Manor Park wins state's apology in license case

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Texas Department of Human Services' license-revocation case against Manor Park Inc.'s nursing-care units in Midland has been withdrawn apparently due to alleged fraud within the state agency investigating the case.

The agency's staff members allegedly "falsified records" in making their claims against Manor Park's nursing-care units, said Alan Hale, Manor Park's executive director.

Bost

Those nursing-care units are the 120-bed Mabee Health Care Center and the 58-bed Younger Special Care Center.

"It feels like a great cloud has been lifted," Hale said. "And now, we can go back and be fully focused on providing good care to the residents. We don't have to play defense."

Hale said Eric Bost, the governor-appointed DHS commissioner, in mid-April personally came to Midland "and apologized to our board of trustees for the way in which his staff handled our hearing" in Austin, Hale said. "He apologized for the way they handled the case."

DHS spokeswoman Rosemary Patterson of Austin acknowledged that DHS had "made some errors when we were putting the case together.

"We made procedural errors in the case by misidentifying a document for which we apologized," Ms. Patterson said. "However, we will not apologize for seeking remedies for the poisoning of one resident and the rape of another."

The DHS "withdrew the revocation (action) not especially because we didn't think that the action should have been taken," Ms. Patterson said, "but that we had made some mistakes pursuing the action. The basis for our case was correct, and we still would do it."

The DHS had pursued license-revocation of Manor Park's nursing-care units in wake of a September 1998 sexual assault of an 84-year-old Alzheimer's disease woman patient by a then-housekeeper at the nursing home and by subsequent patient-care discrepancies, including alleged untimely responses to patients' needs.

The ex-Manor Park housekeeper, a convicted felon whose criminal background had been overlooked in the hiring process, pleaded guilty to the rape and was sentenced to prison.

While the DHS has withdrawn its license-revocation action against Manor Park, Ms. Patterson said "until the (administrative-hearing) judge rules on it, it is not a done deal.

"We have withdrawn," she said. "But that still has not been ratified by the judge"

Midland High senior presented with first scholarship named for Lester Van Pelt III

By Johnnye Montgomery
MRT Correspondent

"Some people come into our lives and quickly go. Some stay for a while and leave footprints on our hearts. And we are never, ever the same.'"

Those words were taken from Lester Van Pelt III's memory book.

Lester Van Pelt III left many footprints, first in the halls of Midland High School, then at the University of Texas, where he led UT Students for Ronald Reagan while he worked to obtain first an accounting degree with honors, and later a doctorate in law. His footprints can be found throughout the legal and political arenas of Texas, where he served as spokesman for the Republican Party of Texas and worked tirelessly for conservative causes; and at the university's stadium, where he had season tickets, and never missed a game.

His footprints continue to be seen and felt.

This year, a graduating senior will walk the stage with a little lighter step thanks to the late Van Pelt.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation recently presented its first Lester Van Pelt III Bulldog Excellence scholarship to Midland High senior Miguel Bustilloz. The $10,000 scholarship, which is renewable for three years, was given in honor of Lester Van Pelt III, who died Oct. 9 at age 46.

Project Graduation offers good, clean fun

By Kasey Kelly
MRT Correspondent

Project Graduation will be held Saturday at Midland Center following graduation ceremonies for Midland and Lee High schools.

Project Graduation is an all night, drug-free and alcohol-free party for graduating seniors and their guests sponsored by local businesses, parents and foundations.

Seniors from every high school, as well as those in home schools are invited to attend and may bring one guest for $15.

"This is a wonderful and safe way for graduating seniors to end their high school experience and it could not be done without the generous support of local businesses, individuals and foundations," said Juanice Welsh, co-chairman of the event.

Participants will find themselves surrounded by music and a multitude of ongoing games and entertainment.

Co-chair Susie Foy said activities will include sumo wrestling, an inflatable obstacle course, bungee basketball, human foosball, one-on-one, pedestal jousting, velcro wall, midnight roper, arm wrestling, rock climbing tower, repelling tower and pedal cars.

This year most of the games will be set up in a fenced-in area at Centennial Plaza.

Inside the center, students can play bunko, bingo or participate in a quiz show on the bottom floor.

Students can try their luck in the casino or dance to the tunes of Blade VanStavern, the all-night disc jockey. At 4 a.m. students will be mesmerized by hypnotist/magician Ken Whitener from Florida.

And if that is not enough, students can watch movies in the amphitheater area.

"Last year this kid came up to me and said, 'Thank you, this is the best party I've ever been to'" Ms. Foy said.

Doors open at 10 p.m. with door prizes given out every 15 minutes. Students will be locked-in at midnight.

"We offer a strong incentive for the seniors to stay," Ms. Welch said. "They must be present to win their prizes at the end of the party."

Cuevas branches out, mulls return to politics

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Jose Cuevas not only opened up his newest JumBurrito restaurant in Odessa Thursday, but offered a vision of an expanding future and a possible return to the political arena.

Cuevas — a Midland businessman — gave a handful of friends, media and Odessa city representatives a look and taste of his sixth Mexican restaurant, which opens to the public today. The store, located at 2411 North West County Road in Odessa, is his second in Odessa. He already has four in Midland.

Cuevas also said he is not done with grand openings. JumBurrito expansion is one reason Cuevas, a former City Councilman, did not run for mayor despite being the perceived frontrunner. Thursday, he offered a hint of what that expansion will look like.

Cuevas

"Our first goal is to double the size of the company in the next five years, which will put us at 12, and then double it again in the following five years, which will put us at 25," Cuevas said. "That is our 10-year goal at this point."

"It seems aggressive, but it is only two units per year. Once you tighten the brand, and you understand you can deliver on the promise I think it becomes very easy because JumBurrito is very simple. It is honest food. It is bacon and eggs, ham and eggs, potato and eggs, stew meat, ground beef, avocado and beans. It is very simple and easy to duplicate."

It has also been very successful.

Bivins' severance tax bill meets demise in Senate

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

A bill that would have provided the oil industry severance tax relief when oil prices drop below $20 a barrel and gas prices below $3 per thousand cubic feet (Mcf) has been voted down by the Texas Senate.

Bivins

The Senate Bill sponsored by Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, was passed once out of the Texas Senate and sent to the House for approval. When it died in the House without a vote, Bivins tried to revive the severance tax bill by attaching it as an amendment to another bill. But when it came back to the Senate, it was voted down because of concerns that it would cost the state millions of dollars. Bivins said legislative staff had estimated the bill would cost the state nothing.

While oil prices have remained above $25 for the past year and gas prices have remained in the $5 range, Bivins says

APOLOGY: DHS employees put on leave of absence

(From 1A)

in the State Office of Administrative Hearings.

Ms. Patterson, who specializes in the DHS's long-term regulatory programs that includes nursing homes, said according to 2000 statistics, there were 1,253 licensed nursing homes in Texas and 129,740 residents in 2000.

Manor Park Inc., which was formed in 1968 as a continuing-care retirement center, operates 178 beds for its Mabee and Younger nursing-care units.

Overall, "We serve about 420 residents with 250 employees," Hale said. Those residents include people living independent lives in the Trinity Towers and cottages, which were built in the 1970s, and the Manor Park proper townhouses, cottages and apartments, which were built in the 1980s.

Midway into "our license-revocation hearing," Hale said DHS officials announced "that members of the staff of DHS had falsified records."

Afterward, Hale said certain DHS "employees have been put on leave of absence, pending the outcome of an investigation" into the matter by the DHS's Inspector General.

What Hale termed "falsified records" were "related to the evidentiary documents for our hearing," he said. "They (DHS) did not have a good case against us, and they tried to fabricate. It was certainly overzealous and unreasonable," Hale said. "I think that's what contributed to them dismissing the case.

"The case against Manor Park was dismissed," he said. "It took us 18 months to get our day in court. We pressed them (DHS) to let us prove our innocence.

"Our license is intact," Hale said. "It's good news for us. It's good for Midland, and I take my hat off to the commissioner (Bost) for having the professional courtesy of the apology. He was a strong man to do that. He should have done it."

Bost, who was unavailable for comment, was in Washington, D.C., where this week he was conformed by the U.S. Senate as Secretary of Agriculture Ann Veneman's Undersecretary for Food, Nutrition, and Consumer Services.

"There's not a nursing home in the world that hasn't been criticized at one time or another," Hale said. "I'm real proud that the (Manor Park) board of trustees stood through the accusations and stood by Manor Park until we were exonerated. They should be commended."

In noting operating nursing-care facilities is a "challenging business," Hale noted "the nursing-care business needs to be regulated. It needs to be regulated fairly and appropriately."

Of the Manor Park dispute with the DHS agency, ""We finally got our day in court," Hale said. "We defended ourselves, and we prevailed. Our name has been tarnished, and we need to restore it."

Hispanic Chamber passes out awards, scholarships

By Kristine Aleman
MRT Correspondent

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce held its annual Business Awards and Scholarship Banquet Thursday honoring the achievements of local students and entrepreneurs. Midland College President David Daniel addressed the award recipients about the importance of change.

The Women's Department of the Hispanic Chamber awarded 31 students with scholarships totaling $11,000. Scholarship money is raised in the male fashion show held every year.

"This was our biggest year, and it pushes our goal for next year to probably $15,000 to $20,000," said Diana Cano, of the Hispanic Chamber Board. "We've got some real hard-working women who don't mind rolling up their sleeves for education."

Students apply each March for the scholarship by submitting a school transcript, letters of recommendation and completing a total of 25 community service hours.

"Receiving this scholarship encourages me to go to college. I know that there's always going to be someone out there to help me get my education," said Rigoberto "Rigo" Hernandez, 18, who will be attending Midland College in the fall. "It's someone giving you a push to start running in this race."

Scholarships help take care of the extra costs, besides tuition, which students are faced with, said Jonathan Reyes, a sophomore at Texas A&M University and second-year recipient of the award.

The Hispanic Chamber also recognized outstanding entrepreneurs in the area. Patrick Cordero, CEO of Strategic Abstract & Title Corp., received the Businessman of the Year award.

"It's overwhelming to be recognized by peers for something you do every day," Cordero said. "I hope it encourages more people to think about becoming an entrepreneur. There are a lot of risks, but also a lot of awards."

"It's an exciting experience to be in the same circle as other professionals," said Elena Corrales, Businesswoman of the Year. Corrales first began interior decorating free of charge and now owns her own business, Corrales Decor.

"It's like an older brother helping out a younger brother," Hernandez said about the Hispanic Chamber. "These are people who have already had success in the Hispanic community helping others get their start."

Other awards include:

VAN PELT: GOP activist works until week before death

(From 1A)

Bustilloz, who will enter the University of Texas at Austin in the fall, was chosen to receive the scholarship on the basis of his scholastic record, his community volunteerism and on his intention to study business or law. He plays tennis, sings in the choir at St. Ann's Church and plays piano. Although he never knew Van Pelt, he could well be following in Van Pelt's footsteps.

Lester Van Pelt's love of politics started in early childhood and lasted all his life. His father, Lester Van Pelt Jr., remembers coming out of the house to find his car covered with "I like Ike" scouring-powder scribbles during the Eisenhower campaign.

"I took the car down and had it washed, but I was never able to completely remove the writing," he said.

The young Van Pelt also loved music, first playing piano for the children's Sunday School, and later tenor saxophone in the junior high band, and Midland High's marching band, where he graduated with honors from Midland High in 1972, and entered the University of Texas at Austin.

"He loved to play, 'When the Saints Go Marching In,' and 'Stars and Stripes Forever,'" said his mother Dolores Van Pelt.

Another love of Van Pelt's was football — Longhorn football in particular. According to Lester Van Pelt Jr., he never missed a home game.

By the time he entered UT Austin, Van Pelt's political activism was finely honed and focused. He joined with other Reagan supporters in Austin and by 1976 had attracted a following of more than 1,500 activists working for the former California governor.

In 1995, he became the communications director for the Republican Party of Texas.

Former Texas GOP leader Tom Pauken, characterized Van Pelt as "a true professional who was involved in politics for the right reason, for whom the phrase 'God and country' had real meaning."

At the time of his death, Van Pelt was serving as administrative law judge (Appeal Tribunal II) with the Texas Workforce Commission.

He had been diagnosed with lung cancer 18 months earlier, but continued to work until the week before his death.

In announcing the Bulldog Excellence Scholarship, which will be awarded annually to a Midland High senior. David Smith of the Abell-Hanger Foundation said the intent was to "honor his memory in a manner that would be both healing and appropriate to what Lester believed in.

"We wanted to remember Lester, and to somehow bring something good out of what has been an almost unbearable tragedy," Smith said. "We can't bring Lester back, but we can see that the work he loved continues."

Bustilloz said in an interview with the awards committee prior to his selection, he had expressed a wish to thank the Van Pelts for the son they had raised.

"I was so sorry that this son of theirs had died so young, and yet because of his life, I had a chance to try for this opportunity, and I just wanted to meet them, and to say how much I thank them."

After being selected, Bustilloz met the Van Pelts.

"They're really the nicest people," he said. "And Mr. Van Pelt came from New Jersey, so he has this cool accent.

"I love to hear him talk."

Whooping Cough case reported to be 'isolated'

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Midland health officials are calling the reported Pertussis (Whooping Cough) case in a sixth-grader at Midland Academy Charter School an "isolated" one, and are taking preventive measures to make sure it stays that way.

Steps have been taken to protect those the student may have come in contact with, said Sal Garcia, health and senior services administrator for the City of Midland.

"At this time, this is an isolated case," Garcia said. "We are taking preventive measures to address it, testing and treating the people who might have been exposed in the classroom."

Whooping Cough is a serious infection of the respiratory system caused by Bordetella Pertussis bacteria. Initial symptoms resemble the common cold, but then develop into a cough with great duration, then a two-week sudden onset of severe coughing and inability to catch breath after a coughing spasm.

Whooping Cough can be passed from person to person similar to the common cold and it is treatable with antibiotics.

"Not everybody who coughs has Pertussis. We have been receiving calls about that," Garcia said.

CUEVAS: Owner wants to expand business

(From 1A)

Cuevas, along with his wife Diane, opened their first store in December 1979. Twenty years later, there are six stores, which feature "good food served fast." Cuevas already has visions of a third Odessa store to be located in the proximity of North 42nd Street and John Ben Shepperd Parkway. He wants to expand beyond the Midland-Odessa area.

"We will go to Lubbock, which has a population of 180,000," Cuevas said. "Your capability of clustering five or six (in Lubbock) are very great, plus we have a lot of transplants from Midland-Odessa going to college at (Texas) Tech who understand the brand. They can also bring their friends, so you got a built-in clientele already."

Cuevas' service to the community goes beyond his time as a councilman. In 1996, he was recognized as the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Businessman of the Year. Cuevas served as the campaign chairman for the United Way of Midland this past year, setting a fund-raising record of $3.1 million.

This past election season, Cuevas' name hovered over the mayor's race. Many saw him as the frontrunner.

Thursday, he said an eventual return to the political arena could come around 2004, the year of the next mayoral election. There is also speculation, though, that Cuevas' political intentions may transcend Midland.

"That can be as close as three years," Cuevas said. "I don't think you can put a time on it, but I think what happens is the company evolves. You get more entrepreneurial spirit in there and get some different leaders, so as an entrepreneur I can step aside and let the people handle the day-to-day and the real grind of it and say this is our vision and take a chairman role."

BILL: Senate votes down severance tax relief

his philosophy is "we should fix the roof while the sun is shining," to obtain a provision for relief before another crisis hits.

Under the terms of the bill, oil companies would pay the full severance tax of 4.6 percent as long as oil prices remain above $20 and the full severance tax of 7.5 percent on natural gas as long as prices above $3. However, if oil prices dropped below $20, the severance tax would fall to 2.3 percent. Below $12 the tax would be one percent.

When natural gas prices drop below $3 per Mcf, the severance tax would be reduced to 5 percent and below $1.24 per Mcf the tax would drop to one percent.

"We now have the highest severance tax on natural gas in the U.S.," said Bivins.

In 1999, when oil prices dropped to $8, the Legislature passed a $45 million severance tax relief bill and Bivins said there had been some discussion about repealing the severance tax altogether.

He noted, however, he had not found the political will in the Legislature to support such a measure, even though an amendment to the severance tax bill would have required that it be brought up for Legislative review in 2006.

Jeffords' move will test our new president

It is often said that the true character of an individual is best measured when the going gets tough.

Right now, there are plenty of political pundits in the Beltway predicting the demise of the Bush presidency in the wake of Vermont Sen. James Jeffords' decision to abandon the Republican Party and declare himself an independent.

Democrats are absolutely gleeful.

Jeffords' decision to break away from the Republican Party triggers a huge shift in the balance of power in the Senate where Republicans have held control in the 50-50 chamber, with the tie-breaking power of Vice President Dick Cheney.

Jeffords has said he has been troubled with his GOP alliance due to differences of opinion he has had with President Bush over key issues. He has promised to stand by the White House until the president's tax cut measure clears the Senate.

Many are already suggesting President Bush will now have to give up the theme of "changing the tone in Washington" he so often employed during the campaign, adopt tougher language and take the Democrats head on.

But we doubt that President Bush will do that, and we hope he will not.

As governor, he was quite successful in Austin primarily due to the bi-partisan bridges he built. The friendship he formed with the late Bob Bullock is legendary.

In his first public comments on the Jeffords' switch, President Bush had a Democratic congressman in tow when he visited a Catholic educational facility, talking about the need for faith-based organizations to further their outreach efforts.

Tongues will continue to wag over the Memorial Day weekend about the Jeffords' bombshell.

The weeks and months ahead will test the mettle of President Bush.

Will he surrender his basic belief that bipartisanship is the best way to move the nation forward?

We doubt it.

Today in History

Today is Friday, May 25, the 145th day of 2001. There are 220 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 25, 1961, President Kennedy asked the nation to work toward putting a man on the moon by the end of the decade.

On this date:

In 1787, the Constitutional Convention was convened in Philadelphia after enough delegates had shown up for a quorum.

In 1810, Argentina began its revolt against Spain.

In 1895, playwright Oscar Wilde was convicted of a morals charge in London; he was sentenced to prison.

In 1935, Babe Ruth hit the 714th and final home run of his career, for the Boston Braves, in a game against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In 1946, Transjordan (now Jordan) became a kingdom as it proclaimed its new monarch, King Abdullah Ibn Ul-Hussein.

In 1963, the Organization of African Unity was founded, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

In 1968, the Gateway Arch, part of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial in St. Louis, was dedicated.

In 1976, U.S. Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, admitted to a "personal relationship" with Elizabeth Ray, a committee staff member who claimed she'd received her job in order to be Hays' mistress.

In 1979, 275 people died when an American Airlines DC-10 crashed on takeoff from Chicago's O'Hare airport.

In 1981, daredevil Daniel Goodwin, wearing a "Spiderman" costume, scaled the outside of Chicago's Sears Tower in 7 1/2 hours.

Ten years ago: Foreigners fled the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa as rebels closed in on the city. Israel completed "Operation Solomon," which had evacuated 15,000 Ethiopian Jews to their promised land.

Five years ago: President Clinton, honoring the men and women who died in military service, used his weekly radio address to defend America's global military role, saying it "is making our people safer and the world more secure."

One year ago: The government proposed a rating system telling consumers how prone vehicles are to rolling over. Iranian state radio announced that former President Hashemi Rafsanjani had resigned from the incoming parliament, depriving hard-liners of a leading figure in the power struggle between conservatives and reformists.

Pearl Harbor: Who was really to blame?

WASHINGTON — The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941, is being revisited in a new film, a fact that is causing renewed interest in the facts and myths surrounding the event that propelled the United States into World War II. The real reason for the debacle is rooted in an often overlooked fact.

Anderson

But first the myths:

1. The most persistent tall tale of the attack is that President Franklin D. Roosevelt knew about it in advance, but did nothing because he believed it was the necessary event to get us into the war. There has never been any evidence to support this far-fetched claim.

2. Chief of Staff of the Army Gen. George C. Marshall went riding at Fort Meyer, adjacent to Arlington Cemetery, and could not be reached concerning the critical Japanese diplomatic message because he did not want to know. Indeed, he did go riding, but reaching him on the small Army post was not a difficult matter. Marshall, like Roosevelt, was a great patriot. Neither of them deserves such attacks.

Now, the facts:

1. Radar technology was new to American forces, and it was not operating full-time, nor was it fully understood by its operators.

2. The Japanese diplomatic code was broken by American cryptographers. However, when the key message from Tokyo was received at the Japanese Embassy in Washington, D.C., and intercepted by U.S. intelligence activities, it was decoded, but not given the urgent priority it deserved. U.S. military authorities assumed that the message obliquely referred to an attack in Southeast Asia.

3. The top-ranking Navy and Army commanders at Pearl Harbor, Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, were surprised by the attack and were relieved and rebuked as a result.

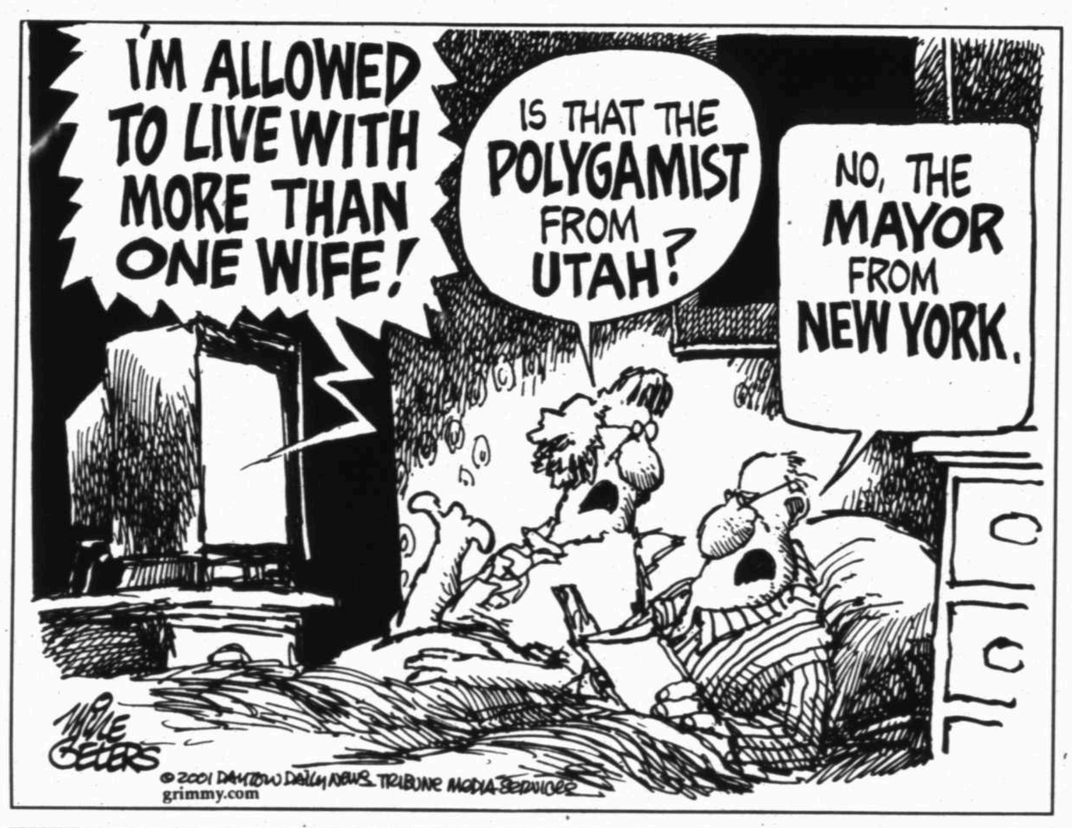

There are two camps: one that believes the two men to be the responsible parties, and one that believes them to be scapegoats.

Short's planes were sitting ducks because, fearing sabotage, he had ordered them to be grouped together rather than dispersed so they could be guarded more easily. All of Kimmel's aircraft carriers were out on maneuvers, which simultaneously saved them and deprived Pearl Harbor of Navy air reconnaissance.

And now, the real reason America was surprised at Pearl Harbor: At West Point, cadets are taught the principles of war, one of which is Unity of Command. It is simple enough. For every operation and every organization, there should be one individual in command. At Pearl Harbor there were two — Kimmel and Short — and no matter how much they cooperated with each other, it was a violation of the Unity of Command principle. Had just one of them been in command, there would have been no question about aerial reconnaissance by a combined Army-Navy effort. There would have been no question about inter-service coordination and cooperation. But when one commander assumes another commander is covering a certain responsibility, it is just as easy for the opposite assumption to prevail. Meetings, discussions and joint staff conferences cannot take the place of a single commander.

Interestingly, America learned its lesson, which is why Admiral Chester Nimitz commanded in the Central Pacific and Gen. Douglas MacArthur commanded in the Southwest Pacific. Each of them commanded Army, Navy, Marine and Army Air Corps personnel, and each was successful. Had they instead commanded jointly, the duo of Nimitz and MacArthur might have gone the way of Kimmel and Short.

Americans should appreciate sacrifices of the 'Greatest Generation' while we still can

When I was growing up in the Washington, D.C. area, patriotism wasn't something I was forced to learn. It came naturally. From the experience of my father and his brothers who served in World War II, to my mother's memory of what life was like on the home front, I was taught by example what it meant to love my country.

Mom kept a scrapbook, which I inherited. I see my Dad and his buddies. I also look at Mom's ration books and recall a generation largely untouched by the entitlement mentality that grips us today. We didn't have air conditioning in our home or car. We thought an electric fan was OK. In summer, we opened windows in our car and home.

Thomas

Gasoline was cheap, when you could get it. Tires were less than plentiful because rubber, like so many other things, went to the "war effort." Children were asked at the end of movies, which were worth seeing, to buy savings stamps and adults were exhorted to purchase U.S. Savings Bonds. Most people thought these were good things to do.

Neighbors mostly helped each other and shared what they had with those who had less. The letters Mom preserved show my Dad loved us and he loved his country. He, and we, knew that all of our armed forces were opposing evil.

Such notions today are considered politically incorrect. Many in the current generation — the whining generation — tell us not to think highly of America. We are all one world now. In fact, America, because of her success and power, is supposedly responsible for much of the misery in the world. We consume too much energy. We make too much money. We ought to give away what we have earned to others who did not earn it and do not wish to emulate what we did to get it.

Fighting for one's beliefs and the American way of life is now considered more evil than the evil our fighting men and women have opposed over the generations. Standing for anything is regarded as racist, sexist, homophobic, xenophobic, judgmental, imposing morality and a violation of church-state separation. So, we fall for everything.

Those ideas were foreign to my parents' world. They were part of what Tom Brokaw aptly named "The Greatest Generation." Brokaw's latest book is called "An Album of Memories: Personal Histories from The Greatest Generation." (Random House) It contains letters and pictures from WWII veterans, their spouses, children and grandchildren. The book is a needed rebuke to those among us who complain of an occasional power blackout and $2-per-gallon gasoline. Our generation is spoiled and self-indulgent and is mostly unfit to carry the duffel bag of a WWII vet.

One letter among many in Brokaw's book sets the tone for what that generation can teach us. Robert Cromer, from Roundlake, Ill., became a soldier at 18 and was twice wounded. "We were privileged to grow up in a time when honor, truth, loyalty, duty and patriotism were real and meant something," Cromer writes. "Growing up in the Depression was not a great honor, but it was a classroom that taught us to be independent and innovative. We made our own toys out of orange crates and roller skates. We made our kites from newspapers and we melted lead to pour into molds to make soldiers, cowboys and Indians. We made rubber guns from a piece of 2-by-4, a half a clothespin, and a section of inner tube from a car tire... ."

Cromer adds, "The community stuck together and family was very important. Parents were role models. In the back of my mind was always the thought, 'Don't ever do anything to bring disgrace to your family.' I never thought of 'me first' or 'do your own thing' and neither did anyone else."

Cromer says by today's standards he and his family would have been considered poor but "nobody came around to tell us so."

Brokaw has performed a valuable service by publishing these books. Anyone wishing to know why we have so many social problems today should read these letters and understand that such problems occur because we've departed from the code of conduct that allowed The Greatest Generation to survive and prevail over the twin evils of a depression and a world war.

Their virtue, as well as their sacrifice, is what we should remember this Memorial Day and every day.

Supreme Court ruling on prayer was flat wrong

Editor's Note: Charley Reese is on vacation. We are rerunning some of his more popular columns.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that a school district may not allow a student to lead a prayer at a football game.

It's interesting when you recall a statement made by Mikhail Gorbachev — America's favorite liberal — to a group of Communist Party officials on Dec. 15, 1987, in Uzbekistan:

"There must be no letup in the war against religion because as long as religion exists, communism cannot prevail. We must intensify the obliteration of all religions wherever they are being practiced or taught."

Gorbachev is a disciple of the late Sardinian communist Antonio Gramsci, who advocated the policy of active social demoralization.

The Supreme Court ruling is simply flat wrong. The justices as much as admitted it in their majority opinion by prattling on about how a Christian prayer makes non-Christians feel like outsiders. What has that got to do with the Constitution? There is no constitutional protection for anyone's subjective feelings. C.S. Lewis, the great Christian thinker, noted, "Subjectivism about values is eternally incompatible with democracy."

Reese

The only thing the First Amendment states is that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." Since when is a local school district the federal government? And since when does a prayer spoken in public establish anything? And if a student can't pray in public in Texas, how come the then-president of the United States, Franklin Roosevelt, led the nation in a public prayer over national radio hookups?

And if forbidding a high-school student from leading a prayer at a football game isn't prohibiting the free exercise of religion, what is it?

We would do well to remember the words of George Washington in his farewell address, in which he stated that anyone who is an enemy of religion is an enemy of republican government.

It's interesting that Washington sees religion as essential to a free republic, and Gorbachev sees the destruction of religion as essential to the triumph of communism. That means that both men are smarter than the majority of the justices on the Supreme Court who wrote this latest opinion on public prayer.

When the communists in Russia failed to root out religion, despite the slaughter of priests and parishioners alike, it used a fall-back strategy of infiltrating the church and of confining religion to within the four walls of the church.

That is what is happening in America. All of these rulings and harangues by left-wingers are delivering the same message: Keep your religion to yourself. It has no place in the commons.

This, of course, is a contradiction of more than 200 years of American history. Religion has always played a prominent role in public affairs and in government. Under the Constitution, the states could establish religion or set religious tests for public office, and nearly all of them did.

This anti-prayer business is of recent origin, dating back only to the 1960s. Americans should realize that all federal judges are the result of political patronage. These characters are political appointees, not necessarily scholars and certainly not saints. As for people who claim to be offended by hearing a prayer, they are bigots, plain and simple.

I would say to the people of Texas: If the spirit moves you, say your prayers at football games. If the U.S. government wishes to send armed marshals to arrest a youth for uttering a Christian prayer, then the people would at least see the true, ugly face of the government, which hides behind a Smiley Face mask.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

OBITUARIES

Wilbur Donald Ray

Wilbur Donald Ray passed away Wednesday, May 23, 2001 at his home in Lamesa.

Services for Wilbur Donald Ray, 71, will be at Second Baptist Church Monday, May 28, 2001 with Milton C. Ray officiating.

Cremation will be at Trinity Memorial Park & Crematory in Big Spring, Texas.

Wilbur was born Saturday morning, May 17, 1930 in Lamesa, Texas. He married Nova Dee Fancher on October 5, 1951 in Lamesa.

His father, Klyde Ray was the fireman for Lamesa and his mother, Essie, prepared meals for the City prisoners. They resided in an apartment currently used by the fire department, where Wilbur's brother, Ronnie is now a firefighter.

The Ray family moved to Salinas, California in 1931 and returned to Lamesa in 1941. Wilbur remained on the farm until his marriage to Nova Fancher, October 5, 1951. Wilbur accepted employment with an exploration company and he and Nova moved 8 times in 3 years, He was drafted in 1955 and served honorably in the military police until discharged in 1957. Wilbur looks upon those 2 years as a highlight; valuable lessons were learned and self-confidence was achieved.

After discharge, Wilbur went to work for Amerade Petroleum Corp. and during the next 14 years the Ray family moved 12 times, lived in 10 cities, in seven states. His daughter, Nona, was born in 1957 in Minot, North Dakota; his son, Mark, war born in 1963 in Chickasha, Oklahoma.

Due to economic difficulties in the petroleum industry, Wilbur and numerous employees were terminated by Amerada and began the struggle to establish a new career. After nearly a year of seeking employment, business opportunities and a brief stint with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Wilbur was chosen to be the Juvenile Probation Officer of Dawson County on March 1, 1972; thus a new career was started and a legend born.

Wilbur really enjoyed his new role as "Kid Sheriff" of Dawson County and knew he found something to fill a void. After nearly twenty years of chasing about with little to show except a bleeding ulcer and other potential health problems, he developed innovative juvenile programs, completed his Associate Degree and became active in Criminal Justice and community affairs. Some activities included teaching three Juvenile Procedure; Probation and Parole courses at Howard College, serving on the Board of Directors with the Red Cross and Salvation Army, he was the Salvation Army camp Chairman for 10 years, serving the community through the Lions Club, where he served as treasurer, president and Lion tamer for 20 years. Wilbur was active with the Permian Juvenile Chiefs where he also served one term as president. He joined T.C.A. and became a charter member of T.P.A.

As changes occur and they always do, Wilbur moved from Juvenile Probation to Adult Probation in Sept. 1978. He was appointed as the Chief of the 106th Judicial District in July, 1979. As the prisons filled beyond capacity and the Federal Court directed massive changes, the Texas Legislature increased probation funding to seek alternate sanctions and the staff slowly outgrew two offices. The department has expanded from eight employees to 13, plus 11 individuals providing contract services for 15 separate programs, all designed to provide alternate sanctions.

During the Adult Probation years, Wilbur received the Outstanding Administrator Award from Texas Corrections Association in 1983. He served two terms on the Texas Probation Associations Legislative Committee and is currently serving on the Probation Officers Advisory Committee to the Community Justice Assistance Division. He also serves as Vice President of West Texas Opportunities, an 11 county organization staffed with more than 100 employees that is dedicated to helping those in need. Wilbur is active with Second Baptist Church, where he has been a member for over 15 years.

The dedication and high morale of staff have overcome any negative obstacles to this point. Wilbur and staff are looking forward to furthering the "wedding" of probation and corrections.

Survivors include his wife, Nova Dee Ray of Lamesa; one daughter, Nona Devon Ray of Midland; one son, Mark Donald Ray of Lamesa; two brothers, Milton C. Ray of Memphis, TN and Ronnie L. Ray of Lamesa; and two grandchildren.

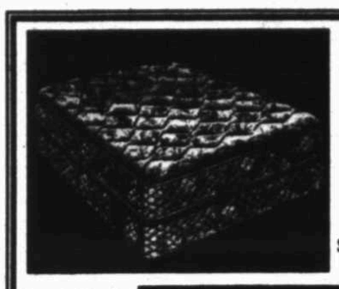

The family requests memorials to: Community Care Hospice, 1510 S. Gregg, Big Spring, TX 79720; Lamesa Noon Lions Club, P.O. Box 705, Lamesa, TX 79331; American Cancer Society, P.O. Box 659, Lamesa, TX 79331.

Americans expected to flock to film

By Georgia Temple
Entertainment Editor

Dec. 7, 1941, dawned red at Pearl Harbor as the Japanese blew the U.S. Seventh Fleet apart, blasting asunder the lives and hopes and dreams of a sleeping America. My mother, Lorraine Todd, was finishing up the dishes after a late breakfast. Decades later, she still remembered that Sunday morning as one that appeared to stretch gloriously ahead of them, free of work and ready to be savored.

My father, George Todd, was sitting at the table, reading, when news of the attack came in over the radio. She froze, the towel she was drying dishes with forgotten in her hands.

"This is my war, and I'm going," George said, his words coming so fast behind the announcement that they seemed to Lorraine to be a part of the news.

She stared at the radio, the words "Pearl Harbor," "Japanese" and "bombs' taking shape in her mind. She'd heard him talk like this since war broke out in Europe, but she'd prayed the war would end before the United States became involved. She searched for the words that might make him change his mind.

There were none. He was a patriot for whom the fact that he was over draft age meant nothing. He felt duty bound to enlist. And he did. Immediately. He served as a commissioned officer in the U.S. Navy, first in the Atlantic and then in the Pacific. And he came home, alive, but forever changed.

This scene was played out in homes across the country that fateful morning, the day referred to by President Franklin D. Roosevelt as the date that "will live in infamy." Official records list 2,403 Americans killed and 1,178 wounded.

And now, almost 60 years later, a $140 million film that tells the story of this attack through the fictitious lives of two Army fighter pilots (Ben Affleck and Josh Hartnett) opens nationwide today. Produced by Jerry Bruckheimer and directed by Michael Bay, the (Disney) Touchstone Pictures' film is being released amid much fanfare and is expected to be a summer blockbuster.

This week, Texas Land Commissioner David Dewhurst announced a special showing of the film at 12:30 p.m. today to benefit Texas State Veterans Homes. Special rates will apply at Tall City 10 for World War II veterans for this showing only.

Americans are expected to flock to the theater this Memorial Day Weekend to see the movie. Described as an epic saga of love and war, the film is rated PG-13.

Some have to wait. Such is the case for the cast of Midland Community Theatre's upcoming production of two one-act plays — "Messin' with Destiny" and "Marriage to an Older Woman," opening June 1 in Mabee Theatre II, Cole Theatre.

"I actually wanted to go see that film the day it opened in Midland," said David Leon, who is in "Messin' with Destiny." "But due to rehearsal, I can't.

"I am a World War II movie buff. That's what I like to watch the most, unless it's Roman. I love those two time periods most of all. My favorite World War II movie is 'Tora! Tora! Tora!' — which is another Pearl Harbor film."

When he sees the previews for "Pearl Harbor," George O'Connor, who is directing the MCT-produced one-act plays, recalls growing up in Waco where one of the largest YMCA's was named after Doris "Dorie" Miller.

MOVIE: Thespians hoping to see 'Pearl Harbor' soon

(From 1B)

"Doris Miller was a black seaman who took up a gun position and downed several Zeroes before he himself was killed," said O'Connor. In 'Tora! Tora! Tora!,' he was relegated to eight seconds of screen time with no plug to the rest of the show. But in Waco, his story is legendary."

In the Disney film opening today, Cuba Gooding Jr. plays Miller.

"I plan on being there to see 'Pearl Harbor' just as soon as I can," said Jena Tisdale, who is also in "Messin' with Destiny." "I've heard about it, and the previews and the trailer so far have made it sound very intriguing."

Ms. Tisdale is a fan of movies about World War II.

"I think it's from watching them with my dad when I was little," Ms. Tisdale said. "When I watch them, I think of my dad. It's kind of like a memory thing."

Her father did not serve in World War II, but his father did, Ms. Tisdale said. "So he remembers stories about World War II."

Some of those stories weren't told for a long time, decades in the case of Diane Browne's father and his brothers.

"My dad was in the Merchant Marines, and he was in the conflict," said Ms. Browne, who is in "Messin' with Destiny." "He found out fairly recently his brothers were also at Normandy, only none of them knew it. That generation did not go home and talk about what they had seen and done. It was too traumatic. And the brothers never discussed where they were and what they did."

Ms. Browne feels that the film "Saving Private Ryan" had an impact on the brothers beginning to talk about their war experiences.

"When that movie came out, the younger generation wanted to know information about the war," Ms. Browne said. "So when our families gathered, they did talk about it and found out these things. And my mother was a spotter. She was trained to spot enemy planes."

A year ago, when Vernon Kenworthy heard the cast involved in "Pearl Harbor," he said he "knew it probably had to be a worthwhile production."

In addition to Affleck, Hartnett and Gooding Jr., the film also stars Kate Beckinsale, Tom Sizemore, Colm Feore, William L. Scott and Michael Shannon. Affleck and Hartnett play two daring young pilots who grew up as best friends and who fall in love with the same woman (Beckinsale), a U.S. Navy nurse. The film also features Jon Voight, Alec Baldwin and Dan Aykroyd.

For more news on 'Pearl Harbor' and other Reviews & Previews stories, see Section E.

"Obviously, the fact that it deals with such a significant piece of our history, that alone is enough to encourage most Americans to want to see it," said Kenworthy, who has roles in both of the MCT-produced one-act comedies. "It's going to break a lot of age barriers. I think it's going to be one of those movies that a lot of young people want to go see as well as a lot of the older generation, like 'Private Ryan.'

"It's probably going to be one of the biggest films of the year. They spent a lot of money making that film, and the previews I've seen are spectacular. It ought to gross $500 million when it's all said and done worldwide."

Jennifer Walker also plans on seeing "Pearl Harbor," even though war films have a strong impact on her.

"I react very strangely to those movies," said Ms. Walker, who will be seen by Midland audiences in "Marriage to an Older Woman." "I like them, but they are so horrific to me that it's really difficult for me to deal with them on an emotional level.

"I'm fascinated by them and respect the work, but I can't cry at those movies. I just don't allow myself to feel that horror. It's too overwhelming."

The advertisements for "Pearl Harbor," reminded Sherry O'Connor of her father.

"My father fought in that war, and he was a young man in his early 20s at the time," said Ms. O'Connor, who is stage manager for the MCT one-act plays. "I was born in '51, so Dad had all this war memorabilia. And we kids used to love going through it.

"He had the original paper that said the war was over and the photo that seems to be so popular now — a sailor kissing a" girl. "The newspaper was filled with bad pictures, too. People who had died. Things that kids really don't want to see, but my dad thought it was important that we see them."

Ms. O'Connor's father suffered several personal losses during the war years.

"On a sad note for my dad, his mother passed away," Ms. O'Connor said. "He tried to get home through Red Cross. Because it was such a crucial time, they wouldn't let him go home. So he never did get to see his mother again. His father passed away a year later. When he came home, he came home to his two brothers who had gotten home before him. He lived with them. He had no parents."

A fan when she was younger of war films, Ms. O'Connor said time has changed her perspective. "I guess as I got older, I realized what I was watching. They don't have the same thrill for me. I feel the horror of them. I can't say I enjoy them, but they're a part of our history."

Today, moviegoers sitting in a darkened theater watching "Pearl Harbor" may find themselves caught up though the magic of film in the horror that is war. In so doing, perhaps they will sense some of the terror and absolute disbelief Americans felt on the day that will live in infamy. If not, the summer film season will be a less profitable and perhaps more infamous one for Disney than the studio anticipates.

PARENT TO PARENT

a family guide to current movies

By Tom Laney

This column rates current movies for parents and others who want help in choosing films that reflect traditional values and are suitable for family viewing. Films are rated in two categories: Entertainment (rated 0 to +4) and Acceptability (rated -4 to +4). I'll add brief comments to clarify the reasons for the ratings. Movies listed are currently playing in Midland and/or Odessa as of this writing.

NOTE: These first two reviews were inadvertently omitted from my last column. I apologize for the error and sincerely hope you didn't waste your money on either "Town and Country" or "The Forsaken." — TDL

TOWN AND COUNTRY (R; 1, -3) Sometimes, as I view films for this column, I struggle to stay awake. This time, this leaden, uninteresting comedy about uninteresting people got the better of me, and I had to go back the next night to watch the last half hour, most of which I had missed the first time around. This film was three years in the making and plagued with problems, conflicts, and changes from the outset. Obviously, the producers just didn't know when to give up and spare us from this turkey. If you insist on seeing it, be aware that the plot centers on adultery, and that shocking language, strong sexual themes, and nudity are present.

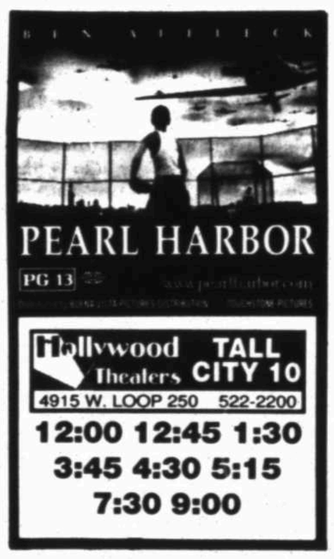

THE FORSAKEN (R; 2, -3) I guess somebody decided America had a compelling need for another vampire movie. Whoever that was, they shouldn't be producing films. As one Internet reviewer said, there's plenty of blood and breasts, but little else in this violent adult film. It's not for your kids or teens.

SHREK (PG; 4, 2) The two biggest mistakes you can make at the theater right now are (1) seeing "Freddy Got Fingered" or "Joe Dirt;" and (2) missing "Shrek." It's as good as the former two are horrendously, disgustingly, offensively bad. This wonderfully inventive computer-animated romp manages to poke fun at fairy tales, Disney movies, Disneyland, The Matrix, and lots of other stuff, while delivering a passably entertaining plot with a moral lesson of sorts. The reservations you detected in that last sentence don't matter much — this film is primarily a feast for the eyes. One reservation that MIGHT matter is the content that made this a PG film. There are a handful of mild bad words, a couple of adult sexual references that will go over most kids' heads, a fair amount of "gross-out" humor (the title character, being an ogre, snacks on eyeballs, cobwebs, and other disgusting stuff), and a small amount of totally unnecessary bathroom humor, but these things go by fast and don't really detract from what is an otherwise amazing movie. It's laugh-out-loud funny (watch for the balloon animals, easily the funniest bit) and features a great rockin' soundtrack. And Eddie Murphy as Donkey is arguably the most endearing sidekick in recent memory. Don't miss this family fun film — there are so few nowadays.

ANGEL EYES (R; 2 1/2, -2) This is a film that thinks it has something in common with movies like "The Sixth Sense" and "Frequency." It attempts to make some big supernatural event out of a simple coincidence. Nevertheless, it turns out to be an entertaining adult film. Nudity, language and violence make it unsuitable for kids.

THE TAILOR OF PANAMA (R; 2, -3) I've had quite a few folks ask me when this movie would be coming to the area. Well, it's here, at the Century 12 in Odessa, and you'd better hurry if you really want to see it, because it will probably only play for a week (two at the most). Movies like this don't sell many tickets, so they get replaced quickly by films that will sell more. Now — is it any good? Actually, I was disappointed. I expected a predictable spy film, but got a movie that had more in common with "Wag the Dog" than James Bond. It also has nudity, violence and strong language. Normally charming Pierce Brosnan plays an unlikeable jerk who smokes incessantly. Geoffrey Rush does a creditable job in the title role, but basically, it's just not much fun. No wonder the big-time critics loved it.

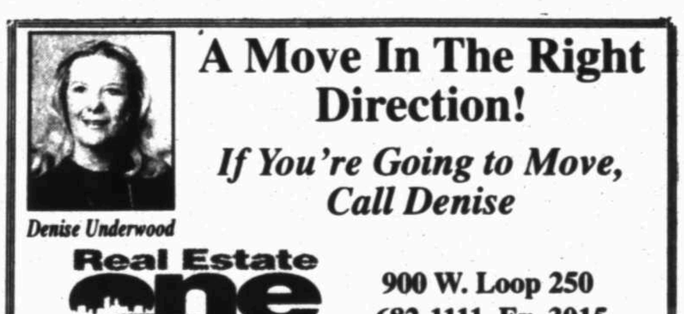

Next time, we'll look at some more new releases, including the long-awaited "Pearl Harbor." That movie is rated PG-13 for "sustained intense war sequences, images of wounded, brief sensuality, and some language." As always, I recommend three good Web sites for information on new movies: www.screenit.com, www.gospelcom.net/preview, and www.upcomingmovies.com. Don't hesitate to check out any of these sites for further information, or e-mail me with your comments and questions at: tlaney@apex2000.net. Thank you for all the positive comments I've received so far — it's a pleasure to be of service to you.

Les and Harriet Raney, who moved from Boca Raton, Fla., stand outside their duplex home at The Gardens RV Village in Crossville, Tenn., April 2. The Gardens is one of Crossville's numerous housing developments that cater specifically to on-the-go retirees. Each single story home in The Gardens comes with a garage large enough to house a full-sized motor home.

Quiet lifestyle attracts retirees to growing Tennessee county

CROSSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Their Florida vacation stalled by an early snow in this sleepy mountain town atop the Cumberland Plateau, Douglas and Beverly Price settled in for the weekend.

"We liked it so much, pretty soon we said, 'Let's just stay here,'" recalled Mrs. Price, a former aviation inspector from Midland, Mich., who still flies regularly.

Three years later, the Prices are still here, both semiretired at age 71 and living in a town largely unknown outside of Middle Tennessee.

That's rapidly changing. Thousands of older couples such as the Prices have retired to Cumberland County, whose biggest claim to fame might be as the starting point of the World's Longest Yard Sale.

The influx helped make Cumberland, about 100 miles east of Nashville, the sixth-fastest growing county in the state over the past decade, according to the 2000 Census. Though Census officials have yet to release detailed age and employment information, there is little doubt among residents that most of the county's population boom was fueled by out-of-state retirees.

Cumberland County has fewer teen-agers than all but five counties in Tennessee. And unlike other counties that saw their populations swell during the 1990s — Williamson and Rutherford near Nashville among them — there is no major industry beyond a few factories to attract young workers.

"It's really been a phenomenon. I think it's far exceeded what anyone thought it would be," Cumberland County Executive Brock Hill said of the influx of retirees.

Low taxes — Tennessee has no state income tax and only local property taxes — scenic surroundings and a slow-paced, rural lifestyle are the biggest draws for retirees, Hill said. Most hail from the Midwest and the New York metropolitan area, but the region also attracts some retirees from as far away as California.

Ray Burke, formerly of Bogota, N.J., said he, like many here, considered moving to Florida but found it oppressively hot and overcrowded. Instead, a quiet life in the mountains surrounded by undisturbed forests appealed to the former New York City transit worker.

"Twenty years of dealing with the public, I enjoy my peace of mind," Burke said as he walked his black, oversized mutt, Brutus. "Plus, nobody here messes with my dog."

Despite the rapid growth, Cumberland County's population remains scattered, another draw to retirees like Burke who spent their working lives in cramped cities. There are no major metropolitan areas in Cumberland County. The largest town, Crossville, has a population of 9,000.

Burke and the Prices live in The Gardens RV Village, one of Crossville's numerous housing developments that cater specifically to on-the-go retirees.

Each single-story home in The Gardens comes with two garages — one for the family car and a second large enough to house a full-sized motor home. The oversized garages are a big draw for retirees who often have trouble finding a place with enough space to park their 40-foot homes-on-wheels.

The homes, which resemble scaled-down firehouses, sell for about $200,000. Nearly all are owned by couples who moved from out of state. Just two out of 100 are occupied by Tennesseans.

Nonetheless, the county's rapid growth, up 35 percent since 1990, has not come without difficulty.

The wave of new residents has strained Cumberland County's five rural water districts. The county is on pace to run out of water in the next five years — and will unless it can establish a regional water authority, Hill said.

Other services, such as road conditions and curbside garbage pickup, have been improved over the past 10 years with the new arrivals.

Woman's hoarding leads to legal pains

GRAND ISLAND, Neb. (AP) — Bonnie Gilpin's reluctance to throw anything away is getting her in some legal trouble.

For years, the city has tried to get her to clean up a house that she uses primarily for storage. She sleeps elsewhere.

City officials had warned that debris, piled up to 5 feet high in some places and to the ceiling in others, posed a risk of spontaneous combustion.

After a two-alarm fire caused more than $30,000 damage in August, City Attorney Charlie Cuypers went to court seeking permission to demolish the place.

On Tuesday, Gilpin submitted a clean-up plan, and the city agreed to wait until Oct. 12 before taking any further action. She also agreed to get a guardian to help with her affliction for hoarding junk, said her attorney, Sam Grimminger.

Assisted care facility is alternative to nursing home

By Alex Rose

An article faxed to me about "Innovative ways for seniors to get care without going to a nursing home" published in the May 21 edition of "U.S. News and World Report" caught my attention. Five years ago I brought my father to Midland from Dallas, where he first lived in an assisted care facility and then a nursing home before he died.

I am sure there is not one reader who wants to end up in a nursing home, and there are some alternatives to consider. One of AARP's top priority issues is making sure that those who do need to be in a nursing home get quality care.

AARP has been participating in a work group convened by Sen. Moncrief and as a result of this study is supporting an Omnibus nursing home bill, SB 1839, that will improve quality of care in nursing homes throughout the state of Texas.

The bill guarantees that the Quality of Care consultants and Rapid Response Teams will be available to help nursing homes but will not interfere with or impede the enforcement of quality of care standards by the Department of Human Services.

The bill requires that every nursing home carry liability insurance so that funds needed to provide care to residents will not be threatened by compensation paid to a victim of neglect or abuse.

The bill also allows nursing homes to apply for additional funds to use for the sole purpose of increasing staffing.

In addressing the alternatives to a nursing home, one answer is in the assisted living facilities. Instead of the shared rooms of a nursing home, residents live in private apartments, usually with a kitchenette and a bathroom. There is staff available to help a resident eat, bathe and dress. Housekeeping, laundry services and transportation are usually provided as well.

The nursing staff can supervise medications. Long-term care insurance policies usually pay for assisted living. These facilities also offer social interaction, exercise classes and van trips to museums and malls. The cost is usually less than in the nursing home but there aren't any federal laws regulating the construction or licensing of assisted living facilities.

Also, while Texas has enacted an Assisted Living Law, there are no provisions to assess penalties for failure to comply with standards. Without regulation and enforcement of quality standards, consumers are unprotected. Moncrief has proposed SB 527, which will provide a range of enforcement remedies aimed at providing better care to residents in assisted living facilities. This bill has passed the Senate and House Committees and is expected for a floor vote in the next few days.

A new twist to be considered is the assisted living at home concept. Sunrise Assisted Living, an industry founder 20 years ago, has begun providing the services of assisted living in a person's own home. An aide is sent to the home to help the person bathe, get dressed and prepare meals.

Technology provides a lifeline. The patient wears a bracelet with a button, which when pushed, summons help in an emergency. A new machine can be installed in the home that helps the patient take the right medications at the right time. A nurse fills the device, which is the size of a portable TV, and sits it in a convenient place. An alarm sounds when it's time to take a pill. If the patient does not take the pill, the system beeps the care center and a staffer will call the patient or a family member.

Families facing long-term care for a loved one have many pieces of the puzzle to put together including quality care and cost. I am thankful that my father was well enough to be part of the decisions made concerning his care during the last few years of his life.

Alexandria L. "Alex" Rose is district coordinator for the American Association of Retired Persons.

FAMILY MATTERS

There's no simple way to address child custody with a rule

By Jim May

DEAR FAMILY: My ex-husband is insisting on having our children for the entire month of July this year. I think that is too long for 12- and 9-year-old girls to be away from their mother. He doesn't have that much to do with them the rest of the year and misses his regular visitation pretty often. I think he is just doing this to get even with me because he knows it upsets me so much. I am a teacher and July is the best month for me to do things with the girls, too. Don't you think that an entire month is entirely too long for children to be away from their mother? I need something to tell him about this. — UPSET MOM

DEAR UPSET: The first part of your question can really be addressed by the terms of your divorce decree. Whatever it says, you must follow unless you can successfully petition the court to change it. While an entire month may seem like a long time, the court has been placed in the position of "playing Solomon" in a difficult situation. The non-custodial parent is an "equal" parent of the children and should have some uninterrupted time with the children, too. What I do believe should be addressed is the contact rules during that time. That is, something like "when the children are with the non-custodial parent for longer than two weeks, the custodial parent can visit them in person one night a week."

There is no simple way to address every case with a rule. For example, some custodial parents would use any contact with the children to make the situation even more difficult at the non-custodial parent's home. While I do believe most custodial parents would help the children adjust, the court tries to be fair and cannot be expected to address every situation.

If it is practical, I would encourage you to talk to your ex and see if he might be willing to let you see the girls periodically during the month of July. I doubt you can convince him to see things your way, but you may be able to successfully ask him. I am sorry it interrupts your time with the girls. It seems to work better when parents can accept that this is just one of the many problems with the legacy of divorce and work cooperatively to the benefit of their children.

A final note, even though you disagree with the situation, try to be as positive as you can be to the girls concerning their visit. You cannot change the length of time, but you can help them enjoy it a lot more.

The following tips on "whine busters" are offered by the Centers for Children and Families:

- Look for an obvious physical cause which may require your attention.
- Limit frustration. Be aware of your child's motor skills and provide age-appropriate toys that he can master.
- Encourage your child to express her feelings in words instead of whines.
- Demonstrate appropriate behavior. When both of you are in good humor, demonstrate the difference between the whiny voice and the normal voice.
- Ignore whining. Avoid communication and eye contact after you firmly remind him that you will not respond until his whining stops — and DON'T RESPOND.
- Try to avoid situations that are likely to bring about whining.
- Despite your best efforts, you still may need to accept a little whining.

DEAR ABBY

Kitchen creations improved by liberal dash of spirits

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter today about the lady who warned about drinking and cooking at the same time, because she fell asleep and almost burned the house down.

Ever since I was a child, my mother told me about how my great-grandfather, Charles Gabriel, would write hymns along with his good friend, Samuel Clemens. They would sit at the same table and share a bottle of gin between them while they created their celebrated masterpieces.

Today I do most of my creative work in the kitchen while drinking. I'm not driving. I usually have some beautiful music in the background, and never once have I "fallen asleep" like "Karen in Tampa" did. I enjoy every minute I spend in the kitchen, and so do those who join us at our dinner table.

Please don't give responsible drinkers a black eye. Just think what turn our American literature would have taken if we had removed that bottle of gin from Mark Twain's table 120 years ago. — ONE OF A LONG LINE OF DRINKERS

DEAR DRINKER: ... and Dashiell Hammett's and Dorothy Parker's and F. Scott Fitzgerald's, to name a celebrated few. Some of our gifted writers might have been "less entertaining," but they would have lived longer.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the article about the Easter lily causing the death of a cat, I thought I had better write to you.

Two years ago during our Easter dinner celebration, we moved our Easter lily to make room for some guests. We relocated it too close to our cockatiel, and after he nibbled some of the petals, we later found him dead. So, Abby, Easter lilies aren't safe for birds either. — MARGARET IN TUCSON

DEAR MARGARET: What a sad story. Perhaps the safest place for the Easter lily was on the poor little creature's grave. Bird lovers, be warned.

Dear Abby is written by Pauline Phillips. aka Abigail Van Buren, and daughter Jeanne Phillips. Their column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Southwest announcement

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Southwest Airlines will begin daily service from two gates at Norfolk International Airport in October, the low-fare carrier said Thursday.

The company will release its fare and flight schedules from Norfolk this summer.

Southwest Airlines also intends to offer flights from Richmond International Airport in the future, said Herb Kelleher, chairman, president and chief executive officer. But the Dallas-based company first needs to complete terminal expansion projects in several cities that would be desirable destinations for Richmond travelers, Kelleher said.

Pride, Marine announce merger

By Mark Babineck
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Pride International Inc. and Marine Drilling Companies Inc. announced Thursday they will merge in a $1.9 billion stock deal, creating the industry's third-largest offshore drilling contractor.

The merger forms "an extraordinary company with size, geographic scope and balance sheet flexibility," said Robert L. Barbanell, currently chairman of Marine Drilling. He will serve as chairman of the combined company, which will have 10,000 employees worldwide.

Paul A. Bragg, president and chief executive of Pride International, will continue in the same capacities. Bragg said any job cuts stemming from the merger would be "insignificant" in number.

The merger still requires approval by shareholders and the U.S. Justice Department, Bragg said.

The deal is part of a recent wave of consolidation in the drilling industry. The merger earlier this month of UTI Energy of Houston and Patterson Energy of Snyder, created the nation's second-largest land driller.

The largest offshore driller, Transocean Sedco Forex Inc., got even bigger last winter when it closed its purchase of R&B Falcon Corp. The company now accounts for about 22 percent of the worldwide offshore drilling fleet, more than double its nearest rival, Stifel Nicolaus & Co. analyst Andreas Vietor said.

Vietor and Bragg agreed the offshore industry is ripe for further mergers and acquisitions.

"Really, that's one of the reasons this is appealing to us," Bragg said. "It puts us in a position to be a participant if there is more consolidation."

Vietor added that more mergers might be inevitable as competitors strain against Transocean Sedco Forex's dominant position.

The company created by the latest deal will retain the Pride International Inc. name and will be overseen by an eight-member board split evenly between directors of the two current companies.

Under terms of the deal, shareholders of each company will receive one share of stock in the new company for each common share they own Pride or Marine Drilling. Pride shareholders will end up with 56 percent of the stock, while Marine Drilling shareholders will get 44 percent.

Measured by market capitalization, Pride International will be the third-largest offshore driller.

The combined company will have an offshore fleet of 77 rigs, including two drillships, 11 semi-submersible rigs, 35 jackup rigs, and 29 tender-assist, barge and platform rigs. Six of these rigs are new and can operate in water depths of 5,000 feet or more, the company said.

The company also will operate a fleet of 246 land rigs. It will be based in Houston, home of Pride International. Marine Drilling has been based in Sugar Land, a Houston suburb.

Pride, with about 8,800 employees, reported a first-quarter profit of nearly $12 million, compared with a nearly $7 million loss for the same period a year earlier.

Marine Drilling, with about 1,200 employees, had a $24 million first-quarter profit — more than quadruple profits of $4.8 million for the first quarter of 2000.

Pride International shares fell $5.40, or 16.5 percent, to $27.25 in Thursday morning trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Marine Drilling shares dropped $1.41, or 5 percent, to $26.31, also on the NYSE.

Stocks manage last-minute advance, investors trade with caution

By Amy Baldwin
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks ended an uneven session with moderate gains Thursday as investors vacillated between optimism and fear about the economy. The market also was trying to analyze the likely impact of the change in leadership in the Senate.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed the session up 16.91 at 11,122.42, according to preliminary calculations, after falling 60 points earlier in the session.

Wall Street's broader indicators followed the Dow's path, posting moderate gains late in the day. The Nasdaq composite index advanced 38.54 to 2,282.02, while the Standard & Poor's 500 index moved up 4.12 to 1,293.17.

Thursday's session was choppy from the start after Vermont Sen. James Jeffords announced, as expected, that he is leaving the Republican party to become an independent, ending GOP control of the Senate.

"Everyone is sort of going through their own analysis of what the effect the change in the legislature is going to have for various sectors in the market," said Charles White, portfolio manager for Avatar Associates.

But analysts said the market's fluctuation mostly came amid unease over the health of the economy. Investors were trading cautiously ahead of a speech Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan was scheduled to deliver Thursday night before the Economic Club of New York.

"The next quarter or two are going to be weak. We already know that. What we want to hear from the Fed chairman tonight is that the fourth quarter is going to bring recovery," White said. "The reason we have been rallying (recently) is on the hopes and dreams of the fourth quarter."

Adding to investors' nervousness about the economy was weak housing and employment news. The Commerce Department reported that new home sales posted their largest decline in four years in April as rising layoffs made Americans feel less secure about making big-ticket purchases.

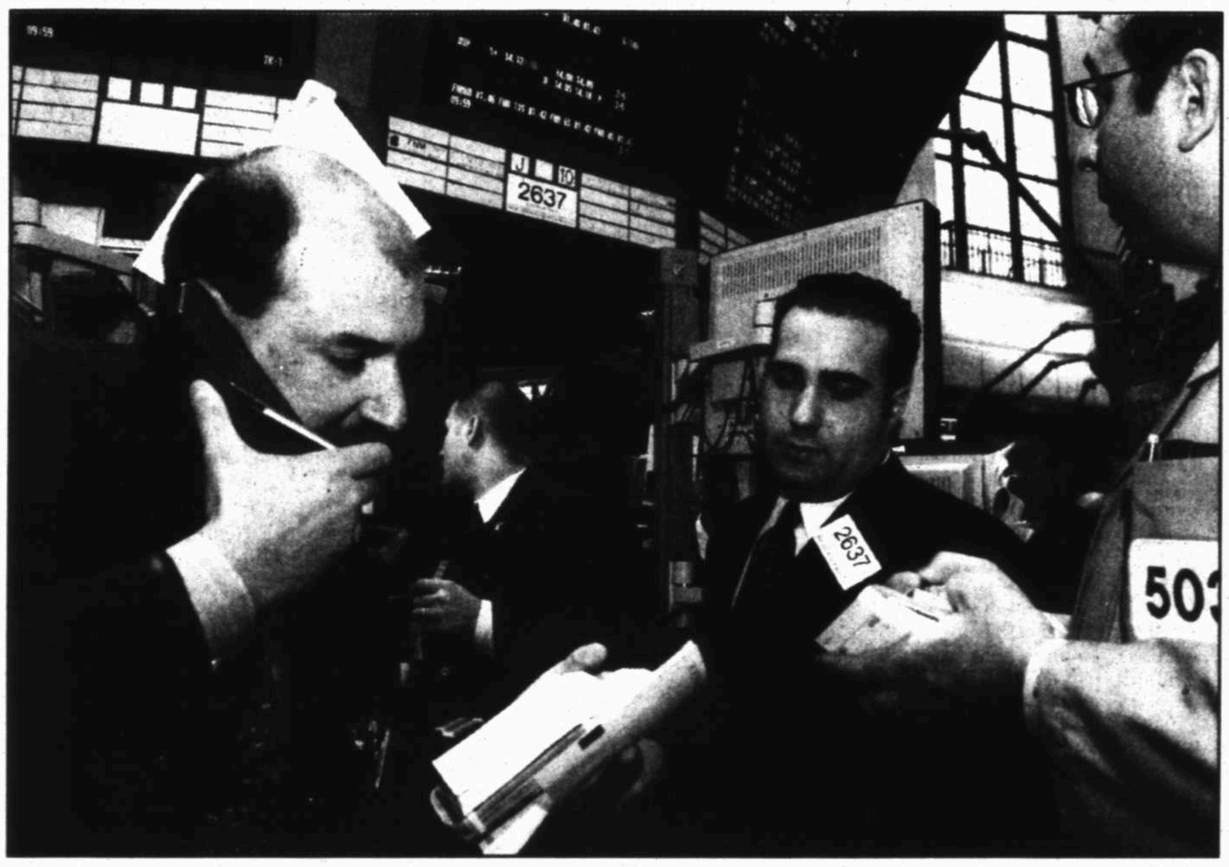

And, the Labor Department said that new claims for state unemployment insurance rose more sharply last week than analysts expected.

It was more difficult to gauge precisely how Jeffords' move was affecting the market, where some profit-taking had been expected following the market's big runup since early last month. Stocks have advanced primarily because of the five interest rate cuts by the Federal Reserve this year.

The Dow has jumped 1,732.94, an 18.5 percent increase, from its March low of 9,389.48. The Nasdaq has gained 461.18, or 25 percent, from its March low of 1,820.57.

The market also can't be expected to sustain such upward momentum as long as investors have reason to worry about the economy, said Alan Ackerman, executive vice president of Fahnestock & Co.

"The averages moved too far too fast without any real strong earnings development," Ackerman said. "The market has overreacted to the cumulative Fed rate cuts."

Electric utilities gear up for deregulation despite pilot program delays

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The state's electric customer choice pilot program is facing delays as computer system tests show more fine-tuning is needed.

Due to take effect June 1, those signed up for the program won't be switched to their chosen retail electric providers (REPs) until July. Beginning June 1, the Electric Reliability Council of Texas (ERCOT) will accept a limited number of requests to switch customers, with the system expanded to handle 21,000 switches a day by July 6. Some pilot customers won't begin receiving service from their new provider until late July or August and most will receive a June and July bill from their current provider and a bill from their new provider in August or September.

Full deregulation goes into effect January 1 and Pat Ennis, a partner in Priority Power in Midland expressed confidence that, despite delays in the pilot program, the system will have its problems worked out by then.

"The train has left the station," he said. "There's no going back."

He predicted Texas would have some problems as it transitions from a regulated electric utility industry to a deregulated industry, but not to the extent California has seen.

"It will be good for Texans, it will be good for the Texas economy," he said. "Over time, this will prove to be a good decision."

Terry Blair, Midland District Manager with TXU Electric & Gas, said "we've been doing a lot of training" in preparation for the pilot program. His department is responsible for the wire portion of the industry, making sure the electricity gets from the generating plant to the end user.

"A lot of the questions we get are 'What's going to happen down the road?' Well, we don't know until we get there," he said. "We have an idea, watching what happened in other states. A lot of work has been done on this, even to get to work on the pilot program."

Karen Springs, a spokeswoman for the Texas Electric Choice program of the Texas Public Utility Commission, said 17,000 households that are customers of TXU Electric, which serves the Midland-Odessa area, have signed up for the pilot program.

Businesses were more responsive, she said, which was to be expected because businesses were quicker to realize the economic impact of electric choice.

Since spring, households have been receiving brochures from providers like The New Power Company, a partnership of Enron, IBM and AOL Time Warner that offers customers a "guaranteed savings" plan that promises to always be lower than the local utility, or the "peace of mind" option that locks in a fixed rate for two years. Enticements include free December electric use and a $25 gift certificate from Home Depot.

Other providers in the Midland area include Green Mountain Energy, which gives its customers electricity generated 100 percent from wind power on wind farms within the state and offers its customers fixed-rate pricing.

Reliant Energy, the REP arm of Reliant, offers customers the choice of electricity from traditional sources or from renewable sources.

First Choice, the REP spun off from Texas-New Mexico Power Co., offers customers fixed rates to guard against fluctuating monthly bills, a sign-up credit and "legendary Texas-friendly approach to customer service."

Such choices, Ms. Springs said, are what deregulation is intended to accomplish.

"Find out what means more to you. If you want that $25 gift certificate or cash back, or if you want to support a local business operating a wind farm," she said.

Ennis agreed, saying that customers will be responsible for finding the best deal.

"Most customers will have to be proactive on their own to get the best prices," he said. "They'll have to be knowledgeable about the issues and prices so they know they got the best deal."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

A home can help you accomplish your financial goals

By Eric Tyson

Q: I don't see the financial virtue in owning a home. It seems to me that you spend lots of money over many years and then are saddled with the upkeep forever. So, why should I buy a home?

Tyson

A: Owning a home certainly isn't for everyone and certainly not for every year of your adult life. However, owning a home generally makes financial sense because as a long-term renter, your housing expenses are fully exposed to inflationary forces (unless you've got a deal with rent control).

Over the years that you own a home, its value should increase while you're paying down the mortgage. Thus, the equity (difference between the market value of the home less the mortgage debt owed) should increase.

Even though your home consumes a lot of money while you own it, it can help you accomplish important financial goals, such as retiring. By the time you hit your 50s and 60s, the size of your monthly mortgage payment should start to look small or nonexistent. Although other costs to owning a home exist — property taxes, maintenance and insurance — the mortgage is the big one. Low housing costs can help you afford to retire or cut back from a full-time workweek.

Increasingly, people are choosing to sell their homes and buy less-costly ones or even rent and use some or even all the cash to live on in retirement. Or some homeowners are enhancing their retirement income by taking out a reverse mortgage to tap the equity they have built up in their properties.

Another possible use for your home's equity is to use it toward accomplishing your dream of running your own business. Financial barriers prevent many people from pulling the plug on a regular job and taking the entrepreneurial plunge. You might be able to borrow against the equity you've built up in your home if you need cash to start up your business. Depending upon what type of business you have in mind, you might be able to have your office in your home.

Another common use for home equity is to help pay for educational costs for the kids.

Perhaps you won't make use of your home's equity for retirement, a small business, educational expenses or another important financial goal. But even if you decide to pass your home on to your children, a charity, or a long-lost relative, it's still a valuable asset.

Q: Why should I care about the consumer confidence numbers that are released monthly? I don't see what the big fuss is about a survey that asks people their personal opinion about what they think about the economy's future.

A: Consumer confidence is important because it does have a real and significant impact upon how people decide to spend their income. Personal spending is the largest factor in the United States' total economic output.

Confident consumers will spend more freely than consumers who have major worries. Consider, for example, how freely you will spend money if you think you are at risk of losing your job soon. While an imperfect measure, consumer confidence surveys try to capture how optimistic or pessimistic people are about their near-term financial futures.

Jeffords move undercuts Bush's political image

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — Suddenly, President Bush has lost control of his agenda.

Allowing Republican Sen. James Jeffords to slip from his grasp, Bush no longer will have the luxury of dealing with two GOP-run chambers in Congress. Once Jeffords organizes with Democrats, he'll make Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., the majority leader.

Democratic initiatives on the minimum wage, health care, prescription drugs, education and other issues will leap to the top of the Senate docket, shoving aside Bush's priorities. Democrats had forced Bush to table a few conservative judicial nominees this month, and now they'll hold even more sway.

If a Supreme Court seat opens up, Democrats will demand a say in filling it.

"Judges will have to be moderate. The president will get some he wants. We will get some we want," said Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., who sits on the Judiciary Committee.

Democrats had accused Bush of reneging on his pledges of bipartisanship by muscling conservative measures through the narrowly Republican Congress: tax cuts, abortion restrictions and a series of initiatives supported by big business or opposed by environmental groups.

With Jeffords' defection, Bush will either seek more compromises or face something close to gridlock.

He came into office knowing he had a fragile hold on Congress and a limited time to achieve his goals.

"Time. That's what Bush lost with Jeffords' decision," said Republican consultant Alex Castellanos. "We had a window to get things done. It just closed."

Though unapologetic for his party's stands, Bush pledged to cooperate with the new Democratic majority.

"I was elected to get things done on behalf of the American people and to work with both Republicans and Democrats — and we're doing just that," said Bush, who worked well with a Democratic Legislature as governor of Texas.

Aides said Bush accepted Jeffords' decision but reacted angrily to the Vermont lawmaker's claim that the White House budget plan would cause "misery in the school systems."

Desperate for a silver lining, some Republicans held out hope that an empowered Democratic leadership would drive moderates from their own ranks. However, GOP leaders and Bush advisers said they had little chance of replacing Jeffords with a wavering Democrat.

Several Democratic operatives said there could be a downside to Jeffords' switch: It could force Bush to strengthen his appeal to middle-of-the-road voters, making him a better candidate for re-election.

Five months into his presidency, Bush has not convinced swing voters that he is a new blend of Republican who can control the spread of government without weakening its powers to serve people.

"What we're seeing in polls in Michigan and the Midwest is the same sentiment raised by Jeffords: They still like George Bush, but they're not too sure that he's the compassionate conservative that he said he was," said Michigan pollster Ed Sarpolus.

His most recent polls show that Bush's negative rating has climbed 15 points since February.

Jeffords' departure — and the rhetoric that came with it — will only fuel doubts about Bush's ideology, said analysts in both parties.

Several Republican senators said party leaders need to change their ways.

"Perhaps those self-appointed enforcers of party loyalty will learn to respect honorable differences among us," said Sen. John McCain, who ran against Bush in the GOP primaries and has bucked the White House ever since.

It is too late to keep Jeffords.

Sen. Lincoln Chafee, a moderate Republican whom Democrats would like to steal away, has quietly asked for a White House meeting. He wants to improve his relationship with the president.

Newman-Smith squeezes past Midland High

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

ABILENE — Taking gambles on the base paths in high school baseball, especially at playoff time, often results in snake eyes, and Midland High's Region I-5A semifinal opponent, Carrollton Newman-Smith, proved that Thursday afternoon.

The Bulldogs sniffed out three Newman-Smith attempts to move runners up without the benefit of a hit, and they made the Trojans pay for it. But on other occasions, it was the Bulldogs who ended up watching their stakes disappear.

Newman-Smith scored all of its runs in two innings against Midland High, and squeezed home a pair of runs which ended up making the difference, as the Bulldogs fell 7-5 in the first game of the best-of-three series at McMurry University. The second game will be today at noon, and if Midland High wins, the decisive third game will immediately follow.

The Trojans more or less pecked the Bulldogs (28-7) to death with small ball, as none of their 10 hits went for extra bases. Newman-Smith scored three in the second inning and broke a tie by scoring four in the fifth, and in both innings they squeezed home a run with bunts. It's not as if this caught Midland High off guard.

- Carrollton Newman-Smith gets two runs — the difference in the game — on squeeze plays.
- MHS gets two-run homer from Daniel Stovall and two-run triple from Jayson Nix.
- Game 2 will start at noon at McMurry University in Abilene. If MHS wins, Game 3 will follow. For radio coverage, see 3C.

"They did it in the second and they did it again in the fifth," said MHS coach Barry Russell of the squeeze plays. "They squeezed a bunch this year, and we talked about where we wanted to pitch it, and we acted like we'd never seen it before."

Newman-Smith (22-4) scored the second run of the fifth in taking a 3-0 lead when Ryan Howard laid down a bunt with courtesy runner Aaron Ott on third base. MHS pitcher Matt Bose fielded the ball and looked toward home, then hesitated before throwing to first and retiring Howard, allowing Ott to score.

With the score tied 3-3 in the bottom of the fifth, the Trojans brought home two runs despite hitting only one ball out of the infield. An errant pickoff throw by Bose and a wild pitch brought home the first run of the inning before a single to left by Ty Wallace moved courtesy runner Steven Dirks to third with one out.

Newman-Smith then squeezed again with Gilbert Bustillos and yielded similar results to the first time, as Bose again hesitated after fielding the ball, allowing Dirks to score, and this time Bose's throw to first pulled Colby Overstreet off the bag. Trailing 5-3, Bose went

NJCAA National Golf Tournaments

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Central Alabama's Callie Burger tees off as Odessa College's John Wine watches during Thursday's third round of the NJCAA National Men's Golf Tournament, which is being played at Green Tree Country Club. Burger's team leads the tournament, and he leads the medalist race.

Central Alabama lengthens lead

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

The Green Tree Country Club golf course played a little tougher Thursday during the third round of the NJCAA National Men's Golf Tournament but it still wasn't enough to shake up the leaders.

Going into today's final round, Central Alabama holds on to the lead with a 284—851 (13-under par) total, followed by Odessa College with a 288—858 (6-under par), and Scottsdale (Ariz) Community College at 293—861 (3-under par). Those three teams were the only ones with under par totals. New Mexico Military Institute dropped further out of contention with a 9-over par 297 on Thursday but the Broncos remain in fourth place with an three-day total of 6-over par 870.

Midland College remained in ninth place but slipped even further away from the leaders with a 301 on Thursday. At 886, the Chaparrals are now 35 shots off the pace, meaning a national championship is impossible unless the eight teams ahead of them suffer some sort of collapse, which is highly unlikely. Instead, the Chaps are hoping to continue their string of top 6 finishes at the national tournament. The last time the Chaps finished lower than sixth was in 1988, their first of 14 straight national tournament appearances, with a 12th place showing.

"The course played difficult today because of pin placements and the wind picking up made it more difficult," said Midland College coach Delnor Poss. "I think the guys were trying hard but I think they were trying too hard. We got off to a poor start. As a team, we played the last 15 holes 1-over par, which was a good score today. It's just those first four holes got us in trouble."

None of the Chaps shot par or better on Thursday as freshman Nick Schumacher carded the best MC round of the day with a 2-over 74.

"Nick played consistent today," Poss said. "But again, we're looking for that one round where we have four players play really well. It hasn't happened yet but I hope it happens (today)."

The Chaps need a good round from every player if they want to continue their streak of 12 consecutive top 6 finishes. They are going to have to make up nine strokes if they want to reach that goal. It's not impossible but the Chaps have yet to show improvement playing on their home course.

"I thought we would play consistently around par a lot more," Poss said. "The course is playing

Lady Chaps capture 3rd straight title

- Midland College's Angela Finlay adds individual crown to team title at women's national tournament.

Staff Report

SHAWNEE, Okla. — The Midland College Lady Chaparral golf team has gone through several peaks and few valleys this year. On Thursday, the Lady Chaps went to the highest peak by winning their third straight NJCAA National Championship.

Women's NJCAA Leaderboard

Midland	1,264
McLennan	1,285
Tyler JC	1,361

For the third straight day, the Lady Chaparrals shot a 313 to end up with a four-round total of 1,264, finishing 21 shots ahead of rival McLennan Community College and 97 strokes ahead of Tyler Junior College. These same three teams have battled for or have won the national championship the last five years.

Leading the way for the Lady Chaparrals was freshman Angela Finlay from Scotland, who won the national medalist title. Finlay is the third straight Lady Chap to win the national medalist title, and all three hail from Scotland. Last year, Pam Mackay won the title, and in 1999, Linzi Morton won the crown. Finlay finished with a four-round total of 299.

Finlay had to hold off teammate and fellow Scot Pamela Feggans, who finished with a 306 total and earned first team All-America status. McLennan's Beatriz Conti of McLennan was third with a 312 total.

Finlay and Feggans weren't the only Lady Chaps to earn some sort of All-America status. Freshman Stephanie Smith from Phoenix finished in sixth place with a 323 total and received second-team All-America honors. Freshman Mandy Chappell from Fallon, Nev., captured honorable mention All-America honors for her 13th place finish with a 337 total.

Freshman Abby Lasater from Cleburne missed garnering honorable mention honors with a 19th place finish, carding a 343 total. Only the top 15 individuals receive some sort of All-America status.

But this day was an accomplishment for the entire team who had to play the tournament without coach Joe Williams, who was dismissed from his duties as coach by Midland College for unspecified reasons just a couple of weeks before the start of the national tournament. Playing without the coach who had recruited them and taught this all-freshman squad for most of the year must have been a huge distraction for the team. Assistant

No Smoking Penske takes Marlboro ads off of his cars

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — There's no gas in Gasoline Alley, no carburetors on Carburetion Day — and no Marlboro in Marlboro Team Penske.

Just three days before the Indianapolis 500, Roger Penske's racing team agreed to remove the Marlboro name from its cars Thursday to avoid a possible violation of the 1998 tobacco settlement.

The decision left Gil de Ferran and Helio Castroneves driving cars with plain white sidepods — usually the sign of a low-budget team that lacks major sponsorship.

"I'm just here to race," Castroneves said, looking at the blank spot on his car as it sat in the garage in Gasoline Alley before the final practice. "Maybe they should put our names — Helio and Gil."

The race won't be smoke-free, however.

Hollywood, a leading brand of cigarettes in Brazil, will have its name on Felipe Giaffone's car Sunday. The settlement does not cover foreign companies that sell outside the United States.

A Team Penske crew practices for the pitstop competition Thursday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Roger Penske's Indy team was forced to remove the Marlboro name from its cars before Thursday's final practice for the Indianapolis 500 to avoid violating the 1998 tobacco settlement.

Thus, "Marlboro Team Penske" joins the lexicon of such outdated Indy terms as Gasoline Alley and Carburetion Day — the cars haven't used gasoline since the mid-1960s and carburetors were last seen here more than 40 years ago.

Penske's cars carried the Marlboro brand name and logo during qualifying and most practice sessions this month.

But the National Association of Attorneys General, a group of state officials who oversaw the tobacco settlement, raised questions about the legality of promoting Philip Morris at Sunday's Indy 500.

Under the settlement, Penske's team is allowed to use the Marlboro name when it competes on the Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART) circuit.

The Indy 500, however, is sanctioned by the rival Indy Racing League. Penske, who was part of a CART boycott of Indy

Allen comes up big for Bucks in Game 2 triumph over 76ers

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Ray Allen was masterful. Allen Iverson was miserable.

Allen gave Milwaukee a big lead right at the start and silenced the Philadelphia 76ers with clutch jumpers every time they made a run Thursday night, scoring a career playoff-high 38 points as the Bucks evened the Eastern Conference finals at one game apiece with a 92-78 victory.

"I was making shot after shot, Sam (Cassell) was finding me and I said, 'Let's continue to keep doing this,'" Allen said.

That's exactly what they did, with Allen repeatedly snuffing out every Philadelphia threat with an assortment of jumpers from inside the 3-point line and beyond it.

Playing in the same arena where he scored 42 points earlier this season to set what was then a career-high, Allen was in a groove all night as he shot 15-for-24 overall and 7-for-11 on 3-pointers.

"I love this gym," Allen said. "Playing against Allen brings out the best in me."

Allen also did an excellent job of defending Iverson, who shot just 5-for-26 from the field — missing 11 straight shots at one point — for 16 points. Allen's job was made easier by the fact that Iverson was slowed considerably by a bruised hip and buttocks.

"I would like for him to stay at home and miss the next game so he has three or four days' rest, but I'm going to get overruled by him on that one," Philadelphia coach Larry Brown said.

Iverson, however, did not rule out that possibility.

"If I play like this, if it's hurting my team, I need to start thinking about myself, too. It's getting worse, not getting any better," he said. "When it's getting worse, it's something you have to think about."

Game 3 in the best-of-seven series is Saturday at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee's "Big Three" of Allen, Glenn Robinson and Cassell scored the

Studying videotape helps Rodriguez pull out of funk

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Alex Rodriguez didn't rest well after a poor performance. Instead, he stayed up late and watched himself on videotape.

"Let's just say I did a little homework," he said after hitting two homers and driving in five runs to lead the Texas Rangers over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays 9-3 Thursday night.

"In a long season you have to review and revise some of things you've done well and the things you haven't done well. I took some time in the video room at the hotel and saw some good things. There was a lot of positive reinforcement. You lock it into your brain and go from there."

Rodriguez hit a two-run homer off Tanyon Sturtze (1-4) in the first inning and added a three-run shot off Mickey Callaway in the sixth for his fourth two-homer game this season.

Ten of his 17 homers have come in May, tying Juan Gonzalez's club record for the month.

"You see him get his two, three, four hits every night to drive in two or three runs and you get used to seeing it," Rangers pitcher Rick Helling said. "I guess that shows you how special the player is when you kind of take for granted the things that he does."

Rodriguez went 3-for-4 with a walk, hiking his batting average 10 points to .330.

Helling (2-6), meanwhile, pitched eight solid innings, allowing three runs and nine hits to win for the first time since April 22. The right-hander walked one and struck out five as his ERA dropped from 7.19 to 6.72.

"Obviously, numbers-wise it was my best outing of the year," Helling said. "I threw closer to like I usually throw. I think my mechanics are getting closer to how they're supposed to be. I'm not where I want to be yet, but I'm definitely closer. Tonight was a step in the right direction."

Rodriguez made up for striking out three times and stranding seven runners in a 10-6 loss to the Devil Rays on Wednesday night. He has seven homers and 20 RBIs in his last 13 games, and the Rangers have homered in a club-record 17 straight games since May 6.

"It burned me a lot," Rodriguez said of striking out once with the bases loaded and another time with a runner on third with Texas trailing 7-6. "I take that stuff personal when I get an opportunity to do some damage or put us ahead."

Texas scored twice in the first, fourth and fifth innings to build a 6-2 lead.

Ken Caminiti and Ivan Rodriguez both had two-run doubles off Sturtze, who allowed six runs and seven hits in five innings. A-Rod's second homer made it 9-3 and gave him the 19th multihomer game of his career.

Tampa Bay, which hasn't won consecutive games since April 24-25, scored on Randy Winn's RBI double in the second, Greg Vaughn's 12th homer in the fourth and a RBI single by Andy Sheets in the fifth.

"We hung in there and seemed to be building momentum," Devil Rays manager Hal McRae said. "But the three-run homer in the sixth inning did us in."

Bulldogs host Roughriders

ANDREWS — After Saturday's 13-8 win over the Texas Roughriders, the Basin Bulldogs take a home game on the road to Andrews this week.

Saturday night graduation ceremonies at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium, normally the home field for the 'Dogs, gives the franchise and the UPFL an opportunity to take minor league football action to one of the basin's surrounding communities.

Since their 13-6 loss to Garland eight weeks ago, the Bulldogs have trailed the Wranglers by a game. That ended this week when Garland recorded a loss to the Vernon Jaguars, putting the Bulldogs in first place in the UPFL North at 5-3 and Garland one game behind them at 4-3.

Saturday, the Dogs host the Stampede from San Antonio in the Mustang Bowl in what could prove to be a preview of this year's championship game in San Antonio on July 20 since they are the two current number one teams in their respective divisions. They could meet again in San Antonio's Alamodome for the UPFL title.

This week's contest is Game 2 of a four-game homestand for the 'Dogs. The Bulldogs are back from a long trip and a tough loss in Mexico to the Regios two weeks ago. Game 1 of the homestand was on May 19 at Ratliff against the Roughriders. The last two games of the homestand will be on June 2 and June 9.

In addition to the on-field action at the Mustang Bowl, a halftime sky diving exhibition, presented by West Texas Skysports of Stanton, is slated if wind conditions permit.

Returning to the lineup for the Basin team is tailback Sam Powell.

Riek wins Cup Net title

Ruth Ann Riek posted a two-round 142 this week to win the Ladies President's Cup Net Tournament at Midland Country Club.

Treva Gieb and Liz Young tied at 143 for second place.

Tournament Results: 1. Ruth Ann Riek, 71-71-142; 2. (tie) Treva Gieb, 70-73-143; Liz Young, 74-69-143; 4. Cristi Branum, 73-72-145; 5. (tie) Mary Emma Bennett, 74-72-146; Carolyn Roden, 71-75-146.

Most Improved (from day one to day two): Liz Young from a 74 to a 69.

Jacks complete two trades

ODESSA — The Odessa Jackalopes have wrapped up some unfinished business, completing a pair of mid-season trades.

The Jacks have acquired the rights to defenseman Patrick Charbonneau from the El Paso Buzzards, completing a trade in which the Jacks sent forward Dave Gourde to the Buzzards en exchange for a player to be named later.

The Jacks have also sent the right of forward Tim Hill to Fort Worth to complete a deal that sent defenseman Mike Rusk to the Brahmas and brought forward Chris Peach to the Jacks.

In each trade the clubs acquired the player's rights only, meaning each club must negotiate a contract with the acquired player.

'Hounds hold on in El Paso

Staff Report

EL PASO — The RockHounds continued their four-game win streak but it didn't come easy against the El Paso Diablos.

After taking a 7-2 lead, the 'Hounds had to hold on for a 7-6 victory. Midland has now won 14 out of the last 17 games and are just 2 1/2 games behind idle Round Rock in the Texas League West Division.

In the first inning, Midland got on the board with a solo home run by Todd Mensik, his 12th of the year, and then added another run later when Oscar Salazar doubled home Jacques Landry.

The 'Hounds made it 3-0 in the fourth when Brian Luderer singled home Mandy Romero.

El Paso crawled to within 3-2 with a run in the third and another run in the fourth.

Midland again opened the gap with four runs in the fifth, highlighted by a Ryan Ludwick's two-run single off John Patterson (0-1).

El Paso made it interesting in the bottom of the sixth with four runs of its own off Midland starter Mario Ramos (6-1), in a rare bad outing. On the first pitch of the inning, Mike Rose homered to right field. Later in the inning, Doug Devore had another two-run home run to right field. Then, just two pitches later, Chris Lemonis homered to right-center to close to within 7-6.

But Midland relief pitching stepped it up, starting with Chris Enochs, who got the RockHounds out of the sixth inning and pitched a scoreless seventh. Claudio Galva then came in to shut the door in the final two innings to earn his fifth save. Galva has been spectacular as he has allowed juts two runs (one earned) in his last 20 appearances. In the last 22 1/3 innings of work, Galva has a 0.40 ERA.

to a 2-0 count on Gabriel Marchant before he was pulled.

"His curveball and fastball were up and he let that kind of take him out of the game a little bit," said Russell of Bose, who walked five. "I still don't think he pitched all that badly."

Reliever Robert Friday gave up three straight singles, none of which were hit all that hard, allowing two more runs to score and make it 7-3. Those two runs would be huge.

The Bulldogs also broke through on two separate innings against Newman-Smith ace Mike McGowan, who has been clocked in the low 90s on the radar gun. Midland High tied it at 3-3 in the fourth on an RBI groundout by James Gripp before sophomore Daniel Stovall belted a two-run homer to left-center. It was the third homer of the playoffs for Stovall, who didn't hit any during the regular season.

Stovall's homer seemed to be a wake-up call for McGowan, who retired the next nine batters.

"He has a good fastball, but what people don't talk about is his change-up," said Russell of McGowan. "He was out of the first three innings without us making him work. You can be aggressive but you have to be selective too."

With one out in the top of the seventh, McGowan's string of retired batters ended when he walked Tony Esslinger. Michael Forrest reached on an error and Jason South flew out to right, leaving it up to Jayson Nix to keep the game alive.

Nix, perhaps the team's postseason MVP, didn't disappoint as he belted a two-run triple to center to make the Trojans feel at least a little uncomfortable.

"He did a good job of mixing his pitches up," said Nix of McGowan. "You've got to keep from thinking fastball too much and be ready to sit on the pitch in certain situations. He's got other pitches in his back pocket."

With Nix on third, though, McGowan struck out James Smith on three pitches to end the ball game.

Midland High, which saw its four-game playoff winning streak end, now finds itself in the same position as it did back at the beginning of the playoffs. The Bulldogs lost the first game of their area round series to El Paso Eastwood in 11 innings, then recovered to win two the next day and advance.

"I've already told (the team) we're going to play a doubleheader tomorrow," said Russell, who said he still hasn't decided on today's starting pitcher. "So we're going to get ready to play two."

Should the Bulldogs win today at noon, that would wipe the slate clean, which is all they're looking to do.

"You can't think about (losing the first game) because it's over," said Nix. "We're totally confident that we can go in and win two times. We've got to hit a little more and do everything better."

Newman takes Coca-Cola pole

Associated Press

CONCORD, N.C. — A rookie revived the youth movement at the Coca-Cola 600 on Thursday night, with 23-year-old Ryan Newman winning the pole for NASCAR's longest race of the year after qualifying was delayed more than two hours by rain.

Newman ran a lap of 185.217 mph around Lowe's Motor Speedway, quick enough to hold off heavyweights like Jeff Gordon and Rusty Wallace, both of whom qualified after him.

"It's super big for us," Newman said. "I never imagined it, but the weather conditions helped a lot for the speeds and I had a great race car."

Gordon tried his best to knock off Newman, but his speed of 184.900 mph only earned him the second spot.

"I gave it everything I had and just came up second," said Gordon, who won The Winston last Saturday and has started from the pole seven times on the 1.5-mile track.

"Ryan was fast, he put a great lap up there and I knew no one was going to touch it."

Todd Bodine qualified third, followed by Bill Elliott in a Dodge and Jimmy Spencer. Kevin Harvick was sixth, followed by Mike Skinner and Johnny Benson. Ward Burton and Mark Martin rounded out the Top 10.

Newman's pole comes on the heels of Dale Earnhardt Jr. starting from the front last year and Matt Kenseth going on to win the race. Both were rookies.

Earnhardt Jr. qualified 19th on Thursday, and Kenseth needed a provisional to make the field, running the slowest lap of the night at 179.724. He'll start 40th.

Newman, a future Winston Cup teammate of Wallace and Jeremy Mayfield, actually isn't even a rookie this year.

He's not eligible to compete for Rookie of the Year because he's running an "ABC" schedule for Penske Racing South this season — competing in a blend of ARCA, Busch and Cup races.

INDY: Penske will race without ads

the last five years, decided to return this year with cars that met IRL guidelines.

CART opened a slot on its schedule to allow its teams to compete in the Indy 500. Penske thought that made it possible for his teams to retain the Marlboro name for Sunday's race.

"We came to Indianapolis based on CART sanctioning the Indy race for CART teams," Penske said. "To me, this is an international event, like the Masters, which is open to everyone."

The issue may simply be a matter of semantics. While CART allowed its teams to race at Indy this year, IRL is the sanctioning body for the race.

The Indy 500 is part of the IRL's 13-race schedule and does not count toward the season championship in CART.

Also, Penske removed the Marlboro name from his cars when they took part at an IRL event in Phoenix this year as a warmup for Indy.

"The company has argued that CART gave permission for its teams to participate in IRL," said Sean Connolly, a spokesman for the Pennsylvania attorney general's office, which oversees enforcement. "While that may be true, there's different rules, different cars. We believe they are two separate events."

Cigarette companies, a major backer of auto racing, have come under increased scrutiny in recent years around the world.

R.J. Reynolds maintained its sponsorship of Winston Cup racing, but abandoned support of NASCAR's short-track series. Formula One teams are not allowed to display cigarette advertising for grand prix events in England and Germany.

Under the 1998 settlement, cigarette companies are allowed to keep just one "brand sponsorship," which applies to athletic, musical, artistic, or other social or cultural event.

The Marlboro name was removed from Penske's cars before they went out for Thursday's practice, and it had also been taken off the sign above the team's garage.

However, Penske and his crew were still wearing clothing with the "Marlboro Team Penske" logo. With two off days before the race, he has time to line up generic driving suits, pit attire and pit equipment.

And don't forget the welcome mat at the garage. It still bore the cigarette's brand name.

"We think this is the right thing to do," said Penske, whose team is racing at Indy for the first time since 1994. "It's important that we run the race."

Brendan McCormick, a spokesman for Philip Morris, said his company would maintain its financial support of Team Penske for the race, even though it won't benefit from the exposure.

Philip Morris has sponsored Team Penske for 11 years and will have the Marlboro name back on the car for the June 3 CART race at Milwaukee.

NBA: Bucks even series at 1-1

(From 1C)

Bucks' first 30 points, and Milwaukee held a double-digit lead for 39 of the final 43 minutes.

Robinson finished with 16 points and Cassell had 14 points and 11 assists for the Bucks, who went to the free throw line only six times all game and were outrebounded by 11. Milwaukee made only two free throws, the fewest ever in an NBA playoff game.

The main reason for the Bucks' lack of free throws — Philadelphia, by comparison, was 24-of-30 — was the shooting prowess of Allen, who also had six assists and six rebounds.

Allen had extra energy on the offensive end because he didn't have to expend much chasing Iverson around.

"He poses such a matchup problem because he's quick, but we know that he's hobbled a little bit and now's the time we have to take advantage of him being disabled," Allen said. "He stands funny. He stands like an old man now, holding his back and holding his tail bone when he walks."

Aaron McKie had 21 points and Dikembe Mutombo added 18 points and 20 rebounds for the Sixers, whose hopes for a comeback were dashed by Allen time after time.

Allen gave Milwaukee its first 10-point lead on a 3-pointer with 4:48 left in the first, and Allen's third 3-pointer of the quarter gave Milwaukee a 30-15 lead. To that point, Allen, Robinson and Cassell combined to shoot 13-for-17 from the field.

The Bucks cooled off in a major way in the second quarter, missing 12 consecutive shots. But the 76ers trimmed just seven points off their deficit over that 5 1/2-minute span, and the Bucks held a 49-37 halftime lead as Allen had 20 points.

"The key was when we got them to miss in the second quarter and didn't make much of a dent," Brown said.

Robinson started the third quarter with a 3-pointer and a jumper, and Cassell followed with a jumper to put the Bucks ahead 56-37. The Sixers got back within 10 as Iverson got his eighth assist on a jumper by McKie that made it 59-49, but Allen answered quickly with a 3-pointer and a jumper.

Philadelphia again got within 10 on a jumper by Iverson with 2:11 left in the third, but Allen — who else? — knocked down a 3-pointer to end yet another threat.

Allen's final demoralizer was a 3-pointer with 9 1/2 minutes left in the fourth quarter after the Sixers had pulled to 71-60 on a basket by Rodney Buford.

Allen scored five straight points to make it 82-67 with 6:47 left, and the fans began streaming toward the exits with 3:30 left.

"I think the series just began," Bucks coach George Karl said. "I always said a series doesn't begin until a road team wins."

MEN: Wranglers trail by 7 strokes

more difficult because of pin placements, but that is just something you have to adjust to. I'm hoping for that par round (today). We've talked about having that streak of not finishing lower than in the top 6, and I think that's a goal that is achievable, and that's something we should work toward. I think when you get into this scenario you should set reasonable goals. I think finishing in the top 6 is a reasonable goal for us."

Central Alabama's goal remains in winning its third straight national championship before the program is terminated for budget reasons. The Trojans rode into Green Tree this week and have performed brilliantly. On Thursday, the Trojans added another sub-par round with a 284.

"Central Alabama has played outstanding," Poss said. "I'm proud of (Central Alabama coach John Sadie). He gets the job done at tournament time."

"We had some great production out of our Nos. 4 (Steve Spivey) and 5 (Taylor Kush) men," said Sadie of his team's third-round play. "They stepped it up very nicely today with a 69 and a 70 because Callie (Burger) was struggling today. What's funny is in the last two years that we've won it, we've never had to count our No. 5 man. This year, we've got a No. 5 man who we've got a lot of confidence in."

Even though Burger shot a 73 on Thursday, the sophomore stands three shots ahead of Odessa College's Jamie McLeary and Scottsdale's Derek Scullard in the medalists standings with a 207 total.

"Callie's main goal is to play his role on the team," Sadie said. "Everybody has a role on the team and it all comes before individuals."

McLeary was huge for Odessa on Thursday with a 69. That score, along with OC's No. 5 Tim Sanchez shooting a 72, has the Wranglers in the thick of the national championship race.

"We're right there in contention and that's all you can ask for going into the final round," said OC coach Paul Chavez.

McLeary and Sanchez stepped up big for OC after John Wine, the Wranglers' No. 1 player, had an awful day with an 81. Wine was given a two-shot penalty during his round because he played with the wrong ball on one of the greens.

"John had just about all the bad luck in the world today," Chavez said. "But luckily, this is team golf and the others guys really stepped it up."

The Wranglers are one of the teams hoping to catch up to the Trojans but that may be a little tough to do considering the way the Trojans have been playing in this tournament.

"They are very focused on their personal goals and they are sticking to our business at hand," Sadie said. "We just need to continue to concentrate on our goals. We're not going to get caught up on how we stand with anybody. We have a game plan and we're simply going to continue to stick to it. And after 18 holes (today), we're going to see how we stand. We have a great respect for all the teams in this field but all we can do is concentrate on our own business."

Today's final round begins at 7:30 a.m. today with Midland College teeing off from the No. 1 East. The top three teams in Central Alabama, Odessa and Scottsdale also tee off from the No. 1 East, beginning at 9 a.m.

WOMEN: Lady Chaps win by 21 shots

(From 1C)

men's basketball coach Scott Raines took over the coaching duties on an interim basis.

After the first round of play on Monday, the dismissal of their coach might have been a distraction after the Lady Chaps shot a 325 and trailed McLennan by 12 shots. McLennan has been the Lady Chaps biggest junior college competition over the last three years.

The Lady Chaps, however, would regroup on Tuesday, making up 11 strokes with a 313. On Wednesday, they took over the lead with another 313, and on Thursday, they put the exclamation point on their championship with another 313.

Prior to the tournament, some of the Lady Chaps had said they would dedicate this tournament to Williams, and with a resounding victory over the Highlassies, they surely made their former coach proud by winning their ninth tournament in 11 tries this year.

'Pearl Harbor' opens today with special premieres, much critique

Editors' Note: With all the buzz generated around today's opening of the Jerry Bruckheimer film "Pearl Harbor," we in Reviews & Previews decided to do a Pearl Harbor briefs column that includes portions of the stories that have flooded The Associated Press wire in recent days.

TODAY IN MIDLAND

Special "Pearl Harbor" showing in Midland to benefit Texas veterans

A special showing of "Pearl Harbor" will take place at 12:30 p.m. today at the Tall City 10 in Midland to benefit Texas State Veterans Homes.

Special rates will apply to World War II veterans for this showing only. The movie theater is located at 4915 W. Loop 250 North, in Midland.

"I urge everyone in Midland and Odessa to see this movie," said Texas Land Commissioner David Dewhurst, who announced the showing earlier this week. "It reminds us of the debt we owe our brave veterans. We must always remember that the peace we enjoy today was made possible through their sacrifices."

"PEARL HARBOR" FILM PREMIERE IN HAWAII

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii — Disney transformed a Navy aircraft carrier into a mammoth moviehouse for the launch of its summer blockbuster, "Pearl Harbor."

Hollywood stars, military brass and World War II veterans were among 2,000 guests at Monday night's premier on the flight deck of the USS John C. Stennis at Pearl Harbor. The movie opens in theaters today.

The $5 million premier party promised to match the extravagance of the $140 million film — starring Ben Affleck, Kate Beckinsale and Josh Hartnett — with what producer Jerry Bruckheimer called "one of the biggest fireworks displays ever."

The Stennis was moored a few hundred yards from ground zero of the Dec. 7, 1941, attack that drew the United States into World War II. The ship is opposite the memorial for some 900 crew of the USS Arizona who went down with the battleship in the first 30 minutes of the surprise attack.

Also nearby was the USS Missouri battleship, on whose deck Japan signed surrender documents in 1945.

JAPANESE DISTRIBUTOR EXPECTS 'PEARL HARBOR' TO BE SUMMER HIT

TOKYO — As promoters of the blockbuster "Pearl Harbor" prepared for the film's Hawaii premiere, its Japanese distributor also expected a big hit — despite the potentially sensitive topic.

The movie's content is not inflammatory to the Japanese because it's not trying to make a political or social statement, said Yoko Kishi, spokeswoman for the distributor Buenavista International Japan.

"We're confident that the film can appeal to a wide audience, from the young to the old," Kishi said. "It's entertainment, a love story."

SHY FLYBOY ROLE COMES EASIER THAN FAME TO 'PEARL HARBOR' STAR

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii — Josh Hartnett sighs, shakes his head and laughs at yet another mention of that word.

"Heartthrob," he says. It won't sink in. "I'm not prepared at all. I just tend not to think about it."

But reminders of Hartnett's new status were everywhere ahead of the release today of the $135 million blockbuster "Pearl Harbor," in which he co-stars with Ben Affleck and Kate Beckinsale.

The boyishly handsome Minnesotan, who plays fictional Army fighter pilot Danny Walker, was pictured on a 30-foot-high promotional poster on the USS John C. Stennis aircraft carrier, where the movie premiered Monday.

"It's weird to see your face about as big as the rest of your body," he says. "But when it comes down to it, it's one of those things that I'll remember for a long time, so why not?"

Director Michael Bay says Hartnett almost didn't pass the audition.

"He was the first guy through the door, and I'm like, 'I could never hire the first guy through the door.' He was this grunge kid from Minnesota," Bay says. "As soon as I screen-tested him, I knew. I got so excited, I called (producer Jerry Bruckheimer) on the phone. I said, 'Jerry, this guy is awesome.'"

The explosive epic is Hartnett's biggest film so far, by a long shot. At 22, his credits include last year's critically acclaimed drama "The Virgin Suicides," the teen romance "Here on Earth," the black comedy "Blow Dry" and his feature film debut, the 1998 horror flick "Halloween: H20."

BAY MADE 'PEARL HARBOR' TRUE TO HIS VISION

Michael Bay's head was going to explode.

The hotshot movie director, known for such bombastic escapist hits as "Armageddon," "Bad Boys" and "The Rock," had been hooked by a Disney executive's concept of an epic romance set against Japan's Dec. 7, 1941, attack on the U.S. naval base at Pearl Harbor — the fiery debacle that brought America into World War II.

Though it seemed impossibly expensive to re-create the air-sea battle with 21st-century visuals, Bay nevertheless made six trips to Hawaii, thought long and hard about how a photo-realistic version could be physically and virtually restaged, and even figured out how it could be financed practically.

The price was high — ultimately, $135 million with a $5 million overage contingency, the most expensive budget a studio has ever approved, although far less than some blockbusters have wound up costing — but financially feasible.

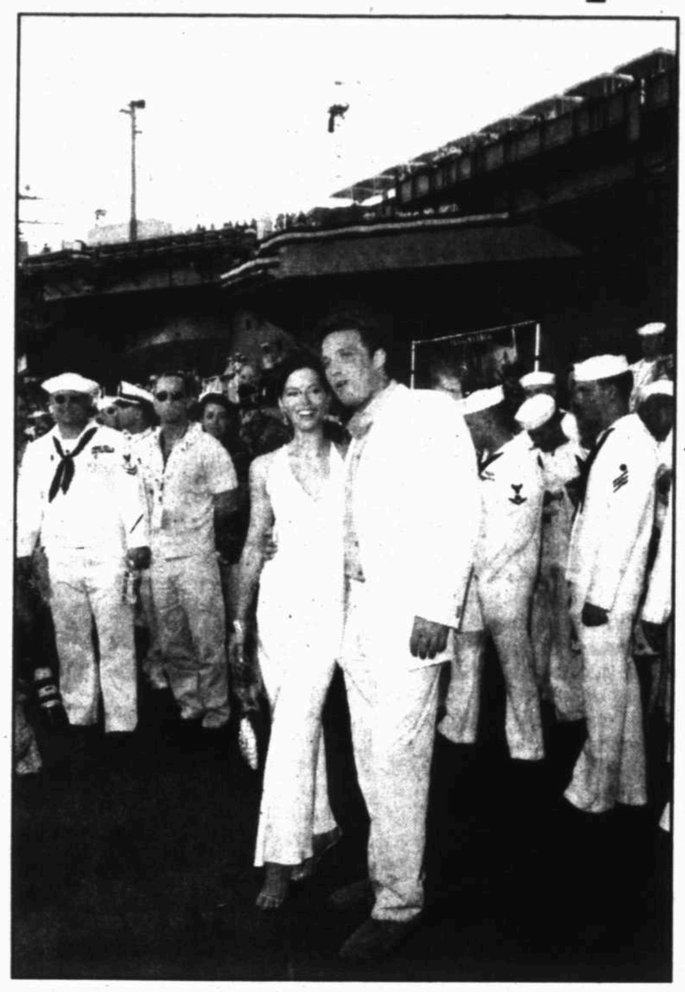

Understandably, though, Disney kept saying no, the price tag was too high.

"I wanted to do a more serious movie because I had done the popcorn thing three movies in a row," says the 36-year-old Bay. "But I'm the type of director that really shoots the whole movie in my head before I get to the set. The emotionally frustrating thing, when the movie wasn't being green-lit, was to have the whole thing stuck in your head. You want to release it, get it out and put it on film; you know what it's like, but you're the only one who does."

Starting today, America will see Bay's vision. Starring Ben Affleck and Josh Hartnett as childhood friend flyboys and Kate Beckinsale as the Army nurse they both love, "Pearl Harbor" endeavors to combine a "Titanic"-style romance with some 40 screen minutes' worth of the attack and its immediate aftermath. And more. The three-hour film also presents a grand historical sweep of World War II events, from the Battle of Britain before America's entry into the conflict to James H. Doolittle's April 1942 bombing raid on Tokyo, from the Japanese command's preparations for the surprise strike to President Franklin Roosevelt's reaction in Washington, D.C.

FILM: Some critics question accuracy of 'Pearl Harbor'

(From 1E)

Scripted by "Braveheart's" Randall Wallace and co-produced by Bay's longtime collaborator Jerry Bruckheimer, "Pearl Harbor," the only wide release slated for the lucrative Memorial Day weekend, arrives with every indication of being THE event movie of the competitive summer season.

"Of all the summer movies, 'Pearl Harbor' showed the best polling numbers, with 'The Mummy Returns' coming in second," says Russ Leatherman, the founder and voice of the advance ticket service AOL Moviefone. "I have a hard time believing that this thing could open bigger than 'The Mummy Returns' (whose $68.1 million bow earlier this month set a non-holiday-weekend record), but the numbers indicate that it should."

None of which would be looming if Bay's head had burst during the budgeting fight -- nor if, the four times his legendary temper did explode, his vows to quit the project were accepted.

"The toughest things to pull off were getting the green light and keeping Michael Bay involved," notes unflappable producer Bruckheimer, whose long list of credits includes previous high-budget, high-profit efforts and mega-productions going back to "Top Gun" and "Beverly Hills Cop." "But I just knew that, based on what 'Armageddon' cost, the numbers just didn't make sense (the first 'Pearl Harbor' budget projection was $208 million). And sure enough, when we ground all the different departments and Michael went back in the third or fourth time, we got the budget to $150-something, and then we lost our fees, which got it down to $145. That's when Joe (Roth) green-lit the movie."

Ford Island sits in the middle of Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, May 19. As a new generation of Americans is taken back to the attack nearly 60 years ago on Pearl Harbor through Disney's blockbuster film "Pearl Harbor," opening today, the Navy is asking for proposals to develop commerical attractions on the island. The low white structure at left is the Arizona Memorial, a National Park Service attraction over the sunken battleship USS Arizona.

But then Roth, the studio production head, left Disney to start his own company -- at which point Disney CEO Michael Eisner insisted that another $10 million be trimmed from the budget.

Which Bay and Bruckheimer reluctantly managed to do, while agreeing to cover any cost overruns out of their own pockets.

"You can do anything if you want to," Bruckheimer notes. "It just depends on what you're willing to give up. But Michael really stuck to his guns. Two big things Disney wanted to take out were the Doolittle Raid at the end and the rolling of the battleship Oklahoma. Michael refused to do that, and we figured out a way to get it done for a price."

That involved unprecedented cooperation from the cast, the crew, all branches of the U.S. military, aeronautical enthusiasts and Industrial Light & Magic, George Lucas' special-effects outfit.

More than a month's worth of filming was done in and around Pearl Harbor starting in April 2000. The Navy supplied the production with mothballed vintage ships on which some 450 explosions were set. One massive sequence, in which six ships are hit, required 700 sticks of dynamite and 2,000 gallons of gasoline. There was also an air fleet consisting of nine replica or antique Japanese planes (one of which crash-landed -- remarkably, the production's only accident -- and left its owner-pilot with only a broken finger). And 30 stuntmen, 90 extras, 12 cameras on boats, land and in the air -- all for a sequence that, obviously, could only be shot once, and with split-second, synchronized accuracy.

"Amazingly, nothing really went wrong on this movie," Bay says. "I attribute it all to this Hawaiian priest who blessed us for 35 minutes the first day of the shoot. It's Hawaii state law, and thank God it is. Movies tend to take on a life of their own, and somehow, there was no real bad hiccup on this movie."

REELISM: SOME GIVE 'PEARL HARBOR' MIXED REVIEWS FOR ACCURACY

Any big-budget movie about an event as world-changing and emotionally charged as the attack on Pearl Harbor is bound to stir concerns about its historical accuracy, portrayal of real individuals and characterizations of various groups.

And since the upcoming "Pearl Harbor" was produced by Jerry Bruckheimer ("Coyote Ugly"), directed by Michael Bay ("Armageddon") and written by Randall Wallace ("Braveheart," which did as much violence to English history as it did to Edward I's army), the pre-release alarms went off loud and clear.

And let's face it: "Pearl Harbor's" main poster image, of Japanese planes flying over an Oahu field where kids are playing baseball before 8 a.m on a Sunday morning, does not inspire confidence in the film's socio-historical accuracy.

"That was a true story," Bruckheimer insists. "One gunner on a Japanese plane waved these kids on a ballfield away. Look, we're not saying that the movie's 100 percent accurate — believe me, it's not. But that happened to be a true story."

As for the rest, though few have actually seen the finished film yet, historians, veterans and Japanese-American groups who have had access to script drafts — and, in some cases, the filmmakers and their shooting locations — are understandably worried about how "Pearl Harbor" depicts their cherished and vital interests.

"It's their movie, it's not mine, I was purely an adviser," says Jack Green, a staff curator for the Naval Historical Center and retired Air Force captain, who was a technical adviser throughout the production. "They could take my advice or not, and that's the way it was."

While acknowledging that innumerable historical details were changed due to his and many other advisers' input, and that their opinions were sought and respectfully heard on a daily basis, Green notes several major examples of factual conflict.

One involves Ben Affleck's Army Air Corps pilot character helping Britain's Royal Air Force fight Hitler's Luftwaffe before America entered the war. Trouble is, only U.S. civilians could volunteer while America was still neutral.

"In 1941, this would have been a major, major issue," Green wryly notes. "I offered an alternative, but Jerry thought it was too complicated, so they stuck with this."

Perhaps the most upsetting inaccuracies have to do with some script drafts' depiction of Lt. Col. James H. Doolittle. Bruckheimer dearly wanted to end the film on an "up" note, and the first one to come about in the wake of Japan's many early victories was the Doolittle-led B-25 raid on Tokyo in April 1942.

When Wallace first added this sequence to the script, he evidently depicted the highly refined and brainy Doolittle as a foul-mouthed vulgarian. In one scene, the colonel, who had a Ph.D. in aeronautical engineering from MIT, was even characterized as not knowing what a slide rule was. When survivors of the Doolittle raid got a look at this, they were understandably livid.

"The writer was too lazy to do any proper research," recalls Roy Stork, a co-pilot on one of the 16 bombers that took part in the first Allied attack on the Japanese homeland. "Doolittle was not a hellfire-and-brimstone type; he was a very humble man. We're totally disgusted with that, and some of the facts about the raid aren't accurate, either.

"The writer said he was trying to make it more dramatic," adds Stork, who along with eight other surviving Raiders, met with Wallace at Disney's Burbank headquarters to voice their concerns. "I said, 'My God, you've got 80 men on an apparent suicide mission for their country, and that isn't dramatic enough?' He said, 'You don't understand the Hollywood audience.' I said, 'Yes, I do -- I worked in make-up for 34 years, and this is gonna be another lousy Hollywood production.' Then he changed the subject."

FILM: NBC to air 'Pearl Harbor: Legacy of Attack' on Sunday

(From 2E)

But, apparently, the subject wasn't the only thing changed. Green reports that lobbying efforts on the part of advisers, Raiders and Doolittle's family convinced Bay to remedy some of the inaccuracies.

Still, "Pearl Harbor" remains a movie in which two fighter pilot heroes of the December disaster end up as part of a highly specialized B-25 crew — a military impossibility. And a report from Honolulu last week confirmed that Alec Baldwin's Doolittle still cusses a time or two.

"It's not a historical movie," deadpans Doolittle's granddaughter, Jonna Hoppes. "I can't give you my reaction to it until I actually see it, but I can tell you that Mr. Bay and I disagreed strongly over a particular scene in which Doolittle decides to personally go on the raid at the last minute, on the boat, even though the War Department feels he's too valuable and doesn't want him to. That portrayed him with insubordination and also with conceit, neither of which were his character."

One person who has seen the film, Japanese American Citizens League national executive director John Tateishi, notes that Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, the architect of the Pearl Harbor strike, is presented as being more gung ho about war with America than he actually was.

But Tateishi has more immediate worries than that.

"My concern really is the effect seeing the movie might have on people's views of Japanese-Americans and Asian-Americans," says Tateishi, who was imprisoned with his family at a U.S. government internment camp during the war. "Having seen the movie, I think it will have some impact. I hope the majority who see it will come out, as I did, with the sense that this is a very wonderful love story. But I think some people will come out wanting to stir up the old World War II emotions again."

JAPANESE SITUATION PRIOR TO PEARL HARBOR

LOS ANGELES — Poor in natural resources, Japan went to war against the United States over the need for oil and other raw materials. The attack on Pearl Harbor culminated years of tension between the two countries.

The United States objected to Japan's campaign to conquer parts of China in the 1930s and grew increasingly uncomfortable with the island nation after it formed an alliance with Nazi Germany.

The United States placed an embargo on shipments of oil and other materials to Japan, which the Japanese viewed as a hostile act jeopardizing their national security.

Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, who commanded the Japanese fleet, also feared the U.S. Pacific fleet based at Pearl Harbor would intervene in plans to take over resource-rich territories of Southeast Asia.

After diplomatic relations between the countries broke down, the Japanese saw an attack on Pearl Harbor as a way to cow the United States and immobilize its Pacific forces.

In the early morning of Dec. 7, 1941, a first wave of 181 fighters and bombers flew over the Hawaiian island of Oahu. An Army radar station operator spotted the planes, but officers mistook the attack for U.S. planes scheduled to arrive later.

This critical blunder prevented U.S. forces from mobilizing immediately to fend off the attack.

Air strips were attacked first, to keep the U.S. air response at a minimum.

Nearly 90 vessels were at the Navy base, but eight battleships moored off of Ford Island in the center of the harbor became primary targets. All suffered bomb or torpedo hits within the first minutes of the attack.

The USS West Virginia sank quickly, while the USS Oklahoma capsized, trapping hundreds of men inside its partially submerged hull. A bomb that pierced the USS Arizona destroyed the vessel and killed 1,177 crewmen, many of whom remain entombed in the sunken ship.

The attack killed about 2,400 Americans, sank or damaged 21 ships and destroyed 88 planes, most of them while they were still on the ground.

Until the attack, the United States had resisted entering the war but it soon mobilized for counter attacks in both the European and Pacific fronts.

TELEVISION SPECIALS SUNDAY DEALING WITH PEARL HARBOR

WASHINGTON — "Before Dec. 7, we were a divided people," recalled historian Stephen Ambrose.

Even as Hitler's blitzkrieg toppled country after country, the sentiment of many Americans was "to hell with Europe," Ambrose said. Isolationism had a strong hold. Then came the sneak attack by Japanese bombers on the U.S. Pacific fleet in Pearl Harbor in 1941.

"There were more enlistments on Dec. 8 than on any other day in American history," said Ambrose.

Rarely has such global change been wrought by a single event. And rarely has such an event been so dramatically commemorated on a Memorial Day weekend.

Today, Disney's $135 million movie "Pearl Harbor" opens at theaters around the country. And at 9 p.m. EDT Sunday, NBC will air "Pearl Harbor: Legacy of Attack," an hour-long TV program narrated by NBC anchor Tom Brokaw and featuring Ambrose and underwater explorer Robert Ballard.

The program was produced by the National Geographic Channel, which will air it an hour earlier on Sunday.

The National Geographic Channel, available by cable or satellite, will also present the hour-long program "Brokaw, Ballard, Ambrose: Reflections on War" before the "Legacy" show, and "National Geographic Beyond the Movie: Pearl Harbor" afterward, starting at 10 p.m. EDT.

The offerings indicate the nation's continuing fascination with World War II, reflected earlier in occurrences ranging from the movie "Saving Private Ryan" to the belated push to build a World War II Memorial on the National Mall.

After taping Tuesday at the National Geographic TV studio here, the authors talked about the surge of interest in the war, arguably the pivotal event of the 20th century, more than 50 years after it ended.

One reason is that the Americans who survived the Great Depression and won the biggest war the world has ever seen — the men and women Brokaw dubbed "the Greatest Generation" in a book of that name — has finally begun to begun to tell their stories.

"Twenty-five years ago, nobody wanted to hear about it," he said of World War II, but "old men's minds turn back to their youth."

It is difficult to exaggerate the impact of World War II, Ambrose said. It was a global struggle between good and evil, and the Allied victory created the modern world but also new cultures.

"We were a very prejudiced people before World War II," he said. African American patriotism and participation in the war spurred their movement for equal rights, he said. Rosie the Riveter built a case for gender equality in the workplace as she built the war machines on the home front.

Even so long after V-E and V-J days, there is much left to discover about World War II, said Ballard, whose underwater explorations led to the book "From Pearl Harbor to Bikini Atoll: Graveyards of the Pacific."

"Real history is still beneath the sea," he said. "The good news is that it is well preserved."

TV MARKS PEARL HARBOR WITH MEMORIAL HOLIDAY PROGRAMS

LOS ANGELES — "I have to learn to forgive and forget," said one U.S. sailor who survived the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

"I've never forgiven 'em. You just don't lose that many shipmates and forget that it happened," says another veteran.

Both have their say in History Channel's "Tora, Tora Tora: The True Story of Pearl Harbor," one of several films that mark the Japanese assault by giving voice to those caught in the horror of Dec. 7, 1941.

The 60th anniversary of this "date that will live in infamy," as President Franklin D. Roosevelt emblazoned it, is coming six months early on television, prodded by both Memorial Day and the box office.

Cable and broadcast networks are capitalizing on interest stirred by "Pearl Harbor," the big-budget, big-special effects film opening today amid a barrage of publicity and advertising.

The actual event comes ferociously alive in eyewitness accounts and footage included in the TV programs, including the moment the USS Arizona exploded, sending a hellish black cloud hundreds of feet into the air.

Official records list 2,403 Americans killed and 1,178 wounded in the first foreign attack on the United States since the British invaded Washington, D.C., in the War of 1812.

Japanese bombers and fighter planes, launched from the decks of more than two dozen ships that had steamed undetected from Japan, bombarded U.S. aircraft and battleships with torpedoes and armor-piercing bombs.

The surprise attack was intended to neutralize America and free Japan to press its conquest of Southeast Asia. Instead, it stripped away the cloak of U.S. isolationism and pushed the nation into World War II.

HOLIDAY TRIBUTE

The 60th anniversary of Pearl Harbor and the 10th anniversary of Desert Storm are saluted in PBS' "National Memorial Day Concert."

The mix of musical performance, dramatic readings and archival footage will air live from outside the U.S. Capitol on Sunday, May 27, 8-9 p.m. EDT (check local listings). Among those scheduled to appear are Ossie Davis, Art Garfunkel, Charles Durning and Travis Tritt, joining conductor Erich Kunzel and the National Symphony Orchestra.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Affleck knows he has to give up certain things to be celebrity

NEW YORK— Ben Affleck knows he must give up certain aspects of normal life for his celebrity.

"I'm absolutely OK with it. I have to be — it's sort of a Faustian bargain, and I recognize it, there are a lot of sacrifices," Affleck said during an interview Tuesday on ABC's "Good Morning America" while promoting his new film, "Pearl Harbor," which opens today.

Being famous makes dating difficult, for example. The 28-year-old actor had a much-publicized romance a couple of years with Gwyneth Paltrow, with whom he co-starred last year in the romantic drama "Bounce."

"You know, most people don't have normal romantic lives. ... For one thing, normal being a relative term," Affleck said. "I don't have a girlfriend right now. I've certainly decided it may be that way for a while and that's OK."

NEW YORK— John Leguizamo as the artist Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec?

"One's mind immediately doesn't go to an actor from Jackson Heights to play the 19th-century Parisian painter," admitted "Moulin Rouge" director Baz Luhrmann in W magazine's June issue. "But John is such a relentless character actor that he'll do whatever it takes. ... To prove he could play Lautrec."

Leguizamo, whose family moved from Bogota to New York when he was 4, found his inspiration in Sister Wendy, the British nun whose televised lectures on art had become a cult hit.

"I happened to be watching a lot of Sister Wendy right before filming, and I thought, 'She has a lisp like he did, and she appreciates art like he did.' So she was my way into the character. And all through the shoot, Baz kept saying, 'John, more Sister Wendy! Find her effervescence!"

The 36-year-old actor, who grew up in Jackson Heights, Queens, studied theater at New York University and the Lee Strasberg Theatre Institute.

"Moulin Rouge" also stars Nicole Kidman and Ewan McGregor. It is in limited release in New York and Los Angeles, and will open in theaters nationwide on June 1.

LOS ANGELES— Jeri Ryan is going to miss her favorite "psychopaths" now that "Star Trek: Voyager" is going off the air.

Ryan plays the machine-human Seven of Nine. The two-hour series finale airs Wednesday night on UPN.

"The men on the cast, all of them, are psychopaths," the 33-year-old actress told reporters. "They're just out of their minds, and that's what makes it so much fun to be there."

Besides missing the cast, Ryan said she'll miss the "Star Trek" conventions.

"They love anybody who is remotely related to any aspect of 'Star Trek.' And there is no more warm, passionate, supportive, loyal group of people than 'Star Trek' fans," she said.

WHEELING, W.Va.— Rachael Worby will leave her job as music director of the Wheeling Symphony at the end of the 2002-03 season. She has headed the orchestra since 1986.

The ex-wife of former West Virginia Gov. Gaston Caperton said Tuesday that auditions for a new director will take up most of her final season, when she will conduct only the first and last performances of the orchestra.

Worby plans to continue her role at the Pasadena, Calif., Pops orchestra, where she now conducts the summer concert season.

Later this summer, she will make her debut as a guest conductor with the London Philharmonic Orchestra. She also will conduct in Australia, and will return to Ireland where she is principal guest conductor of the Irish Chamber Orchestra.

NEW YORK - David Hasselhoff is fully aware of the international cult status "Baywatch" enjoys.

"'Baywatch'" is more like a brand name that will probably constantly be made fun of for the rest of the millennium," Hasselhoff said, laughing. "Somebody once said all the other countries in the world look at America like the biggest lifeguard in the world. ... America will stop Saddam Hussein. America will stop terrorism."

The 48-year-old actor says the syndicated lifeguard drama fell apart after he left last year. Hasselhoff starred as Mitch Buchannon from the show's start in 1989 and appeared in the mid-'90s detective spinoff "Baywatch Nights."

"'Baywatch' really was me, not just because I was in it, but I was really instrumental in trying to keep the stories focused," he said. "We watch the reruns and they're excellent, and I mean, we all took a lot of heat but they're really great family entertainment."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, May 25, 2001:
Avoid being overly serious about personal and professional matters. You might feel like you are carrying more than your share of responsibilities. Make sure you have plenty of exercise and take a lot of breaks. Don't skip checkups and make sure you see the dentist. You gain financially because of your steady course, especially after July. If you are single, others might find you to be too serious, yet there will be someone who appreciates your attitude. If you are attached, your sweetie might not understand the change in your temperament. Explain what is going on with you, rather than withdrawing. CANCER understands your security needs.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Family counts on you far more than you realize. You carry others' concerns when you speak to someone about an issue. Another person gets your message quite clearly. The seriousness of your thoughts comes through. Invest more time in your personal life. Tonight: Head on home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Speak your mind, even if you don't believe your opinions will be popular. Others need to understand where you are coming from. Take charge of a money matter. You might think that you are overly uptight, but you know what you are doing. Tonight: Catch up on a friend's news.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You might be overly serious since there is a lot on your mind. Let go and relax more — after all, this is Memorial Day weekend. Start making a list of what you need to make the next few days spectacular. Return calls. An interesting invitation could be lurking! Tonight: Treat someone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Deep down, something might be bothering you. Instead of getting uptight, have a needed discussion. Once you clear out the problem, you can let go and party in the first unofficial weekend of summer. Tonight: Let the fun begin.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ Assume a low profile right now, especially since a close friend or an older associate might need your help. Your understanding and support might mean more than you can imagine. Dig in and enjoy the unusual downtime. Your resourcefulness emerges. Tonight: Talk or read late.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Join friends as soon as you can. Work might be unusually demanding, and you easily could feel overwhelmed. Get in there and tackle the work. Once you finish, you can start your weekend. Tonight: Cheer the weekend in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Think in terms of making what you want happen. Others look to you for advice. A talk with someone at a distance could become difficult. Give this person the benefit of the doubt. Not everything is as it seems. Accept an invitation. Tonight: In the limelight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Take off ASAP, as your mind is already out the door. A partner might need some time before getting into weekend mode. Deal with finances, as they will affect you, as well as others. Another might be more rational than you realize. Tonight: Follow the music.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Though you are ready to boogie, another might be glum or feeling confined. Pitch in and help this person out. The two of you enjoy each other's company anyway. Before you forget, go over your checkbook. Tonight: Dinner for two.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Worry less about fatigue and work; after all, the next few days are about getting a new perspective. Clear off your desk and do only what you must. Let someone lure you out the door. Now isn't that more fun? Tonight: Where the crowds are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Yours, of all signs, decides to pull back some and take care of responsibilities. Perhaps you are doing something special for a loved one, or working and allowing others to take off. Don't let this mood get the best of you. Invite others over later in the weekend. Tonight: Do errands on the way home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Join a loved one or child who holds special meaning. Allow more happiness into your life. Just roll with another's desires, and you will enjoy yourself as well. A family member could be down, so make the call and extend an invitation. Tonight: Let the play begin.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♣	Dbl	1♡	Pass
1NT	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

Many think that falsecarding requires some great ingenuity from either declarer or a defender. But it can be very subtle, as this deal from one of Britain's major team events illustrates.

The seed for success was sown with South's rebid of one no-trump — had South taken the normal action of bidding two clubs, West would have held on to all four clubs no matter what. When the final contract became three no-trump, West had no inkling about the power and length of South's suit.

Sitting South was Scottish internationalist Victor Silverstone. The jack of spades was covered by the queen, which held. The three high diamonds were cashed, on which West let go a heart in some comfort. Silverstone now found a brilliantly deceptive maneuver — he continued with the 10 of diamonds, discarding a club from hand!

We pity West. Since the defense had already collected one diamond trick, that defender could see four more tricks once the ace of spades was forced out, which would set up two tricks in each major. It did not seem possible for a club discard to cost anything, so West parted with the deuce of clubs, a decision the defender is still regretting.

East naturally reverted to spades. Declarer won perforce with the ace, and six club tricks later meant that an unmakable contract had romped home with two overtricks!

THAT WAS THE WEEK THAT WAS

Entertainment highlights during the week of May 27-June 2:

In 1976, The Who got into the "Guinness Book of World Records" as the loudest rock band ever when their concert in England measured 120 decibels. That record since has been broken.

In 1977, Elvis Presley walked off stage in the middle of a concert in Baltimore. A doctor examined him and he returned 30 minutes later.

Also in 1977, the Sex Pistols' second single, "God Save the Queen," was released to coincide with Queen Elizabeth's Silver Jubilee celebration in June. The record, which begins "God save the Queen, she ain't no human being," made the British Top 10 despite being banned from airplay.

In 1990, "Seinfeld" made its debut on NBC.

In 1992, singer Paul Simon married singer Edie Brickell.

In 1995, Ted Nugent placed his handprint and signature in cement in the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Also in 1995, actor Christopher Reeve was paralyzed in a riding accident in Virginia.

Also in 1995, Robert Dewey Hoskins was arrested for scaling the fence around Madonna's Hollywood Hills mansion. He later was convicted of stalking her.

In 1996, singer Dave Gahan of Depeche Mode was arrested after allegedly overdosing on a speedball of cocaine and heroin at his hotel in suburban Los Angeles.

In 1998, singer Geri Halliwell, better known as Ginger Spice, quit the Spice Girls.

Also in 1998, singer Scott Weiland of Stone Temple Pilots was arrested for heroin possession as he walked out of a Manhattan housing project.

In 1999, the remains of Iron Butterfly bassist Phil "Taylor" Kramer were found inside a van in a ravine near Malibu, Calif. He had disappeared four years earlier while driving to the airport to pick up a friend.

Ogre 'Shrek' required a long labor many won't notice, animator says

By Hap Erstein
N.Y. Times News Service

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — "Shrek," the fable of an ogre, was a monster at the box office during the weekend. Even though it ranked No. 1 nationwide, pulling in $42 million in ticket sales, senior character animator Tim Keon knew that his contributions to the computer-animated fractured fairy tale were bound to go underappreciated.

"There are shots, like when the burning bridge collapses and the characters are hanging onto it, swinging out, and Donkey falls off of it and Shrek grabs him. Technically, that was a humongous feat, but it goes by in the blink of an eye," Keon said. "And the audience enjoys it for its Indiana Jones-style action, which is exactly what you want them to do, but I feel like standing up and screaming, 'Do you know how long that took to do?'"

Audiences have little awareness of the meticulous process of making movies completely inside a computer, and they probably shouldn't stop and think about it. But since we've got Keon on the phone from California, why was that scene so difficult to create?

"Basically, what we are dealing with is that the bridge itself was an effect," he explains, distinguishing it from the characters, which are animated separately. "And it was based on dynamics, to get a realistic bridge flapping motion to it. That was done by an effects team. Then the animated characters had to be attached to that and made to look like they are really holding on or really falling with it. Logistically, it was a very difficult deal."

Keon grew up in Sarasota, Fla., receiving a degree in computer animation from the Ringling School of Art & Design there. Eight years ago, he started at Warner Bros., helping to animate "Quest for Camelot" and "The Iron Giant," before moving over to DreamWorks and having a picnic with "Antz."

"Shrek" is now showing at Wallace Hollywood Theater Tall City 10.

As a character animator, Keon brings to life the models stored in the computer. "That means everything from body movements, gestures, facial animation, dialogue," he notes. As a senior character animator, he is in the middle of the organizational pyramid. Above him is a supervising animator, followed by four or five directing animators. Below him is a team of animators, followed by an army of assistant animators. He is high enough to put his stamp on a few key sequences, like that burning bridge scene, the climax at a church where a dragon flies through a stained-glass window, and a comic wrestling match.

And unlike at other animation factories, Keon was able to affect the writing of his scenes. "A good example is that bridge-burning sequence," he says. "The original script called for the dragon to get caught on the chain and then just land on the edge. I came up with, 'Wouldn't it be great if the dragon was over the ravine and not snagged on the chain and then fell into the ravine, caught itself with its wings and lifted itself back up?'" Sure, the team agreed, if he could achieve it. "So I did a test, showed it to them, they loved it and it went in. As an animator, you come up with ideas to embellish what the original thought would be."

"Shrek" has been in the development pipeline for four years and in production for another two. Days before it was released — to enthusiastically positive reviews — was not the right time to ask Keon his opinion of the movie. "After working on it for two years straight and being 2 inches from it, it actually became towards the end sort of this monotonous task. It was 'OK, let's get this thing done,'" he says candidly. "I didn't think it was going to be very good. Then when I went and saw it in the theater, it just brought a tear to my eye."

Shrek (voiced by Mike Myers), the heroic, but grumpy ogre, and Donkey (Eddie Murphy), his eager-to-please sidekick, carry the movie. Still, Keon feels that the most impressive technical feat is the realistic rendering of human characters such as Princess Fiona (Cameron Diaz), the regal damsel with whom Shrek falls in love.

"What you're up against when you're doing a human in animation is this very rigid suspension of disbelief," explains Keon. "It's easy enough to say, 'OK, that guy's a big ogre so I'll just believe the way you tell me he moves.' But if I move a human character just slightly incorrectly, you will notice it. Even if you couldn't point out what doesn't look right, you could just look at the animation as a whole and kind of be creeped out by it."

Beneath each computer character, human or not, is a complex series of structural systems. "If you took Shrek or any other character, Fiona, whoever, and dissected them, you could actually peel the skin off and see a muscle system that's based on human anatomy," says Keon. "And then if you take the muscle system off, you'd see a skeleton. They really have tried to push character realism, even though we're not going for realism."

As co-producer and DreamWorks founding partner Jeffrey Katzenberg has said, "Shrek" is the most advanced computer-generated animation so far, but not for long. In July, a movie called "The Final Fantasy," inspired by the video game, will push the limits of human character realism even further. "The field is constantly evolving," concedes Keon. "I have a feeling that their stuff is going to look pretty good."

Still, he scoffs at the fear that computer-generated characters will soon be replacing live actors. "I think eventually, maybe 10 years from now, our CG animation humans might be to the level where you might be able to put a secondary character in a live-action film. It's hard to pull off," Keon emphasizes. "It goes back to that whole suspension of disbelief thing."

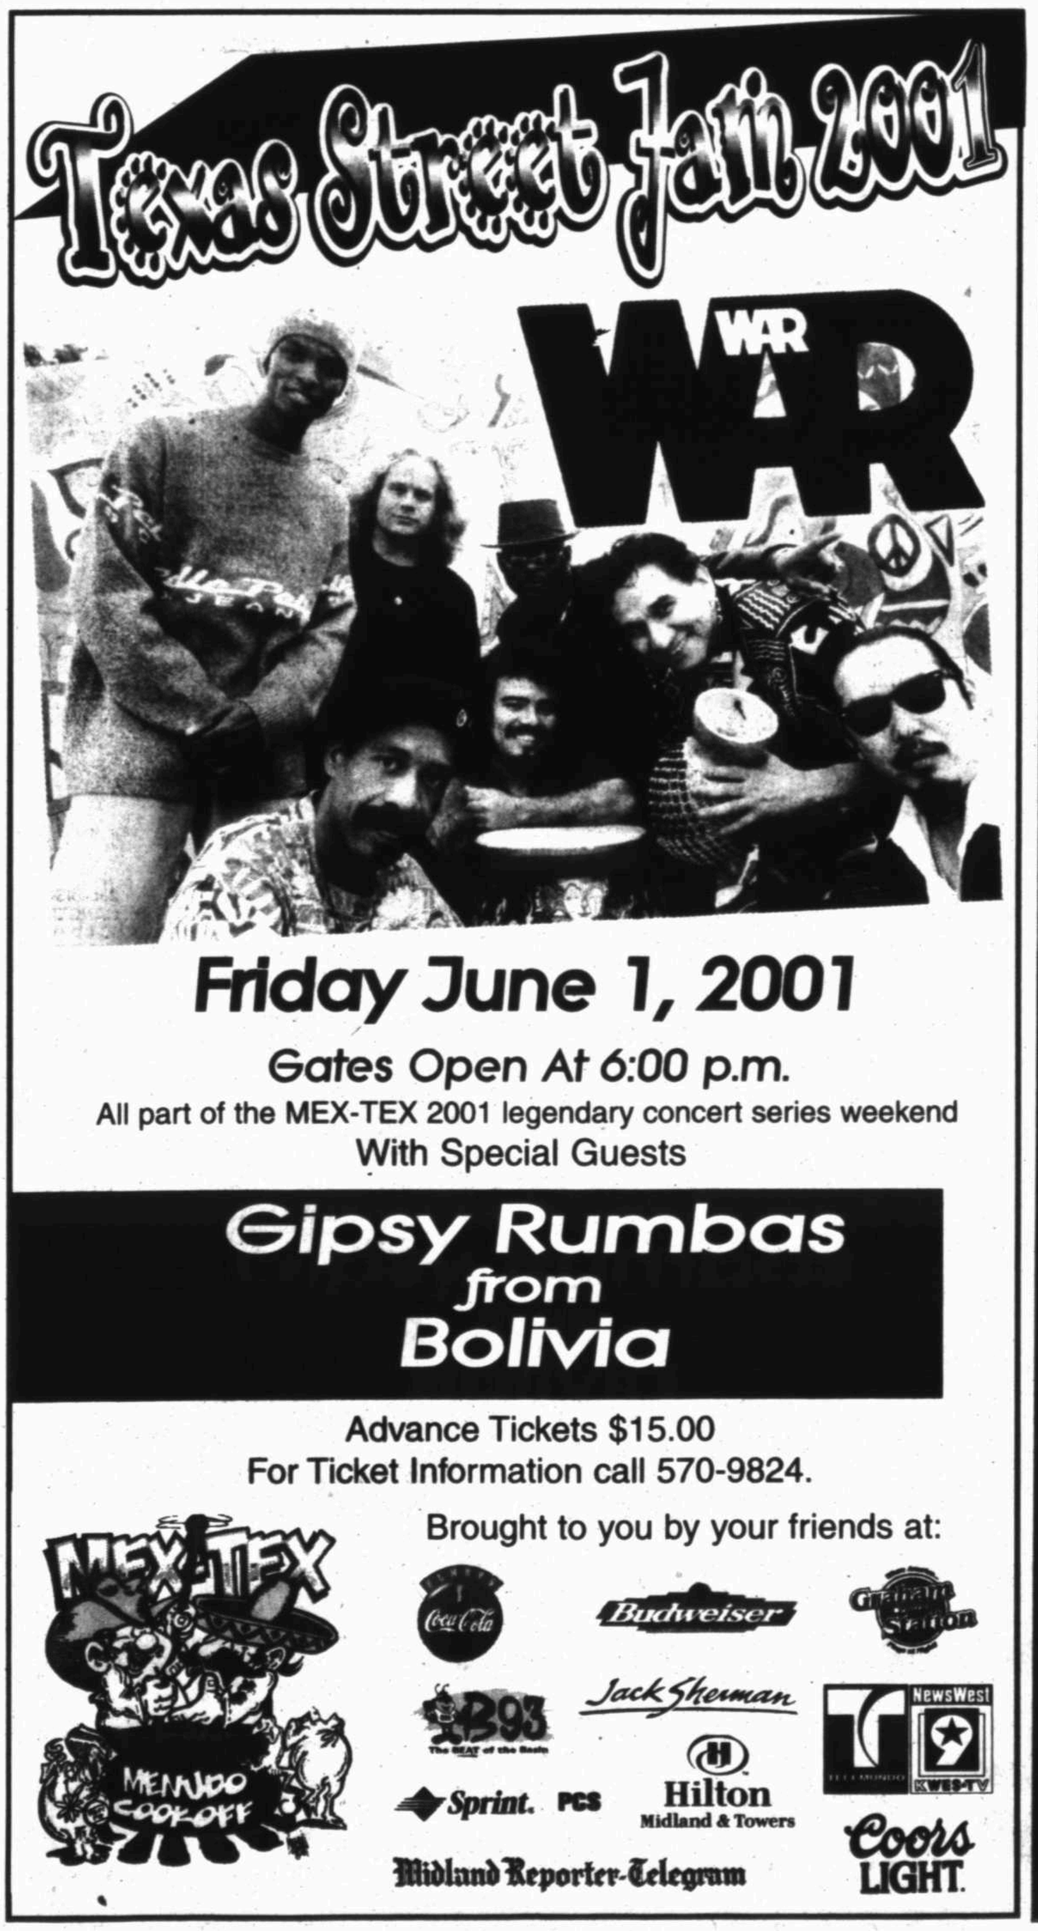

Beyond the look of the humans, Keon is most pleased with the sophistication of the writing, including the shin-kicks at the Disney organization. "I mean, we didn't rip Disney apart. I think it was all in good fun," he says. "What we were basically doing was poking fun at fairy tales in general. I don't think it was entirely aimed at Disney. But it's there."

"Shrek" may or may not be about Katzenberg's thumbing his nose at his former Disney boss, Michael Eisner, but to Keon, it is a huge project that he has been able to make personal. "In the wrestling scene, Donkey is hanging on the ropes, watching Shrek," he says. "That was actually based on my Irish setter, who hangs on the baby gate at home just like that while we're eating dinner. Everything you see around you as an animator you end up putting in at some point."
