennis Council, which had been saying all along it had to be 10 tournaments in 1982, nothing less.

Borg may next come under pressure from Mark McCormack's International Management Group, which advises him. McCormack handles Wimbledon's overseas television contracts, which are worth millions.

Borg's advertising sponsors may also have something to say. Wimbledon gives them their most important television space of the year.

Meanwhile, Burnett appealed to Borg to change his mind.

"Entries for Wimbledon don't close until May 10," he said. "I speak for the majority of the tennis world when I say I hope he will play after all."

Tennis may suffer from Borg's absence. And millions of fans, those at Wimbledon and those watching on television, may be disappointed. But the two main parties in the dispute will not suffer much.

*The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 12.5% for 90% loan value. Interest will be charged at the most recent six month Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5% rounded to the highest 1/4 of 1%, but not to exceed the maximum rate allowed by law. Payments on GPAM mortgages are graduated so as to increase 7.50% each year for the remaining four years. At the end of the first five year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan.
ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 13.25% ON 90% LOANS.
