Congress probing gas supply

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Interior Department study claiming natural gas production had been cut back in the Gulf of Mexico fails to make any effort to determine why this happened, the ranking Republican member of a congressional subcommittee probing natural gas shortages said today.

Rep. Phillip Ruppe, R-Mich., questioned the value of the recent study which concluded that there were non-producing natural gas resevoirs off the Gulf Coast containing 980 billion cubic feet of gas.

"The report does not give us a clue as to why the 980 billion cubic feet are not in production," Ruppe said, as a House interior subcommittee heard testimony from Interior Department officials who helped draft the report.

William Bettenberg, acting assistant interior secretary for energy and minerals, defended the report, called it just a preliminary investigation and acknowledged that it did not try to find out why the natural gas was not being produced.

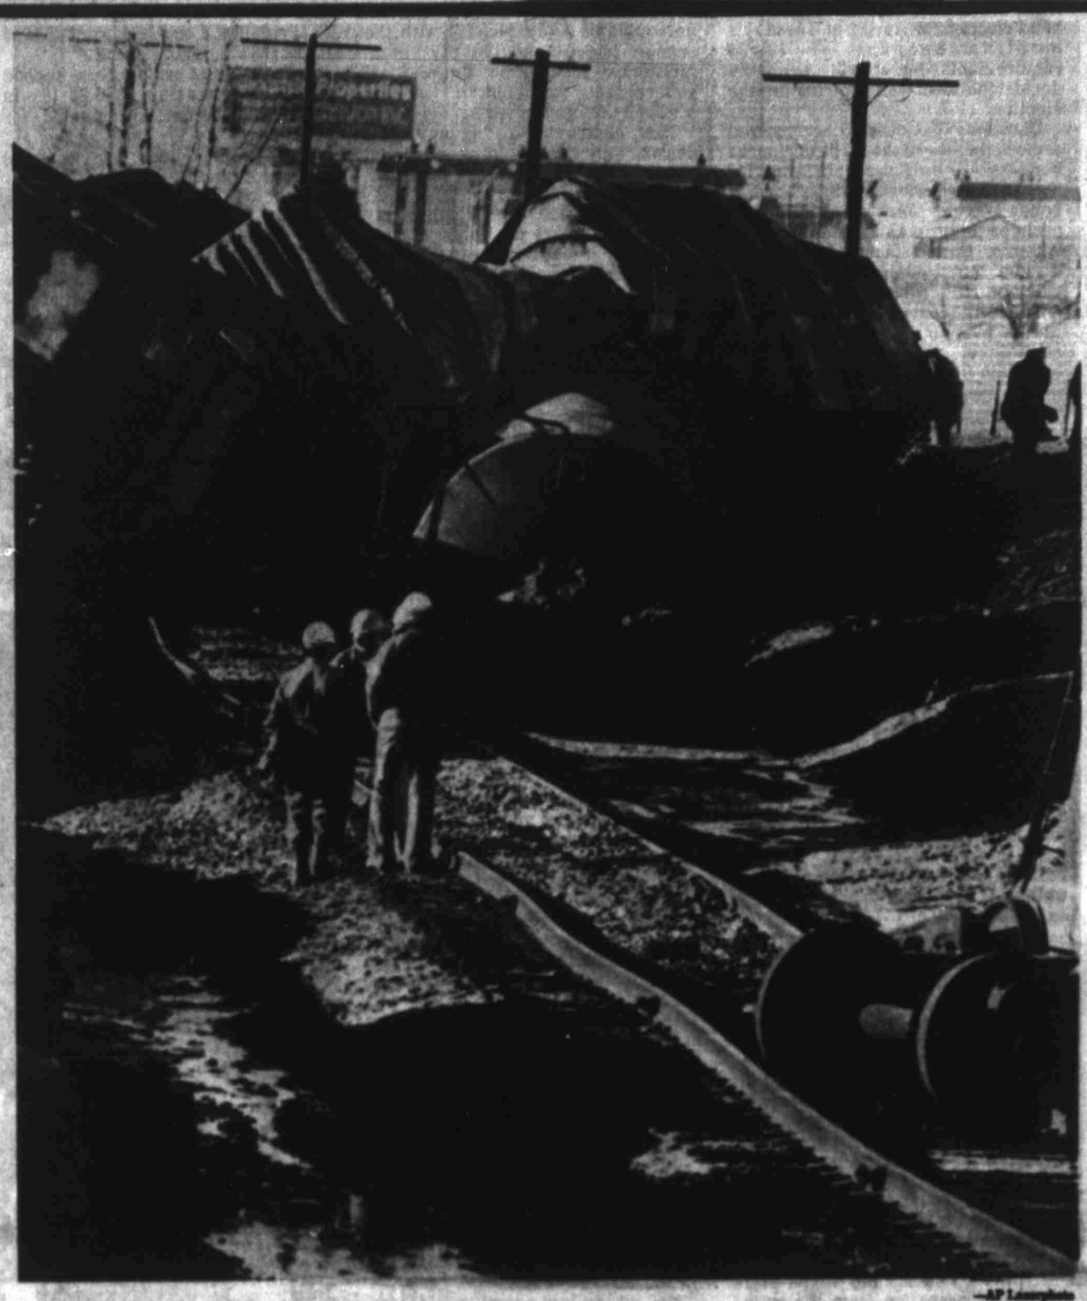

This will be the subject of a second study, launched by Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus last week, Bettenberg said.

He said this study, however, would be limited to natural gas produced from offshore federal leases and should take between 60 and 90 days to complete.

Bettenberg denied a report in The Washington Post that the investigation might take as long as eight months.

Bettenberg said the Interior Department has "neither the responsibility nor the authority" to undertake such an extensive review of the natural gas industry.

Ruppe complained that the preliminary report, which looked at five specific natural gas fields, only concerned itself with fields which government officials already knew were in declining production.

Railroad officials huddle along side several demolished cars this morning before beginning an investigation of Sunday night's explosion in Dallas.

North Dallas propane blast damage heavy

DALLAS (AP) — Residents returned to North Dallas homes today after being asked to leave Sunday night following the explosion of two propane tankers in a 55-car freight train.

Officials said light evening traffic and absence of a normal number of workmen were responsible for the fact that no deaths or serious injuries resulted from the blast, which rocked much of the north side of the city and could be seen 50 miles away.

"Every building within a half mile radius has been damaged to some extent," said Pete Nunez, a fire department spokesman.

Authorities worked with Santa Fe railroad officials late Sunday night in successfully removing two other propane tankers and four cars containing dangerous vinyl chloride from the smoldering wreckage of the demolished cars.

An 18-foot crater marked the spot where one of the two cars exploded. Parts of another car were blown into a nearby field. Yards of track on both sides of the blast site disappeared.

Windows in nearby warehouses and office buildings were blown out and several units of a mini-warehouse were demolished.

Efforts to evacuate residents in a 2,000-yard radius of the explosion site were hampered by thousands of persons who rushed to the scene as word of the blast spread through the city.

Fire department officials said they planned to pour tons of water as a precautionary measure on the two propane tankers that did not burn.

Investigators said early today they did not know if the train had derailed prior to the explosion that occurred just prior to 8 p.m. Further investigation of the accident was due today.

The explosion sent up a fireball that an airline pilot said he saw 150 miles away.

Reports of ground sightings from throughout North Central Texas poured into police stations and news media.

"It lit up about an eighth of the sky cherry red," said Charles Booker, who saw the blast from 50 miles south of Dallas. "The color stayed there for about five seconds."

"It looked like the sun came up," said Joe Ackerman, 16, who witnessed the blast from about three miles away.

Robert Kimberlin, pioneer oilman, dies

GRAHAM — Robert Kemper Kimberlin, 85, pioneer West Texas oilman, wildcatter and former Midland resident, died Sunday afternoon in a hospital here. He had been in declining health for several years.

He was the father of John Zay Kimberlin of Midland.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Morrison Funeral Home Chapel here. The body later will be cremated and the ashes interred in a San Angelo cemetery.

Kimberlin was born July 4, 1891, on a farm near Norman, Okla., which then was in the Cherokee Strip of Indian Territory. He attended school in Norman and the University of Oklahoma for two years, studying law. He also was on the university's baseball team.

Kimberlin had resided on his ranch near Possum Kingdom Lake, near Graham, for a number of years, moving there from Midland, where he had been engaged in the oil business for many years.

Kimberlin's first venture in the oil business was as a lease buyer for Prairie Oil & Gas Co., later Sinclair Oil Co. He later participated in the drilling of a well near Duncan, Okla., in 1917.

On July 2, 1918, he was the first volunteer in the U.S. Marine Corps at Oklahoma City. He served in France during World War I in the 13th Marine Regiment. He received his discharge from the Corps Aug. 21, 1919.

Following military service he returned to the oil business, working in the booms at Wichita Falls, Burkburnett and Mexia. He was maintenance superintendent for Tucker and Weber of Wichita Falls. The firm brought in 61 oil wells before drilling a dry hole.

By that time he had acquired approximately $60,000 in bonuses and speculation which he put into two wells near Duncan. Both turned out to be dry holes. Kimberlin then became associated with Marland Oil Co., forerunner of Continental Oil Co., and moved to California as a scout and landman.

He returned to Texas in 1923, going to San Angelo, where he bought some leases for E.L. Doheny, who later drilled several wells on the leases north of the Big Lake Field. Kimberlin also represented Marland in West Texas, buying leases and scouting. He was one of the original founders of Southland Royalty Co.

He later bought two Fort Worth spudders and formed a partnership

Trudeau, Carter to meet today

WASHINGTON (AP) — With nary a ruffle or a flourish for himself but four for his visitor, President Carter is welcoming Canada's prime minister for two days of discussions ranging from nuclear controls to rival fishing rights.

Prime Minister and Mrs. Pierre Elliott Trudeau arrive at the White House today to a 19-gun salute.

The President's foreign visitor highlighted a day of Carter meetings with his senior staff, the Cabinet and Vice President Walter Mondale.

Carter planned a state dinner for Trudeau at the White House tonight.

Although the President had said he would cut some of the customary pomp and circumstance for foreign dignitaries, he ordered up the Army Band for four ruffles and flourishes to greet Trudeau. Five military guard units were summoned for review.

As he had last week for his first foreign visitor, Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, Carter dispensed with ruffles, flourishes and "Hail to the Chief" for himself. There were only the national anthem and the Canadian anthem.

In the afternoon, Carter and Trudeau planned to discuss global matters, including the proposed London economic summit, East-West relations, curbing the spread of nuclear technology, arms sales and the laws of the sea.

On Tuesday, they planned talks on U.S.-Canadian issues, emphasizing mutual economic, environmental and energy concerns.

Carter eased one Canadian concern over the weekend. Administration sources said the President is asking Congress to cut off millions of dollars in fiscal 1978 funding for 18 water projects in 15 states. Canadians say one of the projects would harm them.

They say the Garrison Diversion Unit in North Dakota would cause dangerous levels of nitrogen, phosphorus and other pollutants to enter their country.

The sources said Carter deleted Garrison and 17 other projects from the 1978 budget until they are reviewed for economic necessity and environmental safety. Members of Congress in states where the projects are planned or underway are protesting the move.

In another budget development, one senior defense official said Saturday that the President plans to cut actual defense spending by $500 million in fiscal 1978, which begins in October.

The official also said Carter plans future savings in defense spending of between $2.5 billion and $3 billion, including the $500 million, spread over the next several years.

Carter will announce his revisions Tuesday to the 1978 budget submitted by President Ford. Budget analysts say the Carter changes have a good chance of getting through Congress without any major alterations.

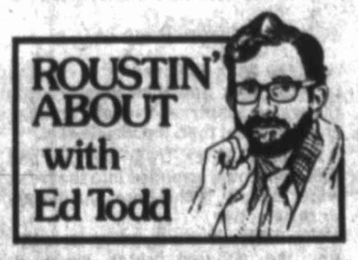

Carter is expected to propose a spending increase of $16 billion to $17 billion for fiscal 1978 above what Ford proposed in his $440 billion budget.

Some good health tips you won't drink to

If you find Albert Camus' "The Plague" sinisterly depressing or Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle" graphically nauseating, then you might find a lesser work of the words (certainly not literary) downright repulsive.

With a noticeable lack of flair, this teeming non-tome is uninvitingly entitled "How the public protects itself with plumbing codes."

On the cover of this 16-page booklet advocating "safe plumbing" is the likeness of a winged scepter embellished by two forked-tongued serpents.

Inside the publications are some good-health tips that certainly you wouldn't want to drink to.

The booklet gives some helpful hints that Heloise, in good and proper taste, just might bypass at the dinner table.

"As everyone uses plumbing many times each day, it is important to know just how water is kept pure . . . and just how waste is conducted away from where we live and work," says the booklet.

Water-borne diseases that may and have sneaked upon man by way of faulty plumbing and unclean dishes include ancylostomiasis (hookworm sickness), cholera, dysentery, typhoid fever, paratyphoid fever, schistosomiasis (flukes), and, controllably, diarrhea.

"There are literally hundreds of ways in which improper plumbing fixtures, or improper connections, can endanger health," begins the booklet's short takes on plumbing hazards.

The article warned of the dangers inherent in waste water seeping into the "pure" or, at least, drinkable water supply.

Independent truckers dying breed

By BILL RICHARDS
The Washington Post

LOS ANGELES—It is 11 p.m. under the 75-foot Standard sign and the entire 40-acre parking lot around Alphy's Truck Stop here is rumbling in the darkness from the sound of hundreds of idling diesel engines. "Look at that," says Bob Cota as a driving school's red, white and blue semitrailer moves haltingly through the lot, a nervous learner at the wheel and a big sign on the back that says "Earn Big Pay — Drive Big Rigs."

"That guy," says Cota, shooting a contemptuous look at the truck school instructor, "he oughta be put in jail for false advertising."

In the language of the citizens band radio circuit, this is Shakeytown, where the long distance truckers like Cota make turnarounds on their coast-to-coast runs.

Since they gained national attention by nearly shutting down the nation's highways with their fuel price protest three years ago last week, Cota and his independent trucking buddies have become legends; they are seen as hard-driving, hard-living road cowboys whose freedom knows no bounds and whose lives are an unending series of glamorous or exciting, adventures like those of Sonny and Will, the heroes of the television trucker series "Movin' On."

In fact, said Cota and others in the long haul trucking business, independent truckers are a dying breed whose lives are nothing at all like the television series or the million-seller country records or the movies that have protrayed them.

"I've got four kids and I was home to see them 15 days last year," said Cota. "I spent Christmas unloading lettuce in New York and New Year's in Chicago finding a load. It's not so romantic anymore after a few years like that."

Since the highly publicized highway blockades, the number of independents has dropped from an estimated 125,000 to around 80,000, according to industry estimates. And those who are left are, like Cota, embittered and angry. Independent truckers, they charge, have been gypped by load brokers, victimized by fly-by-night agricultural co-ops, and all but ignored by federal legislators. Even "Movin' On" was canceled last year.

Independent truckers fall into two categories: most hire themselves and their trucks out to big government regulated freight companies and haul whatever they are assigned; the rest carry unprocessed produce such as oranges from Florida or melons from California. Produce is generally exempt from government regulations — with some exceptions such as bananas — and the truckers who haul it are usually the most free-wheeling of the owner-operators. The exempt-cargo haulers, however, are also the most dependent on brokers or agricultural co-ops to supply them with loads.

"Give me one round with those folks who talk about this being the glorious life," said trucker John McKinney, an owner-operator from Lock Haven, Pa., who hauls produce from here to the East Coast. "I'd love to show them what it's really all about."

Owner-operators like Cota and McKinney play a major role in the nation's freight-hauling system. According to industry figures, owner-operators are responsible for 40 per cent of all the country's intercity truck traffic and they are the primary road haulers for most of the nation's produce and furniture.

Because they are independents and, unlike the large trucking fleets, have no unified voice, the owner-operators are the first to take a beating when times get tough. In 1975, during the height of the recession, independents were the first to feel the pressure as manufacturers cut back their output.

The drought in the West and the freeze in Florida's citrus belt are likely to cut back on potential loads this year. About 20 per cent of the independents are involved in produce hauling, according to Michael Parkhurst, editor of the trucker magazine Overdrive and head of the Independent Truckers Association.

"We're talking about a situation that is getting very desperate right now," said Parkhurst. "There are truckers today who are losing their trucks and their livelihoods because they can't make ends meet. If it gets much worse, they're just liable to go on the rampage again."

Dennis Large, treasurer of Paccar Financial Corp., a large Renton, Wash., firm that lends to truckers, said the current situation is pushing many independents out of business. "We're seeing a squeeze," he said. "Fuel and equipment are going up faster than the rates some of these truckers are getting for hauling, and it's only natural some of them are dropping out."

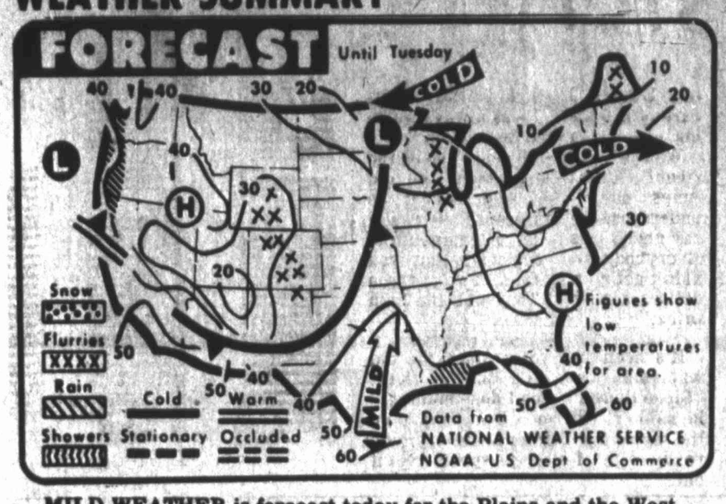

The more popular trucks, such as Kenworths or Peterbilts, now cost approximately $38,000 to $40,000 with another $20,000 or more for a trailer. Owner-operators put down at least 10 to 15 per cent with finance companies like Large's and pay off the rest at $1,000 or more a month.

"We're not getting any more new contracts the way we used to because they don't have the money," said Jay Sollars, an official here of Associates Financial Services, which holds $700 million in finance contracts with owner-operators around the country.

"The truckers are coming to us now for $6,000 or so to get their engines overhauled instead of buying new rigs," said Sollars. "Before we were

Committee expected to present bond election ideas on Tuesday

By LARRY SUTHERLAND

The possibility of calling a parks and zoo bond election likely will be resolved Tuesday by Midland City Council.

The council cannot formally call a bond election for April 2 at Tuesday's meeting because of legal requirements, but it will probably decide the form and amount for the election.

Questions that need to be resolved are whether there should be one parks bond issue or three separate issues for the voters, whether the parks bond or bonds should total $5 million or perhaps as little as $3.5 million, and whether there should be a $3.25 million zoo bond issue in the bond election.

The city council has turned the matter over to its financial advisory committee, and the committee is expected to present its recommendations on the bond election Tuesday.

Another agenda item, one of importance to swimmers, is an ordinance that will come before the council raising admissions to the city-run swimming pools.

The new fees would be 25 cents for persons under 18 and 50 cents for adults at Hogan and Ulmer pools, 30 cents for Youths and 60 cents for adults at Alamo pool, and 25 cents for admission to Halff and Washington pools.

At the suggestion of Midland County Judge Barbara Culver, the council also will consider having a joint meeting and public hearing with the school board and county commissioners to consider future local government participation in the Midland Community Action Agency.

The controversial agency has drawn objections from Midland elected officials for its past administration.

The public hearing, which likely would take place in early March, ultimately might decide whether the agency can even function, since a representative from Midland government is needed on the board of directors.

The council will also hear a request from Tall City TV Cable Company to raise its base monthly rate of $5.75 to $6.75 for cable service.

In other action, council will:

— Consider a preliminary plat of Lincoln Mercury Addition, located between Wall Street and Bankhead Highway.

— Consider an ordinance vacating portions of Benton Street, Poplar Lane, Calhoun Street, Walnut Lane and Garden Lane, all in east Midland.

— Consider an ordinance on second reading, vacating an alley at Berg Motor Co. property.

— Consider an ordinance on second reading, Gary Anderson's request for zone change from single family to local retail of a one-acre tract of land at FM 868 and Midkiff Road.

— Consider an ordinance on second reading, vacating block 6 in Arrowhead Acres, principally for park use.

— Consider request by Fraternal Order of Eagles to change the date for Eagles' use of Cub Stadium for a circus.

— Consider request for limited concession rights at Hogan Park.

— Consider Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church's request for use of Midland Parks and Recreation Department's showmobile.

— Hear updated report from a representative of the architectural firm of Hudgins, Thompson, Ball and Associates on improvements to the Air Terminal Building.

— Consider appointments to the Midland Board of Equalization.

— Consider awarding the bid for cleanup of two large areas within the city.

— Consider resolution awarding the bid for 200 uniform vests for police department.

— Consider approval of specifications and advertising for bids for 400 water meters for warehouse inventory.

— Consider resolution approving specifications and advertising for bids for sign faces and blanks for traffic engineering division.

— Consider change in the Ulmer Park pool contract.

— Consider dedication of a street on property sold to the Girl Scouts.

— Discuss possible need for right-of-way on South Terrell Street to connect it with Interstate 20 service road.

— Consider approving specifications and authorizing for bids for seal coat material.

— Discuss possibility of excavating city-owned property across Midkiff Road.

— Consider an agreement with Texas State Highway Department for modernizing traffic signals and funding 10 per cent of the cost.

— Consider Continental Oil Co.'s request to lease a parking space.

— Discuss status of current city projects and programs.

— Consider resolution amending the farm lease agreement to allow for possible reimbursement of capital costs.

Washington's birthday no holiday for Senate

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Senate faced a packed holiday agenda today, including a $51.5 million adult probation proposal and a "Sunset" bill that would abolish state agencies unless they can justify their existence.

Also on the lengthy Washington's birthday calendar was a measure that could cost the state $50 million in the next two years in payments to teaching hospitals.

Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, told the Senate last week that chairman Paul Cromwell of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles had estimated that a statewide probation system might enable prison officials to release 25 per cent of the inmates within two years.

Schwartz quoted former state prison director George Beto as saying it is "unthinkable" that Texas doesn't have such a system.

Schwartz said his bill would shift funding of probation from the counties — which now pay $10 million a year — to the state.

House members scheduled debate on a $256.8 million tax cut package that would repeal the 4 per cent state sales tax on gas and electric bills, allow city councils to do the same with their 1 per cent local tax and provide considerable inheritance tax relief.

Passage, which seems likely, would send the measure on to the Senate. It is expected to go to a conference committee, however, because spending demands exceed estimated tax income to the state.

Legislators will want to know how much they will have to spend on general appropriations, school finance and teacher salaries — not to mention highways — before giving up that more than a quarter billion dollars in revenue.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe has recommended repeal of the sales tax on residential utility bills, which would chop a $100 bill to $96.

Revenue loss from the inheritance tax bill is estimated at $28.3 million for the next two years.

The utility tax repeal would lose $228.5 million if it gets the two-thirds majority in both houses required to put it into effect on July 1. Otherwise, it would take effect in early September and cost the state $210 million.

Independent truckers now a dying breed

buying new trucks for these guys."

It isn't hard to spot the signs that times are tough for the independents. Here at Alphy's a handful of truckers sit inside the brightly lit dining room sipping coffee or munching on hamburgers. But most of the drivers are not to be seen, even though there are hundreds of trucks lined up side by side.

"Five years ago on a nice night like this you'd see bunches of truck drivers out here talking and sitting around sharing a few beers," said Cota. "Now they buy a six-pack and sit in the cab drinking by themselves. No one offers anything to anyone. Everybody's watching their pennies."

Not even the two young women cruising the long lines of darkened trucks in a dark blue Chevrolet waiting for a quick flash of headlights from a prospective customer were doing any business. The going price is $20 for a woman. "The guys just don't throw it around the way they used to," said Cota.

Owner-operators pay their own expenses during hauls and are reimbursed from produce brokers or from companies they lease their trucks and services to. Rates vary widely from week to week. Two weeks ago truckers here were getting paid $3,000 to haul a load of lettuce from Los Angeles to the East Coast. This week the going rate was $2,200.

But that is gross pay. After expenses such as fuel, maintenance, food and lodging, a trucker can end up with only a few hundred dollars. And if he has a breakdown he may lose money on the run.

The cost of truck runs has gone up dramatically since the shutdown, despite promises from legislators that efforts would be made to lighten the financial burdens on independents. Diesel fuel that cost 31 or 32 cents a gallon then now costs 59 cents at the Standard station here. Truckers said they use the facilities of big chains like Standard or Union 76 and then go somewhere else to buy fuel from cutrate stations.

Prices of permits to haul through various states have gone up also. Permit requirements and prices vary widely from state to state, and independents say they are usually the first to be challenged by authorities seeking non-permit loads. An independent from Chicago said he regularly hangs the identification of one of the big trucking firms on the side of his truck to fend off curious police and state authorities at weight stations.

"It works fine," said the trucker. "They see that sign and they just wave you right on through. It's the gypsy independent they're looking for."

Independents must also put up with fly-by-night agricultural co-ops and brokers who run up thousands of dollars in fees to truckers and then declare bankruptcy, leaving the independents empty-handed. One Texas broker went through four such bankruptcies before he was jailed recently.

According to Parkhurst, independents are also victims of licensed carriers who, he said, skim off some of the payment for a load that ordinarily would go to the trucker.

Parkhurst's independents association, which he says numbers 20,000 owner-operators, is backing a bill in Congress this year that would allow owner-operators to haul a wider variety of freight and free them from total dependence on agricultural brokers and co-ops. The bill is opposed by the American Trucking Associations, which represent 25,000 trucking companies.

Cota, 38, and his fellow truckers, however, do not see much of a future for the owner-operator. It now costs the Camden, S.C., trucker $105 for an oil change and a lubrication job on his 1974 red-and-white Kenworth tractor-trailer. In 1974, when Cota took part in the truckers' shutdown in Dayton, Ohio, the same bill would have come to about $46, he said.

Last week, Cota said, he gave in after running out of money on his latest haul and signed on with a licensed carrier to transport heavy machinery to Dallas. "To me that represents the end of my freedom," he said. "But there was no choice. I've got four kids at home and they want to eat and I want to eat so my freedom comes second."

Mr.and Mrs. Ruben Lee Bustillos, 711 N. Loraine St., boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosendo M. Reyes, 122 N. Eisenhower St., boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Iparco Lujan Saenz, 1107 E. Hamby Ave., boy.

Stabbing victim listed in satisfactory condition

Charles Coleman, 30, 502 S. Tyler St., was stabbed in P. J.'s Barbeque, a restaurant located at 2301 E. Kentucky Ave., police report.

The stabbing occurred shortly after 7 a.m. Sunday, and resulted from an argument about a woman, police said. Two Odessa men reportedly were involved in the fight with Coleman, who was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital and later to Odessa Medical Center. He was admitted at the Odessa hospital, where he is listed in satisfactory condition.

GUNS STOLEN

Johnny Urias, County Road 117 in Midland County, Sunday morning reported the theft of two revolvers and a 35 mm camera from his trailer home, police said. The loss was estimated at $600.

CRIMINAL MISCHIEF

Several windows were broken at Sun Oil Co., 901 W. Wall St, and the loss was estimated at $725, Midland police said. Employe L. L. Peek discovered the damage this morning and said it was the second time in two weeks someone has broken windows at the office.

ONE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

David Patton, 20, 709 Sinclair Ave., suffered minor injuries Saturday while a passenger in a car driven by Louis F. Williams, 3707 Monty Drive.

Police said Williams was involved in a collision with a parked car while traveling in the 3500 block of West Ohio Avenue about 11:18 p.m.

Patton was treated for contusions at Midland Memorial Hospital and released.

YOUTH INJURED

Bobby Riggins, 16, 1804 W. Kentucky Ave., was slightly injured in an auto accident on County Road 111 Sunday morning, police report.

Midland police said William L. Self, 1409 S. Colorado Ave., lost control of a car he was driving. Four persons were in Self's car, but only Riggins was injured. He was treated for a fractured arm at Midland Memorial Hospital and released.

with Carl Cromwell, who was the drilling contractor on Santa Rita No. 1 discovery well.

After Cromwell's death, Kimberlin formed a partnership with the late Hap Corrigan, a pioneer oil prospector in West Texas. They drilled wells in a number of West Texas counties.

In the late 1920s, Kimberlin and Clayton Williams Sr. of Fort Stockton formed a partnership and operated an ice plant at Crane.

Still later, Kimberlin served as an agent for Gulf Oil Co. After that association, he operated in the Masterson area of Pecos County.

Kimberlin formed the Samwan Oil Co., Inc., in 1934. He was active in that company until his retirement from active duty in the oil business.

Survivors, in addition to the Midland son, include the widow, the former Virginia B. Tydings; a daughter, Mrs. Wanda J. Keever of Houston; another son, Robert Kemper Kimberlin Jr. of Possum Kingdom; nine grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Officials hope owls can give hoot about rats

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Officials here are hoping eight barn owls will give a hoot about a rodent problem that has so far stymied humans.

Tired of spending money each year in an apparently futile effort to poison its rats, officials say it's time to give nature a crack.

Rats are the staples of a barn owl's diet, said Dick Ryan, manager of Turtle Back Zoo in West Orange, which is donating the owls to this community to prey on the rodents.

"The owls feed very quietly about three in the morning," Ryan explained. "They are able to find and kill their prey in complete darkness."

"It's a non-polluting, non-hazardous, permanent rodenticide and it's the first deliberate attempt I know of to use barn owls to control rodents," he said.

could be back-siphoned by a vacuum into the tank and then possibly into the water supply. A vacuum breaker could prevent that, the article said.

Polluted water from the kitchen sink, too, could be pulled into the fresh water supply if the hose and nozzle were defective.

Similarly, if the lavatory is fouled up, the polluted water could be siphoned into the fresh water system.

Of course, most all of that is basic. That's why soiled water is routed one way, and good water is directed through other streams and pipes.

And that's why plumbing codes should be enforced — for the good health of the public and for the good living of the plumbers.

"Good plumbing actually costs the consumer no more than faulty plumbing," the booklet, not about to back up (or down), states.

"But even if that were not true, could any saving be more important than the protection of public health?"

As if saying "Beware the Plague," the booklet mentions the outbreak of diseases and deaths attributed to faulty plumbing.

So, the plumbers' word is to watch out for those gurgling grelins in the sink, bowl, water well, cistern, water fountain shower, bathtub, water tower, reservoir, or at the sewage treatment plant.

Yes, watch out and be cautious, bordering on the leery, next time you reach for a glass of good, pure, clean water.

Fair readings, wind forecast

March winds will begin a few days early in Midland as winds are expected to increase to between 20 to 30 mph Tuesday, the weatherman said.

Conditions are expected to remain fair and a little warmer through Tuesday, said a National Weather Service spokesman at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The low tonight in the low 40s should be followed by a high Tuesday in the low 80s.

Winds from the southwest at 5 to 10 mph should increase to 20 to 30 mph Tuesday.

As of late this morning, however, the wind had not begun to blow in area cities.

Andrews reported cool, sunny and calm conditions. Lamesa, Stanton and Rankin all reported clear skies and no wind.

Crane was clear with a little wind. Big Lake was cool, partly cloudy and calm. Odessa was clear and calm.

Oldest living waterman tells his story

The Washington Post

BENEDICT, Md. — "I will be 90 in a couple of months," the waterman said. "They all say, 'You can't go on a boat anymore.' Miss it? Sure I do. I miss it very much."

Charley Thompson, the oldest living waterman in this Charles County village of 500 on the Patuxent River, told how it was:

"People here had a living in oyster, oyster and fish. That was the livelihood around here, 40 years ago. Things is changing, you know. I can't understand it quite myself. Everybody lived here got their living out of the water, out of the river. All the old fishermen I knew are gone, died ..."

There are wisps of yellowish-white hair on Charley Thompson's head, a good set of bottom teeth and a wide gap above. There is a faint Scandinavian lilt to his voice, mixed with a slight southern Maryland accent. He retains a rugged look, in his cap with a ship's-wheel ornament and the new red-and-green plaid wool shirt he got for Christmas.

His face is lined, his eyes peer sharply through or over a pair of sunglasses as he recalls the past. "I fished all my life. When I was a kid in Norway, I used to fish, fish, fish," he said.

He was born March 23, 1887, and he came to the United States, to New York City, in 1904. He joined the carpenters union three years later. "I drove a million nails," he boasted. "Each man should drive a keg of nails a day."

He lived in Pittsburgh and Washington before moving to Benedict in 1935.

"There was a girl in Washington," he said. "She says, 'I got a lot down in Benedict.' It was down on Patuxent Avenue," the narrow lane that passes for 'Main Street' along the river's edge. "We got together, built a house. We didn't last very long, but I stayed ... We had no children, so here I am all by myself."

He works two days a week sharpening knives in Shorter's Place, a riverfront restaurant opened in 1920 by the late "Capt. Tobe" Shorter and now presided over by his grandson, Harry A. Shorter, Jr.

"That's the only job I got," he said, almost apologetically, as he sat in a booth at Shorter's. There's only a $30 monthly union pension and $250 in social security. "I can live on it, but I can't do much on it," he said.

Thompson lives in one of four bungalows Shorter owns — the old man calls them "Shorter's shanties" — across the street from the restaurant. "Harry Sr. said when I sold my house, 'You gonna go up there and take No. 2 (bungalo). You ain't gonna pay no rent.' " But Thompson wouldn't take a handout. "I pay $60 a month ... I'm satisfied all right ...

"Sometimes, I go up and sit at the end of the bar (at Shorter's) and have a beer. They say they'll put it on my tab. I don't like that. I always take care of myself ... I was always working, even during the Depression."

What was it like 40 years ago on the river? "I'm talking about the old times now," he said, as if to underscore the difference. "I would say there was a lot of competition. Everybody was oystering, but you didn't get nothing for it. Two or three dollars a bushel. That was the high price."

It's been two years since the old waterman has been on the river. "Since then, I haven't done nothing," he said. "I still got a boat. It's up on the shore. Got a motor and everything ready to go. Maybe this spring I get it out."

Y regulars have a passion for their routine

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — About 11 a.m. every weekday, crowds of the distinguishedlooking enter the Y's health club. Some lilt in like little boys on recess break, others stride like lawyers or bank executives. Some lumber under excess weight, some even hobble.

Three-piece suits are shed and hung neatly in tall, narrow lockers, to be replaced by wrinkled, malodorous costumes — colored T-shirts, faded shorts, maybe a cloth sweatband wrapped around a wellgroomed head, and fancy jogging shoes encasing fuzzy wool socks.

The atmosphere is reminiscent of a college locker room a few hours before kickoff. A crescendo of enthusiasm builds as the participants pep each other with good-natured needling and brisk chatter.

"It's something I kind of get psyched-up for," says Andy Hamilton, a balding but trim 54-year-old lawyer. "It's something I look forward to every morning. It really breaks up the day."

Hamilton's daily luncheon menu consists of running five miles around the gymnasium — a dizzying 100 laps. "It gets monotonous, for sure," he says. "But you can daydream, or even solve problems or blow out all the stress you've built up in the morning."

Doesn't he get hungry without lunch? "Not really," Hamilton snaps, wiping his brow just after the last lap. "All the blood leaves the stomach and goes to the muscles. Oh, I might get a little weak sometimes in the middle of the afternoon and need some orange juice or some cottage cheese."

Most of the Y's regulars know each other, and it's obvious that the few hours of communal contortion are as much a social affair as a physical ritual.

"If there is one place in town where you can meet a wide range of people, this is it," says John Gatchell, 51, an independent geologist who works out three times a week. "If there is such a thing as a gentlemen's club in this city, I guess this qualifies," he says.

The club's membership is indeed diverse. At the Oklahoma City Y's health club, regularly attending members range from oil company executives to bartenders, from a minister to a federal judge, as well as doctors, lawyers and retired men from all professions. Probably the best-known member is Bud Wilkinson, a television sports commentator and former football coach at the University of Oklahoma.

Ages range from 18 to 95, says Ira Cloud, an American Indian who runs the club. "Our 95-year-old fellow doesn't come in so often anymore," says Cloud, a soft-spoken man with a slow smile. "But we have a Mr. Dupree, he's 93 and comes in once or twice a week to work out."

Cloud agrees the lunchtime crowd is a particularly festive group. "Everybody tries to make it a good time," he says.

"And we hardly ever talk business," says Gatchell. "In fact, it's almost an unspoken taboo. This is strictly recreational."

Greenwood to eye calendar

Greenwood school trustees are scheduled to adopt a school calendar when they meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the board room at Greenwood High School.

They also are scheduled to appoint election judges and approve expenditures.

AT&T vice chairman wants no competition

HOUSTON (AP) — The vice chairman of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. has asked the nation's independent telephone companies to join in a fight to restrict the number of newcomers to the industry.

William Ellinghaus urged delegates to the National Telephone Cooperative Association (NTCA) recently to voice their support for the Consumer Communications Reform Act now before Congress.

Ellinghaus said the bill is a reaffirmation of a long-established policy protecting the telephone industry from "duplication of service." He said that policy has allowed development of an efficient, economical, nationwide communications system but it is being threatened by recent Federal Communications Commission rulings.

He said Congress must halt a developing trend that could boost home telephone rates 60 per cent or more.

"Competition is good but the question here is whether Congress should change a policy that has provided the lowest telephone rates in the world," Ellinghaus said.

He said congressional approval of the bill would reverse FCC rulings that permit newcomers to claim large shares of profitable long distance telephone services.

The legislation would require newcomers to prove they would not be duplicating facilities or service already provided by existing firms.

Ellinghaus said Congress, not a government agency, should decide whether America's communications network, which he called "a priceless national resource" should be abandoned to "unbridled entrepreneurism."

He said opponents of the bill "are not poor, struggling, threadbare visionaries fresh out of Horatio Alger."

"They are multi-billion dollar corporations," he said.

He did not mention any of the newcomers by name in his speech to the delegates but later in a news conference he said they include IBM, Aetna Life, RCA and Southern Pacific.

Ellinghaus objected to a newsmen referring to the bill as the "Bell Bill." "It's an industry bill," he said.

However, he did not object when a reporter called the AT&T a monopoly.

"Of course it's a monopoly," Ellinghaus said. But he added the monopoly was created by Congress to assure the development of a nationwide communications system after competitive efforts by "any number of companies" in the early 1900s proved incapable of providing one.

NTCA president Frank James said he expects members will vote to approve the bill.

"I think there is almost unanimous support among our membership for the intent of the bill," said James, of West Jefferson, N. C.

The cooperative represents 238 independent companies that primarily operate in rural areas.

Volunteers needed

Most persons undoubtedly have read or heard something about the most worthwhile Big Brothers-Big Sisters program in Midland, but all too many perhaps haven't given it serious thought.

Well, the announcement that 26 boys and six girls are on the program's waiting list right here in the Tall City most certainly should get and hold the interest of scores of Midlanders who always have responded nobly to such calls and situations.

The fact that there is a waiting list of this nature in Midland is somewhat surprising in itself, but this results perhaps from the fact that many residents have not been aware of this particular need until now.

This, then, is one of the objectives of Big Brothers-Big Sisters Week in Midland, the observance of which began Sunday. Various means of acquainting more residents with the overall goals, achievements and needs of the program will be conducted during the special week.

Hundreds of church attenders Sunday heard appeals from pulpits for members and others to become volunteer Big Brothers and Big Sisters in the far-reaching program.

We believe that the the response to the call for volunteers will be forthcoming promptly. This is the Midland way.

In Midland, the Big Brothers-Big Sisters program is sponsored by Family Services, which has done an excellent job in the comparatively brief period since the program was launched here.

But the key to its success, because of its unique concept, is volunteer assistance.

By offering personal friendship, under the supervision of a trained professional, the Big Brothers and Big Sisters meet the needs of the child for guidance and upright personality of a mature adult. These boys and girls have been deprived of the influence of a strong two-parent family for one reason or another, and they need a Big Brother or Big Sister influence. The results have been of tremendous success here and elsewhere.

This can be a great and most rewarding opportunity for personal service. It requires only limited time, but the benefits are unlimited.

Your assistance is needed. Please contact Family Services, 683-4241, for additional information.

Soviet challenges

At his press conference recently, President Carter expressed doubt that the Soviet Union is testing him. At the same time he spoke out strongly in behalf of human rights.

It was only a few days later that Soviet police arrested Yuri Orlov, the chairman of a dissident group publicizing the Soviet Union's non-compliance with human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accords.

It would appear, certainly, that the arrest of Orlov was a calculated affront — a direct reaction to President Carter's statement on human rights and a warning to other Soviet dissidents.

Orlov was the third rebel arrested within a week. Fifty-three congressmen have signed a petition addressed to President Carter urging him to make an "effective and credible response" to the arrest of one of the other dissidents, Alexander Ginzburg.

It is evident that the Soviet Union is stepping up, rather than slowing down, its exchanges with President Carter and Congress.

Mr. Carter should be pondering about what an effective and credible response to the Soviet Union might be, should he become convinced that a test is being made.

One thing is clear. Exchanges like the President's challenges on human rights and the Soviet Union's response feed on themselves.

If President Carter does not respond promptly after the test becomes obvious, the size and the nature of it will grow after each exchange.

And the first thing you know, we could be in serious trouble.

PANAMA CANAL

Minister quits after talks in Washington

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

Panamanian dictator Gen. Omar Torrijos seems to have lost some of his anxiety for prompt conclusion of a new canal treaty with the United States.

He got rid of the veteran Isthmian diplomat who had been expected to head the Panamanian negotiating team that has started another round of canal talks with the United States.

That meant, at least, that any preliminary understandings Foreign Minister Aquilino Boyd may have reached during the recent week he spent in Washington, talking to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and others, must be set aside for possible renegotiation.

Torrijos' sacking of Boyd cannot fail to slow the proceedings.

It was not the first time Torrijos has intervened in the treaty talks in such an unusual fashion.

In April, 1976, he unexpectedly accepted the resignation of then foreign minister, Juan Antonio Tack, without any logical, public explanation.

Tack was the Panamanian who, in February, 1974, worked out the joint statement of principles with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger under which subsequent negotiations have been held.

Those principles included acceptance by the United States of the concept of a new, fixed-term treaty to supersede the Hay-Bunau Varilla treaty of 1903.

The 1903 pact authorized the United States to build the canal and granted the United States rights over the 10-mile-wide, 50-mile-long Canal Zone "in perpetuity," or forever.

Strangely, there never was much of a public discussion of Tack's abrupt departure from the Panamanian cabinet.

However, some Panamanians say that Tack quit at a crucial point in the treaty talks when he became convinced that Torrijos was not so sincerely committed to getting complete jurisdiction over the canal as he pretended.

The suggestion may sound strange to those who have listened to Torrijos' earthy, long-winded harangues on the subject of the canal.

But, there are those of us foreigners who have met and talked with Torrijos privately who give the man credit for being more than a chain-smoking, heavy-drinking National Guard officer. By now, after eight years trying to boss the Isthmian republic, the possibility exists that he may have come to the conclusion that neither he, nor anyone else, could run Panama and the canal, without the U.S. presence, including 10,000 to 15,000 U.S. troops, in the Canal Zone.

Why, then, was Boyd removed from the treaty negotiating team and allowed to resign?

There can only be conjecture at this point.

Boyd returned from Washington Feb. 6 exuding confidence that a new treaty could be drawn up in short order.

That was in marked contrast with Torrijos' earlier warnings against overoptimism. Torrijos has been insisting that he will reject a treaty that does not provide that all U.S. rights in Panama terminate the end of the century and that U.S. troops not remain beyond then on pretext of defending the canal or guaranteeing its neutrality. A treaty of that sort would be difficult to get through the U.S. Congress, and Torrijos knows it.

In accepting Boyd's resignation, Torrijos did complain that "the struggle for national liberation does not permit any Panamanian the historical right to proceed individually."

Was that a suggestion that Boyd had sold out to the United States? Panamanians doubt it, knowing Boyd and the political climate there.

Some Panamanians say that Boyd may have struck up a deal with Panamanian opposition political leaders and that Torrijos considered him a threat to the government.

That is a logical possibility, although no supporting evidence has been offered. However, given the simple fact that no government in Panama can survive without support of the National Guard, it would follow that for Boyd to be a real threat he would have to enjoy the backing of a significant number of Guard officers.

If that is the case, Torrijos may be nearing the end of his time as "chief of government," a post he created to outrank President Demetrio Lakas.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The true story of Gary Gilmore

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Gary Gilmore died thumbing his nose at society. He gulped down some contraband whiskey and glared around the execution room. "Let's do it," he said tersely. Then a Utah firing squad did its grim duty.

Now a psychological study by his prison doctor suggests that Gilmore may have stage-managed his own dramatic exit. He certainly had the flair for it. He was bright enough, with a sense of drama and a way with words.

According to his psychological history, he was "extremely hostile and aggressive." He often boiled over with rage. But he also had a "predisposition for acting out behavior" and a strange ability to manipulate other people.

His confidential records reveal that he led hunger strikes and organized suicide pacts in other prisons. There was a suspicion that he sometimes persuaded inmates to take suicidal risks which he shrewdly avoided himself. For example, he once reportedly mixed water with the blood from his wrist wounds to make the bleeding look worse than it was.

These incidents had their dramatic effect. But the ultimate drama for Gary Gilmore was the death wait at Utah state prison. The chief medical officer, Dr. Calvin Reed Brown, told us that Gilmore was fully aware of the impact he was having on a nation debating its first execution in a decade.

The condemned man began a 25-day hunger strike to dramatize his demand for a speedy execution. But Dr. Brown, breaking official silence, said Gilmore complained of a headache and took medication every four hours. This contained enough sugar to keep him going, the doctor reported.

Gilmore also purchased $200 worth of groceries at the prison commissary and stashed the food in his cell. Throughout most of the hunger strike, he was confined in a recreation room near the cafeteria. He complained mightily about the location and demanded to be moved away from the cafeteria, lest the public get the impression his refusal to eat was a sham.

Another time, the doctor asked Gilmore during a physical examination whether he really wanted to die. "You know I do," replied the convict. "The papers have said it."

He appeared always to have one eye on the audience as he played out his macho role. One of his last requests was for a copy of the Newsweek cover story on him.

But for sheer drama, few scenarios could surpass the suicide pact he made with his fiancee, Nicole Barrett. He lured her into the pact, with romantic poetry and artful appeals. Then he made sure she would take a lethal dose, while he carefully limited his own overdose, Dr. Brown told us.

As an added precaution, Gilmore swallowed his Seconal capsules shortly before the regular prison rounds, so he would be discovered in time, according to the doctor. It turned out that he was found even earlier by a prison technician who stopped by his cell to inform him of a long-distance call from singer Johnny Cash.

Gilmore was revived, no worse for the experience, in time to bask in the latest publicity. But poor Nicole, discovered by neighbors in the nick of time, barely pulled through. Said Dr. Brown: "Gilmore was a manipulator of people, of even his closest friends."

The doomed man appeared nervous as he boarded the truck for the execution room, Dr. Brown recalled. Yet Gilmore maintained his macho manner until the end. He told the doctor that he hoped there were "no hard feelings" over his past conduct. Dr. Brown asked whether Gilmore had any last requests. "How about a bulletproof vest?" smiled the condemned killer.

Of course, the last has not been heard of Gary Gilmore. Promoters are preparing to immortalize him in print, on film and on T-shirts. Already, his death-row romance with Nicole is taking on the dimensions of another Bonnie and Clyde legend.

But before the legend completely transcends reality, the true story should be told. The prison records show that he ran away from home at 12, that he was busted for auto theft at 14 and that he hung out with street gangs in Portland, Ore.

He constantly sought new thrills through both crime and sex.

At age 18, he sought a new thrill by raping young girls. He also was in and out of jail. He began his suicidal theatrics in the 1960s. He slashed his wrists, tried to hang himself and took an overdose of pills. He was committed to the Oregon state hospital four times in 1963-64.

He refused to cooperate with prison psychiatrists. He rejected group therapy and gave flippant answers to the psychiatrists' questions. Yet he was not considered insane but merely "anti-social," with "severe personality disorder."

Said Dr. Brown: "Gilmore killed two young fathers in cold blood and committed practically every other crime in the book. Most of the other inmates at the prison were relieved to see him dead."

This is the folk hero, who is about to be immortalized.

INSIDE REPORT:

A pledge is a pledge, Mr. Carter, handwritten or not

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — The way the White House is handling Jimmy Carter's campaign pledge to deregulate the price of gas, by downgrading its authenticity, is graphically illustrated by this recent exchange between a reporter and one of President Carter's senior aides:

Q: Does President Carter consider as an iron-clad commitment his Oct. 19, 1976, letter to the governors of Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma promising unqualified deregulation of natural gas?

A. (Pause.) Well, did Jimmy write it in his own handwriting, or did he just sign a letter written for him by the staff or somebody else? That might be interesting to know.

The implication: Hand-written letters by the President are the word; typewritten documents signed by him may be suspect. This clearly would increase flexibility in Carter's pledge to fulfill every campaign promise. Moreover, it would give Mr. Carter leeway on the politically prickly matter of whether or not to end federal regulation of natural gas prices.

The question arose because Dr. James Schlesinger, Mr. Carter's cabinet-level energy adviser, and Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus indicated there is no commitment to deregulation. Congressional sponsors of deregulation who had campaigned for Mr. Carter — including Rep. Robert Krueger of Texas — were unpleasantly surprised.

So, shortly after Mr. Carter's inauguration, Krueger informed Schlesinger that Jimmy Carter was President because that Oct. 19 letter enabled him to carry Texas and Louisiana. When we reported that fact a week later, the letter became central in what begins to look like the climactic phase of the generation-long fight over gas regulation.

Reports were published recently that the letter was "drafted by oil and gas interests" — mainly by a Washington lawyer named Duke Ligon. The implicit suggestion here is that Mr. Carter is a dupe who really did not realize what he was signing. This might tend to clarify the cryptic remarks of the senior Carter aide drawing a distinction between hand-written and typed letters signed by his chief.

In truth, however, Mr. Carter is no dupe — and his letter was not manufactured by big oil. The letter was conceived Oct. 9 at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas where Gov. Dolph Briscoe of Texas and Gov. David Boren of Oklahoma came together for the Texas-Oklahoma football game.

Chatting with then Democratic national chairman Robert Strauss, the two governors worried that Mr. Carter might lose the oil-and-gas-producing states — and the presidency. Thus, it was decided in the Cotton Bowl to draft a letter for Carter's signature that would align him against gas price regulation — and enable Dolph Briscoe aggressively to campaign for him.

Boren's staff immediately relayed that decision to Ligon, a former federal energy official now in a Washington law firm representing oil and gas interests. A lifelong friend of Boren, Ligon had been giving the governor energy advice for months and promptly sent him three new memos — on natural gas, oil and conversion to coal.

The natural gas memo was drawn upon by Boren's staff in drafting a letter for Mr. Carter pledging unconditional deregulation. That letter was sent to Carter headquarters in Atlanta the week of Oct. 11. It was signed without material change by Mr. Carter Oct. 19 and mailed back to Briscoe, Boren and Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana — a standard campaign procedure. Ligon did not learn of the letter's existence until the next week when a copy was shown him at a gas producers' convention in New Orleans.

Mr. Carter had more than two weeks remaining in the campaign to repudiate or modify that promise. Instead, during an eleventh-hour swing through Louisiana trying to salvage it from seemingly sure victory by Gerald Ford, Mr. Carter unequivocally supported deregulation. That reversed the trend in Louisiana.

No realist expects the President to live up totally to his Oct. 19 letter or his Louisiana speeches promising unconditional deregulation. But Gov. Boren, an early Carter supporter, and Rep. Krueger will be relatively content with deregulation limited to new gas and phased over five years.

What worries them is the possibility the plan will put some cap on future prices or tie gas prices to oil prices, substituting statutory regulation for regulation by the Federal Power Commission. That would perpetuate the same conditions that have caused today's natural gas shortages despite plentiful reserves.

Such suspicions are engendered by White House dancing around the Oct. 19 letter. To the President's nervous supporters in gas-producing states, a promise is a promise, handwritten or not.

C.W. Holmes dies in Andrews

ANDREWS — C. W. "Rip" Holmes, 47, was dead on arrival at an Andrews hospital about 3:45 p.m. Sunday. Justice of the Peace Jay Williams ruled the death was due to a heart attack.

Services are pending at Singleton Funeral Home in Andrews.

A native of Carey, Holmes had lived in Andrews since 1957, when he moved from Seagraves. He was owner-operator of Rip's Trading Post. He was a veteran of the Korean War.

Survivors include his widow, Verna Holmes; two sons, Russell Earl Holmes of Burnet and Rodney Lynn Holmes of Andrews; a daughter, Mrs. Patricia Louise Rex of Spring; his mother, Mrs. Naomi Holmes of Seagraves; a sister, Mrs. Roberta Carson of Seminole; two brothers, Aaron Holmes of Eunice, N. M., and George "Curly" Holmes of Seagraves; and four grandchildren.

Myrtle Green rites Tuesday

KERMIT — Myrtle L. Green, 80, died Sunday in her home after an illness. She was the mother of R. D. Green of Andrews.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in First United Methodist Church in Kermit. Burial will be in Kermit Cemetery, directed by Cooper Funeral Home.

Mrs. Green was born Oct. 8, 1896, in Erath County. She was married to Joe Henry Green Aug. 1, 1914, in Stephenville. She had lived in Kermit for 16 years, having moved from Gruver.

Survivors include five sons, four daughters, 20 grandchildren, 21 great-grandchildren and 11 great-great-grandchildren.

Midlander's mother dies

ODESSA — Ellie Ann Arledge, 98, died Friday in an Odessa nursing home. She was the mother of Mrs. Paul Jones of Midland.

Services were at 10:30 p.m. today in First Presbyterian Church. Burial was in Sunset Memorial Gardens, directed by Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Mrs. Arledge was born July 24, 1878, in Guntersville, Ala. She was a member of First Presbyterian Church.

Survivors include two sons, six daughters, two sisters, 16 grandchildren and 25 great grandchildren.

Crane woman's brother dies

RICHLAND SPRINGS — Charlie I. Munsell died Saturday at his residence. He was the brother of Mrs. Eddie Sheppard of Crane.

Services will be at 2 p.m. today in First Baptist Church of Richland Springs, with Masonic graveside services in Richland Springs Cemetery directed by Howell-Doran Funeral Home of San Saba.

Survivors include his wife, two daughters, a son, two brothers, three sisters, 10 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Marvin Watts services today

BIG SPRING — Marvin "Flats" Watts, 67, of Sand Spring died Sunday morning in a Midland hospital.

Services will be at 3:30 p.m. today in Coahoma Church of Christ. Burial will be in Coahoma Cemetery. John Snyder, minister of Coahoma Church of Christ, will officiate, assisted by Paul Keele.

A lifetime Howard County resident, he farmed for about 10 years and worked for the county for about 10 years before retiring in 1972 for health reasons.

Survivors include his widow, Nelda Watts; two sons, Jimmy Watts and Lynwood Watts, both of Midland; one daughter, Mrs. Don Todd of Canadian; two stepsons, Lynn King of Houston and Lanny King of Sand Spring; two stepdaughters, Mrs. Danny Walker and Mrs. Martin Latham, both of Coahoma; three brothers, Austin Watts of Krum, Elmo Watts of Jacksonville, Fla. and Floyd Watts of Breckenridge; two sisters, Mrs. Hubert Harris of Hamilton and Mrs. Robert Johnson of Belton; nine grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren.

McNerlin rites held today

Services will be held in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home at 2 p.m. today for George E. McNerlin, 87, of 1311 W. Missouri Ave., who died Saturday.

Pallbearers will be Jack Boyce, Dan Boyce, Fred Gist, Richard Braggs, Doyle Fitzgerald, and T. L. Henley.

Robertson new agent

LAMESA — Dawson County's new county agent for home economics will be Peggy Lynn Robertson, who takes office March 1.

She succeeds Mildred Crump, who retired last December.

Earthquake-predicting target of government research effort

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The federal government plans to embark this year on a major research effort aimed at developing, within the next decade, a reliable method for predicting all major earthquakes.

Two federal agencies, the National Science Foundation and the U.S. Geological Survey, expect to spend more than $800 million over the next 10 years on earthquake studies, including research on geological processes and observations of "precursory phenomena," such as color changes in well water and unusual animal behavior, that may forecast quakes.

The first phase of the new initiative is reflected in the budget the Ford Administration sent to Congress. It calls for $54 million in federal earthquake research spending in fiscal 1978, more than double current expenditures.

Budget officials say the new interest in earthquakes stems partly from experience in 1976, when quakes caused more than 700,000 deaths around the world — the highest total in more than four centuries.

The major reason for the increased federal effort is a new confidence on the part of earthquake experts — geologists and seismologists — that accurate prediction methods are within fairly close reach.

An advisory panel concluded last fall in a report to former prasidential science adviser H. Guyford Stever that "earthquake prediction ...has emerged from the realm of soothsaying to become a serious scientific endeavor with a significant likelihood of a short-term technological breakthrough.

"The new federal funding is going to permit us to gather the data necessary for pretty reliable prediction," Stever said. "Within a decade, if the research goes well, we should be able to predict the time, location, and magnitude of earthquakes in time to permit precautionary measures."

Geologists who share Stever's optimism point to seismological advances in China, where a corps of 5,000 to 10,000 government forecasters and millions of amateur "people's scientists" have accurately predicted two major earthquakes.

The most dramatic Chinese success came in the Haich'eng earthquake of 1975. The quake was forecast five hours before it occured, providing time to evacuate nearly 1 million people.

The result, according to Dr. Frank Press, chairman of the Department of Earth and Planetary Sciences at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was that "they lost a couple of hundred lives in an event that could have been expected to take a couple of hundred thousand."

The Chinese experience bodes well for American efforts at prediction, Press says, because "they have a few gimmicks of their own, but basically they're working from the same hypotheses that we're using."

Current earthquakes theory in the United States, China, and Japan, another center of seismological study, stems largely from the science of "plate tectonics," which holds that the earth's continents have all split off from a single land mass and are still drifting across the globe. Major faults in the earth, such as California's San Andreas fault, are considered to mark the borders between the drifting land masses, or "plates."

Oriental and occidental geologists have designed several new instruments in recent years that measure seismic waves within the earth and changes in magnetization, electrical resistance and other properties of the earth's crust.

The Chinese regularly measure the level and color of water in wells to gauge changes in subsurface pressure. They have also reported that animal behavior — dogs barking strangely, cats leading their kittens to open fields, snakes leaving their holes — are earthquake warning signs.

For all this progress, earthquake prediction is still a highly unreliable science. Although the Chinese are the world leaders at it, they failed to foresee the Tangshan earthquakes last July that devastated a major industrial region and killed an estimated 650,000 people.

I drove 240 miles a week to lose 39 pounds, and every mile was worth it!

Mrs. Charles Henley's True Story:
Diet pills, home exercise machines, bike riding—I'd tried everything I'd ever heard about to lose weight, but I still looked like I was about to have twins.

Not that I was expecting, it's just that I'd always had a problem with weight around my middle, and nothing seemed to help.

I heard about Pat Walker's from a friend, and even though it meant driving 80 miles round trip to the salon closest to my country home in Waller, I decided to do it. Two or three times a week I made the trip to have a treatment on Pat Walker's passive exercise unit, and to talk with my counselors about my progress.

They really motivate you to keep up the good work. I was so encouraged by their enthusiasm that I truly looked forward to my salon visits.

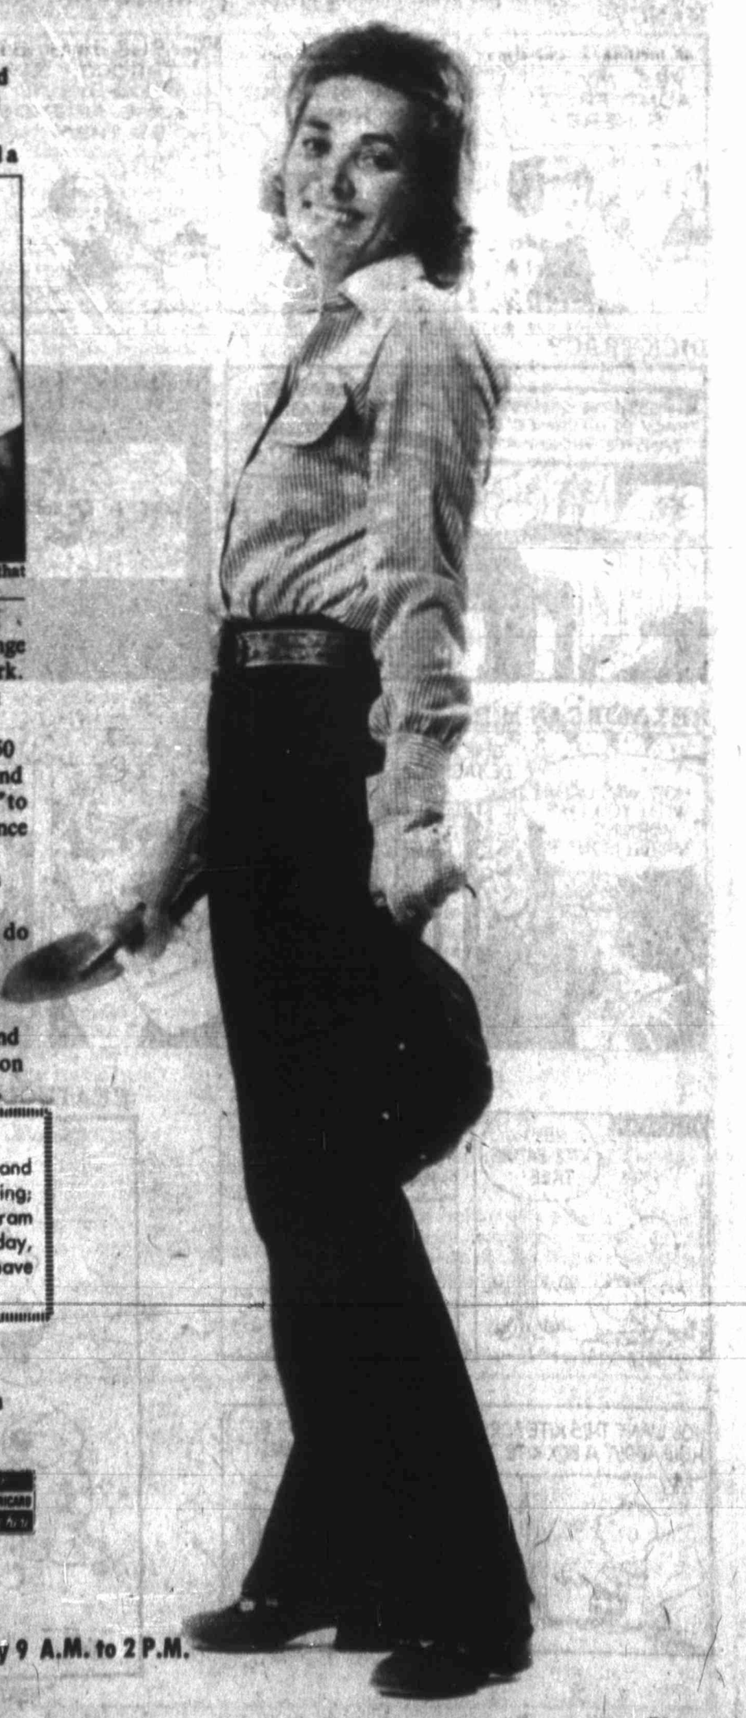

Me two years ago— and that isn't a maternity dress.

Sometimes I planned to have my hair done before my appointment at Pat Walker's. I knew it wouldn't get mussed up. I didn't even have to change out of my regular clothes, since the unit does all the work. You simply relax in a nice, private treatment room, and enjoy it.

When I started going to Pat Walker's, I weighed 150 pounds, and wore a size 15. Today, I weigh 111 pounds and wear a size 5. My waist measurement has gone from 32½" to 25—not bad for a 42-year old! No one could ever convince me that all the driving hasn't been worth it.

My husband and my son are so pleased, and that's very important to me. Although I love being a country housewife, and doing my own gardening and canning, I do want to look good—for myself and my family.

Now I've set a new goal for myself: 105 pounds. Do you have a goal? If you think you'll never make it, do what I did...call Pat Walker's for a sample treatment and free figure analysis. There are seven salons in the Houston area, so you can probably just drive around the corner.

Pat Walker invites you to come in for a free trial treatment and figure analysis. Additional snow falls in East

By The Associated Press

A low pressure center continued to intensify off the New England coast early today dropping heavy snow on parts of New York and New England.

The storm left nine inches to 10 inches of snow at Albany, N. Y., and 8 inches at Poughkeepsie, N.Y. Nine inches fell at Lebanon, N. H. In Maine accumulations varied from six inches at Houlton to four inches at Caribou. A heavy snow warning remained in effect through today for the eastern part of Maine.

Light snow was falling over the Appalachians, eastern Great Lakes region and parts of the Ohio Valley. Roanoke, Va., and Charleston W. Va., each had one inch of new snow.

HD Council announces area confab

The Midland County Home Demonstration Council met for a regular session in the community room at Commercial Bank and Trust.

Mrs. Alvey Bryant announced the district meeting slated for April will be held in Midland and the state meeting will be held in Galveston.

Judy Germany, county extension agent for home economics, announced an officer training session will be held March 1 in Big Spring. Mrs. Germany also said a national seminar for preschoolers will be March 22 in Odessa.

Council officers are Mrs. Bryant, chairman; Mrs. Robert Vincent, vice chairman; Mrs. Charles Barber, secretary-reporter, and Mrs. James Jones, treasurer.

DEAR ABBY

Wife refuses to 'mother' husband's lover

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Here's the situation: Lori, a 31-year-old single woman was recently adopted by her lover, Charlie, a 35-year-old man with two children and a wife who refuses to give him a divorce.

Charlie and Lori now live together and because they have the same last name, everyone assumes they are man and wife.

Charlie says his lawyer advised him that this arrangement is better for him than marriage because if Lori and he split, she can't sue him for alimony. Also, since he's supporting Lori he can claim a nice tax deduction.

Charlie's wife is having a fit because she is now legally the "mother" of her husband's sweetheart, and she doesn't like the idea one bit.

I understand that Lori's parents are still living, so I am puzzled as to how Charlie can adopt a "daughter" whose parents are living.

Please ask your legal hotshot to check out the above situation and let me know if it's kosher. It sounds like a good deal to me.—CURIOUS IN ARLINGTON

DEAR CURIOUS: Adoption laws differ from state to state, so if you're considering a similar setup, I advise you to consult your own legal hotshot.

DEAR ABBY: I'm told that mothers and daughters should be "best friends." Frankly, my mother gives me ulcers. Her penny-pinching drives us all up a wall.

For birthdays, Christmas and all gift-giving occasions she buys sale items that are invariably slightly damaged, the wrong size, useless or just plain ugly. And of course nothing can be returned.

My sisters and I (all married and with families) have never received one gift from mother that we could use. And if she doesn't see her gift being used, she's not above asking for it back!

If she were poor, I wouldn't say anything, but mother has a sizable inheritance, and father is a very wealthy man. When dad gives her a present, she immediately exchanges it for cash.

How does one cope with such a problem?—ULCER-PRONE

DEAR PRONE: Your mother is a character. She's also a cheapskate. A good sense of humor is the best ulcer remedy I know. Develop yours.

DEAR ABBY: You always say, "You'll feel better if you get it off your chest," so that's why I'm writing. Also because there's a one in a million chance that the gentleman whose parking place I stole today will see this.

I feel like a dirty dog. I'm a woman who at my age (30) should know better, but I deliberately STOLE a man's parking place. I saw him waiting to pull into a parking place that someone was pulling out of, and I sneaked in ahead of him.

If he had cussed me out I wouldn't have blamed him, but he didn't. He was a perfect gentleman. He just looked at me sadly and shook his head as if to say, "Shame on you, lady."

Mister, if you should see this, please believe me when I say I'm sorry. I feel like a thief. I've never done that before, and I'll never do it again.—ASHAMED IN GARDEN CITY

Lamb used in low-cost courses

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The book of Genesis says that Abel was a keeper of sheep and he did his job well. Over the centuries man has depended on this animal to provide him with food as well as wool to make his clothes.

Until recent years, Americans regarded lamb as a seasonal dish, since the animals marketed in this country were no more than six months of age. But today, thanks to the wide geographical spread of the meat industry, lamb is available the year round, with our butchers turning to Australia and New Zealand to augment the U.S. supply.

Lamb never attained the popularity of beef except in the Middle East, where it reigns supreme, but it has been a standby in many lands since ancient times.

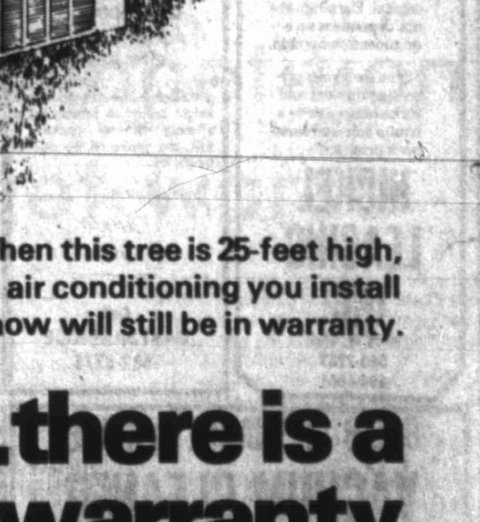

The Arab World has produced an infinite variety of lamb dishes in its kitchens over the years and one favorite is couscous, which consists in the main of lamb chunks, white raisins and semolina made from wheat grain. The Arabs also go in for a delicacy known as turlu, a bowl filled with diced lamb, onions, tomatoes, zucchini and other vegetables.

The Irish are noted for a stew made from lamb shoulder simmered at length with potatoes and tiny onions.

B & B Appliances has only one business and that is service. When you need and expert opinion concerning vacuum cleaners, household appliances or lamp rewiring problems, take them to B & B. Harold Ervin, owner, will give you an estimate before any repair work is done. Solve your problems today and stop at B & B.

B & B Appliances gives fast service

When you have an electric appliance that is on the blink, take it to B & B Appliances. No one at B & B will try to sell you a new appliance to replace the one that is not working. At B & B the only business is service. Often an appliance can be repaired and will work as well as a new one for a nominal repair fee. For instance, most Hoover vacuum cleaners can be reconditioned for under $15. Harold Ervin, owner, has been repairing Hoovers in Midland since 1953. On the other hand, some appliances are not worth repairing. At B & B you will be advised accordingly. The only time you pay a service charge is when an appliance is actually repaired.

Repair service is available on the new coffee makers at B & B, including Mr. Coffee, Norelco and West Bend. If yours is not working, stop at 1009 North Midkiff and let Ervin take a look at it. He will tell you if it can be fixed and will tell you how much it will cost to fix it.

Fast service is routine at B & B. Kirby and Hoover vacuum cleaners are the specialty at this shop, but Ervin is an expert with any make or model.

Do you have a coffee maker, mixer, hair blower or dryer that is not working? Perhaps it can be fixed. Take it to B & B and get an estimate. Do you have frayed cords on your lamps? You need a rewiring expert and Ervin will handle the job for you.

When you need an expert opinion concerning vacuum cleaners, household appliances or lamp rewiring problems, go to B & B Appliances where service is the only business. Solve your problems today. Stop at B & B, 1009 North Midkiff.

48 rabid dogsnoted in Laredo

ATLANTA (AP) — Forty-eight cases of rabies in dogs have been reported at Laredo, Tex., since Nov. 22, the national Center for Disease Control said Friday.

An intensive vaccination program has been under way in Laredo, where 43 persons have been given antirabies treatments following known or possible exposure to rabid dogs, the CDC said.

The figures, representing the first outbreak of rabies in Laredo in 29 years, were accumulated through the week of Feb. 7, the CDC said.

More than 17,000 dogs have been vaccinated against the disease, public health officials said.

Nebraska woman robs, takes taxi

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb. (AP) — A lone gunwoman robded an Omaha savings and loan company office on Friday using a taxicab as a getaway car.

Cab driver John Workman, 26, told police he picked up a woman at the Greyhound bus station and drove her to the Nebraska Savings and Loan office. She gave him $20 and told him to wait.

When she returned and got back in the cab, the woman told Workman she had just robbed a bank. She then pulled a gun and ordered him to start driving south to Nebraska City, 43 miles away, police said.

Workman, on the job for just one week, said he noticed a police cruiser following his cab several miles down the road. Near Nebraska City, police shot out one tire on the taxi, and Workman jumped out unharmed when the cab swerved into a ditch.

Episcopal delegates end 3-day Victoria meeting

VICTORIA, Tex. (AP) — Approximately 800 delegates to the Episcopal Diocese of West Texas' 1977 council here concluded Saturday a three-day a meeting highlighted by the installation of a new bishop.

The Right Rev. Scott Field Bailey of San Antonio was installed Thursday at the opening service held at Our Lady of Victory Catholic Church. It was the first time in the history of the 102-year-old diocese that a bishop was invested outside of San Antonio.

The ceremony itself was a break from diocese custom. Not only was it held in a Catholic church, but among those participating was the archbishop of the Catholic Diocese of San Antonio, the Right Rev. Francis J. Furey.

Participating with the archbishop were two Catholic priests from Victoria, the Rev. Joseph Petsch and the Rev. Gino Bernasconi.

Carter proposal to drop funding for dams sparks controversy

By The Associated Press

Officials in 15 states warn that President Carter will be displaying poor judgment and bad timing if he drops funding for 18 dams and other water projects — most of them in the drought-stricken West.

Administration sources said over the weekend that Carter will ask Congress to withhold fiscal 1978 funds from the projects pending a review of their usefulness and environmental safety.

The sources said Carter would announce his decision today or Tuesday.

"It's a completely incomprehensible action," said Felix Sparks, director of the Colorado Water Conservation Board. "We're completely devastated because of the drought and other conditions, and we need the money that's available."

Many of the projects have been controversial, and some opponents were delighted with the prospect of further review.

"I'm thrilled to death," said Donald Landry, an official of Terrebone Parish in Louisiana. "Maybe this is an indication that we have somebody in the White House now who cares a little bit about some of these things."

John Sieh, chairman of the Oahe Conservancy Subdistrict Board in South Dakota, said, "I feel the President has come out on the side of the people in South Dakota."

But attorney Edward Clyde, who has been involved in water planning in Utah for 35 years, predicted that Congress will reject Carter's proposal.

He said "it's inconceivable that rational minds would stop" the Central Utah Project's Bonneville Unit, one of the 18 projects named by administration sources. That unit is designed to carry water from northeastern Utah mountains to arid populated valleys.

Clyde said the project had been underway for 25 years, and already had cost $200 million in federal funds and $20 million in state money.

North Dakota Gov. Arthur Link said he was "shocked" by the reported proposal and called it "unjustified."

"I'm hard put to believe they would take this drastic action," he added.

In Denver, where western and midwestern governors met on Sunday to discuss the drought, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus said it was "regrettable" that they learned of Carter's plan before he could contact them personally.

"It would have helped this meeting if the announcement had come next week," he said.

Andrus said many of the 18 projects did not meet federal safety, cost-benefit or environmental standards, and he said that was the reason Carter had excluded them from his proposed budget for the 1978 fiscal year.

"We have to have the opportunity to look at safety factors and environmental impact," Andrus said. "And you've got to balance economic benefits against the costs."

He said that just because the projects were excluded from the budget doesn't necessarily mean they will die.

Drought relief sought

By W. B. ROOD
The Los Angeles Times

DENVER — Governors of Western states Sunday appealed for showers of federal dollars to offset growing impacts of a drought which has the economies of their states reeling.

In a three-hour session with Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, a gathering of 10 governors and aides representing seven other states urged prompt federal action to offset multibillion losses due to the drought.

"The bottom line is money and what events in the real world justify what outpourings of public funds," said California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

"The judgement for the President and the Congress is whether the people who have been hurt by the drought should get more money or not."

A cloudless Denver sky and unseasonably high temperatures provided an apt setting for the meeting. To the west of the city many Rocky Mountain peaks usually white with snow and covered with skiers at this time of year were brown.

One by one, the governors ticked off the drought's toll to date: Gov. James Exon of Nebraska: "If there's a continuation of the drought without substantial relief...we're going to see farmers have to sell off their scaled-down herds."

Gov. Robert Straub of Oregon: "Runoff to date is only about 21 per cent of normal, and fire could take heavy tolls on forests that sustain Oregon's vital timber industry."

Gov. Richard Kniep of South Dakota: "Farmers have sold off 70 per cent of the cattle in the state (for lack of water and forage on the range)."

Gov. Dixie Ray of Washington: "We've already lost the fruit tree crop. What we have to do now is try to save the trees." The list went on.

Rivers run dry, near Dust Bowl conditions in the Plains states and looming power shortages in states such as Idaho which depend on hydroelectric energy.

But the main thrust of the governor's pitch to Andrus was the need for fast federal action.

After Andrus announced that President Carter plans to form a high level administration task force to deal with the Western drought, Gov. Exon responded:

"We don't want this task force to come out and do an overall review of the needs. We already know the needs.

"What we want is to get the (federal) bureaucracy moving."

Exon's statement was echoed by others who charged that it was taking too long to get a yes or no on applications for aid under existing programs.

California farmers, for instance, have complained that one federal program requires that proof of a 20 per cent loss be shown.

"They can't show proof until the end of the growing season, and by then, they're in serious financial trouble," said Gray Davis, chief aid to Gov. Brown.

Another difficulty in getting aid for farmers has been that existing federal legislation is inadequate to deal with drought losses.

"The federal government, under existing programs, cannot do what was suggested in there today," said Andrus after the meeting.

"We're talking about a loss of billions of dollars in the agricultural area, but we don't even know what the cost to Congress will be (in federal aid money)."

Andrus said that if expectations of Western drought victims are to be met, new legislation would be required to permit advance aid to drought areas and funding for cattle raisers.

The meeting provided a sobering overview of the Western drought. In a presentation by Jack A. Barnett, executive director of the Western States Water Council, the governors were told that:

—In the Northwest, the usually mighty Columbia River is running at 50 per cent of its normal flow.

—Only 50 per cent of the normal runoff is expected into Lake Powell — a keystone of the Colorado River system which is now sustaining much of Southern California's demand — and the Colorado River flow could be half of normal this year.

—Seriously dry soil conditions exist in the Western Plains.

—Westwide stream flows are typically running 45 per cent to 30 per cent of normal.

"Perhaps a record (regional) drought is indicated by these numbers," Barnetts said.

The governors added to the picture painted by Barnett.

North Dakota Gov. Arthur Link said that flows in the Red River, which supplies water for Fargo, have run close to zero causing a frantic search for another water source.

The normally rainy state of Washington is planning an emergency project to transfer water from one basin to another.

Some states and two federal agencies have been investigating the possibility of artificially inducing rain by cloud seeding.

But that's a touchy strategy because of fears that one state may seed a cloud which under normal conditions might have shed its water elsewhere.

"The big question is if we cause rain by weather modification in Colorado and cause drought in another state, are we liable to be sued," said Andrus.

Complaint panels help consumers

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Your washing machine is on the blink. You've complained to the store and written to the manufacturer. Nothing helped. What's next?

For a growing number of consumers, the answer is an industry-sponsored complaint panel. The panels offer an alternative to small claims courts and arbitration programs run by the Better Business Bureau.

The National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents and the federal Office of Consumer Affairs recently announced the establishment of an experimental program of voluntary mediation of consumer complaints about property and casualty insurance.

The one-year project is known as Insurance Consumer Action Panel — ICAP. The panel will handle complaints referred to it through an arrangement with the insurance commissioners of Michigan, Mississippi, Montana and Utah.

Similar complaint-handling procedures already exist in the appliance, furniture and auto industries. All the programs contain the acronym "CAP." Here's a rundown on the exact names and how to contact the groups:

APPLIANCES: MACAP — Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel, Virginia Habeeb, chairman, 20 Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60606; toll-free telephone number, 800-621-0477.

FURNITURE: FICAP — Furniture Industry Consumer Advisory Panel, Nancy High, executive director, Box 951, High Point, N.C., 27261; telephone, 919-885-5065.

AUTOS: There are local AutoCAPs — Automotive Consumer Action Panels — in various areas of the country. To find out if there is one near you, contact Alan Mariette, National Automobile Dealers Association, 8400 West Park Drive, McLean, Va., 22101; telephone, 703-821-7070. Here's how the panels work: Suppose you have a complaint about a product. First try the retailer who sold it to you. If that doesn't work, go to the manufacturer. If you problem is still unresolved, try the appropriate CAP. When the panel gets a complaint, a staff member goes to the manufacturer to ask for a further check into the problem. If the consumer is unsatisfied with the result, the case is presented to the panel which hears evidence from both sides and recommends a settlement. The recommendations are not binding, but spokesmen for the panels say the suggestions are generally accepted.

The ground rules differ slightly from industry to industry: the appliance group generally does not deal with items still covered by warranties; the furniture panel, in contrast, only handles complaints about products that are less than a year old.

The experimental insurance panel will try to focus on the types of complaints which occur most frequently, but it will not deal with premium rates or underwriting standards. Don't write to ICAP if you think your insurance costs too much.

Califano opposes abortion

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano Jr., says he objects to abortion for religious reasons but believes family planning "is fine, appropriate and should be pushed much harder than it is."

Califano, a Roman Catholic, heads the agency that funds abortions and birth control, both of which his church opposes.

Sources in the department say the administration's support of family planning as an alternative to abortion will be evident in President Carter's budget proposals, which will call for increased funding of birth control programs.

In a weekend interview, his first since taking office, Califano was asked why he is opposed to abortion and federal financing of abortions under Medicaid for the poor.

"Well, I'm sure it's for a personally held moral view," he said. "It's obviously a reflection of religious belief" and ethics. "The moment at which life begins is something on which people in this country disagree ...

There's a tremendous amount of study going on right now on that issue."

Califano has suggested family planning as one alternative to abortion. He was asked how family planning, particularly using artificial birth control devices, squared with his religious beliefs.

"I think family planning is fine, appropriate and should be pushed much harder than it is. And we will push it much harder. Not only family planning, there are lots of other alternatives we need to deal with," he replied.

"We have to have sex education. We have to have much better research into what I would call healthy children. We've got to learn a great deal more about the fetus and about what creates, what causes or what endangers that fetus in growing into a healthy child. And we should invest more funds in that kind of research."

At present, HEW is financing abortions for poor women on Medicaid under a federal court order. Congress passed a law last year that attempted to prohibit that funding, but a judge in New York ruled that the law was unconstitutional. The department has continued funding abortions while the case is being appealed.

On other issues discussed during the interview, Califano said:

—It would be "reprehensible" for hospitals to increase their charges before the Carter administration's planned cost control measures go into effect, probably later this year.

—He would like the power to penalize school administrators who violate civil rights laws but, lacking that tool, will cut off federal funds if necessary to end race and sex discrimination.

—He has "absolutely no objections" to busing school children and wishes Congress would give him more flexibility to use busing as a means of desegregating schools.

Califano said the administration's decision to present a hospital "cost containment" plan to Congress is settled but that details have not been worked out. He said hospital administrators and other interested parties are being consulted before the bill is drafted.

Car accidents kill six over weekend

By The Associated Press

Nice weekend weather drew Texans onto highways and streets where traffic accidents caused the majority of the violent deaths reported in The Associated Press' weekend count.

Six persons had died in traffic and three were shot to death. Another man was believed to have drowned.

The AP count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight Sunday.

Here's how some of the victims died:

Linda Fay Shipp, 30, of Irving died Saturday when the automobile carrying her struck a tree on a center median on a street in Dallas.

John Estrada, 39, of Dallas was shot to death at his home. A woman was jailed.

Kenneth Horton, 23, was found shot to death in a locked apartment in Dallas. Officers said he was last seen arguing with four men Friday night.

The body of Randy Eugene Gibson, 20, of Dallas was found in a parked pickup truck in Dallas. He had been shot in the head, officers reported.

A jogger found the body of Timothy Adams, 19, of Houston Saturday near the sea wall at Galveston.

An unidentified Webb Air Force woman died near Sterling City in West Texas after an automobile slammed into the parked motorcycle on which she had been riding Saturday.

Sharon Lorene Smith, 15, of Monahans died late Friday when the pickup truck she was driving left Texas 18 near the West Texas town.

A car-motorcycle accident near Burleson in North Texas claimed the life of Walter Stephenson, 34, of Rio Vista. Officers said his motorcycle struck a car on Texas 174.

Homer Avants, 80, of San Antonio died in a traffic accident early Saturday on Interstate 35 near Waco.

Separate traffic accidents in the Lubbock area claimed the lives of two persons—Maxine Hudley, 37, and Rosa Garcia, 78, both of Lubbock.

Job competition will get worse

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Young workers from now until at least the mid-1980s, and probably well beyond that time, will have to keep their competitive instincts razor sharp.

The reason: competition. The cause: The desire of young Americans to obtain college degrees.

U.S. Labor Department studies continue to show that the supply of college graduates will exceed demand through the mid-1980s, forcing many workers to settle for less skilled jobs.

As a consequence, competition is likely to be stiff not only among college graduates, but between college graduates and those with less education, thus exerting pressure throughout all occupational levels.

It is estimated that about 18 per cent of the requirements for college graduates through the mid-1980s may come from upgrading educational requirements, that is, by requiring a college education where a high school education might previously have been sufficient.

If the estimates are borne out, it could mean that millions of young people will consider themselves underemployed, convinced they are working far below the limits of their talent.

For those lower on the job ladder it could mean being pushed down a rung into positions requiring minimal skills and, most likely, offering minimum income.

The education-job equation isn't expected to apply uniformly. Even when armed with a college degree, a youngster might find he or she does not have a strong competitive advantage.

"In the case of crafts, persons with vocational training will be in greater demand than those with a baccalaureate degree," writes Chester Levine, a labor economist, in the government "Occupational Outlook Handbook."

Levine also foresees the situation where "employers will be reluctant to hire college graduates as operatives or laborers because of the high risk of job dissatisfaction."

In addition, he continues, "college graduates are likely to face increasing competition for paraprofessional and technical jobs."

Nevertheless, it remains generally axiomatic, labor authorities say, that the greater the educational achievement the more secure and better-paying is the job.

With 13.1 million college graduates expected to enter the labor market in the years 1974-1985, to fight for an estimated 12.1 million job openings, the situation isn't hard to discern.

About the only answer to the situation seems to be that youngsters should be encouraged to seek more education in order to remain competitive.

But even that answer is no solution, because the evidence now indicates that, in the immediate future, a higher education might not as surely lead to job satisfaction and financial reward as it once did.

Parrish charged with kidnaping

By MILLER H. BONNER JR.

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — The man who held about 75 law officers at bay with an impotent pistol was charged with three counts of aggravated kidnaping stemming from a bizarre series of events that began Saturday at a Border Patrol checkpoint in South Texas.

Raul Aguilar Parrish, 46, of Houston, allegedly wounded Border Patrolman Cecilio Ruiz when Ruiz discovered an undetermined amount of marijuana in the automobile's trunk.

That incident ignited a 10-hour saga covering five counties during which Parrish held a total of six hostages and comandeered four vehicles.

He led a parade of about two dozen law enforcement vehicles to his final stop, a motel in this Rio Grande Valley city.

He was negotiating with Texas Ranger Gene Powell through a doctor and a Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agent when, after taking an injection of valium, a tranquilizer. The DEA agent snatched the .44 magnum revolver out of his limp, sedated grip.

"We were ready to blow him away. It's a good thing we didn't shoot him ... His gun only had five spent shells in the chamber," said an officer on the scene who refused to give his name.

But the small army of heavily-armed officers was unaware of the impotent weapon and feared for the lives of two women hostages, Mary Elizabeth Patterson and her daughter, Nancy, both of Harlingen.

At 7:43 p.m. Saturday, the two women bolted from the motel lobby where they had been held at gunpoint for about four hours.

"He relaxed as the doctor gave him the injection, and I just reached over and grabbed the gun," explained the DEA agent, 31-year-old Louis Dracoulis. "I got the pistol and told the hostages to get out of the area."

The half-smiling, dazed Parrish was taken from the lobby on a stretcher to a local hospital where he spent the night under guard.

Sunday, he was taken before Harlingen justice of the Peace Tommy Thompson and charged with three counts of aggravated kidnaping. The judge sets bonds of $150,000 on each count.

Two Rangers then transported the small, silver-haired man to the Kleberg County jail in Kingsville.

Authorities said additional state and federal charges are being prepared against Parrish.

Mardi Gras under way

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — If grocery stores were any indication — and in this case they probably were — Washington's Birthday in New Orleans ran a poor second to Mardi Gras.

It was business as usual today at most city supermarkets so that customers could stock up on booze and other essentials for Tuesday, when stores will be closed for Mardi Gras.

The Carnival celebration preceding Mardi Gras — the "Fat Tuesday" before Lent — has been building up steam for two weeks, with daily parades in New Orleans and its suburbs.

On Sunday night, Henry Winkler, "The Fonz" of television fame, was king of the Bacchus parade and led a crowd of revelers to the Superdome for a raucous rock 'n' roll show.

Earn degrees

AUSTIN — Three Midlanders received master's degrees from The University of Texas at Austin Graduate School of Business at the end of the fall semester. They are William J. Brown of 1610 Harvard Ave., John Bruce Holland of 806 Lawson St. and Scott Edward Shaeffer of 2012 Country Club Drive.

Morgan on list

STEPHENVILLE — Carrie L. Morgan of Midland was on the A honor roll for the fall semester at Tarleton State University. Judy G. Hopson of Midland was on the B honor roll and was named distinguished student.

Howard College outdated books due public sale

BIG SPRING — More than 1,000 books which have been removed from the Howard College Library will be for sale to the public in an all-day sale Saturday in Highland Mall.

The books were removed from the shelves in accordance with recommendations by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools to remove outdated books.

The books will be sold at 25 cents per inch of book thickness. Included are reference books, books in all subject areas, "Life" magazines from 1937 to 1953 and some past Howard College annuals.

Funds from the sale will go toward the purchase of carpet for the library.

Beef killing plant uses 'all but bellow'

The Washington Post

GREELEY, Colo. — The "kill floor" on a modern beef slaughtering plant is far removed from the wretched, unsanitary conditions described in Upton Sinclairs muckraking novel about the Chicago meat industry, "The Jungle."

At Monfort of Colorado, Inc.'s high-speed plant here, steers weighing half a ton are killed and cut into pieces at the rate of five a minute. It is a model of American efficiency, but the noise, the nauseating odor, the steamy air and the blood running across the floor still testifies to the grisly nature of the work. A skull-penetrating pneumatic bolt exerting 1,800 pounds of pressure per square inch instantly kills the animals behind a screened area where they enter the facility. Seconds later, they are cut open and hoisted, head down, onto a moving overhead cable.

As their bodies edge along the overhead cable, large metal clamps reach around to attach onto the hide at an incision along the stomach. The bodies jerk violently as the devices peel off the skins and drop them down a hole. At one end of the kill floor, severed cattle heads, attached to hooks, bob past meat cutters who trim off the flesh.

A moving "viscera belt" carries the animals' stomachs, intestines, livers and other organs past sorters dressed in white uniforms. These specialists pick out the livers and drop them down a chute to other workers on a lower floor. Within minutes of that, the livers are washed, neatly boxed and on their way to a freezer.

Meanwhile, men in rubber boots constantly spray the floor and the belts to flush away blood and debris.

It is truism in the packing business that "everything is used except the bellow." Beef animals provide some valuable by-products besides meat. Collecting, processing and selling these, called "drop," more than offsets the $26 that Monfort figures it costs in labor and other expenses to kill each animal.

A 1,000-pound steer yields only an average 432 pounds of red meat. Nearly all the rest ranging from medicines to cosmetics and clothing. Spleens, lungs, inedible livers and kidneys are processed as fish and pet food. Parts of leg bones are made into gelatin for film processing. Blood is caught in stainless steel tanks and sold to processors who dehydrate it for use in shoe polish or as a plywood bonding material. Beef pancreas glands are used to make insulin.

Hearts, head meat and stomach tissues are made into sausage meat, and brains, kidneys, oxtails and tongues are exported, mainly to England and France.

Fat, hooves, bones, intestines and stomachs are sped by conveyor belt to two large rendering plants which cook the material at high temperature.

Tom Purtzer, 25, who had not won a pro tournament before, gives victory sign as final putt drops in for the win in Los Angeles Open Sunday. Purtzer won by only one stroke.

Midland's Rankin wins gusty Blossom Classic

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — "I play well in the wind because I'm experienced at it," Judy Rankin said after winning the $50,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association's Orange Blossom Classic by five strokes.

Mrs. Rankin, ignoring Sunday's gusty wind, fired a final round 69 for a 54-hole total of 208, eight-under par, and won the $7,500 first prize.

"I came into the tournament wanting to play well partly because of losing the playoffs last week, but also because I have never really done anything in this tournament," said the Midland, Tex., golfer who was last year's leading LPGA money winner.

Joyce Kazmierski, who started the final round three strokes behind Mrs. Rankin, could not keep pace and finished with a par 72 for a total of 213. Mrs. Kazmierski, of Boynton Beach, Fla., won $5,040.

Sandra Palmer was third with a final 71 for a total of 214 and earned $3,620. Mary Mills finished fourth and was the only other player to shoot par or better in the three-day event, the second stop on the 1977 LPGA tour. She had a final round 71 and collected $2,700 for her par 216.

Mrs. Rankin started the day with a bogey five on the first hole, but sank birdie putts of five feet on No. 2, three feet on No. 5, 15 feet on No. 7 and 17 feet at No. 8, making the turn in three-under-par.

After another birdie at the par-five 11th hole, she said, "I felt my chances (of winning) were pretty good ..."

Mrs. Rankin said her victory was partly due to a new putting stroke that she used for the first time last week when she lost a sudden-death playoff to Pam Higgins.

"I always felt I had a good feel with all my clubs except the putter," Mrs. Rankin said. "Until I changed the way I gripped the putter last week, I never had that feeling.

"Now I'm getting my hands on the putter more like I do on my other clubs. I don't know what it is, but there's something about it. I can feel it in my bones that it's right."

During the tournament, Mrs. Rankin had only one three-putt green and it came in the second round.

Miss Higgins shot a final round 79 and was far back in the field with a total of 228.

Defending champion JoAnne Carner never was in contention. She shot a final-round 73 for a 219 total, three-over-par, and collected $1,420.

Amy Alcott, who was Rookie of the Year in 1975 when she won the Orange Blossom, shot a final-round 74 for a 224 total.

Midland's Judy Rankin is a portrait of grim determination as she blasts toward green. Judy won the Orange Blossom Classic Sunday with a powerful five-stroke victory.

Youngsters dominate pro tour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's a growing cadre of bright young men who are giving golf a new look — perhaps even a new spelling.

In the last 13 months, 12 players have scored their initial tour victories. The "z's" are very prominent.

It started in the team championship, the last event of the 1976 season, when rookie Bill Kratzert was the key figure in a triumph with Woody Blackburn.

This year Bruce Lietzke dominated things, winning two events, finishing second and fourth in others and collecting $123,000 before he had to skip a week because of the illness of his father.

With him out, Tom Purtzer and Fuzzy Zoeller moved to the fore, Purtzer sinking a critical, par-saving putt on the 72nd hole Sunday for a one-stroke victory over Lanny Wadkins in the $200,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open.

As an indication of the change in the game, Purtzer's first tour triumph lowered to 25.4 the average age of the winners this season and marked the first time since 1970 that the tour had finished its western swing without Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer or Johnny Miller winning at least one event.

They didn't even come close. They had no top 10 finishes. Miller and Palmer missed the cut for the final 36 holes more often than they made it. Nicklaus played only twice and missed once. The rest of the game's more established players suffered similar fates.

And while the names that have dominated the game so long were suffering and struggling, such players as Lietzke and Purtzer, along with Fuzzy Zoeller (third in this tournament) and Bobby Walzel (winner of $18,103 in the West) were moving into prominence.

Purtzer, an obscure, non-winning longshot, had to survive the rigors of the Monday morning qualifying round even to gain a spot in the tournament field with such names as Palmer, Billy Casper, Gary Player and Tom Watson — all of whom missed the cut for the final two rounds.

Purtzer prevailed with a gritty, hard-won, one-over-par 72 in the last round over the 7,029 yards that make up the famed old Riviera Country Club course. He finished with a 273 total, 11 under par.

Purtzer, 25, an Arizona State product and another of the tour's weekly Bible-study group, played erratically over the last round, blew a three-shot lead, trailed, was tied, led, blew that lead then had to scramble out of trees and deep rough in a hanging lie for the par on the 18th that won it. He finished it off with a five-foot putt while Lanny Wadkins watched from the sidelines, waiting for Purtzer to miss and set up a playoff.

It didn't happen. Purtzer rammed the putt into the back of the cup and was a winner.

Wadkins, now apparently a winner over the deep slump that has plagued him since surgery two years ago, had a last round 70 and a 274 total.

Zoeller closed with a spectacular, six-under-par 65 and was third at 276. Craig Stadler was next at 70-277, followed by Graham Marsh and Bob Gilder, Purtzer's roommate in their college days, at 278. Marsh had a last round 68, Gilder a 72.

Chaps shoot for second tonight

With Howard College finishing up against against Western Texas College Monday and Odessa College Thursday, the latter on the road, the Midland College Chaparrals are taking aim on sole possession of second place in the Western Junior College Conference basketball race.

MC and Howard both are 10-6 and tied for second going into the last week of play. The Chaps face New Mexico Junior College tonight at Hobbs, N.M., and then host New Mexico Military Institute in the season's wind up Thursday at MC gym.

NMMI is coming off a 50-49 overtime win over WTC.

NMJC brings a 5-11 conference record into the game and lost by only five points, 85-80, to Midland at Midland earlier in the season. NMJC defeated MC 111-107 in the Odessa Invitational tournament in November, so the Chaps may have their hands full.

MC won a squeaker over South Plains College last Thursday. 6-6 Ricky Hudgins had a team high of 11 rebounds and 6-5 Jackson Pace came down with eight rebounds while Tommy Parks had 23 points and Ron Jones 20 to set the scoring pace.

Hudgins had a big night with two blocked shots and a steal while Pace had a blocked shot, assist and steal. Parks finished with five assists and three swipes.

The top four teams in WJCC standings will go the the Regional meet in Abilene in March. WTC has clinched the title while Howard and Midland can finish no lower than third. NMMI at 8-8, Amarillo 9-7, Odessa 7-9 all have shots at the fourth playoff berth.

Wells wins pin tourney

Bill Wells, of Albuquerque, New Mexico walked off with the title Sunday afternoon in the Tall City Open Professional Bowlers Tournament held at the Super Bowl.

Wells' 5301 pin total was 151 better than runnerup Henry Gonzales of Colorado Springs, Col., who finished with 5150. The victory earned him the $1,000 first prize in the event.

John Denton, a Midland kegler, finished in third place with a 5108, and took home $450 in prize money. Another Tall City resident, Bobby Bumpus, rolled a 4809, which was good for $220 and eighth place in the tourney.

Last year's Tall City Open champion Bob McGregor of Dallas, made it to the final round of 12 bowlers, but finished last Sunday, with a 4573 pin total.

A total of 60 pros competed in the two-day affair, and Saturday night's pro-am number came to 132 bowlers, a record number for the tournament, which is only in its second year. Mike Hill of Midland won the pro-am portion of the competition with a 1311.

Sunday's final round results in the second annual Tall City Open Professional Bowlers Tournament held at the Super Bowl: 1. Bill Wells, Albuquerque, N.M. ($1,000), 5301; 2. Henry Gonzales, Colorado Springs, Col. ($600), 5150; 3. John Denton, Midland ($450), 5108; 4. Steve McBride, Dallas ($350), 4924; 5. Matt Kerns, Lakewood, Col. ($300), 4916; 6. Ricky Kendrick, Dell City, Okla. ($250), 4906; 7. Bill Shumway, Aurora, Col. ($225), 4828; 8. Bobby Bumpass, Midland ($220), 4809; 9. James Butler, Odessa ($215), 4748; 10. Jim Hensley, Dallas ($210), 4670; 11. Robby Heinzel, El Paso ($205), 4647; 12. Bob McGregor, Dallas ($200), 4573.

Freeman scores ace at RHCC

Larry Freeman, 43, scored his first hole-in-one Sunday with a six-iron on the 170-yard 17th hole at the Ranchland Hill Country Club.

Freeman ended up with a 76 for the day. He was playing with Bill Lupardus, Zack Gibson, Rick Peterson, Boots Johnston and Jimmy Walker.

Super Rote captures third 'star' crown

ROTONDA, Fla. (AP) — Kyle Rote, Jr. is considerably richer after winning "The Superstars" for the third time in its five-year history, but he says his victory doesn't really prove much.

"It proves that 14 guys can come down to Florida and have a good time and get to know each other under the pretense of athletic competition," he said. "But it sure doesn't prove who is the world's greatest athlete. Not by a long shot."

Rote, who plays for the North American Soccer League's Dallas Tornado, won two of the 10 events over the three-day competition and piled up enough points in the others to beat out tight end Dave Casper of the Oakland Raiders and French Olympic hurdles star Guy Drut. Rote wound up with 34½ points, Casper and Drut with 28 each in the nationally-televised, ABC, event.

Rote, who was the NASL rookie of the year a few seasons back but was primarily a reserve last year, earned about $7,000 playing for Dallas in 1976. Sunday he collected a $25,000 bonus for winning plus $10,350 in point money, calculated at $300 per point. He won "The Superstars" in 1974 and 1976 and was third in 1975. In all, counting preliminaries, Rote has won more than $150,000 in this competition.

The boyishly-handsome Rote is currently negotiating his 1977 contract with the Tornado. Does he think his success here will help in the bargaining?

"I'll give you (owner) Lamar Hunt's theory," he said. "Hunt figures if you're well off you need less. Maybe I'll end up in worse shape after winning here."

Rote also recognizes the irony that the superstar of "Superstars" doesn't always start on his own team.

"A thing like this causes a little more pressure on me and the coaches and my teammates," he said. "When we go on the road people think Kyle Rote should be the greatest soccer player in the world. That's a tough thing to live up to. I'm just not the greatest soccer player in the world."

But he's not bad at swimming or bowling, both of which he won, or tennis, in which he finished second. Casper won the baseball hitting and weightlifting, Drut took the half-mile run and obstacle course and New Zealand miler Peter Snell, who was fourth over-all dispite a hamstring injury, won the tennis and rowing.

The other two events were the 100-yard dash, in which Houston Oiler Billy "White Shoes" Johnson edged out Pittsburgh Steeler Lynn Swann in a brisk 10 seconds flat, and the one-mile bicycle race, won by former Green Bay Packer Jim Taylor, who was fifth overall.

Casper, who said he hadn't trained much since the Super Bowl, was pleased with his showing. "Even if I had trained I didn't think I'd do as well as I did," he said. "I just figured I'd come down here and give it my best shot. I just didn't want to be embarrassed. Hell, I'm actually proud of myself for doing so well while being so fat."

Drut, who won the gold medal in the 100-meter hurdles at the Montreal Olympics last summer, had an embarrassing moment when he stumbled over one of the hurdles in the obstacle course. "I went up off the wrong foot," he explained sheepishly. But he was surprised to finish tied with Casper.

"After the Games I stopped training because I now have to earn my life, which is very difficult in France," he said. "I have to work now. I can't just run track all the time."

76ers score miracle

By The Associated Press

A message for Philadelphia basketball fans: when there is a Doctor in the house, the patient is not dead until the final buzzer.

The Philadelphia 76ers trailed 89-65 with 22 seconds left in the third period and by 13 with just 3:19 remaining in Sunday's game against Cleveland. Some fans at the Spectrum in Philadelphia gave up.

"A lot of people left with two minutes to go," said Julius Erving, the marvelous Dr. J. "I noticed that. They'll be surprised when they read tomorrow that we won."

The 76ers, with Erving scoring 13 of his 34 points in the fourth quarter, came back and won on a pair of free throws by Lloyd Free with 18 seconds left.

Philadelphia Coach Gene Shue described the comeback as incredible, but not Erving, who scored seven of his team's last nine points.

"I've seen teams come back on us," said Erving. "So why not us? In this game, you never say die until it's over."

The 76ers trailed 107-95 with 2:40 remaining but outscored the Cavaliers 17-4, handing Cleveland its 19th road defeat in the last 22 games.

Free's winning free throws came after Elmore Smith was called for goaltending on a shot by Erving that made it 111-110. He had three tries, and needed the bonus shot.

"The first one thought about going in," said Free. "The second one was a brick. It went off my hands the wrong way." It missed, leaving the score tied and the pressure directly on Free.

"The third had legs on it," he said. "It just kept walking around until it fell in."

Cleveland had two late tries, but both shots bounced off the rim. A second rebound was finally tipped in, but after the buzzer.

George McGinnis added 24 points and Doug Collins 21 for Philadelphia, while Austin Carr topped Cleveland with 26.

Celtics 114, Warriors 112

Boston scored 10 straight points in the final minutes to win. John Havlicek's jumper from the corner put the Celtics in front with four minutes remaining, then Boston added four more baskets and went ahead by nine.

Golden State pulled within two 112-110 on a basket by Rick Barry, who scored 37 points in his first appearance since suffering a bruised hip in the NBA All-Star Game last Sunday. But Havlicek, who topped Boston with 24 points, then sank two free throws, clinching the victory.

Nuggets 111, Hawks 95

Denver led by just two points heading into the final period but won going away as David Thompson and Dan Issel each scored 28 points. John Drew netted 33 for Atlanta.

Lakers 108, Bullets 101

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 17 points, staking Los Angeles to a 60-44 halftime lead, then teamed with Lucius Allen for the last 13 points as the Lakers turned back a Washington comeback. Abdul-Jabbar finished with 35 points, while Elvin Hayes scored 29 for the Bullets.

Knicks 100, Nets 80

The Knicks, who broke open the game with a run of 13 straight points in the second half, got 22 points and 22 rebounds from Bob McAdoo and 18 points and 15 rebounds from reserve forward Tom McMillen.

Spurs 129, Jazz 109

Coby Dietrick scored 16 of his team-high 24 points in the fourth quarter and Larry Kenon added 22 points for San Antonio, which led all the way. The Spurs were ahead by 33 points during the third quarter.

Pistons 109, Suns 107

Bob Lanier's hook shot with 16 seconds left broke a tie and gave Detroit its victory over Phoenix. Lanier, who scored 24 points, drove in against Dennis Awtrey for the winning basket.

The Suns failed to tie when they were not able to work the ball in for a good shot. Ron Lee's desperation 25-footer missed with one second remaining.

Pacers 135, SuperSonics 115

Billy Knight poured in 38 points and five teammates scored in double figures as Indiana routed Seattle. The Pacers led 67-64 early in the third period before outscoring the Sonics 20-6, taking an 87-70 advantage with 3:03 left in the period, behind Knight, Wil Jones and John Williamson.

Indiana built 24-point leads twice in the fourth quarter, outgunning Seattle 44-35 in final 12 minutes.

Stockton downs Jimmy Connors

By The Associated Press

Jimmy Connors is usually good enough to beat most tennis players on one leg.

But he wasn't Sunday.

The generally recognized international king of tennis suffered a torn knee muscle in the final of a World Championship Tennis Tournament at Toronto and as a result, had to concede his match against Dick Stockton.

"I really wanted to continue playing," said Stockton, "but I could see that Jimmy was in a lot of pain. Up to that point, I was playing well and I thought I could have won the match.

"But I didn't want it to end this way. I'd have rather lost than to win this way."

A WCT spokesman said Connors suffered a tear in the vestus medialis muscle in his left knee and will be sidelined for at least two weeks.

"Jimmy appeared to hurt the knee on an approach shot in the 10th game of the first set," said WCT spokesman Bob Yates. "It's all puffed up right now and WCT doctor Jim Short said he'll be out for a couple of weeks. He'll have the knee examined again by his own doctor when he gets home."

Connors, of Belleville, Ill., was leading the match when Stockton broke him in the 10th game of the first set, tying the score 5-5. By the end of the game, Connors was limping noticeably and had cut down on his running.

Connors then broke back for a 6-5 lead, but before the 12th game started, he took a 5½minute injury timeout as allowed by WCT rules. He returned after a 10-minute delay, hobbling to the service line, then took a 40-30 lead before deciding to default the match, allowing his opponent from Dallas to win the $30,000 first prize. At that time, Connors was one point away from winning the opening set.

In another professional tennis final at Los Angeles, Chris Evert defeated Martina Navratilova 6-2, 2-6, 6-1 in a battle of two of the world's top women players. Miss Evert, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., rated No. 1 in the world, won $20,000 for beating the Czechoslovakian defector, who is rated No. 3.

A crowd of 6,819 watching the final of the week-long $100,000 tournament was subdued except for occasional outbursts when Miss Navratilova scored with one of her spectacular overheads or Miss Evert whistled the ball past Martina with a passing shot.

At San Jose, Calif., eighthseeded Sandy Mayer of Palo Alto, Calif. beat 40-year-old Australian Roy Emerson 6-2, 64 in semifinal action at the $50,000 Grand Prix Tennis Tournament. Mayer earned a shot in tonight's final against Jiri Hrebec of Czechoslovakia, who won his final berth with a 6-1, 6-4 victory over 1975 NCAA champion Billy Martin of Palos Verdes, Calif.

Mary Struthers of La Jolla, Calif., defeated top-seeded Laura DuPont of Matthews, N.C., 6-2, 6-0 and won the $2,800 top prize in an international tennis tournament for young players at Norcross, Ga.

Third-seeded Matt Mitchell of Palo Alto, Calif., won the men's singles title and Barbara Hallquist of Arcadia, Calif. won the women's singles crown in the U.S. Tennis Association national amateur indoor championships at Salisbury, Md. Mitchell defeated Jai DiLouie of Dallas 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, and Miss Hallquist beat Anne Smith, also of Dallas, 1-6, 7-6, 6-2.

Upsets shake top teams

By The Associated Press

Road games in the Atlantic Coast Conference take a lot out of coaches. It's a good thing that North Carolina's Dean Smith has a Ford to give him a lift.

Phil Ford, one of the slickest, quickest guards in the country, helped accelerate North Carolina into a big halftime lead, then put a stop sign up on Virginia Sunday.

THE RESULT was a tenuous 66-64 college basketball victory for the 13th-ranked Tar Heels.

"We did not tell our players to go to Ford especially," said Smith. "It's just a tendency for players to do that."

Ford scored 16 of his 21 points in the first half to stake the Tar Heels to a 36-24 advantage. Later, he drove the Cavaliers to distraction by operating Smith's famous "Four Corner" offense that aborted a Virginia rally.

Mike O'Koren also gave the North Carolina machine a push at the end, scoring 10 of the Tar Heels' last 13 points.

IN ANOTHER major game Sunday, Purdue defeated Indiana 86-78 in the Big Ten.

Sunday's regionally-televised games followed a rash of upsets Saturday. In the worst day of the season collectively for nationally-ranked teams, nine of The AP's Top 20 suffered upsets.

Oregon stunned No. 3 UCLA 64-55; No. 4 Alabama was beaten by No. 14 Tennessee 92-89; No. 7 Wake Forest lost to Virginia Tech 98-97 in overtime; Memphis State defeated No. 8 Louisville 87-77; ninth-ranked Marquette was surprised by Wichita State 75-64; Rutgers shocked No. 10 Cincinnati 89-70; Duquesne nipped No. 15 Detroit 95-88 in double overtime; Utah whipped 17th-ranked Arizona 76-61 and Appalachian State tripped No. 19 VMI 62-58.

ELSEWHERE, top-ranked San Francisco beat Pepperdine 81-73; No. 2 Kentucky trimmed LSU 90-76; No. 5 Michigan turned back No. 12 Minnesota 89-70; No. 6 Nevada-Las Vegas whipped Portland State 112-96; No. 11 Arkansas stopped Texas 73-61; No. 18 Clemson defeated North Carolina State 68-66 and No. 20 Syracuse walloped St. John's 79-55.

Eugene Parker's 18 points paced a balanced attack that carried Purdue past Indiana. The Hoosiers, who have had several players walk off the team this year, were further troubled by the injury of center Kent Benson. The All-America player injured his back late in Sunday's game and may be lost to Indiana for the rest of the season.

GREG BALLARD scored 28 points to lead Oregon's upset of UCLA. The decision had historical significance in the Pacific-8 Conference, marking the first time that Oregon had ever beaten UCLA twice in one season. It also marked the first time since 1962-63 that a Pac-8 foe had whipped UCLA twice in one year.

A 26-point performance by Ernie Grunfeld and 21 each from Bernard King and Mike Jackson powered Tennessee over Alabama, virtually dashing C.M. Newton's Southeastern Conference title hopes.

Virginia Tech beat Wake Forest as Duke Thorpe scored a basket and then sank a pair of foul shots with 38 seconds left in overtime.

JAMES BRADLEY'S 24 points led Memphis State past Louisville. Robert Elmore scored 19 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked five shots as Wichita State beat Marquette in Al McGuire's final home game as the Warrior coach. James Bailey's 29 points led Rutgers over Cincinnati. Duquesne scored eight straight points in the second overtime, four of them by Norm Nixon, to beat Detroit.

Jeff Jonas had 24 points and dazzled Arizona with his ballhandling in the waning minutes to help Utah beat the Wildcats. Tony Searcy and Walter Anderson scored 18 each as Appalachian State beat VMI. San Francisco stopped Pepperdine behind Bill Cartwright's 21 points.

Jack Givens got 21 points and 12 rebounds to pace Kentucky over LSU. Phil Hubbard scored 28 points, leading Michigan past Minnesota. Eddie Owens and Sam Smith teamed for 42 points to power Nevada-Las Vegas over Portland State.

Cincinnati cage star arrested

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Lee, a star freshman guard for the University of Cincinnati basketball team, was free today in his own recognizance after being arrested with four other youths on charges of mugging a decoy cop dressed as an old man.

Lee was arraigned in Queens Criminal Court Sunday and released so he could rejoin his team for a home game tonight.

Finley, Kuhn continue head on confrontation

CHICAGO (AP) — Last year when Charles O. Finley attended a hearing called by baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to consider big money deals he had made, it cost him $3.5 million.

Finley is not sure he wants to go through it again.

"I don't know yet. I have to talk to my attorney," the Oakland A's owner, a long-time foe of Kuhn, said when asked if he would attend a hearing on the $400,000 sale of 35-year-old left-handed relief pitcher from Oakland to Texas.

Kuhn was vacationing in Florida Sunday. But his spokesman, Bob Wirz, said a hearing would be held soon on the Saturday night sale of Lindblad. No date was set, and Wirz said Kuhn would not approve the deal before a hearing.

The previous hearing was last June 17, two days after Finley sold pitcher Vida Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and pitcher Rollie Fingers and outfielder Joe Rudi to Boston for $1 million each. Fingers and Rudi even suited up for the Red Sox.

But a day after the hearing, Kuhn said the sales were not in the best interests of baseball and did not allow them. Finley then sued Kuhn for $3.5 million. A decision on the suit is expected next month.

The chain of events that led to the latest Kuhn-Finley confrontation began Friday.

The commissioner told all club owners he had learned the sale of a star player for a substantial amount of money was being contemplated. And he asked them to notify him before any such deal was completed.

Saturday, Finley said baseball rules did not require such notification and he vowed to defy Kuhn's request. A short time later, he announced the sale of Lindblad, a 12-year veteran, to the Rangers.

"I'm not telling the commissioner nothing," Finley said. "Let him read about it in the paper like the rest of the fans."

Kuhn found out about the deal, and Sunday, Finley and Texas General Manager Daniel O'Brien received telephone calls from assistants to the commissioner. Finley said that he referred major league secretary-treasurer Alexander Hadden to his attorney and that administrative officer John Johnson told O'Brien a hearing was being arranged.

Finley, who contends Kuhn has been harassing him, said hearings are not standard in all baseball deals.

And, he added: "If the commissioner thinks he's got a lawsuit filed against him by Charlie Finley, let him try to stop this deal and see the lawsuit that will probably be filed against him by Paul Lindblad."

U.S. District Court Judge Frank McGarr said the key issue in the trial of Finley's suit was whether Kuhn had th authority to void the deals. Testimony ended Jan. 13.

Finley said he received a substantial cash offer last week from the Montreal Expos for Blue, one of the top pitchers in the American League. But he said he would not trade or sell him before McGarr ruled.

Toronto plays your average hockey game

By The Associated Press

The Toronto Maple Leafs have been scoring goals in clusters lately. They scored 10 against the Washington Capitals nine days ago, and reached that total again Sunday night, beating the Chicago Black Hawks 10-8.

It was just an average hockey game: nine goals in the third period—four within 1 minute, 36 seconds—five ties, four major fighting penalties and a gross misconduct penalty.

The Maple Leafs, completing a stretch of seven games in nine days, closed out the string with a flourish. Errol Thompson scored three goals, while George Ferguson and Lanny McDonald each had two, leading Toronto's triumph in the wacky contest.

Flyers 4, Sabres 2

The Sabres saw one streak continue and two streaks end against the Flyers. The ones that ended were a six-game winning string and five consecutive unbeaten performances by rookie goaltender Don Edwards.

But, all things considered, the loss came as no surprise, since the game was played at the Spectrum in Philadelphia where the Sabres, who entered the league in 1970, have not won in 17 games there.

Defenseman Andre Dupont scored twice and Tom Bladon once during a first-period spurt which wiped out a 2-0 Buffalo lead built on goals by Jim Lorentz and Rene Robert.

Dupont wiped out that lead with a 50-footer at 11:44, then with a blue line shot at 18:40 of the period when Buffalo had two men in the penalty box.

Don Saleski completed the scoring in the second period.

Penguins 4, Barons 1

Ron Schock scored a goal and set up another, carrying Pittsburgh past Cleveland in what may have been the Barons' last game. The team may strike Tuesday if its owner does not come up with all due back pay.

Rangers 3, Red Wings 2

Phil Esposito celebrated his 35th birthday with two goals, including the game-winner, and defenseman Mike McEwen added three assists, leading the Rangers past Detroit. New York survived a third-period scare when, with the score tied, a deflected Detroit shot bounced off both goalposts in the Rangers' net.

Islanders 2, Capitals 2

Third-period goals by Hartland Monahan and Jack Lynch lifted Washington to a comeback tie against the Islanders. Clark Gillies tallied twice for the Islanders.

Rockies 3, North Stars 2

Colorado's victory increased its lead over Minnesota to five points in the battle for the final playoff spot in the Smythe Division. The Rockies built a 3-1 lead through two periods, then withstood a furious North Stars' rally after Roland Eriksson scored a fluke goal with 2:27 remaining.

Clayborn named most valuable

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Senior defensive back Raymond Clayborn was named Most Valuable Player at the University of Texas annual Longhorn banquet Sunday night.

Winners of other awards included Captain Rick Fenlaw, Longhorn Club's Sportsmanship Ward; offensive guard Charles Wilcox, D. X. Bible team Spirit Award; and linebacker Bill Hamilton, D. Harold Byrd Leadership Award.

Several of the players presented a "This Is Your Life" reception for Coach Darrell Royal, who retired after 20 years to remain only as athletic director.

Wawak survives Daytona crash

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "It was like sitting in front of a blow-torch," driver Bobby Wawak said of the fire that engulfed the inside of his car during the Daytona 500 stock car race Sunday.

Thousands of spectators looked on in horror as Wawak dove out the window of his moving car, got up and ran towards the track medical facility with his charred, skinless hands held out in front of him.

HOSPITALIZED with badly burned hands and less serious burns on his face and legs, Wawak was on only his fourth lap when the accident occurred.

Speaking from his hospital room, the 37-year-old driver from Villa Park, Ill., described the mishap this way:

"I smelled fuel down the back straightaway. The fuel line must have broken beacause I didn't have any fuel pressure.

"As I went into the corner, the flames burst out. For the first instant, it seemed like a small fire down by my feet. I even had time to go on the radio and say I had a fire.

"But just that quick, with the wind blowing through, the fire filled the car. The hot exhaust would have ignited the gas. It was like sitting in front of a blow-torch.

"I GOT the window net down and started unbuckling my seat belts. I was braking as hard as I could; I guess the tires were probably locked.

"My hands were burning on the steering wheel but I had to keep driving to get the car off the track. Finally I got it off the track and onto the grass, and I jumped out the window. I wasn't going too fast, maybe 20 or 30 miles an hour. I wasn't worried about that, anyway.

"I tumbled a little bit, then ran to the hospital at the track—it was faster than taking an ambulance. I was holding my hands out in front of me because they didn't have any skin left on them."

WAWAK SAID doctors gave him a pain-killer, then cut off the remaining skin. He said it would probably be several months before he would be able to use his hands again, but said doctors wouldn't know for sure until the middle of this week.

Wawak, who has raced for his full-time occupation this season, said he's going to wear fireproof driving gloves from now on.

"If there was a vote on a rule to make gloves mandatory, I'd vote for it now," he said. "I'll never drive again without 'em.

"I've never had trouble with blisters or anything, so I've just never worn them. But if I'd have had gloves and fireproof underwear, I'd have just a little burn on my face and that's all.

"This has changed my way of thinking."

SWC teams eye tourney berths

By The Associated Press

Two home berths in the Southwest Conference postseason basketball tournament are still undecided today—with Texas A&M, Texas and Southern Methodist still gunning for the two open spots.

SMU appears to be the longshot chance to play at home in the first round since the Mustangs need to beat tough Texas Tech Tuesday night in Dallas, where they took it on the chin in losing 80-65 to Oklahoma City Saturday night.

The second through fifth place teams in the final standings will host the sixth through ninth place teams in the first round of the tournament next Saturday.

Texas and SMU are currently tied for fifth with 7-8 records and A&M is 8-7 in fourth. But the Aggies could miss out on a home berth if they lose to powerful Arkansas Tuesday night while Texas and SMU win. Texas hosts eighth-place Rice.

Regardless of who wins the home berths next Saturday, the reality is that someone ultimately must meet Arkansas in the tournament finals March 5 in Houston. The Razorbacks will be looking for the first unbeaten SWC record in 21 years Tuesday night against A&M.

SMU Coach Sonny Allen, dejected over his team's poor performance against Oklahoma City, faced that reality when he said: "It's no big thing to be tied for fifth in the conference."

Saturday's conference results saw Arkansas beat Texas 73-61, Houston swamp Texas A&M 116-83, Texas Tech trip Baylor 68-61 and Rice blast TCU 93-72.

Houston's 22-6 season record, combined with the fact it will be hosting the tournament after the first round games, seems to give the Cougars the best chance of reaching the finals against Arkansas.

Otis Birdsong, the most valuable player in the conference, tied a career best with 43 points as Houston swamped the Aggies despite the loss of three starters.

Cecil Rose left the game with an injury and two Cougars, Mark Trammel and Mike Schultz, were kicked out of the game for fighting. Wally Swanson of the Aggies also was ousted.

"I was really surprised they didn't throw me out," said Houston's Charles Thompson. "Schultz was trying to break up the fight and they threw him out."

Marvin Delph scored 28 points and Sidney Moncreif 19 points and 16 rebounds in the raggedly-played Texas-Arkansas game.

"The game got out of hand," said Moncreif. There were a lot of flying elbows."

Mike Russell scored 22 points to lead Texas Tech over Baylor in Lubbock. The Red Raiders played without starting guard Steve Dunn, who is expected to recover from a dislocated finger in time for the playoffs.

Elbert Darden scored a career-high 31 points for Rice who handed TCU its 16th straight conference loss, a record.

Cale Yarborough adds $93,000 to winnings

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A wreck suddenly developed in front of Cale Yarborough on his way to winning $63,000 in the Daytona 500 stock car race Sunday.

"I was lucky to get the car back straight after I turned left down on the grass below the track," the blond veteran said. "But this was my week and nothing bad could happen to me."

He also won $25,000 in the International Race of Champions series, which ended Friday, with his victory over A.J. Foyt, and a qualifying race for the Daytona 500. Yarborough's winnings for the week were $93,300 in what he called his "triple crown of Daytona."

Yarborough said it looked to him like the wreck began when Salt Walther, a U.S. Auto Club (USAC) driver, "turned right into Buddy Baker."

Walther had a different version of his encounter with the drivers from the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR).

"I got hit in the butt," Walther said. "It was an orange car and we had been running together for several laps. He clipped me coming out of turn No. 2 and got me sideways."

Baker saw it as Yarborough did, saying "Walther was running down in the third lane and just came up across the track and knocked me into the wall."

Yarborough said he had another close call in the race, when Dave Marcis abruptly came over in front of him.

ACU edges by Bobcats, 68-64

BROWNWOOD, Tex. (AP) — Dave Merrill scored 34 points Sunday to lead Abilene Christian to a 68-64 victory over Southwest Texas in the second game of a Lone Star Conference championship tournament doubleheader.

Junior guard Larry McGhee scored 29 points to lead East Texas to a 91-66 victory over Sam Houston in the first game.

East Texas will play Stephen F. Austin and Abilene Christian will tangle with tournament favorite Howard Payne Monday night, with Monday's winners meeting in Tuesday's championship.

Cincinnati Reds break tradition with stars

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds, baseball's 1976 champions, broke tradition by issuing three-year contracts in reaching terms with two-time National Leaguee Most Valuable Player Joe Morgan and star outfielders Ken Griffey and George Foster.

"We've adjusted our thinking to meet the needs of the time," said Reds General Manager Dick Wagner after the signings Saturday. No details were disclosed.

Foster, the major league leader last season with 121 runs batted in, said the loss of ace pitcher Don Gullett, who became a free agent, led to the club's policy change. "They realized they had to hold onto their good players," he said.

Gullett was the only member of the club to play out his option last year, then signed a $2 million, long-term contract with the New York Yankees.

"The player has his security to think about," said Wagner.

Morgan said his package was in excess of $1 million and ranked as "the largest contract ever signed by a Cincinnati player."

The unprecedented contracts reduced the number of unsigned Cincinnati players to six. The list includes All-Star infielders Pete Rose and Dave Concepcion, relief ace Rawly Eastwick and starting pitcher Gary Nolan. Pitchers are scheduled to report to training camp in Tampa, Fla., late this week.

The other two are utilityman Mike Lum and minor league pitcher Pat Darcy, who is apparently trying to force a trade. "He has indicated he won't sign," said Wagner.

The breakthrough came after Wagner and agent Tom Reich, the trio's negotiator, huddled for three days in Cincinnati, trying to hammer out separate contracts. The marathon session ended Saturday.

Morgan, 33, had voiced unhappiness that the bargaining had dragged on too long. Friday, he told The Associated Press that "it scares me that one of these days I may not be playing in Cincinnati."

He reacted to the signing with relief. "I never really gave any thought to playing out my option. I said five years ago that I hoped to finish my career in Cincinnati and I feel the same way now," Morgan said.

The Reds' front office had focused its efforts on signing Morgan since several other players reportedly were waiting to see if the slugging second baseman would come to terms.

Last season, Morgan joined Chicago's Ernie Banks as the only player to win consecutive MVP awards in the National League.

He produced career-high marks in 1976 with a .327 batting average, 27 home runs and 111 RBI. Morgan has averaged .303 since joining the Reds in 1972 from Houston.

Griffey, 27, finished as the league's No. 2 hitter, losing the batting title on the last day of the season to Bill Madlock, formerly with the Chicago Cubs, .338 to .336.

Foster, 28, developed into the Reds' top run producer and had a career-high 29 homers.

Ashe ties knot

NEW YORK (AP) — Tennis star Arthur Ashe and Jeanne Marie Moutoussamy, a photographer, were married Sunday in a ceremony performed by U.N.Ambassador Andrew Young.

Ashe, wearing a three-piece blue suit, admitted to being a little nervous as he hobbled into the church on a pair of crutches, the result of a recent bursitis operation on his left heel.

His bride wore a champagne silk crepe gown with an empire waist and heavy lace at the neck.

About 100 guests, including top tennis stars Stan Smith, Charlie Pasarell and Bob Lutz, attended the 30-minute ceremony in the modern chapel of the Church Center for the United Nations.

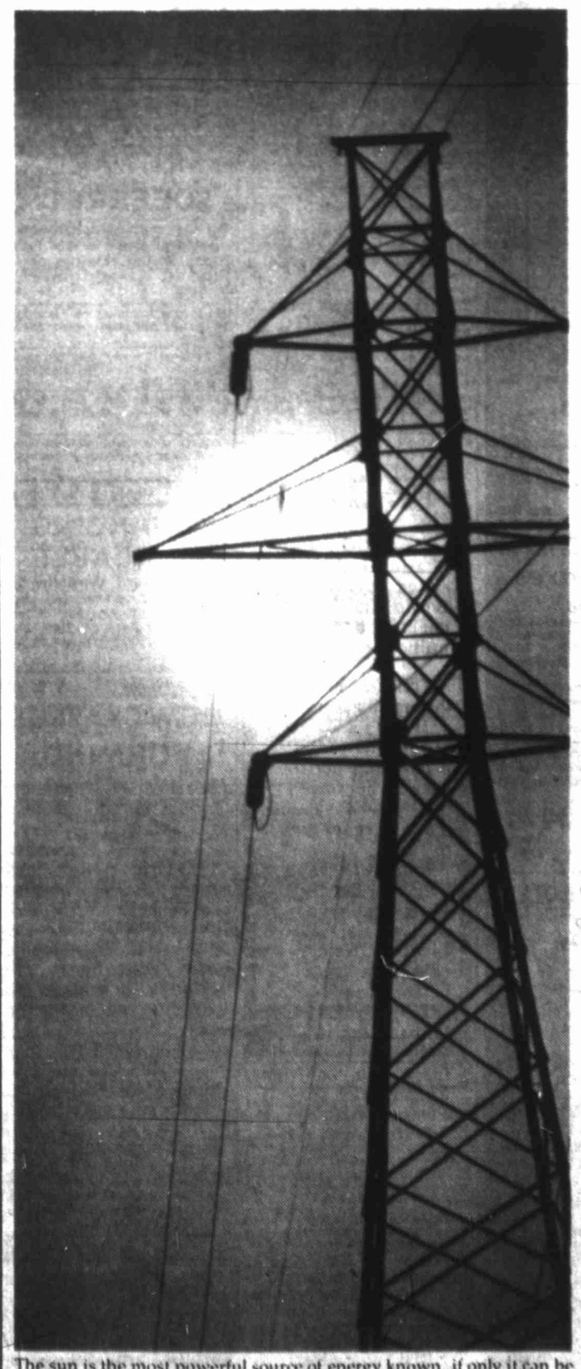

Young, a Congregationalist minister who has known Ashe for several years, said that a successful tennis career had not prevented Ashe from realizing that "our brothers in South Africa cannot be ignored."

Ashe, 33, and Young visited South Africa together in 1973.

In his sermon, Young said "this young bridegroom" had helped inspire the ambassador's own mission to attempt a diplomatic settlement of the racial and political problems of South Africa.

"The world is so love-starved that those who love have a very, very special place," Young told the couple. "Love for each other will inevitably spill over into a love-hungry world. It will make us all stronger and make the world a slightly better place."

The sun is the most powerful source of energy known, if only it can be harnessed. Someday, we hope, widespread solar-generated electricity will be a reality.

Sunshine is free.
So why aren't we using it to make your electricity?

Sure, sunshine is free. But right now the equipment needed to generate electricity with it is very expensive. It will be years before solar power can provide large amounts of electricity at reasonable prices.

To hasten that day, Texas Electric participates in and supports a national solar energy development program.

Meanwhile, we have to make your electricity with fuels available now. That's why we're building lignite coal and nuclear power plants.

While this means electricity will have to cost more, it also means we'll be able to make sure you continue having the electricity you need.

Texas Electric Service Company

Electricity. You count on it today. We're working to keep it that way.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Vitamin C for flu?

Dear Dr. Solomon: I see that Prof. Linus Pauling says that taking a lot of vitamin C protects you against the flu as well as the common cold. Do you agree with this? And does it mean that it's not important to take flu shots? — Chris T.

Dear Chris; Vitamin C is not a substitute for vaccination against influenza, although, of course, a good diet with adequate vitamins is essential for your natural resistance to flu and other diseases.

As to Prof. Pauling's claim that large supplements of vitamin C help control the flu and the common cold, most authorities say there is a little or no evidence to support this view — and there have been quite a few studies since Prof. Pauling's first book on the subject came out in 1970.

One of the most recent studies, conducted by Dr. John L. Coulehan of the University of Pittsburgh, found that vitamin C supplements did not seem to be effective against upper respiratory illnesses. The tests were done on 868 Navajo children.

Prof. Pauling, it is only fair to add, contends that the medical profession is hidebound and biased. Whether or not there is any truth to this statement, some doctors do take quite generous vitamin supplements.

A daily glass of orange juice and a well-rounded diet will easily give you your Recommended Dietary Allowance of vitamin C. If you think that supplements might help, you should check with your doctor.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it dangerous for a baby if you don't dilute the fomila quite enough? My sister said I was being too fussy about getting the formula just right. She doesn't think it makes that much difference, but I hate to take any chances. I would appreciate it if you would tell me what you think. — Grace P.

Dear Grace: Formulas that are too concentrated can be very dangerous for a baby. They place too great a load on immature kidneys and can lead to dehydration, kidney failure and damage to the nervous system. So your instinct was right in this. Any mother should be sure to follow her doctor's instructions most carefully in preparing the formula.

Davis' jurors to be selected

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Selection of jurors is due to start this week in the capital murder trial of millionaire industrialist Cullen Davis, and Dist. Court Judge Tom Cave says the process could take as long as a month.

Davis is charged in the shooting deaths last August of his stepdaughter Andrea Wilborn, 12, and his estranged wife's boy friend, Stan Farr, 30.

He is also charged with two counts of attempted capital murder in the wounding of his wife Priscilla, 35, and Gus Gavrel, 21. All the shootings took place at the $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth.

Davis will be one of the few persons entering the courtroom Tuesday who won't besearched. He has been in jail the past six months, and will go into court via a jail elevator.

The search procedure for newsmen, lawyers and spectators will be identical to the routine followed during Davis' bond hearing late last year.

Davis was charged originally with two counts of murder and two counts of attempted murder a few hours after the shootings. He posted $80,000 bond with a cashier's check and was freed.

Dist. Atty. Tim Curry came under fire by people from as far away as Oregon who said he had been brought off.

Curry's investigators re-arrested Davis a month later, as he was boarding his private jet at a Fort Worth airport, after levelling the capital murder charges.

The district attorney said he will seek the death penalty in both cases.

Earlier this month a Tarrant County grand jury indicted Davis on two attempted capital murder counts.

Davis' lawyers have asked Judge Cave to consolidate all the charges into one trial. Dallas defense lawyer Phil Burleson said if the cases are tried separately, they could take three years to complete.

Cave is expected to rule on the formal motion Tuesday before the first prospective juror is questioned.

Pertschuk said choice for FTC

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Michael Pertschuk, chief counsel of the Senate Commerce Committee, has been chosen by President Carter to be chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, according to a White House source.

Carter offered the post to Pertschuk during a White House meeting last Friday, the source said.

Pertschuk could not be reached Sunday for comment. Deputy White House Press Secretary Walter Wurfel refused to confirm or deny the report.

Pertschuk, 44, has been on the Commerce Committee for 12 years, and its chief counsel since 1968.

Three others who were considered for the FTC chairmanship were Robert Pitofsky, Michael R. Lemov and Joan Z. Bernstein.

Lemov is chief counsel of the House subcommittee on oversight and investigations. Pitofsky, a Georgetown Law School professor who is associated with the Washington law firm of Arnold & Porter, put together the transition book on the FTC for the Carter Administration. Bernstein resigned in April as acting director of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection to join the Washington office of a Cleveland law firm.

As head of the consumer-conscious staff assembled by chairman Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.), Pertschuk has been credited as a leading force for product safety, no-fault auto insurance, auto safety and other measures.

He has come to be regarded as one of the most — if not the most — influential staff members on Capitol Hill. As such, he has been accused by critics of being the person who really runs the Commerce Committee, of being too ardent a consumer advocate and of lobbying committee members on behalf of positions he favors.

His defenders cite his effectiveness, his ability to get what Magnuson wants done and the high level of expertise among the staff he has assembled.

The FTC has regulatory authority over a broad range of business practices such as advertising, consumer protection and the economic concentration of industries.

Business Opportunity

The U.S. Department of Health has stated, water pollution is a major problem in America. Increased demands on our fixed water supply requires it to be recycled at a faster rate. Americans are drinking recycled sewer water.

The Wall Street Journal states, "Home Water Purification is Business Booming". We feel that every home in America will have a home Water Purification Appliance within ten years. A major ground floor opportunity limited only by desire and effort is available for selected individuals or corporations.

Doctors and medical researchers say, "The basic cause of heart attacks and strokes, America's No. 1 killer, is chlorine and chlorine can be removed at the tap along with all cancer causing impurities.

Major media across America have awakened every person to the tragic conditions of our outdated water systems and the need for pure water.

Direct from Manufacturer. State, Regional and Area Distributors are available, on an exclusive basis, for the most beautiful, most efficient and most economical new home water purification unit on the market providing PURE water for 1¢ per gallon. Investment required depends on population of area desired for $6,900 to $84,250. NO FRANCHISE FEE. Conservative first year profit projections, ten times original investment. Full disclosure by telephone or write, giving complete resume, area desired and financial ability to:

Environmentalists say promises must be kept

By MARY RUSSELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — At the same time President Carter has promised to increase coal production as a necessary part of a national energy policy, he has promised to sign into law a bill regulating the strip mining of coal.

According to the coal industry, those two promises are incompatible. Federal regulation of strip mining will hamper coal production and actually reduce it, at least temporarily, they say.

According to environmentalists, both promises can be and must be kept. To save fragile, arid lands in the West, and important agricultural lands in the Midwest, strip mining must be limited, they say.

Though the overwhelming bulk of the nation's coal reserves can be extracted only by underground mining, more than half the current production comes from strip mining, the fastest, cheapest method, and environmentalists say it is time to force the mine operators in the direction they must eventually take — toward deep mining.

Strip-mining legislation was first introduced in Congress in 1940, but serious work on a bill didn't begin until 1971. Since then, strip mining has been one of those bills that something always happens to on the way to enactment, even though support for it has grown. In 1974, it was delayed to the point where President Frod was able to pocket veto it after Congress adjourned. In 1975 he vetoed it again and the House failed by three votes to override his veto. In 1976, it was stalled in the House Rules Committee.

Since Democrats now have overwhelming majorities in Congress and Carter has promised to sign a bill, this should be the year strip-mining legislation is enacted into law.

However, congressional opponents are cautiously optimistic, because of industry opposition, the increased need for coal, the new makeup of the House Interior Committee — and the bill's uncanny knack for getting into trouble.

Both the House and the Senate Interior committees plan to finish hearings and begin markups in March, and to have a bill on the President's desk by early summer.

Despite the loss of White House backing, National Coal Association President Carl Bagge remains "unwilling to concede" there will be a bill.

He points to the membership of the House Interior Committee as one reason for hope. Of the eight freshman Democrats appointed to the enlarged 46-seat committee, Austin Murphy (Pa.), Lamar Gudger (N.C.) and Jerry Huckaby (La.) are considered doubtful on strip mining. Combined with the conservative Democrats and Republicans on the committee, it could make a difference, at least in the kind of amendments that are passed.

Committee Chairman Morris K. Udall (D-Ariz.) acknowledges that "the Interior Committee doesn't reflect the Democratic majority in the House." He says the industry tried to "stack" the committee. Udall counts 23 sure votes and is reasonably certain he can get one more on strip-mining amendments.

Bagge also contends that the Carter Administration may take a different view when it realizes that the bill would halt production of great amounts of coal, be prohibitive to small mine operators who couldn't afford to comply with all the bureaucratic requirements and cause unemployment.

Ian MacGregor, chairman of the board of the American Mining Congress and Maax, Inc., a large mining company, contends no law is now necessary because 38 states have mined land reclamation laws" enacted in the past few years. "If coal production is reduced or expansion of coal production is significantly retarded by prohibitive legislation, shortages will cause price increases, thereby added to inflationary pressures" and raising electric utility rates 10 to 15 per cent, MacGregor says.

Louise Dunlop of the Environmental Policy Center, denies that strip-mining legislation would hurt coal production or lift consumer costs.

"No one is seeking a bill that would hurt coal production. Environmentalists are actually seeking to legitimize coal, by criticizing nuclear energy. But there is so much coal we can afford to be selective in where and how we dig it," said Dunlop. She quotes Russell Train, former Environmental Protection Agency administrator, as saying that only 3 per cent of the nation's 400 billions tons of coal reserves is strippable.

Moreover, since the Arab oil embargo, the cost of coal has gone up in proportion to the cost of Arab oil, not to the cost of mining coal. Though the cost of coal is now about $40 a ton, getting it to the surface still costs $8 to $12 a ton.

Dunlop argues that state strip-mining laws simply are not enforced. Moreover, according to John C. Doyle of the Environmental Policy Center, strip-mined agricultural land simply can't be returned to the high-yield land it was before.

Association applauds passage of emergency gas act of 1977

WASHINGTON — The American Gas Association applauds the passage by Congress of the Emergency Natural Gas Act of 1977 which is designed to forestall the possibility of curtailments of natural gas to residences and other highest priority human need uses in the winter-plagued eastern half of the United States.

"In the current crisis," AGA President George H. Lawrence said, "We recognize that everyone must do everything possible this winter to protect public health and safety and, to the maximum extent possible, avert human suffering.

"The compromise bill, in addition to allowing badly needed emergency purchases from the unregulated intrastate market, allows for the exchange of gas supplies among gas compaines during the emergency."

Lawrence cautioned, however, that the emergency legislation "adds no new gas whatsoever. It is simply a vehicle to permit the government and natural gas companies to have the short-term flexibility necessary in moving existing supplies to points of greatest need."

He said the Association is encouraged that the legislation is designed to provide equitable financial treatment for all gas companies involved in emergency natural gas transfers as well as the customers served. Lawrence explained that donor pipelines and distribution gas companies will, to the extent possible, receive compensation in kind for their diverted supplies.

"One provision of the bill still concerns us, "Lawrence continued, "and that is the Aug. 1 cut-off of emergency purchases will not provide sufficient time to refill the badly depleted storage fields with the gas necessary for next winter. However, it is our hope that Congress will act on permanent deregulation of new gas before that date.

"The same reasons which prompt AGA's support for this emergency legislation are even more persuasive for the immediate deregulation of new gas, because this is what will add new gas supplies and help to bring long-term relief to consumers and the economy," Lawrence said.

Lawrence urged Congress to take action to permanently reverse the four year trend of declining domestic gas production, and to recognize that the unrealistically low requlated price of natural gas will neither promote increased supplies nor be an incentive for efficient gas use.

He said genuine relief can be accomplished only by an expedited, aggressive program which simultaneously does three things:

(1) stimulates domestic exploration for conventional natural gas supplies;

(2) encourages development of all economically feasible supplemental gas supplies; and

(3) pursues maximum conservation programs and use of energy supplies in a most efficient manner.

"The natural gas industry is encouraged by the Administration's commitment to propose within 90 days a comprehensive energy plan which must address the deregulation of new gas. We urge Congress to act on the natural gas porition of the plan in the most expeditious manner possible," Lawrence said.

He concluded by saying:

"While evaluations and checks by our member companies or by governmental agencies have not supported allegations that producers are withholding gas from the market, we welcome the announcement today that the President intends to order an independent White House investigation and pledge our cooperation."

API warns proposed rules will be costly

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The American Petroleum Institute has warned that a set of regulations recently proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) could deprive the nation of more than 3.5 billion barrels of oil production.

In formal comments subbmitted to the EPA, Roy Carlson, the Institute's director of production, called the proposed regulations governing the undergound injection of oil field water "ill conceived and not needed" and urged that they be withdrawn in their entirety.

The proposed EPA regulations would create nationwide standards for regulating the injection of water produced in connection with oil production. These regulations would supersede current state regulations.

In his letter Carlson said, "The evidence is clear that most existing state programs adequately protect undergound sources of drinking water. We find little evidence that underground injection of water or other fluids either for disposal or enhanced recovery of hydrocarbons, as currently practiced and as regulated by the state regulatory bodies, has contributed to ground water contamination. We are convinced that the proposed regulations would substantially curtail both daily production and the ultimate recovery of reserves as well as needlessly delay new injection operations."

Carlson also asserted that the government agency's Draft Environmental Impact Statement grossly understated the cost impact of the proposed regulations. The EPA estimated the nationwide cost of plugging wells at $12 million, but an API survey resulted in an estimate of some $406 million.

Eddy project flowing gas

Morris R. Antwell, Hobbs, No. 1 Mesa-Fuerte, Eddy County, N.M., Morrow project, ½ mile south and west of production in the three-well Happy Valley (Morrow) gas field and 3¾ miles Southeast of Strawn gas production in the Catclaw Draw field, flowed gas at the maximum, daily rate of 1 million cubic feet from the Strawn.

The flow was through a ½-inch choke and perforations at 9,822-9,829 feet.

It was shut in for two hours, and reopened on a 7/16-inch choke, it flowed at the rate of 950,000 cubic feet per day, along with an unreported amount of water.

It has been shut in again for pressure buildup.

Earlier, it flowed gas from the Morrow at the rate of 340,000 cubic feet per day, along with an estimated 67 barrels of water in an unreported time, on a ¼-inch choke and through perforations at 10,947-11,226 feet, after a 6,000-gallon acid treatment.

Prior to the flow test, it swabbed and flowed gas at the rate of 200,000 cubic feet per day.

Drilled to 11,327 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom, and a retrievable bridge plug has been set at 10,800 feet to isolate the Morrow and Strawn sections.

Producer completes

United Co., Lubbock, completed No. 4 John A. Wheeler as a fourth producer and ½-mile west extension in the Ha-Ra (Clear Fork) field of Crosby County.

It finaled for a 24-hour potential of 14 barrels of oil and 75 barrels of water, through perforations at 4,384-4,410 feet. Gravity of the oil in 22.8 degrees.

Location is 660 feet from south and west lines of section 1053, block 1, H&OB survey, 16 miles east of Lubbock.

DRY HOLES

CHAVES — Larue & Muncy No. 2 Nola-Federal, in an undesignated (Grayburg) area, 660 feet from south and west lines of section 8-14s-28e, nine miles east of Hagerman, td 2,600 feet.

Marale, Inc. No. 3 Butler Springs, wildcat, 1,980 feet from south and east lines of section 13-15s-28e, 17 miles southeast of Hagerman, td 2,179 feet.

Harvey E. Yates No. 1 Railroad Mountain, in an undesignated area, 660 feet from north and west lines of section 6-8s-31e, 15 miles east of Elkins, td 10,382 feet.

FISHER — Amerada Petroleum Corp. No. 1 J. F. Guiter, 1,980 feet from south and 467 feet from east lines of section 90, block 1, H&TC survey, nine miles east of Rotan, td 5,399 feet.

RUNNELS — Oeste Oil Corp. No. 1 Vida Tinkle, wildcat, 3,111 feet from south and 2,486 feet from west lines of J. R. Nunn survey, 338, abstract 712, five miles southeast of Winters, td 4,300 feet.

WES-TEX Drilling Co. No. 1 Rufus Allen Estate, wildcat, 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of L. F. Grenett survey, 172, five miles southwest of Winters, td 4,430 feet.

STONEWALL — Fisher-Webb, Inc. No. 1 L. C. Young, in the Frankirk field, 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 9, block U, T&P survey, eight miles southwest of Aspermont, td 6,170 feet.

Gas men to meet

Ed Thompson, executive director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association in Midland, will be the speaker for the Tuesday noon meeting of the Natural Gas Men of the Permian Basin.

The meeting will be in the Midland Country Club.

Thompson's topic will be "The Washington Dilemma." He is a graduate of Southern Methodist University with a B.S. degree in Journalism.

Atascosa strike hit

SAN ANTONIO — Apache Corp. reported it has completed a new zone oil discovery in the East Holloway field in Atascosa County, 30 miles southeast of San Antonio.

The well, No. 6 Heinen in Carlos Perez survey No. 1041, abstract 661, flowed 202 barrels of 26-gravity oil per day, with no water, on a ¼-inch choke. Flowing tubin pressure was 100 pounds per square inch.

Drilled to 6,770 feet, the well was completed in the Austin Chalk through perforations from 6,409 to 6,458 feet.

Garza probe recovers oil

Estoril Producing Corp., Midland, was drilling below 8,779 feet in shale and lime on a 9,000-foot contract at No. 1-2-30 Slaughter Estate, Garza County wildcat, after it recovered oil and shows on a drillstem test.

Tool was open one hour on the test taken from 8,314-8,409 feet, which recovered 30 feet of oil, 180 feet of heavily oil- and gas-cut mud, 450 feet of slightly oil- and gas-cut water and 450 feet of gas-cut water. The sampler returned .28 cubic foot of gas, 400 cubic centimeters of oil and 1,500 cubic centimeters of water.

Flowing pressure was 554 pounds and one-hour initial and two-hour final shut-in pressures were 2,872 pounds each.

The test is 853 feet from south and 1,787 feet from west lines of section 2, block 30, T-7-N, TW&NG survey, seven miles southwest of Post.

Well finals in Dawson

Coquina Oil Corp., Midland, has completed its No. 1 Huddleston as a ⅜-mile east extension and eighth well in the Gin, North (8,000) field of Dawson County.

It had a 24-hour pumping potential of 155.87 barrels of 39.8-gravity oil and 48.5 barrels of water, producing through perforations at 8,132-8,152 feet. No treatment has been reported.

Drilled as a wildcat to 8,190 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom.

Wellsite is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 1, block 2, D. L. Cunningham survey, four miles west of Lamesa.

Big workforce needed for contingency plan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A detailed contingency plan for establishing a national gas rationing system was sent to Congress by the Ford Administration the day before President Carter took office.

Drafted by the Federal Energy Administration, it is part of a package of emergency contingency plans that could be implemented in the face of a new Arab oil boycott. The plans are required by the 1975 Energy Act.

As designed by the Federal Energy Administration, the complex national system is designed to cut annual gasoline consumption an estimated 21 per cent through the use of coupons and gas ration credits.

To supervise the system, FEA foresees the need for an 87,000-person workforce, 40,000-coupon distribution sites and an annual $1.9 billion cost.

The system would be financed by a 2.3-cents-per-gallon increase in the cost of each gallon of gas.

Under the 1975 energy law, the contingent gas rationing system could not be implemented by a president without specific congressional approval.

The plan establishes five categories of gasoline users — three for government and private concerns and two for individuals.

Each individual with a driver's license would be allocated eight five-gallon ration coupons for each ration period. The ration period is expected to be a month but could be five or six weeks depending upon the severity of the shortage.

Individuals with hardships — such as being handicapped, or in need of gas for commuting — would apply for added hardship coupons to be distributed by specially established local ration boards.

Government, industry and commercial vehicle users would get ration credits, not coupons, which FEA would deposit each month at a designated commercial bank, savings and loan association or credit union.

Gas flows in Morrow

C&K Petroleum, Inc., Midland, No. 1-13 Carlsbad Communitized, stepout in the Carlsbad, South (Morrow) gas field, flowed gas at the maximum, daily rate of 1.110 million cubic feet, on a drillstem test in the Morrow.

Tool was open 3½ hours on the test taken from 11,279-11,479 feet. Gas surfaced in 14 minutes, flowing at the above rate. There was no fluid recovery.

Operator was drilling ahead below 11,687 feet on a 12,000-foot contract.

The test is 1,650 feet from north and 2,040 feet from east lines of section 13-22s-26e, ½ mile west of Carlsbad townsite.

Cisco flows oil, water

Morris R. Antweil, Hobbs, No. 1 Dinkus Communitized, Eddy County, N.M., wildcat, seven miles southwest of Dayton and ¾ mile north of Morrow production in the Penasco Draw field, flowed 20 barrels of oil and eight barrels of water in 24 hours, from the Cisco.

The flow was through perforations at 7,129-7,147 feet, which had earlier been acidized with 1,500 gallons. Testing continued.

The project is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 28-18s-25e.

Cure for acne may reside in tandem drugs

By RICHARD SALTUS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For about 80 per cent of adolescents, and many older people as well, a cure for acne would save tears and dollars.

There isn't one yet, but a new combination of drugs already in use is generating enthusiasm among some dermatologists. One Los Angeles skin specialist has dropped his other treatments and opened four acne clinics based entirely on the two-drug regimen.

The drugs are not new, but the tandem treatment seems to be more potent than the use of each separately. The two, Vitamin A acid and benzoyl hydroxide, can, according to Dr. Sidney Hurwitz of the Yale Medical School, "produce dramatic results in a relatively short period of time."

He said the one-two punch of the drugs penetrates deep into the skin, flushes out pores blocked with clumped skin cells and cuts down on bacteria that cause reddened, inflamed blemishes.

Hurwitz reported that in a test series of 404 cases, the drugs cleared 80 to 98 per cent of the acne problem in 88.1 per cent of the patients.

However, the professor-in-chief of the UCLA Division of Dermatology in the medical school says the treatment is "nothing startling." The Hurwitz study, Dr. Ron Reisner pointed out, may lack validity because it did not exclude the possibility of psychological factors.

Dr. Jack Kramer, who uses the new treatment at his four Acne Care Clinics, believes it will be used by nearly all dermatologists in the near future.

Kramer, who has practiced in Southern California for 20 years, claims the drug combination is "more than twice as effective" as treatments he used in the past.

But "nobody has a cure," said Reisner, although every so often a new method is used with great enthusiasm. "The history of the last 50 years of acne treatment is littered with 'cures' or 'controls,'" he said.

Kramer said he spends considerable time with each patient, telling him how the drugs work and emphasizing that the drugs must be rubbed on the skin religiously — one in the morning and the other at night.

Although the drugs are potent and may cause an allergic reaction, this has happened in less than 1 per cent of the cases, he said.

Use of the drugs has resulted in a new approach for Kramer.

MC artist will speak in Andrews

Stan Jacobs, Midland College art instructor, will be a guest speaker at an adult education pottery course in Andrews Thursday.

He will give a pottery-wheel demonstration and will discuss various types of glazes used in ceramics. The class will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. at Andrews High School.

Songwriter's Hall preserves Tin Pan Alley stuff

NEW YORK (AP) — Eight stories above the neon maze that showbiz fondly calls the crossroads of the world, the nation's music is now enshrined.

Here, the ghost fingers of Scott Joplin dance across a keyboard in "Maple Leaf Rag."

George Gershwin's trick desk is opened wide.

The tune that later became "The Star Spangled Banner" turns up as a lilt for George Washington's election campaign.

With the mouthful title of Songwriters' Hall of Fame Museum, Archives and Library, the center has been established after a decade of planning by the National Academy of Popular Music and is filled with amazing memorabilia. The salute ranges from "Flat Foot Floogie" to "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

The academy was started by writers and publishers who felt that the time had come for Tin Pan Alley to get some permanent recognition along with baseball players, actors, football behemoths, film stars and Frisbee champions.

At first, the NAPM concentrated on annual votes for past and present greats — a list without a monument. After the death in 1976 of Johnny Mercer, the first president, an architect was hired. He designed a building that would cost $5 million.

Alexander Parker, a financier and song buff, heard about it, called Sammy Cahn, Mercer's successor. Parker had just bought One Times Square, the famous triangular building down which the lighted ball rolls each New Year's Eve, for TV's millions.

"He offered us an entire floor rent free," said Oscar Brand, the folk singer and musicologist who is the museum's curator. "Parker felt it was the ideal place, sort of midway between old and new Tin Pan Alley."

The exact original location of that mythical boulevard has been lost. Baltimore claimed one in 1814, but by the mid-19th century, a lot of music publishers laid claim to the title down near Manhattan's Chinatown. Brand and his colleagues feel the first full-fledged Alley burgeoned around 1900 at 28th Street and Sixth Avenue — now the flower market district — and moved a mile uptown soon after, centering at the Brill Building, a warren of tiny rooms crowded with eager writers and skeptical publishers.

"Sixty per cent of all America's popular music was written in this one area," Cahn says.

When the call went out for suitable exhibit material, Brand was amazed by "the incredible things that turned up in attics." Many items were donated, others loaned, such as the desk sent by the Library of Congress at which Victor Herbert stood while composing "The Red Mill" and "Babes in Toyland."

Fats Waller's son sent the piano on which "Honeysuckle Rose" first sounded. A reproducing piano plays the paper rolls recorded by Gershwin, Eubie Blake, Joplin and the Richard Rodgers of 1924.

Another upright that was used for years in one office is scarred with uncounted cigarette burns — "It was traditional never to use ash trays," explains Rand. The instrument was called a Tonk after its distributor, Max Tonk; and that's how honky-tonk piano may have originated.

Other souvenirs are the tray at which Otto Harbach wrote "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," and paintings by Mercer, Harold Rome ("Pins and Needles"), John Loeb ("Rosie the Riveter") and Howard Dietz ("Dancing in the Dark").

FORMER PRESIDENT FORD, center, sits on the patio of his new home in Palm Springs, Calif., giving one of several interviews he's done since arriving with Mrs. Ford at the rented home in desert country. At right are Steve Bell and David Hartman of ABC. The interview will be seen on ABC Tuesday morning.

Vance flies homeward, warns against optimism

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said today "very sharp differences" remain among the Israelis and the Arabs on how to deal with the Palestinians and other issues standing in the way of resumption of Mideast peace talks in Geneva.

Vance told a news conference before departing for home after his six-nation Middle East tour that "all parties agree on the need for peace" and would like to redirect their economies away from massive military expenditures.

But "one must be careful not to be overly optimistic," he cautioned.

The Secretary of State was seen off at the airport by Syrian Foreign Minister Abdulhalim Khaddam.

He told reporters that his visits to Israel, Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Syria gave him "a clear understanding" of the Middle East situation. He said all six governments are prepared to resume the Geneva talks during the second half of this year. But he said the Arabs themselves were divided on how Palestinian interests should be represented.

A major topic of Vance's week of talks was ways to bring the Palestinians into negotiations with Israel, which refuses to negotiate with the Palestinian Liberation Organization until it formally recognizes Israel's right to exist.

Vance said the Israelis and Arabs do not even share the same definition of peace. To the Israelis, peace includes full diplomatic relations, he said, but to the Arabs, it involves only an end to the state of war with relations developing later.

The Secretary of State said Syrian President Hafez Assad would probably meet President Carter in Europe in May, after other Arab and Israeli leaders visit Washington in March and April for a series of meetings to work out plans for resumption of the Geneva conference. The United States and the Soviet Union are co-chairmen of the conference.

The secretary flew to Damascus on Sunday from Saudi Arabia for talks with Assad, whom he praised as "an outstanding statesman." The Syrian leader told Vance that his terms for peace with Israel were unchanged — withdrawal of territory it seized in 1967 and full recognition of the national rights of the Palestinians.

Assad's peace terms were outlined in a Syrian communique issued after the meeting.

Vance pledged the Carter administration would work for a comprehensive Middle East settlement and would "do all in our power to work with the parties to move the talks toward a successful conclusion.

Assad reportedly feels there is little chance the National Council of the PLO will rewrite the organization's covenant to drop its call for the dismantling of Israel.

The Syrian leader is also said to believe the Israelis would raise other objections to peace talks if that position were changed.

Wonder wins 4 Grammy awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stevie Wonder's ambitious personal opus, "Songs in the Key of Life," has earned him four of the recording industry's Grammy awards, giving the blind rhythm-and-blues singer domination of this year's contest.

As he did in 1973 and 1974, Wonder took top album of the year honors, and was also cited for best producer, best performance by a male rhythm and blues singer and best performance by a male pop singer.

The 19th annual awards of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences Saturday night also featured George Benson as a big winner. The jazz-oriented guitar player and singer took three Grammies for best single record, "This Masquerade;" best pop instrumental performance, "Breezin';" and Best R&B instrumental performance, "Theme from Good King Bad."

Linda Ronstadt, whose album "Hasten Down the Wind" showed her long attachment to country music being augmented with pop, reggae and rock and roll nostalgia material, was voted best female pop singer. Emmylou Harris, a sometime musical associate of Ronstadt, won for best female country vocal performance.

After years of commercial success and 18 Grammy nominations, Chicago finally won the industry's recognition with three awards, including one for best pop group.

Natalie Cole, last year's winner for best new artist, took her second Grammy as best female R&B singer. The best R&B song was Boz Scaggs' "Lowdown."

The two-hour live telecast featured a satellite-relayed performance by Wonder from Lagos, Nigeria, where he was attending an African musical gathering.

Other awards included Ronnie Milsap, best male country singer; Larry Gatlin, best country song ("Broken Lady"), and Starland Vocal Band, best new recording act.

Count Basie was awarded best jazz performance by a soloist for "Basie and Zoot;" Chick Corea's group, best jazz group, and Duke Ellington, best big-band jazz performance.

In classical music, the album of the year was Artur Rubinstein's playing of the five Beethoven piano concertos with Daniel Barenboim and the London Philharmonic.

Filtration of carbon tet saving Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A spill of the dry-cleaning chemical carbon tetrachloride — of debated concentration and danger — is sasely passing this Ohio River city because of filtration, officials say.

The Environmental Protection Agency discontinued its suggestion to residents along the river to boil their drinking water.

The source of the 70 tons of pollutant has been traced to a 20-mile section of the Kanahwa River near Charleston, W. Va. Alvin Morris, a deputy EPA administrator, confirmed that investigators were concentrating on one of two chemical plants in the area.

Gordon Robeck, head of the Environmental Protection Agency's Water Quality Research Division at Cincinnati, says it was only the most spectacular case of a continuing problem with chemicals in the river. More than 100 miles of the Ohio have been affected since the chemical was detected late last week.

Carbon tetrachloride — commonly used as a cleaning fluid and known to cause cancer in laboratory animals — can damage the liver and kidneys. Concentrations in excess of 50 parts of the chemical per billion of water are considered dangerous, said Jerry Ford, spokesman for the Louisville Water Co.

Ford said tests of water drawn on Sunday from the river at Louisville stabilized at 20 parts to 21 parts of carbon tetrachloride per billion after reaching a maximum concentration of 22 parts per billion.

"We're optimistic to think that if it has been stable ... that we've passed the maximum readings," Ford said.

He said the amount of carbon tetrachloride in the water "reduces to almost zero after carbon filtration treatment."

However, EPA officials said their tests indicated concentrations ranging from 80 parts to 130 parts per billion at Louisville before filtering.

Despite discontinuing its warning about boiling water, the EPA still is asking utilities to monitor the river continually and undertake special treatment where necessary, said Gary Hutchinson, chief of the water division in EPA's Atlanta office.

The spill was discovered while EPA officials were making a routine check of water supplies that had developed a smell and bad taste in the Cincinnati area.

Postal Service hits fraud boom

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're looking for a quick way to get rich, lose weight, grow hair, remove wrinkles or become a better lover, you're a target for a fast-growing, half-billion dollar industry — mail fraud.

Postal Service officials say the swindle-by-mail business is so sophisticated it has developed a legitimate offshoot. One promoter is peddling the names of his best customers, a "prime sucker list."

Anyone looking for a start in swindling can purchase the list legally. That way he doesn't have to drum up his own clientele.

Officials responsible for policing mail fraud say it is both diverse and booming. "The variety of stuff around is amazing," said George Davis, assistant general counsel for the Post Office.

The Postal Service estimates swindlers who made about $194 million two years ago upped their take to at least $514 million in fiscal 1976.

Postal authorities stress that most of the $60 billion-a-year mail order industry is reputable. But they warn consumers to be suspicious of products and direct-mail offers that seem too good to be true.

Recent examples include a cream to "quickly enlarge the bustline up to five times while sleeping" and a "youth mask" guaranteed to produce the "equivalent to a miniature facelift."

Unscrupulous promoters have used the mails to sell the public worthless diet pills, fake medical devices, phony investment plans, pseudo cures for baldness and impotency, so-called aphrodisiacs, and fake devices to remove wrinkles and increase the length of fingernails.

Another outfit advertised executive job openings in a nonexistent chain of supermarkets.

One rip-off artist had a religious twist, soliciting priests for donations to help win canonization of John Neumann, a 19th century Philadelphia bishop who already had been chosen for sainthood.

To combat mail-order promoters who advertise falsely or who fail to furnish the product they promise, the Postal Service can stop delivering them their mail, cutting off the supply of cash. Or it can move under the nation's oldest consumer protection law, the 1872 mail fraud law, to seek jail terms against the operators.

AFL-CIO seeks revision

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The AFL-CIO, looking for backing in the Democrat-controlled Congress, has chosen this spring to fight for an omnibus revision of basic labor laws, including repeal of the "right-to-work" provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

A tax on the labor federation's 14 million members will finance a public relations campaign aimed at winning public support and understanding. An AFL-CIO source said the tax is expected to raise $750,000.

Environmentalists say promises must be kept

By MARY RUSSELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — At the same time President Carter has promised to increase coal production as a necessary part of a national energy policy, he has promised to sign into law a bill regulating the strip mining of coal.

According to the coal industry, those two promises are incompatible. Federal regulation of strip mining will hamper coal production and actually reduce it, at least temporarily, they say.

According to environmentalists, both promises can be and must be kept. To save fragile, arid lands in the West, and important agricultural lands in the Midwest, strip mining must be limited, they say.

Though the overwhelming bulk of the nation's coal reserves can be extracted only by underground mining, more than half the current production comes from strip mining, the fastest, cheapest method, and environmentalists say it is time to force the mine operators in the direction they must eventually take — toward deep mining.

Strip-mining legislation was first introduced in Congress in 1940, but serious work on a bill didn't begin until 1971. Since then, strip mining has been one of those bills that something always happens to on the way to enactment, even though support for it has grown. In 1974, it was delayed to the point where President Frod was able to pocket veto it after Congress adjourned. In 1975 he vetoed it again and the House failed by three votes to override his veto. In 1976, it was stalled in the House Rules Committee.

Since Democrats now have overwhelming majorities in Congress and Carter has promised to sign a bill, this should be the year strip-mining legislation is enacted into law.

However, congressional opponents are cautiously optimistic, because of industry opposition, the increased need for coal, the new makeup of the House Interior Committee — and the bill's uncanny knack for getting into trouble.

Both the House and the Senate Interior committees plan to finish hearings and begin markups in March, and to have a bill on the President's desk by early summer.

Despite the loss of White House backing, National Coal Association President Carl Bagge remains "unwilling to concede" there will be a bill.

He points to the membership of the House Interior Committee as one reason for hope. Of the eight freshman Democrats appointed to the enlarged 46-seat committee, Austin Murphy (Pa.), Lamar Gudger (N.C.) and Jerry Huckaby (La.) are considered doubtful on strip mining. Combined with the conservative Democrats and Republicans on the committee, it could make a difference, at least in the kind of amendments that are passed.

Committee Chairman Morris K. Udall (D-Ariz.) acknowledges that "the Interior Committee doesn't reflect the Democratic majority in the House." He says the industry tried to "stack" the committee. Udall counts 23 sure votes and is reasonably certain he can get one more on strip-mining amendments.

Bagge also contends that the Carter Administration may take a different view when it realizes that the bill would halt production of great amounts of coal, be prohibitive to small mine operators who couldn't afford to comply with all the bureaucratic requirements and cause unemployment.

Ian MacGregor, chairman of the board of the American Mining Congress and Maax, Inc., a large mining company, contends no law is now necessary because 38 states have mined land reclamation laws" enacted in the past few years. "If coal production is reduced or expansion of coal production is significantly retarded by prohibitive legislation, shortages will cause price increases, thereby added to inflationary pressures" and raising electric utility rates 10 to 15 per cent, MacGregor says.

Louise Dunlop of the Environmental Policy Center, denies that strip-mining legislation would hurt coal production or lift consumer costs.

"No one is seeking a bill that would hurt coal production. Environmentalists are actually seeking to legitimize coal, by criticizing nuclear energy. But there is so much coal we can afford to be selective in where and how we dig it," said Dunlop. She quotes Russell Train, former Environmental Protection Agency administrator, as saying that only 3 per cent of the nation's 400 billions tons of coal reserves is strippable.

Moreover, since the Arab oil embargo, the cost of coal has gone up in proportion to the cost of Arab oil, not to the cost of mining coal. Though the cost of coal is now about $40 a ton, getting it to the surface still costs $8 to $12 a ton.

Dunlop argues that state strip-mining laws simply are not enforced. Moreover, according to John C. Doyle of the Environmental Policy Center, strip-mined agricultural land simply can't be returned to the high-yield land it was before.

In a study of Illionis farmland, Doyle concludes, "The process of reconstructing agricultural soils after strip mining will take something on the order of 10 to 30 years and even then there will be no guarantee of re-establishing pre-mining agricultural yields in an acceptable time frame."

Strip miners are now eyeing the western states, which have large reserves of the cleaner-burning low-sulfur coal. Environmentalists are particularly concerned because grazing and agricultural lands and water are at a premium there and the aridity and fragility of the land makes it more difficult to reclaim.

When the two sides come down to it, most of the fights will be over western lands. In the Senate, Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.) has already re-introduced a provision originated by former Sen. Mike Mansfield that would prohibit strip mining of federally owned coal on land where the federal government own: mineral rights and the surface is owned by ranchers or farmers who are making a living from it. The House bill allows them to consent to strip mining but not make a windfall profit.

Both House and Senate versions also require preservation of alluvial valleys in the semi-arid western states; their underground water makes them the most suitable for grazing and farming. They also have rich deposits of coal near the surface, but the coal helps bring the water to the surface, and environmentalists feel mining could destroy the water system.

Bagge says it is impossible to define preservation of the valleys. He says the provision amounts to a prohibition against mining which, when added to the surface owners' prohibition, would take vast amounts of western land out of production. "This is a land-use bill," Bagge says, not just a measure to reclaim strip-mined land.

Another criticism comes from West Virginia mine operators, who contend leveling off mountain land rather than returning it to a slope allows its development, a statement environmentalists contest.

Association applauds passage of emergency gas act of 1977

WASHINGTON — The American Gas Association applauds the passage by Congress of the Emergency Natural Gas Act of 1977 which is designed to forestall the possibility of curtailments of natural gas to residences and other highest priority human need uses in the winter-plagued eastern half of the United States.

"In the current crisis," AGA President George H. Lawrence said, "We recognize that everyone must do everything possible this winter to protect public health and safety and, to the maximum extent possible, avert human suffering.

"The compromise bill, in addition to allowing badly needed emergency purchases from the unregulated intrastate market, allows for the exchange of gas supplies among gas compaines during the emergency."

Lawrence cautioned, however, that the emergency legislation "adds no new gas whatsoever. It is simply a vehicle to permit the government and natural gas companies to have the short-term flexibility necessary in moving existing supplies to points of greatest need."

He said the Association is encouraged that the legislation is designed to provide equitable financial treatment for all gas companies involved in emergency natural gas transfers as well as the customers served. Lawrence explained that donor pipelines and distribution gas companies will, to the extent possible, receive compensation in kind for their diverted supplies.

"One provision of the bill still concerns us, "Lawrence continued, "and that is the Aug. 1 cut-off of emergency purchases will not provide sufficient time to refill the badly depleted storage fields with the gas necessary for next winter. However, it is our hope that Congress will act on permanent deregulation of new gas before that date.

"The same reasons which prompt AGA's support for this emergency legislation are even more persuasive for the immediate deregulation of new gas, because this is what will add new gas supplies and help to bring long-term relief to consumers and the economy," Lawrence said.

Lawrence urged Congress to take action to permanently reverse the four year trend of declining domestic gas production, and to recognize that the unrealistically low requlated price of natural gas will neither promote increased supplies nor be an incentive for efficient gas use.

He said genuine relief can be accomplished only by an expedited, aggressive program which simultaneously does three things:

(1) stimulates domestic exploration for conventional natural gas supplies;

(2) encourages development of all economically feasible supplemental gas supplies; and

(3) pursues maximum conservation programs and use of energy supplies in a most efficient manner.

"The natural gas industry is encouraged by the Administration's commitment to propose within 90 days a comprehensive energy plan which must address the deregulation of new gas. We urge Congress to act on the natural gas portion of the plan in the most expeditious manner possible," Lawrence said.

He concluded by saying:

"While evaluations and checks by our member companies or by governmental agencies have not supported allegations that producers are withholding gas from the market, we welcome the announcement today that the President intends to order an independent White House investigation and pledge our cooperation."

API warns proposed rules will be costly

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The American Petroleum Institute has warned that a set of regulations recently proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) could deprive the nation of more than 3.5 billion barrels of oil production.

In formal comments subbmitted to the EPA, Roy Carlson, the Institute's director of production, called the proposed regulations governing the undergound injection of oil field water "ill conceived and not needed" and urged that they be withdrawn in their entirety.

The proposed EPA regulations would create nationwide standards for regulating the injection of water produced in connection with oil production. These regulations would supersede current state regulations.

In his letter Carlson said, "The evidence is clear that most existing state programs adequately protect undergound sources of drinking water. We find little evidence that underground injection of water or other fluids either for disposal or enhanced recovery of hydrocarbons, as currently practiced and as regulated by the state regulatory bodies, has contributed to ground water contamination. We are convinced that the proposed regulations would substantially curtail both daily production and the ultimate recovery of reserves as well as needlessly delay new injection operations."

Carlson also asserted that the government agency's Draft Environmental Impact Statement grossly understated the cost impact of the proposed regulations. The EPA estimated the nationwide cost of plugging wells at $12 million, but an API survey resulted in an estimate of some $406 million.

"Uniform, rigid and inflexible national requirements" could court disaster, Carlson continued. He explained that requirements which might be appropriate in one region of the country might not be suitable for another area.

The API executive suggested that the Environmental Protection Agency examine the laws, regulations and history of underground injection operations in each oil and gas producing state to determine what the facts are relating to protection of drinking water sources.

If any state is deficient in protecting underground water sources, Carlson added, then the federal agency should direct that appropriate actions be taken in that state.

Eddy project flowing gas

Morris R. Antwell, Hobbs, No. 1 Mesa-Fuerte, Eddy County, N.M., Morrow project, ½ mile south and west of production in the three-well Happy Valley (Morrow) gas field and 3¾ miles Southeast of Strawn gas production in the Catclaw Draw field, flowed gas at the maximum, daily rate of 1 million cubic feet from the Strawn.

The flow was through a ½-inch choke and perforations at 9,822-9,829 feet.

It was shut in for two hours, and reopened on a 7/16-inch choke, it flowed at the rate of 950,000 cubic feet per day, along with an unreported amount of water.

It has been shut in again for pressure buildup.

Earlier, it flowed gas from the Morrow at the rate of 340,000 cubic feet per day, along with an estimated 67 barrels of water in an unreported time, on a ¼-inch choke and through perforations at 10,947-11,226 feet, after a 6,000-gallon acid treatment.

Prior to the flow test, it swabbed and flowed gas at the rate of 200,000 cubic feet per day.

Eddy project

Drilled to 11,327 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set on bottom, and a retrievable bridge plug has been set at 10,800 feet to isolate the Morrow and Strawn sections.

The project is 1,833 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 33-21s-26e, one mile west of Carlsbad townsite.

Atascosa strike hit

SAN ANTONIO — Apache Corp. reported it has completed a new zone oil discovery in the East Holloway field in Atascosa County, 30 miles southeast of San Antonio.

The well, No. 6 Heinen in Carlos Perez survey No. 1041, abstract 661, flowed 202 barrels of 26-gravity oil per day, with no water, on a ¼-inch choke. Flowing tubin pressure was 100 pounds per square inch.

Drilled to 6,770 feet, the well was completed in the Austin Chalk through perforations from 6,409 to 6,458 feet.

Big workforce needed for contingency plan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A detailed contingency plan for establishing a national gas rationing system was sent to Congress by the Ford Administration the day before President Carter took office.

Drafted by the Federal Energy Administration, it is part of a package of emergency contingency plans that could be implemented in the face of a new Arab oil boycott. The plans are required by the 1975 Energy Act.

As designed by the Federal Energy Administration, the complex national system is designed to cut annual gasoline consumption an estimated 21 per cent through the use of coupons and gas ration credits.

To supervise the system, FEA foresees the need for an 87,000-person workforce, 40,000-coupon distribution sites and an annual $1.9 billion cost.

The system would be financed by a 2.3-cents-per-gallon increase in the cost of each gallon of gas.

Under the 1975 energy law, the contingent gas rationing system could not be implemented by a president without specific congressional approval.

The plan establishes five categories of gasoline users — three for government and private concerns and two for individuals.

Each individual with a driver's license would be allocated eight five-gallon ration coupons for each ration period. The ration period is expected to be a month but could be five or six weeks depending upon the severity of the shortage.

Individuals with hardships — such as being handicapped, or in need of gas for commuting — would apply for added hardship coupons to be distributed by specially established local ration boards.

Government, industry and commercial vehicle users would get ration credits, not coupons, which FEA would deposit each month at a designated commercial bank, savings and loan association or credit union. The commercial user would then draw from his credit balance through the use of a checking system.

Commercial allotments would be based on normal usage. Government, mass transit and food producers would get all they need. A second category including special services, such as sanitary systems adn energy distributors would get their average past usage. Other non-essential firms would get gas equivalent to 90 per cent of past consumption.

Gasoline could be sold only in five-gallon lots and only to purchasers who had either coupons or ration credits.

Under the plan, the selling or free trading of coupons and credits by those who did not need the amount allocated to them would be permitted. It was estimated that the value of a five-gallon coupon could rise as high as $5.25 based on current usage.

The FEA said it would audit the refiners and importers and the rest o;f the system would be "self-enforcing."

The contingency plan has some reserve gas supplies built into it. A hardship reserve totaling 3 per cent of suppleis was to be available, and the FEA itself was to maintain a "National Ration Reserve" that would equal one per cent of supplies.

Since driver's licenses would be the key to getting valuable gas coupons, the FEA expected a rush on motor vehicle bureaus involving almost 15 million presently unlicensed drivers.

The first foulup in the proposed rationing system has already taken place.

The contingency plan was supposed to be delivered to Congress by June 1976. It was dispatched to House Speaker Thomas O'Neill (D-Mass) the day before the Carter inauguration.

The Senate copy, supposedly sent out the same day, never has been found. "It apparently got to (Vice President) Rockefeller while he was moving out," an aide to Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash), chairman of the Senate Interior Committee said Friday.

Mexico hires firm to certify reserves

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's potential oil and gas reserves may make this nation the third richest in the west and the government has hired an American firm to find out how much oil Mexico has.

Sources say that Petroleos Mexicanos (PEMEX), the government oil monopoly, may be sitting on as many as 42 billion (B) barrels of crude oil and perhaps 18 billion (B) barrels of natural and liquid gas. A PEMEX spokesman refused to confirm the reports.

The U.S. firm De Golyer and Mac Naughton, of Dallas, Tex., has been contracted by the Mexican government to certify Mexico's total oil reserves, the PEMEX spokesman said.

"Officially we have stated Mexico has eleven billion barrels of crude," he said. "The U.S. firm and the Mexican Institute of Petroleum are investigating to find out how much there is."

Saudi Arabia has 165 billion barrels of proven reserves. The United States has 125 billion barrels. If the sources are correct Mexico would rank sixth in the world and third among western countries.

"The figure of 60 billion barrels is not absolutely certain," one source said, "but you can go ahead and use that figure."

Mexico currently sells its crude exports at 12.65 dollars a barrel. Gas is being sold to the U.S. at Texas intrastate prices, or about 2.10 to 2.20 per thousand cubic feet.

PEMEX plans to produce 2.2 million barrels a day by 1982, and export close to a million a day. At current prices, those exports will be worth 4.5 billion dollars a year for the crude exports alone.

It wss learned that American companies have approached PEMEX with propositions for drilling programs and are proposing the type of rigs to be used in drilling for oil.

Refresher set by weatherman at Midland bank

A refresher course in weather observation featuring James E. Lunney, chief meteorologist at Midland's National Weather Service station, will be given at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 28 when the Midland Amateur Radio Club meets in the Midland Room of The Midland National Bank.

Interested persons who are not members of the club are welcome, a spokesman said.

Cure for acne may reside in tandem drugs

By RICHARD SALTUS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For about 80 per cent of adolescents, and many older people as well, a cure for acne would save tears and dollars.

There isn't one yet, but a new combination of drugs already in use is generating enthusiasm among some dermatologists. One Los Angeles skin specialist has dropped his other treatments and opened four acne clinics based entirely on the two-drug regimen.

The drugs are not new, but the tandem treatment seems to be more potent than the use of each separately. The two, Vitamin A acid and benzoyl hydroxide, can, according to Dr. Sidney Hurwitz of the Yale Medical School, "produce dramatic results in a relatively short period of time."

He said the one-two punch of the drugs penetrates deep into the skin, flushes out pores blocked with clumped skin cells and cuts down on bacteria that cause reddened, inflamed blemishes.

Hurwitz reported that in a test series of 404 cases, the drugs cleared 80 to 98 per cent of the acne problem in 88.1 per cent of the patients.

However, the professor-in-chief of the UCLA Division of Dermatology in the medical school says the treatment is "nothing startling." The Hurwitz study, Dr. Ron Reisner pointed out, may lack validity because it did not exclude the possibility of psychological factors.

Dr. Jack Kramer, who uses the new treatment at his four Acne Care Clinics, believes it will be used by nearly all dermatologists in the near future.

Kramer, who has practiced in Southern California for 20 years, claims the drug combination is "more than twice as effective" as treatments he used in the past.

But "nobody has a cure," said Reisner, although every so often a new method is used with great enthusiasm. "The history of the last 50 years of acne treatment is littered with 'cures' or 'controls,'" he said.

Kramer said he spends considerable time with each patient, telling him how the drugs work and emphasizing that the drugs must be rubbed on the skin religiously — one in the morning and the other at night.

Although the drugs are potent and may cause an allergic reaction, this has happened in less than 1 per cent of the cases, he said.

Use of the drugs has resulted in a new approach for Kramer.

Earthquake-predicting target of government research effort

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The federal government plans to embark this year on a major research effort aimed at developing, within the next decade, a reliable method for predicting all major earthquakes.

Two federal agencies, the National Science Foundation and the U.S. Geological Survey, expect to spend more than $800 million over the next 10 years on earthquake studies, including research on geological processes and observations of "precursory phenomena," such as color changes in well water and unusual animal behavior, that may forecast quakes.

The first phase of the new initiative is reflected in the budget the Ford Administration sent to Congress. It calls for $54 million in federal earthquake research spending in fiscal 1978, more than double current expenditures.

Budget officials say the new interest in earthquakes stems partly from experience in 1976, when quakes caused more than 700,000 deaths around the world — the highest total in more than four centuries.

The major reason for the increased federal effort is a new confidence on the part of earthquake experts — geologists and seismologists — that accurate prediction methods are within fairly close reach.

An advisory panel concluded last fall in a report to former prasidential science adviser H. Guyford Stever that "earthquake prediction ...has emerged from the realm of soothsaying to become a serious scientific endeavor with a significant likelihood of a short-term technological breakthrough.

"The new federal funding is going to permit us to gather the data necessary for pretty reliable prediction," Stever said. "Within a decade, if the research goes well, we should be able to predict the time, location, and magnitude of earthquakes in time to permit precautionary measures."

Geologists who share Stever's optimism point to seismological advances in China, where a corps of 5,000 to 10,000 government forecasters and millions of amateur "people's scientists" have accurately predicted two major earthquakes.

The most dramatic Chinese success came in the Haich'eng earthquake of 1975. The quake was forecast five hours before it occured, providing time to evacuate nearly 1 million people.

The result, according to Dr. Frank Press, chairman of the Department of Earth and Planetary Sciences at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was that "they lost a couple of hundred lives in an event that could have been expected to take a couple of hundred thousand."

The Chinese experience bodes well for American efforts at prediction, Press says, because "they have a few gimmicks of their own, but basically they're working from the same hypotheses that we're using."

Current earthquakes theory in the United States, China, and Japan, another center of seismological study, stems largely from the science of "plate tectonics," which holds that the earth's continents have all split off from a single land mass and are still drifting across the globe. Major faults in the earth, such as California's San Andreas fault, are considered to mark the borders between the drifting land masses, or "plates."

Oriental and occidental geologists have designed several new instruments in recent years that measure seismic waves within the earth and changes in magnetization, electrical resistance and other properties of the earth's crust.

The Chinese regularly measure the level and color of water in wells to gauge changes in subsurface pressure. They have also reported that animal behavior — dogs barking strangely, cats leading their kittens to open fields, snakes leaving their holes — are earthquake warning signs.

For all this progress, earthquake prediction is still a highly unreliable science. Although the Chinese are the world leaders at it, they failed to foresee the Tangshan earthquakes last July that devastated a major industrial region and killed an estimated 650,000 people.

Additional snow falls in East

By The Associated Press

A low pressure center continued to intensify off the New England coast early today dropping heavy snow on parts of New York and New England.

The storm left nine inches to 10 inches of snow at Albany, N. Y., and 8 inches at Poughkeepsie, N.Y. Nine inches fell at Lebanon, N. H. In Maine accumulations varied from six inches at Houlton to four inches at Caribou. A heavy snow warning remained in effect through today for the eastern part of Maine.

Light snow was falling over the Appalachians, eastern Great Lakes region and parts of the Ohio Valley. Roanoke, Va., and Charleston W. Va., each had one inch of new snow.

I drove 240 miles a week to lose 39 pounds, and every mile was worth it!

Mrs. Charles Henley's True Story:
Diet pills, home exercise machines, bike riding—I'd tried everything I'd ever heard about to lose weight, but I still looked like I was about to have twins.

Not that I was expecting, it's just that I'd always had a problem with weight around my middle, and nothing seemed to help.

I heard about Pat Walker's from a friend, and even though it meant driving 80 miles round trip to the salon closest to my country home in Waller, I decided to do it. Two or three times a week I made the trip to have a treatment on Pat Walker's passive exercise unit, and to talk with my counselors about my progress.

They really motivate you to keep up the good work. I was so encouraged by their enthusiasm that I truly looked forward to my salon visits.

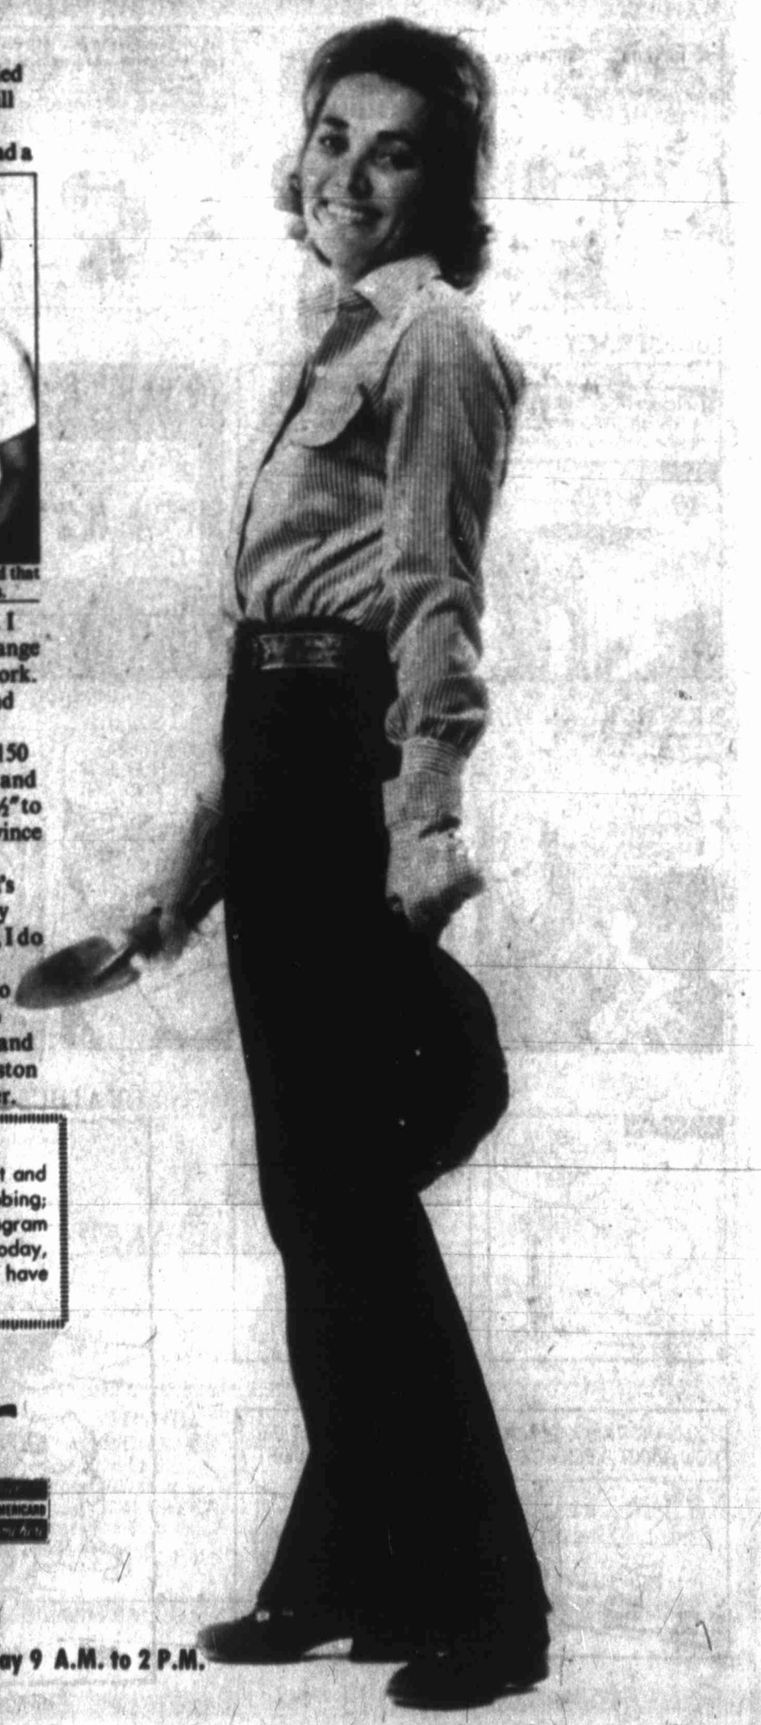

Me two years ago— and that isn't a maternity dress.

Sometimes I planned to have my hair done before my appointment at Pat Walker's. I knew it wouldn't get mussed up. I didn't even have to change out of my regular clothes, since the unit does all the work. You simply relax in a nice, private treatment room, and enjoy it.

When I started going to Pat Walker's, I weighed 150 pounds, and wore a size 15. Today, I weigh 111 pounds and wear a size 5. My waist measurement has gone from 32½" to 25—not bad for a 42-year old! No one could ever convince me that all the driving hasn't been worth it.

My husband and my son are so pleased, and that's very important to me. Although I love being a country housewife, and doing my own gardening and canning, I do want to look good—for myself and my family.

Now I've set a new goal for myself: 105 pounds. Do you have a goal? If you think you'll never make it, do what I did...call Pat Walker's for a sample treatment and free figure analysis. There are seven salons in the Houston area, so you can probably just drive around the corner.

Pat Walker invites you to come in for a free trial treatment and figure analysis. You'll be pleased to know there is no disrobing; you'll reduce in complete privacy with our exclusive program that has benefited millions over the last 25 years.
