TV deregulation

WASHINGTON — A federal rule that helped make week-night stars of letter-turning Vanna White and answer-posing Alex Trebek is heading into its last season. The 25-year-old rule — which requires network-affiliated stations in the top 50 markets to reserve an hour of prime time for shows not produced by ABC, CBS and NBC — opened up a home for such syndicated shows as "Wheel of Fortune," "Jeopardy" and "Entertainment Tonight". Page 11A.

Schorre appointed

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre has been appointed to a 10-member Governor's Drug Policy Advisory Board, which is charged with the responsibility of developing a statewide drug strategy taking into consideration suggestions from interested parties. The board also will make recommendations for the expenditure of anti-drug funds and report on the expenditure of those funds. Also appointed to the board from West Texas are San Angelo Police Chief Russell Smith and Quincy White, assistant director of human resources for the city of Lubbock.

Senate gift ban

WASHINGTON — Fighting off temptation and habit, the Senate voted Friday to deny itself unlimited lobbyist-paid lunches and free trips to glitzy charitable golf, tennis and ski events. After wavering for a while, the Senate voted 98-0 to adopt new rules that would forbid senators, their aides and other Senate officers from accepting privately paid travel to "recreational" events. Early morning fight, stabbing leaves 18-year-old man dead

■ Authorities believe quarrel may have stemmed from Little League feud years earlier.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

An 18-year-old man — who celebrated his birthday Thursday — died from a single stab wound during an early Friday morning fight that stemmed from a Little League feud years earlier, Midland County sheriff's officials said.

Charged with murder are 17-year-old Tommy John Rains, 3801 Cimmaron St., and 19-year-old Jason Neil McClelland, 4214 Tanner Drive. McClelland was free while Rains remained jailed late Friday, jail officials said. Bond was set at $15,000 for each by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

James Irvin Poole, 2613 N. Midland Drive, died from a single stab wound to the chest that penetrated his heart and lung, officials said. An autopsy was conducted Friday in Odessa.

Poole was stabbed on 1010 S. County Road 1233 — the roadway leading to Midland Memorial Rehabilitation Hospital off Loop 250 — about 2 a.m., officials said.

The victim, a friend and the two men arrested met at the location with the intention of continuing a fight that began earlier in the day, officials said. About seven or eight youngsters were involved in the earlier fight in south Midland County, officials said.

"As soon as they realized he (Poole) was stabbed, the fight stopped," said investigating officer Sgt. Fred Stubbs. Poole was taken by private vehicle to Midland Memorial Hospital and Medical Center and dumped in the parking lot, according to the Midland Police Department.

Rains is believed to be the one who did the actual stabbing, with a hunting knife, officials said. McClelland was in possession of a folding knife, according to officials.

Smith gets life in prison

Jury rejects death penalty in just over 2 hours of deliberation

UNION, S.C. — A jury swiftly rejected the death penalty for Susan Smith, sentencing her to life in prison Friday after her lawyer argued she is tormented enough in her own "lake of fire" for drowning her two young sons. She will be eligible for parole in 30 years.

For nine days last fall, Ms. Smith insisted that a black man had commandeered her car as she drove on a dark, empty back road. She begged tearfully on nationwide television for her sons' safe return, at last confessing Nov. 3 that she had popped the car's safety brake and rolled it down a ramp into John D. Long Lake with the boys still strapped inside.

She cried again Friday as she was led from the courtroom after the jury announced its unanimous verdict, reached after just 2 1/2 hours of deliberations.

The boys' father, David Smith, sat stone-faced, later telling reporters he and his family were "disappointed, but it wasn't our choice on what penalty she was to receive."

Smith, whose wrenching testimony about losing his sons reduced several jurors to tears, said he could not imag-

Officers worry for Smith's safety behind bars

By Robert Tanner

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Life in prison for Susan Smith means at least 30 years behind bars with a roommate, a prison job and weekend visits from friends and family.

But for now, prison officials worry about whether she might be in danger — from other inmates and from herself.

After a week or two of routine processing — during which she will be showered, deloused, strip- and cavity-searched, and given mental and physical tests — she will spend 4 to 6 weeks alone in a 6-foot by 14-foot cell.

She will be observed by closed-circuit camera while officers at the Women's Correctional Institution outside Columbia will see how the 350 other inmates adjust to her presence.

"Because of her high-profile notoriety ... we'll be getting a pulse on the climate on the yard," said Robyn Zimmerman, Corrections Department spokeswoman. "We want her integration in the general population to be as safe as possible."

During that time, Ms. Smith will be kept from interacting with other inmates, eating alone in her cell, and exercising alone outside on a concrete slab.

After that, if psychologists are still worried about her mental health, she could spend several months in a 37-bed transitional facility on prison grounds. She would receive therapy, spend time in a dayroom with others, and live alone or share a cell with a roommate.

If that went well, she would then join the rest of the prison population, sharing a cell with another inmate.

Punishment phase in Big Spring teen's trial halts for defense witnesses' arrival

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

No sentence was reached Friday in the capital murder case of convicted killer Levy Lee Edmondson, 17, of Big Spring.

The trial's planning did not allow for the fast pace and multitude of witnesses who were run through the courtroom.

Two expert witnesses for the defense had been scheduled for next week and could not make their way to Big Spring Friday when the defense ran out of witnesses after nine family members and friends of Edmondson testified.

Judge Bob Moore of the 118th District Court had no option but to release the jury for the weekend, to be called back for the conclusion of the punishment phase Monday.

The prosecution already has seated about 27 witnesses in the punishment phase. Lead council for the prosecution, Shane Phelps, is seeking the death penalty for Edmondson.

Having been convicted by the same jury on Wednesday, Edmondson's only two possible sentences are life in prison and execution.

Jurors deliberated for three hours and

Croats cut key Serb supply route

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Croat soldiers swept north along the Bosnian border Friday, cut a key Serb supply route and marched jubilantly through the town that controls the road.

Fifty miles away, Croatia's rebel Serbs pounded Bosnian troops in the northwestern enclave of Bihac, and the United Nations said it may be too late to keep the rebellions in the two former Yugoslav republics from merging into a single war.

Bosnian Serbs declared a general mobilization of all men ages 18-60, which for the first time applied to all Serb-held territory. The move appeared to be aimed at boosting morale rather than enlarging the rebel army.

Thousands of Croatian army troops and Bosnian Croat militia swept Friday into the strategic town of Grahovo on Bosnia's western border. This allowed them to cut the main supply road linking the Croatian Serb stronghold of Knin in southwestern Croatia with Serb-held territory in Bosnia.

About 5,000 Serb civilians had fled the town after it was shelled Thursday, and aid agencies were rushing blankets and other aid to the region. Croatian state TV showed footage of jubilant Croat soldiers walking the deserted streets.

Later Friday, the Bosnian Serb army said Croats took the town of Glamoc, southeast of Grahovo, widening their holdings. It claimed 20,000 civilians were on the run.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic's office acknowledged Grahovo had fallen and said his troops "have temporarily withdrawn to reserve positions."

Karadzic ordered the mobilization of all able-bodied men on Serb-held territory for the purpose of "reaching the final victory over our enemy and (thus) ending the war."

The move appeared aimed at boosting Serb morale. It is not expected to increase Bosnian Serb forces in the field, estimated at a maximum 80,000, by more than a few thousand men.

With the Serb supply route cut, Croats are in a better position to attack Knin. They may also move on other Serb-held chunks of Croatia captured in a six-month war in 1991.

"We fear that military actions (in Croatia) may be initiated soon, possibly within days," said U.N. spokesman Chris Gunness.

Croatia and Bosnia agreed last Saturday to increase military cooperation in the face of world failure to stop Bosnian Serbs from overrunning Srebrenica and Zepa, two U.N. "safe areas" in eastern Bosnia.

The Croatian involvement in Bosnia threatens to reignite war in Croatia and blur the border between the two former Yugoslav republics.

The United Nations had announced plans to put peacekeepers on the Bosnia-Croatia border to prevent a merging of the conflicts. But they may now be too late.

Rebel Serbs from Croatia are also fighting in Bosnia, helping Bosnian Serbs and renegade Muslims in their assault on the government enclave of Bihac, 50 miles north of Grahovo.

The Serbs are now just 2.5 miles from the main U.N. base in the enclave at Coralici, said Col. Jasper Helsoe, U.N. commander in Bihac.

The Bihac enclave is a thumbnail-shaped piece of territory in the northwest corner of Bosnia where Croatia curves around it to the north and west. Rebel Serbs in Croatia control that adjoining territory. Bosnian Serbs hold the territory to the east and south.

By gaining control of Bihac, Serbs in Bosnia and Croatia would control a contiguous swath all the way to the Serbian border, aiding them in their goal of creating a "greater Serbia."

A small part of the Bihac enclave, around Bihac town itself, is a U.N.-designated "safe area." The enclave is home to more than 200,000 people.

Croatian army commander Gen. Zvonimir Cervenko vowed Friday to help the Muslim-led Bosnian government army defend the enclave. Croatia "is obligated to provide assistance to the Bosnian army," he said.

With their conquest of Grahovo, Croat troops are about 50 miles south of the Bihac enclave. U.N. officials estimate that between 8,000 and 10,000 Bosnian Croat and Croatian army troops are built up in that region inside Bosnia. They claim to have taken over 80 square miles of territory.

U.N. and NATO representatives met in Brussels, Belgium, to draft plans on deterring Serb attacks on Bihac. But Gen. Bernard Janvier, the U.N. commander, appeared to rule out any immediate use of allied airstrikes to defend the enclave.

German police kill gunman after eight-hour standoff aboard tour bus

COLOGNE, Germany (AP) — Police stormed a tour bus Friday and killed a gunman who had held them at bay for eight hours, threatening to blow up more than 20 passengers after he killed the driver and a hostage.

The passengers included 10 Germans, four Americans, four Austrians, two Japanese and one each from Argentina, Turkey and Israel, said police Cmdr. Winrich Granitzka. It didn't appear foreigners were among the dead.

"We were afraid he wanted to end it with a bang," said Winrich Granitzka, commander of the special police unit that rushed onto the bus after fooling the gunman into thinking officers were approaching to give him a cellular phone.

Police were unsure what motivated the 31-year-old, Russian-speaking hostage-taker, who had an Israeli passport and spoke broken English. Hostages said he once demanded to go to Paris, another time to see a government official. He once screamed about the Russian mafia. Police would not release his name but said he was of Russian origin.

The gunman had tied sticks of wood to his body and the bus and held wires, fooling police into thinking he had a bomb.

Five passengers escaped during the standoff. The gunman opened fire on the last man to run, critically wounding him. He then ordered the wounded Austrian to get back in the bus, "or I'll kill your wife," Granitzka said.

Police dragged away the wounded man and rushed him to a hospital. Soon after, the gunman shot and killed a 60-year-old woman. It was not immediately known if she was the escapee's wife.

That shot persuaded the police to act quickly, said prosecutor Karl Uterman. "This was a killer who would stop at nothing," Uterman said.

The man communicated in broken English and broken German — then later, when a translator was summoned, in Russian — over the bus' mobile phone. When the battery died, the gunman asked for a cellular phone, giving police an excuse to get close enough to the bus to shoot him.

The gunman boarded the bus with about 20 adults and three children Friday morning in front of the Cologne Cathedral. The passengers were scheduled to tour city landmarks and catch a panoramic view of the skyline from the fairgrounds exhibition center.

But when the bus stopped at the fairgrounds 40 minutes into the tour, the gunman argued with the bus driver and killed him.

A construction worker saw the struggle and called police, Granitzka said. The gunman opened fire on a responding patrol car, wounding an officer in the stomach. The officer underwent surgery and was expected to survive.

Early into the standoff, the gunman ordered a 34-year-old German woman to go outside and get his bag from the luggage compartment. She could not open the door, and hid under the bullet-riddled patrol car for an hour until police could rescue her.

A few hours later, her 11-year-old son and a man escaped out the back window of the bus.

Area to see triple digits again

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 102 and variable winds at 5 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low near 70.

Sunday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 90s.

After an overnight low of 72, Friday's high was 105 compared with the record high for that date of 106, set in 1944. The record low for that date was 61, set in 1933.

STATE

Deadly heat remained the primary weather feature throughout Texas on Friday, as record-setting, triple-digit temperatures were the norm statewide.

Among the places reporting heat records or tying them were El Paso, Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, San Antonio, Austin, College Station, Amarillo, Galveston and Abilene, where the mercury soared to 107 degrees.

At least four have died during the region's most recent heat wave, including three in the Tyler area and a prison inmate whose bus broke down while being transported to a correctional facility.

Heat advisories were the order of the day Friday. In West Texas, the lowest reported temperature at 4 p.m. was a sweltering 101 at Dalhart.

No rain was reported in Texas, and none is forecast this weekend except for some possible showers in far northeast Texas and along the coast.

Light and variable winds of no more than 10 mph offered little comfort for residents.

NATION

Searing temperatures made the deserts of the Southwest even hotter than usual Friday, while powerful storms battered Eastern states.

The morning low in Las Vegas fell to just 87, breaking the record warm low of 86 set just one year ago.

It was hotter still in California, where Blythe baked at 107 at midnight and Palm Springs was cooking at 114 by mid-morning, the highest reading of the day in the lower 48 states.

Farther north, organizers of the U.S. Olympic Festival called in an outdoor cooling company to make life bearable for athletes and spectators at events from Boulder to Colorado Springs, Colo.

LIFE: Jurors reject death penalty for Smith

(From 1A)

ine visiting Ms. Smith in jail and was thinking of moving away from Union to escape the memories.

"I'll never forget what Susan has done to me and my family, even I'd have to say to her family. And I'll never forget Michael and Alex," he said.

"But forgive, that's something I'm going to have to deal with, I guess, further on down the road."

Prosecutor Tommy Pope defended his decision to seek the death penalty, saying he would do it again.

"This community can begin to heal," Pope said. "It's taken a tremendous toll ... but it's something that had to be done."

Public opinion in Union, a town of 10,000 people, shifted from favoring the death sentence shortly after the crime, growing more sympathetic as Ms. Smith's troubled past, including sexual abuse by her stepfather, became known.

Ms. Smith's lawyer, David Bruck, said, "There is no good outcome to this case. This case was an awful human tragedy and it still is and it always will be."

After the verdict, Circuit Judge William Howard told jurors their choice was "the toughest moral decision anyone has to make." The jury had taken the same amount of time July 22 to convict Ms. Smith of murder.

"We all felt like Susan was a really disturbed person. And we all felt that giving her the death penalty wouldn't serve justice," said juror Deborah Benvenuti.

Ms. Smith, 23, didn't testify during her trial and declined to make a statement to jurors before their deliberations began.

She was put on suicide watch in a cell monitored by closed-circuit television and with a guard walking past every 15 minutes, prison spokesman Robyn Zimmerman said. For the first few days, she will not be allowed visitors.

In his closing argument in the penalty phase of the trial, Bruck said Ms. Smith's grief, remorse and memories while serving life behind bars would be torment enough.

"This young woman is in a lake of fire," Bruck said. "That's her punishment."

Holding a Bible, Bruck read the story from the Gospel of John about a woman who committed adultery — an offense punishable by stoning to death.

"He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her," Bruck read.

But Pope told jurors Ms. Smith's remorse for killing her only children, 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex, was meaningless.

"She may be sorry — now," he said, his voice rising. "But was she sorry when she dropped that hand brake down?"

The crowd that gathered in front of the courthouse to hear the verdict was split in their views of the case.

"She's crying out for help. She just needs help. If they'd given Susan the death chair it wouldn't bring those boys back," said Christine Bird, 56.

Holly Tator, who was also in the crowd, said the death sentence would have been more just. "What she did was wrong and she planned it all along. She was pleading to the whole nation and lying all along."

There was never any doubt about Ms. Smith's guilt. Her trial, which began July 10, was to explore why she killed the boys Oct. 25 and how she would be punished.

Bruck argued during the trial that Ms. Smith snapped under unbearable personal pressures and mental illness. Ms. Smith's father, Harry Vaughan, killed himself when she was 6 and defense lawyers said she also was prone to depression and had attempted suicide several times.

Pope told the jury Ms. Smith killed her sons so she could try to continue a relationship with a boyfriend. He was the son of the owner of the plant where she worked and once told her he wasn't ready to be a father.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I submit to you, for Susan Smith, the love for herself was greater than her love for those boys," Pope said.

The prosecution showed jurors a videotaped re-enactment of the crime in which it took Ms. Smith's car six minutes to sink with the boys strapped inside.

Ms. Smith and her husband divorced in May and were already separated when she killed the children. During the search, he rushed to her side to support her, but after the hoax was revealed, he said he wanted her to die for what she had done.

A defense psychiatrist testified that after Smith left his wife in August 1994, she became increasingly depressed, began drinking more and juggled sexual relationships with at least three men.

Among them was her stepfather, Beverly Russell, who admitted molesting her when she was 16 and to having sexual relations with her as recently as August. On Thursday he took the witness stand and tearfully took partial responsibility for what happened to the boys.

Bruck said after the verdict that Ms. Smith still wants to die.

"I think Susan is still suicidal," he said. "She still puts on a brave front. ... But yes, underneath the exterior of 'I'm all right,' I think there's great anguish and desire for relief from her pain."

SAFETY: First weeks to be alone

(From 1A)

She would be required to work eight hours a day. Most new inmates are required to work in the cafeteria, rising at 4 a.m. to begin their shift.

Eventually, she also could work as a library aide, sew at the women's prison's apparels industry or work on a grounds maintenance crew. She also could take vocational classes.

Ms. Smith could be visited every other weekend by her immediate family, her minister and three friends.

"She'll begin to heal and have a routine," Zimmerman said.

After 30 years, she could be considered for parole every two years.

And once a release date is set, current policy would allow her an opportunity of joining a work-release program outside prison, Zimmerman said.

Judge blocks subpoena of screenwriter in O.J. trial

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A judge Friday thwarted O.J. Simpson's cross-country attempt to force a screenwriter to testify at his murder trial about taped interviews in which Detective Mark Fuhrman used racial epithets.

Judge William Z. Wood said it wasn't clear if Fuhrman was expressing his own views or was representing the opinions of other officers in the interviews conducted since 1985 for a script about the Los Angeles police department.

The detective, who gave dramatic testimony about finding the bloody glove on Simpson's estate, denied to the Simpson jury that he referred to blacks as niggers during the past 10 years.

The defense accuses Fuhrman of planting evidence because of his supposed hatred for blacks. Simpson's attorneys want the jury to be told to disregard Fuhrman's testimony because he lied about the epithets.

Simpson's lead attorney, Johnnie Cochran Jr., who flew in from Los Angeles to argue that the North Carolina screenwriter be subpoenaed, said he would appeal the decision.

The focus of the case moved to North Carolina because testimony was interrupted after a juror became ill. The 43-year-old juror remained hospitalized Friday, but was recovering from an undisclosed ailment and may be able to return Monday, Judge Lance Ito said during a hearing in Los Angeles.

Before Wood's ruling, Cochran elicited testimony from scriptwriter Laura Hart McKinny that Fuhrman used the racial slur several times during her interviews.

During the hearing, 30 minutes of which was spent listening to portions of the tapes in the judge's chambers, Cochran argued that having McKinny testify would cast doubt on Fuhrman's truthfulness.

"We're not here trying to say Mark Fuhrman framed O.J. Simpson," Cochran said. "What we're going to prove is he's a liar. We're talking about his credibility. ... We have an innocent client and I think it's outrageous that we can't get this impeachment."

McKinny, a professor at the North Carolina School of the Arts, testified that Fuhrman was a technical consultant and business partner in her efforts to market a screenplay and book entitled "Men Against Women." The story is a fictional account of problems female officers face in the LAPD. She said handing over the material would make her years of work worthless.

McKinny and Cochran went through portions of the tape transcripts during her testimony. In one section, Fuhrman said if he didn't have a reason to arrest a black person during a traffic stop he would tear up their driver's license and arrest them for driving without one.

At another point, Fuhrman talked about Ethiopians in Los Angeles.

"Does he say '(blank) the Ethiopians. ... We've got all this money going to Ethiopia. For what? To feed a bunch of dumb niggers?' " Cochran asked.

"He was helping me make up a story," McKinny said. "It wasn't a biography of Mr. Fuhrman's life. He was helping me develop characters."

After his ruling, Wood said in an interview that there was nothing to show that Fuhrman "had it in to get Simpson."

"Even assuming Detective Fuhrman's a racist — that's reprehensible — but does it show he would tend to try to set somebody up or frame an innocent person?" the Forsyth County Superior Court judge asked.

"The only thing they found remotely approaching that was tearing up a driver's license, which doesn't quite rise to the level of planting evidence on a crime scene. ... It was dialogue for a Hollywood movie and Hollywood movies often contain curse words and racial epithets."

Fuhrman's attorney praised the ruling.

"His reaction is that he was pleased that the judge followed the law. He was absolutely right," attorney Robert Tourtelot said.

"The defense has no defense. They're desperate defense lawyers with no case and the only thing they have to play is the race card," Tourtelot said. "They know Mark Fuhrman is not a racist, and what they've done is to destroy the man. He is a broken man."

Fuhrman had been subpoenaed to appear at Simpson's trial Monday, but defense attorney Carl Douglas said in Los Angeles that the detective wouldn't be called until an appeal of the McKinny issue is resolved.

TRIAL: 2 expert defense witnesses to testify Monday

(From 1A)

10 minutes before deciding that Edmondson drew a .45-caliber revolver from under his jacket and shot Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Troy Hogue through the forehead at point-blank range on Dec. 30, 1994.

Most of the prosecution's witnesses consisted of school mates of Edmondson at Big Spring High School.

Some of them testified that Edmondson had voiced appreciation for the tactics of Adolph Hitler and Charles Manson. Others told of Edmonson's alleged drug sales and other aberrant behavior.

Edmondson was on probation for aggravated robbery and a felony escape conviction when he shot and killed Hogue.

Another student testified that after watching a violent movie, Edmondson said he "could kill a cop" as one character in the movie had.

Williams dismissed this as "talking tough," just as do many other adolescent males.

In the defense's turn at bat Friday, friends and family members testified that Edmondson was not the heartless monster the prosecution was trying to portray.

Several testified that they could never believe such a "nice" or "quiet" boy would commit this crime.

While testifying, Edmondson's mother turned to the jury and begged, "Please. Don't take my boy's life."

Others who testified as character witnesses in Edmondson's favor included his family's preacher and a former employer who said Edmondson was "a hard worker" and a "nice kid."

The two expert witnesses will testify Monday in Edmondson's defense, after which there should be time for closing arguments and deliberation, so that a sentence can be decided.

STABBING: Officials arrest two in 18-year-old's death

(From 1A)

Poole and his friend, whose name hasn't been released, were not armed, officials said.

An unidentified female — who brought Rains and McClelland to the location — drove the two suspects to another friend's home in Midland County, officials said. McClelland was arrested at the hospital where he had been taken for questioning; Rains was arrested at his home.

Midland police learned of the stabbing after being notified by hospital emergency room personnel. The sheriff's office took over the investigation after it was determined the stabbing occurred in the county.

An investigation determined that the ill feelings between two of the youngsters — who were not specifically identified by officials — began long before Thursday. Two of the boys had fought about five years earlier while in Little League, "where one boy chased another with a bat or some other foolish incident," Sheriff Gary Painter said.

"Some people have a problem," Painter said. "It's just a very senseless killing."

French show Algerian bomb-making training film; Paris bombing investigation continues

PARIS (AP) — French television on Friday showed a training film by Algerian militants demonstrating how to make a bomb similar to one investigators believe was used in a deadly attack on a crowded subway.

But the investigation into who planted the bomb was painstakingly slow, amid vague eyewitness accounts and unauthenticated claims of responsibility.

Seven people were killed and dozens were injured when the bomb exploded during the evening rush hour Tuesday in a subway car in the Saint-Michel RER train station in the Latin Quarter of central Paris.

Twenty-three people remained hospitalized Friday, three of them in serious condition. It was the first deadly bombing in Paris in nine years and shocked the city at the height of the tourist season.

The Reseau Express Regional, or Regional Express Network, is separate from the Paris city subway network, criss-crossing the capital and serving suburban areas.

Officials said they were investigating whether there was any connection to the Armed Islamic Group, a rebel organization fighting to topple Algeria's military-backed government and install a strict Islamic state in the former French colony.

Foreign Minister Herve de Charette said the investigation could focus on the GIA, as the group is known.

"It seems probable to me that we're moving toward a GIA lead," he was quoted as saying in Friday editions of the newspaper Le Parisien.

A leading anti-terrorism prosecutor, Francis Battut, had fingered the group on Thursday.

Officials said Friday they couldn't verify two telephoned claims of responsibility.

A man telephoned the France-Inter radio network and claimed responsibility for the attack in the name of the previously unknown Algerian Islamic Jihad. The call was made Wednesday morning and broadcast on Friday.

Officials said they were investigating whether there was any connection to the Armed Islamic Group, a rebel organization fighting to topple Algeria's military-backed government and install a strict Islamic state in the former French colony.

"For every Islamist who falls, there will be a Frenchman killed on French soil," said the caller, who spoke with a North African accent and claimed to be based in Germany. The call was traced to Frankfurt, Germany, France-Inter said.

Numerous Algerian exiles who fled after the government began its crackdown on Islamic fundamentalists in 1992 found asylum in Germany, but generally condemn violence and support democracy.

Another caller phoned the radio network RTL Thursday evening and said the bombing was the work of the "GIA Central Command."

Leaders of the Islamic Salvation Front, whose imminent election victory was canceled by the Algerian government in January 1992, condemned "the horrible bomb attack."

The front, which has condemned GIA terror attacks in the past, said Algerians "have no interest in externalizing the war" in Algeria, according to a statement by the front's Parliamentary Delegation based in Washington.

Investigators said the subway bomb was similar to those used by the GIA in Algeria. It appeared to have been made from a gas canister containing an explosive and buckshot, prosecutors said.

French television on Friday aired a videotape made by the GIA and seized from suspected sympathizers in Paris in February. The tape gave instructions on how to make a bomb from such a canister, and showed young men pouring a liquid into the canister, about the size of a large watermelon.

Two eyewitness accounts also pushed investigators to consider an Algerian angle.

A woman who got off the train at Chatelet, one stop before the Saint-Michel station, told police she saw a young man with North African features leave the train hurriedly, making a defiant gesture.

On Thursday, a reserve policeman said he saw two North Africans carrying a large parcel. The youths got off the train at Chatelet, and the policeman said he heard one of them say, "There's going to be a party in Saint-Michel tonight."

But the eyewitness accounts were so vague that police decided not to release two composite sketches of possible suspects.

The GIA was linked to the hijacking of an Air France jetliner in December in which three hostages and four hijackers died. It also has killed foreigners and other civilians in Algeria. More than 30,000 people have died in Algeria's 3-year-old civil war.

Police and railway authorities stepped up security at major train stations Friday in anticipation of a swell of vacationers this weekend. August is the traditional month for summer vacations in France.

As part of their crackdown, police had checked the identities of more than 25,000 people nationwide since the bombing, authorities said Friday evening. In Paris alone, 3,500 were checked Thursday to Friday morning in Paris.

Bomb scares also continued Friday. The Paris Stock Exchange was evacuated and trading was briefly suspended in the afternoon after a telephoned threat, but no bomb was found.

Police investigate man's death

Staff Report

Police are continuing to investigate a death that may have been caused by a fall from a roof, officials said.

Midlander Roy Maxey, 55, was found dead about 4:50 p.m. Friday behind a house in the 4000 block of Westminster Drive, where he and others were doing roofing work, police said. The workers were associated with Ace Roofing of Andrews, officials said.

Maxey was pronounced dead at 6:05 by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe, who also ordered an autopsy.

An initial investigation revealed Maxey apparently fell from the roof at the back of the house although a ladder was absent from that area, officials said. Evidence suggested Maxey, who sustained head injuries, slipped from the roof, official said.

Maxey had an existing heart condition, family members told police.

16 lawmakers got DOT money; watchdog groups urge changes

AUSTIN (AP) — Government watchdog groups say fees paid to 16 current and former Houston-area state lawmakers who handled highway condemnation cases for the Texas Department of Transportation show that reforms are needed.

The Austin American-Statesman and Houston Chronicle reported Friday that the 16 senators and representatives received a total of more than $50,000 in fees as court-appointed special commissioners since September 1988.

While a past legal ruling by the state attorney general said the fees are legal, government watchdogs said the court appointments raise new ethics questions because they could lead to political favoritism.

Suzy Woodford, director of Common Cause of Texas, said having lawmakers collecting state money "doesn't pass the smell test" even if a past attorney general's opinion said the practice was legal.

"There needs to be an outside investigation" of legislators receiving fees from court appointments, she said.

"Not only is this state money that's involved, but it is the essence of where deals can be cut," said Tom Smith of the group Public Citizen.

"If you reward someone so well that they can take what's left of their property and build a shopping center there, they'll be so grateful they'll help you for years. ... The decisions you make here can lead to a lifetime of contributions," he said.

Smith said the issue shows the need for change.

"It's time to clean up the Capitol, and it's time to have a citizen's commission do it," he said.

The Texas Constitution prohibits legislators from holding "any other (state) office or position of profit" and from having an interest in any state contract authorized by a law — or any appropriation — they voted upon.

But in 1988, then-Attorney General Jim Mattox issued a legal opinion saying the constitution didn't prohibit lawmakers from being appointed as commissioners in condemnation cases.

Mattox said special commissioners were contracted for "short-term service, service that lacks the elements of permanency and continuity which are essential to holding an 'office' or 'position of profit'."

Appointed by a county court-at-law judge, the commissioners do not have to be lawyers. The only qualification, highway officials said, is that they be property owners who are "disinterested" in the pending condemnation case. Three people are appointed in each case.

Officials deny accusations in Waco hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rebuffing Republican contentions, top federal officials said Friday that President Clinton did not pressure them to use tear gas to end the 51-day siege at Waco.

GOP lawmakers failed in repeated efforts to elicit answers to the contrary. At one point, former Associate Attorney General Webster Hubbell suggested Republicans in charge of the hearings were allowing themselves to be manipulated by sect leader David Koresh, who was killed in the fatal showdown.

Koresh and 80 of his followers died on April 19, 1993, as fire swept the building after the FBI filled the complex with tear gas.

Also on Friday, the eighth day of congressional hearings, one of the few survivors of the siege offered an emotional depiction of the final hours inside the Branch Davidian compound.

Clive Doyle disputed much of the version put forth by the FBI and other agencies. He said, for example, that agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms fired the first shots while trying to serve warrants at the compound on Feb. 28.

He also testified that at least one of the six Davidians who died that day was killed by bullets fired from a helicopter. Four ATF agents also died in the gunfight.

ATF and other federal officials have said the Davidians fired first and that no shots came from helicopters.

Doyle also rejected the government's contention that the Davidians died in a mass suicide. He said residents were afraid to leave the compound because of a concern that the FBI might open fire on them."

In his statement, Doyle said he did not know how the fire started. However, a summary of his statements to Texas Rangers in the days after the fire quotes him as saying the fire was started inside with Coleman fuel.

Two arson experts and one FBI official told the committee the Davidians started the fire. But a witness offered by Republicans as a fire expert said he had "serious doubt as to the accuracy and thoroughness of the government's version" of the fire investigation.

Some Republicans privately concede they hoped to use the Waco hearings to embarrass the administration. Their last chance will come Tuesday, when Attorney General Janet Reno will be asked to defend her decision to allow the FBI to use the gas.

On Friday, one Republican lawmaker spoke harshly of his colleagues. The hearings, said, Rep. Jim Lightfoot, R-Iowa, have been a "media circus for a few people to drive a political agenda and for some new members of Congress to gain a degree of notoriety at the expense of a lot of others."

Lightfoot said some of the Republicans on the committee have "very closed minds and they're on an ego trip."

In testimony Friday, former FBI Director William Sessions and former Associate Attorney General Webster Hubbell were among the witnesses who defended the decision to use tear gas.

Sessions, who knew at the time that Clinton was working to replace him, said the plan was carefully thought out by the FBI before Reno was asked to approve it. He also said Reno considered the request at length — and rejected it once — before finally giving the authority to proceed.

"The discussions with the attorney general were very complete and she was very, very interested in every single phase and step of it, and questioned how the decisions were made," Sessions told the two subcommittees conducting the hearings. "She was particularly concerned about children."

He said he had no contact with the White House during the 51-day siege.

Hubbell, one of Clinton's closest friends, said he didn't discuss Waco with the president until after the fire. He added, however, that he did inform the White House counsel's office of the decision to use gas and assumed that the lawyers notified Clinton. He also said Reno notified the president of her decision.

Bernard Nussbaum, then-White House counsel, declined to testify, citing attorney-client privilege.

Senate imposes limit on gifts from lobbyists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators imposed strict limits Friday on the gifts they may receive from lobbyists and others, including a ban on the much-criticized practice of charity golf, tennis and ski outings paid for by special interests.

"We have ended recreational travel," said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., a chief sponsor of the gift limits. "And the worst abuses of meals and tickets (to sports and entertainment events) are over .... It is significant gift reform."

Final passage of the new Senate rules came on a 98-0 vote, belying the emotion and discomfort of weeklong behind-the-scenes negotiations.

"I think this is one issue we want to get behind us, and I think we've done that," said Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., just before the final vote. "It's always more difficult when it affects us."

The final measure — which takes effect Jan. 1 — puts a $100 annual ceiling on gifts from any one source and makes all gifts over $10 count toward that limit. That is far stricter than current rules, which allow lawmakers to accept unlimited numbers of gifts, so long as they are worth under $100 each.

The change also prohibits senators from accepting free transportation and lodging for ski, tennis and golf events that are used to raise money for charity but at the same time provide access to lawmakers for the wealthy interests that can afford tickets to the events.

Because what the Senate adopted was a change in its own rules, it does not affect the House of Representatives, where GOP leaders have expressed little interest in the issue. Nor does it require House concurrence.

But Levin predicted the Senate's overwhelming vote would put pressure on the House. "I predict they will follow suit very soon," he said.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who helped write the bill, said it tells Americans "that we will live like they do," without special perks. "It's not a question of corruption, it's a question of lifestyle."

"We didn't accomplish everything we wanted, but it is significant gift reform, added Levin. "While it may not be a home run, the Senate hit a triple here today."

The Senate settled on the final shape of its new rule after first accepting a weakening amendment by Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., and then partially reversing it.

The Lott amendment, adopted 54-46, doubled the initial aggregate gift ceiling to $100 and said any gift under $50 could not be counted toward it. "I can't believe anybody can be bought for a meal or a bunch of meals," Lott said in arguing for the change.

But later, senators reversed course and toughened the bill by adopting on a voice vote an amendment offered by Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., that would make all gifts over $10 count toward the $100 limit.

Without the change, supporters of gift reform might have been forced to vote against their own bill. But Lott accepted Wellstone's change to avoid a potentially embarrassing floor fight, Levin said.

Lawmakers of both parties said the final result should help reassure Americans that special interests have one fewer unfair advantage in Washington.

"Too often there is the perception that legislation is being unduly influenced by special interests," said another supporter, Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine. "This is a major step forward."

Senators rejected another proposed weakening amendment, offered by Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, that would have kept alive the practice of accepting free travel and lodging for charity fund-raisers like tennis, golf and ski outings. That vote was 60-39.

The Senate rules changes emerged after three days of negotiations between supporters of an outright ban on lobbyists' gifts and Senate GOP leaders who had introduced a more lenient measure.

The original compromise would have prohibited senators and their staff from accepting any single gift — including meals and concert and sports tickets — worth more than $20. In any calendar year, gifts from a single source would have been limited to $50.

McCain, a key figure in the negotiations, said the changes mean "the alteration of the lifestyle of the members of the Senate and a recognition by everyone in this body that we are expected to live as any other American."

"It's been two years of constant struggle over this. People are very reluctant to give it up," added Wellstone, in a reference to a similar ban that passed both the House and Senate last year, but ultimately died in a Republican filibuster.

Communications commission to eliminate prime time rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal rule that helped make week-night stars of letter-turning Vanna White and answer-posing Alex Trebek is heading into its last season.

The 25-year-old rule — which requires network-affiliated stations in the top 50 markets to reserve an hour of prime time for shows not produced by ABC, CBS and NBC — opened up a home for such syndicated shows as "Wheel of Fortune" ("I'd like to buy a vowel, Vanna"), "Jeopardy" ("In the form of a question, please") and "Entertainment Tonight" ("Back to you, Mary").

The Federal Communications Commission voted 5-0 Friday to eliminate the rule after one year.

TV viewers won't immediately see a big difference in programming for prime time, which lasts from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. Eastern and Pacific time and 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. Central and Mountain time, network officials said.

But the rule's elimination likely will enrich the Big Three networks because they will be permitted to sell programs they produce to some of the nation's largest stations.

Still, no one expects shows like "Wheel of Fortune" — which generally appear in the first hour of prime time — to disappear. They are popular with viewers, cheaper than old network reruns and have long-term contracts, entertainment executives said.

Meanwhile, in a separate decision, the FCC agreed to let the Fox television network remain intact — even though the company's ownership exceeds federal foreign ownership limits — because it serves the public interest.

The FCC said the network, which has brought the country "Married...With Children" and "The Simpsons," has expanded competition, viewing choices and jobs.

New networks like Fox, Paramount and Warner Bros. or their affiliates, are not subject to the prime-time access rule that FCC agreed to repeal.

Syndicators like King World and Viacom and the nation's 450 independent TV stations — those not affiliated with one of the Big Three networks — have fought to retain the rule.

The Big Three networks, their affiliates and some program producers and syndicators like Disney have been pushing for repeal of the rule.

The rule was designed to limit the Big Three networks' control over affiliates' programming decisions and to increase the diversity of programs available to the public.

But the television marketplace is significantly more competitive than when the rule was adopted, the FCC said, noting that program producers and suppliers now have other ways to get programs to the public — cable, VCRs and direct-to-the-home satellites.

The rule's elimination could mean that reruns of network shows from past seasons — like old episodes of "Roseanne" — could show up on network affiliates in the top markets during the first hour of prime time — something that is not currently allowed, network officials said.

House blocks effort to inhibit EPA anti-pollution laws

The laws and regulations that would have been reined in control emissions by factories, refineries, kilns and automobiles; limit industrial runoff into lakes and streams; stem sewage overflows; keep arsenic and other chemicals out of drinking water; and check for pesticides in food.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharply divided House rejected a Republican effort Friday to blunt federal enforcement of anti-pollution laws, dealing a blow to the GOP campaign to loosen business regulations.

By 212-206, the House voted to remove 17 provisions from a spending bill that for the next year would have inhibited the Environmental Protection Agency's ability to keep the air, water and food free of pollutants.

President Clinton hailed lawmakers for rebuffing a GOP "stealth attack on public health and environmental protections in the guise of a budget bill." But in the latest flareup in his yearlong battle with Republicans over how to balance the budget, he reiterated his vow to veto the underlying legislation, which would still slash EPA coffers by one-third.

"We need to finish the job of bringing our fiscal house in order. But I will not jeopardize the health of American families in the process," he said in a written statement.

The laws and regulations that would have been reined in control emissions by factories, refineries, kilns and automobiles; limit industrial runoff into lakes and streams; stem sewage overflows; keep arsenic and other chemicals out of drinking water; and check for pesticides in food.

Supporters of the effort to bridle the EPA said they might force another vote next week, when the House resumes debating the measure from which the language was removed.

But for now, a coalition of Democrats and moderate Republicans who said special interests should not prevail over public safety bested GOP leaders, who have spent much of the year trying to peel away layer after layer of government regulations that they say hinder business.

"The American people might have been voting to get the government off their backs" when Republicans captured Congress last November, said Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas. "But they weren't voting to put arsenic in their drinking water or benzene in the air that they breathe."

"We've definitely handed a victory to those who want to regulate more and put more government into people's lives," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, who supported braking environmental enforcement.

Fifty-one Republicans joined 160 Democrats and one independent in voting to kill the provisions impeding the EPA; 175 Republicans and 31 Democrats voted to keep them alive. The amendment erasing the EPA restrictions was sponsored by Reps. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, and Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y.

The rollback was excised from a $79.4 billion bill financing environmental, housing, space and veterans programs for next year. The bill remains anything but generous to the nation's anti-pollution efforts; its EPA reductions include deep cuts in Superfund toxic-waste cleanups, pollution prevention and enforcement, and clean-water projects.

The bill also cuts housing, space and veterans efforts, including elimination of Clinton's prized national service program, prompting a veto threat.

During the debate, most Republicans painted the EPA as an agency that has overreached.

"The EPA, the gestapo of government, pure and simply has been one of the major claw-hooks that the government maintains on the backs of our constituents," said Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas, the No. 3 House leader.

But Democrats and their moderate GOP allies said vigorous environmental protection was one government activity that the public still supports.

"We're doing it and we're going to be held accountable, and it's not going to be pretty the next election on this issue," said Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., told his fellow Republicans.

Meanwhile, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved a $243 billion defense bill for 1996 and $12 billion measure financing the Interior Department and federal cultural programs.

The defense bill amounts to a $1.1 billion increase over this year's spending, not enough to keep up with inflation.

In a recommendation that sets the stage for a House-Senate battle, the panel provided no funds to build more B-2 bombers beyond the 20 planes already built or on order. The House defense appropriations bill, still awaiting a final vote, seeks $496 million for the Stealth bomber. If the bills are passed without change, the differing provisions would have to be worked out in a House-Senate conference committee.

The measure also would provide:

- $700 million for the third Seawolf attack submarine, less than half the amount requested by Clinton. The Senate panel said the amount is what the Navy says it will need to proceed with work on the vessel on schedule next year.
- $704 million for the first in a line of new attack submarines.
- $2.33 billion toward the F-22 fighter, a $200 million increase over the president's request.

The Interior measure would cut humanities and arts support by 40 percent and reduce funds for Indian programs by a third. Deep cuts also are made in Interior science and natural resource programs including a ban on listing new endangered species.

NASA delays shuttle flight because of O-ring seals

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA has delayed indefinitely its next space shuttle flight because of heat damage to critical O-ring seals in booster rockets used in the last two launches.

Endeavour was supposed to blast off Aug. 5 on a science mission.

Shuttle manager Brewster Shaw said Friday that NASA will not launch Endeavour until engineers are confident they understand the O-ring problem.

"Safety — safety of flight — is our primary concern in this program," Shaw said. "We don't want to accept any unnecessary risk."

Hot gas from burning rocket fuel singed primary O-rings in the booster nozzles of Atlantis and Discovery in late June and July. NASA officials insist neither of the shuttles nor their crews were in any added danger.

A leak in a different joint of the solid rocket boosters caused Challenger to explode in 1986, killing all seven astronauts. A nozzle failure also could be catastrophic.

Shaw said the delay of Endeavour does not mean the shuttle fleet is grounded. "Grounding the fleet means some large effect to our flight program," he said.

Shaw expects the problem will be resolved within a few weeks and that Endeavour will fly by the end of August.

Engineers suspect the problem is related to the procedure used to inject insulating putty into the gaps around the O-ring seals. Tiny pockets of air in this putty evidently are allowing hot gas — with a temperature of 5,000 to 6,000 degrees Fahrenheit — to penetrate through the putty to the O-rings.

Shaw said there is no indication of a design flaw in the nozzle joint.

Technicians will try to inspect the nozzle joints and perform any repairs at the launch pad, he said. Before doing this, however, extensive testing will be done on other nozzles over the next week to make sure these air pockets can be detected via ultrasound.

Prior to last month, hot gas had penetrated up to — but not beyond — the nozzle O-rings 11 times since the boosters were redesigned following the Challenger disaster. None of those seals was damaged, however, and engineers tried to devise ways to prevent such gas penetrations.

The recent damage to O-rings prompted NASA to stop and reevaluate the problem.

The rubber O-ring seal in the nozzle joint of Atlantis' left booster had four discolored spots the size of pencil points and a tiny bit of material missing, all caused during the June 27 launch to Russia's space station. The seal is one-fifth of an inch in diameter, or about the thickness of a pencil.

Discovery lifted off July 13, just six days after Atlantis landed. This time, the seal on the right booster nozzle was singed slightly, with three tiny marks. The damage was discovered earlier this week.

In neither case did hot gas escape beyond the primary seal, and the secondary seals were unscathed, officials said. Engineers are unsure when the leakage occurred during the two minutes that the boosters burn.

NASA will inspect every booster nozzle in its inventory to make sure there are no air holes in the putty filling these joints, Shaw said.

Four more shuttle flights are scheduled this year, including Endeavour's delayed science mission. Columbia is supposed to fly after Endeavour, in late September.

Economists forecast recovery after abrupt slowdown in spring

WASHINGTON (AP) — Slowing abruptly, the economy posted its weakest advance in nearly four years during the spring. Home building was down sharply and so was output at the nation's factories.

Still, the Clinton administration and private economists see little risk of recession. In fact, a modest recovery already is under way, they said, and the analysts suggested that means the Federal Reserve probably will postpone further interest-rate cuts for a while.

Gross domestic product, the government's broadest measure of economic activity, grew a mere 0.5 percent at an annual rate in the second quarter, the Commerce Department said Friday.

The slowdown — from a rate of 2.7 percent the previous three months — was due mainly to a plunge in home building and lower factory production, particularly for autos, as manufacturers trimmed excess inventories. Reduced exports to an economically strapped Mexico also hurt.

But consumer spending, boosted by clearance sales, was surprisingly strong and was seen as just one omen of recovery ahead.

"How much wind does the economy have left in its sails? Enough to reach port but not enough to break any speed records," said economist David Orr of First Union Corp. in Charlotte, N.C.

Analysts said the Federal Reserve may not cut short-term interest rates as it sorts out third-quarter trends.

"They understand there are limits to their ability to fine tune the economy and they may step aside for many months," said Eugene Sherman of M.A. Schapiro & Co. Inc., a New York City investment firm.

Wall Street was mostly lower, but was said to be reacting to factors other than the expected weak GDP growth.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 17.26 points, recovering somewhat from a steeper drop earlier in the session. Bond prices slipped, pushing up the yield on the Treasury's 30-year bond to 6.90 percent.

"We had a slow second quarter. But the general thrust of the economy looks strong again," President Clinton said. He also lamented the fact that while 7 million jobs have been created since he took office "most Americans haven't gotten a raise."

Economist David Wyss of DRI-McGraw Hill, a forecasting firm in Lexington, Mass., said, "It looks pretty good for Mr. Clinton. We're getting the slowdown now. There probably will be a pickup next year. There'll be no big wave of layoffs that people will be mad about."

The economy has slowed dramatically since 1994 when it grew more robustly that it had in a decade. GDP increased at a 2.7 percent annual rate in the first three months of 1995 after a booming 5.1 percent pace in the fourth quarter of 1994.

The Federal Reserve, after a string of seven interest rate increases since early last year, reversed course this month and cut a key rate for the first time in nearly three years. That sent banks' benchmark prime lending rate down accordingly.

The Commerce Department said consumer spending, which accounts for about two-thirds of GDP, increased at a $22.6 billion rate in the second quarter compared with $14.3 billion the previous three months.

Final sales, including consumer spending, net exports and government purchases, climbed at a 2.1 percent rate after increasing 2.6 percent in the first quarter.

Inventories subtracted more from GDP than they had in 4 1/2 years as auto manufacturers slowed assembly lines to cut their overhang. Overall, GDP rose at a $7.2 billion rate in the April-June quarter compared with $36.3 billion in the first three months of the year. Growth was the weakest since the economy expanded 0.1 percent in the fourth quarter of 1991.

The figures are preliminary estimates and could be revised in upcoming months.

With wages under tight control, one measure of inflation tied to GDP rose at a 2.9 percent rate in the first three months after a 3 percent rate of increase in the first quarter.

"It's almost too good to be true," said Sung Won Sohn of the Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis. "We have subpar growth for 1995 on the way to better growth in 1996, combined with an exceedingly good inflation rate."

■ On-line update

From their perch behind one-way glass, the market researchers at Apple Computer Inc. have seen some doozies in their day. A computer mouse may seem simple to many people, but first-time users have been known to place the desktop device on the floor and work it like a foot pedal, or wave it in the air like a remote control.

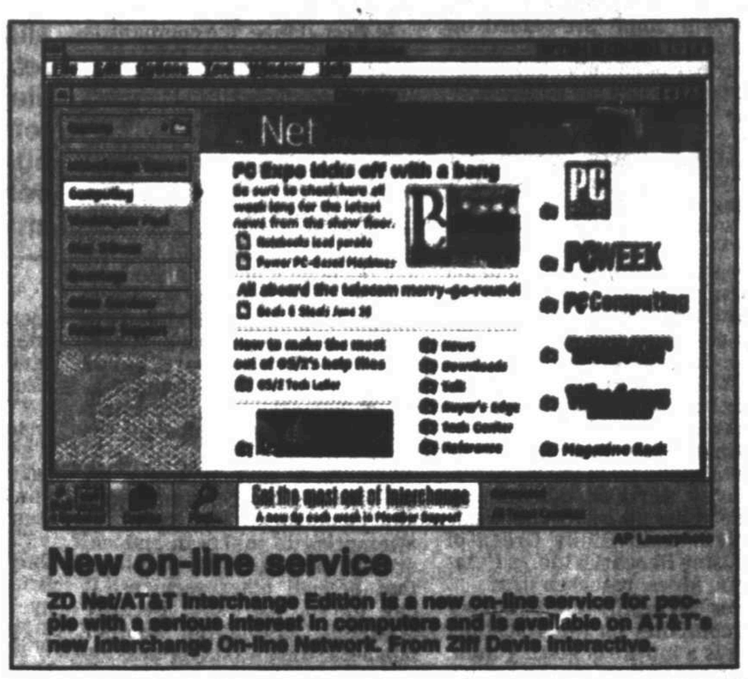

The lesson: When designing computers, you can't make them too simple. And when a portion of the computer industry gathered in Boston last week for a three-day conference on "interactive" and on-line services, that observation weighed heavily on many minds.

On Aug. 24, Microsoft Corp. is scheduled to unveil its new on-line service. The Microsoft Network will not likely revolutionize the way consumers see computer services, but it is a major event in the young on-line industry, "clearly an earth-shaking event," said John Aronsohn of the Yankee Group, a Boston research firm.

Microsoft is expected to lower two hurdles consumers must now leap to join on-line services. That could instantly make it the dominant on-line player and push one of the familiar "Big Three" services — most likely Prodigy, analysts say — out of the top ranks.

The first hurdle is ease of use. Like Apple's experience with the computer mouse, on-line

Status Symbol

Achieving cyber-fame is as easy as building your own web page

By Dwight Silverman
N.Y. Times News Service

■ World Wide Web

Newcomers to the Internet spend much of their time raising the World Wide Web, gawking at vast amounts of information displayed in graphical splendor.

Eventually, newbies wonder how to create a Web page of their own. Having a personal billboard in cyberspace is one of the great status symbols of the '90s. Paraphrasing Andy Warhol, everyone wants their 15 megabytes of fame on the Internet.

A Web page is merely a simple text file that tells a Web browser — such as Netscape Navigator or NCSA Mosaic — how to display the information in a file. It includes instructions telling browsers to pick up graphics and position them in a certain way on the screen. The file includes the addresses of other pages on the World Wide Web; addresses are coded to appear as highlighted words or images on the screen.

A computer code called Hyper Text Markup Language, or HTML, is used to give instructions to the browsing software. Don't let the term "computer code" intimidate you: It's easy to learn enough of the basics to create a decent-looking Web page.

In fact, the concept behind HTML is similar to the old word-processing programs of the 1980s, such as WordStar, which required you to insert commands into the text to achieve the desired results.

If you'd rather not dirty your hands with computer code — an understandable aversion — try using any of several shareware or freeware HTML editors. These programs simplify the process of creating Web pages by inserting the codes for you when you click on buttons or select from a menu item. My favorite for Microsoft Windows is HTML Writer, available at ftp: //lal.cs.byu.edu/pub/www/tools/hw9b4all.zip. Macintosh users can try BBEdit with HTML Extensions, available from http: //www.uji.es/bbedit-html-extensions.html.

There are several ways to include graphics or photos on your page. You can create them with a drawing package — anything from the very basic software that comes with Windows to sophisticated programs such as Freehand or Quark Express. Or, you can create a pointer, or link, on your page to a graphic on someone else's page, and it will pop up in place.

There are also lots of places on the World Wide Web where you can download graphics for free. In fact, it's possible to snag almost any graphic you see on the Web. For example, if you are using the Windows version of Netscape, right-click on a graphic you want to snag, and a menu pops up. Choose "Save this image as ..." and you can store the graphic on your hard drive. On a Mac, the action is click-and-hold.

Be aware that some people put a lot of work into their visuals, particularly large, complex graphics. Use common sense — small items, such as buttons or fancy lines, are considered fair game for downloading. But anything that looks proprietary probably is.

For photos, you can either buy a digital camera ($700-$1,000) or a quality scanner ($500-$1,000 plus) or take your pictures to a copy shop that offers image-scanning services. You'll want your photos given back to you on floppy disk in either GIF or JPEG format — preferably the former, which can be read by all Web browsers.

Finally, you'll need an Internet service provider who will provide space on a Web server for your creation. These days, nearly all providers let you post a home page if you have an account with them. If your current provider does not offer home pages, consider making a change — or harassing the management until he or she can't say "no" anymore.

One of the national on-line services, Prodigy, now lets subscribers with Windows-based machines create their own home pages. It's a snap to do.Simply fill in an onscreen form, and the page is created. However, for the moment it's text-only. Graphics capabilities are promised later this year. You can see Prodigy's users' home pages at http: //pages.prodigy.com/.

Finally, check out my own humble experiment in Internet publishing at http: //starbase.neosoft.com/ (tilde) dwights/. Drop me a note when you stop by!

If all goes well, look for Windows 95 in August

By Bill Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Software

If you're like most IBM-compatible owners, an upcoming freeze will interest you.

In the software business, a freeze has nothing to do with the weather. It's when a software developer decides that a program has gone through enough testing and revisions. It locks in the features and the computer code that will be used in the version of a program that is released to the public.

Well, the freeze for Windows 95 is expected within days. That means if no major bugs come up in the test versions, the program will be ready to ship in time for the August 24 release date promised by Microsoft.

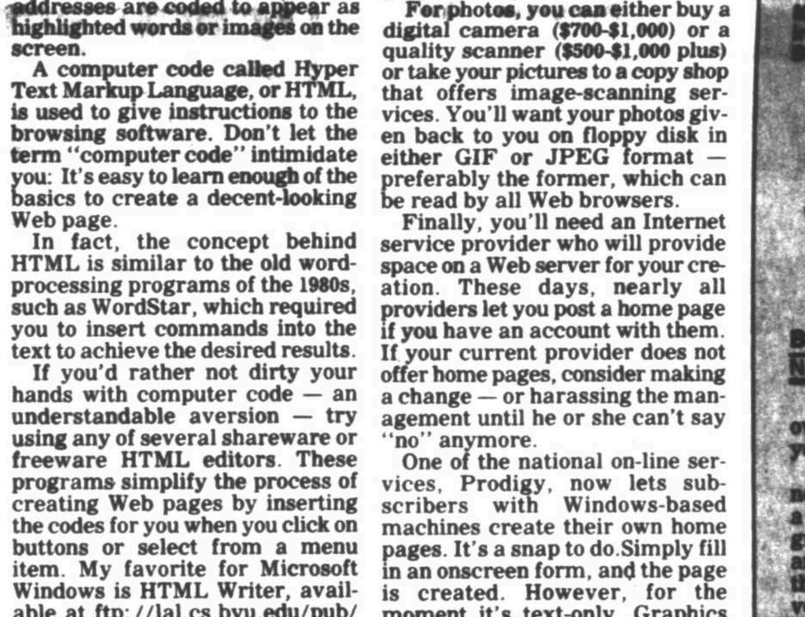

InfoWorld, an industry trade magazine, said in its July 10 issue that — when the freeze happens — "the PC industry will heave a collective sigh of relief."

That's because developers of other Windows programs are eager to introduce their own products written especially for Windows 95. But there's no real market for those programs without Windows 95.

There are, however, about 2 million copies of Windows 95 floating around right now. That's because Microsoft has been very cautious as far as testing the new Windows, using the world's largest number of testers to make sure they uncover major bugs before the program hits the market.

The lessons learned from the problems Intel had — with a relatively minor flaw in the Pentium chip — are part of the reason Microsoft is being so cautious. Early versions of the Pentium sometimes had trouble with some mathematical calcula-

On computer language vs. everyday English

By L.R. Shannon
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Just For Fun

There are those among us who speak a different language, which only resembles English. Of course, language changes, and many speakers and writers who communicate with large audiences are reluctant to change their language as rapidly as their language itself changes. Tuesday's fashionable word or phrase may become Thursday's 23 Skiddoo.

No one disputes that the word "computer" now refers to a device, not a person who computes, calculates, or reckons, as it once did. These days, a computist (another old word) might well hack, a word that has evolved in a decade or two.

The verb "to hack" once meant to cut or chop irregularly, drive a taxi (from hackney, a coach or carriage for hire), or write a newspaper column, among other things, and in context may still refer to one of those pursuits. Its more recent noun derivative, "hacker," has come to be applied to sociopaths or criminals who write electronic viruses to maim other people's computers or who break into private databases to steal money or secrets or alter grades.

In his 1984 book "Hackers," Steven Levy defined "hackers" as "those computer programmers and designers who regard computing as the most important thing in the world." He added a later, uncomplimentary meaning: For some, "hackers" were "either nerdy social outcasts or 'unprofessional' programmers who wrote dirty, 'nonstandard' computer code." (A "good hack" is an elegant solution to a computing problem; a "kludge," usually pronounced klooj, is inelegant at best.)

A nerd is "a person dedicated to a nonsocial pursuit," according to The Random House Webster's College Dictionary. Or, as Robin Williams puts it in "Jargon: An Informal Dictionary of Computer Terms": "Guy Kawasaki, one of my favorite computer columnists, defines a nerd as anyone who

MICROSOFT: Charge could be in position to charge just $4.95 a month

services face a hurdle in getting people to pop the software disk into their computers that allows them to subscribe for the first time. Microsoft Network software will come pre-loaded on most new computers, meaning a subscriber need only click a single button to join the network.

The second hurdle is cost. Where services like America Online charge $9.95 a month — or nearly $120 a year — Microsoft pricing for basic service could be as low as $4.95 a month, or under $60 a year.

To people who have operated computers or traveled the on-line highways for months now, these may not seem like huge advantages. But together with the powerful Microsoft brand name, they have the potential to reorder the on-line industry.

"What this is about now is the race to move from the technology-savvy, early-adopter market to the mass market, consumer market," said Emily Green of Forrester Research Inc., a Cambridge, Mass. research firm.

"For the family that's hooking up a computer for the first time, there is a hurdle of getting them to load in the disk" for an on-line service, Green said. "Microsoft has an advantage in getting all these brand-new computer buyers. That is the market everyone wants."

Already, an estimated 8.5 million people subscribe to on-line services, including America Online Inc., CompuServe Inc. and Prodigy Services Co. For a monthly fee, the services allow people with a computer and modem to reach a wealth of information, including electronic versions of newspapers, magazines, reference books, as well as "chat rooms," bulletin boards on special interests and software, which can be downloaded for free or a charge.

The on-line audience, which includes 5.3 percent of US households, is big enough to make cyberspace a phenomenon — but not large enough to be a national mass market.

To grow, the on-line industry has to do a better job of reaching women and older people. Only 35 percent of on-line service users are female.

It also has to do a far better job of retaining subscribers, many of whom now leave soon after they walk in the door. The "churn rate" for on-line services, or rate at which subscribers quit, is estimated to be 30 percent for some services, such as Prodigy, said Green. Aronsohn puts the average churn for major services at 50 percent a year.

Can Microsoft overcome these obstacles?

At first glance, the company is working with even less than some of the established on-line services. Aside from NBC, Microsoft Network has few of the "marquee-name" partners like Time magazine, National Geographic or Consumer Reports, which have helped draw subscribers to other on-line services.

In addition, Microsoft has not yet released a much-touted software tool that will help Microsoft partners develop good-looking content for the network. A test version of that software, called Blackbird, will be released next week, meaning that consumers will not see any content using the software until 1996.

Microsoft says it will solve these problems over time. Some analysts say Microsoft is attempting to make an end-run around the churn-rate problems that bedevil other services. It can do so, they say, because Microsoft dominates another business: the market for desktop computer software.

Unless a US Department of Justice antitrust investigation forces a change, Microsoft will bundle the Microsoft Network with Windows 95, the next generation of its Windows operating system, which controls the basic operations of the majority of the world's desktop computers. Like the on-line service, Windows 95 is set to be released on August 24.

Bundling the on-line service with the basic computer software will allow Microsoft Network users to sign onto the system with the click of a button. Moreover, a person who learns how to operate Windows 95 will find the same look and feel, and the same commands, on the Microsoft Network.

Equally important, Microsoft can build one-click connections to the service into other Microsoft software.

Example: Microsoft's word processing program will likely contain a button that allows a user to immediately send a document as an electronic mail message over the Microsoft Network, said Gene DeRose of Jupiter Communications Co., a New York research firm. Microsoft's spreadsheet, database management or word processing software could include buttons that connect users instantly to Microsoft's reference books or customer support services — again, over the Microsoft Network.

Already, an estimated 8.5 million people subscribe to on-line services, including America Online Inc., CompuServe Inc. and Prodigy Services Co. For a monthly fee, the services allow people with a computer and modem to reach a wealth of information, including electronic versions of newspapers, magazines, reference books, as well as "chat rooms," bulletin boards on special interests and softwear, which can be downloaded for free or a charge.

"The company hasn't announced these things, but to me it's very obvious that on-line computing is becoming integrated and transparent with plain old computing," DeRose said.

"That's what we've been telling the Department of Justice," said Brian Ek, a spokesman for Prodigy. If only 5 percent of the estimated 30 million people buying Windows 95 this year sign up for Microsoft Network, Microsoft will have 1.5 million users, half the number of market-leader America Online.

"This has nothing to do with the quality of their service," Ek said. "It has everything to do with bundling."

The theory that Microsoft will try to meld traditional computing with the on-line world is supported by the pricing structure it has designed for its on-line service.

Most services charge a flat fee, for example $9.95 per month for the first 5 hours on America Online service and a surcharge for additional hours. Microsoft says it will charge a much lower basic subsciption rate and have no surcharges for additional time.

For the basic rate, a subscriber will have access to electronic mail, news and reference areas, special-interest bulletin boards and a set of Internet discussion groups called newsgroups. But unlike on most on-line services, consumers will have to pay additional subscription fees for all of the other material on the Microsoft Network, designed by Microsoft's partners.

In essence, Microsoft can build its basic service on features important to its own operations, leaving its partners to develop the compelling material that will attract them into the features offered a la carte, at additional cost.

Microsoft's partners range from the Dunn & Bradstreet business information service to a sports-information service called Starwave. In addition to designing their own areas, partners are responsible for advertising and pricing their own portions of the service.

Microsoft is also challenging the industry by adopting a different business model than most on-line services, which pay their publishing partners up to 30 percent of the connect fees for the time customers spend in their area of the service. In that model, an electronic magazine that can keep customers on-line and racking up per-hour charges will be paid more than a newspaper that attracts readers only briefly.

Microsoft's partners will act more like traditional magazines, charging a flat subscription rate that ignores the amount of time consumers spend on-line. According to George Meng, lead product manager for the network, Microsoft will take 30 percent of the subscription revenues. It will also take 20 percent of any advertising revenue that publishers can generate for their areas of the network and 5 percent of any revenues from goods shipped to consumers.

Dataquest Inc., the California market research firm, expects Microsoft Network to have 1.3 million subscribers by the end of this year and 3.5 million by the end of 1996. At that rate, it will be the fastest-growing on-line service of the lot but will trail America Online, which has 3 million subscribers today.

The service is not revolutionary, he said. While Microsoft may have an advantage in getting customers in the door, he said, it faces the same challenge of other services in convincing them to come back.

WINDOWS: Microsoft learns from Intel

(From 1B)

tions. Despite the fact that the bug only occasionally caused problems, complaints from users — both in person and in Internet discussion groups — had Intel running scared.

CHEAPER LAPTOPS

Laptop computers seemed immune to the dramatic price-slashing of the desktop computer world for a time, but lately even that relatively trendy market has become cutthroat.

A new laptop introduced by AT&T is a good example of the price war. It's the AT&T Globalyst 130 notebook. And it has the sort of power that most of us associate with desktop computers: a 486DX4 processor at 75 megahertz, a 256- color screen, 4 megabytes of RAM and a 340-megabyte hard disk.

Admittedly, it's not a Pentium-powered machine, but that's a lot of power packed into a 5- pound package. The price for this machine is $2,000. Actually, AT&T stole a trick from consumer merchandisers and priced the machine at $1,999 . . . just so it could be advertised at "less than $2,000."

The good news is that consumers seldom pay list prices. So you may be able to find the laptop for even less. It'll be sold at mass marketers and at AT&T phone centers.

The computer comes with starter kits for four major online services: America Online, CompuServe, Prodigy and GEnie.

SMUT PATROL

Some of the adult material on the Internet has people in a stir. There are plenty of newsgroups devoted to both adult stories and photographs.

Couple that with the fact lots of people use the Internet as part of their jobs, and the obvious happens. Some workers spend a good part of their days hanging out in the adult areas.

At least that seems to be the fear on the part of some employers. To prevent that, a company called Webster Network Strategies has come up with a program for heavy-duty business systems called WebTrack.

Employers can set the software up to allow Internet and World Wide Web access, but block off adult areas.

Besides being a timesaver at work, Webster contends that it can help avoid liability issues related to having pornography in the workplace.

The program is made for work systems and carries a hefty price tag: $7,500. But the market for products such as this seems to be strong, and there's already competition. A program called Netscape Proxy Server from Netscape Communications offers similar features for $2,495.

FREE E-MAIL

The ability to send e-mail is one of the most useful features of the Internet for a lot of people.

But to get an e-mail account, you need to subscribe to a commercial service such as CompuServe, America Online or Prodigy, or to an Internet provider.

Beginning soon, there will be a free way to send Internet e-mail. You'll get no other features, just the ability to send and receive mail from Juno Online Services in New York. The service will have advertisers, and that will pay the freight. So each time you log on to the system, you'll see advertising.

Other services include advertising, but none use it to make the service available free.

Juno hasn't gotten under way yet. And there's no definite start date — just later this year. But you can get information right now by calling (800) 654-5866 or by sending e-mail to infojuno.com. And since the company is already testing the service, you can try volunteering as a tester and perhaps get enrolled right now.

LINGO: Are you ready to take an open-book test yet?

(From 1B)

considers Compuserve a dating service. And I say, 'That's right. Anyone who's really cool knows that American Online is the dating service.'" Beyond nerd is geek, not a sideshow performer who eats or pretends to eat live animals, but "the larval stage of a hacker, or simply a fundamentally clueless individual," as "Jargon" puts it.

Still, among those who are "particularly skilled and knowledgeable about computers" (Plain English Computer Dictionary), hacker is not a derogatory term. Hackers prefer the definition in "The Computer Contradictionary" by Stan Kelly-Bootle: "One who hacks real good."

Hackers, or programmers, deal with I/O, or Input/Output. In his "MS-DOS 6.2 Upgrade for Dummies," one of the phenomenally successful "Dummies" books, Dan Gookin explained I/O thus: "Computers gobble up input and then spit out output."

One inputs with various devices, keyboards, mice and modems among them, and outputs with others, monitors, printers and modems among them. Note that some devices operate at only one end of the spectrum (the computer cannot move the mouse or press the keys) and others at both ends (modems both send and receive data).

Between input and output comes processing, and the three together describe the underlying architecture of all digital computers. You input data, the computer processes it and outputs not data, one hopes, but information. "Data" is to information as information is to knowledge. Computers do not know anything; we do.

Processing, "manipulating data within a computer system," in the words of the Microsoft Press Computer Dictionary, is "the task for which computers are designed." In most of the computers in use today, the data is manipulated by a microprocessor, a "central processing unit (CPU) on a single chip," as Microsoft puts it. When Windows enthusiasts talk about their Pentiums, or Macintosh fanatics their PowerPC 601's, they are discussing their microprocessors. And so they do, on and on.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

School tops goal

PLAINVIEW — Gifts totaling around $50,000 by two Lubbock businessmen put Wayland Baptist University's Spanning the centuries campaign over its $2.5 million goal.

With their gifts, Delbert McDougal and Gene Messer have fulfilled a promise to put the campaign "over the top."

"We are very grateful to both of these fine Christian businessmen for expressing their confidence in Wayland Baptist University by putting us over the top," said Dr. Wallace Davis, president of the university. "The entire university community would like to express our thanks for these generous gifts."

In addition to the gifts provided by McDougal and Messer, the Helen Jones Foundation also has made a $5,000 gift to the Spanning the centuries campaign, bringing the total pledged to the campaign to $2, 510,938.

With the campaign goal met, Wayland will move forward with the completion of the J.E. and L. E Mabee Learning Resources Center. Bids for construction will be opened in the near future and construction on the interior of the building is scheduled to begin in September. Construction should be completed next fall, with dedication ceremonies expected to take place in the fall of 1966.

Construction is already underway on the huge flame that will adorn the south side of the building. A lighting ceremony is expected later this year.

McDougal is president of McDougal Properties in Lubbock. He serves on the university's board of trustees and is a deacon at Oakwood Baptist Church, Lubbock.

Messer owns several automobile dealerships in Lubbock and Amarillo, and is a former member of Wayland's board of trustees and a deacon at First Baptist Church, Lubbock.

One of the most ambitious undertakings at Wayland in many years, the Spanning the Centuries campaign was designed to complete the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Learning Resources Center in the middle of the Plainview campus.

For more than a decade Wayland's trustees, as well as faculty, staff, students and administrators, have hoped for the completion of the library. The project began with a challenge grant in July of 1982 from the J.E. and L.E. Mabee foundation, Inc. The university met the challenge and construction began in June of 1983.

But a downturn in revenues from oil, gas and agriculture shortly thereafter prompted trustees in 1987 to halt construction until the time when the project could be completed without financially jeopardizing the institution.

Church holds VBS

ODESSA — Redeemer Lutheran Church, 824 E. 18th St., will hold Vacation Bible School Sunday through Friday.

Hours are 6:45 to 9 p.m. The theme for this year's school is "SonTown family celebration." Classes are for all ages — 2 through adult. Activities include Bible study, crafts, music and refreshments.

The church's senior pastor, the Rev. Dean Kelm, invites the public to attend. Kim Feibiger is the director.

Coffee scheduled

Church Women United will hold its summer coffee at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive, Friday.

The board meeting is at 9:30 a.m. The program begins at 10:30 a.m. A nursery will be available.

Victims Assistance, located in the District Attorney's Office, will provide the program entitled "Victims' Rights." The speaker will be Rochelle Buck.

Breakfast planned

First Presbyterian Church's Fall Sunday School Kick Off Breakfast is set for 9:30 to 10:45 a.m. Aug. 20 in Lynn Hall, 800 W. Texas Ave.

The pancake breakfast offers the opportunity for those attending the church's Sunday School to meet the new teachers and receive an advance idea of the fall curriculum.

Cost for the all-you-can-eat meal is by donation.

Programs set

"Baby Boomers and God: Issues and Attitudes of a Generation" is the topic of a new series of programs at First United Methodist's Community of Joy, which meets at 10:30 a.m. Sundays at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"Each program will explore the cultural pressures which have made Boomers what they are, why they are predisposed to certain types of responses and how their world view is shaped by the culture," said the Rev. Mark Alexander, associate pastor of First UMC and pastor for Community of Joy. "Topics such as loneliness, self-sufficiency, chronic disappointment and shattered dreams are highlighted. Also considered is the search Boomers are on for spirituality as evidenced by renewed interest in some type of relationship with God, angels and other things spiritual."

Dress is casual. The services include live music as well as short and lively dramas. For more information call Alexander, 682-3701.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

(From 4B)

"The Sound" will perform a free concert at Calvary Assembly of God Church, 908 S. Johnston St., at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

"Our music is not about categories or styles," said group leader Frank Seamans. "It's about the message, first to the lost that they can be saved, and then to the church that they can walk in the joy of the Lord."

The group began in 1985 in Houston. The Sound has appeared at the Christian Artists' Seminar in the Rockies at Estes Park, the Trinity Broadcasting Network and at major youth conferences across the country.

Also, a Kids' Crusade is planned for Calvary Assembly of God Church Sunday through Tuesday. Hours are 10:45 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

The school will be headed by pastors Rudy and Barbara Alderete and will include puppets, music, Bible stories, prizes and refreshments. Ages 3 through adults are invited to attend.

■ SonTown VBS set

St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church, 2900 Princeton, will be turned into SonTown, a bustling block party as part of its Vacation Bible School Sunday through Thursday. The event runs from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. each evening.

VBS will include activities for people ranging from newborns to 93. Youngsters from age 3 through high school can participate in "shop" activities for their age group. Shops include candy Store, Toy Store, Pet Store, Ice Cream Shop, Opry and the Theatre and Youth Center.

"SonTown is a family oriented Vacation Bible School," said Dan Rush, St. Nicholas' VBS director. "By holding it in the evenings, this will allow working parents to come with their children and enjoy all the special events. We have something planned that will be fun for people of all ages."

Special skits will open each evening's party before the participants go to their SonTown shops. Tuesday will feature the "Man of Magic," Michael Melson, during a snack period.

Thursday will conclude with SonTown Street fair. An ice cream social and watermelon feed will round out the refreshments. Junior high and high school students will make a 12-foot banana split. And the contemporary group, "Call to Worship," the music team from Midland Bible Church, will perform during the evening on the church lawn.

Special events planned for junior high and high school students include a swimming party, bowling and miniature golf.

A lecture series on family issues is planned for adults. Speakers include Anne Morris with St. Ann's Catholic Church Christian Education; Jim May, PhD., a family counselor; Kathy and Jim Houston-Hencken, Christian education minister at First Presbyterian Church; Skip Hedgpeth, Christian counselor with Social Work Associates; and Jeff Hewett, St. Nicholas' adult education teacher.

Topics include "Family Spirituality/Respect," "Conflict Resolution," "Commitment," "Communication" and a round table discussion.

The events are open free to the public. To register or for more information call 694-8856.

■ Group to perform

The Continentals will perform at 7 p.m. Tuesday at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive.

Featuring more than 35 cast members, including vocalists, instrumentalists, dramatists and technicians, The Continentals will present "CELEBRATE! Before the Lord."

The contemporary musical program includes current top Christian songs, a special number for children and a section featuring a preview of the new musical, "DAVID — A Man After God's Own Heart."

All of the young people who are part of The Continentals are selected from among thousands who audition annually from around the world. The program is fine tuned during an intensive rehearsal camp in Southern California. Then each group leaves for an approximate 10-week tour of the United states and other countries.

In the past 27 years, more than 14,000 youth have been part of The Continentals, traveling millions of miles to every continent, except Antarctica, and more than 70 countries. In 1985, the organization led a successful campaign, in conjunction with World Vision International, to raise nearly $2 million to help fight world hunger.

Former Continentals include Christian artists Wayne Watson, Paul Smith, Karla Worley, Steve Taylor and Jim Custer.

Texas heat wave kills 4, could cause wildfires

DALLAS (AP) — Intense heat and soaring temperatures have cost at least four Texans their lives and are causing farmers to be alert to possible wildfires.

The deaths of Tyler residents Myrtle Shelton, 71, David Dixon, 39, and James Kirby, 85, are blamed on the heat wave, which has included a three week drought for much of central Texas.

Shelton and Kirby died in their homes and were found days after their deaths.

David Dixon, Tyler Junior College's director of security, died at Mother Frances Hospital Wednesday night after several hours of working in his attic.

Prison inmate Wallace Britton Jr. also fell victim to the heat while being transported near Weatherford when the bus in which he was traveling broke down in 105 degree heat.

Several of the inmates were reported as being ill after the break down and two, besides Britton, were taken to the hospital. The other 43 inmates were given water and evaluated at a nearby prison.

Britton was serving a 20-year sentence for theft and burglary out of Harris County. He was first imprisoned in 1981 and was paroled after serving 10 years. He returned to prison late in 1991 as a parole violator.

The heat, which has reached 111 in some areas of Texas, has caused Texans to use record amounts of electricity in an attempt to keep cool. TU electric set a new record for peak electricity demand Friday, the third consecutive day this week such a mark was hit.

Justice of the Peace James Cowart, who pronounced the three Tyler victims dead, said neighbors should take time out of their day to check up on each other during the hot spell.

"If you have friends or neighbors without central air conditioning, take a few minutes out of your day to check on them," he said. "Especially the elderly and low-income families."

The Texas Forest Service has reported that Central and Southwest Texas are in danger of wildfires, said Bobby Young head of Texas Forest Service's Fire Control Department.

"Late spring rains created a bountiful supply of thick grass which now acts as a gas can awaiting a spark," he said. "If this dry weather persists, we'll see many homeowners in both rural and urban areas of Texas facing real danger."

Texas Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer advises residents of the area to watch their property closely.

"Texas farmers and ranchers know full-well the dangers of dry grasslands and how one carelessly discarded cigarette or match can start a devastating fire," Bomer said.

"Homeowners living adjacent to grasslands and dense brush should take immediate precautions to prevent a loss to their property and lives."

Texas forecasts do not predict rain in central Texas for at least another week.

Space station survives attempts by Congress at termination

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives' opinion of NASA's manned, Earth-orbiting space station has undergone a sea change.

What a difference two years makes.

The multi-billion-dollar program came within one vote of being killed on the House floor two years ago. Last year, it bounced back with a healthy vote of confidence — a margin that was added to Thursday and Friday when the House twice thwarted attempts to pull the plug on the international space collaboration.

The near-death experience of 1993 sent NASA rushing back to the drawing board for yet another redesign to slash costs and allay the concerns of a skittish Congress. The space agency also attracted Russia as its newest partner in a space venture that includes the Europeans, Canadians and Japanese.

With the glow of the "Apollo 13" summer blockbuster and the recent successful Atlantis-Mir docking mission fresh in the minds of many, the House this week once again grappled with the space station's viability.

Critics argued that a nation with a $4.6 trillion federal deficit can ill afford to invest in the esoteric science and iffy payback the space station might provide. They also cast the termination votes as a means of shoring up other NASA programs and striking a blow for deficit reduction.

"Let us make some tough decisions around here to cut spending, whether it be the B-2 bomber, whether it be the space station ... let us move toward a balanced budget," Rep. Tim Roemer, D-Ind., said Friday.

By a 287-132 vote, the House rejected an amendment by Roemer and Rep. Dick Zimmer, R-N.J., that would have shifted to deficit reduction $1.6 billion of the station's $2.1 billion appropriation next year. The remaining $500 million would have gone for termination costs for the project, which employs thousands of people at the Johnson Space Center near Houston and other NASA centers.

A day earlier, on a 299-126 vote, the House defeated a measure that would have shifted most of the station's funding to social programs and other NASA science.

Boosters of the space agency countered with arguments that NASA would be doomed without the space station. And, they framed the debate as one over America's future and payoffs in the fields of science, medicine and technological spinoffs.

> 'We have now voted nine times whether or not to fund the space station in the four years I've been here. It's time to move on and let the people at NASA do their jobs. It's not fair to put them through this process ear after year.'
> — Rep. Bud Cramer, D-Ala.

"The bottom line here, cutting through all the rhetoric, is if you want the space program, you have to put man in space. You cannot do a space program on Earth," said House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, a Republican from the Houston suburb of Sugar Land.

Recalling other epic explorations, such as Columbus' discovery of America, station advocates accused opponents of lacking vision.

"Throughout history, there have been those who feared the future so intently they refused to invest in it," said Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., chairman of the House Science Committee. "Invariably those who refuse to focus on the future have been wrong."

Some called for an end to the annual make-or-break station vote.

"We have now voted nine times whether or not to fund the space station in the four years I've been here," Rep. Bud Cramer, D-Ala., said after the vote. "It's time to move on and let the people at NASA do their jobs. It's not fair to put them through this process year after year."

Report: Lack of precautions lead to chemical leak, agency says

HOUSTON (AP) — NASA has acknowledged it failed to take adequate steps to prevent a 1994 chemical leak at Johnson Space Center, the Houston Chronicle reported in a copyright story Friday.

In a report to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, NASA said technicians testing a small rocket did not notice a relief valve failed and a cloud of nitrogen tetroxide was released into the air.

NASA's report to the TNRCC says health problems caused by the leak have been minor and that all workers had recovered and returned to work.

A total of 81 JSC employees and contract workers were exposed to the rocket propellant nitrogen tetroxide after it was released inadvertently at the space center.

In the report, a JSC investigative team pinpointed a breakdown in NASA's emergency response procedures throughout the episode. Other contributing factors were improper hazard detection and insufficient backup systems.

The agency, in its report, disputes a Chicago neurologist's opinion that 90 percent of 59 employees he has examined have suffered some sort of brain damage from the exposure.

Dr. Alan Hirsch has been hired by Beaumont attorney Mitchell Toups. Toups is representing 70 contract employees who were exposed to the cloud and is preparing a suit to be filed sometime next week, he said.

The toxic cloud was released just before lunchtime on April 21, 1994.

Because a warning system was not in place at the time, the employees went outside about 11:30 a.m. and were engulfed by the fumes.

The next day, a second leak occurred while workers tried to tighten a leaking fitting. No employees were exposed.

Steve Hamm, an emergency response manager for the TNRCC, said he was satisfied with NASA's report and corrective actions.

NASA also revamped its safety plans at JSC, and has installed warning sirens around the facility to be sounded in case of emergency.

Grievance filed

HOUSTON — Vernon Maxwell has filed a grievance against the Houston Rockets for terminating his contract after they waived him, the players' agent said Friday.

"When they failed to pay him and decided to claim termination of his contract, we were obligated to file a grievance, which we have done," Kyle Rote Jr. told KRIV-TV of Houston.

Rote said he filed the grievance with the NBA on July 7 and also notified the NBA players association and the Rockets.

"Our claim is that they have terminated his contract inappropriately and they are still obligated under the guaranteed terms of his contract," he said.

The Rockets gave Maxwell an indefinite leave of absence early in the playoffs and then waived him before a league-wide lockout began July 1.

McCann named Lee volleyball coach

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

A replacement has been found for the vacant Midland Lee volleyball coach's position and she has a familiar face.

Carol McCann, who has worked since 1991 in the Midland Independent School District as an assistant coach at Midland High and most recently as an English teacher at Coleman High School, will replace four-year coach Anita Corder, who resigned recently to take a position at Class 1A Bronte.

MISD Athletic Director Tim Whalen confirmed McCann's hiring.

"She's a very upbeat kind of person and will be very good for the program," said Whalen. "She's also a good match because she already knows (girls basketball coach) Elise Kail and they get along well. I think that's important in keeping the continuity of the program."

McCann began her coaching career in 1981 as an assistant volleyball, basketball and track assistant in the Killeen ISD. In 1984, she was a varsity coach in the Abilene ISD. From there she worked for the Lubbock Parks and Recreation Department for a year.

In 1986 McCann coached in the Lewisville ISD for four years before heading to the Permian Basin.

In 1989 McCann took a junior high physical education and English position in the Ector County ISD until being hired by the MISD. She was at Midland High until 1994 when she took the position at Coleman.

McCann has a bachelor's degree from Abilene Christian University and a master's degree in English from the University of North Texas.

McCann inherits a program that has ventured into the Class 5A playoffs two times in the four-year tenure of Corder. They missed the playoffs in 1994 after finishing second in 1993. The Lady Rebels begin volleyball workouts Aug. 14.

SCHMIDT AND ASHBURN: COOPERSTOWN-BOUND

Phantastic Phillies

■ Ashburn, Schmidt to hear cheers from Philly faithful as duo is enducted into baseball's shrine of immortality.

By John F. Bonfatti
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia boobirds will finally have something to cheer about this weekend.

Richie Ashburn and Mike Schmidt.

Some 200 buses will cart fans from the Philadelphia area to Cooperstown, N.Y. to see the pair inducted into the baseball Hall of Fame.

The fans will cheer wildly for Ashburn, who used his storied career as a steppingstone for a 33-year broadcasting career that has given him near-diety status in the area.

The reception for Schmidt, voted by the fans in 1983 as the Phillies' all-time best player, is not likely to be as warm.

"Some of the people we've talked to said they're going for Ashburn, but they're looking forward to booing Schmidt as a sideline as well," said Bill Sjolander, whose travel company will bus 1,100 fans to Cooperstown.

While Philly fans see Ashburn as a great player and a great guy, many view Schmidt as a great player who wasn't particularly accommodating to them and went so far as to criticize them publicly.

As recently as this month, Schmidt took a shot at the city's fans in an article published in Philadelphia Magazine.

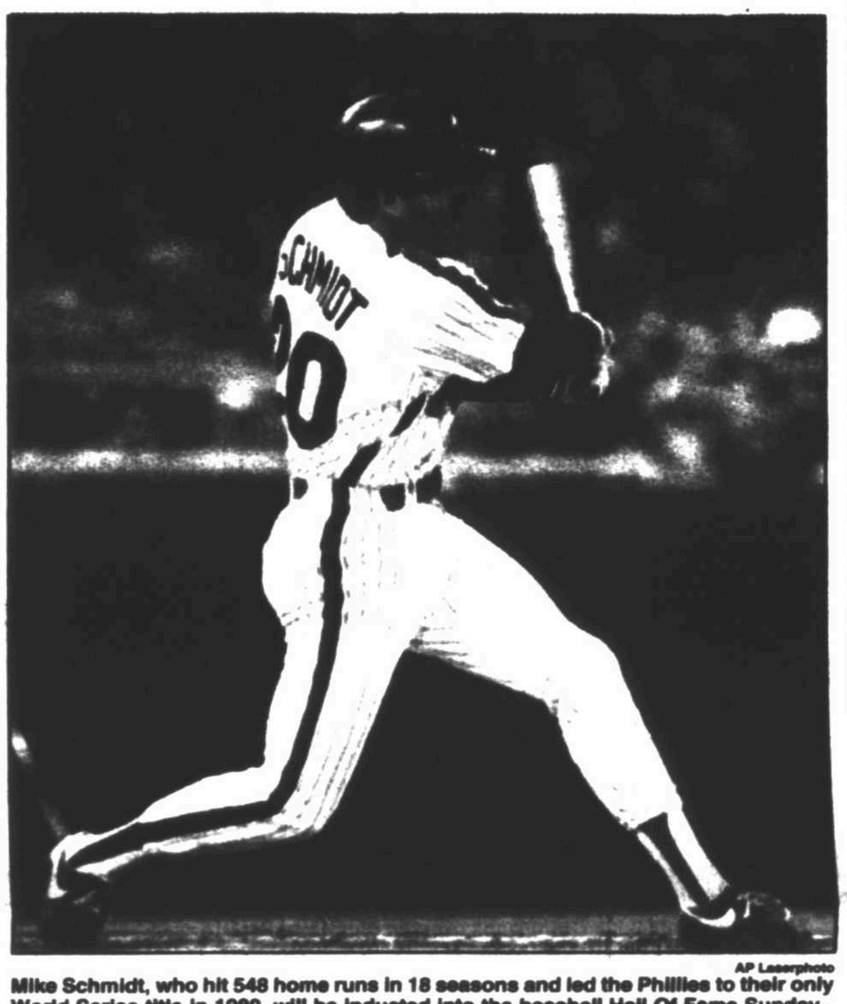

"It's hard for me to be positive, to have real good things to say about a town that never did anything for me and, in general, made life miserable for me," said Schmidt, who subsequently apologized.

It wasn't the first time Schmidt criticized Philly fans, known as among the toughest in pro sports.

In 1985, Schmidt said the fans at Veterans Stadium were "beyond help. It's a mob scene, uncontrollable."

The reaction in Philadelphia was so intense that, before his next game at the Vet, Schmidt donned a long wig, a mock-disguise intended to poke fun at his wanted-man status.

Schmidt, who many feel was the greatest third-baseman of all time, WAS booed often and with enthusiasm during his 18-year career with the Phillies. It started during his rookie season in 1973, when he hit only .196, and continued almost until the end of his career.

Mike Schmidt, who hit 548 home runs in 18 seasons and led the Phillies to their only World Series title in 1980, will be inducted into the baseball Hall Of Fame Sunday.

But booing is a serious part of the sports culture here. Fans even booed Santa Claus when he made an appearance during a particularly bad Eagles game.

Part of Schmidt's problem was the ease he displayed on the field and his lack of emotion.

"I think the fans felt that he wasn't that interested, which is unfair," said Allen Lewis, who covered the Phillies for the Philadelphia Inquirer during both the Ashburn and Schmidt days. "I think the coolness kind of turned them off."

In some ways, Schmidt was a victim of his times. When Ashburn played in the late 1940s through the early 1960s, there was nowhere near the scrutiny of ballplayers that developed in the 1970s.

"Schmitty was under a lot more media exposure than Ashburn ever was," said Larry Shenk, the Phillies longtime public relations chief. "In Ashburn's day, there were wire services and newspapers and they wrote the game. When Schmitty played, it was a lot more than the game."

Had Ashburn played 20 years later, he might have reacted as Schmidt often did to the incessant probing.

"Whitey (Ashburn) is a competitor,"

Cone dealt to Yankees

■ Bronx Bombers also pick up former Ranger Ruben Sierra from Oakland to bolster a run for the AL East title.

MINNEAPOLIS — The New York Yankees have been playing well enough to win the AL East since the All-Star break. Things could be about to get even better.

David Cone

The surging Yankees dealt three minor league pitchers to Toronto on Friday for 1994 Cy Young Award winner David Cone.

About an hour later they sent struggling Danny Tartabull to Oakland for switch-hitter Ruben Sierra, one of baseball's most productive hitters this decade.

"This is wheeling-and-dealing time," Yankees third baseman Wade Boggs said before Friday night's game at Minnesota. "A lot of things are sewed up. Teams are shaping up for the stretch."

Even without Darryl Strawberry, who still is trying to negotiate a major league contract, the Yankees are shaping up for an all-out attack on Boston in East.

New York entered Friday's game 41-41, tied with Baltimore 4 1/2 games behind the first-place Red Sox. But the Yankees have won eight of their last nine games.

The Orioles also bolstered their lineup for the stretch drive, acquiring former All-Star Bobby Bonilla for two minor-league outfielders, Damon Buford and Alex Ochoa.

The addition of Cone, whose $6 million salary had become too expensive for the slumping Blue Jays, gives New York one of the most dominant starters in the AL. It helps overcome the losses of Jimmy Key and Melido Perez, both finished for the year with injuries.

Boggs summed up the Cone deal in one word: "Large."

"We lost Jimmy Key and Melido Perez, and you don't win pennants without pitching," he said. "This is a step in the right direction. It's a major move."

NFL Hall of Fame enshrines quintet

By Rusty Miller
AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio — Steve Largent remembers the awful feeling of nearly two decades ago, when he was told he wasn't good enough to play in the NFL.

Had he accepted that 1976 preseason evaluation of the Houston Oilers, Largent wouldn't be where he is today — awaiting induction as one of four players and an NFL executive into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

"I was devastated after I was released by the Oilers," Largent said. "It was the first time in my athletic career that I'd ever been on a team where the coach said, 'You're not good enough to play for us. Turn in your helmet.'"

After doing so, Largent and his wife Terry packed everything they owned into a 4-by-6 trailer and drove their Ford Pinto station wagon back home to Oklahoma.

"We were preparing for the rest of our life when I got the call from Seattle," said Largent, Houston's fourth-round selection from Tulsa.

The rest is history, lots of it. Largent caught 819 passes for 13,089 yards and 100 touchdowns — all records when he retired in 1989. He also strung together 177 games with at least one catch.

Largent will be inducted Saturday along with Tampa Bay defensive end Lee Roy Selmon, San Diego tight end Kellen Winslow, team executive Jim Finks and Green Bay Packers defensive tackle Henry Jordan.

Jordan, who died of a heart attack in 1977, also faced uncertainty during his formative years in the league.

After spending two uneventful seasons as a backup with the Cleveland Browns, he was traded to the Green Bay Packers. They were rebuilding — virtually an annual occurrence in those years — after a 1-10-1 record in 1958.

"The joke around the league was if you do something wrong, you're going to get traded to Green Bay," said Jordan's widow, Olive Frey.

Jordan had to report to the Packers within 24 hours, and wasn't even sure what state Green Bay was in.

After traveling through the night, Jordan's wife and infant son awaited his return from practice. They were fully expecting to get right back in the car and drive home to Virginia.

"He came back to the room and said, 'Momma, we've found a home,'" his widow said. "He was ecstatic. Everything was falling into place. They really wanted him."

Alicea homers twice as Red Sox take out Texas

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Mike Maddux, starting in place of injured Roger Clemens, allowed only two hits in 5 2-3 innings, and Luis Alicea homered from both sides of the plate as the Boston Red Sox sent the Texas Rangers to their 11th loss in 12 games, 6-2 Friday night.

Maddux (2-1) started after Clemens was scratched because of problems with his right elbow.

Scott Taylor, making his major league debut for injured Bob Tewksbury, allowed homers to Alicea and Jose Canseco. He gave up five runs and eight hits in six innings.

Tewksbury was placed on the 15-day disabled list because of a left rib stress fracture.

Maddux, signed in May after being released by Pittsburgh, allowed only an unearned run before he was relieved by Rheal Cormier in the sixth inning. Stan Belinda pitched the final 1 2-3 innings.

Alicea, a switch-hitter, homered batting left-handed against Taylor in the first, and homered right-handed off reliever Terry Burrows in the seventh inning. It was his first multiple homer game and the first time in 22 years a Red Sox player had homered from both sides of the plate. Reggie Smith accomplished the feat four times with the last coming on April 16, 1973.

Angels 13, Brewers 6

MILWAUKEE — Chili Davis and Tim Salmon hit three-run homers and rookie Garret Anderson had four hits and four RBIs in California's rout of Milwaukee.

Mark Langston (10-1) gave up three earned runs on nine hits in 6 1-3 innings and matched his career high by winning his seventh straight decision.

The Angels have scored 141 runs in Langston's 19 starts, an average of 7.42 runs.

California won its fourth in a row and improved to 13-3 since the All-Star break.

Blue Jays 3, Athletics 0

TORONTO — Al Leiter pitched 6 1-3 shutout innings before leaving with a blister and Ed Sprague hit a two-run homer as Toronto beat Oakland.

Both teams made trades earlier Friday. The Blue Jays dealt 1994 Cy Young winner David Cone to the New York Yankees for three minor league pitchers. The Athletics, meanwhile, swapped disgruntled sluggers with the Yankees, sending Ruben Sierra to New York for Danny Tartabull.

Leiter (7-6), with Cone's trade now tied for the team lead in wins, left the game after walking Scott Brosius with one out in the seventh. He struck out a season-high eight and walked just one.

Tony Castillo allowed one hit in 2 2-3 innings for his seventh save. Castillo has allowed only one run in 14 2-3 innings covering nine apperances.

Sprague's two-run homer gave Toronto a 3-0 lead in the fourth. After John Olerud hit a one-out single, Sprague hit his 14th of the season into the left-field seats.

Orioles 4, White Sox 3

BALTIMORE — Baltimore obtained slugger Bobby Bonilla, then topped off an uplifting night by beating Chicago.

Mike Mussina allowed two runs and six hits over seven innings to become the first 12-game winner in the major leagues. Mussina (12-5) is 7-0 in his last eight starts since June 18.

Rafael Palmeiro and Gregg Zaun homered for the Orioles, who obtained Bonilla in a trade with the New York Mets shortly before game-time. Palmeiro will hit ahead of Bonilla, a six-time All-Star who is expected to bat cleanup for Baltimore.

Bonilla, obtained in exchange for minor league outfielders Alex Ochoa and Damon Buford, is expected to be in the Orioles' lineup Saturday.

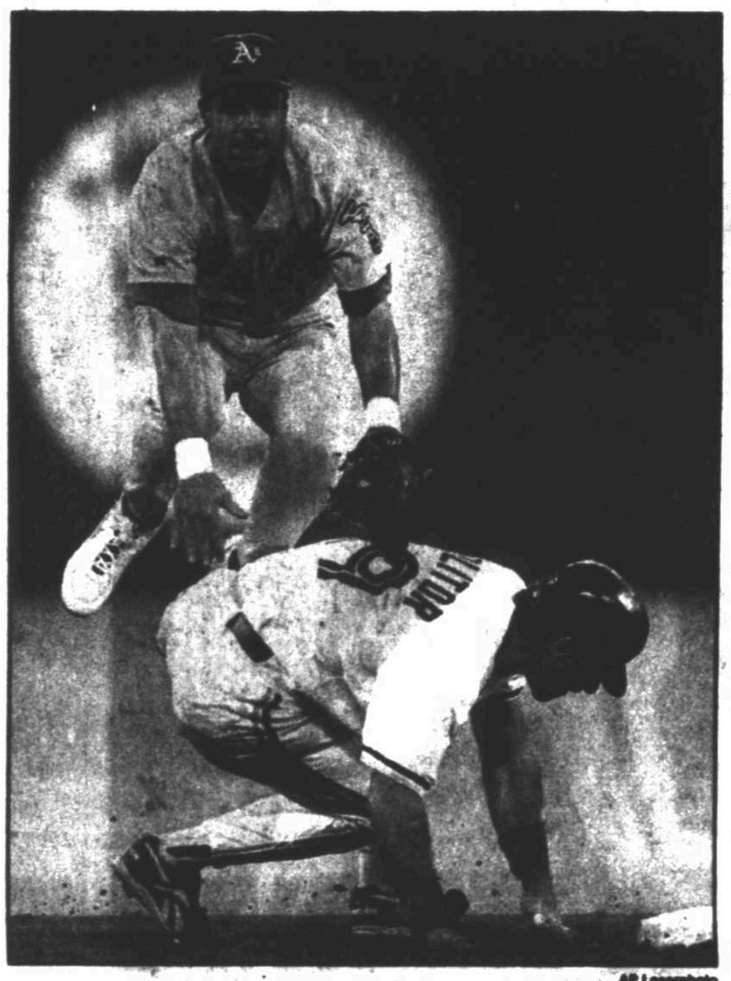

Chicago, 0-5 against Baltimore this season, got homers from Lance Johnson and Frank Thomas. The White Sox cut a 3-0 deficit to 4-3 before Baltimore's Doug Jones got the final three outs for his 19th save.

Twins 5, Yankees 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Dan Masteller hit his first major league home run, a two-run shot with one out in the ninth inning to give Minnesota a win over New York, spoiling a day that included two big trades by the Yankees.

Masteller, who also had a two-run single in the fourth inning, hit the first pitch from Jack McDowell (8-7) after Matt Walbeck led off the ninth with a walk. Ther loss was only the second in the last 10 games for the Yankees, but their third in five games to Minnesota since the All-Star break.

Masteller's homer just inside the right-field foul pole gave Kevin Tapani (6-11) his second straight victory and his second complete game of the season.

Royals 4, Tigers 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Gary Gaetti scored on David Howard's squeeze bunt with one out in the eighth inning as Kansas City defeated Detroit.

Gaetti singled, stole second and went to third on catcher John Flaherty's second throwing error of the game. It was Gaetti's first stolen base with the Royals and his first since 1993.

Padres shut down Astros

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Joey Hamilton scattered 10 hits over seven-plus innings to break a personal three-game losing streak and help the San Diego Padres defeat Houston 3-2 Friday night.

The game took 2 hours and 28 minutes on the first night baseball's speed-up rules were instituted.

Hamilton (4-5) walked two and struck out five. One of the two runs he allowed was unearned. Trevor Hoffman recorded the final out for his 17th save.

Hamilton had pitched the two quickest games in the majors this year, both shutouts.

He took 1:59 in a 3-0 win June 14 at St. Louis and 1:55 in a 2-0 win 10 days later against Colorado.

Shane Reynolds (6-6) had his career-high four-game winning streak snapped. He allowed three runs, two earned, and seven hits in his second complete game of the season.

The Padres scored two runs in the sixth to take the lead. Brad Ausmus led off by reaching on a fielding error by shortstop Orlando Miller and took third on Hamilton's single.

Ex-Astro Steve Finley doubled to drive in Ausmus, and Jody Reed's RBI groundout scored Hamilton.

Reds 3, Dodgers 2

LOS ANGELES — John Smiley retired the last 22 batters he faced for his 100th career victory as Cincinnati beat Los Angeles on home runs by Bret Boone and Jeff Branson.

Smiley (10-1) shut down the Dodgers completely after falling behind 2-0 on a two-out RBI single by Eric Karros in the first inning. The left-hander struck out nine and walked none in eight innings.

Jeff Brantley finished up for his 20th save.

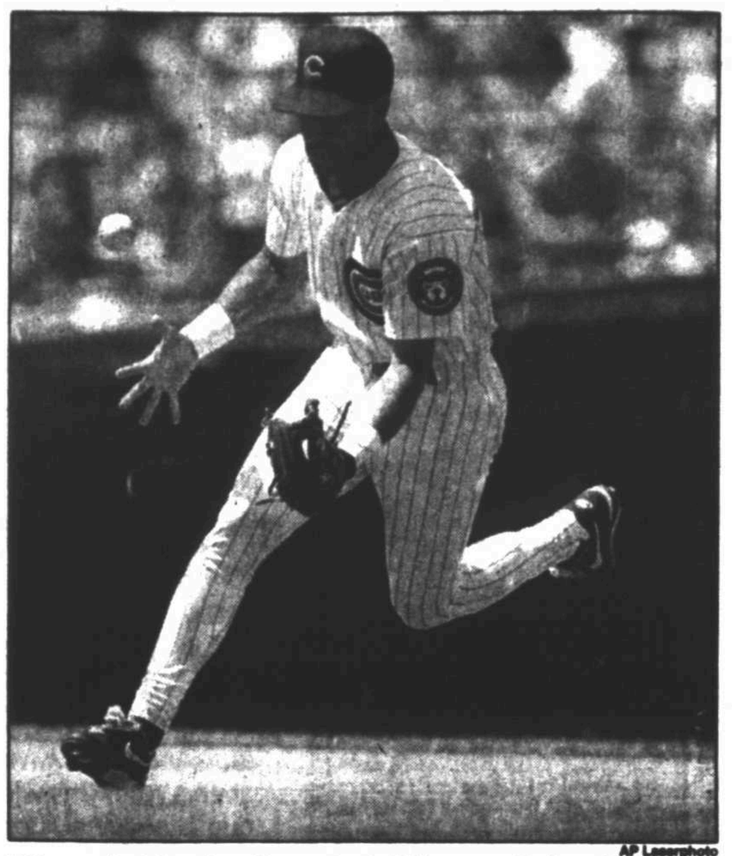

Braves 6, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO David Justice drove in the go-ahead run off Rod Beck, who blew a save for the eighth time this season, and Javy Lopez's three-run homer capped a five-run ninth as Atlanta defeated San Francisco.

With the Braves down 2-1 in the ninth, Marquis Grissom drew a leadoff walk on four pitches from Beck (4-5), who has now blown four out of his last five save opportunities.

Cubs 4, Phillies 0

CHICAGO — When time became important, the Cubs wasted little of it en route to a victory over Philadelphia, which had its four-game winning streak snapped.

AP Laserphoto

Chicago shortstop Juan Hernandez bobbles a pop fly from Philadelphia's Gregg Jefferies during their game at Wrigley Field.

The Cubs struck for three runs in the first inning in the major league's first game with the new speed-up rules being enforced. The inning was highlighted by Todd Zeile's two-run single.

The game was played in 2:29. There were no warnings by the umpires to speed the game up.

Frank Castillo (7-5) pitched into the seventh inning, leaving with the bases loaded and two outs. Bryan Hickerson relieved and got Darren Daulton to fly out.

Hickerson picked up his second save.

Marlins 6, Cardinals 0

MIAMI — Chris Hammond pitched seven shutout innings and Terry Pendleton and Tommy Gregg homered to lead Florida to a victory over St. Louis.

Hammond (7-3) allowed three hits in seven innings, striking out five and walking two. He faced the minimum number of batters for 5 2-3 innings because of a double play and pickoff.

Rockies 8, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Larry Walker hit his league-leading 23rd homer in his return to Montreal, helping Colorado halt a three-game skid.

Walker, who went 2-for-5 and was greeted with a chorus of boos and a smattering of applause at every at-bat, matched his career-best in homers, set with Montreal in 1992.

Joe Girardi went 3-for-5 with one RBI and three runs scored as Colorado used an 11-hit attack to beat Montreal for the fifth straight time this season.

Kevin Ritz (9-5) gave up three runs on nine hits in eight innings. He struck out seven and walked three.

Pirates 10, Mets 9

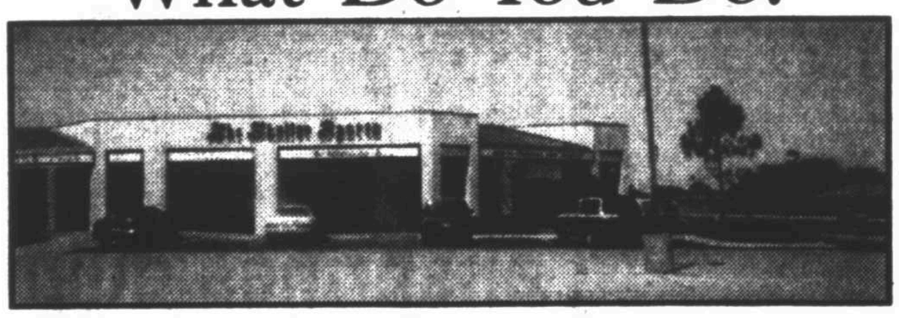

NEW YORK — Nelson Liriano scored the game-winning run on a fielding error in the ninth inning as Pittsburgh snapped a six-game losing streak with a win over New York.

Pinch-hitter Steve Pegues opened the ninth with a single off New York closer John Franco (4-2) and was sacrificed to second by John Wehner. With one out, Liriano singled to score Pegues.

Funk shoots a 63 to take Ideon lead

The Associated Press

SUTTON, Mass. — Fred Funk broke open a close tournament, shooting an 8-under-par 63 before half the field had teed off, and led Jim McGovern by three strokes after Friday's second round of the Ideon Classic.

Funk's 13-under 129 was two strokes better than the lowest 36-hole score posted in the 28 previous PGA Tour events at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

"That's great. I like getting in some sort of record book," said Funk, who has just one victory in seven years on the tour and two top-10 finishes this year.

McGovern, in one of the late groups, needed a birdie on his last hole for his second straight 66 and a 10-under 132.

Funk and McGovern were in an 11-way tie for the lead Thursday until Ronnie Black, one of the late finishers, birdied his 17th hole to end the day with a one-stroke edge at 65. A tour official said it was unlikely 11 players had ever shared the lead at the end of a round.

Funk was in one of the early groups and let the rest of the players know they'd have to play well to catch him. He birdied two of his first three holes and was 3-under for his first nine.

Ameritech Senior Open

AURORA, Ill. — Bob Dickson, who didn't play competitive golf for 16 years, shot a 66 on Friday to join Hale Irwin and Jim Colbert atop the leaderboard after the first round of the $850,000 Ameritech Senior Open.

Irwin, a rookie on the senior tour who joined after turning 50 on June 3, got into contention with four birdies over the last eight holes. He missed a chance for the outright lead when he missed a 6-footer for birdie at No. 14.

Colbert, the leading money winner on the senior tour, birdied three holes on each nine while Dickson birdied five of the last seven holes.

One shot back of the leading trio were Bob Smith and Mike Hill, who won this event in 1991, the first year at the 6,840-yard Stonebridge Country Club.

Dutch Open

HILVERSUM, Netherlands — Scotland's Sam Torrance shot a 7-under-par 64 on Friday to take a two-stroke lead over Ireland's Philip Walton after two rounds of the $1.04 million Dutch Open.

John Daly, the British Open champion, shot himself back into contention with a 66 that left him at 4-under 138, six shots off the lead. Walton moved into second by shooting a 69.

LPGA Friendly's Classic

AGAWAM, Mass. — Becky Iverson found a new putter with the face set in front of the shaft, and as a result she mastered the greens in the second round of the LPGA Friendly's Classic.

Iverson shot a 9-under-par 63 Friday to take the lead at the halfway point in the tournament with a 10-under-par 134. She credited her best round ever to the new putter.

"I have been struggling all year with my putter. I finally found the right one, I guess," she said.

Kris Tschetter, who closed her round by flubbing a three-foot putt to bogey the 18th hole, was one stroke back in second place. Tracy Hanson and Jane Crafter were third with 7-under-par 137s.

"Actually, I had a couple lip out on me," Iverson said. "You think they're just going to go in; they just die."

Iverson, who was a Michigan native until she joined the LPGA tour in 1993, topped her previous best score by four strokes.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, JULY 29, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Consider the welfare of the entire family when making new career plans. Even young children can be told some of the financial facts of life. A golden employment opportunity could arise late in 1995. Soft-pedal any criticism of people you work with on a daily basis. A romance that takes root this winter could blossom beautifully early next summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: news anchor Peter Jennings, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, boxer Michael Spinks, soap actress Lisa Peluso.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day to rearrange furniture, closets and equipment. Try various set-ups until fully satisfied. Family life becomes more rewarding when spiritual worth is emphasized.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family ties are strengthened by shared activities. Find out what your children consider fun and join in. Disappointing a parent could prove costly. Are you ready to pay the price? Try to reach a compromise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look forward to a weekend of adventure and growth! Loved ones draw closer together. You can expect to play a larger role in your relatives' lives. A change of scenery boosts everyone's spirits.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Double-check your itinerary and reservations to make sure there will be no vacation disappointments. A goal that has eluded you in the past moves within reach. Someone's love is won by a single act.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are more sentimental than you like to admit. Take to heart what an old friend tells you. Do not judge someone by one encounter. Remember, everyone has an "off" day now and then.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put recreation at the top of your priority list this weekend. You need to relax and enjoy yourself. A new understanding can be reached if both sides discuss what is really important to them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Ignore a braggart and his rhetoric eventually will subside. You can teach young people more by example than by lecture. You cannot drink to excess and expect your impressionable offspring to show greater restraint.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Material you thought was finished needs redoing. Plan accordingly. Inviting friends over for dinner saves the expense of a restaurant meal. The food will taste better, too!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your soul is filled with adventure! It could be difficult to find someone who shares your enthusiasm. Widen your social circle. Something that was lost resurfaces. Show tact. Avoid asking too many questions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Travel will be invigorating was well as informative. Take along a friend and share expenses. A writing project can produce some extra income if you avoid procrastinating. Copyright your cleverly phrased observations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid wasting time trying to rehabilitate something that is not worth the effort. It would be better to start from scratch. Involving family members in your projects will promote greater understanding. Romantic rapport deepens.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Morning is ideal for reviewing your long-range plans. Heed a counselor's advice. Refuse to be pressured into making commitments you may not want to keep. Romance gets a second chance. Show more affection.

Michael Fay cherishes anonymity, looks forward to leading normal life

ORLANDO, Fla. — Michael Fay likes the anonymity.

Fay, who made headlines last year when he was caned in Singapore, has a job at Universal Studios Florida.

Neither he nor the company will say what he does, though he said few people recognize him.

"I just want to lead a normal life. I want to make my own money, go to college — probably in Florida — and maybe get a business or marketing degree," Fay said Wednesday at the theme park.

Fay, 20, received four lashes with a cane for spray-painting cars in Singapore, where he lived with his mother. He says he didn't do it.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Farm Aid is back, courtesy of Willie and his pals.

Country music icon Willie Nelson says he wants to draw attention once again to the plight of farmers. Seven previous Farm Aid concerts have raised more than $12 million for farm organizations, service agencies and churches.

"We're still losing 500 small family farmers a week, and they don't make the headlines anymore," Nelson said Friday. "It's time that we move them back to the front pages."

The concert will be held Oct. 1 in Louisville. Headliners include Nelson, Neil Young and John Mellencamp, all Farm Aid founders, plus Hootie and the Blowfish. Additional performers will be announced later.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Betty White's heart of gold is showing at the University of Charleston.

Betty White begins a scholarship at a Virginia university.

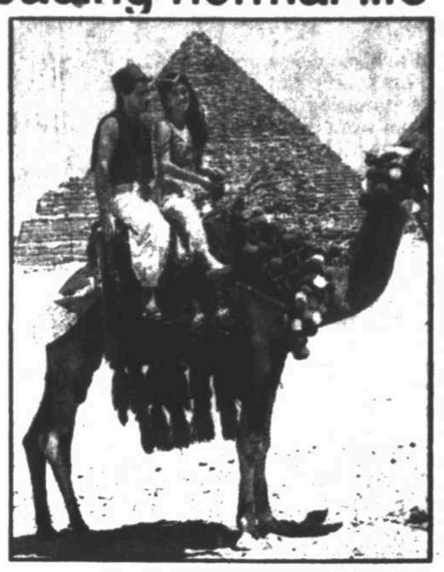

The actress recently gave $10,000 to begin the Betty White Luden Endowed Scholarship for one needy student a year who is committed to community service.

The school gave White, who played a ditzy retiree on TV's "The Golden Girls," an honorary degree in 1991 for her acting achievements and her animal welfare work.

CAIRO, Egypt — Kurt Browning and Kristi Yamaguchi took to the ice this week in stifling heat to skate the story of Aladdin.

"I skate around twice and I'm soaking wet," Browning, one of Canada's top skaters, said after going on location at an ice rink. "It's murder for the people in make-up."

Skating champions Kristi Yamaguchi, right, and Kurt Browning pose as Disney characters Jasmine and Aladdin near the pyramids for their CBS ice-skating special.

Other backdrops for "Aladdin on Ice" include the Pyramids and the Citadel, a 12th-century fortress. The U.S. network special will air on CBS in November.

Yamaguchi, the Olympic gold medalist, was cast as Princess Jasmine while Browning got the role of Aladdin.

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Joey Buttafuoco had two words to say to the judge at his probation violation hearing on Friday: Not guilty.

Then the auto body shop owner was released on his own recognizance until a hearing Sept. 7.

The auto body shop owner pleaded no contest to soliciting an undercover officer in Los Angeles two months ago, while he was on probation.

If the judge decides the sex charge violated Buttafuoco's probation for the statutory rape of an underage Amy Fisher, Buttafuoco could go back to prison for up to 3 1/2 years.

That's how much time he has left on his original sentence after serving four months in prison. Fisher is serving five- to 15 years for shooting and wounding Buttafuoco's wife.

TRADES: Yankees bolster rotation with Cone, Orioles get Bonilla from Mets

(From 1C)

Cone, 32, came to Toronto from Kansas City on April 6 for three minor leaguers. He was 9-6 with a 3.38 ERA and five complete games for the Blue Jays, including a four-hit, 7-0 victory over the Twins at the Metrodome on July 18. Cone, who was en route from Toronto and not immediately available for comment, was expected to start against the Twins on Saturday night.

Despite his success, the last-place Jays decided to unload his salary and are believed to be considering other cost-cutting moves.

"It's not something that is readily accepted by the players, we all had expectations about certain players being traded this week, but that doesn't make it any easier when it happens," Toronto's Paul Molitor said.

"It's tough when you trade one of the best pitchers in the major leagues to a team in your division. By the move today, they probably feel it's an unlikekly scenario that we find our way to a wild c[illegible] spot or a division title this year and they probably [illegible] that they owed it to the fans to start rebuilding [illegible]e team."

In exchange for Cone, Toronto obtained Marty Janzen, Jason Jarvis and Mike Gordon. All right-handers, none has pitched above Class AA.

New York was one of several teams interested in Cone, but Toronto's price originally was too steep and the Yankees backed away. After Cleveland acquired Ken Hill and California traded for Jim Abbott on Thursday, talks between the Yankees and Jays heated up.

"I haven't really heard anybody say we need this or we need that," Don Mattingly said. "But obviously as you go down the stretch you see all the teams making moves, and this is going to help us."

Tartabull, who came to the Yankees as a free agent in 1992, hopes a change of scenery will help resuscitate his dismal season. After hitting .195 in the first 26 games, he is hitting .224 with six homer runs and 28 RBIs in 59 games.

He has been bothered by a rib cage injury for a month — he has been on the disabled list six times since 1986 — and hasn't homered since July 5. Before pinch-hitting Thursday, Tartabull hadn't played since July 12 and he has been hounded by fans and media all season.

"I had always heard how hard it was to play in New York," Tartabull said. "It all slammed on me at once. It all slammed down on me from the start."

Sierra also has been bothered by injuries. He came off the disabled list last week and is hitting .265 with 12 home runs and 42 RBIs in 54 games. Before this season, Sierra's 492 RBIs over the past five seasons were second only to Cecil Fielder in the AL.

"Nothing surprised me because I knew something was going to happen," Sierra said. "You don't always feel good about being traded but you have to do what is best for you. On the Yankees they have a lot of chances, they have a chance. They're only (4 1/2 games out) and they got David Cone today. The team is going to be stronger."

Sierra was scheduled to make $6.2 million this season, and Tartabull $5.3 million. Sierra's contract runs through 1997, and Tartabull's deal ends after 1996.

LARGENT: One of five players enshrined today

(From 1C)

Packers won five NFL titles in a seven-year span.

Selmon was the first player taken in the 1976 draft, by the expansion Buccaneers. He had played on Oklahoma teams that went 43-2.

The Bucs, who coach John McKay said couldn't block or tackle but had mastered defeat both at home and on the road, lost their first 26 games.

Within four years they won a division championship, however, with Selmon chosen NFL defensive player of the year.

"Oftentimes, you go through hard times and it brings you closer together," said Selmon, now an associate athletics director at the University of South Florida. "I don't regret the losses at all. I'm still very much grateful the Buccaneers drafted me."

As general manager, Finks did the wheeling and dealing that resulted in the Minnesota Vikings' glory years of the 1960s and '70s, the Chicago Bears' 1985 Super Bowl championship and the New Orleans Saints' rejuvenation in the late 1980s. He died in 1994.

"One of his strengths was he never wavered," said his son, Jim Finks Jr. "There were popular and unpopular decisions, right and wrong ones. If it was a bad one, he'd take the heat for it. He'd admit he made a mistake and then go on."

Winslow furthered the evolution of the tight end position. A big man (6-foot-5, 250) with deep-threat speed, he was one of Dan Fouts' favorite targets during the "Air Coryell" years in San Diego.

Winslow had 13 catches for 166 yards in the epic 41-38 victory over Miami in the 1981 playoffs. Two years later, his right knee was blown out in a game against the Raiders. After a year off, he came back to play three more seasons.

The newest class raises the number of inductees to 180.

Largent will be presented by Seahawks public relations executive Gary Wright and Jordan by best friend Ed Kovach. Selmon will be introduced by his brother and former teammate Dewey, Finks by Bears chairman of the board Ed McCaskey and Winslow by his high school coach, Cornelius Perry.

The Jacksonville Jaguars will meet the Carolina Panthers — expansion teams playing their first game — in the annual exhibition game at adjoining Fawcett Stadium immediately after the inductions.

COWBOYS: Face familiar foe to open 1995 preseason

(From 1C)

Dallas, which twice defeated the Bills in Super Bowls, will play the first team briefly to try to give some of the Texas Stadium crowd its money's worth. The Bills aren't expected to go with their starters for long, resting quarterack Jim Kelly and running back Thurman Thomas.

"We've got a lot of young players to look at and I would suppose (Buffalo coach) Marv Levy does too," said Dallas coach Barry Switzer. "We'll get at look at the first team then get them out of there."

Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman, wide receiver Michael Irvin, running back Emmitt Smith, and fullback Daryl Johnston were expected to play only a series or two.

"We will play Emmitt and DJ tomorrow night. They will start the ballgame. Right now I can't tell how many players will play, we'll play that by ear," Switzer said. "We want to look at Wade Wilson and get him ready in a backup role."

The Cowboys signed Wilson in the off-season to replace Rodney Peete as a second team quarterback. Jason Garrett, who beat Green Bay on Thanksgiving Day, was running third string in camp.

The game marks the return to Texas Stadium of defensive end Jim Jeffcoat in a different colored jersey.

The Bills signed the 34-year-old Jeffcoat in the off-season and the popular former Dallas player has already made a big hit.

"Jeffcoat is fast becoming one of the team leaders," Levy said.

"He still has a great deal of quickness. "He's game wise, experienced and a very smart player. He has a tremendous work ethic and is a great example for our young guys."

Buffalo spent $3 million over three years for Jeffcoat. The Bills also paid a similar sum of money to get Ted Washington from Denver and linebacker Bryce Paup from Green Bay as they beefed up their defense.

"He's a great technician and a hard worker. He's what you would like every football player to be," Paup said of Jeffcoat.

Cowboys offensive guard Nate Newton says he's ready for Jeffcoat's return.

"He traded out on us and he knew we needed him," Newton said. " 'Jim, you sold out for money when we needed you.'

SCHMIDT: Hall awaits after 23 years

(From 1C)

said Chris Wheeler, who broadcasts Phillies games with Ashburn. "I guarantee you if Whitey was playing in this age, he'd have problems. The radio shows would have called him a banjo hitter with no arm and he wouldn't have taken that easily."

The personality differences between the detached Schmidt and the accessible Ashburn made it much easier for Ashburn. His folksy broadcasting style won him a new generation of fans.

Wheeler recalled a promotion where he, several other Phillies and Schmidt were to appear at a car dealership. "Schmitty said, 'Are there going to be any people there?,' he said.

"Whitey's been on the air for 30 years with that homespun personality where he sounds like he's a great guy and he sounds like he's funny," Wheeler said. "They don't call him Richie, they call him Whitey."

Two letters that appeared recently in the Philadelphia Daily News, which asked its readers for their memories of the two Hall of Famers, illustrate how Ashburn won fans — and how Schmidt lost them.

One fan recalled how, as a kid, he'd waited to get Ashburn's autograph after a rained-out game, even though Ashburn had already signed for him several times.

"He stopped, saw me, smiled and said, 'You again!,'" Philadelphian Robert Hack remembered. "I said, 'Please Rich.' Needless to say, he autographed my book again."

Then there was the experience of Adam Stanks of Pomona, N.J., who said Schmidt promised to autograph a ball after a game, then made "a mad dash to his limousine immediately following the game without signing a single autograph."

Stanks concluded, "I hope Mike Schmidt trips and falls flat on his face on his way to the podium on July 30."

AUTOMOTIVE TODAY & Classified

If you own a front-wheel drive car, which most people do, there is no sense looking under its hood for the fan belt. Chances are the fan is electrically driven. But that doesn't absolve you of belt maintenance.

While your car's radiator fan may not be belt driven, its water pump, power steering pump, alternator and air conditioning compressor are. If you have a pickup or sport utility vehicle, it could use a belt to spin the cooling fan.

This all boils down to the need to inspect the drive belts at least twice a year. Unfortunately, given the structure of modern drive belts, a thorough inspection may not reveal internal belt damage or weakness. That is why it is a good practice to replace those belts automatically every three years.

To help you change drive belts, the car manufacturers have made things relatively simple. Most cars now use one large, multi-ribbed poly-V belt that drives several, if not all, of the accessories. Due to the winding path these belts follow through the various pulleys, they are called "serpentine" belts.

To help them better transfer power to the various pulleys, the serpentine belts have several small V-like grooves and ridges, as opposed to being V-shaped. In fact, many smaller belts which drive one accessory are also of this poly-V configuration. The belt grooves and ridges mate with grooves and ridges in the various drive pulleys.

To best inspect a belt, remove it. Loosen the belt' s tension and slip it off the pulleys. To slacken the belt you may need to loosen one of the belt's accessories — alternator, power-steering pump, a/c compressor — and slip or rotate the accessory in its bracket. Not all accessories can be loosened in their brackets, however. If a belt drives several accessories, check all of them to see which one is the belt's tensioner.

On many cars you'll find that none of the accessories are meant to rotate in its mount. In these cases. you will find a special pulley which does nothing else but maintain the belt's tension. This pulley is almost always used with single, serpentine-belt systems.

The tensioner pulley may be an idler pulley, which can be spring loaded or moved by a jackscrew or loosened and slid along a grooved bracket. Remember, if you can't find a way to slacken the belt, keep looking. All belts have some variety of tensioner.

Once you've removed the belt, carefully inspect it for cracks, tears and missing chunks. Look closely at the ridges in a poly-V belt for damage between the individual grooves and for small missing pieces between the grooves. Twist and fold the belt to better stretch its working underside as you examine it.

Check the belt for signs of contamination caused by spilled oil, engine coolant or gasoline. If there is any question about the belt's condition, replace it.

If the belt is a single V-belt type, check its sides for shiny or glazed areas. Any glazing means the belt has been slipping and should be replaced.

Take the old belt with you when you shop for its replacement. The new belt should be of the same diameter, cross section and width as the old. Replacements must have the same number of grooves and ridges as the original.

While the belt is off, check all the pulleys. If any pulley is dented, cracked or bent, it will soon destroy even a new belt.

If all's well, reinstall the belt, taking care that the ridges of a poly-V belt are all seated in all the pulley grooves, making sure that it is not twisted. If it is necessary to pry the belt onto the last pulley, do not use a sharp screwdriver as a pry bar or damage the belt.

With the belt in place, correct tension ensures maximum belt and accessory life and the proper operation of all the accessories. However, due to the tight confines of most modern engine compartments, the only way to ensure proper belt tension is with a special gauge. These only cost about $5 at auto parts stores.

To tension the belt, reverse what you did to loosen it. If this requires moving an accessory against the belt, don't use a pry bar, use a length of 2x4 if possible, and only pry on the reinforced section of the accessory's housing that's there for just that purpose. Remember to snug down all of the accessory's mounting bolts so the belt will stay tight. If the belt tensioner is a jackscrew device, remember to tighten its locknut. If your car has an automatic tensioner, all you need do is follow the instructions in your owner's manual.

The new refined Buick Regal

By Bob Plunkett
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

Regal, Buick's midsize label molded into coupe and sedan configurations, looks tame, yet it's not.

With conservative exterior lines which include recent revisions for front hood line and fascia, Regal makes an understatement, although a test-drive may persuade you that this Buick can be a capable cornering machine and, flat out, downright aggressive on a highway.

Inside, a new design for dash and cockpit emphasizes driver-oriented ergonomics and functional efficiency, while appointments for convenience and plush seats combine to make time spent in this car a pleasant experience.

Then blend in the factor of new Select Series models with extra features for lower prices, and Regal adds up to value.

Even so, it surprises me to admit as much.

Buick's reputation, you see, was never derived from sporty things or agile performers. Then, during the staid era of the 1980s, overall lines of various Buick models seemed to blur into unremarkable blandness.

Significant improvements in the 1990s have helped rescue the line, and consumers now rank Buick above all other domestic brands in terms of quality of construction and the satisfaction that Buick's products bring. Also, the current year has revealed dramatic new Buick shapes with stunning new designs like Riviera, arguably the most beautiful car on the road today.

Regal shares these new Buick assets, and 1995 models stock more safety systems and new perks for passengers.

These improvements became apparent during tests of various Regal models. Last summer driving across northern Michigan, I tested pre-production coupes and sedans in several trims. Recently, I lived with a Regal Custom Select Sedan outfitted with optional V6 engine, sporty Gran Touring suspension and cushy interior comforts.

Field notes from these experiences highlight the sleek shape of Regal's tapered prow, an aggressive kick in throttle response, its playful attitude in curves and the softness and comfort of optional bucket seats.

Regal's power flows from one of two 6-cylinder engines, both familiar iron-block V6 plants. The base 3.1-liter plant produces 160 hp. while the 3.8-liter 3800 series kicks horsepower up to 170.

Each engine connects with GM's electronic 4-speed automatic transmission, which this year has a shift interlock with the brake pedal as a new safety element.

Regal rides on an integrated body-on-frame steel chassis rigged with a fully independent suspension system that puts MacPherson struts in front and a tri-link design with transverse leaf spring in back.

Built-in front and rear structural zones will absorb energy of a collision, and steel reinforcements show up this year in side doors and in the cage that surrounds the passenger compartment.

The power-assisted rack and pinion steering, working in combination with Regal's independent suspension, produces a quick feel at the steering wheel and enables the car to cut sharp turns in slalom maneuvers.

Brakes consist of a power-linked disc at every wheel with computer-controlled anti-lock system.

Regal's coupe appears in two trims, a base Regal Custom and sport-oriented Gran Sport. The sedan also provides these trim levels, then slips a third in-between with the Regal Limited Sedan. The base Custom packs the smaller engine and uses a split bench for the front seat. Limited gets the bigger engine, as does Gran Sport, which also installs bucket seats up front, then applies the Gran Touring suspension and larger wheels and tires.

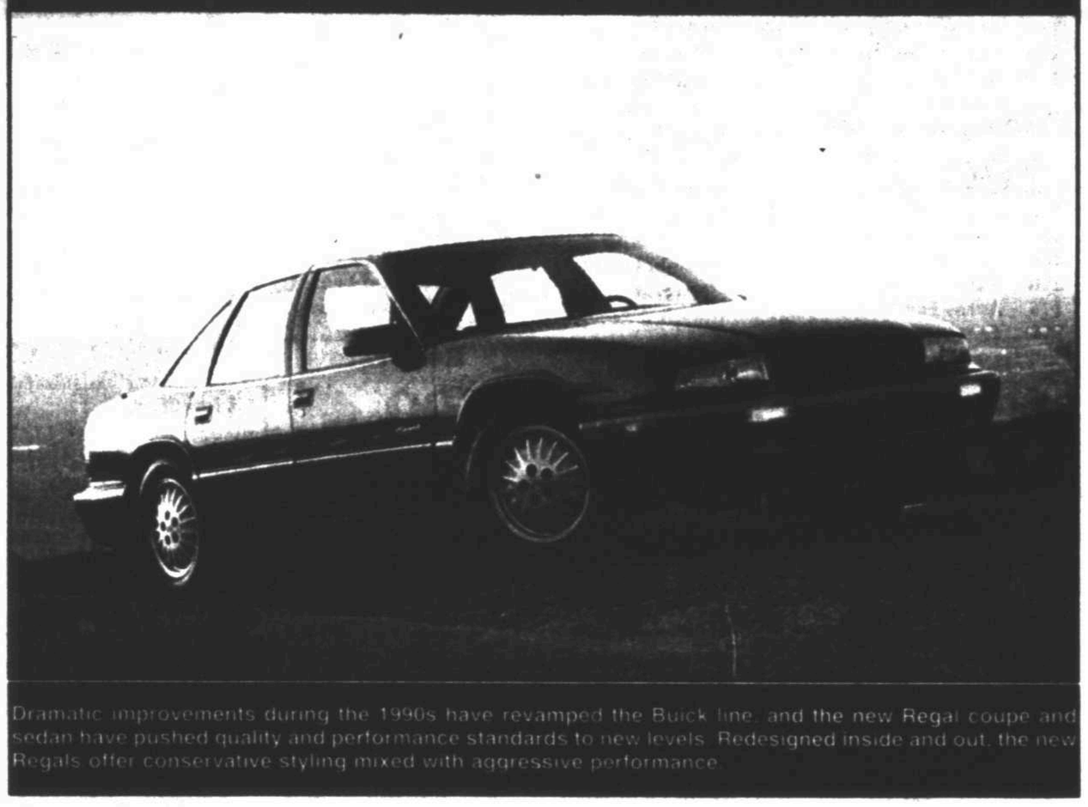

Check out Regal's price structure and you'll discover yet another trim option arises in the form of a no-haggle bargain series called Custom Select.

Here's the deal.

A base Regal Custom in 2-door coupe or 4-door sedan lists for a few dollars less than $20,000 and contains significant content — the automatic transmission, dual air bags and anti-lock brakes, power steering, air conditioning, power windows and door locks, analog gauges with tachometer, tilting steering wheel, tinted glass, AM-FM sound system and a clock.

But Select Series goes further with amenities, then lowers the price to pose Buick's sweetest offer.

1995 Buick Regal

Dramatic improvements during the 1990s have revamped the Buick line, and the new Regal coupe and sedan have pushed quality and performance standards to new levels. Redesigned inside and out, the new Regals offer conservative styling mixed with aggressive performance.

With the coupe, a base Custom amounts to $19,600, but the Custom Select drops to $18,500.

For the sedan, a base Regal Custom comes to $19,900, while a Custom Select Sedan is $18,600.

Additional Select features begin with a larger V6 engine, which produces only 10 more horsepower but generates far more torque at lower speeds used in city driving.

Regal Select also builds on Custom features by adding an automatic climate control system with dual zones, along with 6-way power for the driver's seat, power controls for exterior mirrors, an overhead console with map lights, key less entry with remote feature, rear window defogger, cassette deck installed in the stereo plus power antenna, as well as a power deck lid pulldown.

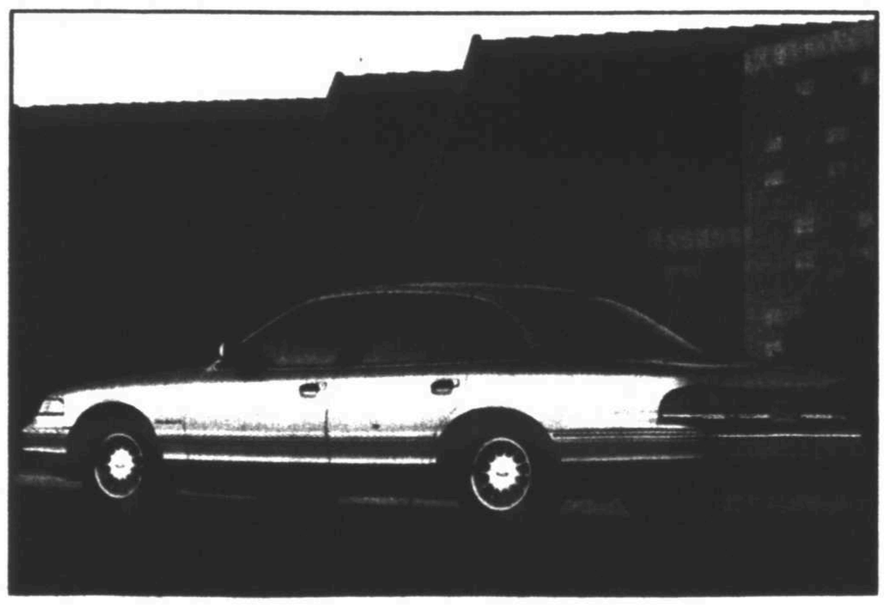

Ford's latest Crown

The full-size Ford Crown Victoria has significant appearance, passenger comfort and convenience changes for 1995.

Starting at the front, the grille design and bumper facing are new. The heated outside mirrors are color-keyed to the body paint, as is the body side molding.

The rear-end styling is freshened with redesigned tail lights and bumper facing. The horizontal decorative trim panel also has a new look.

The deck lid has been redesigned and it is now made of aluminum, like the Crown Victoria's hood. For customer convenience, the new design provides a wider and lower lift over, so it's easier to load and unload the Crown Victoria's exceptionally large trunk.

With ultra high tech features such as antenna wires embedded in window glass (to reduce drag), the new Ford Crown Victoria is an impressive luxury vehicle that offers a surprisingly large number of sporty features - such as a drag coefficient of 0.34.

The Crown Victoria's radio antenna has all but disappeared. Nearly invisible fine antenna wiring is embedded in the rear window glass, along with the defroster heating elements.

Three of the Crown Victoria's 10 exterior paint selections are new for 1995 — Light Willow Green, Medium Willow Green and Silver Frost. All are clear-coat metallic paints. Three of the five interior trim colors are also new — Saddle, Willow Green and Graphite.

The interior changes are highlighted by new split-bench seats and new door trim panels. The new high-gloss woodgrain-trimmed instrument panel has a large bin-style glove box, protective knee bolsters, and dual cup holders.

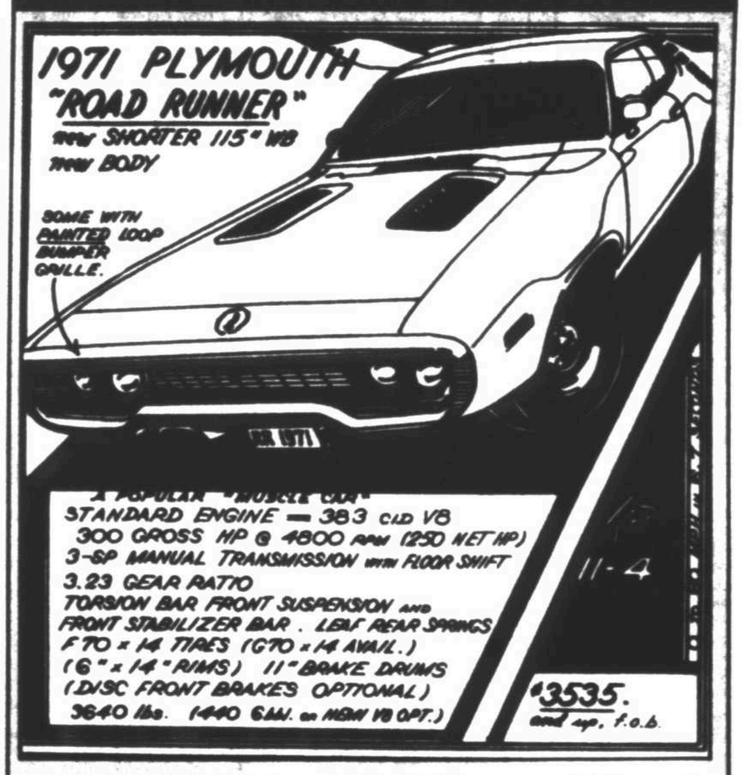

Again with customer convenience in mind, the power window, power door lock and power seat switches are lighted. For easier entrance and exit, the front seat adjusts forward/backward a full 10 inches, and there are front and rear assist handles. New heating ducts serve rear-seat passengers.

Another important new feature is Ford-patented Solar Tint glass. It keeps the interior cooler by blocking up to 24 percent more of the sun's heat than regular tinted glass.

Both the Crown Victoria and the Crown Victoria LX are powered by Ford's advanced-technology modular 4.6-liter overhead-cam V-8 engine. For 1995, the engine is coupled with a smoother-shifting electronically controlled automatic transmission with wide ratio gears.

Crown Victoria models have a dual air bag supplemental restraint system (SRS) and side-impact protection that meets 1997 federal standards. An anti-lock braking system (ABS) with traction assist is available.

'71 Road Runner

During the late 1960s, compact, high-powered V-8 muscle cars were at the crest of their popularity. After 1971, however, it was tough sledding for V-8 screamers, because strict new safety and fuel-economy standards pointed the way to smaller cars, smaller engines and much less horsepower. Chevy's Corvettes and Camaros and Pontiac's Firebirds and Trans-Ams were among the very few performance cars still in production after the other 'tigers' had been de-fanged or killed off.

In 1971, Plymouth advertising referred to its lineup of muscle cars as its 'Rapid Transit System,' and in addition to the illustrated Road Runner there were also the Duster 340 and 'Cuda (with 108-inch wheelbase) the 115wheelbase GTX and the 120-inch wheelbase Sport Fury GT.

Performance V-8 engine choices came in 340, 383, 440 or special Hemi 426 c.i.d. sizes with horsepower ratings as much as 425 at 5000 rpm (in the Hemi).

Plymouth's Road Runner had been introduced during the 1968 season, and derived its name from the clever bird in the 'Road Runner' series of movie and TV cartoons who continually outsmarted the pursuing coyote. The animated cartoon road runner bird made a 'beep beep' noise, and this style horn was also adapted to some degree by Plymouth for its car of the same name. "It still goes beep beep' proclaimed a 1971 ad, which continued, "And it still has fat tires, high-flow cylinder heads, four barrel carburetion and heavy duty brakes and suspension."

For '71, rear track (the distance across, between the rear wheels) was lengthened by 3.2 inches to improve stability.

With the numerous extra performance goodies and decor variations available as options, few Road Runners were ordered exactly alike - which makes them more interesting than ever to collectors today.
