Clinton, GOP face off in budget clash

■ Veto showdown threatens partial government shutdown next week.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In an extraordinary display of budget brinkmanship, President Clinton and the Republican-controlled Congress moved Friday toward a veto clash likely to force a partial government shutdown next week and a possible default in the days to follow.

"Republicans in Congress have a responsibility to keep the government running without cutting Medicare and increasing premiums, without cutting education and undercutting the environment," Clinton said.

"We are on a mission," countered Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, the chairman of the House Budget Committee and a leader in the GOP majority's yearlong drive to balance the budget.

In an atmosphere of intense partisanship, lawmakers sent the White House a measure providing for a month-long extension of the government's borrowing ability and a $67 billion increase in the $4.9 trillion debt limit. The vote was 291-185. Clinton attacked it as "deeply irresponsible" because it contains a provision limiting the Treasury Department's authority to manage the country's finances. His spokesman said a veto was "automatic."

The second of two contested measures, needed to permit most federal agencies to continue operations after midnight Monday, was approved in the House on a vote of 224-172 and sent to the Senate. A vote there was expected Monday. The bill would cut back on spending for many agencies as well as increase Medicare premiums, and the White House promised that it, too, would be vetoed.

Administration officials already had begun drafting plans for a partial government shutdown when the current spending authority expires Monday night.

Social Security checks would go out, they said, but no new applications taken. VA hospitals and the air traffic control system would remain in

TU files to credit customers' bills with $64 million

From Staff Reports

DALLAS — TU Electric filed a request Friday with the Public Utility Commission to refund customers $64 million, including interest through December, because of lower-than-projected fuel costs from June through September 1995.

Subject to PUC approval, the refund will be made as a credit on January bills.

The amount of the refund will depend on the quantity of electricity used. A TU Electric residential customer with a January bill for 1,000 kilowatt-hours would receive a credit of $9.

The refund is proposed because of declining natural gas prices, which last spring fell to their lowest point on the spot market in two years and have remained at that level.

Electric utilities under PUC jurisdiction recover their fuel costs from cus-

Simpson seems to ignore disapproval

NEW YORK (AP) — O.J. Simpson, seeming to ignore overwhelming evidence of public disapproval, professes to see only warmth and acclaim in the way he has been treated since his acquittal. Is he deluding himself or just trying to restore his image?

Simpson's comments in a phone interview set off speculation by armchair psychiatrists and legal experts on what might have motivated him to speak out.

"This is, in effect, his third trial of the century," said Loyola University Law Professor Laurie Levenson, a regular commentator on Simpson's murder trial. "The first was the criminal trial. The second will be the civil trial. But perhaps the most important one is to restore his reputation. He wants to get the word out that he's not a bad guy."

In taking over his own public relations campaign, Levenson said, Simpson was drawing on his greatest asset — his

Rabin's assassination: too much trust, too little protection

By Dan Perry
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — His prime minister was stretched bleeding across the back seat of the armored Cadillac, mortally wounded, but limo driver Menachem Damti had no getaway instructions for such an emergency.

"Drive! Drive!" the dying man's bodyguard screamed, but the swiftest route to the hospital was clogged with surging crowds. Maddeningly, the urgent trip was further delayed when the desperate driver had to argue his way through a police roadblock.

At the hospital, no medical teams were poised to attend to the gaping wounds opened by hollow-point bullets: No one had called ahead.

Beyond these lapses, and despite the widespread disbelief among Israelis that any Jew would kill the prime minister, last Saturday's assassination of Yitzhak Rabin was amply forewarned and frightening simple to carry out — security guards neither frisked the backstage visitor nor shot back when he fired at Rabin.

An initial probe by the Shin Bet security service released four days after the assassination found that "as a result of defective planning and implementation ... the murderer succeeded in approaching the prime minister to a fatal proximity."

Four top Shin Bet officials have already lost their jobs.

The government of acting Prime Minister Shimon Peres has ordered an independent inquiry to answer the lingering questions about security:

How did the confessed assassin, 25-year-old Yigal Amir, get so close? Why wasn't Rabin wearing a security vest? Why were the cars of Rabin and Peres left parked for an hour — letting the shooter know where to wait?

And why weren't bodyguards prepared for an attack by a Jew?

There is also the broader question of whether Israeli democracy went too far in tolerating vicious incitement against Rabin, denounced at opposition rallies as a traitor, murderer and oppressor for giving up land for peace.

In the search for a wider conspiracy, police have linked Amir to a extremist group named Eyal and arrested five others suspected of either aiding him or knowing of his plans.

Saturday's rally was to show mass support for Rabin's peacemaking with the Palestinians and other

Zhirinovsky runs on rage, appeals to angry voters across Russia

By Candice Hughes
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Akim Bogatyrov says he's voting for Vladimir Zhirinovsky on Dec. 17. Why? Because he believes Zhirinovsky was Alexander the Great in a past life.

Sound a little crazy? Maybe. But not half as outrageous as much of what Zhirinovsky does and says. Outrageousness — and rage — are at the heart of Zhirinovsky's appeal.

He is the angry man's candidate, a master at playing on the dark emotions of hate, fear, suspicion, confusion, disappointment, the thirst for revenge.

Every time he punches a fellow legislator, or threatens to string up democrats and reformers, every time he insults Muslims, Jews and dark-skinned people, every time he predicts the decline of the West and the rebirth of the Russian empire, he is carefully cultivating his constituency.

Anger propelled Zhirinovsky and his ill-named Liberal Democratic Party to a smashing surprise victory in the 1993 parliamentary election: 23 percent of the vote, far more than anyone else.

Every time he punches a fellow legislator (or) predicts the decline of the West, he is carefully cultivating his constituency.

Although his party organization is stronger now, Zhirinovsky has slumped in the polls. And he's got two big problems he didn't have in 1993: serious competition and limited TV exposure.

But don't count him out. Zhirinovsky has confounded expectations before. A virtual unknown, he finished third in the 1991 presidential race. In 1993, not a single pollster saw his sweep coming.

Can he do it again? Does it matter?

For true believers, like Bogatyrov, there are no doubts. "They may mock him, but he's coming to power," the radio repairman said.

Zhirinovsky would be the first to agree. For him, the parliamentary campaign is just a warmup for the 1996 presidential race — and he needs to do well. Few expect a repeat of his 1993 performance.

Zhirinovsky understood what was happening in Russia long before pollsters and other politicians did. People were desperate for something new in 1993. They'd suffered under communism, then they'd suffered under reform. They wanted a third option.

Zhirinovsky was it.

"He's not so much a politician as an actor, or a cultural phenomenon," says Sergei Markov, of the Carnegie Foundation's Moscow think tank. "He was the first to sense the change of thinking."

The typical Zhirinovsky supporter lives in a small- to medium-sized city, probably in the Far East, and has little education. Two-thirds of his supporters are men; blue-collar workers are his bulwark.

Zhirinovsky ran against communism and against reform. Like a skilled surfer, he caught the crest of the next big wave: Russian nationalism.

Today those are crowded waters. A horde of nationalist contenders are jostling for space.

None, however, can match Zhirinovsky's sizzling style. He is acknowledged as a brilliant campaigner, perhaps the best in the country.

Veto by U.S. forces Dutch government candidate for NATO chief to withdraw

PARIS (NYT) — The leading European candidate to become NATO's senior civilian official pulled out Friday after the United States vetoed him for the job. The move threw the alliance off balance, as it prepared to take on a possible peacekeeping role in Bosnia and to take in new members from central Europe.

The Dutch government angrily withdrew the candidacy of former Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers, Dutch officials said, because U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher had told them that the United States was not satisfied that he was qualified to become NATO secretary general.

In Berlin, Lubbers said he had withdrawn because his candidacy had become "divisive."

The Clinton administration is now pushing for Uffe Ellemann-Jensen, a 54-year-old former Danish foreign minister, a senior NATO diplomat said.

Ellemann-Jensen, who speaks fluent English but has an irreverent sense of humor that does not come across in his less fluent French, was interviewed by U.S. officials in Washington last weekend and will be seeing the French foreign minister here Monday.

So far, he also has the backing of Denmark, Norway and Iceland, but he needs the agreement of all 16 NTAO members to get the job.

Nigeria executes playwright, 8 others; world reacts with anger

■ United States recalls its ambassador, imposes travel restrictions.

Associated Press

LAGOS, Nigeria — Defying international appeals for clemency, Nigeria's military rulers hanged playwright Ken Saro-Wiwa on Friday, along with eight other anti-government activists.

International reaction was swift and angry. The United States recalled its ambassador from Nigeria and imposed travel restrictions. Representatives of the 52-nation Commonwealth of Britain and its former colonies were planning an emergency meeting for today to decide whether to expel Nigeria from the group.

President Nelson Mandela of South Africa and British Prime Minister John Major demanded Nigeria's expulsion, and diplomats said that was almost certain to happen.

Saro-Wiwa, 54, was convicted in the deaths of four men during a May 1994 political rally.

He maintained that he was framed because of his opposition to the military regime of Gen. Sani Abacha and to the oil industry that earns 80 percent of Nigeria's export income.

"This heinous act by the Nigerian authorities flies in the face of appeals by the world community for a stay of execution," Mandela said today in Auckland, New Zealand, where Commonwealth leaders were meeting.

A member of the Ogoni tribe, Saro-Wiwa campaigned on behalf of the 500,000 Ogoni who live in Nigeria's oil-rich south and say their land and water are being destroyed by oil industry pollution.

A recent nominee for a Nobel Peace Prize, Saro-Wiwa received Sweden's $250,000 Right Livelihood Award last year, and the Goldman Prize from a San Francisco foundation this year, recognizing him as one of Africa's leading environmentalists.

He wrote plays, children's books and two novels critical of the military government — "Sozaboy," the story of a cab driver who finds himself in the army, and "Prisoner of Jebs," which poked fun at the ruling elite.

Saro-Wiwa also wrote and produced a popular television series, "Basi and Co." which satirized the rich and famous, as well as the government.

A tribunal in the southern Nigerian oil city of Port Harcourt convicted Saro-Wiwa and the other eight men, all Ogonis, of murder on Oct. 31. The ruling military council upheld the death sentences Wednesday.

The mens' wives tried to bring them a meal late Thursday but were turned away.

"Oh God, what am I going to do? He is the only thing I have in the whole world," sobbed Hauwa Saro-Wiwa, the playwright's wife.

On Friday, with a large crowd of sympathizers gathered around her home, she told reporters: "It is all over."

The men were executed at about 11:30 a.m. and taken for burial inside the Port Harcourt cemetery, which was surrounded by armed soldiers and tanks. The junta announced the executions eight hours later, and released no details.

Lagos and Abuja, Nigeria's federal capital, both were calm. Port Harcourt was beefed up with soldiers and tanks, but it was too to tell whether demonstrations would be held.

The Clinton administration and the 15-nation European Union both said they were planning to review ties with Nigeria. The Ogoni Community Association, based in Britain, urged the United Nations to expel its military government.

"Although the dictator has had his day, we will win," said the association's president, Lazarus Tamana. "The memory of these men of peace lives on in all Ogoni. We will struggle for justice until we have won our rights and our share of the resources of our land."

WEATHER WATCH

The AccuWeather® forecast for noon, Saturday, Nov. 11

Today to be sunny, high near 60

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies, a high near 60 and northeast winds 5 to 15 mph becoming light and variable by afternoon, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low in the mid-30s.

Sunday is expected to be sunny and warmer with a high in the upper 70s.

After an overnight low of 56, Friday's high was 83 compared with the record high for that date of 85 set in 1964. The record low for today's date was 20 set in 1950.

STATE

Powerful southerly gusts buffeted most of Texas Friday, providing near-record warm temperatures in advance of a cold front that slicked the upper Panhandle with sleet. There was a 60-degree range of readings from north to south.

Forecasters posted a tornado watch for part of North and Northeast Texas and warmed that severe storms could sweep as far southeast as Houston.

Forecasters said low clouds over the Panhandle along the cold front will continue to spread south as the front pushes deeper into the state.

North Texas is expected to be mostly sunny, windy and cool. Highs will be in the 51 in the north to 58 in the south. Tonight will be clear and cold with lows from 29 in the east to 37 in the west. Sunday will be mostly clear and a little warmer with highs of 65 in the east to 72 in the west.

The South Texas forecast is for partly cloudy skies today with highs in the 60s. Lows in the 40s and 50s.

NATION

Heavy snow fell Friday in the mountains of northern Utah and Colorado as a storm swept across the Rockies and into the southern Plains.

Nearly 2 feet of snow fell in about 24 hours at Alta, Utah, east of Salt Lake City in the Wasatch Mountains. One to 4 inches accumulated in valleys from southeastern Idaho through central and eastern Wyoming and northern Utah.

A band of locally heavy snow spread across the plains of east-central Colorado, leaving up to 6 inches on the ground at Hereford and New Raymer.

Snow also was scattered through the Intermountain region and the northern and central Plains to the upper Midwest.

Roads iced up in Nebraska a day after record highs of 78 in McCook and 75 in North Platte.

Locally heavy rain fell in southeastern Iowa and northwestern Illinois as the cold front moved through.

Warmer air was spreading across the Northwest toward the northern Rockies, and freezing rain was possible in western Montana valleys.

A line of heavy thunderstorms formed over northern Missouri and western Illinois, and storms were likely in the lower half of the Mississippi Valley.

High pressure moved off the East Coast, and a band of showers and thunderstorms stretching from the western Gulf Coast into the Mississippi Valley and lower Great Lakes was likely to spread east as well.

Severe thunderstorms were forecast in the south-central states, from southern Missouri and Illinois into northeastern Texas, western Kentucky, Tennessee and the central Gulf Coast.

Arabs.

It began slightly late, about 7:15 p.m., to allow stragglers time to reach Kings of Israel Square, Tel Aviv's traditional setting for political demonstrations.

Rabin and scores of officials, invited guests, musicians and journalists were on a stage on an elevated terrace overlooking the square.

About 100,000 people filled the square, hundreds more watched from atop surrounding eight-story buildings surrounding the square.

The security was unusual for an event in heavily Jewish Tel Aviv. Spotlights scanned rooftops for snipers, some nearby apartments had been searched, residents had been forbidden to park in the area and, in the square, police were everywhere.

But precautions appeared porous at the entrance to the stage area — people entering were not frisked, and many were allowed to leave and return without any check at all.

Asked by The Associated Press why no check was made on a man who breezed by security guards waving a tiny ID and shouting "It's OK, I was here before," one officer replied earnestly: "He's a Jew. Why would he want to do any harm?"

Peres recalled that Rabin told him during the rally there were fears of an attack that night. Security sources admit they were on alert — but for an Arab attack, not one by a Jewish radical.

At 8 p.m., a relaxed and unusually eloquent Rabin spoke for 10 minutes, declaring that the time for Israeli-Arab peace had come at last.

At 9:20, the crowd roared with appreciation when Rabin joined in singing "The Song to Peace." With his trademark half-smile, he struggled to read the lyrics — once banned from state radios — from a songsheet provided by singer Miri Aloni.

The ceremony over, Rabin carefully folded the paper and put it in the breast pocket of his jacket.

The crowd began to file away. Less than 10 minutes before the fatal shots, an AP reporter passed unchallenged within yards of Rabin's car, parked at the foot of a staircase that descended from the terrace to a parking lot behind City Hall.

Amir, earlier seen talking at a public phone just 10 yards from the car, was able to do the same. Amir claims he had been in the area through most of the rally and had removed his skullcap, a sign of religious devotion, to reduce the chance of raising suspicion among Rabin's mostly non-religious followers. It was found in his pocket.

Even after police belatedly erected barricades around the VIP vehicles, Amir remained close to the Cadillac, apparently mistaken for one of the drivers.

While most people in the parking area were kept five yards from the car, many were allowed to stand next to the staircase. Newspaper photos showed Peres shaking supporters' upstretched hands as he walked down.

Peres briefly exchanged words with Damti. Then, in a decision that may have saved his life, he opted not to wait for Rabin and instead walked away to his own car, Damti recalled.

Amir told investigators he'd planned to kill both Nobel Peace Prize laureates, but Peres' earlier departure forced him to focus on Rabin alone.

Rabin walked down the stairs about 9:40 p.m., surrounded by at least eight police officers and bodyguards.

But he had no human shield as he prepared to enter the car — only one Shin Bet bodyguard. Two others permanently assigned to the "inner circle" around Rabin had already walked to the other side of the car, police sources said.

Rabin had just placed his right foot inside the Cadillac when Amir approached the car from the rear, apparently unseen by either Rabin or his bodyguard, raised a 9mm Berretta and began firing from just 16 inches away.

"They are not real bullets! They're fake!" Amir shouted as he loosed two more shots.

Rabin was hit twice, in the abdomen and chest. According to police sources, the bullet that caused the stomach wound hit him from the back.

A bodyguard, wounded by the third shot as he struck the assailant's arm, hurled the prime minister and himself into the car and Damti sped away.

Peres heard shooting from his own car and wanted to investigate, security sources said. But his bodyguard ordered Peres rushed to a safe location, where the then-foreign minister remained for about 20 minutes, they said.

Damti didn't immediately realize Rabin was wounded. He asked Rabin if he was injured and Rabin responded "Yes," whispering that his back was in pain but adding it was "not too bad" before passing out.

Ichilov Hospital was only 800 yards away by the shortest route — but the way was blocked by the thousands of Rabin supporters who poured from the square into Ibn Gvirol Street.

Damti was forced to take a route almost three times longer. On the way, the Cadillac was stopped at a police roadblock set up hours before to keep suspicious people from approaching the rally. He spent precious moments talking his way through but gained a police escort the rest of the way.

At the hospital, no one had been alerted to expect the shooting victim. Damti had to stop at the gate and explain. Then, assisted by the wounded bodyguard and police officer, Damti carried Rabin into the trauma ward, shouting, "The prime minister's wounded, take care of him!"

Adelle Alon, the nurse in charge of the emergency room, recognized Rabin and summoned all available doctors. They found Rabin unconscious and without a pulse. Doctors later said the 73-year-old Rabin's wounds were so severe he had only a slim chance of survival from the moment he was hit.

By 10:30 p.m., reporters were already telling a disbelieving nation that Rabin had been "seriously injured" in a shooting. Hundreds of shocked Israelis, many weeping and praying, gathered outside the hospital's locked gates.

At 11:15 p.m., Rabin's top aide, Eytan Haber, emerged ashen-faced. With dozens of reporters swarming around him, Haber struggled to read a short statement: "The government of Israel announces with astonishment, great sorrow and deep grief the death of Yitzhak Rabin, who was murdered by an assassin."

DISAPPROVE: Simpson appears oblivious to setbacks

charismatic personality.

"His greatest gift is he's got this natural ease," she said. "He's trying to remake his image, and he's savvy enough to know that you need the media to do that."

The public fascination that greeted Simpson's remarks suggests that O.J. mania still lives and that the football Hall of Famer can command the eyes and ears of an eager audience in the wake of his acquittal on charges of murdering his ex-wife Nicole and her friend Ronald Goldman.

"It's been hard for people," Levenson said. "There was this intense trial of the century and now it's gone."

Anything Simpson says at this point will rivet the attention of withdrawing O.J. addicts, she said.

Still, Simpson's rosy vision of his reception in his Brentwood neighborhood and elsewhere raised eyebrows.

"Everywhere I go, even people who drive by the house here are totally positive," Simpson said in one of two calls to this AP reporter, who covered his trial.

"In Panama City (Fla.), I didn't get one negative thing. They were very protective of me. People said, 'Get your head up and go on with your life.' ... It's encouraging to know that people believe in the system."

Simpson didn't mention the hand-lettered sign declaring his neighborhood "Home of the Brentwood Butcher." He also ignored the fact that he's been thrown out of his country club, was dumped by his talent agent and rejected on national television by girlfriend Paula Barbieri, who said he wanted to pose with her in a picture and sell it for $100,000.

Bad publicity seemed to haunt him after the Oct. 3 acquittal. A promoter of a sports memorabilia show in Atlantic City, N.J., was forced to abandon a plan to have Simpson sign pictures of the infamous Bronco chase.

But Simpson seemed oblivious to such setbacks.

He also refused to answer questions that linger from his murder trial, although he did declare his innocence once more and said he would talk about the trial in the not too distant future.

"It sounds to me like denial," said Dr. Barbara E. Biggs, a Los Angeles clinical psychiatrist. "It is a very good survival mechanism. One way of keeping your spirits up is avoiding the negative and keep up the positive."

In his interview Thursday night, Simpson denounced photographers he says have trailed his two small children — Sydney, 10, and Justin, 7 — and have made a normal life impossible. In particular, he complained about a recent incident involving a photographer who took pictures of the three of them from behind a wall while they were playing on a tennis court.

During the interviews, Simpson sounded relaxed and spoke with the authority of a busy, optimistic man, unwilling to let anything get him down — not even the embarrassing public rejection by Barbieri.

"Paula needed to do what she needed to do. I'm totally behind her. Paula's a good woman and she's been through a lot. I'm 1,000 percent behind her," he said.

Of Simpson's professed admiration and understanding of Barbieri in the wake of their split, Levenson suggested that the man depicted as maintaining obsessive control of his ex-wife was trying to show how wrong that picture was.

"He needs to show he's able to let go of women," Levenson said. "He's trying to say, 'I'm not the obsessed lover who can't let my women go.'"

Michael Levine, a public relations expert who specializes in image-rehabilitation for controversial stars, said Simpson's remarks may be counterproductive.

"I think O.J. Simpson needs to enroll into an intensive seminar on humility," Levine said.

Atlantis crew headed for Mir hopes to jazz up lonely nights

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Shhhh. Don't tell the three guys on Russia's space station, but the shuttle astronauts headed their way today have all sorts of goodies for them, including flowers, candy and a guitar to strum on those long, lonely space nights.

The two Russians and one German already have been on the Mir station for two months and have four more months to go.

"We wanted to bring something up that would help fill the empty hours," said Canadian astronaut Chris Hadfield, one of space shuttle Atlantis' five crew members. "I'm a guitar player, and I thought wouldn't it be nice when you're sitting looking out the window in the evening and you can't go for a walk ... wouldn't it be nice to be able to play a guitar."

> 'We wanted to bring something up that would help fill the empty hours.'
> — Chris Hadfield, astronaut on Atlantis

It's this kind of entertainment — along with cruising the Internet and chatting with the family back on Earth — that NASA is planning for its own long space stays.

Four more Americans are supposed to live on Mir over the next two years, for four to five months at a time. Then it will be on to the international space station.

"We're working very, very hard to improve communications with the astronaut, even to the extent of getting Internet up there somehow," said Wilbur Trafton, director of NASA's international space station program.

NASA astronaut Norman Thagard said he was bored at times during his nearly four months on Mir earlier this year, primarily because there wasn't enough work to keep him busy. And the last shuttle crew, which returned Sunday from a 16-day science mission, stressed the need for entertainment on long trips.

The "astro-guitar" going up on Atlantis — or "cosmo-guitar" if you're a cosmonaut — is a vast improvement over the old, beat-up acoustical guitar that's been hanging around Mir for years.

Designed as a travel guitar by Rossco Wright, a former guitar repairman from Eugene, Ore., the collapsible "astro-guitar" opens into a full-size classical guitar with a battery-operated headphone amplifier so that only the guitarist can hear what he's playing.

After all, not everyone on Mir may want to be serenaded. The headphones will also enable the guitarist to hear the music over the noise from fans and other equipment.

The guitar's supposed to be a secret.

"They don't know we're bringing it yet," Hadfield said.

Atlantis' astronauts are due to reach Mir on Tuesday, if they lift off this morning. They're hauling up a Russian docking port to attach to the station.

Atlantis and Mir will be linked in orbit for three days. One evening, the shuttle astronauts will invite the Mir crew over for a steak dinner.

Bosnian Muslims, Croats reach first accord in talks

■ In low-key ceremony, communities sign agreement to bolster their economic, political federation.

Associated Press

DAYTON, Ohio — In the first accord reached in 10 days of peace talks, Bosnia's Muslim and Croat communities signed an agreement Friday to strengthen their economic and political federation. Secretary of State Warren Christopher called it "an essential building block of peace."

In a low-key ceremony, the Croats agreed to disband their self-styled separate government, and Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic granted the federation control of virtually all civilian functions.

The central Bosnian government would take charge of little more than foreign affairs. Nonetheless, Izetbegovic called the ceremony "a day of our determination, a day of our hope."

The federation will control about half of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mindful, perhaps, that Bosnia's four-year history is littered with diplomatic dead ends, Christopher said "the true test of this agreement is in the way it is carried out."

Even while Croatian President F'ranjo Tudjman blessed the federation as "the best way to secure coexistence," Croatia moved troops and heavy artillery into a U.N. exclusion zone near its border with Serbia.

The target appeared to be eastern Slavonia, a swath of land held by rebel Serbs that Tudjman has vowed to liberate by force unless diplomacy produced a settlement by Nov. 30.

Christopher had hoped to put Slavonia on the agenda here this week, but U.N. mediator Thorvald Stoltenberg and U.S. Ambassador Peter Galbraith remained in the area, groping with what administration officials said were difficult and complex issues.

Trying to avert a blowup that could divert peace efforts, Christopher urged Tudjman in a private meeting to rely on diplomacy, not force, for a settlement, said Nicholas Burns, a State Department spokesman.

Immersed in day-long mediation, Christopher also asked Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic in a separate meeting to cooperate with international war crime prosecutors. Three Yugoslav army officers were indicted this week by the tribunal at The Hague and more indictments are expected next week.

Presiding at the signing ceremonies at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Christopher said the accord "brings to life" the federation formed by the Muslims and Croats under U.S. direction in March 1994.

"Some people, of course, still believe that the conflict between Muslims, croats and Serbs is insoluble," Christopher said. "By making the federation work, the communities this agreement unites are showing that view to be cynical and false."

The ceremony concluded with handshakes all around. The president of the federation, Kresimir Zubak, said bolstering it was a "turning point" toward peace. A Croat, he pledged the accord would be implemented in a way that also insured the rights of Serbs.

The federation is designed to balance a Bosnian Serb zone to be set up as part of the peace process. The aim is to deter the drive for a greater Serbia that helped spark the war after Yugoslavia disintegrated and Bosnia declared its independence.

Veterans Day is time to honor 'fallen buddies,' those who sacrificed for country

By Jeff Lightfoot
Reporter-Telegram Correspondent

Veterans Day, which was created as Armistice Day to celebrate the end of World War I and in 1954 became a day to honor those who served, is a day of reflection for American veterans.

"It's a time to honor those who have not only provided the supreme sacrifice but also those who are carrying baggage with them from past wars and have protected America's freedoms," said Fred C. Cox, community relations coordinator for the Big Spring Veterans Administration Hospital.

"The freedom of speech comes easy but people have paid a price for it over the years," said Cox, who served as a staff sergeant in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam War.

For hospital personnel assistant Barbara Miller, who spent more than 20 years in the Army, Nov. 11 is just one way that "the nation can recognize us as veterans and maybe be aware of what veterans have sacrificed for their country."

For other veterans the personal dimension of the day goes one step further.

Bill Arp was in the Army for three years and is a patient at the hospital. The day is one to "honor all your fallen buddies," he said.

Those memories of fallen buddies can still stir emotion.

"I had two good friends killed in Vietnam," said Jerry Groves, who served five years in the Army during the Vietnam era.

"One was a cousin and the other was a guy I went through school with after we got out of boot camp. Veterans Day holds quite a bit for me because of that reason," he said.

And it is no wonder that veterans' feelings about this day would run deep, because many look upon their time of duty with pride, honor, a sense of accomplishment and unparalleled camaraderie. At the hospital it was common to hear phrases like "I wouldn't trade for it" or "I'm very fortunate to have served my country — very proud of it" from someone speaking about their military service.

Jeff Lightfoot/Reporter-Telegram
George Gonzales, right, is a patient services representative at the Big Spring Veterans Administration Hospital. He said he wouldn't want to "work anywhere else."

"To have served my country was great and to have served it means that you have a deep feeling for it, and I do have a deep feeling for my country," said Charles Spurgin, who served as a sergeant in the Army from 1953-55. "When I see the flag fly it represents to me the land of the free."

These are people for whom the flag truly does symbolize something real, something tangible: a country and a people that exist in freedom.

After what she had seen in other parts of the world, Ms. Miller said, "It just made me more proud to be an American. Every time I see the flag waving, I cry."

Being a member of the U.S. armed forces changes many of those who have served, according to Robert Aaron. "Any time you've been in the military it changes your life, and if you've been in combat it really changes you," said Aaron, who was a hospital corpsmen in the U.S. Navy for three years during the Vietnam War. "These changes reflect on the rest of your life."

One of the most important things that service men and women seem to receive from their experience is a strong camaraderie.

"We have something in common and that commonality ties us together in some way," said Gerald Di Grappa, a clinical social worker at the hospital.

That something in common is "if nothing else, boot camp," Cox said.

Because of the hospital, veterans in Big Spring are remembered more than once a year.

"Here in the hospital we honor the vet every day through service," said psychologist Dr. David Sutton, who was a U.S. Air Force pilot during Vietnam. "And you probably will not find anyone more proud to serve a veteran than a fellow comrade-at-arms. "I certainly find it rewarding every day I come here and work with these people."

That sentiment seems to be a common refrain throughout the VA.

"I feel real fortunate to work for the VA, particularly because I am a vet," said George Gonzales, who was a staff sergeant in the Marine Corps during the Vietnam era and now works as a patient-services representative.

Gonzales' co-worker, Navy veteran Vance McCright, makes no bones about what serving his fellow soldiers means to him. "It's a pleasure to serve them. I think they're the one segment in our population that deserves some help."

Sutton believes his experience in the military is invaluable to being able to serve other veterans. "In my work here at the VA hospital, (my background) certainly gives me an initial rapport with the veterans."

"Being a veteran myself helps me understand these guys — understand how they feel, the way they express themselves," said Aaron, a nurse at the hospital.

"My fellow veterans gave their lives, and they gave their time, and some of them gave their future to keep this country as it is right now," Aaron said. "This is one of the main holidays in my mind. I rate it up there with Christmas or Thanksgiving or the 4th of July."

CLASH: Veto showdown threatens partial government shutdown operation, but the Smithsonian museums and National Zoo in Washington would be padlocked.

Clinton urged Republicans to approve interim spending and borrowing measures that he could sign, and not try to stage a longer-term debate over budget priorities under the threat of "a government default or shutdown."

The president also pressed lawmakers to stay in town and "finish this work" over the weekend. He then headed for the golf course while most lawmakers departed, as planned, for a three-day holiday weekend of politicking.

A key handful stayed behind.

Senior Republicans labored in private meetings throughout the day to piece together a final compromise on their major undertaking of the year, legislation to balance the budget over seven years and cut taxes. The plan calls for squeezing Medicare, Medicaid and welfare by hundreds of billions of dollars and clamping down on tax breaks for the working poor.

Clinton has threatened to veto that bill as well, once Republicans deliver it to him, as the two sides play out their politically potent struggle over taxes and spending.

Many lawmakers of both parties expect compromise talks to follow that veto, but that seemed a distant speck on the horizon as debate flared angrily in the House during the day.

"You folks are not only in the minority, you are outrageous," charged Rep. William Thomas, R-Calif., as Democrats criticized a provision in one of the two bills to raise Medicare Part B premiums by $7 a month.

Other Republicans accused Clinton of snubbing Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., by not spending more time with them aboard Air Force One on last weekend's trip to the funeral of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Democrats scoffed at that, and House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., said the entire exercise of passing the two measures was "the most colossal waste of time and energy we have seen." Six weeks into the fiscal year, he said, Republicans have failed to send Clinton most of the regular spending bills needed for the government to maintain its operations.

Republicans had hoped all year to use the expiration of government spending and borrowing authority to force Clinton into a broader agreement on a plan to balance the budget.

But pushed by aggressive House freshmen, Republicans attached several controversial provisions to interim spending and borrowing bills that made them irresistible targets for the Democrats.

One would raise the Medicare premiums; a second would curtail the rights of death-row inmates. A third would loosen government's ability to impose regulations on business. A fourth, calling for restrictions on lobbying by non-profit organizations that receive federal funds, was deleted at the last minute by the House. A fifth, to eliminate the Commerce Department, was stripped out by the Senate in a vote Thursday night that underscored the differences between Republicans in the two houses.

Beyond that, the funding bill would force Clinton to accept less spending on environmental, education and other programs than he wants.

In brief remarks to reporters, Clinton said he hoped he and Republicans could "resolve these differences and ... keep the government running in the interest of the American people."

At the same time, Gephardt said compromise might ultimately prove impossible, in which case the voters would decide in the 1996 elections which approach they favor.

Burial allows teens separated in life to rest together in death

MIAMI (AP) — Two young lovers who drowned themselves rather than let parents keep them apart were reunited in death Friday, buried in the same plot, one casket on top of the other.

"Why have you left us?" Xiomara Flores wailed in Spanish as she neared the casket of her 13-year-old daughter, Maryling. "Ay, Senor!" she cried and fainted into her husband's arms.

Maryling and Christian Davila, 14, leaped to their deaths in a weed-choked canal late Saturday or early Sunday, leaving behind suicide notes that told of a love forbidden by Maryling's parents and a tragedy that parallels "Romeo and Juliet."

Their bodies were found Tuesday. Neither teen-ager had known how to swim.

"You don't let me see him in this world, so we're going to another place," Maryling wrote in one of a half-dozen notes she scattered around her parents' home in Sweetwater, a suburb west of Miami. "Please don't cry for me, this is what I want. I want to feel happy, because I'm going to a place where I can be with Christian."

The note Christian left for his parents began: "I can't go on living. I've lost Maryling."

When the caskets were lowered into the ground at Woodlawn Park Cemetery, Maryling's was placed on top of Christian's. Their sobbing schoolmates and families tossed carnations, roses and goodbye notes onto the caskets.

The families apparently decided to bury the teens together; nothing in the suicide notes indicated the children wanted to be buried together, police said.

"It was just a personal decision, a gesture of respect to the kids," said Arthur Arnau, spokesman for the Sweetwater Police Department.

At a memorial Mass just before the burial, the two families sat on either side of the church, the carnation-draped caskets between them in the aisle. At one point in the service, the parents of the children hugged each other.

Marlon De Jesus Flores, Maryling's father and a Nicaraguan native, told the Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale earlier in the week that he had learned his daughter was seeing Christian in June, and told her she had to be 16 to date.

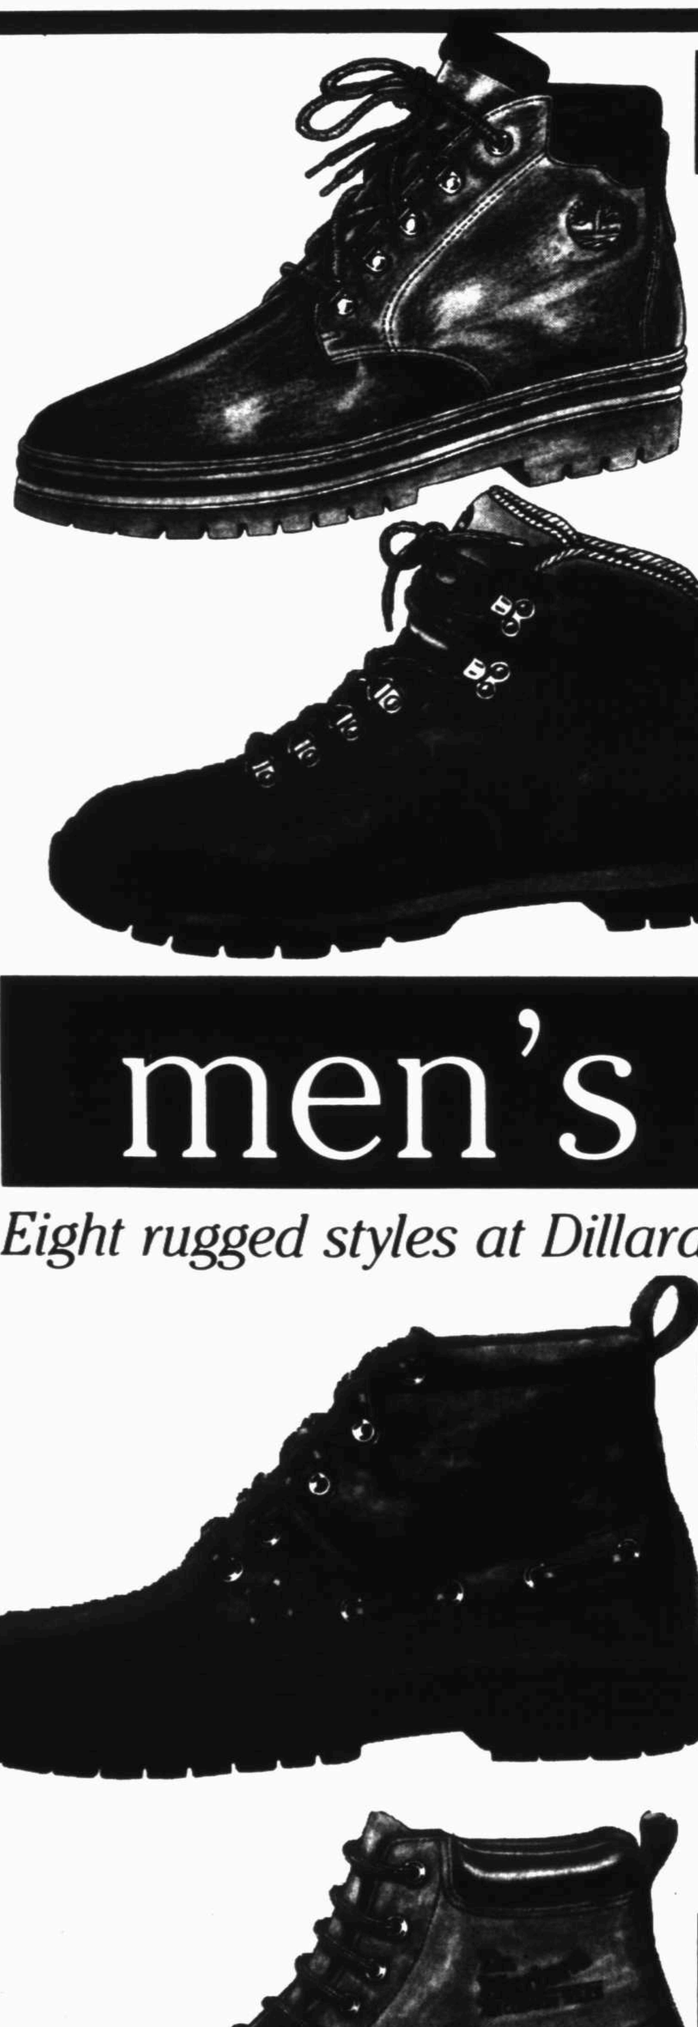

Both were excellent students and had perfect attendance records at Ruben Dario Middle School.

New cancer fighter

Women worried about breast cancer might start eating flaxseed, a type of whole grain sold in health-food stores and put into bread, muffins and multigrain cereals. There's good evidence that flaxseed-fed animals just don't develop as many breast cancers. Moreover, leading flaxseed researcher Lilian Thompson, Ph.D., at the University of Toronto, now finds that flaxseed also acts as a chemotherapeutic agent to curb the growth of existing breast cancers in rats. In fact, flaxseed slashed the growth rate of the tumors by 50 percent, according to her recent research.

Dr. Thompson attributes the cancer-thwarting effect mostly to chemicals in flaxseed called "lignan precursors." Feeding rats the pure lignan precursors extracted from flaxseed also inhibited tumors. She says flaxseed is the richest food source of this anti-cancer agent, containing 100 times more lignan precursors than any other plant food.

It's unknown whether flaxseed can fight cancer in humans. Dr. Thompson is planning new tests using about an ounce of ground flaxseed a day.

Vitamin B alert

There's startling new evidence that vitamin B deficiencies are epidemic among older people. And that could have serious consequences. In the elderly, a lack of crucial B vitamins can lead to memory loss, depression, pseudo symptoms of Alzheimer's disease, heart attacks and strokes.

The new information comes from a study of about 300 subjects between 65 and 96 years, by researchers at six medical centers around the world, including Columbia Presbyterian in New York. According to standard blood tests, the subjects had normal levels of B-12, B-6 and folic acid.

Nevertheless, other tests revealed abnormal blood levels of metabolites, breakdown products, the true sign of serious vitamin B deficiencies. Further, daily injections of 1 milligram of B-12, 1.1 milligram of folic acid and 5 milligrams of B-6 normalized the metabolites in five to 12 days. In the case of homocysteine, a metabolite incriminated in heart disease and strokes, levels returned to normal in 92 percent of the subjects.

The message: Ordinary blood tests don't tell the truth about B deficiencies and older people must take care to get enough B-6, folic acid and B-12.

Herbal tea facts

Ordinary tea, black and green, is packed with antioxidants that help prevent chronic disease and aging itself. But do herbal teas contain antioxidants? Well, maybe, but in much lower doses, according to a recent analysis by British researchers at Trinity College in Dublin. The investigators analyzed 39 herbal teas for tannin content. Tannins are a broad group of antioxidants heavily concentrated in real tea, notably green tea. These are credited with fighting free radicals, chemicals that promote cancer, heart disease, other chronic diseases and general aging.

The herbal teas examined generally contained about one-tenth to one-fourth the amount of tannins found in real black or green tea. Only one herbal tea came close: bearberry tea. After that, herbs with the most tannins were mate, blackberry and peppermint.

In the past, herbal teas were viewed as better for you than real tea, but science now says it's not true. Regular tea is by far a better overall health drink.

Alleviating allergies

NEW YORK (AP) — Approaching the fall and winter allergy and sinus season, more than 50 useful tips for allergy sufferers are offered in a new calendar from the American Lung Association:

- Avoid windy days, when air is heavy with pollen. Rainy, cloudy and windless days usually have lower pollen counts.
- Keep children's toys in a box to prevent dust buildup. Store clothing and linens in plastic bags.
- Clean air conditioners, humidifiers and dehumidifiers frequently to prevent mold growth.
- Use synthetic pillows with vinyl encasements. Feathers breed dust mites.

Experimental therapy offers 'room with view'

By John Hendren

BALTIMORE (AP) — Every week Violet Bond walks into a kind of New Age artist's conception of heaven.

A low-glare light fills an 11x11½-foot chamber with milk-white walls and furniture. A curtain of fiber-optic tubes changes colors, a wind machine blows gently, a glass water tower bubbles. A projector casts a stream of animated pictures on a wall, and the sounds of chimes mingled with songbirds waft through the room.

"The colors are beautiful," says Mrs. Bond, an articulate 82-year-old whose short-term memory is slowly being eroded by Alzheimer's disease. "Green used to always be my favorite color."

With no cure and little known about the cause of Alzheimer's, a Baltimore nursing home and adult day care center is using the soothing environment of the "Snoezelin" room as an experimental treatment for the fear and agitation that often come with the disease.

Snoezelin (pronounced SNOOZE-lin) is a contraction of the Dutch words for "sniffing" and "dozing," picked to describe the combination of aromatherapy and low-stress atmosphere first used in Holland to treat mentally disturbed children.

Officials at the Keswick home believe they are the first in the nation to use the room to treat sufferers of Alzheimer's, a degenerative disease that causes atrophy of the brain.

"We're looking at positive, pleasurable, here-and-now experiences that will enhance the quality of life," says Mary Jo Evans, director of occupational therapy at Keswick.

"We don't know what's going on when someone can't communicate with us, but that doesn't mean they don't need sensory stimulation."

Keswick residents spend 30 minutes a week in the room with a therapist or family members.

"Visits can sometimes be difficult," Mrs. Evans says. "The room provides not only the soothing effect but something of interest that they can share together."

Little research has been done on the device's effectiveness, but a 1993 British study found that patients suffering from the dementia caused by Alzheimer's emerged happier and less fearful after a 30-minute session.

Although the British study used a "quality of life" standard established in 1991, a scale of happiness is elusive, says Constantine Lyketsos, assistant professor of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins University.

"How do you measure the quality of life for somebody who can't tell you how they feel?" Lyketsos says.

Lyketsos thinks the Snoezelin is a great idea, but adds that the particular type of treatment may be less important than simply offering patients pleasant surroundings.

"I think that there are many ways to accomplish the same thing," he says.

Environmental therapies for dementia patients have been done for years but research has tended to focus more on medication, says Linda Teri, a professor with the University of Washington Medical Center's department of psychiatry and behavioral sciences in Seattle. But more researchers, including Ms. Teri, are examining environmental treatments.

"Basically the concept is that the Alzheimer's patient, because of the brain disease, is not as able to adapt to the environment as somebody with no impairment," she says. "You therefore adapt the environment to the patient."

Mrs. Bond's daughter, Corinne Dixon, says she sees a noticeable difference after her mother relaxes in the Snoezelin room.

Dementia sufferers often relive earlier stresses, making them determined to pick up a long grown child from school or rush to a job from which they retired decades ago.

Mrs. Bond sometimes talks of her six adult children as if they were still little and getting into mischief. "They know I'm watching and I'm not going to stand for it," she says.

In the Snoezelin room, Mrs. Evans gently prods Mrs. Bond toward less stressful conversation, focusing only on immediately observable objects. She hands Mrs. Bond canisters filled with scent-soaked cotton and asks her what she smells.

"These smells always remind me of baking," says Mrs. Evans, handing her a vanilla-scented container.

"I make pies, but not as often as I make cakes," says Mrs. Bond, neatly dressed with tortoise shell-rimmed glasses and styled white hair.

Seeing her mother relaxed eases the pain of watching the illness' effect on her, says Mrs. Dixon, 58.

"My mother and I have always been very close," she says. "We were like friends, and to see her go from an intelligent woman to what she is now has been devastating.

"When she's agitated or depressed, it's very hard for me to handle," she says. "I want to help relieve her and there's nothing I can do. With this room there is an option."

Violet Bond, left, an Alzheimer's patient, feels the fiber optic light curtain in a special room under the watchful eyes of nurse Mary Jo Evans at a Baltimore nursing home and adult day care facility. The experimental room, called "Snoezelin," is filled with soft changing colors and the sounds of the ocean or woods. The peaceful atmosphere helps calm patients without the use of drugs.

Colds, flu season affects children

By Dr. Paula Prezioso
Associated Press

Your otherwise healthy 6-year-old son has a cold. His nose is runny and he has a fever. Should he be kept home from school? Generally, yes. A child should not go to school unless he or she has been fever-free for 24 hours.

In most cases, a cold is not a cause for concern. Children often catch cold each winter. The symptoms — cough, congestion, runny nose and fever — may be similar, but they can be caused by one of more than 100 viruses. And these viruses can vary in form from year to year. Healthy adults are less likely to catch colds than young children because over the course of their lifetimes they have been exposed to many of the cold viruses.

Colds are generally transmitted through close physical contact. Preschoolers are especially prone to catching colds because they tend to come in close contact with one another.

Parents may inadvertently spread a cold virus to children. For example, a mother may spread a cold virus by rubbing her nose or wiping her eyes before changing her baby.

One way to prevent the spread of colds is by thorough and frequent washing of the hands and wiping down surfaces used by children.

There is no cure for the common cold, but children can be made more comfortable with a combination of rest, clear liquids to prevent dehydration and such medication as acetaminophen to reduce fevers and body aches.

Over-the-counter medications can ease cold symptoms such as congestion. But parents should consult

Outdoor equipment includes medical kit

Hearst News Service

A well-stocked medical kit is a prescription for pain-free outdoor fun.

Outdoor people may be healthy, Ted Kerasote wrote in an article in the current issue of Sports Afield, but they still suffer sprains, strains, broken bones and general soreness — particularly as they age.

Keeping your medical kit stocked with over-the-counter analgesics can make a typical day afield more comfortable. In addition, carrying a variety of physician-prescripted analgesics, generically called narcotics, also can help the back-country first-aider control the pain of serious injuries. Patients who are quiet and cooperative can be more effectively treated and more safely evacuated.

Analgesics are classified as mild, moderate or strong. The mild drugs include acetaminophen, aspirin, ibuprofen and naproxen. Acetaminophen, routinely sold as Tylenol, can be used for pain and fever and is safe for children, but it will not reduce inflammation, making it a poor choice for treating soreness associated with hiking.

Aspirin is a time-proven pain reliever as well as an anti-inflammatory, but any children, including teen-agers up to 16 years old, can have serious reactions to it.

Ibuprofen (Motrin) and naproxen (Aleve) are nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) that also do an excellent job of relieving pain.

Safe to take over many days and with minimal side effects, they are the drugs of choice for many competitive athletes. Try both and see which works better. Many users have found that over-the-counter ibuprofen works quite well for fairly serious pain if taken at the maximum dosage.

By reducing inflammation and pain, NSAIDs are also effective sleep aids. A sleeping pill may not be necessary when taking these drugs.

The most commonly prescribed moderate analgesic is a mixture of

Simple $10 device can spare diatetics' feet

By Christopher Connell

WASHINGTON (AP) — A simple $10 tool could help spare thousands of American diabetics from foot amputations, the Public Health Service said Friday.

It is urging primary care practitioners to use the device, called a monofilament, to check the sensitivity of diabetics' feet. The tool consists of a nylon bristle on an acrylic plastic handle.

A trained medical practitioner can use it to obtain early indications that a patient has lost sensation in the foot. How much the bristle bends and how the patient responds is a tip-off to circulation problems.

Left untreated, such problems lead to amputations for 54,000 diabetics each year at a cost of $40,000 each.

Federal health officials said up to 90 percent of those amputations could be prevented if the problem were detected early enough.

With detection, diabetics can avoid amputation by selecting the right footwear, inspecting their feet daily, receiving an annual foot screening by medical personnel and taking other measures to prevent ulcers from forming. The monofilament was developed at the Hansen's Disease Center in Carville, La., to help patients with leprosy, another condition that causes loss of sensation in the feet.

The Health Resources and Services Administration, part of the Public Health Service, has distributed the devices and training materials to more than 600 community and migrant health centers nationwide.

Sixteen million Americans have diabetes, including 7 million diagnosed with the disease. The government estimates 1.75 million of them will develop foot problems, and one-third — almost 600,000 — would eventually undergo an amputation unless the preventive care is taken.

The Health Resources and Services Administration's primary care clearinghouse can be reached by calling 703-821-8955, ext. 248.

Motivation can be key to tops in schoolwork

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

Lack of motivation is often named by parents as their children's biggest problem in school. Many educators echo this concern.

So the problem becomes that of what adults can do to get students motivated, and what the characteristics of a motivated person are compared to those of an unmotivated one.

- Motivated people set goals to get ahead, to do better, to be competitive. Usually self-confident, motivated people set goals that are realistic. They take pride in doing their best, in doing what they consider quality work. They experience pleasure in so doing.
- Often, students who lack motivation have not connected the subject matter with real-life use. It makes no sense to them to do algebra or learn to communicate effectively by writing a good essay. In the day's lessons at school they have no enthusiasm for learning academic subjects when they see no value in the process. This is compounded when the subject matter is difficult for them.
- Motivation may be best considered as psychological knowledge as opposed to academic knowledge. Academic knowledge includes mathematics, science, history and literature. Psychological knowledge is based on feelings, thoughts and actions, To put a student on the road to motivation, one should include experiences and applications so the person can internalize the concepts.
- Role models used to be a way to stimulate motivation. Students could look toward their hero or heroine and set goals for becoming like that person, understanding that knowledge, hard work and sacrifice could lead them to that same status.

Unfortunately, role models for today's youth often appear in sensational headlines or top the news on television in describing some unfortunate happening. It is true that not all young people choose to have the values and desirable aspects for lasting achievement.

But the process of choosing a person you most admire is still a valid way of striving for self-motivation. For example, a little girl wanting to be a ballerina quickly realizes that study, care of the body, stamina and daily practice will be needed. It makes sense to do all that is needed to become a dancer.

- Schools today place an emphasis on career paths, showing students, by carefully planned graduation requirements, the steps, experience and knowledge needed for jobs of the future. In their experience and application of these subjects and work experiences, students become motivated and set realistic goals for their future.
- Sometimes a crisis in a person's life can change the pattern of motivation. The death of a parent, divorce of parents or a handicapping accident can change the feelings and actions of a person. When a crisis occurs, children should be given extra support and encouragement as motivation may lag for a period of time only to be renewed and strengthened as the person sets new goals.

Motivation has its peaks and valleys throughout life. But at all times and stages of life being motivated to achieve is a sign of good mental health. It is vitally necessary for a person's sense of worth and identity.

FLU: Seasonal illnesses not usually cause for alarm

a physician before giving these remedies to their children.

Ear infections are the most common secondary conditions that develop from colds. They may result from a viral or bacterial infection. They are often treated with antibiotics.

Some children with colds require careful monitoring. For example, even a mild cold in infants under 2 months of age is cause for concern. In these cases, colds may develop into more serious infections.

And children with chronic medical conditions such as asthma are at risk of developing infections such as bronchitis or pneumonia. These conditions may be treated with antibiotics. In severe cases, hospitalization might be required.

Some children are affected by what is called stomach flu — a condition generally caused by viruses but contrary to its name, not the viruses that cause influenza.

Stomach flu generally lasts for a week. It begins with a fever and is followed by vomiting, diarrhea and decreased appetite.

Parents can ease their children's discomfort by giving them acetaminophen to lower fever and clear liquids to prevent dehydration, and by modifying diets to reduce diarrhea.

Young children should never be given diarrhea medication. Although these drugs may reduce discomfort, they may mask symptoms of an underlying condition.

Children with diarrhea should not return to school until diarrhea is resolved. Parents should consult a physician if symptoms persist for more than a few days.

acetaminophen and codeine. It works slightly better than the maximum dose of ibuprofen for some people and is also an excellent cough suppressant.

Two other prescription drugs to consider for serious pain are percocet, a mixture of percodan and acetaminophen, and meperidine, a morphinelike synthetically produced drug marketed under the name of Demerol. When bones snap, shoulders dislocate, or a patient has suffered a serious laceration, these two are the drugs of choice.

There are precautions to take. Naproxen and ibuprofen can irritate the stomach lining and, ideally, should be taken with food and a full glass of water. Prolonged use of either drug can cause ulcers or intestinal bleeding.

All the moderate-to-strong analgesics can have multiple side effects, ranging from drowsiness to mind-alteration to a depressed breathing cycle. Because of the last effect they should never be used on a patient with a suspected head injury, neurological illness or compromised respiration. Perhaps the most common side effect is constipation, requiring, that some laxative also be administered, such as large quantities of water, coffee, fruit or fiber.

Addiction to these narcotics is not a risk in short-term field situations. After all, hundreds of thousands of people receive narcotics post-operatively and do not become addicted. Therefore don't substitute a mild analgesic for a stronger one if pain is major and persistent — a seriously injured patient needs rest and relief.

As soon as the pain has diminished, a milder drug should be administered.

Make sure the doctor who prescribes a controlled substance gives you a thorough briefing on its use.

Careful exercise can be good for osteoarthritis

By Dr. Jung H. Ahn
Associated Press

Exercise can be good for people with osteoarthritis, but it has to be the right kind of exercise, done with care, because osteoarthritis is the "wear and tear" arthritis, caused by long-term stresses that cause deterioration of the bones of a joint and their cushioning cartilage.

So the main idea in exercise for patients with osteoarthritis is to retard progression of arthritic changes by strengthening the muscles without harming the joint. For example, the prescription for an arthritic knee calls for first warming the joint, using a heated wet towel at home or a hydrocollator, a special heating pad, in a hospital setting, followed by gentle passive range of motion of the knee. Then the knee is extended and the quadriceps muscles are tightened as much as possible for about three seconds. After a two-minute rest period to allow the muscle to recuperate, the exercise is repeated. Usually, there are five repetitions over a 10-minute period. A patient with knee arthritis may repeat the routine three times a day. Similar exercise routines can be done for osteoarthritis of the arm or the shoulder.

One problem with this routine is that it is boring. Many patients give it up for that reason. And for people with some other medical conditions, such as high blood pressure or diabetes melitis, careful monitoring usually is needed to make sure that the exercise and heat application do not cause complications. Tightening the muscles can raise blood pressure, for example, and hot packs can cause burns in a diabetic patient with neuropathy.

That's why such an exercise program almost always requires instruction by a physiatrist, a physician who specializes in physical medicine, or a physical therapist.

Other exercises, even riding a stationary bicycle, may make things worse by irritating the affected joint. The key is that vigorous exercise, good in most cases, is not recommended.

Dr. Jung H. Ahn is a Clinical Associate Professor of Rehabilitation Medicine at New York University School of Medicine.

Is dieting hazardous to (mental) health?

LONDON (AP) — Dieting is bad for a person's memory and powers of concentration, according to tests carried out at the government's Institute of Food Research. But the dips in mental performance are not bad enough to cause pragmatic harm such as losing one's job, according to Mike Green, the psychologist who conducted the research at the institute in Reading, 40 miles west of London.

It's nothing to do with poor nutrition or lack of energy. The cause is purely psychological, the science magazine New Scientist quoted him as saying. "The effects are similar to anxiety. Constantly thinking about food and worrying about diet means that dieters don't have enough mental processing capacity to deal with tasks properly."

A recent issue of the weekly magazine described the tests conducted by Green at the institute on a total of some 350 volunteers, both dieters and non-dieters.

He tested their mental performance in areas including memory, vigilance, reaction time and mental processing capacity. "The deficits we saw were invariably in subjects who said they were on diets," he reported.

The shortfall in their performance in the tests was the same as what would be expected in someone who had just drunk a large measure of spirits, he said.

The magazine gave no statistical breakdown of the results.

It quoted Green as saying that those who ate sparingly for health reasons but were not dieting to lose weight did not show impaired mental performance.

Only if people were actively trying to lose weight were the effects pronounced, he said.

For one family, home is on missile range in converted nuclear silo

By John Hanna

MAPLE HILL, Kan. — The garage door of Ed Peden's workshop weighs 47 tons. It's steel, painted gray, 20 feet wide and 18 feet high.

Visitors to his home have to wait a good 30 seconds for him to answer the doorbell. The front door sits at the end of a long and cramped underground tunnel with curved walls and a curved ceiling of silver, ribbed steel.

Peden lives in what used to be a nuclear missile silo.

In what once housed an 82-foot Atlas-E rocket and a command center where two officers sat ready to push launch buttons that would bring about nuclear doomsday, there is a three-level home with an antique piano, comfortable furniture and all the other accoutrements of civilized living for Peden and his wife, Dianna.

The Pedens have been living in their Cold War-era home for 18 months. Heat is provided by a wood stove, and there's no need for air conditioning: The summer's top inside temperature was 76 degrees. The chances of getting inside uninvited — whether you're a burglar or a tornado — are slim.

"This structure was built to withstand a one-megaton blast within a mile," Peden said. "It's the ultimate underground home."

In the 1960s, a right turn off state Highway 4 onto this lonely paved road 20 miles west of Topeka would have brought you into a secured Air Force area — and into a world of trouble if you didn't have the proper clearances.

Now, the only air force here is a fleet of light recreational planes under construction in Peden's workshop and ready for test flights on the small airstrip on the ground above.

The kitchen, living room and study have a cozy, rustic feel, mostly because of the white cement walls and unfinished wood floors, which are waiting for carpet.

Sunlight filters through a greenhouse-type window that covers the 6-by-10-foot opening once used to lower equipment inside.

The silo — actually an underground trench 15 feet deep, 90 feet long and 40 feet wide — was one of 118 Atlas sites built by 1961 in Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico, New York, Washington, Wyoming and California. By 1965, all were abandoned, rendered obsolete by better missiles such as the Titan and the Minuteman.

The government left the bases behind to cities, school districts and private citizens. Some were neglected. Peden said his silo had become "kind of a party zone. I think young people liked to come here and drink beer and have fun."

The hole now covered by the greenhouse window was open to the elements for years. More than 8 feet of water accumulated in the missile bunker and the command center.

Peden marveled at the size of the missile project, as well as the sheer waste involved. The government poured about $33 million into the nine sites around Topeka, abandoning them after only four years.

"It's tremendously overbuilt," said the 48-year-old Peden. "Money — it didn't matter."

Peden and several partners, whom he later bought out, paid a salvage dealer $40,000 for the silo in 1984.

Peden was a teacher in Topeka for 19 years. When he tired of the job in 1992, he bought a small, Tulsa, Okla., company that manufactures ultra-light airplanes and moved his workshop into the bunker and its adjoining rooms.

He said the overhead for his home and business are reasonable. Electric bills have run as high as $240 a month, but that's for lighting and outlets for 16,000 square feet.

Many of the 450 missile sites under the control of the federal General Services Administration have been or will be destroyed under the terms of two arms treaties with the former Soviet Union.

Peden and another partner have formed a new business, 20th Century Castles. They hope to broker other sites in Kansas and have options to buy two.

Jerry Moore, a realty specialist with the GSA in Fort Worth said converting a missile base makes some sense. Each Atlas site sits on about 25 acres and has a paved access road and thousands of square feet of space in two giant underground, concrete bunkers.

Another missile site outside Valley Falls, about 20 miles northeast of Topeka, is the home of Jackson Heights High School. Teen-agers now walk through a ribbed-steel tunnel to get from classroom to classroom.

Moore said the sites that are relatively intact already are wired for electricity and light; some have massive equipment elevators and generators.

"It would be wonderful to have," Moore said.

Company lays off mother while she kept bedside vigil for comatose son

NEW YORK (AP) — Margaret Graziano was keeping a vigil at the hospital bedside of her comatose 10-year-old son when her boss showed up — not for support and not for comfort. He came to tell her she had been laid off.

Houston-based Coastal Corp. was restructuring and had to cut 18 jobs from its New York and Boston offices, spokesman Steve Eames said.

"They should have waited for a better moment, when they knew my son was out of danger, or they should have contacted me somewhere else other than here," Graziano said at the hospital Friday.

Graziano's son, Adam, was hit by a car Oct. 29 while skating near their home in Queens.

A credit analyst in Coastal's New York office, Graziano took unpaid leave to stay close to her child. She said her boss showed up at the hospital five days after the accident.

The oil company knows it was "horrible timing for everybody concerned," Eames said Friday. He said Graziano's boss went to the hospital "to try and help her work through her options" and is still talking to her about taking care of her medical bills.

Eames described Graziano's two options: to continue on unpaid leave with her insurance intact or to be laid off immediately, so she could collect severance pay and apply for unemployment compensation. He said she chose the second option.

Graziano, whose job was to check customers' credit worthiness, said Coastal offered her six weeks' severance pay.

So far, she has continued her medical coverage by paying $79 every two weeks. Her estranged husband is also unemployed.

"I don't know what I'm going to do financially," Graziano said. "Why couldn't (Coastal) let me stay? They are an $18 billion company."

Teen gets 14-year sentence for smothering deaths of 2 children

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — After five days of emotional deliberations, jurors Friday recommended a 13-year-old girl serve a 14-year term for the smothering deaths of two young children in her care.

Victoria Dalton wept as her punishment was announced in State District Judge Carmen Kelsey's court. One juror also wiped away tears.

Miss Dalton was convicted last week of murdering 5-month-old Timothy Gutierrez and his 2-year-old sister, Renee Gutierrez. Jurors could have decided on punishment ranging from probation to 40 years in custody.

Along with the punishment verdict, jurors issued a statement read aloud by the judge. The jury described the case as a "tragic and heart-wrenching affair" and said the two young children died in an "environment wrought with irresponsible actions by many."

"In the eyes of the jury, Victoria Dalton did commit delinquent acts of conduct," the statement said. "In our minds we had to deal with the law. In our hearts we were dealing with a 13-year-old child. We all hope and pray Victoria Dalton can build a better life."

Miss Dalton will be turned over to the Texas Youth Commission, which likely will place her in its highest-security state school for capital offenders' rehabilitation.

She will appear in court when she turns 18 for a judge to hear recommendations from the TYC, attorneys and others on whether to transfer her to state prison or release her.

Defense attorneys, who had sought for probation for Miss Dalton, said they would appeal. Defense lawyer Jose Guerrero said Miss Dalton had little to say after court.

"She didn't really say much. We didn't push her to say much. We were just trying to comfort her and assure her we were going to appeal," Guerrero said.

Prosecutor Therese Huntzinger, who pushed for a maximum sentence, said the trial was emotionally draining. However, she said, justice was done.

"I think it was a very appropriate sentence. The jury worked extremely hard in reaching this verdict," she said.

Notes the jury sent to the judge earlier this week indicated one juror was "adamant" about placing Miss Dalton on probation while the 11 others had decided on a prison sentence.

Miss Dalton was 12 at the time of the Jan. 6 killings. Her family lived with the family of the two babies, and she often was in charge of caring for the younger children, lawyers said. The home was a two-bedroom apartment where up to 14 other people lived at times.

State presents new emissions testing plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Friday rolled out a new plan for testing motor vehicle emissions, and Gov. George W. Bush said it would be more convenient for motorists while still adequately cleaning up the air.

"The Texas plan now offers the drivers of Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston greater choice and greater convenience — and this plan will result in cleaner air," Bush said.

The new plan will incorporate the smog testing program with the annual safety inspections already required.

It applies in Dallas, Tarrant, Harris and El Paso counties, although officials said the El Paso plan would be modified to take into account pollution across the border in Juarez, Mexico.

It will apply to gasoline-powered vehicles 24 years old or newer, allowing them to be tested either annually or every two years. Annual tests could be conducted at local shops, where safety inspections already are performed. Two-year tests would have to be done in a specialized facility.

The basic fee for an annual test would be $13, while a two-year test would cost about $20, officials said. Vehicles six years old and older would be required to have a test before being resold.

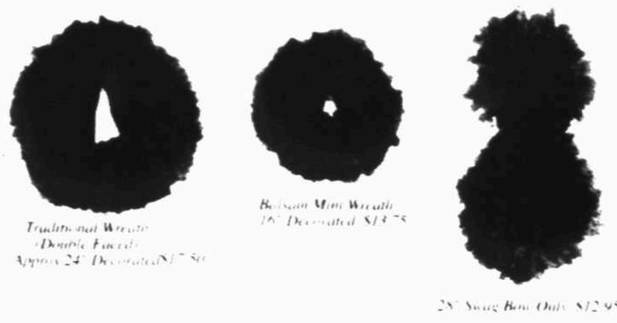

Bush said he hoped the federal Environmental Protection Agency would approve the plan.

"Texas is doing our part. Now the EPA must do its part," Bush said.

The new plan will replace one killed by the 1995 Legislature after motorists protested the requirement to have the tests conducted at centralized facilities.

Water feuding continues between bottling company, citizens

AP Laserphoto

Dale Groom, president of Rohr Spring Citizens' Inc., poses with a sign in front of his home near Eustace on Friday.

■ Conservation, possible damage to natural resource are two of many issues included in battle between town and business.

By Jay Jorden
Associated Press

DALLAS — While a bottling company confidently awaits the state's approval to begin pumping thousands of gallons of water daily from an underground reservoir, citizens' opposition continues to spring up.

Like the water wars of the old West, this feud is over whether ranchers will have enough for their herds and whether farmers can irrigate crops.

But the battle between Ozarka Drinking Water Co. and Rohr Springs Citizens is also about conservation of what's becoming a more scarce fixture in the Texas environment.

With increased urbanization, some springs have stopped flowing, either because they're paved over or because concrete hinders recharge of the underground reservoirs that feed them. Others can be damaged by pumping.

Environmentalists and lawmakers also say the battle is over responsibility and honesty. They contend the product of a well above the Northeast Texas springs' headwaters will be mislabeled as spring water.

Dale Groom, president of the Eustace citizens' group, and Carlton Carl, spokesman for U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas, say Ozarka workers posed as college students doing research to gain access to land around the springs.

But Ron Bownds, developer of Utopia Spring and the Texas regional manager of Perrier Group of America Inc. which owns Ozarka, says the company will not destroy the springs. He also contends that no one's been misled.

Perrier, headquartered in Greenwich, Conn., and owned by Swiss-based food giant Nestle, expects to power a 50-gallon-per-minute pump later this month for full-time production from the springs.

But the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, which must approve the pumping, said high particulate count in water samples will require additional testing by the state Department of Health.

The tests could delay the start of pumping and require more extensive water treatment by Ozarka, said TNRCC spokesman Terry Hadley in Austin.

"The typical explanation for this would mean a surface water influence in the withdrawals," he said. "It can ultimately require additional treatment. It would be basically bringing the water up to drinking water standards."

Analysis of the turbidity or cloudiness can take several more weeks, he said.

"In our analysis of the water and the state's review of a pump test, it showed a minimal effect on the spring," said Bownds of Utopia, who attended a briefing in Athens late last month with Ozarka President Kim Jeffrey.

"The final report shows that there is no way we can have any effect on anyone downstream," Bownds said.

But Groom and William R. Miller, a board member of the National Spring Water Association Inc., aren't so sure.

And Miller, whose Roxsboro, N.C.-based group opposes labeling production from wells as "spring water," urged caution by Ozarka in its marketing plan for Rohr Springs water.

The company, which has spent about $500,000 in monitoring and testing equipment for its 30-inch borehole, argues that pumping spring water from the shallow aquifer — tapped with the well — is more sanitary.

"In reality, if they were truly trying to get the water by Caesarean section rather than by natural childbirth, there could be another way to do it," said Miller, adding that other spring owners who don't use boreholes report good results.

"Really, what they are doing with the boreholes is that they are going through the abdominal muscles to get the baby, but they may be coming out the back side and picking up another baby. It is a real baby, but it is not the same one," he said, adding that pumping can pull water from outside the spring or even from the surface.

And the NSWA said negative pressure created by pumping can pull contaminants into springs from surrounding layers of sand and rock.

The citizens' committee has said at least one East Texas spring dwindled after Ozarka pumping began and contaminants seeped into the water.

Texas is popular for film, television production this year

By Chip Brown
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Lights, camera, Austin.

The Texas capital is a hot location for film and television production in a state that is having its biggest year ever as the setting for big-budget Hollywood pictures.

Currently, there are 11 feature films and television projects being made or in pre-production around the state, including two in Austin.

Star sightings encouraged by radio stations are becoming a sport in the capital, and there are a lot to choose from.

Denzel Washington and Meg Ryan are filming "Courage Under Fire," about an investigation into the death of a Persian Gulf War soldier.

Emilio Estevez, Martin Sheen and Kathy Bates also are in Austin making "The War at Home," a film set in 1973 about a Vietnam veteran having trouble adjusting to life after the war.

Beginning in February, John Travolta, William Hurt and Andie McDowell will be in Austin making "Michael," a romantic comedy directed by Nora Ephron about three tabloid reporters sent to Iowa to investigate claims of an angel descending to earth.

"Texas has a very powerful reputation in the film industry already," said Carol Pirie, assistant director of the Texas Film Commission. "When you look at the film starts in the 50 states, Texas is consistently No. 3. We are right behind California and New York.

"The phone is ringing off the wall with people saying, 'I've got this new project, do you think it would work in Texas?' "

With several productions slated to begin later this month, 1995 already has become the biggest year for film production in Texas.

Last year was the state's previous best, with 42 TV and movie projects being made on budgets totaling $153.3 million. Counting production for commercials, the total was $193.3 million.

This year, 46 projects have chosen Texas for filming, with production budgets totaling $190.8 million. Including commercials, the total comes to $227 million.

Ms. Pirie said many of the films being made in Texas aren't set here.

"They have just found what they need here," she said, adding that the movie "Powder" and recent TV miniseries "Texas Justice" and "Woman of Independent Means" were filmed entirely in the state.

With terrain ranging from the Gulf Coast to the Mexican border, Texas can offer ocean-like settings as well as the desert. About the only things Texas can't offer are wintery conditions and a jungle, as the Texas Film Commission found out.

The Jim Carrey movie "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls," which opened Friday, was filmed almost entirely in Texas despite being set in Africa. The only scenes the Lone Star State couldn't provide were those in a jungle.

"We looked and looked but couldn't come up with anything like an African jungle," said Ms. Pirie, adding that South Carolina became the location for those scenes.

"Courage Under Fire" takes place in Washington D.C. and Kuwait. The Washington scenes are being filmed in Austin, and desert-like areas near El Paso will double as Kuwait.

"Michael" is set in Iowa. But because production schedules dictate that the film be made in February, the browning grass and barren trees in Austin will become the Midwest.

Senator overcame fear of public speaking in high school plays

PERRY, Ga. — It was the place where he learned to deal with crowds, and now Sen. Sam Nunn hopes to draw a few to his old high school with an exhibit about his life and work.

Sen. Sam Nunn hopes to draw crowds to his old high school.

Nunn attended Perry High School from seventh grade until his graduation in 1956. It was there, he said, that English teacher Florence Harrison put him in plays in the ninth grade to cure his fear of public speaking.

"I had wonderful teachers and had great memories there," Nunn said.

The 70-year-old, stately brick building was until recently used to store books. It was restored and now houses the Houston County school board.

Nunn, who said last month he will not seek a fifth term, has hired a consultant to design a one-room exhibit at the school that will include CD-ROM displays and mementos from his days in Perry and the Senate.

Barbara Jordan was given the Harvey Penick Award.

AUSTIN — Barbara Jordan says she's honored to be considered on par with the late Harvey Penick.

The former congresswoman was given the Harvey Penick Award on Thursday for "excellence in the game of life." The award is named for the Austin golf pro who taught Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite and wrote the best-selling "Little Red Book."

The honor "means somebody thinks I have some traits that Harvey Penick would appreciate, and so I like that," Ms. Jordan said.

Caritas of Austin, a nonprofit social services organization, said it gave Ms. Jordan the award because she exemplifies Penick's values as a mentor and educator who encouraged others to excel.

Ms. Jordan was the first black woman elected to the Texas Legislature. In 1972, she became the first black woman from the South to be elected to Congress. She left politics in 1978 and is now a college professor.

PHOENIX — Since 1965, Erma Bombeck has turned out column after column with wry, witty observations on home life. Her humor may be all the more impressive now, in her third year of awaiting a kidney transplant.

"She's an extraordinary person. ... If you didn't know her well, you wouldn't know that there's anything necessarily wrong with her," her literary agent Aaron Priest said.

Bombeck, 68, suffers from total kidney failure and undergoes dialysis four times a day at her home in Paradise Valley.

She and her husband, Bill, declined Thursday to comment on her health problems, which included breast cancer and a double mastectomy in 1992.

"It's hard. It's difficult. But she's not near death," Priest said from New York.

Her column, first syndicated in 1965, appears twice a week in 700 newspapers. She just published her 12th book, "All I Know About Animal Behavior I Learned in Loehman's Dressing Room."

WATERVILLE, Maine — Murray C. Kempton says his fellow journalists should learn from the literary giants of the past and write for the literary giants of the future.

Kempton, who won the Pulitzer Prize in 1985 for his columns in now-defunct New York Newsday, was given the Elijah Parish Lovejoy Award on Thursday by Colby College.

He challenged journalists to write "not to something as amorphous as an audience, but to some Theodore Dreiser, F. Scott Fitzgerald or Emily Dickinson who is 14 years old and is riding the subway to Rockaway and who picks up the paper somebody has thrown away and reads it."

Asked what advice he would offer to aspiring newspaper writers, Kempton, 78, said they should "read the best works that have been written."

The Lovejoy award is named for a Colby graduate who was killed in 1837 while defending his abolitionist newspaper from a pro-slavery mob in Alton, Ill.

Real Life Agency News

"Jane" first came to the Salvation Army in August unemployed and destitute. She had been terminated from her place of employment due to a long bout with cancer which prohibited her from working regularly. Still facing hospital, doctor, and medication bills, Jane soon exhausted her financial resources. Now unable to care for herself or her young girls, ages six and eight, Jane turned to the Salvation Army for help.

"This is not a voluntary enterprise," said Captain Harold Tracy, "This is our duty. This we must do: serving mankind." The Salvation Army started with Jane's immediate needs. They paid her past due utility bills, supplied food boxes for her family, and arranged for her to have in home care. In home care will enable Jane to administer her own medication, saving countless dollars in medical and hospital fees. For Jane's long term needs, the Army is investigating the possibility of obtaining some help (if any) from Jane's former insurance company that she used when working.

Without your support of United Way and the Salvation Army, Jane might not have received the help they needed. Thank you for your generosity.

Showalter update

PHOENIX — Four days after discussions with Arizona Diamondbacks officials, former New York Yankees manager Buck Showalter has agreed to sign on as the expansion team's first manager, ESPN reported Friday. According to ESPN, Showalter, who was let go Nov. 1 by Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, will sign a 7-year deal next week with the Diamondbacks, who don't begin play until 1998. Jerry Colangelo, the Diamondbacks managing general partner and Phoenix Suns president, could not be reached for comment, but Suns operations assistant Seth Sulka said some team officials were not aware of the "good news." National Sports/5C.

Bobcats bomb Bulldogs, 47-7

■ Midland High falls short in its final season game as San Angelo Central takes a wire-to-wire District 4-5A victory.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

After a yearlong quarterback controversy and a loss to Abilene High that cost San Angelo Central a trip to the state football playoffs, the Bobcats ended the nightmare at Memorial Stadium Friday night with a 47-7 whipping of Midland High.

For San Angelo coach Dan Gandy it was a weight lifted off his shoulders as he dreamed of what could have been.

"This is a good football team," Gandy said after the wire-to-wire victory. "This just shows what this team can do when it is relaxed. Every time we would get something going this year, something negative would rise up again. And the loss to Abilene High cost us a trip to the playoffs.

"We thought we would be coming in here playing for the whole marble (playoffs), but it just didn't happen."

The Bulldogs pummeled the Bobcats 26-0 last year in San Angelo to finish the season at 5-5, but the table turned in this one, leaving the Bulldogs with a losing season of 4-6, the same as San Angelo. However, the Bulldogs finish tied for last in District 4-5A at 1-5 with Abilene High while San Angelo had a 3-3 mark, which at one time looked like it would be good enough for a playoff berth.

"I'm embarrassed for our team, coaches and our seniors," Reeger said. "This was not the same football team that beat Abilene High last week. We were totally dominated offensively and defensively and I see nothing positive coming out of this at all. We just didn't play, and I don't know why. We had good practices this week. We had an opportunity to get after some folks and didn't do it."

How bad was it? The Bobcats had 26 first downs to MHS' four. MHS had only 88 yards rushing to San Angelo's 257. The Bobcats had another 209 yards passing, including two touchdown passes from Bobby Townsend of 70 and 31 yards.

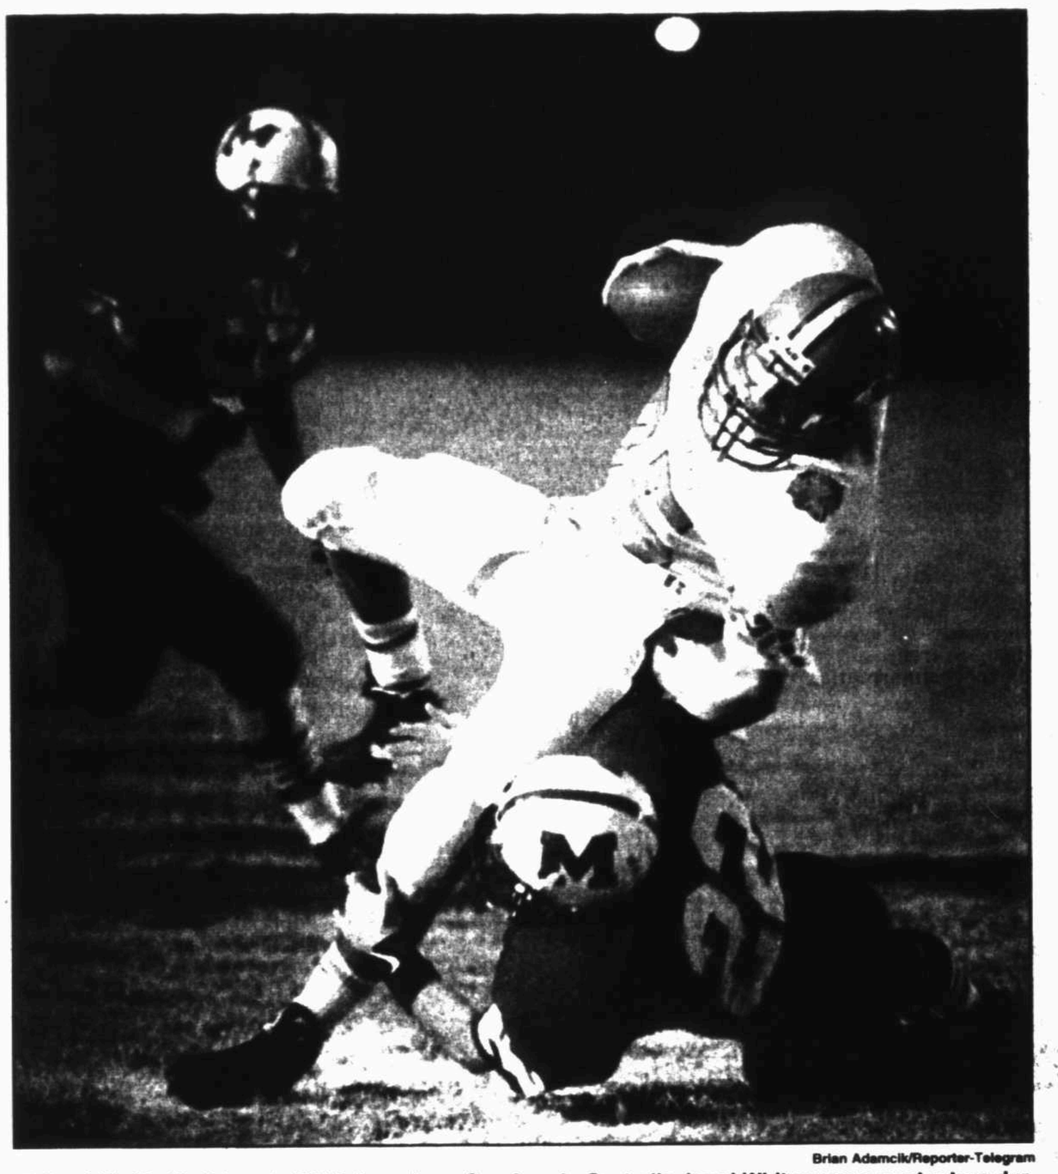

Townsend, who was a starter last year at quarterback before Gandy moved in August Pfluger at the start of the season, was glad to end the year on the high note.

"The season didn't go like we wanted, but this does a lot for our pride," Townsend said. "It's always hard to end your high school career, but considering all I've gone through this season, I'm kind of glad to get it behind me."

Townsend alternated at quarterback with Pfluger, who threw for 94 yards and one touchdown. No mater what San Angelo did on the field it worked, including 132 yards and two touchdowns from Toby Davis and 103 yards rushing from Deshawn Yates.

Very little worked for the MHS offense, which fumbled the

When you have the talent the Midland College Basketball teams have, it is hard to please the men who run the shows.

So, despite good size wins in both the women's game over Collin County and men's game over Pima Community College in the Chaparral Classic held Friday at Chaparral Center, the coaches aren't exactly happy with what they saw.

"I wasn't pleased with the last 10 minutes," said Midland College head coach Pat Rafferty about his team's 89-77 win. "We did some good things for a majority of the game, but I am hard to please. I told my team that's why I'm still single."

The Chaps, 1-2 for the season, won their season opener over what was a game Pima team. After MC and Pima exchanged the lead to start the game, sophomores D'Juan Baker and Devon Phillips lead the way scoring 26 of the team's last 36 points in the first half to give MC a 15-point advantage at the half.

Likewise the pair would come through with clutch baskets down the wire to snuff out any hopes of a Pima comeback.

Those hopes of the Aztecs comeback came about after they cut into Midland College's 25-point lead. Pima's Brandon Quihuis and Arturo Valerio keyed the effort, which came after Rafferty pulled his starters to see what the reserves could do. The end result was lights out shooting by Pima and sloppy play by the Chaps in the last 10 minutes of the second half. Quihuis had 18 of his 22 points in the second half while Valerio had 15 of his 22 including four treys.

"We got sloppy and deviated from our game plan," Rafferty said. "We have to learn about putting people away."

Though MC was never really in danger, Pima closed inside 12 a few times including the games end. D'Juan Baker,

Steers get emotional win, 14-10

By Mike Butts

BIG SPRING — Wednesday, their practice mood was as somber as a church service. Friday night their jubilation as heart-felt as a lottery winner's. It's been that kind of week for the Big Spring Steers.

Big Spring beat Andrews 14-10 Friday. But barring a last-minute ruling reversal, the Steers won't make the playoffs this year. That may be for the best.

Big Spring would be hard-pressed to come up with a more gutsy, emotional win, in the playoffs or out of them, than Friday night. The Steers learned Wednesday they would have to forfeit their District 4-4A win over Pecos. That put them out of playoff consideration and secured a postseason visit for Andrews.

The revelation demoted Friday's game with Andrews from a contest to see who would make the playoffs to a test of who could play well despite knowing they had clinched or were out of the playoffs.

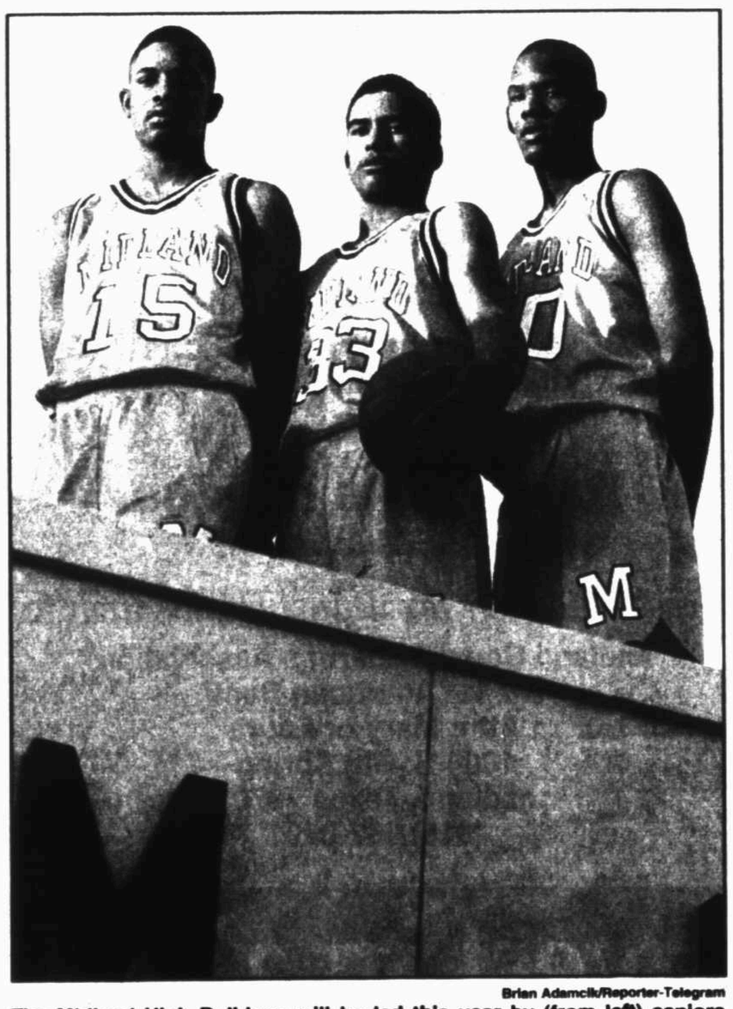

The Mustangs will be ending a one-year absence from postseason. But it was the Steers who were up to the task Friday.

"(We had) no letdown whatsoever," Big Spring fullback Donnie Hill said. "We're not going to let somebody come to our house and beat us just because

Bulldogs going back to the future

Just getting to the state tournament might be enough for some teams, but its not for the Midland High boys basketball team.

This time, they want to stay in Austin for a couple of days.

The Midland High advanced to the state tournament in 1993 only to lose in the semifinals. And after being ousted in the second round of the playoffs last year by El Paso Irvin, Bulldogs' coach Jack Stephenson believes he has the talent to get back and hang around for a while.

"I really feel like we've got a good chance to win the district title and get back to Austin," Stephenson said. "We certainly had the chance to win the district last year and we've got a real strong schedule this year which will certainly get us ready for district play."

Aside from the usual wars with District 4-5A, the Bulldogs have early-season action against Del Rio and Victoria as well as tournaments in Big Spring, Denver City, the Byron Johnston Invitational and the Super 8 event in Fort Worth which annually attracts the top high school programs from across the state and around the country.

"You have to play the best to be the best," said Stephenson, whose team opens its regular season Nov. 17 in Del Rio. "Our schedule will prepare us for Dec. 16 (the 4-5A opener against Lee) when it really counts."

The Bulldogs are coming off a successful 24-8 season, a playoff berth and return five letter winners, but after making it to the state tournament the year before, most of the returning players believe the season could have been better.

"It was a real disappointment," said senior forward Terry Johnson, who was a sophomore on the 1993 state tournament team. "I really felt bad for the seniors because it was their last year and we didn't make it back to state. Now that I'm a senior, I want to have that feeling

Buffaloes end long wait for postseason

By Tom Ruiz

COAHOMA — It took the Stanton Buffaloes six long years to get back into the state playoffs, and the way they did it was not easy as the Buffs got by a stubborn Coahoma team, 33-14 here Friday night.

The win gives the Buffaloes the runner-up spot in District 6-2A. Stanton (8-2, 4-1) will play Iraan in the first round at a time and site to be determined later. In this game, the Buffaloes got all they wanted from the junkyard dogs of Coahoma. Add to that was the uninspirational practices that Stanton had during the week, and an upset was definitely brewing.

"We were unemotional all week" said Stanton mentor Mark Cotton prior to the game. "But it sure feels good to get back into the playoffs, and we sure have missed it."

The Buffaloes displayed their unenthusiasim for the game in the first half.

The Bulldogs, who finish the season at (5-5, 1-4), bulged their muscles first as they picked off a Stanton pass at the Buffaloes 19. Three plays later quarterback Kelby Bailey, who entered the game with James Whitfield, 5-foot-10, Sr., guard: Will be looked at to set the tempo of the game. "A great player who will definitely be our team leader," Stephenson said.

Terry Johnson, 6-4, Sr., forward: Will move between forward and guard depending on the situation. "One of the hardest working kids on the team."

Josh Lane, 6-4, Sr., forward: Started part-time last year and will be expected to carry a heavier scoring load this season. "Josh had a great off-season and is a much improved player," said Stephenson.

David Bash, 6-0, Sr., forward: Solid player and a good shooter. "Has a good knowledge of the game and knows what needs to be done when he hits the court."

Lee Dunn, 6-0, Jr., guard: Played on sophomore team in '94 and looking for varsity roster spot in 1995. "Lee had a tremendous off-season and worked hard on his game. He could give us depth at the point guard spot."

Roosevelt Irving, 5-8, Jr., guard: Sophomore player in '94. "A tough competitor who will challenge for a roster spot," Stephenson said.

Russell Gardner, 6-1 Jr., forward: Transfer player from Austin Lanier. "One of the most improved players from last year. A solid 5A player and a definite college prospect," Stephenson said.

Alex Hernandez, 6-0, Sr., guard: Good shooter with some quickness. "Alex can hit the jumper when needed and will give us depth at guard."

Sam Juardo, 6-2, Sr., forward: Versatile player who can shoot. "Alex can move inside or outside for us and is a good jumper. He can nail the 10-footer when we need him to."

Jeff Keith, 6-7, Jr., forward: Returning letter winner who adds inside punch. "One of the best athletes on the team," Stephenson said.

Kirby Lemons, 6-5, So., guard: A talented player who is projected to be in the starting lineup for the Bulldogs. "Perhaps the best sophomore I've ever coached. He's got a load of talent and really knows the game."

Treg Manning, 6-6, Jr., forward: One of the better shooters on the team. "He had a great fall and blossomed into a real player. We have high hopes for him."

Torrence Mason, 6-0, Jr., guard: Speedy player who played on sophomore team last year. "Has a lot of quickness and can stop and hit the jumper."

Walker Moody, 5-10, Jr., guard: Good work ethic. "He has a chance to letter on varsity this year."

Ross Nobles, 5-9 So., guard: Hard worker who will challenge on the court. "He's fighting to make the roster. Has a lot of ferociousness and is a competitor."

Marvin Risper, 5-9, Jr., guard: Improving player who may get a shot to make the varsity roster. "An excellent work ethic and a player who is getting better every day."

Jon Stephenson, 6-3, Jr., forward: One of the better shooters on the team. "If he can handle playing for his dad, he can handle anything."

Adam Thomas, 6-4, Jr., forward: Has a shot a varsity roster. "He reminds me of the type of kids who play at Indiana."

Justin Marzette, 6-0, Sr., post: Could be an impact player for Bulldogs. "I'm really excited about him. He's a delight to watch."

Jerome Eldridge, 5-10, Jr., guard/forward: "Jerome's a real neat kid and one of thosetough individuals that if I was walking down a New York City street at night, I'd want him there with me."

again."

Johnson played in 24 games for the Bulldogs in 1994 and was just one of the players who saw a lot of playing time on an MHS team which prides itself on its up-tempo type of offensive style and suffocating, full-court defense. Stephenson is looking for the 6-foot-4 Johnson to step up offensively and try and give the Bulldogs some help on the inside.

"Terry moved around a lot for us last year but really wasn't a post for us," Stephenson said. "He's as good a shooter as we've got and one of the hardest working kids I've known."

The inside game will be a critical one for Midland High in 1995. The Bulldogs finally have something it hasn't had for a while — height — and Stephenson expects it to be a major asset for the Bulldogs this year. Midland High could put a lineup on the court which averages 6-2.

"With our height, it will be hard for teams to compete with us on the glass," Stephenson said. "We've got as much size as some small colleges and that's something we haven't had in a while."

Johnson, 6-4, Josh Lane, 6-3, junior Jon Stephenson and 6-4 junior Adam Thomas form the core of what should be an exciting group of inside players for the Bulldogs. The guys have played together since they were freshmen, which has turned into a big plus.

"Last year there really wasn't a lot of team unity," said Jon Stephenson, who is also the coach's son. "There was a lot of separation between us, but this year we're all great friends and that helps on the court."

Coach Stephenson had a good idea where his inside game was going to come from, but what he didn't expect was the rapid improvement of 6-0 senior post Justin Marzette, who might be the surprise player for the Bulldogs this year.

"In the last month or so, this young man has convinced me he is going to be a player," Stephenson said. "He really reminds me a lot of Donald Carter (from Midland High's 1993 state tournament team)."

Another plus for the Bulldogs this season is depth at the guard position led by 5-10 senior James Whitfield, who Stephenson said could be headed for big things in 1995.

"James is one of the best guards in West Texas and has the potential of being one of the best guards I've ever seen," Stephenson said. "It's hard to play against him because he can shoot the ball or go to hole or just make something happen. He's a real smart kid who really understands the game."

Whitfield spent most of the 1994 season with the junior varsity but because he spent numerous hours honing his skills on the court after practice, he has a chance to lead the Bulldogs back into the district's top spot.

"Nothing replaces time in the gym and since they left here last year, most of the guys have been in the gym almost everyday and spent countless hours working out. All of the kids on this team are gym rats," he added. "This team's immediate goal is to get back to Austin. I've got a medallion hanging in my car from our trip to Austin two years ago and everytime I see it reminds me of what our goal is."

Austin is also on the minds of Midland High's 4-5A foes and before the Bulldogs can plan a state title run, MHS will have to get past a district which should be competitive again this season.

Abilene Cooper is the two-time defending district champion and last year's regional finalist. The Bulldogs will also have to fight it out with a talented Midland Lee team as well as Odessa Permian, Odessa High and Abilene High.

"I don't think you can go out and play street ball and win in this district. You need organization and discipline to win championships," Stephenson said. "Just because you have better jumpers or better runners, doesn't mean you'll win. These kids we have here at Midland High love the game and their work habits show it."

who finished with a game high 28 and Phillips who finished with 18 shut the door on the Aztecs. The two scored the Chaps last 11 points that ended Pima's 13-2 run.

Lamont Young also had 15 for the Chaps while Kenny Neal and Chancey Wade had 10 and 14 respectively for the Pima, who went to 0-1 for the season.

The Lady Chaps shook off a shaky start to defeat the Express of Collin County Community 87-56 with what has been the story of their season...depth.

But even with what was a rout not only on paper but also on the court, Lady Chaps' head coach Ron Jones wasn't thrilled at his team's dullness.

"We were uninspired tonight," Jones said. "We just weren't sharp although they tried harder in the second half.

"I feel we need to come out with more energy."

But Jones, whose team moved to a perfect 5-0 for the season, had a huge game from post Ndiasse Ndiaye, who had 27 points and 10 boards and dominated the play in the paint.

"She's been playing well," Jones said. "She hit the shots that she had been missing before."

But make no mistake about it, Jones' success Friday night and through the first five games lies in the large number of players to attack teams with. Jones hopes to become a more balanced offense, something the team missed last year and in the process find players he can use more often when the game is on the line.

"That (the number of players the Lady Chaps play) is always going to be a factor," said Jones, whose team is still averaging 96.4 points per game. "Part of the reason I'm playing so many people is I have to make decisions down the line.

"But I'm not having to depend on one person offensively to help us."

The Chaps' only other double digit scorer on Friday was sophomore transfer Erica Knight, who threw in 14 points for MC. But looking down the list of the other scorers in MC's lineup, there are a lot of seven and eight-point scorers but there is also the consideration that only two players, Kellina Bradshaw and Ndiasse played more than 20 minutes (half a game).

Stacey Revely had 17 to lead Collin County, whose record falls to 1-2.

The Lady Chaps will play Paris Junior College today at 6 p.m. Paris lost its game Friday to South Plains Junior College. In that game former Odessa Permian Star Angie Braziel had 24 points to lead SPC.

The men will play its toughest opponent to date when they battle Mesa Community College. Mesa beat Howard Friday 79-55 in a game that was never close.

Kilgore divided over team's policies

DALLAS (AP) — Kilgore officials are divided over a policy that has allowed two high school football players indicted for robbery to continue playing.

One of the players, Kilgore sophomore running back Patrick Williams, was ruled ineligible for further play after pleading guilty on Wednesday to the charge of robbing Eduardo Ramirez on June 6.

Meanwhile, Ezekiel "Zeke" Williams, an 18-year-old senior, is cleared to play Friday night against Longview Pine Tree while he is under indictment.

Cookie cousins, both powerhouses for Kilgore High, combined for two touchdowns last week in the Bulldogs' 21-7 victory over Carthage.

"I think it should be an honor to play on the team," Kilgore Mayor Bill Wilson said.

BUFFS: Stanton ends 5-year playoff drought

(From 1C)

1880 yards passing, found Matthew Hamilton in the back of the endzone for a 7-0 lead at 6:34 of the second quarter.

But Stanton came right back on a seven-play, 59-yard drive, which Mark Carrillo capped off with a two-yard run, and a 7-7 tie at the half.

Despite the tie at intermission, Stanton allowed the much important momentum factor to swing towards Coahoma. One of Stanton's few bright spots in the first half was the rushing of Todd Davis, who had 103 yards rushing at halftime. Davis finished the game with 207 yards on the ground.

At the half in the Stanton locker room, Cotton had one of his heart-to-heart talks with his ball club. Davis responded to the pep talk as he scored four touchdowns in the second half.

His first TD came in the first minute of the third quarter when he raced 33 yards for a 14-7 lead. The score was set up by a Nick Hull interception.

Later in the third, Davis scored again on a one-yard dive into the endzone. He added his third TD on a five-yard run with 2:39 left in the third and a 27-7 score.

But the Bulldogs would not go away, Bailey, who threw for 237 yards for the night and 2117 for the season, led his dogs on an 80-yard scoring march. He finished the drive on a 3-yard scamper to pay dirt, and the dogs trailed 27-14.

Coahoma made the visiting Stanton faithful nervous when it recovered the on-side kick on the ensuing kickoff.

"Our kids never gave up, and they gave it everything they had", said Coahoma coach Eddie McHugh. But the Stanton defense refused to fold as Bailey was preasssured and could not find the open man. The Bulldogs had to punt, and Buffaloes were able to put these puppies to bed.

SAN ANGELO — Nick Conder had four interceptions as the Midland High junior varsity finished its season here Thursday with a 28-26 win over San Angelo Central. The Bulldogs end district play at 3-3 and are 7-3 overall.

STEERS: Big Spring ends bad week by beating Andrews

they thought we didn't have a chance (to make the playoffs)."

Nobody would have been surprised if the Steers (3-7 overall, 2-3 in district) hadn't recovered from the disappointment stemming from the forfeit, which came because a player participated in a junior varsity and varsity game in the same week. But Big Spring turned a game that could have been anticlimactic and meaningless into probably the biggest win of the season.

"It was a tough situation for the players all week," said Steer coach Dwight Butler, who turned his team in after finding out about the ineligible player. "It was tough on our community. But this was our last game together and the main thing was we wanted to go out a winner."

Hill said the Steers had no trouble overlooking the "negative stuff" to put their best effort into the game.

"We wanted them (Andrews) to know in their hearts we beat them and we should be the ones going to the playoffs, they know that," Hill said.

Of course the distractions were felt by the Mustangs (5-5, 3-2) too. But maybe not as much.

"We didn't know (about the forfeit) until Thursday, so it was a normal week for us," Mustang coach Mike Lebby said. "(But) it's hard to tell. I think in the back of the kids' minds, when you know you're going to be in the playoffs, it makes it difficult."

The Steers fell behind 10-0 in the first half and scored touchdowns in the second and third periods to win. Hill rushed for 93 yards and Bucky Crenshaw threw a touchdown pass. Andrews lost three fumbles and was penalized nine time for 66 yards.

"Our players have been through a lot this year," Butler said. "I just didn't know when the first thing went wrong how they would respond tonight. This was our playoff game and win or lose, this team is a bunch of champions."

The Big Spring school board will decide in the next few days whether to appeal the forfeit. But Butler sounded as if he wasn't sure if he even wanted an appeal.

"If we do appeal, I do not want to appeal the wrong we did," Butler said. "The only thing I would want to appeal is if this is an eligibility or a contest problem. There's a different severity of penalty if it's a contest or eligibility (violation). (But) please put this in the paper: We were guilty."

Andrews freshman Shaud Williams, who rushed for 161 yards, put the Mustangs ahead 10-0 in the second quarter on a 4-yard run. But without starting quarterback Marcus Bueno, the Mustang passing game was limited. Lebby preferred not to give details about Bueno's absence.

The Steers went 66 yards in nine plays in the second period with Crenshaw finding Marc Baker on a 3-yard touchdown. Baker then took the snap as the extra-point holder and ran into the end zone to make the score 10-8. Antwoyne Edwards (76 yard rushing) ran seven yards with 5:49 left in the third quarter to give the Steers the win.

Andrews will go in the playoffs on a two-game losing streak having committed 18 penalties in the two losses.

"I don't know (if we're ready for the playoffs)" Lebby said. "We'll know when we get to practice next week."

For the Steers, the playoffs could have turned out to be the real anticlimax to this season.

Colbert keeps lead in Senior Championship

The Associated Press

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — While short sleeves replaced hand warmers, Jim Colbert kept up his on-target iron play Friday for a three-shot lead halfway through the Senior Tour Championship.

■ Golf

Colbert scoped out pins with his approach shots throughout the Friday, finishing with a 69 and a two-day total of 140 that was 7-under par.

The only player who could keep pace at The Dunes Golf & Beach Club was Colbert's playing partner, Isao Aoki, who also shot a 69 to go 4-under.

Tom Wargo, who finished fifth at The Dunes a year ago, moved into contention with a 69. He was five shots back with Hale Irwin, at 50 the youngest competitor in the field.

Bob Murphy, who leads the Tour with four victories this year, and Lee Trevino were even at 144. Murphy had a 71 and Trevino, whose first round included a 9 on the par-5 13th hole, came back with a 70.

No one else in the select 30-man field cracked par on Friday, despite an almost balmy climate compared with the frigidly cold first-round conditions.

World Cup of Golf

SHENZHEN, China — Jesper Parnevik celebrated a hole-in-one then finished with two bogeys Friday to allow the U.S. team of Davis Love and Fred Couples to increase its lead to four strokes in the World Cup of Golf.

Love shot a 6-under-par 67 and Couples added a 69 for a 19-under 269 total for two rounds on the Jack Nicklaus-designed TPC at Mission Hills. Love and Couples have won the tournament a record three straight times.

Oilers, Nashville close to signing final agreement

By Karin Miller
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Local officials and the Houston Oilers are working out some final details, and should be ready early next week to say for certain that the NFL plans to play in the Music City in 1998.

"We hope that we'll be able to sign on Monday and certainly before the Metro Council filing deadline on Tuesday," Nashville negotiator Byron Trauger said Friday.

The $292 million agreement — which includes milestones that extend to March 22, 1996 — must be wrapped up before stadium construction can begin. Trauger said lawyers were still reviewing the agreement.

The NFL, which would be asked to approve the move, declined comment.

After the 30-page "stadium and relocation agreement" is signed by Oilers owner Bud Adams and Nashville Mayor Phil Bredesen, it must be approved by the council. Gov. Don Sundquist will be out of town and doesn't need to sign the agreement, spokeswoman Beth Fortune said.

The council vote is scheduled for Nov. 21.

The council passed an abbreviated version of the agreement 24-7 last month.

"We're trying to do in eight months what most communities do in five years," said Trauger, chairman of the negotiating team for the city and state.

The move would be the second proposed NFL shift announced in an eight-day span. On Monday, the Cleveland Browns said they intend to move to Baltimore next season.

The proposed franchise shifts are the latest in a turbulent year for cities trying to keep NFL teams. Los Angeles lost both of its teams this year, with the Raiders moving back to Oakland and the Rams relocating in St. Louis.

The future is unsettled for officials in several cities where stadiums are deemed unacceptable by the teams. Also being courted or considering moves were the teams in Cincinnati, Tampa Bay, Seattle and Arizona.

Prior to the Raiders and Rams, the Cardinals were the last to relocate, deserting St. Louis for Phoenix in 1988.

The Oilers have a lease through the 1997 season with the Astrodome. There has been speculation that the team might relocate temporarily to Memphis and play there prior to moving on to Nashville.

But the CFL Memphis Mad Dogs have exclusive professional use of Liberty Bowl Stadium in Memphis and would have to approve.

Mad Dogs managing general partner Pepper Rodgers told The Associated Press Friday night that he has not been approached by the Oilers.

"Nobody from Houston has talked to the city, the park commission or me about using the Liberty Bowl," Rodgers said.

Some council members have worried that Adams would leave Tennessee if a better deal comes along.

Trauger said Adams would face stiff penalties if he tried to leave Nashville before the end of the 30-year stadium lease agreement.

"This agreement contemplates a lease agreement that will have very strong incentives for the Oilers to stay and very strong penalties if they do not stay for 30 years, including repayment of the indebtedness of the city."

The agreement also requires the Oilers to operate the stadium.

"That way, if the stadium doesn't pay for itself, it's the Oilers' problem, not the city's problem," Trauger said. "In exchange for that, they get the revenues. We think that's the safest way to protect the Metro citizens down the road."

Adams' main objective in moving from the Astrodome is that he wants the revenues from the stadium. That stadium is operated by baseball's Houston Astros, who announced Friday they will stay there next season.

If the council approves this version, six more milestones must be achieved before ground can be broken on a new stadium April 1. They are:

More Sports/8C

— Dec. 31, luxury suites sold.

— Feb. 5, permanent seat licenses sold.

— March 6, final Metro Council approval of funding, and final agreement between Nashville, the Oilers and sports authority on a long-term lease and contract.

— March 10, approval of $79.3 million state funding by the state Legislature.

— March 15, NFL approval of the move.

— March 22, development agreement, stadium lease and Oilers' contract signed.

Cleveland city officials shoot back at Modell

CLEVELAND (AP) — Art Modell cleared the way for the Cleveland Browns to move to Baltimore with a faulty lease revision between his team and the Modell-controlled stadium management company, city attorneys said Friday.

Not so, responded Modell's lawyer, Robert C. Weber. He said the city claim that it had found a "silver bullet" to halt the team's move next year was a rehash of its lawsuit filed Monday.

At issue is an amendment signed Oct. 27 between the Browns and their landlord, the Cleveland Stadium Corp. The company controlled by Modell manages the city-owned Cleveland Stadium under a lease with the city.

The revision would allow the Browns to move if they paid the city $3.6 million. That is the team's estimate of rent and admission taxes which the city would earn if the club stayed in Cleveland through the end of its original 25-year lease in 1998.

Frederick R. Nance and George M. von Mehren, lawyers representing the city in the Browns case, said the lease change is void and predicted it would convince a judge to block the move of the Browns.

Nance and von Mehren said similar attempts by the New York Jets and New York Yankees to revise their leases were blocked in court.

Nance urged fans to hold firm in the face of the pending move. "Stand with us, stand behind us. We will get your team back," he said.

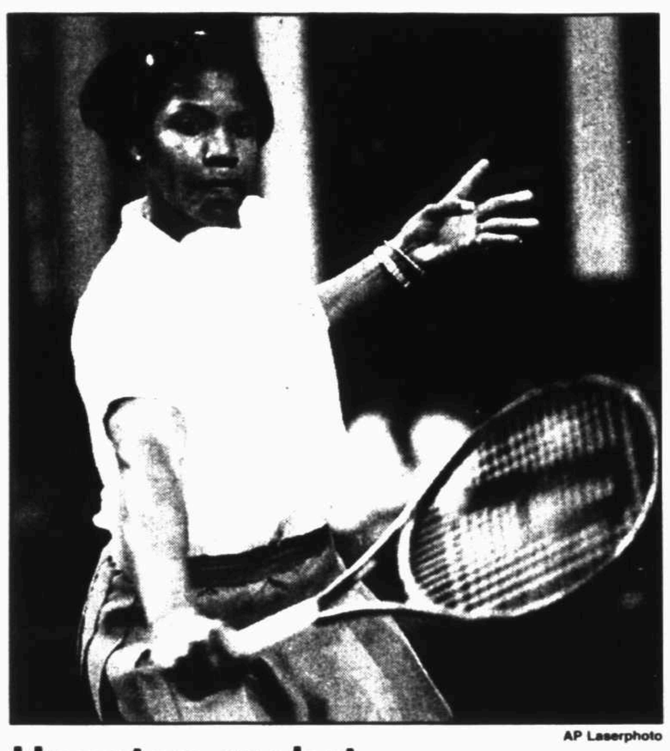

The original 1974 lease between the stadium corporation and Browns requires the team to play all regular season home games in Cleveland through 1998.

Weber said the city doesn't have a lease with the Browns and thus cannot force them to stay in Cleveland. He said the city had violated a judge's warning to take a "minimalist approach with the media. We certainly will not be holding press conferences and will address whatever claims the city wants to conjure up in court."

Both sides must return to court Nov. 20 on the city's lawsuit.

On Monday, Judge Kenneth Callahan of Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court blocked Modell from entering into any additional agreement until the lawsuit is resolved. However, the judge stopped short of barring Modell from proceeding with his announcement of the signed Baltimore deal.

Modell said he could not afford to pass up the opportunity to move to Baltimore, which has promised to build a new stadium in two years. Until then, the Browns would play in Memorial Stadium.

Limping 'Niners don't bring huge ticket prices hawkers anticipated

IRVING (AP) — The anticipated rematch between the Dallas Cowboys and NFC champion San Francisco is generating less money for hawked tickets now that the 49ers are limping.

Dozens of ticket holders have placed classified advertisements asking for as much as $950 for each ticket to Sunday's sold-out game, but few have been successful.

"The response is terrible," Eddie Mims, a furniture company's manager, told The Dallas Morning News in Friday's editions. "To be honest with you, it's not that good of a sale right now. I wanted to drop (the tickets.) I guess I'm going to go to the game."

But others may not because the injury-depleted defending Super Bowl champs, who beat Dallas 38-28 in the NFC title game last year, have had four losses. Kim Nelson was also awaiting a reply to her newspaper ad.

"We were told the San Francisco-Cowboys game was going to be the game of the season," said Ms. Nelson, who was asking $750 each for two 45-yard line tickets with a face value of $46 apiece.

Keith Wilson, who decided to advertise his tickets after his girlfriend opted not to go to the game, had not received serious responses to his classified ad. Wilson wants $650 — or best offer — for each of his 40-yard line tickets behind the Cowboys bench.

Mims, a season-ticket holder three times, was asking $2,000 for parking and four seats near the 15-yard line. One advertiser who did get a sale, Virgin Robbins, said his tickets went for nothing near what he had originally asked.

A season ticket holder since 1961, Robbins said his two tickets, with parking, were first advertised for $600 — but went for $350. Most people trying to sell tickets through classified ads are offering "outrageously priced" seats, said Texas Tickets' Jerry Randack.

That's because the 49ers are now struggling for an NFC playoff berth, let alone contending for home-field advantage in the conference, due to injuries to quarterback Steve Young, fullback William Floyd and other key players.

Still, Dallas' taste for revenge is drawing some interest for any tickets that come back on the market. The high-rolling Cowboys are tied with the Kansas City Chiefs at 8-1 with the best NFL records this year.

"It's still the 49ers," said Randack, who is offering tickets for $175 to $600. "They beat us last year. There is still demand for it."

Astros to stay for one year, but still need fans

HOUSTON (AP) — After realizing that baseball owners wouldn't approve a move, Astros owner Drayton McLane Jr. said Friday he will keep his team in Houston for the 1996 season.

McLane issued an ultimatum Friday to the nation's fourth-largest city: fill up the Astrodome or say goodbye to the franchise in a year.

"I'm here today to ask fans and the citizens of Houston-Harris County Texas to help us support the Houston Astros," he said at a news conference. "We're committed to stay in Houston through the 1996 season."

McLane's announcement ended 2 1/2 weeks of speculation that he was about to sell the team to a group headed by Virginia businessman Bill Collins.

"What can I say? It's all happened so quickly. We had a willing buyer. I believe we had a willing seller," Collins said.

To sell the team to Collins, McLane would need approval from 10 of 14 NL owners and eight of 14 AL owners. Baseball officials made it clear they were opposed to a move.

Collins insisted McLane didn't use him as a foil to get a better deal out of Houston officials.

"They were very honorable, very upfront with us," Collins said.

But McLane did start a one-year clock ticking. City and county officials, already on the verge of losing the Houston Oilers to Nashville, Tenn., now must help boost ticket sales significantly.

"If we can't achieve financial success and we can't continue to move forward, than the team needs to go somewhere where it can go forward," said McLane, who emphasized he would not follow in Bud Adams footsteps and relocate the team.

Instead, McLane said he would attempt to sell the franchise outright if it continues to show lagging attendance and poor ticket sales.

"I want to be with a champion or get out of the way," he said.

Astros attendance averaged 19,208 last season at the Astrodome, which seats 54,350. McLane would not provide a specific attendance minimum that he thinks fans should meet.

But he has said in the past that he needs 35,000 in the stands per game to break even.

"We want to be the most successful baseball team in America," McLane said.

"And the only way we're going to achieve this success is to be voted by the citizens that they want to be major league baseball fans," he said. "You can't prop up anything."

Since McLane bought the Astros three years ago for $115 million, he claims the team has lost about $60 million. McLane backed off whether the team must have a new stadium to attract fans.

However, he did point to other teams, like the Atlanta Braves, Cleveland Indians and Milwaukee Brewers. All three cities are building or have built new stadiums.

Mayor Lanier and Harris County Judge Robert Eckels also became vague on the issue of whether a new stadium — a demand they denied Oilers owner Bud Adams — would be in the Astros future.

"No demand has been made of the county," Eckels said.

Harris County owns the Astrodome; McLane manages it.

McLane admitted to having preliminary discussions with Virginia businessman Collins, who said his group would have paid about $150 million. Since McLane didn't first ask permission from the ruling executive council to talk with Collins, he apparently violated baseball's rules.

But the commitment to Houston, made Friday means McLane has "put our flag down right now," on any deal to sell the team.

Today in the SWC

DALLAS (AP) — Previews of this week's Southwest Conference football games:

TCU (6-2, 3-1 SWC) at TEXAS TECH (5-3, 2-2 SWC), Noon

Raycom regional telecast — This rivalry dates to 1926, won 28-16 by the Frogs in Fort Worth. Tech has broken through as the series leader at 26-22-3 thanks to eight wins in the last 10 outings. TCU has split the last four contests, beginning with a 30-16 triumph at Lubbock in 1991 under then-head coach Jim Wacker. Tech ends this SWC rivalry with a pair of six-game winning skeins over the Frogs from 1973-78 and 1985-90. The coaches: TCU's Pat Sullivan is 19-22-1 (fourth season, all in Frogland) overall, 10-15-1 in SWC tilts; 1-2 vs. the Red Raiders, and 0-1 in bowls. Texas Tech's Spike Dykes is 52-48-1 (10th year) overall, 35-27-1 in SWC affairs, 6-2 against the Horned Frogs, and 1-3 in bowls.

TCU still misses suspended RB Andre Davis in its multiple offense, and the Raiders have one of the nation's top overall defensive units (as high as 28th in Division I-A). Key individuals: Frogs: DE Chris Piland (six sacks, 22 QB pressures) is a SWC pass-rushing mainstay while FB Koi Woods (14 catches, 91 yards) is a talented blocker-receiver. Red Raiders: LB Zach Thomas (100 tackles, 13 TFL, three fumbles caused) is living up to his 1994 AFCA All-America credentials. RB Byron Hanspard (1,127 all-purpose yards, 840 net rushing yards) gives muscle to an improving offense.

BAYLOR (5-3, 3-1 SWC) at SMU (1-8, 0-5 SWC), 1 p.m.

The church-affiliated universities have met almost continuously since 1916 except when Baylor took the 1943 and 44 seasons off because of World War II manpower shortages and travel. The Mustangs end this portion of the I-35 battle with no worse than a four-game edge in conference contests. SMU leads the SWC rivalry between the duo 36-31-6 since their 1918 circuit opener, a 14-0 victory by the Mustangs in Dallas. BU has owned recent meetings with six consecutive triumphs since 1989. SMU's most recent victory was a 27-21 squeaker in 1986 at Floyd Casey Stadium.

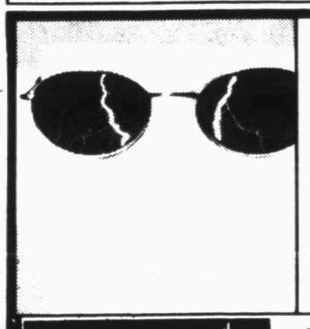

Baylor has used sheer physical power to dominate the Mustangs six consecutive times while SMU knows the importance of getting ahead early against a fast-striking squad like the Bears. Key individuals: BU's Jerod Douglas not only tops the team in rushing (149 carries, 734 yards) but he's also the NCAA kickoff return leader with 10 runbacks for 33.5 yards per try. Massive DE Daryl Gardener has been a big factor in Baylor's defensive steadiness. SMU's Cornell Parker (nine career interceptions) has been invaluable to the team with 62 stops, three pifers, and five pass deflections in '95. RB Donte Womack (171 carries, 665 yards) had back-to-back 100-yard rushing games against Texas and Texas A&M.

TEXAS (6-1-1, 3-0 SWC) at HOUSTON (1-7, 1-3 SWC), 7 p.m.

This series has had its historic moments. Before UH joined the SWC, the Cougars tied Texas 20-20 in Austin in 1968 prior a 31-22 Texas Tech win over the new-Wishbone-running 'Horns and a SWC-record 30-game winning streak at UT. In 1990 the squads squared off in the most recent meeting of any two SWC teams ranked that highly nationally (UH was third, Texas 14th) in a 45-24 victory by the Longhorns on ESPN. Texas holds a 12-7-2 advantage over the Cougars in this relatively-young (since 1953) rivalry, played annually since 1976. Houston tallied its first series win 30-0 over Texas in 1976 as the Cougars claimed the SWC crown.

This might be one of the SWC's most air-filled clashes as the conference winds toward an exciting conclusion. Texas averages 16-of-31 tosses for 247 passing yards per game while the Cougars put in airward 22-of-40 times on the average for 235 passing yards each outing. The Longhorns also lead the loop in total offense with 441.9 yards a contest.

Key individuals: Longhorns: WR Mike Adams continues to excel in several areas: 40 catches for 685 yards to lead the SWC and 10 punt returns for 121 yards. Safety Chris Carter (72 tackles, seven PBU) is one of the circuit's top secondary athletes. Houston's MLB Mike Parker (77 stops, five TFL) has 176 career tackles in just 19 contests. RB Antowain Smith (101 carries, 434 yards rushing) has been brilliant at times despite ailments. Incidentally: This is the next-to-last SWC game ever to be played in the Astrodome. Houston made its SWC debut there in 1976 by downing Texas A&M 21-10. UH is 110-49-3 at the Dome since 1965.

An extraordinary encounter with another human being.

MHS: Bobcats avenge last year's loss snap from center no less than six times, losing three. The lone MHS highlight of the night was Craig Noland's 62-yard touchdown pass from junior quarterback Russell Dunlavy, but it was worthy of a highlight film. Noland caught the ball with one hand with a Bobcats draped over his other arm at the San Angelo 40-yard line and then broke free for the long-distance score.

(From 1C)

But when the catch came, the Bulldogs were already down 21-0 in the first quarter.

MHS fullback Sam Powell, who had the Bulldogs' first 100-yard game last week with 173 yards, was held to 39 yards by the Bobcats, and that was still the top rushing performance for the Purple Pack.

San Angelo led 37-7 at the half and finished its scoring by the end of the third period.

This was not the way the Bulldogs wanted to end the season; but the Bobcats will take it. Evidently, San Angelo had a long memory in what was a forgettable night for MHS.

Waltrip wins pole for season-ending NAPA 500

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — There was a time when winning poles was just about second nature for Darrell Waltrip.

But when the 48-year-old Waltrip won the pole on Friday at Atlanta Motor Speedway for Sunday's season-ending NAPA 500 NASCAR Winston Cup race, it was hard for him not to over-react.

"I guess to a lot of people who've won a lot of poles lately, they're saying it's just a pole. But a pole means a lot to us," said Waltrip, who had not been the fastest qualifier for a race since April 26, 1992, a span of 113 races.

"This is exciting," the three-time series champion said. "We just need some good luck. This is a good team, they just need to find out they can have this kind of success.

"We've had a tough year, but I just felt, as an owner, not as a driver, if anything good happened to this team, it could excel. We really needed this, or it was going to be a long, cold winter without something to brag about.

"I knew we had a good, fast car and it was really up to the driver not to mess up," Waltrip added. "I guess I felt a little pressure. I'm used to pressure, but I hadn't had that much lately. ... When you haven't been on the pole for a while and things haven't gone as well as you would have liked for them to, you're always a little apprehensive."

"Ol' D.W.," as Waltrip often refers to himself, turned a lap of 185.046 mph on the 1.522-mile oval to earn the 59th pole of his career. He is the 15th pole winner of the season, qualifying him for the Busch Clash race in February during Daytona's Speed Weeks.

Meanwhile, Jeff Gordon went about the business of trying to wrap up his first Winston Cup championship in a businesslike manner, qualifying eighth at 184.138.

Dale Earnhardt, whose only hope of winning his third straight series title rests with the unlikely combination of Gordon finishing last on Sunday while Earnhardt wins the race and leads the most laps, stayed close, qualifying 11th at 183.724.

Now that he has another pole, Waltrip would dearly love to end the string of 99 straight races — dating to Sept. 9, 1992 at Darlington, S.C. — without a win.

Waltrip, who faces surgery on Wednesday to fix some cartilage damage in his left knee from a crash earlier this season, as well as to remove a steel plate and 18 screws from an operation on his left leg after a bad crash in 1988, said, "We've had a tough year. My leg's been hurting and I've had broken ribs, fractured ribs, bruised ribs. I've been hurting a little bit. This really makes it all seem worthwhile."

FOR THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 13, 1995

The E-Class Mercedes: adding to the excitement

Pedestrians in the German hamlet of Marbach, located near Stuttgart on the Lauter River which winds through Swabian hills, surrounded the handsome new sedan as it parked at the curb. Cameras emerged from pockets, people posed in front of that distinctive grille offset by bold oval head lamps, and photos were snapped, one after the next.

Obviously, those Germans recognize a dramatic new automotive design when they see one.

The fact that this mid-size sedan also wore the familiar tri-star mark of Mercedes-Benz — attributed around the world as a symbol of German automotive expertise — made the new design even more meaningful because a Mercedes on the streets of Germany seems as common a sight there as does a Ford or Chevy on roads in the United States.

And it has been a long time — ten years, in fact -since the last significant facial changes came to the staple sedan in the Mercedes fleet.

Now labeled as E-Class with three digits attached to signify engine size as expressed in liters, the Mercedes models of 1996 measure to mid-size standards and represent the work of 38 months worth of design and production, with noteworthy improvements not only invested in overt styling but new engineering and safety systems too, plus more interior space and perks for comfort and convenience.

The E320, first E-Class car to reach the American market, packs a 6-cylinder gasoline-powered engine and new mechanical features which make it more agile and athletic to drive. This staple will be followed by the E300, a diesel powered variation, and — with 1997 label — another spin-off with 275 hp V8 engine that will be called the E420.

For an advanced peek at these cars, I spent several days last June driving more than 500 miles in pre-production prototypes over a meandering course that led from the Stuttgart headquarters of Mercedes-Benz to the Danube River in southern Germany, up Austrian Alps and over Bavarian foothills to Munich.

These experiences steering the new E-Class sedans on fast-paced German autobahns, rural back roads, city streets and narrow lanes winding through alpine villages could be summarized by an opinion that with this new design Mercedes has created a new standard for performance and luxury in the mid-size class of imports.

The E-Class Mercedes...

217hp from a silicon-aluminum alloy engine wrapped in a sleek, dynamic package.

The E320, seeming strong yet sedate, acts aggressive.

It's bigger than its predecessor in wheelbase and track, as well as overall length, width and height. Inside, the expansion creates more space for riders, particularly in the rear seat where legroom improves by 2.6 inches.

It's a safer car now too, thanks to structural changes such as longer crumple zones, reinforcements in the rigid safety cell surrounding the passenger compartment, longer conical side rails and one-piece side panels which increase crumple space to offset side impact, plus the addition of front seat side air bags as well as the two frontal air bags.

Anti-lock brakes and a traction control device show up on the long list of standard features.

European cars emphasize active safety features -mechanical equipment which works quickly and precisely so an alert driver may take actions to possibly avoid an accident through skillful maneuvering of the vehicle.

For the E320, adding exacting new hardware like rack and pinion steering and a new front suspension with double wishbone arrangement end up making E320 more lively and active when navigating through road curves and hazards.

As for power, there's more than enough now, even for a weighty sedan.

The E320 gasoline-powered engine, an in-line-6 composed of a silicon-aluminum alloy, stocks dual overhead cam, four valves in each cylinder, and a Bosch Motronic engine management system.

It delivers up to 217 hp, plus assertive acceleration.

The E300 carries a direct-injection diesel in-line-6, the same as appeared in the previous model. This engine -popular in Europe where gasoline sells for at least a dollar more per gallon than diesel fuel — musters 134 hp.

Both the E320 and E300 employ a 4-speed automatic transmission which uses both hydraulic and electronic controls and provides a wide ratio of gear ranges.

Inside the sedan, firm but enormously comfortable front bucket seats stand between a center console. Rich leather covers seats on E320, while cloth fabric appears in the E300 where leather lists as an option.

Despite all of the luxury and performance features, that distinctive new exterior styling of the E Class is what turned so many German heads and created animated gestures.

Focal point becomes the dazzling twin-headlamp face.

In the words of Bruno Sacco, who heads the Mercedes design team, "The E-Class contains striking innovative features and at the same time preserves a healthy balance between tradition and modernity." It's exciting but safe.

The strategy goes like this: Those who appreciate that refined less-is-more image of previous Mercedes E-Class models will not be turned off by the new design, yet enough appears innovatively different so new potential buyers may be lured by these sleek new shapes and forms.

Examine the price chart when compared to all luxury import competitors, and these new E-Classers sell themselves. The E320 remains a buy at $43,500, with E300 tucking down to $39,900 and E420 stunning at $49,900.

Comfortable, innovative, sleek and powerful are just a few of the adjectives that can be used to describe Mercedes' new line of E-Class sedans. Equipped with advanced alloy engines, new suspension and steering systems and a redesigned look they are sure to turn heads and excite drivers.

AUTO ALBUM (CLIP AND SAVE) BY TAD BURNESS

10-95

As a rule, Auto Album subjects are old cars or trucks that were factory produced. Many of them are models that are well-known or remembered, and others are obscure. And, occasionally, we show you a one-of-a-kind "dream car" — or an "oddball" vehicle of experimental nature, such as the glass box 1968 Quasar, or the "plastic polliwog" Fascination previously seen in the series.

Today's featured car qualifies as an "oddball" in every sense of the word: It's odd, and truly ball shaped!

It was built in France by a "Parisian press agent," according to a picture article in a back issue of Life magazine.

Among its special features was the Automodule's globular shape, its four small outboard wheels (meeting the ground in a "diamond" pattern like the 1945 Gordon Diamond shown some time ago), and the Automodule's ability to "pirouette" on those "casterlike wheels."

Engine type and horsepower remain a mystery in this case. But because its top speed was about 25, it would appear that the Automodule was propelled by an electric motor.

Hopefully, this strange vehicle has not been dismantled or destroyed. If no longer in the builder's possession, perhaps it is being preserved in some collection or museum—for future generations to stare at.

I would appreciate hearing from anyone who may have further documented information on this amazing vehicle, and/or its whereabouts!

'96 Pontiac Bonneville

The Pontiac Bonneville SE has been completely redesigned and now sports European flair and European handling. The stiffer suspension now gives a much better feeling of control through turns.

For big-time fun, drive a 1996 Pontiac Bonneville SE. It's a full-size sporty sedan that is as quick and nimble as a little sports car.

Not only does the '96 model have attractive styling refinements, it has improved safety features, more power, and better handling. Value is another asset; compared to its competition, the $26,566 total price will lure buyers who analyze what they get for their money.

I drove the SE model loaded with a $3,000 sports luxury edition package. This package includes leather bucket seats and leather-wrapped steering wheel. Other features: floor console, rear deck-lid spoiler, power antenna, and sharp-looking 16-inch five spoke polished aluminum wheels.

The safety features include dual air-bags, anti-lock braking system, automatic brake/transmission shift interlock, rear door child safety locks and rear-seat child shoulder harness, daytime running lights, plus the PASSKey II theft deterrent system.

As I made mental comparisons with cars in the ultra-luxury category, I found most of the features expected on the big-ticket cars were included on this Bonneville. For example, electronic automatic air conditioning, remote keyless entry with verification, six-way power seats, variable effort power steering, a powerful AM/FM stereo with compact disc including an anti-theft device, valet lockout, perimeter lighting, battery run-down protection, and electronic road leveling. The luxury-item lists goes on, but what really convinced me that Pontiac thought of everything: illuminated vanity mirrors on both sun visors. It's amazing how many expensive automobile manufacturers think that only the passenger is interested in an appearance-check.

Speaking of appearance, Pontiac did a complete face-lift on the Bonneville. It changed the headlamps, taillamps, front and rear fascia, front fenders, molding, deck-lid and deck-lid spoiler. The new look now has a European flavor — and so does the handling.

This car has stiffer suspension resulting in less corner roll. The engineers revised the damping action of the struts so the car has better touch with the road. I was able to push this car hard though turns and feel in complete control.

The powerful engine makes it enjoyable to push the big Bonneville with the same zest as a small sports car. All I had to do was touch the accelerator pedal and Bonnie gave immediate response.

The car I drove had the V-6 3800 Series engine. It produces 205 horsepower, and 230 foot-pounds of torque at 4,000 rpm' s. The torque seems to be readily available even when driving in the normal 1,500 to 2,000 rpm' s. The engine is quick to oblige the driver' s demands. For those who want extreme power, a supercharged engine is available. It produces 240 horsepower and a whooping 280 foot-pounds of torque.

Bonneville's power is linked to a smooth transverse-mounted four-speed automatic transmission that features a cobra-head shifter knob.

The interior space of this full-size automobile is more than adequate even for those with full-size body proportions. But what is really big is the trunk. I was astonished when I saw its depth. In addition, the rear seat backrest can be opened for extra long cargo.

This year's Bonneville is big in just about every area of concern — except for one. It's price is comparitively small.

ASK THE AUTO DOCTOR...

By Junior Damato

Dear Doctor: I had a pair of new wiper blades installed about six months ago. It has been a dry summer and this past week it rained. I used the wipers and was disappointed that they did not clean the windshield very well. I went back to the service station and told my mechanic the wipers did not wipe the windshield properly. He told me that windshield wipers last on average only six months, even if they are not used. He said that since I was a good customer he would give me a new set at no charge. I now do not know if I trust him anymore. I see windshield wipers on TV guaranteed for life. Please advise? Jean R.

Dear Jean: Your mechanic is right and is telling you the truth. The windshield wipers are sitting on the bottom of the windshield day in and day out. They are exposed to the sun, heat and contamination in the air. I have never had any positive feedback on the so called lifetime wipers that you see on TV, nor would I recommended them. Buy a good brand such as Bosch, Anco, or Trico. These are the only brands I recommend and use. To extend wiper life, lift the wiper blade off the windshield and wipe both the windshield and wiper blade with windshield washer solvent every few weeks. You can also swap wiper blades from side to side. Never use the wipers on a dry windshield.
