

School bond issue steals show at LWV forum

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

The City Council and hospital board races took a back seat to the battle for two places on the Midland Independent School District board and the proposed bond issue during the League of Women Voters forum Thursday night in Midland College's Roadrunner Room.

It wasn't that the audience ignored the council and Midland Memorial Hospital board candidates; they had their share of questions. But most of the audience's interest focused on the school trustees and need for the $6.6 million bond issue.

Going astray from its usual format, the league opened the forum with a slide show on the bond issue with pictures depicting crowded classrooms at De Zavala Elementary in east Midland and deteriorating conditions at that school.

The bond issue calls for two new elementary schools — one in north Midland and a new De Zavala to replace the current one. It also would provide for about $1 million in additions and updating to Lee and Midland high schools.

Ed Runyan, president of the school board, explained De Zavala was constructed in 1928 and non-conforming wings have been added to it since then. If a new school is built, it will be on land adjacent to the current school, he said.

Proposed tax increase would be 5 1/4 cents per $100 of valued property, said a league member. And if the tax base for next year is increased, the tax rate could be lower, added Runyan.

To one's man voiced doubts about the need for more schools, Runyan replied that "Midland is growing at the rate of about one elementary school a year. We're doing a lot of programs today that we didn't do 20 years ago and that takes more classrooms."

City council candidates had the floor first to explain their views and ideas for change. Only Giffert Alstrin, candidate for Place 1, failed to show.

All agreed on the need for more parks, better traffic coordination and more downtown parking.

Jesse Hatfield, running for Place 1 against Alstrin, said he had spent nine hours recently riding in patrol cars and talking with the police chief and officers about the police department.

"WE'VE LOST OVER 100 officers in the last six years. It takes two years to train one," and the money lost in that turnover has been $1 million in Hatfield's estimate. He expressed "alarm" over officers having to buy their shoes and bullet-proof vests.

Gordon Marcum II, unopposed for a third term to Place 2, said that while Midland is a growing area, "we do have problems created by it. The greatest problem we face is the housing crisis."

"And we have difficulty keeping good people throughout the city, not just in the police department," he said in echoing Hatfield's thoughts.

"In the last three months, we've had a 30 percent turnover. We raised the salary at the last meeting; we hope to do something to keep good employees."

John Phipps, seeking Place 3, keyed his speech to finding solutions for the problems and in planning for Midland's future. "The solutions are relatively simple, but the price tag is mind-boggling."

The job, he said, calls for "new energy and fresh leadership."

George Veloz, candidate for Place 3, related he had lived in Midland most of his life and had never seen a Hispanic on the council. "I would bring a new feeling of optimism and concern. We've neglected parts of the town (south and east sides) and now it's staring us in our face."

Weekend 'critical' for Poland's problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said today there is "a very dangerous, very bad" split in Poland's Communist party and that the coming weekend "could be critical" in determining whether there can be a peaceful outcome to Poland's internal problems.

"I think it's very, very serious," Haig told a small group of reporters. "There's a very major split in the party between hard-liners and soft-liners. I think there's a great deal of concern that this coming weekend could be critical," Haig said.

Among warning signs, he said, is the continuation of Soviet-led Warsaw Pact military maneuvers in and around Poland beyond when the exercises had been expected to end. He in Poland.

He refused to specify what the proposals are and, asked if he intended to include an allied military option, said: "I don't rule it in and I don't rule it out."

Following Weinberger's breakfast meeting with reporters, top aides said no military option is in the cards and added that the defense secretary had intended to be purposefully vague to keep the Soviets guessing.

Haig said the situation "is more serious than the December period," when there was real worry in the Carter administration that Soviet intervention might be imminent to put a stop to the actions of Solidarity.

Haig also said that because of a deteriorating economy the possibility of food riots in Poland "is a real thing ... it's a contributor to real tensions that exist throughout the country, and tempers."

But a senior State Department official who did not want to be identified said Soviet intervention in Poland still "is neither inevitable nor imminent."

"On the other hand," he said, "if there is a major crackdown internally, I think there would be fighting, and if there was fighting, you know what comes next," an apparent reference to Soviet intervention.

Midland unemployment drops to lowest in Texas

Midland reported the lowest unemployment figure for any metropolitan area in the state for February with a 2.5 percent reading, according to the Texas Employment Commission.

Ranking behind Midland were Abilene, 2.9 percent; San Angelo, 3.6 percent; Lubbock, 3.8 percent; Odessa, 3.9 percent; Amarillo, 4.0 percent; and El Paso, 8.7 percent.

Midland's 2.5 percent was almost two percentage points below the 4.4 percent recorded for January and also for February 1980. In comparison, the state unemployment rate for February was 4.7 percent, while the national figure was 8 percent.

The county's labor force stood at 50,240 for February, which was a 1.6 percent drop from the 51,080 in January. But it was 8.3 percent higher than the 46,410 registered in February 1980.

While employment inched upward by 150 from 48,840 in January to 48,990 last month, it was 10.5 percent higher than the 44,350 working a year ago.

The number of persons reported unemployed last month not only dropped below the 2,000 mark, it plunged to 1,250 persons. In January, there were 2,240 persons unemployed in Midland County, while in February 1980 the figure was 2,060. This latest figure, according to the TEC, is a 44.2 percent drop from January and a 39.3 percent decline from the same month last year.

The drop in unemployment was attributed in part to a large gain in the area of mining, according to the TEC. "Area petroleum concerns added workers in the increasing search for energy," states the TEC report. Also, transportation posted an advance while construction, trade, finance, services and government reflected small decreases.

However, a major drop was reported in the non-agricultural wage and salary employment as the figure eased downward to 43,760 for February.

The TEC reported the manufactur-

Entertainer Carol Burnett and her husband Joe Hamilton are pleased after an 11-member jury ruled in Burnett's favor Thursday in her libel suit against National Enquirer.

$1.6 million libel victory 'evens the score' for Carol

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Carol Burnett says her $1.6 million victory in a libel suit against the National Enquirer "evens the score" and may teach the popular tabloid a lesson, but its editors say they don't plan to change editorial policy.

Miss Burnett, who sat in court throughout the trial, covered her face and began to cry when the jury announced its verdict Thursday.

"If they had given me a dollar plus carfare, I would have been happy," she said. "It was the principle. I feel like I've been pregnant for five years, and the baby is beautiful."

The verdict also cheered other celebrities who have suits pending against the weekly.

"Yippee!" said Jeff Wald, husband-manager of singer Helen Reddy, who is suing the Enquirer.

"I'm delighted for anyone who is attacked by publications like the Enquirer," said "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson, whose televised attack against the Enquirer for an item about his marriage prompted the dismissal of two jurors. Carson said he would not file suit.

The suit, which began in 1976 after the Enquirer reported that Miss Burnett acted boisterously at a Washington restaurant, ended when a jury that deliberated for more than 13 hours awarded Miss Burnett $300,000 in damages and $1.3 million in punitive damages.

The suit originally sought $10 million, but in closing arguments her attorney urged the jury to award the popular entertainer $1.5 million — the Enquirer's estimated net profit for a year.

Enquirer attorney William Masterson said he would file a motion next week for a new trial, reduction of damages and reversal of the verdict. If those motions are denied, he will appeal, he said.

"These were clearly excessive damages," said Masterson. "It's ridiculous — for five lines in a gossip column to take a year's earnings and half of a company's net worth. ... This is the equivalent of capital punishment against a corporation."

"I don't want to see anybody go out of business," Miss Burnett said. "I just want to improve them. This evens the score."

Unopposed Marcum preparing for Midland's growth

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth in a 14-part series studying the candidates and issues in the April 4 city, school and hospital election.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

He's spent four years and countless hours sitting in the Council Chambers at City Hall. That's not taking into account the hours expended in related meetings and doing the required homework.

But Gordon Marcum II is running as an unopposed candidate for another two years as city councilman in Place 2.

Marcum focuses his attention to the growth of Midland over the next few years.

"The quality of life can go down as growth occurs," he says. "We need coordination and leadership for planned future growth."

That expected growth already is bringing problems in housing, traffic patterns and downtown parking. And as the city has stretched toward the northwest in the past years, the south and east sides have been neglected. It is to these problems which Marcum is addressing his campaign.

"We already have some wider streets" than many other towns this size, he claims. "But our growth keeps overtaking us."

EASING THE TRAFFIC congestion downtown can be accomplished only by one-way streets — a suggestion that was vehemently opposed two years ago by merchants along Illinois and Texas avenues, the streets designated for one-way.

"Even though we had so much controversy, we (City Council) will have to re-examine our decision on that. All of our studies and surveys have shown we could better coordinate downtown traffic with one-way streets," he says.

Coordinating the traffic lights downtown have surfaced as a major problem. But Marcum explains the city has a 1940s traffic lighting system which has been the source of numerous problems. And the blocks are longer than normal, he says, which hinders the lighting coordination.

With the recent allotment of Revenue Sharing funds, the city is purchasing a new traffic lighting system, he says.

The only logical east-west streets to convert into one-way thoroughfares are Illinois and Texas. There's no way to widen the downtown streets, says Marcum. Making them one-way would add more parking spaces to the downtown area, thus helping with the parking shortage.

The plan calls for parking on each side of the streets — which would add about 260 spaces — and three lanes of traffic: one for left turns, one for right turns and one for through traffic.

MAINTENANCE OF streets, and especially major thoroughfares, has surfaced as another effect of fast growth. Marcum proposes resurfacing of the city's main arteries at the same time he explains the council also has been advocating this project.

"Since I've been on the council, Midland's growth has been so rapid. We've got contracts outstanding for street work, but the construction people are busy putting in new residential streets. We're hamstringing while they're out working on new residential developments."

The city's sewage treatment plant, Midland Draw and a rising water table appeared this spring as a combined problem with the city and county. Marcum says he sees the problem as one causing more concern to the county residents. He expects the city will have to pump the treated effluent into another area, rather than into the current holding ponds in the county.

A new landfill will have to be opened this year, Marcum says. The city already has purchased land for this purpose. But the landfill must be dug out, sealed and fenced, and the city is required to obtain a permit from the state.

As Midland expands, more problems will arise in housing and in controlling the city's growth, Marcum says. The Tall City is in the throes of a housing shortage, and Marcum attributes part of that to high interest rates.

BUT COMMUNITY development funds may be forthcoming and $500,000 of that will go to "alleviating some of the problems in the south and east sides. The needs of our citizens on the east and south sides have been ignored too long and we must start now to improve their situation."

With a higher population, Marcum also sees more criminal problems. "We'll have to expand our police department and give better protection. We (council) should commit to whatever it takes: equipment and new people. That's why I'll never say I won't raise taxes. There are times

Casa de Amigos needs two Vista volunteers

Ever consider dropping out and joining the Peace Corps — anything for a change from the corporate or domestic grind? But perhaps there was the intervening thought that it was too much trouble to pack up and actually leave home for a year or two.

The resolution of those conflicting desires could be right in your own back yard.

Casa de Amigos, a broad-based Midland human service agency, has been awarded funding for two Vista volunteers to spend a year organizing co-op food buying clubs for low-income families, and needs to fill the positions by mid-April.

Mary Hinkle, executive director of Casa de Amigos and supervisor of the program, explained the rush in hiring is to enable the volunteers to attend an orientation session in Austin late in April.

"We certainly didn't expect the government to act so quickly in approving our application," Mrs. Hinkle explained. "But since they did, we would like whoever we hire to be able to attend the only orientation session scheduled this year in Texas."

Applications for the two positions will be accepted at Casa de Amigos, 1101 Garden Lane, until April 6.

The positions, which pay a $300 per month living allowance, both are full-time for an initial period of one year. No age, ethnic or economic level restrictions apply," said Mrs. Hinkle. Casa de Amigos is a barrier-free building designed to accommodate handicapped employees.

Other job qualifications include an ability to relate to people of various ethnic backgrounds, ability to organize time and to work independently in an unstructured setting, ability to work with others and absolute honesty.

In addition, at least one of the volunteers should be able to motivate people, to teach others and to speak before a group. Also, one volunteer should be bilingual (English-Spanish), have business experience including knowledge of purchasing and accounting procedures, have a basic ability to communicate in writing and to implement media advertising, and have basic nutritional and consumer economics knowledge.

Even though the positions are designated voluntary and are paid only a living allowance, they are covered by health insurance and other benefit programs, Mrs. Hinkle said. Also, a $50 a month bonus will be paid for serving the entire term of the assignment upon completion.

The reasons for this program, said Mrs. Hinkle, is part of Casa de Amigos' mission of helping people help themselves. "A need to buy food more economically kept surfacing at Casa, and we began to explore possible ways of obtaining food at lower prices."

The co-op arrangement emerged from discussions of an advisory panel as the most feasible way to approach the situation. Casa de Amigos, a United Way agency, first cleared the idea with United Way Allocation volunteers and then began to develop its application to Vista.

During the program's first year, Mrs. Hinkle foresees 10 clubs of up to 50 families each being organized. Low-income food buying clubs in El Paso report their members save 20 to 50 percent on food costs, and a similar saving is possible in Midland, she added.

Mrs. Hinkle will spend several days with the El Paso co-op next month to study that operation and possibly adapt its methods to use in Midland.

"We could have asked Vista for volunteers recruited nationally," she related. "But volunteerism is so strong in Midland, we felt sure we could find the people we need right here. The people we wind up with could be millionaire industrialists or homemakers who have spent 25 years or so out of the job market."

"We don't know who we will find, but I feel sure someone in Midland is just waiting to take on a challenge like this."

Labor peace shattered by strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The blare of factory whistles shattered Poland's labor peace today as the 10 million-member Solidarity independent labor union staged a four-hour warning strike, defying Warsaw Pact troops and tanks maneuvering on the nation's borders.

"We don't want to overthrow the (Communist) party," national Solidarity leader Lech Walesa told striking workers at a steel mill near here. "We only want to get rid of the people putting the brakes on renewal."

Renewal is the word Poles have given to the economic and political reforms sought by Solidarity, the Communist bloc's first non-governmental trade union.

The strike began at 8 a.m. — 2 a.m. EST — and ended on schedule four hours later. But union officials have threatened a general — and open-ended — strike for next Tuesday if their demands are not met.

A Solidarity strike bulletin published today quoted Polish radio and television chief Stanislaw Balicki as saying the government was prepared for "30 days of strikes." It also quoted him as saying the government was ready to proclaim "a state of emergency," and that government leaders had told him the current Warsaw Pact maneuvers had been prolonged. It did not elaborate.

A Solidarity spokesman said workers walked off their jobs in the Silesia coal mines, at factories in Wroclaw, Jelenia Gora, Katowice and Lublin, and in the shipyards of Gdansk, flashpoint of last summer's labor protests. The spokesman could not say immediately what portion of the Solidarity membership participated.

The warning strike was the first since Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski became Poland's premier Feb. 10 and called for a 90-day respite from strikes. It was believed to be the largest coordinated labor protest in Communist Poland's 38-year history.

Poland's official news media reported the work stoppages without comment. The Soviet news agency Tass, which called the situation "tense" in a lengthy article Thursday, did not refer to the strikes directly today.

In Washington, officials were watching developments with new concern.

Solidarity leaders met at a Warsaw hotel to prepare for the expected resumption later today of negotiations postponed by the government Thursday. The talks are expected to focus on union grievances stemming from last week's beatings of farmers and unionists in Bydgoszcz.

Polish shoppers, meanwhile, prepared for the worst, joining block-long lines outside of grocery stores and emptying the shelves of what little food was available.

In Warsaw, factory whistles heralded the strike. Transportation in the capital ground to a halt. Some 4,000 employees at the giant Huta Warszawa steel mill on the city's northern outskirts stopped work, as did 5,000 at the Ursus tractor factory nearby.

Walesa toured a number of the plants by car. At the Huta Warszawa plant, he appealed for support — but also for patience. "We want to give the premier some time to restore order."

At the tractor plant, site of 1976 disturbances over food prices, activists distributed half-loaves of bread and workers stood atop fork lifts to place the red and white Polish flag on beams.

The official Polish news agency PAP took note of the strike with the observation that "a state of social tensions prevails but there is peace everywhere."

Burnett victory over Enquirer greeted with joy and warning

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While Hollywood celebrities showered Carol Burnett with warm words of congratulation at the news of her $1.6 million libel victory against the National Enquirer, one entertainer warned the tabloid to beware.

The warning came Thursday from comedian Johnny Carson, who used his NBC-TV "Tonight Show" last week to blast the Enquirer and its editors as "liars" and to dare the publication to sue him.

"I'm not only delighted for Carol, but I'm delighted for anyone who is attacked by publications like the Enquirer," said Carson, whose own broadside was prompted by an Enquirer report that his marriage was headed for divorce.

"If this does anything, it puts publications like the Enquirer on notice that those of us who are in the public eye have rights."

Carson has not sued the weekly tabloid, but those engaged in litigation against it include his announcer and sidekick, Ed McMahon. Others are Dolly Parton and Jeff Wald, who filed a $30 million suit along with his wife, singer Helen Reddy, when the publication described him as "a madman" and her as "a faded singing star."

"Yippeee!" Wald exclaimed at the news of the verdict.

"I think it's an absolute moral victory," he said. "My suit will stand on its own merits. But in my opinion, it's like winning the first battle against Hitler."

Another couple — comedian Marty Ingels and actress Shirley Jones — sued the Enquirer for $20 million, contending it reported she was too drunk to work.

Ingels said he telephoned news of the Burnett verdict to Miss Jones in North Carolina, where she is making a movie, "and it was the first time I ever heard her yelp."

"We are ecstatic, elated, exhilarated and we also feel pretty good," said Ingels. "It was such a clear cut evil, these guys are such bad guys, that it was clearly a question of truth against the system."

"It was such a clear cut case of evil that responsible people were doing things they had no right to do, like Johnny Carson and the governor," he said, referring to Carson's attack and Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s telephone call to wish Miss Burnett well in her suit.

"We're next now," Ingels said, adding, however, that it would probably be at least two years before his case went to trial.

He said the Enquirer had not issued a retraction of the article about him and Miss Jones.

"Our case is 46 times stronger than Carol's," he said, adding he was troubled about one aspect of Miss Burnett's suit, based on a 1976 item which said she was boisterous and argumentative in a Washington restaurant.

"Believe or not, during this entire siege, the circulation of the Enquirer went up," Ingels said. "That just devastated me."

Nurse gets award

Mildred Ford, the registered nurse who won a racial discrimination suit in federal court here, was awarded $1,407.10 in damages by U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

Her attorney, E. Brice Cunningham of Dallas, was granted $7,600 for his services in representing Ms. Ford.

The judgment was against the Midland clinic of Permian Basin Planned Parenthood, Inc.

Ms. Ford, 55, had claimed that she was fired from her $15,500-a-year job as a nurse practitioner in November 1978 because she was black and was replaced by a white nurse.

Clara Garnett, her co-plaintiff in the suit, was denied any relief. The court determined that Ms. Garnett, a black records clerk, was dismissed from her job after she was involved in a squabble with a Georgia Kubiak, a white nurse and the clinic's supervisor.

PBPP fired Ms. Garnett for insubordination. Bunton ruled, "A white employee would have been fired under the same circumstances."

PBPP executive director Phyllis Macey's decision to fire Ms. Ford was confirmed by the agency's personnel committee. It came after Ms. Ford had been on a leave of absence for two months.

The court ruled that the agency had no right to fire Ms. Ford.

"The court concludes...that had Ford been a white employee, she would not have been given the two-month leave of absence, which led to her termination. Thus, Ford was fired as a result of racial discrimination."

Ms. Ford had not sought job reinstatement, although she had been in the PBPP employ since 1970. Currently, she is a $30,000-a-year director of nurses for Martin County Hospital in Stanton.

In settling on a fee to be paid by the PBPP for attorney Cunningham, Bunton considered the difficulty of the case and the time and effort which the lawyer had spent on the Ford phase of the lawsuit.

Cunningham had sought a fee based on his "usual" charge of $100 to $125 per hour and for 128.5 hours. Based on that, Cunningham's proposed fee would have been between $12,850 to $16,062.50.

But Bunton determined that $80 an hour would be a "reasonable fee for a trial of this type of litigation in Midland County, Texas" and also found that "95 hours" of time spent on the case was "reasonable."

"...This case presented no unusual nor complex questions of law," the judge ruled, and noted that "the amount of money involved in this case is not large."

Economic indicators reveal third straight monthly drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported a third straight monthly decline today in a series of indicators designed to forecast the direction of the nation's economy.

The Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Indicators fell 0.3 percent in February, following previous declines of 0.6 percent in January and 0.1 percent in December. The figures for February and January were officially corrected by the department shortly after it had reported the index fell 0.4 percent in February after a previous decline of 0.4 percent in January.

The new figures were again generally in line with most economists' predictions of sluggish growth — or no growth at all — in the U.S. economy in coming months.

A February decline in the average number of hours worked by American wage-earners — from 40.4 in January to 39.8 in February — was the biggest contributor to the decline in the leading indicators index.

In all, six of the indicators fell in February, including those for the lay-off rate, inflation-adjusted contracts and orders for new plant and equipment, building permits, stock prices and the inflation-adjusted money supply.

Four indicators rose in February: new orders after adjustment for inflation, delivery performance, liquid assets and producer prices for key raw materials.

The 2.3 percent rise in wholesale prices for raw materials in February, which could be a healthy economic sign of growing demand, made the biggest positive impact on the index, the report said.

It also said the Index of Coincident Indicators, designed to show current economic activity, also decreased 0.4 percent in February after rising 0.3 percent in January.

The new report revised the December change in the leading indicators index upward. The change, originally reported at a negative 0.8 percent, was actually down only 0.1 percent, the report said.

Kickback probe prompts official's resignation

DALLAS (AP) — A county commissioner has reportedly agreed to resign to avoid prosecution in a multistate kickback investigation that may result in indictments of as many as 50 politicians in Texas alone.

The federal investigation has involved close examination of county road and bridge fund records, sources have told The Associated Press.

Investigators for the U.S. Justice Department are looking into reports of kickbacks said to involve sales representatives trying to sell their products and equipment to county governments, the sources said. Some of the alleged payments date back as long as six years.

One county judge, who asked that his name not be used, said one of the four commissioners in his county has agreed to repay money received in a kickback scheme and step down rather than face prosecution.

"From what I understand, it (the resignation) is imminent," the judge said.

Of several county officials who talked to The Associated Press about the investigation, only one would let his name be used.

Honduran airliner hijacked

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A Honduran airliner with an estimated 80 passengers, including about 20 Americans, was hijacked here Friday morning and flown to Managua, Nicaragua, airport and airline authorities said.

The airliner was commandeered shortly after takeoff on a flight scheduled for the Honduran city of San Pedro Sula, then to Belize and New Orleans.

There was no immediate information about how many hijackers there were or what their demands were, but airline director Capt. Rolando Figaroa said they appeared to be Nicaraguans.

Air traffic director Carlos Alvarado said the pilot of the Tan-Sahsa plane radioed four minutes after takeoff that the plane had been hijacked and asked for the course to Managua, normally about a 30-minute flight.

The plane departed at 8:45 a.m. (9:45 a.m. EST) and landed in Managua about an hour later. There was no immediate explanation for the longer than usual trip.

Figaroa said the hijackers apparently were two Nicaraguan members of a group called the Cinchonero Popular Liberation Movement and that officials of Nicaragua's ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front were negotiating with them. Nothing is known about the Cinchonero group.

In Managua, Manuel Porras, director of civil aviation, said the plane was parked at the west extreme of Sandino International Airport. The airport was closed to all traffic.

The names of the Americans were not immediately available.

Braniff announces flight discounts to Florida

DALLAS — Braniff International has announced a 50 percent discount on fares between Midland and Miami, Fort Lauderdale, Orlando and Tampa, Fla. The program is in effect and all travel must be completed by June 30. There are no advance purchase requirements and many seats are available at the discount fare on all flights.

Coach fare from Midland to Miami or Fort Lauderdale is $133; to Orlando or Tampa, $131.

Neal Robinson, executive vice president of marketing for Braniff, said the discount program was designed to emphasize Braniff's service to the four major destinations in Florida and to generate new traffic to the continually-expanding Florida market.

Robinson said that offering a discount fare during an off-season period makes good sense both for the public and for the airline. "We expect to enjoy Florida's numerous attractions during the spring season at an affordable price."

Grabbing the bull's horns

Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne's much-publicized move to Cabrini Green, a crime-ridden public housing project on that city's Near North Side, probably has already accomplished a part of what she had hoped: Drawing attention to a blighted area that, according to news accounts, is rapidly being overrun by gangs.

An aide in the mayor's office this week said the decision to move into the 70-acre public housing project, announced Saturday, came after a tour of Cabrini Green by Mayor Byrne, who talked with a recent rape victim at the complex. That conversation, the aide said, apparently was instrumental in the mayor's decision.

Comments regarding Mayor Byrne's move have run the gamut from praise to criticism. Her move has been called "politically motivated" and designed to improve her standing with black constituents. Others have heralded her action, speculating it will bring about a safer neighborhood for residents of the Cabrini Green area.

Mayor Byrne's decision is noteworthy because she has intentionally thrust herself and other unwitting city officials into the position of having to do something about one of Chicago's distasteful problems.

It's sometimes easy to sit idly by when you refuse to recognize a problem. It's tougher when you have to live with that problem day in and day out, and that problem threatens your peace, harmony, sanity and very existence. And some, like the residents of Cabrini Green, don't have the luxury of being able to move away.

Mayor Byrne's motives are not all clear. Maybe she is just a concerned and compassionate urban leader. Or maybe she is guided by ulterior motives such as the personal political benefit to be derived from the press exposure resulting from her move to the complex.

Fortunately for the residents of Cabrini Green and the surrounding area, the basic result will be the same regardless of the motives.

A press aide to Mayor Byrne noted that "when leadership takes the bull by the horns usually you can get some action." How true, how true.

That is a "mini-lesson" in government that should prove beneficial for just about every elected official.

Midland's men of vision

It was fitting for the Petroleum Club's Wildcat Committee to honor Midland bankers Jno. P. Butler and Murray Fasken earlier this week for their contributions to Midland and the petroleum industry down through the years.

Both men richly deserve the recognition they received. They are of the breed of men who built Midland and who helped to forge the present out of the dreams of yesterday.

Anyone associated with the oil industry, but most particularly independent oil operators, will attest to the crucial importance played by financial institutions and financial backers. Butler and Fasken have played that role, not only consistently but consistently well.

They stood with Midland and the oil industry here when all looked bleak and others were throwing in the towel. They stayed because they are men of vision and of perseverance. They did not sit idly by and wait for the good life to come upon them. Rather, they took their fates into their own hands and forged their own futures and, with them, the future of the city.

Jno. P. Butler and Murray Fasken are what Midland is all about.

INSIDE REPORT:

Indecision of SALT question leaves Reagan in vacuum

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — At his March 4 staff meeting, President Reagan exposed the SALT policy vacuum when, noting a State Department statement in the morning newspapers that the U.S. would adhere to SALT I and SALT II, he asked: Who in the world at State is saying that?

"Who in the world" happened to be Secretary of State Alexander Haig himself. Thus, after two months in office Reagan's question reveals not only an information gap on SALT between him and his senior Cabinet officer but administration delay in deciding what to do about arms control.

Reagan has not yet placed the tricky SALT question before his National Security Council. It has not been the subject of a single top-level discussion, despite its critical effect on U.S.-Soviet and U.S.-European policy. No effort has been made to shape the president's rearmament program, including nuclear weaponry, to conform to a SALT policy not yet determined.

All of Reagan's senior aides in the Oval Office that morning were aware that the "who in the world" at the State Department was Al Haig. But not Ronald Reagan.

That morning's news account quoted the State Department that the U.S. was "adhering for now" to both SALT pacts — Richard Nixon's expired SALT I and Jimmy Carter's unrattified SALT II — if the Soviets did likewise. Haig ordered that policy statement issued in intentionally dramatic form (reporters were telephoned about it at home) to drive home his repudiation of Secretary of the Navy John Lehman. A day earlier, Lehman declared that as far as he was concerned, the two pacts were null and void in terms of limiting U.S. rearmament.

Evans

Indeed, Lehman had quietly halted the conversion of older-type Polaris submarines to boats incapable of firing nuclear weapons, a downgrading required under the limits imposed by the lapsed SALT I agreement. Lehman, deputy arms control director in the Ford administration, has been a sharp critic of the treaties. Besides, judging from everything Reagan said during the presidential campaign about the inequitable SALT process, Lehman had reason to think he was carrying out administration policy.

The president clearly had not been briefed either on Lehman's decision to treat SALT I as a dead letter or on Haig's decision to stick to both pacts so long as the Soviets do. That breakdown in communications reflects Reagan's own inclinations.

White House staffers claim that, unlike Richard Nixon, who hated the perplexities of domestic policy, Reagan is fascinated by the nuances of building and enacting his economic program and less interested in national security complexities.

Reagan also is committed to "Cabinet government," which encourages his Cabinet members to stretch their powers as far as they can get away with. "The question," one aide told us, "is when does Al Haig or Cap Weinberger leave off and Ronald Reagan take over? There is no answer to that yet."

The failure of the Reagan system to devise an administration-wide strategy on SALT is adding to the chronic anxiety of U.S. allies in Europe where domestic left-wing political pressure against nuclear weapons is growing. Haig's swift, harsh reprimand to Lehman was intended to suppress this European political agitation.

But only Reagan himself can do that, and in the end he may decide not to. He may decide to take the heat from the Europeans, abandoning SALT until, far in the future, new negotiations result in a different kind of treaty.

It is not only John Lehman who strongly advocates that course. Secret administration studies nearing completion have identified several "quick fixes" to make the now vulnerable U.S. land-based missile system safe from a possible Soviet first-strike. But these "fixes" would violate SALT II.

One indication that Reagan may well choose that course despite Western Europe's anguish is the continuing battle inside the administration over alleged Soviet violations of SALT I. Instead of publicizing examples documented by U.S. intelligence, they may be shelved. The reason: It would be embarrassing to accuse the Kremlin of violating the SALT treaties if Reagan intends to declare both pacts null and void.

The issue is ignored by the president's national security apparatus. Reagan has chaired NSC meetings on a dozen big issues, such as putting American troops into the Middle East or granting new military aid to Pakistan. The SALT issue is still disembody, with the president himself surprised at decisions being made in his name.

New Middle East alliance would be a major blunder

If the news reports are true, President Reagan appears to be close to making his first major foreign policy blunder by trying to forge a Middle East alliance.

It is said that the administration intends to supply Saudi Arabia not only with additional equipment necessary to give its F-15s offensive capability, but also with the U.S.'s most advanced airborne radar planes (AWACs). On top of that, it is being reported that Reagan intends to spend $1 billion on an Egyptian airbase. This is unwise for a number of reasons. One, neither Saudi Arabia nor Egypt is a reliable ally of the United States. Egypt's Anwar Sadat has flatly refused to allow the United States to take over the two Israeli airfields, the best in the world, that are in the Sinai. As a matter of fact, he said if the U.S. expects to establish military bases in Egypt, it can "go to hell." I can't see much logic in spending $1 billion to improve one Egyptian base when he has already refused us the use of two existing bases.

Saudi Arabia, of course, is even more hostile. The Saudis may be friendly to the multinational oil companies, but they have never done the American people or the American government any favors. They are the principal supplier of money to the PLO which has slaughtered innocent American citizens without so much as a blink of the eye. They have led the fight to oppose the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty. They have twice declared a holy war against Israel and despite oil company apologists, have led the OPEC assault on the American consumer and reneged on their promises.

Three, Egypt and Saudi Arabia together wouldn't be worth one Israeli division, assuming — and there's no reason to even assume it — that they would fight against a Soviet force.

Four, one needs only common sense, not a security clearance, to recognize that if the Soviet Union wishes to take over Persian Gulf nations, including Saudi Arabia, it will utilize internal subversion, not an external invasion. Massive conventional armaments are useless in such a situation as was only recently demonstrated when America's number one and most heavily armed ally, the Shah, was toppled by mobs in the streets of Tehran.

Five, the United States should at least extract some concessions and apparently none are being demanded. It does not make sense to provide Saudi Arabia, which has declared itself in a Holy War against Israel, with sophisticated weapons while we are at the same time committed to Israel's survival. The least we could demand of the Saudis as a condition of the sale is that they renounce their Holy War, support the Camp David Peace Initiative, and quit sending millions of dollars to terrorists.

I would hate to think that Ronald Reagan is going to allow the oil companies and international banks which are in bed with the Arabs to persuade him to sacrifice not only American morality but also its strategic interests.

Oil and anti-semitism not withstanding, there is only one nation in the Middle East which is stable, which shares American values, which is loyal and dependable and above all capable, and that is Israel. In a crisis, Israel will be there; all you will see of Saudis and Egyptians are the rear ends of their camels.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, March 27, the 86th day of 1981. There are 279 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 27, 1945, during World War II, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower declared that German military forces on the Western Front had been defeated.

On this date: In 1703, Russian Czar Peter the Great founded the city of St. Petersburg.

In 1939, Adolf Hitler demanded that Poland agree to German annexation of Danzig.

In 1960, the Palestine Army was founded by the Premier of Iraq, Gen. Kassem.

And in 1970, a severe earthquake jolted western Turkey, killing more than 1,000 people and leaving 90,000 homeless.

Ten years ago: Thousands were reported killed in fighting between army troops and civilians in East Pakistan.

Five years ago: South Africa pulled its military forces out of Angola.

One year ago: Iran's runoff parliamentary elections were postponed, which meant the American hostage issue would be put off for at least another four months.

Today's birthday: Actress Gloria Swanson is 83. Former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is 64. And writer John Cheever is 69.

Thought for today: Look back and smile at perils past — Sir Walter Scott, Scottish writer (1771-1832).

A COVENANT SEALED WITH BLOOD

Jesus and the others arrived, and at the proper time all sat down together at the table; and He said, "I have looked forward to this hour with deep longing, anxious to eat this Passover meal with you before My suffering begins. For I tell you now that I won't eat it again until what it represents has occurred in the Kingdom of God."

Then He took a glass of wine, and when He had given thanks for it, He said, "Take this and share it among yourselves. For I will not drink wine again until the Kingdom of God has come."

Then He took a loaf of bread; and when He had thanked God for it, He broke it apart and gave it to them, saying, "This is My body, given for you. Eat it in remembrance of Me."

After supper He gave them another glass of wine, saying, "This wine is the token of God's new agreement to save you—an agreement sealed with the blood I shall pour out to purchase back your souls."

"But here at this table, sitting among us as a friend, is the man who will betray Me. I must die. It is part of God's plan. But, oh, the horror awaiting that man who betrays Me."

Then the disciples wondered among themselves which of them would ever do such a thing.

China using velvet glove approach to Taiwanese

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — As China intensifies its mailed-fist campaign against arms sales to Taiwan, it also maintains a velvet glove of propaganda to woo world opinion and the people of the Nationalist Chinese island.

Peking reminded the United States again Wednesday that the sale of defensive weapons to Taiwan was unacceptable to it. Last month it downgraded relations with the Netherlands because it would not cancel the sale of two submarines to the Nationalists.

At the same time, however, China has made steady overtures to Taiwan to rejoin the mainland. It makes myriad symbolic gestures intended to dispel fears of communism and demonstrate peaceful intentions toward the island.

Taiwan, then known as Formosa, became the seat of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Chinese government when the Communists won the civil war on the mainland in 1949. Chiang died in 1975 and his son, Chiang Ching-kuo, now is president.

China has proposed negotiations on reunification and the reopening of mail, air, shipping and telecommunications links between island and mainland. It has dropped import duties on goods made in what it considers the "province" of Taiwan.

Concern of Taiwanese folk songs, admiration for Taiwan-style capitalism, sentiments tea parties for Taiwan compatriots — all are part of the velvet glove blandishments of reunification.

AP News Analysis

The Nationalist government dismisses the overtures as communist tricks and refuses to negotiate.

Late last year China raised its mailed fist and reminded the world it eventually could resort to force. It called the authorities on the island "traitors guilty of spitting the motherland."

Two weeks ago, the official Chinese news agency Hsinhua called Taiwan an "abnormal society" and a "profiteer's paradise." Some people on Taiwan, it charged, throw money around like dirt, while others toil day and night.

The velvet glove, however, seems to be the desired approach.

The children of visiting Taiwan compatriots dance at Peking receptions and sometimes sing, "Mother, Where are You?", a song referring to what China sees as the relationship between the mainland and the island.

A popular movie, "Love at Lushan," tells the love story of a Taiwan girl and a mainland boy. In the end, both romance and communism triumph and they marry of the mainland.

Last December, Peking's capital stadium was filled with 20,000 toe-tapping spectators for three nights of concerts of Taiwanese folk music. Some of China's most popular entertainers dressed up in tight, low-cut gowns, Western suits and ties and sang popular Taiwan songs. The band wore Western suits and played guitars.

The United Front Organization also holds tea parties for Taiwan compatriots. Taiwan scholars who have returned from abroad are marched out to praise China's modernization and urge the island to return to the embrace of the motherland.

On the eve of a Women's Day march, China cited prominent women of Taiwan origin who distinguished themselves under the communist system.

Mainland publishing houses turn out books on Taiwan politics, economics, education, and literature. Taiwan's economic success is openly acknowledged, and the mainland says it can learn from Taiwan. Last year China published 22 articles from Taiwan newspapers about management theory and practice.

China also publicizes the dramatic increase in trade between the island and the mainland via Hong Kong. Official Hong Kong statistics show that China imported $241 million worth of Taiwan-made goods in 1980, an increase of 1,032 percent over 1979. Taiwan imported only $67 million worth of Chinese goods last year, but that was an increase of 24 percent.

Chinese officials in Hong Kong said this week that without the great demand of the mainland, several Taiwan television factories would have gone bankrupt in 1979.

Some Chinese department stores prominently display goods made in the "Province of Taiwan." Peking Radio has said China's demand for Taiwan products will increase as the mainland raises its standard of living.

A recent radio report said the appearance of Taiwan goods in mainland stores was "like the return of a long separated and lost family member."

Pennsylvania electricity bills soaring

HAIRSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Soaring utility bills that are hampering Pennsylvania's businesses could be eased by reopening the undamaged reactor at Three Mile Island, says the state Chamber of Commerce.

"Dramatic increases in the cost of electricity are having a depressing economic effect," chamber President Robert Hibbard said at a news conference Wednesday.

A survey conducted for the chamber found that higher electric rates are resulting in lower profits, fewer jobs and less investment, Hibbard said.

Among the findings of the survey:

—Electric bills jumped 47 percent to $115,000 per month last year at the Lebanon Steel Foundry. The company said it is at a competitive disadvantage and will probably have fewer job openings in the future.

—The chief engineer at Binney & Smith, an Easton crayon manufacturer, said, "Preference will be given to other locations" if the firm expands. The company's electric bill rose from $418,000 to $607,000 last year, with only 67 percent of the increase due to expansion.

Hibbard urged a quick decision on the future of the undamaged Unit 1 reactor at TMI.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission shut down Unit 1 shortly after the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident two years ago crippled the neighboring Unit 2 reactor. It is holding safety hearings to determine whether Unit 1 should return to service.

"We think two years is a long enough period for the NRC to have checked it out and to have made a decision," Hibbard said. "The continued shutdown of a safe Unit 1 promotes inflation and adds to our dependence on foreign oil."

Metropolitan Edison, operator and part-owner of TMI, has had to charge customers some $165 million since the March 29, 1979, accident to pay for replacement power.

Hibbard said continued shutdown of the Unit 1 reactor could force Met Ed into bankruptcy, resulting in still higher costs to utility customers.

Snuff dipping causes cancer

BOSTON (AP) — "Dipping" snuff, which has been proposed as a safer substitute for smoking, itself poses a "substantial" risk of cancer, especially for life-long users, according to a federal study.

The study, conducted by the National Cancer Institute, found that the powdery tobacco quadruples the risk of developing cancer of the mouth.

"The carcinogenic hazard of oral snuff is of special concern in view of the recent upswing in consumption of smokeless tobacco in the United States," the report says.

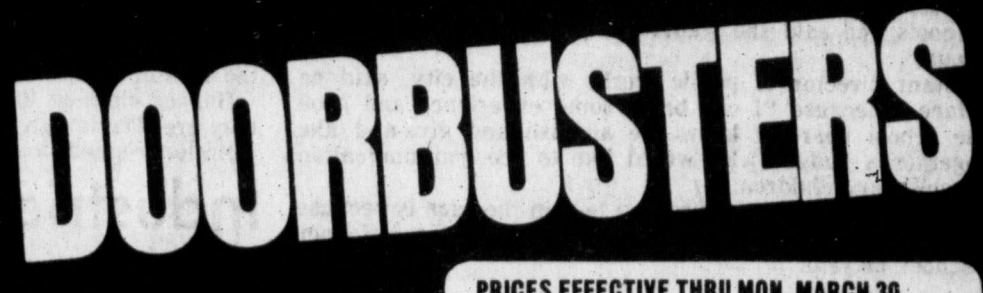

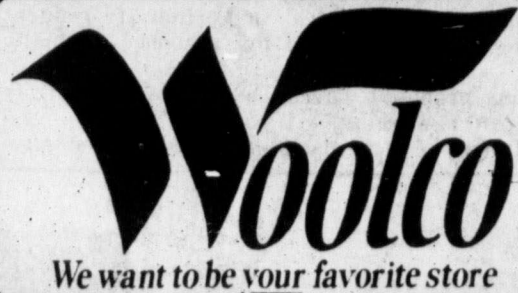

Doctors studied people who use snuff, or smokeless tobacco, by placing the substance between their cheek and gums, or "dipping." Snuff can also be taken up into the nose by sniffing.

Although snuff has long been suspected as a cause of cancer, the researchers say their study is the first to show a definite link.

The study was directed by Dr. Deborah M. Winn of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., and published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors surveyed 255 women with cancer of the mouth or pharynx — the cavity leading from the nose and mouth to the larynx and esophagus — who lived in 67 counties in rural central North Carolina. They compared these results with interviews of 502 healthy women from the same region.

Place 3, cited accomplishments of the council during his service. "Seems like I'm the one who has to explain what has been going on with the City Council," he began.

"We have been planning ahead," Thomas said, citing remodeling of Midland Regional Airport, purchasing of two new park sites and developing of three other park sites.

"But the city is growing and it's got problems," he said, suggesting one-way streets for the city and possibly a municipal downtown parking garage.

Of the school board candidates, Dickie Gatlin wasn't present and League President Charleen Rosebery apologized, saying the league had inadvertently overlooked him in the invitations.

Ann Page, running for Place 3, as is Gatlin, recounted her experiences as a child in public schools and said she wants to "preserve the opportunity for a child to reach out."

Mike Butler, assistant director of public works with the city, said he chose to run for Place 4 because "I can bring some experience and good management to the school board. I know the anguish and give-and-take of trying to put together a budget." He would like to see communication with the parents, teachers and children.

Gary Hopper of KOSA-TV, said the only reason he's in the race is because of his children. His involvement in the news media has acquainted Hopper with all aspects of school, he said.

HE PROPOSED keeping schools up to minimum standards and retaining high quality educators.

Four candidates are seeking the three at-large places on the Midland County Hospital board of directors.

First to speak, Tom Ingram explained he had served 19 months of an unexpired term. "Recently, the hospital has been running a temperature, but I think it's coming down."

The recently-released Tribrook study will mean that "everyone's job will be minutely defined, including the board of directors. We need to have responsibility and accountability."

Ed Magruder, who has been on that board since 1977, explained the hospital district's duties cover "the entire county. We're approaching the time when our principal function will be to plan ahead to meet health care needs."

Dr. Henrie Mast has been on the board two years, but he has been on the hospital staff since 1950. "I want nothing from this position except to provide Midland with the best hospital care and facilities with a reasonable cost."

And Wanda Mohr, a registered nurse, said she sees problems in indigent care, nursing, the public image, employee morale and parking problems. "She wants to serve as an ombudsman where 'the buck stops with Wanda.'"

DURING THE QUESTIONING session, the City Council candidates agreed on the need for stricter building code enforcement.

Thomas mentioned the problem the council faces of "do you want to close someone's residence who has no alternative to live there?"

Phipps saw code enforcement as a way to rejuvenate areas of Midland, and Marcum said some homes need to be rehabilitated before the city initiates stricter enforcement of the code.

And code enforcement could be one way to begin rejuvenating the south and east sides of Midland, said Phipps.

To encourage improvement in those areas, Veloz said the council needs to make code enforcement a commitment. Hatfield added that the council should tackle one or two items, such as street paving, to make some inroads into that problem area.

Busing and related problems were the primary focus of questions for the school board candidates.

Questioned about court decisions easing requirements on busing, Butler said he didn't see any effect upon Midland's busing. "Right now, we'll have to live with the mandates handed down."

Both Hopper and Mrs. Page were in favor also of proceeding with Midland's current plan. Mrs. Page added that she had helped to develop the cluster plan when she was previously on the board.

ANOTHER QUESTION sought the candidates' suggestions to reduce the negative image that integration has brought to the schools, especially in the area of discipline.

Hopper claimed the discipline problems "aren't as great as people think they are. The integration program is working."

Butler replied that "to say we've got discipline problems because of integration is blowing it out of proportion. It's more a problem of overcrowding in the schools."

The school administrators haven't decided what to do with the extra money once Social Security is dropped, the three candidates said, and none had a specific suggestion.

One questioner pointed out that of 135 teachers hired last year, only one was black. Hopper and Butler said they would have to look into how many blacks applied and their qualifications. Mrs. Page said the "board should be aware of such problems before they result in a class action suit."

Hospital board candidates were questioned about indigent patients and why many are going to Odessa for treatment.

Dr. Mast admitted that many are going to Odessa, and then listed general guidelines used by MMH in determining who gets assistance with their bills.

Mrs. Mohr doesn't "think MMH has done a fine job of indigent care. We need to keep patients here with their families and their own physicians," she said, suggesting a contract with Parkview Hospital to care for the indigent patients.

"Let's keep the money here," she added.

Oil company employees indicted

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — An oil company president and a laborer accused of swindling a Dallas-based company out of $425,000 were indicted for theft by a county grand jury here.

The Howard County grand jury indicted D.C. "Butch" Wheeler, president of Jaco Oil Co. of Midland, and John Theford Sims, a pumper for Jaco, on one count each of theft over $10,000.

They are charged with selling the same tank of oil to Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. several times without ever delivering it.

A Cosden official would be shown the tank full of crude oil adjacent to a Cosden pipeline and approve the sale, then pumps would be turned on to transfer the oil, but would be shut down as soon as the Cosden man left, investigators said.

The alleged thefts involved 12,500 barrels of crude oil and occurred over a period of months on the W.D. Currie lease south of Big Spring.

The two men were arrested Jan. 5 at the lease.

Wheeler and Sims have been free on $20,000 bonds since their arrests.

Navy brings back bell-bottom pants

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The bell-bottom trouser is completely out of style, but the Navy wants its sailors to look like sailors again and is reviving the flaring breeches for all enlisted personnel below the rank of chief.

Effective immediately, first class petty officers may wear the bell-bottom trousers and flapped jumpers affectionately known as "cracker-jacks" — complete with "Dixie Cup" white hats and neckerchiefs.

It appeared to be a popular decision with the sailors.

Yeoman 1st Class David Kirkpatrick called it "fantastic. That uniform is the image of what civilians think a sailor should be."

With the instructions from Washington, the Navy has come full circle in its uniform policy.

It has returned to the days before Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt, former chief of naval operations, did away with bell-bottoms in favor of coat-and-tie outfits for everyone. That was in the early 1970s when bell-bottomed jeans were popular with the nation's teens.

Before Zumwalt, coats and ties were reserved for chief petty officers and commissioned officers.

Sailors say bell-bottom uniforms are cheaper than coats and ties and can be folded and stored beneath a bunk without losing their shape.

Hospital receives certificate

Midland Memorial Hospital has been presented with the American Hospital Association's Certificate of Recognition acknowledging its efforts to more effectively monitor costs and productivity.

Through participating in a management information program provided by Hospital Administrative Services, a division of AHA, Midland Memorial is able to compare costs and productivity both internally and with other facilities of comparable bed sizes.

"Using the HAS program," Administrator Ray Branson said, "we are able to gauge our own effectiveness and keep costs down. It also gives us a basis upon which future decisions can be made."

Midland Memorial has been utilizing HAS programs for several years and regularly uses the information in its cost containment efforts. They currently utilize MONITREND, designed to provide even more effective management data.

Bandit finds keys in ignition, drives away with $2.4 million

MONTREAL (AP) — The front door of the armored truck was unlocked, the keys were in the ignition and $2.4 million in cash and securities were stacked neatly in the back when the lone bandit truck. He hopped in, scared off a guard and drove off.

The guard and two others flagged a taxi and tried to give chase but couldn't keep up, police said. The dark blue armored truck was found in an east Montreal alley Thursday afternoon about an hour after it was taken — but the bandit and the loot were gone.

Constable Mario D'Arcy, a police spokesman, said investigators believe the thief must have had help emptying the truck, "because it was done so quickly." But authorities were unable to say whether the robbery was premeditated — and equally unable to report progress in tracking down the culprits.

D'Arcy said the armored truck, owned by Alliance Securite Blindee, was making one of several stops at downtown financial institutions at about noon. The driver and one messenger had gone to lunch, leaving another guard in the back of the truck, when a man in his mid-30s wearing a construction helmet climbed in brandishing a paper bag.

"The suspect held up the bag, which appeared to hold a gun, at the security guard sitting in the rear with the money," the constable said. "The guard... jumped out... and notified the other two guards."

The keys, however, had been left dangling from the ignition. When the guards returned, the truck was gone. They tried to follow in a taxicab but couldn't keep up, the constable said.

The truck was found three miles away between a bank branch and an abandoned warehouse. All that remained of the cash and securities was a handful of loose change.

Officials at Alliance Blindee's headquarters in Montreal refused to comment on the heist, but the operations director at the company's warehouse, Marcel Chagnon, said theft is just one of the risks a security business runs.

"It's part of the game in the armored truck business," Chagnon said. "In the morning you see 20 trucks going out and you know you have 20 chances of being robbed."

Robbery has become almost a routine affair in the armored truck business in Montreal in recent years.

FBI has suspects in Atlanta killings

ATLANTA (AP) — As Atlanta authorities discounted the possibility that a man arrested in New York might be linked to the killings and disappearances of 22 black children here, the director of the FBI said the agency has "three or four suspects" in some of the cases.

But FBI Director William Webster said in Washington Thursday that the agency doesn't have a suspect in the several killings that are believed to be related. He said the killings in which the FBI has suspects "are not part of the main string" of murders.

An FBI spokesman said there was not enough evidence on the suspects to present to a federal or state grand jury for indictments.

Authorities in Atlanta said meanwhile that the discovery of similar dog hairs on the bodies of three of the 20 children found slain here over the past 20 months does not by itself indicate that the three were killed by the same person.

But the dog hairs — like the fibrous material reportedly found on the bodies of seven of the slain children — could turn out to be significant in linking some of the slayings once a suspect is arrested, authorities said.

In Poughkeepsie, N.Y., a New York City man arrested Sunday in the alleged abduction of a 9-year-old black boy has refused to answer questions posed by FBI agents investigating the Atlanta slayings on the advice of his lawyer.

Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said the special task force investigating the slayings does not consider the man, Frankie Edmonds, 32, of New York City, a suspect in any of the cases. He said no task force members were being sent to New York to question Edmonds and his arrest was being treated as just "another lead."

Webster said Thursday that there were "lines of coincidence" between the Atlanta killings and Edmonds, a former mental patient, but it was too early to "give a strong comment" on the Edmonds arrest.

Friends and relatives of Edmonds, who is black, however, denied that he was connected in any way to the murders.

The New York Daily News first reported the discovery of the dog hairs on Thursday, but medical examiners in the Atlanta area downplayed the report, with one saying that "the weight being given to the animal hairs right now is totally out of proportion with the evidence."

Fulton County Medical Examiner Robert Stivers said Thursday there would be no way to determine if the hairs came from the same dog unless they were markedly distinctive.

"If they're lacking a unique feature, the best we can do is say they appear to be similar," Stivers said. "You can't really match them in a legal sense."

DeKalb County Medical Examiner Joe Burton said individual bits of evidence recovered from the bodies don't have much meaning alone.

"It is the compilation of bits of evidence that have similar origins that will tend to give credence to a theory that can link the cases," he said. "But not in any of these cases do we have evidence that will stand alone" to obtain a court conviction.

In other developments Thursday:

—The Atlanta Journal published a detailed account of the $2.4 million in cash and pledges that have poured into Atlanta. The Journal said that public agencies and private citizens have given the city of Atlanta $720,265 in cash and almost $1.6 million in pledges.

New York man not linked to deaths

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Atlanta police say a New York City man who was arrested with a 9-year-old boy in his truck is not a suspect in the deaths or disappearances of 22 black children in Atlanta.

Frankie Edmonds, 32, a Vietnam veteran and former mental patient, was held on $25,000 bail today in the Dutchess County Jail in Poughkeepsie, about 90 miles north of New York City, on charges of unlawful imprisonment and endangering the welfare of a minor.

Edmonds, of the New York City borough of Queens, was seized in East Fishkill, N.Y., on Sunday in a rented truck with Georgia license plates. In the rear of the truck was Bernard Robinson of Beacon, N.Y., whom Edmonds allegedly had abducted from the Rombout Junior High School playground about 20 miles away.

Local police and FBI agents were quick to note several "running lines of coincidence," as FBI Director William Webster put it, between the Edmonds case and the Atlanta slayings. However, FBI agents have been unable to question Edmonds because his court-appointed lawyer, Dutchess County public defender Sam Collins, won't let them.

Atlanta's police commissioner, Lee Brown, said, "at this point, we are not calling him a suspect."

Andrew Criscuolo, police chief of East Fishkill, reported that Edmonds had revealed nothing that would link him to the Atlanta cases.

Prison chief sues Playboy

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Former New Mexico Corrections Secretary Adolph Saenz has filed a $65 million lawsuit against Playboy magazine in connection with an article it published on last year's bloody state prison riot.

Saenz was hired as corrections secretary two days before the Feb. 23, 1980, rebellion that claimed the lives of 33 inmates and left New Mexico's only maximum security prison in shambles. Saenz resigned under pressure in June 1980.

The libel, slander and defamation lawsuit names the magazine and Roger Morris, author of the article, "Thirty Six Hours in Santa Fe," which appeared in the March 1981 issue.

In the suit, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Houston, Saenz charges that Playboy and Morris maliciously accused him of being a party to and committing the criminal acts of murder, false imprisonment, torture, assault and battery during his 17 years with the U.S. Office of Public Safety while serving in Uruguay, Colombia and Panama.

He also charges that by innuendo it suggested he was party to the existence of an alleged "torture school" for foreign police located in Texas.

Saenz' attorney, L.A. "Skeet" McCulloch Jr. of Albuquerque, said the allegations were "totally without supporting evidence."

"Magazines such as Penthouse, National Enquirer and Playboy are going to have to get over the idea that they can manufacture material out of thin air, use it to destroy someone's career and life solely for the purposes of selling magazines and expanding their circulation," McCulloch said.

Saenz said the allegations in the article "are totally false and they knew it."

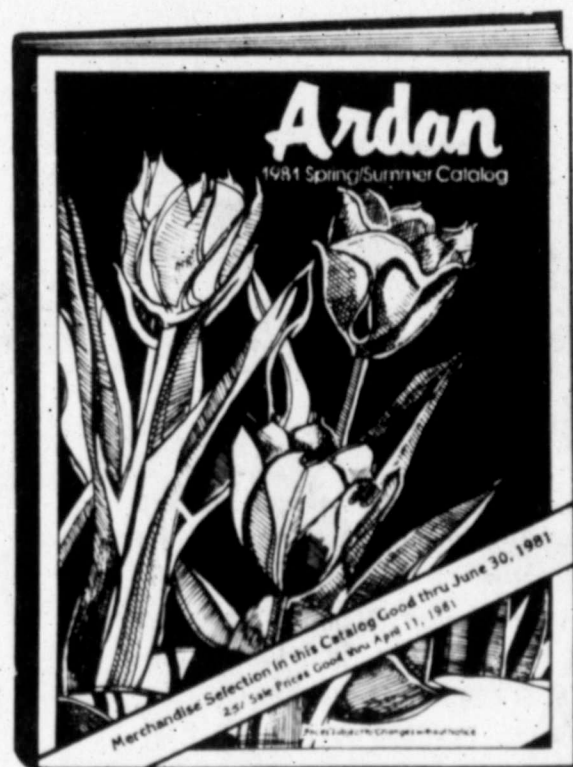

Playboy spokesman Dan Sheridan said late Thursday from the magazine's headquarters in Chicago that Playboy officials could not comment until they have had an opportunity to study the charges.

McCulloch and Saenz said they filed the suit in Houston to isolate the matter from litigation and troubles surrounding the New Mexico correctional system.

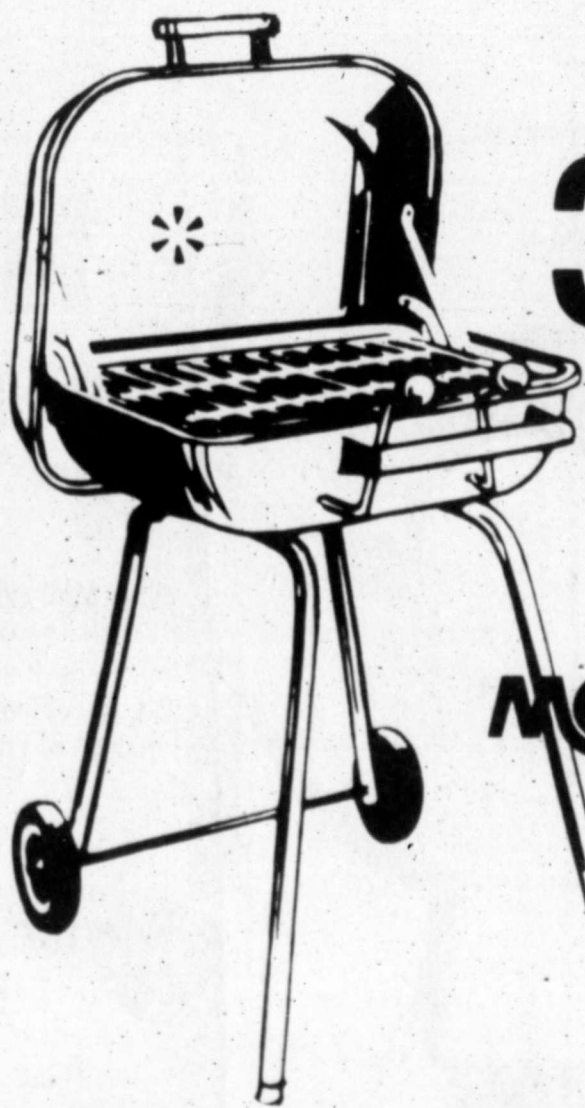

Gunmen hit Rome bank

ROME (AP) — Four masked gunmen identifying themselves as Red Brigades terrorists raided a downtown bank today and fled with the equivalent $130,000, police said.

Police said the gunmen sprayed sharp steel spikes along the road as they fled through morning rush-hour traffic to puncture the tires of pursuing police cars.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Average life expectancy is 73 years

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm interested in the general trend of the life expectancy in the United States during this century. Are there any figures that would show such a pattern? — Doug

Dear Doug: In 1900, the average life expectancy in this country was 47 years, compared with an average of 73 years today. Projections suggest that by the year 2010, the figure should reach 82.4 years.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife and I are members of a group that is very involved in sports — tennis, racquet ball, jogging, you name it. When we get together on Saturday nights and compare our numerous aches and pains, the discussion is almost humorous. This one has a sore elbow, someone else has a banged-up knee, a third person has a hamstring pull, and so on. Are my friends and I particularly susceptible to injury, or is this fitness craze having a reverse effect? I feel like signing myself "One of the Walking Wounded." — Larry

Dear Larry: A person suffering an athletic-related injury is not a member of some exclusive club. There are approximately 20 million such injuries in the United States each year among the 100 million Americans who take part in sports on a regular basis. Despite this widespread involvement in athletics, however, the President's Council on Physical Fitness reports that about 70 percent of the population of the United States is not in good physical condition. If you would like to follow my exercise program you can find the details in my book, Dr. Solomon's High Health Diet and Exercise Plan.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I realize that cigarette smoking is a health hazard for cancer, but it seems there are a number of other factors that are equally to blame. Are cigarettes really the number one villain they are made out to be? — Doug

Dear Doug: Despite overwhelming evidence of the association between cigarette smoking and a variety of diseases, some people still try to rationalize their continuing to smoke. If anyone needs additional proof of the risk of smoking cigarettes, a Japanese study may be of interest. It demonstrates that cigarette smoking is the most important factor in a person's lifestyle affecting the development of cancer at all sites in the body.

Dr. Takeshi Hirayama, of the National Cancer Center Research Institute in Tokyo, followed 264,000 people over 40 years of age for 13 years. Overall, cigarette smoking was found to be the cause of cancer in 31.8 percent of these subjects. In the United States the comparable figure is 34.5 percent.

FBI nearing conclusion of Wood assassination probe

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A federal grand jury gathered for its third consecutive session today as the FBI confirmed it may be nearing the end of a lengthy investigation into the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The investigation appears to be concentrated on Harrelson, convicted in 1973 of the $2,000 contract killing of a Central Texas grain dealer, Sam DeGelia Jr.

Appearing Thursday were El Paso businesswoman Virginia Farah, who employed Harrelson as a bodyguard while he was a fugitive from state narcotics and weapons charges last summer; Hampton and Joann Robinson of Houston, described as acquaintances of Harrelson, and three persons believed to be alibi witnesses who, Harrelson claims, saw him in Dallas the day Wood was killed in San Antonio.

None of the witnesses nor their attorneys would comment on substance of their appearances.

Harrelson, convicted drug dealer Jimmy Chagra and El Paso attorney Joe Chagra, Jimmy Chagra's younger brother, have been named as "key suspects" in the Wood investigation, the young Chagra brother has said.

In addition, Harrelson's wife and stepdaughter and a lifelong acquaintance, George Edward "Pete" Kay, have been questioned by the grand juries.

Kay appeared for five minutes Wednesday and pleaded the Fifth Amendment, his attorney said.

Mrs. Jasper, who testified last December, appeared at the federal courthouse at 5:30 p.m. Thursday in response to a subpoena and was served with a government "notice of potential conflict of interest."

However, in a brief hearing Friday, Chief U.S. District Judge William S.

Sessions said the notice was "prematuring" and should be taken up again today after she met with the grand jury.

Wood, the first federal judge murdered in more than a century, was gunned down May 29, 1979, outside his

San Antonio apartment.

He presided over many of the narcotics cases prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, who survived a barrage of bullets on Nov. 21, 1978.

Federal investigators have said for months they believed the attacks on both men, considered tough on drug dealers, were ordered by the same high-level narcotics traffickers.

The Dallas Times Herald reported Thursday that the FBI secretly recorded a conversation at a federal prison in which Jimmy Chagra told Joe Chagra that he hired Harrelson to kill Wood.

The newspaper said a federal judge authorized the electronic eavesdroppings in a sealed order and the tape was made last year while the two Chagras met in an interview room at the federal prison in Leavenworth, Kan., where Jimmy Chagra was serving a 30-year term.

He since has been transferred to the high-security prison at Marion, Ill.

At the time Wood was killed, the judge was scheduled to hear Jimmy Chagra's trial on a narcotics-related charge of continuing criminal enterprise.

The investigation into the attack on Kerr, who has been secreted at an undisclosed location for nearly two years, concentrated on members of the Bandidos Motorcycle Club.

However, federal sources have said a special Justice Department task force that has handled the case since December 1980 wanted to return indictments first in the Wood case to avoid jeopardizing the investigation.

Mandatory insurance bill passes House

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Every Texas motorist would have to carry auto liability insurance if the Senate agrees with House members.

The mandatory liability insurance bill by Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, passed the House on voice vote Thursday and was sent to the Senate. Liability insurance pays for accidents resulting from the policyholder's carelessness. Green's bill would require every motorist to have insurance covering up to $5,000 for property damage, $10,000 for bodily injury, and up to $20,000 for any one accident.

Green said the Department of Public Safety estimates 25 percent of the drivers in Texas do not have insurance. He predicts the figure would drop to 10 percent if his bill becomes law.

The bill would require each driver to carry proof of insurance to show to any law enforcement officer on demand.

Insurance companies would verify coverage only if a driver was involved in an accident.

Persons who drive without insurance could be fined $75 to $200 on first offense and $200 to $1,000, plus a possible year in jail, for subsequent violations.

A similar passed in 1979 but died in the Senate.

White defends bilingual law

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Attorney General Mark White has told a federal judge the state's current bilingual education law is adequate to meet the state's needs until the legislature sees fit to change it, an assistant said.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler has ruled the bilingual plan inadequate. On March 18, Justice denied White's request for more time to work on a new bilingual plan.

The judge has not issued a final order in the case but the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund has submitted its proposed plan.

On Thursday, White sent Justice a plan based on the existing bilingual education laws in Texas. That plan would be subject to change if the Legislature approves a new law, according to Mary Hardesty, spokeswoman for White.

"He is defending the existing law," Mrs. Hardesty said.

White also asked Justice for more time to work on the problem. He wrote Justice, "The legislative process represents the fundamental philosophy of the American constitutional form of government. Defendants are not idly standing by blindly hoping for a solution to materialize magically."

While White was mailing the motion to Justice on Thursday, a special Task Force on Bilingual Education was holding its first meeting. The panel, chaired by former Southern Methodist University President Willis Tate, will try to come up with a plan by April 15.

Under present state law, school districts with more than 20 students in one grade who need bilingual education must set up a bilingual program for grades kindergarten through three. The districts also may offer such programs in fourth and fifth grades.

At the heart of the plan proposed by White would be a "language proficiency assessment committee" in every school. That committee, including teachers, administrators and counselors, would determine which students should be in bilingual programs and when they should get out of the program.

Students' departure from the program would no longer depend solely on test scores.

"To establish an exit criteria without recognition of the other primary factors, such as socio-economic status and parental attitude is, at best, naive," the plan said.

"The (committee) will have the prerogative to place students in bilingual education or in English language development programs even though scores on tests may be above established levels," White said in the plan.

Student placement also would depend on parental consent.

Videotapes released by judge

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge Thursday gave reporters and photographers access to videotapes showing McAllen police officers beating and otherwise abusing prisoners.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda ordered the films opened. DeAnda is directing a hearing which follows the filing of a series of police brutality and misconduct civil suits by American Civil Liberties Union attorneys.

The tapes were subpoenaed by a federal grand jury which is expected to begin an investigation of the police department next month.

The videotapes are police records filmed at the station's booking desk. Some were broadcast by South Texas television stations Thursday night. In one, a handcuffed man argues with a police officer and leans toward him. The officer slaps him to the ground, but the man keeps talking.

Pizza quarrel ends in death

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A nine-hour siege in which a man wounded a policeman then fatally shot himself began during quarrel over a pizza, police said.

Robert Veach, 32, shot himself in the head with a shotgun as special tactical officers smashed down his garage door and filled the house with tear gas about dawn Friday, police reported.

Veach had engaged police in a gun battle that was the climax of a dispute that began when Veach and his mother argued over a pizza, officers said.

Veach died later Friday at a hospital from the wound, which police said was self-inflicted.

Theresa Starr Jasper, 23, of Houston, was subpoenaed as the 10th grand jury witness this week. She is the stepdaughter of convicted hired gun Charles V. Harrelson and the grand jury — empaneled Wednesday — apparently is retracing previous evidence in preparation for indictments.

The 23-member grand jury took over the case from a special grand jury that had been investigating Wood's death since June 17, 1980, but which reportedly was "tainted" by erroneous evidence and prosecutors dissolved it to make sure any indictments could stand up to court challenge.

In Washington, meanwhile, FBI director William Webster said Thursday, "we are very close to a solution" of Wood's killing on May 29, 1979.

"I don't think it's wise for me to project indictments, but we are very close to a solution," Webster said during a White House briefing. "We intend to solve this. We believe it's close to solution. We already know the players."

Webster said he did not want to be "tied down" on any time element for indictments.

Nearly all the witnesses heard in San Antonio the past three days also testified to the previous grand jury.

Artist aids identifications

HOUSTON (AP) — A forensic artist has painted portraits of 27 people, most of them victims of traumatic deaths and buried in pauper's graves, in an effort to help Harris County medical examiners identify the remains.

Harris County Medical Examiner Joseph A. Jachimczyk distributed photographic copies Thursday of the paintings done by artist Mary Mize, of La Porte, who created the portraits from photos of the victims.

Critic would 'Rather' not view 'CBS Evening News'

By BILL MANDEL
Hearst Special News Service

Who is that simpering, uncomfortable, wiggly-eyed guy with all those sparkling teeth on "The CBS Evening News with Dan Rather"?

The physical similarities are astounding, but it's hard to believe the man who's been taking Walter Cronkite's place is actually the Dan Rather we've known since 1963.

The real Dan Rather is a tough, no-nonsense sort with a hardball delivery. This guy who's calling himself Dan Rather can hardly read the teleprompter, wreaths himself in inappropriate smiles, intones the news in an ingratiating sing-song more appropriate to "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood," and is pathetically eager to please.

Although he signs off with "until tomorrow," it wouldn't be surprising to hear him say, "You've been a beautiful audience, folks!"

What's happened, of course, is a classic application of the Peter Principle. Now that he's reached the pinnacle, Rather is trying to change. So people think he talks too fast, huh? He'll show 'em. Now he talks painfully slowly. People think Dan Rather doesn't smile enough. Ha! Now he even smiles when announcing the cut-off of federally-guaranteed college loans. Critics say Dan Rather's too serious, do they? Well, we'll just inject a little show-biz — such as solemn coverage of Carol Burnett's suit against the National Enquirer and Charles Osgood's story on New York's Dial-a-Joke service — ahead of the harder stories.

Cronkite, who was No. 1 in ratings, took refuge behind a large desk; he looked like a bronze bust. Still, he was No. 1. When Rather came in, CBS decided to change things, and put him on a high stool with nothing visible in front of him. Now we can see way below Rather's belt, and he's so jacked up into the air he can't read his script properly. Worst of all, his new attitude interferes with his teleprompter eye-contact, giving viewers the impression his eyes are wandering all over the place, he looks lost and uncomfortable.

Warners demand Enquirer retraction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor and her husband, Sen. John W. Warner, R-Va., are demanding a retraction of a National Enquirer article which says their marriage is "crumbling."

A statement from Warner's press office Thursday said, "If the retraction is not satisfactory, the Warners will consider litigation."

The statement came the day actress Carol Burnett won a libel suit against the Enquirer in Los Angeles.

The March 31 issue of the Enquirer says on its front page, "Liz Taylor, bored to death with her role as a senator's wife, is flying back to the arms of her first love — show business."

"And meanwhile, her marriage to 54-year-old Sen. John Warner of Virginia is crumbling around her, insiders say."

UA president says 'Heaven's Gate' will recover

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The president of United Artists says he is "reasonably optimistic" that the $35-million "Heaven's Gate" will recover from its aborted opening and eventually turn a profit.

The frontier epic will appear in 900 theaters across the land on April 24 and in a two-hour, 19-minute version, trimmed by director Michael Cimino from the three hours, 47 minutes that opened and closed to savage reviews in New York last October.

"We're not running scared," assured Norbert T. Auerbach, president and chief executive officer of United Artists. "In fact, our surveys show 'Heaven's Gate' means something to people who go to the movies. They remember it without the negative aspects that surrounded the picture."

He added: "If the picture is successful, a lot of credit for the turnaround goes to Steve."

Auerbach referred to Steven Bach, v.p. for worldwide production, who has also taken knocks for allowing Cimino to crash over budget.

"Michael simply got carried away with a vision of what 'Heaven's Gate' was to be," explained Bach. "Our basic decision was to support the man, whether he was right or wrong." The film's problem, said Bach, was that the narrative was too slender to carry the length. Virtually all of the story line has been retained; the discarded 90 minutes contained "production stuff."

Auerbach-Bach make an odd corporate couple, yet they seem complementary. Norbert Auerbach has spent most of his 58 years abroad. He was born in Vienna, grew up in Prague where his father owned a movie studio, graduated from UCLA, spent 28 years in film production and distribution in Europe.

Steven Bach, 42, is one of the new breed of university-trained movie makers. After graduating from U.S.C., he worked his way up the ladder to produce such films as "Parallax View" and "Who'll Stop the Rain?"

The pair met with a reporter at their offices in MGM's Thalberg Building. Their frank aim: to quell rumors of Bach's imminent firing and to repair United Artists' image. "Heaven's Gate" is not the only problem. "Our pictures haven't worked," Auerbach admitted.

"One of the things that has been wrong is too little marquee value," said Bach. "Also, it's possible that our pictures were too special. When you see a movie like 'Star Wars' make 60-70 million in grosses, the message should be clear: a picture that is sensitive or small in cast or concept is going to have a rough time."

Bach cited some of the recent casualties: "Rich Kids" ("by its very nature it didn't allow use of names"); "Those Lips, Those Eyes" ("would it have worked with Jack Nicholson instead of Frank Langella?"); "The Idolmaker" ("those who see the picture love it, but not enough are").

United Artists is moving to boost its marquee power, having made recent deals with Bette Midler, Richard Gere, Meryl Streep, Goldie Hawn, Barbra Streisand and Faye Dunaway. All have been signed for specific projects, Bach emphasized, since names alone can't sell movies nowadays.

is after the New York Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, continuing the pullback that began Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 9.46 Thursday, slipped 1.80 to 1,003.96 by noon today.

Lose the 7-6 lead over gainers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders had begun to cash in on some of the market's recent gains. The Dow hit an eight-year high Wednesday.

They also said investors were keeping a wary eye on the unsettled situation in Poland.

Mobil led the active list, down 3/4 at 67 1/2. Two blocks of 100,000 shares each traded at that price. Flexi-Van gained 1 1/2 to 30 1/2. On Thursday the company said it received a $35-a-share takeover bid from a group of British investors.

The NYSE's composite index lost .04 to 78.39, and the American Stock Exchange value index was down .60 at 360.72.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 20.05 million shares at noon, against 31.07 million at the same point Thursday.

Now as obvious and common sense as the checklist suggestions seem, I mention them because many of us are now using self-service gasoline stations where these basic items rarely get a routine check-up — like they did in the good old days. So, to insure those items are checked occasionally, it is easy and practical to establish seasonal checkups, say spring and fall. Good luck with your checklist.

JUST FOR FUN: Insurance accident reports often get crazy comments, like these (1) "In my attempt to kill a fly, I drove into a telephone pole." and (2) "The guy was all over the road; I had to swerve a number of times before I hit him."

TORNADO ALERT: In case of a tornado alert, all motorists in the area, no matter where we are driving, should leave our cars and immediately find shelter. DO NOT try to escape a tornado by driving at right angles to the path of the storm.

TRAFFIC TIPS: Midkiff, under construction from Storey to Golf Course, is causing particular motorists problems at the south side of the Andrews Highway intersection. Motorists are urged to be extremely cautious when turning into this intersection...a lot of us are turning into the construction area.

Teen-ager sentenced for May riot deaths

MIAMI (AP) — A black teen-ager convicted of the beating and stoning deaths of three white youths during last May's race riots has been sentenced to three consecutive life terms, while two other black youths convicted in the case were given 45 years each.

The Dade County judge who sentenced them said he hoped the tough sentences would serve as a crime deterrent.

"The court, in sentencing, must take into consideration the effect that those sentences will have on the community as a deterrent so people can go about their business on the street," Circuit Judge Mario Godierich said in imposing the sentences Thursday.

Samuel Lightsey Jr., 17, was sentenced to three consecutive life terms, while brothers Lawrence and Leonard Capers each were given 45 years for the deaths of three whites who unwittingly drove into the riot zone May 17, the first of three nights of racial violence in Miami's Liberty City neighborhood.

The sentences were the maximum allowed by law.

The three were convicted of taking part in the mob beating of Benny Higdon, 21, and Charles Barreca and Robert Owens, both 15. The victims were beaten, kicked and stabbed.

The rioting, which claimed 18 lives and caused an estimated $100 million in property damage, was sparked by an all-white jury's acquittal of four white, ex-Dade County policeman charged in the beating death of black Miami businessman Arthur McDuffie.

"People cannot be allowed to go out and kill because they feel they are discriminated against. There are other ways of expression in this country," Godierich told the three defendants.

A jury made up of blacks and whites on Feb. 6 convicted Lightsey on three counts of second-degree murder and Lawrence Capers, 25, and Leonard Capers, 21, on three counts of third-degree murder each.

Michael Tarre, representing Lightsey, reminded Godierich 40 or 50 other people were involved in the mob attack.

Time for seasonal checklist for autos

By SUE ALFORD
Traffic Safety Planning
Midland College

Spring officially "sprang" this past week so it is appropriate to discuss the need for seasonal car checkups. In anticipation of longer trips in hotter weather, all of us need to have our cars serviced for all the little things we take for granted.

The cooling system — radiator, hoses, water pump and belts — should be our most guarded item. A mixture of water and antifreeze coolant is a safeguard against overheating, so it needs to be at the proper level and mix as recommended in your car's owner's manual. Then just clean the radiator since radiators have a knack for collecting bugs, twigs, etc. This "junk" reduces the cooling efficiency of our cars. Next, the radiator, hoses and pump need to be pressure tested for cracks, leaks and swelling, while belts need to be checked for proper tension.

And, while most of us don't think of needing our defroster in spring and summer, we should know it's working in case that much needed rain comes up...because if it comes, so will foggy car windows.

Oil changes are really important during hot weather. We all need to be especially sure we maintain the proper level of lubrication...good, clean lubrication, which means Midlanders with all our sand need to check our oil more often than others.

Speaking of sand, dirty, clogged air filter can rob you of gas mileage. Check the filter by holding it up to a light...if you can't see through it, replace it.

Another check point is our tires. Hot weather driving causes higher temperatures in our tires so the inflation pressure should be checked and adjusted regularly. Of course, before taking trips, we all need to check for nails, glass, metal, etc. in our tires to avoid flats and blowouts.

The final checklist suggestion for spring and summer is to maintain an adequate fluid level in the battery...that level being no lower than the top of the battery plates.

Now as obvious and common sense as the checklist suggestions seem, I mention them because many of us are now using self-service gasoline stations where these basic items rarely get a routine check-up — like they did in the good old days. So, to insure those items are checked occasionally, it is easy and practical to establish seasonal checkups, say spring and fall. Good luck with your checklist.

JUST FOR FUN: Insurance accident reports often get crazy comments, like these (1) "In my attempt to kill a fly, I drove into a telephone pole." and (2) "The guy was all over the road; I had to swerve a number of times before I hit him."

Clements says federal budget cuts will affect state

Governor urges reordering of priorities to cover $2.5 billion loss

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas legislators need to cut $2.5 billion from state spending the next two years to cover the loss of federal funds under President Ronald Reagan's austerity program, Gov. Bill Clements says.

"We have to reorder our priorities and get off this 'letter to Santa Claus' basis and look at what we can reasonably expect from Washington," he told a news conference Thursday.

Clements said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton were "in agreement."

Texas will lose about half its usual federal funds, or about $2.5 billion, the next two years, the governor said.

"Instead of increasing our biennial appropriations by 20 per cent, we may have to make-do with a 10 percent increase," Clements said. "We may have to hold our 1982-83 budget to $23.5 billion instead of the $26 billion we had anticipated would be available in revenue during the next two years."

"I repeat that we are not talking about cutting the present state budget, but rather reducing the amount of the anticipated increase ..."

He said Comptroller Bob Bullock considers federal funds when estimating the state's income for the next two years.

"I plan to talk with Comptroller Bullock the next few days about this new development, and I think there is a likelihood he may decrease the revenue estimates he has made," Clements said.

Bullock said later he saw no need to reduce the state's revenue estimate "just because the governor thinks it's a good idea."

Bullock said he would be glad to meet the governor "to hear him out on why I should reduce by estimate because I don't recall having met with him since January, but I'm not going to be panicked into a wholesale revision of the estimate on the basis of some rumor floating around Washington."

Clements said he had no suggestions where the cuts should be made.

"I am just saying it is the responsibility of the Legislature to look at these programs and I think the legislators are perfectly capable of making these cuts," Clements said.

Clements added he is "totally in favor of Mr. Reagan's program of budget economy, and it is obvious the U.S. House and Senate are also but just how it will come out we do not know."

Clements also said:

— "I am absolutely opposed to a special session for this purpose. I want the Legislature to address it now."

— "There will be no new taxes. We are not going to have a tax increase. We are going to reduce the budget."

— "I have thought about a one-year appropriation bill but have discarded the idea. History tells us it does not work very well. However, it is still an open option."

Daniel's former maid testifies in custody suit

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
Associated Press Writer

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Bailiff Will Autrey, moving spryly for his 76 years, got his man — and woman — while a former maid for Price Daniel Jr. testified Vickie Daniel once told her she would be "like a wild animal" if Daniel ever cornered her.

Autrey served subpoenas on two Houston television reporters and Delorise Elliott testified Thursday, two elements in the bizarre child-custody suit filed by Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, who is trying to gain custody of Mrs. Daniel's two children from her marriage to the former Texas House Speaker.

Mrs. Daniel, charged with murder in the Jan. 19 fatal shooting of her husband, has pleaded innocent, claiming Daniel beat and threatened her.

Miss Elliott, 32, who did maid work for Daniel over a 10-year period that included his stormy, four-year marriage to Vickie Daniel, said Mrs. Daniel often discussed her relationship with Daniel.

"She told me if Price ever backed her in a corner she would be like a wild animal ...," Miss Elliott testified.

Under questioning by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, Mrs. Daniel's attorney, Miss Elliott said Mrs. Daniel was discourteous to her on several occasions, one when Daniel gave her a car radio.

"She told me I should take it because I was Price Daniel's most loyal and faithful servant," Miss Elliott said.

Haynes reminded Miss Elliott she was testifying in a lawsuit to wrest custody of Mrs. Daniel's children, "and you came here to help that woman (Mrs. Murph) to take away Vickie Daniel's children, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir," Miss Elliott replied.

The principals for both sides in the case walked icily into the courtroom Thursday morning, apparently still angered by television coverage Wednesday night when Mrs. Murph went to pick up Mrs. Daniel's children for a court-ordered visit.

Camera crews for KPRC-TV and KTRK-TV taped Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 3, crying and screaming, "I don't want to go! I don't want to go!" as Mrs. Murph tried to take the child from his mother's arms.

Elma Barerra of KPRC-TV and KTRK-TV's Bob Nicholas were subpoenaed to appear today, bringing edited and unedited videotape of the incident. Both reporters were granted continuances, however, until Monday.

The reporters said they had gone to the home of Mrs. Daniel's sister in Baytown to get tape of Mrs. Daniel and her two children, Franklin and Marion Price Daniel IV, 1. They were still on the scene when Mrs. Murph arrived with attorney Mark Morefield.

Morefield said the television crews were a total surprise and added that Mrs. Daniel "played it for all it was worth."

House passes bill floating 24 percent interest ceiling

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Interest rates on almost every kind of loan, except home mortgages, could "float" as high as 24 percent under a bill that passed the Texas House.

An 84-51 vote Thursday sent the bill to the Senate, where the sponsor thinks the House may have put the maximum interest rate too low for today's torrid money market.

The bill started out with a 30 percent limit but the House trimmed it to 24 percent Wednesday night.

"It seems ridiculous to me to pass a bill that would leave a ceiling that would preclude some people who need to borrow money from being able to do so," said Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, the Senate sponsor.

House sponsor Bill Messer, D-Belton, said the bill would go a long way toward providing lenders an incentive to make loans.

"You can go home and tell your constituents, 'We faced up to today's economic realities in the United States of America. We are going to allow money to be available to you,'" Messer told the House.

Amnesia victim Jane Doe, left, has now been positively identified as the former Cheryl Ann Tomiczek of Bloomington, Ill.

She met with her mother, Irene Tomiczek at South Florida State Hospital Thursday morning.

Jane Doe to stay at hospital

PEMBROKE PINES, Fla. (AP) — With a shy, awkward "I'm pleased to meet you," an amnesia victim called Jane Doe has been reunited with her family after seven years' separation.

She still does not recognize them, and she isn't quite ready to wholeheartedly adopt her real name, but a family photo album sparked a recollection of her pet dogs and some other "little things" about her past.

"Only in the annals of movie script-writing do we anticipate there will be...instant recognition," said Dr. Jessie Kaye, a psychiatrist at South Florida State Hospital. "It only happens in storybooks."

It didn't happen here. Hospital spokeswoman Jackie Dale, who was at the reunion, said Cheryl Ann Tomiczek said to her father, mother and brother, "I'm very happy that you came. I'm pleased to meet you."

Her brother Robert, 32, said that during the meeting, "She was studying us while we were trying to study her. We had to break the ice at the beginning. Finally, everybody seemed to relax."

Her father, Andrew, broke down during the meeting with his 34-year-old daughter and was given medication, hospital officials said. He did not appear at a subsequent news conference.

Her mother, Irene, said her daughter — found last September naked and near starvation by a ranger patrolling a wooded area in Birch State Park in Fort Lauderdale — did not recognize her family members but did remember "little things" about the family's past after being shown a photo album.

"I'm very happy. I assured her how much we love her. We discussed many things about the dogs she used to have when she was a little girl," said Mrs. Tomiczek, of Roselle, Ill.

"There is no doubt that Jane Doe is Cheryl Ann Tomiczek," said Kaye. "The police are content with the identification and so am I."

Miss Tomiczek seemed calm at the news conference. She said she is not ready to take the name Cheryl Tomiczek, and for the time being will hold on to "Jane," the name she was given by officials after being found in the park.

"I think 'Jane' is nice," she said. "I'm kind of used to that." She said she put "Cheryl" "in a storage place in my mind."

Family members said they had last heard from Miss Tomiczek seven years ago, and they were unable to cast any light on the mysterious circumstances of her amnesia.

A man who said he had been living with Miss Tomiczek in Fort Lauderdale for the last several years told police earlier this week that they had been having problems, and that when she disappeared, he assumed she had moved away.

The hospital and police agencies received thousands of calls from people claiming they knew the woman after her story was made public. But officials narrowed the list to the Tomiczeks after the woman revealed details of her childhood while being treated with a "truth serum" drug.

Robert Tomiczek said there were no particular family problems when Cheryl disappeared.

"We're a family. They've got their problems like everybody else. She was like a bird leaving the nest. Everybody's got to fly," he said.

For the time being, he said, his sister will remain at the hospital.

Now that Miss Tomiczek is aware of her true identity, Kaye said, the prognosis for a complete recovery is excellent. "In this saga we expect to have a very happy conclusion for all parties," he said.

What's delaying the hostage's stories?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because of a law aimed at limiting politicians' outside income, it may be some time yet before that potential best-seller by one of the 54 former American hostages held in Iran reaches the bookshelf.

By a quirk that escaped everyone until the case of the former hostages arose, the Federal Election Commission must decide between curtailing their chances to make some outside money or opening a loophole for politicians to do so.

The FEC makes and enforces rules on the payments government officials may accept for speeches, articles and similar outside work. After some painful debate Thursday, the commission sent its lawyers back to the drawing board with no resolution of the hostages question in sight.

"It is absurd for us to be ruling on payments to people who are not candidates for public office. It ought to be in some other agency, the Office of Government Ethics, or the agency where the person works," said Commissioner Thomas Harris. "However, we are stuck with administering the thing."

The 1974 law the FEC administers limits government employees to $25,000 a year in honoraria. Although it was imposed in an effort to prevent candidates from getting campaign contributions under the table in the form of exorbitant fees, it covers all government employees.

Nearly all of the Americans hostages were government employees, whether diplomats, secretaries or Marine guards. They are being flooded with offers of big money for public appearances, books and articles.

Some have offers far beyond the limits — $2,000 for each appearance or article and no more than $25,000 in a calendar year — and the opportunities will last only as long as their stories are hot on the market. For most of them, it is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

On behalf of the former hostages, C. Normand Poirier, acting general counsel of the United States International Communication Agency, asked the election commission Thursday for a formal ruling on whether they might get around the annual ceiling by receiving payments on an installment plan.

By spreading payments over a period of years, the hostages could collect a lot of money without exceeding the limit, not to mention a tax break.

"The problem is it goes back to the political aspect, members of Congress," said Commissioner Robert Tiernan. "If you do this for hostages, you also are going to have the other side of the coin."

Nobody wants to appear cruel to the hostages, who remain national heroes in the public mind, he noted. On the other hand, the commissioners don't want to open a floodgate of abuse because of a favor to the hostages.

"I am aware of the abuses possible here," said Commissioner Frank Reiche. "It is something that should be corrected by Congress, not the FEC."

SAT answers to be made available

NEW YORK (AP) — Starting next fall, college applicants throughout the country who take the Scholastic Aptitude Test will be able to obtain a copy of their test questions as well as their answer sheets and the correct answers.

The service will cost more for those of the 1.3 million test-takers who opt for it, and it will be offered on only five of the 12 dates the SAT will be administered in the 1981-82 school year.

Trustees of the College Entrance Examination Board, an association of high schools and colleges that sponsors the tests, approved the move at a meeting Thursday. Essentially, it makes national policy of New York state's year-old "truth-in-testing law," which requires access to tests and answers.

The decision follows two recent incidents in which students who had access to tests found more than one correct answer to a mathematics problem. The developer of the tests, the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., was then forced to raise hundreds of thousands of test scores.

One error, in an SAT math test, was discovered by a New York state student taking advantage of the new law. The other, in a math section of the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test, was discovered by a Florida youth who was part of a group given the answers on a trial basis.

The College Board had long opposed releasing the test questions, arguing that test development costs would rise because old tests could not be reused. It also said the need to develop many more new questions could threaten quality.

While groups sponsoring other nationwide standardized tests, such as the Law School Aptitude Test and Graduate Management Admissions Test, responded to the New York law by releasing their tests nationwide, the College Board had been giving New York state applicants special examinations for which the questions and answers could be obtained.

Check home for hazards

NEW YORK (AP) — Before you turn the key in the lock and start off on that vacation, take time to check your home thoroughly for any potential trouble spots, advise safety experts who suggest you answer these questions:

—Has that last cigarette been extinguished?

—Have you turned off the gas?

—Are all your appliances disconnected?

—Have you stored combustible materials such as gasoline, cleaning fluid and open paint cans, and tightly closed the containers?

—Have you discarded kerosene-soaked or greasy rags?

—Have you stored your important papers in a fireproof safe? Such a safe will withstand up to 1,700 degrees Fahrenheit for one hour while maintaining an internal temperature of no more than 350F. Since the charring point of paper is about 420F, the contents of a fire-rated safe would be protected even if your house burned to the ground.

—Does a neighbor or relative know where to reach you while you are away?

—Have you stopped all deliveries?

—Have you arranged either to have your mail held at the post office or removed from your letterbox every day by a neighbor?

—Have you taken photographs of your jewelry, art work and other valuable items and put them in your home safe with purchase receipts or appraisals?

DEAR ABBY

Doctor chokes on own medicine

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband just celebrated his 50th birthday. He's a physician who tells all his male patients who reach 50 to "slow down." If they smoke, he orders them to quit or cut down, but HE'S a two-pack-a-day man.

He puts all his overweight patients on diets, but HE is considerably overweight himself and can't stay on a diet for two days. He insists that daily exercise is a must, but HE doesn't exercise at all.

He says that an annual vacation away from one's daily work is essential to good health, but HE hasn't had a vacation in six years. And this will floor you: He wants all his patients to have a thorough checkup every year, but the last one he had was 12 years ago. What's wrong with him, and how can I get through to him? — DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: He's human. He finds advice much easier to give than to take. You can get through to him (maybe) by insisting that HE consult a colleague for a checkup. And if he refuses, ask him to keep paying those life insurance premiums, so you and your next husband can retire in luxury. Cruel? Not really. Sometimes we have to be cruel to be kind.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine is marrying a minister. He plans to perform the marriage ceremony himself. He insists that since he is authorized to perform marriage ceremonies, there is no reason why he should not perform his own.

Somehow this doesn't seem right to me. Can you please find out if such a marriage would be legal in South Carolina? Thank you. — BRIDE'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: According to Robert N. DuRant, executive director of the South Carolina Bar:

"Only ministers of the gospel or accepted Jewish rabbis and officers authorized to administer oaths in this state are authorized to administer a marriage ceremony in this State.

"Complications could arise when one attempts his own wedding ceremony. To be strictly legal, one could avoid the question by having a third party perform the marriage ceremony."

DEAR ABBY: Why would a person laugh at his own jokes? — JOEY

DEAR JOEY: Maybe he just wants to make sure somebody laughs.

DEAR ABBY: You recently quoted G.K. Chesterton, who said, "The truly great person is the one who makes every person feel great."

May I share an anecdote that illustrates that point beautifully: In Queen Victoria's time, a young woman had the good fortune of being escorted to dinner by William E. Gladstone, who was considered one of the most brilliant statesmen of the 19th century.

A way with a waistband

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

There is a lot of comfort in a waistband that stretches. Also, you can slip into your skirt or slacks in record time. However, there are those who prefer the snugness and fit of a regular waistband. If your pattern shows a casing and elastic, you can easily convert it to a regular waistband.

On your pattern eliminate the casing, but leave enough for a five-eighths-inch seam allowance (measure up five-eighths-inch from the waistline). Cut out a waistband as long as your waist measurement plus 3 inches for seam allowances and lap-over.

Baste skirt together at all seams, leaving opening for zipper. Slip it on. Tie cord around waist over skirt. Pin darts into waistline of skirt — positioning darts evenly on each side of center front and center back. Adjust width of base of darts until you have a comfortable fit at waist. Adjust skirt under cord until it hangs smoothly and evenly. Mark fabric at cord. This mark becomes your seamline for sewing on the waistband.

Baste in darts and try skirt on again just to be sure of fit. Now, you are ready to finish construction. You may put zipper into left side seam or center back seam.

Where should a zipper go — left side, center back or center front?

Front zippers, of course, are for the "fly" effect, so if we move a front zipper, we lost part of the styling. However, a side zipper and center back zipper can be interchanged without any problems. All you have to do is close up one seam and open the other.

For those of us who have a "dip" in center back (often referred to as a sway back), a center back zipper does not always work. It tends to "pooch out" at the bottom because of the contour of the back. For us a side zipper works best.

Super handyman: Easy picking from a clamp bar

By AL CARRELL

I think everyone should have a good supply of various sized C-clamps. After you have a bunch of these clamps, you'll want to store them in sight so you can pick out the size you need at a glance. What could be easier than a clamp bar. Just mount a 1x1 strip of lumber to the shop wall, and then clamp the C-clamps to that. The bar can be mounted horizontally or vertically, and you can use nails or screws for holding. Now the clamps can be easily seen and need never get lost in some drawer.

Dear Al:

I know that most people do their furniture finishing out in the shop or garage. I find that it's better to do this step in the house. I also have found that if you use a room that is warmer than normal, the finish seems to penetrate the wood more deeply. You also never have excess humidity problems that you can have outside the house. I think the dry heat opens the pores of the wood. — A.K.

With some finishes, you need ventilation for the fumes. Otherwise, a warm room sounds more appealing than a cold garage.

Dear Super: I think you'll like a decorating trick I used for our den ceiling. We can sit in the den and see stars. Not real stars, but some I installed in the ceiling. They are actually those tiny twinkle lights for use on a Christmas tree. I drilled holes in the ceiling that allow the tiny sockets to go through. I spaced them out in a neat pattern all over the ceiling. From the attic I strung the lights and poked them through the holes. I also installed a switch downstairs that operates the outlet into which the string is plugged. At first we had a flasher bulb so the lights blinked off and on, but this nearly drove us batty. Now the lights just come on and stay. They are a real conversation piece. — R.D.

Not all local electrical codes would allow this, but if you'll check that first it could be an interesting effect.

A SUPER HINT — One of the safety rules for using hammers is to never strike the face of a hammer with another hammer. However, if you ever need to insert the claw under some piece of wood for dismantling something, you often would like to be able to drive the claw into place. Use a rubber mallet, and you can strike the hammer face without fear of damaging the hammer or yourself.

Dear Al: The aerator on a kitchen or lavatory faucet has to be cleaned from time to time. I have found that a wide rubber band can be stretched around the surface of the aerator and will give you gripping power so it can be removed by hand instead of using a wrench that might scratch the chrome. I have also found a place to keep the rubber band so I can always find it. I got one that was wide enough, but had a very small diameter, and keep it wrapped around the aerator while it's on the faucet. Not only is it always where I can find it, it acts as a bumper for the faucet in case I accidentally hit the metal with a glass or dish. I have fewer chipped pieces now. — Mrs. W.L.

The why and how of darts

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Who needs darts? Think how much easier our sewing would be if we never had to make a dart. Then — think how your garment would fit without one.

Darts come in all types — short, long, one-point, two-point, straight, curved, slanted — but, whatever the type, a dart has a very important function.

By taking up fabric at the base (wide end) of the dart, cupping is created at the opposite end. To see how this works, fold a dart into a piece of typing paper. See how the paper "cups" beyond the point of the dart?

Where do we need this cupping? Over the bust, the back shoulder, the hips, the tummy and elbows. Granted, you do not need the same amount of cupping in each of these areas, so we have different size darts. For example, over the bust requires the most cupping, while the back shoulder requires very little. Narrow darts at the waist of a skirt or pants will create slight cupping over the tummy and the hips.

Darts at the elbow of a sleeve are used to give the sleeve more room when you bend your arm. Without a dart (or ease) in this area, you would notice great pain each time you bend your arm. A misplaced elbow dart will cause the same discomfort.

Cupping is controlled by the width of the base of the dart. If you widen the dart base, you will create more cupping. If you make the base more narrow, you will have less cupping.

A dart point should not come all the way to the area over which it is to cup. For instance, at the bust, a dart should stop at least 1 inch back from the crown of the bust.

Don't ignore darts. They have a very important job to do.

Questions may be addressed to Mrs. Betty Kinser, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

They make her giggle

By ERMA BOMBECK
It's probably because it's new and I'm not used to it, but men advertising sexy products make me giggle.

They're so awkward playing the sex object role. Throughout the years, women models have sold seductiveness. They flirt with their eyes, invite with their smile, entice with every movement and top it off with a 60-day warranty.

Male models look like a poodle that has just missed the paper.

Part of the problem is that advertisers haven't figured out yet what kind of a man impresses women. At the moment they're going for the Statue of David look... plush pile chest, curly hair and blacksmith arms.

I saw a man in a catalogue recently. He was propped up in bed (bare chest showing), tousled and yawning. On the tray beside him was a cup of black coffee, a glass of Alka Seltzer and on his shoulder he had the imprint of two red lips. A pillow next to him was mussed and a silk gown recklessly left behind indicated he hadn't spent the night doing biblical connect-a-dot pictures.

It took me 15 minutes to figure out what he was selling.

I saw a line that read, "Twin, $80" and was about to order the other brother when my girlfriend said, "I think he's selling satin sheets."

Somewhat, he didn't impress me as someone who knew percale from corduroy.

Men are comfortable in the authoritative role. That's why for years male salesmen told women what appliances to buy to keep their houses running smoothly, what laundry soap to buy to keep their clothes their brightest, and what cold medicines to buy to assure a healthy family.

Now that sex is an appeal used to sell everything we buy, it's a whole new thing for men.

I loved the guy the other night who rustled cattle all day in his dusty jeans and capped teeth. Then he hit for the showers where he slapped his hairy chest so hard with show-no-mercy cologne I thought he'd break something. He positioned his white cowboy hat which he wore with an evening suit, climbed into his sports car and zoomed off to become a legend in his own time. I felt like giggling.

Painting: Plan ahead to keep job simple

By Gary Krino
Copley News Service

On the surface, it sounds like a cinch. All you do is dress up like da Vinci, grab a brush or roller and slop on the color.

What you end up with might be satisfactory, albeit not "The Last Supper."

But then again, it might not because painting's just like anything else.

The more time you spend planning and finding out what the job's all about, the happier you're going to be with the results.

The people at Dutch Boy Paints have been in the paint business for years and they've honed the subtleties of painting into a science. Following are some tips they offer to help you when you've decided the interior or exterior of your home isn't making it anymore and needs a fresh coat of paint.

For walls and ceilings, you'll probably want a good latex (water-based) paint.

Latex is easy to apply, dries quickly and splatters are easy to wipe up with a wet cloth or sponge. The surface is as durable as oil-based paint and can be cleaned easily with soap and water.

To determine how much paint you're going to need, measure the width of each wall you're going to paint, add the figures together and multiply by the ceiling height. This gives you the total area in square feet. Deduct areas not being painted such as doors and windows. The average spreading rate for a quality paint is 400 square feet per gallon.

For exteriors, multiply the width by the height of each surface to be painted, again subtracting areas not to be painted. Exterior coverage per gallon varies significantly depending on the type of surface and application technique. Check with your dealer on how much paint you'll need for those measurements and the surface you're dealing with.

If you're repainting and not drastically changing colors, one coat of a good quality paint is often enough. You'll need a primer, though, if the surface is unpainted wood, metal or masonry.

Previously painted surfaces often need a primer if the bare wood or metal is exposed after deteriorating paint or rust has been removed. Primers can be tinted very close to the color of your final coat.

If you're going to use a brush, get a quality one. It will hold paint better, spread better, won't drop its bristles into your work, will clean easier, last longer and save you money.

For latex paint, use a brush with synthetic bristles — nylon or polyester. Natural bristles are for oil paint.

When you dip the brush into the bucket of paint, cover the bristles one-third of the way and don't drag the bristles against the edge of the can as you pull the brush out. This takes away half the paint the brush should be holding. Instead, pat off any excess paint on the can's lip.

Rollers can cut painting time by two-thirds, but be sure to get a good roller. That means a roller sleeve with a core that won't bend with pressure. For latex paint, use a nylon or mohair roller. Lambswool is for oil-based paints only. Check with your dealer for the proper length of pile.

When using a roller, start by pouring a small amount of well-stirred paint from the can into the paint tray. Roll the roller in the tray so it is completely covered with paint. Then remove the excess paint from the roller by rolling it over the ribbed part of the tray.

If you try to paint with a too-full roller, drips, runs and splatters will leave you with a big cleanup job. Roll the paint on with even strokes while applying light pressure, rolling in one direction, then over-rolling in the other. Finish off with strokes in one direction for a neater look.

Most professional painters prefer to scrape windowpanes rather than spend the money and time to use masking tape. If you use masking tape, remember to take it off before the paint fully dries.

Professionals say that when you're painting exteriors, you should follow the sun and paint with the wind. This means that you should allow the sun to dry the surface thoroughly and paint as the shade reaches the area. This will prevent too-fast drying on top. If you paint with the wind rather than into it, it won't make ripples on your work and it won't blow any drips back onto the work you've finished.

Do-it-yourself: Decorating your dream home from scratch

By DENISE FOWLER
Copley News Service

You finally made your move from a small apartment to your dream house filled with room after room of empty space. Although you've taken most of your personal belongings with you, the decision now is how do you decorate those empty rooms from scratch.

Dress your rooms the way you'd dress yourself. You can't buy a lot of terrific looking unrelated furniture and expect to pull it together with accessories. Start with a single thought and work from there.

Develop a floor plan that shows the location of your activity centers and where your furniture should be placed.

Plan with the size of each room in mind. Some colors recede, like beige and soft pastels. Use them in small rooms. Bold colors approach and are better for large rooms. In general, patterns used together tend to make a room warmer, more intimate. Less pattern gives an airier, cooler look. Wall-to-wall carpeting makes the room look bigger while area rugs break the room into defined spaces.

If your room is small, think about using the wall space above sofas and over dining room tables for dramatic accessories such as an outstanding piece of art or a fabulous chandelier.

Consider the architecture of your room, advises New York interior designer Ruben de Saavedra. Does it have a fireplace or an outstanding view? If so, you may want to make this the focal point of the room.

Harley F. Shuford Jr., president of Century Furniture Co. of Hickory, N.C., recommends using a dramatic piece of furniture, such as an Oriental chest or armoire, as the focal point of the room.

"A large cabinet or wardrobe can be used as an accent to any room while functioning as a multipurpose piece of furniture. You'll have your storage space and your focal point all in one," he says.

Upholstered sofas and chairs are the foundation of a room — and the key to comfort. Don't skimp on them.

Shuford notes, "Upholstery all the way to the floor provides a nice contrast in a room full of leggy furniture." If you have a small decorating budget, Shuford suggests that you buy only a few good pieces of furniture and gradually add additional pieces when you can afford them.

Don't let all the furniture cling timidly to the walls. Aim for flexibility instead. Shuford says, "More and more people prefer multipurpose rooms. We have witnessed an increased demand for modular sofas for both traditional and modern settings."

Be bright about light.

Keep it subtle and as natural as possible. Floor lights reflecting up on a hanging plant, painting or window blinds cast dramatic shadows and create interesting focal points.

How often will you use this room? A busy room should be furnished in a relaxing style using durable materials and fabrics.

Designer de Saavedra believes that since most rooms are lived in mainly at night after people return from work, they should be designed to be seen in artificial lighting. He stresses the use of light sunny colors which make the room look warm and cheerful in night light. But, if the room is only used occasionally, make it look dramatic and bold or else it will fade from your memory.

Wood adds warmth to a room and also helps you define a particular decorating period. When you think of mahogany you think of a formal room with velvet and silk upholstered pieces and plush carpeting, all expressing elegance. Oak, cherry and maple connote informality with textures such as linen, cotton and leather.

Remember, it's the unpredictable that delights. A little fantasy, some pure caprice, a touch of the unexpected — any of these can give a room a lift.

Do-it-yourself decorating can be a real challenge. But done in an organized manner, with lots of creativity, it can be a most rewarding experience. And you'll reap the benefits for years to come.

DEAR CECILY: Is it possible to make cream cheese at home? If so, where can I find directions for doing so? — DAIRYMAID.

DEAR DAIRYMAID: Three books tell how to make cream cheese. They are: "Making Your Own Cheese and Yogurt" by Max Alth (Funk & Wagnalls); "The Art of Home Cheesemaking" by Anne Nilsson (Woodbridge Press); "Super-Easy Step-By-Step Cheesemaking" by Yvonne Young Tarr (Vintage). I list these in alphabetical order, according to the author's last name, because I have not tried any of these cream cheese recipes and thus cannot recommend one over the other. All three authors have obviously tested their recipes and write clearly and authoritatively. The U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250, should also be able to direct you to pertinent material. — C.B.

DEAR CECILY: Is it necessary to serve wine when you are giving a dinner party? My husband and I don't drink, but we do not object when other people do so. — HOSPITALITY.

DEAR HOSPITALITY: It all depends on what your guests are accustomed to. If they serve wine at their own dinner parties, or order it in a restaurant, I should certainly serve it to them. If they are new friends or acquaintances and you do not know their preference, I should have some appropriate wine on hand and offer it to them — to accept or refuse. — C.B.

Ford 'confident' China issues can be settled

PEKING (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford said today his talks with China's leaders make him "absolutely confident" the sensitive issues of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan and possible similar sales to China can be worked out.

Speaking with reporters at the end of a six-day visit to China, Ford said Chinese officials had been "pleased" by the personal messages he delivered on behalf of President Reagan.

In Moscow, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda denounced Ford's visit to China, saying it was evidence that Peking and Washington were collaborating against the Soviet Union. "Those who try to conduct a dishonest game behind the scenes lose in the long run," Pravda said.

Diplomatic sources, who asked not to be identified, said Ford had extended — on Reagan's behalf — an invitation to Premier Zhao Ziyang to visit the United States. Asked about this, the former president said he hoped Chinese leaders would visit the United States and that Reagan would visit China in the next year.

Ford called military sales to China a matter of "major importance." The matter of arms sales to Taiwan, which China opposes, can be solved "with wisdom and prudence and looking at the broad picture," he said. He declined to be more specific.

China has repeatedly warned the United States not to send arms to the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan, contending that Taiwan is a part of the mainland and any arms sales represent interference in China's internal affairs. China also has let it be known it would like to buy American weapons if the United States is willing; so far, U.S. officials have agreed to sell only military support equipment.

"I am absolutely confident," Ford told reporters, "that the administration in Washington and the leadership in China ... have the capability of working out a satisfactory solution to the problem of arms sales (to Taiwan)."

Ford said he is confident a "proper resolution" can be achieved on arms sales, too.

Diplomatic sources said that in three hours of talks with Ford, China's top leader, Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping was blunt and forceful in discussing Taiwan and arms sales, but was not antagonistic.

The former president flew to Japan today, arriving in the western city of Osaka. He is to meet Monday with Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki.

Ford's visit to China was sponsored by an American oil company and ostensibly was a private one. But Ford said he would report to Reagan when he gets home.

Most states pay more state taxes in 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) — Californians paid a lot more state taxes last year than they did the year before and residents of most other states paid at least a little more, but state tax collections declined slightly in Vermont and Michigan, the Census Bureau reports.

Plagued by increasing unemployment in the auto industry, Michigan tax collections slipped from $6 billion to $5.9 billion.

Michigan sales taxes collections dropped from $2.57 billion to $2.55 billion, and individual income tax receipts were down from $1.94 billion to $1.91 billion.

In Vermont, the only other state with a decline, overall state tax collections were down from $267 million to $266 million, primarily a result of a decline in corporate income taxes. Individual income taxes also were off slightly in Vermont, but sales taxes inched up.

California, the most populous state, showed the biggest change in actual dollars, collecting $19.3 billion in state taxes in 1980, up from $16.3 billion the year before.

California sales taxes were up more than $1 billion, but the biggest increase came in state income tax collections, which rose from $4.7 billion in 1979 to $6.5 billion last year.

The Census report issued Thursday noted that at least part of the big jump in income tax was attributed to the aftereffects of Proposition 13, which placed a limit in property taxes in the state. The major reductions in credits for real estate property taxes paid local jurisdictions resulted in increased state income-tax liability for residents of the state, the statisticians observed.

Three other states also had big increases in state tax collections. Alaska got a 76 percent boost, mostly from oil production and corporate income taxes, while Texas, 18.8 percent, and Oklahoma, 17.2 percent, also increased taxes collected on oil, gas and minerals taken from the state.

Nationwide, state tax revenues increased 9.6 percent in 1980, to a total of $136.9 billion. Sales taxes accounted for nearly half of the total, $67.7 billion. Individual income taxes collected by the states were up nearly 14 percent to a total of $37.1 billion and corporation income taxes climbed nearly 10 percent, to $13.3 billion.

The per-capita burden of state taxes ranged from a low of $302 in

New Hampshire to a high of $3,541 in Alaska.

And the bureau reported that more than one-half of all state tax revenue was collected in just eight states — California, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Texas, Michigan, Florida and Ohio.

Here is a summary of total state tax revenue for 1980 and percent of change from 1979:

Alabama, $1.857 billion, up 6.3 percent; Alaska, $1.438 billion, up 76 percent; Arizona, $1.684 billion, up 11.1 percent; Arkansas, $1.161 billion, up 16.5 percent; California, $19.367 billion, up 18.4 percent;

Colorado, $1.491 billion, up 3.5 percent; Connecticut, $1.84 billion, up 7.1 percent; Delaware, $516 million, up 4.8 percent; Florida, $4.804 billion, up 12 percent; Georgia, $2.729 billion, up 11.5 percent;

Hawaii, $998 million, up 14 percent; Idaho, $490 million, up 5.1 percent; Illinois, $7.073 billion, up 11.9 percent; Indiana, $2.696 billion, up 1 percent; Iowa, $1.747 billion, up 6.2 percent;

Kansas, $1.270 billion, up 6.9 percent; Kentucky, $2.145 billion, up 3.3 percent; Louisiana, $2.397 billion, up 9.1 percent; Maine, $619 million, up 11.7 percent; Maryland, $2.761 billion, up 4.3 percent;

Massachusetts, $3.927 billion, up 8.5 percent; Michigan, $5.948 billion, down 1.3 percent; Minnesota, $3.203 billion, up 2.2 percent; Mississippi, $1.258 billion, up 8.7 percent; Missouri, $2.095 billion, up 4.1 percent;

Montana, $436 million, up 9.1 percent; Nebraska, $817 million, up 10 percent; Nevada, $477 million, up 3 percent; New Hampshire, $267 million, up 1.3 percent; New Jersey, $4.104 billion, up 10.1 percent;

New Mexico, $926 million, up 12 percent; New York, $12.717 billion, up 9.3 percent; North Carolina, $3.215 billion, up 10.3 percent; North Dakota, $372 million, up 14.5 percent; Ohio, $4.767 billion, up 3.2 percent;

Oklahoma, $1.776 billion, up 17.2 percent; Oregon, $1.455 billion, up 5.2 percent; Pennsylvania, $7.241 billion, up 6.8 percent; Rhode Island, $551 million, up 2.4 percent; South Carolina, $1.678 billion, up 10.2 percent;

South Dakota, $271 million, up 10.2 percent; Tennessee, $1.887 billion, up 2.3 percent; Texas, $6.759 billion, up 17.8 percent; Utah, $786 million, up 13.1 percent; Vermont, $266 million, down 0.4 percent;

Population shift produces big gains for Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Large numbers of Americans moving to Southern states are Republicans and this migration could lead to a real two-party system in the old "Solid South," the Population Association of America was told today.

Robert H. Freymeyer of Lander College in Greenwood, S.C., told the annual convention of the group that recent successes of Republican candidates in the South are at least partly due to the population shift of recent years.

The 1980 census disclosed that large numbers of Americans have moved to Southern and Western states in recent years, and as a result 17 seats in the House of Representatives will be transferred to those parts of the country.

Freymeyer said transplanted Northerners make up the bulk of Republicans in many Southern states "and there doesn't seem to be any shift of these migrant Republicans to the Democratic Party."

These newcomers also are more likely to vote than natives and in some respects are more conservative than even Southern Republicans, he concludes.

Survey's show that 37 percent of people moving South consider themselves Republicans, 10 percent more than the number of native Southerners who identify with the GOP.

"The potential does exist for migrants to have a great impact on the politics of the South," Freymeyer reported, speculating they could join forces with native Republicans to "try to capture the congressional seats which the South is gaining as a result of its population growth."

In general, he said, surveys have indicated that these migrant Republicans are far more opposed to unions than native residents, have less confidence in the school systems and Congress than native Southern Democrats and are more likely than either native Republicans or Democrats to feel the country is spending too much on health programs.

The migrant Republicans also are less opposed to school busing for racial balance than Republicans brought up in the South, but they are more opposed than Southern-reared Democrats, Freymeyer said.

At Thursday's convention session, Dr. Madelon Lubin Finkel of Cornell University Medical College issued a call for expanded family planning services for minors. She reported that four in 10 adolescent girls will become pregnant by age 19.

Family planning programs are not responsive to the needs of teen-agers despite progress in recent years, she said.

Federal budget cuts that reduce sex education programs, she concluded, "will not prevent teen-agers from having sex."

Poles seek aid from Common Market

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Crisis-torn Poland has asked the European Common Market for 600,000 tons of food for the next few months, a market spokesman said today.

Gaston Thorn, president of the European Commission, the market's executive arm, told a Polish trade delegation a decision would be made next week on how much could be provided.

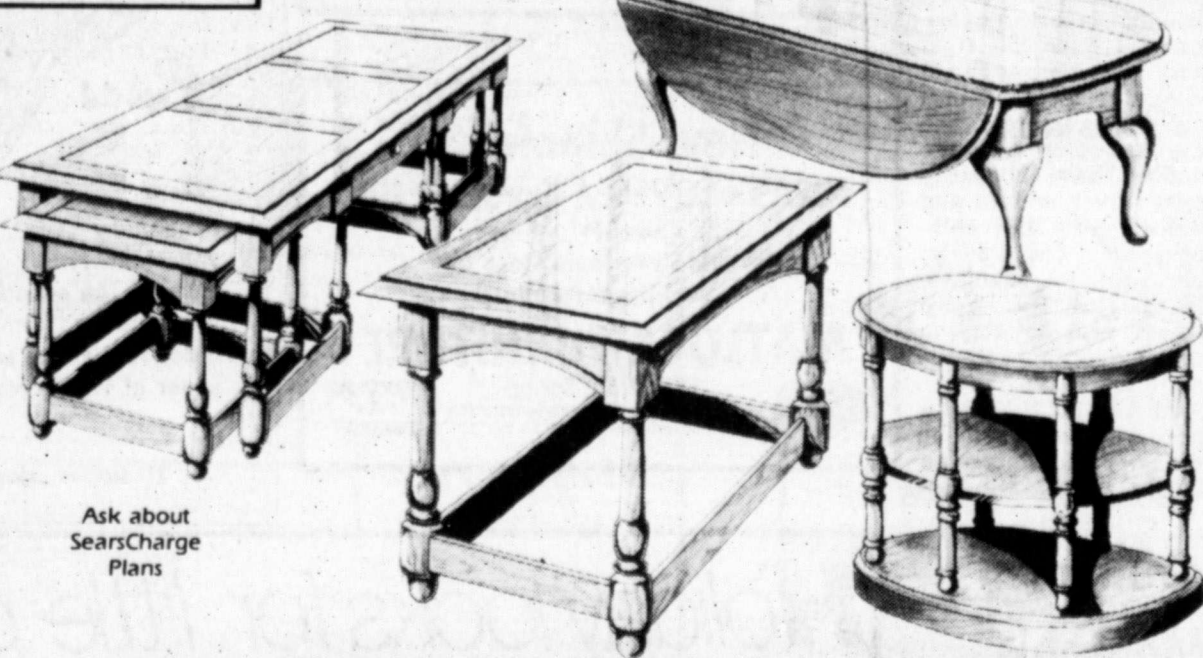

The request includes up to 14,000 tons of butter, 30,000 tons of meat, 50,000 tons of sugar, 30,000 tons of skim milk powder, 20,000 tons of edible oils, 200,000 tons of compound feeds, 175,000 tons of barley and 25,000 tons of rye, the spokesman said.

He said Common Market countries have already shipped or agreed to send about 80 percent of the 400,000 tons of food earmarked for Poland under an aid plan devised by heads of government at a summit meeting in December.

Boston schools facing shutdown

BOSTON (AP) — A lot of the reading, writing and arithmetic in the nation's oldest school system is being done by officials trying to avoid a shutdown that could send 64,000 students home as early as next week.

In a hearing scheduled for today, state education officials were asking for a ruling from Suffolk Superior Court that would prevent the city from closing its schools when the $210 million budget runs out — which could be as soon as Monday.

State law says schoolchildren must have 180 school days, and state officials say the school year will be more than 50 days if schools close Monday. But City Auditor Newell Cook is refusing to allow the school system to overspend its $210 million budget. He says the school system is spending at a rate that would cost the city a total of $240 million to $250 million.

In the past, it was customary for the School Department to overspend its budget and to "roll over" its deficit into the next fiscal year.

"It was a tacit agreement....We were told that that was the way the game was always played, and it would continue to be," said School Committee member Jean Sullivan McKeigue.

But this year, Mayor Kevin White decided to end the practice, saying the city is in no financial position to bail out the schools again by adding this year's overspending to next year's budget. "School department spending is uncontrolled," Michael Donovan, an aide to the mayor, said. "You give them a budget, and it doesn't mean anything."

The city's financial health has withered in the past year. The budgets of some city agencies have almost dried up, and White is planning to transfer some employees to other departments so their paychecks won't bounce.

City officials predict the city will face serious cash shortages in April and May, in part because of new tax cuts required by Proposition 2½, the statewide property-tax referendum passed in November. Also draining the treasury is a court decision obligating the city to refund $45 million to $90 million to businesses that claimed they were paying disproportionately high property taxes.

Frustrated with the response by the mayor and the City Council, School Committee President John O'Bryant is looking for help from the governor and the Legislature.

"We shouldn't be at this point. If we had been given the leadership (from White) over the past 12 or 13 years, we wouldn't be here," O'Bryant said.

But state Education Commissioner Gregory Anrig says the state Board of Education "will not propose a bailout by the state. This must be resolved by elective officials in Boston."

Teachers, already shaken by widespread layoffs expected under Proposition 2½, are furious about the threatened closing.

"It enrages me," said Boston Teachers Union President Kathleen Kelley, who contends it would cost more money to close the schools than to keep them open.

"It makes no sense, educationally, morally or fiscally," said Ms. Kelley, adding that if the schools close early, teachers would sue for wages due under their contract and would file for unemployment benefits.

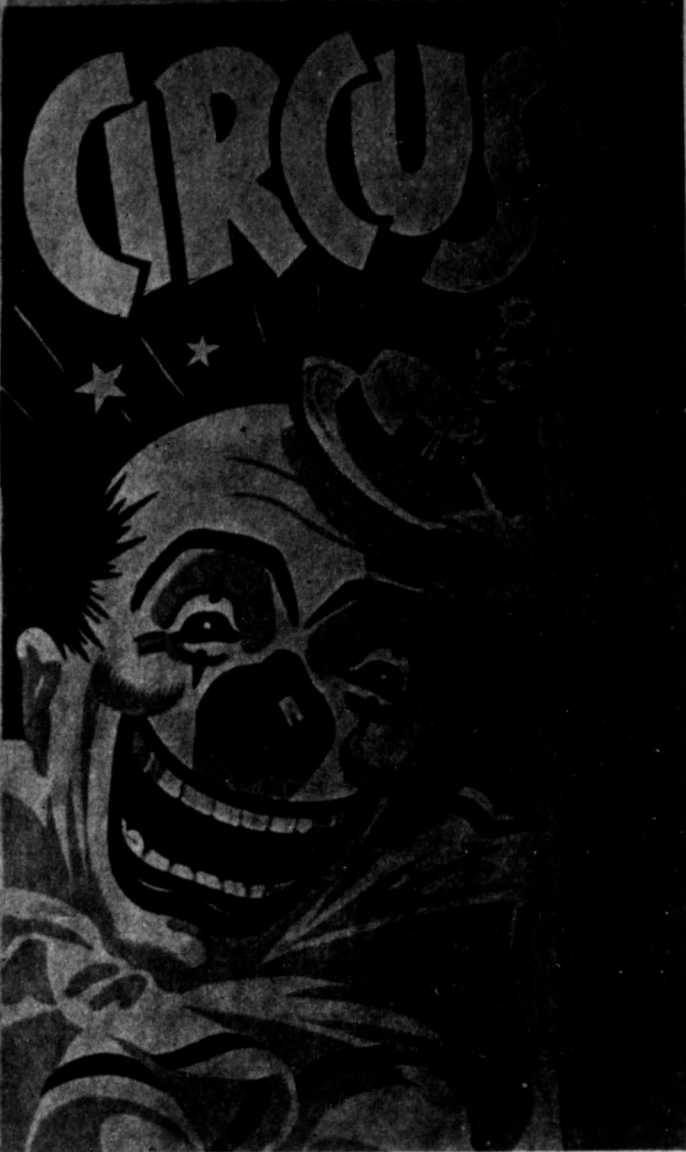

She said an early closing would have a "horrendous effect" on students, particularly high school seniors who need diplomas to enter college and youngsters with working parents.

James Robison will appear at Chap Center March 31

A day-long workshop March 31 at Chaparral Center, sponsored by the Christian Women's National Council, will culminate with a speech by renowned evangelist James Robison at 7 p.m.

Robison's message will be preceded by the film "Let Their Eyes Be Opened." Karen Cameron, co-director of the CWNC, will introduce the film which was produced by the Christian Broadcasting Network.

Area women are invited to participate in the CWNC workshop from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. A registration fee of $10 is required for the workshop, but Robison's appearance is free.

CWNC is a ministry of the James Robison Evangelistic Association.

Youngstown officials to dismiss 100 teachers

By The Associated Press

School officials in Ohio were selecting 100 striking Youngstown teachers for dismissal today after pickets again forced a shutdown of the city's 36 schools.

But both sides in the dispute, which entered its 26th day today, began a new bargaining session Thursday night in an apparent effort to overcome the impasse. The Youngstown teachers, who are seeking a new contract, are demanding a 10 percent pay raise on starting salaries of $11,000 per year, far more than the raises offered by the city.

No progress was reported, meanwhile, in Ravenna, Ohio, struck by a 4½-month walkout by 150 teachers, or in Mariemont, Ohio, where dismissal hearings for 52 instructors in a two-month-long walkout were continuing.

Teachers in Ravenna are seeking pay increases in a new contract, and are demanding new clauses governing dismissal, tenure and length of contract. Mariemont teachers are seeking union representation, which the school board opposes.

Elsewhere in Ohio, some 115 nurses in Ash-tabula kept alive the nation's longest nurses' walkout after talks with Ash-tabula General Hospital administrators broke off. Nurses walked off the job July 21, and two major non-economic issues — mandatory membership and a no-strike clause — remained unresolved.

Youngstown Superintendent Emanuel Cat-soules said letters dismissing 100 teachers — chosen at random by computer from those who failed to work Thursday — may be prepared for mailing today. Teachers struck despite a school-board threat of

The workshop will concern the CWNC's opposition to teaching humanism in schools. Other issues to be discussed include the CWNC's stand against abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment.

Registration for the workshop will be conducted from 9 to 10 a.m. Robison will deliver opening remarks at 10 a.m.

Women interested in attending the upcoming workshop may register in advance by writing Gayla Guadet, CWNC, c/o James Robison Association, Box 18489, Fort Worth, Texas, 76118 or call 817-267-4211, ext. 49 for more information. A fee of $10 should be sent when registering in advance or brought to the workshop if registering at the door. Box lunches will be provided at a cost of $1.75 each.

South combined all his chances to bring home a difficult slam on this hand from a recent team match.

After North showed a powerful, balanced hand with his jump to four spades,

South was fully justified in making a move toward slam.

The sensible approach was a diamond cue-bid, and North, with first-round controls in the other suits, needed no further encouragement to bid the slam. Perhaps a contract of six no trump might have been a better choice in view of his heart and club tenaces.

West elected to lead a club—a heart would have given declarer no practical chance. Since the lead made it unlikely that West held the queen, declarer wisely did not attempt the "free" finesse—he had other ideas for dummy's jack of clubs.

Declarer won in his hand, drew trumps in two rounds and cashed the ace and king of diamonds. Then came the ace of clubs, followed by the jack.

West produced the queen of clubs, but declarer did not ruff. Instead, he discarded his remaining diamond. That was a good play, for if diamonds were 3-3, declarer would be able to set up dummy's long diamond by ruffing a diamond, and the heart finesse would no longer be needed.

The diamonds did not break evenly, but South's fine technique was rewarded in another way. When East was left on lead with the third club, he was ensnared in an end play. Since East had been stripped of diamonds, he was faced with unpleasant alternatives. A club lead would permit declarer to discard a heart loser from one hand while ruffing in the other; and to lead a heart was tantamount to surrendering the contract.

for it would be into dummy's ace-queen.

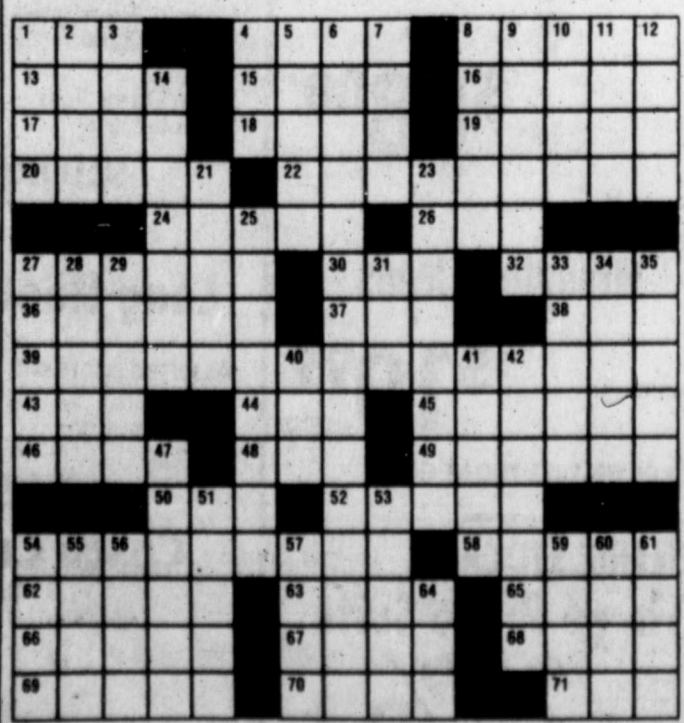

Whichever line East chose was suicide. Declarer made his slam with the loss of only a club trick!

Eastern coal mines idle as 160,000 workers strike

By The Associated Press

Eastern coal mines were idle today as some 160,000 United Mine Workers went on strike despite a tentative contract settlement negotiated by their leaders. No trouble was reported in the coalfields, but the settlement ran into some opposition at briefing sessions for the rank and file.

In the union's record 111-day strike in 1977-1978, there was some violence between union and non-union miners, and a few non-union mines closed today to avoid possible confrontations with UMW miners. The UMW generally does not set up picket lines at mines where members work.

In southern West Virginia, a spokeswoman for Gulf Brothers Coal Co. near Delbarton said the company's non-union miners were told to stay home. "We just don't want any problems," said the spokeswoman, who asked not to be identified.

UMW President Sam Church pinned his hopes for a brief walkout on Tuesday's ratification vote on the contract proposal. He predicted the settlement reached earlier this week would be approved by the rank and file, who mine about half the nation's coal, but acknowledged his work was cut out for him.

"The big problem I've had is a lot of talk, and most of them haven't even seen it (the contract) yet," Church told The Associated Press early today in a telephone interview from Uniontown, Pa., where he greeted miners coming off their last shift.

"We'll get them straightened out," he said.

Briefing sessions began this morning for local union presidents, who will explain the proposal to miners Saturday. Some of the strongest criticism came from UMW construction workers, who build coal tipples and other mine facilities.

"We're lobbying hard against this contract because if it goes down, we go down with it," said Jerry Foster of Local 1582. "If it's approved it will allow the operators to hire anybody — AFL or scabs — to come in and build these tipples."

"I doubt if it's going to go in our local," said Local 3610 Vice President Lester Kimble at the District 17 meeting today in Charleston, W. Va., "there's just too many controversial issues in it."

Miners laid down their tools and walked off their jobs at one minute after midnight today upon expiration of their current contract. The rank and file rejected a contract approved by the leadership during the last strike.

While some local leaders doubted whether ratification would come easily this time, some miners said they hoped the walkout would be brief.

"I don't feel like shutting down and going home," said Arnold Wallace, a mechanic in Peabody Coal Co.'s Lynnville, Ind., mine. "I'm hoping it (the contract) will go right on through."

But many UMW members agreed that if the proposal is rejected next week, the strike could be a long one.

"Whatever it takes to get whatever we should get, we're ready to do it," said truck driver Marvin Russell in Indiana.

Although a short strike is expected to have a negligible impact on coal users, Gov. Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia said his state could lose $10 million a month in a long strike.

Church, who predicts the accord will be approved by a 2-1 margin, spent Thursday talking with miners in southwestern Pennsylvania in the start of a five-day tour of the coalfields.

The burly union leader, carrying a paper cup spitoon, was told one issue in ratification will be a clause trading away royalties on non-union coal for more pension money.

"Sam, I'm going to have a hell of a time selling this contract to my local," said Don Albani, president of UMW Local 6321.

"You know as well as I know that you don't get everything you want," Church responded, adding that the proposed contract would be good for the union.

But after Church drove off, Albani said, "I'll read the contract to my members because I'm obliged to under the UMW constitution. But I won't vote for it."

The agreement with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association calls for a 36 percent increase in wages and benefits over three years, a dental plan and increased pensions. For the most part, reaction in the coalfields to the economic package, which would boost wages an average of $3.30 an hour, has been positive.

A key issue is the elimination of $1.90-a-ton royalties on non-union coal processed by UMW companies.

Dropping the non-union royalties, which have produced $52 million for union pension funds since 1964, was a trade-off for a new $100 a month pension for 40,000 widows of retired miners, Church said, but some miners worried it would chip away at job security.

Another obstacle to ratification could be the proposed institution of a 45-day probationary period for new employees.

Red Sox' boss reveals the facts

By DAVE O'HARA
WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Haywood Sullivan, general manager of the Boston Red Sox, Thursday night blamed baseball's salary arbitration law for the team's loss of stars Fred Lynn, Rick Burleson and Carlton Fisk. Reacting to criticism of the club's stand in which Lynn and Burleson were traded to California in separate deals and Fisk won free agency (and signed with the Chicago White Sox), Sullivan even disclosed normally secret financial data.

"Salary arbitration is not more detrimental to baseball than free agency," the Red Sox co-owner said. "I've finally tired of people writing and talking about things without the facts. I'm just trying to set the record straight."

LYNN, BURLESON and Fisk appeared headed into an option year on contracts signed in August 1976 with the Red Sox, then headed by General Manager Dick O'Connell as the club's chief executive.

However, Burleson was traded with Butch Hobson to the Angels for Carney Lansford, Mark Clear and Rick Miller last Dec. 10. Routine contracts were mailed to Lynn and Fisk on Dec. 22, two days after baseball's deadline, and they went to arbitration to win free agency.

Lynn accepted a trade, along with Steve Renko, to the Angels for Frank Tanana, Joe Rudi and Jim Dorsey just before the arbitration hearing Jan. 23. Fisk went the arbitration route and won.

"I'm not going to come out and say we deliberately mailed Lynn and Fisk contracts late, but isn't it strange the other 38 players on our major league roster had theirs posted on time," Sullivan said cryptically.

"ON THE BASIS of awards made in other arbitration cases, we figured it would cost us more than $3 million this year for the three players, and then they still could become free agents at the end of the season," he added.

Sullivan said that Lynn has received a $5.25-million contract for four years from California. Under Burleson's agreement with the Angels, Sullivan said, the shortstop will get $1 million for signing, the same $175,000 salary this year as in 1980, then $690,000 a season from 1982 to 1986.

Fisk, Sullivan said, got a $450,000 bonus and $250,000 salary from the White Sox this year, followed by $525,000 a season plus incentive and attendance bonus clauses through 1985. He also has a two-year personal service contract after that for a deal which could be worth more than $3 million.

"Just the signing of those three players, cost more than $13 million, and people think I'm stupid?" Sullivan said. "I'm happy for those guys. $13 million? They should come up and kiss me every day."

Final Four arrive at Philly on merits

By ALEX SACHARE
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Only the strong survive in the NCAA Basketball Championships, and the teams that made it here for the Final Four festivities will be playing to their strengths in Saturday's semifinals.

"There are no more Cinderellas," said Louisiana State Coach Dale Brown. "This is the best Final Four that I can remember. Indiana, Virginia, North Carolina and us — all four are potential national champions."

But only one will wear the crown following Monday night's title game. The Final Four will be played to two Saturday when fourth-ranked LSU, 31-3, takes on ninth-ranked Indiana, 24-9, and fifth-ranked Virginia, 28-3, meets Atlantic Coast Conference rival North Carolina, 28-7 and ranked sixth.

THE FOUR clubs went through one-hour workouts at the Spectrum today in preparation for Saturday's doubleheader.

Although this has been a tournament of surprises, most notably the second-round massacre that saw top-ranked DePaul, No. 2 Oregon State and No. 3 Arizona State fall by the wayside, don't expect any surprise strategy in the semifinals.

"We're 31-3 and we've done certain things to get us here," said Jordy Hultberg, an aide to LSU Coach Brown. "We'd be foolish to change now. We're going to go out and do what we do best, and the other teams will try to do what they do best."

What LSU does best is score in an up-tempo game. The Tigers' 80.2 scoring average is the best among the Final Four teams. But Brown is confident that LSU can win even if the pace is deliberate, pointing out that the Tigers have won 29 of their last 35 games that were decided by seven points or less.

"We played 34 games this year," he said. "I haven't seen a bunch of Apaches that weren't disciplined in those 34 games."

BUT WHEN it comes to discipline, the coach that comes to mind is Indiana's Bobby Knight.

"The mental is to the physical as four is to one," said Knight, when asked about the balance of winning basketball. "That holds true in tournament play more than at any other time during the season."

Knight's teams have a history of getting stronger as the season wears on, reaping the benefit of his disciplined approach to the game. Knight holds a 14-4 record in NCAA tournament play and led the Hoosiers to the title in 1976. Knight's record in the last 10 games of the regular season, plus postseason competition, is a remarkable 81-19.

This year's Hoosiers were only 7-5 at one stage after losing to Clemson and Pan American on consecutive nights in the Rainbow Classic. But they have come on strong, posting a 17-4 mark since.

"I don't think Philadelphia ever entered my mind when we were on the plane coming back from Hawaii," said Indiana forward Ted Kitchel. "We've had to struggle and work our butts off, but it's all worth it now."

ONE PLAYER to watch in the Indiana-LSU matchup is Isiah Thomas, the Hoosiers' All-America point guard.

"We'd like to put him in a box for the game," joked Brown. But then the LSU coach said he had no surprises up his sleeve.

"We don't plan to come up with too many gimmicks at this time of the season," said Brown.

Since Virginia and North Carolina already have met twice during the regular season, it's doubtful they'd be able to surprise each other if they tried.

"There's not much scouting to do," agreed Virginia star Jeff Lamp. "They're very competitive and we've had two tough games with them."

Virginia rallied to beat North Carolina in both regular season meetings, fighting back from deficits of 13 and 16 points. But the Tar Heels have won 10 of their last 11 games — the lone defeat being a one-point loss at Duke — and figure to be even tougher on Saturday.

"BECAUSE VIRGINIA won the two other games, I'm picking North Carolina this time. It's tough to beat a club three times," said Brigham Young Coach Frank Arnold, whose team was beaten by Virginia in the final of the East Regional.

The focus in this game is expected to be up front. North Carolina has an outstanding front line — 6-9 freshman Sam Perkins at center and 6-6 senior Al Wood and 6-8 sophomore James Worthy at forward. But Virginia boasts 7-4 Ralph Sampson, an All-America center capable of dominating both ends of the court.

"When you have a guy like Ralph," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland, "it's taken for granted that you're supposed to win. And when you lose, it's because of the coaching. We knew it would be like that when we recruited him. But we figured it would be easier to win a national championship with him than against him."

Faust welcomes 39 back

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame opens spring football practice Saturday under new Coach Gerry Faust, who will have 16 starters among 39 lettermen returning from last year's 9-2-1 squad.

"We think there ought to be some pretty good football players in that group," said Faust, who took over one of college football's most prestigious and pressure-packed jobs from Dan Devine.

"We're all fired up about getting outside and starting to put things together," Faust said. "But you've got to remember that I've never been through spring practice before, so I think this will be a learning experience for all of us."

TED BATTLES

Adding runnersup is good news to beleaguered ADs

Although basketball is becoming big business on the college level, what with NBC, CBS television contracts and arenas that seat 22,000 and 23,000 fans, football remains the old reliable breadwinner in high school.

For that reason, athletic directors, like Midland's Gil Bartosh, greeted the University Interscholastic League's passage of the resolution to include runnersup in state playoffs as a welcome relief for pinched athletic budgets.

ALTHOUGH runnersup were also included in volleyball, basketball and baseball playoffs, the greatest monetary impact will be felt in football.

"It will help financially, if we can get into the playoffs," contends Gil. And it may be that it will help even if a team doesn't make the playoffs by prolonging hope later into the season when normally a team might just be playing for exercise and an occasional college scholarship.

"Football," contends Bartosh, "costs about $75,000 a year, but it generates an income in Midland schools of $105,000 to $110,000 a year. It pays for the entire athletic program and some others as well.

Actually, $72,000 was budgeted for football and the income of more than $100,000, leaving more than $28,000 for other high school and junior high athletic programs.

"When we, or anyone, for that matter, are eliminated from the race, we suffer a tremendous drop in interest and at the gate."

WHEN BARTOSH was at Odessa Permian, he noted that the money made in playoffs alone would pay for the entire athletic budget.

In some cases an early loss can take all the enthusiasm out of a season, even before a team is mathematically eliminated. Midland High is a case in point. The Bulldogs always draw Odessa Permian, the perennial team to beat, in the opener. A loss is a real spirit and hope dampener.

"By throwing the playoffs open to the runnerup, it will create a lot of interest," says Bartosh. "A team can lose the opener and then go on a five-game win streak that will create interest and keep hopes high."

Another plus from Gil's standpoint comes from his own personal experience at Lee. "Sometimes the best team may not have won the showdown game between the district's two top teams," he notes recalling the year played Permian without five Rebel starters.

AND WHILE football is the primary revenue-generating source at present, Gil believes basketball could contribute, especially with both high schools playing in the Chaparral Center.

But that's a future dream. Right now, Gil is thankful to the Center first because it makes crowd control and parking easier. "But we have increased revenue out there, too."

Money is always a concern for athletic directors, but with the increase in athletic participation as a result of women's sports, space is now becoming another factor.

But some improvements have been made. "With girls competing in track, it was taking eight hours to run off the jumping events, so we have started duplicating facilities this year at Memorial Stadium to speed things up."

"A NEW stadium may be something we need to look at after our needs for educational facilities are satisfied," says Bartosh. "Frankly, it's (Memorial Stadium) the worst in the district. It's made of wood and won't last forever."

And the longer it's put off, the more it is going to cost. One study showed that two years ago an 11,000 seat stadium was built in Aldine for $1,500,000. "The same stadium was built in Katy last year for $4,500,000," Gil informed.

Midland is the only school with a cinder track. Big Spring and Stanton both have tartan tracks. Midland's running lanes are 36 inch lanes. Everybody else has 42 inch lanes. Big Spring is the only other District 5-5A school with a wooden stadium and it was built in the late 1950s. Memorial Stadium was dedicated back in 1948.

For Gil life is nothing one continuing round of problems and he might be excused if he muttered, "Coaching football was never this complicated."

Lee, MHS in final tuneups

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee and Midland High track squads will make their final tuneups this weekend in separate locations as they prepare for next Friday's Tall City Relays.

Both teams would like to be in top form for the Tall City Relays next week since that is the only meet of the year that will be run for the benefit of the home eyes.

The Lee Rebels already appear to be nearing top form after capturing their first team title of the year last week at Andrews, winning nine of 15 events. Saturday things will be harder since the Rebels travel to Hobbs, N.M., for an 18-event meet against Hobbs, who is expected to wage a strong war with Lee since they narrowly lost the team title to the Rebs at Andrews.

Other teams at Hobbs include Carlsbad, Clovis, El Paso, Andrews, Lubbock, Monterey and Lubbock Coronado. Prelims begin at 9 a.m. (MST) with running finals set for 2 p.m. (MST).

Meanwhile, the Bulldogs of Midland

High will be seeking its first team title in the Seminole Relays Saturday against the field of Amarillo Palo Duro, Brownfield, Lamesa, Lubbock Estacado and Lovington, N.M. This meet also has 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. starting times. Midland High is coming off a fourth place finish at Big Spring. The Bulldogs, however, won only one event in that meet and would like to change that Saturday in Seminole.

Lee got a big boost at Andrews from the 1981 debut of Keith Brown, who won the discus (177-0) and shot put (55-8) in his first competition this year.

Robert Schooler continued to be a two-event winner for the Rebs, winning both the 1600 and 3200 meter titles for the third time this season. And hurdler David Piccolo became a two-event winner for the first time this year when he posted a wind-aided 14.7 in the 120 meter high hurdles. He is unbeaten this season in the intermediates.

The Williams boys — Darrin and Arthur — also have given Lee the blue ribbon boost this season. Darrin is unbeaten in the 100 meters and had a wind-aided 10.6 last week in Andrews, one of the state's top times. Arthur is matching that performance in the 200 meters being unbeaten in three outings with a best of 21.5. He had a 21.8 into the wind last week in an eye-popping performance.

Lee also got its second victory of the year in the 1600 relay and would like to get back on the winning track in the sprint relay where they have won once this season.

On the Bulldog side of things, sophomore James Beverley continues to lead the way. He is unbeaten in the 800 meters. He started the season with a 1:55.5 and has yet to match that time. However, he has not seen good weather since the opening meet in Fort Stockton. His 2:02 at Big Spring last week was his worst time of the year and that was in high winds.

Sprinter Billy Taylor has yet to come up with a victory in either the 100 or 200 meters and he would like to be in top form for the Midland meet. He was second in both races at Big Spring.

Robert Crawford and Scott Yocham have been improving in the hurdles and Elston Montgomery is expected to be back in hurdle form this week. The hurdles are one of the strongest suits for the Bulldogs. Jim Kemper has been consistent in the pole vault with a best of 12-1.

The MHS girls will also be in action Saturday at Seminole and they hope to improve on their three-point showing at Big Spring. The MHS girls, however, will be up against a strong field consisting of Odessa High, Odessa Ector, defending champion Monahans, Fort Stockton, Andrews, Lamesa, Brownfield and Lovington, N.M.

Minnesota tops Michigan Tech

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Jeff Teal and Aaron Broten each scored two goals Thursday night as Minnesota rolled past Michigan Tech 7-2 in the semifinals of the NCAA Division I hockey tournament at the Duluth Arena.

The victory sends Minnesota, 33-11 and champions of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association, into Saturday night's final against the winner of Friday's semifinal between Wisconsin and Northern Michigan.

The Huskies, 28-14-1, had won 16 of their last 19 games, but the Gophers cooled them off by scoring four times in the first period and adding another goal just 51 seconds into the second period.

LSU, Carolina picked in semis

By KEN DENLINGER
(c) 1981, The Washington Post
If there were such a creature as a neutral fan of college basketball and he were assigned to choose the most pleasing NCAA final four matchups, he would want Dean Smith and Bobby Knight as two of the coaches. He might not want Ray Meyer, deciding that a coach who could make the NCAA semifinals only once since he had George Mikan might not deserve it after all.

Our neutral fan would want the best big player in college basketball, the best small player and the team with the most good players. He also would want the UCLA cheerleaders, the Stanford band, Abe Lemons and the chance to pick any five famous coaches out of the audience during halftime, administer 15 minutes of truth serum to each and say: "Now, how did you really build that program of yours?"

SO HE'LL settle for exquisite basketball Saturday afternoon and Monday evening in Philadelphia. The most intriguing coaches and players, the ones who stir us as few others, will be performing. And when they finish, when a season as satisfying as any ends, the NCAA champion will be ...

LSU.
Dean's dream team will beat the University of Ralph in one semifinal Saturday and LSU's eight fine players will defeat Indiana's one spectacular player, Isiah Thomas, in the other. Then, unless Leonard Mitchell hits his head on the Spectrum ceiling going for a rebound and knocks himself sillier than the NCAA rulebook, the Tigers will edge North Carolina for the title.

Why?
Because LSU has more experienced quality players than anyone else; has had them all season, in fact, and almost nobody paid attention. With Mitchell playing taller than he actually is and Greg Cook tougher than casual fans realize, the Tigers can overcome the appealing Carolina frontcourt of Al Wood, James Worth and Sam Perkins.

YOU MIGHT not want to mortgage every penny on this forecast. But Carolina has just about every advantage, physical and psychological, against Virginia. The Heels are faster and more versatile — and healthier. Also, they are determined not only to grab another large lead in this third collision with the Cavaliers but also not to botch it.

That is more possible now than ever, because Smith has learned a lot about this exceptionally young team. Probably, he has realized that if it gets another decent lead he should keep attacking instead of slacking.

If Smith does decide to play stall ball, it will be with a delay game he did not use in the regular-season losses to Virginia. The new, effective, Carolina stall is not his pet four-corners but one many good teams have used for years. It features five players instead of one and drove two fine teams, Utah and Kansas State, dizzy in the West region.

Whether Carolina can shoot well enough from the outside, whether Perkins can uproot Sampson, keep him from being a one-man zone near the basket, are the important variables. If Worth, Wood and Perkins can pass inside this week as well as they did last week, the Cavaliers are in trouble.

VIRGINIA is that rare team that seems to play much better coming from behind than with the lead. Still, it seems less flexible than Carolina, less sure even about its natural team personality. Sampson's skills seem best suited to an up tempo, even reckless game. Some other Cavaliers seem more comfortable with a more disciplined offense.

Indiana has been terrific the last month or so. What has been largely forgotten during this blitz is that the Hoosiers have lost nine games this season. This means that beyond Thomas every player has a flaw serious enough for a team such as LSU to capitalize on.

Iowa had to fold in the stretch for Indiana to win the Big Ten championship. Then the Hoosiers faced three teams, including Maryland, whose styles either emphasized what they do best or were vastly outmanned.

Simply put, LSU is better up front and fast enough to keep Thomas from dominating the game. Its backup point guard, Johnny Jones, is swifter than starter Ethan Martin. And sixth man Willie Sims is good enough to be introduced with the regulars before home games.

Thomas emphasizes the significance of gifted lead guards in basketball, that somebody creative and mercurial is almost as necessary to achieving final-four stature as the Sampsons and Worthys. Many coaches undervalue guards, insist they are a dime a dozen. Almost always, those coaches are inching by this point in the playoffs.

LSU HAS played better longer than anyone in the final four, and in tougher environments than any of the teams except possibly North Carolina. The Tigers won at Knoxville and outscored Kentucky in Lexington most of the game but could not overcome too many early sins. Also, they whipped Kentucky badly at home.

They are surprisingly versatile, able to beat good opponents at their best style. Against Kentucky, they used a delay game that was as efficient and fun to watch as Carolina's against Kansas State last week.

Surprisingly, or perhaps not, the best players in all the games are very likely to be the youngest.

Mt. Weaver erupts on secretive umps

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer
Earl Weaver, the volcanic manager of the Baltimore Orioles, has erupted again.

Weaver, making his return from a three-game suspension, was tossed out of the game against the Kansas City Royals Thursday for arguing with umpire Mark Johnson over access to the arbiter's lineup card.

The blowup came at the same site — Fort Meyers, Fla. — where Weaver pulled his team off the field on March 19 after arguing about the same subject. That action led to his suspension by American League President Lee MacPhail.

This time Weaver departed alone, but the Royals won 4-0 as Clint Hurdle and Cesar Geronimo drove in two runs apiece. However, Baltimore starter Jim Palmer allowed just one run in six innings.

THE ROYALS made several substitutions early in the game without any uproar, but Weaver approached Johnson in the eighth inning to ask for the lineup card.

"I wanted to see the nine men (in the Kansas City lineup) the way they were batting, and he (Johnson) said no," the fiery manager explained. "I don't have any trouble getting the lineup any place else except with this guy Johnson."

"So, what I did rather than argue with the umpires was get the lineup from (Royals Manager Jim) Frey."

Johnson said, "I showed it (the lineup card) to him twice and he kept going on and on. He wanted to hold it, I guess."

"I said, 'Here we go again, Earl.' He said he was going to Frey's dugout to get the lineup, and I said, 'If you go there to get the lineup I just gave you, you're gone.'"

"I said, 'Earl, I'll give it to you. Here Earl. Here Earl.' I don't know what the problem is."

Weaver did go to the Royals' dugout and wound up being tossed. But it was umpire Joe Brinkman who ejected the feisty manager.

AT SARASOTA, Fla., Carlton Fisk doubled in his first at-bat for the Chicago White Sox, leading them to a 6-5 victory over his old club, the Boston Red Sox. Fisk was declared a free agent earlier this year in a contract dispute with Boston.

The St. Louis Cardinals beat the New York Mets 3-1 as Keith Hernandez drove in two runs and scored another. New York's Dave Kingman singled home Wally Backman with the Mets' lone run.

Rickey Henderson's three hits, two of them home runs, sparked Oakland's 17-hit attack as the A's beat the Seattle Mariners 8-6. In the last two games, the Seattle pitching staff has given up 41 hits.

A tie-breaking single by Oddie Davis triggered a four-run eighth inning and Rick Honeycutt pitched seven shutout innings as the Texas Rangers blanked the Montreal Expos 4-0.

Robin Yount's three-run triple and Don Money's two-run homer keyed a nine-run fourth inning in the Milwaukee Brewers' 11-7 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Yount also tripled in the third inning.

DAVE TOBIK pitched four shutout innings and scored the first run as the Detroit Tigers' split squad defeated the Houston Astros 3-1. Tobik singled to start the third inning, advanced to second on a sacrifice and scored on Tim Lincecum's single.

Dave Parker slammed his third home run of the spring as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Toronto Blue Jays 5-1. The victory broke a four-game losing string for the Pirates.

Fernando Valenzuela, Bob Castillo and Steve Howe combined for a five-hitter as the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked the Atlanta Braves 7-0. All five Atlanta hits were singles and only two Braves advanced as far as second base.

STEVE MURA pitched six shutout innings and Dave Edwards slammed a solo homer to spark the San Diego Padres to a 4-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants. Mura struck out four and walked two.

Dave Henderson led off the seventh inning with a walk, stole second and scored on Hector Cruz's sacrifice fly as the Chicago Cubs beat the California Angels 7-6 in a rain-shortened game. The Cubs got to reliever Jesse Jefferson for the winning run minutes before wind and rain halted the game after seven

Sulaiman rips SI

MEXICO CITY (AP) — World Boxing Council President Jose Sulaiman lashed out at Sports Illustrated magazine Thursday for publishing what he called an ill-founded and irresponsible attack on the WBC.

Sulaiman said the article was part of a smear campaign directed at the WBC "for representing a world organization that has as its watchword the defense of everyone's rights," and that it contained several factual errors.

Among those errors, Sulaiman said, was to say that the United States has only a fraction of one vote on the WBC. The United States actually has three full votes, he said.

Referring to charges that the WBC has been responsible for dubious classifications and mismatched fights, Sulaiman said the author of the article was either totally ignorant of boxing history or deliberately hiding his knowledge.

Longhorns feel pressure of being favored

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jittery and jumpy Texas, feeling the pressure of being the favorite and performing poorly in a near-disastrous afternoon time trials, owned a narrow two-point lead going into the second day of the NCAA Swimming and Diving Trials thanks to a salty senior.

The Longhorns' Kris Kirchner shocked UCLA's Robin Leamy in the 50 freestyle event to take the gold medal Thursday night after Leamy had set an American record in the afternoon preliminary.

Kirchner followed his victory by anchoring the Longhorns to an American record-smashing effort in the 400 medley relay. The 32 points for first place in a relay gave Texas 65 points to UCLA's 63. The Bruins were third behind Southern Methodist.

"I don't know what our problem was earlier in the day," said Texas Coach Eddie Reese, who was afraid the Longhorns had blown their home pool advantage. "We were just terrible. But we really came back well. Florida and California-Berkeley could have wrapped it up."

Reese said the Longhorns are in excellent position now — in fact, just about where he thought they would be.

Texas is heavily favored to unseat Cal-Berkeley as the defending champion.

"I think a lot of our problem earlier was from the neck up," said Reese. "I thought we picked up a lot of points tonight just on attitude. You can't let pressure affect your performance. I think we were just trying to go too fast. We just relaxed."

UCLA also suffered a big disappointment when Brian Goodell, trying to tie John Naber's individual NCAA championships' record with 10 gold medals, finished fifth in the 500 freestyle behind the winning effort of Arizona's Doug Towne.

"I can't blame the flu I had several weeks ago," said Goodell. "I just couldn't hang onto the pace. I just didn't have it."

Bradley's 71 leads LPGA

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — The nicest part about her round in the $175,000 Kemper Open women's golf tournament, Pat Bradley said, was finishing it.

"I'm just glad to be off of that course," Bradley said Thursday after shooting a 71 that gave her the lead in the wind-ravaged first round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

Her par round over the 6,134-yard, par 36-35-71 Mesa Verde Country Club course gave her a one-stroke

Change helps Watson

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Tom Watson went to the practice tee with some high hopes of turning his game around.

"Golf is a funny game," said the man who has played that game, for the past four seasons, better than anyone else in the world.

"Sometimes a little change, a little adjustment like this is all it takes. It can make everything fall into place again."

"Sometimes it's like a car that isn't running right. You make an adjustment on the carburetor and all of a sudden it's running perfect."

Watson made a little adjustment to his hip position in his address during the first round of the $300,000 Sea Pines-Heritage Classic and it helped him to a 5-under-par 66 and the first round lead.

He made the change, he said, standing on the 15th tee at the 6,650 hard Harbour Town Golf Links.

And what, he was asked, was the result?

"Birdie, birdie, birdie," Watson said with a grin.

He needed that burst of three consecutive sub-par holes to take a 1-shot lead over Gil Morgan, who bogeyed the last hole for a 67.

Our Used Cars Are Sold With As Much Pride As Our New Cars.

Many people are not aware that on many occasions we spend good money and time on the used cars we sell.

Those trade-in cars that do not meet our standards never appear in our used car department. The newer model trade-ins in fine condition, get a quick check, a lick and some polish...while the good older ones do get fixed up, if we feel they are worth the money.

That's why we offer every used car with pride.
