Volume XXXIX.

Junction, Kimble County, Texas, Friday, December 8, 1922.

Number 33.

TWO COUNTIES HAVE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Kimble and Edwards Counties Teachers Will Meet December 18 to 22, at Rocksprings
This Year, and Junction Next Year.

A program of the joint Teachers' Institute has reached here and shows that most of the teachers of this county have been placed on the program for discussion of school problems.

The Institute will open Monday morning, December 18, with an invocation by Rev. P. S. Connell and an address of welcome by C. L. Hufstetler, followed by a response by Prof. Clyde V. Cochran, Superintendent of the Junction High School. Judge Baker of Kimble County is on for an address in the afternoon of the first day.

The combining of the teachers' institutes of the two counties will have many advantages. Both counties have a limited number of teachers, thus making a full program difficult to arrange. This feature will be eliminated in the meeting of the teachers from both counties. Again, it will give the teachers of the two counties that are so closely associated in every way, an opportunity to meet each other and to arrange a bigger educational program for this part of the State.

The programs were printed by the Leader and have the following statement from the County Judge of Edwards County:

"The people of Rocksprings extend a hearty welcome to all visiting teachers, and express the wish that the short visit be one of pleasure and profit to every teacher.

"A representative of the State Department of Education will be present for one day of the institute, while efforts are being made to secure the services of one or more good lecturers or institute workers from one of the State Normals. However, it is expected that much of the work during the week will be done by the teachers assembled; and they are earnestly requested to make diligent preparations for the work assigned. Each teacher is requested to secure a copy of Norsworthy and Whitney's 'Psychology of Childhood', which may be had of the Southern School Book Depository, at Dallas, Texas, for $1.80.

A. P. Allison."

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Bailey and their niece, little Miss Frances O'Reilly, of the Ingram community, were here last Thursday, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. Wilkinson.

Car Turns Over on Curve Near Dunk Ranch.

Last Sunday afternoon while Mrs. Hankins and Misses Lois and Blix and Miss Lottie Heyman were returning from the A. & M. and Texas foot ball game, the car in which they were riding, turned over on one of the curves near the Dunk Ranch, about eighteen miles out on the Kerrville road. Miss Blix was driving, and was only going at an ordinary speed, but just as they were rounding the curve one of the tires blew out, causing the driver to lose control of the car, which turned completely over and on its side. The top was torn up and the radiator and windshield broken, but aside from a few minor sprains and bruises no one was hurt.

Local District Inspector to Remain Here Another Year

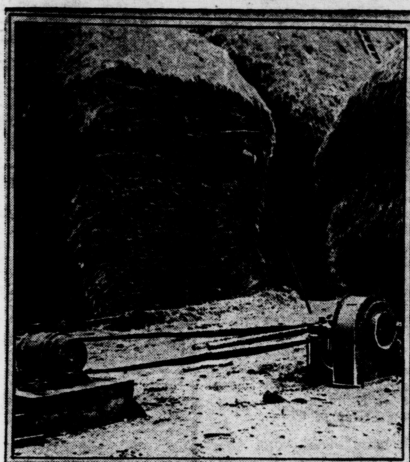

A letter from Chief Inspector Olen Graves, of the State Livestock Sanitary Commission, conveys the news that our District Cattle Inspector, Willis Mason, will be stationed here another year. This will be good news to the many friends of Mr. Mason. He has made a fine record as an inspector, that has been satisfactory to the Commission and to the counties which comprise his district.

Edwards County was added to this district which gives Mr. Mason charge of Kimble, Menard, Sutton and Edwards Counties.

Local Hotel is Filled.

Ordinarily this is a "slack" time with the hotels, but not so in Junction this week. Mr. Roe of Houston came for a few days, and asked for accommodations at the Becker Hotel. All the rooms were full. The visitor insisted that Mrs. Becker allow him to stay for meals, and when she agreed to do this, he stretched his tent near the hotel and is now enjoying the good meals that the Becker Hotel is noted for.

Junction needs more hotel accommodations. The Becker Hotel is one of the advertisers of this paper and a full house is found there most of the time, and more and more guests are patronizing the "Hotel Where You Feel at Home."

HAY MAKING WITHOUT SUNSHINE.

An English farmer, Mr. R. Borlace Matthews, has installed a device on his 600 acre farm at Greater Felcourt, East Grinstead, Sussex, England, that has made it possible to get good sweet hay in perfect condition without the sun. Photo shows some of the hay made without the aid of sunshine, also part of the electrical equipment used to drive the fans.

Car Tax Notice Appearing Last Week Was in Error.

Last week a news item on the front page stated that the annual motor vehicle license tax was due on the first day of December and that on account of the plates being late, that the time would be extended to December 15th in this county. This information was furnished us by Sheriff Taylor and published at his request. This item has resulted in quite a bit of confusion to the people owning cars and the further fact, that during last week a number of persons were informed on the streets and at the several garages by some one outside the Sheriff's office that the 15th of December was the time limit, caused a number of car owners to pay license fees Saturday.

We regret the fact that we did not look the matter up before publishing it, and in order to be relieved of any responsibility for a decision in the matter, we give below the law as it is printed, and as the statutes are very clear on the subject, no comment need be made. This is the latest revised statutes, including the acts of the 37th Legislature, showing that the tax is due and payable on January 1st, each year:

Art. 7012 1-2. In order to provide funds to effectuate the provisions of this act on and after January 1, 1922, and annually thereafter on and after the first day of January, every owner of a motor vehicle, tractor, trailer or semi-trailer or motor cycle, in this state shall file in the office of the county tax collector of the county in which he resides or in which the vehicle he owns is being operated, on a blank provided by the State Highway Department, an application for the registration of each motor vehicle or motor cycle owned or controlled by him.

Art. 7012 1-2 b. Registration number to be attached to motor vehicle; display seal. A license number plate or pair of license number plates, at the discretion of the State Highway Commission, hereby designated as State license numbers, bearing the license number assigned therefor, shall be issued for every motor vehicle being registered for the calendar year beginning January 1, 1923, or being registered for the first time in Texas subsequent to the year 1923.

Art. 7012 1-2 c. Time of registration; duration; apportionment of fee. On and after January 1st, 1918, registration for motor cycles and motor vehicles, under this act shall begin on the first day of January of each year and end with the 31st day of December; and all applications for registration of motor cycles and motor vehicles filed on and after January 1, and before March 31st of any year shall be required to pay the annual fee.

The Junction school dismissed for Thanksgiving on Thursday and Friday last week. A number of the teachers attended the foot ball games at Brownwood and Austin.

COUNTY OFFICERS TO QUALIFY JANUARY 1ST

Law Passed by 37th Legislature Changes Date
From December 1, to January 1, as Date
When New Officers Take Charge.

Considerable discussion of the date when newly elected County Officers will take charge of their respective offices is being heard. The 37th Legislature passed a law providing that the date be changed from the 1st day of December to the 1st day of the following January. Heretofore the county officers took charge at the end of the fiscal year, but in passing this law the legislature failed to change the date for the ending of the fiscal year, and quite a bit of extra reporting and extra work is necessary on this account.

Those officers who receive fees as all or part salary will have to make two reports, according to a decision of Assistant Attorney General Bruce W. Bryant, rendered recently.

"Under the provisions of Ch. 45, General Laws, passed at the Regular Session of the Thirty-seventh Legislature, and under Sec. 17, Art. 16, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, all county and precinct officers, now in office, will continue in office until January 1, 1923, and thereafter until their successor shall have qualified. Such officers as are affected by the 'fee bill' should make an annual report on December 1, 1922, as required by Art. 3896, K. S., 1911, and another report, when they go out of office, covering that part of the fiscal year, served by them, beginning December 1, 1922.

"The amount of fees a county or other officer whose fees are affected by the 'fee bill' may retain for services rendered as such officer between December 1, 1922, and the time his successor qualifies can not be determined until the close of the fiscal year ending November 30, 1923.

"All county officers as well as all justices of the peace and constables serving in cities of more than twenty thousand inhabitants, will be entitled to receive as compensation for official services rendered for that part of the fiscal year beginning December 1, 1922, and ending when their successor shall have qualified, such proportional part of the fees accruing to the office for the fiscal year beginning December 1, 1922, as the time of their service bears to the entire year."

"The policy and purpose of the law in dealing with compensation of such officers makes the "fiscal year" the unit of time for which such officers are to be paid. Each officer is to be paid in accordance with the time he served and each officer is entitled to receive his proportional part of the annual earnings and that regardless of the amount earned during his tenure of office for such fractional part of the year."

Weather Report for Last Month

November of this year was much warmer than November of last year, and had considerably more rainfall, as is shown by the reports of E. Hokekamp, local observer for the Department of Agriculture, printed below:

November, 1921:

Warmest day was the 13th, with a maximum of 88 F.; coldest day was the 21st with a minimum of 24 F. During the month there were twelve days on which the thermometer registered freezing or below. Rainfall for the month was only 1-10 of an inch which fell on the 28th.

November, 1922:

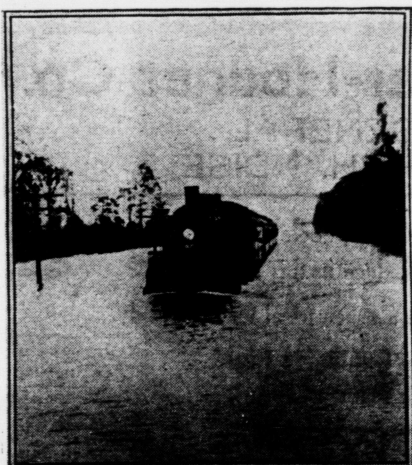

Warmest day was the 4th, with a temperature of 85 F.; coldest day was the 20th with a minimum of 26 F. During the month there were eight days on which the thermometer registered freezing or below. During the month 1-40-100 inches of rain fell, as follows: on the 5th, 65-100; on the 16th, 53-100, and on the 17th, 22-100. In 1921, a killing frost fell on the 19th, and in 1922, on the 20th.

Why Stamp Out the Sheepmen?

The following appeared in last week's El Dorado Success:

We understand that C. C. Doty has been appointed sheep scab inspector for Schleicher County, and from street reports an inspector is badly needed. Other counties appear to be affected also; a united effort by all should be made to stamp out the scab, and especially the sheepmen."

Now, Brother Wright, just because you have a fine farming country up your way, you should not want all the ranchmen to leave. We are glad to learn that you have the services of Mr. Doty in this important work.

THE QUITTER

When you're lost in the Wild, and scared as a child,
And Death looks you bang in the eye,
And you're sore as a boil, it's according to Hoyle
To cock your revolver and ... die.
But, says the code of Man: "Fight all you can,"
And self-dissolution is barred.
In hunger and woe, oh, it's easy to blow ...
It's the hell-served-for-breakfast that's hard.

"You're sick of the game?" Well, now that's a shame.
You're young and you're brave and you're bright.
"You've had a raw deal!" I know, but don't squeal,
Buck up, do your damndest, and fight.
It's the plugging away that will win you the day.
So don't be a piker, old pard!
Just draw on your grit; it's easy to quit;
It's the keeping-your-chin-up that's hard.

It's easy to cry that you're beaten ... and die;
It's easy to crawl and crawl;
But to fight and to fight when hope's out of sight;
Why, that's the best game of them all!
And though you come out of each gruelling bout
All broken and beaten and scarred,
Just have one more try ... it's dead easy to die.
It's the keeping-on-living that's hard.

—Robert W. Service.

Community Paper Always Kindly and Wholesome.

After the confusion of the front page of a great daily with its medley headlines, screaming tragedies and disasters innumerable, it is a great relief to pick up a copy of the little old country paper. Its news may not seem so diversified and so broad, but it is at least more peaceful and friendly. It tells of you, of folks and things that you know and in this fact lies its real appeal. Most people are interested in themselves and things that confront them in the world. This is why the brief and perhaps unimportant items in the home paper hold more real interest than all the sensations of the entire world reeking from the pages of the great dailies.

When rural routes and fast mail service made it possible for the farmer to get his daily paper a short time after it left the city, predictions were freely voiced that the country newspaper would rapidly decline and pass away. But this prediction did not prove true. Rural routes have been established everywhere for more than twenty years, and the country paper is more popular than ever before. And unless human nature undergoes a radical change the position of the good country paper will become more secure with advancing years.

When people cease to be interested in themselves above every thing else then the country paper will gather dust unread. But this day will never come. And it is this trait of human nature that makes secure the popularity of the small paper. The great daily can furnish the world news, but the country paper alone can bring the thousand and one little stories of the life of the community, stories that the daily doesn't want and couldn't get if it did want them.

Editorial writers evince alarm at the indifference with which the American public read the story of 50,000 lives being snuffed out by a tidal wave at Swatow, China. But that was only because the tragedy was far away and the whole thing seemed vague and unreal. Let Plain Talk tell of an accident at Parrotville, Del Rio or Crosby that snuffed out the lives of two people, and the same people that glanced listlessly at the story of the great Chinese disaster would read with avidity and with real sympathy the account of the tragedy near home.

Another thing which the country newspaper has that is lacking in the great daily is a distinctive personality. The country newspaper is always a one or two man affair and it therefore bears the indelible stamp of individuality. In the days of Greeley and other great editors the daily papers too bore the impress of personality, but that day is gone. Metropolitan newspapers are now in the hands of corporations who often follow public opinion instead of shaping it. Large and ever-changing news and editorial staffs have removed the last vestige of the personal touch. The editor of a daily is a person who knows everybody, but whom nobody knows.

This very anonymity helps to make the metropolitan papers heartless. Secure in his office the city editor of a great daily keeps his finger on the pulse of the city and at the first breath of scandal, unleashes a bunch of steely-eyed young men who like wolf hounds, drag forth the unsavory details before the eyes of entire city.

With the country editor it is different. He has no army of reporters to set on your track and hunt out your secrets. Himself both editor and reporter, and daily coming in intimate contact with his readers, he weighs more carefully the news that he prints and many stories are suppressed because they would "hurt some one and do no one good."

So the country newspaper alone still enjoys the sincere friendship of the public. It is still the only paper that the people feel has a real interest in them; it is the first to announce their arrival in the world and their most eloquent eulogist at death. And it will remain the paper that everybody grabs for first, no matter what news sensation the city daily is shrieking. —Newport (Tenn.) Plain Talk.

Care of Bred Ewes During Winter Months.

There are three important things for the club members to bear in mind in caring for his bred ewes during the fall and winter; viz: Exercise, shelter and feeding.

Here in Texas the winters are mild enough to permit the ewes to get out in the fields almost every day. In case they are handled in this manner, they will get plenty of exercise. It is a mistake to shut up the bred ewe in a small pen and keep her there for any length of time. The ewe will be stronger and her lambs when dropped, will be stronger, if she is kept in the field and given a chance to rustle for some of her feed.

A good shed should always be available, so that the ewe may be sheltered from rain or snow and from the northers. If any sheep are forced to remain out in the storm and the fleece becomes wet, it is quite likely that pneumonia and death will result. At lambing time, especially, it is important to have a good dry shelter, free from draft, as the lambs will chill very easily when first dropped.

The feeding of sheep during the fall and winter, is usually a very easy matter in this State. Owing to the mild climate, there is usually good pastures all during the season. In the south, fall oats and wheat make ideal pastures for sheep, and in addition, there is always a lot of feed left in the harvested field that they can pick up. If there is enough of such pasturage for the ewes, they will keep fat and will not require any grain until just before lambing. Beginning thirty days before lambing the ewes should be given about one-fourth of a pound of cottonseed meal a day and from one-half to one pound of corn or oats a day, depending upon her condition. Bran is a most excellent feed for ewes and if it is possible to secure it, it might be substituted for the cottonseed meal. In case the pasture is scanty and the ewe is not in good condition, some hay, such as alfalfa, Johnson grass, or prairie hay, and perhaps a little grain should be added early in the season. It is very easy to determine whether or not the ewe is gaining flesh, and if she is not, then a little more feed of some sort should be added. Care should be taken, however, not to feed more than one-half pound of cottonseed meal per day, to a mature sheep at any time. Finally, be sure that the ewe always has plenty of fresh, clean water and that salt is kept before her at all times.—By Sheep Specialist, Extension Service, A. and M. College of Texas.

Sheriff of Real County
Tried at Rock Springs.

A case of unusual interest was tried in Justice Woodriddle court here in Rock Springs Monday, in which Sheriff M. M. Casey of Real County and his two deputies, Avril Bonner and Oscar Moffitt were charged with robbery with firearms, with taking a pistol scabbard from A. N. Welch, who ranches near Vance.

It seems that Mr. Welch and T. T. Waddell were passing along a road near Vance in a car, when they met the three officers in a car. The officers suspected them of having contraband and stopped them, and on searching the car found a pistol, which they confiscated. Mr. Welch was wearing a pistol scabbard and they also took this. Mr. Welch proceeded to prosecute the three officers for taking his scabbard.

As the affair was alleged to have taken place in Edwards County, this examining trial was held before Justice Woodriddle here. L. Olds of Uvalde was here as attorney for plaintiff, and A. E. Aiken was attorney for the defendants. After hearing all of the argument, Justice Woodriddle put defendants under $200 bond each to await the action of the grand jury. A large number of Leakey and canyon country people were here in connection with the trial of the case.—Edwards County Leader.

Aftermath of the Interesting
Comanche-Cleburne Game.

There has been no lack of interesting features connected with the Comanche-Cleburne foot ball game of last Friday. First, there was the natural resentment felt by all of Comanche at the implication on Cleburne's part that Comanche had a habit of treating any guest badly, competitor or what not. This was voiced by Mayor Eanes in a statement in the Ft. Worth Star Telegram of last Sunday in which he protested against the rangers who accompanied Cleburne.

Previous to the game the Ft. Worth High School authorities had asked Comanche to furnish affidavits as to the men Cleburne played, and on Tuesday the papers announced that Ft. Worth through her Superintendent, Prof. Moore, had filed charges with the Interscholastic League against Cleburne on account of their playing alleged ineligible men. This was followed by a declaration from Cleburne that she would fight the charges to the last ditch. The end is not yet, and we shall see what we shall see.—Comanche Chief.

Resolutions by McCullough
Co. Commissioners' Court.

On this, the 27th day of November, A. D., 1922, came to be considered the recommendation of the Brady Chamber of Commerce, recommending a committee of business men to assist and advise the commissioners' court in the work of financing and building the roads in the proposed road district in the event the bond election this day ordered should carry:

And, whereas, the commissioners' court of McCullough County, in all their actions and at all times welcome, and are more than glad to counsel with, and receive the help and advice of those whom they serve;

Be it therefore resolved, that the committee recommended by the said Chamber of Commerce, to-wit: W. D. Crothers, J. A. Holton, C. H. Vincent, W. K. McGonagill, E. A. Baze, Geo. Scott, T. B. Cobb, Joe Snodgrass and Paul Allen, be declared satisfactory to the said court as a committee, to be known as the Good Roads Committee of District No. 1, McCullough County, who shall serve as an advisory committee of the Chamber of Commerce to work with and assist the commissioners' court, without pay, in considering any good road question that may come before us.

And, be it further resolved, by said court that in addition to said above named committee that we go on record as inviting and welcoming the advice, assistance and co-operation of each and every citizen of McCullough County in not only carrying out a progressive road building program, but also the solving of any other question which may come before us and in which the citizenship is interested.—Brady Sentinel.

Bandera Wool is Shipped.

The hauling of the 110,000 pounds of wool from the warehouse of the Bandera County Ranchmen and Farmers' Association to Center Point for shipment to Boston, has been under way for several days. Last week we stated that the price of 46½ cents which was received for this clip of wool was the highest that had been paid in the State this season. This was stretching the point somewhat. We should have said it was one of the highest prices paid in the State up to the time of sale. There may have been higher prices paid somewhere in the State later than November 15, but we have not heard of it. The price received for Bandera wool was satisfactory and our wool growers are rejoicing.—Bandera New Era.

Mr. White is from Crosbyton, Texas, but during the past year or so he has been associated with his father, Frank E. White in publishing The Center Point News.

Mr. White and his family moved to Comfort this week and are located in Paul Ingenhuet's cottage on High street. We feel that they will prove a most welcome addition to our community.—Comfort News.

Change in Ownership of The First State Bank.

Mr. W. J. Greer, well known Edwards County ranchman, has bought the interest of Mr. L. A. Schreiner, in the First State Bank of Rock Springs, and Mr. Greer now has the controlling interest, and will probably become president of the institution at the next annual meeting of the directors. J. Leo Greer has been a stockholder in the bank for a number of years.

Mr. Schreiner severs his connection after a service of many years as president of the First State.—Edwards County Leader

Some Sound Advice.

In other times, people trusted business men as to quality and price and terms. As this trust grew, the people themselves became less capable of judging, the temptation to cheat them became greater. The buying public needs to be educated by the good business man. People need to be educated how to disregard the price tag and judge the quality. Merchants of substantial material are constantly being shoved to the wall because an ignorant buying public is attracted by the flashy show windows of other stores which appear to offer "the same thing" at a lower price. Of course, the customer is stung; but the shoddy merchant gets the profit, and while the public is learning, many a good merchant suffers.

Educating the public as to qualities and values, ostracizing the quack business man just as we have ostracized the quack doctor and the shyster lawyer, will set business back in its proper circle of service and success and confidence.—Henry Ford.

The Tire with the Wider and Thicker Tread

No Matter How Little You Pay——for the extra miles in a cord tire, you ought to get every mile that's in the better cord material.

Then don't you need a longer wearing tread on a cord tire to match the longer wearing carcass?

Any user of Gates Super-Tread Cords will tell you that he is getting two or three thousand extra miles simply because the wider and thicker rubber tread protects the inside cords till they have given their last mile.

That Won Recognition.

The following story, written by Louis Loeffler, a student of the Fort Davis High School, and son of E. A. Loeffler of Junction, received honorable mention recently in a nation-wide contest for the best vacation story. The story that won the prize was printed in the Eagle recently, was by a Kimble County teacher, and was written about the Llanos.

It is unusual for two stories of the same country and river to win in such a contest, but there is so much about the Llanos and the Heart of the Hill country to write about, that the subject matter is inexhaustible.

The story follows:
The Most Enjoyable

Vacation I Ever Spent.
I spent my last vacation on the Llano river, near Junction, Texas. We got a car and fitted a body to it, just the thing for camping; it has beds, stoves, and everything necessary to make a vacation enjoyable.

To go on a vacation in this manner is just jolly good sport; you can always be on the go, without any inconvenience. It is growing very fast because it is practical and inexpensive. We know from our own experience that this sort of auto camping is cheaper, gives more pleasure and improves the health more than any other mode of camping. Not only from us, but from most people you will find that it is the most rapidly growing sport in the world.

We would stop at one place, exhaust the pleasures there, then we would just hook up and be off for another place of interest on that wonderful river.

We came to Seven Hundred Springs in our camp auto. When we saw the beautiful, clear, cool water bubbling out of the mountain side and making its way to the river by furrows worn in the solid rock by the never ceasing wear of the water, we stopped there.

We caught some fish, cooked dinner, and we had not tasted fish in such a long time that we picked the bones clean.

We stayed there a few days and then without any trouble, got into the auto and were gone.

We got to a place called the Dam where we camped for a few days. We tired of that place, so we went to the mouth of Big Paint, and camped by that crystal pool. We fished and ate fish three times a day; then killed squirrels for a change. It was time to start for home, so we packed our things and were on our way.

That was the most enjoyable vacation I ever spent, for we could be always going with no tents to take down and put up at every new place. Everything was so convenient, too; we had an ice box in the auto, which kept the milk and butter cool. The beds took up no room; they just folded up into the wall and we were not bothered with mosquitoes and vermin, as we would have been in a tent.

It is very troublesome and inconvenient to keep on the move when you have tents and everything bulky.

You may see from this sketch that auto camping is very convenient and most practical mode of out of door camping; so you see why this has been the fastest growing sport in the world for the last five years.

Junction has a free camp site on the ever-flowing, limpid Llano to accommodate the campers.

When all is said and done, the success or failure of a vacation lies in the eats and comforts.

THE ROVER

CHURNING UP BUSINESS

"Some day you'll try not working for any," prophesied Tommy. He returned to the office full of anger.

"Lasset, I found Brinley putting into execution one of Mr. Ames' suggestions, only doing it clumsily," he observed.

"Suppose he is," growled Lasset. "I think it proves Ames' point," persisted Tommy.

"We don't need another ornamental man," remarked Lasset.

Tommy kept his temper pretty well, considering. "We need a new manager," he declared. "You represented to me that if you were unhampered by debt, you could put us on a dividend-paying basis."

"The price of lumber's gone up since you came into the business," Lasset informed him.

"Not enough to account for our monthly losses," argued Tommy, "and not enough to make the Reverse Gear Churn company agree with us on a price. Our methods of production are full of leaks."

"Brinley has been a little careless," admitted Lasset. "I went after him this morning. I think we'll rearrange some of our machinery."

Tommy, who was a hearty young man, with no kinks on his shoulders, slammed a capable fist on his desk. "By jinks, that does settle it," he swore. "If you'll go that far in stealing Ames' thunder, you prove to me that he was right in everything he wanted to do; and I'm going to have him out here."

"Are you aware that you don't own this factory?" demanded Lasset icily. "I hold more stock than you do, I control the situation, and I'm going to run this plant without interference. Who is this Ames, anyway? Where does he come from?"

"Blessed if I know," replied Tommy. "I never thought to ask him."

"Exactly," he accused. "That shows how thoroughly impractical you are. Ames is probably a grafter. Has he any money?"

"He isn't hunting work," insisted Tommy. "He says he fairly aches to put this plant on its feet. It interests him. He'll come in here, remodel our factory and output, install our side

The sheer "nerve" of the thing took his breath. Just then Lasset came into the office. "Certainly, old man," gulped Tommy. "I'll see you this noon."

He hung up and turned to Lasset. "I'd like to draw five hundred dollars," he said, and grinned.

CHAPTER IV.

Tommy met Ames at noon and handed him the five hundred dollars he had promised.

"Thanks," said Ames, and stuffed the money nonchalantly in his pocket. "Have you time for lunch?"

"I'm going to take it," laughed Tommy. "I'd like to have you come over to the Commercial club with me."

"With pleasure," accepted Ames, and Tommy, with a trace of pride in the distinguished appearance of his guest, walked into the well-appointed business club which he had so recently joined.

He introduced Ames to three or four of the members, and they strolled through the billiard parlor on their way to the dining room. "Hello, John Ames," greeted Dick Templeton, walking up to the visitor and shaking hands cordially.

"You've deprived me of a pleasure, both of you," complained Tommy. "I had hoped to introduce you."

"Couldn't think of it, Tommy," declined Dick. "I was a guest of Mr. Ames at the Ivy club in New York."

"Going to be in town tonight, Ames?" asked Templeton.

"I hope to remain some little time," replied Ames with a quiet smile at Tommy.

"Fine business!" exclaimed Dick. "Tommy, we must take him out to Mrs. Rushmore's little informal dance, and give the girls a treat."

CHAPTER V.

Within ten minutes after John Ames landed at Mrs. Rushmore's that night, the entire feminine contingent of the most exclusive set in town realized that this would be a lively social season. All the matrons with marriageable daughters threw out nervous tentacles in every direction.

Tommy Kept His Temper Pretty Well, Considering. "We Need a New Manager," He Declared.

lines, and inaugurate new selling methods, and he'll take one-third of the increase of profits for his share. Of course, we'll have to advance him money enough to live on."

"Now we're coming at it!" triumphed Lasset. "How much does he want?"

Tommy colored slightly. "Five hundred dollars a month," he stated.

Lasset threw himself back in his chair to rest, then he jumped up and went out into the shop, and Tommy heard him laughing with Brinley. Tommy telephoned Ames. "It's no use, old man," he regretted. "I can't make them see it."

"You see it, don't you?" inquired Ames.

"I see it so hard it hurts my eyes," emphatically announced Tommy.

"Then sell me a share of stock," suggested Ames. "As a stockholder he can't keep me out of the factory, and he can't keep me out of the stockholders' meeting the first of the month. Find out how the stock is divided."

"I can tell you right now," returned Tommy. "I looked it up this morning. I own 40 per cent of the stock, Lasset owns 45, outside stockholders, who haven't attended a meeting for years, own 5 per cent, and the other 10 per cent is owned by the workmen."

"Then there's an easy solution," advised Ames in a relieved voice. "You'd best buy a little more stock, and win over as many of the workmen as possible to vote with you. At the next stockholders' meeting you can throw Lasset out, if he dares. If you want to save a dollar of your investment, you must obtain private control."

"By jinks, I'll do it!" he decided. "Ames, suppose you come out and help me talk to the men?"

"All right," laughed Ames. "By the way, Tommy, can you lend me $500?"

"For a moment, Tommy hesitated.

frantically anxious to absorb information.

He danced first with Helen Rand, and that lively young lady sparkled and snipped and gloved under the conscious and the eyes of every girl on the floor as unceasingly upon them. Tommy Spencer danced with that fluffy little Rostand girl, and surprised Helen by flirting outrageously. Helen flashed at him a glance of amusement as she passed him in the next, but Tommy seemed even more amused than she.

"You waltz like a sunbeam!" observed John Ames, as he guided Helen deftly out of the pocket made by clumsy Al Binir. His voice was deep and musical, and full of vibration.

Helen favored him with her most bell-like laugh, and turned her wonderfully effective big eyes up to his for a fleeting second.

"I have a badly arranged card," he told her. "It only carries one dance with you."

"I'll give you the first extra," she immediately offered.

"Just one extra won't do," he urged her. "I must have more than that." He glanced down at her, his big black eyes aglow with eagerness. Yes, she looked pleased.

Tommy scowled for an instant as they whirled by him, and then he turned to that fluffy little Rostand girl with determined order.

"You want too much," Helen chided Ames.

"I take pride in my selfishness," he assured her.

Ames visited the factory as Tommy's guest. He inspected each machine, in turn, and he watched the operations of each workman with interest. He paused at a lathe and began to take off his gloves.

JUNCTION, TEXAS.

U. of T. Library Has Volume Of Verse by President Lamar

Austin, Nov. 25.—In the vault in the archive room of the University of Texas is a volume entitled, "Verse Memorials," by Mirabeau B. Lamar, president of the Republic of Texas from 1838 to 1841. It is dedicated to Mrs. William L. Canzaneau, wife of one of the author's most devoted friends and better known by her pen name of Cora Montgomery. The dedication was signed at Richmond Bedford County, Tex., Feb. 10, 1857.

It is stated in the preface that the presentation of the volume was prompted by the author's desire of manifesting to his friends the fact that he ever held them in grateful remembrance. His verses are referred to as being unpretending in character—fragments of thought and feeling rescued from a life of turmoil that permitted little leisure for literary recreation. The style and subject-matter of the poems are thought to indicate that they were written for the general public. They are for the most part, bursts of spontaneous effusion or solicitations of friendship. They are deemed scarcely worthy of consideration as mere literary productions; but they are Lamar's only fortune, since everything else he did was in the cause of others. He was desirous that his daughter might acquire from his verses some knowledge of her father's heart—that she might know him as something more than a soldier and politician described in history.

The volume proper opens with a group of poems entitled "Tributary Verses," written by friends of Lamar in various parts of the United States, expressing their appreciation and admiration of his loyalty and bravery as a soldier. These are followed by a poem called "Apology," in which the author admits that he is not a poet, but that he revels in the sheer joy of attempting to rhyme.

"O, gentle ladies, gay and bright,
For you, and you alone I write—are the opening lines of the "introduction" to the author's own poems. The several stanzas which follow comprise a general tribute to women, and the separate poems thus introduced are inscribed to individual women whom Lamar knew and admired. They are what might be termed uninspired love poems bearing such titles as "Grieve Not," "Sweet Flower," "Nora," or "In Life's Unclouded, Gayest Hour, (To a lady in Houston, Texas.)"

The following is a poem which is typical of Lamar's general style, though he occasionally rises to a somewhat higher poetic level:

Perpetual Love.

"Perpetual love plays round my heart
For some fair form—I don't know who;
I would not with the passion part,
Although its object mocks my view.
"To meet a girl with sparkling eye—
She is that phantom of my breast;
But if a brighter pass me by,
I'm sure to love the brighter best.

"I thought, dear Lucy, long ago,
For none but thee my soul could sigh,
But Laura spread superior glow
Love waved his wings and bade good-bye.

"Oh, do not say that I'm to blame—
'Tis Nature's fault that made me so;
Heaven knows my love's a constant flame,
But who I love I do not know."

Near the center of the volume is a long poem in two cantos, entitled, "Sally Riley," written in 1825. At intervals there are poems of reflections such as one entitled "Monody" and beginning:

"Oft when the sun along the West
His farewell splendor throws,
Imparting to the wounded breast
The spirit of repose—
My mind reverts to former themes,
To joy and other days,
When love illumined all my dreams,
And hope inspired my lays."

"No, no, the Harp I dare not take," "Oh, Do not Ask Me Now for Rhymes," or "Musings," are other reflective poems.

"The Star and Cup" written on the anniversary of the independence of Texas is a patriotic poem, comparing the "Lone Star" with the Star of Bethlehem. "Arm for the Southern Land" is also a poem of patriotism.

Occasionally a nature poem such as "Sunset Skies," "Gay Spring With Her Beautiful Flowers," or "The Rose, the Moon and the Nightingale" are to be found in the volume.

"Love and Marriage" is a philosophical poem beginning:

"Say, have you seen Aurora rise
The face of nature bright'ning
And then behold the evening skies
Deformed with stormy lighting?

Oh, love is like the morning ray,
It speaks a warm and cloudless day;
But marriage is the evening storm
That breaks the promises of morn."

Near the end of the volume are several stanzas inscribed to Lamar's sister, entitled "Grieve Not for Me," in which he beseeches her not to mourn for him after his death. The appendix at the end of the volume is a collection of "Lines" written by various friends of the Lamar family, commemorating the death of the mother of Mirabeau. The closing pages contain a few sketchy notes on "Sally Riley."

"Verse Memorials" is a part of a collection of Southern history purchased through the Littlefield Fund, belonging to the University library. It has a decorated old rose imitation leather cover, gilt edges and framed pages. There are very few copies extant and the University prizes this one so highly that it is kept in the vault and may be examined only by special permission.

After reading the volume one may realize, as Lamar himself realized, that the author is not a poet; but there are attractive expressions of feeling set forth in the course of his verses which are undoubtedly appealing. The mass of Texas citizens who have known Lamar through history as a soldier and a politician may learn from this souvenir of his private life that he was a man capable of deep emotion and tender affection.

A lot of us fellows didn't quite understand Cleve Perkins when he got off the statement that "Too many friends are often a liability," at Bud Thompson's woodchucking the other day; but he soon showed us that he had spoken some real philosophy by further saying that El Winterspoon will have enemies yet before he dies, because El has so many friends that should be attempt to help all of them he would soon go broke.

Visitors This Week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Williams of Mertzon and Miss Johnnie Stanley of Sonora, were in Junction a few hours Monday on their way home from the A. & M.-Texas foot ball game at Austin.

Williams is an old friend of the editor of the Eagle, and this was the first time we had seen him since we accompanied Mrs. Williams, then Miss Pearl Parkerson, from San Antonio to Austin, for their wedding in 1918. Williams is an A. & M. man and of course was happy in the recent victory of that college over the University. Mrs. Williams is a sister of Mrs. Clyde Gardner and Miss Stanley is a niece of Mesdames Gardner and Williams.

Comfort Bankers Visit Junction.

August Faltin, president, and W. Weidenfelt, cashier of the Comfort State Bank, were business visitors in our little city last Friday and Saturday. Mr. Weidenfelt comes to Junction every few months, but this is the first visit that Mr. Faltin has made in years. He was very agreeably surprised at the fine roads he found coming up, and at the prosperous looking condition of the country.

GEORGE BRALEY, Manager

STATE CAPITAL NEWS

From The Austin Statesman:

Governor Neff Picks Bible Texts for Lecture Titles.

Governor Pat M. Neff commenced his tour of the State last Tuesday, November 28, when he began a series of speeches telling the people what he has accomplished during the past two years and what he proposes to achieve during the next two years of his administration. He will deal with the legislative measures and recommendations that he proposes to bring to the attention of the Legislature next January.

The Governor has resorted to the Bible for the selection of his subjects, which is decidedly unusual, according to political observers, but those familiar with the Bible will have little difficulty in ascertaining what the Governor proposes to say during the next three weeks. The Governor began his tour last Tuesday, when he spoke at Brenham. His itinerary after leaving Brenham has not yet been announced, nor the dates on which he will speak.

These are the nine subjects, all selected from the Bible, that the Governor will discuss:

"No man seweth a piece of new cloth unto an old garment."

—Matthew 9:16.

"People perish for lack of knowledge."

—Hosea 4:6.

"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's."

—Mark 12:17.

"As many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law."

—Romans 2:12.

"We shall go by the way of the highways."

—Numbers 20:19.

"The rains descended and the floods came."

—Matthew 7:25.

"They bound him with fetters of brass and he did grind in the prison house."

—Judges 16:21.

"Sirs, ye know that by this business we have our wealth."

—Acts 19:25.

"Watchman, what of the night?"

—Isaiah 21:11.

The Governor spent Thanksgiving Day at Austin, and the places and dates of his trip will be announced during the week.

But Few Changes to Be Made In State Dept. of Education.

There will be comparatively little change in the personnel of the employees in the State Department of Education, when the new administration steps in about the middle of next January, according to Prof. S. M. Marrs, the new State Superintendent.

"I am being deluged with applications for positions in the department of education," said Prof. Marrs, "which of course is a natural thing, but I propose to make only a few changes. All the professional people, that is heads of various divisions, will not be changed, and in few instances, if there are to be any changes, it will not be until next summer as most of these heads are teachers."

"There will probably be less than a dozen changes in the department, and these will be entirely voluntary on the part of the person holding the position. These changes will be mostly among clerks."

The reason why there will be few changes in the personnel of this department, Prof. Marrs explained, was in the interest of efficiency as it requires much time in finding persons suitable for heads of divisions and important positions.

Prof. Marrs leaves Wednesday night for Houston to attend the annual convention of the Texas State Teachers' Association and will deliver an address at the meeting.

Confederate Pension Warrants Sent Out.

Confederate pensioners will receive their pension warrants for the quarter ending December 1, 1922, in plenty of time to have the cash for Thanksgiving Day, announced Comptroller Lon A. Smith. The latter announced that the pension division of the comptroller's department has just completed the task of mailing warrants to 15,000 pensioners, which will insure delivery before Thanksgiving Day.

The Confederate veterans are receiving $25 each for this quarter and the amount disbursed will reach approximately $375,000. There is cash on hand with which to pay these pensioners, as the funds for that purpose are derived by a special 5 cent tax. Of the 15,000 pensioners, there are 408 in the Confederate Home and the Confederate Women's Home, these receiving only half the amount paid to those outside of these institutions.

Labor Commissioner Favors State Employment Agencies.

Establishment of free State employment bureaus in the principal labor centers of the State is advanced by Joseph S. Myers, State Labor Commissioner, as a means of correcting evils which the commissioner believes exist under the present system of private and emigrant employment agencies.

"This would correct the evils of our present system," said Mr. Myers, "insure a proper and uniform distribution of labor and in other ways be of benefit to employers, employees and the general public. It would solve in a constructive manner the important problem of getting the jobless man to the manless job."

During the term of the present administration eighty-eight private and seventeen emigrant employment agencies were granted licenses, sixty of which are now in operation, and from which there has been collected $12,734 license fees and occupation taxes, Myers said.

Druggists' Liquor Sales Regulations Greatly Modified.

Druggists and others permitted under the law to handle intoxicating liquors and alcohol no longer will be required to furnish bonds containing a provision requiring them to forfeit 25 per cent of the amount covered by the surety in case they violate the prohibition law.

Under the new regulations issued today by Commissioner Blair of the Internal Revenue Bureau, an alternative form of bond is authorized. Druggists, distillers and others recently protested against the 25 per cent provision, contending the requirement was excessive and resulted in greatly increased rates by bonding houses.

Bankers Notified of Drive Against 'Wildcat' Operators

Letters were addressed to all of the 982 State Banks in Texas today by State Bank Commissioner J. L. Chapman informing them of the statewide drive against "reckless, incompetent and criminal" bankers which the banking department is to undertake in co-operation with the attorney general's department.

All violations of the banking laws, particularly unauthorized and excessive loans, will be reported, the letter declares.

Highway Commission is About Out of Funds.

Designation of State highways was the principal work before the State Highway Commission, which met in monthly session here today. Delegates from a number of counties, including Milam, Coke, Smith, and Henderson, appeared before the board with requests for highway designation.

Because of lack of funds, it is probable no Federal or State aid will be granted this month.

Legislature Should Revise Constitution, Says Moore.

Greenville, Texas.—That instead of calling a constitutional convention the Thirty-eighth Texas Legislature should write a new constitution itself and submit it to the voters as an amendment to or a substitute for the present constitution, is the opinion expressed by Representative Joe M. Moore of this city in a statement released here Saturday.

"Summed up, my reasons for opposing a constitutional convention in favor of the Legislature rewriting the constitution," the representative stated, "are as follows:

"1. The relief desired does not justify such a convention.

"2. The Legislature, through committees, can rewrite and submit an instrument as satisfactory to all concerned as a convention elected by popular vote for that purpose.

"3. The probable expense of such convention is prohibitive in view of the fact that corrections desired may be had through the Legislature at no additional expense to the taxpayers.

"4. Correction and relief thru the Legislature will positively meet the spirit of the State Democratic platform demand.

"5. There is no ground for believing that a new constitution will be adopted if submitted to the voters, hence the absolute waste of money necessary to finance a constitutional convention.

"In the coming session of the Legislature I shall propose the plan herein set out to secure the relief desired, believing the Legislature will allow committees on constitutional amendments sufficient time from other legislative duties to give proper consideration to a new constitution.

Mrs. Anna Clover, of R. F. D. 5, Winfield, Kans., says: "I began to suffer some months ago with many troubles, and I was afraid I was going to get in bed. I did not seem to find the right remedy until someone told me of

Is There a Santa Claus? Well, We Say There Is!

It is the same eternal question. And how often will it be asked? Just as long and as often as Christmas comes. You will be asked, and thousands more, and little children will be answered and reassured and made happy just as was the little girl who put her question to the great editor, Charles A. Dana. She sought high authority when someone had caused her faith in childhood's patron saint to fall, and this is what the famous editor wrote her. It is the best answer that we know:

"Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible to their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge. Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginia. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance, to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished. Not believe in Santa Claus? You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not; but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world. You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding. No Santa Claus? Thank God! He lives and He lives forever! A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

ATTENTION, LITTLE FOLKS! SANTA CLAUS IS COMING!

In the next two issues of the paper we are going to give the children that are looking for Santa Claus, a place in this paper to tell him what they want. His picture will appear in each paper as it does in this one and he will be sure to see your letters, and will then know what you expect him to bring you. Write your letter to Santa Claus and then have your mama or papa rewrite it for you, so it will be very plain, so we can read every word of it. Be sure to have your mama or papa write it with a pen and ink or with a black pencil on white paper. Address it to Santa Claus, care the Junction Eagle. This is open only to children who are not over 12 years of age.

The American's Creed.

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign Nation of many sovereign States; a perfect Union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its Constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

She Used All of Them.

Please Take Notice!

If those who send in notices of church or school entertainments, or cards of thanks or obituaries, would glance at the statement under the masthead on page four, they would understand why, in many cases, their articles are not published as requested.

On the above kind of matter, where any charge is made or where the entertainment is for the purpose of raising money, a charge will be made for printing these announcements, obituaries, etc., and unless we have an arrangement with the person sending in the matter for publication, that this is to be paid for, we cannot use it. We cannot open charge accounts promiscuously, as we have too many of that kind on our books now.

On the kind of matter mentioned above, we make a charge that is only approximately one-half the regular advertising rate, and contributors will save annoyance, both to themselves and to the publishers, if they will keep this matter in mind.

Notice to Contributors.

On previous occasions we have made mention of the fact that we will not use anonymous communications for publication.
