GRAF ZEPPELIN ARRIVES AT SAN FRANCISCO

12 Americans Killed, 15 Wounded, As Fighting In Holy Land Grows Bitter

U. S. STUDENTS ATTACKED BY MOSLEM HORDE

Arabs Extend Rioting To Hebron Seminary Near Jerusalem

'WAILING WALL' RIOT

Outrages Start Over Whether Jews Should Pray in Sacred Spot

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. (AP)—Congressman Emanuel Celler of the 10th New York district today announced he had telegraphed Secretary of State Stimson urging action to protect American lives and property in Palestine, where Arabs were engaged in racial conflict with Jews.

"The cruiser Raleigh now in European waters should be immediately dispatched to the scene of disorder," the telegram said.

JERUSALEM, Aug. 25. (UP)—Fighting between Jews and Moslems, which cost many lives in Jerusalem over the week-end, spread to nearby towns tonight and 12 Americans were killed at Hebron.

The advices from Hebron, which is 16 miles southwest of here, said 15 other Americans had been wounded. All were students of the Slovodka Talmudic school.

The dead Americans include Benjamin Huritz of Brooklyn, and Jacob Wexler of Chicago.

Attacked by Arabs

According to local Jewish reports, the Rabbinical Seminary of Palestine at Hebron was attacked by Arabs. The reports said 42 Jewish students were killed. The dean of the school, Rabbi Slonim, and two assistant rabbis also were killed.

About 47 students were wounded. It was assumed that the American dead were included in the number of students.

The fighting at Hebron climaxed two days of fierce street fighting in Jerusalem which brought British troops, supported by armored cars and military airplanes, to this area. Fighting also was severe in Nablus, north of here, and other communities.

30 Jews Killed

At least 30 Jews were killed in the fighting here and hundreds were wounded, many of them seriously. One report placed the Arab dead at 16, but reliable sources said it was believed the Moslem casualties had been greater than the Jewish casualties because they were repulsed with machine guns on several occasions.

It was reported that Edward Best, a royal air force officer and British inspector of immigration, was killed in the fierce street fighting which started Friday with a Moslem raid on the so-called "old city" Jewish section.

Three British warships were anchored at Jaffa, which was reported in a state of siege. Officials had feared that the rioting would spread to nearby towns.

"Wailing Wall" Fight

The rioting started from conflict over the right of Jews to gather at the sacred "wailing wall" and grew from street brawls to severe fighting with guns and knives.

Estimates of casualties in fighting at Hebron put the Moslem dead at 40 persons.

The United Press correspondent returned from Hebron tonight after visiting the scene of fighting. Roads through the area are closely patrolled and a state of emergency has been declared.

No Americans have evacuated Palestine as yet, although 30 Americans were given refuge in the American consulate Saturday night.

Three Jewish suburbs of Jerusalem have been looted by the raiding Moslems. One of the suburbs was razed by the rioters.

TRAIN VICTIM

Arlington Woman Left Home Ill; Body Found On Tracks

ARLINGTON, Texas, Aug. 25. (AP)—Mrs. J. H. Victory, 47, disappeared into the night after telling her daughter that she had severe pains in her head. She was found today fatally injured on the Texas and Pacific railway tracks near here, dying two hours later.

Efforts to identify Mrs. Victory consumed more than an hour. The attending physician was inclined to believe that she had not been struck by a train, saying that the body would have been mangled. Her skull was fractured, her neck was broken and she was bruised. Victory is foreman of a Texas and Pacific fence building gang and was at work near Barstow.

DEBT PARLEY CLIMAX TODAY

Allied Nations to Seek Agreement on Spoils

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Aug. 25. (US)—The final phase in Europe's last desperate drive to effect the liquidation of its demoralizing post-war aftermath opens tomorrow when the Hon. Philip Snowden, Great Britain, and others of the British delegation consider the latest offer by Germany's four other creditors for the redistribution of the reparations spoils.

The finishing touches are being put to this offer at midnight tonight as this dispatch is being written.

All day—morning, afternoon and evening, the representatives of France, Italy, Belgium and Japan have been laboring assiduously on the elaborate plan which they hope will satisfy the British lion without unduly injuring the essentials of the cherished Young plan.

The Italian delegation, which has been the object of intensive British pressure, played an important part in these final efforts at conciliation. The wires between The Hague and Rome have carried many messages between Premier Mussolini and his representatives, who are most desirous of reaching an agreement but without giving up what they regard as Italy's rights.

With the complete program of Rhineland evacuation already agreed upon, there remains only the everlasting financial controversy between the conference and complete success.

Gusher Extends Oklahoma Field

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 25. (AP)—The Cromwell-Franklin Oil company et al Trosper park well No. 1 came in today on city park property with a production that was estimated at 415 barrels an hour. The well extended the south Oklahoma City field for oil production, three-fourths of a mile northward.

It is situated in C se nw 13-11-3w on the south side of Trosper park on which the municipal golf course is located and will bring the customary one-eighth royalties to this city.

Besides the oil, the well today was producing gas which was estimated at 15,000,000 cubic feet a day.

The well was 6,504 feet deep. The oil tested 39.5 at 83 degrees.

Texas Educator Dies at Austin

AUSTIN, Aug. 25. (AP)—T. A. Gullett, 54, principal of Austin high school, and prominent in state educational circles, died here early Sunday morning after a major operation Aug. 2. Mr. Gullett had been connected with Austin schools since 1916.

He previously taught at Cuero in 1896; was seven years superintendent at Yorktown, and was superintendent during 1908 at Floresville. Later he was priacipal of Coronal institute and later dean of San Marcos Baptist academy, both of San Marcos. He was active in Austin civic affairs, and a member of the park board.

OKLAHOMA AND TEXAS TO OPEN BOUNDARY WAR

Legislative Commissions in Austin Meet Today to Settle Row

1,500 HOMES AT STAKE

Texas Not Likely to Sell Panhandle Strip, Is General View

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 25. (UP)—The possibility of 1,500 persons losing their homes loomed tonight as legislature commissions of Texas and Oklahoma gathered here to settle the question of what to do with a strip of "no man's land." The commission will convene tomorrow.

The land in question lies between the Texas Panhandle and the Western Oklahoma boundary. It extends more than 100 miles in length but not more than 4,000 feet in width at its broadest point. Persons who settled on it many years ago, taking out Oklahoma or federal patents, have learned they are without title to the land because of the recent discovery of surveyors that the land belongs rightfully in Texas.

May Refuse to Sell

In case Texas refuses to sell the land back to Oklahoma—which is highly probable—the land will become a part of the Texas public domain.

Sen. Walter C. Woodward, Coleman, chairman of the Texas commission thinks the best solution would be for Texas to retain the land. A majority of others on the Texas commission voted against selling the land back to Oklahoma at a recent meeting in Oklahoma City.

Woodward has a solution he may propose which would allow the "Oklahomans" living on the land illegally, to be given first opportunity to buy back the land for a "nominal" sum and to assume outstanding indebtedness against the land. Under the plan the land would remain a part of Texas.

Oklahomans to Fight

Word from Oklahoma City indicates that the Sooner legislators will make every effort to retain the land for Oklahoma and for persons living on it at present.

In addresses in the Oklahoma legislature last winter, committee members pointed out that they were under obligation to see that the land was not lost to the settlers by a "technicality." The settlers were Oklahomans in spirit and desire, they said.

Problems which face the legislators in case Texas refuses to sell to Oklahoma include the question of what to do with taxes paid for years by Texas residents to the state of Oklahoma, what to do about re-districting school divisions and what to do about school bonds voted by Oklahoma.

'Stole Greer County'

If the Texas commission agrees to sell the land, a compact will have to be drawn up for presentation to congress for ratification.

The drawing up of such a compact would be no easy affair. The Oklahomans are believed to be uncompromising in their attitude. Some of the Texans, on the other hand, have an anti-Oklahoma feeling. One of the commission members recently reminded the state that Oklahoma "stole Greer county"—the southwest corner of Oklahoma—from Texas. His state now has the chance to even herself with Oklahoma, he indicated.

Jacksboro Man Hurt When Car Overturns

Special to The Record News

JACKSBORO, Texas, Aug. 25.—Tom Womack of Jacksboro suffered severe cuts on the hand, arm and body when the car in which he was riding overturned on the Wichita Falls highway a short way from here about 9:30 o'clock Saturday night.

The injured man was brought to his home here and given medical treatment to staunch the flow of blood. Physicians stated that the wounds were not of serious nature but that Mr. Womack had been considerably weakened by loss of blood. The accident ccurred, according to Constable L. T. Richardson, when Womack's car ran off the highway and turned over in a deep ditch.

1,400 Hear Rev. Pat Moreland Open Junior C.-C. Young People's Revival

Youthful Ruler Greatest Failure of Bible, Says Pastor; Faith Expressed in Present-Day Generation

"The young man of whom I shall speak tonight was probably as good a man, or better, than any man in this congregation, but he was the greatest failure recorded in the entire Bible," declared Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor of the Grant Street Methodist church, before more than 1,400 persons gathered at the First Methodist church Sunday night for the opening service of the city-wide young people's revival which is being sponsored by the Junior chamber of commerce during the ensuing two weeks.

Reverend Mr. Moreland took his text from the tenth chapter of the book of Mark, beginning with the 17th verse: "And when He was gone again into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to Him, and asked Him, 'Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit life?'" The passage refers to the coming of a rich young ruler to Jesus, he said, sincerely acknowledging His wisdom and authority, but without the courage to follow the advice he received.

Marriage Law Praised

Old Testament history contains the stories of many outstanding failures, the speaker said, but that of the young ruler was declared to be the most complete of all recorded in biblical history. According to all information available, he was spotless and without blame in the eyes of his countrymen, according to Reverend Moreland.

"This young man was not careless, nor lacking in respect," Reverend Moreland said. "He came running, and knelt at the feet of this other young man—for it was a young man who gave us this Bible, who died on the cross for His religion and His believers. When the young ruler asked the age-old question, Jesus subjected him to a rigorous examination. 'Have you killed? Have you always borne true witness? Have you stolen? Have you worshiped at the wayside altar of uncleanliness? Have you honored your parents?' To all of these questions, this upright and

VETS OFF TO LEGION MEET

Hundreds Swarm to Port Arthur for Convention

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, Aug. 25. (AP)—Trains, interurbans, buses, airplanes and automobiles arrived in Port Arthur today with hundreds of delegates for what is expected to be the most memorable and colorful state convention of the American Legion ever held in Texas.

Eleventh hour preparations for the various events on the program for the week were going forward. Arrival of the U. S. S. Cleveland at the city docks to take part in the legion ceremonies featured the happenings of today.

Gov. Dan Moody was expected to arrive Tuesday to participate in the program preceding the sham battle at the athletic field Tuesday night. Other notables from over the state as well as high ranking legionnaires in both the state and national organization also are scheduled to arrive for the event.

Headquarters have been opened in the Goodhue hotel with Ross R. Cole, state adjutant, in charge and registration of delegates was in full swing. Accommodations have been arranged for more than 5,000 delegates and indications are that this number would arrive by tomorrow night.

Seven Injured In Dallas Auto Crash

DALLAS, Aug. 25. (AP)—Seven persons, former students at Buckner's orphans home school, were injured today in a motor accident near Arlington. Their machine overturned in a ditch and an ambulance racing to the scene likewise overturned. Wylie Beard, the driver, being slightly hurt.

Those injured in the first mishap: Miss Katherine May White, Geraldine Lack, Maurine Miller, Wilma Miller, John Riggars, Travis Bucker, all of Dallas and Harold Adams, driver of the automobile, Fort Worth.

Bureau Gives Causes Of Ill Health of Women

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. (US)—Extensive research has enabled the women's bureau of the department of labor to determine some of the many causes of the ill health of women workers in various industries, the bureau revealed today.

Long hours, night work, wrong posture, bad atmospheric conditions, abnormal temperatures or humidity and industrial fatigue are some of the more generally prevalent causes of female debility.

25,000 WATCH FLIERS STRUT AT AIR MEET

America's Crack Pilots Show Skill in Cleveland Maneuvers

'LADY BIRDS' LAND

Men Derbyists at St. Paul; U. S. Out of Schneider Cup Race

By MERTON T. AKERS

MUNICIPAL AIRPORT, CLEVELAND, Aug. 25. (UP)—America's first line of defense—the air corps—demonstrated its skill and daring today to open the racing program of the 10-day national air meet here. The army, navy and marine corps sent their crack pilots to dive and loop, singly and in intricate formation to thrill an opening-day crowd of 25,000.

Besides the maneuvers shown, the start of a derby, two races, a parachute jumping contest, balloon bursting and acrobatics filled out an afternoon for the airminded Clevelanders and their host of aviation guests.

Aeronautical Scene

Over the whole scene of air activity at the mile square airport 12 miles from Cleveland flew fleets of airplanes, most of them stunting for the fun of it, others taking off and landing on regular routine of airmail carrying and passenger service. The Goodyear blimps, Puritan, Pilgrim and Vigilant, floated over the horizon to add to a scene that was strictly aeronautical, except for the hundreds of automobiles and buses that fringed the field.

Out of Race

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 25. (UP)—The United States was definitely eliminated from the international Schneider cup seaplane race today when Lieut. Alford Williams of the navy failed in an attempt to fly his 1,100-horsepower Mercury racer.

The military fliers took the limelight of the afternoon. Six marine corps planes from Quantico, commanded by Capt. Arthur Page, appeared out of the east at 1:45 p. m., the exact time they were scheduled to arrive and dived straight at the mile-long grandstand that lines the west edge of the field.

Navy Planes Arrive

Before the marines had landed, a navy squadron from San Diego, numbering 17 planes, roared past the grandstand led by Rear Admiral William A. Moffat in charge of naval aeronautics, and Assistant Secretary of the Navy David Ingalls with their aides in three civilian planes. The naval planes were manned by crack pilots from the airplane carrier Saratoga. They left San Diego, their home station, last Monday and flew leisurely across the country to arrive within 20 seconds of their schedule.

The silver, red tailed navy pursuit planes stunted in formation

Dallas Baptist Pastor Denounces Mayor Tate's Ways

DALLAS, Aug. 25. (AP)—Two of Mayor J. Waddy Tate's recent statements—the first anent funeral processions and the second proposing limiting church services to once a month—drew a denunciation of the mayor today by the Rev. L. L. Shoptaw in a sermon at a local Baptist church.

The evangelist painted a picture of Mr. Tate in black robes atop the Magnolia building giving out "orders as the pope of Rome does." The Reverend Shoptaw asked God's pity on "you who put him in office and we who have to sit under the rest of his jurisdiction."

FINAL WATER VOTE TONIGHT

Public Invited to Attend Council Meeting

Third and final reading of the ordinance authorizing an election on a $1,400,000 bond issue for improvements in the Wichita Falls water system is scheduled at the meeting of the city council in the Memorial auditorium Monday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Only three members of the council and Mayor J. W. Akin will be present. Aldermen at the meeting will be J. H. Patton, J. M. Spoonts and J. W. Hunt. Aldermen R. O. Harvey and C. E. McCuthen are out of the city.

Mayor Akin has invited the public to attend the meeting and present opinions on the proposed bond issue in an effort to determine the stand taken by citizens toward the action of the council at its last two meetings when the ordinance was passed on its first and second reading. City Manager George D. Fairtrace has pointed out that the issue would in all probability be paid off by a raise in the water rates, so as to distribute evenly the burden among all benefited by the improvements.

Several of the aldermen told The Record News Sunday that the council Monday night would consider altering the present ordinance so that it would provide for an election covering three different courses of action: voting on a $1,400,000 issue, voting on a $500,000 issue and voting on an issue of some other valuation, according to the stand taken by the public. This alteration would make it possible for citizens of Wichita Falls to indicate, in one election, their choice of the size of bond issue or to take the alternate action of voting against any issue or improvement in the water system, it was pointed out.

Growers of 'Dream Weed' Are Jailed

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 25. (UP)—Rumors of "dream weed parties" by young men and women at roadhouses near here have uncovered the existence of extensive marihuana cultivation in the Mexican section of Wichita.

Police said investigation of the asserted "wild parties," first led them to a search for the source of the weed, which is well known for its narcotic effect. Large quantities of it was found dried and stored and much was under cultivation here they said. Three Mexicans had been arrested for possession of the weed, which is barred from cultivation by law.

Kansas soil was said to be particulary suited to marihuana and officers believed it was distributed throughout the southwest from here.

Widow of Slain Okla. Engineer Denied Bond

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 25. (UP)—W. L. Coffey, assistant Tulsa county prosecutor, today assembled evidence in his effort to solve the murder of Charles W. Stanley, retired locomotive engineer, whose wife is held with Ernest Shackelford, her sister's husband.

Mrs. Stanley and Shackelford were arrested late Saturday in connection with the shooting which occurred July 31. They pleaded not guilty and were held without bond for preliminary hearing Sept. 3.

GIANT LINER ENDS FLIGHT OVER PACIFIC

Ship to Proceed to City Of Angels to Be Moored To Mast

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25. (UP)—Lieut. T. G. W. Settle, in charge of the landing crew of the Graf Zeppelin, received a message from the dirigible tonight stating that it would not land until daybreak.

"Proceeding during night at reduced speed to Los Angeles and can land shortly after sunrise about 5 a. m.," the message read. It was signed by the radio operator on the ship.

By CARLE H. BENNETT

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25. (UP)—The Graf Zeppelin, giant of the air, returned to the United States this evening from a flight around the world that started 18 days ago at Lakehurst, N. J.

The German air liner was over San Francisco at 6:10 p. m. (9:10 p. m. E. S. T.) It circled the city and then continued to Los Angeles, where it will be tied to a mast.

The ship appeared suddenly from out of a dense fog bank, and its steel gray sides glistened in the sunlight.

The Zeppelin was heading straight for the Golden gate, the entrance to San Francisco bay.

Cannons boomed out a salute.

An escort of 14 army planes were alongside the Zeppelin.

Approximately 200,000 persons lined the shore of San Francisco bay or stood on the top of buildings, waving hats and flags.

When the craft passed over the Golden gate it was flying at an altitude of approximately 1,000 feet.

Spectators were blinded by the setting sun as they watched the Zeppelin.

While it came down closer to earth, the dirigible passed over Crissey field, army base here, at 6:29 p. m.

Steamers in the bay and factories started to blow their whistles at that time.

At 6:30 p. m. it reached the waterfront and started to circle towards the south.

LOS ANGELES READY TO RECEIVE DIRIGIBLE

MINES FIELD, LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25. (UP)—Despite the expected arrival of the Graf Zeppelin late tonight, 18 hours in advance of schedule, all preparations for the reception of the big German commercial dirigible were complete.

When word was received that the Zeppelin probably would near its mooring mast about midnight, police and deputy sheriffs cleared hundreds of early visitors from the field.

Nearly 1,000 police and deputy sheriffs augmented 350 sailors and marines and members of the 160th infantry, California National guard, in policing the mile-square municipal field.

Particular emphasis was laid on protecting the northeast section of the airport, where the mooring mast and pipe lines had been installed. Double guards were placed around a railway siding where tank cars held 600,000 cubic feet of natural gas and pyrofax gas.

"No smoking" was the warning carried on scores of signs and there were enough bayonets, guns and nightsticks present to enforce the order over twice the area. Newspaper photographers were disgruntled because they would not be permitted to take flashlight pictures.

Youth Who Lost Life in Galveston Current Relative of Wichitans

Walter Girsch of Giddings, 23-year-old youth lost his life in an effort to save Miss Ella Birkman from a treacherous current at Galveston Saturday afternoon, was the brother-in-law of J. G. Birkman, 1312 Fillmore. Miss Birkman, who narrowly escaped drowning and whose danger cost the life of Walter Girsch and his father, Hermann Girsch, is the sister of the local man.

Mr. and Mrs. Birkman expected to leave late Sunday for Galveston and later for Giddings where the funeral will be held. Their first knowledge of the tragedy came through the Wichita Falls Daily Times and Record News Sunday morning. The party from Giddings were spending a week-end at the coast, Mrs. Birkman explained. Miss Birkman is a sister-in-law to Walter Girsch. Both men were drowned when they were caught in a whirlpool as they attempted to reach Miss Birkman after she had stepped off into a deep hole. She recovered herself but both her companions were lost.

JUST THE Baer Facts

By Bugs Baer

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. (US)—An amazing thing has happened to the outline of history.

It has lost its shape.

This epoch bouncing event has occurred on the golf links in Banff, Canada.

Between shooting, bootlegging and divot-whacking, everything seems to occur on golf links except golf.

To scramble the subject a little more, we want to say that the white man stole America from the Indian, mile by mile.

But the stoney Indians of Canada finally got an idea. They are caddying for their white brothers on the Banff links.

And are getting America back, divot by divot.

They tell us that the best of the Injun caddisters is Chief Sitting Eagle, no relation to Shipwreck Kelly.

Chief Eagle is the scion of famous warriors. Big chiefs who could spot the white man a stroke a hole and niblick his block off with a brassie-tomahawk.

Where Chief Eagle once carried his arrows in his quiver he now packs queer looking implements with names gleaned out of the story book of an idiot prodigy.

He gazes in amazement at the white man as he balances a doorknob on a thumb tack. Even the tacturn Chief Eagle blinks his Canadian eyes as the pale-face selects a war club and tries to smack that doorknob past the warning beacons of the northern lights.

When the doorknob rolls about a yard and teeters lazily on its axis like an overripe plum, even the chief grunts several octaves below normal as the white man hops around in agonizing sportsmanship.

Chief Eagle thinks: "Huh, white man stole red man's country. Now he steals red man's dance."

That's all there is to it, but it is a weekly news reel with a love plot.

When the white man goes into the bunkers for his week-end vacation, the chief thinks:

"Huh. White man in trench. Gettum out by Christmas."

Indicating that Woodrow Wilson's theory of peace is applicable to golf.

The chief continues to philosophize: "Huh, red man loved his country. White man hates it. He hits it with a club."

We intend to talk with the chief again about golf. He doesn't say a word. But he certainly says it with eyebrows.

around the field. A great wave of applause greeted them as the 17 roared past the stand, full speed in company front, the line as straight as that of a West Point detachment.

'Dog Fight'

The naval fliers took a few minutes more time than they had been allowed and before they had maneuvered to land, 36 army aces bore down on the field from opposite directions, 18 from Selfridge field, Mich., and the other 18 from Fort Crockett, Texas. The two groups looped and dived in intricate formations, crossing each other's paths until the scene resembled a "dog fight" of war days.

The service planes will remain through the 10 days of the meet, performing each afternoon. Admiral Moffatt said the Saratoga fliers would attempt to hook their tiny pursuit planes on to the dirigible Los Angeles when it arrives here Wednesday and is moored to the mast in the center of the field. The air race officials also were attempting to bring the Graf Zeppelin here when it arrives from the Orient.

14 LADY BIRDS LAND AT COLUMBUS, OHIO

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 25. (UP)—Leaving two of their number behind on the 408-mile jump made from St. Louis today, the 14 remaining contestants in the women's air derby from California to Cleveland landed late today, to the plaudits of 20,000 spectators.

Mrs. Louise M. Thaden, of Pittsburg, practically assured herself of the first prize for finishing first when she again led the parade dropping down at 5:15:10 p. m. Her elapsed time for the flight so far is 19:35:04.

HOLMAN LEADS MALE DERBYISTS IN RACE

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 25. (UP)—Charles "Speed" Holman was the first of the male air derbyists to arrive today from Bismarck, N. D. He swooped down on the airport here at 4:09 p. m.

Holman, however, failed to take the lead in elapsed time from T. A. Wells of Wichita for the flight from Portland to this point.

American Matador Scores New Triumph

CADIZ, Spain, Aug. 25. (US)—Sydney Franklin of Brooklyn, N. Y., the American matador who has won the hearts of bull-fighting audiences everywhere, scored another triumph today when he killed two bulls in the ring here.

Franklin was accorded a vociferous tribute by the spectators who carried the Brooklyn bull-fighter from the arena in triumph.

TEPEES DECK FAIR GROUNDS

Indians Arriving For Fete At Craterville

Special to The Record News.

LAWTON, Okla., Aug. 25.—The only chartered Indian fair in the world will open at Craterville Park, north of Cache, Aug. 31, and continue for three days. It is the sixth annual all-Indian State fair and for the first time was this year recognized by the state legislature to the extent that $1,000 was appropriated for agricultural exhibit premiums.

Scores of Indian tepees have already been staked in the forests and along the moutnainsides in the near vicinity of the park by advance representatives of the five tribes who will congregate in hundreds to participate in this event.

In Sixth Year

Six years ago chiefs of the tribes met in council at Craterville and signed a covenant with Frank Rush, cowboy naturalist, park owner and their friend of many years, providing for the annual fair, and placing entire control in the hands of the Indians. Every year has witnessed a material growth and the event is now a nationally advertised institution.

Three of the five tribes who will participate, the Comanches, Arapahoes and Apaches, in former years knew the site of the fair as favorite hunting grounds and Indian braves who knew the warrior Geronimo as their chief will be in attendance at the fair. Braves with buckskins and braided locks and blanket squaws will be seen in abundance, while girls of the Indian schools, dressed as neatly as their white sister will supervise the booths where will be displayed exhibitions of their learning, English composition, art and home economics.

Farm Exhibits

Indian farmers, whose fathers forsook the bow and arrow for the peaceful pursuits of his white brother, will bring exhibits in stock and agriculture, while blanket squaws, of which there are still many, will display species of handwork in beeds, buckskin and feathers which their accomplished white sisters have never been able to duplicate.

Tribal dances will entertain visitors every afternoon and night; the moon dance, the snake dance, the corn dance and the war dance. For these occasions the finest costumes of the tribes are worn. The Indians dance not only for entertainment of guests, but long after the crowds are gone and the bright lights of the amphitheater are extinguished. The Indians chant and dance with Indian abandon throughout the hours of the night, the beating of the tom-toms carrying through the deep mountain canyons into the surrounding valleys.

Horse Racing

Among the Indians are many fine blooded horses, and many a young brave who at times has not a dollar in his pocket, possesses a fine horse which he cherishes and cares for as the apple of his eye. Every afternoon of the fair there will be Indian races, participated in by horses who successfully compete in the racing meets in Oklahoma and Texas.

Each afternoon a parade will be staged by the Indians which will represent the progress of the tribes during the past 150 years. This will be an interesting and educational historical pageant.

Among the amusement features of the daily program will be tugs of war between the young men of the tribes, bow-and-arrow contests, Indian women kick ball contests and shimmy games, old Indian wheel games, etc.

The State All-Indian fair will draw visitors from far-off places this year as it has been extensively advertised.

Quanah Firemen Given Banquet

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Aug. 25—Quanah's volunteer firemen were given an appreciation banquet recently by W. M. Allen, cafe proprietor for their splendid work in checking the flames which damaged and threatened to destroy his cafe about two weeks ago when the rooming house directly over the cafe was practically totally burned.

Judge C. Y. Welch, a retired fireman, was toastmaster, and introduced F. O. Griffith, Frank W. Kennerly, Claude Triplett, Fire Chief Frank Thwing, James Reed, Bill Eubanks, and Carl Gallagher, editor of the Tribune Chief, all of whom spoke briefly but in terms of praise for the fire boys who have made Quanah's volunteer department one of the most efficient in the state.

Members of the department attending were: F. A. Thwing, chief; W. A. Galloway, V. R. Marlin, G. R. Cyrus, W. E. Eubanks, E. O. Wykes, Claude Triplett, Oscar Buckholt, J. T. Drummond, Ed Alexander, Ed Hagood, J. D. Glenn, L. A. McGaughey, Edward Magee, Joe Addison, L. M. Huggins, Hubert Smith, Jack Hurst, Farris Wells, R. L. Knowles, W. M. Owens, Jim Reed, J. E. Forrest, W. E. Maddox, Ben Riley, W. B. Toland, Frank Kennerly, Vestal Daughtry and Horace Smith.

Olustee Folk Guests At Williams Banquet

Special to The Record News

OLUSTEE, Okla., Aug. 25.—J. H. Murray, superintendent of the Olustee school, and Mrs. Murray, J. I. Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. George Dyer were special guests at the banquet given Friday evening at Altus, honoring Holland Williams, Ozark, Forrest Burns, Hillsdale, and Harold Woodson, Comanche, winners in the dairy judging contest held in England. Holland Williams was the highest scoring individual in the world.

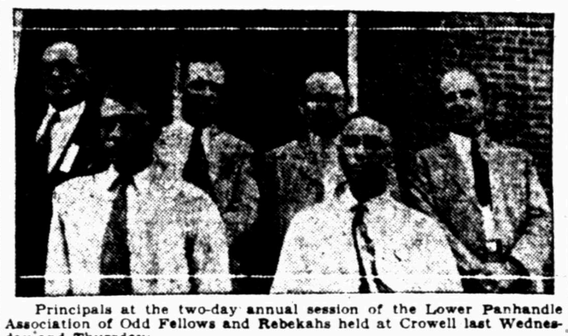

Moreland to Speak At Kiwanis Luncheon

Rev. Patrick Dacus Moreland, pastor of the Grant Street Methodist church, will address the members of the Kiwanis club at the Kemp hotel Monday noon, officers of the club announced Sunday.

Plans to be followed in the two-weeks' citywide young people's revival which opened Sunday night at the First Methodist church will be the subject of a part of Rev. Mr. Moreland's talk, he said.

Most of the 3,200,000 people of India live on six or eight cents a day.

'Little Fox,' Texas Ranger of Many Exploits, to Get Record Certified

AUSTIN, Aug. 25. (UP)—The "Little Fox" is having his service record of 34 years with the Texas rangers certified.

The "Little Fox," otherwise Deputy Joe Bell of Bexar county, is supposed to have more bullets in his body than any living Texan. Although he is 69 he carries his age and 22 leaden slugs like a youngster. His original ranger service record was destroyed years ago when the old capitol here burned.

"Little Fox" was brought to the United States from Germany when a child. At 15 he joined the rangers. Twice captured by the Apache Indians, three times by the Comanches, he always escaped. The Apaches, he said, once tied him to a cot, stripped him of his clothing, placed him between two poisoned spears that would have pierced his cheeks had he moved and then stirred up a bed of red ants underneath him. He survived the torture.

Bell always followed the rule that he would not shoot unless he had to.

"A man who knows the power of powder and lead won't use it," he said. "When it leaves the muzzle of that gun you have no control of it. I've always treated everybody like I want them to treat me.

"The eye is quicker than the trigger finger. You can look a man out of shooting quicker than you can shoot him."

Survey Shows Parents Careless About Dances

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. (US)—Apathy of parents toward the presence of their children in public dance halls has grown to be an important problem, according to a survey recently made by the children's bureau of the department of labor.

Efforts of the bureau to discourage young men and girls under 18 years of age from frequenting the dance halls have been nullified in many instances by the attitude of the parents, a statement by the bureau today declared. Exhaustive studies of the conditions found in 416 cities are included in the report.

Actor Says Promoter Failed to Pay Off

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25. (UP)—Warrants charging C. C. Pyle, transcontinental foot race promoter, with violation of the state labor laws, were to be issued here Monday.

Complaints were issued Saturday by City Prosecutor Lloyd S. Nix. Alfred Hickman, actor, complained that Pyle hired his troupe to provide entertainment during night stops, but failed to pay labor debts. The complaint has been held up several times when he made payment on other claims. Some $50,000 in unpaid prize money is not involved.

HARD DRINKS

Sheriff Jails Man on Third Liquor Charge After Raid on Cafe

A man already under two federal charges was re-arrested and a quantity of whisky was seized by members of the sheriff's department Sunday afternoon after county officers had sniffed at so-called "soft drinks" being offered for sale at a restaurant on the edge of town. Investigations showed the soft drinks to have been right stiffly hardened, according to information given by Sheriff W. G. Bralley. Charlie Gant and Dick Morris, deputy sheriffs, conducted the raid which emptied the stand of its spiked drinks and brought a third whisky charge against the man.

THUGS REVEAL NEW 'RACKET'

Broadway Bandits Now Go For Brokers

CHICAGO, Aug. 25. (US)—Not all the latest stunts in racketeering are being devised in Chicago, according to Charles Green, Broadway racketeer, today. Green was arrested by Chicago police. Green is under indictment for the murder in the East of William Cassidy and Simon Walker, who were slain in the Hotsy Totsy cabaret, 1712 Broadway.

New York racketeers are now exploiting a new and promising field—kidnaping and blackmailing brokers, the net results of which total more than $1,000,000 so far, said Green, whose arrest here is expected to help lead to a solution of the slaying of Frank Marlowe, one of Broadway New York's arch gang leaders, and the friend of the equally late Arnold Rothstein, the gambler.

Discussing the new racket, Green told Deputy Commissioner Stege and Sergeant Thomas Horan of the New York police force that brokers of the eastern metropolis provide ready and satisfactory returns. Some brokers, he said, are somewhat "shady" in their transactions, and consequently fearful of exposure. Some others have romantic attachments for show girls, and are equally careful not to have their relationships disclosed. It is easy, therefore, for racketeers to mulet them of such sums as $25,000 and even twice that amount, with just a threatening gesture.

Fruit Fly Experts Sail

Expedition to Study Habits Of Pest

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. (US)—A broad study of the fruit fly in the countries bordering on the Mediterranean is the object of an expedition that departed from New London, Conn., yesterday for Bermuda under the auspices of the department of agriculture, the department announced today.

After studying the situation in Bermuda and the Azores the expedition then will concentrate on the citrus region of the Mediterranean. The work in Spain will center around Valencia. It is probable that Professor Quayle also will spend some time studying the fruit fly as it exists in North Africa and especially in Tunis and Algeria. From the study of the fly in its European habitat, it is hoped that steps can be taken to check its ravages in the United States.

Youths Held in Theft Of Doctor's Forceps Here

Three youths, one 16 years old and the other two 14 years old, were arrested about 9:30 o'clock Sunday night in connection with the theft of several pairs of physician's artery forceps from a salesman. The arrest was made before the salesman, who was attending a theater, knew that the articles had been taken from his automobile which was parked on Scott avenue. He was later notified of the recovery.

The report was made to police when the boys were seen in an alley near Scott avenue with the forceps, possession of which did not fit with their appearance. Plainclothes Officers W. E. McDonald and Elmer Thornton investigated the report and made the arrest, finding also an automobile tube in the boys' possession. The three will be given into the custody of Juvenile Officer J. A. McDonald Monday, police said.

TWO BALES IN

WELLINGTON, Texas, Aug. 25.—Two bales of cotton have been ginned in Collingsworth county. The first was produced by N. J. King and the second by A. M. Ledbetter, and were ginned Thursday and Friday, Aug. 15 and 16. Premiums amounting to $79.50 were awarded by merchants working with the local chamber of commerce.

KRUGER WRITES OF TRAVELS

Wichita Boy Tells of Trip Through Europe

Aaron Kruger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kruger, 1305 Buchanan street, who was sent to Europe as the only delegate from Texas to the international Hi-Y convention on the island of Ameland, off the coast of Holland, is now making a tour of the continent in company with several other American boys. The party will visit France, Germany, Switzerland, England and other European countries before sailing again for the United States.

Keeps Diary

A part of a diary which is being kept by young Kruger throughout the trip has been received by his parents here. He has entered a day-by-day record of his impressions and the events of his journey up until the time of his arrival in Scotland on July 19 and through his tour of Scotland. The remainder of the diary, including his record of the convention and the tour of the continent, will be sent later.

The following are a few excerpts from the notebook: "Impressions of July 6 (en route to Niagara Falls)—Katherine Dillon, 11 years old, lives in Oklahoma City, is going to Erie, Pa., and can ask more questions than a jealous wife. Sam Dibble Jr., from Terre Haute, met him at the supper table, a swell fellow, on his way to New York where he attends college, is a good friend of Jack Pink. Mr. Hillburne, my section partner, from St. Louis to Buffalo, a nice old man, has been across the ocean 16 times.

"July 7—I don't like Buffalo. Have a good notion to leave for Utica tonight. Happy, our driver, knew everything like a book. An old lady who was always afraid of being gyped out of something. A girl from Toledo, a nice girl, works in a doctor's office.

"July 18 (on board ship)—Today was foggy and raining at intervals. All our time was taken up in meetings and packing. The Hi-Y group met and I was in charge. Elected officers today. Much excitement when we sighted land about 5:45, the little island of Tory just off the coast of the British Isles. Although it is nice to see land again, I am sorry that our boat trip is over.

"July 19—Everything seems so strange. Cars drive on the left side of the street. The Irish impress me as being very industrious. The street cars are very queer. . . . We went to the courthouse where his honor the Lord Mayor Sir William Coats entertained us and drank tea with us. He made a speech welcoming us to Ireland. . . . We took a tramway to see Queen's university which is a medical school. We saw a marvelous art gallery and the Gardens Brittains—and heard the old tradition about the hand of the O'Neils. Some of the customs here seem very queer to me. I saw one fellow wearing a derby hat and a new suit driving a trash cart. In the art gallery we saw a mummy, the evolution of the bicycle, an old war candle and hundreds of other things.

"July 20—The Dublin people seem more indolent and socially inclined than those of Belfast.

"July 24—Edinburgh: I think I would like to live here. We visited all around the city. I can neither describe the city nor what I got out of it. Words cannot express just what I am getting out of this trip—I can't explain myself—but I know it is something wonderful. It is small wonder that Walter Scott was such a great artist in description. But even his descriptions pale in comparison with the real thing."

Nomads Slay 130 Chinese

Soviet Blamed for Revolt Of Mongol Tribe

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Aug. 25. (UP)—An uprising of Mongol nomads in Hurunbuir district of Barga and their massacre of 130 Chinese today added to the intensity of the Chinese-Russian war danger in Manchuria.

Chinese authorities alleged that the Mongol revolt was inspired by Soviet agitators. They charged that Soviet military agents led the Nomads of the Mongolian desert land in their revolt. The uprising was described as "communistic."

Military officials were dispatched immediately to put down the revolt, according to advices from Manchurian border, the Mongols having declared their independence. The uprising apparently is a resumption of the Barga rebellion of 1928, officials said.

Meanwhile, the armed conflict on the Manchurian border continued intermittently, and Chinese renewed their charges of communistic activities in Manchuria.

Russian airplanes appeared this morning over Muling, near Suifenho, which is on the eastern Manchurian border. Chinese sources said the aviators were locating railways lines and the principal coal mines of the area. Border patrols continued according to border reports, and the Chinese have destroyed part of the Chinese Eastern railway northward from Manchuli because Soviet armored trains threatened to advance along the road.

LONDON, Aug. 25. (UP)—The Daily Express correspondent at Mukden reported tonight that Chang Hsueh-Liang, Manchurian dictator, has ordered 150 trains prepared for transportation of military forces.

The correspondent said it is believed the order foreshadows movement to the forntier sone of Chang's crack Fengtien army, possibly 180,000 strong.

Rabbit Breeders To Meet Tuesday Night

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the American Rabbit and Cavy Breeders association will be held Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the courthouse, it was announced Sunday by W. L. Smith, corresponding secretary. All officers and directors were urged to attend since an important business session has been planned, Mr. Smith said, and all persons interested in rabbits breeding were invited to present their problems and experiences in order that other members may discuss questions pertaining to the business.

Japan May Ask for Increase In Naval Strength, Official Says

TOKYO, Aug. 25. (UP)—Japan may ask a 16 2-3 per cent increase in its naval strength, as compared with those of Great Britain and the United States, in order to maintain its prestige as a great world power, a responsible government official told the United Press.

Such an increase would change the 5-5-3 ratio of the American, British and Japanese navies, respectively, to 5-5-3⅓ or 10-10-7.

The Japanese delegation at the three-power naval conference in Geneva two years ago suggested Japan's desire to increase its ration, the United Press informant said, and found the British delegates willing but the American delegation non-committal.

The report that the imperial delegates might request the 10-10-7 ratio in the proposed new international conference to consider further naval limitation first appeared in the Japan Advertiser, which quoted an "official of the navy department" as its source of information. A spokesman for the navy minister denied the statement and said no program had yet been formulated. From another source, however, it was learned the plan has been put forward at several conversations between naval experts and officials of the imperial foreign office.

Vernon Agent of Wichita Papers Entertains Boys at Lake

Six boys from the Vernon agency of The Record News and Daily Times were guests of R. E. McCormick, Vernon agent of the Wichita Falls papers, at Lakeside park Sunday for all the pleasures the Wichita Falls resort affords.

The boys were winners of a contest sponsored by Mr. McCormick for the city of Vernon and were Champ Castleberry, five years with the Vernon agency; Finis Daniel, Louis Sutton, Alvin South, Buford Eason and Chunk Eason. The winners represented the three carriers with the best records last month on routes in Vernon and the three best street salesmen. Eighteen boys work in Vernon under Mr. McCormick's direction in delivering the papers to Vernon homes and in selling the newspapers on the streets.

Young People's Revival Opens

virtuous young man promptly and frankly answered from a record that was clean."

Referring to the dangers to which young men may be exposed, the speaker said: "I thank God for the coming of a high day when the young woman of this country will demand that young men be clean before expecting these young women to become their wives. We should be grateful for, and praise our legislators, for the passage of that wise law recently enacted to throw up at least a fair measure of safety about future marriages in this state."

The young ruler, who when asked to sell all his possessions for the benefit of the poor, went away in sorrow, and stamped himself in that moment as the supreme failure of all time, the speaker said.

"His failure was greater than that of Judas Iscariot because he was a greater man than Judas. Greater than that of Benedict Arnold, because he towers above Arnold in every particular that imparts rank or standing to a man. He was good, flawlessly good—but good for nothing. He had the fine qualities of Damascus steel, but like the sword of Joan of Arc now is, he lay rusting in idleness. He lost out because he had no vision, and no courage.

Supreme Failure

"Many a man says to me: 'Yes, I would like to be a Christian, but I know I couldn't live up to it.' I say to you, the man who toils at the job faithfully while the sweat drops blind his eyes, and his muscles ache, and his heart pounds—that man can be forgiven, should he stumble. But to stand in the window, content to remain among one's riches, comfortable in selfish idleness, while Jesus and his disciples march on across the ages as they marched in the flesh away from the house of the young ruler—that is the supreme failure of life."

This young man had the qualifications to be another Elijah, or a Paul, but he sold himself out at a tremendously low price, the speaker said, saving his life to find he had saved nothing; keeping his talents to see them rust inside him; retaining his comfort, to be forgotten by posterity for all save his stupendous failure.

"There is something infinitely better than being good," Reverend Moreland said. "It is being faithful and true in the little things of the kingdom of God. The fighter who fights on when he is down and out is the man who will go through to a triumphant finish in the fight for Christian faith."

Faith in Youth

Expressing his faith in the younger generation of today, despite the general criticism of its moral standards from many sources Reverened Moreland commended the Junior chamber of commerce of this city for throwing its entire organization back of the young people's revival.

"Proof of stability and earnestness of young people today is shown," he said, "by the fact that in our church we have many who have spent five or six years in training for service in foreign fields, and who are detained only by our lack of funds to send them. This is a situation unparalleled in the history of religion." Reverend Moreland announced that his subject for Monday night will be "The Unborn Generation." The service will be held at 8 o'clock in the old First Methodist church building at Tenth and Lamar.

Rev. Patrick Henry, who was to have spoken for the union congregation Sunday night, presided at Sunday night's service, which was broadcast through station KGKO. Dr. E. R. Barcus, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church, offered the opening prayer. About 50 young people of the various local churches formed a chorus choir which sang under the direction of Erwin F. Bohmfalk, musical director of the First Methodist church. Miss Mildred Anderson, pianist, and Durward Park, violinist, joined Mrs. J. W. Akin Jr., organist of the First Methodist church, in playing accompaniments for the congregational singing. R. E. Shepherd, accompanied by Mrs. Akin, sang "Open the Gates of the Temple."

New Citizen Tears Up San Antonio's Letter of Welcome

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 25. (UP)—A city that will hand out a letter of welcome with one hand and a speeding ticket with the other brought a gesture of disgust from a new San Antonio resident this week.

George W. Kenison, received a letter from the mayor and city commissioners recently, when he moved here, which began: "We note with pleasure . . ." and continued "We would feel honored indeed if you would visit your city hall and become better acquainted with your public servants, and exchange ideas for the betterment and growth of our city."

Then, this week a motorcycle officer handed him two tickets to the daily show that goes on in corporation court. One ticket was for speeding at the rate of 30 miles an hour and the other was for passing a stop sign.

Judge Dave Watson dismissed the stopsign case, but he assessed a $5 fine in the speeding case.

Kenison paid his fine, tore up the letter of welcome, and threw it on the corporation court desk.

Night Police Sergeant Plans Vacation Trip

Night Sergeant John McIntyre of the police department will leave next Sunday for a 30-day vacation trip to Ohio and his home in West Virginia. His position at the desk will be filled during his absence by C. M. Goodwin, secretary to Chief Frank Burns.

Eureka Springs Plans Summer Art Exhibit

EUREKA SPRINGS, Ark., Aug. 25.—C. Harry Allis of the National Arts club of New York City arrived here today accompanied by Mrs. Allis and will personally supervise a late summer art exhibit preparatory to assuming his duties as director of the conservatory of art of "Crescent college of this city.

PAIN AFTER EATING

can be quickly eased with ACIDINE, the new discovery, because it eliminates excess acid and digests starchy foods. Six out of every ten suffer from starch digesting failure or as Webster's Dictionary puts it "Diastatic Deficiency."

ONLY IN ACIDINE CAN YOU FIND AN EXTRAORDINARY ANTI-ACID PLUS THE EXTRAORDINARY STARCH DIGESTANT "JAPTASE" WHICH DIGESTS 500 TIMES ITS OWN WEIGHT IN STARCHY FOODS.

At the first sign of SOURNESS, ACID, BELCHING, INDIGESTION, BILIOUSNESS, HEARTBURN, GAS OR A FEELING OF FULLNESS, take ACIDINE at once. Immediately your discomfort will be relieved.

ACIDINE prevents starchy foods from getting into your fermenting lumps and at the same time neutralizes excess acid. Potatoes, bread, cereals, in fact all starchy foods are liquified within 30 minutes and pass out of the stomach as liquid dextrin. In addition, ACIDINE contains an anti-acid which remains in the stomach and keeps it sweet for a considerable period of time. ACIDINE is safe, effective, swift, sure, and GUARANTEED UNDER A MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. Your druggist has it, or write Health Laboratories, Inc., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Bread An' Jam

A Daily Illustrated Poem For Children

By Wymond Garthwaite

I'D LOVE TO BE—

I'd love to be a soldier so!
Just think of all the fun
Of scaring people all around
By shooting off my gun!

A drummer boy, too, I'd like to be
And go marching along with a zoom!
A rumpety dumpety umpty dump
And a bumpety umpety boom!

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. N. CASON

About the most important living things that we know, excepting of course, negro Pullman porters and negro circus band drummers, are hens with new broods.

We will have to amend that statement, for more important still, is the hen with one chicken.

We have a family of fowls and we have been watching them. The roosters, for instance, parading his part as father of the family; calling lustily for them to follow him to food and in the meantime, gobbling greedily every morsel he can find. And should one of the members of his harem dare pluck a morsel from beneath his beak, she is promptly put in her place by a sharp peck.

We heard an old country woman complain once that her life would be happy, only her husband was too good to her. There wasn't any "discontention" in her family. Perhaps that is the reason why the chicken family clucks and crows so merrily all day long; the rooster rouses some "discontention."

But back to the hen with one chicken. She follows it proudly and if it successfully finds a little bug, she calls the attention of all the world. Whatever it does is just a little better than any other lone chick has done.

She is exactly like the mother with one child. She lives, breathes and talks her one chick.

Then there's a hen that's worse than the hen with one chick. That's the cross old biddy that hasn't any, and fights them all. She thinks there's only one way to make them mind and that is by pecking them.

She reminds us of the old maid aunts who are always ready to tell one how to bring up the young. We have seen these hens fight with the mother hen over a lone chick. And we have seen very bitter feelings when old maid aunts have advised about children.

In spite of a sometimes ludicrous side, motherhood is nine times out of ten, a pretty thing. And a mother's life is, somehow, more complete than that of one denied the care of a little baby all her own.

Wellington Ginners Attend Quanah Meet

Special to The Record News.

WELLINGTON, Texas, Aug. 25.—Several local ginners met with almost 100 others in Quanah last week and discussed prices of cotton and ginning for the coming year and the handling of the cotton crop for the 1929 season. The meeting resulted in the solid organization of the ginners of several localities and will meet each year. Independent and cooperative ginners compose the organization to maintain better ginning standards and ginning prices. Wellington ginners at the meeting were R. C. Dryden, J. A. Coleman, Bill House and Paul Starr.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 22. (US)—A waitressette, or diminutive waitress, in a Los Angeles tea room, says she bought a beautiful beaded chiffon robe that cost $200, from a wealthy resident of the Ambassador hotel, for $25. She says that she is going to so many parties and dances, at the smart hotels, she just has to have a lot of good clothes. She had been to a party the night before but her beau's car was stolen so they went in her car, cost $1,800, all paid for. She drives to work in it, accompanied by a bulldog that watches the car while she "waites."

That's a great town for "waiting." And you don't have to wait long either.

Sometimes it's really surprising how fifty-fifty marriage is.

Now the lady I have in mind is a little black haired thing, and pretty. When she got on the train at Los Angeles she kissed a good looking boy friend good-bye. Ooo, very affectionately! Whispered promises were exchanged and everything.

Train got stalled on the way East and she talked with various passengers, telling them she was going back to Chicago against her husband's wishes. He wanted her to go to Honolulu and have a nice vacation. He was so generous and so anxious that she turned around and struck for home.

"He is working so hard," she explained, "that I suppose he wants me out of the way, but I am not sure. I want to be a little more certain."

She didn't say anything about the whispering Romeo at the station.

She had a certain appeal, and both men and women liked her on the trip, and she was funny and entertaining. When her hubby met her, she trotted him over and introduced him to all her passenger friends.

Now there just happened to be one who was met by her own husband, who said to his wife: "Who is that woman?"

"Just a merry passenger whose husband wanted her to go to Honolulu and she wouldn't," said the wife.

"I know why," said the man. "I was phoning for my car and her husband came out of the next booth, where I heard him apologizing to some woman for his wife's return. He said he would try to get her to change her mind and go back but that really, she would have to forgive him, for after all the woman was his wife and he was doing the best he could under very trying circumstances."

No doubt the wife would fling a wicked rolling pin if she knew about it, but what about the boy friend with the whisper at the Los Angeles station?

Haskell Folk Hurt In Mississippi Car Wreck

Special to The Record News.

HASKELL, Texas, Aug. 25—News reached Haskell relatives early in the week of the very serious injury of Ex-Commissioner P. C. Patterson of precinct 4 and his wife and grandson in a car wreck near Jackson, Miss. A later wire stated that while the injuries were very severe and would detain the trip home some 10 or 15 days, there were no fatalities. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson were on their return trip from their old home in Alabama when the accident occurred. Detailed account was not given.

Blazing Car Starts 'Stampede' in Quanah

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Aug. 25.—A roadster, with flames shooting from the hood, when the car started to back from the curb, caused a near stampede on Main street recently. A short-circuit in the wiring ignited the gasoline, and the car would probably have been destroyed except that J. M. Darwood, before whose store the car stood, rushed out with fire extinguisher and soon had the blaze under control.

First Marriage Experience Fails To Teach Lessons

"Experience Seems to Teach Nothing in Matrimony—Whether People Have Been Happily or Unhappily Married, It Doesn't Keep Them From Wanting to Repeat the Experience."

Why do men and women marry a second time? Herein lies the greatest mystery of the human heart. According to statistics, one marriage in six ends in divorce. All of us can count on the fingers of one hand and still have digits to spare, the number of really happy, congenial, satisfied married couples that we know. The large majority of marriages degenerate into nothing but endurance tests, in which disgruntled and antagonistic husbands and wives stick together, for the sake of their children or from a sense of duty or for financial and social reasons. No other human undertaking ends so often in failure as marriage.

You would think that the attitude of these men and woman who have been so bitterly disappointed in marriage would be "never again" and that wild horses could not drag them to the altar a second time. You would think that those who had found marriage a hell on earth would never again venture within a thousand miles of the brink of that pit once they had scrambled out of it.

You would think that the man who had had to listen day after day, month after month, year after year, to the nagging of a peevish, fretful woman and who had had to furnish an alibi for every hour he was away from home would never voluntarily put his head in the noose again after he had escaped to freedom.

You would think that the woman who had been married to a surly brute who had knocked everything she did and doled out nickels to her and who made of her nothing but an unpaid servant would be a burnt child who fears the fire and who would never run the risk again of falling into the clutches of a domestic tyrant.

You would think that even those who had been happily married would be afraid to risk it the second time. You would think that they would fear that Lady Luck would not always be with them and that they would apprehend that their second venture might not be the glorious success that their first had been and that they would not again get a wife who was tender and sweet and gentle and amiable and a good cook and a thrifty manager, or a husband who was affectionate and considerate and generous and understanding and a good provider.

But such is not the case. Experience seems to teach nothing in matrimony. Failure and misery erect no red-light warnings of danger. Whether people have been happily or unhappily married, it doesn't keep them from wanting to repeat the experience. Even the divorced are game for a second try.

One might account for the remarriage of widows on the meal-ticket theory. Few domestic women have been taught any trade by which they can support themselves, and so about the only way they can make a living is to marry it. They know how to fry the bacon, but they have to have a man to bring it home to them. They cannot go out and get it for themselves. And so matrimony becomes to them about the only gainful profession that they can follow.

However, the rich widows are just as eager to marry as the poor ones are. Many a man who has been a tightwad husband, whose wife has had to get every penny out of him with a corkscrew leaves her a fortune when he dies, and you would think she would be so gay and feel so free and independent spending her insurance money that she wouldn't chance getting another husband who would demand to know what she did with that quarter he gave her week before last, but no.

She can have a beautiful house and furnish it with period furniture and Persian rugs and everything else her heart craves and that she has never been allowed to have before, but she finds that a husband is even more necessary in a home to give it atmosphere than pictures and draperies. Somehow a woman can't put any pep in getting up a dinner unless a man is to eat it, even if he does growl over it. Somehow the day falls flat if a man isn't coming home at the end of it, even if he is going to start something the minute he puts his key in the lock.

Widowers, according to the records in the marriage license bureau, are even more given to matrimony than are widows. Few of them, either grass or sod, remain in a bereaved state longer than a year or two. That they should be so eager to resume the bonds that death or the courts have broken is one of the mysteries that no one can fathom, because men are wanderers by nature, not many of them during their wives' lifetime electing to bear them company by the fireside and most of them complaining loud and longly of the burdens of matrimony, of its slavery and of its bills.

Nevertheless, let wife pass on, either to another husband or to the better world in which there is no marriage or giving in marriage, and instead of clinging with both hands to his new-found freedom, Mr. Husband is putting a wedding ring on another woman's finger.

Why? Goodness knows. Perhaps he finds out that after having been thoroughly housebroken he has lost his taste for the wild. Perhaps, like a small boy, he finds it no fun to play hooky when there is nobody to bamboozle and nobody cares whether he goes or comes. Nothing takes the spice out of adventure like the lack of danger.

Perhaps he grows tired of even the best restaurant and club cooking, where he has to order his own meals and longs for home cooking. Perhaps he is lost without somebody to take care of him and look after his laundry and put the buttons in his shirt and rub his rheumatism and tell him to put on his overshoes. Perhaps he misses having somebody to scrap with always on hand. Perhaps if he has been happily married he cannot endure the loneliness of not having some one to love and to love him.

Be all that as it may, it is a fact that whether people are happily or unhappily married, marriage does something to them that unfits them for single life. That is why widows and widowers try it the second and the third time, hoping always to draw the capital prize in the matrimonial lottery, but sure that even if they miss it they will get a consolation prize that is better than nothing. For even if matrimony is not always happy, it is never dull.—DOROTHY DIX.

Smart Top Coat to Be Worn With Sleeveless Summer Frocks

In anticipation of many more days of hot weather, sleeveless frocks continue their popularity, yet a top coat is essential in case of unlooked for cool evenings. And then, too, it is just a bit early for authentic fall styles, so the clever woman wears her summer frocks under a good looking coat that has been made of a fabric suitable to numerous frocks. Of course, autumn styles are in the making, but the only certainty is longer skirts. There are hints of normal waistlines, but every woman cannot wear that to advantage; also richly colored fabrics, both plain and printed are being emphasized.

However, this is August, and if one would be comfortable, one continues with cool, summery dresses. The attractive coat shown today may be used with all the frocks—the printed wash silks and the tweed skirt and silk blouse rig, because it is fashioned of the very smart, light weight tweed. Heavy stitching forms the only trimming, just in case one of the frocks might be trimmed, and then it could not clash. Other suitable materials that ensemble smartly with summer frocks, are twill, velvet, kasha and gaberdine.

Both three-quarter and full length coats are being used, so you may use your own taste about that. Design 1765 and 1741 may be used together for an unusually chic ensemble, selecting the coat, skirt and bodice trimming in black and white tweed—the blouse of white satin. The other two adult models may use wash silk, pique, crepe or silk and wool mixture. Have you noticed that the model wearing the coat has design 1736 under it?

The little tots are saying goodbye, because little miss 1730 is going to a party and is dressed in her best frock of dotted dimity. Her playmate is going shopping with mother in a simple, practical rig made of plaid gingham. They both look adorable! And now a few words regarding the details of all the models shown.

PATTERN 1730

Isn't this delectable with its graceful little ruffles gathered smartly to a full frock? The neck and armholes of design 1730 are bound either with the dress fabric or with a contrasting color. All white, a white ground with a colored dots or colored dots or colored ground with white dots, will fashion an exquisite dress. The shoulder bow may be made of satin ribbon.

May be obtained only in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 4 requires 3 yards of 40-inch material.

PATTERN 1735

Simple, practical and durable, are just a few terms readily applied to the little gingham frocks that have found such favor in the fashion world this season, for young and old alike. Design 1735 is made of plaid gingham and trimmed in smartly pointed manner with white pique—the collar, vestee, cuffs and pocket flaps. A front inverted pleat affords ample freedom. Tiny pearl buttons lend attractive finish.

May be obtained only in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 4 requires 2¼ yards of 36-inch material and one-half yard of trimming.

PATTERN 1765

Because they are inevitably becoming—because they do for innumerable occasions and because they ensemble smartly with summer frocks, tweed top coats are popular with smart and practical women. The model shown today, design 1765, has jaunty pockets, Johnny collar and a chic belt. It has all the marks of expert tailoring, yet is extremely simple to make. Black and white is the outstanding color scheme and is most adaptable to ensemble blending. Other attractive colors run towards the tan, gray or beige.

May be obtained only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2⅝ yards of 54-inch material.

PATTERN 1741

Separate blouse and skirt outfits are extremely smart this season, as they create many different changes. Design 1741 is particularly attractive because of the snugly fitted, shaped girdle and smartly pleated skirt. The bodice is trimmed with crossed bands of the skirt fabric. Buttons lend charming finish. We suggest tweed, kasha, jersey, velvet or twill for the skirt and satin or silk for the blouse.

May be obtained only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 requires 1⅝ yards blouse fabric and 2¼ yards for the skirt and trim.

PATTERN 1738

The bodice of design 1738 is smart and simple; the skirt is outstanding through cleverly placed pleats and front panel. A pert bow of the dress material, or contrasting, finishes the V neck and turned collar. Printed wash silk, pique, foulard or crepe may be used in making this frock.

May be obtained only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 36 and 38. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards of 36-inch material.

PATTERN 1736

This unusual frock portrays the attraction of points as trimming. Collar, skirt yoke, bodice band closing—all finished with points and heavily stitched in smart tailored fashion. The tiny pocket is just the size of a package of your favorite brand of cigarets. Printed wash silk would be lovely for making design 1736.

May be obtained only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 36-inch material.

When ordering your patterns, be sure to write very plainly the style number and size of each pattern wanted. Patterns will be sent upon receipt of 15 cents in U. S. coins or stamps, for each pattern.

Be sure to give your name and address. We suggest that you send 10 cents additional for our pattern book, containing many more delightful styles.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

Two Hearts, Two Minds

I cannot understand why tradition has decreed that husband and wife shall never go out separately. There is an almost universal disposition to view with suspicion a woman who is seen having a good time in public with a man not her husband.

It is true, of course, that the woman may sometimes be at fault but more often the fault is with those whose blind acceptance of conventions is narrow and essentially unhealthy. Just why can't a decent man or woman go out with another decent person without causing talk?"

No decent and intelligent woman who loves her husband, knows him and has faith in him, would attribute the motives to him which those who are not essentially decent, intelligent or who really know him, instantly and maliciously impute to him the moment he is seen without her. Is it a crime to enjoy the companionship of people to whom one is not married? The ultimate unpardonable degradation is that lack of faith and understanding. Without faith no marriage can be made worth while. Constant supervision is anything but evidence of faith.

Aside from the tonic good which dining out separately does both wife and husband, it is still more important that they should be able to bridge the gaps of differing opinions, which inevitably come to the minds of all people, married and single. No husband and wife ever have agreed about everything. Damage is done only when there is an inability or disinclination to recognize the cardinal principle that every person has a mind of his or her own and that there should not be any trespassing. It will be enough if, recognizing this, their hearts are merged.

Trouble and tragedy arise only when a man or a woman tries to tyrannize the other's mind. Two minds working separately are better than one working for both.

A civilized attitude toward marriage creates an atmosphere in which the petty causes of strife and friction can not function. If two people love each other and understand each other they can well afford the luxury of going out with others—even people whom the other does not like. They will be the means by which the married couple can prove to their own satisfaction that it is possible to disagree even about people and in spite of disagreement be happy together and find truer and deeper understanding in the very fact of disagreement.

Where there are two minds, which do not make difference of opinion a cause for domestic warfare, there is enduring peace, understanding and happiness.

Are you troubled and do you need advice? Betty Brainerd will reply personally to those sending stamped self-addressed envelope.

Special to The Record News.

SPUR, Texas, Aug. 25.—On Sept. 8 a delegation of agronomists and extension workers will convene at Hayes, Kan. The object of this meeting is for a detailed study of the grain sorghum. After a brief stay at the place of meeting these men will make a trip through Kansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, and part of Texas. At the Chillicothe, Texas, station the delegation will be served with a chicken barbecue, and from there they will come to Spur. Some time will be spent at the station here, and from here they will go to Lubbock.

It is not definitely known how many men will be in the party, but from Texas, A. B. Conner, director of extension service, R. E. Karper, vice-director, P. C. Mangelsdorf, plant agronomist, College Station, D. L. Jones, superintendent, Lubbock station, J. R. Quimby, superintendent, Chillicothe station, J. L. Stevens, junior agronomist, Chillicothe station, and Ray E. Dickson, superintendent experiment sub-station No. 7, Spur, will go to Hayes, Kan., and continue with the group to Lubbock.

HOW HE DOES IT

Al Smith Gives Away Secrets of Writing Game

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. (UP)—This, according to Alfred E. Smith, is what makes him a $2 a word writer for the Saturday Evening Post:

A good memory.
An old envelope.
An automobile.
An aromatic cigar.
A shiny pair of old shoes.
A stenographer.

Smith explained to the United Press that, unlike Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, who laboriously write out their magazine articles in longhand, he compiled his series for the Post by merely jotting down notes on the old envelope while smoking a cigar and getting inspiration from his shiny shoe tops while riding in his car.

Later he would dictate his notes to a stenographer and she would send the story off to the magazine. Smith said his memory is his greatest adjunct.

His series for the Saturday Evening Post is estimated to have brought him close to $148,000.

U. T. AVERAGES GAIN POINT

But Seven Frats Fail to Toe Mark, Report Says

AUSTIN, Aug. 25. (AP)—Scholastic averages at the University of Texas for 1928-29 were one point higher than the previous year, but tentative figures compiled by Dean V. I. Moore reveal that seven fraternities fell below the all-university average barring them from initiation of new members until the mark is raised.

Another check of the Greek letter records is being made before the beginning of the fall term.

The all-university average was 5.23 and that of the freshman class 4.23. Grades for the school of law were 16 per cent lower than the general average and those of the college of engineering five per cent below.

Knox County Boys Win Short Course Honors

It's hardly a hundred years since a locomotive first ran in America. The moment it began to chug, hosts of alarmists reached for legislative brakes and implored the authorities to forbid the use of a vehicle whose speed would incite heart failure or suffocation; the human construction wasn't designed to stand traveling at 15 miles per hour and upward.

News that railroading will soon celebrate its centennial, arrives simultaneously with the announcement that a locomotive on the St. Louis and San Francisco system recently ran 20 days and covered 5,144 miles without once emptying its fire box.

Which goes to show how prone folk are to exaggerate the risks and uncertainties of innovation.

The Ghosts That Haunt the Old Home Town

SOMETIMES it is really a mistake to go back and revisit the Old Home Town.

The Old Home Town is one of those American institutions in which nearly everyone seems to share. Now and then it seems as if no one, in all the country, has chosen to spend his life in the town where he was born. Scratch the urbane New Yorker and you find a transplanted Iowan; uproot a Chicagoan, or a Detroiter, and you find a man who began life on a distant farm or in a small country village.

So each of us has his Old Home Town. In memory it takes on a color and an atmosphere that it never really had. The longer we have been away, the more entrancing it looks. Finally, after years of absence, we summon our resolution and go back to see it again. And there, usually, we make a mistake.

To begin with, the town is never so large, so attractive or so picturesque as we recalled it. Everything seems to have shrunk. The apple orchard on the hill, to which we used to climb, panting, with stubby legs, is no longer an Olympian height; and the old swimming pool is become a dried-up, rather muddy pool instead of the wide, delightful retreat that it used to be.

The returning native son, accordingly, is shortly beset by melancholy. Gilbert Swan, the New York columnist, after making an extended trip through his childhood haunts, reports regretfully that the Home Town is, after all, best revisited in an arm chair, on a winter evening, in the security of one's own living room; and he seems to be in the right. Actually going back is too apt to give one a case of the blues.

The real trouble with the Old Home Town, however, is not that it looks smaller, dustier and less exciting that it used to. It is peopled with ghosts; wraiths that stalk up and down every street and that drift across every field, unseen except by the returning wanderer from distant parts. And chief among these ghosts is always the ghost of the wanderer himself—the ghost of the lad he used to be, attended by the magic shapes of the glamorous figures that he dreamed, boy-like, of one day becoming.

No matter how far or how high we go, it is always hard to meet our lost selves in that way. Returning to the Home Town is, in a way, a rendering of the account of one's life. One goes back to the old, familiar places to find oneself haunted—haunted by insistent reminders that one had once planned to lead a life far more noble and significant, haunted by a sence of failure and defeat.

This isn't really fair. No man ever quite becomes the magnificent figure of his boyhood dreams. Yet it is inescapable. We are all failures. Once we had a very high and shining goal, and now we see that we can never reach it. We are not the men we might have been, not the men we planned to be; and the visit to the Old Home Town reminds us of it, all too forcibly.

Yet, after all, that is good for us. Failure is bearable if one can only remember that at least one aimed high. We can never reach the distant peaks of boyhood—but at least, once and for all, we saw them. We know they are there. And that is something.

Retiring Mr. Man

THE YOUNG MEN from Burkburnett who were the first to venture on the streets of Wichita Falls in pajama attire are due a certain amount of gratitude from men of the town, just as the pioneers of the movement over the nation deserve the thanks of the masculine population of the country as a whole. While the time probably never will come when men will go so far as to hop out of bed and come downtown in their pajamas, there is a fundamental soundness in the demand that masculine attire for summer should be cooler and more comfortable.

If, as physicians and health experts claim, woman's 16-ounce ensemble is more sensible and healthful than her erstwhile wrappings, then certainly man could afford to lose a couple of pounds of surplus weight from his apparel and profit both in mental ease and physical comfort. The great trouble is that men, so far as style and clothes are concerned, are cowards of the first water. The average man feels well dressed when he is as inconspicuous as possible, and his attire is as nearly the same type as that of every other man. His wife feels she has accomplished the ultimate when her costume sets her out from the throng, and other men's wives go home and talk about it. However much the average man's fancy may secretly run to violent reds or delicate lavenders, he would no more think of venturing out in such colors than he would of wearing striped shirts to a full dress affair. With women—well, to think of it is to do it in this day and time.

So the daring persons who are venturing out in pajamas may really accomplish something more than newspaper notoriety. If enough of them wear pajamas for a sufficient length of time, some manufacturer will start quantity production of pajama suits made especially for street wear. Men will buy suits (pajamas) in the same quantity and variety as they do shirts, and change them as often. All that is necessary to get men to wear pajamas on the streets is to make them believe they will be conspicuous if they don't.

Twenty Cent Cotton

PREDICTION of 20-cent cotton by Commissioner George B. Terrell on the basis of crop reports compiled by the state agriculture department will be good news to folks all over Texas, especially in Wichita county and Northwest Texas where the prospects are good for a fairly normal yield. Of course, cotton may not bring 20 cents, but Commissioner Terrell has shown in the past that his department is on the whole about as accurate as the federal department, and at times his estimates have proved better in the end.

While the Texas agriculture commissioner estimates a short crop in Texas, that short crop, if it brings 20 cents or more, will put more money in the pockets of farmers and business men than a bumper crop at lower prices. It is the old, old story—a small crop, more money; a large crop, less money. What the cotton farmer needs is something more potent than the boll weevil and bad weather to make certain beyond doubt that he can't raise too much cotton. Relief and insurance against good crops seems to be the kind of federal aid most likely to appeal to the southern grower.

"You chattering poll parrot!"

READ THIS FIRST

Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip. Her mother, a widowed dressmaker, has one wealthy customer, Mrs. Van Nuys, and through her Chatty gets a position as switchboard operator in the Van Nuys bond house. There she meets and falls in love with David Jordan, handsome young bond salesman.

Chatty's busy tongue creates havoc in the office. Agnes Herford, Mr. Van Nuy's secretary, leaves on account of Chatty's gossip. David Jordan knows that Chatty is responsible, and drops her. Chatty begins to go with a new salesman, Bryant Dunning, who says he is married but has left his wife. Chatty's friends are Billie Langenau, a file clerk, and Winnie Talcott, Mr. Van Nuy's new secretary. After some lively parties Chatty makes up her mind to quit going with Bryant.

The next day David Jordan brings a girl to the office, and Chatty, in a rage of jealousy, makes another date with Bryant. But she does not love Bryant, and determines not to have any more dates with him. After an argument with her mother about Bryant, Chatty goes across the hall to see Billie. Despite all her good intentions, Chatty still goes around with Bryant and his crowd. She asks Bryant to teach her to drive his car.

Chatty and Bryant go to the Lollypop, a roadhouse, where Chatty is sure she sees Winnie Talcott with Mr. Van Nuys. The next day Chatty tells the girls.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XXXV

"You chattering poll parrot!" she began. "How dare you tell a lie like that on me?"

Chatty looked at her friend in utter amazement.

"Why, Winnie!" she cried. "You were there! I saw you!"

"You lie! I was not there! I was home all evening!" declaimed Winnie, passionately. "I don't run around with married men, in the first place, or with my boss, in the second! And I won't be talked about by anyone, especially a girl who doesn't know her tongue from a perpetual motion machine, and who can't tell the truth to save her life! Now you tell these girls you are a liar or—"

Chatty faced her accuser, anger and wonder struggling for mastery in her mind. But anger won.

"I will not say I am a liar! I am not a liar! I saw you! You had on your red dress and your gold slippers. I've seen them a dozen times!"

"Oh, I had on my red dress and my gold slippers, did I?" sneered Winnie. "Then perhaps you'll explain this!"

She snapped open her bag and produced a slip of paper. She read it aloud, first, then handed it to Billie to read.

"Arcade Laundry. Received of Miss Winifred Talcott, one crimson dress; it is expressly agreed that risk of fading in cleaning is taken by Miss Talcott."

"Look at the date!" she stormed "Two days ago! How many red dresses have I? You ought to know—you've been at the house enough! How dare you lie like that?"

Billie raised her hands and broke in. "Winnie, Winnie! Wait a minute. Chatty, be quiet. Don't quarrel, girls! Chatty, did you see Winnie, or just a red dress and gold slippers on some girl?"

"I saw Mr. Van! He was with a girl in a red dress and gold slippers—and it was Winnie!" answered Chatty, miserably conscious that she had not seen the girl's face, but had jumped to the conclusion that because Mr. Van had gone out with Agnes, therefore, the next girl he took out was also his secretary. But she couldn't admit she was wrong!

Lola spoke up. "I was with Winnie all evening at her home!" she stated. "We were too tired to go out and dance."

The little knot of girls stared at Chatty, accusingly. Even Billie's kind face was stern. But before Chatty could think of anything to say in defense, or even utter the apology she would have to make, Winnie stormed at her again.

"It's your long tongue!" she accused. "You are always making trouble for someone! You see a red dress and accuse me, because I have a red dress. You hear something over your telephone you've no business to hear, and make up the other half of the story and tell it as fact! You are nothing but a gossip, Charlotte Chatterton—a mean, vicious, lying gossip! And you'll stand up here and tell these girls that you told a lie on me, or I'll go straight to the boss and tell him, myself, what a trouble maker he's got in the office!"

"Oh, no, no!" cried Billie. "You won't do that."

"Won't I? Won't I?" Winnie stamped her foot. "Well, just watch me!"

The little knot of girls was breathlessly silent. Chatty looked from face to face, seeking for help, for support, for courage—and finding none. To be bawled out like this—and all for what? For making a little mistake! Let her go to Mr. Van, if she dared! They were all against her—well, she'd show them how much she cared!

She looked her one-time friend up and down, then sniffed disdainfully and turned to the mirror.

"Well?" Winnie pushed herself almost under Chatty's nose.

"I have nothing further to say!" declaimed Chatty, in what she hoped and believed was a grand and dignified manner.

Winnie left the room immediately. Standing near the door Lola pulled it open again as soon as Winnie left, and watched the spit-fire figure make rapid progress down the hall.

"She's gone to Mr. Van's room!" she announced, with a nervous giggle. "Chatty, you sort of bit off more than you can chew!"

But none of the other girls spoke to her. The turned, one by one, to go to work. Only Billie came over to her, and laid a tentative hand on her arm.

In Mr. Van's office a very angry girl confronted an at first amused, and then perturbed, employer.

"I was at home all evening!" Winnie assured him. "You know, Mr. Van Nuys, you never asked me to walk to the corner with you, let alone to go to lunch or to a roadhouse! You wouldn't do such a thing!"

Winnie looked up at him admiringly. No harm showing the Big Boss that she thought him great! "But Miss Chatterton insists that I was with you at the old Lollypop Inn! She told the whole office about it! She's nothing but a chatterbox with a long tongue! She makes up gossip and tells it, and gets people in trouble. She's always butting into people's business and trying to make it her own!"

"This has happened before?" asked Mr. Van Nuys.

"All the time!" assured Winnie. "She never says a word about anyone that's nice; it's just scandal and mean gossip and telling tales and trying to get people mad with other people! She's rotten influence in the office, if you ask me. I don't doubt that her nosiness was the bottom of poor Agnes leaving—"

Winnie did not miss Mr. Van's start in his chair. Her shrewd, long shot had hit something.

"Well, I'm sorry you should have been annoyed," he said, at last. "I think I can put a stop to it. Of course, I can't have any of my young ladies stirring up trouble or carrying tales—especially about me. Will you ask her to come here, please? Or—no. I'll phone her."

Winnie lingered as Mr. Van picked up the phone and said: "Miss Chatterton? Put someone else on the switchboard and come to my office a moment, please—thank you!"

Then he turned to Winnie: "That will be all, just now."

Chatty spent the 15 minutes that Winnie was with Mr. Van Nuys in anxious thought. If Winnie had really told Mr. Van Nuys what she had said, it might be difficult to explain. Chatty knew now that she had been mistaken. It was not Winnie that Mr. Van had been with. But she was certain about Mr. Van! And she had a witness, too—Bryant Dunning. He had seen him. Perhaps, if Mr. Van had had some other girl at the roadhouse, he wouldn't be so—so—well, he would not be so severe!

The "truth" never hurt anyone" didn't occur to Chatty just then.

The "truth" about Mr. Van might hurt him a great deal.

Chatty knew what no one else in the office knew—how much trouble had been caused in the Van Nuys family by her letter and the diary pages she had stolen and mailed.

Her courage rose as the minutes sped. She answered her telephone calls mechanically, thinking, thinking, thinking, thinking,—then Mr. Van's voice came over the wire.

Her heart beating rapidly, but her head up, Chatty entered Mr. Van's office.

"Yes, sir?" she asked, non-committally.

"Miss Chatterton, I am told by Miss Talcott that you this morning proclaimed to a number of employes that Miss Talcott was with me at a road house last night."

"Yes, sir. I thought it was Winnie. But I was mistaken—about Winnie!" Chatty gave a nervous little laugh. She'd show him!

"You were entirely mistaken in the whole matter!" Mr. Van spoke firmly. "I was present with my daughter and her friend! Now, this must stop, and stop immediately. I have heard before that you are an inveterate gossip, a trouble maker, a tale bearer. I will not have such a girl in my employ!"

"You—you mean I am fired?" gasped Chatty. She had not expected this!

"No. Not yet. But you will be, if I hear any more complaints of you. You will keep your thoughts and your tales about the office force to yourself. You will not comment further on this unfortunate exhibition of malicious talk, to anyone. You are on trial, and you will be watched. I do not threaten, but I do run my own business. I suggest that you think of your very nice mother, and how much she needs to have you properly and gainfully employed—and learn to keep your mouth shut. Good morning, Miss Chatterton!"

Chatty crept from the room as if she had been whipped.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Wall street, where men are handsome and must wear stiff collars, can unbend on occasion. I had often wondered if the staff of a huge financial institution ever frolicked, and if so, how. The other day I found out.

A large firm that turns out stock and bond issues the way Henry Ford turns out spare parts was entertaining a group of visiting firemen—austere and wealthy gentlemen from Philadelphia, Chicago, Cincinnati and other financial capitals. The gentlemen were there for the purpose of looking over the firm; and if they liked it they proposed to spend a few millions on its various security issues.

At the close of the afternoon it was discovered that one of the most austere and wealthy of the visiting firemen had misplaced his hat. It was utterly gone. In a trice a beautiful and efficient young man employed by the firm had dashed down to the street, seeking a hat store.

All the exclusive men's stores—and they are few in lower Manhattan—were closed. The young man did the best he could. He bought a $5 kelly at a low priced chain store.

When he got back he was told that the visitor had found his misplaced hat. So there the firm was with an unclaimed $4 lid. Nothing was done about it that afternoon. But the next day the hat was auctioned off to the employes. It was an odd size, and those it would fit weret not many. That kept the price down, and it brought only $2.

And did the $2 go back into the firm's coffers? It did not. An office boy was sent out to buy 20 Eskimo pies, which the financiers and their secretaries consumed with relish. Their stock sold off a quarter of a point that day.

Costes' Speech

I, along with everyone else in the country, am deeply sorry that Dieudonne Costes' attempt to fly from Paris to New York failed. I would have liked to see him got a rousing reception from the city, since the last one he got here was lukewarm.

Costes, it will be remembered, flew across the south Atlantic with Joseph Lebrix, and then worked north into the United States in a series of flights that are still among the greatest in aviation history.

Naturally, when the pair arrived in New York, the city felt it must do something for them, if for no other reason than out of gratitude to the French for the way they took our Lindbergh to their bosom.

So the usual reception by the mayor at City Hall was arranged. It was wisely decided not to erect the big outdoor stands, for public interest in the fliers, though cordial, was not at the white heat necessary to bring forth an imposing crowd. The reception was held in the aldermanic chamber, a beautiful old colonial room in that most beautiful of public buildings.

Mayor Walker made a graceful speech. Costes and Lebrix responded. I was there, and I had persuaded as many of my friends as I could reach to attend also, for I feared that the gallant Frenchmen might be confronted with a half-empty aldermanic chamber.

The fliers' speeches, particularly Costes', were excellent. "Imagine an American aviator talking that well," I said to myself. I could think of none who could, with the possible exception of Commander Byrd. The speeches were perfectly rounded grammatically, witty, graceful and composed of polysyllabic words.

Two or three days afterward I met M. Lango, an editor of the Paris newspaper, L'Intransigeant, at a luncheon. The conversation got round to Costes and Lebrix. I told M. Lange that his countrymen were charming.

"Did you like their speeches?" he asked.

I was enthusiastic.

M. Lange beamed. "I wrote them," he said.

"Dearest . . . beg pardon . . . Miss Tibbetts, will you take a letter? All ready, honey . . . Miss Tibbetts, I mean? The Puddicomb-Frisbie company, Erie, Pa. Gentlemen: We have your order of the 16th and have shipped the goods as of this date. Thanking you for your patronage, we are, very respectfully, the Presto Supply company. Felix Winch, manager. Got that, sweetie . . . Miss Tibbetts, I should say.

"Take another, baby . . . pardon . . . Miss Tibbetts? Only one carbon, lovey-dovey . . . ahem . . . I mean Miss Tibbetts. Jerome, Aberklotz and Finch, Detroit, Mich. Gentlemen: In reply to your inquiry of the 21st inst., we are pleased to state that we allow 15 per cent off on all bills paid within 30 days. Hoping to receive an early order from you . . . what's that, Miss Tibbetts? . . . You can't write unless I let go your hand? . . . I didn't realize I was holding it. So sorry, darling . . . Miss Tibbetts, rather. Close the letter the usual way.

"Ready for another letter, dearest? What? Oh, come on, dear . . . just one more letter . . . a little one. Please. What harm will one more letter do? Come on, honey. We're friends, aren't we? And you trust me, sweetie . . . Miss Tibbetts, don't you? One more, that's all. That's the baby.

"Did anybody ever tell you you were a glorious stenographer? I mean it, really. What? No, I don't tell every girl that. And you're such an all-around outdoor girl, too. You like swimming, boating, tennis, golf. That's where we have so much in common.

"How about a swim now? Where? Right here. We can have such fun diving off this desk. We'll dive off the desk and swim to that filing cabinet over there. No fair hanging onto the waste-basket. And after that you can cover me with sand . . . Where? . . . In the directors' room. Come on, darling Patricia.

"What? . . . Huh? . . . You're not my darling Patricia? . . . You're who? . . . You're Miss Tibbetts? . . . You won't dive off my desk? . . . What desk? Did I say anything about diving off a desk? . . . What? . . . I bet you, you think I'm getting nutty. . . . You've a good mind to call a cop? . . . Lissen . . . Wait!

"Now what the devil did I say that offended her?"

Can Openers and Cookbooks

It is said that the June bride of today buys a can opener in place of a cookbook. It is certainly true that the use of canned foods is increasing at a very rapid rate each year. It is right that this should be so, for with our new improved methods of canning it is possible to get almost any kind of food at any time in the year. Prices have been gradually reduced, and "eating out of cans" is often even cheaper than buying fresh foods.

The foods canned by the large canneries are well preserved, excellent in taste, and perfectly wholesome. Of course, it is impossible for these foods to have exactly the same flavor as would be found when the same foods were freshly prepared, cooked only a short time, and served immediately at the table. But the food value is changed very little, if at all, with most of the canned food products.

The one canned product which leads all others is milk. It is estimated that each American family uses $15 worth of canned milk per year. The leader among canned fruits is the peach, and the "Big 3" among the vegetables are tomatoes, then peas, and then corn.

A hundred years ago there was not a tin can in the world. The tin can is really a steel can. The steel is used for strength and then coated with the tin to prevent rusting. The word "can" comes from "canister" which is from the Greek word, "reed." The early baskets were woven from reed, and were used to hold teas and coffees. When an Englishman made the first can he called it a "canister," which we shorten to "can."

Most of the commercial canners use the tin cans in place of the glass jars which are used more by the housewife in home canning.

Foods preserved in the tin cans are just as wholesome, providing there has been no injury to the can and no leakage of air.

The common method used in the canneries is to seal the food in the can and then cook it while in the can through either hot water or steam. In this way all bacteria inside of the can are killed, and fermentation or putrefaction cannot develop. If the housewife learns how to use a similar "cold pack" method, she can can almost any kind of food, and it will keep in excellent condition.

(More about canning tomorrow).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Artificial Teeth

Question: I. G. writes:—"I am asking advice for a friend—an old gentleman in the seventies who has never been sick a day in his life, and is as full of ambition as any young man. But for some reason the dentists cannot replace his teeth, all of which he has lost. Now he suffers at times with pains in his stomach after eating, and the action of his bowels is not as it should be.

Answer:—I am sure your friend will be able to secure artificial teeth which will fit if he will only find a dentist who is skilled enough. Modern dentistry has progressed very rapidly in the last 10 years, and dentists using the newer methods are able to do wonderful things that they could not accomplish before. Until your friend finds a dentist who can fit him properly he should live on an exclusive milk diet, supplemented with minced non-starchy vegetables. Three quarts of milk daily will give him enough nourishment if the vegetables are used.

Question: Mrs. S. W. asks:—"Is it safe to rub ice on the neck and face to tighten the muscles? Is there any chance of causing paralysis of the neck muscles?"

Answer:—The ice treatment to the neck and face is excellent for strengthening the muscles. The cold makes the muscles contract, and in this way they are developed and brought back to a normal tone. I have never heard of any injury being caused by this treatment, and it certainly cannot produce paralysis.

Baby's Diet

Question: Mrs. H. asks:—"Will you please tell me what foods should be given a baby 18 months old?"

Answer:—Pure cow's milk provides all the nourishment necessary for the 18-months-old baby. The quantity must be proportioned to suit the type and temperament. If any other foods besides the milk are used, they should be fruits and the non-starchy vegetables.

Trouble With Elbow

Question: T. F. asks:—"Will you please tell me what this means? "Suppurating area over left olecranon, slight lymphangitis, extending to axilla."

Answer: — This simply means some inflammation of a part of the left elbow with enlargement of the lymphatic glands under the arm. The pussy condition may be due to an injury, tuberculosis, or arthritis. Local treatment may be necessary, but dieting will prove effective in bringing about a cure by changing the quality of the blood stream so as to help in controlling the inflammatory process which is going on.

BET WITH THE OPTIMISTS

Daily Editorial

THERE'S enough latent energy in an ounce of water to blow the United States fleet from New York harbor into the Catskill mountains.

And if that seems incredible, consider the forces lurking in a pinhead of brain-matter.

Anything's possible. The important thing is to make it feasible.

The twentieth century can't claim credit for the idea of aviation. History doesn't remember when somebody wasn't tinkering with a flying machine.

But it took the combined effort of all the ages to evolve the principle and demonstrate the method necessary for Zeppelin construction.

And in proper season, science will provide a fulminator for water too, and elect it to the jobs that dynamite and T. N. T. are at present handling.

Meanwhile, less ambitious ingenuity is doing quite well with minor knots.

Brooklyn will soon try a one-man trolley operated by foot instead of hand controls.

The new cars have automatic doors and change-makers, leaving the motorman free to mind his particular end of the business.

Increasing bus competition and irreducible overheads made something of the sort inevitable.

We always turn to the loose-screw driver when the balance sheet warns us to do or die.

A girl, suffering from hiccoughs for 29 days, first exhausts medical resource, then inspires an experimental injection, which inducts so much physical distress that she hasn't time to think about her other troubles.

Taking her mind off the hiccoughs gradually checks them and in a few hours she's as "good as new."

DESPERATION usually locates the lacking remedy in medicine as well as transportation.

Wherever folk are failing, they're just half trying.

It's hardly a hundred years since a locomotive first ran in America. The moment it began to chug, hosts of alarmists reached for legislative brakes and implored the authorities to forbid the use of a vehicle whose speed would incite heart failure or suffocation; the human construction wasn't designed to stand traveling at 15 miles per hour and upward.

News that railroading will soon celebrate its centennial, arrives simultaneously with the announcement that a locomotive on the St. Louis and San Francisco system recently ran 20 days and covered 5,144 miles without once emptying its fire box.

Which goes to show how prone folk are to exaggerate the risks and uncertainties of innovation.

While you're chuckling at great-grandfather's fear of train journeys, don't forget your own sworn determination never to take a plane ride.

Progress encounters the same proportion of incredulity in each generation.

It's hard to wean the average citizen of his pet fears and jeers.

Which thought reminds the country that Steel common took another eleven million ticker jump in 24 hours, selling at 220 after several split-ups of the original capitalization.

Andrew Carnegie, you'll recall, insisted upon cash and bonds for his plants, because he didn't believe the corporation could ever expand sufficiently to pay a penny dividend to stockholders.

He sold America short and so muffed the chance to leave an extra billion to his estate and endowment funds.

When in doubt, bet with the optimists.

Confidence and enthusiasm are keeping yacht builders and foreign car importers working overtime.

The Ghosts That Haunt the Old Home Town

SOMETIMES it is really a mistake to go back and revisit the Old Home Town.

The Old Home Town is one of those American institutions in which nearly everyone seems to share. Now and then it seems as if no one, in all the country, has chosen to spend his life in the town where he was born. Scratch the urbane New Yorker and you find a transplanted Iowan; uproot a Chicagoan, or a Detroiter, and you find a man who began life on a distant farm or in a small country village.

So each of us has his Old Home Town. In memory it takes on a color and an atmosphere that it never really had. The longer we have been away, the more entrancing it looks. Finally, after years of obsence, we summon our resolution and go back to see it again. And there, usually, we make a mistake.

To begin with, the town is never so large, so attractive or so picturesque as we recalled it. Everything seems to have shrunk. The apple orchard on the hill, to which we used to climb, panting, with stubby legs, is no longer an Olympian height; and the old swimming pool is become a dried-up, rather muddy pool instead of the wide, delightful retreat that it used to be.

The returning native son, accordingly, is shortly beset by melancholy. Gilbert Swan, the New York columnist, after making an extended trip through his childhood haunts, reports regretfully that the Home Town is, after all, best revisited in an arm chair, on a winter evening, in the security of one's own living room; and he seems to be in the right. Actually going back is too apt to give one a case of the blues.

The real trouble with the Old Home Town, however, is not that it looks smaller, dustier and less exciting that it used to. It is peopled with ghosts; wraiths that stalk up and down every street and that drift across every field, unseen except by the returning wanderer from distant parts. And chief among these ghosts is always the ghost of the wanderer himself—the ghost of the lad he used to be, attended by the magic shapes of the glamorous figures that he dreamed, boy-like, of one day becoming.

No matter how far or how high we go, it is always hard to meet our lost selves in that way. Returning to the Home Town is, in a way, a rendering of the account of one's life. One goes back to the old, familiar places to find oneself haunted—haunted by insistent reminders that one had once planned to lead a life far more noble and significant, haunted by a sence of failure and defeat.

This isn't really fair. No man ever quite becomes the magnificent figure of his boyhood dreams. Yet it is inescapable. We are all failures. Once we had a very high and shining goal, and now we see that we can never reach it. We are not the men we might have been, not the men we planned to be; and the visit to the Old Home Town reminds us of it, all too forcibly.

Yet, after all, that is good for us. Failure is bearable if one can only remember that at least one aimed high. We can never reach the distant peaks of boyhood—but at least, once and for all, we saw them. We know they are there. And that is something.

Retiring Mr. Man

THE YOUNG MEN from Burkburnett who were the first to venture on the streets of Wichita Falls in pajama attire are due a certain amount of gratitude from men of the town, just as the pioneers of the movement over the nation deserve the thanks of the masculine population of the country as a whole. While the time probably never will come when men will go so far as to hop out of bed and come downtown in their pajamas, there is a fundamental soundness in the demand that masculine attire for summer should be cooler and more comfortable.

If, as physicians and health experts claim, woman's 16-ounce ensemble is more sensible and healthful than her erstwhile wrappings, then certainly man could afford to lose a couple of pounds of surplus weight from his apparel and profit both in mental ease and physical comfort. The great trouble is that men, so far as style and clothes are concerned, are cowards of the first water. The average man feels well dressed when he is as inconspicuous as possible, and his attire is as nearly the same type as that of every other man. His wife feels she has accomplished the ultimate when her costume sets her out from the throng, and other men's wives go home and talk about it. However much the average man's fancy may secretly run to violent reds or delicate lavenders, he would no more think of venturing out in such colors than he would of wearing striped shirts to a full dress affair. With women—well, to think of it is to do it in this day and time.

So the daring persons who are venturing out in pajamas may really accomplish something more than newspaper notoriety. If enough of them wear pajamas for a sufficient length of time, some manufacturer will start quantify production of pajama suits made especially for street wear. Men will buy suits (pajamas) in the same quantity and variety as they do shirts, and change them as often. All that is necessary to get men to wear pajamas on the streets is to make them believe they will be conspicuous if they don't.

Twenty Cent Cotton

PREDICTION of 20-cent cotton by Commissioner George B. Terrell on the basis of crop reports compiled by the state agriculture department will be good news to folks all over Texas, especially in Wichita county and Northwest Texas where the prospects are good for a fairly normal yield. Of course, cotton may not bring 20 cents, but Commissioner Terrell has shown in the past that his department is on the whole about as accurate as the federal department, and at times his estimates have proved better in the end.

While the Texas agriculture commissioner estimates a short crop in Texas, that short crop, if it brings 20 cents or more, will put more money in the pockets of farmers and business men than a bumper crop at lower prices. It is the old, old story—a small crop, more money; a large crop, less money. What the cotton farmer needs is something more potent than the boll weevil and bad weather to make certain beyond doubt that he can't raise too much cotton. Relief and insurance against good crops seems to be the kind of federal aid most likely to appeal to the southern grower.

CHATTY—GODDESS OF CAB

"You chattering poll parrot!"

READ THIS FIRST

Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip. Her mother, a widowed dressmaker, has one wealthy customer, Mrs. Van Nuys, and through her Chatty gets a position as switchboard operator in the Van Nuys bond house. There she meets and falls in love with David Jordan, handsome young bond salesman.

Chatty's busy tongue creates havoc in the office. Agnes Herford, Mr. Van Nuy's secretary, leaves on account of Chatty's gossip. David Jordan knows that Chatty is responsible, and drops her. Chatty begins to go with a new salesman, Bryant Dunning, who says he is married but has left his wife. Chatty's friends are Billie Langman, a file clerk, and Winnie Talcott, Mr. Van Nuy's new secretary. After some lively parties Chatty makes up her mind to quit going with Bryant.

The next day David Jordan brings a girl to the office, and Chatty, in a rage of jealousy, makes another date with Bryant. But she does not love Bryant, and determines not to have any more dates with him. After an argument with her mother about Bryant, Chatty goes across the hall to see Billie. Despite all her good intentions, Chatty still goes around with Bryant and his crowd. She asks Bryant to teach her to drive his car.

Chatty and Bryant go to the Lollypop, a roadhouse, where Chatty is sure she sees Winnie Talcott with Mr. Van Nuys. The next day Chatty tells the girls.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XXXV

"You chattering poll parrot!" she began. "How dare you tell a lie like that on me?"

Chatty looked at her friend in utter amazement.

"Why, Winnie!" she cried. "You were there! I saw you!"

"You lie! I was not there! I was home all evening!" declaimed Winnie, passionately. "I don't run around with married men, in the first place, or with my boss, in the second! And I won't be talked about by anyone, especially a girl who doesn't know her tongue from a perpetual motion machine, and who can't tell the truth to save her life! Now you tell these girls you are a liar or—"

Chatty faced her accuser, anger and wonder struggling for mastery in her mind. But anger won.

"I will not say I am a liar! I am not a liar! I saw you! You had on your red dress and your gold slippers. I've seen them a dozen times!"

"Oh, I had on my red dress and my gold slippers, did I?" sneered Winnie. "Then perhaps you'll explain this!"

She snapped open her bag and produced a slip of paper. She read it aloud, first, then handed it to Billie to read.

"Arcade Laundry. Received of Miss Winifred Talcott, one crimson dress; it is expressly agreed that risk of fading in cleaning is taken by Miss Talcott."

"Look at the date!" she stormed "Two days ago! How many red dresses have I? You ought to know—you've been at the house enough! How dare you lie like that?"

Billie raised her hands and broke in. "Winnie, Winnie! Wait a minute. Chatty, be quiet. Don't quarrel, girls! Chatty, did you see Winnie, or just a red dress and gold slippers on some girl?"

"I saw Mr. Van! He was with a girl in a red dress and gold slippers—and it was Winnie!" answered Chatty, miserably conscious that she had not seen the girl's face, but had jumped to the conclusion that because Mr. Van had gone out with Agnes, therefore, the next girl he took out was also his secretary. But she couldn't admit she was wrong!

Lola spoke up. "I was with Winnie all evening at her home!" she stated. "We were too tired to go out and dance."

The little knot of girls stared at Chatty, accusingly. Even Billie's kind face was stern. But before Chatty could think of anything to say in defense, or even utter the apology she would have to make, Winnie stormed at her again.

"It's your long tongue!" she accused. "You are always making trouble for someone! You see a red dress and accuse me, because I have a red dress. You hear something over your telephone you've no business to hear, and make up the other half of the story and tell it as fact! You are nothing but a gossip, Charlotte Chatterton—a mean, vicious, lying gossip! And you'll stand up here and tell these girls that you told a lie on me, or I'll go straight to the boss and tell him, myself, what a trouble maker he's got in the office!"

"Oh, no, no!" cried Billie. "You won't do that."

"Won't I? Won't I?" Winnie stamped her foot. "Well, just watch me!"

The little knot of girls was breathlessly silent. Chatty looked from face to face, seeking for help, for support, for courage—and finding none. To be bawled out like this—and all for what? For making a little mistake! Let her go to Mr. Van, if she dared! They were all against her—well, she'd show them how much she cared!

She looked her one-time friend up and down, then sniffed disdainfully and turned to the mirror.

"Well?" Winnie pushed herself almost under Chatty's nose.

"I have nothing further to say!" declaimed Chatty, in what she hoped and believed was a grand and dignified manner.

Winnie left the room immediately. Standing near the door Lola pulled it open again as soon as Winnie left, and watched the spit-fire figure make rapid progress down the hall.

"She's gone to Mr. Van's room!" she announced, with a nervous giggle. "Chatty, you sort of bit off more than you can chew!"

But none of the other girls spoke to her. The turned, one by one, to go to work. Only Billie came over to her, and laid a tentative hand on her arm.

In Mr. Van's office a very angry girl confronted an at first amused, and then perturbed, employer.

"I was at home all evening!" Winnie assured him. "You know, Mr. Van Nuys, you never asked me to walk to the corner with you, let alone to go to lunch or to a roadhouse! You wouldn't do such a thing!"

Winnie looked up at him admiringly. No harm showing the Big Boss that she thought him great! "But Miss Chatterton insists that I was with you at the old Lollypop Inn! She told the whole office about it! She's nothing but a chatterbox with a long tongue! She makes up gossip and tells it, and gets people in trouble. She's always butting into people's business and trying to make it her own!"

"This has happened before?" asked Mr. Van Nuys.

"All the time!" assured Winnie. "She never says a word about anyone that's nice ;it's just scandal and mean gossip and telling tales and trying to get people mad with other people! She's rotten influence in the office, if you ask me. I don't doubt that her nosiness was the bottom of poor Agnes leaving—"

Winnie did not miss Mr. Van's start in his chair. Her shrewd, long shot had hit something.

"Well, I'm sorry you should have been annoyed," he said, at last. "I think I can put a stop to it. Of course, I can't have any of my young ladies stirring up trouble or carrying tales—especially about me. Will you ask her to come here, please? Or—no. I'll phone her."

Winnie lingered as Mr. Van picked up the phone and said: "Miss Chatterton? Put someone else on the switchboard and come to my office a moment, please—thank you!"

Then he turned to Winnie: "That will be all, just now."

Chatty spent the 15 minutes that Winnie was with Mr. Van Nuys in anxious thought. If Winnie had really told Mr. Van Nuys what she had said, it might be difficult to explain. Chatty knew now that she had been mistaken. It was not Winnie that Mr. Van had been with. But she was certain about Mr. Van! And she had a witness, too—Bryant Dunning. He had seen him. Perhaps, if Mr. Van had had some other girl at the roadhouse, he wouldn't be so—so—well, he would not be so severe!

"The truth never hurt anyone" didn't occur to Chatty just then.

The "truth" about Mr. Van might hurt him a great deal.

Chatty knew what no one else in the office knew—how much trouble had been caused in the Van Nuys family by her letter and the diary pages she had stolen and mailed.

Her courage rose as the minutes sped. She answered her telephone calls mechanically, thinking, thinking, thinking, thinking,—then Mr. Van's voice came over the wire.

Her heart beating rapidly, but her head up, Chatty entered Mr. Van's office.

"Yes, sir?" she asked, non-committally.

"Miss Chatterton, I am told by Miss Talcott that you this morning proclaimed to a number of employes that Miss Talcott was with me at a road house last night."

"Yes, sir. I thought it was Winnie. But I was mistaken—about Winnie!" Chatty gave a nervous little laugh. She'd show him!

"You were entirely mistaken in the whole matter!" Mr. Van spoke firmly. "I was present with my daughter and her friend! Now, this must stop, and stop immediately. I have heard before that you are an inveterate gossip, a trouble maker, a tale bearer. I will not have such a girl in my employ!"

"You—you mean I am fired?" gasped Chatty. She had not expected this!

"No. Not yet. But you will be, if I hear any more complaints of you. You will keep your thoughts and your tales about the office force to yourself. You will not comment further on this unfortunate exhibition of malicious talk, to anyone. You are on trial, and you will be watched. I do not threaten, but I do run my own business. I suggest that you think of your very nice mother, and how much she needs to have you properly and gainfully employed—and learn to keep your mouth shut. Good morning, Miss Chatterton!"

Chatty crept from the room as if she had been whipped.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Wall street, where men are handsome and must wear stiff collars, can unbend on occasion. I had often wondered if the staff of a huge financial institution ever frolicked, and if so, how. The other day I found out.

A large firm that turns out stock and bond issues the way Henry Ford turns out spare parts was entertaining a group of visiting firemen—austere and wealthy gentlemen from Philadelphia, Chicago, Cincinnati and other financial capitals. The gentlemen were there for the purpose of looking over the firm; and if they liked it they proposed to spend a few millions on its various security issues.

At the close of the afternoon it was discovered that one of the most austere and wealthy of the visiting firemen had misplaced his hat. It was utterly gone. In a trice a beautiful and efficient young man employed by the firm had dashed down to the street, seeking a hat store.

All the exclusive men's stores—and they are few in lower Manhattan—were closed. The young man did the best he could. He bought a $5 kelly at a low priced chain store.

When he got back he was told that the visitor had found his misplaced hat. So there the firm was with an unclaimed $4 lid. Nothing was done about it that afternoon. But the next day the hat was auctioned off to the employes. It was an odd size, and those it would fit weret not many. That kept the price down, and it brought only $2.

And did the $2 go back into the firm's coffers? It did not. An office boy was sent out to buy 20 Eskimo pies, which the financiers and their secretaries consumed with relish. Their stock sold off a quarter of a point that day.

Costes' Speech

I, along with everyone else in the country, am deeply sorry that Dieudonne Costes' attempt to fly from Paris to New York failed. I would have liked to see him got a rousing reception from the city, since the last one he got here was lukewarm.

Costes, it will be remembered, flew across the south Atlantic with Joseph Lebrix, and then worked north into the United States in a series of flights that are still among the greatest in aviation history.

Naturally, when the pair arrived in New York, the city felt it must do something for them, if for no other reason than out of gratitude to the French for the way they took our Lindbergh to their bosom.

So the usual reception by the mayor at City Hall was arranged. It was wisely decided not to erect the big outdoor stands, for public interest in the fliers, though cordial, was not at the white heat necessary to bring forth an imposing crowd. The reception was held in the aldermanic chamber, a beautiful old colonial room in that most beautiful of public buildings.

Mayor Walker made a graceful speech, Costes and Lebrix responded. I was there, and I had persuaded as many of my friends as I could reach to attend also, for I feared that the gallant Frenchmen might be confronted with a half-empty aldermanic chamber.

The fliers' speeches, particularly Costes', were excellent. "Imagine an American aviator talking that well," I said to myself. I could think of none who could, with the possible exception of Commander Byrd. The speeches were perfectly rounded grammatically, witty, graceful and composed of polysyllabic words.

Two or three days afterward I met M. Lango, an editor of the Paris newspaper, L'Intransigeant, at a luncheon. The conversation got round to Costes and Lebrix. I told M. Lange that his countrymen were charming.

"Did you like their speeches?" he asked.

I was enthusiastic.

M. Lange beamed. "I wrote them," he said.

Littlefield Sheep Pens Make Ready

Special to The Record News.

LITTLEFIELD, Texas, Aug. 25.—The sheep pens in the north part of town are this week being rearranged preparatory to shipping in lambs for fattening. About 12,000 sheep were fed out of these pens last fall, and a greater number will be fed this year. Feed crops around Littlefield are the best the section has ever known.

Littlefield School Enrollment Increases

Special to The Record News.

LITTLEFIELD, Texas, Aug. 25.—Secretary J. S. Hilliard of the Littlefield schools, reports that the scholastic enrollment of 1,644 for this district has been accepted by the state department. The enrollment for last year was 1301, which shows an appreciable increase for this year.

"Dearest . . . beg pardon . . . Miss Tibbetts, will you take a letter? All ready, honey . . . Miss Tibbetts, I mean? The Puddicomb-Frisbie company, Erie, Pa. Gentlemen: We have your order of the 16th and have shipped the goods as of this date. Thanking you for your patronage, we are, very respectfully, the Presto Supply company. Felix Winch, manager. Got that, sweetie . . . Miss Tibbetts, I should say.

"Take another, baby . . . pardon . . . Miss Tibbetts? Only one carbon, lovey-dovey . . . ahem . . . I mean Miss Tibbetts. Jerome, Aberklotz and Finch, Detroit, Mich. Gentlemen: In reply to your inquiry of the 21st inst., we are pleased to state that we allow 15 per cent off on all bills paid within 30 days. Hoping to receive an early order from you . . . what's that, Miss Tibbetts? . . . You can't write unless I let go your hand? . . . I didn't realize I was holding it. So sorry, darling . . . Miss Tibbetts, rather. Close the letter the usual way.

"Ready for another letter, dearest? What? Oh, come on, dear . . . just one more letter . . . a little one. Please. What harm will one more letter do? Come on, honey. We're friends, aren't we? And you trust me, sweetie . . . Miss Tibbetts, don't you? One more, that's all. That's the baby.

"Did anybody ever tell you you were a glorious stenographer? I mean it, really. What? No, I don't tell every girl that. And you're such an all-around outdoor girl, too. You like swimming, boating, tennis, golf. That's where we have so much in common.

"How about swim now? Where? Right here. We can have such fun diving off this desk. We'll dive off the desk and swim to that filing cabinet over there. No fair hanging onto the wastebasket. And after that you can cover me with sand . . . Where? . . . In the directors' room. Come on, darling Patricia.

"What? . . . Huh? . . . You're not my darling Patricia? . . . You're who? . . . You're Miss Tibbetts? . . . You won't dive off my desk? . . . What desk? Did I say anything about diving off a desk? . . . What? . . . I bet you, you think I'm getting nutty. . . . You've a good mind to call a cop? . . . Lissen . . . Wait!

"Now what the devil did I say that offended her?"

Can Openers and Cookbooks

It is said that the June bride of today buys a can opener in place of a cookbook. It is certainly true that the use of canned foods is increasing at a very rapid rate each year. It is right that this should be so, for with our new improved methods of canning it is possible to get almost any kind of food at any time in the year. Prices have been gradually reduced, and "eating out of cans" is often even cheaper than buying fresh foods.

The foods canned by the large canneries are well preserved, excellent in taste, and perfectly wholesome. Of course, it is impossible for these foods to have exactly the same flavor as would be found when the same foods were freshly prepared, cooked only a short time, and served immediately at the table. But the food value is changed very little, if at all, with most of the canned food products.

The one canned product which leads all others is milk. It is estimated that each American family uses $15 worth of canned milk per year. The leader among canned fruits is the peach, and the "Big 3" among the vegetables are tomatoes, then peas, and then corn.

A hundred years ago there was not a tin can in the world. The tin can is really a steel can. The steel is used for strength and then coated with the tin to prevent rusting. The word "can" comes from "canister" which is from the Greek word, "reed." The early baskets were woven from reed, and were used to hold teas and coffees. When an Englishman made the first can he called it a "canister," which we shorten to "can."

Most of the commercial canners use the tin cans in place of the glass jars which are used more by the housewife in home canning.

Foods preserved in the tin cans are just as wholesome, providing there has been no injury to the can and no leakage of air.

The common method used in the canneries is to seal the food in the can and then cook it while in the can through either hot water or steam. In this way all bacteria inside of the can are killed, and fermentation or putrefaction cannot develop. If the housewife learns how to use a similar "cold pack" method, she can can almost any kind of food, and it will keep in excellent condition.

(More about canning tomorrow).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Artificial Teeth

Question: I. G. writes:—"I am asking advice for a friend—an old gentleman in the seventies who has never been sick a day in his life, and is as full of ambition as any young man. But for some reason the dentists cannot replace his teeth, all of which he has lost. Now he suffers at times with pains in his stomach after eating, and the action of his bowels is not as it should be.

Answer:—I am sure your friend will be able to secure artificial teeth which will fit if he will only find a dentist who is skilled enough. Modern dentistry has progressed very rapidly in the last 10 years, and dentists using the newer methods are able to do wonderful things that they could not accomplish before. Until your friend finds a dentist who can fit him properly he should live on an exclusive milk diet, supplemented with minced non-starchy vegetables. Three quarts of milk daily will give him enough nourishment if the vegetables are used.

Question: Mrs. S. W. asks:—"Is it safe to rub ice on the neck and face to tighten the muscles? Is there any chance of causing paralysis of the neck muscles?"

Answer:—The ice treatment to the neck and face is excellent for strengthening the muscles. The cold makes the muscles contract, and in this way they are developed and brought back to a normal tone. I have never heard of any injury being caused by this treatment, and it certainly cannot produce paralysis.

Baby's Diet

Question: Mrs. H. asks:—"Will you please tell me what foods should be given a baby 18 months old?"

Answer:—Pure cow's milk provides all the nourishment necessary for the 18-months-old baby. The quantity must be proportioned to suit the type and temperament. If any other foods besides the milk are used, they should be fruits and the non-starchy vegetables.

Trouble With Elbow

Question: T. F. asks:—"Will you please tell me what this means? "Suppurating area over left olecranon, slight lymphangitis, extending to axilla."

Answer: — This simply means some inflammation of a part of the left elbow with enlargement of the lymphatic glands under the arm. The pussy condition may be due to an injury, tuberculosis, or arthritis. Local treatment may be necessary, but dieting will prove effective in bringing about a cure by changing the quality of the blood stream so as to help in controlling the inflammatory process which is going on.

SPUDDERS SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER AND MAINTAIN LEAGUE LEAD

WHITE CHUCKS 4 TO 1 VICTORY

Hanson Cops Opener, 3 to 1; Buffs Trail Three Points

Special to The Record News.

BEAUMONT, Texas, Aug. 25.—After dropping the first game, 3 to 1, to the Exporters here this afternoon before a crowd of 3,500, the Spudders came back to annex the second seven-inning afterpiece, 4 to 1, in two well-played ball games.

Elmer Hanson was complete master of the Spuds in the opener, letting them down with five scattered singles, the locals getting to Steengrafe for bunched hits in the fourth and seventh for their tallies.

Lester White, with perfect control, had the Shippers guessing in the second game, giving up but three hits, one of which was a homer by Paul Easterling in the fifth that saved the Exporters from a whitewashing.

Wichita Falls maintained the league lead, though virtually tied with Houston. The Spudders have a three-point edge over the Buffs with 34 victories and 23 defeats for .596, against 35 wins, 24 losses and .593 of the 1928 champions.

Fitz Clouts Homer

Denny Burns was the victim of the Spudder bats, four of the six hits he gave up being for extra bases. One was a circuit clout inside the park by Fitzgerald in the third, when the ball bounced off the left field fence and hit Lamb in the head.

Their other runs came in the first and sixth. In that opening round, Stapleton led off with a triple to right and scored on a neat single by Sullivan. Sullivan romped to second when Benton grounded out and scored on a solitaire by Turgeon to right. Sullivan started the sixth with a double to left but Fitzgerald forced him at third. Benton then doubled to deep left, scoring the Spud center gardner. Turgeon grounded out and Hermann popped out to leave Benton aboard.

In the first game, Hanson had things his way most of the time. The Exporters took a two-run lead in the fourth frame on three solid base smacks. Swanson led off with a single to left, moved to second on Lamb's sacrifice and raced to third when Huber scratched an infield hit. Kelly then tripled to deep center, scoring Swanson and Huber. Kelly was stranded when Akers grounded out and Easterling swung at a third strike.

Spuds Score in Eighth

Another run was added in the seventh inning when after two were out Easterling cracked a double down third base line. Petrie promptly singled to score him.

The one Spudder run came in the eighth. Hermann and Stapleton drew successive walks. Crouch forced Stapleton at second, Hermann hurrying to third. Bennett, hitting for Steengrafe, lined a single against the left field fence, scoring Hermann, Crouch going to third. Hopkins ran for Bennett and Benton hit into a double play, his second of the game and his third of the series to retire the side.

Larry Bettencourt gave the fans a big thrill in the second game when he ran far to the left to take a drive off Lamb's bat. Akers and Easterling continued to sparkle afield for the Exporters.

Buffs Virtually Tie Spuds By Winning Great Duel

HOUSTON, Aug. 25. (AP)—A badly blistered back seems to agree with Flint Rhem. Friday morning the Buff righthander went fishing and suffered a painfully sunburned back. Sunday afternoon, the former St. Louis Card speedball king bested Lil Stoner, another former major leaguer, 1 to 0, in a magnificent contest.

The victory threw the Buffs into a virtual tie for the league leadership, as Robertson's battling Exporters split a double-header with the Spudders. Score:

Tilden and Jones

September now is only a few days away and its arrival brings into prominence two of the nation's greatest amateur athletes—Bill Tilden and Bobby Jones.

In the early part of this month Tilden will make his stab at winning another tennis championship as Jones goes after his fifth amateur golf title.

The careers of these two stars are unusual. Jones still has a long way to go in golf, while Tilden is at the twilight stage of his tennis march. Jones is 27 and Tilden is around 35 or 36. Yet Jones reached the last eight of the amateur golf championships in 1916, when Tilden was struggling for tennis recognition in a day when Johnston, Williams and McLoughlin were at the crest. Tilden failed to gain any prominence until 1918, the war year, when sport was overlooked and of secondary importance. In 1919 both Tilden and Jones reached the final round of amateur championships. Bill Johnston beat Tilden in three sets out of four. Dave Herron stopped Bobby Jones at Oakmont. But there is this difference. Tilden then was 26 years old, Jones was only 17. And Jones was a star in a game where one can last longer, where speed, stamina and youth are not so important. Tilden was the first to break through. He took over tennis supremacy in 1920. He won in Australia, he won at Wimbledon and he beat Johnston at Forest Hills. Jones had to wait longer. He won his first national triumph at Inwood in 1923. But he was then only 21 years old, nine years younger than Tilden.

Both Tilden and Jones belong to the keen, impetuous types, who first had to control their nerves before they could show the mastery of skill and power, which both had at the start. But having arrived, it is doubtful if the amateur side has ever produced two greater stars, or any other pair with greater all around records.

Attack and Defense

"Through a big part of the season," writes L. F., "the Phillies have been leading the league at bat and have been, for a time anyway, last in the standing of the clubs. I had always supposed that attack was more important than defense, but this doesn't prove it."

Back in 1906 the White Sox were last in club batting and in attack. Yet they won a pennant and then slaughtered the all-star Cubs in four games out of six. Strong offensive clubs have finished far down the list. But few clubs with good pitching and a strong defense have been near the bottom.

The heavy artillery of the Yankees is supposed to have been responsible for their winning three straight pennants. Yet in those years they had fine pitching and they had high class defensive play, both from the infield and the outfield.

Most of the important fundamentals are built around a strong defense. It is from this that a strong attack can be launched.

Football team with a strong attack and a weak defense is nearly always in trouble. It usually takes a stout defense to give the attack its chance.

Jack Dempsey was supposed to have no defense worth speaking of. But he had a fast, shifty, weaving way of going to attack that made him an uncertain target. He gave most of his attention to the offensive side. But this offensive side failed to break down Tom Gibbon's defensive and it had even greater trouble against Tunney's blocking and footwork.

The attack of Yost's old Michigan football team in the days of Heston has been featured. Yet few remember that it was impossible to gain any ground against this same Michigan team, one of the strongest defensive outfits football has ever known.

The Foreign Drive

There is no particular reason why Campolo, Schmeling and Scott should not decide which outside nation is to enter a finalist in the heavyweight round-up.

Not forgetting one Otto von Porat, of Chicago and Norway. Sharkey or Loughran will be out of the picture next month and possibly one of the foreign entries by that same date. But there is enough material around now to keep the show going for some time.

The peculiar part is that other nations are furnishing the punchers where the United States is sending along the boxers. Loughran and Sharkey are far ahead along scientific lines. Schmeling, Von Porat and Campolo are all much the harder wallopers. And that doesn't mean that they are any tornadonic human instruments of destruction.

Campolo seems to have about as good a cut at the pie as any one else. He has enough in the way of quantity, if he happens to have the patience to keep working for better quality. He will at least annoy some of the contingent before they crowd him aside.

Daily Dope

By LARRY DAILEY

THE SPUDDERS will require pitching in quantity as well as quality late in August and early in September. Three double headers are faced by the Galloway gallopers within five or six days in waning days this month and early in September. Which again leaves it strictly up to the chuckers.

Double headers are scheduled Sept. 2, Labor Day, at Fort Worth and Sept. 4 at Dallas. The Spudders are no worse off than other clubs on those days, however, as all the nines will be called upon to play bargain bills. But there is a game postponed from the Spudders' last trip to Waco, which must be played Aug. 30, 31, or Sept. 1 our last visit to the Cubs' bandbox ball park.

RUTH REGAINS LEAD

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25. (AP)—Babe Ruth regained the Major league home run leadership with his 34th and 35th of the season off Pitcher Stewart but the St. Louis Browns scored their fourth successive victory over the Yankees, 3 to 2, here today.

Ruth's circuit blow in the fourth inning ended 32 scoreless innings for the Yankees. His other one, also with the bases bare of Yankees, came in the ninth. The Browns scored three shutout wins over the world champions prior to the final today. Score:

TEXANS HUNT BURIED GOLD

San Antonio Forced To Guard Old Palace

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 25. (AP)—Legends of a treasure trove beneath the old Spanish governor's palace have caused many night searches by seekers of hidden gold in the structure which has been acquired by the city and will be restored to its original form.

Many nocturnal visitors became so eager in their hunt that they tore up portions of the floor and dug earth in a score of places. As a result the city has erected a high wire fence around the building and placed the palace under lock and key.

Workmen's picks and shovels recently yielded a 40-foot wall under the structure which probably had been covered for more than a century.

Fiend's Victim

Dorothy Aune, 12-year-old Minneapolis girl, was slain by a moron. Her body was found in a gunnysack.

Consolidation of three established concerns was responsible for the formation of the American Commercial Alcohol corporation in April, 1928. The company and its subsidiaries now holds an important place among the producers of commercial alcohol. Under government regulations it can now produce 12,600,000 gallons annually. It has plants in New Orleans, Pekin, Ill., Philadelphia and Sausalito, Calif. They are either close to raw material supply or near industrial centers.

Earnings for the first eight months of the company's corporate existence to Dec. 31, 1928, were $710,861. As at present capitalized this would have been at a rate equivalent to $3.66 a share a year on the common stock. The company's financial position is strong.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding includes $2,250,000 in 7 per cent cumulative preferred share of $100 par value and 291,384 shares of no par common. This gives effect to a two for one split up of common stock which took place in April, 1929. The former bond issue due in 1943 was called in April, 1929 at 103. All the common stock has been deposited in a voting trust to insure continuity of management until 1933.

Preferred stock has no voting powers unless dividends are 8¼ per cent in arrears when it has equal voting power with the common. Each of the old bonds had a detachable warrant entitling the holder to buy 5 shares of common at $30 a share up to 1938. Dividends have been paid on the preferred since Aug. 1, 1928 and an initial quarterly dividend of 40 cents a share on the common has been declared payable July 15, 1929 as has an extra dividend of 3 per cent in common stock.

As of March 31, 1929 total current assets were $4,812,350, current liabilities were $683,867 and net working capital was $4,128,483. Book value of the common stock was $41.68 a share.

Teachers' Institute At Iowa Park Planned

Special to The Record News
IOWA PARK, Texas, Aug. 25.—County Superintendent Burl Bryant was here Thursday morning in conference with Iowa Park Superintendent B. H. Burney, planning an institute for Iowa Park to be held in the W. F. George high school building here Friday and Saturday, Sept. 6 and 7.

The faculty for Iowa Park schools is now complete, and senior boys and girls are called to assemble Wednesday morning for enrollment and classification.

ANOTHER TAG WAR IS RAGING

Louisianians and Texas Argue Over Auto Licenses

ORANGE, Texas, Aug. 25. (AP)—A state retaliation war on automobile licenses is assuming serious proportions here, with officers from both Louisiana and Texas posted at the ends of the Sabine river bridge to check trucks for licenses.

The initiative was taken by Texas, when an officer was placed on the Texas side of the river and drivers of commercial vehicles fined when they had no Texas license. Now Louisiana has retaliated with an officer on her side of the bridge. Fines as high as $250 have been levied.

Laws of both states require that motors using the highways for commercial purposes must pay license fees in the states in which they operate. The regulation had been laxly enforced, however, until the past few weeks, and Texas trucks had been making short hauls into Louisiana and vice versa. Now that both states have started to enforce the law it appears that they are vieing with each other to see which can capture the most violators.

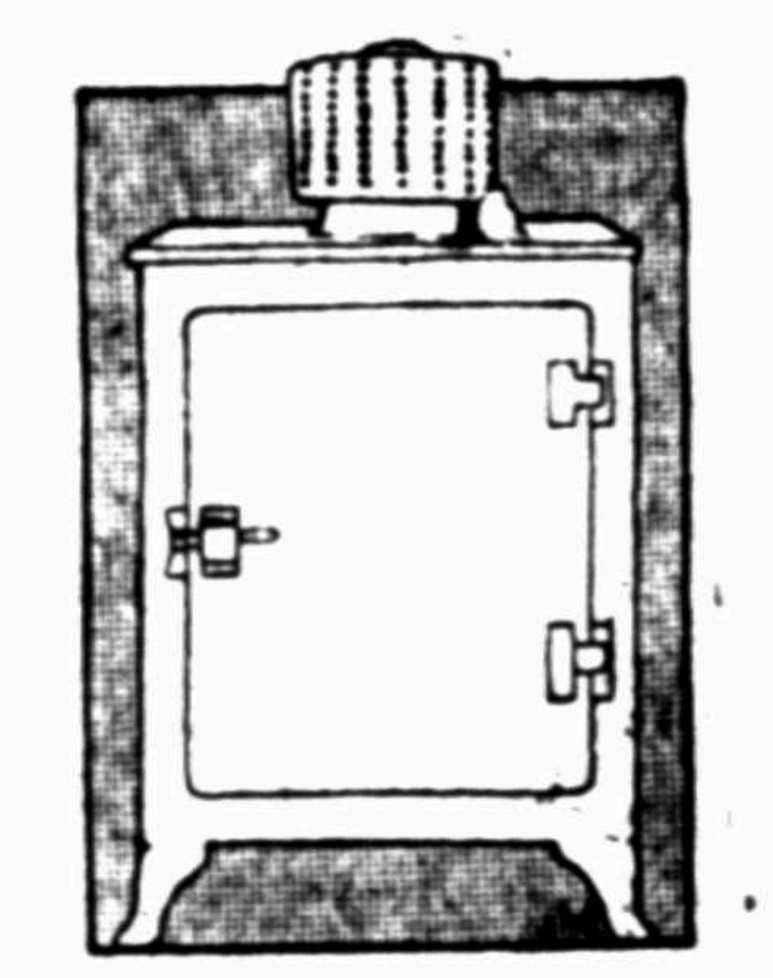

Aim of Mexico's Rural School Work Explained

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 25. (AP)—The aim of the government rural school program is to remove the peasants from the category of beasts and establish them among the ranks of men, Exequiel Padilla, secretary of public instruction, declared in a speech to state education directors in convention here.

He said the rural teacher should be an optimist, a factor in community life and should combat vices, especially to drink habit.

The convention suggested that the government add 10,000,000 pesos or approximately $5,000,000 to its yearly appropriation for rural school maintenance.

TERRORIST IS FREE ON BOND

Fund Believed Raised By Threatened Italians

CHICAGO, Aug. 25. (US)—A slender, mild-mannered man with a police record as a terrorist and footpad, who was once under sentence of death, and only three weeks ago was under arrest charged with murder, bigamy, extortion and a statutory offense, was free tonight in the Italian colony again.

He is Rocco Maggio.

He was released under $30,000 bonds which Deputy Police Commissioner Stege claimed had been raised through intimidation of Italians on whom he is alleged to have preyed.

"Maggio," said Stege, "is back in his old haunts, putting on the works for a defense fund and intimidating witnesses. He won't take less than $25 from the poorest Italian."

Deputy Stege stated that he was dumbfounded this morning to learn that Maggio had been freed yesterday. He stated that the man's very presence is a menace.

"He may kill a few more people, perhaps some policemen, before we find him," Stege said. "He certainly has his colony terrorized. How can we expect witnesses to testify against him when he is given to go and threaten them with death? The witnesses will know he means what he says and can do what he threatens."

Stege called attention again to Maggio's record. He declared that Maggio "is the most dangerous man loose in Chicago—far more vicious than any Tommy O'Connor or Willie Doody. He has violated about all the criminal statutes we have and was charged with four offenses, including the old murder charge for which he was about to hang when the state supreme court gave him a new trial on a technicality. For some reason he was never brought to trial a second time. But the murder indictment was still good and we charged him with that so as to be absolutely sure that he would stay in jail this time."

Last Rites Today For D. L. Hannifin

Funeral services for D. L. Hannifin, 67, who died at the family residence, 1604 Monroe street, early Friday morning, will be held from the Sacred Heart church at 10 o'clock Monday morning with Father P. J. F. O'Beirne officiating. The funeral procession will leave the home at 9:30 o'clock. Interment will be in the Sacred Heart cemetery.

Active pallbearers were named as follows: R. J. O'Donohoe, H. R. Hodge, J. L. McMahon and William Maloney, all of Wichita Falls, and J. L. Moorhead of Lawton, Okla., and O. S. Landes of Devol, Okla.

Mr. Hannifin had lived in Wichita Falls for the past two years. He is survived by his widow and one son who lives in Roswell, N. M. Funeral arrangements are under the direction of the Merkle Undertaking company.

Police Seize Beer In Raid on Dice Game

Eight negro men were arrested and about 125 bottles of beer were seized in a raid on a dice game at a house on Bonner street about midnight Sunday. The men were lodged in the city jail and booked for "gaming and sweating." The beer was discovered "by accident" at the house where the dice game was in progress, the report sent to police headquarters having been only that some negroes were shooting craps. Officers in the raiding party were Ellis Summers, A. L. Stubblefield, Clyde Bentley, Howard Peters, Tom Poe and E. H. Thornton.

The Rock of Gibraltar was under the dominion of the Moors until the 15th century. It is at present under English control.

Wichita R. R. Man Suffered 5 Years

Orgatone Overcomes His Kidney Trouble In Short Time and He's Feeling Like Different Person, He Says

"When I began taking Orgatone, I was feeling pretty badly—just trying one thing then another—had suffered for over five years with my kidneys. But now I am gaining back all my lost weight, feel fine, and can get a good night's rest like I could years ago.

F. P. Robertson, better known to his friends as "Skinny," who made the above remarkable statement, lives at 2006 Fillmore street, Wichita Falls, Texas, and has been in the employ of the F. W. & D. C. railroad for 41 years, holding responsible position of engineer.

"I didn't know at first," he continued, "what my trouble was, but about five years ago, my kidneys commenced to bother me. From then on there was hardly a day or night that I was not troubled with this disorder, and while I did manage to attend to my work I felt terrible. I was always constipated and felt tired and worn out from one day's end to another. Nothing I ate tasted good and to be frank with you I had very little appetite.

"I tried first one thing then another and every kind of medicine I knew of but got no relief and at times I got so blue and discouraged I didn't thing anything would ever help in my case. So when I read of Orgatone and made up my mind to try it, I had just about abandoned all hope of ever recovering.

"I noticed an improvement almost from the time I started on Orgatone. My kidneys were soon acting better and my nerves quieted down so I could sleep. My appetite improved, and I became less constipated. So I kept taking Orgatone and getting better and finally my pains all disappeared and I was feeling like a new man. Now I can lie in bed in any position and sleep all night long, and find no trouble in looking after the duties of my position. These are the results I have gotton from five bottles of Orgatone and I certainly don't believe anyone suffering like I did will make a mistake by giving it a trial."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by Allison's Drug Store, 716 Indana avenue.—Adv.

MAJESTIC: Warner Oland in "Dr. Fu Manchu," a mystery play which will survive the most exacting post-mortems. Screen song feature. Edward Everett Horton comedy, "Ask Dad." Movietone news.

STRAND: Billie Dove and Rod LaRocque doing their best with Elinor Glyn's "Man and the Moment." Dark-town players in "Framing the Shrew." Paramount sound news.

OLYMPIC: "The Girl in the Glass Cage," with Loretta Young and Carroll Nye. Small town setting. Comedy. Pathe news.

GEM: "Romance of the the Underworld," with Mary Astor and John Boles. Chapter 4 of "The Tiger's Shadow." Comedy.

At that, it wasn't all bad back in the days of swinging doors and shining footrails, before Mr. Volstead penned his one and original "best seller." In that justly maligned era there was at least an occasional gentleman of the bar sober-minded enough to close the flood gates in the face of a customer already soggy under heavy inundation. The "tanker" often was admonished in a manner friendly but firm to heave anchor and seek the restful calm of his home port.

A second restraint was imposed with more or less regularity by ruddy-faced dispensers of Milwaukee's once famous distillates. Kids in knee-breeches, and even fledglings already qualified for the Saturday-night-safety-razor-club, found that the doors swung only one way for them—that being toward the street.

But even that brief code of ethics has proved too exacting for many of the enlightened minds who now brew and dispense much of our book and screen entertainment. A generation already drunk on a Whiz-Bang conception of sex and "love" finds Elinor Glyn and Hollywood rushing new potions across the bar with alluring promises of hitherto untasted flavors and a kick that's nobody's business. And if the "No Children Admitted" sign has been hung out on any of these "torrid romances" we haven't seen it.

The present shipment from Elinor Glyn, Hollywood & Co. is labelled "Man and the Moment," and is being dispensed by beautiful Billie Dove and sinuous Rod LaRocque at the Strand. As a sign of hope, let it be observed that the red-hot concoction which Elinor prescribed appears to have been slightly diluted by the production foreman—very slightly.

In Miss Glyn's numerous effusions recently she has thrown a challenging, embarrassing question straight into the teeth of us men. To ordinary males, over whose years has hung a terrible uncertainty as to the exact time-of-arrival and nature of true love, "Man and the Moment" should prove a boon indeed. The answer dashes like a mountain brook from the spring of Elinor's understanding heart. The situation is simple, and ridiculously easy of attainment.

Now, I know the mad hour of love; first, be a millionaire sportsman. Anchor your palatial yacht under a romantic moon, in a snug little bay, overhung with towering cliffs. For music, provide four dusky Hawaiians, concealed behind the cabin. Love-sick seagulls will flap amorously above the undulating waters near the yacht. Station a girl of entrancing beauty on the deck—and, if she is as credulous as you are, the trick's turned.

As in the old churn on the farm, a small bit of concentrated coloring imparts a rich yellow to a large batch of butter. Miss Glyn and company choose the dialogue in which Michael explains to Joan the limitations of a purely "convenient" marriage as a medium for imparting an unmistakable colortone to the production. Lest some of the pungent innuendoes be lost on slow minds, Michael and Joan are made to repeat the point of the story three or four times, undeniably in the style of the traveling man in the Pullman smoker.

The "unspanked generation" may insist on taking on another little jag during Elinor's present dispensation, but we suggest that grandmother and the children be sent out to the park to play instead.

The chaser required by red-hot stuff has not been omitted in the current bill at the Strand. In the Paramount vaudeville, Octavus Roy Cohen's high-steppin' dark town notables "fum Bummin'am," including that dapper gemman, Florian Slappey, are presented with eminent success in "The Framing of the Shrew." The famous and exceedingly opaque Lawyer Evans Chew man-handles the law with great dexterity as divorce and other domestic pleasures receive distinctly new approaches.

Conspicuous in the sound news attraction is a five-minute ride over New York city, which is seen with dizzying realism now through, now between the clouds, from a trimotored plane. The Statue of Liberty, down there on Beddoe's Island, looks like a postage stamp.

OLD AT 45

Many Industrial Plants Won't Hire Men Over That Age

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. (US)—You are an old man and not wanted for employment in thousands of industrial plants throughout the country, when you have reached the age of 45 years, according to a nation-wide survey by the American Federation of Labor.

Delving into the problem of unemployment for veteran workers, the A. F. of L. made public the result of its inquiry, showing that manufacturing plants refuse to employ men over 35 years.

More than 1,000 local union representatives joined in assembling data on the problem for presentation before the annual federation convention in Toronto next month.

NINE ATTEND LEGION MEET

Wichita Delegation Leaves For Port Arthur

Nine members of Pat Carrigan post No. 120 of the American Legion left Wichita Falls Sunday morning to attend the three-day state legion convention beginning Monday at Port Arthur.

Those in the party were Victor Nobles, present commander of the post, C. C. Kirby, commander-elect, J. F. Friberg, adjutant, James V. Allred, Roy J. Daniel, O. T. Ailes, R. J. Claypoo., B. D. Sartin and Rabbi S. J. Schwab.

Plans for the convention include a parade, in which the band, drum corps and crew of the U. S. cruiser Cleveland, sent to Port Arthur to represent the navy, will march. A gigantic sham battle, "The Battle of the Argonne," will be staged by members of the legion and other elaborate entertainment features have been planned by the Port Arthur post. Speakers will include Gov. Dan Moody and other prominent Texans. The state convention is being held about one month in advance of the national convention which will be held in Louisville, Ky., during the early part of October.

Nepka, Aged Comanche Indian, Dies at Lawton

Special to The Record News

LAWTON, Okla., Aug. 25.—Nepka, 55 years of age, one of the best known members of the Comanche Indian tribe, died at Southwestern hospital in Lawton Friday, after being unconscious 24 hours.

Nepka, with a number of relatives and friends in the tribe, had been camping several days in the vicinity of Craterville park, awaiting the Indian fair time. She became very ill Thursday and is believed to have been poisoned by something she ate. She was removed to the hospital Friday morning but died about 30 minutes later.

Deceased is the wife of Andrew Persosphy. Funeral services were held Sunday morning at 10 o'clock from the Deyo mission and burial made in the Mission cemetery.

The use of sauerkraut has increased 15 per cent per year.

CLASS TOLD OF JEWS' RETURN

Floral Heights Students Hear Judge Martin

In his first address to the members of the Men's Bible class at the Floral Heights Methodist church after his return from a tour of California and New Mexico, Judge P. A. Martin Sunday morning told of the return of the Jews to Jerusalem and the rebuilding of their temples. The speaker paid tribute to the long loyalty of the race and asked his hearers whether a Christian people, enslaved and denied their religion for two generations would be eager to make tremendous sacrifices for rebuilding the altars and the shrines.

The address is quoted below:

"The return of the Jews to Jerusalem and the rebuilding of their temple through the kindness of King Cyrus, is the subject of the lesson today. For 50 years they had been in slavery in Babylon. For 50 years they had hung their harps upon the willows of Babylon and refused to sing the songs of Zion in an alien land and had wept over the departed glory of the city of David and the courts of Solomon.

Home Looks Best

"To return home is always a sweet experience. The poet who wrote

'Tis sweet to hear the watchdogs honest bark,
Bay deep-mouthed welcome as we draw near home;
'Tis sweet to know there is an eye to mark
Our coming, and look brighter when we come.'

knew what he was writing about. I know from recent experience, as well as past experiences. The lights of Wichita Falls never looked brighter to me than they did when we rolled in from California a few evenings ago to the place we call home. To reach home and find that all was well was truly a joy to me and it is a joy again to foregather with you men in this sanctuary. After all, there is nothing in this world so dear to the heart of man than true fellowship with kindred spirits.

"While away upon my short vacation, I have seen much of the western world. I have trekked with the thousands of other tourists across the Mojave desert from Yuma to San Diego at the south and from Barstow to Needles at the north. I have seen missions that were builded before the American colonies declared their independence and looked at the original records of a church with adobe walls 11 feet thick, erected by pious pardes from Spain while George Washington was surveying land in western Virginia. I visited a city that was begun before the Pilgrim fathers landed at Plymouth—San Diego—and saw there the lasting evidences of the civilization of Spain. I saw the palaces of the rich along the Pacific shores and the playgrounds of the rich at Catalina. I visited the Grand Canyon of Arizona where the turbid waters of the Colorado have cut their way through over 4,000 feet of solid rock. I have been near 10,000 feet above the level of the sea and have been below its level in the Imperial valley and have been some 700 feet below the surface of the earth looking over the splendors of the Carlsbad cavern and I have reveled in the beauties of both nature and art that I have seen—and yet, and yet there's no place like home to me.

Largest Men's Class

"And I must not forget to tell you that while in Long Beach I visited the largest men's Bible class in the world—at least they said it was—Doctor Taubman's class which meets every Sunday at the beach auditorium. There were 750 men present the Sunday I was there. The music was fine, the program interesting and the doctor's lecture upon Daniel in the lion's den was a gem of reason and rhetoric. I assure you that I heartily enjoyed it; and yet I would rather be with you men of my own home town than there.

"And if I after just a few short weeks absence from home and my favorite shrine have this sort of feeling, how must the returning thousands of Jews felt when they were permitted after half a century of enforced absence to again gather in Jerusalem and rebuild their temple and restore again the worship of Jehovah, after the manner of their fathers. And when I study the history of the Jews I cannot refrain from being absolutely lost in admiration for their loyalty. If all Christian churches were destroyed and all Christian people enslaved for two whole generations do you think we would still be as true and loyal as were the Jews? If, for half a century, we never entered a church or heard a sermon, would we be ready and willing and anxious to give up our family jewels and all that we possessed to rebuild our altars and our shrines?

"Of course God was with them by the rivers of Babylon for God is everywhere, as we all know, and yet in a very special sense He meets his people in their temples and their shrines. As I paused at the altar in San Juan Capistrano and was told by the guide, a sweet-faced Castilian girl, that religious services had been held there every day for a hundred and fifty-three years, the thought occurred to me that after all there is a sacredness of place which has its appeal to the Christian as well as the Jew.

Singing in Caverns

"The sacred story given in this lesson also has a pathetic ride. There were many old people there who had seen the first temple before it was destroyed and when they saw the foundations of the new edifice they wept and the voice of their weeping was commingled with the rejoicing of the others. Somehow nature has endowed us all with a disposition to look backward towards the old things of bygone years and account them superior to what we have now. As we grow older this disposition becomes more and more distinct until it seems that some men and women almost live in the past tense and seem to shut their eyes to the beauties of the living present. These constituted the weepers at the dedication of the new temple. They could see no good in it because it was not an exact duplication of the temple they remembered in the days of their youth. We have people now who can see no good in modern churches, with their magnificent organs and choirs and high-priced ministers and modern rituals. They got their first vision of God perhaps in a little log church way back in the hills or in a brush arbor where He was pleased to meet his people in some camp meeting in other days.

"In Carlsbad cavern there is a big stalagmite they have named the 'Rock of Ages' because the geologists have said that it was in process of formation for over 50,000,000 years. Last Monday we rested there at the foot of this rock and sang the song 'Rock of Ages Cleft for Me,' some 700 feet down in the bowels of the Guadaloupe mountains. As I remember the figures there were 973 of us in the party that day. At the close of the song a man by my side gave voice to the thought that I am sure nearly all of us were thinking. He asked what we would do if some volcanic disturbance should close up the mouth of the cave and imprison us there. I replied, 'I don't know all we would do but I can tell you one thing we would all do and that is pray to the God who fashioned all the beauties of this cavern for deliverance. There would be no atheists, no doubters, no free-thinkers; we would all pray even if we never prayed before.' He said, 'I believe you are right, friend,' and we dropped the subject but not the thought.

"Like the old Jew returned to his temple for the consolation of his holy religion, so mankind everywhere when in extremity instinctively turns to his God and worships at his favorite shrine, whether it be as old as San Juan Capistrano or as new as this edifice, if he can get there; if not, he will worship on the mountain top or down in caverns of the earth. And it is such a consolation to know that when a man turns to God sincerely, no matter where he may be, his Maker meets him and helps him."

Greater to Build Life for God Than House for Him, Teacher Says

Waste From "Orgy of Competitive Church Building" Called "Crime of Century" by Sartin

"It may be a great thing to build a house for God, but it is much greater to build a life for Him," declared Judge B. D. Sartin, teacher of the Men's Bible class of the Highland Heights Christian church, at the conclusion of his address Sunday morning on Ezra's rebuilding of the temple in Jerusalem.

"We need to know today that we are no longer to try to imitate King Solomon in building a temple for the Lord, for the time has surely come when we shall neither worship in this mountain nor in Jerusalem, but worship the Lord of hosts in spirit and in truth; we should know that the God of heaven dwelleth not in temples made by hands, that He is interested not in houses, but hearts" the speaker added.

Christ called upon men to present themselves as living sacrifices, to take up His cross of service, the speaker said, instead of offering goats and beifers as of old as the expression of religious principles.

Structure Unimportant

"The New Testament scriptures do not even mention the fact that there was a church building in that day, but everywhere is found the urge of the Master to preach and teach men everywhere about His program and His kingdom," said Judge Sartin. "He cares not about the costly structure in which you may worship, but often in the humble building with plank boards and dilapidated walls may be found the service that has divine approval, for people are met there to worship instead of admiring the structure which they have raised."

Both America and Europe are now in an era of extensive church building, the speaker stated, with the latter continent having gone further toward the erection of a magnificent temple or cathedral in each town or village. In America, however, Judge Sartin said, many costly structures often are raised in one small community, where one house of worship would accomodate all the persons in that community.

"I think it is a shame to spend so much money on many church buildings when unity and cooperation among the religiously inclined inhabitants of a section would prove a great economic gain," he continued.

"While business is tending towards consolidation, isn't it time that we in the religious fields should be thinking about a merger of wealth and influence for God? I do not mean to decry the building of a church where it is needed to serve the needs of a community, and as a convenience for the people who desire to meet for worship, but one of the crimes of this country is the waste that is going on under the banner of denominationalism in the orgy of competitive church building."

While mission fields are left undeveloped and islands of the sea continue to be untouched by Christian influence, the speaker said, there is danger of American congregations substituting grandeur and display for sincere worship.

Misery Follows War

"Why do we sing about the "Little Brown Church in the Wildwood?" asked the speaker. "Is it not because it takes us back to that little frame building, back in our early days, where folks went to church to worship, and to commune with God, more than to be seen?"

The temple in Jerusalem was rebuilt, Judge Sartin said, under the same discouragements which are encountered during a reconstruction period in any age. "There were those who sat about and scoffed, saying it could not be done," he said. "In every worthwhile enterprise and great undertaking the crepe hangers will be present. There will be those who discount all plans except their own, those who are curious, those who are pessimistic; the jealous and the gossiping, but the dauntless men and women always build to completion for God and humanity."

The glories of war always are followed by the terrors of pestilence and poverty, Judge Sartin said, with reference to the return of Israel to Palestine. Faith in God, and unrelenting devotion to a chosen cause, have been the vital elements in the building of every successful nation recorded in history, he added.

"Sadder than Robert E. Lee's surrender were the impoverished plantations of the South in 1865," said the speaker, "but the field that was red with blood in April was white with harvest in July. Hearts that were gallant in war were valiant in peace. The first act of the returning exiles, back from Babylon, was to rebuild the altar for the worship of God. Before the pilgrim fathers landed at Plymouth they made a solmen pact taking God into partnership with them. Benjamin Franklin prayed that the constitutional convention might so be guided by divine wisdom that the United States should be born under a rising sun and George Washington placed new fire in the hearts of freezing, footsore Continental soldiers with his prayers. The superscription 'In God We Trust' is called the motto of this nation. America will survive as long as this motto sincerely reflects the hearts of her people."

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES GAIN

Returning Vacationists Boost Attendance

The general gathering home of vacationers which began during the last week was evidenced in Sunday's records of Sunday school attendance, when a total of 5,598 present represented a gain of 240 over Aug. 18, and a margin of three above the mark of Aug. 11.

The increases registered Sunday came largely through larger attendance at the larger churches of the city. Little change aside from a very slight general decrease was made in the smaller Sunday schools' reports, indicating that most of those absent during the last few weeks are enrolled with the larger institutions.

The First Baptist church made a gain of 43, heading the First Methodist school by 115 for leadership of the 30 reporting churches.

CORROSION TO BE DISCUSSED

Oil Men to Talk Shop At Institute Meeting

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 25.—Arrangements are being made for a discussion of the corrosion problems at the sessions of the American Petroleum institute development and production division, Mid-Continent district, at the sixth International Petroleum exposition here, Oct. 5-12, W. B Way, exposition general manager, announced this week.

The discussion on corrosion, Way said, is recommended by R. P. Anderson, technologist of the American Petroleum institute. The development and production engineering program has not been completed but special attention will be directed to methods and results obtained by repressuring in the Mid-Continent area.

Corrosion, Way points out, involves practically every branch of the industry, from production to marketing, and causes costly frequent replacements, dangerous delays and sometimes injury and death.

CLARENDON MAN HELD

A man arrested here Saturday afternoon was released to Clarendon officers Sunday morning and taken back to that city to face charges in connection with a swindling case, according to reports at police headquarters. The arrest was made by Officers Fred Fountain and C. M. Goodwin following a message from Clarendon asking that he be apprehended.

Police Seize Blank Checks And Machine After Man's Arrest Here

Five forged checks, totaling $109.10, which had been cashed at local grocery stores within the last three weeks, were turned over to police following the arrest of a man who was attempting to cash a similar check at a downtown grocery store about 8 o'clock Saturday night.

The checks, varying in amount from $14 to $35.50, had been returned from local banks marked "no account" and grocery stores were notified to watch for them and to report to police. The man, officers were told, would buy groceries and present the checks, which were made out as pay checks, in payment for the food, receiving large sums in cash as change.

The majority of the checks bore the printed name of the "Wichita Construction company" above the signature. Officers stated that there was no such concern in Wichita Falls. Two of the checks bore the name of a prominent local contracting firm. The amounts on each check were stamped with an automatic protectograph machine. Officers found the machine and a large quantity of the printed blank checks at the man's residence.

Police Chief Frank Burns stated that several checks which had been cashed by the man had not yet been located and inquiries will be made Monday. The arrest was made by Plainclothes Officer A. L. Stubblefield and Motorcycle Officer J. H. Pogue.
