Mall attracts new store

By JEFF CARRUTH
Staff Writer

Construction is underway at the Pampa Mall in preparation for the planned Aug. 5 opening of its newest tenant, Country General Stores.

Workers are remodeling the large area at the north end of the mall formerly occupied by K mart for Country General. The store will utilize all 55,000 square feet of that space.

Based in Grand Island, Neb., the 38-year-old Country General chain carries a variety of merchandise. The Pampa store will carry various types of clothing, sporting goods, home improvement items, pet supplies, housewares, and lawn and garden supplies. The store will also have an automotive section, with a tire installation shop, and a farm and ranch section.

According to Country General regional manager Jeff McClenahan, who is in the city overseeing remodeling operations at the mall, the company expects to bring at least 30 jobs to the Pampa area, while two employees will transfer to the city from other stores.

The Pampa location is part of Country General's southward expansion and is the Nebraska company's first outlet in Texas. Country General currently has 100 stores in nine other states including Kansas, which was the southernmost state before the company decided to move to the Texas.

Pampa was chosen for the first Texas store because of the area's economic climate and the niche Country General could find in the area retail market, according to McClenahan.

"We checked around a lot and felt that the community really wanted and could really use something like this store. And the economy looks good according to all the logistics and figures. We feel like the economy is just right for us," he said.

McClenahan said that Country General will not compete directly with any one other type of store.

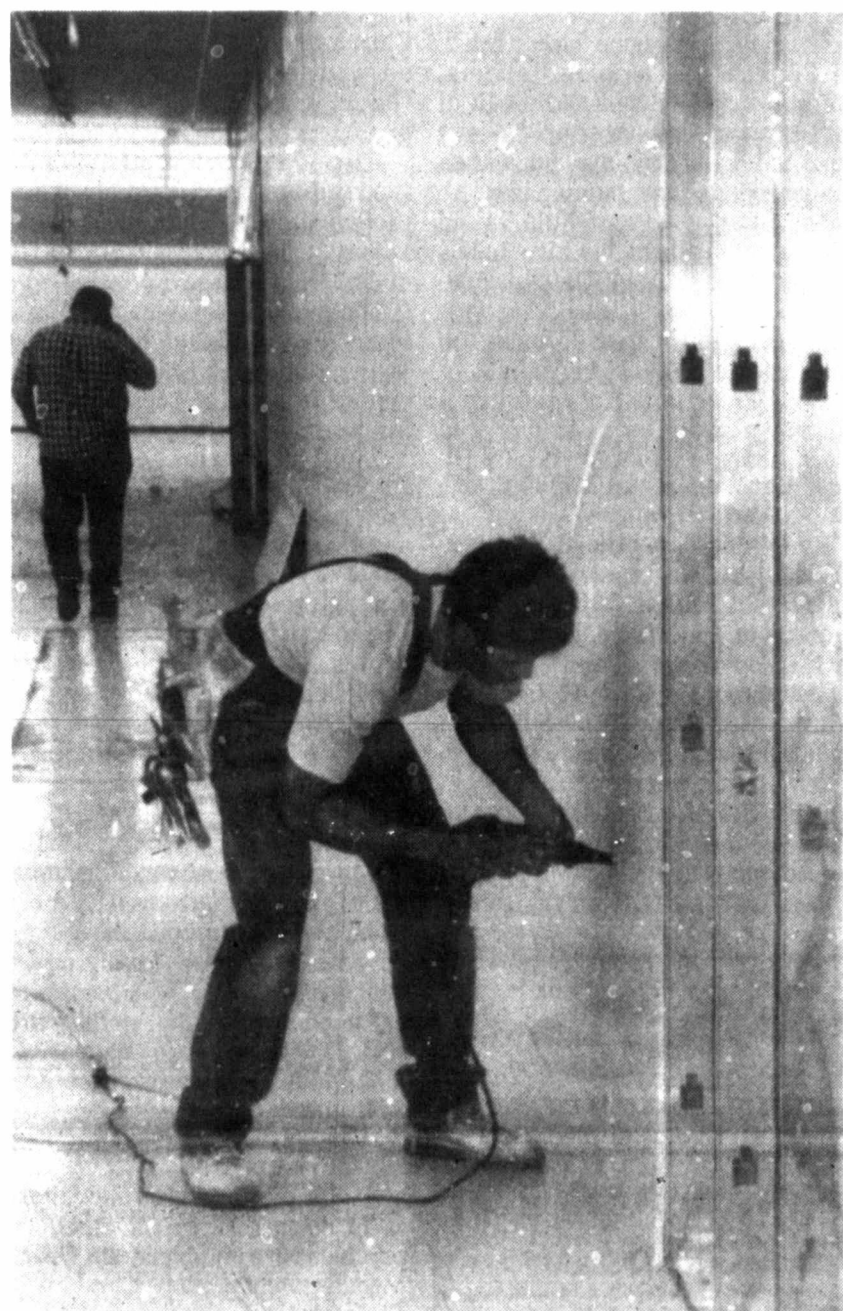

"We're really not like any one else and yet we have parts of other stores," he said.

"We're real excited about them moving in. It's the store we need in Pampa and in the entire area," said Pampa Mall manager Wanda Talley.

Plans call for a complete refurbishment of the interior of the old K mart building along with a facelift of the exterior. McClenahan said Country General will change the whole front canopy at that end of the mall.

Country General began construction June 7, the first working day after the lease was signed June 4, according to Talley. McClenahan said the store will hold its grand opening Aug. 5.

Country General is a subsidiary of ConAgra corporation, which also owns several food processing and food retail concerns including Beatrice and Banquet frozen foods.

Clinton sees progress in deficit legislation

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats began muscling President Clinton's deficit reduction bill through the Senate Finance Committee today after replacing an unpopular energy tax with a gasoline tax hike and new Medicare cuts.

"We're moving forward. We're making progress," President Clinton said today after Democrats on the panel ended a month-long standoff and crafted the compromise measure Wednesday.

Panel Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the committee's 11 Democrats would all vote for the measure, assuring its passage. Like the measure the Democratic-controlled House narrowly approved last month, the Senate bill is dominated by higher taxes on the rich, business and some Social Security recipients.

The legislation would add 4.3 cents to the 14.1 cent-per-gallon tax already on gasoline.

"We now face a test of whether we are serious about reducing the deficit, or whether we merely want to talk about reducing the deficit," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, in a barb aimed at the committee's Republicans.

Republicans, who opposed the bill because of its taxes and did not join the talks, were critical.

"I'm not certain we've met the instructions from the American people," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. "The American people don't want us to raise taxes unless we're also going to cut spending."

Democrats say the measure has slightly more spending cuts than tax increases. Republicans say new levies outweigh spending cuts by at least 3-to-1.

Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, the committee's ranking Republican, said Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen had rejected a GOP offer to negotiate if spending cuts in the bill would outnumber tax increases by a 2-to-1 ratio.

Debate by the full Senate is expected to begin next week.

Moynihan said people earning more than $100,000 a year would bear 80 percent of the bill's tax burden. Families under $20,000 would actually pay less taxes, he said.

When combined with spending cuts planned in later measures and reduced interest payments on federal borrowing, the legislation would shave $508 billion off budget deficits over the next five years — a bit higher than the House total.

But the Senate's Democrats, generally more conservative than their House counterparts, refashioned parts of the package.

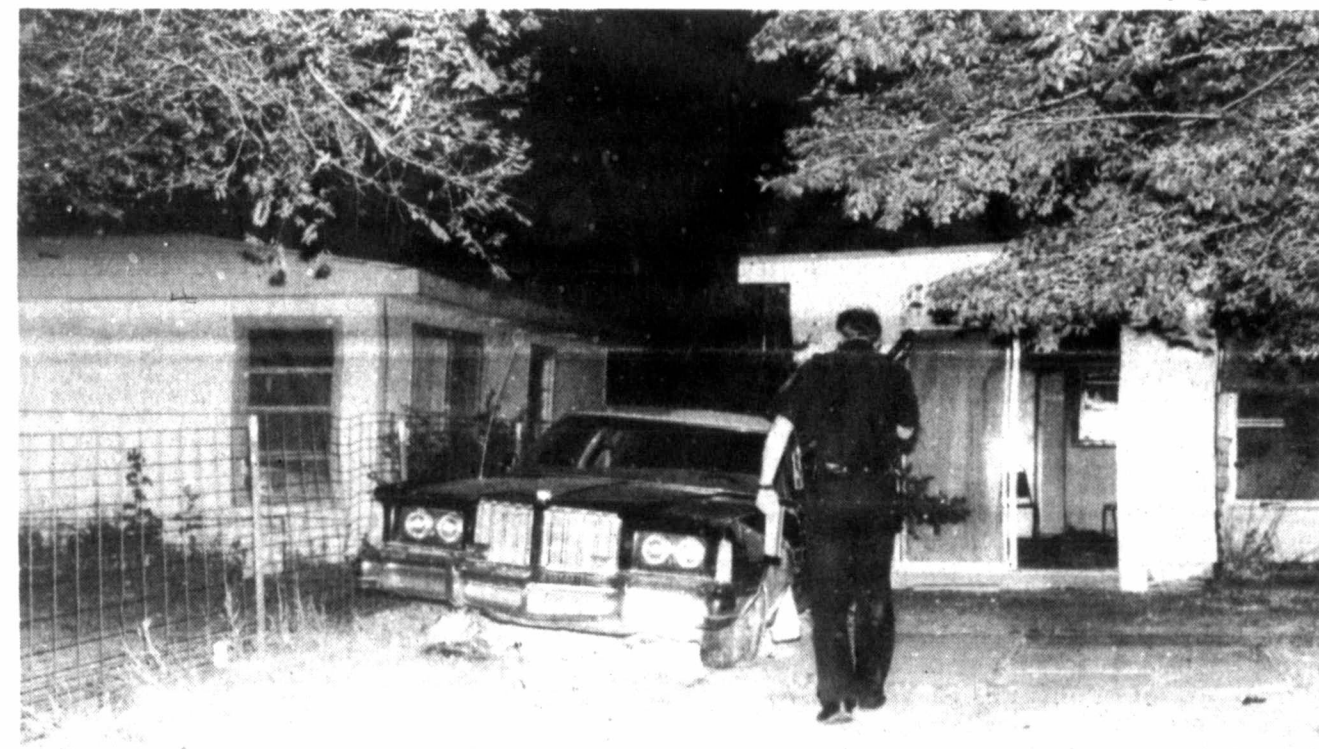

Overall, the changes reshaped Clinton's deficit-reduction plan into one relying on spending cuts for $260 billion and tax increases for $248 billion — a ratio that conservatives said was important.

"It keeps faith with a Democratic Party being on a new course, a centrist course," said Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., who led efforts to kill Clinton's energy tax and add spending cuts.

The senators' most prominent change: killing Clinton's tax on the heat content of fuels, electricity and other forms of energy. The so-called Btu tax was designed to raise $72 billion over five years.

They replaced it with the new levy on each gallon of gasoline, diesel and aviation fuels. The new tax, which would take effect Oct. 1, would bring the government about $25 billion over the five-year period.

Hemphill County studying groundwater conservation

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — A committee appointed by Hemphill County Commissioners Court is studying whether Hemphill County should establish a single-county water district or join an existing multi-county water district.

The third option being considered by the committee would maintain the status quo of not having a water district in Hemphill County.

Under state law, the groundwater conservation districts (also known as water districts) across the state are authorized to protect and preserve the quantity and quality of groundwater in the districts and promote water conservation practices.

Mark Meek, 42, a farmer and rancher in southern Hemphill County who is chairman of the committee, said he expects it to present recommendations to Hemphill County Commissioners Court in the fall. Meek said he expects the next meeting of his committee to take place in July.

The committee, composed of approximately 10 members, was appointed a few months ago and has held one meeting to date — on May 17, said Hemphill County Judge Bob Gober.

The water-district study committee is attempting to determine, among other things, whether it would be more expensive to administer a single-county water district or to contribute toward administrative costs of an existing multi-county water district, such as the Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District based at White Deer, Meek and Gober said.

Meek added that the committee is also attempting to determine whether Hemphill County residents support the establishment of a water district. Several Hemphill County residents who live outside of Canadian, the only incorporated city in that county, have told Meek that they don't want to pay taxes for a water district. "They really don't want any more government at all," Meek said.

However, committee member

Steve Schafer, who is vice president of First State Bank of Canadian, said the majority of the approximately 20 residents who have talked with him about the water-district issue say they support a single-county district.

There are approximately four municipal wells serving the town of Canadian, which has approximately 2,800 residents, and approximately 15 private irrigation wells serving the rest of Hemphill County, Schafer said.

If the committee recommends participation in a water district and Hemphill County Commissioners Court approves of it, the voters of Hemphill County would have to also endorse such participation before it could become official, Gober said.

If Hemphill County voters support establishment of a single-county water district, the state Legislature would also have to approve it before the district could be established, Schafer said. The next regular session of the state Legislature begins on January 1995.

City teen victim of stabbing

A 17-year-old Pampa woman was stabbed three times late last night in the second gang related incident in as many days, according to the Pampa Police Department.

Jamie Theresa Jackson, 1149 S. Prairie Dr., reported an attempted murder after she was cut once in the left arm and twice in the head with a steak knife in a fight involving Jackson and another individual, according to police.

The fight took place in the 1100 block of Huff Road and was reportedly caused because Jackson was "wearing the wrong gang colors," according to Pampa Police Lt. Steve Chance.

In addition to Jackson, Chico Ellison, 22, 608 Plains, was also cut on the right hand and forearm as he attempted to stop the fight, according to police.

He was taken taken to Coronado Hospital, where he was treated and released.

While a suspect in the stabbing has been identified, police have made no arrest as of this morning.

Currently, Jackson is in satisfactory condition at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo. She was transferred there after first being treated at Pampa's Coronado Hospital.

Jackson was transported to the emergency room in a blue Ford Maverick occupied by Jackson and four witnesses of the fight. The car was traveling at a high rate of speed and ran at least one stop light when police officers first saw it on Hobart Street.

"I was doing 75 (mph) and I wasn't even catching her ... we just followed her all the way out to the hospital," said Patrolman Jimmy Lake, who was the first officer to spot the car.

After questioning the four witnesses, Lake and other Pampa police officers proceeded to the scene of the fight.

Apparently, a party was held earlier in the evening at the location as the fight. Police found 81 empty beer, wine and liquor bottles, according to Chance.

In all, two patrolmen and Chance reported to the scene of the crime along with Detective Terry Young, who is leading the investigation.

Tuesday morning, Tommy Dewayne Johnson, 18, 1160 Prairie Dr., reported an aggravated assault which police say was also gang related and involved "gang colors" but was otherwise unrelated.

Johnson was stabbed in the left side of his body at approximately 2 a.m. at the intersection of Huff and Crawford, not far from where Jackson was stabbed.

DPS Trooper Booth killed in Stratford, suspect arrested

STRATFORD (AP) — An unidentified man was in custody today at the Sherman County Jail facing capital murder charges for shooting a state trooper.

Department of Public Safety

Trooper Bobby Steve Booth, 28, died Wednesday afternoon after being shot numerous times on U.S. Highway 287 near this north Panhandle city.

Jerry Burgdorf, public information officer for the DPS in Amarillo, said Booth had been dispatched to a disturbance call north of Stratford. The caller reported a man waving a gun, Burgdorf said.

"The next information we had was that the trooper had been shot," he said.

Mike Cox, a spokesman for the DPS in Austin, said a passing motorist saw Booth struggling with the suspect and reported the shooting.

Witnesses say the gunman left the scene in a 1977 GMC pickup truck. About one hour later, Cox said, the suspect was arrested on foot inside the city.

Cox said the suspect is 48 years old and was carrying a Florida driver's license. No name was immediately available.

Galen Knight, who works at a Conoco service station near the Dairy Queen on U.S. Highway 54, told The Dallas Morning News the suspect came into his business just moments before he was arrested.

"He was asking if Stratford had a bus depot and where it was," Knight said. "I told him how to get there, he walked out, went to the end of the driveway and came right back."

Knight said the man then asked if Stratford had a motel and left again. He was arrested moments later.

Cox said the case is under investigation by the Texas Rangers.

Booth was the first DPS trooper to be killed in the line of duty this year,

Cox said. He is the 70th trooper to die in the line of duty since Jan. 18, 1932.

Booth had joined the department in 1987 and was stationed in Stratford, 80 miles north of Amarillo.

One friend of Booth's family described the Memphis, Texas, native as a family man who liked to fish and work with old cars.

"He was very outstanding, outgoing, friendly, had a nice sense of humor, was down to earth," Vivian Melton said.

Booth is survived by his wife and two young sons, Mrs. Melton said.

Correction

Pertaining to Tuesday's story on Friday's community health fair, immunizations will not be free as charges are based on an individual's ability to pay according to a sliding scale determined by salary. The nurses from Gray County administering TB tests, blood sugar tests and immunizations are affiliated with the Texas Department of Health. Also, the fair will not include a dietitian or a quit-smoking counselor. We regret any inconvenience the mistakes might have caused.

Several Pepsi can tampering reports pronounced hoaxes

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

The Pepsi-tampering mystery began unraveling as several cases of people claiming to have found a syringe or some other object in a soda can were pronounced a hoax. At least two people were arrested.

Police said at least three other people have recanted. And some experts said they wouldn't be surprised if all the cases turned out to be hoaxes, perpetrated by people who were out for money, attention or thrills.

Pepsi-Cola Co. has suggested as much itself, saying it is virtually impossible to tamper with soda cans at its bottling plants.

"This development reinforces what we've believed all along — that this is not a manufacturing problem and that consumers should not be alarmed about any alleged problems with Pepsi products," President Craig Weatherup said in a statement.

A man was arrested in Williamsport, Pa., and accused of taking a hypodermic needle out of the trash and claiming he found it in a Pepsi can. He could get up to five years in prison on federal charges of making of a false report. And a 21-year-old man in Branson, Mo., was arrested after investigators with the Food and Drug Administration concluded his claim of finding a needle was false.

A woman in Davis, Calif., admitted she had broken a sewing needle into pieces and put two in a Pepsi can, police said. Police in Covina, Calif., said a woman there confessed that she had fabricated her story about finding a syringe in a Pepsi. And a Marine City, Mich., woman told police she lied to protect her husband, who claimed to have found a syringe, state police said.

An Illinois woman said the 2 1/2-inch sewing needle that stuck her tongue while she was drinking a Pepsi "may have fallen off an article of clothing," police said.

"It seems obvious that some of these tamperings are faked — and in the dumbest of ways. It won't be a surprise to me if all of them turn out to be faked," said Dr. Park Dietz, a forensic psychiatrist in Newport Beach, Calif. He is a consultant to the FBI in tampering cases.

The first report came June 9, when an 82-year-old man in Tacoma, Wash., said he peered into a can of Diet Pepsi to find out if he'd won a prize and found a syringe. Soon after, similar reports came pouring in.

The FDA and Pepsi-Cola would not release numbers, but local media accounts compiled by The Associated Press indicate at least 52 reports of tampering in at least 23 states had been made by Wednesday night.

Most complaints involved hypodermic needles or syringes, but other items were reported as well, including a crack vial, a bullet and a glob of dark brown goo.

By Wednesday, officials had confirmed just two reports of foreign objects in sealed soda cans — a screw found inside a Diet Pepsi can in Jacksonville, Fla., and a piece of machinery in a Coca-Cola can in Litchfield, Conn. In both cases authorities said the objects apparently fell off machinery.

Pepsi-Cola Co. has said it has no plans for a recall, and the FDA has agreed one is not needed.

Pepsi-Cola officials insisted it would be nearly impossible for objects to be slipped into cans during the automated bottling process. Cans are turned upside down, blasted with hot air and water, then flipped, filled and sealed — all within a few seconds.

Also, Pepsi officials said the reported tamperings involved cans produced over several months at a variety of the company's more than 400 bottling plants.

The hoax theory was rejected by Peggy Syndergaard, a Rock Springs, Wyo., woman who said she found a syringe in a can of Pepsi she bought last week.

"Who would put a hole in their lip for fun?" she asked.

If every tampering reported were genuine, it would have required a cabal of "deranged, clever tamperers" infiltrating Pepsi bottling plants around the country, said Sidney Wolfe, health research director for Public Citizen, a consumer group.

Much more likely, he said, is that most of the reported tamperings were fraudulent.

"Greed is the most obvious motivation, and we see it often," Dietz said. Consumers may hope to wring money out of the manufacturer with a complaint of a faulty product, he said.

Some people may falsely report a tampering because of a psychological need to play the victim, Dietz said. Others may enjoy the power of manipulating a major corporation. Still others just want to get on the evening news, he said.

"They seem to be challenged by the attention they get from the media," said Dr. Jonas Rapoport, a Baltimore psychiatrist who helped the Grocery Manufacturers of America deal with a rash of tampering scares in 1986.

Water

Hemphill County residents who support participation in a water district have cited pollution control — installation of wells for disposal of salt water produced by gas wells, for instance — as the primary reason for having a district, Meek said.

Some county residents have also commented to Meek that participation in a water district would give the people of that county more of a voice in the water-related politics of state government in Austin, the committee chairman said.

Hemphill County Commissioners Court established the water-district study committee after the Hemphill County Farm Bureau and the Hemphill County Soil and Water Conservation District approached the court and asked that it determine whether participation in a water district would be beneficial for the county, Gober said.

Judge Gober noted that several residents of the county have expressed support for participation in a water district because it might offer the county protection against the prospect of the Texas Water Commission placing a limit on the amount of water being pumped in that county.

Meek suggested that the other reason cited by Hemphill County residents for establishing a water district there — conservation of underground water in areas where irrigation is prevalent — does not appear to be applicable to his county. Irrigation in Hemphill County is minimal, he noted.

Taxes

To find extra savings, senators added $19 billion in Medicare cuts to the $50 billion in reductions already in the bill. The extra cuts would affect reimbursements to hospitals and doctors who treat the program's elderly and disabled beneficiaries; patients would not be hit directly.

It was these cuts that drew the loudest complaints when Democratic leaders explained the bill to their party's senators in a closed-door caucus.

"I'm still bothered," said liberal Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa. He said he would consider trying to replace the cuts with higher corporate taxes during floor debate next week.

"At any given moment in the history of the republic, a significant number of Democrats are grumbling," countered Moynihan.

Democrats also decided to cut Clinton's planned $28 billion increase in the tax credit for poor people by $11 billion. And they trimmed an assortment of tax breaks for companies that Clinton hoped would spark the economy, including one aimed at luring businesses to inner cities and another helping the real-estate industry.

Some taxes, however, were eased.

Only couples with total incomes above $40,000 and singles over $32,000 would be affected by Clinton's plan to raise taxes on Social Security benefits. As originally proposed by the president, individuals making $25,000 and couples earning $32,000 would have been hit.

In addition, the new plan would delay until July 1 the tax increases on upper-income individuals that Clinton wanted to impose retroactively to Jan. 1.

Like the House, the Senate would boost the tax rate for the most profitable companies by a point to 35 percent, instead of the 2 points Clinton proposed. The increase would be retroactive to Jan. 1.

Halliburton Co. organizes new energy division

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co. said Wednesday it is combining 10 separate business units with 26,000 workers into a single, Houston-based division named Halliburton Energy Services.

The new organization will provide services and products for exploration and production of oil and natural gas. The company said the new division will require fewer management positions, but workforce impact from the move should be minimal.

The move will be effective July 1. A.A. "Al" Baker will be chairman and chief executive officer of the new division, and Ken LeSuer will be president and chief operating officer.

The reorganization is intended to boost efficiency, said Thomas Cruikshank, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Halliburton Co.

"The purpose of the reorganization is to improve responsiveness to the needs of customers while reducing operating costs," Cruikshank said.

"The new organization will also permit the provision of all services and products by a single company operating under a single, simplified management. This will facilitate the sales of multiple lines of services and products, as well as the provision of a full range of integrated services and products for a single well or a multiple well program," he said.

The units that will make up Halliburton Energy Services include Halliburton Services Division; Halliburton Logging Services Inc.; Otis Engineering Corp.; Halliburton Geophysical Services Inc.; Halliburton Reservoir Services Inc.; Halliburton Drilling Systems; Halliburton Resource Management Division; Sierra Geophysics Inc.; Halliburton Geodata Ltd.; and Jet Research Center.

Together, the units had revenues of $2.7 billion in 1992, Halliburton said.

The company plans no special charges to cover the costs of the restructuring.

Clarendon plans parade as part of Saints Roost

CLARENDON — A Fourth of July parade will be one of the main activities at Clarendon during the annual Saints Roost Celebration scheduled for July 1-3 this year.

The Fourth of July parade will be held Saturday, July 3, due to the holiday being on Sunday. A rodeo and outdoor dancing also will be part of the annual festivities each night, beginning at 7:45 p.m.

The Saturday parade will begin at 2 p.m., with participants lining up for the procession at 1 p.m. Trophies will be awarded in each division, with a grand prize of $200 to be awarded the overall winner, Clarendon Chamber of Commerce officials said.

Those wanting to have entries in the parade should contact the chamber office at 874-2421, or write P.O. Box 730, Clarendon, TX 79226, for entry forms.

All riding clubs, floats and organizations in the Tri-State Area are invited to participate in the parade and celebration activities, said Terry Floyd, Clarendon CoC manager/secretary.

Musical entertainment will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday, July 3, followed by an Old Settlers' Reunion at 10:30 a.m. The Shriner's bar-b-que will be held at 11 a.m.

Following the parade, Cow Patty Bingo will be held. There also is a Country Craft Fair all day on Saturday, as well as an art show.

Amarillo to hold Route 66 festival

AMARILLO — The San Jacinto region of Amarillo's 6th Street will be the site of the Historic Route 66 Summer Festival this weekend, celebrating the 75th anniversary of the famous highway.

Festivities will take place on 6th Street between Georgia and Western streets, and include a diamond raffle, antique car show, food, music, dancing, arts and crafts booths, chili cook-off and auction.

Activities will get under way at 10 a.m. on Saturday and at 1 p.m. on Sunday, continuing into the evening hours.

For more information, telephone Bobbie Helman at 806-373-0316 or Jean Taylor 806-373-5473.

Miami ISD picks school finance plan

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Miami school board has made a choice from among the five options provided in the public school education and finance legislation (Senate Bill 7) recently approved by the Legislature.

The Miami school board on Monday approved the option of sending approximately $1,025,000 from its total budget to the Texas Education Agency in Austin. That money is expected to then be redistributed to other school districts in the state.

"Basically it was the only viable option to the (Miami) district, because they (the board) did not want to consolidate, they did not want to give up any of their property, they did not want to give up any of their property, they did not want another type of County Education District or tax-based consolidation," Miami ISD Superintendent Allan Dinsmore said Wednesday. "And sending the money to another school district would not be of benefit to us or to the other school district" because of legal fees and administrative costs.

The operating budget for Miami school district for the fiscal year beginning Sept. 1 is expected to be $1,550,000, Dinsmore said.

As is required by Senate Bill 7, Miami ISD voters are expected to vote on July 20 whether they support the school finance option chosen by the Miami school board, Dinsmore said.

In other news from the meeting on Monday, the Miami school board:

- Approved an agreement with Frank Phillips College in Borger under which Miami High School seniors studying English, government and economics will be allowed to earn as many as 12 semester-hours of college credit from that college while applying those same semester-hours toward their high school graduation.

- Because Frank Phillips College is accredited by the Southern Regional Accreditation Association, college credit earned from the classes at Miami High can be applied toward credit at other colleges as well, Dinsmore said.

- For the Miami students seeking the college credit, videotapes from Frank Phillips College will be used as a supplement to the teaching by the high school instructors, Dinsmore said.

- Dinsmore said he expects most of the high school seniors next school year to participate in the college-credit courses. There are expected to be about 20 seniors next school year, he said.

- Approved a bid of $24,485.50 from Culberson-Stowers Inc. of Pampa on each of two 15-passenger buses. Miami school district plans to purchase the buses by mid-August.

- Voted to keep the pay scale for teachers at the same level as during the 1992-93 school year — $5,200 more than the state-mandated minimum salaries. There are 21 teachers in kindergarten through 12th grade at Miami ISD.

Police investigating links in slayings of seven women

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Seven women found dead in this border city since February have been killed in a similar manner, but police say it is premature to regard the deaths as serial killings.

The women, who were between the ages of 19 and 30, were all raped, beaten and strangled, State Judicial Police spokesman Eduardo Romero said Wednesday.

Police are investigating conceivable links among the slayings, including the possibility they were committed by one man, Romero said. But he noted there "could be one or two or three (killers). It's very risky to say that one man is responsible."

The latest victim's partially-clothed body was found Monday at the Chamizal Park near the border with El Paso, Romero said. The woman is thought to have been between 19 and 24 years old.

The woman, along with five other victims, has not been identified.

Police have one only name so far: Luz Ivon De La O. Ms. De La O's body was found in February.

Investigators also have few leads, though the homicide department has been beefed up with an additional 12 detectives, Romero said. He said the probe has been hampered by the lack of victim identifications.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Teens would likely be the big losers

A Democratic plan to sharply raise the federally mandated minimum wage has collided with the realities of the labor market.

In a tacit admission that the minimum wage destroys jobs, the Clinton Administration said recently that it would put off seeking a $1 increase it endorsed when the president took office in January. A boost of that size would raise the minimum wage from $4.25 an hour to $5.25. Among the reasons given for delaying the increase is that it might hurt job growth. As one administration official put it, "Unless we have six months of terrific employment growth, this thing is going to slide for a while."

If the administration is truly concerned with promoting job growth, and not just appeasing its union supporters, it would postpone the increase indefinitely.

The minimum wage destroys jobs by pricing low-skilled and inexperienced workers out of the labor market. The minimum wage is relatively harmless for workers who can produce enough through their labor to justify paying them the minimum wage. But what about those workers, usually teenagers just joining the work force, whose labor is not worth $5.25 an hour? They simply don't get hired.

This is why, whenever the minimum wage goes up, teenage unemployment usually follows, and vice versa. For nine years, from January 1981 to April 1990, the minimum wage stayed constant at $3.35 an hour. Because of inflation and rising wages, this in reality meant that the minimum wage during that period actually declined somewhat in its impact. The result was an improving employment market for low-skilled labor, including a jump in the percentage of teenagers with jobs from 41 percent to 48 percent.

In April 1990, however, the minimum wage was increased to $3.80 an hour, and to the current $4.25 an hour in April 1991. The predictable result? Teenage employment dropped to 43 percent by the summer of 1990, and it plunged again after the 1991 increase in the minimum wage. Teenagers who were economical for businesses to employ at $3.35 an hour were simply not worth their pay at $4.25 an hour. If those teenagers want to know why they can't find work, they can thank the federal government.

Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., a perennial supporter of a higher minimum wage, argued recently that "No one who works full time in America should have to live in poverty." That's an astounding statement. If the government guarantees that every job will pay enough to support the worker above the poverty level, what would that do for the incentive to train for a better job?

If every job in America must pay enough to support a worker and his or her family, then what will happen to those kinds of jobs that have traditionally served as entry points to the labor market? They will cease to exist, locking millions of young and low-skilled workers out of the labor market.

In America, low-paying jobs are not a dead end but a rung on the economic ladder. For people willing to work hard and improve their skills, these jobs provide valuable training as well as income.

If Congress and the Clinton administration fulfill their intention to raise the minimum wage, they will only hurt the people they claim to be helping.

Will they send in the tanks?

What part did religious hostility play in the tragedy in Waco? Not the hostility that prompted Koresh and his followers to stockpile arms. The cultists were surely hostile, but that's not the question. The question is: Would the government have taken such aggressive action if the cultists had been following something other than a religious impulse?

It's not an idle question. Officials proceed with the utmost delicacy in confrontations involving race, labor issues or purely political concerns. And questions involving gender or sexual orientation get kid glove treatment. But government agencies seem to take a more intense interest in conflicts involving religious issues, and their actions frequently receive a special kind of encouragement.

The Cultural War—that clash of values carried on over the past few decades—has long seen churches and religious people pitted against the schools, government regulators and other forces of the dominant culture, especially the major media. The conflict has been clearly evident in the issue of abortion, and never more so than when Florida abortionist, Dr. David Gunn, was murdered.

The national press, rarely sympathetic to pro-life groups, pulled out all the stops, insisting that the murder proves abortion foes are "pro-life terrorists." For instance, Anthony Lewis of The New York Times wrote that the shooting "tells us essential truth about most anti-abortion activists. They

George Roche
President,
Hillsdale College

are religious fanatics, who want to impose their version of God's word on the rest of us. For them the end justifies any means, including violence."

"The shocking part," wrote the Boston Globe's Ellen Goodman, "is that so few people were actually surprised" when they heard that the alleged assailant, Michael Griffin, "dressed in his Sunday best," had shot Dr. Gunn. "It was as if the other shoe had dropped."

Most critics were able to find anti-abortion spokesmen—of the off-the-wall variety—to buttress their case. Goodman cited a Florida protester who blathered: "Praise God, one of the killers is dead!" Likewise, ABC's Nightline cancelled an interview with Nancy Myers, of the mainstream pro-life group, National Right to Life, in favor of an appearance by some lay preacher who was a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

With all this to encourage it, government is gearing up for action. One circuit judge has prohibited protestors from displaying photos of aborted fetuses, raising serious First Amendment questions. And now the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Bill has been proposed to make illegal any act that "intentionally and physically obstructs the ingress or egress of another to a medical facility" in order to "prevent or discourage any person from obtaining reproductive health services." It is the answer to the prayers (if one can put it that way) of those who want to bring down the heavy hand of government on the pro-life movement.

The fact is that abortion protests have worked. The Wall Street Journal recently reported that only 12 percent of medical residency programs now offer training in procedures for first-trimester abortions, and only seven percent teach the more controversial second-trimester techniques—down considerably from the mid-1980s. Nearly half of all graduating residents have never performed an abortion, and abortion services are not available in 83 percent of U.S. counties.

If the Gunn murder prompts a frontal assault on pro-lifers, the effect could be a stiffening of resolve in a religiously inspired movement that has enjoyed considerable success. One wonders what course will be available to government then. Like Waco, will they send in the tanks?

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, June 17, the 168th day of 1993. There are 197 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 17, 1972, the eventual downfall of Richard M. Nixon's presidency began with the arrest of five burglars inside the Democratic national headquarters in Washington's Watergate complex.

On this date:

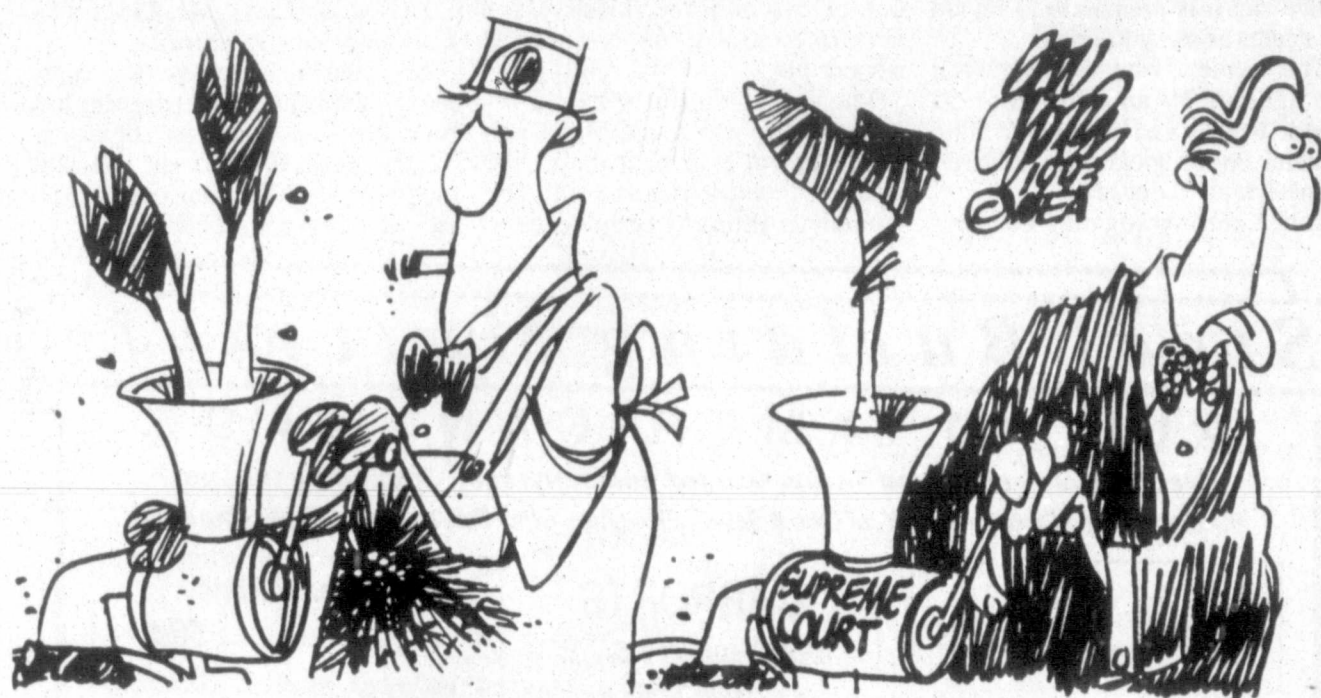

In 1775, the Revolutionary War Battle of Bunker Hill took place near Boston.

In 1789, the Third Estate in France declared itself a national assembly, and undertook to frame a constitution.

In 1856, in Philadelphia, the Republican Party opened its first convention.

In 1885, the Statue of Liberty arrived in New York City aboard the French ship Isere.

In 1940, France asked Germany for terms of surrender in World War II.

Why Ms. Guinier was dumped

"Got a minute, Mr. President?"
"Of course, Staphylococcus, come in."
"It's Stephanopoulos, sir."
"Of course it is. You're not the new boy, are you?"

"No, sir. That's Mr. Gergen."
"Haven't seen him around lately."
"He's in his office, sire, trying to find a campaign promise you kept. Would you like for me to call him?"

"No. Sounds like he's got his hands full. A little humor there, son. Say, when's the last time you had a hair-cut?"

"I been trying to get one, sir."
"Short on cash there, Stradivarius? I can lend you a couple of hundred till payday."

"That's Stephanopoulos, Mr. President, and no thanks. I'll just wait until we get back to Little Rock. Might not be that long, either."

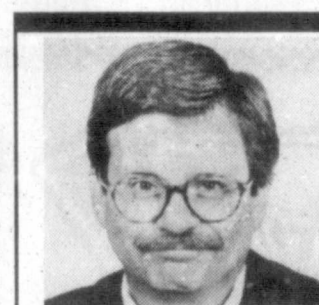

"What's that?"
"A little humor there, sir."
"Well, what can I do for you?"

"It's about your Justice Department and your nominating Ms. Guinier, Mr. President."

"Ah, Lani. And what a wonderful jurist she is. Hillary and I have known her for years."

"Mrs. Clinton was in on the decision to nominate her?"

"She had some input, yes. She said, 'Either you nominate Lani Guinier or I'll cut you.' Anything wrong, Sanctimonious?"

Lewis Grizzard

"Stephanopoulos, sir, I just wondered if you had read any of Ms. Guinier's academic writings?"

"Do you mean have I read any of her homework? My God, son, we've been out of school 25 years. Why would I do anything like that?"

"I'm talking about the things she has written for academic publications during her legal career."

"You try to deal with Bob Dole, Sam Nunn and Barney Frank and keep Hillary happy and see how much time you have left to read. I haven't even had time to glance at last week's People."

"I really think you should take the time, sir. The Republicans are calling her the 'Quota Queen,' and you were against quotas during the campaign."

"I also said I'd let the Haitians into the country during the campaign. You see the Haitians around here, Sagittarius?"

"Stephanopoulos, sir, Ms. Guinier has espoused some rather radical ultra-liberal viewpoints in these publications. She wrote last week in the Cambodian Legal Review that if you foul up one more time, Jesse Jackson ought to be president."

"That Lani. She has always had a wonderful sense of humor."

"I don't think she was trying to be funny, sir." "That's ridiculous, Spartacus. Even if anything happened to me, the Constitution provides that Bore takes over."

"Stephanopoulos, and it's 'Gore,' sire. She wrote, by the way, that the Constitution should be ignored in this case since the Rev. Jackson is black and wants to be president really bad."

"She wrote that?"

"There's more. In the Guatemala Legal Digest she opined that minorities should get all the profits from the current Stanley Cup Playoffs since there are not any she knows of in hockey, that Connie Chung has a white husband and Oprah Winfrey should have gotten the co-anchor spot on CBS and that the four black men who allegedly beat up the white truck driver during the aftermath of the Rodney King verdict are political prisoners and each should get his own Denny's franchise."

"Looks like I'm in the stew again, Scaloppini." "Stephanopoulos."

"But it could be worse." "How's that, sir?"

"She could have an illegal nanny." "I was coming to that, Mr. President."

Testing Clinton's right-turn signal

Is President Clinton turning back from the trendy liberalism that almost sunk him and coming back to the muscular moderate views that got him elected? He says so. I hope so. But we were deluded once. How will we know?

He has made some good first steps. He got his budget victory in the House by pledging to fix it in the Senate. His appointment of David Gergen to the presidential pantheon augurs well. I've worked with Gergen on and off for a long time. He is a serious man who believes in the Democratic Leadership Council theme that Clinton ran on: There is a healthy new politics waiting to be born that is neither liberal nor conservative.

But Gergen can only help sell the program if Clinton returns to that idea. No one could sell the unsellable liberal stuff Clinton has been peddling. So I offer here some tests by which we can judge our president.

CLINTON SHOULD:

1) Take the lead on the budget. Come up with a bold "Clinton II" plan instead of arguing about each spending and tax cut. The original idea of $2 in spending cuts for every $1 of new taxes was in the right direction then, and now.

2) Quietly have asked Professor Lani Guinier (alias the Quota Queen, the Princess of Proportionism, the Duchess of Diversity, the Vicar of Victimization, the Czarina of Czeparatism) to withdraw her name from Senate confirmation as chief of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division. Clinton ran against quotas.

3) Push hard on the North American Free Trade

Ben Wattenberg

Agreement, staring down Ross Perot, who is manic and mindless about it. Long term, NAFTA can do more for the American economy than a deficit deal, and it's not just about trade and tariffs. It's about what kind of neighborhood we will inhabit.

4) Ask Peter Tarnoff to recant or resign. Tarnoff, undersecretary of state for policy, told reporters that America is now too poor and unmotivated to be a steady big-time global power. Clinton has done fairly well on foreign policy and shouldn't let the State Department fall under the influence of retreatists and declinists.

5) Be cautious on the health-care plan. The American axiom is, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." There are corollaries: "If it is broke, do fix it," and "if it's partly broke, partly fix it," and "if it's partly broke, use government to fix it only as a last resort." Our health-care system (the world's best) is partly broke. So partly fix it with as little government as possible. And tell Hillary Rodham Clinton to stop trashing the medical industry; it's not un-

American to make money when you heal people.

6) Ask Mrs. Clinton—if she continues to speak out about the erosion of values in America—to stress those realms where government has undermined values: welfare, crime, quotas and education.

7) Move now, not later, on his signature idea of welfare reform, redeeming his pledge to "end welfare as we know it." Move now, not later; to redeem his pledge to put "100,000 more police on the street."

8) Appoint a program czar, or two, to bolster the few DLC types in the White House. Gergen is not enough. Clinton needs heavy hitters to deal with the nitty-gritty of legislation, ready to face down liberal congressional barons, and the army of Clinton liberal appointees. The logical candidates are Al From of the DLC and Will Marshall of the Progressive Policy Institute.

That's a partial list, of substance and symbol. Clinton will be challenged by the liberals if he moves in that direction. But if he is steadfast, he will be defined by his steadfastness.

When elected, Clinton had a golden opportunity for the highest political medal: the "Nixon to China" rosette, awarded to a president for changing retrograde thinking in his own party. Clinton's N-to-C role is to convince the Democratic liberals that they can best serve their own cause by acknowledging error.

Can it work? There are no retroactive virgins. Clinton will never again be the pristine prince. But he can still be a good president.

Newspaper: Man has turned over evidence against Hutchison

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Houston man's claims that he helped U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison arrange a state job and other benefits for a Democratic state treasurer candidate in exchange for a political endorsement are lies worthy of a perjurer, the newspaper's campaign spokesman said.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram, in a copyright story, reported Wednesday that Mike Graham, former vice president of N-Group Securities, had given the Travis County district attorney's office written testimony that he negotiated the arrangement in a series of telephone conversations with Mrs. Hutchison.

Graham said Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, promised a job, a car and a state expense account to Tom Bowden, the San Saba County judge who ran for the treasurer's office in the 1990 Democratic primary and lost, according to the Star-Telegram.

"This is a phony document chocked full of lies," David Beckwith, Mrs. Hutchison's campaign spokesman, told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "If he has sworn to this, he is in for a serious perjury indictment."

The Star-Telegram said a written document attributed to Graham, reveals that Mrs. Hutchison and husband, Ray, contacted Graham after Bowden's loss and asked him to persuade Bowden to switch parties and endorse Hutchison.

In exchange, Bowden wanted his campaign debt paid off and a Treasury job that would give him a car and expense account and would allow him to live in San Saba with no specific duties, the Star-Telegram reported.

Bowden endorsed Mrs. Hutchison in the 1990 general election for treasurer against Democrat Nikki Van Hightower. After Mrs. Hutchison won, he took a $31,000-a-year job with the treasurer's office.

Beckwith said that Graham is trying to tarnish Mrs. Hutchison and "soften her up" for a Democratic challenge in 1994, when she is scheduled to run for re-election to a full Senate term.

"If the DA doesn't have him under oath, all this is a repeat of ... the same scurrilous stuff they (Democrats) tried to peddle before the (June 5 runoff) election," Beckwith said.

Beckwith said that the Hutchisons have never spoken to Graham about Bowden's endorsement and that Mrs. Hutchison has never met Graham.

He said the assertion that the Hutchisons wanted Bowden to switch political parties and then endorse Mrs. Hutchison is ludicrous because the endorsement of a former opponent who is a Democrat is worth more politically than that of a party turncoat.

Graham's statement also says that Bowden was told that if he remained silent about the deal with Mrs. Hutchison, he would be guaranteed a job in her U.S. Senate office, the Star-Telegram reported.

Beckwith said that Bowden is not a candidate for a job on Mrs. Hutchison's Senate staff.

The newspaper, quoting unidentified sources, said that District Attorney Ronnie Earle has not made the allegations the focus of his investigation into the possibility of official misconduct at the state Treasury, partly because of concern about Graham's credibility.

Graham is under felony indictment in Pecos County on charges of violating competitive bidding requirements on a private prison project, the newspaper reported.

The Star-Telegram said several attorneys have confirmed that Earle's investigators are reviewing Graham's account.

Earle, who heads the state Public Integrity Unit, which looks into allegations of wrongdoing involving public officials, stepped up his investigation of Mrs. Hutchison's former office last week.

He subpoenaed 14 Treasury employees and a Hutchison campaign official. He authorized a raid on the state Treasury that netted boxes of tapes, computer logs and employee records.

He said afterward that he had reason to believe that evidence crucial to the investigation was being taken from the Treasury or destroyed.

Last week, Earle said he has no "hard evidence" that Mrs. Hutchison has committed a crime.

Ray Hutchison, a Dallas bond attorney, worked with Graham on the financing of six private prisons before the deal Graham says he brokered between the Hutchisons and Bowden, the newspaper said. One of the six prisons was in San Saba County.

Graham has declined to talk with reporters about his claims.

The Star-Telegram also reported that Earle has been pressured to look into Graham's assertions by prominent Democrats, including Jim Mattox, former state attorney general, and state Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville.

Some of those Democrats have apparently served as Graham's intermediaries in delivering statements to investigators, the newspaper quoted unidentified sources as saying.

Mattox was not at his Austin law office to comment Wednesday, a secretary said. But he earlier told the Star-Telegram, "I had absolutely no contact with Earle's office, nor did I encourage an investigation."

Lucio had made a speech to the Senate last month asking authorities to look into the allegations "to ensure fairness." Brenda Watson, a spokeswoman in his Capitol office, said Wednesday that Lucio has no further comment on the matter.

Earle wasn't available to comment on the report, his office said.

FCC delay said to cost cable customers millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Delayed enforcement of the new cable TV law will cost consumers more than $250 million in overcharges, according to a congressman and a consumer advocate who backed the legislation.

The Federal Communications Commission estimated that most cable operations are overcharging customers — to the cumulative tune of $1 billion a year.

The commission's decision to postpone from June 21 to Oct. 1 the time when people can start filing claims for rate rollbacks means three more months of overcharges, said Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce telecommunications subcommittee and Gene Kimmelman, of the Consumer Federation of America.

That comes to about $250 million, they said Wednesday. Markey sponsored the legislation in the House and Kimmelman was a key lobbyist supporting it.

"Now, consumers who were counting on the cable bill to combat the cruel hegemony of that cable companies have exploited must wait some more," Markey said.

FCC Chairman James Quello announced the delay last Friday, citing lack of money to hire attorneys and accountants to do the work required by the law.

"Going forward at this time would have resulted in mountains of complaints and certification requests piling up at the commission, leading to chaos and confusion among subscribers cable operators and franchising authorities, and resulting in numerous legal challenges," Quello said. "I do not believe the overall public interest is served by a chaotic rush to regulatory judgment by an understaffed, underfinanced commission."

Quello and the other two FCC commissioners were appearing before Markey's subcommittee today to give more details about the cable law problems.

Among the issues is a dispute between cable companies and local broadcast TV stations over whether broadcast stations should get paid for cable use of their signals.

The big cable companies say they will not pay the broadcasters. The affiliates of ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox say they're the most popular channels on TV and should not be taken free by cable companies which pay cable networks, like CNN, ESPN, USA, or Nickelodeon, for their programming.

If the standoff continues, broadcasters could pull their channels from cable service, leaving consumers to move to a non-cabled TV or switch off their cable.

Eddie Fritts, president of the National Association of Broadcasters said that 62 percent of all TV households have cable service, but only 38 percent of the television sets in those homes are hooked to the cable.

Superintendent's Scholar Program challenges summer students

Students participating in the "Spread the Word and Not the Waste" program add finishing touches to their trash pizza, a depiction of percentages of kinds of trash discarded. Kneeling, from left, is Andy Fernuik, Jenifer Jennings, Chris Newkirk, Sarah Bruce, Sheila Berry and sponsor Kay Crouch. At back, left, is David Norton, head of environmental services for PISD, Pam Green, head of Clean Pampa, and PMS science teacher and sponsor of the Recycling Club, Paulette Noble.

Academically talented students in Pampa Independent School District this summer have been offered a variety of unique opportunities to expand their knowledge through the Superintendent's Scholar Program, specially designed courses to challenge their thinking.

Think Camp, for the Class of 2000 and sponsored by Edward D. Jones and Co., was designed to enhance and expand the students' critical thinking skills. Activities in this workshop integrated math and science skills, allowing students to investigate assorted phenomena in the world around them using assorted problem-solving techniques.

Topics included "Water Olympics," "Polar Brrrs - How Long Can You Keep An Ice Cube From Melting," "You Light Up My Light," "Tower Power," "Battle of the World's Greatest Forces" and "Paper Caper."

PISD teacher Kay Harvey was instructor for Think Camp and participating students included Jeremy Buck, Angela Klein, Kristi Walling, Christopher Stellman, Shawn Stone, Helen Orr, Samantha Hurst, Brandon Knight, Ricky D. Putman, Jeremy Goode, Spencer Hanks, Kimberly Cory, Lindsey Donnell, BreeAnn Dennis, Rebekah Warner, Ashley Higgs, Emily Waters, Mary Grace Fields, Kristen Stephens, Justin Barnes, Sammy Ramirez, Lidia Resendiz, P.J. Reed, Tyson Curtis and Candace Crouch.

Spread the Word and Not the Waste, for the Class of 1999, was designed to show students what a valuable resource they are for the community. This problem-solving workshop taught students to recognize a problem and determine what methods to solve the problem.

Taught by PISD teacher Kay Crouch, the participating students included Sheila Berry, Sarah Bruce, Stacey Brown, Andy Fernuik, Jenifer Jennings, Kaci Mohan and Christopher Neweigh.

The Class of 1998, eighth graders next fall, participated in Physics is "Phun." PISD teacher Beth Shannon guided the students through topics of light, sound, heat, electricity, magnetism and force.

Using a combination of lab experiments, students worked with the physical science interactive computer/laser disc system at PHS. Students participating were David Dennis, Amanda Potter, Toni Aragon, Laramie Chronister, Faustine Curry, Andrew Hanks, Christopher Harrison, Grace Albear, Kristina Porter, Aaron Smith, Candi Terry, Jared Knipp, Kimberlea McKandles, Tyson Alexander, Laura Duggan, Chalan King, Nickie Leggett, Lucinda Silva, Katie Cook, and Wayne Bryan.

The Mysteries of Research, is designed to bridge the gap between reference skills and thinking skills by giving students a set of problems whose solutions require both research and logical thought. Headed by PISD's district library coordinator Bettie Dacus and Barbara McCain, PHS teacher and debate coach, this program for the Class of 1997 is scheduled to begin June 21 at Lovett Memorial Library. Students enrolled in this class include Adam Rainey, Jamie Kochick, Amy Rainey, Mitszi Mechler, Meredith Hite, Matt Crider, Sean Teng, Lori Walling, Bobby Venal, Mandi Luncford, Kathryn Killebrew, Ann Carmichael, Jai Jai Porter, and Cherith Huss.

The Class of 1996 was offered Sophomore Summer, designed to improve students' vocabulary in preparation for the PSAT (Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test), the classes employed an intense vocabulary study and SAT/ACT Preparatory computer software. Students taught by PISD teacher Marcella Diller include Peggy Williams, Amanda Tracy, Amanda Kludt, Hugh Teng, Regina Hopson, Katie McKandles, Manessa Hall, Mandi Luncford, Amy Bradley, Debra Smith, Ann Underwood, Melanie Rutledge, Laura Miller, Jamie Barker, Matt Crider, Misty Adams, Trey McCavit, Edith Osborne, and Josh Starnes.

Junior University, for the Class of 1995, is taught by PHS teachers Chip Anderson and Sarita Reeve. This program uses strategies, hints, practice materials and samples of the new PSAT/NMSQT to prepare student for upcoming college entrance exams. PSAT/NMSQT (Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test) is the exam used by NMSQT to search for academically qualified students in the United States and give them the opportunity for college admissions and financial aid. Did echoes inspire historic cave art?

NEW YORK (AP) — Loud echoes that sounded like hoofbeats may have made prehistoric artists choose where they drew some of their famous cave art, a study suggests.

Experiments in the French caves of Lascaux and Font-de-Gaume found that drawings of hooved animals, such as horses, bulls and bison, were found in places that had particularly loud echoes.

The ancient artists may have heard those echoes as they chipped stones or clapped and interpreted them as hoofbeats of an animal or a herd emanating from the cave walls, prompting the drawings at those sites, suggested Steven J. Waller.

They may have also deliberately produced the echoes as part of a ritual to summon game, he said.

Waller presented his data and speculation in the June 10 issue of the journal Nature. A biochemist living in Newark, Del., he said in an interview that he pursued the cave question as a side interest.

He used a mousetrap-like device to make a reproducible noise in the two French caves and another device to measure how loud the echoes were. The echoes reverberated for several seconds, as if in a large cathedral, he said.

Bottle collectors seek the valuable

By COUNTRY LIVING
A Hearst Magazine
For AP Special Features

Bottle collecting is one of the oldest, most popular and least expensive field of antiques in which one man's trash is another man's treasure — but in rare instances those treasures can be worth thousands of dollars.

Glass bottles in nearly every imaginable form and color have been produced in this country, writes Bruce E. Johnson in Country Living magazine, and just about every old house and antiques mall contains old bottles — patent-medicine bottles, or barber, beer or bitters containers.

Glass bottles reflect the industrial development of the United States. The colonists' demand for glass windows and containers, combined with a ready supply of wood to fuel glasshouse furnaces, encouraged the establishment of an American glassblowing industry as early as the 18th century.

American glasshouses came to rival their European counterparts. Technological developments in the 19th century led to more uniform, colorful and decorative bottles with smooth lips and, later, molded screw threads.

Veteran bottle collectors have learned that gems can turn up anywhere, from the basement of an old house to the rafters of an attic or barn. Many collectors search inactive dumps and house foundations, watch as city workers excavate for new utility lines or even perform archaeological digs on the sites of turn-of-the-century outposts.

Among the bottle types that collectors seek are:

— Barber bottles. During the latter half of the 19th century, barbers mixed and bottled their own hair tonics and colognes. The Pure Food and Drug Act in 1906 restricted many of the ingredients in these homemade formulas, so the number of barber bottles declined after that. They are highly collectible, in the $200-$300 price range.

— Beer bottles. In general, beer bottles are more common than barber bottles, although rarities do exist. A common brand such as Utica Club might bring only a few dollars, but a rare cobalt-blue SH Broughton Root Porter bottle could fetch nearly $500.

— Bitters bottles. Bitters collectors place a premium on unusual colors. For instance, an amber example of Kelly's Old Cabin Bitters might bring $700-$900 at auction, but a rare dark olive-green version could easily climb to $3,000-$4,500.

— Candy containers. The most desirable are those in detailed, unusual shapes, such as early 20th-century airplanes, firearms, animals and historic buildings. With many currently priced under $100, candy containers may be one of the best buys in the field.

— Flasks. The best-known collectible bottles are figured flasks. Figurals have featured American presidents, military leaders and politicians, as well as patriotic themes and Masonic lodge insignias. A transparent George Washington flask might cost $50-$80, while a similar flask in sapphire blue is worth $4,000. Color is a critical factor in determining flask value.

— Ink bottles. The number and variety of forms have made this category one of the most popular. The earliest American ink bottles were relatively small and plain. By the mid-1800s, competition among ink manufacturers led to fancier, more unusual shapes. Ink bottles can be found in the shape of cottages, eagles, lions, locomotives, even snails, but two of the most common are the teakettle and umbrella designs.

— Medicine bottles. Patent medicines of the 19th century promised to cure everything from malaria to hair loss, and their fancy glass bottles have attracted a great deal of attention.

Since so many medicine bottles are inexpensive yet colorful, they are a popular item with beginning collectors.

Worn-out mom wants son to go home

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I worked very hard and reared four children, trying to instill values, doing the best we could for them. We put all four through college. Three of our children are everything we ever hoped for — thoughtful, considerate and independent. But our fourth is a problem.

He lived away from home for five years, first attending college, then serving in the armed forces. While stationed abroad, he fell in love with a foreign girl and married her. After his tour of duty, he returned home, got a good job and they settled about 45 minutes away from us. Now they have a baby, and here's the problem:

Our son and his wife move in with us every weekend. They stay up most of the night eating and watching TV. I talked to my son, and he says that if he had married an American girl, we wouldn't feel resentful. We have always treated his wife well.

Abby, I didn't raise a leech. I don't want to run my son off. I don't know what to do, but on Monday morning, my house looks like a tornado hit it. I work hard, but feel like a servant. Every Saturday brings dread and worry. I think I'm losing my mind. Please help me.

MISERABLE MOM
IN MICHIGAN

DEAR MISERABLE MOM: If your son takes advantage of you once, shame on him. If he takes advantage of you twice, shame on you.

Nothing will change if you don't stand up for yourself. Call your son and tell him exactly what you told me. Don't worry about running him off — he and his wife need to hear it.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to the letter from a reader who thought it was a waste of time to look up a former lover due to the disappointment that was sure to come with the diminished sex drive.

Sex for me in a previous marriage was something I avoided, and I would try to get it over with as quickly as possible. My new love changed all that.

Two years ago, I met the sweetest man who ever lived. He's kind, considerate, and his concern for others would melt your heart. Just being cuddled and feeling those baby kisses on my face is total ecstasy. This wonderful man has changed my life. We married quietly seven months ago, and never have I felt so loved.

By the way, I'm 36 and he is 71. COMPLETELY SATISFIED, ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

DEAR SATISFIED: What a beautiful love story — may it ever be thus. Thanks for sharing.

DEAR ABBY: Re The Name Game:

While calling a new insurance company, I stated my name, "Taft," and said, "T" as in Tom, "A" as in apple, "F" as in Frank, and "T" as in Tom.

The response was, "Great talking to you, Frank. Hold and I'll connect you to the agent for your area."

The next voice was, "Hello, Tom, good to hear from you." (I am a female.)

CLAIRE TAFT, PHOENIX

DEAR ABBY: I just received some responses from my wedding invitations, and was shocked to receive a blunt "NO" with a check enclosed. There was no explanation, or any kind of message wishing the bridal couple well.

Without mentioning any names, I told a friend about this, and she said she had received two such responses to her wedding invitations. We both had the feeling that these people sent checks as though they were discharging some kind of obligation.

Abby, how do you see this?

A LITTLE RAIN
ON MY WEDDING

DEAR RAIN: It would appear that the wedding invitation was perceived as a "bill," which was promptly paid by the recipient. Not a very gracious way to give a wedding gift, but at least the invitee let the bride know he or she would not attend the wedding, which is more than many invitees do, I'm told.

Pampa designer featured on PBS show

Ann Wall of Pampa, and her "Fabulous Cutwork" in Ultrasuede®, will be featured this Saturday, June 19, on the nationally syndicated PBS show "Quilting for the 90s with Kay Wood."

Viewers can watch the segment at 10:30 a.m. on Amarillo's PSB station KCAV, Channel 2 or Channel 12 on cable television in Pampa.

"Fabulous Cutwork" in Ultrasuede® is a technique of working in Ultrasuede® developed by Wall. The segment featuring Wall was filmed Sept. 19, 1992 at David Larson Productions Studio in Menomonee Falls, near Milwaukee, Wisc., and originally aired on March 7, 1993.

Wall's books and patterns are available in Pampa at Sands, in Amarillo at Sewing World and The Sewing Nook.

Soccer shoes badly designed

By The Associated Press

The poorly designed soccer shoe and misguided training are behind many foot and ankle injuries suffered by soccer players, says an orthopedist.

"Players' feet and ankles are exposed to great stresses and forces during the game, but soccer shoes provide little protection, very little support and no cushioning," says Dr. Raymond Rocco Monto, a Vail, Colo., specialist who studied foot and ankle X-rays of top North American soccer players.

"There is no scientific basis for locating the studs or cleats under the ball of the foot or other joints — just tradition," says Rocco Monto. "Soccer shoe research and development lags behind that of running shoes with regard to improved function, wearer comfort, and foot protection."

He suggests that footwear makers put strips of titanium in the shoe uppers to minimize impact.

He also advises that pre-adolescents going out for soccer wear sneakers, flat-bottom shoes or those with corrugated soles. "Often, children are playing on less than ideal surfaces. By wearing a non-cleated flat-bottom shoe, children will be less likely to sustain an injury. The 'turf' shoe is appropriate for teams playing on dirt fields or if the ground is soft."

In the study of 63 soccer players — average age 22 — he found 97 percent of them had bone growths, such as spurs or osteophytes, in the feet or ankles.

He blames training methods for many of these growths.

"For a lot of coaches, 'practice' means telling the youngsters to go out and play the game. Daily contact practice, however, may stimulate accessory bone growth in children's feet and ankles."

He advises that players under 12 practice no more than one or two hours every other day and play only one game a week — concentrating instead on learning technique, strategy and passing, heading and shooting skills.

He also stresses the need to warm up before practice starts; stretching, slow jogging and passing the ball are good warmers.

Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today your gratification is not apt to come from what you do for yourself but what you do for others. Help where you can, especially those who have recently been helpful to you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Involvements with pretentious people sometimes brings out this characteristic in you as well. To avoid making a bad impression today, associate with humble pals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your probabilities for an outstanding achievement are quite pronounced today. To get in the success mode, first establish a worthy target.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Those intuitive perceptions you sometimes get regarding the outcome of events might be more accurate than your logical assessments today. Don't treat them indifferently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) For your particular needs at this time you are well connected with the right people in the right places. Don't be timid about going to persons who want to help you if they can.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your potential for accomplishment is likely to be greater today through partnership arrangements than through independent action. All you need to do is find the right productive ally.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Assignments that require physical strength or aptitudes could be the ones you'll perform most effectively today. Use your muscles, as well as your head.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Social involvements aren't likely to be a waste of time for you today. In fact, it's through one of these events you may make a connection that could benefit you in the workaday world.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't waste time fretting today about how you will handle problematical developments. Actually, you're apt to do much better than you or others may think.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to spend some time today on matters that pertain to communication. Clear up old correspondence and make those phone calls you've been meaning to make but haven't.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Financial trends should be surging in your favor today. Focus your efforts and energies on matters that are materially meaningful to you.

Jordan tosses in 55 as Bulls take 3-1 lead in NBA finals

Chicago can clinch title with win Friday

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls finally found the way to win on their own home floor against the Phoenix Suns.

After five losses by the home team in five meetings between the Bulls and Chicago this season, Jordan took the ball inside and scored 55 points Wednesday night, leading the Bulls to a 111-105 victory and a 3-1 lead in the NBA Finals.

The Bulls, whose only loss in the series was in triple-overtime on Sunday night, are now within one victory of a third straight title.

"I'm very disappointed with the way I played the last game," Jordan said. "I wanted to do my part in this game. I was a little nervous at the beginning of the game."

Jordan, criticized for primarily shooting jump shots despite 43 points in Game 3, made 21 of 37 shots, with 12 of those baskets coming inside, including a decisive three-point play with 13 seconds left.

Jordan's aggressiveness also resulted in 18 free throws, 12 more than he had in the triple-overtime defeat.

Charles Barkley led the Suns with 32 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists, showing few ill effects from an injured right elbow. Horace Grant added 17 points and 16 rebounds for the Bulls, and six of his seven baskets were on offensive rebounds or dunks.

Jordan, the fifth player to score 50 in the finals and the first since Jerry West in 1969, now is averaging 43.0 in the series. The NBA Finals record is 40.8 by Rick Barry for San Francisco in 1967.

Chicago, which shot just 60 percent (20 of 33) from the foul line, led by 13 late in the third quarter, but the resilient Suns closed to 86-85 in the second minute of the fourth period. Jordan's jumper and layup started and finished a 9-4 burst that put the Bulls ahead 95-89 with 6:49 left.

Phoenix again bounced back, and a free throw by Kevin Johnson made it 97-94 with 4:22 to go. Jordan's three-point play, on another drive to the basket, and B.J. Armstrong's jumper made it 102-94.

Johnson, who scored 19 points, hit two more baskets to pull the Suns within four with 2:41 left. Grant's fourth basket of the game off an offensive rebound gave the Bulls a 106-100 lead at the 1:47 mark, but a rebound basket and dunk by Barkley made it a two-point game with 1:01 left.

A steal by Barkley was followed by a steal by Armstrong with 33 seconds left before Jordan's final drive with 13 seconds left resulted in a three-point play and a 109-104 advantage with 13 seconds remaining.

Armstrong's two free throws with 7.2 seconds left sealed the outcome.

The Bulls are seeking to become the third franchise in NBA history to win three consecutive championships. Boston won eight straight from 1959-66 and the Minneapolis Lakers captured the title from 1952-54.

Chicago, which needed five games to beat the Los Angeles Lakers in 1991 and six to defeat Portland last year, improved their 1993 playoff record to 14-3, while Phoenix fell to 12-10.

The Bulls, 9-1 at home in the 1993 playoffs, must win at Chicago Stadium Friday night to avoid returning to Phoenix, where the Suns became the first team in finals history to lose the first two games at home.

No team in finals history has come back from a 3-1 deficit to win a championship. Four teams have successfully come back from being behind 3-1 to win series in earlier playoff rounds.

The Bulls, leading just 61-60 in the first minute of the second half despite Jordan's 33 first-half points, opened a 72-62 lead with an 11-2 run featuring two three-point plays by Jordan.

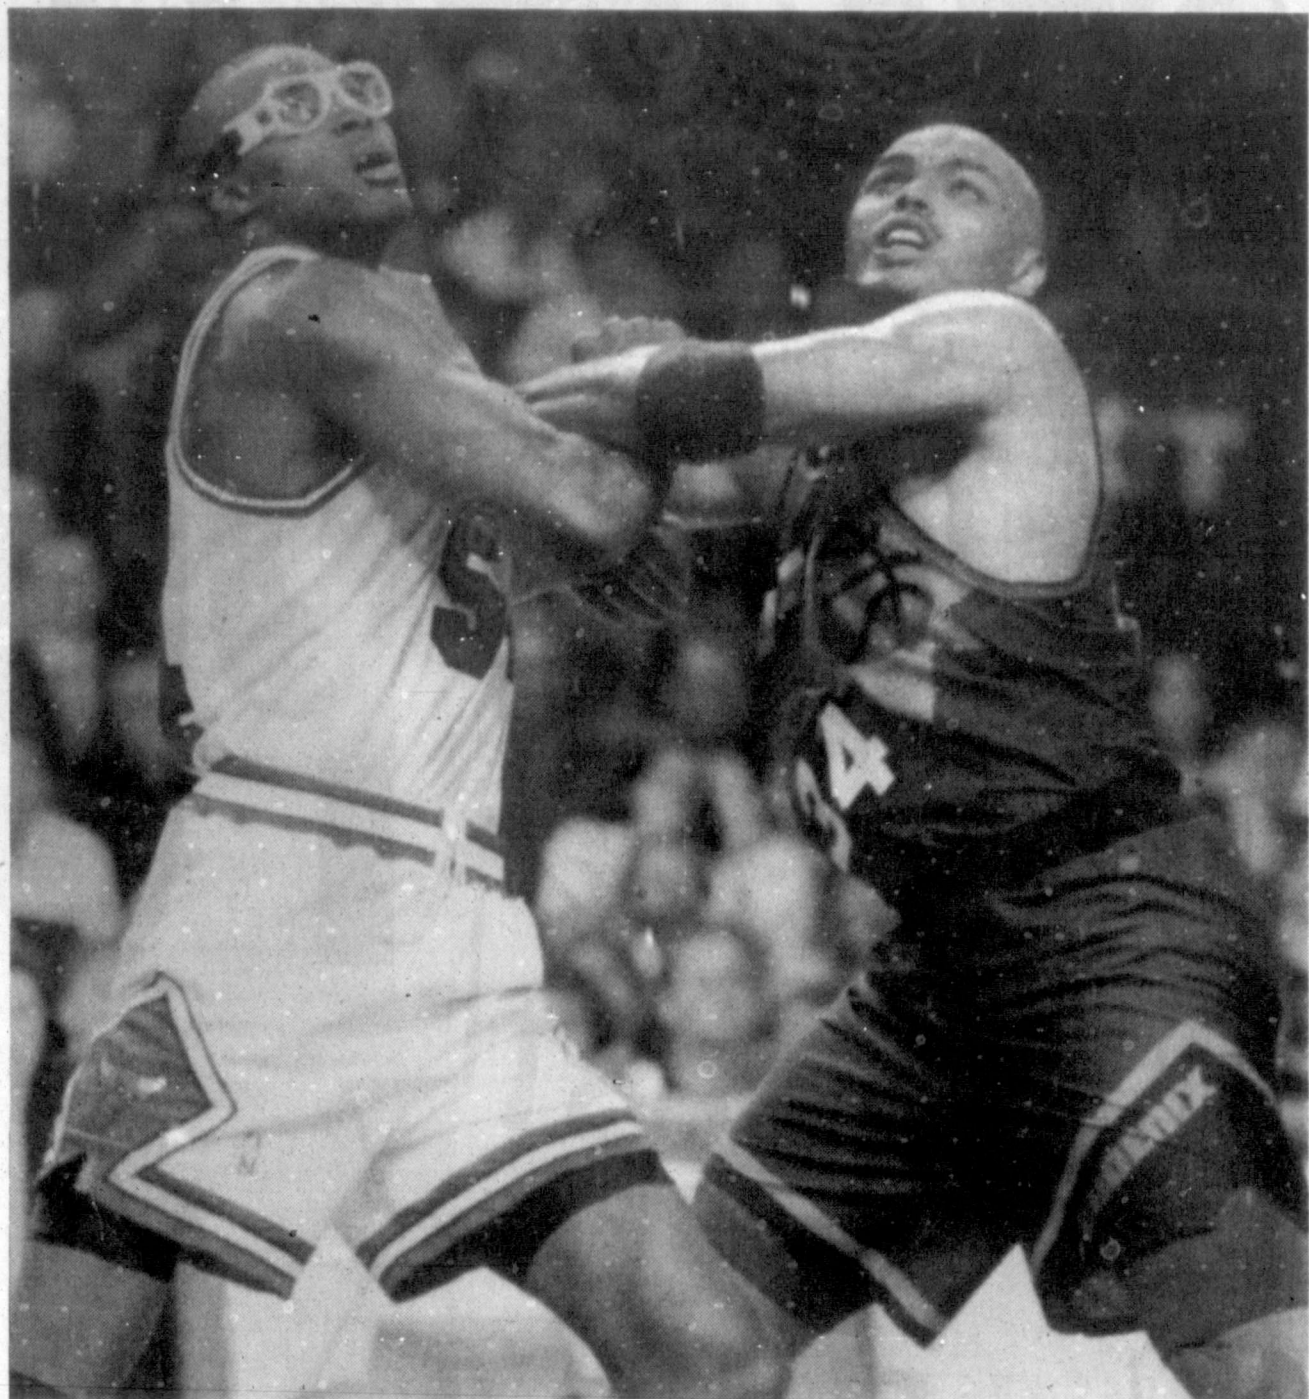

Jordan had a jumper and two free throws in a 7-0 run late in the third quarter, giving Chicago its largest lead to that point, 84-71.

The Suns bounced back with a 10-2 spurt in the final 1:52 of the period, closing the deficit to 86-81 going into the last 12 minutes.

Jordan scored the Bulls' first 16 points of the second period on 6-for-8 shooting from the field and four free throws. Despite that flurry, however, the Suns lost no ground, trailing just 47-43 with 5:45 left in the half.

John Paxson's 3-pointer with 5:22 remaining were Chicago's first points of the quarter by someone other than Jordan, and Grant's third rebound basket of the game gave the Bulls a 52-43 lead.

Two 3-pointers by Majerle closed Phoenix to 55-53 before Jordan, after a two-minute rest, scored the last three Chicago baskets of the period, giving him 22 points in the quarter, three short of the finals record held by Isiah Thomas.

The Bulls' Horace Grant, left, and the Suns' Charles Barkley push for position in the fourth quarter of Game 4.

SKATING

The Texhoma Speed Club traveled to Plano for a Roll America Team tournament last month.

Kenny Fritz, Gus Lomas, Shawn Holcomb and Chris Gearholt took first-place trophies. Fritz and Lomas received third-place trophies in the two-man team event.

The speed club competes in the regional roller-skating meet June 25-29 in Fort Worth. Karen Green of Amarillo is the coach.

BASEBALL

DENVER (AP) — Major league owners were set to vote on the first expansion of baseball's postseason in 25 years.

There was no doubt the proposal would pass today, only questions about the details. It sets up the possibility of World Series games in November in 1996.

"I think it's a fair accompli," said George W. Bush of the Texas Rangers, the only owner publicly opposed to the plan.

The committee examining schedule formats recommended by a 4-3 vote Wednesday that teams stay within their divisions in the best-of-5 first round that would start in 1994. The committee previously had leaned toward a format in which the first-place team in one division would play the second-place team in the other.

"There's a slight preference that you should maintain the identity and autonomy of the division," said John Harrington of the Boston Red Sox, the committee chairman.

Harrington said the format could change again before today's vote. American League president Bobby Brown and National League president Bill White said Wednesday their leagues appeared to favor the recommendation. The proposal also must be approved by the Major League Baseball Players Association.

"To be frank, this, hopefully, is going to produce more fans at ballparks in August and September and higher TV ratings," Harrington said.

The committee voted 5-2 against having the division winners in each league joined by the two teams with the next-best records regardless of division.

GOLF

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — About this time last year, Greg Norman was in the Bahamas, relaxing, skin diving and pretending he didn't care.

"I never even watched the U.S. Open on television," Norman said. "Well, actually that's a lie. I did get back to my room in time to watch the last nine holes."

Norman wasn't playing well enough to qualify for the Open at Pebble Beach. Hadn't done much on the course for quite some time, hadn't won a tournament in a year. The Great White Shark was just a little fish in a big pond.

"I was very disappointed, because I love Pebble Beach," Norman said.

One year later, Norman has quit fussing with his natural swing and is reaping the fruits of a newfound determination and dedication to golf. He is the second-leading money winner on the U.S. tour, the winner of the Doral and a favorite going into today's first round of the U.S. Open at Balnuthol.

"Since the British Open last year, I feel my redemption has started to show," Norman said. "All I really had to do was get the ducks back in line."

Whether that's an expression of his native Australia or his adopted Florida, it translates roughly to: He's got his head back on straight and his priorities right.

Dunlap stays on top in Bambino standings

Dunlap Industrial held onto first place by defeating Dixie Parts, 19-9, in Major Bambino League play Tuesday night at Optimist Park.

Dixie was ahead, 7-5, after three innings when Dunlap exploded for 11 runs. The big blows were back to back home runs by Greg Lindsey and Josh Rodriguez. Lindsey's homer came with the bases loaded. This was the second consecutive game in which Dunlap has hit back to back homers.

In a 12-2 win over Celanese on Saturday, Kory Nickell hit a three-run homer, followed by Lonnie Henshaw's home run.

Other top hitters for Dunlap were Jason Roark with two doubles, Kaleb Snelgroves, triple and single; Jason Harlan, double and single; Jody Richardson, double, and Eric Ballew and Jeremy Knight, one single each.

Getting hits for Dixie were Justin Hampton with a double and Rodney Mendoza, Koury Snider and Jonathan Ladd, one single each.

Glo-Valve Service climbed back into second place in the Optimist Major Bambino National League Tuesday with a solid 16-8 win over Dyer's Barbecue.

Brian Doss picked up his first win of the season against one loss. He helped his own cause with a triple, single, two runs scored and four runs-batted-in. Cody Shepard had three runs, three hits and three RBI for Glo-Valve, who hammered out 13 hits.

Billy Rushing scored three times and had a three-run homer and single to lead Dyer's. Gil Solano contributed to Dyer's seven-hit effort with a double, single and two runs scored. He also made a fine catch on a scorching line drive hit by Glo-Valve's Josue Silva.

Glo-Valve broke on top in the first inning and was never behind. Leo Ramirez blooped a single over the pitcher's head and Heath Cowan was awarded first base on catcher's interference. Shepard singled to score Ramirez and Brent Phelps was hit by a pitch. Doss was safe on a fielder's choice, which scored Cowan and Shepard when the throw got by the catcher. Phelps scored on an infield out to give Glo-Valve four runs in the first inning.

Dyer's came right back, scoring three runs in the bottom of the first. Solano scampered to first on an infield hit. He went all the way to third on an infield out.

Losing pitcher Justin Trollinger walked and both runners scored on a single by Rushing. Rushing advanced to second on the throw to the plate and scored on an infield out and a Glo-Valve error to make the score, 4-3.

Glo-Valve hitters picked up in the second inning where they left off in the first inning. Heath Keaton led off with a single and he went to second on a single by Ramirez. A walk to Cowan loaded the bases and Shepard brought Keaton home with a single. Phelps was safe on a fielder's choice which scored Ramirez and Cowan when the ball got by the catcher. Shepard and Phelps scored on an infield out. Kyle McCullough singled, stole second and third, and scored on a wild pitch for the sixth run of the inning for Glo-Valve.

With two out in the third inning, Shepard singled and advanced to second on a single by Phelps and scored on an error. Doss brought Phelps home with a booming triple to make the score, 12-3.

Dyer's scored twice in the bottom of the fifth on four walks and a Glo-Valve error. Glo-Valve scored four runs in the top of the sixth on singles by Doss, McCullough and Cowan, four walks, a hit batter and an error.

In the bottom of the sixth, Anthony Albus was safe on an error. He was forced at second when Solano's Texas League hit was fielded by right fielder Amos Valmores, who threw to Phelps covering at second to force Albus. Adam Hillman walked to set the scene for a line drive home run over the center field wall by Rushing. Courtney Lowrance followed with a triple, but was stranded when Shepard struck out the last batter.

DiSarcina paces Angels to 5-2 win over Rangers

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Gary DiSarcina singled three times and drove in three runs Wednesday night, leading the California Angels to a 5-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Torey Lovullo homered to trigger California's three-run outburst in the fourth inning. Lovullo's solo homer, his third of the season, came with one out and tied it at 1.

DiSarcina then singled home two more runs before Kevin Brown (6-6) got Luis Polonia to ground into a double play and end the inning.

Chuck Finley (6-4) gave up two runs on seven hits and one walk, with seven strikeouts, in 6 2-3 innings. The victory was his fourth in his last five decisions. Gene Nelson pitched 2 1-3 innings for his third save.

Brown (6-6) gave up four runs in 4 1-3 innings, allowing eight hits, with four walks and two strikeouts. He lost for the fourth time in his last five starts.

California added another run in the fifth on Chili Davis' RBI single. The Angels opened the lead to 5-2 on DiSarcina's run-scoring single in the seventh.

Butch Davis drove in both the Rangers' runs, with a single in the second inning and a groundout in the seventh.

Mark Portugal of the Houston Astros experienced both in a 5-4 victory Wednesday night over the San Diego Padres.

"It was a lucky swing," he said of a home run he hit. "When you hit one once every four years, you know it's luck."

But getting his 50th career victory and extending his winning streak to four games (he had four consecutive no decisions) was not.

"Tonight I had good stuff and good location on my fastball, but my curve has been my best pitch and that's what I was getting my outs with," Portugal said.

Scott Servais hit a homer and an RBI single as Houston snapped a five-game losing streak.

Portugal (5-2) went 6 2-3 innings and gave up two runs on five hits. He struck out four and walked two. Al Osuna, the fourth Houston pitcher, got the final two outs for his first save.

Fred McGriff had a two-run homer and three RBIs for San Diego.

Doug Brocail (1-2) allowed five runs on 10 hits while striking out five and walking none in 6 1-3 innings.

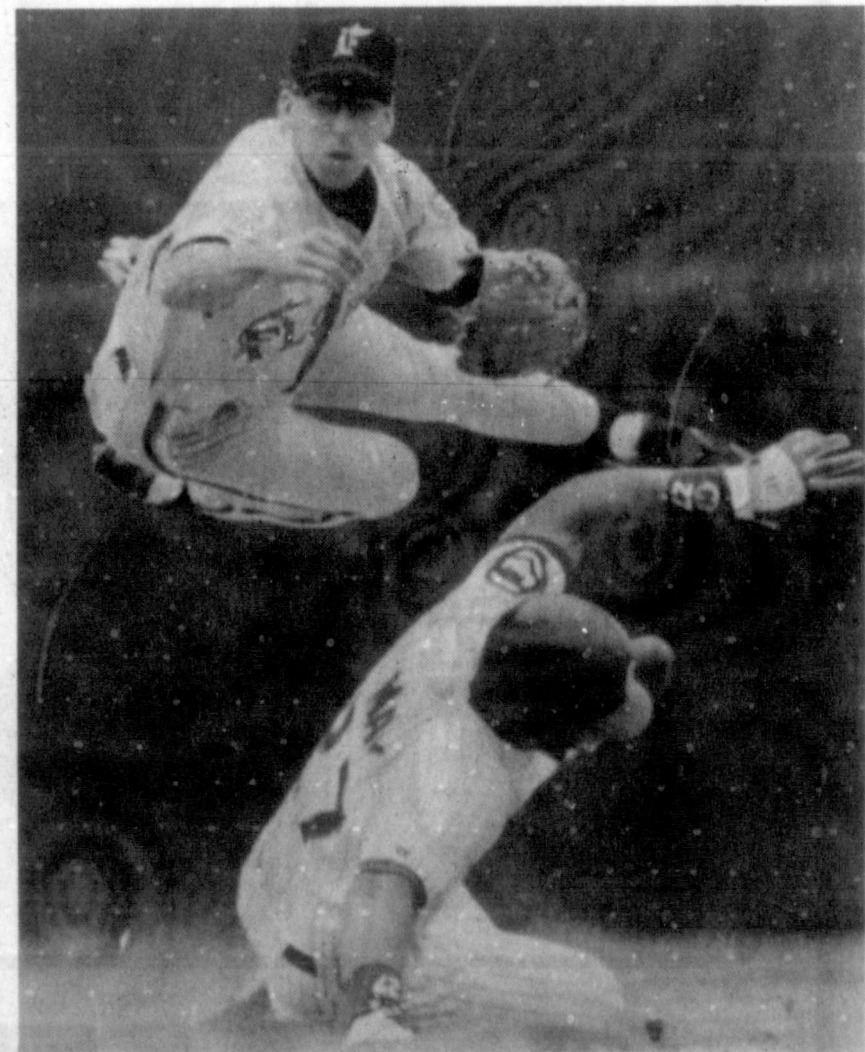

Cubs 6, Marlins 4

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg drove in three runs and reliever Jim Bullinger won for the first time since last Aug. 30 as the Chicago Cubs beat Florida 6-4 Wednesday, handing the Marlins their first-ever sweep.

Sandberg's sixth inning double off Luis Aquino (4-4) broke a 2-2 deadlock and drove in Jose Vizcaino, who also scored on Sandberg's RBI single in the fourth. Sandberg added an RBI groundout in the seventh, making the score 6-3.

Bullinger (1-0), one of three Class AAA pitchers called up Tuesday to replace three injured starters, relieved Jose Bautista in the sixth. He went 1 1-3 innings, allowing no hits and two walks before being relieved by Paul Assenmacher.

Randy Myers pitched the ninth for his major league-leading 21st save.

Shortstop Walt Weiss of the Florida Marlins goes high to avoid the slide by Derrick May of the Chicago Cubs, who tried to disrupt a double play in the sixth inning Wednesday at Chicago's Wrigley Field. Chicago defeated Florida, 6-4.

Probe set on armed cult tape

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tape of exchanges between cult leader David Koresh and a police dispatcher provided Congress with dramatic evidence about the initial raid by federal agents on the Branch Davidian compound.

Now, Attorney General Janet Reno has ordered an investigation into why the tape was made publicly available when Waco, Texas, authorities had released it for use only by a grand jury.

Rep. Jim Lightfoot, R-Iowa, who requested the probe, also questioned why Congress was given excerpts, rather than a verbatim account, of the conversations recorded on a police 911 telephone line.

"I've ordered the investigation, but I don't have the report back yet, and I will not comment while I await the report," Reno said Wednesday.

A Justice Department official said a report would be sent to Congress today.

The 30-minute tape was made at the time of the Feb. 28 raid on the heavily armed Branch Davidian compound outside Waco that left four Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents and six adult cult members dead. It was played June 9 at a hearing of the House Appropriations Committee's treasury subcommittee.

With gunfire crackling in the background, the tape records Koresh telling McLennan County sheriff's Lt. Larry Lynch, "You brought a bunch of guys out here and you killed some of my children."

"We told you we wanted to talk," Koresh said at another point. "How come you guys try to be ATF agents? How can you try to be so big all the time?"

Lightfoot, the subcommittee's ranking Republican, said Wednesday he had asked the government to determine whether the tape was provided legally to the panel when it was meant for a justice use.

A Justice official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said no laws were broken since only personal testimony before a grand jury — not taped evidence — is prohibited from release in the 5th Circuit federal appeals court area.

An FBI official gave the tape to a House committee staff member, said FBI spokesman Charles Mandigo, who would not identify the official. The FBI was checking whether that action "complied with all applicable rules and procedures."

U.N. forces storm Aidid's home in new phase of warfare in Somalia

"Aid needs to be understood for what he is: one of the warlords largely responsible for the death of 350,000 Somalis - people who were killed or starved to death by power-hungry warlords, and particularly those who refused to stop fighting," spokesman Ahmad Fauzi said.
