Babe Ruth Bombards St. Louis Fences And Ends Series, 7-3

BAMBINO HITS THREE HOMERS IN FINAL GAME

Yankees Make It Four in Row Off St. Louis Cardinals

TOPPLE ALL RECORDS

First Six Innings Pass as Fair Exhibition—Then Wham!

By FRANK GETTY

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 9 (UP)—The New York Yanks smashed their way through to their fourth straight victory over the St. Louis Cards and another world's championship today.

Yank lightning struck late, but with deadly effect, dashing the hopes of the 37,331 fans who had been cheering themselves hoarse over an early lead piled up by the National league champions.

Five home runs, three of which were hammered out by the irrepressible Babe Ruth, who was a whole ball team in himself today, swept aside the last vestige of Card defense and carried the Yanks to the peak of the baseball world as they won the fourth game of the 1928 world series, 7 to 3.

For six innings this afternoon, another of those bright and sunny, but sad days for St. Louis, it seemed as though the Cards would wrest at least one ball game of this amazing series from the American leaguers.

Then Came A Break

Then came one of those breaks of the game which furnishes the national pastime with its thrills and heart throbs. With the Cards hugging a 2 to 1 lead, Willie Sherdel, last hope of St. Louis, thought he had struck out Babe Ruth in the seventh. He had fooled the Bambino with two slow floaters and tried to slip over a fast third strike before Ruth was set. The umpires refused to allow it and after a furious argument in which everyone but the bat boys joined, Sherdel returned to the box and threw away the ball game.

"Smash!" The Babe hit a homer over into the garage across the street from the right field exit.

"Crash!" Lou Gehrig followed with another in the same place.

Spirits Sink

An early St. Louis lead vanished and St. Louis spirits sank as the Yank scoring machine went crashing on its way.

Sherdel was taken from the box after Bob Meusel had singled, and once more at the climax of a world series, the familiar, slouching figure of old Grover Cleveland Alexander sauntered from the bull pen to the box. But it was much, much too late. Alex had nothing but a glove, a big cud of tobacco and an unhappy smile at having his afternoon's repose disturbed. Yank bats kept up their insistent, triumphant clatter without a break to signify the arrival on the scene of the old master.

Two more runs came in before Alex got the side out, and in the next inning, Cedric Durst and Babe Ruth hit additional home runs to swell the New York total and turn what had promised to be a dramatic struggle into just another farce.

Equals Record

As Ruth had hit a homer in the fourth inning as well, the Babe equalled his own world's record of

JUST CRAZY

Judge Wants Sanity Report On 'Collegiate' Auto Craze

DETROIT, Oct. 9. (AP)—Recorder's Court Judge W. McKay Skillman has asked a sanity commission report on the prevalent fad among "flaming youths" of decorating second-hand flivvers with gaudy paint, signs of doubtful sentiment and odds and ends of bric-a-brac.

The action followed arraignment today of Joseph Wisemont, 19, charged with speeding in a car so ornamented as to cause the arresting officer to describe it as "collegiate."

Judge Skillman asked the driver what prompted such decorating. Wisemont after hesitating, said he guessed it was "just to be crazy."

"Oh," Judge Skillman murmured, "just to be crazy."

NOTED ALIMONY MARTYR FREED

Four-Year Imprisonment Comes to End

WILLOWS, Calif., Oct. 9. (AP)—Samuel W. Reid, widely known as California's "alimony martyr," was released from the Glenn county jail today after serving nearly four years for contempt of court and refusal to comply with an order to pay $20 a month to support his child.

The court order was issued when Mrs. Reid obtained a divorce and the child was placed in her custody. Later Mrs. Reid remarried. Reid said at the time he would gladly pay $20 a month and more for his child's support if it were placed in what he considered proper hands. He objected to it being cared for by his wife's relatives. He announced he would "rot in jail" before he would pay while the child was reared by persons objectionable to him.

For a long time Reid let his beard grow and once was examined for his sanity. He was found sane. Recently he figured in the news when he was escorted to San Francisco to attend a reunion of the 363rd regiment, to which he belonged. He was accompanied by Sheriff Roy Heard. Today Heard was found guilty of contempt of court and fined $250.

The 363rd Infantry association paid Reid's back alimony and intimated it would pay the fine.

No details were announced except that Reid had complied with the court order and purged himself of contempt.

TURNS GUN ON SELF

Austin Police Chief Falls Before Deadly Fire Of Black's Weapon

AUSTIN, Oct. 9 (AP).—A 27-year-old negro, Armand Alexander, formerly a trusted porter in the state land office building, ran amuck here today after a family row and left four victims dead before killing himself while state, county and city peace officers stormed a dwelling where he took refuge.

One of his victims was Police Chief J. N. Littpepage, 67, of Austin, who was called to quell the rampage.

The other dead are:
Joe Blunn, 56, carpenter.
Mrs. D. Pyburn, 45, negro.
Ethel Pyburn, 24, negro.

Fired at Others

Alexander fired at others, including Mrs. Ernest Arnold, who fled with her month old daughter in her arms while the negro took possession of her home.

Later it was riddled with bullets of officers whom Alexander cursed roundly, retreating to the bathroom, where he locked himself in. Ranger Captain Frank Hamer kicked in the rear door of the house and city detectives went in the front. They heard a shot, they said. Alexander was found dead on the bathroom floor. He had shot himself with Chief Littlepage's pistol.

In a fit of rage after he had ejected his wife from their automobile, Alexander called the Pyburn women from their home and shot them. Proceeding to the home of Tom Shelby, negro, presumably after some belongings Alexander shot Blunn, who was working on the house.

Shot at Woman

"Guess I might as well kill you too," Alexander said to Shelby's wife. He fired, she screamed and fell flat but unharmed.

Chief Littlepage arrived and was pursuing Alexander when the negro whirled and shot the chief in the stomach with a shot gun. The negro fired twice more.

Alexander's wife, Lula, who has been on a farm near Austin with him picking cotton, said he became incensed at her when she told him of meeting his brother Saturday night. Alexander put her and three small sons in their car and started out a narrow road threatening to kill her, give the children to some of his relatives, and "go west." She struggled to get out of the car and he shoved her out, she said.

D. Pyburn, 56, negro merchant, was in his store next door to his home when his wife and daughter were called out and shot. Alexander then abandoned his car and children and went to Shelby's home.

Littlepage, who had been with the Austin police department 14 years in various capacities and had been chief since 1924, died 30 minutes after he was taken to a hospital.

KENLEY ASKS GRAND JURY JAIL PROBE

Alleged Ill Treatment Of Prisoners Basis Of Inquiry

NEGRO COMPLAINS

Black Claims Beating At Hands of Officers After Arrest

Investigation of alleged ill treatment of prisoners in jails in Wichita county will be requested of the grand jury Wednesday morning, it was announced Monday by Dick Kenley, district attorney.

Kenley said decision to request the inquiry was reached Monday on a complaint of Aaron Ebsen, negro, who declared he received a beating at the hands of officers when he was jailed recently by the city on a minor charge. He declared, the investigation will cover more than one jail and that several witnesses will be called before the jurors probably Wednesday.

Traffic Arrests

The grand jury reconvened Tuesday morning after a recess since last Thursday and began delving into a number of matters submitted by the district attorney's office, among them being precinct traffic arrests. A number of witnesses had volunteered to appear before the inquisitors and several were called by the jurors during the day, Kenley said.

The precinct arrest investigation was precipitated with the fining last week of John A. Hale, a tourist, on a charge of operating a truck without a tail light. Hale is not in Wichita Falls to testify before the jurors, but it is understood several persons who witnessed the arrest and who contributed to the feeding of members of Hale's party sent their names to the grand jury and volunteered testimony.

Cattle Thefts

While no definite statement could be obtained Tuesday night it was rumored about the courthouse that the grand jury also is looking into several alleged thefts of cattle in Wichita county.

CATTLE THEFT CASE

It has been a long time since a Wichita county grand jury has been asked to investigate cattle thefts, but the inquisitors will have such a case presented Wednesday morning, Dick Kenley, district attorney, announced Tuesday night following the arrest of a Wichitan charged with stealing a cow.

W. H. Harwell, who made the complaint, alleged he loaned the cow to a man to pasture, the man to receive the cow's milk in payment for pasturage. A relative of the man, Harwell charges, took the cow and sold her to a packing house.

A few hours after the complaint was filed with Kenley, Charles Gant and George Garrett, deputy sheriffs, made the arrest and the prisoner later was released on $1000 bond to await action of the grand jury.

Sheriff W. G. Bradley said Tuesday night the arrest was the first the department has made on cattle theft charges since he took office.

Southwest's Military Stronghold Again Echoes Tread of March Steps

SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 9. (AP)—The measured tread of marching feet, familiar in wartime days, re-echoed through the streets of San Antonio today as 10,000 former service men and members of the American Legion auxiliary passed in review before countless spectators who greeted each state's delegation with spirited bursts of cheering as they passed.

Beginning shortly before noon, the line of marchers, a blend of miiti-colored uniforms, required more than four hours to pass the historic Alamo building, near which National Commander Edward E. Spafford, Gen. John J. Pershing, Viscount Allenby, Gov. Dan Moody of Texas and other dignitaries watched the one-time doughboys stride by.

Though the khaki-colored uniforms of soldiers from nearby military posts reawakened memories of the days when America shouldered arms in behalf of the allied cause, legionnaires who marched today

TESTIMONY IN TRAIN CRASH DEATH ENDS

Brother of Defendant Gives Story of Fight With Bruce Collier

FIST BLOWS STRUCK

Body Had Two Bleeding Wounds, Undertaker Tells Jury

By TED THOMPSON
Staff Correspondent

MEMPHIS, Texas, Oct. 9.—Questioning of Emmitt Miller, brother of Clyde Miller, charged by indictment with the murder of Bruce Collier at Newlin, 11 miles southeast of here, last Christmas eve, closed introduction of testimony in the case before a jury in district court here today.

Emmitt Miller, owner of the restaurant in front of which the state alleged Collier was fatally attacked, testified that both he and his brother had encounters with Collier on the night of the latter's death.

Collier's body was found several hours later in the wreckage of his car, which had been struck by a train at a nearby crossing. The state maintains that Collier was first slain, and his body left in his car on the railroad tracks.

Arguments Today

With completion of testimony late Tuesday, Judge A. J. Fires announced that the charge to the jury would be read at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, after which arguments in the case would begin.

Questioned by James C. Mahan, district attorney, and David Fitzgerald, defense attorney, Emmitt Miller admitted he had come to blows with Collier before his brother became involved in the melee. He said that Collier came into the restaurant acting like a drunk man and swearing, and that they soon came to blows. He said he hit Collier with his fist. Later, he said, his brother was struck by Collier, and the former fought back also striking Collier with his fist. He denied that Clyde Miller had struck Collier with a bottle.

Elmer Slay and Grady Capel, also of Newlin, testified they assisted Collier to his car and drove off with him after the fight at the restaurant in which, they said he was hit over the head with a bottle. While driving with the victim, they said, they looked at him and thought he was dead. Becoming frightened, they left him in the car parked about a mile north of the depot. As they were driving off, they said, they saw another car approach Collier's automobile and saw two men get into it and drive south. Collier's car was hit by the train just south of the depot.

Miller further testified that about midnight he heard a train whistle a distress signal, and went to the railroad crossing, where he saw Collier's body in the wreckage of car.

Neither Clyde Miller nor Jim

CITY ENLARGES POLICE COURT

Work Starts Tuesday On New Quarters

Preliminary work toward extensive improvements to be made in the Wichita Falls police station was started Tuesday by J. R. Walkup, contractor, who was successful bidder for the remodeling of the corporation courtroom. The award was made Monday by Bill Ward, city purchasing agent, on Walkup's bid of approximately $250.

Under plans announced by Mr. Ward Tuesday, the garage north of the police station will be utilized as a passageway for police cars.

Many Changes

A door will be opened from the garage into the municipal courtroom and prisoners brought in city cars will be taken directly to the sergeant's desk. This plan, Mr. Ward said, will do away with unloading of prisoners on Ohio street, and the cars will be allowed entrance into the city hall building from the front and rear.

The remodeling of the courtroom includes the removal of the back partition to allow addition of about 50 new seats. The floor of the

Norris Attacks Smith and Local Newspapers, and Takes Collection

"We don't want the lower end of the East Side of New York to take charge of the government of the United States," shouted J. Frank Norris, pastor of the First Baptist church of Fort Worth, at a rally of anti-Smith Democrats and others at the Memorial auditorium Tuesday night.

Approximately 3000 persons heard the address of Rev. Mr. Norris. The speaker appeared here as an "independent," both the anti-Smith Democratic and the Republican headquarters saying that the speech was not delivered under their auspices.

After a straw vote of the audience found only eight persons who declared their allegiance to Smith, Rev. Mr. Norris took up a collection from the crowd. Twenty men "passed the hat" with a right sizable shower of Wichita Falls dollars resulting.

The speaker characterized Smith as the "entire platform of the Democratic party," and declared that Smith "voted 47 times straight in the New York assembly for the open saloon when the liquor question came up."

Much of the address was devoted to refuting the speech delivered recently by Senator Morris Sheppard, veteran prohibitionist leader.

Pilot of Zeppelin Points Out Two 'Weather Holes' but Keeps His Secret

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Oct. 9. (AP)—An exceptionally unfavorable weather forecast today caused postponement of the start of the transatlantic voyage of the Graf Zeppelin, which had been set tentatively for tomorrow morning. Dr. Hugo Eckener, who is to pilot the big dirigible said, however, that he might be alble to get away tomorrow afternoon.

A steadily falling barometer, coupled with a noticeable rise in temperature, made conditions which Dr. Eckener said it would be insane to try to overcome.

"There is a dirty weather hole right here which we would have difficulty in getting out of," he explained, pointing to the Friedrichshafen section of the map. "And we would have a still more difficult time getting out of another dirty hole on the course, which I have constantly in mind."

When asked where this "other dirty hole" was located, he responded:

"Ah, that is my secret," thus adhering to the policy of not discussing the route which he expects to take toward America.

STATE FAIR AT DALLAS BEST

Record Crowds Throng to Senior Exposition

DALLAS, Oct. 9. (UP)—The annual state fair of Texas which opened its gates Saturday, Oct. 6, is regarded by all who have attended thus far, to have the most complete line of exhibits, amusement features and entertainment program in all its 42 years of history.

Record crowds continue to throng the grandstand, where the horse races and hipprodrome amusements take place, the exhibit buildings and the livestock and poultry arenas.

Never before in the history of the fair association have the merchants, agriculturists, livestock growers and regional chambers of commerce united in so great an effort to make this the greatest fair all time.

The livestock arenas are filled with the finest of blue-blooded livestock, beef and dairy cattle, hogs, sheep, goats and poultry, which are quartered in large spacious quarters with the best of conveniences for the exhibitors. In the building designated to house the agricultural exhibits, one finds farm crop displays of par excellence. The exhibits are typical of Texas' immense agricultural wealth and the displays include products from every section of the state.

Big Dairy Show

In a class by itself is the Southwestern Dairy show, which is considered by the exhibitors to be the most important dairy exhibit in this section of the country. Conceded to be Texas' fastest growing industry, the displays include dairy products from all over the state.

Heading the list of entertainment features is the musical comedy-drama, "The Desert Song," which is playing to a capacity audience every night in the auditorium. Matinees are scheduled for Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday afternoons. "The Desert Song" has a record of a long list of successful performances and is rated as one of the premier musical attractions of the current season.

More than 200 horses have been shipped in to take part in the 13-day racing program of horse racing. In line with the racing feature is the annual horse show which is to be staged on two successive Sunday afternoons, Oct. 14 and 21. The other grandstand features which are shown every night include hippodrome acts of bareback riders, acrobatic trained elephants, band music and fireworks.

Fine Auto Show

Automobile dealers over the Southwest have joined hands in making their part of the displays on a par with the rest of the exhibits. The automobile show is a veritable paradise of the latest models of all makes of cars.

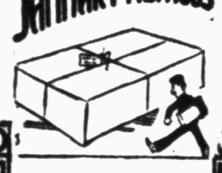

In other exhibit buildings, one finds an unlimited assortment of pottery, weaving, sewing, cutlery and food exhibits. Thousands of dollars in prizes are to be given the winners. The competition promises to be keen, the exhibits for the most part having won first and second prizes at the county and district fairs which have been held over the state the past month.

Not the least among the entertainment features is the program of football games which are scheduled for each Saturday in the fair stadium. The opening game was played last Saturday between Texas A. & M. and Sewanee. Next Saturday is the annual clash between Texas university and Vanderbilt, which will be followed seven days later with the Rice-S. M. U. game.

DAD BROWNING IN NEW STUNT

He Seeks Business Girl Who Has 'It'

By SAM LOVE

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. (UP)—Jack Dempsey, old Pop Alexander, Bill Tilden, Walter Hagen—the great champions—all must face, sooner or later, the cynical sneer of father time.

That moment came for Edward West (Daddy) Browning, champion Cindrella man last night.

The sad occurrence took place in front of the Ambassador theater after it was announced the big hearted daddy would give away 100 seats for an opening performance to the first 100 girls possessing what he had defined as "business it."

"Business it," he explained, "is what keeps a stenographer her job when she cannot spell such words as 'received.'"

26 Girls in Line

Only 26 blondes and brunettes were in line when the great spoofer was scheduled to appear. By dint of delaying the proceedings, "Daddy" finally was able to give away perhaps 50 seats.

But was Browning discouraged? He was not. Earlier in the day he had made the front pages with a modest little offer to give New York City a set of Roman baths costing $1,000,000, provided only that the city would turn over the Central park reservoir for a site. And so he arrived at the theater in fine fettle.

Vivian Matlow, 18, a blonde from the Bronx, had been first in line, accompanied by her two friends, Sylvia Langfan and Marion Mayon, also from the Bronx. Vivian has been working in a doctor's office, although she is really a model, she said. Behind her stretched the other 25 faithful hopers for some miraculous publicity such as was received by Mary Louise Spas, whom Browning once adopted, and Frances "Peaches" Heenan, whom Browning once married.

He Might Fall

Perhaps Browning would pick any one of them as having "business it," perhaps he might even fall madly in love with one of them. Who could tell?

The setting was perfect. Across the street was the hotel at which the most recent "Cinderella Girl," Peaches, resides when she is not exhibiting her curves and attainments in vaudeville.

Browning's Rolls-Royce suddenly drew up at the curb with a polite flourish. A bald but cosmeticked poll was thrust from the rear door. It was Browning. The number of girls was disappointing, and undoubtedly they did not every one possess "business it," or any other kind of "it," but—

"It's really Daddy," they gasped. "Hello, Daddy! Don't I look like Peaches?"

The chauffeur switched on a shaded pink light above the eccentric's head. It revealed him, corseted, smiling and happy despite the disappointing attendance. At his feet were hundreds of American beauty roses, which he distributed to the young women.

"I love to make people happy," said Browning, while a particularly forward brunette, who said she had been in "The Revelation" as a double for Viola Dana, clung to his arm and blinked at him.

Laundry Experts To Visit Homes

Since the dark ages wash day has been a day of ceaseless toil for the housewife. But now in Wichita Falls this age-old burden is to be lifted and, for women of the city, wash day is going to be just like any other day as far as housekeeping burdens are concerned.

A specially trained group of men—experts in home laundry problems—will call at every home in Wichita Falls and tell local women about a new, modern way to do the family wash that makes clothes wonderfully white and clean without the old-fashioned drudgery of scrubbing and boiling.

This canvass is being conducted by the makers of Lux who have developed a new "no-work" laundry soap called Rinso.

Statewide System of Sheep Branding Needed

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Oct. 9. (AP)—Belief that some state wide system for branding sheep must be reached is gaining strength in the ranch country as instances arise where two ranchmen in the same county have the identical brand for their animals.

There are several methods of branding sheep. The wool brand is placed after shearing by dipping a branding iron in a bucket of paint and placing it on the body. There is a practice, gaining rapidly, of fire branding, usually on the jaw, but sometimes on the side. Others perforate the ear with a brand. All use what is known as marks, made by cutting the ears of the sheep while they are lambs.

A good deal of fire branding is done each year after the middle of November when the fly time is over, and the danger of worms has passed.

Dilley Lets Contract For $65,000 School

DILLEY, Texas, Oct. 9. (AP)—Contract has been let for construction of a $65,000 high school building here to be completed in time for the second term of the school year.

The structure, of one-story design will have an auditorium with 750 seating capacity.

DILLEY, Texas, Oct. 9. (AP)—The city council recently awarded a contract for the installation of a sewer system here after bonds totaling $35,000 had been voted for the project.

Jury Clears Minister Who Waves Bible at Start of Non-Support Trial

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 9 (UP) Waving a Bible in front of the jurors and declaring, "I'll fight this case in the name of God," Carl Wamsher, 41, ordained minister of the Pentecostal faith, won his case in Wyandotte county district court here. Wamsher was being tried on a charge of non-support of his family. At the outset the court offered him legal aid. He declined it. Four women served on the jury.

Wamsher's wife, Francis, appeared against her husband, testifying that she with four children, the oldest 17 and the youngest 6, were not receiving a husband's and a father's support. She stated that the home was at 825 South Ninth street, Kansas City, Kan. Wamsher's freedom was short-lived, however, as he was re-arrested on a new non-support charge and taken to police headquarters to arrange a new bond. The penalty under Kansas law for non-support carries two years in the penitentiary.

Town Does Without Water; Bonds Planned

JASPER, Texas, Oct. 9. (AP)—Urgent need of a municipal water system was seen here recently when the plant which supplies the town broke and drinking water was not available for some time.

A year ago Jasper voted a bond issue of $110,000 to install improved water works. On the eve of selling the bonds, an oil company started suit for dissolution of the city's charter. The case was tried in district court and has since been pending in the court of civil appeals.

Mayor A. L. Black is fearful of the safety of the town should a large fire break out.

Medina Fair Association Applies for Charter

HONDO, Texas, Oct. 9. (AP)—The Medina Country Fair association, recently organized here, has applied for a charter with a non-profit sharing capital stock of $10,000, of which $8,000 already has been paid in.

A 100-acre tract of land near Hondo has been acquired and contracts for an exhibition hall and grandstand, to cost $7,700 have been let.

The fair will be held from Nov. 12-24, Felix Batol, president of the fair association, said.

CHURCH ISSUE CUTS ARIZONA

Both Candidates Are Handicapped in State

Editor's Note: Raymond Clapper of the United Press Washington staff is touring the country to report the presidential campaign from an unbiased point of view.

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 9. (UP)—Religion is an important factor in the contest over Arizona's three electoral votes in spite of the fact that this state has been represented throughout statehood by a Roman Catholic, United States Senator, Henry F. Ashurst, who is now gunning for his fourth term on the same ticket with Governor Smith.

The religious question never has been raised against Ashurst and is not being used against him now but at the same time it is one of the most serious handicaps Smith has here, both sides agree. Voters in Arizona seem to have given the matter no thought in connection with the senatorship but newsstands of Phoenix display pamphlets, some attacking, some defending Smith on religious grounds

Dry League in Clear

However, this is one state in which the Anti-Saloon league is entirely free from accusations of being influenced by bigotry for it is supporting Ashurst, Roman Catholic Democrat, against the Republican Protestant ex-senator, Ralph Cameron, for senator.

R. E. Farley, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league for Arizona and New Mexico, has just sent a letter to all ministers in the state which says:

"We want it distinctly understood that we are taking no part in partisan politics, and that our only interest is the moral issue of prohibition. Mr. Raskob is endeavoring to fasten a religious issue upon us and has charged the Anti-Saloon league with being too closely related to the Republican party. Our endorsement of the candidacy of Senator Ashurst, a Democrat, and a Roman Catholic, is a sufficient answer to both statements."

The dry forces claim to have been responsible for the election of Senator Carl Hayden over Cameron two years ago. Their influence is large in the state and offers one of the chief obstacles to Governor Smith. Senator Joe Robinson spoke here last night and is expected to add much enthusiasm to the Democratic fight.

Hayden for Smith

Senator Hayden, who is speaking for Smith much to the resentment of certain Republican leaders who voted for him against Cameron, their own senatorial nominee two years ago, is devoting much time in his speeches to defending Smith on religion and prohibition. On prohibition he says Hoover is supported by eastern wets like Senator Moses and Edge and apparently is willing to accept their assistance. He brings his plea for religious tolerance to a climax by referring to Arizona's two war heroes, Bucky O'Neil who died with the rough riders just before the battle of San Juan Hill, and Frank Luke, an A. E. F. ace, who is buried in France, both Roman Catholics.

"Is there any honor we would deny them because of their religion?" Hayden asks. He says he gets the greatest attention and applause in dealing with the religious issue.

Local Complications

The presidential fight is complicated by the senatorial and gubernatorial races. Governor Hunt, Democrat around whom the state's politics has revolved more than a decade, is running for his seventh term against "Honest John" Phillips, who once won a state fair prize as the homeliest man in Arizona. Phillips lives here and never has been beaten in this county though it is Democratic. However, Hunt still has a powerful organization and is running again on his opposition to the Swing-Johnson Boulder Canyon dam bill which is more unpopular in this state than the gila monster. Republicans accuse Hunt of having prevented an adjustment of the dam controversy with California to make political capital. Hoover's part in this long-standing controversy, while unpopular with many Arizona voters, is said by many to be only a moderate liability compared with the two liabilities Smith has in the state.

Most politicians on both sides feel that if Smith carries the state, it will be due to the strength of Hunt and Ashurst. Registration figures favor the Democrats by a heavy margin but these never have accurately forecast the actual vote. The Republican vote usually exceeds the registration while the Democratic vote usually falls short of the registration.

Governor Hunt carried the state by only 801 over Dwight Heard in 1924 and by only 399 over another Republican in 1926. In 1924 Coolidge carried the state but got 14,000 less than Davis and LaFollette combined. In 1920 Harding got 7,500 when the Republicans swept the state. Democrats normally have the advantage but as in so many other states nobody knows how many voters are going to jump the fence.

Americans Send Millions Up In Smoke as Nickel Cigar Picks Up

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9. (INS)—The five-cent cigar—which the late Vice President Thomas R. Marshall declared was just what the country needed—is staging a real return to glory.

In a review of the tobacco situation by the bureau of internal revenue today, it was stated that cigar manufacturers are making a successful effort to satisfy the country's demand for a cheap smoke—not of the campaign variety, but one that will meet the requirement in Kipling's line—"a woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke."

Most of 'Em Cheap

Nearly 50 per cent of the cigars manufactured in the last 12 months were made to retail at not more than 5 cents, nearly 3,000,000,000 out of a total of over 6,500,000,000.

That means the male smokers laid out $150,000,000 for 5-cent cigars in the year, for despite the insatiable lust of women for cigarettes, few of the feminine smokers have yet turned to 5-cent cigars.

Close to 4,000,000,000 cigars made to retail at over 5 cents went on the market in a year, at an estimated retail cost of $400,000,000. The more expensive cigars, however, did not show the gains of those of cheaper variety.

The big 1928 gain will be noted in the consumption of cigarettes. The production is estimated by the international revenue bureau at over 110,000,000,000, about 1,000 per capita. Less than 10 per cent of the American cigarettes are exported—a large number imported—indicating a consumption of virtually the domestic production at an estimated cost to smokers of over a half billion dollars.

Billion Up in Smoke

That brings the nation's 1928 tobacco bill, including chewing and smoking tobacco and snuff to well over a billion dollars.

Tobacco taxes will amount to over $400,000,000 this year, compared to $483,000,000 liquor taxes in 1919, the last year when the government had a large income from that source.

The income from tobacco is third of importance on the government's ledger, exceeded only by income and corporation taxes and customs receipts.

Student Flyer Falls Into Gulf in Parachute Drop

GALVESTON, Texas, Oct. 9 (UP)—Private Joe Trammel, 23-year-old student flier, fell into the Gulf of Mexico today when he jumped with a parachute from a plane of the third attack group.

It was Trammel's first trial jump.

The coast guard and all available forces immediately were pressed into a search of the gulf waters. Trammel's home was in Jasper, Texas.

Oklahoma Supreme Court Denies Tulsa Application

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 9 (UP)—The state supreme court today denied Tulsa's application for a writ of mandamus to force Attorney General Edwin Dabney, ex-officio bond commissioner, to approve Tulsa's $115,000 fire department bond issue.

Dabney refused to approve the issue as the bond started maturing 10 years from date instead of within five years as provided by the serial bond law.

Carbon Monoxide Gas Mask Made by Army

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (US)—The army chemical warfare service has devised a gas mask which affords complete protection for a limited time against carbon monoxide, one of the deadliest of poison gases, Maj. Gen. Amos Fries, chief of the service, revealed today in a statement to the American Chemical society.

'Miss Mobile' of 1926 Convicted of Larceny

MEDIA, Pa., Oct. 9. (UP)—Mrs. Vivian McDowell Page, who as "Miss Mobile" won a 1926 Atlantic City beauty contest prize, today was convicted of larceny.

A jury of seven women and five men convicted her of stealing a watch and cigaret lighter and acquitted her of taking $170 in cash from a room in a Chester, Pa., apartment house.

LEGION LAUDS STAR MOTHERS

Convention Suggests Sending Mothers to France

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 9 (US)—To officially permit the gold star mothers of America to visit the battle fields of France would be a beautiful gesture in recognition of their sacrifices in the World war, Mrs. Irene McIntyre Walbridge, president of the American Legion auxiliary, said today.

Mrs. Walbridge was emphatic in her approval of the proposal for government appropriations enabling all gold star mothers to visit the battle fields of France and the cemeteries where their sons found a last resting place.

"The hearts of gold star mothers lie in France and to send these mothers for a visit overseas would be something more than just mere sentiment," declared Mrs. Walbridge. "Such a move would prove to the world that America holds its mothers first in its national heart. And it would mean in the eyes of the world a living cry for universal peace."

The auxiliary plans to adopt a resolution urging the next congress to make such an appropriation, Mrs. Walbridge said.

Work of the auxiliary will be broadened this year. For eight years the auxiliary has been caring for disabled veterans and their dependents and this work has naturally led to rehabilitation work which in turn is developing into family welfare work, according to Mrs. Walbridge. Approximately $7,000,000 will be expended by the auxiliary in the next year, the temporary budget for 1928-29 reveals.

Citizens of Memphis Face Shortage in Water Supply

Special to The Record News

MEMPHIS, Texas, Oct. 9.—Memphis is faced with a shortage of water, according to the Texas Water Utilities company. The shortage is thought to be due to the fact that rain has not fallen for some time and that extra demands are being made upon the water supply by the gins of the city which are running night and day shifts.

The water company, in order to conserve the water supply, has asked the citizens of Memphis to stop watering their lawns, and all places where public car washing is done are asked to refrain from washing cars until the situation is bettered.

What would you think of a person who called up and gave permission to the paper to have her photo published, and then left town?

Glenda Nova Golden played just that stunt and now the paper has no way of telling whether her eyes are brown or blue. The matter of hair is not so important, for if ever there was any it has been rubbed off in the 10 months of the lady's life.

Glenda is named for her father—and neither is the Nova part a misnomer. She is practically new and the stunts she plays on her parents are always new to daddy and mother.

She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Golden, formerly of 486 Lee street.

O' These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. (US)—California boasts a lady bootlegger who makes wine out of honey, as they did in the days of Ovid and Cicero. It was so good that it was "a crime to confiscate it," said the officers, who, no doubt, found some way out of their dilema.

Have you noticed that the idlers who stand around and watch the new buildings go up, are all men? That the people who crowd the park benches are men? that the cheap lodging houses for the down-and-outers are men's lodging houses?

Poor women are always busy women, too busy to sit around on park benches.

The Red Cross says that 30 per cent of the American women are undernourished. The doctors say that they don't dress warmly enough, foreign visiters say they are all thoroughly spoiled, their divorced husbands say they are utterly selfish.

Always belittlin'.

Edna Persival of San Francisco was accused of drunken driving in a wheel chair. She ran the chair up and down the halls of the house where she lived, and pounded on doors, with a crutch.

Edna will vote for Smith, but her entire boarding house will vote for Hoover.

An Omaha man lets his wife go out and earn the living and he stays at home and keeps house. A neighbor told it when she complimented him upon his delicious lemon cream pies. So now he makes two each day and sneaks one over to her house. The neighbor's husband earns their living while his wife stays at home.

Can't you see a love balm suit in the offing? If anything could start an alienation suit, I claim a right smart lemon pie can turn the trick.

Among the things that modern women are learning to do without, prominent mention may be made of: Chaperones, underwear, stockings, company manners, home work and husbands.

It is not an unusual thing in New York, to see women dining in cafes with men, and paying their own checks. The men no longer protest.

James Cairns of Chicago, eloped at 2:30 a. m. with his ex-wife and remarried her, getting a preacher out of bed to do the deed.

That's a new one. Catching your own husband on the rebound.

Gloria Swanson is trying to save $29,422.69 of her income tax, which totals $109,687.

To some without IT, that seems like an incredible amount of money for only one year's vamping.

Wife's Favorite Indoor Amusement Is Telling Husband Do and Don't

A Lifetime Is Long Enough for Anybody to Boss the Affairs of Others, Says Dorothy Dix—It Is Only Fair to Step at the Grave and Give Those Left Behind a Chance to Live Their Own Lives.

The papers have been telling the story of a woman, who, slowly dying of an incurable disease, is putting in her last days having phonographic records made of her final directions to her husband.

Of course, the favorite indoor amusement of most wives is telling their husbands what to do and what not to do, but it does seem that in a lifetime any woman ought to have said all on these subjects that she is entitled to say, and she should not try to nag him from the grave.

Even the most casual observer cannot fail to notice that widowers wear the gay and carefree expression of one newly released from jail and rejoicing in unaccustomed liberty, in contrast to the hacked and downtrodden look of most husbands. This is only to be explained by the fact that for the first time in many years they can do what they please without having to ask permission or furnish an alibi.

Therefore, it seems a cruel and unnatural punishment to take the one and only consolation away from the bereaved husband by forcing him to listen to the voice that not even death has stilled lecturing him about his shortcomings and telling him of his faults.

Warning him how had everything he likes to eat is for his stomach, and asking him if he remembered to wipe his feet before he came in the house, and if he put out the cat and covered the canary. Warning him not to sit up too late, or drop cigar ashes on the rugs, or leave towels on the bathroom floor, and not to forget to wear his overshoes.

Of course, one might say that if a man didn't want to listen to a phonographic lecture, he could turn it off, whereas no husband can shut up a wife once she gets going, but any woman who could delude herself into believing her husband didn't get enough of his master's voice during the 10 or 20 or 30 years of their married life would make him swear by all his gods he'd listen to his daily dozen without fail. And there he would be, poor thing. Helpless. Utterly helpless.

But doesn't this little incident illustrate the morbid tyranny of those who seek to impose their will upon others even after they are dead? Who try to reach back spectral hands and control the fates of those whose needs and circumstances they cannot possibly foresee?

Bankers tell us of fortunes that are lost because some tight-fisted old miser was so afraid his descendants would dissipate in pleasure the money he had amassed by hard toil that he tied it up in investments that could not be changed. In real estate that was entailed and could not be sold at the flood tide of a boom that ebbed and left it valueless. In investments that could not be shifted and that became worthless.

Not even the most astute business man is a sure-fire, long-range financial prophet, and, taking it by and large, spendthrift Johnny is just about as likely to do well with the money that great-grandpapa leaves him outright as grandpapa is to guess what a corner lot on Main street will be worth 50 years from now and whether P. D. Q. bonds will be a gilt-edge investment or just so much waste paper. With the added advantage that, if Johnny throws away his inheritance, he will at least have had a run for his money, and there is always a chance that the responsibility of handling money may develop him into a thrifty business man.

Probably every young bride and groom make each other swear that if one should die the other would never, never, never marry again, though it is hard to understand how it would add to the felicity of an angel, twanging away on a golden harp in Paradise, to look down upon the one left behind, and behold him or her sad and lonely and homeless and companionless instead of being happy and cheerful with another mate.

When a woman makes her husband promise never to marry again, it amounts only to a futile, jealous gesture, for if she passes on he sensibly forgets his vow and takes unto himself a new and fairer bride, but men have a more effective way of preventing their wives from rebuilding their shattered lives. They write into their wills "if my wife Mary remarries, she hereby forfeits her share in my estate," and poor Mary has to remain a perpetual widow unless some man comes along with enough money to support her comfortably, or she falls enough in love with some man to endure poverty for his sake.

Among the strange vagaries of human nature, none is more curiously little and mean than this: that a man who has loved a woman would take steps to insure her unhappiness after his death. Selfishness can go no farther than for a man to want to keep his widow a lonely woman all the days of her life, or to deprive her of the comforts to which he has accustomed her and force her to live a hard life.

Think of the parents who carry their tyranny over their children beyond the grave! I have known fathers and mothers who on their deathbeds wrung promises from their sons and daughters not to marry women and men against whom the parents cherished prejudices. I have known parents who with almost their last breath forced reluctant pledges from their children not to do certain things to which their parents objected, or to do things they wanted done.

It is a criminal thing and a cruel thing for parents to lay any such restrictions on their children, because the dying have no supernatural wisdom that enables them to forecast the future and tell what changes may come about, what revelations take place, or how the whole perspective of life may alter. The thing that at one time seemed wise becomes utter foolishness at another.

Heaven knows most of us do not display such inspired wisdom in managing our affairs while we are alive that we are entitled to continue bossing things after we are dead. The least we can do is to hope that our mistakes will be buried with us, and to leave others free to live their own lives in their own way.

'Straight Ticket' Appeal to Come Up in Week

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Oct. 9.—Prospects were today that the proposed appeal of state nominees to the voters to support the Democratic ticket "straight" at the general election, Nov. 6, will not be made at least before the end of the week. More than a week has elapsed since a draft was submitted to the nominees by the Democratic campaign committee and found unacceptable by a majority of the nominees. A revision of the appeal was made by Atty. Gen. Claude Pollard and State Supt. S. M. N. Marrs, and distributed to the state nominees for signature.

Gov. Dan Mooody called a conference of the nominees to confer on signing the appeal, but due to the absence of several from the city last week, and to his illness last Saturday, the conference has not been held. Governor Moody is now in San Antonio for the American Legion national convention, along with several other state officials. He will return at intervals, but will spend such of the week with the Texas guests at the convention. The state textbook commission is also in session, so that his time here will be occupied in its deliberations.

It was not anticipated at the capitol Monday that the appeal can be reviewed, agreed upon, signed and sent out to the voters of the state before Saturday at the earliest.

Comptroller S. H. Terrell, however, has announced that he signed the proposed draft of the appeal to voters, as well as the original form of the appeal sent out by the Democratic campaign committee.

Last Gap Closed in Canada-Texas Road

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 9. (AP)—Recent sanction of a $1,125,000 road bond issue in Ennis county will provide for paving of the last section in Texas of federal highway 75, extending from Winnipeg, Canada, to Galveston, is the assertion of J. P. Stephenson, chairman of the Dallas highway 75 committee.

"The election provides for financing of the last gap in the highway of Texas," Stephenson said. "Not all others have been paved, but they will be hard-surfaced within 18 months."

Thousands of motorists from Canada and north-central states travel over the route during winter months, Stephenson stated, explaining that 1,400 miles of the 1,700-mile roadway is either paved or in condition for all year travel.

It will be but a short time until the entire stretch is paved, he believes.

BORGER MAKES CARBON BLACK

Hutchinson Town Is Center Of Industry

AMARILLO, Oct. 9. (UP)—The making of carbon black was prohibited in Texas until 1923, when laws were passed permitting utilization of waste gas at casing head plants which utilize gas produced simultaneously with and from the same stratum as petroleum.

Now that the laws are withdrawn, Borger, 60 miles from here, in the heart of the Panhandle oil field, in Hutchinson county, has been recognized as the largest carbon black making center of the world.

There is nothing beautiful about Borger with all its power. There is attraction through the black screen of smoke which surrounds the factory houses. The men who labor each day in the smoky dusk seem to have a prosaic task—the collecting of little particles of soot, 400 times finer than flour which will be marketed for six cents a pound. So, all in all, there seems to be no inducement to centering one's attention to the manufacturing of carbon black.

Carbon black in reality is a superior lampblack as the word is generally used since it also is soot. But the two products are differentiated in trade terminology. Lampblack is made by the smudge process of burning oil, resin or some other solid or liquid raw material. Carbon black is produced by introducing an iron surface into a gas flame.

Carbon black can be pressed into rubber from "Brazil" to records for phonographs, reinforcements in automobile tires, for making carbon paper and for inks.

HARD QUESTION FOR TRIAL JURY

'Communist Game' Definition Perplexing

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Oct. 9. (UP)—Just what constitutes "playing the communist game" is a question before the jury in the Baldwin-Bridge $5,000 libel suit involving the black list policy of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The trial is in its second day after sessions lasting almost to midnight.

Rev. William H. Bridge, Boonton, N. J., pastor sued by Mrs. Helen Brumley Baldwin of the Boonton D. A. R., for describing as "lying imputations" her statement that certain personages were "playing the communist game," was one of last night's final witnesses.

He traced the dispute, repeating that Mrs. Baldwin had no right to impute communism to Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, Boston pacifist whom he had engaged to speak at his church. He denied he was a Communist. Mrs. Mead, who followed him on the stand, also said she "loathes and abhors" Communist doctrines.

John Haynes Holmes, New York pastor, and Prof. Robert Morse Lovett of the University of Chicago, listed Mrs. Baldwin as also "playing the Communist game," testified for the defense.

Holmes said he favored Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president, but denied he was a Communist. He said a person interested in Socialism is "by definition excluded" from Communism, and vice versa.

Lovett entered a similar denial.

Jobs Disappear in American Factories

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (US)—About a million and a quarter jobs have disappeared from America's factories in the last five years, the social action department of the National Catholic Welfare conference announced today.

Machine "fingers" are taking the place of the workmen's brawny hands in this astounding age of mechanization of industry, a survey of bureau of labor statistics revealed.

Only a few industries are now hiring more men than five years ago, the report said. They include the automotive, agricultural implement makers, printing trades, auto tire workers, ice cream and bakeries.

Danger Lurks Behind Scented Kisses of Fairest Damsels

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (UP)—You may enjoy a maiden's kiss while she is in your arms but beware of the after affects.

It may cause you weeks of suffering of the body, if not the heart and even worse, it may mean—death.

"Scorn the kiss of anyone with a cold," Health Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel declared today in opening a war on common colds and laying plans for eliminating this dangerous illness.

In making the announcement, Kegel said he had become alarmed at the high death rate and the great annual financial loss to the city through sickness. Colds cost the city $20,000,000 in wages and have caused the deaths of nearly 2,500 persons in Chicago thus far in 1928, Kegel said.

"There are two kinds of colds," Kegel told the United Press today. "One you catch through contagion and one you develop because of lowered resistance to your own germs.

"Persons who cough, sneeze and expectorate promiscuously should be avoided. For those who have a cold, paper napkins that are destroyed after using are better than handkerchiefs. Many persons contract a cold by using infected towels and tableware."

I exhort therefore, first of all, that supplications, prayers, intercessions, thanksgivings, be made for all men.—I Tim. 2:1.

What we look for, work for, pray for, as believers, is a nation where class shall be bound to class by the fullest participation in the treasure of the one life; where the members of each group characters and the consecration of their powers; where each citizen shall know, and be strengthened by the knowledge that he labors not for himself only, nor for his family, nor for his country, but for God.—B. The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—One of the greatest charms of New York city life is its very humanness. Students of psychology find endless opportunities to study humanity along the streets of the big city. And one very fine place to observe it is aboard a Broadway trolley car, making its way slowly through mazes of trucks and less heavy traffic, up the famous thoroughfare. Boarding an open car, at Park Row, I rode north. Crawling along at a snail's pace, we halted at Houston street. Embryo cabaret entertainers were trying out some new steps, to the accompaniment of whistling fellow-workers, shirt-sleeved and lounging in front of wholesale houses, for their mid-day recess hour. Jazz tunes and the clapping of hands was heard. A young chap, with patent-leathered hair, and wearing a wildly colored tie, went through intricate steps to the amusement of his companions. Tiring of this, the latter turned to a recently arrived push-cart. A spell-binder called out the virtues of "all silk socks, pure silk—in every color—buy them here gentlemen—25 cents a pair, five pairs for a dollar." Grins met the informative one's efforts. "Get your pure silk socks here, while they last. Guaranteed 100 per cent pure silk—double heels and soles—get them cheap, five for a dollar," came again and again. Nobody bought.

Watching the hose salesman, stood an older peddler arranging his wares, consisting of a combination bottle-opener and heavens only knows what other devices—upon a small stand, nearby. Another effort upon the part of the man with the socks failed to attract the sidewalk audience. Then the older man began singing a song—and with startling effect—Sang he: "I went into an auction store. I never saw any thieves before—first they sold me a pair of socks, then they said—how much for the box? A fellah said two dollars, I said three, he emptied the box and gave it to me. I sold you the box, not the socks, said he, and I'll never go there any more." A scowl from the hose salesman—and the crowd roared.

And now we are nearing Tenth street. A shrill whistle and traffic halts in front of Grace church. An old couple, loveable souls they seem to be, with up-state written all over them, looked toward the famous edifice.

"Frederick," in a subdued voice, from the lady, "now I wonder what building that might be. The gentleman calls attention to its spire—a church. But which one? A kindly disposed passenger mentions its name.

"Indeed," from the simple wifely one, "I thank you." And to her aged mate she says: "Why dear, that is the church which we saw in "The Old Homestead." Do you remember Denman Thompson as he sang that song 'Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight?'— he stands in front of this church, in the play. We saw it the year Abby married—remember?" The gentleman remembered.

READINESS

I hope that I don't live to see
The day when life will make of me
A worshiper of money;
If ever I should fail to thrill
At Autumn, brown and crisp and sunny,

Or springtime soft and sunny,
Just let me go on to my fate,
And do not wail or moan or prate,
For I am more than ready
To try to pass the Gate up there,
And into Realms where all is fair
And ready every step is steady.

October's Lazy Ghosts

IF WE AMERICANS were half as smart as we pretend, we would arrange matters so that we could get our vacations in October.

The average vacation comes when the weather is hot. The seeker of rest and relaxation misses both objectives; he follows the ancient American custom of dashing about at top speed, gets jostled by crowds, scorches his hide on some blistering bathing beach, and winds up more weary than when he started.

But October is no month for hustling. It is time for leisure and contemplation. It would take a man of iron determination to travel too fast between September and November.

The ghosts of all the long-dead Indians are abroad in October. The smoke from their phantom campfires fills the countryside with a thin blue haze, and the dry leaves rustle mysteriously in quiet woodlands and level cornfields, as if the unseen were following the old trails again.

Now the noble red man was notoriously lazy. When a scalping party was afoot he got energetic, to be sure; but the bulk of his time was spent in the pursuit of ease. He was a past master of the art of lying on his back in the shade and inviting his soul to loaf. It was not for nothing that the Indians were the first human beings to smoke tobacco—and in pipes, at that. A pipe demands leisure and contemplation.

If we could take our vacations in October we might catch a hint or two in this art of loafing. We have a bit too much energy. All of our prizes go to the men who can travel the fastest. The "tired business man" is a type; indeed, we rather take it for granted that a man who is not constantly tired from overwork is not quite up to snuff.

All of this is very fine, in a way. We are growing great and prosperous. Our exports go to every part of the world. New factories, skyscrapers, bridges, warehouses are being built everywhere. One person in every five owns an automobile. And so on.

But life isn't a matter of bread alone. The nose that is kept too close to the grindstone can never detect the fine savor of an October wind. Tall buildings, however decorative, can shut us out from any glimpse of distant horizons. It is too easy to lose sight of our divinity in a tangle of crowded streets.

October is the antidote. Its countrysides contain a dreaming peace that we need more than we need anything else. It would be a great month for a vacation—a vacation in which a man could cut loose from the iron standards of a machine age and get back to a realization of the simple, all-pervading beauty and serenity that are his rightful heritage.

Readjustment Ahead

COL. LEONARD P. AYRES, famous statistician of the Cleveland Trust company, points out that the exportation of half a billion dollars worth of gold from the United States during the past year is going to have a very marked effect on our business life.

The "golden age" of business, in which there was unlimited credit with consequent boom times, is about over, he says. In its wake will come an era in which the plodder and the thrifty will prosper instead of the speculator and the take-a-chance sharpshooter. Our prosperity will remain, but "a period of readjustment to new conditions probably lies ahead, and it may be expected to present important difficulties."

These are words worth heeding. Colonel Ayres knows his subject. He is not pessimistic about the immediate or distant future; far from it. But he does sound a warning that a soberer time lies ahead of us.

8,000 Doomed to Die

A BULLETIN from the National Safety Council calmly predicts that more than 8,000 Americans will be killed by automobiles during September, October and November.

This follows the information that automobiles took 2,170 lives during August, and that during the first eight months of the year more than 16,000 people were killed. The year's total probably will be well above 24,000.

One might suppose that news of this kind would galvanize the country into a clamorous demand for instant action. It does not, of course. We read the statistics, shake our heads sadly—and forget about it. Among the people who fail to get excited by the rising death toll are, undoubtedly, most of the 8,000 who are marked for death in the next three months.

We are not cutting down the auto death rate. Fatal accidents this year show an increase of nearly 5 per cent over last year. Our national habit of refusing to face unpleasant facts is having woeful results.

The automobile is a magnificent invention. It has widened our horizons, increased our freedom of movement and dealt a body blow to provincialism.

But at the same time, the automobile is an extremely deadly weapon when put in the hands of the incompetent, the careless or the selfish.

The increasing motorisation of the country calls for a number of things. It calls for larger and more capable traffic squads, uniform traffic laws and signals, strict, country-wide drivers' license laws, stiffer sentences for traffic code violations. But most of all it calls for a new attitude on the part of every individual driver in the country.

When you start out for a ride in your machine, remember that you are responsible for a moving mass of steel that can kill anyone it hits. A single moment of inattention or carelessness on your part may make you a killer. If your brakes are not in good condition you may take a life before your drive ends. If you lose your temper when another car passes you, and try to retaliate, you may land in a police station facing a charge of manslaughter.

A moving automobile guided by a careless, hurried, unskilled or intoxicated man can be as dangerous as a razor in the hands of a madman. Good intentions will never avert an accident unless they are translated into terms of extreme care and thoughtfulness.

Eight thousand deaths will be caused by autos before December 1. Will you be responsible for one of them?

DIRECTOR PLACED IN BACKGROUND

Followers of football will view with some regret the enforced retirement of L. Theo Bellmont, for 15 years director of athletics at the University of Texas. During his career, the Orange and White teams have come through to many outstanding victories, but Bellmont seems to have drawn the fire of those who objected to his policies.

A year ago, the athletic director was placed on probation by university authorities, after several years of protests from alumni and others against his retention as director. Now he has been relegated to the place of professor of physical training with the same salary. The move was made in the interests of harmony, President Benedict announced.

The Room Under the Stairs

The Baffling Story of a Man Who Read of His Own Murder

By HERMAN LANDON

Copyright by G. Howard Watt — Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

Synopsis of Preceding Installments

Thomas Dean, well-known writer of mystery novels, has hidden from the world the fact that he is really

Paul Forrester, who as a youngster had been mixed up in a breach of promise suit and had figured in a self-defense killing out west some years before, from which encounter he still bears a knife scar on his neck. Dean is therefore astounded to read the death-bed confession of

Martin Lamont, western business man, in New York on a visit, in which he repents the murder of Paul Forrester five years before. This confession is witnessed by

Dennis Littleby, famous lawyer, at whose home the dying man is visiting, and

Dr. John Ballinger, well-known physician. Identification of the body, found in "The Room Under the Stairs," in Dean's deserted family house, is made by

Lieutenant Shane, of the police, who also finds a watch bearing the initials "P. F." Revisiting the house, Dean discovers pieces of a broken watch crystal at the scene of the murder, and is surprised at the sudden entrance of Littleby, who seems upset over Dean's find. Matters are further complicated by a strange young lady,

Viola Gray, who tries to connect one of Dean's stories with Forrester's secret.

A visit to the notary who took the confession reveals that Lamont seemed to have a peculiar dread of the telephone.

That night Dean outwits a hired assassin, Freddie Mills, and forces the man to give the signal by telephone that his night's work has been successful and Dean supposedly killed.

The Test

"It's a corker! I'll tell the world it is! Sounds just like a chapter from one of your novels, Dean."

Lieutenant Shane spread out his long legs and looked somewhat like a disillusioned youngster who refuses to swallow the tale of the fairy queen and the ogre. They were sitting in an office at police headquarters, and Dean had just told the story of his encounter with Freddie Mills the preceding night.

He had risen early, breakfasted in a hurry, and traveled into the city in a taxicab, for it had seemed the part of discretion to avoid the use of a public conveyance. He was anxious to see what construction the astute lieutenant would put on his adventure with the thug and to gain a hint as to how he might best pursue the advantage he had gained.

"Well, you know, truth is stranger than fiction," he tritely pointed out, speaking almost gayly, for the events of the night had left him in a mood of exultation that refused to be dampened by Shane's apparent skepticism.

"So it seems," remarked the lieutenant dryly. "Sometimes I wonder, Dean, if you haven't been working your imagination overtime so long that you can't tell the difference between fiction and fact. * * * The things you have just been telling me bear a strong family resemblance to the kind of stuff you write. No offense meant. All I am saying is that you have been looking at life through a fiction writer's glasses so long that everything you see is apt to be pretty highly colored. What did you do with Freddie Mills after you made him call up that joint on Bleecker street?"

"I just threw one more scare into him, then invited him to accompany me to the old ramshackle garage in the rear of the place, and locked him up for safe-keeping."

"More melodrama!" jeered the lieutenant.

"Call it anything you like. Mills can't get away, for the old shack is pretty solid, even if it hasn't been used for years. I warned him that if he let out one single peep he would live just long enough to regret it, and no longer. Early this morning I brought him his breakfast and repeated the warning, giving him the impression that I would remain within earshot all day. No one will disturb him, for my housekeeper never goes near the old garage." He chuckled amusedly. "The old dear would throw a fit if she knew that a hired assassin was locked up on the premises."

Shane nodded and looked queerly at the novelist.

"It was a neat job," he remarked sarcastically, "but what did you hope to accomplish by it?"

"Don't you see? By this time the tip has been passed on to the instigator of the job that Mills carried out his mission as per instructions. Mills, being kept incommunicado, will have no opportunity to correct the erroneous report. His absence is not likely to create suspicion for his part in the affair ended when he called up the joint on Bleecker street last night. In other words, somebody—I'm not mentioning names as yet—is at a disadvantage. He's under the impression that I am dead, while on the contrary I have never felt so thoroughly alive in years. When a man is laboring under a misapprehension of that sort, he is badly handicapped. He is very likely to make a slip and betray himself."

Shane seemed unimpressed. "What you did was irregular as the dickens," he pointed out. "If this bird Mills made an attempt on your life, you should have turned him over to the authorities. We'll let that pass, though. Anyhow, your place over there is out of our jurisdiction, so I should worry about such a little thing as unlawful detention. What I don't see is where your advantage comes in or how you are going to make use of it."

"I was hoping you would give me a suggestion on that point."

Shane considered. His skepticism seemed a little less pronounced. "Got any idea as to who put Mills up to the job?"

Dean shook his head.

"Know of any one who has a reason for wanting you bumped off the earth?"

"No," said the novelist, "but I'm willing to wager a good bit that it's somebody I've been in contact with the last two or three days."

"While you've been snooping around the edges of Lamont's confession?"

"Exactly. I believe my enemy is one of the persons I've met while conducting this investigation. But it is only a hunch, remember. Don't ask me to xplain, for I can't."

"Well, let's see. There is Littleby, the nurse, Lamont himself—" Shane ticked the names off on his fingers. "Anybody else?"

"I interviewed the notary who witnessed Lamont's confession, also Doctor Ballinger," explained Dean, but for some reason, not quite clear to himself, he neglected to mention little Miss Gray.

"That makes five," Shane summed up. "Mean to tell me that one of those five hired Mills to kill you?" His voice sounded incredulous.

"I warned you it was only a hunch. And I am not accusing anybody. But I would like to meet those five persons separately. If one of them thinks I am dead, it will be quite a shock to him to come face to face with me. Even if his nerves are insulated with copper, it would be hard for him to control his surprise."

"You will have lots of material for your next novel, Dean. But haven't you forgotten something? What about the newspapers? The bird who planted the job will naturally expect to find an account of the murder in the papers. If he doesn't find what he is looking for, he may get suspicious, and that would spoil the surprise!"

"Yes, I've thought of that. But the surprise will keep a few hours longer, at least until the evening editions come out. I am supposed to have been murdered at midnight. The morning papers go to press about three, but dead bodies aren't always found in time to catch the edition. For the next seven or eight hours the murderer will have no reason to think otherwise than that I am dead."

Shane laughed shortly. "All right, make the most of them. You will have a chance to spring your surprise on one of the five persons you mentioned this morning." He glanced at his watch. "Mr Littleby is due in a few minutes. He said he had something to tell me and would drop in about 10 on his way to the office."

A look of sudden interest came into Dean's face. He had not singled the lawyer out for special consideration in connection with the attempt on his life, but there was Littleby's peculiar behavior when they met in the house on Hudson street. The mere hint of suspicion seemed to rebound against the lawyer's rectilinear dignity, but there were several phases of his character that puzzled Dean.

"Not that I expect anything to come of it," remarked the lieutenant. "Littleby isn't the kind that hires rats like Freddie Mills to commit murders. I don't believe he has anything to conceal. Do you?" His lips twisted in a peculiar way and he leveled a cocked eye at the novelist. "By the way, speaking of people who are concealing things, what about yourself?"

"Me?" Dean stared guiltily, his embarrassment aggravated by the fact that Shane appeared to be looking at the right side of his neck.

The lieutenant spoke softly, with a faint drawl: "Tell me, isn't there a scar on the right side of your neck in the exact position where Lamont said Paul Forrester had a scar?"

Dean was silent for a moment. So Shane had seen the scar, despite his studied efforts to conceal it.

"Why, yes," he said as calmly as he could. "What about it? Didn't think you had noticed it."

"I hadn't, as a matter of fact." The lieutenant's eyes twinkled. "I only asked a question, and you answered it. Thanks for gratifying my curosity. Lots of people, millions of 'em, I suppose—have scars of one kind or another. It's a safe bet that among those millions there are several that have scars on the right side of the neck. That yours and Paul Forrester's should be in the same place is only one of those meaningless coincidences that creep up now and then. Anyhow, that's the way I look at it. The only thing that puzzles me is why you are acting so mysterious about it."

Dean felt himself flushing, and the fact that his embarrassment was visible made his irritated with himself.

"There's no mystery about it," he managed to say. "One is sensitive about a blemish."

"Even when it's covered by a high collar," drawled the lieutenant.

"I'm just wondering why you didn't say anything about the coincidence after Lamont spoke of Paul Forrester's scar. I think I would have remarked on it, if I had been in your place—provided, of course, that there was no reason why I should keep mum."

The insinuation was too palpable to be ignored, but Dean was more embarrassed than resentful. Yet he could see that so far Shane had drawn no definite inferences from the coincidence of the scar; to him it meant only a complication that was muddled still more by Dean's attempt at secrecy.

Just then, to his intense relief, there came the sound of briskly approaching footsteps. Instantly he thought of Littleby, enjoying in anticipation the rich dramatic flavor of the forthcoming scene. He might be mistaken, of course, and the test might fall flat, yet his expectations were keyed to a degree that sent a tingling sensation down his spine.

The partly open door was flung wide. Littleby, his gaunt figure looking spruce and dignified in his smart swallow-tail coat, walked in with a serene and decorous air. For a moment, in an ecstacy of suspense, Dean felt a whirling tumult in his head. He was eager to see the lawyer's complacent smile fade away and a look of dismay take its place. Littleby advanced with his curious strutting gait, spoke a cordial greeting to Shane, placed his hat and cane on a chair, and then he saw the novelist.

"Oh, hello, Dean," he said genially, without a flicker of surprise on the intellectual mold of his features. "Pleasant surprise!"

Dean stared dumbly at the lawyer, conscious only that the collapse of his expectations had left a vast chaos in his mind. * * * The man was comporting himself just as he would at any casual encounter with some one he was superficially acquainted with. Either his nerves were made of brass, or else Dean's suspicions, much more pointed than he confided to the lieutenant, had no substance.

The seconds dragged with the slow tread of hours, encompassing a silence that seemed appropriate for a knell. Dean, aware that Shane was looking at him with a sarcastic twinkle in his eye, managed to mumble a commonplace in reply to the lawyer's salutation.

With an air of condescension, as if realizing that a man in his position was doing a magnanimous thing in calling on a humble police official, Littleby turned to the lieutenant.

"Since I saw you yesterday," he began, "a matter has come up that I wish to consult you about. Unless I am mistaken, it requires the attention of the police. Last evening—"

He paused and looked doubtfully at the novelist.

"Don't mind Dean," said the detective. "He already knows more about the case than I do. You can say anything you like in his presence."

"Very well, then. Last evening Miss Shirley Lamont arrived."

"Lamont's daughter?"

Littleby nodded. "The young lady was expected three days ago, as you know, but something delayed here on the way. Her poor father has been calling for her repeatedly. It appears she arrived in the city about 7 last evening and, in accordance with the instructions I wired her, went direct to my house in Kew Gardens. I did not leave my office until half past 8, so did not see her. In fact, the only person who saw her was Babson, the butler. He met her on the main stairway as he was coming down. Startled at the presence of a strange person in the house, he demanded her business and her name. Miss Lamont seemed greatly agitated and—"

A Strange Disappearance

"One moment," Shane interrupted. "Do you mean to tell me that nobody knew Miss Lamont was in the house until Babson met her on the stairs?"

"That's it exactly. It is most peculiar, as you will admit. I have personally questioned all the servants, and none of them admitted her to the house. How she got in, and why she entered without ringing the bell, is a mystery. Stranger still, Babson says she was bareheaded, tremendously excited, and did not look as if she had just come off a train. By that he means, I suppose, that she was not in traveling dress. She told him her name was Shirley Lamont and that she must see her father at once. Babson was naturally suspicious and suggested she wait in the drawing room until he could inquire of the nurse whether her father was in a condition to see her. Just a pretext, of course. The excellent Babson did not intend to let her go any further until she had satisfied himself that she was really Lamont's daughter."

The lawyer paused and bent a gravely troubled look on the lieutenant. Dean's presence he appeared to have forgotten.

"Did the young lady say anything to Babson?" the novelist inquired, "that explained why she entered your house in such a—er—unconventional way?"

"Not a word of explanation of any kind."

"Yet you told us a moment ago," Dean pointed out, "that the lady arrived in the city at 7 o'clock. Since Babson was the only person who saw her, and since she gave no account of herself to him, how do you know the time of her arrival?"

Littleby gave a slight start, but it might have been only a gesture of irritation. For a moment Shane's half-closed eyes widened and looked blinkingly at the novelist.

"I have ascertained," replied Littleby patiently, "that a train arrived from the west half an hour before the lady's appearance in my house. It would take her a little less than 30 minutes to make the trip from the city to Kew Gardens."

Dean nodded as if the explanation were satisfactory. Shane's lids dropped back in their former position.

"Where is the young lady now?" he asked.

"Wish I knew!" Littleby shook his head in a troubled way. After Babson had conducted Miss Lamont to the drawing room, he went to consult me over the telephone. When he returned, the young lady had disappeared."

"Disappeared!" echoed Dean. Shane's lids fluttered wide open.

"And she has not been seen since," declared the lawyer in a tone of grim finality. "There is your mystery, gentlemen. I am hoping you can elucidate it."

HOW DRY OR WET WAS WILSON?

Editor The Record News: You publish letters from your readers who are moved to give their opinions on various questions. I shall be grateful if you will indulge me some of your space for the same purpose.

I am wondering if in this campaign the record is being kept straight in regard to President Woodrow Wilson's dealings with the question of prohibition. Governor Smith in his speech of acceptance at Albany declared with emphasis that Wilson vetoed the Volstead act. Other speakers for Governor Smith are on record as having made the same declaration. I believe most of us will give Woodrow Wilson credit for being a sincere man, saying exactly what he meant to say regarding legislation he approved or disapproved. Let us look at Mr. Wilson's letter to congress concerning the legislation that contained the Volstead act. This leter was dated Oct. 27, 1919.

Quotes Message

"I am returning without my signature H. R. 6810, 'an act to prohibit intoxicating beverages and to regulate the manufacture, production, use and sale of high proof spirits for other than beverage purposes and to insure an ample supply of alcohol, and promote its use in scientific research and in the development of fuel, dye and other lawful industries.'

"The subject matter treated in this measure deals with two distinct phases of the prohibition legislation. One part of the act under consideration seeks to enforce war-time prohibition. The other provides for the enforcement made necessary by the adoption of the constitutional amendment. I object to and cannot approve that part of this legislation with reference to war-time prohibition. It has to do with the enforcement of an act which was passed by reason of the emergencies of the war and whose objects have been satisfied in the demobilization of the army and navy and whose repeal I have already sought at the hands of congress. Where the purposes of particular legislation arising out of war emergency have been satisfied sound policy makes clear the reason and necessity of repeal.

"It will not be difficult for congress in considering this important matter to separate these two questions and effectively to legislate regarding them, making the proper distinction between temporary causes which arose out of war-time emergencies and those like the constitutional amendment of prohibition which is now part of the fundamental law of the country. In all matters having to do with the personal habits and customs of large numbers of our people we must be certain that the established processes of legal change are followed. In no other way can the salutary object sought to be accomplished by great reforms of this character be made satisfactory and permanent."

After having examined this statement from President Wilson I have come to the conclusion that he was not so wet as some of the "spellbinders" would have us think. Surely no one is able to read into that language objection to the Volstead act as it applies to the eighteenth amendment. "I object to and cannot approve that part of this legislation with reference to war-time prohibition," he said. Governor Smith will find it not so easy to stampede the reading, thinking voter into his wet camp by holding Woodrow Wilson up to him. When the whole record is brought into the light it is found that he did render some valuable service to the cause of prohibition.

When Wichita Falls Was Wet

Governor Smith proposes to turn the wheels of progress backward and make prohibition a matter of state control. That sort of thing has been weighed in the balances and found wanting. Oklahoma was born into the family of states a dry state. But our neighbor just to the south of us was wet in her larger towns and cities, notably Wichita Falls. We were harrassed continually by bootleggers operating out of these wet towns. It was our emphatic expressed desire to be a dry state, but owing to the wetness of our southern neighbor we were not permitted to be. Governor Smith's old corpse of state control has a rather bad odor to us and we will certainly do what we can to keep it buried.

Some say, "don't worry, he can't do anything to hurt prohibition." He evidently thinks he can, or he is an insincere man and using that to get votes. If it is certain that he can't, his judgment is bad. If he is badly off in this matter, then he may be far afield in many other things. One thing is certain if he is elected, the liquor question will be dragged out again and the agitation gone through with again. Do we want that to happen? I think not.

T. C. U. Girls Admit They Are Interested in Home

FORT WORTH, Oct. 9. (UP)—Girls in Texas Christian university are interested in homemaking and they don't mind admitting it. In answer to a questionnaire, given to students in the class in interior decorating by Samuel P. Ziegler, head of the art department, two-thirds of the girls stated that they were interested in the course primarily because they were interested in beautiful homes.

Prof. Ziegler says that interest in the course is increasing each year. The class in interior decoration will study color schemes, arrangement of furniture and the historic periods of furniture.

Each member of the class will be required to choose a certain type to study, and she will learn to furnish it completely by the close of the term.

BITTER FIGHT IN NORTHWEST

Farm Relief Chief Factor in Campaign

By D. FIELD BRITTLE

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 9. (AP).—With a record of political past performance to substantiate almost any surprise it may produce in November, Minnesota is going into its presidential election with a situation so thoroughly mixed as to offer prompt denial to any prediction.

The only certainty apparent is that farm relief draws the most definite line that will separate the votes of Hoover and Smith. The question how to assist the agriculturist, who in Minnesota is a very numerous advocate of McNary-Haugenism, is agreed on as paramount in virtually every analysis, though the great foreign populations are to be depended upon to decide many votes on the basis of prohibition and religion.

Other Factors

As well defined as is the farm problem, with prohibition and Catholicism cutting both ways between Hoover and Smith, there are many other factors that contribute to the intensity with which Minnesota is being debated. By virtue of much more than its geographical proximity to the LaFollette state of Wisconsin, Minnesota shelters a great progressive vote that rallies under the Farmer-Labor banner and which certainly cannot be lumped off into either the Smith or Hoover columns.

The Democrats have high hopes this year of welding the Farmer-Labor strength into their organization to produce a Smith victory.

As sources of the strength that they must gain to break the chain of Republican successes in national elections, the Democrats look to the farmers of the McNary-Haugen school, the pre-convention supporters of Lowden of Illinois, the wet vote in such cities the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, and among the foreigners and the miners of the iron ranges. Republican confidence of a Hoover victory is based on their belief that he will have greater appeal than Smith among the farmers; that his war record will help among the foreigners and that he will gather strength because of his espousal of the St. Lawrence waterway. The Republican arguments most in use for Hoover is farm relief and the tariff; against Smith it is the governor's Tammany connections.

Church Propaganda

In this campaign, shot through with pronounced views on prohibition and religion, party leaders have to consider seriously the fact that more than half of Minnesota's population, on the basis of the 1920 census, is of foreign extraction.

The Catholicism of Governor Smith is openly discussed by the voters and there are some Democrats who, declaring Smith will surpass Hoover on every other issue at the ballot box, believe that if Smith is defeated it will be because of religious intolerance. The say a flood of anti-Catholic propaganda has come into the state to inflame feeling among Protestants.

Reindeer Are Brought To U. S. for Christmas

The herd will be distributed among all the nation's largest cities to serve as Santa Claus teams before Christmas.

WALSH LOSES COURT PLEA

Attorney for Hickman Gets Scant Sympathy

By LEE GEBHART
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Jerome Walsh, the young Irish attorney from Kansas City who has fought so valiantly to save William Edward Hickman from the gallows in San Quentin prison 10 days hence, lost his fight today to have the United States supreme court consider an appeal from a California sentence of death for the slayer of 12-year-old Marion Parker, Los Angeles school girl.

Five supreme court justices turned a deaf ear to Walsh's plea for an appeal which would grant the California boy-killer a stay of execution, based on the contention that the new California criminal law under which Hickman was convicted and sentenced to hang is a violation of the federal constitution.

Walsh announced he had given up the supreme court fight after Justice Harlan Fiske Stone—the fifth to be visited—turned down Walsh's plea that "due process of law" is violated by the California criminal law clause providing that in a plea of "not guilty by reason of insanity" it is presumed that the defendant has committed the crime charged.

One hope remains for the kidnaper-slayer — executive clemency from Governor Young of California. Walsh, beaten in his supreme court fight, but satisfied that he has made every effort to save Hickman from the gallows, said he would wire the governor asking a hearing on a petition for clemency. He left here tonight for Kansas City en route to California.

62 Dead, Hundreds Hurt As Prague Building Falls

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Sixty-two persons were killed and several hundred men were injured today when a five-story building under construction in Prague, collapsed, according to a Central News dispatch.

Two thousand soldiers and firemen threw a cordon around the wrecked building to keep away curious and began searching for bodies. Eleven bodies already had been recovered.

Faulty material was held responsible for the accident and when the architect in charge was informed of the tragedy he committed suicide, the report said.

BRITISH PLANE SEEKS RECORD

Speed of 360 Miles Hour Is Sought

LONDON, Oct. 9. (US)—The fastest flying machine ever designed by man is now completing its tests at Felixstowe behind a veil of official secrecy.

It is the supermarine S-5 which has been built to beat the record of 316 miles an hour at present held by Italy. It is hoped that she will show a speed of 360 miles an hour, or six miles a minute.

Flight Lieut. d'Arcy Greig, a 28-year-old Scotsman, will be the pilot.

Flight Lieutenant Greig, the pilot has been in strict training for some weeks, a training which not only includes dieting, but also constant work on the fastest seaplanes in existence, at ever-increasing speeds.

The official attempt on the record will be made at Calshot. Extraordinary precautions have been taken by the authorities to prevent details of the performance of the new craft from leaking out.

Small Machine

Few people even here have seen the new speed machine. Tests are only made at dawn, when few people are about, and there is as a rule little or no wind.

I met one man who saw the machine.

"She is so small that she was brought here on a lorry, he said.

"The tail is tiny—not larger than that."

He spread his hands apart, like an angler telling a fishing story.

The new machine differs in many important respects from the Schneider Trophy machines which won at Venice last year and attained speeds in the neighborhood of 300 miles an hour.

Details of the modifications cannot yet be given, but still greater streamline has been found possible, producing considerably higher speed.

"When the Schneider Trophy machines were built we aimed at 300 miles an hour, and considerably exceeded that figure," said an R. A. F. officer. "We are aiming for 400 miles an hour for the Schneider Trophy next year, and we hope again that performance will surpass theory."

Flight Lieutenant Greig, who in the course of these tests has moved more swiftly than any man in the world's history, commands the Royal Air force high-speed section here—a little band of the most skillful pilots in the service, who normally pilot tiny craft at incredible speeds, machines that are, to use a hackneyed phrase, veritable "flying bullets."

He succeeded Flight Lieutenant Kinkead when that officer was killed in tragic circumstances at Calshot while practising for the same record. Greig had no previous experience of high speed; hence the long delay before making the official test.

Flight Lieutenant Greig has already had one marvelous escape from death. It was in April, 1927, that a machine he was piloting burst into flames at 12,000 feet.

At 6,000 feet it went out of control. Greig leaped, and descended from more than a mile high with his parachute, landing in a field near Kenley.

"I turned over and over and over," he said, describing the incident, "and for hundreds of feet I was too giddy to form any kind of judgment. Even as I was falling I could see the machine spinning to earth upside down."

ALMOST QUIT EATING, SO MANY THINGS HURT

"FOR a long time, I had a severe case of indigestion," says Mrs. Bell Buckheister, of 7 River street, Piedmont, S. C. "So many things that I ate hurt me, I almost quit eating until I was so weak and run-down, I could not do my work, or go about to see my friends.

"I would burn in my chest. I had severe headache, and such a tight, smothering feeling. I would be obliged to eat a little, and then it would hurt me.

"A friend said to me: 'What causes your smothering spells?' and I told her 'indigestion and constipation.' She said: 'Why don't you take Black-Draught more often?'

"I was just too weak then to do my work. I began taking small doses after meals, and in just a few weeks I could eat anything I wanted to, then take my small dose of Black-Draught and feel fine.

"I soon felt like a new person. I regained my health and strength, and could eat most anything.

"I am now 78 years old. I keep boarders. I cook for nine, and do all my work with ease, and feel strong and well.

Protect Yourself and Your Family with Crystal-Clear Non-Shatterable

Security-Plate Glass

Cadillac-La Salle Security-Plate Glass—an actual demonstration with driver at wheel. A regulation American League baseball thrown with all his strength by a boy seven feet from the car failed to shatter the window.

IN THE new Cadillacs, La Salles and Fleetwoods there are revolutionary new safety features of vital importance in this day of high speed and congested streets and highways. Unquestionably, they make these cars the safest in the world.

There is no hazard of flying glass in case of accident. For all doors, windows and windshields are equipped with Cadillac-La Salle crystal-clear, non-shatterable Security-Plate Glass.

What does Security-Plate Glass mean?

It means that if the glass in a windshield, door or window of a new Cadillac or La Salle is struck by ball, stick or stone, or if one of these cars is in a collision, there is no danger of flying glass fragments. In other words, security-plate glass means greater protection for you and your family. Thus the subconscious fear of injury is removed—you ride or drive with your mind at ease.

But security-plate glass is by no means the only new safety feature in the new Cadillacs and La Salles. There are the new Cadillac-designed Duplex-Mechanical four-wheel brakes. These brakes give much more positive, powerful braking action, but require amazingly little effort on the part of the driver.

And there is the Cadillac-La Salle Synchro-Mesh Silent-Shift transmission—a remarkable device that enables one to shift gears easily, instantly, without clashing, and that adds greatly to getaway in traffic.

You would gladly have paid extra for these new safety features in your present car could you have obtained them. But they are found only in the new Cadillacs and La Salles—and there is no extra charge for them.

Author of "The Fast Way to Health."

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

The Diet For Diabetes Mellitus

In curing this disease it is necessary that the patient conserve the nervous energy, as this disease is often brought on by nervous strains, shocks, worry and overwork. Sleep and periods of rest are essential to a cure.

In spite of the seriousness of this disease, under ordinary methods of treatment I have found that it is easily curable in most cases. Those cases that are most serious have destructive areas in the liver, pancreas or kidney. When diabetes occurs in young people it is usually most serious because it is often accompanied by destructive processes in some of these organs.

The proper way to begin treating diabetes is to use a citrus fruit fast, employing either orange or grapefruit juice, using a glassful every two or three hours. Warm enemas must be used regularly every morning, and a whole body massage should be given occasionally. Vigorous skin friction is advisable after a cold shower bath morning and evening.

The citrus fruit fast should be continued until all traces of sugar have disappeared from the urine and even a few days longer. In severe cases it may be advisable to use shorter periods of fasting at intervals of one or two months. After the fast the diabetic patient may use a well balanced diet, but he should be careful to avoid the use of starches and sugar for some time to come. This is a model of the diet after the fast that I usually recommend for my patients:

Breakfast: Choice of one kind of protein, such as eggs, nuts or cheese. Only one egg should be used, or two ounces of nuts, or two ounces of cheese. Three or four slices of Melba toast. (This is toast dextrinized completely through, which changes the starch.) A small dish of stewed fruit, such as prunes, figs, raisins, applesauce or baked apples—no sugar being added. Between breakfast and lunch at least one quart of distilled water should be taken.

Lunch: Choice of one or more as desired of the following vegetables: Celery, spinach, small string beans, asparagus, cucumbers, egg plant, small beets and tops, summer squash, small turnips and tops, small carrots and parsnips, lettuce, okra, chayotes, oyster plant (salsify), mallow, kale, zucchini, parsley, endive, avocado (alligator pear) or ripe olives. These may be used both cooked and raw. In the afternoon at least one quart of distilled water should be again used.

Dinner: Choice of one of the following proteins: Beef, mutton, turkey, rabbit, chicken, fish (except salmon), cottage or cream cheese, gelatin, frog's legs or turtle. Not over a quarter of a pound of meat should be used or a corresponding amount of any of the other proteins. Choice of one or more vegetables from the list used for lunch. No desserts.

This diet should be taken for at least several weeks before any attempt is made to use any of the carbohydrate foods. If sugar does not disappear from the urine with this diet, it is sometimes advisable to take a milk diet for several weeks, but that is usually not necessary, and the diet I have just given will be sufficient to adequately nourish the body without the addition of any other kind of food.

Questions and Answers

Question: O. J. writes: "About 10 years ago I fell and landed on my knees and since then they give way at times and I almost fall. They make a gritting sound, and I wonder if you could tell me something to use as a massage."

Answer: Massage will be of little use to you in correcting the trouble with your knees. Go to a physical culture instructor and have him give you some exercises which will strengthen your leg muscles. Sometimes the diathermy electrical treatment will help in the correction of such troubles caused by accidents. The action of the diathermy current is to warm the tissues of the knees including the bones. Metabolism in these parts is increased and the effect is far deeper than anything which can be obtained by massage.

Question: O. B. asks: "Will you please tell me in your health column the cause, symptoms and cure of a floating or wandering kidney?"

Answer: The kidneys are not definitely anchored in an exact position, but change their position slightly with the movements of the body. Those who have a general prolapsus of abdominal organs will find that the kidneys are always lower down than is considered normal. There are seldom any definite symptoms except those which go with the general prolapsus. The backache and bearing down feelings associated with prolapsus are seldom caused by the floating kidneys alone, but come from the general weakness of abdominal and back muscles which allow the prolapsus to exist. The only cure is in raising these organs through strengthening the abdominal and back muscles by taking suitable setting-up exercises.

Soviet Official's Actress Wife Causes Stir of Gossip Moscow

MOSCOW, Oct. 9. (US)—Rumors of a rift in the domestic life of Anatole Lunacharsky, Soviet Commissar of education for more than 10 years, are spreading around Moscow on the heels of new press attacks against the chic dressing propensities of the Commissar's pretty actress wife, Rosenell.

Reports have it that as a result of pressure by Communist party leaders M. Lunacharsky attempted to persuade his wife to dress more modestly. She refused, it is said, because having an income of her own on the stage, she reserved the right to spend her money as she pleased.

Flashy Clothes

Ever since Rosenell accompanied her husband to the disarmament conference at Geneva last year and roused the ire of foreign Communists by her flashy clothes and pearls, which the later admitted were not real, the Soviet press has jibed her as a misfit in the socialistic republic, a "bourgeois" and a "bad example."

A recent issue of the humorous magazine "Crocodile" contains a scathing cartoon, though it does not mention the easily recognizable Rosenell by name. It shows a remant female of the old nobility, dressed in the style of 1890, gazing through a gold lorgnette at an actress posing in the most approved modiste manner in a shimmering gown extending to within three inches of the knees.

"So you are the wife of a Soviet commissar?" asks the amazed princess. To which Rosenell is made to say, "Huh—! You'd be surprised!"

Refused Passport

The picture of Rosenell, to indicate how gossip of her is being peddled about Europe, is taken from a Berlin comic pictorial magazine. Only in this case the other woman in the picture is the very simply dressed wife of Erwin Piscator, Communist theatrical producer, who is singing the praises of the proletarian dictatorship in Berlin.

The GPU has refused to give Rosenell another visa to leave Russia because of the Geneva episode. She had started playing the heroine in a German film before returning to Moscow. She left, intending to return after a visit to Russia. Then she found she couldn't leave the country again, and was forced to break her contract. The German movie concern suffered a loss of $30,000 because a half-finished picture was worthless.

As consolation the Soviet Movie trust offered her the lead role in a new picture. And it is generally believed M. Lunacharsky failed to get the appointment as soviet ambassador to Rome because party leaders objected to Rosenell as a Communist diplomat's wife.

'Dead' Man Interferes With His Own Inquest

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 9. (US)—"I have just called to ask you to stop this inquest business. I am not dead at all," said a man who walked into the coroner's office.

The coroner was about to hold an inquest on the body, recovered from the docks, believed to be that of John Cunningham, aged 54, a stone mason, of Ash-grove, Liverpool. It was John Cunningham who walked into the office.

"I decided to go away for a holiday," he said, "and, unfortunately, did not inform my landlady. I had been at home in Belfast about a week when my sister received a telegram. 'Come at once, Jack is dead.'

"I came over by the first boat and arrived just in time to stop the inquest and save my life."

Mrs. Murphy, Cunningham's landlady, had identified the body as that of her tenant. The dead man bore a striking resemblance to Cunningham.

Vatican Workers Busy To Save Ancient Tower

ROME, Oct. 9 (US)—Workmen of the Vatican were busy today saving from collapse one of Rome's historic Christian battlements, the 11 century old tower built by Pope Leo IV for the protection of the Vatican Basilica against the Saracen invasions of the ninth century.

The tower is one of three which still stand along the line of defending walls constructed by Leo IV so as to enclose the hill and the Basilica against the Saracens, who had taken the city of Ostia nearby.

Strange Insects Found In Italian Grotto

ROME, Oct. 9. (US)—Recent discovery of a giant grotto near Udine more than two miles in length led to new scientific revealations in the realm of zoology following explorations by Professors Strausser, of Poland, and Petner, of Jugoslavia.

Some of the creatures found in the grotto apparently belonged to species utterly unknown to modern science and were so strange that the entomologists were at a complete loss as to their classification.

The scientists were particularly impressed by the finding of tiny, fan-shaped insects, white and very slow in motion. Their bodies were formed of a silicate so sensitive that, upon being touched, they dissolved into a white liquid containing a powder resembling spent lime.

Mr. Marchman contends the McCoys, under the terms of the contract, were to remain in active management, operation and control of the hostelry and that the lease should revert back to him when the operators moved away from Wichita Falls after selling their stock to the Hilton Hotel company of Dallas.

For COLDS of All the Family

This Modern External Treatment is best

Mothers prefer the external treatment, Vicks VapoRub, for children's colds, because it avoids the constant "dosing" so disturbing to delicate little stomachs. You just rub it on throat and chest.

Other members of the family prefer Vicks for their own colds, because it is convenient, and quick in bringing relief. Colds usually yield overnight.

THE PACKARD CUSTOM EIGHT

The Packard Custom Eight Seven-Passenger Sedan

offering literally New Luxury - New Comfort and New Safety

We want all those who appreciate supreme excellence in a motor carriage—whether in the market for a new car or not—to see and ride in the new Packard Custom Eight.

It is a revelation of what modern engineering genius, with a background of 30 years' experience in the manufacture of fine cars, can achieve.

In appearance the Custom Eight discloses new refinements in the characteristic Packard design. It would be folly to attempt radical changes in the fundamental grace of Packard lines. Nor would it be fair to Packard owners to depreciate their cars by changes which could add nothing to Packard beauty and distinction.

The famous Packard Straight Eight powerplant remains fundamentally the same. Improved and refined, with its nine-bearing crankshaft, it continues to provide the utmost in smooth, flexible flow of power—unequaled motor car performance.

But in the new and exclusive Packard Shock Absorbing System, Packard offers the greatest recent engineering advance in the industry. This remarkable combination of inventions provides a new driving ease and riding comfort that cannot be explained in words.

To say that the Packard is now the easiest riding car in the world—as well as the safest—is a bold statement, but one which you will enthusiastically confirm after your first ride.

When will you have your demonstration? When may we appraise your present car? If it is of average value you may own a Packard Eight without a cent of down payment and with but small monthly payments you will not find burdensome.

THE PACKARD CUSTOM EIGHT is priced from $3175 to $3850 at Detroit

THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE

20 Years Ago Today

The Foundry Department of the Wichita Falls Foundry and Machine Company began operations. The Daily Times of that date contained the following account:

"New Industry Is Prospering"

The first heat was made and the first iron castings taken in the foundry department of the Wichita Falls Foundry and Machine Company on Saturday afternoon, when some castings were made for the Henrietta and Southwestern Railway. Everything was in excellent working order and the castings came out in splendid shape, just as O. B. Cecil, the experienced and veteran foundryman at the head of this department, had expected they would, but much to his satisfaction, nevertheless.

The opening of the foundry department marks a step forward in the growth, not only for the company, but also in the industrial development of the city and it is confidently expected that the foundry will be kept busy and will become an important business here.

The Wichita Falls Foundry and Machine Company is one of the newest industries in Wichita Falls. When the plant located here several months ago, only three hands were employed, but now fourteen men are kept busy through as long hours as they care to work and even with constant additions to the working force it is found difficult to keep ahead of the work. And if the present rate of growth is maintained, the business will keep from thirty to forty men at work within less than twelve months.

The company has three departments—an up-to-date and well equipped machine shop, an iron and brass foundry and a supply department.

The machine shop is under the personal supervision of J. C. T. V. Christensen, president of the company. Mr. Christensen, before coming to Wichita Falls, had conducted a machine shop at Nacogdoches and also owned an interest in the Houston Iron Works and is a machinist of experience and ability.

W. A. Huper, secretary of the company, is at the head of the mill supply department. Mr. Huper, before coming to this city, had been in the employ of the F. W. Heitman company at Houston for a number of years and resigned a position as general storekeeper for the Frisco lines in Louisiana to become interested in the company here. In his department is carried a large stock of steam fittings, valves, oil grease cups, water gauges, belts, pulleys, shafting, boxing, set screws, washers and other gas, steam, machine and mill supplies. This stock has already saved many hours in delays from broken machinery in the mills and other factories around Wichita Falls.

Since the opening of the brass foundry many of these articles are being made here in Wichita Falls, and orders are being filled from mill men over a hundred miles distant.

O. P. Cecil, vice president of the company and the head of the foundry department, is a foundryman of more than 18 years experience and it is said that no foundryman in Texas is his superior. For a number of years he was foreman in the Southern Pacific shops at Houston. His department has only recently been placed in operation, but there is already enough work ahead to keep that department busy for many months.

Four railroads, the Wichita Falls and Northwestern, the Wichita Falls and Southern, the Acme, Red River and Northwestern and the Henrietta and Southern are patrons of the new industry here, and nearly every gin, oil mill, flour mill or other concern within a radius of seventy-five miles of Wichita Falls, has found the shops and foundry a convenience and the work so satisfactory that they are becoming regular patrons.

Only a small sum of money was expended by the chamber of commerce to secure the location of this industry here, and this money has been returned many times through the business brought here and the money put in circulation through the payroll.

The Wichita Falls Foundry and Machine Company has served the business interests of this city and section through the years. It has grown to be one of the city's major industries, fulfilling the vision of its founders and the prophesies of THE DAILY TIMES.

Its facilities have been expanded many times. Large additional investments have been made from time to time.

Twenty years ago but a small machine shop.

Today a large modern foundry and machine shop, equipped to do most any kind of work required in this territory. A seventy-two inch boring mill and an eighteen-foot planer are recent expensive installations.

SIMMONS HELD AS STURDY FOE

Cowboys Point to Upset Mighty Pony Team

Special to The Record News.

DALLAS, Oct. 9.—Having established themselves as one of the greatest elevens in the country by outplaying and holding the United States Military academy cadets to a one-point victory Saturday at West Point, the Southern Methodist Mustangs returned here today at 2 o'clock. They were met by hundreds of Texans, who paid tribute to the great Methodist team.

But for the Ponies there is nothing but work. After leaving the train Tuesday afternoon, Ray Morrison, the S. M. U. mentor, took his men directly to Jordan Ownby stadium, where they started the grind for the Simmons battle which will be held at Wichita Falls next Saturday. In turning their attention to the game with Frank Bridges' Cowboys, the Ponies are expecting one of the hardest contests on their schedule, which will be doubly hard coming so soon after the Cadet tilt.

In going to Wichita Falls the Mustangs will be received as if they were at home. Southern Methodist university has many friends and ex-students in that city, who, with the aid of many S. M. U students and Dallas rooters, will furnish ample support for the Ponies.

Ponies Ready for Fray

The few bruises that the Red and Blue warriors received in their moral victory over the Cadets will make them fight as demons to trounce the Cowboys, who have been pointing to the S. M. U game since it was scheduled.

Even though the ambitious Cowboys were defeated, 19 to 3, in their tilt with the T. C. U. Horned Frogs last Saturday, they will meet a battle scarred, train-ridden band of Mustangs. Coach Bridges, you can be sure, has a bag of tricks that he did not bring out Saturday against the Frogs.

Redman Hume, the galloping gazelle, probably will be Morrison's selection at quarterback. Hume, being undoubtedly the best running back in the conference, will easily show his supremacy over the rest of the players, with the possible exception of Sain, Cowbody quarter, who is touted as one of the best backs among the smaller colleges in Texas. The Wichita Falls people will be greatly interested in this sorrel topped speed demon of All-American possibilities. Hume will be the individual drawing card of the game.

Fincher At Right Half

Carlton Fincher, the Cumberland, Md., flash, who scored the first touchdown against the Army, will be doing duty as right half, while Love and Hopper will be the other two members of the backfield. Simmons will have a hard time in finding a backfield combination to equal this quartet.

In the line Simmons will have a star in Pierce, left tackle, who will be pitted against Roach, all-conference tackle last year and star Pony linesman. A personal battle will be waged by these two huskies. Watters and Schaerdel are likely to be Morrison's selection as wingmen, and will face Andras and Moore for the West Texans.

Captain Baccus will be at right guard, meeting the brawn of Jennings, the star left guard of the Simmons outfit. In Goodston Sellers, Simmons university has one of the sweetest kickers in the southwest. His dropkick from the 22-yard line Saturday saved the Cowboys from being whitewashed.

Powell Star Center

Malcolm Powell, playing his first year on the varsity squad for the Mustangs at center, is fast becoming one of the best centers in the conference. His work in the Army game was especially pleasing to the coaches and spectators. Golightly will face him in the center of the line.

Plans are being made by S. M. U. and Dallas supporters to charter a special train for the trip to Wichita Falls. This will be one of the feature trips of the season for the Mustang supporters. Many are expected to take advantage of the special rates which will be in effect over the week-end.

Army-Pony Contest Shown at Majestic

The valiant stand of an S. M. U. football team against the Army is graphically portrayed in a special news reel which is showing at the Majestic theater through Friday. The picture shows all the scoring in the brilliant 14-13 game, including Hume's 40-yard run for a touchdown on a fumble.

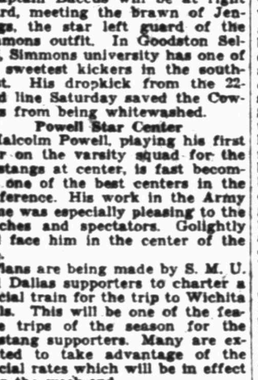

The news reel also shows pictures of the T. C. U.-Simmons game, in which the latter team fought hard and well. Simmons meets S. M. U. here Saturday.

Flashes of Texas Aggies' rout of Sewanee complete a most interesting news reel for grid fans.

Rickey Denies Snyder Will Manage Cardinals

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 9 (UP)—Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis Cardinals, denied today a rumor that Frank Snyder, manager of the Houston, Texas, Buffs, was under consideration as new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

CAM HENDERSON

ELKINS, W. Va., Oct. 9. (AP)—Cam Henderson, whose Davis and Elkins college football team opened the current season by defeating West Virginia university and the United States Naval academy, is the "Lone Eagle" of Mountain State football. Coach Henderson has no assistants as he takes the field each evening to tutor a squad of some 25 hard-working young athletes representing a student body of 300.

"Crafty Cam" is his own trainer and with Jennings Randolph, director of athletics, controls the entire athletic program at Davis and Elkins, a small college founded in the West Virginia mountains by the late Senators Henry Gassaway Davis and Stephen B. Elkins.

Henderson's rise has not been meteoric. For several years his team gradually have been growing in strength. In past years his elevens held West Virginia to 6 to 0 and 15 to 12 scores, meanwhile scoring on the Army and other strong eastern teams.

Henderson, who has been here six years, also has turned out several good basket ball teams. Last season Davis and Elkins won three games from West Virginia and defeated other strong teams. A journey into Florida in which eleven games were played and won was a feature of the season.

Henderson's teams are a mixture of boys from smaller West Virginia high schools and prep schools in various parts of the country.

Baylor-Arkansas In Conference Go

Texas and Aggies Battle Southern Foes

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 9. (UP)—Undismayed by injuries which have followed most of the Southwestern conference teams through their practice sessions thus far and which handicapped them in their games last week-end, all seven clubs entered the fourth week of practice in preparation for the games scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 13.

Only one game is scheduled that has any bearing on the conference standing. That is the Arkansas-Baylor tilt, at Texarkana. Meeting on neutral ground and each team without knowledge of the potential power of the other, the game promises to be full of surprise and at this time it is hard to predict the winner. The game will be colorful, to say the least. Arkansas plans to back her team to the man and a large delegation of Razorback fans will be on hand to give the Travelers a rousing send-off in their first conference game of the season. Baylor officials placed a ban on that school's chartering special trains to bring its students to the battle grounds. However, it is expected that a few students will avail themselves of the opportunity to see the formal inauguration of the conference race.

Ponies Play Here

At Wichita Falls, Southern Methodist university, fresh from an invasion of the Army stronghold at West Point, will miss two practice sessions that the Mustangs are badly in need of, especially in view of this game. Simmons, anxious for a berth in the Southwest conference, has four games scheduled this season with conference teams. Should the question ever arise as to why Simmons should not be allowed to enter the Southwest conference, Coach Bridges, of the Cowboys, is determined that it will not be a question of Simmons' ability to compete against those teams. The game will be as colorful as the Simmons-T. C. U. game last Saturday at Breckenridge since a great many of the players of both teams live in West Texas.

Texas university meets her ancient rival, Vanderbilt university, in Dallas, as the second football attraction of the State fair. Texas is touted to win the conference championship. So far, they have not met a team that has given Coach Littlefield a real test of the scoring ability of his Longhorns. But it is an established fact that Texas has the brightest outlook of any team in the conference—the team being composed for the most part of two and three-year veterans. Very little is known of Vanderbilt's strength this season, but if they are anywhere near the caliber of Vanderbilt teams that have invaded Dallas in former years—the game promises to be a battle from start to finish.

Centenary Formidable

Centenary college, already having run up large scores against teams they have played so far this season, will meet Texas A. & M., at College Station. The Aggies have one good point in their favor—at least it most assuredly against the Gentlemen from Louisiana. The Aggies are playing on their home field. It is against the moral, mental and physical ethics of the Farmers to go down to defeat in the shadows of their dairy barns and experimental buildings. Regardless of the outcome of the game, Centenary will know that they have been "through the mill" after Saturday's game.

The Rice Institute-Trinity game at Houston is expected to furnish additional data on the scoring ability of conference teams. A. & M. and Baylor have already met Trinity.

The remaining game on the schedule, the Texas Christian university-Austin college tilt, which will be played in Fort Worth is not expected to furnish any dope upset. The game for the most part is considered by other members of the conference to be merely a practice game to prime the Horned Frogs for their game the following Saturday with Texas A. & M.

Player Breaks Neck; Comes Back as Coach

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 9. (AP)—O. F. Freeman had his neck broken once, his collarbone twice, his nose thrice and his hand crushed at football, yet he is back on the gridiron, this time as a coach.

Freeman suffered his injuries while playing at Middle Tennessee State Teachers' college. He was paralyzed for 12 weeks after the neck fracture.

The injuries sealed his future as a football player, but it does not keep him from teaching the game to the Humes high school lads of Memphis.

BASKET RULE IS CLARIFIED

Regulation of Dribble Is Feature of New Code

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. (AP)—Though not restricting the dribble to a single bounce, an action taken last year and then rescinded after controversy, new basketball rules announced today for 1928-29 have considerable to say about regulating this spectacular feature of the game.

"A new clause is added (rule 15, section 9, under the head of personal fouls) which reads:

"A player shall not hold, trip charge or push an opponent whether or not either player has possession of the ball. If a dribbler charges into an opponent, or makes personal contact with an opponent, without an apparent effort to avoid such contact, a personal foul shall be called on the dribbler.

"If, despite the dribbler's effort to avoid contact, personal contact ensues, either player, or both, may be guilty; but the greater responsibility is on the dribbler if he tries to dribble by an opponent who is in his path."

This is designed to "emphasize the responsibility of the dribbler in connection with the fouls resulting from the dribble," says Oswald Tower, Andover, Mass., official interpreter of the rules.

Among other changes are provisions designed to penalize "guarding from the rear" by a personal foul, making it illegal for a player to capitalize his great height by tapping the ball and then catching it on two successive jump balls, and stating that "an unguarded player may hold the ball indefinitely in the court, but as soon as an opponent takes a position close by (say within a yard off) the player with the ball, the latter must get the ball into play."

The new code also makes it clear that a ball striking an official does not become a dead ball.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, ST. Louis, Oct. 9.—Dumas was all wrong about the "Three Musketeers." There are only two musketeers—Ruth and Gehrig.

And it ain't muskits. It's bats!

The Yanks took a turn for the worse today. They started to lose the ball game and were feeling fine. Suddenly, chills and fever started to chew them up and they became delirious.

Before the doctors could arrive they won the series.

Ruth then tied the record for home runs in series games. He smacked three, thereby stealing some of the thunder from the present titleholder, who, they say, is some bum named Ruth.

The Yanks presented Sherdel and Alexander with a nice birthday cake with nine bats on it.

Alex started to pitch after Sherdel was blown loose from his wharf. They should not wake an old man up this late in the season.

St. Louis is now deader than a stuffed sofa.

Trader Horn could not get a laugh in this town if his whiskers dropped off.

The break of the game came on the third strike that Sherdel tried to sneak over on Ruth.

After the argument had cooled off Sherdel grooved the next and the Babe looped it west of the great divide.

Then Gehrig came fourth and smacked the leather sour.

A little man by the name of Durst also poked a spoon in the chowder and came out with a big plum.

The fans saw plenty of baseball today. Five home runs in one game ain't so bad.

The Yanks proved that a champ is a champ on land or sea.

You didn't see Mussolini wise cracking with Gene Tunney, did you?

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE elevens have been eminently successful in intersectional football games to date this season. S. M. U. established the game as played in this section as being equal to football anywhere by playing the Army, a foremost eastern team, to a standstill, though beaten by a point. Texas Aggies crushed a southern eleven, Sewanee, 69 to 0. Sewanee, while rated as a foremost eleven in its section, rates near the top and the overwhelming triumph of Bible's men was indicative of further class of southwestern football.

A SOUTHERN TEAM, Mississippi, defeated a Southwest conference squad, Arkansas, 25 to 0. Two other southern elevens were victors in affairs with middle western and eastern teams. South Carolina beat Chicago and Vanderbilt defeated Colgate. Another southern eleven, Loyola of New Orleans, held Notre Dame, 12 to 0. The South has scored three victories to one defeat in its intersectional contests.

The east, with victories of Army over S. M. U. and West Virginia over Haskell, has two victories to the one defeat of Colgate. Four middle western teams have won intersectional games, including Indiana's triumph over Oklahoma and Chicago over Wyoming of the far west. Southwestern teams have won one and lost one. Oklahoma and Haskell of the Missouri valley district lost the only two intersectional games played by teams of that country. Wyoming has been the only team in its section to venture from within its own confines.

FRANK SNYDER may manage the St. Louis Cardinals. Though he led the Red Birds to the championship of the National league, there are rumors that Bill McKechnie will be deposed, as Rogers Hornsby was sold down the river after winning the championship of the world. Snyder was a success as leader of the Houston Buffaloes, and he showed sufficient managerial skill in winning league and Dixie series championships with a one-man pitching staff and somewhat faltering club to lend the belief he would be equally successful as boss of the Red Birds. Snyder has been a big league star; he would have the respect and confidence of his players, and if there were some who might resent the elevation of a "busher" to the managerial post, Frank is big enough and willing enough to enforce discipline with his fists.

A MAN WRITES IN, wanting to know if a ball hit to the shortstop is a fair ball. After scanning the rule books, wiring Judge Landis and confering with J. Alvin Gardner and Jim Galloway, I am able to answer, without fear of contradiction, that momentous and difficult problem. A ball hit to the shortstop IS a fair ball.

For it's simply a case of getting by Carleton Moulton, six-foot freshman, who usually is there with his 272 pounds to keep the openings blocked.

YANKEES TAKE FOUR STRAIGHT

Ruth's Three Homers Help Win Series Clincher

three circuit clouts in one world series game, established in this same Sportsman's park against these same St. Louis Cardinals two years ago.

Waite Hoyt was a far different pitcher from the invincible one who mowed down the Cards in the opening game at Yankee stadium. The star right hander of Miller Huggins' staff was touched for 11 hits and was constantly in trouble. He needed the Babe badly today and the Babe didn't fail him.

Ruth's Greatest

Of all Ruth's world series triumphs, this was unquestionably the greatest. He played upon the emotions of the rabid St. Louis fans as a master musician—Harpo Marx for instance—plays upon a responsive instrument. The Babe had the fans applaud him one moment, booing and hissing and hurling pop bottles at him the next, then cheering their heads off again in spontaneous appreciation of the game's greatest ball player.

When two Cards were out in the ninth and two were on base, the irrepressible Babe brought off the star fielding feature of the game. The gay-hearted old cripple came sprinting over back of third base and down along the left field boxes to spear a line drive, a foul from the bat of Frankie Frisch for the final out of the series, a fit ending to the spectacle.

The Yanks thus repeated their feat of winning the world's championship in four straight games, a feat they accomplished at the expense of the Pittsburgh Pirates a year ago. The St. Louis Cards were not as bad today as they had been in the three previous games of the 1928 series. This was a game they might so easily have won. But for the break in the seventh which disconcerted Sherdel beyond the limits of exasperation, the discomfited National league champions might not be scrubbing off a thoroughly applied coat of whitewash tonight.

Babe Takes Honors

The vote on world's series honors goes to Babe Ruth by a landslide with Lou Gehrig second. The big Dutchman's home run this afternoon gave him a new record for the number of runs driven in during a world series. In 1923, Bob Meusel drove in eight runs in six games; during this four-game series Gehrig knocked in nine, jumping on the plate with both feet as he scored after his long drive into Grand avenue.

The Babe and Lou were the happiest of a lot of Yanks who boarded their special train for New York tonight.

As for the Cards they were a disgusted, downcast lot and their manager, dour Bill McKechnie, was the saddest of the lot. Bill probably won't be managing the club next season.

Today's crowd was smaller than Sunday's but it warmed to the Cards with noisy tumultuous support as they went out into an early lead and bade fair to retain it.

Orsatti Stars

Ernest Orsatti was in center field in place of Taylor Douthit, and proved to be a ball hawk of the first order, galloping all over the place to snag Yank flies. Earl Smith was behind the bat, not quite as boisterous as before, but his usual aggressive self for all that.

The new combination worked well and went out in front where Sherdel's sinker ball was expected to hold it and the cowbells and fish horns sent up an incessant clamoring inning after inning.

Orsatti opened the third with a fly to center field which fell in front of Paschal for a double. Andy High beat out an infield hit and Frisch lifted a long sacrifice fly to Paschal, scoring Orsatti and the Cards were off in front.

Needless to say, Babe Ruth's first homer, a prodigious swat over the pavilion back of right field, evened matters momentarily in the fourth, but two Yank errors quickly put St. Louis ahead again.

Koenig Throws Wild

Earl Smith singled and Maranville forced him, the Rabbit going on to second when Mark Koenig hit a spectator in the 17th row with a peg in the general direction of first base. Walte Hoyt then made a perfect throw to second to catch Maranville a moment later. The only trouble was no one was there to catch the ball and the Rabbit scurried all the way home before the Yanks recovered it.

The Yanks, who had 11 men left on bases in addition to those scoring, missed a chance in the sixth when the first two men singled.

It was in the seventh that the lightning struck. And if ever lightning struck out of a clear sky, it was this afternoon at Sportsman's park. The shirt sleeved fans, basking in the sunlight and satisfaction of an impending victory, looked on in amazement.

With one out, Ruth allowed two sinkers to cut the plate and stood with his bat on his shoulder while Sherdel jerked a fast one over on a snap return from Smith.

Bam Is Gleeful

"No pitch," ruled his umpire, Pfirman, a National league arbiter, by the way. With a howl, Sherdel threw down his glove and started on the run for the plate, arguing as he went. Frankie Frisch and the other Cards gathered around, the three other umpires joining the discussion. Ruth stood by, clapping his hands gleefully. It took five minutes to disentangle the huddle and then Ruth hit a home run. Gehrig hit a home run. Meusel singled and Sherdel was taken out. Lazzeri doubled. Robertson was safe on a fielder's choice. Earl Combs made his first appearance in the series and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly.

These four runs, together with two homers, one by Durst and the Babe's third in the eighth, completed the day of St. Louis' discontent. The Cards got one of those meaningless runs in the ninth, with Walte Hoye eased up, when Smith singled and Martin, who ran for him, was allowed to go right around, practically unmolested.

And then the Babe came whooping in through the scattered pop bottles, hurled by the fans who were disappointed at the decision which decided the game in the seventh and stabbed Frisch's drive with one hand.

The last sight of the 1928 world series before the fans closed in and broke like a black wave over the infield was the Babe, running along beside the boxes, holding aloft the ball.

Watkins of Buffs Goes to Rochester

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 9 (AP).—Vic Keen, pitcher, and Pete Monahan, first baseman of the Rochester club of the International league, have been traded to the Houston club of the Texas league for George Watkins, outfielder. The trade was announced tonight by Warren G. Giles, president of the Rochester club.

The deal was completed in St. Louis today.

Two more Rochester players will go to Houston in the trade after the conclusion of spring training.

Keen pitched for the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals in the National league. He won 11 and lost 10 games this season.

Austin College Crushes Abilene Christians, 36-0

DALLAS, Oct. 9 (AP).—Scoring their initial touchdown within the first minute of play after a sustained march down the field, the Austin college Kangaroos trounced the Abilene Christian college Wildcats, 36 to 0, in their grid game here today. The Kangaroos stuck to straight football all the way. Two of their touchdowns were the result of recovered fumbles, another the result of a blocked Wildcat punt.

The eleven from Abilene threatened only once. Near the close of the second quarter they launched an overhead attack that carried them to the Kangaroos' 10-yard line, where the timer's gun caught them.

CUBS CAPTURE CHICAGO TITLE

Bears Trounce Sox, 13 to 2, In Decisive Game

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (AP).—Sheriff Blake pitched a seven-hit game today as the White Sox defense crumbled behind four pitchers and the Cubs won the city baseball title, taking the final and deciding game, 13 to 2.

The Cubs fell on George Connally and Young Ed Walsh in the opening inning for six runs, Grady Adkins, who hurled the Sox to victory yesterday, finally stopping the rally.

Adkins hurled fine ball until the fifth when four errors, coupled with five hits, a base on balls, a hit batsman and a stolen base scored six more runs. George Cox relieved Adkins and finished the game.

Blake held the Sox down with four widely scattered hits until the ninth when he let up long enough to permit Kamm and Hunnefield to score on three singles.

Hall Knocks Out Owens in Second

Cyclone's Infighting Again Stops Local Youth

The jinx that is usually fastened to a fighter who has been knocked out and engages in a return match with his conqueror was suffered last night by Country Boy Owens, local boxer. Owens was knocked out in the second round by Cyclone Hall of Childress in the feature bout of a ring card at Spudder park. Owens was floored three times in the first round and for the end of the mill in the second by ceaseless body punching of the Childress socker.

Hall weighed 152 pounds, an advantage of five pounds. They met several days ago here, Hall scoring a technical k. o. in the sixth round.

Howard Scott and Tommy Carpenter boxed eight fast rounds in an interesting go with honors about even.

It was a good night for Childress boxers and a bad one for the Owens boys. Bud Griffin, a stablemate and townsman of Hall, stopped Johnny Owens, a brother of Country Boy, in the first round.

Red Williams and Floyd Anderson scrapped four good rounds with little to choose and Billy Robinson bested Little Boy Blue, also in four rounds, in other bouts.

SCHOOL TRIES UNIQUE IDEA

Wisconsin Institutes 'Experimental' College

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 9. (UP)—"Guinea pigs" is the title applied by most University of Wisconsin students to the youths enrolled in that institution's experimental college.

If there is any derision prompting that name, it probably is due to jealousy, because these human guinea pigs are going through the process of college education without classes, teachers, lectures, examinations, notebooks and other conditions which might excite the envy of the "regular" students.

For the experimental college, which Prof. Alexander Meiklejohn, former president of Amherst college, has founded here by the grace of President Glenn Frank and the regents of the university, is an institution which seeks better ways of educating.

Two Years' Work

This college had an attendance of 119 last year, its first season. It offers only two years of work, answering for freshman and sophomore years in the university proper.

The primary purpose of the experimental college "is to demand that students shall take the lead in the making of their own education," explained Doctor Meiklejohn.

Students ordinarily construe their task as one of "learning," he said. Socalled "bad students" are quite indifferent to that learning, and even those termed "good students" devote energies chiefly to acquiring and remembering facts and opinions as long as the system requires them to do so.

Methods of the experimental college are a challenge to such conditions. Civilization, not subjects, are studied. Members of the faculty are titled "advisers" instead of "teachers." They live in dormitories with the students, assuring a sustained and intimate contact between the two groups. Classes give way to individual conferences between the adviser and a single student.

Individual Work

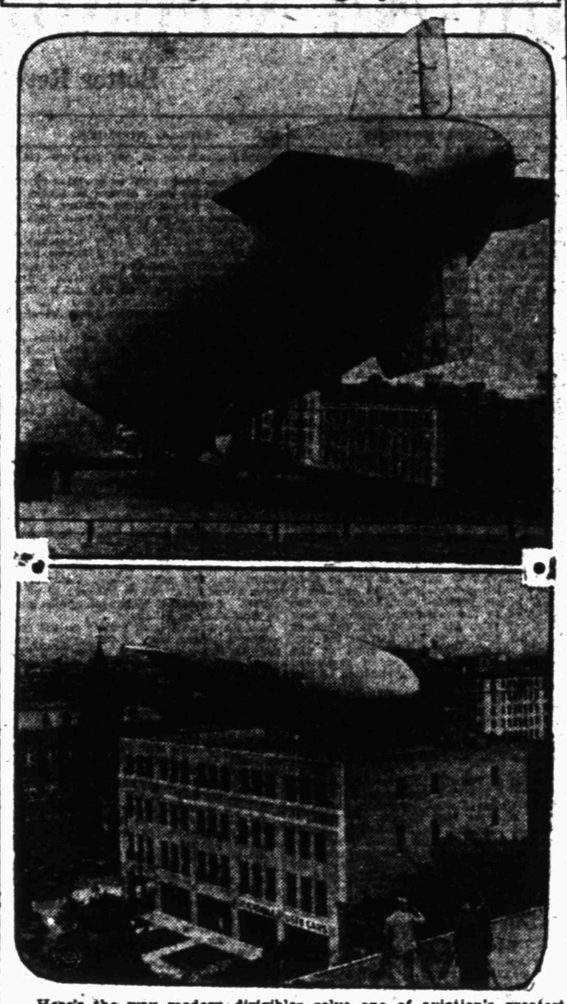

"Our experience thus far shows that the individual conference between one teacher and one pupil is and must be the cornerstone of our procedure," Prof. Meiklejohn said.

With the college having finished its first year and started its second, its founder declines to say whether the experiment is succeeding.

"The very nature of an 'experiment' forbids that at present," he said.

Results, however, have been gratifying, he admitted. Only two of the first year's enrollment were advised not to return. Another group of approximately 120 freshmen entered the college this year and the faculty has been doubled in numbers to care for both freshmen and sophomore groups.

Plenty of Parking Space

Here's the way modern dirigibles solve one of aviation's greatest problems—landing in a small space at low speed. At the top you see a closeup of the Goodyear "Puritan," second smallest of its type in the country, on the top of a four-story building in downtown Washington. Lower photo shows the craft as it came to rest, within half its own length, after two unsuccessful tries.

Old Gas Wells Used As Tanks

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 9. (AP)—Man is storing natural gas in nature's own "tanks"—the cavities far below the earth's surface.

Gas found in the Burkbank field of Oklahoma as petroleum companies seek a richer treasure—oil—is piped to old gas wells whose supply has been exhausted. The new gas is pumped into these old well, so the new wells whence it comes can be drilled deeper in the quest for oil and at the same time the "by product" of the oil enterprise saved.

The old wells, thus replenished, are sealed until winter, when the demand for gas in distant cities increases five-fold. The wells are then connected to pipelines as needed.

Little loss results from leakage. The pressure, ranging from 128 to 280 pounds a square inch when the wells are refilled, is reduced only about five pounds when they are opened again. A pressure of only six ounces is required for burning gas in a kitchen stove.

Nine old wells have held a half billion cubic feet of gas at one time. This supply was forced by pumps back into the "sand" which is really a porous rock containing cavities like the minute air sacs in lungs.

In landing, all planes shall keep a distance of 300 feet from other aircraft.
2. Pilots shall land and takeoff as far from the hangers or the parking space of aircraft as it is practicable.

Section 4. No person shall use the said airport as the base or terminal for the carrying on of commercial aviation or the carrying of passengers, freight or express, or for student flying, communications or other commercial purposes or transportation without first securing the permission of the said city manager or the person, firm or corporation operating such airport under contract with the city of Wichita Falls and paying the fees and charges prescribed for such privileges, the use of the airport, its facilities and for services rendered.

Section 5. No person shall carry passengers for hire or award, from, to and over or about the Kell field unless such person is using the airport as a permanent base, or shall have first secured permission from the city manager or the firm, person or corporation operating such airport under contract with the city of Wichita Falls, Texas, and shall have paid in advance the fees and charges prescribed.

Section 6. No person shall take or use any aircraft or any parts or tools thereof, owned, controlled or operated by any other person, while such aircraft, parts or tools are stored, housed or otherwise left on the said airport or within its hangars, without the written consent of the owner or operator thereof, or other satisfactory evidence duly presented to the field superintendent.

Section 9. Any permission granted by the city manager to use the said airport and its facilities, or to fly to, from or over the same, shall be at all times conditioned upon the assumption of full responsibility therefor by every person exercising or taking advantage of such permission. It shall be a further condition for the use of such airport and—or its facilities shall at all times release, hold harmless, and indemnify the city of Wichita Falls, the city manager and—or its agents and employes from any and all responsibility, liability, loss or damage resulting to any such person or caused by or on his behalf and incident to the manner in which the airport is operated, constructed or maintained or served from within or used from without. The use of such airport by any person for any purpose or the paying of any fees therefor, or the taking off or landing aircraft thereupon shall be itself an acknowledgment that such person accepts such privileges on the conditions herein set forth.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP).—Southern selling and liquidation attributed largely to disappointment over the failure of yesterday's crop figures to stimulate more general buying was considered responsible for declines from an opening advance in the cotton market here today. December contracts sold off from 18.53 to 18.92, or 19 points net lower and 40 points below the high price of yesterday. Closing quotations were the lowest of the day, with the market barely steady at net declines of 15 to 19 points.

The opening was firm at advances of 16 to 24 points during the first few minutes on covering and some commission house buying based on the bullish view of yesterday's crop figures, favorable reports from the cotton goods situation, and relatively steady Liverpool cables. The initial demand was soon supplied by southern selling, however, and the market turned easier during the middle of the day under liquidation by old longs, which appeared to be combined with local and western selling.

Reports of favorable weather for picking and marketing cotton in the South may have been contributing influence on the decline which followed, and toward the close there was a renewal of southern selling. October declined from 19.30 to 18.97, while March sold off from 19.15 to 18.73, or about 40 to 42 points from the high level of the morning. Some trade buying was reported during the earlier trading, but, according to local brokers, it was not so much in evidence later in the day and the absence of a more pronounced demand from that source was considered one of the factors on the decline.

The standard cloth statistics for the month of September, which were published before the opening, showed a decrease of 5.5 per cent in stocks of cloths on hand for the period and an increase of 37.7 per cent in unfilled orders. Private cables said the advance in Liverpool was due to covering, together with London and Bombay buying, and that the demand for cotton cloths was broadening, with a good business for India pending. Exports today were 191,125 bales, making 1,391,312 so far this season. Port receipts, 122,101. U. S. port stocks, 1,393,093.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 9 (AP).—The cotton market was active today and prices developed a downward trend despite a moderate demand. The easiness was attributed to hedge selling and selling by ring traders on expectations of a favorable weekly weather and crop summary tomorrow. December contracts, after trading up to 18.71, eased off to 18.30 and closed at 18.35, net 18 points lower. The general market closed barely steady at a net decline of 15 to 19 points.

Liverpool cables were 11 to 13 points higher than expected at the start here and first trades showed gains of 10 to 15 points in sympathy. Prices improved slightly after the start on figures of the New York Textile Merchants' association showing that sales exceeded production. December traded to 18.69, January 18.65 and March 18.59, or 13 to 16 points net up.

The higher prices attracted rather liberal hedge selling and selling by traders on the favorable weather in the belt which had been ignored earlier due to the publication of the government report. Expectations of a favorable weekly summary tomorrow added to the weakness. Although there were several minor rallies during the course of the late morning and early afternoon trading, prices tended downward and despite the covering that developed from time to time made new lows for the day in final trading, with December and January at 18.30 and March 18.23, or 37 to 41 points down from the early highs and 21 to 23 points under the previous close. The close was barely steady a few points above the lowest.

Receipts 122,619; for week 293,592; for year 2,326,775; last year 2,451,407. Exports 18,125; for week, 61,310; for year, 1,351,176; last year, 1,303,635. Stock, 1,400,156; last year, 1,936,104. Stock on shipboard, 169,274; last year, 124,393; spot sales, 60,322; last year, 33,326.

Jury Warns Against Spectacle Peddlers

WEATHERFORD, Texas, Oct. 9. (AP)—Turning aside from its customary recommendations, the Parker county grand jury recently warned the public against itinerant spectacle peddlers, whom the jurors allege have been charging exorbitant prices for glasses which do not fit.

"These peddlers are practically all violating the law in some form or other and are not capable of properly fitting glasses, we wish to warn against them so that the public may be prepared to protect itself against their fraudulent methods," a report signed by F. C. Varner, foreman of the grand jury, said.

Voluminous Buying in Important Spots Sends Stock Levels Higher

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service Financial Expert

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Shorts fared badly during today's stock market, the broadest advance in several weeks developing after it appeared as though prices were headed substantially lower. For the first few hours considerable profit-taking and short selling was in evidence and setbacks of several points were witnessed thorughout the list. Encouraged by their early success, the shorts renewed their attack in the hope of uncovering nervous liquidation, only to find themselves trapped as buying in volume appeared in pivotal issues.

Allied Chemical and Hudson Motors were exceptions to the general early trend, each withstanding a heavy selling. Naturally they led the advance, which in reality was inspired by the best buying in two weeks in General Motors. The latter's sponsors, as suggested here, stepped in when the Chrysler group temporarily halted activity. It is the purpose of the motors' interest to bring their favorite forward whenever the general market appears to require evidence of confidence on the part of the leading factors. General Motors directors meet within a few weeks and are expected to take action extremely favorable to the stockholders.

U. S. Steel Bought

Another stimulant to confidence was the renewal of reputedly strong buying in U. S. steel. Advance in this stock was helped by the expectation that the corporation's monthly tonnage statement, to be issued at noon tomorrow, will disclose a large gain in forward business. There is also the additional prospect that the forthcoming earnings report covering the first nine months of 1928 will likewise make a highly favorable showing. Chrysler was under pressure for a while as additional details of the reported new financing were received in the street. The financing, it was stated, may involve issuance of over a million new shares, at a price reported to be $65 a share. Some wonderment was expressed why Chrysler decided to make the price so low, less than one-half the present market level. Part of the proceeds of the stock sale is understood to be headed for promotion of a new line of Chrysler light trucks. The Hudson group continued active and expressed confidence that the issue can be placed at a level commensurate with its earning power and its relative value compared with other leading stocks.

Several sharp advances occurred in specialties. The most spectacular opening was that in United Cigar stores, in which a block of 30,000 shares changed hands at the highest price in months. A strong group allied with the leaders of the tobacco trade is active in this issue, anticipating announcement that an alliance of interests of the two leading tobacco chain store organizations has been effected. Victor Talking Machine was another outstanding issue, soaring to a new high for all time in expectation that one of its most important subsidiaries is planning a huge melon.

Radio Is Strong

Radio was also in demand, the buying coming from an English group which is anxious to secure a financial interest in the corporation because of its ambitious development program. Copper stocks, led by American Smelting and Anaconda, were firm, smelting achieving a new high for all time on buying attributed to insiders. Anaconda will benefit from the dividend declaration by Andes copper, one of its subsidiaries.

Oppenheim-Collins scored an impressive advance on buying which was traced to bankers for the company. This department store enterprise is enjoying the best year in its history and it is estimated that earnings for the current fiscal year should exceed $8 per share. With its small capitalization of only 200,000 shares, there is only a small floating supply of the stock available in the market. The record profits will probably induce the management to vote another extra disbursement to shareholders, according to the buyers. At present the stock receives $4 cash and a stock bonus. Accumulation continued in Best and Company, another department store concern reporting large increase in business.

Grain

CHICAGO REVIEW
By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Oct. 9. (US)—The October government report on grains issued at 2 o'clock today put a decidedly bullish complexion on the corn situation and furnished a hardly less influential incentive for an advance in wheat.

The estimate of the corn crop was 2,903,000,000 bushels. This is 28,000,000 bushels under the September government estimate and some 70,000,000 bushels under the average of the private estimates issued the first of this month.

On wheat the estimate of the total crop was 904,000,000 bushels, 2,000,000 more than the estimate last month. But a considerably larger increase was expected.

The emphatic bullish factor in the report is that it catches both the corn and the wheat markets in a soldout condition after big profit taking and short sales had driven prices down 2 cents for corn and 3 cents for wheat from the recent tops.

Both markets seem likely to open strong tomorrow morning and continue on the upgrade all through the session with shorts trying to get in and outside buying broadening out decidedly.

All the grains dragged lower in bull markets today, but the net losses for the day were not large in view of the bearish sentiment that prevailed, and all of them closed with a show of decided strength.

At the end wheat was ⅛c to ½c lower; corn was off ¼c; oats were off ⅛c to ¼c; rye was down ⅛c to 1¼c.

Corn gave an excellent account of itself. The low for the day on the December future, made a few minutes after the opening, was only three-quarters of a cent under the previous close. As the session advanced the market slowly came back and regained most of its early loss.

Trade from the outside was very light. The impending government report was taken as a warning signal to keep out of the market until it was issued. But local traders pounded corn during most of the session. They got nowhere.

Quite aside from any consideration of the government report the corn market looked to be in a very strong position, and seemed not unlikely to begin another and decided advance tomorrow.

Wheat weakened after the opening today and worked down to $1.17⅛ for the December future with the bears on top of it. But at around the $1.18 level it met the support that has of late invariably come into the market on declines.

Prices stiffened up and the close looked strong.

The wheat market looked at the end to be in a sound position for the start of a good advance, increase in public buying tomorrow, if that develops, may be enough to start short covering which could lift the market upward with considerable impetus.

In the cash market wheat was 1c to 2c off; corn was 1c to 3c off; oats were steady to ½c off; rye was 1c to 1½c off; barley was 1c to 3c off.

The offer would mean 80 cents a barrel. The price quoted is way under Mid-Continent crude schedules.

The Henshaw's well was deepened 19¼ feet to 2119¼ feet during the past week, and increased to 305 barrels an hour, and making it Howard county's largest well. It is now pinched in to 500 barrels a day, pending erecting of new storage tanks. A Paramount news reel of the football game between S. M. U. and West Point is being shown at the Majestic theater through Friday, according to an announcement made by Hans Smith Tuesday.

Collegians have captured the popular imagination — there's no way of getting around that fact. And youth is taking its fling in the theaters as elsewhere. The college spirit rules the stage and the Keith-Orpheum Interstate vaudeville bill at the Majestic for Thursday and Friday will feature Eddie Pardo's company of co-eds.

Emil Jannings in "The Patriot" is really superb. It is being shown today for the last time.

The inimitable Will Rogers comes to the Garden theater today and Thursday in "The Texas Steer." The picture gives Will plenty opportunity to throw the lariat and do his masticating stunt. And what would Will Rogers be with those two attributes absent?

"Diamond Handcuffs" with Conrad Nagel and Eleanor Boardman plays today at the Olympic for the last time. The picture shows the trail for a missing diamond of India through a series of escapades and attractive settings.

Newlin Suspects' Kin Faces Jury

Benight, cook in the Newlin cafe, who is charged with accessory after the fact in the murder, were placed on the stand, either by defense or state attorneys. Benight is alleged to have assisted Miller in placing Collier's body on the railroad track after the fight at the cafe.

Tells of Wounds

An examination of Collier's body after the train crash revealed two bleeding wounds, either of which could have caused death, according to testimony entered by H. B. Estes, Memphis undertaker, who took charge of the body after the wreck. Roy Brown, son-in-law of Emmitt Miller; Dewey Tucker, Newlin filling station owner, and Alton Elliott, farmer, all defense witnesses, testified they saw the bleeding body of Collier after the crash.

Details of the alleged encounter between Collier and the Miller brothers, similar to those related by previous witnesses, were told by Oscar Nelson and Earl Murphy, both of Newlin.

They repeated testimony offered late Monday afternoon by Temple Mullins, Tom Nelson and Woodrow Ballard, also of Newlin, who said that Collier was struck by a bottle, and not with a man's fist. Dr. A. M. Shelton of Estelline entered further testimony regarding the condition of Collier's body.

The case may reach the jury late Wednesday, Judge Fires indicated.

Legionnaires Hold Parade

under the burning rays of sunshine were not the serious faced boys who went to encounter the grimness of war more than 10 years ago.

Smiles lighted the faces of these men who once stood knee deep in the mud of the trenches and few made any attempt to keep step with the strains of martial music that filled the air. Instead, they passed by in none too perfect file, shouting greetings to friends in the vast audience which crowded every available platform and peered down from windows of office buildings in the business district, or engaged in good humored raillery with San Antonio citizens about their weather.

As varied as the uniforms they wore were the tunes which post bands blared as the column moved past clicking cameras. Some played military music and others, like Wisconsin and California, filled the air with notes of their state song. Marchers, behind them picked up the words and sang lustily.

Four regimental bands from Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, played "Over There," and others chose popular numbers.

The Kentucky delegation bore tobacco leaves, Californians tossed oranges from two trucks to eagerly outstretched hands, Iowa carried stalks of tall corn, and western atmosphere was provided by Wyoming's group, dressed as cowboys and cowgirls, who fired pistols into the air.

SMITH MEETS WITH LEADERS

Nominee Begins Invasion Of Solid South

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP).—Governor Smith arrived here late today from Albany for a 30-hour stay during which he will confer with Democratic leaders before the start of his campaign trip into the South and border states.

The campaign sally of the presidential nominee will mark an unusual campaign procedure for a Democratic standard-bearer with his invasion of the "solid south." Uusally Democratic presidential candidates have not entered that section. The governor's trip will, however, be only through two southern stafes—Virginia and North Carolina — and he will make no speeches and only brief stops at five cities for the purpose of rear platform appearances.

Invades Tennessee

The nominee then will invade Tennessee for conferences with party chieftains in two cities. At Louisville, Ky., he will deliver the seventh speech of his campaign over a nation-wide radio hookup. His itinerary from the Kentucky city has not been formulated.

At his daily press conference, held on the train as it speeded from Albany to New York, the governor declared no definite conference or other plans were arranged during his stay in New York. It was indicated, however, that Franklin D. Roosevelt would be available to discuss at length the national and state campaign affairs with Governor Smith.

Raskob On Hand

John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, with other leaders from national headquarters, was on hand to confer with the nominee.

Governor Smith, however, told newspapermen he "wanted tomorrow for myself" and refused to set a definite time for any engagements, including the press conference. "I have to go to the dentist," he explained, adding that the reporters would have a "ball and chain" around him for the next 10 days.

During the press conference on the way down the Hudson, Governor Smith too cognizance of statements of his opponents — Herbert Hoover, Republican presidential candidate, and Senator Curtis, vice presidential nominee, questioning whether he had read Mr. Hoover's statement on Muscle Shoals. The governor said he had not but asked what it contained.

Control Is Thing

"He says the government should continue its ownership of the plant but he says nothing about government control," he was informed.

"That seems to be the important thing," the governor replied with reference to government control. "The Republican party in this state never contemplated the sale of the St. Lawrence river project, but they did seriously consider leasing it for 50 years and only were prevented from doing it when the people voted overwhelmingly against such a thing."

C-C Division Will Discuss Transportation

The motor truck situation in the Wichita Falls trade territory will be discussed at a called meeting of the executive and transportation committees of the manufacturers and jobbers' division of the chamber of commerce Wednesday morning, according to J. W. Chatham, traffic and industrial manager of the chamber of commerce.

A special meeting of the division also was announced for October 16 at a meeting Tuesday morning at the chamber of commerce. The Tuesday meeting was presided over by R. E. Penick, chairman.

Speakers on the program were Mr. Penick, Charles I. Francis, Paul Putty, Roy B. Gaston, Sydney Gaines and Mr. Chatham.

City to Deliver $250,000 Bond Issue to Buyers Here Nov. 1

Wichita Falls municipal bonds totaling $250,000, sold Monday night by the city council jointly to Garrett and company of Dallas and the Illinois Merchants Trust company of Chicago, on the basis of par for a 4.58 per cent bond or .993 for a 4.5 per cent bond, will be delivered to the buyers Nov. 1, it was announced at the Memorial auditorium Tuesday.

P. B. Garrett of Dallas, buyer for the two purchasers, gave the city a cashier's check for $5,000 down payment to guarantee taking the bonds and as evidence of the good faith of his company, according to city officials.

The net price received by the city for the bonds was said by W. E. McBroom, city clerk, to be the second highest sum ever received by Wichita Falls for a bond issue. The price was considered especially good in view of the present money market and in view of the fact that the federal government is offering an issue of 4.75 per cent United States treasury certificates at par. This is a considerably higher interest rate than is being paid by this city for its money. One bid, received from a Cincinnati company, offered par for the bonds if the city would make them 5 per cent bonds.

Chapman and Cutler, attorneys, are examining the proceedings and all phases of the issue for the purchasers. As soon as they have completed their work, the entire transaction will be reviewed by the attorney general of Texas for its regularity and legality. The buyers are having the bonds engraved for printing so they will be ready as soon as other work in connection with the issue is completed.

Court to Receive Papers In Electra Election Contest Today

Citations in quo warranto proceedings asking that the name of W. H. Coffman, Democratic nominee for justice of the peace at Electra, be barred from the November election ballot, will be forwarded to Judge W. W. Cook in 78th district court Wednesday, Justice of the Peace E. C. Wilson of Electra, announced Tuesday night.

Wilson asks the court to bar Mr. Coffman's name because, he alleges, the nominee has announced his intention "to several parties" to oppose certain Democratic nominees in the general election. Wilson was defeated for renomination to the office in the primaries.

In his petition filed in the district clerk's office Tuesday, Wilson declares Mr. Coffman is not eligible for office as justice of the peace because "he intends to vote other than which he pledged himself to do." He points out Mr. Coffman was nominated at an election with the party pledge printed on the ticket and that he is "duly bound to support nominees" of the Democratic party.

Norris Speaks At Auditorium

who spoke in favor of Governor Smith and the Democratic ticket. Considerable time was also devoted to criticism of the local newspapers for "refusing to print the truth in regard to the campaign."

The speaker offered $200 to the local afternoon paper if it would publish returns of the presidential straw vote as made by the Literary Digest.

"Al Smith got John Jacob Raskob, a wet Republican, and turned over the Democratic party to him. And Raskob answered, 'I accept this place to take charge of the Democratic party to relieve America of the damnable affliction of prohibition.' And now Raskob and Al Smith have had a falling out, but I'll bet the afternoon paper of Wichita Falls has not mentioned that fact."

"Then there are those people who say that they will stay within the Democratic party even though their candidate is 'wet,' that it can't be helped and that they don't intend to 'bolt.' Well, that reminds me of the lion and the lamb lying down together, with the lamb inside the lion!"

The speaker cited the states and religions which Hoover would carry, naming the corn belt as solid for Hoover because, the speaker said, "all that Al Smith and his 'whiskycrats' know of the corn belt is corn liquor." Smith saw corn growing for the first time on his visit to Oklahoma and showed his knowledge of agriculture by signifying his intention of increasing the size of the acres, Norris told his audience.

The women of the nation will vote three to one against Smith and the mothers of the country will raise the ratio to four to one, the speaker pointed out, as he painted a graphic picture of the wrecking of American homes by vesting the "whisky" ring with the supreme power of the country. Al Smith adherents have failed to obtain women to carry on his campaign, he said, this being notably true in Tarrant county where the Al Smith women as yet have no leader.

Charles Nolen was named chairman of entertainments of the Wichita club at a meeting of the house committee of the club Tuesday. Mr. Nolen was also elected to membership in the house committee at the meeting.

Whether this plan will call for appointment of a special department with a chief of detectives, he said he could not say.

The present plan, he said, calls for the expenditure of about $500 and there may be other improvements made as work on the project progresses. Four bids, it was stated, were submitted for the remodeling job.
