What's your vote?

Following the lead of the Florida-based tabloid "Globe," NBC, the New York Times and other newspapers have broadcast and published the name of the woman who says she was raped at the Kennedy family compound in Palm Beach.

NBC's position was that the woman's name was well known in the Palm Beach area; the New York Times said NBC's airing removed the woman's privacy.

How do you feel about this issue?

Should the names of sexual assault victims, like those they accuse, be used in the media?

Call CITYLINE PULSE, 560-2400, then when asked for your category, press 7660 to express your opinion:

- No, rape victims should not be named without their consent.
- Yes, accusers in any major crime — including rape — should be named.
- The high profile of the parties in the Palm Beach case have created an exceptional condition, which made naming the alleged victim appropriate.

Results will be compiled through Wednesday night and published in Friday's edition of the Reporter-Telegram.

Carson signs 30th

BURBANK, Calif. — Heeere's Johnny. For at least one more year, anyway. Despite persistent rumors that America's favorite late-night host was quitting, Johnny Carson has signed on for a 30th year as star of "The Tonight Show," NBC announced Monday. "After several conversations between us, Johnny agreed to continue," NBC Entertainment Group Chairman Brandon Tartikoff said in a statement. "And I'm thrilled he's decided to celebrate his 30th anniversary year with us." NBC's announcement followed a published report earlier this year that NBC planned to replace Carson with guest host Jay Leno.

Supreme Court ponders Texas judicial elections

By Dan Freedman
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Black and Mexican-American voters in Texas must "be permitted, as Congress directed, to participate on an equal basis" in electing trial court judges, a prominent civil rights lawyer told the Supreme Court on Monday.

Julius Chambers, chief counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, argued that the Texas system of electing trial judges on a countywide basis in densely populated areas limits minority voters' "participation in the political process."

Chambers argued that the election system in nine Texas counties, including the major cities of Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Austin, Midland and Lubbock, violates Section Two of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The cases came to the Supreme Court after the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans ruled that the Voting Rights Act does not apply to judicial elections.

City considers expanding airport-board membership

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Regional interest in the newly created Permian Basin Airport Board has soared to the point where the city may more than double the number of cities represented.

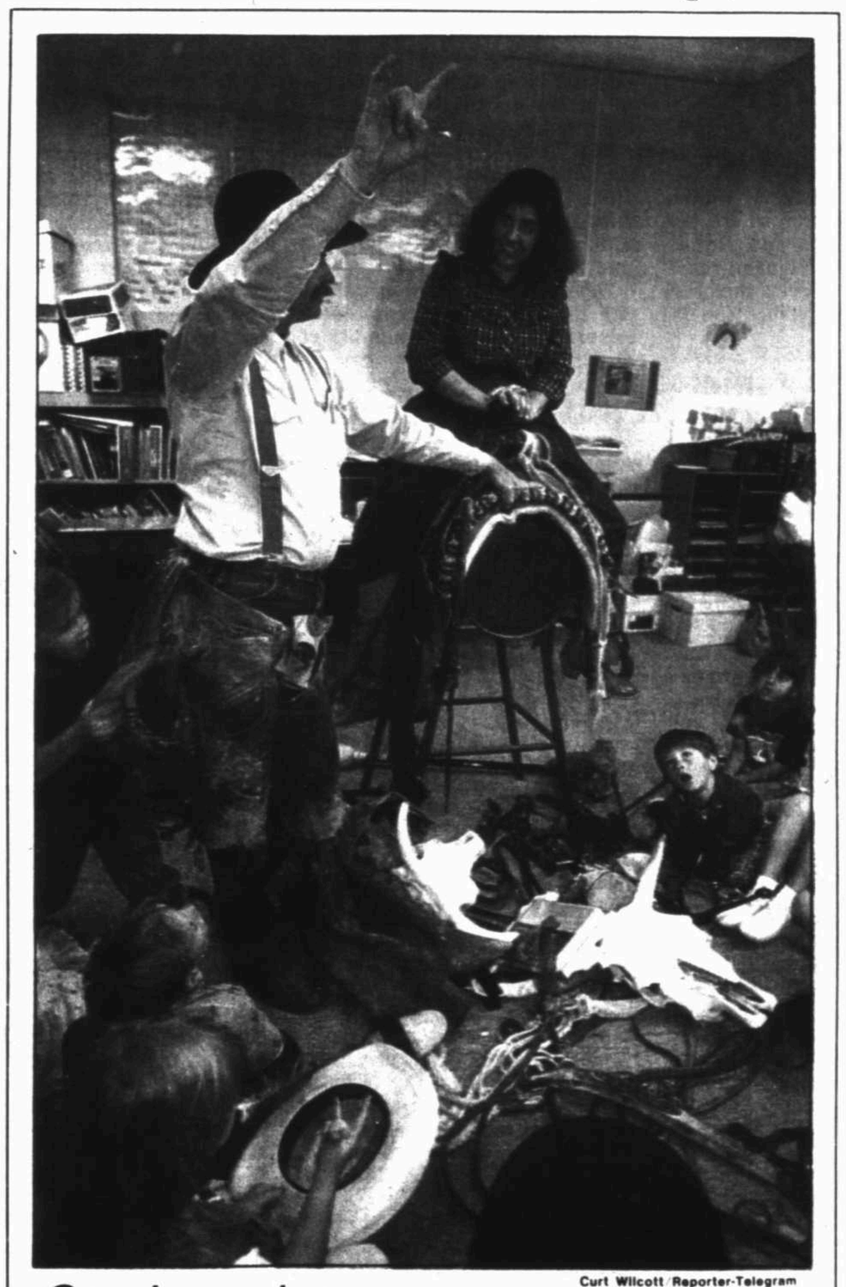

The cities of San Angelo, Abilene, Fort Stockton, Seminole, Sweetwater and Pecos, and New Mexico neighbors Carlsbad, Roswell and Artesia, each may soon be asked to name a board member.

The Midland City Council is scheduled to vote on the proposal today.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said that after the advisory board was created in February, officials from unrepresented West Texas cities expressed interest in the board.

"When we set up the board we had a hard time deciding whom we were going to put on it and whom we were going to leave off it," Thomas said. "I anticipated we would put those other cities on eventually, but I didn't think we

Appraised values post 6-year high

■ Increase is a sign that the economy has turned around, Mayor Carroll Thomas says.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Overall taxable values in Midland County appear to have made their first jump upward in six years, preliminary Midland County Appraisal District figures released Monday show.

Real estate/industrial, personal and mineral values all showed increases from last year, increasing from 0.25 percent to as high as 53.4 percent.

All six taxing entities in the county — the city, county, hospital district, and Midland and Greenwood school districts — gained value over the past year.

The county's taxable value rose from about $3.65 billion in 1990 to $3.74 billion this year, a 3.95 percent increase.

The city of Midland's value increased 2.85 percent, going from $2.53 billion to $2.56 billion.

Midland Independent School District, meanwhile, experienced a 4.13 percent increase, going from $3.29 billion to $3.38 billion.

There was a 4.04 percent increase for Midland College's taxing jurisdiction, which saw a rise to $3.6 billion from $3.51 billion.

Midland County Hospital District's value jumped from $3.67 billion to $3.77 billion, a 4.05 percent increase.

Greenwood Independent School District saw an increase of 5.82 percent, going from $167.74 million to $175.78 million.

Chief Appraiser Ron Stegall emphasized that the figures will go through a protest process and will not be finalized until the summer.

Although the final values will be lower than preliminary figures, 1991 values still are expected to show a gain from last year, Stegall said.

For example, the county overall showed a $144.11 million increase. Stegall estimated that the figure would be

Districts target 'Robin Hood' law

DALLAS (AP) — A taxpayers' revolt could result from higher levies by wealthy school districts trying to replace lost revenue, said an attorney who will file a court challenge to the state's new school finance reform law.

Bob Luna of Dallas, attorney for several mostly wealthy suburban school districts, said a petition arguing the new "Robin Hood" law is unconstitutional will be filed in an Austin court within the next 10 days.

The school-finance law approved earlier this month will transfer hundreds of millions of dollars in local property tax revenue from wealthier to poorer school districts. The law was passed in response to a Texas Supreme Court order to even out funding to school districts.

The Carrollton-Farmers Branch system voted earlier to challenge the law, Luna said. Richardson ISD leaders were to vote Monday night on a possible challenge that is also being considered by the Coppell school district.

"We would be explaining to the court that we believe that the underlying theo-

Political columnists assail UTPB plans for expansion

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A majority of the Legislature and the governor may favor expanding the University of Texas of the Permian Basin to a four-year university, but some media pundits don't think much of the idea.

Felton West of the Houston Post, the dean of Austin-based political columnists, trashed the idea in a column April 18. And the Austin American-Statesman published an editorial April 20 that called on legislators to put the UTPB bill on the back burner.

The House approved a bill April 16 sponsored by Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, to expand UTPB. The bill is expected to pass in the Senate, and proponents believe Gov. Ann Richards will sign it.

The Legislature approved a similar bill in 1989, but then-Gov. Bill Clements vetoed it.

West said the idea was an absurd effort by local legislators to bring home the bacon. He said the process had reached the unbelieveable point when legislators claimed a four-year university would cost less than a two-year school.

Proponents of the legislation contend that enlarging the school will not cost the state additional money, and that, in fact, it will save money because state funding is figured on a higher formula per student for two-year schools than for four-year.

West pointed out that the original fiscal note for the bill said it would cost more money, and that because of the

Gephardt pledges to seek $20-a-barrel oil price floor

Gephardt

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, saying the Middle East is too dangerous a place for America to rely on for so much oil, Monday pledged to seek a $20 per barrel oil price floor.

Gephardt, D-Mo., said such a floor price — maintained through fees on oil imports — would boost U.S. production and cut dependence on foreign supplies.

"If we are serious about doing everything we can so we don't have to send our troops and our ships back to the Middle East, then we've got to tackle the difficult issues," Gephardt said.

"The bottom line is simply this: if we don't exercise leadership on energy and energy policy, others in the world will."

Gephardt said he is worried about shrinking U.S. oil production, rising oil imports and wild price fluctuations that followed Iraq's invasion of Kuwait last summer, when oil briefly topped $40 per barrel.

"Eight months ago, (Iraqi dictator) Saddam Hussein reminded us again of how much our

State soaks poor, spares rich on taxes, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the tax bill comes due, a study says Texas soaks the poor, spares the rich, and forces middle-income working families to pay the lion's share of providing state services.

In an analysis released Monday by Citizens for Tax Justice, the poorest working families in Texas spend 17.1 percent of their incomes on state taxes while the richest spend just 3.1 percent. Middle-income Texans pay 8.4 percent of their earnings on sales, excise and property taxes.

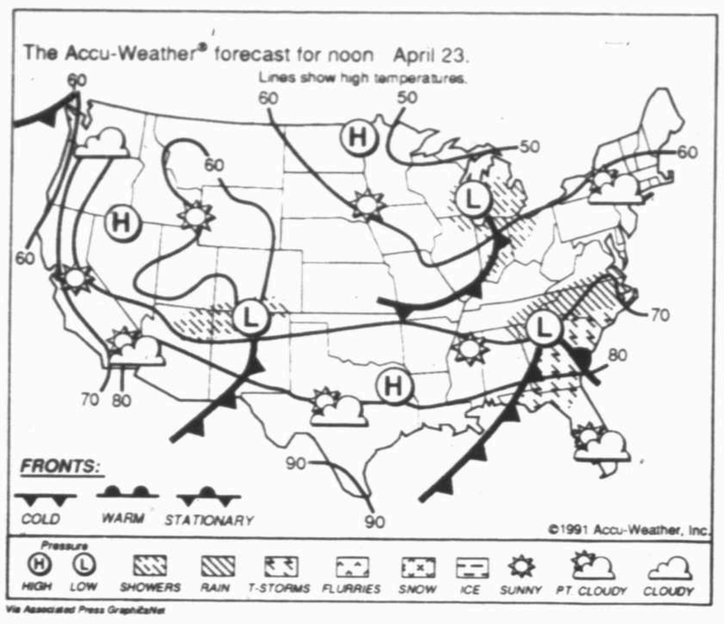

"If Texas is ever going to have enough money to fix its schools or build more prisons ... or handle basic services, it's going to have to look beyond the people with the least money. Because you can't squeeze money out of a stone when there's a whole orchard that hasn't been picked," said Bruce Fisher, the group's research director.

Another sunny try for 80

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies, a high near 80, with southeast winds 5 to 15 mph, becoming southerly 10 to 20 mph by afternoon, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be mostly fair with a low in the lower 50s and a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Wednesday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 80s.

After an overnight low of 54, Monday's high was 76 compared with the record high for that date of 100 in 1989. The record low for today's date was 37 set in 1944.

STATE

A severe thunderstorm watch remained in effect for most of North Texas Monday as clear and sunny skies prevailed over the rest of the state.

A severe thunderstorm watch was also in effect for eastern parts of South Texas.

North winds were spreading cooler and dryer air into North Texas by late afternoon keeping temperatures down mostly in the 50s and 60s. Meanwhile south winds in the Lufkin area pushed temperatures into the upper 80s.

In South Texas, skies stayed partly cloudy over most of the area as highs stayed in the 80s and 90s.

State highs ranged from 55 degrees at Texarkana to 95 degrees at Laredo.

NATION

Rain fell Monday across the southern Plains and lower Mississippi Valley, and along the upper half of the East Coast, and snow was scattered over the extreme northern Plains.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over northern Louisiana, southern Arkansas and the central half of Mississippi, and rain was scattered over north-central Texas, southeastern Kansas and southwestern Missouri.

Heaviest rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT was 1.15 inches at El Dorado, Ark., and 1.01 inch at Monroe, La.

Thunderstorms since early in the day had produced hail as big as golf balls at Elmore City, Okla., and Omaha, Texas, and one inch in diameter at Hughes Springs and Linder, Texas, the National Weather Service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

whittled down to a $100 million gain during the protest period.

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas said the increase is an encouraging sign that the economy has turned around since the financial woes of the mid-1980s.

"It's good news," Thomas said. "The figures are three times what we were expecting."

The biggest surprise was the increase in real estate/industrial property, which showed a countywide jump from $2.41 billion to $2.45 billion, a 2.07 percent rise.

"Our early information was that commercial properties were probably still declining," Thomas said.

Real estate/industrial figures for the city rose 2.03 percent, going from $2.11 billion to $2.15 billion.

Mineral values soared during the past year, growing from $12.82 million to $19.67 million, or 53.44 percent, for the city. They went from $503.73 million to $546.43 million, up 8.48 percent, for the county.

Personal property increased 6.07 percent for the city and 6.98 percent for the county. Personal property went from $402.74 million to $427.18 million for the city and $738.72 million to $790.29 million for the county.

Although the overall value increases were the first since 1985, the figures are nowhere near being the highest in Midland County history, Stegall said.

The county, worth $3.74 billion this year, was valued at $5.1 billion in 1985, the high-water mark for appraisals countywide.

This year's increases mean higher effective tax rates — the rates taxing entities can levy to generate the previous year's revenues. That means current rates will reap more revenues than they did last year because there is more value to tax.

Under the preliminary figures, MISD's effective tax rate is $1.06 per $100, while the current rate is $1.10.

For the city, which has a 64.8 cent rate, the effective rate is 64.1 cents, while the hospital district, with its current 16.6 cent rate, has a 16.2 cent effective rate.

Midland College has a 11.4 cent effective rate, compared to its current 11.6 cent rate. The county has a 17.6 cent effective rate, compared to its current 18 cent rate.

Not included in this year's appraisal figures is new construction, which will be taxed by governmental entities but is not included when figuring the year's effective tax rates.

The county overall saw $51.96 million in new construction this year, while the city had $41.81 million.

ASSAIL: Media pundits don't think much of plan estimated budget shortfall of $4.5 billion, the House Calendars Committee was not scheduling any legislation that costs money for a House vote.

But Watkins got the Legislative Budget Board to change the original fiscal note to say that it would not cost more money, ignoring a higher eduction coordinating board projection that $750,000 would be needed for conversion planning, faculty recruitment and program development.

Also, a Texas Research League study last December recommended against converting any of the state's eight upper-level two-year universitites to four-year status. It would be costly and unnecessary and would drain students from community colleges that cost the state less, the study said.

West said that the "preposterous money-saving claim" had inspired one legislator to quip: "If we can save that much money making it a four-year school, why don't we make it an eight-year school?"

West wrote: "The expansion movement is ridiculous. Texas doesn't need another four-year university. Existing ones can accommodate 25,000 students. Texas particularly does not need a full-fledged university at Odessa. Four-year Texas Tech University, Angelo State University and Sul Ross University all lie within 140 miles of there."

The Post columnist also said, "The House voted once to abolish this albatross, which was built for 4,500 students and has never come close to filling up, to save money. Unfortunately, the Senate didn't go along."

The Austin American-Statesman editorial called on the Senate to reject the House bill because it is neither necessary nor affordable.

UTPB one day might merit expansion, the editorial said, but not when the state faces a huge budget shortfall and when there is no pressing number of students banging on UTPB's doors to get in.

Rep. Watkins was unavailable for comment late Monday.

BOARD: City Council to vote on proposal today

would do it this soon.

"But after the warm response we got, we decided to go ahead and do it."

If approved by councilmen, the new representatives would join members from Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Snyder, Lamesa, Andrews, Monahams and Hobbs, N.M. There are 10 Midland representatives, three Odessa members and one member apiece for the other cities.

The board, which meets quarterly, looks for ways to improve and market Midland International Airport. The board solely acts as an adviser to airport authorities and city management.

The existing Midland Airport Planning and Development Board still is responsible for decisions such as airport hangar leases at Midland International and Midland Air Park.

Thomas said the new communities that might be represented comprise a significant number of Midland International customers.

"Abilene and San Angelo are particularly significant," he said. "A sizeable number of people will drive over from those cities to take flights west."

It is more inexpensive for Abilene and San Angelo residents to drive here and fly instead of taking commuter flights from their cities and connecting with flights at larger airports, Thomas said.

Councilman Tom Johnston said adding more members to the Permian Basin Airport Board could generate more customers from those represented areas.

"I think the more cities we can get involved the more reason for them to use the airport and the more airlines we may get in here," Johnston said. "It's going to make the airport more attractive."

However, he said that if the expansion proposal is approved today he does not foresee expanding the 28-member board further. "We've about covered everybody I can see," he said.

STUDY: Middle-income families pay lion's share percent, and only four other states have lower taxes on the wealthy than Texas, the report said.

The labor-backed lobbying organization said the problem in Texas, which it deemed one of its "Terrible 10" states, is over-reliance on regressive sales and excise taxes and the lack of a progressive, pay-by-ability income tax.

"It's soak the poor, soak the middle class, and a great big wide umbrella for the rich," Fisher said.

Fisher said an income tax is both more fair and more reliable as a source of state income because once there's a recession and spending falls, revenues also tumble. That results in cuts to state services just as unemployment lines lengthen and the need for help increases.

"They simply can't (provide services) unless the rich kick in, and in Texas, the rich aren't kicking in," Fisher said.

The study also said that while the poorest Texans have seen taxes eat a greater share of their incomes since 1985, the richest have not. The lowest 20 percent of Texas' working families paid 12.4 percent of their incomes in taxes six years ago, compared to 17.1 percent in 1991, while the rate for the richest went from 3 percent to 3.1 percent.

"Texas is like a handful of other state governments: it turns the screws on average families, while profitable corporations and rich individuals aren't being asked to do their part," said Robert S. McIntyre, director of Citizens for Tax Justice.

Andy Welch, a spokesman for the Texas comptroller's office, complained the study is biased against states without a personal income tax.

But a spokesman for Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who supports personal and corporate income taxes, said the study demonstrates the unfairness in tax structure.

Bullock's income tax proposal would allow people to deduct their property taxes from a state income tax.

TARGET: Wealthy districts consider lawsuits

ries in the bill violate the Texas Constitution, and in particular the provisions that require that money be transferred from one school district to another," Luna said.

On Sunday, more than 50 representatives from other wealthy school districts around the state met to consider what steps they will take.

H. Wayne Hendrick, Plano district superintendent, said he called the meeting at Dallas Love Field to determine how many other administrators would be interested in joining the fight.

The Plano district is considering challenging the law.

"Robin Hood is either a hero or a thief, depending on whether you're a recipient or a victim," said Earl Luna, who is Bob Luna's father and an attorney also representing several wealthy districts.

The Carrollton-Farmers Branch district will be a defendant intervenor in the school finance case before State District Judge F. Scott McCown in Austin.

Rich and poor school districts have said they are contemplating whether to challenge the new law. McCown has said he presumes the new law is constitutional but will consider any challenges.

Bob Luna said that the Texas Supreme Court, in a 1931 decision, held that no school district could be required to expend its funds on students in another district in the state.

"That case is very old, and the property-poor plaintiffs have asked the Texas Supreme Court on two occasions to overrule Love vs. City of Dallas," said Luna. "But the Supreme Court has refused to overrule that case and affirmed that it is good law in Texas.

"If it is good law — and the Supreme Court said it is — that raises serious constitutional questions," he said.

The Carrollton-Farmers Branch district will lose $14.3 million in the year beginning Sept. 1, when the funding plan goes into effect, while the Richardson system's revenue would drop by $14.4 million, he said.

In California, where Bob Luna said the trend first began to attack existing school funding systems, taxpayers revolted when wealthier districts tried to recoup money they had lost. Some tax rollbacks there have been successful.

PRICE: Gephardt calls for leadership on energy country needs an energy "policy," the House Democratic leader said.

"And for the second time in four years, our nation committed troops to the Persian Gulf. . . . The Gulf war, I think, again revealed our dependence on insecure supplies of energy."

The Missouri congressman also blamed the current economic recession, at least in part, on the oil price surge caused by Saddam's invasion.

"The nation's economy suffered substantial damage," he said. "In fact, I could argue to you today that we're in a recession in large part because of the run-up, the expectation of a run-up, in energy prices."

Gephardt said he is "cautiously optimistic" about his upcoming legislation to: set the $20 floor price for oil, strengthen federal efforts to promote energy conservation, encourage more use of alternative fuels such as natural gas, and commit the nation to a 1.5 billion barrel Strategic Petroleum Reserve to protect consumers from price shocks.

His plan was endorsed by Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Texas, and Texas Railroad Commissioner Bob Krueger.

Pickle, of Austin, said he believes congressmen from other states will keep an open mind to the idea.

"In the past, there's been a sort of mindset against doing anything that would help oil and gas," he said. "I think for the first time, Congress has begun to look at this as a national issue."

Krueger said oil imports now account for more than half the nation's foreign trade deficit and criticized President Bush's proposed energy policy as failing to lessen foreign dependence.

"The president's proposal does nothing for Texas, does nothing for independence, does nothing really in any significant way to lessen our import dependence. We need stronger vision than that," Krueger said.

Correction

In Sunday's Midland Reporter-Telegram, a line was inadvertently dropped out of a letter to the editor from Walter A. Laufer of Midland.

Laufer was explaining why he opposes some of the specific items in Midland Independent School District's Bond (MISD) Proposal 1, including a new Alternative Learning Center. He noted that MISD already has one and asked why voters should spend $1.5 million for another one.

The following line then was dropped from Laufer's letter, "The second item that really defies my imagination is the proposal for mini-gyms."

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the omission.

ELECTIONS: Activists urge scrapping of system

turned a 1989 ruling by District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland that struck down county-wide judicial elections in the nine largest Texas counties: Tarrant, Dallas, Harris, Bexar, Travis, Lubbock, Ector, Midland and Jefferson. At the time, only 15 of 172 judges elected in the nine countries were members of minorities.

The Texas system of electing judges "at large" — countywide — dilutes the ability of minority voters to choose the judges they want, Chambers said.

Renea Hicks, representing Texas Attorney General Dan Morales, countered that Congress never intended language in the Voting Rights Act to cover judicial elections.

The word "representatives" in that law does not apply to judges, Hicks argued. "The problem is not that the word 'representatives' excludes judges; it's that it doesn't include them," he said.

The high court is expected by July to decide the Texas dispute and a companion case from Louisiana, also argued before the justices on Monday.

The Louisiana case concerns that state's system of electing supreme court judges. Civil rights advocates argue that it has served to preserve an all-white bench.

If the high court rules in favor of the plaintiffs in the two cases, the opinion could have a wide impact on about 40 other states that elect all or some of their judges.

Rolando Rios, a San Antonio lawyer who filed the initial voting rights suit against Texas in 1988 on behalf of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said that of the 172 judicial seats now under challenge, only 14 are occupied by blacks or Mexican-Americans.

"If we win this case, we could end up with 60 minority judges in Texas," he told reporters on the marble courthouse steps after the arguments. "It could affect thousands of judgeships throughout the Southwest."

Questions by the justices indicated that they were wrestling with how best to square the Texas and Louisiana cases with the Voting Rights Act and their own precedents.

Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia appeared troubled that lawyers arguing for the plaintiffs did not have a standard for defining at what point a voting system dilutes the strength of minority voters so much that it becomes illegal.

"What is the test for a vote dilution claim?" O'Connor asked U.S. Solicitor General Kenneth W. Starr, who argued for the Bush administration on behalf of the black plaintiffs in the Louisiana case.

Quoting language in the Voting Rights Act, Starr replied: "Whether under the 'totality of circumstances' there is less opportunity (for minorities) to vote for candidates of their choice."

"Less than what?" Scalia asked, comparing the difficulty of determining the cut-off to the point at which beer diluted with water is no longer beer.

Starr and Chambers were careful to avoid saying they believed that the court's traditional "one-person, one-vote" test should be applied to the Texas and Louisiana cases, since the high court has stated in a previous case that it does not apply to judges. The "one-person, one-vote" doctrine stems from cases in the 1960s in which the court ruled that legislative districts should be roughly equal in population.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy worried that the Texas and Louisiana plaintiffs were asking for "proportional representation" along the lines of "one-person, one-vote."

"No," said Pamela Karlan, a University of Virginia law professor representing the Louisiana plaintiffs. She explained: "We're arguing that because of vote dilution, the black citizens of Louisiana have not been given an equal chance to participate."

Karlan said the plaintiffs "don't claim there's a right to have a black person sitting on the bench."

The justices also showed they were troubled by the arguments of lawyers representing the states of Louisiana and Texas.

"You have to put a tremendous amount of freight on the word 'representative' to say (it does not apply) to judicial elections," O'Connor said.

"I put no more freight on it than Congress intended," replied Robert G. Pugh, who represented Louisiana.

Justice Thurgood Marshall asked Hicks, the lawyer representing Texas, "Wouldn't it be easier to figure (the Voting Rights Act) applies to all votes — votes for legislator, judge or dog catcher?"

Hicks responded that members of Congress did not say they wanted judges covered. He denied an assertion by civil rights advocates that the judicial system of Texas is "the last bastion of white supremacy."

Baker meets with Kuwait firefighters

■ Secrectary of State promises officials of Texas firefighting firms to help speed up support operations.

GREATER BURGAN OIL FIELDS, Kuwait (AP) — Equipment shortages, bureaucratic delays and inadequate water supplies continue to hamper efforts to extinguish roughly 500 blazing wells in Kuwait's sabotaged oil fields, firefighters said Monday.

Crew chiefs from the three Texas companies involved in the operation detailed their problems in a private meeting with Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

"We told him things were going a little slow," said Coots Matthews of Houston-based Boots and Coots Co. "We need more equipment, more water and a little more help from the Kuwaiti government."

Kuwait's pace was "slow at best," Matthews said. He reported that Baker promised to do what he could to speed things along.

Larry Flak, coordinator of the firefighting operation, said crews had controlled 60 of the sabotaged wells, either extinguishing fires or capping those spewing unlit oil. He said the crews now were putting out fires at a rate of roughly three a day.

As of two weeks ago, one of the worst problems facing the firefighters was long delays of equipment at the Saudi Arabian border. Flak said heavy equipment now was being brought to Kuwait by ship to avoid these delays.

On April 13, then-Oil Minister Rasheed al-Amiri said the firefighting job was too big for the four companies initially signed on — Red Adair, Boots and Coots and Wild Well Control Co. of Texas, and Safety Boss of Alberta, Canada.

Amiri said teams would be recruited worldwide in an effort to put out the fires in seven months instead of the original projection of two years.

Amiri, who did not consult with the North American companies before making his announcement, was ousted when a new Cabinet was named Saturday.

Flak said the new oil minister, Hamud al-Ruqba, was a "get-along kind of guy" who promised the firefighters full support.

A Red Adair firefighter is silhouetted by a blazing well Monday while giving directions to fellow crew members working in the scorched Greater Burgan oil field.

Flak said it was likely that more teams would be added to the operation, but not until contractors hired by Kuwait to handle logistics obtained more equipment and tools arrived.

Matthews and other firefighters cited water shortages as a critical problem, although Flak said progress had been made. He said pipelines linking the Greater Burgan Oil Field with the Persian Gulf were able to fill a lagoon with 500,000 gallons in 12 hours.

Flak said "a bunch of fires" — but not all — would be out within seven months. "It will be a lot less smoky then, and a lot nicer a place to live."

Baker, wearing khaki pants and a Texas Longhorns polo shirt, visited a site where a Red Adair crew is trying to put out one of the most difficult fires.

Kuwaiti officials say the fires are burning about 6 million barrels of oil a day, a daily loss of about $120 million. But British scientists said the lost oil may actually be closer to 2 million barrels a day.

Fort Worth leaders blast report on base closure

The State

FORT WORTH (AP) — The decision to shut down Carswell Air Force Base resulted from incorrect information, said city leaders who are gearing up to fight the Pentagon's decision to close the installation.

Mayor Bob Bolen and a city consultant plan to travel to Washington in late May or early June to testify against Carswell's closing before an eight-member federal commission.

The sprawling facility was targeted along with Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin, Chase Field Naval Air Station in Beeville and others around the nation in an announcement by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

But city leaders who met Saturday to analyze Pentagon reports summarizing reasons for closing Carswell said the documents include some incorrect information and conclusions that don't make sense.

"For example, they continue to rank us low in airspace availability, but we have written verification from the FAA (Federal Aviation Administration) that we have more than adequate space," said the city consultant, James Toal.

He said flights at the base conflict with Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport "only at very infrequent times."

At Saturday's private meeting in City Hall were U.S. Reps. Pete Geren and Joe Barton, Bolen, Chamber of Commerce President Terry Ryan, ex-City Manager Bob Herchert, City Councilwoman Kay Granger and several retired military officials.

The plan to save Carswell includes more than 30 specific points that officials said can be summarized under four basic arguments:

—The Carswell base should be saved even under the Pentagon's own scoring system for comparing bases;

—Important factors were overlooked in assessing its military importance;

—Military officials didn't weigh the base's future military value; and —Potential net value of selling the base was incorrectly calculated by federal officials.

Detailed findings based on eight main factors and up to 80 lesser points, virtually all of which weigh the base's military and strategic value, are included in the Pentagon's recommendation.

Seige ends with hostages' release

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — At least two gunmen burst into a food store Monday, taking seven people hostage and firing more than a dozen shots during an attempted robbery, police said.

None of the hostages, four of whom escaped during the siege, were injured, authorities said. The other three were released by the gunmen approximately an hour after the robbery.

Police, who believed one or more assailants remained inside Wichita Supermarket, used a "thunderstrip," a type of detonator to blow the store's front door open. About 20 SWAT officers then began entering the building shortly after 3 p.m. CDT.

Fort Worth Police Lt. David Ellis said a listening device used by police earlier had determined no movement inside the store.

"There's a point where you just have to do something," Ellis said.

About 20 shots were fired after two men armed with automatic weapons forced the store owner to open the safe about 11 a.m., Ellis said.

"Our main concern is that we cannot locate one employee, who may still be held there," Ellis said. "We are concerned that he may be held as a hostage."

The store owner and his brother escaped soon after the robbery, firing shots in the air to attract attention, Ellis said. An hour after the siege began, three customers were permitted to leave the store with their hands up.

Witnesses said shooting erupted as customers fled the store. Employees across the street, hearing the rapid gunfire, notified authorities.

Texas lawmaker wants free condoms for college students

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill requiring public colleges and universities to distribute condoms to students that want them was at the center of a heated debate Monday.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said making condoms more accessible would help prevent the spread of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases, and reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies.

Health and family planning officials supported the measure, but a number of people opposed it, saying that handing out free condoms promoted sexual activity.

The bill was sent to a subcommittee of the House Public Health Committee.

Susan Carter of Austin said that "condom purveyors" were trying to "stir up sexual activity" among young people through the bill.

"Teaching them the use of condoms is simply enticing them to promiscuity," said David Muralt of Austin.

He quoted the Bible as he criticized "fornicators," adding, "Let's teach the kids you have to save sex for marriage. Please don't make us as Christians subsidize sin."

Wilson responded by saying the Bible teaches against judging people. He also said distributing condoms to those asking for them does not encourage sexual activity. "We're talking about adults. They can vote, they can go to war. There is some degree of sexual intimacy on college campuses these days," he said.

Others opposed the state footing the bill, saying that if college students want condoms they can buy them, or get them free from Planned Parenthood.

■ White House moves to limit grant charges

WASHINGTON — The White House moved Monday to stop universities from charging the government for what it called inappropriate expenses — like yachts, flowers and country club fees — when the universities receive federal research grants.

An administration official said that in the next few weeks, the budget office will propose a limit on the percentage of a grant that may be used for costs indirectly related to research, like building space, utilities and administrative costs. The proposal has been advocated in Congress and among many university associations.

The director of the Office of Management and Budget, Richard G. Darman, issued a list of expenses that could not be counted as overhead and charged to the government. The list includes charges for parties and liquor, housing or furnishings for university officials, goods or services for the personal use of university officials like limousines and yachts, advertising and promotion of the university and certain legal defense costs.

■ Director, agents meet on bias with FBI

WASHINGTON — William S. Sessions, director of the FBI, has summoned the top agents from the bureau's 56 offices around the country to headquarters to discuss discrimination in the agency, law-enforcement officials said Monday.

The unusual meeting of the FBI's special agents in charge is scheduled for Wednesday. It comes two weeks after Sessions met with more than 200 black agents in an effort to head off a threatened lawsuit over discrimination in recruitment, hiring and promotions in the FBI.

In a statement Monday, FBI officials said the daylong conference would center on "certain personnel policies and practices, equal employment opportunity initiatives and concerns expressed by employees in these areas."

■ Report: Birth control safer, healthier

WASHINGTON — Contrary to popular opinion, using birth control is safer and healthier than not using it, according to a report released Monday. "The average woman who has ever used the pill is less likely to get cancer and die as a result before age 55 than a woman who has never used the pill," the report said.

When the risk of death is set against deaths prevented, using contraception, including the pill, saves 120 to 150 lives per 100,000 women, the report said. Contraception also prevents about 1,500 hospitalizations per 100,000 women per year, it said.

Figures published Monday by the Alan Guttmacher Institute indicate that on balance the protective effects of contraception — including prevention of at least two kinds of cancer, endometriosis, pelvic inflammatory disease and, of course, the health hazards of pregnancy — far outweigh the danger of its side effects.

GREENVILLE, S.C. — In a settlement announced on Monday, students at James F. Byrnes High School who were suspended for wearing Confederate flags to school, won the right to wear the flags after May 31.

The judge who was hearing the case in federal district court here warned the students that he did not want the issue in his courtroom again. Judge G. Ross Anderson Jr. told about 30 parents and students of the school in nearby Duncan that he believed the issue should have been settled in the schoolroom. Anderson also said he would have had no difficulty ruling in the school district's favor if the parties had not worked out a settlement.

Last month Byrnes High officials suspended more than 100 students, some for as long as 10 days, after they began wearing the Confederate battle flag to school. Acting under a 20-year-old policy initiated in the early days of desegregation, the officials said the flag created racial tension by offending blacks at the school, about a quarter of the 1,250 students.

High court to hear porn case

Justices to review undercover sting operations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to hear the appeal of a Nebraska farmer convicted of receiving government-mailed "kid porn," setting up a key test of undercover sting operations.

The justices said they will decide whether Keith Jacobson unlawfully was entrapped by Postal Service investigators who, posing as pornographers, repeatedly mailed him offers until he accepted one.

A decision is expected sometime in 1992.

Lawyers for Jacobson, 57, said his rights were violated because he was targeted by the undercover investigation even though government agents had no reason to believe he had committed, or was likely to commit, a crime.

In the Postal Service sting case, Jacobson was convicted of receiving in 1987 a copy of a magazine called "Boys Who Love Boys."

Jacobson, who lives near Newman Grove, Neb., was sentenced to two years' probation and 250 hours of community service.

Police found Jacobson's name on a San Diego, Calif., pornography bookstore's mailing list in 1984. He had lawfully ordered two nudist magazines and a brochure from the store.

Over the next 29 months, undercover postal inspectors repeatedly solicited Jacobson through the mail to buy illegal pornography.

A three-judge panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw out, by a 2-1 vote, Jacobson's conviction in January 1990. But the entire 8th Circuit court, voting 8-2, reinstated it nine months later.

"The Constitution does not require reasonable suspicion of wrongdoing before the government can begin an undercover investigation," the appeals court said.

NASA pushes ahead with its 1st open flight

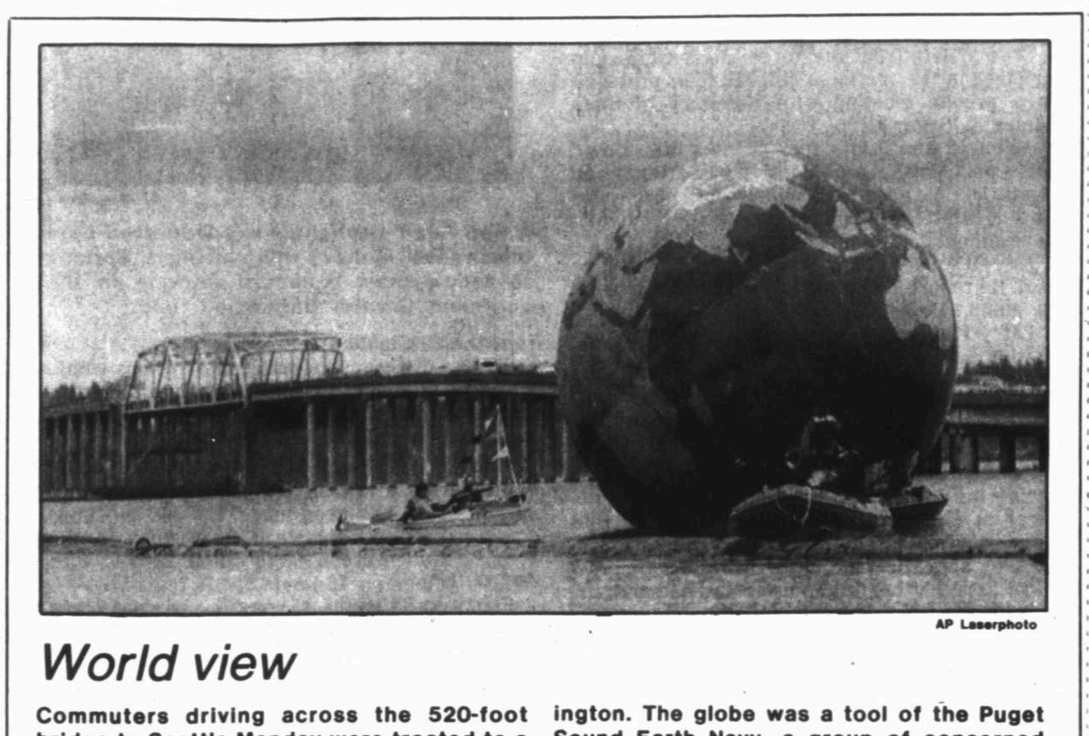

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The secret is out — there are no secrets about space shuttle Discovery's planned launch today for a military mission. And money's the reason.

NASA, hoping for a break in weather, pushed ahead for this morning's launch of Discovery with seven astronauts and a Pentagon cargo worth more than $260 million. Discovery was scheduled to blast off at 6:05 a.m. CDT.

Shuttle weather officers put the chance of liftoff today at 50-50.

It is the first Defense Department mission in shuttle history open to public scrutiny.

The Pentagon expects to save $80 million a year by lifting secrecy around military shuttle flights. Much of the saving reflects the cost of secure computers and coding devices used on the secret missions.

Moynihan resurrects Social Security pay-as-you-go plan

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The budget gospel, according to Daniel Patrick Moynihan, includes the commandment: "Thou shalt not purloin pension funds."

And so, the Democratic senator from New York is resurrecting the plan he first introduced last year to put the Social Security system on a pay-as-you-go basis, and reduce the federal payroll tax that pays for the system.

With the White House and key members of Congress opposing him — namely, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen and House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski — Moynihan could end up a voice in the wilderness.

Nonetheless, Moynihan's proposal is likely to be one of the most controversial and widely debated issues in Congress because of the political fire storm that any attempt to change Social Security can trigger.

Moynihan plans to introduce his proposal in the Senate on Tuesday, but no sooner had he disclosed his intentions Monday than he and the White House provided an example of just how volatile Social Security proposals can be.

The senator accused the White House of using "scare tactics" to rally senior citizen organizations against his bill. He was angered at the White House suggestion that his plan would take money out of the Social Security system and force a reduction in benefits.

■ India's prime minister talks with Sikhs

NEW DELHI, India — In an effort to attract Sikh militants to the Indian mainstream and win their participation in general elections this year, Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar has held talks with top militant leaders fighting for an independent nation and authorized the release of many Sikh detainees, the government said on Monday.

"The prime minister held two rounds of talks with the militants on April 17 and 19 in New Delhi, and the governor of Punjab held another round with them on April 20," a government spokesman said. He said the prime minister had agreed to meet some of their major demands.

It is not known whether the militants were representative of the Sikh militant movement or whether they were breaking away from hardline factions. There was no statement from their side about abandoning their demand for a separate nation, but it appeared that they were likely to take part in voting in the election for the state legislature and the national Parliament.

■ Senators urge Bush to send arms treaty

WASHINGTON — Hoping to force the Soviet military to break a stalemate that is delaying the next superpower summit meeting, the three senior members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee urged President Bush on Monday to send a treaty reducing non-nuclear arms in Europe to the Senate as soon as possible.

Sens. Claiborne Pell, the committee chairman; Joseph R. Biden, the second-ranking Democrat; and Jesse A. Helms, the senior Republican — an unusual alliance — said in a letter to Secretary of State James A. Baker III that they would press for swift Senate approval of the treaty with only one condition designed to prevent Soviet cheating on the provisions of the accord.

The United States has accused the Soviet military of evading counting rules embodied in the treaty by reclassifying some weapons, and there has been a widespread belief that the treaty was doomed to rejection by the Senate because of that.

■ Greeks: Palestinian carried fatal bomb

ATHENS, Greece — The Greek police said on Monday that a young Palestinian was responsible for the bomb explosion on Friday in the southern port city of Patras. They said the device, containing about 25 pounds of explosives, blew up prematurely while he was carrying it, killing him and six other people.

The terrorist incident, which left eight persons wounded, was the worst in Greece in the last three years.

The police in Patras, 112 miles east of here, identified the dead Palestinian as Ahmed Hashaykeh, a 26-year-old student with a Jordanian passport. He was identified through the tattered remains of his identification papers. The authorities said a search of Hashaykeh's apartment revealed wires and other items that could be used for the construction of home-made bombs. A known associate of his is being sought, they said.

■ Salvadorans drop discussion of truce

MEXICO CITY — In a setback to chances for a negotiated settlement, representatives of the Salvadoran government and its major guerrilla adversaries have failed to reach agreement on the conditions of a cease-fire and have agreed to remove the issue from current negotiations, diplomats close to the talks said on Monday.

The decision came after the two sides, which have been meeting here for nearly three weeks, failed to agree on proposed changes in existing procedures for amending the Salvadoran constitution.

Those changes, which had been bitterly opposed by the Salvadoran political right, were proposed by rebel leaders as a minimum condition for a cease-fire.

■ Kuwait prevents opposition news briefing

KUWAIT CITY — On the day Secretary of State James A. Baker III visited here to evaluate Kuwait's progress toward democracy and rebuilding the country, the government moved forcefully to halt an attempt by opposition groups to denounce the country's new Cabinet.

The groups intended to meet with foreign journalists on Monday to declare that the Cabinet appointed on Saturday was simply a shuffling of ministers, almost all of them members of the ruling Sabah family, whom the opposition blames for the crisis leading up to the Iraqi invasion of Aug. 2.

On Monday morning, about two dozen opposition figures gathered in the goverment-owned Kuwait International Hotel to speak at a scheduled news conference. Some time during the night, however, someone had gone through the hotel, the center for most of the international press corps, removing printed announcements of the briefing, which had been posted throughout the building.

U.S. faces Kurds' mistrust

AP Laserphoto

A young Kurdish girl, standing next to her mother, holds a piece of bread in their temporary home in an Iraqi village.

ZAKHO, Iraq (NYT) — Five local Kurdish guerrilla leaders spent two hours on Monday touring the burgeoning but still vacant tent city that American Marines are building for refugees in a huge wheat field just a mile east of town.

U.S. relief officials appear to be having trouble convincing guerrilla leaders and clan chiefs that it is safe for the Iraqi Kurds who fled to the mountains along the border with Turkey to return to their homes.

Almost all the refugees interviewed in the dreary mountain encampments to the north express deep mistrust of President Saddam Hussein's government, and a vast majority vow that they will never return to an Iraq ruled by Saddam.

But the American officials say they hope to arrange security that will be sufficient to reassure them.

Hundreds of threatening-looking Iraqi men dressed in khaki police uniforms and toting automatic weapons strolled through the dusty, littered streets of Zakho on Monday, defying a demand by the American military that all Iraqi armed forces withdraw beyond a point about 20 miles south of here.

The continued presence of so many armed Iraqis will pose a serious obstacle to the efforts to lure home the half-million refugees who fled Zakho and hundreds of other towns and villages for the mountains when Saddam used military force to crush a revolt by the Kurds after the Persian Gulf war.

The armed men reportedly arrived in Zakho on Sunday, just after contingents of the Iraqi army left the nearly abandoned town in compliance with the U.S. withdrawal demand, which was delivered on Friday.

Baghdad has called the American effort to resettle and protect the refugees a gross violation of Iraqi sovereignty.

A U.S. military spokesman said on Monday night that the American relief program's leaders were generally pleased with Iraq's response to the withdrawal demand and were still evaluating the presence of the armed Iraqis in Zakho.

But a relief worker connected with the American military aid effort said that Iraqi military officers had been told on Monday morning to get the men out of the town. He did not say whether the United States had set a deadline by which the armed Iraqis must leave the town, a hardscrabble sprawl of cinderblock.

The American relief operation's leaders are hoping to first coax the displaced Kurds on the Iraqi side of the border into returning home or moving into the tent city.

Soviet premier warns of 'social explosion'

MOSCOW (AP) — Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov warned Monday that a "social explosion" could occur and millions of people lose their jobs unless the country agrees on an emergency program to halt economic decline.

Pavlov said industrial production will plummet if debilitating strikes continue, state contracts are not met and the government fails to adopt an economic plan.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev told reporters on Red Square that he expected "serious proposals" and criticism of the program at a pivotal Communist Party Central Committee meeting Wednesday.

"Comrades have made comments like, 'Isn't it too much of a turn toward liberalization of the economy, toward capitalization? And what will the consequences be?'" he said after laying a wreath at Vladimir Lenin's mausoleum on the 121st anniversary of the Soviet founder's birth.

Making matters worse, more than 3,000 Siberian gold miners held a one-day warning strike Monday in Magadan and Chukotka, according to the Tass and Postfactum news services.

The gold miners expressed solidarity with hundreds of thousands of striking coal miners, who stopped work March 1 and are demanding Gorbachev's resignation and wage indexation to compensate for inflation.

Gorbachev has refused to step down. He urged strikers to put aside personal grudges and work together for "the fatherland, state, country and condition of the people."

Pavlov described the dire state of the economy in presenting the latest attempts to cure it. "The situation in the country can only be characterized as a general crisis."

He told the Supreme Soviet legislature "the number of unemployed may reach 18 million and a social explosion could erupt before the year is out" and that industrial output will drop 20 percent if the program is not adopted.

First-quarter figures already showed the Soviet equivalent of the gross national product fell 8 percent and labor productivity 9 percent, compared with the same period a year ago.

But Pavlov warned against a rapid shift to a free-market system.

If the country decides to switch quickly from a centrally planned to a free-market economy, production and incomes will fall more than 30 percent and 30 million people will lose their jobs, Pavlov said. He warned of "mass factory shutdowns, wild price hikes and the impoverishment of most people."

The most controversial point in the plan is the sale of some state-owned businesses to private groups or individuals. Two-thirds of small businesses in the service and consumer sectors would be denationalized by the end of 1992.

He advised a third, gradual course, which would include denationalization, promotion of commercial credits, improvement of the tax structure and encouragement of foreign investment to avert collapse.

Many of the 15 Soviet republics have balked at Gorbachev's economic reforms, saying they encroach on their sovereignty and are half-measures.

Gorbachev sat nearby but did not speak to legislators.

Quake hits Costa Rica; 20 die, scores missing

LIMON, Costa Rica (NYT) — A powerful earthquake struck Costa Rica Monday, with the brunt of its force felt in this coastal city.

Up to 20 people were reported killed and scores were missing, while three more deaths were reported in neighboring Panama.

Some radio reports said as many as 15 people were killed in Limon, while a local red cross worker was quoted as saying as many as 1,000 people were injured.

Buildings swayed, trees shook, crying children hugged one another and women dropped to their knees in the streets and prayed. Electric power lines fell and water pipes burst as the quake struck the city at 3:57 p.m., sendng most of its 30,000 residents fleeing into the streets.

In the downtown area, two three-story hotels collapsed, trapping an unknown number of people inside. Other buildings were left partially destroyed or stood askew, threatening to fall as more than a dozen aftershocks hit the city, unnerving the survivors.

The quake, which lasted for 35 seconds, measured 7.2 on the Richter scale at the National Universty in San Jose.

Delaying tactics bumped by court

An inmate on Death Row should be afforded every reasonable opportunity to challenge judicial errors that may have led to an improper verdict. But that principle has been hopelessly distorted by drawn-out death penalty appeals.

Thus the U.S. Supreme Court deserves credit for recently restoring balance to the appeals process by barring convicted murderers and other prisoners from endlessly challenging their convictions and sentences.

In the average death penalty case, there now is a lag of more than eight years from the imposition of the sentence until it is carried out.

This is unfair to victims' families and the public, and mocks Americans' fundamental sense of justice. A key reason for the chronic delays is abuse of a legal procedure known as habeas corpus, which was intended to protect inmates from arbitrary punishment.

In a habeas corpus petition, a prisoner challenges the constitutionality of his conviction or sentence. The law that permits federal courts to hear these petitions from state prison inmates sets no limit on the number of habeas corpus petitions that each inmate can file, or on the length of the filing period.

Activist lawyers admit to papering courthouse walls with habeas corpus petitions in hopes of bogging down the system. Appeals head first to the state courts, then through the federal system, then down and back in a seemingly interminable process. Frequently, old issues are rehashed repeatedly or new ones raised that should have been raised years earlier. In the meantime, justice gets siderailed while advocates of banning the death penalty carry out their campaign in the interest of "humanitarian concerns," as those opposing the penalty did recently in Austin.

But in a 6-3 ruling involving an inmate on Georgia's Death Row, the Supreme Court has set a legal standard that should significantly curtail such abuses.

Under the ruling, when an inmate files a second habeas corpus petition in federal court, the prosecutor must document which legal claims are being raised for the first time. The prisoner then must provide good reasons why the issues weren't raised in the first habeas corpus petition. The prisoner also must show that his case actually was prejudiced by the alleged violations.

The new standard still allows prisoners to challenge the constitutionality of actions by police, lawyers or judges. But several years worth of delaying tactics will be more difficult to pull off. That will be an improvement.

As Justice Anthony Kennedy wrote for the majority: "Perpetual disrespect for the finality of convictions disparages the entire criminal justice system."

Product liability law needs work

Not long ago, a sporting goods store in Austin was approached by a customer wanting to purchase a boxing helmet. Not having the desired product, the owner provided the customer a catalog that offered the helmets and suggested that he place an order.

The customer did, the helmets proved defective, and an injury occurred. The customer sued every party in the chain — the manufacturer, the distributor and the sporting goods store that sold nothing.

The result was that the deepest insurance pockets belonged to the sporting goods store, which was hit with a $3 million judgment.

That, Mr. and Mrs. Texas, is what the state's product liability laws are all about. They are little more than a key to the deepest pockets around, no matter how innocent or far removed from negligence they may have been.

This session of the Texas Legislature, as with many past sessions, a battle is raging to amend these laws to preserve the right to compensation for truly injured parties, but that injects fairness and predictability for those in the product chain. The reform bill, previously passed by the Texas House, will be taken up today (April 18) in the Senate Economic Development Committee, chaired by Sen. Temple Dickson, D-Sweetwater.

Sen. Dickson, a plaintiff's lawyer, is not friendly to the legislation but is noted as a honest and fair lawmaker who is unlikely to use his power to bury the bill. Still, enactment of reforms this session is considered a long shot.

The reform effort does not gut product liability protections. The law simply would bring common sense into the system with such provisions as:

- Requiring proof of a real manufacturing or design flaw that made the product unreasonably dangerous.
- Relieving a manufacturer from liability if a product design cannot be made safer under current state-of-the-art technology.
- Allowing products that meet established government safety standards to be exempt from suit.
- Removing from the chain of liability retailers and others who could not reasonably be expected to test every product.
- Requiring that the risk associated with a product must be greater than the personal and social utility of a product.

Too many manufacturers have determined not to bring products to market, decisions that cost Texans jobs, because of capricious product liability laws.

Havel, '60s rock 'n' roll united Czechs

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — You may say he's a dreamer, but President Vaclav Havel is not the only one in Czechoslovakia.

Imagine a revolution that was kept alive by rock 'n' roll. Havel, the first democratically elected president here in 40 years, describes music as the candle that kept freedom-loving hopes alive for the last decade.

Anderson

Imagine a playwright-president who still spouts '60s "hippie" rhetoric as if caught in a time warp, talking about love, peace and happiness, signing his name with a heart as the final flourish, riding around on a scooter through the old castle that serves as government offices, wearing a Mexican Indian talisman on his wrist to give him more energy, and decking the back window of his presidential limo with a ring of pink hearts.

Imagine a place that overthrew Lenin with the help of Lennon. That is Prague and its president today, still asking the question of the old John Lennon song, "Imagine" — "I hope someday you'll join us, and the world will live as one ..."

The lyrics are written in large graffiti on what is known as "The Lennon Wall" at the bottom of the hill from the Hradcany Castle where Havel works. The wall of protest and pop began not long after Lennon was murdered in 1980. It would become as critical to the underground anti-communist revolution as poster art in Poland and graffiti in the People's Republic of China. The wall was to be whitewashed by authorities regularly, but new portraits of Lennon and a variety of revolutionary sayings or '60s lyrics would reappear.

During our lengthy interview with Havel, he became the most animated when discussing his favorite music and what it meant to his people. The music became important during the darkness that followed the brief period of reform known as "Prague Spring" in 1968.

"After 1968 in this country followed a period of darkness, and all the music had to go underground," Havel said. "Rock bands like the Plastic People of the Universe had to go underground and also use pseudonyms." It was the arrest and trial of the Plastic People rock band (named from a song by American rocker Frank Zappa) that mobilized Havel and others in 1977 to write "Charter '77," a document signed by intellectuals calling for new freedom from the communists.

In the 1970s, "the forbidden music brought us together — a very broad spectrum of people who were united by the spirit of resistance. And music, thus, became resistance. It was the little candle in a dark forest that gradually became a torch."

It was no accident that Havel later called the overthrow of communism, the "Velvet Revolution," in remembrance of American rocker Lou Reed and his '60s band, the Velvet Underground.

Havel acknowledged that the '60s spirit is still strongly felt in Prague because, "It was not only the music that was so important, it was the whole spiritual climate of the '60s that influenced the modern history of Czechoslovakia."

Now that Havel has come of age and is heading a country, his difficult transition period cannot afford to have too much of the rebellious spirit in its music. "The '60s were marked by the idea of non-conformism, by the idea of destruction rather than construction. We cannot really afford any more destruction," Havel said. "We have a much harder task, and that is to build something. So what you are seeing is not merely a revival of the '60s, it is a revival of the '60s plus this need to build, to construct, to start anew."

CHARLEY REESE

Entertainment, news media out of touch

Ninety percent of all Americans identify themselves as religious and 86.5 percent identify themselves as Christians. What does this prove? It proves once again how out of touch much of the entertainment and news media is with mainstream America.

Reese

The figures come from a new survey of 113,000 households commissioned by the Graduate School of the City University of New York. It's considered quite reputable and sound, with a very small margin of error.

As a rule, attending movies, watching television, and reading newspapers and newsmagazines, a reasonable person would conclude that religion was very much in decline in America and was not a significant factor in most people's lives.

There is rarely a story line in movies and television these days that touches on religion, except for an occasional child-molesting priest or crooked TV evangelist. Most news organizations devote more attention to ice hockey or geology than to religion.

On the other hand, when I was a child, I saw so many movies in which Pat O'Brien and Spencer Tracy played priests that I was shocked the first time I ever met a real priest because he wasn't Irish.

This new poll, as a matter of fact, shatters one myth. Most Americans of Irish descent are not Catholic, but Protestant. The big Catholic states are Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Louisiana and New Jersey — no real surprises there. The Baptists dominate Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia.

Another interesting finding was that only 28,000 people — statistically insignificant — are professed believers in what is called the New Age Movement, a sort of blend of mysticism and holistic health. From the amount of energy and ink some Christians devote to what they perceive as a New Age threat, you'd think there were millions.

The national breakdown by religion finds that 26 percent of Americans are Catholics; 19 percent, Baptists; 8 percent, Methodist; 5 percent Lutheran; 2 percent, Jewish; 8 percent, no religion; and the rest scattered among other denominations and religions.

Odd, but the states with the highest percent of people professing agnosticism or atheism are all out west — Oregon, Washington, Wyoming, California and Arizona. The survey found there are 1.4 million Muslims, 1 million Buddhists, and 500,000 Hindus.

The difference between the religious estimates of Jews and Muslims and the population estimates of Jews and Arab-Americans is accounted for by the fact that not all Jews identify themselves religiously and large numbers of Arab-Americans are Christian.

The general absence of religion in the media is probably a result of several factors. For one thing, an earlier survey of media elite found a large majority who had been a long time out of church and synagogue. Nonbelievers tend to be disdainful of religion or at least to consider it unimportant and unworthy of attention.

Moreover in terms of those with a national audience, there is really only a tiny percentage of the population involved in the creative end of television and motion picture production. Creative people cannot help but reflect their own world view in their work.

Finally, since the 1960s, there has been an obsessive concern about keeping religion totally out of public events. Under a specious interpretation of the First Amendment, if a small town football coach says a prayer before a game, he is threatening the Republic with a new inquisition. Since too much of media coverage is politics and government, this attitude gets reflected.

The survey shows, however, that people have more sense than writers and politicians and ACLU lawyers. The old saying is there are no atheists in foxholes. In fact, every human being is in a foxhole.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Dallas 'stoned' by anti-American film maker

Oliver Stone, America's favorite anti-American film maker, has downtown Dallas traffic tied up while he recreates the Kennedy assassination for an upcoming flick.

Murchison

Why not? The Kennedy assassination has tied up Dallas for 28 years — hog-tied, hamstrung, bollixed and bumfuzzled it.

Not one but two murders occurred at the Triple Underpass. First, a president was slain. Afterward, a whole community was assassinated. Dallas was perversely traditional. Well, liberal America would show Dallas. Bend over, the city was commanded. It bent. And still bends.

Prior to the moment Lee Harvey Oswald — or whatever rich Texans Oliver Stone decides to blame — drew a bead on the Kennedy motorcade. Dallas sailed along, supremely confident. The city thrived; it flourished. It was firmly but wisely led — by what has been styled, retrospectively, a conservative business oligarchy.

The "oligarchy" was the reverse of selfish; it was generous and public-spirited. Its members weren't demographically "representative," and what did that have to do with the price of eggs?

Dallas, in 1963, was awash in old-time religion and flag-waving patriotism — commodities generally suspect among enlightened liberals.

City government didn't do much of anything, except provide good streets and preserve public peace. Dallas, to prevent entanglement with Washington, wouldn't even accept federal aid. Schools were orderly and first-rate. Racial problems were negligible, at least by modern standards.

The city of Dallas bore no guilt whatever for the act of an alien loner. Nonetheless, unforgiving liberals, who despised in their guts the values of the city, created the "climate of hate" legend — the imputation that right-wing extremism had felled the president. The Dallas Morning News came in for maniacal, wholly undeserved abuse. Why, the editorial page had exercised its constitutional right to dissent from the slain president's policies. Shame, shame!

The anti-Dallas campaign was bilge and buncombe, but it had its predictable effect. Dallas, properly shocked by the Kennedy killing, improperly lost its nerve, grew ashamed of what it believed in, tried to please by changing.

Oh, kindly stop saying bad things about us! we cried. We'll do anything. And we did. We accepted our critics' estimate of us, came gradually to agree that we were, as charged, too exclusivist, elitist, racist, right-wing-nutty, and all the rest of it.

The "oligarchy" is gone now, too embarrassed to continue. We are governed today by a mouth-ocracy: Whoever mouths the loudest, and most bitterly, sets the civic agenda.

Civic leaders are pathologically afraid of offending self-styled victims of racial or sexual "oppression." No one would dare assert that government by the honest and civic-spirited has more to commend it than does government by the "politically correct."

City council meetings sometimes resemble circuses, the council itself operates perennially in the red — despite glomming onto every available federal dollar — and a federal judge runs the public schools. White middle-class citizens are packing up, heading for the suburbs.

How prescient of us, I guess you might say. We beat the rest of the country on its present guilt trip. Across America, the tendency is to beg forgiveness for past achievements that turn out, on microscopic inspection, to be sins — the discovery of America, the conquest of the West, the imposition of European cultural norms on society and education. Dallas has seen it all, thanks. It started in '63.

Oliver Stone's traffic jams are the abasement we deserve. He gets to block traffic and insult the whole city in his movie because, well, he's a big man, and we wouldn't want such a man thinking ill of Dallas, would we? How tame, how servile and cringing is the spirit of the Old West. How servile and cringing is the spirit of Western civilization in general, if you want the truth.

Cattle dispute haunts Matagorda Island

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press writer

MATAGORDA ISLAND, Texas — Gulf waves roll onto the secluded beaches of this barrier island, depositing perfectly shaped seashells and an occasional jellyfish or turtle.

Whooping cranes linger majestically around the island's bayside marshes resting for their long journey back to Canada for the summer.

All appears serene on this 38-mile strip of land off the Texas coast.

But deceivingly peaceful Matagorda Island is at the center of a turbulent storm that shows no signs of slacking.

"It's a traumatic event, I'll tell you for sure," said 70-year-old Joe Hawes, a leading figure in the tempest shrouding the island, part of the federal Aransas National Wildlife Refuge.

The feud pits Hawes' family cattle business against the refuge.

The Haweses' cattle have lived on the island most of the past 150 years, but Brent Giezentanner, the Aransas refuge manager with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, last year ruled cattle grazing is incompatible with the refuge and its plant and animal life.

When a new state-federal five-year management plan for the island was developed in 1990 suspending grazing, Giezentanner, the refuge manager for more than three years, refused to issue Hawes Cattle Co. another one-year grazing permit.

TO HAWES, whose ancestors settled on the island in the mid-1800s and started raising cattle, the decision doesn't make sense.

Now, after unsuccessfully appealing the ruling up through the Department of the Interior, Hawes faces a final July 7 deadline to remove the animals.

"We're not going to give up," said Hawes, who wouldn't discuss his next strategy. "It would be different if right was on their side, but it's not."

The Haweses and two other families surrendered their Matagorda Island property in 1940 when the federal government condemned it for use as a military bombing and gunnery range.

The families later were paid $7 per acre, more than the market value at the time. Hawes and his relatives, who retained their oil and mineral rights, contend they were told by military officials they could regain their approximately 7,800 acres after the military was finished with it.

Fish and Wildlife officials, who have overseen much of the island with the state of Texas since the military relinquished it in the 1970s, said there's no evidence that promise was made to the Haweses.

There is no legal contract on the matter.

The Hawes cattle have been on the island continuously since after World War II, as guests of the government. Hawes said the herd now numbers about 525.

THE HAWESES' GRAZING permit allows 583 grown cattle; Giezentanner says there are additional younger cows in the herd.

Joe Hawes said he and his family refuse to accept the cattle grazing ban. "It's hard to just abandon your heritage," he said.

But Giezentanner maintains the decision is firm.

"We're not going to change our minds on it. We've given our final word," Giezentanner said. "It's a wildlife refuge — whether the Haweses like it or not."

Giezentanner, who holds a masters degree in wildlife management, contends cattle eat up island vegetation needed by birds and insects, a crucial part of the natural food chain.

Giezentanner also argues:

■ Cattle eat and trample vegetation that help form sand dunes, which protect the island from erosion and storm damage.

■ Cattle drink fresh water needed by wild animals and urinate and defecate in island ponds.

■ Controlled burning could be used instead of grazing to clear undesirable brush.

■ A Hawes cow was found to have brucellosis, a disease that possibly could infect the island's deer population.

■ Fences used for cattle could pose flight hazards to the approximately 145 whooping cranes that winter on another part of the island.

Hawes, who considers himself an environmentalist, disputes those claims.

"HE'S WRONG," the rancher said. "You can slant a picture on Matagorda Island any way you want."

Hawes contends:

—Cows have lived on the island 150 years and haven't ruined it.

—Cows help some wildlife, like deer and quail, by clearing areas through grazing.

—His cows never have contracted brucellosis. In fact, he never brings cows to the island; he only removes calves to sell them.

—Whooping cranes never have been spotted on the part of the island where his cows graze.

Hawes contends the effort to oust his cattle is part of a nationwide movement to rid all federal lands of cattle by 1993. Matagorda, home to more than 300 species of birds, is the only barrier island in the federal refuge system where grazing is allowed.

The Hawes family and the federal government aren't the only parties in the dispute.

In December, the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund formally backed Giezentanner's ruling. Sierra Club attorney Lori Potter said the group threatened to sue under the Endangered Species Act if the cattle aren't removed.

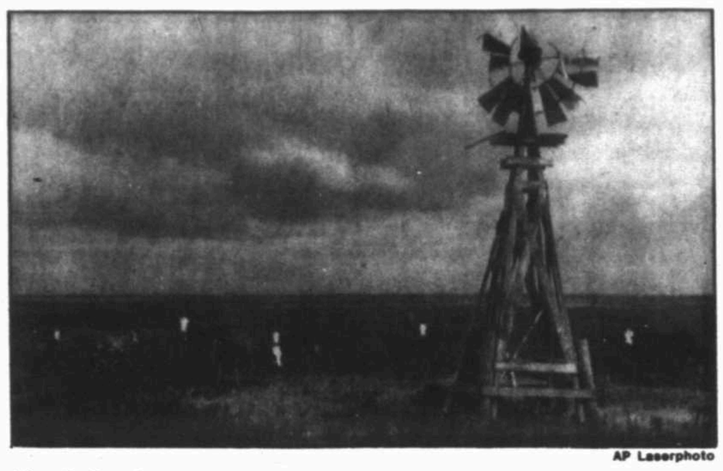

The National Audubon Society also has opposed the grazing.

U.S. Rep. Greg Laughlin, D-West Columbia, who does not believe grazing harms the island, filed a bill last year that would allow grazing to continue while the National Academy of Sciences does an independent study to determine its effects.

THAT BILL DIED in August in the House Subcommittee on Fisheries and Wildlife and hasn't been introduced this session.

Biologists and wildlife experts also are involved on both sides of the debate. And some Calhoun County commissioners have entered the fight.

Giezentanner said the uproar over the cattle controversy is drawing attention away from new projects aimed at making the island more accessible and enjoyable to the public.

AP Laserphoto

The federal government is ordering longtime Matagorda Island rancher Joe Hawes to remove his cattle from its wildlife refuge, claiming grazing is incompatible with the refuge and its ecosystem. Above, Hawes' cattle graze beside an old windmill in a late 1990 file photo.

Agency wants to make island more accessible

MATAGORDA ISLAND (AP) — Texans intrigued by this historic island are filling up boat trips and tours aimed at making Matagorda Island State Park more accessible to the public.

"The only access to it has been by boat. Not everybody owns boats," said Luke Thompson, a Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife planner. "What we're trying to do is break down some of those barriers."

In April, the parks department joined a local chamber of commerce and other groups to sponsor "Matagorda Adventures" each Saturday. The tours focus on the island's history, wildflowers, birds and marine life.

Each trip has been booked full in advance with 55 passengers, and second trips were arranged.

"There's no question that this should improve the (local) economy," Thompson said.

Matagorda Island, a 38-mile strip of land in Calhoun County, also is part of the federal Aransas National Wildlife Refuge, managed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

For years citizens have been allowed on the island, provided they had their own transportation. State parks officials offered free shuttle service from the state docks across the island to the Gulf of Mexico.

Park officials also have organized hunting trips throughout the year and tours for youth and civic groups.

Ronny Gallagher, park superintendent, said in 1990 an estimated 18,000 people visited Matagorda Island State Park, about 1,300 of them overnight campers.

State officials hope to double the total number of visitors once a ferry to the island is operating, perhaps as soon as this summer when more weekend theme tours also are expected.

Some visitors have experienced the island through seminars and retreats arranged through the Texas Nature Conservancy, a non-profit conservation group that operates the former Wynne Ranch house on the island.

In 1986, the conservancy purchased the remaining 11,502 privately held acres on Matagorda Island and sold the land to the Fish and Wildlife Service for the federal refuge.

Attractions on Matagorda Island are many.

It is home to more than 300 species of birds, including a flock of endangered whooping cranes that winters on the island. About 145 whooping cranes were counted this year. The birds, which stand five-feet when fully grown, spend their summers in Canada near the Arctic Circle.

Deer, alligators and assorted other wildlife also roam the island.

Matagorda, a barrier island that scientists say formed an estimated 5,000 to 7,000 years ago, is rich with history.

The Karankawa Indians lived there centuries ago, subsisting on shellfish, fish, small game and water birds.

In search of the real Ronald Reagan

■ Veteran journalist portrays Ronald Reagan as strong man, but weak manager.

By W. Dale Nelson
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — When former President Reagan was getting ready to testify before a board investigating the Iran-Contra affair, White House counsel Peter Wallison wrote him a note to help refresh his memory.

Wallison reminded Reagan that he had told White House aides he was surprised when he learned Israel had shipped Tow missiles to Iran, a key element in what was seen as an arms-for-hostages deal.

"If that is your recollection, and if the question comes up at the Tower Board meeting, you might want to say that you were surprised," Wallison wrote.

When the question did come up, Reagan dumbfounded his aides and members of the board by picking up Wallison's note and reading from it instead of answering the question.

"If the question comes up at the Tower Board meeting, you might want to say that you were surprised," the president read aloud.

Sen. John Tower's jaw dropped. Wallison recalls that he was "horrified, just horrified."

The incident in the Oval Office on Feb. 11, 1987, is described in a forthcoming book, "President Reagan: The Role of a Lifetime," by Lou Cannon, a journalist who has covered Reagan for a quarter of a century.

"The Tower Board had been exposed to the real Reagan, as he was seen at close range every day by the handful of aides with personal access to him," Cannon writes.

THE PICTURE IS one of many depicting a chief executive who, says Cannon, "restored public confidence in the presidency without mastering the difficult art of wielding presidential power."

"On balance, Reagan was a strong man, but an extraordinarily weak manager," the author says.

Cannon, now Western correspondent at The Washington Post, first encountered Reagan in 1965 when the actor visited Sacramento to make soundings for his first campaign for governor.

California Democrats regarded the neophyte politician as a washed-up movie star who would be an easy mark.

Cannon, then a reporter for the San Jose Mercury, thought differently.

"He answered questions sensibly and without a hint of guile," he writes. "He was as pleasant in response to skeptical questions as he was to friendly ones. He fascinated me."

The fascination deepened as Cannon covered Reagan as governor of California and president and wrote two books about him.

His third book, to be published April 29 by Simon & Schuster, portrays a president brighter in many ways than his critics would acknowledge, but with failings far greater than commonly suspected.

"The extent of his disassociation was greater than I thought," Cannon said in an interview.

He said he was also "surprised at the influence that Richard Nixon had." The book discloses that the former president advised Reagan on a number of occasions, supporting his visit to a German cemetery in Bitburg and pushing for the selection of Alexander Haig over George Shultz as secretary of state.

THE BOOK is meticulously documented, with 144 source notes just for the one chapter dealing with Lebanon, an episode that Cannon describes as a case study of "the naivete, ignorance and undisciplined internal conflict characteristic of the Reagan presidency."

As Cannon recounts it, Reagan ratified the decision to send troops to Lebanon in a brief telephone conversation and then was "confronted with Cabinet conflicts he could not resolve by reliance on his basic script."

"More than any other policy, Reagan's course of action in Lebanon displays his proclivity for splitting the difference between irreconcilable positions at the sacrifice of clarity — and, in this case, of American lives," he writes.

On Oct. 23, 1983, 241 U.S. servicemen were killed in a terrorist attack on a Marine barracks in Beirut. Reagan defended the deployment by saying it was vital to U.S. strategic interests, but less than four months later acquiesced in a decision to end it.

"Beirut wasn't sensible and never did serve a purpose," Colin L. Powell, then an aide to Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and now chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told Cannon. "It was goofy from the beginning."

Cannon interviewed the members of the Tower Board, Wallison and other White House aides in reconstructing Reagan's Iran-Contra testimony. He interviewed the former president and his wife, Nancy Reagan.

In his forthcoming book, author Lou Cannon discloses former President Richard Nixon advised then-President Ronald Reagan on a number of occasions, including supporting Reagan's May 1985 visit, above, to a Bitburg, Germany, cemetery.

'Reagan, for all his managerial limitations, was a visionary president. While he needed more assistance than any other modern U.S. president in the day-to-day operations of the presidency, Reagan held firm to a core of unshakable opinions.'

— Excerpt from "President Reagan: The Role of a Lifetime," by Lou Cannon

WALLISON CONFIRMED Cannon's account of their interview.

Cannon told a reporter, "I don't think in fact they were trying to get Reagan to tell a phony story. What they were struggling with was just trying to get Reagan to tell a coherent story."

Bill Garber, the former president's spokesman in Los Angeles, said there would be no immediate comment. He said that as far as he knew Reagan had not read the book.

Cannon concludes that the improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations "may well have been Reagan's most important contribution of his presidency."

"Reagan, for all his managerial limitations, was a visionary president," he writes. "While he needed more assistance than any other modern U.S. president in the day-to-day operations of the presidency, Reagan held firm to a core of unshakable opinions. His advisers would never ... convert him to the conventional wisdom of nuclear deterrence."

Despite Reagan's apparently weak grasp of many issues, Cannon rejects Democratic elder statesman Clark Clifford's description of him as an "amiable dunce."

Those who knew him personally or worked with him for a long time "usually concluded that he was smarter, maybe much smarter, than he seemed on the surface," he writes.

ON THE BASIS of his own observation, said Cannon, "It was clear to me that he was not a dunce, amiable or otherwise."

Cannon also tells of a conversation at the annual Gridiron Dinner in Washington in 1983 at which journalist Charles McDowell told Reagan that he remembered seeing him in his home town of Lexington, Va., during location filming for the 1938 movie, "Brother Rat."

Reagan startled McDowell by telling him he had never been in Lexington. His role in the movie didn't require him to go there. McDowell asked how that could be. He had told the story many times and remembered it vividly.

Reagan then asked how many times he had seen the movie. Five or six times, McDowell said.

"That implanted in your head that I was there," said Reagan. "You believed it because you wanted to believe it. There's nothing wrong with that. I do it all the time."

Schorre seeks insurance coverage

■ County district attorney says he's concerned about a predicted upswing in lawsuits against law-enforcement agencies.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre told the Midland County Commissioners Monday that he has decided to invest in $1 million in insurance coverage to protect his department against civil lawsuits.

Schorre initially discussed getting $100,000 in coverage during the meeting, but Commissioner Durward Wright recommended the $1 million coverage because of its greater liability protection.

Schorre

The coverage will cost Schorre $8,000 per year, $2,500 more than the $100,000 policy would cost.

In addition to personal-injury coverage, the policy includes coverage against suits that allege insufficient evidence for indictments, unfair treatment in the criminal-justice system and unconstitutional application of law.

Shorre described it as a "professional insurance policy" for, among other items, "errors and omission" in the prosecution of cases.

He said he and his staff "press forward through the storm" of prosecution with or without insurance, but said he was concerned about a predicted upswing in lawsuits against law-enforcement agencies.

"I think the Los Angeles (police brutality) case has spurred a lot of public interest in lawsuits," he said. "You're going to see, nationally, an increase in suits against police officers."

County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer echoed Shorre's concern about adequate insurance. "There's a lot of people who are willing to sue at the drop of a hat," he said.

"Public reaction goes in cycles," Schorre said. "After the Los Angeles incident, I can foresee pressure on the system for someone to file a lawsuit anytime they don't think they've been treated fairly.

"So this (coverage) is kind of preventative and anticipatory in nature."

Earlier this month, Midland County opted to relinquish its administrative role in the Permian Basin Drug Task Force because of the county's vulnerability to lawsuits stemming from task-force operations.

The county is without broad-based personal injury insurance coverage in law-enforcement activities.

Neighboring Ector County does have that coverage and, through Ector County Judge Jim Jordan, elected to take over the financial administration of the task force at mid-year.

Commissioner Win Brown, who chairs the Texas Association of Counties' Risk Management Group, said Midland County's elected officials and vehicles are coverage by insurance. For employees' medical insurance, the county is self-insured, and Blue Cross-Blue Shield "does the paperwork" on that coverage, he said.

Until the mid-1980s, the Midland County District Attorney's Office had insurance coverage, which the commissioners dropped because of the "budget crunch" in those post-boom years.

In a recent meeting, Commissioner Louisa Valencia suggested that Schorre apply money seized in drug cases to insurance coverage.

Schorre said he will use those funds to pay for the insurance.

E.N. Beauchamp collects, restores and sells the Wurlitzer jukeboxes that bring him melodious memories.

His hobby is an oldie but goodie

■ What began as a lark now takes up most up local man's time — and space.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Nothing spins those scratchy, beat-up, 78 rpm, golden ultra-oldies quite like a Wurlitzer.

And E.N. Beauchamp should know. He has a store, house and workroom full of the colorful antiquated jukeboxes.

What started as an effort to spice up a recreation room at his house has turned into a full-time quest for the almighty one-speaker record players with the whirling lights.

Beauchamp, walking around Monday in his 2404 Wall Ave. jukebox outlet, gets overwhelmed with nostalgia when he talks about his collection.

"I got the P10, the P12 and the 616 and the 1080 in my home," he said, but he's unsure about the 1080, so he looks it up in a book.

Nope, it's a 780.

In layman's terms, the P10, unleashed upon the world in 1934, was the first jukebox to carry the Wurlitzer name. It plays 10 records. The subsequent P12, unveiled in 1935, plays 12 songs.

The fashionable 616, which rolled into juke joints in 1936, plays 16 songs, while the P24, plays ... well you get the picture.

In addition to old and relatively new Wurlitzers, Beauchamp also has a few Rock-olas and Seeburgs sitting around, bringing his total collection to 78 jukeboxes.

But the Wurlitzers form the nucleus as well as the pride and joy of his melodious assemblage.

The stained walnut or mahogany boxes with the wonderfully ornate fronts were the musical mainstays of the 1930s and 1940s. They served as party centerpieces for countless jitterbuggers who tore holes in the floor to Andrews Sisters songs and other jumping tunes.

Some records spin on carriages and others are extended out on metal arms as a

Hale's lawyer: Impartial trial unlikely locally

■ If Bryan Hale is found competent to stand trial on child-pornography charges, his attorney wants it held outside the Western federal district.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Citing pretrial publicity, Bryan Allen Hale's attorney has filed a motion for a change of venue in his client's pending child pornography trial.

Attorney Glen D. Aaron II filed the motion Monday in U.S. District Court along with a motion to suppress certain evidence in the case.

Court officials said rulings on the motions are not expected until psychiatrists determine whether Hale, the former Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital administrator, is mentally competent to stand trial.

Hale, 47, is in custody at the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Springfield, Mo., where he will undergo a psychiatric evaluation.

In the change-of-venue motion, Aaron promised to introduce results of a public opinion poll that will support claims that news coverage has prejudiced potential jurors.

The motion states that newspaper, radio and television accounts of Hale's arrest and indictment make it "probable that the defendant cannot obtain a fair and impartial trial in the Western District of Texas."

Texas' Western Judicial District includes Midland, El Paso and San Antonio.

Assistant U.S. Attorney William W. Torrey, the prosecutor in the case, said he doubted that the motion would be granted.

Media coverage usually is not grounds for a venue change unless the coverage is inaccurate, he said, adding that Aaron contributed to media interest in the case by giving statements to reporters.

Aaron's motion acknowledges that pretrial publicity "in and of itself does not entitle a defendant to a change of venue." However,

County OKs $1,500 in stipends for VFDs

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday voted to supplement two rural Midland County volunteer fire departments with $1,500 monthly stipends for six months.

The stipends will be in addition to the $100 the county will pay the Greenwood and the Northeast Midland County volunteer fire departments (VFDs) for each "run" they make after 15 fire calls in a month.

The county previously had paid the VFDs $100 for each response they made.

The VFDs are designed to assist the Midland Fire Department in its response to rural fires.

In a city-county agreement drafted in the late 1950s, following construction of the Midland County Public Library, the county agreed to be the sole supporter of the community library in exchange for the city's commitment to extinguish fires in the rural areas, commissioners explained.

"We're just asking for help" to establish a permanent budget, said Andy Glasscock, chief of the Greenwood VFD.

The city and rural fire department are struggling and are on austere budgets, Glasscock said.

Glasscock and Bill King, chief of the Northeast VFD, each had requested $25,000 for a year's operation for their VFDs, but the commissioners turned those proposals aside.

"The people in our area have donated (to the VFD) until they won't

Employment helps curb crime, ex-convict says

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

How do you keep a former prison inmate from returning to a life of crime?

Give him a job, said Carl Robins, who has served 27 of his 56 years behind bars for car theft, forgery, drug possession and burglary.

"How important is a job? It's very important. If you're not going to work, you're going to steal," said Robins, an employee of the Texas Employment Commission in Austin.

Robins was in Midland Monday as a spokesman for Project Rio (Re-Integration of Offender), a TEC program aimed at providing a career change to ex-convicts — a legal career, that is.

"I travel constantly, speaking to civic groups, employment groups, schools ... trying to show that if I can change, anyone can," said Robins, who has been with the TEC for four years and out of jail for eight years.

Included in Robin's stops in Midland and Odessa were the Texas Corrections Association's northwest regional conference and Culver Youth Home.

"Why hire offenders? Because we are trying to reduce crime. That's the bottom line," Robins said.

"Crime takes a community response. You can't just send a man to jail. He's coming back out," Robins said.

"In Midland and Odessa, you send people to prison here and when they come out they don't go to Detroit. They come here where they are from," Robins said.

And if nothing is done, these people will probably return to crime, Robins said.

Democrats stand to gain, GOP to lose in state redistricting

Associated Press

AUSTIN — With the Legislature working to finish redistricting before the current session ends May 27, Democrats could gain as Texas picks up three additional seats in the Congress.

There also appears to be good news for minorities and bad news for Republicans.

Democrats, who control the redistricting process through their hold on the Legislature and governor's office, say they can draw the additional districts to be winnable by minorities, with a predominantly Hispanic district in South Texas, probably a Hispanic district in Houston and a black district in Dallas.

"It's certainly possible to give everyone a district that they can run and win in, and create three new minority districts," said Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party.

Democrats now hold 19 of the 27 U.S. House seats, while Republicans hold eight. Population increases recorded by the 1990 Census gave Texas the three additional seats.

Last year, when Republican Clayton Williams led Democrat Ann Richards in the gubernatorial race, the GOP hoped to win at least two of the new districts. Their strategy was to help minorities obtain seats in inner-city congressional districts and create suburban districts friendly to Republicans.

"When you draw minority districts, you enhance Republicans," state Rep. Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, told the Austin American-Statesman. "Redistricting is a time when Republicans and minorities have a great deal of common interest."

But Williams lost the governor's race and the veto power necessary to keep the Democratic Legislature in check during redistricting.

Democrats recently called for the three new congressional districts to be predominantly minority regions.

"I think that it was a victory when the Democratic Party came out and said that all three districts should be minority," said state Rep. Roman Martinez, D-Houston, a member of the House Redistricting Committee and possible congressional candidate.

The Democrats' plan also would allow the eight Republican incumbents to be re-elected, although some of their districts would be substantially changed.

The plan was formulated and recently presented to legislative redistricting committees by the state's Democratic congressmen.

Under the plan, one district would be in the area of San Antonio and South Texas, where Hispanics are in the majority.

In Dallas, Democrats and Republicans both agree that the new district should be largely black. Now, the minority population is split between the districts of two white Democrats, John Bryant and Martin Frost.

In Houston, the problem for Democrats is to create a Hispanic district while protecting two incumbents, Reps. Mike Andrews and Craig Washington. Taking some black and Hispanic voters from their districts could jeopardize the re-election of one or the other.

However, some Democrats believe a Hispanic district could be drawn without endangering Andrews or Washington. "I hope that when we get down to drawing the lines, it will work out," Martinez said.

Republicans are skeptical that the Democrats can redistrict to protect all their incumbents and elect minority Democrats to the three new congressional seats. Grusendorf said it will be "very difficult to gerrymander the state not to enhance Republicans."

If the Democrats go too far, he said, the U.S. Justice Department or the courts will intervene.

Under the federal Voting Rights Act, redistricting plans must conform to the U.S. Supreme Court's one-person, one-vote rule. The Justice Department must approve the plans before they can take effect.

HALE: Prosecutor doubts motion for change will be OK'd

the motion goes on to say that the venue change is warranted because of Hale's prominence in the community and because news coverage of the case has been "continuous and high-profile."

Coverage also has been riddled with "inaccuracies and vagueness," according to the motion.

"...the print and television media have referred repeatedly to the charge against the defendant as an indictment for the offense of 'child pornography,'" the motion reads.

"Such vague statements are inherently confusing and misleading. They present the picture of (a) person accused of sexual contact with a child. Defendant has not been charged with an offense of this nature."

Aaron could not be reached for comment Monday.

U.S. Customs agents arrested Hale, 47, on April 8 at his Glenwood office for receiving and possessing child pornography. He was suspended without pay from his Glenwood job the next day.

The same week, he was charged with burglary in Ector County in connection with the March theft of some documents from a Glenwood co-worker's Odessa home.

Marilee Kyler, Glenwood's community relations manager, filed the charges April 12, alleging that Hale broke into her house while she was on vaeation in March.

Hale's arrest on the federal child pornography charges came after agents found a videotape in his office entitled "Educating Valerie." The tape reportedly depicts a 10-year-old girl engaging in sexual activity with her father.

During a three-month undercover investigation that preceded the arrest, a person believed to be Hale purchased the tape through the mail from Florida Customs agents. Investigators said Hale, using the pseudonym "Ready Man," contacted the agents through a computer bulletin board system in response to a pornography advertisement.

In another motion filed Monday, Aaron requested that evidence not relating to receipt of the tape itself be suppressed. Specifically, the motion requested that a 155-page book supposedly written by Hale and detailing his sexual fantasies not be allowed as evidence.

Hale sent the book to undercover agents during a period of correspondence with them between January and March, investigators said.

The motion also requests that taped conversations between a man believed to be Hale and undercover agents not be used unless they relate to the delivery of "Educating Valerie."

A federal grand jury on April 11 indicted Hale on one count of receiving child pornography and on a related forfeiture count that will allow the videotape's return to authorities.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Torrey said last week that additional charges may result from the discovery of an allegedly pornographic magazine.

Torrey said investigators found the magazine, which reportedly contains child pornography, last week among items seized in searches of Hale's office and apartment.

If convicted on the federal charges, Hale could face up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

If convicted on the Ector County burglary charges, Hale could face up to 99 years or life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine.

CURB: Myths surround hiring of ex-convicts

(From 1B)

Few people in prison worked at the time of their arrest, he said, and once they get out, their employment status may not change because of lack of education or skills and the skepticism of potential employers.

Robins helped dispel myths that prevent employers from hiring ex-convicts.

One common fear is that ex-offenders will rob the employer.

"We rarely see complaints from employers," Robins said.

More than 35,000 people have found work through Project Rio in Texas since it began in October 1985.

Robins was quick to point out that the program is not meant to be altruistic to ex-convicts, but is for the betterment of society.

"You don't have to like them or take them out to dinner. Put them to work — that's my message," Robins said.

And it's more than just an honest job for the ex-offenders.

"Employment is not just a living. It's a place to get self-esteem and self-respect. And that's what they need," Robins said.

But, Robins added, the program only works with the participation of the ex-convicts.

"We are only trying to help those that want help. The others ... save that precious prison space for them," he said.

Project Rio is in operation in 75 Texas cities and 31 prisons.

In Midland, the program began in June 1988 and has placed 401 ex-offenders, said Judye Russell, the Project Rio coordinator for Midland, Big Spring and Lamesa.

Since July 1990, the local project has had 196 applicants, 113 of whom have found jobs, Ms. Russell said.

"Anything from a dishwasher to a secretary to a machinist to oilfield workers," she said.

"I think it's a great deterrent to crime in our community. A lot of repeat offenders feel no one is going to give them a second chance," Ms. Russell said.

The TEC also refers applicants with limited education or work skills to other sources to obtain education or skills, Ms. Russell said.

In addition to its placement success, the longer-term success of the program has been documented, she said.

A recent evaluation shows that of seven people enrolled in the program in March 1990, four were working within the next six months and today, six of the seven are employed.

Ms. Russell said two major incentives help attract employers. The federal government grants employers a 40 percent tax credit for the first $6,000 salary paid to ex-offender employees and, through the TEC, provides bonds of up to $25,000 for each employee.

BOXES: Beauchamp turns hobby into trade

turntable is brought up to meet it. Other jukeboxes flip records like pancakes before plopping them down for play.

But beauty gave way to efficiency when the modern metal monsters, capable of holding 140, then 160, then 200 tunes in their bellies, sprang up in the 1950s.

"The vending companies had to put these old boxes back in the warehouse, where water would drip on them and they were exposed to the elements," Beauchamp said. "No one knows how many have gone to the trash or the dump ground."

As a youth, Beauchamp said he spent many an hour dancing and listening to tunes spun over Wurlitzers.

He came to Midland in 1945 after serving with the U.S. Army in the South Pacific during World War II.

Beauchamp worked for various oil drilling companies until 1959, when he became a pawn shop owner, a business he ran until 1967. In 1968, he ran for Midland County sheriff, lost and then briefly opened a cafe.

He "flipped around from one thing to another" before becoming a machinist in 1974, a job he held until his retirement in 1982.

Beauchamp started his jukebox hobby a year later, when a friend visiting his home asked why there was no jukebox to compliment the games he had in his recreation room. So he bought two.

"Two months later someone offered me two times what I paid for them," said Beauchamp, now 68. "That's when I thought this might not make a bad hobby."

Hobby soon turned to trade as people in the area asked him to fix their jukeboxes. He opened up his store, Juke Box's Etc., only a month ago.

Inside is a collection of jukeboxes old and new, selling for between $500 and $5,000. Some are for display only. He even has a few of the modern metal ones for sale.

A back room at the store, a workshop Beauchamp calls his jukebox hospital, contains dozens of bashed, rusted, broken, busted or dirt-covered music machines.

He has traversed the United States hunting for them, sorting through jukebox dealership warehouses, trading posts and other people's collections.

Beauchamp, who looks like a ruddy Burl Ives in a cowboy shirt and suspenders, spends an average 40 hours restoring a jukebox.

As evidenced by the cuts covering his burly hands, repairing them is more like working on a car than a delicate work of art.

Parts, which are not easy to find, sometimes must be secured through a worldwide jukebox collectors' organization.

"I'm not trying to make money," Beauchamp said of his trade. "I'm trying to meet people, associate with them and let them know the history. The boxes bring back a lot of memories for a lot of people, especially those over 60 years old."

And if the boxes don't send customers on an odyssey down memory boulevard, his record collection probably will.

A sign instructing customers to "ask us about the thick Edison records" hangs above the front counter. Along the walls of the store are about 7,500 old and new records, including 45s and 78s, for sale.

Kathy Pulley, a long-time Beauchamp associate who helps out in the jukebox shop, enjoys her work with the relic machines.

"It's interesting and educational," Ms. Pulley said. "I like all the different types and it's interesting to see how they work. Each one has its own individual personality."

Beauchamp said he sees jukebox collection as the baseball card of the 1990s and beyond.

VFD: Rural, city fire departments strapped donate any more," Glasscock said. "Do we fold up and quit and let the county burn?"

The commissioners briefly discussed, but did not consider, a two-cent rural fire district ad valorem tax that would be implemented only if it were supported by a majority of rural voters.

Glasscock said that the Greenwood VFD is beset by money problems.

"There's no way to get new equipment," he said."There's no way to replace worn-out equipment.

Oil companies, as well as ranchers, have donated funds to the rural VFDs because the rural fire-fighters put out oil tank battery fires and rangeland fires.

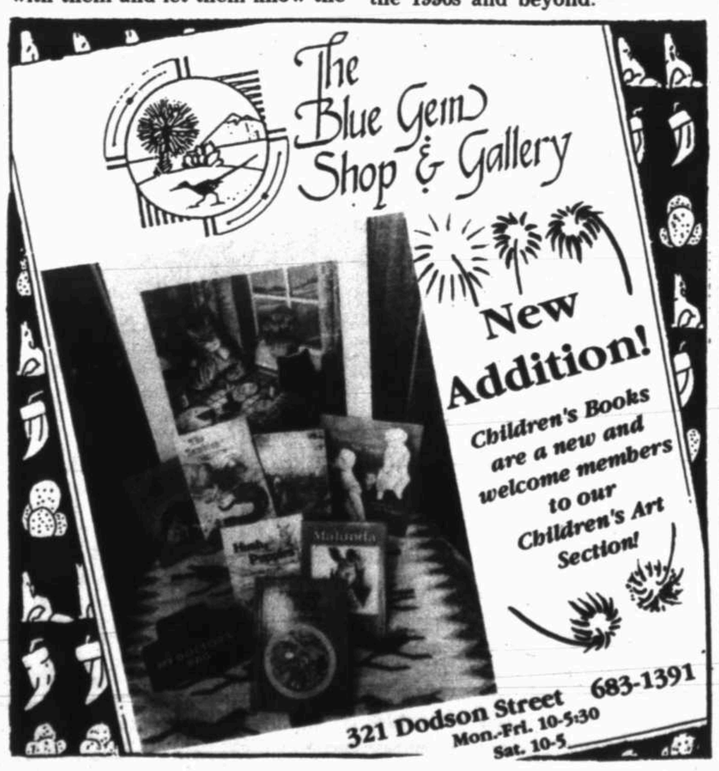

The rural VFDs also cross county lines to fight fires.

"If somebody asks for help, we're not going to refuse them," said Northeast VFD firefighter Greg Ashcraft. "That's just human nature."

Though both Glasscock and King expressed gratitude for the $1,500 stipends and the $100 for each response after the 15th in a month's time, Glasscock said the actual cost per run is between $200 and $250 for fuel, water, maintenance and other expenses.

McCrary's $1,500 and $100 proposal is strictly a "stop-gap" measure, he said.

And of any two-cent fire-district tax, Glasscock said that "I'd hate to bring up taxes to anybody the way things (the depressed economy) are now. We are going to look into it and study it. We are not going to jump into it. We're going to explore the possibilities."

KMB among Earth Day celebrants

By Staff Reports

Earth Day celebrants marked Monday with donations of trees, money and time in the Permian Basin.

Keep Midland Beautiful said 647 volunteers collected 9,500 pounds of litter during the early GLAD Bag-A-Thon cleanup along Midland streets, right-of-ways and parks April 6.

The Boys and Girls Club won a $100 cash prize from GLAD Wrap and Bag for their 152 bags of trash gathered. The Salvation Army youth groups, St. Marks United Methodist Church Unity Sunday School Class and Girl Scout Troop No. 52 all won prizes for their winning efforts.

St. Ann's School raised money to give trees to the SPCA animal shelter.

The Ector County Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, KMGP 102.1 FM and M&R Nursery planted a tree to honor Permian Basin victims of crime at the north end of the University of Texas-Permian Basin park.

SAM's Club sponsored a children's coloring contest, with winners to have donations to environmental programs made in their names.

Energas seeks increase

LUBBOCK — Energas Company has notified the 66 incorporated communities, including Midland and Odessa, in its West Texas distribution system that it intends to increase its rates and service charges effective May 24.

The annual increase to a residential customer using 96 Mcf of natural gas per year would be approximately $27.72, or 7 percent.

By law, Energas is entitled to recover its cost of service through its rates and charges to customers. Those costs include cost of gas purchased for distribution, operation and maintenance expenses, depreciation expenses, taxes and a reasonable rate of return on rate base.

Energas is requesting a rate of return of 12.13 percent in this filing.

The last rate adjustment filed by Energas for the West Texas distribution system was in 1984 and the subsequent increase of approximately 17 cents per Mcf was effective Nov. 1, 1984.

Energas President Eugene A. Ehler attributed the rate increase to investments in plant additions made since 1984 and operating cost increases.

"The company has worked diligently to contain its operating and maintenance expenses to a level that is well below the rate of inflation for the period," Ehler said.

"These efforts are largely responsible for the company's ability to operate nearly seven years without requesting a rate increase."

The cities in the distribution system have the authority to suspend the rate increase for a period of up to 90 days beyond May 24 in order to have more time to study the filing.

Club members honored

The Boys and Girls Club of Midland, Inc. will celebrate National Boys and Girls Clubs Week today through April 28 with special activities at the club facility at 110 E. New Jersey.

Festivities will include an essay contest on "What the Boys and Girls Clubs mean to me" at 4 p.m. today; a watermelon-eating contest at 6 p.m. Wednesday; an ice cream social at 6 p.m. Thursday; a parent-member night where parents and their kids engage in friendly competition for prizes at 6 p.m. Friday; and a board of directors versus the senior members basketball game at 11 a.m. Saturday.

All events are open to the public.

Student exhibit opens

The Annual Student Art Exhibition at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin will open with a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. today in the third floor gallery.

Recipients of the William A. King and the University Art Association scholarships will be announced at 8 p.m.

The exhibit, featuring student drawings, ceramics, paintings, prints and sculptures will be on display from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday through May 11.

7 accident victims remain hospitalized

Staff Report

ODESSA — Seven of eight people injured in a two-vehicle accident that killed two Sunday afternoon in West Odessa remained hospitalized Monday, Medical Center Hospital officials said.

Killed were Paul Anthony Stamps, 22, and Joel Dominguez, 22, both of Odessa, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Cynthia Kennedy, 30, of Wickett, was in critical but stable condition at the hospital Monday night. In stable condition were Mandy Kennedy, 9, Becky Kennedy, 7, and William Ray Kennedy Jr., 3, all of Wickett; Angela Cross, 19, and Michael Leonard Cross, 4, of Barnhart; and Jeffery Todd Williams, 21, of Odessa. Kristi Kennedy, 5, was released.

According to DPS reports, Stamps was driving a 1989 Ford pickup west on W. 42nd Street just east of Francis Road when he veered into Cynthia Kennedy's 1977 Dodge van.

TUESDAY, APRIL 23, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to sweeping changes! Both friendship and romantic passion are accented in July. A burst of energy enables you to make great headway in financial and career areas by September. A recurring dream will come true in November. Keep a diligent watch over family affairs. A person or group may act as though your money is theirs. Set the record straight. Eye-opening travel is featured early in 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Valerie Bertinelli, playwright William Shakespeare, actress Sandra Dee, fashion designer Halston.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep your perspective today and you will see how comical a volatile situation really is! Be wary of taking a subordinate into your confidence. Surprise is the secret to your success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be less decisive than usual today. An argumentative person on the domestic scene will not make things easier. Your admirers are not shy about expressing their desires.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New harmony dominates at work. People seem more at peace with themselves than in the recent past. Take advantage of the temporary lull to examine your plans for possible trouble spots.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You could notice a big change in your mate or partner. Once bold and confident, this person now seems out of control. Come to loved one's aid immediately. Your future together could be at stake.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your career ambitions are temporarily on hold. Take advantage of this quiet time to sort out your priorities. Exercise helps restore your flagging energy. Do not overreact to a disappointment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Important matters from the past surface, testing your patience. Influential person is waiting to see how you react when under pressure. Let reason dominate rather than emotion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone both witty and perceptive enters your life today. Although amusing, this person could have ulterior motives for becoming your friend. Do not let anyone take unfair advantage of you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid taking any risks with your money or reputation today. Although you are idealistic, someone may not deserve your generosity. Steer clear of those who act too aggressive in business or romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work can be fun if team spirit prevails. You play the key role here. Avoid anyone with a "push button" mentality. Take enjoyment in a promising romance this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid becoming preoccupied with your eating habits. Plunge into interesting work and needless worries will evaporate. Continue to make full use of your excellent contacts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Fortunately, you can tackle any problems with greater ease and confidence now. An attractive member of the opposite sex combines old-fashioned values with a modern approach.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A longtime ambition can be realized if you ask the right people. Put your thoughts on paper. Someone who is overly critical should be avoided. A change of lifestyle will make you feel great!

TODAY'S CHILDREN are thrifty, family-oriented and capable of great generosity. Hardworking and innovative, these Taureans often achieve considerable financial success early in life. A second career could develop as they approach midlife. They are experts at juggling several projects at one time. As parents, these Taureans will go to great lengths to provide for their offspring. They place a high value on a stable home environment.

In real estate, location can make a world of difference in the value of a property. The same can be true in bridge. A king behind the ace is worth a full trick; in front of it, perhaps nothing. But even depreciated assets can be made to serve a useful purpose.

When this hand was played in a team match, both sides reached four spades on identical auctions. North's jump was a limit raise, promising at least four-card support and 10-12 points.

Both declarers were faced with the lead of the queen of hearts. Since it was unlikely that West was leading away from the ace, the North hand suddenly became substandard—the king of hearts had been rendered almost worthless.

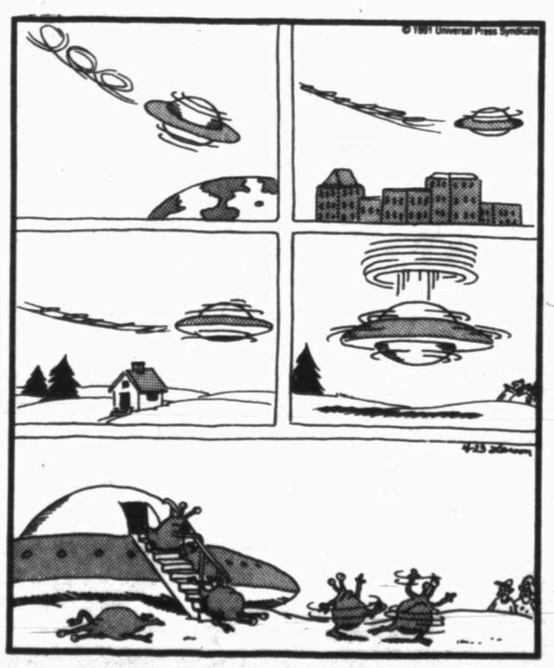

One declarer covered with dummy's king. East won and returned a heart to West's nine. West shifted to a club, won by East's jack. That defender exited safely with a trump, and eventually scored the setting trick with the king of clubs.

The second declarer was not prepared to sacrifice the king of hearts at the first trick, so a low heart was played from dummy. Had West continued with a heart, declarer would have had an easy ride. South would win any return, draw trumps and, after stripping diamonds with a ruff, return to hand and duck a club into East, forcing that defender either to yield a ruff and sluff or lead a club into dummy's tenace.

However, West shifted to a club at trick two. Declarer saw that, if West held the king, there was no immediate hurry to finesse, so dummy's ace was played—declarer could always lead a club to the queen later. After drawing trumps and clearing the diamonds, declarer exited with a heart and East was endplayed. No matter what that defender did, one more club was all that East-West could collect.

Lawyer seeks psychiatric exam for man arrested at King's home

BANGOR, Maine — A man accused of breaking into the home of horror writer Stephen King with a fake bomb entered no plea this morning, and his lawyer said a psychiatric exam would be sought.

King

District Court Judge Andrew Mead ordered Erik Keene, 26, of San Antonio held in the Penobscot County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond. He set another hearing for May 16.

Keene's attorney, Mark Perry, said he would be filing a motion for a psychiatric examination to determine whether Keene is competent to stand trial. "He's obviously a disturbed man," the attorney said.

Keene faces charges of terrorizing and burglary.

On his way into court, Keene told reporters that he had "a lot of reasons" for what he did, but declined to elaborate.

LOS ANGELES — Adam Rich, who played the part of Nicholas Bradford on the television show "Eight Is Enough," is determined to revive his acting career despite recent drug abuse and arrests.

Rich

Rich, 22, was arrested early this month and charged with stealing morphine from a pharmacy. He was arrested again last week for investigation of shoplifting a pair of sunglasses and socks worth $30.

"I don't know why this happened, but I know I am sick, I have a disease," Rich said in his first interview since the arrests. The interview was published Sunday in the Daily News of Los Angeles.

Rich pleaded guilty last year to drunken driving and was placed on five years' probation. In 1988, he went to the Betty Ford clinic to break a cocaine habit.

Rich said he plans to enter a drug rehabilitation program again to get help. After he sorts out problems, Rich said he wants to return to acting.

"I really think that maybe this all is a blessing in disguise," he said.

FULTON, Mo. — Lady Mary Soames, Winston Churchill's only surviving child, remembers the former British prime minister as a caring parent who used oil painting as therapy and grew sentimentally attached to his farm animals.

Lady Soames, 69, shared her recollections Sunday during the Ninth Crosby Kemper Lecture at Westminster College, where her father warned 45 years ago of an Iron Curtain's descent across Europe.

While most of the world today remembers Churchill for his lofty speech and inspirational leadership during World War II, she recalled a more personal side of the statesman.

The father she remembers was serious about bricklaying at Chartwell, his English country estate, and couldn't bear to butcher his beloved farm animals. At age 40, he started painting as therapy to help him overcome "the depressive side of his nature," which Churchill characterized as his "black dog," she said.

"He was a being blessed, in that for him, the boundary line between work and recreation was smudged," said Lady Soames, the author of several books, including "Winston Churchill: His Life As A Painter."

LONDON — Music is a source of life for violinist Sir Yehudi Menuhin, who celebrated his 75th birthday Monday.

"I try to practice every day. I enjoy it. It's part of my physiology. If I don't, then something is missing, just like a meal might be missing," said Menhuin, who began playing before international audiences as a 7-year-old prodigy.

Looking elegant and sprightly in an early morning interview on BBC-TV, Menuhin spoke of his own childhood as a time of privilege, not pressure.

"I was protected from the commercialization or exploitation or the rather superficial flattery and that sort of thing, for which I'm very grateful," he said. "I was not distracted from the good things and the true things."

Menuhin's parents were Russian Jews from the Crimea, who moved to the United States from Palestine. He had played in London, Paris and Berlin by the age of 13 and at 18 was giving recitals with his pianist sister, Hepzibah, in New York, London and Paris. She died in 1981.

CLINTON, Miss. — Mississippi College officials are trying to figure out criteria for awarding the Common Sense scholarship established by "Today" show weatherman Willard Scott.

The private Baptist college will award about $600 from the scholarship fund for the first time this fall, said Tom Prather, Mississippi College financial aid director.

But the central Mississippi college has not decided how to measure common sense, Prather said.

"We'll have to have some type of criteria before we can award it. We will award it to someone who demonstrates common sense. I'm going to get some committee to pick them," Prather said.

Texas academic-decathalon champs repeat feat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Dallas-area high school narrowly defeated an old California rival Monday to capture its second consecutive National Academic Decathlon.

J.J. Pearce High School of Richardson, Texas, defeated Laguna Hills High School of Laguna Hills, Calif., with 48,946 points out of a possible 60,000.

It was the largest victory total in contest history.

Laguna Hills, which also finished second last year, had 47,246 points. Third place went to Whitney Young Magnet High School of Chicago with 47,231 points.

"Our goal for the entire year was to win the nationals," said Richardson team member Christine Liu, wearing a gold medal around her neck.

"We had no idea, they didn't tell us anything," said Frank Wilde, another Texas team member. "Tonight, hopefully, we get to relax a little."

"I think Texas was really good (but) second in the nation is nothing to be ashamed of," said a determined Robin Chaney of Laguna Hills. "I'm a junior. Next year, God willing, we will revenge."

But, that's what Laguna Hills said a year ago.

Laguna Hills' motto this year was 'Remember the Alamo.'

The audience inside the Los Angeles Hyatt Regency ballroom erupted in cheers as the second-place winner was announced and the Texas students realized they had won.

Monday's championship was the fourth for Richardson and sixth for a Texas team. Teams from California have won the four other academic decathlons. This year's event at Occidental College was conducted with a partisanship usually associated with amateur athletics.

In all, high school teams from 44 states and the District of Columbia were challenged to master 10 subject areas ranging from modern art to space exploration.

The Richardson students won medals, $30,000 in scholarships and a trip to Washington, D.C., to meet President Bush and congressional leaders.

Winning team members were Kevin Barenblat, Dardy Chang, Eugene Chen, Misty Karin, Christine Liu, Craig Macaulay, Wade McIntyre, Amie von Briesen and Frank Wilde. Their coaches were Dorcas Helms and Linda Berger.

Most of the competition was in the form of written examinations given Friday and Saturday. Areas covered included economics, fine arts, language and literature, mathematics, science and social studies.

In the last of ten events Saturday, Laguna tied for second place with three other schools in Super Quiz. Arizona finished first.

Although California and Texas were overall favorites, Arizona pulled an upset in the Super Quiz, the last of 10 events.

Laguna tied for second with three other schools in the Super Quiz, which is modeled after television's "Jeopardy" game show and is one of the few events open to the public. This year's Super Quiz topic was space exploration.

In addition, each team member gave prepared and impromptu speeches and was interviewed by a panel of judges, one of whom was Mary Lou Retton.

Each team had three students with an A average, three students with a B average and three students with a C average.

It Figures: Call today about summer shape up special

Summer is just around the corner. Swim suits, shorts and playwear show those inches. Let It Figures help you take them off. It Figures Toning and Tanning Salon, located at 1028-H Andrews Hwy. in Western Park Plaza is the place for you!

For summer shape up, indoor tanning and fun, comfortable activewear from an in-store boutique, more and more Midlanders are turning to It Figures.

Be sure to call It Figures at 697-5996 today for information on the summer shape-up special April 23 — 30: 12 sessions for $35 plus tax or one month unlimited for $40 plus tax.

Try one month of unlimited tanning sessions — just $40 plus tax.

Now available are long oversized T's for the fuller figure or for the smaller person who enjoys comfort! Coming soon to It Figures is the exciting new Danskin Plus activewear line.

Don't forget It Figures when you are looking for exciting accessories of all kinds to go with your active or dresswear. It Figures also has some fashion tights with lace trim — for the "in" look.

With the dust and wind blowing, it's no fun to exercise out-of-doors and soon it will be just too hot. Exercise in comfort in a controlled atmosphere at It Figures.

At It Figures, you can lose inches with minimum effort. Follow the many Midlanders who have found an easy, successful way to lose those extra inches.

At It Figures, you don't suffer through high impact aerobics which might wreak havoc on your joints, you don't sign intimidating contracts, and you do not pay any membership fees. All you do is lose inches the easy way with passive resistance exercise on seven different fitness machines. Workouts last just under an hour and you should not feel fatigued or sore after a session.

On the program, your center of gravity is spread out as you lay down — the machines do the work for you. There is a table for slenderizing and toning legs, a sit up table for toning the abdomen and hips, a stomach and hip toning table, a circulating over-all body massage table and several others to tone, firm and refresh.

It Figures works hard to make things convenient for its clients. Senior citizens receive a 15 percent discount on toning (not applicable to specials), husbands and wives also receive a discount when they sign up together (not applicable to specials) and toning customers receive discounts on tanning sessions.

It Figures hours are also convenient. Drop-ins are welcome from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays. From 3 p.m. to close Monday through Friday, sessions are by appointment only. Saturday mornings are by appointment only.

Mother's Day is only three weeks away. Is your mom overworked? Give her a gift to relieve stress, to make her feel good, as well as get her into shape. A gift certificate from It Figures is a terrific gift — "Remember Mom!"

Are you looking for a prom dress? You don't want to be lily white or have unsightly swim suit strap lines ruining the image of your special night. Come tan with the folks at It Figures. A tanning gift certificate is great for grads!

Call It Figures today at 697-5996. MasterCard, Visa and Discover cards are welcomed and gift certificates are available.

It Figures, at 1028-H Andrews Highway, is the place for you if you are wanting to get rid of unwanted inches before summer gets here. At left is the toning salon, with seven passive resistance exercise machines. At right, in front of the salon, is owner Laura K. Morgan.

Chez Vous caters anywhere, anytime, always with style

Let the dedicated staff of Chez Vous cater any special event you might be planning, such as a wedding, a cocktail party or a business luncheon. Call 699-1940 for details. From left are Dominique Chardola, Becky Lane, Katie Ware, Debra Stephenson, Lynn Green, Serge Eberhard and Barbara Christiansen.

Chez Vous Catering, offering such versatility as fajitas for 800 to gourmet multi-course dinners, announces a new emphasis on service. Plan now to have Chez Vous perfectly plan and carry out any event in your future, such as a wedding, cocktail party or a business luncheon.

Chez Vous can design delicious wedding cakes of all shapes and sizes. Another change is that new menus are in the process of being developed, particularly for business luncheons. The emphasis is on healthy, lighter fare for a busy lunch hour.

Up to 80 people may be treated to a very special sit down event in Chez Vous own beautiful new private party room in San Miguel Square. It is located next to Doug's Baby Store.

Chez Vous owners Barbara Christiansen and Dominique Chardola and their very talented staff maintain that no party is too large or too small, and invite you to call Chez Vous at 699-1940 for a quote on your party planning needs.

Just tell them your budget, when and where the event will be, and Chez Vous will take it from there. That includes making necessary rental arrangements, menu planning or bringing their own serving pieces. "We make every party perfect because reputation is important in this town," noted Barbara.

Chez Vous has proudly served Midland/Odessa and its full service catering needs for five years. "We want you to be a guest at your own party," said Barbara. "Sit back and just enjoy the compliments."

The owners and staff are every proud of the work they do and feel that not only do they serve wonderful food, but that they have the service to match. "Our staff is unbeatable, knowledgeable, enthusiastic and ready to make you and your guests feel 'catered' to," added Dominique.

Perhaps this is why Chez Vous gets invited back over and over. Some of the events for which Chez Vous has built its reputation on include the UTPB Energy Center grand opening, the recent luncheon for Senator Bentsen, a luncheon for George Bush when he was Vice President, and catering for Septemberfest for the past five years.

The majority of Chez Vous customers have come from word of mouth, however, and from those who have attended a Chez Vous party. Said Barbara, "We work closely with our clients to give them the very best we have to offer. We know when you are having a party, no matter how simple or spectacular it is, that you want it perfect."

"We spend a lot of time updating our repetoire of fabulous recipes," added Dominique. "It keeps us creative and current and allows us to offer variety to our clients. All of our menus are custom tailored to fit the event and your pocket book."

You may have seen the talented duo of Barbara and Dominique on the Chez Vous cooking segment, which is aired on Channel 9 each Tuesday during the 6 p.m. newscast. Dominique has worked for many fine Midland restaurants since 1982 and is presently head chef for Racquet Club. He has undergone extensive training in French and European cooking schools.

Barbara has been catering for 10 years, and has been a Midland resident for six years. In addition to Chez Vous, Barbara teaches cooking classes at Midland college for the continuing education department.

It's never too soon to start planning a special event, so lease give Chez Vous a call at 699-1940.

Trade complete

IRVING (AP) — To complete the trade that gave the Dallas Cowboys the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft, the New England Patriots will receive linebackers Eugene Lockhart and David Howard and defensive back Ron Francis, Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said Monday.

The players were picked by the Patriots from a list of names made available by Dallas.

Besides the players, the Patriots got the Cowboys' No. 11 pick in the first round. New England used the selection to select offensive tackle Pat Harlow of Southern California.

When Lockhart's name surfaced last week as one of the players who might be made available to the Patriots, he indicated he might retire from football rather than go.

Wanke last pick

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Wanke, who spent the last two seasons as quarterback at John Carroll, an NCAA Division III school, was the last player picked in the NFL draft on Monday.

The 6-foot-3, 220-pounder was chosen by the Super Bowl champion New York Giants in the 12th round.

Only 4-5A stretch run left

■ Midland Lee and Midland High are in the state baseball playoffs, but there is some unfinished business left.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

With Midland High and Midland Lee having sewn up the two District 4-5A baseball playoff berths, the teams are now in a run down the backstretch to determine who will get the final jewel in the District 4-5A race — the league championship.

With an overall record of 12-9 and a district mark of 8-3, MHS closes its regular season at 4:30 p.m. today when the Bulldogs host Abilene Cooper at Angels Stadium. Ninth-ranked Lee (16-8, 8-2) hits the road for a showdown at Abilene High. In the other 4-5A game today, Odessa Permian travels to San Angelo and Odessa High takes a rest.

Lee will end its district schedule Saturday when the Rebels host San Angelo. So for the Bulldogs to have at least a share of the 4-5A title, they must win today while Lee drops one of its final two games.

But MHS must concentrate on Cooper first. Even though the Cougars, a perennial power in 4-5A baseball, have fallen on hard times this season with 14-9 overall and 4-6 district records, they dealt San Angelo a death blow Saturday.

Cooper's 9-4 win over the Bobcats dropped San Angelo from the playoff hunt and allowed the Midland teams to clinch the playoffs.

However, the 'Dogs have pitching ace James Madrid rested following last Tuesday's win over San Angelo. Madrid is 6-1 overall and has parented a 1.20 ERA through 29⅔ district innings.

Backing up the right-handed senior is a Bulldog offense that is averaging 10 hits and seven runs a game. MHS sprayed 10 hits in the last game, a 6-1 victory over Odessa Permian Saturday while centerfielder Dewayne Culpepper went 3-for-4 at the plate.

The Rebels will also have their ace on

Angels lose to Wichita

■ A battle of streaks begins in Kansas, where the Wranglers, 8-3 victors Monday, posted their sixth straight win and Midland was dealt its third consecutive loss.

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — The Midland Angels lost their third straight game, 8-3, Monday night to Wichita. The loss moved the Angels to 4-7 overall for the season. Wichita, which has now won six straight, improved to 8-2. The Wranglers remain ½-game out of first, behind El Paso.

Wrangler starting pitcher Darrin Riechle won his second game of the year against no defeats while Doug Brocail came on in relief in the sixth to earn his second save. Ironically, both pitchers picked up their season firsts in wins and saves against Midland last Tuesday.

Even more odd was that Riechle's line on Monday — five innings pitched, three hits, one earned run, two walks and four strikeouts — was almost identical to his line last Tuesday (five innings, two hits, one earned run, one walk, four Ks).

Midland starter Mike Butcher dropped to 0-3, but, numbers-wise, had his best night of the young season. Butcher pitched four innings, giving up six hits and seven runs, all earned.

Midland, which has lost four of the six meetings with the Wranglers this season, mounted a minor threat in the ninth on a pair of runs.

With one gone in the top of the ninth, and the Angels trailing 8-1, Daryl Sconiers reached on an error. One out later, Bobby Jones and Ken Rivers hit back-to-back singles to load the bases. Third-baseman Greg David was charged with an error when a Kevin Flora grounder skidded off David's glove into left, scoring Sconiers and Jones.

Midland's first run of the evening came in the first inning when Tim Salmon doubled to the gap in left-center to score Damion Easley. Salmon's RBI was his 12th of the year, fourth-best in the league.

The Wranglers' other multi-run frame was the bottom of the first when right fielder Charlie Hillemann parked one over the right-centerfield wall, his fourth home run of the year.

Midland High's Linda Malmqvist won District 4-5A medalist honors going away, and now she travels to Lubbock Friday and Saturday for a shot at earning a state golf berth.

Malmqvist eyes region gold

■ Midland Lee sophomore Paula King joins the Midland High senior in Lubbock's Region I golf tournament this weekend.

Midland High's Linda Malmqvist, who won District 4-5A golf's medalist honors by a whopping 18 strokes, is now set to run for bigger things.

And bigger things start Friday and Saturday when Region I sends its top individuals and teams to Reese Air Force Base in Lubbock for a chance to earn state berth honors.

Malmqvist will be joined by Midland Lee sophomore Paula King, who has the opportunity to make a rare three appearances in the Region I tournament before her playing days are over.

But it is Malmqvist, the foreign exchange student from Sweeden, who is considered a major threat at landing a trip to Austin. She averaged 77.5 strokes per round on the four-stop district tour, one that had less than ideal weather.

She posted a fine 74 at Hogan Park on a cold and windy 4-5A finale.

"I think she has an excellent opportunity to go to state," said MHS golf coach Quinn Eudy. "We know that there will be some good golfers from Fort Worth, Arlington and El Paso, but she has the skills to do well if things go right.

"The thing I like about Linda is her ability to make corrections. She's a good golfer from the discipline standpoint and has good course management skills. She can also control her emotions."

Eudy also points out that Malmqvist is an experienced golfer and that carries a lot of weight in a big tournament like this.

Youth golf in the United States is much different than the way it is conducted in Europe where Malmqvist has participated.

"We don't have team sports in the schools. We have to play on our free time. We play for a course rather than a school," Malmqvist says. "We do have a teen tour that you have to qualify for, and I played on that. It's different playing for your school and I like that part.

"As well as I'm playing now, I'm excited about playing at the regional because you will be playing with a lot of really good golfers."

Malmqvist has already proven her ability to handle the winds of West Texas, which has taken its toll even on local golfers. That could turn out to be a real strength in Lubbock.

"Wind and cold affects all golfers, but Linda likes to compete," Eudy says. "She likes to compete against an individual if it's close, or she will compete against the weather if she has to."

Malmqvist is considered a senior at MHS, but she will have to go back to high school when she gets back to Sweeden since they won't recognize her year here.

Malmqvist is suffering from a slight case of tendinitis in her left hand, and that has kept her from working out like she would like.

Lee's King was a little inconsistent in her first high school competition, but she definitely has the tools to become one of the school's best. For instance, she was nine over par for nine holes at Hogan and came back even par on the back side to earn the region berth easily.

Just making it to the regionals as a sophomore is quite an accomplishment, one King didn't fully expect to happen.

"After I was tied for the lead with Linda after the first (4-5A) tournament, I made it a goal to try to go to the regional. But not until then," said King.

The top two individuals and top two teams in Lubbock earn advancement to the state meet in Austin.

NFL squads draft to division needs

■ Cowboys, Oilers claim to have landed what they wanted/4C

NEW YORK (AP) — The latest trend in the NFL is drafting to the style of the division. At least it is for teams trying to overthrow division champions.

As Monday's second day of the draft wound down, teams were still searching for players to help combat opposing game plans.

Take Dallas. The Cowboys, who made defensive tackle Russell Maryland the No. 1 overall pick, are trying to counter the physical style of the NFC East.

Take Atlanta: The Falcons went for defensive backs and wide receivers to deal with the more wide-open style in the NFC West.

And take Pittsburgh, which went for pass rushers to stop the pass-oriented offenses of Houston and Cincinnati in the AFC Central.

"It was a great, great feeling knowing we are getting someone who can help our run defense immediately," said Dave Wannstedt, the Cowboys' defensive coordinator. "In our division, you've got to play run defense."

Few big names were left by Monday.

Perhaps the best known players chosen are coming off serious knee problems: Philadelphia took Miami quarterback Craig Erickson in the fifth round and Minnesota went for Michigan safety Tripp Welborne in the seventh round.

The Phoenix Cardinals, who stole running back Johnny Johnson on the seventh round last year, took another sleeper in Round 7, going for Ivory Lee Brown of Arkansas-Pine Bluff.

In the eighth round, Denver chose Nebraska All-American defensive end Kenny Walker, who is deaf. Walker played his high school ball in Crane.

In the ninth round, Indianapolis took Illinois running back Howard Griffith, who broke an NCAA record with seven touchdowns in a game. In the same round, Chicago took Notre Dame linebacker Mike Stonebreaker.

But the theme was divisional.

In addition to Dallas, the NFC East Phoenix Cardinals went for 300-pound defensive lineman Eric Swann in their effort to combat the running games of the Giants and Redskins.

In the AFC Central, the Steelers, with a conservative offense, have to deal with the Oilers' run-and-shoot led by Warren Moon and the all-out attack of the Bengals and Boomer Esiason. Already armed with one of the league's best secondaries, the Steelers went for Florida defensive end-linebacker Huey Richardson, who had 12 sacks last season.

The Falcons, too often riddled by the 49ers' Joe Montana and Jerry Rice and vulnerable to the Rams' Jim Everett to Flipper Anderson and Henry Ellard, went for speed in the secondary. They traded for Dolphins cornerback Tim McKyer and used their first-round picks on cornerback Charles Pickens of Nebraska and wide receiver-kick returner Mike Pritchard. Teamed with wide receiver Andre Rison and cornerback Deion Sanders, the Falcons have a handful of players who run the 40-yard dash in under 4.5 seconds.

"We've become one of the fastest teams in football," Falcons coach Jerry Glanville said.

Buffalo, which lost the Super Bowl by letting the Giants control the ball for more than 40 minutes, went both for run stoppers and guys who can hold down the passing attacks in the AFC East.

While Miami was drafting Randal Hill as a new target for Dan Marino, the Bills used their No. 1 pick on Henry Jones, an Illinois cornerback. That may allow Marv Levy flexibility in the secondary.

Then Buffalo used its second pick on a run stuffer, North Dakota State defensive end Phil Hansen.

"Henry is a corner who has versatility," Levy said. "I

Red Sox win fifth straight

Associated Press

AL Roundup

BOSTON — Tom Brunansky and Wade Boggs hit two-run homers and Ellis Burks added a solo home run Monday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-4 for their fifth consecutive victory.

Boston starter Danny Darwin left after the first batter of the fourth inning because of irritation and tendinitis behind his right shoulder. Darwin was signed as a free agent last winter for $11.8 million over four years.

Dennis Lamp (1-1) pitched one inning for the victory. Joe Hesketh, Jeff Gray and Jeff Reardon finished, with Reardon getting his fourth save of the season and the winning streak.

Toronto took a 4-1 lead in the fourth inning before Boston rallied. Brunansky's second home run of the season pulled the Red Sox within a run in the fourth and Boggs hit a go-ahead homer in the fifth off David Wells (1-2), who gave up eighth hits in 4⅓ innings.

Burks hit his first home run of the season in the eighth off Frank Wills.

Boston, which took over first place in the American League East from Toronto, went ahead 1-0 in the first on the first of Jack Clark's three singles.

Devon White's sacrifice fly tied the score in the third and the Blue Jays went ahead in the fourth on Joe Carter's two-run homer, his third home run of the season, and Greg Myers' RBI single.

Twins 3, Athletics 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Oakland lost its fifth consecutive game for the first time in three seasons as Greg Gagne hit a go-ahead single in the eighth inning to give Minnesota the victory.

Oakland, the three-time American League champions, hadn't lost five straight since June 5-9, 1988.

Joe Klink (0-1), the second Oakland pitcher, walked pinch-hitter Scott Leius with two outs in the eighth. Chuck Knoblauch singled him to second and Gagne singled to right. Leius' dive across home plate just beat Jose Canseco's throw.

Steve Bedrosian (1-0) got his first American League victory by getting two outs in the eighth inning. Rick Aguilera, the fourth Twins pitcher, threw a one-hit ninth for his third save.

Oakland, which has seven players on the disabled list, took a 1-0 in the third on Dave Henderson's run-scoring single, his league-leading 16th RBI. Willie Wilson singled with two outs and took second on Kevin Tapani's balk.

Minnesota went ahead 2-1 in the fifth on run-scoring singles by Kirby Puckett and Kent Hrbek off Mike Moore, who struck out six and walked four in six innings.

Oakland tied the game in the seventh on Mark McGwire's double and Ernest Riles' single. Larry Casian relieved Tapani, picked off Riles before throwing a pitch and retired the side in order.

White Sox 8, Orioles 7

CHICAGO — Frank Thomas hit the first home run for the White Sox in the new Comiskey Park as Chicago beat Baltimore and Ben McDonald.

McDonald made his first appearance after opening the season on the disabled list with a strained muscle in his right elbow. He allowed six runs and six hits in 4⅔ innings as the Orioles lost for the fourth time in five games. McDonald walked four and struck out three.

Ozzie Guillen and Scott Fletcher drove in two runs each for the White Sox, who rallied from a 2-0 deficit in the first and a 5-3 deficit in the fifth. Guillen went 3-for-4 and at one point had hits in six consecutive at-bats.

Alex Fernandez (2-1) struggled through seven innings, giving up six runs and seven hits while walking four and striking out four. Brian Drahman pitched one inning and Bobby Thigpen finished for his fifth save.

Baltimore led 5-3 in the fifth when McDonald walked Robin Ventura with one out. Carlton Fisk's double pulled the White Sox within a run and extended his hitting streak to 10 games. Thomas, dropped to sixth in the batting order because of a .198 average, followed with his first home run of the season, a 400-foot drive to left-center.

Chicago added two runs in the seventh on Sammy Sosa's RBI triple and Guillen's run-scoring single. Cal Ripken knocked out Fernandez in the eighth with his fourth home run of the season and added an RBI single in the ninth off Thigpen.

Glenn Davis' two-run homer, his third of the season, gave Baltimore the lead in the first, but Chicago scored three runs in the third on Guillen's RBI single and Fletcher's two-run double.

Randy Milligan's RBI double tied the score in the fourth and Baltimore went ahead 5-3 in the fifth on Joe Orsulak's run-scoring single and Ripken's RBI groundout.

Indians 10, Royals 4

CLEVELAND — Rookie Charles Nagy pitched six perfect innings before faltering in the seventh.

The 23-year-old Nagy (1-1) was perfect until Jim Eisenreich led off the seventh with a line-drive double that landed just inside the foul line in right field. Before that, the Royals' best chance at a hit was George Brett's fly to the left-field wall in the first, which Beau Allred caught high against the fence.

After Eisenreich's hit, Kansas City loaded the bases on an error and a walk, and Danny Tartabull's sacrifice fly ended Nagy's string of 19⅔ scoreless innings. Kirk Gibson followed with a three-run homer, his fourth home run of the season.

Steve Olin and Doug Jones finished for Cleveland, which ended a three-game losing streak and sent Kansas City to its fifth loss in six games. The Indians, who had been averaging 1.9 runs per game, had six doubles and out-hit the Royals 19-3.

Kevin Appier (1-2) gave up six runs and 11 hits in 3⅓ innings for the Royals.

Chris James, who drove in three runs, gave Cleveland the lead in the first with an RBI single and the Indians added six runs in the fourth when Joel Skinner and Jerry Browne hit two-run singles and James hit a 414-foot, two-run homer off Luis Aquino.

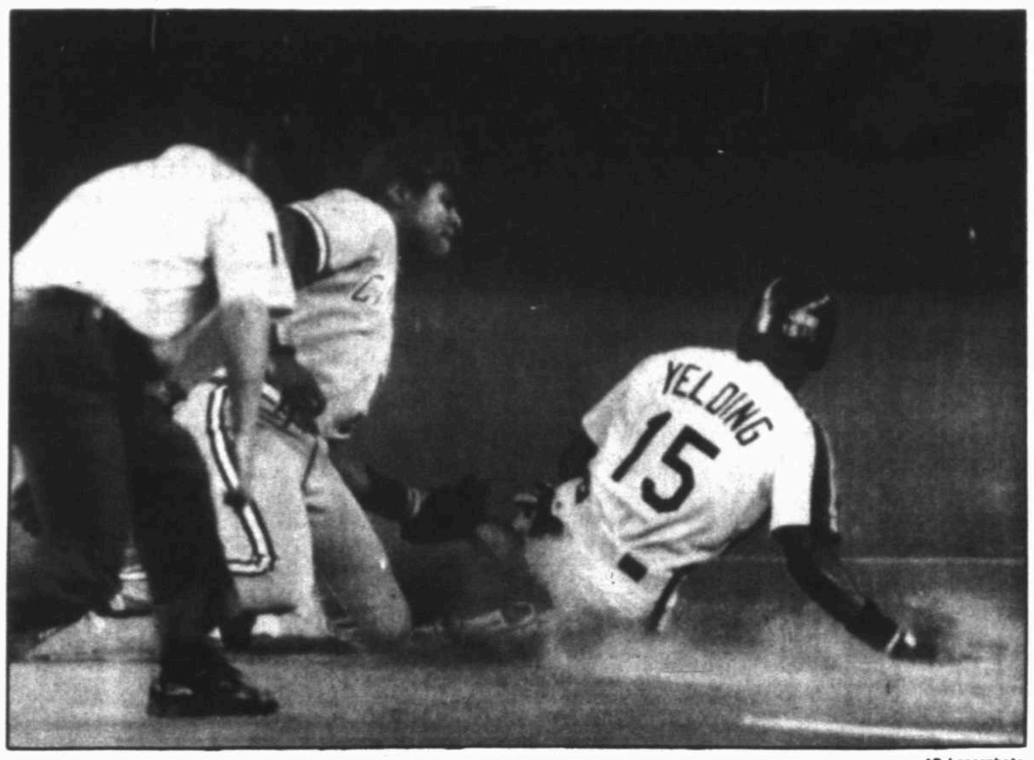

Jose Escobar's first major-league hit made it 8-0 in the fifth. Allred hit an RBI double in the sixth, and Carlos Baerga hit his first home run of the season in the eighth.

Skinner, playing because Sandy Alomar complained of blurred vision in his left eye before the game, had three hits, as did Baerga and Alex Cole. Baerga also made three errors at third base.

Tigers 10, Yankees 5

NEW YORK — Cecil Fielder blooped a two-run double to break a ninth-inning tie and Rob Deer then added a three-run homer as Detroit got its fifth victory in six games.

Detroit overcame an early five-run deficit on homers by Mickey Tettleton and Travis Fryman.

Associated Press

National League

HOUSTON — The Houston Astros snapped a streak of 31 consecutive scoreless innings with two runs in the ninth off Cincinnati reliever Randy Myers to beat the Reds 2-1 Monday night.

After Norm Charlton and Myers had shut out the Astros through eight innings, Ken Caminiti singled, pinch-hitter Mark Davidson walked and Luis Gonzalez singled to score pinch-runner Mark McLemore with the tying run.

Myers (0-1) walked Casey Candaele on four pitches before Karl Rhodes drove a single to right field, scoring Davidson.

Gonzalez's hit was his third in his last 26-at bats. Rhodes had three hits in the game, breaking out of a 1-for-14 slump.

Dwayne Henry (1-0) pitched 2⅔ innings of one-hit relief for the victory, helping the Astros snap a three-game losing streak.

Before the ninth-inning rally, the Astros last scored in the fourth inning of Friday's 5-2 loss to San Francisco. Houston hasn't been shut out three straight times since July 1985.

Charlton allowed five hits in seven innings, struck out seven and walked one before Myers relieved.

Cardinals 3, Cubs 2

ST. LOUIS — Felix Jose hit a two-run homer off Dave Smith with one out in ninth inning to give St. Louis Cardinals a victory over Chicago and send the Cubs to their fourth consecutive loss.

Ray Lankford lined out to open the ninth, but Dave Smith (0-2) walked Pedro Guerrero on five pitches. Jose followed with his second home run of the season, giving Smith his third blown save in seven opportunities.

Juan Agosto (1-0), the third St. Louis pitcher, pitched a perfect ninth to finish a four-hitter. Jamie Moyer (0-3), pitching against his former team for the first time, allowed three hits in six innings, walked four and struck out two. Mike Perez followed by allowing one hit in two innings.

Cubs starter Shawn Boskie gave up four hits in 7⅔ innings, struck out three and walked one. He allowed a run in the eighth on Bernard Gilkey's RBI single.

Jerome Walton opened the game with a double over the first-base bag, moved up on a wild pitch and scored on Shawon Dunston's sacrifice fly.

NHL

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Jon Casey made 29 saves and Curt Giles' first playoff goal since 1984 ignited a four-goal outburst in the first 10:48 as the Minnesota North Stars beat the St. Louis Blues 5-1 Monday night and took a 2-1 lead in their NHL playoff series.

Minnesota, the NHL's 16th-best team during the regular season, beat No. 1 Chicago in the opening round and now has home-ice advantage against No. 2 St. Louis heading into Game 4 of the Norris Division finals Wednesday night. The North Stars have won five of their last six playoff games.

The Blues, who finished 37 points ahead of Minnesota, had a similar start in their first-round series. They split at home against the Red Wings and lost twice in Detroit before winning three straight to become only the eighth team to rally from a 3-1 series deficit.

Gretzky Injured

EDMONTON, Alberta — Los Angeles center Wayne Gretzky, the NHL's leading scorer during the season, was forced to leave Monday night's playoff game with the Edmonton Oilers when he suffered facial injuries in the first period.

The teams were tied 3-3 going into overtime.

Gretzky was cut near his left ear when hit by a high shot off the stick of teammate Steve Duchesne.

After being hit, Gretzky threw off his helmet and put his hand over his ear. Blood streamed down his neck.

Gretzky was taken to the dressing room, where an ear specialist and a dentist were summoned to examine him.

Initial reports indicated Gretzky received 25 stitches on his ear, but a later unconfirmed report said he received 36 stitches above the ear.

He did not return for the remainder of the game.

There was no word on whether Gretzky's helmet was a factor in the injury. He wears a lightweight Jofa helmet with little padding.

Cowboys sign top three picks

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys announced the signing of their top three draft picks Monday, including defensive lineman Russell Maryland, the No. 1 selection in the draft.

Dallas also reached agreement with wide receiver Alvin Harper, the 13th pick of the first round, and linebacker Dixon Edwards, the Cowboys' second round choice and 37th overall selection.

"That was vital," coach Jimmy Johnson said. "We were prepared logistically to get it done. We're very pleased we have all three under contract."

Thus the Cowboys avoid lengthy holdouts that caused their first two choices of last year, running back Emmitt Smith and wide receiver Alexander Wright, to miss all of training camp.

"We're excited about getting them in camp. It adds the finishing touches when you can make that draft pick and then get them right on into town," owner Jerry Jones said.

Jones had talked for months about the Cowboys' desire to hammer out draft-day contracts before selecting players. Jones denied the Cowboys jumped the gun and came to a pre-draft agreement with Maryland, which would have violated a league directive.

"We weren't concerned about stepping over the guidelines," Jones said. "We had communication with Leigh Steinberg (Maryland's agent). He volunteered that Russell would be very proud to be here and gave us an idea of the range of money. We made our pick on that understanding, but we didn't have a financial agreement until after the pick."

No contract terms were announced.

Knights surge past Surge

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.(AP) — Quarterback Jeff Graham ran for two touchdowns and Eric Wilkerson rushed for 133 yards and another TD Monday night as the New York-New Jersey Knights won their second straight World League of American Football game, beating the Sacramento Surge 28-20.

Graham, who has run for four touchdowns and thrown for four this year, connected on 16 of 30 passes for 244 yards. Elkins completed 15 of 31 passes for 208 yards and both touchdowns for Sacramento.

Timberwolves fire Musselman

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — On Feb. 26, Bill Musselman coached the Minnesota Timberwolves to their fifth straight victory over the Dallas Mavericks. He also coached himself out of a job.

Musselman was fired Monday, not because he didn't win enough but because of philosophical differences with management and because he couldn't communicate with players. The Timberwolves' two-year record was 51-113, the best of the NBA's four most recent expansion clubs.

Club president Bob Stein said the search for a replacement would begin immediately.

Co-owner Marv Wolfenson said the beginning of the end for Musselman was that 100-94 victory over Dallas. The Timberwolves had lost nine of 10 games, including three straight at home, and Musselman felt the only way they could beat the Mavericks was by using a six-man rotation.

"We had a meeting just that morning and all we talked about was, 'Winning wasn't paramount, developing younger players and please, communicate with the players more.' Well, we were sort of defied," Wolfenson said.

"The coach did not gain in a situation like that, where he defies management and ownership so completely, especially when he knows our philosophy. At that point, it appeared as if Bill just wanted to play out the season and win as many games as he could."

Musselman, who will be paid about $365,000 for the final year of his contract, said he wasn't trying to be defiant.

"We had lost a couple of games at home that were close. We had beaten (Dallas) so many times one way, I didn't want to change my game plan," he said. "I felt it was important to get a win. Even the first year, I felt it was important to get a win every four, five, six games just to keep the fans and be competitive. I felt we needed it."

That was the basis for the philosophical differences. Stein and Wolfenson said no game was more important than the big picture. Musselman said nothing is more important to him than winning.

"The difference boils down to two issues," Stein said. "We talked about them before Bill was hired. They are things he agreed to address but, for whatever reason, had a tough time doing.

"The first one was developing the team and our young players long-term as a key priority. That's above and beyond winning any particular game at all costs and we think that's appropriate for an expansion franchise.

Musselman, 50, was a winner at every level except the NBA.

Spurs to win, Rockets to lose in NBA first round

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

The NBA playoffs have a new look, with only one of the division winners repeating this season.

The two-time defending champion Detroit Pistons are the No. 3 seed in the Eastern Conference and will have homecourt advantage against No. 6 Atlanta in the first round, in which all series are best-of-5.

Portland, which snapped the Los Angeles Lakers' nine-year hold on the Pacific Division title, is the No. 1 seed in the West, ahead of Midwest champion and second-seeded San Antonio, the only division winner to repeat.

Chicago, which won 60 games for the first time in franchise history, is the top seed in the East, replacing the Pistons. Atlantic Division champion Boston, which unseated Philadelphia, is the No. 2 seed.

In Thursday's openers, it's Utah at Phoenix, Golden State at San Antonio, New York at Chicago, Philadelphia at Milwaukee and Houston at the Lakers. On Friday, it's Indiana at Boston, Atlanta at Detroit and Seattle at Portland.

The first-round playoff pairings, seedings and predictions:

WESTERN CONFERENCE

No. 8 Seattle at No. 1 Portland — The Trail Blazers finished with the NBA's best record and had 16 consecutive victories before a loss to Phoenix on Sunday. Many of the key Sonics, including Benoit Benjamin, Shawn Kemp and rookie Gary Payton, will be making their first NBA playoff appearances. Portland is battle-tested from top to bottom and is determined to return to the championship series. Trail Blazers in 3.

No. 7 Golden State at No. 2 San Antonio — The Warriors' victory over Utah on Sunday brought about this matchup, which looks much tougher for Golden State than the Jazz would have been. San Antonio center David Robinson had 1,063 rebounds and 320 blocked shots this season. But Golden State's triple threat of Chris Mullin, Mitch Richmond and Tim Hardaway will cause problems for the Spurs, who split four games with the Warriors this season. Spurs in 5.

No. 6 Houston at No. 3 Los Angeles Lakers — The Rockets scared everyone at the beginning of the month when they were concluding a 17-1, 29-5 run. Since then, Houston is 3-5 and not so formidable-looking, but the Lakers have to be worrying about the Hakeem Olajuwon-Vlade Divac matchup at center. Los Angeles has won 11 of its last 14 games and appears primed to make another Western Conference run after a second-round upset last year. Lakers in 4.

No. 5 Utah at No. 4 Phoenix — The Jazz are emotionally volatile, with first-round playoff upset losses the past two years, then blowing the Midwest title on the final day of the regular season. But the Suns have problems of their own, with Kevin Johnson, Chambers and Dan Majerle returning from injuries. These teams, which opened the season with a split of consecutive games in Tokyo in November, should battle to the wire again. This time, the Jazz will find a way to win. Jazz in 5.

EASTERN CONFERENCE

No. 8 New York at No. 1 Chicago — The Bulls swept the Knicks in four games during the season, and Chicago needed less than 12 minutes to wipe out a 24-point deficit in their final meeting two weeks ago at Madison Square Garden. New York won 10 of its final 13 games at home, but lost nine of 11 on the road, a bad omen when the series has three games at Chicago Stadium. Bulls in 3.

No. 7 Indiana at No. 2 Boston — Despite the disparity in seedings, the Pacers are going into this series with some reason for confidence. They split four games with the Celtics during the season, and Bird's back problems sidelined him from the first week of April until Sunday's final game. His health for the playoffs is uncertain, but the Celtics will be tough to beat at Boston Garden even if he is still slowed. Celtics in 4.

No. 6 Atlanta at No. 3 Detroit — Thomas came to the rescue just in time for the Pistons, making them reappear as a formidable team when it started to look like the championship magic was gone. Thomas has been alternately brilliant and average since returning from wrist surgery, with his toughest outings coming in afternoon games before he can control the pain and swelling. He was 6-for-26 from the field in his last two afternoon games. Detroit won all five meetings between the teams, but additional weekend games could minimize the Pistons' advantage. Pistons in 5.

No. 5 Philadelphia at No. 4 Milwaukee — Injuries also are a big factor in this series, with Barkley returning only last week for the 76ers. Dale Ellis is out for Milwaukee, having been replaced by a rusty Adrian Dantley. The Bucks, who lost four consecutive games before blowing out Indiana by 33 points in their season finale, were nearly unbeatable at home in the first half of the season, but their three-guard rotation system has been less effective lately. 76ers in 4.

Johnson thrilled with draft picks

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys were the biggest wheelers and dealers in the NFL draft, and coach Jimmy Johnson was thrilled with the results.

The Dallas Cowboys were determined not to be shut out of defensive players in the NFL draft like they were the two previous years, Coach Jimmy Johnson said.

"We were not going to let that happen this year," Johnson said.

So the Cowboys sent three players and the No. 11 pick in the first round to New England for the No. 1 pick.

The Cowboys gave a brief look at Notre Dame wide receiver Rajhib "Rocket" Ismail, with the idea of trading the pick and still ending up with the No. 2 or 3 pick and still getting the player they really wanted — Miami defensive tackle Russell Maryland.

But Ismail's price was too high, Johnson said, and the Cowboys didn't want to take any chance at not getting Maryland, who played for him at Miami and won the Outland Trophy as college football's top lineman last fall.

Getting Maryland set the tone for "a very good day," Johnson said. But the phone lines at the Cowboys' draft room were busy all day, as the Cowboys moved in and out, up and down in the draft.

At one time or another, six of the first 20 picks in the first round belonged to Dallas.

The Cowboys used their No. 12 pick in the first round to grab Alvin Harper, a 6-3, 203-pound Tennessee speedster that Johnson said was their top-rated receiver.

"We wanted to get a quality receiver. We didnt realize we would be able to get the best one," Johnson said.

Dixon Edwards, a 6-foot, 222-pound linebacker out of Michigan State, was so highly regarded that the Cowboys almost took him with the No. 14 selection in the first round.

But gambling that he would still be around later, the Cowboys traded down to No. 17, then traded down from there to No. 20 and finally down to No. 37 in the second round, picking up additional draft choices with each move.

When Edwards was still on the board, 18 selections later, for the second-round draft pick the Cowboys finally ended up with, Johnson was ecstatic.

"You'd be shocked to see where we had all three players rated," Johnson said of Maryland, Harper and Edwards. . "Our first three picks are what you need to build a program. We're very excited about them."

Because of extra picks obtained through various trades, the Cowboys ended up with 10 picks in the first four rounds. The Houston Oilers with six picks were the only other team with even half that many.

The first round lasted a record 4 hours 55 minutes, almost 20 minutes longer any any previous first round, and the Cowboys were mostly responsible for the traders' market that slowed the pace.

"You ought to see how many phone lines we got lit up in there," owner Jerry Jones said at one point Sunday, pointing to the Cowboys' draft room at Valley Ranch. "I've taken 100 phone calls, maybe more. No telling how many more we will take."

Dallas, having traded down twice already from the 14th pick to the 17th and then to the 20th in the first round, had already written Edwards' name onto a 4x4 card that was about to be passed to Commissioner Paul Tagliabue at the New York draft headquarters.

But two minutes before the 15-minute clock expired on the 20th round, the Detroit Lions called the Cowboys. Detroit wanted the pick to take Mississippi defensive tackle Kelvin Pritchett. As the final seconds ticked down, instead of finalizing the trade, Johnson telephoned New York and drafted Pritchett for Dallas.

Detroit coach Wayne Fontes, who became flabbergasted, shouted into the line, "Come on, I thought we had a deal, Jimmy!"

"We do," Johnson responded. "We took him for you. Now let's work out the details of the trade."

Dallas originally wanted a first-round choice in 1992, but settled for second, third and fourth-round choices from Detroit.

Oilers build up secondary, line

HOUSTON (AP) — Offensive line coach Bob Young and secondary coach Pat Thomas got what they wanted in the Houston Oilers' selections at the NFL draft.

The Oilers went into the draft intending to get more bodies for the secondary. They had only three cornerbacks and wanted to add depth at safety, but picked five defensive backs among their 13 selections.

The offensive line is among the best in the NFL but it's reaching its peak and the Oilers wanted to start preparing for the future, so Young was delighted to get Syracuse center John Flannery, one of two offensive linemen selected.

"He's good enough that he could do it (start as a rookie) but you'd hate to play a rookie the first year unless you have to," Young said. "In the run and shoot, the center calls all the line blocking. I'll probably work him mostly at center and maybe a little at guard."

Starting center Jay Pennison was benched for the final game of last season and guard Bruce Matthews took his spot. Matthews will go to training camp as the starting center, but Flannery will get a chance.

"This gives us more flexibility," Young said. "He runs a 5-flat 40 and he can play either guard or center. I'm happy to get him."

Matthews wasn't eager to make the move last year.

"Bruce will start off there and work two positions," Young said. "We've had a couple of talks and we'll have one more. Bruce wants to do what's best for the team.

"He really doesn't want to move to center and he doesn't want to think about tackle, but he'll do what's best."

Thomas likes the defensive back flavor of the Oilers' selections.

Starters Cris Dishman and Richard Johnson and backup Dee Thomas were the only cornerbacks on the Oilers' roster prior to Sunday's draft. Lewis moved to defense after playing two seasons at running back at Arizona.

"He's a quick little corner," Thomas said. "He's very well suited for what we want our corners to do."

Dumas is 5-10 and Lewis is 5-8 but that doesn't concern Thomas.

"I was 5-9, 170 my first year when I came in and made all-pro," Thomas said. "I've seen a lot of other guys at that size be All-Pro playing against Harold Carmichael and a lot of the tall, supposedly fast receivers.

"As you know, these days it takes more than just measurements. Some big fast guys don't think or use football instincts that it takes to get the job done."

Dumas, Lewis and Flannery were all chosen in the second round by the Oilers, who traded away their first-round pick for more lower-round selections. In Monday's second phase, the Oilers took three wide receivers, two linebackers and a running back.

DRAFT: Signability is key

think pure safeties are obsolete. You have to have defensive backs on the field who can cover."

There were some teams that drafted according to their own philosophy.

The Bears, for example, took Notre Dame's Chris Zorich on the second round when most scouts thought that, at 6-foot-1 and 265 pounds, he was too light for the NFL.

"He's a Bear," said coach Mike Ditka. "There are short Bears. They are the meanest bear if you meet a Bear in the woods."

The Giants lived up to their image as Linebacker U., taking three in the first six rounds to replenish their talented but somewhat aging corps. They got Kanavis McGhee of Colorado in the second round on Sunday, then following it up Monday with Anthony Moss of Florida State and Corey Miller on the fifth and sixth rounds.

And Bill Belichick, the Cleveland Browns new coach, brought his Giants philosophy with him when he drafted hard-hitting safety Eric Turner in the first round, then began collecting linemen.

"I see championship teams being able to dominate the line and being strong up the middle," he said.

Another element was signability. Of the first five picks, four were represented either by Leigh Steinberg or Bob Woolf, who have a relatively good reputation with club executives and tend to get their players to camp.

Woolf represents the fourth pick, Mike Croel of Nebraska, who was taken by Denver and the fifth, Notre Dame's Todd Lyght, who was chosen by the Rams.

Swann's agent, Dick Bell, said he will ask for only 10 percent more than the sixth overall pick last year instead of the normal 20 percent.

Pentagon trims order for ATFs

Looming reduction of military forces warrants cut, official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon has reduced its planned order of Advanced Tactical Fighters by 100 planes, with the total cost of the 21st-Century aircraft now estimated at $95 billion, Air Force officials told Congress Monday.

In a surprise announcement, the Air Force's director of tactical programs said the looming cutback in total U.S. military forces warranted a cut in the purchase of the ATF to 650 planes.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told Congress last April that the Pentagon planned to buy 750 of the next-generation stealth aircraft, designed to cruise and accelerate at supersonic speeds without use of an afterburner.

In one of the fiercest competitions in the defense industry, two contracting teams are vying for the right to build the ATF — one team is Lockheed, Boeing and General Dynamics; the other is Northrop and McDonnell Douglas.

The Pentagon said Monday that Air Force Secretary Donald Rice would announce the winning team today at 3:30 p.m. CDT, after the stock markets close.

Air Force Maj. Gen. Joseph Ralston told the Senate Armed Services subcommittee on conventional forces and alliance defense that the planned cut in tactical fighter wings from 36 to 26 led to the cut in the ATF buy.

The reduction means a decrease in the total cost of the program from about $110 billion to $95 billion, Ralston said. The cut, however, will force up the price of a single plane, with the possibility that it could rise to $108 million during the life of the program.

The first ATF plane is expected for delivery in the year 2005.

Ralston concurred with the Congressional Budget Office's testimony that rather than $55 million per plane, the ATF will cost about $73 million apiece in fiscal 1992 dollars.

At the same time, "We have far more confidence" in that cost estimate than "in any program in modern history in the Air Force," Ralston said, citing the five years of demonstration and validation testing on the aircraft.

Robert F. Hale of the Congressional Budget Office told the Senate panel that since World War II, each new generation of tactical fighter aircraft has cost at least 80 percent more than its predecessor.

Hale said the cost of the advanced tactical fighter is low by historical standards, and could rise to as much as $135 million a copy.

Rush to Kuwait worth the wait

By Jack Z. Smith
N.Y. Times News Service

William Rice has one reason for wanting to go to Kuwait — "to make money."

But Rice, 35, a former $18-an-hour construction worker who manages a tire store in Hurst, Texas, appears to have long odds against him in trying to land a high-paying job in the war-torn nation.

Experts on Kuwait's massive rebuilding effort say U.S. companies are expected to win the majority of contracts awarded for restoration work. But most companies will rely largely on their existing work force and laborers from the Persian Gulf region.

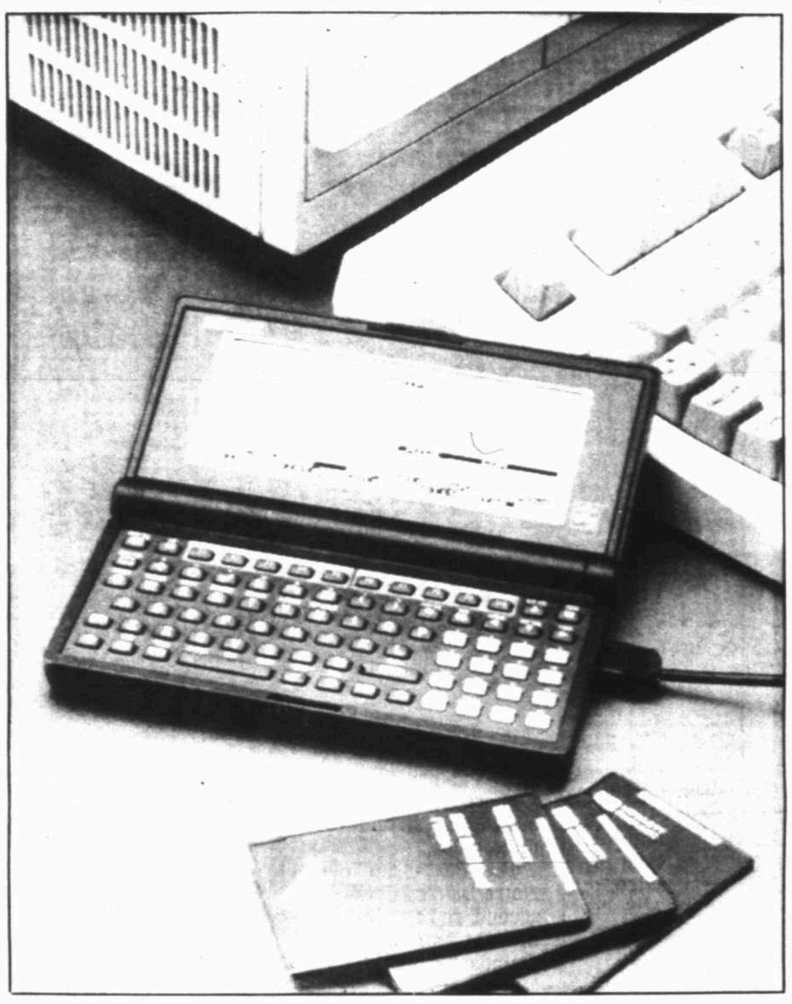

Americans also may find the rebuilding of Kuwait to be less lucrative than expected because the damage to the nation's infrastructure appears to have been considerably less than anticipated. Enthusiasm of U.S. companies has been further dampened by the Kuwaitis' slow pace in awarding contracts.

At a conference in Dallas last week for companies interested in winning business in Kuwait, experts counseled that most of the big rebuilding contracts — and accompanying subcontracts — probably won't be awarded for several months or more. Some expect the rebuilding effort to take up to 10 years.

Hence the cautious advice from Bob Barksdale, a consultant with Keycor Inc., an Arizona engineering and consulting firm. Barksdale was among the panelists at the Dallas conference sponsored by the Texas law firm of Baker & Botts.

"I think the watchwords I would give you going into the Middle East are to be patient, be persistent, be polite and have a sense of humor — and perhaps the last one may be the most important," said Barksdale, who recently returned from

Sagging sales, other woes hit JCPenney's

By Isadore Barmash
N.Y. Times News Service

J.C. Penney Co. had high hopes that by now it would be enjoying the fruits of its 1987 transformation from a full-line department store to primarily a clothing store.

Instead, it has run into a buzzsaw of problems that are cutting heavily into sales and earnings.

The company has just reported a 6.6 percent decline in its March sales compared with a year ago, and sales at stores open at least a year were down 8 percent.

While Sears, Roebuck & Co. said Thursday that its profit had soared 91 percent in the first quarter, analysts say they expect a 50 percent drop in earnings when Penney issues its first-quarter report on May 14. Those declines follow a dismal 1990, in which Penney's earnings fell 26.1 percent.

Robert Gill, vice chairman of Penney, which is based near Dallas, said the company expected to report a "substantially down quarter" in its next earnings report.

Many retailing analysts and consultants say Penney's troubles stem partly from stiff price-cutting by competitors and partly from the chain's failure to attract fashion-minded women looking for exciting styles and well-known brand names.

Even so, these experts have mixed feelings about Penney's continuing experiment to sharpen its 1,800 stores with the right mix of national clothing brands and glitzier decor and merchandise. While these changes may eventually pay off, analysts say, Penney seems to have no distinct merchandising or pricing identity.

"Penney is perhaps the single retailer most vulnerable to broad economic trends," said Andrew D. Regan, an analyst at the Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. in New York, "given its position as a mid-priced store in a merchandising transition, seeking to convince shoppers to experiment with the new Penney approach of more upscale products. Such experimentation is more difficult to encourage when the consumer is cautious."

Penney's prices are generally moderate, but its stores do not carry the wide variety of discounted merchandise that Wal-Mart stores do. And, while Penney's clothing is generally of high quality, it has yet to catch up to a Macy or Nordstrom in designer-level fashions.

Company's 1st-quarter earnings drop sharply

NEW YORK (AP) — Capital Cities-ABC Inc. said Monday its first-quarter profit skidded 44.9 percent, reflecting the impact of the economic slowdown and the costs of reporting the Persian Gulf conflict.

The broadcasting and publishing giant indicated it might have an earnings decline for the second quarter as well.

The report was the latest in a series of glum news from media companies for the first three months of the year. Advertising demand is expected to post its smallest gains in two decades this year.

CBS Inc. reported earlier that that its earnings dropped 73 percent in the first quarter.

The National Broadcasting Co. does not report results separately from its parent, General Electric Co., but GE said NBC's operating profit was sharply lower in the first three months of 1991.

Capital Cities-ABC said earnings tumbled to $58.6 million, or $3.50 a share, in the three months ended March 31 compared with $106.3 million, or $6.08 a share, a year earlier.

Revenue for the quarter slipped to $1.255 billion from $1.262 billion a year earlier. Broadcast revenue rose 1 percent to $1.00 billion, while publishing revenue fell 7 percent to $250.6 million.

The company said the ABC Television Network had a slight operating profit, a significant decline from a year ago, despite a slight increase in revenue.

At the network, the weak ad demand and the loss of revenue from pre-empted commercial time were offset by extra revenue from the telecast of the Super Bowl football game this year as well as two playoff games that were not on the ABC schedule a year earlier.

Revenue at the company's television and radio stations was down slightly because of soft advertising demand.

Operating income overall fell 38 percent to $130.3 million with broadcasting profits off 40 percent to $120 million and publishing results down 24 percent to $18.4 million.

INVESTORS' GUIDE
'Safe,' 'high interest' don't go together

By Bill Doyle

Q. My wife is 61 and I am 64. We have just sold our house and will have approximately $37,000 cash in our hands at closing. We will retire in about two years. We want to rent for that period of time and invest this money in something real safe. Our goal is to save more and work toward having a debt-free house when we retire.

Doyle

Where is the safest place to put this money, where will it draw the most interest?

A. "Safest" and "most interest" do not go together. You can't get both in the same investment. If you want one, you simply cannot get the other.

Think this through and you will have no trouble understanding why. Interest is the income you receive for putting your money out on loan. Conversely, interest is the price a borrower pays for the use of your money.

It stands to reason that a borrower with a rock-solid record of never defaulting on debts pays low interest, while less credit worthy borrowers must pay higher interest. After all, you would want higher interest from bonds issued by Hot-Shot Widget, Inc., than from U.S. Treasury securities or certificates of deposit backed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

And that brings us to the two basic choices suited to your needs. Assuming you are determined to keep your money where it is free from all risk, put it in CDs or U.S. Treasury notes.

Banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions can issue CDs with maturities matching the date you will need the money to buy a retirement home. As I write this, two-year CDs are yielding a bit below 7 percent. But shop around, because rates vary from bank to bank, S&L to S&L and CU to CU.

Treasury notes with two-year maturities now are yielding about 6.9 percent. If you buy them, do it by opening a Treasury Direct account at the Federal Reserve Bank serving your area of the country. Get the Fed bank's address from your local bank.

Q. I am concerned about the safety of my self-directed individual retirement account, in which I have $24,000 of U.S. Treasury notes purchased through the brokerage affiliate of a local bank.

True, they are both insured. But what would happen if the bank or brokerage goes under?

A. Your IRA would be transferred elsewhere, most likely to the custodian of your choice. You wouldn't lose a dime.

The Treasury notes and everything else you have in your IRA are held by the IRA custodian in trust form. The assets in your IRA are not part of the custodian's assets. If the custodian goes bust, its creditors could not touch your IRA's assets.

Your letter does not say if the bank or the brokerage is the IRA custodian. The soothing words in the two preceding paragraphs apply whether bank or brokerage is custodian.

Q. My wife and I have U.S. Treasury securities in our Treasury Direct account. These are made out in my name "and" my wife's name, "joint owners with right of survivorship." Our other investments are in my name "or" my wife's name.

Would the Mr. "and" Mrs., JTWROS, create any problems if one of us passes away?

A. None, whatsoever. When one of you joins the choir silent, as we all must, the survivor becomes the sole owner of those Treasury securities, which are in joint ownership form.

Prices rebound

Associated Press

Energy futures prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange were led by gains in heating oil.

West Texas Intermediate for May delivery closed at $21.62, up 49 cents from Friday's close. The May contract expired Monday. June contracts climbed 39 cents to close at $21.32.

May contracts for natural gas closed at $1.342 per cubic feet, down .005 cents. June contracts lost .004 cents to close at $1.381.

T-Bills rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction for the first time in several weeks.

The Treasury Department sold $7.62 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.69 percent, up from 5.57 percent last week. Another $7.62 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.79 percent, up from 5.67 percent last week.

Stocks tumble

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined broadly Monday in selling ascribed to doubts about the outlook for Federal Reserve credit policy and interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 33.67 points on Friday, tumbled another 37.87 to 2,927.72.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar continued to rise against major foreign currencies Monday as traders expected stable U.S. interest rates and continued economic weakness in Europe.

Gold prices rose, partly on news of a strike by Soviet gold miners in sympathy with Soviet coal miners. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $357.90 a troy ounce, up $1.20 from Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's rates, included: 1.7645 German marks, up from 1.7360; 1.4700 Swiss francs, up from 1.46785; 5.9455 French francs, up from 5.8575; 1,301.25 Italian lire, up from 1,282.00.

Gold rose in London to a late bid price of $357.25 a troy ounce from $356.50 bid per ounce late Friday.

Silver prices were narrowly lower. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $3.931 a troy ounce, up from $3.905 on Friday.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices tumbled today amid doubts about the outlook for Federal Reserve credit policy and interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 40.59 points to 2,925.00 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 7 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 353 up, 1,249 down and 404 unchanged.

Analysts said enthusiasm for stocks was limited by the perceived reluctance of the Federal Reserve Board to relax its credit policy.

Since early April the Fed has made no clear-cut moves to provide further stimulus to the economy despite evidence of the recession's persistent hold on business conditions.

Interest rates were little changed in the credit markets today, leaving rates on long-term Treasury bonds hovering in the 8.24 percent-8.27 percent range.

Brokers also cited a letdown among some traders after the Dow Jones industrial average's first close over 3,000 last week, which attracted little follow-through buying.

NCR climbed 4⅞ to 101⅝ in active trading. American Telephone & Telegraph, which had been offering $100 a share in cash to acquire NCR, changed the bid to $110 a share in stock.

AT&T dropped 1⅛ to 36¼.

Other losers among the blue chips included Philip Morris, down 1¼ at 67¼; American Express, down 1 at 27; General Motors, down 1¼ at 37⅞, and International Business Machines, down 1⅛ at 108⅜.

Golden Valley Microwave Foods jumped 7⅛ to 24. Conagra Inc. agreed to acquire the company through an exchange of stock.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 2.08 to 208.15. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 4.12 at 366.71.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Mitchell extender

BeeKay Oil completed a 202-barrel extension to Mitchell County's Gartner (Penn Reef) field.

Mitchell activity nets 202-barrel extender

Staff Report

Exploration activity in Mitchell County has netted an eastern extender to the Gartner (Penn Reef) field.

BEEKAY OIL CO. tested the No. 1 Betty to flow 202 barrels of 45 gravity crude, 173 Mcfd and no water on a 14/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 680 psi. The well flowed from perforations 7,284 to 7,295 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Permitted as a 7,600 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,309 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 7,299 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,238 ft., include the Dean at 5,232, Wolfcamp at 5,379, Pennsylvanian Shale at 5,870, and Upper Canyon at 7,262 ft. Pay was topped at 7,284 ft.

Location is 337.8 ft. from west and 1,030.8 ft. from north lines of Section 65, Block 20, LaVaca Navigation Co.survey, 14.2 miles northwest of Westbrook.

Lea reentry project nets Delaware strike

The reentry of an abandoned well in Lea County, N.M. has yielded a Delaware discovery, surrounded by production in the Diamondtail field.

STRATA PRODUCTION CO. reentered the No. 1 Urraca Federal, recompleting it to pump 45 barrels of crude and 215 barrels of water from perforations 6,618 to 8,595 ft. The interval was acidized with 4,400 gallons of acid and fractured with 72,500 lbs. sand.

Cleaned out to original total depth of 15,950 ft., the well was plugged back to 9,004 ft. A 5 inch liner was hung from 12,235 to 15,950 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,707 ft., formation tops include the Rustler at 1,220 ft., Delaware at 4,951, Bell Canyon at 7,058, and Bone Spring at 8,511 ft. Pay was topped at 6,618 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 11, T23s, R32e.

The well was drilled by Happy Oil Co. as the No. 1 Trista Draw Federal.

Delaware discovery pumps 173 barrels oil

YATES PETROLEUM CORP. has completed a Delaware discovery in Eddy County, N.M., west of the Bilbrey field.

On potential test, the No. 3 Lost Tank "AIS" State pumped 173 barrels of crude, 75 Mcfd and 108 barrels of water from perforations 6,783 to 7,084 ft.

Drilled to 8,620 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 8,255 ft. Pay was topped at 6,783 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 36, T21s, R31e.

Crockett yields 234-barrel Wolfcamp well

The Southwest Mesa field of Crockett County gained a new Wolfcamp producer as BASS ENTERPRISES PRODUCTION CO., Midland, completed activity in the area.

Bass tested the No. 1 Hill State to flow 234 barrels of 35.4 gravity crude and no water on a 14/64 inch choke from perforations 6,249 to 6,260 ft. The interval was acidized with 650 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 744:1.

Permitted as a 9,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,903 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 6,580 ft.

Location is 855 ft. from north and 2,190 ft. from east lines of Section 12, Block PP, H&TC survey, Abst. 5473, 12 miles northeast of Bakersfield.

Irion field gets fourth Fusselman producer

A fourth Fusselman producer has been completed in the Hondo field of Irion County, extending the pay 7/8-mile southwest.

HONDO OIL & GAS CO. DELAWARE, Roswell, potentialed the No. 1 Harris to flow 131 barrels of 45.31 gravity crude and 12 barrels of water on a 14/64 inch choke. The well flowed from open hole interval 9,162 to 9,182 ft., which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 15,580 gallons of fract. Gas-oil ratio is 541:1.

Permitted as a 9,700 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 9,182 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 509 ft. from north and 693 ft. from west lines of J.A. Althofen survey 1942, Abst. 4, 25 miles north-northwest of Barnhart.

Kuwait.

The rebuilding effort has been greatly slowed because the Kuwaitis have first faced the difficult emergency tasks of restoring water, electricity and telephone communications, as well as removing deadly land mines planted by Iraqi troops. This initial phase was scheduled to last 90 days but is now expected to drag on considerably longer.

"Phase One, the emergency phase, is going to take nine months, not 90 days, as far as I can see," said Michael Saba, president of GulfAmerica Corp. in Champaign, Ill., an international business services and management consulting company.

Kuwait is still dominated by "chaos and confusion," said Saba, who visited the country last month.

Barksdale estimates that Kuwait will spend $20 billion to $30 billion putting out hundreds of oil well fires and restoring its petroleum facilities to full production. But he projects that rebuilding the rest of the country's infrastructure may require only $5 billion to $10 billion — a fraction of the $50 billion to $100 billion previously estimated.

Saba said there is not as much structural damage as had been expected.

"I think a lot of people felt like Kuwait City would end up looking like Dresden after World War II. It doesn't," he said.

But Saba sees the rebuilding task as a huge effort. And he believes there may be up to $20 billion worth of business generated by the "private goods" market in Kuwait — for example, selling the Kuwaitis cars to replace vehicles stolen by the Iraqis, or refurbishing heavily looted and vandalized homes.

David Bartlett, senior vice president of First Hanover Securities, an institutional research firm in New York, still expects that the rebuilding effort will require $30 billion to $65 billion and calls it "a helluva bonanza" for American firms.

"The technology is going to come from America," he said.

But it's still difficult, and sometimes impossible, to get a telephone call through to Kuwait, Saba said. And while the country is in its emergency phase, it is greatly restricting visas to Americans who want to travel there. Therefore, experts say businesses seeking contracts in Kuwait should first contact federal agencies such as the U.S. Department of Commerce to let them know of their interest in Kuwait.

than for its women's wear brands," says Daniel D. Barry, a retail analyst for Kidder, Peabody & Co. in New York.

Company executives acknowledge that they have not moved quickly enough to add more familiar labels and say they are trying to step up those efforts.

"We've made some progress," said Gill. "In women's furnishings, we have added Warner and Bally, but we do need more brands in women's sportswear. We would like to get the Liz Claiborne line, which is the major sportswear line in department stores.

DEAR ABBY

In a blind rage clear through produce

DEAR ABBY: One recent Sunday morning, I went to the grocery store to do my weekly shopping. I was selecting some bananas when I noticed a small billfold lying among them.

Van Buren

I picked it up and looked around for the owner, but not seeing anyone, I took the billfold directly to the front desk of the store, then returned to my shopping.

Soon afterward, a lady came up to the desk and asked if anyone had turned in a billfold. The clerk returned it to her, then pointed me out as the person who had found it. This woman marched over to me and said, "I need the money you took out of my billfold!"

For a moment I was too shocked to speak, then I told her I took her billfold directly to the clerk when I found it.

She said, opening the wallet for effect, "Well, I had $48 in here, and now it's gone!"

I said, "I'm sorry, but I didn't take your money!"

She gave me a dirty look and then marched off.

Abby, I was in a blind rage clear through to the meat section, then I calmed down and told myself that she was upset about losing her money and simply took it out on me.

But upon reflection, I then concluded that that was no excuse for her accusation. What do you think? — HONEST SHOPPER IN CHARLESTON, W.VA.

DEAR HONEST SHOPPER: You're right, her accusations were based on circumstantial evidence, which is all she had to go on. In all probability, someone had found her billfold containing the $48, removed the money and tossed the empty billfold among the bananas where you found it. Her anger was misdirected.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a large family. I have several children and grandchildren, too. I have never interfered in any of their marriages or gone to anyone's home uninvited. I am always ready to help them out if they need me.

My oldest granddaughter is getting married in June. I'm not even sure I will be invited. But frankly, since she hasn't spoken to me in a year and a half, I really don't care to go. I have never said an unkind word to or about her, nor have I ever forgotten a birthday or Christmas. (I have never received a word of thanks.)

I can't go to her wedding and pretend to have a good time. I will go to the church, however, to witness the ceremony.

Some of my children are in agreement; others are not. Please advise me. My daughter and I have a very good relationship. — NAMELESS GRANDMOTHER

DEAR NAMELESS GRANDMOTHER: You will probably receive an invitation to the wedding, so if you want to avoid the reception and go only to the church, that's your privilege. Suit yourself. The bride will probably be too caught up in the excitement of the occasion to take notice of your presence or your absence.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WANTS TO BE A SUCCESS": If you sincerely want to be a success — work, and work hard. The dictionary is the only place where "success" comes before "work."

AT WIT'S END

Our patience is wearing thin

Most of our lives are spent in anticipation. Seventeen more months before I can get my driver's license. Two more weeks before vacation. Three days before the wedding. Tomorrow at this time my hair will be cut and styled. The baby is due next week. My tax refund is scheduled to arrive this month. Two years to retirement and I'm outta here. I don't know who set up the timetable for these events, but somewhere along the line, patience was elevated to a sacrament.

Bombeck

As I reflect over the milestones of my life, anticipation was the best part. The reality somehow never measured up to the fantasy I created in my own mind. After I got my driver's license, I had to grovel for the car keys. I owed my entire tax refund to my parents. My haircut always turned out to be a forerunner of Sinead O'Connor's. And my vacations usually ended up at Raw Sewage Lake where the mosquitoes filed flight plans.

Throughout the years, patience has become a fallen virtue. The fallout from the adult world has filtered down to our children like the promises of a new barber shop: no waiting, no numbers, unlimited chairs.

They date before they can drive, wear makeup before they need it and drink before they can handle it. They win beauty pageants while they're still in diapers. Athletes retire in their 30s to write their memoirs. Even travel that was once the prize for growing older has become cruises geared toward children. One can barely remember the days when sex was discovered between the pages of National Geographic.

What brought all of this to mind is the topic of graduations. It used to be a long-awaited day in a person's 17th or 18th year. It was a day in which you had done something pretty wonderful. You had run the academic course and made it to the finish line. It was a day for family, cameras and reflection.

Not anymore. Graduation gowns come in toddler sizes now, and an eighth-grade graduation is just $3 short of a wedding. One school graduating a group from junior high reported kids arriving in limousines, boys in $70 rented tuxedos and girls wearing ballroom gowns.

I've heard stories of classes going to Disneyland. Others threw banquets at $15 a pop.

The sadness in all this is that we've stolen from kids two important parts of their childhood: the incentive to keep going ... and the dream of finishing something they started.

'Cornhusker' moniker makes it into Webster's Dictionary

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraskans referring to themselves as Cornhuskers have the blessing of America's best-selling desk dictionary.

"Cornhusker: a native or resident of Nebraska — used as a nickname," is how it reads in the 1991 Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, editorial director Frederick C. Mish said Friday from Springfield, Mass.

Editors at Merriam-Webster Inc. trace the first printed use of the word Cornhusker referring to Nebraskans to 1948, said Merriam spokeswoman Leslie Manganaro.

"Since then the term has been cited in publications ranging from Boys' Life in 1952 to Vogue in 1985," Ms. Manganaro said.

The word likely was used earlier in reference to the University of Nebraska athletic teams, but nicknames of schools aren't dictionary material, Mish said.

Charles S. "Cy" Sherman, a sports editor at the turn of the century, is credited with first using the term Cornhusker to refer to the University of Nebraska athletic teams, said Larry Andrews, a professor of English and linguistics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Before Sherman, the teams were called the Bugeaters, Andrews said.

Coastal state senator resumes filibuster

AUSTIN (AP) — A senator Monday resumed delaying tactics against a bill that he claims would foul his back yard — the Texas coast.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, picked up where he left off last Thursday, when the Senate adjourned for the weekend after Truan had conducted a filibuster of five hours and 15 minutes.

On Monday Truan started fresh, cleared the 7½-hour mark and kept going, after assuring senators at 6 p.m. that they had plenty of time to eat.

An Earth Day audience in the Senate balcony applauded and cheered when Truan called the bill a "fraud on the taxpayers of Texas."

The measure by Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville, would authorize the creation of coastal conservation districts, which could sell tax-exempt bonds and levy taxes for public improvements such as roads and sewers.

Crime-victim advocates anxious for debate

AUSTIN (AP) — Backers of legislation to help crime victims said Monday they are anxious to get the bills before the full House for debate.

Lynne Thompson-Haas, director of the Austin Rape Crisis Center, pointed to bills dealing with sexual assault that were sent to the Calendars Committee on March 27.

The committee schedules bills for debate on the House floor.

The measures would remove the spousal exemption from prosecution in all sexual assault cases; prohibit mandatory polygraph testing of people who report a sexual assault as a condition to charging a defendant; and remove the promiscuity defense for a person who sexually assaults a child, which now allows a defendant to cite previous sexual experience of someone age 14 to 16.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, a Democrat from Corpus Christi who heads the Calendars Committee, said the bills were not being bottled up.

"Some of the committee members have had some questions about them, and I suspect that we'll have an opportunity to debate those bills out here on the floor in the very, very near future," he said.

1 worker dies, 2 hospitalized in accident

FORT WORTH — A 43-year-old construction worker was killed Monday and two others were hospitalized after heavy equipment toppled at a bakery construction site, authorities said.

The dead man has not been identified, said Butch Hall, a Fort Worth Fire Department spokesman. The worker died shortly after arrival at Harris Methodist Hospital with massive internal injuries.

The deceased and two other construction workers were moving a large electrical panel at the new Fort Worth bread plant for Mrs. Baird's Bakeries, Inc. when the accident occurred at about 8 a.m.

Man faces prison, fine for killing tiger

DALLAS — A Dallas man faces up to a year in federal prison and a $100,000 fine, for killing a Bengal Tiger in 1989, U.S. Justice Department officials said Monday.

Joe Eldon Mills, 50, pleaded guilty in January to killing the tiger by using veterinary anesthetics and an ice pick, according to a statement issued by the Justice Department.

Mills is scheduled to be sentenced Tuesday in Tyler.

"It doesn't matter whether it's in a zoo or India, it's still a protected species," said Allen Hurst, assistant U.S. attorney in Tyler.

Bengal tigers are protected under the Endangered Species Act.

Hope keeps school alive

By Richard Stewart
Houston Chronicle

PORT ARTHUR — It's a small school, with an unassuming facade on a quiet, narrow street, but Port Arthur's Hughen Center for Crippled Children and Adults draws students from all over the country.

What it offers is hope. And one of its biggest, most fervent supporters is comedian Bob Hope.

"The Hughen Center is an oasis on the Gulf Coast for physically challenged young people," Hope said in a 1989 video promotion for the center. "This place has a purpose. It is to give the students the hope of a future in the adult world."

Hope became associated with Hughen in 1975. At the time, he was a spokesman for Texaco, which has a major refinery in Port Arthur. Local residents, the oil company and Hughen officials agreed that one of Hope's benefits should aid the school.

Ward Grant, the comedian's press agent, recalled that Hope and his wife, Dolores, fell in love with the school.

"It was the first school anywhere that offered a high school diploma for crippled children," Grant said. "He liked the program. All the ducks just fell in line."

And they have continued to fall in line. Hope has returned each year to stage the benefit. This year's, dubbed "America Salutes Bob Hope," is scheduled for Friday and Saturday at Montagne Center at Lamar University in Beaumont.

JOINING HOPE on Friday will be country singers Linda Davis and Dottie West, comedians Andy Andrews, Al Fike and Fred Travalena, ventriloquist Jeff Dunham and guitarist Tony Melendez.

Country and western singer Ricky Skaggs heads Saturday's show, along with the Indian River Boys and Lulu Roman Smith, ventriloquist Gloria Barron, fiddler Jimmy Gyles and Melendez.

Hope actually was the second celebrity to become fond of the school. In 1969, Jimmy Durante and the Fraternal Order of Eagles built the "Inka Dinka Doo," a swimming pool named for the comedian's theme song.

Hope's first show was held in a local high school football stadium and the warm-up acts were a couple of high school bands. Hope and his wife entertained for about 30 minutes. This year's show will last four hours.

In 1979, the center wanted to build a high school and Hope pledged to raise $1 million through a 20-hour statewide telethon, originating from Houston's KPRC. The telethon raised $1.13 million and the Bob Hope High School opened the next year.

Other years haven't been as good.

In 1988, the Southeast Texas economy was suffering and the crowd in the Montagne Center was pretty thin. Hope sent the school $60,000 to help make up for the small crowd.

NOW, THE CENTER is trying to raise money to restart programs at its Hebert Adult Vocational Training Center, hit hard by a sour economy after its opening in 1986.

Designed for students 21 to 35 years old, the center will provide training in computer skills, printing, engraving, graphic arts and ceramics. Hughen backers want to raise $1 million to assure operation of the Hebert center, Executive Director Susan Naquin said.

"We don't want to start up this program, get a bunch of people in it and then have to close it down and abandon them," she said.

Hughen Center opened in 1933 as the Spastic School, with five students, one teacher and one therapist at Port Arthur's St. Mary Hospital. In 1938, landowner Thomas W. Hughen donated land for the school and volunteers built a one-room wooden building, a 50,000-sqare-foot structure that remains part of the campus.

In the early days, volunteers raised funds by knocking on doors. They also recruited support from Rotary, Eagles and other service organizations.

In 1938, the school had a $4,000 yearly budget. Today, the budget exceeds $1 million. Forty-three students live on campus; an additional 20 commute.

All have orthopedic handicaps but can learn, Naquin said. Most suffer from cerebral palsy, spina bifida or other birth defects or have suffered some physical trauma.

MANY CAN'T TALK or have vision problems. Some suffer from some retardation, but many have brilliant minds trapped in bodies that just don't work very well.

"We look for something we call the 'X factor,'" Naquin said. "(It's) the special something that drives a kid to express himself no matter what obstacle is in the way.

"Most of them have the 'X factor' to some degree."

AP Laserphoto

Entertainer Bob Hope lends his support to the Port Arthur (Texas) Hughen Center by staging a benefit each year. This year's benefit, dubbed "America Salutes Bob Hope," is scheduled Friday and Saturday in Beaumont.

Former student Steve Burch had the "X factor," Naquin remembers. He could only communicate with others through a keyboard operated by a stick mounted on his forehead. If somebody didn't put the headband and stick on his head and roll him up to a typewriter or computer key board, he couldn't talk.

Then he told Naquin that he had an idea.

He'd learn to send messages via Morse code with his eyes.

"That's fine," Naquin answered, "but it's just like sign language. If the other person doesn't know the Morse code, they won't understand. I don't know the Morse code."

Burch rolled away to think about his problem.

That's when he invented what the people at Hughen call "sky writing."

Like many palsy victims, he had pretty good eye control, so he learned to move his eyes as if he were tracing letters in the air.

"He learned to do it backward," Naquin added, "so that the letters would be turned right for the people looking at him."

SOON ANYBODY who followed Burch's eyes could figure out what he was spelling, Naquin said.

Not long afterward, a young therapist saw Burch sitting near Tracy Ching, who also couldn't speak. Every now and then one of them would laugh, just as if they were conversing.

The therapist rushed into Naquin's office.

"These kids are communicating!" he said, "And I've figured out how they do it. They all have ESP!"

Ching and Burch weren't communicating telepathically. He had taught her to sky write.

Students are treated with plenty of love, but are encouraged to do as much as they can.

Laurie Barton, 18; of Ben Wheeler can barely speak and can't control her body well. She operates her electric wheelchair by moving her neck, Hughen Assistant Administrator Rita Marston said.

"At last year's prom she was whizzing around in that thing so fast that I thought the controls were broken," Marston said. "She was just dancing."

Still, not all endings at Hughen are happy. Early on April 13, little freckle-faced Eula Ply, 9, lost her fight against medical problems that condemned her to a life in a wheelchair.

SHY WITH STRANGERS but a chatterbox with her adopted family at the school, she was one of the children who definitely had the "X factor."

Eula was from the tiny West Texas community of Seminole and her family didn't have the money to transport her home for the holidays.

A class of fourth-graders at Orangefield Elementary School — youngsters just her age — adopted Eula as one of their own. They had a "Eula Ply Day" and held bake sales and other events to raise money for her to fly home for Thanksgiving and Christmas. Eula had wanted to fly home for Easter, too, Naquin said, but there just wasn't enough money.

Eula suffered from cerebral palsy, Naquin said, and several years ago surgeons implanted a tube to drain fluid from her brain. More operations would be necessary, doctors said.

Earlier this month, Eula complained of headaches. Medical tests failed to determine the cause. As her condition worsened, she was admitted to Port Arthur's St. Mary Hospital, where she died last Saturday.

"She just slipped away," Naquin said. "We try to make life as normal as possible for our children. Sometimes we forget how medically fragile they are."

Workers' compensation trial gets under way in Eagle Pass

EAGLE PASS, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for organized labor and the state of Texas faced off in court Monday over whether the state's new workers' compensation law is constitutional.

The Texas AFL-CIO is challenging the law, claiming it lowers disability benefits for most injured workers, restricts employee access to courts, and discriminates against Hispanics by reducing benefits for injured farm workers.

Bill Whitehurst, co-counsel for the AFL-CIO, said a workers' compensation system must protect employees.

"You can't just make up something — there are limits," Whitehurst said during opening statements in state district court. "It must be adequate. It cannot be arbitrary."

The Texas Legislature approved the business-backed workers' compensation reform law in 1989 after two bruising special sessions. Then-Gov. Bill Clements signed the measure.

Maverick County State District Judge Rey Perez agreed in December that certain provisions of the law may be unconstitutional.

He granted a temporary court order blocking implementation of the system.

But the state attorney general's office appealed, essentially allowing the law to take effect Jan. 1.

Now both sides are trying the case before Perez to decide whether there should be a permanent court order blocking the law.

Joe Pitner, a lawyer with the attorney general's office, questioned whether there was a basis for the legal challenge. He said only one worker now listed as a plaintiff was injured on the job, and that he is receiving benefits under the new workers' comp law.

Pitner said organized labor and some workers challenged the law before it took effect, using hypothetical scenarios.

"The new Texas workers' compensation law, is presumed constitutional," he said. "To overcome this presumption of constitutionality the plaintiffs have a very heavy burden of proof."

Joining the state as an intervenor for the defense is the Texas Association of Compensation Consumers, which backs the new law.

"The problem under the old compensation law was it didn't operate fairly," said attorney Shannon Ratliff, who was hired to represent TACC. He added that injured workers in some counties received more money than those in counties where juries were less generous.

"The only constitutional test is looking at whether workers as a group, are they better off?" Ratliff said. "We believe it is better."

With the new system, workers generally recover disability pay more quickly and on a no-fault basis, Ratliff said.

Under the old system, businesses complained of skyrocketing workers' comp insurance premiums which had increased nearly 150 percent over a four-year period. They blamed that on the cost of litigating disputes with employees over compensation benefits.

Labor groups and lawyers for injured workers blamed the rising premiums on unsafe businesses and greedy insurance companies.

Attorneys in the Maverick County case expect this trial to last up to two weeks.

Austin mayoral candidate interrupts debate taping, claiming media bias

AUSTIN (AP) — Mayoral candidate, hot dog vendor and self-proclaimed former mobster John Johnson walked off stage during a candidate forum, saying media coverage of the race has been biased.

Johnson interrupted Sunday's taping of the mayoral candidate debate by arriving late and demanding a seat on stage with six other candidates who already were wearing their television make-up.

Johnson, who had a U.S. flag draped around his neck, stayed for two questions.

On April 3, he said he is a reformed mobster who was convicted of murder as a member of the New Jersey Campisi crime family. He has been in Austin for nine years under the federal witness protection program.

Asked whether Austin should move its airport, Johnson stood and said, "For what I am going to do today, I apologize to the kind and good-hearted people of Austin."

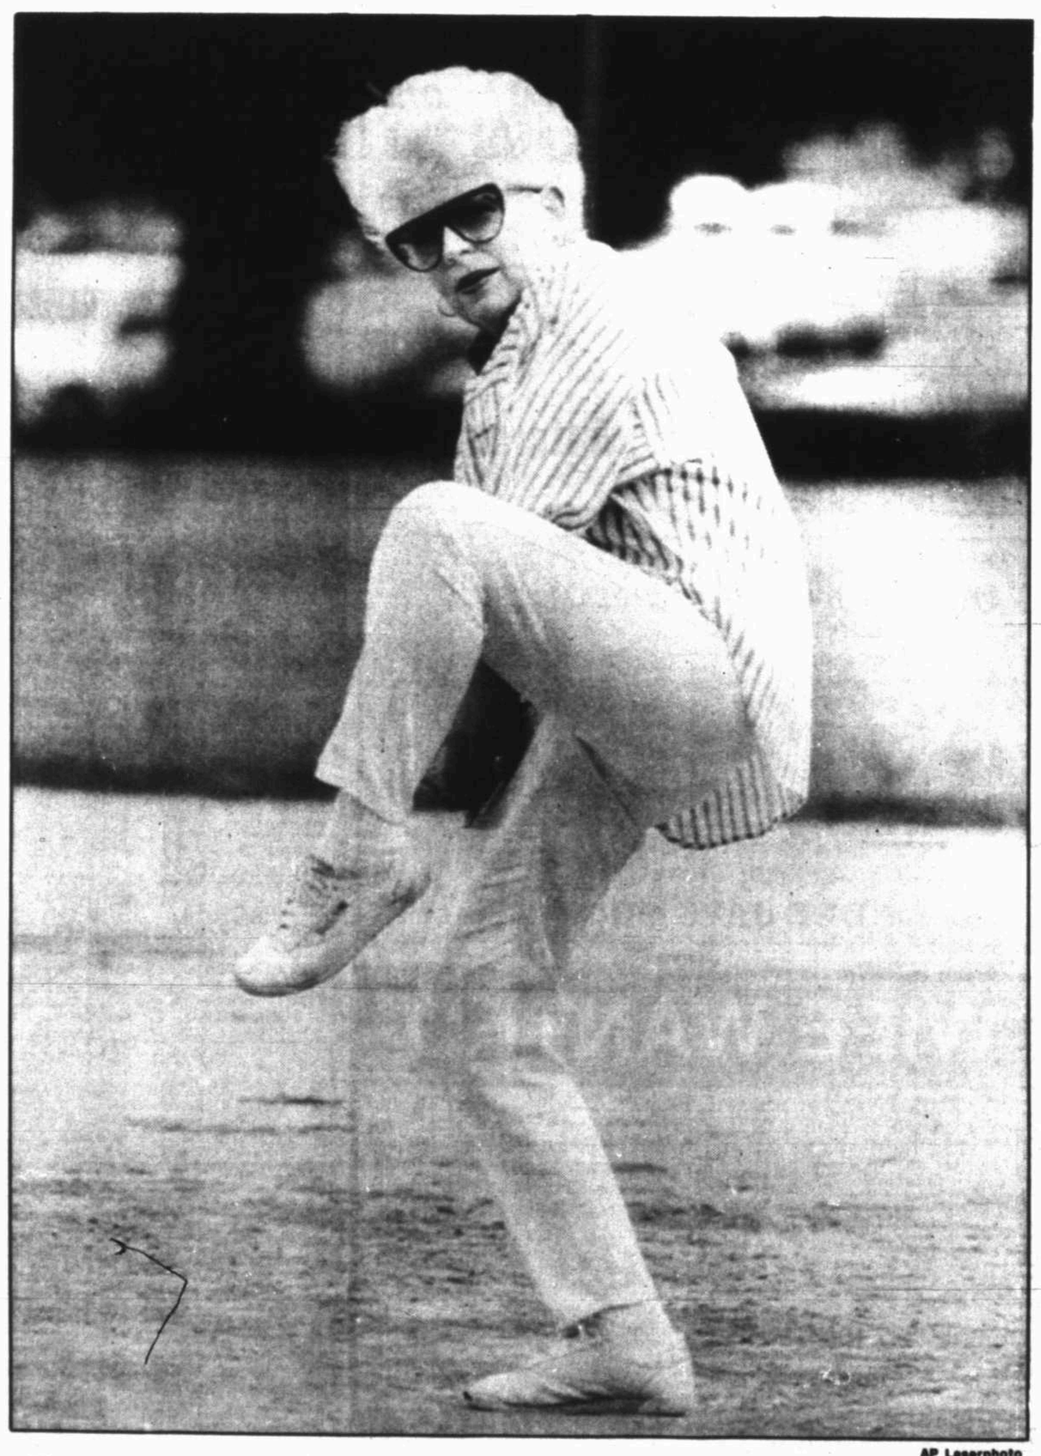

He displayed a hand-lettered sign alleging biased news coverage, then stayed for a question on how to remedy the city's $10 million budget shortfall.

Johnson said the city could save $2 million by stopping the tearing up of downtown sidewalks.

Before leaving, he added, "If you don't vote for me, take a good look at these underdogs in this race. Take a good look at them. You've got some good people up here. Don't vote for the status quo ... "

City Council member Robert Barnstone, another candidate, said he was worried when Johnson stood up and began to apologize for what he was about to do.

"I was getting ready to tackle him when he stood up," Barnstone said. "I was within a hair of lurching (toward him)."

S-10 BLAZER "The Mini Suburban"

CHEVROLET'S		FORD'S
4-DOOR S-BLAZER	VS	EXPLORER
CHEVROLET'S WARRANTY		FORD'S LIMITED POWERTRAIN WARRANTY
3 Year/50,000 Mile Bumper to Bumper	VS

SOME OF CHEVY'S IMPORTANT ADVANTAGES OVER FORD EXPLORER

- Larger V6 4.3 liter vs. Ford's 4.0 liter
- 230 ft. lbs. torque vs. 225 ft. lbs. torque
- 2 MPG advantage with automatic transmission
- Larger fuel tank for more cruising range with automatic transmission
- S-10 has 4-wheel anti-lock brakes which are standard equipment vs. Ford's rear wheel only anti-lock brakes.
- Chevy's cargo floor is 3" longer
- Chevy's Blazer has a wider & higher rear opening area for cargo
- More maximum payload 1497 lbs. vs. Ford's 1050 lbs.
- More towing capacity 6000 lbs. vs. Ford's 5500 lbs.
- Chevy 4x4 has a standard Insta Trac system that lets you shift in and out of 4-wheel drive without stopping or backing up vs. Ford's touch drive which requires stopping & reversing to disengage front hubs.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
